LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the Extradition Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kosovo (the “Treaty”), signed at Pristina on March 29, 2016. I also transmit, for the information of the Senate, the report of the Department of State with respect to the Treaty.

The Treaty would replace the Treaty between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Servia for the Mutual Extradition of Fugitives from Justice, signed October 25, 1901 (the “1901 Treaty”), which applies to the Republic of Kosovo as a successor state to the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The Treaty follows generally the form and content of other extradition treaties recently concluded by the United States. It would replace an outmoded list of extraditable offenses with a modern “dual criminality” approach, which would enable extradition for such offenses as money laundering, cyber-related crimes, and other newer offenses not appearing on the 1901 Treaty list. The Treaty also provides that extradition shall not be refused based on the nationality of the person sought and contains a modernized “political offense” clause. Finally, the Treaty incorporates a series of procedural improvements to streamline and expedite the extradition process.

I recommend that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to the Treaty, and give its advice and consent to ratification.

BARACK OBAMA.
LETTER OF SUBMITTAL

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

The PRESIDENT,
The White House.

THE PRESIDENT: I have the honor to submit to you the Extradition Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kosovo, signed at Pristina on March 29, 2016 (the “Treaty”). Upon its entry into force, the Treaty would replace the Treaty between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Servia for the Mutual Extradition of Fugitives from Justice, signed October 25, 1901 (“the 1901 Treaty”), which applies to the Republic of Kosovo as a successor state to the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. I recommend that the Treaty be transmitted to the Senate for its advice and consent to ratification.

The Treaty follows generally the form and content of other extradition treaties recently concluded by the United States. It is an important part of a concerted effort by the Department of State and the Department of Justice to modernize the legal tools available for the extradition of serious offenders. The Treaty is self-executing and will not require implementing legislation.

An overview of the Treaty, including a detailed article-by-article analysis, is enclosed with this report. The Department of Justice joins the Department of State in favoring approval of the Treaty by the Senate at the earliest possible date.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN F. KERRY.

Enclosures: As stated.
Extradition Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kosovo

Overview

Introduction

The Extradition Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kosovo (the "Treaty") replaces the extradition treaty currently in force between the two countries, which was concluded in 1901 by the United States of America and the Kingdom of Servia and applies to the Republic of Kosovo as a successor state to the former Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (the "1901 Treaty").

Article-by-Article Analysis

The following is an article-by-article description of the provisions of the Treaty:

Article 1 obligates each State to extradite to the other State persons sought by the Requesting State for prosecution or for imposition or service of a sentence for an extraditable offense. Article 1(2) establishes that extradition shall not be refused based on the nationality of the person sought.

Article 2 defines extraditable offenses. Under Article 2(1), an offense is extraditable if it is punishable under the laws of both States by deprivation of liberty for a period of more than one year or by a more severe penalty. This formulation is consistent with the modern "dual criminality" approach. The new Treaty eliminates the requirement of the 1901 Treaty that the offense be among those listed in the Treaty. The dual criminality formulation also obviates the need to renegotiate or supplement the Treaty as additional offenses become punishable under the laws of both States. It ensures comprehensive coverage of criminal conduct for which extradition may be sought.

Article 2(2) is designed to include within the realm of extraditable offenses an attempt or conspiracy to commit, or participation in the commission of, offenses described in Article 2(1). By using the broad term "participation," the Treaty covers such offenses as aiding, abetting, counseling, or procuring the commission of an offense, as well as being an accessory to an offense, at whatever stage of development of the criminal conduct and regardless of the alleged offender's degree of involvement.

Additionally, Article 2(3) identifies a number of situations in which an offense will be extraditable despite potential differences in the criminal laws of both States. For instance, an offense shall be extraditable whether or not the laws of the Requesting and Requested States place the acts constituting the offense within the same category of offenses or describe the offense by the same terminology. This provision also makes explicit that an offense is extraditable even where the evidence provided does not support the existence of certain facts that are merely necessary to establish U.S. federal jurisdiction, such as evidence of interstate transportation or use of the mails or of other facilities affecting interstate or foreign commerce. This clarifies an important issue for the United States in requesting extradition for certain federal crimes. In addition, an offense involving tax fraud or tax evasion, customs duties, or import/export controls shall be extraditable regardless of whether the Requested State provides for the same sort of taxes, duties, or controls.

Article 2(4) addresses issues of territorial jurisdiction. It specifies that where the Requesting State seeks extradition for an offense that occurred outside its territory, the Requested State shall grant extradition if the laws of the Requested State would provide for punishment of the extraterritorial offense in similar circumstances. If the Requested State’s laws would not provide for punishment of the extraterritorial offense in similar circumstances, the Requested State nonetheless retains discretion to grant extradition provided the other requirements of the Treaty are met.

Article 2(5) prohibits the Requested State from refusing extradition for the sole reason that the offense was committed on its own territory. The U.S. negotiating team proposed this provision in order to satisfy a provision of Kosovo’s domestic law that permits extradition for offenses committed on Kosovo’s territory only when expressly required by an extradition treaty or other binding international agreement. Kosovo has previously refused to grant extradition to the United States on this basis under the existing treaty.

Article 2(6) prescribes that if extradition is granted for an extraditable offense, it shall also be granted for any other offense specified in the request even if the latter offense is punishable by a maximum of one year’s deprivation of liberty or less, provided that all other requirements for extradition are met.

Article 2(7) provides that where the extradition request is for service of a sentence of imprisonment for an extraditable offense, the Requested State may only grant extradition if at least four months imprisonment remains to be served.

Article 3 establishes an exception for political and military offenses. Article 3(1) states generally that extradition shall not be granted if the offense for which extradition is requested is a political offense.

Article 3(2), however, describes five categories of offenses that shall not be considered political offenses. A near identical list of these limitations was included in the extradition treaties between the United States and Chile (signed 2013) and the United States and the Dominican Republic (signed 2015). The list of limitations in each of these most recent treaties is slightly broader than similar lists that appear in other modern treaties, including those with Hungary (signed 1994), Poland (signed 1997), the United Kingdom (signed 2003), Bulgaria (signed 2007) and Romania (signed 2007). In addition to offenses that involve the possession, placement, use or threatened use of an explosive, incendiary, or destructive device when such device is capable of endangering life or causing substantial bodily harm or substantial property damage, Article 3(2)(d) now also establishes that political offenses cannot include offenses involving similarly serious biological, chemical or radiological agents. Further, Article 3(2)(e) makes clear that conspiracy or attempt to commit non-political offenses, or aiding or abetting another person who commits or attempts to commit such offenses, also shall not be considered political offenses. This slight narrowing of extraditable offenses to exclude political offenses aligns with a major priority of the United States to ensure that an overbroad definition of “political offense” does not impede the extradition of terrorists.

Notwithstanding Article 3(2), Article 3(3) provides that extradition shall not be granted if the competent authority of the Requested State determines that the request was politically motivated.

Under Article 3(4), the executive authority of the Requested State may refuse extradition for offenses under military law that are not offenses under ordinary criminal law. Desertion would be an example of such an offense.

Article 4(1) prohibits extradition in instances where a person sought has been previously convicted or acquitted by the Requested State for the offense for which extradition is requested. Under Article 4(2), however, a person shall not be considered to have been convicted or acquitted in the Requested State when the authorities of the Requested State: (a) have decided not to proceed against the person sought for the acts for which extradition is requested; (b) have decided to discontinue any criminal proceedings against the person for those acts; or (c) are still investigating or proceeding against the person sought for those acts.

Article 4(3) applies to circumstances where the Requested State has not convicted or acquitted the person sought, but has an international agreement with a third state for reciprocal recognition and enforcement of criminal judgments. In such cases, the Requested State may deny an extradition request if the person sought has been convicted or acquitted in that third state for the same crime for which extradition was requested.

Article 5 provides that only the laws of the Requesting State regarding lapse of time shall be considered for purposes of deciding whether or not to grant extradition. In this regard, the Requested State is bound by the statement of the Requesting State that the statute of limitations has not expired.

Article 6 addresses punishment. When an offense for which extradition is sought is punishable by death under the laws of the Requesting State but not under the laws of the Requested State, the Requested State may refuse extradition unless the Requesting State provides assurances that: (a) the death penalty shall not be imposed on the person sought, or (b) the death penalty, if imposed, shall not be carried out against the person sought. If either condition is satisfied, the Requested State must comply with the extradition request, and the Requesting State must abide by its assurances.

Article 7 specifies the procedures and documents required to support a request for extradition. Article 7(1) requires all extradition requests to be submitted through the diplomatic channel. Among several other requirements, Article 7(3)(c) establishes that extradition requests must be supported by such information as would provide a reasonable basis to believe that the person sought committed the offense(s) for which extradition is requested. Notably, this language is understood as equivalent to the probable cause standard applied in U.S. criminal law and applied by U.S. courts in determining whether to certify to the Secretary of State that a fugitive’s extradition would be lawful under the applicable treaty and U.S. law. Article 7(6) permits the submission of additional information to enable the Requested State to decide on the extradition request. Article 7(7) deals with circumstances where the Requesting State is considering submitting particularly sensitive information to support its request for extradition. In such a case, if the Requesting State is not satisfied that the Requested State can adequately protect the sensitive information, the Requesting State must determine whether the sensitive information should be submitted nonetheless.

Article 8 sets out the procedures for the certification and admissibility of documents in extradition proceedings.

Article 9 requires all documents submitted by the Requesting State under the Treaty to be accompanied by an official translation into a language of the Requested State, unless otherwise agreed.

Article 10 provides that, in cases of urgency, the Requesting State may request the provisional arrest of fugitives and sets forth the procedures for making such a request pending presentation of the formal extradition request. Article 10(2) specifies the information that must accompany a provisional arrest request. Article 10(3) provides that the Requesting State shall be notified without delay of the date of a provisional arrest or the reasons why the Requested State cannot proceed with the request. Article 10(4) permits the release of the person provisionally arrested if the executive authority of the Requested State does not receive the formal extradition request and supporting documents within 60 days of the date on which the person was provisionally arrested. Article 10(5) specifies that for the purposes of applying the 60-day time limitation in Article 10(4), receipt of the formal extradition request and supporting documents by the embassy of the Requested State located in the Requesting State constitutes receipt by the executive authority of the Requested State. Article 10(6) makes clear that the release of a person pursuant to Article 10(4) does not prevent the person’s re-arrest and extradition if the Requested State receives the formal extradition request and supporting documents at a later date.

Article 11 requires the Requested State to promptly notify the Requesting State of its decision regarding an extradition request. If the Requested State denies extradition, Article 11(2) requires the Requested State to explain the reasons for denial. If the Requested State agrees to grant extradition, Article 11(3) requires the Requested and Requesting States to coordinate the date and place for surrendering the person sought. Article 11(4) provides that if the person to be surrendered is not removed from the territory of the Requested State within the time prescribed by the Requested State’s laws, the Requested State may discharge the person sought from custody and subsequently refuse extradition for the same offense.

Article 12 addresses deferred extradition proceedings as well as deferred and temporary surrender of the person sought. Under Article 12(1), if the person sought is being proceeded against in the Requested State, the Requested State may defer the extradition proceedings until its own proceedings have been concluded. Article 12(2) addresses circumstances where extradition proceedings have concluded and extradition has been authorized, but the person sought is being proceeded against or is serving a sentence in the Requested State. In such cases, the Requested State may either defer the surrender of the person sought or temporarily surrender the person to the Requesting State for the purpose of prosecution. Article 12(3) explains that if the Requested State elects to defer surrender, it may detain the person sought until surrender. Under Article 12(4), however, if the Requested State elects to temporarily surrender the person to the Requesting State, the Requesting State must detain the temporarily surrendered person during proceedings and return the person when proceedings conclude. The person’s return to the Requested State shall not require any further extradition request or proceedings. Moreover, upon return to the Requested State, the time a person served in the temporary custody of the Requesting State may be deducted from the remaining time to be served in the Requested State, according to the laws of the Requested State.

Pursuant to Article 13, if the Requested State receives extradition requests for the same person from the Requesting State and from any other State or States, either for the same offense or for different offenses, the executive authority of the Requested State shall determine to which State, if any, it will surrender that person. Article 13 requires the Requested State to consider a list of non-exclusive factors when making its decision.

Article 14 provides that, subject to certain conditions, the Requested State may seize and surrender to the Requesting State all items that are connected with the offense for which extradition is sought or that may be required as evidence in the Requesting State.

Article 15(1) sets forth the rule of specialty, which prohibits a person extradited under the Treaty from being detained, tried, or punished in the Requesting State, except where the detention, trial, or punishment: (a) is for an offense for which extradition was granted, or for a differently denominated offense carrying the same or lesser penalty that is based on the same facts as the offense for which extradition was granted, provided such offense is extraditable or is a lesser included offense; (b) is for an offense committed after that person’s extradition to the Requesting State; or (c) occurs with the consent of the competent authority of the Requested State. If the Requested State consents to the person’s detention, trial or punishment for a different offense, the Requested State may require the Requesting State to submit the documentation required under Article 7.

Similarly, Article 15(2) provides that a person extradited under the Treaty may not be the subject of onward extradition or surrender for any offense committed prior to extradition, unless the Requested State consents. This provision would preclude the Republic of Kosovo from transferring to a third State or an international tribunal a fugitive that the United States surrendered to the Republic of Kosovo, unless the United States consents. Article 15(3), however, permits the Requesting State to detain, try, punish, extradite, or surrender the same person if that person: (a) leaves and voluntarily returns to the Requesting State, or (b) chooses not to leave the Requesting State within 20 days of the day that person is free to leave. Article 15(4) provides that the rule of specialty provisions in this Article do not apply if the person sought waives extradition under Article 16(a).
Article 16 allows the Requested State to expedite the transfer of the person whose extradition is sought to the Requesting State. If the person waives extradition, a judicial officer may direct the person’s transfer to the Requesting State without further proceedings. If the person consents to extradition or to a simplified extradition proceeding, the Requested State may surrender the person as expeditiously as possible.

Article 17 allows either State to authorize transportation through its territory of a person being extradited or otherwise transferred to the other State by a third State or from the other State to a third State for the purposes of prosecution, imposition of a sentence, or service of a sentence. It also specifies the procedures for requesting such transit and makes clear that a person who is being transported pursuant to this Article shall be detained during the period of transit. Under Article 17(2), authorization is not required when the other State only uses air transportation and no landing is scheduled on the State’s territory. Should an unscheduled landing occur, however, the State may require submission of a formal transit request within 96 hours; during that time, the State must take all measures necessary to prevent the person being transferred from absconding.

Article 18 requires the Requested State to advise, assist, appear in court on behalf of, and represent the interests of, the Requesting State in any proceedings arising out of an extradition request. Additionally, the Requested State must bear all expenses incurred in that State in connection with the extradition proceedings, except for expenses related to translation of documents and transportation of the person surrendered.

Article 19 provides that the U.S. Department of Justice and the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Kosovo may consult with each other directly in connection with individual cases and in furtherance of efficient implementation of the Treaty.

Article 20 establishes that the Treaty applies to offenses committed both before and after the date it enters into force.

Article 21 notes that the Treaty is subject to ratification and shall enter into force upon the exchange of the instruments of ratification. Article 21(3) provides that, upon entry into force, the Treaty will supersede the 1901 Treaty with respect to all requests submitted on or after the date of ratification. With respect to all pending requests made under the 1901 Treaty, subparagraphs (3) and (4) provide that the Treaty shall supersede the 1901 Treaty, except that the provisions of the 1901 Treaty relating to required documents and the admissibility and translation of documents shall apply if the extradition request and supporting documents have already been submitted to the Requested State at the time the Treaty enters into force.

Under Article 22, either State may terminate the Treaty by giving written notice to the other State through the diplomatic channel. The termination shall be effective six months after the date of such notice.

The Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Kosovo (hereinafter referred to as "the Parties"),

Recalling the Treaty between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Serbia for the Mutual Extradition of Fugitives from Justice, signed at Belgrade on October 25, 1901,

Noting that the Parties currently apply the terms of that Treaty, and Desiring to provide for more effective cooperation between the Parties to combat crime, and, for that purpose, to conclude a new treaty for the extradition of offenders,

Have agreed as follows:
Article 1

Obligation to Extradite

1. Pursuant to the provisions of this Treaty, the Parties agree to extradite to each other persons sought by authorities in the Requesting State for prosecution or for imposition or service of a sentence for an extraditable offense.

2. The obligations in paragraph 1 shall apply regardless of nationality, including with respect to the extradition of nationals of the Requested State.

Article 2

Extraditable Offenses

1. An offense shall be an extraditable offense if it is punishable under the laws in both States by deprivation of liberty for a maximum period of more than one year or by a more severe penalty.

2. An attempt or a conspiracy to commit, or participation in the commission of any offense described in paragraph 1 of this Article, shall be extraditable pursuant to the provisions of this Treaty.

3. For the purposes of this Article, an offense shall be an extraditable offense:

   (a) whether or not the laws in the Requesting and Requested States place the acts or omissions constituting the offense within the same category of offenses or describe the offense by the same terminology;

   (b) whether or not the offense is one for which United States federal law requires the showing of certain matters merely for the purpose of establishing jurisdiction in a United States federal court, including but not limited to interstate transportation, or use of the mails or of other facilities affecting interstate or foreign commerce; or

   (c) in cases relating to offenses involving fraud or evasion of obligations with respect to taxes, customs duties, or controls on the import or export of commodities or currency, whether or not the laws of the Requesting and Requested States provide for the same sort of taxes or duties or for controls on the same sorts of commodities or on the same amounts of currency.

4. If the offense has been committed outside the territory of the Requesting State, extradition shall be granted if the laws in the Requested State provide for the punishment of an offense committed outside its territory in similar circumstances. If the laws in the Requested State do not provide for punishment of an offense committed outside of its territory in similar circumstances, the competent authority of the Requested State, which for the United States shall be the executive authority, may grant extradition in its discretion provided that all other requirements of this Treaty are met.

5. Requests for extradition shall not be refused solely on the ground that the location of the commission of the offense is in the Requested State.
6. If extradition has been granted for an offense specified in paragraphs 1 or 2, it shall also be granted for any other offense specified in the request even if the latter offense is punishable by a maximum of one year's deprivation of liberty or loss, provided that all other requirements for extradition are met.

7. When the request is for enforcement of the sentence of a person convicted of an extraditable offense, the deprivation of liberty remaining to be served must be at least four months.

Article 3

Political and Military Offenses

1. Extradition shall not be granted if the offense for which extradition is requested is a political offense.

2. For the purposes of this Treaty, the following offenses shall not be considered political offenses:

   (a) an offense for which both the Requesting and Requested States have the obligation pursuant to a bilateral international agreement to extradite the person sought or to submit the case to their competent authorities for the purpose of prosecution;

   (b) murder, manslaughter, malicious wounding, inflicting grievous bodily harm, assault with intent to cause serious physical injury, and serious sexual assault;

   (c) an offense involving kidnapping, abduction, or any form of unlawful detention, including the taking of a hostage;

   (d) an offense involving placing, using, threatening the use of, or possessing an explosive, incendiary, or destructive device, or a biological, chemical, or radiological agent, where such device or agent is capable of endangering life, causing substantial bodily harm, or causing substantial property damage; and

   (e) a conspiracy or attempt to commit any of the foregoing offenses, or aiding or abetting a person who commits or attempts to commit such offenses.

3. Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph 2 of this Article, extradition shall not be granted if the competent authority of the Requested State, which for the United States shall be the executive authority, determines that the request for extradition was politically motivated.

4. The competent authority of the Requested State, which for the United States shall be the executive authority, may refuse extradition for offenses under military law that are not offenses under ordinary criminal law.
Article 4

Prior Prosecution

1. Extradition shall be denied when the person sought has been convicted or acquitted in the Requested State for the offense for which extradition is requested.

2. For purposes of this Article, a person shall not be considered to have been convicted or acquitted where the competent authorities of the Requested State:
   (a) have decided not to prosecute the person sought for the acts for which extradition is requested;
   (b) have decided to discontinue any criminal proceedings which have been instituted against the person sought for those acts; or
   (c) are still investigating or otherwise proceeding against the person sought for the same acts for which extradition is sought.

3. When the Requested State has an agreement on recognition and enforcement of criminal judgments with a third state, extradition may be denied when the person sought has been convicted or acquitted in that third state for the offense for which the extradition was requested.

Article 5

Lapse of Time

The decision by the Requested State whether to grant a request for extradition shall be made with regard only to the law of the Requesting State concerning lapse of time and not to the Requested State’s law concerning lapse of time. A statement by the Requesting State on its law concerning lapse of time shall be given conclusive effect by the Requested State.

Article 6

Punishment

When the offense for which extradition is sought is punishable by death under the laws in the Requesting State and not punishable by death under the laws in the Requested State, the Requested State may refuse extradition unless the Requesting State provides the Requested State with an assurance that the death penalty shall not be imposed on the person sought or, if for procedural reasons such an assurance cannot be provided by the Requesting State, with an assurance that the death penalty, if imposed, shall not be carried out. If the Requesting State provides an assurance pursuant to this Article, the Requested State shall grant the extradition, and the Requested State shall comply with the assurance.
Article 7
Extradition Procedures and Required Documents

1. All requests for extradition shall be submitted through the diplomatic channel.

2. All requests shall be supported by:
   (a) documents, statements, or other types of information that describe the identity, nationality, and probable location of the person sought;
   (b) information describing the facts of the offense and the procedural history of the case;
   (c) the text of the law or laws describing the offense or offenses for which extradition is requested and the applicable penalty or penalties;
   (d) a statement describing any time limit in the Requesting State on the prosecution or imposition or service of a sentence; and
   (e) the documents, statements, or other types of information specified in either paragraph 3 or paragraph 4 of this Article, as applicable.

3. In addition to the requirements in paragraph 2 of this Article, a request for extradition of a person who is sought for prosecution shall also be supported by:
   (a) a copy of the warrant or order of arrest or detention issued by a judge or other competent authority;
   (b) a copy of the charging document, if any; and
   (c) such information as would provide a reasonable basis to believe that the person sought committed the offense or offenses for which extradition is requested.

4. In addition to the requirements in paragraph 2 of this Article, a request for extradition relating to a person who is sought for imposition or service of a sentence shall also be supported by:
   (a) a copy of the judgment of conviction, or, if a copy is not available, a statement by a judicial or other competent authority that the person has been convicted or found guilty;
   (b) information establishing that the person sought is the person to whom the finding of guilt refers; and
   (c) if the person has been sentenced, a copy of the sentence imposed or, if a copy is not available, a statement by a judicial or other competent authority stating what sentence was imposed, as well as a statement establishing to what extent the sentence has been carried out.

5. If the person sought has been convicted or found guilty in absentia, the Requesting State shall submit the information required in paragraphs 2, 3(c), and 4 of this Article and a statement satisfactory to the competent authority of the Requested State, which for the United States shall be the executive authority, requesting the circumstances under which the person was absent from the proceedings and the procedures, if any, that would be available to the person sought to have a new trial or other judicial review of the proceedings if the person were extradited.

6. If the Requested State requires additional information to enable it to decide on the request for extradition, the Requesting State may provide such information within such reasonable length of time as specified by the Requested State. Such supplementary information may be requested and furnished directly between the United States Department of Justice and the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Kosovo.

7. When the Requesting State contemplates the submission of particularly sensitive information in support of its request for extradition, it may consult the Requested State to determine the extent to which the information can be protected by the Requested State. If the Requested State cannot protect the information in the manner sought by the Requesting State, the Requesting State shall determine whether the information shall nonetheless be submitted.

Article 8
Admissibility of Documents

1. The documents, statements, and other types of information that accompany an extradition request shall be received and admitted as evidence in extradition proceedings if they bear the certificate or seal of the ministry or department of justice or ministry or department responsible for foreign affairs of the Requesting State.

2. Documents certified or authenticated pursuant to paragraph 1 of this Article shall not require further certification, authentication, or other legalization.

Article 9
Translation

All documents submitted under this Treaty by the Requesting State shall be accompanied by a translation into a language of the Requested State, unless otherwise agreed.

Article 10
Provisional Arrest

1. In case of urgency, the Requesting State may request the provisional arrest of the person sought pending presentation of the extradition request and supporting documents. A request for provisional arrest may be transmitted directly between the United States Department of Justice and the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Kosovo. The facilities of the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) also may be used to transmit such a request.
2. The application for provisional arrest shall contain:
   (a) a description of the person sought and such other information as may be useful in identifying the person;
   (b) the location of the person sought, if known;
   (c) a brief statement of the facts of the case, including, if possible, the time and location of the offense;
   (d) a description of the law(s) violated;
   (e) information concerning the warrant or order of arrest or detention; and
   (f) a statement that the extradition request and supporting documents will follow within the time specified in this Treaty.

3. The Requesting State shall be notified without delay of the provisional arrest or the reasons for any inability to proceed with the request.

4. A person who is provisionally arrested may be discharged from custody upon the expiration of sixty (60) days from the date of provisional arrest pursuant to this Treaty if the executive authority of the Requested State has not received the extradition request and supporting documents required in Article 7.

5. If the person whose extradition is sought is held under provisional arrest by the Requested State, the Requesting State may satisfy its obligation to transmit its request for extradition and supporting documents through the diplomatic channel pursuant to Article 7, by submitting the request and documents to the Embassy of the Requested State located in the Requesting State. In that case, the date of receipt of such request by the Embassy shall be considered to be the date of receipt by the Requested State for purposes of applying the time limit that must be met under Paragraph 4 of this Article to enable the person’s continued detention.

6. The fact that the person sought has been discharged from custody pursuant to paragraph 4 of this Article shall not prejudice the subsequent re-arrest and extradition of that person if the extradition request and supporting documents are delivered at a later date.

Article 11

Decision and Surrender

1. The Requested State shall promptly notify the Requesting State through the diplomatic channel and otherwise as appropriate of its decision on the request for extradition.

2. If the request is denied in whole or in part, the Requested State shall provide an explanation of the reasons for the denial. The Requested State shall provide copies of the pertinent judicial decisions upon request.

3. If the request for extradition is granted, the executive authorities of the Requesting and Requested States shall agree on the time and place for the surrender of the person sought.
4. If the person sought is not removed from the territory of the Requested State by the Requesting State within the time prescribed by the law of the Requested State, the person sought may be discharged from custody, and the Requested State, in its discretion, may subsequently refuse extradition for the same offense.

Article 12

Deferral of Extradition Proceedings and Deferred or Temporary Surrender

1. When the person whose extradition is sought is being proceeded against in the Requested State, that State may defer the extradition proceedings against the person sought until its own proceedings have been concluded.

2. When the extradition proceedings have been concluded and the request for extradition has been granted, but the person sought is being proceeded against or is serving a sentence in the Requested State, that State may:
   (a) defer the surrender of the person sought until the proceedings have been concluded or until the sentence has been served; or
   (b) temporarily surrender the person to the Requesting State for the purpose of prosecution.

3. In the case of deferred surrender, the person may be kept in custody until surrendered.

4. A person temporarily surrendered shall be kept in custody in the Requesting State and shall be returned to the Requested State after the conclusion of the Requesting State's proceedings against that person, in accordance with any conditions that may be agreed to by the Parties. The return of the person to the Requested State shall not require any further extradition request or proceedings. The time spent in custody in the territory of the Requesting State pending prosecution in that State may be deducted from the time remaining to be served in the Requested State in accordance with the law of the Requested State.

Article 13

Requests for Extradition or Surrender Made by Several States

If the Requested State receives requests from the Requesting State and from any other State or States for the extradition or surrender of the same person, either for the same offense or for different offenses, the executive authority of the Requested State shall determine to which State, if any, it will surrender the person. In making its decision, the Requested State shall consider all relevant factors, including, but not limited to:

(a) whether the requests were made pursuant to a treaty;
(b) the place where each of the offenses was committed;
(c) the respective interests of the Requesting States;
(d) the seriousness of the offenses;
(e) the nationality of the victim;
(f) the possibility of any subsequent extradition between the Requesting States; and
(g) the chronological order in which the requests were received from the Requesting States.

Article 14
Seizure and Surrender of Items

1. To the extent permitted under its law, the Requested State may seize and surrender to the Requesting State all items that are connected with any offense for which extradition is sought or that may be required as evidence in the Requesting State. The items mentioned in this Article may be surrendered even when the extradition cannot be effected due to the death, disappearance, or escape of the person sought.

2. The Requested State may condition the surrender of the items upon satisfactory assurances from the Requesting State that the items will be returned to the Requested State as soon as practicable. The Requested State may also defer the surrender of such items, if they are required as evidence in the Requested State.

3. The rights of third parties in such items shall be duly respected in accordance with the laws of the Requested State.

Article 15
Rule of Specialty

1. A person extradited under this Treaty may not be detained, tried, or punished in the Requesting State except for:
   (a) any offense for which extradition was granted, or a differently denominated offense carrying the same or lesser penalty and based on the same facts as the offense for which extradition was granted, provided such offense is extraditable, or is a lesser included offense;
   (b) any offense committed after the extradition of the person; or
   (c) any offense for which the competent authority of the Requested State, which for the United States shall be the executive authority, consents to the person's detention, trial, or punishment. For the purpose of this subparagraph:
      (i) the Requested State may require the submission of the documentation called for in Article 7; and
      (ii) the person extradited may be detained by the Requesting State for 90 days, or for such longer period of time as the Requested State may authorize, while the request is being processed.
2. A person extradited under this Treaty may not be the subject of onward extradition or surrender for any offense committed prior to extradition unless the Requested State consents.

3. Paragraphs 1 and 2 of this Article shall not prevent the detention, trial, or punishment of an extradited person, or the onward extradition or surrender of that person, if:

(a) that person leaves the territory of the Requesting State after extradition and voluntarily returns to it; or

(b) that person does not leave the territory of the Requesting State within 20 days of the day that person is free to leave.

Article 16

Waiver and Simplified Extradition

The Requested State may expedite the transfer of the person sought to the Requesting State:

(a) when the person sought waives extradition, and in such case the competent judicial authority before whom such waiver is made may direct the transfer of the person to the Requesting State without further proceedings; or

(b) when the person sought consents to extradition or to a simplified extradition proceeding, and in such case the Requested State may surrender the person as expeditiously as possible.

Article 17

Transit

1. Either State may authorize transportation through its territory of a person being surrendered to the other State by a third State or from the other State to a third State for purposes of prosecution or imposition or service of a sentence. A request for transit shall be transmitted through the diplomatic channel or directly between the United States Department of Justice and the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Kosovo. The facilities of the International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) may also be used to transmit such a request. The request for transit shall contain a description of the person being transported and a brief statement of the facts of the case. A person in transit shall be detained in custody during the period of transit.

2. Authorization is not required when air transportation is used by one State and no landing is scheduled on the territory of the other State. If an unscheduled landing does occur, the State in which the unscheduled landing occurs may require a request for transit pursuant to paragraph 1. The State in which the unscheduled landing occurs shall take all measures necessary to prevent the person from absconding until the transit is effected, as long as any transit request required is received within 96 hours of the unscheduled landing.
Article 18

2. The Requesting State shall pay all the expenses related to the translation of extradition documents and the transportation of the person surrendered. The Requested State shall pay all other expenses incurred in that State in connection with the extradition proceedings.

3. Neither State shall make any pecuniary claim against the other State arising out of the arrest, detention, examination, or surrender of persons under this Treaty.

3. Upon its entry into force, this Treaty shall supersede, as between the Parties, the Treaty Between the United States of America and the Kingdom of Servia for the Mutual Extradition of Fugitives from Justice, signed at Belgrade on October 25, 1901 (the "1901 Treaty"), with respect to all requests for extradition submitted to the Requested State on or after that date, and shall apply to all pending requests made under the 1901 Treaty except as provided in paragraph 4 of this Article.

4. The provisions of the 1901 Treaty relating to required documents and the admissibility and translation of documents shall apply to any extradition proceedings in which the extradition request and supporting documents have already been submitted to the Requested State at the time this Treaty enters into force.
