3 SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

4 Congress finds that Jessie Benton Frémont—

6 Thomas Hart Benton of Missouri, a leading pro-
7 ponent of the concept of Manifest Destiny that advo-
8 cated for the Nation to expand its borders westward;

9 (2) became fluent in French and Spanish, was 10 a gifted writer, and was at ease in any political dis-
11 cussion;

12 (3) married John C. Frémont, who was as-
13 signed to explore the West;

14 (4) transformed John C. Frémont’s descriptions
15 from his treks into prose that was used by pioneers
16 to guide their route West;

17 (5) traveled to California in 1849 to join her 18 husband at their Mariposa ranch, where gold had 19 been discovered;

20 (6) became involved in John C. Frémont’s 1856
21 campaign for Presidency, which proposed the aboli-
22 tion of slavery, a notion that Jessie Benton Frémont
23 also supported;

24 (7) moved to Bear Valley, California, with her
25 husband John C. Frémont in 1858 and thereafter

1 realized the need to preserve the land that would be-
2 come Yosemite National Park for future generations;

3 (8) entertained men such as Horace Greeley,
4 Thomas Starr King, and United States Senator Ed-
5 ward Baker of Oregon, and urged them to begin a 6 process that ultimately led to the establishment of 7 Yosemite National Park;

8 (9) influenced President Abraham Lincoln to 9 sign the Act entitled “An Act authorizing a Grant
10 to the State of California of the ‘Yo-Semite Valley’
11 and of the Land embracing the ‘Mariposa Big Tree
12 Grove’”, approved June 30, 1864 (commonly known
13 as the Yosemite Grant), the first instance of land 14 being set aside specifically for its preservation and 15 public use by a national government; and

16 (10) set the foundation for the creation of na-
17 tional parks and California State parks through her
18 advocacy for and influence on the Yosemite Grant.
