[1] Until within recent years the appointment or election of a President pro tempore was held by the Senate to be for the occasion only, so that more than one appears in several sessions and in others none was chosen. Since Mar. 12, 1890, they have served until "the Senate otherwise ordered."

[2] The Constitution (art. I, sec. 4) provided that "The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year * * * on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by law appoint a different day." Pursuant to a resolution of the Continental Congress, the first session of the First Congress convened Mar. 4, 1789. Up to and including May 20, 1820, 18 acts were passed providing for the meeting of Congress on other days in the year. Since that year Congress met regularly on the first Monday in December until 1934, when the twentieth amendment to the Constitution became effective, changing the meeting of Congress to Jan. 3. The first and second sessions of the First Congress were held in New York City; subsequently, including the first session of the Sixth Congress, Philadelphia was the meeting place; since then Congress has convened in Washington.

[3] Elected to count the vote for President and Vice President, which was done Apr. 6, 1789, a quorum of the Senate then appearing for the first time. John Adams, Vice President, appeared Apr. 21, 1789, and took his seat as President of the Senate.

NOTE.—The apportionment based on the Sixteenth Census (1940) distributes the 435 seats in the House among the States according to the method of equal proportions. By this method the percent difference between the average number of Representatives per million people in any 2 States is made as small as possible. Also, the percent difference between the average districts, i. e., the average number of persons per Representative, in any 2 States is made as small as possible. By equalizing the representation of all pairs of States, the method gives as nearly equal representation as possible to all States in proportion to their population.

CAPITOL BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

THE CAPITOL

This building is situated on a plateau 88 feet above the level of the Potomac River and covers an area of 153,112 square feet, or approximately 3½ acres. Its length, from north to south, is 751 feet 4 inches; its width, including approaches, is 350 feet; and its location is described as being in latitude 38°53′20.4″ north and longitude 77°00′35.7″ west from Greenwich. Its height above the base line on the east front to the top of the Statue of Freedom is 287 feet 5½ inches. The dome is built of iron, and the aggregate weight of material used in its construction is 8,909,200 pounds.

The Statue of Freedom surmounting the dome is entirely of bronze and weighs 14,985 pounds. It was modeled by Thomas Crawford, father of Francis Marion Crawford, the novelist, in Rome, Italy, and the plaster model shipped to this country. It was cast in bronze at the shops of Clark Mills, on the Bladensburg Road, not far from the city of Washington. The cost of the bronze casting and the expenses in connection therewith were $20,796.82, and, as the sculptor Crawford was paid $3,000 for the plaster model, the entire cost of the statue was $23,796.82. It was erected and placed in its present position December 2, 1863.

SELECTION OF A SITE FOR THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

It may seem strange that, in the selection of the 10 miles square for the territory in which the National Capital should find a home, a locality was selected with but a meager population. It may have been the intent to found a capital which should develop its own particular surroundings instead of attempting to conform with conditions then existing. But the principal reason was the lesson learned from European experiences, where the location of the country's capital in a large city offered an opportunity for the coercion of legislators by the citizens of the capital. From the inception of the Continental Congress, either through necessity or voluntarily, it had moved from Philadelphia to Baltimore, Lancaster, York, Princeton, Annapolis, Trenton, and New York City. Philadelphia seems to have been the favorite location, and it was from this city that the Federal Congress, organized in New York City, took up its abode until its removal to Washington in the year 1800.

The original 10 miles square was formed from territory donated by Virginia and Maryland, and the cornerstone was erected and fixed on April 15, 1791, at Hunters Point, just south of Alexandria, Va. This area remained intact until the year 1846, when the Congress transferred to Virginia the portion furnished by that State.

PLANS FOR THE CAPITOL BUILDING

Following the selection of a site for the Capital, some little time elapsed before advertisements appeared offering a prize of $500, or a medal of the same value, to be awarded for the "most approved plan" for a Capitol Building. Some 14 plans were submitted—some writers claim 16—but of these plans none was wholly satisfactory. In October 1792, Dr. William Thornton, a versatile physician of Tortola, West Indies, requested by letter an opportunity to present a plan as within the terms of the original advertisement. The request was granted and his plan accepted by the commissioners on April 5, 1793.

Affairs seemed to move rapidly in those days, for on September 18, 1793, the cornerstone was laid with Masonic ceremonies in the southeast corner of the north section of the building. Thornton's plan provided for a central section nearly square in area, surmounted by a low dome, this central section to be flanked on the north and south by rectangular buildings, with a length of 126 feet and a width of 120 feet. The northern wing was the first completed, and in this small building the legislative and judicial branches of the Government, as well as the courts of the District of Columbia, were accommodated at the time of the removal of the Government from Philadelphia in the year 1800.

BUILDING OF THE CAPITOL

In the development of the accepted plans of Dr. William Thornton in the erection of the first unit of the building—the previous Supreme Court section—three architects were employed—Stephen H. Hallett, George Hadfield, and James Hoban, the architect of the White House. The erection of the southern section of the Capitol, which is now occupied by Statuary Hall, was under the charge of B. H. Latrobe, and in 1807 the House of Representatives, which had previously met in the former Supreme Court section of the Capitol and in a temporary brick building within the walls of the southern wing, known as the Oven, commenced the occupancy of this new legislative chamber. The north wing was finished in 1800 and the south wing in 1811. A wooden passageway connected the two buildings. This condition existed when the interior of both buildings was burned by the British on August 24, 1814.

The work of reconstruction of the damaged interiors was commenced by B. H. Latrobe, who continued the work of restoration until December 1817, when he resigned, and Charles Bulfinch, a prominent architect of Boston, Mass., continued the work of restoration and the erection of the central portion of the building, commencing in 1818 and continuing until its completion in 1829.

During the period of restoration and completion the Congress met, for its first session after the fire, in Blodget's Hotel at Seventh and E Streets, and soon thereafter in a building erected for that purpose on First Street NE., occupying a portion of the site now occupied by the United States Supreme Court Building. They continued this occupancy until 1819, when the Capitol was again ready for occupancy.

The original Capitol as completed was built of Aquia Creek (Va.) sandstone, procured from quarries owned by the Government. This structure was 352 feet 4 inches in length and 229 feet in depth. The central portion was surmounted by a low dome, and the sandstone interior was unchanged when the new dome was erected in a later period. The cost of this original building, including the grading of the grounds, repairs, etc., up to the year 1827, was $2,433,844.13.

Following the completion of the old Capitol in 1829 and the termination of the services of the architect, Charles Bulfinch, in 1830, such architectural services as were needed were performed by different architects until the year 1851, when the building of the present Senate and House wings was commenced, the plans of Thomas U. Walter having been selected in preference to others submitted. On July 4, 1851, the cornerstone of the extensions was laid in the northeast corner of the House wing. The oration was delivered by Daniel Webster, and his prophetic utterances on that occasion have been quoted many times. In the building of the Senate and House wings the exterior marble came from the quarries of Lee, Mass., and the columns from quarries of Cockeysville, Md.

This work was prosecuted under the architectural direction of Thomas U. Walter from 1851 to 1865 during his tenure as Architect of the Capitol, and thereafter certain uncompleted details were supervised by his successor, Edward Clark, whose term ran from 1865 to 1902. The present House Chamber was occupied for legislative purposes December 16, 1857, and the Senate Chamber January 4, 1859.

The addition of the Senate and House wings made the construction of a new dome necessary for the preservation of architectural symmetry. The dome of the original central building was constructed of wood, covered with copper. This was replaced in 1856 by the present structure of cast iron, completed in 1865. The greatest exterior diameter of the dome is 135 feet 5 inches. The rotunda is 97 feet in diameter, and its height from the floor to where the dome closes in at the base of the lantern is 180 feet 3 inches.

The Capitol has a floor area of 14 acres, and 430 rooms are devoted to office, committee, and storage purposes. There are 17,376 square feet of skylights, 679 windows, and 550 doorways. The dome receives light through 108 windows, and from the Architect's office to the dome there are 365 steps, one for each day of the year.

CAPITOL GROUNDS

The original Capitol grounds were at one time a part of Cern Abby Manor and at an early date occupied by a subtribe of the Algonquin Indians known as the Powhatans, whose council house was then located at the foot of the hill.

These grounds, part of original reservation 2, were acquired under President Washington's proclamations of 1790 and 1797, for use as a site for the United States Capitol Building. These proclamations authorized the appropriation of all of reservation 2 which, in its entirety, included the "Capitol Square and the Mall east of Fifteenth Street West."

Additional ground (squares 687–688) was acquired under appropriations provided by Congress in 1872 and 1873 in order to obtain a better landscape surrounding in keeping with the Senate and House wings which had been added to the building since the acquisition of the original site. The purchase of this additional property completed the acquisition of the area known as the old section of the Capitol Grounds, totaling, in all, 58.8 acres.

In the immediately ensuing years, under a plan developed by Frederick Law Olmstead of New York, the terraces were built on the north, west, and south sides of the building and the entire grounds developed and improved.

During the period 1910–35 the Capitol Grounds were further enlarged and improved by the purchase, annexation, and development of 61.4 additional acres; and the addition of this new area to the 58.8 acres comprising the old grounds section gives a present total grounds area of 120.2 acres.

HOUSE OFFICE BUILDINGS

OLD BUILDING

An increased membership of the Senate and House resulted in a demand for additional rooms for the accommodation of the Senators and Representatives, and on March 3, 1903, the Congress authorized the erection of a fireproof office building for the use of the House Members as office and committee rooms. The first brick was laid July 5, 1905, in square No. 690, and formal exercises were held at the laying of the cornerstone on April 14, 1906, in which President Theodore Roosevelt participated. The building was completed and occupied January 10, 1908. A subsequent change in the basis of congressional representation made necessary the building of an additional story. The total cost of the building, including site, furnishings, equipment, and the subway connecting the House Office Building with the United States Capitol, amounted to $4,860,155. This office building contains 690 rooms, and was considered at the time of its completion fully equipped for all of the needs of a modern building for office purposes.

NEW BUILDING

Under legislation contained in authorization act of January 10, 1929, and in the urgent deficiency bill of March 4, 1929, provisions were made for an additional House Office Building, to be located on the west side of New Jersey Avenue (opposite the first House Office Building).

The cornerstone was laid June 24, 1932, and the building was completed and ready for beneficial occupancy April 20, 1933. It contains 251 two-room suites, 16 committee rooms, each suite and committee room being provided with a storeroom. Eight floors are occupied by Members; the basement and sub-basement by shops and mechanics needed for the proper maintenance of the building. The cost of this building, including site, furnishings, and equipment, was $7,805,705.

SENATE OFFICE BUILDING

The demand for a new building to be used for offices was greater for the Representatives, on account of the large number forming the membership of that body, and because the Members of the Senate were supplied with additional office space by the purchase of the Maltby Building, located on the northwest corner of B Street and New Jersey Avenue NW. However, the acquisition of this building supplied but a temporary purpose, and its condemnation as an unsafe structure created on the part of the Senators a desire for safer and more commodious quarters. Accordingly, under authorization of act of April 28, 1904, square 686, on the northeast corner of Delaware Avenue and B Street NE., was purchased as a site for the Senate Office Building, and the plans for the House Office Building were adapted for the Senate Office Building, the only change being the omission of the fourth side of the building fronting on First Street NE., this being planned for but not completed. The cornerstone of this building was laid without special exercises on July 31, 1906, and the building was occupied March 5, 1909. In June 1933 the building was completed by the erection of the First Street wing, construction of which was commenced in 1931, together with alterations to the C Street facade, and construction of terraces, balustrades, and approaches. The cost of the completed building, including site, furnishings, equipment, and the subway connecting the Senate Office Building with the United States Capitol, was $8,390,892.

CAPITOL POWER PLANT

During the development of the plans for fireproof office buildings for occupancy by the Senators and Representatives, the question of heat, light, and power was considered. The Senate and House wings of the Capitol were heated by separate heating plants. The Library of Congress also had in use a heating plant for that building, and it was finally determined that the solution of the heating and lighting, with power for elevators, could be adequately met by the construction of a central power plant to furnish all heat and power, as well as light, for the Capitol group of buildings.

Having determined the need of a central power plant, a site was selected in Garfield Park, bounded by New Jersey Avenue, South Capitol Street, Virginia Avenue, and B Street SE. This park being a Government reservation, an appropriation of money was not required to secure title. The determining factors leading to the selection of this site were its nearness to the tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad and its convenient distance to the river and the buildings to be cared for by the plant.

The dimensions of the Capitol power plant, which was constructed under authorization of act of April 28, 1904, and completed and placed in operation in 1910, are 244 feet 8 inches by 117 feet, with a height over the boiler room of 81 feet to accommodate the coal bunkers. A later additional building, for accommodation of shops and storerooms, is located near the power plant and is built of selected red brick, it being 90 feet long, 50 feet wide, and 2 stories high. The building is located upon concrete foundations resting upon 790 simplex reinforced concrete piles; the superstructure is of red brick. There are 2 Alphons Custodis radial brick chimneys 212 feet in height and 11 feet in diameter at the top.

The buildings served by the power plant are connected by a reinforced-concrete steam tunnel 7 feet high by 4½ feet wide, with walls approximately 12 inches thick. This tunnel originally ran from the power plant to the Senate Office Building, with connecting tunnels for the House Office Building, the Capitol, and the Library of Congress, and has since been extended to the Government Printing Office and the Washington City Post Office, with steam lines extended to serve the new House Office Building, the Supreme Court Building, the Annex to the Library of Congress, and the relocated Botanic Garden.

In 1935 Congress authorized the air conditioning of the Capitol, Senate, and House Office Buildings and provided therefor an appropriation of $2,550,000 and, in 1937, an additional amount of $1,672,000, including authorization for construction of a central refrigeration plant to serve the systems. An addition to the power plant building, 123 feet 2 inches long, 79 feet 6 inches wide, with a height of 37 feet 10 inches, was constructed to house the refrigeration plant. This plant was placed in operation May 16, 1938, and was, at that time, the largest central station water-cooling plant ever constructed. Its huge pumps carry chilled water through large supply mains to the four buildings served. The refrigerating capacity of the plant may best be described in terms of the melting of a block of ice 50 feet by 50 feet and the height of a seven-story building every 24 hours.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

ORIGIN AND FORM OF GOVERNMENT

The District of Columbia was established under the authority and direction of acts of Congress approved July 16, 1790, and March 3, 1791, which were passed to give effect to a clause in the eighth section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States giving Congress the power—

"To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings;—"

The States of Maryland and Virginia made cessions contemplated by this clause in the years 1788 and 1789, respectively. From the cessions tendered by the two States was selected the territory for the permanent seat of the General Government. This territory was 10 miles square, lying on either side of the Potomac River at the head of navigation. Later, 1846, Congress retroceded to Virginia that portion ceded by it. The Maryland or retained portion is approximately 70 square miles.

The seat of government of the United States was first definitely named by the clause in the act entitled "An act providing a permanent form of government for the District of Columbia," approved June 11, 1878, as follows: "That all territory which was ceded by the State of Maryland to the Congress of the United States, for the permanent seat of government of the United States, shall continue to be designated as the District of Columbia" (20 Stat. 102), although it had been incidentally mentioned as such in several preceding statutes.

The land within the ceded territory was owned by a number of people. In Georgetown, President Washington negotiated with the proprietors or landowners of that portion of the ceded territory selected as the site of the city of Washington, which comprised about 10 percent of the area of the present District of Columbia. On the second day, March 30, 1791, he concluded an agreement which was put in writing and signed by the proprietors. By it the President was given sole power to lay off streets as he pleased. These proprietors conveyed their holdings to trustees named by the President to hold title to the same during the laying out of the Federal city and then convey as agreed to the United States and the proprietors, respectively. Under this agreement the proprietors donated to the United States all of the lands for the streets and one-half of the city lots throughout the entire city. Sites reserved by the United States for the public buildings, parks, and other public purposes were paid for by the United States in Maryland money the equivalent to $66.66 per acre. Such payment, amounting to $36,099, was made out of the proceeds from the sale of some of the lots which these proprietors had donated to the United States. This was the only purchase price paid by the United States for any part of the entire acquisition of 5,128 acres for the purpose of building the Capital City.

The land within the original city of Washington comprised a total of 6,111 acres and was divided to the United States 4,147 acres—3,606 acres for streets and 541 acres for public purposes. The remaining 1,964 acres was divided into squares and the squares into lots. The whole number of lots was 20,272—10,136 to the United States and the same number to the proprietors.

Thomas Jefferson, then Secretary of State, declared the liberality of the proprietors was "noble."

The United States lots were sold from time to time, chiefly before 1800 and up to 1835, and brought $741,024.45 (S. Doc. 247, 64th Cong., 1st sess., p. 23). This was a considerable sum as compared with the average annual income of the Federal Government during the 12 years from 1789 to 1800, it being about 13 percent of that average of about $5,600,000. The lots which still remain the property of the United States after gifts of them to charitable and literary institutions were sold about September 1865 for a moderate sum.

The proceeds from the sales of the Government lots were largely applied to the erection of the original Government buildings and improvements in their immediate neighborhood. The funds for these buildings were supplemented by grants of $120,000 by the State of Virginia and $72,000 by the State of Maryland (H. R. Report 269, 21st Cong., 1st sess., Doc. No. 5, p. 47). Both President Washington and President Jefferson expected the sale of these lots, if properly conserved, would not only provide ample funds for the erection of the public buildings without charge upon the lean Federal Treasury but would leave what Jefferson termed "the residuary interest of the city" which was intended to be used for streets and other city improvements. The failure of the Government to make these expected improvements so retarded the appreciation of values of the lots that the Government's prospective income from this source fell far short of expectations. The landowners who had so generously given their land to the Government as well as those who had been induced to purchase failed to realize the enhancement of value of their lots because of the failure of expected abutting and community improvements. The faith of Mr. Jefferson and the proprietors matched, but their fond hopes were not realized. The original proprietor of the land whereon is the Capitol Building, Daniel Carroll, of Duddington, in 1837 wrote "that the unfortunate proprietors are generally brought to ruin," who "were so wild as to suppose that the donation was so great the Government might pave the streets with ingots of gold or silver."

The city was planned and partly laid out by Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant, a French engineer. This work was perfected and completed by Maj. Andrew Ellicott. The building of the city and the erection of the public buildings was in charge of three commissioners selected by the President and subject to his direction.

When the Government establishment was moved in 1800 there existed within the 10 miles square two municipal corporations; the corporation of the city of Alexandria, incorporated by Virginia; and the corporation of the city of Georgetown, incorporated by Maryland.

The act of February 27, 1801, was the first legislation by Congress for the government of the District of Columbia following the removal to the permanent seat of government. While this act failed to set up a complete local government, it declared all of the laws of the States of Maryland and Virginia as then existing to be in force in the parts of the District ceded by the respective States. It created two counties, Washington County being the area outside of the cities of Washington and Georgetown on the Maryland side of the river, and Alexandria County being the area beyond the limits of the city of Alexandria on the Virginia side of the river. It also created the circuit court, the office of marshal of the District, the office of United States attorney for the District, justices of the peace for the two counties, a register of wills, and a judge of the orphan's court (2 Stat. 103).

The first government of the city of Washington consisted of a mayor appointed by the President of the United States and a city council elected by the people of the city. This was in 1802. The act chartering the city of Washington also created the levy courts, consisting originally of the justices of the peace of the respective counties (2 Stat. 115; 2 Stat. 773; 3 Stat. 195; 9 Stat. 230; 12 Stat. 384). The levy courts were given broad administrative powers over the counties of Washington and Alexandria, but had no judicial functions. At a later date the levy court of Washington County was composed of nine members appointed by the President (12 Stat. 799). Thus, there were within the 10 miles square five distinct local administrative units, namely (1) the corporation of Washington, (2) the corporation of Georgetown, (3) the county of Washington, (4) the corporation of Alexandria, and (5) the county of Alexandria. These were reduced to three units in 1846 with the retrocession of Alexandria city and county to the State of Virginia (9 Stat. 35; 9 Stat. 1000). The members of the city councils of the three municipalities were elected as were the mayors of Georgetown and Alexandria. In 1812 the city council was permitted to elect the mayor of Washington and in 1820 and thereafter the mayor was elected by the people (3 Stat. 583). The term of the mayor of Washington was for 2 years. This government continued until 1871.

By an act of Congress of February 21, 1871, the corporation of Washington, the corporation of Georgetown, and the levy court for Washington County were abolished and the administration consolidated into a so-called territorial form of government. This government consisted of a governor, a board of public works, and a legislative assembly. This legislative assembly consisted of a council of 11 members and a house of delegates of 22 members. The District then also had a Delegate in the House of Representatives of the United States. The Governor, the board of public works, and council were appointed by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The 22 members of the house of delegates and the Delegate in Congress were elected by the people. The District had a Delegate in Congress until March 4, 1875.

This form of government lasted for 3 years, until June 20, 1874, when Congress provided that the District should be governed by three commissioners, appointed by the President. This was known as the temporary form of government and lasted until July 1, 1878, when the present permanent commission government was set up (18 Stat. 116). In the creation of the temporary commission form of government in 1874 and the permanent form in 1878 no provision was made for the franchise, and for the first time in three-quarters of a century no part of the District exercised the right of suffrage. The present form of government was created by act of Congress approved June 11, 1878 (20 Stat. 102).

The District of Columbia has an area of 69.245 square miles, of which 60.1 square miles are land. The river boundary is high-water mark along the Virginia shore of the Potomac River.

The local government of the District of Columbia is a municipal corporation having jurisdiction over the territory which was "ceded by the State of Maryland to the Congress of the United States for the permanent seat of the Government of the United States" (20 Stat. 102). This government is administered by a board of three Commissioners having general equal powers and duties (20 Stat. 103).

Two of these Commissioners, who must have been actual residents of the District for 3 years next before their appointment and have during that period claimed residence nowhere else, are appointed from civil life by the President of the United States and confirmed by the Senate for the term of 3 years each and until their successors are appointed and qualified.

The other Commissioner is detailed from time to time by the President of the United States from the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army, and shall not be required to perform any other military duty (ib.). This Commissioner shall be selected from the captains or officers of higher grade having served at least 15 years in the Corps of Engineers of the Army of the United States (26 Stat. 1113).

Three officers of the same corps, junior to said Commissioner, may be detailed to assist him by the President of the United States (26 Stat. 246). The senior officer of the Corps of Engineers of the Army, who for the time being is detailed to act as assistant (and in case of his absence from the District, or disability, the junior officer so detailed), shall, in event of the absence from the District or disability of the Commissioner, who shall for the time being be detailed from the Corps of Engineers, perform all the duties imposed by law upon said Commissioner (26 Stat. 1113).

One of said Commissioners shall be chosen president of the Board of Commissioners at their first meeting and annually and whenever a vacancy shall occur (20 Stat. 103).

The Commissioners are in a general way vested with jurisdiction covering all the ordinary features of municipal government and are also members of the Zoning Commission (37 Stat. 974).

The expenditures of the District of Columbia are based upon estimates prepared annually by the Commissioners and submitted by them to Congress through the Bureau of the Budget. To the extent to which it shall approve of said estimates, Congress shall appropriate a portion out of the Treasury of the United States. The remainder of the amount of such approved estimates shall be levied and assessed upon the taxable property and privileges in said District other than the property of the United States and of the District of Columbia (act approved June 11, 1878; 20 Stat. 104). "All taxes collected shall be paid into the Treasury of the United States, and the same as well as the appropriations to be made by the Congress as aforesaid shall be disbursed for the expenses of said District, on itemized vouchers, which have been audited and approved by the auditor of the District of Columbia, certified by said Commissioners or a majority of them" (ib. 105). This act also provided that the cost of operation, development, and maintenance of the District of Columbia should be borne jointly by the United States and the District of Columbia upon a 50–50 basis. This ratio was in 1922 changed to a payment of 60 percent from the revenues of the District of Columbia and 40 percent by the United States and this provision was repealed by act of Congress approved May 16, 1938. The act of July 26, 1929, provided for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940, and for each fiscal year thereafter, that there was authorized to be appropriated as the annual payment by the United States toward defraying the expenses of the Government of the District of Columbia, the sum of $6,000,000. The remainder of the local expenses are borne by the revenues of the District of Columbia derived from taxation of private property and privileges.

Congress has by sundry statutes empowered the Commissioners to make building regulations; plumbing regulations; to make and enforce all such reasonable and usual police regulations as they may deem necessary for the protection of lives, limbs, health, comfort, and quiet of all persons, and the protection of all property within the District, and other regulations of a municipal nature.

While the District has a municipal form of government, Congress by various statutory enactments has treated it as a branch of the United States Government by including it in legislation applying to the executive departments, such as the Budget and Accounting Act, the act classifying the salaries of Federal employees, and the act providing for retirement of Federal employees.

All legislation affecting the District of Columbia must be passed by Congress under the provisions of the Constitution. The advice of the Commissioners is usually asked before such legislation is enacted.

OFFICIAL DUTIES

OFFICIAL DUTIES

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH

ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL

The Architect of the Capitol, acting as an agent of the Congress, has charge of the structural and mechanical care of the United States Capitol Building, together with arrangements in cooperation with the proper authorities, for ceremonies and ceremonials held in the building and on the grounds; is responsible for the care, maintenance, and improvement of the Capitol Grounds, the old and newly enlarged areas comprising approximately 120.2 acres, as well as the care of the grounds, walks, and driveways about the buildings in the legislative group; has the structural and mechanical care of the Library of Congress Buildings, United States Supreme Court Building, Courthouse of the District of Columbia, Court of Appeals Building, Court of Claims Buildings, and Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-In Asylum; is responsible for the operation of the United States Senate and House of Representatives Restaurants.

In addition to these activities, the duties and responsibilities of the Architect include the following:

Under the direction and approval of the House Office Building Commission, the structural, mechanical, and domestic care and maintenance of the House Office Buildings, including the maintenance and operation of the mechanical equipment, and the care, maintenance, and operation of the Capitol power plant, which supplies heat, light, power, and air conditioning refrigeration for the Capitol, Senate and House Office Buildings, heat, light, and power for the Library of Congress Buildings, United States Botanic Garden, United States Supreme Court Building, and the legislative garage, and steam heat for the Government Printing Office and Washington City Post Office;

Subject to the approval of the Senate Committee on Rules as to matters of general policy, the structural, mechanical, and domestic care and maintenance of the Senate Office Building, including the maintenance and operation of the mechanical equipment.

Subject to the joint action of the Vice President of the United States and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the jurisdiction and control including the care and maintenance of the legislative garage.

In addition to these maintenance and repair activities, the Architect of the Capitol is charged with the planning and construction of such buildings as may be committed to his care by Congress from time to time.

Over and above these functions, the Architect of the Capitol serves as a member of the Capitol Police Board, of the Commission for the Enlarging of the Capitol Grounds, of the District of Columbia Zoning Commission, and of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON INTERNAL REVENUE TAXATION

The Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation was established in 1926 under section 1203 of the Revenue Act of 1926. This section is codified in chapters 47 and 48 of the Internal Revenue Code.

The duties imposed upon the committee by statute are as follows:

(1) To investigate the operation and effects of the Federal system of internal-revenue taxes.

(2) To investigate the administration of such taxes by the Bureau of Internal Revenue or any executive department, establishment, or agency charged with their administration.

(3) To make such other investigations in respect of such system of taxes as the Joint Committee may deem necessary.

(4) To investigate measures and methods for the simplification of such taxes, particularly the income tax.

(5) To publish from time to time for public examination and analysis proposed measures and methods for the simplification of such taxes; and

(6) To report from time to time to the Committee on Finance and the Committee on Ways and Means and, in its discretion, to the Senate or the House of Representatives, or both, the results of its investigations, together with such recommendations as it may deem advisable.

To the above, section 710 of the Revenue Act of 1928 added the duty of examining refunds in excess of $75,000 of income, war-profits, excess-profits, estate, and gift taxes and of making annual reports thereof to the Congress. A similar provision had theretofore been enacted in the first deficiency act, fiscal year 1927, approved February 28, 1927 (44 Stat. 1254). Section 3777 of the Internal Revenue Code, derived from section 710 of the Revenue Act of 1928, reads as follows:

"SEC. 3777. Reports of refunds and credits in excess of $75,000.

"(a) By Commissioner to Joint Committee.—No refund or credit of any income, war-profits, excess-profits, estate, or gift tax in excess of $75,000 shall be made until after the expiration of 30 days from the date upon which a report giving the name of the person to whom the refund or credit is to be made, the amount of such refund or credit, and a summary of the facts and the decision of the Commissioner is submitted to the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

"(b) By Joint Committee to Congress.—A report to Congress shall be made annually by such committee of such refunds and credits, including the names of all persons and corporations to whom amounts are credited or payments are made, together with the amounts credited or paid to each."

The statute confers upon the Joint Committee certain powers necessary for the performance of its duties; and by development and direction of the Committees on Ways and Means and Finance the staff acts as a fact-finding and advisory agency for these committees.

The committee is composed of 10 members, of whom 5 are members of the Committee on Finance and 5 of the Committee on Ways and Means. The Committee on Finance and the Committee on Ways and Means each elects its membership on the Joint Committee, 3 from the majority and 2 from the minority party. It has been the custom to elect ranking members.

The committee was organized in 1926 and functions with the aid of a permanent staff, with a chief of staff as administrative head. It is the custom of the Joint Committee to elect a chairman and vice chairman annually, alternating these offices between the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and the chairman of the Committee on Finance.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING

The Joint Committee on Printing, consisting of three Members of the Senate and three Members of the House of Representatives, was created by the act of August 3, 1846, and its principal duties are set forth in the Printing Act approved January 12, 1895. That act gave the committee authority "to remedy any neglect or delay in the public printing and binding." This authority was extended by section 11 of the Legislative Appropriation Act for 1920, empowering the committee "to adopt and employ such measures as, in its discretion, may be deemed necessary to remedy any neglect, delay, duplication, or waste in the public printing and binding and the distribution of Government publications."

The act of 1895 provides that the committee "shall have control of the arrangement and style of the Congressional Record, and, while providing that it shall be substantially a verbatim report of proceedings, shall take all needed action for the reduction of unnecessary bulk." The committee is also authorized to provide for the publication of semimonthly and session indexes to the Record and has general authority over the forms and style of congressional printing and binding.

The CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY, memorial addresses on deceased Senators and Members, statue proceedings, and similar publications are compiled and prepared under the direction of the committee. The Superintendent of Documents publishes the index of public documents upon a plan approved by the committee and indexes such single volumes as it shall direct.

The committee is directed by law to establish rules and regulations for the printing of documents and reports in two or more editions. Orders for subsequent editions after 2 years from date of original order must receive its approval. The committee directs whether extra copies of documents and reports shall be bound in paper or cloth, and prescribes the arrangement and binding of documents for depository libraries.

The cost of printing any document or report which cannot be properly charged to any other appropriation may, upon order of the committee, be charged to the congressional appropriation.

The committee may order additional copies printed of any Government publication within a limit of $200 in cost in any one instance.

The act of 1895 also provides that the committee shall exercise the following functions in regard to the purchase of paper for the public printing and binding: Fix upon standards of quality, receive proposals and award contracts therefor, appoint a member of the board of paper inspection, determine differences of opinion as to quality, act upon defaults, and authorize open-market purchases.

The Legislative Appropriation Act for 1925 authorizes the Public Printer to procure under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing in accordance with the act approved January 12, 1895, and furnish on requisition paper and envelopes (not including envelopes printed in the course of manufacture) in common use by two or more departments, establishments, or services of the Government in the District of Columbia.

The Public Printer is required by law to advertise for bids for material, other than paper, under the direction of the committee, and to make a return to it on all such contracts awarded by him. The committee may authorize the Public Printer to make certain open-market purchases of material, and, by resolution, it has required him to obtain its approval on all purchases of machinery and equipment in excess of $1,000 in any one instance.

Maps and illustration plates for Government publications are purchased under the direction of the committee whenever the probable cost exceeds $1,200; or, whenever the exigencies of the public service do not justify advertisement, the committee may authorize immediate contracts for lithographing and engraving.

Printing for the Patent Office is required by law to be done under such regulations and conditions as the committee may prescribe.

Section 11 of the Legislative Appropriation Act for 1920 requires all printing, binding, and blank-book work for the Government to be done at the Government Printing Office, except such classes of work as shall be deemed by the Joint Committee on Printing to be urgent or necessary to have done elsewhere than in the District of Columbia for the exclusive use of any field service outside of said District.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON THE LIBRARY

The Joint Committee on the Library was established by law; in 1809 the two Houses by concurrent action supplemented the law, and in 1843 recognized it by joint rule. The joint rules having ceased to exist in 1876, the rules of the House recognized the committee in 1880. In 1902 a law increased the membership of the committee to five in each House.

The statutes confer on the joint committee certain executive functions, such as the acceptance or purchase of works of art for the Capitol, the assignment of the same to such place in the Capitol as they may deem suitable, and control of the Botanic Garden, and provide that its powers shall reside in the Senate portion in the recess after the expiration of a Congress.

Aside from the executive functions of the joint committee, the House branch exercises functions as a standing committee of the House, and has a jurisdiction covering construction and care of the building of the Library of Congress, management of the Library, purchase of books and manuscripts, erection of monuments to the memory of individuals, and in some instances on battlefields, and the removal of the remains of distinguished persons. The general affairs of the Smithsonian Institution and the incorporation of similar institutions are also within the jurisdiction of the House branch of the committee.

Neither the joint committee nor the House branch reports appropriation bills.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Under authority of the Reorganization Act of 1939 and in accordance with the President's Reorganization Plans No. I and No. II, the Executive Office of the President comprises the following major divisions: The White House Office, Bureau of the Budget, National Resources Planning Board, Liaison Office for Personnel Management, and Office for Emergency Management. Executive Order No. 8248 of September 8, 1939, established the divisions and defined their functions. One of these, the Office of Government Reports, was transferred to and consolidated in the Office of War Information by Executive Order 9182 of June 13, 1942, which created the Office of War Information in the Office for Emergency Management.

THE WHITE HOUSE OFFICE

The functions and duties of the White House Office, as defined in Executive Order No. 8248 of September 8, 1939, are as follows:

In general, to serve the President in an intimate capacity in the performance of the many detailed activities incident to his immediate office. To that end, the White House Office shall be composed of the following principal subdivisions, with particular functions and duties as indicated:

(a) The Secretaries to the President.—To facilitate and maintain quick and easy communication with the Congress, the individual Members of the Congress, the heads of executive departments and agencies, the press, the radio, and the general public.

(b) The executive clerk.—To provide for the orderly handling of documents and correspondence within the White House Office, and to organize and supervise all clerical services and procedure relating thereto.

(c) The administrative assistants to the President.—To assist the President in such matters as he may direct, and at the specific request of the President, to get information and to condense and summarize it for his use. These administrative assistants shall be personal aides to the President and shall have no authority over anyone in any department or agency, including the Executive Office of the President, other than the personnel assigned to their immediate office. In no event shall the administrative assistants be interposed between the President and the head of any department or agency, or between the President and any one of the divisions in the Executive Office of the President.

LIAISON OFFICE FOR PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT

The Liaison Office for Personnel Management assists the President in the execution of the duties imposed upon him by the Constitution and by legislation with respect to personnel management and in maintaining closer contact with all Federal departments and agencies in their relation to personnel-management policies.

BUREAU OF THE BUDGET

The Bureau of the Budget was created by the Budget and Accounting Act of June 10, 1921. Prior to its transfer to the Executive Office of the President, by Reorganization Plan No. I under authority of the Reorganization Act of 1939, the Bureau was in the Treasury Department but under the immediate direction of the President. Under Reorganization Plan No. I, the Central Statistical Board and its functions, as well as those of the Central Statistical Committee, which was abolished, were transferred to the Bureau of the Budget.

The functions of the Bureau are:

1. To assist the President in the preparation of the Budget and the formulation of the fiscal program of the Government.
2. To supervise and control the administration of the Budget.
3. To conduct research in the development of improved plans of administrative management and to advise the executive departments and agencies of the Government with respect to improved administrative organization and practice.

4. To aid the President to bring about more efficient and economical conduct of Government service.

5. To assist the President by clearing and coordinating departmental advice on proposed legislation and by making recommendations as to Presidential action on legislative enactments.

6. To assist in the consideration and clearance and, where necessary, in the preparation of proposed Executive orders and proclamations.

7. To plan and promote the improvement, development, and coordination of Federal and other statistical services.

8. To keep the President informed of the progress of activities by agencies of the Government with respect to work proposed, work actually initiated, and work completed, together with the relative timing of work between the several agencies of the Government.

The Director of the Bureau of the Budget is invested with authority to make, waive, or modify apportionments of appropriations, to approve the use of printing and binding appropriations for the printing of publications, to supervise the use of Government report forms and questionnaires, and to provide for effective utilization of Government equipment and supplies.

NATIONAL RESOURCES PLANNING BOARD

Provision for the creation of the National Resources Planning Board was made by the President's Reorganization Plan No. I, effective July 1, 1939, pursuant to the Reorganization Act of 1939. Plan No. I abolished the National Resources Committee and the Federal Employment Stabilization Office in the Department of Commerce and transferred their functions to the new Board. The former National Resources Committee was the successor to the National Resources Board, which, in turn, succeeded the National Planning Board of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works.

The functions of the Board are:

1. To collect, prepare, and make available to the President such plans, data, and information as may be helpful to a planned development and use of national resources, and related subjects referred to it by the President, and to recommend to the President and the Congress long-time plans and programs for the wise use and fullest development of such resources.

2. To advise the President from time to time of the trend of employment and business activity, and of the existence or approach of periods of business depression and unemployment in the United States or in any substantial portion thereof; and to recommend measures leading to the improvement and stabilization of economic conditions.

3. To collect information concerning advance construction plans and estimates by all Federal agencies, the States, municipalities, and other public and private agencies, and to list for the President and the Congress all proposed public works in the order of their relative importance with respect to (a) the greatest good to the greatest number of people, (b) the emergency necessities of the Nation, and (c) the social, economic, and cultural advancement of the people of the United States.

4. To receive and record all proposed Federal projects involving the acquisition of land (including transfer of land jurisdiction) and land-research projects, and, in an advisory capacity, to provide the agencies concerned with such information or data as may be pertinent to the projects.

5. To consult and cooperate with agencies of the Federal Government, with the States and municipalities or agencies thereof, and with any public or private planning or research agencies or institutions, in carrying out any of its duties and functions, and to act as a clearing house and means of coordination for planning activities, linking together various levels and fields of planning.

Through 11 field offices, under the direction of regional chairmen and counselors, the National Resources Planning Board cooperates with 42 State planning boards and with regional or other planning agencies.

In connection with the war program, the Board is cooperating with the War Production Board on studies of industrial location, and with State planning agencies and defense councils on community planning where new plants or cantonments have created special problems for local adjustment. A roster of scientific and specialized personnel has been prepared by the Board in cooperation with the Civil Service Commission.

The Board is concentrating its attention on the post-war period with a view to developing advance plans and programs for necessary readjustments and new improvements after the war.

EMERGENCY WAR AGENCIES

OFFICE FOR EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

The Office for Emergency Management was established by administrative order of May 25, 1940, in accordance with section I (6) of Executive Order No. 8248, which provides that there shall be, "in the event of a national emergency, or threat of a national emergency, such office for emergency management as the President shall determine."

The functions of the Office are to (a) assist the President in the clearance of information with respect to measures necessitated by the threatened emergency; (b) maintain liaison between the President and the national defense agencies for the purpose of securing maximum utilization and coordination of agencies and facilities in meeting the threatened emergency; and (c) perform such additional duties as the President may direct.

In accordance with Executive Orders No. 8629 of January 7, and No. 8632 of January 11, 1941, and the administrative order of January 7, 1941, the status and functions of the Office for Emergency Management were further defined. The Office assists and advises the President in the discharge of extraordinary responsibilities imposed upon him by any emergency arising out of war, the threat of war, flood, drought, or other condition threatening the public peace or safety.

BOARD OF WAR COMMUNICATIONS

Executive Order No. 8546 of September 24, 1940, created the Defense Communications Board. The name of the Board was changed to Board of War Communications by Executive Order 9183 of June 15, 1942. The purpose of the Board of War Communications is to coordinate the relation of all branches of communication to the war effort. Planning embraces common carriers such as commercial radiotelephone and radiotelegraph, as well as other telephone, telegraph, and cable facilities, and radio broadcasting.

NATIONAL WAR LABOR BOARD

The National Defense Mediation Board, created by Executive Order No. 8716, of March 19, 1941, ceased to exist upon creation of the National War Labor Board within the Office for Emergency Management by Executive Order No. 9017, of January 12, 1942. The Board, which has jurisdiction over all industries and all employees, has power finally to determine all labor disputes. Under Executive Order No. 9250, of October 3, 1942, no increases or decreases in wage rates or in salary rates under $5,000, with certain exceptions, can be made without Board approval. Applications for wage adjustments are received at offices of the Wage and Hour Division of the United States Department of Labor and are referred to the Board for action.

OFFICE OF ALIEN PROPERTY CUSTODIAN

The Office of Alien Property Custodian was established in the Office for Emergency Management by Executive Order 9095 of March 11, 1942, under the specific authority of the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended. The functions and duties of the Office of Alien Property Custodian were further defined by Executive Order 9193 of July 6, 1942, amending Executive Order 9095.

The Alien Property Custodian is authorized to control or vest foreign-owned property, whether the ownership rests with a foreign government or with an individual who is a national of a foreign country, or with a business enterprise which is a national of a foreign country. Once vested, such property shall be held, used, administered, liquidated, sold, or otherwise dealt with in the interest of and for the benefit of the United States.

OFFICE OF CIVILIAN DEFENSE

The Office of Civilian Defense was established by Executive Order No. 8757 on May 20, 1941, to coordinate Federal, State, and local civilian defense relationships. Its duties include planning and carrying out programs designed to protect civilian life and property in event of emergency. It also provides opportunities for constructive civilian participation in the war program.

OFFICE OF THE COORDINATOR OF INTER-AMERICAN AFFAIRS

Executive Order No. 8840, of July 30, 1941, established the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs to serve as the center for the coordination of the cultural and commercial relations of the Nation affecting hemisphere defense. The Office exercises and performs all powers and functions heretofore vested in the Office for Coordination of Commercial and Cultural Relations Between the American Republics, established by order of the Council of National Defense on August 16, 1940. The Coordinator is chairman of the Inter-American Development Commission which was created by the Inter-American Financial and Economic Advisory Committee in January 1940.

OFFICE OF DEFENSE TRANSPORTATION

The Office of Defense Transportation was established in the Office for Emergency Management by Executive Order No. 8989, of December 18, 1941, and assumes the duties formerly vested in the Transportation Division of the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense, established May 29, 1940. The Office coordinates transportation policies and activities of Federal and private agencies so that transportation systems of the Nation may function as the war requires. It coordinates and directs domestic traffic movements to prevent traffic congestion and to assure orderly and ready movement of men, materials, and supplies to points of need.

OFFICE OF ECONOMIC STABILIZATION

Established by Executive Order 9250 of October 3, 1942, to control so far as possible the inflationary tendencies and the vast dislocations attendant thereon which threaten the military effort and domestic economic structure, and for the most effective prosecution of the war. The Economic Stabilization Board was created by the same order to advise the Director of Economic Stabilization.

OFFICE OF LEND-LEASE ADMINISTRATION

Executive Order No. 8926, of October 28, 1941, established the Office of Lend-Lease Administration. The order authorizes the Administrator to exercise any power conferred upon the President by the Lend-Lease Act and by the Defense Aid Supplemental Appropriation Acts, 1941 and 1942, the Fifth Supplemental National Defense Appropriation Act, 1942, and all acts amendatory or supplemental thereto, with respect to any nation whose defense the President shall have found to be vital to the defense of the United States: "Provided, That the master agreement with each nation receiving lend-lease aid, setting forth the general terms and conditions under which such nation is receiving such aid, shall continue to be negotiated by the State Department, with the advice of the Economic Defense Board and the Lend-Lease Administration." Executive Order 8751, of May 2, 1941, establishing the Division of Defense Aid Reports was revoked by the order establishing the Office of Lend-Lease Administration.

OFFICE OF SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The Office of Scientific Research and Development was created by Executive Order No. 8807, of June 28, 1941, for the purpose of assuring adequate provision for research on scientific and medical problems relating to the national defense.

OFFICE OF WAR INFORMATION

Executive Order 9182 of June 13, 1942, established within the Office for Emergency Management the Office of War Information, consolidating into one agency the war information functions of the Government—foreign and domestic.

Transferred to the Office of War Information were the Office of Facts and Figures, Office of Government Reports, Division of Information in the Office for Emergency Management (except functions with respect to the provision of press and publication services relating to the specific activities of the constituent agencies of the Office for Emergency Management), and the Foreign Information Service, Outpost, Publications, and Pictorial Branches of the Coordinator of Information.

The order established within the Office of War Information a Committee on War Information Policy to formulate basic policies and plans on war information and to advise with respect to the development of coordinated war information programs.

The director is authorized to formulate and carry out, through the use of press, radio, motion picture, and other facilities, information programs designed to facilitate the development of an informed and intelligent understanding, at home and abroad, of the status and progress of the war effort, and of the war policies, activities, and aims of the Government.

WAR MANPOWER COMMISSION

By Executive Order No. 9139 dated April 18, 1942, the War Manpower Commission was created within the Office for Emergency Management for the purpose of assuring the most effective mobilization and utilization of the national manpower. At the same time there were transferred to the War Manpower Commission the labor supply functions of the Labor Division of the War Production Board, the National Roster of Scientific and Specialized Personnel, which was to be preserved as an organizational entity, and the Office of Procurement and Assignment. These latter two are now a part of the Bureau of Placement of the War Manpower Commission.

On July 30, 1942, by Presidential order, the Committee on Fair Employment Practice was transferred from the War Production Board to the War Manpower Commission. Executive Order No. 9247, dated September 17, 1942, transferred to the War Manpower Commission the United States Employment Service, the National Youth Administration, the Apprenticeship Training Service, the Training within Industry Service, and certain functions of the Office of Education with regard to war training. It provided that the Apprenticeship Training Service and the National Youth Administration should be preserved as organizational entities within the War Manpower Commission. They are now operating as such in the Bureau of Training. By Executive Order No. 9279, the Selective Service System was transferred to the War Manpower Commission, and is now known as the Bureau of Selective Service.

WAR PRODUCTION BOARD

The War Production Board was established within the Office for Emergency Management by Executive Order No. 9024, of January 16, 1942, to exercise general direction over the war procurement and production program. It succeeds to the functions of the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board, which was abolished by Executive Order No. 9024, of January 16, 1942, and to the functions of the Office of Production Management, which was abolished by Executive Order No. 9040, of January 24, 1942. The War Production Board acts to insure the maximum production of war munitions and to this end directs the orderly mobilization and use of the economic resources of the Nation.

SMALLER WAR PLANTS CORPORATION

Public Law 603, Seventy-seventh Congress, Second Session, dated June 11, 1942, created the Smaller War Plants Corporation with a capital stock of $150,000,000, to ensure that small business concerns will be most efficiently and effectively utilized in the production of articles, equipment, supplies, and materials for both war and essential civilian purposes. The management of the Corporation is vested in a board of five directors, familiar with the problems of small business, appointed by the chairman of the War Production Board.

WAR RELOCATION AUTHORITY

An agency created by Executive order on March 18, 1942, to facilitate the relocation of persons evacuated or removed from their homes during the war period. Up to the present time, the activities of the War Relocation Authority have been concerned almost entirely with the relocation of some 110,000 persons of Japanese ancestry evacuated from the military area embracing the State of California, the western portions of Washington and Oregon, and the southern portion of Arizona. The actual evacuation was handled by the Wartime Civil Control Administration, a unit of the Western Defense Command, which supervised the movement of evacuees to temporary assembly centers.

From these temporary centers the evacuees were moved to 10 inland relocation centers established by the War Relocation Authority where they will be engaged in developing public lands for agricultural production and in other work designed to make the centers as self-sustaining as possible. These evacuee communities, ranging in population from 8,000 to 20,000, are located as follows: Two in California, two in Arizona, two in Arkansas; and one in Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, and Idaho.

Assistance in relocation also has been extended to individuals excluded by military orders from the Western Defense Command and from the Eastern Defense Command.

WAR SHIPPING ADMINISTRATION

The War Shipping Administration was established within the Office for Emergency Management by Executive Order No. 9054, of February 7, 1942, to insure the most effective utilization of shipping of the United States for the successful prosecution of the war. It controls the operation, purchase, charter, requisition, maintenance, insurance and use of all ocean vessels under the control of the United States, except combatant vessels of the Army, Navy, and Coast Guard; fleet auxiliaries of the Navy; transports owned by the Army and Navy; and vessels engaged in coastwise, intercoastal, and inland transportation under the control of the Office of Defense Transportation. Functions, duties, and powers dealing with the foregoing conferred by law upon the United States Maritime Commission were transferred to the Administrator.

BOARD OF ECONOMIC WARFARE

Executive Order No. 8982, of December 17, 1941, changed the name of the Economic Defense Board to Board of Economic Warfare. The Economic Defense Board was established by Executive Order No. 8839, of July 30, 1941, "for the purpose of developing and coordinating policies, plans, and programs designed to protect and strengthen the international economic relations of the United States in the interest of national defense." Under authority of Executive Order No. 8900, of September 15, 1941, the Board assumed the duties heretofore vested in the Administrator of Export Control. Responsibility for importing essential raw materials from foreign countries was centered in the Board under Executive Order 9128 of April 13, 1942. In substance, the Order directed the Board to administer importation of materials and commodities required for the war production effort.

OFFICE OF CENSORSHIP

The Office of Censorship was established by Executive Order No. 8985, of December 19, 1941, to censor mail, cable, radio, and other communications passing between the United States and any foreign country. The Office also supervises voluntary censorship of the domestic press and radio. The Censorship Policy Board, created by the order, advises the Director of Censorship with respect to policy and the coordination and integration of censorship.

OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION

The Office of Price Administration is directed by statute to stabilize prices and rents and prevent speculation, profiteering, hoarding, and manipulation; to assist in securing adequate production, conserving essential materials, preventing dissipation of defense appropriations through excessive prices for procurement; to protect persons with fixed incomes; to prevent hardships to schools, universities, institutions, and governmental agencies; to prevent a post-war collapse of values; to ration certain scarce commodities to civilian consumers; and to construct the organization and secure and direct the staff necessary to achieving these objectives.

PACIFIC WAR COUNCIL

Announced by Stephen T. Early, Secretary to the President, at a press conference held March 30, 1942. In attendance at first meeting held April 1, 1942, were representatives of the United States, Great Britain and its dominions, New Zealand, China, and the Netherlands. Considers matters of policy relating to the joint war effort.

PETROLEUM ADMINISTRATION FOR WAR

The Petroleum Administration for War was created by Executive Order 9276 of December 2, 1942, to coordinate and centralize the war policies and actions of the Government relating to petroleum with a view toward providing adequate supplies of petroleum for the successful prosecution of the war and for other essential purposes. The Petroleum Administration for War absorbed and supersedes the Office of Petroleum Coordinator for War created by the President in his letter of May 28, 1941, to the Secretary of the Interior. The Secretary of the Interior is ex officio Petroleum Administrator and is directed to establish basic policies and formulate plans and programs to assure for the prosecution of the war the conservation and most effective development and utilization of petroleum in the United States, its territories and possessions, and to collaborate in the determination of plans and policies with respect to foreign petroleum activities. The Petroleum Administration for War is authorized to issue necessary policy and operating directives and orders to effectuate such plans, programs, and policies.

PRESIDENT'S WAR RELIEF CONTROL BOARD

The President's War Relief Control Board was established by Executive Order 9205 of July 25, 1942, to succeed the President's Committee on War Relief Agencies, established by Presidential letter on March 13, 1941.

The Board is authorized to control, in the interest of the furtherance of the war purpose, all solicitations, sales of merchandise or services, collections, receipts, and distribution of funds and contributions for (1) charities for foreign and domestic relief, rehabilitation, reconstruction, and welfare arising from war-created needs in the United States or in foreign countries; (2) refugee relief; (3) relief of the civilian population of the United States affected by enemy action; or (4) relief and welfare of the armed forces of the United States or of their dependents.

JOINT ECONOMIC COMMITTEES—UNITED STATES AND CANADA

The Joint Economic Committees were established by the United States and Canada on June 17, 1941, to study and report on the possibilities of better utilization of the combined resources of the two countries in the production of defense requirements, and to reduce the probable post-war economic dislocation in each country.

MATERIAL COORDINATING COMMITTEE—UNITED STATES AND CANADA

Creation of the Material Coordinating Committee—United States and Canada—was announced on May 14, 1941, by William S. Knudsen, Director General, Office of Production Management (absorbed by War Production Board). The Committee makes possible the free exchange of vital information between responsible officials of the two governments relating to their supplies of strategic raw materials required for war production.

JOINT WAR PRODUCTION COMMITTEE—UNITED STATES AND CANADA

The Joint Defense Production Committee was set up on November 5, 1941, by the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Canada to advise on the coordination of the war production of the two countries, to survey capacity for war production, and to consider and advise on related matters. The name "Joint Defense Production Committee" was later changed to Joint War Production Committee.

COMBINED CHIEFS OF STAFF (UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN)

Established by the United States and Great Britain, as announced by the War Department February 6, 1942, to insure complete coordination of the war effort of Great Britain and the United States, including the production and distribution of their war supplies, and to provide for full British and American collaboration with the United Nations now associated in prosecution of the war against the Axis powers.

MUNITIONS ASSIGNMENTS BOARD (UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN)

Creation of the Munitions Assignment Board (a supporting agency to the Combined Chiefs of Staff, United States and Great Britain) was announced on January 26, 1942, by the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain. The Board advises on quantity and priority of assignments to Great Britain and the United States or other of the United Nations.

COMBINED FOOD BOARD (UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN)

On June 9, 1942, the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain jointly authorized the creation of the Combined Food Board to obtain a planned and expeditious utilization of the food resources of the United Nations, in order to coordinate further the prosecution of the war effort.

COMBINED PRODUCTION AND RESOURCES BOARD (UNITED STATES, GREAT BRITAIN, AND CANADA)

Creation of the Combined Production and Resources Board was announced by the President on June 9, 1942. The Board was established by the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain, in order to complete the organization needed for the most effective use of the combined resources of the United States and the United Kingdom for the prosecution of the war. Under date of November 10, 1942, by agreement among the President of the United States, the Prime Minister of Great Britain, and the Prime Minister of Canada, the scope of the Board's responsibilities was broadened to include Canada.

COMBINED RAW MATERIALS BOARD (UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN)

Creation of the Combined Raw Materials Board was announced on January 26, 1942, by the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain. The Board plans the best and speediest development, expansion, and use of raw material resources.

COMBINED SHIPPING ADJUSTMENT BOARD (UNITED STATES AND GREAT BRITAIN)

Creation of the Combined Shipping Adjustment Board was announced on January 26, 1942, by the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Great Britain. The Board unifies the work of the British Ministry of War Transport and the shipping authorities of the United States Government.

JOINT BRAZIL-UNITED STATES DEFENSE COMMISSION

The Commission, composed of military delegates—Army, Navy, and the Air Forces—of the two countries was established in May 1942 by agreement between the United States and Brazil.

Meetings are held in Washington for the purpose of making plans for the mutual defense of the Western Hemisphere.

JOINT MEXICAN-UNITED STATES DEFENSE COMMISSION

On January 12, 1942, the Governments of Mexico and the United States announced the organization of a mixed defense commission to study the problems relating to the defense of the two countries and to propose measures which should be adopted.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

SECRETARY OF STATE

The Secretary of State, who is the highest ranking Cabinet member, is the head of the Department of State. Upon him devolves the principal responsibility, under the President, for the determination of the policy of the Government in relation to international problems. He is charged with the conduct of negotiations pertaining to the protection of American rights and interests throughout the world, and the promotion of beneficial intercourse between the United States and other countries. He also performs certain domestic duties, such as having custody of the seal of the United States and publishing the laws enacted by Congress.

To an assistant to the Secretary is assigned direct supervision of the Division of Monetary Research, general supervision of all matters with which the Treasury Department has to deal having a bearing on foreign relations, and supervision of matters relating to the management and operation of the Stabilization Fund.

To an assistant to the Secretary is assigned general supervision of the Division of Tax Research and the Office of the Tax Legislative Counsel.

To the assistant to the Secretary in Charge of Procurement, Engraving and Printing, and Mint is assigned the general supervision of the Procurement Division, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and the Bureau of the Mint.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY

To the Administrative Assistant to the Secretary is assigned all matters of administration, including personnel and Budget matters, and the supervision of the Office of the Chief Clerk, the Office of the Director of Personnel, and the Division of Personnel, the Secretary's Correspondence Division, and the Office of Superintendent of Treasury Buildings.

THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, OFFICE UNDER THE IMMEDIATE SUPERVISION OF

OFFICE OF GENERAL COUNSEL FOR THE TREASURY

The General Counsel is the chief law officer of the Department, is in charge of all of its legal activities, and performs such duties relating thereto as may be prescribed by the Secretary or required by law.

In addition, the General Counsel is assigned general supervision of the Foreign Funds Control.

FOREIGN FUNDS CONTROL

Foreign Funds Control was established in April 1940. Its primary function is to carry out the economic warfare program under the Trading with the Enemy Act, as amended. It controls the use and disposition of the bulk of the 8½ billion dollars worth of property or funds owned in the United States by the governments or nationals of 36 enemy, enemy-dominated and neutral countries. Its main function is to prevent such assets from being used in any way to aid the Axis.

Through its broad powers Foreign Funds Control stops the enemy from extorting American-held property from invaded peoples. It prevents the Axis from using billions of assets to finance sabotage, propaganda, and subversive activities. It keeps the enemy from getting strategic materials. It destroys world markets for securities and United States currency looted by the enemy from invaded countries and carries out programs to protect currency and securities in United States possessions in danger of invasion. It discovers and purges businesses in the United States having Axis ties.

The Control participates in the application of the Proclaimed List of Certain Blocked Nationals. It regulates financial dealings with enemy-dominated firms, blacklisted firms, and neutrals under duress outside the United States. It helps to cut off Axis trade in South America and other vital areas. It also has responsibility for regulating communications of a financial or commercial nature with enemy nationals or territories.

The "freezing" control is made effective by (a) requiring either specific or general licenses to effect transactions involving foreign-owned assets, (b) securing reports on activities under license, (c) investigating violations of the Control, and (d) applying sanctions such as freezing, blacklisting, liquidation, or formal prosecution against inimical interests. In the application of the program the Federal Reserve banks and the officials of the Territories and possessions of the United States act as agents of the Control.

THE UNDER SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, OFFICES UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

BUREAU OF THE COMPTROLLER OF THE CURRENCY

The most important functions of the Comptroller of the Currency are those relating to the organization of new national banks; the general supervision over the national banks in operation; the administration, through receivers, of national banks which have failed.

Reports of condition of national banks are required to be made to the Comptroller by the banks not less than three times a year upon a date fixed by the Comptroller. Under the direction of the Comptroller, national-bank examiners make regular examinations of the affairs of the national banks, showing their condition with reference to solvency and observance of the provisions of the National Bank Act. In case of deliberate violation, suit may be brought in the name of the Comptroller against any such bank for the forfeiture of its charter. If it appears to the Comptroller that any national bank is in an insolvent condition he is empowered to appoint a receiver.

The Comptroller of the Currency is an ex officio member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and sits regularly with the Board.

The Comptroller of the Currency is required by law to report directly to Congress annually and to recommend to Congress amendments to the national banking laws.

DIVISION OF RESEARCH AND STATISTICS

The Division of Research and Statistics in the Office of the Secretary serves as a research staff for the Secretary and other Treasury officials on matters relating to fiscal operations and policies, the estimated volume of future revenues, actuarial considerations involved in certain Treasury functions, and various general economic problems arising in connection with Treasury activities.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY IN CHARGE OF CUSTOMS, NARCOTICS, AND SECRET SERVICE, OFFICES UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

CUSTOMS SERVICE

During Colonial days each Colony, and under the Articles of Confederation each State, administered its own customs service and fixed the rates of duty. The Federal Customs Service was created under the Constitution by the fifth act of the First Congress, approved July 31, 1789. The act of August 24, 1912, authorized the President to reorganize the Customs Service, abolish ports, and abolish or consolidate districts, and under this authority the present form of field organization was effected by the President's message to Congress of March 3, 1913. The act of August 1, 1914, authorizes the President to rearrange the several customs collection districts, abolish ports of entry, and establish new ports as may appear necessary from time to time, with a limitation that neither the total number of districts nor the total number of ports shall exceed the number which existed on the date of the passage of that act.

The reorganization act, approved March 3, 1927, authorized the creation of a Bureau of Customs under a Commissioner of Customs. Under the authority of that act, the Secretary of the Treasury has conferred upon the Commissioner of Customs, subject to the general supervision and direction of the Secretary, the powers and duties relating to the importation and entry of merchandise into or the exportation of merchandise from the United States vested in or imposed upon the Secretary of the Treasury by the Tariff Act of 1930 or any other law, with the exception that certain classes of regulations and decisions shall be approved by the Secretary. Under this delegation of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioner of Customs has general authority for the administration of the Customs Service and the conduct of customs business, prescribing customs practice and procedure, and the supervision of the assessment and collection of customs duties, certain taxes, and miscellaneous receipts.

The office of the Commissioner of Customs directs and controls the functioning of the Customs Service throughout (1) the 46 customs collection districts, into which the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico have been divided, with a collector of customs in charge of each; (2) the 7 comptroller districts to which the 46 customs collection districts have been allocated, with a comptroller of customs in charge of each; (3) the 11 active customs agency districts—9 in the United States and 2 in foreign countries; and (4) the 3 border patrol districts established on the Canadian and Mexican borders.

The principal functions of the Customs Service are to enter and clear vessels; supervise the discharge of cargo; ascertain the quantities of imported merchandise, appraise and classify such merchandise, and assess and collect the duties thereon; control the customs warehousing of imported merchandise; enforce customs and other laws by patrolling the international borders and inspecting international traffic by vessel, highway, railway, and air; review protests against the payment of duties; determine and certify for payment the amount of draw-back due upon the exportation of articles manufactured or produced from duty-paid or tax-paid imports; prevent the smuggling of contraband merchandise and the release of prohibited articles; prevent and detect undervaluations and frauds on the customs revenue; apprehend violators of the customs laws; enforce the antidumping act and perform certain duties under the Foreign Trade Zones Act.

Under Executive Order No. 9083, dated February 28, 1942, the Bureau of Customs administers the navigation laws pertaining to registry, enrollment and licensing of vessels, including the issuing of commissions to yachts and the assignment of signal letters; the measurement of vessels, administration of tonnage duties and the collection of tolls; the entrance and clearance of vessels and aircraft; the regulation of vessels in the coasting and fishing trade and limitation of the use of foreign vessels in waters under the jurisdiction of the United States; the recording of sales, conveyances, and mortgages of vessels; the protection of steerage passengers; and all other functions which prior to March 1, 1942, had been performed by the Bureau of Customs on behalf of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation or the Secretary of Commerce.

The Customs Service also cooperates with other services in the Treasury Department and other executive departments and branches of the Government in the collection of taxes, fees and other charges, and in the enforcement of preventive, sanitary, and other laws under their respective administrations relating principally to persons and articles coming into this country and in some cases to articles sent out of the country.

Since the passage of the Neutrality Act of 1939, the Bureau of Customs, because of the location of its officers at strategic seaboard and land border ports, has been called upon to perform numerous miscellaneous duties having to do with the enforcement of war emergency laws and regulations, the prevention of espionage and sabotage, and the physical control of restricted imports and exports. In connection with the export control program, the Bureau of Customs is charged with inspection of all export declarations and permits presented as a prerequisite to export in order to insure compliance with the licensing provisions of the State Department, the Office of Export Control of the Board of Economic Warfare, and the Office of Lend-Lease Administration, to prevent the exportation of strategic materials of every description except under proper license or permit. When deemed necessary, an actual examination of exports is made by customs officers to insure compliance with export control requirements. On the request of the Office of Export Control, the customs investigative unit conducts field investigations of individuals, firms, and corporations conducting business relating to exports of merchandise from the United States and of violations of the Export Control Act.

The Bureau assists the State Department in the supervision and control of the departure from and entry into the United States of persons whose departure or entrance would be prejudicial to the interests of the United States, and on behalf of the State Department the Bureau examines passports of American citizens departing from the United States at seaports and airports.

The Bureau of Customs cooperates with the Foreign Funds Control Office of the Department by maintaining physical control of persons and their effects entering and leaving the United States to insure that no funds, securities, or property are taken out of or brought into the United States except in such amounts or values as may be authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury. By physical control of exports and imports it enforces the prohibition against trading with persons or firms on the Proclaimed List of Certain Blocked Nationals. The persons and baggage of suspects entering the United States are searched to prevent the bringing of gold into this country in violation of the Gold Reserve Act of January 30, 1934.

The Bureau of Customs enforces the rationing orders issued by the Office of Price Administration insofar as such orders apply (1) to supplies and stores for vessels entering United States ports, (2) to persons entering the United States, and (3) to merchandise imported into the United States.

Under the regulations for the enforcement of the Trading with the Enemy Act, the Bureau of Customs is responsible for the licensing of tangible communications entering or leaving the United States, except in the regular course of the mail. This responsibility necessitates intercepting such tangible communications carried on vessels, vehicles, and persons arriving from and departing to foreign countries for the purpose of examining such communications to determine whether they contain matter inimical to the interests of the United States or helpful to its enemies.

BUREAU OF NARCOTICS

The Commissioner of Narcotics, under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of the Treasury, has general supervision of the enforcement of the Harrison Narcotic Act, the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937, and related statutes, including the administration of the permissive features of the Narcotic Drugs Import and Export Act, and cooperates with the Customs Bureau in the enforcement of the prohibitive features of the latter act. The Commissioner also cooperates (1) with the State Department in the discharge of the international obligations of the United States concerning the traffic in narcotic drugs and (2) with the several States in the suppression of the abuse of narcotic drugs in their respective jurisdictions.

The duties of the Bureau include the investigation and the detection and prevention of violations of the Federal narcotic laws (including the Federal marihuana law), the determination, with the cooperation of the Public Health Service, of quantities of crude opium and coca leaves to be imported into the United States for medical and legitimate uses, and the issuance of permits to import the crude narcotic drugs and to export drugs and preparations manufactured therefrom under the law and regulations. An annual report is made to Congress which also serves the purpose of the special report heretofore prepared in the Bureau on behalf of the Government for transmittal through the State Department to the nations signatory to the International Drug Conventions of 1912 and 1931.

UNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE

The Chief of the Secret Service is charged with the protection of the President of the United States, his family, and the President-elect at all times and under all conditions. The White House police force is also under the control and supervision of the Chief of the Secret Service.

A major function of the Secret Service is the detection, arrest, and delivery to the marshal having jurisdiction of persons engaged in counterfeiting, forging, or altering of any of the obligations or other securities, as well as the coins, of the United States or of foreign governments.

A staff of trained investigators is maintained for the purposes described above and to investigate violations of the Federal Farm Loan Act, Federal Farm Credit Act of 1935, War Finance Corporation Act, section 704 of the World War Adjusted Compensation Act, Gold Reserve Act of 1934, offenses against the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation named in section 12–B of the Banking Act of 1935 and covered by paragraphs (s) to (x), inclusive (sec. 264, title 12, U. S. C.), counterfeiting of Government transportation requests (act of December 11, 1926), and of liquor revenue stamps in violation of the Liquor Taxing Act of 1934, forgery of Government checks, thefts of Government property, investigations to establish responsibility of bidders on Government contracts, losses of insured shipments of Government securities, and certain investigations in connection with the Work Projects Administration. In addition, other crimes against the laws of the United States relating to the Treasury Department and the several branches of the public service under its control are investigated by the Secret Service, as the Secretary of the Treasury may direct. A uniformed force safeguards the paper currency and other Government securities and obligations during the process of manufacture at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, its transportation to other Government departments in Washington, and in the vaults of the money-handling divisions of the Treasury Department. The force also assists in the enforcement of the rules and regulations of the Department, and has police powers of arrest within the Treasury Buildings and on Government property. An agent of the Secret Service is detailed to supervise this uniformed force.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY IN CHARGE OF BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE, OFFICE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has general supervision of the assessment and collection of all internal-revenue taxes and other miscellaneous taxing acts of Congress; the enforcement of internal-revenue laws; and the preparation and distribution of instructions, regulations, forms, blanks, stamps, etc. An annual report to the Secretary of the Treasury covering the activities of this service is made by the Commissioner.

For the purpose of efficient and effective administration of the internal-revenue laws the duties of the Bureau are assigned to various units as follows: Commissioner and Miscellaneous Unit, Income Tax Unit, Miscellaneous Tax Unit, Accounts and Collections Unit, Alcohol Tax Unit and the Salary, Stabilization Unit.

The Commissioner and Miscellaneous Unit includes the immediate Office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the Assistant to the Commissioner, the Executive Assistant to the Commissioner (Personnel Division, Administrative Division), the Office of the Special Deputy Commissioner, the Technical Staff, the Intelligence Unit, Training Division, and Public Relations Division.

The Income Tax Unit is the agency of the Bureau of Internal Revenue for administering the Federal income and profits tax provisions of the revenue laws. Its duties are to prepare regulations for the administration of such provisions; to receive, audit, and verify the returns covering such taxes; to review and dispose of claims for refund, and to compile statistics from these returns. This unit also administers section 501 (title III) of the Revenue Act of 1936, Unjust Enrichment Tax.

The Miscellaneous Tax Unit is charged with the administration of all internal-revenue tax laws except income and profits taxes, employment taxes, and alcohol taxes, and is also responsible for adjusting and closing cases involving repealed miscellaneous internal-revenue taxes. This unit is also charged with the administration of taxes imposed under the Silver Purchase Act of June 19, 1934, the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, approved April 26, 1937, the Sugar Act of 1937, approved September 1, 1937, the Marihuana Tax Act of 1937, approved August 2, 1937, the National Firearms Act, approved June 26, 1934, the Federal Firearms

Act, approved June 30, 1938, and the tax imposed on hydraulic mining under the act of March 1, 1893, as amended June 19, 1934.

The Accounts and Collections Unit is charged with the administration of matters having to do with the organization and management of the offices of collectors of internal revenue, including their field forces; with the administration of the laws relating to employment taxes; and with the administrative audit of revenue and disbursing accounts in the Internal Revenue Bureau and Service. It also issues stamps to collectors of internal revenue.

The Alcohol Tax Unit is charged with the administration of the laws relating to the manufacture, warehousing and distribution of spirituous liquors, wines, fermented liquors, and industrial alcohol; the determination, assertion, and assessment of taxes and penalties on liquors; the inquiry and investigation relative to the filing of returns for occupational and commodity taxes; the regulation of the manufacture and use of liquor bottles and the chemical analysis of liquors and numerous other products to determine their taxable status. It administers the provisions of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act relating to the regulation of interstate and foreign commerce in distilled spirits, wines, and malt beverages, and the labeling and advertising thereof. It is also charged with the investigation, detection and prevention of willful and fraudulent violations of internal-revenue laws relating to liquors.

The Salary Stabilization Unit is charged with the administration of salary increases and decreases coming within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner as defined in the regulations of the Economic Stabilization Director which was approved by the President on October 27, 1942.

Jurisdiction of the Commissioner covers all salaries over $5,000 per year, and salary payments of less than $5,000 per year in the case of executive, administrative, or professional employees not represented by labor organizations.

Its duties are to receive, consider, and issue rulings upon all requests for increases and decreases of the type of salaries under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner.

There are four main divisions of the Field Service, as follows: The Collection Service, the Field Audit Service, the Supervisory Field Service of Alcohol Tax Unit, and Field Divisions of the Technical Staff.

In addition to the four aforementioned major field activities, there are the following field forces whose activities are supervised from Washington: Intelligence Agents, Supervisors of Accounts and Collections, Miscellaneous and Sales Tax Agents, and Field Inspection Service.

THE FISCAL ASSISTANT SECRETARY, OFFICES UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

(Formerly Office of Commissioner of Accounts and Deposits)

Government Reorganization Plan No. III, submitted to the Congress by the President on April 2, 1940, and made effective on June 30, 1940, by Public Resolution No. 75, Seventy-sixth Congress, approved June 4, 1940, provided for the establishment, as a part of the Fiscal Service of the Treasury Department, of a Bureau of Accounts with a Commissioner of Accounts at its head. It transferred to the Fiscal Assistant Secretary, to be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury and through the Commissioner of Accounts, all functions vested in the Under Secretary and any Assistant Secretary of the Treasury pertaining to supervision of the administration of the accounting functions and activities in the Treasury Department and all its bureaus, divisions, and offices, and all functions vested in any other officer or employee of the Treasury Department of authorizing the installation, maintenance, revision, and elimination of accounting records, reports, and procedure.

The Bureau of Accounts consists of the immediate Office of the Commissioner of Accounts, the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants, the Division of Disbursement, the Division of Deposits, the Section of Surety Bonds, the Section of Investments, the Budget Section, and the Division of Central Accounts. The Commissioner of Accounts has supervisory duties in connection with all of these, as well as in connection with the remaining functions of liquidation of matters growing out of the control of the American transportation system, which was exercised through the United States Railroad Administration during the period from December 28, 1917, to February 29, 1920, and certain duties in the Office of the Treasurer of the United States which are related to the work of the Divisions mentioned. The Commissioner of Accounts also has supervision of the preparation of the combined statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Government which the act of July 31, 1894, requires the Secretary of the Treasury to lay annually before Congress, classifying the receipts, wherever practicable, by ports, districts, and States, and the expenditures under each separate head of appropriation. With the approval of the President, the Emergency Relief Accounting Organization, established under section II (a) of Executive Order No. 7034, dated May 6, 1935, was discontinued effective July 1, 1942, in line with the policy of reducing nondefense expenditures and making available the maximum trained personnel for war activities.

The Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants was created by the act of July 31, 1894 (28 Stat. 208; U. S. Code, title 5, sec. 255). Prior to that time it was known as the Division of Warrants, Estimates, and Appropriations. Section 1, paragraph (3) of the Third Plan on Government Reorganization provides that "the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants and its functions are transferred to the Bureau of Accounts." The act of 1894 provides that upon the books of this Division shall be kept all accounts of receipts and expenditures of public money, except postal. The Division, in the name of the Secretary of the Treasury, issues all warrants on the Treasurer of the United States; makes analyses of acts of Congress carrying appropriations and maintains the necessary appropriation accounts on its ledgers; issues warrants for placing disbursing funds to the credit of disbursing officers, for the payment by the Treasury of claims settled by the General Accounting Office, and for covering into the Treasury the revenues and receipts of the Government; and compiles and publishes an annual digest of the appropriations made by Congress.

The Division of Disbursement was created under Executive Order No. 6166 of June 10, 1933, which provided that the function of disbursement of money of the United States exercised by any agency of the Government is transferred to the Treasury Department and consolidated in that Division. The War and Navy Departments, except with respect to departmental salaries and expenses in the District of Columbia, were exempted from Executive Order No. 6166 by Executive Order No. 6728 of May 29, 1934. The function of disbursement of moneys of the United States in the other executive departments and agencies in Washington and in the field has been taken over and consolidated in this Division with the exception of the Postal Service and United States marshals, which were exempted from Executive Order No. 6166 by Reorganization Plan No. IV, dated April 11, 1940. Twenty-one regional offices have been established in the several Federal Reserve districts and five offices outside the continental limits of the United States and in Alaska for the purpose of performing the disbursing functions outside Washington for the regular departments and agencies.

The Division of Deposits is charged with the administration of all matters pertaining to designation and supervision of Government depositaries and the deposit of Government funds in such depositaries; i. e., the Federal Reserve banks, member bank depositaries, and special depositaries under the Liberty Loan Acts, foreign depositaries, Territorial depositaries, Federal land banks, and the Philippine treasury; matters pertaining to the qualification of Federal savings and loan associations as fiscal agents of the United States under Treasury Circular 568; and matters pertaining to the functions of the Treasury under the Government Losses in Shipment Act.

The Section of Surety Bonds is responsible for analyzing the financial statements of surety companies authorized to transact business with the United States. It determines the underwriting qualifications of surety companies, audits their quarterly financial statements, makes examinations into their financial condition at the home offices wherever necessary, and performs other duties to determine whether the companies observe the requirements of existing law and regulations of the Treasury. The section has custody of all fidelity bonds in favor of the United States, with a few exceptions, and notifies the accounting offices of the receipt and filing of such official bonds. The section examines and approves as to corporate surety all fidelity and surety bonds taken by Treasury officers, except customs bonds filed in the field, and also examines and approves as to corporate surety the fidelity and surety bonds accepted by practically all of the executive departments and establishments in Washington.

The Section of Investments keeps the accounts and supervises collections of railroad obligations owned by the United States, which are in the custody of the Treasury; handles the collection of other obligations owned by the United States which are turned over to the Treasury by other departments for collection; makes payments, keeps accounts, and handles matters relating to awards under the Settlement of War Claims Act of 1928, under the claims agreement of October 25, 1934, between the United States and Turkey, and under the acts of April 10, 1935, and December 18, 1942, covering claims against the Republic of Mexico; handles matters relating to investment accounts under control of the Secretary of the Treasury, including investments held in the Government Life Insurance Fund, the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, States Unemployment Trust Fund, Railroad Retirement Account, and Railroad Unemployment Insurance Account; and handles matters relating to the custody of investments and securities held by the Treasurer of the United States and the Federal Reserve banks for which the Secretary of the Treasury is responsible, other than those related to public debt operations. It also maintains accounts and handles matters relating to the purchase of silver under the Silver Purchase Act of 1934.

The Budget Section, in part, constitutes the operating staff of the budget officer of the Department, coordinating departmental estimates of appropriations, justifications, and reports and performing related duties in accordance with the requirements of the budget officer, Treasury Department; performs similar duties for the Commissioner of Accounts, has administration of special deposit accounts of the Secretary of the Treasury, which cover alien property trust funds in the Treasury, offers in compromise under the provisions of section 3469 of the Revised Statutes, Philippine trust funds held in interest-bearing accounts, and accounts pertaining to withheld foreign check payments.

The Division of Central Accounts performs the functions under Executive Order No. 8512, dated August 13, 1940, as amended by Executive Order No. 9084, dated March 3, 1942, requiring the Treasury Department to prepare financial reports with respect to the financial condition and operations of the Government for the information and use of the President and the Bureau of the Budget; to establish and maintain a complete system of central accounts for the entire Government; and to establish, subject to the approval of the Director, Bureau of the Budget, and the Comptroller General of the United States, uniform terminology, classifications, and standards in connection with such financial reports for the use and guidance of all departments and establishments. Thus far, regulation No. 1 relating to apportionments and reports on status of appropriations and regulation No. 2 relating to financial reports of governmental corporations and enterprises have been issued.

The Office of the Director General of Railroads was abolished effective July 1, 1939, pursuant to section 2 (b) of the President's Reorganization Plan No. II and its functions and duties transferred to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Fiscal Assistant Secretary, the Commissioner of Accounts, and the Assistant Commissioners of Accounts have been designated to perform on behalf of the Secretary of the Treasury the duties and functions of the former Director General of Railroads.

BUREAU OF THE PUBLIC DEBT

The Bureau of the Public Debt, under the Commissioner of the Public Debt, is charged with the conduct of transactions in public debt and paper currency issues of the United States. It also is charged with the procurement of distinctive paper required for printing currency and public debt securities of the United States. As agent, the Bureau also conducts transactions in the interest-bearing issues of the Philippine and Puerto Rican Governments, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, the Federal Housing Administration, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, the United States Housing Authority; and in the consolidated issues of the Federal Farm Loan banks. The Bureau organization consists of the Office of the Commissioner, the Division of Loans and Currency, the Office of the Register of the Treasury, the Division of Public Debt Accounts and Audit, the Division of Savings Bonds, and the Division of Paper Custody.

Office of the Commissioner.—When a new issue of public debt securities is to be offered for subscription, the Office of the Commissioner prepares the necessary documents incident to the offering, directs the handling of subscriptions for and allotments of the securities to be issued. General supervision is exercised over the conduct of transactions in such securities after issue, either by the divisions of the Bureau in Washington, or by Federal Reserve banks, fiscal agents of the United States.

Division of Loans and Currency.—This division is the issuing branch. It is charged with the receipt and custody of new securities, and their issuance, directly or to the Federal Reserve banks; with the conduct of transactions in the outstanding debt including exchanges, transfers, conversions, maintenance of registered accounts, and the issuing of checks for interest thereon; and with the verification of canceled redeemed United States paper currency, and mutilated work from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

Office of the Register of the Treasury.—This office is the retiring branch. It is charged with the receipt of all paid or redeemed or exchanged public-debt securities, including interest coupons, canceled and retired on any account, and from any sources whatever, their audit, verification, and custody.

Division of Public Debt Accounts and Audit.—This division maintains administrative control accounts over all transactions with which the Bureau of the Public Debt is charged, and related transactions conducted by the Office of the Treasurer of the United States, and by the Federal Reserve banks acting in their capacities as fiscal agents of the United States. Similar accounts are maintained over transactions in distinctive and nondistinctive paper used in printing public debt and other securities, currency, stamps, etc. It also makes administrative examinations and audits of transactions so conducted and the securities involved. It maintains control accounts over reserve stocks of currency, and conducts administrative examinations and physical audits of such stocks, cash balances in the several divisions of the Treasurer's Office, and collateral securities held in trust by the Treasurer.

Division of Paper Custody.—This division is charged with the receipt, count, custody, and issue of all distinctive paper used for production of securities and currency by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing. In connection with the manufacture of distinctive paper, a small field force is maintained at the mills of the contractors.

Division of Savings Bonds.—This division is charged with the distribution of publicity literature for the War Savings Staff, the maintenance of mailing lists and the conduct of the regular purchase plan program. The division carries on a large correspondence with the investing public in connection with the registration of savings bonds and the regular purchase plan.

Chicago Office.—All transactions in savings bonds after their issue are conducted in the Chicago office of the Bureau. Branches of the Office of the Commissioner, the Division of Loans and Currency, the Office of the Register of the Treasury, the Division of Public Debt Accounts and Audit, and the Division of Savings Bonds in its entirety, comprise the Chicago Office.

OFFICE OF THE TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES

The Treasurer of the United States is charged with the receipt and disbursement of public moneys that may be deposited in the Treasury at Washington and in the other depositaries authorized by the Secretary of the Treasury to receive deposits of Government funds for credit in the account of the Treasurer of the United States. Funds advanced to disbursing officers for the use of Government departments and establishments under the appropriation of Congress are credited in the accounts of such disbursing officers on the books of the Treasurer, and disbursements therefrom are made by checks drawn on the Treasurer. In his Office are prepared and issued, for the Secretary of the Treasury, the daily Treasury statement of the United States, the monthly preliminary statement of the public debt, and the monthly preliminary statement of classified expenditures of the Government; the monthly statement of the outstanding paper currency of the Government is also published. The Treasury general ledger accounts of the trust fund, the reserve fund, the gold certificate fund, and the general fund, and other important accounts are maintained in his Office. He prepares an annual report to the Secretary of the Treasury. The Treasurer is fiscal agent for the issue and redemption of United States paper currency, for payment of principal and interest on the public debt on obligations the principal and interest of which are fully guaranteed by the United States, for payment of principal and interest on bonds of the Puerto Rican and Philippine governments (of which the Secretary of the Treasury is the transfer agent), and for the redemption of national-bank notes, Federal Reserve notes, and Federal Reserve bank notes. He is treasurer of the board of trustees of the Postal Savings System, trustee for bonds held to secure public deposits in national banks and bonds held to secure postal savings in banks, and custodian of miscellaneous securities and trust funds.

There are in the Office of the Treasurer six divisions: Administrative Division, Accounting Division, Cash Division, Currency Redemption Division, Division of General Accounts, and Division of Securities.

THE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY IN CHARGE OF WAR SAVINGS STAFF, OFFICE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

WAR SAVINGS STAFF

This Staff is charged with the promotional and sales activities relating to United States War Savings bonds, savings stamps, and other Government securities upon which publicity efforts may be centered.

THE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY IN CHARGE OF MONETARY RESEARCH, OFFICE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

DIVISION OF MONETARY RESEARCH

The Division of Monetary Research in the Office of the Secretary was established on March 25, 1938. The Division provides information, economic analyses, and recommendations for the use of the Secretary of the Treasury and other Treasury officials to assist in the formulation and execution of the monetary policies of the Department in connection with the stabilization fund and other operations under the Gold Reserve and the Silver Purchase Acts. Analyses are made pertaining to gold and silver; the flow of capital funds into and out of the United States; the position of the dollar in relation to foreign currencies; monetary, banking, and fiscal policies of foreign countries; exchange and trade restrictions abroad; financial and monetary problems relating to invasion and occupation of enemy-held territory by American armed forces; and similar problems. Analyses are also prepared relating to the customs activities of the Department and to the duties of the Secretary of the Treasury under the Tariff Act and on other matters pertaining to international trade, including the trade-agreement program. In addition, the Division provides economic analyses in connection with the Treasury's Foreign Funds Control, and supervises the collection and use of data obtained in the census of foreign-owned assets in the United States. The Division also is responsible for the economic and financial work in connection with the negotiation of exchange stabilization agreements, made by the United States with foreign governments and central banks for the purpose of promoting international exchange stability. The Treasury's operations under these agreements are performed by the Stabilization Fund, which is administered by the Division.

THE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY, OFFICES UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

DIVISION OF TAX RESEARCH

The Division of Tax Research in the Office of the Secretary conducts research in the economic aspects of taxation essential to the formulation of Treasury tax policy. The Division prepares reports and studies and conducts surveys for the use of the Secretary of the Treasury and other designated officials of the Treasury Department. When requested, it also provides information on various aspects of taxation and tax policy for the use of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives, the Finance Committee of the Senate, the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, and the several Federal agencies.

The research functions consist primarily of making basic surveys of the tax problems of the Federal Government and devising methods of meeting the Government's revenue requirements. Comprehensive analyses are made of the relationship of revenue yields to prospective revenue requirements, the desired economic objectives of the tax system, and the economic effects of taxation. Individual taxes are studied with relation to their effects on the particular groups of taxpayers involved, the equitable treatment of taxpayers within a particular group, the administrative and compliance problems inherent in the tax, and the integration of the particular tax with the tax system as a whole. Analyses are also prepared relating to the distribution of the tax burden, the inter-relationship of Federal, State, and local taxation, and foreign taxes and tax systems.

OFFICE OF THE TAX LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

The Office of Tax Legislative Counsel assists the Secretary, the Under Secretary, and such other persons as the Secretary may designate in planning and coordinating the Treasury Department's legislative program respecting the internal revenue, and in representing the Department on such matters before the appropriate congressional committees. The Office assists in the consideration of the legal aspects of Treasury regulations and rulings dealing with the interpretation of internal-revenue laws.

THE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY IN CHARGE OF PROCUREMENT, ENGRAVING AND PRINTING, AND MINT, OFFICES UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

PROCUREMENT DIVISION

The Procurement Division was created in the Treasury Department by Executive Order No. 6166; dated June 10, 1933, pursuant to the act of March 3, 1933 (47 Stat. 1517). In establishing the Procurement Division under this authority, it was organized into two major activities, the Branch of Public Buildings and the Branch of Supply. Under the President's Reorganization Plan No. I, effective July 1, 1939, the Branch of Public Buildings of the Procurement Division became a part of the Federal Works Agency. The Branch of Supply was continued as the Procurement Division.

Excepting as to the Army, the Navy, and the Maritime Commission, the Procurement Division is responsible for the determination of policies and methods of procurement, warehousing, and distribution of property, facilities, improvements, machinery, equipment, stores, and supplies for all Federal establishments; and is directed to undertake the performance of procurement of all materials, supplies, and equipment for use either at the seat of the government or in the field for all existing Government agencies and such agencies hereafter created.

The Procurement Division—

(a) Negotiates general purchase contracts for supplies and services for use by all agencies as announced through the General Supply Schedule and makes definite quantity purchases.

(b) Under the Federal Stock Catalog function, develops standard nomenclature covering commodities used by the Government; provides a standard arrangement for storage and issue of warehoused stock and for cataloging and recording supplies.

(c) Coordinates procedures and activities relating to movement of Government freight by various agencies, negotiates special rates and other particular freight considerations, supplies information of freight rates and routes, and represents the Government before the Interstate Commerce Commission and other regulatory bodies on traffic problems.

(d) Stores, as warehoused stock, and issues to Federal agencies in the District of Columbia area as requisitioned, such common supplies as nonperishable food; janitor, office, and institutional items, and liquid and solid fuels.

(e) Makes quantitative and qualitative inspection of equipment and supplies, and examines items offered under propsed contracts, as to compliance with specifications.

(f) Under Executive Order No. 9235, dated August 31, 1942, is responsible for the development of operating programs in cooperation with the Bureau of the Budget, which have as their objective the most economical and effective utilization of Government equipment and supplies, including their rehabilitation and distribution, and the establishment of central warehouses through the consolidation of existing facilities and their appurtenant activities. Certain of these functions are conducted through a system of regional offices which coordinate and control, as to reassignment to further Government uses or as to disposition otherwise, property declared surplus by other Federal activities, property seized and forfeited under the Federal Alcohol Act and the Liquid Law Repeal and Enforcement Act of 1935, and firearms seized and forfeited under the National Firearms Act, and operates in the District of Columbia, a furniture repair shop, a typewriter repair shop, and a garage where major and minor repairs and servicing functions are performed for the Treasury and certain other agencies on request.

(g) Conducts investigations and studies in connection with the establishment or modification of procedures, organization, and policy in connection with procurement, warehousing, and distribution of commodities or services.

(h) Prepares and maintains currently, by amendments and revision as necessary, Federal specifications which describe minimum requirements of commodities important in Government use, with special reference to elements of quality, performance, measurement, or other factors and with due regard to the requirements of consumers with relation to market limitations.

(i) Pursuant to act of June 7, 1939 (Pub. 117), purchases stocks of strategic and critical materials, as basically approved by the War Munitions Board, and maintains and replenishes such stocks.

(j) Procures unfabricated ferrous and nonferrous metals and alloys and various industrial, agricultural, and other commodities and articles to meet requirements of nations subject to benefits of the Lend-Lease Act. Operates field services of inspection, expediting, and storage incident to such procurement.

(k) Buys clothing, medical, and other vital supplies for the relief of destitute peoples overseas for distribution through the American Red Cross.

(l) Procures certain of the heating, plumbing, and refrigeration and other household fixtures for Federal housing structures related to war work.

(m) Through field offices, buys materials and equipment needed to meet requirements of the Works Progress Administration and other offices operating with funds from the Emergency Relief Appropriation.

(n) Transacts all the Treasury Department printing and binding business with the Government Printing Office and handles all requisitions for nonmonetary requirements of other agencies for supply by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

(o) Renegotiates war contracts consummated by the Procurement Division, cooperates with the War and Navy Departments and the Maritime Commission, and when the predominant interests are of the Procurement Division, renegotiates contracts for those establishments.

(p) Directs the activities of 104 Federal business associations in larger centers of Government activity throughout the United States, to promote economies and efficiency in transaction of routine business of the Government and to assist in various regional or National Government projects as requested.

BUREAU OF ENGRAVING AND PRINTING

This Bureau designs, engraves, and prints for the Government, United States currency, bonds, notes, bills, and certificates; Federal Reserve notes; Federal farm loan, joint-stock land bank, consolidated Federal farm loan and Federal farm mortgage bonds; Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds; revenue, customs, and postage stamps; Government, including Emergency Relief Administration, checks; and many other classes of engraved work for governmental use. It performs a similar function for the insular possessions of the Government.

BUREAU OF THE MINT

The Director of the Mint has general supervision of the mints, assay offices, and bullion depositories of the United States; prescribes the rules, subject to approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, for the business transactions of the mints and assay offices, receives daily reports on the operations of the field institutions, directs the coinage to be executed and medals to be made for the armed services; reviews the accounts, authorizes expenditures, superintends the annual settlements of the several institutions, and makes special examinations of them when deemed necessary. Appointments, removals, and transfers in the mints, assay offices, and bullion depositories are subject to approval of the Director of the Mint.

The Director of the Mint publishes quarterly an estimate of the value of the standard coins of foreign countries for customhouse use and other public purposes; makes an annual report to the Secretary of the Treasury, covering the operations of the Mint Service for the fiscal year and giving statistics of the production of precious metals in the United States and the world for the calendar year. The Director is responsible for all gold and silver assets of the Government which are in custody of the mint.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY, OFFICES UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF CLERK

The Chief Clerk enforces the general regulations of the Department and has administrative jurisdiction of the contingent appropriation and other miscellaneous appropriations and expenditures therefrom, including the purchase and issuance of stationery, miscellaneous supplies, and equipment.

He has supervision of the several service units including the telephone, telegraph, duplicating, and book-binding sections; information service; and the motor messengers and chauffeurs.

He administers and is certifying officer for several pay rolls and special allotments; prepares material for budget estimates for personal services and contingent expenditures; and maintains accounts, by offices, on all funds expended for personal services for which pay rolls are administered.

He handles for the Department cases arising under the Federal Compensation Act, and is contact officer for the translation of foreign mail, both departmental and interdepartmental.

The organization includes the Treasury archivist, who is liaison officer between the Treasury Department and the National Archives, including the Federal Register Division.

He has custody of the completed records and files of the Secretary's office and the Treasury seal, and handles requests for certified copies of official papers, making the certification thereof.

He supervises the receipt, distribution, and transmission of mail; the care of vehicles under the office of the Secretary; the receipt and distribution of all documents, and is responsible for the accounting, auditing, and maintenance of records pertaining to ordnance lent by the War Department to Treasury officials, both in the District of Columbia and in the field.

The Chief Clerk also has charge of the unassigned business of the Secretary's office.

DIVISION OF PERSONNEL

The Division of Personnel has primary responsibility for the personnel management activities of the Department as a whole. It coordinates and exercises control over position-classification, salary administration, recruitment, appointment, placement, promotion, separation, discipline, efficiency rating, employee relations, and other personnel matters. This Division represents the Department in its relations with the Civil Service Commission, the Council of Personnel Administration, and with other agencies where personnel functions are concerned.

CORRESPONDENCE DIVISION

This Division maintains control of all secretarial mail, including contacts with all branches of the Department in connection with official correspondence, both incoming and outgoing, maintains a complete card record of incoming secretarial mail, prepares certain letters for the signature of the Secretary, and routes others to the proper officials; has charge of the stenographic pool for the Secretary's office, performs such special duties as are assigned from time to time.

OFFICE OF SUPERINTENDENT OF TREASURY BUILDINGS

The Superintendent of Treasury Buildings is charged with direct responsibility for the maintenance and operation of all Treasury buildings in the District of Columbia except the buildings of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

COMMITTEE ON PRACTICE

The Committee on Practice receives applications for admission to practice before the Treasury Department and for licenses authorizing the holders to act as customhouse brokers. The committee passes upon such applications, enrolls applicants to practice before the Department, and issues licenses to applicants who show that they are qualified to act as customhouse brokers. The committee conducts hearings in disbarment proceedings, on complaints filed by the attorney for the Government as the representative of the Department before the committee, and makes recommendations to the Secretary. Collectors of customs may initiate proceedings for the suspension or revocation of licenses issued to customhouse brokers. The records of such proceedings are referred to the committee for review and recommendation to the Secretary.

DEPARTMENT OF WAR

SECRETARY OF WAR

The Secretary of War is head of the War Department, and performs such duties as are required of him by law or may be enjoined upon him by the President.

He is charged by law with the supervision of all estimates of appropriations for the expenses of the Department, including the Military Establishment; of all purchases of Army supplies; of all expenditures for the support, transportation, and maintenance of the Army; and of such expenditures of a civil nature as may be placed by Congress under his direction.

He is responsible for the proper execution of the provisions of the National Defense Act of 1920. He is held responsible for the protection of our seacoast harbors and cities; for the development of improved weapons and matériel; for the proper instruction of all military personnel; for the discipline and morale of the Military Establishment; for the defense of, and the administration of government in, those insular possessions that come under his jurisdiction.

He directs the activities of the Corps of Engineers in the improvement of the waterways of the United States, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico, including examinations, surveys, and economic studies of harbors and streams for the formulation of improvement projects. He recommends to Congress definite plans for improvement and makes contracts for the execution of the physical works required to make our waterways capable of meeting the needs of constantly expanding inland, coastwise, and foreign commerce.

He is charged with the formulation and execution of plans for flood control on inland rivers, power and irrigation development, and the survey and charting of the Great Lakes.

He is responsible for surveys of international boundary waters, the interoceanic survey (Nicaragua Canal route), and the construction of national monuments and memorials. He is also charged with the establishment of harbor lines, approval of plans for the construction of bridges, and issue of permits for wharves, piers, and other works upon navigable waters; investigation, in cooperation with the Federal Power Commission, of water-power projects; the removal of wrecks from navigable waters; the regulation of the operation of drawbridges, establishment and regulation of anchorage grounds, regulation of the use of navigable waters of the United States, the preservation of the American Falls of Niagara, and the administration of matters pertaining to the participation of the United States in the Niagara Control Board.

He is responsible for the defense, maintenance, care, and operation of the Panama Canal. This responsibility requires that he not only provide for the transit of ships from one ocean to the other but also for their repair, fueling, supplies, and foodstuffs, and the care and hospitalization of ships' personnel and passengers. The organization under his charge has supervision over public health, quarantine, and immigration service, customs, post offices, police and fire protection, hydrographic and meteorological observations, steamboat inspections, aids to navigation, construction and maintenance of roads, streets, water supply, and sewers.

He is president of the National Forest Reservation Commission, which is authorized to purchase such forested cut-over or denuded lands within the watersheds of navigable streams as in its judgment may be necessary to the regulation of stream flow or for the production of timber.

He supervises the maintenance and conduct of the United States Military Academy at West Point and is responsible for all matters relating to leases, revocable licenses, and all other privileges upon lands under the control of the War Department.

THE UNDER SECRETARY OF WAR

Exercises general supervision and direction over the Army Service Forces and the Army Air Forces in procurement and related matters; performs the duties and responsibilities placed upon the Secretary of War by section 5 (a) of the National Defense Act, as amended, and such other duties and responsibilities as may be delegated to him by the Secretary of War; coordinates the procurement and related functions of the Army Service Forces and the Army Air Forces and coordinates these War Department functions with the War Production Board and any other interdepartmental agency or superagency that may be created in connection with the allocation of material or industrial facilities to various uses; represents the Secretary of War on the War Production Board and the Board of Economic Warfare; is the War Department member of the Army and Navy Munitions Board; acts for the War Department on the War Manpower Commission and other departments and agencies of the Government, the Congress, the public, the press, and other appropriate nongovernmental agencies in reference to procurement and related matters; acts as Secretary of War during the absence or disability of the Secretary.

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT

Acts for the Secretary of War on matters connected with the administration of the War Department which cannot be delegated to other officials, such as the issuance of orders affecting War Department administrative practices and authorization of civilian personnel actions; advises the Secretary on matters of administrative policy; directs changes in administrative organization and procedures; serves as member of the Board of Directors of the Panama Railroad Co. and acts for the Secretary of War on all official matters not requiring his personal attention.

WAR DEPARTMENT GENERAL STAFF

(a) The Chief of Staff is the immediate adviser of the Secretary of War on all business relating to the Military Establishment and is charged by the Secretary of War with the planning, development, and execution of the military program. On matters involving strategy, tactics, and operations, the Chief of Staff advises and executes decisions of the President in his role as Commander in Chief.

(b) The War Department General Staff, under the direction of the Chief of Staff, will coordinate the development of the armed forces of the United States and insure the existence of a well-balanced and efficient military team. The War Department General Staff assists the Chief of Staff in the direction of the field operations of the Army of the United States. It is specifically charged with the duty of providing such broad basic plans as will enable the Commanding Generals of the Army Ground Forces, Army Air Forces, Army Service Forces, defense commands, task forces, and theaters of operations to prepare and execute detailed programs.

(c) The War Department General Staff will include the following divisions, each division being under the immediate control of an Assistant Chief of Staff:

(1) Personnel Division (G–1) is charged, in general, with those duties of the War Department General Staff in relation to the personnel of the Army as individuals.

(2) Military Intelligence Division (G–2) is charged, in general, with those duties of the War Department General Staff relating to the collection, evaluation, and dissemination of military information.

(3) Organization and Training Division (G–3) is charged, in general, with those duties of the War Department General Staff relating to the mobilization, training, and organization of the military forces.

(4) Supply Division (G–4) is charged, in general, with those duties of the War Department General Staff which relate to the supply of the Army.

(5) Operations Division (OPD) is charged, in general, with those duties of the War Department General Staff in relation to the formulation of plans and the strategic direction of the military forces in the theater of war.

(6) The Secretariat, War Department General Staff, is charged with the general administration of the Office of the Chief of Staff and the Deputy Chief of Staff.

LEGISLATIVE AND LIAISON DIVISION

The Legislative and Liaison Division was created on March 9, 1942, in the general reorganization of the War Department. It functions as part of the Special Staff of the Office of the Chief of Staff.

Its responsibilities and functions fall into three general categories: (1) Supervision of the preparation and processing of legislation pertaining to the War Department; (2) Congressional liaison; and (3) liaison between the War Department and various Federal agencies.

The Legislative and Liaison Division reviews all legislation affecting the War Department and reports thereon to the Secretary of War. The Division must determine that legislation requested by the War Department is in proper form and legally sufficient for the purposes intended, and that it is in accord with the program of the President. The Division also supervises and processes the preparation of War Department reports on legislation.

In the maintenance of Congressional liaison, the Legislative and Liaison Division assists official investigators of Congressional investigating committees when military activities of the War Department are involved. It also renders assistance when Congressional visits of inspection are made to War Department posts, camps, stations, reservations, and installations. The Legislative and Liaison Division also facilitates oral and written inquiries from the Congress to the War Department by providing information to Members of Congress and their staffs upon request, and is authorized to contact directly and informally all War Department agencies, subordinate departments, and commands for the purpose of expediting necessary information for the Congress.

The Legislative and Liaison Division is further responsible for liaison between the War Department and the Work Projects Administration, Federal Works Agency, concerning all defense undertakings submitted for the approval of the Secretary of War under the provisions of the current Emergency Relief Appropriation Act. This includes the processing for War Department certification, as authorized by the Secretary of War, of all Work Projects Administration projects considered important for military purposes which are sponsored by the War Department and other Federal agencies, as well as projects sponsored by State, county, municipal, or other legally constituted governmental subdivisions within the continental United States and its possessions. Similar procedure is followed with the Federal Works Agency, War Public Works Division, and the Civil Aeronautics Administration, Department of Commerce.

CIVIL AFFAIRS DIVISION

The Civil Affairs Division was established on March 1, 1943, by direction of the Secretary of War, as a part of the Special Staff of the Office of the Chief of Staff.

The primary function of the Civil Affairs Division is to inform and advise the Secretary of War in regard to all matters within the purview of the War Department, other than those of a strictly military nature, in areas occupied as a result of military operations. The Civil Affairs Division also performs such additional advisory and administrative functions in connection with civil matters as are prescribed by the Secretary of War.

Close coordination is maintained between the Civil Affairs Division and the Operations Division of the War Department General Staff and other military agencies of the War Department. All communications from the Civil Affairs Division to a commander in the field are cleared through and transmitted by the Operations Division. The Civil Affairs Division also maintains liaison with civilian agencies exercising functions in any theater of operations with which the Civil Affairs Division is concerned.

The Civil Affairs Division is organized into three main groups: one, the military government group; two, the civilian relief group; and three, the economic group. Each of these groups, in turn, is organized in sections corresponding to the administrative requirements of the particular situation.

THE INSPECTOR GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT

The Inspector General's Department, besides the Inspector General, who holds the rank of major general, is composed of officers detailed from the various arms and services, who are designated as inspectors general, and is an instrumentality placed at the disposal of the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff to assist them in the administration of the War Department and the Army of the United States. The mission of the Inspector General's Department is to inquire into and report upon all matters which affect the efficiency and economy of the Army of the United States and to make such inspections, investigations, and reports as may be prescribed by law or directed by the Secretary of War, the Chief of Staff, or other appropriate authority. The department assists commanders and other members and employees of the military establishment in the performance of their duties by supplying information when appropriate, recognizing and reporting meritorious conduct and performance of duty, and by suggesting ways and means to improve conditions.

The sphere of inquiry of the department includes every branch of military affairs, except where specifically limited in Army regulations or in orders. More specifically, the Inspector General, with his assistants, is charged with the inspection of headquarters of higher echelons of the field forces, and of service commands and departments; the reception, replacement, training, and maneuver centers; the United States Military Academy; schools of arms and services; garrisoned posts and commands; general hospitals; armories and arsenals; ports of embarkation, United States Army transports, harbor boats, mine planters, and cable ships; service depots, proving grounds, and experimental stations; recruiting and induction stations; remount purchasing and breeding headquarters; detention and rehabilitation centers; the prisoners in military disciplinary barracks; national cemeteries under War Department jurisdiction; property reported unserviceable; money accounts of all disbursing officers of the Army and property and disbursing officers of the National Guard; the Soldiers' Home, District of Columbia; the National Guard, as required by the act of June 3, 1916. The office of the Inspector General also makes inspections of Army procurement activities and activities of Army construction under contracts let on a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee.

In general, his department conducts inspections of all commands and other activities of the Army, and makes such annual and special inspections and such special investigations as may be ordered, with the objects of promoting efficiency and economy, to observe and report upon the state of morale and discipline, condition and preparedness of commands, and other activities to fulfill their respective missions, and to report upon the general, economic, and administrative efficiency of Army activities.

THREE PRINCIPAL COMMANDS

ARMY GROUND FORCES

Under policies prescribed by the Chief of Staff, the Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, is charged in general with the functions, responsibilities, and authorities of command authorized by law, Army Regulations, and custom over individuals and units assigned to the Army Ground Forces.

The mission of the Army Ground Forces is to provide ground force units properly organized, trained, and equipped for combat operations.

The following duties are specifically assigned to the Army Ground Forces:

The operation of Infantry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, and Cavalry replacement training centers and schools for the Army Ground Forces, including officer candidate schools for the Army Ground Forces.

The provision of basic training for individuals in the Army Ground Forces inducted in excess of replacement training center capacity.

The organization of tactical units as directed by the War Department.

The training of all tactical units assigned to the Army Ground Forces.

The organization, equipment, and training of such task forces as are directed by the Chief of Staff.

The development of tactical and training doctrine, tables of organization, tables of basic allowances, military characteristics of weapons and equipment, and operational changes needed in equipment for the Infantry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, Cavalry, and specialized combat units. Under the Chief of the Requirements Section, a separate division will be established for each of the combat arms of the Army Ground Forces. Each such division is charged with the responsibility of furthering the orderly continuity and progressive development of its arm. The Chief of the Requirements Section will coordinate the various divisions in the interests of the Army Ground Forces as a whole.

The review with the Commanding General, Army Service Forces, of the tactical doctrine, military characteristics of weapons and equipment, tables of organization; and tables of basic allowances of Army Service Force units assigned to the Army Ground Forces.

The discharge of personnel functions formerly performed in the offices of the Chiefs of Infantry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, and Cavalry, less those now engaged in the procurement of officer candidates.

The assignment of officers of the Army Ground Forces, including Army Air Forces and Army Service Forces personnel on duty therewith.

The supply of Infantry, Field Artillery, Coast Artillery, and Cavalry personnel to the Army Air Forces, Army Service Forces, defense commands, theaters of operation and oversea forces in accordance with policies announced by the Chief of Staff.

The submission to the Commanding General, Army Service Forces, of such recommendations on construction, shelter, training aids, movements, supply, equipment, real estate, estimates of funds needed for field training and travel, and such other matters as may be necessary.

The control of the expenditure of funds allocated to the Army Ground Forces.

The development jointly with the Commanding General, Army Air Forces, of ground-air support, tactical training, and doctrine in conformity with policies prescribed by the Chief of Staff.

The minimization of the administrative activities of the Army Ground Forces by utilizing the services available in the Army Service Forces to the maximum degree consistent with proper control of the Army Ground Forces.

The use of judicious shortcuts in procedure to expedite operations.

ARMY AIR FORCES

Under policies prescribed by the Chief of Staff, the Commanding General, Army Air Forces, is charged in general with the functions, responsibilities, and authorities of command authorized by law, Army Regulations, and custom over individuals and units assigned to the Army Air Forces.

The mission of the Army Air Forces is to procure and maintain equipment peculiar to the Army Air Forces, and to provide air force units properly organized, trained, and equipped for combat operations. Procurement and related functions will be executed under the direction of the Under Secretary of War.

The following duties are specifically assigned to the Army Air Forces:

The operation of Army Air Forces replacement training centers and schools, including officer candidate schools, for the training of personnel in pilot functions and specialist nonpilot functions of combat and ground crews and in all duties involving the care, supply, and maintenance of aeronautical matériel.

The provision of basic training for individuals in the Army Air Forces inducted in excess of replacement training center capacity.

The organization of air force tactical units as directed by the War Department.

The training of all tactical units assigned to the Army Air Forces.

The organization, equipment, and training of such task forces as are directed by the Chief of Staff.

The development of tactical and training doctrine, tables of organization, tables of basic allowances, military characteristics of aircraft, weapons, and equipment, and operational changes needed in equipment, aircraft, and weapons peculiar to the Army Air Forces.

The discharge of personnel functions pertaining to the Army Air Forces.

The assignment of officers of the Army Air Forces, including Army Ground Forces and Army Service Forces personnel on duty therewith.

The supply of air force personnel and equipment peculiar to the Army Air Forces, to the Army Ground Forces, Army Service Forces, defense commands, theaters of operation, and oversea forces in accordance with policies announced by the Chief of Staff.

The approval of general plans governing the construction of stations of the Army Air Forces.

The submission to the Commanding General, Army Service Forces, of such recommendations on construction, shelter, training aids, movements, supply, equipment, real estate, estimates of funds, and such other matters as may be necessary.

The control of the expenditure of funds allocated to the Army Air Forces.

The development jointly with the Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, of ground-air support, tactical training, and doctrine in conformity with policies prescribed by the Chief of Staff.

The installation of such specialized air force equipment and matériel as may be provided by the Army Service Forces and the maintenance of such portion thereof as is not maintained by the Army Service Forces.

The preparation of proposals and recommendations for conducting the design competitions authorized by law.

The command and control of all Army Air Forces stations and bases not assigned to defense commands or theater commanders and all personnel, units, and installations thereon, including station complement personnel and activities.

The supervision of all air force activities in connection with the research, development, procurement, storage, supply, maintenance, and final disposition of military aircraft, accessories, supplies, facilities, and appurtenances used in connection therewith, including technical inspection and the issuance of pertinent technical instructions.

All aerial operations of the Army Air Forces except for those units thereof assigned or attached to other commands.

The minimization of the administrative activities of the Army Air Forces by utilizing the services available in the Army Service Forces to the maximum degree consistent with proper control of the Army Air Forces.

The use of judicious shortcuts in procedure to expedite operations.

ARMY SERVICE FORCES

The duties and responsibilities placed on the Secretary of War by section 5a of the National Defense Act, as amended, shall continue to be performed by the Under Secretary of War. The Director of Production shall continue to perform his present services, reporting direct to the Under Secretary of War.

The Commanding General, Army Service Forces, shall, on procurement and related matters, act under the direction of the Under Secretary of War and shall, on military matters, report to the Chief of Staff. The Commanding General, Army Service Forces, is charged in general with the functions, responsibilities, and authorities of command authorized by law, Army Regulations, and custom over individuals and units assigned to the Army Service Forces.

The mission of the Army Service Forces is to provide services and supplies to meet military requirements except those peculiar to the Army Air Forces. Procurement and related functions will be executed under the direction of the Under Secretary of War.

The Army Service Forces consolidate under the jurisdiction of the Commanding General, Army Service Forces, the supply arms and services, certain administrative services of the War Department, certain boards and committees, general depots, ports of embarkation and auxiliaries, and service commands, with such amalgamation, reallocation of duties, and reorganization as is necessary or advisable.

The following duties are specifically assigned to the Army Service Forces:

(1) Determination of requirements and available resources.

(2) Conduct of research and experimentation on the design of supplies and equipment.

(3) Procurement, through purchase or manufacture, of supplies and equipment.

(4) Construction of new facilities for the Army.

(5) Provision for and operation of storage depots and warehouses.

(6) Transportation of supplies and equipment and of personnel.

(7) Operation of ports of embarkation, staging areas, holding and reconsignment stations, regulating stations, and port and transportation agencies.

(8) Procurement, classification, and assignment of military personnel.

(9) Command and training of personnel and units within the Army Service Forces.

(10) Operation of training, replacement training and unit training centers, and of service schools.

(11) Provision of housing, welfare activities, medical service, evacuation and hospitalization, and sanitation for troops.

(12) Repair and maintenance of real property.

(14) Administration of installations concerned with the internment and control of aliens or prisoners of war and the administration of conquered territory.

The operation of replacement training centers and schools for the supply arms and services, including officer candidate schools.

The provision of basic training for individuals in the Army Service Forces inducted in excess of replacement training center capacity.

The operation of all reception centers.

The organization of Army Service Forces units as directed by the War Department.

The training of all units assigned to the Army Service Forces.

The assignment of officers of the Army Service Forces, including Army Air Forces and Army Ground Forces personnel on duty therewith.

The supply of Army Service Forces personnel and units to the Army Air Forces, Army Ground Forces, theaters of operations, and oversea forces in accordance with the policies announced by the Chief of Staff.

The development of tactical and training doctrine, tables of organization, tables of basic allowances, military characteristics of weapons and equipment, and operational changes needed in equipment for the Army Service Forces subject to review with the Commanding General, Army Ground Forces, as outlined in the duties pertaining to that Command.

The command and control of all stations except those assigned Army Air Forces, defense commands, and theaters of operations.

THE ARMY WAR COLLEGE

The Army War College, located at Washington, D. C., is one of the general service schools of the Army. It is the highest unit in the military educational system. Its object is to train selected officers for duty in the War Department General Staff and for high command in accordance with the doctrines and methods approved by the War Department. In addition it supervises the activities of the Historical Section, formerly a branch of the War Department General Staff.

THE ARMY INDUSTRIAL COLLEGE

The Army Industrial College is one of the three general service schools of the Army. It operates under supervision of the Under Secretary of War, pursuant to section 5a of the National Defense Act. Its mission is the training of officers for the procurement of munitions in the event of war and in the preparation of plans for the mobilization of matériel and industrial organizations essential to wartime needs. Due to the requirements for personnel and space, the Army Industrial College closed on December 23, 1941, until further notice.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

ATTORNEY GENERAL (FRANCIS BIDDLE)

The Attorney General is the head of the Department of Justice (see sec. 346, R. S.) and as such is the chief law officer of the Federal Government. He represents the United States in legal matters generally and gives advice and opinions when requested by the President or by the heads of the executive departments.

He appears in the Supreme Court of the United States in cases of exceptional gravity and importance, exercises general superintendence and direction over United States district attorneys and marshals in the various judicial districts of the United States, and provides special counsel for the United States in cases of exceptional importance or when the character of the interests involved requires such action.

The duties of the Assistant to the Attorney General, the Assistant Attorneys General, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Director of the Bureau of Prisons, and of the heads of the other major divisions and bureaus are performed under the direction of the Attorney General.

(See sec. 354, R. S., as amended by act of Feb. 27, 1877, 19 Stat. 241; secs. 356, 357, and 358, R. S.; act of June 30, 1906, 34 Stat. 816; secs. 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, and 366, R. S.)

SOLICITOR GENERAL (CHARLES FAHY)

The Solicitor General assists the Attorney General in the execution of his duties and, by special provision of law, exercises all such duties in case of a vacancy in the office of the Attorney General, or his absence or disability.

Under the direction of the Attorney General, the Solicitor General has special charge of the business of and appears for and represents the Government in the Supreme Court of the United States.

When requested by the Attorney General, the Solicitor General may conduct and argue any case in which the United States is interested, in any court of the United States, or may attend to the interests of the Government in any State court or elsewhere, conferring with and directing the law officers of the Government throughout the country in the performance of their duties when occasion requires. (See secs. 347 and 349, R. S.) No appeal is taken by the United States to any appellate court without his authorization.

THE ASSISTANT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL (JAMES H. ROWE, JR.)

The Assistant to the Attorney General has primary responsibility, under the Attorney General, for the over-all supervision and administrative management of the Department of Justice, the formulation of major departmental policies and programs, the improvement of administrative practice, the formulation and supervision of the Department's budget program and fiscal control, the development and administration of personnel policy, the coordination of the work of the various divisions of the Department and the supervision of the United States attorneys and marshals. In addition, he acts as liaison officer between the Attorney General and the Congress and other departments and agencies of the Government, prepares recommendations for presidential appointments, exercises administrative supervision over the Board of Immigration Appeals, and directs the disposition of conscientious objector cases (other than the criminal) under the Selective Service and Training Act.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (TOM C. CLARK)

This assistant has special charge of all suits and other matters relating to and arising under the Sherman and Clayton Acts and acts with antitrust provisions.

In addition he has, under current assignment, charge of matters relating to and arising under the Capper-Volstead Act, Federal Trade Commission Act, Interstate Commerce Act, Packers and Stockyards Act, Commodity Exchange Act, Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, Produce Agency Act, Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, Sugar Act, 1937, Connally Act, Federal Communications Act, Railway Labor Act, Securities Act of 1933, Securities Exchange Act of 1934, Motor Carrier Act, 1935, Anti-Racketeering Act (in conjunction with antitrust violations), Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts, Federal Water Power Act, Railroad Retirement Act, National Labor Relations Act, Tobacco Inspection Act, Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, Public Utility Holding Company Act, 1935, Federal Alcohol Administration Act, and Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938. He has charge also of briefs and arguments in the Supreme Court on assignment by the Solicitor General, and of special assignments by the Attorney General.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (SAMUEL O. CLARK, JR.)

This assistant has charge of the prosecution and defense of civil suits relating to taxes (except customs) and of appellate proceedings in connection therewith, including briefs and arguments on appeals from the Board of Tax Appeals; also of the enforcement of tax liens and of mandamus, injunctions, criminal proceedings, and general matters relating to taxes. He also has charge of briefs and arguments in the Supreme Court on assignment by the Solicitor General, and of special assignments by the Attorney General.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (FRANCIS M. SHEA)

This assistant has charge of all civil suits and claims for and against the Government or its officers not otherwise specially assigned, patents and copyrights, cases arising out of war transactions, civil-bankruptcy matters, civil proceedings under the National Bank Act, admiralty and shipping matters, as well as alien property claims and litigation. He also has charge of briefs and arguments in the Supreme Court on assignment by the Solicitor General, and of special assignments by the Attorney General.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (NORMAN M. LITTELL)

This assistant has charge of matters relating to public lands and condemnation of lands, titles to lands, forest reserves, reclamation and irrigation projects, and the conservation of natural resources, Indian lands and affairs (including suits in the Court of Claims) except crimes. He also has charge of insular and territorial affairs except those specifically assigned, other than criminal, and of briefs and arguments in the Supreme Court on assignment by the Solicitor General, as well as matters specially assigned to him by the Attorney General.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (WENDELL BERGE)

This assistant has charge of criminal cases generally, including matters relating to criminal practice and procedure, indictments, grand jury proceedings, search warrants, removal proceedings, extradition, etc., and generally directs District Attorneys with respect to the conduct of criminal cases and the enforcement of Federal statutes such as counterfeiting and forgery; customs; espionage; firearms; food, drugs, and cosmetics; gold hoarding; internal revenue liquor laws; larceny and theft; national banking and bankruptcy; immigration and naturalization; narcotics; neutrality; passport; postal; and racketeering laws; the White Slave Traffic Act; the securities acts; the Alien Enemy Act; crimes on the high seas and government reservations; etc. This assistant also handles all problems and supervises all prosecutions involving infringements of civil rights, including interference with the ballot, peonage, the Hatch Act, and conspiracy to violate the National Labor Relations Act; has charge of legal matters pertaining to prisons and parole; of briefs and arguments in the Supreme Court on assignment by the Solicitor General, and of matters specially assigned to him by the Attorney General.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (HUGH B. COX)

This assistant has charge of numerous matters directly relating to war activities and policies of the Department of Justice. Under his supervision are the Alien Enemy Control Unit, which has charge of the supervision and control of alien enemies; the Alien Property Unit, which exercises and performs the functions and duties imposed upon the Attorney General and the Department of Justice by paragraph 5 of Executive Order 9142, of April 21, 1942, and the amendment thereto, dated July 6, 1942, and which has charge of alien property litigation, and such other legal matters as may be referred to the Department of Justice by the Alien Property Custodian; the Special War Policies Unit, which directs and coordinates matters relating to sedition, espionage, sabotage, and with the administration of the Voorhis Act and the Foreign Agents Registration Act, the examination and analysis of the Foreign Language Press, propaganda activities, and related matters; and the War Frauds Unit, which supervises investigations and handles all cases relating to war frauds except suits for recovery of money damage on war contracts.

ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL (PAUL P. RAO)

This assistant has charge of protecting the interests of the Government in matters of reappraisement and classification of imported goods, and all litigation incident thereto. He also has charge of briefs and arguments in the Supreme Court on assignment by the Solicitor General, and of matters specially assigned to him by the Attorney General.

ASSISTANT SOLICITOR GENERAL (OSCAR S. COX)

The Assistant Solicitor General appears for and represents the Government in such cases as may be designated by the Solicitor General and performs such additional duties as may be required of him by the Attorney General. He has charge for the Attorney General of the preparation, review, and revision of opinions and, as to their form and legality, of Executive orders submitted to him by direction of the President, and also acts for the Attorney General upon offers in compromise of judgments and other claims existing against or in favor of the Government up to a certain limit, in addition to performing such other duties as may be assigned to him by the Attorney General.

ATTORNEY IN CHARGE OF PARDONS (DANIEL M. LYONS)

Under the direction of the Attorney General, the attorney in charge of pardons has charge of all applications for Executive clemency except those of the Army and Navy. He conducts all correspondence, initiates investigations, and makes reports and recommendations to the Attorney General with respect thereto. He has charge of such other matters as may be specially assigned to him by the Attorney General.

DIRECTOR, FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION (J. EDGAR HOOVER)

The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation has general charge of the investigation of offenses against the laws of the United States, except counterfeiting, narcotics, and other matters not within the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice; of the acquisition, collection, classification, preservation, and exchange of criminal identification records; and of such investigations regarding official matters under the control of the Department of Justice and the Department of State as may be directed by the Attorney General.

He also has charge of matters specially assigned to him by the Attorney General.

IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION SERVICE (EARL G. HARRISON, COMMISSIONER)

Under the act of March 3, 1933 (Public, No. 428, 47 Stat. 1517), and the Executive order issued pursuant to the statute, dated June 10, 1933 (6166, sec. 14), the Immigration and Naturalization Service was formed through the consolidation of the former Bureaus of Immigration and Naturalization, effective August 10, 1933. On June 14, 1940, under Reorganization Plan No. V (5 F. R. 2132, June 5, 1940), the Service and its functions were transferred to the Department of Justice, to be administered under the direction and supervision of the Attorney General. All functions and powers of the Secretary of Labor relating to the administration of the Immigration and Naturalization Service and its functions or to the administration of the immigration and naturalization laws were transferred by such plan to the Attorney General.

The functions of the Service are the administration of the laws relating to the admission, exclusion, and deportation of aliens, the registration and fingerprinting of aliens, and the naturalization of aliens lawfully resident in the United States; the investigation of alleged violations of said laws, and when prosecution is deemed advisable, the submission of evidence for that purpose to the appropriate United States district attorneys. The primary function of the Immigration Border Patrol, which operates as a part of the immigration force, is to detect and prevent the smuggling and surreptitious entry of aliens into the United States in violation of the immigration laws, and to apprehend smugglers of aliens and aliens who have effected unlawful entry.

Under the provisions of the Nationality Act of 1940 (Public, No. 853, 76th Cong.), naturalization jurisdiction was conferred upon certain specified United States and State courts. The Service exercises administrative supervision over the clerks of these courts in naturalization matters, requiring an accounting for all naturalization fees collected by them, and cooperates with the public schools in the education of applicants for naturalization for their citizenship duties and responsibilities. Through its field officers, located in various cities in the United States, the Service investigates the qualifications of candidates for citizenship and represents the Government at the hearings of petitions for naturalization.

DIRECTOR, BUREAU OF PRISONS (JAMES V. BENNETT)

The Director of the Bureau of Prisons has general charge of the administration of the Federal Government's penal and correctional activities. He is vested with the control and management of all Federal penal and correctional institutions save those maintained by the Army and Navy, and has the responsibility for providing suitable quarters for the safekeeping, care, protection, instruction, and discipline of all persons charged with or convicted of offenses against the United States. He is charged with specific administrative responsibility with reference to the Federal parole system and probation in the United States courts. He also has charge of special assignments by the Attorney General.

BOARD OF PAROLE

The Board of Parole consists of three members, appointed directly by the Attorney General, whose sole duties are to grant and revoke paroles of Federal prisoners.

DIRECTOR, BUREAU OF WAR RISK LITIGATION (LESTER P. SCHOENE)

Under the direction of the Assistant to the Attorney General, the Director of the Bureau of War Risk Litigation has charge of war-risk insurance matters (civil) exclusive of claims in favor of the Government, and, generally, of all matters arising under the World War Veterans' Act and kindred statutes. He also has charge of special assignments by the Attorney General.

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL (THOMAS D. QUINN)

The administrative assistant to the Attorney General directs the Administrative Division of the Department of Justice, which handles all administrative and organization matters, including those relating to United States attorneys, marshals, and other field officers except matters of policy which are under the supervision of the Assistant to the Attorney General. He supervises the Division of Accounts, office of the Chief Clerk, the appointment clerk's office, the Division of Records, the Supply Division, and the Statistical Division. He directs all budget, accounting, and auditing matters; controls expenditures from all appropriations of the Department and approves all financial transactions; he directs the examination of field and judicial offices and the compilation of statistics for the Department; supervises the appointment of clerical and subclerical forces of the Department, exclusive of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and all personnel matters regarding civil-service employees; has charge of the enforcement of general departmental regulations, the designation of space requirements throughout the country, and the handling of all fiscal matters and business operations of the Department of Justice.

FEDERAL PRISON INDUSTRIES, INC.

The Federal Prison Industries Corporation was authorized by act of Congress, approved June 23, 1934 (Public, No. 461), and created by Executive Order No. 6917 of December 11, 1934. Under the general direction and supervision of the Attorney General it manages and operates all industrial enterprises in Federal penal and correctional institutions. Its board of directors is charged by law with the duty of determining in what manner and to what extent industrial operations shall be carried on in Federal penal and correctional institutions, and is required to diversify, so far as practicable, prison industrial operations and so operate the prison shops that no single private industry shall be forced to bear an undue burden of competition from the products of the prison workshops. The Corporation is governed by a board of directors of five persons—a representative of labor, a representative of industry, a representative of agriculture, a representative of retailers and consumers, and a representative of the Attorney General. They serve at the will of the President and without compensation. The principal office of the Corporation is in the city of Washington, with branch offices at the several penal and correctional institutions. The officers of the Corporation are a president, a vice president, a secretary, and a Commissioner of Prison Industries. The Commissioner of Prison Industries is the acting executive officer of the Corporation. The products of the industries are sold only to other Government departments and agencies at current market prices. No goods or articles made in the Federal penal and correctional system are sold to the public.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

POSTMASTER GENERAL

The Postmaster General is the executive head of the Postal Service. He appoints all officers and employees under his supervision, except the four Assistant Postmasters General, the purchasing agent, the comptroller, and postmasters of the first, second, and third classes, who are appointed by the President of the United States. Subject to the approval of the President, he makes postal treaties with foreign governments. He is the executive head of Postal Savings and ex officio chairman of the board of trustees.

CHIEF CLERK AND DIRECTOR OF PERSONNEL

The Chief Clerk and Director of Personnel of the Post Office Department is charged with the general superintendence and assignment of the clerical and subclerical forces of the Department; the care and maintenance of public property located in the Department building; the advertising of the Department; the supervision of requisitions entailing expenditure of the appropriations for the departmental service; the consideration of requisitions for the printing and binding required in the Department and Service; the receipt and inspection of blanks required in the Department; the supervision of receipt and inspection of supplies for the Department and Service delivered in Washington; superintendence of the publication and distribution of the Official Postal Guide and other postal publications; the miscellaneous correspondence and files of the Department; matters affecting the proper administration of the civil-service rules and regulations and the execution of the provisions of the Reclassification, the Retirement, and the Employees' Compensation Acts. The Chief Clerk and Director of Personnel is the liaison officer between the Department and the Classification Division of the Civil Service Commission.

PURCHASING AGENT

The Purchasing Agent supervises the purchase of all equipment, materials, and supplies for the Post Office Department proper and for all branches of the Postal Service. He reviews all requisitions and authorizations for equipment, materials, and supplies and, if proper, approves them. He passes upon all emergency purchases made locally by the field service. He determines the sufficiency and propriety of all specifications for equipment, materials, and supplies; prepares the advertisements and forms for proposals necessary to the making of the contracts; and enters into contracts for such equipment, materials, and supplies for the Postmaster General.

SOLICITOR OF THE POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

The Solicitor is charged with the duty of giving opinions to the Postmaster General and the heads of the several offices of the Department upon questions of law arising upon the construction of the postal laws and regulations, or otherwise, in the course of business in the Postal Service; with the duty of assisting in the defense of cases against the United States arising out of the transportation of the mails, and in other matters affecting the postal revenues. These include suits in the Federal courts involving claims of the railroads and other contractors for the carriage of the mails; the representation of the Postmaster General and the preparation and presentation of the Department's cases in proceedings before the Interstate Commerce Commission for the determination by the Commission of the basis for adjustment of railroad mail pay and the fixing of fair and reasonable rates for the transportation of the mails and for services in connection therewith by railroads and urban and interurban electric railway common carriers, and in other matters of petition by the Postmaster General to the Commission; the representation of the Postmaster General in hearings before the Department on orders changing the mode of transporting periodical mail matter in connection with reviews of such orders by the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia; with the consideration and submission (with advice) to the Postmaster General of claims for damage done to persons or property by or through the operation of the Post Office Department, and of all claims of postmasters for losses by fire, burglary, or other unavoidable casualty, and of all certifications by the Comptroller General of cases of proposed compromise of liabilities to the United States, and of the remission of fines, penalties, and forfeitures under the statutes; with the giving of advice, when desired, in the preparation of correspondence with the Comptroller General, the Department of Justice, and other Departments, and the Court of Claims, involving questions of law or relating to prosecutions or suits affecting or arising out of the Postal Service, and with assisting when desired in the prosecution or defense of such cases, and the maintenance of suitable records of opinions rendered affecting the Post Office Department and the Postal Service; and with the consideration of applications for pardon for crimes committed against the postal laws which may be referred to the Department; with the preparation and submission (with advice) to the Postmaster General of all appeals to him from the heads of the offices of the Department depending upon questions of law; with the determining of questions as to the delivery of mail the ownership of which is in dispute; with the consideration of cases relating to lotteries and the misuse of the mails in furtherance of schemes to defraud the public; with the consideration of all questions relating to the mailability of alleged indecent, obscene, scurrilous, defamatory, or extortionate matter; with determining the legal acceptability of securities offered by banks to secure postal savings deposits; with the examining and, when necessary, drafting of all contracts of the Department; with the handling of legal questions arising from the application of the private express statutes (Government monopoly of carrying letters); with the legal work incident to the enforcement of those provisions of the espionage law which concern the Post Office Department; assembling data and coordinating action leading ultimately to the preparation of reports upon proposed legislation affecting the Postal Establishment, and with such other duties as may from time to time be required by the Postmaster General.

FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL

Railway Adjustments.—The supervision of expenditures for the transportation of mails on railroad, electric-car, mail-messenger, powerboat, and star and air mail routes in Alaska, and the preparation of authorizations, orders, rules, and regulations governing the same, based on the law and the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission; the administrative audit of reports concerning the performance of service of the classes above stated; the certification of accounts for payment, and the preparation for proper deductions of all cases of nonperformance; the imposition of fines for delinquencies and failures, and the preparation of all correspondence affecting these services.

Air Mail Service.—Supervision of all matters within the jurisdiction of the Post Office Department pertaining to the operation of the domestic air-mail service; the designation and preparation of air-mail schedules and the preparation of orders authorizing air-mail service and changes therein on all domestic routes; the examination of regular and special reports covering the performance of service; the preparation of orders relating to deductions for the nonperformance of service or other delinquencies on the part of carriers; the preparation of monthly statements to the General Accounting Office of the amounts found upon administrative examination to be due carriers for the performance of service; the compilation of various statistics, and the supervision and conduct of the domestic Air Mail Service generally; the preparation of all correspondence in connection therewith.

THIRD ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL

The Third Assistant Postmaster General has charge of the following divisions to which are assigned the duties specified:

Finance.—The financial operations, including the collection and deposit of postal revenues; the distribution of postal funds among the several depositaries so as to equalize, as far as possible, receipts and expenditures in the same section; the payment by warrant of all accounts settled by the General Accounting Office; the receipt and disposition of all moneys coming directly to the Department; and the keeping of books of account showing the fiscal operations of the Postal and Money Order Services and the regulation of box rents and key deposits.

Money Orders.—The supervision and management of the Money Order Service, both domestic and international; the preparation of conventions for the exchange of money orders with foreign countries.

Classification.—The general control of all business relating to the classification of domestic mail matter and the rates of postage thereon; the determination of the admissibility of publications to the second class of mail matter, the right to continue in that class, including the administration of the law requiring annual statements of their ownership, circulation, etc., and the instruction of postmasters relative thereto; also the use of penalty envelopes, the franking privilege, and the limit of weight and size of mail matter.

Stamps.—The supervision of the manufacture and issuance to postmasters of postage stamps, stamp books, stamped envelopes, postal cards, and migratory bird hunting stamps, by the various contractors, and the keeping of the accounts and records of these transactions; the receipt and disposition of damaged and unsalable stamped paper returned by postmasters for redemption and credit; the issuance to postmasters of and accounting for internal-revenue stamps, motor vehicle tax stamps, and the issuance of War Savings stamps; the operation of the Philatelic Agency.

Registered Mails.—The supervision and management of the domestic registry, insurance, and collect-on-delivery services; the establishment and control of all domestic registry dispatches and exchanges; the instruction of postmasters and the furnishing of information in relation to these matters; the consideration of all claims for indemnity for damaged or lost domestic registered and certain insured and c. o. d. mail.

Postal Savings.—The conduct and management of the administrative office of the Postal Savings at Washington; the selection and designation of post offices as postal-savings depository offices and the supervision of the business transacted at such offices; the management and investment of postal-savings funds as the agent of the board of trustees; the administrative examination of accounts of postmasters and other fiscal agents of the system; the supervision of the sale of United States savings bonds at post offices, including the administrative examination of postmasters' accounts and settlement with the Treasury Department for bonds sold.

Parcel Post.—General direction of investigations of methods designed to improve the Parcel Post Service.

FOURTH ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL

The Fourth Assistant Postmaster General has charge of the following divisions, to which are assigned the duties specified:

Engineering and Research.—The design and construction of buildings so far as the operation of the post-office service is concerned; the lay-out of post-office quarters in Federal buildings and leased buildings, including conveyor and other labor-saving equipment for same; general engineering problems affecting the activities of the Postal Service, and the consideration of the practicability of devices and inventions for use in the Postal Service.

Division of Traffic.—Relative to shipment of freight, express, drayage, crating, routing, and billing shipments of equipment, material, and supplies for the Department and Postal Service.

Post-office Quarters.—The selection, leasing, and equipment of quarters for post offices of the first, second, and third classes, and stations thereof (except those located in Federal buildings); the leasing of quarters for the Railway Mail Service; the leasing and equipment of post-office garages, and the fixing of allowances for rent, light, and heat at offices of the first, second, and third classes, and stations thereof.

Motor Vehicle Service.—The authorization, operation, and maintenance of the Government-owned Motor Vehicle Service, including the appointment and discipline of the personnel employed in connection therewith; requisitions for materials, supplies, and garage equipment and correspondence pertaining thereto; requests for allowances for rent, light, fuel, power, water, telephone service, etc.; the monthly and quarterly reports and correspondence pertaining to the accounting system; the preparation of advertisements inviting proposals for the transportation of the mails in cities by means of screen wagons and pneumatic tubes, and the drafting of orders awarding such service, including the preparation of contracts therefor; the fixing of allowances for the hire of vehicles used in the delivery and collection service; the examination of reports and the preparation of orders making deductions and imposing fines for nonperformance of service and other delinquencies on the part of contractors.

Topography.—The compilation, revision, and distribution of post-route, rural-delivery, county, and local-center maps; the preparation of parcel-post zone keys.

Division of Equipment and Supplies.—The preparation of specifications for equipment and supplies for the Postal Service, and the custody, distribution, and transportation of such equipment and supplies; the distribution of parcel-post zone keys; the maintenance of a record of expenditures for equipment and supplies by appropriations.

Mail Equipment Shops.—The manufacture and repair of mail bags and other mail containers and attachments, mail locks, keys, chains, tools, dies, etc.; the issuance of letter-box locks, mail keys, key chains, etc., to postmasters and other officials entitled thereto, and the maintenance of a record thereof.

Division of Federal Building Operations.—The operation and maintenance of Federal buildings under the administration of the Post Office Department; the procurement and distribution of supplies therefor; the appointment and supervision of personnel necessary for the maintenance of these buildings.

CHIEF INSPECTOR

The Chief Inspector is charged with the duty of keeping the Postmaster General and his assistants advised as to the condition and needs of the entire Postal Service; the inspection, audit, and inventory of finances, valuables, equipment, supplies, and property, and the examination of procedures relating thereto in every Bureau or agency of the Postal Establishment in Washington and in the field; and the certification of the results to the Postmaster General or the Assistant Postmaster General in charge of the unit inspected. He is charged with the selection, government, and assignment to duty of post-office inspectors in charge, post-office inspectors and clerks at division headquarters. He authorizes and directs all investigations by inspectors and generally supervises the business of the post-office inspection service. He is charged with the coordination and supervision of plans and arrangements for the handling of the President's mail while he is traveling and advising with White House officials on matters connected therewith; the coordination of arrangements for making mail available for censorship; the coordination of plans and arrangements for the handling of Army and Navy mail by the Post Office Department in time of emergency and advising with the War and Navy Departments on matters connected therewith; the representation of the Department in its relationship with certain other Departments and agencies having jurisdiction in preparing for wartime emergencies; the making of arrangements for postal service for internees, evacuees, and prisoners of war; and the execution of wartime instructions of the Postmaster General to the Postal Service. He also has jurisdiction in all matters relating to depredations upon the mails, both domestic and international, and losses therein; reported violations of the postal laws such as the alleged use of the mails in schemes to defraud and in the promotion of lotteries; violations of the private express statutes (Government monopoly of the transportation of letter mail); mailing of explosives, poisons, firearms, intoxicants, and of letters of extortion containing threats to injure the reputation of any person, or to accuse him of a crime; forgery of money orders and postal-savings certificates; mailing of obscene, scurrilous, and other matter prohibited transmission in the mails, and complaints of the interception of and tampering with the mails. He supervises the development of evidence and the preparation for prosecution of criminal offenses arising in connection with the operation of the Postal Service and considers claims for payment of rewards for the detection, arrest, and conviction of post-office burglars, robbers, highway mail robbers, and mailers of bombs. He is charged with the custody of money and property collected or received by inspectors, and with the restoration thereof to the United States or to the public, as their interests shall appear. He is charged also with the installation and instruction of postmasters and the consideration of miscellaneous complaints against the service rendered at post offices of all classes. Administrative matters such as charges against postal employees of all classes (except inspectors and clerks at division headquarters), and the establishment of or changes in rural or star routes should be addressed to the proper bureau of the Department, and if an investigation by an inspector is necessary, such bureau will make request therefor on the Chief Inspector. Applications for permission to take the examination for the position of post-office inspector and the correspondence in connection with the appointment, promotion, and the character of service rendered by inspectors should be addressed to the Chief Inspector.

BUREAU OF ACCOUNTS

The Comptroller of the Post Office Department is in charge of the Bureau of Accounts, created in the Budget and Accounting Act of 1921. To the Comptroller are assigned the administrative examination of all postal and money-order accounts of postmasters and foreign administrations; the instructing of postmasters relative to preparation and rendition of their accounts; the keeping of administrative appropriation and cost accounts; the compilation of statistical reports, monthly operating statements, and other financial data for the information of the Postmaster General and other officers of the Post Office Department in connection with the administration of the service; and the keeping of the individual accounts for the statutory deductions from basic salaries of all employees of the department and the Postal Service for credit to the "civil-service retirement and disability fund."

The Comptroller also exercises general supervision over the work of ascertaining the revenues derived from and the cost of carrying and handling the several classes of mail matter and of performing the special services authorized in the Cost Ascertainment Act of February 28, 1925.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

The Secretary of the Navy is head of the Navy Department, and all naval boards and offices are generally administered by him. Under his general direction, duly appointed officers are responsible for all combat and logistic operations and for all operating services of the Navy. The Secretary of the Navy has general supervision of the design, construction, equipment, maintenance, and manning of the fleets and shore stations of the Navy; and he performs such other duties as the President, who is Commander in Chief, may from time to time direct.

THE UNDER SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

The Under Secretary of the Navy performs such duties as are prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy and is next in succession to the Secretary of the Navy during his absence or disability or in the event of a temporary vacancy in that office. His principal responsibility is the preparation and execution of contracts for the procurement of necessary facilities, supplies, and equipment, and for production thereunder.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy has the general administrative control of the material activities of all shore establishments of the Navy and performs such additional duties as the Secretary may direct or as are required by law. Has cognizance of the following: Shore Establishments Division; the Administrative Office; civil employees; labor liaison; Army and Navy Munitions Board; and the Transportation Branch.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY FOR AIR

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air has supervision over naval aviation and the coordination of air activities with other governmental agencies. Those administrative duties pertaining to naval aviation lodged in the Secretary of the Navy have been delegated to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

OFFICE OF THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL OF THE NAVY

The Judge Advocate General of the Navy has cognizance of all matters of law arising in the Navy Department and performs such other duties relating thereto as may be assigned to him by the Secretary of the Navy.

Legal aspects of the administration of justice in the naval service come under the cognizance of the Judge Advocate General. Instructions for naval courts and boards are prepared and furnished to the service and court-martial orders and bulletins are issued from time to time to serve as guides. The proceedings of all courts martial, courts of inquiry, and boards of investigation are reviewed to insure that there are no prejudicial errors. Charges and specifications for courts martial and necessary orders convening courts martial ordered by the Secretary of the Navy are prepared in this office. Naval prisons and prisoners are administered under the direction of the Judge Advocate General.

Boards for the selection of officers for promotion, boards for the examination of officers for promotion and retirement, and boards for the examination of candidates for appointment as officers in the naval service, other than midshipmen, are reviewed after the necessary convening orders have been prepared in this office for the Secretary of the Navy.

All legislation proposed by the Navy Department is drafted with necessary explanations of the existing law and statements of the purposes of the proposed legislation. An examination and report is also made upon all bills and resolutions introduced in Congress and referred to the Department for report.

International law and admiralty cases and claims for damages involving vessels and aircraft are reviewed and necessary action taken. Decisions and opinions on questions of law are prepared on a variety of subjects falling under the general heads of appointment, rank, precedence, promotion, retirement, pay, misconduct, line of duty, neutrality, and other miscellaneous matters. Official bonds for supply officers and navy mail clerks are examined and approved.

This office assists bureaus concerned in preliminary preparation of contracts for naval vessels and public utilities, including final review; passes upon all payments and questions arising in connection with the interpretation and administration under these contracts. All public building and service contracts are approved and reviewed as to form, and claims arising thereunder are reviewed. Adjustments are made on claims for injury to private property through damage by Government automobiles, disposal of surplus material, and sales of vessels.

The Office of the Judge Advocate General acts in the interest of the Government and of inventors by securing letters patent on a large number of inventions made yearly by personnel of the Naval Establishment. It is a further function of this office to investigate the scope and validity of patents either in connection with allegations of infringement or in connection with offers of assignments or licenses to determine their value to the Government. Cooperation is furnished the Department of Justice in gathering evidence for use in connection with the defense of suits relating to patents in the Court of Claims. Copyrights and trade-marks are also handled.

Formal opinions or decisions in writing are rendered upon request, and such opinions or decisions are the basis of official action by any bureau or office or officer of the Navy Department or Marine Corps only after the approval of such opinion or decision by the Secretary of the Navy.

SHORE ESTABLISHMENTS DIVISION

Established by General Order No. 68 of September 6, 1921 (reprinted as General Order No. 13 of May 13, 1935), to conduct, under the immediate supervision of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the departmental administration of navy yards and naval stations. The following activities of navy yards and stations are under its cognizance: Administration, organization, and management; civilian personnel and labor, and all matters pertaining thereto, including the maintenance of high morale; recommendations for complements of officers; buildings, grounds, shops, power plants, service lines, and rolling stock; manufactures and manufacturing processes; cost analysis in connection with the determination of economy and efficiency; coordinating the assignment of available funds, coordinating the assignment of work on vessels made available for work at yards and stations by the Chief of Naval Operations, and coordinating other work assigned to yards and stations in accordance with their abilities, with a view of maintaining stable labor conditions consistent with the military needs of the fleet; inspections of navy yards and naval stations; coordinating the above activities and functions with the fleet-operating schedules. These functions are consolidated in the Office of the Assistant Secretary (Shore Establishments Division).

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE

The Adminstrative Office assists the Secretary of the Navy and the Assistant Secretary of the Navy in directing the administration of the Navy Department, including Headquarters, United States Marine Corps, and Headquarters, United States Coast Guard (during war). Its major activities include general administrative and office services to the Department: Management engineering; personnel administration; space planning and control; mail; telephones; office equipment and supplies, including standardization and specifications; publications; duplicating; files and records, including methods and systems; security of Navy-occupied departmental property, including control of egress and ingress; motor-vehicle transportation, including passenger cars and trucks; and cafeteria.

The Administrative Office also exercises general supervision over the budget, personnel, supplies, maintenance, mail, files, and pay roll of the Office of the Secretary and the Executive Office of the Secretary.

OFFICE OF THE MANAGEMENT ENGINEER

The Office of the Management Engineer assists the bureaus and offices in evaluating their organizational structure, determining adequacy of their facilities and distribution of functions between organizational units, appraising their management methods and administration procedure, determining their personnel and equipment requirements, and eliminating unnecessary work and duplicate functions and activities.

DIVISION OF PERSONNEL SUPERVISION AND MANAGEMENT

The Division of Personnel Supervision and Management supervises the functions of appointment, assignment, classification, promotion, service rating, transfer, and training of civil personnel of the Navy Department and its field service; handles grievances; administers regulations regarding removals, retirements, leaves of absence, selective service, etc.; administers the act of March 7, 1942, granting financial aid to dependents of civil employees missing, beleaguered, or captured by an enemy. The Director of Civilian Personnel serves as a member of the Council of Personnel Administration and acts as liaison officer in civil personnel matters between the Department and the Civil Service Commission.

OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF PROCUREMENT AND MATERIAL

Chief of Procurement and Material.—The Chief of Procurement and Material is an officer on the active list of the Navy, appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, from among the officers of the line not below the grade of captain. While so serving, the Chief of Procurement and Material has the rank and title of vice admiral.

The Chief of Procurement and Material is charged (by General Order No. 166, January 30, 1942, approved by the President of the United States) with coordination of all the material and procurement activities of the Navy Department; supervision of programs for the procurement of ships and materials of every character as approved by the Secretary of the Navy, and the performance of such other duties as the Secretary of the Navy may direct. The orders of the Office of Procurement and Material are considered as emanating from the Secretary of the Navy and shall have full force and effect as such.

DEPUTY AND ASSISTANTS TO CHIEF OF PROCUREMENT AND MATERIAL

In case of death, resignation, absence, or sickness of the Chief of Office, the Deputy Chief of Procurement and Material is directed by the Secretary of the Navy to act in his stead. An Assistant Chief in Charge of Production, an Assistant Chief in Charge of Procurement, and an Assistant Chief in Charge of Planning and Statistics are appointed by the Secretary of the Navy as assistants to the Chief of the Office of Procurement and Material.

The three assistants to the Chief of Office need not be officers on the active list of the Navy.

RESOURCES BRANCH, OFFICE OF PROCUREMENT AND MATERIAL

In the Office of Procurement and Material, the Resources Branch comprises the Navy personnel of the Army and Navy Munitions Board.

PROCUREMENT LEGAL DIVISION

The Procurement Legal Division is responsible for advising the Under Secretary, the various branches of his office, and the procuring bureaus on all legal matters involving procurement of naval material, supplies, and facilities.

OFFICE OF PUBLIC RELATIONS

It is the function of the Office of Public Relations to keep the public informed of the activities of the Navy, where compatible with military security. The preparation and dissemination of material are effected through press, photograph, magazine, and radio sections operating under the supervision of the Director of Public Relations.

OFFICE OF BUDGET AND REPORTS

The Office of Budget and Reports, under the Secretary of the Navy, has charge of the preparation and execution of the Navy Department's budget. It analyzes the estimates of the individual bureaus and offices and correlates them into a well-balanced program. After funds have been appropriated by Congress, the office revises the budgetary program to conform to specific funds and follows up the execution of that program.

OFFICE OF COORDINATOR OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The principal function of the Office of the Coordinator of Research and De velopment is to bring about the fullest possible cooperation in, and coordination of, research efforts affecting the Navy—among the research establishments of the Army and Navy, other governmental and industrial research establishments, the activities mobilized under the Office of Scientific Research and Development, and the using Services themselves. The Coordinator provides information to the bureaus and offices of the Navy Department regarding research facilities of outside agencies and assists in directing research into appropriate channels. By personal contacts of his staff, by correspondence, and by inspections, he maintains a follow-up on the progress of all research and development projects in which the Navy is interested, taking such steps as necessary to expedite the work. The Coordinator is the chairman of the Naval Research and Development Board and advises the Secretary of the Navy on all matters concerning naval research. He arranges for suitable representation of the Navy on outside boards, committees, and councils dealing with research.

The Office of Inventions is one of the activities of this Office. It handles all suggestions and proposals made by individuals in civil life to the Navy Department direct or through the National Inventors Council for new or improved weapons and devices for use by the Navy.

OFFICE OF NAVAL PETROLEUM RESERVES

Established October 19, 1927, to aid in the preservation of the naval petroleum and oil-shale reserves. Administers general policies regarding the Navy's fuel-oil supplies and acts as adviser to the Secretary of the Navy on matters pertaining thereto. Cooperates with the Department of Justice in all litigation affecting naval petroleum reserves.

DIVISION OF TRAINING LIAISON AND COORDINATION

The Division of Training Liaison and Coordination is charged with the cooperation with other governmental agencies for training and education.

LEND-LEASE LIAISON OFFICE

The Lend-Lease Liaison Office represents the Secretary of the Navy in negotiation between lend-lease representatives of foreign governments and lend-lease representatives of various bureaus of the Navy Department.

INCENTIVE DIVISION

The Incentive Division of the Under Secretary of the Navy is charged with the operation of industrial incentive plans of the Navy Department for stimulating, in cooperation with all cognizant Government agencies, the production of war materials. This division operates a comprehensive program designed to improve industrial morale by media which shows the necessity of any particular part of a product to the total war effort, including the handling of the ceremonies for the Army-Navy "E" awards.

OFFICE OF WAR SAVINGS BONDS

The Office of War Savings Bonds promotes the sale of War Bonds by allotment, pay-roll deduction, and cash payment plans to the civilian, enlisted, and officer personnel of the United States Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, ashore and afloat, throughout the world. The Office of War Bonds is responsible for the appointment of issuing agents for War Bonds and War Bond officers at naval, Coast Guard, and Marine Corps activities.

TRANSPORTATION BRANCH

The Transportation Branch administers the policies of the Navy Department on matters relating to domestic transportation; procures, assigns, operates, and maintains all transportation facilities and equipment for domestic transportation; advises on, and acts as a clearing house with respect to, the procurement of automotive transport vehicles for use outside the continental limits of the United States. Excluded from the foregoing are: Transportation by air; by vessels under the Naval Transportation Service; by equipment used in training, maneuvers, or actual combat or patrol duty; by common carriers of personnel under travel orders; and transportation and routing of material by common or charter carrier.

GENERAL BOARD

The General Board, acting in an advisory capacity, considers and reports upon such subjects as the Secretary of the Navy may direct. The General Board considers the United States Naval policy; that is, the system of principles, the general terms of their application, governing the development, organization, maintenance, training, and operation of a navy. It recommends to the Secretary of the Navy the number and types of ships for the fleet, and considers the number of naval districts, yards, stations, operating bases, and other shore activities; and advises the Secretary of the Navy respecting the general policy to be adopted toward them.

INTERIOR CONTROL BOARD

The Interior Control Board studies matters concerning interior control—a term designating control of the "interior" of warships and aircraft: Command and organization, fighting methods and facilities, etc.—and makes recommendations to the Secretary of the Navy. The Board prepares and maintains data on new control developments, collects data on currently prescribed installations, and recommends specific interior control requirements for each new class of ship or aircraft.

BOARD OF MEDICAL EXAMINERS

The Board of Medical Examiners conducts the physical examinations of officers of the Line and Staff Corps, United States Navy, and Naval Reserve, to determine their physical qualifications for promotion, appointment, or advancement.

NAVAL EXAMINING BOARD (LINE)

The Naval Examining Board conducts the professional examinations of line officers, including warrant and chief warrant officers, of the United States Navy for promotion, and for appointment, transfer, and promotion, United States Naval Reserve; competitive examinations of warrant and chief warrant officers for appointment to commissioned ranks of ensign, lieutenant (junior grade), and lieutenant, of the Regular Navy; competitive examinations of enlisted personnel for appointment to warrant ranks of the Regular Navy; and examinations of records of chief warrant officers, Regular Navy, and Naval Reserve, for certificates of creditability of record.

NAVAL EXAMINING BOARD (MEDICAL)

The Naval Examining Board (Medical) conducts the professional examinations of Medical Corps officers of the United States Navy and Naval Reserve for promotion to the grades of commander and captain, Medical Corps. The examinations of officers for promotion to the grade of rear admiral, Medical Corps, are customarily conducted by a special examining board composed of officers of the grade of rear admiral, of which the president of this Board is a member, and the examination records are handled by this office.

NAVAL RETIRING BOARD

The Naval Retiring Board conducts the examinations of such officers of the Line and Staff Corps of the United States Navy and Naval Reserve as may be ordered to appear before it, or whose case may be referred to it, by the Secretary of the Navy, to determine their physical fitness to perform all the duties appropriate to their respective ranks or grades. (Commonly referred to as examinations for physical incapacity retirements.)

COMPENSATION BOARD

The duty of the Compensation Board is to settle all claims with contractors under Navy contracts, and disputes between any contractor and any Bureau, or any appeal of any contractor from the action of a Bureau in regard to decisions affecting cost, bonuses, penalties, cost of changes, final settlement of contracts, or any matter whatsoever affecting payments to or by contractors shall be referred to the Compensation Board.

BOARD FOR PRODUCTION AWARDS

It is the duty of the Board for Production Awards to advance the national defense effort by stimulating the competitive spirit among producers of war materials and make awards for outstanding accomplishments.

BOARD OF DECORATIONS AND MEDALS

The Board of Decorations and Medals makes recommendations to the Secretary of the Navy on the bestowal of honors of all types within the naval service; on the legislation, Executive orders, and general orders, pertaining to decorations, awards, and campaign medals; and on retirement benefits to personnel with previous commendations. The design of medals and the definition of policies come within the Board's purview.

THE OFFICE OF THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF, UNITED STATES FLEET AND CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS

THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF, UNITED STATES FLEET, AND CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS

The duties of the Commander in Chief, United States Fleet, and Chief of Naval Operations have been combined. They devolve upon an admiral who is the principal naval adviser to the President on the conduct of the war and the principal naval adviser and executive to the Secretary of the Navy on the conduct of the activities of the Naval Establishment.

As Commander in Chief, United States Fleet, he has supreme command of the operating forces, comprising the several fleets, seagoing forces, and sea frontier forces of the Navy, and is directly responsible, under the general direction of the Secretary of the Navy, to the President therefor.

His staff, as the Commander in Chief, United States Fleet, is composed of the Chief of Staff of the United States Fleet, the Deputy Chief of Staff, three Assistant Chiefs of Staff, and the required additional officers organized into three divisions—the Operational Division, the Plans Division, and the Readiness Division. The whole comprises the Headquarters of the Commander in Chief, United States Fleet.

Under the Commander in Chief and his Chief of Staff, the staff of the Commander in Chief prepares and executes plans for current war operations, conducts operational duties, and directs the training essential to carrying out operations.

His subordinates, as the Chief of Naval Operations, are the Vice Chief of Naval Operations, the Sub Chief of Naval Operations, the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Logistic Projects, the Assistant Chief of Naval Operations for Logistic Plans, and the required additional officers organized into the 12 divisions of the Office of Naval Operations.

VICE CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Vice Chief of Naval Operations executes the plans and policies of the Commander in Chief, United States Fleet, and Chief of Naval Operations, with respect to the preparation, readiness, and logistic support of the operating forces comprising the several fleets, seagoing forces, and sea frontier forces of the Navy, and coordinates and directs the efforts to this end of the bureaus and offices of the Navy Department.

The Office of the Chief of Naval Operations is composed of 12 divisions—Logistic Plans, Central, Intelligence, Pan-American, Communications, Inspection, Fleet Maintenance, the Hydrographic Office, the Naval Observatory, Base Maintenance, Naval Transportation Service, and Aviation.

LOGISTIC PLANS DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Logistic Plans Division is the primary planning agency of the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations and, as such, studies and recommends in regard to: Shore station development program; facilities and defenses required at outlying and advanced bases; types, characteristics, and numbers of ships; coordination of the preparation of the aircraft program; and the coordination of the logistic supply.

CENTRAL DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

This division of the office of the Chief of Naval Operations has cognizance of the following:

(b) Budget matters, legislation, Navy Regulations and General Orders, bureau manuals, courts and boards, honors and ceremonies, annual and special reports from naval forces, annual and special reports made by the Chief of Naval Operations.

(c) Administration of places under naval occupation.

(d) International affairs, including relations and contacts of naval forces, afloat and ashore, with governments or forces of other nations; liaison with State Department; and matters pertaining to treaties and conventions.

(e) Matters not clearly within the cognizance of any other office, or requiring central coordination, and such other matters as the Chief of Naval Operations may designate.

This division is charged with the duties of the Office of Island Governments and Island Bases.

INTELLIGENCE DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Intelligence Division is charged with the collection and classification of information for the Department and for other naval activities which require such services. It publishes and disseminates such information to the Navy and to Government officials requiring it, and keeps in close touch with all naval activities, both in and out of the Navy Department. It cooperates with the other executive departments of the Government in discovering persons engaged in activities inimical to the United States. It maintains all naval attachés and naval observers abroad and is the official channel of communications for all foreign naval attachés in the United States. It collaborates with other Navy Department bureaus and offices in the matter of naval missions and advisers to the various American republics.

The Office of Naval Records and Library, in addition to maintaining a technical library for reference purposes, collects and classifies, with a view to publication, naval records of historical value.

PAN-AMERICAN DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Pan-American Division is charged with the planning and preparation of policies affecting the American republics and has cognizance of the administration of naval missions to these nations.

COMMUNICATION DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Communication Division is charged with the administration, organization, and operation of the entire radio, telegraph, telephone, and cable systems of communications within the naval service, including the operation of the Navy overseas radio system and all communications between merchant ships and naval shore stations in the United States and its possessions. The foregoing includes the services rendered by shore direction-finder stations, and commercial accounting. The Communication Division handles all matters pertaining to naval communications in any manner whatsoever, except those relating solely to purchase, supply, test, and installation of apparatus.

The Communication Office of the Navy Department (a section of the Communication Division) is responsible for the handling of all telegraphic and radio communications to and from the Navy Department.

INSPECTION DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

(Board of Inspection and Survey)

The Board of Inspection and Survey is charged with inspections and trials of newly constructed naval vessels, including submarines and aircraft, and, at intervals specified by law, with the material inspections of all vessels of the Navy. It is in close coordination with the Secretary of the Navy and the Fleet Maintenance Division of the Office of Naval Operations.

FLEET MAINTENANCE DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Director, Fleet Maintenance Division, is charged with, and is responsible to the Chief of Naval Operations, for:

Anticipating the material needs of the service and advising the Chief of Naval Operations accordingly.

The coordination of the efforts of the material bureaus, the forces afloat, and the navy yards in the maintenance of the material readiness of the fleet.

The regulation of maintenance work to meet the approved plans and operating orders for all naval vessels.

Handles matters concerning commissioning and decommissioning of all types of vessels; cognizance of all vessels acquired or building, while building or converting and until turned over to the proper activity; the assignment of home ports, and the disposal, transfer, or loan of naval craft.

The Director of the Fleet Maintenance Division is senior member of the District Craft Development Board, Auxiliary Vessels Board, and Interior Control Board.

HYDROGRAPHIC OFFICE, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Hydrographic Office is charged with the execution of hydrographic surveys in foreign waters and on the high seas; the collection and dissemination of hydrographic and navigational information and data; the preparation and printing by its own personnel and with its own equipment of maps and charts relating to and required in navigation, including confidential, strategical, and tactical charts required for naval operations and maneuvers; the preparation and issue of sailing directions (pilots), light lists, pilot charts, navigational manuals, periodicals, and radio broadcasts for the use of all vessels of the United States and for the benefit and use of navigators generally; the furnishing of the foregoing to the Navy and other public services, and the sale of charts and publications to the mercantile marine of all nations and to the general public, at the cost of printing and paper. It maintains intimate relations with the hydrographic offices of all foreign countries and with the International Hydrographic Bureau, Monaco, and (through branch hydrographic offices and sales agents) with mariners and the general public.

The Hydrographic Office is charged with the publication and supply of naval air pilots; aviation charts and publications for special naval purposes; as well as the collection and dissemination of timely information which will contribute to the safe navigation of aircraft over sea.

The Hydrographic Office cooperates with the National Academy of Sciences by conducting research work in oceanography, especially in soundings and in the collection of the temperatures of the surface of the sea.

NAVAL OBSERVATORY, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Naval Observatory at Washington, D. C., broadcasts time signals daily. In addition to establishing standard time for the country and for the navigator at sea to determine his chronometer error and position, these signals are used by surveyors, engineers, scientific workers, and mining and petroleum engineers for the determination of position, measurement of gravity, and radio frequencies and other purposes requiring exact time. In order to meet the needs of all who may have use for them, a number of different frequencies are used in broadcasting the signals via the naval radio station at Annapolis, Md. Daily signals are also transmitted by the station at Mare Island, Calif., and the noon signals are distributed by telegraph. Naval radio stations at Honolulu and in the Canal Zone transmit time signals which are based on Naval Observatory time.

The administration for the upkeep, repair, inspection, supply, and distribution of designated navigational, aeronautical, and aerological instruments and their spare parts for the ships and aircraft of the Navy is performed at the Naval Observatory.

The Naval Observatory maintains continuous observations for absolute positions of the fundamental stars, and the independent determination, by observations of the sun, of the position of the ecliptic and of the Equator among the stars, and of the positions of the stars, moon, and planets, with reference to the Equator and equinoxes, in order to furnish data to assist in preparing the American Ephemeris and Nautical Almanac and improving the tables of the planets, moon, and stars. Information is also furnished to foreign countries in accordance with international agreement.

The Nautical Almanac Office of the Naval Observatory computes and prepares for publication the American Ephemeris and its supplements, the American Air Almanac and the Nautical Almanac. In addition, there is carried on the essential research work of deriving improved values of the fundamental astronomical elements and embodying them in new tables of the celestial motions.

One of the many scientific duties of the Naval Observatory is the determination and promulgation of information in connection with all solar and lunar eclipses. For many years it has been the practice to distribute pamphlets containing all of the astronomical data in connection with coming total solar eclipses.

BASE MAINTENANCE DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Base Maintenance Division has cognizance of the general organization and administration of naval districts; coordinates the acquisition and disposal of property, the procurement of required facilities, and the development of bases; coordinates matters relating to harbor and coastal defense.

AVIATION DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Aviation Division operates the Naval Air Transport Service for the transportation by air of naval personnel and freight; issues orders for the commissioning and decommissioning of aircraft units and handles all other aviation matters coming within the cognizance of the Office of the Vice Chief of Naval Operations.

NAVAL TRANSPORTATION SERVICE DIVISION, NAVAL OPERATIONS

The Naval Transportation Service operates vessels for the transportation of naval personnel and freight in logistic support of operating forces and bases; directs the inspection and acquisition of nonmilitary type vessels; and coordinates the Navy's fuel requirements.

BUREAU OF NAVAL PERSONNEL

1. (a) The Bureau of Naval Personnel is charged with, and responsible for, the procurement, education, training, discipline, and distribution of officers and enlisted personnel of the Navy, including the Naval Reserve and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, except the professional education of officers, nurses, and enlisted men of the Medical Department.

(b) It is responsible for libraries on ships and in shore stations throughout the Naval Establishment.

Naval Academy,
Postgraduate School,
Naval War College,
Schools for the training of naval personnel,
Training stations,
Naval Home,

and with the direction of receiving ships and stations.

2. It issues, records, and enforces the orders of the Secretary of the Navy to the individual officers of the Navy and of the Naval Reserve.

3. It has under its direction recruiting stations, and supervises the enlistment and discharge of all enlisted persons.

4. It has under its direction the organization and administration of the Naval Reserve, and provides for the mobilization of all these Reserves.

5. It has cognizance of transportation for all naval personnel except the Marine Corps.

6. It establishes the complements and allowances of ships.

7. It keeps the records of service of all officers and men, and prepares an annual Navy Register for publication.

8. It is charged with all matters pertaining to application for appointments and commissions in the Navy and with the preparation of such appointments and commissions for signature.

9. It is charged with the preparation, revision, and enforcement of all regulations governing uniforms, and with the distribution of general orders and regulations.

10. Questions of naval discipline, rewards, and punishments are submitted by this Bureau for the action of the Secretary of the Navy. The records of all general courts martial and courts of inquiry involving the personnel of the Navy are, before final action, referred to this Bureau for comment and recommendation as to disciplinary features.

11. It receives all reports of services performed by individual officers or men.

12. It is charged with the enforcement of regulations and instructions regarding naval ceremonies and naval etiquette.

13. It is charged with the supervision of the welfare and recreational activities of the naval service except those under the cognizance of the Marine Corps.

BUREAU OF YARDS AND DOCKS

The Bureau of Yards and Docks is the Navy Department's "Public Works Agency" for the entire naval Shore Establishment. The Bureau is responsible for the design and construction of all naval and Marine Corps public works and public utilities including:

Navy yard facilities, such as drydocks, marine railways, building ways.

Harbor structures, such as moorings, quay walls, piers, wharves, slips (including dredging), landings, floating and stationary cranes.

Utilities, such as power plants, coaling plants, railroads, and systems for heat, light, telephone, water, and sewer service.

All types of buildings and service structures, such as roads, walks, bridges, and radio towers.

The Bureau is charged with responsibility for, and execution of, the annual inspection as to structural condition and all major repairs of such naval public works and utilities. It provides for their general and routine maintenance, except such minor routine work as can be accomplished by station forces, at ordnance stations, air stations, training stations, hospitals, marine posts, and the Naval Academy.

The Bureau is also responsible for the operation of all central power plants and distribution systems and the provision and operation of land transportation and weight-handling equipment, including locomotives, locomotive cranes, cars, derricks (both shore and floating), shears, motortrucks, passenger automobiles, etc.

The Bureau consults fully on new projects with those departmental bureaus or offices for whose use they are primarily intended; prepares designs that will be mutually satisfactory as to location, lay-out, and operating features; makes cost estimates; and supervises construction.

It also has custody of all naval real estate which is not in active use, and the records of such properties; it also acquires real estate needed by the Navy, including easements and permits, as well as personal property located on lands acquired.

It provides the furniture for all buildings (except at air stations, ordnance stations, hospitals, the Naval Academy, and marine posts).

The Bureau of Yards and Docks is a direct construction agency, one of its major ultimate objectives being the construction of all shore facilities for the use of the Navy. Its work of design and construction is broad in nature and embraces nearly all forms of engineering and all the types of structures mentioned above. The Bureau's previous practice has been the accomplishment of construction work coming under its cognizance through the medium of general contracts awarded on an advertised, lump-sum-bid basis. However, enacted legislation allows the award of contracts on a negotiated, cost-plus-a-fixed-fee basis, and this type of contract now is being extensively used.

The work of the Bureau and its attendant field activities are administered by the Chief of the Bureau, who is an officer of the Civil Engineer Corps, United States Navy, appointed for a term of 4 years with the rank of rear admiral, and an Assistant Chief of the Bureau, also an officer of the Civil Engineer Corps, United States Navy, detailed for this duty with the rank of rear admiral during tenure of office. For administrative purposes the work of the Bureau is divided into five departments, each headed by a commissioned officer of the Civil Engineer Corps, United States Navy, as follows:

Administration and Personnel Department.
Progress Control and Statistical Department.
Finance and Operating Department.
Planning and Design Department.
Construction Department.

THE BUREAU OF ORDNANCE

The Bureau of Ordnance is charged with and responsible for the design, manufacture, procurement, maintenance, issue, and efficiency of all offensive and defensive arms and armament (including armor, torpedoes, mines, depth charges, pyrotechnics, bombs, ammunition, war explosives, war chemicals, defensive nets, booms, and buoys, plus anchors, moorings, and appliances therefor except fixtures on shore used to secure the ends of nets and booms) and, except as specifically assigned to other cognizance, optical and other devices and material for the control of guns, torpedoes, and bombs.

It is charged with the upkeep and operation of the following naval ordnance establishments and with their repairs, within the capacity of the force employed:

(c) Naval torpedo stations.
(g) Naval magazines on shore.

BUREAU OF SHIPS

The Bureau of Ships is charged with and responsible for the general design, structural strength, stability, and seaworthiness of all ships of the Navy, except airships.

It is responsible for the preparation of preliminary plans, approximate data, or both, showing the designs of new ships in accordance with the military characteristics recommended by the General Board and approved by the Secretary of the Navy, and for the preparation of final designs of new vessels in consultation with other bureaus.

It is charged with and responsible for all that relates to details of designing, building, fitting-out, repairing, and altering of hulls, permanent fittings, and main machinery including its related equipment used for propulsion of naval vessels, district craft (except those of the Bureau of Yards and Docks), and small boats.

It has similar responsibility in connection with auxiliary machinery not associated with propulsion equipment, including all pumps, distilling apparatus, refrigerating apparatus, air-conditioning apparatus, steering gear, anchor windlass, deck machinery, air compressors, heating systems, and piping systems.

It has cognizance of all that relates to electric generating sets and storage batteries; the generation and distribution of electric power on board ships for all purposes; all means of interior communication; all electrical methods of signaling, internal and external; all other electrical apparatus on board ship, except fire-control instruments and motors and control appliances used to operate machinery under the specific cognizance of other bureaus; and all appliances and articles of equipage on its approved allowance list.

It is charged with the design, manufacture, installation, and maintenance of all radio and sound equipage, for shore and afloat, including all appliances used by the Naval Communication Service, except such material as is assigned to other cognizance.

It provides shipkeepers for the care of vessels and district craft (except those of the Bureau of Yards and Docks) not in commission.

The Bureau is responsible for the provision of facilities and arrangements for salvaging vessels.

It has administrative supervision of the drydocking of all vessels and district craft and of the operating and cleaning of drydocks and marine railways.

It is charged with the design, development, and procurement of materials and appliances for defense against gas attacks, except as specifically assigned to other cognizance: for diving gear and experimental diving units, respiratory protective devices, paravanes, and mine-sweeping gear.

It inspects all fuel for the fleet. It prepares specifications and recommendations for the purchase on annual contracts of consumable engineering supplies and conducts tests for determining the quality which these supplies must meet. It prepares the specifications for the yearly contract under which lubricating oil is purchased by the Navy and by all other Federal activities.

It prepares specifications and prescribes tests for material, equipment, and machinery under its cognizance. It is represented on many of the national standardization and engineering bodies, and on the various Federal specifications committees.

The Bureau has supervision and control of the David Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md.; the United States Naval Engineering Experiment Station, Annapolis, Md.; the Naval Boiler Laboratory, Navy Yard, Philadelphia, Pa.; the Materials Testing Laboratory, Navy Yard, New York, N. Y.; the Testing Laboratory, Navy Yard, Philadelphia, Pa.; the Materials Testing Laboratory, Munhall, Pa.; the Rubber Testing Laboratory, Navy Yard, Mare Island, Calif.; and navy yard laboratories located in the Boston, Mass., Norfolk. Va., Charleston, S. C., and Mare Island, Calif., Navy Yards; and the Naval Research Laboratory, Anacostia Station, Washington, D. C. These activities are employed for conducting necessary tests and investigations to obtain suitable apparatus and material for naval purposes.

It maintains, in the field, offices of supervisors of shipbuilding, and inspectors of machinery, and also maintains jointly with the Bureau of Ordnance and Bureau of Aeronautics the offices of inspectors of naval material. The Office of Procurement and Material, Inspection Administration, in the Office of the Under Secretary of the Navy, is charged with the general administration of these offices, but the Bureau of Ships has cognizance of all technical matters concerning materials being purchased by or for that Bureau including the specifications therefor and the detailed requirements for inspection thereof. In the offices of supervisors of shipbuilding and inspectors of machinery a force of trained naval and civilian experts is maintained for the inspection of machinery and materials generally entering into the construction of new vessels; this force interprets and enforces strict compliance with the specifications and other contractual obligations for the construction of vessels as regards characteristics of materials used and the method of installation of completed parts. The offices of the inspectors of naval material, which are also composed of trained naval and civilian experts, are maintained for the purpose of inspecting and insuring strict compliance with the specifications of materials purchased for the maintenance of the Naval Establishment. These offices are available to and frequently used by other Federal departments for the inspection of material purchased for Government use.

It nominates to the Bureau of Naval Personnel specially qualified officers for engineering duty at sea and on shore, including those for duty as supervisors of shipbuilding, inspectors of machinery, and inspectors of naval material.

It compiles and issues instructions for the care, operation, and maintenance of material, equipment, and machinery under its cognizance and prepares and issues bulletins of official information on these subjects.

The Bureau of Ships has supervision and control over the appropriation, "Maintenance, Bureau of Ships," "Increase and replacement of naval vessels, construction, and machinery," "Naval emergency fund," and, together with the Bureau of Ordnance, has joint supervision and control over the appropriation "Alterations, naval vessels."

BUREAU OF MEDICINE AND SURGERY

The Bureau of Medicine and Surgery is charged with and responsible for the maintenance of the health of the Navy, for the care of the sick and injured, for the custody and preservation of the records, accounts, and properties under its cognizance and pertaining to its duties, and for the professional education and training of officers, nurses, and men of the Medical Department.

It is charged with the management and control of all naval hospitals, medical supply depots, medical laboratories, the Naval Medical Center, and of all technical schools established for the education or training of members of the Medical Corps, Dental Corps, Nurse Corps, and Hospital Corps, and with their upkeep and operation.

The Bureau of Medicine and Surgery provides for inspection of the sanitary condition of the Navy, and recommends with respect to all questions connected with hygiene and sanitation affecting the service; it advises with the Department and other bureaus regarding the sanitary features of ships under construction and in commission, regarding berthing, ventilation, and location of quarters for the care and treatment of the sick and injured; makes provisions for the care of wounded in battle; and, in the case of shore stations, with regard to health conditions depending on location, the hygienic construction and care of public buildings, especially of barracks and other habitations, such as camps. It also advises concerning clothing and food, water supplies used for drinking, cooking, and bathing purposes, and drainage and disposal of wastes, so far as these affect the health of the Navy. It safeguards the personnel by the employment of the best methods of hygiene and sanitation, both afloat and ashore, with a view to maintaining the highest possible percentage of the personnel ready for service at all times, and adopts for use all such devices or procedures developed in the sciences of medicine and surgery as will in any way increase military efficiency.

It is the duty of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery to provide for the physical examination of officers, nurses, and enlisted men, with a view to the selection or retention of only those whose physical condition is such as to maintain or improve the military efficiency of the service if admitted or retained therein; it passes upon the competency, from a professional standpoint, of all men of the Hospital Corps for enlistment, enrollment, and promotion by means of examinations conducted under its supervision or by such forms as it may prescribe.

The Bureau of Medicine and Surgery recommends to the Bureau of Naval Personnel the complement of Medical Department personnel for hospitals and hospital ships, and also recommends and has information as to the assignment and duties of medical officers, dental officers, and Hospital Corps men. It is charged with the administration of the Nurse Corps, and has power to appoint and remove all nurses, subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Navy.

It requires for and has control of the preparation, reception, storage, care, custody, transfer, and issue of all supplies of every kind used in the Medical Department for its own purposes; and has charge of the civilian force employed at naval hospitals, medical supply depots, medical laboratories, the Naval Medical Center, and at all technical schools for the education or training of Medical Department personnel.

It approves the design of hospital ships in relation to their efficiency for the care of the sick and wounded, and provides for the organization and administration of the medical department of each of such vessels.

The arrangements for care, transportation, and burial of the dead are under the jurisdiction and control of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

BUREAU OF SUPPLIES AND ACCOUNTS

The Bureau of Supplies and Accounts is charged with and responsible for the procurement, purchase, receipt, custody, warehousing, issue, and shipment of all supplies, fuel, and other materials for the Navy, except supplies for the Marine Corps, and except the procurement of certain special items of ordnance material, and the storage and issue of medical stores, ammunition, projectiles, mines, and explosives.

It has control of the Naval Stock Fund, the Naval Working Fund, the Clothing and Small Stores Fund, and the stocks procured from these funds.

It has charge of the upkeep and operation of the Naval Clothing Factory and the coffee-roasting plants.

The Bureau exercises administrative supervision over fuel plants, commissary activities, supply depots, and storehouses at navy yards and stations.

It authorizes and has cognizance over the transportation of Navy property and household effects of Navy personnel. It has charge of the procurement of cargoes and the loading and discharging of supply ships, colliers, and tankers, and when necessary, charters merchant vessels for the transportation of supplies.

It handles the sale of condemned, salvaged, and scrap materials, and of condemned vessels.

The Bureau prepares and submits estimates of the funds required for freight, fuel, clothing, and subsistence of Navy personnel, and has supervision of the allotments of funds from its appropriations and the accounting for allotments granted ships under all appropriations.

It recommends the necessity for, and the location, type, size, and interior arrangements of, storehouses ashore, and the equipment and arrangement of supply activity spaces afloat.

It has charge of the procurement and disbursement of funds for the payment of naval and civilian pay rolls and for all articles and services procured for the Navy.

It is charged with the keeping of the money and property accounts of the Naval Establishment, including accounts of all manufacturing and operating expenses at navy yards and stations, the direction of naval cost accounting, and the audit of property returns from ships and stations.

The Bureau originates the details to duty of officers of the Supply Corps.

BUREAU OF AERONAUTICS

The Bureau of Aeronautics is charged with matters pertaining to naval aeronautics as may be prescribed by the Secretary of the Navy (sec. 8, act of Congress, July 12, 1921).

The Bureau of Aeronautics, under the direction of the Secretary of the Navy, is charged with and responsible for all that relates to the design, construction, fitting out, testing, repair, and alteration of naval and Marine Corps aircraft, barrage balloons, barrage kites and, except as specifically assigned to other cognizance, instruments, equipment, and accessories pertaining thereto.

It provides aircraft in accordance with approved operating plans and in accordance with general military characteristics of new service classes (types) as recommended by the General Board and approved by the Secretary of the Navy.

It is charged with the upkeep and operation of all aeronautics shore establishments of the Navy and Marine Corps, exclusive of aircraft operations, and with their repairs.

It makes recommendation covering all aeronautic matters as to operations, personnel, and material to the appropriate bureaus and offices of the Navy Department and the Headquarters, Marine Corps.

When not prescribed by the United States Navy Regulations, specific assignment of cognizance will be as stated in the Manual of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

HEADQUARTERS, UNITED STATES MARINE CORPS

The Commandant of the Marine Corps is charged with and responsible for the procurement, discharge, education, training, discipline, and distribution of officers and enlisted personnel of the Marine Corps, including the Marine Corps Reserve, and their administration and general efficiency. The headquarters is organized as the office of the Commandant and three staff departments.

In the office of the Commandant are his assistant, the director of plans and policies, the director of personnel, the director of Marine Corps Reserve, the director of aviation, the director of recruiting, the director of public relations, and the secretary to the Commandant, as follows:

> The assistant to the Commandant is his principal assistant and adviser, who performs the duties of a chief of staff, assists in coordinating the work of the several departments and divisions at Marine Corps Headquarters, and conducts the business of the office of the Commandant in the latter's absence.
> The director of plans and policies makes recommendations to the Commandant relative to plans and policies of the United States Marine Corps, and has cognizance of military intelligence, education, operations, training, and matériel.
> The director of personnel has supervision over assignments and maintenance of complements of officers and enlisted men.
> The director of Marine Corps Reserve has supervision over the procurement, training, organization, promotion, and distribution of officers and enlisted men of the Marine Corps Reserve.
> The director of aviation has supervision over the training, operations, promotion, organization, and distribution of aviation personnel.
> The director of recruiting has supervision over the procurement of enlisted men in the regular Marine Corps and the organization and administration of the recruiting service.
> The director of public relations has supervision over, and is responsible for, all public relations and publicity, including publicity for recruiting.
> The military secretary to the Commandant.

The Adjutant and Inspector's Department is the administrative department in the Headquarters of the Marine Corps. It has general supervision of all matters pertaining to the appointment, examination, promotion, reduction, and retirement of commissioned and warrant officers, and of their military records, and of the promotion and reduction of all enlisted men, and of their military records. It has general supervision of the claims of officers and enlisted men, of courts martial, courts of inquiry, investigations, inspections, post exchanges, target practice, insignia, and the historical archives. All personnel statistical matters, including those of casualties and the determination of dependency for the purpose of paying allowances, are also a function of this department.

The quartermaster has supervision of matters relating to the purchase of all supplies for the Marine Corps; pays all civilian field employees; pays all expenses of the Corps except those pertaining to the Paymaster's Department; prepares annual estimates of the appropriation "General Expenses, Marine Corps"; has jurisdiction over quarters, barracks, and other public buildings provided for officers and enlisted men, and repairs, alterations, and improvements thereto; vehicles for the transportation of troops and supplies; public animals and their equipment; furnishes means of transportation for movement of troops; prints and issues blank forms for the Marine Corps.

The paymaster has supervision of all matters relating to pay and allowances of the Marine Corps; the preparation of annual and supplemental estimates under the appropriations, "Pay, Marine Corps," and "Pay of Civil Force, Marine Corps"; and is responsible for the administration and general efficiency of all offices and personnel of the Paymaster's Department at headquarters and in the field.

COAST GUARD

The United States Coast Guard, pursuant to the act of January 28, 1915, as amended, is a military service and at all times constitutes a branch of the land and naval forces of the United States, operating under the Treasury Department in time of peace and as a part of the Navy in time of war or whenever the President shall so direct. It represents, in its historical development from 1790, an amalgamation into one united service of the activities of the old Revenue Cutter Service, the Life-Saving Service, and the Lighthouse Service. Pursuant to Executive Order No. 9083 of February 28, 1942, certain functions of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, Department of Commerce, pertaining to the navigation and vessel-inspection laws and the welfare of merchant marine seamen, were transferred to the jurisdiction of the Coast Guard. Its functions as the Federal maritime police embrace, in general terms, maritime law enforcement, saving and protecting life and property, safeguarding navigation on the high seas and navigable waters of the United States, and national defense.

More specifically the duties of the Coast Guard are as follows:

(a) The prevention, detection, and suppression of violations of the laws of the United States on the high seas and navigable waters of the United States, its Territories, and possessions; protection of the customs revenue; enforcement of navigation laws, including promulgation and enforcement of rules for lights, signals, speed, steering, sailing, passing, anchorage, movement, and towlines of vessels, and lights and signals on bridges; enforcement of vessel-manning requirements, citizenship requirements, and requirements for the mustering and drilling of crews; enforcement of neutrality laws and regulations; the enforcement of the rules and regulations governing the anchorage and movements of vessels under the Espionage Act, including prevention of sabotage to shipping, locks and dams, and water-front property belonging to plants engaged in production of national defense materials; supervision over the loading and unloading of explosives and other dangerous cargoes, in the interest of safety to life and property, by vessels in our harbors and adjacent jurisdictional waters; responsibility for the safeguarding against destruction, loss or injury from sabotage or other subversive acts, accidents, or other causes of similar nature, of vessels, harbors, ports, and water-front facilities in the United States and in Alaska, the Territory of Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands; the enforcement of the Oil Pollution Act; the patrol and enforcement of provisions of conventions into which the United States has entered with other nations, such as the patrol in the waters frequented by the seal and the sea otter, a patrol for the preservation of the halibut fisheries of Northern Pacific Ocean and Bering Sea, and the enforcement of the provisions of the act giving effect to the convention for the regulation of whaling.

(b) The affording of aid to distressed mariners; the saving of life and property from shipwreck; the construction, operation, maintenance, repair, illumination, and inspection of aids to navigation; the enforcement of the regulations to promote the safety of life on navigable waters during regattas and marine parades; patrolling the trans-Atlantic steamship lanes endangered by icebergs; extending medical and surgical aid to the crews of American vessels engaged in deep-sea fisheries; rescuing and safeguarding life and property and distributing food and clothing to marooned people during flood times on the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers and their tributaries; destruction of derelicts; the collection of statistics and investigation of marine disasters; approval of plans for the construction, repair, and alteration of vessels; approval of materials, equipment, and appliances; classification of vessels; inspection of vessels and their equipment and appliances; issuance of certificates of inspection and of permits indicating the approval of vessels for operations which may be hazardous to life and property; administration of load-line requirements; control of log books; numbering of undocumented vessels; licensing and certificating of officers, pilots, and seamen; suspension and revocation of licenses and certificates; shipment, discharge, protection, and welfare of merchant seamen; licensing of motorboat operators; administration of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, a voluntary organization of owners of motorboats and yachts.

(c) Executive Order No. 8929, dated November 1, 1941, prescribed that the Coast Guard shall operate from that date, until further orders, as a part of the Navy, its personnel and resources being used to the best advantage by directives of the Secretary of the Navy and Commander in Chief, United States Fleet, and Chief of Naval Operations. During the existing emergency, a number of the normal peacetime duties of the service have been subordinated, discontinued, or curtailed, wherever necessary, and every energy directed toward prosecution of the war, the Coast Guard functioning as a service in the Navy Department. Among the fields of wartime activities in which service facilities are being employed are convoy, antisubmarine and patrol duty with the fleet, naval sea frontier or task forces; naval auxiliary manning; security of ports, harbors, vessels, and waterfront facilities; beach patrol; training of landing-boat crews, measures for the safety of merchant marine personnel, and control of pilotage.

To assist the Commandant, who is charged by law with the administration of the Coast Guard, there are established at Headquarters: Offices of Personnel, Operations, Finance and Supply and Engineering; Divisions of Inspection, Intelligence, Legal, Administrative Management and Public Relations; and an advisory board and Merchant Marine Council.

A report, covering the activities of the Coast Guard, is published annually.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the supervision of public business relating to the General Land Office, Bureau of Reclamation, Geological Survey, Office of Indian Affairs, National Park Service, Bureau of Mines, Fish and Wildlife Service, Bituminous Coal Division, Grazing Service, Division of Territories and Island Possessions (see Executive order of May 29, 1934), the Bonneville Project (act of Aug. 20, 1937, Public, No. 329, 75th Cong.), Petroleum Administration for War, Solid Fuels Coordination for War, Coordination of Fisheries, the commission to investigate the financial, economic, and other conditions of the various United States and Indian reclamation projects (act of Aug. 21, 1937, Public, No. 331, 75th Cong.). By authority of the President, the Secretary of the Interior has general supervision over the Government railroad in the Territory of Alaska. He exercises certain powers and duties in relation to the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii. Executive order of February 27, 1931, placed the administration of the government of the Virgin Islands under his supervision. Executive order of May 29, 1934, transferred to the Department of the Interior all functions of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, Department of War, pertaining to or connected with the administration of the government of Puerto Rico. Under the Reorganization Act of April 3, 1939, the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department and its functions were transferred to the Department of the Interior, effective July 1, 1939. Executive order of November 14, 1936, placed the administrative acts of the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration under the control and supervision of the Secretary of the Interior. Executive order of September 16, 1942, transferred the functions, powers, and duties of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, to the Secretary of the Interior. Executive order of April 17, 1934, transferred the functions of the United States Geographic Board to the Department of the Interior. The Secretary of the Interior is charged with the supervision of all matters pertaining to the Alaska Road Commission.

The Bureau of Mines was transferred from the Department of Commerce to the Department of the Interior by direction of the President in Executive order of February 22, 1934.

The act of April 26, 1937 (Public, No. 48, 75th Cong.), established in the Department of the Interior a National Bituminous Coal Commission to regulate interstate commerce in bituminous coal, and for other purposes. Pursuant to the Reorganization Act of April 3, 1939, and the President's Plan No. II, the functions of the Commission were transferred to the Secretary of the Interior to be administered as a Division, effective July 1, 1939. The Bituminous Coal Division was established as of that date.

By Executive Order No. 6979, dated February 28, 1935, and by Executive Order No. 7756, dated December 1, 1937, the President designated the Secretary of the Interior as his agent to execute all powers and functions vested in the President, except those vested in him by section 4, by the act of February 22, 1935 (49 Stat. 30), generally known as the Connally Act, as amended by the act approved June 14, 1937 (50 Stat. 257) and the act approved June 29, 1939 (53 Stat. 927). Pursuant thereto, the Secretary of the Interior exercises those powers and functions through the Petroleum Conservation Division.

The President designated the Secretary of the Interior as Petroleum Coordinator for War on May 28, 1941, which was changed to Petroleum Administrator for War on December 2, 1942, to act as Solid Fuels Coordinator for War on November 5, 1941, and as Coordinator of Fisheries on July 21, 1942.

He is a member also of the Smithsonian Institution under act of March 12, 1894 (28 Stat. 41) and chairman of the National Park Trust Fund Board. Executive order of June 10, 1933, transferred the functions and personnel of the following agencies to the Department of the Interior: Arlington Memorial Bridge Commission, Public Buildings Commission, Public Buildings and Public Parks of the National Capital, National Memorial Commission, Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway Commission, and the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

Pursuant to the Reorganization Act of April 3, 1939, and the President's Plan No. I, the Federal Board for Vocational Education was transferred with the Office of Education to the Federal Security Agency and the Branch of Buildings Management (public buildings) to the Federal Works Agency, both effective July 1, 1939.

Under the Reorganization Act and the President's Plan No. II the following agencies were transferred to the Department of the Interior effective July 1, 1939: Functions of National Bituminous Coal Commission and functions of Consumers' Counsel, Bureau of Insular Affairs from War Department, Bureau of Fisheries from Department of Commerce, Bureau of Biological Survey from Department of Agriculture, and Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission.

The Consumers' Counsel office was transferred from the Department by the act of April 11, 1941 (Public Law 34, 77th Congress), and established as an independent agency known as the Office of the Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel.

By authority of title I of the First War Powers Act of 1941, the President ordered that all of the functions, duties, and powers vested in the Council of National Defense by section 8 of the Federal Explosives Act of October 6, 1917 (40 Stat. 385), as amended by the act of December 26, 1941 (55 Stat. 863), be transferred to and vested in the Secretary of the Interior.

Secretary Ickes is a member of the following bodies:

National Forest Reservation Commission, member.
Migratory Bird Conservation Commission, chairman.
Smithsonian Institution, member.
Virgin Islands Co., chairman, board of directors.
United States Council of National Defense, member.
National Power Policy Committee, chairman.
Capital Auditorium Commission, chairman.
National Archives Council, member.
Board of Directors of Canal Zone Biological Area, member.
Liaison Committee on War Relocation, member.

UNDER SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The position of Under Secretary was established by the act of May 9, 1935 (49 Stat. 176, 177). He has general jurisdiction over all bureaus and divisions subject only to the Secretary. He is the general administrative Secretary of the Department, serves as budget officer for the Department, and has supervision over personnel and fiscal administration, and the Division of Territories and Island Possessions.

FIRST ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The First Assistant Secretary has a general supervision over matters concerning the (1) Bureau of Mines, (2) Geological Survey, (3) Bureau of Reclamation, (4) Bituminous Coal Division, and (5) Petroleum Conservation Division. He is authorized and directed by the Secretary of the Interior to perform the functions and duties and exercise the powers vested in the Secretary for those particular offices and bureaus. In the absence of the Secretary and the Under Secretary, the First Assistant Secretary will act as Secretary and perform such other duties as the Secretary may assign from time to time.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR

The Assistant Secretary has general supervision over all matters concerning the Office of Indian Affairs, General Land Office, Grazing Service, National Park Service, Office of Land Utilization, Fish and Wildlife Service, and the United States Board on Geographic Names; admission, disbarment, and restoration of attorneys and agents to practice before the Department and bureaus thereof.

The Assistant Secretary also has jurisdiction over matters of a miscellaneous character, such as the signing of contracts under the contingent and stationery appropriations, etc. Duties in connection with the affairs of other bureaus are assigned to him from time to time.

CHIEF CLERK

The Chief Clerk is charged with the enforcement of departmental regulations of a general nature and has administrative supervision over the buildings occupied by the Department; has control of expenditures for contingent, printing and binding, and other departmental appropriations; purchasing, duplicating, accounts, museum, telephones, dispensary, mail and files, and motor vehicle service; custodian of the seal of the Department; admissions of attorneys and agents to practice and disbarments from practice; is contact officer for the Department in matters relating to the Division of Disbursements, Treasury Department, the General Accounting Office, and the Office of Government Reports; signs such official mail as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, and handles various other miscellaneous matters of the Secretary's Office not otherwise assigned.

OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR

The Solicitor is the chief law officer of the Department. Responsible to him are an immediate staff of assistants and the chief legal officers of the various bureaus of the Department, together with their staffs.

The Solicitor is the chief legal adviser to the Secretary of the Interior and to other administrative officers of the Department. He has cognizance of all matters involving Executive orders, contracts, permits, leases and patents affecting the public lands and appurtenant waters of the United States or other public properties or affairs entrusted to the Department, all adjudications, affecting Indian estates and all ordinances of territories, insular possessions and Indian tribes. He reviews all regulations issued by the Department or by any of its bureaus. He drafts or advises in the drafting of all legislation sponsored by the Department or its bureaus and all reports on proposed legislation referred to the Department by the Congress or the President for report. He passes upon the title to lands acquired by the Department for national parks, public power projects, irrigation projects, Indian reservations and other purposes.

The Solicitor is in charge of all interests of the Department in litigation. He is charged with the defense of certain suits involving the legality of action by the Secretary of the Interior. In all other matters involving public lands, irrigation projects, power development, Indians and Indian property and the Territories and insular possessions of the United States, the office of the Solicitor examines evidence, prepares cases, drafts pleadings and briefs, and otherwise cooperates with the Department of Justice in the conduct of litigation.

The Solicitor of the Department renders formal opinions, at the request of the Secretary of the Interior, on important legal questions arising in the administration of the work of the Department. He considers and recommends the appropriate disposition of appeals from decisions of the General Land Office, the Grazing Service and other agencies of the Department charged with responsibility for quasi-judicial hearings, claims for damage to property of the United States in the custody of the Department, and claims against the Government for damage arising from operations of the Department. He conducts administrative hearings in other matters referred by the Secretary of the Interior.

COMMISSIONER OF THE GENERAL LAND OFFICE

The Commissioner of the General Land Office is charged with the survey, classification, management, protection, leasing, and disposition of the public lands; adjudication of various kinds of applications filed under the public land laws; adjustment of conflicting claims; granting of railroad and other rights-of-way and easements; issuance of patents for lands; furnishing of certified copies of land patents, plats, and other records. In national forests executes all laws relating to surveying, prospecting, locating, appropriating, entering, reconveying, or patenting of public lands and the granting of rights-of-way.

COMMISSIONER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has, under direction of the Secretary of the Interior, management of all Indian affairs and of all matters arising out of Indian relations. This includes the economic development and relief of the Indian, both tribally and as an individual; the organization of Indian tribes, including credit organizations; Indian education in boarding schools, day schools, and community centers operated by the Government, and in public schools and other nongovernmental institutions; the health, medical, and sanitation activities; the land program, involving land acquisition and adjustment, tribal enrollment, land sales, and contracts; forestry, involving forest management, fire protection, grazing; the furtherance of an agricultural extension program; irrigation, both construction and maintenance and operation; the construction and upkeep of buildings at field units; the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges on Indian lands; Indian emergency conservation work and other emergency activities; also health, education, and other activities in behalf of the natives of Alaska.

INDIAN ARTS AND CRAFTS BOARD

The Indian Arts and Crafts Board was created by the act of Congress approved August 27, 1935, and is composed of five members appointed by the Secretary of the Interior. Executive officers and other personnel are employed by the Board. The function of the Board is "to promote the economic welfare of the Indian tribes and the Indian wards of the Government through the development of Indian arts and crafts and the expansion of the market for the products of Indian art and craftsmanship." Broad powers are given the Board in the execution of this function, among which are the powers to engage in marketing and technical research, to engage in experimentation, to correlate activities of various governmental and private agencies in the field, to create Government trade-marks of genuineness and quality for Indian products, to establish standards and regulations for the use of such trade-marks, to license groups or individuals to use them, and to charge a fee for their use.

DIRECTOR OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

The organic act of the Geological Survey, approved on March 3, 1879 (20 Stat. 377), established the office of Director of the Geological Survey under the Interior Department. Under this act it is provided that the Director shall have the direction of the Geological Survey, the classification of the public lands, and the examination of the geological structure and the mineral resources and products of the national domain. In conformity with its organic act and later legislation the Geological Survey is engaged in the preparation and publication of reports upon the geology and mineral resources of the United States and Alaska, in the investigation of strategic and deficient minerals in Latin America, and in the chemical and physical research incident to this work; in the preparation, publication, and sale of topographic maps of the United States and its dependencies; in investigating and reporting upon water resources, both surface and underground; in classifying the public lands as to their mineral and power value and in supervising the technical phases of mineral leasing on lands in which the title to the mineral resources remains in the United States.

COMMISSIONER, BUREAU OF RECLAMATION

The Bureau of Reclamation was established as an agency of the Federal Government under the Department of the Interior following the passage of the Reclamation Act of June 17, 1902. This act provided for the "reclamation fund" from the sale of public lands "to be used in the examination and survey for and the construction and maintenance of irrigation works for the storage, diversion, and development of waters for the reclamation of arid and semiarid lands in the States and Territories * * *." As accretions from the sale of public lands diminished, the fund has been augmented by receipts from oil and mineral royalties and supplemented by direct appropriations from the General Treasury in the form of loans, which have been repaid.

Under subsequent legislation, the activities of the Bureau have been expanded to include in addition to irrigation the construction and operation of hydroelectric power plants to assure more complete utilization, through multiple-purpose projects, of the water resources of the areas west of the 100th meridian. These expanded activities are financed by appropriations from the General Treasury. Municipal, industrial, and military water supplies are also augmented by reclamation projects. Under the Boulder Canyon Project Act of 1928 the Bureau constructed Boulder Dam.

The Commissioner, under the supervision of the Secretary, is in administrative charge of all the activities of the Bureau of Reclamation, including preliminary surveys and investigations of proposed projects, the preparation of plans, the construction of irrigation works and multiple-purpose dams, power development, the administration of funds provided for reclamation, the operation and maintenance of completed projects, the settlement and development of project areas, repayments from irrigation districts and water users' associations of the cost of the construction works allocated to irrigation, and the return of the investment in power facilities from contractors for the purchase of electric energy. The principal field office of the Bureau is located at Denver, Colo., under the direction of the chief engineer. The general supervisor of operation and maintenance is also located in Denver.

The Bureau of Reclamation in 1943 is providing irrigation water for 4,000,000 acres of productive agricultural land in 15 Western States. These lands are extensive producers of food and fibers. In the authorized construction program, which has been retarded by the war, are projects which will increase the total area to be served to more than 12,000,000 acres. About 5,000,000 acres will be new land brought into cultivation by the Bureau under the program, and the remainder will be areas inadequately irrigated by other systems which require additional water supplies.

On March 15, 1942, the Bureau had in operation power plants on 19 projects with a combined capacity of 1,718,362 kilowatts of power, most of which are serving war industries. These projects in 1942 produced 7¼ billion kilowatt-hours of electric energy and the output in 1943 is estimated at 11½ billion kilowatt-hours. Scheduled for installation by June 1944, to meet urgent war needs, are 718,100 additional kilowatts which will bring the total capacity to 2,436,462 kilowatts. Under construction or authorized are projects which will bring the ultimate capacity to 4,793,262 kilowatts.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

Under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, administers the national park system in accordance with the act of August 25, 1916, as amended; the act of June 8, 1906; the Executive order of June 10, 1933; the act of August 21, 1935; and the act of June 23, 1936; formulates policies and directs protective work from standpoint of preservation and utilization and enjoyment by visitors; directs construction from engineering, architectural, and landscape viewpoints, including sanitation facilities; directs public interpretive service in natural sciences, history and archeology, and provides for museum developments; maintains the Executive mansion and grounds; and is responsible for the investigation of national park, monument, and historic site and military park projects. The Director is executive officer of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission and is a member of the National Park Trust Fund Board, the District of Columbia Zoning Commission, and of various other commissions and committees.

NATIONAL PARK TRUST FUND BOARD

The National Park Trust Fund Board was created by the act of July 10, 1935 (46 Stat. 477), which authorizes the Board to accept, receive, hold, and administer such gifts or bequests of personal property for the benefit of, or in connection with, the National Park Service, its activities or its service, as may be approved by the Board.

ADVISORY BOARD ON NATIONAL PARKS, HISTORIC SITES, BUILDINGS, AND MONUMENTS

The Advisory Board on National Parks, Historic Sites, Buildings, and Monuments was established by the Historic Sites Act of August 21, 1935 (45 Stat. 666). The act provides that it shall be the duty of such Board to advise on any matter regarding national parks and the administration of the Historic Sites Act submitted to it for consideration by the Secretary of the Interior. From time to time, it also may recommend policies to the Secretary pertaining to national parks and to the restoration, reconstruction, conservation, and general administration of historic and archeologic sites, buildings, and properties.

DIRECTOR OF THE BUREAU OF MINES

The Director of the Bureau of Mines is charged with the investigation of methods of mining, especially in relation to the safety of miners, the appliances best adapted to prevent accidents, and the possible improvement of conditions under which mining operations are carried on; the treatment of ores and other mineral substances; the use of explosives and electricity; the prevention of accidents; the prevention of waste; the improvements of method in the production of petroleum and natural gas; and other inquires and technological investigations pertinent to such industries. He has charge of tests and analyses of ores, coals, lignites, and other mineral fuel substances belonging to or for use of the United States; has charge of the collection of statistics on mineral resources and economic studies of metals and minerals produced or consumed in the United States and of statistical and other economic information pertaining to world production, distribution, and consumption of all mineral commodities; supervises all work relating to the production and conservation of helium; he has charge of issuance of licenses covering the manufacture, distribution, storage, use, or possession of all explosives and their ingredients. Under the provisions of section 7 (a) of the Strategic Materials Act, approved June 7, 1939 (53 Stat. 812), he is directed to investigate the extent and mode of occurrence, the development, mining, preparation, treatment, and utilization of ores and other mineral substances found in the United States or its Territories or insular possessions, which are essential to the common defense or the industrial needs of the United States and the quantities or grades of which are inadequate from known domestic sources, in order to develop domestic sources of supply, and to determine the extent and quality of deposits of such minerals, the most suitable methods of mining and beneficiating them, and the cost at which the minerals or metals may be produced. Under the provisions of the Coal Mine Inspection Act of May 7, 1941 (Public Law 49, 77th Cong.), he is authorized and empowered to make or cause to be made annual or necessary inspections and investigations in certain types of coal mines, for the purpose of obtaining information relative to health and safety conditions in such mines and of disseminating information concerning them with a view to reducing accident occurrence and ill health among those employed in coal mining.

GRAZING SERVICE

The Director of Grazing inaugurates and carries out plans and policies under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior for the conservation, development, and management of the Federal range (142,000,000 acres) and additional lands administered in cooperation with the Federal and State agencies and private individuals as required by the Taylor Grazing Act of June 28, 1934, as amended. Directs the classification of public lands in grazing districts for the purpose of determining their agricultural suitability and recommends their disposition under existing law. Directs a program of rehabilitation of the natural resources and stabilization of the livestock industry consistent with policies formulated in the public interest and in a manner designed to benefit and harmonize the viewpoints of interested associations, individuals, and agencies concerned with the use of the public range. Activities pertain principally to the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, and Wyoming, and are administered through 10 grazing regions, subdivided into 58 grazing districts. State regions are administered by regional graziers and each grazing district is under the supervision of a district grazier who has advice and counsel of an advisory board of local stockmen. The Director is charged with the protection of the Federal range and the control of 22,000 permits involving range use by 12,000,000 livestock. Inaugurates cooperative agreements with

State and Federal agencies, local associations, societies, groups, and individuals, and directs the analytical study of the range to determine carrying capacities and preserve and improve the water, soil, forage, wildlife, and other resources, and preserve antiquities, in the furtherance of the above program.

BITUMINOUS COAL DIVISION

The Bituminous Coal Division under the charge of a director administers the provisions of the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937 (except that the power to appoint and fix the compensation of personnel and to make contracts for personal services is exercised by the office of the Secretary of the Interior). The purposes of the act are to conserve the bituminous coal resources of the United States; to stabilize the bituminous coal mining industry; to promote interstate commerce in bituminous coal; to promulgate a bituminous coal code; and to study and report upon the problems confronting the bituminous coal industry.

As provided by the act, a bituminous coal code was promulgated on June 21, 1937. It contains provisions dealing with fair trade practices in the industry and also empowers the Division to establish minimum and maximum prices for all bituminous coals moving in commerce subject to the act. Further authority is conferred upon the Division to prescribe due and reasonable discounts to be made by code members to purchasers of coal for resale under conditions set forth in the act. To provide statistical data required for administration of the law, the Division is directed to establish for each district a statistical bureau to receive reports from producers and make necessary compilations therefrom. Section 9 (a) of the act sets forth the public policy of the United States on employer-employee relations in the bituminous coal industry and the Division is authorized to hold hearings on complaints for the purpose of determining whether coal producers are complying with the provisions of the section and the policy of the act, and, upon the finding of noncompliance, is directed to proceed to secure cancellation of contracts with the United States or any of its agencies involving coal from mines of offending producers.

In addition to authority to require producers of coal to furnish information needed in the administration of the act, the Division is empowered to require producers to maintain uniform standards of accounting and is also directed to make detailed studies of various phases of the bituminous coal industry. Voluntary cooperative associations formed by coal producers for the marketing of coal, commonly known as marketing agencies, are brought under the jurisdiction of the Division and are required to be organized and to function in accordance with regulations for which definite standards are laid down in the act.

The Division is vested with authority to file complaints with the Interstate Commerce Commission with respect to rates, charges, tariffs, and practices relating to the transportation of coal, to prosecute the same, and to intervene in any proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission affecting the interests of the bituminous coal industry.

The Bituminous Coal Act of 1937 by its terms was limited in operation to a period of 4 years from April 26, 1937, the date of its enactment. However, by Public Law No. 34, Seventy-seventh Congress, First Session, approved April 11, 1941, the effectiveness of the provisions of the act was extended 2 years to April 26, 1943.

FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE

The functions of the Fish and Wildlife Service are concerned with the conservation of the Nation's natural resources in the field of vertebrate wildlife, including the land and water mammals and birds and the fishes, reptiles, and amphibians, and also shellfishes and crustaceans. Research is undertaken to learn the habits, needs, and economic utilization of the various forms and the results are published and otherwise made available for practical application in fishery and wildlife management, including preservation and restoration in natural habitat; propagation, as of birds, fur animals, and fishes, under controlled conditions; demonstrations and cooperation in local suppression of injurious species; and protection and restoration by conservation-law administration.

The 12 divisions of this agency are concerned with (1) business administration; (2) wildlife research; (3) fishery biology; (4) Federal aid to States in wildlife restoration; (5) land acquisitions; (6) wildlife-refuge administration and management; (7) game management and conservation-law enforcement; (8) fishery industries; (9) fish culture: (10) Alaska fisheries; (11) predator and rodent control; and (12) public relations, in the dissemination of information developed through research and management and to facilitate law enforcement by acquainting the public with the nature and need of regulatory action. Most of the field work other than research is conducted throughout the United States and Alaska by a regional organization under six regional directors.

The Fish and Wildlife Service was formed on June 30, 1940, by consolidation of the former Bureaus of Fisheries and Biological Survey, both of which were transferred to the Department of the Interior on July 1, 1939—the Bureau of Fisheries, which was established in 1871, from the Department of Commerce; and the Biological Survey, established in 1885, from the Department of Agriculture. Both bureaus were originally established for research purposes, and in the course of years both had been charged with work associated with the management of the resources in their respective fields and with conservation-law enforcement.

Laws administered by the consolidated agency include the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, the Migratory Bird Conservation Act, and the Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act, which were passed to carry out treaty obligations with Canada and Mexico; the Bald Eagle Act; laws regulating interstate transportation of black bass, prohibiting illegal shipments in interstate commerce of bodies or parts of bodies of wild animals, and regulating importations of foreign species of wild birds and mammals; the Federal Aid to Wildlife Restoration Act; the Fisheries Cooperative Marketing Act; laws for the conservation under international agreements of sea otters, fur seals, walruses, and sea lions, and part of the Whaling Treaty Act; and laws for the maintenance of the fish, fur, and game resources of Alaska, and for the protection of wildlife and property on national wildlife refuges.

The fishery functions of the Service involve the promotion of trade and commerce in fishery products, as well as the conservation of fishery resources. This includes the inquiry into the causes of fluctuations in abundance of food fishes in the lakes, rivers, and coastal waters of the United States, the development of methods of husbanding these resources, including improvements in methods of fish culture and investigation of important fisheries of the Atlantic, Gulf, and Pacific coasts, with a view to determining the condition of these resources; the propagation and distribution of food fishes; the rescuing of fishes from overflowed lands and the distribution of such fishes to suitable waters; the study of the methods of the fisheries and of the preservation, utilization, and merchandising of fishery products; the collection and compilation of statistics of the fisheries; and the protection and conservation of the salmon and other fisheries of Alaska.

The Service is responsible for the administration of the fur-seal herd of the Pribilof Islands and the care of the natives of these islands. Through the agency of the Alaska Game Commission it also regulates hunting and trapping in the Territory, for the protection of big-game and fur mammals and of game and other birds.

THE ALASKA RAILROAD

The Alaskan Engineering Commission was created under the act of March 12, 1914, which empowered, authorized, and directed the President to locate, construct, operate, or lease a railroad, or railroads, to connect one or more of the open harbors on the southern coast of Alaska with the navigable waters in the interior, and a coal field or fields, and agricultural lands. Authority was also granted to purchase existing railroads, to construct, maintain, and operate telegraph and telephone lines, and to make reservations of public lands in Alaska necessary for the purposes of the railroad.

For the execution of this work a commission of three engineers was appointed by the President to make the necessary surveys. They were directed to report to the Secretary of the Interior, under whom the President placed the general administration of the work. After the completion of the preliminary surveys, the President, by Executive order, selected the route for the railway from the coast to the interior. Construction of the railway was begun in 1915 under the general supervision of the Secretary of the Interior.

The railroad was completed in the spring of 1923 and is now under operation. By Executive order of June 8, 1923, the President placed the operation of the railroad under the Secretary of the Interior, and by order of the Secretary of the Interior of August 15, 1923, the designation of the Alaskan Engineering Commission was changed to The Alaska Railroad, and a general manager was appointed in October of 1923, whose headquarters are at Anchorage, Alaska, with a purchasing office at Seattle, Wash., and a freight, passenger, and general business office at Suite 1125 Merchandise Mart, Chicago, Ill. Reports and miscellaneous correspondence in relation to the railroad are handled in the Division of Territories and Island Possessions.

ALASKA ROAD COMMISSION

The Board of Road Commissioners in Alaska was created by the act of Congress approved January 27, 1905 (sec. 2), amended by the act approved May 14, 1906. By act approved June 30, 1932, the duties of the board were transferred from the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War to the Secretary of the Interior. Funds for the work are derived from a tax fund collected in Alaska and from special appropriations made by Congress.

The board is charged by law with the construction, repair, and maintenance of roads, tramways, ferries, bridges, and trails in the Territory of Alaska.

Under the act of June 30, 1921, there was authorized to be received from the Territory of Alaska or other source, funds contributed for the construction, repair, and maintenance of roads, bridges, trails, and related works, said funds to be deposited in the United States Treasury and expended in accordance with the purpose for which they were contributed.

OFFICE OF SOLID FUELS COORDINATOR FOR WAR

The Office of Solid Fuels Coordinator for War was created to carry out the functions and duties delegated by the President's letter of November 5, 1941, designating the Secretary of the Interior as the Coordinator. It ascertains wartime requirements of coal, coke, and other solid fuels, and the adequacy of the means of meeting them. It recommends to appropriate Government agencies measures necessary to the maintenance of an adequate supply at reasonable prices. Its other responsibilities include carrying on programs to promote economy and efficiency in the development, production, distribution, utilization, transportation, and handling of solid fuels, and to facilitate the operation of the solid fuels industries so as to meet wartime requirements. Also, it makes recommendations to the appropriate Government agency with respect to the material, equipment, and supplies required by industry in producing, transporting, and distributing solid fuels. Although it is a separate agency, the Solid Fuels Office makes extensive use of the facilities of the Bituminous Coal Division and the Bureau of Mines in carrying out its responsibilities.

OFFICE OF THE COORDINATOR OF FISHERIES

The Office of the Coordinator of Fisheries was created to carry out the functions and duties delegated by the President in Executive Order 9204, dated July 21, 1942. The President designated the Secretary of the Interior as Coordinator of Fisheries and directed that the Secretary of the Interior designate such part or parts of the Fish and Wildlife Service of the Department of the Interior as he may determine, as the Office of the Coordinator of Fisheries to "Maintain close liaison with appropriate Federal, interstate, State, and local agencies, and with fishery and allied industries, and obtain currently from them information for the use of appropriate Federal agencies relative to the conservation, production processing, packing, transportation, marketing, and consumption of fish and other fishery products, and to the construction, procurement, conversion, substitution, replacement, and repair of fishery industry facilities." and to "Make specific recommendations to appropriate Federal, interstate, State, and local agencies, and to fishery and allied industries, for the purpose of encouraging coordination of effort and maximum utilization of their services and facilities, all with a view toward insuring an adequate and sustained production and supply to meet the requirements for fish and other fishery products as determined by appropriate Federal war agencies."

Pursuant to the authority vested in him by Executive Order 9280, dated December 5, 1942, the Secretary of Agriculture issued Food Directive 2 on February 8, 1943, delegating to the Secretary of the Interior responsibility for the conduct of those portions of the war food program concerned with the production and processing of fishery commodities. These functions are carried out by the Office of the Coordinator of Fisheries.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

The Department of Agriculture is charged by the law which created it with acquiring and diffusing among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with agriculture, in the most general and comprehensive sense of the term. For that purpose it conducts a comprehensive research and educational program. It is also required to administer many other Federal laws which relate to marketing and distribution of agricultural products, the regulation of interstate commerce in food, fiber, and related products, the protection and management of the national forests, farm credit, agricultural adjustment, conservation and land use, flood control, crop insurance, farm tenancy and rural rehabilitation, rural electrification, the purchase of "lend-lease" food and surplus agricultural products, and other phases of agriculture.

All programs administered by the Department are now concentrated on giving assistance to farmers and other groups in carrying on their parts in the Nation's war program. To focus the Department's entire resources on the war program, the Secretary has constituted a Department War Board in Washington. Its members are the eight Administrators who report directly to the Secretary, and the heads of the Office for Agricultural War Relations, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, and the Extension Service. The War Board meets regularly with the Secretary. Decisions taken by the Secretary in consultation with the War Board are carried out through coordinated action of the Department's agencies in the field. This coordination is attained through State and county United States Department of Agriculture war boards composed of field officers concerned with the action programs.

The Secretary of Agriculture exercises general supervision and control over the affairs of the Department, and formulates and establishes general policies. His general administrative staff consists of a small number of administrative assistants, the Under Secretary, the Assistant Secretary, and the offices of Agricultural War Relations, Land Use Coordination, Foreign Agricultural Relations, Budget and Finance, Personnel, Solicitor, Information, Plant and Operations, the Extension Service, the Library, and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The Administrative Council aids the Secretary in over-all coordination and management. An assistant to the Secretary is Chairman, and the other members are the Directors of Finance, Personnel, and Information, the Land Use Coordinator, and the Chief of the Office of Plant and Operations.

OFFICE OF LAND USE COORDINATION

The Office of Land Use Coordination is a staff unit in the Office of the Secretary.

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURAL ECONOMICS

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics is the central economic, social, statistical, and research agency of the Department. Through the cooperation of thousands of voluntary crop and market reporters, it gathers and analyzes data on the Nation's crops and livestock. It issues estimates on acreage, yield, production, and sales of more than 100 crops; on numbers and probable marketings of livestock; milk and egg production and consumption; prices paid and received by farmers; wages and employment of farm labor; and data on movements, utilization, and stocks of various agricultural commodities.

The Bureau is also the Department's research agency in agricultural economics and rural sociology. It conducts research in farm management and practice, farm finance, insurance, and taxation, land use and values, farm population and rural welfare, marketing and transportation, and the adjustments in production required by probable future demand for farm products. Under the special conditions created by the war and in anticipation of difficult post-war problems, the Bureau has curtailed its work in some of these fields but has expanded it in others, notably those of production to meet needed goals, farm price analysis, and farm labor.

On the basis of its accumulated data and continuing research, the Bureau outlines and develops programs for broad departmental action. In this work, the Bureau cooperates with other agencies of the Department in unifying general programs for production—adjustment, conservation, rural rehabilitation, farm tenancy, marketing, and other authorized activities.

OFFICE FOR AGRICULTURAL WAR RELATIONS

Provides a staff for the Food Advisory Committee which was established pursuant to Executive Order 9280 of December 5, 1942, to advise and assist the Secretary of Agriculture in carrying out his responsibilities in connection with the Nation's wartime food program.

Receives recommendations made by the Combined Food Board to the Government of the United States and arranges for the presentation of such recommendations to the Secretary of Agriculture and the Food Advisory Committee for consideration and action. Transmits to the Combined Food Board advice of action taken.

Supervises the relationships among agencies of the Department and between the Department and the War Production Board with respect to the requirements of the Department for critical materials. Represents the Department (or arranges for such representation) on committees of the War Production Board which are concerned with critical material control plans.

Facilitates the coordination of war work carried on by the various bureaus within the Department of Agriculture. Provides staff assistance to the Secretary and his immediate office in obtaining reports and analyses of problems and policies involved in the war work of the Department.

OFFICE OF BUDGET AND FINANCE

The Office of Budget and Finance exercises general direction and supervision of budgetary and financial affairs of the Department, including acquisition and distribution of funds, accounting, fiscal management, purchasing, warehousing, and related activities; formulates and promulgates departmental budgetary and financial policies and, in cooperation with staff and program agencies, develops improvements in management and operation of departmental activities; acts as liaison office on budgetary, fiscal, and procurement matters with Budget Bureau, General Accounting Office, the Congressional Committees on Appropriations, the Treasury Department including the Procurement Division, and other agencies.

OFFICE OF FOREIGN AGRICULTURAL RELATIONS

The Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations is responsible for the collection and analysis of information on all phases of foreign agricultural production, consumption, and trade and for the dissemination of this information. This includes studies of the food and agricultural raw materials requirements of Axis-occupied countries preparatory to supplying their needs as and when they are liberated. It also includes analyses of economic vulnerability of enemy countries from the standpoint of food and agricultural raw materials production and supplies.

The Office coordinates the relations of the Department of Agriculture with respect to foreign trade and allied problems and policies with the Department of State and other departments and agencies of the Government and with foreign governments and private agencies. In that connection it acts in an advisory capacity to the Secretary of Agriculture on policy matters with respect to foreign relations generally. It also represents the Department in discussions with representatives of allied or friendly foreign governments on methods of handling agricultural surpluses and directs the Department's program for the development of strategic and complementary agricultural products in Latin America such as rubber, fibers, vegetable oils, insecticides, etc.

The Office provides the United States staff of the Combined Food Board as well as general administrative services for that Board. This staff maintains close liaison with representatives of other United Nations in respect to problems concerning the production and transportation of foodstuffs including the allocation of supplies available to the United Nations in the best interests of the war effort.

OFFICE OF INFORMATION

The Office of Information supervises the expenditure of the appropriations for printing and binding for the Department; supervises all editing, illustrating, printing, and distribution of publications; and maintains photographic and duplicating services for the various bureaus of the Department. The Office prepares special Department reports and serves as a departmental clearinghouse for information prepared for the press as a result of the research, regulatory, conservation, service, and action programs of the Department; it correlates information on the results of specialized work in diverse lines, and presents facts in forms most practical for use by farmers and the general public. The Office also furnishes daily, through radio stations in all parts of the United States, authentic information of practical use to farmers and others concerning the discoveries made by the Department and the farm practices recommended by it; and answers by radio questions in all fields of agriculture and home economics. The Office also is responsible for (1) informing the Secretary on the total information operation of the Department in the field; and (2) for arranging in the field and in cooperation with the information officers of the Department's agencies and the State agricultural extension services, for preparation and distribution of information materials which will enable citizens to make most effective use of combinations of departmental services. The Office is responsible, too, for the preparation, display, and distribution of Department exhibits and motion pictures.

OFFICE OF PERSONNEL

The Office of Personnel has primary responsibility for the personnel program of the Department as a whole. It maintains general direction and supervision of organization, position, classification, recruitment, placement, training, safety, health, discipline, and related matters. The Office represents the Department in its relations with the Civil Service Commission and, where personnel matters are concerned, with other agencies. It is responsible for integrating the personnel needs with the various technical programs of the Department.

LIBRARY

The Department library contains more than 500,000 volumes on agriculture and the related sciences, technology, and economics, and receives currently more than 11,000 periodical and serial publications.

The dictionary card catalog of the library, containing more than a million cards, is a record of the book resources of the whole Department. It is supplemented by several extensive special indexes. These together form the most comprehensive bibliography of agriculture and the related sciences available in the United States. A Bibliography of Agriculture in mimeographed form is issued monthly by the library. This publication is in six sections and covers agricultural economics and rural sociology, agricultural engineering, entomology, plant science, forestry, and food processing and distribution. Miscellaneous bibliographies on special subjects are issued from time to time.

OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR

The Office of the Solicitor is the law office of the Department. The law requires that "the legal work of the Department of Agriculture shall be performed under the supervision and direction of the Solicitor" (5 U. S. C., sec., 518).

The Solicitor and the attorneys of his office advise the Secretary and other administrative officials on legal problems in connection with Department activities. They assist in the preparation of proposed legislative bills, administrative rules and regulations, orders, and proclamations. They provide the Secretary and other officials of the Department with legal opinions relative to the application of statutes, Executive orders, and administrative rules and regulations.

The Solicitor's Office also takes part in drafting, examining, and construing contracts, deeds, mortgages, leases, and other documents. It approves the organization of cooperative associations, soil conservation districts, and similar instrumentalities, and assists in determining their eligibility for participation in Department programs.

Other activities of the Office include the examination of evidence to determine whether there have been violations of acts administered by the Department. In proper cases, the Solicitor recommends prosecution to the Attorney General. Pleadings and briefs in civil and criminal cases involving the Department and laws administered by it are prepared by the Office, which cooperates with the Department of Justice in handling such litigation in the lower and appellate courts.

The Solicitor's Office represents the Department as counsel at hearings before the Secretary. The Office handles contacts on legal matters with other State and Federal governmental agencies. It conducts administrative hearings in reparation and similar proceedings, and issues tentative findings, conclusions, and orders with respect thereto, under the various acts administered by the Department.

The Office of the Solicitor also prosecutes, for employees of the Department, applications for patents on inventions which are to be used in departmental work.

It examines the titles to lands authorized for purchase by the Department or on which loans may be made by the Department. The Office considers and recommends the appropriate disposition of claims for damage to property of the United States in the custody of the Department and of claims against the Government for damage arising from operations of the Department.

OFFICE OF C. C. C. ACTIVITIES

The Office of C. C. C. Activities has general Department-wide responsibility for the administration of C. C. C. programs carried on by the several bureaus, including the coordination of these activities into a unified program; general oversight of C. C. C. matters pertaining to finance, budget, equipment, personnel, location of camps, etc.; and responsibility for the coordination and integration of C. C. C. activities with other programs of the Department. The Chief of the Office of C. C. C. Activities is also designated as the Secretary's representative on the Advisory Council of the Director of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

OFFICE OF PLANT AND OPERATIONS

The Office of Plant and Operations is responsible for the conservation and utilization of equipment and relationships with the Bureau of the Budget and the Procurement Division of the Treasury Department on matters pertaining thereto; departmental representation on the technical operational services of topographic and planimetric mapping operations and liaison with the Bureau of the Budget on map production methods, costs and operations, and with the War and Navy Departments on the classification of aerial photography; the development of standard specifications where engineering principles are involved and the deciding of all engineering questions of controversial character in connection with awards of contracts; housing of departmental activities; communications services; administrative service functions for the Office of the Secretary; central storeroom and supply service, and motor transport service.

AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH ADMINISTRATION

The Administrator of Agricultural Research is responsible for the direction and integration of activities conducted by the Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry, the Bureau of Animal Industry, the Bureau of Dairy Industry, the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, the Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics, the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils, and Agricultural Engineering, the Office of Experiment Stations, and the Beltsville Research Center. The Administration was created by order of the Secretary of Agriculture on February 25, 1942, pursuant to Executive Order No. 9069, to promote economy and efficiency and to concentrate the Department's scientific work on problems that are most vital to the production and utilization of agricultural commodities.

Functions of agencies of the Agricultural Research Administration:

BUREAU OF AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL CHEMISTRY

The Bureau of Agricultural and Industrial Chemistry is a research organization engaged in investigations and experiments in the fields of chemistry, physics, and other sciences with the object of improving agriculture and developing new and wider industrial uses for agricultural products.

The Bureau is engaged in investigations concerning the technology, manufacture, utilization, and preservation, including freezing, of agricultural products and byproducts. Its scientists conduct biological, chemical, physical, microscopical, and technological investigations of foods, feeds, drugs, and substances used in the manufacture thereof, including studies of their physiological effects on the human organism. They perform experiments on the utilization of agricultural raw materials for industrial purposes and on the development of improved processes in the production of rosin and turpentine.

The four Regional Laboratories for Research on Utilization of Farm Products are engaged on studies of the principal surplus crops in each of the four major farm producing areas of the country for the purpose of developing new and wider industrial uses thereof. The Northern Regional Research Laboratory, located in Peoria, Ill., is engaged on studies of corn, wheat, and agricultural wastes; the Southern Regional Research Laboratory at New Orleans, on studies of cotton, peanuts, and sweetpotatoes; the Eastern Regional Research Laboratory at Wyndmoor, Pa., near Philadelphia, on studies of tobacco, apples, potatoes, milk products, vegetables, hides, skins, tanning materials and leather, and animal fats and oils, and the Western Regional Research Laboratory at Albany, Calif., near San Francisco, on studies of fruits, vegetables, potatoes, wheat, alfalfa, and poultry products and byproducts.

BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY

The Bureau of Animal Industry is primarily concerned with the protection and development of the livestock industry of the United States. It conducts scientific investigations of the causes, prevention, and treatment of diseases of domestic animals; investigates the existence of communicable diseases of such animals, and aids in their control or eradication; and carries on investigations and experiments in the feeding and breeding of animals, including poultry, and the improvement of their products. It also is charged with the administration of the Diseased Animal Transportation Act, and the Virus-Serum-Toxin Act.

BUREAU OF DAIRY INDUSTRY

The Bureau of Dairy Industry conducts research in the breeding, feeding, and management of dairy cattle to improve the milk-producing efficiency of dairy cows. It conducts investigations of the energy requirements of rations of dairy cattle, the effect of different levels of protein upon milk yield and composition, the vitamin A requirements of dairy cattle for growth and for normal production and reproduction, and the effect of various levels of vitamin A on the nutritive value of milk. It cooperates with the State dairy extension services in the establishment of improved dairy practices through the operation of dairy-herd-improvement associations, and it maintains and analyzes production records of all cows in dairy-herd-improvement association herds for the purpose of identifying dairy sires and determining their breeding value.

The Bureau conducts research to develop sanitary and economical methods of producing and handling milk. It studies the bacteriology and chemistry of milk and its products to improve present methods and to develop new methods of manufacturing, transporting, and storing milk products. It has supervision of the sanitary inspection of renovated-butter factories.

BUREAU OF ENTOMOLOGY AND PLANT QUARANTINE

The Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine carries on investigations on insects, gives advice on how to control or use them, cooperates with State and local agencies to control and prevent the spread of injurious insects and plant diseases, advises the Secretary of Agriculture on matters relating to plant quarantines, and is responsible for the enforcement of Federal plant quarantines and regulatory orders to prevent the introduction into or spread within the United States of injurious insect pests and plant diseases.

The research it does on insects includes studies on their classification, anatomy, physiology, habits, and responses under normal and artificial conditions. The investigations are conducted to develop information on how insects which are injurious to agriculture, forestry, animals, or annoy or injure man or destroy his possessions may be eliminated or controlled. This involves research on chemicals or other substances that may be used to prevent, destroy, attract, repel, or mitigate the severity of attacks of insects which infest vegetation, attack or annoy animals, or may be present in households or any environment whatsoever, including the study of problems relating to the composition, action, and application of such materials and the development of methods for their manufacture and use. Investigations are made on diseases and natural enemies of insects to determine ways of utilizing those which may aid in the control of injurious insect pests. Studies are made on the culture and use of honeybees and of beekeeping practices.

Under general and special authorization and in cooperation with State and local agencies, the Bureau carries on operations to eradicate, suppress, or control incipient outbreaks of insect pests and plant diseases, including those which may have gained a more or less limited foothold within the United States. It cooperates with State and local agencies in combating insects or plant diseases which occur in emergency outbreaks which unless controlled would cause extreme losses over wide areas within their normal distribution. It cooperates with agencies of the Federal Government responsible for the management of lands under control of the United States in operations to combat insects and plant pests.

To prevent the entry or spread within the United States of injurious plant pests and diseases it enforces quarantines and restrictive orders, issued under authority provided in various acts of Congress, which prohibit or regulate the importation or interstate movement of injurious insects and of plants and plant products that may introduce or spread plant pests or diseases new to or not widely prevalent within the United States. To carry out this work it regulates and inspects the entry into the United States of railway cars and other vehicles, freight, express, and baggage from Mexico, and when necessary cleans or disinfects them. In compliance with plant-quarantine regulations it inspects at ports of entry plants and plant products that may be brought to the United States.

The Bureau inspects plants and plant products offered for export and certifies to shippers and interested parties such products in accordance with the sanitary requirements of the country to which they may be exported.

BUREAU OF HUMAN NUTRITION AND HOME ECONOMICS

The Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics conducts researches to find more effective methods of using food, fiber, and other goods and services essential to everyday living. During wartime the Bureau's work is geared to national production and conservation programs, and deals mainly with research data required by Government agencies and with scientific information to aid civilians in wartime living adjustments.

Research of the Bureau falls into several broad fields: (1) Foods and nutrition—Facts needed by planning agencies, homemakers, dietitians, and nutrition workers are determined and assembled through studies of food values, of the nutritive needs of the human body, and of methods of food preparation and preservation, including the effect of such methods on the nutritive value of foods. (2) Family economics—Research is conducted to obtain basic information on family buying habits and needs for consumer goods, and the data are used in national planning, also in developing diet plans and other aids to effective use of family income. (3) Textiles and clothing—Information is developed to make possible more effective use of textile fibers for clothing and household purposes, and to help families conserve strategic materials in wartime. (4) Housing and household equipment—These studies form the basis for publications to aid consumers in intelligent buying, operating, and conserving of household equipment.

Research results are made available through technical and popular publications and visual educational material. The Bureau works closely with the field organizations of the Department, the Office of Education, and the war agencies in their programs of educating homemakers toward better nutrition and ways of spending and otherwise using their resources more effectively for their well-being and for the Nation's good.

BUREAU OF PLANT INDUSTRY

The activities of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering include investigation of soils, fertilizers, plants, principally those of economic importance, and engineering problems concerned with handling soils and plants.

Soils investigations center around the relationship between the soil and crops that grow in it. This involves a study of soils from the standpoint of their origin and their classification into main groups, of which there are more than 8,000 types. The job of classifying all of the agricultural soils of the United States—done in cooperation with State agricultural experiment stations—is now about half completed and the work is being pushed as fast as possible.

In addition the work with soils includes studies of their basic physical and chemical properties, studies of the microscopic plant and animal life in the soil and its effect on crops, methods of cultivation, crop rotations, and studies of materials that are added to the soil to make it more productive. The latter may include certain crops that are grown to be plowed into the soil, animal manure, lime, or commercial fertilizers. The fertilizer investigations also seek more efficient methods of manufacture and more effective ways of using these materials.

Research with plants is concerned chiefly with reducing the hazards of production and improving the quality of all crops. One of the principal ways of doing this is by breeding new strains or varieties that are resistant to diseases, insects, heat, drought, or cold. Representatives of the Bureau have visited most foreign countries and brought back thousands of plants that have been useful here, either in their original form or as breeding material.

Other important work with plants includes studies of weed control and of methods of planting, harvesting, transportation, and storage of crop plants. Efforts to control diseases involve studies of organisms that cause the disease, their life histories, and a knowledge of how they are spread to new territory. With this information it is often possible to work out some practical control measure such as seed treatment, spraying, or dusting.

Research on agricultural engineering includes problems concerned with the handling of soils for growing crops, problems dealing with sowing, cultivating, harvesting, storing, and otherwise handling plants and plant products, together with other engineering problems of direct concern to agriculture.

The regulatory activities of the Bureau are limited to the control of quality of plant and soil inoculants.

In addition to the experimental activities of the Bureau at the United States horticultural station at the Beltsville Research Center, the Bureau operates field stations or laboratories in practically all the major cropping regions of the United States, a majority of its activities being in direct cooperation with the State agricultural experiment stations.

The development of the National Arboretum was established under the act of March 4, 1927 (Public, No. 799, 69th Cong.), and funds for its operation are appropriated through the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils and Agricultural Engineering. Pursuant to authority contained in this act, the Secretary of Agriculture created the Advisory Council of the National Arboretum. The council makes recommendations concerning the establishment and maintenance of the National Arboretum for purposes of research and education regarding tree and plant life.

OFFICE OF EXPERIMENT STATIONS

The Office of Experiment Stations administers the funds for research in agriculture and rural life made available to the experiment stations of the States, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico through annual congressional appropriations under the provisions of the Hatch, Adams, and Purnell Acts, title I of the Bankhead-Jones Act of June 30, 1935, and the supplementary acts. In administering these Federal grants the Office evaluates and approves new and revised research proposals, reviews and approves annual programs and budget allotments, and examines, in the field, the work and expenditures. An annual report on the work and expenditures of the stations is published, as required by law. The general administrative direction and supervision of the experiment station of the Department of Agriculture in Puerto Rico is a responsibility of the Office.

The Office promotes cooperation in the planning and coordination of research among the experiment stations, and between the stations and the Department through advisory relationships and supervisory activities which include the examination and approval of formal memoranda of understanding covering cooperative research. It collects and disseminates information designed to enhance the productiveness and soundness of agricultural research programs including the publication of Experiment Station Record which reviews current progress and results of the research of the experiment stations and other agencies.

BELTSVILLE RESEARCH CENTER

The administrative organization of the Beltsville Research Center provides for the general supervision of the entire plant and the development and operation of the common facilities required by the organizations of the Department engaged in fundamental agricultural research. The reservation comprises an area of approximately 11,400 acres on which scientific, research, and experimental activities are conducted by 9 bureaus of the Department and by several other governmental agencies.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

The Farm Credit Administration provides a coordinated credit system which makes available to farmers and stockmen and their cooperative organizations both long-term and short-term credit. It was created by an Executive order effective May 27, 1933, which provided for the consolidation within this one organization of the powers and functions of all Federal agencies dealing primarily with agricultural credit. In July 1939 the Farm Credit Administration became a part of the Department of Agriculture.

The United States is divided into 12 Farm Credit districts. In each district are four major credit units located in one central office. These are:

1. A Federal land bank which makes long-term mortgage loans through local national farm loan associations. Several thousand of these associations serve all parts of the Nation.

2. A production credit corporation which has partly capitalized and which supervises local production credit associations. Approximately 530 production credit associations are located at convenient points throughout the United States.

3. A district bank for cooperatives which makes loans to farmer cooperatives.

4. A Federal intermediate credit bank which acts as a bank of discount in supplying short-term funds required by production credit associations, bank for cooperatives, and other financial institutions for loans to farmers and farmers' cooperatives.

Each unit of the Farm Credit Administration serves a distinct purpose. The local associations make and service loans, the district institutions supervise and provide funds, and the Kansas City office supervises and coordinates the work of the entire system. A Central Bank for Cooperatives, located in Kansas City, Mo., and an office in Washington, D. C., makes loans to large regional or national cooperatives and assists district banks for cooperatives in handling large loans. The Cooperative Research and Service Division of the Farm Credit Administration located in Washington, D. C., conducts research studies and service activities relating to problems of farmers' cooperatives.

Some additional functions are performed by the Farm Credit Administration. Early in 1943 the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of Washington, D. C. (at Kansas City, Mo.), which operates under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration, was authorized to finance the making of RACC loans through USDA County War Boards to supplement other sources of farm credit in order to assure maximum wartime production. Other activities include the making of emergency crop and feed loans from funds appropriated by Congress, the liquidation of the joint stock land banks, and the making of Land Bank Commissioner loans from funds made available by the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

FOREST SERVICE

Congress has designated the Forest Service as the agency of the Federal Government specifically responsible for protecting, developing, and administering certain public lands and their living resources. The job of the Forest Service also has to do with forest land in private ownership, for Congress has authorized it to help States and farm, industrial, and other owners to protect and develop such of their lands as are more valuable in forest growth than as plowland.

Broadly, responsibilities of the Forest Service are: (1) To initiate and apply, locally and nationally, action programs in the interest of public welfare and help with action programs initiated by county, State, and Federal agencies; (2) to protect, develop, and administer in the public interest the national-forest system and its resources, products, values, and services; (3) to conduct research in problems involving protection, development, management, renewal, and continuous use of all resources, products, values, and services of forest lands; (4) to make research and administrative findings and results available to individuals, industries, and public and private agencies generally.

The national-forest system comprises 178,340,157 acres of Government land. On these public properties forestry methods are applied in growing and harvesting timber. Grazing by livestock and big game is scientifically regulated. Sustained and, where possible, increased yields of timber, forage, and wildlife are obtained. Watersheds are protected for water used in the country and in cities for domestic, agricultural, and industrial purposes. Simple, democratic, and inexpensive forms of recreation are encouraged. Under management to assure replacement, provision is also made for many other forms of land and resource use.

In research, in national-forest administration, and in initiating and applying action programs the Forest Service works in close cooperation with other branches and bureaus of the Department; is guided by the Department's basic purpose of establishing and maintaining such sound land-and-resource management and use as will help build and maintain communities and local and national social and economic structures.

Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration.—The hurricane of September 1938 throughout the New England area brought unprecedented disaster to the forests and woodlands of that region, without regard to boundaries or ownership. In the neighborhood of 2 billion feet of standing timber was blown down. The Northeastern Timber Salvage Administration, an operating division of Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation officially administered by the Forest Service, purchased a substantial portion of this wind-thrown timber; stored it in water or otherwise and is sawing it into lumber or other forms of fabrication, and marketing the timber products. The program is expected to be completed by the end of 1943.

Emergency Rubber Project.—The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized by the act of March 5, 1942 (Public, No. 473, 77th Cong.), to provide for the planting of guayule and other rubber-bearing plants and to make available a source of crude rubber for emergency and defense uses. The Secretary by Memorandum No. 991 designated the Forest Service as the departmental agency responsible for the administration of the program. In cooperation with the Agricultural Research Administration, an extensive guayule production program has been undertaken in California and the Southwest, supplemented by cultural and rubber extraction investigations. The possibilities of developing emergency supplies of natural rubber from kok-saghyz (Russian dandelion) and high rubber-bearing strains of goldenrod are being explored by large scale experimental plantings and rubber extraction studies.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION ADMINISTRATION

The Rural Electrification Administration conducts a program, established by the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, of providing electric service for farms, other residents, and enterprises in rural areas who are without such service. As the principal means of accomplishing this, Rural Electrification Administration makes loans on a self-liquidating basis to local groups, public bodies, and utilities organized under State laws, with preference accorded to farmers' cooperatives and other nonprofit organizations, to finance the construction and operation of rural power systems. These loans are made on a 25-year amortization basis for financing generating plants, and transmission and distribution lines. Supplementary loans also are made to system borrowers for relending to consumers to finance the wiring of premises and acquisition of certain electrical equipment.

In the execution of this program, Rural Electrification Administration renders assistance through audits and technical advice to borrowers in the design, construction, and operation of their systems in order to achieve maximum efficiency in providing adequate electric service to their communities, and protect Government funds. Borrowers are assisted in helping farm consumers to achieve maximum utilization of electricity in the production and processing of foods and in the alleviation of growing labor shortages in rural areas. In addition to serving farms, Rural Electrification Administration renders assistance to its borrowers in making provision for electric service to other types of rural consumers and enterprises including military camps and bases, airfields, air beacons, mines, oil pumps and pipe lines, food processing plants, dairies, machine shops, and community institutions.

Though the Administration does not maintain field offices, it has a field staff of engineers, auditors, and other specialists to assist borrowers in construction, engineering, and operation of their systems.

The Rural Electrification Administration was created by Executive Order No. 7037 on May 11, 1935, as an independent agency under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of that year. The Rural Electrification Act of 1936, approved May 20, 1936, established the present agency and made provision for a 10-year program for rural electrification loans. Under Reorganization Plan No. II the Administration became a part of the Department of Agriculture.

ADMINISTRATION OF FOOD PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION

The Food Production and Distribution Administration was established by the President within the Department of Agriculture to administer the various phases of production and distribution of food and other farm products essential to the war effort.

FOOD DISTRIBUTION ADMINISTRATION

The Food Distribution Administration was established as an agency of the Department of Agriculture by the President under the provisions of Executive Order No. 9280, dated December 5, 1942, which made effective the consolidation of the Agricultural Marketing Administration, the meat inspection activities of the Bureau of Animal Industry, certain functions of the Office for Agricultural War Relations, the War Production Board, and the Sugar Agency of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

As one of the steps taken to carry out the wartime reorganization of the Department, the consolidation brings together under a single agency all major agricultural distribution services and programs.

In substance, these functions and responsibilities of the agencies consolidated into the Food Distribution Administration are briefly as follows:

To purchase, store, and make available for shipment agricultural commodities acquired for export under authority of the Lend-Lease Act. The purchases provide basic support for the markets of United States farmers, thereby encouraging them to expand production of food needed in connection with the war program.

To develop, issue, and administer food orders; allocating foods; fixing quotas; and, in general, controlling the food supplies of the Nation.

Estimate civilian food needs and to insure the adequacy of civilian food supplies, both as to amounts and nutritional requirements. To recommend programs for the conservation of food and obtain public participation in plans preventing the waste of food. To promote substitution of less scarce foods for those unavailable. To determine requirements of foodstuff and to make allocations as between different claimant agencies.

To determine needs for facilities for the processing of foodstuffs and to develop programs for the simplification and standardization of processing and packaging designed to conserve materials, manpower, and food.

To develop market expansion programs, authorized by section 32, Public, No. 320, and by related legislation, which are designed to encourage increased domestic distribution and consumption of agricultural commodities, to develop wider domestic outlets and new uses for farm products, and to assist exports.

To develop marketing agreement programs, authorized by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, for the purpose of establishing orderly marketing conditions for agricultural commodities, and to improve returns to producers by regulating the flow of products to market. The programs operate through marketing agreements and orders issued by the Secretary of Agriculture after certain conditions of approval have been met by producers and handlers.

To collect and disseminate market information daily on movement, supplies, quality, and prices of livestock, meats, wool, fruits, vegetables, dairy and poultry products, grains, cotton, tobacco, and miscellaneous products. Much of the information is gathered and released at terminal markets and transmitted over a leased-wire system to other markets widely scattered over the country. During the heavy shipping season for a number of commodites, temporary field stations are maintained in major producing areas.

To develop official standards which will provide an understandable and uniform yardstick for measuring gradations in quality of farm and food products. Some of these standards, such as for grain and cotton, are mandatory if the products are sold by grade and are shipped in interstate or foreign commerce. For most of the other commodities, the use of the official standards is permissive.

To make available an inspection service in principal producing and receiving centers of the country for grains, fruits, and vegetables, meats and meat products, cotton, tobacco, hay, beans, butter, cheese, eggs, and poultry. Mandatory and free inspection of tobacco is provided at more than 80 designated auction markets. Free cotton classification is provided, on request, to groups of producers organized for the improvement of their cotton.

As a basis for these services, to conduct research on standardization and inspection, packing, packaging, labeling, transporting, storing, and market reporting. Laboratory studies include milling and baking tests with grains, spinning and ginning tests with various types and grades of cotton, wool shrinkage tests, etc. Demonstrations and school are held among the growers and consumers for the purpose of acquainting them with the grades for individual commodities and with the marketing practices that help to maintain high quality.

To promote consumer understanding of and participation in regulatory procedures under marketing programs, and to make available to consumers information which will enable them to make wise selection of farm products.

To collect and assemble official data and prepare determinations for the various war agencies concerned with sugar; to furnish technical assistance to these agencies. In order to encourage domestic sugar production, to provide for payments to producers of sugar beets and sugarcane.

To administer the following specific laws: United States Grain Standards Act, United States Warehouse Act, United States Cotton Futures Act, United States Standard Container Acts, Federal Seed Act, Dairy Exports Act, Packers and Stockyards Act, United States Cotton Standards Act, Produce Agency Act, Cotton Grade and Staple Statistics Act, Wool Standards Act, Tobacco Stocks and Standards Act, Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, Export Apple and Pear Act, Tobacco Inspection Act, Insecticide Act, Naval Stores Act, Tobacco Seed and Plant Exportation Act, the Commodity Exchange Act, and the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act, and the Sugar Act of 1937.

FOOD PRODUCTION ADMINISTRATION

The Food Production Administration was established within the Department of Agriculture on December 5, 1942, by Executive Order 9280. Included in the Administration are: Agricultural Adjustment Agency, Farm Security Administration, Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, and Soil Conservation Service, as well as certain functions transferred from the War Production Board, the Office for Agricultural War Relations, and the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. In addition, on January 22, 1943, the Secretary transferred to the Food Production Administration the Office of Land Use Coordination, except its administrative management functions. The Food Production Administration is responsible for all departmental programs relating primarily to food production. In addition, functions of the former office of Special War Board Assistant to the Secretary were transferred to the Director of Food Production on January 20, 1943, by the Secretary. To aid the Director in meeting new responsibilities resulting from Executive Order 9280 and to provide an over-all coordinating and planning service for the constituent agencies of the Food Production Administration, five branches were established: Production Programs Branch, Production Supplies Programs Branch, Conservation Programs Branch, Production Loans Branch, and Farm Service and Supply Branch. Functions of these new branches follow.

PRODUCTION PROGRAMS BRANCH

The Production Programs Branch develops in cooperation with other groups the desired level of agricultural production and determines national regional, and State production goals. It works with other Department officials and the Office of Price Administration in establishing needed price relationships. Continuous review of production progress and problems is maintained, and needed adjustments recommended from time to time to be carried out by the appropriate action agencies.

PRODUCTION SUPPLIES PROGRAMS BRANCH

This branch has the responsibility of determining and taking the necessary steps for obtaining needed farm equipment, supplies, and facilities. The branch also develops programs for and administers allocation, preservation, or limitation orders of the Food Production Administration, except those involving rationing to individual farmers.

CONSERVATION PROGRAMS BRANCH

The Conservation Programs Branch coordinates the conservation programs of the several agencies of the Food Production Administration engaged in this work, including the Agricultural Adjustment Agency, the Farm Security Administration, and the Soil Conservation Service. Policies, plans, and programs relating to soil, water, naval stores, farm woodlands, conservation, land use and development, and farm practices consistent with current and future production needs and land capabilities are developed by the branch.

PRODUCTION LOANS BRANCH

It is the responsibility of the Production Loans Branch to develop and administer loan programs necessary to secure maximum agricultural production, to direct and supervise all activities of the Food Production Administration which relate primarily to loans to finance food production, except activities of the Farm Security Administration in financing food production from funds appropriated for its use.

FARM SERVICE AND SUPPLY BRANCH

The Farm Service and Supply Branch administers rationing programs for farm equipment, machinery, and supplies through the county farm rationing committees and the county farm transportation committees or other appropriate agencies. It also directs the distribution of farm equipment and supplies from manufacturers in accordance with established State and county quotas.

AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT AGENCY

The national AAA program seeks to help farmers: Grow the kinds of food and fiber needed, in the amounts needed; carry out practices that protect the soil and increase productivity; and maintain an Ever-Normal Granary of emergency reserves of basic farm products for use as needed.

Farmer committees, elected from among their own number by cooperating producers, administer all phases of the AAA program locally. These committees are assisting State and county United States Department of Agriculture war boards in helping farmers meet the farm production goals.

To accomplish its purposes, the AAA program provides for the following methods: (1) National acreage goals and allotments for major crops that encourage plantings in line with domestic, foreign, and reserve requirements; (2) payments to producers who carry out specific soil-building practices on their individual farms, or who plant in accordance with their land resources and war requirements for food and fiber; (3) parity payments to supplement conservation payments, when prices for basic farm products are low and when funds are appropriated, to help producers obtain returns near parity levels; (4) crop loans (made available through the Commodity Credit Corporation) to enable producers to carry over supplies until needed; (5) marketing quotas on cotton, corn, wheat, rice, peanuts, and tobacco, to stabilize marketing in years of excess crop production, when approved by two-thirds of the producers voting in a referendum.

SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE

The Soil Conservation Service conducts a specialized wartime program of assistance to farmers and ranchers in the adoption of certain simplified conservation and land-use practices which increase production per acre; assists farmers to develop and apply plans for erosion control, water conservation, and land use in order to maintain and increase agricultural production; provides technical and other assistance to soil conservation districts organized under State laws; conducts demonstration projects showing the value of modern soil-saving methods and carries on certain farm forestry activities; directs the purchase, development, and management of submarginal lands; supervises the work of Civilian Public Service camps assigned to soil conservation and land-improvement activities; and develops improved methods for the use and management of agricultural land and water resources through research.

FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE CORPORATION

The Federal Crop Insurance Corporation offers insurance against all natural crop hazards to the wheat and cotton farmers of the Nation, guaranteeing them 50 percent or 75 percent of their average yield. Premiums are based in part on the crop-loss experience of the insured farm and in part on the crop-loss experience of the county in which the farm is located. Each subsequent year actual production figures for the individual farm are incorporated into the average yield. Each year also loss experience is incorporated into the premium rates. The Corporation guarantees only yield, not price. Both premiums and indemnities are computed in units of the commodity insured. The applicant for insurance signs a commodity note for the premium, which matures about harvesttime. Payments on the note made on the basis of the cash equivalent price are immediately converted into units of the commodity insured and held in storage as reserves against liabilities under crop insurance contracts written by the Corporation. When losses occur, indemnities are paid in units of the commodity insured or sufficient reserves of that commodity are sold and the indemnities are paid on the basis of the cash equivalent price.

The Corporation was created by the Federal Crop Insurance Act (title V of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, approved February 16, 1938) as a nonprofit corporation with capital stock of $100,000,000. The original act authorized crop insurance for wheat only, although it provided that research should be done on the feasibility of extending crop insurance to other agricultural commodities. On June 21, 1941, the act was amended to extend crop insurance to cotton.

The headquarters office of the Corporation is in Washington, D. C. Branch Offices for the wheat crop insurance program are located in Denver, Colo., and Chicago, Ill. Branch offices for the cotton crop insurance program are located in Dallas, Tex., and Birmingham, Ala. The field work in the various States and counties is carried on through the State and county agricultural conservation committees.

FARM SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

The Farm Security Administration was established in 1937. Its major responsibility is to carry out the programs of the United States Department of Agriculture designed to help low-income farm families become self-supporting, and, more recently, to aid them in making their maximum contribution to the war effort. The agency administers the rural rehabilitation program, through which small farmers are provided with operating assistance, including loans and technical guidance to enable them to bring their farms into full production of vitally needed war crops. It also administers the tenant purchase program authorized by the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, through which loans are made to enable farm tenants, sharecroppers, laborers, and others to become owners of family-type farms. The Farm Security Administration is also responsible for administering rural resettlement projects established by the former Resettlement Administration and other agencies. In addition, the Farm Security Administration has been assigned the responsibility for providing labor supply centers and transportation facilities for migratory farm workers. Under a directive of the War Manpower Commission, and the terms of an agreement between the United States and Mexico concerning the use of Mexican farm laborers in the United States, provision is made for the transportation and shelter of both domestic and foreign agricultural workers where acute shortages of labor for the production of war vital crops exist.

COMMODITY CREDIT CORPORATION

Commodity Credit Corporation is essentially a financing institution making loans to farmers on commodities stored on farms and in warehouses, supporting prices to facilitate increased production of agricultural commodities for war needs, and purchasing foreign agricultural commodities strategically needed in the United States. Loans to farmers are designed to protect farm income, to stabilize farm prices, and to assure adequate supplies of farm products. Under its charter, the Corporation is empowered to buy and sell, lend upon, or otherwise deal in commodities.

The Commodity Credit Corporation has made loans on barley, butter, corn, cotton, dates, figs, flaxseed, grain sorghums, hops, mohair, peanuts, pecans, prunes, raisins, rye, soybeans, tobacco, turpentine and rosin, wheat, and wool. All loans have been secured by commodities pledged as collateral under either warehouse receipts or chattel mortgages. Large quantities of Government-owned commodities have been sold since the outbreak of World War II, for use in expanding food production or otherwise meeting united war needs.

Under the provisions of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938, as amended, loans are mandatory, under certain conditions, on six commodities: Cotton, corn, rice, tobacco, wheat, and peanuts. The rate of the loan for 1942 crops of cotton, rice, tobacco, and peanuts is 90 percent of parity; and of wheat and corn, 85 percent of parity. Loans are prohibited on any of these six commodities with respect to which a vote has been taken on marketing quotas and has failed to be approved by a required two-thirds majority.

Commodity Credit Corporation was created as an agency of the United States under the laws of the State of Delaware, on October 17, 1933, pursuant to Executive Order No. 6340, dated October 16, 1933. It has an authorized and paid-in capital of $100,000,000. Under the act of March 8, 1938, as amended, the Corporation is authorized, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to issue and have outstanding at any one time, bonds, notes, debentures, and other similar obligations in an aggregate amount not to exceed $2,650,000,000.

EXTENSION SERVICE

The Extension Service carries on the general educational work in agriculture and home economics essential to the success of the wartime job of the Department of Agriculture and aids in making available the results of research and investigation in agriculture and home economics to those who can put the information into practice. It coordinates the extension activities of the bureaus of the Department and of the State agricultural colleges and deals with emergency situations involving Department assistance to farmers. It represents the Department in the conduct of cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics by the State agricultural colleges and the Department under the Smith-Lever, Capper-Ketcham, Bankhead-Jones, and supplementary acts of Congress. Each of the 48 States, and the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska and Puerto Rico, has a director of extension who represents jointly the Department and the State agricultural college in the administration of extension work. In each State the organization consists of a State administrative and supervisory staff, with headquarters in most cases at the State agricultural college, and county agricultural agents, county home demonstration agents, and county club agents, who have their offices usually at the county seats. The distinguishing feature of extension teaching is the field demonstration, carried on through voluntary local leaders, although other educational methods are also utilized to teach the best farm and home practices to farm and rural men, women, boys, and girls.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

The Secretary of Commerce is charged with the work of promoting the commerce of the United States and its manufacturing, shipping, and transportation interests. His duties also comprise the taking of the census and the collection and publication of statistical information connected therewith; the making of coast and geodetic surveys; the collecting of statistics relating to foreign and domestic commerce; the custody, construction, maintenance, and application of standards of weights and measurements; the gathering and supplying of information regarding industries and markets for the fostering of manufacturing; supervision of the issuance of patents and the registration of trade-marks, the promotion and development of air commerce, the establishment and maintenance of aids to air navigation, the certification of airmen, the inspection and registration of aircraft, the enforcement of rules and regulations issued pursuant to the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938; supervision of the issuance of weather forecasts and warnings for the benefit of agriculture, commerce, and navigation, including weather service for aviation, and the publication of climatic statistics; development of inland waterway transportation, and supervision of the operation of Government-owned barge lines and other functions concerning these activities and related subjects. The Secretary of Commerce is chairman of the Foreign-Trade Zones Board, ex officio general chairman of the Business Advisory Council for the Department of Commerce, ex officio general chairman of the Aeronautical Advisory Council, and a member of the following: War Production Board, Economic Stabilization Board, board of directors of the Textile Foundation, Council of National Defense, Board of Economic Warfare, Federal Board for Vocational Education, Smithsonian Institution, Migratory Bird Conservation Commission, Foreign Service Buildings Commission, National Munitions Control Board, Export-Import Bank of Washington; National Archives Council, Commodity Exchange Commission, and the Committee on Cooperation with American Republics. The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to call upon other departments for statistical data obtained by them. It is his further duty to make such special investigations and furnish such information to the President or Congress as may be required by them on the foregoing subject matters, and to make annual reports to Congress upon the work of said Department.

UNDER SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

Under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce, the Under Secretary performs such duties as shall be prescribed by the Secretary or may be required by law. He exercises general supervision and direction over the Bureau of the Census, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, the Inland Waterways Corporation, the Patent Office, and the National Bureau of Standards. In the absence of the Secretary he acts as the head of the Department.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

Under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce, assists in the supervision of the administration and the coordination of the functions and activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Export-Import Bank of Washington, Rubber Reserve Co., Metals Reserve Co., Defense Plant Corporation, Defense Supplies Corporation, War Damage Corporation, the United States Commercial Co., and any other corporations which may hereafter be created or organized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Acts for the Secretary of Commerce and performs the duties and exercises the powers and functions now vested in the Secretary of Commerce, with respect to those agencies, in accordance with the precedents, rules and regulations established, or directions that may be given by the Secretary of Commerce. In the absence of the Secretary and the Under Secretary he serves as head of the Department.

SPECIAL AVIATION ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

Under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce, the Assistant Secretary performs such duties as shall be prescribed by the Secretary or may be required by law. He exercises general supervision and direction over the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the Weather Bureau, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

SOLICITOR

The Solicitor is the chief law officer of the Department of Commerce and his duties are to act as legal adviser to the Secretary of Commerce, the Under Secretary, the Assistant Secretary, and the chiefs of the various bureaus.

THE ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY

As the chief executive officer of the Department the Administrative Assistant to the Secretary has the responsibility for all matters of administration, including personnel and budget matters, and for coordinating the functions of the various bureaus of the Department. He has supervision of the office of the Chief Clerk, the Division of Personnel Supervision and Management, the Division of Publications, the Division of Purchases and Sales, and the Division of Accounts.

CHIEF CLERK

As the administrative head of the divisions of the office of the Secretary, the Chief Clerk has supervision over the clerks and other employees of the Department, enforces the general regulations of the Department, and has administrative supervision of the buildings occupied by the Department; has general supervision of expenditures from the appropriations for contingent expenses; the care of all vehicles under the office of the Secretary; the receipt, distribution, and transmission of the mail; the custody of the Department's seal and the records and files of the Secretary's office; the answering of calls from Congress and elsewhere for copies of papers and records; and the discharge of all business of the Secretary's office not otherwise assigned. During the temporary absence of the Secretary, the Under Secretary, and the Assistant Secretary he may be designated by the Secretary to sign official papers and documents.

DIVISION OF PERSONNEL SUPERVISION AND MANAGEMENT

The Director of the Division of Personnel Supervision and Management is charged with the supervision of the functions of appointment, classification of positions, assignment, service rating, and training of employees; the initiation and supervision of programs of personnel training and management including the establishment of a system of service ratings for departmental and field forces; the direction of programs of employee relations; the establishment of means for the hearing of grievances of employees and presenting appropriate recommendations for the settlement thereof to the Secretary; serves as a member of the Council of Personnel Administration; acts as liaison officer in personnel matters between the Department and the Civil Service Commission; makes recommendations to the departmental budget officer with respect to estimates and expenditures for personal services; establishes and administers an equitable system of promotions and transfers; administers the regulations regarding removals, retirement, and leaves of absence; conducts correspondence and prepares recommendations connected with applications for positions, and performs such other functions as may be prescribed by the Secretary.

DIVISION OF ACCOUNTS

The Chief of the Division of Accounts is charged with the duty of recording all fiscal transactions pertaining to appropriations and allotments made to the Office of the Secretary; the keeping of a treasury cash appropriation ledger for the Department; the maintenance of liaison with the General Accounting Office and the Treasury Department in regard to matters relating to accounts and accounting problems; the preparation of official bonds and custody of records pertaining thereto; and aiding the several bureaus and offices of the Department with accounting problems.

DIVISION OF PUBLICATIONS

The Chief of the Division of Publications is charged with the conduct of all business the Department transacts with the Government Printing Office; the general supervision of printing, including the editing and preparation of copy, illustrating and binding, the distribution of publications, and the maintenance of mailing lists. The advertising done by the Department is in his charge. He also approves all vouchers in payment for the publishing work of the Department, keeps a record of all obligations and expenditures in connection therewith, and conducts the correspondence it entails.

DIVISION OF PURCHASES AND SALES

The Chief of the Division of Purchases and Sales has personal supervision of all the work incident to the purchase and distribution of supplies for the Department proper and for the services of the Department outside of Washington, and of the keeping of detailed accounts of all expenditures from the appropriation for contingent expenses of the Department. He receives, verifies, and preserves the annual returns of property from the several divisions in the Office of the Secretary, and examines and reports on the property returns of all other bureaus and services. Maintains the Department's traffic office and, also, the typewriter shop for the repair of the Department's machines.

BUREAU OF THE CENSUS

The Bureau of the Census collects and publishes data on the characteristics and activities of the people of the United States in the fields of population, housing, agriculture, manufactures, business, mineral industries, vital statistics, State and local governments, cotton and oils, religious bodies, foreign trade, and other subjects. The data collected are basic to the work of public agencies, business, and research groups, as well as others, and are extensively used as primary source material. From the information gathered by the Bureau of the Census, a factual record of conditions in the United States can be constructed. In addition, the technical staff of the Bureau acts in an advisory capacity for many war agencies that have their statistical inquiries edited, coded, and tabulated by the Bureau of the Census.

The decennial census includes most of the subjects mentioned above. Many of these inquiries are also conducted at more frequent intervals.

Population and housing.—The first decennial census of population was taken in 1790 and repeated every 10 years thereafter. The sixteenth decennial population census (1940) determined the number of people classified not only by such basic items as age, sex, color or race, marital status, place of birth, and farm residence, but also provided data on such subjects as education, migration, employment status, occupations, and wage and salary income. The first census of housing, taken together with the census of population in 1940, enumerated the number of occupied and vacant dwelling units and such characteristics of these units as value or rent, occupancy status, number of rooms, facilities and equipment, utilities, and mortgage data, and the type of structure, exterior material, and year built.

Special censuses are made at the request of local communities and population estimates are prepared from time to time within the Bureau. Monthly surveys of the labor force and current surveys of housing occupancy and vacancy in selected areas are made by the Bureau of the Census, as well as other studies requested by war agencies.

The Bureau's files of original population census records provide legally acceptable evidence concerning age and other personal data. Records of these facts in the census are obtainable only at the request of the person concerned when needed for such purposes as obtaining old-age pensions, annuities, passports, etc.

Agriculture.—In the field of agriculture a census is taken every 5 years. The characteristics enumerated for each farm include tenure, acreage, values, farm employment, and facilities, with detailed information on livestock and crops. Once every 10 years censuses of irrigation and drainage enterprises are taken. Statistics on cotton ginned, imported, exported, consumed, and held are issued currently. Other related reports cover cottonseed products and vegetable and animal fats and oils.

Manufactures.—The census of manufactures has been taken biennially since 1919 and at less frequent intervals before that. Data gathered included information concerning location of the plant, form of organization, persons employed, salaries and wages, cost of materials and fuel, inventories, and quantity and value of products made. The 1941 inquiry has not been taken because of the need for specialized instead of general manufactures statistics during the war period. Instead, the Bureau has conducted numerous surveys on production, flow of materials, and utilization of facilities designed especially to serve the needs of the war agencies. Many of these surveys have now been placed on a monthly or quarterly basis. A census of mineral industries is taken as a part of the decennial census.

Business.—The census of business has been a regular part of the decennial census since 1929. Censuses of business were taken also for 1933 and 1935. Retail, wholesale, service, hotel, and construction establishments are covered in this census. Characteristics enumerated for each establishment include location, legal form of organization, whether chain or independent, volume of business, employment, pay roll, and analysis of sales. A special report on sales-finance companies was issued in 1940. Statistics on current trends in retail and wholesale trades are issued monthly. Special canvasses are made in the trades and services field for war agencies.

Vital statistics.—Through cooperative arrangements with all of the States, the Bureau collects, compiles, and publishes annually the only official Nation-wide data on natality and mortality, including detailed statistics on place and cause of death, age at death, number and geographic distribution of births, etc. Regular reports are also made on patients in hospitals for mental disease, in institutions for feeble-minded and epileptics, prisoners in State prisons and reformatories, and judicial criminal statistics. Periodically, basic information on the number of marriages and divorces in the United States has been collected and published.

State and local government.—Official data for State and local governments are compiled and published. Every 10 years a census of governments is taken that covers all governmental units; such a census is now being conducted, covering the year 1942. Annual financial publications include summaries for States, for counties, and for cities having populations over 100,000; with individual reports for each State and each of the 92 largest cities; and with summaries of State and city revenues, expenditures, debt, public-service enterprises, etc. State and local government employees and pay-roll data are collected and published quarterly. Elections proposals in States and cities are reported annually. A Municipal Reference Service for information on State, county, and city governments is maintained for the use of Federal, State, and local officials and research agencies.

Foreign trade statistics.—Statistical information on the net quantity, value, and shipping weights of United States imports and exports by commodities, countries of origin and destination, and customs districts, is compiled by the Bureau on the basis of information contained in the export and import documents received from the collectors of customs and from war agencies. The Bureau also prepares the official record of exports under the lend-lease program and of exports under the licensing program of the Board of Economic Warfare. Publication of detailed statistics of foreign trade has been suspended during the war period.

Statistical abstract.—The Statistical Abstract of the United States, published annually by the Bureau, is the official compendium of the Federal Government. Assembled in one compact volume is information selected from publications and special reports of all Government agencies on most of the important phases of the social, economic, and industrial life of the Nation.

Because the Bureau has this vast amount of basic data, special studies are constantly in progress for specific purposes. Research utilizing these data is conducted along with research in the techniques involved in conducting the world's largest statistical surveys.

BUREAU OF FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC COMMERCE

The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is charged with the promotion and development of foreign and domestic commerce of the United States. It serves to interpret American business to the Federal Government and Government to business.

In keeping with changing world conditions, and in order to provide better service, the Bureau was completely reorganized during the early part of 1941. The present alinement comprises five major divisions, whose duties are to supply business with all available data essential to the sound conduct of trade at home and abroad. In the defense emergency, stress was placed on assisting the Nation's leaders, in both industry and Government, in formulating immediate as well as long-range plans.

Currently, the Bureau operates to a very large extent in the foreign field as a major fact-finding organization for the Board of Economic Warfare. It provides a steady flow of domestic and foreign information to the various war action agencies, makes special studies and reports to them. Thus the statutory duty of the Bureau to gather, analyze, and report on all phases of foreign and domestic commerce has been converted to war work for the duration, both for Government and to aid business in converting its efforts to production of war materials or to do the job of sustaining the civilian economy under war conditions.

Division of Research and Statistics.—This Division analyzes the economic life of the Nation in its broad aspects as a basis for the general aims and objectives of Bureau activities. It studies all facts pertinent to the current state of the commerce of the Nation, including the whole complex flow of funds between buyers and sellers, evaluates the national income, establishes and maintains the Nation's balance sheets and trade records, and conducts periodic reviews useful alike to business executives and Government officials.

Division of Industrial Economy.—This Division acts as a clearing house for the exchange of facts between the Bureau and industry, dealing with all phases of business, both at home and abroad. It prepares detailed and comprehensive analyses and interpretations of business conditions and trends in manufacturing, mining, construction, public utilities, distribution, and service industries; inaugurates and develops methods, procedures and programs for collection of current statistical data on specific industries, trades, and commodities; makes continuing studies and surveys of sources of supply, production, stocks (foreign and domestic), and usage of commodities and materials for manufacture; surveys and analyzes productive capacity of industry, prices, industrial and commercial business structure and policies; determines and reports on the position of the United States with respect to strategic, critical, and essential materials imported from foreign countries and the essential requirements of foreign countries for materials and manufactured products from the United States, particularly for policy purposes of Government war agencies. The Division also prepares special studies of industrial and agricultural developments, transportation, and communication facilities in foreign countries, for war agencies, and makes special commodity and industry surveys at the request of and in collaboration with the War Production Board. The Division acts as Government economic adviser to business and industrial adviser to Government.

Division of International Economy.—This Division provides the Government, exporters, and importers with information and guidance on foreign economic and commercial affairs and on foreign national policies affecting commerce. It functions on a regional basis according to the primary regions of politico-economic influence in the world and reports where and how the economics of these regions are moving and how their movements affect our own affairs. It also analyzes and appraises our own balance of international transactions. This Division is responsible for the guidance necessary in the collection of factual material by the Foreign Service of the Department of State for study and analysis in the Bureau.

Division of Regional Economy.—This Division directs continuous contacts with the Nation's principal economic areas through a field force operating from strategically located offices. The field force is staffed with practical business specialists, backed at Washington by research units concentrating on regional economics, the problems of small business, marketing laws, and trade barriers. The Division assists local business units, through its field offices, with facts and expert counsel, and provides other branches of the Bureau, as well as other Government departments, particularly those agencies concerned with the war emergency, with a continuous flow of regional data and observations helpful in the conduct of the war program.

Division of Commercial and Economic Information.—This Division determines the format of published material; edits, publishes, and distributes, to Government and business, enlightening and timely information developed by the various divisions of the Bureau and by the Foreign Service Officers of the Department of State. It also acts as a medium through which certain commercial and economic information developed in other Bureaus of the Department clears to the public. To better serve the business community, all periodicals and publications of the Bureau have been streamlined and condensed; these contain a wide variety of statistical and factual material presented in concise form (except such as might give aid to the enemy), helpful to business generally, and particularly to small businesses that do not have the research resources often available to larger organizations.

The Bureau continues to bring specific foreign-trade opportunities to the attention of businessmen throughout the United States and its Territories and possessions and has available detailed facts regarding individual foreign firms. It makes studies of foreign transportation and communications and furnishes information to shippers regarding freight rates and facilities to enable them to route shipments advantageously. The Bureau facilitates also the amicable adjustment of commercial disputes and misunderstandings arising between foreign traders in the United States and their clients in foreign countries. It aids in the protection abroad of American industrial property, such as trade-marks and patents. It investigates world stocks of raw materials and is constantly in touch with the course of price trends of commodities of international trade.

Foreign businessmen visiting the United States are aided by the Bureau in establishing suitable contacts with proper American firms.

Still another of the Bureau's functions involves activities in administering the China Trade Act, a law authorizing the creation of and assistance to corporations engaged in the China trade.

NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS

The National Bureau of Standards was established by act of Congress approved March 3, 1901. Its functions are the development, construction, custody, and maintenance of reference and working standards and their intercomparison, improvement, and application in science, engineering, industry, and commerce. Under the Air Commerce Act of 1926, the Secretary of Commerce is authorized "to advise with the Bureau of Standards and other agencies in the executive branch of the Government in carrying forward such research and development work as tends to create improved air navigation facilities." By act of Congress approved May 14, 1930, there was established a national hydraulic laboratory at the Bureau for "the determination of fundamental data useful in hydraulic research and engineering."

The Bureau's functions are exercised for the National Government, State governments, and under certain conditions (as in tests involving comparison with the national standards), and subject to reasonable fees, the general public. Its unique research and testing facilities are used to discover and evaluate material standards and to solve basic technical problems. In connection with its work on standards of measurement, the Bureau assists in size standardization of containers and products, in promoting systematic inspection of trade weights and measures, and facilitates research in science and technology through the standardization of measuring instruments. The establishment of more precise values for the standard constants furnishes an exact basis for scientific experiment and design and makes possible the efficient technical control of industrial processes. It cooperates with tax-supported purchasing agencies, industries, and national organizations in developing specifications and facilitating their use; it encourages the application of the latest developments in the utilization and standardization of building materials and in the development of engineering and safety codes, simplified practice recommendations, and commercial standards of quality and performance. The Bureau's work on standards of quality sets up attainable standards to assure high utility in the products of industry and furnishes a scientific basis for fair dealing by promoting truthful branding and advertising. Standards of performance are usually specifications for the operative efficiency of machines or devices; their ultimate purpose is to make exact knowledge the basis of the buyer's choice and to clarify the understanding between the manufacturer, distributor, retailer, and consumer. To establish standards of practice the Bureau collates data and formulates codes of practice for public utilities and other services. This work makes possible a single impersonal standard of practice mutually agreed upon by all concerned and clearly defined in measurable terms.

At present over 90 percent of the Bureau's personnel and facilities are devoted to confidential or secret problems in connection with the war effort. This work is being carried on for the Army, Navy, National Defense Research Committee, National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, War Production Board, Office of Price Administration, Office of Civilian Defense, and many other agencies. Special attention is being devoted to airplane lighting, radio communication in relation to ionosphere conditions, precision length gages for the dimensional control of machine parts made on a mass-production basis, airplane fuels and lubricants, rapid spectroscopic analysis of metals and alloys, electroplating and substitutes therefor such as vitreous enamels, control of active acidity through the development and standardization of pH indicators, strength of airplane and other structures in which very thin sheets are spread over very large areas, the development of standard methods of test for synthetic rubbers, organic plastics, properties of metals and alloys at high and low temperatures and under conditions of stress and corrosion, the development of improved varieties of optical glass and the control of the properties of glass through heat treatment, and numerous problems connected with the building industry.

UNITED STATES COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY

The Coast and Geodetic Survey is charged with (1) the survey of the coasts of the United States and its possessions, to insure the safe navigation of coastal and intracoastal waters; (2) the determination of geographical positions and elevations in the interior of the country, to coordinate the coastal surveys and provide a framework for mapping and other engineering work; (3) observations of tides and currents, to furnish datum planes to engineers and tide and current tables to mariners; (4) the compilation and publishing of nautical charts to meet the needs of marine commerce; (5) the compilation and publishing of aeronautical charts for use in air navigation; (6) observations of the earth's magnetism in all parts of the country, to furnish magnetic information essential to the mariner, aviator, land surveyor, radio engineer and others; and (7) seismological observations and investigations, to supply data required in designing structures to reduce the earthquake hazard.

These duties require hydrographic, topographic, and air-photographic surveys along the coasts, including the rivers to the head of tidewater, for determining the depths of the waters and the configuration of the adjacent land, tide observations for determination of basic datum planes for elevations and for prediction of high and low waters in tide tables; current observations for determining water movements and for prediction of slacks and strengths in current tables; base measurements; determination of latitudes, longitudes, and azimuths by astronomical observations, triangulation, and traverse; determination of elevations by spirit leveling or by vertical angles; magnetic surveys in all parts of the country, including the operation of magnetic observatories; the operation of instruments recording building vibrations and strong earthquake motions, and cooperation with non-Federal agencies engaged in this work; and gravity measurements throughout the country.

The results of these surveys and studies are analyzed in the Washington office and published as nautical and aeronautical charts; annual tables of tide and current predictions; charts showing magnetic declination; annual lists of United States earthquakes; publications of geographic positions and elevations; Coast Pilots; and as annual and special publications covering all of its other activities, including comprehensive manuals prescribing the methods which obtain for its various classes of surveying.

PATENT OFFICE

The Commissioner of Patents is charged with the administration of the patent laws and supervision of all matters relating to the granting of letters patent for inventions, and the registration of trade-marks.

INLAND WATERWAYS CORPORATION

The Inland Waterways Corporation is charged with the development of national inland waterway transportation under the Transportation Act of 1920 and Public, No. 185, Sixty-eighth Congress, approved June 3, 1924, as amended by Public, No. 601, Seventieth Congress, approved May 29, 1928. By virtue of Reorganization Plan No. II issued pursuant to the Reorganization Act of 1939, approved April 3, 1939, the direction and supervision of the Corporation was transferred, effective July 1, 1939, from the Secretary of War to the Secretary of Commerce.

The Corporation operates barge lines on several important water routes. It is charged with investigating types of floating and terminal equipment suitable for various waterways and operates such equipment. It is required to establish tariff and interchange arrangements between rail and water carriers, and to promote and encourage waterway traffic, and otherwise function generally as the official Government inland waterways transportation agency.

WEATHER BUREAU

The Weather Bureau has charge of the forecasting of the weather; issuance and display of weather forecasts, and storm, cold-wave, frost, forest-fire-weather, and flood warnings; gaging and reporting of river stages; collection and transmission of marine intelligence for the benefit of commerce and navigation; collection and furnishing of meteorological information and forecasts, including upper-air observations, for the benefit of air navigation; reporting of temperature and rainfall conditions for agricultural interests; the taking of such meteorological observations as may be necessary to determine and record the climatic conditions of the United States and its possessions; and the maintenance and operation of the basic synoptic network of weather-observation stations in the United States and its possessions and the primary issue of weather forecasts of all types for civil and military uses.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS AUTHORITY

The Civil Aeronautics Authority was created by the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, approved June 23, 1938, "to promote the development and safety and to provide for the regulation of civil aeronautics." As originally established it was composed of the five-member Authority, the Administrator, and the three-member Air Safety Board.

By Reorganization Plans Nos. III and IV, effective June 30, 1940, issued pursuant to the Reorganization Act of 1939, the name of the five-member Authority was changed to the Civil Aeronautics Board and certain of its functions were transferred to the Administrator. The offices of the members of the Air Safety Board were abolished and the functions of the Air Safety Board were transferred to the Civil Aeronautics Board. The Civil Aeronautics Board, the Administrator, and their functions were transferred to the Department of Commerce, with the proviso that the Board shall exercise its functions of rule-making, adjudication, and investigation independently of the Secretary of Commerce. The plans further provided that the Administrator of Civil Aeronautics, whose functions shall be administered under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce, and the Civil Aeronautics Board shall constitute the Civil Aeronautics Authority. However, the Civil Aeronautics Authority performs no functions, all of its responsibilities being discharged by either the Civil Aeronautics Administration or the Civil Aeronautics Board.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS ADMINISTRATION

The Administrator of Civil Aeronautics is appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The organization through which the Administrator exercises his functions was designated as the Civil Aeronautics Administration by Departmental Order No. 52 of the Secretary of Commerce.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF ADMINISTRATOR

In accordance with the provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act, as amended, the Administrator is empowered and directed to encourage and foster the development of civil aeronautics and air commerce in the United States and abroad, and to make plans for the orderly development of and to encourage the establishment of civil airways, landing areas, and other air navigation facilities, and to exercise the functions vested in the Civil Aeronautics Authority by the Civilian Pilot Training Act of 1939, the functions of aircraft registration and of safety regulation described in titles V and VI of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938 (except the functions of prescribing safety standards, rules, and regulations and of suspending and revoking certificates after hearing); the function provided for by section 1101 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938.

ACTIVITIES

Safety regulation.—This involves the issuance of airman, aircraft, and air carrier operating certificates, air navigation facility and air agency ratings, and other aeronautical documents; maintenance of records of persons and things subject to regulation; issuance of permits for operation of foreign civil aircraft into and within the United States; investigation incident to certificate denials, suspension, revocation, and penalties; enforcement of rules and regulations; conformity of aircraft engineering data with airworthiness requirements; examination and inspection of interstate, overseas, and foreign scheduled air carrier operations; examination of persons and material for rating and certification; issuance of emergency suspension of safety certificates; compromise of civil penalties; issuance of regulations requiring notice with respect to hazards to air commerce; recommendations to the Civil Aeronautics Board of proposed standards, rules and regulations designed to promote safety in air commerce.

Statistics and information.—Collection and dissemination of information relative to civil aeronautics; compilation and publication of statistics and other data pertinent to the development of air commerce and the aeronautical industry; compilation and distribution to airmen and other interested persons of current information pertaining to airports and air navigation facilities on civil airways.

Federal airways.—This activity involves the preparation of plans for aids to air navigation, obtaining sites therefor, negotiation of contracts for electric, telephone and other utility services, planning and supervision of construction of navigational aids, radio engineering of a nonexperimental type, and maintenance of navigational aids, supervision of airway communications, teletype circuits, radio frequency allocations, supervision of air traffic control, procedures, techniques, operations stations. Conducts research and special studies in perfecting a program of long-range development of civil aeronautics; air transport operations studies, including pilot and crew efficiency, passenger comfort and safety, and ground control; studies in power plant accessories, and instrument development, with particular emphasis on radio air navigation facilities; and lends technical assistance in the development of airports. Vital contributions to our war effort are being made by the Federal Airways System. This system which has been extended throughout Alaska is being further expanded and improved to provide the dependable communications service and air navigation facilities required both for civilian service and for the successful conduct of military operations.

CAA War Training Service.—This service is now chiefly engaged in providing elementary flight instruction for Army and Navy aviation cadets in conjunction with the college programs of the armed services, and is training a group of Air Corps Enlisted Reservists on inactive status for employment as noncombat service pilots. It is also conducting several flight schools for the training of instructors for the Navy. This program, formerly known as the Civilian Pilot Training, since its inception has trained a total of more than 100,000 pilots, most of whom are now in the armed services or in civilian activities in connection with the war effort.

Development of landing areas.—In the interest of national defense and of civil aeronautics the Administrator is charged with the duty of constructing, improving, and repairing public airports and other public landing areas in the United States and its Territories and possessions, as determined by him, with the approval of a board composed of the Secretary of War, Secretary of the Navy, and Secretary of Commerce, to be necessary for national defense. Through joint Federal and local participation this program provides airports which are essential to meet military requirements in the prosecution of the war, and which upon termination of hostilities will become available for use by civil aviation.

Washington National Airport.—The Administrator has control over, and responsibility for, the care, operation, maintenance, and protection of the Washington National Airport located at Gravelly Point, together with the power to make and amend such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary in the operation of this airport. The Administrator is also empowered to lease, upon such terms as he may deem necessary, space or property within or upon the airport for purposes essential or appropriate to the operation of the airport.

CIVIL AERONAUTICS BOARD

The Civil Aeronautics Board, which performs its functions independently of the Secretary of Commerce, is composed of five members, appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate, one of whom is annually designated by the President as chairman and another as vice chairman. The first appointees are named for 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 years, their successors to be named for 6 years. Not more than three members may be of the same political party.

POWERS AND DUTIES OF THE BOARD

It is the responsibility of the Civil Aeronautics Board to exercise the functions of rule-making, adjudication, and investigation as outlined in the declaration of policy found in section 2 of the Civil Aeronautics Act directing consideration of "the following, among other things, as being in the public interest and in accordance with the public convenience and necessity:

"(a) The encouragement and development of an air-transportation system properly adapted to the present and future needs of the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States, of the Postal Service, and of the national defense;

"(b) The regulation of air transportation in such manner as to recognize and preserve the inherent advantages of, assure the highest degree of safety in, and foster sound economic conditions in, such transportation, and to improve relations between, and coordinate transportation by, air carrier;

"(c) The promotion of adequate, economical, and efficient service by air carriers at reasonable charges, without unjust discriminations, undue preference or advantages, or unfair or destructive competitive practices;

"(d) Competition to the extent necessary to assure the sound development of an air-transportation system adapted to the needs of the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States, of the Postal Service, and of the national defense; and

"(e) The regulation of air commerce in such manner as to best promote its development and safety."

ACTIVITIES

Economic regulation.—The Board, among other things, issues certificates of public convenience and necessity to air carriers and permits to foreign air carriers; receives tariffs filed by air carriers; prescribes rates of compensation for the carriage of mail; and regulates accounts, records and reports, mergers, loans and financial aid, methods of competition, and interlocking relationships.

Safety regulation.—The Board prescribes safety standards, rules, and regulations, and has the power to suspend and revoke safety certificates after hearing.

Accident prevention.—The Board makes rules on notification and report of accidents involving aircraft; investigates such accidents and reports the facts, circumstances, and probable causes; makes its reports and recommendations public in such manner as it deems to be in the public interest; investigates complaints; and conducts special studies and investigations to reduce aircraft accidents and prevent their recurrence.

NATIONAL INVENTORS COUNCIL

The National Inventors Council acts as a central Government clearing house for inventions and inventive ideas submitted as a contribution to the war effort.

The Council's primary functions are: (1) Encouraging the public to submit inventions or inventive ideas of value for the war effort; (2) prompt evaluation of these inventions by a staff of engineers and by a system of technical committees so that useful ideas may be promptly placed in the hands of the proper military and naval bureaus.

Close liaison arrangements are maintained with all service branches of the Army and Navy in order that prompt and complete technical consideration can be given to all suggestions received.

GOVERNMENT ACTIVITIES UNDER DIRECTION AND SUPERVISION OF THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

The functions and activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Defense Plant Corporation, Defense Supplies Corporation, Metals Reserve Company, Rubber Reserve Company, War Damage Corporation, Rubber Development Corporation, the RFC Mortgage Company, Federal National Mortgage Association, Disaster Loan Corporation, and Export-Import Bank of Washington are administered under the direction and supervision of the Secretary of Commerce.

RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation was created by the "Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act," approved January 22, 1932 (47 Stat. 5). This basic law, however, has been amended from time to time, and the Corporation's powers increased and the scope of its operations extended (or otherwise affected) by subsequent legislation. The Corporation has succession until January 22, 1947, unless sooner dissolved by act of Congress. It functions through a principal office at Washington and loan agencies established in cities throughout the United States. In addition, the Corporation has special representatives at San Juan, P. R., and Honolulu, T. H.

At present, the main function of the Corporation is the financing of various war activities, such as the procurement of materials, the construction and operation of war plants, and the writing of war damage insurance. Such financing is provided both to private business and to the Corporation's own subsidiaries—Defense Plant Corporation, Defense Supplies Corporation, Metals Reserve Co., Rubber Reserve Co., War Damage Corporation, and Rubber Development Corporation. The Corporation may also make loans to public agencies, financial institutions, insurance companies, railroads, drainage, levee, irrigation and similar districts, mining and fishing industries, public school districts or other public school authorities; subscribe for and make loans upon nonassessable stock of banks, trust companies, insurance companies, national mortgage associations, mortgage loan companies, and purchase capital notes or debentures of such institutions; make loans for the carrying and orderly marketing of agricultural commodities and livestock, and exportation of agricultural or other products; and purchase securities from Public Works Administration.

DEFENSE PLANT CORPORATION

Organization.—Defense Plant Corporation was created by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on August 22, 1940, pursuant to authority of section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000. It is managed by a board of directors, appointed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by officers and agents appointed by the Corporation. The principal office of the Corporation is located in Washington, D. C.

Functions.—The purposes of the Corporation are:

(a) To produce, acquire, carry, sell, or otherwise deal in strategic and critical materials as defined by the President;

(b) To purchase and lease land, purchase, lease, build, and expand plants, and purchase and produce equipment, facilities, machinery, materials, and supplies for the manufacture of strategic and critical materials, arms, ammunition, and implements of war, any other articles, equipment, facilities, and supplies necessary to the national defense, and such other articles, equipment, supplies, and materials as may be required in the manufacture or use of any of the foregoing or otherwise necessary in connection therewith;

(c) To lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of such land, plants, facilities, and machinery to others to engage in such manufacture;

(d) To engage in such manufacture itself, if the President finds that it is necessary for a Government agency to engage in such manufacture;

(e) To produce, lease, purchase, or otherwise acquire railroad equipment (including rolling stock), and commercial aircraft, and parts, equipment, facilities, and supplies necessary in connection with such railroad equipment and aircraft, and to lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of the same;

(f) To purchase, lease, build, expand, or otherwise acquire facilities for the training of aviators and to operate or lease, sell, or otherwise dispose of such facilities to others to engage in such training; and

(g) To take such other action as the President and the Secretary of Commerce may deem necessary to expedite the national defense program.

DEFENSE SUPPLIES CORPORATION

Defense Supplies Corporation was created by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on August 29, 1940, pursuant to section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, with an authorized capital of $5,000,000. The capital stock of Defense Supplies Corporation is owned by, and it is further financed through loans from, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It is managed by a board of directors appointed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by officers and agents appointed by the Corporation. The principal office of Defense Supplies Corporation is located in Washington, D. C.

The purposes of Defense Supplies Corporation include the production, acquisition, storage, sale, and other dealings in strategic and critical materials and other materials and supplies, operations in which are necessary to the prosecution of the war; the manufacture or production of supplies, materials, and articles necessary to the war effort; and the production, purchase, lease, and sale of railroad equipment and commercial aircraft. Defense Supplies Corporation is also charged with the program for Americanization of Latin American airlines, commercial and technical training of citizens of other American republics, and various other operations executed by it pursuant to recommendation of other Government agencies. The Corporation works in close collaboration with the War Production Board, the Departments of War and Navy, and the Board of Economic Warfare.

METALS RESERVE COMPANY

Organization.—Metals Reserve Company was created by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on June 28, 1940, pursuant to authority of section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, with a capital of $5,000,000. It is managed by a board of directors, appointed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by officers and agents appointed by the Company. The principal office of the Company is located in Washington, D. C.

Functions.—The principal purpose of the Company is to produce, acquire, carry, sell, and otherwise deal in strategic and critical materials necessary in connection with the war program, particularly metals and minerals. Reserve stocks of various materials are being accumulated by the Company when the supplies available permit. In the acquisition and distribution of these materials to manufacturers the Company works in cooperation with such other agencies as the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration.

RUBBER RESERVE COMPANY

Organization.—Rubber Reserve Company was created by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on June 28, 1940, pursuant to authority of section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, with a capital of $5,000,000.

The Company is managed by a board of directors, appointed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by officers and agents appointed by the Company. The principal office of the Company is located in Washington, D. C.

Functions.—Pursuant to general policies prescribed by the Rubber Director, the Company is engaged in purchasing, warehousing, and distributing all crude rubber, guayule, cryptostegia, and balata imported into the United States; in purchasing, warehousing, and distributing the national supply of scrap rubber; in developing and supervising the operation of facilities for the production of synthetic rubber and in distributing synthetic rubber.

THE RFC MORTGAGE COMPANY

Section 5c of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended, added by the act approved January 31, 1935 (49 Stat. 1), authorizes the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, with the approval of the President, to "subscribe for or make loans upon the nonassessable stock of any class of any national mortgage association organized under title III of the National Housing Act and of any mortgage loan company, trust company, savings and loan association, or other similar financial institution * * *."

Pursuant to this authority the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has subscribed for $25,000,000 of the capital stock of the RFC Mortgage Company, which was organized under the laws of Maryland on March 14, 1935.

The general purpose of the Company is to aid in the reestablishment of a normal market for sound mortgages on income-producing urban property, such as apartment houses, hotels, and business and office buildings, when credit is not otherwise available on reasonable terms and when the net income from the property, after payment of taxes, insurance, and operating costs, is sufficient to pay interest and the required amortization.

The principal office of the Company is in Washington, D. C., and it operates in all the States and Territories of the United States. Its business is handled through agents whose offices are located in the various loan agencies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The activities of the Company can be classified into the following major groups:

(1) When financing is necessary and cannot be obtained upon reasonable rates and terms, the Company considers applications for loans, on a sound basis, secured by first mortgages on urban income-producing properties, such as apartment houses, hotels, business and office buildings, if the net income from the property, after the payment of taxes, insurance, and operating expenses is sufficient to pay interest charges and the required amortization of the loan. These loans are chiefly for refinancing and aiding in the reorganization of distressed real property.

(2) The Company also gives consideration to applications for loans to finance new construction, provided there is an economic need for such construction, the mortgagor's investment in the completed project will be substantial in relation to the amount of the loan requested, and his resources and experience are sufficient to indicate that the property can be operated on a sound basis.

(3) The Company also considers applications for loans to distressed holders of first-mortgage real-estate bonds and certificates upon the security of their notes secured by such bonds and certificates, provided sufficient information is available to the company to enable it to determine that the income of the property securing the bonds or certificates is sufficient to warrant the loan. Loans will not be made to holders of such bonds or certificates who acquired them for speculative purposes.

(4) The Company also purchases mortgages insured under title VI and section 203, title II of the National Housing Act, as amended, and title I, class 3 loans, provided such mortgages meet the eligibility requirements of the Company.

FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

The Federal National Mortgage Association (formerly the National Mortgage Association of Washington) was organized and established on February 10, 1938, pursuant to the provisions of title III of the National Housing Act, as amended. The capital stock of the Association is owned by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The Association is staffed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and functions through a principal office in Washington, D. C., and agents stationed in the various loan agencies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Association purchases mortgages insured subsequent to January 1, 1937, under section 203 of the National Housing Act, as amended, on urban homes constructed after January 1, 1936. Such mortgages are purchased from mortgagees approved by the Federal Housing Administration which have a net worth satisfactory to the Association. The Association also makes loans secured by first mortgages insured under section 207 of the National Housing Act, as amended.

DISASTER LOAN CORPORATION

The Disaster Loan Corporation was created by act of Congress approved February 11, 1937. (15 U. S. C. 605k–1.)

Organization.—The Corporation was organized February 15, 1937, and will have succession until dissolved by act of Congress. It is managed by officers and agents appointed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Board of Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It functions through a principal office at Washington and agents located in the loan agencies of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Functions.—The functions of the Disaster Loan Corporation is to make, upon such terms and conditions and in such manner as it may prescribe, such loans as it may determine to be necessary or appropriate because of floods or other catastrophes occurring during the period between January 1, 1936, and January 22, 1947.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF WASHINGTON

Export-Import Bank of Washington is a banking corporation organized under the laws of the District of Columbia pursuant to Executive order of the President of the United States dated February 2, 1934. Present capital stock is $175,000,000. Common capital stock in the amount of $1,000,000 is held by the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Commerce, and the individual members of the board of trustees for the use and benefit of the United States. Preferred capital stock in the amount of $174,000,000 is owned by Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The affairs of the bank are managed by a board of 11 trustees.

The bank was established to aid in financing and to facilitate exports and imports and the exchange of commodities between the United States and any of its Territories and insular possessions and any foreign country or the agencies or nationals thereof. By act approved September 26, 1940 (54 Stat. 961), the bank is authorized to make loans to develop the resources, stabilize the economies, and assist in the orderly marketing of the products of the countries of the Western Hemisphere.

WAR DAMAGE CORPORATION

Organization.—The War Damage Corporation was created by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on December 13, 1941, pursuant to section 5d of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act, as amended. It is managed by a Board of Directors appointed by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by officers and agents appointed by the Corporation. The principal office of the Corporation is located in Washington, D. C.

Functions.—The purpose of the Corporation, in accordance with Public Law 506, Seventy-seventh Congress, approved March 27, 1942, is to provide, through insurance, reinsurance, or otherwise, reasonable protection against loss of or damage to property, real and personal, which may result from enemy attack (including any action taken by the military, naval, or air forces of the United States in resisting enemy attack).

RUBBER DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

Organization.—Rubber Development Corporation is a corporation organized under the laws of Delaware and a wholly owned subsidiary of Reconstruction Finance Corporation. It has an authorized capital stock of $200,000. The Corporation is managed by a board of directors, elected by Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and by officers and agents appointed by the Corporation. The principal office of the Corporation is located in Washington, D. C.

Functions.—Pursuant to general policies prescribed by the Rubber Director, the Corporation is engaged in the development of rubber sources in foreign countries and the procurement of rubber therefrom, said functions having been transferred to the Corporation by Rubber Reserve Company, effective as of February 23, 1943, on the recommendation of the Rubber Director.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

THE SECRETARY OF LABOR

The Secretary of Labor is charged with the duty of fostering, promoting, and developing the welfare of the wage earners of the United States, improving their working conditions, and advancing their opportunities for profitable employment. The Secretary has power under the law to act as mediator and to appoint commissioners of conciliation in labor disputes whenever in the Secretary's judgment the interests of industrial peace may require it to be done. The Secretary has authority to direct the collecting and collating of full and complete statistics of the conditions of labor and the products and distribution of the products of the same and to call upon other departments of the Government for statistical data and results obtained by them and to collate, arrange, and publish such statistical information so obtained in such manner as may seem wise. The Secretary's duties also comprise the gathering and publication of information regarding labor interest and labor controversies in this and other countries; the promulgation and supervision of the enforcement of certain maximum hour, minimum wage, child labor, safety and health stipulations in connection with Government supply contracts; the direction of the work of investigating all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life; and to cause to be published such results of these investigations as may seem wise and appropriate.

The law creating the Department of Labor provides that all duties performed and all power and authority possessed or exercised by the head of any executive department at the time of the passage of the said law, in and over any bureau, office, officer, board, branch, or division of the public service by said act transferred to the Department of Labor, or any business arising therefrom or pertaining thereto, or in relation to the duties performed by and authority conferred by law upon such bureau, officer, office, board, branch, or division of the public service, whether of an appellate or advisory character or otherwise, are vested in and exercised by the head of the said Department of Labor. The Secretary of Labor is also given authority and directed to investigate and report to Congress a plan of coordination of the activities, duties, and powers of the office of the Secretary of Labor with the activities, duties, and powers of the present bureaus, commissions, and departments, so far as they relate to labor and its conditions, in order to harmonize and unify such activities, duties, and powers, with a view to additional legislation to further define the duties and powers of the Department of Labor, and to make such special investigations and reports to the President or Congress as may be required by them or which may be deemed necessary, and to report annually to Congress upon the work of the Department of Labor.

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF LABOR

The Assistant Secretary performs such duties as shall be prescribed by the Secretary or may be required by law. He becomes the Acting Secretary of Labor in the absence of the Secretary.

SECOND ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF LABOR

The Second Assistant Secretary performs such duties as shall be prescribed by the Secretary or may be required by law.

ASSISTANTS TO THE SECRETARY OF LABOR

The assistants to the Secretary perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the Secretary.

SPECIAL ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY AND DIRECTOR OF PERSONNEL

The Director of Personnel is in charge of all matters relating to personnel within the Department of Labor. He is the liaison officer for the Department with the Civil Service Commission, and with other departments and agencies of the Government on matters relating to personnel administration.

OFFICE OF INFORMATION

The Office of Information supervises all editing, illustrating, printing, and distribution of publications and reports. It acts as a liaison between the Department and the press, radio and picture services, and other Government agencies concerned with the collection and dissemination of information and facts in which the Department has an interest. It acts as a clearing house for information prepared for the press and for labor and management groups as a result of the research, service, and regulatory programs of the Department. It correlates information on the results of specialized work along different lines and presents material so that it will be of the most practical value to wage earners and the general public.

LIBRARIAN

The duties of the librarian are to obtain and circulate currently to the staffs of the different bureaus such books and periodicals as they need in their investigations, to supply reference material and bibliographical assistance in connection with special inquiries, to prepare selected annotated bibliographies on special subjects, and to aid students of labor problems through reading-room service and correspondence.

CHIEF CLERK AND BUDGET OFFICER

The Chief Clerk and Budget Officer is responsible for budgetary, administrative planning, accounting and auditing functions, the control of expenditures from departmental appropriations for travel, contingent, and printing and binding expenses, the procurement of supplies, equipment, and printing and binding, and over-all service functions such as the receipt, distribution, and transmission of the mail, supervision of the buildings occupied by the Department, and telephone service.

OFFICE OF THE SOLICITOR

The Solicitor is the chief law officer of the Department of Labor. Responsible to him are an immediate staff of assistants and various attorneys stationed in field offices of the Department throughout the United States and in Puerto Rico.

The Solicitor acts as legal advisor to the Secretary of Labor and to the other administrative officers of the Department. The Solicitor and attorneys on his staff assist in the preparation of administrative rules and regulations and interpretations of statutes administered by the Department. They assist also in the preparation of and reports on proposed legislation. His staff prepares or reviews all contracts and bonds entered into by or with the Department.

The Solicitor's Office supervises the predetermination of prevailing rates of wages on Federal contracts pursuant to the Davis-Bacon law.

The Solicitor is in charge of the litigation of the Department. He represents the Administrator of the Wage and Hour Division and the Chief of the Children's Bureau in all court actions involving the Fair Labor Standards Act. In litigation involving departmental activities handled by the Department of Justice, the Solicitor's Office assists in the preparation, trial, and briefing of the cases. His staff prosecutes complaints of violations of the Public Contracts Act, and represents the Department officials in administrative hearings.

The regional attorneys on the staff of the Solicitor act as legal advisers to the regional offices of the Department. Their principal activity relates to the administration and enforcement of the Fair Labor Standards Act and the Public Contracts Act. They also perform legal services for the Children's Bureau, United States Conciliation Service, and the administration of the Davis-Bacon Act and other laws under the jurisdiction of the Department.

BUREAU OF LABOR STATISTICS

The statutory functions of the Bureau of Labor Statistics are "to acquire and diffuse among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with labor, in the most general and comprehensive sense of that word, and especially upon its relation to capital, the hours of labor, the earnings of laboring men and women, and the means of promoting their material, social, intellectual, and moral prosperity." Other specific continuing duties have been added from time to time by acts or resolutions of Congress, by Executive order, and by the Secretary of Labor.

The Bureau collects data and publishes reports on employment, pay rolls, earnings, and hours of labor in manufacturing, trade, public service, building construction, and other industries; union wages; industrial accidents and accident rates; labor turn-over; industrial disputes; wholesale and retail prices; and changes in cost of living of workingmen's families in the principal cities of the United States. Among the subjects receiving continuous attention are post-war problems connected with labor. Special studies are made from time to time on the wage situation, labor supply, and occupational outlook in particular industries as well as on productivity of labor, consumers' cooperation, and a large number of other subjects affecting the welfare of workers.

The information acquired by the Bureau in the discharge of its duties is disseminated by means of special bulletins on specific subjects and the Monthly Labor Review.

CHILDREN'S BUREAU

The act establishing the Bureau provides that it shall investigate and report upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of children and child life among all classes of our people and shall especially investigate the questions of infant mortality, the birth rate, orphanage, juvenile courts, desertion, dangerous occupations, accidents, and diseases of children, employment, and legislation affecting children in the several States and Territories. The Bureau is also empowered to publish the results of these investigations in such manner and to such extent as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Labor.

Under the Social Security Act of 1935 the Children's Bureau was given responsibility for administration of parts 1, 2, and 3 of title V of the act, containing provisions for maternal and child-health services, services for crippled children, and child-welfare services.

Under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 the Children's Bureau was given responsibility for administering the child labor provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act.

DIVISION OF LABOR STANDARDS

To develop desirable labor standards in industrial practice, labor law administration, and labor legislation; to make specific recommendations concerning methods and measures designed to improve the working conditions and the economic position of wage earners; in so doing to make directly available to interested organizations and persons the existing resources of the Department of Labor and pertinent material obtainable from public or private sources.

UNITED STATES CONCILIATION SERVICE

The United States Conciliation Service is charged with the duty of using its good offices, through the director or the commissioners of conciliation, to seek peaceful settlement in any labor dispute arising between employers and employees in industry. The authority for this service is found in section 8 of the act creating the Department, wherein the Secretary is authorized to act as a mediator or appoint commissioners of conciliation whenever the interests of industrial peace may require it to be done.

WAGE AND HOUR AND PUBLIC CONTRACTS DIVISIONS

The Wage and Hour Division and the Public Contracts Division were consolidated October 15, 1942.

Under the provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (act of June 25, 1938, Public, No. 718, 75th Cong.) the Wage and Hour Division was established in the Department of Labor to enforce the wage-and-hour provisions of the act. The Division is headed by an Administrator appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Its duties are to see that employees engaged in interstate commerce or in producing goods for interstate commerce are compensated in conformity with the wage-and-hour standards. It is authorized to enjoin employers who do not meet these standards from further violations of the act and it is also authorized to enjoin the shipment in interstate or foreign commerce of goods produced in violation of the act.

Under the general direction and control of the Attorney General, criminal proceedings may be instituted against willful violators of the wage-and-hour standards and a fine of not more than $10,000 imposed upon conviction for a first offense, and a prison sentence of not more than 6 months may be imposed upon conviction for a second or subsequent offense.

Employers subject to the statute must pay minimum wages of not less than 30 cents an hour until October 24, 1945, and 40 cents an hour thereafter. In the interim the Administrator is authorized to appoint industry committees on which employers, labor, and the public are to be equally represented. These committees have authority to recommend minimum wages for their respective industries higher than 30 cents an hour, but not in excess of 40 cents an hour. These recommendations have the effect of law if approved by the Administrator.

Employers subject to the statute are prohibited from employing any of their employees for a workweek longer than 40 hours unless they pay them time and one-half their regular hourly rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of the statutory maximum workweek, or unless they are wholly or partially exempt under the law from the overtime provisions of the statute. Employers subject to the statute are prohibited from shipping in interstate commerce any goods produced in an establishment in or about which oppressive child labor was employed within 30 days prior to the removal of such goods from the establishment.

The Public Contracts Division administers Public Act No. 846 (Walsh-Healey Act), Seventy-fourth Congress, approved June 30, 1936, which requires Government supply contracts in excess of $10,000 to contain certain maximum hour, minimum wage, child labor, convict labor, safety, and health stipulations, and charges the Secretary of Labor with the duty of promulgating these standards and supervising their enforcement. Child labor and convict labor is prohibited. The basic hours of work are 8 in any one day, or 40 in any one week. Overtime, however, is permitted provided that time and one-half is paid on either the daily or weekly basis, whichever is greater. The minimum wages required are those which have been determined by the Secretary of Labor for specific industries. The act carries several penalties, Section Three, for example, permitting the Secretary to "blacklist" any firm in willful violation.

WOMEN'S BUREAU

This Bureau was established as a statutory bureau under act of June 5, 1920, "An act to establish in the Department of Labor a bureau to be known as the Women's Bureau." Its functions are to formulate standards and policies to promote the welfare of wage-earning women, to improve their working conditions, increase their efficiency, and advance their opportunity for profitable employment. The Bureau has authority to investigate and report to the Department upon all matters pertaining to the welfare of women in industry. The Director of the Bureau publishes the results of these investigations in the manner and to such extent as the Secretary of Labor may prescribe.

The war work of the Bureau centers around the effective employment of women in war industries. To this end it makes occupational analyses and counsels employers concerning the occupations and conditions of work found advisable for the employment of women. It advises with other administrative agencies concerning wage adjustments, suitable living arrangements in new war communities, migration of women workers, and other matters essential to the development and maintenance of a steady labor force of women workers.

INDEPENDENT OFFICES, AGENCIES, AND ESTABLISHMENTS

ALLEY DWELLING AUTHORITY FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, THE

The Alley Dwelling Authority is the public housing agency for the District of Columbia. In normal times, its dual objective is to reclaim the slums of Washington and to assure an adequate supply of dwellings for families of low income whose housing needs are not adequately met by private enterprise. Its wartime objective is to provide, when properly designated as a Federal agency to do so, dwellings for war workers whose services are needed in Washington and for their immediate families. Its activities, in wartime, extend to the metropolitan area of Washington.

The Authority was established under the terms of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Act, approved June 12, 1934 (48 Stat. 930); amendments to this act were approved on June 25, 1938 (Public Law No. 733, 75th Cong.).

Members of the Authority were designated, and their duties generally outlined, in Executive Order No. 6868, October 9, 1934, which was amended by Executive Order No. 7784–A, January 5, 1938, and by Executive Order No. 8033, dated January 11, 1939. The Authority consists of the chairman of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia, the Architect of the Capitol, and the director of planning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The Authority's operations originally were restricted to squares containing inhabited alleys, so that these hidden communities—the characteristic slums of Washington—could be eliminated and their sites reclaimed. Amendments to the Alley Dwelling Act enlarge the alley slum reclamation program and permit the Authority to acquire sites in the District elsewhere than in "alley" squares, for the purpose of providing dwellings for persons or families substantially equal in number to those whose houses the Authority may demolish.

The amendments to the act were necessitated by the Authority's past and prospective demolitions of slum dwellings on sites unsuitable for residential redevelopment. In such instances, the Authority has reclaimed the cleared sites for nonresidential uses in harmony with the character of their neighborhoods; but a serious housing shortage would be caused if the Authority were unable to build compensatory housing in other areas.

The Authority may acquire sites by purchase, gift, or condemnation. It is authorized to replat land so acquired, to install public services, and to make such use of the sites as may be necessary; to lease, rent, maintain, equip, manage, exchange, sell, or convey any of its holdings—land or buildings—for such amounts and on such terms and conditions as it may determine.

The Authority may transfer to the Federal Government or the District government for public use any of its holdings on the payment to the Authority of their reasonable value. The Authority also may make loans to limited-dividend corporations or to home owners to enable them to acquire and develop sites on the property.

For the purposes of slum reclamation, the Authority is empowered to borrow an aggregate of $5,000,000 from the Treasury of the United States in five equal annual installments, beginning with the fiscal year 1939, such loans to bear interest at the going Federal rate. The Authority also may accept gifts of money from private sources, and may borrow funds from individuals or private corporations on the security of property and assets acquired under the act.

The act also permits the Authority to receive financial assistance from the United States Housing Authority—the functions of which have since been transferred to the Federal Public Housing Authority, National Housing Agency—to construct low-rent housing projects in accordance with the provisions of the United States Housing Act of 1937.

In addition to the foregoing, the United States Housing Act authorizes the President to make allocations of United States Housing Authority funds to the Alley Dwelling Authority for the purposes of the District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Act.

AMERICAN BATTLE MONUMENTS COMMISSION

The American Battle Monuments Commission was created by act of Congress approved March 4, 1923. It derives its authority from this and subsequent acts and Executive orders (U. S. C., title 36, ch. 8; 48 Stat., pp. 284–285; Executive Orders Nos. 6614 and 6690).

The principal duties of the Commission are: (1) To commemorate the services of the American forces in Europe during the World War by the erection of suitable memorials, by the preparation and publication of historical information and in other ways; (2) to administer and maintain the American national cemeteries and memorials in Europe; and (3) to exercise control over the erection of memorials in Europe by American citizens, States, municipalities, or associations.

The Commission's construction program, which is now completed, included the following: (a) The erection of a memorial chapel in each of the 8 American cemeteries in Europe and the construction of service buildings, caretakers' houses, and masonry walls at the cemeteries where needed; (b) the improvement of the landscaping in these cemeteries; (c) the erection of 11 memorials outside of the cemeteries; and (d) the placing of 2 bronze memorial tablets.

The Commission is responsible for the administration, supervision, and maintenance of the national cemeteries in Europe, containing the graves of 30,907 American dead, and of the chapels and other memorial features referred to above.

The Commission has prepared and published a book entitled "American Armies and Battlefields in Europe." This book, which was issued in April 1939, is a revision and elaboration of "A Guide to the American Battlefields in Europe" published by the Commission in 1927. It is the result of many years' effort and is a combined guide to the American World War battlefields in Europe and a concise history and reference work covering the activities of the American forces overseas during the period 1917–19. The book has 547 pages and is profusely illustrated, containing 561 official photographs from American, German, and Allied sources, 120 small maps and sketches, of which 27 are in color, 9 colored insert maps and charts, and 3 large-scale colored maps covering the operations of American divisions in the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne offensives. It is being sold by the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., and by bookstores at $2.75 a copy. Other historical data are now in preparation, covering operations of American divisions during the World War. It is planned to publish these data during 1943. The Commission has taken numerous photographs showing the terrain of the various battlefields where American forces were engaged during the World War. These photographs, when assembled, will be of wide interest and of great value to historians.

Under agreements with the French and Belgian Governments, no World War memorials may be erected in those countries by Americans without the advance approval of the American Battle Monuments Commission. Although many reasons make it apparent that the number of such memorials should be restricted, the Commission's policy does not prevent it from approving such memorials if they are utilitarian in nature and meet other required standards.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

The purpose of the Civil Service Act (Jan. 16, 1883), as declared in its title, is "to regulate and improve the civil service of the United States." It provides for the appointment of three commissioners, not more than two of whom shall be adherents of the same political party, and makes it the duty of the Commission to aid the President, as he may request, in preparing suitable rules for carrying the act into effect. The act requires that, as nearly as the conditions of good administration will warrant, the rules shall provide, among other things, for open competitive examinations for testing the fitness of applicants for the classified service, the making of appointments from among those passing with highest grades, and apportionment of appointments in the departments at Washington among the States and Territories, and a period of probation before absolute appointment. It prohibits the use of official authority to coerce the political action of any person or body. The act also provides for investigations touching the enforcement of the rules, and forbids, under penalty of fine or imprisonment, or both, the solicitation by any person in the service of the United States of contributions to be used for political purposes from persons in such service, or the collection of such contributions by any person in a Government building.

The Retirement Act of May 22, 1920, as amended, places under the Commission the entire administration of that act. The Commission also administers the Canal Zone Retirement Act and the Alaska Railroad Retirement Act.

The Commission was organized on March 9, 1883. The first classification of the service applied to the departments at Washington and to post offices and customhouses having as many as 50 employees, embracing 13,924 employees.

During the calendar year ending December 31, 1942, 2,407,043 appointments were made. At the end of December 1942, there were 2,810,871 employees in the executive branch of the Federal Government. Of this number, 284,068 were employed in the District of Columbia.

Examinations are held in the principal cities throughout the country through the agency of local boards of examiners, of which there are approximately 5,000. The members of these boards are detailed from other branches of the service.

The Commission also holds examinations in the Canal Zone, Alaska, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico. Under the rules, the Commission is required to render all practicable assistance to the Philippine Civil Service Bureau, and it may, if required, announce examinations for positions in the Philippine Islands.

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR AND CHIEF EXAMINER

Serves as the chief technical and executive officer of the Commission; plans, directs, controls, and is responsible for the technical and administrative work of the various divisions, field offices, and local boards of examiners, and the Commission's business and fiscal operations; serves as the principal consultant to the Commissioners and formulates and develops matters of policy, interpretation, and procedure.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Responsible for general administrative direction over the Budget and Finance Division, the Division of Personnel Supervision and Management, and the Office Services Division, as well as the management planning functions of the Commission.

EXAMINING AND PERSONNEL UTILIZATION DIVISION

BUDGET AND FINANCE DIVISION

Responsible for the preparation of estimates, statements, and auditing of expenditures; conduct of all budgetary matters, including analysis of work reports to appraise activities and work loads; has charge of accounts covering general business operations of the main office and field offices.

BOARD OF APPEALS AND REVIEW

Reviews the record and passes upon the merit of appeals from ratings in postmaster examinations; appeals from debarment from examination on account of unsuitability, or other unfavorable action on suitability; appeals from action taken in retirement cases.

PERSONNEL CLASSIFICATION DIVISION

Investigates the duties and responsibilities of positions within the scope of the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and allocates them into services, classes, and grades; prepares class specifications setting forth classification standards; investigates problems relative to the extension of the Classification Act to positions in the field service and administers classification following extensions made thereto under the provisions of the Ramspeck Act of November 26, 1940 (54 Stat. 1211); organizes and supervises the operation and procedures of efficiency rating boards of review established in Federal agencies under authority of the Ramspeck Act.

SERVICE RECORD DIVISION

Maintains service records of employees in the executive civil service; acts on cases of reinstatement, transfer, and change of status for the postal field service; acts on cases involving the granting of classified status; acts on cases of violation of the civil-service law or rules by administrative officers or employees.

INFORMATION DIVISION

Disseminates information to press and public on activities of the Federal classified service; prepares public-address material for use by Commission officials and others; prepares the Civil Service Act and Rules, the Commission's annual report.

RETIREMENT DIVISION

Administers all civil retirement systems under the Commission's jurisdiction involving the granting of annuities, refund of employees' contributions in cases of separation from the service or death, the maintenance and control of retirement accounts, and the preparation of actuarial data required for the proper operation of the retirement acts.

INVESTIGATIONS DIVISION

Investigates frauds, political-activity cases, irregularities in examinations, Executive order cases; conducts personal interviews and investigations of character, training, experience, and suitability of applicants for various classes of positions; supervises the taking of fingerprints.

MEDICAL DIVISION

Determines physical requirements for employment in the classified civil service; passes on physical fitness of applicants; plans physical examination procedures; recruits and examines personnel in medical and related fields; conducts research studies pertaining to disability retirement and sick leave, with particular reference to their bearing on the adequacy of (a) physical requirements for entering the Government service and (b) measures for promoting the health and safety of Government employees; advises the Commission on the medical aspects of disability retirement cases; renders advisory service to other Government agencies on medical matters.

OFFICE SERVICES DIVISION

Purchase and procurement of printing, supplies, and equipment; operation of duplicating machines; and supervision of matters pertaining to quarters of the Commission in Washington, D. C.; receives and distributes incoming mail; dispatches outgoing mail; classifies, indexes, and files correspondence and other matters; maintains central files and messenger service.

DIVISION OF PERSONNEL SUPERVISION AND MANAGEMENT

Has general direction and supervision of personnel matters in the Commission's organization, such as appointments, transfers, promotions, reductions, removals, position classifications, retirement, and efficiency ratings. Supervises programs for improving employee morale and hears grievances; consults with administrative heads with respect to organization problems.

COMMISSION OF FINE ARTS

By act approved May 17, 1910, Congress created as a permanent body the National Commission of Fine Arts. The Commission is "composed of seven well-qualified judges of the fine arts," who are appointed by the President and serve for a period of 4 years each, and until their successors are appointed and qualified.

Under the provisions of this organic act Congress directs that "It shall be the duty of the Commission to advise upon the location of statues, fountains, and monuments in the public squares, streets, and parks in the District of Columbia, and upon the selection of models for statues, fountains, and monuments erected under the authority of the United States and upon the selection of the artists for the execution of same. It shall be the duty of the officer charged by law to determine such questions in each case to call for such advice. The foregoing provisions of this act shall not apply to the Capitol Building of the United States and the building of the Library of Congress. The Commission shall also advise generally upon questions of art when required to do so by the President or by any committee of either House of Congress."

By Executive order dated October 25, 1910, the President directed that "Plans for no public building to be erected in the District of Columbia for the General Government shall be hereafter finally approved by the officer duly authorized until after such officer shall have submitted the plans to the Commission of Fine Arts created under the act of Congress of May 17, 1910, for its comment and advice."

On February 2, 1912, the President directed the Commission to advise the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds in regard to the improvement of any of the grounds in the city of Washington under his charge whenever such advice is asked for by that officer. That officer now uniformly consults the Commission regarding details of the development of all the parks and reservations under his control.

On November 28, 1913, the President issued the following Executive order: "It is hereby ordered that whenever new structures are to be erected in the District of Columbia under the direction of the Federal Government which affect in any important way the appearance of the city, or whenever questions involving matters of art and with which the Federal Government is concerned are to be determined, final action shall not be taken until such plans and questions have been submitted to the Commission of Fine Arts designated under the act of Congress of May 17, 1910, for comment and advice."

On July 28, 1921, the President issued the following Executive order: "It is hereby ordered that essential matters relating to the design of medals, insignia, and coins produced by the executive departments, also the design of statues, fountains, and monuments, and all important plans for parks and all public buildings, constructed by the executive departments or the District of Columbia, which in any essential way affect the appearance of the city of Washington, or the District of Columbia, shall be submitted to the Commission of Fine Arts for advice as to the merits of such designs before the executive officer having charge of the same shall approve thereof."

In order that the development of the District of Columbia may proceed harmoniously both under Federal and District jurisdictions, the President has requested the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia to consult the Commission of Fine Arts on matters of art falling under their jurisdiction and control.

The duties of the Commission, therefore, now embrace advising upon the location of statues, fountains, and monuments in the public squares, streets, and parks in the District of Columbia; upon the selection of models for statues, fountains, and monuments erected under the authority of the United States, and the selection of the artists for their execution; also for medals, insignia, and coins; upon the plans and designs for public structures and parks in the District of Columbia, as well as upon all questions involving matters of art with which the Federal Government is concerned. In addition the Commission advises upon general questions of art whenever requested to do so by the President or any committee of Congress.

The creation of the National Commission of Fine Arts in 1910 was the outcome of the Senate Park Commission of 1901, which presented plans for the development of the park system of the District of Columbia and the location of future Government buildings and memorials. These plans of 1901 were based on the plan of the National Capital prepared by Pierre Charles L'Enfant in 1792 under the direction of President Washington. The Commission of Fine Arts has been guided by the fundamental plan of 1901, which aims to secure the progressive development of Washington as the well-ordered, unified, and grand capital of a great nation.

The height, color, and design of private buildings facing public buildings and public parks in certain mapped areas in the District of Columbia are subject to the advice of the Commission, as provided in the act of May 16, 1930, known as the Shipstead-Luce Act.

The advice of the Commission of Fine Arts must be requested in the selection of lands to be acquired, under the act of Congress approved June 6, 1924, as amended, by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission for the park, parkway, and playground system in the District of Columbia and adjacent areas in Maryland and Virginia.

In the will of Charles L. Freer, giving the Smithsonian Institution the building for the Freer Gallery, together with his collections of Far Eastern art, and an endowment for the increase thereof, it is stipulated that purchases shall have the approval of the National Commission of Fine Arts.

The Congress in various legislation has required the advice of the Commission on the design and location of special monuments, memorials, and other works of commemorative art.

COMMITTEE FOR RECIPROCITY INFORMATION

The Committee for Reciprocity Information was created by Executive order in June 1934 to carry out the provisions of section 4 of the act entitled "Promotion of Foreign Trade," under which the President is authorized to enter into trade agreements with foreign countries. This section provides that before any foreign-trade agreement is concluded public notice of the negotiations shall be given in order that any interested person may have the opportunity of presenting his views to the President or to such agency as the President may designate.

The President designated the Committee for Reciprocity Information as the body to receive the views of interested parties. This Committee is composed of representatives from those Government departments or agencies concerned with the operation of the Trade Agreements Act. Its chairman is one of the members of the Committee and is named by the Secretary of State.

Under the rules promulgated by the Committee for Reciprocity Information, those wishing to present information or requests for consideration in connection with announcements as to proposed negotiations may file their material with the Committee, and may request permission to present supplementary information at the hearing which the Committee holds on each trade agreement.

The Committee also receives information on any phase of the trade-agreements program, whether relating to the operation of an agreement already made or to one under consideration, and such views may be presented verbally or by letter.

COURT OF CLAIMS OF THE UNITED STATES

This court was established by act of Congress February 24, 1855 (10 Stat. L. 612). It has general jurisdiction (36 Stat. L. 1135) of all "claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States or any law of Congress, except for pensions, or upon any regulations of an executive department, or upon any contract, express or implied, with the Government of the United States, or for damages, liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort, in respect of which claims the party would be entitled to redress against the United States, either in a court of law, equity, or admiralty, if the United States were suable, except claims growing out of the late Civil War and commonly known as war claims," and certain rejected claims.

It has jurisdiction also of claims of like character which may be referred to it by the head of any executive department involving controverted questions of fact or law. In all the above-mentioned cases the court, when it finds for the claimant, may enter judgment against the United States, payable out of the Public Treasury.

Under section 3 of the act of February 13, 1925, the Court of Claims may certify to the Supreme Court any definite and distinct questions of law concerning which instructions are desired for the proper disposition of the cause; and also in any case the Supreme Court upon the petition of either party may require by certiorari that the cause be certified to it for review and determination.

It also has jurisdiction of the claims of disbursing officers of the United States for relief from responsibility for losses of Government funds and property by capture or otherwise, without negligence, while in the line of duty.

There is a statute of limitations which prevents parties from bringing actions on their own motion beyond 6 years after the cause of action accrued, but the departments may refer claims at any time if they were pending therein within the 6 years.

By the act of March 2, 1919 (40 Stat. 772), known as the Dent Act, the Court of Claims is given jurisdiction of the class of war claims therein specified. In these cases the action of the Secretary of War upon the claim, or his failure to act thereon, is a condition precedent to the right of the claimant to commence an action in the Court of Claims.

The court also has jurisdiction of actions provided for by certain statutes passed during the last war permitting the seizure of property by the Government.

By section 151, Judicial Code (36 Stat. L. 1135), whenever any bill, except for a pension, is pending in either House of Congress providing for the payment of a claim against the United States, legal or equitable, or for a grant, gift, or bounty to any person, the House in which such bill is pending may, for the investigation and determination of facts, refer the same to the Court of Claims, which shall proceed with the same in accordance with such rules as it may adopt and report to such House the facts in the case and the amount, where the same can be liquidated, including any facts bearing upon the question whether there has been delay or laches in presenting such claim or applying for such grant, gift, or bounty, and any facts bearing upon the question whether the bar of any statute of limitation should be removed or which shall be claimed to excuse the claimant for not having resorted to any established legal remedy, together with such conclusions as shall be sufficient to inform Congress of the nature and character of the demand, either as a claim, legal or equitable, or as a gratuity against the United States, and the amount, if any, legally or equitably due from the United States to the claimant: Provided, however, That if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court upon the facts established that under existing laws or the provisions of this chapter, the subject matter of the bill is such that it has jurisdiction to render judgment or decree thereon, it shall proceed to do so, giving to either party such further opportunity for hearing as in its judgment justice shall require, and it shall report its proceedings therein to the House of Congress by which the same was referred to said court.

Section 5, act of March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. 996), provides: "That from and after the passage and approval of this act the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims shall not extend to or include any claim against the United States based upon or growing out of the destruction of any property or damage done to any property by the military or naval forces of the United States during the war for the suppression of the rebellion, nor to any claim for stores and supplies taken by or furnished to or for the use of the military or naval forces of the United States, nor to any claim for the value of any use and occupation of any real estate by the military or naval forces of the United States during said war; nor shall said Court of Claims have jurisdiction of any claim which is now barred by the provisions of any law of the United States.

The act of June 25, 1910, chapter 423 (36 Stat. L. 851–852), "An act to provide additional protection for owners of patents of the United States, and for other purposes," conferred a new jurisdiction.

There are five judges, who sit together in the hearing of cases, the concurrence of three of whom is necessary for the decision of any case.

All claims are prosecuted in the Court of Claims by an action commenced by the filing of a petition and prosecuted in accordance with the rules of the court, copies of which rules can be obtained upon application to the clerk of the court.

The court is located at Washington, D. C., in the old Corcoran Art Building, Seventeenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. The term begins on the first Monday in December each year and continues until the Saturday before the first Monday in December. Cases may be commenced and entered at any time, whether the court be in session or not.

EMPLOYEES' COMPENSATION COMMISSION, UNITED STATES

The United States Employees' Compensation Commission was created by the act of Congress approved September 7, 1916 (5 U. S. C. ch. 5), for the purpose of administering the provisions of such act providing workmen's compensation benefits for civil employees of the United States. The jurisdiction and the duties of the Commission were extended by the enactment of subsequent legislation to provide workmen's compensation protection for other employments within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. Such legislation includes the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act approved March 4, 1927

(33 U. S. C. secs. 901–950); the District of Columbia Workmen's Compensation Law of May 17, 1928 (45 Stat. 600), the act approved August 16, 1941 (Public, No. 208, 77th Cong.), and the act approved December 2, 1942 (Public, No. 784, 77th Cong.).

The benefits provided by the act of September 7, 1916, originally applicable to civil employees of the United States, have subsequently been extended to (a) Employees of the Government of the District of Columbia (except firemen and police). (b) In time of peace to members of the Reserve Corps of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, for injuries sustained in line of duty while on active duty or authorized training. (c) The Coast Guard Reserve. (d) The Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. (e) Women's Auxiliary Volunteer Emergency Service. (f) Coast Guard Women's Reserve.

The act of September 7, 1916, subject to certain modification prescribed in the act of February 15, 1934 (5 U. S. C. 796), which limit the circumstances under which compensation benefits may be extended and reduce the scale of such benefits has been made applicable to (a) Employees of the Civil Works Administration. (b) Enrollees in the Civilian Conservation Corps. (c) Persons employed as employees of the United States on projects financed by the Federal Emergency Relief Appropriation Acts. (d) Certain persons receiving assistance from the National Youth Administration. (e) Persons attached to the work corps established by the War Relocation Authority and other persons receiving compensation from such Authority for work performed.

The act of September 7, 1916, provides compensation including medical, surgical, and hospital services made necessary by reason of a personal injury sustained while in the performance of duty. In case such injury causes death within 6 years, compensation is authorized for certain surviving dependents and provision is made for payment of reasonable burial expenses. No benefits may be authorized if the injury is caused by the willful misconduct of the injured person or by his intention to bring about the injury or death of himself or another, or if intoxication of the injured person is the proximate cause of the injury or death.

Compensation under the basic law of September 7, 1916, may be extended to eligible persons for disability or death resulting from an injury by accident or a disease proximately caused by the employment. Persons engaged in employments to which the limitations in the act of February 15, 1934, are applicable may receive benefits only for the effects of a traumatic injury which under a statutory definition is limited to injury by accident. Claims for compensation must be filed within one year.

Medical and hospital treatment must be obtained from a United States medical officer or hospital. However, if this is not practicable, treatment must be obtained from a physician or hospital designated by the United States Employees' Compensation Commission. When neither of these is available treatment may be obtained from the nearest physician or hospital.

The monthly compensation for total disability may not be more than $116.66 nor less than $58.33, unless the employee's monthly pay is less than the latter amount, in which case his compensation shall be the full amount of his monthly pay. The minimum rate of $58.33 is not applicable in the case of an employee who is not a citizen of the United States and who is injured outside the continental limits of the United States. Beneficiaries receiving compensation under an award for permanent total disability, which renders them so helpless as to require the constant services of an attendant, may receive additional compensation at a rate not in excess of $50 per month. The maximum monthly compensation for persons employed on work-relief projects was increased from $25 to $30 on June 29, 1937, and to $50 on June 21, 1938. There is no minimum rate applicable to such cases.

Compensation for partial disability is payable at a rate equal to 66⅔ percent of the difference between the employee's monthly pay and his earning capacity after the beginning of such disability. Employees on relief projects are entitled to compensation for partial disability in accordance with a special schedule covering specific injuries.

In case of death, compensation is payable to the widow or dependent widower, to children under the age of 18 years, to dependent parents or grandparents, and to other dependents under certain conditions.

By Executive orders the administration of the Compensation Act so far as it relates to the Panama Canal employees and employees of the Alaska Railroad has been placed under the heads of those organizations. Decisions of the manager of the Alaska Railroad are subject to review by the Commission upon appeal.

The Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, approved March 4, 1927, covers employees in private industry engaged in maritime employment on the navigable waters of the United States (including drydocks) who sustain injury or death arising out of, and in course of, employment. These employees are mostly longshoremen and men engaged in repair work on vessels. It does not include the master or members of the crews of vessels, nor persons engaged by the master to load or unload or repair vessels under 18 tons. The compensation features of the act were effective July 1, 1927. Compensation is paid by the employer and the cost of administration by the United States.

On and after July 1, 1927, every employer having employees coming under the provisions of the act is required to secure payment of compensation by insurance in a company authorized by the Commission or self-insurance authorized by the Commission. A heavy penalty is provided for failure to secure compensation. A severe penalty is also provided for the employing of any stevedoring firm which does not present a certificate of compliance.

The Commission is required to make the rules and regulations under this act, prescribe forms, establish compensation districts, and appoint and assign Deputy Commissioners to such districts. The Deputy Commissioners are required to issue certificates of compliance with insurance provisions, enforce requirements as to reports and penalties, regulate medical and legal fees, hold hearings when necessary or demanded by either party, make investigations, allow or disallow claims, examine settlements when hearings are not required to see that the injured employee has received the benefits of the law, take action in case of default in payment, and certify records upon appeal to the courts. Appeal to the Federal courts from the decision of the Deputy Commissioner may be had upon questions of law.

Compensation for total disability is two-thirds of the average weekly pay, not to exceed a maximum of $25 per week, with a minimum of $8 per week. There is a schedule of benefits for permanent partial disability. Death benefits are payable to the widow until remarriage and to children until they reach the age of 18, also to other dependents under certain circumstances. Reasonable funeral expenses not to exceed $200 are provided. The total compensation payable for injury or death in any one case shall not exceed the sum of $7,500.

The act approved May 17, 1928, which became effective July 1, 1928, made applicable to employers and employees in the District of Columbia the provisions of the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, thus extending the principles of workmen's compensation to employment in the District of Columbia.

The act excludes from its benefits the master and a member of a crew of any vessel, such men having the rights known as maintenance and cure and the rights given by the Federal Employers' Liability Act; the employees of railroads when engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, who are also specifically provided for by the Federal Employers' Liability Act; and employees engaged in domestic service or agriculture; and those engaged in casual employment not in the usual course of the trade, business, occupation, or profession of the employer.

Compensation is paid by the employer through an insurance carrier authorized by the Commission or direct as a self-insurer under conditions prescribed by the Commission.

By the act approved August 16, 1941, as amended by the act of December 2, 1942 (Public Law 784, 77th Cong.), the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, with certain modifications, has been made applicable in respect to the injury or death of any employee engaged in any employment at any military, air, or naval base acquired after January 1, 1940, by the United States from any foreign government or upon lands occupied or used by the United States for military or naval purposes in any Territory or possession outside the continental United States, including Alaska, the Naval Operating Base, Guantanamo, Cuba, the Philippine Islands, and the Canal Zone, irrespective of the place where the injury or death occurs, and employees of contractors with the United States engaged in any public works to be performed outside the continental limits of the United States. The effect of the act of August 16, 1941, as amended, is to provide workmen's compensation coverage under a Federal law for all employments in connection with construction work at national defense bases and other public works outside the continental United States. In the administration of this act the Commission is authorized to establish compensation districts to include any areas to which the act applies, and to assign personnel to administer the law locally within such districts.

Public Law 784, approved December 2, 1942, also provides certain benefits in the nature of workmen's compensation for persons missing as a result of enemy action or captured by an enemy while in the employ of contractors with the United States in operations under such contract outside the continental limits of the United States. Such benefits also extend to certain persons engaged by the United States under a personal service contract and to civilian employees of a post exchange or ship-service store outside the United States. Provision is also made for the payment of allowances to the dependents of such missing persons and for repatriation upon release from custody. The Commission is authorized to make rules and regulations for the administration of such benefits which are payable from the annual appropriation to the Commission for the Employees' Compensation Fund.

Public Law 784 also provides for reimbursement to employers, insurance carriers, and compensation funds for benefits paid under a workmen's compensation law in certain cases of injury or death occurring outside the United States as a result of a war risk hazard. Reimbursement is also provided for payments made with respect to the death of certain persons where such payments are in pursuance of an agreement made in accordance with a contract between the United States and the contractor employer and for benefits paid in respect to the failure of the United States or its contractor to furnish return transportation upon the completion of the employment of an employee. Such reimbursement is to be made from the Employees' Compensation Fund under such awards as the Commission may approve.

FEDERAL BOARD OF HOSPITALIZATION

It is the duty of the Board to give consideration to, and make recommendations on, questions which may arise concerning the proper coordination of the Federal hospital facilities, with particular reference to (a) the use of existing facilities and (b) the construction of additional facilities.

The Board acts upon matters relating to hospitalization insofar as they pertain to the Federal Government when such matters are referred to it either by the President, the Director of the Bureau of the Budget, the head of any Government agency, or the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

FEDERAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSION

The Federal Communications Commission was created by an act of Congress approved June 19, 1934, as subsequently amended, for the purpose of regulating interstate and foreign commerce in communication by wire and radio so as to make available, so far as possible, to all people of the United States a rapid, efficient, Nation-wide, and world-wide wire and radio communication service with adequate facilities at reasonable charges, for the purpose of the national defense, for the purpose of promoting safety of life and property through the use of wire and radio communication, and for the purpose of securing a more effective execution of this policy by centralizing authority theretofore granted by law to several agencies and by granting additional authority with respect to interstate and foreign commerce in wire and radio communication.

The Commission exercises functions previously vested in the Federal Radio Commission, which was abolished by the Communications Act; certain functions previously exercised by the Interstate Commerce Commission with respect to telegraph operation; powers formerly exercised by the Postmaster General with respect to Government telegraph rates; and powers formerly exercised by the State Department under the Cable Landing License Act. The powers of the Commission extend beyond those previously vested in these other agencies in the communications field. The powers conferred by the Communications Act also include authority for the Commission to exercise additional powers derived under many international agreements relating to communications.

The Commission is composed of seven members and functions as a unit. The Commission makes all important policy determinations and directly supervises all activities of the staff. From time to time committees of the Commission, consisting usually of three members, are delegated to make special studies and supervise particular undertakings. The performance of specified functions is delegated to individual commissioners, to the Administrative Board, consisting of heads of departments, and to the heads of certain departments as individuals.

The staff organization consists of the following departments:

Accounting, Statistical, and Tariff Department (chief accountant), whose functions include matters of accounting regulation, compilation and analysis of statistics, and tariff analysis and regulations.

Engineering Department (chief engineer), whose functions include the engineering phases of broadcast, common carrier, and private and ship service regulation and enforcement; international and interdepartmental matters; supervision of the field staff; and technical engineering information and research.

Law Department (general counsel), whose functions include the legal phases of radio licensing and of common carrier regulation; conduct of investigations; administration (including legislation, rule-making, and international matters) and litigation before the courts.

Secretary's office (secretary of the Commission), which has charge of all matters of internal administration.

Title I of the Communications Act contains provisions defining the purposes of the statute, fixing the terms and compensation of Commissioners, and conferring general powers. The statute provides that with certain exceptions employees of the Commission shall be appointed subject to the provisions of the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923.

Title II applies to all common carriers engaged in interstate or foreign communication by wire or radio. The act specifically provides that persons engaged in radio broadcasting shall not be deemed common carriers. Common carriers are required by title II to furnish communication service upon reasonable request, to establish physical connections with other carriers, to establish through routes and charges and the divisions thereof, and to establish and provide facilities. All charges and practices are required to be just and reasonable, and it is declared unlawful for any carrier to make unjust or unreasonable discriminations or to extend undue or unreasonable preferences or advantages in connection with communication service. Carriers are required to publish and file with the Commission tariffs for all charges showing the practices affecting such charges. The Commission is given powers to hold hearings as to the lawfulness of charges, to suspend tariffs, and to prescribe just and reasonable rates. Persons claiming to suffer damages as a result of action by common carriers subject to the act may make complaint to the Commission, and the Commission is required to investigate such complaints and may make an award of damages. Carriers are required to file their contracts with the Commission. Persons seeking to hold office in more than one carrier company subject to the act must obtain the Commission's consent. The Commission has power to make valuations of carrier property, to make inquiries into management, to require the filing of annual reports, to prescribe systems of account, to authorize consolidations of telephone companies, and to authorize extensions of lines.

Title III contains provisions relating to radio and is divided into two parts. Part I contains provisions respecting radio licensing and regulation. The purpose of the act is declared to be to maintain the control by the United States over all channels of interstate and foreign radio transmission; and to provide for the use of such channels, but not the ownership thereof, by persons for limited periods of time, under licenses granted by Federal authority. It is made unlawful for any person to operate any apparatus for the transmission of energy or communications or signals by radio within any State, Territory or possession when the effects of such use extend beyond the borders thereof, or upon vessels or aircraft of the United States, except in accordance with a license issued by the Commission. The statute requires that the operation of radio transmitting apparatus shall be carried on only by persons holding operators' licenses issued by the Commission. The radio license requirements do not apply to the Philippine Islands or to the Canal Zone. The Commission does not have jurisdiction with respect to radio stations belonging to and operated by the United States which may use such frequencies as may be assigned by the President.

The Commission is authorized to classify radio stations, prescribe the nature of their service, assign frequencies, and make regulations to carry out the purposes of the act. It also has authority to revoke or modify licenses. Broadcast licenses may not be for a longer term than 3 years, and the Commission rules and regulations provide for a 1-year term for such licenses.

With a few minor exceptions, the statute provides that no license shall be issued unless a permit for the construction of the station has first been issued. Applications for construction permits and licenses must be in writing and sworn to by the applicant. The act contains provisions against the holding of licenses by aliens, foreign corporations, representatives of foreign governments, domestic corporations in which an alien is an officer or director or in which an alien owns or votes more than one-fifth of the stock, or by any person whose license has been revoked by a court for violation of the antitrust laws.

The standard governing the granting of licenses is public interest, convenience, or necessity. If the Commission is able to determine from an examination of an application that public interest, convenience, or necessity would be served by a grant thereof, it is required to grant such application without a hearing. If it cannot so determine, it must afford the applicant notice and opportunity to be heard.

The act prohibits assignment of licenses and transfer of control of licensee corporations except upon written consent of the Commission.

The statute provides that if the person who is a legally qualified candidate for public office is permitted to use a broadcast station, equal opportunity shall be afforded to all other candidates for that office in the use of the broadcast station. The broadcasting of information concerning lotteries, gift enterprises, and similar schemes, and the utterance of obscene, indecent, or profane language by means of radio are prohibited. The act provides that the Commission shall have no power of censorship over radio communications.

Part II of title III requires the use of radio for safety purposes on board certain classes of ships of the United States and also confers powers on the Commission to carry out the provisions of the Safety of Life at Sea Convention (London,1929).

Title IV contains procedural and administrative provisions. It confers jurisdiction on three-judge district courts to enforce, enjoin, set aside, annul, or suspend any order of the Commission under the act (except any order granting or refusing an application for a construction permit for a radio station, or for a radio station license, or for renewal of an existing radio station license, or for modification of an existing radio station license, or suspending a radio operator's license). Orders so excepted are subject to review by appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, by the applicant whose application is denied, by any other person aggrieved or whose interests are adversely affected by the action of the Commission granting or refusing an application, or by a radio operator whose license is suspended.

The Commission is also given power to make investigations on its own motion and to issue subpenas and to receive depositions. The statute provides for cooperation by the Commission with State commissions with respect to common carrier matters.

Title V contains penal and forfeiture provisions. In general violations of the statute are punishable by a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 2 years, or both. Violation of a rule of the Commission is punishable by a fine of not more than $500 for each day during which the offense occurs. Forfeitures are recoverable in United States courts and the Commission is given powers in certain cases to remit and mitigate forfeitures.

Title VI prohibits the unauthorized interception and publication of communications. During the continuance of a war in which the United States is engaged, or upon proclamation by the President that there exists war or a threat of war, or a state of public peril or disaster, or other national emergency, special powers are conferred upon the President in connection with communications.

WAR ACTIVITIES

There are three new units in the Commission devoted entirely to war work. The Radio Intelligence Division (formerly National Defense Operations Section) was established in the Engineering Department on July 1, 1940, to set up and direct the activities of monitoring stations throughout continental United States, its Territories and possessions. By means of these stations, all radio communications channels are kept under continuous surveillance. Persons detected operating unauthorized stations are subject to criminal prosecution. Other special projects are undertaken from time to time either on the initiative of the Commission or at the request of other departments.

The Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service was created by the Commission in February 1941 and is now constituted as one of its departments. The function of this Service is to record, translate, analyze, and report to certain officials of the Government all broadcasts of foreign origin. This activity is carried on for three major purposes: (1) To keep abreast of propaganda activities of other countries; (2) to interpret present conditions in and the future policy of countries whose broadcasts are analyzed; and (3) to make available to the Government news and information not made available by media other than radio broadcasts. Five listening posts are operated by this Service. Selected items of importance are teletyped from these units to certain civilian and military branches of the Government 24 hours a day, and daily and weekly reports are published and sent to certain Government officials.

In addition to the work performed by the three units referred to above, there are a large number of wartime projects carried on by the Commission. For example, personnel of the Commission contribute to the work of the Communications Branch of the War Production Board and to the work of the Board of War Communications.

The functions of the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service (director), fall outside the normal regulatory and licensing activities of the Commission, but include the analysis and reporting to other Federal agencies of the content of foreign radio broadcasts, especially those from enemy sources.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was organized under authority of the Banking Act of 1933, approved by the President on June 16, 1933 (Public, No. 66, 73d Cong.). This act was amended by Public, No. 362, approved June 16, 1934 (73d Cong.); by Public Resolution No. 38, approved June 28, 1935 (74th Cong.); by the Banking Act of 1935, approved August 23, 1935 (Public, No. 305, 74th Cong.); and by Public Resolution No. 83, approved April 21, 1936 (74th Cong.).

The management of the Corporation is vested in a board of directors of three members, two of whom are appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, the third member being the Comptroller of the Currency.

The capital stock of the Corporation, according to the requirements of law, is as follows: The Treasury of the United States has subscribed $150,000,000. Each Federal Reserve bank has subscribed to stock in an amount equal to one-half of the surplus of such bank on January 1, 1933, the total amount of such subscription being $139,299,556.99.

The chief function of the Corporation is to insure the deposits of all banks which are entitled to the benefits of insurance under the law, to the extent of $5,000 for each depositor. All national banks and all Federal Reserve member banks are insured under the law, and any bank located in the States of the United States and the District of Columbia which is not a member of the Federal Reserve System, may become insured upon application to and examination by the Corporation, and approval by the board of directors. The benefits of insurance are also extended to banks in Hawaii, Alaska, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The creation of an insurance reserve is provided for through annual assessment at the rate of one-twelfth of 1 percent upon the average deposits, less authorized deductions, of each insured bank.

A second function of the Corporation is to act as receiver for insured banks which fail. The Corporation is appointed receiver for all national banks which fail and may be appointed receiver for closed insured State banks if such appointment is tendered by the State banking authority and is permitted by State law. Upon the closing of an insured bank, the Corporation immediately assumes the insured deposit liability of the closed bank and makes available the funds needed to discharge such liability. For this purpose the Corporation may, if it finds that it is advisable, organize a new national bank. The claim of each insured depositor is paid upon assignment to the Corporation by him of all rights to dividends and recovers on account, and to the extent of his insured deposit.

Further, the Corporation may make loans secured by assets of an open or closed insured bank, or may purchase such assets, or may guarantee any other insured bank against loss by reason of its assuming the liabilities of another open or closed insured bank, whenever, in the judgment of the board of directors, such action will reduce the risk or avert threatened loss to the Corporation and facilitate a merger or consolidation of an insured bank with another insured bank.

Of the 14,877 operating banks in the United States and possessions on December 31, 1941, deposits in 13,482 banks, including 52 mutual savings banks, were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. As of that date 6,616 banks, members of the Federal Reserve System, had been automatically admitted to membership, and 6,814 nonmember banks, other than mutual savings banks, had made application and had been accepted for membership.

FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION

Creation and authority.—As created under the Federal Water Power Act, of June 10, 1920 (41 Stat. 1063, 16 U. S. C. 791–823), the Federal Power Commission was originally composed of the Secretaries of War, Interior, and Agriculture. It was reorganized on December 22, 1930, under the act of June 23, 1930 (46 Stat. 797; 16 U. S. C. 792), with five full-time commissioners appointed by the President. Its duties were enlarged under title II of the Public Utility Act of 1935, approved August 26, 1935 (49 Stat. 838, 16 U. S. C. 791–825r), to include jurisdiction, not only over water power projects on navigable streams or affecting the interests of interstate or foreign commerce, or upon public lands, as previously provided, but also over the interstate movement of electric energy. The short title of the act was changed to Federal Power Act. The provisions of the Federal Water Power Act, amended for clarification of certain features, appear as part I of the Federal Power Act, while the new provisions relating to interstate movement of electric energy are set forth in part II. Part III contains certain general administrative provisions applicable to matters arising under both parts I and II.

The authority of the Commission was further extended by the Tennessee Valley Authority Act (48 Stat. 58), as amended in 1935 (49 Stat. 1028), the Bonneville Project Act (50 Stat. 720), the Fort Peck Project Act (52 Stat. 403), the Flood Control Act of 1938 (52 Stat. 1215), and the Natural Gas Act (52 Stat. 821).

Congress in the Federal Power Act conferred on the Commission definite and far-reaching duties and responsibilities in time of war or other national emergency, including the taking over by Presidential order of hydro plants for munitions manufacture (sec. 16); requirement of interconnections and delivery of power (sec. 202c); and the relation of power capacity and output to the national defense (sec. 311).

These statutory war duties were substantially broadened and strengthened by the President through his directive of June 14, 1940, authorizing the planning of power supply to meet national defense demands, and the protection of power facilities against hostile acts; through Executive Order 9165 extending the plant protection program to gas utilities and power and irrigation water facilities; through the directives of September 26 and October 22, 1942, authorizing the Commission to review all power contracts for war plants and establishments and arrange for the procurement of such power from the cheapest available sources; and through the directive of December 12, 1942, authorizing Commission review of the adequacy of the existing power program.

FEDERAL POWER ACT

Part I.—Part I represents the declared policy of Congress to provide for the development and improvement of navigation and the development, transmission, and utilization of power on streams subject to Federal jurisdiction, upon lands of the United States, and at Government dams, by private and public agencies acting under licenses issued by the Commission. Such licenses may be issued only after satisfactory evidence has been submitted that the applicant has complied with the requirements of specified State laws; and if the navigable capacity of any navigable waters of the United States will be affected, only upon the approval of the plans for the project by the Chief of Engineers and the Secretary of War; or if a reservation is affected, only upon such conditions as the secretary of the department under whose supervision it falls shall deem necessary for its adequate protection and utilization.

Licenses so issued are subject to the following conditions: To effectuate the foregoing policies; to protect reservations of the United States; to adapt each project to a comprehensive plan for improving or developing a waterway or waterways for interstate or foreign commerce, for the improvement and utilization of water power, and for other beneficial uses, including recreational purposes; to reimburse the United States for the cost of administration of part I of the act and to recompense it for the use of lands; to expropriate excessive profits until the States shall make provision for their prevention or expropriation; to provide for the payment of assessments for benefits from headwater improvements; to give the United States the option to recapture licensed projects at the expiration of the licenses; to obtain the maintenance and operation of navigation facilities and fishways; and to provide for reasonable regulation of rates, services, and security issues of parties involved, in the absence of State regulation. The act also provides for investigations of unlicensed projects subject to Federal regulation and the issuance of orders in the public interest to conserve and utilize navigation and water power resources.

Part II.—Part II of the Federal Power Act embodies a comprehensive scheme for the regulation of electric utilities engaged in interstate commerce. The policy is to extend Federal regulation to matters which cannot be regulated by the States and also to exert Federal authority to strengthen and assist the States in the exercise of their regulatory powers. In general, the regulatory provisions of the act apply to persons owning and operating facilities for the transmission of electric energy in interstate commerce or for the sale of electric energy at wholesale in interstate commerce, with certain exceptions—for example, facilities used in local distribution. Provision is made for the encouragement of voluntary interconnection and coordination of facilities; for compulsory interconnections under certain circumstances; for authorizing transmission of electric energy from the United States to a foreign country when it will not impair the sufficiency of electric supply within the United States or impede or tend to impede coordination of facilities; for the approval of the transfer of assets, under certain conditions, involving companies subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission; for the approval of the issuance of long-term securities in accordance with specified standards, and for the scrutiny of the issuance of short-term securities, involving companies subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission where the companies are not organized and operating in a State under the laws of which its security issues are regulated by a State Commission.

Further provisions apply to the charging of just, reasonable, nondiscriminatory and nonpreferential rates in connection with the transmission or sale of electric energy subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission; and for the furnishing of proper, adequate, and sufficient service in the interstate transmission or sale of electric energy.

Part III.—Part III requires approval of the holding of interlocking positions in the companies subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission, in security underwriting companies, and in electrical equipment supply companies when neither public nor private interests will be adversely affected thereby.

Purpose of Natural Gas Act.—The Natural Gas Act is intended to regulate those engaged in the transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce or the sale in interstate commerce of such gas for resale for ultimate public consumption for domestic, commercial, industrial, or any other purpose.

The policy of the Congress in this connection is to extend Federal regulation to certain phases of the business of transporting and selling natural gas for ultimate distribution to the public which cannot be regulated by the States, also to assert Federal authority to strengthen and assist the States in the exercise of their regulatory powers.

Organization.—The Commission is composed of five members, one of whom is elected chairman, and another, vice chairman. The commissioners are assisted by a group of examiners in the matter of presiding at and conducting hearings. The principal administrative subdivisions in the Commission are the Office of the Secretary, which coordinates activities of all bureaus and divisions; the Budget and Fiscal Office, which manages and coordinates business operations; the Director of Personnel, who handles all personnel matters; and the Publications Division, which is responsible for issuance and distribution of public reports relating to the Commission's activities. The Commission's technical staff in subdivided into the Bureau of Electrical Engineering, which supervises power requirements, supply and war phases of the Commission's activities; the Office of the Chief Engineer, which advises the Commission on engineering matters; the Bureau of Water Power, which handles flood control and licensed projects work; the Bureau of Accounts, Finance, and Rates, which supervises the preparation of systems of accounts, auditing and accounting, inquiries into existing rates and charges, and similar work, with various divisions which handle specific portions of the general work of the Bureau; and the Bureau of Law, which advises the Commission on all legal questions.

Declarations of intention.—Upon the filing of declarations of intention to construct project works on streams or their parts, other than those defined as navigable waters, and over which Congress has jurisdiction, the Commission makes investigations and adopts findings as to whether the interests of interstate or foreign commerce would be affected by the proposed construction.

Preliminary permits.—Upon applications filed, the Commission, in proper cases, issues preliminary permits and renewals for the purpose of maintaining priority of application for a license for a total of not more than 3 years.

Licenses.—Upon application, the Commission, in proper cases, issues licenses and amendments thereto, approves their transfer, and fixes and collects annual charges for them.

Recapture of licensed projects.—The Commission determines the actual legitimate original cost of projects constructed under license. The proportion of surplus earnings in excess of a specified reasonable rate or return is determined by the Commission and is to be held until the termination of the license or to be applied from time to time in reduction of the net investment of the licensee, which is to be paid by the United States in the event of recapture. It fixes the amount of such specified rate of return. The Commission prescribes and enforces a system of accounts to be maintained by licensees.

Rates, services, and securities of licensees.—Licensees and their customers and subsidiaries which are interstate public utility companies are subject to the provisions of part II.

The Commission, under part II, has jurisdiction over the transmission of electrical energy in interstate commerce and over the sale of electrical energy at wholesale in interstate commerce. This part provides for close cooperation with State agencies with respect to the rates and services of electric utilities.

Headwater benefits.—In cases where a licensee or other power developer benefits directly from a headwater improvement of another licensee, a permittee, or of the United States, the Commission determines the equitable part of the annual charges for interest, maintenance, and depreciation to be paid to the owner thereof by the lower power developer benefited.

Reservations of United States lands for power purposes.—Upon application, the Commission determines whether the value of lands of the United States reserved for power purposes from entry, location, or other disposal, will be injured or destroyed for the purposes of power development by location, entry, or selection under the public land laws and, in the event of a favorable determination, so notifies the Secretary of the Interior, who then declares such lands open to location, entry, or selection in accordance with the provisions of the act.

Investigations of water-power resources.—The Commission conducts general investigations of water-power resources and their relation to interstate and foreign commerce, and of the water-power industry and its relation to other industries, cooperating with State and national agencies in its investigations and publishing the results of its work in special and annual reports.

Authorizations and orders under parts II and III.—In accordance with provisions of parts II and III of the Federal Power Act, the Commission receives and passes on applications for compulsory interconnections; authorizes and approves the sale, lease, merger, or consolidation of facilities or purchase of securities; and authorizes the issue of securities or assumption of obligation or liability as guarantor, endorser, surety, or otherwise, in respect to any security of another person.

The Commission receives and considers reports of the issue or renewal of, or assumption of liability on, short-term notes or drafts. It also receives and considers schedules of rates and charges concerning transmission or sale of electric energy subject to its jurisdiction and conducts inquiries into the lawfulness of rates and service, and in connection therewith may suspend the operation of new rate schedules for a limited period of time. Upon complaint, it investigates rates and charges involved in any transmission or sale subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission, or service rendered, and may issue orders prescribing the rates, charges, or service.

State cooperation.—For the purpose of facilitating cooperation with State commissions in accordance with the provisions of the act authorizing the establishment of joint boards composed of representatives of the States affected, and authorizing conferences with State commissions, the Commission has adopted a cooperative procedure of a flexible nature with provision for special procedure in particular cases.

Uniform systems of accounts.—The Commission has prescribed uniform systems of accounts for public utilities subject to its jurisdiction and for its licensees.

Reports to the Commission.—The Commission prescribes, receives, and compiles data from periodical reports as follows:

1. Annual reports, rendered by every electric utility, setting forth complete financial and statistical data as to assets, liabilities, revenues, generating capacity, number of consumers, and similar information.

2. Power system reports rendered by every electric utility system, setting forth information with respect to generating and transmission facilities, load, and load characteristics.

3. Monthly and annual reports containing such information as production of electricity for public use, fuel consumed, and stocks of fuel on hand.

4. Reports from electric utilities and industrial corporations with respect to their electric power requirements and supply for war purposes.

Special reports are prescribed, received, and compiled from time to time, as, for example, reports on areas served by each electric utility.

Enforcement of Federal Power Act.—Upon complaint or on its own initiative, the Commission conducts investigations with respect to possible violations of the Federal Power Act or of any license, rule, regulation, or order thereunder. It either refers court proceedings under the act to the Attorney General or is represented by its own attorneys.

Recommendations to Congress.—The Commission conducts investigations to secure information to serve as a basis for recommending to Congress further legislation concerning the matters to which the Federal Power Act relates.

Reports by the Commission.—The Commission publishes annual reports to Congress; annual reports of electric rates throughout the United States, a National Electric Rate Book; monthly reports of production of electric energy in the United States, and annual reports of electric power statistics covering production and generating capacity. In addition, special reports on power matters are published from time to time.

Regional districts.—For the purpose of assuring an abundant supply of electric energy throughout the United States with the greatest possible economy and with regard to the proper utilization and conservation of natural resources, the Commission has tentatively divided the country into regional districts for the voluntary interconnection and coordination of facilities for the generation, transmission, and sale of electric energy, and has so informed all State commissions and other interested parties, whose views and recommendations on the subject are invited.

WAR ACTIVITIES

Authority under present acts.—In addition to its peacetime functions, the Commission, under the Federal Power Act, has authority:

1. To investigate the entire operation of the power industry and, more particularly, the capacity and output of all facilities for the generation, transmission, and distribution of electricity in relation to the war (sec. 311).

2. During the continuance of any war in which the United States is engaged, or whenever the Commission determines that an emergency exists by reason of a sudden increase in the demand for electric energy, or shortage of electric energy or of facilities for the generation of electric energy, or other causes, either upon its own motion or upon complaint, with or without notice, hearing or report, to require by order such temporary connections of facilities and such generation, delivery, interchange, or transmission of electric energy as in its judgment will best meet the emergency and serve the public interest (sec. 202 (c)).

The act also provides that the United States may take over and operate any licensed hydroelectric project upon a written order of the President stating that the safety of the United States demands it "for the purpose of manufacturing nitrates, explosives or munitions of war, or for any other purpose involving the safety of the United States" (sec. 16).

Under the Natural Gas Act the Commission has power to order natural-gas companies to extend their transportation facilities or connect with local distributors of gas upon certain findings that such action is desirable in the public interest, and that the natural-gas company involved is not subject to undue burden or impairment of service (sec. 7 (a)).

Direction of the President.—On June 14, 1940, the President gave written instructions to the chairman of the Federal Power Commission directing the Commission, among other things, to survey defense-power needs and, in cooperation with other Government agencies, work out plans to protect the power supply against hostile acts. To carry out promptly the President's instructions, the Commission, at a special meeting on June 15, 1940, authorized its chairman to organize the staff for national defense duties. Under authority of the Federal Power Act, a specially qualified National Defense Power Staff was set up within the organization to survey defense-power needs and provision for meeting those needs, and to cooperate with the National Power Policy Committee and the national defense agencies in assuring an adequate and dependable power supply in case of emergency.

Agreement with War Production Board.—In order to coordinate the Commission's war activities with those of the War Production Board, the two agencies agreed on April 24, 1942, to unite their efforts in meeting and handling wartime power problems.

WAR POWER STAFF

Under this agreement the War Production Board has responsibility for: (1) The programming of equipment and materials which can be made available for power supply purposes; (2) the determination of power supply and demand in relation to the war production program and essential civilian activities; (3) the planning, development, and administration of power supply allocation programs for those regions where the available supply proves insufficient; and (4) the mobilization of power to meet specific war production requirements. The Federal Power Commission has made available to the War Production Board certain of its engineering staff to assist on those phases of the war activities and to coordinate the work of the two agencies.

The Federal Power Commission exercises its full statutory powers under the Federal Power Act and amendments thereto. Through its War Power Staff, it collects, compiles, and tabulates information regarding the generation, transmission, distribution, and sale of electric energy, and publishes monthly reports on power system capacities and loads; surveys, in cooperation with other Government agencies, electric and gas utility properties to determine measures to be taken to protect against sabotage and other hostile acts; maintains continuing studies on the need for interconnection and coordination of power facilities and, where essential to the war effort and materials therefor are available, orders the construction and utilization of such interconnections; makes periodic reports on utility and industrial power facilities; and makes special studies related to the power situation as required or requested by the War Production Board or other agencies.

Facilities protection work.—In his letter of June 14, 1940, the President directed the Commission to work out plans for the protection of power supply against hostile acts, and to this end to cooperate with the utilities and other Government agencies, including the Department of Justice, in protecting generating stations, interconnecting transmission lines, important substations and distribution facilities required to assure power supply to key industrial plants. In Executive Order 9165 dated May 19, 1942, providing for the protection of essential facilities from sabotage and other destructive acts, the President directed the Federal Power Commission, subject to and in conformity with the standards, plans, directives, and procedures of the Office of Civilian Defense, to develop and execute the Facility Security Program with respect to gas utilities. Executive Order 9165 also directed the Federal Power Commission and the Department of the Interior jointly to undertake the same responsibilities with respect to power and irrigation water, and related facilities.

WAR POWER CONTRACTS

Under date of September 26, 1942, the President addressed to the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy, the chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, the chairman of the Defense Plant Corporation, the chairman of the War Production Board, and the Administrator of the National Housing Agency the following letter:

"It is of the utmost importance that the costs of the war program be held to a minimum consistent with the fullest and most rapid progress. In arranging for the electric power supply for war plants or establishments, the cheapest sources of power consistent with war requirements should be used.

"Public and private power supplying agencies should be advised as far in advance as possible of the prospective location and requirements of plants or establishments on or near their systems in order that they may assist in solving the power supply problems involved at the lowest possible cost. In many instances it should be possible to lessen power costs if provision is made for power to be supplied to the consuming agencies directly from the power generating agency. If the lines of the lowest cost power supplying agency do not connect immediately with the war plants, there is no reason why connecting lines of other companies or agencies should not be utilized for a reasonable transmission charge. I am asking the Federal Power Commission to cooperate by using its emergency powers when necessary to make available transmission and other appropriate services for the effectuation of this policy.

"I do not think that companies not themselves having sufficient power to supply war plants should be purchasing power from neighboring public power agencies for resale to these plants at a substantial profit. In such cases business-like procedure would suggest that the power be purchased directly from the power supplying agencies and reasonable transmission charges be paid to the transmitting companies.

"Adoption of my suggestion will not discriminate in favor of public or private power, but will accord with sound business practice."

On October 22, 1942, the President also sent to the chairman of the Federal Power Commission a letter and outline of procedure, the texts of which follow:

"I would like the Federal Power Commission, after consultation with the procurement agencies and the War Production Board, to establish the procedure, outlined in the attached memorandum, to effectuate the policies set forth in my letter of September 26, 1942, addressed to the War Department, Navy Department, Maritime Commission, Defense Plant Corporation, National Housing Agency, and the War Production Board."

OUTLINE OF PROCEDURE FOR PURCHASE OF POWER FOR WAR PLANTS AND ESTABLISHMENTS

"(1) Each agency directly or indirectly responsible for power procurement to designate a Power Procurement Officer to handle all contracts and arrangements for electric power as hereinafter provided.

"(2) Each agency to direct its representatives to report promptly to the Power Procurement Officer each proposed procurement of power, in excess of a reasonable minimum, which involves Government approval or any Government obligation. Such reports to include all essential facts in accordance with forms approved by the Federal Power Commission.

"(3) Power Procurement Officers to refer such reports promptly to the Federal Power Commission, together with proposed contracts, for determination whether cheaper power supply is available and, if so, how it can be delivered. Federal Power Commission to issue necessary orders after consultation with War Production Board as to priorities and allocations.

"(4) Federal Power Commission to determine whether proposed rates and conditions are reasonable and, if unreasonable, to fix proper terms and otherwise cooperate with Power Procurement Officers in effectuating arrangements necessary for securing power on best possible terms.

"(5) Review and re-negotiation of existing contracts to be in accordance with above procedure."

The Commission undertook immediately to put the program into operation by meeting on October 28, 1942, with representatives of six Federal procurement agencies. In opening the conference, chairman Leland Olds briefly reviewed the President's directives and stated that the Federal Power Commission would serve as the central agency for the determination, in accordance with sound business practice, of problems of procurement officers in contracting for power supply for war industries or establishments involving Government approval or any Government obligation. On November 11, 1942, chairman Olds addressed the following letter to the various procurement agencies outlining the responsibilities of power procurement officers and defining, as follows, contracts subject to review procedure:

"For the present, the procedure will apply only to arrangements for the procurement of power for war plants and establishments involving deliveries of power of 1,000 kilowatts or more of actual or contractual demand. It is contemplated, however, that at the request of any Federal agency the procedure will be applied to arrangements involving lesser amounts of power.

"The Commission will also provide for review and, if the public interest requires, modification of existing arrangements for the procurement of power in accordance with the procedure contained in the President's directive.

"Arrangements for procurement of power will be deemed to include all written or oral agreements, requisitions, understandings, or commitments which require the approval or concurrence of a procurement agency, or which involve the obligation of the Government of the United States to pay, reimburse, underwrite, or otherwise assume any liability or responsibility with respect to the procurement of electric power."

NATURAL GAS ACT

Exportation or importation of natural gas.—Exportations from the United States to a foreign country or importations from a foreign country to the United States must be authorized by the Commission, when found to be consistent with the public interest.

Control over rates and charges.—Natural gas companies are required to file schedules showing the rates charged for any transportation or sale subject to the jurisdiction of the Commission, and may not change such rates or charges without its approval. The Commission may order changes in rates, but may not order an increase in the rate charged by any natural gas company unless the increase is embodied in a new schedule filed by the company.

Cost of property.—The Commission is authorized to ascertain the actual legitimate cost of the property of every natural gas company and the depreciation in such property.

Extension of facilities; abandonment of service.—The Commission may order a natural gas company to extend or improve its transportation facilities and to establish physical connection of its transportation facilities with the facilities of, or sell natural gas to, any persons or municipalities engaged, or legally authorized to engage, in the local distribution of natural or artificial gas to the public, if the Commission finds that no undue burden will be placed upon the natural gas company. In ordering such an extension of facilities, the Commission may not impair the ability of the company to render adequate service to its customers.

Natural gas companies may not abandon interstate facilities or service without the approval of the Commission, and cannot extend their facilities without securing a certificate of public convenience and necessity from the Commission. In issuing such certificates, the Commission is required to give due consideration to the applicant's ability to render and maintain adequate service at rates lower than those prevailing in the territory to be served.

State compacts.—The Commission is required to report to Congress information in connection with any compacts proposed by two or more States dealing with the conservation, production, transportation, or distribution of natural gas.

Joint boards.—Provision is made for the creation of boards representing any States which may be concerned in connection with any matter coming before the Commission, and full cooperation is available to State commissions.

Officials dealing in securities.—Personal profit by an official or director of a natural gas company through the negotiation, hypothecation, or sale of any security issued by the company is unlawful.

Uniform system of accounts.—The Commission has prescribed a uniform system of accounts, effective January 1, 1940, for natural gas companies subject to the provisions of the Natural Gas Act, which covers accounting details of the property of such companies for the production, transportation, or sale of natural gas.

Incidental powers.—The Commission may require such reports as may be necessary in the administration of the act. In general, it is given administrative powers similar to those provided in the Federal Power Act.

DUTIES IN CONNECTION WITH ISSUANCE OF PRESIDENTIAL PERMITS

Pursuant to Executive Order No. 8202 of July 13, 1939, the Commission is directed to receive applications for the issuance of permits for the construction, operation, maintenance, or connection at the borders of the United States, of facilities for the transmission of electric energy, and for the transportation of natural gas, between the United States and foreign countries, and, after obtaining the recommendations of the Secretary of State and the Secretary of War thereon, to submit such applications to the President with a recommendation as to whether such permits should be granted, and if so, upon what terms and conditions.

DUTIES IN CONNECTION WITH TVA

Prescribes TVA accounts system.—The board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority is required to keep accounts of its cost of generation, transmission, and distribution of electric energy according to the system prescribed by the Commission for public utilities. Other physical data and operating statistics of the Authority are also made available to the Commission.

Approval of certain contracts.—The approval by the Commission of contracts for the extension of credit by the Tennessee Valley Authority to public agencies and nonprofit organizations for acquiring, improving, and operating existing distribution facilities and interconnecting transmission lines, is a prerequisite to the issuance of bonds by the Authority to obtain funds for that purpose.

DUTIES IN CONNECTION WITH BONNEVILLE DAM

Advisory board.—The Administrator of the Bonneville Power Administration is required to act in consultation with an advisory board composed of representatives designated by the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Federal Power Commission. The Commission has designated its chief engineer as its representative on this advisory board.

Bonneville rate schedules.—Schedules of rates and charges for electric energy produced at the Bonneville project are prepared by the Administrator and become effective upon confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission. The rate schedules may be modified, subject to confirmation and approval by the Commission.

Allocation of cost.—The Commission makes the allocations of cost of facilities for power and other purposes upon which rate schedules are based.

Accounts of Bonneville Power Administration.—The Administrator is subject to the requirements of the Commission with respect to the accounts of operations of the Bonneville project, including all funds expended and received in connection with transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the project.

DUTIES IN CONNECTION WITH FORT PECK DAM

Rate schedules.—Schedules of rates and charges for electric energy produced at the Fort Peck project are prepared by the Bureau of Reclamation under the supervision and direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and become effective upon confirmation and approval thereof by the Federal Power Commission. The rate schedules may be modified, subject to confirmation and approval by the Commission.

Allocation of costs.—The Commission makes the allocations of cost of facilities for power and other purposes upon which the rate schedules are based.

Accounts.—The Bureau of Reclamation is subject to the requirements of the Commission with respect to the accounts of operations of the Fort Peck project, including all funds expended and received in connection with transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the project.

DUTIES IN CONNECTION WITH FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS

Under the Flood Control Act of 1938, the Commission makes recommendations to the Secretary of War concerning the installation of penstocks or similar facilities adapted to possible future use in the development of hydroelectric power in dams constructed under the act.

FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

The Federal Reserve System was established pursuant to authority contained in the act of Congress approved December 23, 1913, known as the Federal Reserve Act, the purposes of which, as stated in the preamble, are "To provide for the establishment of Federal Reserve Banks, to furnish an elastic currency, to afford means of rediscounting commercial paper, to establish a more effective supervision of banking in the United States, and for other purposes." The System comprises the Board of Governors, which exercises supervisory functions; the Federal Open Market Committee, consisting of the members of the Board of Governors and five representatives of the Federal Reserve Banks, which directs the System's open-market operations; the 12 Federal Reserve Banks situated in different sections of the United States; the Federal Advisory Council, which acts in an advisory capacity to the Board of Governors; and about 6,600 member banks, which include all national banks in the United States and such State banks, trust companies, Morris Plan banks, and mutual savings banks as have voluntarily applied to the Board of Governors for membership and have been admitted to the System.

Broad supervisory powers are vested in the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, which has its offices in Washington. The Board of Governors is composed of seven members appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. In selecting these seven members, the President is required to have due regard to a fair representation of the financial, agricultural, industrial, and commercial interests, and geographical divisions of the country. No two members may be from the same Federal Reserve district.

Each member of the Board of Governors is also a member of the Federal Open Market Committee, whose membership, in addition, includes five representatives of the Federal Reserve Banks, each such representative being elected annually by the boards of directors of certain specified Federal Reserve Banks. Open-market operations of the Federal Reserve Banks are conducted under regulations adopted by the committee with a view to accommodating commerce and business and with regard "to their bearing upon the general credit situation of the country; and no Federal Reserve Bank may engage or decline to engage in open-market operations except in accordance with the direction of and regulations adopted by the committee."

The Board of Governors may, within certain limitations and in order to prevent injurious credit expansion or contraction, change the requirements as to reserves to be maintained by member banks against deposits.

For the purpose of preventing the excessive use of credit for the purchase or carrying of securities, the Board of Governors is authorized to regulate the amount of credit that may be initially extended and subsequently maintained on any security (with certain exceptions) registered on a national securities exchange. Certain other powers have been conferred upon the Board which are likewise designed to enable it to prevent an undue diversion of funds into speculative operations.

The Board is also authorized to prescribe regulations with respect to extensions of credit, particularly credit for the purpose of purchasing consumers durable and semidurable goods. Under this authority, restrictions of credit have been applied to charge accounts, to instalment purchases of certain articles, and to certain kinds of loans.

Another duty of the Board of Governors is the review and determination of discount rates charged by the Federal Reserve Banks on their discounts and advances.

In connection with its supervision of Federal Reserve Banks, the Board of Governors is also authorized to make examinations of such banks; to require statements and reports from such banks; to require the establishment or discontinuance of branches of such banks; to supervise the issue and retirement of Federal Reserve notes; and to exercise special supervision over all relationships and transactions of the Federal Reserve Banks with foreign banks or bankers.

The Board of Governors also passes on the admission of State banks, trust companies, Morris Plan banks, and mutual savings banks to membership in the Federal Reserve System and on the termination of membership of such banks; it has the power to examine member banks and affiliates of member banks; it receives condition reports from State member banks and their affiliates; it limits by regulation the rate of interest which may be paid by member banks on time and savings deposits; it is authorized, in its discretion, to issue voting permits to holding-company affiliates of member banks entitling them to vote the stock of such banks at any or all meetings of shareholders of the member banks; it may issue general regulations permitting interlocking relationships in certain circumstances between member banks and organizations dealing in securities or, under the Clayton Antitrust Act, between member banks and other banks; it has the power to remove officers and directors of a member bank for continued violations of law or unsafe or unsound practices in conducting the business of such bank; it may, in its discretion, suspend member banks from the use of the credit facilities of the Federal Reserve System, for making undue use of bank credit for speculative purposes or for any other purpose inconsistent with the maintenance of sound credit conditions; it passes on applications of State member banks to establish out-of-town branches; it passes on applications of national banks for authority to exercise trust powers or to act in fiduciary capacities; it may grant authority to national banks to establish branches in foreign countries or dependencies or insular possessions of the United States, or to invest in the stock of banks or corporations engaged in international or foreign banking; and it supervises the organization and activities of corporations organized under Federal law to engage in international or foreign banking. Another function of the Board is the operation of a settlement fund, by which balances due to and from the various Federal Reserve Banks arising out of their own transactions or transactions of their member banks or of the United States Government are settled in Washington through telegraphic transfer of funds without physical shipments of currency.

In exercising its supervisory functions over the Federal Reserve Banks and member banks, the Board of Governors promulgates regulations, pursuant to authority granted by the law, governing certain of the above-mentioned activities of Federal Reserve Banks and member banks. To meet its expenses and to pay the salaries of its members and its employees, the Board makes semiannual assessments upon the Federal Reserve Banks in proportion to their capital stock and surplus. The Board keeps a complete record of all action taken by it and by the Federal Open Market Committee on any question of policy, and in the annual report which it makes to the Speaker of the House of Representatives for the information of Congress as required by law, it includes a full account of all such action and also a copy of the records required to be kept in that connection.

The Board and the Federal Reserve Banks and their branches render services, relating to financial information, etc., to the War and Navy Departments and cooperate with such departments and the United States Maritime Commission in connection with guaranties and loans made by those agencies in order to finance war production contracts. The System renders assistance to member banks, nonmember banks, and other financing institutions in aiding concerns engaged in defense work to obtain whatever financial assistance is necessary in order to enable them to finance successfully the performance of their defense contracts. The Board cooperates with the Director of Censorship with respect to problems arising out of the transmission of financial communications.

The Federal Reserve Banks are located in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Richmond, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Dallas, and San Francisco. There are also in operation 24 branches and 1 agency of the Federal Reserve Banks, all of which are located in other cities of the United States.

The capital stock of the Federal Reserve Banks is entirely owned by the member banks and may not be transferred or hypothecated. Every national bank in existence in the United States at the time of the establishment of the Federal Reserve System was required to subscribe to the capital stock of the Federal Reserve Bank of its district in an amount equal to 6 percent of the subscribing bank's paid-up capital and surplus. A like amount of Federal Reserve Bank stock must be subscribed for by every national bank in the United States organized since that time and by every State bank or trust company (except mutual savings banks) upon becoming a member of the Federal Reserve System; and, when a member bank increases or decreases its capital or surplus, it is required to alter its holdings of Federal Reserve Bank stock in the same proportion. A mutual savings bank which is admitted to membership in the Federal Reserve System must subscribe for Federal Reserve Bank stock in an amount equal to six-tenths of 1 per centum of its total deposit liabilities; and thereafter such subscription must be adjusted semiannually on the same percentage basis. One-half of the subscription of each member bank must be fully paid and the remainder is subject to call by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; but call for payment of the remainder has not been made.

After all necessary expenses of a Federal Reserve Bank have been paid or provided for, its stockholding member banks are entitled to receive an annual dividend of 6 percent on the paid-in capital stock, which dividend is cumulative. After these dividend claims have been fully met, the net earnings are paid into the surplus fund of the Federal Reserve Bank. In case of liquidation or dissolution of a Federal Reserve Bank, any surplus remaining after payment of all debts, dividends, and the par value of its capital stock becomes the property of the United States Government. Federal Reserve Banks are exempt from Federal, State, and local taxation, except taxes upon real estate.

The board of directors of each Federal Reserve Bank is composed of nine members, equally divided into three classes, designated class A, class B, and class C. Directors of class A are representative of the stockholding member banks. Directors of class B must be actively engaged in their district in commerce, agriculture, or some other industrial pursuit, and may not be officers, directors, or employees of any bank. Class C directors may not be officers, directors, employees, or stockholders of any bank. The six class A and B directors are elected by the stockholding member banks, while the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System appoints the three class C directors. The term of office of each director is 3 years, so arranged that the term of one director of each class expires each year.

One of the class C directors appointed by the Board is designated as chairman of the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank and as Federal Reserve agent, and in the latter capacity he is required to maintain a local office of the Board on the premises of the Federal Reserve Bank. Another class C director is appointed by the Board as deputy chairman.

Each Federal Reserve Bank has as its chief executive officer a president appointed for a term of 5 years by its board of directors with the approval of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. There is also a first vice president appointed in the same manner and for the same term.

Federal Reserve Banks are authorized, among other things, to discount for their member banks notes, drafts, bills of exchange, and bankers' acceptances of short maturities arising out of commercial, industrial, or agricultural transactions, and short-term paper secured by obligations of the United States; to make advances to their member banks upon their promissory notes for periods not exceeding 90 days upon the security of paper eligible for discount or purchase or upon direct obligations of the United States, and for periods not exceeding 15 days upon certain other securities; to make advances upon security satisfactory to the Federal Reserve Banks to member banks for periods not exceeding 4 months at a rate of interest at least one-half of 1 percent higher than that applicable to discounts and advances of the kinds mentioned above; in certain exceptional circumstances and under certain prescribed conditions, to make advances to groups of member banks; under certain prescribed conditions, to grant credit accommodations to furnish working capital for established industrial or commercial businesses for periods not exceeding 5 years, either through the medium of financing institutions or, in exceptional circumstances, directly to such businesses, and to make commitments with respect to the granting of such accommodations; in unusual and exigent circumstances when authority has been granted by at least five members of the Board of Governors, to discount for individuals, partnerships, or corporations, under certain prescribed conditions, notes, drafts, and bills of exchange of the kinds and maturities made eligible for discount for member banks; to make advances to individuals, partnerships, or corporations upon their promissory notes secured by direct obligations of the United States for periods not exceeding 90 days; to purchase and sell in the open market bankers' acceptances and bills of exchange of the kinds and maturities eligible for discount, obligations of the United States, and certain other securities; to receive and hold on deposit the reserve balances of member banks; to issue Federal Reserve notes and Federal Reserve Bank notes; to act as clearing houses and as collecting agents for their member banks, and under certain conditions for nonmember banks, in the collection of checks and other instruments; to act as depositaries and fiscal agents of the United States; and to exercise other banking functions specified in the Federal Reserve Act.

Federal Reserve notes are a first and paramount lien on all the assets of the Federal Reserve Banks through which they are issued and are also obligations of the United States. They are issued against the security of gold certificates and of commercial and agricultural paper discounted or purchased by Federal Reserve Banks, and, until June 30, 1943, when authorized by the Board of Governors, may also be secured by direct obligations of the United States. Every Federal Reserve Bank is required to maintain reserves in gold certificates of not less than 40 percent against its Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation and is also required to maintain reserves in gold certificates or lawful money of not less than 35 percent against its deposits.

The Federal Advisory Council acts in an advisory capacity, conferring with the Board of Governors on general business conditions and making recommendations concerning matters within the Board's jurisdiction and the general affairs of the Federal Reserve System. The Council is composed of 12 members, 1 from each Federal Reserve district being selected annually by the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of the district. The Council is required to meet in Washington at least four times each year, and oftener if called by the Board of Governors.

FEDERAL SECURITY AGENCY

The Federal Security Agency was created by Executive order of the President, dated April 25, 1939, putting into effect the President's First Plan on Government Reorganization in accordance with the provisions of the Reorganization Act of 1939. The agencies grouped in the Federal Security Agency under the First Plan are the Social Security Board, the United States Employment Service, the Office of Education, the Public Health Service, the National Youth Administration, and the Civilian Conservation Corps. The National Youth Administration and the United States Employment Service were transferred to the War

Manpower Commission by Executive Order No. 9247, dated September 17, 1942. The Second Plan on Government Reorganziation transferred to the Federal Security Agency for administration in the Office of Education, the Film and Radio Services of the National Emergency Council. It also transferred to the Federal Security Agency Government participation in the work of the American Printing House for the Blind. The Fourth Plan on Government Reorganization transferred to the Federal Security Agency the Food and Drug Administration from the Department of Agriculture, and St. Elizabeths Hospital, Freedmen's Hospital, Howard University, and Columbia Institution for the Deaf from the Department of the Interior.

Executive Order No. 9338, dated April 29, 1943, transferred to the Federal Security Agency from the Office for Emergency Management the functions of the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services. Under this order and a Federal Security Agency Order implementing it, the Office of Community War Services and a Committee on Physical Fitness were established as integral parts of the Office of the Administrator, Federal Security Agency.

The Federal Security Agency was established to carry out the purposes of the Reorganization Act of 1939 which were: (1) To reduce expenditures; (2) to increase efficiency; (3) to consolidate agencies according to major purposes; (4) to reduce the number of agencies by consolidating those having similar functions and by abolishing such as may not be necessary; (5) to eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort. Grouped in the Federal Security Agency are those agencies of the Government, the major purposes of which are to promote social and economic security, educational opportunity, and the health of the citizens of the Nation.

The affairs of the Federal Security Agency are under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator. He is assisted by the assistant administrator, who acts as Administrator in his absence, and by a staff of administrative, special, and technical assistants who assist in the activities and correlation of the different units of the Agency, the functions of which are given below.

SOCIAL SECURITY BOARD

The Social Security Board was established to administer provisions of the Social Security Act relating to old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, aid to the blind, unemployment compensation, and old-age (now old-age and survivors) insurance, and to study and make recommendations as to the most effective methods of providing economic security through social insurance, and as to related legislation and administrative policy. The Board receives its authority under the provisions of title VII of the Social Security Act (49 Stat. 620), approved August 14, 1935. Various modifications of the act were provided in the Social Security Amendments of 1939 (Public, No. 379, 76th Cong.) approved August 10, 1939. Under the Reorganization Act of 1939 (Public, No. 19, 76th Cong.) and Reorganization Plan No. I, the Social Security Board was made a part of the Federal Security Agency, and the functions of the United States Employment Service set up by the Wagner-Peyser Act (Public, No. 30, 73d Cong.) were consolidated with the unemployment compensation functions of the Board. On January 1, 1942, as a result of a request of the President to the States, the system of public employment offices throughout the country came under national operation. Subsequently, Executive Order No. 9247 of September 17, 1942, transferred the United States Employment Service functions to the War Manpower Commission.

The Board is composed of three members—not more than two of whom may be of one political party—appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The President designates the chairman of the Board. Judicial and policy-making functions under the Social Security Act are exercised by the Board, under the direction and supervision of the Federal Security Administrator, while administrative functions are vested in an Executive Director who is directly responsible to the Board. Bureaus and offices and a field service comprising regional, territorial, and field offices have been established by the Board to carry out its functions under the Social Security Act. Operating bureaus are the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, the Bureau of Public Assistance, and the Bureau of Employment Security. Service bureaus and offices are the Bureau of Accounts and Audits, the Bureau of Research and Statistics, the Informational Service, and the Office of the Actuary. The Office of Appeals Council provides means for review of old-age and survivors insurance claims.

Special activities relating to the war effort performed or participated in by the Social Security Board are included below in the description of duties of the particular bureau concerned.

OFFICE OF THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Within the Office of the Executive Director are centered the administrative and executive duties of the Board. The Executive Director has general supervision and direction of the work of the several bureaus and offices together with the immediate supervision and direction of the regional and territorial offices. The Executive Director is also charged with the following duties pertaining to Board programs: Coordinating Federal-State relations, and providing an advisory service with respect to the establishment and maintenance of State merit systems of personnel administration.

The Office of the Executive Director is also responsible for servicing the Board and its bureaus and offices with respect to personnel, procurement of supplies and equipment, selecting quarters and allotting space, furnishing centralized stenographic and typing assistance, maintaining centralized files and records, preparing travel orders, itineraries, vouchers, and other business operations. It receives and distributes incoming mail, forwards outgoing mail and telegrams, and answers inquiries not requiring the special attention of other bureaus or offices of the Board. It conducts personnel training classes covering the basic substantive phases of the Board's work. The library of the Board is a part of this office.

BUREAU OF OLD-AGE AND SURVIVORS INSURANCE

The Federal old-age and survivors insurance system, established by title II of the Social Security Act as amended, provides the following types of monthly benefits payable by the Federal Government: Primary insurance benefits to aged (65 or over), retired wage earners; wife's insurance benefits to the aged wives of individuals receiving primary insurance benefits; child's insurance benefits to the dependent children (under 18) of individuals receiving primary insurance benefits and to the dependent children of deceased wage earners; widow's insurance benefits to the aged widows of wage earners; widow's current insurance benefits to widows who are caring for one or more children of a deceased wage earner; and parent's insurance benefits to the aged, dependent parents of deceased wage earners. Lump-sum death payments may be granted, where no monthly insurance benefits are available, to certain survivors or to individuals entitled on account of the payment of burial expenses of deceased wage earners. The purpose of this program is to pay benefits to industrial and commercial wage earners and their families as partial replacement for loss of income due to the old age or death of the wage earner. This is a contributory program administered entirely by the Federal Government and should not be confused with old-age assistance or other social security programs in which the States participate.

The provisions of the original old-age insurance plan became effective January 1, 1937. By the end of 1942 about 68 million social security accounts had been established and about 58 million individuals had received wages for employment covered by this plan and hence have accumulated credit toward an insured status, i. e., toward eligibility for benefits when old age or death occurs. Benefits under the amended program began in January 1940. Benefits are based upon wages received in employment covered under the program. The total of the monthly benefits payable to a family, based on one individual's wages, ranges from $10 to $85.

This title is administered by the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, which is the largest organizational unit of the Social Security Board. This Bureau is responsible for the establishment and maintenance of individual accounts in which are recorded the amounts of reported wages. It is responsible for determining eligibility for benefits, for computing the amounts of benefits, and for making certifications to the Secretary of the Treasury, as managing trustee of the Old-Age and Survivors Insurance Trust Fund, for payment of benefits. The Bureau conducts such actuarial, economic and administrative studies as are necessary to its functions of administering title II; it also tabulates, from its wage and claims records, statistical data necessary to the Board in analyzing the operation of and supervising the old-age and survivors insurance provisions of the Social Security Act.

Contact with the public is maintained through almost 500 field offices located in all parts of the United States, Alaska, and Hawaii. These offices furnish information to wage earners and to employers as to their rights and obligations under the program, and accept, develop, and adjudicate claims under title II. The field organization brings the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance plan close to the people who are affected by it, and thus helps to assure adequate, efficient, and economical operation of the plan.

The Bureau participates in the administration of the temporary War Civilian Security Program under allocation from the Emergency Fund of the President. Under this program benefits are paid to civilians disabled in the United States as the result of enemy action and to civilian defense workers disabled in the performance of their duties. If death results from such injuries, benefits are payable to their dependents. Benefits are also payable to dependents of civilians killed, detained, or reported missing as the result of enemy action outside the United States.

BUREAU OF PUBLIC ASSISTANCE

This Bureau is concerned with the administration of grants to the States for old-age assistance, aid to dependent children, and aid to the blind under the provisions of titles I, IV, and X of the Social Security Act.

The Bureau of Public Assistance, in cooperation with the Office of the General Counsel of the Federal Security Agency, analyzes State administrative plans for these types of aid and recommends such plans to the Board for approval if they conform to certain standards established by the act, relating to procedure, administration, and eligibility requirements. It also reviews amendments to approved plans, submitted by States in accordance with new developments in State programs, and recommends the amount of Federal grants-in-aid to be certified by the Board.

Title I authorizes grants-in-aid to States for assistance to needy aged individuals. States having approved old-age assistance plans receive from the Federal Government an amount equal to the sum expended by the States and their local governmental units for old-age assistance, up to a combined Federal-State total of $40 a month for each needy individual 65 years of age or over who is not an inmate of a public institution. In addition, the Federal Government grants to States an amount equal to 5 percent of the sum paid to the State for old-age assistance, which may be used by the State for administrative expenses or for old-age assistance or for both purposes.

Title IV provides for Federal grants to States having approved plans for aid to dependent children deprived of a parent's support and maintained in their own homes or in the homes of certain close relatives. These States receive an amount equal to one-half of the sums expended by them and their local governmental units under such plans, except that Federal funds may not be used for that part of payments in excess of $18 a month for the first child and $12 for each additional child in the same home.

Title X authorizes grants to States having approved plans for furnishing financial assistance to the needy blind. These grants equal one-half of the total expenditures for aid to the needy blind of the States and their local units, except that Federal funds may not be used for that part of individual monthly payments which exceeds $40. State payments to needy blind persons who are in public institutions are not matched from Federal funds. The Federal Government also grants to the States one-half the necessary costs of the administration of State plans for aid to the blind.

The Bureau of Public Assistance advises States concerning the preparation of State public-assistance plans and periodically reviews the operation of approved plans to insure continuing conformity to the provisions of the Social Security Act. It provides a technical consultative service to the States with regard to the administration of public assistance, including such matters as administrative organization, policies and procedures, fiscal operations, staff training, and the coordination of old-age assistance, aid to the blind, and aid to dependent children. The Bureau also serves as a clearing house for the exchange of public-assistance information and experience among the States.

The Bureau has the duty of collecting and analyzing reports on public and private assistance submitted by States and localities; of collating data on public assistance under the Social Security Act with data relating to other assistance programs; and of providing consultation service to State and local public-welfare agencies concerning statistical reports required by the Board and other statistical and research activities relating to public assistance, general relief, and allied programs.

Responsibilities related to war activities have been assigned to the Bureau of Public Assistance by the Social Security Board. The Bureau is responsible for broad planning for the relief of civilian distress caused by enemy action or military necessity. Presidential Allotment 42–70 dated February 6, 1942, as amended by Presidential Allotment 42/3–56 dated October 5, 1942, provides assistance to civilians affected by enemy attack or by action taken to meet such attack. Presidential Allotment 42–74 dated March 23, 1942, provides assistance to enemy aliens and other persons and their dependents who are in need as a result of (1) removal from or regulations within a military area or restricted or prohibited area and (2) detention or internment. These programs of "Civilian War Assistance" and "Assistance to Enemy Aliens Affected by Government Action" are financed by Federal funds and are administered by the Bureau through State public assistance agencies acting as agents of the Social Security Board. Additional war-related activities in which the Bureau of Public Assistance participates include: Development of standards and materials for use by State and local public welfare agencies in meeting new problems and requests for service from other Federal agencies such as Selective Service boards and the War Relocation Authority; participation in studies of welfare needs, including the causes of greatly increased juvenile delinquency, in areas of war industry and military concentration; planning with Selective Service as to problems to result from entry of large numbers of married men with dependents into military service, and with the Allotments and Allowances branches of the Army and Navy as to meeting the needs of dependents pending receipt of allotments, or supplementing allotments which are inadequate to meet the needs.

BUREAU OF EMPLOYMENT SECURITY

The Social Security Board's administrative responsibility in connection with the Federal-State unemployment compensation system is discharged by the Bureau of Employment Security. The United States Employment Service, and all functions, duties, and powers relating to employment service previously vested in the Social Security Board, were transferred from the Bureau of Employment Security to the War Manpower Commission by virtue of the provisions of Executive Order No. 9247, dated September 17, 1942.

With respect to unemployment compensation, the Social Security Act is essentially an enabling statute, designed to facilitate the enactment and administration of unemployment compensation laws by the States. State employees administer provisions of those laws. Title III of the Social Security Act provides for Federal cooperation with States establishing systems of unemployment compensation. Grants to meet the cost of proper and efficient administration are authorized to be made to those States which have unemployment compensation laws approved by the Board under section 1603 of the Internal Revenue Code and which meet the conditions prescribed in title III. The Bureau is responsible for recommending approval or disapproval of grants to those States which meet or fail to meet the conditions prescribed in title III, and for promoting economical administration through the development of fiscal standards and procedures. The Bureau of Employment Security also discharges the responsibility of the Social Security Board to Congress to assure that State administrations provide prompt payment of benefits and carry out their responsibilities in a manner consistent with the requirements and conditions laid down by Congress. With the transfer of the United States Employment Service to the War Manpower Commission, the chairman of that Commission was directed by section 4 of the Executive order to provide for making available to the State agencies charged with the administration of unemployment compensation laws, such services, information, and facilities by the United States Employment Service and its public employment offices as he finds will not be inconsistent with the effective prosecution of the war and as the Social Security Board finds necessary for the proper and efficient administration of such unemployment compensation laws. The purpose of this section is to maintain, to the maximum extent consistent with the effective prosecution of the war, the essential coordination and integration of public employment service and unemployment compensation functions, and to avoid any necessity for establishing duplicate public employment office facilities for the unemployment compensation program.

The Internal Revenue Code, in subchapter C of chapter 9, levies a Federal tax on employers of eight or more workers. The Social Security Board is authorized therein to approve State unemployment compensation laws which fulfill certain conditions and include provision for depositing, to the credit of the State, all contributions upon collection, in the unemployment trust fund of the United States. Such approval will permit these employers making contributions to State unemployment compensation funds under approved State laws to obtain credit up to a maximum of 90 percent against the Federal tax. Within the same maximum limitations, employers may receive credit also with respect to reduced rates of contributions under State laws which permit such reductions under conditions which are found by the Social Security Board to comply with the provisions of section 1602 of the Internal Revenue Code. The Bureau is responsible for certifying to the Social Security Board that the respective State unemployment compensation laws meet these provisions of the Internal Revenue Code.

The Bureau also assists the States, upon request, in the preparation of unemployment compensation laws, amendments thereto, and rules and regulations implementing such laws. Technical assistance is provided to the State agencies on problems of organization and administration including questions of general policy, claims procedure, statistical reports, and other activities related to administration of the State unemployment compensation program. The Bureau conducts research and assists in the formulation of recommendations concerning the most effective method of providing unemployment insurance, in order to assist the Board in discharging the functions of section 702 of the Social Security Act.

BUREAU OF ACCOUNTS AND AUDITS

The Bureau of Accounts and Audits is responsible for the conduct of budgetary, accounting, financial reporting, auditing and fiscal advisory functions relating to the departmental and field activities of the Board. This Bureau conducts audits of State public-assistance agencies to determine what amounts of assistance payments and administrative expenses are matchable from a fiscal standpoint with Federal funds, whether the share of the Federal Government in any recoveries is accurately reported, and whether any deficiencies exist in fiscal administration. It reviews the fiscal aspects of State public-assistance plans, and also reviews requests for grants and State expenditure reports to determine that adjustments required by the Social Security Act have been made. It furnished constructive accounting services to State public-assistance agencies involving the establishment of accounts, accounting procedures and forms, budgetary methods, fiscal administrative standards and procedures, financial reporting and internal auditing. In the field of the Board's responsibility for unemployment compensation it conducts audits of administrative expenditures of State employment security agencies to determine their compliance with the terms of budgets approved by the Board and with Federal and State laws, policies, regulations, and standards. It is responsible for the preparation of budget estimates and justifications for the Social Security Board, and for the keeping of a continuous budgetary control over its expenditures. It maintains the Board's system of accounts covering all funds collected or disbursed. Liaison contacts with other Federal departments or establishments on the fiscal operations of the Board are usually conducted by this Bureau which is also charged with the receipt, safeguarding, and deposit of funds collected. The preaudit and certification for payment of vouchers for the administrative expenses of the Board and the furnishing of advisory services to its bureaus on budget, accounting, and fiscal matters are further duties of this Bureau.

BUREAU OF RESEARCH AND STATISTICS

The Bureau of Research and Statistics conducts research concerning factors causing economic insecurity, the adequacy of existing social-security measures, and problems connected with the accommodation of the Federal and State social-security programs to different population groups and different needs, and provides analyses of proposals for development of these programs. In this connection it is charged with the development of new fields of study in social security, such as health and disability insurance and the provision of medical care, arising out of the Board's responsibility under section 702 of the Social Security Act. Research and statistical activities beyond the immediate fields of the operating programs of the Board dealt with by the Bureau include the over-all financial and economic aspects of the social-security program and the characteristics or effects of the interrelations of Board programs and other social insurance and welfare programs. The Bureau maintains a continuing review of the research and statistical programs of the several bureaus and offices of the Board concerning their adequacy and their integration into a total research program. Accordingly, the Bureau of Research and Statistics has certain responsibilities in connection with coordination of related statistical and research activities carried on in the Bureaus of the Board and with the review of research and statistical materials proposed for duplication, and of instructions with respect to programs of regular statistical reporting to the Board. This Bureau is responsible for the technical supervision of the preparation of the Board's official monthly publication, the Social Security Bulletin, of the Social Security Yearbook, and of the Annual Report of the Board.

INFORMATIONAL SERVICE

The Informational Service is responsible for informing workers, employers, and the general public concerning the provisions of the Social Security Act which are administered by the Board, particularly concerning the Federal old-age and survivors insurance program. Information is disseminated through various channels of public information and education so that persons affected may secure the benefits the laws provide, may meet their responsibilities under the law and comply with the necessary administrative procedures and regulations. The Informational Service advises the Board and its executive staff concerning matters of public information and public relations. It also advises and assists State agencies administering public assistance and unemployment compensation legislation in the planning and execution of their informational programs.

OFFICE OF THE ACTUARY

The Board maintains an actuarial consultant and adviser to the Board with respect to technical actuarial analysis on a long-range basis of all data pertaining to population, employment, wages, and other subjects which are necessary for the Board in planning its operations under the Social Security Act and in considering proposals concerning the social-security program.

OFFICE OF APPEALS COUNCIL

The Office of Appeals Council provides a means for hearing and review with respect to claims for old-age and survivors' insurance under title II of the Social Security Act, as amended. This Office consists of the 3 members of the Council, 12 regional referees, and a consulting referee. The Office is independent of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, which makes the original determinations with respect to claims.

OTHER SERVICES

Legal services are provided to the Board by the Office of the General Counsel of the Federal Security Agency. These services include legal advice to the Board, the Executive Director, the directors of the operating bureaus, and the regional directors concerning proposed and enacted unemployment-compensation laws, public-assistance laws and plans, and all legal aspects of the old-age and survivors' insurance program. The Office of the General Counsel cooperates with the Department of Justice in litigation involving the Social Security Act and with States in litigation involving State laws enacted to carry out the terms of the act. It also renders legal advice to the Board and to its bureaus and offices with respect to the legal aspects of methods proposed for providing social security.

REGIONAL OFFICES

To provide decentralized service and supervision to the State and Federal agencies operating under the Social Security Act throughout the United States, the Board has established 12 regional offices, and territorial offices in Alaska and Hawaii. All operations of the Board in each region are supervised by a regional director responsible to the executive director, whose staff includes representatives of the several bureaus and offices of the Board.

The regional directors of the Social Security Board have been designated as regional directors for the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, serving as chairmen of its regional advisory councils. They are assisted in this activity by regional representatives of that Office's Divisions of Recreation, Nutrition, and Social Protection.

The regional offices of the Board also supervise the operation of the civilian war relief program established under the Presidential allocation of February 6, 1942, as well as welfare aspects of enemy alien evacuation, and evacuation of non-service-connected civilians from the Pacific territories.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The headquarters of the Public Health Service at Washington comprises eight divisions and the Chief Clerk's Office, the operations of which are coordinated and are under the immediate supervision of the Surgeon General, who makes an annual report to the Administrator, Federal Security Agency, on the activities of the Service.

The National Institute of Health is the research division of the Public Health Service, and conducts the scientific investigations of the Service. Through the Institute, the Department enforces the act of July 1, 1902, to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products, including arsphenamine. The National Cancer Institute, created by act of August 5, 1937, functions as one of the divisions of the National Institute of Health.

The Division of Foreign and Insular Quarantine and Immigration administers the quarantine laws of the United States to prevent the introduction of human contagious or infectious diseases from foreign ports into the United States through the intermediary agencies of maritime and aircraft commerce, and observes the provisions of the Pan American Sanitary Code, the International Sanitary Convention of Paris, and the International Sanitary Convention for Aerial Navigation which apply thereto. In addition, this Division conducts the medical examination of intending immigrants at certain American consulates abroad and at ports of entry in the United States and its insular possessions.

The activities of the Division of States Relations include the following: (1) Enforcement of the Interstate Quarantine Regulations, with special reference to the control of water supplies used on interstate carriers and the sanitation of shellfish shipped in interstate commerce; (2) assistance to State and local health authorities in the enforcement of State and local laws and regulations; (3) cooperation with the State health authorities in preventing the spread of epidemic diseases; (4) assistance to State health departments in the development and maintenance of adequate public-health services, including training of personnel, as authorized under title VI of the Social Security Act; (5) assistance to State and local health departments in the maintenance of health and sanitation services in extra-cantonment and industrial areas pertinent to national defense; (6) cooperation with other establishments of the Federal Government in matters pertaining to public-health engineering and sanitation; (7) annual conference of the Public Health Service with State and Territorial health officers; (8) assistance to educational institutions in providing training for nurses; (9) establishment of reserves of blood plasma for treatment of casualties resulting from enemy action; (10) provision of temporary medical care for civilian injuries occasioned by enemy action.

The Division of Sanitary Reports and Statistics collects and publishes information regarding the prevalence and geographic distribution of diseases dangerous to the public health in the United States and foreign countries. It cooperates with the State, local, and volunteer health agencies in promoting health education throughout the United States.

Through the Division of Marine Hospitals and Relief, hospital and out-patient treatment is given at 25 marine hospitals and 114 other relief stations to legal beneficiaries who are chiefly seamen from American merchant vessels, Coast Guard personnel, patients of the Veterans' Administration, of the Employees' Compensation Commission, immigrants, and persons afflicted with leprosy. Physical examinations are made for the Civil Service Commission, Employees' Compensation Commission, shipping commissioners, and other Government agencies.

The Division of Personnel and Accounts attends to matters relating to personnel and the maintenance of commissioned personnel records; convenes boards for the examination or discipline of medical officers and other personnel; and maintains and supervises property records.

The Division of Venereal Diseases was created by act of Congress in July 1918 (1) to study and investigate the cause, treatment, and prevention of venereal diseases; (2) to cooperate with State boards or departments of health for the prevention and control of such diseases within the States; and (3) to control and prevent the spread of these diseases in interstate traffic. The amendment of May 24, 1938, to this act authorizes the Public Health Service to make grants-in-aid to the States, including the District of Columbia, Alaska, Puerto Rico, Virgin Islands, and Hawaii, for the purpose of developing venereal-disease-control programs in health departments throughout the country. Clinical and laboratory investigations and field studies, especially as they relate to the war effort, are conducted both independently and in cooperation with other agencies.

The Division of Mental Hygiene is charged with the responsibility of administering the two hospitals for the treatment of drug addicts; conducting studies of the nature of drug addiction and the best methods of treatment and rehabilitation of addicts; making studies of the quantities of narcotic drugs necessary to supply the normal and emergency medicinal and scientific requirements of the United States; conducting studies of the causes, prevalence, and means for the prevention and treatment of mental and nervous diseases; supervising and furnishing medical and psychiatric service in the Federal penal and correctional institutions under the control of the Department of Justice (act of May 13, 1930); and cooperating with State officials in development and improvement of facilities for the care of the mentally ill. Executive Order No. 9079, signed by the President on February 26, 1942, authorizes the treatment during the present war and for 6 months after termination thereof of insane persons (except those from the District of Columbia) at the two hospitals established for the treatment of drug addicts under the same terms and conditions as such insane persons may be entitled to admission to St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D. C.

The Chief Clerk and Administrative Officer has general supervision of clerical personnel, efficiency ratings, office quarters and space assignments, claims board cases, official files and records, mail, supplies of stationery to headquarters and field service, printing and binding for entire service, procurement of office equipment for headquarters, and general administrative matters.

UNITED STATES OFFICE OF EDUCATION

The Commissioner of Education has charge of the Office of Education, which was established by an act of Congress in 1867 "for the purpose of collecting such statistics and facts as shall show the condition and progress of education in the several States and Territories, and of diffusing such information respecting the organization and management of schools and school systems, and methods of teaching, as shall aid the people of the United States in the establishment and maintenance of efficient school systems, and otherwise promote the cause of education throughout the country." Additional duties have been placed upon the Office of Education in accordance with provisions in later acts of Congress and with executive regulations made under the same. Responsibilities are undertaken for all phases and all levels of education, from the beginning grades through the university, and relate to such major functions as are described below:

1. Administration, under the direction of the Federal Security Administrator, of laws of Congress.—This responsibility includes: (a) The supervision of expenditures of funds appropriated by Congress for land-grant colleges by the act of 1862 (first Morrill Act) donating lands for colleges of agriculture and the mechanic arts, the act of 1890 (second Morrill Act) for the further endowment of land-grant colleges, the Nelson amendment of 1907, still further endowing the land-grant colleges, and the Bankhead-Jones Act of 1935, title II (sec. 22), providing for the more complete endowment and support of land-grant colleges. The Federal Security Administrator is required annually to ascertain and to certify to the Secretary of the Treasury as to each State and Territory whether it is entitled to receive its share of the annual appropriations. To do this it is necessary to collect and compile for each institution information on expenditures and the purposes for which they were made. (b) The inspection of Howard University and the issuance of a report on the same. Acts of Congress require that the University be inspected by the Office of Education at least once each year and that an annual report making a full exhibit of the affairs of the University shall be presented to Congress each year in the report of the Office of Education. (c) The administration of Federal vocational education laws.

2. Educational research and investigation.—(a) Studies of current problems in all phases and at all levels of education regularly carried on by specialists in various fields of education. (b) Biennial surveys of education, including both statistical and descriptive forms of information on the status of education in all fields. (c) Surveys in definite phases of education authorized by special appropriations of Congress. (d) Library research work as a regular function of the Office, by special authorization of Congress. (e) Projects and demonstrations carried on by allotments made to the Federal Security Agency, Office of Education, from special funds appropriated by Congress.

3. Field services.—(a) Surveys of State and local school systems and of educational institutions. (b) Cooperative studies with representatives of educational systems and organizations. (c) Services on educational committees and through conference groups. (d) Participation in programs of educational organizations. (e) Advisory services to school officials. (f) Advisory and informational services to other Government agencies.

4. Library.—The library of more than a quarter million volumes, together with charts, maps, and other forms of materials on educational data, provides facilities for study to a large number who come to its reference rooms and to larger numbers who have books made available to them through a system of interlibrary loans.

5. Publications and their distribution.—The Office, by means of its appropriation for printing, publishes bulletins, pamphlets, and other forms of materials for distribution through a limited free stock and a sales stock. Carefully selected mailing lists are prepared for the free copies. The Office also publishes Education for Victory, a biweekly, replacing School Life for the duration of the war.

The Federal Board for Vocational Education was created by act of Congress approved February 23, 1917 (Smith-Hughes Act). This act makes continuing appropriations to be expended in the States under State plans for the promotion of vocational education. For the fiscal year 1917–18, the amount appropriated was $1,660,000, and the appropriation increased each year until in 1925–26 it reached $7,167,000, which sum was provided annually thereafter. An act approved February 5, 1929 (George-Reed Act), authorized an additional appropriation of $250,000 for agriculture and $250,000 for home economics for the fiscal year 1930, and for each year thereafter, for 4 years, a sum exceeding by $250,000 the appropriation of the preceding year for the promotion of vocational education in each of these two fields. This act expired on June 30, 1934, but an act approved May 21, 1934 (George-Ellzey Act), authorized an appropriation of $3,084,603 for each of the fiscal years 1935, 1936, and 1937 for the further development of vocational education to be used in equal amounts for instruction in agricultural subjects, home economics subjects, and trade and industrial education subjects. The George-Ellzey Act expired June 30, 1937, but an act approved June 8, 1936 (George-Deen Act), authorized an appropriation of $14,483,000 for the further development of vocational education in the States and Territories; $12,175,000 of which is to be used in equal amounts for vocational education in agriculture, trade and industry, and home economics; $1,254,000 for vocational education and the training of teachers in the distributive occupations; and $1,054,000 for the training of teachers, supervisors, and directors of agricultural, trade and industrial, and home-economics subjects. The money appropriated under these acts is to be allotted to the States on the basis of rural, farm, nonfarm, urban, or total population as designated in the acts, for the promotion of vocational education in agriculture, trades and industries, home economics, and the distributive occupations, and for the preparation of teachers of vocational subjects. Utilization of allotments under the first three acts is authorized upon condition that for each dollar of Federal money expended the State or local community, or both, shall expend at least an equal amount for the same purpose. Under the George-Deen Act, States and Territories participating in the grants are required to match only 50 percent of these grants for the first 5 years in which the act is operative or until June 30, 1942, this matching percentage being increased by 10 percent annually thereafter until it reaches 100 percent beginning July 1, 1946.

The duties imposed upon the Board by the National Vocational Education Act were of a twofold character: On the one hand, as representative of the Government the Federal Board cooperated with State boards for vocational education in promoting vocational education; and, on the other, as a research agency it was required to make, or cause to have made, studies, investigations, and reports to aid the States in developing their programs. As representative of the Government, it examined the plans submitted by the State boards, presenting in the case of each State the scheme of vocational education to be conducted by the State, and approved plans found to be in conformity with the provisions and purposes of the act. It ascertained annually whether the several States were using or were prepared to use the money received by them in accordance with the provisions of the statute and each year it certified to the Secretary of the Treasury the States which complied with the provisions of the act, together with the amount which each State was entitled to receive. It was expressly required to make studies, investigations, and reports dealing with occupational processes and educational requirements for workers and apprentices, and with problems of administration of vocational schools and of courses of instruction in vocational subjects, in the several fields of agricultural, trade and industrial, home economics, and commercial employment.

The Federal Board for Vocational Education was designated as the administrative agency, also, of the Civilian Vocational Rehabilitation Act, approved June 2, 1920. By this act the Federal Government agrees to cooperate with the States in rehabilitating and restoring to remunerative employment any persons disabled in industry or otherwise. Under this act the duties imposed upon the Federal Board include the making of rules and regulations appropriate for carrying out the purposes of the act; cooperation with the States in the promotion of vocational rehabilitation of disabled persons; examination of State plans and their approval, if in conformity with the provisions of the act; and cooperation in this work with public and private agencies. The Federal Board was required to ascertain annually whether the States are properly using Federal funds and to certify, on or before the 1st day of January of each year, to the Secretary of the Treasury those States which have accepted and complied with the provisions of the law, designating the amount of money which each State was entitled to receive. To aid the States, the Federal Board was authorized to make studies and investigations of the vocational rehabilitation of disabled persons and their placement in suitable or gainful occupations. Acts authorizing continuation of appropriations for this purpose were approved June 5, 1924, June 9, 1930, June 30, 1932, June 6, 1936 (effective July 1, 1937), and August 14, 1935. The Social Security Act Amendments of 1939, approved August 10, 1939, authorizes increased appropriations to be paid to the States for vocational rehabilitation.

An act approved March 10, 1924, extended the benefits of the Vocational Education and Rehabilitation Acts to the Territory of Hawaii and authorized annual appropriations for this purpose. An amendment of August 14, 1939, through a provision of the Social Security Act, authorizes an additional allotment to Hawaii.

An act approved February 23, 1929, extended to the District of Columbia the program for rehabilitating disabled persons. This act provided that the Board should be the active operating agency in the District. An amending act approved April 17, 1937, authorized an increased appropriation for this work.

An act of March 3, 1931, extended the Vocational Education and Rehabilitation Acts to the island of Puerto Rico, and authorized annual appropriations for this purpose. An amendment of August 14, 1939, through a provision of the Social Security Act, provides that effective July 1, 1940, Puerto Rico shall share in the allotments of funds on the same basis as the States.

An act of June 20, 1936, authorized the operation of stands in Federal buildings by blind persons, to enlarge the economic opportunities of the blind, and for other purposes.

Under Executive order of June 10, 1933, the functions of the Federal Board for Vocational Education were transferred to the Department of the Interior. These functions were assigned to the Commissioner of Education on October 10, 1933, and established as the vocational division of the Office of Education. The Board now acts in an advisory capacity without compensation.

Under authority of Public Law 647, Seventy-seventh Congress, second session, the Office of Education cooperates with the several State boards for vocational education and with degree-granting colleges and universities in the furtherance of the education and training of defense workers as follows:

1. It assists the States to organize and conduct vocational courses of less than college grade through (a) courses supplementary to employment in occupations essential to national defense, and (b) preemployment and refresher courses for workers with some previous occupational experience who are preparing for such occupations selected from the public employment office registers, and provides funds for the rental of additional space found necessary for carrying out the approved plans.

2. It cooperates with degree-granting colleges and universities in providing short courses of college grade designed to meet the shortage of engineers, chemists, physicists, and production supervisors with specialized training and provides funds for the purchase and rental of additional equipment and leasing of additional space found to be necessary to carry out approved plans in fields essential to the national defense.

3. It assists the States in the organization and conduct of vocational courses and related or other necessary instruction for out-of-school rural and nonrural persons and in the purchase and rental of equipment and rental of space found necessary for carrying out the approved plans.

4. It administers an appropriation of $5,000,000 to help, by loans, needy college students who can complete in 2 years their studies of physics, engineering, chemistry, medicine (including veterinary), dentistry, and pharmacy.

5. It produces visual aids for war training in occupations essential to the war effort.

Under authority of Public Law 463, Seventy-seventh Congress, second session, the Office of Education cooperates with the several State boards for vocational education in the selection of new or used equipment for purchase, rental, or other acquisition when needed in providing vocational courses described in paragraph 1 above.

CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS

Under Public Law 647, Seventy-seventh Congress, approved July 2, 1942, the active operations of the Civilian Conservation Corps came to an end June 30, 1942. Under this act a fund of $8,000,000 was provided for the liquidation of the Civilian Conservation Corps during the fiscal year 1943.

Camp buildings, trucks, tractors and other Corps equipment and materials valued at more than $100,000,000 has been and is being disposed of, the bulk of it going to the War Department, the Navy Department, and the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

When the Corps ceased active operations it had 350 camps in operation, 200 of which were located on military reservations and 150 on critical national resource areas, particularly forests, to protect these areas from fire.

The Civilian Conservation Corps, unit of the Federal Security Agency, was authorized by Public No. 5, Seventy-third Congress, and launched by Executive Order No. 6101, dated April 5, 1933. This Executive order named Robert Fechner director of the Civilian Conservation Corps and directed the Secretaries of War, Interior, Agriculture, and Labor to cooperate in launching and operating the new youth-conservation program. The act of June 28, 1937 (Public, No. 163, 75th Cong.), extended the life of the Corps until midnight, June 30, 1940. This act, in turn, was amended August 7, 1939, to continue the authorized life of the Corps through June 30, 1943.

On July 1, 1939, the CCC, which had previously operated as an independent government agency, became a part of the Federal Security Agency, created by the President under the Reorganization Act of 1939; on March 5, 1940, James J. McEntee was named Director of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

When the Civilian Conservation Corps was initiated, its major objectives were the furnishing of employment to needy young men in the conservation and development of natural resources largely on public lands under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture. The act of June 28, 1937, listed the objectives of the Corps as follows: "To provide employment, as well as vocational training, for youthful citizens of the United States who are unemployed and in need of employment, and to a limited extent for war veterans and Indians, through the performance of useful public work in connection with the conservation and development of the natural resources of the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, the Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico."

Following enactment of the act of June 28, 1937, extending the life of the Civilian Conservation Corps, President Roosevelt issued Executive Orders Nos. 7677–A, dated July 26, 1937, and 7717, dated September 29, 1937, to provide for the continued cooperation in the administration of the CCC of existing Federal departments. Under these Executive orders the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, and the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs were requested to cooperate with the Director of the Civilian Conservation Corps in carrying out the purposes of the act. The Director was assisted by officers of these departments and by a staff of administrative, special and technical assistants.

Approximately 3,000,000 young men, war veterans, Indians and territorials were enrolled in the Civilian Conservation Corps during the nine and a quarter years it was in active operation. Over that period it planted about 3,000,000,000 trees, constructed 125,000 miles of truck trails, laid 89,000 miles of telephone lines, benefited about 40,000,000 acres of farm lands through its erosion control and drainage ditch rehabilitation programs, and expended more than 12,000,000 man-days on forest fire fighting and fire prevention work.

FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION

The Food and Drug Administration enforces the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, Tea Act, Import Milk Act, Caustic Poison Act, Filled Milk Act, and Section 10A of the Food and Drugs Act of 1906.

This administration inspects and analyzes samples of the various products coming under its jurisdiction, both at its field stations and in its laboratories at Washington, to the end that it may detect and cause to be removed from the channels of trade all those products which fail to comply with the terms of the regulatory acts which it administers. It assists manufacturers to keep their products in compliance with these acts and institutes legal action against those who violate the law. Its primary function is to protect the consuming public against misbranded or adulterated foods, drugs, and cosmetics, and honest manufacturers against unfair competition with such goods.

FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

The Federal Trade Commission was created by an act of Congress approved September 26, 1914, in which the powers and duties of the Commission were defined. The Commission is an administrative tribunal with its five members appointed by the President of the United States, with the approval of the Senate for a term of 7 years each. No more than three of its members may be of the same political party.

Further powers were conferred upon this Commission by Public, No. 447, Seventy-fifth Congress, third session, "An act to amend the act creating the Federal Trade Commission, to define its powers and duties, and for other purposes," approved March 21, 1938 (Wheeler-Lea Act); by "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914 (Clayton Act), and by Public, No. 692, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved June 19, 1936, amending section 2 of said act of October 15, 1914 (Robinson-Patman Act); by "An act to promote export trade, and for other purposes," approved April 10, 1918 (Webb-Pomerene Export Trade Act); and by Public, No. 850, Seventy-sixth Congress, third session, approved October 14, 1940 (Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939).

WAR WORK

Representation on Price Administration, Economic Warfare Board, and other war agencies.—The Commission, under the terms of Executive orders and otherwise, is represented by its chairman on the Price Administration Committee of the Office of Price Administration; on the Board of Economic Warfare, headed by the Vice President; on the Defense Petroleum Coordinator's Committee; and on the Bureau of Industrial Conservation of the War Production Board. Staff members, from the beginning, have served on planning committees, and as advisors and consultants to committees of the War Production Board, and the Office of Price Administration.

Employment of Commission personnel in war work.—A substantial part of the personnel of the Commission's legal and accounting services is engaged in emergency war work, or is at the disposal of the war agencies. The Commission has subordinated its own work in all of its divisions, whenever called upon, to assist in the war efforts, in full accord with the policy and direction of the President that existing agencies be utilized to as great an extent as possible for the necessary war activities.

Wartime costs, profits, and prices.—In addition to its other duties, as hereinafter set out, the Commission has been and is functioning as a Federal cost-finding agency as it did in the former World War when it was a principal agency of the Government in matters relating to commodity quantities, production costs, and profits. It has been and is assisting wartime agencies by ascertaining costs, profits, and prices in different industries for use in determining commodity prices to be paid by the Government and the consuming public, and is supplying data and information necessary in connection with many of the price rulings and regulations of the Office of Price Administration. It has currently made reports on some 86 industries for that office and for the War Production Board, Office of Economic Stabilization, Office of Price Administration and the War, Navy, Labor and other Government Departments.

Household furniture, bread-baking, flour-milling, paperboard, steel, fertilizer, and other industries.—The investigation first referred to—the household furniture industry—was undertaken as early as June 1941 at the request of the Office of Price Administration, to establish costs, profits, and prices current in that industry, and to report as to the justification of then recent price advances and whether they were attributable to increased costs, illegal contracts, or conspiracies between elements of the industry. The investigation of paperboard included detailed costs of different types and kinds of paperboard. The investigation of the steel industry covered detailed costs of the principal steel products. At the request of the Office of Price Administration, the Commission has also undertaken and completed studies of costs, profits, and prices in the bread-baking, phosphate and fertilizer, and biscuit and cracker industries. At the request of the Office of Economic Stabilization, it has also undertaken and completed investigations of practices and operations in the bread-baking and flour-milling industries, and has completed a compilation of data on Government programs for conservation of critical materials during World War I and the present war. A large part of the Commission's entire accounting force has been engaged in the above type of work since June 1940.

The Commission's "industrial corporation reports" and the securing and supplying of industrial war data.—Extensive use has also been and is being made by the National War Agencies of the Commission's series of corporation reports, and of the tabulations and summary reports which the Commission has been and is preparing therefrom and supplying to such agencies. These reports, initiated under the authority of section 6 of the Federal Trade Commission Act, prior to the War, in May 1940, are described herein. In addition to coordinating its industrial corporation reports project with wartime work to provide data requested by the War Agencies, the Commission has also thus coordinated two inquiries initiated by it, namely, those having to do with methods of production cost accounting in manufacturing industries, and methods and costs of distribution of essential commodities.

Wartime priorities.—The Commission has been and is making very extensive legal investigations for the War Production Board, at its request, to determine the extent of compliance with or violation of wartime priority rules and regulations by basic and important industries. It has completed such inquiries with respect to the steel, copper and copper scrap, copper ingots, jewel bearings, silverware, chromium and nickel, and aluminum foundries industries. It has also completed such investigations involving a large number of companies which use tin, a group of manufacturers and wholesalers of quinine, and a group of producers and users of glycerine. It has also completed for the Board a rerating survey covering 25 companies engaged in the production of essential war materials, to determine whether purchase orders placed with certain companies had been improperly rerated so as to enable them to secure capital equipment or whether orders which had been rerated had been extended to obtain capital equipment in violation of the Board's regulations. It has begun for the Board an investigation of approximately 140 manufacturers of portable electric lamps to determine whether they are complying with priority orders and regulations issued by the Board and has been requested by the Board to undertake also a survey of the activities of approximately 19 manufacturers of electric fuses in order to determine the extent of compliance with the orders and regulations of the Board relating to the firms included in the survey.

War contracts and related matters.—The Commission has also completed two other matters for the Board, namely, a survey which furnished a detailed picture of the metal-working machines industry, and an investigation of the purchasing and inventory practices of 38 prime Army-Navy contractors to determine whether it was their practice to obtain critical materials too far in advance of the period in which they were to be consumed. At the request of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House of Representatives, the Commission also assigned members of its accounting and legal examining staffs to assist the Committee in its inquiry into progress of the national defense program. The Commission, at its request, assisted the Committee in important field investigations which involved a thorough check of the awarding of contracts, and of cost records of aircraft manufacturers and their operations and management; construction of Naval air stations, and an examination into the speed, progress, and quality of the work in all phases. Other studies for the Committee covered cartel agreements and patent licenses. In performing this work, the Commission had a substantial part in effecting savings estimated by the Committee at a very large amount.

Wartime advertising surveys.—The Commission has been and is analyzing, summarizing, and reporting to the Director of Censorship, at his request, such advertising in magazines, newspapers, and radio broadcasts as contain any reference to the war, war effort, war economy, or war production, the Armed Services, the general public morale or health, price rises or trends, rationing, priorities, and conservation of paper, rubber, and other materials. Advertisements containing possible violations of the Codes of War-Time Practices for press and radio, as published by the Office of Censorship, have been and are transferred to that office for consideration; while other advertising analyses have been and are being made for the War Production Board and the office of Price Administration.

Wartime consumer protection—Wool products labeling and trade practice conference activities.—During the present wartime period of enforced lowering of quality standards for consumer goods due to necessary restrictions on the use of essential materials and the replacement thereof by emergency substitutes, the need for consumer protection is greater than ever before. This is especially true in respect of woolen clothing where substitutions are necessary in order to conserve wool for both military and civilian purposes. Acting in the public interest, the Commission insures the consumer this protection through its enforcement of the provisions of the Wool Products Labeling Act which require that wool products be labeled in such manner as to afford the purchaser full information as to the material content of the product. And in harmony with the war program, the Commission, through its trade practice conference procedure, provides a means for the establishment of trade practice rules having as their purpose the maintenance of fair competition, conservation of labor and materials, and consumer protection under the present emergency conditions.

Conservation and protection of the public health and public economy.—The function of the Commission in preventing unfair competition and deceptive commercial practices, under the duties imposed upon it as more fully set forth below, is an essential activity at a time when protection of the public interest is imperative as never before. One of the Commission's responsibilities in this field is enforcement of the law relating to dissemination of advertisements of drugs, cosmetics, and food which are injurious to health and public well-being. Such enforcement plays an important part in the conservation of the health of our troops and civilian population, while no less important at this time are the questions of price fixing, restraints of trade, coercive practices, false advertising, and numerous other trade methods which affect the price or quality of practically every commodity bought by members of both our civilian population and our armed forces.

FUNCTIONS AND PROCEDURE OF THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION UNDER STATUTES WHICH IT ADMINISTERS

The Federal Trade Commission Act.—Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act provides that "unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are hereby declared unlawful" and empowers and directs the Commission to prevent "persons, partnerships, or corporations, except banks, common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, air carriers and foreign air carriers subject to the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, and persons, partnerships, or corporations subject to the Packers' and Stockyard Act, 1921, except as provided in section 406 (b) of said act, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce."

The Commission is empowered and directed whenever it shall have reason to believe that any such person, partnership, or corporation has been or is using any unfair method of competition in commerce or any unfair or deceptive act or practice in commerce, and if it shall appear to the Commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be to the interest of the public, to issue and serve upon such person, partnership, or corporation a complaint stating its charges in that respect. Provision is made for hearings, the taking of testimony and oral argument before the Commission upon request therefor. If the Commission shall then be of the opinion that the method of competition or the act or practice in question is prohibited by this act, it shall issue and cause to be served upon the person or organization against whom complaint is made its findings of fact and an order to cease and desist from such unfair method of competition or such unfair or deceptive act or practice.

Provision is made for petition to a circuit court of appeals of the United States, within any circuit where the method of competition or the act or practice in question was used or where such person, partnership, or corporation resides or carries on business, within 60 days from the date of the service of such order to modify or set aside such order of the Commission. Upon such petition the court has power to affirm, modify, or set aside such order, and to enforce the same to the extent that such order is affirmed. An order of the Commission to cease and desist becomes final upon the expiration of the time allowed for filing a petition for review, if no such petition has been duly filed within such time; and, in case petition for review has been duly filed within the time allowed, the order of the Commission becomes final when the time for filing petition for certiorari has expired after such order has been affirmed or modified by a circuit court of appeals and no such petition has been filed, or, if certiorari has been granted, at such time as the decision has been affirmed by the Supreme Court.

Generally, a letter to the Commission stating the employment of unfair practices by some concern is sufficient to institute the Commission's consideration of a proceeding. If the letter clearly discloses that nothing is charged within the jurisdiction of the Commission, it is filed without further action. If it appears, however, that there may have been such a violation of law, the matter is settled, after further investigation, by stipulation and agreement with the concern named in the letter, or by the issuance of a formal complaint followed by a formal trial of the charges, or by closing the file without action, or by dismissal of the charges, as required by the facts of the particular case and by the public interest.

In cases where stipulations are authorized voluntary agreements are entered into between the Commission and the individual or concern named. Such stipulations recite the particular offense or violation charged and include an agreement to cease and desist from the practice in question. Stipulations are extended by the Commission as a matter of privilege and not of right, in instances where formal action appears unnecessary within the public interest. All such stipulations are a part of the public records of the Commission and digests thereof are published. It is the policy of the Commission not to thus dispose of matters involving intent to defraud or mislead; false advertisement of food, drugs, devices, or cosmetics which may be injurious to health; suppression or restraint of competition through conspiracy or monopolistic practices; violations of the Clayton Act; or where the Commission is of the opinion that such procedure will not be effective in preventing continued use of the unlawful method, act, or practice.

A formal proceeding, instituted by a formal complaint and followed by the taking of testimony, filing of briefs, and oral argument, is terminated by the entry of a formal order to cease and desist or by order dismissing or closing the case. Such a proceeding is prosecuted in the name of the Commission by the trial and appellate division, and testimony and evidence in such proceeding are proffered before a member of the trial examiner's division, who is charged with passing upon the testimony and evidence and with other details incident to the trial of the case.

Procedure and internal organization of the Commission, and specific methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices condemned by the Commission, are set forth in detail in its annual report.

Section 6 of the act empowers the Commission to gather and compile information concerning, and to investigate from time to time, the organization, business conduct, practices, and management of corporations engaged in commerce, except banks and common carriers subject to the act to regulate commerce, and vests the Commission with authority to require reports and answers to specific questions in the compilation of such information in the public interest.

Under this section the Commission derives its authority for conducting general economic investigations into the business practices of industry throughout the country. Under such authority the Commission has conducted many economic inquiries, chiefly at the request of the President, the Senate, or the House, to whom reports have been made, and has gathered and published for the use of the Congress, the executive departments, and the public, a great deal of information regarding many of the essential industries of the country.

The Commission also has power under section 6 to investigate alleged violations of the antitrust acts by any corporation, upon the direction of the President or Congress, and, at the request of the Attorney General, to make such investigations and recommendations for changes in the corporation's methods so as to conform to the law.

Important laws to which some of the Commission's general investigations above referred to have led, directly or indirectly, include, among others, the Export Trade Act, the Packers and Stockyards Act, the Securities Act of 1933, the Public Utilities Holding Company Act of 1935, the Natural Gas Act of 1935, and the Robinson-Patman Antidiscrimination Act of 1936, which amended section 2 of the Clayton Act.

Inquiries presently under way or just completed under section 6 include:

Production cost accounting methods and practices.—An investigation planned to disclose facts as to the extent to which plants in the various manufacturing industries do, or do not, record, classify, allocate, and compile production costs in such manner as to determine, for each description of product separately, the production cost per unit of product, and, where such is done, the variety of methods used and the soundness thereof in relation to underlying principles.

Corporation reports.—Under section 6 of the organic act, the Federal Trade Commission is empowered to periodically collect annual or special reports from corporations engaged in interstate commerce (except banks and common carriers). In accordance with the express provisions of section 6, the Commission on May 27, 1940, entered an order requiring about 900 individual corporations to file financial reports covering their 1939 operations. Subsequently, the number of corporations required to submit reports was enlarged and approximately 4,500 corporations were called upon to submit reports covering their 1940 operations.

The reports including the 1939 information, combined for each industry, were published at frequent intervals, the first appearing during October 1940. These reports have presented the significant facts regarding business conditions and financial results of the more important corporations operating in many industries without disclosing the business statistics of any individual corporation.

In all, 76 reports and a summary were published by the Commission with regard to operations in 1939. These reports included the combined operations of 780 corporations with an average total investment, after deduction of reported appreciation of assets, aggregating $28,138,187,401, total sales amounting to $24,932,624,668, and a combined current net profit, after deduction of interest and all taxes, amounting to $2,127,475,966. The aggregate sales of the 780 corporations represented approximately 63.7 percent of the total value of products as shown by the reports of the Bureau of the Census for the corresponding industry groups.

These reports have been extensively used by the national defense agencies and now by the national war agencies. Summary reports including the 1940 information, although not for publication, have been completed and duplicate copies of most of the reports for 86 industries and covering the combined operations of 2,748 corporations have been supplied to the national war agencies, and in addition, special tabulations prepared from the reports have been and are being supplied to these agencies.

The combined industrial operations covered by the 1940 reports represented an aggregate average total investment of $28,561,702,000 after deducting appreciation in the amount of $417,213,000. The aggregate sales amounted to $30,736,188,000 and represented approximately 87 percent of the estimated total volume of products for the corresponding industry groups. The aggregate net income after payment of interest and income taxes averaged 10.23 percent on the net worth, or stockholders' investment.

The Commission is also empowered under section 6 to investigate the manner in which final decrees that have been entered in suits to restrain violations of said decrees have been carried out, either upon its own initiative or at the request of the Attorney General, to whom it must report in the matter; to make such reports public; to investigate from time to time trade conditions in and with foreign countries where associations, combinations, or practices of manufacturers, merchants, or traders, or other conditions may affect the foreign trade of the United States; and to make public from time to time such portions of the information obtained by it as it shall deem expedient in the public interest, except trade secrets and names of customers.

Section 7 provides that in any suit in equity brought by or under the direction of the Attorney General, as provided in the antitrust acts, the court may refer said suit to the Commission, as a master in chancery, to ascertain and report an appropriate form of decree therein.

Other sections of the act give to the Commission authorization for such investigations and the compilation of data, with provisions for procedure under the act, and penalties prescribed for refusal of persons, partnerships, or corporations to furnish such material or to comply with orders of the Commission to testify, produce evidence, or file reports, as required.

FUNCTIONS OF THE COMMISSION, BOTH LEGAL AND ECONOMIC

It will be seen that under the Federal Trade Commission Act the functions of the Commission are both legal and economic. The legal functions include prevention of unfair methods of competition and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, and of certain violations of the Clayton and other acts. Economic functions include general investigations and economic studies of domestic industry and interstate and foreign commerce.

The Wheeler-Lea Act.—This act amended sections 1, 4, and 5 of the original Federal Trade Commission Act, broadened and extended the Commission's jurisdiction over false advertising with respect to food, drugs, devices, and cosmetics, and added sections 12 to 18, inclusive, to the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Section 5, as amended, provides that "unfair methods of competition in commerce, and unfair or deceptive acts or practices in commerce, are hereby declared unlawful." The section also was amended by provision that a cease and desist order of the Commission shall become final 60 days after the date of service of such order, unless an appeal from such order is taken to a circuit court of appeals before that time praying that the order of the Commission be set aside; by provisions definitely fixing the time when orders from which appeals have been taken shall become final, and by providing that "any person, partnership, or corporation who violates an order of the Commission to cease and desist after it has become final, and while such order is in effect, shall forfeit and pay to the United States a civil penalty of not more than $5,000 for each violation, which shall accrue to the United States and may be recovered by a civil action brought by the United States."

Section 12 makes unlawful the dissemination or the causing of the dissemination of any false advertisement "by United States mails, or in commerce by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase of food, drugs, devices, or cosmetics; or by any means, for the purpose of inducing, or which is likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the purchase in commerce of any food, drugs, devices, or cosmetics." It also provides that the dissemination or the causing of the dissemination of any such false advertisement shall be an unfair or deceptive act in commerce within the meaning of section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Section 13 authorizes the Commission to apply to any district court of the United States or in the United States Court of any territory for a temporary injunction to enjoin the dissemination or the causing of the dissemination of any false advertisement of food, drugs, devices, or cosmetics whenever it has reason to believe that such injunction, pending final action upon a complaint issued by the Commission under section 5, would be to the interest of the public.

Section 14 provides that any person, partnership, or corporation violating any provision of section 12 (a) shall be guilty of a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment if the use of the commodity so advertised may be injurious to health because of results from such use under the conditions prescribed in the advertisement thereof, or under such conditions as are customary or usual, or if such violation is with intent to defraud or mislead.

Section 15 defines the term "false advertisement" and also defines "food," "drug," "devices," and "cosmetics."

Section 16 provides that whenever the Commission has reason to believe that any person, partnership, or corporation is liable to the penalty under section 14 or under subsection (l) of section 5, it shall certify the facts to the Attorney General, whose duty it shall be to cause appropriate proceedings to be brought for the enforcement of the provisions of such section or subsection.

Sections 17 and 18 are formal provisions containing the usual statutory separability clause and designation of the act for citation purposes.

The Clayton Act.—The Commission is vested with jurisdiction with respect to sections 2, 3, 7, and 8 of the Clayton Act. Procedure under this act is, with some exceptions, identical with procedure under the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Section 2 of the Clayton Act, as amended by the Robinson-Patman Antidiscrimination Act, declares that it shall be unlawful for any person engaged in commerce, either directly or indirectly to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade and quality, where such commodities are sold for use, consumption, or resale within the United States or any territory thereof, or the District of Columbia, where the effect of such discrimination may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce or to injure, destroy, or prevent competition. This section outlaws discriminations in price, services, and facilities and prohibits the payment or receipt of certain brokerage fees and allowances or other compensations, with certain limitations and statutory exceptions provided.

Section 3 prohibits, in certain cases, so-called tying contracts, or contracts whereby, as a condition of sale or lease, the seller or lessor exacts from the purchaser or lessee an agreement that he shall not use or deal in the goods or other commodities of a competitor of the lessor or seller, where the effect of such agreement may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of commerce.

Section 7 prohibits acquisition by one corporation of the share capital of another corporation engaged in commerce, or acquisition by one corporation of the share capital of two or more corporations engaged in commerce, where the effect, in either case, may be to substantially lessen competition between the acquiring and acquired companies, or to restrain commerce or tend to create a monopoly.

Section 8 prohibits so-called interlocking directorates in cases where one person shall at the same time be a director in any two or more corporations (any one of which has capital, surplus, and undivided profits aggregating more than $1,000,000) engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, other than banks, banking associations, trust companies, and common carriers subject to the act to regulate commerce, if such corporations are or have been competitors, so that the elimination of competition by agreement between them would constitute a violation of any of the provisions of any of the antitrust laws.

The Export Trade Act.—This law permits the formation of export combines or associations which are required to file with the Federal Trade Commission copies of their organization papers and current reports as to their operation. Under the terms of the act, such a group shall be engaged solely in export trade, and shall not restrain the trade of a domestic competitor, artificially or intentionally enhance or depress prices in this country, or substantially lessen competition or otherwise restrain trade within the United States.

The Wool Products Labeling Act of 1939.—This act was approved by the President October 14, 1940, and became effective July 14, 1941. The administration of the act is committed to the Commission, which is authorized to make rules and regulations thereunder. The purpose of the act is "to protect producers, manufacturers, distributors, and consumers from the unrevealed presence of substitutes and mixtures in spun, woven, knitted, felted, or otherwise manufactured wool products, and for other purposes." Wool products coming under the act are required to be labeled to reveal their true fiber content and, in accordance with defined classifications, to show the percentage of "wool," "reprocessed wool," "reused wool," and other fiber contained in the product, also to reveal the percentage of any nonfibrous loading, filling, or adulterating matter which may be present in the goods. Misbranding, embracing deceptive labeling and failure to label properly, is prohibited. Specific provisions are set out at length in the statute as to how and by whom the products are to be labeled and the respective responsibility of manufacturers, distributors, and dealers in relation thereto. In case of violation, the Commission is authorized, through its regular procedure, to issue cease and desist orders. Under specific authority the Commission is empowered to petition an appropriate United States District Court for an injunction to restrain the sale and shipment of misbranded wool products, and is further empowered to invoke the aid of the courts in condemnation proceedings involving merchandise misbranded under the terms of the act. Willful violations are punishable as misdemeanors and may be reported to the Attorney General for prosecution.

TRADE PRACTICE CONFERENCE WORK OF THE COMMISSION

The trade practice conference is a procedure of the Commission having for its purpose the elimination of unfair and illegal practices through cooperative means by members of an industry under the guidance and supervision of the Commission. Fair trade practice rules are set up under this procedure and provide for the prevention of various unfair methods of competition, unfair or deceptive acts or practices or other illegal trade practices. There may also be included in the rules provisions for otherwise fostering and promoting fair competitive conditions and ethical standards of business conduct in harmony with the public interest.

Such trade practice conference work of the Commission was instituted in 1919. By 1926 the work had grown to such importance that the Commission established what is now known as the Division of Trade Practice Conferences.

The procedure constitutes one of the several means for carrying out the Commission's function of keeping trade and industry free from harmful practices proscribed by the statutes which the Commission administers.

Rules established for an industry under the trade practice conference procedure are classified into two groups. In group I are placed all rules which proscribe practices that are illegal as constituting unfair methods of competition or unfair or deceptive acts or practices or that are otherwise objectionable under laws administered by the Commission. A greater part of the rules fall into this group, and the Commission has jurisdiction to prevent the use in commerce of the illegal trade practices proscribed therein regardless of whether the offender has signed or agreed to abide by the rules. In group II are placed rules for the establishment of practices which the industry deems desirable and which are not contrary to the public interest. Infraction of rules of this class are not illegal per se. Compliance with such group II rules is obtained mainly through agreement and voluntary cooperation among the industry members.

FALSE AND MISLEADING ADVERTISING CASES

For the purpose of effecting a more direct and expeditious method of handling certain cases involving false and misleading advertising, violative of the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act, as amended, the Commission established its Radio and Periodical Division. Through this Division, advertisers, publishers, broadcasting stations, and advertising agencies are accorded the privilege of dealing directly with the Director, with a view to reaching an agreement in such cases as are appropriate for negotiating a stipulation, thereby disposing of the issues involved and obviating the necessity of formal trial.

By this procedure the advertisers are afforded an opportunity informally to present for consideration such evidence relating to the advertising claims questioned by the Commission as they may care to submit, with a view to determining whether or not a revision of their advertising is required, and to stipulate the discontinuance of any representations which, after a consideration of all the evidence, are determined to be false or misleading. In most cases the results obtained by this procedure are as effective as those that could be accomplished by the issuance of cease and desist orders; and expensive litigation both to the advertisers and the Government is thereby avoided.

FEDERAL WORKS AGENCY

The Federal Works Agency was created by the first plan for Government reorganization submitted to Congress by the President on April 25, 1939, under authority of the Reorganization Act of 1939, and began to function as an agency of the Federal Government on July 1, 1939.

Four organizations which, prior to July 1, 1939, were operating either as independent establishments or as parts of departments, are now operating as constituent administrations of FWA. These organizations are: The Work Projects Administration (WPA), formerly the Works Progress Administration (with the exception of the National Youth Administration); the Public Works Administration (PWA), formerly the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works; the Public Roads Administration (PRA), formerly the Bureau of Public Roads in the Department of Agriculture; and the Public Buildings Administration (PBA), in which was combined the Branch of Public Buildings, Procurement Division, Treasury Department, and the Branch of Buildings Management, National Park Service, Interior Department. Each of the administrations is headed by a Commissioner.

The United States Housing Authority, which had been a part of the FWA under Reorganization Plan No. I, was transferred to the newly created National Housing Agency by Executive Order No. 9070, signed February 24, 1942, and became a part of Federal Public Housing Authority. National defense housing activities assigned to the Federal Works Administrator by the act of October 14, 1940 (54 Stat. 1125), as amended, were also transferred to the National Housing Agency by Executive Order No. 9070.

All the agencies grouped in the Federal Works Agency deal with public works not incidental to the regular work of other Government departments, and all except the Public Buildings Administration administer Federal grants or loans to State and local governments or other agencies for construction purposes. All deal with construction practices and standards.

War public works and services.—In connection with the war effort, the Federal Works Administrator is authorized under the act of June 28, 1941 (55 Stat. 361), and amended by the act of January 21, 1942, to undertake public works necessary for carrying on community life substantially expanded by the war effort or to make loans or grants or both to public and private agencies therefor, whenever the President finds that in any area or locality an acute shortage of public works or equipment for public works necessary to the health, safety, or welfare of persons engaged in war activities exists or impends which would impede the war effort and that such public works or equipment could not otherwise be provided when needed or could not be provided without the imposition of an increased excessive tax burden or excessive increases in the debt limit of the taxing or borrowing authority in which such shortage exists. He is also authorized to make contributions to public agencies and to nonprofit private agencies to aid in the maintenance and operation of certain public works and services.

WORK PROJECTS ADMINISTRATION

The Work Projects Administration was created by Presidential Executive order, May 6, 1935, under the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1935, approved April 8, 1935 (Public Res. No. 11, 74th Cong., an act "to provide relief, work relief, and to increase employment by providing for useful projects * * *"), as the Works Progress Administration. Under the President's first plan on Government reorganization submitted to Congress on April 25, 1939, under the terms of the Reorganization Act of 1939, the Works Progress Administration was incorporated in the Federal Works Agency under the name of Work Projects Administration. By directive from the President to the Federal Works Administrator, dated December 4, 1942, the liquidation of the Work Projects Administration was ordered and no further funds will be appropriated for project operations after June 30, 1943. The responsibility for the final liquidation of the accounts after June 30, 1943, will rest with the Federal Works Agency.

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATION

The Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works was created under the act of Congress approved June 16, 1933 (Public, No. 67, 73d Cong.), and was extended until June 30, 1937, by the act of Congress approved April 8, 1935 (Public Res. 11, 74th Cong.). Its life was further extended until July 1, 1939, by the Public Works Administration Extension Act of 1937 (Public Res. 47, 75th Cong.), approved June 29, 1937; to June 30, 1941, by the Public Works Administration Appropriation Act of 1938 (Public Res. 122, 75th Cong.), approved June 21, 1938, as amended by the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, 1940 (Public, No. 668, 76th Cong.), approved June 27, 1940; and to June 30, 1942, by the Independent Offices Appropriation Act, 1942 (Public Law 28, 77th Cong.), approved April 5, 1941. The Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works was made part of the Federal Works Agency, under the shorter name of Public Works Administration, by Reorganization Plan No. I transmitted by the President to the Congress on April 25, 1939, pursuant to the provisions of the Reorganization Act of 1939 (Public, No. 19, 76th Cong.), approved April 3, 1939.

The functions of the Public Works Administration may be summarized as follows:

(1) To make allotments to finance Federal projects; (2) to make loans or grants, or both, to non-Federal public bodies to aid in financing the construction of useful public works; and (3) to construct and lease projects, with or without the privilege of purchase, to public bodies.

NOTE.—No funds are now available for new projects.

PUBLIC ROADS ADMINISTRATION

The Public Roads Administration is the principal road-building agency of the Federal Government. Normally it administers Federal funds made available to aid the States in improvement of highways and constructs roads or supervises road construction in national forests, national parks, and certain other Federal areas. All activities not required in the conduct of the war have been discontinued. The organization is now engaged in construction of access roads to war industries and Army and Navy areas, and the highway to Alaska. It is also correcting critical deficiencies in the network of strategic highways and is working with Central American countries and the Army in the improvement of the Inter-American highway. Research facilities are engaged in the solution of problems presented by war agencies.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS ADMINISTRATION

The Public Buildings Administration was established as a part of the Federal Works Agency under the provisions of Reorganization Plan No. I, Section 303, pursuant to the provisions of the Reorganization Act of 1939, approved April 3, 1939. Prior to July 1, 1939, the component parts of the Public Buildings Administration operated as units of the Procurement Division in the Treasury Department and of the National Park Service in the Department of the Interior. Under the first Reorganization plan the Public Buildings Branch of the Procurement Division, the Branch of Buildings Management of the National Park Service (except its functions relating to monuments and memorials), and the functions of the National Park Service in the District of Columbia in connection with the general assignment of space, the selection of sites for public buildings, and the determination of the priority in which the construction or enlargement of public buildings shall be undertaken, were consolidated in the Public Buildings Administration of the Federal Works Agency under the Commissioner of Public Buildings.

The Public Buildings Administration is responsible for the administrative, technical, and clerical functions incident to the design, construction, maintenance, and repair of Federal buildings and for the operation and protection of buildings in the District of Columbia and of certain buildings outside of the District of Columbia.

Participation of the Public Buildings Administration in the national war program embraces the design and construction of projects assigned to the Administration the use of which is anticipated to be for the period of the emergency; the development of codes, methods, and measures to be employed in the protection of Federally owned and leased buildings and their contents against war damage and against subversive activities; and, the operation of duration dormitories for Government employees in and near the District of Columbia for the account of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

The Public Buildings Administration performs the physical movement of Government agencies directed to be moved from Washington, including the securing of space in other cities for the use of such agencies.

The work of the Administration is directed by the Commissioner of Public Buildings. Operating directly under the Commissioner and responsible for the detailed technical, clerical, and administrative functions are:

Office of the Buildings Manager.—Operates, maintains, and protects all buildings under the jurisdiction of the Administration for such purposes; determines the need of and arranges for the repair and preservation of buildings, including leased properties, operated by the Administration in the District of Columbia; performs all moving operations of Government agencies into, out of, or within buildings operated, maintained, and protected by the Administration.

Office of the Fiscal Manager.—Collects and prepares for submission to the Bureau of the Budget and the Congress data and estimates for the construction and repair of Federal buildings and for the general administrative expenses of the Administration; acts on a joint committee with representatives of the Post Office Department in the selection of sites for public buildings outside the District of Columbia; determines the sufficiency and applicability of appropriated funds in connection with contracts and changes thereof and for other purposes; effects final settlement of contracts. Duplicates drawings for construction and repair work; advertises for bids; forwards bidding material to prospective bidders and others interested, and opens and distributes bids when received; procures and distributes office supplies; supervises (1) mail and files of Public Buildings Administration, (2) all blueprinting, photostating, and photography, (3) information service, (4) clearance of surplus furniture for all constituent units of the Federal Works Agency, including transfer of furniture between units, (5) allotment of space available for occupancy by the Public Buildings Administration.

Office of Planning and Space Control.—Collects preplanning data for use in the determination of building projects within and outside the District of Columbia; makes recommendation on the assignment of space in new and existing buildings throughout the country; administers rental and lease contracts; administers the acquisition of space on rental basis for all Federal activities in the District of Columbia, and for the collective housing of Federal agencies in single buildings outside the District of Columbia; administers leasing and sale of surplus real estate; maintains an inventory of Government-owned real estate.

Office of the Supervising Architect.—Prepares preliminary sketches and estimates leading to the establishment of a program of Federal building construction; responsible for the architectural and engineering design; conducts activities required for the development of tentative drawings, cabinet sketches, working drawings and specifications for all projects authorized under the various Federal building programs, and for defense housing projects assigned to the Administration. Prepares codes, methods, and measures to protect Federal buildings and their contents against war damage and subversive activities.

Office of the Supervising Engineer.—Prepares and forwards contract documents for execution; controls dates of issuance of notices to proceed; manages contracts and supervises contractors' operations for the construction of defense housing projects assigned to the Administration and for construction, reconstruction, extension, and remodeling of public buildings under jurisdiction of the Administration, except those operated by it in the Distrct of Columbia; makes site surveys; collaborates with other offices of the Administration as necessary or desirable.

Office of Decentralization Service.—Arranges for lease or purchase of office space to be occupied outside of the District of Columbia by agencies directed to be moved from Washington, and for the physical movement of such agencies and of the household possessions of their employees; provides services to assist transferred personnel in the location of living accommodations at their new stations and in the liquidation of real property interests in Washington.

Office of Residence Halls.—For the account of the Federal Public Housing Authority manages and operates duration dormitories for Federal employees in and near the District of Columbia, together with facilities related and appurtenant thereto.

Section of Fine Arts.—Conducts activities required for the sculptural and mural decoration of buildings under the jurisdiction of the Administration.

FEDERAL FIRE COUNCIL

The Federal Fire Council was organized in April 1930 by collective action of Government departments and establishments and established by Executive Order No. 7397 of June 20, 1936, as an official advisory agency in matters relating to the protection of Federal employees and property from fire. By Executive Order No. 8194 of July 6, 1939, it was placed under the jurisdiction of the Federal Works Agency.

The council is authorized to develop standards, procedures, and forms, and, on request, to conduct surveys or such other investigations as may be necessary to determine what measures should be taken to safeguard life and property from the hazards of fire, including review of plans for new construction. The council is also authorized to make such independent studies of Federal buildings and property as it may deem desirable from the standpoint of fire protection, and to maintain a record of fire losses on Government property.

The membership of the council consists of such officers or employees of the various departments and establishments of the Federal Government and of the District of Columbia as are designated by the respective heads thereof. These are organized into standing committees concerned with matters such as fire-hazard surveys, requirements for fire-protection equipment, establishment of fire-loss prevention procedures and organizations within Government establishments, development of inspection forms, manuals, and fire-resistance standards for new construction, protection of records, and fire-loss statistics. A special committee has been appointed to prepare instructions for extinguishing incendiary bombs and render other assistance, for the duration of the emergency, to Government agencies charged with the preservation of lives, buildings, and records.

Reports of surveys and other committee actions are submitted for adoption at periodic meetings of the council. Reports and recommendations involving matters of general policy are subject to the approval of the governing body. These reports and other informative material are distributed to the membership, to the heads of bureaus and establishments, and to other interested Federal, State, and city officials. A manual covering the general subject of fire-loss prevention has been issued together with a fire report and self-inspection forms, the latter for use within departments and establishments in connection with inspections.

FOREIGN-TRADE ZONES BOARD

The Foreign-Trade Zones Board was created by an act of Congress approved June 18, 1934. The Board is composed of the Secretary of Commerce, chairman, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Secretary of War.

Its duties are (1), after careful analysis of applications and investigations, to issue permits to public and private corporations for the privilege of establishing, operating, and maintaining foreign-trade zones in ports of entry of the United States for the purpose of expediting and encouraging foreign commerce, and (2) to administer the law governing the operation of such zones.

Within the foreign-trade zone, which is a segregated, enclosed, and policed area, commodities are substantially free from usual customs regulations, and a considerable degree of freedom is allowed in the handling of such goods within the zone, as, for example, repacking, resorting, mixing, and other types of manipulation; it should be noted that exhibiting and manufacturing are not permitted within the zone.

On January 30, 1936, the Board issued a grant to the municipality of New York permitting the establishment and operation of a foreign-trade zone at Stapleton, Staten Island, N. Y. This zone was placed in operation on February 1, 1937, and comprises a water area of approximately 66 acres, including 18 acres occupied by five piers, and an adjacent upland of about 26 acres, a total of approximately 92 acres. It is maintained within a land and water barrier with a total length of about 8,375 lineal feet and constantly policed by United States customs guards.

On February 7, 1942, the War Department acquired, for military purposes, a considerable portion of the area and facilities of the New York Foreign-Trade Zone. As an emergency measure, the Board authorized the grantee to use piers Nos. 72, 73, 74, 75, and 84. North River, and adjacent uplands, as temporary sites where operations formerly carried on in Foreign-Trade Zone No. 1, will be continued.

A partial list of manipulations performed in the New York Foreign-Trade Zone include: Labeling and repacking canned food products; splitting, skinning, polishing, and rebagging Chinese peas; cleaning, grading, and rebagging chick peas and mustard seed; cleaning and drying crude drugs; drying, ridging, culling, and bagging Brazil nuts; mixing, cleaning, sampling, and rebagging tungsten ore; maturing and sampling and sale by inscription of Sumatra leaf tobacco.

Disturbed international shipping conditions have resulted in the extended use of the zone for the transshipment of many Latin American products, as well as those from other world areas.

Applications for grants to establish and operate foreign-trade zones in several other ports of entry, including Houston, Tex., and New Orleans, La., are now pending before the Board.

GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE

The Comptroller General of the United States is charged by law with the settlement and adjustment, independently of the executive departments, of all claims and demands whatever by the Government of the United States or against it, and all accounts whatever in which the Government of the United States is concerned, either as debtor or creditor, and is vested with all powers and duties previously conferred or imposed by law upon the former Comptroller of the Treasury and the six Auditors of the Treasury Department; also with the duty of keeping the personal ledger accounts of disbursing and collecting officers; of reporting to Congress delinquency in rendering accounts; and of certifying balances, which are final and conclusive, upon the executive branch of the Government. He may provide for payment of accounts or claims adjusted and settled in the General Accounting Office through disbursing offices of the several departments and establishments instead of by warrant, and prescribes the forms, systems, and procedure for administrative appropriation and fund accounting in the several departments and establishments, and for the administrative examination of fiscal officers' accounts and claims, reporting to Congress upon the adequacy and efficiency of such administrative examination. He appoints and removes attorneys and other employees in the General Accounting Office, they performing such duties as may be assigned to them by him, all official acts performed by them, when specially designated therefor by the Comptroller General, having the same force and effect as though performed by the Comptroller General in person. He makes such rules and regulations as may be necessary for carrying on the work of the General Accounting Office, including those for the admission of attorneys to practice before it, and furnishes, under the seal of said Office for use as evidence, copies of records from books and proceedings thereof in accordance with sections 882 and 886 of the Revised Statutes.

Upon the application of disbursing officers, the head of any executive department or other independent establishment not under any of the executive departments, the Comptroller General is required to render his advance decision upon any question involving a payment to be made by them or under them, which decision when rendered governs in the settlement of the account involving the payment inquired about. He reviews, on his own motion, any settled account when in the interest of the United States to do so. He superintends the recovery of all debts finally certified by audited settlements to be due the United States exclusive of those arising under the Postal Service, and the preservation of all accounts, with their vouchers, etc., which have been finally adjusted, and countersigns all warrants authorized by law to be signed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

It is also the duty of the Comptroller General to investigate at the seat of government or elsewhere all matters relating to the receipt, disbursement, and application of public funds and to make recommendations to the President, when requested by him, and to Congress concerning legislation necessary to facilitate the prompt and accurate rendition and settlement of accounts, and concerning such other matters as he may deem advisable in regard to the receipt, disbursement, and application of public funds and economy or efficiency in public expenditures. He makes investigations for Congress as to revenue, appropriations, and expenditures, furnishing assistants from his office to Congress for that purpose, and specially reports to Congress every expenditure or contract made by any department or establishment in any year in violation of law. He also reports to Congress upon the adequacy and effectiveness of departmental inspection of the offices and accounts of fiscal officers, and, in accordance with law, has access to and examines any books, documents, papers, or records, except those pertaining to certain funds for purposes of intercourse or treaty with foreign nations, of all departments and establishments, for the purpose of securing from time to time information regarding the powers, duties, activities, organization, financial transactions, and methods of business of their respective offices. It is also his duty to furnish to the Bureau of the Budget such information relating to expenditures and accounting as it may request from time to time.

INTER-AMERICAN DEFENSE BOARD

The Inter-American Defense Board is a permanently constituted organization composed of military, naval, and aviation technical delegates appointed by each of the governments of the 21 American Republics. It has been established in accordance with Resolution 39 of the meeting of Foreign Ministers at Rio de Janeiro in January 1942. The Board is located in the city of Washington and is an autonomous international organization within the sphere of action and purposes of the Union of the American Republics and under the auspices of the Pan American Union.

The purpose of the Board is to study and to recommend to the governments of the American Republics the measures necessary for the defense of the continent.

INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION, UNITED STATES, ALASKA, AND CANADA

(For defining, marking, and maintaining the boundary between the United States, Alaska, and Canada)

The International Boundary Commission, United States, Alaska, and Canada, was created under the provisions of the several boundary treaties between the United States and Great Britain, for the purpose of defining, marking, and maintaining the demarcation of the international boundary line between the United States and Canada and between Alaska and Canada, as follows:

1. Southeastern Alaska, or the boundary between Alaska and British Columbia. Length, 893 miles.

Article VI of the convention between the United States and Great Britain, providing for the settlement of questions between the two countries with respect to the boundary line between the Territory of Alaska and the British possessions in North America, signed at Washington, January 24, 1903, stipulated that when the high contracting parties shall have received the decision of the tribunal upon the questions submitted as provided in the foregoing articles, which decision shall be final and binding upon all parties, they will at once appoint, each on its own behalf, one or more scientific experts, who shall with all convenient speed proceed to lay down the boundary line in conformity with such decision.

2. The boundary between Alaska and Canada, along the one hundred and forty-first meridian. Length, 647 miles.

The convention between the United States and Great Britain, signed at Washington, April 21, 1906, provided for the surveying and marking out upon the ground of the one hundred and forty-first meridian of west longitude where said meridian forms the boundary line between Alaska and the British possessions of North America. The convention stipulated that each Government shall appoint one commissioner, with whom may be associated such surveyors, astronomers, and other assistants as each Government may elect, who shall locate the boundary line, erect the necessary boundary marks, make the necessary surveys, and file duplicate records with their respective Governments.

3. The United States and Canada boundary from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, with the exception of the St. Lawrence River and Great Lakes. Length, 2,697 miles.

Articles I, II, III, V, VI, VII, and VIII, of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain, entitled "Canadian International Boundary," signed at Washington, April 11, 1908, stipulated that each of the high contracting parties shall appoint without delay an expert geographer or surveyor as Commissioner, and the Commissioners so appointed shall jointly execute the necessary surveys, repair existing boundary marks, erect additional boundary marks, and lay down the boundary line in accordance with the existing treaties upon quadruplicate sets of accurate modern charts, prepared or adopted by them for that purpose, and that said charts so marked shall be filed with each Government, and said Commissioners shall also prepare, in duplicate, and file with each Government a joint report or reports, describing in detail the course of the boundary so marked by them, and the character and location of the several monuments and boundary marks and ranges marking it.

4. Article IV of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain in respect to Canada, signed at Washington, February 24, 1925, which provides for the maintenance of an effective boundary line between the United States and the Dominion of Canada and between Alaska and the Dominion of Canada, authorizes and directs the Commissioners appointed under the provisions of the treaty of April 11, 1908, to inspect the various portions of the boundary line between the United States and the Dominion of Canada and between Alaska and the Dominion of Canada at such times as they shall deem necessary; to repair all damaged monuments and buoys; to relocate and rebuild monuments which have been destroyed; to keep the boundary vistas open; to move boundary monuments to new sites and establish such additional monuments and buoys as they shall deem desirable; to maintain at all times an effective boundary line between the United States and the Dominion of Canada and between Alaska and the Dominion of Canada as defined by the present treaty and treaties heretofore concluded or hereafter to be concluded; and to determine the location of any point of the boundary line which may become necessary in the settlement of any question that may arise between the two Governments.

INTERNATIONAL BOUNDARY COMMISSION, UNITED STATES AND MEXICO

The International Boundary Commission, United States and Mexico, was created pursuant to the provisions of the treaty concluded March 1, 1889, with exclusive jurisdiction to examine and decide all differences or questions arising on that portion of the frontier between the United States of America and the United Mexican States where for a distance of 1,210 miles the Rio Grande, and for a distance of 20 miles the Colorado River form the boundary line as originally established under the treaties of 1848 and 1853, and further regulated by the treaties of 1884, 1905, and 1933, growing out of changes in the beds of, or works constructed in, these rivers, or any other cause affecting the boundary line. Matters pertaining to the practical location and monumentation of the overland boundary of 675 miles between El Paso, Tex., and the Pacific Ocean, as well as questions for investigation and report touching flood-control measures and other engineering problems along the international boundary, are also submitted to the Joint Commission upon concurrence between the respective Governments through an exchange of notes. The Commission is empowered to suspend the construction of works of any character along the Rio Grande and Colorado Rivers that contravene existing treaties; erect and maintain monuments along the water boundary; make necessary surveys of changes brought by force of current in both rivers caused by avulsion, accretion, or erosion; mark and eliminate bancos caused by such changes; survey, place, and maintain monuments on all international bridges between the two countries. The Commission is authorized to call for papers of information relative to boundary matters from either country; hold meetings at any point where questions may arise; summon witnesses and take testimony. If both Commissioners agree to a decision, their judgment shall be binding on both Governments, unless one of them shall disapprove it within 1 month from the date it shall have been pronounced. By the provisions of the treaty of 1933 the Commission was charged with the direction and inspection of the construction, and with the subsequent maintenance of the Rio Grande Rectification Project in the El Paso-Juarez Valley.

The United States section of the Commission was by the act approved June 30, 1932 (Public, No. 212, 72d Cong.), charged with the exercise and performance of the powers, duties, and functions of the American section, International Water Commission, United States and Mexico, which was abolished by the terms of such act effective July 1, 1932. In addition to the development and analysis of general data pertaining to the extent of beneficial use of international waters, there are operated by the United States section of the Commission, over some 1,500 miles of the Rio Grande, its tributaries and diversions, 54 stream-gaging stations embracing the measurement of the run-off from over 55,000 square miles of the drainage area of the Rio Grande within the United States between Fort Quitman, Tex., and the Gulf of Mexico, and nearly one-half of the pertinent drainage area in Mexico between those points. Congressional concurrence in the development of these international data is found in the provisions of the Act approved August 19, 1935 (Public, No. 286, 74th Cong.).

Statutory provision is also made by this act for the conduct by the American Commissioner of technical and other investigations relating to the defining, demarcation, fencing, or monumentation of the land and water boundary; and the construction of fences, monuments, and other demarcation of the boundary line as well as sewer and water systems and other enumerated structures crossing the international border. The act further embraces statutory authority and administrative provisions for the construction, operation, and maintenance of treaty and other boundary projects.

INTERNATIONAL JOINT COMMISSION, THE

The International Joint Commission was created by the treaty between the United States and Great Britain signed January 11, 1909, the object of which is "to prevent disputes regarding the use of boundary waters and to settle all questions which are now pending between the United States and the Dominion of Canada involving the rights, obligations, or interests of either in relation to the other or to the inhabitants of the other, along their common frontier, and to make provision for the adjustment and settlement of all such questions as may hereafter arise."

The Commission consists of six members, three appointed by the President of the United States and three appointed by His Majesty on recommendation of the Government of Canada. It was organized in 1911, adopted rules of procedure, and established permanent offices in Washington and Ottawa. It has jurisdiction over all cases involving the use or obstruction or diversion of boundary waters between the United States and Canada, of waters flowing from boundary waters, and of waters at a lower level than the boundary in rivers flowing across the boundary.

Under article IX of the treaty the International Joint Commission also is constituted an investigatory body for the purpose of examining into and reporting upon any questions or matters of difference arising along the common frontier that shall be referred to it from time to time whenever either the Government of the United States or the Government of Canada shall request that such questions or matters of difference be so referred.

Under article X of the treaty any questions or matters of difference arising between the high contracting parties involving the rights, obligations, or interests of the United States or of the Dominion of Canada, either in relation to each other or to their respective inhabitants, may be referred for decision to the International Joint Commission, it being understood that on the part of the United States such action will be by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and on the part of Great Britain with the consent of the Government of Canada.

Under article VI of the treaty the Commission is charged with the measurement and apportionment from time to time of the waters of the St. Mary and Milk Rivers and their tributaries, these rivers lying partly in Montana and partly in Alberta and Saskatchewan, and being largely used for irrigation purposes in both countries.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

The original act to regulate commerce, approved February 4, 1887, provided for a commission consisting of five members. By various amendatory and supplementary enactments the powers of the Commission have been increased and the scope of the regulating statute materially widened. Among the more important of these enactments are the acts of March 2, 1889; the Elkins Act, approved February 19, 1903; the Hepburn Act, approved June 29, 1906; the Mann-Elkins

Act of June 18, 1910; the acts of August 24, 1912, and May 29 and August 9, 1917; the Transportation Act, 1920; the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933; the Motor Carrier Act, 1935; the Transportation Act, 1940, and part IV of the Interstate Commerce Act, for the regulation of freight forwarders, approved May 16, 1942. The number of commissioners was increased under the act of June 29, 1906, to 7 members; under the act of August 9, 1917, to 9 members; and under the Transportation Act, 1920, to 11 members.

The Commission appoints a secretary, an assistant secretary, a chief counsel, and such attorneys, examiners, special agents, and clerks as are necessary to the proper performance of its duties.

Jurisdiction over motor carriers was conferred upon the Commission by the Motor Carrier Act, 1935, by the addition of part II of the Interstate Commerce Act, over water carriers by the Transportation Act of 1940, by the addition of part III thereof, and over freight forwarders by the act of May 16, 1942. Each of these parts will be separately described later.

The Interstate Commerce Act, part I, applies to all common carriers engaged in the transportation of oil or other commodities, except water, and except natural or artificial gas, by means of pipe lines, or partly by pipe lines and partly by railroad, or partly by pipe lines and partly by water, from one State, Territory, or District of the United States to any other State, Territory, or District of the United States, or to any foreign country, and to common carriers engaged in interstate transportation of passengers or property wholly by railroad (or partly by railroad and partly by water when both are used under a common control, management, or arrangement for a continuous carriage or shipment); also to express companies and sleeping-car companies, to bridges, ferries, car floats and lighters, used by carriers subject to part I, and all terminal and transportation facilities used or necessary in the interstate transportation of persons or property.

The Interstate Commerce Act requires all rates to be just and reasonable and prohibits unjust discrimination and undue or unreasonable preference or advantage in transportation rates or facilities. The act provides that whenever in any investigation, including one instituted upon petition of the carriers concerned, there shall be brought in issue any rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice made or imposed by any State authority, the authorities of the State or States interested must be notified of the hearings in such cases, and the Commission may confer and hold joint hearings with the authorities of the interested States. If, after hearing, the Commission finds such rate, fare, charge, classification, regulation, or practice causes undue or unreasonable advantage, preference, or prejudice as between persons or localities in intrastate commerce on the one hand and interstate or foreign commerce on the other hand, or any undue, unreasonable, or unjust discrimination against interstate or foreign commerce which is forbidden, it is authorized to prescribe the rate, fare, or charge, or the maximum or minimum, or maximum and minimum, thereafter to be charged, and the classification, regulation, or practice thereafter to be observed, in such manner as, in its judgment, will remove such advantage, preference, prejudice, or discrimination.

The Interstate Commerce Act prohibits any carrier subject to part I, and any water carrier subject to part III, from charging a higher rate for a shorter than for a longer haul over the same line in the same direction, the shorter being included within the longer haul, or the charging of any greater compensation as a through rate than the aggregate of the intermediate rates subject to the act. It is provided, however, that the Commission may, in special cases, after investigation, authorize carriers to charge less for longer than for shorter distances, and from time to time prescribe the extent to which such carriers may be relieved, subject, however, to the further proviso that in so doing the Commission shall not permit the establishment of any charge to or from the more distant point that is not reasonably compensatory. Insofar as carriers by railroad are concerned, the Commission is precluded from granting relief under the fourth section to carriers by railroad, or other carriers subject to part I, because of merely potential water competition not actually in existence.

The Commission is authorized to require rail carriers to establish through routes and joint rates, and it may act summarily in itself establishing, temporarily, through routes when, in its opinion, shortage of equipment, congestion of traffic, or other emergency exists. The act requires that divisions of joint rates shall be just, reasonable, and equitable, and authorizes the Commission, upon complaint or upon its own initiative, after hearing, to prescribe the just, reasonable, and equitable divisions of such rates, and it may require readjustment of such divisions if it finds they have been unjust, unreasonable, or inequitable in the past, and if the joint rates, the divisions of which are in issue, were themselves prescribed pursuant to a finding or order of the Commission. The Commission is also authorized to require rail carriers subject to the act to construct switch connections with lateral branch lines of railroads and private sidetracks. Part I of the act forbids the construction of new, and the abandonment of old, lines of railroad without Commission approval, except "spur, industrial, team, switching, or sidetracks, located or to be located wholly within one State." Part I of the act provides that where two or more through routes and through rates shall have been established shippers shall have the right to designate in writing via which of such through routes the property shall be transported to destination, and gives the Commission authority over the routing of traffic after it arrives at the terminus or a junction point of a carrier and is to be there delivered to another carrier in cases where routing instructions have not been given by the shipper. Where diversion of routed freight occurs which is not in compliance with an order, rule, or regulation of the Commission, the carrier or carriers so diverting the traffic are jointly and severally liable to the carrier deprived of its right to participate in the haul of the property.

The act authorizes the Commission, under certain circumstances, upon such terms and conditions and subject to such rules and regulations as it may think just and reasonable, to permit for any common carrier subject to part I, II, or III the pooling or division of traffic, or of service, or of gross or net earnings, or of any portion thereof.

It permits the carriers, with Commission approval, to merge as well as consolidate their properties, or any part thereof, and to purchase, lease, or contract to operate the properties, or any part thereof, of other carriers, or acquire stock control of other carriers; a noncarrier corporation may acquire stock control of one or more carriers, and when so authorized by the Commission such noncarrier corporations are to be considered and treated as carriers subject to the act for the purposes of its provisions relating to reports, accounts, and issuance of securities. The act relieves carriers, when permission is so granted, from the restraints of the antitrust laws so far as may be necessary to effect such consolidations. In all cases of consolidations, mergers, unifications, etc., of carriers by railroad subject to the act, the Commission must impose conditions that are fair and equitable to protect the interests of the railroad employees affected. In abandonment cases the Commission has discretionary authority to determine whether it will impose conditions for the protection of the interests of rail labor adversely affected by the abandonment.

The Commission has jurisdiction, upon complaint or in a proceeding instituted upon its own initiative, and after full hearing, to determine and prescribe reasonable rates, regulations, and practices, including minimum, and maximum and minimum, rates; and to award reparation to injured shippers. The Interstate Commerce Act also provides that actions at law by carriers to recover their charges shall be begun within 2 years from the time the cause of action accrues and not thereafter, and that complaints seeking reparation shall be instituted within 2 years from the time the cause of action accrues, except that if on or before expiration of the 2-year period of limitation in subdivision (b) or of the 2-year period of limitation in subdivision (c) a carrier subject to this act begins action for recovery of charges in respect of the same transportation service or, without beginning action, collects charges in respect of that service said period of limitation shall be extended to include 90 days from the time such action is begun or such charges are collected by the carrier. The act also provides that a cause of action against the carrier shall be deemed to accrue upon delivery or tender of delivery by the carrier of the property involved. The Commission may also require carriers to cease and desist from unjust discrimination or undue or unreasonable preferences. By the Transportation Act of 1920 the statute was amended to provide that an order of the Commission shall continue in force until its further order, or for a specified period of time, according as shall be prescribed in the order, unless modified or set aside by the Commission, or set aside by a court of competent jurisdiction.

Carriers are required to publish and file rates, rules, and regulations applying to interstate traffic and are prohibited from engaging in interstate transportation unless such rates, rules, and regulations are published and filed. Severe penalties are provided in the statute for failure to observe the rates and regulations as shown in the published tariffs.

By the act of May 29, 1917, as amended on February 28, 1920, the Commission is given extensive jurisdiction over the use, control, supply, movement, distribution, exchange, interchange, and return of locomotives, cars, and other vehicles, including special types of equipment and the supply of trains.

By the second war powers act of 1942, the Commission is given the same authority with respect to motor carriers, to be exercised under similar circumstances and conditions as it has under section 1 (15) of the Interstate Commerce Act of May 29, 1917, as amended, over rail carriers.

The Commission may inquire into the management of the business of all common carriers subject to the provisions of the act, and may prescribe the accounts, records, and memoranda which shall be kept by the carriers, which shall be open to examination by the Commission through its authorized agents or examiners. Carriers are required to file annual reports with the Commission and such other reports as the Commission may from time to time require. By the amendments of February 28, 1920, and September 18, 1940, the Commission was directed to prescribe, for carriers subject to parts I and III of the act, the classes of property for which depreciation charges may be included in operating expenses and the percentages of depreciation chargeable for each such class of property, with authority to modify such classes and percentages so prescribed when deemed necessary.

By the amendment of September 18, 1940, it is made unlawful for any common carrier by railroad or express company to enter into any contract, etc., with any person for the furnishing of protective service against heat or cold to property transported in interstate commerce, unless such contract, etc., has been submitted to and approved by the Commission as just, reasonable, and consistent with the public interest. The Commission was given access also by this act into the records of persons furnishing such cars or protective service.

By the act of June 18, 1910 (Mann-Elkins law), the jurisdiction of the Commission was increased as to through routes and joint rates, freight classifications, switch connections, long and short hauls, filing or rejection of rate schedules, investigations on own motion, determining reasonable rates, suspension of proposed rates, and other matters, with respect to rail carriers. By the act of March 4, 1927, the maximum period during which the Commission may suspend the operation of proposed schedules is fixed at not more than 7 months, and it is provided that if the proceeding upon suspension is not concluded within that time the proposed schedule shall go into effect at the end of such period, but that the Commission may require the rail carriers to keep account in detail of all amounts received by reason of increases in such rates and charges and, if the decision of the Commission be adverse, require such carrier or carriers to refund with interest such portions of such increased rates or charges as by its decision shall be found not justified.

By act approved August 24, 1912, amended by the Transportation Act of 1940, a new paragraph was added to section 5 of the act to regulate commerce by which it is made unlawful after July 1, 1914, for any common carrier by railroad or person controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such a carrier to own, lease, operate, control, or have any interest in any competing carrier by water. Jurisdiction is conferred upon the Commission to determine questions of fact as to competition, after full hearing, on the application of any railroad company or other carrier and to extend beyond July 1, 1914, the time during which such ownership or operation of vessels plying elsewhere than through the Panama Canal may continue, when it is found to be in the interest of the public and of advantage to the convenience and commerce of the people, and such extension will neither exclude, prevent, nor reduce competition on the route by water.

At the same time section 6 of the act was amended by adding a new paragraph conferring upon the Commission jurisdiction over transportation of property from point to point in the United States by rail and water, whether through the Panama Canal or otherwise, and not entirely within the limits of a single State, this jurisdiction, under certain conditions, including power to establish physical connection between lines of the rail carrier and the dock of the water carrier by directing the rail carrier to make such connection, and to determine to what traffic and in connection with what vessels, and upon what terms and conditions proportional, or maximum, or minimum, or maximum and minimum proportional rates shall apply; and to require rail carriers entering into through routing arrangements with any water carrier to extend the privileges of such arrangements to other water carriers.

By the act approved March 1, 1913, as amended by act approved June 7, 1922, amending the act to regulate commerce, the Commission is directed to investigate, ascertain, and report the value of all property owned or used by every common carrier subject to the provisions of part I of the act, except street, suburban, or interurban electric railways not operated as a part of a general steam railroad system of transportation.

Section 19 (a) was amended on June 16, 1933, by the Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, which provides that the Commission shall keep informed of current changes in the property, its condition, use, the investment therein, its cost and values, and related matters, in order to enable it to revise and correct its basic valuations and underlying data as needed.

The act approved March 4, 1915, which became effective June 2, 1915, as amended August 9, 1916, makes common carriers liable for all loss, damage, or injury to property caused by them, and forbids, with certain exceptions, limitations of liability. As amended February 28, 1920, and by the Transportation Act of 1940 it is provided that where the loss, damage, or injury occurs while the property is in the custody of a carrier by water, the liability of such carrier shall be determined by the bill of lading of the carrier by water and by and under the laws and regulations applicable to transportation by water, and that the liability of the initial carrier shall be the same as that of such carrier by water, except in connection with shipments to foreign destinations by water carriers whose vessels are registered under the laws of the United States, in which case it is made the duty of the carrier by railroad to deliver such shipments to the vessel as a part of its undertaking as a common carrier, but it is provided in this connection that the rail carrier shall not be liable after its delivery to the vessel.

It is further provided that the 2-year period for the institution of suits against carriers for loss, damage, or injury shall be computed from the day when notice is given by the carrier to the claimant that the carrier has disallowed the claim or any part thereof.

The act approved April 23, 1930, modifies the requirements of this section as to notice and filing of claims.

Part I of the act as amended February 28, 1920, prohibits a carrier from issuing securities or from assuming obligations or liabilities as lessor, lessee, guarantor, indorser, surety, or otherwise, in respect of the securities of others from and after 120 days after the provision takes effect, except after having been authorized by the Commission so to do; prescribes the conditions under which the Commission may grant authorities to the carriers; the form and contents of applications which shall be made to the Commission for such purposes; provides for the giving of notice by the Commission of such applications to the governor of each State in which the applicant carrier operates; for hearings by the Commission in respect of such applications; that carriers may issue certificates and assume obligations or liabilities without obtaining authority other than that of the Commission, and for the issuance by the carrier without the consent of the Commission of short-term notes in limited amounts, reports of which are, however, required to be filed with the Commission. It is further provided that nothing in the act shall be construed to imply any guaranty or obligation as to such securities on the part of the United States. Part I of the act also provides for a right of action in favor of investors or purchasers in good faith and without notice of securities which, if not legally issued, are void, and for penalties against directors, officers, attorneys, or agents of carriers who knowingly assent to or concur in the issuance of securities, etc., contrary to the provisions of the Commission's orders or grants of authority.

An act approved February 28, 1933, amends section 17 so as to authorize the Commission to assign certain of its duties to an individual Commissioner or to a board composed of employees. This section was further amended on September 18, 1940, with respect to the assignment of duties to individual Commissioners, divisions of the Commission, and boards of employees, subject to a right of review of such decisions, by the entire Commission or appropriate appellate divisions thereof.

An act approved March 3, 1933, as amended by an act approved August 27, 1935, amends the Bankruptcy Act by providing for proceedings for the reorganization of railroads, which proceedings may be instituted either by a petition of a railroad, filed in the appropriate Federal court, stating that the carrier is "insolvent or unable to meet its debts as they mature and that it desires to effect a reorganization," or by the filing of a similar petition, after Commission approval, by the creditors of a railroad whose claim aggregates not less than 5 percent of its indebtedness. Many duties are imposed upon the Commission by these amendatory acts, including the approval, after hearing of plans of reorganization, the regulation of protective committees, the ratification of the selection of trustees, and the fixing of maximum allowances, expenses, and attorneys' fees for the trustees, their counsel, or organization managers, or others entitled thereto.

By amendment of June 22, 1938, the bankruptcy law was further amended to provide that any commission created by any law of the United States or of any State having regulatory jurisdiction over a public-utility corporation should have submitted to it a plan approved and given opportunity to suggest amendments or offer objections to the plan, and after approval of the plan such corporation shall comply with the provisions of the plan and orders relative thereto, including procuring of authorization, approval, or consent of such commissions.

The Emergency Railroad Transportation Act, 1933, provided for the termination of proceedings for recapture of excess income, and substituted a new rule of rate making, under which the Commission is required to give due consideration to the effect of rates on the movement of traffic; to the need in the public interest of adequate and efficient railroad transportation service at the lowest cost consistent with the furnishing of such service; and to the need of revenues sufficient to enable carriers under honest, economical, and efficient management to provide such service. The Transportation Act of 1940 contained a new declaration of policy providing for fair and impartial regulation of all modes of transportation subject to the act, so administered as to recognize and preserve the inherent advantages of each; to promote safe, adequate, economical, and efficient service and foster sound economic conditions in transportation and among the several carriers; to encourage the establishment and maintenance of reasonable charges for transportation services, without unjust discriminations, undue preferences, or advantages, or unfair or destructive competitive practices; to cooperate with the several States and the duly authorized officials thereof; and to encourage fair wages and equitable working conditions—all to the end of developing, coordinating, and preserving a national transportation system by water, highway, and rail, as well as other means, adequate to meet the needs of the commerce of the United States, of the Postal Service, and of the national defense. All of the provisions of this act shall be administered and enforced with a view to carrying out the above declaration of policy.

By the Civil Aeronautics Act, approved June 23, 1938, the Commission's jurisdiction over air transportation was transferred to the Civil Aeronautics Authority, except that orders made by the Commission in proceedings instituted before it, either prior or subsequent to said June 23, are to be controlled by the act of June 12, 1934, as amended by act of August 14, 1935, until changed by the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

Under said act of June 23, 1938, the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Interstate Commerce Commission are required to direct their respective chairmen to designate, from time to time, a like number of members of each to act as a joint board to consider and pass upon matters relating to through service and joint rates, fares, or charges of air carriers and other carriers, in accordance with power conferred upon said Authority by the Civil Aeronautics Act.

By an act approved July 5, 1937, section 22 of said part I was further amended to authorize a carrier to transport a totally blind person accompanied by a guide or seeing-eye dog or other guide dog specially trained and educated for that purpose at the usual and ordinary fare charged to one person.

By an act approved August 25, 1937, section 22 of said part I was so amended as to authorize carriers subject to said part to accord reduced rates for the transportation of property to or from any section of the country with the object of providing relief in case of earthquake, flood, fire, famine, drought, epidemic, pestilence, or other calamitous visitation or disaster, if such reduced rates have first been authorized by order of the Commission.

By act of April 26, 1937, the Bituminous Coal Act authorizes complaints to the Interstate Commerce Commission as to rates, tariffs, charges, practices, relating to transportation of coal.

By section 201 (a) of the act of February 16, 1938, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to institute and prosecute before the Commission complaints concerning charges, etc., pertaining to the transportation of farm products, and when like complaints are filed by parties other than the Secretary the Commission is required to give him notice concerning the fact and accord him an opportunity to be heard in the premises.

Under the Motor Carrier Act, 1935 (part II of the Interstate Commerce Act), as amended June 29, 1938, and September 18, 1940, the Commission is charged with the duty of regulating common carriers by motor vehicle, contract carriers by motor vehicle, private carriers of property by motor vehicle, and transportation brokers, who engage in interstate or foreign commerce. The regulation of private carriers of property by motor vehicle is confined to reasonable requirements to promote safety of operation, including qualifications and maximum hours of service of employees and standards of equipment, to be established by the Commission if need therefor is found.

Authority from the Commission to do business is required in the form of certificates of public convenience and necessity for common carriers, permits for contract carriers, and licenses for transportation brokers. Such certificates, permits, and licenses may be suspended, revoked, or changed by the Commission after notice and hearing for willful violation of the act or of any lawful order, rule, or regulation of the Commission, or of any term, condition, or limitation of any such certificate, permit, or license.

Similar authority was conferred upon the Commission with respect to common and contract carriers by water by the Transportation Act of 1940. Such provisions are contained in part III of the Interstate Commerce Act.

Common carriers are required to establish just and reasonable rates and fares, and to file tariffs thereof with the Commission. The authority of the Commission over rates is not that of initiation in the first instance, but of regulation. It may suspend a rate, and after hearing, and upon proper findings, may prescribe a lawful rate. It also has jurisdiction over divisions of rates and fares as between joint carriers and other related matters. The Commission is directed in determining the justness of any rate to take into consideration the elements of the inherent advantages of each form of transportation, the effect of rates upon traffic movement, the need in the public interest of adequate and efficient transportation service by such carriers, at the lowest cost consistent with the furnishing of such service, and the need of sufficient revenues to enable such carriers to provide such service under honest, economical, and efficient management, etc., as contained in the declaration of policy, heretofore set out. The Commission may not consider goodwill, earning power, or certificate value in rate determinations.

Common carriers of passengers are required to establish through routes and joint rates with other such carriers; and, if they choose, may make such arrangements with common carriers by rail or water. In the case of common carriers of property by motor, the establishment of joint rates and through routes is optional with the carriers.

Contract carriers must file schedules or, in the discretion of the Commission, their transportation contracts, showing their minimum charges, below which they are directed not to go, either directly or indirectly. If the Commission finds after hearing that any charge made by a contract carrier contravenes the policy of the act, it may prescribe a minimum charge in an amount found necessary or desirable in the public interest and to promote that policy.

All motor carriers must comply with the rules and regulations of the Commission concerning security for public protection. This may take the form of insurance, surety bonds, qualifications as a self-insurer, or some other form of security insuring against injury or death resulting from negligent operation or for loss or damage to property of others. Cargo insurance, or its equivalent, may be required of common carriers of property in the discretion of the Commission.

The Commission may require annual, periodical, or special reports from motor carriers and water carriers, and the submission of true copies of traffic contracts between any such carrier and any other carrier. It may prescribe the forms of accounts, records, and memoranda of such carriers, and has the right of inspection of such records and of the premises of such carriers.

As to common carriers by motor vehicle, the Commission, in addition to the general powers above mentioned, may establish reasonable requirements with respect to continuous and adequate service, transportation of baggage and express, uniform systems of accounts, records and reports, preservation of records, qualifications and maximum hours of service of employees, and safety of operation and equipment.

As to contract carriers, the Commission may also establish reasonable requirements with respect to uniform systems of accounts, records and reports, preservation of records, qualifications and maximum hours of service of employees, and safety of operation and equipment.

The Commission, by rules and regulations, may require the display of identification plates upon each motor vehicle operated by such carriers.

An investigation by the Commission is authorized of the need for Federal regulation of the sizes and weights of motor vehicles and combinations of motor vehicles. The Commission's report in this investigation has been printed and appears as House Document No. 354, Seventy-seventh Congress, First Session, and bills have been introduced in the Senate and House (S. 2015 and H. R. 5949) intended to carry out its recommendations.

Part III of the Interstate Commerce Act, approved September 18, 1940, gives the Commission extensive authority over common carriers and contract carriers by water, quite similar to its authority over motor vehicle common and contract carriers, above discussed. The act in part III permits the Commission to make numerous exemptions from its provisions, such as bulk carriers on the Great Lakes who can transport bulk commodities so cheaply that they cannot be said to compete with other forms of transportation, and also permits exemptions where necessary to permit United States carriers to compete on equal terms with their foreign competitors. Equality of regulation between competing forms of transportation, insofar as it was possible to achieve this equality, was the purpose of this legislation.

Part IV of the Interstate Commerce Act, approved May 16, 1942, gives the Commission extensive authority over freight forwarders. The term freight forwarder means any person (other than a carrier subject to part I, II, or III of the act) who holds itself out to the general public to transport or provide transportation of property for compensation, assumes responsibility for the transportation, and utilizes in whole or in part of the transportation the services of a carrier or carriers subject to part I, II, or III of the act.

The act excludes from regulation cooperative associations where the property consists of ordinary livestock, fish, agricultural commodities, or used household goods if the person engages in this service subject to this part with respect to not more than one of the classifications of such property.

The act also vests the Commission with authority to administer its provisions and issue necessary rules and regulations, authority to prescribe reasonable rules and regulations for the filing of surety bonds, policies of insurance, etc. The Commission may obtain information concerning operations of the forwarder, make necessary recommendations for further legislation, and investigate complaints as to whether the forwarders have observed the provisions of the act. Freight forwarders must furnish service upon reasonable request therefor and provide just and reasonable rates as well as reasonable practices as to the issuance of receipts and bills of lading and for the pick-up and delivery of freight subject to this part of the act. Unreasonable preferences or advantages are forbidden. The Commission is also given extensive authority over the rates and practices of freight forwarders; the act requires the filing of tariffs, suspension, etc., and permits common carriers subject to parts I, II, and III of the act to establish assembly or distribution rates on less-than-carload and less-than-truckload shipments. The act provides an adjustment period pending the establishment of assembly and distribution rates, provides for the issuance of permits for anyone to engage in the freight forwarding business, and forbids a freight forwarder from acquiring control of any carrier subject to parts I, II, or III of the act. The Commission may prescribe uniform systems of accounts for freight forwarders and require annual and periodical reports and its agents may have access to forwarder records. The act contains provisions for bills of lading and delivery of property by freight forwarders, requires them to collect lawful freight forwarder charges, and permits allowances to shippers for transportation services performed for the forwarder. The act contains provisions for notices, orders, and service of process; provides for enforcement of its provisions and the procedure thereunder and prescribes penalties for violation. It contains provisions for the services of other carriers whose services may be utilized by the freight forwarders. The act contains provisions also relating to when its various requirements are to become effective.

RELATED ACTS AFFECTING INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Elkins Act.—The act of February 19, 1903, commonly called the Elkins law, prohibits rebating, allows proceedings in the courts by injunction to restrain departures from published rates, and provides that cases prosecuted under the direction of the Attorney General in the name of the Commission shall be included within the expediting act of February 11, 1903.

District Court Jurisdiction Act.—The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act approved October 22, 1913, provided that the Commerce Court should be abolished from and after December 31, 1913, and that the jurisdiction theretofore vested in the Commerce Court under act approved June 18, 1910, be transferred to and vested in the several district courts of the United States.

Expediting Act.—The act of February 11, 1903, provides that suits in equity brought under the act to regulate commerce wherein the United States is complainant may be expedited and given precedence over other suits, and that appeals from the circuit court (district court) lie only to the Supreme Court.

Clayton Antitrust Act.—Jurisdiction is conferred upon the Commission to enforce certain provisions of the act approved October 15, 1914, to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, insofar as such provisions relate to carriers subject to the act to regulate commerce. The act prohibits, with certain exceptions, carriers from discriminating between purchasers in sales of commodities, and from making leases or sales of commodities and from acquiring stock or capital of other corporations engaging in commerce tending to substantially lessen competition or create a monopoly; makes it a felony for a president or other specified officers to misappropriate a carrier's funds; and, as amended by act approved January 12, 1918, provides that, effective January 1, 1919, no carrier shall have dealings in securities or supplies, or contract for construction or maintenance to the amount of more than $50,000, in the aggregate in any one year, with another corporation or organization when, by reason of common officers or otherwise, there exists a community of interest between the carrier and such other corporation or organization, except as a result of free competitive bidding under regulations to be prescribed by the Commission. The Commission is further authorized to investigate violations of the act by carriers and to require the guilty parties to cease therefrom, and its findings of fact in such investigations shall be conclusive when supported by testimony.

Railway Mail Service Pay Act.—The act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department, approved July 28, 1916, empowers the Commission to fix and determine fair and reasonable rates and compensation for the transportation of mail matter by railway common carriers and services connected therewith, prescribing the method by weight or space, or both, or otherwise.

The act making appropriations for the services of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, empowers the Commission to fix and determine fair and reasonable rates and compensation for the transportation of mail matter by urban and interurban electric railway common carriers.

Standard Time Act.—By the act approved March 19, 1918, the Commission is authorized to fix the limits of the standard time zones established for the continental United States and Alaska, having due regard, in doing so, to the convenience of commerce and the junction and division points of common carriers whose movements are to be governed by the standard time of the zones so fixed.

Safety Appliance Acts.—The act of March 2, 1893, known as the Safety Appliance Act, provides that railroad cars used in interstate commerce must be equipped with automatic couplers, and drawbars of a standard height for freight cars, and have grabirons or handholds in the ends and sides of each car; and that locomotive engines used in moving interstate traffic shall be equipped with a power driving-wheel brake and appliances for operating the train-brake system. The act directs the Commission to lodge with the proper district attorneys information of such violations as may come to its knowledge. The act of March 2, 1903, amended this act so as to make its provisions apply to Territories and the District of Columbia, to all cases when couplers of whatever design are brought together, and to all locomotives, cars, and other equipment of any railroad engaged in interstate traffic, except logging cars and cars used upon street railways; and provides for a minimum number of air-braked cars in trains.

By act of April 14, 1910, the safety appliance acts were supplemented so as to require railroads to equip their cars with sill steps, hand brakes, ladders, running boards, and roof handholds, and the Commission was authorized to designate the number, dimensions, location, and manner of application of appliances.

Accident Reports Act.—By act of May 6, 1910, the prior accident reports law was repealed and a new statute enacted requiring carriers to make full reports of all accidents to the Commission and increasing the scope of the Commission's authority in making investigations of all accidents resulting to persons or the property of the carrier.

Hours of Service Act.—The act of March 4, 1907, makes it the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to enforce the provisions of the act wherein it is made unlawful to require or permit employees engaged in or connected with the movement of trains to be on duty more than a specified number of hours in any 24.

Ash Pan Act.—The act of May 30, 1908, makes it the duty of the Interstate Commerce Commission to enforce the provisions of the act wherein it is provided that after a certain date no locomotive shall be used in moving interstate or foreign traffic, etc., not equipped with an ash pan which can be emptied without requiring a man to go under such locomotive. Penalties are provided for violations of this act.

Transportation of Explosives Act.—The act of May 30, 1908, as amended by act approved March 4, 1921, directed the Interstate Commerce Commission to make regulations for the safe transportation of explosives and dangerous articles by common carriers engaged in interstate commerce. Penalties are provided for violations of such regulations. By act approved October 9, 1940, jurisdiction over transportation by common carriers by water of explosives and other dangerous articles was transferred to the Secretary of Commerce, effective April 9, 1941. Jurisdiction in the Commission with respect to requirements on shippers of such articles by common carriers by water was undisturbed.

Locomotive and Boiler Inspection Acts.—The act of February 17, 1911, confers jurisdiction upon the Commission to enforce certain provisions compelling railroad companies to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto.

By amendatory acts approved March 4, 1915, June 7, 1924, and June 27, 1930, the powers of the Commission to inspect and to prescribe standards of safety for locomotive boilers and appurtenances thereto was extended to include "all parts and appurtenances of the locomotive and tender."

Block signal and automatic train-control safety devices.—The Urgent Deficiency Appropriation Act approved October 22, 1913, contained an appropriation of $25,000 to enable the Commission to investigate and test block signals and appliances for the automatic control of railway trains and appliances or systems intended to promote the safety of railway operation, including experimental tests of such systems and appliances as shall be furnished in completed shape to the Commission for investigation and test, free of cost to the Government, in accordance with the provisions of joint resolution approved June 30, 1916, and Sundry Civil Appropriation Act approved May 27, 1908. Provision was made in the Sundry Civil Appropriation Acts approved August 1, 1914, March 3, 1915, July 1, 1916, June 12, 1917, and July 1, 1918, for continuing the investigation and testing of these systems and appliances.

By an act approved August 26, 1937, section 26 of part I of the Interstate Commerce Act, changed to section 25 by the Transportation Act of 1940, was so amended as to authorize the Commission to require any carrier by railroad subject to that part (including any terminal or station company), and any receiver or any other individual or body, when in the possession of the business of a carrier subject to the section, to install the block-signal system, interlocking, automatic similar appliances, methods and systems intended to promote the safety of railroad operation, which comply with specifications and requirements prescribed by the Commission, upon the whole or any part of its railroad, and thereafter to make such changes in the requirements, and in requirements concerning pertinent reports and records of the carriers, as the Commission might find necessary.

Railroad Retirement Act.—This act, approved August 29, 1935, as amended by the act of June 24, 1937, creates a Railroad Retirement Board of three members, and it directs the Commission, upon request of the Board or upon complaint of any party interested, to determine after hearing whether any line of railroad operated by electric power is in fact a street, interurban, or suburban electric railway, exempt from the terms of the act.

Railroad Labor Act.—By act approved June 21, 1934, a National Railroad Adjustment Board and a National Mediation Board, to provide for the prompt disposition of disputes between carriers and their employees, is provided for, and by the terms of the act, the Commission is directed, upon request of the Board or upon complaint of any interested party, to determine after hearing whether any line of railroad operated by electric power is a street, interurban, or suburban electric railway, exempt from the provisions of the act.

By an act approved June 14, 1937, as further amended on June 29, 1939, the act of February 22, 1935, was so amended as to continue until June 30, 1942, the prohibition against making shipments of petroleum and its products in interstate or foreign commerce, produced in violation of State law.

By the Carriers Taxing Act, approved June 29, 1937, which provides for the payment of excise taxes by certain carriers and the payment of income taxes by the carriers' employees, but does not apply to either street, suburban, or interurban electric railways, unless such railways are operated as parts of general steam-railroad systems of transportation, the Interstate Commerce Commission is authorized and directed, upon request of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or upon complaint of any party interested, to determine, after hearing, whether any line operated by electric power falls within the terms of said exception.

Under the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, approved June 25, 1938, the Commission is required to determine after hearing whether any line operated by electric power falls within the terms of the exemption proviso included in section 1 (a) of that act, when requested to do so by the Railroad Retirement Board or in a complaint filed by an interested party.

Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938.—The first sentence of subsection (b) of section 1003 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, is further amended by act of May 16, 1942, to permit air carriers to establish reasonable through service and joint rates with other common carriers, except that with respect to transportation of property, air carriers not directly engaged in the operation of aircraft in air transportation (other than companies engaged in the air express business) may not establish joint rates with common carriers subject to the Interstate Commerce Act.

Subsection (b) of section 412 of the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938, as amended, is amended by act of May 16, 1942, to provide that the Authority shall by order disapprove any such contract or agreement, whether or not previously approved by it, that it finds to be adverse to the public interest, or in violation of this act, and shall by order approve any such contract or agreement that it does not find to be adverse to the public interest, or in violation of this act; except that the Authority may not approve any contract or agreement between an air carrier not directly engaged in the operation of aircraft in air transportation and a common carrier subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, governing the compensation to be received by such common carrier for performing transportation services.

MARITIME COMMISSION, UNITED STATES

(See also War Shipping Administration, p. 541)

NOTE.—On February 7, 1942, under authority of the First War Powers Act (Public Law 354, 77th Cong.) by Executive Order 9054 (7 F. R. 837), the President established the War Shipping Administration within the Office of Emergency Management. Certain functions, duties, and powers set forth below were transferred by that order from the Maritime Commission to the War Shipping Administration.

The United States Maritime Commission was created by the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, approved June 29, 1936 (49 Stat. 1985), which is entitled "An act to further the development and maintenance of an adequate and well-balanced American merchant marine, to promote the commerce of the United States, to aid in the national defense, to repeal certain former legislation, and for other purposes." The Commission is an independent establishment of the executive branch of the Government, charged with the determination and administration of certain governmental financial aids to private citizens for the construction and operation of vessels in the commerce of the United States. It also exercises other business functions. In addition to its business functions, the Commission possesses regulatory powers over common carriers in the foreign water-borne commerce of the United States and over persons carrying on the business of forwarding or furnishing terminal facilities in connection with the common carriers by water.

The act directs that the Commission shall be composed of five members, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The Chairman is designated by the President. The Commission may elect one of its members as vice chairman and is authorized to appoint and fix the salaries of a secretary, a general counsel, and other officials and employees.

The terms of office of the Commissioners first appointed are fixed at 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 years, but their successors are to be appointed for terms of 6 years. Three Commissioners were appointed and took office on September 26, 1936. A full Commission was appointed and took office on April 16, 1937.

By the terms of the act, the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation was dissolved and all its records, books, papers, and property were taken over by the Commission. Likewise, all money, notes, bonds, mortgages, contracts, lands, vessels, terminals, property, and interests of every kind, owned by the United States and controlled by the Department of Commerce as the successor to the powers and functions of the former Shipping Board, were transferred to the Commission by the act.

Ocean mail contracts made by the Postmaster General were terminated effective June 30, 1937. The holder of any such contract was authorized to file an application with the Commission to adjust and settle all the rights of the parties under the contract, subject to appeal by the Attorney General.

Under the act the Commission, as successor to the powers and functions originally vested in the United States Shipping Board and later transferred by Executive Order No. 6166, issued on June 10, 1933, to the Department of Commerce, possesses all the powers and functions delegated in the Shipping Act, 1916, as amended, the Merchant Marine Act, 1920, as amended, and the Intercoastal Shipping Act, 1933, as amended. The Commission's powers have been extended or clarified by acts of Congress on several occasions since enactment of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936.

The duties of the Commission include the investigation and determination of the ocean services, routes, and lines from points in the United States to foreign markets essential for the development and maintenance of the foreign commerce of the United States and the determination of what additions and replacements of the American merchant marine are required to create an adequate and well-balanced merchant fleet to provide shipping service on all routes essential for the flow of the foreign commerce of the United States, the vessels to be so designed as to be capable of serving as naval or military auxiliaries in time of war or national emergency; and investigation of other maritime problems arising under the act.

To aid a citizen of the United States in the construction of a new vessel to be used on a service, route, or line in the foreign commerce of the United States determined to be essential, the Commission is empowered to have the vessel constructed in a shipyard in the United States, to pay such construction cost, and to sell the vessel to the applicant for an amount equal to the estimated cost of the construction of the vessel if it were constructed in a foreign shipyard. The plans and specifications are required to be approved by the Secretary of the Navy, the Commission being directed to cooperate with the Navy Department as to national-defense needs and the adaptation of the merchant fleet to national-defense requirements. The difference between the cost of constructing the vessel in the United States and the estimated cost of constructing the vessel in a foreign shipyard is termed a construction-differential subsidy, but in no case may such subsidy exceed 50 percent of the cost of the vessel. Under temporary emergency legislation the Commission is authorized to make the determinations of estimated foreign costs on the basis of the conditions existing during the period prior to September 3, 1939. The applicant is required to pay 25 percent of the price at which a vessel is sold to the applicant, and the balance, payable in 20 years at 3½-percent interest per annum, must be secured by a first preferred mortgage upon the vessel.

Aid may be extended to any citizen of the United States in the construction of a new vessel to be operated in the foreign or domestic trade (excepting vessels engaged solely in the transportation of property on inland rivers and canals exclusively), in cases where no construction-differential subsidy is to be allowed, although the Commission is authorized to pay the cost of any national-defense features incorporated in such new vessels. The applicant is required, in case the vessel has a gross tonnage of 3,500 or more tons and a speed of 16 knots or more, to pay not less than 12½ per centum of the cost of the vessel, and in case of a vessel of less tonnage or less speed, not less than 25 per centum of the cost of the vessel; and the balance, payable in 20 years at 3½-percent interest per annum, must be secured by a first preferred mortgage and otherwise as the Commission may direct.

If it is found that the national policy declared in the act and the building program contemplated by the act cannot be realized within a reasonable time, after approval by the President, the Commission may have new vessels constructed and old ones reconditioned. Vessels transferred to the Commission and being operated in foreign commerce may be temporarily operated by the Commission for its account by private operators. All vessels transferred to or otherwise acquired by the Commission may be chartered or sold. Charters under the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, are restricted to bareboat charters.

The Commission is empowered to grant an operating-differential subsidy to aid a citizen of the United States in the operation of a vessel to be used in an essential service, route, or line in the foreign commerce of the United States. The operating-differential subsidy, which is intended to place the proposed operations of such vessels on a parity with those of foreign competitors, is the excess of the cost of items of operating expense in which it is found the applicant is at a substantial disadvantage in competition with foreign vessels over the estimated cost of the same items of expense if the vessels were operated under registry of a foreign country whose vessels are substantial competitors of the vessels covered by the contract. Certain reserve funds are required to be set up by the vessel operators, and no operating-differential subsidy may be paid for coastwise or intercoastal vessel operations.

The Commission is authorized (under the 1939 amendments to the act) to acquire any obsolete vessel or vessels not less than 17 years old, which have been owned by citizens of the United States for at least 3 years prior to the date of such acquisition, in exchange for credit on the purchase of a new vessel or vessels from the Commission or on a new vessel or vessels constructed in a domestic shipyard and documented under the laws of the United States. The allowance is to be the fair and reasonable value of the old vessel as determined by the Commission after consideration of the scrap value, the depreciated value, and the market value for operation.

The Commission administers, under regulations issued in conjunction with the Treasury Department, construction reserve funds established by American shipowners who may deposit therein proceeds from the sales of vessels and earnings from operations of vessels, for use in the construction or acquisition of new vessels. Any deposits so used which represent gain on the sale of a vessel are exempt from the taxes on capital gain, but the tax basis of the new vessel will be reduced by the amount of such gain not taxed on the sale.

During a national emergency proclaimed by the President, or whenever the President proclaims that the security of the national defense makes it advisable, the Commission may terminate charters on vessels owned by the Commission, and may requisition any vessel or other watercraft owned by citizens of the United States, or under construction in the United States, subject to provisions for the payment of just compensation. This authority is being exercised by the War Shipping Administration during the present war under authority of Executive Order 9054.

The Commission regulates the sales to aliens, and the transfer to foreign registry, of vessels owned in whole or in part by citizens of the United States and documented under the laws of the United States.

The 1938 amendments added a new title to the act which provides for a Federal ship mortgage insurance fund to be administered by the Commission. Under authority conferred by this new title the Commission may, upon application of a mortgagee, insure mortgages on all types of passenger and cargo vessels, tugs, towboats, barges, dredges, and fishing vessels, owned by citizens of the United States. To be eligible for such insurance the mortgage must be to secure a new loan or advance to aid in the construction, reconstruction, or reconditioning of a craft and the amount of the mortgage insured may not exceed 75 percent of the cost of such new construction, reconstruction, or reconditioning. The premium charge for the mortgage insurance is fixed by the Commission but shall not be less than one-half of 1 percent per annum nor more than 1 percent per annum of the amount of the mortgage obligation outstanding at any time. The premium charge is to be paid by the mortgagee.

The Commission is directed to investigate employment and wage conditions in ocean shipping and to incorporate in contracts for operating-differential subsidies minimum-manning scales, minimum-wage scales, and reasonable working conditions for all officers and crews employed on vessels receiving an operating differential subsidy. All licensed officers of vessels documented under the laws of the United States must be citizens of the United States, and the act contains provisions in respect to the citizenship of members of crews of subsidized vessels. Citizenship requirements of officers and crews are enforced by the Secretary of Commerce.

The regulatory powers possessed by the Commission extend to all common carriers by water engaged in foreign commerce of the United States and to all persons carrying on the business of forwarding or furnishing wharfage, dock, warehouse, or other terminal facilities in connection with common carriers by water. These powers are principally in relation to rates, fares, charges, regulations, and practices. The Commission possesses quasi-judicial authority to receive and determine complaints of shippers, passengers, and others alleging unreasonableness or unjust discrimination by common carriers by water and others subject to its regulatory authority and the method for the enforcement of orders of the Commission, including orders directing the payment of money in reparation for violation of statutory provisions, as prescribed in the Shipping Acts. An important regulatory power vested in the Commission is the approval, disapproval, or modification of agreements entered into between common carriers by water subject to its jurisdiction respecting cooperative working arrangements. The Commission's approval of such agreements, commonly referred to as conference agreements, excepts the parties thereto from the operation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, Wilson Tariff Act, Clayton Act, and supplementary acts and amendments directed at monopolies in restraint of trade.

The Commission's authority has been modified or amplified in connection with the national emergency and the present war.

The Commission is carrying out a greatly expanded ship construction program, which includes the construction of a large number of cargo ships for use in time of emergency in carrying the commerce of the United States, known as the Liberty Fleet, the construction of vessels with lend-lease funds, including ships of the Liberty Fleet type, tankers, and vessels of the 1936 act standard C types, and the construction at an accelerated pace of vessels under the Commission's long-range 500-ship program. The aggregate construction program now under way is planned to produce about 2,700 ships of approximately 27,000,000 tons in 1942 and 1943.

The Commission is authorized temporarily to dispose of over-age vessels held by it, notwithstanding certain restrictions of law, for operation in either domestic or foreign trade.

The Commission is authorized to make adjustments of ship mortgage indebtedness to the United States and make arrangements for the maintenance of vessels in cases where the vessels involved cannot by reason of the Neutrality Act of 1939 or considerations of national defense be operated in their assigned services.

Notwithstanding certain restrictions of law, persons engaged upon work covered by Commission contracts for the construction, alteration, or repair of vessels may be employed more than 8 hours in any 1 day on condition that the prescribed overtime compensation is paid.

Certain funds are available to the Commission for housing projects in or near industrial plants engaged in Commission activities.

The Commission has been placed on a parity with the War and Navy Departments with respect to preferences for delivery of materials under contracts or orders deemed necessary by the President for the defense of the United States.

The Commission may in carrying out the 1936 act negotiate construction contracts without competitive bidding and adjust outstanding construction contracts.

The chairman of the Commission, in coordination with the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy, is authorized to renegotiate contracts for the purpose of preventing or recapturing excessive profits in accordance with the provisions of section 403 of the Sixth Supplemental National Defense Appropriation Act, 1942, as amended by the Revenue Act of 1942.

War Shipping Administration (see p. 541).—The Administrator, appointed by and responsible to the President, is authorized to perform the following functions and duties: Control the operation, purchase, charter, requisition and use of all ocean vessels under the flag or control of the United States except combatant vessels, transports and vessels engaged in inland transportation which are under the control of the Office of Defense Transportation; to allocate vessels under the flag or control of the United States for use by the Army, Navy, other Government agencies, and the governments of the United Nations; to provide marine insurance and reinsurance against loss or damage by the risks of war; to establish the conditions to be complied with as conditions to receiving priorities and other advantages as provided by the act of Congress of July 14, 1941 (55 Stat. 591); to represent the United States Government in dealing with the British Ministry of War Transport and with similar shipping agencies of nations allied with the United States in the prosecution of the war in matters related to the use of shipping; to train personnel for the Merchant Marine in all of its branches and ratings, including unlicensed seamen, radio operators, officers from the ranks and the training of cadets for officers, and to operate State nautical schools (under Government aid and supervision), training stations and training ships in connection therewith; to maintain current data on the availability of shipping, in being and under construction, and to furnish such data on request to the War and Navy Departments, and other Federal departments and agencies concerned with the import or export of war materials and commodities; to keep the President informed with regard to the progress made and perform such related duties as the President shall from time to time assign or delegate to him; to cooperate with existing Military, Naval, and Civil departments and agencies of the Government performing functions connected with wartime overseas transportation and to issue such directives as he may deem necessary, from time to time.

NATIONAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics was established by act of Congress approved March 3, 1915, and the membership increased from 12 to 15 by act approved March 2, 1929 (U. S. C., title 50, sec. 151). Its membership is appointed by the President and consists of two representatives each of the War and Navy Departments from the offices in charge of military and naval aeronautics, two representatives of the Civil Aeronautics Authority (Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938), one representative each of the Smithsonian Institution, the United States Weather Bureau, and the National Bureau of Standards, together with six additional persons who are "acquainted with the needs of aeronautical science, either civil or military, or skilled in aeronautical engineering or its allied sciences." All the members serve as such without compensation.

The law provides that the Committee shall "supervise and direct the scientific study of the problems of flight, with a view to their practical solution, * * *" and also "direct and conduct research and experiment in aeronautics."

Under rules and regulations formulated by the Committee and approved by the President, technical subcommittees, organized along lines similar to the main Committee, and with members serving as such without compensation, prepare programs of fundamental research in aeronautics. Applied research is also conducted to answer immediate and pressing problems in military and civil aeronautics. In order that research programs may be of maximum value, provision is made to keep the subcommittees informed as far as possible as to aeronautical researches conducted by foreign nations.

The Office of Aeronautical Intelligence was established in the early part of 1918 as an integral branch of the Committee's activities. It serves as the depository and distributing agency for the scientific and technical data on aeronautics comprising the results of fundamental committee researches and also the scientific and technical information collected by the Committee from governmental and private agencies in this country and abroad.

Briefly, the general functions of this Committee may be stated as follows:

1. Coordinate the research needs of aviation, civil and military.
2. Prevent duplication in the field of aeronautical research.
3. Conduct under unified control of Committee in major Government laboratories fundamental aeronautical research, including:

(a) Confidential researches for the Army and Navy on which current designs of aircraft of ever-improving performance are based.

(b) Fundamental researches to increase safety and economy of operation of aircraft, military and civil.

4. Advise the War and Navy Departments, Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the aviation industry as to the latest research information.
5. Consider merits of aeronautical inventions submitted by the public to any agency of the Government.
6. Advise upon any special problem in aeronautics which may be referred to it by the President, the Congress, or any executive department.

The Committee's major research station, known as the Langley Memorial Aeronautical Laboratory, is located at Langley Field, Va., comprising over 30 structures and a research staff of over 2,000 employees. Seven units of the Committee's second major research station located at Moffett Field, Calif., have been constructed and placed in operation. This laboratory is known as the Ames Aeronautical Laboratory, employing over 400 research workers. Additional urgently needed research facilities are under construction at this station.

At Cleveland, Ohio, the Committee is completing construction of its third major research station, known as the Aircraft Engine Research Laboratory. This $20,000,000 station, already in partial operation with a staff of over 1,000 employees, is devoted entirely to aircraft engine research and will be completed and placed in full operation during 1943.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES, THE

The National Archives was established under an act of Congress approved June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1122–24), which created the Office of Archivist of the United States and prescribed his duties. The primary objective of The National Archives is to make the experience of the Government and the people of the United States as it is embodied in the records of the Federal Government and related materials available to guide and assist the Government and the people in planning and conducting their activities. It endeavors to attain that objective by assembling, preserving, arranging, and describing such of the noncurrent records of agencies of the Federal Government as have sufficient administrative, legal, research, or other value to warrant their permanent preservation and by making such records available for use by Government officials, scholars, and others who have occasion to consult them. "Motion-picture films and sound recordings pertaining to and illustrative of historical activities of the United States" are also accepted, preserved, and made available.

Another function of The National Archives is the appraising of records reported to the Archivist by Government agencies as having no permanent value or historical interest to the Federal Government or as having been photographed in accordance with certain conditions, in order that the Archivist may, with the approval of the National Archives Council, report such records to Congress, which authorizes their disposal.

The Division of the Federal Register of The National Archives was created by a separate law approved July 26, 1935 (49 Stat. 500–503). Under this law and subsequent amendments thereto this Division receives and publishes in daily issues of the Federal Register the text of all Presidential proclamations and Executive orders and of rules and regulations issued by Federal agencies that have general applicability and legal effect. It also prepares for publication codifications of all such documents that are still in force and effect, and annual supplements to these codifications.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES COUNCIL

The National Archives Council was established by the National Archives Act (48 Stat. 1122–1124), which provides that the Council "shall define the classes of material which shall be transferred to the National Archives Building and establish regulations governing such transfer; and shall have power to advise the Archivist in respect to regulations governing the disposition and use of the archives and records transferred to his custody."

NATIONAL HISTORICAL PUBLICATIONS COMMISSION

The National Historical Publications Commission was created by the National Archives Act (48 Stat. 1122–1124).

The duties of the Commission are to "make plans, estimates, and recommendations for such historical works and collections of sources as seem appropriate for publication and/or otherwise recording at the public expense." The Archivist of the United States is the chairman of the Commission and is required by the act to transmit its recommendations to Congress.

NATIONAL ARCHIVES TRUST FUND BOARD

The National Archives Trust Fund Board was created by an act of July 9, 1941 (55 Stat. 581), which authorizes the Board "to accept, receive, hold, and administer such gifts or bequests of money, securities, or other personal property, for the benefit of or in connection with The National Archives, its collections, or its services, as may be approved by the Board."

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT LIBRARY

The Franklin D. Roosevelt Library was created by a joint resolution approved July 18, 1939 (53 Stat. 1062–1066), which prescribed as its primary functions the preservation and administration of such collections of historical material as shall be donated to it by Franklin D. Roosevelt and such other material related to and contemporary with this material as may be acquired from other sources by gift, purchase, or loan. The administration of the Library is vested in the Archivist of the United States.

TRUSTEES OF THE FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT LIBRARY

A Board known as the Trustees of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library was created by the joint resolution establishing the Library (53 Stat. 1062–1066), which authorizes the Board to "receive gifts and bequests of personal property and to hold and administer the same as trust funds for the benefit of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library."

NATIONAL CAPITAL PARK AND PLANNING COMMISSION

The National Capital Park Commission was created by the act approved June 6, 1924 (Public, No. 202, 68th Cong.), for the purpose of preserving the flow of water in Rock Creek, preventing the pollution of Rock Creek and the Potomac and Anacostia Rivers, preserving forests and natural scenery in and about Washington, and to provide for the comprehensive, systematic, and continuous development of the park, parkway, and playground system of the National Capital. The Director of National Park Service is executive officer of the Commission.

The Commission was authorized and directed to acquire such lands as in its judgment shall be necessary and desirable in the District of Columbia and (by agreement with Maryland and Virginia authorities) adjacent areas in Maryland and Virginia, for suitable development of the National Capital park, parkway, and playground system.

By act of April 30, 1926, the name of the Commission was changed to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The same officials named in the former act were retained as ex officio members and the President was authorized to add "four eminent citizens well qualified and experienced in city planning, one of whom shall be a bona fide resident of the District of Columbia," to be appointed, after the original appointments, for the term of 6 years, to serve without compensation. The new Commission retained all the powers of the Park Commission and was given further important advisory powers. It was charged with the duty of preparing, developing, and maintaining a comprehensive, consistent, and coordinated plan for the National Capital and its environs, which plan shall include recommendations to the proper executive authorities as to traffic and transportation; plats and subdivisions; highways, parks, and parkways, school and library sites; playgrounds; drainage, sewer, and water supply; housing; building, and zoning regulations; public and private buildings; bridges and water fronts; commerce and industry; and other proper elements of city and regional planning. Paragraph (c) transfers to this Commission the power previously vested in the highway commission, namely, the approval or revision of the recommendations of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia for changes in the existing highway plan. Paragraph (d) vested the new commission with all the powers of the original National Capital Park Commission.

By act of May 29, 1930, establishing the George Washington Memorial Parkway and for other purposes, a regional park system for Washington and its environs was approved, including a basis for cooperation with the States of Maryland and Virginia and authorizing an advance of funds to the District of Columbia for use by the Commission in accelerating park purchases within the District.

NATIONAL HOUSING AGENCY

OFFICE OF THE ADMINISTRATOR

Creation and authority.—The National Housing Agency was created by the President on February 24, 1942. Employing the powers vested in him by the First War Powers Act, 1941 (55 Stat. 838, ch. 593; 50 App. U. S. C. 601, etc.), the President issued Executive Order 9070 consolidating into the National Housing Agency the housing functions and activities formerly carried on by the following agencies: the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Federal Home Loan Bank System, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, the United States Housing Corporation, the Federal Housing Administration, the United States Housing Authority, the Defense Homes Corporation, the Division of Defense Housing Coordination, the Central Housing Committee, the nonfarm housing functions of the Farm Security Administration, and the housing functions of the Public Buildings Administration, the Division of Defense Housing and the Mutual Ownership Defense Housing Division in the Federal Works Agency, and the housing for the War and Navy Departments outside that on reservations, posts, and bases and that which is permanently useful to those Departments.

Organization.—All housing activities and functions formerly carried on by the consolidated agencies are now administered within the framework of the National Housing Agency, under the direction and supervision of the National Housing Administrator.

Executive Order 9070 established three principal constituent units within the National Housing Agency: the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration, the Federal Housing Administration, and the Federal Public Housing Authority.

Office of the Administrator.—In addition to supervising and directing the activities of the three constituent units, the Administrator and his staff perform a special function arising out of the war effort. In cooperation with the War Production Board, the War Manpower Commission, and other Federal agencies, the Office of the Administrator determines the need for housing for war workers in areas where a shortage of housing exists or impends, which threatens to impede the war program, and devises ways and means of supplying such need. This function includes surveys of individual communities; the compilation of employment and housing data from both public and private sources; negotiation of priority ratings for materials; and, finally, in light of all the various factors, a determination of (a) the proportion of the housing need for each community which can be met through a more complete utilization of existing housing facilities, (b) the proportion which can be supplied by private builders through new construction, and (c) the proportion of the remaining need which is absolutely essential to the war effort and which must therefore be supplied through publicly financed housing.

The Homes Use Service has been set up in the Office of the Administrator for the purposes of: (1) making maximum use of existing housing facilities by encouraging persons who have extra living space to make it available to war workers during the emergency; and (2) increasing the number of housing accommodations in existing structures by encouraging their remodeling and conversion either with private funds supplied by their owners or by lease to the Government for conversion with public funds. The Homes Use Service also maintains clearing houses in war production centers where available living accommodations may be listed and where war workers may apply for use of those accommodations. These clearing houses are operated locally as homes registration offices in some communities and as war housing centers, with some Government support, in the more critical housing areas.

FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

The Federal Housing Administration was established by an act of Congress approved June 27, 1934, and was made a constituent agency of the National Housing Agency on February 24, 1942, by Executive Order 9070.

The functions of the Federal Housing Administration are performed under four titles of the National Housing Act: (I) Property Repair and Modernization; (II) Mortgage Insurance; (III) National Mortgage Associations; and (VI) War Housing Insurance.

The act authorizes the Federal Housing Commissioner to insure loans made by private lending agencies. The Administration, accordingly, does not lend or grant Government funds, and its sole expenditures are made to cover the cost of administration and in connection with claims under its contracts of insurance.

The Federal Housing Commissioner is appointed by the President for a term of 4 years, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

Under title I, the Commissioner is authorized to insure qualified lending institutions against loss on loans to finance the alteration, repair, or improvement of real property, or, within certain limitations, the erection of new structures. The maximum amount of a title I improvement loan is $5,000, the maximum of a new construction loan is $3,000. New structure loans are secured by mortgages, and all loans must comply with certain requirements as to interest rate, maturity, and periodic payment. A premium of one-half of 1 percent is charged the lender on loans for the construction of new dwellings, and three-fourths of 1 percent on other title I loans.

Insurance coverage on title I loans amounts to 10 percent of the aggregate advanced by the lender. The total liability which may be outstanding at any time may not exceed $165,000,000. The authority granted under this title expires July 1, 1944.

Under title II the Commissioner is authorized to insure approved mortgages as provided under sections 203 and 207 of the act. Mortgages insured under section 203 may not exceed $16,000 and 80 percent of the appraised value of a dwelling designed for not more than four families, except that mortgages on newly constructed single-family owner-occupied dwellings may be up to 90 percent of appraised value, provided they do not exceed $5,400; or may be up to 90 percent of the first $6,000 of appraised value and 80 percent of the remainder of such value, provided they do not exceed $8,600. The maximum interest rate on mortgages insured under section 203 is 4½ percent; a mortgage insurance premium of one-half of 1 percent on reducing balances is likewise charged.

Provision is made under section 207 for the insurance of mortgages up to $5,000,000 on apartment houses or groups of single or multiple-family houses. These mortgages are limited to 80 percent of the estimated value of the property when proposed improvements are complete, but in no event may a mortgage insured under this section exceed the estimated cost of completed physical improvements. The insurance may, however, cover advances made during progress of construction. The maximum interest rate is 4½ percent, the insurance premium one-half of 1 percent on reducing balances. Strict regulation of the mortgagor is maintained by the Commissioner in connection with section 207 projects.

The aggregate amount of principal obligations of all mortgages insured under title II and outstanding at any one time may not exceed $5,000,000,000. By administrative action, title II activities during the war period are restricted primarily to insurance of mortgages on existing dwellings under section 203. Insurance of war housing is conducted under title VI.

If he is of the opinion that its establishment is desirable to provide a market for mortgages insured under titles II and VI and that it is in the public interest, the Commissioner is authorized under title III to provide for the establishment of national mortgage associations. Such an association may make real estate loans accepted for insurance or insured under title II of the act, may purchase, service, or sell title II or title VI insured mortgages, may purchase, service, or sell uninsured first mortgages and such other liens as are commonly given under the laws of the State, District, or Territory in which the real estate is located, provided the mortgage does not exceed 60 percent of the appraised value of the property as of the date of its purchase by the association.

Under title VI, the Commissioner may insure mortgages on dwellings in areas in which the President finds existent an acute shortage of housing which would impede war activities.

Mortgages insured under section 603 of this title are limited to a maximum of $5,400 on a single-family dwelling, $7,500 on a two-family, $9,500 on a three-family, and $12,000 on a four-family dwelling. The maximum interest rate is 4½ percent, the premium charge on reducing balances one-half of 1 percent. War workers must be given occupancy priority.

Mortgages insured under section 608 of title VI may not exceed $5,000,000 and 90 percent of the Commissioner's estimate of the reasonable replacement cost of the completed project, exclusive of off-site public utilities and streets, and organization and legal expenses. The interest rate on section 608 mortgages may not exceed 4 percent, the premium charge one-half of 1 percent. The mortgagor must be approved by the Commissioner and may be regulated by him as to rents or sales, charges, capital structure, rate of return, and methods of operation. The property must be designed for rent for residential use by war workers.

The Commissioner is authorized to insure under title VI mortgages the aggregate principal amount of which may not exceed $1,200,000,000. The authority granted under this title expires July 1, 1944.

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK ADMINISTRATION

The Federal Home Loan Bank Administration administers the functions, powers, and duties formerly administered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and its members. Under the provisions of Executive Order No. 9070, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board became the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration, and the chairman of the Board was designated as the Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner.

The units in the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration are (1) the Federal Home Loan Bank System, together with a unit that charters and supervises Federal Savings and Loan Associations, (2) the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, (3) the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and (4) the United States Housing Corporation (in liquidation).

FEDERAL HOME LOAN BANK SYSTEM

The Federal Home Loan Bank System was created by authority of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act, approved July 22, 1932. It was established to provide a credit reserve for the thrift and home financing institutions of the country, through the operations of regional Federal home loan banks. This act was subsequently amended by the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, approved June 13, 1933; by the National Housing Act, approved June 27, 1934; and by amendatory acts of Congress, approved April 27, 1934, May 28, 1935, and March 28, 1941.

The 12 Federal home loan banks are located in Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Winston-Salem, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Chicago, Des Moines, Little Rock, Topeka, Portland (Oreg.), and Los Angeles. Each bank has 12 directors, 4 appointed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner, and 8 elected by the member institutions. Pursuant to law, member institutions have been divided into 3 classes— A, B, and C— which groups represent: A, the large; B, the medium-sized; and C, the small-sized member institutions, the size determined according to the aggregate unpaid principal of the member's home mortgage loans. Each of these classes elects 2 of the 8 directors, who must be officers or directors of member institutions in the class selecting them. The remaining 2 directors are elected by all the member institutions without regard to classes.

The capital stock of the 12 Federal home loan banks is subscribed by institutions which have been admitted into membership, except $124,741,000 of such stock which was originally subscribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. The original stock subscription for each member institution is an amount equal to 1 percent of the aggregate of the unpaid principal of the subscriber's home mortgage loans, but not less than $500. A Federal home loan bank may obtain other funds through deposits accepted from member institutions, deposits from other Federal home loan banks and from the United States and its instrumentalities, by discounting loans with other Federal home loan banks, and by borrowing money, including the issuance of bonds, debentures, and other obligations.

Any building and loan association, savings and loan association, cooperative bank, homestead association, insurance company, or savings bank is eligible to become a member of a Federal home loan bank if such institution is (1) duly organized under the laws of any State or of the United States, (2) is subject to inspection and regulation under the banking laws or under similar laws of the State or of the United States, and (3) makes such home mortgage loans as, in the judgment of the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration, are long-term loans (and, in the case of a savings bank, if, in the judgment of the Bank Administration, its time deposits warrant its making such loans).

No institution is eligible to become a member of a Federal home loan bank if, in the judgment of the Bank Administration, its financial condition is such that advances may not safely be made to such institution, or the character of its management, or its home-financing policy is inconsistent with sound and economical home financing or the purposes of the act. The Administration may promulgate such rules, regulations, and orders as shall be necessary from time to time to carry out the purposes of the Federal Home Loan Bank Act.

Federal home loan banks grant both short- and long-term loans to their member institutions. The total amount of loans outstanding to any one member can at no time exceed 12 times the amount of its holdings in capital stock of its regional bank. The schedule of interest rates charged by the banks to members must be approved by the Bank Administration. The banks do not grant loans to individuals. The Federal home loan banks also may make loans to nonmember lending institutions approved under title II of the National Housing Act upon the security of mortgages insured under title II of that act.

Each bank may issue bonds, debentures, or other obligations when permitted by the Administration. Funds of this character are at present being raised through the sale of consolidated debentures. Consolidated debentures, which are the joint and several obligations of all the banks, may be issued by the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration not in excess of five times the total paid-in capital of all the Federal home loan banks when no assets of any of these banks are pledged as security for any debt or subject to any lien.

As of February 28, 1943, the membership of the System consisted of 3,740 institutions of the savings and loan type, 23 insurance companies, and 21 savings banks. Members' assets totaled $5,753,095,000. The Federal home loan banks are self-sustaining and do not require nor receive appropriations from Government funds.

FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS

Federal savings and loan associations were provided for by section 5 of the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, approved June 13, 1933, as amended by acts of Congress approved April 27, 1934, May 28, 1935, and August 10, 1939. These are associations organized under Federal charter to provide local mutual thrift institutions in which the public may invest its funds and may obtain sound and economical home financing.

Each Federal savings and loan association, upon its establishment, automatically becomes a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank System and must obtain insurance of its investors' accounts by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Supervision of these institutions is exercised through the 12 Federal home loan banks in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Administration.

Federal associations raise their capital only in the form of payments on share accounts. They may not accept deposits from the public and may not issue certificates of indebtedness except for borrowed money, when authorized by regulations of the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration. They lend their funds primarily upon the security of amortized first mortgages on homes or combination home and business properties located within 50 miles of their home offices.

Federal savings and loan associations can be organized anywhere in the United States or its territories upon a petition by citizens for a charter. The Federal Home Loan Bank Administration, however, before it can grant a charter, must find that the incorporators are of good character and are responsible, that there is a need for the particular institution in its community, that the institution will, in all probability, be useful and successful, and that its incorporation will not unduly injure properly conducted existing thrift and home-financing institutions. Federally chartered savings and loan associations are also established by conversion of State-chartered associations which apply and are approved for Federal charter.

As of February 28, 1943, there were 1,468 Federal savings and loan associations in operation.

FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN INSURANCE CORPORATION

The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation was created by title IV of the National Housing Act, approved June 27, 1934. This law was amended by acts of Congress approved May 28, 1935, and February 3, 1938.

The Insurance Corporation was created to insure the safety of savings in institutions of the savings and loan type. Insurance is mandatory for Federal savings and loan associations; State-chartered institutions of the savings, building and loan type may be insured upon application and approval. The Insurance Corporation is administered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner. By law its capital, in the amount of $100,000,000, was obtained by sale of its stock to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation. Funds for operating expenses and reserves are obtained from premiums paid by insured institutions, earnings from investments, and admission fees paid by newly insured associations.

The Corporation insures repurchasable (withdrawable) share accounts, deposits, and investment certificates only. Each insured investor is insured up to the amount of his investment and credited earnings not in excess of $5,000. Each insured institution pays an annual premium charge of one-eighth of 1 percent of the total amount of all insured accounts plus any creditor obligations. Institutions now applying for insurance are required to pay an admission fee, in addition to the annual premium for insurance, based on the amount of the Corporation's reserves. When the reserve fund of the Corporation equals 5 percent of the total amount of the insured accounts and creditor obligations of all insured institutions, the regular premiums will be suspended unless and until the reserve fund falls below 5 percent.

Insurance may be terminated by the Insurance Corporation for violation by an insured institution of any provision of the National Housing Act applicable to insurance of accounts, or the regulations of or agreements with the Corporation, provided for in the law. Insurance of accounts can be voluntarily terminated by any insured institution, except a Federal Savings and Loan Association, upon adequate notice of its intention to the Corporation and to its members.

In order to prevent a default in an insured institution or in order to restore an insured institution in default to normal operation as an insured institution, the Corporation is authorized, in its discretion and within prescribed limits, to make loans to, purchase the assets of, or make contributions to, the insured institution.

In the event an insured institution is taken over for liquidation by properly constituted authority, the Corporation is required to make available to the holders of insured accounts either a new insured account of equal amount in a going insured institution, or, at the option of the insured investor, not in excess of 10 percent of his account in cash and the remainder in non-interest-bearing debentures, payable one-half within 1 year and the other half within 3 years from the date the insured institution was taken over for liquidation. The total amount of insurance payable to any member or investor, however, may not exceed $5,000. If any institution which is taken over for liquidation is a Federal savings and loan association, the Insurance Corporation must serve as conservator or receiver, and, in the event the insured institution is incorporated under the laws of any of the States, the services of the Insurance Corporation as conservator, receiver, or other legal custodian are tendered to the parent State.

As of February 28, 1943, associations to the number of 2,415 had become insured. Their assets totaled approximately $3,657,989,000.

HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation was created by the Home Owners' Loan Act of 1933, approved June 13, 1933. This act has been amended by the National Housing Act, approved June 27, 1934, and by acts of Congress approved April 27, 1934, May 28, 1935, and August 11, 1939. The Corporation is administered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner.

The Corporation has a capital stock, fully paid for by the Secretary of the Treasury, totaling $200,000,000, and was authorized to issue bonds in an aggregate amount not to exceed $4,750,000,000. None of such bonds could have a maturity later than 1952.

The general purpose of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was to refinance home mortgages of distressed home owners by exchanging its bonds for such mortgages, which were then taken over by the Corporation. Loans could be made only to those who were unable to procure needed financing through normal channels. Loans were made on the security of dwellings for not more than four families valued at not more than $20,000. In accordance with law, the Corporation terminated its lending activities on June 12, 1936, after making 1,017,821 loans to the amount of $3,093,000,000.

Since then the Corporation has been engaged in the collection of its loans and the orderly liquidation of the properties it has been forced to acquire. Up to the end of 1942, total loans, subsequent advances, and other investments of the Corporation in its loans, sales contracts, and properties reached a cumulative total of $3,481,509,270. On the same date $1,687,217,237 or 48.5 percent of this amount had been liquidated.

Under the original Home Owners' Loan Act, all loans of the Corporation were written for a term not to exceed 15 years. On August 11, 1939, the act was amended to permit the Corporation to extend its loans to a maximum of 25 years where it considers that the borrower's circumstances and the condition of the security justify such an extension.

In 1939, the Corporation made provision to accept, until further notice, interest at the rate of 4½ percent per annum on all payments due on and after October 16, 1939, on the indebtedness of home owners to the Corporation arising from any loan, advance, or sale of property. On all purchase-money obligations taken on or after October 1, 1939, in connection with the sale of real property by the Corporation, interest is to be charged at the 4½-percent rate until otherwise directed by the Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner.

In addition, the Corporation is authorized to purchase obligations of the Federal home loan banks, shares of Federal savings and loan associations, and shares and other securities of other qualified applying institutions which are members of a Federal home loan bank or whose accounts are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, up to a total of $300,000,000. Of a total of $223,856,710 so invested in shares of associations, $109,372,160 remained outstanding on March 31, 1943. An additional $100,000,000 of the Corporation's authorized bond issue has been used for the purchase of the entire capital stock of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. Although the amount which the Corporation may spend for administrative expenditures is fixed pursuant to an authorization by Congress, all the money expended by the Corporation is paid out of its funds and in no part from regular governmental funds.

Under a program of the National Housing Agency, Home Owners' Loan Corporation has been assigned functions in the production of housing for war workers' families by the lease and conversion of private homes and other buildings. It has the duties of negotiating leases with home owners on behalf of the United States, supervising alterations to provide additional dwelling space, renting the space to war workers and management of the properties throughout the life of the lease.

UNITED STATES HOUSING CORPORATION

The United States Housing Corporation was incorporated on July 5, 1918, pursuant to act of Congress approved June 4, 1918, 40 Stat. 595. It was transferred from the Department of Labor to the Department of the Treasury by Executive Order No. 7641 of June 22, 1937, to be under the supervision of the Director of Procurement. It was transferred from the Treasury Department to the Public Buildings Administration of the Federal Works Agency by Executive Order No. 8186 of June 29, 1939. Under the provisions of Executive Order No. 9070 of February 24, 1942, the Corporation was placed in the Federal Home Loan Bank Administration of the National Housing Agency.

The United States Housing Corporation is charged with the liquidation of the housing constructed by the Government incident to the mobilization for World War I. It is administered by the Federal Home Loan Bank Commissioner through the personnel of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

FEDERAL PUBLIC HOUSING AUTHORITY

The Federal Public Housing Authority was established by Executive Order No. 9070, dated February 24, 1942, as one of the three main constituent units of the National Housing Agency. The Federal Public Housing Authority is responsible for the administration of functions and duties with respect to public housing which were formerly vested in (1) the United States Housing Authority; (2) the Federal Works Administrator, with respect to defense housing; (3) any agencies (including the Federal Works Agency and the Farm Security Administration) previously designated to provide temporary shelter in defense areas under the several Acts making funds available for such purpose; (4) the War Department and the Navy Department, with respect to housing units (except housing units located on military or naval reservations, posts, or bases) for persons with families under title IV of the Naval Appropriation Act for the fiscal year 1941 (Public, No. 353, 77th Cong.); (5) the Farm Security Administration, with respect to housing projects determined to be for families not deriving their principal income from operating or working upon a farm; and (6) the Defense Homes Corporation.

War housing.—The Federal Public Housing Authority is authorized to provide housing for persons engaged in war activities whenever the President finds that an acute shortage of housing exists which will impede such war activities and that such housing would not be provided by private capital when needed. This includes housing for workers engaged in industries essential to the war effort, for certain military and naval personnel, and for certain employees of the United States whose duties are essential to the war effort.

The Federal Public Housing Authority is authorized to acquire land for, construct, and operate projects to provide such war housing, including family housing, dormitories, and trailers. The Federal Public Housing Authority is authorized to utilize local public housing agencies in the construction and operation of such war housing projects.

The Federal Public Housing Authority is also authorized to revise contracts for financial assistance which had been entered into with local public housing agencies in connection with the development and administration of low-rent housing and slum clearance projects located in areas where there is a shortage of housing for persons engaged in war activities, so that these projects can be used during the emergency to provide necessary public housing for persons engaged in war activities.

Low-rent housing and slum clearance.—Pursuant to the United States Housing Act of 1937, as amended, contracts for financial assistance for the development and administration of low-rent housing and slum clearance projects were entered into with local public housing agencies. The Federal Public Housing Authority is now administering these contracts. The projects now being completed under these contracts are being made available for persons engaged in war activities wherever needed. No new urban housing construction is being started by local housing authorities except where the projects will be needed for persons engaged in war activities.

NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD

The National Mediation Board was organized under the provisions of Public Act No. 442, Seventy-third Congress, approved June 21, 1934, entitled "An act to provide for the prompt disposition of disputes between carriers and their employees, and for other purposes," known as "the Railway Labor Act." It is an independent agency in the executive branch of the Government and is composed of three members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Board annually designates a member to act as chairman and maintains its principal office in the District of Columbia, but it may meet at any other place.

The Railway Labor Act applies to express companies, sleeping-car companies, and carriers by railroad subject to the Interstate Commerce Act, provides that such carriers, their officers, agents, and employees shall exert every reasonable effort to make and maintain agreements concerning rates of pay, rules, and working conditions, and to settle all disputes, whether arising out of the application of such agreements or otherwise. All disputes between a carrier and its employees shall be considered, and, if possible, decided with all expedition, in conference between representatives designated and authorized so to confer, respectively, by the carriers and by the employees thereof interested in the dispute.

The Railway Labor Act also applies to every common carrier by air engaged in interstate or foreign commerce, and every carrier by air transporting mail for or under contract with the United States Government, and every air pilot or other person who performs any work as an employee or subordinate official of such carrier or carriers, subject to its or their continuing authority to supervise and direct the manner of rendition of his service.

The act also provides that representatives for the purpose of the act shall be designated by the respective parties. The Mediation Board investigates and certifies disputes arising among a carrier's employees as to who are the representatives designated and authorized in accordance with the requirements of the act. The Board may take a secret ballot of the employees involved or utilize any other appropriate method of ascertaining the names of the representatives.

The act established the National Railroad Adjustment Board, composed of 36 members, 18 of whom are selected by the carriers and 18 by such labor organizations as have been or may be organized in accordance with section 2 of the act. The Adjustment Board, located at Chicago, Ill., was created to handle disputes growing out of grievances or out of the interpretation or application of agreements concerning rates of pay, rules, or working conditions. The Adjustment Board is divided into four divisions, as outlined in section 3 (h) of the act.

The parties, or either party, to a dispute may invoke the services of the National Mediation Board in any of the following cases: (a) A dispute covering changes in rates of pay, rules, or working conditions not adjusted by the parties in conference; (b) any other dispute not referable to the National Railroad Adjustment Board and not adjusted in conference between the parties or where conferences are refused.

The Mediation Board may proffer its services in case any labor emergency is found by it to exist at any time.

When mediation services are requested or proffered, the Board is authorized to put itself promptly in communication with the parties to the controversy and use its best efforts by mediation to bring the parties to agreement. When unsuccessful in bringing about an adjustment through mediation, the Board shall at once endeavor to induce the parties to submit the controversy to arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the act. The failure or refusal of either party to submit a controversy to arbitration shall not be construed as a violation of any legal obligation imposed upon such party by the terms of the Railway Labor Act or otherwise.

When an agreement to arbitrate has been filed with the Mediation Board a board of arbitration shall be chosen in the following manner:

The representatives of the carrier or carriers and of the employees shall each name one arbitrator (or two if the agreement to arbitrate so designates); the arbitrators thus chosen shall select the remaining arbitrator or arbitrators. On failure of the arbitrators named by the parties to agree on the remaining arbitrators during a period stipulated in the act, it shall be the duty of the Mediation Board to name such remaining arbitrator or arbitrators.

The agreement to arbitrate shall be in writing and shall stipulate, among other things, that the respective parties to the award will each faithfully execute the same. Copies of arbitration awards shall be furnished to the respective parties to the controversy, to the clerk's office of the district court of the United States for the district wherein the controversy arose or the arbitration is entered into, to the Mediation Board, and to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

If a dispute between a carrier and its employees is not adjusted under the foregoing provisions of the act and should, in the judgment of the Mediation Board, threaten substantially to interrupt interstate commerce to a degree such as to deprive any section of the country of essential transportation service, the Mediation Board shall notify the President, who may thereupon in his discretion create a board to investigate and report respecting such dispute. The act also provides that after the creation of such board no change in the conditions out of which the dispute arose shall be made by either party to the controversy during a period of 60 days.

The Mediation Board makes an annual report to Congress of its activities and of the activities of each of the four divisions of the National Railroad Adjustment Board.

OFFICE OF THE BITUMINOUS COAL CONSUMERS' COUNSEL

The Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel is the statutory representative of the consuming public in proceedings before the Bituminous Coal Division of the Department of the Interior, under the Bituminous Coal Act of 1937, as amended (55 Stat. 134).

It is the duty of the Counsel to appear in proceedings before the Division. He may offer testimony and argument and examine and cross-examine witnesses and parties, and he has the right to subpoena. He may conduct such independent investigations of matters pertaining to the coal industry and the administration of the Act as he deems necessary properly to protect the interests of consumers. Whenever he finds it in the interests of the consuming public, the Counsel may require the Coal Division to furnish him with any information at its command, or conduct any investigation as to any matters within its authority. All data, reports, and other information in the possession of any agency of the United States, in relation to coal, are available to the Consumers' Counsel.

The Consumers' Counsel must be given notice of all complaints filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission involving the transportation of coal, and he is given authority to appear and be heard in any such proceedings, and to make complaints on his own initiative with respect to rates, charges, tariffs, and practices relating to the transportation of coal.

Prior to the establishment of the Office of the Bituminous Coal Consumers' Counsel as an independent agency in the Executive Branch of the Government, these functions were performed by the Consumers' Counsel Division, Office of the Solicitor, Department of the Interior, and before that, by the Office of the Consumers' Counsel of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

The Consumers' Counsel reports annually on the activities of his office directly to the Congress.

PAN AMERICAN SANITARY BUREAU

(Formerly International Sanitary Bureau)

The Pan American Sanitary Bureau is the central coordinating sanitary agency as well as the general collection and distribution center of sanitary information of the American Republics. It was created by the Second International Conference of American Republics (1901–2), organized by the First Pan American Sanitary Conference (1902), and reorganized by the Sixth Pan American Sanitary Conference (1920). Its functions and duties are fixed by the Pan American Sanitary Code (1924) and modified and amplified by the various international sanitary and other conferences of the American Republics. The Bureau is concerned in maintaining and improving the health of all the people of the 21 American Republics and in preventing the international spread of communicable diseases. It acts as a consulting office for the national directors of health of the American Republics, prepares the programs and publishes the proceedings of the Pan American Sanitary Conferences and the Conferences of the National Directors of Health, and carries out epidemiological and other scientific studies and investigations. It also grants and obtains fellowships both from its own funds and from funds obtained from other sources for Latin American graduates in medicine and allied sciences. It also publishes in four languages a monthly Pan American Sanitary Bulletin, weekly reports on disease prevalence, and a series of other publications on sanitary subjects. The Bureau is governed by a council elected at each Pan American Sanitary Conference. Its executive officer is a director, also chairman of the board, who is elected at the same conferences. The necessary personnel, including an assistant director, secretary, traveling representatives, epidemiologists, experts, translators, and clerks, is assigned or employed by the Director to attend to the various duties imposed on the Bureau by the Pan American Sanitary Code and the Pan American Sanitary Conferences. The Bureau is supported by a fund contributed by all the American Republics in proportion to their populations. Address all correspondence to the Director, Pan American Sanitary Bureau, Washington, D. C.

PAN AMERICAN UNION

(Formerly International Bureau of American Republics)

The Pan American Union is the official international organization of the 21 Republics of the Western Hemisphere. It was established with a view to developing closer cooperation between the nations of America, the fostering of inter-American commerce, the strengthening of intellectual and cultural ties, and the interchange of information on all problems affecting the welfare of the nations of this continent. It is supported through their joint contributions, each nation annually paying that part of the budget of expenses which its population bears to the total population of all the Republics. Its general control is vested in a governing board made up of the diplomatic representatives in Washington of all the Latin-American Governments and the Secretary of State of the United States. Its executive officers are a director general and an assistant director, elected by the board. They in turn are assisted by a trained staff of editors, statisticians, compilers, trade experts, translators, librarians, and clerks. It is strictly international in its scope, purpose, and control, and each nation has equal authority in its administration. Its activities and facilities include the following: Publication in English, Spanish, Portuguese, with separate editions, of an illustrated monthly bulletin, which is the record of the progress of all the Republics; publication of handbooks, descriptive pamphlets, commercial statements, maps, and special reports relating to each country; correspondence covering all phases of pan-American activities; distribution of every variety of information helpful in the promotion of pan-American commerce, acquaintance, cooperation, and solidarity of interests. It also sets the date and prepares the programs for the International Conferences of the American States, known as the Pan American Conferences, and is custodian of their archives. Its library, known as the Columbus Memorial Library, contains 115,000 volumes, including the official publications, documents, and laws of all the Republics, together with a large collection of maps. The Union also possesses a collection of more than 25,000 photographs, lantern slides, and negatives. Its reading room has upon its tables the representative magazines and newspapers of Latin America. Both are open to the public for consultation and study. It occupies and owns buildings and grounds facing Seventeenth Street, between Constitution Avenue and C Street, overlooking Potomac Park on the south and the White House Park on the east. These buildings and grounds, representing an outlay of $1,100,000, of which Mr. Andrew Carnegie contributed $850,000 and the American Republics $250,000, are dedicated forever to the use of the Pan American Union as an international organization. The Pan American Union was founded in 1890, under the name of the International Bureau of American Republics, in accordance with the action of the First Pan American Conference, held in Washington in 1889–90 and presided over by James G. Blaine, then Secretary of State. It was reorganized in 1907 by action of the Third Pan American Conference, held in Rio de Janeiro in 1906, and upon the initiative of Elihu Root, then Secretary of State. At the fourth conference, held at Buenos Aires in 1910, its name was changed from the International Bureau of American Republics to the Pan American Union. The fifth conference, held at Santiago, Chile, in 1923; the sixth conference, which met at Habana, Cuba, in 1928; the seventh conference, held at Montevideo, Uruguay, in 1933, and the eighth conference, held at Lima, Peru, in 1938, considerably enlarged the functions of the Pan American Union. All communications should be addressed to the Director General, Pan American Union, Washington, D. C.

PERMANENT JOINT BOARD ON DEFENSE

The Permanent Joint Board on Defense was set up by the United States and Canada for the purpose of undertaking studies relating to sea, land, and air problems, including personnel and matériel, in connection with the defense of the United States and Canada.

RAILROAD RETIREMENT BOARD, THE

Creation, authority, and purpose.—The Railroad Retirement Board was established by the Railroad Retirement Act of 1935 (49 Stat. 967), approved August 29, 1935, which, as amended by part I of the act of June 24, 1937 (50 Stat. 307), is cited as the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937. Additional responsibility is derived from the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act (52 Stat. 1094), approved June 25, 1938, as amended by the act approved June 20, 1939 (Public, No. 141, 76th Cong.) and by act approved October 10, 1940 (Public, No. 833, 76th Cong., 3d sess.), and from Public Resolution No. 102, Seventy-sixth Congress, Third Session. Under the authority of these acts, the Board administers two related social insurance systems—one for the payment of annuities to aged or disabled railroad employees or benefits with respect to their deaths in certain cases, and pensions to former railroad pensioners, and the other for the payment of unemployment insurance benefits to railroad employees who become unemployed. The retirement and unemployment insurance acts cover employees (other than those engaged in the physical operation of mining coal) of any carrier by railroad express company, or sleeping-car company, subject to part I of the Interstate Commerce Act (with the exception of certain electric lines), and companies owned or controlled by or under common control with one or more of them and performing any service (except casual, trucking, and mining coal) in connection with the transportation of passengers or property by railroad; employees of associations, bureaus, and agencies controlled and maintained by carrier or carrier subsidiary employers and engaged in the performance of services in connection with or incidental to transportation by railroad; and employees of railway labor organizations national in scope and organized in accordance with the Railway Labor Act, their State and national legislative committees, and their insurance departments. Employees of local lodges and divisions of railway labor organizations and employee representatives are under certain circumstances covered by the retirement acts but not by the Unemployment Insurance Act.

Organization.—The Board is composed of three members appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate—one upon recommendation of representatives of employees, one upon recommendation of representatives of carriers, and one, the chairman, without designated recommendations.

The Board is organized to integrate the duties imposed by the retirement and unemployment insurance acts. Directly responsible to the Board are the secretary, the Washington representative, the general counsel, the general auditor, and the director of research. The executive officer is directly responsible to the Board for the operations of the bureaus of administration, retirement claims, wage and service records and employment and claims. The liaison officer under the direction of the executive officer conducts liaison activities between the Board, employers, and employee organizations. The appeals council functions as an independent body responsible to the Board but is attached to the office of the executive officer for administrative purposes.

Claims for annuities and death benefits under the Railroad Retirement Act are adjudicated in the Bureau of Retirement Claims. Claims for benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act are adjudicated in the Bureau of Employment and Claims, although actual adjudication and certification for payment is performed in nine regional offices. An auxiliary administrative service is performed, under contract and for an agreed compensation, by covered employers who designate certain of their employees to receive unemployment insurance claims and registrations and forward them through a higher placed employee to the appropriate regional office of the Board. The Division of Employment Service operates an employment service for the railroad industry. Employment offices are part of the organization of each regional office and function in close coordination with the operations involving the receipt and processing of unemployment insurance claims.

RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACT OF 1937

Annuities.—To receive an annuity, an individual who is otherwise qualified must either (1) be 65 or more years of age or (2) have completed 30 years of creditable service and be totally and permanently disabled for regular employment for hire, or (3) be 60 years of age and either (a) have completed 30 years of creditable service or (b) if he has less than 30 years of creditable service, be totally and permanently disabled for regular employment for hire (under either (a) or (b), however, the monthly annuity is less than would be payable at age 65 by $1/180$ for each calendar month that the individual is under age 65 at the time his annuity begins to accrue). The amounts of the monthly annuities are computed by multiplying the number of "years of service" by the sum of the following percentages of the average monthly compensation: 2 percent of the first $50; 1½ percent of the next $100, and 1 percent of the next $150. In computing the average monthly compensation, no part of any month's compensation in excess of $300 is recognized. The average monthly compensation used for years of creditable service prior to 1937 is the average earned by an individual in the calendar months included in his years of service in the years 1924–31 (except when in the judgment of the Board the service during 1924–31 is insufficient to constitute a fair and equitable basis). All service subsequent to December 31, 1936, is included and if the total number of years of such service is less than 30, then, for individuals who were on August 29, 1935, in the active service of, or in an employment relation to, an employer under the act, or who were on that date employee representatives, the years of service prior to January 1, 1937, may be included but not so as to make the total years of service exceed 30. Under certain conditions, military service credit may be given in determining the years of service.

Provision is also made for minimum annuities to individuals who are employees under the act at age 65 and who have 20 years of service. The minimum annuity, based on average compensation of $50 or more, is $40 a month; if the monthly compensation is less than $50, the annuity is 80 percent of such compensation except that if such 80 percent is less than $20, the annuity is $20 or the same amount as the monthly compensation, whichever is less.

Annuities are payable on the first of each month for each preceding month, but an annuity does not accrue for the calendar month in which an annuitant dies.

Joint and survivor annuities.—Under certain prescribed conditions a joint and survivor annuity may be elected instead of a single-life annuity. A joint and survivor annuity involves a reduced annuity to the annuitant during life and, after the death of the annuitant, a survivor annuity to the surviving spouse during life. The amounts of the two annuities are such that their combined actuarial value is the same as the actuarial value of the single-life annuity that would otherwise be payable. An election of a joint and survivor annuity, once made, is irrevocable, except that it may become inoperative under certain circumstances, including the death of the employee or the spouse before the annuity begins to accrue. A survivor annuity accrues from the first day of the month in which the employee-annuitant dies.

Death benefits.—Provision is made for the payment of death benefits under certain conditions to designated survivors, or to the legal representatives of the deceased, with respect to the death of individuals who were employees after December 31, 1936. The amount payable as death benefit is an amount equal to 4 percent of the total compensation of the deceased earned as an employee (excluding earnings in excess of $300 in any one calendar month) after December 31, 1936, less the amount of annuities paid or accrued to the employee or to a surviving spouse, or to both. In determining the amount of the deceased's total compensation, provision has recently been made for giving $160 credit under certain conditions for each month the deceased was in military service after December 31, 1936.

Pensions.—Section 6 of the act provides that beginning July 1, 1937, each individual then on the pension or gratuity roll of an employer by reason of his employment, who was also on such roll on March 1, 1937, shall be paid on July 1, 1937, and on the first day of each calendar month thereafter, a pension at the same rate as the pension or gratuity granted to him by the employer without diminution by reason of any general reduction or readjustment made subsequent to December 31, 1930, but such pension shall not exceed $120 a month. Persons on such pension rolls who were, on July 1, 1937, eligible for annuities, were not entitled to receive pensions after the pension payments due on October 1, 1937, but may receive annuities upon filing applications.

Source of annuities, pensions, and death benefits.—The act created an account in the Treasury of the United States known as the Railroad Retirement Account and authorized the appropriation to the account in each fiscal year of an amount actuarially determined by the Board to be sufficient as a premium to provide for the payment of all annuities, pensions, and death benefits under the Railroad Retirement Acts of 1935 and 1937. That part of the premium which is not immediately required for the payment of annuities, pensions, and death benefits is invested in obligations of or guaranteed by the United States to bear interest at the rate of 3 percent per annum.

Subchapter B of chapter 9 of the Internal Revenue Code (53 Stat. 179) approved February 10, 1939 (formerly the Carriers Taxing Act of 1937; 50 Stat. 435), levies an income tax on the covered employees and an excise tax on the covered employers, with respect to so much of the compensation paid by employers to employees as is not in excess of $300 for any calendar month. The rate of tax on employees, as well as that on employers, started at 2¾ percent in 1937 and is to increase by ¼ percent every 3 years until it reaches the maximum of 3¾ percent, effective beginning in 1949. The taxes are collected by the Bureau of Internal Revenue and are paid into the Treasury of the United States as internal-revenue collections.

THE RAILROAD RETIREMENT ACT OF 1935

The claims of individuals (and the claims of spouses and next of kin of such individuals) who relinquished their rights to return to service and became eligible for annuities before the enactment of the Railroad Retirement Act of 1937 are adjudicated under the act of 1935; however, individuals who did not become eligible before June 24, 1937, for annuities under the act of 1935 (whether they relinquished rights before or after June 24, 1937), but who would have been eligible under the act of 1937 if that act had been in force from and after August 29, 1935, may receive annuities under the act of 1937, but their annuities may not begin before June 24, 1937. The death benefit under the 1935 act is a monthly payment for 12 months, each payment being equal to one-half the annuity which an individual was receiving or was entitled to receive at the time of his death. The benefit is payable to the widow or widower or, if there be neither, to the dependent next of kin; payments begin with the month in which death occurred.

RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT

Effective date.—The original act, as amended June 20, 1939, became effective on July 1, 1939, both with respect to the payment of benefits and the collection of contributions. The amendments to the act approved October 10, 1940, became effective, with minor exceptions, on November 1, 1940, and the following discussion covers the provisions of the act as thus amended.

Exclusive coverage.—The act makes exclusive provision for the payment of unemployment benefits based upon the employment covered by the act. However, the Board may enter into agreements with State agencies for the payment of benefits to individuals who perform services covered by either or both the railroad and the respective State acts.

Benefit basis.—Benefits within the uniform benefit year beginning July 1 of each year are payable on the basis of earnings (excluding that in excess of $300 in one month) in covered employment in the calendar year, termed the "base year," preceding the beginning of the benefit year. To be eligible for benefits in any benefit year, an individual must have earned at least $150 in covered employment in the corresponding base year. Benefits are payable with respect to days of unemployment in periods—termed registration periods—of 14 days, except that if an employee changes his place of registration, he begins a new registration period with the first day for which he registers at an employment office other than the one at which he last registered. Benefits are not payable in a benefit year until an individual has had a registration period of 7 or more days of unemployment. When he has such registration period, benefits are payable therefor for all days of unemployment in excess of 7, and, thereafter, benefits are payable for each day of unemployment in excess of 4 in any registration period beginning in the same benefit year. A day of unemployment is a day on which an individual is able to work and is available for work and with respect to which (1) he has earned no "remuneration" as defined in the Act, and (2) he has registered at an employment office as required by regulations prescribed by the Board.

Disqualifications.—Days of unemployment of any individual do not include any day in any period with respect to which period the Board finds that he is receiving or has received payments under the Railroad Retirement Acts, insurance benefits under title II of the Social Security Act, or payments for similar purposes under any other act of Congress, or unemployment benefits under an unemployment compensation law of any State or of the United States other than this act except that, if the payments, other than unemployment benefits, under such other acts are less than the payments which would otherwise be payable under this act, this restriction does not apply to the payment of the difference under this act. Individuals are disqualified for varying numbers of days for several reasons, including leaving work voluntarily without good cause, refusing to accept suitable work offered, failing without good cause to comply with directions of the Board to apply for suitable work or to report to an employment office, and knowingly making or aiding in making a fraudulent claim for benefits. Furthermore, with respect to any individual, days of unemployment do not include any Sunday or holiday or two or more such successive days unless such day is, or days are, immediately preceded and if the registration period does not end with such day or days, also followed by a day of unemployment.

Benefit scale.—The daily benefit rate is scaled from $1.75 to $4 according to the total amount of earnings in the base year. As benefits are payable for a maximum of 10 days in a registration period of 14 days, the maximum benefits for any such period vary from 10 times $1.75 to 10 times $4, or from $17.50 to $40, according to base-year earnings. The maximum amount of benefits payable in a benefit year is 100 times the daily benefit rate, or from $175 to $400.

Columns I and II of the following table show, respectively, the several compensation ranges in the base year and the resulting daily benefit rates, as set forth in the act. Columns III and IV show, respectively, the maximum benefits payable with respect to a registration period of 14 days and a benefit year.

Total compensation in base year	Daily benefit rate	Maximum benefits payable in a—
		Registration period of 14 days	Benefit year
I	II	III	IV
$150 to $199.99	$1.75	$17.50	$175.00
$200 to $474.99	2.00	20.00	200.00
$475 to $749.99	2.25	22.50	225.00
$750 to $999.99	2.50	25.00	250.00
$1,000 to $1,299.99	3.00	30.00	300.00
$1,300 to $1,599.99	3.50	35.00	350.00
$1,600 and over	4.00	40.00	400.00

Source of benefits and administrative expenses.—To support the unemployment-insurance system, the act levies on covered employers a contribution, which is collected by the Railroad Retirement Board, equal to 3 percent of the compensation, excluding any excess over $300 a month, payable to an employee. Of the proceeds, 90 percent is credited, for the payment of benefits, to a special account designated as the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Account, maintained in the Unemployment Trust Fund established by section 904 of the Social Security Act. The remaining 10 percent is deposited, to meet the expenses of administering the act, in a special fund designated as the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Administration Fund.

Under the act, transfers have been and are being made to the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Account from the State accounts maintained in the Unemployment Trust Fund of (a) a share of the balance in the State-pooled funds as of June 30, 1939, equal to the ratio of contributions from employers and employees covered by the act to total contributions collected and credited to such fund as of that date; (b) balances in reserve accounts of covered employers as of June 30, 1939; and (c) all contributions from covered employers and employees collected in the second half of 1939. Similarly, the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Administration Fund is credited with the amounts collected or collectible by the Treasury under title IX of the Social Security Act from covered employers with respect to the calendar years 1936, 1937, 1938, and the first half of 1939, less certain amounts. Also, there is transferred to the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Account so much of the balance of the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Administration Fund as of June 30 of each year as is in excess of $6,000,000.

SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION

Creation and authority.—The Securities and Exchange Commission was created under its organic act, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (Public, No. 291, 73d Cong.), approved June 6, 1934, for the purpose of administering that act and the Securities Act of 1933, which was previously administered by the Federal Trade Commission. The scope of the duties and powers of the Commission was enlarged through the passage of subsequent legislative enactments, namely, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 (Public, No. 333, 74th Cong.), approved August 26, 1935; chapter X of the bankruptcy act, as amended by the Chandler Act (Public, No. 696, 75th Cong.), approved June 22, 1938; the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 (Public, No. 253, 76th Cong.), approved August 3, 1939; the Investment Company Act of 1940 (title I, Public, No. 768, 76th Cong.), approved August 22, 1940; and the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (title II, Public, No. 768, 76th Cong.), approved August 22, 1940.

Functions of the Commission.—The functions of the Commission generally embrace the following five categories: Supervision of registration of security issues, qualification of trust indentures covering particular types of security issues, and suppression of fraudulent practices in the sale of securities under the Securities Act of 1933 and the Trust Indenture Act of 1939; supervision and regulation of transactions and trading in outstanding securities, both on the stock exchanges and the over-the-counter markets, as provided by the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; regulation of public utility holding companies as provided in the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935; preparation and submission to the courts of advisory reports on plans of reorganization, and participation as a party in corporate reorganizations under chapter X of the bankruptcy act, as amended; and the registration and regulation of investment companies and investment advisers under the Investment Company Act of 1940 and the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.

Objectives of the Securities Act of 1933.—The Securities Act of 1933 is designed to compel full and fair disclosure to investors of material facts regarding securities publicly offered and sold in interstate commerce or through the mails. Its provisions are also designed to prevent fraud in the sale of securities. Issuers of securities to be publicly offered and sold in interstate commerce are required to file registration statements with the Commission. These registration statements are required to contain specified information, including financial statements, certain exhibits, and the form of prospectus proposed to be used in selling the securities. These registration statements are available for public inspection.

Objectives of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.—The Securities Exchange Act of 1934 is designed to eliminate manipulation and other abuses in the securities markets; to make available currently to the investing public sufficient information regarding the affairs and financial condition of the corporations whose securities are traded in the securities markets to enable the investor to act intelligently in making or retaining his investments and in exercising his rights as a security holder; and to prevent the diversion into security transactions of a disproportionate amount of the Nation's credit resources.

Objectives of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935.—The Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 is designed to eliminate abuses and to provide a greater degree of protection for investors and consumers in the field of public utility holding company finance and operation. In addition to requiring full and fair disclosure of financial transactions, the act provides for Commission supervision of security transactions by holding companies and subsidiaries; supervision of acquisitions of securities, utility assets, and other interests by holding companies and their subsidiaries; and supervision of dividend payments, solicitation of proxies, intercompany loans, and the making of service, sales, and construction contracts. The act also calls for geographic integration of holding company systems and simplification of uneconomic holding company structures.

Objectives of the provisions of chapter X of the bankruptcy act, as amended, relating to the Securities and Exchange Commission.—Chapter X of the bankruptcy act, as amended, which chapter supersedes section 77B of that act, affords the appropriate machinery for the reorganization of corporations (other than railroads) in the Federal courts under the bankruptcy act. The Commission's duties under the chapter are, first, at the request or with the approval of the court, to act as a participant in proceedings thereunder in order to provide independent, expert assistance on matters arising in such proceedings. Second, the Commission is empowered to prepare, for the benefit of the courts and investors, advisory reports on plans of reorganization submitted in such proceedings.

Objectives of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939.—Briefly, the Trust Indenture Act of 1939, which adds a new title (title III) to the act of May 27, 1933, as amended (title I of which is the Securities Act of 1933), requires that bonds, notes, debentures, and similar securities publicly offered for sale, sold, or delivered after sale through the mails or in interstate commerce, except as specifically exempted by the act, be issued under an indenture which meets the requirements of the act and has been duly qualified with the Commission. The provisions of those two acts are so integrated that registration pursuant to the Securities Act of 1933 of such securities to be issued under a trust indenture shall not be permitted to become effective unless the indenture conforms to the specific statutory requirements expressed in the Trust Indenture Act of 1939. The indenture is automatically "qualified" when registration becomes effective as to the securities themselves.

Objectives of the Investment Company Act of 1940.—The Investment Company Act of 1940 provides for the registration and regulation of investment companies. Investment companies, unless exempted, or unless registered as provided in the act, are forbidden to conduct their activities through use of the mails or instrumentalities of interstate commerce. Registration of investment companies becomes effective upon the filing with the Commission of notifications of registration. Complete forms of registration statements are required to be filed by registered investment companies. These registration statements are required to contain certain specified information, which includes information with respect to the business affiliations and experience of the officers and directors of the companies. Annual and special reports are required to be filed for the purpose of keeping reasonably current the data contained in these registration statements. The act also contains certain prohibitions and regulatory provisions applicable to registered investment companies.

Objectives of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940.—The Investment Advisers Act of 1940 provides for the registration and regulation of investment advisers. Investment advisers, except as specifically exempted by the act, who make use of the mails or instrumentalities of interstate commerce in connection with the investment advisory business are required to register by filing with the Commission applications for registration containing certain specified information. The administrative machinery for registration under this act is similar to that provided in the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 for the registration of over-the-counter brokers and dealers.

Information available to the public.—Information contained in registration statements, prospectuses, applications, reports, and other public documents, filed pursuant to the provisions of the acts administered by the Commission, is available for inspection in the public reference room of the Philadelphia office of the Commission. Photocopies of such public information may be procured at nominal rates from the Philadelphia office only. Public reference rooms are also maintained in the New York and Chicago regional offices, where a great deal of information relating to securities registered on exchanges is available for examination by the public.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION, THE

The Smithsonian Institution was created by act of Congress in 1846, under the terms of the will of James Smithson, an Englishman, who in 1826 bequeathed his fortune to the United States to found, at Washington, under the name of the "Smithsonian Institution," an establishment for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." The Institution is legally an establishment, having as its members the President of the United States, the Vice President, the Chief Justice, and the President's Cabinet. It is governed by a Board of Regents, consisting of the Vice President, the Chief Justice, three Members of the United States Senate, three Members of the House of Representatives, and six citizens of the United States appointed by joint resolution of Congress. The Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution is its executive officer and the director of its activities.

The "increase of knowledge" the Institution accomplishes through researches in many branches of science and through scientific exploration in all parts of the world. Much of the research is now conducted in the laboratories and offices of the several bureaus listed below that originated from the early work of the Institution and are administered by it.

The "diffusion of knowledge" is carried on through several series of publications based on its researches and collections, through its museum and art gallery exhibits, and through an extensive correspondence.

Through the Hodgkins fund, the income of $100,000 of which is for the increase and diffusion of knowledge in regard to the nature and properties of atmospheric air in connection with the welfare of man, grants have been made, publications issued, and medals and prizes awarded.

The library of the Smithsonian Institution (of which the Smithsonian Deposit in the Library of Congress and the libraries of the United States National Museum and the Bureau of American Ethnology are the chief units) consists mainly of scientific publications, including especially the reports, proceedings, and transactions of the learned societies and institutions of the world, and numbers over 860,000 volumes, pamphlets, and charts.

UNITED STATES NATIONAL MUSEUM

The United States National Museum is the depository of the national collections. It is especially rich in the natural science of America, including zoology, entomology, botany, geology, paleontology, archaeology, ethnology, and physical anthropology, and has extensive series relating to the arts and industries, the fine arts, and history. The great study series in the various fields of natural science form the basis for fundamental researches in pure science upon which the structure of applied science is built. The collections in the field of history comprise art, antiquarian, military, naval, numismatic, and philatelic materials, and include many historic objects relating to the period of the World War. The arts and industries collections consist of objects relating to engineering, textiles, graphic arts, and medicine, and include raw materials, processes of manufacture, and finished products. The aircraft display includes, among others, historic airplanes of Langley, Wright, and Curtiss, Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," and Wiley Post's "Winnie Mae."

NATIONAL COLLECTION OF FINE ARTS

The National Collection of Fine Arts is the depository for those portions of the national collections now in the custody of the Smithsonian Institution, relating to the fine arts, including principally paintings and sculpture. It contains among other exhibits the George P. Marsh collection of etchings, engravings, and books on art; the Harriet Lane Johnston collection, including a number of portraits by British masters; the Ralph Cross Johnson collection of paintings by Italian, French, English, Flemish, and Dutch masters; the William T. Evans collection of paintings by contemporary American artists; and the gift of Mr. John Gellatly, of New York, made in June 1929, of his notable art collection, containing more than 150 pictures by eminent American and foreign artists, large collections of glass, jewels, oriental specimens, antique furniture, and other valuable and interesting material. By the terms of the gift, the collection was brought to Washington on April 30, 1933. A considerable addition was made by Mr. Gellatly in August 1930 to his original gift.

The Freer Gallery of Art is contained in a separate building provided by the late Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, especially designed and constructed to house the notable collection also presented by him. This comprises numerous paintings, etchings, etc., by Whistler, Tryon, Dewing, Thayer, and other American artists, and extensive examples of Japanese and Chinese art. This collection is to the art and archeology of the Far East what the Cairo Museum is to that of Egypt.

BUREAU OF AMERICAN ETHNOLOGY

The Bureau of American Ethnology is engaged in the collection and publication of information relating to the American Indians and the natives of Hawaii.

INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGE SERVICE

The International Exchange Service is the agency of the United States Government for the exchange of scientific, literary, and governmental publications with foreign governments, institutions, and investigators. It receives and dispatches about 700,000 pounds of printed matter annually.

NATIONAL ZOOLOGICAL PARK

The National Zoological Park has an area of 175 acres, and is located in the Rock Creek Valley, 2 miles north of the center of Washington. Its collection comprises about 3,000 animals.

ASTROPHYSICAL OBSERVATORY

The Division of Astrophysical Research investigates solar radiation and other solar phenomena. The work of this observatory is carried on partly in Washington, D. C., and partly at stations on Mount Wilson and Table Mountain, in California; Mount Montezuma, near Calama, Chile; and Burro Mountain near Tyrone, N. Mex.

The Division of Radiation and Organisms was established during the year 1929 for the purpose of making scientific investigations relating to the effect of radiation on the growth and life of plants and animals.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

[Under the direction of the Board of Trustees of the National Gallery]

The National Gallery of Art, a bureau of the Smithsonian Institution, was established by joint resolution of Congress approved March 24, 1937, as a result of Andrew W. Mellon's gift to the Nation of his art collection and a monumental gallery building. The above act accepting Mr. Mellon's gift provided that the art collections already in possession of the Smithsonian Institution and theretofore designated the National Gallery of Art should thereafter be known as the National Collection of Fine Arts.

The National Gallery of Art is administered for the Smithsonian Institution, in which title is vested, by a board of nine trustees.

The Gallery building, designed by the late John Russell Pope, and completed under the direction of Otto R. Eggers and Daniel P. Higgins, was dedicated by the President of the United States on March 17, 1941. During its first year, it was visited by over 2,000,000 persons.

The building contains, in addition to the Mellon collection, the notable collection of Italian paintings and sculpture given to the Nation by Samuel H. Kress; also, the famous collection of paintings, sculpture, and decorative arts given by Joseph E. Widener in memory of his father, the late Peter A. B. Widener. Lessing J. Rosenwald has given to the Gallery his important collection of more than 6,000 prints, and additional prints have been given by Ellen T. Bullard, Elisabeth Achelis, Mr. and Mrs. J. Watson Webb, and four anonymous donors. Other gifts of paintings have been received from Duncan Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen, Mrs. Felix Warburg, Mrs. John W. Simpson, Mrs. Gordon Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Davison, Frederic A. Delano, Chester Dale, Mrs. Robert Noyes, and Clarence Van Dyke Tiers. Gifts of sculpture have been received from Mrs. Ralph Harman Booth, Mrs. Jesse Isidor Straus, and Mrs. John W. Simpson. In addition, important loans of paintings from the Harris Whittemore collection and the Chester Dale collection are on exhibition. On the ground floor frequent exhibitions are held in the central gallery, many of them centered on the war effort in this country.

TARIFF COMMISSION, UNITED STATES

The United States Tariff Commission is an independent establishment of the Government created by the provisions of title VII of the Revenue Act of September 8, 1916.

As originally created the Tariff Commission was intended to fill the long-felt need of an independent organization to supply factual information to the President, the Congress, and the Committees of Congress which handle tariff legislation. Particular tariff and related problems are from time to time assigned by Congress to the Commission for investigation, and special functions and duties of a continuing nature were added to the Commission's other functions and duties by the Tariff Acts of 1922 and 1930, and other acts. The experience and store of technical and economic information acquired by the Tariff Commission through the exercise of its various functions and duties have caused it to be called upon to assist in the war effort by supplying essential information and analysis. At present, the great bulk of the work of the Commission is directly related to the war; a large part of it is directly for war agencies.

MEMBERSHIP AND ORGANIZATION

The membership consists of six commissioners appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate. These appointments are for 6 years, one term expiring each year. No more than three members may be of one political party. The principal office is in Washington and an office is also maintained in the customhouse at the port of New York. The Commission has a seal which is judicially noticed. The staff consists of the secretary, who is appointed by the Commission, a planning and reviewing committee, economists, commodity and technical experts, accountants, and a clerical force.

GENERAL FUNCTIONS

General powers and duties (sec. 332).—The powers conferred upon the Commission under section 332 of the Tariff Act of 1930, and the duties imposed thereunder are as follows:

(1) To investigate the administration and fiscal and industrial effects of the customs laws of the United States and in general the operation of such laws, including their relation to the Federal revenues and the industries and labor of the country; the relations between rates of duty on raw materials and on finished or partly finished products; the effects of ad valorem and specific duties and of compound specific and ad valorem duties; and questions relating to the arrangement of the schedules of the tariff act and the classifications of the articles under the schedules.

(2) To investigate the tariff relations between the United States and foreign countries; commercial treaties; preferential provisions; economic alliances; the effect of export bounties and preferential transportation rates; and organizations and arrangements in Europe similar to the Paris Economy Pact.

(3) To investigate the volume of importations compared with domestic production and consumption and conditions, causes, and effects of competition between foreign industries and those of the United States including dumping and costs of production.

(4) To ascertain, whenever practicable, conversion costs and costs of production in the United States and in the principal producing centers of the United States; to ascertain similar costs in foreign countries for comparison with costs obtained in the United States whenever in the opinion of the Commission foreign costs are necessary and can be reasonably obtained; and to ascertain other data affecting competition between domestic and imported articles in the principal markets of the United States.

(5) To select and describe articles representative of the classes and the kinds of articles imported into the United States and similar or comparable articles of domestic production; to obtain samples of such articles when deemed advisable; to ascertain the import costs of such foreign articles and to ascertain the selling prices of such domestic articles in the principal growing, producing, or manufacturing centers of the United States.

SPECIAL FUNCTIONS

Sections 336, 337, and 338 of the tariff act approved June 17, 1930, contain special provisions for the modification of existing duties and for the imposition of special duties or orders of exclusion from entry by Presidential proclamation under specified conditions, within stated limitations, and in accordance with the legislative principles defined in those sections, all such Executive actions require previous investigation by the Tariff Commission.

Tariff adjustments (sec. 336).—Section 336 provides that the Commission, under such reasonable procedure, rules, and regulations as it may deem necessary, shall investigate the differences in the cost of production of any domestic article and of any like or similar foreign article in the principal competing country and shall report to the President the results of such investigation and its findings with respect to such differences. If the Commission finds that the duties fixed by the statute do not equalize the differences in costs as ascertained by its investigation, it shall specify in its report such increase or decrease, not exceeding 50 percent, of the statutory rate (including any necessary change in classification) as the investigation may show to be necessary to equalize such differences. If the Commission shall find, however, that a 50-percent increase in an ad valorem rate of duty will not equalize the ascertained differences, it shall so state in its report to the President and shall specify therein such ad valorem rate based upon the American selling price, as elsewhere defined in the act, of the domestic article as the investigation may show to be necessary to equalize such difference; no such rate, however, may exceed the statutory rate nor may any such rate be decreased by more than 50 percent. Any specified increase or decrease of a rate or change in valuation so reported by the Commission, if approved and proclaimed by the President, shall take effect commencing 30 days after such proclamation. The section prescribes the elements to be taken into consideration in ascertaining such differences in costs of production; prohibits the transfer of an article from the dutiable list to the free list or from the free list to the dutiable list; and provides for the modification or termination of any increase or decrease so proclaimed.

The Commission is required to hold hearings in the course of its investigations under section 336, to give reasonable public notice thereof and to afford reasonable opportunity for parties interested to be present, to produce evidence, and to be heard at such hearings.

Unfair practices in import trade (sec. 337).—The Commission is authorized under section 337 to investigate unfair methods of competition and unfair acts in the importation of articles into the United States, or in their sale after importation. When the findings and recommendations of the Commission, upon its investigation, justify the President in doing so, he is authorized to exclude such articles from entry into the United States, the exclusion to remain in effect until otherwise ordered by the President. The testimony in every investigation under the provisions of this section is required to be reduced to writing, and with the findings of the Commission constitutes the official record in each case. A copy of the findings is required to be sent to the importer or consignee of the articles affected thereby and shall be conclusive, subject only to rehearing by consent of the Commission or to appeal on questions of law only to the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, whose judgment shall be final.

Discrimination against United States trade (sec. 338).—Under the provisions of section 338 the Commission is required to ascertain and at all times to be informed whether any foreign country discriminates against the commerce of the United States, in any one of several ways specified in the section. The Commission is required to report to the President with its recommendations any such discriminations which it may find to exist, and the President is authorized to specify and declare upon articles wholly or in part the growth or product of any such discriminating country such new and additional duties as will offset such burdens, or he may exclude from importation articles from such country. Such new or additional duties, may, however, not exceed 50 percent ad valorem.

The Trade Agreements Act.—Section 350 of the Tariff Act of 1930, as amended June 12, 1934, assigned new work to the Tariff Commission by naming it a source of information and advice for the President in conducting reciprocal trade negotiations. The special function of the Commission with respect to such negotiations is to supply facts regarding possible concessions by the United States. In cooperation with the Department of State and other agencies of the Government, it also analyzes data on all commodities under consideration, and appraises the effect of import quotas, exchange controls, preferential tariffs, and other trade restrictions of foreign countries as they relate to these negotiations. In practice, the Commission has found that its regular organization for the collection of tariff information can be utilized for the numerous phases of trade-agreement work.

The Commission is represented on various interdepartmental committees concerned with the reciprocal trade agreements program.

Import control section of Agricultural Adjustment Act.—Section 22 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1933, as amended (49 Stat. 773, sec. 31; 49 Stat. 1152, sec. 5; 50 Stat. 246, sec. 1; 54 Stat. 17), authorizes the President to direct the Tariff Commission to make an investigation when he has reason to believe that articles are being imported into the United States under such conditions and in sufficient quantities to render ineffective, or to interfere materially with, a program of benefits to agriculture under several laws and he has authority on the basis of its report to limit the imports of the article if found necessary by imposing either quantitative limitations or import fees.

Cooperation with other agencies (sec. 334).—Section 334 provides that the Commission shall in appropriate matters act in conjunction and cooperation with the Treasury Department, the Department of Commerce, the Federal Trade Commission, or any other departments, or independent establishments of the Government. Cooperation with other Government departments has always been an important part of the Commission's work. At present the work consists principally of information supplied at the request of the war agencies. Extensive studies involving technical and economic research are under way for the Board of Economic Warfare; numerous cost studies are being conducted for the Office of Price Administration; and requests from other war agencies are being handled. Because of its long experience with the trade in commodities now of strategic and critical importance and the experienced personnel on its staff, the Tariff Commission is particularly well qualified to contribute to the war effort.

TAX COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, THE

The Tax Court of the United States (see sec. 504 R. A. 1942, Public, No. 753, 77th Cong., 2d sess.) was formerly the United States Board of Tax Appeals. The latter was created by the Revenue Act of 1924 (Public, No. 176, 68th Cong., June 2, 1924), and continued by the Revenue Act of 1926 (Public, No. 20, 69th Cong., Feb. 26, 1926) and chapter 5, Internal Revenue Code.

The principal office of the Court is at Washington, D. C.

Its function is to determine, after hearing, whether there is a deficiency or an overpayment, where deficiencies have been determined by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in income, profits, estate, gift, and unjust enrichment taxes, and personal holding company surtaxes; to adjudicate controversies relating to excess profits on Navy contracts and Army aircraft contracts and to review the action of the Commissioner in deficiency and refund cases founded on claims of abnormalities under excess profits tax and processing tax statutes. Effective as of the close of business on December 31, 1942, the United States Processing Tax Board of Review was abolished, and the jurisdiction vested in said Board transferred to and vested in the Tax Court of the United States. Proceedings are public and are conducted judicially, in accordance with its rules of practice and the rules of evidence applicable in the courts of equity of the District of Columbia. A fee of $10 is prescribed for the filing of a petition. Hearings are held for the convenience of taxpayers at about 50 different cities in the United States. Practice is limited to those enrolled under the rules.

The Court's published reports are printed and bound by the Government Printing Office and are available, separately or in bound volumes, as public documents, at listed prices.

Decisions are subject to review by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals of the prescribed circuit, or, by agreement, by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, and thereafter by the Supreme Court of the United States upon certiorari.

The Court is composed of 16 judges, each of whom comprises a division to hear and decide cases. Division decisions become decisions of the Court unless the presiding judge, within 30 days of their receipt, directs review by the Court. The presiding judge is designated by election of the judges, who are appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, for 12 years, in groups of four. They are removable by the President, after public hearing, for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office, but for no other cause.

VETERANS' ADMINISTRATION

The Veterans' Administration was authorized to be established as an independent agency under the direction of the President, by Public, No. 536, Seventy-first Congress, approved July 3, 1930, which further authorized the President by Executive order to consolidate and coordinate under a single control all Government agencies having to do with the administration of laws relating to the relief of and other benefits provided by law for former members of the military and naval forces. By Executive order of July 21, 1930, there was established the Veterans' Administration and consolidated therein the Bureau of Pensions (previously under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior), the United States Veterans' Bureau, and the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, the latter now known as the National Homes Service.

The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is charged with the control, direction, and management of all agencies and activities comprising the Veterans' Administration, and all final decisions or orders of any agency of the Veterans' Administration are, on appeal, subject to review by him. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is also chairman of the Federal Board of Hospitalization, which board is advisory to the President in all matters having to do with the need for, the location of, and expenditures on account of, increased Government hospital and domiciliary facilities.

The Veterans' Administration is responsible for extending relief to veterans and dependents of deceased veterans of all wars, and persons and dependents of deceased persons who served in the Military and Naval Establishments of the United States during other than a period of war, provided for by the various acts of Congress. These laws include, in addition to pensions, benefits in the form of Government insurance, hospital and domiciliary care, and vocational rehabilitation.

Regional offices, or combined regional offices and hospitals and/or homes, are located in each State, with the exception of Delaware, to facilitate the granting of benefits. The Veterans' Administration maintains and operates 93 facilities providing hospitalization or domiciliary care.

HOUSE PRESS GALLERY

William J. Donaldson, Jr., superintendent, 3730 Brandywine Street.

Chester R. Thrift, 1218 Thirty-third Street, and Anthony P. Demma, 5037 Kansas Avenue, assistant superintendents.

SENATE PRESS GALLERY

Harold R. Beckley, superintendent, 7 Normandy Drive, Silver Spring, Md.

Joseph E. Wills, 1714 North Troy Street, Arlington, Va., and Howard C. Dawes, 23 Fifth Street SE., assistant superintendents.

RULES GOVERNING PRESS GALLERIES

1. Persons desiring admission to the Press Galleries of Congress shall make application to the Speaker, as required by rule XXXV of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Rules of the Senate, as required by rule IV for the regulation of the Senate Wing of the Capitol; and shall state in writing the names of all newspapers or publications or news associations by which they are employed, and what other occupation or employment they may have, if any; and they shall further declare that they are not engaged in the prosecution of claims pending before Congress or the departments, and will not become so engaged while allowed admission to the galleries; that they are not employed in any legislative or executive department of the Government, or by any foreign Government or any representative thereof; and that they are not employed, directly or indirectly, by any stock exchange, board of trade, or other organization, or member thereof, or brokerage house, or broker, engaged in the buying and selling of any security or commodity or by any person or corporation having legislation before Congress, and will not become so engaged while retaining membership in the galleries. Holders of visitor's cards who may be allowed temporary admission to the galleries must conform to the restrictions of this rule.

2. The applications required by the above rule shall be authenticated in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the standing committee of correspondents who shall see that the occupation of the galleries is confined to bona fide correspondents of reputable standing in their business, who represent daily newspapers or newspaper associations requiring telegraphic service; and it shall be the duty of the standing committee at their discretion, to report violation of the privileges of the galleries to the Speaker, or to the Senate Committee on Rules, and pending action thereon the offending correspondent may be suspended.

3. Persons engaged in other occupations whose chief attention is not given to newspaper correspondence or to newspaper associations requiring telegraphic service shall not be entitled to admission to the Press Galleries; and the Press List in the CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY shall be a list only of persons whose chief attention is given to telegraphic correspondence for daily newspapers or newspaper associations requiring telegraphic service.

4. Members of the families of correspondents are not entitled to the privileges of the galleries.

5. The Press Galleries shall be under the control of the standing committee of correspondents, subject to the approval and supervision of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Senate Committee on Rules.

Approved.

SAM RAYBURN,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Approved by the Committee on Rules of the Senate.

RULES GOVERNING RADIO CORRESPONDENTS' GALLERIES

1. Persons desiring admission to the Radio Galleries of Congress shall make application to the Speaker, as required by rule XXXV of the House of Representatives, as amended, and to the Committee on Rules of the Senate, as required by rule IV, as amended, for the regulation of the Senate wing of the Capitol. Applicants shall state in writing the names of all radio stations, systems, or news-gathering organizations by which they are employed and what other occupation or employment they may have, if any. Applicants shall further declare that they are not engaged in the prosecution of claims or the promotion of legislation pending before Congress, the Departments, or the independent agencies, and that they will not become so employed without resigning from the galleries. They shall further declare that they are not employed in any legislative or executive department or independent agency of the Government, or by any foreign government or representative thereof; that they are not engaged in any lobbying activities; that they do not and will not, directly or indirectly, furnish special information to any organization, individual, or group of individuals for the influencing of prices on any commodity or stock exchange; that they will not do so during the time they retain membership in the galleries. Holders of visitors' cards who may be allowed temporary admission to the galleries must conform to all the restrictions of this paragraph.

2. It shall be prerequisite to membership that the radio station, system, or news-gathering agency which the applicant represents shall certify in writing to the Radio Correspondents' Association that the applicant conforms to the regulations of paragraph 1.

3. The applications required by paragraph 1 shall be authenticated in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the executive committee of the Radio Correspondents' Association, who shall see that the occupation of the galleries is confined to bona fide news gatherers and/or reporters of reputable standing in their business who represent radio stations, systems, or news-gathering agencies engaged primarily in serving radio stations or systems. It shall be the duty of the executive committee of the Radio Correspondents' Association to report, at their discretion, violation of the privileges of the galleries to the Speaker or to the Senate Committee on Rules, and, pending action thereon, the offending individual may be suspended.

4. Persons engaged in other occupations, whose chief attention is not given to the gathering or reporting of news for radio stations, systems, or news-gathering agencies primarily serving radio stations or systems, shall not be entitled to admission to the Radio Gallery. The Radio Correspondents' List in the CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY shall be a list only of persons whose chief attention is given to the gathering and reporting of news for radio stations and systems engaged in the daily dissemination of news, and of representatives of news-gathering agencies engaged in the daily service of news to such radio stations or systems.

5. Members of the families of correspondents are not entitled to the privileges of the galleries.

6. The Radio Galleries shall be under the control of the executive committee of the Radio Correspondents' Association, subject to the approval and supervision of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Senate Committee on Rules.

Approved.

RULES GOVERNING PERIODICAL PRESS GALLERIES

1. Persons desiring admission to the Periodical Press Galleries of Congress shall make application to the Speaker, as required by rule XXXV of the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Rules of the Senate, as required by rule IV for the regulation of the Senate wing of the Capitol; and shall state in writing the names of all newspapers or publications or news associations by which they are employed, and what other occupation or employment they may have, if any; and they shall further declare that they are not engaged in the prosecution of claims pending before Congress or the departments, and will not become so engaged while allowed admission to the galleries; that they are not employed in any legislative or executive department of the Government, or by any foreign government or any representative thereof; and that they are not employed, directly or indirectly, by any stock exchange, board of trade, or other organization, or member thereof, or brokerage house, or broker, engaged in the buying and selling of any security or commodity, or by any person or corporation having legislation before Congress, and will not become so engaged while retaining membership in the galleries. Holders of visitor's cards who may be allowed temporary admission to the galleries must conform to the restrictions of this rule.

2. The applications required by rule 1 shall be authenticated in a manner that shall be satisfactory to the executive committee of the Periodical Correspondents' Association who shall see that the occupation of the galleries is confined to bona fide and accredited resident correspondents, news gatherers, or reporters of reputable standing who represent one or more periodicals which regularly publish a substantial volume of news material of either general or of an economic, industrial, technical, or trade character, published for profit and supported chiefly by advertising, and owned and operated independently of any industry, business, association, or institution; and it shall be the duty of the executive committee at their discretion to report violation of the privileges of the galleries to the Speaker, or to the Senate Committee on Rules, and pending action thereon the offending correspondent may be suspended.

3. Persons engaged in other occupations whose chief attention is not given to the gathering or reporting of news for periodicals requiring such continuous service shall not be entitled to admission to the Periodical Press Galleries. The Periodical Correspondents' list in the CONGRESSIONAL DIRECTORY shall be a list only of persons whose chief attention is given to such service for news periodicals as described in rule 2, except that admission shall not be denied if his other work is such as to make him eligible to the Press Galleries or Radio Correspondents' Galleries.

4. Members of the families of correspondents are not entitled to the privileges of the galleries.

5. The Periodical Press Galleries shall be under the control of an executive committee elected by members of the Periodical Correspondents' Association, subject to the approval and supervision of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Senate Committee on Rules.

SAM RAYBURN,
Speaker, House of Representatives.
HARRY F. BYRD,
Chairman, Senate Committee on Rules.
