RESPECTED SIR: On my return to Montgomery I find your letter, directing me to dismiss proceedings against the property of Clement C. Clay, jr., and to report my action to your office; and, in reply, I will state that at the next term of the United States court I will move to dismiss the proceedings, and in the mean time I have directed the marshal to deliver up the property seized.

I understand that Clement C. Clay has some paper signed by the President as to the proceedings against him generally, and, as he stands indicted for treason and conspiracy against the United States, I would like to know whether the indictments are to be nolle prossed.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

(Signed) JAMES Q. SMITH,
United States Attorney.

Hon. HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General United States, Washington, D. C

[Copy.]

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA, March 11, 1867.

RESPECTED SIR: Yours of February 21, instructing me to suspend the proceedings on the indictments vs. C. C. Clay for treason, and for carrying on correspondence with the late rebel government whilst in Canada, has been received.

No capias has yet been executed by the marshal, and Clay has not been arrested—in fact, I do not know that Clay is informed of the existence of the indictments, and I desire to know whether the proceedings are to be suspended before arrest, or after the cases are placed on docket for trial.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

(Signed) JAMES Q. SMITH,
United States District Attorney.

Hon. HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General United States, Washington, D. C.

EBBITT HOUSE, Washington, D. C., November 1, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit to you herewith the petition of certain members of the bar, residing in the middle district of Alabama, for the removal of the United States Attorney for that district.

The petition is in duplicate, one copy signed at Selma, and one at Montgomery. The signatures comprise, I believe, an entirely reliable expression of the bar of that portion of the State, the names of Governor Watts, Chancellor Fellowes, Judges Heflin, Chilton, and Rice, and Hon. John A. Elmore, appearing among others of more local reputation.

The petitioners charge that the office of the District Attorney has been used to the great injury of the government and people, and its administration marked by gross ignorance and unfaithfulness.

They submit in proof certain statements, professional and otherwise, and record evidence bearing further upon the matters referred to, all of which accompany this note.

Many of the petitioners being personally known to me, and others by reputation, I consented to be their medium of communication with you, and also to express my own conviction of the fitness of their request, and its entire accord with universal public feeling in that portion of the State.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WAGER SWAYNE.

Hon. HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
January 24, 1867.

SIR: On the first of November, 1866, a petition for the removal of J. Q. Smith, United States Attorney for the northern district of Alabama, from members of the bar of Selma and Montgomery, was presented by General Wager Swayne, who endorses strongly the character of the petitioners, the fitness of their request, and its entire accord with the public feeling of that portion of the State. The petition is signed by nine members of the bar dating from Selma, fourteen dating from Montgomery, twenty State senators, and one member of the house of representatives. Governor Watts, Chancellor Fellowes, Judges Heflin, Chilton, and Rice, and Hon. John A. Elmore, are among the signers. The reasons assigned are, first, the habitual use of the office for the oppression of the people and the private emolument of Mr. Smith; second, ignorance and incapacity; and third, the exaction of irregular and excessive fees.

In support of the first charge, it appears from statements of Henry C. Semple and John B. Taylor, of Montgomery, that Mr. Smith obtained from the Governor's office, without labor or expense, a list of applicants for pardon under the thirteenth exception of the amnesty proclamation; that he filed informations against nearly all of those recommended by the Governor for pardon, (many of whom were already pardoned,) and through a rule, previously established by the court, costs were collected in each case of one per cent. on property amounting to $20,000, and an additional half per cent. on greater sums. These costs were collected without labor or responsibility. On their payment proceedings were at once dismissed by the sole authority of the District Attorney. They were exacted from the pardoned and unpardoned. They amount to at least $100,000 since the establishment of the court in 1865. Mr. Semple says he has several receipts for costs under such circumstances, and knows of many more.

2d. As to the charge of ignorance, Mr. Semple submits the record in the case of the United States vs. Morris and Johnson, and 120 bales of cotton: but as Mr. Semple admits this to be a matter of opinion, it is not considered necessary to examine here the questions presented.

3d. As to the exaction of illegal and excessive fees, the record in the case of the United States vs. Metcalf and Hatchell is submitted, from which it appears that the District Attorney insisted on $70 from each of the defendants, when the proper fee seems to have been only $20. This requires to be explained.

Mr. Semple charges that in many instances property has been released by order of the District Attorney after seizure by the marshal and information filed without any order of the court and in the absence of the judge, upon the claimants consenting that such a portion should be condemned as might be sufficient in the District Attorney's opinion for the payment of the costs of court. It is claimed that this proves that the proceedings were instituted solely for the benefit of the officers of the court, without regard to public justice or policy.

It may be proper to state that Mr. Smith was driven from Alabama for his adherence to the Union, and his property sequestrated. He went to Nashville and was recommended for the office he holds by United States District Judge Trigg, and United States Attorney H. H. Harrison, and other prominent Union men of Tennessee.

Respectfully submitted.

M. F. PLEASANTS, Chief Clerk.

The ATTORNEY GENERAL.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA, January 29, 1867.

SIR: Allow us to recommend for the appointment to the office of District Attorney, for the middle district court of the United States for the State of Alabama, Hon Francis Bugbee.

Most of us have known Judge Bugbee for many years, and we assure you that no one can be found whose purity, integrity, intelligence, and legal learning better qualify him for the position.

We further state that his appointment would be entirely satisfactory to all persons in the State, so far as our information extends.

We are, respectfully, your obedient servants,

R. M. PATTON,
Governor of Alabama.
A. J. WALKER,
Chief Justice of Alabama.
THOMAS J. JUDGE,
Justice of Supreme Court, Ala.
WALTER H. CRENSHAW,
President of the Senate, Ala.
GEORGE GOLDTHWAITE,
Judge Circuit Court, Ala.
THOMAS B. COOPER,
Speaker House of Representatives.
SAMUEL F. RICE,
Ex-Judge of Circuit Court, Ala.
JOHN D. PHELAN,
Ex-Chancellor of Alabama.
GEORGE W. GUNN,
Member of the bar.
JOHN T. HEFLIN,
City Solicitor of Selma.
A. B. COOPER,
Senator of Alabama.
W. M. BYRD,
Judge Supreme Court, Ala.
J. T. HOLTZCLAW,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.
W. C. McIVER,
Lawyer, of Macon County.
DAVID CLOPTON,
Lawyer, of Macon County.
BARNA McKINNE,
Lawyer of Montgomery.
GEORGE W. STORSE,
Ex-Judge Supreme Court.
J. A. ELMORE,
Member Constitutional Convention.
M. D. GRAHAM,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.
T. M. ARLINGTON,
Judge Montgomery City Court.
E. J. FITZPATRICK,
Solicitor Montgomery County.
J. H. WATTS,
Ex-Governor of Alabama.
A. M. ORLIN,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.
JACK SHORINGTON,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.
W. V. CHILTON, Jr.,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.
G. S. G. DOSTER,
Member Alabama State Senate.
W. P. CHILTON,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.
F. LE B. GOODWIN,
Member of Alabama House.
HENRY C. SEMPLE,
Lawyer, of Montgomery.

I cordially endorse the unflinching loyalty of Judge Bugbee, who, though living within the rebel lines throughout the war, can yet, as I am advised and believe, comply with the law requiring a "test oath," without contradiction either of its letter or spirit.

WAGER SWAYNE,
Major General United States Volunteers.

Hon. HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General United States.

WILLARD'S HOTEL,
Washington, February 4, 1867.

SIR: I cordially unite in the above recommendation. I have known Judge Bugbee many years, and am confident a better appointment could not be made.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

LEWIS E. PARSONS.

Hon. HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General United States.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
February 21, 1867.

SIR: The Attorney General directs me to say that you are instructed to suspend the proceedings on the indictment against C. C. Clay for treason and conspiracy until further advised by this office.

Respectfully yours,

M. F. PLEASANTS, Chief Clerk.

JAMES Q. SMITH, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Montgomery, Alabama.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
March 25, 1867.

SIR: In reply to yours of the 11th instant, the Attorney General directs me to say that he desires you to suspend all proceedings against Mr. C. C. Clay, and not to make the arrest.

Very respectfully yours,

M. F. PLEASANTS, Chief Clerk.

JAMES Q. SMITH, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Montgomery, Alabama.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., April 3, 1867.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 1st instant, I am directed by the Attorney General to say that you are hereby instructed to dismiss all indictments for treason pending in your district, based on acts committed by parties acting in a military capacity during the war.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. F. PLEASANTS, Chief Clerk.

ANDREW STERRETT RIDGELY, Esq.,
United States District Attorney, Baltimore, Maryland.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., April 5, 1867.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 4th instant, the Attorney General directs me to say that you are instructed to continue the cases referred to—those growing out of obstructing the railways and the passage of troops to Washington on or about April 19, 1861.

It is not desired that they should be tried before a single judge; and no assignment of judges having yet been made, the Chief Justice cannot hold the circuit court.

Very respectfully yours,

M. F. PLEASANTS, Chief Clerk.

A. S. RIDGELY, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Baltimore, Maryland.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 20, 1867.

L. C. BAKER sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Have you in your possession or under your control letters written by Andrew Johnson?

A. I have not.

Q. Have you stated to any person that you had such letters in your possession or under your control since your former examination before this committee?

A. No, sir; I do not recollect that I have.

Q. Did you make any such statement as that to W. B. Matchett, either in this city, Philadelphia, or in any other place, since that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any such statement, or report, to any one?

A. I do not recollect of making any such report to any person.

Q. Either by letter or verbal communication?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you state whether you have or have not made any such statement?

A. I have stated this, that I thought these letters could be obtained.

Q. I speak of the letters in reference to which you testified when you were before the Committee on a former occasion. Do you know where those letters are?

A. I do not.

Q. Have you any reason to believe you could obtain them?

A. Yes, sir, I have.

Q. Have you any other reason than you had when you were examined before this Committe on a previous occasion?

A. I have no reason other than that stated in my previous examination.

Q. Have you made any effort since that time to obtain possession of them?

A. I have.

Q. What effort have you made?

A. I wrote to Nashville, Tennessee, to the party who originally had the letters.

Q. Who was that party?

A. J. W. Adamson.

Q. Did you receive any reply?

A. I did not receive any written reply. Some two weeks after I was examined here, I suppose in reply to that letter, a lady came to my house in Philadelphia, purporting to represent the parties who had these letters. I tried to persuade her to come before this Committee, but she declined to come.

Q. Did you learn her name?

A. She gave her name as Mrs. Sallie Harris. I never saw her before.

Q. Did she inform you of the place where she resides?

A. She did.

Q. Where was it?

A. She said she lived in Nashville.

Q. Did she give you the street and number of residence?

A. No, sir, she did not. I asked her that question and tried to find out, but she would not give me her address.

Q. What other efforts have you made to obtain possession of these letters?

A. I have made no efforts except through this person.

Q. Have you in your possession a copy of the entries in the diary of J. Wilkes Booth?

A. I have not.

Q. Was there a copy of these entries given to you by any person?

A. I do not recollect distinctly that there was. I have, however, an indistinct recollection that Colonel Conger handed me an envelope that he said contained extracts from J. Wilkes Booth's diary. He asked me if I would ask the Secretary of War to give him permission to retain it. I did ask that permission. My communications of that kind at that time were had generally with General Eckert, who was then assistant Secretary of War, and I do not recollect whether I applied to General Eckert or Mr. Stanton, but I understood that Mr. Stanton refused to allow any copy of the diary, or any extract from it to be retained.

Q. Did you so inform Colonel Conger?

A. I think I did.

Q. What was the result?

A. I suppose the result was he didn't get it.

Q. Did he then deliver to you what he said were extracts from Booth's diary?

A. I think he did. My recollection of the matter is very indistinct, as it is also in reference to many other matters that occurred at that time. A little explanation will perhaps be necessary here. At the time Booth was captured, and immediately after, I was intrusted by the Secretary of War with serving the subpœnas on the trial of the assassins. I suppose I served through my office 150 or 200 subpœnas on witnesses to appear before that commission. My time was taken up entirely, night and day, with that and other matters pertaining to that investigation. There are many things that occurred about that time of which my recollection is very indistinct. I never carefully read the diary, and I could not tell a single entry in it, except what I have heard some of my men say in reference to his crossing the river, and things of that kind. It was a matter of general conversation about my office.

Q. Have you seen Colonel Conger recently?

A. I saw him within the last two hours.

Q. How long since has it been that you met Colonel Conger prior to to-day?

A. I have not seen Colonel Conger but twice since, for, I think it has been, six months. Some five or six weeks ago I was going west, and telegraphed from Philadelphia to Mansfield, Ohio, where Colonel Conger resides, that I wanted him to meet me there. He did meet me there. My business was entirely with reference to some pecuniary business matters between us. The matter of the diary and this investigation was scarcely referred to in our conversation.

Q. Have you seen him at any other place within the past six months?

A. On his way here, in obedience to a summons from this Committee, he came by way of Philadelphia, and came to my house.

Q. Have you seen him at any other point?

A. No, sir; I do not recollect that I have.

Q. When did you first get possession of the diary of Booth?

A. When Colonel Conger came up on the day of the capture from below, he came directly to my office, opposite Willard's. My recollection is that he came into the back office, and said to me he had got Booth, and that he had some things tied up in a handkerchief. I hesitated for a moment, and asked him some questions about it, when he showed me what he had—the effects taken from the body—and then gave me a very brief statement of the capture of Booth and Herold. I then went directly with Colonel Conger to the War Department, about five o'clock in the afternoon, as near as I can recollect. Mr. Stanton had gone home; we therefore went directly to Mr. Stanton's house. I jumped out of the buggy and went into Mr. Stanton's room. He was lying on the lounge. Mrs. Stanton was in the room at the time. I stated to him that we had got Booth. He got up from the sofa and came over to the centre table. Either I or Colonel Conger, I do not recollect which, handed him this little package, and he looked at the diary. He was at the side table, I was standing opposite; and after looking at it for some time, he handed it to me. I took the diary and looked at it. He took up a little pocket compass and some other things taken from Booth and examined them, and then gave me some instructions as to what I should do with the body.

Q. Did you examine the diary?

A. I did.

Q. Was that the first examination you had given of it?

A. No, sir; I think not. I think I looked at it at the office.

Q. Did you have it in your possession from that time until you handed it to Mr. Stanton?

A. I think I carried it out of the office. I was driving the buggy, and my impression is I handed it to Colonel Conger, who was sitting in the buggy with me, though I am not certain about it.

Q. State, to the best of your recollection, what were the entries in the diary of Booth when you first examined it.

A. I would not undertake to state positively anything. There was an entry in the diary about his being crippled, his leg being broken; and there was on a piece of loose paper something about his having been to Dr. Stewart's.

Q. Did you examine the loose leaf that was in the diary referred to when you were examined by this Committee before?

A. Yes, sir; I saw it. That, I think, referred to Dr. Stewart. I referred to it as one of the memoranda that I recollect.

Q. Do you remember any entries contained in it?

A. I do not recollect anything distinctly. My great anxiety at that time was to get hold of something that might in some way lead to the detection of other parties who might be implicated. Mr. Stanton was very exacting; he was very particular. Every little thing that was brought to me I was directed to take to his office. General Eckert was the custodian of the articles taken from Booth's body. There was an opera glass, a diamond pin, and a great variety of little things. I recollect I spoke to the Secretary and asked him if I might retain some one of these articles as a relic. He said not a thing should go out of the office.

Q. Have you recently published a book?

A. I have

Q. A work called "The History of the United States Secret Service?"

A. I am the author and publisher of that book.

Q. Did you make any statements in that book as to what entries were taken in the diary of Booth?

A. I think reference is made there to an entry. I do not now recollect what it is. I could not tell unless I saw it. The material of that book was furnished to a man who compiled it, and he made just such use of the matter, subject to my revision, as he thought proper. I did revise the whole matter, and am responsible for everything that is there.

Q. How long since you gave directions as to that part purporting to contain extracts from Booth's diary?

A. I do not recollect the time. It was understood between the Secretary and myself that I was to have permission to incorporate the contents of the diary in my book. Mr. Derby, who at that time was to publish the book, was constantly applying to me to get the diary, and Mr. Headley came from New York for that purpose, and I went with him to the War Department. I think I introduced him to Mr. Stanton, and said to Mr. Stanton that I would like now to get the diary. He said that I could not have any part of it. I reminded him of his prior promise to me. He said that matters had changed somewhat now; that he was not disposed to let the diary or any papers go out of his possession. The parties who were to publish the book were very much dissatisfied at not obtaining these papers.

Q. Have you examined this book since it was published?

A. I never read it through, though I think I know what it contains.

Q. Will you please state what it contains in reference to entries in Booth's diary?

A. I cannot recollect the language.

Q. State the substance.

A. I think there is some reference made there to Booth's diary, obtained probably from the statements of the men. You see, Colonel Conger, who took a copy of this diary, was talking to the men about the office a great deal. It was a matter of conversation there at the time, and if there are any extracts, or what purport to be extracts, from it, they come from that source, for I positively swear that I never examined that diary sufficient to recollect anything in it.

Q. And you could not give the substance of any of the entries in the diary?

A. I do not think I could be positive of any.

Q. I see it stated in this book that the Secretary of War, without instructions of any kind, committed to Colonel Lafayette C. Baker, of the secret service, the stark corpse of J. Wilkes Booth; that the secret service never fulfilled its service more secretly than on that occasion. When asked to whom it was known where the body was, he answered, "To only one man living except myself." Were the instructions of the Secretary of War, concerning the body of Booth, given directly to you or some other person?

A. They were given to me. I do not know whether they came directly from the Secretary of War or from General Eckert. Many orders I got during that time came from General Eckert, and when I speak of orders from the Secretary of War, I include one or the other of them, because I was just as much bound to respect the orders of General Eckert as I was those of the Secretary of War. You notice that the paragraph to which you refer is an extract from the correspondence published in the New York World, giving an account of the capture of the assassins. If you will read the entire article, I think you will see that the statement of facts is over the signature of George Alfred Townsend. It was inserted in that book because it was thought to be a very correct and graphic description of the capture.

Q. Is that statement of Townsend, as published, correct?

A. I think it is. The statement mainly refers to what occurred at the capture and burning of the barn.

Q. Then no one but you and he knew anything as to what was done with the body of Booth?

A. I took the body of Booth from the gunboat and carried it to the arsenal grounds. Colonel Benton had had some instructions from the Secretary of War as to where the body should be placed, I suppose, as he was there with General Eckert and myself during the evening. It was about four or five o'clock in the afternoon when the body was brought up there. During that evening we went back from the arsenal. The Secretary of War wanted to know where the key to the cell was. I had not brought up the key with me. I got a carriage and went back to the arsenal, got the key, and carried it and delivered it to the Secretary.

Q. Key to what?

A. Key to the cell of the prison where he was buried.

Q. The body was buried there in one of the cells?

A. Buried in the grounds of the arsenal.

Q. In the open grounds?

A. No, sir; inside of the arsenal walls.

Q. Inside—in a room?

A. Yes, sir. I do not now recollect the number of the room. I think it is given in that book. That is a correct report of it as I understand it.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Was the body put in a box?

A. Yes, sir, it was put in a box.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Was it in the arsenal building, or in the penitentiary?

A. I call it the arsenal building, because it was used for arsenal stores. It was properly the old penitentiary, though it had not been used for a penitentiary for some time. It was occupied at that time for arsenal stores for fixed ammunition.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You have been sworn once or twice before this Committee?

A. Once before.

Q. Did you ever represent to anybody that you or some of your assistants took the body of Booth out into the ocean, tied stones to it, and sunk it?

A. I do not know that I ever did directly. I have been questioned a great deal in reference to that matter, and used to reply to the reporters somewhat at random. Very likely I did make such a statement. I do not recollect.

Q. Why do you say very likely you did?

A. I say that because, at the time the body was disposed of, I was beset by correspondents and others who wanted to ascertain where it was buried. The Secretary did not want anybody to know.

Q. Is it a fact that the body was taken out into the ocean and sunk?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell any lies about it?

A. No. I do not think that I made that representation. I might have done it.

Q. Then you say you did not lie about it?

A. I am not here before this Committee to be accused of lying. I know what my position is before the Committee.

Q. Do you say that you did not make any such statement?

A. I said I might have made the statement, and I have explained to you how the statement came to be made, if it ever was made.

Q. Did you ever represent that you alone, with one other man, disposed of the body, and that no other persons on earth knew where it was?

A. My previous answer applies to this question.

Q. You will answer this question if you please.

A. I might have made that representation.

Q. Is it true?

A. No, sir, it is not true. I have stated my reasons for making it.

Q. Did you represent to any one that the head of Booth was taken off and the body buried without the head?

A. Never in my life.

Q. Is it a fact or not?

A. It is not, so far as I know.

Q. Was the head buried with the body?

A. The last I saw of the body it was whole, excepting a section of the spinal bone where the bullet entered, taken by Doctor Barnes, Surgeon General, and which, I believe, is now in the Medical Museum.

Q. Did you represent that the heart was taken out, and in the possession of some one in Washington?

A. Never in my life. I will swear to that positively.

Q. Is it a fact, as far as you know, that the heart was buried with the body?

A. It was.

Q. You believe Booth's head and heart were buried with the body?

A. I believe they were.

Q. Did you see the body buried?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. Did you see the body carried into what is called the old penitentiary?

A. I did.

Q. Did you help do it?

A. I did not actually lift the body. I saw it taken.

Q. Who did carry it?

A. I think there were two soldiers there at the time, who carried it.

Q. Do you recollect who they were?

A. I do not.

Q. Were they under your command?

A. They were not.

Q. Were they under command of Colonel Benton?

A. I suppose they were.

Q. Was not the body, in fact, buried by Colonel Benton, or under his and not under your orders?

A. I did not consider that it was. Mr. Stanton gave me instructions what to do with the body, and I followed these instructions.

Q. The orders were given to you?

A. They were,

Q. From Mr. Stanton?

A. From Mr. Stanton directly, or from General Eckert.

Q. Did you, in fact, direct where the body was to be buried?

A. I considered that it was buried under my directions.

Q. Where were you when the body was actually put into the ground?
A. I do not know precisely where I stood at the time.
Q. In general, where were you?
A. I do not recollect where I was. I was there, about the arsenal.
Q. Did you superintend the digging of the grave?
A. Personally I did not.
Q. Who did superintend it?
A. I suppose the men who dug the grave were under the personal superintendence of Colonel Benton.
Q. Did Mr. Stanton tell you where the body was to be buried?
A. He gave me general instructions to take the body to the arsenal. He had a piece of paper containing the plan of the inside of the prison, which I furnished him, and he designated where the body should be put.
Q. That order was given to you?
A. That order was given to me.
Q. Who was present?
A. I do not recollect.
Q. Was Colonel Benton present?
A. No, sir; I do not think he was. He was there in the War Department, in the Secretary's office, the night previous to this.
Q. But not at the time the order was given?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you point to those who dug the grave where it was to be dug?
A. No, sir.
Q. Who did that?
A. I suppose Colonel Benton got his orders also from the Secretary.
Q. Were the men who dug the grave under your command or under Colonel Benton's?
A. Under Colonel Benton's, I suppose. They were soldiers at the arsenal.
Q. Was the body buried in a cell?
A. I do not know whether it was properly a cell. It had a gate and a lock to it.
Q. How large was the room?
A. It was a large room.
Q. Was there a floor to it?
A. I think there was—of stone or cement. I am not certain about that.
Q. Was it taken up?
A. I suppose it was.
Q. Did you see it done?
A. I did not.
Q. Do you know it was done?
A. I only know what I understood at the time.
Q. Then you had no actual knowledge where the body was buried?
A. It was buried in the arsenal grounds.
Q. Do you know that from seeing the body buried, or otherwise?
A. I have stated that I was not present when the body was actually put into the ground.
Q. Were you present when the grave was dug?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you see it after it was dug?
A. No; not at the time it was dug. I had it pointed out to me.
Q. Did you see it before the body was put in?
A. No, sir.
Q. Will you, then, undertake to swear, from your knowledge, where the body was buried?

A. I have already sworn that I saw the body carried within the walls of the penitentiary grounds. I have visited the place where the body was buried.

Q. Then you only know that fact from what you understood. Do you mean to say that you have any other knowledge or information than that?

A. I have said that I did not see the grave dug, and that I did not see the body dropped into the grave.

Q. Did you see the body carried into the room where it was buried?

A. I saw the body carried into the grounds.

Q. Did you see it carried into the penitentiary building?

A. I saw what I supposed to be the body carried inside the walls—not the building proper. The building is surrounded by a wall.

Q. Is not that body buried in a room with a lock on it?

A. It is not properly a room.

Q. Is not there a door to it with a lock and key?

A. There is; I carried the key to the Secretary myself.

Q. Why do you say it is not properly a room?

A. I did not say it was not a room. I saw the body carried through the walls that surround the penitentiary building, inside of which the body was buried.

Q. Was it buried inside of the room or not?

A. It was buried inside the prison walls.

Q. Are there rooms in that prison?

A. Oh, yes, sir.

Q. Was this body buried in one of these rooms?

A. I think it was.

Q. Then it was buried in exactly a room?

A. You and I might differ as to what would be considered a room.

Q. Well, I am trying to find out the fact.

A. I have answered the question, I believe.

Q. Was it buried in a room or not?

A. I say it was buried in a room; I call any enclosure in the penitentiary building a room.

Q. What is the reason you have any doubt about it? Describe the place where it was buried.

A. I will tell you the reason. I have stated to you, in the first place, that I did not see the body put into the grave; that I did not dig the grave myself. In the second place, the exact circumstances of the digging and the burying I have understood from other sources, and in that way have learned all the facts.

Q. Now, I want you to tell me why you do not call it a room—where the body was buried?

A. I do not call it a room because you and I might differ, or I and any member of the Committee might differ, as to whether it was a room or not. I say that the body was buried inside of the penitentiary walls; I saw it carried in there.

Q. How many rooms are there inside of the penitentiary walls?

A. I do not know; I never examined particularly. There are a good many, perhaps thirty or forty cells or rooms. The walls of the penitentiary building on the south side and on the west side come up to within about ten feet of the building. There is a temporary shed on the west side, which is enclosed, and may be called a room. On the south side the wall is further off, but with a shed adjoining.

Q. Was he buried in one of those sheds?

A. No, sir; I have no further answer to make, except that he was buried inside of the walls of the penitentiary.

Q. Do you mean by that that you will not tell whether it was buried inside of one of the rooms?

A. I have answered that question, and have no further answer to make.

Q. Then all you know about it is that you saw the body go into the building?

A. I have told you all I know. I believe I know where the body was buried, and I have tried to tell you.

Q. Where was the body put into the box?

A. I think it was put into the box or coffin inside of the prison.

Q. Did not you say it was carried into the building in a box?

A. I think I did not. I stated that I saw it carried inside of the walls.

Q. Where were you at the time?

A. I was standing at the entrance of the arsenal grounds.

Q. How far was that from the door where you supposed it went in?

A. It was a good ways—four or five hundred feet perhaps.

Q. Then you do not undertake to say that the body went into the building at all?

A. I stated that I saw it carried inside of the walls.

Q. Then all you know about it is that it went inside of the walls. You know nothing beyond that except what was told you by others?

A. I did not say that was all I knew. I say I saw it carried inside of the walls.

Q. Is that the last you saw of it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How far is the gate where it went in from the building?

A. Perhaps from twenty-five to fifty feet at that place.

Q. Did you ever tell anybody that the body was taken down on the bank of the Potomac, and the ground so covered over that no one could tell where it was?

A. I never told any one that in my life.

Q. Did you ever tell any one that the face of the ground was so smooth there that no living soul could tell where it was?

A. I do not recollect ever making any such statement.

Q. Did you deliver this memorandum book to the Secretary of War?

A. I do not recollect whether I or Colonel Conger carried it.

Q. You have talked this matter over recently with Colonel Conger, have you not?

A. Very little.

Q. Since Colonel Conger was sworn here?

A. I had some general conversation with him.

Q. Did you talk over the matter about the memorandum book with Colonel Conger since he has been sworn here?

A. I did. He referred to it within the last hour or two.

Q. Did he tell you that you did not carry it up, but that he did?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did not you swear, when you were before the Committee on a previous occasion, that you carried it yourself?

A. Oh, well, I drove the buggy and considered that I carried it. We were both sitting in the buggy together. Whether I actually had it in my hand, or whether I passed it to Colonel Conger and he had it in his hand while I drove up, or whether it lay in the seat or in the buggy, I cannot now swear.

Q. I ask you whether you did not swear that you carried it up?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And now do you say that you carried it?

A. I swore that I did carry it in my buggy.

Q. Do you swear that you handed it to the Secretary of War?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then Colonel Conger is mistaken about that, is he?

A. Very likely. I do not know whether I handed it to the Secretary the first time, or whether Colonel Conger did. The Secretary looked at it, read it over, and handed it back to me. I examined it myself and handed it back to the Secretary.

Q. Did you open the little package containing these things?

A. That I do not recollect. I do not recollect whether Colonel Conger undid the bundle or whether I undid it.

Q. In your previous examination did you swear there was not as much in the book as when you gave it to the Secretary?

A. I did.

Q. How is the fact now?

A. I still believe that that is the case. I do not desire to change my testimony in any particular at all.

Q. Did you talk that matter over with Conger about the leaves being gone?

A. I think it was referred to in our conversation.

Q. Did you talk with the Secretary of War about it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you talk with Judge Holt about it?

A. No, sir. I have not seen Judge Holt for several months.

Q. You are still of the opinion that the book is not now in the condition it was when you first saw it?

A. That is my opinion.

Q. Did you see the Secretary of War count the leaves at the time you and Conger were together at his house?

A. No, I think not.

Q. Did you count the absent leaves, or stubs?

A. No, sir; I never saw any stubs until I saw them here.

Q. Do you mean to say that at the time you gave the book to the Secretary of War there were no leaves gone?

A. I do.

Q. That is still your opinion?

A. That is still my opinion.

Q. Did you examine it pretty carefully?

A. I examined the book, and I am very sure that if any leaves had been gone I should have noticed it.

Q. Did you examine it carefully?

A. It did not require careful examination to discover the absence of so many leaves.

Q. I ask you whether you examined it carefully?

A. I ran it through and looked over it.

Q. Where did you examine it first?

A. I examined it at Mr. Stanton's house. My impression is I looked at the book at my office before I left, but I am not altogether clear upon that point. My impression is I did examine it at Mr. Stanton's house, and I am satisfied in my own mind that there were no leaves missing at the time.

Q. Were there any observations or remarks made on that subject when you and Mr. Stanton looked it over?

A. No, sir; that is the reason I think the leaves were not gone. I think Mr. Stanton would have asked me what had become of the missing leaves, if any had been missing.

Q. Did you take the book out of the package before Mr. Stanton made his appearance?

A. Mr. Stanton was there in the room when we entered it.

Q. Then unless you examined it at your office before going up, the first you saw of it was in his presence?

A. It was.

Q. Did you leave the book at Mr. Stanton's office?

A. I did.

Q. Did you leave the other things taken up in the bundles?

A. All except the bills of exchange and some money. I think Mr. Stanton handed me these.

Q. How much money was there?

A. I do not recollect how much—something over $100. There is an entry in my book of the amount.

Q. Was the money in greenbacks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many bills of exchange?

A. There were some duplicates—first and second. I do not recollect what the amount was. My book will show exactly.

Q. Where is your book?

A. It is in Philadelphia. A little memorandum book kept by me as a cash book at the time. I think it was for £50 or £60.

Q. Do you know who it was drawn by?

A. That I do not recollect.

Q. Do you know who it was drawn upon?

A. Upon one of the banks of Montreal. I do not recollect which. It was produced at the trial of the assassins.

Q. Were you sworn on the trial of Mrs. Surratt?

A. I was not. I was not called as a witness.

Q. Were you present when Booth was shot?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was a brother of yours present?

A. A cousin of mine, L. B. Baker, sometimes called Byron Baker, was present.

Q. Where is he?

A. In Lansing, Michigan.

Q. What position had he at the time?

A. He was attached to my force. He had just been mustered out of the service as brigade quartermaster, some three weeks previously.

Q. Was he of the party you sent out to capture Booth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he return with the body of Booth?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did Conger come with the body also?

A. Conger came before—earlier in the afternoon. The body arrived about 12 o'clock at night, I think.

Q. The burial of Booth was intended to be kept a secret was it?

A. I inferred from Mr. Stanton's conversation that he did not wish it known.

Q. Were you ordered not to tell where it was buried?

A. Never; I took it for granted.

Q. What was your object in keeping it secret?

A. I do not know of any object, except I supposed the Secretary of War did not want it known. I did not know what his motives were.

Q. Was it talked over between you?

A. No, sir.

Q. You spoke about some letters in your previous examination, and also in your examination just now, written by Mr. Johnson, which you were desired to obtain, if possible. Can you repeat anything that was in those letters?

A. I do not recollect the contents.

Q. Can you repeat a sentence from any one of them?

A. I do not recollect anything that was in them. I did not attach much importance to them at the time.

Q. On your previous examination this question was put by some one: "State whether you have ever seen any letters showing the complicity of Jefferson Davis in the plot to assassinate President Lincoln." You answered, "Yes, sir." Was your answer "Yes, sir," to such a question as that, when you cannot recollect a word in the letter?

A. I understood what the purport of the letters was.

Q. I ask you whether you answered "Yes, sir," to a question of that sort when you could not recollect a sentence in one of the letters?

A. I heard a statement made about the contents of the letters.

Q. Then your answer was based upon the statements you heard as to the contents of the letters?

A. I also saw the original letters.

Q. Was your answer based upon the letters, or what was told you about them?

A. It was based upon both. I had heard that these letters were in existence, and were considered important, and I examined them, but I do not now recollect what they contained.

Q. You were also asked at your former examination whether you knew the handwriting of Jefferson Davis, and you answered that the Secretary of War pronounced it a genuine letter. What letter did you refer to?

A. I referred to letters that I brought from Canada.

Q. Letters of which you had copies?

A. No, sir. I had the originals. I am not sure now whether the letters came from Canada or from the South.

Q. Did you show the original letters to Secretary Stanton?

A. I showed three or four original signatures of Jefferson Davis to the Secretary, and I suppose the papers are in his possession still. They are the letters I was examined upon when I was before the Committee on a previous occasion. There were some papers among them, I know, containing Jefferson Davis's signature.

Q. You are reported in your previous examination as saying that the Secretary examined the letters, and stated that he was satisfied the signature was genuine—that they were also examined by Judge Holt; and in the same answer you say you never saw the originals, but that they were satisfied they were genuine letters.

A. I guess that must be a mistake. My evidence was never read over to me or corrected. I was referring in that testimony to letters and papers I brought from Canada. The signatures which were pronounced genuine were some brought from the South. I had the originals of the Canada letters in my possession.

Q. You say you put your private mark upon every one of them, and made pin-holes through them, so that you could identify them when the question of the genuineness of the letters came up; and that both Judge Holt and Secretary Stanton said they were genuine letters?

A. That is not what I intended to say. When I brought the letters to the War Department, the question was raised as to whether they were genuine or not; whether that was Jefferson Davis's genuine signature—at least I had the commission of this man Young, signed by Jefferson Davis. I know that both the Secretary of War and Judge Holt pronounced the signature genuine. There was a letter, I remember, written by Davis, giving some instructions in reference to his children, and they pronounced the signature genuine in that case.

Q. You stated in your testimony that you began copying one letter when parties came into the room and declined to let you go on unless the letters were paid for. When did you make private marks upon them, and what letters did you refer to?

A. I referred to some letters in the hands of parties in Canada.

Q. For what purpose?

A. They were supposed to be in the hands of Tucker.

Q. In whose hands did you find them?

A. The man I was negotiating with for the letters was named Thompson. I do not know what Thompson. He claimed to be the representative of the parties who had the letters.

Q. Did not you know anything more about him than that?

A. I never inquired who he was.

Q. Where is he now?

A. He is in Toronto.

Q. Where did you meet him?

A. I met him in Toronto once, and at the Suspension Bridge once, at Windsor once, and in London. I do not recollect at which one of these points I first saw him.

Q. Is he a Canadian?

A. I do not think he is. I think he is an American.

Q. What was he trying to do—to make a speculation out of these letters?

A. I suppose so.

Q. He wanted through you to sell them to the government, did he?

A. I suppose that is what he wanted to do.

Q. What did he want for them?

A. He had various prices. At one time for all the papers he proposed to deliver, he wanted $20,000. I think his name is among my papers somewhere.

Q. Can you give the Committee any information to enable them to find him and bring him here?

A. I can find him and produce him here if he is wanted. I have seen him with the railroad men about the Suspension Bridge a great deal. I suppose by inquiring of them I could ascertain where he is. I have seen him with the conductors and brakemen frequently talking.

Q. Can you give us any description so that we could find him?

A. I do not think I could.

Q. Were the letters retained in his hands?

A. I saw them in his hands three or four times.

Q. Did anybody, except yourself, in the employment of the government see him, and see the letters, papers, and books?

A. I do not know that they did. I have been told that the Attorney General has had the letters in his possession.

Q. Did you put the Attorney General in communication with him?

A. No, sir. I do not know that he saw Thompson?

Q. You think Thompson is a real man; there is no humbug about him?

A. I suppose he is. That is my belief. I brought a brief of the letters he had with me.

Q. You stated in your testimony on your previous examination that he refused to let you copy them.

A. In the first place I made an arrangement to get them. After I begun copying them they stopped me. I supposed it was from some misunderstanding about the division of the money. They could not agree among themselves, I believe, as to how it was to be divided. One man claimed it, and then another man claimed it.

Q. Who were the men who claimed it?

A. Castleman and Young.

Q. What is Castleman's first name?

A. Ben., I think.

Q. Where does he live?

A. In Canada somewhere. I do not know where. There was a man they called "Greek-fire" there. I do not know what his name is. I know about him from hearing Thompson talk of him. His eyes had been put out in experimenting with Greek-fire, and he went by the name in Canada of "Greek-fire.' I understood from Thompson also that Tucker, Saunders, and all of them had an interest in it.

Q. That they were concerned in betraying Jeff. Davis?

A. I do not know whether they were or not?

Q. Did you understand that they were selling out genuine letters of Jeff. Davis, connecting him with the assassination?

A. I understood they were selling out genuine letters.

Q. Did you understand they were betraying him for this money to be received from the letters?

A. If the letters implicated Jeff. Davis, they sold them with the understanding that they would betray him.

Q. It was your opinion that they did implicate him?

A. That was my opinion?

Q. Is there anybody else connected with the government who ever went to Canada about them?

A. Nobody.

Q. Nobody in your employ?

A. No; I never allowed anybody to go with me.

Q. What pay did you get for your service?

A. The pay of a brigadier general.

Q. Anything else?

A. Not a dollar.

Q. Did you get any traveling expenses?

A. Not a dollar, except to cover my actual expenses.

Q. Did you get any secret-service fund?

A. Not a dollar, except what I actually paid out. If I went to Canada I had my expenses paid.

Q. Did you have the disbursing of a very large amount of money?

A. Not very large. My report to the Secretary of War will show.

A. About how much?

A. I think in the five years I expended, all told, not more than $400,000. The exact figures in detail are in my report to the Secretary of War.

Q. Does that include the pay the men received?

A. Everything—traveling expenses and everything.

Q. Did you spend money in buying this information that you were furnished by the department with?

A. Occasionally.

Q. Did you have any interviews yourself with Tucker or with Saunders?

A. I had an interview with Tucker.

Q. About these letters?

A. No.

Q. Where did you have an interview with him?

A. At St. Lawrence Hall, Montreal, Canada.

Q. Did he know who you were?

A. Yes. I carried a letter to him from Thomas J. Durant.

Q. Did you have any interview with Saunders?

A. I saw Saunders there.

Q. Was Saunders present while you were negotiating?

A. No, sir.

Q. What was the character of the letter you carried from Durant to Tucker?

A. That evidence was all given to the Committee on Commerce in reference to cotton operations. The letter to Tucker from Durant was advising Tucker to come on with me. They had an arrangement to get Tucker through the lines to assist them in getting cotton out. I had been applied to by one Haskell to assist them. I went to Mr. Dana, assistant Secretary of War, and told him the facts. He told me I had better go on and ascertain what they were doing.

Q. You have stated in your former testimony that a son of Governor Brownlow wrote a letter from Governor Johnson's table while he was in Tennessee. Which son of Governor Brownlow was that?

A. It was the one they called the colonel. I do not know either of them personally. I have met him once, I believe, but once only.

Q. Who was it told you that?

A. I do not know. I think it was Adamson, in reply to my question as to how he got possession of these letters. That was the first interview I had with him, two years ago. I think he told me the letters were taken from Mr. Johnson's table by one of Governor Brownlow's sons, and I think it was the colonel.

Q. Do you know where he is now?

A. I do not. In Tennessee, somewhere, I suppose.

Q. You stated that that letter you had in your possession?

A. Yes, sir; twice.

Q. Where is it now?

A. I do not know. I gave it back to Adamson.

Q. Why did you not keep it?

A. I did not want to make any use of it. I did not believe the letter was genuine.

Q. Did you not finally believe that it was genuine?

A. I did, after I carried it up to the White House and submitted the signature to Colonel Browning.

Q. Why did you not keep it?

A. I had not any money to invest in it. The man evidently wanted to make money out of it.

Q. You had the power as a government officer to take as important a letter as that, had you not? You have taken as important steps as to have taken that in the course of the four years you were connected with the secret service, have you not?

A. I did not keep it because the man allowed me to see it, and to take it, with the understanding beforehand that I would return it to him.

Q. And so you would not betray his confidence. Had you never betrayed anybody's confidence during your connection with the department before?

A. You have no right to make any insinuation of that sort.

Q. You did betray the confidence of Mrs. Cobb on one occasion when she got a pardon for you, did you not?

A. No; I do not think I did.

Q. Why did you not keep that letter?

A. I have said that I was under obligations to the man who brought it to me; that if I did not think proper to make use of it I would return it to him.

Q. What did he want you to do with it?

A. There was a talk at one time about impeachment. He thought it might be used if it was genuine.

Q. Did he want money for it?

A. No; he did not ask for money directly. My impression was that he wanted to get money for it.

Q. In answer to a previous question you stated that you had no money to spend on it; what did you mean by that?

A. He did not ask me directly for money, but I presume he expected to be paid.

Q. What did you mean by the remark that you had not any money to spend on it?

A. I meant just what I have stated, that I had not any money to spend for it.

Q. And yet you say that he did not ask for any money.

A. He talked about a position. I do not recollect what the position was. I drew the inference from his conversation that he intended either to get a position for him, or to give him money.

Q. When did you first see that letter?

A. It was a short time before the Cobb case came up.

Q. What was the occasion of your seeing it?

A. I do not know what his object was.

Q. Did he wish you to get him a place with it?

A. No; he probably thought that I would show the letter, and that if it was genuine he might be benefited with it in some manner; he did not know how. He did not make any demand at all. My impression was that he wanted to use it in some way for his benefit.

Q. Was he an old acquaintance of yours?

A. No, sir; I never saw him before in my life.

Q. Did he come to your room with it?

A. He did.

Q. Where were you when he came with it?

A. I was in my office.

Q. Did he make a bargain with you that you would not expose that letter before he showed it?

A. I told him that there should be no improper use to his detriment made of the letter.

Q. You told him that before he showed it?

A. Yes, sir; and then I asked him to let me see it. He did, and I had it in my possession for two or three weeks.

Q. Where was he during that time?

A. About the city here.

Q. Did you make a copy of it?

A. No, I think not. I did think I had a copy of it, and I have looked over my papers, but cannot find any.

Q. How many times did you read the letter?

A. I read it a good many times before I could understand it.

Q. Can you repeat that letter now?

A. No.

Q. Can you repeat any sentence of it?

A. No. I do not recollect any sentence in it.

Q. Can you repeat a word of it?

A. No; I do not think I can. I would not undertake to state what was in it.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. In your previous examination you spoke of a man by the name of Milburn who gave you information relative to certain telegrams. You also stated in answer to a question that you did not know his full name, but that you had it among some papers of yours, and would furnish it to the Committee. Are you prepared to furnish it now?

A. No. I had forgotten all about it, and do not recollect it. I have it among my papers, however. I think it is embodied in a report I made to the President.

Q. On your other examination you testified about a transaction with Colonel Sayres, late of the rebel army, a pardon agent for the State of Alabama, in which you said that you went with the agent into Adams & Co.'s express office in this city, and told him you wanted to look at his books; that he took you into his office, and introduced you to his clerk; that you found on examination of the books that a great number of pardons were sent between the 4th and 14th of November. How could you tell by an examination of those books that the packages sent contained pardons?

A. I will tell you how I could tell. H. D. Mears, who has an office in the same building with Adams's express company, opposite Willard's, and who, I think, is there now, came to me immediately after the Cobb difficulty, and stated that Colonel Sayres was getting a great many pardons, and making a great deal of money. I remarked that was not possible, because Colonel Sayres was appointed, at the instance of Governor Parsons, as the agent for the State, and that he would not receive money from individuals.

Q. How could you tell from Adams's express book that the packages sent were pardons?

A. As I stated in my previous testimony, I looked over the books with the clerk in the office. I asked him for the book containing the record of the packages sent C. O. D. He wanted to know for what time. I told him for the last ten or twelve days. I examined the book. It has printed head-lines, under which are to be written the name of the person sending the money, the name of the person to whom it is sent, the amount collected, and at the time there were lying right on the desk a package of large envelopes, with the stamp of the Attorney General outside. These envelopes he told me contained pardons, and they were all marked C. O. D.

Q. How many of that description did you see at that time?

A. I do not know. There were a good many.

Q. Will the books now show the same state of facts, and the number of pardons stated by you before?

A. They will. If the Committee will send for Adams & Company's package C. O. D. books, I think they will find the one to which I have referred correspond in its entries with my statements. I copied one leaf, which is published in my book, and you will find that the book corresponds exactly with the statement there.

Q. You state that you then went to the cash book of Adams & Co., showing the amount of money which came back, and to whom it was paid; and that you found bills collected of $100 for each pardon on some 1,300 or 1,400 pardons.

A. I said that was so, if he got paid for all the pardons sent.

Q. Could you now ascertain from these books, if you had an opportunity to examine them, the number of pardons he sent out?

A. That testimony—a portion of it—is based upon statements made to me by the clerk. By examining the books, however, you will see in the month of November the number of pardons sent.

Q. What books will show it?

A. In the first place, they have a book they call a collection book; that book is taken to the party to whom the money is sent, for his receipt. Then there is a package book, containing a list of all the packages sent, to whom sent. When the money is returned, after being collected, it does not go on that book; it goes on the cash book.

Q. These two books will show, then, what went out, and what money was returned for these packages?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. And these are the books you examined?

A. I do not think I stated in my testimony that there were 1,300 or 1,400 entries.

Q. Do you know of any of these pardon cases, in reference to which any circumstances have come to your knowledge fixing upon the President of the United States any corrupt action in regard to them?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you give a great deal of attention to the pardon business while you were connected with the secret service?

A. I did after the difficulty with Mrs. Cobb. After that I began the investigation. Previous to that I paid no attention to it.

Q. In any of these cases, either before or after the difficulty with Mrs. Cobb, have you any reason to believe—and if so, state the ground of your belief—that the President himself acted corruptly in regard to it, or any facts that criminated other persons, or indicated corrupt practices on their part in regard to pardons?

A. The only thing I ever saw that would seem to implicate the President was in the pardon signed for Mrs. Cobb and Mrs. Cobb's statements to me, which, however, I do not think are very reliable, as to her connection with the pardon business. I do not know that the President ever received pecuniarily one dollar for granting pardons, or that he ever received any other benefit from it. I think he was imposed upon very often, and induced to do things on the representation of others in reference to pardons.

Q. You stated in your testimony, when you were before the Committee in February last, that a large number of persons who had been arrested by you, and convicted by military commissions and courts-martial, had been pardoned and appointed to offices under the government. You were requested to furnish a list of those pardons, and of the offices to which they had been appointed. Are you prepared to do so now?

A. I think I furnished a list then. There are in my book the names of seventy or one hundred.

Q. Will you make out a list, and attach it to your testimony, of those pardoned who were appointed to offices under the government?

A. I can recognize some of them now in looking at my book. John Cahill is one. He was convicted, the first one among the bounty-jumpers, of forging enlistment papers, and was pardoned by the President.

Q. Do you know who made the appointment?

A. I only know what he told me, that Mr. Randall, a member of Congress from Philadelphia, brought him here, and introduced him, and that got his appointment. John Devlin is another; I think he holds a position now as internal revenue inspector, after he was convicted and sentenced to five or ten years in the penitentiary, but I think never went. He was pardoned before he left this city, having been convicted of forging enlistment papers. This was in the summer of 1865. Colonel Chipman was the Judge Advocate of the court.

Q. They were all convicted after President Johnson came in as President?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State where Devlin is now?

A. In Brooklyn.

Q. Do you know how he obtained his appointment?

A. I do not. I have never seen his commission. He has never told me himself that he held a position there, but I have understood from those who know him well that he is acting now as inspector of internal revenue. He was arrested in February, 1865, in New York, for forging soldiers' enlistment papers, was brought to Washington, brought before the court of which Colonel Chipman was Judge Advocate, convicted and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary, and to pay a ten thousand dollars fine.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was Devlin in the army previously?

A. He was an assessor of internal revenue.

Q. Was Cahill in the army?

A. No, sir. John Cahill was arrested in February on the charge of forging enlistment papers; was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. He holds a position now, as he told me himself, as inspector of internal revenue. There are many names indicated in this book, of which the initials only are given, and

I cannot recollect the names. William Edson forged an appointment from the Secretary of War, and when he was arrested he had in his possession a commission purporting to be signed by the Secretary of War, authorizing him to act as inspector of the military camps, which was found to be a forgery.

Q. Where did he reside?

A. At Elmira, New York.

Q. Was he in the army?

A. No, I think not. I do not think he was a soldier. He was brought to Washington, convicted, and got—this memorandum says—ten years. He was sent to the Clinton penitentiary, and afterwards pardoned by the President. I have never seen his commission, but I am satisfied that he now holds the office of inspector of internal revenue; that is, he goes round and looks after the distilleries. He lives in Elmira, and I suppose he is operating in Brooklyn.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know who recommended him?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know who made the appointment, or ordered it?

A. That I do not know. I know the appointments were made in the Treasury Department.

Q. Are any of these persons appointed to office other than by the Secretary of the Treasury?

A. I do not know that. There are one or two who are acting on the frontier as policemen, and all, or nearly all, of these appointments came from the Treasury Department.

Q. Do you know of any person, after conviction of crime, being appointed to an office by the President which required confirmation by the Senate?

A. I do not recollect any now.

Q. Then all you recollect are grades of appointment conferred by the department?

A. Yes, sir. Cahill said when he came here Mr. Randall introduced him to the President, that the President gave him a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, from whom he got his appointment.

Q. Do you know whether the President had a knowledge of Cahill's conviction?

A. I do not.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you know of persons employed in the Treasury or any other department of the government who were in the rebel army?

A. No, sir; I am not familiar with the present employés. I do not know any of them. I have been in Washington very little since I left the service—not more than three times, I believe.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know whether any man whose name you have mentioned, or whose name is in your book, received an appointment by the President directly?

A. No, I do not.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You say you believe the letter which the President is alleged to have written, and about which you have testified heretofore, can be procured. State how it can be procured, through what agency, and by what means.

A. I believe that the parties who have the letters in their possession could be induced to bring them here before this Committee.

Q. How?

A. I do not know how.

Q. Are you able to furnish to the Committee the means of getting them?

A. If I was going to procure the letters, I should send a man to subpœna Adamson, and if he would not come voluntarily, I would arrest him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What reason have you to believe that Adamson is a resident of Nashville?

A. Because he told me so.

Q. Have you ever had information of that kind from any other source, except from Adamson himself?

A. Yes; I have. I inquired about him from somebody, I don't know who it was, from Louisville, and he told me he knew such a man there.

Q. Do you know his business?

A. I think he told me he practised law.

Q. Have you ever had any correspondence with him?

A. I wrote him a letter after I was here, asking him to come here, but I received no reply. I heard from him, however, through the woman who purported to come from Nashville, that he was here.

Q. Did she profess to know him?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And represented him as having these letters still?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And proposing to dispose of them to you?

A. No; she did not propose to dispose of them to me, because I would not buy them; I would not have anything to do with the matter.

Q. What was the proposition?

A. The proposition was, that if she came here and brought the letter before the Committee, she wanted to know whether she would be questioned as to where she got it. I did not tell her, for I did not speak for the Committee.

Q. Did she want to make a speculation out of it?

A. She did not tell me she did; she would like to make her expenses, I guess.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did Mrs. Harris tell you she was sent to you by the party who had this letter?

A. She said she was; I have seen her twice.

Q. Where does she reside?

A. She boards somewhere in 15th street, Philadelphia. I saw her in the parlor at the Girard House both times when I was there. I think if she had any guaranty that she would not be locked up in the event of her refusing to testify, she would come here and bring the letters. The Committee would then be able to determine for themselves whether they were genuine or not. I am satisfied in my own mind that she has control of them.

Q. I understood you to say that she lived in Nashville?

A. She did tell me so when I saw her a week ago last Sunday.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you believe the story?

A. I believe she has control of this particular letter.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You knew the anxiety of the Committee to get possession of this letter; why, then, did you not inform the Committee of the state of facts, and enable them to take steps to obtain the letter?

A. I have never been called upon to do so. I received letters and telegrams from other parties about it.

Q. Who did you receive letters and telegrams from?

A. I received a telegram from a man by the name of Matchett, and I think one from my brother-in-law, who was here a few days.

Q. What's his name?

A. Baker. I think I also got a letter from Mr. Ashley, saying that I was wanted before the Committee.

Q. Did he state in that note that the Committee desired to examine you here?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you that letter with you?

A. I do not think I have. It was a little note written from Toledo.

Q. How long ago?

A. It was while he was in the West, before the Committee met.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Could you find Mrs. Harris in Philadelphia?

A. I have always stated that I could find these parties and produce the letters.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Why, then, have you not done so before this time?

A. Because I have never received a dollar to pay my expenses, even for the traveling I have already done at the direction of the Committee.

Q. Have you not been paid your per diem as a witness?

A. Not a dollar.

Q. Why not?

A. I applied for it, and they would not pay me.

Q. Who did you apply to?

A. I went to the sergeant-at-arms when I was here before, and asked him for money to pay my expenses, and he told me he could not pay me.

Q. How far had you traveled?

A. They sent a man out to Lansing, Michigan, and brought me here, and I never received a dollar for it.

Q. Did he find you at Lansing?

A. No. I had received information that a subpœna was out for me, and I passed the messenger on the way. He came on to Philadelphia and found me there. When he arrived at Lansing he had not money even to pay his own expenses. A friend of mine furnished him money, which I have refunded to him since.

Q. Did you apply to the clerk of this Committee for your per diem and mileage?

A. I asked for a discharge, and the gentleman told me it was not necessary. I then went to the sergeant-at-arms, who told me he could not pay me.

Q. Do you intend that we shall understand that you did not furnish this information to the Committee because you did not receive pay for your attendance?

A. Not at all. I intended to say that I could not afford, at my own personal expense to go around the country to obtain this information. I was not disposed to go to Nashville at my own expense to endeavor to get possession of these letters.

Q. Would it have cost you any more to inform the Committee of the visit of Mrs. Harris to Philadelphia?

A. Oh, no; I did not suppose that she had the letter. I supposed that if she came here she could obtain it, or that she had control of it.

Q. Why did you not inform the Committee, so that they could subpœna her?

A. I was under some obligation from the way in which she came to me in the first place, and from the way in which Adamson came to me. She was not willing to come on to Washington unless she had the assurance that she would not be questioned as to where she obtained the letters.

Q. Why was she not willing to give the letters to you and let you bring them on?

A. I do not know; she would not entrust them with me.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You stated in your previous examination that there were other persons present when you were endeavoring to decipher this letter of the President. Do you recollect who they were, or can you state where these persons can be found?

A. I gave the names of the persons who had seen the letters.

Q. What are their names?

A. Matchett has seen the letters. There has never been a time during the whole of this investigation that I was not willing to undertake to get the letters or to bring parties before the Committee who had them, so that they could see whether they were genuine or not, but I had no means, as I have stated, and could not undertake to do it unless my expenses were paid. Mr. Ashley, who is supposed to have been managing this thing, has written to me several times, urging me to get these letters and to ascertain whether they were genuine. I wrote him a letter on the 15th of this month setting forth fully my views in regard to the matter.

Q. Was there a man here by the name of Jones when you were examined here before?

A. There was.

Q. Had you no understanding with him as to how these letters were to be obtained?

A. I have. The private memorandum I now hand you will explain how.

Q. It seems from this memorandum that money was furnished you, or to Jones, to go to Nashville.

A. It was furnished to me; but before I got ready to go, the parties seemed to have the idea that I was trying to swindle them out of the money, and I said to Jones he had better take the money back and give me a receipt for it.

Q. Was it not the understanding that you or Jones were to go to Nashville without delay, and was not this money given to you for that purpose?

A. It was not the understanding that I should go; I do not know what understanding there was with Jones.

Q. What did you give that money to Jones for?

A. I returned the money; that was the money he gave me. It was given, as I understood, for the purpose of paying my expenses to Nashville. He came back, however, before I was ready to go, and stated that there was some dissatisfaction here; that the parties who paid the money were dissatisfied, and were afraid they had been swindled.

Q. How long was that after the money had been paid to you?

A. It was a good while after; it must have been two months.

Q. Then what reason have you for not undertaking to get possession of that letter, after the money was in your hands to pay your expenses in going after it?

A. Immediately after I got that money I wrote to Nashville to this man Adamson for the purpose of ascertaining whether he was there. I do not want to go down to Nashville on a tom-fool's errand. I did not receive any answer. In the mean time Mr. Ashley became dissatisfied because the letters had not been obtained, and because there had not been anything done. I found there was so much dissatisfaction about it that I returned the money to Colonel Jones.

Q. Does this paper set forth the facts correctly in reference to the demand being made by Jones on you for the money?

A. I presume so. I do not know where he got the money except what the receipt says.

Q. This is simply a receipt for so much money, is it not?

A. It is a receipt for the return of a thousand dollars to Colonel Jones handed to me, and it states where the money came from.

A. And this money was given to you to pay your expenses to Nashville?

A. Certainly; I do not deny that.

Q. And it was not demanded from you for some months after it was understood you were to go to Nashville?

A. It was demanded from me within three days, but I did not pay it back. I did not wish to go to Nashville without knowing first whether this party was there, and spend the money required for the trip for nothing. I knew the parties would be dissatisfied and demand the money back, and I could not afford to lose the cost of the trip. Before I had a chance to do anything the money was demanded, and I paid it back.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Who did this money come from?

A. I got it from Colonel Jones.

Q. Who is he?

A. A gentleman living at Lansing, Michigan.

Q. Where did he say he got it?

A. I do not recollect. I think he got it from some friend of his.

Q. Who did he say he got it from?

A. I do not recollect now.

Q. Where did you understand it came from?

A. I do not know that I ever asked any question about it.

Q. Did you not understand where it came from?

A. No more than what is contained in the paper. It purports to come from E. B. Ward.

Q. Where were you when it was deposited with you?

A. It was left for me in Philadelphia in my absence.

Q. You said that Mr. Ashley was dissatisfied; what do you mean by that?

A. I only know that Colonel Jones told me that Mr. Ashley had stated to him that he was dissatisfied; that he was afraid the money had been paid and nothing done, and [illegible] efforts being made to get the letters.

Q. Did you understand that Mr. Ashley had anything to do with the money?

A. Oh, not at all.

Q. What business had he, then, to be dissatisfied about it?

A. That is a matter for him to state. What business he had, I do not know anything about it. I understood that he complained of nothing having been done.

Q. Complained of whom?

A. I do not know who he complained of.

Q. When was this money furnished to you?

A. I do not recollect; it must have been a month ago, and perhaps longer; I do not recollect.

Q. Did not you state that you had it nearly two months in your hands?

A. It may have been two months ago.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You stated in your former testimony that this letter was seen by two other persons besides yourself. Who were they?

A. One was Charles H. Caruthers, and the other a man by the name of C. G. Watkins. Caruthers, I understood, was formerly a clerk in the Treasury Department, and was dismissed.

Q. How did he come to know anything about the letters?

A. He professed to be a friend of Adamson's. I do not know where he is now. I think I understood Watkins that he lived somewhere in Maryland.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21, 1867.

WILLIAM E. CHANDLER sworn and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Be good enough to state whether you were assistant Secretary of the Treasury during the first session of the Thirty-ninth Congress.

A. I was from June 17, 1865, to the present time.

Q. Has your attention ever been called to a list of the names of appointments reported to have been made in the internal revenue service during the recess of the Senate in 1865, not sent into that body during the next following session?

A. My attention has been called to the list, but only casually, since the subject has been investigated by Congress.

Q. Can you state the reason why those names were not sent in?

A. I have no doubt the names are those stated by the Secretary of the Treasury in his report on the subject to Congress. It was my impression, at the time my attention was first called to the subject, that the omission to send the names to the next session of Congress was entirely accidental.

Q. Were you not called upon during that session, by some of the parties embraced in the list, with the request that their names might be sent in, or for the purpose of enquiring why they had not been sent in?

A. I do not remember that my personal attention was called to the subject, as suggested.

Q. Are you acquainted with a man by the name of Selfridge, whose name you will find upon that list as one who was appointed revenue collector for the eleventh collection district of Pennsylvania?

A. I may have seen him at my office, but do not now remember. I recollect that the case of Selfridge and Peter McGough were the subject of conversation between the Secretary and Commissioner of Internal Revenue, in my presence; but all those cases, when attention was called to them, were attended to by the Secretary and Commissioner, and I had very little to do with them.

Q. You were present, then, at a conversation in regard to this very place, during that session, between the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, if I understood you correctly?

A. I remember such conversation, but when it was I do not now recollect. It is my impression that it was after Congress had called attention to the question.

Q. Mr. Selfridge states, upon examination before the Committee, that he called on you during the session of Congress, about the 5th or 6th of June, invited your attention to the case, and enquired why it had not been sent in, and asked whether it would be sent in, or something to that effect.

A. If he states that he called my attention to the case, I have no reason to doubt that he states the fact correctly.

Q. Would you thereupon have directed the attention of the Secretary to it?

A. I would have done so naturally, or else have requested him to see the Commissioner.

Q. State, if you please, what has been the practice of the department in case of appointments made to fill vacancies during the recess, in reference to their presentation to the Senate.

A. The general practice was for the Treasury Department to transmit the names with blank nominations for the President to sign, to the Executive mansion, where they were taken up by the President to the Senate at his convenience.

Q. Did you keep a record of the appointments made during the recess at your office?

A. Certainly.

Q. Does the President keep such a record himself, in case of appointments made by him?

A. I do not know positively. My impression is that he keeps a record of the names sent by him to the Senate, but I think he does not keep a record of the appointments made during the recess, but leaves that to the department. I am not certain, however, about the latter fact.

Q. He issues the commissions under the Constitution, does he not?

A. The commission is prepared at the department; he signs it and sends it back, and whether or not he keeps a record during the recess, I am not certain. I think he keeps a record of the commissions signed during the sessions of the Senate.

Q. Do you know whether he has the means of information in his own hands with regard to appointments made by himself in the revenue service?

A. With reference to appointments made during the recess, I am not certain that it is his practice to keep a record. I do not know whether he does or not.

Q. Why did you refer a gentleman, who called upon you in a case of this sort, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue?

A. The Commissioner is executive head of the internal revenue department, and ought to take the chief management of questions relating to the appointment of assessors and collectors; my office being that of assistant to the Secretary, it was the natural direction for me to give a person making that inquiry.

Q. Has he anything properly to do with the question of sending in nominations, where appointments had been made during the recess of the Senate, for confirmation? Is there anything requiring him to refresh the memory of the President on that subject?

A. The old practice was for the record of appointments in the bureau to be kept at the Commissioner's office. Within a year the papers relating to appointments have been transferred to the Secretary's office. This was done for convenience, by direction of the Secretary of the Treasury—the same record, however, being kept at the internal revenue office. While these records were exclusively in the Commissioner's office, it was his duty to call attention to the omission of anything required to be done in reference to these appointments.

Q. Did you refer any parties from Pennsylvania, making such application, to Senator Cowan, as the controlling spirit, having the management of that branch of the business for the State of Pennsylvania?

A. Not to my recollection; certainly no one making such an enquiry as that made by Mr. Selfridge.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. In Senate executive document No. 3, and Senate executive document No. 33, first session of the Thirty-ninth Congress, are lists or statements of officers, assessors of internal revenue, and assistant assessors, who were permitted to enter on their duties without taking the oath known as the test oath. Will you furnish similar lists of the same officers, with a statement of the time each officer was permitted to continue in office, the time up to which each was paid, when paid, the amount paid each, the steps taken by the President and other officers to displace each of such officers, with the date thereof.

A. I will do so.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you have any conversation with the Secretary in regard to any other of the officers named in that list about the appointments?

A. I do not remember that I did. I desire to say, in reference to my want of recollection in reference to the particular ten cases mentioned in the list before me, that when the subject was first called to my attention, I satisfied myself that the omission to send in names was accidental, and therefore made no further investigation of the subject.

Q. When you say that, do you refer to the omission of the Secretary to send them to the President, or the omission of the President to send them to the Senate?

A. I refer to the omission to place them before the Senate, whether it was an omission at the Treasury Department or at the Executive mansion.

Q. And this, although you do not know whether the President keeps a register or not.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What are the facts, or what knowledge have you which led you to that conclusion?

A. It rests upon the inquiries that I made at the time, and my conversation with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Q. I understood you to say, in your previous examination, that you did not know personally about these cases, and had no personal recollection in regard to them.

A. I do not think I made that statement; if so, I would like to have it read I will also add that at the time this subject was started I made particular inquiry with reference to the omission to send to the Senate the name of Edward Wallace, naval officer at Philadelphia, and E. Read Meyer, surveyor at Philadelphia; and the fact that they, being republicans, were reappointed on the 3d of August, 1866, although their names had been omitted to be sent to the Senate, confirmed me in my general impression that all or nearly all the omissions had been accidental.

Q. Was this inquiry made after the adjournment of the Senate on the 28th of July?

A. I only made this inquiry after Congress agitated the subject of these omissions, which I think was last winter.

Q. You did not know anything about these cases during the session, of which you have any recollection?

A. I had no recollection of any of these cases until Congress agitated the subject, except the case of Peter McGough, and possibly that of Selfridge, in reference to which I think I had a conversation with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue before that time.

Q. I wish to know of you whether the cases of Wallace and Meyer were not cases of great notoriety, well known to the department during that session?

A. If I knew of the omission of their names prior to the time when Congress raised the question of such omissions, the fact now entirely escapes my recollection. Their names were omitted, but they were reappointed as a matter of course, and the subject passed from my recollection until my attention was again called to the cases at a later period.

Q. Congress adjourned on the 28th of July, and Mr. Wallace's appointment was on the 3d of August. This omission, therefore, supposed to have been accidental, was discovered within a very few days after the adjournment of Congress?

A. I judge so from the fact that reappointments were then made.

Q. Would not the same diligence on the part of the department have discovered it a week or two earlier?

A. I will explain how I think the omission occurred. It is my impression that the name of Collector Thomas, and also the names of Wallace and Meyer, were sent from the Treasury Department to the Executive mansion with other names, and the two latter names were understood at the Treasury Department to be before the President during the last week of the session. At the department we could not tell until the session had actually terminated but what the President, at perhaps a late hour of the session, would send the names to the Senate, and therefore did not call his attention to them. Immediately after the termination of the session, the department of course ascertained what names sent to the President had not been sent to the Senate, and took steps to fill the offices

Q. If these names were sent in to the President a week or ten days before the adjournment of the Senate, what is your reason for affirming that, in your judgment, the omission was an accidental one on his part, the department having called especial attention to these cases so early as you state?

A. There was, during the last few weeks of the session, an accumulation of names at the Executive mansion, sent from the Treasury Department, and I presume from the other departments. The President, I noticed, from day to day sent names to the Senate up to the close of the session. After the adjournment of Congress, finding that a few names had been omitted to be sent to the Senate, I preferred to conclude that the omissions were accidental rather than to attribute them to any other motive, particularly as Meyer and Wallace were reappointed as a matter of course, without objection on the part of the President, a few days later.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Who was private secretary of the President at that time?

A. I think Colonel Edward Cooper.

Q. Are you aware of the fact that Mr. Cooper, on the last days of that session, was away from some cause; that these names were in his hands and not presented to the President at all?

A. I do not recollect that fact.

Q. Is it not a fact that these names were locked up in Mr. Cooper's desk?

A. I have forgotten that fact if it was so. I know I frequently spoke to the secretary about the Philadelphia appointments, and I think two or three other customs appointments of importance, and urged him to see that they were sent in seasonably, and of course noticed that these two were the only important omissions. The customs appointments came more particularly under my charge. I exercised the same jurisdiction over them, up to the fall of 1865, that I think the Commissioner of Internal Revenue ought to exercise over internal revenue appointments.

Q. You remember the fact that Colonel Cooper was admitted as a member of Congress?

A. I do; and that recalls to my mind the fact that he was absent from the Executive mansion during the last few days of the session of Congress; but Colonel Moore was there, I think, assisting the President in forwarding names to the Senate.

Q. Do you recollect that the names spoken of were overlooked, or locked up in Colonel Cooper's desk, during the change of private secretaries?

A. I recollect generally that many matters were omitted to be attended to through Colonel Cooper's admission to Congress.

Q. Was the name of Mr. Wallace sent by the Treasury Department to the President?

A. I am quite sure that it was.

Q. How many of the names that were not sent to the Senate, and so marked on this list, were sent to the President; and how many remained at the Treasury Department without being sent?

A. I think a name was sent from the department to the President for every vacant place; that was the intention of the department.

Q. Have you any positive recollection of that fact?

A. I am very confident that such was the fact.

Q. If you can ascertain that fact positively from your records, please examine them in that respect.

A. I will do so.

Q. Can you state how many names on the other list were sent by the department to the President, and how many remained at the department not sent to him?

A. There is a list of ten internal revenue officers and sixteen officers of the customs, appointed during the recess, whose names were not submitted to the Senate. Of these, several died, some were removed, one or two could not qualify; and as to the others, their names were, I am confident, sent to the President.

Q. Did any of these names go to the Senate and the Senate fail to act upon them?

A. None of the names on the two lists mentioned. There are other lists of officers appointed after rejection by the Senate, and officers reappointed where no action had been had, and in relation to which no questions have been asked.

Q. After names were sent to the Senate, how many are there that the Senate failed to act upon?

A. I shall be obliged to prepare a statement from the records, or the President's report, before giving an answer to that question.

Q. Are you aware of any design or purpose of the President to omit sending any of these names to the Senate?

A. I am not.

Q. From the examination and investigation which you made of the subject afterwards, did you become satisfied in your own mind that the omissions were accidental?

A. In reference to the names on the two lists alluded to, I have stated that I did become satisfied that the omissions were accidental.

Q. Is that your opinion still?

A. It is.

Q. Do you know how many of that list of ten or a dozen persons are republicans?

A. I do not know the politics of all of them; I see many republicans and one or two rebels; I do not notice any one that I know as being a democrat.

Q. Who are the rebels?

A. W. Y. Leitch, surveyor of Charleston, South Carolina, and William J. Phillips, second district of Texas, neither of whom could qualify by taking the oath. There was some question whether Otis Fairbanks, of St. Marks, Florida, could take the oath, and I believe he declined doing it.

Q. Were their names furnished to the President?

A. I am not certain whether they were sent to the President or not.

Q. What is your politics?

A. I am a radical republican.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. In reply to a question put by Mr. Eldridge as to whether it was the intention of the President to withhold these names, you qualified your answer by limiting it to the two lists. Did you so qualify it because you had knowledge or information in reference to any other act of the President connected with appointments?

A. I did not qualify my answer because I had in my mind any cases where the President intended to withhold names from the Senate, but because my examination had been with reference to these two lists; and considering the multitude of appointments within the last two years, I thought it perhaps safer not to make my answer too broad.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know of any case where the President intentionally withheld a name from the Senate?

A. I do not recollect any case where I have reason to believe the President intended to withhold the name of any officer from the Senate who had been appointed.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Is it not a fact that in the last days of a session of Congress business presses upon the President, or that he has a large amount of it to do?

A. Such is the fact.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Is it not the practice of the department, when vacancies are to be filled by nomination to the Senate, that the department itself furnishes the message of the President to the Senate all prepared, with the exception of the signature and date?

A. That is the practice; and with reference to the Treasury Department, I think that nominations for all vacancies were early and seasonably sent to the Senate.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. The list you are to furnish the Committee will state in detail whether such is the fact?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it the practice of your department to send ordinarily a brief of the nominations of your department with the blank message?

A. The recommendations themselves, and a full brief of the same were usually retained at the department. It was customary to mention on a little slip, or in the letter of the Secretary transmitting the nominations, some of the parties recommending their nomination.

Q. In cases of contest, did you furnish the briefs of recommendations and original papers to the President?

A. Not ordinarily, unless the President called for them. He frequently sent for all the papers in a case in which he felt an interest.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. The cases sent by you from the department indicate the appointee the department would prefer, do they not?

A. The sending of a name from the department was an indication of the opinion of the Secretary, unless the sending of the same had been ordered by the President, which was frequently the case during the year 1866.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Can you state whether you have the means of informing the Committee whether or not, in any of the cases mentioned in the two lists before referred to, the President sent to the department for a brief of the papers or for the papers?

A. I cannot state without examination, and perhaps not even then. I will ascertain the fact if it is in my power to do so.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Has it not always been the case that the Senate has adjourned with some nominations unacted upon, and others omitted to be sent by the President?

A. Except in these cases I never made special inquiry, and have no knowledge upon the subject.

Q. Did you not see a report of the names that came over from 1864, after Congress had adjourned previous to Mr. Lincoln's death?

A. I do not remember it if I saw it.

Q. In regard to this record which was previously kept at the internal revenue department, was not the order transferring it to the Secretary made because it was found that omissions and errors had occurred?

A. I think not. I think the business of removals and appointments had become so large, had been taken so entirely out of the hands of the Commissioner, and taken so exclusively within the control of the Secretary and President, that it was found very inconvenient to send to the Commissioner's office for the papers, and much more convenient to have them where the Secretary could see them immediately when called for.

Q. Do you recollect that it was found that errors had occurred from the inconvenience of having the record kept out of the Treasury building?

A. I do not recollect—Mr. Creecy, the appointment clerk, would know, and if he stated the fact I would believe it; but I am very confident the reason why the transfer was made was because of the accumulation of business caused by the great number of removals and appointments.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You referred to two appointments of rebels made during the recess and embraced in this list. State, if you please, whether they had been commissioned and entered upon the performance of their duties before the commencement of the session?

A. Mr. Leitch, the surveyor of Charleston, entered upon his duties; whether the others did or not, I cannot state; but it is a matter of history that many officers who could not take the oath did enter upon the discharge of their duties, and receive their commissions, without taking the oath.

Q. Was there no oath administered in these cases?

A. When appointments were made, the printed form of oath required by law was sent to the appointee, and he returned it, having subscribed to and taken as much of it as he could. In no case, I think, was any officer allowed to perform his duties without taking the oath of allegiance.

Q. How long did these persons remain in office?

A. I have a general recollection of the course that was taken with the office-holders at the South who could not take the oath. I am unable to state in reference to the three mentioned, except as to Mr. Leitch, who remained in office till some time after the meeting of the Senate, when it was determined to put out all such men and appoint officers who could take the oath.

Q. Were there any appointments made in these cases during the session after the removals?

A. I think in nearly every case new nominations were sent to the Senate.

Q. Do you know of any officers in the confederate army, or known rebels, who are now in the Treasury Department.

A. I do not. The only possible qualification to my answer might arise from the fact that, in addition to the appointment of men who could not take the test oath, and which are on record, the agents of the department engaged in the collection of cotton at the South may have employed, temporarily, men who were rebels to assist them; but I am not aware of any such employment which resulted in what might be called an appointment.

Q. There was no such appointments by the Treasury Department in Washington?

A. I remember no case where any confederate officer or known rebel was so employed. The case of D. Tullar is fully stated in a report to Congress. I remember no other questionable case.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Do you know of any case where parties who had been arrested and convicted of offence against the government, during the war, were appointed to places in the Treasury Department, at Washington or elsewhere?

A. It is an immense department, and it is impossible to say what may have been done accidentally. I remember no such case.

Q. I will ask you in regard to one Devlin, who was sentenced to imprisonment ten years, and to pay a fine of $10,000, who was for some time confined in the Old Capitol prison, here in Washington, whether he has been appointed inspector of customs in the city of New York?

A. I know of John Devlin as having been guilty of bounty frauds; of his being connected with internal revenue frauds in New York, and of his being a great rascal. I do not know of his holding any office under government since his conviction.

Q. If he had held the position of inspector of customs in New York, would it have come to your knowledge?

A. It might not. There may have been very bad men there in office without my knowing it.

Q. Would the fact of such an appointment as that of inspector of customs in New York have been reported to your department?

A. Any appointment of inspector would have been reported to the Treasury Department by the collector, and would have been approved by the Secretary.

Q. Please ascertain whether he has held such an office.

A. I will do so.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Should it have been approved before he entered upon his duties?

A. It should have been before he entered on his duties. These appointments in the custom-house are entrusted to the collector, who reports lists of names, which are generally approved, as a matter of course. The appointment of John Devlin might have been approved without its being noticed that he was the man in question. I will ascertain whether such was the fact.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Wednesday, May 22, 1867.

L. B. BAKER sworn and examined.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. In Lansing, Michigan.

Q. Were you in the employment of the government during the war?

A. I was.

Q. In what capacity?

A. For the first two years of the war I was with General Baker, in this city, in the secret service as a detective. I then enlisted in the first District of Columbia cavalry.

Q. Were you one of the party in pursuit of Booth?

A. I was.

Q. Were you present at the time he was shot?

A. I was. I had charge of the party until we arrived at Belle Plain.

Q. How far is that from where you found Booth?

A. We found Booth three miles from Port Royal, which is twenty-five or thirty miles from Belle Plain.

Q. Who had command then?

A. Colonel Conger. When we arrived at Belle Plain, in the night, I told him—he being an experienced cavalry officer, and being acquainted with the country—that he had better take charge of the party, and I gave up the command to him.

Q. Are you the man known as Lieutenant Baker?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did you first come across Booth?

A. At Garrett's farm, three miles beyond Port Royal, in Anne Arundel county, I believe. I do not know the name of the town.

Q. Did you see Booth shot?

A. I saw him fall. I was at the door of the barn, and had the lock in my hand. The moment the fire was lit in the barn I opened the door in order to give him an opportunity to come out. Colonel Conger lit the fire from the side of the barn. I had charge of the door all the time we were there, and had all the conversation with Booth before he was shot.

Q. State the conversation that you had with him.

A. The cavalry surrounded the barn, and I had one of the Garrett boys in charge, whom I supposed to be an accomplice of Booth's. He told me he had locked them in, for he supposed they were desperate cases, and did not know what crimes they had been guilty of. I told him he must go into the barn and demand their surrender and the surrender of their arms. He protested that he knew nothing of them, and that he was afraid to go in. I told him he must go in, and I shoved him in. Then I heard a low conversation in the barn, and heard some one, whom I supposed to be Booth, say: "Damn you, for you have betrayed me." Then he said, "Get out of here." Garrett came back to the door and said, "Let me out, he is going to shoot me." I said, "You cannot come out till you bring out the arms." He said, "He will not let me have them; let me out quick." I opened the door, and he dodged out as though he was afraid Booth was going to shoot him. I shut the door very quickly, fearing that Booth might make a break from the door. Then young Garrett said, "Captain, I will do anything for you, except to go in there again. He is desperate, and will shoot me." Colonel Conger came up, and we decided to dismount our men. We had decided to fire the barn, and therefore we had to dismount the men, because the horses would not stand the fire. That occupied half an hour, for we had to dismount the men two by two, so as not to leave the line unguarded. I remarked to Conger that I would make the proposition for Booth to surrender. That being agreed upon, I addressed those who were in the barn—told them that we had fifty men around the barn, all armed, and demanded their surrender.

Q. Was it a fact that you had fifty men?

A. We had but twenty-five, but I made the number larger in order to intimidate them. The first that I heard said was, "Well, Captain, that is damned hard. This man is an innocent man, and it is hard to burn his barn. Give a lame man a chance. Draw up your men before the door, and I will come out and fight the whole command." I told him we did not come there to fight him, but to take him prisoner—that we had him, and that he had better surrender like a man. He then said, "Give me five minutes to consider." I said, "Very well." I waited for what I thought was five minutes. Then I said I could wait no longer, and that the time for action had come. Then he said, "Captain, there is a man here who wants very much to surrender." I said, "Very well, let him hand out his arms that he brought across the river." (I had ascertained that Herold had carried a carbine.) I then unlocked the door—keeping the lock in the hasp—and told Booth that the man could come out, provided he brought a carbine and one pistol. Then I heard a conversation between the parties inside, and heard Booth cursing Herold, telling him to go, that he did not want him to remain, and calling him a damned coward. Then Herold came to the door and rapped, and said, "Let me out, quick; I do not know anything about this man, he is a desperate character, and is going to shoot me." I said, "You cannot come out until you bring your arms." He said, "He will not let me." Then Booth said, "Captain, the arms are mine, and I shall keep them. This man is guilty of no crime." Conger came up and said I had better let him out, that he would be one less to fight. I opened the door and Herold came out. Captain Doherty, who had charge of the cavalry, soon came up and took him in charge. I put my back against the door again, and put the lock on. Then Conger said, "Let us fire the barn immediately." Then I addressed the person in the barn, and told him we should fire the barn in two minutes if he did not come out. He again made the proposition to come out and fight the whole command, and said, "Captain, I consider you to be a brave and honorable man; I have had half a dozen opportunities to shoot you, but I did not do it."

Q. Did he know you?

A. No; but he called me "Captain," supposing I had charge of the party. There were no names mentioned at all. I repeated that we did not come to fight him, but to take him, and that we should take him. I had been holding a candle in my hand until after Herold came out, when Conger said it was presumptuous in me to hold the candle, as Booth might shoot me. I set the candle down about twenty feet from the door. We failed to make any soldiers stand in the light of the candle; but Garrett and I were there all the time. I knew that Booth intended to shoot any one who made any approach to the barn to fire it, but we did not expect to do it there. Finally, I told him we should wait no longer. Then he said, "Well, my brave boys, you can prepare a stretcher for me." Conger came to me and said, "We will fire the barn." I said, "Yes, the quicker the better." When Conger was firing the barn, the last words that Booth said were, "One more stain on the old banner." I opened the door quickly, and the first I saw of Booth he was leaning against a hay mow, with a crutch under each arm, and a carbine resting in this way at his hip. He was in the act of getting up from the hay. He did get up, and dropped one crutch, and started towards the fire. He got within six or eight feet of the side of the barn, and peered all about as though he should like to see who fired the barn, having the carbine poised. Then he seemed to give it up. It was an old tobacco house, and there was a table lying there bottom side up. He turned to throw the table on the fire, but he dropped it, and turned to look around the barn. The fire was rolling over the roof. He saw the door open, and he turned and dropped the other crutch and started towards the door.

Q. How started?

A. With a kind of limping, halting jump. He used his leg, instead of the crutch. The last two or three steps he took were on his leg. He came within twelve feet of the door, when I heard the report of a shot. I was then standing outside of the door, waiting for him to come out.

Q. Were you nearer him than any one else?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Who shot him?

A. I learned afterwards it was Sergeant Corbett. He shot him through a crevice in the barn. Booth was just between Corbett and me; and it was remarked afterwards that if he had missed Booth, he might have shot me. There were strict orders given against shooting at all. Colonel Conger had given every man the order, a number of times, not to shoot, under any circumstances.

Q. What was Booth doing at the time he was shot?

A. Booth was in the act of coming towards the door, with a carbine in one hand and a pistol in the other.

Q. Where was he shot?

A. Through the neck. The bullet perforated both sides of his collar. He gave a spring when he was shot, and fell down. I jumped in, and while I was getting to him he partly turned over and appeared as though he was going to get up again. I caught him by his arms and went down on him. I did not know that he was mortally wounded, and I thought I would secure him, but I soon saw he was powerless. Conger came in; I turned up the wounded man's head and said, "It is Booth, certainly." I supposed, at the time, that Conger shot him, and I said, "What on earth did you shoot him for?" Said he, "I did not shoot him." Then the idea flashed on my mind that if he did, it had better not be known. I turned again and said, "All right." Said he, "I did not shoot him" "Well," said I, "the man who did goes back under arrest." All this took place very quickly. I picked up the carbine which Booth had dropped. The pistol he grasped in one hand so tightly that I had to twist to get it out. I took the pistol. Captain Doherty came in and took the carbine and a knife out of Booth's belt. At that time Garrett rushed in, and said, "Boys, let us extinguish this fire." The soldiers ran and threw furniture and stuff on the fire, but it was too late. Then Colonel Conger, myself, and two soldiers carried Booth out of the barn and laid him by a tree. I had a cup in my pocket, and I took it out and called for some water. I took Booth's head upon my knee and threw some water in his face. His mouth being open I poured some in his mouth. He blew it out and opened his eyes. I gave him some more water, and he made his lips go as though he would say something. Conger was there and put his ear to Booth's lips. He said, "Tell mother," and then he swooned away again. Conger left, and Booth shortly came to again. I was washing his face all the time. He said, in a whisper, "Tell mother I die for my country." Then I saw his wound. That was the first time I saw it. I saw that he was shot in the neck. The wound did not bleed, and I did not know the nature of it. The fire was then burning rapidly, and it became so warm that we had to take him away. We carried him to the piazza of the house.

Q. You were the first person with Booth after he fell?

A. Yes.

Q. Did he speak before any one else came up?

A. No, sir; he made no audible sounds at all till he was taken out of the barn.

Q. Was there any necessity for shooting him in the manner he was shot?

A. No, sir.

Q. Could you have taken him without that?

A. Yes. It was all arranged. I was sure of taking him.

Q. While he was under the tree, did you sit down by him and hold him against your breast?

A. I did.

Q. Did he say anything to you there?

A. Only what I have stated in regard to telling his mother. Conger detected before I did that he wanted to speak. He put his ear to Booth's mouth, and Booth said, "Tell mother." After that he said the same, with this addition, that he died for his country.

Q. Did he repeat it more than once?

A. He said it after he got to the piazza

Q. Who carried him to the piazza?

A. Colonel Conger and myself, assisted by one or two soldiers.

Q. After he was carried to the piazza what did you do with him?

A. I called for some water. The Garrett girls got some water and ice in a cup, and some cloths. Colonel Conger tore open Booth's collar and took a diamond pin out of his undershirt, and fixed him so that I could wash him. I then saw that the ball had passed through his neck. I washed the wound, and washed his face. He opened his eyes and seemed to realize what was going on. The first words he uttered were, "Kill me, oh kill me." I said, "No, Booth." When I said "Booth," he seemed surprised, opened his eyes, and looked about. It had begun to be daylight then. The sun was rising. I said, "No, Booth, we do not wish to kill you;" that we hoped his wound was not mortal, and that he might yet live. He repeated the request that I should kill him. Then Conger came. He was kneeling down on one side of him and I on the other side. I spoke to Conger in reference to Captain Jett, from whom we got the information at Bowling Green, fifteen miles beyond, that he had piloted Booth and Herold over the river. When I mentioned Jett's name Booth opened his eyes and said, "Did Jett betray me?" Then I saw that I was making unnecessary developments, and I said, "Oh, never mind anything about Jett." He seemed to be paralyzed below the wound. His hands lay by his sides. He said, "My hands." I took up one of his hands and washed it in ice-water.

He looked at it and said, "Useless, useless," and he dropped it. The first thing he said after we got him on the piazza was to repeat the request that we should tell his mother he died for his country, and that he had done what he thought was for the best. This he said in a low whisper.

Q. Did he say anything about not having designed to assassinate Mr. Lincoln?

A. Nothing of the kind that I heard.

Q. Did he not, during the time he lay there, say to you that he had not contemplated assassination till the night it was done?

A. No, sir; nothing of the kind.

Q. Have you not said that he did say to you something of the kind?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he say anything in addition to what you have stated?

A. Nothing, except that he wished his mother should know he did what he thought was for the best, and what he said in reference to Herold—that he was guilty of no crime. That is the nearest he came to admitting that there was any crime about it.

Q. Did he repeat that more than once?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he speak of any one else as having committed no crime?

A. No, sir.

Q. State all that you heard him say.

A. I have stated it in substance, as near as I can recollect it. I gave my statement to Judge Holt, on the gunboat, before I gave up charge of the body.

Q. Were you sworn on the trial of Mrs. Surratt?

A. I was not. My testimony has never been taken, except before Judge Holt, and that has been disposed of.

Q. What do you mean by that?

A. It cannot be found. I was the first who gave any evidence in the case. General Baker took me down into the cabin of the gunboat, and I gave my evidence to Judge Holt. Colonel Conger was present and assented to its truth.

Q. Was it a sworn statement?

A. It was.

Q. When was it taken?

A. The morning I came up with the body.

Q. Did Judge Holt keep your testimony?

A. He did. I supposed it went on the files, but when the subject was up before the Committee of Claims in relation to the distribution of the reward, it could not be found.

Q. Do you know any reason why you were not called as a witness on the conspiracy trial?

A. I do not. I expected to be. I was summoned as a witness, but was informed, after I got here, that I was not wanted.

Q. Was there any reason assigned?

A. None; and I was very much surprised at it.

Q. You remained with Booth until he died?

A. I did; and I had charge of his body for the next twenty-four hours.

Q. Did he die in your arms or leaning against you?

A. He died leaning against a mattress which the girls at the Garrett house got and laid on the piazza. We doubled it up and laid his head upon it.

Q. Have you stated all that you remember he said during that time?

A. I have, substantially. I may not have stated all that he said, or the order in which he said it.

Q. And he did not say anything about not intending to do it until the day before it was done?

A. He never made any such remark. While we were getting the diary out of his pocket, and turning him over so as to get at it—Conger being anxious to get to Washington as soon as possible—Booth groaned and said: "Oh, kill me." He saw what we were doing.

Q. Who took the memorandum book from his pocket?

A. Colonel Conger. He looked at it and handed it to me. I looked at it, and then we put it in a handkerchief with other things.

Q. Did you open the book?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you make any examination of its contents?

A. Nothing, except to run the leaves over.

Q. What did you find in it?

A. I did not examine it, only to see that it was a diary.

Q. Were there any loose papers or pictures in it?

A. I did not see any.

Q. Did you open the back part of it, where the pocket was?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you discover any leaves torn out of it?

A. Yes; I thought there were some leaves gone.

Q. How many leaves should you judge were gone?

A. I could not say.

Q. Have you seen the account of the diary published in this morning's Chronicle?

A. Yes, sir. In regard to one leaf that was absent, I found it in Virginia about ten days after the capture. I was sent back by the Secretary of War to get information and to procure witnesses. A darkey, named Lucas, told me that Booth came to his house on a Sunday night and demanded that he should hitch up his team and take him to Port Conway, on the Rappahannock. He told the darkey that if he did not do so he would shoot him; and he put back his coat and showed that he was armed with two pistols and a bowie knife, while Herold had a carbine. While there, Booth sat down rather moodily, took out a little book and wrote in it on one of the leaves. He tore out the leaf, enclosed some money in it, and told Lucas to take it to Dr. Stewart in the morning. Having heard this, I was anxious to get hold of the note, and I went to Stewart and told him who I was, and what I wanted, at the same time assuring him that perhaps the note might clear him of any complicity with the conspirators. He said he thought it would, for it was a very saucy note, and he said I could have it. He went up stairs after the note, and came down with it in his hand. His wife came up and inquired what was the matter. He said there was nothing the matter, except that he was going to let Lieutenant Baker have the note which Booth sent him. She took it out of his hand and said there was no use in my having it, that it would be only getting his name in the paper, and that I could get a copy of it. I sat down to copy it, she reading it to me, but I got an opportunity of taking the note, and I took it out of her hand, at which she was very much exasperated.

Q. Is that the note which has been published, as addressed to Dr. Stewart?

A. Yes, sir. She either tore off or scratched out the address, saying she did not want to get his name in the paper.

Q. What did you do with that note?

A. I brought it to General Baker's office. He or some one else went with me to the War Department, and I saw the leaf compared with the diary, so that I am positive the leaf came from the diary.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I left it with General Baker.

Q. Would you know that leaf if you were to see it now?

A. I might not, but I think I should. I recognized it in a moment as a piece from the diary.

Q. You saw it compared with the diary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find the stump from which it was torn?

A. I did not make the examination myself, but I stood by while Major Eckert and one of General Baker's men, or himself, I cannot be positive which, examined it, and said: "Yes, there is where it was torn out."

Q. Did you then examine the book to see that it was in the condition in which you saw it first?

A. No, sir; I did not make an examination of the book.

Q. Did you examine the book at all, so that you can swear whether there were two, three, four, or a dozen leaves torn out?

A. No, sir. My impression was, when I first saw the book, that there had been one or more leaves torn out.

Q. Did you have that impression before you saw and read what was published in the newspapers?

A. Yes; I had it over the body of Booth when I looked at the book. My impression was that some leaves had been torn out. Before Booth died we sent for a physician, who lived in the neighborhood, and asked him whether he would live for an hour or an hour and a half, as, if he would die within that time, we would wait, but if not, we should take him on alive. He commenced to probe the wound, not being aware that the bullet had gone through. I told him, and he finally gave it as his opinion that Booth would not live an hour. Then Conger left.

Q. How long did Booth live?

A. Not half an hour after the physician pronounced his case hopeless. Lieutenant Doherty and I sewed the body up in my blanket, and got an old market wagon owned by a darkey in the neighborhood, with an old horse, placed the body on a board, and put it in the wagon. I started away in charge of the body; Lieutenant Doherty remaining behind to have the horses fed. Lieutenant Doherty came down to the ferry with Herold, who did not seem to be hand-cuffed or bound at all. I told Lieutenant Doherty he must be aware that his prisoner was a very important one, and should be bound. He said he would have it done. He allowed Herold to get into the boat with me, sitting down on the edge of the ferry-boat. I conversed with him while crossing the river. When we got over he was bound.

Q. Did you have any conversation with Herold at the time Booth was shot, except what you have stated?

A. No, sir. He only said that he was innocent, and knew nothing of Booth, except that he had fallen in with him as a traveling companion. That was the only excuse he made for being with him.

Q. Did he pretend not to know what Booth had done?

A. He did not admit that he knew anything about it. I assumed that he did, and told him that he need not talk to me anything about it, as I knew all. After we crossed the river I started out with a corporal and my orderly. The command followed us a couple of miles and then took another road. I sent back the corporal, but I did not see anything more of him; and then I sent back my orderly, but I did not see anything more of him either. I traveled all the day, with the darkey and Booth's body, and struck the river about three miles above where the steamboat was lying at Belle Plain. I left the body concealed in the bushes, with the darkey to watch it, and came up with a small boat, in which I took the body to the steamer. On the way up the river, General Baker and Major Eckert met us, with a gunboat.

Q. At what place?

A. About half way, I think, between Belle Plain and Washington.

Q. What is the distance from Washington to Belle Plain?

A. I should think about sixty miles.

Q. What was done with the body?

A. The body was deposited on the deck of the boat, and I called for a guard to take charge of it, as I was so fatigued that I could not keep awake. I had not slept any for three nights. While waiting for the guard I stood by the smokestack, and I sunk down and went asleep there, although the captain had prepared some tea and a berth for me below. The next thing that I knew was General Baker pulling me to get me up. That was before we got down to the navy yard.

Q. Before you got on board the gunboat?

A. We did not get on board the gunboat; we remained on the tug till we got to the navy yard. Then the body was transferred to the gunboat, and left in charge of the officers of the boat. I then went with Judge Holt and General Baker and gave my testimony.

Q. You do not know what has become of that testimony?

A. My opinion is that there has been some foul play about it.

Q. What do you mean?

A. I think it has been destroyed. My impression is that it was destroyed in order to suppress the facts which it proved as to my having charge of the party, so that my claim to the chief share of the reward would not be so good.

Q. How much of the reward did you get?

A. Three thousand dollars.

Q. How much did Conger get?

A. Fifteen thousand dollars. I left the city and went to Michigan, and did not attend to the matter as closely as he did.

Q. It is with reference to the distribution of the reward that you think there was foul play?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you have anything to do with burying the body?

A. General Baker told me to come with him, that he had orders to dispose of the body. We took the body from the gunboat into a rowboat, and rowed down the Eastern Branch to a little wharf attached to the arsenal. The body was then taken out and put in an arbor.

Q. Who went with you in the rowboat, beside General Baker?

A. Two sailors from the gunboat, who rowed. General Baker left me in charge of the body, went up to the arsenal, and came back with the major who was in command—Major Benton, I believe. They looked at the body and talked the matter over. General Baker had orders, as he told me, to put the body where it would not be disturbed till Gabriel blew his last trump. The body was taken into the arsenal ground, and that is the last I saw of it.

Q. Was it put in a box or coffin before that?

A. No, sir. After the Surgeon General had examined it, it was sewed up again in the blanket.

Q. Where did the Surgeon General examine it?

A. On the gunboat. The officers of the boat were present, and Judge Holt, General Baker, and myself.

Q. Do you know Dr. May, of this city?

A. I do not; but I know he was present.

Q. Did you ever hear General Baker say that he had dropped the body in the ocean, with weights attached to it?

A. I did not. I heard that he made such a statement.

Q. Did you ever hear him say that he buried the body on the bank of the Potomac, and covered it in such a way that nobody would ever find it till Gabriel blew his last trump?

A. No, sir: nothing of that sort.

Q. Did he ever tell you where he did put the body?

A. No, sir, he never told me. I cannot say how I knew, but I was satisfied as to where it was put. I think that some of his officers told me where he had told them it was put. I never asked him any questions about it. I guess we never exchanged a word from that time to this about it.

Q. Had you known Booth before he was shot?

A. No, sir. I had his likeness, and identified him by it.

Q. Did you know Booth before?

A. I did not.

Q. You were not sworn on the trial of the conspirators?

A. No, sir. I was subpœnaed, but there was a little pulling and hauling somewhere. I think it was agreed to swear Colonel Conger and Captain Doherty, and leave me out. After Booth was laid on the piazza of the house, I asked Colonel Conger if he had found the man who shot him. He said, "No, but I will." He went away and came back, and I said, "Where is the man?" He answered, in a laughing way, "I guess we had better let Providence and the Secretary of War take care of him." After that I learned from Lieutenant Doherty that Conger had found the man, and had asked him what in hell he shot for, without orders, and that Sergeant Corbett took the position of a soldier, saluted the Colonel, and said: "Colonel, Providence directed me." That rather nonplussed the Colonel, and he had nothing more to say.

Q Were not the handcuffs put on Herold when he first came out of the barn?

A. No, sir; he was tied to a tree by Colonel Conger's order. He was tied to a big locust tree in front of Garrett's house. He whined and complained that the rope was cutting his hands, and Lieutenant Doherty released him. When Conger came along and found that Herold was released, he swore tremendously at Doherty, and told him to tie Herold up again. His hands were then tied behind him, I believe, and so he remained till he came to the ferry, then his hands were at liberty. I told Lieutenant Doherty that if he did not tie and secure the man, I would do it. He said he would, and I saw him tie the man and put him in charge of a corporal.

Q. What time did Booth die?

A. About sunrise—between five and six o'clock, I think.

Q. What time was he shot?

A. About an hour and a quarter before that.

Q. Did Colonel Conger leave before Booth died?

A. Yes; he left for Washington with Booth's effects tied in a handkerchief. I assisted him in taking the things out of Booth's pockets. The pockets that were on my side I cleared, and he those on his side. He spread his handkerchief and put them all in, ordered his horse and left. That was about ten or fifteen minutes before Booth died. Conger says, however, that he did not get away from the grounds for about ten or fifteen minutes after that, but I did not see him any more.

Q. What sort of a fellow was Corbett?

A. He attended to his duties as a soldier very strictly, and seemed to have a good deal of dignity among the men; but I noticed from the first that he had an odd expression, and a very earnest way in managing his men—nothing further.

Q. Did you know then of his being a spiritualist?

A. I did not.

Q. Had you any suspicion that he was not entirely of sound mind?

A No, sir; not at all. If I had I should have objected to his having charge of the men. He was first sergeant.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. How were the soldiers detailed?

A. They were picked up in camp. General Baker came down from the War Department and said: "Lieutenant, we have got a sure thing. I think Booth has crossed the river, and I want you to go right out." I had been out on two trips. I said, "There are no men to go with me." He said, "We will have some soldiers detailed." He set down and immediately wrote a letter to General Hancock. Then he said, "Is there no one in the office who can go with you?" I said, "No one but Colonel Conger." Colonel Conger was lame, and had not been out. Said he, "Can he ride?" I said, "I think he can." I found Colonel Conger, and he said he would go. Twenty mounted men came. Conger says the men were picked up around the camp. They were "dead-beats" from two or three different companies, and were in charge of Lieutenant Doherty.

Q. What did you understand by "dead-beats?"

A. Those who have all sorts of excuses for remaining in camp while others are out; men who are either sick or pretending to be.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Who did make the selection of them?

A. It was made under the direction of General Hancock. They reported soon, and we got off in about three quarters of an hour from the time the information was received.

Q. Was Booth, at the time he was shot, making any attempt to shoot any one?

A. Not at all. When he first came to the fire he raised his carbine a little and looked all about, but he did not bring it to his shoulder, or did not appear to want to shoot any one.

Q. I suppose he had plenty of chances to shoot you if he had been so disposed?

A. Yes. One time he came close to the door where I was. We made a feint of piling up some brush and straw outside the barn, wanting to mislead him. There was one place where there was a board off, and we told Garrett to get some straw and brush and pile it up there. I heard Booth say, "See here, young man, I advise you, for your good, to keep away from here." Garrett dropped the straw, and came back and said: "Captain, I will do almost anything, but I will not expose my life any longer in that way." Then Booth, or some one, came along and tried the door. One time when he spoke he said he had had half a dozen opportunities to shoot me. I do not think Booth wanted to kill anybody, except in open, fair fight. I think he would have come out and fought the whole command till he died.

Q. If you had accepted that proposition you think he would have come out?

A. Yes, sir; I have no doubt of it. I think he would have sold his life as dearly and bravely as possible. From the tone of his voice, and his theatrical style, every word seemed to be studied. His last remark in the barn was in reference to the stain on the old flag.

Q. What articles were taken from Booth's body?

A. I took a pocket compass which had candle-drops all around it outside. It was a common pocket compass, and appeared to have been used in the night with a candle. I took a meerschaum pipe, a bunch of matches, and quite a handful of shavings, which seemed to have been whittled up at leisure to start a fire with some time, and a handkerchief rather soiled. Conger took the diary, a pin from his undershirt, (it seemed to be a diamond pin, with some initials on it,) and, I think, a pocket knife.

Q. Had Booth any small pistols?

A. He had two pistols in his belt, a bowie-knife, and a carbine. These Conger took to Washington.

Q. Do you know of any money being taken from his person?

A. Yes; Conger took some money. I did not see it. Conger displayed some greenbacks and some drafts which he said were on Canada.

Q. How much money was there?

A. I think he said about $75. I did not count it. He said, when putting up the drafts, "See, I will mark them," and he put some mark on them. I was so much fatigued at the time, and was laboring under so much excitement, that the testimony I gave before Judge Holt would be, I think, the nearest correct. I gave it when everything was fresh on my mind.

Q. How many days after that was it when you took this leaf to General Baker?

A. About ten days.

Q. Did you find anything else in your back track?

A. I did. About two weeks after that the young Garretts came down with a statement of the articles destroyed in the barn, and an application for damages. They wished me to sign it. I had been trying to find the opera glass which Mrs. Surratt was said to have given to Booth, but I could get no clue whatever to it. I told Garrett that I could not sign the paper until he had given me all the things belonging to Booth that were in their possession. He said he would do so with pleasure. I then said I would go up in a week or ten days, when I expected to get everything which Booth left. I went to the Garrett place, and young Garrett brought me a piece of Booth's crutch and a haversack, and said that was all. Just before dark I went out to where the barn was burned, thinking I might find some remains of the glass. I poked around in the ashes and found some melted lead, (it seemed he had some cartridges with him,) and pieces of the blanket that Herold had; but I found nothing that looked like the opera glass. There was a little boy, about five or six years old, playing around, and on questioning him I learned that Booth gave the opera glass to his sister, Joanna Garrett, and that she had put it in her father's writing desk. Next morning I told the old gentleman what I knew about the opera glass, and that it must be produced. He was much surprised that I should know what had transpired. I called in the daughter, Joanna, and told her she should do one of two things—either produce the opera glass or come with me to Washington. She began to cry, and was very much affected. The father took her aside, and came back and said the opera glass was about nine miles off, with a sister of hers. We rode over there and found it hid in a clothes chest in the garret. I brought it to Washington and turned it over to General Baker, with a request that I might have it, and telling him how I got it. It was a peculiar glass, having three sets of small lenses, with three screws to turn, marked "opera," "marine," and "field." It was a very valuable glass.

Q. Were there any marks on it?

A. None that I observed.

Q. Where is it now?

A. I do not know. I have never seen it since.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Do you recognize the beginning of the diary published in the newspapers as the same with what you read in the book?

A. I do not recognize anything except the note to Dr. Stewart. That I had time to read. The other I did not stop to read.

Q. Do you recollect whether these missing leaves came just before the page on which the writing begins?

A. I do not.

Q. Were you present during the whole trial of the assassins?

A. I was there every day.

Q. You say that your not being called as a witness was the result of consultation?

A. I was told it was. During this time some misunderstanding occurred between Colonel Conger, Lieutenant Doherty, and myself. Doherty, in view of the reward, went in to prove that he had charge of the party.

Q. You think that your not being called had some reference to the division of the reward?

A. I do.

Q. How much did Doherty receive?

A. Five thousand dollars.

Q. What was his rank at that time?

A. Lieutenant.

Q. And you were also lieutenant?

A. I was not in the service at the time. I had been mustered out two weeks before. I started out in command of the party. Colonel Conger is a good officer and a peculiar man. I saw that his pride was hurt, and that he did not seem to have any interest in the matter. I knew he was experienced, and was familiar with the country about Belle Plain, and as we came up on the bluff, it being then very dark, I said, "Colonel Conger, you take charge of the cavalry; you have been over the ground. I do not want you to consider me in command; we are together." That seemed to relieve him, and everything went on pleasantly.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What is your relationship to General Baker?

A. I am his cousin.

WASHINGTON, May 22, 1867.

WILLIAM P. WOOD sworn and examined.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What is your position?

A. I am chief of the secret service division in the department of the Solicitor of the Treasury. I have been engaged there since 1865. Previously I was superintendent of the Old Capitol prison during the war.

Q. Did you know J. Wilkes Booth?

A. Not personally; only as a public character. I never had any conversation with him.

Q. What was your business before you became superintendent of the Old Capitol prison?

A. I am a pattern-maker and model-maker. I took charge of the prison under Mr. Cameron, but received my regular commission or authority from Mr. Stanton.

Q. Do you know anything of an article or letter purporting to have been written by J. Wilkes Booth for publication in the Intelligencer?

A. I learned that such a letter was written by him while he was a fugitive in Maryland. I never saw it. I think it has been destroyed. I think a man named Thomas Mathews had it. He is a resident of Maryland, and was a prisoner in the Old Capitol prison.

Q. Tell the Committee what you know about the letter.

A. Nothing further than that there was a rumor that he had such a letter and had destroyed it. I have no personal knowledge of it. I believe that Mr. Ford, who keeps the Holliday street theatre, in Baltimore, can tell you more about it. Mr. Ford told me that this man Mathews had the letter and had destroyed it, and that he had told some priest about it. That is all I know of it.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did Mr. Ford say that he had seen the letter?

A. I am not positive about that.

Q. Did he make any statement as to its contents?
A. I believe he did, in general terms. I think it was that Booth was desirous of giving himself up, or something to that effect.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you learn the reason for the destruction of the letter by Mathews?
A. I did not. I made no such inquiry.
Q. Did you hear how long Mathews had it in his possession?
A. No, sir.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was not the letter to be published in the Intelligencer?
A. I understood it was intended for publication in the Intelligencer.
Q. Do you know whether it was ever presented to the Intelligencer?
A. I am sure that if ever any such letter was written it was never presented to the parties in the Intelligencer office. It never went further than the Old Capitol.
Q. Was it in the Old Capitol?
A. I think it was brought there by this man Mathews.
Q. Then he must have had it on his person when he was brought there as a prisoner?
A. If it was on his person in the Old Capitol, it went in with him as a prisoner.
Q. Did you search his person?
A. It was the rule to search all prisoners, and I am confident that he was searched when he went in; but it was an easy thing to secrete it.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did you first hear of the existence of this letter?
A. I think it was about the time that Mathews and thirty or forty other persons from Maryland, who were suspected of having aided Booth, were in the prison.
Q. On receiving the information did you search Mathews again in order to discover the letter?
A. We never searched prisoners more than once.
Q. Why did you not search him again?
A. I did not think it of any importance, or that it amounted to anything. I was informed that he had destroyed it.
Q. Did you make any inquiry as to whether he had destroyed it?
A. I did not.
Q. Did you believe he had destroyed it?
A. I think my attention was only called to the destruction of the letter some time subsequent to the release of all the parties.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you given the Committee all the knowledge or information you have on the subject?
A. I have done so as far as I recollect.
Q. Have you given out that you had such a letter in your possession?
A. Never.
Q. Have you said to any one that you knew all about it?
A. I said I knew all about the letter—that it was really there. My knowledge consists of what I have stated.
Q. Do you consider from that that you know all about it?
A. Yes, sir. The matter was fixed on my mind that there really was such a letter by the impression made on me by Mr. Ford.

Q. And on that you stated that you knew all about the letter?

A. I may have said so to some one, not intending it as a positive matter, but in connection with something else. I intended to convey no such meaning. I believe that the only time I ever made use of that declaration was in the presence of a man named Howell, from Maryland, who had been in the Old Capitol prison. I met this Howell in a restaurant in this city, and said I thought he ought to be hung; and it was in connection with that that this matter of the letter came up.

Q. Have you made the same statement to others?

A. I am not positive about that. Perhaps I did. I considered it no secret.

Q. Do you pretend to say now that you do know all about this letter?

A. I do not think I used that expression. I only mean to say that I know such a letter was written.

Q. And yet you have never seen it?

A. I have never seen it.

Q. Nor read a word of it?

A. Nor read a word of it.

Q. Nor heard anybody else read it?

A. Nor heard anybody else read it.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Was Mr. Mathews one of the persons at whose house Booth was supposed to have been after the assassination?

A. That I cannot say.

Q. Was it before or after the trial of the assassins that Ford told you Mathews said there was such a letter in existence?

A. After the trial.

Q. And after the execution?

A. After the execution.

Q. Who were the persons whom you heard refer to the letter before that time?

A. I do not recollect. I did not believe it at the time, until Mr. Ford subsequently impressed it upon me that it was so. From his conversation I became positive there had been such a letter in existence at the time.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday, May 23, 1867.

ROBERT JOHNSON sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. In the city of Washington. My home is in Greenville, Tennessee.

Q. You are private secretary to the President?

A. I am.

Q. How long have you been acting in that capacity?

A. I first commenced acting as private secretary on the 14th or 15th of November, 1865. I acted as such until February, 1866. I resumed the duties of the office on the first of September, 1866.

Q. Were you an inmate of the Executive mansion during the entire month of November, 1865?

A. I was.

Q. State whether you have any knowledge of a pardon having been granted to a person named Clarence J. Howell.

A. I think there was such a pardon signed by the President.

Q. State all that you know about it.

A. There was an application made for his pardon. It came through the office in the regular manner. I think I took the pardon out of the President's room into the office to have it recorded there before its being sent to the State Department to be sealed. That is about all that I remember about the pardon.

Q. You say it went to the President through the usual channel?

A. Yes.

Q. State what that is.

A. Sometimes a person brings an application for a pardon, and files it in the Secretary's office. Colonel Long has had charge of that department for a long while.

Q. Had he charge of it at that time?

A. He had.

Q. Did this pardon pass from that office to the President?

A. I think that is the way it got to the President's office. I do not know anything to the contrary. That is the usual course. I have had nothing to do with pardons. Colonel Long has entire control of that business, and keeps the records. I only remember something about this pardon from the difficulty which arose about it between Mrs. Cobb and General Baker.

Q. State all the facts of which you have any knowledge connected with that pardon.

A. Baker came up there with the pardon the same evening, I think. Father sent for me, and asked me if I knew anything about it. I told him that all I knew about it was that the application was there, and that he had signed the pardon that day. He and General Baker were talking about it. I did not stay to hear the conversation, but I heard some part of it while I was there. Baker was explaining how it was a made-up case on his part as a detective of the War Department. He thought it implicated Mrs. Cobb in some way or other in obtaining money for getting pardons. The President, I think, retained the pardon.

Q. Do you know whether that paper can be obtained?

A. I do not.

Q. Was it complete?

A. I do not think it was. I do not think it had the seal of the State Department; but it may have been complete for aught I know.

Q. Do you know into whose hands it passed after it was signed by the President?

A. I do not. I have no idea whether it went to the State Department by one of the regular messengers, who took the pardons over, or by some one else.

Q. You say you suppose this went to the President through the usual channel?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any knowledge of any fact to the contrary?

A. No, sir; I have not, but rather as confirmatory of the statement. The application for that pardon had been lying on the table, I think, for some days.

Q. Did you receive a present of any kind from Mrs. Cobb?

A. No, sir, not in any manner, shape, or form, nor was such ever intimated or offered to me in any manner, shape, or form.

Q. Did you ever receive from her, or through any other person, as a present, a pair of kid gloves?

A. Never.

Q. Did you ever receive from her, directly or indirectly, any money?

A. Never in my life, not to the value of a copper, and never was offered any.

Q. Are you acquainted with Thomas B. Florence, of this city?

A. Yes; I have known him for several years.

Q. State whether he ever presented to you, to be carried to the President, any papers relative to the pardon of certain deserters in West Virginia.

A. I think he did.

Q. State all you know about it.

A. The application was for the pardon of 192 or 193 deserters in West Virginia. It was signed by Dr. McEwen, who had been the surgeon of the brigade. My impression is that I brought it before the President, and read the paper to him.

Q. What did the President do in the case?

A. I think there was an order made for the Secretary of War to examine the case, and to grant the pardons if the case was meritorious.

Q. What papers in the case did you read to the President?

A. Dr. McEwen's letter or statement, I think.

Q. Did the President take immediate action upon it?

A. I think not. I think it was at night that I brought it before him.

Q. What other papers were filed in that case, aside from the letter of Dr. McEwen?

A. I do not think there were any filed in our office.

Q. Did Mr. Florence give you any other paper?

A. I do not think he did. He brought them in there one evening in his usual blustering way, and said there was an application for the restoration of some deserters in West Virginia. He went on and made a short statement about the case, somewhat the same as McEwen made in the letter.

Q. Did he make any other statement?

A. Not that I know of.

Q. Did he say anything about these men wanting to vote?

A. I do not know. It was about the time of the election in West Virginia—a few days before—that the application was presented.

Q. Do you recollect a letter from Mr. Andrews, the democratic candidate for Congress in that district, with reference to the pardon of these men?

A. I do not. The only paper in the matter that I have any positive recollection about is the application of Dr. McEwen.

Q. Did Mr. Florence see the President about it?

A. I do not think he did.

Q. Did you carry the papers to the President immediately after Florence went away?

A. No, sir, I think not. I think I took them before the President that evening, after dinner.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When did you last see Dr. McEwen's letter?

A. I do not know. I saw a copy of it in the newspapers some days ago. The letter went to the War Department, and was put on file there, I presume.

Q. Before seeing it in the newspapers, had you any recollection in regard to the McEwen letter?

A. The first thing that called it to my attention was a statement made in the House of Representatives by General Butler, of Massachusetts, about pardons. Then I remembered the case. I do not recollect reading any other paper in it to the President, except Mr. McEwen's letter. Mr. Florence may have made some statement in writing, but I do not think he did. I know nothing about the Andrews letter. I have no recollection of any such letter being with the papers, and do not recollect hearing the man's name at the time.

Q. If Florence gave you the Andrews letter, did you hand it to the President?

A. I may have done so. I am sure I did not take it out of the envelope.

Q. Whatever Florence handed to you, you laid before the President?

A. I must have done so. I think I read the statement of McEwen to him. He may have read the papers afterwards. I took the papers right in, and read them to him, when I came to them in the regular business of the day.

Q. Did the President take the McEwen letter in his own hand in your presence?

A. I cannot say as to that. It is very probable that I laid them on the table with other papers for his action, and went out.

Q. It is not the fact that you laid them down on the table for his action, and that afterwards you read over the McEwen letter to him?

A. No, sir. Through the day papers accumulate on my table, and I have them briefed, and, generally, at night, I go into the President's office, and there read over the different cases from the brief. If he wants to take action on any case I read the full statement to him.

Q. You are sure you read the paper?

A. Yes, I am sure of it. When the statement was made in the House by General Butler it recalled the whole affair to my mind at once. I read the paper to him when I first took it in. I remember that distinctly. I cannot say positively that I left the papers there.

Q. Are you sure the matter was not acted upon that day?

A. I am not, but I do not think it was. I did not write the endorsement referring it to the War Department.

Q. Who did write it?

A. Colonel Moore.

Q. Who made up that day the brief of the papers to be submitted to the President?

A. I made it up myself in this case on the back of the envelope in which the papers were contained. I merely took the envelope and endorsed it "Application of Dr. McEwen for the pardon of 192 deserters in West Virginia." That was all the brief that was made.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. After you read the papers to the President you left all the papers with him, and that is the last you know of them?

A. Yes, sir; I do not recollect any circumstance after that. I remember the case distinctly, but I do not recollect that I had the papers after that.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Are you willing to state that there was no other paper except the application of Dr. McEwen?

A. I cannot state that positively, for I might be mistaken; but my best impression is that there was nothing but the McEwen statement.

Q. Are you willing to state that no letter came into your hands, purporting to have been written by Mr. Andrews, recommending the pardon of these men?

A. I am not; but my impression is that there did not, and that there was no such letter.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you know whether there was any evidence, written or otherwise, presented to the President at any time in reference to these West Virginia deserters?

A. I do not know; none ever passed through my hands.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Is not an application for the pardon of so large a number of deserters an extraordinary thing?

A. Yes, it is rather an extraordinary thing. They belonged to various regiments of West Virginia.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. State to the Committee what the practice of the Executive mansion is in reference to nominations sent from the various departments of officers to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

A. We require the departments to make out their own nominations. We send all the applications that we receive for appointments to the departments to which they belong, and the departments send up the nominations. We have not the clerical force to make out the nominations.

Q. Is there a record kept by you, or by any officer of the department to which you belong, of these nominations as they are received from the different departments?

A. No, sir; all that we keep a record of are the nominations that we send to the Senate. These are recorded by States.

Q. What means have you of knowing from time to time whether all the vacancies are filled?

A. The only way that we can know is from the heads of the different departments.

Q. What disposition is made of those messages of nominations as they are received from the different departments?

A. They are generally laid on the President's table first; then they are generally taken to the library, and from there to the clerk's office, where we seal them and have them recorded. Generally, either Colonel Moore or myself attends to the sealing.

Q. If any such nominations are laid before the President which he does not approve, what disposition is made of them?

A. They are sometimes returned for other nominations, and sometimes they are torn up.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State whether you keep any record of the appointments made to fill vacancies during the recess of Congress.

A. Yes; we keep the same record as during the session.

Q. How did you state that the application for pardon in the case of Howell found its way to your office?

A. I do not know who brought it there, or anything about it. I know the application had been lying there for some days before it was acted upon.

Q. What is the practice in those cases. Is it not to file the papers in the office of the Attorney General?

A. Generally, when an application is made for pardon, either criminal or rebel, it is sent to the Attorney General's office for examination, and there all applications are filed. A warrant for pardon is then sent up to the President, or an order for it sent to the State Department. These warrants pass into the hands of Colonel Long, and he takes them to the President. The warrant, if approved, is signed by the President, and brought over to the office of the Secretary of State for the seal. With the warrant is a printed letter, which is also signed by the President, authorizing the Secretary of State to put on the warrant his seal. From there the warrants go, as I understand, to the Attorney General's office for issuance; and sometimes they come back to our office, and are issued from there. The warrant is, in fact, the pardon; it is called a "warrant for pardon."

Q. Can you state now how Mrs. Cobb obtained possession of that pardon of Howell's?

A. I cannot.

Q. Do you know whether it had the seal to it?

A. After reflecting, I think it must have had the seal on it. My impression is that she got it from the office of the Attorney General.

Q. Is that pardon now among the records of your office, or has it been destroyed?

A. I cannot say; my impression is that it is still there, for I think it was exhibited on the trial between Baker and Mrs. Cobb.

Q. Is the application there on which it was founded?

A. No, sir; I think not.

(Witness was directed to search for the papers and produce them before the Committee.)

Q. How many secretaries does the President employ?

A. One private secretary and one assistant private secretary. Colonel Moore is detailed from the War Department, and Colonel Long and Colonel Wright Rives.

Q. Who were there about the time the pardon was issued?

A. Colonel Long, Colonel Rives, and myself. Colonel Moore, I think, had not come there. Mr. Browning went to New York about the 1st of November: I was appointed private secretary about the 14th or 15th.

Q. Whose place did you take?

A. Colonel Browning's.

Q. Who were the secretaries in the month of May, 1866.

A. Colonel Cooper, I think, was acting in my place; and there were four others—Mr. Moore, Mr. Rives, Mr. Long, and Mr. Warden.

(Some papers were here handed to the witness that he might identify the handwriting. He stated that he could not do so; that it had some resemblance to Colonel Cooper's, but he did not think it was his.)

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know anything of a pardon granted to John Kelly?

A. No, sir.

Q. A pardon with which Mrs. Ellen D. Washington is said to have had some connection.

A. I know nothing about it.

Q. Do you know anything of an application made for such a pardon?

A. I do not; I have had very little to do with pardons.

(Witness was directed to examine the records of his office for such papers.)

Q. Do you know a woman by the name of Mrs. Perry, who purports to be from Cincinnati, and who is referred to as having some interest in the New York custom house?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know where she resides?

A. When I first knew her she resided in Cincinnati, and I presume does so yet.

Q. Did she ever reside in Nashville?

A. Never that I know of.

Q. Did you ever see her at Nashville?

A. I think I did, once.

Q. During the war?

A. I think so.

Q. Was President Johnson then acting as military Governor of Tennessee?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. How long was she there?

A. I saw her there only once, I think; I do not know how long she was in the city.

Q. Do you know what her business was?

A. I do not. My impression is that she came there wanting to get through the lines to the front, towards Chattanooga, in order to wait in hospitals. General Thomas would not let her pass to the front, and she went back, as I understood, from there to Cincinnati.

Q. Did you understand that she went back immediately?

A. I cannot say as to that. She said she stopped at the City Hotel; I did not call there to see.

Q. Do you know anything about the agreement alleged to have been made with her by Phelps and Barr concerning the "general order business?"

A. I know nothing whatever about it. I did not know there was such an agreement until I saw it stated in the newspapers.

Q. Have you seen her at the Executive mansion?

A. I have.

Q. How often?

A. I cannot say; perhaps a dozen times, perhaps more.

Q. When did you last see her there?

A. I cannot exactly say. I think it was last fall; some time in October or November, perhaps.

Q. Do you know of her being there since the fact of the alleged agreement between her, Phelps, and Barr was published in the papers?

A. I think she has been there once since.

Q. This appears to have been published March 12, 1867?

A. I have not seen her since then. The last time I saw her was in the crowd at the Masonic Fair, corner of Seventh street and the Avenue, which was held last December, I think.

Q. What was her business when she called at the Executive mansion?

A. I do not know.

Q. Did she seem to have any business?

A. I could not tell as to that; she did not say so to me. I saw her in the ante-room where the crowd was.

Q. Waiting, as others, to obtain an interview with the President?

A. Yes, sir; I saw her up there several days, sitting with the crowd. I remember speaking to her one day; she said she had been waiting there several days for an interview, and had not got it. I remarked that she would have to have patience. That was about all that was said.

Q. Do you know whether the President had been apprised of her presence there?

A. I suppose his messenger notified him that she was there, as he does with anybody else. That is the only notice he received.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you know how much of her time she spent at Washington for the last two years?

A. I do not.

Q. Did she make long visits here?

A. I do not know as to that. All that I would know about her would be when I happened to see her.

Q. You do not know whether she resided here at any time?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you know Michael Burns, of Nashville?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he ever apply to the President for a pardon, or obtain one?

A. I do not know.

Q. Was he not a noted rebel?

A. No, sir; he was counted as a Union man, and so considered. He rather sympathized with the rebels, but took no active part that I had any knowledge of.

Q. Had he not taken a pretty active part in assisting the rebels before the capture of Nashville?

A. I cannot say as to that, for I was not there. I went to Nashville in 1863, and met Mr. Burns there going about as usual. I understood that he went forward and took the oath.

Q. Do you know who were the leading stockholders in the Nashville and Northwestern and Nashville and Chattanooga railroads?

A. I do not. I know that D. K. Stevenson was, prior to the war, a pretty large stockholder in the Nashville and Chattanooga road, of which he was the president for a long while.

Q. Do you know any of the stockholders in the Nashville and Northwestern road who took the side of the Union during the rebellion?

A. No, sir; for I do not know who the stockholders are. I suppose Mr. Burns is a stockholder in both roads. I believe he is now president of both roads.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Who was the private secretary of the President during the latter part of the 1st session of the 39th Congress?

A. Colonel Cooper was the acting private secretary. We were not regularly appointed private secretaries, merely acting as such.

Q. He was admitted as a member of Congress, was he not, just before the end of that session?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When a nomination is made out at one of the departments, and sent to the President, with whom does the messenger leave it in the first instance?

A. Sometimes it is sent in to me through the messenger at my door; sometimes it goes direct to the President's office. They generally come through me, and I immediately take them to the President's room and lay them on his table.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Cooper, at the time he was admitted to Congress, had some of the nominations locked up in his desk, and which did not, for that reason, reach the President?

A. I do not know as to that.

Q. Have you any regular time for presenting these nominations to the President?

A. No, sir; my usual course has been to take all such papers immediately and lay them on his table, unless he should happen to be engaged at the time.

Q. Suppose they come in during Cabinet meeting?

A. I never go in then. I retain them till the Cabinet adjourns.

Q. Do they not sometimes remain on your table for a considerable length of time—for some days?

A. I do not know that they ever remain on my table longer than a night. During the last session of Congress Colonel Moore had entire charge of all nominations. They generally went to his table.

Q. Were not nominations sometimes made out and, at the request of somebody, allowed to remain some time in the hands of the private secretary?

A. Yes, sir, I know of instances of that kind.

Q. Where they were kept until the Senator or member who procured them gave notice that he desired them sent to the Senate for confirmation?

A. Yes, sir. A Senator, for instance, may bring a nomination to me and say that he wants it kept for a certain length of time, or until he sees me again about it.

Q. In such instances the President does not know that the nominations have come in?

A. No, sir. I have known instances of that kind.

Q. I understood you to say that the President only knows of vacancies, or of the necessity for nominations, from the departments?

A. That is the only way he can know it. Almost all resignations, changes in office, &c., are sent direct to the departments.

Q. When a nomination is rejected, is there any record made of it in your office?

A. Yes, sir; the books show the date it was sent to the Senate, and the action of the Senate upon it. If rejected, we write "Rejected" in red ink; if confirmed, the date of confirmation is written in ordinary ink. The Secretary of the Senate sends the action of that body directly to us. We have it noted on our books, and then send a notification to the departments.

Q. Without going to the President?

A. The President generally looks at it. The original papers are filed in the departments.

Q. Was Mrs. Cobb allowed any privileges, or permitted to take any liberties about the Executive mansion, that were not allowed to other persons?

A. Not that I know of. She had the same privileges as others in the halls and ante-rooms, which are open to the public generally.

Q. Did you ever know of Mrs. Cobb coming round through the kitchen, or by a private staircase, to the President?

A. No, sir. I have never known of more than two instances of strangers going that way. One was the case of an insane man, and the other of a boy, who in some way managed to get there unperceived by the doorkeeper.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Ellen D. Washington, wife of Colonel Lewis Washington?

A. Yes, sir; I know her.

Q. Do you know of her being engaged in the pardon business?

A. I know of her filing one or two applications for pardons, but I do not know in what cases.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know what was done with those applications?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you know whether they took the usual course—being referred to the Attorney General's office?

A. All applications take that course.

Q. Do you know whether the President has granted a pardon in any case that has not taken that course?

A. In some cases, when an application is filed in our office, the President may order a pardon to issue. It then goes to the Attorney General's office and is filed there.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You have no recollection of Mrs. Washington's applying for the pardon of John Kelly?

A. None whatever.

Q. Have you any knowledge of who this man Howell was?

A. None whatever, except what General Baker stated. I heard that he was convicted in St. Louis on some court-martial case, and dismissed the service and sent to the penitentiary, and that he escaped from there.

Q. Do you know whether Baker knew those facts?

A. I think he told the President so, for the President asked him how he came to permit an escaped felon from St. Louis to be here at large, and to employ him as a detective.

Q. What reply did Baker make to that?

A. I do not recollect, for I was in the room only a few minutes while they were talking about the case. I think Baker's explanation was that he was using him, and that he wanted to get him released from that court-martial sentence.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you know the character of Mrs. Cobb during the time she was visiting the White House?

A. Yes, from rumor.

Q. Did the President also know it?

A. I suppose he heard persons talk about it, the same as I had. I never heard him say much about her, one way or the other.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State what her reputation was.

A. Her reputation for chastity was not good.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. During how long a period was she in the habit of appearing at the White House?

A. I cannot say. She would be there one day, and perhaps I would not see her again for a week or two. Sometimes she would be there two or three days in succession. I saw her for the first time in the fall of 1865, and for the last time, some time in winter last. I think the last time I saw her she was standing at the front door. That was about the time Congress assembled at the last session of the 39th Congress.

Q. Did she file any considerable number of applications for pardon?

A. None that I ever knew of. Not in our department.

Q. Was this Howell's the only one?

A. I cannot say. She might have filed more or less, and I not see them. I did not state that she had filed that one. I do not know who filed it, or how it was taken away. I had nothing to do with that branch of the business at that time.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Who had charge of the door to the President's private reception room?

A. He had no private reception room.

Q. The room where he generally receives?

A. E. L. Carshaw. He came there, I think, in the winter of 1865.

Q. Who immediately preceded him?

A. A man by the name of Foote. I think Slade was the regular messenger at the door when I came there. He and Foote rather alternated. I do not know which was the regular messenger.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. You have already stated that the hall is open to the public; has there ever been any custom of excluding any one so long as he or she behaves in an ordinary manner?

A. No, sir.

Q. There is no inquiry as to who they are, or what they are?

A. No, sir.

Q. May not persons come there for weeks, and circulate, without the President knowing anything about them?

A. Yes, sir; and no doubt they do every day.

Q. He has no notice of who visits there?

A. No, sir. All the knowledge he has of persons being there is when their cards are taken to him by the messenger. People are in the habit of going there when they have no business there.

Q. Do not a good many persons go there who have business with other officers in the Executive mansion, and none with the President?

A. Yes; a great many do that.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. You have stated that sometimes messages of nominations have been retained at the request of Senators; can you name any case of that sort?

A. I do not recollect just now. I know there were some retained there last session at the request of some representatives who were interested in trying to get the appointments confirmed. There was one case of a postmaster at Fond du Lac, which Mr. Eldridge requested me to retain.

Q. Look at the list (on page 9, document 67, of the 39th Congress) of names of officers of the internal revenue, appointed during the recess of the Senate, and whose nominations were withheld from the Senate until 1866, and state whether you have any recollection of any of those cases being withheld at the request of any Senator or other person.

A. No, sir; I have not.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, May 24, 1867.

LUCIUS H. CHANDLER sworn and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State whether you are United States district attorney for the eastern district of Virginia.

A. I am.

Q. State who it was that prepared the return to the writ of habeas corpus, issued in the case of Jefferson Davis.

A. The return was written by Mr. Evarts, who was of counsel for the government in the case, on a separate piece of paper, and was by me copied on the original writ of habeas corpus, with the addition of these words, "as I am directed to do by the order of the President of the United States, under date of May 8, 1867." These concluding words were added by me at the express request of General Burton, in order that he might show that it was done by the orders of the President. A few days before the trial was to come on, I was here in Washington, and suggested to the Attorney General that it might be well for Mr. Stanton to issue a direct order, (providing that Mr. Davis was to be surrendered to the civil authorities,) to the commandant at Fortress Monroe, instructing him to deliver Mr. Davis to the United States marshal, or to some deputy of the marshal, on any regular process that might issue from the federal court. The order was not issued at first, but in a few days' time it was given to General Burton by Adjutant General Townsend. The communication stated, I think, that it was by order of the President of the United States.

Q. Did you receive any instructions from the authorities here in reference to the form of the return?

A. None whatever.

Q. State why it is that the cause of detention is not stated in the return.

A. I do not know that I can state why. I can only state what was my own view in reference to the matter. It was, that all General Burton was required to do was to produce Mr. Davis before the court, and to state that he held him in military custody, under military authority.

Q. Were you not aware of the fact that he had been arrested in pursuance of a proclamation of the President, charging him with complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln, and offering a large reward for his capture, which has been paid?

A. I had supposed that was one of the reasons why he was arrested, but I did not suppose that it was the only reason. I supposed that, apart from the assassination of President Lincoln, Mr. Davis would have been placed precisely where he was on the general ground that he was a traitor.

Q. Did you, as a lawyer, regard this general return, charging him as a prisoner of war, as being a good one?

A. I did. I perhaps ought to add that it did not occur to me that there was any necessity for General Burton's setting forth fully how and why it was that Mr. Davis was held.

Q. Had you any conversation with the President himself in reference to the disposition to be made of Mr. Jefferson Davis?

A. I had on several occasions very brief conversations with the President—certainly on two, and probably on three. I felt, and have felt all along, that it was quite important that I should know what the views of the administration were in reference to the trial of Mr. Davis. I came here on two, and, perhaps, on three occasions, so far as the President was concerned, to ascertain whether it was wished that the trial should be had. I called upon the President and introduced the subject, but I never could get from him anything other than that the Attorney General had that whole matter in his charge. I saw the President once or twice while Mr. Speed was Attorney General, and once while the present incumbent, Mr. Stanbery, was in office; and in each case I was always referred by the President to the Attorney General. I know that on one occasion I was a little persistent in the matter, but still all the answer that I could get was that the matter was entirely within the jurisdiction of the Attorney General, and that I must see him in reference to it.

Q. State whether you had any directions from the Attorney General to take bail in that case.

A. I had not. A conversation was had between the Attorney General, Mr. Evarts, and myself, in reference to bail; and the question was discussed as to whether it was within the power of the court to admit Mr. Davis to bail under the indictment. A question arose as to whether Mr. Davis could be punished with death under the indictment found against him during the May (1866) term of the district court. That indictment was very hurriedly prepared by me. The grand jury did not notify me that it had found a bill until the morning of the day on which the indictment was prepared. I did not feel willing to prepare an indictment against Mr. Davis, or to present that matter to the consideration of the grand jury at that time. I preferred waiting until the circuit court should meet, thinking it better to pursue that course rather than have an indictment found by the district court, knowing that he could by no possibility be tried by the district court, but that there must necessarily be a trial before the circuit court. I preferred having an indictment found by the grand jury of the circuit court, but Judge Underwood thought it best that the indictment should be found by the grand jury of the district court. I state this for the purpose of showing why I did not have an indictment prepared beforehand. I did intend having an indictment prepared for the circuit court. When the grand jury told me they had found a true bill against Mr. Davis, the judge stated that it was absolutely necessary for him to leave Norfolk, and adjourned the court by 3 o'clock that afternoon, so that I had but two or three hours to prepare the indictment which was finally found.

Q. State on what statute the indictment was founded, and if on the act of 1862, on what section of that act.

A. My own impression was and is that Mr. Davis could have been tried for treason, either under the original act of 1789, or under the act of 1862. There was no special reference to either statute.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Is your indictment for treason framed so as to meet either statute?

A. I think so.

Q. Do you mean the first section of the act of 1862?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Under whichsoever of these two statutes it might be, it did charge an offence, the penalty of which might be death?

A. That is what I intended. I had not supposed that the particular time when those acts were alleged to have been committed would preclude me (if I should happen to be District Attorney when he should be brought to trial on that indictment) from showing acts committed prior to the time set forth in the indictment as being the time when traitorous acts were committed.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. That, I suppose, was on the ground that you believe the act of 1789 to be still in force?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. The act of 1789 limits the finding of indictments to three years; do you mean that you could go back of three years from the date of the findings of the indictment to give in evidence any act as a substantive act of treason?

A. I thought so. I thought that any act that had been committed by Mr. Davis at any time, provided that three years had not elapsed after the war was over, might be very probably proven against him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. On the hypothesis that it was a continuous crime?

A. On the hypothesis that it was a continuous crime. If Mr. Davis had not remained president of the southern confederacy, if his term of office had expired, and if peace were not in some form declared until three years had expired after his removal from office, or resignation, or the election of some one in his stead, and if no traitorous act could be proven against him within three years, he would have escaped punishment; but I did not think the law would be construed in that way.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Had you any instructions from the Attorney General on the subject of preparing an indictment against Jefferson Davis, or was it done on your own mere motion; I mean the indictment that was actually prepared?

A. No, sir; I received no instructions from the administration.

Q. Had you any instructions with reference to the question of taking bail?

A. There was a conversation between the Attorney General, Mr. Evarts and myself in reference to bail. The question first came up as to the power of the court to admit Mr. Davis to bail under the indictment that was found; in other words, whether it was in the power of a district judge or a circuit judge to admit to bail a party charged with high treason, under the act of 1789, with the death penalty. It was, in fact, whether a person charged with an offence, the punishment of which was death, could be admitted to bail either by the circuit judge or the district judge. That question, I believe, was decided unanimously in favor of the power so to admit to bail.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When you say unanimously, you mean to include yourself?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there anything said about the proviso to the act of 1793 on the subject of bail?

A. Yes, sir; it was a question which I had to look at. I tried, as far as I could, to anticipate what course would be taken. I was not certain whether Mr. Davis would be tried or not. If he was not tried, I knew, weeks before, that an application would be made for bail. I had so understood from Mr. O'Connor, who was counsel for Mr. Davis, and I, of course, tried to post myself on that question. When the matter came up for consideration between the Attorney General, Mr. Evarts and myself, I think I first expressed my opinion in reference to it. Some little doubt arising, I think on the part of Mr. Evarts, as to the correctness of my opinion, I procured a copy of Conkling's Treatise, and turned to the subject of bail in criminal cases. After reading the paragraph, Mr. Evarts agreed with me in opinion.

Q. That is, that the offence of high treason, although punishable with death, is bailable?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find authority for that quotation in Conkling?

A. That is the construction which I then gave to the law, and which I now give to it. I have looked at the subject since.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you hold that it was the right of Mr. Davis to be admitted to bail, or that it was a matter simply in the discretion of the court?

A. Simply in the discretion of the court. The right to bail, I apprehend, is confined to cases where death cannot be the penalty. There, I suppose, in all cases the prisoner has a right to be admitted to bail; but where death may be the penalty, it is within the discretion of the court, on the evidence, under the usages of law, and under all the circumstances of the case. I was confirmed in my opinion from the fact that in two of what are known as the Pennsylvania insurgent cases, growing out of the whiskey difficulties, persons charged with high treason were admitted to bail in the circuit court.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You are represented in the newspapers as taking no exception to the motion to discharge on bail; did you acquiesce in it?

A. I did.

Q. You regarded it as a question for the discretion of the court?

A. I considered it a question for the discretion of the court.

Q. Were you consenting to the taking of bail?

A. I was consenting to the taking of bail; had I not been, I certainly should have objected.

Q. Was that the result of the conference between you and the Attorney General—had you, substantially, instructions to that effect?

A. I cannot say that I had instructions with reference to the matter.

Q. Did you take that to be the Attorney General's desire, as the general result of the conversation with him?

A. I may say that I thought the Attorney General did acquiesce in his being admitted to bail. This, however, was an inference of mine, not drawn from any language actually used, or any remark made by him.

Q. Did you not come to Washington for the purpose of getting advice in reference to the matter?

A. I did.

Q. And you went away with that impression, after your conversation with the Attorney General?

A. Yes, sir; I have been exceedingly desirous, at all times, to know fully what were the views of the administration in reference to that matter. I deemed it to be a matter of public concernment. I believed the trial, if it came off, would be one of the most important trials which the world ever saw. I did not think it right that the whole onus of the matter should be placed on my shoulders. I thought it right that the administration should give me definite, positive, and precise instructions.

Q. Did it ever do so?

A. Never. The whole matter has been left to me.

Q. It is also stated in the newspaper report that the United States, which was represented by you, declared that it was not ready to go to trial. Had you any instructions to that effect?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why were you not ready to go to trial?

A. I have already said that I deemed it a question of very great importance, one of the most important questions that had ever been presented, or could be presented to the consideration of a court—the question as to whether the action of a State, or of any number of States, could exonerate a citizen from the allegiance which was due to the United States. I therefore thought that if Mr. Davis was ever brought to trial, he should be tried with all the pomp and circumstance of judicial procedure. I remembered the fact that when Aaron Burr was on trial, in the city of Richmond, some sixty years before, Chief Justice Marshall presided. I thought Mr. Davis, when tried, should be tried by the Chief Justice of the United States, whose duty it was to preside in that circuit, and I did feel unwilling to go to trial before Judge Underwood, not on account of a distrust that I had of Judge Underwood's ability or fairness, but simply because I would not have been willing to go to trial before any district judge of the United States. I do not mean to say that I would not have tried Mr. Davis before a district judge, but that I felt an unwillingness to do so. I thought then, I think now, that any opinion of the court, on any points that might arise in the trial, would be entitled to much more respect if endorsed by the Chief Justice, than it could possibly be coming from any district judge, however learned in the law he might be.

Q. Then, if I understand you correctly, that is what you meant by declaring you were not ready to go to trial?

A. Yes, sir. I had always told the Attorney General—both Mr. Speed and Mr. Stanbery—that I wished, if I had anything to do with the case, to have a new indictment prepared. I stated to them substantially what I have stated to the Committee in reference to the first indictment, how hurriedly it was drawn; that I supposed the Attorney General himself would be present at the trial; that other counsel would be employed, and that any new indictment that might be found should be prepared on consultation with those gentlemen who were to be associated with me in the trial. I saw the Attorney General, Mr. Stanbery, several times in reference to the trial. The Attorney General stated to me, on one or two occasions, that I must prepare an additional indictment. I did make preparations for another indictment, but I did not draw it out regularly, for the reason that I thought it not only a matter of courtesy, but a matter of great importance, that all the gentlemen who, on behalf of the government, were to take part in the trial, should be consulted as to the framing of the indictment.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you say so to the Attorney General, Mr. Stanbery?

A. I did.

Q. What response did he make to that?

A. He seemed to assent to the reasonableness of my opinion in the matter, but he told me that I had perhaps better go and prepare an indictment; and I should have prepared an indictment at the present term if Mr. Davis had been tried.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was there anything that prevented you from doing it?

A. No, sir; except that I should have had to prepare it without consultation with any one.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Could you not have had consultation with Mr. Evarts?

A. I could after he got to Richmond, but he did not get there until Sunday, and Mr. Davis was presented in court next day by General Burton.

Q. Did you submit that suggestion to Mr. Evarts, as to the propriety of considering the subject of a new indictment?

A. I think I did. I have but very little doubt that I stated to him I should prefer to have a new indictment.

Q. What did Mr. Evarts reply?

A. I do not recollect what he did say in regard to it. I am not entirely certain whether I made that suggestion to him, but I think I must have done so. I know that on several occasions I endeavored to impress on Mr. Stanbery's mind the idea that I was anxious for another indictment, and wanted it prepared on consultation with all who were of counsel for the United States.

Q. When the Attorney General acquiesced in your suggestion that there should be another indictment prepared, and suggested that you prepare it, was it with the understanding, from anything that passed between you, that that indictment, when prepared, was to be submitted for consideration to the Attorney General, and other counsel in the case, before being presented to the grand jury?

A. Not to the Attorney General. On the contrary, I inferred, from what the Attorney General said to me, that he did not propose taking part in the trial, and that he did not propose to have anything to do with framing the indictment that might be prepared; that he deemed his duty as Attorney General was confined to the city of Washington, to the arguing of cases in the Supreme Court; and that he would not take any part in the trial of Mr. Davis. I do not mean to say that he was not willing to be consulted as to the indictment.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did he make any statement to you showing whether or not he was acting under orders from the President?

A. He did not.

Q. Did he make any suggestion to you, or do anything calculated to encourage you to cause a new indictment to be made, or to aid you in making it?

A. Not to aid me. He suggested to me that I had better prepare a new indictment, after I had expressed to him my views on the matter.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did he not tell you by no means to go to trial unless you were entirely satisfied that your indictment was sufficient?

A. I think that some suggestion of that kind was made by him to me.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Had you any conversation with the Attorney General in reference to the continuance of the case, or its postponement to the next term, for the want of readiness to try it?

A. He asked me whether I could be ready for trial at this term. I told him that I could be ready for trial. I expressed to him the objections that I had to try the case before a district judge. I expressed these very strongly indeed, for I felt them strongly.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you ever make known to Judge Underwood your reason for not desiring to try Davis?

A. Certainly, sir. I should have deemed that I was not treating him with the courtesy due to him at my hands if I had not done so. He might have misunderstood the motives which actuated me in the matter.

Q. Did you have, at any time, interviews with Chief Justice Chase in reference to the trial of Mr. Davis?

A. I had on two or three occasions. The last interview I had with him was within three or four weeks.

Q. What took place between you and him in reference to the trial of Mr. Davis?

A. I endeavored to get from the Chief Justice an intimation as to whether he would be present at the trial. I stated to him the objections I had to trying the case unless he was present, saying to him, in substance, what I have already said to the Committee. Chief Justice Chase would give me no intimation as to whether he would or would not be present at the trial. He stated that it would, of course, be impossible for him to be there until after the 20th of May, that being the day fixed upon for the adjournment of the Supreme Court. He said to me that he did not see why Mr. Davis occupied any different position from any other man against whom an indictment had been found for any crime, and that he thought he should be treated the same as any other criminal. He said that if he was present he would of course take part in the trial; but if he were not present, Mr. Davis should be tried before Judge Underwood.

Q. When was that interview?

A. Certainly within four or five weeks past. It must have been after the announcement of the order as to the time for adjourning the Supreme Court.

Q. Did anything more occur at that interview between you and the Chief Justice in reference to the trial of Davis?

A. I am not certain. I met Judge Chase on the sidewalk between 9 and 10 o'clock in the morning, and accompanied him to the banking-house of Jay Cooke & Co., and from there to the Capitol. The conversation was a very brief one. I had on two or three other occasions seen the Chief Justice, and endeavored to ascertain whether he would be present at the trial, but I never could. The first time I saw Chief Justice Chase, he stated to me that he should not hold a court in Virginia so long as the military was in command there; that martial law prevailed; that Virginia was under the control of the military; and that while he did not know that there was any objection to the district judge holding court there, he could not consent to do so. This must have been some time in the summer or fall of 1866. The next time I saw him was when he was holding court in Baltimore. I went into the court-room, and he beckoned to me to come up to the bench. I did so. He then repeated the objections which he had to holding court in Virginia, and said that he was confirmed in the correctness of his course by information which he had received in regard to what Chief Justice Taney had done; that Chief Justice Taney had refused to hold a circuit court in Maryland unless assured by the administration that there should be no interference, under any circumstance, on the part of the military; that he did receive such assurance from the administration, and that he then went on to hold his court. The next interview I had with the Chief Justice was after the President's proclamation in reference to peace. He stated to me then that he had made up his mind to hold a court in Virginia, but that the President, he thought, had by some subsequent order taken back that proclamation, and that he was not willing to hold a court in Virginia. On a subsequent occasion he said to me that the President had issued another proclamation, which he thought covered the whole case, and he authorized me to say to the Attorney General that he was willing then to hold a court in Virginia. He stated the fact to me first that he was willing to hold a court in Virginia, and I asked him if I should be authorized to say so to the Attorney General. He said yes. I went to the Attorney General and communicated to him that fact. That, I think, must have been late last fall, or perhaps some time during last winter.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. In your last interview with Chief Justice Chase, did he make any objection on account of the military power in Virginia?

A. None whatever. I could not get any definite answer from him.

Q. Did he raise that question?

A. Not at either of the last two interviews.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. On this knowledge of the purpose of Chief Justice Chase to be at the session of the circuit court some time after the 20th of May, why did not you and Mr. Evarts ask for a postponement of the trial of Davis for a few days until the Chief Justice should arrive?

A. Immediately on our saying that we were not ready for trial, a motion was was made by Mr. O'Conor to have Mr. Davis admitted to bail.

Q. Was not there a way of meeting that motion without postponing the trial till next November?

A. There would have been.

Q. Why was not that course resorted to by you and Mr. Evarts?

A. I can only give the reason that actuated me. I did not, myself, suppose that the Chief Justice would be present.

Q. Was that your impression from the last interview you had with him?

A. I cannot say that it was my impression from anything that was said by him. I had no right to draw, from his conversation, any inference as to whether he would or would not be there; but I know that in some way I did infer that he would not be.

Q. You had no knowledge from any other source that he was likely to be there or not?

A. Judge Underwood had stated to me that he would be; but Judge Underwood's inference was from a letter which he had received from the Chief Justice some considerable time before the interview which I had with him.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you advise the Attorney General of your purpose to have the case continued over to the next or any subsequent term?

A. I think not. I was asked the question on more than one occasion whether a conviction could be had in case Mr. Davis was tried. Mr. Speed seemed to entertain the idea that it would be impossible to obtain a verdict against him, and seemed, as did Mr. Stanbery, to think that it would be much worse to have a trial and a verdict of acquittal, or a hung jury, than not to try him. I stated, both to Mr. Speed and Mr. Stanbery, just what I now believe, that an intelligent jury, a jury in every way fit to try any man for any offence, could be had in the city of Richmond; and that, in the view that I took of the law and of the facts, there would be no question as to a conviction. I know that both those gentlemen seemed to be very much surprised at my opinion. But I have never had any doubt that Mr. Davis could be brought to trial and convicted of treason.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. How long have you been district attorney in Virginia?

A. I entered on the discharge of my duties on the first of July, 1863.

Q. There never has been any difficulty, since you have been district attorney, in getting an impartial loyal jury in Virginia that would convict men against whom there was sufficient evidence of treason?

A. None. I should have gone before a jury with great confidence of obtaining a verdict where the facts were anything like what could be proven against Mr. Davis.

Q. There is no law against negroes acting as jurors in your district?

A. Nothing but the civil-rights bill would authorize putting colored men on a jury. I did find some little objection to having that grand jury find a bill, lest the matter might be somewhat complicated by having colored men on the grand jury—the law of Virginia being explicit in regard to the matter, and the civil-rights bill being the only legislation under which they could be put on the jury.

Q. You could have been prepared with all the necessary evidence against Davis at the present term of the circuit court in Virginia?

A. Yes. Richmond was the precise place where the testimony could be found.

Q. And the only reason you had for not proceeding with the trial was the fact that Chief Justice Chase was not there?

A. That was one reason.

Q. What other reason was there?

A. There was no other reason that had much weight with me.

Q. It was not the inability to procure evidence?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are there not many thousands of persons in Virginia who could be brought to trial for treason?

A. I think they could be numbered by tens of thousands.

Q. Have you ever prosecuted any one of them?

A. Never.

Q. Has any one of them, except Davis, ever been indicted?

A. Yes.

Q. Who, and how many?

A. I think there are eighteen indicted besides Davis. It is impossible to give all their names now. General Lee, for one, has been indicted.

Q. Is the indictment pending against him?

A. Yes.

Q. Has any one of them ever been tried?

A. Never.

Q. Have you ever received any instructions from the President, Attorney General, or any other officer of the administration giving you any directions as to their trial?

A. Yes.

Q. From whom, and when?

A. I think from Attorney General Speed. I received instructions not to proceed any further in any of the indictments against any individual other than Mr. Davis. The letter of instructions did not mention Mr. Davis's name, but directed me not to proceed any further in those matters until specially instructed by the Attorney General.

Q. When were those eighteen indictments found?

A. I think at the November term of 1865, in the district court at Norfolk.

(Witness was directed to furnish the Committee with the Attorney General's letter of instructions.)

Q. Did you ever receive any instructions from the President, Attorney General, or any other officer, to proceed against anybody for treason?

A. Never.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You have referred to the question as to whether the action of any State or any number of States can relieve a citizen of his obligation of allegiance to the government of the United States, which, of course, would bring up the doctrine of secession; I wish to ask you whether it is your intention, or the intention of counsel associated with you, to assent to the consideration of that question in this case?

A. I can only say that, unless overruled by the counsel associated with me, I should have taken an objection, at the threshold, to any such question being entertained by the court. I by no means feel certain that the objection would have been sustained, but still I should have felt it my duty to make it.

Q. Have you any reason to believe that the objection would not have been sustained?

A. None whatever, except that I do not feel entirely certain in my own mind as to its correctness, although I think that the balance is in favor of the objection. My impressions are more strongly in favor of the soundness of the objection than otherwise.

Q. Have you had any consultation with your associate counsel in reference to that question?

A. No, sir. The only conversation I ever had on that point was a very brief one which I had with you (the Chairman.) I remember to have listened with great interest to what you said on the subject.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you mean to be understood as saying that if counsel for defence should raise that question the court would not have a right to decide it?

A. No, sir. The court would have an undoubted right to decide it. I say I think the court would decide that it would not entertain the question.

Q. Do you hold, as a lawyer, that it would be moral treason for the court to entertain and decide that question?

A. No, sir; I say no such thing.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Is it your purpose to proceed with the trial of Jefferson Davis at the November term?

A. Undoubtedly, except I receive instructions to the contrary.

Q. Have you any reason to believe that you will receive instructions not to proceed?

A. None whatever.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Did you inform the Attorney General that you had been referred by the President to him for instructions?

A. I did.

Q. Were you able then to ascertain the wishes of the administration in reference to the trial of Davis?

A. I was not.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Have you any idea, from your consultations with the administration, that there was any desire on the part of the administration not to bring Mr. Davis to trial?

A. None whatever.

Q. Did you come to the conclusion that the administration desired his trial?

A. I could not come to any conclusion about it. I was exceedingly anxious to know, but I never could ascertain.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did you have any intimation that it was not the desire of the administration for you to perform your duty?

A. Never in the world.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you, by the President, been interfered with in any manner in the management of the case?

A. Certainly not.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. When you were referred to the Attorney General it was when Mr. Speed was in office?

A. Yes, at first.

Q. You have been so referred while both he and Mr. Stanbery were in office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The President always told you that it was a matter entirely in the jurisdiction of the Attorney General?

A. Always; and I always found the same indisposition on the part of Mr. Speed as on the part of Mr. Stanbery to give me instructions in the matter.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you inform the President of the result of your interviews with the Attorney General?

A. I think not, although it is quite possible that I did so. Indeed it is probable, on account of the extreme solicitude which I felt. But I have no recollection of it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. I want to know whether the President gave you any directions whatever, or anybody else, to your knowledge, as to the form of the return on the writ of habeas corpus?

A. None whatever. I never had a word's conversation with him on the subject.

Q. What you meant by the words which you added to the return was that the President ordered the military to deliver Mr. Davis to the civil authorities?

A. That was it.

[Copy.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., June 20, 1866.

LUCIUS H. CHANDLER, Esq.,
United States District Attorney, Norfolk, Va.

SIR: I learn that many of the rebel officers and soldiers that were paroled by capitulation have been indicted. I am instructed by the President to direct you not to have warrants of arrest taken out against them, or any of them, until further orders.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

A true copy:
M. F. PLEASANTS, Chief Clerk.
MAY 29, 1867.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, May 24, 1867.

Brigadier General J. S. FULLERTON recalled.

WITNESS. I produce, as directed by the Committee when I was last before it, transcripts from the records of the Freedmen's Bureau in New Orleans, relating to the restoration of certain property which had been held by the Freedmen's Bureau and which was restored to its owners while I was temporarily acting as Commissioner of the Bureau in the State of Louisiana. I stated in my previous examination that Mr. Conway had not restored much property. I was under that impression from the fact that when I returned to New Orleans I found on his desk a large number of applications for the restoration of property, which had been examined by his attorney and reported upon, and which, in accordance with General Howard's order, ought to have been restored. Judging from that fact I thought that Mr. Conway had restored very little property. I have here a statement of the property restored by Mr. Conway, by myself, and by my successor, General Baird.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was the property which was restored by Mr. Conway abandoned property or confiscable property, or both?

A. Both; I do not know in what proportions. Mr. Conway, during the five months he was in office, restored fifty-four pieces of city property, valued at $974,050, and three plantations, value not given. There were restored by myself 136 pieces of city property, valued at $2,049,577, and twenty-two plantations, value not given. There were restored by General Baird, my successor, sixty-six pieces of city property, valued at $845,400, and sixteen plantations, value not given.

(Witness presents table of restored property which is attached to his testimony, marked exhibit A.)

This paper, exhibit B, is a tabular statement of property restored while I was acting as Commissioner there. It is divided into separate columns, showing the name of the owner, the description of property, the value, how held, by whose order restored, with a column for remarks. The description of property is brief, merely stating whether it is city property or plantations. The value given here is the value as it appears on the books of the Commissioner of Louisiana.

Q. How was the value ascertained?

A. I think it was the taxable value in 1860. This bundle, marked exhibit C, contains the opinions of the attorney of the bureau in cases examined by him where application had been made for the restoration of the property. On this list of 173 pieces of property restored by me, all of the property is marked as "abandoned," except fourteen pieces. These are marked "confiscable," except four pieces, which are marked "Virginia rebel." I suppose the mark means that the property belonged to some party living in Virginia. There are also a few pieces marked "Registered enemy." Of the property restored by myself, eighteen pieces were restored by direct orders from General Howard, value about $500,000; and nineteen pieces were restored to persons who had received a special pardon from the President. The rest of the property was restored to persons who had been pardoned under the general proclamation of amnesty, or was property which had not been properly abandoned. This was done in accordance with General Howard's circular, No. 15, dated Washington, September 12, 1865, (annexed to this evidence, marked exhibit D.) Whenever application was made to me for the restoration of property, I directed that all of the papers and evidence presented by the claimant should be handed to the attorney of the bureau, a gentleman whom Mr. Conway had employed, before I went there, to examine claims. All those papers were referred to him, and the applicants were all required to file answers to certain interrogatories, twenty-four in number, (the interrogatories are annexed to this testimony, marked exhibit E.) The claimants for property were required to answer those interrogatories under oath. On examining the papers, Mr. Ayers, the attorney, reported. I also examined the case myself, and if I thought the property should be restored under General Howard's order, I issued an order in this form: (See exhibit F.)

Thereupon an order would be issued to the quartermaster for the surrender of the property, in the following form: (See exhibit G.)

Thereupon the claimant gave a receipt in this form: (See exhibit H.)

The claimant was then put in possession of his property by the quartermaster. Before I went to New Orleans, I was not certain that the Freedmen's Bureau had any right to the possession of city property, and I based that idea on the fact that the law for the organization of the Freedmen's Bureau states that to that bureau shall be committed the supervision and management of all abandoned lands, and that the Commissioner shall have authority to set apart for the use of the loyal refugees and freedmen such tracts of lands within the insurrectionary States as were abandoned, or to which the United States acquired title by confiscation, &c. Nearly all the property taken in New Orleans was city property. It was evident that what was intended by the act was to take abandoned lands in the country for the purpose of dividing them up into small tracts of not more than forty acres, to enable the freedmen to support themselves on these lands, and that it was not intended to take possession of city property for the purpose of affording a revenue to the bureau. The act, I supposed, referred also only to such tracts of lands as had been abandoned within the insurrectionary States. The only States declared insurrectionary were those declared by Mr. Lincoln's proclamation of January 1, 1863, and in that proclamation New Orleans was declared not to be insurrectionary. With these views, I was not certain that the bureau had the right to seize city property, but General Howard disagreed with me, and of course I had nothing further to say. That opinion of mine did not govern me at all in the restoration of any property during my administration.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You restored the property under the construction given to the act by General Howard?

A. Entirely so; under the construction of Circular No. 15.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you restore any property other than in pursuance of the order of General Howard?

A. No, sir. The property was restored either under his general order or under his special orders. There were eighteen pieces restored under his special orders.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. The special orders directed you to restore particular pieces of property?

A. Yes; specifying the property and the name of the owner. I did not inquire into the status of the individual in such cases, as the order came from my superior.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Were not some of those plantations within that portion of Louisiana which was declared by the proclamation of the President to be in insurrection?

A. I think they were, but I am not positive about that fact.

Q. Had you known at that time that by the act of March 3, 1865, provision was made for the division of these lands into forty-acre lots?

A. Yes; I had knowledge of that act. Most of the property was seized by the Treasury Department before the bureau was organized, and was afterwards turned over to the bureau.

Q. On the 18th of August, 1865, you were acting as Commissioner during the absence of General Howard?

A. I was assistant Adjutant General of the bureau, and I did many acts for General Howard while he was away.

Q. Under date of August 18, 1865, is a letter of instructions with your name attached, of which the following is an extract:

Abandoned lands that have been taken possession of by the Commissioner of this bureau are, as it were, held for the time in trust by the government, awaiting the return of the loyal citizen, or, in the case of a disloyal owner, awaiting proceedings for confiscation, which may be prevented or stayed by the pardon of the President. Where the lands belong to loyal citizens, it will be restored to them upon proof of loyalty, and upon establishing the right of possession.

Where it belongs to those who have been disloyal, it will be returned only after they have been pardoned by the President, for by that act they are cleansed of treason, regenerated, and restored to full rights of citizenship. The lands cannot then be held awaiting confiscation, for the citizen has been restored, in accordance with the terms of pardon, "all rights of property, except as to slaves."

State whether you have any recollection of issuing that order.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you issue that order on your own motion or judgment, or by direction or advice of any other person?

A. I was always in the habit of writing letters when General Howard was away; and, as General Howard was away at that time, you will notice that this is not signed by me "by order of General Howard." But I understood those to be his ideas at the time, and the theory on which property was to be restored. In fact, General Howard never denied or set aside this letter.

Q. Do you know of any letter issued by General Howard of an earlier date than this, which contains the same matter, in substance, as is contained in this letter?

A. The act of Congress of July 2, 1864, defines what are abandoned lands. Such lands are only abandoned when the lawful owner thereof is voluntarily absent therefrom, engaged in arms, or otherwise aiding or encouraging the rebellion. If a loyal man was absent from his property, he would not be aiding and encouraging the rebellion, and the land, therefore, in accordance with that definition, would not be abandoned.

Q. You say, further, that where the land belongs to disloyal persons who are pardoned by the President, they become cleansed of treason, and restored to all their rights of property, except as to slaves. By what authority did you make that statement?

A. It was the understanding, at that time, that pardon did cleanse a man of his sins.

Q. Did you have any instructions from the President, the Attorney General, or any other officer of the government in reference to this particular matter?

A. No, sir. I went over to see the Attorney General about it, but was informed that he only gave his opinions to heads of departments. General Sprague wanted to know about the matter right away. General Howard was absent and could not be reached, and I had to take the responsibility of answering the question.

Q. I now call your attention to a letter dated "Executive Office, August 16, 1865," as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, August 16, 1865.

Respectfully returned to the Commissioner of the Bureau of Freedmen, Refugees, &c. The records of this office show that B. B. Leake was specially pardoned by the President on the 27th ultimo, and was thereby restored to all rights of property, except as to slaves.

Notwithstanding this, it is understood that the possession of his property is withheld from him. I have, therefore, to direct that General Fisk, assistant Commissioner at Nashville, Tennessee, be instructed by the chief Commissioner of the Bureau of Freedmen, &c., to relinquish possession of the property of Mr. Leake, held by him as assistant Commissioner, &c., and that the same be immediately restored to the said Leake.

The same action will be had in all similar cases.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

Q. State whether you had knowledge of this order by the President at the time you wrote the letter to General Sprague.

A. I remember this order of the President's, but I think it was not received before my letter was written; I am not positive about that. I do not recollect whether I had knowledge of it at the time.

Q. In a list of property restored, furnished to the Committee by General Howard, is the case of Cora A. Slocum, whose property was restored by order of the President; have you any knowledge of that restoration?

A. I have not.

Q. The property of Mrs. Widon N. Cox, value $4,000, was restored by order of the President, September 30, 1865; have you any knowledge of that?

A. I have not.

Q. By order of the President, same date, the property of Ida A. Slocumb, value $10,000, was restored; have you any knowledge of that?

A. I have not.

Q. The property of Dr. W. M. Mercer, value $85,000, for cotton press, with several other lots, valued at different sums, was restored by special pardon of the President; have you any knowledge of that?

A. No, sir; I have no recollection of it.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the restoration of the property of George W. Campbell, by order of the President, September 30, 1865?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the restoration of the property of William A. Violett, by order of the President, October 17, 1865?

A. No, sir.

Q. It appears from the list furnished by General Howard, that on the 11th of November, 1865, on your order, J. W. Zacharie obtained restoration of property amounting in all to over $200,000; what were the circumstances in that case?

A. The papers in that case were all forwarded to Washington, except the order book. The only thing on the book about it is an order dated October 27, 1865, as follows: (See exhibit I.)

Q. Do you know whether Zacharie had been a rebel?

A. He swore he had not been; and my impression is that he filed his answers to the twenty-four interrogatories.

Q. Do you know anything of Zacharie outside of the papers you refer to?

A. I know that there was a report in New Orleans that he had been a blockade runner, and that he had gone to Mexico to engage in the business. I spoke to Mr. Zacharie about it and he denied it, and brought some papers to prove that he was not engaged in blockade running, and had done nothing hostile to the government. That is all I know about it. I think it was General Canby who called my attention to the fact. There was an enmity existing between General Canby and Mr. Zacharie, and they were abusing each other.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You have been to New Orleans personally since you were examined before the Committee, and have procured those papers from the Freedmen's Bureau?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are there papers in every case where you restored property?

A. In every case except where the property was restored by a special order of General Howard, or under a special pardon of the President, and except in one case in which the papers are missing. There were no papers either in one or two cases where property was restored under the general amnesty order, nor in two cases where it was restored by the court.

Q. Were all those cases examined by the attorney who was appointed by Mr. Conway?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your orders were based on his finding of the facts?

A. Yes, and on his reports embraced in exhibit "C." More than half the property restored by me, and held as abandoned, was really not abandoned. There had been all sorts of ways of seizing property. When a man was living in the city, having a tenant on his plantation, the plantation was seized as abandoned. Under General Butler's and General Banks's administration there were a great many persons in New Orleans registered as enemies of the United States.

Some of them were registered under protest, and were sent out of the lines, and their property seized and abandoned. In some of those cases the parties made proof of their loyalty, not only of their loyalty before that time, but after that time.

Q. What proportion of property that was restored by you was not properly abandoned lands?

A. At least one-half or more. These reports (in exhibit "C") will tell.

Q. Do the reports show in every case the facts with reference to the lands, showing how they were claimed to be abandoned?

A. No, sir; that is shown but in a few cases. There was such a large file of papers that it was impossible to have them copied, and so I had only the reports of the attorney copied. The papers filed by the applicants I did not have copied.

Q. You stated on your previous examination that there were some cases where soldiers desiring possession of lands drove the occupants off, and kept them off, and then seized them as abandoned lands?

A. I stated that persons were sent out of the lines, and that then their property was seized by the military authorities as abandoned lands.

Q. Do you recollect any cases in which the occupants were driven from the premises occupied by them, and their lands seized as abandoned?

A. I cannot speak by the record. I did not examine the papers thoroughly enough for that. There were cases of that kind reported to me while I was there.

Q. Do the papers contain all the knowledge you have on the subject?

A. No, sir.

Q. What knowledge have you of that practice, independent of the papers?

A. The only evidence I have is the statements of claimants themselves—verbal statements and written statements. There was no property seized while I was there. It was all done before.

Q. I notice many cases here that are entered as restored by special pardon of the President of the United States. Did the President in those cases make any special order for restoration, or was the property restored on the presentation of the pardon?

A. It was restored on the presentation of the pardon. I received no orders from the President while I was there.

Q. Those cases noticed "restored by special order of the President of the United States" do not mean that he issued any special order for the restoration of the property?

A. No, sir. On presentation by the claimants of the President's special pardon the property was restored; that is what that entry means.

Q. Was this valuation attached to the lands their valuation prior to the rebellion?

A. I think so. I think it was the valuation taken from the tax-books of 1860 or 1861.

Q. Was property depreciated in value at the time you restored it?

A. At the time I restored property it was, I suppose, equivalent to what it had been. The war was over, and a good many people were going to New Orleans at the time, and property had gone up.

Q. You think it was as valuable then as previous to the war?

A. I think it was.

Q. I mean in reference to lands?

A. Lands were hardly worth one-fourth of what they were worth before. I was speaking only of city property.

Q. How was it as to unimproved city property? How was that compared with its value previous to the war?

A. I do not think it was so valuable, because building material had increased in cost, and it was the finished houses that rented so high. Rents were as high or higher than before the rebellion; but plantations had decreased more than one-half in value.

Q. Did the President, either in conversation with you, or by any orders, directly interfere with your administration?

A. No, sir.

Q. He left you to the directions of your superior officers in the bureau?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You referred to a number of cases where you had restored property which you denominated as confiscated?

A. No, sir, "confiscable."

Q. Were there any of those cases in which judicial proceedings had been initiated?

A. Only two cases, and they had been dismissed by the United States court.

Q. Whose cases were they?

A. The case of Mr. T. S. Wilts, for a house and lot worth $36,600, and a tract of land worth $7,000, and the case of Mr. L. Adams, for a house and lot worth $6,500. These were the only cases. The property was released by a decree of the United States court.

Q. Do you say that in those cases there were indictments found against the parties for treason?

A. No, sir; there was no indictment found. The proceedings were against the property.

Q. In those cases there were judgments of the court in pursuance of which the property was released?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In other words, the decision was against the United States?

A. Yes, sir.

EXHIBIT A.

Number of pieces of property in possession of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands, State of Louisiana, restored to former owners, with the valuation of same.

By whom restored.	No. of pieces.	Kind of property.	Valuation.
Thomas W. Conway	54	Town property	$974,050 00
Thomas W. Conway	3	Plantations	.....
General Fullerton	136	Town property	2,049,577 00
General Fullerton	22	Plantations	.....
General Baird	66	Town property	845,400 00
General Baird	16	Plantations	.....
Total valuation	.....	.....	3,869,027 00

Official:

WILLIAM H. GTULING,
Captain 1st U. S. Infantry, A. A. A. G.

EXHIBIT B.

List of property in possession of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands, State of Louisiana, restored to its former owners by Brevet Brigadier General J. S. Fullerton, assistant Commissioner, &c.

Name.	Description of property.	Value.	How held.	By whose order restored.	Remarks.
M. M. Simpson	City houses and lots	$12,000	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 1.
Loyd R. Coleman	do	7,500	do	do	See papers No. 2.
H. A. Lessasier	do	9,500	do	do	See papers No. 3.
Eugene Lasere	Storehouse and lots	10,000	do	do	See papers No. 4.
R. W. Rayne	do	8,555	do	do	See papers No. 5.
John G. Parkham	City house and lots	8,500	Confiscable	do	See papers No. 6.
R. J. Harrison	do	6,000	Abandoned	By order of General Howard
Robert C. Hutchinson	do	11,000	do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 7.
Ellen C. Rugeley	do	21,100	do	do	See papers No. 8.
Eheric Bowland	Plantation		do	do	See papers No. 9.
J. E. Guillotte	City houses, stables, and lots	2,800	do	do	See papers No. 10.
Norman Story	City houses, stores, and lots	82,000	Confiscable	By special pardon of the President
J. V. Payne	Plantation		Abandoned	do
John W. Gayle	City houses and lots	18,500	do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 11.
L. C. H. Bennett	do	5,000	do	do	See papers No. 12.
Garcia Nee, Fortier	do	8,500	do	do	See papers No. 13.
T. D. Vanhorn	do	2,500	do	do	Restored under the general amnesty order.
C. H. Nobles	City storehouses and lots	7,000	do	do	Do. do.
C. E. & N. Holmes	City houses and lots	13,000	do	do	The papers in this case cannot be found.
F. M. Delesdenier	do	8,000	do	do	See papers No. 14.
Joshua Pebles	do	10,900	do	do	See papers No. 15.
W. C. Bibb	City house and lot	13,000	do	do	See papers No. 16.
L. N. Lane	One cotton-spinning manufactory and city houses and lots.	*122,200	do	do	See papers No. 17.
Goodrich & Co	City storehouses and lots	88,000	Libel, con'd, and sold	do	See papers No. 18.
Justin Vairin	City house and lot	9,000	Abandoned	By order of General Howard
Walter L. Campbell	do	15,000	do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 19.
L. C. Jurey	do		do	By order of General Howard
Louis Ranson	Plantation		do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 20.
R. D. Urquhart	City houses and lots	32,000	do	do	See papers No. 21.
A. D. Voisin	do	3,800	do	do	Restored under general amnesty order.
H. Thornhill	do	10,000	do	do	See papers No. 22.
Widow George Eustis	do	18,000	do	do	See papers No. 23.
John S. Ludlow	do	5,300	do	do	See papers No. 24.
Sophia Buisson	do	6,000	do	do	See papers No. 25.
A. W. Bosworth	do	18,000	Confiscable	By order of General Howard
Adelaide S. Flash	do	11,500	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 26.
John M. Back	do	8,650	do	By order of General Howard
Charles Spahr	do	2,500	do	By order of General Fullerton	Restored under general amnesty order.
M. J. Belknap	do	6,000	do	do	See papers No. 27.

* This property was not restored; order of restoration revoked.

Exhibit B.—Continued.

Name.	Description of property.	Value.	How held.	By whose order restored.	Remarks.
J. A. De Blanc	....do	$2,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 28.
J. E. Mortimer	City lots, (not assessed)		....do	....do....do	See papers No. 29.
W. F. Foinard	City houses in Baton Rouge		....do	....do....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Charles B. Singleton	City storehouse and lots	31,600	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 31.
Widow John Freret	....do	10,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 32.
A. D. Kelley	....do	58,500	....do	....do....do	Restored by virtue of an order of restoration issued from the May term, 1865, of the United States district court for the eastern district of Louisiana.
Edw. Bermudez	....do	13,200	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 33.
Eugene C. Delery	City house and lot	2,750	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 34.
John Bradford	....do	2,500	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 35.
L. Adams	....do	6,500	Rebel in prison	....do....do	Restored by decree of United States court.
S. Wyma	....do	2,000	Abandoned	....do....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Victor Barthe	....do	9,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 36.
W. B. Conner	....do	20,000	....do	By order of General Howard
M. J. Bajac	....do	16,000	....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 37.
Edm'd Mahs	....do	1,600	....do	....do....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Joseph Garidel	....do	4,500	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 39.
A. Pitot	....do	4,500	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 40.
G. M. Murrell	City stores, houses, and lots	33,000	Virginia rebel	By order of General Howard
Ed. M. Murrell	City storehouses and lots	34,000	....do	....do....do
J. D. Lambert	City house and lot	2,000	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	Restored under general amnesty order.
J. Magioni	....do	3,700	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 41.
Adele McGill	....do	9,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 42.
William Barrett	....do	10,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 43.
C. W. Carruthers	....do	12,578	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 44.
M. A. Rogers	....do	10,000	Registered enemy	....do....do	See papers No. 45.
William E. Leverieche	....do	71,800	Abandoned	....do....do	See papers No. 46.
O. S. Rousseau	....do	4,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 47.
R. W. Eslin	City stores and lots	13,000	....do	By order of General Howard
Thomas J. Buffington	Buildings		....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 48.
Calvin Tate	City house and lot, (no value)		....do	....do....do	See papers No. 49.
A. W. Bell	Buildings		....do	....do....do	See papers No. 50.
Jane N. Sims	City houses and lots	4,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 51.
A. B. Mary S. Ellis	Plantation		....do	By order of General Howard	See papers No. 111.
P. Sauve	....do		....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 52.
B. F. Simms	City house and lot	7,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No 53.
Thomas Simms	....do	6,300	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 54.
McB. Wolfe	....do	7,000	....do	By order of General Howard
Mrs. J. K. Warren	....do	1,200	....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 55.
J. A. Fagot	City lots	3,450	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 56.
J. J. Barthelmy	City house and lots	1,400	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 57.
Alfred Hennen	City storehouses and lot	24,000	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 58.
H. B. Harris	City house and lot	2,800	....do	....do....do	See papers No. 59.

James Marshall	City houses and lots	2,500	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 60.
J. C. Payne	.....do	25,000	....do	By order of General Howard
W. E. Strange	.....do	5,000	....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 61.
O. J. Donella	.....do	3,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 62.
M. S. Zuntz	.....do	15,500	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 63.
George Dermeyer	City houses and lots and store	16,500	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 64.
Thomas L. Maxwell	City houses and lots	3,520	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 65.
M. L. Caldwell	City houses and lots	10,000	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 66.
O. G. Murell, estate of	City storehouses and lots	29,000	Virginia rebel	By order of General Howard
Mrs. R. E. Clayton	City warehouses and lots	36,000	....do	.....do.....do
M. L. H. Blanchard	City storehouses and lots	12,000	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 67.
J. D. Belanné	City house and lot	4,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 68.
Horrell, Gayle & Co	City lots	9,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 11.
A. H. May	City house and lot	9,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 69.
E. M. Brooks	.....do		....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 70.
J. B. Slawson	.....do	17,300	....do	By order of General Howard
James L. Lambert	.....do	1,300	....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 71.
H. R. Doyal	Plantation		....do	.....do.....do	Papers in this case ret'd to claimant's att'y.
Este. J. B. Touline	City houses and lots	17,000	....do	.....do.....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Mary Vaughan	City house and lot	1,500	....do	.....do.....do	Do. do.
Amos Downe	Pilot house and lot		....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 72.
W. B. Lindsey	City house and lot	4,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 73.
John H. Ludwizen	.....do		....do	.....do.....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Warren Gilmour & Co	.....do		....do	.....do.....do	Do. do.
P. S. Wiltz	City house and lots	36,000	....do	.....do.....do	Restored in accordance with order of United States district court for the eastern district of Louisiana, May term, 1865.
Do	Tract of land	7,000	....do	.....do.....do
J. D. Dameron	City vacant lots	32,200	....do	By special pardon of the President
E. L. Latting	City house and lot	5,200	....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 74.
Thomas B. Bailey	.....do	8,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 75.
George Doler	.....do	2,500	....do	.....do.....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Sarah Morgan	.....do		....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 76.
W. H. Paxton	.....do	2,520	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 77.
A. S. Cowand	.....do	2,500	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 78.
William A. Freret	.....do	15,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 79.
R. Holmes	.....do	7,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 80.
F. S. Conrad	.....do	25,000	....do	.....do.....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
A. L. D. Conrad	Plantation		....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 81.
E. H. Summers	City house and lot	5,000	....do	.....do.....do	See papers No. 82.
H. W. Montgomery	City store and lot	45,000	....do	By special pardon of the President
Benjamin S. Story	.....do	92,000	Confiscable	.....do.....do
John Tilano	City store and lot at Baton Rouge		....do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 83.
James Davis	City store and lot	5,800	Abandoned	.....do.....do	See papers No. 84.
Delphin Vinett	City houses and lots	5,160	....do	.....do.....do	Restored under general amnesty order.
D. & O. Mayronne	Plantation			.....do.....do	Do. do.
Sarah L. Barnes	City house and lot			.....do.....do	See papers No. 85.
William Young	.....do	2,500	Abandoned	.....do.....do	See papers No. 86.
R. Nugent	Brick-yard and lots, Baton Rouge			By special pardon of the President
T. C. Twichell	City houses and lots	41,500	Abandoned	.....do.....do
Alex. Thom	Plantation			By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 87.
D. S. Cage	.....do			By special pardon of the President

Exhibit B.—Continued.

Name.	Description of property.	Value.	How held.	By whose order restored.	Remarks.
D. S. & A. G. Cage	Plantation			By special pardon of the President.
A. G. Cage	do			do
Caroline Sadler	City house and lot	1,400	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 88.
B. J. Mausseo	do	2,000	do	do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Leo L. Johnson	Plantation			do	See papers No. 89.
Micajah Harris	City house and lot	2,800	Abandoned	do	See papers No. 90.
David Raymond Fox	Plantation			do	See papers No. 91.
Polycarpa Fortier	City houses and lots	15,000	Registered enemy	do	See papers No. 92.
Daniel D. Avery	City house and lot			By special pardon of the President.
George W. Sadler	City house and lots	3,650	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 93.
J. E. Livandais	City house and lot	2,500	do	do	See papers No. 94.
Jules Bermudez	City house and lots	6,350	do	do	See papers No. 95.
Estate of H. J. Ranney	City warehouses, houses, and lots	42,700	do	do	Restored under general amnesty order.
Andrew Coste	City house and lot	4,500	do	do	See papers No. 96.
C. Wilkin	do	3,300	do	do	See papers No. 97.
John C. Potts	Plantation		do	do	See papers No. 98.
Henry Quitman	do		do	do	See papers No. 99.
G. L. Lester	do		do	do	See papers No. 100.
Mary M. Stewart	do		do	do	See papers No. 101.
John G. Cocks	City houses and lots	58,500	do	do	Papers in this case returned to Mr. Cocks.
G. W. Race	do	30,500	do	By special pardon of the President.
H. Vialla	Plantation			By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 102.
C. W. Zacharie	City storehouses, houses, and lots	204,850	Abandoned	By order of General Howard	See papers No. 112.
Shepherd Brown	City houses and lots	113,100	do	By special pardon of the President.
Do	Plantation		do	do
John W. Canon	City house and lot	15,000	do	do
M. M. McGinnisey	City house and lot, Baton Rouge			By order of General Fullerton	Restored under general amnesty order.
W. J. Polk and wife	City house and lot	11,500	Abandoned	By order of General Howard
W. H. Magruder	House and lot, Baton Rouge			do
Charles Gallagher	City house and lot	13,500	Abandoned	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 103.
A. P. Cleveland	City house and lots	17,000	do	do	Restored under general amnesty order.
James McA. Gresham	City house and lot	4,000	do	do	See papers No. 104.
Thomas McKnight	do	22,500	Confiscable	By special pardon of the President.
Thomas M. Simmons	do	14,000	Abandoned	do
Henry Strong, jr	do	600	do	do
Duncan F. Kenner	Plantation		do	do	See papers No. 38.
William P. Campell	City store and lot		do	By order of General Fullerton	See papers No. 105.
Enoch G. Cloud	House, Richerville	6,000	do	do	See papers No. 106.
Francis W. Gatewood	Plantation, Parish Terrebonne	3,000	do	do	See papers No. 107.
Michael Garnon	Houses and lots	30,000	do	do	See papers No. 108.
Hiram A. G. Roberts	Plantation	15,000	do	do	See papers No. 109.
Thomas D. Miller	City house		do	do	See papers No. 110.

Official:

WILLIAM H. GTULING.
Captain 1st United States Infantry, Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

[Exhibit D.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, September 12, 1865.

[Circular No. 15.]

I. Circular No. 13, of July 28, 1865, from this bureau, and all portions of circulars from this bureau conflicting with the provisions of this circular, are hereby rescinded.

II. This bureau has charge of "such tracts of land within the insurrectionary States as shall have been abandoned, or to which the United States shall have acquired title by confiscation, or sale, or otherwise," and no such lands now in its possession shall be surrendered to any claimant, except as hereinafter provided.

III. Abandoned lands are defined in section 2 of the act of Congress, approved July 2, 1864, as lands "the lawful owner whereof shall be voluntarily absent therefrom, and engaged, either in arms or otherwise, in aiding or encouraging the rebellion."

IV. Land will not be regarded as confiscated until it has been condemned and sold by decree of the United States court for the district in which the property may be found, and the title thereto thus vested in the United States.

V. Upon its appearing satisfactorily to any assistant Commissioner that any property under his control is not abandoned, as above defined, and that the United States has acquired no title to it, by confiscation, sale, or otherwise, he will formally surrender it to the authorized claimant or claimants, promptly reporting his action to the Commissioner.

VI. Assistant Commissioners will prepare accurate descriptions of all confiscated and abandoned lands under their control—keeping a record thereof themselves, and forwarding monthly to the Commissioner copies of these descriptions, in the manner prescribed in Circular No. 10, of July 11, 1865, from this bureau.

They will set apart so much of said lands as is necessary for the immediate use of loyal refugees and freedmen—being careful to select for this purpose those lands which most clearly fall under the control of this bureau; which selection must be submitted to the Commissioner for his approval.

The specific division of lands so set apart into lots, and the rental or sale thereof, according to section 4 of the law establishing the bureau, will be completed as soon as practicable, and reported to the Commissioner.

VII. Abandoned lands, held by this bureau, may be restored to owners pardoned by the President, by the assistant Commissioners, to whom applications for such restoration should be forwarded, as far as practicable, through the superintendents of the districts in which the lands are situated.

Each application must be accompanied by—

1st. Evidence of special pardon by the President, or a copy of the oath of amnesty prescribed in the President's proclamation of May 29, 1865, when the applicant is not included in any of the classes therein excepted from the benefits of said oath.

2d. Proof of title.

Officers of the bureau through whom the application passes will endorse thereon such facts as may assist the assistant Commissioner in his decision, stating especially the use made by the bureau of the land.

VIII. No lands under cultivation by loyal refugees or freedmen will be restored under this circular until the crops now growing shall be secured for the benefit of the cultivators, unless just and full compensation be made for their labor and its products, and for their expenditures.

O. O. HOWARD,
Major General, Commissioner.

Approved:
ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

EXHIBIT E.

Interrogatories to be answered under oath by the claimants.

1st. Have you ever been directly or indirectly, in any manner, connected with the civil service of the pretended confederate government? and if yea, state how and in what capacity you were so employed, and at what time and place, as fully as if particularly interrogated thereto.

2d. Have you ever held any office of trust, honor, or profit (other than military or naval,) under the so-called confederate government, or pretended State government subordinate thereto? and if yea, state the nature, description, character, and title thereof.

3d. Have you ever held any judicial station under the government of the United States? and if yea, what was the character, title, and location of the same, and when did you last hold the same?

4th. Have you ever been in any capacity in the military or naval service of the pretended confederate government? and if yea, when, where, and what was your rank, command, and corps?

5th. Have you ever held any other military or naval office under the pretended confederate government besides that set forth in your answer to the preceding interrogatory?

6th. Have you ever been a Representative or Senator in the Congress of the United States? and if yea, at what time did you last cease to be so?

7th. Have you ever held any office in the army or navy of the United States? and if yea, at what time did you cease to hold the same?

8th. Have you ever been engaged in holding in custody, directly or indirectly, any persons taken by the pretended confederate government as prisoners of war? and if yea, when, where, and under what circumstances, and in what capacity were you so engaged? what was the name and rank of the principal officer under whom you were so engaged? you being expected to give a full, clear, and circumstantial account of all services rendered by you while so engaged.

9th. Have you been absent from the United States since January 1st, 1861? and if yea, where and when?

10th. Were you educated by the government in the Military Academy at West Point, or at the United States Naval Academy?

11th. Have you ever held the pretended office of Governor of any State in insurrection against the United States?

12th. Have you ever registered yourself as an enemy of the United States? and if yea, when and where?

13th. Where were you, and where was your home on the first of May, 1862? have you resided there ever since, and if not, why not, and where have you resided?

14th. If you say that you have resided out of New Orleans at any time since the 1st of May, 1862, state when you returned to this city, and how, and by what and whose authority and permission?

15th. Have you at any time since the 1st of May, 1862, directly or indirectly given your aid countenance, or support to the rebellion against the United States, or have you ever given any help, comfort, or protection to the rebels in arms against the United States? and if yea, where, when, and how?

16th. Have you ever been engaged in the naval service of the pretended confederate government upon the high seas? and if yea, when, in what vessel, and under whose command?

17th. Have you ever been engaged in making raids into the United States from Canada, or been engaged in destroying the commerce of the United States on the lakes and rivers that separate the British provinces from the United States?

18th Were you ever a paroled prisoner of war to the United States? and if yea, when, where, and by whom were you so paroled? What was the name of the general-in-chief under whom you served at the time?

19th. Have you been released from said parole? and if yea, how?

20th. Have you taken the oath prescribed by the President's proclamation of the 29th of May, 1865? and if yea, at what date did you so take it? annex your certificate of the same.

21st. Were you at any time of taking said oath in military, naval, or civil confinement, or custody, or under bond to the military or naval authorities or agents of the United States as a prisoner of war, on parole or otherwise; or detained for any alleged offences of any kind?

22d. What is the total value of all your property?

23d. Have you ever taken the oath prescribed by the President's proclamation of the 8th of December, 1863? and if yea, when, where, and before whom?

24th. Have you since taking said oath aided the rebel cause or its soldiers, its civil officers, or its adherents, its sympathizers, or any State in insurrection by contribution of money, by loan, by word or act, or by any other means?

EXHIBIT F.

HEADQUARTERS BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS FOR LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, —— ——, 186 .

Whereas the following described property, to wit, is now held by this bureau, having been turned over to the same by—— ——; and whereas —— ——, of —— ——, has exhibited at these headquarters proof that he is the lawful owner of said property, and has also filed in this office his oath of allegiance, and an affidavit that he has the right of possession of the same, and did not hold it in secret trust for any other person at the time it was taken possession of by —— ——: Now, therefore, it is ordered that the said property be released to the said

—— ——; but nothing in this order of restoration is to be so construed as to give any claim upon this bureau, or the government of the United States, for damages or for rent prior to —— ——, the date of —— ——.

—— ——,
Assistant Commissioner of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands for Louisiana.

EXHIBIT G.

HEADQUARTERS BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS, DISTRICT OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, Louisiana, October 24, 1865.

CAPTAIN: The assistant Commissioner of this bureau for this State directs that you restore, so far as the jurisdiction of this bureau extends over it, the property of —— ——, now held by this bureau as abandoned.

The usual rules governing in the release of property will be observed in this instance.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) D. G. FENNO,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

Captain W. B. ARMSTRONG,
Assistant Quartermaster.

Official:

WILLIAM H. GTULING,
Captain First United States Infantry, Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

EXHIBIT H.

Triplicate.

Receipt No. ——,
Release No. ——,

NEW ORLEANS, ——— A. D. 186 .

Received of ———, assistant Commissioner Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands, State of Louisiana, the following described property, which has been taken possession of by the United States, to wit:

EXHIBIT I.

HEADQUARTERS BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS, STATE OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, October 27, 1865.

CAPTAIN: You are hereby directed to restore, so far as the jurisdiction of this bureau extends over it, the property of J. W. Zacharie, now held by this bureau "as abandoned," in accordance with the order of General Howard, Commissioner, &c., of September 2, 1865.

All receipts which have accrued since that date, on the aforesaid property, will be delivered to Mr. Zacharie.

The above is communicated by direction of the assistant Commissioner.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) D. G. FENNO,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

Captain W. B. ARMSTRONG,
Acting Quartermaster.

Official:

WILLIAM H. GTULING,
Captain First United States Infantry, Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 24, 1867.

LAWRENCE A. GOBRIGHT sworn and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. What is your occupation?

A. I am agent of the associated press in this city.

Q. Are you a reporter?

A. Yes; I have been a short-hand writer, but am not now in very good practice.

Q. Did you accompany the Presidential party in its tour through New York, Ohio, and Missouri, in the summer of 1866?

A. I did.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I reported the proceedings, speeches, and incidents of the journey, giving an account of what took place.

Q. Did you report the speeches made by the President on that tour?

A. A portion of them.

Q. Did you report his speech at Cleveland?

A. I made a sketch of it, not a verbatim report.

Q. Was there any reporter but yourself in company?

A. Yes, sir; I think Mr. Stephen Hayes, of New York, was at Cleveland; and there were others whom I cannot now name.

Q. Did he make accurate reports of the speeches of the President?

A. Not to my knowledge. I will not be certain whether he accompanied us as far as Cleveland.

Q. Do your reports contain the substance of what was said by the President?

A. They contained the material points, I presume.

Q. Have you your notes of those several speeches?

A. I have not. My notes were sometimes taken on the margin of the paper on which I wrote out my reports for the telegraph; and I lost a note book at Louisville.

Q. Did the President revise your sketches?

A. He never did.

Q. Would you be able to identify any of the reports made by you?

A. I think I should, if I saw them in print. (Two newspaper reports were here handed to the witness, and examined by him. After examining them, witness said:) There is some language here which I recognize as being in my own handwriting, describing the arrival of the President at Westfield and at Cleveland, but I cannot swear positively to this report. When we arrived at Cleveland, I could not get to the portico on which the President stood, and was obliged to go into the street and take notes in my book under a gas-light. I do not think I would have ventured under such circumstances to give the speech in the first person as it is given here. But so far as I recollect the speech, this is substantially a correct report of it. One of these reports seems to be from the Boston Journal, and the other from the Boston Evening Transcript. There were other reporters with the excursion party, and some times full reports of the speeches were made by them. They would ascertain from me whether I was going to report a speech in full or going to make a sketch of it; and in the latter case they would report the speech at length specially. It looks to me as if the reports in those two afternoon papers had been telegraphed from the New York morning papers containing a full report. I do not think I reported that speech at Cleveland. My reports were telegraphed to the agent of the associated press in New York, who again telegraphed them to the various parts of the country. The Herald, Tribune, and World, of New York, employed short-hand writers to accompany the excursion a part of the way.

Q. Look at the manuscript copy of the speech at Cleveland?

A. It reads more like the reports that I made than the others. The substance is fixed in my mind, and I recognize this as being substantially correct. The excursion continued for nearly three weeks, and was a very fatiguing operation on me, occupying me night and day, and I therefore cannot recollect as much as I might under other circumstances.

Q. Did you make a report of the speech made by the President at St. Louis?

A. I reported one of the speeches; he made two there, one at the Lindell House, and the other at the Southern Hotel.

Q. Have you any recollection of the speech which you did report at St. Louis?

A. It was merely a speech from the portico of the Lindell House, acknowledging the reception extended to him, &c.

Q. In one of those speeches, as reported in the newspapers, the President is represented as saying, in reply to a suggestion about turning out office-holders, that he would kick them all out, do you recollect that passage in his speech?

A. There was something like that, I think, in the speech at Cleveland.

Q. Do you recollect any remark of that kind in the speech at St. Louis?

A. I do not.

Q. Who reported that speech?

A. I took it next morning, being Sunday, from the St. Louis Democrat or Republican. I believe it was reported by a gentleman named Walbridge. It was the speech made at the Southern Hotel.

Q. Did the President seem to be laboring under great, unnatural, or unusual excitement during the delivery of those speeches?

A. I have known the President for twenty-five years, and I think he was, on these occasions, the same Andrew Johnson that I have always known him. Sometimes he would become warmed up with his subject, and eloquent, and when insulting words would be used in the crowd he would give a sharp answer, as any other man would under the circumstances.

Q. Is it your judgment that his speeches were entirely respectful?

A. Except, perhaps, where some annoying remark would be made which would stir him up to a sharp response. Some one in the crowd would say, for example: "How about New Orleans," and this would call out some remark from him. Perhaps another would call him a traitor, and he would say, "Traitor to what? What have I betrayed?" I do not say that his remarks were always respectful; for, perhaps, our opinions differ as to what constitutes respect. Sometimes he would decline to reply to any interruption in the crowd.

Q. Are we to understand you as saying that this speech in Cleveland was in his habitual style?

A. That one was pretty sharp, for he was interrupted in a very undignified way to say the least—in a way not respectful to a stranger. At Pittsburg he was interrupted and prevented from speaking. He had commenced telling the people how disastrous it would have been if the rebellion had succeeded—speaking in connection with the navigation of the western waters, and in reference to commerce and manufactures, not touching on any political question. He was interrupted very fiercely. He bowed and endeavored to get the ear of the people, making no disrespectful remark; but they would not listen, and he retired.

Q. Did he not refer to their "Masters of the City Council" as having refused to him the hospitalities of the city, and was not that the provocation?

A. I do not know that he used that expression. I do not recollect the remark. There was a very large crowd.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Mr. Gobright, it is apparent what was meant by Mr. Williams in inquiring if the President was laboring under great excitement. I want to know of you whether Mr. Johnson was drunk on that trip?

A. I here most solemnly say that I cannot affirm that Andrew Johnson was drunk. I cannot say that he did not drink; but, to my knowledge, he was not at any time what might be denominated drunk. He was not under the influence of drink, as many have supposed. I conversed with him frequently in the cars, at all points. He could always walk straight, and speak without stammering. I think his course was that of temperance, to say the least.

Q. Was he at any time, while making any of those speeches, excited with liquor?

A. I do not think he was.

Q. Could you undertake to repeat, from memory, any of his speeches?

A. I think I could repeat that where he spoke of leaving with the people the Constitution and the flag, with thirty-six stars.

Q. Were you with him all the time?

A. I was, from the time of starting till the return.

Q. Do you know of his drinking anything except wine?

A. I cannot say what he drank. I could not tell the character of the liquor. I did not make it a matter of investigation.

Q. What did you drink?

A. I drank a little brandy, whiskey, and champagne, as the condition of my health required.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Were you sick at the time?

A. No, sir; I came home in better health than when I started, and in as good a condition as anybody else.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Can you state whether, to your knowledge, the President drank intemperately on that journey?

A. I do not think he did. Not to my knowledge. That is my opinion, if it was the last word I had to say.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you report, for the associated press, Andrew Johnson's inauguration speech?

A. No, sir; it was reported by Mr. J. B. McCullough, the Senate reporter. I did not hear it.

Q. Did you report his 22d of February speech?

A. I did; but I was furnished with a copy of it as reported by another gentleman, who was in the immediate vicinity of the President when it was spoken, and I substituted that for my own as being more correct and perfect.

The following are the reports of the speeches handed to and examined by the witness, and referred to in his testimony:

Westfield, 4th—3:34 P. M. We stopped here for ten minutes, and after much cheering, with which the party were greeted, ceased, the President was introduced by ex-Lieutenant Governor Patterson, and then spoke as follows: "So far as a speech is concerned, I do not feel competent to speak, for the Admiral has spoken for himself in the history of the rebellion, and instead of the Secretary of State selecting substitutes, I prefer he should address you for all of us.

Fellow-citizens: I feel peculiarly gratified at these your demonstrations, because they are not personal to William H. Seward, General Grant, Admiral Farragut, or Andrew Johnson. They are demonstrations made for the Constitution and the country. [Cheers.] All of these men are merely representatives. The government must be saved by means, and the people must have means and instruments in their hands by which the government is to be preserved. When you have faithful, reliable men, who discharge their duty, I think they should stand prominent in your confidence and respect. To the pack of calumniators, traducers, and to the subsidized press, I think you should prefer those whom you have tried and who have proved true.

Now let me say one thing here, just as I am introduced, as I leave you, and that is—Why all this traducing? why all this slander? why all this vituperation in reference to your own fellow-citizen and those connected with him? Let me ask this vast concourse of people what Congress has done? Have they proposed to do anything? They want to find fault with what others are trying to do; yet the clamor is treason and traitors, when all the treachery consists in trying to restore the government and reconcile a distracted and divided country. Is this treachery?

Is pouring balm on the wounds that have been inflicted upon the Constitution and the country, treachery? Is the tying up the bleeding artery which has nearly exhausted the Union, treachery? Is proclaiming peace and reconciliation, not only in the United States, but throughout the world, treachery? If to stand by the Constitution and preserve the Union of the States is treachery, we are free to state that we are traitors. But we appeal to you, and on you we rely for vindication and protection.

If I was disposed to be eloquent, and wanted to make a speech to the passions of the people—if I wanted to stir men's blood, and speak so as to incite their prejudices and their passions, I could do so; but I desire to rely upon argument and the Constitution. I am not afraid to stand before the people. The cries of traitors cannot drive me from my purpose. Andrew Johnson, your fellow-citizen, never deceived the people. They are the ones in whom he ever trusted. Thank you, gentlemen, for your reception.

There was a slight interruption on the part of one or two men, which the crowd rebuked.

Ashtabula, 3d—6.50 P. M. A large crowd greeted the Presidential party, and music played and a salute was fired. The President and other prominent members of the party appeared on the car platform and received the plaudits of the multitude.

Painesville—7 P. M. A large crowd was here assembled; a stand had been erected, and it was illuminated. The President was conducted to it and made a few remarks. The journey was then resumed.

Cleveland—9 P. M. We have arrived at the Kennard House, which is splendidly illuminated with lanterns of various colors at every window, while strings of them are stretched over the street. A large mass of persons were here assembled, expecting to hear speaking, as well as to obtain a good view of the distinguished party; but they had to wait about an hour, and soon after the arrival of the excursionists they went to dinner. A band had played several airs on the portico, when, to silence the clamors of the multitude, the President appeared and spoke as follows:

Fellow-citizens: It is not for the purpose of making a speech that I now appear before you. I am aware of the great anxiety which prevails to see strangers who have notoriety and distinction in all countries I know a large number of you desire to see General Grant, and to hear what he has to say, but you cannot see him to-night. He is extremely ill. [Three cheers for Grant.] I repeat, I am not before you now to make a speech, but simply to make your acquaintance, to say how are you, and to bid you good bye.

We are on our way to Chicago to participate in, or witness, the laying of the corner-stone of a monument to the memory of a distinguished fellow-citizen who is no more. It is not necessary for me to mention the name of Stephen A. Douglas to the people of Ohio. [Applause.] I am flattered by the demonstrations I have witnessed, and being flattered I don't mean to think it personal, but as an evidence of what is pervading the public mind, and this demonstration is nothing more nor less than an indication of the latent sentiment or feeling of the great masses of the people.

With regard to the proper settlement of this great question, I come before you as an American citizen simply, and not as the Chief Magistrate, clothed in the insignia and paraphernalia of state, being an inhabitant of a State of this Union. I know it has been said that I am an alien, [laughter,] and that I did not reside in one of the States of the Union, and therefore I could not be the Chief Magistrate, though the Constitution declares that I must be a citizen to occupy that office. All that was necessary was to declare the office vacant, or under a pretext, to prefer articles of impeachment, and then the individual who occupies the chief magistracy was to be disposed of and driven from power.

But a short time since you had a ticket before you for the Presidency. I was placed upon that ticket with a distinguished fellow-citizen who is now no more. I hear there are some who complain. [A voice, "Unfortunately."] Yes, unfortunate for some that God rules on high, and deals in right. [Cheers.] Yes, unfortunately the ways of Providence are mysterious and incomprehensible.

I was going to say, my countrymen, a short time since I was selected and placed upon the ticket. There was a platform proclaimed and adopted by those who placed me upon it. Notwithstanding the subsidized tone of hirelings and traducers, I have discharged all my duties and fulfilled all my pledges, and I say here, to-night, that if my predecessor had lived the vials of wrath would have been poured out on him. [Cries of "Never!" "Three cheers for the Congress of the United States!"]

I came here, as I have been called upon, for the purpose of exchanging views, and of ascertaining, if we could, who was wrong. [Cries of "It's you!"] That was my object in appearing before you to-night, and I want to say this, that I have lived among the American people, and have represented them in some public capacity for the last twenty-five years, and where is the man or woman who can place his finger upon any single act of mine deviating from any pledge of mine, or in violation of the Constitution of the country? [Cheers.] Who is he? What language does he speak? What religion does he profess?

Who can come and place his finger upon one pledge I ever violated, or one principle I ever proved false to? [A voice, "How about New Orleans?" Another voice, "Hang Jeff. Davis."] Hang Jeff. Davis, he cries. [Cries of "No, no," and "Down with him."] Hang Jeff. Davis, he says. [A voice, "Hang Thad. Stevens and Wendell Phillips."] Hang Jeff. Davis? Why don't you hang him? [Cries of "Give us the opportunity."] Have you not got the court? Have you not got the Attorney General? [A voice, "Who is your Chief Justice, who has refused to sit upon the trial?"]

I am not Chief Justice; I am not the prosecuting attorney; I am not the jury. I will tell you what I did do. I called upon your Congress that is trying to break up the government—[Cries of "You be d—d," and cheers, mingled with hisses—great confusion—"Don't get mad, Andy."] Well, I will tell you who is mad; whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad. Did your Congress order any of them to be tried? [Three cheers for Congress.] Then, fellow-citizens, we might as well allay our passions, and permit reason to resume her empire and prevail.

In presenting the few remarks that I designed to make, my intention was to address myself to your common sense, your judgment, and your better feelings, not to the passion and malignity in your hearts. [Cheers.] This was my object in presenting myself on this occasion, and to ask you how you do, and at the same time to bid you good night. In this assembly here to-night the remark has been made, "Traitor!" "Traitor!" My countrymen, will you hear me? [Shouts of "Yes."] And will you hear me for my cause and for the Constitution of my country? [Applause.]

I want to know when, or where, or under what circumstances, Andrew Johnson, not as Chief Executive, but in any capacity ever deserted any principle or violated the Constitution of his country? [Cries of "Never."] Let me ask this large and intelligent audience if your Secretary of State, who served four years under Mr. Lincoln, and who was placed upon the butcher's block, as it were, and hacked to pieces, and scarred by the assassin's knife, ever turned traitor? [Cries of "Never."]

If I were disposed to play the orator, and deal in declamation, to-night, I would initiate one of the ancient tragedies, and would take William H. Seward and bring him before you, and point you to the hacks and scars upon his person. [A voice, "God bless him."] I would exhibit the bloody garments, saturated with gore from his gushing wounds; then I would ask you why not hang Thad. Stevens and Wendell Phillips?

I tell you, my countrymen, I have been fighting the South, and they have been whipped and crushed, and they acknowledge their defeat, and accept the terms of the Constitution; and now as I go around the circle, having fought traitors at the South, I am prepared to fight traitors at the North. [Cheers.] God willing, with your help, we will do it. Treason will be crushed North and South, and this glorious Union of ours will be preserved. [Cheers.]

I do not come here as the Chief Magistrate of twenty-five States, but of thirty-six. [Cheers.] I come here to night with the flag of my country and the Constitution of thirty-six States untarnished. Are you for dividing this country? [Cries of "No!"]

Then I am President, and I am President of the whole United States. [Cheers.] I will tell you one other thing. I understand the discordant notes in this crowd to-night. He who is opposed to the restoration of this government and the reunion of the States is as great a traitor as Jeff. Davis or Wendell Phillips. [Cheers.] I am against both. Some of you talk about traitors in the South, who have not courage to get away from your home and fight them. [Laughter and cheers.]

The courageous men, Grant, Sherman, Farragut, and the long list of the distinguished sons of the Union, were in the field, and led on their gallant hosts to conquest and to victory, while you remained cowardly at home. [Applause.] Now, when these brave men have returned home, many of whom have left an arm, or a leg, or their blood upon many a battle-field, they find you at home speculating and committing frauds upon the government. [Laughter and cheers.]

You pretend now to have great respect and sympathy for the poor, brave fellow who has left an arm on the battle-field. [Cries, "Is this dignified?"] I understand you; you may talk about the dignity of the President. [Cries, "How was it about his making a speech on the 22d of February?"] I have been with you in the battles of this country, and I can tell you, furthermore, to-night, who has to pay these brave men who shed their blood. You've speculated, and now the great mass of the people have to work it out. [Cheers.]

It is true that the great mass of the people should understand what your designs are. What did General Butler say? [Hisses.] What did Grant say? [Cheers.] And what does General Grant say about General Butler? [Laughter and cheers.] What does General Sherman say? [A voice, "What does General Sheridan say?"] General Sheridan says that he is for the restoration of the government that Sheridan fought for. ["Bully."]

But, fellow-citizens, let this all pass. I care not for my dignity. There is a certain portion of our countrymen who will respect a citizen whenever he is entitled to respect. [A voice, "That's so."] There is another of them that have no respect for themselves, and consequently they cannot respect any one else. [Laughter and cheers.]

I know a man and a gentleman whenever I meet him. I have only to look in his face, and if I was to see you by the light of day I do not doubt that I should see cowardice and treachery written in it. [Laughter and cheers.] If you ever shoot a man you will do it in the dark, and pull the trigger when no one is by to see you. [Cheers.]

I understand traitors. I have been fighting them at the south end of the line, and we are now fighting them in another direction. [Laughter and cheers.] I came here neither to criminate nor recriminate, but when attacked my plan is to defend myself. [Cheers.]

When encroached upon, I care not from what quarter it comes, it is entitled to resistance.

As Chief Magistrate I felt so after taking the oath to support the Constitution, and when I saw encroachments upon your Constitution and rights, as an honest man I dared to sound the tocsin of alarm. [Three cheers for Andrew Johnson.] Then, if this be right, the head and front of my offending is in telling you when the Constitution is trampled upon. Let me say to those who thirst for more blood, who are still willing to sacrifie human life, if you want a victim, and my country requires it, erect your altar and lay me upon it, to give the last libation to human freedom. [Loud applause.]

I love my country; every public act of my life testifies that it is so. Where is the man that can put his finger upon any one act of mine that goes to prove the contrary, and what is my offending? [A voice, "Because you are not a radical." Cry of "Veto."] Somebody says veto. Veto of what is called the Freedmen's Bureau bill. I can tell you what it is. Before the rebellion commenced there were four millions of slaves, and about eight millions of white people living in the South. These latter paid the expense, bought the land and cultivated it, and after the crops were gathered pocketed the profits. That's the way the thing stood up to the rebellion.

The rebellion commenced, the slaves were liberated, and then came up the Freedmen's Bureau bill. This provides for the appointment of agents and sub-agents in all States, counties, and school districts, who have power to make contracts for the freedmen, and hire them out, and use the military power to carry them into execution.

The cost of this to the people was 12,000,000 dollars at the beginning, the further expense would be greater, and you are to be taxed for it.

That's why I vetoed. I might refer you to the civil-rights bill, the results of which are very similar. I tell you, my countrymen, that though the powers of hell and Thad. Stevens and his gang were by, they could not turn me from my purpose. There is no power that could turn me except you and the God who spoke me into existence.

In conclusion, besides that, Congress had taken great pains to poison their constituents against him, what had Congress done? Have they done anything to restore the union of these States? No; on the contrary they have done everything to prevent it; and because he stood now where he had when the rebellion commenced, he had been denounced as a traitor.

Who had run a greater risk or made greater sacrifice than himself? But Congress, factious and domineering, had undertaken to poison the minds of the American people. It was with them a question of power. Those who hold an office as assessor, collector, postmaster, wanted to retain their places. Rotation in office used to be thought a good doctrine by Washington, Jefferson, and Adams, and Andrew Jackson [God bless him] thought so. [Applause.]

This gang of office-holders, the bloodsuckers and cormorants, had got fat on the country. You have got them over your district, hence you see a system of legislation proposed so that these men shall not be turned out, and the President, the only channel through which they can be reached, is called a tyrant.

He thought the time had come when those who had enjoyed fat offices for four years should give way for those who had fought for the country, hence it was seen why he was assailed and traduced.

He had visited them in the field, and, God willing, would stand by them. He had turned aside from the thread of his remarks to notice the insult sought to be given him. When an insult was offered he would resent it in a proper manner, but he was free to say he had no revengeful or resentful feeling. All he wanted, when war was over, and peace had come, for patriotic and christian men to rally around the flag of the country in a fraternal hug, and resolve that all shall perish rather than that the Union shall not be restored.

Some one in the crowd asked him "How about Louisiana?" To which he replied, "Let the negroes vote in Ohio before you talk about their voting in Louisiana." [Laughter and cries of "Good."]

Take the beam out of your own eye before you seek the mote in your brother's. [Renewed laughter.]

In conclusion, after some further remarks, he invoked God's best blessing upon his hearers. [Applause.]

The interruptions were few. At the close of the President's speech loud cries were made for Grant, Farragut, and others of the distinguished party, two of whom responded, General Custer, and Senator Doolittle, to the immense audience. The latter touched specially on the trial of Jeff Davis, stating the difficulty of procuring a proper jury as the cause of the delay. The vast crowd was deeply attentive during the delivery.

Extracts from a speech of President Johnson at St. Louis, Missouri, September 8, 1866.

* * * * And if you will go back, if you will go back and ascertain the cause of the riot at New Orleans, perhaps you would not be so prompt in calling out New Orleans. If you will take up the riot at New Orleans and trace it back to its source or its immediate cause, you will find out who was responsible for the blood that was shed there. If you will take up the riot at New Orleans and trace it back to the radical Congress—[cheers and cries of "Bully,"]—you will find that the riot at New Orleans was substantially planned. If you will take up the proceedings in their caucuses you will understand that they there knew [cheers] that a convention was to be called, which was extinct by its power having expired; that it was said that the intention was that a new government was to be organized, and on the organization of that government the intention was to enfranchise one portion of the population called the colored population, who had just been emancipated, and at the same time disfranchise white men. When you design to talk about New Orleans [confusion] you ought to understand what you are talking about. When you read the speeches that were made and take up the facts on the Friday and Saturday before that convention sat, you will there find that speeches were there made incendiary in their character, exciting that portion of the population, the black population, to arm themselves and prepare for the shedding of blood. [A voice—"That's so," and cheers.] You will also find that that convention did assemble in violation of law, and the intention of that convention was to supersede the reorganized authorities in the State government of Louisiana, which had been recognized by the government of the United States, and every man engaged in that rebellion, in that convention, with the intention of superseding and upturning the civil government which had been recognized by the government of the United States, I say that he was a traitor to the Constitution of the United States, [cheers,] and hence you find that another rebellion was commenced, having its origin in the radical Congress. These men were to go there, a government was to be organized, and the one in existence in Louisiana was to be superseded, set aside, and overthrown. You talk to me about New Orleans; and there the question was to come up, when they had established their government, a question of political powers, which of the two governments was to be recognized, a new government, inaugurated under this defunct convention, set up in violation of law and without the will of the people. Then when they had established their government and extended universal and impartial franchise, as they called it, to the colored population, then this radical Congress was to determine that a government established on negro votes was to be the government of Louisiana. [Voices—"Never," cheers, and cries of "Hurrah for Andy!"]

So much for the New Orleans riot; and there was the cause and the origin of the blood that was shed. and every drop of blood that was shed is upon their skirts and they are responsible for it. * * * * * * * * * * *

* I might ask you a question, why don't you hang Thad. Stevens and Wendell Phillips! [Great cheering.] A traitor at one end of the line is as bad as a traitor at the other.

* * * * * * * * * *

Let me say to you, in concluding, that what I have said I intended to say. I was provoked into this, and I care not for their menaces, the taunts and the jeers. I care not for threats; I do not intend to be bullied by my enemies, nor overawed by my friends. But, God willing, with your help, I will veto their measures whenever any of them come to me. I place myself upon the ramparts of the Constitution when I see the enemy approaching; so long as I have eyes to see, or ears to hear, or a tongue to sound the alarm, so help me God, I will do it, and call on the people to be my judges. [Cheers.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

JOHN T. FORD sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Are you acquainted with William P. Wood?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State whether you ever had a conversation with him about a letter or article written by John Wilkes Booth, intended for publication.

A. I heard something with reference to a letter written by Booth for publication; whether or not I held a conversation with Mr. Wood about it I cannot say.

Q. State what knowledge you have of that letter.

A. About the first of June, a few days after I was released from Carroll prison, I met a member of my company, named John Mathews, in Seventh street, near the Intelligencer office, and had a conversation with him. He had been very intimate with John Wilkes Booth. In the course of the conversation I made an allusion to what surprised me very much—the fact of one of the editors of the Intelligencer having been called as a witness in the conspiracy trial, and of Judge Holt telling him that Booth stated before he died that he had left an article for publication in that paper, and wishing to know whether he knew anything about it; to which the editor replied that he did not. After some further conversation, Mathews said to me, "I will tell you something about that letter. On the afternoon of the day of the assassination, at about four o'clock, I was going up Pennsylvania avenue; John Wilkes Booth came riding down on horseback, and we met between Seventh and Eighth streets. He was very much excited. He drew a packet from his pocket and handed it to me, saying, 'I wish you, no matter what occurs, to deliver this at the office of the Intelligencer to-morrow morning.'" Mathews went on to say, "He was very excited in his manner, and was apparently somewhat under the influence of liquor. He seemed to impress upon me, very seriously, the importance of keeping it a profound secret, and to be sure to deliver the letter faithfully." He said, "I took it reluctantly, and put it in my side pocket, and kept it until late that night." He said the assassination so frightened and bewildered him that when he went home he remembered that Booth had given him this letter or package. He put his hand in his pocket and drew it out. In view of the great excitement prevailing he resolved to break it open and read its contents. He did break it open, and read it. It contained a justification of Booth's intended act. Mathews thought it was written on the day he received it. It went on something in the style of Booth's diary, claiming that he was called upon to do this murder, and that he would do it, and for no other purpose than to serve his country, or something of that kind, quoting all the famous assassinations of history to justify the deed. Mathews said that after reading it he made up his mind to destroy it, fearing that, if found upon his person, it might cost him imprisonment, or probably his life. He therefore put it in the fire, and he said that, feeling worried about it, and being a Catholic, he went next day to his confessor. I believe he was told there that, under the circumstances, he had done right; that the paper could be of no service to the government or any one else, and that it had better be suppressed.

Q. Do you know where Mathews is at this time?

A. I last heard of him at Rochester, New York, some months ago, when he wrote to me for an engagement. Mathews knew Wood very well. He came to visit me in prison, when I found that Wood and he were old friends. Mathews was never a prisoner there to my knowledge.

Q. Did Mathews tell you on what kind of paper the letter was written?

A. No, sir; he merely described it, so far as my memory serves me, as being in a large envelope, something like an official envelope, sealed and directed, I think, to Mr. Coyle, of the Intelligencer, or at all events to one of the editors of the Intelligencer.

Q. Is that all the knowledge you have of it?

A. That is all the knowledge I have of it except some indistinct recollection of what he told me the contents of the paper were.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. State all you know of what he said was in the paper.

A. I cannot describe it better than by comparing it with the diary that has been published. He had resolved at the last moment, failing in all his other plans, to commit this deed, and he wished to justify himself before the world.

Q. What did you understand him to mean by "failing in all his other plans?"

A. I presume, from hearing something of the conspiracy, that he meant failing to kidnap the President, and then that he had resolved on assassination.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did Mathews represent to you that that letter mentioned the name of any person as being at all connected with the conspiracy?

A. No, sir; it mentioned no names whatever. Knowing the young man as being vain-glorious, very ambitious, and very daring, it seemed to me to be very characteristic of him. He was called vividly to my mind by the diary. I think that in this letter the same allusions were made as in the diary, to Brutus, and Tell, and others.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did Mathews inform you of anything in the letter from which it appeared that Booth had others in the plot of assassination?

A Nothing of that kind. So far as I recollect, it seemed to relate entirely to himself.

Q. You understood from him that the plan of abduction having failed, he then resolved on assassination?

A. That is what I inferred from what I had heard of the plan.

Q. What did Mathews say was in the letter on that subject?

A. That he had at the last moment (his other plan failing) resolved on assassination, and he seemed desirous of vindicating himself.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Had you had, about the time of the assassination, any knowledge of the plan for the abduction of President Lincoln?

A. Not the slightest in the world until after the assassination had taken place. I had applied to the War Department and procured permission to go to Richmond directly after the fall of that city, for the purpose of visiting a very old man, the oldest brother of my mother. We had no particulars of the fire there, and my family was very anxious about his condition. I took some money with me, and went down to seek him. I arrived in Richmond on the day of the assassination. It was on Monday morning that I had the first positive information of the assassination. I went to the boat at six o'clock in the morning, to leave for Baltimore, and saw the Richmond Whig in heavy mourning; and I met Mr. Spaulding, a theatrical manager, who told me that the assassination occurred at my theatre. At Old Point Comfort I heard more of it, and heard of the arrest of Daniel Arnold, whose father and brother I knew in Baltimore. I got home at seven o'clock in the morning, and a few minutes afterwards a couple of detectives came to my house, and told me they had orders to carry me to Washington. I was taken down to the Provost Marshal's office, and there I met Arnold, who made his statement to me of how he was connected with Booth in the abduction plan. Some portions of his statement came out as evidence in the conspiracy trial. It seems that he had several meetings with Booth and others for the purpose of arranging the abduction of the President.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did he say anything about the higher crime of assassination?

A. No, sir; but protested his entire innocence of any knowledge of it in any way, although he seemed very free to acknowledge his full connection with the former plan, which had failed.

Q. Was there anything in his confession about Mrs. Surratt?

A. I think not. He made no allusion to her, but spoke of her son, John Surratt, and of his having met him. He had been a school-boy with Booth at St Timothy's Hall, a school near Baltimore.

Q You were the manager of Ford's theatre at the time the assassination took place?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You say you had no knowledge whatever, either of the assassination plot or of the abduction plot, until after the assassination?

A. Not the slightest. Some peculiar things transpired between Booth and myself, which made me wonder since that I was not more suspicious. He was exceedingly desirous at one time that I should engage an actor by the name of Samuel P. Chester, who was then engaged in performing minor parts at the Winter Garden. I told him I could not, in honor, take a man from a theatre where I thought he was bound to remain, and bring him to my theatre, although he would be a very desirable acquisition to my company. He proposed, afterwards, to exchange him for another man, saying that Chester had once saved his life in Montgomery, and that he would do anything in the world to make him content, and offering, if I would bring him, to pay his salary. It afterwards turned out that Chester was a party to the conspiracy to abduct the President. He is a bold, resolute fellow, and one whom Booth could have relied on. I believe he was the party who was to extinguish the lights and allow the abduction to occur in darkness. Chester testified at the conspiracy trial, and confessed to a knowledge of a conspiracy to abduct.

Q. You have stated, I suppose, all that you recollect of what Mathews told you as to the contents of that letter?

A. About all. It impressed me as an article fresh from Booth's brain, scrawled somewhat in haste, folded up, delivered to Mathews, read by him that night and destroyed, containing in substance, but at greater length, the contents of the diary.

Q. How long after its destruction was it that Mathews mentioned it to you?

A. It was destroyed, according to his statement to me, on the night of the assassination. His statement was made to me about the first part of June.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did you first hear of the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. I did not hear it until Sunday afternoon, and then I did not credit it. It was not publicly announced in Richmond until Monday morning. I did meet Colonel Forney at the Spottswood House on Sunday, but he said nothing to me about it, although he knew it. Talking to a relative of mine on Sunday afternoon, I heard that President Lincoln had been killed in Washington by Edwin Booth. I laughed, turned round, and said, "Edwin Booth is in Boston." It never occurred to me at all that John Wilkes Booth had been in Washington. I treated the matter with not the slightest credence. It was only on Monday morning, before the boat leaving the wharf, that I got a newspaper and learned the actual fact.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

WILLIAM W. WARDEN sworn and examined:

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What is your occupation, and how are you at present employed?

A. I am a newspaper correspondent, and I practice law in this city.

Q. Are you in any other way engaged in business?

A. I am engaged at the Executive mansion in examining and reading the newspapers. The leading journals of the country come there for the President, and I impart the substance of them to him.

Q. You give him information as to what they contain?

A. Yes, sir; the substance of the editorial comments and matters of general news.

Q. Are there any other duties performed by you at the Executive mansion?

A. That is the principal thing I do; there are some other duties required of me. I am engaged there mostly at night. I am not considered as regularly on duty during the day, as others are. My services are mostly performed at night. I am there generally all through the evening.

Q. With what papers do you correspond?

A. I have charge of the Philadelphia Ledger, the Baltimore Sun, the Cincinnati Enquirer, and the New Orleans Times; and I am assistant correspondent for the New York Tribune.

Q. What is the office that you held at the Executive mansion called?

A. I do not know what the language of the law is; it is either "short-hand writer," or "phonographic writer."

Q. What is the compensation of your office?

A. $2,500 a year.

Q. Did you receive an appointment in writing?

A. Yes.

Q. What are you designated?

A. I do not know whether the office is called that of short-hand writer, or phonographic writer. It is embraced in the law. That is what I was employed expressly for; but the other duty of reading the newspapers being more in my line, was assigned to me, and it was arranged that I shall attend to both matters.

Q. How long have you been employed at the Executive mansion?

A. I have been engaged in reading newspapers since some time in December, I think; but my appointment dates back a month or two ago.

Q. Does it go back to the month of August, 1866?

A. No, sir; it is within this year.

Q. Did you, in the month of August, obtain at the Executive mansion a copy of a communication made by General Sheridan, in reference to the New Orleans riot?

A. Yes; but not a full copy, I believe. It turned out to be a part of the communication.

Q. State the circumstances under which you obtained the copy which you transmitted to the New York Times.

A. I received it through Colonel Morrow, the assistant private secretary.

Q. How did you obtain knowledge that there was such a communication in the hands of the President?

A. I obtained that information from the President. It was at that time my habit to go there every evening to see the President—to learn what was transpiring; and on that occasion I called upon him in the usual way. At that hour of the evening there are generally seven or eight or ten people admitted to the President's office at once, and on this particular evening I was among those admitted. I had the usual conversation with the President about what was going on, and asked him if there was anything of recent date from New Orleans. My recollection is he told me there were several despatches from Sheridan, but he did not know what the dates were, or whether they had been published or not; but that I could go to Colonel Morrow, the assistant private secretary, and get from him such as had not been published, or whatever was proper to be given to the public. The idea was that Colonel Morrow would use his discretion as to what should go to the public. I went to Colonel Morrow's room, and told him what the President had said, leaving it to him to determine what should be given to me. Mr. Morrow turned to the despatch book and dictated to me, and I wrote. I do not recollect exactly how much of Sheridan's despatch was published; but, as I understand now, it was all published except a few lines. It was published, however, as I got it from Colonel Morrow.

Q. Was there any reference made by the President in his conversation with you, when he referred you to Colonel Morrow, to this particular despatch of General Sheridan's?

A. No, sir; he did not give me the character of any of the despatches. He simply remarked, there had been several communications received from General

Sheridan—that he did not know the dates of them, or whether they had been published or not; but that I could go to Colonel Morrow, and that he (Colonel Morrow) could use his discretion as to what was proper to be given to the public.

Q. Did you understand from your conversation with the President, or did he say to you, that he expected Colonel Morrow to withhold some portion of a despatch?

A. No, sir; nothing of the kind—no indication of any desire to withhold anything. The impression he left on my mind was, as I knew to be the case generally, that there were communications being received and sent which were not intended for the public—matters in which the public would have no interest, or which they had no right to know anything of. I judged that, not only from what then occurred, but from what had been the custom all the time. There are a good many despatches received from time to time which they tell us the substance of, but which they do not see proper to give us in detail. It is the same in all the departments. There was nothing unusual about this case, that I know of. There was no intimation from the President that there was anything in the despatches that should not be given to the public; but he simply left it to Colonel Morrow to determine.

Q. Did you see the despatch from which Colonel Morrow read?

A. No, sir, I think not. The despatch book is one of their records. I was not permitted then, nor am I now, to handle their records. It was a book in which the despatches were attached together as they came along—something like a scrap-book.

Q. Mr. Morrow read what purported to be a despatch from General Sheridan, and you wrote it down?

A. Yes.

Q. And that despatch you transmitted to the New York Times?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. It was there published just as you received it from Colonel Morrow?

A. Yes, sir; I am very certain there was no alteration in any shape or form.

Q. Did you, when you received it from Colonel Morrow, or at any time before you transmitted it to the New York Times, know or have any good reason to believe that what Colonel Morrow had given you was not the despatch which the President had received from General Sheridan?

A. No, sir; I had no intimation or idea of it. About ten days after it was published, or earlier perhaps, there was some mention in the newspapers—I think in the New York Tribune—of an omission in that despatch. They did not seem to know, and it appears that they did not really know, what the omission was. The Tribune, if I am correct in memory, supposed it was a threat of General Sheridan to resign. I afterwards read the original published in full in some official investigation, and found that the words omitted contained some reference to the conduct of Mayor Monroe and the rioters.

Q. Was that publication in the Tribune, ten days afterwards, the first time that you had reason to suspect there was anything left out of the despatch?

A. No, sir; my attention was first called to it by some of the newspaper correspondents. As I was entirely ignorant of any omission, I did not believe they were right in their observations. I had no idea there was any foundation for the statements.

Q. Did Colonel Morrow read from the despatch in a manner which indicated to you that he was reading the whole of it?

A. Yes, sir; it did not arrest my attention as anything peculiar at all. I sat down and took up a piece of paper, and he read off and I copied. It was nine or ten o'clock at night, and I was in a hurry to get to the telegraph office with it. I went down to the telegraph office, introduced the matter in a few words, and sent it off.

Q. In all you did you acted in the belief that you were communicating to the public the entire contents of that despatch?

A. I had no peculiar impression at the time upon the subject. I had no reason to suspect anything wrong. It was a common occurrence. I had been going to the Executive mansion in that way for a year or so. During the time of Mr. Lincoln I had practiced the same thing, going up to see him in the evening to learn what was transpiring, and the same practice was continued with Mr. Johnson. I had so frequently matters given me in that way that I did not discover anything peculiar in the case at all. I was not permitted, and am not permitted now, to handle their records; and anything given me is given just in that way—dictated to me. Mr. Morrow did this in the usual way. He did not go to confer with the President in the matter. He knew that he could rely on what I said, the thing had been so frequently done, not only with me, but with other newspaper representatives.

Q. Look at a note in the following words: "Mr. Evans will please call at the President's House and see Mr. Edward Cooper, Monday," and state, if you know, whose handwriting it is.

A. It has a familiar look to me, but I cannot say whose it is.

Q. Have you seen Mr. Edward Cooper write?

A. I have, but I cannot say that I am familiar with his handwriting. It does not impress me as being his. It looks to me more like Colonel Moore's handwriting.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Look at the despatch of General Sheridan, published on page 472 of the Report of the New Orleans Riot, and state whether or not that is the perfect or the imperfect copy.

(The following is the despatch alluded to:)

In order that the following from General Sheridan be fully understood, it should be stated that he was absent from New Orleans when the disturbance commenced in that city.

NEW ORLEANS, August 1—1.30 P. M.

General U. S. GRANT, Washington:

You are doubtless aware of the serious riot which occurred in this city on the 30th. A political body, styling itself the convention of 1864, met on the 30th for, as alleged, the purpose of remodeling the present constitution of the State. The leaders were political agitators and revolutionary men, and the action of the convention was liable to produce breaches of the public peace. I had made up my mind to arrest the head men if the proceedings of the convention were calculated to disturb the tranquility of the department, but I had no cause for action until they committed the overt act.

About forty whites and blacks were killed, and about one hundred and sixty wounded. Everything is now quiet, but I deem it best to maintain a military supremacy in the city for a few days until the affair is fully investigated. I believe the sentiment of the general community is great regret at this unnecessary cruelty, and the police could have made any arrests they saw fit without sacrificing lives.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding."

A. This reads to me as the despatch I sent; I see by the introduction that it is the same.

Q. Look at the full despatch as given in the same Report, page 352, and state what portion of it is omitted in your despatch.

A. I find that the portion omitted is as follows: "In the mean time official duty called me to Texas, and the mayor of the city, during my absence, suppressed the convention by the use of their police force, and in so doing attacked the members of the convention and a party of two hundred negroes, and with fire-arms, clubs, and knives, in a manner so unnecessary and atrocious as to compel me to say that it was murder."

Q. Who was your predecessor in the office which you call short-hand writer?

A. I am the first one appointed. It is an office provided for by law over a year ago.

Q. Provided for by act of Congress?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. With a salary provided?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And with the duties described?

A. The act simply provided that in the President's household there shall be certain officers—private secretary, assistant private secretary, short-hand writer, &c. The latter office was one necessary, but that had not been up to that time systematized, nor provided for in the law. At the time of my appointment there was another party whose time was occupied a good deal in handling the newspapers that were sent there. This gentleman has been thus engaged ever since Mr. Johnson has been in office, and I believe he was in the same position under Mr. Lincoln, receiving salary as a clerk; that part of his duty was turned over to me, in addition to the short-hand work and to the other duties that might be assigned to me.

Q. Then during Mr. Lincoln's administration there was a similar duty performed?

A. Yes, sir; I so understand. I am informed the custom goes away back to Mr. Fillmore's time.

Q. Have you, since the time of the publication of the despatch of General Sheridan, seen the original?

A. No, sir; I have never seen it.

Q. Did the President know what despatches you sent?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you submit your manuscript to him?

A. No, sir; I saw him no more on the subject. As I have before stated, I was admitted that evening with a party of six or seven. His custom was then, and is to some extent now, to open his door and admit all who congregate there at the hour when he comes into the office. I was usually admitted at that time, and took my turn in walking up to talk to him at the table. I did so that night, and then I went to Colonel Morrow, and told him what the President had said, that I could have such despatches as he (Colonel Morrow) thought should be made public. Colonel Morrow went to the despatch-book, and run over the despatches of two or three days, and I found some of them had been published. I recollect one in reference to Attorney General Herron and others. Then he came to this despatch of General Sheridan's, received probably that very day. I told him that had not been published, and he called it off to me, and I wrote it down.

Q. Did you call the President's attention to any particular information or despatch which you desired to get?

A. No, sir; it was the common general inquiry whether he had received any further news from New Orleans. We knew by the telegraph that there were troubles going on there, and we had had some despatches published already, sent from New Orleans, and I asked Mr. Johnson if he had received any further news from New Orleans.

Q. Did Mr. Morrow give you this information as he was accustomed to give you information previous to that time from other telegraphic despatches?

A. Yes, sir; precisely in the same manner as I had been getting information there previously and ever since. The custom has been for the private secretary to give newspaper correspondents such information as he was willing should be published. There have been occasions, (as during the time of Mr. Lincoln) probably, where the President himself, having a knowledge of the general tenor of a despatch, during the war time, would simply mention the fact that General Grant, for instance, had telegraphed so and so, giving me the substance of what might be a very long despatch. This thing has happened now and then, but generally the custom was, as is in this case, to refer me to the private secretary. In this case there was nothing remarkable so far as the President is concerned. He did not call Colonel Morrow to him, and Colonel Morrow did not go to Mr. Johnson. I got the authorization in the ordinary way.

Q. You were in the habit of carrying that authorization from the President to Colonel Morrow and getting information?

A. Yes, sir; to him and others of the private secretaries.

Q. And they would take your word for it?

A. Yes, sir; that was the custom with newspaper men who were in good standing.

Q. Were you then acting in the office?

A. No, sir; I was not connected with the President in any shape or form. This position which I now hold is of recent date.

Q. With what paper were you then connected?

A. I was regularly connected with the New York Times, was temporarily in sole charge of its Washington correspondence. Besides, I had sole charge of some of the papers before mentioned, and was representing, for Mr. Poore and others, the Boston Journal, Philadelphia Inquirer, Chicago Republican, and a number of other papers—thirteen in all, I think. I sent this despatch, I believe, to every newspaper to which I was then telegraphing.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

WILLIAM G. MOORE sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Are you employed at the Executive mansion?

A. I am.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I am there simply as an aid to the President in the discharge of the duties of his office, principally in relation to Congressional matters.

Q. Were you engaged in the Executive mansion in any capacity in October, 1866?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any recollection of an application that was made for the pardon of certain West Virginia soldiers in the month of October, 1866?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. State all the knowledge you have of that application and the action of the President thereon.

A. I think that the application was presented to me by Thomas B. Florence. I submitted the paper to the President, reading the statement which accompanied it, signed, I think, by a Dr. McEwen. The President said that if the case was as stated, the application should be granted. The order was given and the subject referred to the War Department.

Q. You mean the order for the pardon?

A. The order that the application should be granted. I think that the order was that the charge of desertion, as borne on the rolls, should be removed?

Q. What do you mean by the paper which you say you submitted to the President?

A. The papers, so far as I recollect, were simply a letter signed by Dr. McEwen, I believe, and then a list of the persons who were to be included in the order.

Q. Were that letter and the list of deserters all the papers that were handed to you?

A. They were all the papers that were handed to me, as far as I recollect.

Q. Do you know whether there was a letter among those papers written by a Mr. Andrews, who was a democratic candidate for Congress in one of the West Virginia districts?

A. I do not recollect having seen such a letter.

Q. Did you brief the case before you presented it to the President?

A. I read the papers over, and having become familiar with the facts, I stated them to the President, reading also to him the statement of Dr. McEwen, and then he gave the order that the application should be granted.

Q. Did the President examine the papers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you make any statement to the President of a reason why the order should be granted other than was contained in the papers?

A. I do not think I did. The papers themselves stated that unless this charge of desertion against the men was removed they would be disfranchised; and that statement was all, I think, that was made.

Q. Is that in the McEwen letter?

A. Yes, sir; so far as I recollect.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you receive the papers yourself from Mr. Florence?

A. That is my recollection.

Q. Is it not possible that you received them from Mr. Robert Johnson, instead of from Mr. Florence?

A. That may have been so, but I thought I received them from Mr. Florence. I recollect very well that Mr. Florence spoke to me of the papers, and I presumed that he handed them to me. They may, however, have been first handed to Colonel Johnson, and I may have subsequently met Colonel Florence in the corridor.

Q. You do not feel entirely certain whether you received them from Colonel Florence or not?

A. No, sir; but my impression was that I did receive them from him.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. You took them yourself to the President?

A. Yes, sir; I submitted them to the President.

Q. Did the President appear to have any previous knowledge of the case?

A. No, sir, none whatever.

Q. Did you have more than one interview with the President on the subject?

A. No, sir; I merely stated the case to the President, and read to him the letter of Dr. McEwen.

Q. And the endorsement you made was the result of that interview?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you know when that interview was, in relation to the time when the papers were submitted to you—whether it was on the same day, or the evening of that day, or the succeeding day?

A. I think it was the afternoon of the same day on which the papers came into my possession.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Look at this note, reading as follows: "Mr. Evans will please call at the President's House, and see Mr. Edward Cooper, Monday," and state whether you recognize the handwriting?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whose is it?

A. It looks to me to be the handwriting of John F. Coyle.

Q. Who is he?

A. He is a resident of Washington, and is, I believe, one of the proprietors of the National Intelligencer. That looks to me like his handwriting. It is not Mr. Cooper's handwriting.

Q. Would you pronounce the address on the envelope as the same person's handwriting?

A. I should, so far as I can judge.

Q. Are you familiar with Mr. Coyle's handwriting?

A. I have seen it frequently. I was at one time connected with the same office in which he was engaged.

Q. And you believe that to be his handwriting?

A. It has a very strong resemblance to it. I should take it to be his handwriting.

Q. Did you communicate the messages of the President to Congress after Mr. Cooper was admitted as a member from Tennessee?

A. Generally I did. Sometimes Colonel Robert Johnson performed that duty.

Q. You have charge of that branch of business in the Executive mansion, the communications of the President to Congress?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you communicate to the Senate nominations by the President of officers to be confirmed by the Senate?

A. I did very frequently during the 39th Congress, and during the 1st session of the 40th, and the recent executive session of the Senate.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the failure to nominate any officers to the Senate who had been appointed during the recess of the Senate?

A. All that I know on that subject is contained in a report made to the House of Representatives, in answer to a resolution making inquiry to that effect.

Q. The fact is stated in that report that nominations were not made; can you give any reason why the nominations were not made?

A. Towards the close of the session referred to in that report, quite a number of nominations were sent in from some of the departments, principally the Treasury Department. Colonel Cooper at that time had charge of that particular business, the appointments, and requested me to call his attention to any nominations, and also to give him lists of them, classified by States, his object being to make inquiry respecting them from the representatives of the districts to which the appointments pertained. I gave him the lists, but he took his seat in Congress before he had called upon me for all the nominations. It was simply, I presume, owing to the pressure of his Congressional interests and other official duties.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. He was admitted to Congress about that time?

A. Yes, sir; just towards the close of that session.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you succeed to the duties of his office?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why did you not inform the President of this matter?

A. Only two days elapsed from his admission as a representative till the adjournment of Congress, and I found that the nominations then coming in, together with the other matters which I had in charge, were sufficient to occupy my whole time. I found it utterly impossible, owing to the pressure at that time, to go back and take up any business which he had left.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know the fact that some blank nominations sent from the departments, which came into the hands of Mr. Cooper, were placed in his desk or drawer, and remained there?

A. I do not know what disposition he made of them. A large number of papers were left in his drawer undisposed of, and after the adjournment I tried to arrange them to some extent. There may have been nominations among them. The nominations to which I refer were in my possession.

Q. Was there, to your knowledge, any purpose of the President to leave these blank nominations that were sent to him, without forwarding them to the Senate?

A. None whatever.

Q. Was there any order of that kind given to you?

A. None at all.

Q. Was the subject called to his attention until after the adjournment of Congress?

A. Not by myself, certainly. After the adjournment of Congress I showed him the list.

Q. Do you know of any of those nominations having been called to his attention until after Congress had adjourned?

A. No, sir; not after Colonel Cooper took charge of the office. Prior to that time I had myself called the attention of the President to those matters. When Colonel Cooper took charge of the office, I, of course, turned that business over to him. It was his specialty.

Q. During the time immediately preceding Mr. Cooper's admission to Congress, he was more than usually occupied at the House of Representatives, was he not?

A. Yes, sir; he came here with messages, and would usually remain a considerable time at the Capitol. He delivered most of the messages after he entered the office as acting private secretary.

Q. He was away from the office much of the time?

A. Yes, sir; at the Capitol.

Q. When were you first employed at the Executive mansion?

A. I was ordered to report to the President about the middle of November, 1865.

Q. In what room were you stationed?

A. In the library of the Executive mansion.

Q. Was there an open communication between the library and the President's receiving room?

A. Yes, sir; between the President's office and the library there is a door, which is always open.

Q. Can you at your desk see into the President's room?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Cobb?

A. I do, personally.

Q. Do you know of her seeing the President alone at any time?

A. I do not. I never saw her alone in the President's room. I am very certain of that. I do not know that I ever saw her in the President's room more than once, and then it was when the doors had been thrown open, and all who were awaiting an audience were permitted to enter.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

SALMON P. CHASE, Chief Justice of the United States, sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State what reasons you have any knowledge of for the delay, on the part of the government, in bringing Jefferson Davis to trial on the indictment pending against him in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Virginia.

A. I know no reasons.

Q. Do you know whether any portion of the delay has grown out of the condition of the country at the time the indictment was found?

A. I cannot say what influenced the government in not bringing on the trial.

Q. Do you know any reason for the delay in bringing on the trial, either on the part of the executive department of the government, or of the judiciary?

A. Perhaps I had better answer the question by stating the facts, which are, however, very much matter of history. When the war practically closed by the capture of Davis, and before that time, the district and circuit courts of the United States were regularly held in Virginia. The circuit courts are held also by the district judge in the absence of a justice of the Supreme Court. The indictment against Davis was found in a circuit court, over which the district judge presided. The circuit court has been regularly held by the same district judge ever since; and I know of no reason why Davis could not be brought to trial, if it was intended that he should be tried by a civil court, on that indictment, at any term.

Q. Have you had any conversation with the President on the subject?

A. I recollect none since that indictment was found. The circuit, of which the district of Virginia is part, was allotted to me shortly after I went on the bench, in December, 1864. I have had conversations with the President in relation to holding court in that circuit.

Q. Please state the conversations you had with the President in reference to holding court in that circuit.

A. I have had one or two conversations with him in reference to that, but I cannot give the precise date, nor are the conversations fresh in my recollection. I can give you, however, the substance of what passed at these conversations. After the President's proclamation, of April 2, 1866, declaring the insurrection at an end in all the rebel States except Texas, I desired to join the district judges in holding the circuit courts, believing that it was my duty to do so, as soon as the military authority had been withdrawn. But military commissions still issued from time to time, or trials were proceeding under military commissions, at different points within my circuit, which includes Virginia, and I wished to be assured that the proclamation was understood as relieving the courts of the United States from all liability to interference on the part of the military. I intended to join in holding the courts, if such relief could be assured. I called, therefore, upon the President and requested him to issue a short proclamation to that effect. I submitted to him the form of one drawn by myself, to the effect simply that military authority was abrogated, and the habeas corpus restored in all cases within the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States. He expressed a great readiness to do everything that was necessary to facilitate my holding of the courts, but he said he thought his proclamation of April 2d sufficient for that purpose. I replied that I also thought so at first, and should probably have remained of that opinion if these military commissions had not been going on; and that all I desired was a simple declaration over his signature, construing the proclamation distinctly on those two points—that the military law was abrogated, and the habeas corpus restored as to cases within the jurisdiction of the United States courts, so that the circuit courts could proceed without risk of interruption by military authority. He expressed his readiness to do everything proper to be done, and I left him; but nothing was done. I presume the President recurred to his opinion that his proclamation declaring the insurrection at an end was sufficient, and did not think it worth while to do anything more. That, however, is mere inference. I presented a form of proclamation, and requested him to issue it, or a similar one; but it was not done. That is all. These conversations occurred in the spring or summer of 1866. Shortly afterwards an act of Congress was passed reducing the number and changing the organizations of all circuits except the first and second, but making no provision for the allotment among them of the judges of the Supreme Court; and it was the opinion of seven of the judges that, without a special allotment, or without authority to make an allotment ourselves, we had no jurisdiction to hold circuit courts in the newly organized circuits. The subject of holding courts in the district of Virginia and other districts was therefore dropped.

Q. Have you had any conversation with the United States district attorney for the district of Virginia relative to your being present and presiding at any term of the circuit court for that district? If so, please state it.

A. I have said to the district attorney that I should have joined the district judge in holding the circuit court, if the order first mentioned had been issued. I did not see the law changing the circuits for some time after it was passed. When I saw it I conferred with the other judges, except the judge then in California, and we all, except one, agreed that any judgment rendered in any circuit court by a judge of the Supreme Court, except of the first and second circuits, which were not changed, might be liable to be reversed on error, and for that reason that the courts should be left to be held by the district judge until a new allotment should be authorized by Congress and made accordingly.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. To what act do you refer?

A. To the act of July 23, 1866. It provided for the reduction of the number of judges, and altered seven of the circuits, but made no provision for an allotment of the judges.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Has an allotment been made since the passage of that act?

A. Congress, at the following session, passed an act to remedy the defect, and an allotment was soon afterwards made. This act was approved March 2, 1867.

Q. That allotment was made before the commencement of the recent term of the circuit court of Virginia?

A. It was.

Q. Was it suggested to you by the district attorney, or by the district judge of that district, that they desired you to be present at that time?

A. They always expressed a desire that I should preside in the court, and it has always been understood among us that as soon as I could I would. The term of that court recently begun, and now temporarily adjourned, is the first held since the allotment; and it was understood between Judge Underwood, the district attorney, and myself, that I would attend as soon as released from my duties here.

Q. You were not able to attend that term on account of your business here?

A. No. When the term began it was understood that the Supreme Court would adjourn on the 20th of May, and that just as soon after that as I could go down I would do so. The Supreme Court adjourned in fact on the sixteenth, and I was then obliged to perform the duty of nominating registers in bankruptcy, imposed upon me by Congress, which is not yet quite completed. I might, however, have either pressed that business through or postponed it so as to attend the second or third week of the circuit court term at Richmond.

Q. Were they aware of your intention to be present?

A. Yes. Judge Underwood announced, I believe, from the bench, that I would be there. Perhaps I ought to say, although it does not relate to the points inquired of, that in August, 1865, I think, the President requested me to come to the White House, and wished to ascertain my views in reference to the trial of Mr. Davis.

Q. Please state what occurred then.

A. I cannot very definitely. He expressed a wish to have the trial of Davis brought on soon. A trial in Virginia was suggested, and also the possibility of his being tried in Tennessee, and something was said about a trial by military commission, or in this city upon indictment already found in the supreme court of this District. I said to him that the trial of Davis, as to time, manner, and place, was, as I thought, a matter exclusively for the consideration of the executive department of the government, about which I, as the head of the judicial department, did not wish to express any opinion; that when I held a court, I should try anybody who came before me, but did not desire to express an opinion in reference to persons to be tried, or time or place or mode of trial. That was about all. I did not think the trial of Davis a matter for me to advise about. It was a question at that time whether Mr. Davis should be tried by a military court or by a civil court;—by what civil court, and in what district. I could not express any desire or unwillingness to have him tried in the district in which I must preside.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. When was that?

A. That must have been in August, 1865.

Q. Was that after the indictment against Mr. Davis was found in Virginia?

A. I think not. My impression is that the only indictment then pending against Davis was the indictment found in the supreme court of this District. The trial was a matter of Cabinet discussion, as I was informed, and, as I was not a member of the Cabinet, and would have only a judicial duty to perform, I preferred to restrict myself to that.

Q. Did the President ever say anything to you in any of those conversations indicative of a wish on his part that Jefferson Davis should not be brought to trial?

A. Never; he never expressed any feeling of that sort.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did the President or the Attorney General, at any time, intimate to you a desire that you should hold a circuit court in Virginia for the purpose of trying either Jefferson Davis or any other individual indicted for treason or other crime against the government?

A. I may have had some little talk with the Attorney General about the trial. I think I did mention to him my intention to be in Richmond; but no conversation took place between us which was not entirely casual and incidental.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did the President express a desire or anxiety to have Mr. Davis tried immediately?

A. In that first conversation he did. I cannot recollect his language; but the impression I got from the President's conversation was that he desired to have all the questions connected with the trial disposed of. It was a subject of discussion in the Cabinet, and there were differences of opinion about it, and the President wished to have the matter settled.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were you called upon to meet the Cabinet?

A. No.

Q. This was a private interview with the President?

A. It could hardly be called private. It was on public matters; but there was no person present but ourselves.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was there anything said by the President in the conversation in reference to the charge made in his proclamation, charging Davis with complicity in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, or on the subject of a trial thereupon?

A. I recollect no reference to that subject, and I think none could have been made. I do not think that anything was said as to any particular charge against Mr. Davis. What was said was about bringing him to trial.

Q. If he had been referring to that matter, he would have been hardly looking out of the District to find a court that had jurisdiction?

A. Something was said about the rule of locality—whether a man could be tried anywhere except in the place where he committed the act; and that must have had reference to the charge of treason.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. When you first spoke of holding court in Virginia, you declined because you felt that the civil courts were not entirely free?

A. Yes; I regarded the civil courts as under military supervision. After the close of the war, military supervision was exercised over all the courts, including the courts of the United States.

Q. Did your objection apply as well to the circuit and district court judges holding court there as to yourself?

A. Not to the district judges. I thought that if I were a district judge, I should be willing to hold either district or circuit courts under military supervision, for the sake of the general interests of order. There are no circuit judges other than the justices of the Supreme Court allotted to the several circuits.

Q. What distinction did you draw?

A. I thought that the members of the highest tribunal of the United States should not be subjected to that supervision. I thought it would not be creditable to our institutions that the justices of the Supreme Court should attempt to exercise their jurisdiction under military control.

Q. If I understood your answer correctly, you thought at first that the President's proclamation of peace was sufficient to relieve the courts of military supervision?

A. That was my impression. In other words, my impression was that the legal effect of the proclamation of the President was that the writ of habeas corpus was restored, and that the military supervision was withdrawn from all the courts.

Q. Believing that to be the case, and entertaining that opinion of the legal effect of the President's proclamation, would it not have been the duty of the civil courts to exercise their jurisdiction as against the military authority?

A. That would depend upon the construction of the proclamation. The question between the President and myself was what was its proper construction. My first impression was what I have told you. When I observed, however, that military commissions were being held, I thought it due to the Executive to treat that fact as his construction of his own order, because all military commissions were held necessarily under his sanction.

Q. With the view you took of the proclamation, and with the opinion you entertained about it, the military courts were then illegally held?

A. Yes, if such were the true construction of the order. But I did not assume to construe it, because the military supervision was in the hands of the President exclusively, and his acts must determine the construction of his order in the absence of express declaration to the contrary.

Q. The President, in his conversation with you, put precisely the construction on the proclamation that you did?

A. Yes; he did in conversation, and I wished it to be put in writing and made public, at least so far as the national courts were concerned.

Q. I understood you to say that you informed the President that the question as to the place where Jefferson Davis should be tried—whether in the District of Columbia or in Virginia—was a question which the Executive ought to determine?

A. I thought the whole matter of the initiation of the trial, whether under an indictment, or by the organization of a military commission—if that mode should be adopted—was a matter exclusively of Executive discretion, and that the Judiciary had nothing to do with the trial until the case should come before it in the regular course of proceeding.

Q. When the indictment was once found, the President, I suppose, had nothing more to do with it than any other individual?

A. He might, or might not. These treason cases are considered very much, I believe, under the jurisdiction of the Attorney General.

Q. I want to know whether, as a matter of fact, you have stated anything which would criminate the President by showing any neglect of duty on his part?

A. I suppose that the whole matter of initiating proceedings, of determining whether the party charged with treason or any other public crime should be regularly indicted, or should be tried by a military commission, was a matter of Executive discretion, and not a matter of judicial determination.

Q. When the question was determined not to try Mr. Davis by a military commission, was it then for the Executive to determine the locality where he should be tried?

A. The marshals and district attorneys of the United States are appointed by the President, and are, or were, subject to be removed at his discretion.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You say that after the President's proclamation, known as his proclamation of peace, military commissions continued to be held, before which offences were tried, and you regarded that fact as the President's construction of his own proclamation, and as yet permitting the exercise of martial law?

A. Yes.

Q. And in that view of it, if I understand you, your court had no power physically to resist that construction which the President put on his own proclamation of peace, and had no legal right to deny the status which he, by that construction, assigned to the States where these military commissions were held?

A. That is substantially correct. Not that I did not suppose that courts could be held, but I knew they must be held under military supervision. The district courts have been held uniformly, and the circuit courts have been held uniformly by the district judges, and both have exercised complete jurisdiction, subject to that control.

Q. Can you state whether Chief Justice Taney refused at any time to hold circuit court unless he had an assurance from the executive department of the government that his court would not be subject to military authority?

A. I have in my possession an extract from a letter of Chief Justice Taney to Judge Giles, the district judge at Baltimore, which was handed to me by that gentleman. It shows the views of the late Chief Justice, and I will furnish a copy to the Committee.

(Extract of a letter from Chief Justice Taney to Judge Giles, dated May 14, 1864.)

"I suppose Mr. Price (district attorney) has no thought of asking for a trial in the treason cases at the present term. Maryland is substantially and practically under martial law, and the judicial power and process is disregarded whenever the military authority thinks proper. I certainly shall not agree to try a case of that kind until I can give the party compulsory process to obtain witnesses in his behalf. Compulsory process is process which the court can enforce everywhere and against every person by its own authority. It has not the power to do this while Maryland continues under martial law."

Q. Did you attend the term of the circuit court in Baltimore at any time when certain indictments were pending against citizens of Maryland for treason?

A. Such indictments were pending at each of the terms in that court when I presided.

Q. Were you ready to try those cases if they had been brought up?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you state why they were not tried, or at whose instance they were continued?

A. They were continued by the direction of the Attorney General.

Q. There was no preparation made for their trial?

A. The first term was in the spring of 1865. There was no disposition then, apparently, on any side to try them. They were continued by the consent of the district attorney who was acting, as I understood, under the direction of the Attorney General. At the next term the district judge and myself both objected to their being continued any longer. We thought they ought to be tried. The district attorney said he had made no preparation for trial, supposing that the same order would be made as at the former term. I informed him that they must be tried, or that there must be some good ground shown for continuance. He said he would confer with the Attorney General. He went to Washington, and brought back an order from the Attorney General that the cases should be continued. Of course, they had to be continued or dismissed.

Q. Can you furnish a copy of the paper which you presented to the President, asking him to issue it as a proclamation?

A. I think I can. I will do so, if I find it.

(Copy of proclamation requested of the President by the Chief Justice.)

Whereas, by an Act of Congress approved March 3, 1863, the President of the United States was authorized to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus in any case throughout the United States or any part thereof:

And whereas, the privilege of said writ was accordingly, on the 15th of September, 1863, suspended throughout the United States in certain cases therein mentioned, and martial law was established and put in force in certain States and parts of States by the authority of the President:

And whereas, by like proclamation and authority, the privilege of the said writ has been restored, and the martial law abrogated in certain States and in certain cases:

And whereas, in my judgment, the privilege of said writ may be now further restored, and the martial law superseded with safety and advantage to the government and the people of the United States:

Now, therefore, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, in pursuance of authority vested in me by law, do hereby declare and make known that the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus is restored, and that the martial law is superseded and abrogated in all cases of which the courts of the United States have jurisdiction, and in respect to all processes and proceedings of said courts, or any of them; and all military and naval officers of the United States are required to take notice of this proclamation, and govern themselves accordingly.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

HENRY STANBERY recalled.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. I find among the papers furnished by you to the Committee a letter written from your office, dated March 25, 1867, and addressed to J. Q. Smith, United States district attorney at Montgomery, Alabama, directing him to suspend all proceedings against C. C. Clay. State whether that communication was sent to the district attorney of Alabama, and what the reasons were for suspending action in the case of Mr. Clay.

A. I think that letter referred to the treason case. He had been indicted for treason some time. The prosecution was pending; and I made that order as I have done in very many treason cases—sometimes to dismiss, but usually to suspend further proceedings. Those treason cases were very numerous all over the districts of Kentucky, Alabama, and other States. I directed the case of Mr. Clay to be suspended. I did not deem it proper to enter a nolle prosequi in the case, but deemed it proper to stop proceedings for a time. When indictments were simply for acts done during the war, I have not directed any proceedings to be advanced. I think that is about the same policy that has been pursued in the office before I came there.

Q. Did you have any instructions from the President himself with reference to Mr. Clay's case?

A. I do not know that the President ever mentioned to me the fact of his being indicted for treason. I think that in reference to the confiscation cases, so far as Mr. Clay was concerned, I may have had some conversation with the President. He may have called my attention to it, or something of that sort. I do not now recollect that he mentioned any treason case against Mr. Clay.

Q. Were there proceedings pending against the property of Mr. Clay under the confiscation act of 1862?

A. Yes.

Q. Were the proceedings dismissed?

A. I think so. I present to the Committee the correspondence of the office, both when Mr. Speed was in the office and since I have been in the office.

Q. You stated the other day that you regarded the confiscation act as a war measure?

A. Yes. I found that the only result of these confiscation cases was the accumulation of costs. I did not see that the government derived any benefit from them. They only tended to put large costs in the pocket of the district attorney, especially in that district. The testimony taken in reference to Mr. Smith, the district attorney there, showed that the charges and costs which he collected were perfectly enormous.

Q. He was removed?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the cause of his removal?

A. General statements and particular statements in reference to his exactions.

Q. Charges against him of official misconduct?

A. Yes; and they were sustained by General Swayne, in whom I have great confidence—charges that he was using the office for the mere purpose of exaction. There were proofs that he undertook to dismiss cases of his own motion as soon as he got the fees, which were very large. The proceedings did not result in any benefit whatever to the government, their only consequence being to make poor people still poorer.

Q. If you have any explanations to make respecting the papers which you present, you can make them.

A. I do not know of anything. I think the papers speak for themselves. Here is all the correspondence between Mr. Speed and Mr. Smith, and between myself and Mr. Smith. Here is a letter from Mr. Smith to the President, which was referred by the President to me, and in which Mr. Smith vindicates himself. There was a very great concurrence in his removal. All the bar and judges concurred in it. What influenced me, perhaps, as much as anything else was not only a letter from General Swayne, but a personal conference I had with General Swayne, in which he absolutely took me to task for not removing Smith sooner. I find, on looking at the letter which Mr. Smith wrote to the President, that he had been interfering with the Freedmen's Bureau. Here is his letter to the President, in which he vindicates himself:

WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA,
January 29, 1867.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

RESPECTFUL SIR: Hearing that an attempt was being made to remove me from the office of district attorney for Alabama, and being unable to ascertain the cause, I repaired immediately to Washington to see you on the subject; but in obtaining an interview for this purpose I have signally failed, after six days' attendance. I would delay longer, but my presence in Alabama is necessary. I would therefore respectfully ask your excellency, as a matter of favor and as a matter of right, to take no action on any representation or charge made against me until I am furnished with a statement of the representation or charge, that I may have an opportunity to refute them, and show to your excellency that it is not the public good my accusers seek, but to gratify a malicious hatred and effect personal interest. No one can know better than your excellency how the position or character of a man can be destroyed, if the ex parte statements and representations of enemies or interested persons are received under the cover of "private and confidential" communications, and no opportunity given for explanation. I have good reason to believe, and do believe, this effort to remove me from this office is due entirely to the interested motives of Major General Wager Swayne, Freedmen's Bureau agent at Montgomery, because I would not consent to dismiss cases of confiscation pending in court, and permit him to hold and sell the government property libeled for confiscation, under acts of Congress, by me, and for which I am accountable. He has already sold not less than five hundred thousand dollars' worth of property in Alabama by military orders, under the pretence of aiding the "poor blacks." He is also hostile to me because I won't flood the United States courts in my district with the petty differences of freedmen under the civil rights' bill; and if some selection of his can be obtained as district attorney, then he can use him to his own advantage. I will resign the office before I will consent to be used by a bureau agent as a tool to execute his purposes. The ex-General openly denounces you, and advocates your impeachment as President of the United States, and hopes that a recent order of yours, in reference to the delivering up of C. C. Clay's property, in his possession as bureau agent, will not effect this end. I am informed this order has been sent to Congressman Ashley, or some of the committee on impeachment; and if so, you will know where it has come from.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

JAMES Q. SMITH,
United States Attorney for Northern District of Alabama.

P. S.—I had reason to suppose that Governor Parsons was my friend, but I do not now think so, and any interest he takes in my removal may be considered in this light.

J. Q. S.

I sent for Governor Parsons to ascertain the character of the parties and the foundation for such charges. He asked me to suspend the matter, as he was going to Alabama, and not to make the removal until he could report to me. On his return to Alabama he addressed me a note, saying that he withdrew all objection to the removal of Mr. Smith. As to this Freedmen's Bureau property, I had correspondence in reference to it with Mr. Smith. That was property which had belonged to the so-called confederate government. It was seized and taken possession of properly by General Swayne. I looked upon the title of that property as clear, beyond all doubt, in the United States by virtue of conquest or succession. It was, therefore, not property which we should bring under any confiscation law. I supposed that our title was perfect already by virtue of its acquisition by the laws of war. Having it so in our possession, General Swayne, administering the business of the bureau there, had made sales of the property. Afterwards Mr. Smith, the property being very valuable, commenced proceedings under the confiscation act. I stopped those proceedings.

They could not make the title of the government any better, and would interfere with the sales which General Swayne, as the properly authorized agent of the government, had made. I considered it a very improper proceeding, as it brought into question our own title. On that confiscation proceeding, questions might arise to embarrass the government very much, and it could only lead to the accumulation of costs. I thought his interference with General Swayne, as the bureau agent, was wholly unauthorized.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you mean to be understood as saying that your orders in that case, as in other cases, to suspend proceedings under the confiscation act, were caused by the circumstance that the expenses were large, and exceeded the receipts?

A. Not merely that; on pacification and establishment of peace, I looked upon confiscation cases after that as not authorized. If they were authorized, then it was our duty to order confiscation as to every person's property in the South. But looking at the character of those acts—the last one reciting that for the purpose of suppressing insurrection, seizures are authorized to be made—and considering that, in admiralty cases in time of war, a capture after peace is wholly void, and that these proceedings were made very analogous to admiralty proceedings, I had no doubt that confiscation was not the policy of the government, and that I would not be justified in ordering confiscation cases, which had not yet ripened into condemnation or sale, to be carried on. The country was flooded with them. In Missouri there were cases innumerable; a great many of them had been stopped by Mr. Speed. It was very much in the interest of district attorneys and marshals to institute these proceedings, as they were allowed very large fees in them, without any beneficial result whatever to the government. It seemed to me that, in the condition of the country, while we were actually sending these people aid to support them, the idea of confiscating their property, after the war had settled everything, was certainly not a judicious policy.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Do you mean to say that the confiscation law has ceased to be in force since the war ceased?

A. What I mean to say is, that, in my judgment, the whole purpose and policy of those laws has ceased. The recital of the act of 1862 is, "that for the purpose of suppressing insurrection" confiscation is ordered to be carried on. After the insurrection was put down, it did not seem to be proper to go on and order confiscation. If it was, I must order it as to the whole South.

Q. That is your opinion as to the policy of the law?

A. It is my opinion as to the meaning of the law.

Q. Do you mean to say that courts would not enforce confiscation acts if proceedings were taken?

A. I did not pretend to decide for the courts. I certainly had no doubt as to my action according with the policy indicated by Congress in these laws, that it was not expected of the Attorney General to order general and indiscriminate confiscation. If so, it was my duty, of course, to order every district attorney in the country to find out cases for confiscation, and the whole country would have been overwhelmed with them. I did not think it the policy of the government, after the action of Congress and of the people in relieving those who had been already so impoverished. Congress never gave me any such instruction by resolution or otherwise.

Q. You do not mean to say that, as a question of law, the property of Jefferson Davis may not be confiscated?

A. I have never considered that question as to whether this law can be still said to be operative. I supposed that if Congress intended anything of that sort, it would have given us further instruction in reference to confiscation. I only know that such a threat was held over the southern people.

Q. The opinion of Congress on that subject was never asked by any executive department of the government?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Congress has not repealed the law?

A. No, sir.

Q. Is it usual for Congress to adopt any resolution relative to the enforcement of laws that remain unrepealed?

A. No, sir; but when Congress, in passing a law, says that it is for the purpose of putting down insurrection, then the question arises, whether the same power is to be used after the insurrection is put down.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Were the proceedings of confiscation against Mr. Clay dismissed?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Had you any conversation with the President on the subject of enforcing the confiscation law?

A. I recollect no particular conversation. The President would generally receive letters from the South in reference to proceedings being had, which letters he referred to my office. District attorneys were bringing suits without number, and the President, I think, has more than once said to me he hardly considered it a proper policy to go on and commence confiscation proceedings after peace.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Do you recollect when the proceedings against Mr. Clay were instituted?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you recollect in what condition they were when you ordered the suits to be dismissed?

A. They had not proceeded to a condemnation.

Q. Did you order those proceedings to be dismissed on the general ground you have stated?

A. Yes, sir; the case came within the general rule.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. That general rule was, as I understand, approved by the President?

A. I think he approved of the same policy that occurred to me as the proper one to be pursued.

Q. How is it with reference to the suspension of criminal proceedings against Clay for treason?

A. I have no particular recollection that the treason matter, as to Mr. Clay, was ever spoken of between me and the President; but I have a general recollection that when he received these letters about confiscation the President had something to say, and I found that his views and my own were in accord with reference to the policy of going on to multiply costs in those cases.

Q. It appears from the papers before the Committee that in the case of Clement C. Clay he directed the district attorney to suspend all proceedings against him, and not to make the arrest.

A. That is in the treason case.

Q. There are also letters here in reference to certain persons indicted in Maryland for obstructing the railroad to prevent troops from coming to Washington about the 19th of April, 1861?

A. Yes, sir. Those are old cases pending for several years. No action has been required to be taken in them that I know of. I think I did not order any of them to be dismissed in which the parties had not acted in a proper military capacity. From the tenor of the communications it appeared that some of those parties were not in the military service; and as to those cases I did not order them to be dismissed.

Q. Was the order that was issued from your office dismissing certain cases issued with the knowledge of the President?

A. I do not recollect that it was.

Q. Have you ever, at any time, had any conversation with the President on the subject of prosecuting persons who were indicted for treason?

A. I do not recollect any conversation about prosecutions for treason. All I can recollect was about proceedings for confiscation. The case of Mr. Davis has been mentioned in Cabinet and out of Cabinet; but as to any other treason cases, I am not at present able to recollect any conversation with the President. I rather looked as to what had been the practice in my office, and to my own views as to what instruction I should give to the district attorneys about them.

Q. You have, then, I understand, no means of knowing that the President desired that persons indicted for treason should be prosecuted to final judgment and sentence?

A. Nothing occurs to me now which I can state in relation to that matter.

Q. You say you had conversations with the President in reference to Mr. Davis?

A. Yes.

Q. In any of those conversations did he ever express any opinion, or give you any instructions as to what should be done?

A. No, sir. The only matter that I can recollect in reference to Mr. Davis has been in the Cabinet. I do distinctly recollect the action of the Cabinet, because that is a matter impressed upon my memory.

Q. What action of the Cabinet do you refer to?

A. The action of the Cabinet in relation to his custody. We felt, and I frequently stated, that we were in a wrong position in reference to Mr. Davis being held in military custody without any charge being preferred against him by the military, and that it was desirable some way or other that we should get out of what I considered a very false position.

Q. You so stated in the presence of the President?

A. Yes, sir; and of the Cabinet.

Q. What action was taken for the purpose of getting out of that wrong position?

A. An order to General Burton to hold Davis subject to any writ from the proper quarter.

Q. When was that order to General Burton issued?

A. About the time that the application for habeas corpus was understood to be made.

Q. Within the last three or four weeks?

A. Yes; the matter had been spoken of previously as a thing proper to be done; but then no steps were in progress. The government was advised that the writ of habeas corpus would be applied for, and it was necessary, of course, for General Burton to know what to do. Otherwise, I suppose General Burton would have returned that he held him in military custody.

Q. When, for the first time, did you state in the presence of the President, either in Cabinet or otherwise, that the government was in a wrong position in reference to the custody of Jefferson Davis?

A. I cannot say. I certainly so stated whenever the question came up. I felt it from the first.

Q. How soon after you came into office as Attorney General?

A. I cannot recollect, but I think that more than once before the order was made I have stated that. I think that as early as the time when the President was called on by Congress for information as to Jefferson Davis, the question came up, and I then stated, after examining the matter, that I thought we were in a false position in reference to Mr. Davis, and that the sooner the civil authorities got possession of him the better.

Q. Was there, at any time, any practical or legal difficulty in the way of the executive department surrendering Jefferson Davis to the civil authorities for trial, on the charge of treason, either in this District or in the district of Virginia?

A. I do not know of any legal difficulty.

Q. It was entirely within the province of the executive department, by simultaneous orders, to direct Davis's custodian, at Fortress Monroe, to surrender him to the marshal, and by an order to the marshal, direct him to receive him and hold him for trial—I mean without a writ?

A. Supposing an indictment was pending against him, I do not see that there was any legal difficulty about it. An application was first made to the President through me, as Attorney General, for the transfer of Mr. Davis from the custody of the military authorities at Fortress Monroe, to the custody of the military authorities at Fort Lafayette, in the harbor of New York. The application was put on the ground of sanitary considerations. The President at once directed through the War Department an inquiry to be made as to whether sanitary conditions were worse at Fortress Monroe than at Fort Lafayette; and the report of the surgeon was that all sanitary considerations were rather in favor of his being retained at Fortress Monroe than of his being transferred to Fort Lafayette, and therefore it was ordered that that request should not be complied with. I do not think that the question was ever mooted about ordering him to be placed in the hands of the marshal. The consequence of such an order would have been that Davis would have been placed in some jail in Virginia. I do not think that we would, on our own responsibility, looking at the condition of the Virginia jails, and knowing that the moment a prisoner is transferred from the custody of the United States to the custody of a State he becomes solely under State authority, have been authorized to do so. I should think it would have been a matter of very doubtful expediency at that time voluntarily to take him from custody where he was perfectly safe, and hand him over to be put in a jail in Virginia.

Q. Could he not have been brought to the District of Columbia in custody of the marshal and kept securely by the authorities of the government here?

A. That matter was never considered; it never occurred to me.

Q. It was known to you that he was indicted here?

A. I have an impression that I heard so; but if I did, the matter never came up. There was an indictment against him in Virginia, and my predecessor had given an opinion that he could not be indicted anywhere except where he was personally present, and had so advised the President.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Would it not have been competent for the military authorities to have protected him in confinement after he had been removed to jail?

A. If you will look at the statute you will find that it does not contemplate any interference of the military authorities of the United States after a prisoner is handed over to the civil authorities of a State. He is then entirely in the custody of the State authorities, and they become responsible for his safe custody.

Q. Cannot the military authorities aid the civil authorities in holding prisoners and enforcing the laws?

A. I have never known an instance of that kind anywhere. I think if you look at the statutes you will agree with me that they do not seem to contemplate any such interference. If the President had interfered in that way of his own motion, and put Davis in some place where he might escape, I do not think that he or any of us would ever hear the last of it.

Q. Is he not now in a condition where he may escape?

A. Oh, no; the presumption is that the court took bail large enough to insure his detention. My impression is that the moment a marshal of the United States delivers his prisoner into the custody of an officer of a State, or of a jailor of a State, the marshal has no longer authority over the prisoner, nor is he any longer responsible for him. The marshal has nothing more to do with him.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you mean to say that, considering the condition in which Virginia was, under military control to a very large extent, and considering all the legal powers which could have been exercised by the executive department of the government of the United States, and by the judicial tribunals in Virginia through the marshals and other officers of the courts, there was any reason why Jefferson Davis could not with safety be transferred from Fortress Monroe to the custody of the officers of the court for the district of Virginia?

A. I do not know all the circumstances; but as to the safety of the prisoner I think there was no place in Virginia where he could be so safe as at Fortress Monroe. If he were transferred to Richmond, and still kept in military custody, he would not be in a safe place, and the same objection to military custody would continue.

Q. Was it not then possible, if the administration desired to get rid of the custody of Jefferson Davis, to have given such directions through your office to the district attorney in Virginia as would have led to his trial at an early day?

A. I am not aware of anything that was omitted in reference to the trial of Jefferson Davis. When I came into office he had been under indictment a long time. The government had employed the most eminent counsel to assist the district attorney. The case was in the hands of competent parties so far as the prosecution was concerned, and I do not know that anything ever occurred to me as necessary to be done that was not done, so far as I myself was concerned as Attorney General. I have heretofore stated, and I now repeat, that it was not any part of my duty to attend the trial of Jefferson Davis. On the contrary, the law declaring the duties of my office contemplates my duties as here, and I am not authorized or required to appear in the trial of cases in the United States courts in the States. The provisions with reference to the duties of the Attorney General are, that he shall attend to the Supreme Court of the United States, and argue cases there in which the United States is a party or is interested. It is not my duty to attend treason cases, no matter where they are. As to what might have been possible, that is a pretty large question. I can only say that nothing occurred to me to be done that was not done. I was at all times ready to confer with the district attorney, or with the counsel employed.

Q. Does not the law make it your duty to instruct the attorneys in the several districts from time to time as to the manner in which they shall discharge their duties?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you not at various times issue instructions to district attorneys in reference to treason indictments that were pending?

A. Undoubtedly. Whenever any matter came up in which it was necessary for me to give instructions, I did so.

Q. Did you not, without solicitation from the attorneys, interfere so far as to order them to suspend further proceedings where indictments were pending against persons for treason?

A. Yes; whenever any matter was referred to me that called for my action I gave the necessary instructions to the district attorney.

Q. Why did you not order the district attorney for Virginia to suspend proceedings under the indictment against Jefferson Davis?

A. I am not aware that that was a proper case to suspend proceedings. That was an exceptional case.

Q. Was it such a case that it was not your duty to direct the district attorney either to bring Jefferson Davis to trial or to suspend proceedings against him, as you had instructed other district attorneys in relation to other persons indicted for treason?

A. The district attorney for Virginia was more than once in my office in reference to the matter, and perhaps shortly after I came into office I have had conversations with him about the case. He has asked me questions in reference to it; and whenever he has asked me I have given the information sought. I was not aware that he was in any delinquency in the matter. Counsel was employed, and the management of the case was in the district attorney and this counsel. I was not aware of anything requiring me to give him specific instructions.

Q. You have said that you felt that the government was in a false position in holding Jefferson Davis in the manner in which he was held. Did it not occur to you that the trial of Jefferson Davis would relieve the government from that position?

A. Yes.

Q. Why then did you not give directions to the district attorney to bring Jefferson Davis to trial?

A. When the Chief Justice stated that the condition of Virginia was such that he did not consider it proper for him to hold court there, I felt it was a matter of great delicacy to proceed under those circumstances, and to direct him to be tried with or without the Chief Justice. It would be a trial of very great consequence, and it occurred to me that it would be proper to have the presence of the Chief Justice, or of some Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. When the Chief Justice took that ground I did not feel authorized myself to order the district attorney to go on and try Davis before the district judge. I understood, also, from the district attorney that he was unwilling to do it, and that he thought it was not proper to bring the case to trial before the district judge.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you know that Chief Justice Chase had intimated his purpose to attend at the present term of the circuit court at Richmond?

A. I have never had any conversation with the Chief Justice on the subject. Mr. Chandler, the last time I talked with him, said that certainly the Chief Justice would not be there when the habeas corpus would be returnable, and he could not ascertain whether or not he would be there afterwards. Mr. Chandler had undertaken that matter himself. He said to me he had seen the Chief Justice more than once, and had been unable to arrive at any understanding.

Q. Did you cause any inquiry to be made of the Chief Justice whether he would be there?

A. I did not. The district attorney said he had a conversation with the Chief Justice. For myself I did not feel it necessary to go any further about it.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you, after the conference with the district attorney and Mr. Evarts, assent to the course which was afterwards taken by them at Richmond, by which Davis was discharged on giving bonds, and the case continued?

A. When Mr. Evarts and Mr. Chandler came into my office, they were on their way to Richmond to attend to the habeas corpus, which was returnable on the following Monday. The question which I distinctly recollect as arising then was the admissibility to bail of Mr. Davis. I do not know who first began the discussion of it. All that I recollect is what my own opinion was; and certainly I am not mistaken in thinking that it was concurred in by the two other gentlemen. My own opinion was, that under the circumstances of the case the district judge had power to admit Mr. Davis to bail. I had no question about that. I would have been of that opinion under the act of 1789 alone—the question not being as to the right of a commissioner, but as to the right of a judge holding court to admit to bail when proper circumstances appear. Inasmuch as Mr. Davis had been in custody a long time without trial, I was of opinion that he would be liable under the act of 1789. My impression is that that question has been decided more than once at a very early day, and long before the act of 1862 was passed. Under this act of 1862, it seemed to me that the matter was settled plainer, because by that act Congress had placed the punishment in the alternative of death or imprisonment. It is not that the penalty "may be death," but that it "may be death or imprisonment." That language "may be death" necessarily means that the punishment, if any, "must be death." That has been the ruling in some of the State courts. But where the statute reads that the penalty "may be death or imprisonment," the rule is to admit to bail.

Q. Was it not your purpose, so far as you gave any advice to Mr. Evarts and Mr. Chandler at the interview with them, to have them understand that it would be more in harmony with the views of the executive branch of the government that Mr. Davis should be allowed to go on bail, than that he should be brought to trial at that term of the court?

A. No, sir; I do not know that I expressed any such opinion for the government.

Q. Did you express it as your own opinion?

A. If you asked me simply my own opinion as to the policy of putting Mr. Davis on trial in that court, at that time, before a single judge, I should have been inclined to say that it was not the proper time to try him. I should rather not be asked what my reasons are. Whenever Mr. Davis is to be tried, I think there would be a general consent over the country that the trial should be had under such circumstances as would give it proper weight and effect everywhere.

Q. If you had known that Chief Justice Chase would attend that term of the court and would preside in the trial, should you have advised or instructed Mr. Evarts and Mr. Chandler to resist the application for bail and to bring Davis to trial at the May term of the circuit court?

A. That condition of things did not present itself to me; but, putting it as a supposed case, I will say that if it had been understood that the Chief Justice were to be there, and if Mr. Chandler had expressed himself ready, I should have said "try him now." With reference to the preparations for trial, I think I have mentioned that Mr. Chandler stated to me he was not satisfied with his indictment. I told him to be very careful to have a proper indictment prepared, and he said he would. Of course, it would not do in such a case to be defeated on the insufficiency of an indictment; and when the district attorney himself said he was not satisfied with the indictment, of course there was but one course to be taken.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you advise him to have another bill found?

A. Yes, sir; by all means. But I have never advised Mr. Chandler that it was the purpose of the government to prevent the trial of Mr. Davis, and I know no reason why Mr. Davis will not be tried. I certainly have never been asked by the President, nor have I had any idea myself, to stop that prosecution or order a nolle prosequi to be entered.

Q. Did you understand that the case of Jefferson Davis, with all its aggravations, was a proper case for the exercise of the discretion of the court in admitting him to bail?

A. If I had been a judge myself, I rather think that, under the circumstances, I would have admitted him to bail.

Q. I wish you to state whether the rule is not that bail shall not be taken except in a very strong case?

A. Yes, sir; where there are strong circumstances; but those circumstances may arise from the time that the prosecution has been pending, and from the occurrence of facts preventing the trial and not chargeable to the prisoner.

Q. Did you esteem this a case where there was any doubt of the guilt of the party?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or where there was any question as to the enormity of the crime?

A. No, sir. I consider him, and every one who engaged in the rebellion, as legally liable to the consequences of their acts.

Q. What, then, are the circumstances that induced you to consider the case of Davis as a proper case for the exercise of the discretion of the court?

A. The circumstance that, while he was in custody, the condition of things in Virginia was such that the Chief Justice of the United States did not consider it proper to hold court there.

Q. Then, am I to understand you as saying that, because it did not suit the government to go on, that was a circumstance sufficient to make it the duty of the court to exercise its discretion in that way?

A. If it was not at all the fault of the prisoner that the case was not tried, I think that, on his application to be tried, or to be admitted to bail, the circumstances would be very strong.

Q. Suppose there was no fault either way, would a crime like Davis's, with such evidences of guilt, be a proper case for the exercise of that discretion?

A. I should think not, unless there were circumstances in the case.

Q. Do you know of any default on the part of the executive department of the government which entitled Davis to such an exercise of discretion on the part of the court?

A. If the executive department had got Virginia into the position in which the Chief Justice said it was, then it was the fault of the executive department of the government for having Virginia at that time under military jurisdiction. But, I suppose, there were very good reasons why that was the peculiar situation of Virginia at that time. I suppose it was proper to have troops there. But whether it was proper or not, I presume the government acted in that respect from its own views of what was right. While acting in that way the State where the trial must be had was in such a condition that the Chief Justice thought it not proper for him to hold court.

Q. Would that be a default of the government, and would not the inability to try him be one of the very results of Davis's rebellion; and to allow him to be discharged under such circumstances, would it not be allowing him to take advantage of his own wrong?

A. I do not suppose Mr. Davis had anything to do with keeping the troops in Virginia.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Does not the question as to the time a prisoner has been kept in confinement always enter into the consideration of bail?

A. Undoubtedly. I mean, among other circumstances, the delay, by whatever cause, for which the prisoner is not responsible.

Q. By what authority was Jefferson Davis held, from the time that peace was declared, up to the time that he was surrendered to the civil authorities?

A. I have already said that I considered ourselves in a false position. If he was held as a prisoner of war, then there is no authority for holding prisoners of war after pacification.

Q. Was there any warrant or authority known to our laws by which he was held from that time up to the time when he was delivered into the hands of the civil authorities?

A. It is a very great question. I felt, for one, that we were in a false position, and I could hardly know how I could justify it if the continuance of that situation arose from my act. I felt it was the duty of the government to be relieved as soon as possible from keeping a person in custody without warrant after a state of peace had been declared.

Q. By what warrant or authority of law could Jefferson Davis have been taken from Fortress Monroe to Richmond, Virginia, and there delivered to the civil authorities without a writ or capias?

A. It is difficult to say exactly what legality there would be for his custody in transitu. That would be about the same as for his custody in place. If it was illegal to hold him there, it would be, perhaps, equally illegal for military authorities to restrain him anywhere. It is simply continuing military custody.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. It was under that authority that he was carried to Richmond?

A. No, sir; he was brought there under a writ. He was required by the civil authorities to be brought to Richmond.

Q. Could he not have been delivered at Fortress Monroe to the United States marshal?

A. Certainly. I asked the district attorney what objection there was for taking him with a capias at any time under that indictment. He said he thought that the custody would not be so safe at the Virginia jail, to which he must be taken, and that such a jail would not be so proper a place in any point of view as where he then was. It was a responsibility which the district attorney did not seem willing to take.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was there any authority of law for holding Jefferson Davis, after peace was declared, in military custody, that there has not been for holding any other citizen charged with any other crime?

A. I do not know how we could distinguish, except, perhaps, that Davis's was a greater crime.

Q. Does that justify it?

A. I never have been myself able to see how, if called upon to justify Davis's imprisonment, it could be done. The government has always in that matter stood in a false position.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Is there anything in the public law or law of nations to prevent a captor from holding an individual taken as prisoner of war, after what you call pacification, supposing there is no treaty—when would the right of the captor to hold him cease in case there is no treaty?

A. After pacification.

Q. Suppose the party so arrested is chargeable with a crime against the government—say the crime of rebellion—what is there to prevent the captor to hold him?

A. Nothing from holding him properly. If held for a military offence, he should be held under military custody; but if the military authorities have no charge against him, and it is only a question of a civil offence, then the lawful custody must be the civil custody.

Q. Am I to understand you as saying that, without a treaty, the unsuccessful termination of a war on one part entitles all the prisoners taken captives of war to their discharge?

A. I think that is the universal rule, acknowledged in all civilized nations.

Q. You stated that you regarded the confiscation laws as war measures; did you so esteem the act of Congress prescribing the punishment of treason?

A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. Then, by what right did you undertake to discharge parties held for such crime as that?

A. I considered that no one certainly was expecting that those trials for treason should go on. If it was our duty to try parties indicted for treason who had taken part in the rebellion, then it was our duty not only to try them, but to prosecute every one else who had been guilty of the same offence. We could not "make fish of one and fowl of the other."

Q. Would not the duty to prosecute be determined, to some extent, by information being laid and warrants issued?

A. That is a mode of proceeding. But if there was a public policy to prosecute persons for treason who were engaged in rebellion, if it was thought necessary to vindicate the law by such prosecution, and if it were our duty to go on and prosecute, we should be involved in more cases than we were involved in, and these were more than we could manage. I have distinct views on that subject—as to the policy of going on with those trials for treason. They were general in Kentucky, Missouri, and Maryland. My own opinion was that the war had settled very much all the issues of the war. I did not for myself think it necessary that the question whether secession was treason should be left to any twelve men anywhere, especially in those States where it would be very difficult to get twelve men to agree on that question.

Q. Would that be a question for a jury?

A. Not at all; but it was a question whether it would be necessary to refer a matter of that kind to a jury.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Are not juries judges of the law and of the facts?

A. Of course, they are judges of the law and of the facts; but whether or not, I thought it would be a very dangerous matter to call upon juries to settle that question for us.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was it not your understanding that it was the settled policy of the President that there should be no prosecutions for treason or under those confiscation laws—in other words, for political offences connected with the rebellion?

A. I cannot undertake to speak as to the prosecutions for treason. I can undertake to speak as to proceedings for confiscation, and as to the views of the President in these matters. His view was that those cases resulted only in the accumulation of costs, and in stripping persons of their property, and generally that the time had come for amnesty and for the cessation of that sort of persecution. His views have been, generally, that the duty of the hour now was to endeavor to heal up the wounds of the country, and to bring men back again to obedience and to law. He thought that the policy of persecuting them, and of sacrificing their property, was not a judicious or proper course.

Q. Would you have ventured to arrest a proceeding for treason on your own personal responsibility, as the law officer of the government, without the assurance that it was in accordance with what you understood to be the policy of the President?

A. I do not know that in giving those orders it has occurred to me at all to think what was the policy of the President. I take the responsibility of every case of that kind which I have already dismissed.

Q. Suppose there was an indictment for murder, would you have felt authorized to arrest the proceedings indefinitely?

A. Certainly not. I must have some foundation to go on.

Q. Would you have felt yourself authorized to lay down a policy yourself—would you not like, as a matter of course, to have the approval of the head of the executive department for your policy in that connection?

A. I would not feel myself authorized to lay down a policy for myself. But when a policy presents itself, when the circumstances of the country present it, I must not shut my eyes to the condition of things. I should have very much reprehended myself if, in reference to those confiscation cases that have been brought to my notice, (and I cannot give the Committee any idea of the costs and sacrifices attending them,) I did not stop those rapacious proceedings.

Q. You have said that you did understand that to be the policy of the President?

A. I did; but if I had never talked with the President I should not have hesitated to take the course I did. The President has never dictated to me what I should do; but in cases that came under my office he has left me free to decide.

Q. You stated in the course of your examination to-day that you regarded enemies' property captured by our army as not falling within the purview of the confiscation law?

A. I said, that as to property which belonged to the confederate government, whether it was munitions of war, real estate, or any other property, such as foundries, &c., we fell heir to all that, and that our title was perfect.

Q. What would be the law in reference to the railroads used by the confederate government, and captured by our armies—I mean railroads belonging to the States?

A. I have not seen any confiscation law that aimed at the property of any of those States. Confiscation is aimed at individuals.

Q. How would you regard those railroads; would you not treat the title to them as being vested in the United States?

A. No more than I would the court-houses or jails, or any other property of the States. All the property of the confederate government belongs to us; but all the property of the States does not, in my judgment, belong to us; nor have I, in reading those confiscation laws, seen any provision by which any authority is given to commence proceedings against a State for its property, or to take its court-houses, jails, public lands, revenues, &c.

Q. Suppose those railroads were in the possession of the confederate government with the consent of their proprietors, being owned by corporations other than States, and were captured by our armies, would they not come under that rule?

A. The rule laid down in my office by my predecessor was this, that in regard to any property in the southern States owned by a corporation which was used in aid of the rebellion, such part of that property as belonged to corporations who were not rebels, but loyal citizens in other States, could not be confiscated; that you must there distinguish between corporations and individuals. His opinion was that you could not confiscate it as the property of the corporation, but must descend to an inquiry as to the status of the corporators.

Q. So far as title can pass under the law of war, was it your judgment that in that case it was vested by capture in the government of the United States, or that it required further proceedings to perfect title?

A. If it fell under the law as to captured or abandoned property, that would be one thing; to treat such case as that under the confiscation act would be quite another thing. I do not know that any proceedings were ever instituted under my predecessor to go on and complete confiscation against the railroads of the South.

Q. Is it your opinion that the property vests in the government by virtue of public law or the law of war?

A. That depends on the circumstances of the capture, and of the intentions with which it was made. Our armies may be said to have captured everything in the South as they went along—court-houses, and jails, and every sort of property. I know there were negotiations between Governor Jenkins and the War Department, not merely in regard to the roads that belonged to the State, but to the rolling stock placed on them by the government, and I think that the State of Georgia has purchased that property from the government at a price which was satisfactory to the War Department.

Q. Were you consulted by the President in reference to the right or power to transfer property of that description to the parties in the rebel States owning it before the war, or to sell it to them?

A. I do not know whether any such question came to me from the President, but I have an impression that Governor Jenkins was here in reference to some negotiations with the War Department as to one or more of these railroads, and as to the purchase by the State of Georgia of stocks belonging to the government on those roads. I rather think that my opinion was asked in reference to the form of the bond to be given, and the sort of security which the government should have for the repayment of the money.

Q. You were not consulted formally as to the authority to sell or surrender this property?

A. No, sir; that had been decided before I came into office. It was simply as to preparing the papers to make the government safe.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You have expressed the opinion that the government was in fault in holding Jefferson Davis in military custody after pacification?

A. I said we were in a false position.

Q. Does not that necessarily include the idea that it was not competent for a military commission to try Davis for the crime of treason, or as being the head of a conspiracy or rebellion?

A. Yes, sir; after pacification, I think that a military commission had no power to try any one. In reference to the trial of Jefferson Davis by military authority, my predecessor, as early as 1866, gave to the President the opinion that that was not a fit case for trial by a military commission.

Q. You concur in that opinion?

A. I do.

Q. Touching the question of bail in those treason cases, have you examined the opinion of Judge Field, delivered by him in the case of the United States against Chapman, tried in the northern district of California in October, 1863?

A. I do not recollect ever having seen it. I had supposed that this indictment of Davis was under the Act of 1862. I see difficulties in sustaining that indictment under the act of 1789, arising from the time the crime was committed. The limitation for the prosecution for treason under the act of 1789 was three years after the act of the offence. This indictment was found in March, 1866. If, then, we had only the act of 1789 to convict under, the question of the bar of the statute would come up. There was, however, an act passed by Congress during the rebellion in reference to the statutes of limitation, and providing for the withdrawal of the bar in reference to persons engaged in rebellion, and who could not be reached by the processes of the court. I say that very grave questions would arise in the construction of that act in cases where the former act of limitation had had its full force and effect, and the party, under the existing statute, had been protected by the bar. There is a very serious question there. I would have avoided that.

Q. Do you recollect that during the progress of the rebellion a notice was published in one of the Alabama papers offering a million of dollars for the assassination of President Lincoln?

A. Yes, sir.

(A copy of the notice referred to was put in evidence, as follows:

[Copy.]

A million dollars wanted, to have peace by the 1st of March.

If the citizens of the southern confederacy will furnish me with the cash or good securities for the sum of $1,000,000, I will cause the lives of Abraham Lincoln, William H. Seward, and Andrew Johnson to be taken by the 1st of March next. This will give us peace, and satisfy the world that cruel tyrants cannot live in a land of liberty. If this is not accomplished nothing will be claimed beyond the sum of $50,000 in advance, which is supposed to be necessary to reach and slaughter the three villains. I will give, myself, $1,000 towards this patriotic purpose. Every one wishing to contribute will address +. Cahaba, Alabama, December 1, 1864.)

Q. That is said to have been published by a man named Gayle, a lawyer?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you state whether he has been pardoned?

A. He has been.

Q. When?

A. I cannot tell. There were papers on file in that case to show that that was a sort of canard. The man who offered it was not worth a hundred dollars. It was considered a mere squib. He was recommended to pardon by a great many persons, among others by our own military officers stationed in the neighborhood. You will observe that Mr. Johnson himself is one of the persons for whose assassination the reward was offered. He seemed to look upon it as nothing but a squib.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. What was the nature of that pardon? Was it for the offence of treason, or for the particular offence arising out of the publication of that notice?

A. I do not know. He was pardoned generally. I do not know what sort of an offence the publication of that paper would be.

(The witness was requested to furnish the Committee with copies of the papers in that case.)

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Can you state the number of applications for pardon for offences growing out of the rebellion that have not been granted?

A. No, sir; there have been a good many not granted. Wherever the party has been charged with anything other than what is purely a military offence—wherever he has been charged with anything contrary to the usages of war, like the case of Dr. Blackburn, for instance, who was charged with sending infected clothing into the North, I do not know that pardons have been granted.

Q. Would the number of applications refused amount to some hundreds?

A. I really cannot say. I can state, generally, that the President has been frequently asked to grant privileges of return to such men as Blackburn and others, who have fled from the country, but I know he has always refused, and said that they must take their chances when they come back; that has been his uniform answer to persons who have fled the country.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. It is the rule that they must place themselves within the jurisdiction of the United States before any pardon is granted?

A. Yes, sir; and that he will not give them safe conduct to come here.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., June 3, 1867.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives:

SIR: I am directed by the Attorney General to transmit to you the accompanying copies of all the papers on file in this office in the case of George W. Gayle, of Dallas county, Alabama, indicted for conspiracy, and pardoned by the President April 27, 1867, and hereby certify to the correctness of said copies.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. U. STITT, Pardon Clerk.

[Copy.]

Oath to support the Constitution and Union, sworn to by George W. Gayle, before William Q. Smith, Commissioner, United States district court, at Selma, Alabama, 22d day of November, 1865.

[Copy.]

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States:

Your petitioner, George W. Gayle, respectfully showeth that he is a resident citizen of Dallas county, in the State of Alabama, and is by profession a lawyer; that he resided a large part of his life in said county, and is now about fifty-nine years of age. Petitioner has a wife and three daughters, and he has no means for their support except the proceeds of his labor.

Your petitioner further showeth unto your excellency that, in the late war, petitioner took part against the United States by encouraging enlistments in the confederate army, and, to the extent of his means, by contributions and by aiding and assisting confederate soldiers and their families. Your petitioner is old and feeble, and did not go into the army for that reason.

Your petitioner is advised that he is excluded from the benefits of the proclamation issued by your excellency on the 29th day of May, 1865, because he was in custody of the military authorities. There is no other cause or reason to except him from the benefits of said proclamation.

Your petitioner has in good faith taken the oath required in said proclamation, a copy of which is hereto annexed, and he intends in good faith to abide by and keep the promises therein made.

Your petitioner, therefore, most respectfully prays that he may have the benefits of said proclamation extended to him, and that he may receive full pardon and amnesty. And, as in duty bound, your petitioner will ever pray, &c.

G. W. GAYLE.

THE STATE OF ALABAMA, Dallas County:

Personally came George W. Gayle, who, being duly sworn, deposes and says that the facts stated in the foregoing petition are true.

G. W. GAYLE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this the 17th day of September, 1866.

J. B. JOYNER, J. P.

[Endorsed on bundle.]

APRIL 27, 1867.

I recommend a pardon in this case.

HENRY STANBERY.

[Copy.]

DALLAS COUNTY, ALABAMA, December 17 [illegible]3.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
as President of the United States of America:

We, the undersigned, officers and soldiers late of the federal army, and now temporary citizens of Dallas county, Alabama, respectfully show unto your excellency that George W. Gayle, esq., of said county, is indicted in the United States district court at Montgomery, with the two late editors of the Selma Dispatch, for a conspiracy to take the lives of "Lincoln, Seward, and Johnson," and as a rebel generally.

From what we know of Mr. Gayle, and can learn of his character and standing in society, we cannot believe him guilty of the charge of conspiracy.

He is, doubtless, guilty as a rebel in aiding and assisting the confederacy of the South, so-called, as hundreds of thousands of the southern people are who are not indicted.

In view of the premises, therefore, we respectfully ask your excellency to grant Mr. Gayle a special pardon, that he may be released from the annoyance of the prosecution against him. We ask this that justice may be done.

Very respectfully, your obedient servants,

J. McARTHUR,
Late Brevet Major General U. S. Volunteers.
GEORGE P. REX,
Late Surgeon 33d Illinois Regiment Volunteers.
GEO. W. COLBY,
Late Captain 72d Reg't Illinois Volunteer Infantry.
C. A. COLBY,
Late Captain 19th Reg't Illinois Volunteer Infantry.
HENRY COCHRAN,
Late Captain Co. E, 33d Missouri Vol. Infantry.
M. J. GIBSON,
Late Lieutenant Co. G, 2d New York Vet. Cavalry.
H. H. F. RANDALL,
Late Assistant Adjutant General.
JNO. F. BURCH,
Late First Lieutenant 2d New York Vet. Cavalry.

[Copy.]

HARTWELL CHAPTER NO. 58,
Cahaba, Alabama.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States of America:

We, the high priest, king, and scribe, and companions of Hartwell Chapter No. 58, (working under the jurisdiction of the grand chapter of said State,) respectfully and fraternally show unto your excellency that Companion George W. Gayle, who is a member of this chapter, is indicted in the district court of the United States at Montgomery, Alabama, for a conspiracy, with the two late editors of the Selma Dispatch, to assassinate "Lincoln, Seward, and Johnson," as well as for aiding and assisting the southern confederacy, so-called, in the late American war.

We have known Companion Gayle for many years as a citizen and a Mason, and believe the charge of conspiracy against him to be false and unfounded, and that the advertisement published in said newspaper was a mere canard, and on his part intended more to excite amusement than for any other purpose; and we have reason to believe that there are now on file in the office of the Attorney General of the United States the affidavits of Companions Robert J. Travers, Isaiah Quartermus, John F. Morgan, James L. Evans, and A. D. Brazeale to establish that fact. Companion Gayle, like a large majority of the people of the southern States, no doubt aided his section to the extent of his ability; but we can see no sufficient reason in this fact why he should be made an exception to a general or special exercise of Executive clemency.

In consideration of the premises, Hartwell Chapter No. 58, as aforesaid, most respectfully and fraternally asks your excellency to grant to Companion Gayle a general and special pardon, that he may be released from the annoyance and great expense of a trial in said district court. And, as in duty bound, &c.

HARTWELL CHAPTER NO. 58,
Cahaba, Alabama, January 28, 1867.

The undersigned, officers of Hartwell Chapter No. 58, do hereby certify that at a convention of said chapter, held at Masonic Hall, Cahaba, Alabama, on the 26th day of January, 1867, the foregoing petition and memorial was unanimously adopted, and a copy thereof, properly certified under the seal of the chapter, ordered to be forwarded to his excellency Andrew Johnson, President of the United States.

[SEAL.] Given under our hands and the seal of the chapter this 28th day of January, A. D. 1867.

(Signed) J. W. KELLEY, H. P.
W. A. BRANTLEY, King.
J. L. EVANS, Scribe.

R. J. TRAVERS, Secretary.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA, January, 1867.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
as President of the United States of America:

We, the undersigned, Governor of the State of Alabama, and members of the senate and house of representatives of said State, now in general assembly convened, respectfully show unto your excellency that George W. Gayle, esq., of Dallas county, in said State, is indicted, in the United States district court for the middle district of said State, with the two late editors of the Selma Dispatch, for a conspiracy to take the lives of "Lincoln, Seward, and Johnson," and as a rebel generally.

Several of us have known Mr. Gayle for many years, and most of us have been for a long time acquainted with his reputation and standing in his profession and in society, and cannot believe him guilty of the charge of conspiracy. He is doubtless guilty of being a rebel generally, in aiding and assisting the confederacy of the South, so-called, as hundreds and thousands of the southern people are, who have not been indicted.

In view of the premises, therefore, we respectfully ask your excellency to grant Mr. Gayle a special pardon, that he may be relieved from the annoyance of the prosecution against him. We ask this that justice may be done one who has already suffered nearly six months' imprisonment, under military arrest, on account of said charge.

With distinguished consideration, we are your obedient servants,

(Signed) R. M. PATTON, Governor of Alabama.
WALTER H. CRANSHAW, Pres't of the Senate.
THOS. B. COOPER, Speaker of House of Reps.

Senators.

1. A. C. Felder, Montgomery, &c.
2. A. L. Woodleff, Cherokee.
3. W. H. Edwards, Blount, &c.
4. R. H. Powell, Macon.
5. M. J. Bulger, Tallapoosa.
6. A. B. Cooper, Dallas, &c.
7. W. Garrett, Coosa.
8. E. P. Jones, Fayette, &c.
9. John H. Gonroot, Jackson.
10. John Y. Kilpatrick, Clarke, &c.
11. Wm. O. Winston, Marshall, &c.
12. John W. Drake, Madison.
13. E. A. Powell, Tuscaloosa.
14. John F. Foster, Choctaw.
15. Thos. Montgomery, Talladega.
16. J. M. Jackson, Morgan, &c.
17. Wm. H. Wood, Dale, &c.
18. Robt. B. Lindsay, Franklin.
19. Wm. A. Ashley, Covington, &c.
20. C. P. Gayer, Mobile.
21. Th. W. Sykes, Normion.
22. James Jackson, Lauderdale.
23. C. C. Huckabee, Greene, &c.
24. W. H. Barnes, Chambers.
25. Wm. H. Forney, Calhoun.

Representatives.

Alexander W. McKinstry, Mobile.
A. G. Mahony, Dallas.
Wm. Craig, Dallas.
N. L. Whitfield, Tuscaloosa.
John R. Tompkins, Mobile.
A. M. Gibson, Blount.
James W. Davis, Bibb.
F. M. Walker, Jackson.
W. J. B. Pardgott, Jackson.
J. W. Brandon, Cherokee county.
James Williams, Jackson.
George W. Ash, St. Clair.
S. Palmer, Blount.
John M. Clark, Lawrence.
C. G. Baisloe, Limestone county.
E. W. Lawrence, Fayette.
Geo. F. Smith, Choctaw.
J. D. Chapman, Covington.
Geo. S. Cox, Lawmatie.
William B. Humphrey, Madison.
J. W. Ledbetter, Madison county.
H. McBee, Calhoun.
P. M. Bush, Marshall.
John G. Pierce, Greene.
John Grant, Mobile.
H. Pipkin, Barbour.
Thomas C. Lanier, Pickens.
John C. Tunneadon, Chambers.
Alexander Frazier, Macon county.
John Mannsco, Walker.
N. S. Brookes, Lowndes.
J. H. Bankhead, Marion.
George P. Phunman, Talladega.
Jos. D. McCann, Talladega.
George N. Culver, Henry county,
Thomas B. Savage, Clarke county.
Walter Echols, Macon.
J. C. Hand, Shelby county.
Samuel Leeper, Shelby county.
John Lawrence, Cherokee county.
Joshua Morse, Choctaw county.
R. Henry, Pickens.
J. G. Moore, Coffee.
J. L. Williams, Randolph.
G. C. Ellis, Calhoun.
B. E. Rowland, Lauderdale.
H. A. Woolf, Marengo.
J. J. Seawell, Perry.
P. M. Callaway, Perry.
C. T. Cotton, Dale.
N. B. Mullen, Greene.
W. Baisler, Limestone.
David H. Thrasher, Tallapoosa.
F. LeB. Goodmull, Lawrence.
James M. Warren, Lawrence
Joseph Lindney, Taliapoosa.

Henry Faulk, Barber.
James S. Robinson, Chambers.
T. R. N. Tothinger, Ehman.
H. R. McCary, Tallapoosa.
James Vansantt, Coosa.
J. R. Hawthorn, Wilcox county.
Thorn, of Franklin county.
J. B. Bentha, Montgomery.
H. McCaffry, Montgomery.
S. F. Gaffard, Butler.
T. C. Grimshaw, Butler.
F. S. Ferguson, Macon county.
A. M. Wuthy, Pike.
W. C. Menefer, Pike.
J. R. Goldthwaite, Pike.
G. S. G. Doster, Autauga.
F. B. Clame, Mobile.
G. W. Robinson, Baldwin.
B. G. Ornum, Russell.
J. L. Sheffield, Marshall.
John Potter, Cherokee.
George C. C. Youge, Washington.
H. F. Smith, Jackson.
Wm. J. Borden, Calhoun.

[Copy.]

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA, January, 1867.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States:

The undersigned, members of the supreme court and the bar of Alabama, respectfully petition your excellency to grant pardon and amnesty to George W. Gayle, of Dallas county, Alabama, for offences committed by reason of participation in the late rebellion against the United States. He is indicted, with others, for a conspiracy to overthrow the government of the United States; and an anonymous communication, published in the Selma Dispatch, a newspaper, during the war, offering a reward to any one who would take the lives of "Lincoln, Seward, and Johnson," is the special matter charged against him.

Most of us have known Mr. Gayle for many years, and are well acquainted with his character. He is a man of remarkable kindness of heart, full of generous impulses, and governed in all things much more by impulse than by settled conviction, and with a want of prudence which verges on insanity. We are satisfied that the publication in the Selma Dispatch was the result of a sudden idea that entered his mind, to put to the test the statements of his more wealthy neighbors, to the effect that they would devote their last dollar to any means which would secure the independence of the confederacy. From our knowledge of his character we feel satisfied that he had no other intention. For many years he has been insolvent, with no means except a precarious professional income, which barely sufficed for the support of his family; and we are convinced that he could not possibly have raised one hundred dollars ($100) of the million which was to be raised for the purpose indicated.

He is quite old, and has a large family dependent upon him; and of all the people of Alabama who participated in the late war, there is not, in our opinion, one who is now more harmless and inoffensive towards yourself and the government of the United States. He has suffered much from imprisonment, is quite feeble, and, in our opinion, is a proper object for Executive clemency.

J. R. C. CLINTON,
H. C. BULLOCK,
J. K. BARTON,
M. D. GRAHAM,
T. M. ARRINGTON,
A. J. WALKER,
M. M. BRYAN,
THOMAS J. JUDGE,
JOHN D. PHELAN,
GEO. GOLDTHWAITE,
A. MARTIN,
ALEXANDER WHITE,
W. P. CHITTEN,
JACK THORINGTON,
W. P. CHITTEN, JR.,
DAVID CLOPTON,
SAMUEL F. PRICE,
A. C. FELDER,
ALEX. B. CLITHERALL,
J. O. CHENWORTH,
D. H. WORKMAN,
V. H. VAUGHAN.

[Copy.]

WETUMPKA, ALABAMA, February 19, 1867.

DEAR SIR: Colonel George W. Gayle, of Dallas county, in this State, stands indicted, I understand, for proposing to raise a large sum of money to procure the assassination of President Lincoln; and, although I reside in Alabama, I have never seen the article as published in the newspapers. I heard the article spoken of shortly after the publication, and it did then, as it has ever since, received my most unqualified condemnation.

I have known Colonel Gayle since he was quite young, and have ever found him a most estimable citizen, and an amiable, kind, benevolent man. I was therefore astonished that a proposition of such a nature should have emanated from him, and conjectured that some unusual excitement must have prompted it. I have since learned that he was under the influence of intoxicating liquors when the reward was offered, and deeply regretted its publication when fully restored to himself. Few men have more of the milk of human kindness in their nature than Colonel Gayle; and I feel assured, had Mr. Lincoln been in his power, Colonel Gayle would never even have attempted to carry into execution the proposition contained in the article. If your excellency could, consistently with your sense of public duty, extend to Colonel Gayle the clemency desired, I should feel gratified.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) BEN. FITZPATRICK.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[Copy.]

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, March 4, 1867.

MY DEAR FRIEND: Mrs. G. W. Gayle, wife of Colonel Gayle, of Cahaba, Alabama, visits you to secure a pardon for her husband. Mrs. Gayle is the aunt of my brother-in-law, Major Clare. Colonel Gayle, I am informed, is an inveterate joker, like the late Major Wm. A. Polk, of this State. He is said to be a man of great amiability of character, and of a genial, social nature; and, in making the publication for which he was arrested, he was quizzing some very wealthy men on account of their extravagant professions of devotion to the South, and that he had no criminal intentions whatever, and never supposed the publication would amount to anything. He is said to be incapable of bearing malice towards any one. Mrs. Gayle bears deep traces of sorrow and suffering on her face, and clemency on your part would bring joy and gladness to the hearts of the entire family and friends. I hope you will regard this as an appropriate occasion for the exercise of those God-like qualities of mercy and justice which have so pre-eminently distinguished your administration. She will present to you the strongest recommendations on behalf of her husband.

May the All-seeing Eye that directed the great and good Washington direct and bless all your efforts for the good of our common country and people is the earnest prayer of your sincere friend,

R. W. BROWN.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[Copy.]

President JOHNSON:

The accompanying letter I received in envelope to me yesterday, from my friend Robert Brown, of Nashville. I hope it may be favorably received by your excellency in my husband's behalf. The Attorney General is to give me a decided answer at two o'clock to-morrow. I think he will, with your approbation, let me return home rejoicing.

May God ever watch over and defend you while sailing on life's troubled sea is the earnest prayer of yours, respectfully,

J. M. GAYLE.

[Original on card; no date.]

[Copy.]

CAHABA, ALABAMA, March 11, 1867.

To the ATTORNEY GENERAL of the United States:

DEAR SIR: Ex-Governor Parsons, of Alabama, three or four months ago, filed in your office the affidavits of several gentlemen of veracity, and some of distinction, to show my innocence of the charge of conspiracy to take the life of Messrs. Lincoln, Seward and Johnson, with a view to the dismissal of the prosecution against me for that alleged offence, now pending against me in the United States district court, at Montgomery. No action has yet been had in your branch of the executive department, for reasons which may be good under the terrible state of affairs now prevailing.

A few days ago I sent on a number of petitions to the President for a pardon, to get rid of the ruinous prosecution—one from the Governor of Alabama and the legislature, just adjourned; one from the federal military officers of this vicinity, headed by Brevet Major General McArthur; one from the judges of the supreme court of the State, and the members of that bar, living in and about Montgomery; and one from the Masonic Chapter of this place, to which I belong—all truly protesting against my guilt, and praying pardon to relieve me from the annoyance and expenses of a trial.

Not being aware of the act of Congress of August 2, 1831, (United States Statutes at Large, pages 285 and 286,) until a moment ago, I did not know your powers over the district attorneys. Knowing them now, I most respectfully pray that you may examine all the papers in your office and now before the President, and instruct the district attorney at Montgomery to dismiss the prosecution against me, or continue it indefinitely, as may be most wise, just, and equitable.

My wife, who has carried on my petition to the President, has, likely, ere this, been honored with your acquaintance; if not, and it is agreeable to you, you will find her at W. H. Claggett's, H street, 530, I think; or Governor Parsons will be kind enough to introduce her to you.

Most respectfully,

G. W. GAYLE.

Hon. Mr. STANBERY,
Attorney General United States, Washington City.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, June 3, 1867.

SIR: I am directed by the Attorney General to transmit to you the accompanying list of applications for pardon from persons in the late rebel service, now on file in this office.

It is, perhaps, proper to remark that petitions from petty civil officers, and those under what is known as the twenty thousand dollar clause, are acted upon immediately in this office, and the warrants of pardon laid before the President for his disposal, which will account for the absence of any list of those classes of persons.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. U. STITT, Pardon Clerk.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman of Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

Rebel General Officers.

Adams, Daniel W., Louisiana, brigadier general.
Adams, Wirt, Mississippi, brigadier general.
Bragg, Braxton, Louisiana, resigned from United States army in 1856, rebel general.
Bee, H. P., Texas, brigadier general.
Brandon, W. L., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Brantley, W. F., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Bell, Tyree H., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Corse, M. D., Virginia, brigadier general.
Chestnut, James, jr., South Carolina, brigadier general.
Cobb, Howell, Georgia, major general.
Carroll, Wm. H., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Churchill, T. J., Arkansas, major general.
Caball, W. L., Virginia, brigadier general.
Canter, James, Alabama, brigadier general.
Cook, Philip, Georgia, brigadier general.
Chambliss, N. R., Alabama, graduate of West Point, and major in rebel army Colston, R. E., Virginia, brigadier general.
Chalmers, J. K., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Cheatham, B. F., Tennessee, major general.
Duke, Basil W., Kentucky, brigadier general.
Du Bose, D. M., Georgia, brigadier general.
Ewell, R. S., Virginia, major general.
Evans, C. A., Georgia, brigadier general.
Forrest, N. B., Mississippi, lieutenant general.
French, Samuel G., Mississippi, major general.
Frazer, J. W., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Featherston, W. S., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Govan, D. C., Arkansas, brigadier general.
Gordon, John B., Georgia, major general.
Gholson, Samuel J., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Greer, E., Texas, brigadier general.
Hindman, T. C., Arkansas, major general.
Hill, B. J., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Humes, Wm. Y. C., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Hodge, George B., Mississippi, brigadier general, and left Kentucky to enter rebel army.

Hoke, R. F., North Carolina, major general.
Hunton, Eppa, Virginia, brigadier general.
Hood, J. B., Texas, lieutenant general.
Heth, Henry, Virginia, major general.
Higgins, Edward, Louisiana, brigadier general.
Jackson, A. E., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Johnson, A. R., Texas, brigadier general.
Jackson, Thomas K., Alabama, ex U. S. A.; strongly recommended by General Grant.
Jones, Samuel, Virginia, major general.
Jones, J. R., Virginia, brigadier general.
Jackson, Wm. L., Virginia, brigadier general.
Jackson, John K., Georgia, brigadier general.
Kennedy, John D., South Carolina, brigadier general.
Kershaw, J. B., South Carolina, major general.
Kirkland, W. W., Georgia, brigadier general.
King, W. H., Georgia, brigadier general.
Lee, W. H. F., Virginia, general.
Lane, James H., North Carolina, brigadier general.
Lee, Stephen D., Mississippi, lieutenant general.
Lane, Walter P., Texas, brigadier general.
Liddell, St. John R., Louisiana, brigadier general.
Lilley, R. D., Virginia, brigadier general.
Logan, T. M., Virginia, brigadier general.
Lowrey, M. P., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Lewis, W. G., North Carolina, brigadier general.
Mahone, William, Virginia, major general.
Mems, G. S., Virginia, brigadier general.
McGowan, Samuel, South Carolina, brigadier general.
Maury, Dabney H., Virginia, major general.
McCulloch, Henry E., Texas, brigadier general.
Mackall, W. W., Maryland, brigadier general.
Manigault, A. M., South Carolina, brigadier general.
Maxey, S. B., Texas, major general.
McComb, William, Tennessee, brigadier general.
Pemberton, J. C., Virginia, lieutenant general.
Price, Sterling, Missouri, major general.
Preston, William, Kentucky, major general.
Perry, W. F., Alabama, brigadier general.
Ruggles, Daniel, Louisiana, brigadier general.
Robertson, J. B., Texas, brigadier general.
Randolph, G. W., Virginia, brigadier general and rebel secretary of war.
Rains, J. S., Texas, brigadier general.
Simms, J. P., Georgia, brigadier general.
Shelby, C. M., Alabama, brigadier general.
Sharp, J. H., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Starke, Peter B., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Scott, Thomas M., Louisiana, brigadier general.
Steele, William, Texas, brigadier general.
Smith, Gustavus W., Georgia, major general.
Stovall, M. A., Georgia, brigadier general.
Smith, T. B., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Sorrel, G. M., Georgia, brigadier general.
Taliaferro, W. B., Virginia, major general.
Thomas, Edward L., Georgia, brigadier general.
Thomas, B. M., Georgia, brigadier general.
Tucker, William F., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Thompson, M. Jeff., Arkansas, brigadier general.
Tochman, G., Virginia, brigadier general.
Vaughn, J. C., Tennessee, brigadier general.
Vaughan, Alfred J., Mississippi, brigadier general.
Wharton, G. C., Virginia, brigadier general.
Walthall, E. C., Mississippi, major general.
Walker, R. T., Virginia, brigadier general.
Waul, T. N., Texas, brigadier general.
Whitfield, John W., Texas, brigadier general.
Wright, A. R., Georgia, major general.
Walker, W. S., South Carolina, brigadier general.
Weisiger, D. A., Virginia, brigadier general.
Wallace, W. H., South Carolina, brigadier general.
Young, W. H., Texas, brigadier general.

Ex-United States Army Officers who resigned and entered the rebel service.

Allen, R. T. P., Texas, graduate of West Point.
Allston, Benj., South Carolina, graduate of West Point; resigned in 1857.
Alexander, E. P., Georgia, graduate of West Point, and rebel general.
Anderson, W. W., South Carolina, ex-surgeon United States army.
Anderson, R. H , South Carolina, graduate of West Point, and lieutenant general in rebel service.
Anderson, C. D., Mississippi, graduate of West Point.
Butler, William, South Carolina.
Barnes, J. M., Tennessee, graduate of West Point.
Brodie, R. L., South Carolina, ex-assistant surgeon United States army.
Blair, W. B., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Beall, W. N. R., at large, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Barnwell, Thomas O., South Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Barton, J. M., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Brown, John A., Maryland, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Blanchard, Albert, Louisiana, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Beauregard, P. G. T., Louisiana, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Boggs, W. R., Louisiana, graduate of West Point.
Berry, Thomas J., Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Bagby, Arthur P., Texas, graduate of West Point.
Carr, George W., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Campbell, C. C., Missouri, graduate of West Point.
Cole, R. G., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Crowell, N. S., South Carolina, ex-assistant surgeon United States army.
Cooper, S. M., Virginia.
Cenas, Hilary, Louisiana, graduate of West Point.
Chandler, D. J., Maryland.
Cooper, S., Virginia.
Cunningham, George A., Alabama.
Chilton, R. H., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Cooke, John R., Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Crittenden, G. B., Kentucky, graduate of West Point.
Dixon, J. K., Mississippi, graduate of West Point.
Dearing, St. Clair, Georgia.
Deas, George, New York.
Ewell, R. S., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Elzey, Arnold, Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Edelin, Boyd, Maryland.
Forney, John H., Alabama, graduate of West Point.
Fauntleroy, A. M., Virginia, ex-surgeon United States army.
Gibbes, W. H., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Gardner, W. M., Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Gaenslin, J. J., Virginia, ex-surgeon United States army.
Graves, C. J., Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Gatlin, R. C , North Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Gaillard, Peter C., South Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Garland, R. R., Virginia.
Gilham, William, Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Guild, L., Alabama, ex-surgeon United States army.
Goode, J. Thomas, Virginia.
Hill, James H., North Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Hill, Henry, Virginia.
Hill, G. H., North Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Hardcastle, A. B., Mississippi.
Hardee, William J., Alabama, graduate of West Point, and rebel lieutenant general.
Holmes, T. H., North Carolina.
Hibert, Louis, Louisiana, graduate of West Point.
Hill, G. H., Arkansas.
Huger, Frank, Virginia.
Haskell, A. M., Texas.
Harris, Thomas A., Missouri, graduate of West Point, rebel brigadier general, and member of rebel congress.
Izard, Allen S., South Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Jones, Thomas M., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Jordan, Thomas, Virginia, graduate of West Point, rebel brigadier general.
Jones, William R., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Johnston, J. E., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Johnson, Bushrod, Tennessee, graduate of West Point, rebel brigadier general.
Johnson, John, North Carolina, graduate of West Point.

Jackson, George, Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Kennard, James M., Mississippi, graduate of West Point.
Kearney, W., Louisiana, graduate of West Point.
Lockett, Samuel H., Alabama.
Lane, John, Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Lay, George W., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Long, A. L., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Longstreet, James, Alabama, graduate of West Point, and rebel general.
Lee, Stephen, North Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Long, John O., North Carolina, graduate of West Point.
Lee, Roswell W., Texas, graduate of West Point.
Lomax, L. L., Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Lee, Fitzhugh, Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Lewis, William, Mississippi, graduate of West Point.
Major, James P., Mississippi, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Myres, A. C., Paris, France, graduate of West Point, and rebel quartermaster general.
McNeill, H. C., Texas, graduate of West Point.
McCown, J. P., Tennessee, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Madison, Y. C., Missouri, ex-surgeon United States army.
Montgomery, A. B., Georgia.
McCall, J. K., Tennessee.
Marmaduke, J. S., Missouri.
Maclin, Sackfield, Louisiana.
Minter, J. F., Texas.
Napier, Leroy, jr., Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Nicholls, Francis P., Louisiana, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Palfrey, E. A., Louisiana, graduate of West Point.
Pickett, G. E., Virginia, graduate of West Point, is charged with hanging loyal citizens of North Carolina.
Polk, Marshall S., Tennessee, graduate of West Point.
Pendleton, W. N., Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Robinson, Felix H., Texas, graduate of West Point.
Ransom, R., jr., North Carolina, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Robertson, B. H., Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Rosser, Thomas L., Texas, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Ramseur, D. P., North Carolina, ex-assistant surgeon United States army.
Ruggles, Daniel, Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Riley, E. B. D., Missouri, graduate of West Point.
Russell, R. M., Tennessee, graduate of West Point.
Rowland, T., Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Reynolds, A. W., Virginia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Saunders, John S., Virginia.
Stevenson, C. L., Louisiana, graduate of West Point, and rebel major general.
Sears, C. W., Mississippi, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Smith, Melancthon, Mississippi, graduate of West Point.
Smith, Larkin, Virginia, graduate of West Point.
Stockton, Philip, Texas.
Shanff, Arthur, Georgia.
Smith, M. L., Georgia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Sibley, H. H., Louisiana, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Sibley, W. C., Georgia.
Smith, J. A., Tennessee, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Stewart, A. P., Tennessee, graduate of West Point; resigned in 1845; rebel lieutenant general.
Shanff, John T., Arkansas, graduate of West Point.
Tyler, C. H., Virginia.
Trapier, J. H., South Carolina, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Thornton, George A., Kentucky, graduate of West Point.
Tennison, O. M., Louisiana.
West, John A. A., Louisiana.
Wilson, James S., Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Wheeler, Joseph, Georgia, graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier general.
Withers, John, Texas, graduate of West Point.
White, J. L., Alabama, graduate of West Point.
Williamson, T. H., Virgi[illegible]
Walker, W. S., Mississip[illegible], graduate of West Point, and rebel brigadier-general.
Wickliffe, N., Kentucky.
Watts, G. O., Kentucky.
Waddy, J. R., Virginia.
Williams, Thomas H., Maryland, ex-assistant surgeon United States army.

Welcker, William T., Tennessee, graduate of West Point.
West, John A. A., Georgia, graduate of West Point.
Wright, Moses H., Tennessee, graduate of West Point.
Williams, Thomas G., Virginia.
Young, P. M. B., Georgia, graduate of West Point.

Prominent Rebel Officers.

Allen, Henry W., Louisiana, ex-governor.
Breckenbrough, John W., Virginia, ex-United States district judge.
Breckinridge, John C., Kentucky; pardon recommended by legislature and many citizens of Kentucky.
Clark, Edward, Texas, rebel governor.
Clark, Charles, Mississippi, rebel governor; petition for pardon by ladies of Columbus, Mississippi.
Davis, Jefferson, Mississippi, rebel president; petition for pardon by ladies of Virginia and Mississippi.
Devine, Thomas J., Texas, rebel judge of district court; General Sheridan objects to pardon.
Fuller, Bartholomew, North Carolina, Fifth Auditor of the Treasury of the United States; resigned in 1861.
Gwin, W. M., Louisiana, ex-United States senator.
Haliburton, John G., Arkansas, ex-United States marshal.
Hunter, R. M. T., Virginia, ex-United States senator.
Moore, A. B., Alabama, rebel governor.
Moise, E. Warren, rebel district judge.
Offut, A. St. George, Virginia, resigned chief clerkship in Sixth Auditor's office in 1861, went to Richmond, and was appointed chief of contract bureau, rebel post office department.
Pettus, John J., Mississippi, ex-governor.
Quantrell, William C., Missouri, rebel guerilla; pardon strongly protested against.
Seddon, James A., Virginia, rebel secretary of war.
Stephens, Alexander H., Georgia, rebel vice-president.
Thompson, Jacob, Mississippi, ex-United States Secretary of the Interior; petition from the Mississippi legislature.
Toombs, Robert, Georgia, ex-United States senator.
Terry, David S., California, ex-judge of the California supreme court.
Yulee, D. L., Florida, ex-United States senator.

Rebel Members of Congress.

Ayer, Lewis M., South Carolina, member of rebel congress.
Atchison, David R., Missouri, ex-United States senator.
Batson, Felix J., Arkansas, member of rebel congress.
Blankford, Mark H., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Burnett, H. C., Kentucky, ex-member of United States congress, and member of rebel congress.
Biggs, Asa, North Carolina, ex-United States senator, and rebel district Judge.
Barksdale, E., Mississippi, member of rebel congress.
Barnwell, R. W., South Carolina, member of rebel congress.
Crockett, John W., Kentucky, member of rebel congress.
Craige, Burton, North Carolina, member of rebel provisional congress.
Clingman, Thomas L., North Carolina, ex-United States senator, and rebel brigadier general.
Clark, H. T., North Carolina, acting governor (by virtue of his position as speaker of the senate) on the death of Governor Ellis.
Clark, W. W., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Clapp, J. W., Mississippi, member of rebel congress.
Davis, Reuben, Mississippi, ex-member United States congress, and member of rebel congress.
Dupre, Lucina J., Louisiana, member of rebel congress.
De Clout, A., Louisiana, member of rebel congress.
Elliott, J. W., Kentucky, ex-member of United States congress, and member of rebel congress.
Foster, S. J., Tennessee, member of rebel congress.
Foote, Henry S., Tennessee, ex-United States Senator, and member of rebel congress.
Farrow, James, South Carolina, member of rebel congress.
Gray, Henry, Louisiana, member of rebel congress.
Gaither, Burgess S., North Carolina, member of rebel congress.
Goode, John, jr., Virginia, member of rebel congress.
Harris, Willis P., Mississippi, member of provisional congress.

Ingram, Porter, Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Johnson, Waldo P., Missouri, ex-United States senator, and member of rebel congress.
Jones, Roland, Louisiana, ex-United States member of congress, and rebel judge.
Kenan, O. R., North Carolina, member of rebel congress.
Keeble, E. A., Tennessee, member of rebel congress.
Kenan, A. H., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Lester, George N., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Lamar, L. Q. C., Mississippi, resigned seat in United States congress to aid rebellion.
Love, P. E., Georgia, resigned seat in United States congress to aid rebellion.
Montague, Robert L., Virginia, member of rebel congress.
Puryear, R. C., North Carolina, member of rebel provisional congress.
Preston, Walter, Virginia, member of rebel congress.
Rives, W. C., Virginia, member of rebel congress.
Ralls, John P., Alabama, member of rebel congress.
Shewmake, John T., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Smith, William, Virginia, ex-member of United States congress, rebel brigadier general and governor.
Swan, William G., Tennessee, member of rebel congress.
Tibbs, William H., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Thomas, James H., Tennessee, member of rebel congress.
Trippe, Robert P., Georgia, member of rebel congress.
Vellere, Charles J., Louisiana, member of rebel congress.
Welsh, Israel, Mississippi, member of rebel congress.
White, D. P., Kentucky, member of rebel congress.
Wright, John V., Alabama, member of rebel congress.
Wright, W. B., Texas, member of rebel congress.

Naval Officers.

Barron, Samuel, Virginia, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Brand, F. B., Louisiana, ex-United States navy officer and lieutenant colonel in rebel army.
Brown, Isaac N., Mississippi, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Bradford, W. L., Alabama, graduate of United States Naval Academy and officer in rebel service.
Barney, J. N., Maryland, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Bennett, William, Virginia, ex-sailmaker, United States navy.
Cocke, H. H., Virginia, ex-captain United States navy.
Campbell, W. P. A., Tennessee, ex-lieutenant United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Carter, J. H., Louisiana, ex-lieutenant in the United States navy.
Carrington, W. F., Virginia, ex-assistant surgeon United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel service.
City, George W., Virginia, first assistant engineer in the United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Cook, Joseph J., Texas, educated at Naval Academy, resigned 1852, colonel in rebel army.
Claiborne, H. B., Louisiana, ex-United States navy officer, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Dalton, H. H., Mississippi, ex-United States navy officer, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Dozier, W. G., South Carolina, graduate of Naval Academy, resigned from United States navy, officer on the "Chickamauga."
De Bree, A. M., Virginia, ex-officer in United States navy and lieutenant in rebel navy.
Evans, Richard, Virginia, ex-captain in United States revenue marine and acting master in rebel service.
Eggleston, J. R., Mississippi, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Evans, William E., South Carolina, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Fauntleroy, Charles M., Virginia, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Frobel, B. W., Georgia, ex-United States officer, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Fairfax, A. B., Maryland, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Fahs, C. F., Alabama, ex-surgeon in United States navy, resigned in 1861.
Forrest, French, Virginia, ex-captain in United States navy, resigned in 1861.
Freeman, Robert J., Virginia, assistant surgeon in United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel navy.
Gregory, Samuel S., North Carolina, ex-midshipman in the United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel navy.
Green, J., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Guthrie, J. J., North Carolina, ex-lieutenant in United States navy, resigned and appointed lieutenant in rebel navy.

Good, W. Drayton, South Carolina, left United States Naval Academy and entered the rebel navy.

Graves, Charles J., North Carolina, resigned position in United States navy and entered the rebel service.

Hunter, Thomas T., Maryland, ex-United States navy and rebel navy officer.

Harrison, J. F., Virginia, ex-surgeon in United States and rebel navy.

Hoole, J. L., Alabama, graduate of United States Naval Academy and lieutenant in rebel navy.

Hall, W. B., Georgia, graduate of United States Naval Academy and lieutenant in rebel navy.

Harrison, S. L., Virginia, graduate of United States Naval Academy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Harrison, George W., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Hunter, B. W., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy and major in rebel army.

Holcome, H., Georgia, left United States Naval Academy, and lieutenant on privateer Rappahannock.

Harrison, W. D., Virginia, ex-surgeon in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Ingraham, John H., South Carolina, educated at United States Naval Academy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Ingraham, H. L., South Carolina, ex-lieutenant in United States marine corps; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Inglehart, O. S., Maryland, ex-United States and rebel assistant surgeon.

Izard, Allen C., South Carolina, educated at United States Naval Academy, and lieutenant colonel in rebel army.

Johnson, John, North Carolina, paymaster in United States navy; resigned and appointed paymaster in rebel navy.

Johnson, O. F., Georgia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned at the beginning of the war.

Jones, J. P., St. Johns, New Brunswick, ex-United States navy officer; resigned to share the fortunes of his State, (Virginia.)

Johnston, J. D., Alabama, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Jordon, C. W., Virginia, third assistant engineer United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Jackson, T. A., Virginia, chief engineer United States navy; resigned on secession of Virginia.

Kennedy, C. H., Virginia, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.

Kennon, Beverly, Virginia, ex-United States navy officer; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Kennard, J. S., District of Columbia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.

King, C. K., District of Columbia, ex-midshipman United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel navy.

Locke, H. H., Virginia, ex-captain in United States navy; resigned at beginning of the rebellion.

Lynah, H. M., South Carolina, ex-United States surgeon; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Loyall, B. P., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.

Lee, S. S., Virginia, ex-commander in United States navy; resigned and appointed captain in rebel navy.

Levy, Charles H., Virginia, second assistant engineer in United States navy; resigned in 1861.

McGary, Charles P., North Carolina, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.

Morris, C. M., South Carolina, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.

Minor, George, Virginia, ex-commander in United States and rebel navy.

Minor, L. W., Virginia, ex-surgeon in United States and rebel navy.

Maury, W. L., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy, and commander of privateer "Georgia."

May, L. C., Virginia, graduate of United States Naval Academy; in military prison, Louisville, Kentucky.

Morgan, Van R., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Morrison, James J., Georgia, ex-United States revenue officer.

Myers, Henry, Georgia, ex-United States and rebel paymaster.

Maury, J. S., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Mason, Murray, Virginia, ex-commander in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Moore, T. L., North Carolina, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.

Meiere, J. Ernest, Maryland, ex-lieutenant in United States marine corps.
McBlair, Charles H., Maryland, ex-commander in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Magruder, G. A., Virginia, ex-United States navy.
Porter, John L., Virginia, constructor in United States navy.
Parker, John H., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.
Parker, William H., New York, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Pickney, Robert F., Maryland, ex-United States navy officer; no personal application.
Phillips, D. B., Virginia, ex-assistant surgeon United States navy; resigned in May, 1861, and entered the rebel service.
Rochelle, J. H., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned in May, 1861, and entered the rebel service.
Robb, R. G., Virginia, ex-commander in United States and rebel navy.
Read, Charles W., Mississippi, ex-United States and rebel navy officer.
Scales, Dabney M., Mississippi, graduate of United States Naval Academy.
Smith, William Taylor, Virginia; entered United States navy in 1832; resigned in 1552; entered rebel service in May, 1861.
Sinclair, W. B., Virginia, ex-United States and rebel surgeon.
Sharp, William, Virginia, ex-United States navy officer; resigned in 1861.
Semmes, John D., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States marine corps; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Smith, Albert J., Virginia, ex-paymaster in United States navy; resigned at the beginning of the war.
Smithy, William L., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.
Spotswood, C. F. M., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.
Schroeder, Charles, Virginia, ex-engineer United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Tansill, Robert, District of Columbia, ex-captain in United States marine corps and colonel in rebel army.
Thorburn, Robert D., Virginia, ex-commander in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Tucker, John T., Virginia, third assistant engineer in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Taylor, A. S., Virginia, ex-captain in United States marine corps; resigned at the beginning of the war.
Tucker, John R., Virginia, ex-commander in United States and rebel navy.
Vanzant, N. H., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.
Wright, Henry X., Virginia, third assistant engineer in United States navy; resigned and entered rebel service.
Williamson, W. P., Virginia, third assistant engineer in United States navy; resigned and entered rebel service.
Williamson, C. H., Virginia, ex-assistant surgeon United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Ward, William H., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.
Webb, W. A., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy; resigned and entered the rebel service.
Whittle, William C., Virginia, ex-commander United States navy, resigned on the secession of Virginia.
Wysham, W. E., Virginia, ex-assistant surgeon in the United States and rebel navy.
Wilkinson, J., Virginia, ex-lieutenant in United States navy, and rebel blockade runner.

Florida cases—Miscellaneous.

Allender, Francis, Florida, privateer.
Chase, William H., Florida, ex-United States army.
Dawkins, James B., Florida, member of rebel congress.
Dancy, F. L., Florida, ex-United States army, resigned in 1836.
Gift, George W., Florida, ex-midshipman in United States navy, and rebel privateer.
Humphrey, F. C. Florida, ex-military storekeeper United States army, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Hollins, George N., Florida, ex-captain in United States navy, resigned and entered the rebel service.
Hopkins, C. F., graduate of United States Naval Academy and major in rebel army.
Hawkins, George S., Florida, ex-member of United States Congress and rebel judge.
Kelly, W. W. J., Florida, ex-purser in United States navy and paymaster in rebel navy.
Moreno, Stephen A., Florida, educated at West Point and captain in rebel army.
Martin, John M., Florida, member of rebel congress.
Mitchell, John K., Florida, ex-commander in United States navy, resigned and entered rebel service
Owens, James B., Florida, member of rebel congress.

Renshaw, Francis B., Florida, ex-lieutenant in United States and rebel navy.
Rogers, S. St. George, Florida, member of rebel congress.
Stockton, W. T., Florida, graduate of West Point and lieutenant colonel in rebel army.
Thomas R. B., Florida, graduate of West Point and colonel in rebel army.
Taylor, Joseph M., Florida, rebel brigadier general.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

JOHN C. UNDERWOOD sworn and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State whether you are the district judge for the eastern district of Virginia.

A. I am United States district judge for the district of Virginia. There is no eastern district of Virginia. Since the State of West Virginia has been created, the boundaries have changed, and the judges are called judges of Virginia and West Virginia.

Q. You presided on the occasion of the application for the discharge of Jefferson Davis on bail at Richmond recently?

A. I did.

Q. State whether you yourself regarded it as a proper case for the exercise of the discretion supposed to be lodged with you for taking bail if objection had been made.

A. I suppose that, if objection had been made, it would have been a proper case at least for consideration.

Q. I wish to know whether, under the circumstances of that case, as known to yourself and the public, you would have regarded it a proper one for the discharge of the party on bail if objection had been made by a counsel for the United States?

A. I do not think I had made up my mind in advance. I did not expect such an application, and had not considered it. I supposed that the case was a bailable one, as the indictment was framed under the act of 1862, and I thought that where the government had refused or neglected to proceed with the case for so long, it was a proper case for bail.

Q. Did you regard the government then as being in default in that case?

A. I did.

Q. Did the government assign any good reason, or any reason at all, for not going on to trial?

A. No, sir; and I thought there was no reason, and on that very account that there was no good excuse for not going on with the trial. I supposed it was a proper case for bail.

Q. Did you confer at any time with the President or Attorney General in reference to the trial of Jefferson Davis for treason?

A. I had conversations with the President in reference to the prosecution of those who had been engaged in the rebellion. I think it was before the indictment was found.

Q. The conversation was not about Davis especially?

A. I do not know that any person was named. I did ask the President's views as to the propriety of a prosecution of the leaders of the rebellion, and he expressed himself very decidedly on the subject in favor of prosecution.

Q. What time was that?

A. That was before the indictment was found. I think the indictment against Mr. Davis was found either in May or June, 1866. There had been an indictment found at a previous term against a number of the leading rebels. Mr. Davis, however, was not then indicted, and several members of the grand jury gave as a reason for not having indicted him that he had been already indicted in the District of Columbia, and that it would be a work of supererogation to indict him over again. But when the Attorney General gave the opinion that Mr. Davis could not be tried except in the State of Virginia, the grand jury thought it proper to indict him at the next term The conversations that I have had with the President on the subject were before the indictment of Davis in Virginia.

Q. They were, then, in the early part of 1866?

A. Yes; I should think they were in 1866 and also in 1865. I had two or three conversations with him, in which he expressed very decidedly the opinion that the most guilty and prominent persons engaged in the conspiracy ought to be indicted and tried for treason.

Q. Were any of the other indictments that were found there ever tried?

A. No, sir; there has not been a trial.

Q. Has there been any effort on the part of the government to try them?

A. I think not. The Attorney General desired a copy of the indictment, and seemed to assume the management of it. There was an application to bail Mr. Davis made to me very shortly after the indictment, I think in June of last year. I recollect that the Attorney General, Mr. Speed, took an interest in it at that time, and came before me when the application was made. I refused the application. I understood and supposed that the matter was in his hands, but there was no effort made to prosecute the case, although I understood from the district attorney that it would be prosecuted at the May term, the term that we are now holding. Mr. Evarts, however, acting for the government, said that he was not ready, and of course I know of no way of having a trial when the prosecution is not ready.

Q. Did he state why he was not ready.

A. No, sir, he did not. He stated very briefly that the government was not ready to proceed in the case. The district attorney had told me repeatedly that he would be ready, but he told me then and since that he was overruled by the action of the government.

Q. On whose suggestion was the amount of bail fixed at $100,000?

A. I think that amount was offered, and I know it was accepted on the part of the government before I had anything to say about it. Indeed, the whole matter seemed to have been arranged between the government and Mr. O'Conor. Mr. Evarts told me so the night before. The first I knew of it was about 11 o'clock the night before, Sunday night.

Q. Did it seem to you, from what you observed on the hearing of the case, that there was any purpose on the part of the government to try the case at any time?

A. That is more than I can tell you. I know nothing more than what Mr. Evarts said, that the government was not ready to proceed.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did he tell you at that time that the government was willing to take bail?

A. I think so. If he did not tell me on Sunday night he told me so the next morning. It was pretty well understood that bail would be offered for $100,000. I heard it from both sides. Mr. Shea, of counsel for Mr. Davis, and Mr. Evarts, who acted for the government, both told me substantially the same thing.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you think that amount of bail ample to secure his appearance?

A. It was my impression that it would secure his appearance; I expressed myself satisfied with the amount.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Had it any reference to the amount paid by the government for Davis's capture, with any view to indemnity?

A. It occurred to me that it was the same amount, but I do not know that there was any particular reference to it.

Q. Did the counsel for the government suggest whether they would be ready for trial at the next term?

A. No, sir. Between 11 and 12 o'clock on Sunday night the district attorney and Mr. Evarts came to my room. The district attorney said, I think, that he was ready on his own part, and that he had no doubt about his being able to convict Davis; but Mr. Evarts, who was acting, as I understood, under instructions, thought he would be obliged to say that he was not ready.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did Mr. Evarts state that he was acting under instructions, and that he would be obliged to say that he was not ready?

A. He said he supposed he would be obliged to say that he was not ready. Allusion had been made, either by Mr. Chandler or by Mr. Evarts, to the fact that they had been in Washington the day before, and I certainly understood that Mr. Evarts was acting under instructions. I know that Mr. Chandler told me on Friday night that he was going to meet Mr. Evarts and the Attorney General by appointment, and to arrange, as I understood, for the trial. I was in church on Sunday evening, and did not get to my room until near 11 o'clock. After that hour Mr. Chandler and Mr. Evarts came to my room and said that the matter had been fixed and settled, and that they would not proceed with the trial. Mr. Chandler said that he had not a doubt about his ability to convict Mr. Davis, but Mr. Evarts said, "Of course you know we cannot go on with the trial;" and I understood it was arranged that they would not proceed.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You say that the offence was bailable?

A. Yes, in my judgment, as the indictment was under the act of 1862.

Q. Do you mean that Davis could demand bail as a matter of right, or only that it was in the discretion of the court to receive or refuse bail?

A. It was a matter in the discretion of the court.

Q. If you had been left to your own discretion, and there had been no agreement between counsel that Davis should be admitted to bail, would you have admitted him to bail if government had objected?

A. I do not think I had made up my mind. I was not expecting such an application. I considered that the government was certainly at fault in not trying Davis, and I thought there was no good reason for not doing so.

Q. Has there been any difficulty at any time within the last three years in procuring an impartial jury in Virginia, which, upon proper evidence, would convict for treason Jefferson Davis or any other man?

A. I thought a year ago, and expressed the opinion, that the reign of terror was so absolute in Virginia that there might be some difficulty in procuring a jury which would have the courage to convict him. Many men have told me that it would cost them their lives to act upon a jury. I have been told by gentlemen that that impression was general.

Q. How is it now?

A. There is no danger now, and has not been for some time.

Q. There would be no difficulty now to get a jury to convict upon proper evidence?

A. No difficulty in the world; but a year ago very few men would have had the courage to serve upon a jury.

Q. What time did the present term commence?

A. On the 6th of May, 1867. The term has not yet closed—only a temporary adjournment.

Q. What time did the Supreme Court of the United States adjourn?

A. About the 15th or 16th of May.

Q. Were you notified by Chief Justice Chase that he expected to attend the present term of the United States circuit court in Virginia?

A. He informed me verbally, and by two letters, that he would come as soon as the Supreme Court should adjourn.

Q. Did you state that fact to counsel the day that Jefferson Davis was brought into court?

A. I did state it in open court, and I told it to the counsel the evening before.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Might you not have required the counsel for the government to proceed with the trial of Davis?

A. I do not know but I might have, but I never knew it to be done when the prosecuting attorney says he is not ready. It is very unusual under such circumstances to compel him to go on.

Q. Is that always sufficient without assignment of a cause?

A. I think it is a good reason either for putting an end to the prosecution or for admitting to bail.

Q. Is it usual when the court has knowledge of the fact that the government is ready to proceed, and when a continuance is not asked for by the defendant, to continue a case at the mere suggestion of the prosecuting attorney?

A. I do not know that it is; but in this case there was a mutual agreement to continue the case and to give bail. That had been arranged beforehand.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. That mutual agreement was upon terms to which you must first consent—that is, that you would receive bail?

A. It was on the supposition that bail would be taken.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Was that agreement made without consulting you to see whether it would be acceptable to you?

A. It was made, as I understood, before I had been consulted, on the supposition that I would admit Davis to bail.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Would there have been any objection, so far as you were concerned, to postpone the trial of the case until the Chief Justice could be in court?

A. No, sir; that was my earnest desire. I wrote to the Chief Justice that I hoped he would be there, and he stated that he would. I stated that there was enough business to occupy the court for a week, and that by that time the Chief Justice would be down. If the Chief Justice were not there I would have made an effort to try the case myself.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you ever object to trying Davis yourself?

A. I never objected to it, but I always preferred that the Chief Justice should do it. If the counsel had been ready I should have gone on with the case, although I desired its postponement until the Chief Justice should come.

Q. Do you know why the application for the habeas corpus was not delayed until its return could be made at a time when the Chief Justice was there?

A. The application was first made for the first Monday of the term, which was on the 6th of May. I told Mr. Shea that I was unwilling to grant it for the first Monday, because I feared the Chief Justice would not be there; and I changed it to the second Monday, presuming that the Chief Justice would then be there. The district attorney and I had agreed that the trial should be set down for the 22d or 23d of May, expecting the Chief Justice to be there. That was before the district attorney came up to Washington.

Q. The circuit court has taken recess?

A. Yes; from Wednesday night last to the 4th of June, principally because I have a term at the district court at Norfolk next week. We have business enough in the circuit court to last for nearly three weeks.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. In your testimony you have frequently used the word "government;" for instance, you said that bail was offered and accepted by the "government." In what sense do you use the term "government?"

A. I mean by it the prosecuting officers on the part of the government. Mr. Evarts seemed to have been the leading officer on the part of the government, and I mean by it Mr. Evarts and the officers on the part of the prosecution.

Q. You stated a while ago that Mr. Evarts said he had instructions, and would be obliged to say that he could not go to trial. Do you mean to say that Mr. Evarts said that?

A. I think Mr. Evarts said substantially that. I think he said that it had been concluded that they would not proceed with the trial. He stated that he thought it much better not to proceed in a trial of this kind than to make an effort and fail. I think the district attorney then replied that, in his judgment, there would be no failure to obtain a conviction. Then Mr. Evarts asked my opinion on the subject, and I told him that I thought that a jury would probably do its duty, and would not act under any fear or intimidation. That remark was made in reference to the changed condition of affairs. A year ago I would not have said the same, but I felt that there was no doubt now that a jury would act fearlessly. Mr. Evarts hesitated a little, and said, "Well, I think the thing is settled; we shall be obliged to say that we are not ready." He did not say when or where it was settled, but said, "I suppose it is settled."

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was that after the conference between the counsel for the government and the counsel on the part of the defence?

A. It was after I understood there had been such a conference between them.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. What did Mr. Evarts say, if anything, in reference to having instructions on that subject?

A. I do not think that, in his conversation with me, Mr. Evarts said he had instructions from any particular person. The district attorney had said more on that subject than Mr. Evarts. He introduced the subject by saying that they had settled the matter; that they were not going on to trial.

Q. You say you considered the government at fault in not being ready for trial, and that for that reason Mr. Davis was entitled to be admitted to bail?

A. There were two considerations which made it seem proper to me to bail him. One consideration was the default of the government in not prosecuting him with sufficient diligence—I mean by the government the prosecuting officers. I thought it was a case that might be disposed of at this term. The district attorney had repeatedly expressed that opinion to me, and I had agreed with him. The other consideration was that the prosecution was perfectly willing to accept bail.

Q. I want to know whether you considered that the fact of the government refusing to go to trial actually entitled Mr. Davis to bail, independently of any agreement?

A. Under the peculiar circumstances, the two considerations together had force enough to bring me to the conclusion that it was proper for me to admit him to bail; first, the delay in the prosecution; and secondly, the perfect willingness of the prosecution to accept bail.

Q. You stated some time ago that on account of the default of the government you thought Mr. Davis was entitled to bail.

A. I meant to include both considerations. I thought he was certainly entitled to bail when the prosecution failed to bring him to trial, without assigning any reason, or being able, in my judgment, to assign any reason. The fact, too, that the prosecution was entirely willing to accept bail was a consideration influencing me.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was there anything in that conversation about the insufficiency of the indictment?

A. No, sir.

Q. Or of a desire to procure another indictment?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Was there any such thing said by the district attorney in any of his conversations with you?

A. No, sir; not in any of those conversations. I had heard the district attorney raise the question at some time that perhaps they might be disposed to ask for a new indictment; but I think he had concluded to rest on the indictment already found.

Q. You do not know that that was one of the considerations for not going to trial?

A. No, sir; I did not understand that it was.

Q. Do you say that the district attorney insisted that he was ready for trial.

A. I do not think I can say that he "insisted" that he was ready for trial, but he had told me before that they probably would be ready. On the Sunday night when he and Mr. Evarts came to converse with me, he said there would be no doubt in his mind about their ability to succeed; indicating, as I thought, that he was entirely ready to go on.

Q. Did he say he was ready to go on with the trial?

A. Not in so many words.

Q. Either in that conversation at night or at the court next morning?

A. He did not say so in so many words, but he intimated, I think, in the manner in which I have stated, that there would be no doubt about the conviction.

Q. Did you not understand that the district attorney did not desire to go on?

A. No, sir; I did not. I should have inferred from what he said that he did desire to go on. That was the expression as nearly as I can recollect—that there would be no doubt of a conviction; and from the manner in which he said it I supposed that he meant that he was personally in favor of going on with the case.

Q. Did Chief Justice Chase, in the letters which he wrote to you, or in the conversation which he had with you, state that he would be present and preside at this term of the court?

A. Well, he said he would come down. I do not think he said "I will come down and preside," but he said "I will try to be with you." The understanding, of course, was, that if he was there he would preside.

Q. Did he tell you at any time, in conversation or by letter, that he would be able to come there and preside at the trial of Jefferson Davis?

A. He told me so in both the letters. The language of the first letter was, "I think of joining you as soon as the court adjourns, and I wish you would ask Mr. Chandler to procure me a parlor and an adjoining bed-room, and also a room for my clerk, who will come with me, and who is a colored man."

Q. Did he, in either of those letters or conversation, assure you that he would attend the court and preside at the trial of Jefferson Davis?

A. I cannot answer that question categorically.

Q. Did he, in substance, say so to you?

A. I understood that to be his meaning.

Q. Did he mention the trial of Jefferson Davis?

A. We were talking about that. He said, "I am quite certain that I cannot be there the first week of your term, but I will be there after the Supreme Court adjourns."

Q. Did not Chief Justice Chase avoid saying anything about the trial of Jefferson Davis?

A. I do not think it is fair to say that he avoided it. In my conversation I told him I was informed by the district attorney that that case would come on, and that I trusted we should have his presence to preside; and I think his answer to me, in the conversation I had with him, was, that he presumed the term of the Supreme Court would continue for some time after the commencement of the circuit court, but that he would come down as soon as he got through with the Supreme Court. He thought it would continue through the first week of the May term, which began on the 6th of May. About the same time I received a letter from General Schofield, assuring us of his desire to see us there. I enclosed the letter to the Chief Justice, and he replied to me, returning the letter, that he thought of joining me as soon as the Supreme Court should adjourn, but that he could not accept the hospitalities of General Schofield, and should prefer to go to a hotel.

Q. He did not mention Jefferson Davis in the letter?

A. I think he did mention him in the last letter.

Q. Have you the letter with you?

A. No, sir; I have not. It is at Alexandria. (Witness was directed to produce the letter to the Committee.)

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. When is Jefferson Davis recognized to appear at court?

A. At the next term of the court, in November.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. The indictment against Jefferson Davis was found about a year ago?

A. Yes.

Q. The grand jury performed its duty fearlessly?

A. Yes.

Q. Was there any more difficulty in procuring a petit jury for his trial, which would perform its duties fearlessly, than there was in procuring a grand jury?

A. If the court had not been changed from Norfolk, my impression is that we could have tried him, but Norfolk and Richmond are very different localities. Subsequently to the finding of the indictment the place for holding court was changed to Richmond, and I did think, from the state of feeling there, that it would be difficult to get any impartial jury there. The system of terror has been more prevalent in Richmond than anywhere else in Virginia. My impression is that we might have tried him at Norfolk, and could have there found a jury that would not be overawed.

Q. Are not juries in cases of this kind kept by themselves, away from the hearing of any threats, and from overawing influences?

A. They should be, of course; but it was really difficult a year ago to find men who were willing to serve on a jury. They gave as a reason to me that they feared for the safety of their lives and property. It is not so now, but it certainly was so a year ago. A merchant of Richmond asked to be excused at this present term from serving on a jury, because he feared it would destroy his business.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know whether there is a purpose on the part of the district attorney to present a bill of indictment against Mr. Davis to the grand jury at this term?

A. I do not; I suppose not.

Q. Has the question been talked of?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Has he said anything about his doubts of the validity of an indictment found by a grand jury composed partly of colored men?

A. I think he said, on the first day of the term, that he had not examined that point, and that there might possibly be some doubt about it; but I think he said the next day that he had no doubt about it. I recollect his expressing some little doubt the first day of the court.

Q. Does not that refresh your recollection as to one of the questions that influenced counsel for the prosecution in consenting to a continuance of the case?

A. I never heard that suggested as a reason for desiring a continuance.

Q. You are certain of that?

A. Yes, I am very certain that I did not hear that suggested as a reason. I think no reason was given.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. The indictment against Davis was found by a grand jury of white men?

A. Yes; that indictment was found a year ago. I did not think there was any serious proposition to find a new indictment. I believed the district attorney was satisfied with the present indictment.

The following are copies of the letters from Chief Justice Chase, referred to in the foregoing testimony:

WASHINGTON, April 26, 1867.

MY DEAR JUDGE: I have received to-day General Schofield's letter to you of the 30th March, which, I suppose, was enclosed to me by you. You must have misconceived me. I wanted no assurance of welcome and protection for the circuit court from headquarters.

If I go to Richmond at all, I intend to have no relations with the military, except those which spring from the good will which subsists between myself and some of the officers. But I cannot go at all till after the 20th of May, by which time the circuit court will, I suppose, have adjourned. If not, I think of joining you after our term has ended; but if I do, I must find quarters at a hotel, not with the general.

Sincerely, your friend,

S. P. CHASE.

Hon. JOHN C. UNDERWOOD.

WASHINGTON, May 13, 1867.

MY DEAR JUDGE: Thanks for your note, and thanks for Mr. Millward's offer of accommodations. I do not know that I should care to be in the same house with Mr. Davis while he and I occupy our present relative positions. It is certain that I shall be detained here all this week and next. After that, if the circuit court business requires my presence, I shall try to join you. In that case I will thank you to request Mr. Chandler to procure suitable quarters for me. I shall want a parlor and bed-room adjoining, and a sleeping room for my messenger, who is colored.

Cordially, your friend,

S. P. CHASE.

Hon. JOHN C. UNDERWOOD, District Judge, &c.

P. S.—I see that the newspapers are well informed, as usual. Their correspondents seem to know as much (and probably more) of your opinions and future decisions as yourself. I take it for granted that you keep your own counsel.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, May 25, 1867.

MONTGOMERY BLAIR sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Have you at any time had a conversation with President Johnson on the subject of the legality of the 39th Congress?

A. I never had.

Q. Or of the legality, as a Congress, of a body which should include persons elected from the ten or eleven States lately in rebellion?

A. I have had conversations with him about the status of those States repeatedly; but I know of nothing that he has ever said to me which differs in any respect from his public communications to the two houses.

Q. Have you had any conversation with him as to whether it would be his duty to recognize representatives from the States which have been in rebellion, regardless of the action of Congress?

A. No; that is a subject which I have never had any conversation with him about.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, May 27, 1867.

ANDREW K. LONG sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Are you employed in the Executive mansion?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In what capacity?

A. I am a detailed army officer, acting as secretary. Since July, 1865, I have had charge of all pardons generally issued, and of naval, military, and post office commissions, and of matters of that kind.

Q. All pardons granted by the President pass through your hands?

A. All. I only know one exception since July, 1865.

Q. What was that exception?

A.. A pardon issued to a man named Howell. It has been the custom, when an application has been presented, to refer it to me to look into the case, and to present the facts of the case.

Q. In that case the papers were not presented?

A. No, sir; I have no recollection of the case.

Q. Do you know how those papers reached the President?

A. I do not.

Q. Were they sent by the President, after his action, to your office?

A. No, sir; I must have been absent from the office at the time.

Q. Have you ever seen the papers in that case?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever seen the pardon?

A. No, sir; I have not. I was absent during part of October, 1865, and October, 1866, during which time pardons were in the hands of Colonel Rives.

Q. Do you know anything of an application for a pardon for John Kelly, with which Mrs. Washington is said to have had some connection?

A. No, sir; I know that Mrs. Washington received pardons from my hands for friends of hers in Virginia, as I knew her to be a Virginia lady, and a lady of respectability.

Q. Did she receive pardons for persons other than relatives or friends of hers?

A. None, that I know of, except for persons whom she represented as her immediate relatives and friends, and who, I had reason to believe, were such.

Q. How many pardons did she receive?

A. I cannot state.

Q. Can you state about the number?

A. I might say half a dozen. They were delivered to her by me, on my own responsibility, with no authority from the President.

Q. Are not pardons which are not delivered to the applicants by yourself, or by the President, sent to the State Department or to the Attorney General's office?

A. The way in which pardons have been issued is this: application is made to the Attorney General. The Attorney General issues a warrant on the State Department for the pardon to be made out. When made out it is sent to our office, and is in my care. There were so many pardons and commissions, that, instead of being signed, they were stamped with a fac simile of the President's signature. That stamp is in my hands. I have charge of it, and am responsible for all pardons issued. Pardons for ex-members of Congress, rebel members of Congress, senators, generals, and others of high class, come under the President's special attention, and are signed by himself personally. There are fourteen exceptions made in the amnesty proclamation, but only three or four of these are brought to the special notice of the President.

Q. A pardon granted to a confederate military officer below the rank of brigadier general would be stamped with the President's signature?

A. Yes, sir; if it came under any of the other clauses; but still it would have been brought before the office of the Attorney General. He looked into the case as far as he could, and the President, too, so far as he could.

Q. State the routine of the pardon business in the Executive office.

A. The person applying for pardon writes either to the President or the Attorney General. If to the President, the case is always referred simply to the Attorney General. In the Attorney General's office the case is examined into by him, or by the clerk who has charge of the pardons there. The Attorney General makes a requisition on the State Department to have certain pardons filled out. After they are filled out at the State Department they are sent to the President. If they are large cases, which I think the President should see, I put them in his drawer, and, as persons call attention to the case, I present them to the President, and generally get the application of the party and read it over to the President. If the case is strong enough, he generally signs the pardon. In small cases, of not much importance, the pardons are stamped by me. Then they go to the State Department to receive the seal. From there they are sent back to me, and I deliver them. I did generally send them to the Governors of the States, but the President found out that some secretaries of state, or State officials, had been making money out of those pardons, and he directed me to stop that system and not to deliver pardons to third parties, or to any persons except those who made the application in writing, or who presented themselves personally.

Q. When did the President establish that rule?

A. About June or July, 1865. There were very few pardons given then. At general receptions the doors are open; everybody goes in. I take down the names of persons applying for pardon, and of those who applied for them. During the evening I would hunt up those pardons out of the lot that I had in charge, and next day I would call the list over to the President. The President noticed that a great many persons answered for several applicants for pardon; and then he stopped it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you recollect the particular case that operated on the President's mind to bring that about—the case of Mr. Corwin?

A. I remember that Corwin was there, and got a number of pardons; also a man called Doctor Powell, and a number of men from Alabama and Mississippi. They fooled me in getting me to deliver pardons to them.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. In some of those cases pardons have been issued without the papers having been brought to the attention of the President at all?

A. No, sir; except in petty cases.

Q. Those petty cases are referred to the Attorney General, and, after being passed upon by him, come back to you, and you impress with a stamp the President's name on the pardons, and they are delivered to the parties, the President never having known anything about them?

A. He would have known about the cases, because I tell him of such cases being in the office, and what the circumstances are.

Q. Do you read him the names in all cases?

A. No, sir; not in all cases.

Q. You give a general description?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you show him the papers?

A. Not always in the small cases.

Q. Then there have been numerous cases where the pardon issued without the President having ever seen any of the papers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And without having heard the names of the individuals mentioned?

A. Yes, sir; but the cases had been examined by the Attorney General.

Q. Did the papers in the case of the one hundred and ninety-three West Virginia soldiers come under your charge?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever receive any gratuity from any person connected with the pardon business?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever known any person connected with the Executive office to receive money, or any other compensation, in connection with pardons?

A. No, sir; positively not. I have heard of persons outside having made a good deal of money in that way, and I have invariably brought those cases before the President. The secretary of state for South Carolina (Elwood, I think, was his name) once got a number of pardons, which I had been in the habit of sending to the Governor. My attention was subsequently called to a paragraph in the papers stating that parties for whom such pardons had been sent could have them on payment of twenty-five dollars. I brought the matter to the attention of the President, and was directed to write to this person stating that he had imposed upon the President, and directing him to send the pardons back to me. I wrote to Governor Perry, and he communicated my letter to the Secretary of State. Governor Perry wrote to me, in reply, that it had been a misunderstanding, and that he would have the papers recalled, and send them out himself free. The President was very angry about the case. He said that this man had been making money out of the pardons, and that they would have no good effect.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know, as a fact, that the President has always endeavored to prevent the making of money by pardons?

A. Yes, sir; I do. I know that whenever he suspected anything of that kind, no matter who the man was who applied, he invariably stopped the pardon, and directed it to be sent to the party himself. A great many pardons were, in that way, sent to the party.

Q. The President gave you instructions to watch for this thing?

A. Yes; he gave me instructions to watch for it, and to be careful to whom I issued pardons.

Q. For what reason?

A. To prevent money being made out of them.

Q. You have stated that there may have been half a dozen cases where the pardon was delivered to Mrs. Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you recollect the names of any of the parties?

A. No, sir; I do not. She stated at the time they were relatives or friends. I delivered a good many pardons to members of Congress.

Q. Do you recollect that one of the pardons you gave to Mrs. Washington was for her husband?

A. I do not think her husband required a pardon.

Q. Do you recollect that one of them was for a man named Bassett?

A. No, sir.

Q. You spoke about the pardon that was issued to a man named Howell?

A. Yes.

Q. You know nothing about that case except from mere rumor?

A. Nothing, except from hearsay.

Q. You had nothing to do with it?

A. No, sir; I never saw the pardon.

Q. That Howell pardon is the one with which Mrs. Cobb was connected?

A. I believe so.

Q. Do you know Mrs. Cobb?

A. Yes.

Q. Was she in the habit of receiving pardons from you?

A. No, sir; she was in the habit of coming up there, and trying to get pardons through.

Q. How many was she connected with, to your knowledge?

A. Outside of this Howell case, no one that the President ever knew of.

Q. How many that you know of?

A. I know of three that I have delivered to her myself; that is all I ever gave her. I gave these to her on my own responsibility, before knowing who or what she was, in the same way that I gave pardons to anybody else that came for them.

Q. Was Mrs. Cobb much in the habit of visiting the President?

A. Yes, sir; she would come up there, and stay around in the ante-room.

Q. Would she stay there all the time?

A. A good deal during a reception day.

Q. Do you mean that she was there every reception day?

A. For a long time she used to be there every reception day. She never would come before the President or one of the Secretaries. She would stay around in the room, then go away, and come back the next day. I have seen her there very frequently.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Do you mean that she was in the President's room, or the public room?

A. In the reception room, which was open to every person who called to see the President.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. The question was whether you knew of her visiting the President frequently?

A. No, sir; I do not. She never went in except on one occasion, and that was after a difficulty with Colonel Baker. She was never there on any other occasion, except when the doors were thrown open for every person to come in.

Q. What was the President's practice in regard to receiving people in the morning?

A. He saw Senators and members of Congress first, and then other persons of prominence. After he got through with them, he would generally open the doors toward two or three o'clock in the afternoon, and let all in, and receive them all at once.

Q. It was at these receptions that Mrs. Cobb was admitted, except on that one occasion?

A. Yes.

Q. When she appeared in the ante-room did the President know anything of it, or could he know anything of it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was he ever out there while she was?

A. No, sir; he never would go through those rooms.

Q. When she went up there did she always go to see the President, or did she go to see other persons?

A. I thought she came up there because she had nothing else to do. She could not be kept out. Everybody was admitted. It is a place where anybody can go.

Q. Are ladies in the habit of going and staying there?

A. Yes.

Q. Are there not almost every day, when the President is receiving people, ladies, strangers, in the ante-room?

A Yes.

Q. And that was the habit of Mrs. Cobb?

A. Yes.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. The delivery of this Howell pardon to Mrs. Cobb seems to have been in violation of the rule which you have stated; do you know any reason for it?

A. I do not. I must not have been there that day. When I was there the pardons were invariably referred to me. If the President wanted to issue the pardon, he would send word to me by the doorkeeper to have me send down to the Attorney General's office for the pardon; and then the pardon was brought before his notice. This Howell pardon I know nothing about.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What record do you make of the pardons that are issued?

A. I enter them on the book, putting down the name and the State, and whether it is a criminal or an amnesty pardon.

Q. Do you put down the person's name to whom the pardon is delivered?

A. No, sir; that is not entered.

Q. If anybody else besides yourself delivers a pardon, can you tell by the book who does it?

A. No, sir; I cannot.

Q. There is nothing to show that?

A. No, sir; there is not.

Q You do not know yourself how this pardon of Howell's came to be delivered to Mrs. Cobb?

A. No, sir; I do not know anything about the case at all.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Have you heard it talked about at the Executive mansion?

A. No, sir; I never heard Colonel Johnson speak of it. I saw in some of the newspapers that through General Baker he had been called in to see whether he had issued the pardon, and he said yes; but it is very unusual for him or anybody else, except myself, to present a case of pardon to the President.

Q. You understood that Robert Johnson issued that pardon?

A. Yes, sir; that is what I saw in the papers. I have never spoken to him about it.

Q. Have you, or has any one, to your knowledge, about the President's mansion, connived at or had knowledge of the practice of making money out of pardons?

A. No, sir; no one. There has been no one that has had an opportunity outside of myself.

Q. The President has directed you to see that this was not done?

A. Yes, sir; positively, time and again he has given me those directions to prevent anything of the kind. No person outside of myself would have an opportunity of doing it.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Were you at the Executive mansion at the time this scene occurred which has been referred to in the newspapers, when General Baker sent detectives to stop Mrs. Cobb?

A. Yes.

Q. State what you know about it.

A. It was in November, 1865, that that difficulty occurred. I was in the President's room, when the private policeman, Smith, came into the President's room and said that there was a detective down at the door stopping persons from coming up. The President told him to go down and send the detective up. He went down and sent the detective, Jones, to the President's room. The President asked him by what authority he was there. He said General Baker had sent him there. I was in the room at the time, and so was Colonel Rives. The President said nothing further to him except that he should tell General Baker to come over to him. A short time afterwards General Baker came over. There is in the office a long table like this in the committee room. General Baker entered the door and stood at the end of the table. The President stood near his desk at the other end. He asked General Baker by what authority he had placed a detective at his door to prevent persons coming up stairs. Baker did not say anything. Then the President told him he did not want him to come around there again; that he wanted him to take his detectives away, and that when he wanted him he would send for him. He told him to inform Mr. Stanton that he had given him orders to that effect; that he did not want him or any of his detectives about there.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did not Baker tell the President that the Secretary of War had directed him to place a detective there?

A. No, sir; Baker did not say a word. I remember that, for after we left the room we laughed at it, and said it was good that Baker had kept quiet and said nothing.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did you see the statement of that incident as published in the Chronicle?

A. Yes.

Q. There is a statement there that the President shook his fist in Baker's face in a very excited manner, and that he was intoxicated; is there any truth in that?

A. There is not a particle of truth in any of the statement. The President did not shake his fist in Baker's face, and did not speak in a tone above what he uses to any gentleman in the room. He just told Baker, positively, that he did not want him, that he had not sent for him, and that he wanted him to take his detectives away.

Q. You state, then, that the fact of some person being stopped below was not brought to the notice of the President by Mrs. Cobb?

A. It was not; but by a private policeman, Mr. Smith.

Q. She did not come up to his room through the kitchen and by the private stairs?

A. No, sir; she came in from the reception room.

Q. Was the President on that occasion intoxicated?

A. No, sir; not a bit.

Q. How long have you been in the Executive mansion?

A. Since the first of June, 1865.

Q. You have been an employé in the Executive mansion all that time?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you ever seen the President intoxicated?

A. Never; nor have I ever seen him drink a drop of liquor.

Q. On any occasion, since he was President?

A. Never, on any occasion. I never saw him in the slightest degree under the influence of liquor.

Q. You state, then, that this statement of General Baker is without the slightest foundation?

A. So far as relates to the intoxication of the President, it is without foundation. Baker had no opportunity to judge whether the President was intoxicated, as he stood in the room with his head down, and did not look at the President twice, and did not answer him a word back.

Q. The President's manner was not as Baker represents?

A. No, sir; the President's manner was dignified.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did the President raise his fist at Baker?

A. No, sir; he did not raise his hand from the table. He just quietly gave Baker his orders, and told him that he did not want spies placed about the Executive mansion. Mrs. Cobb could not have come up by way of the kitchen, as there is a guard there all the time. It seems the detective had kept her from going in by the glass door on the left, and she simply turned round and went in by the door on the right and went up to the public reception room. She was crying there, and Smith asked her what was the matter. She said a detective had stopped her. He went down and found it was so, and then came up and told the President, and the President sent for Jones, and then sent Jones for Baker.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Were you present the day of the inauguration?

A. No, sir; I was in the city, but not at the Capitol.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Are you an officer of the regular army?

A. Yes.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Do you know Colonel Sayre, the agent for receiving pardons for persons in Alabama?

A. Yes.

Q. Can you state the number of pardons that have been delivered to him?

A. No, sir. They were delivered to him at the request of Governor Parsons, as State agent for Alabama. A majority of the southern States had what they called State agents. Dr. Powell for North Carolina, Colonel Sayre for Alabama, Mr. Taylor, for Louisiana, &c.

Q. Is the number of pardons that has been delivered to Colonel Sayre very considerable?

A. I cannot tell how many. I cannot come to anything like the number. They have been delivered to him by me under the general order which I had received before it was known that these men were making money out of these pardons. After the order from the President on that subject I delivered very few pardons to him. I have delivered some pardons to him on my own responsibility; I cannot say how many.

Q. Had your attention been called to the fact that Colonel Sayre had been receiving money for these pardons?

A. No, sir. I asked Governor Parsons once about it, and he said no; that he would vouch for Mr. Sayre being an honorable man; and it was on his statement that I continued to deliver these pardons to Sayre, because he was the authorized agent for Alabama. Afterwards, Governor Patton, of Alabama, gave him a letter to the Secretary of State and the Attorney General, authorizing him to receive those pardons.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. If the Howell pardon had taken the usual course through the departments, would it have passed through your hands in reaching the President?

A. All I can say is this, that it was the custom for all pardons to pass through my hands. The President may have directed one of the other secretaries in reference to it, in my absence. It rested generally with the secretaries in such case to inform me, when I came back, that such an order had been given.

Q. Do you know whether there is any entry on the pardon records showing that there was such an application presented and pardon granted?

A. I know that on several occasions pardons have been issued, which, through mistake, have not been registered.

Q. Did you ever hear the President say anything with reference to the Howell pardon?

A. Never.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know this man Howell?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know anything of him?

A. No, sir; I have never seen him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know what was done with that pardon, or whether it is on file?

A. I do not. I never heard anything at all about it at our office. I will examine and see whether it is there. If it has been registered in our office, I can tell. If it has the seal affixed, there is a duplicate of it in the State Department, and a record of it in the Attorney General's office and in our office. All three offices should have a record of all pardons granted.

Q. Look at this note: "Mr. Evans will please call at the President's House and see Mr. Edward Cooper, Monday," and state whether you recognize the handwriting?

A. That writing is very familiar, but I cannot place it. I know the handwriting.

Q. Did you ever see the handwriting of John F. Coyle?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted with it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that note in his handwriting?

A. It looks something like it.

Q. What is your opinion as to whether or not it is his handwriting?

A. It looks something like it, but I cannot say that it is his. I have seen the handwriting before.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you know the handwriting of Mr. Cooper, who was the President's private secretary?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does this note look anything like it?

A. No, sir, nothing at all. Mr. Cooper's is more of a running hand a small, running hand—and less legible.

TUESDAY, May 28.

I have since examined the record, and find the name of Clarence J. Howell, of Missouri, entered as having been issued November 9, 1865.

(Signed) A. K. LONG.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, May 27, 1867.

Mrs. ELLA BASSETT WASHINGTON sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. The Committee has information that you were at one time employed to obtain a pardon from the President of the United States for one John Kelly; please state all the facts within your knowledge concerning that application?

A. It was about the 6th or 8th of November, 1865. I was then temporarily a resident of Georgetown. In consequence of the fact that my husband and myself had business which required our personal attention, we came to the city. About the 6th of November we were at Gautier's one day taking lunch—Colonel Washington, General Capron, of the United States army, and myself. While at the table, a servant of the establishment entered the room and said a gentleman wished to see me at the door. I asked if the gentleman would not come in. The servant said he declined to come in the room, but requested me to come to the door. I went to the door and saw a person there, a stranger, whose face I did not recall. He said his name was Jones; that he was a lawyer from Kentucky, and that he came to me, hoping I would pardon the intrusion and the liberty he had taken, in behalf of a much troubled and distressed southern friend of his; that this person was anxious to obtain a pardon, as his property was involved and liable to confiscation. Knowing that I had influence, that my name and position gave me influence, and knowing that in consequence of efforts of mine I had become known to the President and other distinguished gentlemen and officers of the government, he wished me to assist him, and made the appeal to me as a southerner who could sympathize with him, as he was friendless and a stranger. I said to the man that I had not been in the habit of obtaining pardons; that it was no business of mine; that I had obtained a few pardons for relatives in the South who had no means of coming here themselves, although their property came under the 13th exception; that I did not like to undertake anything for a perfect stranger, but that as he was in such distress I would hear what he had to say, and do what I could do for him, but that I could not attend to him just then. I returned to the room and said to my husband, "Colonel, what am I to do," stating the case. He said, "I do not see any harm in your helping the poor fellow." I then returned to the door and said that if he would come to my boarding-house in Georgetown, and bring this gentleman with him, I would hear what he had to say, but that he must excuse me then, as I was engaged. He then took leave of me. I returned to Georgetown, and in the evening of the same day, rather late, two persons called—this Jones and a person whom he introduced as Captain Kelly, of Kentucky. This Kelly stated to me that he had been a captain in the rebel army in the west; that he was friendless; that after the close of the war he had escaped to Canada; that while there he had heard of me through a letter received by General John C. Breckinridge from an intimate friend of his, as having been very successful in obtaining Colonel Washington's pardon, and the restoration of his property.

Q. You mean Colonel Washington, your husband?

A. Yes, sir. That in consequence of having heard of me, and knowing me to be in Washington, he had made this appeal, as he was utterly friendless. He also stated that his property was considerable, but that it was in danger of immediate confiscation; that his wife had died from the distress of separation from him and the uncertainty in regard to his fate; and that his orphan children would be left destitute if he could not at once obtain his pardon and the release of his property. Of course I was touched by the story. I told him I sympathized very deeply with him; that it was an unpleasant thing for me to undertake, for a stranger, anything of the kind, but that, as I was very sorry for him, I would see what I could do. He then said to me that he had his petition with him, and he handed me the paper, which I read. It was very long. I said to him, "There are a great many unnecessary details here. The statement should be shorter. The President has not time to read such long statements as this, and it is unnecessary." He said, "I paid a lawyer $50 for writing that." I said, "Captain, you could write it better yourself;" and I dictated to him the ordinary form, simply stating his status during the war, and making an application for Executive clemency. I then said to him, "If you meet me at the White House to-morrow I will introduce you to Colonel A. K. Long, who has charge of all the papers relating to pardons; and, if there be a general reception, I will endeavor to see the President, if he is not too busy, and to obtain an interview for you with the President, that you may state your case yourself." He replied that he was afraid to appear in public places; that Baker, the detective, had his name down as having been connected with the St. Albans raiders, and that therefore he was afraid to appear in public places; and that he was keeping very close to his room at Willard's Hotel. I then said that I would take the paper to the White House if he attached to it the certificate of his oath of allegiance; that I would present it to the President, see Colonel Long in respect to it, and let him know the result. After a little while he said to me that he hoped I would permit him, if I obtained his pardon, to make me some handsome compensation for my trouble, which he felt I ought to receive, as he had no claim on me or on my time, being an entire stranger. I replied to him that I never received compensation for such a matter as that; that my friends would not have insulted me by offering it; that they had not the means of doing it if they would, nor would they if they could. Mr. Jones then remarked that a woman had as much right to work for money as a man had; that he thought I was over nice in my statements, and he urged me to receive it. Captain Kelly said he would like to make me a handsome present. I said, "No, sir; nothing of the kind. The fact that I could do you a kindness would be a sufficient pleasure." I then excused myself, telling them that I expected some few friends to spend the evening, and that I could not remain longer. Mr. Jones still urging me to take the money, I declined very positively. They then left. The 6th of November was the anniversary of our wedding day, which we had never celebrated during the war on account of deep affliction. The 6th of November happened on Monday, and that being an inconvenient day for an entertainment I postponed it, I think, till Tuesday; and it was on Tuesday evening that these matters transpired. I had received much kindness and courtesy from the President, from the officers of his household, from the Secretary of the Treasury, and from the assistant Secretary, Mr. Chandler, the assistant Solicitor, Mr. Risley, the officers in the Attorney General's office and in the War Department, and from other distinguished persons, for which I felt very grateful; and I had invited those gentlemen to spend this evening with us, in order to show my appreciation of their kindness and courtesy. There were not more than twenty or thirty persons present, I not being prepared to give a handsome entertainment, as my husband had lost everything during the war. Among those present were the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Chandler, assistant Secretary, Colonel Long, Colonel Browning, Mr. Pleasants, Mr. Risley, Generals Greene and Capron, of the United States army, and several other officers, with some few lady friends. In the course of the evening a servant came to me and said there was a gentleman at the door and wished to see me. I replied that he must excuse me, as I had friends with me. The servant came back and said that the gentleman was in the hall. I walked to the front door, and I found Mr. Jones standing there. He at once commenced an apology for obtruding on my privacy, but said that he had brought a note from Captain Kelly, who was nearly crazy about his pardon; that he was walking his room in Willard's Hotel in a state of lunacy; and that, to gratify him, he had brought a note to me. He said, "Captain Kelly has a friend with him just arrived, and who, like himself, is friendless here. He hopes you will help him as well as himself." I said, "No, sir; by no means. I have merely undertaken this matter from sympathy with his condition, but I will not take the responsibility of recommending persons of whom I know nothing." He then looked into the parlor, which was near the front door, and remarked, "You have some distinguished guests here to-night." I said, "Yes; there are a few friends spending the evening with us, celebrating the anniversary of our wedding. They have shown me a great deal of kindness, and I wished them to share my pleasure." He took his leave, and said that Captain Kelly and himself would return in the morning with the petition and certificate of the oath of allegiance in proper order. The following is a copy of the note which is above mentioned:

WILLARD'S HOTEL, Tuesday, 8 p. m.

Mrs. Colonel WASHINGTON:

Pardon my intrusion, but on my return I found a friend who has been not only a companion in arms but also an exile, and, at his very urgent request and as a personal favor to him, I have induced Mr. Jones to call and see you this eve, although he does it very reluctantly. You will pardon me for this seeming intrusion on your privacy.

With the highest regard, I am, very respectfully,

JOHN KELLY.

In the morning, at about 10 or 11 o'clock, I was called into the parlor, and found no one there but this Mr. Jones, who said that Captain Kelly was too sick to come; that he was quite overcome with anxiety and excitement, and unable to accompany him. I had noticed that Captain Kelly's manner the evening before was much troubled and embarrassed, which gave me the idea that his story was true, from the appearance of gloom and trouble and awkwardness which he presented. He was rather a stout person, wearing a gray coat with black buttons. It was a dark evening, and the room was curtained, so that I could not observe his appearance accurately. Mr. Jones apologized this morning, and said that Captain Kelly was too sick to come, but that he had brought his petition with him. I took it and read it. It was written correctly, and in brief form. I remarked that the certificate of the oath of allegiance was not with it. Mr. Jones said that Captain Kelly would bring it himself that evening, but that he hoped I would go to the White House that morning and see what could be done about it. I told him I would do so with pleasure. He then took from his pocket a pocketbook, laid it on a little table, and took from it some notes which he also laid on the table, saying, "Captain Kelly insisted on my bringing this $100 as a present to you, which he hopes you will receive as a return for your kindness." I said, "Mr. Jones, why did you bring that money, when you knew I had positively declined to receive any money for a mere act of kindness?" He said he thought I was over particular in the matter. I said he should return the money to Captain Kelly. He said, "I must leave it with you now, because I am on my way to the Baltimore depôt; and if I were to go to Willard's I would lose the train; but you can give it yourself to Captain Kelly when he calls this evening, unless you keep it, which would be more sensible." I said, "Mr. Jones, you force me into a very unpleasant position. I do not wish to keep that money even for that time. Cannot you give it to him when you get back to this city." He said, "No; my business will probably detain me in New York for some time, and Captain Kelly will probably leave the city before my return." He then handed me a note from Captain Kelly, which I have now in my pocket, and which I will read. It is as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 8, 1865.

Mrs. Colonel WASHINGTON:

DEAR MADAM: I have just seen Mr. Jones, who tells me that he saw you last evening. As I am not feeling very well, he has agreed to take my papers to you, and I also send by him one hundred dollars, for which you will please send me a receipt, in case of accident. Mr. Jones is a lawyer, and may be all right, but I prefer that he bring me a receipt for the funds.

Trusting that you will succeed by Thursday evening, and will be able to say to me, "You are free," until then I have the honor to remain, very respectfully,

JOHN KELLY.

After handing me this paper asking a receipt, I got the ink to give the receipt, and was about to write a simple receipt for a hundred dollars from Mr. Jones, when he took from his pocket a paper, and said, "As I am in a hurry, I have written a receipt which needs only your signature." Without reading it, I signed the paper, and was about to take it from the table to read it, when he hastily took it from the table and said, "I must be off, or else I will lose the train; it is all right; good morning;" and he left. After he left, I came to Washington with my husband, and went down the avenue to attend to some little shopping. The morning passed away, and as I was coming out of some store I saw a person in the street who I thought was the man that called himself Kelly. I was about to speak to him, but then I thought that as I had only seen him once, and that indistinctly in a dark room, I might be mistaken, and I did not do so. I remarked to my husband that I believed that was Kelly, but that I was not certain. He said that he did not like his looks; that he looked very common, or something of that sort. I went to the Executive mansion. Colonel Washington said he did not care to wait there for me, and would call on a friend while I was at the White House; that he would come back for me in half an hour, but that if I concluded sooner, and wished to return to Georgetown, I should not wait for him. As I got to the door of the White House the attendant told me that the reception was over for the day. Just as I was turning from the door the late Colonel Browning, who was then private secretary, came out and said, "Is there anything I can do for you, Mrs. Washington?" I said, "Yes, Colonel; I am very sorry having missed being here this morning on account of a case which I have undertaken for a poor fellow, (mentioning the circumstances to him.) I promised him to see the President to-day, or some other officer, and find out if there is any difficulty in his case. He seems in a great state of suspense and trouble. He is coming to see me this evening, and I should like to be able to relieve his mind." Colonel Browning said, "I have just left the President in his office, and I will go up and see if you cannot see him, although it is a little after hours." He went up stairs, and returned in a few minutes and said the President would see me. He walked with me up stairs. I saw the President, showed him the petition, and stated the case to him in a few words. He said, smilingly, "You are always helping some poor rebels," or some remark like that. I had been to him to obtain pardons for my father, brother, and one or two cousins. I told him the case. He said there was no difficulty; that it was a simple case, and only needed the certificate of his oath of allegiance, and that as soon as it was carried to the Attorney General, with the oath appended to it, there would be no difficulty, and he could sign the pardon with perfect propriety. I left, and returned to Georgetown. Captain Kelly did not call in the evening, and I heard nothing from him. Colonel Washington went to Alexandria on business next day, and I came alone to Washington about 2 o'clock. I had been waiting for Captain Kelly all the morning, and he not appearing, I came to Washington, went to the Attorney General's office, and asked the chief clerk if he knew a lawyer by the name of Jones, from Kentucky, who had been here getting pardons for persons out there. He said he did not. It was then growing late, and I returned to Georgetown to consult my husband. He did not return until late in the evening, and in the mean time I wrote a note to Captain Kelly stating that I returned him his papers, and held the money for him. I intended to ask Colonel Washington to leave it for Kelly, at Willard's hotel, next morning. In the morning we came to Washington together. I did not desire to go to Willard's with him, it being a public place, nor did I wish to stand in the street while he was in the hotel; so we called at the office of Messrs. Johnston & Ward, 251 F street. Judge Johnston had been my legal adviser for more than a year. General Ward, his partner, is now United States district attorney at Cincinnati. I mentioned the circumstance to them, stating that I was very unpleasantly situated in reference to the matter, and showing them the letter I had written. General Ward suggested that I had better write another note, wording it so as to induce him to call for the money. He said he believed he was a rascal, and that he would certainly have him arrested and have the matter investigated. I wrote the note, and General Ward took it to Willard's and inquired whether John Kelly was stopping there. They said no; there was no such name on the books. I left the papers and a check for the money with them. A considerable time elapsed, and I heard nothing of it. The money was not called for, and Judge Johnston returned it to me with the letters, which I have here now, and a copy of my own note endorsed by General Ward. The money I used for charitable purposes. This, gentlemen, is all I can state in reference to the matter—it is the whole story. The letter which I wrote is as follows:

GEORGETOWN, November 10.

Mr. JOHN KELLY: Your papers are returned, as they required the endorsement of the Governor of your State and a certified copy of your oath of allegiance to place them in the proper order for official action. Whenever they receive the required endorsement, accompanied by the record of your oath of allegiance, you can see me again in reference to your case, which my sympathy with a southern man in trouble induced me so unwillingly to undertake. Fully appreciating your gentlemanly feeling in the present of $100, received through Mr. Jones, with thanks for the kind intention, I shall hold it subject to your order until the papers are properly prepared.

Respectfully, &c., E. B. WASHINGTON.

Endorsed: Copy of letter to John Kelly, by Mrs. E. B. Washington. Examined by me and found to be correct.

NOVEMBER 10, 1865. DURBIN WARD.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you know what the contents of the paper were which you signed?

A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You did not know whether it was a receipt or a written contract?

A. He said it was a receipt when he handed it to me. As soon as it was signed he took it up hastily, saying that he was in a hurry to get to the department.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you afterwards learn who John Kelly was?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever see Lafayette C. Baker?

A. No, sir; I have never seen him to know him.

Q. You are not aware whether he was John Kelly or not?

A. No, sir, I am not. I could tell if he were in my presence. I think I recollect Kelly's appearance sufficiently to distinguish him.

Q. Who was in your company when you went to the Executive mansion with your application?

A. No one.

Q. Did you see Kelly at the Executive mansion at any time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then, of course, you made no statement to him there?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. You have never seen him since?

A. I have never seen him since. On one occasion General Ward and myself going down the avenue, I met the man calling himself Jones, and said to General Ward, "that is the man calling himself Jones." He said, "Ah, I know that rascal; he is a detective"—or something to that effect. "No wonder he put his head down and would not look me in the face when you were walking with me." But I thought it better at that time, knowing how unpleasant it is for a lady to have newspaper notoriety, to keep the matter quiet, and not take any action unless this man called for the money.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did Mr. Ward say who that person was?

A. He said he recognized him as one of Baker's men, I think, or a detective.

Q. Did he state whether he knew his name?

A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Is that the only case in which money was offered to you, or received by you, for procuring a pardon?

A. It is.

Q. Have you applied for pardons in any other cases than those of your relatives or immediate friends?

A. No, sir.

Q. How many pardons have you obtained altogether?

A. I presented four applications to the President personally. They were in behalf of my husband, step-son, and two others. In the two last-named applications the gentlemen interested in them accompanied me—one of them, my cousin, Lieutenant Colonel Lewis, and the other a young friend from Baltimore, George C. Jenkins. I presented only those four applications, and obtained those four pardons. I obtained two other pardons for which I did not make application—one for my father, and the other for my brother-in-law. Those gentlemen had sent their applications, recommended by the Governor of Virginia. The applications had been recorded in the Attorney General's office and sent to the President in due form. The pardons had been granted in due course, but not having any one to look after them, they were lying in the State Department. They wrote to me to get the certificates of pardon and send them on. I got Colonel Long to get them for me and forward them. I had nothing to do with those pardons except simply to get the officer to find them and to send them on.

Q. Were the four applications presented by you at the same time?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were all the pardons that you obtained pardons for your relatives with one exception?

A. All, with the exception of one for this young Baltimore gentleman, and he was a personal friend of mine.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Have you now stated all the cases of pardons with which you have had any connection in the way of applying to the President for their issue?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen, in the newspapers, an article copied from a book recently published by L. C. Baker, with reference to your connection with the pardon business?

A. I saw it the day I came to Washington, after being summoned to appear before this Committee. I saw it in the Baltimore American. I had no suspicion but that that matter of Kelly's was an honest transaction, and that I was dealing sincerely and honestly in it.

(The Washington Chronicle of Wednesday, 22d May, containing an extract from General Baker's book, was here handed to the witness, who examined it and said it was a similar extract to that which she had read in the Baltimore American.)

Q. Please state, from your examination of that article, what portion of it is true, and what portion of it is false, so far as it relates to yourself and your action.

A. This portion of it is false: "Mrs. Washington informed Captain Hine she would procure his pardon that night." I received company that evening and did not leave my house after seeing those parties. He says: "He paid $100 to Mrs. Washington and took the following receipt that evening." That is false. He speaks as if the whole of that transaction took place that evening. The whole of it did not take place that evening.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You did not know that you were dealing with Captain Hine at all?

A. No, sir. I thought I was dealing with Captain Kelly. He says in this article: "This pardon, however, was not procured, because on the following morning Mrs. Cobb's case became noised about." I had not heard of Mrs. Cobb's case at the time.

Q. Is the reason stated there for your not complying true?

A. It is utterly false. I never remember to have heard of such party at that time, nor of any such thing as a pardon broker. I had heard that it was objected to very seriously that an act of Executive clemency should be made a money business. I had heard of pardons being obtained for money, but I knew of no parties who had ever obtained them. I never heard any noise of any such proceeding against Mrs. Cobb, and was not alarmed into declining to comply with my promise. I believe that is all there is in the case in reference to myself.

Q. Is that article false in every particular where it differs from any facts which you have stated to the Committee?

A. It is. The statement by Mrs. Cobb that I was among her acquaintances is utterly false. I never remember to have seen her except once, when I noticed her at the Attorney General's office, and inquired who she was; nor have I known such a person.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Where was your residence at the time the war commenced?

A. I was living then in Virginia—in the now-called State of West Virginia.

Q. You say you were boarding at Georgetown in October, 1865?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Why were you living there?

A. Because there was a friend of ours keeping a boarding-house there with whom we preferred to be—a lady whose family was connected with friends of ours in the Valley.

Q. Why did you leave the Valley at the beginning of the war?

A. In consequence of my health and my being entirely alone. My husband was then on the staff of General Joseph E. Johnston. I had been only married a few months, and was there in an unprotected position and in extremely delicate health. I lived within five miles of Harper's Ferry, on the Winchester and Potomac railroad.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Who is the lady with whom you were living in Georgetown?

A. Miss English, an unmarried lady.

Q. Is this statement from the article to which your attention has been called true so far as you are concerned: "I went to Georgetown and made a written contract with Mrs. Washington, wife of Colonel Lewis Washington; she got into a carriage, came to the President's House, went up stairs, came down in a few minutes and said it was all right?" &c.

A. It is entirely false. I never got into any carriage on the occasion, nor came into the city with any such party, nor said any such thing, or made such contract with him.

Q. Did you meet any person on the occasion when you spoke to the President about the pardon, to whom you made an excuse that you must go to Miss English's at once, as you had a party that evening?

A. No, sir; the party had taken place the night before. I should have mentioned that, as I came from the White House, I saw Jones standing near the door. He came up to me and said, "How have you succeeded?" I said, "Why did you not go on the train this morning?" He said, "I missed my train, but I am going to-night." I told him I would get the pardon; that the President would sign it when the oath of allegiance was attached to the paper and duly recorded at the Attorney General's. He stated that Kelly would call in the evening with the papers in proper form. I was surprised to see him, supposing he had gone away that morning.

Q. When this matter was under consideration by you, had you heard of the arrest of Mrs. Cobb?

A. No, sir; not at all.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. In the article to which I have called your attention I find the following receipt: "Washington, D. C., received from John Kelly one hundred dollars, for his, Kelly's, pardon from the President. E. B. Washington." State whether, on the 5th November, 1865, you executed that receipt?

A. No, sir; it was not on the 5th, I am positive. It is my impression that it was on the 8th, but I will not be positive. It strikes me that the 6th of November was Monday, the 7th Tuesday, and the 8th, the day after my party, was Wednesday, when I signed the paper.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. That receipt is the paper which you say you did not know the contents of at the time you signed it?

A. Yes, sir; I have stated the circumstances as to the hasty manner in which the paper was presented and removed. The hurry in which the man seemed to be induced me to sign it in that careless manner, not suspecting anything at all. I was perfectly innocent in the matter, and never suspected for a moment that I was doing anything wrong.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was any of your husband's property confiscated by the government for his participation in the rebellion?

A. I do not know whether you would call it confiscated. It was in the hands of the government and released by the agents of the Treasury Department to a party who had been left there as our agent when I left home.

Q. Was any of your personal property taken—your movable goods?

A. All taken.

Q. Did you prefer a claim against the government on that ground?

A. I did; my husband being absent in Europe.

Q. What was the claim?

A. I made an application to the government for the return of my personal property and real estate. The estate was occupied by this tenant as the representative of the government under a lease which terminated, I think, on the 1st of March, 1866.

Q. At what time was it restored?

A. About the latter part of September, 1865—just the time we came to Georgetown. It was in reference to that matter we were here. This was before the expiration of the lease. Our object was to make some compromise with the tenant and to return home soon, and to endeavor to regain the small remnant of our household furniture that was in Alexandria.

Q. Did you effect that compromise with the tenant?

A. Yes, sir; he gave up the place to us in December.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you make application to the President personally?

A. I did, being advised to do so by General Hancock.

Q. Did the President give you any order on your application?

A. He simply ordered a military investigation of the case. I was advised by General Ord, to whom I applied in Richmond, to take the oath of allegiance. I went before General Patrick and took the oath, and he gave me a letter of introduction to General Hancock, who had been in command of the military district in which my house is situated. When I returned to the Valley I found General Hancock had been relieved and was in command of the department here. On presenting the letter of introduction to General Hancock, I was advised to apply to the President of the United States.

Q. State whether you preferred any claim against the government for your furniture, pictures, or other property destroyed by the troops?

A. I did. I applied for the restoration of all my property.

Q. Did you receive any money by way of indemnity for property destroyed?

A. I received $1,200, the proceeds of a sale of our furniture in Alexandria—furniture worth perhaps $15,000, and which was sold without orders from the Treasury Department.

Q. Who made that sale?

A. It was made, I think, by the order of Major Silvey, who was a quartermaster or agent in Alexandria.

Q. How was the money paid to you?

A. It was paid to Colonel Washington by the assistant Solicitor of the Treasury Department, Mr. Risley.

Q. By whom were you referred to Mr. Risley?

A. I was referred to him by Mr. Chandler, the assistant Secretary.

Q. Had you any conversation with the President, or with Mr. McCulloch, about the restoration of the money?

A. I had none with the President. To the Secretary of the Treasury I said that I needed money very much, and thought I ought to be paid, or some remark to that effect.

Q. Did he say he would order its payment to you?

A. I think he seemed to fear, or rather to think, I would not be able to obtain it.

Q. The whole amount received by you was only $1,200?

A. Only $1,200 for property that was worth $15,000.

Q. Did that embrace any pictures that were destroyed, or were you paid anything additional for them?

A. No, sir; the only pictures that were here we recovered.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Had you any relics of the Washington family?

A. Yes; some very valuable ones.

Q. What became of them?

A. They were carried by Major Silvey to Secretary Chase, and by him placed in the Patent Office. They were restored to us by the Secretary of the Interior, on application and on a statement of the circumstances.

Q. Who was the Secretary of the Interior at that time?

A. Hon. James Harlan. I made an application to him personally.

Q. Did you recover all of those relics or heirlooms?

A. No, sir; two or three of them were never heard of. These were a cane made from a tree which grew near the tomb of Washington, and which was cut down or injured (the cane was given to my husband by his relative, Colonel J. A. Washington, who was killed during the war); a little mother-of-pearl box (I do not know for what purpose it was used); and a scrap-book, containing one or two letters of General Washington, and other valuable documents. I have heard of the cane, but have not recovered it.

Q. Do you recollect anything else that you have not recovered?

A. I have not so accurate a recollection of these relics as Colonel Washington, and cannot say what articles, if any, are missing.

Q. Has your real estate been delivered back to you?

A. Yes. General Howard's signature to the release is on file in the Treasury Department.

Q. When was that?

A. In December, 1865, I think.

Q. Did you ever abandon that property?

A. It was never abandoned. When we left it we left a tenant in possession who had been known before the war as our overseer and manager, but who was more a confidential agent than manager. The Colonel left him full discretion to do as he pleased with it.

Q. Did you remain on the property during the war?

A. I left there in August, 1861; I was compelled to leave on account of my health. I left it in the hands of this overseer as tenant. The farm contains between 400 and 500 acres. It was afterwards leased to him by the agent of the Treasury Department, and we received it back from the tenant through the Freedmen's Bureau and Treasury Department.

Q. Your husband was absent in the rebel army?

A. He was for a short space of time, but his health compelled him to leave. He was with General Johnston till after the first battle of Manassas. He was not commissioned by the government, but was simply requested by General Johnston to act as his aid. He was at that time past the conscription age, and was not compelled to enter the army. I accompanied my husband to Richmond.

Q. He was at the headquarters of General Johnston?

A. He was an aid of his, and with him most of the time; but he was frequently at home, and passing backward and forward.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was the federal army in your neighborhood while you were there?

A. Yes. General Patterson's army passed through Charlestown and down the turnpike just by our farm. I was in the Valley at the time. It was only my extremely delicate health, and my unprotected condition there, which forced me to leave home.

Q. Did you have opportunities, or occasion, to render any assistance to the federal soldiers?

A Very frequently, at my father's house, near Richmond.

Q. And you did so?

A. I did so; the color of their coats made no difference with me, when they were wounded men. I had as many a fervent "God bless you" from Union soldiers as from rebel. My father's house was near the White House, just in the lines of the most active portion of hostilities.

Q. You had often occasion to administer to the wants of the suffering?

A. Many a time there were sick and wounded in the house and yard and lying on our porch.

Q. You never refused what aid you could render to Union soldiers?

A. Never, sir.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, May 28, 1867.

HUGH MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury, sworn and examined:

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Have any persons been appointed to office in the southern States since the close of the rebellion, and been allowed to enter on the duties of their offices, without taking what is commonly called the test oath?

A. A number of persons have been appointed to office in the southern States who were unable to take the test oath of 1862.

Q. State to the Committee, without further interrogation, the circumstances of their appointment, &c.

A. In reply to a resolution of the Senate, dated December 13, 1865, calling for information on the subject, I addressed to the Senate a reply, which is to be found in executive document No. 3, 39th Congress, 1st session. As I stated the facts as they occurred concisely at the time, I would like to make that reply a part of my testimony in this case.

The paper referred to was read by the witness, and is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of the following preamble and resolution, passed by the Senate on the 13th instant, viz.:

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
December 13, 1865.

Whereas, it is provided by act of Congress that every person in the civil, military, or naval departments of the public service, excepting the President of the United States, shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, and before being entitled to any of the salary or other emoluments thereof, take and subscribe a certain oath, in prescribed form; and it is further provided in another act of Congress (February 9, 1863, chapter 25, section 2,) that "no money shall be paid from the treasury of the United States to any person acting as an officer, civil, military, or naval, as salary in any office, which office is not authorized by some previously existing law, unless where such office shall subsequently be sanctioned by law;" and

Whereas, it is reported that, notwithstanding these acts of Congress, certain persons have been allowed to enter upon the duties of office, and to receive the salary and emoluments thereof, without taking the prescribed oath, and certain other persons have been appointed to offices 'not authorized by any previously existing law': Therefore,

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War be requested, so far as the records of their respective departments allow, to inform the Senate whether any persons have been permitted to enter upon the duties of office, and to receive the salary and emoluments thereof, without taking the oath prescribed by Congress; or, if they have taken it, adding thereto explanations; and also whether persons have been appointed to any office "not authorized by some previously existing law"; and if any persons have been so permitted or appointed, then to report if the same have received any salary or emoluments, and what they were, and out of what fund they have been paid, with the reasons for such permission or appointment, and also the explanations, if any, assigned by such parties at the time of taking such prescribed oath.

Attest: J. W. FORNEY, Secretary.

In reply, I have to say that the records of this department do not show that persons have been appointed to any office not authorized by some existing law; but they do show that some persons have been, in the recently insurgent States, appointed officers under the customs and internal revenue laws, and are still holding their offices, without having taken and subscribed the oath referred to in the resolution of the Senate; but, with a single exception, no salaries have been paid to them up to the present date.

The accompanying reports from the Commissioners of Customs and of Internal Revenue exhibit the names of such persons, and the form of oath subscribed by each, together with such explanations as will give to the Senate the necessary information upon the subject.

Upon the surrender of the confederate armies, it was regarded by the President and his Cabinet as a matter of great importance that revenue offices should be established in the southern States, in order that commerce and trade might be resumed, and the authority of the government in one of its most important branches should be again recognized in all parts of the Union with as little delay as practicable. It was also regarded as a matter of scarcely less importance that citizens of the respective States in which offices were located, and not strangers, should be appointed revenue officers. In carrying into effect these views it became necessary to call into requisition the services of some southern men who had participated in the rebellion. None, however, have been appointed to office, or permitted to hold office under the law for the collection of the revenues, who are known to have instigated the rebellion, or who could properly be considered as justly responsible for it. It has been my purpose to recommend the appointment, and to sanction the appointment, of such only as could take the oath literally; and failing to be able to find such persons, to confine the appointment to those who gave no aid to the rebellion until the government of the United States had failed to give them the protection to which they were entitled; and there was no government but rebel government (State and confederate) to which they could look for safety or support in the perilous circumstances in which, without any previous action of their own, they had been forced. It is believed that very few persons not belonging to one or the other of these classes are holding positions under this department.

In most of the southern States nearly every man of the character and intelligence necessary to qualify him for a position as a revenue officer, some time during the progress of the war, either engaged in hostilities against the government of the United States, or held (willingly or unwillingly) office under rebel authority. Hence it has been necessary, as before stated, to employ in a few important but not very remunerative positions, in most of the subordinate ones, men of this class, especially as the salary and emoluments of the offices were generally too small to induce northern men to accept them. Even if the offices were desirable to any but residents, I have not supposed that it would be the policy of Congress to subject the people of the South to the humiliation, or the revenue system to the odium, which would be the result of employing northern men to collect federal taxes in the southern States; and I have not doubted that Congress would so modify the oath that this department would be sustained in employing in the collecting of the revenues those who, by circumstances which they could not control, had been forced into the rebellion, but of whose present loyalty there is no question.

I would therefore respectfully suggest, in view of the facts thus presented, that immediate action upon this subject by Congress is absolutely necessary.

The accounts of officers who have not taken the qualifying oath have not been audited, and valuable services are being rendered by them, for which they are receiving no compensation. Very great inconvenience is already experienced, and grievous complaints are being made by some of our best officers, on account of the non-payment of their subordinates; and I deem it to be my duty to say that, without a modification of the oath, the revenue system cannot be safely or properly administered in many districts of the southern States.

HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. PRESIDENT of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of Commissioner of Customs, December 11, 1865.

SIR: As requested, I have the honor herewith to furnish you with such information, called for by resolution offered by Mr. Sumner, and passed by the Senate, in regard to officers who have not taken the oath prescribed by the act of July 2, 1862, as exists in this office. Most of the officers of customs, or connected therewith, appointed since the adjournment of Congress on the 4th of March last, have taken the oath prescribed by the above-mentioned act; some of them, however, have not: but in most cases where it has not been taken entire, it has been varied by more or less being stricken out or omitted, according to the feelings or circumstances of the appointee. In some cases, instead of the oath prescribed by the act above mentioned, they have taken an oath called the "proclamation oath," which is hereto annexed as taken, together with other oaths taken.

The following persons have taken the oath prescribed by the act referred to, more or less of which they have stricken out, (copies of which are hereunto annexed,) to wit:

James M. Matthews, collector, Tappahannock, Virginia.
William S. Croft, collector, Georgetown, South Carolina.
Gordon Forbes, surveyor, Yeocomico, Virginia.
William Y. Leitch, surveyor, Charleston, South Carolina.
F. M. Robertson, special examiner of drugs, Charleston, South Carolina.
Edgar M. Lazarus, appraiser, Charleston, South Carolina.
J. F. W. Walter, appraiser, Charleston, South Carolina.

The proclamation oath, instead of the oath of act of July 2, 1862, was taken by—

M. J. Farrast, inspector, Mobile, Alabama.

The appointees named below have taken the oath of office, but have not taken the oath required by act of July 2, 1862:

Richard W. Woodbridge, deputy collector, Savannah, Georgia.
Zachariah N. Winkler, clerk, Savannah, Georgia.
Octave Aubert, clerk, Brownsville, Texas.
Ernest Tasset, book-keeper, Brownsville, Texas.
Fortune Jones, messenger, Brownsville, Texas.
Edmund Daly, inspector, Brownsville, Texas.
Francis Reast, deputy collector and inspector, Boston, Texas.
Joseph Backus, mounted inspector, Saluria, Texas.
James McCoppen, deputy collector pro tempore, Saluria, Texas.
Thomas P. McManus, deputy collector, pro tempore, Eagle Pass, Texas.
James Coffee, deputy collector pro tempore, Saluria, Texas.

The person last named, in his oath of office, which is a written one, omits the clause "I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States."

The collector at Brownsville, in his letter transmitting the oaths of some of his appointees, states that the only forms he could procure there were those which did not contain the oath of July 2, 1862. The collector of Saluria district, Texas, states that it is difficult for him to find suitable employés in his district who can take that oath. Where the oath has not been taken, the collectors have been notified by communications of the tenor of the letter annexed that such appointees were entitled to no compensation until they had taken the oath.

No oaths, either of office or of allegiance, have been received from the following named persons. Probably in most of the cases the oaths may have been taken, but they have not been forwarded by the collectors. They have been notified to transmit them to this office without delay.

William B. C. Duryee, deputy collector, Fernandina, Florida.
Benjamin Clark, porter, Fernandina, Florida.
William H. Sweetser, temporary inspector, Beaufort, North Carolina.
James H. Taylor, temporary inspector, Beaufort, North Carolina.
George P. Thayer, clerk, Nashville, Tennessee.
James B. Murtagh, deputy weigher, New Orleans, Louisiana.
John H. Ball, aid to revenue, New Orleans, Louisiana.
Joshua H. Dailey, inspector, Hatteras inlet, North Carolina.
Albert Bingham, chief clerk, Port Royal, South Carolina.
Walter F. Bingham, temporary clerk, Port Royal, South Carolina.
Thomas M. Gardner, temporary inspector, Wilmington, North Carolina.
H. D. Gilbert, temporary inspector, Wilmington, North Carolina.
William G. Burch, temporary inspector, Wilmington, North Carolina.
Thomas B. Smith, weigher and gauger, Wilmington, North Carolina.
John H. Wood, porter, Charleston, South Carolina.
Squire Summers, porter, Memphis, Tennessee.
E. Murray, inspector, weigher, &c., Mobile, Alabama.
Edmund K. Lowd, deputy collector, New Smyrna, Florida.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. SARGENT, Commissioner.

Hon. H. McCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

Q. You may explain to the Committee now in relation to the one person who got the salary?

* A. I do not recollect the circumstances, but I understood that in one of the departments an account had been audited in favor of a man who had failed to take the necessary oath. It was not discovered that he had failed to take the oath until after the account had been audited and the amount paid to him. I do not recollect who he was, or exactly under what circumstances he was paid. The mistake was made in one of the accounting offices—either in the office of the Commissioner of Customs, or of the Fifth Auditor or First Comptroller. Previously to the adoption of this resolution by the Senate, and the answer which was given to it, I had communicated to members of the Senate and of the House the awkward position in which we were placed in reference to those appointments, and as soon as the resolution was adopted, it was immediately replied to, in order that Congress might be put in possession of all the facts touching the case.

Q. Were those appointments made by the President?

A. The principal appointments are Presidential appointments. They were made by the President on the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury. I desire to state that this was considered a matter of so grave importance that, before any action was taken upon the subject of filling revenue offices at the South, it was a matter of Cabinet consultation; and, after a full and careful deliberation, it was agreed—as I recollect, unanimously—that, as it was important for the government that we should establish our revenue offices without delay, the Secretary of the Treasury would be justifiable in doing the best he could in regard to appointments, under the peculiar circumstances of the country.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. In appointing men who could not take the test oath?

A. In appointing the best men we could find, and running the risk in reference to the oath. It was well understood that it would be difficult, for a time at least, to find competent men at the South who could honestly take the oath.

Q. The President assenting to that?

A. The President did not dissent, and I think he assented to the views of the Cabinet. On this subject, if I recollect right, we were a unit.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When was this Cabinet meeting held to which you refer?

A. I cannot name the time. It was the subject of conference at one or two meetings. It was pretty soon after the collapse of the rebellion—early in 1865.

Q. What efforts were made by your department, previous to that decision to which you refer, to ascertain whether men who could take the test oath could be found at the South?

A. We made no other efforts than to inquire of the men whom we met from the South in reference to the best persons in their neighborhoods to hold the respective offices, and to request that in all cases they would name persons, if they could do so, who were competent and could take the oath. That was about the only means we had of ascertaining.

Q. Can you name any of the persons of whom you made those inquiries as to who the proper men were in their neighborhoods?

A. Some of the persons who were appointed were known to officers of the department. As a general thing, we consulted with the persons who were appointed provisional governors. There happened, however, to be at the department, about the time we were making the appointments, some gentlemen from the South, and we consulted with them. I cannot now recollect what other means were taken, but I know we availed ourselves of all the means within our power of obtaining reliable information in reference to the standing and qualifications of persons appointed.

* See note in testimony given on the 31st of May.

Q. Were not the provisional Governors, to whom you referred, men who generally had been themselves engaged in the rebellion?

A. Some, perhaps the most of them, were.

Q. And the other persons from the South of whom you asked counsel, were they not also persons who for the most part had been active in the rebellion?

A. I cannot recollect definitely as to the persons. I suppose most of the persons we consulted had in some manner participated in the rebellion, because nearly all the men who were at the South had, in the progress of the rebellion, to some extent become aiders and abettors of it.

Q. Has it not since been found practicable to organize and carry on the revenue system in the South by the aid of men who could take the test oath?

A. We are now collecting the revenues there through the agency of men who have taken the oath. Circumstances have changed very much since the time those persons were appointed. A good many men, who were then refugees at the North, have returned, and many northern men have gone into the southern States; and I think it not unlikely that some may have taken the test oath who were not over scrupulous.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Are there any officers on duty now in the southern States who have not taken the test oath?

A. None, that I am aware of.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When did you first come to the conclusion not to appoint any who could not take the test oath, and to remove those who had been previously appointed who could not take the test oath?

A. On the report that was made to the Senate no action was taken by Congress, and nothing was done in reference to the matter until some time in March, 1866, when I addressed a communication to the President on the subject. That communication was referred by the President to Congress. Soon after another communication was made—I think in April—in reply to a resolution of the Senate calling for more specific information than had been given, especially, if I recollect rightly, with reference to the subordinate appointments. About that time (I cannot recollect the precise time) it became pretty clear to my mind that no modification of the oath would be made by Congress, and I felt it then to be my duty to the government and to the officers to take steps to remove all of those who had not taken the oath, and to fill their places with those who could take it.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. You made an effort, then, to do the best you could under the circumstances?

A. That was our aim—to do the best we could. The establishment of the revenue system was for the benefit of the government, and not for the benefit of the people of the South; and therefore I felt we might be, perhaps, justifiable in pursuing a different course in reference to appointment of officers in the revenue service than would be pursued in reference to the appointment of postmasters, as the postal service was regarded as being more for the benefit of the South than for the benefit of the government.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Is it not true that the revenue system, so far as performance of duty by the officials is concerned, has been as well conducted since the change as before?

A. That is a mere matter of opinion. My own opinion is that the revenues are not as well collected as they would have been if the original appointees had been permitted to retain their offices.

Q. Have you any information on that point?

A. I have no specific evidence, but it is my opinion that we should have collected more revenue if we had been permitted to retain the services of the men who were first employed. I wish to state to the Committee that we found comparatively little difficulty in filling the important offices in the commercial cities with men who could take the oath. We were successful in finding collectors of customs for Savannah, and for Charleston, and for Richmond; and, generally, my recollection is that we found no very great difficulty in finding men who could take the oath to fill the leading offices in the most important districts. The difficulty was rather in the interior, and with regard to subordinate offices. Mr. Wiley Woodbridge was appointed collector of customs at Savannah. He advised us that he was unable to find men who could fill the subordinate offices in the custom-house; and his account for salaries paid to some of his subordinates is for this reason still unsettled.

Q. Was Mr. Woodbridge himself unable to take the oath?

A. He was not; he took the oath.

Q. What we call the test oath?

A. He took the test oath. Dr. Mackey, the collector at Charleston, was able to take the oath. A very large proportion of the collectors of customs, and of the collectors and assessors of internal revenue, were able to take the oath, according to my present recollection.

Q. State whether or not, at the Cabinet meeting, it was given as one reason why persons should be appointed who could not take the test oath, that such a course would be calculated to conciliate the South.

A. I cannot recollect what particular reasons were given by the different members. I know that that consideration had no little influence on my own mind. Perhaps I looked at the question too much in a revenue point of view, but it occurred to me that it would advance the interest of the government to have the taxes collected in the South by southern men.

Q. And by men who had been engaged in the rebellion, as being more popular than those who had not participated in it?

A. Not so; but by southern men who could take the oath literally, if possible; at all events, by southern men who were not properly chargeable with being instrumental in bringing about the rebellion.

Q. In this report, made to the Senate in December, 1865, you have given the names of thirty-seven persons appointed in ten States; was it not, at the time those persons were employed, entirely practicable to find that number of persons in those southern States who had been entirely loyal to the government, and who were quite competent for the performance of those duties?

A. It might have been practicable, but we were not advised, at the time, of the existence of such persons in the proper localities.

Q. Had you not agents of the Treasury Department in various portions of the South who would have given information of loyal men if there were any?

A. At the time those appointments were made we had no agents in the interior of the southern States qualified to give us the information required.

Q. But you had agents, had you not, either resident or visiting occasionally at all the chief places in all of those States?

A. We had agents in New Orleans about the time those appointments were made. We were sending agents into the southern States for the collection of captured or abandoned property. Most of them, however, were men from the North, and were not men to whom we should have applied for information in reference to the status of southern men.

Q. Were they not persons who could have obtained information and communicated it to the department?

A. They could probably have obtained such information. I deem it proper to say to the Committee that the probability is we should not have filled the offices, or we should have made greater efforts to find men who could take the oath literally, if we had not expected that the test oath, so far as our revenue offices were concerned, would be somewhat modified by Congress immediately at the commencement of the session.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. This resolution, to which you came in reference to appointing this class of men, was after the breaking down of the rebellion, and before the assemblage of Congress?

A. These appointments were made during the year 1865, and before the meeting of Congress.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. The Cabinet council, as I understand, on this subject, was prior to the appointments?

A. It was before the offices were filled.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You have remarked that there were a good many refugees from the South then in the North, who had since returned, and you assigned that as a reason why there was less difficulty now in finding proper men to fill the offices?

A. I have assigned that as one reason.

Q. I wish to know whether those refugees would not have accepted the appointments before they returned, and whether they did not, in some instances, apply for them?

A. I know of no case where a refugee was an applicant for an office, and was competent to fill it, that he was not appointed.

Q. There were, then, such applications?

A. I think there were some persons who came here asking for office and claiming to have been loyal throughout the rebellion.

Q. Did you make search through the loyal States for men of that description?

A. We made no search, but we made inquiries of such men as were accessible to us in reference to the proper persons to fill the different offices in the respective districts.

Q. You state in one of your reports, as a reason for not sending northern men there, that its tendency would be to humiliate the South?

A. I made a remark something like that in the report which I have read.

Q. You say you entertained the opinion at the time of this consultation, and subsequently, that Congress would modify the law so as to make it conform to the ideas of the Cabinet. What reason had you to entertain such an opinion?

A. Because it seemed to me that it would be eminently wise and proper for Congress to do so.

Q. Do you hold that it is not your duty as an executive officer to take the law of Congress as declared and to obey it?

A. It is my opinion that an executive officer should obey the law literally.

Q. But still you acted on the notion that you had a right to exercise a dispensing power over the law, in the belief that Congress would modify it at the next session in accordance with your views.

A. I expected that Congress would modify the test oath because it seemed to me that the best interests of the country would be subserved by the employment of men who might have participated in the rebellion, but who were at the time of their appointment entirely loyal to the government. It was not my purpose to violate the law. I kept the law as nearly as I could. But I thought that the peculiar circumstances of the country and the necessities of the service would justify me in appointing, and recommending for appointment, men who might not be able to take the oath, and in leaving the whole matter to such action as Congress might take when it should convene, especially as all those officers were advised that they could receive no compensation for their services until they took the oath.

Q. Did it not occur to you that there was a way of evading a violation of the law by calling Congress together to change it?

A. It did not occur to me that a special session of Congress for that purpose would be advisable.

Q. I thought you spoke of it as a matter of very grave importance?

A. I did consider it a matter of too grave importance to be determined by myself.

Q. And therefore you thought a session of Congress was not advisable?

A. I did not regard it as a matter of so grave importance as to justify the President in calling a special session of Congress.

Q. Was there any apprehension that if Congress came together it might run counter to his ideas?

A. None, as far as I know.

Q. Was it not the understanding that all this work was to be done, if practicable, in advance of the session; that these governments were to be set up and ready for presentation to Congress as soon as it convened?

A. My impression is that the President felt it to be his duty to establish civil government in the South, and to relieve the South from military rule just as soon as it could be practicably done.

Q. Would not the short way of dispensing with military rule and setting up national civil rule have been the calling of Congress together?

A. We thought we were establishing civil rule without Congress.

Q. Do you say that those States were not under military rule down to the time of the meeting of Congress?

A. I say only that they had no civil government at the time the Executive undertook to re-establish the government of the United States over them.

Q. Was there any law there but martial law as the predominant law down to the meeting of Congress?

A. That is a question for the judiciary to determine.

Q. I speak about it not as a matter of law but as a matter of fact.

A. We thought we had established civil government in the South.

Q. Were you not still exercising a control over those States, setting aside their laws, preventing their officers elect from taking their commissions, &c.?

A. All I can say on that subject is that I have had no participation myself in setting aside any law of the southern States.

Q. It was the law of Congress only that you would set aside?

A. We considered that the country was in a transition state, that the circumstances were peculiar, that the law was not intended to apply to a condition of things such as then existed, and we merely did in good faith what we believed was best to be done under the circumstances. We may have erred, but if we did, it was an error of judgment only.

Q. If I understand you, then, your opinion was, that in this anomalous transition state, where there was no law, it was the duty of the executive department of the government to supply the law?

A. You put a forced construction on my remark.

Q. The question is whether I am so to understand you?

A. You are not so to understand me. I intend to say nothing of the kind.

Q. Was there any consultation as to the necessity of a convocation of the Congress of the United States in reference to this question?

A. According to my best recollection the subject of convening Congress was never agitated in the Cabinet. We were never advised that there was any desire on the part of the people of any section that there should be a special session of Congress. I at least never heard, while the President was engaged in reorganizing States at the South, that there was any demand on the part of the people of any part of the Union for a special session.

Q. In what shape would you have expected the demand to come, to satisfy you?

A. I suppose it would have reached us through the press, the action of public meetings, or through some other reliable channels.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did brother Williams ever write a letter to any of the Cabinet, to your knowledge, requesting a special session of Congress?

A. I had no correspondence with Mr. Williams. I should have been very happy to have received a communication from him, but he did not favor me.

Q. I ask you whether any leading man, of any party, to your knowledge, wrote to the President, or to any member of the Cabinet, requesting a special session of Congress?

A. Not to my knowledge.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you have an opportunity to see the President's correspondence?

A. I did not have the opportunity of seeing his private correspondence, and yet I was in daily conference with him, and I think he communicated as freely to me as he did to anybody else. I had correspondence with different persons, in different parts of the country, but I never received an intimation from any one that in his judgment the condition of the country required a special session of Congress.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. In making your selections of officers of internal revenue and of customs for the southern States, did you confer with any other men than such as had taken an active part in the rebellion, and could not take the test oath themselves?

A. I conferred with representative men from the South who were at the time in Washington. I do not think I conferred with any one who was an original secessionist. My conference was chiefly with men who, during the course of the rebellion, were drawn into it, as nearly all the people of the South were, sooner or later.

Q. I wish to know whether those representative men you speak of were not men who took a leading and active part in the rebellion, and were on that account regarded as representative men?

A. No. We consulted, for instance, in reference to appointments in Alabama, Governor Parsons, and in reference to the appointments in Mississippi, Judge Sharkey. Neither of them was a secessionist, and yet I think both of them did participate in the rebellion to some extent, and that neither of them could take the oath of 1862.

Q. You mean, by saying that neither of them was a secessionist, that neither of them was so, theoretically, in advance of the rebellion?

A. I mean that neither of them was a secessionist, that both were Union men, and opposed to the rebellion, and yet that both, as I understood, became, after the secession of their States, implicated in the war against the United States, or connected in some way with the so-called confederate government, or the rebel State governments.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. That fact was understood by the President and the Cabinet before Judge Sharkey was appointed provisional Governor?

A. I can only speak for myself. I had nothing to do with the appointment of Judge Sharkey. I give merely my own opinion of the man.

Q. You knew that before he was appointed provisional Governor?

A. I do not know at what time I became acquainted with the position which Governor Sharkey occupied in reference to the rebellion. I knew that he had been an old line whig, and I understood that he had always been a strong Union man, and was an earnest opponent of secession. To what extent he became connected with the rebellion I have never been advised; but I do believe that neither he nor Governor Parsons were ever regarded as leading men in the cause of rebellion, but the reverse.

Q. That is, that, after they joined it, they took no prominent part?

A. I have no reason to suppose they ever took a prominent part, but I do suppose they took such part in the rebellion as would prevent them, as honorable men, from taking the oath.

Q. Had not Sharkey been Governor of Mississippi during the rebellion?

A. I do not know.

Q. And Parsons, Governor of Alabama?

A. I do not know. I think Governor Parsons said to me that he went into the rebel legislature of Alabama, with many others, for the purpose of bringing that State back into the Union.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State the motive which controlled yourself, and, so far as you know, the President, in making the appointments that have been referred to; state also the reasons you have for believing that such motive controlled the President?

A. I can only answer for myself. I acted according to the dictates of my best judgment. I thought it was necessary for us to establish the revenue system in the southern States without delay, and that it was proper for me to use the best men for the purpose that I could find. I had no intention to disregard the law, but only a sincere desire to promote, according to my judgment, the best interests of the service and of the government. I have no reason to believe that the President or any member of the Cabinet was influenced by any other motives than those that governed me.

Q. Still, were you not aware at the time that such appointments were a violation of the act of Congress?

A. The law was before us. I knew that every man appointed to office was required to take the oath before entering on the discharge of the duties of his office. The penalty, it seemed to me, was a forfeiture of pay. Still, I felt that such appointments under ordinary circumstances would be improper, and a violation of law. But I thought that the peculiar condition of the country would justify the appointments. I recommended them in good faith, expecting that Congress would take the matter in charge, and so dispose of the appointments or so modify the oath as would relieve the department of all responsibility in the matter.

Q. Can you give any reason why Congress was not informed of that action until the Senate called for information by resolution?

A. I have no other reason to give than this, that the action of the Treasury Department and of thePost Office Department in reference to appointments to southern offices was, as we understood, known to Congress without any formal communications. I had myself frequent conversations with leading men on the subject. No communication was made to Congress, because I thought it was generally understood that such appointments had been made, and it was expected that Congress would take some action in the matter without a formal communication.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State, in this connection, to what member of Congress you ever made any such communication.

A. I cannot recollect definitely with whom I conferred. I think I did speak once or twice to Mr. Fessenden on the subject; and, without being able to give names, my impression is that I spoke to perhaps a dozen others, explaining fully the course which had been taken by the Secretary of the Treasury. I wish to say that, after Congress had failed to take action on the report which I made in December, after waiting for some action and none being had, in March I addressed a communication to the President on the subject, and that communication was referred to Congress. As soon as I understood that Congress was hardening, as I deemed it, toward the South, and that there would be no modification of the oath, I took the most prompt measures in my power to have all the occupants who had not taken the oath dismissed from or to resign office, and others appointed in their places.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Have all those men who did not take the oath been paid their salaries?

*A. Not a dollar to my knowledge, with the single exception referred to. Some have been applicants to Congress for relief.

Q. Did not collectors retain their salaries out of money which came into their hands?

A. Under present regulations, and I think under regulations which were then in existence, a collector of internal revenue does not retain his compensation, but is compelled to deposit the entire amount of his receipts, he receiving at the proper time a draft for his commissions, &c.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Be good enough to state whether you paid any money, or whether any money was paid by your order, to Mrs. Washington, or to the rebel colonel Lewis Washington, arising out of the proceeds of personal property claimed to have belonged to him, and sold under the orders of the government.

A. The personal property of Colonel Lewis Washington was taken by the military authorities, brought to Washington, and turned over to an agent of the Treasury Department. From the records of the office I ascertained that Mr. Chase was of the opinion that the furniture which came into the possession of the government should not be sold, but should be carefully boxed up and preserved, with the intention, as it seemed to me, of returning it to the owner. It turned out that, without any direct order from the Treasury Department, as I supposed, the furniture of Colonel Washington was sold at Alexandria at a very large sacrifice. I think the sale was made either by Mr. Risley, or by a man named Silvey. It seemed to me proper and right that furniture, which was not considered a subject of rightful or proper capture, should be restored to the owner; and I thought it no more than right that where a valuable property had been sacrificed without authority of the department, the small amount which had been received should at least be returned to the owner.

Q. How was it repaid?

A. Mr. Risley was the agent for the Treasury Department for that part of Virginia, as I now recollect, and, as such agent, had in his possession certain moneys which had not been covered into the treasury, probably the identical money which had been received from the sale of this furniture. On his recom-

* See note of the Secretary, dated June 3, 1867, accompanying testimony of May 31.

mendation, after giving the subject careful consideration, I deemed it proper and right to return to Colonel Washington the proceeds of the sale of his furniture. And I may say in reference to furniture generally, that where it came into possession of the government, and was, at the close of the rebellion, claimed by loyal persons, or by persons who had taken the amnesty oath, the furniture was restored to them. I did not believe it was proper for this great government to lay its hands on the furniture of private persons, dispose of it, and cover the money in the treasury.

Q. By whom was the amount paid to Mrs. Washington?

A. It was paid to her or to her husband, I presume, by Mr. Risley, and by my authority, although I have no definite recollection on this point. We considered furniture as exceptional property. We never supposed that the government intended to capture anything but cotton, tobacco, and other leading articles that were used by the rebels in their efforts to overthrow the government of the United States. We did not suppose, and never have supposed, that furniture was a legitimate subject of capture.

Q. Do you recollect at what time this property was sold?

A. I do not. I understood that it had been sold, and that the proceeds amounted to some $1,200; and I felt that, as I would have returned the furniture, (as I supposed it was the intention of Mr. Chase that it should be restored,) it was also proper that I should also return the small amount which had been received for it, especially as the property had been unnecessarily sacrificed.

Q. When was the money returned?

A. Some time in the summer of 1865.

Q. Had Colonel Washington been pardoned at that time?

A. I understood he had been. I recollect no instance of property having been returned to persons who have not taken the amnesty oath, or who have not been pardoned by the President.

Q. Can you furnish the papers in the case—the communication of Mr. Risley, or of the agent of the department, and the copy of your order, with the date of sale and the date of payment?

A. I presume I can furnish all the papers in the case. Application was made for the restoration of the real estate, which, at that time, had been leased by an agent of the department, for a return of such of the furniture as remained unsold, and for a return of the money that had been received for that which had been disposed of. According to my recollection the real estate had passed over to the Freedmen's Bureau by operation of law, and the right of the government to it was released by the Commissioner of that bureau.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you know what investigation was made to ascertain whether the money received from the sale of the furniture was actually covered into the treasury?

A. I do not know.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Have not large amounts of furniture been sold from time to time at different places, and the proceeds paid into the treasury?

A. I am not aware that there were any considerable sales of furniture.

Q. Had not the Treasury Department agents in the different States, under the act of Congress, to take possession of and to sell all personal property captured?

A. So far as I know, our agents were employed to collect the property which belonged to the confederate government, but I think it never was the intention of the Secretary of the Treasury, or of any man connected with the government, (I trust it was not,) that household furniture should be the subject of capture, and that it should be sold and the proceeds covered into the treasury.

Some other man than myself would necessarily have been selected to perform that duty if the performance of it had been required.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was not Colonel Washington an officer of the rebel army at the time his furniture was captured?

A. I do not know what position he held. I was not advised that he ever was an officer in the army of the confederacy.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What did you understand to be the value of the property sacrificed out of which this $1,200 was received?

A. My information on that subject was derived from Colonel Washington, or Mrs. Washington. I think they were of the opinion that the furniture was worth some $12,000 or $15,000, and only a very small remnant of it was left unsold.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was Mrs. Washington pardoned?

A. I think not. I never heard of a woman being pardoned. I never heard of any application by a woman for pardon of herself, but there may have been such cases.

By Mr. LAWRENCE

Q. Was the money paid to her or to her husband?

A. I do not recollect whether it was paid to her or to Colonel Washington. He was here at the time, and I presume it was paid to him.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Have you seen a book recently published by L. C. Baker?

A. I have seen the book.

Q. Have you seen any statement in it in which he speaks of appointments having been made in the Treasury Department of men who had been convicted of crime?

A. I sent for the book because I understood it contained a statement of that kind, and I looked through it to ascertain whether such statement was contained in it, but I failed to find it. I did not examine the book very carefully. The statement referred to might have been overlooked by me.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Do you know of the appointment of one John Devlin, who had been imprisoned in the penitentiary?

A. I understand that we appointed one John Devlin, in New York, to some office in the Internal Revenue bureau; but I understand, also, that it was not the same John Devlin who had been convicted by a military commission, but a respectable man. It is possible we may have been deceived in the immense number of appointments which we have been called upon to make. We have doubtless made many mistakes; but we never have appointed a man to office who, to our knowledge, had been convicted of any infamous crime, with, perhaps, one exception in New Hampshire. On the recommendation of General Marston and a number of other very prominent men in New Hampshire we did appoint to a special agency a man who had been convicted of smuggling, but who was supposed to have repented, and to possess such knowledge as would enable the department more efficiently to detect and punish smugglers.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Do you know anything of John Cahill, who was convicted of forging enlistment papers, and who afterwards received an appointment in thePost Office Department?

A. I know nothing of the case. I would say, in reference to those subordinate appointments, that they are made almost entirely on the recommendation of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or of the Commissioner of Customs, and I can, of course, know very little of the characters of the men appointed.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Have you ever appointed to an office, or approved of the appointment to office by one of your subordinates, a person convicted of crime?

A. Never, to my knowledge, with the exception of the case referred to.

Q. Do you know of any case of appointment by the President to any office of any person or persons who had been convicted of crime?

A. I do not. We have doubtless appointed a good many who ought to be convicted for offences committed after their appointment.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. I understand, from the testimony of some witnesses examined here, that the subject of captured and abandoned property was turned over to the Solicitor of the Treasury Department?

A. No, sir; that is not so. The Solicitor of the Treasury has nothing to do with the custody of captured property. The Solicitor of the Treasury is the law officer of the department.

Q. The act of Congress of March 3, 1863, seems to give you jurisdiction over the subject-matter?

A. The duty of the Secretary of the Treasury, under that law, was to take possession of property captured or abandoned, sell it, and cover the proceeds into the treasury. We have at times taken the advice of the Solicitor of the Treasury in reference to our action under the captured and abandoned property acts, but he had no control over such property.

Q. Have you, since the surrender of the rebel armies in the spring of 1865, taken any means to bring about the sale, or to realize the possession of property of that sort comprehended within that act of Congress?

A. A very large duty, and a very uncomfortable duty, has been devolved on the Secretary of the Treasury, of collecting through the southern States property that belonged to the confederate government, and which was property captured by the armies of the United States, or abandoned by the owners.

Q. Have you initiated any proceedings for the recovery or sale of property of this kind?

A. We have collected a large amount of such property, sold the same, and have covered a large portion of the proceeds—all but a small balance—into the treasury.

Q. Did the property of which you speak consist of anything but cotton?

A. Cotton, tobacco, military stores, and some other articles; but the great article has been cotton. It was about the only article that the confederate government dealt largely in, or used for the purpose of maintaining the war against the United States.

Q. Mr. Starbuck, district attorney for North Carolina, states in his testimony that he was referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury on questions of that kind?

A. Very likely, if it was a question arising under the interpretation of the statutes. Such questions were frequently referred to the Solicitor of the Treasury for advice.

Q. He speaks of the Piedmont railroad, which he states to have been built by the confederate government, and says he proposed to initiate proceedings for its condemnation, and that the reason he did not proceed was in consequence of a communication from Mr. Goodloe, United States marshal in North Carolina. It is his impression that Goodloe said it was not the desire of the Secretary of the Treasury—at least that the authorities at Washington did not wish—that any proceedings should be taken in regard to it that time?

A. It was the policy of the government at the time not to interfere with the railroads at the South, except in special cases. I do not recollect the circumstances in reference to this particular road.

Q. There is some evidence in reference to a wharf, warehouse, and other property belonging to the confederate government in the city of Wilmington, against which he proposed to institute proceedings; he says he called on the Solicitor of the Treasury in reference to that case?

A. I do not know anything about it. It was our aim to take possession of all real as well as personal estate that belonged to the confederate government. The Solicitor of the Treasury would have the supervision of all suits commenced under his general directions. I know nothing about that case. I take it for granted that no district attorney would be inclined to commence a suit in the name of the government of the United States without consulting the head of the department particularly interested.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, May 28, 1867.

JOHN F. COYLE sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you ever address a note to Mr. Evans, who was a Senator elect from the proposed State of Colorado, requesting him to call upon Mr. Cooper, formerly private secretary to the President?

A. Never, to my memory.

Q. Look at this note (copied in the testimony of William G. Moore) and state whether you recognize it.

A. Yes, sir; that is my writing. I had forgotten it.

Q. Will you state the circumstances under which it was written?

A. I really cannot, for I do not recollect them at all. I did not know that I ever wrote it.

Q. Did you at or about the same time address a similar note to Chaffee, the other Senator elect?

A. I do not recollect that I did, nor do I recollect this, either; but that is my handwriting. I cannot at this moment recall the circumstances.

Q. Did you have any conversation with the President or Mr. Cooper relative to the admission of Colorado as a State?

A. Not that I recollect. I cannot recollect at this moment what could have induced me to address this note to Mr. Evans.

Q. This note seems to have been written at the time the Colorado bill was before the President awaiting his action on it; does that fact refresh your memory?

A. I assure you I cannot recall it. I did not know that I had ever addressed such a note.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. You could not have written that note without suggestion from some person that it was desired?

A. I should say not. During the period Mr. Cooper was there I was at the White House frequently, and Mr. Cooper may have asked me to write such a note, but I cannot at this moment recall it.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did not Mr. Cooper state to you that he desired to have an interview with Mr. Evans on the subject of the Colorado bill?

A. I cannot recollect any conversation with Mr. Cooper on that subject; but from that note I presume Mr. Cooper must have asked me to write it.

Q. Can you state any reason why Mr. Cooper should ask you to write that note instead of writing it himself?

A. I really cannot.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you know whether the President had anything to do with it?

A. I never had any conversation with the President on the subject.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. May you not have been requested to call upon Mr. Evans, and not finding him in, left that note?

A. That is my impression. It is very hastily written. I had no acquaintance with the gentleman, and consequently put no name to the note.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, May 28, 1867.

JAMES M. SCOVEL, of Camden, New Jersey, sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State whether you have ever had any conversation with the President of the United States with reference to the exercise of the appointing power.

A. I have had some such conversation.

Q. State what was said by the President in that conversation?

A. I have prepared a written statement since I came to Washington, and will read it to the Committee as a part of my testimony:

I am summoned before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives to give evidence in regard to the supposed abuse of the power of the President in regard to patronage in New Jersey. Upon this subject I desire to say, that after the 22d of February speech my feelings were strongly against the policy of the President of the United States; that on the 27th of the same month, I think, (February, 1866,) I made a speech in the senate of New Jersey in which I said, in regard to Andrew Johnson's veto of the Freedmen's Bureau bill, "Infidelity to liberty is a bad investment, wherever made. In vetoing the Freedmen's Bureau bill Andrew Johnson has abandoned justice and trampled upon every principle that elevated him to power." I had no reason to change or modify my opinion expressed in that speech till after the legislature of New Jersey had adjourned.

Being anxious to control the appointments in my congressional district against a very powerful combination inside of my own party bent upon controlling New Jersey, I wrote to Mr. Johnson on the 13th of April, requesting an interview, I think, on the subsequent Friday. In response to that letter I received a reply dated "Executive mansion, Washington, D. C., April 17, 1867," of which the following is an exact copy:

SIR: The President directs me to say, in reply to your note of the 13th instant, that he would be pleased to see you should you call on Friday morning.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

R MORROW,

Brevet Lieutenant Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General

Hon. JAMES M. SCOVEL, Camden, New Jersey.

I called on Friday and was admitted to his excellency's presence. He was in excellent humor, and informed me that he was making a fight not against republican principles, but for republican ideas inside of the republican lines.

Having had something to do in the Baltimore convention with the nomination of Lincoln and Johnson, and having made considerable exertion in 1864 to assist in their election, I was very much inclined to believe Mr. Johnson's statements, the newspapers to the contrary notwithstanding, for the press of the country had villified and abused me most unconscionably for what I thought a manly act, while a member of the New Jersey legislature, and I assured him of my sympathy, but saying that I did not approve of his 22d of February speech, in which Mr. Sumner and Mr. Stevens were denounced as traitors.

In a few days after this I again called at the Executive mansion, with George B. Halstead and Dudley S. Gregory, jr., the latter person a candidate for collector in the fifth district of New Jersey, an office he did not get. It was understood all around that all candidates for office must endorse the President's policy. Among the appointments I requested was that of General Carman as postmaster of Newark, New Jersey. Colonel Cooper, private secretary, who seemed to run the office-giving machine, assured us that there would be no trouble about Mr. Carman, who was an old friend of his in Tennessee. After much trouble, and many delays, General Carman's name was sent to the Senate, and by the Senate confirmed. He told me himself that there was trouble about his commission. At last he received it, but was telegraphed, as nearly as I remember, to return it. General Carman never got the Newark post office, which was finally given to Craven, the biographer of Jefferson Davis. Upon this question General Carman is better authority than myself.

At my request the President endorsed the removal of Joseph A. Porter, deputy collector of Camden. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue requested his removal at the hands of William S. Sharp, collector of the first district of New Jersey. Sharp declined to do it, or to appoint Mr. Ables in Porter's place, though Mr. Rollins endorsed and recommended Ables's appointment, as will appear by Commissioner Rollins's letter to me of May 28, 1866. I learned afterwards that Mr. Rollins privately informed Sharp that he need not remove Porter. It was never done.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did the President, in his conversation with you, say anything more than you have stated?

A. I do not recollect that he did at that interview. It was a distinct understanding all around that no man should be appointed to office unless he endorsed the President's policy.

Q. Did the President say any such thing to you?

A. My recollection is distinct that he did, after saying to me that this fight was a fight inside the republican party.

Q. Just state the words which the President used to you on this subject, in reference to the policy of appointing men to office.

A. I called there in response to this letter, in which he stated that he wished to see me. In conversation with Mr. Johnson I mentioned the fact that I desired to control those appointments in my own district. It was then that he told me that this fight was, on his part, inside of the republican party, and that he would make no appointments other than of men who were inside of that party, and who voted (I think was the expression) for Lincoln and Johnson. That is my recollection of his language.

Q. I wish to know whether you did not get that understanding and knowledge which you had outside of your conversation with the President—did you not infer that from what you knew, outside of his policy?

A. I inferred that much from what Mr. Cooper said; I inferred that much from what the newspapers said; I inferred that much from what the outside world said; and I inferred that much from what the President said to me.

Q. You drew the inference from the words of the President which you have now stated that the President used to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you tell the President that you were in favor of his policy?

A. I never remember telling the President I was in favor of his policy, further than I expressed my dissent to his speech of the 22d of February, but I went on to say that his subsequent speech, which had no offensive allusion to either Mr. Sumner or Mr. Stevens, I had no objection to; after which he informed me that it was a strife within the republican party. Having such a strife within my own district, I very naturally sympathized with him.

Q. The fault you found with his 22d of February speech was that he spoke harshly in it about Mr. Sumner and Mr. Stevens?

A. I of course objected to the use of any such language towards men whom I considered among the most patriotic men of the country; and if he held such sentiments as those, he held sentiments at variance with ninety-nine out of every one hundred persons of the republican party.

Q. Was that the objection you made to the President in regard to his 22d of February speech?

A. Because he stigmatized men who held the opinions of Mr. Stevens and Mr. Sumner as traitors and disunionists.

Q. Did you, to the President, make any other objection to that speech?

A. I do not recollect that I did.

Q. Did you tell him that you agreed with the balance of that speech?

A. I think that I did not.

Q. What other speech of his was it that you told him you did agree with?

A. It was the next public speech that he made after the 22d of February.

Q. You did agree with that speech?

A. Not altogether.

Q. Did you not tell him so?

A. Not altogether.

Q. I understood you to say, in your examination, that you approved of it?

A. No. I said I approved a good portion of it, and that it was not open to the objections to the first speech.

Q. What was in the last speech to which you objected?

A. I objected to what I supposed to be a general sympathy with those opposed to the republican party.

Q. Give us some single thing in that speech to which you objected?

A. I do not recollect.

Q. I want to see how you managed to get the control of appointments in your district?

A. I did not control a great many of them.

Q. Did you tell the President that you approved of his second speech to the Johnson club?

A. Part of it, I did.

Q. Did you tell him you approved the whole of it?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you specify any part of it to which you dissented?

A. Not to my recollection.

Q. Did you not tell him that you approved of that speech?

A. Not all of it.

Q. Did you not say that you did not approve of his 22d of February speech because he denounced Mr. Sumner and Mr. Stevens, but that the speech he made subsequently you did approve of?

A. I do not think I told him so in that language. As near as I recollect, I told him that the second speech was not open to the same objections which would hold against the first speech, in which he denounced men who held the same views as I did as "traitors at the other end of the line."

Q. Did you tell him you agreed with the Johnson policy?

A. Not in specified terms.

Q. Did you in substance?

A. My recollection of that is, that I approved of his fight so far as it was a personal fight, for the republican principles inside of republican lines.

Q. You told him that in that language?

A. As near as I recollect.

Q. Did you tell him that you disagreed with Congress, and did not approve of the course of Congress?

A. So far as personal denunciation of himself was concerned, I think I did.

Q. Well, in principle?

A. No, sir.

Q. Whom did you agree with at that time, Congress or the President?

A. At heart I agreed with Congress.

Q. In head whom did you agree with?

A. I was in what the Methodist preacher denominated "an unenviable state of betweenity," as many other men were at that time.

Q. You were a little unsettled in your political mind at that time?

A. I have not said I was.

Q. You say you were in a state of "betweenity?"

A. Yes, between the President and Congress.

Q. You did not know exactly which you were with?

A. I did know exactly which I was with.

Q. Which were you with?

A. I did not exactly know where he was.

Q. Where were you?

A. As I tell you, I was at heart with Congress. I had hoped, as Secretary Stanton and the Attorney General, and many others hoped, to unite the conflicting interests inside of the republican party, and therefore I took no stand either way.

Q. Whom did you represent to the President that you agreed with?

A. I do not recollect that I said with whom I agreed.

Q. Were you dealing entirely frank with the President, or were you trying to deceive him?

A. I was not trying to deceive him.

Q. Then you dealt perfectly frank with him?

A. That is a hard question to answer—a very hard question.

Q. You can answer it as you please.

A. I must answer that question by saying that, taking the President's statement as he made it to me as the truth, I was inclined to side with the President.

Q. Taking into consideration both his speeches?

A. No, sir, not his first speech.

Q. Had the President backed out of either of his speeches to you?

A. He asked me what I objected to, and I frankly said I objected to his denunciation of those men as "traitors at the other end of the line."

Q. Did he back down on his first speech at all?

A. There is not much back down about him. I do not know that he did.

Q. Did he take back anything that he said in that speech, in order to get your good will?

A. He did not. He is not likely to take back anything.

Q. You rather agreed with the President in the views expressed by him in the 22d of February speech and the other speech?

A. No, sir; the speech of the 22d of February had my unqualified reprobation.

Q. He had made both speeches?

A. He had.

Q. And in view of both those speeches you still agreed with the President, did you not?

A. That is a hard question to answer.

Q. Did you not represent to him that you agreed with him in all these things?

A. Leaving outside of the question his 22d of February speech, and taking his statement to me that he was fighting for republican principles inside of the republican party, I was inclined to side with him.

Q. The principles enunciated in that second speech you agreed with, did you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you not agree with both of those speeches, so far as they enunciated any principles?

A. No, sir; I only submitted to the second speech, and did not find any special objection to it, because I thought I could reconcile it consistently with the republican faith which I possessed.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. To what office was Dr. Craven appointed?

A. To the office of postmaster at Newark.

Q. Was Dr. Craven a man of any public fame in his course during the war either for or against the government?

A. I never heard of him in any other capacity than as Jeff. Davis's physician I always thought it was that which gave him the office.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. In recommending the men whom you got appointed to office, did you recommend them as agreeing with Mr. Johnson?

A. These men had been, as I had been, and expected to be, radicals. We agreed with Mr. Johnson so far as he stated that he was of the same faith as us, but that he was having a personal quarrel for precedence inside of the republican party.

Q. Did you represent those men to Mr. Johnson as agreeing with him in politics?

A. No further than I have just stated.

Q. Was that all the recommendation that you made of them?

A. All that I recollect.

Q. And that was satisfactory to Mr. Johnson?

A. It did not seem to be, for none of them got the offices.

Q. Did you not succeed in getting appointments for them?

A. I believe I got two village postmasters relieved after that, but not one of those appointments was made. The President nominated Brigadier General Carman for the Newark postmastership, and the Senate confirmed, but he was never permitted to use his commission, and the office was given to Dr. Craven.

Q. Was General Carman appointed on your recommendation?

A. Yes, and on Mr. Cooper's saying that he knew him in Tennessee.

Q. Did you recommend him as agreeing with Mr. Johnson's policy?

A. I recommended him as a soldier. All these men—Carman, Gregory, and Halstead—were soldiers.

Q. Then the President did not insist, as you say he did, that they must agree with his policy?

A. I think that was also understood.

Q. Then you recommended those men as agreeing with his policy?

A. I do not know that I did.

Q. Then that was not a sine qua non with Mr. Johnson?

A. The understanding was that it was a sine qua non.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How did the President get the knowledge that these men were to sustain his policy in return for the appointments?

A. One of the candidates was required to state so in writing. I think Gregory so stated in writing.

Q. What did he state?

A. He stated that he sustained Mr. Johnson's policy.

Q. How did the President acquire a knowledge of that fact in reference to the others?

A. I think it very likely that Mr. Carman told Mr. Cooper so. They were in confidential relations, having known each other in Tennessee.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did not you recommend him?

A. I also did.

Q. Then Mr. Johnson had the assurance that these men agreed with him in policy?

A. In one way or other he had, either through Colonel Cooper or directly to himself.

Q. Did you write any letters to the President about that time recommending anybody.

A. I think I did.

Q. What person did you recommend by letter?

A. I recommended the appointment of John Smith, who endorsed the President's policy in writing. He never got the appointment he was looking for—collector for the first district of New Jersey.

Q. Did you state in that letter that John Smith agreed with the president in policy?

A. I think I did not, but I am quite confident that Mr. Smith in his letter endorsed the President's policy.

Q. Did you write any other letters to the President at that time?

A. I may have done so. I do not recollect.

Q. Do you recollect any other person whom you recommended?

A. I recommended this General Carman, but not in writing. I recommended Mr. Goldsmith for the postmastership at Camden. His name was sent in by the President, but he was not confirmed by the Senate.

Q. Did you recommend him as being in favor of Mr. Johnson's policy?

A. I think not, but he recommended himself in that way. He had been a soldier, and heartily approved the President's policy.

Q. This other village postmaster whom you recommended, what was his name?

A. His name was Fowler. He was an applicant for a small post office at Haddonfield, New Jersey.

Q. Did you recommend him in writing?

A. I do not think I did. He himself had a letter to the present Postmaster General that he was "sound on the goose."

Q. Did not you endorse those letters?

A. I think not; it was not required of me.

Q. Do you say that you wrote no letters to the President recommending persons to office because they supported his policy?

A. I may have done so, but I do not recollect. I did, in his presence, recommend Smith, who had signed a letter stating that he sustained President Johnson's policy.

Q. You understood that the President had a distinct policy?

A. Yes, but I did not know what it was.

Q. You did not understand it was the policy enunciated in the two speeches to which you have referred?

A. The speeches conflicted with themselves. In the first one he denounced all the men who thought as I did as "traitors at the other end of the line." The second speech contained no such language.

Q. Did he not state his policy in that speech more expressly and emphatically than in the first?

A. If he did, I do not recollect what that policy was.

Q. Then you did not know whether you did agree with the President's policy?

A. I am not right certain that he knew himself what he meant.

Q. Were you right certain that you knew what you meant?

A. No, I was not. Things were much mixed at that time.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say that none of the applicants recommended by you were appointed, save one?

A. General Carman received, after much delay and trouble, his commission; but Mr. Randall telegraphed him to send back his commission, and Jeff. Davis's friend, Dr. Craven, got that place.

Q. I asked you whether there was more than one person who was recommended by you appointed by the President?

A. Carman and Goldsmith were appointed by the President. A postmaster at Cape May and a postmaster at Haddonfield were also appointed.

Q. It was the agreement between you and the President that you should control the President's patronage in your district on condition that you supported the President's policy?

A. It was so distinctly understood.

Q. Now state distinctly how that understanding was brought about.

A. We had conversations with Colonel Cooper; and it is due to the President to say that he generally referred us to Colonel Cooper, who managed this office-giving machine. The conversations were chiefly with him.

Q. State precisely what was said by you and by Mr. Cooper, which resulted in the understanding that you were to control the patronage in your district in return for your support of the President's policy.

A. I do not recollect the exact language that was used, but I do remember most distinctly that, in repeated conversations with Colonel Cooper, that was the understanding—that nobody should be recommended by me that did not support the President's policy. Nor would he appoint anybody that did not support the President's policy; and most of the applicants wrote letters to the effect that they would. I cannot recollect the particular times or the precise language, but I am clear as to the fact.

Q. I want to get to the fact as to when it was demanded that you should agree to support the President's policy, and that, in return for that promise on your part, you were to control the Executive patronage in your district.

A. I do not recollect the terms of any such agreement, nor do I remember the language which Cooper then used. I simply remember that I called upon him in company with the applicants, and that they assured him of their support of the President's policy. My impression is, that the reason why General Carman did not get the position after being confirmed by the Senate was, that it was thought that he was not sound on the President's policy. He never did get hold of his office.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You say now that you did make such an agreement as that with the President and Colonel Cooper, that you were to control the offices in your district on condition that you would sustain the President and his policy?

A. That was the understanding, chiefly with Mr Cooper.

Q. Now tell the Committee what policy of the President you agreed to support.

A. We were assured that the policy of the President was the policy of Abraham Lincoln in regard to restoration, and that Mr. Johnson (he so informed me himself) was carrying out the policy of Mr. Lincoln. What that policy was I do not at this time distinctly remember.

Q. Was that the policy which you agreed to support?

A. That was the policy as I, at that time, understood it.

Q. Were you not supporting that policy before?

A. Yes, what I understood to be that policy.

Q. Did you agree with the President to change your course of policy in any regard?

A. I did not agree with the President to change my conduct in any regard whatever.

Q. He did not ask you to do so?

A. He at that time satisfied me that his policy was the policy of Abraham Lincoln. I have had occasion since to change my mind.

Q. Then the President only required of you to support a policy such as was Abraham Lincoln's?

A. Such as he stated was Abraham Lincoln's.

Q. Did he state to you what it was?

A. I do not know that he did.

Q. Then you went into an agreement to support a line of policy without knowing what that policy was; do you mean to be so understood?

A. It was the understanding that I was to support the President's policy. Up to that time there had been no distinct issues between Congress and the President, for this was before the Constitutional amendment was proclaimed as the ultimatum of Congress.

Q. You did not understand that there was any real difference at that time between the President and Congress?

A. There was no vital difference which would divide the republican party.

Q. Then what did the President want you to support?

A. You may ask him.

Q. You made the bargain; did you not know what it was?

A. I agreed to support that policy as long as it was the policy of Abraham Lincoln. When the Constitutional amendment became an ultimatum, I abandoned the field, and let Mr. Johnson take his offices.

Q. Specify, if you can, what bargain you did make with Mr. Johnson, if you made one.

A. I cannot specify that bargain, because there was no vital difference between the President and Congress.

Q. The President and Congress really agreed at that time?

A. I did not understand that there was any essential or vital difference between them.

Q. Then you did not understand at that time that the policy of the President differed from that of Congress?

A. I did not understand that I violated any principle whatever.

Q. Did you understand that you agreed to support any policy different from the policy of Congress?

A. The only way that I can answer that question is, as I have already answered it, by saying that I agreed to support what I regarded to be the policy of Abraham Lincoln. What Mr. Johnson's understanding of that policy was I cannot answer.

Q. Did you agree to support any policy different from that which Congress was pursuing?

A. I never agreed to support any policy different from that which Congress was pursuing.

Q. Did the President require you to agree to anything else?

A. He required us to sustain his policy. At that time we were ignorant of what that policy was.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you ever converse with the President in reference to the adoption or rejection by the States of the Constitutional amendment submitted by the Thirty-ninth Congress to the States?

A. Not with the President directly.

Q. Were you not referred by the President to Colonel Cooper as the person who had charge of the offices?

A. I was; he told me repeatedly to see Cooper.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Do you intend to state that the President referred you to Colonel Cooper for his opinions on the Constitutional amendment?

A. I said I had no conversation directly with the President in regard to the Constitutional amendment. In reference to the matter of offices he repeatedly said, "see Cooper."

Q. I want to know whether you intend to be understood as stating that the President referred you to Colonel Cooper for the President's opinions in reference to the Constitutional amendment.

A. The President did not so refer me, but I understood Colonel Cooper to represent the President authoritatively on all those subjects.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Did you understand that from the President himself?

A. Not in reference to the Constitutional amendment.

Q. But as to what his policy of government was?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you from the President learn that Colonel Cooper was authorized to explain to you his policy and wishes about public affairs?

A. I did so understand it more than once.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Was that in reference to the Constitutional amendment?

A. It was in reference to all matters connected with his policy, and in reference to those offices.

Q. Was that before or after the Constitutional amendment came up?

A. It was about that time; I do not recollect distinctly whether it was before or after that I had a conversation with Colonel Cooper in reference to that amendment.

Q. You have spoken of the President referring you to Colonel Cooper for the President's opinions of policy; was that in the conversation to which you referred when you called upon him and made this arrangement, or at what time was it?

A. More than once, prior to the time of the Constitutional amendment and about that particular time. I was here off and on nearly every day. I anticipated being a candidate for Congress in my district.

Question repeated.

A. I did not have such conversation.

Q. You have stated that you understood from the President that you were to have interviews with Colonel Cooper in order to ascertain the President's views of public policy?

A. That was my understanding, that in reference to such matters Colonel Cooper was to speak authoritatively. The Secretary of State also told me the position of the government in reference to the Constitutional amendment.

Q. How was it that you had this understanding with the President that Colonel Cooper would represent him in relation to the Constitutional amendment. Out of what did that understanding spring?

A. My frank answer to that question is, that I think the President began to suppose that I was not going quite so far as he wished me to go; in other words, he was growing suspicious of me, and then he referred me to Colonel Cooper in reference to all those subjects, and I went to Colonel Cooper.

Q. Did he refer you to Colonel Cooper with reference to the Constitutional amendment?

A. My direct answer to that is, that I do not recollect whether I ever distinctly spoke to the President of the question of the Constitutional amendment, because his office was constantly surrounded with all sorts of people, and I was not in the habit of waiting there for five or six hours; and when he referred me to Colonel Cooper, I took that as a general reference, and used to run in and out to Colonel Cooper and give my opinions.

Q. You say that that was before the passage of the Constitutional amendment by Congress?

A. Yes, and about that time.

Q. Now state what Colonel Cooper represented to you as being the President's policy with reference to the Constitutional amendment.

A. I told him that I liked the Constitutional amendment. He asked me whether I would vote against the amendment. It will be recollected that my vote was the casting vote in the New Jersey senate. I told him I was prepared to vote for that amendment. After that I never received any favors of any kind from the administration.

Q. Had you received any before?

A. As I told you, I received appointments for two village postmasters, and the nominations of Mr. Carman and Mr. Goldsmith. Mr. Carman's commission was withdrawn, and Mr. Goldsmith's nomination was not confirmed.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Had any appointments been refused you before that?

A. They were very liberal in promises, but not very liberal in fulfilling them.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you have any interview with the President after your conversation with Colonel Cooper?

A. I had a conversation with the President, I think, on the very day that we got the news of the New Orleans massacre, at which I complained of Colonel Cooper making so many promises and never fulfilling any. He begged me to be patient, and that all would be right. That was my last visit to the White House. I will give you the reason why I changed front: About the 30th of July I met William H. C. King, supposed to be the editor of the New Orleans Times, and he informed me in reference to the "no usurpation" despatch directed to Attorney General Herron and Lieutenant Governor Voorhies. Mr. King showed me that despatch, and said he had suggested or dictated it, and that the President was with them; by which I understood him to mean that the President was with the men who approved or planned the New Orleans massacre. That was something which shocked the conscience of the North and my own conscience. I left Washington the next day, and asked no further favors from the President. I had no further communication with him, except after the Pennsylvania election, when I telegraphed to him that he ought to stand by the Constitutional amendment, and renounce the democratic party as being false to him and false to the country.

Q. State whether this is the despatch to Attorney General Herron to which you allude; if so, read it.

A. This is the despatch; but my impression is that it was directed to Herron and Voorhies. I saw the despatch myself in the hands of King. It was a written despatch. It reads as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., July 30, 1866.

You will call on General Sheridan, or whoever may be in command, for sufficient forces to sustain the civil authorities in suppressing all illegal or unlawful assemblies which usurp or assume to exercise any power or authority without first having obtained the consent of the people of the State. If there is to be a convention, let it be composed of delegates chosen fresh from the people of the whole State. The people must be first consulted in reference to changing the organic law of the State. Usurpation will not be tolerated. The law and the Constitution must be sustained, and thereby peace and order.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

ANDREW HERRON, Attorney General of Louisiana, New Orleans.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Was it the day after you heard of the riot that you saw the despatch in Mr. King's hands?

A. It was that day or the day subsequent. It was the day after my arrival at Willard's Hotel, which was about the time of the New Orleans massacre.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Do we understand you to say that this gentleman, King, told you that he prepared the despatch for the President?

A. My recollection of the language was, that he dictated or suggested that despatch. I then said, "Herron is a Union man," or words to that effect. He said, "Oh, no, you have got the wrong man," adding that Herron had been with them during the war. I supposed it be General Herron, whom I understood to be a Union man. This satisfied me, for the first time, that the President was not in accord, but in direct and distinct conflict with the republican party; and I felt that I had no further lot or part with him. I went home, resumed the practice of the law, and abandoned the practice of politics. To my recollection I have had no further communication with the President, except to send him a despatch long after that, in October, asking him to stand by the Constitutional amendment, and to abandon the democratic party, as I believed it false to the country and false to him. After I went home I wrote a letter to Governor Ward, suggesting that he should convene the legislature of New Jersey. The legislature was convened, and the Constitutional amendment was adopted by it.

Q. Did Colonel Cooper urge you to give your casting vote against that amendment?

A. He never did. He did inform me that it was no part of the policy of the administration to sustain that amendment, and he referred me to the National Intelligencer, which contained some article supposed to embody the views of the administration on that subject, and so did the Secretary of State.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say that Colonel Cooper did not request you to vote against the Constitutional amendment.

A. He never requested me in terms.

Q. Did he state to you that the amendment was not a part of the policy of the administration, and that the government was hostile to it?

A. I clearly did get that from him; and he referred me to the article in the National Intelligencer, of the same day, I think, which did give the line of policy of the administration.

Q. Was that article the one that contained the amendment which was sent out to the associated press as the proposition of the President to Dixon?

A. I am not clear about that.

Q. Did Mr. Cooper, in any manner, express to you the desire that you, as a supporter of the President's policy, should vote against the ratification of the amendment, as a member of the New Jersey senate?

A. He did not, in direct terms. He never requested me to vote against it, but he was very anxious to know how I would vote on that question—giving me to understand that the policy of the administration was hostile to that amendment.

Q. Did he offer you any inducement to vote against the amendment?

A. It was clearly understood on his part and on my part that I should control the offices in west New Jersey, if not in the whole State, if I sustained the policy of the administration, including the defeat of the Constitutional amendment. It was on that that I divided with the administration.

Q. You commenced a statement with reference to something that the Secretary of State said to you in relation to the policy of the administration?

A. He said that Governor Ward would not call the legislature together, and that it was desirable to defeat the Constitutional amendment. I asked his advice about it, because I desired to have faith in what was left of Mr. Lincoln's administration, and I desired to run with the President if I could. For that reason I called on Mr. Seward with the honest intention to find out what I ought to do, and what his views were about it. He then said, in his jaunty manner, that the Governor would not call the legislature together; and he gave me to understand that the amendment would not be ratified.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did he make a statement as to whether it was the policy of the administration to defeat the Constitutional amendment?

A. He gave me to understand that he desired its defeat.

Q. Did he make any mention of the President in connection with it in this conversation?

A. I do not think he did. He spoke for the government, for the administration, but did not mention Andrew Johnson.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Had you any correspondence or conversation with the President in relation to the election of a United States Senator from the State of New Jersey?

A. I desire to say, on the contrary, that Mr. Johnson in no way, directly or indirectly, influenced my action in reference to the election of a United States Senator.

Q. That is not the question I put to you. I desire to know whether you have ever had any correspondence or conversation with Mr. Johnson on that subject.

A. No, sir. The newspaper fabrications about that were sheer falsehoods. There was not a word of truth in them. I did not go near the President until after the legislature had adjourned.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. You used, I think, this language: that it was distinctly understood that you were to have control of the offices in your district, and that on your part you were to support the policy of the President; that there was an arrangement of that kind.

A. I so said.

Q. That was the understanding that you had from conversations which you had with Colonel Cooper, and with the President also. State distinctly what the President said to you on that subject.

A. President Johnson did not, in terms, ever make any such agreement as that with me. When we were in his room he sent for Colonel Cooper, and referred those credentials to him.

Q. What credentials?

A. The credentials of the first applicant for office. The President desired him to give us an answer that day, but Cooper put us off until some future day; and after that time the President referred us always to Colonel Cooper.

Q. State distinctly what the President said and did.

A. He said: "Cooper, take these recommendations and look at them," and he told us he would give us an answer at 3 o'clock; but when we came, Mr. Cooper said that the matter was postponed until Monday. The President said nothing more.

Q. State distinctly what the President said to you, and all that he said to you, and not what anybody else said, in reference to those appointments and to any arrangement with you.

A. He first said that he was anxious to fight this fight out inside the Union lines, and he said he would appoint no democrats to office, but only men who had voted for Lincoln and Johnson, and who would sustain the policy of the administration.

Q. Did he say anything else to you in reference to making an arrangement with you?

A. I remember no other language on his part in that regard.

Q. Than that which you have now repeated?

A. I remember nothing else, except when he referred me to Colonel Cooper.

Q. That was in reference to appointments?

A. Yes. I have already said he called Colonel Cooper into the room and gave him the recommendations.

Q. Was not that the ordinary course of disposing of applications for office presented to him?

A. I am not familiar with his ordinary course. It was not so with Mr. Lincoln. He made his own appointments.

Q. Do you understand that the reference of papers applying for an office by the President to his private secretary is a proposition to make a bargain?

A. Of course I do not.

Q. I understood you now to say that the language which you have now repeated, in answer to my former question, is all that the President said to you on the subject?

A. It is all that the President said in terms to me. I have given you all the President's language. The President said nothing further, in terms, to me. When I complained of the tardiness of Cooper, and suspected that he did not mean to play fair with me, the President always referred me to Cooper, and said that Cooper had that matter in charge, and I so understood it—referring to these appointments.

Q. If I understand you correctly, the President never did say anything to you in reference to making a bargain with you for your support of the administration?

A. He never made any bargain with me.

Q. And he never said anything to you about making a bargain with you in reference to it in any way?

A. On the contrary, he referred the matter in relation to the offices to Colonel Cooper entirely.

Q. In reference to appointments?

A. In relation to the whole question.

Q. What question did you bring up—the question of selling out to him?

A. No, sir. I am not in the habit of selling out to anybody.

Q. Did the President refer to Colonel Cooper anything except your application for those appointments?

A. In precise terms he did not.

Q. What do you mean by using that language, "in precise terms?"

A. I had reason to believe that Colonel Cooper was authorized by the President to act on his own responsibility in reference to the matter of giving office to those who sustained his administration.

Q. But you have stated in answer to my former questions all that the President said to you on that subject?

A. Directly. Yes, I have; all that I recollect.

Q. Well, what did he say indirectly?

A. Nothing more than when this question was under discussion he called Colonel Cooper into his private room and handed him the credentials and referred the whole matter to him.

Q. What question was under discussion?

A. The question had been discussed in reference to giving offices to those who sustained the administration, and to none others; to men inside the republican party who had voted for Lincoln and Johnson, and who at that time supported the policy of the administration. He referred the whole matter then to Colonel Cooper. Colonel Cooper took the papers; and at subsequent interviews, when I complained to the President of the delay in making the appointments, he said, "see Cooper."

Q. You say he referred the whole matter of these applications to Mr. Cooper?

A. Yes; and the general subject.

Q. What was the language of the President?

A. It was, "Mr. Cooper will take those papers and I will give you an answer at 3 o'clock." I do not recollect anything but those words. Colonel Cooper postponed it until some future time, and we did not get the answer at 3 o'clock.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Do you mean to say, in your answer to Mr. Marshall, that on no other occasion the President used to you any other language than that which you now detail?

A. I do not mean to say that. Being a republican, and desiring to do what I considered my duty, I wrote to the President about the time of the Constitutional amendment, and got an answer from Mr. Cooper, which I think I have at home, stating that the President would see me if I called. My recollection is (there were so many interviews that it is impossible for me to be correct) that at that time the President referred me to Mr. Cooper, and Mr. Cooper gave me to understand that the administration was adverse to the Constitutional amendment.

Q. Can you state the contents of the letter which you addressed to the President?

A. I cannot give you the exact words, but it was something like this: "I am desirous of getting the opinion of the administration in reference to the Constitutional amendment, as its ratification in New Jersey depends upon my vote." This was after the legislature had adjourned. The Constitutional amendment had not taken shape until after the 6th of April, when our legislature adjourned. I received an answer to that from Colonel Cooper, and I came to Washington.

Q. State what the President said at that interview?

A. My recollection of it is that when I went in there was a crowd there, and the President told me to see Cooper. I do not think he said anything more or anything less. My impression is that the crowd was in the President's room at that time.

Q. You stated to the President that you had called in pursuance of the note which you had received from Colonel Cooper, or you gave him to understand that?

A. Yes; I do not think he had any doubt about that. It is barely possible that my first note may have been addressed to Colonel Cooper instead of to the President, stating to Mr. Cooper that I wished him to inform the President that I would be there at such a time, and the answer came from the President through Cooper.

Q. State what you said to the President on that occasion.

A. In general terms I said that I came down to get his opinion on the constitutional amendment.

Q. What was the President's language in reply to that?

A. It was either "see Cooper" or "I refer you to Mr. Cooper on that question." He did not directly say one word about it himself.

Q. He referred you to Cooper?

A. Yes; as he did at other interviews.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you have any other subject to present to the President on that occasion?

A. The general subject that afflicted me then was as to getting some of those office-holders out and some of my friends in.

Q. At that interview did you say anything to the President about those offices?

A. My impression is that I did. One subject generally went with the other. The offices were pretty prominent in my mind.

Q. Then you mentioned both the subject of the Constitutional amendment and of the offices to the President on that occasion?

A. Such is my recollection.

Q. And in reply he said, "see Mr. Cooper?"

A. That is my recollection distinctly.

Q. When you called on Mr. Cooper, state what you said to him, and what he said to you with reference both to the Constitutional amendment and to the appointments.

A. My impression is that I began the subject in reference to the offices, and said to him, "Why are not those appointments made." He informed me that Senatorial confirmation was necessary, and that there was no need, therefore, of great haste. He gave me to understand that the removals which I asked for would be made. That is all that I remember in relation to the offices.

Q. What did you say to Colonel Cooper?

A. I read him the letter which I had addressed to Governor Ward on the 4th of July, asking the Governor to convene the legislature to ratify the Constitutional amendment. Colonel Cooper disapproved of the publication of the letter, and then suggested that if I desired to know the policy of the administration in that regard I should consult that day's issue of the National Intelligencer. That is all that I remember.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Can you state any more definitely the contents of your letter to the President of the 13th April, 1866, or have you any copy of that letter?

A. I never keep copies of my correspondence. My letter was very brief, stating that I desired an interview.

Q. Did you state any particular business on which you desired to see the President?

A. I think not, sir.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, May 28, 1867.

ROBERT MORROW sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Are you private secretary to the President?

A. I am assistant private secretary.

Q. Have you, at any time, had in your possession or control any bonds, State or railroad, or coupons of such bonds, belonging to President Johnson?

A. I never had in my possession or control any such bonds. Coupons of such bonds have passed through my hands to the bank.

Q. Of what bonds were they coupons?

A. Of some bonds of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railway Company, endorsed by the State of Tennessee; one of the Tennessee and Virginia Railway Company, endorsed by the State of Tennessee, and State bonds of Tennessee. I believe that is all.

Q. At what bank were they delivered?

A. The coupons were taken to the First National Bank of Washington, D. C. for collection in New York, at the agency there.

Q. Do you recollect the amount of the coupons of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad?

A. No, sir; I do not recollect the number of bonds. No interest has been collected on the bonds for a long time, I think from the commencement of the war. There were quite a number of coupons, and that confuses my memory as to the number of bonds.

Q. Do you recollect that there were coupons of bonds of any other railroad company?

A. No, sir.

Q. When were those coupons delivered to the First National Bank?

A. I think in June or July, 1866.

Q. Were any of the coupons more recent than that?

A. There were some of them due on the 1st of July, but I do not think they were paid then. I think I left them, and that they were paid afterwards.

By Mr. WILLIAMS.

Q. You say there were some Tennessee State bonds. Do you know whether they were bonds that were issued to railroad companies in that State?

A. They were not. So far as I recollect now, I think that the State bonds and railroad bonds both bore endorsement to Andrew Johnson, dated some time in 1853. I think they all do. Most of them do, I am certain. They are endorsed by the officer of the bank in Nashville, Cave Johnson, in 1853, '54, and '55.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Where did you get the coupons?

A. I got them from the bonds to which I refer.

Q. Do you recollect the whole nominal amount of the coupons you deposited?

A. No, sir; I do not. I think it was between $1,000 and $2,000.

Q. You do not recollect the number or denominations of the railroad bonds?

A. I think the whole number of all the different bonds is 30—that is $30,000. I do not know whether they are all $1,000 bonds or not.

Q. You do not know how many of them were State bonds?

A. No, sir; I do not.

Q. Can you state whether there were more of them than there were railroad bonds?

A. No, sir; I cannot state that either.

Q. Those coupons were the coupons of several years?

A. Yes, sir; running back, I think, until July 1, 1861.

Q. Did the coupons on all the bonds run back to 1861?

A. Yes, sir; so far as I recollect.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did not the State of Tennessee pay the interest on its bonds during the war?

A. I do not know whether it did or not, but those coupons had never been detached from the bonds, or collected; and this back interest, I may state, was paid, not directly, but by funding. The State paid the interest on the State bonds as well as on the railroad bonds. They were endorsed by the State, and the interest was paid by it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know whether the President had held those bonds for several years?

A. I do not know it, but I know that on them is an endorsement or transfer signed by Cave Johnson, who was an officer of one of the banks of Nashville in 1853, '54, and '55. The date of transfer was about that time.

Q. That is as to the railroad bonds?

A. I think as to all of them, State and railroad. I have not seen the bonds since that time nor before.

Q. The bonds were given to you by Mr. Johnson?

A. Yes, to detach the coupons, and collect the interest the best I could for him.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Were they the property of the President?

A. I suppose so.; he gave them to me.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. What amount of those bonds bears the endorsements of 1853, '54, and '55?

A. My impression is that they all do, but I may be mistaken. I can get the bonds to look at them, and can give positive testimony in regard to the matter. I have seen them only once, and then but for a short time.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you recollect giving to Mr. Warden a copy of the despatch received from General Sheridan, dated August 1, 1866?

A. I do not recollect giving to Mr. Warden a copy of any despatch. I remember allowing him to look over some despatches and take from them ome information.

Q. Look at the despatch, on page 472 of Congressional document, "Riots in New Orleans, 1866," directed to General Grant, signed by General Sheridan. Read it and see if you have any recollection of that despatch.

(The despatch is as follows:)

NEW ORLEANS, August 1—1:30 P. M.

General U. S. GRANT, Washington:

You are doubtless aware of the serious riot which occurred in this city on the 30th. A political body, styling itself the convention of 1864, met on the 30th, for, it is alleged, the purpose of remodeling the present constitution of the State. The leaders were political agitators and revolutionary men, and the action of the convention was liable to produce breaches of the public peace. I had made up my mind to arrest the head men, if the proceedings of the convention were calculated to disturb the tranquility of the department; but I had no cause for action until they committed the overt act.

About forty whites and blacks were killed, and about one hundred and sixty wounded. Everything is now quiet; but I deem it best to maintain a military supremacy in the city for a few days, until the affair is fully investigated. I believe the sentiment of the general community is great regret at this unnecessary cruelty, and the police could have made any arrest they saw fit, without sacrificing lives.

(Signed) P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

A. What I remember in reference to that despatch of General Sheridan is this: Mr. Warden was in the room of the President when I was called by the President to see him. The President told me to allow Mr. Warden to look over the despatches from General Sheridan and other parties in reference to the New Orleans riots, and give him such news out of them as in my discretion I thought best. He was in my office afterwards with me, and we read over together all of the despatches received in reference to it. I believe he said that all but one of the despatches (which one I cannot tell certainly) had been published, but that that one he would like to have as a matter of news. I told him that he could take the facts mentioned in that despatch and publish them. I cannot further define that despatch in my mind than to say this, that I was surprised, a day or two after that interview between Mr. Warden and myself, to see a despatch published in his column in one of the newspapers, purporting to be a copy of the despatch of General Sheridan to General Grant. I had given him no copy, nor did I suppose that he would publish it as a copy. I had given him the despatch, and suggested to him what I thought it discreet for all concerned—General Sheridan, as well as others—to have published. That part was published, but it was published as a verbatim despatch, and it surprised me. I recollect there was some public discussion in the newspapers in reference to it. I expressed to him, a few days after, my surprise at the form in which it appeared. I had given him no verbatim copy, but had simply shown him the despatch, telling him what I thought it was discreet to publish. My own recollection was that I desired him to take the facts as given; but I did not think it best, until all the facts were known, to publish any comments made by official persons on the subject.

Q. Do you mean to say that you put the despatch into his hands, and that he took from it and used it in making up his despatch?

A. My recollection is that Mr. Warden and I sat down at a table together, and looked over all the despatches until we came to this one. He wanted to publish that just as it stood. I told him that he might take the facts out of it, and might state that a telegram had been received from General Sheridan stating those facts, but that there were certain comments in the despatch which, in view of the fact that General Sheridan had but just arrived there, and that the whole matter would be published at last, had better be withheld until a full report of all the facts of the case had been received.

Q. Can you identify the despatch referred to in a previous question as the despatch which was the subject of conversation?

A. I cannot swear that it is the same despatch; but I know that I did recollect it as being the same despatch, at the time it was published, which I had shown to Mr. Warden.

Q. In the same volume, page 352, is found what purports to be a true copy of the despatch as it was actually received, and which compares with that on page 472, with the exception that it contains these words additional: "In the mean time official duty called me to Texas, and the mayor of the city, during my absence, suppressed the convention by the use of their police force, and in so doing attacked the members of the convention and a party of two hundred negroes, and with fire-arms, clubs, and knives, in a manner so unnecessary and atrocious as to compel me to say that it was murder." Have you any knowledge of any fact or circumstance which explains the omission of that sentence from the despatch which Mr. Warden transmitted to the New York Times?

A. From the fact that this is a telegram out of which something is left, and from the fact that the discussion in the public newspapers was had at the time in relation to part of a despatch being left out, I should say that this is the despatch referred to. My reason for suggesting to Mr. Warden to omit that sentence in his publication was, that the matter had been left to my discretion, and I believed it best for all concerned that those things which were not stated as evidently coming within the General's knowledge had better be withheld till all the facts were known. I had no idea, however, that it would be published as a copy of the despatch—as a verbatim copy, or as an extract—but merely as the substance of a despatch received by General Grant and the President from General Sheridan.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Can you mention any instance in which you ever before omitted to have published a despatch entire when any part of it was published?

A. No, sir.

Q. You have stated that you were unwilling to publish opinions until all the facts of the case were well ascertained, and that, on that account, you desired this sentence to be omitted?

A. I said I deemed it best for General Sheridan and all concerned that that portion of the despatch which was not given as facts proven, and which I believed would not be proven in the end, should be omitted.

Q. I find the sentence omitted to read thus: [quoting it.] Is not that a rehearsal of facts?

A. I believe so; but I have given my idea that I did not believe that the statement would be carried out by investigation.

Q. Other parts of this despatch contain similar statements of facts; why did you allow them to be published?

A. I suppose, from looking at those two despatches, that I deemed it best, in the exercise of the discretion given me, to have only this much of the despatch published. The part omitted I did not believe would be sustained by investigation, and I deemed it best, for General Sheridan's sake, and for the sake of the people, not to have it published. I did not tell Mr. Warden to omit any part at all, but I suggested to him the propriety of doing so, in which suggestion he acquiesced.

Q. Then you are more comprehensive than in the first instance; you not only suggested to him to omit opinions but to omit facts also?

A. I did not authorize him to omit anything. I suggested to him that it would be better not to telegraph that portion of the despatch.

Q. Why did you think it better to withhold those facts and allow other facts to be published?

A. For the reason that I did not believe that this statement would be carried out in the full investigation, and because the facts stated seemed to have taken place during General Sheridan's absence.

Q. Why did you suppose that those facts would not be finally sustained by evidence, any less than other facts mentioned in the telegraphic despatch?

A. I supposed so from all the correspondence that had been received at the President's office in relation to it.

Q. State any fact that led you to suppose so.

A. All the correspondence received at the President's House has been published. There were despatches from the Attorney General and the Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana, and other prominent citizens of the State.

Q. You founded your opinion on nothing but the publications which the public generally has seen; you had no private reasons for believing that those facts would not be sustained?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you recollect distinctly that Mr. Warden saw the original despatch? May it not have been that you read to him from the despatch, and that he took down the words in short-hand or otherwise?

A. My recollection is distinct that Mr. Warden knew all that was in the despatch. Whether I read to him or he read with me I do not recollect; but my recollection is distinct that he knew all that was in the despatch, because I talked to him about the propriety of its publication.

Q. You feel sure that he had knowledge that this sentence, omitted from the Times's report, was really in the despatch?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you have any directions from the President in relation to that despatch, or in relation tot he despatches received from New Orleans as a whole?

A. He gave me all our despatches as a whole, and told me I might give to Mr. Warden for publication such news out of them as, in my discretion, I deemed best.

Q. He gave you no directions as to any part that should be omitted from Sheridan's despatch?

A. None.

Q. Nor did he suggest to you the topics which should not be placed before the public?

A. No, sir.

Q. You mean to say that it was merely your own judgment that this particular sentence had better not be published?

A. Yes, sir. I knew at the time, or at least I believed, that all the correspondence in relation to it would be published.

Q. Did you feel that you had authority to withhold a portion of an official despatch?

A. I felt I had a right to give to Mr. Warden such portions of the despatch as news—not as extracts or copies—as I might see fit.

Q. It was your expectation that Mr. Warden would not give to the public a literal copy of the despatch?

A. I did not suppose so, and was surprised when I saw it published as such, and when I saw the mistake that was made, and the erroneous impression that was conveyed to the public.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What was your general habit as to giving news to Mr. Warden and other newspaper correspondents: did you take the telegraph book and read such portions as you desired published, or did you let him read over the despatch and take such portion as he pleased?

A. I cannot recall the manner of his taking it, whether he took the book or whether I read to him.

Q. Was he in the habit of coming to you for telegraphic news previous to that time?

A. No, sir; I do not recall any instance where he had been to me before that time or since. It is not a part of my duty to keep the telegrams.

Q. Who did have charge of the telegraph book?

A. Colonel Wright Rives has charge of the telegrams. My own remembrance is that Warden knew all the contents of the despatch. As to the specific manner in which that knowledge was conveyed I cannot say, but I think it was from reading the whole of it.

Q. In the sentence omitted there is a charge of the crime of murder on certain parties. Did that have anything to do with your coming to the conclusion that it should not be given to the public?

A. That part of the telegram conflicts, as it seemed to me, with other parts of it, and also conveyed to my mind at the time (perhaps a wrong impression) that General Sheridan did not make as positive a statement in regard to that portion as in regard to other portions. Besides, I did not think that the circumstances of the case would bear out that portion of the despatch. It was not given to Mr. Warden for publication, but merely for the object of affording him an opportunity to get at the facts.

Q. You knew him to be simply a gatherer of news?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you gave it to him as a gatherer of news?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had the President directed to you in any manner what portion of that despatch should be given?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he know at the time what portion you had concluded to give?

A. No, sir. I did not see the President in relation to it after Mr. Warden got it.

Q. Had you and the President talked over that despatch, so as to get his opinion?

A. Not as to that particular despatch. I asked him in relation to all the despatches, whether I should give them all, and he told me to use my own discretion.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you not state that the President had left it with you to say how much of that despatch should be given to the public?

A. The President gave me the despatches and told me to give Warden such news from them as I deemed best to go to the public.

Q. Did you entertain the opinion, at that time, that the contemplated assembling of the convention in New Orleans was an unlawful assembly, and that it should be dispersed?

A. So far as I could form any opinion, I believed that it was in conflict with the law.

Q. Did you in that view harmonize with the sentiment of the President of the United States?

A. I think so.

Q. Did he not know that?

A. I suppose so. I had not discussed the matter with him.

Q. Had you ever talked with him on the subject?

A. I do not think I had, but generally I have humbly agreed with him, and I suppose he concluded that.

Q. What part of the country do you come from?

A. Tennessee.

Q. Were you in the federal army during the war?

A. Yes, sir; I was in the army from the time I escaped from the rebel lines, in April, 1863, till the close of the war.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were you colonel in the federal army?

A. I was captain during the war, and was promoted to a majority by Mr. Johnson after the war was over.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you suppress any portion of the despatch of the Lieutenant Governor and the Attorney General of Louisiana, wherein they indulged in the expression of opinion, or did you allow their despatches to be published at length?

A. I had nothing at all to do with them. They had been already published at the time when this conversation took place between Warden and myself.

Q. You were not consulted about them?

A. No, sir; I ran over them, and he said they had been all published.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Why did you not omit these words: "About forty whites and blacks were killed, and about one hundred and sixty wounded;" why did you allow this to be published and prompt the omission of the other statement in the despatch?

A. I do not see any reason why that was not published.

Q. Had you any reason to foresee that that statement would be sustained afterwards by testimony any more than the other statement?

A. No, sir. Taking into consideration all the circumstances of the riot, and the fact that the number killed and the number wounded could be obtained after the mob dispersed, I supposed that that was a probable statement.

Q. Was it any more probable than that which you omitted, as follows: "In the mean time official duty called me to Texas, and the mayor of the city, during my absence, suppressed the convention by the use of their police force, and in so doing attacked the members of the convention and a party of two hundred negroes, and with fire-arms, clubs, and knives, in a manner so unnecessary and atrocious as to compel me to say that it was murder."

A. That part which you have read was just as probable as the other. That the mayor of the city had used the police force I considered probable, because if he had not done so there would probably have been no collision; but that in so doing he used unnecessary violence, in so atrocious a manner as to be murder, I did not then believe.

Q. Below that there is an opinion of General Sheridan, as follows: "I believe the sentiment of the general community is great regret at this unnecessary cruelty." If you were suppressing one paragraph, out of consideration for General Sheridan, why not suppress the other?

A. One reason was in reference to its probable truth, and another reason was in reference to the state of the public mind at the time.

Q. General Sheridan gives another opinion: "The police could have made any arrests they saw fit without sacrificing lives." What reason had you to suppose that that would be sustained by subsequent disclosures more than the other opinions?

A. That was my judgment at the time.

Q. You have no special reason to assign for the difference of judgment?

A. None that is not in possession of other persons. I have stated, as clearly as I can, my reasons, and the discretionary power which I had in the matter.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you take much time to consider it, or did you act under the impulse of the moment?

A. I think the whole thing passed in five or ten minutes.

Q. Had you considered it before Mr. Warden came there?

A. No, sir; I do not think I had seen it before.

Q. You formed your judgment on the instant?

A. On the reading of the despatch at the time. I have been in the army, and have often found it very important to the community and to the government that a part of a despatch should be published, and a part of it suppressed; but in my connection with Mr. Johnson I have never been called upon to exercise any discretion of that sort in any important matter that I remember, except on this occasion—if it was important. The whole matter turned on the probable truth of the statements contained in the telegram. I believed that the final result of a full investigation would not justify the charge of unnecessary and atrocious murder.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Why not have satisfied yourself with omitting the mere opinion of General Sheridan, instead of suppressing the facts on which that opinion was founded?

A. I do not suppose that I took into consideration at all the fact that a portion of the sentence might have been published without the whole of it being. I do not believe that I studied it carefully enough to think of that. I may just have said to Mr. Warden that I did not think the statement would have been carried out, and that the sentence should be left out.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. I understood you already to state that you did not authorize a verbatim publication of any part of it?

A. No, sir; nor did I suppose that Mr. Warden understood it as such.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you know Mr. King, of New Orleans, who is connected with one of the papers there?

A. I know William H. C. King, of the New Orleans Times.

Q. Do you know of his being at Washington, at the Executive mansion, about the time of the New Orleans riots?

A. Without anything to refresh my memory, I cannot recall having seen him at that time.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. I wish you to state whether, on the facts presented in General Sheridan's despatch, you did not yourself come to the conclusion that the killing of these men was not murder, and whether that was not the reason why you suppressed that portion of the despatch?

A. No, sir; I do not think I formed a positive idea as to that.

Q. Was not that the inclination of your mind?

A. What I thought of the matter was, that the charge of atrocious and unnecessary killing would not be carried out by the full and impartial investigation of all the facts in the case.

Q. Was not that because you held the opinion that the dispersing of those men by force was a lawful act on the part of the public authorities?

A. You can account for it as well as I can. I admit that I believed the assembling of the convention illegal I stated that before.

Q Did you not entertain the opinion that it was not murder to kill those people, and that, if necessary for the purpose of dispersing them, any amount of violence might be used?

A. No, sir; I did not. I think that it is better sometimes to submit to a breach of the law than to cause so much loss of life.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you, about the time those events were taking place at New Orleans, hear from the President any expression of opinion upon them, or upon the convention?

A. I have a general remembrance, without recalling any distinct words or conversation, of the President's position; and I may have implied what it was from his despatch to General Sheridan, sent after the receipt of the General's despatch, in which the President asked for certain information. That despatch I wrote at the President's dictation.

Q. Can you furnish the Committee with a copy of that despatch which you wrote at the President's dictation in reply to General Sheridan?

A. I do not know exactly that it was in reply to that, but I think it was sent after the receipt of General Sheridan's despatch. It is a despatch containing inquiries, asking the General to answer him on certain points.

Q. State what the views of the President were, as expressed to you.

A. I do not recollect any particular expression of his views to me in relation to the matter; but my general impression from what he said at the time is that he believed the convention to be an illegal body, and that it ought not to have assembled, and that it was the duty of the authorities to have used their influence and prevented its assembling. I cannot recall any remark of his in reference to the use of violence in prevention of its meeting.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You do not think that he was ever inclined to justify any violence of any sort?

A. I do not recall anything of that sort.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Do you recollect that among the despatches sent by the President on that occasion was one to General Baird, directing him to sustain the civil authorities in their measures, the despatch being as follows:

To General A. BAIRD, Commanding Department of Louisiana:

You will not interpose any obstacle in the way of the civil authorities, but render whatever aid may be required by them for the preservation of the public peace.

The foregoing telegram is transmitted to you by order of the President.

E. D. TOWNSEND, Ass't Adj't General.

A. No, sir; I do not recollect such a despatch as that. It was probably dictated to General Townsend in a personal interview between him and the President.

Q. Do you recollect at this time whether the President knew that the civil authorities at New Orleans intended to use force to disperse the convention?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you recollect having heard any conversation between the President and other persons, at that time, on that particular point?

A. No, sir; I do not recollect any expression on the part of the President indicating that he had any knowledge whatever of the intended use of violence in the suppression of the convention. I may state, further, that the President mentioned, after the news that the riot had occurred, that if the military had made known their desire that the convention should not meet, it would not have met, and there would have been no necessity for the use of violence?

Q. Did the President desire that the military should make known in New Orleans a wish that the convention should not assemble?

A. I do not know that, because what I have referred to was expressed after the occurrence.

Q. Did he express regret that the military authorities had not, by that means, prevented the assembling of the convention?

A. He expressed regret that the military authorities had not used their influence to prevent the assembling of the convention, because, if they had, there would have been no violence or loss of life.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. I call your attention to a telegram on page 5, executive document 68, House of Representatives, and ask you whether you have any knowledge of who wrote that despatch. It is as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, D. C., July 20, 1866.

ANDREW J. HERRON, Attorney General of Louisiana, New Orleans:

You will call on General Sheridan, or whoever may be in command, for sufficient forces to sustain the civil authority in suppressing all illegal or unlawful assemblies which usurp or assume to exercise any power or authority, without first having obtained the consent of the people of the State. If there is to be a convention, let it be composed of delegates chosen fresh from the people of the whole State. The people must be first consulted in relation to changing the organic law of the State. Usurpation will not be tolerated. The law and the Constitution must be sustained, and thereby peace and order.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

A. I have no positive knowledge in reference to the writing of that telegram.

Q. Do you know it was written, or who were present when it was prepared?

A. No, sir; I have no positive knowledge in reference to the writing of the telegram at all. It was not written by me, so far as I recollect.

Q. What other secretaries or clerks were employed in writing any of those telegrams?

A. There are on duty with the President, (and any of them may be called in to write a despatch,) his son, Colonel Robert Johnson, Colonel William G. Moore, Colonel A. K. Long, Lieutenant Colonel Wright Rives, and myself.

Q. Does the President write any despatches himself?

A. He is not in the general habit of writing at all.

Q. Do you know whether he wrote any of these?

A. I do not know that he did.

Q. Who dictates the despatches?

A. He usually dictates despatches. The telegram which I mentioned just now he dictated to me, and that is the only one I have knowledge of in the dictation or writing.

Q. You have no knowledge of the despatch to which I have directed your attention?

A. No, sir; none that I can recall.

Q. Do you know any reason why the President ceased to communicate with Governor Wells, and opened communication with Attorney General Herron and Lieutenant Governor Voorhies, of Louisiana?

A. No, sir. I know that among the first telegrams received from New Orleans was one from those gentlemen, and it was in reply to that communication that the President suggested to them what he did.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State whether these two gentlemen (Lieutenant Governor Voorhies and Attorney General Herron) had not been engaged in the rebellion against the government?

A. I have no knowledge at all in reference to it.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1, 1867.

Colonel ROBERT MORROW recalled and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State, if you please, whether you have examined the bonds of the President from which coupons were taken by you, as stated in your former examination; and if so, state the character and amount of the bonds, and to whom issued.

A. I have seen these bonds again, and can give about this description of them: There are nineteen mortgage bonds of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company, issued under a special act of the legislature, and the payment of which is guaranteed by the State of Tennessee. Six of these have the following endorsement on the back, written in ink: "From Bank of Tennessee to Governor Johnson. C. J." I know the handwriting of the initials to be that of Cave Johnson, who was president of the Bank of Tennessee from 1853 until about the beginning of the war. The bonds were issued in 1854, or at least bear that date. The other thirteen of the nineteen correspond with the six I have described in every particular, except the endorsement of Cave Johnson. They are made payable to bearer, and may be transferred without any formal assignment. There are also ten bonds of the State of Tennessee, issued for the general purposes of the revenue of the State, bearing date 1859, for $1,000 each, five of them bearing the same endorsement, signed "C. J.," as the six Nashville and Chattanooga railroad bonds I have referred to. Four of the other Tennessee State six per cent. bonds, of $1,000 each, have the following endorsement:

"Maxwell, Saulpaw & Co. sold this bond to A. Johnson, September 24, 1860.

"A. L. MAXWELL & CO."

These bonds were also issued by the State of Tennessee for general State purposes. One of the ten Tennessee State bonds bears no endorsement. There is also one bond of the East Tennessee and Virginia railroad for $1,000, bearing the following endorsement:

"Sold by me to Andrew Johnson on the 15th October, 1858.

"WM. M. LOWEY."

Making in all thirty bonds of $1,000 each. Then, in addition to these are four new bonds, into which the overdue interest on the Tennessee State bonds was funded. I cut the coupons from the thirty bonds for interest, which had accumulated since the first or middle of 1861, and, through the First National Bank of Washington, transmitted those cut from the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad bonds to New York, where they were paid in currency, and the ten Tennessee State bonds and one East Tennessee and Virginia railroad bond to Nashville to be funded, and for which the four new bonds were received, the difference, whatever it was, being paid.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. The nineteen Nashville and Chattanooga railroad bonds, I understand you to say, were issued by the railroad company, and the interest guaranteed by the State?

A. Yes, sir; they were issued by the railroad company, and the faith of the State of Tennessee for the payment of principal and interest was guaranteed by an endorsement on each bond, under a special act of the legislature.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you know when Mr. Johnson first became possessed of these bonds?

A. I do not, except so far as the endorsements indicate. Cave Johnson was president of the Bank of Tennessee from 1853 until some time near the commencement of the war. He has not been connected with the bank since the war commenced.

Q. Was the payment of interest suspended on these bonds during the war?

A. Yes, sir; I believe the rebel State government proposed to pay the interest in confederate notes, but nobody—at least no loyal party—would take them.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know whether the President had any other State bonds or any other coupons of State bonds except those you have testified to?

A. I have never known of any others, and I have been in charge of his private affairs a long time. I think if he had others I should have known it.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Wednesday, May 29, 1867.

WILLIAM M. EVARTS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State whether you were employed by the government to aid in the prosecution of Jefferson Davis, charged with the crime of treason?

A. I was retained, I think, in August, 1865. The manner of my retainer was a request, by telegraph, from Attorney General Speed to come to Washington, which I did as soon as I could command the opportunity, when I learned that the object of his message was that I should take a retainer from the government in the prosecution of Mr Davis, and, as I understood, of such other of the rebels as should be prosecuted by the government for treason.

Q. Have you had any interview with the President of the United States relative to the prosecution of that case?

A. I had at that visit, which was, I think, in August, 1865, an interview with the President in company with the Attorney General, Mr. Speed. I had, at a later visit to Washington, which, I think, was in the winter or spring of 1866, another interview with the President on that subject, in company with the Attorney General and with Governor Clifford, of Massachusetts, who was retained as counsel at the same time with myself. Those are the only interviews I have ever had with the President on that subject. I have had no interview of any kind with the President, I think, since this which I have last named.

Q. Did you have an interview with the President relative to the discharge of Davis on bail?

A. I did not.

Q. Please state all that you know concerning any arrangement for the admission of Davis to bail.

A. In the week preceding my attendance to Richmond I received a letter from Mr. Chandler, the United States attorney for the district of Virginia, written from Washington to me at New York, stating that my attendance on the return of the habeas corpus would be desired, and that Monday, the 13th of May, being the return day of the writ, it was desired that I should come to Washington to have an interview with himself and the Attorney General prior to going down to Richmond. I replied, I think, to the Attorney General, stating that I had received this letter, and that I would be in Washington on Friday or Saturday of that week, and would be prepared, if it was thought necessary, to go to Richmond, but stating that my engagements were of such a character that, unless it were important, I should rather be excused from either journey. The next day, I think, after I had received and replied in this way to this letter of Mr. Chandler's, Mr. Chandler himself came to my office in New York. I had never seen him before. He then told me that, having the time at his disposal, he had preferred to come to New York to confer with me on the subject of the return of the writ of habeas corpus; and we did so confer. I came to Washington, as it was understood between Mr. Chandler and myself that I should do, reaching here on Saturday morning, and spending the day here, going down to Richmond on Sunday morning; and during that visit, in company with Mr. Chandler, I had an interview with the Attorney General on the subject of the return of the habeas corpus, and what course would then be taken, as the result of Mr. Chandler's and my own interview in New York. These are the only interviews or correspondence that took place up to the time of my being in Richmond.

Q. Please state what transpired between you and Mr. Chandler at the interview in New York; also the interview in this city with the Attorney General.

A. I can only state the substance and the result of the interview, which, of course, was pretty informal, as between two lawyers on the same side talking together. I learned from Mr. Chandler that no bill of indictment had been found, excepting one that had been found a year or more before; and that he had not prepared, nor was he expecting to ask for, any other bill of indictment from the grand jury then in attendance on the circuit court. I then learned that he had not prepared, nor was he expecting, to try under that indictment. I also understood from him that, so far as he gathered from any conference he might have with the Attorney General, it was not expected that the trial would take place at the current term of the court. There were some matters of professional opinion between us regarding the indictment.

Q. What reason did Mr. Chandler assign, at the interview in New York, for not being prepared to go on with the trial at the May term?

A. I understood from him that, if the trial was to be had of Mr. Davis for treason, he would prefer to have an additional indictment. I also understood from him that he had not expected that the arrangement of the court would be any different from what it had been during the preceding year; that he had supposed that the reasons of the Chief Justice for not presiding in the court, which had been publicly stated by the Chief Justice heretofore, would still prevail; that is to say, that the situation on which the Chief Justice's reasons were based was, as he (Mr. Chandler) supposed, the same, and would be viewed in the same way—not that he had received this from the Chief Justice, but that was his estimate. The result of the interview was that I could not see that we were in a position to ask for the trial of the prisoner during the pending term.

Q. Now proceed with the interview with the Attorney General in this city.

A. I found that Mr. Chandler had put Mr. Stanbery in possession of the result of the conference in New York; and I cannot say that anything else occurred in our interview than a repetition personally to the Attorney General by me of what was the result of that interview, and a statement that, unless otherwise instructed, I should attend at Richmond with that view of the course to be taken by the prosecution.

Q. How, and by whom, was the amount of bail determined?

A. The amount of bail had, somehow or other, been spoken of either at some preceding term or in some published statement, as being $100,000, or any other sum that the government should require or name. I had not been at any previous term of the court, and only derived a general impression that the prisoner's counsel supposed it in their power to offer any amount of bail that might be required. This sum of $100,000 had been named in some way, with the suggestion on their part that the amount was immaterial. In the interview at Washington between the Attorney General, Mr. Chandler, and myself, the legal question whether the offence was bailable was spoken of, the statutes were looked at, and then the question of amount, I think, was considered, very much in this view, perhaps stated by myself, that it ought to be a substantial amount, but ought not to be extravagant, so as to seem to be measured only by the degree of enthusiasm which Mr. Davis's supporters might be able to exhibit; and $100,000 was regarded, I think, by all of us as being as substantial a pecuniary pledge as any other sum would be.

Q. Did you have anything to do with the preparation of General Burton's return to the habeas corpus?

A. I wrote it.

Q. State why the cause of detention was not set out in the return.

A. The cause was supposed to be sufficiently stated that he was held as a prisoner under the military authority of the United States.

Q. Did Mr. Chandler inform you at Richmond that he deemed it safe to proceed with the trial at that term?

A. I do not think that there was any consideration there given, except on the point of whether, if the case was tried, and if we were ready for trial in other respects, and were satisfied with the indictment, a conviction could be had in regard to the disposition or proper performance of duty on the part of the jury. Something was said on that subject.

Q. Was there any reason for the continuance of the case other than the reason which you have already stated?

A. I do not know of any other reason, excepting that I was not instructed authoritatively to proceed with the trial, notwithstanding the situation which I have spoken of.

Q. Had you received any instructions from the President?

A. None whatever. My only interviews with the President were those I have spoken of, and I had no correspondence or other communication with him on the subject, nor any communication by message or messenger; and in those interviews with the President, which I have named, the only consideration on the President's part was of an examination and advice as to when and how the trial could properly take place.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When was the last of those interviews?

A. I have stated it as being in the winter or spring of 1866.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. In that interview with the President did he express any opinion as to the time when Davis should be tried?

A. His views were that he should be tried when and where those to whose responsibility the question of the conduct of his trial was committed should be satisfied it could be done with a result satisfactory to public justice.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you receive any instructions from the Attorney General with reference to the case?

A. I think the Attorney General's treatment of the matter was substantially this: that the district attorney was the responsible officer of the government, and that I was associate counsel, and that he had no other relation to the matter than what belonged to his office as Attorney General. The reasons which Mr. Chandler and myself had considered and repeated seemed to be such as approved themselves to the Attorney General.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did the President, in those interviews which you had with him, express any opinion as to his desire that the trial should be had as speedily as it could be?

A. I understood the President to be very firm in his opinion that the trial should take place when and where those of us who were charged with the professional responsibility of the matter should think that a result satisfactory to public justice could be obtained.

Q. In those interviews with the President, was the subject of Mr. Davis's trial by military commission considered?

A. Not in the least.

Q. In neither of those interviews?

A. In neither. I had no retainer, as I understood it, other than for a judicial trial.

Q. Did you understand that that question was one which had been considered and determined at the time?

A. Not otherwise than as a member of the community—from public sources.

Q. Had you not been aware that it had been a subject of Cabinet council?

A. Only as a member of the community. I may have learned it from Mr. Speed, but not in my interviews with the President. Indeed, I cannot say whether I did learn it from Mr. Speed.

Q. At Richmond, did you and Mr. Chandler have an interview with Judge Underwood previous to the morning of the return of the writ?

A. We did.

Q. In that interview did Mr. Chandler urge the trial of the case, and insist that the prosecution was ready, and could go to trial?

A. I cannot say, with any precision, how much Mr. Chandler may have said about the prosecution being able to get ready for the trial at the term, if it were decided that the trial should proceed. Probably something of that kind was said.

A. I wish to know distinctly whether Mr. Chandler did say that the case was ready for trial, and could be tried, so far as the prosecution was concerned.

A. I should think that, in the sense which I have indicated, something to that effect was said. It was not known by us what course the judge might take. I certainly should not wish to contradict any statement to that effect which Mr. Chandler may have made.

Q. Did you say to the judge that a conviction could not be had at this term if you went to trial?

A. If I am to continue to be a responsible adviser of the government in this case, I would rather not give any opinions concerning its legal situation or its future course. Still, if the Committee desire it, I will give you all, but it is purely a matter of opinion, which my own sense of propriety would withhold me from making public.

Q. Please to proceed.

A. Judge Underwood and Mr. Chandler both expressed quite confidently the opinion that a jury which should be empanelled in the case would find a verdict according to the truth of the case, as it should be proved; and it was assumed that that would be conviction, of course. I asked the question whether that was true a year ago, which was the period at which I had given the matter a deliberate consideration, and the judge's opinion was that it was not. I think Mr. Chandler was of the opinion that, at that earlier period, the result would have been suitable to justice—that is, conviction. I expressed, I think, some doubt whether they would not be disappointed in their calculations as to a jury at the present time, but said to them, "You, of course, have the materials of judgment, and I have not."

Q. Was it a fact, from the whole interview which you had with the judge, that Mr. Chandler was anxious to go to trial at this term, or you either?

A. I had no anxiety of any kind on the subject. Mr. Chandler was ready to proceed with the trial if it should be so ordered; and I suppose I should have taken part in it if it had been.

Q. State whether you, in your professional judgment, differed from Mr. Chandler on that question—he thinking that you could go to trial safely then, and you not.

A. In my professional judgment I was not in favor of going to trial at this term. In respect of the result of a verdict, I probably differed from Mr. Chandler, if that may be considered a professional estimate, which is, after all, only a matter of the calculation of probabilities as to the conduct of unknown men.

Q. Was that opinion based on the insufficiency, or doubt of the sufficiency, of the indictment?

A. I should not say that my judgment against going to trial was based on any difficulty in the indictment as the only or the principal consideration; but I certainly would not have proceeded to a trial unless satisfied with the indictment, and for my judgment concerning the indictment I relied entirely on what was said to me about it by the district attorney.

Q. Had you not read it?

A. I have an impression (it is only an impression) that Mr. Speed had a copy of the indictment, and spoke of it, but I do not think it was ever read by me. Certainly it was never examined with any particularity by me. It was then, I think, spoken of as an indictment which had been drawn with some haste and without any consideration of the law officers of the government here.

Q. What other considerations were spoken of in the presence of the judge?

A. It is very difficult for me to say what was expressed by me in the presence of the judge. I have no particular recollection of this matter of the insufficiency of the indictment being spoken of in the presence of the judge.

Q. State the other considerations that influenced your own mind.

A. The only consideration which has, at any time, been regarded by me as very important to determine the advisers of the government as to whether they should, at any particular time, proceed to a trial of Mr. Davis has been, substantially, whether a conviction could be procured and the appropriate penalty of the law executed on him.

Q. Did that apply only to this term of the court, or was it general?

A. It was general.

Q. Will that opinion control you in the future, as it has in the past?

A. My judgment would be the same.

Q. Would that go to the extent of never bringing him to trial—taking the facts as they exist, the uncertainties, and everything else, into consideration?

A. Whenever my judgment shall be desired by any one who shall properly ask it on the part of the government, I have no reason to think that it would be otherwise than what I have now stated; but whether I shall proceed in the prosecution, even if my own judgment did not lead me to expect that I could secure a proper result of the trial, would depend upon what directions or instructions I should receive from the authorities of the government from whom I received my retainer.

Q. Was your action, or the opinion that you gave in reference to going to trial at this term, in any manner controlled by instructions from the government?

A. No.

Q You were left free, so far as that was concerned, to act on your best professional judgment?

A. I gave my professional judgment, as I stated, to the district attorney and to the Attorney General. I did not suppose that either of them differed from me.

Q. In reference to the writ of habeas corpus, you stated in your examination that the cause of detention was deemed to be sufficiently stated; did you think that a sufficient cause was stated for Davis's detention as a military prisoner?

A. I thought that the return was a sufficient reply to the exigency of the writ on General Burton's part; that he had held him by the military authority of the government.

Q. Was the writ in the ordinary form?

A. Yes; nothing special about it.

Q. Did it require the cause to be stated?

A. Yes; to bring the body, together with the cause.

Q. Did you consider that that was a statement of the cause of his imprisonment?

A. I did.

Q. His being detained by the military was cause for detention?

A. It was General Burton's reason for holding him. I suppose it was the only reason that General Burton had.

Q. Was there to your knowledge any sufficient cause for his detention in the fort?

A. I know of no cause for his detention except that it was a continuance of his capture as a prisoner of war. Whether that is sufficient is a question of law, or of personal opinion, on which I have no particular objection to state my opinion; but it is purely an opinion and no fact.

Q. You do not desire to give your opinion?

A. I say I have no objection to do so. It is for the Committee to determine whether that is proper evidence.

Q. Was he, as a matter of fact, originally held in prison as a prisoner of war?

A. I suppose he was; but I have no more information on the subject than the public at large. I understood, and so stated in court, that on that day, for the first time, he came within judicial control, or was in a position wherein the administration of justice was responsible in regard to his detention.

Q. He had never been arrested on any process from the court up to that time?

A. No.

Q. Had any process been issued for him?

A. I do not know; not with my knowledge.

Q. You said that you supposed it was a continuance of his capture as a prisoner of war?

A. Yes.

Q. Up to what time was he held as a prisoner of war?

A. Until General Burton brought him into court, in obedience to the writ of habeas corpus, as I understood. But this is wholly my judgment and estimate of the facts, as known to me in common with the rest of the community, as to his capture and deposit and safe-keeping.

Q. Did his imprisonment as a prisoner of war continue after peace was declared?

A. I so regard it.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Were you advised with generally in reference to the disposition to be made of the case of Davis by the government?

A. Never otherwise than in the simple relation of an associate counsel on the part of the government in the accusation of treason or other crime for which he was to be judicially brought in question.

Q. Were you instructed by the government, or its officers with whom you conferred, that he was held only on the charge of treason?

A. I never heard of any other indictment or complaint being formally lodged against him than the single indictment which was found at Norfolk.

Q. Were you consulted with before you went to Richmond as to the form of the return?

A. Certainly not as to any form in which the return should be made. That first came up the night before the day when the prisoner was to be produced in court. General Burton was present with the writ, and Mr. Chandler; and I said, "Well now, General, this return must be made out in form. Hand me the writ and I will draw the return."

Q. If he had been held on any other charge than generally as a prisoner of war, would you not have considered it the duty of the government to insist on having it stated in the return?

A. I should, as a lawyer, have thought it of comparatively little importance to return the cause of the previous detention when the substance of the return was the production of the body and a surrender to the court.

Q. Supposing Davis to have been held—as the President has declared he was held, in reply to an inquiry of the Senate—on a charge of complicity in the assassination of the late President, would it not have been his duty to have so returned in order that Davis might still be held on that charge?

A. If he was held under military authority, and as a prisoner of war, although a charge of the nature which you have mentioned was made against him, and formed a reason for his military restraint, I do not suppose it would have been necessary to put that on the return.

Q. I speak of the duty of the government under the circumstances. I ask you the question whether, in that point of view, it was not very important to the interests of public justice that it should be known that there was some other charge on which he was held; and whether that is not the practice of the courts?

A. My own view would be this: that if the government had resolved to terminate his military imprisonment, and to deliver him to the court for restraint by its authority, it could not be important in any legal view to state why the government had held him in military imprisonment.

Q. I find, on reference to an answer of the President to a resolution of the Senate adopted in December, 1865, that he states, through the Secretary of War, whose report he communicates, that "Jefferson Davis has not been arraigned on any indictment or formal charge of crime, but has been indicted for the crime of high treason by the grand jury of the District of Columbia, which indictment is now pending in the supreme court of said District; and is also charged with the crime of inciting the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, and with the murder of Union prisoners of war by starvation, and other barbarous and cruel treatment towards them." I desire to refer you to that statement of the government itself, and to ask you in that connection whether it was not its duty to state those facts in the return to that writ; and whether, if your attention had been called to that matter, you would not have felt bound, as a lawyer, so to advise?

A. I should not have regarded anything as open or suitable for the officer to whom the writ was directed except either to bring or refuse to bring the body into court, and in either case to state by what authority he, as a military officer, held him or claimed to continue to hold him, if he did not bring the body into court. In the latter case, I, as a lawyer, should have immediately thought it most important to consider and to return the particular circumstances under which the continued restraint of the prisoner was based. If Mr. Davis held as a prisoner of war under military authority, were so held subject further to the charge against him for crime or misconduct in his attitude of an enemy or rebel in the conduct of the rebellion, I should not have regarded it as necessary or important for the government, when it was disposed and ready to terminate the military imprisonment, to state to what charges he had been subjected during his restraint as a prisoner of war. If there had been an indictment or complaint judicially found against him in reference to the crime to which you have referred, or any other, it would not have been a matter of the military officer's concern unless he held him in some way under that civil or judicial complaint. It would be for the court or the legal officers of the government, when the military restraint was terminated, to give the reasons then why judicial restraint should be continued.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. You mean to say that that writ controlled General Burton and nobody else?

A. Yes.

Q. Nobody was obliged to come in and furnish anything in the way of reason to General Burton for his return?

A. I do not say that, but I would say this—that General Burton, before making a return, should have the instructions of his military superiors as to whether he should surrender his body or not. It is a part of his return that he did surrender him as ordered by the President.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Is it not of the essence of a good return that it should state, not the authority by which, but the specific cause for which, the prisoner is held?

A. I would suppose it to be a matter of very much less concern when the body is to be delivered to the court than it would be when grounds were set up as a justification for his detention from the process of the court.

Q. If I understood you correctly, you are not certain that you have ever seen a copy of the indictment found against Jefferson Davis?

A. Yes; I stated that I certainly had not carefully examined it.

Q. What time did you go to Richmond?

A. On Sunday, the 12th of May. The time that I saw the indictment was, as I have already stated, if I saw it at all, a year previously.

Q. State whether you made inquiry for, and examined, the record when you went to Richmond?

A. I did not. The district attorney gave me his views.

Q. Then I would infer that you did not go there with the expectation that you would be called upon to try the case at that term; am I right in that inference?

A. I think that is justly inferable from what I have testified to.

Q. Was it not the understanding had with the government, or with its officers who conferred with you before you left Washington, that the case was not to be tried?

A. It is undoubtedly true, precisely as I stated it in court, that I represented the government, (by which I mean the prosecution,) and that I do not propose to prosecute the trial of the prisoner at the present term of that court.

Q. Was there any understanding that he was to be discharged on bail without objection on the part of the government?

A. It was considered that, in that attitude of the government as to proceeding with his trial, an application would be made to bail, and the question whether the offence was bailable of right, or whether, if not bailable of right, it was in the discretion of the court to bail him, was considered. My opinion as a lawyer, was that from the position I was expecting to take, and did take, on the part of the government, an application on the part of his counsel to bail him would be a proper application; that, if the offence charged was bailable of right, the court would be obliged to bail him, and if it was discretionary, the court would exercise its discretion.

Q. Am I to understand you as saying that, in your judgment, it would have been a proper case for the exercise of that discretion on the part of the government?

A. I think undoubtedly, in either alternative, the government saying that it was not ready to proceed to trial, it was a proper case for the court to consider the question whether the prisoner should be admitted to bail.

Q. Were there not good reasons which the government could assign for not trying him; the fact of the long duration of the war, the condition of public sentiment in Virginia; the difficulty of obtaining a verdict in accordance with the law and the facts; the general enormity of the crime? Were not all these circumstances which would have well warranted an objection on the part of counsel for the United States against Davis's admission to bail, and well warranted the judge in refusing bail?

A. If bail were a matter of right, of course nothing would have warranted the judge in refusing it. If bail was a matter of discretion, all those considerations might very properly have influenced the judge's discretion.

Q. I desire to know from you whether you considered them entitled to great weight, and well worthy of presentation?

A. I think they were all mainly involved in the consideration whether the government was ready to proceed to the trial.

Q. That puts the case on the single ground that there was a default of the government in that particular. Now I refer to other considerations by way of neutralizing the effect of that?

A. It is purely a matter of judgment. Some of the reasons which you have named I should not have thought judicious, as counsel, to name; and others were perfectly well understood, I suppose, without naming them.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. At the time you had interviews with the President was anything said by him in reference to Davis's complicity in the assassination?

A. I cannot recollect that nothing was said, and I have no recollection that anything was said.

Q. Do you recollect any reference being made at either interview to the proclamation of the President charging him with complicity, and offering the reward, or to the payment of the reward?

A. No; I have no recollection that they were topics of conversation. I think, on reflection, that it is more probable that in these interviews something may have been said in the way of consultation as to whether any trial, other than judicial, of Mr. Davis should or should not be had. I think it very possible that that may have been a subject which would occur, perhaps which did occur. But the whole occasion, the circumstances of the interview, and my whole connection with the subject, were with reference to a judicial trial in a civil court. I never regarded myself as having been asked to represent the government or to advise it at all on the question of military trial, and I have no doubt I truly understood my position.

Q. At any time after your last interview with the President did you seek any further interview with him on the subject of the trial of Davis?

A. I never did.

Q. Did you receive from him any intimation of a desire to see you?

A. Never. Both my interviews with him were in company with the Attorney General.

Q. During Mr. Speed's term of office?

A. Yes.

Q You never saw the President on the subject during Mr. Stanbery's term?

A. No. I have not seen the President since Mr. Stanbery has been in office.

Q. In your interview with Mr. Stanbery, on the Saturday preceding the hearing at Richmond, was any statement made by Mr. Stanbery expressing the opinions or words of the President in reference to the matter?

A. I think not at all. I think there was no conference except what belonged to three lawyers consulting together, representing the same interest.

Q. Was the conference confined to the point whether bail could be claimed as a right, and to the other point whether it was in the discretion of the court, or did the conference also include the consideration of the question whether, under all the circumstances, the government ought to listen to the request for the release of Davis on bail?

A. I think the whole subject of professional consideration was, whether we were going to try him at that term, in the first place; and secondly, what consequences would follow from that decision taken by the government. First, under this second head, whether the crime was bailable of right, in which case there would be no alternative but his being admitted to bail the moment he came under judicial instead of military control. Second, if not bailable of right, it was known that he was bailable at the discretion of the court, and then, I think, we expected that the court would exercise its discretion under all the circumstances, and we perfectly understood that the government had no other duty than to see that those were fairly presented.

Q. At that conference did you reach a conclusion as to whether, as a question of law, he was bailable as a matter of right?

A. I examined the statute to learn that he was bailable as a matter of right unless he was capitally punishable; and I was told, and the fact is, I suppose, that the indictment found against him was wholly under the act of 1862.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Under which section?

A. That I cannot say. I probably assumed that it covered both sections. I do not know how the fact is.

Q. You do not know whether the indictment contained any more than one count.

A. That I cannot say. I never have examined that indictment as one on which the trial was expected to be had. The opinion of the district attorney and of the Attorney General seemed to be that on an indictment under that act he was bailable of right. I examined, in that connection, (not in company with those gentlemen, but afterwards) the charge of the circuit court in California on a trial for treason had there against some persons engaged in fitting out a ship to take part in the rebellion against the government, in which I understood that court to hold that, on the indictment in that case, which was under the act of 1862, the penalty of death could not be inflicted. That is all the examination I gave to the question. I did, however, distinctly inquire whether it was intended by the district attorney to find any other bill at that court, and he told me it was not.

Q. You did not then look into the history of that act for the purpose of ascertaining the reasons on which it was founded?

A. No; they were all merged in the act itself.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. At any time previous to that interview did you have a consultation with Mr. Speed, or Mr. Stanbery, or Mr. Chandler, with reference to the expediency of obtaining another indictment on the ground of the insufficiency of the pending indictment?

A. My impression is that the way the subject came up was with Mr. Speed, that whenever it should be determined that the trial was to be proceeded with, and the district in which it would be advisable that the trial should take place was ascertained, that it would be necessary to take up the subject of this indictment. The indictment in the District of Columbia was also spoken of. That indictment I never saw, and I never understood that the government had any expectation of proceeding with it, nor did I advise it.

Q. The subject of obtaining a new indictment at Richmond was never taken up?

A. Never.

Q. Is it, then, to be understood that, so far as you knew, there was no purpose on the part of the Attorney General, or of the government here, to try Mr. Davis in the district of Virginia; that up to the time when you went to Richmond, on the 12th of May, there had never been a purpose to try Mr. Davis?

A. So far as I ever knew, or so far as my interviews with the President went, I believe that the purpose and wish of the President were that the trial of Mr. Davis, whenever it could be expected to result in conviction, should take place; and we lawyers had no other purpose, or wish, or duty, than to satisfy ourselves when and where such prosecution could take place with the expectation of a result suitable to public justice.

Q. Could you have expected, reasonably, at any future time, better assurances that public justice would be done in the trial of Mr. Davis, than the assurance which you received at Richmond from the district attorney, and from the judge, that in their opinion the jury which would be empaneled would find a verdict according to the law and the facts; and if you waited for better assurance, what kind of assurance would have satisfied you, representing the government, that it was safe to proceed to trial?

A. If the government had expected and insisted upon the trial of Mr. Davis at the term held in Richmond in May, I should have undertaken to compare opinions with the district attorney, (whether with the judge or not I do not know; I am not in the habit of consulting with judges about trials,) and endeavored to assist him, or get him to assist me in coming to a conclusion as to the probabilities of the jury. I should have regarded him as much better authority on the subject than myself, except that some experience or observation of my own, not based on personal knowledge of the feeling there, might correct his judgment.

Q. I understood, from a former answer of yours, that in the conversation between yourself, Judge Underwood, and Mr. Chandler, preceding the return of the writ next day, both Judge Underwood and Mr. Chandler expressed the opinion that, in the existing state of public sentiment, such a jury would be empaneled as would find a verdict according to the law and the facts?

A. That is so; but I was not there to consult Judge Underwood. I was there to state to him what I expected to do.

Q. What better assurance could the law officer of the government expect as a necessary pre-requisite to proceeding with the trial?

A. It did not form the subject of conference, and if it had, I should have had given to me in responsible detail the reasons and views on which they based their opinion.

Q. Why was not that inquiry instituted at the time, and your own opinion formed as to whether such a jury was likely to be empaneled?

A. Because, as I have stated, the result of the conference between Mr. Chandler, the Attorney General, and myself, was that the government would not proceed to trial at that time, and that the indictment was not satisfactory.

Q. The fact that the indictment was not satisfactory was known as long ago as Mr. Speed's time?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know any reason why a new indictment had not been found?

A. I do not know any reason; that is to say, I do not know any other reason than that it never formed any further subject of conference on my part with anybody. It is a matter on which I should have nothing to do until it was brought to my attention either by the district attorney or the Attorney General.

Q. It was understood in that early conference, a year ago or more, that there would be no trial ever had by the government on the then existing indictment?

A. Mr. Chandler was a party to that conference. It was Mr. Speed's opinion, expressed to me about the matter, that whenever we made up our mind that we could, with proper care to the public interest, proceed to the trial of Mr. Davis, the subject of indictment would need to be considered.

Q. Then does it follow, as a matter of fact, that up to the 13th of May the government had never reached the determination that it would proceed to the trial of Mr. Davis?

A. It is certainly to be understood that I had never been advised or requested by the law officers of the government to be ready to attend the trial of Mr. Davis. I was occasionally at Washington, and not unfrequently in company with Attorney General Speed, in relation to matters of business; and there was, undoubtedly, more or less reflection and consideration between us as to what we should do.

Q. Is not this the fact, that always, and up to the time when Mr. Davis was brought to Richmond, there was no settled purpose on the part of the government to try him?

A. I think there was a settled intention of the government to try Davis when and where it could be satisfied that a conviction could be had; and it is also true that there never has been an opinion on the part of the advisers of the government that at any particular term of court the trial was desirable.

Q. Was it not the purpose of the government to postpone and delay the trial indefinitely, so far as you know, and continuing, perhaps, from the time you were first employed in the matter up to the time when Davis was actually released on bail?

A. So far as a desire or intention was concerned, I think it was the intention and desire of the government to try him as soon and under such circumstances as would secure his conviction; and I know of no change or deviation from that purpose on the part of any one. Certainly there was no such deviation on my part.

Q. What act was done by the Attorney General, or directed by him to be done, at any time during your connection with the case, which looked to the trial of Jefferson Davis?

A. Mr. Speed, Governor Clifford, and myself, had very careful and thorough consideration, during the period of our joint examination of the matter, of the questions of law and of fact, and as to the district to which we might best look for the opportunities of a trial which would result in a proper verdict; and all the considerations of facts, and the responsibilities of the government's action in a public trial, were taken into view so far as our intelligence of them went.

Q. What was the result of that conference on the question of district—as to which district of the country should be selected for his trial, within those districts from which the selection could be made?

A. I think the result was, that, whatever the fate of the prosecution, it was most suitable that the trial should take place in the Virginia district. That was a mixed question of law and of political duty.

Q. That being the opinion of the counsel, and it also being the opinion of the counsel that the indictment thus found in that district was unsatisfactory, what step was then taken looking to the trial of Davis?

A. So far as I had to do with the subject, it ended, at every time it was considered, at the period I have named, in the opinion that we could not then proceed in any court to be held in Virginia.

Q. What was the difficulty?

A. Besides the general difficulty and uncertainty as to the conduct of the jury, I always regarded it an important consideration whether the Chief Justice would preside on the trial; and I think that was the opinion of Mr. Speed also.

Q. Omitting the conversation in regard to the presence of the Chief Justice, was there any obstacle, of which you had any knowledge, in the way of an effort to obtain an indictment which should meet the case?

A. No.

Q. There was no effort made?

A. I did not know that, until Mr. Chandler came to me the first week in May.

Q. Was it stated by Mr. Chandler, or by Judge Underwood, that they did expect, or had reason to expect, that the Chief Justice would attend the court at Richmond at the close of the term of the Supreme Court here, which was expected to occur about the 20th of May?

A. Judge Underwood stated in court, on Monday, at some stage of the proceedings there, that he had a letter from the Chief Justice, saying that he would be there in the first week of June, I think.

Q. The grand jury was then in session, was it not?

A. I so understood.

Q. Was there, then, any practical difficulty in the way of presenting the matter anew to the grand jury, and asking for such a bill as would meet the case?

A. There was no difficulty on my part.

Q. There was none stated by Mr. Chandler?

A. None. I suppose he had some reasons satisfactory to himself. I did not inquire.

Q. Did you know of any difficulty in the way of postponing the trial until after the 20th of May, or until the first week in June, and arraigning him on such an indictment as might be found by the grand jury?

A. I dare say that, in that interval, he might have been bailed.

Q. What reason, if any, is known to you why that course was not taken?

A. No other than the general reasons I have given.

Q. Is there any other reason than that, representing the government, you were not ready to try Davis?

A. That is, that the government was not ready—that is, was not intending to try him. I do not know of any other.

Q. What reason existed, within your knowledge, why the government was not ready, after the 20th of May, or by the 1st of June?

A. I do not know of any special or circumstantial reasons.

Q. What authority, then, had you for saying that the government was not ready to try Davis?

A. I said the government did not intend to try him. That was the result of my conference with Mr. Chandler and the Attorney General.

Q. What was said by the Attorney General which justified you in making that statement, or on which you rested for support for the statement which you made?

A. A concurrence between himself, Mr. Chandler, and myself, that the government did not propose to try him at that time.

Q. And what reasons existed, so far as you knew, in the mind of the Attorney General, either of his own, or derived from his knowledge of the views of the President, which led to that concurrence on his part?

A. I did not understand him to give any views from the President at all on the subject.

Q. Did he give any reasons as of his own?

A. I do not think he did—any other reason than that the government was not expecting or proposing to try him at that term.

Q. Can you say whether or not, at that time, Mr. Stanbery had any purpose to try him at any other term?

A. I cannot speak on that subject. I said to the Attorney General that I had assumed always that whenever the trial should take place, the Attorney General would represent the government. I had never any other expectation than that. I expected to be associated with him. I was not retained to take the place of the Attorney General.

Q. You expected the Attorney General to attend at the trial and take his place in court?

A. I did; but it was not based on anything that had passed between Mr. Stanbery and myself in relation to it. Since Mr. Stanbery has been Attorney General very little has occurred on the subject. Mr. Speed, I assumed, and had a right to assume, expected to take part in the trial.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you not know that Mr. Stanbery takes a different view of his duty?

A. Mr. Stanbery, I understand, takes this view: that the legal obligations of his office do not require him to represent the government on any criminal trial; and whatever I do understand, as to any purpose or inclination on his part to take part in the trial, if it ever takes place, I learned, for the first time, on that Saturday preceding the return of the writ at Richmond.

Q. Did you not understand from him that it was not his purpose to take part in trials away from Washington?

A. I have stated what I understood to be his view of his duty; and I presume I understood that he did not feel called upon to do more than his office required him to do, except under special circumstances; but I insisted that there was a reasonable public expectation, in case of the trial of Mr. Davis for treason, that the Attorney General would lead for the government.

Q. Did Mr. Stanbery, in any manner, undertake to control the prosecution of Mr. Davis at the last term of the court, or to give any directions whatever in reference to it?

A. He certainly did not overrule Mr. Chandler or me, but we did confer together

Q. You have stated several times, in substance, that it was not the purpose of the government to try Mr. Davis at that term of the court—that you so understood it. Now, I wish to know if you understood that from Mr. Stanbery by anything that he said?

A. I have stated, I suppose, all that I can state on that subject—that I conferred with the Attorney General and the district attorney, at the request of both of them, and that the result of that conference was, that we did not expect to try Mr. Davis at that term.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. And in that the Attorney General concurred?

A. So I have stated.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you mean that he did anything more than not to dissent?

A. I mean that we were of the same opinion. The Attorney General did not then take this view of the matter—that he, by his office, was not required to take any part in the trial—which I met by saying, that "whether that be so or not, I think that public opinion, and the duty of the government, in a trial of this nature, will require the Attorney General to lead for it when the trial takes place;" and I had no other idea than that.

Q. It would seem from some of your answers that there was some purpose in the law officer of the government not to try the case at that term, for reasons which were either not given, or which you have not given; were there any reasons?

A. I do not think there were any other reasons than such as I have given.

Q. As I understand, you learned, for the first time, at the Saturday conference that the Attorney General would not lead at that trial?

A. Yes; that was the first time the subject had been spoken of. I never considered myself as substituted for the Attorney General in that prosecution.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Did the President, in either of your interviews with him, refer you to the Attorney General?

A. They were both in the presence of the Attorney General.

Q. Did you understand the President as intending to leave the question as to whether Jefferson Davis should be tried at all, as well as the question when and where the trial should take place, to the law officers of the government?

A. I cannot say that I understood he would leave it to them, but I did understand that he regarded us as responsible for our best advice on the subject.

Q. You were retained not only in that case, but in such other indictments for treason as might be found?

A. Yes, so I understood. It was in this way: I came on in response to a telegraphic message, and the Attorney General then told me that he desired to retain me as counsel for the government in the prosecution of Mr. Davis, or of any others of the leaders of the rebels (perhaps some such expression as that was used) who should be prosecuted.

Q. There were indictments found against some other leaders of the rebellion?

A. That I do not know. I have never been advised with in relation to other leaders. At that time I believe all the members of the rebel cabinet were in confinement.

Q. You have never received any notice that an indictment has been found against any other?

A. No; I have never been advised of or requested to attend to any other matter. I never regarded myself as under any other relations to the prosecution than as associate counsel with the Attorney General, bound to do what I could on the trial, and before the trial to give the best advice I could to the government on questions either of policy or of law.

Q. Have you been advised with, either by the President or the Attorney General, as to the advisability of proceedings against other leaders of the rebellion except Davis?

Q. No, I do not think I have been.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Are any steps being taken at present towards obtaining another indictment against Davis?

A. Not within my knowledge.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. In the consultation between the Attorney General, Mr. Chandler, and yourself, did not Mr. Chandler express the opinion, which he afterwards repeated at Richmond, that the government might go on then safely with the trial?

A. I do not know.

Q. Was not that one of the considerations involved?

A. It was one of the considerations involved in the general opinion and advice.

Q. In that connection I wish to enquire whether Mr. Chandler expressed an opinion of the same character as he subsequently expressed in Richmond?

A. I have no recollection; I cannot say whether it was or was not said; I should just as readily believe that it was as that it was not.

Q. The opinion did not surprise you when it came from him at Richmond?

A. It did not convince me. He had seen me in New York, where he had come for the express purpose of talking this matter over with me.

Q. Did he express the same opinion in New York?

A. I think he did—I have no doubt he did. That would be one of my first questions, and I have no reason for thinking he may not have said so before the Attorney General.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Have you been asked for, or given, any opinion on the question whether Jefferson Davis is liable to be convicted of treason proper for acts committed by him since the 17th of July, 1862, or only for rebellion, under section 2 of the act of July 17, 1862?

A. I have regarded the whole question as one of simple treason, under the act of 1790. I never had in my mind any other trial for, or accusation of, treason, except that involving the penalty of death.

Q. Then, if I understand you, you did not concur in the opinion of Judge Field in the case tried in the circuit court of California?

A. That was an indictment under the act of 1862.

Q. The indictment of Davis was under the act of 1862.

A. Yes; but then another bill could be found. The subject of Davis's trial, conviction and punishment has been always, in my mind, treason, with penalty of death.

Q. Assuming that he is to be tried under the act of 1862, have you been asked for, or have you given, an opinion on the question whether he would be liable to be convicted of treason proper for acts committed by him since 17th July, 1862?

A. I have not.

Q. Have you considered that question?

A. No; I have never been asked to consider the question of his prosecution, or trial, or amenableness to justice under the act of 1862.

Q. Has the limitation in the act of 1862 run out yet?
A. That I do not know.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Was there anything said by the district attorney, during your interview with him at Richmond, about the danger of having an indictment found by the grand jury at the then term, because of its being composed in part of persons of color?
A. Nothing. I do not think the idea was suggested.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. There was no application at the present term of the circuit court in Virginia, while you were there, for a venire for a new grand jury?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. You were not advised with about the necessity for that?
A. Not in the least. I took the district attorney's answer as final that he did not propose to find an indictment at the present term of the court.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1867.

WILLIAM E. CHANDLER, having been recalled for further answers to questions put on former examination, testifies as follows:

Upon examining the records of the department it seems that all the names of treasury officers mentioned in House Executive Document No. 67, 2d session 39th Congress, were sent from the department to the President, except the following: James M. Barrett, collector of customs, Plymouth, North Carolina, who declined the office, and E. H. Willis, who, having held the office for four years and been confirmed by the Senate previously, was retained in office; John A. Dix, naval officer at New York, who resigned November 26, 1866, and also those embraced in the list of officers of the customs appointed during the recess of the Senate in 1865, and whose names were not subsequently submitted to the Senate, indicated at the bottom of page 12. These names were not sent to the President for reasons stated in a note at the bottom of page 13, as follows:

Of the number enumerated above, whose nominations were withheld from the Senate, two died during the recess and one during the session of the Senate, three could not take the oath required by law, three were removed for malfeasance or misfeasance in office, two resigned, four continued in office until the nominations of others were submitted in their places, and the names of eleven were accidentally omitted in sending in nominations. Of the latter, appointments of nine persons have since been made in their places.

The name of Peter McGough, found on page 9, was also omitted at a former session, to be sent by the department to the President.

All the names of officers of the internal revenue appointed during the recess of 1865, and whose nominations were withheld from the Senate in 1866, found at the bottom of page 9, were sent by the department to the President.

The records of the department do not show that the President sent for the brief and recommendations in any case in the lists referred to. It has been his practice to send in some cases, but not by written instructions, and the records of the department would not ordinarily show whether the President had sent for the papers. The general practice is, as I have stated, to retain the brief and recommendations at the departments, mentioning the names of the principal persons recommending the appointment, on a slip of paper or in the letter of transmission.

The whole number of names sent to the Senate which that body failed to act upon appears to be eleven, being the officers of customs mentioned in the second list on page 12, and the first list on page 13 of the document in question, as follows:

List of officers of the customs reappointed, in whose cases no action had been taken by the Senate on their nominations in 1866.

Name of person appointed.	Office.	District.	Port and State.	Date of nomination to the Senate.	Date of reappointment.
Wm. L. Ashmore	Collector	Burlington	Lamberton, N. J	Mar. 3, 1866.	Aug. 3, 1866.
Wm. F. Johnson	do	Philadelphia	Philadelphia, Pa	July 26, 1866.	do
Robert M. Klug	do	St. Mary's	St. Mary's, Ga	Dec. 4, 1866.	do
C. H. Hildreth	Surveyor	Gloucester	Gloucester, Mass	June 2, 1866.	do
Sylvester Birdsell	do	Bridgetown	Camden, N. J	Jan. 3, 1866.	do
John W. Bennett	do	Annapolis	St. Mary's, Md	do	do
S. Ferguson Beach	do	Alexandria	Alexandria, Va	July 18, 1866.	Aug. 17, 1866.
Wm. Q. Smith	do	New Orleans	Selma, Ala	Jan. 3 & May 11, 1866.	Aug. 3, 1866.
Isaac W. Jones	Assayer U. S. mint.	Charlotte	Charlotte, N. C	June 26, 1866.	Aug. 4, 1866.

List of officers of the customs appointed in place of those whose nominations were not acted upon by the Senate in 1866.

Name of person appointed.	Office.	District.	Port and State.	Date of appointment.	Name of person whose nomination was not acted upon.
William G. Snyder	Surveyor	Tappahannock	Yeocomico, Va	Aug. 6, 1866.	John H. Norris.
Thomas E. Durnut	do	New Orleans	Quincy, Ill	Aug. 23, 1866.	James J. Langdon.

In answer to the interrogatory submitted by Mr. Lawrence, I have to submit a list of the officers of the customs who were appointed, but failed to take the test oath, stating the date of the appointment of such officers, the date of removal or resignation where the officer has been displaced; also, a similar list of internal revenue officers, with a letter of the Commissioner accompanying, as follows:

Name and office.	Station.	Date of appointment.	Date of removal or resignation.	Remarks.
James M. Matthews, collector	Tappahannock, Va.	Sept. 6, 1865	Not displaced.	Proper oath on file.
William S. Croft, collector	Georgetown, S. C.	July 22, 1865	July 13, 1866	No payment.
Gordon Forbes, surveyor	Yeocomico, Va	Sept. 21, 1865	Aug. 6, 1866	Do.
William Y. Leitch, surveyor	Charleston, S. C.	July 21, 1865	July 13, 1866	Do.
F. M. Robertson, exam'r of drugs	do	July 22, 1865	June 21, 1866	Do.
E. M. Lazarus, appraiser	do	do	July 13, 1866	Do.
J. F. W. Walter, appraiser	do	do	do	Do.
J. F. Marrast, inspector	Mobile, Ala	Nov. 10, 1865	May 14, 1866	Proper oath filed.
R. W. Woodbridge, dep'y collector	Savannah, Ga	Oct. 2, 1865	Nov. 30, 1866	No payment.
Z. N. Winkler, clerk	do	do	Not known	Do.
Octave Aubert, clerk	Brownsville, Texas	Sept. 1, 1865	do	Proper oath filed.
Ernest Tasset, bookkeeper	do	Nov. 25, 1865	do	Do.
Fortune Jones, messenger	do	do	do	No payment.
Edmund Daly, inspector	do	Sept. 20, 1865	do	Proper oath filed
Francis Reast, deputy collector and inspector.	Boston, Texas	Nov. 25, 1865	do	Do.
Jos. Backus, mounted inspector	Saluria, Texas	Dec. 6, 1865	do	Do.
Jas. McCoppen, deputy collector	do	Nov. 11, 1865	Mar. 23, 1866	No payment.
Thos. P. McManus, dep'y collector	Eagle Pass, Texas	Dec. 6, 1865	Not known	Do.
James Coffee, deputy collector	Saluria, Texas	Nov. 20, 1865	do	Proper oath filed.
W. B. C. Duryee, dep'y collector	Fernandina, Fla	April 20, 1865	do	Do.
Benj. Clark, porter	do	May 15, 1865	do	Do.
W. H. Sweetzer, temporary inspector	Beaufort, N. C	Not known	do	No payment.
J. H. Tayler, temporary inspector	do	do	do	Do.
Geo. P. Thayer, clerk	Nashville, Tenn	Aug. 22, 1865	do	Do.

List of Internal Revenue Officers—Continued.

Name and office.	Station.	Date of appointment.	Date of removal or resignation.	Remarks.
J. B. Murtaugh, deputy weigher	New Orleans, La	Not known	do	Proper oath filed.
J. H. Ball, aid to revenue	do	do	do	Do.
Joshua H. Dailey, inspector	Hatteras Inlet, N. C.	Oct. 25, 1865	Jan. —, 1866	No payment.
Albert Bingham, chief clerk	Port Royal, S. C.	Oct. 6, 1865	Oct. —, 1866	Proper oath filed.
W. F. Bingham, temporary clerk	do	do	Dec. 1, 1866	Do.
T. M. Gardner, temporary inspector	Wilmington, N. C.	Sept. 1, 1865	Not displaced	Do.
H. D. Gilbert, temporary inspector	do	do	Declined	Do.
W. G. Burch, temporary inspector	do	do	Oct. 17, 1866	No payment.
T. B. Smith, weigher and gauger	do	Nov. 6, 1865	Not displaced	Proper oath filed.
John H. Wood, porter	Charleston, S. C.	Not known	Sept. 4, 1866	No payment.
Squire Summers, porter	Memphis, Tenn	Sept. 1, 1865	Not known	Do.
E. Murray, inspector, weigher, &c	Mobile, Ala	Nov. 10, 1865	do	Proper oath filed.
E. K. Lowd, deputy collector	New Smyrna, Fla	Nov. 17, 1865	do	Do.
F. J. Lord, special dep'y collector	Wilmington, N. C.	Sept. 1, 1865	July 7, 1866	Proper oath on file.
J. Jansen, night inspector	Galveston, Texas	Nov. 27, 1865	Not known	No payment.
Charles Jersig, messenger	do	Jan. 15, 1866	May 1, 1866	Proper oath filed.
C. Ricklefsen, night watchman	do	do	Not displaced	Do.
R. Smith, night inspector	do	Nov. 27, 1865	Not known	No payment.
Charles M. Fennel, clerk	Pensacola, Fla	Oct. 1, 1865	do	Do.
B. Williams, weigher and gauger	Apalachicola, Fla	Dec. 6, 1865	do	Do.
C. D. Williams, clerk	Mobile, Ala	Sept. 18, 1865	Dec. 1, 1865	Do.
J. O'Brien, watchman	do	Dec. 14, 1865	Not known	Proper oath filed.
W. Frens, watchman	do	do	Nov. 6, 1866	Do.
J. Espala, bargeman	do	do	Not known	No payment.
J. P. Burrill, clerk	Savannah, Ga	Dec. 27, 1865	do	Do.
C. K. Osgood, inspector	do	Dec. 8, 1865	Dec. 10, 1866	Proper oath filed.
E. Wilmot Walter, inspector	Charleston, S. C.	Feb. 3, 1866	June 28, 1866	No payment.
Isaac Hargreaves, porter	do	Oct. 24, 1865	Not known	Proper oath filed.
R Edmonds, deputy collector	Tappahannock, Va	Dec. 14, 1865	Mar. 4, 1867	Do.
George Westerfield, inspector	Brownsville, Texas	July 17, 1865	Not known	Do.
T. M. Wells, acting naval officer	New Orleans, La	Mar. 18, 1865	July 28, 1866	Do.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, May 30, 1867.

SIR: Agreeably to your request, I herewith hand you a schedule of the names of assessors, collectors, and assistant assessors, who have received compensation for services rendered, but who have taken the test oath, so called, in a qualified form. The salary of these officers was paid by the collectors of their respective collection districts, acting under the law as disbursing officers. The commissions were paid by the accounting officers of the Treasury Department.

Under the law and the practice of the department the collectors of the several districts send to this office their monthly estimates for the current expenses of their several districts during the month for which such estimates are made. These estimates are carefully examined in this office and forwarded to that of the Fifth Auditor of the Treasury, by whom, after examination, they are sent to the office of the First Comptroller for further examination. For such sum as the Comptroller shall ultimately allow, warrants are drawn by the Hon. Secretary of the Treasury, and drafts are issued by the Treasurer in favor of the several collectors.

It has long been the practice of the department to forward to assessors the commissions for their assistant assessors; with these commissions are sent the oath of office and the test oath. These two oaths have been printed together.

The act of June 30, 1864, provided that certificates of the official oaths of assessors and assistant assessors should be delivered to the collector of the district for which such assessors or assistant assessors should be appointed. This, it is presumed, was for the guidance of collectors in making their disbursements. The test oaths with the official oaths of these officers have been filed with the collectors. In many instances, therefore, these oaths have not been received at the department until several months after they were issued, especially from remote and newly established districts.

I have not now the means of determining at what time the certificates of the assistant assessors whose names appear upon the schedule were received at my office in Washington. The oaths of collectors accompany their official bonds, and are filed in the office of the First Comptroller of the Treasury.

I have stated the disposition of these certificates and the manner of paying these officers thus particularly, in order that you may see precisely where the responsibility of these payments belongs.

Very respectfully,

E. A. ROLLINS,
Commissioner.

Hon. WILLIAM E. CHANDLER,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

Schedule of names of assessors and collectors who have received compensation for services, but who have taken the test oath, so called, of July 2, 1862, in a qualified form, and amount paid.

State.	District.	Name.	Office.	Amount paid.
S. Carolina...	1st.....	Montgomery Moses.....	Collector.....	$1,098 00	{ Salary, $410 00 { Coms., 688 00
Alabama.....	1st.....	Alex. M. McDowell.....	Assessor.....	1,039 40	Commissions.
Texas.....	1st.....	Benj. F. McDonough.....	Assessor.....	607 58	Salary.

Schedule of names of assistant assessors who have received compensation for services, but have taken the test oath, so called, of July 2, 1862, in a qualified form, and the amount paid.

District	Division.	Name.	State.	Am't paid.
1st.....	5th.....	Daniel Valentine.....	North Carolina.....	$595 43
3d.....	3d.....	Bolivar J. Hays.....	South Carolina.....	124 62
3d.....	14th.....	J. M. Graham.....	South Carolina.....	232 15
3d.....	31st.....	H. F. Adickes.....	South Carolina.....	279 20
2d.....	4th.....	J. H. Griffin.....	Georgia.....	656 98
2d.....	10th.....	A. N. Hines.....	Georgia.....	1,806 26
2d.....	17th.....	Byron B. Bowers.....	Georgia.....	808 16
2d.....	18th.....	Oliver T. Bacon.....	Georgia.....	651 73
2d.....	19th.....	Thomas W. King.....	Georgia.....	1,686 41
2d.....	27th.....	Geo. W. Forbes.....	Georgia.....	587 16
2d.....	31st.....	Edward Barber.....	Georgia.....	624 19
1st.....	3d.....	Ishmael S. Harwell.....	Alabama.....	1,094 60
1st.....	6th.....	S. M. Lanier.....	Alabama.....	847 35
1st.....	7th.....	Lem. A. Collier.....	Alabama.....	193 01
1st.....	9th.....	C. W. Braswell.....	Alabama.....	402 07
1st.....	10th.....	John W. Leslie.....	Alabama.....	567 21
1st.....	11th.....	Thos. E. Randolph.....	Alabama.....	1,213 60
1st.....	12th.....	Chas. R. Warren.....	Alabama.....	1,220 21
1st.....	13th.....	Joseph Silver.....	Alabama.....	610 43
1st.....	15th.....	Lewis J. Laird.....	Alabama.....	349 78
1st.....	18th.....	Edward Ward.....	Alabama.....	703 04

The only case of the payment of money to any officers who failed to take the test oath are those explained by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in his letter accompanying the list before placed in evidence, furnished from his office. As soon as it became evident that Congress would not modify the law requiring the test oath to be administered, it was decided by the department, with the consent of the President, to procure the resignation of, or to remove, every officer who had failed to take the oath. This decision was reached about the first of June, 1866; and thereupon the following letter was addressed to the officers named at the end of the same:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 4, 1866.

SIR: On account of your inability to take the oath required by law, I am reluctantly compelled to suggest that I shall be under the necessity of requesting you to forward your resignation, to take effect as soon as a successor is appointed and qualified. The department will make a communication to Congress upon the subject of the compensation for services already rendered by officers who have been unable to take the oath, and I trust that suitable provisions will be made in some way for such payment.

I am, respectfully,

(Signed) H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

James M. Matthews; also to F. M. Robertson, W. Y. Leitch, J. F. W. Walter, W. S. Crofts, Gordon Forbes.

On the second of June I addressed to all the commissioned officers of customs in the southern States, thirty-seven in number, the following letter:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 2, 1866.

SIR: I am directed by the Secretary to instruct you to dispense at once with the services of all your subordinates who cannot take the oath prescribed by act of July 2, 1862.

I am, respectfully,

(Signed) WM. E. CHANDLER,
Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

To all Commissioned Officers of the Customs (37) in the southern States.

Previous to this, on the 11th of May, the Secretary had addressed the following letter to all commissioned officers of customs in the southern States:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, May 11, 1866.

SIR: Hereafter you will nominate no person for appointment under this department who cannot take the oath of office and allegiance prescribed by the act approved July 2, 1862.

You will state the fact in your nominations that they can take the oath referred to.

I am, very respectfully,

(Signed) H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

To all Commissioned Officers of Customs (40) in the southern States.

And these notices were followed up until all officers who could not take the oath were displaced, as stated in the lists produced. I cannot find that John Devlin has ever been employed as an officer in the custom-house at New York. James Develin was a marker in the custom-house, but went out in 1858, and is the only name of Develin I can find that exists upon the books of the custom-house.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

In cases of officers appointed by the President, and whose names were not sent to the Senate for confirmation, you have stated that, with certain exceptions, the nominations were sent from the Treasury Department to be signed by him; will you state at what time such nominations were sent?

A. They were all, I have no doubt, seasonably sent to the President. I know it was the intention of myself, with reference to the customs appointments, and of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with reference to the internal revenue appointments, to get the nominations to the Executive mansion in ample time for consideration by the President before sending them to the Senate. There may possibly have been an exception to this rule, but I do not remember it.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29, 1867.

JOSEPH R. COBB sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know anything of an application for pardon by one Clarence J. Howell?

A. I do.

Q. State what you know about it.

A. In October, 1865, S. S. Jones called at the Union Hotel, Georgetown, where I was residing, and presented his card as an attorney-at-law, stating that he wanted to see Mrs. Cobb; that he was desirous of obtaining a pardon for a friend. We then had our trunks packed and were on the eve of going to Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, in reference to a petition signed by Governor Curtin and other prominent men for the establishment of a pension office at Harrisburg. While in Harrisburg I received a telegraphic despatch to come to Washington immediately. The despatch was addressed to Mrs. Cobb, and had no name signed to it, but, I presumed, came from this man Jones. We came down to Washington, and stopped at the Avenue House, on the corner of Seventh street. A few days after this, on Saturday, November 5, while lying sick at the Avenue House, a card was sent up to our room, with the name of S. S. Jones. I put on my pants, went down into the parlor, and Jones introduced me to his friend Clarence J. Howell, stating that he was a refugee from Canada, and that he was being pursued by Baker's detectives. He wanted a pardon. He thought if he could get released from the detectives, and get to see Mr. Stanton, he could manage the matter himself; that he was stopping at Willard's Hotel under an assumed name. He wanted to see my wife, understanding that she had some influence and could assist him. I told him Mrs. Cobb had then gone to Willard's, and that he would probably find her in the parlor there. They started off. Howell returned again in the evening, and had a petition drawn up—and very well and ably drawn up—purporting to have been witnessed before a magistrate, and to have a notarial seal, in Canada. Among other things, he stated that on one occasion he had, at the risk of his own life, saved that of Brigadier General John P. Slough. I had known General Slough well. We were schoolmates in Ohio for many years. General Slough was not only a general in the army but a democrat in politics, and very favorable to the administration, and a warm personal friend of Secretary Stanton. Mrs. Cobb took the petition to the Attorney General, and also went, by reference, with it to Judge Holt. Judge Holt said there were no such charges against that man as he had alleged; that there was no sentence of death against him; that there were no such disabilities against him as he himself admitted, and no reason for his not obtaining his pardon. She then went to the President with the petition, stating the information Judge Holt had given her, and also stating that he had been the means of saving General John P. Slough's life. That was the principal appeal made in connection with the petition. During Tuesday and Wednesday she went with it to the Secretary of State, to the Attorney General, and to the President, and Wednesday evening the pardon was granted and delivered to Mrs. Cobb with the condition that, before being given to the party, he must take the oath of allegiance. During that evening Howell called upon Mrs. Cobb and myself, and, after seeing the pardon, paid $200, the residue of the commission agreed upon, $100 having been paid in advance. He was then very anxious to obtain the pardon. I told him he could not have it, but that if he would call Thursday morning I would go with him to a magistrate, and, when he had taken the oath of allegiance, he could have it. He agreed to that and went out, promising to call in the morning; and in about twenty minutes after Baker's detectives arrived. Somebody knocked at the door, and a man walked in, remarking, "I have been looking for you some time. I know you both." Said I, "Who are you?" He said, "I am General Baker, of the War Department." Said I, "Have you any warrant?" He replied, "I do not require any warrant; get on your duds, and go with me." We hesitated. He said, "If you want notoriety I will give you all the notoriety you want." I told him we did not want notoriety and did not want any difficulty. I put on my coat and hat, and Mrs. Cobb put on her furs and bonnet, went down stairs, got into a carriage, and drove with them to Baker's headquarters. He took us at first into the reception room. He then separated us, and took Mrs. Cobb up stairs. What took place there I have no knowledge of, not being present. About 12 o'clock that night he released us, having entirely changed his tone. He was very polite, invited us to take a carriage, and told the driver to take us home. The next day I had him indicted for robbery and for felony. He sent a note up to our room at the hotel, signed "Gen. Baker," requesting my wife to call at the Executive mansion and see the President.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you that note?

A. No, sir; it was a little intrinsic thing. I put no value upon it, and it passed away. One of his lawyers or advisers, ex-Governor Ford, subsequently sent to see me at the Treasury, where I was clerking, and wanted to compromise the matter. He said he thought I could make a good thing out of it; that I could make some money. I told him I wanted no compromise; that what I wanted was satisfaction by having justice. I pursued the matter as far as I could before the law. Now, gentlemen, if you will allow me, I invite the strictest examination, free of all delicacy. I desire it.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You say the application of Jones was made to you first, and at the Union Hotel; then to Mrs. Cobb, by Hines, alias Howell. With whom was the arrangement made for the payment of this $300?

A. With us both, by Howell, in my room at the Avenue Hotel.

Q. Was the pardon granted on the same day the application was made?

A. Oh, no; the application was made on Monday morning, and the pardon was not granted until Wednesday evening. It was, as I said, referred first to the Attorney General, then to Judge Holt, then to the President, and through the different departments, until Wednesday, about three or four o'clock in the afternoon, it was granted, and Mrs. Cobb returned with it to the Avenue House.

Q. Where is Mrs. Cobb now?

A. In Albany, New York.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. The whole work, as I understand you, was done by Mrs. Cobb?

A. Yes, sir; I was a clerk in the Treasury Department, and could not, without a violation of the act of Congress of 1864, do anything of the kind.

Q. When was the application presented to the President?

A. Some time Monday, at general reception.

Q. What did he say or do?

A. I do not know, except that the principal ground of appeal was that this Howell had saved the life of General Slough at the risk of his own, and General Slough being an influential democrat and friend of Stanton and Johnson, it was thought that appeal would have weight with the President. The petition was, as I said, very ably drawn up, as it would itself show, if I could produce it before the Committee, which I have been anxious to do. I supposed Judge Hughes had it, but he said he thought it was with the President. I went to see the President He was very formal with me about it. He said he did not know where it was; that he supposed Judge Hughes had it. I telegraphed to Mrs. Cobb if she could find it to send it on. To show that it was well drawn up, it passed through the clerical force at the Attorney General's office, at the State Department, and at the Executive department, and it is not strange that it should have deceived persons of our inexperience.

Q. What did the President do with it when he read it?

A. He referred it to the Attorney General.

Q. Did Mrs. Cobb carry it to the Attorney General?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. What did he do with it?

A. He referred it to Judge Holt to ascertain whether the disabilities Howell alleged against himself existed.

Q. Did she call on Judge Holt?

A. Yes, sir; and obtained from him the information that no such charges existed. The matter then went to the Attorney General again.

Q. Did she carry the papers there?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What did the Attorney General do with it?

A. I do not know the particulars. I know she was running backwards and forwards to the different departments and to the Executive mansion for three days, perhaps a dozen times, until it had gone through its regular process.

Q. Who carried it to the State Department?

A. I think she accompanied the messenger who carried it.

Q. What was done with it there?

A. It went through the usual form. I think a seal was attached to it.

Q. Was there not an order from the President to the Secretary of State to issue the pardon?

A. Not that I remember. If that was the usual form, I presume there was such an order. I know it went through the usual form for issuing pardons.

Q. Was the pardon issued under seal of the State Department?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did it come into Mrs. Cobb's hands then?

A. It had to be carried to the President by a messenger. She was anxious to get it through that afternoon, and asked the privilege of accompanying the messenger, so as to get it through that afternoon. One of the pardon clerks, I do not know which one, delivered it to her, on condition that she would not give it to Howell until he had taken an oath of allegiance.

Q. How many pardons did Mrs. Cobb procure?

A. Two; she got one for an old gentleman by the name of Honeywell, of Virginia, a very aged man, who had been a long time trying to obtain it for the purpose, as he stated, of making his children and grandchildren heirs to his property. She obtained it without commission or pay, and the old man had scarcely reached home with it before he died. She obtained another one for a Texan, for which she had a commission of $100. These are all she ever obtained, except the forged one for Howell.

Q. How many applications has she had?

A. A great many. I suppose five hundred have applied, but she never obtained but these two; and for the $100 she received for one of these, I suppose it has cost me $400, besides her trouble and labor in following them up for three or four months. I suppose five hundred people have applied to her for assistance in getting pardons. She applied for a great many, but only obtained these two, although they were granting pardons very freely at that time, and there was very little difficulty ordinarily in other persons obtaining them.

Q. Has she not been in the habit of visiting the White House almost every day for two years after the close of the war?

A. She has been there frequently trying to get me a position, or trying to assist in doing so.

Q. Did she get any letters from the President recommending you?

A. Nothing whatever.

Q. Did he give you none to the Secretary of the Treasury?

A. Never. He never did the first thing for me, but just the reverse. He crushed everything in my favor, or it appeared so to me.

Q. Did she never get any letter from the President to any of the heads of departments recommending you for some position, or asking them to give you a place?

A. She never could do it. I was recommended by twenty-three or twenty-four members of Congress for a sutlership; I could call off their names, but it seemed to me the President defeated me in that. I tried for three or four months to get a pension agency. I was recommended by Governor Curtin; by Mr. Flemming, speaker of the senate of Pennsylvania; also, Hon. Thad. Stevens, and by many prominent men in Pennsylvania; but he killed that. I then applied for a position as paymaster in the regular army, and was recommended for the place by Senators Wade and Pomeroy, and by Chief Justice Chase; but I failed in that.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were you a resident of Ohio?

A. Yes, sir; I was born in Cincinnati, but I have lived a great deal in Pennsylvania.

Q. Did you raise a regiment there?

A. I did—the 47th regiment.

Q. Did you bring that regiment into the field?

A. I did. I have a letter received this morning from Governor Dennison virtually admitting that fact. It has no reference to my pay. My accounts have never been settled by the government for that service to this day.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Have you ever had employment in any of the departments of the government in this city?

A. Yes, sir; Judge N. L. Swayne and Mr. Chase gave me a clerkship in the treasury. He got me an appointment as assistant paymaster in the navy, by personal application to Mr. Welles, and I had my bond filed when General Baker arrested me.

Q. Do you live in Pennsylvania?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were married in Washington, I believe?

A. In Baltimore city.

Q. How long ago?

A. In the early part of 1864.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You have an office in the Treasury now, have you not?

A. No, sir; they will not give me anything.

Q. You were a clerk in the Treasury Department?

A. Yes, sir; after I was arrested.

Q. How long had you been a clerk there?

A. In the early part of 1863, after the battle of Cedar Mountain, Mr. Chase obtained for me an appointment as assistant paymaster in the navy, but having been ruptured, the doctor said salt diet would disagree with me, and I was in doubt whether to accept the position, but I went so far as to have my bond filed when Baker arrested me. I then wrote a letter to Mr. Chase, and he gave me a clerkship in the Treasury in lieu of it.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. How long did you continue to hold that place?

A. Until the 3d day of last December.

Q. What have you been doing since that time?

A. I have been out in New Mexico, Colorado, and the Indian Territory.

Q. How did your wife come to embark in the business of pardon brokerage?

A. It was not a pardon brokerage business. I had taken out a license as a claim agent, but after I was in the employ of the government I could not practice under it, and my salary of $1,200 was not sufficient for us to live on.

Q. Had she any peculiar qualifications for following that business?

A. None whatever, and it has cost me a large sum of money which I had on deposit.

Q. Had she any peculiar acquaintance with Mr. Johnson?

A. No, sir; and she did not visit the White House oftener after he became President than when Mr. Lincoln was President. She visited Mr. Lincoln a great many times, endeavoring to get me a sutlership at Giesboro'

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You had taken out a license as a claim agent before going into the Treasury, as I understand, and ceased to use it after that. What did you do with the license?

A. My wife had it transferred to her for the unexpired portion of the year, and then took out a license in her own name afterwards. My salary was only $1,200 a year; I could not get promoted, and the amount was not sufficient for us to live on.

Q. Did you know this man, S. S. Jones?

A. Only by his presenting his card as S. S. Jones, attorney-at-law.

Q. Who was he in fact?

A. That was his real name. He was one of Baker's detectives.

Q. Do you know anything about him now?

A. I saw him in a street car here a few days ago.

Q. Does he reside in Washington?

A. I understand he resides in New York. As soon as his friend got under arrest he left.

Q. Had you any suspicion that Baker and his detective, Jones, were practicing a fraud upon you and your wife?

A. None at all. We suspected nothing of it until Baker came there to arrest us.

Q. The first time you saw this man Jones, as I understand you, your wife was not present. When did he first see your wife?

A. My wife was down at the Treasury Department when he called upon me in Georgetown. He called two or three times again that same day, and the second or third time saw Mrs. Cobb.

Q. When did he present a petition for the pardon of Howell?

A. Jones never presented the petition. Jones came on the 5th of November, when we were at the Avenue House, and introduced Howell. We had then returned from Pennsylvania.

Q. Had you ever seen Howell before?

A. Never before that afternoon.

Q. Do you know what his real name is?

A. Hine. I learned from General Slough that that was his name; that he had been confined in the Alton prison for acting as a confederate spy.

Q. Did Baker know that?

A. Yes, sir; it was that that gave Baker complete control over him, and that made him so perfectly a tool of Baker.

Q. Did he present his petition, and was that the time the bargain with him was made, when he called on this 5th of November.

A. No, sir; he presented his petition on his second visit, that same night, and agreed to pay $100 down, which he paid, and to pay $200 more when the pardon was obtained.

Q. In what was the payment of $100 made?

A. In two $50 greenbacks.

Q. Who gave him a receipt for it?

A. Mrs. Cobb gave it in my presence. The next time Howell came by himself. Jones never came again.

Q. Did your wife see him alone when he came the next time?

A. No, sir; I was present. To tell you the truth, I rather objected to her engaging in the matter, but she was very sanguine of being able to contribute to our income by these means.

Q. When did you see him again?

A. He came the next day, Sunday, and appeared to be very anxious. He said Baker's detectives were dogging him around; that he could not go anywhere; that he had to appear at Willard's under a fictitious name.

Q. What name did he go by there?

A. I do not remember the name.

Q. Was it Kelly?

A. No; I do not think that was the name.

Q. How long afterwards was it before you obtained the pardon?

A. The petition was brought to us Saturday afternoon, second visit, and the pardon was granted the next Wednesday afternoon, uncompleted.

Q. Did your wife go voluntarily to Baker's headquarters at the time he told you he knew you?

A. No, indeed; he said we had got to put on our duds and go with him, and that he would give us all the notoriety we wanted. He said he arrested us both.

Q. Who was with him then?

A. A man by the name of Speer.

Q. Did Speer have anything to say about it?

A. No. He was very quiet. He did not open his mouth. For a man of that kind he behaved very decently.

Q. How long did Baker keep you and your wife separate at his headquarters?

A. He arrested us between five and six o'clock, just as we were going to tea. I was nearly sick abed. He kept us until about ten or fifteen minutes to twelve that night.

Q. Did Speer remain in the reception room with you while your wife was with Baker up in his private office?

A. He was in and out. There was a guard placed over me. I was quite sick and became very nervous. I asked if I could not go to a restaurant. I was told that I could not go. I then said I was very sick, and asked to be taken to a restaurant, and Speer took me to one.

Q. Did not Speer invite you to go over to the restaurant?

A. No, sir; I went as a prisoner.

Q. He did not treat you?

A. No, sir; he went up and drank, and one or two others went up and drank at my expense.

Q. Did he not ask you to drink?

A. No, sir; I merely asked as a sick man to be taken out, and I went as a prisoner. I am not in the habit of drinking.

Q. After you took a drink, where then did you go?

A. We returned immediately to Baker's headquarters.

Q. Where was your wife in the mean time?

A. Up stairs, a prisoner.

Q. Who was up stairs with her?

A. Baker and a man who remained on guard over her when he was absent. Baker went out to the White House, I suppose, and staid an hour and a half each time.

Q. Who was the man left in charge of your wife while he was away?

A. I do not know, and my wife did not know. She knew he was a detective.

Q. While you were there did Baker get back this money Howell had given your wife?

A. Yes, sir; he took it from her by force.

Q. Did you see it taken away?

A. No, sir; but it appeared in evidence on the trial, and Baker did not deny it.

Q. While you were there was this pardon produced?

A. Yes, sir; it was obtained through a fraud practiced upon me by Speer. He came down from up stairs and stated that my wife requested me to go to the hotel and get the pardon. It was obtained through falsehood on his part.

Q. Why do you say it is falsehood?

A. Because she took an oath on the stand that she made no such request, and they did not refute it. We went then back to the Avenue House, unlocked my door and took the pardon out of a bureau drawer.

Q. Did not Speer tell you where the pardon was?

A. No, sir, he did not; and he did not know. I placed it in the bureau drawer myself. I do not think my wife knew where it was.

Q. Was this man Speer sworn on your trial?

A. I suppose so; I saw his evidence reported in the paper. I was lying sick and out of my mind at the time the trial took place.

Q. What else did you get besides the pardon?

A. The petition, I think.

Q. Did you get a letter addressed to the Secretary of State?

A. Yes, sir; that refreshes my mind. This man Howell, in my presence and at my request, sat down and wrote an acknowledgment that he had received the pardon, although he had not then received it, and was not to receive it until he had taken an oath of allegiance, and this letter I also took up that night with the pardon.

Q. Was the letter written by Howell?

A. Yes, sir; and very well written, in a beautiful hand.

Q. Did they take that from you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you voluntarily give these things up?

A. No, indeed; I was a prisoner, and came for them under the false assumption that my wife had sent for them.

Q. Where is General Slough now?

A. He is chief justice of the supreme court of New Mexico.

Q. Did you bring suit against Baker?

A. Yes, sir; and got a verdict against him from the jury, but the court did not seem to think it very important. Tom Ford offered to compromise the matter on Baker's part, and he has since told me I was a great fool for not doing it, that I could have made $20,000. The verdict of the jury was guilty of false arrest and guilty of false imprisonment. The suit brought by myself has not yet been tried. The verdict to which I refer was in the criminal trial.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Were you summoned here by the Committee, or did you come at your own instance?

A. I came at my own request.

Q. For the purpose of making explanations relative to the charges against your wife?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you hold any office in the regiment raised by you?

A. Yes, sir; lieutenant and quartermaster, at my request. Baker's statement of his tearing the straps from my shoulders must have been purely from his imagination, for I never wore shoulder straps.

Q. What other statement is there in his book that is untrue?

A. The whole conversation that he purports to give as taking place in my room is transposed; and a refutation of such a print would add to its importance.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 30, 1867.

THOMAS T. ECKERT, late assistant Secretary of War, sworn and examined

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Were you in the service of the government during the years 1864 and 1865; and if so, in what capacity?

A. In 1864 I was a major, and in charge of the military telegraph office. I was subsequently brevetted brigadier general, but continued substantially with the rank of major, as acting assistant Secretary of War up to the time I left the department.

Q. What duties did you perform in the capacity of acting assistant Secretary of War?

A. The general business assigned to that officer. I had charge of many important papers coming into the department.

Q. Did you have any knowledge of the diary said to have been taken from the body of J. Wilkes Booth after his death?

A. I did.

Q. When did you first see it, and in whose hands was it?

A. I saw it the day the body of Booth was brought to Washington. From my own recollection—I do not remember the date—my impression is that it was the 26th of April, 1865. It was brought to the Secretary of War by either Conger or Baker. They reached the Secretary's house before I did, and I do not know in whose hands the diary was up to that time. The diary was then turned over to me. I sealed it up and put it away in my safe, and there it remained until turned over to Judge Holt. Once I made an examination of the register at the National Hotel, to see if I could get some trace of Booth's movements in this city. I found three or four entries of his name. I went to the court room at the arsenal and gave Judge Holt the dates. Judge Bingham asked me if I had examined the diary to see if there was any entry there that would correspond. I told him I had not. I came back, opened the package, but found nothing at all that would compare with these dates. Once it was opened and shown to Judge Bingham and Judge Holt, before it passed into the hands of Judge Holt from me. With these two exceptions it was never from under seal or out of the safe after it came into my hands until it was turned over to Judge Holt.

Q. How long did you retain it in your possession?

A. I do not remember how long. I had so many of these things in my charge, with pretty hard work at that time, that I did not charge my memory with dates. I turned it over on an order from Judge Holt. I looked for that order or receipt yesterday, but did not find it. I may have it in New York among my private papers.

Q. When you received the diary did you make a careful examination of it or not?

A. I made a careful examination of it, I think.

Q. Did you read what was written in it?

A. I did.

Q. Did you then observe whether any leaves had been cut from the diary or not.

A. I did.

Q. Did you notice how many had been cut out?

A. I did not.

Q. When did you last see the diary?

A. This morning.

Q. Did you make an examination of it this morning?

A. Yes, sir; not of the contents, however; simply of the diary itself, with reference to the cutting of the leaves. I did not read anything in it.

Q. State whether the diary is in the same condition it was when you received it, and how otherwise, if not.

A. I believe it is in the same condition it was when I received it. I did not see any change.

Q. Do you know anything of a diamond pin taken from Booth's body?

A. I do.

Q. What of it do you know?

A. I saw it yesterday.

Q. In whose possession?

A. General Townsend's; I hold his receipt for it. It is in exactly the same condition it was when I received it and when I turned it over to General Townsend. That pin was not given to me at the time I received the diary.

Q. From whom did you receive it?

A. I received it from General Baker.

Q. Did you have knowledge of the telegraph lines at or about the time of the assassination of President Lincoln?

A. I did.

Q. Was there any interruption of the lines that night?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What was it?

A. It was my impression at the time they were cut, but we got circuit again very early the next morning. The manager of the Commercial office reported the cause to have been crossing of wires in main batteries. Throwing a ground wire over the main wires would have caused the same trouble, and taking it off would have put it in ordinary working condition.

Q. Was there an investigation into what was the real cause of the difficulty?

A. No, sir. It did not at the time seem to be sufficiently important, as the interruption only continued about two hours. I was so full of business of almost every character that I could not give it my personal attention. The interruption was only of a portion of the lines between Washington and Baltimore. We worked our City Point line all the time.

Q. Do you know whether the Commercial lines were interrupted at that time?

A. Yes, sir. It was only the Commercial lines that were interrupted; it was in the Commercial office and not in the War Department office. I could not ascertain with certainty what the facts were without making a personal investigation, and I had not the time to do that.

Q. Were you acquainted with the persons who were tried and executed for participation in the assassination?

A. I knew them, but not until after their arrest.

Q. Did you receive statements from any of them?

A. I did from Payne; yes, sir.

Q. Did you from any of the others?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was his statement reduced to writing?

A. No, sir; it was not. I have a memorandum some place. I supposed it was in the War Department, but it may be in New York. It was simply for the purpose of writing out, when I should have the leisure to do so, for Mr. Seward, what Payne said about him, what his intentions and motives were, &c. Mr. Seward asked me to remember what I could of it, and some day when I got time write it out. That is why I made a memorandum. It is not full. It is only of points, and was made for the purpose of recalling them to memory when I came to write it out, but I have never been able to do it.

Q. Did he make any statement as to his knowledge of Booth's designs, or as to the designs of any person connected or concerned with Booth?

A. He told me he knew but little about the details; that he was not very inquisitive, and Booth did not seem disposed to make him a confidant. His statements were particularly with reference to himself and his own movements. I tried very hard to get something else from him, but did not succeed. He told me he was induced to do what he did by Booth; that he met Booth the first time in Richmond—I forget the year. It was during the war. It is my impression it was in 1863, but I am not positive. He saw him there for perhaps a week almost every day; then did not see him again until after the battle of Gettysburg, and then he saw him in Baltimore.

Q. Did he speak of the associates of Booth in Richmond?

A. He did not. I could not get him to make any statement upon that subject. He was very particular when I put a question not to allow any information affecting others to be drawn out of him.

Q. In what capacity did Payne claim to act?

A. He claimed to be acting as a soldier under Booth.

Q. Did he state that Booth was his superior officer?

A. He did recognize him as his superior officer.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did he hold any grade or commission himself in the confederate army?

A. He did not claim to hold any.

Q. Did he state what commission was held by Booth?

A. He called him captain. I asked him if Booth held a commission. He replied he did not know.

Q. Did he state any reason for attempting to assassinate Mr. Seward?

A. No, sir; he said he knew nothing at all about that; that he was sworn to perform the duty allotted to him, and that was his portion of the work.

Q. Did he state whether or not he knew anything of the designs or attempts upon other persons?

A. I asked him about that. He told me he could not give particulars, but that it was his impression that arrangements had been made with others for the same disposition as he was to make of Mr. Seward. He was very careful about speaking of any one else. He did once speak of Herold, and his remark was that he was a "little blab." Said he: "I never was satisfied with him myself, and so expressed myself to Booth." I tried very hard to get from him how he was drawn into the matter, who he received his money from, and how much he was to get for the job; but although I put a great many questions to him from time to time, there is nothing at all that I obtained from him giving any clue to anybody else. I did not consider it of sufficient importance at the time to make a written statement, and made none. The conversation was at his own instance. I kept him off for four or five days after he expressed a desire for an interview with me. Finally, he became so much distressed that I listened to him; but it was simply a statement of his own action the night of the assassination, of his feelings while in the room and after he left the room, and where he went, up to the time of his arrest.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did he make any statement as to what other persons were implicated in the plot for assassination?

A. The reply he made to me in answer to that question, (which I put a great many times,) besides implicating John Surratt, was: "All I can say about that is, that you have not got the one-half of them."

Q. Did he make any statement with regard to what other persons were to be assassinated?

A. No, sir, nothing, except as to the President and Mr. Seward. He knew in reference to the intention to assassinate the President, because Booth tried to get him to shoot the President the night of the celebration after the fall of Richmond. The President made a speech that night from one of the windows of the White House, and he and Booth were in the grounds in front. Booth tried to persuade him to shoot the President while in the window, but he told Booth he would take no such risk; that he left then and walked around the square, and that Booth remarked: "That is the last speech he will ever make."

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did he make any statement as to his having received money for his services?

A. He told me he received his expenses and his clothing only. I asked him from whom he received it. He said, from Booth.

Q. How long did he represent himself to have been in the service of Booth in that way?

A. He did not give me any data in respect to that. He was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg, and remained in hospital for some time, he thought perhaps for two weeks. While there he tried to make himself generally useful; that he managed to get out, and finally escaped to Baltimore. I asked him if he left Gettysburg with a view to go to Baltimore to meet Booth. He said he did not. I questioned him very strongly on that, and he laughingly replied that I must believe him; that his meeting with Booth in Baltimore was accidental.

Q. Was it at that interview that he went into the service of Booth?

A. Not at that interview. He met him again the next day, when the time and place was appointed to take the oath and enter service.

Q. It must have been in 1863, then?

A. I asked him what the oath was, but he would not tell me. He said he did not remember all of it—said it was very strong.

Q. Did you have a knowledge of the cipher despatch used at Richmond during the war?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was there a cipher despatch found upon the body of Booth?

A. I think not. A cipher key was found among his papers, but whether it was obtained at the time of his death, or from his baggage which was shipped from Canada, I do not remember.

Q. Do you know whether that was the same as that used at Richmond?

A. It is my recollection that it was substantially the same.

Q. Was there a key found at Richmond?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was it brought here.

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Where was that found?

A. It was found, I believe, in the desk of the Secretary of State. I think Mr. Dana found it. It was delivered to me by him.

Q. Do you know whether the key so found corresponded with the key Booth had?

A. I think it did. It was a key we had worked out pretty well previously, so as to enable us to translate telegrams with accuracy before we got hold of this key.

Q. Have you yourself ever invented or prepared a key to a cipher despatch?

A. I have assisted in it. It was our custom to work at that more or less all the time, and to make frequent changes so as to guard ourselves against any exposure that might be made

Q. That was at the War Department?

A. It was for the War Department and for the service generally.

Q. Have you ever assisted in making any such cipher that was not to be used in the War Department?

A. Not during my connection with the War Department. Since I have been in my present position as superintendent of the commercial lines, I have caused ciphers to be made for my own use, but for no other purpose whatever; they are not the same as used by the government.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Did the Executive department have a cipher independent of the War Department?

A. Not that I am aware of. Nothing passed through my hands except in the military cipher, in use at the War Department. Business of the Executive department, while I was at the War Department, so far as my knowledge goes, was entrusted to my care, and it was put in our own cipher. We had a great many ciphers on the same general principle, capable of being so varied that the different armies had different ciphers.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you remember what papers there were in the memorandum book taken from the body of Booth?

A. I do not. It contained photographs and papers, but what they were I could not now describe.

Q. Did you examine the papers this morning?

A. I did not examine the papers. I examined the book with reference to the leaves being cut out more particularly than anything else. I remember yesterday seeing a paper taken from Dr. Stewart when he was arrested, and I wanted to see whether it was written on a leaf taken from that book. I examined it, and I believe it was. I have the paper here, and I believe it is the original which accompanied the $2 50 sent by Booth to Dr. Stewart.

Q. Did you examine the papers at the time as carefully as you did the book?

A. I did; but it was with a view to find out what his movements were, not thoroughly in regard to the contents. If it did not point to some circumstance connected with Booth's movements, I did not pay much attention to it. I looked carefully with a view of getting something of that kind.

Q. Were you able to recognize the papers now in the book as those you saw in it at the time the diary was first delivered to you?

A. I did not examine the papers this morning. I simply looked at the book with a view to ascertain in reference to the leaves being cut out.

Q. In any manner can you say, generally, whether they were the same?

A. They seemed to be the same, and to the best of my belief they are.

Q. Were they given to you at the same time the book was?

A. Yes, sir; they were in the book, all of them.

Q. You recollect about this letter written to Dr. Stewart?

A. Yes, sir; I remember to have read in Dr. Stewart's statement that he had received from Booth this paper.

Q. Was that in the book at the time you first received it?

A. Not the original paper to which I refer, and which I have in this package of papers, which I found in the War Department in the same condition as I left it.

Q. Did you compare it with the one in the book?

A. No, sir; but they are substantially the same as I saw published, except the sum of money stated as sent was $5, while in this it was $2 50; and my theory is, that the one in the book was written first, but as Booth did not have a great deal of money about him he concluded to reduce the amount sent.

Q. Did you compare this Dr. Stewart letter in the book to see whether that was torn from the book also?

A. My impression is that it was.

Q. And you compared this also to see whether it was torn from the book?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did they agree as to date?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Wherein did they differ?

A. In the amount of money stated. You will see that a part of the writing on the paper found in the book is torn off. This, you will see, is complete. Dr. Stewart's statement is that this paper came to his house sealed up. It was pinned, and bears the marks of the pin used in fastening it. It had no envelope. The address is on the paper itself, and the money was rolled up in it. ("A," previous page in the book.)

Q. When was this paper presented to you?

A. I do not know the date. It was delivered to us at the War Department by General Baker, or Lieutenant Baker. I do not recollect distinctly about it.

Q. Do you recollect Lieutenant Baker?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did he deliver it to you?

A. I do not think he did. It is my recollection that General Baker delivered it to me. It was his custom to deliver such papers in person.

Q. How long after the memorandum book was delivered to you?

A. I do not remember. I was at the time of the arrest and examination of Dr. Stewart. He speaks of it in his examination, and of having turned it over to Baker. I received it from Baker.

Q. Please read the paper.

A. It reads as follows:

DEAR SIR: Forgive me, but I have some little pride. I hate to blame you for your want of hospitality; you know your own affairs. I was sick and tired, with a broken leg, in need of medical advice. I would not have turned a dog from my door in such a condition. However, you were kind enough to give me something to eat, for which I not only thank you, but on account of the reluctant manner in which it was bestowed, I feel bound to pay for it. It is not the substance, but the manner in which a kindness is extended, that makes one happy in the acceptance thereof. The sauce is meat is ceremony; meeting were bare without it. Be kind enough to accept the enclosed two dollars and a half (though hard to spare) for what we have received.

Yours, respectfully, STRANGER.

APRIL 24, 1865.

To Dr. STEWART.

Q. Do you know whether the letter addressed to Dr. Stewart, and which is now in the book, was in the book at the time it was delivered to you?

A. I think it was.

Q. Do you recollect of reading it?

A. I recollect of reading it; but whether my recollection is of reading that or this, or both, I am not certain. It is my impression that I read it at the time I received the book.

Q. Do you recollect of sending this Lieutenant Baker back on the track of the party that pursued Booth, some days after, to see what discoveries he could make?

A. I do not remember, but think I did not give any such order.

Q. What articles were delivered to you as taken from the body of Booth?

A. I cannot, from memory, enumerate all. I have a receipt covering everything, taken from General Townsend. General Baker holds my receipt for all he turned over to me.

Q. Name them as far as you can.

A. There was a breastpin, an opera-glass, and I do not remember whether anything else. There were more articles brought into the War Department, but they were turned over to Colonel Burnet.

Q. Was there any money or drafts turned over to General Townsend?

A. I do not remember that there was.

Q. A pipe?

A. The pipe was turned over to Colonel Burnet, according to a memorandum which I have here.

Q. Are you able to state any other articles that were found on the body of Booth?

A. No, sir. I had articles found upon Booth, upon Payne, and upon many others; and did not pay particular attention to them, other than to see that they were placed in separate boxes, labeled, and the boxes locked.

Q. You stated that you had charge during the war of the military telegraph office; did all the war and Executive telegrams go through you from the department?

A. I could not state that. Executive telegrams may have been sent through the Commercial office. It is presumed, however, that they would go through the War Department.

Q. When they went through the War Department, was any record of the originals kept in the department?

A. The intention was to preserve the originals, always.

Q. Are they still preserved?

A. It is my impression that they are. They were, up to the time of my leaving. There may have been instances where the originals were taken, but were returned to the files again.

Q. When did you leave the War Department?

A. In August, 1866.

Q. Did you have a personal supervision of sending the telegrams? Were you an operator at the time?

A. A personal supervision was given to all business that passed through the office. I did not act in the capacity of an operator.

Q. Did you examine the telegrams before they were sent?

A. Sometimes; not always.

Q. Mr. Baker states in his testimony that there were telegrams sent to Nashville, in cipher, from the office at the War Department, that Parson Brownlow was at the time very ill, and Mr. Johnson hoped he would be taken away as soon as possible; that it was the only salvation for the State of Tennessee, and a great many other things Baker could not remember, as he could not get possession of the telegrams, but the operators all regarded it as a conspiracy against the loyal State government of Tennessee. Can you give us any information upon that subject?

A. I cannot.

Q. Do you know of any time when all the operators of the office in the War Department regarded the despatches sent by President Johnson as a conspiracy against the loyal government of Tennessee?

A. I do not. If they had any such impressions, they were not given to me. I did not permit my men to advance opinions in regard to telegrams sent, and particularly to those outside. I never heard of any such opinions on the part of the operators, myself.

Q. You are not aware of any such idea growing out of telegrams sent by the Executive department through the War Office?

A. I do not recollect any, and I do not recollect the telegrams he refers to. I could not answer the question whether any such telegrams were sent without making an examination. I can tell by examination whether the records remain in the same condition they were in when I left the office.

Q. Have you a recollection whether any despatches were sent by the Executive department to Tennessee concerning Governor Brownlow?

A. I do not now recollect.

Q. Did the President, at any time, send despatches through your office, in cipher, to Tennessee?

A. I think he did. All important despatches went in cipher.

Q. In what cipher?

A. Our own. We had no other.

Q. Did you ever know of his sending by any other cipher?

A. I did not. If they were sent by any other cipher, they were not sent through the War Department. If any such telegram as you mention was sent, it must have gone through the Commercial office. It was not, to my knowledge, sent through the War Department.

Q. The same witness speaks of a statement that the President applied to Eckert to arrange a cipher that nobody but himself and one operator in Nashville had a key to; was there any such cipher as that arranged by you?

A. There was not.

Q. Did General Baker ever speak to you about the President sending cipher despatches to Tennessee?

A. He may have done so. I do not now recollect any such conversation.

Q. Were you applied to to arrange a cipher different from that in use in the War Department at any time?

A. I do not think I was.

Q. Did you ever state to Baker that the President had applied to you to arrange a cipher for him?

A. No, sir. I do not remember to have made any such statement.

Q. Can you not be positive about that?

A. I am very positive I did not.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. If you had made such a statement, do you not think you would certainly remember it?

A. I think I should.

Q. Who was the operator at Nashville at that time?

A. J. J. Wickham.

Q. Can you state, positively, whether you, as chief operator, arranged a cipher that nobody had the key to except parties in the office here, and one operator at Nashville?

A. I know there never was such a cipher, and if there was ever any such application, I do not now remember it. I never arranged any. That was a branch of the business I did not talk to people about.

Q. Who gave the order with reference to the burial of Booth's body?

A. The Secretary of War.

Q. Did you?

A. No, sir; or, if I gave any order, it was an order given me by the Secretary of War; and such an order would of necessity be in writing.

Q. Did you give a verbal order to Baker to take the body and dispose of it, and how?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you recollect to whom the charge of that matter was given?

A. It is my impression the order was given to Colonel Benton—whatever order was given. I may, by direction of the Secretary of War, have instructed Baker to take the body to Colonel Benton. I do not recollect that distinctly.

Q. Were you present at the burial of Booth?

A. I was not present when the body was put into the grave.

Q. Did you see the grave?

A. I did.

Q. In what room was the burial to take place?

A. In a large room in the arsenal building.

Q. Please describe that room.

A. The only description I can give of it is, that it is the largest room in the building. It is a room perhaps thirty feet square, and possibly more. I never was in it but twice. It is in the old penitentiary building.

Q. Which side of the building is it on?

A. In going in at the main entrance, it is on the left; what side that is in respect to the points of the compass I cannot give a guess. It was in the night when I went in, and very dark.

Q. Who directed the room in which the body should be buried?

A. It is my impression that Colonel Benton suggested it.

Q. Is that room enclosed completely?

A. Yes, sir. I think it was used as a room in which to walk and give exercise to the prisoners, and, perhaps, for invalids who might be there. That was an impression I got from its size.

Q. What is the height of the room?

A. I do not remember. I could not have judged of the height if I had looked; there was not light sufficient. I have always been under the impression that Colonel Benton had whatever order there was on the subject.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. If you had the memorandum, to which you refer, of your conversation with Payne, do you think you could add to the information you have already given?

A. I do not think I could.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. When was that statement made by Payne to you?

A. It was the first Sunday night after the prisoners were taken to the old penitentiary.

Q. After the trial?

A. Before the trial.

Q. Were you sworn on the trial?

A. I was sworn on the trial, but not in reference to any point against Payne. What I had would have been of no service in aiding to convict any but those on trial.

Q. Where was the statement made by Payne received by you?

A. In the cell.

Q. Who was present?

A. No one but ourselves. I never wrote a word in his presence, nor he in mine.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know anything of statements made by other of the conspirators?

A. No, sir.

Q. It has been stated that statements were made by Mrs. Surratt, and by Atzerodt. Do you know whether any such statements were made?

A. I think Atzerodt made a statement to one of McPhail's men, by the name of Smith, a cousin of Atzerodt. What that statement was I do not now remember. It was put in writing, I think, by Smith.

Q. Do you know where it is now?

A. I presume it is in the War Department. I talked with Atzerodt, and with all except Mrs. Surratt, but was not able to get anything from them. I never spoke to Mrs. Surratt.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, May 31, 1867.

HUGH MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury, recalled.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. In Senate Executive Document No. 26, first session Thirty-ninth Congress, page 17, is a letter from the Secretary of State to provisional Governor Holden, of North Carolina, in which it is said: "It is understood here that besides cotton, which has been taken by the Secretary of the Treasury under act of Congress, there were quantities of rosin and other articles, as well as funds, lying about in different places in the State, and elsewhere, not reduced into possession by United States officers as insurgent property. The President is of opinion that you can appropriate these for the inevitable and indispensable expenses of the civil government of the State during the continuance of the provisional government." State what amount of cotton belonging to the government of the United States was taken by the provisional government of North Carolina for the purposes indicated in that letter; also, what other property, if any, of the United States was so used.

A. No cotton that I am aware of was ever delivered to the State of North Carolina for the purposes mentioned in Mr. Seward's communication. In order that the whole matter may be understood, it will be best for me to refer to the correspondence between the Treasury Department and the State officers of North Carolina on this subject, and with the permission of the Committee I will run briefly through the correspondence, which I think will clearly indicate our position on the subject and be more satisfactory to the Committee than anything I can say without such reference. The first thing I find in the records of the department on the subject is a telegram from David Heaton, special agent of the Treasury Department, of which the following is a copy:

[Telegram.]

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, June 14, 1865.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

Governor Holden informs me he has sent a telegram to the President in relation to certain cotton, called State cotton. The military authorities took possession of this property several weeks ago and notified me it was captured. Considerable expense has been incurred in getting it ready for market. It was procured to exchange for clothing to aid rebel soldiers in waging the war. What shall be done in the case?

D HEATON,
Special Agent Treasury Department.

In reply I sent to him a telegram as follows:

[Telegram.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 15, 1865.

DAVID HEATON, Supervising Treasury Agent, Raleigh, North Carolina:

Retain custody of State cotton, and keep it in its present position until further instructed by me.

HUGH MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

On June 16 I instructed him as follows:

[Telegram.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 16, 1867.

DAVID HEATON, Treasury Agent, Raleigh N. C.:

Ship the so-called State cotton to New York as captured property without regard to State claims. Use utmost economy and despatch.

H. MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

On the 8th of July a letter was received from Governor Worth, dated June 21, of which the following is a copy:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Raleigh, June 21, 1865.

DEAR SIR: The undersigned, under the appointment of Governor Holden, is public treasurer of North Carolina, with the duty assigned, among other things, of securing the property belonging to the State.

This property consists, so far as I have ascertained, of some 600 bales of cotton at Graham, on the North Carolina railroad; another considerable lot, say 500 bales, at Clarksville Junction, on the Raleigh and Gaston railroad; another considerable lot in Georgia; a small lot of rosin in this State, precise locality not known to me; a quantity of goods (of which I have no invoice) in the West Indies, and an unknown amount of money in England arising from the sale of cotton exported by running through the blockade; a lot of teams, some of which belonged to the State quartermaster's department and some to the State salt commissioner; and of the State library, mineralogical cabinet, and furniture of the State capitol and the Governor's residence.

On learning a few days ago that the cotton at Graham and Clarksville Junction was claimed and about to be shipped by Mr. Heaton, your agent, I asked the favor of General Schofield to request Mr. Heaton to abstain from shipping until we could communicate with the authorities at Washington. We are not supplied with the acts of Congress and the regulations adopted since the war, and hence not well posted as to our present rights and duties. The Governor also had an interview with Mr. Heaton and sent a telegram to the President on the subject. No answer to the telegram has been received. Mr. Heaton called upon me and obligingly presented me with a pamphlet copy of rules and regulations in relation to captured and abandoned property, and he has since sent to the Governor a copy of your telegram to him of the 17th instant, in which you direct him to "ship the so-called (State) cotton to New York as captured property without regard to State claims."

From this telegram I learn that you claim the cotton as "captured property."

I find in the rules and regulations captured property defined to be "that which has been or may be seized or taken from hostile possession by the military or naval forces of the United States."

None of this property was taken or seized by any military or naval force until many days after the capitulation of General Joseph E. Johnston with General Sherman, but was in the possession of the agents of the State at and after the proclamation of General Schofield of the 27th April last, in which he announces "to the army and the people of North Carolina that hostilities within the State have definitely ceased." The cotton and other property, with the exception of the books, mineralogical cabinet, and furniture in the capitol, were not seized or taken from "hostile possession," and upon being satisfied of this fact by enquiry of your agents, we hope you will have pleasure in directing them to restore to the State all property captured after the date of this proclamation on the ground that it was illegally captured.

You will readily perceive that it is important that I know as soon as practicable what property I shall be allowed to take into my possession as State property, and I respectfully ask to be informed at as early a day as practicable.

I believe all the horses, mules and wagons, and some other property captured with them, have not been turned over from the military to the treasury agent, and General Schofield, in an interview I had with him last week, assured me he would have no hesitation in delivering them to me for the use of the State, but he considered the cotton as having passed out of his control.

Our people are anxious that real concord be restored between them and the United States, and we sincerely desire that, in readjusting the disordered machinery of our State government, not the slightest jar may occur, and that our people may find and believe that the United States authorities appreciate their distresses, and are not disposed to treat them with undue rigor. We have no money in the treasury. The war, never sanctioned by any vote of our people, has annihilated at least two-thirds of our wealth, probably three-fourths of it. Very few have money or property which they can spare, which will command money. We are now called upon for the United States land tax, which is four-fold greater than any land tax paid by this State prior to the war. We are soon to be called upon to pay other taxes to the United States. Our bonded debt, made prior to the war, is about $12,000,000, with the coupons payable in New York, and very few of them paid within the past four years. It would be ruinous to our people to raise money out of them by taxation to pay the expenses of the convention, general assembly, and other necessary expenses which must be incurred for this year and the early part of the next. If we are allowed to use the State cotton and other property we will be able to defray the expenses of the State for a year, and to take steps looking to the payment of our overdue coupons and otherwise restoring our credit, without taxing our people, until they shall have had time to get in condition to pay.

If the government shall withdraw its claims as to State property it will cheer our people and tend greatly to create that kindness of feeling towards their government so essential to restored harmony and prosperity.

If our wishes cannot be gratified, we hope you may be able to give us such explanation of the grounds of your refusal as may reconcile us to our deplorable condition.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JONATHAN WORTH,
Public Treasurer of North Carolina.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Endorsed as follows:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, NORTH CAROLINA,
Raleigh, June 23, 1865.

I respectfully invite attention to the letter of Mr. Worth, the public treasurer. It is desirable that the right to the State property should be clearly defined. No complaint is intended, but the communication from the public treasurer is simply designed to obtain information as to settle definitely the question in relation to the property referred to.

W. W. HOLDEN.

To the SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

That letter was substantially answered by our telegrams. On the 1st of July the following communication was received from General Cox:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE OHIO,
AND DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Raleigh, June 26, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to state that, upon the occupation of western North Carolina by our troops, I ordered the seizure of several hundred bales of cotton at Graham, which was reported to me as "government cotton," and have since turned the same over to Mr. Heaton, the supervising agent of the treasury in this State.

I now learn that the provisional government claim that the cotton belongs to the State of North Carolina, and Mr. Worth, the State treasurer, visits you in relation to the claim. I have not any evidence before me on the subject, and made the seizure and transfer upon the reports of people in the vicinity, by which I was led to suppose that the "government" referred to was the confederate government. I did not know of the claim of the State, and write this in order that their claim may not be prejudiced by my action.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,

J. D. COX, Major General Commanding.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Heaton, in reply to the telegram read, on the 19th of June sent me the following telegram:

[Copy—Telegram.]

NEWBERN, NORTH CAROLINA, June 19, 1865.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.:

Telegrams of fourteenth (14th,) fifteenth (15th,) and seventeenth (17th,) all received. The so-called State cotton, as well as other captured property, is being gathered and shipped as rapidly as possible. Captured and abandoned cotton and other property, such as tobacco, hides in process of tanning, naval stores, and copper, are held by the so-called confederate government, and worth large sums in the aggregate, are reported. I propose to have this property saved, shipped, and converted into money. Shall I proceed with the full approval of the President and yourself?

(Signed) D. HEATON, Special Agent.

In reply to that I said:

[Copy—Telegram.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 20, 1867.

DAVID HEATON, Treasury Agent, Newbern, North Carolina:

Telegram of nineteenth (19th) received. All right. Proceed with captured and abandoned property according to regulations and previous instructions.

(Signed) H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

There does not seem to have been further correspondence on the subject up to October 19, when we were advised from Raleigh as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received at Washington, 9 p. m., October 19, 1865, from Raleigh, October 19, 1865:

"Hon. H. MCCULLOCH:

"SIR: The Hon. W. H. Seward, by order of the President, dated July 8, 1865, authorized me to take possession of resin and other articles, as well as funds, lying about in different places in the State and elsewhere, not reduced into possession by the United States officers as insurgent property. I have relied mainly on this property to defray the inevitable expenses of the State government during the continuance of the provisional government. I have just received the following telegram:

EUFALA, October 17, 1865.

"'Governor HOLDEN, Raleigh:

"'The military are taking the cotton in our warehouses that did belong to the State of North Carolina.

(Signed) "'S. CLARK,
"'HART, & CO,
"'L. F. JONSON."

"I respectfully request that you direct your officers to abstain from the seizure of the cotton.

"W. W. HOLDEN, Provisional Governor."

In reply to that I sent a despatch on the 20th of October as follows:

[Copy—Telegram.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, October 20, 1865.

Hon. W. W. HOLDEN, Raleigh, North Carolina:

Your despatch of nineteenth (19th) received. I do not see that the case you present is covered by the Secretary of State's letter referred to; but if it were, I have not the power to control the action of the military authorities as reported.

(Signed) HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

I did not consider the instructions of Mr. Seward as having anything to do with cotton. I think he intended to except it, although the word "besides," used in his communication, is a little misfortunate. On the 25th of October the following letter was received from Mr. Worth:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, October 20, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I learn that your officers have collected all the confederate property they could find in this State. There are still small lots of hides in tan, and some other property scattered about in this State, which the agents of the State could collect. Major Heaton thought there would be no objection to the State agents taking possession of any confederate property in this State not reduced into possession by the officers of the United States.

Will you please inform me whether it meets your views that the State officers glean these fragments for the use of the State to defray expenses of the provisional government?

Yours, very respectfully,

JONATHAN WORTH,
Treasurer and Superintendent of Public Property.

Hon. HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

Endorsed as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, NORTH CAROLINA
Raleigh, October 21, 1865.

SIR: I entirely approve of the within letter of Mr. Treasurer Worth.

Very respectfully,

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor.

Hon. HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

On the 14th of November I replied as follows to Mr. Worth:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 14, 1865.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 20th ultimo, relative to small uncollected lots of property, heretofore under the control of the so-called confederate States government, lying within the limits of North Carolina, asking whether it meets my views that the State officers should gather these fragments for the use of the State to defray the expenses of its provisional government.

I had already, under date of June 30th last, given such instructions to Mr. Heaton, the supervising special agent for North Carolina, as would, in my opinion, meet the ends desired by you. A copy of the same is herewith enclosed for your information. On receipt hereof, please confer with Mr. Heaton on the subject, and if you jointly think any further action by me is necessary, and will so inform me, I will take the necessary steps in the premises.

Respectfully,

(Signed) H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

JONATHAN WORTH, Esq.,
Public Treasurer, North Carolina, Raleigh, N. C.

The following are copies of the circular letter of instructions to officers of the Treasury Department, dated June 27, 1862, and of a communication from the Department of State to the provisional Governor of North Carolina, dated July 8, 1865:

Circular letter of instructions to officers of the Treasury Department relative to commercial intercourse, captured, abandoned, and confiscable property, freedmen, &c.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 27, 1865.

The various rules and regulations heretofore prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury in regard to the above-named subjects having been rendered nugatory, in whole or in part, by the changed condition of affairs in the southern States and Executive orders and proclamations, and the War Department having assumed charge of freedmen, abandoned lands, &c., under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1865, the following instructions as to the duties of officers of the Treasury Department in the premises are prescribed, and will be regarded as in full force and effect immediately on the receipt thereof by any officer whose action is in anywise affected thereby:

1. All restrictions on commercial intercourse in and with States and parts of States heretofore declared in insurrection, and on the purchase, transportation, and sale of the products thereof, are removed; except as to the transportation thereto or therein of arms, ammunition, articles from which ammunition is made, gray uniforms, and gray cloth; and except, also, those relating to property heretofore purchased by the agents or captured by or surrendered to the military forces of the United States. Nor will any fees or taxes be charged or collected except those imposed by the customs and internal revenue laws. And the supervision necessary to prevent the shipment of the prohibited articles will be exercised only by the regular and ordinary officers of the customs, acting under the revenue laws of the United States.

2. Subordinate officers discharging duties in regard to commercial intercourse, under the regulations referred to, will consider their official connection with this department as terminating with the 30th instant, without further notice.

3. Agents for the purchase of products of insurrectionary States on government account will close their official business east of the Mississippi with the transactions of the 13th instant, and west of it with the transactions of the 24th instant, returning to sellers all property or money received or collected since those dates, respectively, and using such despatch in the premises that their connection with the department may, if possible, terminate with the 30th instant.

4. Officers of this department charged with the duty of receiving and collecting, or having in their possession or under their control captured, abandoned, or confiscable personal property, will dispose of the same, in accordance with regulations on the subject heretofore prescribed, at the earliest time consistent with the public interests, and will refrain from receiving such from military or naval authorities after the 30th instant. This will not be construed, however, as interfering with the operations of the agents now engaged in receiving or collecting the property recently captured by or surrendered to the forces of the United States, whether or not covered by or included in the records, &c., delivered to the United States military or treasury authorities by rebel military officers or cotton agents. Those so acting will continue to discharge the duties thus imposed until such property is all received or satisfactorily accounted for, and until the amount so secured is shipped or otherwise disposed of under the regulations on the subject heretofore prescribed. And they will use all the means at their command, with the utmost vigor, to the end that all the property so collected, captured, or turned over shall be secured to the United States with the least possible cost and delay.

After the 30th instant the duty of receiving captured and abandoned property not embraced in the above exception will be discharged by the usual and regular officers of the customs at the several places where they may be located, in accordance with regulations relating to the subject; and officers heretofore performing that duty will give them all the aid and information in their power to enable them to carry out the same.

5. Officers of this department charged with the care or supervision of, or having in their possession or under their control any abandoned or confiscable lands, houses, and tenements, will turn them over to a duly authorized officer of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands, so far as they may be required or demanded by the same, together with all moneys, books, records, and papers arising from or relating to the property so turned over, taking proper receipts or vouchers therefor. This rule will also govern the action of all agents of this department connected in any way with the care of freedmen, &c., so far as it may be applicable.

And all persons asking for any information in regard to the property so turned over, or for the release of the same, or for the release of any proceeds or moneys arising therefrom, will be referred to the Commissioner of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands, at Washington, to whom communications on the subject should be addressed.

6. Officers of this department having in their possession or under their control any moneys whatever arising from fees collected under the commercial intercourse regulations, (except those collected for the benefit of freedmen, which will be disposed of under section 5,) or from the sales of captured, abandoned, or confiscable personal property, will forthwith deposit the same with the nearest assistant treasurer, designated depositary, or deposit bank, (keeping the amounts from the different sources separate,) to the credit of H. A. Risley, esq., supervising special agent, &c., taking therefor receipts in quadruplicate—which receipts must show whence the sums were received—one of which will be retained by the officer so depositing, one forthwith sent to the Secretary of the Treasury, one to the Commissioner of Customs, and one to Mr. Risley, at Washington.

7. All officers above referred to, except proper officers of the customs, acting exclusively under the revenue laws, will, after they have closed their official business, as above directed, and sold at auction, to the highest bidder, the furniture and property remaining on hand, and accounted for the proceeds of the same, forthwith systematically arrange the books, records, papers, &c., of their late offices, that they may easily be referred to and examined, pack them in secure and water-proof boxes, and forward the same, so marked as to indicate their contents, together with their respective resignations, addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, Washington city.

HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

[Copy.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 8, 1865.

SIR: Your letter to the President, of the 26th ultimo, was delivered by Mr. North. The President is gratified with the opinion expressed favorable to the prospect of State organization in North Carolina. Your remarks in regard to collisions between colored troops and white persons have been referred to the War Department. Mr. North will make an estimate of the expenses which may attend the special trust conferred upon you, namely, the organization of the State of North Carolina. The amount, thus reasonably estimated, will be paid at the War Department as an expense incident to the suppression of the rebellion. The estimate, however, will carefully exclude all expenses which may arise from the administration of the civil government of the State, including the charities thereof. It is understood here that, besides cotton which has been taken by the Secretary of the Treasury, under act of Congress, there were quantities of resin and other articles, as well as funds, lying about in different places in the State and elsewhere, not reduced into possession by United States officers as insurgent property. The President is of opinion that you can appropriate these for the inevitable and indispensable expenses of the civil government of the State during the continuance of the provisional government. He is also of the opinion that you can levy taxes or assessment for the inevitable and indispensable expenses prescribed as aforesaid, and enforce their collection. Should you adopt this course and find yourself impeded or embarrassed in the execution of the measure, you will then report to this department, and orders will be given by the War Department to the military authorities to take charge of the matter.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor of North Carolina, Raleigh.

On June 30, 1865, the following letter was sent to Mr. Heaton:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 30, 1865.

SIR: Since my letter to you of yesterday, enclosing copy of the circular letter of the 27th, conveying to you instructions as to the duty of agents in regard to collecting and receiving captured and abandoned property, I have been waited upon by a delegation of citizens of North Carolina, who represent that, in consequence of the extreme destitution of the people, and the want of means at the disposal of the new State government, it will be almost impossible to put it fairly in operation; and they ask that some relief be afforded through the medium of property captured from or abandoned by the late rebel State or confederate government.

Of course, none of the property already turned over to or collected by our agents as such can properly be appropriated for that purpose, but I incline to the opinion that the public good will be as well promoted, and the true spirit of the laws on the subject as fairly carried out, by allowing the new organization to have the benefit of some of the ungathered debris scattered through the State, as to have it gathered by agents of this department, and the proceeds thereof go into the treasury; and I have accordingly indicated to the gentlemen composing the delegation that our agents should not be too inquisitorial in their researches, nor too exhaustive in their labors in this direction, and that I have no objection to the present State government having the benefit of any property which belonged to its rebel predecessor that it may be able to collect.

I will thank you to so shape your action and direct your subordinates as to substantially carry out the policy above indicated.

Respectfully,

(Signed) H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DAVID HEATON, Esq.,
Supervising Special Agent, &c., Newbern, N. C.

On the 21st of December, 1865, a letter, of which the following is a copy, was received from Mr. Holden, provisional Governor of North Carolina:

RALEIGH, N. C., December 16, 1865.

DEAR SIR: The undersigned having been employed as agent of your department in collecting the debris of property belonging to the State, and having visited various counties in the interior on the business of his agency, would respectfully make the following suggestions:

At the time of the surrender of the armies of Generals Lee and Johnston, there were small lots of cotton in various localities, generally tithe cotton, which had been paid in to the tithe agents of the so-called confederate States.

These lots were generally seized by companies of soldiers and others, and scattered over a considerable district of country. It has long since been sold and shipped, as far as I know.

In addition to this, there were lots of drugs, too, formerly belonging to the rebellious States, which I have heard of, and which were taken and scattered abroad among various persons.

I think if your agents had the right they could, by a rigorous course of action, under your orders, make many of the parties who have thus seized on the public property pay for it.

I am informed that the treasury agents of the United States have desisted from all attempts to collect up these lots of property, or to make the parties pay for them.

I would respectfully suggest that you lay the subject before his excellency W. W. Holden, to the end that he may, if deemed advisable, bring the matter to the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, in the hope that he will relinquish to the State all the right of the government in these lots of cotton, drugs, and other property not yet seized in North Carolina, and for which the parties have not yet been forced to account.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. J. JACKSON, State Agent.

Dr. WM. SLOAN, Public Treasurer of North Carolina.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, December 16, 1865.

SIR: I respectfully recommend the foregoing communication to your consideration, and, if you approve the suggestions therein made, that you will recommend it to the favorable consideration of the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States.

Very respectfully,

WM. SLOAN, Public Treasurer.

To his Excellency Governor W. W. HOLDEN.

Endorsed as follows:

The attention of the Secretary of the Treasury is respectfully invited to the within. I hope the Secretary may find it compatible with his sense of public duty to grant the request of the provisional treasurer.

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor.

DECEMBER 17, 1865.

In the same letter he transmits a copy of a letter to the Secretary of State, and of an order which the Secretary of State gave on the subject. The cotton went forward as fast as collected, and the other property also. The next letter appears to be dated January 25, 1866, and is as follows:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA, TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, January 25, 1866.

DEAR SIR: Allow me to call your attention to a matter which requires immediate action.

On the 8th of July last Mr. Secretary Seward addressed to provisional Governor Holden a letter, in which he says: "It is understood here that, besides cotton which has been taken by the Secretary of the Treasury, under act of Congress, there were quantities of resin and other articles lying about in different places in the State and elsewhere, and not reduced into possession by United States officers as insurgent property. The President is of opinion that you can appropriate these for the inevitable and indispensable expenses of the civil government of the State during the continuance of the provisional government."

In a letter from you to D. Heaton, dated June 30, 1865, a copy of which was filed in this office, you say: "I have no objections to the present State government having the benefit of any property which belonged to its rebel predecessor that it may be able to collect."

Under the authority of the above order, confirmed by your letter, an agent was sent to Georgia for the purpose of collecting and forwarding to market the scattered articles of property to which the State of North Carolina had title.

One Bivins had possession of seventy bales of cotton, purchased by the State and left with him for safe-keeping. He at first refused to deliver to the agent of the State, and in consequence an attorney was employed by him, who, after long delay, succeeded on the 14th of January, 1866, in inducing Bivins to give it up. It was hauled to the depot, and while awaiting transportation was seized on the 18th of January, 1866, by Wharton, a treasury agent, whose action is approved by Colonel Buckley, general supervising agent of the United States treasury in Georgia.

The expenses incurred by the State for this lot of cotton have been large, all of which will be lost if you insist on a refusal to turn it over to my order.

As the expenses of the provisional government have not yet been paid, and as this cotton has been saved by the exertions of the State, I respectfully submit it will be hard and unjust to deprive the State of its proceeds.

I respectfully request that you will order this cotton to be transferred over to such persons as may be designated by me.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) KEMP P. BATTLE,
Public Treasurer.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

A letter in similar terms, dated March 3, 1866, from the same person, was received at the Treasury Department, and in response the following letter was written:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 14, 1866

SIR: I have received and considered your letter of the 3d instant, asking the restoration, to such person as may be designated by you, certain seventy (70) bales of cotton, claimed as the property of the State of North Carolina, alleged to be in the possession of an agent of this department in Georgia, the application being based on a letter written by the Secretary of State to the provisional Governor of North Carolina, under date 8th July last, and one from myself to Supervising Special Agent Heaton, dated June 30th.

The rule of the government has been to treat the property owned or controlled by the insurgent authorities of the several States and that of the consolidated rebel organization alike, and it was only for the special reasons set forth in my letter referred to that an exception was made in the case of North Carolina; and that exception, as will be seen by reading the whole letter, was limited, applying as it did only to "some of the ungathered débris scattered through the State." Further than this, cotton was expressly excepted, by its terms, from the intention and effect of the letter of the Secretary of State, to which you refer; and in no case has that article been surrendered or restored by the government to any State setting up claim to the same.

I am constrained, therefore, to deny your prayer.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

KEMP P. BATTLE, Esq.,
Public Treasurer of North Carolina, Raleigh, N. C.

Mr. Edwards Pierrepont, of New York, wrote to the department April 17, 1866, as follows:

16 WALL STREET, NEW YORK, April 17, 1866.

DEAR SIR: I am employed by the treasurer of the State of North Carolina, the honorable Kemp P. Battle, to advise in relation to the seizure of one hundred and seventy-five bales of cotton belonging to the State, and taken since the proclamation of peace.

Does the government intend to hold it? Second, does the Secretary desire, before action, any formal petition by the State of North Carolina as a basis of action?

Very respectfully,

EDWARDS PIERREPONT

The Honorable HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The next is a protest by Kemp P. Battle, treasurer of North Carolina, as follows:

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, April 14, 1866.

SIR: Since the declaration of peace, the 2d of April, one hundred and seventy-five bales of cotton, consigned to New York by this State, have been seized, as alleged, by your order.

I respectfully protest against this action, and request that you will order the release of the cotton.

Your obedient servant,

KEMP P. BATTLE,
Public Treasurer.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

The next is a copy of the reply of the Treasury Department to Mr. Pierrepont:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 3, 1866.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 28th ultimo, asking—

First. Whether the Secretary of the Treasury declines to give up certain one hundred and seventy-five (175) bales of cotton, or its proceeds, to the State of North Carolina?

Second. If it is determined not to give it up, does the Secretary decline to pay the actual expenses in sending the cotton to New York?

In reply, I have to say that the question as to the disposition of the cottons referred to, and others of their class, has been fully considered by the Executive.

The policy decided upon in relation thereto is, that it should be taken, forwarded to New York, and sold—the proceeds to be held for such ultimate decision as might be made in the premises, either by the action of the Court of Claims, or Congress, or by order of the Executive.

In the mean time, if a statement of the actual expenses referred to is forwarded to me, and found to be reasonable and legitimate charges against the cotton, I will transmit it to the United States cotton agent at New York, with instructions to pay the amount found due to the person duly empowered to receive it, and to charge the same as an item of expense against the cotton, to be taken into account on the final adjustment of the case.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. EDWARDS PIERREPONT, 16 Wall street, New York.

I find no other correspondence appertaining to that subject. The cotton went forward, and was sold. It was the policy of the department to treat all property owned by the insurgent State authorities in the same manner as property owned by the insurgent confederate authorities. We did not make any difference between insurgents assuming to act under State authority and insurgents acting under confederate authority. All the articles of value that belonged to the one or the other we endeavored to collect and send forward to New York. We understood that the War Department was paying the expenses of the provisional governments; and as there were remnants of property, which they called debris, scattered over the State which we never would have made anything out of, I consented, under the order of the Secretary of State, that the provisional State authorities of North Carolina should collect that, and make the best use they could of it in meeting the expenses of the State government. On the 4th of December, 1865, there seems to have been a correspondence in the matter of horses. The following is a copy of a letter sent to Mr. Heaton on that subject:

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 4, 1865.

SIR: The matter of horses, mules, army wagons, ambulances, etc., used by one or the other of the contending armies in the late war, which have by some means or other come into the possession of private individuals in the States heretofore in insurrection, having been presented to me, and instructions asked as to the proper course to be pursued in relation thereto, I desire that the action of the several agents of the Treasury Department in the premises shall be uniform and in accordance with the spirit of this letter.

Where any of the animals or articles in question are found in the hands of persons making active use of them for the purpose of cultivating the soil, or earning their livelihood, it is thought that the public interest will be best served by allowing them to remain in their undisturbed possession: Provided, in all cases, they are not held in such quantities as to warrant the supposition that the persons are in such circumstances as to be able to procure stock and materials by purchase, rather than in the manner indicated, and that they are not held for speculative purposes.

Where any of the animals or articles named are found in large lots, in any specific locality, and it is evident that they have not yet passed into the possession of the industrial classes, they should be taken charge of by agents of the department, and disposed of as other captured and abandoned property.

Sales thereof should, however, be made within the agricultural districts, as it is believed that not only will a better price be obtained therefor in such localities, but that they will supply a widely felt demand.

Please communicate a copy of this letter, or its substance, to your subordinate agents, with instructions that its spirit be carried out by them.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DAVID HEATON, Esq.,
Supervising Special Agent, Treasury Department, Newbern, N. C.

I understood that General Grant had made a general order by which that kind of property was turned over or loaned to the people. That was my understanding in relation to it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. These were horses that were left by the armies as they passed along, which were, at that time, incapacitated for service—other horses being taken for them from the people?

A. Yes. Our soldiers took good horses and left the disabled ones behind. The only other thing that then came up from North Carolina was an application by the Governor for the removal of the wreck of a rebel ram sunk in the Neuse river.

The following are copies of letters in the department on that subject:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 16, 1865.

SIR: In reply to your communication of the 2d instant, in regard to raising a steam ram which lies sunk in the Neuse river, I have to state that the matter has been referred to the supervising special agent, Heaton, for such action as he may consider necessary and proper under the regulations of this department concerning captured and abandoned property.

You will please confer with Mr. Heaton on the subject.

Very respectfully,

H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor, &c., Raleigh, N. C.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, November 24, 1865.

SIR: I have received your letter of the 18th instant, relative to the sale by you of the vessel known as the "Rebel Ram"—sunk in the Neuse river, near Kingston—for the sum of thirty-five hundred dollars ($3,500.)

Your action in the premises is approved, and in view of the suggestion made by Governor Holden, that the property in question might well be sold for five hundred dollars, the result obtained by you is highly gratifying.

Very respectfully,

H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DAVID HEATON, Esq.,
Supervising Special Agent, Newbern, N. C.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you ever require from the authorities of North Carolina any statement of the property belonging to the United States which had been converted to the use of North Carolina?

A. I have no recollection of any such requirement.

Q. Are you able to state whether all the expenses of the provisional government, except such as were paid by the War Department, were paid out of property belonging to the United States?

A. I cannot make any definite statement in regard to the amount of the debris released to the State of North Carolina, or how the expenses of the provisional government were paid.

Q. Can you state whether any cotton or other property of the United States was appropriated by any of the other provisional governments in the South in payment of their expenses?

A. The agents of the Treasury Department only undertook to collect cotton, tobacco, and other articles of considerable value. I am not aware that either cotton, tobacco, or any other article which we considered it advisable for us to collect as captured or abandoned property, and which would pay the cost of collecting, was ever used for the support of the provisional government, or for any other purpose than to be sold, and the proceeds paid into the treasury of the United States.

Q. Was any account ever required from any of the provisional governments of property belonging to the United States which had been converted to the use of those governments?

A. No account was ever required of the provisional governments by the Treasury Department. Our agents were instructed to collect everything which they considered proper to be collected, and we did not call for any account of the collections by State governments, because we did not suppose there was very much of value left for them to collect.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you say that you had adopted the same course in reference to the other rebel States as you adopted in North Carolina?

A. I will not be certain in reference to that; but my impression is that a similar order in reference to the collection and use of what we considered the debris was issued to the provisional Governor of Alabama, and perhaps also to the provisional Governor of Mississippi.

Q. Were there not like terms made in all of those States?

A. I think not. In most of the States there was very little of such property to be collected. The collections in North Carolina and Mississippi must have been very unimportant. It was the intention of the Treasury Department to collect everything that belonged to the confederate government, everything that had been owned and controlled by the confederate government, and everything that had been owned and controlled by the State insurgent authorities that we supposed would pay the expense of collecting and transportation.*

Q. Your letter of June 30th to Mr. Heaton, in which you say that the public good would be as well promoted by allowing the benefit of the scattered debris to the provisional government—was it written on your own motion, or by direction of the President?

A. I do not recollect of having had any conference with the President on that subject. I understood generally that the expenses of organizing the provisional governments were being borne by the War Department, and I thought it would be better, if anything could be saved out of the wreck for the payment of those expenses, that it should be done, rather than for us to undertake to collect the property scattered over the State, out of which very little could be realized by the government.

*See explanatory note concluding this testimony.

Q. In this letter there does not seem to be any exception made in favor of cotton and tobacco.

A. That was because our general instructions were well understood by our agents. We speak in that letter of debris. It was not necessary for us to say anything about cotton, because the instructions to our agent had been specific to take all cotton and all tobacco. I apprehend that, before that letter was written, all the cotton and tobacco that could then be identified had been seized as captured or abandoned.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You did not consider debris to include cotton and tobacco?

A. They were expressly excluded in all the instructions that we gave to our agents.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. If they did not gather up anything but cotton and tobacco, what was the necessity for the language used in this letter?

A. I cannot say. Most of the official letters are written by clerks, and I have not an opportunity to examine carefully and critically every letter that comes before me. All that I know is that our agents were not instructed to deliver to the provisional governments either cotton or tobacco, or any other article liable to seizure that was considered worth collecting. The field had been pretty well gleaned, and I think that before that circular was written nearly everything of any considerable value had been taken possession of, or was in the course of being taken possession of.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did your instructions intend to include the gathering up of property belonging to private individuals?

A. We did not suppose that we had any authority whatever to collect anything but property that belonged to the confederate government, or that had been used in aid of the confederate government in its war on the United States, or had been captured or abandoned. There was a question as to whether the property owned or controlled by the rebel States should be treated as property owned or controlled by the confederate government was treated. After giving the subject careful consideration, I concluded that we ought not to make any distinction, but that we should treat all insurgent property in the same way—whether it was confederate insurgent property, or State insurgent property.

Q. Where cotton and tobacco were found in considerable quantities in possession of a person claiming to be the owner, were the agents to gather up and dispose of such property?

A. Our agents were instructed to abstain from taking possession of private property, but to be sure that they were not imposed upon. They were not to permit any property which properly belonged to the confederate government to escape seizure on account of its being claimed by private individuals We had the records of the confederate authorities. The lists were turned over to us by the military authorities, and by those lists we endeavored to make our collections, and to determine what was confederate and what was individual property.

Q. Has there ever been any report showing the amount of moneys released from such sources?

A. We have made two or three reports on the subject.

Q. Covering the entire seizures and releases?

A. Yes, covering the whole ground, as nearly as could be ascertained. Cotton was the main article, the mainstay of the rebellion, the chief article in which the confederate government dealt.

Q. The moneys that are covered into the treasury, are they the net proceeds or the gross proceeds?

A. No money was covered into the treasury but net proceeds—the moneys raised from the sale of confederate and captured or abandoned property, after the payment of all expenses. When money is once covered into the treasury by a covering warrant, it can only be taken out by virtue of an act of Congress.

Q. What do you mean by covering money into the treasury by warrant?

A. I mean the process by which the money which goes into the treasury is charged to the Treasurer. For instance, a collector of customs receives moneys for duties upon imports, and deposits them with an assistant treasurer; or a collector of internal revenue receives moneys for internal taxes, and deposits them with a national bank; these moneys, although the moneys of the United States, are not legally in the treasury and charged to the Treasurer until the warrants are drawn by the Secretary and countersigned by the proper accounting officers of the department, upon the respective officers making the deposits for the amounts deposited. The warrants thus drawn are receipted by the Treasurer, and his liability is thus fixed, and the amounts named in the warrants are thus, as the phrase is, "covered into the treasury." The Treasurer, of course, has in his possession, when he receipts a covering warrant, either the money named therein, or evidence that it has been deposited to his credit in some legal depositary, which depositary is or has been charged with the same.

Q. Was there any principle on which the goods of Colonel Washington could have been sold and disposed of, and the money paid into the treasury, which would not also justify the Treasury Department in selling the goods of all the conquered people of those States?

A. I know of no difference between the personal property of Colonel Washington and the personal property of all disloyal men who lived in the southern States, except the fact that the property of Colonel Washington was taken possession of, and the property of others was not taken possession of; but I know nothing in principle to distinguish his furniture from the furniture of other rebels.

Q. Was there anything to justify the original seizure of this property which would not justify the seizure of the furniture and household property of any person engaged in the rebellion?

A. Not that I am aware of. I am not, of course, acquainted with all the circumstances under which that seizure was made; but I know of no reason for the seizure of this property that would not have justified the seizure of that of any other man in the South engaged in the rebellion, or disloyal to the government.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Was not abandoned personal property, including household furniture, taken possession of by the agents of the department?

A. Yes—all abandoned property; but I do not understand that the property of Colonel Washington was abandoned. I understand and believe that it was in the custody of a tenant, and that it was not abandoned in the sense in which the term is used in the statute.

Q. The real estate was taken possession of by the Treasury Department?

A. Yes.

Q. How was it regarded—as abandoned property or not?

A. It was regarded, I suppose, when taken possession of by the agent as abandoned property; but I do not think it was abandoned according to the proper intention of Congress.

Q. On what ground was it finally surrendered to him—on the ground of his pardon, or on the ground that it was improperly seized as not being abandoned property?

A. All the real estate that was in possession of the agent of the government, at a certain day, went over, by the operation of law, to the Freedmen's Bureau, and I think this property was released by order of General Howard, either as not being needed by the Freedmen's Bureau, or because he (Colonel Washington) had taken the amnesty oath and been pardoned.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was it the policy or practice of the government to treat as abandoned estates which the owners had left in the hands of their authorized agents?

A. I apprehend that property which was in the possession of tenants of the owners, or of lessees of the owners, was not regarded as abandoned property.

Q. Was there any distinction made as to the employment or status of the owner at the time?

A. One of the acts regulating captured and abandoned property defined what should be considered abandoned property, and declared all property abandoned the owner of which was absent from it prosecuting war against the United States.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Was not that exactly Colonel Washington's case?

A. I was not aware of it.

Q. Did you not know that Colonel Washington was in the rebel service?

A. I did not.

Q. Were you not informed of it?

A. I was not aware that Colonel Washington was in the service of the confederate government.

Q. Did you not know that the officers of the government had seized his property as abandoned previous to the time you made the repayment of $1,200?

A. I know that the property had been taken possession of either by the military authorities directly, or by our agents acting under the direction of the military authorities; but I was not aware that it was taken possession of as abandoned property under the statute.

Q. Do you know any law by which property can be taken possession of by an agent of the treasury or the Freedmen's Bureau, except a statute which declares certain property to be abandoned property?

A. I do not. All agents acted under the laws regulating captured or abandoned property.

Q. Knowing that this property had come into the possession of the treasury agents or of the Freedmen's Bureau, were you not bound to presume that it was lawfully in their possession?

A. I felt it was the duty, at that time, of the Secretary of the Treasury to enquire into the lawfulness or unlawfulness of all seizures that had been made by the agents of the government, or by the military authorities who had subsequently turned over the property to the treasury agent.

Q. Did you make any enquiry in this particular case, before you paid Mrs. Washington, for the purpose of ascertaining whether the property had been taken possession of as abandoned property?

A. I do not recollect now how thoroughly I examined the case. It did not seem to me that it was a case of very much importance. I supposed that the property could not have been taken with an intention of being held or sold by the government of the United States, and that it was due to the government, and due to the claimants, that the proceeds of it should be restored.

Q. Did you make any enquiry personally, or through any officer of the department? and if so, have you any report of such officer showing whether this property was taken possession of as abandoned property?

A. I do not recollect that I made any particular investigation of the points presented. I only know that, from the best information I could obtain from the files of the department, I came to the conclusion that it was not the intention of my predecessor, Mr. Chase, that household furniture which came into the possession of the treasury should be sold. According to the best of my recollection, an order was made by Mr. Chase that such property should be boxed and preserved, with the intention, as I supposed, of its being returned to its rightful owner.

Q. Will you furnish the Committee with whatever the records of the department contain in reference to Mrs. Washington's property?

A. I will.

Q. Is it not true that in reference to all movable property the law provides a way by which all persons entitled to the property, or its proceeds, can obtain it by going to the Court of Claims?

A. A provision was made for the recovery of such property, or its proceeds.

Q. Why, then, if you supposed Mrs. Washington entitled to the restoration of her property, or to the payment over of the proceeds, did you not refer the matter, under the law, to the Court of Claims?

A. Simply because I believed it unjust to Colonel Washington, and disreputable to the government, to compel him to go to the Court of Claims, at great expense, for the recovery of the proceeds of his furniture.

Q. Do you mean to say that where a way is pointed out for the adjustment of a claim of an individual against the government by the law, that the way is an improper and unjust way, and that you, as an officer of the government, are justified in adopting some other course for the adjustment of that question?

A. I do not mean to say anything of the kind. I mean only to say that I felt it to be my duty, as an officer of the government, to ascertain whether or not this property was properly captured, and whether it was such property as ought to be sold; and having come to the conclusion that it was not properly captured, and ought not to be sold, and the proceeds covered into the treasury, I felt it to be my duty to return to Colonel Washington the balance of the property which had not been sold, and the proceeds of that which had been disposed of.

Q. What means did you take to ascertain whether it was really abandoned property or not?

A. I took no other means, that I now recollect, than to call on Mr. Risley for a full report of the facts in the case. I have only a general recollection that the case was examined carefully, and that he considered it one where it was evidently right that the proceeds should be paid to the claimant.

Q. Have any other applications been made for payment of money over on account of sales of property that had been sold as abandoned property?

A. I do not recollect that any applications have been made for the restoration of proceeds of furniture.

Q. Any other movable property?

A. Large amounts have been claimed by different parties, and large amounts of property have been returned, and large amounts of money paid over to the applicants under the authority of Mr. Chase, Mr. Fessenden, and myself.

Q. What has been the rule of the department in reference to those applications—what has it been necessary for the applicant to show?

A. It has been necessary for the applicant to show that the property claimed by him was individual property, not owned by the confederate government, and not captured by military authority, or abandoned. On being satisfied that our agents had taken property which they were not authorized to take, or which had not been turned over to them by the military authorities as property captured, I have felt it to be my duty, as my predecessors had felt it to be theirs, to restore such property, or the proceeds, so far as they could be identified. In other words, our agents were sent into the southern States to collect only the property belonging to the confederate government and to the insurgent State governments—in general terms, captured or abandoned property; and whenever they seized the property of private individuals, not captured or abandoned, I felt it to be my duty to investigate the claims presented for the same with great care, and, on being satisfied that it had been improperly seized, and that it was private property, to restore either the property, or the proceeds, if it had been sold.

Q. There has been no other application for furniture, as I understand?

A. By a general order of the department, all furniture in hands of our agents, which had not been disposed of, and which was claimed by men who had been pardoned, or who had taken the amnesty oath, was restored to them.

Q. How was it in reference to property that had been sold?

A. I do not recollect any particular case in which furniture had been sold, but considerable quantities of furniture may have been sold at different places, for which there never has been a claimant. This was the only case that I recollect in which the proceeds of furniture that had been sold were claimed by the owner.

Q. What has been the rule of the department in reference to claimants of cotton, or of the proceeds of cotton when it was sold?

A. They have been required to furnish proof that the seizure was illegal and improper. I wish to state that in the testimony which I have given before the Committee I have only undertaken to give my general recollection of facts; that to the detail of general business in the Treasury Department I am not able to give particular personal attention, and that therefore I do not pretend to be perfectly accurate in my statements of minor transactions.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. In your report to Congress, of officers appointed by the President, during the recess, in 1865, and not nominated to the Senate at its next session, you refer to some of them as cases of accidental omission, and you state also in your testimony, if my recollection serves me correctly, to the same effect. I desire to know whether this was merely an expression of opinion on your part, or whether you had any knowledge which warranted that conclusion?

A. As far as the Treasury Department was at fault, the omissions were purely accidental.

Q. I am now speaking of the cases sent to the President by the department, in which he failed to make nominations to the Senate.

A. In regard to the omissions by the President to send nominations to the Senate, I have only to say that the circumstances were such as to leave no doubt on my mind that the omission on his part was likewise accidental. I cannot, however, of course, speak definitely of a matter that was in the bosom of the President; I only say that the circumstances were such as to leave no doubt upon my mind.

Q. To what circumstances do you refer?

A. Near the close of that session, Mr. Cooper, who had been the secretary of the President in charge of nominations, took his seat in Congress as a representative from Tennessee, as the result of which there was some confusion in regard to the business which had been before transacted by him. As soon after the adjournment of Congress as I discovered that nominations had been omitted to be made by the President, I called his attention to the fact, and the appointments were promptly made, and in a number of instances the same persons were appointed who had held the offices, and who were not supposed to be in entire sympathy with the President upon the great questions of reconstruction.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. I wish to ask you whether some of the persons whose names were not sent in by the President were not republicans, and afterwards reappointed by him?

A. That was the fact in regard to the surveyor and naval officer at Philadelphia, and perhaps in regard to one or two collectors of internal revenue in Philadelphia.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. These, then, as I understand you, are the facts upon which you rest that opinion?

A. These facts, and the manner in which the whole subject was treated by the President after his attention was called to the circumstances, satisfied me that they were purely accidental.

Q. How was the subject treated?

A. They were acted upon promptly, and in many cases appointments made of persons who were republicans.

Q. Did not some of them stand over for a month?

A. The President acted promptly, in filling all the vacant offices, as soon as his attention was called to them. It was, in some instances, many days before we discovered the omissions.

The above testimony, on being submitted to the witness for examination, was returned with the following statement:

JUNE 3, 1867.—Since my examination by the Committee on the 28th and 31st ultimo, I have learned that I have been misinformed in regard to the number of officers at the South who had received compensation without having taken the test oath. From a letter addressed by Mr. Rollins to W. E. Chandler, who has testified before the Committee upon this subject, (to which letter I respectfully refer the Committee for the facts and explanations,) it appears that one collector and two assessors of internal revenue, and twenty-one assistant assessors, received some compensation without having taken the oath. I regret that the accounting officers of the department had not, instead of the Secretary and the assistant Secretary, been examined on this subject, as they were in the possession of the facts which were not communicated to the Secretary or assistant. Since my examination I have also ascertained that Colonel Washington's land and furniture were taken possession of, against the remonstrances of the tenant, in July, 1862. The act declaring property to be "abandoned" when the owner was absent aiding the rebellion was passed July 2, 1864, and was not retroactive.

In July, 1863, Mr. Chase gave the following directions to agents in regard to furniture, indicating, I think, that he did not contemplate its sale: "In case furniture or other movable property of like character is abandoned or captured, you will cause it to be retained and left on the premises where found, whenever it can be done with safety; otherwise, if practicable and not attended with too great cost, you will have it safely stored and properly marked and numbered, and will report the facts to this department and await further instructions."

I have ascertained also that, except in the case of North Carolina, no property was given up or surrendered to the provisional Governor of any State, so far as is shown by the records of the Treasury Department.

The only case other than that of North Carolina, in which property, collected or uncollected, was surrendered to public uses by any Executive order, or in pursuance of any policy of the general government, of which I find any record, was that of the State of Alabama. By an Executive order, dated November 11, 1865, all captured and abandoned property in that State, except cotton, was turned over to the assistant Commissioner of Freedmen, General Swayne, this being regarded as the best and most economical use that could be made of it. The following is a copy of the order:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington City, November 11, 1865.

Ordered, That the civil and military agents of the government transfer to the assistant Commissioner of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands for Alabama the use and custody of all real estate, buildings, or other property, except cotton, seized or held by them in that State as belonging to the late rebel government, together with all such funds as may arise or have arisen from the rent, sale, or disposition of such property which have not been finally paid into the treasury of the United States.

(Signed) ANDREW JOHNSON,
President.

Official:

(Signed) E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE, November 11, 1865.

I desire that the foregoing explanations and statements shall be a part of my testimony.

HUGH McCULLOCH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 31, 1867.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON recalled and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Can you state if any money was paid by the government of the United States towards defraying the expenses of the provisional government of North Carolina? If so, how much and for what purpose?

A. Seven thousand dollars were paid out of the army contingencies for the purposes specified in the "detailed statement of expenses of provisional government of North Carolina paid out of the fund of $7,000 advanced by the United States government," filed in the War Department by Governor Holden. This account furnishes the items of the whole expenditure, and exceeds by $31 43 the amount advanced by the government. The account is certified by William Sloan, provisional treasurer. I will furnish the Committee a copy of it. This amount is exclusive of what was paid for the salary of the Governor.

Q. Will you state if similar advances were made to the other provisional governments of the rebel States?

A. I think not. I have not now any recollection of other advances.

Q. Did the War Department pay the salaries of any of the other provisional Governors?

A. The War Department did pay the salaries specified in the letter of the Secretary of War, dated January 8, 1866, printed in Senate Executive Document No. 26, Thirty-ninth Congress, first session, and subsequently paid the salaries of other Governors, amounting in all to the sum of $11,429 38, a statement of the account of which will be furnished, exhibiting the amount paid to each Governor.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you pay these sums from the War Department, on your own judgment, without direction from the President?

A. No, sir; they were paid with the sanction and authority of the President—I, however, believing them to be proper payments out of that appropriation. The payment of expenses was made after consultation in Cabinet as to the necessity of furnishing expenses for the purpose of carrying on that government. An estimate was required of and made by the Governor before any payment. That estimate was larger than the sum advanced. It was reduced to the sum of $7,000, and an advance of that sum was made. When the question of the payment of salaries of Governors came up, on the application of Governor Perry for his first quarter's salary, it was referred by the War Department to the State Department, and returned, with an endorsement for payment, by order of the President. Subsequent payments were made upon presentation of the accounts without any specific order. The drafts for salaries which were paid through drafts were addressed to the Secretary of State. Some of the latter payments were made on accounts rendered directly to the War Department. The reason why I believed them to be proper payments out of army contingencies are stated in my letter of January 8, before referred to, in these terms:

"These payments were made from the appropriation of army contingencies, because the duties performed by the parties were regarded of a temporary character, ancillary to the withdrawal of military force, the disbandment of armies, and the reduction of military expenditure by provisional organizations for the protection of civil rights and preservation of peace, and to take the place of the armed forces in the respective States."

Q. Was the whole subject of payment of salaries and of these expenses the subject of Cabinet consideration?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the money was paid according to Cabinet determination?

A. I cannot say that they determined anything about it. The matter was discussed in Cabinet, and the payment was made because I believed it to be right, and it met the approval of the President and the Cabinet.

Q. Will you state whether this Cabinet consultation was prior to or after Secretary Seward's letter of July 8, 1865?

A. I cannot state any specific date or any specific Cabinet meeting. The subject was discussed along with other questions relating to the plan of reconstruction then being put in force. There was probably no determination had upon the subject until the payment came to be made. Then there was an interchange of views by the members of the Cabinet upon the general subject. The specific payments were not, so far as I know, in any instance, made the subject of Cabinet consultation, and I do not undertake to state the opinion of any member of the Cabinet except myself; but I know of no dissent in their views.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was there any order made by the department in reference to the execution of General Sherman's order relating to the Sea Islands?

A. I cannot state from recollection, and without reference to the records, whether any official order was promulgated upon the subject or not. I was at Savannah and discussed the subject of that order with General Sherman, and approved of it in all its terms. I conceived his authority, at the head of an army of occupation, to be sufficient at that time to put it in force without any action on the part of the department.

Q. Did you issue any order to General Saxton relative to that subject?

A. No written order, I think. General Saxton either came to Savannah, or was invited there by me. I conversed with him upon the subject, and stated the principles of the order about to be issued by General Sherman, assigning him to the command of a particular district, and in conversation indicated to him the expectation that the order would be carried out by him, and that he would conform to it.

Q. Was not the effect of that order nullified by the President's order, or the order of the Freedmen's Bureau made under the direction of the President, ordering the restoration of lands in possession of the bureau?

A. Before I could answer that question, I should require to have the orders referred to before me; I should want to hear the question fully discussed, and then I should decide it according to my judgment of the law in the case. I do not feel competent as a witness, in answer to the interrogatory, to express any opinion upon the question of law involved.

Q. I put it to you not as a question of law, but as a question of fact, whether it did not take away practically the benefits of that order of General Sherman?

A. As a question of fact, I can state nothing from memory in regard to it, for I do not now remember who were put in possession of the lands under General Sherman's order, or who, if any, were deprived of lands under the President's order. These are matters of detail which appear, or should appear, in the record's of the Freedmen's Bureau. I do not know whether they came under my observation, and if they did, I do not recollect their contents.

Q. Do you know anything about the facts of General Saxton's removal from the place of assistant Commissioner of the bureau, and the reason for that removal?

A. He was removed by my order, upon the application of General Howard, who stated that there were difficulties and controversies down there, and that while he had entire confidence himself in General Saxton, he thought it would, on the whole, be for the benefit of the service that another competent officer should take his place.

Q. Was he not removed upon the special ground that he declined to surrender any portion of the Sea Island lands, except upon a special order, in each particular case, in conformity to Order No. 15, to which I have referred?

A. I have no knowledge of any such cause operating upon his removal, and I do not now remember what was his action upon that subject. I do not think I should have consented to his removal upon any such grounds, or upon any ground short of positive delinquency, (which, to my knowledge, was never charged against him,) without the assent of General Howard, chief of the Freedmen's Bureau.

Q Did you make the order removing General Saxton, upon your own judgment, or by direction of the President?

A. I am not aware that the President had any knowledge of his removal at the time it took place. I made it upon representation which operated upon my own judgment as above stated, and without any diminution of confidence or regard for General Saxton, whom I esteem as a very excellent officer, who has performed great service for the freedmen as well as in other branches of the military service.

Q. General Howard, as I understood you, did not state what the particular difficulties were?

A. Not at all that I remember.

Q. Was any one appointed as successor to General Saxton in that department?

A. My impression is that General Scott, who has been in that field ever since, was assigned to the duties that had been performed by General Saxton.

Q. Was he assigned to those duties by you or by order of the President?

A. By me, upon recommendation of General Howard, and without any conference with the President at all upon the subject. It was one of those acts which were daily performed by the Secretary of War, upon his own judgment upon the facts before him, and with which he never troubled the President.

WASHINGTON, February 13, 1866.

GENERAL: Lieutenant General Grant directs that your attention be called to the dangerously inflammatory course of the Richmond Examiner, a newspaper published in Richmond, Virginia, and orders that you take immediate military possession of said newspaper establishment and close it, and that you retain possession and prohibit the publication of the paper until further orders.

The editor, Mr. Pollard, will not be restrained in his personal liberty unless his arrest is necessary to preserve order, or charges setting forth specifically his offences are preferred.

T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Major General A. H. TERRY,
Commanding Department of Virginia, Richmond, Virginia.

EBBITT HOUSE,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1866.

GENERAL: Referring to my request of this morning that the Examiner be permitted to resume its publication, it is only necessary, after our free and full conversation, to repeat what I then stated, that it is not my purpose to pursue a policy in anywise inimical to the government, but to continue an earnest and cordial support of President Johnson.

It remains only for me to remind you, general, that all my personal interests are involved in this matter, and that they would be hopelessly sacrificed by even a slight delay.

As the President has promised me an interview on the subject at 3 p. m. to-day, I should be glad if you would see him previous to that hour.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

H. RIVES POLLARD.

Lieutenant General GRANT.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, February 17, 1866.

The course of the Examiner, in every number which I have seen, has been such as to foster and increase the ill feeling existing towards the government of the United States by the discontented portion of the southern people. I believe it to be for the best interests of the whole people, North and South, to suppress such utterances wherever the power exists to do so. The power certainly does exist where martial law prevails, and will be exercised.

Reluctant as I was to pursue the course I have felt it my duty to pursue in this instance, and as much as I dislike to interfere with the interests of individuals, I would deem it improper, and mischievous in tendency, to revoke the order for the suppression of the Richmond Examiner at this time.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1866.

GENERAL: I have sent R. H. Pollard, esq., of the Richmond Examiner, to you for the purpose of disposing of his case. I hope that if he makes satisfactory explanation, and promises to do better hereafter, you will be as moderate with him as possible.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Lieutenant General GRANT,
Commanding Armies of the United States.

EBBITT HOUSE,
Washington, February 17, 1866.

If the publication of the Examiner is permitted to be resumed, it is my purpose to give a cordial support to the Union, the Constitution, and the laws of the land. The policy of your administration will continue to receive the support of the journal.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

H. RIVES POLLARD.

The PRESIDENT.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., February 17, 1866.

GENERAL: H. R. Pollard, esq., has been again to see me in reference to his case. I would not be considered importunate, but Mr. Pollard seems thoroughly penitent, and to give every reasonable promise for the future course of his paper, and I request that the order in regard to it may be suspended for the present.

If such an order is made, the conditions upon which it is done should be clearly stipulated and expressed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Lieutenant General GRANT.
Commanding Armies of the United States.

WASHINGTON, February 19, 1866.

GENERAL: Your order of date the 13th instant, taking military possession of the Richmond Examiner, a newspaper published in Richmond, Virginia, and prohibiting its publication, made in pursuance of the directions of the Lieutenant General commanding, is hereby temporarily suspended; and the Richmond Examiner will be permitted to resume its publication, upon the express conditions that in future it will not pursue a course inimical to the government, or to the growth or expression in acts or words of Union sentiments among the people of the States lately in rebellion, or to the cultivation of friendly relations between the people of these States, or any of them, and the other States of the Union; and that it will not in anywise fail in its editorials, correspondence, or transfer of articles from other newspapers, to give support, countenance, and friendship to acts and expressions of loyalty to the Union and its supporters.

By command of Lieutenant General Grant:

T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Major General A. H. TERRY,
Commanding Department of Virginia.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, May 31, 1867.

I hereby certify that the annexed documents are true copies of the originals on file in the War Department.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Be it known that Edward D. Townsend, who has signed the foregoing certificate, is an assistant Adjutant General of the army of the United States, and that to his attestation as such full faith and credit are and ought to be given.

In testimony whereof, I, Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the Department of War of the United States of America to be hereunto affixed on this thirty-first day of May, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven.

[SEAL.] EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

[By telegraph from Mobile, Alabama, May 11, 1866.]

WM. D. WHIPPLE, Assistant Adjutant General, Nashville, Tennessee:

Raphael Semmes has been elected judge of probate for county of Mobile. Is any action in his case necessary?

C. R. WOODS,
Brevet Major General.

[By telegraph from Nashville, Tennessee, May 11, 1866.]

Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

Raphael W. Semmes has been appointed probate judge at Mobile, Alabama. Shall I permit him to act?

GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

[Telegram.]

MAY 16, 1866.

Major General C. R. WOODS:

Your despatch of May 11, referring to Raphael Semmes, received and referred to the Secretary of War. The following answer is furnished you for your guidance in this and similar cases. If this applies to Frank Gurley, you will notify Governor Patton that he, Gurley, will not be permitted to act as sheriff of Madison county.

By command of Major General Thomas:

WILLIAM D. WHIPPLE,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[By telegraph from Washington, D. C.]

To Major General THOMAS, Commanding:

Your telegram respecting Raphael Semmes has been presented to the President, who directs that Semmes be not permitted to hold or exercise the functions as probate judge in the city of Mobile, or any other civil or political office or trust, while he remains unpardoned by the President; if at any time a pardon shall be issued to him you will be notified thereof. The same instruction will be observed by you in respect to any unpardoned rebel in your command.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF ALABAMA,
Mobile, Alabama, May, 16, 1866.

By command of the brevet major general commanding, I have the honor respectfully to state to you that it is the direction of his excellency the President of the United States that you be not permitted to hold or exercise the functions of probate judge of Mobile county, or any other civil or political office or trust, while you remain unpardoned by him.

The major general commanding also desires me to state that the above instructions were received only last night, and accompanied by orders for their enforcement, and that it is his hope and desire that you will comply with them without necessitating any further action.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. RAMSEY NININGER,
Assistant Adjutant General.

RAPHAEL SEMMES, Esq., Mobile, Alabama.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
South Carolina, September 18, 1865.

DEAR SIR: The Hon. W. H. Seward, Secretary of State, has directed me to draw on the War Department monthly or quarterly for my salary and all necessary expenses of the provisional government of South Carolina. I have accordingly drawn for the first quarter's salary, and authorized John W. Grady to sign my name to any receipts or vouchers necessary. If the whole quarter's salary should not be paid because it wants a few days of being due, then please pay the two months' salary which is past due.

I am greatly in need of stationery and cannot procure it here; do order some to be sent me. It would be a great favor.

Yours, &c.,

B. F. PERRY.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War, United States.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
South Carolina, September 18, 1865.

In obedience to instructions received from the Hon. W. H. Seward, Secretary of State, directing me to draw on the War Department for my salary as provisional Governor of South Carolina, you will please pay to the order of John W. Grady seven hundred and fifty dollars, due me for first quarter's salary from the 1st day of July to the 1st day of October, 1865, being payable monthly or quarterly. And I do hereby authorize and empower the said John W. Grady to sign my name to any receipts, drafts, or vouchers necessary to receive the same or any part thereof.

B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor of South Carolina.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War, United States.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, October 5, 1865.

The Secretary of War is directed to pay the salary of Governor Perry out of the appropriation of contingencies.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President.

Amounts paid provisional Governors.

Sept. 4, 1865.—W. W. Holden, North Carolina	$750 00
Dec. 14, 1865.—W. W. Holden, North Carolina	1,000 00
	1,750 00
Sept. 30, 1865.—B. F. Perry, South Carolina	$720 00
Feb. 9, 1866.—B. F. Perry, South Carolina	1,516 95
	2,236 95
Oct. 14, 1865.—James Johnson, Georgia	$750 00
Mar. 2, 1866.—James Johnson, Georgia	500 00
Dec. 14, 1866.—James Johnson, Georgia	250 00
	1,500 00
Nov. 3, 1865.—Lewis E. Parsons, Alabama	$1,000 00
Feb. 14, 1866.—Lewis E. Parsons, Alabama	1,740 00
	2,740 00
Jan. 23, 1866.—William Marvin, Florida	$1,722 44
May 7, 1866.—William Marvin, Florida	1,479 99
	3,202 43

Recapitulation.

W. W. Holden	$1,750 00
B. F. Perry	2,236 95
James Johnson	1,500 00
Lewis E. Parsons	2,740 00
William Marvin	3,202 43
Total	11,429 38

Detailed statement of expenses of the provisional government of North Carolina, paid out of the fund of seven thousand dollars advanced by the United States government.

Date.	For what object.	Amount.	Total.
July, 1865.	Amount paid T. N. Ramsay, clerk and messenger in executive office, salary from June 5 to August 5, 1865	$90 00
	R. C. Badger, traveling expenses to western North Carolina, on business as commissioner of provisional Governor	50 00
	W. E. Pell, for advertising circular of provisional Treasurer in North Carolina Christian Advocate	2 50
	Alexander Moore, (colored,) compensation for two months' services in attending on officers in capitol	30 00
	P. A. Wiley, chief clerk to provisional Treasurer, his salary from 12th of June to 25th of July, and for articles furnished treasurer's office	92 95
			$265 45
Aug., 1865	Andrew Miller, clerk in executive office, his compensation for fifteen days' services from 10th of July	45 00
	W. H. Bugley, on account of salary as assistant secretary to provisional Governor	150 00
	Tod R. Caldwell, on account of salary as aide-de-camp to provisional Governor	150 00

Detailed statement of the expenses of the provisional government of North Carolina, &c — Continued.

Date.	For what object.	Amount.	Total.
Aug., 1865.	Joseph S. Cannon, on account of salary as aide-de-camp to provisional Governor	$250 00
	S. M. Parish, compensation for one month as clerk in executive office	80 00
	Lewis Hanes, private secretary to provisional Governor, his salary for one month	100 00
	R. C. Badger, on account of salary as assistant secretary to provisional Governor	180 00
	Tod R. Caldwell, on account of salary as aide-de-camp to provisional Governor	150 00
	D. W. Bain, chief clerk to provisional Treasurer, his salary for one month from 25th of July	75 00
	Huffham & Cobb, for advertising for provisional Treasurer in Daily Record	5 00
	Huffham & Cobb, for advertising proclamation of provisional Governor in Daily Record	46 50
Aug., 1865.	Sundry persons for advertising proclamation of provisional Governor and circular of provisional Treasurer, as follows:
	J. L. Pennington & Co., Daily Progress	62 75
	Dennis Heartt, Hillsboro' Recorder	44 00
	L. V. Blum, People's Press	45 00
	I. I. Stewart, Salisbury Banner	46 00
	Cannon & Holden, for printing and advertising for executive and treasury departments	226 25
	Alexander Moore, (colored,) on account of services rendered in capitol	10 00
	W. H. Bagley, on account of expenses in distributing amnesty oath and other documents in sundry eastern counties of North Carolina	250 00
	W. J. Palmer, for paper furnished for blank books for amnesty oath	364 00
	R. C. Badger, on account of expenses in distributing amnesty oath and other documents in sundry western counties of the State	200 00
	Mrs. F. M. Bumpass, advertising circular of provisional Treasurer in Weekly Message	4 00
	Sundry persons, on account of expenses as messengers of provisional Governor on public business, as follows:
	James H. Moore	100 00
	John R. Harrison	50 00
	H. P. Tucker	50 00
	W. J. Holleman	100 00
	Patrick McGowan	50 00
	John R. Harrison	17 50
	H. P. Tucker	58 90
	Cannon & Holden, for printing for executive department and advertising second proclamation of provisional Governor in North Carolina Standard	492 20
	T. N. Ramsay, for payment of express freight on books and documents from Washington city to provisional Governor	10 75
	J. L. Pennington & Co., advertising second proclamation of provisional Governor in Daily Progress	210 00
	W. E. Pell, advertising second proclamation of provisional Governor in Daily Sentinel	200 00
	Alexander Moore, (colored,) compensation for one month in attending officers in capitol	20 00
			$3,342 85
Sept., 1865.	S. M. Parish, clerk in executive office, one month's salary	80 00

Detailed statement of the expenses of the provisional government of North Carolina, &c.—Continued.

Date.	For what object.	Amount.	Total.
Sept., 1865.	T. N. Ramsay, clerk in executive office, one month's salary	$45 00
	Lewis Hunes, private secretary to provisional Governor, one month's salary	100 00
	Joseph S. Cannon, on account of salary as aide-de-camp to provisional Governor	150 00
	Tod R. Caldwell, on account of salary as aide-de-camp to provisional Governor	35 00
	R. C. Badger, assistant secretary to provisional Governor, on account of salary	90 00
	W. H. Bagley, assistant secretary to provisional Governor, on account of salary	140 00
	C. R. Thomas, his salary as provisional Secretary of State from June 5 to August 12, 1865	149 33
	Jonathan Worth, provisional Treasurer, his salary from June 12 to September 1, 1865	443 80
	D. W. Bain, chief clerk to provisional Treasurer, his salary for month ending September 25, 1865	75 00
	Sundry persons, for advertising proclamations of provisional Governor, as follows:
	W. J. Yates, Western Democrat	179 50
	L. V. Blum, People's Press	82 50
	Huffham & Cobb, Daily Record	200 00
	T. M. Cooke & Co, Wilmington Herald	260 00
	T. N. Ramsay, for payment of expenses of executive department	10 00
	W. J. Palmer, furnishing paper for printing amnesty oath and binding same in books, at North Carolina institution for deaf and dumb and the blind	853 00
	W. J. Palmer, two blank books furnished provisional Treasurer's office	30 00
			$2,923 13
	Total		7,631 43

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Raleigh, North Carolina, January 1, 1866.

I, William Sloan, provisional Treasurer of the State of North Carolina, hereby certify that the foregoing is a true statement of the expenses of the provisional government of this State, (as shown by the proper vouchers on file in this office,) and as paid out of the fund of seven thousand dollars advanced by the government of the United States to W. W. Holden, provisional Governor.

WILLIAM SLOAN, Provisional Public Treasurer.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 18, 1865.

GENERAL: I have agreed with General Joseph E. Johnston for a temporary cessation of active hostilities, to enable me to lay before our government at Washington the agreement made between us, with the full sanction of Mr. Davis, in the presence of Mr. Breckinridge, for the disbandment of all the armies of the confederacy from here to the Rio Grande. If any of your forces are moving towards Johnston, I beg you to check them where they are, or at the extremity of any railroad where they may be supplied, until you receive orders from General Grant, or until I notify you that the agreement is at an end, and hostilities resumed.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

The COMMANDING GENERAL,
Armies of the United States in Virginia.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 18, 1865.

GENERAL: I enclose herewith a copy of an agreement made this day between General Joseph E. Johnston and myself, which, if approved by the President of the United States, will produce peace from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. Mr. Breckinridge was present at our conference in his capacity as major general, and satisfied me of the ability of General Johnston to carry out to the full extent the terms of this agreement, and if you will get the President to simply endorse the copy, and commission me to carry out the terms, I will follow them to the conclusion.

You will observe that it is an absolute submission of the enemy to the lawful authority of the United States, and disperses his armies absolutely; and the point to which I attach most importance is that the dispersion and disbandment of these armies is done in such a manner as to prevent their breaking up into guerilla bands. On the other hand, we can retain just as much of our army as we please. I agreed to the mode and manner of the surrender of arms set forth, as it gives the States the means of repressing guerillas, which we could not expect them to do if we stripped them of all arms.

Both Generals Johnston and Breckinridge admitted that slavery was dead, and I could not insist on embracing it in such a paper, because it can be made with the States in detail. I know that all the men of substance South sincerely want peace, and I do not believe they will resort to war again during this century. I have no doubt that they will in the future be perfectly subordinate to the laws of the United States.

The moment my action in this matter is approved, I can spare five corps, and will ask for orders to leave General Schofield here with the 10th corps, and to march myself with the 14th, 15th, 17th, 20th and 23d corps, via Burkesville and Gordonsville, to Frederick or Hagerstown, there to be paid and mustered out.

The question of finance is now the chief one, and every soldier and officer not needed should be got home at work.

I would like to be able to begin the march North by May 1. I urge on the part of the President speedy action, as it is important to get the confederate armies to their homes as well as our own.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

Lieutenant General U. S. GRANT, or Major General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.

Memorandum, or basis of agreement, made this 18th day of April, 1865, near Durham's Station, in the State of North Carolina, by and between General Joseph E. Johnston, commanding the confederate army, and Major General William T. Sherman, commanding the army of the United States in North Carolina, both present.

First. The contending armies now in the field to maintain the status quo until notice is given by the commanding general of any one to its opponent, and reasonable time, say forty-eight hours, allowed

Second. The confederate armies now in existence to be disbanded and conducted to their several State capitals, there to deposit their arms and public property in the State arsenal, and each officer and man to execute and file an agreement to cease from acts of war, and to abide the action of both State and Federal authority. The number of arms and munitions of war to be reported to the chief of ordnance at Washington city, subject to the future action of the Congress of the United States, and in the mean time to be used solely to maintain peace and order within the borders of the States, respectively.

Third. The recognition by the Executive of the United States of the several State governments, on their officers and legislatures taking the oaths prescribed by the Constitution of the United States; and where conflicting State governments have resulted from the war, the legitimacy of all shall be submitted to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Fourth. The re-establishment of all the federal courts in the several States, with powers as defined by the Constitution and laws of Congress.

Fifth. The people and inhabitants of all the States to be guaranteed, so far as the Executive can, their political rights and franchises, as well as their rights of person and property, as defined by the Constitution of the United States and of the States, respectively.

Sixth. The executive authority of the government of the United States not to disturb any of the people by reason of the late war so long as they live in peace and quiet, abstain from acts of armed hostility, and obey the laws in existence at the place of their residence.

Seventh. In general terms, the war to cease; a general amnesty, so far as the Executive of the United States can command, on condition of the disbandment of the confederate armies, the distribution of the arms, and the resumption of peaceful pursuits by the officers and men hitherto composing said armies.

Not being fully empowered by our respective principals to fulfil these terms, we individually and officially pledge ourselves to promptly obtain the necessary authority and to carry out the above programme.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General, Commanding
Armies United States in North Carolina.
J. E. JOHNSTON,
General, Commanding
Confederate States Army in North Carolina.

Compared with the original in my possession and hereby certified.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

As the avowed motive of the government of the United States for the prosecution of the existing war with the confederate States is to secure a reunion of all the States under one common government, and as wisdom and sound policy alike require that a common government should rest on the consent and be supported by the affections of all the people who compose it: now, in order to ascertain whether it be practicable to put an end to the existing war, and to the consequent destruction of life and property, having in view the correspondence and conversation which has recently taken place between Major General W. T. Sherman and myself, I propose the following points as a basis of pacification:

1. The disbanding of the military forces of the confederacy.
2. The recognition of the Constitution and authority of the government of the United States on the following conditions:
3. The preservation and continuance of the existing State governments.
4. The preservation to the people of all the political rights and rights of person and property secured to them by the Constitution of the United States and of their several States.
5. Freedom from future prosecution or penalties for their participation in the present war
6. Agreement to a general suspension of hostilities pending these negotiations.

J. E. JOHNSTON.

HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD, April 14, 1865

GENERAL: The results of the recent campaign in Virginia have changed the relative military condition of the belligerents. I am therefore induced to address you, in this form, the inquiry whether, in order to stop the further effusion of blood and devastation of property, you are willing to make a temporary suspension of active operations, and to communicate with Lieutenant General Grant, commanding the armies of the United States, the request that he will take like action in regard to the other armies; the object being to permit the civil authorities to enter into the needful arrangements to terminate the existing war.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN, Commanding United States Forces.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, N. C., April 14, 1865.

GENERAL: I have this moment received your communication of this date. I am fully empowered to arrange with you any terms for the suspension of further hostilities as between the armies commanded by you and those commanded by myself, and will be willing to confer with you to that end. I will limit the advance of my main column to-morrow to Morrisville, and the cavalry to the University, and expect that you will also maintain the present position of your forces until each has notice of a failure to agree.

That a basis of action may be had, I undertake to abide by the same terms and conditions as were made by Generals Grant and Lee, at Appomattox Court House, on the 9th instant, relative to our two armies; and, furthermore, to obtain from General Grant an order to suspend the movements of any troops from the direction of Virginia. General Stoneman is under my command, and my order will suspend any devastation or destruction contemplated by him. I will add that I really desire to save the people of North Carolina the damages they would sustain by the march of this army through the central or western parts of the State.

I am, with respect, your obedient servant,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General.

General J. E. JOHNSTON,
Commanding Confederate Army.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

DURHAM STATION, April 16, 1865.

Major General SHERMAN:

The following despatch has just been received from Lieutenant General Wade Hampton.

J. KILPATRICK,
Brevet Major General.

GENERAL: The general commanding directs me to arrange for a meeting between himself and Major General Sherman. In accordance with these instructions, I beg to enquir. when and where this meeting can most conveniently be held. I suggest 10 o'clock a. m. to-morrow as the hour, and a point on the Hillsboro' road, equidistant from the picket of your command and my own, as the place for the proposed meeting.

I am, respectfully, yours,

NED WADE HAMPTON,
Lieutenant General.

Major General KILPATRICK, United States.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

GREENSBORO', April 19, 1865.

GENERAL: As your troops are moving from the coast towards the interior of South Carolina, and from Columbus towards Macon, Georgia, I respectfully suggest that you send copies of your orders, announcing the suspension of hostilities, for transmittal to them by me, supposing the interior route to be shortest.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. JOHNSTON,
General Confederate States Army.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN,
Commanding United States Forces in North Carolina.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, N. C., April 20, 1865.

GENERAL: At your request, I send you by Major Sanders several written and printed copies of an order I have made to this army, which announces the cessation of hostilities, &c. I despatched a steamer from Morehead City yesterday for Charleston, with orders to General Gillmore to cease all acts of destruction, public or private, and to draw Generals Hatch and Potter back of the Santee. Also, by 11½ a. m. yesterday, Major Hitchcock was on a fleet steamer at Morehead City, carrying a request to General Meade to check the movement of his army on Danville and Weldon, so that I hope your people will be spared in the Carolinas; but I am apprehensive of Wilson, who is impetuous and rapid. If you will send by telegraph and courier a single word, he will stop, and then the enclosed order will place his command at a point convenient to our supplies.

I send you a late paper, showing that in Virginia the State authorities are acknowledged and invited to resume their lawful functions.

Yours, with respect,

W T. SHERMAN,
Major General.

General J. E. JOHNSTON, Greensboro'.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Special Field Orders, No. 58.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
Raleigh, N. C., April 19, 1865.

The general commanding announces to the army a suspension of hostilities, and an agreement with General Johnston and other high officials, which, when finally ratified, will make peace from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. Until the absolute peace is arranged, a line passing through Tyrrill's Mount, Chapel Hill University, Durham's Station, and West Point on the Neuse, will separate the two armies. Each army commander will group his camps entirely with a view to comfort, health, and good police. All the details of military discipline must still be maintained, and the general hopes and believes that, in a very few days, it will be his good fortune to conduct you all to your homes. The fame of this army for courage, industry, and discipline is admitted all over the world. Then let each officer and man see that it is not stained by any act of vulgarity, rowdyism, or petty crime. The cavalry will patrol the front line, General Howard will take charge of the district from Raleigh up to the cavalry, General Slocum to the left of Raleigh, and General Schofield in Raleigh, its right and rear.

Quartermasters and commissaries will keep their supplies up to a light load for wagons, and the railroad superintendent will arrange a depot for the convenience of each separate army.

By order of Major General W. T. Sherman:

L. M. DAYTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES FORCES,
Goldsboro', N. C., April 19, 1865.

Official:

S. T. HYDE,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

[Cipher.]

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CORPS,
MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
Macon, Georgia, April 20, 1865.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN, (through headquarters General Beauregard:)

My advance received surrender of this city, with its garrison, this evening. General Cobb had previously sent me, under flag of truce, a copy of a telegram from Beauregard declaring existence of an armistice between all troops under your command and those under his. Without questioning the authenticity of this despatch, or its application to my command, could not communicate orders to my advance in time to prevent the capture of the place. I shall, therefore, hold its garrison, including Major Generals G. W. Smith and Cobb and Brigadier General McCall, prisoners of war, reasonable length of time to hear from you.

J. H. WILSON,
Brevet Major General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE,
April 21, 1865—9.30 a. m.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN, (care Lieutenant General Hampton, via Hillsboro':)

I transmit a despatch just received by telegraph from Major General Wilson, U. S. A. Should you desire to give the orders asked for in the same manner, I beg you to send them to me through Lieutenant General Hampton's office.

I hope that for the sake of expedition you are willing to take this course. I also send for your information a copy of a despatch received from Major General Cobb.

J. E. JOHNSTON.

Official:

H. B. McCLELLAN,
Assistant Adjutant General.

fficial:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF TENNESSEE,
April 21, 1865—9.30 a. m.

Lieutenant General HAMPTON:

Transmit to General Sherman the following despatch, dated Headquarters Cavalry Corps, Military Division of the West, Macon, Georgia, April 20, 1865:

"Major General W. T. SHERMAN, (through headquarters of General Beauregard:)

"My advance received the surrender of this city with its garrison this evening. General Cobb had previously sent me, under flag of truce, a copy of the telegram from General Beauregard, declaring the existence of an armistice between all the troops under your command and those of General Johnston. Without questioning the authority of this despatch or its application to my command, I could not communicate orders to my advance in time to prevent the capture. I shall therefore hold the garrison, including Major Generals Cobb and G. W. Smith, and Brigadier General McCall, prisoners of war. Please send me orders. I shall remain here a reasonable length of time to hear from you.

"J. H. WILSON,
"Brevet Major General U. S. Army."

Official: J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

H. B. McCLELLAN,
Assistant Adjutant General.
Official: L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 21, 1865.

GENERAL: I send you a letter for General Wilson, which if sent by telegraph and courier will check his career. He may mistrust the telegraph; therefore, better send the original, for he cannot mistake my handwriting, with which he is familiar.

He seems to have his blood up, and will be hard to hold. If he can buy corn, fodder, and rations down about Fort Valley, it will obviate the necessity of his going up to Rome or Dalton. It is reported to me from Cairo that Mobile is in our possession, but it is not minute or official.

General Baker sent in to me, wanting to surrender his command, on the theory that the whole confederate army was surrendered. I explained to him or his staff officer the exact truth, and left him to act as he thought proper. He seems to have disbanded his men, deposited a few arms about twenty miles from here, and himself awaits your action. I will not hold him, his men, or arms subject to any condition other than the final one we may agree on.

I shall look for Major Hitchcock back from Washington on Wednesday, and shall promptly notify you of the result. By the action of General Weitzel in relation to the Virginia legislature, I feel certain we will have no trouble on the score of recognizing existing State governments. It may be the lawyers will want us to define more minutely what is meant by the guarantee of rights of person and property. It may be construed into a compact for us to undo the past as to the rights of slaves, and leases of plantations on the Mississippi of vacant and abandoned plantations. I wish you would talk to the best men you have on these points, and if possible let us in our final convention make these points so clear as to leave no room for angry controversy.

I believe that if the South would simply and publicly declare what we all feel, that slavery is dead, you would inaugurate an era of peace and prosperity that would soon efface the ravages of the past four years of war. Negroes would remain in the South, and afford you abundance of cheap labor, which otherwise will be driven away; and it will save the country the senseless discussions which have kept us all in hot water for fifty years.

Although, strictly speaking, this is no subject of a military convention, yet I am honestly convinced that our simple declaration of a result will be accepted as good law everywhere. Of course, I have not a single word from Washington on this or any other point of our agreement, but I know the effect of such a step by us will be universally accepted.

I am, with great respect, your obedient servant,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General United States Army.

General J. E. JOHNSTON,
Commanding Confederate Army.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[By telegraph, through General J. E. Johnston.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 21, 1865.

GENERAL: A suspension of hostilities was agreed on between General Johnston and myself on Tuesday, April 18, at twelve noon. I want that agreement religiously observed, and you may release the generals captured at Macon, occupy ground convenient, and contract for supplies for your command, and forbear any act of hostility until you hear, or have reason to believe, hostilities are resumed. In the mean time, it is also agreed the position of the enemy's forces must not be altered to our prejudice.

You know by this time that General Lee has surrendered to General Grant the rebel army of northern Virginia, and that I only await the sanction of the President to conclude terms of peace coextensive with the boundaries of the United States. You will shape your conduct on this knowledge, unless you have overwhelming proof to the contrary.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

General JAMES H. WILSON,
Commanding Cav. Div. Miss., Macon, Georgia.

After the above is telegraphed, this original should be sent General Wilson as rapidly as possible.

W. T. SHERMAN, Major General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS CAV. CORPS, MIL. DIVISION MISSISSIPPI,
Macon, Georgia, April 21, 1865.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN, (through General Johnston:)

Your despatch of yesterday is just received. I shall at once proceed to carry out your instructions if proper arrangements can be made to have sugar, coffee, and clothing sent from Savannah to Augusta. They can be brought hither by the way of Atlanta by railroad, or they can be sent by boat directly to this place from Darien.

I shall be able to get forage, bread, and meat from southeastern Georgia. The railroad from Atlanta to Dalton or Cleveland cannot be repaired in three months. I have arranged to send an officer at once, via Eufaula, to General Canby, with a copy of your despatch. General Cobb will also notify General Taylor of the armistice. I have about three thousand (3,000) prisoners of war, including Generals Cobb, Smith, McCall, Mercer, and Robertson. Can you arrange with General Johnston for their immediate release? Please answer at once. I shall start a staff officer to you to-morrow.

J. H. WILSON,
Brevet Major General, Commanding.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF TENNESSEE,
April 21, 1865—9:30 a. m.

Lieutenant General HAMPTON:

Transmit to General Sherman the following despatch, dated Macon, Georgia, April 20:

"General G. T. BEAUREGARD:

"On receipt of your despatch of 11 o'clock to-day I sent a flag of truce to General Wilson with a copy of the same, and informing him that I had issued orders to carry out the armistice, desisting from military operations, and requesting an interview to perfect operations. The flag met the advance fourteen miles from the city. Before hearing from it the advance moved on the city; and having moved, my pickets were in the city before I was aware of their approach. An unconditional surrender was demanded, to which I was forced to submit.

under protest. General Wilson has since arrived, and holds the city and garrison as captured, notwithstanding my protest. He informs me he will remain in his present position a reasonable length of time to hear from his despatch to General Sherman, sent to your care.

"HOWELL COBB, Major-General."

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

Official:

H. B. McCLELLAN,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE,
April 22, 1865—2:30 p. m.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN,
Commanding United States Forces, Raleigh, N. C.:

Your telegram to Brevet Major General Wilson is just received. I respectfully suggest that the sentence, "In the mean time it is also agreed that the position of the enemy's forces must not be altered to our prejudice," be so modified as to read, "In the mean time it is also agreed that the position of the forces of neither belligerent shall be altered to the prejudice of the other;" and that on this principle you direct Major General Wilson to withdraw from Macon and release its garrison.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

Official:

H. B. McCLELLAN,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 23, 1865.

GENERAL: Your communication of 2:30 p. m. of yesterday is received. My line of communication with General Wilson is not secure enough for me to confuse him by a change in mere words. Of course the status quo is mutual, but I allow him to apply it to his case, according to his surroundings.

I would not instruct him to undo all done by him between the actual date of our agreement and the time the knowledge reached him; I beg, therefore, to leave him free to apply the rule to his own case; indeed, I have almost exceeded the bounds of prudence in checking him without the means of direct communication, and only did so on my absolute faith in your personal character.

I enclose a despatch to General Wilson, in cipher, which, translated, simply advises him to keep his command well together, and to act according to the best of his ability, doing as little harm to the country as possible, until he knows hostilities are resumed.

I am, with respect,

W. T. SHERMAN.
Major General.

General JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON,
Commanding Confederate Army, Greensboro'.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Cipher.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, April 23, 1865.

General WILSON:

Cipher despatch received. There is a general suspension of hostilities, awaiting the assent of our new President to certain civil points before making a final military convention of peace. Act according to your own good sense until you are certain the war is over. Keep possession of some key point that will secure your present advantages; rest your men and horses, and in a few days you will either receive positive information of peace, or can infer the contrary. My messenger should be back from Washington to-morrow.

W. T. SHERMAN.
Major General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, N. C., April 23, 1865—8 p. m.

General JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON, C. S. A.:

Major Hitchcock reports his arrival at Morehead City with despatches from Washington, and will be here in the morning. Please be in readiness to resume negotiations when the contents of despatches are known.

Very respectfully,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General United States Army.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, April 21, 1865.

GENERAL: The memorandum or basis agreed upon between General Sherman and General Johnston having been submitted to the President, they are disapproved. You will give notice of the disapproval to General Sherman, and direct him to resume hostilities at the earliest moment.

The instructions given to you by the late President, Abraham Lincoln, on the 3d of March, by my telegram of that date addressed to you, express substantially the views of President Andrew Johnson, and will be observed by General Sherman. A copy is herewith appended.

The President desires that you proceed immediately to the headquarters of General Sherman and direct operations against the enemy.

Yours, truly,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Lieutenant General GRANT.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
May 8, 1865.

Official:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Copy of President Lincoln's instructions.

[Cipher.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, March, 3, 1865.

Lieutenant General GRANT:

The President directs me to say to you that he wishes you to have no conference with General Lee, unless it be for the capitulation of General Lee's army, or upon some minor and purely military matter.

He wishes me to say that you are not to decide, discuss, or confer upon any political question; such questions the President holds in his own hands, and will submit them to no military conferences or conventions.

Meantime you are to press to your utmost your military advantages.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
May 8, 1865.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Cipher.—3:30 p. m.]

FORT MONROE, April 22, 1865.

Major General HALLECK, Richmond, Va:

The truce entered into by Sherman will be ended as soon as I can reach Raleigh. Move Sheridan with his cavalry towards Greensboro', North Carolina, as soon as possible. I think it would be well to send one corps of infantry also—the whole under Sheridan. The infantry need not go further than Danville, unless they receive orders hereafter to do so.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 24, 1865—6 a. m.

General JOHNSTON, Commanding Confederate Army, Greensboro':

You will take notice that the truce or suspension of hostilities agreed to between us will cease in forty-eight hours after this is received at your lines, under the first of the articles of our agreement.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Special Field Orders No. 62.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 24, 1865.

The suspension of hostilities proclaimed in Special Field Orders No. 58 will terminate at 12 m on Wednesday, the 26th instant, and hostilities will be made according to the plan laid down in Special Field Orders No. 55, of date April 14, 1865.

By order of Major General W. T. Sherman:

L. M. DAYTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 24, 1865.

General WILSON, Macon:

The truce will expire on the morning of the 26th. You will renew your operations according to your original instructions.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

IN THE FIELD, Greensboro', April 24, 1865.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN, Commanding:

In forwarding the following despatch, I respectfully suggest the propriety of releasing the prisoners taken at Macon, and the withdrawal of General Wilson's troops to some point beyond that at which he received from General Cobb information of the armistice.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, April 24, 1865.

General JOHNSTON, Commanding Confederate Armies:

I have replies from Washington to my communications of April 18. I am instructed to limit my operations to your immediate command, and not to attempt civil negotiations. I therefore demand the surrender of your army on the same terms as were given to General Lee at Appomattox, of April 9, pure and simple.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE,
In the Field, April 25, 1865.

Major General SHERMAN, United States Army:

Your despatch of yesterday received. I propose a modification of the terms you offered: such terms for the army as you wrote on the eighteenth; they also modified according to change of circumstances, and a further armistice to arrange details and meeting for that purpose.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, April 25, 1865.

General JOHNSTON:

I will meet you at the same time and place as before, to-morrow, at 12 o'clock noon.

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

GREENSBORO', April 26, 1865—2 a. m.

Major General SHERMAN, (through General Butler:)

I will meet you at the time and place you designated.

Is armistice, with status quo, renewed?

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

IN THE FIELD, April 26, 1865.

GENERAL: I have had the honor to receive your despatch of yesterday summoning this army to surrender on the terms accepted by General Lee at Appomattox Court House. I propose, instead of such surrender, terms based on those drawn up by you, on the 18th, for disbanding this army, and a further armistice and a conference to arrange these terms.

The disbanding of General Lee's army has afflicted this country with numerous bands having no means of subsistence but robbery, a knowledge of which would, I am sure, induce you to agree to other conditions.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN,
Commanding United States Forces.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

Terms of a military convention entered into this twenty-sixth (26th) day of April, 1865, at Bennett's house, near Durham's Station, North Carolina, between General Joseph E. Johnston, commanding the confederate army, and Major General W. T. Sherman, commanding the United States army, North Carolina.

All acts of war on the part of the troops under General Johnston's command to cease from this date. All arms and public property to be deposited at Greensboro', and delivered to an ordnance officer of the United States army. Rolls of all the officers and men to be made in duplicate; one copy to be retained by the commander of the troops, and the other to be given to an officer to be designated by General Sherman. Each officer and man to give his individual obligation, in writing, not to take up arms against the government of the United States until properly relensed from this obligation.

The side-arms of officers, and their private horses and baggage, to be retained by them. This being done, all the officers and men will be permitted to return to their homes, not to be disturbed by the United States authorities so long as they observe their obligation and the laws in force where they may reside.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.
W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding U. S. Forces in North Carolina.

Approved:

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 26, 1865.

Official:

L. M. DAYTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Military convention of April 26, 1865.—Supplemental terms.

I. The field transportation to be loaned to the troops for their march to their homes, and for subsequent use in their industrial pursuits. Artillery horses may be used in field transportation if necessary.

II. Each brigade or separate body to retain a number of arms equal to one-seventh of its effective total, which, when the troops reach capitals of their States, will be disposed of as the general commanding the department may direct.

III. Private horses and other private property of both officers and men to be retained by them.

IV. The commanding general of the military division of west Mississippi, Major General Canby, will be requested to give transportation, by water, from Mobile or New Orleans, to the troops from Arkansas and Texas.

V. The "obligations" of officers and soldiers to be signed by their immediate commanders.

VI. Naval forces within the limits of General Johnston's command, to be included in the terms of this convention.

J. E. JOHNSTON,
General Commanding C. S. Troops in North Carolina.
J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General Commanding U. S. Forces in North Carolina.

Endorsed:

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

A true copy:

FREDERICK ANDERSON,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 27, 1865.

GENERAL: I herewith enclose you copies of my Field Orders Nos. 65 and 66, which give General Schofield full and ample powers to carry into effect our convention; and I hope at your personal interview with General Schofield you satisfied your mind of his ability and kind disposition towards the inhabitants of North Carolina. In addition to the points made at our interview of yesterday, I have further instructed General Schofield to facilitate what you and I and all good men desire—the return to their homes of the officers and men composing your army—to let you have of his stores ten days' rations for twenty-five thousand men. We have abundance of provisions at Morehead City, and if you send trains here they may go down with our trains, and return to Greensboro' with the rations specified.

Colonel Wright did intend to send his construction train up to-day, but did not get up his carpenters in time. The train, with square timber and carpenters, will go up in the morning; and I think by the morning of the 29th your trains can run down on the road and fall in with ours of the 30th.

I can hardly estimate how many animals fit for farm purposes will be loaned to the farmers; but enough, I hope, to insure a crop.

I can hardly commit myself how far commerce will be free; but I think the cotton still in the country and the crude turpentine will make money with which to procure supplies. General Schofield, in a few days, will be able to arrange such matters. I wish you would send the enclosed parcel for General Wilson, as it contains the Orders 65 and 66, and instructions to release all his prisoners on the conditions of our convention.

Now that war is over, I am as willing to risk my person and reputation, as heretofore, to heal the wounds made by the past war: and I think my feeling is shared by the whole army. I also think a similar feeling actuates the mass of your army; but there are some unthinking young men, who have no sense or experience, that, unless controlled, may embroil their neighbors. If we are forced to deal with them it must be with severity; but I hope they will be managed by the people of the south.

I am, with respect, your obedient servant,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General United States Army.

General JOHNSTON,
Commanding Confederate Armies, &c., Greensboro'.

Official:

T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official copy:

H. CLAY WOOD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Special Field Order No. 65.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 27, 1865.

The general commanding announces a further suspension of hostilities and a final agreement with General Johnston, which terminates the war as to the armies under his command and the country east of the Chattahoochee.

Copies of the terms of convention will be furnished Major Generals Schofield, Gillmore, and Wilson, who are especially charged with the execution of its details in the department of North Carolina, department of the South, and at Macon and in western Georgia.

Captain Myers, ordnance department United States army, is hereby designated to receive the arms, &c., at Greensboro'. Any commanding officer of a post may receive the arms of any detachment, and see that they are properly stored and accounted for.

General Schofield will procure at once the necessary blanks, and supply the other army commanders, that uniformity may prevail; and great care must be taken that all the terms and stipulations on our part be fulfilled with the most scrupulous fidelity, while those imposed on our hitherto enemies be received in a spirit becoming a brave and generous army.

Army commanders may at once loan to the inhabitants such of the captured mules, horses, wagons, and vehicles as can be spared from immediate use; and the commanding generals of armies may issue provisions, animals, or any public supplies that can be spared to relieve present wants, and to encourage the inhabitants to renew their peaceful pursuits, and to restore the relations of friendship among our fellow-citizens and countrymen.

Foraging will forthwith cease; and when necessity or long marches compel the taking of forage, provisions, or any kind of private property, compensation will be made on the spot: or when the disbursing officers are not provided with funds, vouchers will be given in proper form, payable at the nearest military depot.

By order of Major General W. T. Sherman:

L. M. DAYTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Special Field Orders No. 66.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 27, 1865.

Hostilities having ceased, the following changes and dispositions of troops in the field will be made with as little delay as practicable:

I. The 10th and 23d corps will remain in the department of North Carolina, and Major General J. M. Schofield will transfer back to Major General Gillmore, commanding the department of the South, the two brigades formerly belonging to the division of Brevet Major General Grover at Savannah. The third division, cavalry corps, Brevet Major General J. Kilpatrick commanding, is hereby transferred to the department of North Carolina, and General Kilpatrick will report in person to Major General Schofield for orders.

II. The cavalry command of Major General George Stoneman will return to East Tennessee, and that of Brevet Major General J. H. Wilson will be conducted back to the Tennessee river, in the neighborhood of Decatur, Alabama.

III. Major General Howard will conduct the army of the Tennessee to Richmond, Virginia, following roads substantially by Lewisburg, Warrenton, Lawrenceville, and Petersburg, or to the right of that line. Major General Slocum will conduct the army of Georgia to Richmond by roads to the left of the one indicated for General Howard, viz: by Oxford, Boydtown, and Nottoway Court House. These armies will turn in at this point the contents of their ordnance trains, and use the wagons for extra forage and provisions. These columns will be conducted slowly and in the best of order, and will aim to be at Richmond, ready to resume the march, by the middle of May.

IV. The chief quartermaster and commissary of the military division, Generals Easton and Beckwith, after making the proper dispositions of their departments here, will proceed to Richmond and make suitable preparations to receive those columns, and to provide them for the farther journey.

By order of Major General W. T. Sherman:

L. M. DAYTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
In the Field, Raleigh, North Carolina, April 27, 1865.

GENERAL: The negotiations which have been progressing for some days, and which may have led to conflicting orders by you, are now complete. I send you a copy of the convention signed by General Johnston and myself, together with copies of my orders to carry out its terms. You may treat the prisoners in your hands as under the convention, and have all sign an obligation such as is contemplated in it. After you have concluded this business, I want your cavalry about Decatur, where they can be sent according to further developments. I regard the war as over, but it is well to be prudent and cautious, as there is much danger of some of the discharged soldiers of both armies infesting the country as robbers. If you encounter any of these, either punish them with extreme severity, or carry them where the civil authorities of an organized State can try and punish.

I will order so that, if possible, you can get supplies at Savannah or Augusta.

Yours, truly,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

General J. H. WILSON, Commanding Cavalry Corps.

Official:

T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official copy:

H. CLAY WOOD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

General Johnston to Major General Schofield.

APRIL 28, 1865.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN,
Commanding U. S. Forces, (care General R. H. Anderson:)

I have the honor to inform you that yesterday I was informed that the cavalry at Hillsboro' was moving westward, but I immediately communicated, through the commanding officer at Salisbury, an order to the officer commanding a division of cavalry on the Yadkin to intercept those moving from Hillsboro', and all stragglers. In answer to this order I received the reply that three divisions of cavalry were also moving with them. I regret the movement of these troops, fearing it may embarrass me in settling matters in Georgia and South Carolina.

I succeeded in stopping one brigade and a portion of another moving from Hillsboro', but have not those that were yesterday beyond Salisbury.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General,
By ARCHIE ANDERSON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Official copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

General Johnston to Major General Schofield.

APRIL 28, 1865—11:30 a. m.

Major General SCHOFIELD,
United States Army (care Brigadier General R. H. Anderson:)

We are now ready for the printed forms of obligation. Please send them.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

General Johnston to Major General Schofield.

GREENSBORO', N. C., April 29, 1865.

Major General SCHOFIELD:

I said by telegraph yesterday that we were ready for the forms of obligation.

J. E. JOHNSTON, General.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

General Johnston to Major General Schofield.

APRIL 29, 1865.

Major General SCHOFIELD:

I reported by telegraph yesterday that we were ready for the printed forms. I have ordered the arms to be sent to Greensboro', where we have ordnance officers and a sufficient guard. The arms turned in will be as safe under that guard as your own. I hope, therefore, that your troops will not be brought up yet. We are ready for your staff officers. Our troops are a good deal dispersed to procure forage.

J. E. JOHNSTON.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

SUPPLEMENTAL TERMS.

APRIL 26, 1865.

1. The confederate troops to retain their field transportation until they reach the capitals of their respective States, when it will be disposed of as the general commanding the department in which the State is embraced may direct. Artillery horses may be used in field transportation if necessary.

II. Each brigade or separate body to retain a number of arms equal to one-seventh of its effective total, which, when the troops reach capitals of their States, will be disposed of as the general commanding may direct.

III. Private horses, and other private property, of both officers and men, to be retained by them.

IV. The commanding general of the military division of west Mississippi, Major General Canby, will be requested to give transportation by water from Mobile or New Orleans to the troops from Arkansas and Texas.

V. The "obligation" of the officers and soldiers to be signed by their immediate commanders.

VI. Naval forces within the limits of General Johnston's command to be included in the terms of this convention.

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, April 29, 1865.

GENERAL: I have received your communication of yesterday, enclosing supplemental terms to the convention of April 26. I find it is necessary to modify them to some extent, but I hope they will be satisfactory to you.

General Sherman has vested in his several department commanders the power to carry into effect the convention of April 26, within the limits of their departments, respectively, and to dispose of the captured animals and wagons by loans to citizens.

It is not in my power to make the terms proposed, as to the time when the officers and men shall be released from their obligation.

Mobile and New Orleans, and the country west of the Mississippi, are in General Canby's military division. Hence, the most I can do is to ask him to give the transportation you desire for men from Arkansas and Texas.

I enclose a copy of the supplemental terms, as modified. I will send up the printed forms, and officers to execute them, to-morrow. I propose that obligation be written upon the face of roll, and certified by the commanding officer and one of my staff officers, and that each officer and man be furnished with a certificate bearing the same signatures.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General Commanding.

General JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON,
Commanding Confederate Forces, Greensboro', North Carolina.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, April 29, 1865.

General JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON,
Confederate States Army, Greensboro', North Carolina:

The printed forms of obligation are not quite ready. I hope to be able to send them to-morrow.

J. M. SCHOFIELD, Major General.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, April 29, 1865.

When will you be ready to turn over the arms and other public property at Greensboro'? I propose to send up a regiment of infantry with the staff officer to-morrow to guard the property turned over. If this meets with your views please inform me.

I will send up this evening my approval of the supplemental terms with some modification which I deem necessary.

J. M. SCHOFIELD, Major General.

General JOSEPH E. JOHNSTON,
Greensboro, North Carolina.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL, Ass't Adj't General.

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, April 30, 1865.

I will modify the first article of the supplemental terms as you request. It will not be necessary for your detachments to be collected to give their obligations. The certificate of commanding officers will be all the evidence necessary. I believe General Hartsuff understands it so. If not, please show him the despatch.

J. M. SCHOFIELD.

General JOHNSTON, Greensboro'.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, April 30, 1865.

GENERAL: I return herewith the supplemental terms, modified in accordance with your desire. You are right in your recollection of our understanding on the 26th about the field transportation. Indeed, it is better as you propose.

J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General Commanding.

General J. E. JOHNSTON, Greensboro', N. C.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Military convention of April 26, 1865.—Supplemental terms.

I. The field transportation to be loaned to the troops for their march to their homes, and for subsequent use in their industrial pursuits. Artillery horses may be used in field transportation if necessary.

II. Each brigade or separate body to retain a number of arms equal to one-seventh of its effective total, which, when the troops reach the capitals of their States, will be disposed of as the general commanding the department may direct.

III. Private horses and other private property of both officers and men to be retained by them.

IV. The commanding general of the military division of west Mississippi, Major General Canby, will be requested to give transportation by water from Mobile and New Orleans to the troops from Arkansas and Texas.

V. The obligations of officers and soldiers to be signed by their immediate commanders.

VI. Naval forces within the limits of General Johnston's command to be included in the terms of this convention.

J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General Commanding U. S. Forces in North Carolina.
J. E. JOHNSTON,
General Commanding C. S. Forces in North Carolina.

A true copy:

FREDERICK ANDERSON,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

Approved and forwarded:

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

GREENSBORO', NORTH CAROLINA, 1865.

In accordance with the terms of the military convention entered into on the twenty-sixth day of April, between General Joseph E. Johnston, commanding the confederate army, and Major General W. T. Sherman, commanding the United States army in North Carolina, ——— ——— has given his solemn obligation not to take up arms against the government of the United States until properly released from this obligation, and is permitted to return to his home, not to be disturbed by the United States authorities so long as he observes this obligation and obeys the laws in force.

_____,
United States Army, Special Commissioner.

_____,
Confederate States Army, Commanding.

Major General Schofield to General Johnston.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, April 30, 1865.

GENERAL: I have received your letter of the 28th, to Major General Sherman, and will forward it to him by the first mail.

I apprehend that the failure of so large a portion of your troops, especially cavalry, to comply with the terms of the convention, will give us no little trouble, and keep the country in a disturbed condition for a long time, but we must deal with them as best we can.

I would like to see you upon this and other matters, and will run up to Greensboro' in a few days if my official duties here will permit. If not, may I ask you to visit me here?

Your first train has arrived and will go on to Newbern to-night. There may be some delay on account of the large amount of stores taken by the armies north, but they shall not be detained unnecessarily.

I enclose certified copy of the convention of April 26, to replace the one you have lost.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General Commanding.

General J. E. JOHNSTON, Greensboro'.

A true copy:

J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Army of the Ohio, Raleigh, North Carolina, May 12, 1865.

GENERAL: I send you by a special messenger the rolls of General J. E. Johnston's army, surrendered to you by the convention of April 26; also a consolidated return made from the rolls.

The number surrendered and paroled in North Carolina is forty general officers and thirty-six thousand nine hundred and seventy-one subordinate officers and men. This number does not embrace the cavalry which went south under orders from Davis as his escort, and since surrendered to General Wilson in Georgia, nor the men who went home during the suspension of hostilities without waiting for their paroles.

General Johnston found it impossible to deliver all the arms and other public property at Greensboro', and were compelled to receive them wherever the troops chose to throw them down. The staff officers are at work collecting all the property, and I will forward reports as soon as the work is completed.

I also enclose a copy of the "supplemental terms" agreed to by General Johnston and myself, in pursuance of your instructions.

I am, general, very respectfully your obedient servant,

J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General.

Major General W. T. SHERMAN,
Commanding Military Division of the Mississippi, Washington, D. C.

[Endorsement on above.]

Approved and forwarded:

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Army of the Ohio, Raleigh, North Carolina, May 12, 1865.

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that, in obedience to the orders of the major general commanding, I proceeded, on the 30th of April, with three other officers from Major General Schofield's staff, three from Major General Cox's staff, and three from Major General Terry's staff, to the headquarters of General Johnston, at Greensboro', North Carolina, for the purpose of paroling the officers and men of his army in this State. I found his army scattered along the North Carolina railroad, from Hillsboro' to Charlotte, a distance of about one hundred and thirty miles; the main portion of it being at or near Greensboro'. I distributed the officers who were with me to the different points where the troops were stationed, and commenced paroling on the morning of the 1st of May. General Johnston was not willing to have any men paroled but those who were actually present. I have now in my possession the rolls of every company and detachment of men of General Johnston's army who were serving in this State. From these rolls I have made a consolidated report, which I send you herewith.

General Johnston tried faithfully to carry out the terms of agreement between himself and Major General Sherman, but the terribly demoralized condition of his army, resulting from its being hastily disbanded, rendered it exceedingly difficult for him to control it. I think it would have been entirely disorganized but for the anxiety of the men to receive their paroles before going home. As it was, a large number did go home before they were paroled. I think the number that went off with Generals Wheeler and Hampton, and those who went to their homes after cessation of hostilities, together with those who were present, would amount to at least fifty thousand. I do not know the number of arms that were surrendered; I do not think the number will be equal to four-fifths of the arms-bearing men. Many of the men had broken or thrown away their arms. I am satisfied, however, that the number of arms carried away was not greater than was allowed by the terms of agreement.

The entire army, except the posts at Salisbury and Charlotte, was paroled in two days after we arrived at Greensboro', and commenced to march to their homes on the morning of the 3d of May.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM HARTSUFF,
Brevet Brigadier General, and Assistant Inspector General Army of the Ohio.

Lieutenant Colonel J. A. CAMPBELL,
Assistant Adjutant General, Department of North Carolina.

[Endorsements on foregoing.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Army of the Ohio, Raleigh, North Carolina, May 12, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to the Adjutant General of the army, in connection with all the papers in the matter and rolls of the officers and men paroled.

J. M. SCHOFIELD,
Major General.

Approved and forwarded

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSISSIPPI,
Camp near Alexandria, Virginia, May 19, 1865.

GENERAL: I have just received at the hands of Colonel William Wherry, of General Schofield's staff, the enclosed communication, with an abstract of the prisoners of war surrendered and paroled at Greensboro', North Carolina, about the first of May, pursuant to the terms of the capitulation made by General Johnston, near Durham's Station, on the 26th of April. The aggregate number paroled exceeds the number heretofore reported, and amounts to thirty-six thousand seven hundred and ninety-one men.

I am yours, truly

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General.

General JOHN A. RAWLINS,
Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.

[Endorsement on above.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
June 17, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded to the Secretary of War, together with the rolls of officers and men of Johnston's army.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, March 3, 1862.

SIR: You are hereby appointed military Governor of the State of Tennessee, with authority to exercise and perform within the limits of that State all and singular the powers, duties, and functions pertaining to the office of military Governor, (including the power to establish all necessary offices and tribunals, and suspend the writ of habeas corpus,) during the pleasure of the President, or until the loyal inhabitants of that State shall organize a civil government in conformity with the Constitution of the United States.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. ANDREW JOHNSON.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., March 4, 1862.

SIR: Your compensation as military Governor of Tennessee will be at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, that being the rate of compensation for Governor in that State. Your accounts will be settled in this department.

Yours, truly,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., March 4, 1862.

SIR: You are authorized to draw to the amount of $10,000 on the fund to aid in the organization of a home guard, in the hands of the assistant treasurer of the United States at Cincinnati, for the purpose of organizing a home guard of the Union men in Tennessee, loyal to the United States.

Yours, truly,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor, Tennessee.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., May 14, 1863.

SIR: I am directed by the Secretary of War to say that it is seen in the authority given Colonel Stockton, of Michigan, to raise a brigade, that the condition of service in Tennessee is indicated, or at least implied, for these troops. Although it is the intention of the War Department to give them this destination, the enrolment or enlistment should be for the service of the United States unconditionally, and without qualification, expressed or implied, of any character whatever. It will, in his judgment, be exceedingly unwise to make any promises, or hold out any inducements, as the exigencies of the service may prevent their being realized, and this would lead to embarrassments of the gravest character.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. R. S. CANBY,
Brigadier General, and Assistant Adjutant General.

His Excellency A. JOHNSON,
Military Governor, &c., Nashville, Tennessee.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, March 28, 1863.

Ordered, That Brigadier General Andrew Johnson, military Governor of Tennessee, be and he is hereby authorized to raise troops for the United States service, to rendezvous at such place or places in Tennessee as may be designated by him or the Secretary of War: infantry, cavalry, and artillery to be organized according to the rules and regulations of the service: the numbers to be ten regiments of infantry, ten of cavalry, and ten batteries of artillery.

Second. Governor Johnson will nominate the officers, who will be commissioned by the department. They will be mustered into the service of the United States by Governor Johnson. The troops will be enlisted for the term of three years or during the war.

Third. Quartermasters and commissaries will issue supplies to the troops so raised upon the requisition of General Johnson, and whenever required by him.

Fourth. That Governor Johnson be also authorized to raise and muster into the service of the United States such force as he may deem adequate, not exceeding one brigade, for the purpose of a Governor's guard, which force shall be under his exclusive orders, and not to be withdrawn from his service, or otherwise employed, without his consent.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Governor JOHNSON.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, April 2, 1863.

GOVERNOR: Under your authority and commission as military Governor, you are authorized, in your discretion, to exercise, among others, the following powers:

First. To impose taxes for the support of the poor, for police purposes, and purposes of his government generally.

Second. To impose exactions upon all disloyal persons for the support of the wives and children of those who may have been expelled from the country, or who may be in the rebel service.

Third. To impose exactions upon all who have contributed to the rebel service by money, by property, or by the use of their slaves, the amount of exaction to be determined by the discretion of the Governor, or by a board whom he may appoint for that purpose.

Fourth. The power also to extend to the taking possession of property, and collecting rents for property, or hire of slaves owned by persons who are within the rebel lines.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. WATSON,
Assistant Secretary of War.

Brigadier General A. JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, April 18, 1863.

GENERAL: You will establish your headquarters as military Governor of the State of Tennessee at the city of Nashville, and as such officer will take possession of all the public buildings belonging to the State of Tennessee, and hold them in your charge and under your control for the public purposes for which they were designed or in which you may have occasion to employ them.

Second. You will appropriate such of the buildings to the civil officers, executive, legislative, and judicial, as may be required for the performance of their respective functions, employing such force of military or civil police as you may deem necessary for the security and proper care of such buildings, and all other public property in the city of Nashville.

Third. All the public commons and public property in the city of Nashville, and elsewhere in the State, will be in your charge as military Governor, and, so far as possible, you will exercise control over them, your authority and jurisdiction over all such public property being as exclusive and absolute as was exercised by the State of Tennessee, subject only to such military occupation and use as may, in the course of the war be authorized and directed by the general commanding the department.

Fourth. You will also take possession of and occupy all vacant and abandoned buildings and property within the city of Nashville, possessed or owned by persons engaged in the rebellion, and may apply them to such uses as you may deem proper. You will exercise also the same powers throughout the State of Tennessee.

Fifth. You will also take possession of all abandoned lands and plantations that may come within your power, and lease them for occupation and cultivation upon such terms as you may deem proper, keeping an account of the products and registering the name of the former proprietor, and the person and terms upon which they are leased, reporting the same to this department.

Sixth. You will take in charge all abandoned slaves or colored persons who have been held in bondage, and whose masters have been or are now engaged in rebellion, and may provide for their useful employment and subsistence in such manner as may be best adapted to their necessities and the circumstances in which you find them, having reference to the provisions of the acts of Congress relating to this class of persons, and being governed by their provisions.

Seventh. You will cause all such persons to be enrolled upon a descriptive roll, setting forth their names, their sex, their age, with any other remarks that may be useful in defining their capacity for usefulness, or as descriptive of their persons, and transmit a copy of them to this department. Such of them as are able-bodied, and can be usefully employed upon the fortifications or other public works, you will so employ, securing and causing to be paid to them reasonable wages for their labor.

Eighth. You will also take measures to secure employment and reasonable compensation for the labor of all others, of whatever age or sex, making, from time to time, report to this department. Such as may be sick or helpless, from age or infirmity, you will have provided with suitable hospital care and attendance.

Ninth. You will also furnish, from the quartermaster and commissary stores, such clothing and subsistence as may be necessary for the decent clothing and support of those who are poor or destitute, keeping a distinct account of all such appropriations.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Brigadier General ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, October 21, 1863.

GENTLEMEN: You are authorized to appoint any persons whom you may deem suitable for raising, organizing, and commanding colored troops in the State of Tennessee, whether such persons have passed examination of the board or not, and, upon your designating such persons to the proper bureau at Washington, proper commissions will be made out. This exception to the general order on this subject is deemed essential to the service in your locality.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Brigadier General ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee.
Major STEARNS,
Superintendent of Raising, Organizing, and Commanding Colored Troops.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, January 20, 1864.

GOVERNOR: Conflicts between the orders of General Grant and your orders under the telegram of the Secretary of War, dated October 8, 1863, in respect to arms and ammunition at the ordnance department in Nashville, having arisen, which tend to embarrass the service and to perplex the officers in charge of ordnance stores, it has become necessary to revoke the telegraphic order.

You will therefore please to make your requisitions upon the ordnance department here, and the necessary instructions will be given to fill them as promptly as supplies can be obtained.

In making requisitions for ordnance supplies, let them be signed by the proper officers of the company, battalion, or regiment for which they may be designed, and approved by yourself.

In any pressing emergency you can make requisition by telegraph.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, March 3, 1865.

SIR: This department has accepted your resignation as brigadier general and military Governor of Tennessee. Permit me, on this occasion, to render to you the thanks of this department for your patriotic and able services during the eventful period through which you have exercised the high trusts committed to your charge.

In one of the darkest hours of the great struggle for national existence against rebellious foes, the government called you from the Senate, and from the comparatively safe and easy duties of civil life, to place you in the front of the enemy, and in a position of personal toil and danger perhaps more hazardous than was encountered by any other citizen or military officer of the United States.

With patriotic promptness you assumed the post, and maintained it under circumstances of unparalleled trials, until recent events have brought safety and deliverance to your State, and to the integrity of that Constitutional Union for which you so long and so gallantly perilled all that is dear to man on earth.

That you may be spared to enjoy the new honors, and perform the high duties to which you have been called by the people of the United States, is the sincere wish of one who, in every official and personal relation, has found you worthy of the confidence of the government, and the honor and esteem of your fellow-citizens.

Your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
Vice-President elect.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, March 8, 1865.

SIR: Your resignation has been accepted by the President of the United States, to take effect the 3d day of March, 1865.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. CHALFIN,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Brigadier General ANDREW JOHNSON,
United States Volunteers, Vice-President.

WAR DEPARTMENT, May 19, 1862.

SIR: You are hereby appointed military Governor of the State of North Carolina, with authority to exercise and perform, within the limits of that State, all and singular the powers, duties, and functions pertaining to the office of military Governor, (including the power to establish all necessary offices and tribunals, and suspend the writ of habeas corpus,) during the pleasure of the President, or until the loyal inhabitants of that State shall organize a civil government in conformity with the Constitution of the United States.

[SEAL.] EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. EDWARD STANLEY, Washington, D. C.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., May 20, 1862.

SIR: The commission you have received expresses on its face the nature and extent of the duties and powers devolved on you by the appointment of military Governor of North Carolina.

Instructions have been given to Major General Burnside to aid you in the performance of your duty and the exercise of your authority. He has also been instructed to detail an adequate military force for the special purpose of a Governor's guard, and to act under your directions.

It is obvious to you that the great purpose of your appointment is to re-establish the authority of the federal government in the State of North Carolina, and to provide the means of maintaining peace and security to the loyal inhabitants of that State until they shall be able to establish a civil government. Upon your wisdom and energetic action much will depend in accomplishing that result. It is not deemed necessary to give any specific instruction, but rather to confide in your sound discretion to adopt such measures as circumstances may demand. Specific instructions will be given when requested. You may rely upon the perfect confidence and full support of the department in the performance of your duties.

With respect, I am, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. EDWARD STANLEY,
Military Governor of North Carolina.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., May 20, 1862.

GENERAL: I have the pleasure of presenting to you the honorable Edward Stanley, who has been appointed military Governor of the State of North Carolina.

The nature and extent of Governor Stanley's authority and jurisdiction are expressed in his commission, which will be exhibited to you. Between him and yourself the President expects cordial co-operation for the restoration of the authority of the federal government. The province of Governor Stanley is to re-establish and maintain, under military form, the functions of civil government until the loyal inhabitants of North Carolina shall be able to assert their constitutional rights and privileges. In order to maintain peace and enforce respect, the Governor must be supported by a sufficient military force, to be detailed by you from your command, and report to him and act under his direction. You will please detail such force as may be adequate for this purpose, to be designated as a Governor's guard, and to be commanded by a competent officer. You will also at all times, upon the Governor's requisition, support his authority and enforce his orders by a military force competent for the occasion.

The well-known patriotism and discretion for which the Governor and yourself are distinguished render it superfluous to give any further general instructions. The President expects from your harmonious and intelligent action the most favorable results.

With great respect, I am, yours, &c.,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Major General BURNSIDE,
Commanding, &c., &c.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, July 24, 1862.

SIR: The Secretary of War directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 20th instant, asking a leave of absence for a few weeks to enable you to attend to some important matters of business and to converse with him upon the future regulation of your official conduct in the department of North Carolina, and, in reply, to say that your request for leave is granted, and that he will be pleased to see and to consult with you.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. P. WOLCOTT,
Assistant Secretary of War.

Hon. EDWARD STANLEY,
Military Governor, Newbern, N. C.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., September 29, 1862.

GOVERNOR: You will receive herewith the instructions of the department on the points submitted by you, and also an authority to raise volunteers. Any further instructions you may require will be furnished when applied for. I avail myself of this opportunity to express my satisfaction with your administration, and to assure you of the cordial confidence and co-operation of the department.

Yours, truly,

EDWIN M. STANTON.
Secretary of War.

His Excellency EDWARD STANLEY,
Military Governor of North Carolina.

WAR DEPARTMEENT,
Washington, D. C., September 29, 1862.

Ordered, That the military Governor of North Carolina be, and he is hereby, authorized to enlist independent volunteer companies of loyal citizens to serve within the State or their respective counties and districts during the present rebellion, who shall be organized, officered, armed, equipped, and paid (while in actual service) and subsisted as other volunteers. The uniforms, equipments, arms, and ammunition to be procured by requisition upon the military commandant of the department, and the companies when in service to be under command of the military commandant, and called into actual service by him. The officers to be commissioned by the military Governor, and supplies furnished by the military commandant on requisition as aforesaid.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., September 29, 1862.

Ordered, That the military Governors appointed by the War Department for States and Territories shall be uniformed, and rank as brigadier generals in the United States service.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Memorandum of information requested from the Secretary of War, by Edward Stanley, military Governor of North Carolina.

WASHINGTON CITY, September 29, 1862.

EDWARD STANLEY, Military Governor of North Carolina:

1. It is desirable, in order to be able to pay loyal people for property destroyed and taken for public use, to establish some tribunal to audit claims. How many shall constitute said board?

A. Not more than three.

What shall it be called?

A. Assessors of damages sustained by the war.

What salary to be paid to each?

A. Three dollars per day.

What compensation to the clerk?

A. The same; not to exceed it.

Out of what fund, or how paid?

A. Trust to appropriation by Congress.

2. If military Governor appoints a sheriff or chief of police, how shall he be paid?

A. Out of contingent fund.

3. When Governor has a private secretary, what salary allowed, and how paid?

A. Out of contingent fund; about same as salary of private secretary to Governor at Raleigh.

4. Is it desired to have elections for members of Congress, and when, or at discretion of the military Governor?

A. See Secretary of State.

5. Are military Governors allowed travelling expenses?

A. Yes; a just allowance; same as allowed by military regulations.

6. Can military Governor allow salt, cotton, bagging, bale rope, &c., to be brought to North Carolina ports for loyal people?

A. No; not without special permit of Secretary of Treasury.

7. Can military Governor negotiate for exchange of political prisoners?

A. Yes.

8. How far are courts and functions of civil magistrates suspended by military law?

A. Not at all, unless they interfere with military affairs.

9. When can compensation be allowed to superintendents of the poor, and out of what fund paid?

A. Out of contingent fund: reasonable compensation according to service.

10. Can military Governor authorize loyal individuals to use steamboats, private property, in trading in the waters of North Carolina, and to carry arms for defence against rebels, subject to military regulation, as proposed by Mr. McCann?

A. Not until further orders.

11. Can military Governor hire out negroes within our lines, when not required for building forts, and other such military purposes, to loyal men, who will become responsible for their good treatment, feeding and clothing them, and paying reasonable wages to the negroes?

A. Better be in the hands of commissioner or superintendent of the poor, who shall see that the stipulations of the contract are fulfilled, and wages paid to the laborers.

12. What allowance is made for military Governors for subsistence, forage, and quarters, &c., according to what regulation, and for servants, horses, &c.?

A. The same as allowed by law for brigadier generals.

13. What voucher must be kept for disbursing secret service money?

A. Nothing more than an ordinary receipt.

14. The superintendents of the poor have (some of them) public money in their hands, State bank notes and United States treasury notes, arising from sales of provisions to persons not willing to take food gratuitously; to what officer ought this money to be paid?

A. Received by military Governor, and credited to contingent fund.

15. Cannot directions be given that one of the smaller steamboats in North Carolina be placed under orders of military Governor for visiting his department?

A. By requisition on the military commandant, as occasion requires.

16. Is it not advisable that military Governors should have some seal?
A. Better procure a seal with United States arms—pay expenses out of contingent fund; military Governor, department of North Carolina, on seal in the legend.
17. Can military Governors establish tribunals for trying civil and criminal cases?
A. Better to be left to regular tribunals.
18. Can property, real or personal, be transferred from rebels to loyal citizens?
A. Refer to act of July, 1861.
19. Can military Governor have authority to enlist and arm, under advice of general commanding, loyal citizens, to defend their own homes against guerillas, with a promise that they shall not be called from their own counties?
A. Under a special authority it can be done.
By order of the Secretary of War:

C. P. BUCKINGHAM,
Brigadier General and Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, December 15, 1862.

SIR: The Secretary of War instructs me to say that he has received your letters of the 6th and 9th instant, advising him that you had heretofore frequently granted permits to merchants from New York and Boston to bring vessels laden with goods from Beaufort to Newbern, via Hatteras inlet, and also to loyal owners of lighters to trade in the navigable waters of your department, under certain specified conditions—that recently your power to grant permits of this nature has been questioned by Rear-Admiral Lee, commanding the North Carolina blockading squadron, and desiring to be informed by the department of the course you ought to pursue in the matter.

Under the like direction, I have now the honor to inform you that, with the exception of Beaufort, all the ports and navigable waters of the State of North Carolina remain subject to the blockade; that to avoid the embarrassing questions which would, otherwise, constantly arise with foreign nations as to its validity, it has been found absolutely necessary to interdict all traffic with such ports, or on such waters; and that this rule applies to all blockaded ports and navigable waters. The rule must, of course, be universal in its operation, and the application of it to your department must be decisive against your authority to grant any permission or license to trade between the ports or on the navigable waters of North Carolina.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

C. P. WOLCOTT,
Assistant Secretary of War.

Hon. EDWARD STANLEY,
Military Governor, &c., Newbern, North Carolina.

NEWBERN, N. C., January 15, 1863.

SIR: I respectfully request that you will hand the enclosed to the President, and do me the favor to inform me at an early day when I can be relieved without inconvenience to the public service.

I have the honor to be, &c.,

EDW. STANLEY,
Military Governor.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

NEWBERN, NORTH CAROLINA, January 15, 1863.

SIR: I most respectfully tender my resignation of the office of military Governor of North Carolina.

The reasons influencing me to do so I will briefly assign:

My earnest attachment to the people of my native State led me to lay aside, without hesitation, all considerations of personal interest, and leave my distant home to try whether any efforts of mine could induce them to separate from the wicked men whose counsels had involved them in the horrors of war, and to return to the allegiance of that government whose paternal care had conferred upon them unnumbered blessings. I believed that their deep devotion to the Union could not be easily eradicated.

I assured them in public addresses and in conversation that the administration, in its military movements, was only trying to restore the Union, and to secure to them all the rights and privileges they had enjoyed under the Constitution of the United States.

I need not say that, since the appearance of the proclamation of the first instant, I can no longer give such assurance.

My objections to that proclamation are such as you have probably heard too frequently to allow me to repeat them.

It is enough to say I fear it will do infinite mischief. It crushes all hope of making peace by any conciliatory measures. It will fill the hearts of Union men with despair, and strengthen the hands of the detestable traitors whose mad ambition has spread desolation and sorrow over our country.

To the negroes themselves it will bring the most direful calamities.

I have endeavored to act with deliberation, and every hour's reflection strengthens the opinion that I cannot with propriety continue to occupy my present position.

It being impossible for me to sustain the proclamation, it is proper that you should be informed of it—self-respect demands that you should be

Though I have not accomplished what I desired, I believe I have achieved as much as any one could have done under the circumstances.

That I have offended some is probable; but they were those whose schemes of plunder I defeated—whose oppressions of the innocent and helpless I resisted—whose purposes seemed to have been to join or follow the troops, and to encourage and participate in the most shameless pillaging and robbery that ever disgraced an army in any civilized land.

I am not aware of having omitted to have done anything that I ought to have done to attain success. You will be gratified to know that I have done something to alleviate the suffering of, and to prevent wrong to, many patriotic and oppressed people.

In the absence of all civil tribunals, the position I occupy is of great importance to all citizens. The two generals commanding this department since I have been here, have always been accessible—always patient in listening, and as ready to aid in protecting the helpless as they have been to risk their lives on the field of battle. But the management of the army demands all their time. Men in the humble walks of life will bear severe ills, unredressed, for fear of intruding upon them. It will, therefore, give me pleasure to remain until my successor can be appointed, and as long as my presence here can aid him by my experience or otherwise.

I beg to assure you that, though I quit this scene—dear to me from a thousand hallowed recollections—with regret that my labors have been unsuccessful, and with a heart full of the most mournful apprehensions for the future, I entertain a most grateful sense of the confidence and support you have given me. Though I cannot approve of the measures you adopt, I know your motives are good and your purposes patriotic.

I hope the God of our fathers will sustain you when right, and save you from further error: that you may live to see peace restored, and long enjoy the honor and love of that great country for whose welfare you have sincerely labored.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servant,

EDW. STANLEY,
Military Governor

His Excellency ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
President of the United States.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., March 4, 1863.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 15 to the Secretary of War, together with the tender of your resignation addressed to the President.

The President has accepted your resignation as military Governor of North Carolina, to take effect March 1, 1863.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. THOMAS,
Adjutant General.

Hon. EDWARD STANLEY,
Military Governor of North Carolina, Newbern, N. C.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, June 3, 1862.

SIR: You are hereby appointed military Governor of the State of Louisiana, with authority to exercise and perform, within the limits of that State, all and singular the powers, duties, and functions pertaining to the office of military Governor, (including the power to establish all necessary offices and tribunals, and suspend the writ of habeas corpus,) during the pleasure of the President, or until the loyal inhabitants of that State shall organize a civil government in conformity with the Constitution of the United States.

By the President:
[SEAL.]

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. GEORGE F. SHEPLEY.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., June 3, 1862.

SIR: The commission you have received expresses on its face the nature and extent of the duties and power devolved on you by the appointment of military Governor of Louisiana.

Instructions have been given to Major General Butler to aid you in the performance of your duty and the exercise of your authority. He has also been instructed to detail an adequate military force for the special purpose of a Governor's guard.

It is obvious to you that the great purpose of your appointment is to re-establish the authority of the federal government in the State of Louisiana, and to provide the means of maintaining peace and security to the loyal inhabitants of that State until they shall be able to establish a civil government. Upon your wisdom and energetic action much will depend in accomplishing that result. It is not deemed necessary to give any specific instructions, but rather to confide in your sound discretion to adopt such measures as circumstances may demand. Specific instructions will be given when requested. You may rely upon the perfect confidence and full support of the department in the performance of your duties.

With respect, I am your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. GEORGE F. SHEPLEY,
Military Governor of Louisiana.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., June 3, 1862.

SIR: This department has appointed Colonel George F. Shepley military Governor of the State of Louisiana. His jurisdiction will include the city of New Orleans. While exerting the military power to overcome the rebellion, the department desires to avoid any encroachments upon international rights, and would be glad to be favored with any suggestions which the State Department may think proper to be incorporated into the instructions to Governor Shepley.

Your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, June 16, 1865.

SIR: Your resignation has been accepted by the President of the United States, to take effect the 30th day of June, 1865.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. CHALFIN,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Brigadier General G. F. SHEPLEY,
United States Volunteers, Portland, Maine.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., July 19, 1862

SIR: The commission you have received expresses on its face the nature and extent of the duties and power devolved on you by the appointment of military Governor of Arkansas.

Instructions have been given to Major General Butler to aid you in the performance of your duty and the exercise of your authority. He has also been instructed to detail an adequate military force for the special purpose of a Governor's guard, and to act under your directions.

It is obvious to you that the great purpose of your appointment is to re-establish the authority of the federal government in the State of Arkansas, and to provide the means of maintaining peace and security to the loyal inhabitants of that State, until they shall be able to establish a civil government. Upon your wisdom and energetic action much will depend in accomplishing that result. It is not deemed necessary to give any specific instructions, but rather to confide in your sound discretion to adopt such measures as circumstances may demand. Specific instructions will be given when requested. You may rely upon the perfect confidence and full support of the department in the performance of your duties.

With respect, I am your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. JOHN S. PHELPS,
Military Governor of Arkansas.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, July 17, 1863.

GENERAL: By telegraph despatch of the 9th instant I am informed that by General Order No. 211 the office of military Governor of Arkansas is abolished. I have not yet received the order, but have ceased to act officially, and desire to be informed what disposition I shall make of the records and papers relating to that office, and which are in my possession in this city; also what disposition I shall make of money in my hands belonging to the government.

I presume these questions will be answered when the order shall reach me, but I do not wish to remain longer here than to be relieved of the public effects in my hands, and that at as early a date as practicable.

I am, with respect, your obedient servant,

JOHN S. PHELPS,
Late Military Governor of Arkansas.

General L. THOMAS,
Adjutant General United States Army.

Order abolishing Military Governorship of Arkansas.

[General Orders No. 211.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, July 9, 1863.

Ordered, That the appointment of John S. Phelps, as military Governor of the State of Arkansas, and of Amos F. Eno, as secretary, be revoked, and the office of military Governor in said State is abolished, and that all authority, appointments, and powers heretofore granted to and exercised by them, or either of them, as military Governor or secretary, or by any person or persons appointed by or acting under them, is hereby revoked and annulled.

By order of the President:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, July 9, 1863.

Hon. JOHN S. PHELPS, St. Louis, Missouri:

[General Orders No. 211.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
July 9, 1863.

Ordered, That the appointment of John S. Phelps, as military Governor of the State of Arkansas, and of Amos F. Eno, as secretary, be revoked, and the office of military Governor in said State is abolished, and that all authority, appointments, and power heretofore granted to and exercised by them, or either of them, as military Governor or secretary, or by any person or persons appointed by or acting under them, is hereby revoked and annulled.

By order of the President:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., November 14, 1862.

Ordered, That Brigadier General Hamilton be, and he is hereby, assigned to special duty as military Governor of Texas under the orders and directions of this department, and relieved from other duties until further orders.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., November 14, 1862.

SIR: The commission you have received expresses on its face the nature and extent of the duties and powers devolved on you by the appointment of military Governor of Texas.

Instructions have been given to Major General Banks to aid you in the performance of your duty and the exercise of your authority. He has also been instructed to detail an adequate military force for the special purpose of a Governor's guard, and to act under your directions.

It is obvious to you that the great purpose of your appointment is to re-establish the authority of the federal government in the State of Texas, and to provide the means of maintaining peace and security to the loyal inhabitants of that State until they shall be able to establish a civil government. Upon your wisdom and energetic action much will depend in accomplishing that result. It is not deemed necessary to give any specific instructions, but rather to confide in your sound discretion to adopt such measures as circumstances may demand. Specific instructions will be given when requested. You may rely upon the perfect confidence and full support of the department in the performance of your duties.

With respect, I am your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Brigadier General HAMILTON,
Military Governor of Texas.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., November 14, 1862.

GENERAL: I have the pleasure of presenting to you Brigadier General Hamilton, who has been appointed military Governor of Texas, with orders to report to and be subject to your direction.

The nature and extent of Governor Hamilton's authority and jurisdiction are expressed in his commission, which will be exhibited to you. Between him and yourself the President expects cordial co-operation for the restoration of the authority of the federal government. The province of Governor Hamilton is to re-establish and maintain, under military form, the functions of civil government until the loyal inhabitants of Texas shall be able to assert their constitutional rights and privileges. In order to maintain peace and enforce respect, the Governor must be supported by a sufficient military force, to be detailed by you from your command, and report to him and act under his direction.

You will please detail such force as may be adequate for this purpose, to be designated as a Governor's guard, and to be commanded by a competent officer. You will also, at all times, upon the Governor's requisition, support his authority and enforce his orders by a military force competent for the occasion

The well-known patriotism and discretion for which the Governor and yourself are distinguished render it superfluous to give any further general instructions. The President expects from your harmonious and intelligent action the most favorable results.

With great respect, I am yours, &c.,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Major General BANKS, Commanding, &c.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, D. C., November 14, 1862.

Ordered, That Brigadier General Hamilton, military Governor of Texas, be, and he is hereby, authorized to raise and muster into the service of the United States two regiments of Texas volunteers, to be organized according to the rules and regulations of the service, and when raised to be under his command, unless otherwise directed by the military commander or by this department.

General Hamilton is also authorized to appoint and commission, provisionally, the line and staff officers for said regiments, making report of his proceedings to this department.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, February 18, 1863.

Ordered, That Brigadier General Hamilton be, and he is hereby, authorized to raise and enlist into the military service of the United States five regiments of volunteers, to serve in the State of Texas for the term of three years or during the war. This authority is subject to condition—

1st. That the written consent of the Governors of the respective States in which the enlistment is to be made shall be procured by General Hamilton, and filed with the Adjutant General in the War Department before any enlistment is made.

2d. That the regiments be filled up to the regulation standard within three weeks from this date.

3d. The regiments shall be organized according to the rules and regulations of the infantry service, and shall be commissioned by the President.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

[Endorsement on the above.]

Received 22d February, 1863, at half past 9 o'clock p. m.
A. J. HAMILTON, Brigadier General.

The time for raising the forces, according to the within order, is extended to the 27th day of March next.

A. LINCOLN.

FEBRUARY 27, 1863.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington June 21, 1865.

SIR: Your resignation has been accepted by the President of the United States, to take effect the 19th day of June, 1865.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. CHALFIN,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Brigadier General A. J. HAMILTON,
United States Volunteers, Present.

OFFICE OF CHIEF ENGINEER U. S. MILITARY RAILROADS,
Washington, D. C., April 24, 1866.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following extract from my final report, showing the amount and cost of work done for construction and maintenance of way on the several military railroads in what was the military division of the Mississippi.

This report only embraces the operations on these roads subsequent to the time they were placed in your charge. There are no means at my command of ascertaining the amount of work done, or the cost of it, previous to that time.

The railroads included in this report are the Nashville and Chattanooga, Shelbyville branch, McMinnville and Manchester, Nashville and Decatur, Mt. Pleasant branch, Memphis and Charleston, (eastern division,) Chattanooga and Knoxville, Cleveland and Dalton branch, Nashville and Northwestern, Chattanooga and Atlanta, Rome branch, Atlanta and Macon, Nashville and Clarksville, Knoxville and Bristol, Rogersville branch, Memphis and Charleston, (western division,) Mississippi Central, Mobile and Ohio, Louisville City.

The cost of materials used and labor performed on buildings is not included in the following statements of cost. All other materials not specified are included in the cost of labor.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. W. WRIGHT,
Chief Engineer United States Military Railroads.

General D. C. MCCALLUM,
Director and General Manager U. S. Military Railroads.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
May 31, 1867.

Official copy from the records of the Quartermaster General's office.

BENJ. C. CARD,
Brevet Brigadier General, Assistant Quartermaster.

On the 19th of December, 1863, I received your order to accompany you "to Chattanooga, Tennessee, with such portion of the construction force as could be spared from the front" in Virginia. One division of the construction corps, numbering about 285 men, was taken, and we arrived in the military division of the Mississippi on the 1st of January, 1864.

At the time of our arrival the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad (151 miles long, extending from Nashville to Chattanooga) was being operated between Nashville and Bridgeport, and the Tennessee river and Running Water bridges were building. Our construction force was at once put to work between Bridgeport and Chattanooga—the bridge-builders to assist in the completion of the Running Water and other bridges, and the track-layers to repair the track and relay the portion that had been destroyed.

This work was completed, and the first train run into Chattanooga on the 14th of January, some three weeks sooner than was deemed possible previous to our taking charge of the work. There was great rejoicing in the army in Chattanooga at the completion of the railroad, and feeling confident that a sufficiency of supplies could now be obtained, the chief commissary of the department of the Cumberland issued full rations to the whole army on and after that day, the first time this had been done since the occupation of the town.

Although this road was now completed, it was not in condition to sustain the heavy traffic that would necessarily be thrown upon it when General Sherman's whole army would have to be supplied over it.

The superstructure was old and much worn, and had never been of first-class character. The rail used was light, and of the U pattern, and laid on longitudinal stringers, which were so much decayed in many places that they would not hold the spikes. Accordingly, orders were given to relay the track over the whole road with the T rail, in the best manner. For this work, and that to be done on the other lines which were to be opened up, a large additional force was required, and arrangements were at once made for an abundant supply of men.

The work of relaying the track was prosecuted steadily until completion, though necessarily at a great disadvantage, in consequence of the large number of trains constantly on the road.

When turned over to the company the road was in every respect in excellent condition.

The following statement embraces the whole construction work done on this line, with the exception of some small pieces of track rebuilt, which had been destroyed by guerillas, and of which no account was kept:

TRACK.

	Miles.
Rebuilt in first instance	115
Rebuilt after Wheeler's raid, in 1864	7
Rebuilt after Hood's invasion	7¾
Total main track	129¾

SIDE TRACKS.

Location.	Feet.	Location.	Feet.
Nashville	38,628	Tunnel	264
Barracks	1,600	Tantallon	1,500
Glenn Cliff Station	2,368	Condit	2,000
Antioch	990	Anderson	354
Lavergne	895	Stevenson	1,673
Smyrna	2,260	Bolivar	1,640
Stone river	1,660	Bridgeport	9,472
Winsteed	2,408	Carpenter's	1,037
Christiana	1,500	Alley's Spur	150
Fosterville	775	Whiteside	850
Normandy	929	Hooker	350
Tullahoma	609	Chattanooga	10,072
Estelle Springs	1,582
Decherd	13,732	Total	100,277
Cowan	970

RECAPITULATION.

	Miles.
Main track	129¾
Side track, 100,277 feet, or	19
Total track laid by government	148¾

BRIDGES.

No.	Location.	Height.	Length.	Remarks.
		Feet.	Feet.
1	Mill creek, No. 1	16	260	Rebuilt five times.
2	Mill creek, No. 2	18	250	Rebuilt four times.
3	Mill creek, No. 3	16	256	Rebuilt four times.
4	Hurricane	.....	.....
5	Smyrna	20	120	Rebuilt three times.
6	Stewart's creek	29	183	Do. do.
7	Overal's	20	160	Do. do.
8	Stone river	22	420	Do. do.
9	Lytle's creek	10	135	Do. do.
10	Murfreesboro'	9	140	Not destroyed.
	Do	6	40
	Do	6	50
	Creek branch	7	50
11	Stone river, (east fork)	22	270	Rebuilt.
12	Christiana	.....	73	Do.
13	Bell Buckle	7	82	Do.
	Bragg's bridge	9	128	Not destroyed.
14	Wartrace	14	241	Rebuilt.
15	Garrison's fork	24	178	Rebuilt twice.
16	Duck river	30	350	Do.
17	Poor-house creek	13	100	Do.
18	Elk river	60	470	Rebuilt.
19	Cowan creek	26	160	Do.
20	Crow creek, (south fork)	17	160	Rebuilt twice.
21	Dry trestle, No. 1	12	84	Rebuilt.
22	Dry trestle, No. 2	10	75	Do.
23	Crow creek, No. 1	15	225	Not destroyed.
24	Crow creek, No. 2	11	225	Do.
25	Crow creek, No. 3	19	348	Rebuilt.
26	Crow creek, No. 4	16	254	Do.
27	Crow creek, No. 5	11	160	Do.
28	Crow creek, No. 6	8	100	Not destroyed.
29	Crow creek, No. 7	12	155	Rebuilt.
30	Crow creek, No. 8	18	143	Do.
31	Crow creek, No. 9	11	234	Not destroyed.
32	Crow creek, No. 10	21	240	Rebuilt.
33	Crow creek, No. 11	.....	226	Do.
34	Tennessee river	.....	1,520
35	Ben's creek	10	100
36	Widow's creek	24	127	Rebuilt.
37	Dry creek, No. 1	22	140
38	Nickajack	34	200	Rebuilt twice.
39	Dry creek, No. 2	34	203	Rebuilt.
40	Dry Trestle	16	301
41	Running Water	120	789
42	Lookout creek	36	155	Rebuilt twice.
43	Chattanooga	38	263	Rebuilt.
	Total	.....	10,543	= 1 mile 5,263 feet.

Add to this amount rebuilt 12,236 feet, and we have a total length of bridging on this line of ..... 4 miles 1,659 feet.
Deduct bridges not destroyed ..... 1,052 "

Total built by government ..... 4 " 607 "

A portion of this bridging was built by contract. The total cost of contract work was $385,216 71.

Water stations were built at—

Nashville	5 tanks.	Fosterville	2 tanks.
Florence	1 "	Garrison's fork	2 "
Christiana	2 "	Decherd	2 "
Bell Buckle	2 "	Tantallon	2 "
Normandy	3 "	Stevenson	2 "
Cowan	2 "	Chattanooga	2 "
Anderson	4 "
Poison Hollow	1 "	Total	35 "
Antioch	1 "
Murfreesboro'	2 "

The following tabular statement shows the cost of labor performed on this road for construction and maintenance of way, and the number of men in the construction corps employed each month:

Months.	Construction corps.		Transportation department.	Total.
	No. of men.	Am't of pay-rolls.	Am't of pay-rolls.
1864.
January	887	$31,130 16		$31,130 16
February	450	35,183 92	$53,270 73	88,454 65
March	338	26,784 45	51,970 14	78,754 59
April	264	16,324 18	83,233 97	99,558 15
May	144	13,132 81	88,977 16	102,109 97
June	181	12,271 36	99,046 30	111,317 66
July	202	13,856 63	91,534 53	105,391 16
August	157	10,098 73	103,278 39	113,377 12
September	392	7,589 55	112,042 78	119,632 33
October	64	3,891 00	106,443 78	110,334 78
November	56	3,513 78	99,183 54	102,697 32
December	622	21,290 81	114,568 49	135,859 30
1865.
January	50	2,688 00	110,944 35	113,632 35
February	57	4,389 00	144,909 61	149,298 61
March	97	6,072 50	165,423 61	171,496 11
April	111	7,332 00	154,675 61	162,007 61
May	107	7,748 75	117,329 30	125,078 05
June	63	4,937 75	68,401 58	73,339 33
July	51	2,548 25	61,340 14	63,888 39
August	.....	.....	67,937 67	67,937 67
September	.....	.....	21,258 31	21,258 31
Total	4,293	230,783 63	1,915,769 99	2,146,553 62
Monthly average	226	12,146 50	95,788 49	102,216 84

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.

11,900 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$1,428,000 00
595,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	47,600 00
892,500 pounds spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	75,862 50
392,557 cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	196,278 50
		$1,747,741 00
Labor.
Exclusive of that done on buildings	1,946,553 62
Contract work.
On bridges	385,216 71
		2,331,770 33
Total		4,079,511 33

The Nashville and Chattanooga railroad was relinquished as a military road and turned over to the company September 15, 1865.

THE NASHVILLE AND DECATUR RAILROAD

Extends from Nashville to the Memphis and Charleston railroad at a point near Decatur, Alabama, and is 120 miles long. The repairs were completed and the road opened in March, 1864. Much of the work, in opening it the first time, was done by soldiers, and I have no account of the cost of what they did. General Dodge was in command of the force employed on this work.

The following statements show the amount of work and the cost of that done by the military railroad department:

TRACK.

Main track rebuilt in first instance	2
Do ..... after Forrest's raid	7¼
Do ..... after Wheeler's raids	22
Total main track	31¼

SIDINGS.

Location.	Feet.
Eaton Depot	1,000
Nashville Junction	8,025
Brentwood	300
Franklin	290
Columbia	1,150
Prospect	600
Athens	1,480
Decatur Junction	1,770
Total	14,015	= 2 miles 3,455 feet.
Add main track rebuilt	.....	31 miles 2,640 feet.
Total track	.....	34 miles 815 feet.

BRIDGES.

No.	Location.	Height.	Length.	Remarks.	Rebuilt.
		Feet.	Feet.		Feet.
1	Brown's creek	12	38	Not destroyed
2	Little Harpeth	14	74
3	Spencer's creek	17	38
4	Big Harpeth	38	187	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt twice.	454
5	West Harpeth	13	58
6	Near Spring Hill	12	53
7	Spring creek	15	21
8	Carter's creek, No. 1	18	112	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt twice.	236
9	Carter's creek, No. 2	21	184	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt twice.	470
10	Carter's creek, No. 3	20	94	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt twice.	235
11	Carter's creek, No. 4	20	94	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt once.	228
12	Carter's creek, No. 5	30	235	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt twice.	587
13	Rutherford's creek, No. 1	26	130	Rebuilt three times and partly rebuilt twice.	455
14	Rutherford's creek, No. 2	27	265	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt three times.	723
15	Rutherford's creek, No. 3	30	295	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt three times.	811

Bridges—Continued.

No.	Location.	Height.	Length.	Remarks.	Rebuilt.
16	Rutherford's creek, No. 4.	50	270	Rebuilt twice and partly rebuilt twice.	676
17	Duck river	72	627	Rebuilt twice	1,254
18	Lydle's creek	14	22
19	Hurricane creek	14	22
20	Harris trestle	29	232
21	Kalioki trestle	37	1,130	Rebuilt	1,130
22	Grace's trestle	42	637	Rebuilt	637
23	Robinson's forks	18	126	Rebuilt	126
24	Richland creek, No. 1	32	160	Rebuilt twice	320
25	Richland creek, No. 2	37	180	Rebuilt twice	360
26	Richland creek, No. 3	35	180	Rebuilt twice	360
27	Pigeon Roost creek	12	50	Rebuilt	50
28	Richland creek, No. 4	41	315	Rebuilt twice	630
29	Tunnel trestle	38	822	Rebuilt	822
30	Elk river	40	625	Rebuilt three times	1,875
31		10	48
32	Mill creek	30	330	Rebuilt	330
33	White Sulphur	71	570	Rebuilt	570
34	Mud creek	5	62	Rebuilt	62
35	do	9	102	Rebuilt	102
36	Athens creek	10	134	Rebuilt	134
37	do	11	64	Rebuilt	64
38	Swan creek	11	340	Rebuilt	340
39	do	11	129	Rebuilt	129
40	Black creek	6	225	Rebuilt	225
41	Junction trestle	16	275	Rebuilt	275
	Total		9,555	or 1 mile 4,275 ft. Total	14,720
	Add to this amount rebuilt			14,720 ft.
	And we have a total bridging by gov't of			4 miles 3,155 ft.

A portion of this bridging was built by contract; the cost of which amounted to $637,768 46.

Water stations were built at—

	Tanks.		Tanks.
Little Harpeth	1	Lynnville	2
West Harpeth	1	Near Tunnel	1
Lytle's creek	2	McDonals	1
Pulaski	1
Elkmont	2	Total	15
Franklin	2
Carter's creek	2

The following tabular statement shows the cost of labor on this road for construction and maintenance of way, and number of men in the construction corps employed each month:

Month.	Construction corps.		Transportation department.	Total.
	No. of men.	Amount of pay-rolls.	Amount of pay-rolls.
1864.
			$5,641 75	$5,641 75
February	.....	.....	10,631 99	10,631 99
March	.....	.....	15,405 07	15,405 07
April	.....	.....	18,299 10	18,299 10
May	.....	.....	16,209 39	16,209 39
June	.....	.....	18,828 20	18,828 20
July	.....	.....	26,574 16	26,574 16
August	.....	.....	23,357 52	23,357 52
September	.....	.....	27,043 23	27,043 23
October	.....	.....	.....	.....
November	564	$5,850 71	21,149 85	27,000 56
December	1,208	32,238 82	125,291 87	157,530 69
1865.
January	1,320	78,187 23	32,058 73	110,245 96
February	601	27,616 95	26,518 82	54,135 77
March	309	19,686 45	29,034 54	48,720 99
April	75	6,891 25	28,243 64	35,134 89
May	150	6,574 50	26,760 82	33,335 32
June	.....	.....	22,506 06	22,506 06
July	.....	.....	17,382 13	17,382 13
August	.....	.....	20,983 98	20,983 98
September	.....	.....	3,869 15	3,869 15
Total	4,227	177,045 91	515,850 00	692,835 91
Monthly average	604	25,290 27	25,762 50	34,641 79

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.

2,732 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$327,840 00
136,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	10,880 00
204,000 pounds spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	17,340 00
120,840 cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	60,420 00
		$416,480 00
Labor	692,835 91
Contract work on bridges	549,326 13
		1,242,162 04
Total		1,658,642 04

The Nashville and Decatur railroad was relinquished as a military railroad and turned over to the company September 15, 1865.

THE MEMPHIS AND CHARLESTON RAILROAD

Extends from Memphis, Tennessee, to Stevenson, Alabama, and is 271 miles long. The eastern end of this line, from Stevenson to near Decatur, 80 miles long, was repaired and put in running order in March, 1864.

The following statements show the amount of work done on it by this department, and the cost of the same:

TRACK.

Main track		3 miles 2,600 feet.
Sidings at Decatur Junction	275 feet.
Fackler's	700 feet.
Stevenson	2,900 feet.
Chattanooga	1,800 feet.
	5,675 feet = 1 mile 395 feet.
Total		4 miles 2,995 feet.

BRIDGES.

Location.	Height.	Length.	Remarks.	Rebuilt.
	Feet.	Feet.		Feet.
Little Piney	15	109	Rebuilt	109
Big Piney	12	153	Rebuilt	153
Big Limestone	10	210	Rebuilt	210
Little Limestone	13	72	Rebuilt	72
Beaver Dam	22	252	Not destroyed
Bradford's creek	26	32	Not destroyed
Indian creek	17	154	Rebuilt	154
Flint river	25	302	Rebuilt twice	604
Hurricane creek	12	271	Rebuilt	271
Paint Rock	38	313	Rebuilt twice	626
Mud creek	14	315	Rebuilt	315
Crow creek	20	265	Rebuilt	265
Total		2 448	Total	2,779
Deduct amount not destroyed		284
		2,164
Add amount rebuilt		2,779
Total		4,943	feet bridging built by govern't.

A portion of this bridging was built by contract, and cost $88,442 33.

Water stations were built at—

Little Piney	1 tank.	Brownsboro'	1 tank.
Huntsville	2 "	Near Woodville	1 "
Gurley's	2 "	Stevenson	4 "
Scottsboro'	1 "
Indian creek	1 "		13

The following statement shows the cost of labor for construction and maintenance of way:

Month.	Am't of pay-rolls.	Month.	Am't of pay-rolls.
1864.		1865.
February	$2,333 85	January	$16,029 36
March	1,834 38	February	13,259 40
April	7,263 68	March	14,517 26
May	9,523 28	April	14,121 81
June	11,184 42	May	13,880 40
July	9,418 08	June	11,253 02
August	13,287 07	July	8,691 05
September	13,178 75	August	10,491 98
October	13,521 60	September	7,738 41
November	10,574 97
December	14,205 41	Total	216,308 18
		Monthly average	10,815 40

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.

360 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$43,200 00
18,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	1,440 00
27,000 pounds spikes, at 7¼ cents per pound	2,295 00
57,500 tons cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	28,750 00
		$75,685 00
Labor	216,308 18
Contract work on bridges	88,442 33
		304,750 51
Total		380,435 51

This portion of the Memphis and Charleston railroad was relinquished as a military railroad and turned over to the company September 1, 1865.

THE CHATTANOOGA AND KNOXVILLE OR EAST TENNESSEE AND GEORGIA RAILROAD

Extends from Chattanooga to Knoxville, 110 miles, with a branch from Cleveland to Dalton 27 miles long Repairs were commenced on this road in January, 1864, and it was completed to the Tennessee river, at Loudon, on the 13th of February following. The portion of the road north of the Tennessee river had not been injured, and was being operated with the rolling stock captured by the Union forces at Knoxville.

A trestle bridge over the Tennessee river was immediately commenced, and the work upon it had progressed so far that it would have been completed on the 14th of March, but on the 25th of February General Schofield, commanding the department of the Ohio, ordered the work to be stopped, and it was not resumed until March 12.

The trestle bridge was completed on the 13th of April, and trains commenced running through between Chattanooga and Knoxville.

TRACK.

The track of this road had been broken and injured in a number of places, but none of the breaks were of great extent. The longest one was that next to Chattanooga, being about three miles long. The cross-ties, however, over the whole road were very much decayed, and much work was done in replacing them with new ones after trains commenced running.

The road was occasionally broken by guerillas, but never seriously injured until Wheeler's raid in August, 1864, when about twenty-five miles of track was torn up and destroyed.

Main track laid in first instance	5½	miles.
after several small raids	1	"
after Wheeler's raid in 1864	25	"
on Dalton branch in first instance	2	"
after Hood's invasion	1½	"
Total	35	"

SIDINGS.

Location.	Length.	Location.	Length.
	Feet.		Feet.
Chattanooga	1,155	Lenoir's	1,050
Stone Quarry	550	Saw-mill	420
Tunnel	250	Erin	850
Tyner's	787	Knoxville	4,760
Oaltawah	445	Wesley of Y	920
McDonald's	2,455
Cleveland	310	Total sidings	17,832	= 3 miles 1,992 feet.
Mouse creek	1,470	Add main track		35 miles.
Regan's	740
Sweetwater	220	Total length of track	laid	38 miles 1,992 feet.
Philadelphia	1,450

BRIDGES.

The only important bridges on this line are those over the Hiwassee and Tennessee rivers. Both of these were built of trestles in the first place, but afterwards replaced with permanent structures.

The following are the dimensions of these bridges:

Hiwassee, 47 feet high, 3 spans, total length in feet, (rebuilt)	301
Tennessee, 85 feet high, 11 spans, total length in feet, (rebuilt)	1,700
Total	2,001
Add amount rebuilt	2,001
Total feet of bridging built by government	4,002

The permanent bridges were built by contract, and cost $161,990 26.

Water stations were built at—

Chattanooga	2 tanks.	Riceville	3 tanks.
Oaltawah	2 "	Sweetwater	2 "
Tunnel	1 "	Total	10 "

The following tabular statement shows the cost of labor on this road for construction and maintenance of way, and the number of men in the construction corps employed each month:

Month.	Construction corps.		Transportation department	Total.
	No. of men.	Amount of pay-rolls.	Amount of pay-rolls.
1864.
February	1,222	$83,437 54		$83,437 54
March	919	64,094 18		64,094 18
April	1,127	62,224 60	$3,404 86	65,629 46
May	202	4,135 60	6,908 19	11,043 79
June	244	3,995 79	8,537 04	12,532 83
July			11,677 03	11,677 03
August			11,321 66	11,321 66
September	724	44,592 24	13,518 25	58,110 49
October			15,228 04	15,228 04
November			12,858 42	12,858 42
December			908 14	908 14
1865.
January			17,680 76	17,680 76
February			20,224 04	20,224 04
March			27,131 03	27,131 03
April			30,229 93	30,229 93
May			26,344 91	26,344 91
June			15,776 80	15,776 80
July			13,938 45	13,938 45
August			8,386 95	8,386 95
Total	4,438	262,479 95	244,074 50	506,554 45
Monthly average	740	43,746 65	14,357 32	26,660 76

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.

3,080 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$369,600 00
152,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	12,160 00
223,000 pounds spikes, at 8¼ cents per pound	18,240 00
284,061 cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	142,030 50
		$542,030 50
Labor		506,554 45
Contract work on bridges		161,990 26
Total		1,210,575 21

The Chattanooga and Knoxville railroad was relinquished as a military road, and turned over to the company August 28, 1865.

THE NASHVILLE AND NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD

Is 78 miles long, and extends from Nashville to the Tennessee river at Johnsonville. It was partly built before the war.

On the 22d of October, 1863, the Secretary of War ordered this road to be constructed for military purposes, and placed it in charge of Andrew Johnson, then military Governor of Tennessee, who was empowered to employ an engineer and other officers and workmen necessary to complete it without delay.

Colonel W. P. Innes was acting as engineer at the time the railroads in this military division were taken charge of by the United States military railroad department, and had considerable force of soldiers and civilian laborers employed on the road. But as the work was not progressing to the satisfaction of the general commanding he relieved Colonel Innes and placed the construction of the road in your charge.

This order of General Grant was given on the 17th of February, 1864, and on the 25th of the same month I received your order directing me to adopt the most energetic means at my command to complete the Nashville and Northwestern railroad.

I at once made an examination of the work to be done, and found it to consist of a rather formidable amount of grading, bridging, track-laying, and other work incident to the construction of a new railroad, and proceeded to take the necessary steps to complete the work as directed.

I appointed Lieutenant Colonel John Clark engineer of construction, and by General Grant's direction sent North for two thousand mechanics and laborers in addition to the force then on the road. Some time after we had got fairly under way, Governor Johnson, claiming the right under the above-mentioned order of the Secretary of War to appoint an engineer, also selected Colonel Clark, who then filled this double position until the work of construction was so far completed that the track was connected through, an event which took place on the 10th of May, 1864.

Governor Johnson continued to exercise some control over the operations on this road until it was formally taken possession of by General Sherman and placed absolutely under the control of the general manager of military railroads, in accordance with the order of the President of the United States, dated August 6, 1864.

The transportation department then took charge of the movements of trains, and the maintenance of way, together with construction work, remained in my department.

On the 20th of August I appointed W. R. Kinsley, esq., (who had been connected with the road as division engineer since April) engineer in charge of construction and maintenance of way. He continued to perform the duties of this position faithfully and satisfactorily until the 1st of April, 1865, when all construction work being done, the maintenance of way was turned over to the transportation department.

The line of this road as originally located crossed the Tennessee river nearly perpendicular to the course of that stream, and at an elevation of 52 feet above low water and 9 feet above high water.

The approach to the river was an embankment 17 feet high above the surface of the ground on the river bank.

The design of making this a military railroad being the transportation of army supplies from the Tennessee river to Nashville, it became necessary to construct ample and convenient arrangements for the transfer of freight from steamboats to the cars.

Accordingly two large transfer freight houses were designed and built, one on each side of the railroad, with tracks starting from main line at the bluff and curving right and left until parallel with the buildings and river bank. The freight house or shed on the North or lower side, 600 feet long by 30 feet wide, was hastily knocked up so as to bring it into immediate use, and the levee in front graded off to the water's edge with a slope of 9°, or about 16 feet rise in 100 feet horizontal. The freight house on south side, 600 feet long and 90 feet wide, was a much more complete building. The floor was 2½ feet above high-water mark, and the levee in front was graded to a slope of 14°, on which it was designed to lay railroad tracks from low-water mark to floor of freight house.

The plan for transferring freight from steamboats to cars was to load from the boats on to small cars, which were hauled up the levee to the level of the freight house floor by a wire rope passing round a pully or spool, which was dropped into or lifted out of gear with the main shaft by a lever. This main shaft was 500 feet long, and passed through the centre of the building immediately below the floor or platform, and was operated by an engine located in the middle of the building. The freight was then passed directly through the building and loaded into cars on the opposite side. The levee was of sufficient length to allow at least four or five boats to unload at the same time, and the side tracks were so arranged that a whole train of cars could be loaded at once, and as soon as loaded could be moved away, and another train run right alongside the house. This plan would undoubtedly have enabled us to handle a large amount of freight with great rapidity and ease, but we had not the opportunity of bringing it to a practical test; for just as everything was about completed, Hood's invasion of Tennessee took place, and Johnsonville was evacuated by our troops, and during their absence the freight house was burned, as it is supposed, by rebel sympathizers in the neighborhood. However, the engines and all the most valuable parts of the machinery were saved by being taken to Nashville. All could have been saved if we had had sufficient transportation for it.

Although the road was opened through to Johnsonville after Hood's defeat at Nashville, but little was done in rebuilding the houses and platforms at that point.

Grading off the levee involved considerable work; about 30,000 cubic yards of earth had to be moved.

It was designed to pave it or put on a covering of broken stone, but owing to the delay in furnishing gunboat protection to our boats which were to bring stone down the river for this purpose, the work was but partially carried out.

A row of piles was to have been driven at the edge of the water to protect the levee, and prevent its washing away at time of floods, but the pile-driver for this purpose never reached Johnsonville.

It is but proper for me to state here that the work on the buildings and levee at Johnsonville was much delayed by the confusion and embarrassment caused by the conflict of authority incident to a divided control of the work.

In the first place, I was ordered to erect these buildings; then Colonel Donaldson, senior and supervising quartermaster, department of the Cumberland, assumed the charge of them, and appointed a quartermaster to superintend their erection. But under his management the work progressed so slowly that finally the quartermaster was relieved, and again I was ordered to complete it. Had I been allowed to go on in the first place, and carry out my plans, the works would all have been completed and in use three months before the evacuation of the place, instead of being not quite completed at that time.

The following is a statement of the work done on this road.

GRADUATION.

The amount of grading was very considerable, but I am unable to give the number of cubic yards moved, because when we took charge of this road I had no time to measure it, and I had no assistants to do it for me. By the time I procured the requisite assistance much of the work had been done.

Thorough cuts of as much as 40 or 50 feet in depth and 800 feet in length were taken out, and high and long embankments made. Even where the grading had been done previously much labor was required to dress up the embankments and clean out cuts.

SUPERSTRUCTURE.

The total length of track laid was: on Main line	46½ miles.
Sidings	4½ miles.
Total	50¾ miles.

Seven different patterns of rails were used in the track. The amount of each kind is given below. With the exception of No. 1 and the "U" rail, the iron was purchased by the government. No. 1 pattern is the fish-joint bar belonging to this road, and the "U" rail was taken from the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad.

Pattern.	Weight per pound.	Tons.
No. 1	56½ pounds	1,315.61
No. 2	49⅜ pounds	149.70
No. 3	45 pounds	382.11
No. 4	45 pounds	40.04
No. 5	60 pounds	1,096.84
No. 6	56½	1,469.48
"U"	48 pounds	23.50
Total		4,477.28
Deduct No. 1 pattern		1,315.61
Balance furnished by government		3,161.67

107,000 cross-ties were used in laying the track. A considerable number was found on the line of this road, but we had to make the greater part.

BRIDGING.

The following table shows the location, dimensions, and the amount of bridges and trestles on this road. Many of these structures had to be rebuilt several times in consequence of being carried away by high water or destroyed by the enemy:

Tabular statement of bridges or trestles on the Nashville and Northwestern railroad.

Distance from Nashville.	Name.	No. of spans or bents.	Height in feet.	Length in feet.	Remarks.
Miles.	Nashville trestle	170	21 to 28	2,151
4.51	Richland creek, No. 1	2	15	76	Rebuilt once.
5.36	Richland creek, No. 2	1	9	66	Rebuilt twice.
5.75	Richland creek, No. 3	1	9	65	Rebuilt twice.
6.53	Branch of Richland creek	2	10	35
6.72	do	1	8	17
	do	1	8	26
7.52	Over road	1	10	32
8.91	Trestle over road	6	20	75	Rebuilt five times.
13.39	Harpeth river, No. 1	2	34	87	Rebuilt five times.
13.94	Harpeth river, No. 2	2	36	205.5	Rebuilt four times.
15.31	Harpeth river, No. 3	1	42	180	Rebuilt four times.
17.43	Harpeth river, No. 4	2	38	201.4	Rebuilt four times.
21.21	Harpeth river, No. 5	1	32	236.9	Rebuilt four times.
23.14	Harpeth river, No. 6	12	24	180
	do do	2	24	201.8	Rebuilt once.
23.56	Harpeth river, No. 7	10	24 to 30	180
	do do	2	33	203.3	Rebuilt once.
24.66	Turnbull river	43	12	516
	do	2	27	259
	do	20	20 to 25	270
25.37	Trestle	66	20 to 32	792
25.66	Sullivan's branch	3	16	39	Rebuilt twice.
	do	1	48	87.7
	do	102	20 to 46	1,326
26.44	Trestle	17	36 to 26	306
27.18	do	21	38 to 24	262

Tabular statement of bridges or trestles on the Nashville and Northwestern railroad—Continued.

Distance from Nashville.	Name.	No. of spans or bents.	Height in feet.	Length in feet.	Remarks.
40.95	Trestle	18	17 to 28	238
41.71	do	17	14 to 25	225
47.53	do	75	20 to 33	1,067
49.49	do	30	19	442
52	do	58	7 to 13	837
52.38	do	8	18	145
53	do	37	13 to 12	470
53.44	do	2	10	40
54.19	do	62	30 to 48	910
55.79	do	70	40 to 72	980
56.18	do	11	30 to 39	180
	Branch of Trace creek	1	7	24
60.05	do	2	8	47
63.56	Trace creek	2	14	216	Slightly injured & rep'd
64.01		1	10	20
64.61	Flood creek	2	3	30
66.51	do	3	4	35
71.44		22	18	272
73.08	Trace creek	1	25	114	Rebuilt four times.
74.44	Trestle	3	15	66
78	Trestle at Johnsonville	121	12 to 18	1,525
	Total lineal feet bridging			15,956	or 3 miles and 114 feet.

Add to this amount rebuilt 5,366 feet, and we have a total of 4 miles and 200 feet of bridging and trestle on this road built by the government.

The lumber consumed in these structures amounted to 4,098,409 feet, board measure.

A portion of this bridging was built by contract, amounting to $182,789 11.

WATER STATIONS.

Fourteen of these were built and located, as shown in the following table, containing in the aggregate 63,700 feet lumber, board measure:

Distance from Nashville.	Capacity.	Remarks.
7¼ miles	One tank
16¼ miles	do	Discontinued.
17¼ miles	do	Destroyed and rebuilt.
21½ miles	do	Destroyed.
27½ miles	do
28 miles	do
45 miles	do
53¼ miles	Two tanks
59¼ miles	One tank	Destroyed.
66¼ miles	do	Destroyed.
71½ miles	do
75¼ miles	do	Destroyed and rebuilt.
77½ miles	do	Destroyed and rebuilt.
78 miles	Two tanks	Destroyed and rebuilt.

Saw-mill No. 1, at Johnsonville, was run by our department during the months of September, October, and November, 1864, and during that time cut 488,000 feet, board measure, of lumber.

COST, (WORK DONE BY SOLDIERS.)

The twelfth regiment United States colored infantry, commanded by Colonel Thompson, commenced work on November 15, 1863, and were relieved April 23, 1864. Average number of men employed during this time, 200.

The thirteenth regiment United States colored infantry, commanded by Colonel John A. Hottenstine, commenced work on November 19, 1863, and were relieved May 10, 1864. Average number of men employed, 500.

The first Missouri engineers, commanded by Colonel Henry Fladd, commenced work on February 24, 1863, and were relieved August 1, 1864. Average number of men employed, 1,000.

The first Michigan engineers, commanded by Colonel William P. Innes, were employed on the road for some time, but I was unable to get a statement of the number of effective men, or the length of time they worked.

All this work done by soldiers, together with all done by civilian laborers, up to September 1, 1864, is properly chargeable to construction of new road.

The following tabular statements of cost of labor performed and materials purchased previous to the time the road was placed entirely under the control of the military railroad department have been furnished by A. W. Wills, assistant quartermaster, from the papers of F. H. Ruger, assistant quartermaster, who was quartermaster for the road, but is since deceased:

Statement of purchases made by Captain Ruger.

Month.	Amount.	Month.	Amount.
1864.		1864.
January	$4,598 83	June	$15,853 34
February	9,678 64	July	16,880 07
March	27,351 46	August	39,532 19
April	15,848 43
May	24,138 05	Total	153,881 51

Statement of amount paid for labor by Captain Ruger.

Month.	Amount.	Month.	Amount.
1863.		1864.
November	$10,576 67	May	$57,789 61
December	11,440 70	June	52,561 02
1864.		July	43,629 59
January	15,428 90	August	54,214 45
February	16,244 19
March	35,849 54	Total	358,104 17
April	60,369 50

The following statement is furnished by Lieutenant Colonel O. Cross, deputy quartermaster general, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania:

Statement of materials purchased by Lieutenant Colonel O. Cross, deputy quartermaster general United States army, for the Nashville and Northwestern railroad.

6,720,510 pounds iron rails, at $91 50 per ton	$274,520 71
143,250 pounds spikes, at 6 cents per pound	8,595 00
75,000 pounds spikes, at 7¼ cents per pound	5,625 00
227,615 pounds chairs, at 6 cents per pound	13,656 90
Total	302,397 61

The lumber purchased by Colonel Cross is omitted, because it was used on buildings.

Tabular statement of pay-rolls on the Nashville and Northwestern railroad paid by the United States military railroad department.

Month.	No. of men.	Am't of pay-rolls.
1864.
September	1,195	$73,248 15
October	1,228	58,010 68
November	989	50,456 84
December	821	48,339 90
1865.
January	723	44,474 99
February	700	98,176 65
March	567	39,231 13
April	444	31,704 94
May	405	20,194 23
June	311	11,813 95
July	317	12,105 85
August	302	12,423 25
September	10	545 00
Total	8,012	440,725 56

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.
Purchases made by Captain Ruger	$153,881 51
Iron rails, chairs, and spikes purchased by Lieutenant Colonel Cross	302,397 61
Spikes other than above, 100,000 pounds, at 8½ cents	8,500 00
Cross-ties, 50,000, at 50 cents	25,000 00
		$489,779 12
Labor.
Amount paid by Captain Ruger	358,104 17
Amount paid by United States military railroad department	440,725 56
		798,829 73
Contract work.
On bridges		182,789 11
		1,471,397 96

In the above no estimate is made for the value of work done by soldiers.

I have been informed that an amount of iron belonging to this company was used on other military railroads prior to 1864, but have made no deduction for the same, as I have no means of giving full and accurate information of operations previous to that time.

The Nashville and Northwestern railroad was relinquished as a military road and turned over to the company September 1, 1865.

THE CHATTANOOGA AND ATLANTA OR WESTERN AND ATLANTIC RAILROAD

Extends from Chattanooga to Atlanta, 138 miles, with a branch from Kingston to Rome, 17 miles long.

The reconstruction and maintenance of this line was in many respects the most difficult and interesting of any military railroad during the war. By it the confederate army under General Johnston made its retreat from Buzzard Roost to Atlanta, and upon its rapid and prompt reconstruction General Sherman's army depended for the supplies necessary for his successful movement upon Atlanta.

As Johnston fell back from one strong position to another he did such damage to the road as it was supposed would delay or prevent Sherman's pursuit, but in no instance was he successful in this object.

However great the damage done, it was so speedily repaired that General Sherman soon ceased to fear any delay from this cause, and made his advance movements with perfect confidence that the railroad in his rear would be all right.

Being necessarily entirely ignorant of the obstacles to be encountered at each advance, the construction force had to be prepared for any emergency, whether to build a formidable bridge or lay miles of track, or not unfrequently push back to some point on the line and repair damages done by guerillas or raiding parties. These attacks on the line to the rear were of such frequent occurrence, and often of so serious a character, that, to insure speedy repairs, it became necessary to station detachments of the construction corps at various points along the road, and also to collect a supply of construction material at points where it would be safe and easy of access when it should be wanted. These precautionary measures proved of the utmost importance in keeping the road open.

By order of General Thomas the work of reconstruction commenced on the 1st of March, 1864, and the road to Ringgold and a short distance beyond was completed on the 20th of the same month.

The advance movement of the army from Ringgold took place on 6th of May, and the railroad was completed, and trains run to Tunnel Hill early on the morning of the 9th. Fears being entertained by some that the tunnel had been mined by the enemy, a locomotive was run through to test the matter, but it was found to be all safe.

The enemy having fallen back to Resaca, the road was opened up on the 15th to Tilton, while the battle was still in progress a few miles beyond that station, and next day the construction trains ran into Resaca, with the advance of the army.

The railroad bridge over the Oostanaula river was still burning on our arrival here, and the work of rebuilding delayed somewhat in consequence. However, the work got fairly started the next morning, and the bridge was completed, and other necessary repairs made to the track, and the trains pushed forward and overtook the army on the morning of the 20th at Kingston. Beyond this point the track was immediately put in order to Cass Station, but no farther until the army again reached the railroad south of Allatoona Pass.

I received General Sherman's order to build Etowah bridge on the 3d of June, at Chattanooga; but, owing to the delay in getting the construction trains over the road, did not reach the Etowah river until the night of the 5th, and then with only one division of the bridge builders. The other division ordered to this work did not arrive until twenty-four hours afterwards. The bridge was commenced on the morning of the 6th, and finished at noon on the 11th. There was an abundance of timber prepared on the line of the railroad for this work, but the trains sent to bring it up were detained so long for running orders that we could not wait for it, and a large amount had to be cut near the site of the bridge and dragged by hand to the work.

Notwithstanding these delays, this bridge, 600 feet long and 67 feet high, was built in six and a half (6½) days. As soon as it was completed trains ran to Big Shanty, which was made the depot of supplies until after the capture of Kenesaw mountain.

On the 3d of July I received General Sherman's order to open the railroad to Marietta. The construction trains were detained some time at Tunnel Hill by a small rebel raid on the road near Buzzard Roost, but reached Big Shanty on the morning of the 5th, and commenced work at once. The road was opened on the 6th to Vining's Station, which is only ten miles from Atlanta.

We commenced work on the Chattahoochee bridge, by order of General Thomas, on the 23d of July, but next day received orders to stop the work, which was accordingly done at noon on the 24th. Orders were received on the 2d of August to resume work, which was done at noon of that day, and the bridge was finished and trains passed over it at noon on the 5th, and ran within three miles of Atlanta. The Chattahoochee bridge is 780 feet long and 92 feet high, and was built in precisely four and one-half (4½) days. No night work was done upon it whatever, but the men worked from daylight till dark, with one hour intermission at noon for dinner.

A division of the construction corps was held at Chattahoochee until Atlanta was won, and they then completed the railroad into the city on the 3d of September, the day after General Slocum took possession of it.

TRACK.

By the original location the Atlanta line crossed the Knoxville line twice within a few miles of Chattanooga. Both roads having been destroyed in the vicinity of that place, it was deemed unnecessary to rebuild both entire, and as the Knoxville road was the shorter and better line it was rebuilt, and the Atlanta line was connected with it near the crossing of the Chickamauga creek, some five miles from Chattanooga, thus shortening the distance to Atlanta about two miles. Two connections were made, the first being merely for use.

The track between the junction and Tunnel Hill had been badly damaged, and much of it required relaying. Besides a small number of breaks at other points, some two miles near Marietta had been taken up and the rails removed. A similar break, but not of such extent, was found near Vining's Station.

Guerillas and raiding parties were more or less successful in destroying portions of the track during the whole time we held this road; but the crowning effort of this kind was made in October, 1864, when Hood, getting to Sherman's rear, threw his whole army on to the road at different points, and tore up and destroyed in the aggregate 35¼ miles of track and 455 lineal feet of bridges. Fortunately the construction corps was so distributed that even before Hood had left the road two strong working parties were at work at each end of the break at Big Shanty, and this gap was closed and the force ready to move to the great break between Resaca and Tunnel Hill as soon as the enemy had left it.

This break was 25 miles long, but here, again, we were able to put at once a large force to work on each end. Although the iron for the northern end had nearly all to be brought from Nashville, and that for the southern end taken up and brought from the roads south of Atlanta, and all the cross-ties had to be cut, and many of them, for want of teams, carried to the road, still this 25 miles of track was laid, and the trains were running over it, in 7½ days from the time the work was fairly commenced.

Main track laid in opening the road	18¾	miles.
Main track laid after various small raids	10	"
Main track laid after Hood's raid	35½	"
Main track laid in 1865 by General Thomas' order	66½	"
Total main track laid	130¾

SIDINGS.

Location.	Length.	Location.	Length.
	Feet.		Feet.
Chattanooga	15,940	Ackworth	1,900
Chickamauga	1,200	Big Shanty	1,305
Graysville	1,420	Marietta	3,450
Ringgold	2,000	Ruff's	1,040
Dalton	4,550	Vining's	1,540
Steadman	1,360	Chattahoochee	1,250
Tilton	700	Atlanta	15,670
Summit	1,255
Etowah	300	Total	56,270
Sherman	1,490		=10¾ miles.

Main track	130¾	miles.
Sidings	10¾	"
Total track laid	141½

BRIDGES.

Name.	Height.	No. of spans.	Length.	Remarks.	Rebuilt.
	Feet.		Feet.		Feet.
Chickamauga, No. 1	37	2	201	Rebuilt twice	402
Chickamauga, No. 2	16	1	80	Rebuilt twice	160
Chickamauga, No. 3	28	2	221	Rebuilt twice	442
Chickamauga, No. 4	22	2	223	Rebuilt twice	446
Chickamauga, No. 5	16	1	42	.....	.....
Chickamauga, No. 6	19	1	27	.....	.....
Chickamauga, No. 7	18	2	256	Rebuilt twice	512
Chickamauga, No. 8	25	2	265	Rebuilt twice	530
Chickamauga, No. 9	18	2	148	Rebuilt twice	296
Chickamauga, No. 10	16	1	136	Rebuilt twice	272
Chickamauga, No. 11	18	1	141	.....	.....
Chickamauga, No. 12	19	1	124	.....	.....
Chickamauga, No. 13	12	1	125	.....	.....
Chickamauga, No. 14	13	1	124	.....	.....
Buzzard Roost	15	1	87	Rebuilt	87
Old Brewery	15	1	40	Rebuilt	40
Tilton	20	1	100	Rebuilt twice	200
Resaca	35	7	842	Rebuilt twice	1,684
Etowah	67	5	508	Rebuilt twice	1,196
Allatoona creek	18	1	163	Rebuilt twice	326
Near Vining's	35	1	400	Rebuilt	400
Chattahoochee	92	6	780	Rebuilt twice	1,560
Total length	.....	.....	5,123	Total	8,553
Add amount rebuilt	.....	.....	8,553
Total bridging built	by gov't	.....	13,676	= 2 miles 3,116 feet.

A small portion of this bridging was built by contract, amounting to $25,757 63.

Water stations were built at—

Chattanooga	1 tank.	Graysville	2 tanks.
Chickamauga creek, No. 2	2 "	Old Brewery	2 "
Greenwood	2 "	Resaca	1 "
Tilton	2 "	Rogers	1 "
Kingston	2 "	Moon Station	1 "
Allatoona	1 "	Atlanta	1 "
Kenesaw	1 "
Tunnel	1 "	Total	20 "

The following tabular statement shows the cost of labor performed on this road for construction and maintenance of way, and the number of men in the construction corps employed each month:

Months.	Construction corps.		Transportation department.	Total.
	No. of men.	Amount of pay-rolls.	Amount of pay-rolls.
1864.
March	368	$21,974 93		$21,974 93
April	458	17 008 75	$4,279 85	21,288 60
May	1,467	91,434 66	7,858 19	99,292 85
June	1,052	52,807 31	12,400 71	65,208 02
July	1,060	67,081 60	17,788 75	84,870 35
August	2,213	50,792 45	18,630 36	69,422 81
September	897	42,516 71	21,180 38	63,697 09
October	2,002	124,588 40	23,902 27	148,490 67
November	1,977	101,578 27	20,182 81	121,761 08
December			1,447 58	1,447 58
1865.
January	559	11,960 85	16,282 14	18,242 99
February	106	1,325 00	21,780 46	23,105 46
March			21,610 49	21,610 49
April			21,384 34	21,384 34
May	888	44,002 75	28,082 50	72,085 25
June	1,112	85,070 06	29,802 92	114,872 98
July	467	33,353 48	42,272 92	75,826 44
August	364	14,527 60	54,178 22	68,705 82
September	143	3,613 95	23,744 36	27,358 31
Total	14,136	763,936 77	386,809 29	1,150,746 06
Monthly average	642	34,724 40	20,358 38	60,565 58

In the reconstruction of this road in 1865 some work was done on the Atlanta end by order of General Wilson.

The cost and description of this work, other than that done by soldiers, was, as per settlement of General Wilson and Grant & Co., as follows:

725 feet bridging over Chattahoochee river, at $11 per lineal foot	$7,965
Amount for track laying, as per check-roll	7,167
Work done at culvert near Vining's	538
Total	15,670

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.

9,960 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$1,195,200 00
556,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	45,280 00
849,000 pounds spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	72,165 00
129,000 cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	64,500 00
		$1,377,145 00

Labor.
As per tabular statement	1,150,746 06
Contract work.
On bridges	25,757 63
Work done by Grant & Co	15,670 00
Total	2,569,318 69

In the above calculation I have deducted the seventeen miles of rails laid by General Wilson, as this was all old and damaged iron.

The Chattanooga and Atlanta railroad was relinquished as a military road and turned over to the State of Georgia, the original owner, September 25, 1865.

THE NASHVILLE AND CLARKSVILLE RAILROAD

Extends from Nashville to Clarksville, and is 61 miles long. It is composed of three links: first, the Louisville and Nashville railroad, from Nashville to Edgefield junction, 10 miles; second, the Edgefield and Kentucky railroad, to the State line, 37 miles; and, third, the Memphis and Ohio railroad, to Clarksville, 14 miles.

On the 4th of August, 1864, I received General Sherman's order directing this road to be opened, so as to provide another avenue of supply to the depot at Nashville. Having made the necessary arrangements for carrying on the work at the front during my absence, I took the first division of the construction corps, under L. H. Eicholtz, division engineer, and proceeded to Springfield, where we arrived on the 11th of August.

I found the road had been repaired and put in running order from Edgefield junction to this station by Captain C. H. Irwin, assistant quartermaster, who was using it to haul lumber from his numerous saw-mills to Nashville.

The portion from State line to Clarksville was in running order, and being operated by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company.

Putting the construction force to work at once, I made an examination of the line between Springfield and State line, and found the work to be done consisted principally of bridging; the track had not been much damaged. Some of the cuts were so filled up that it required the removal of a good deal of material to clear the track.

The bridges destroyed were of considerable magnitude, and all the timber for their reconstruction had to be cut and prepared. The work was completed and the road opened through to Clarksville on the 16th of September.

The construction force remained on the road until October 16, employed in getting out bridge timber and cross-ties, and grading and laying a track, with sidings 6,765 feet long, from main line to the levee at Clarksville.

On the 25th of October I appointed W. R. Kingsley, division engineer, engineer of construction and repairs, and he continued to occupy this position while we held and operated the road. The cross-ties were badly decayed in places, and many had to be taken out and replaced with new ones.

On the 4th of March a freshet carried away the Red river bridge, and it was rebuilt by the 25th of same month. Another freshet on the 7th of April again carried away this bridge, and it was not rebuilt. Still another freshet occurred on the 20th of May, destroying the Sulphur Fork bridge and doing much additional damage to the road, all of which, however, was quickly repaired.

The following tabular statement shows the amount of bridging and trestle work on this road:

Name.	Height.	Length.	Remarks.
	Feet.	Feet.
Springfield	44	410
Sulphur fork	60	433	Partly destroyed and 150 feet rebuilt.
Spring creek	60	560
Red river	85	680	Partly destroyed and 300 feet rebuilt.
Clark's extension	6 to 20	900
Total		2,983

Add to this amount rebuilt 450 feet, and we have a total of 3,433 feet bridging and trestle on this road built by government.

The lumber consumed in these structures amounted to 890,000 feet, board measure.

TRACK LAID.

On Edgefield and Kentucky railroad	2,484 feet, lineal.
On Clarksville extension	6,065 feet, lineal.
On side tracks, extension	700 feet, lineal.
Total	9,249, or 1 mile and 3,969 feet

CROSS-TIES.

About 15,000 cross-ties were cut by the construction corps on the line of this road.

Tabular statement of pay-rolls on the Nashville and Clarksville railroad.

Month.	No. of men.	Am't of pay-rolls.
1864.
August	502	$22,160 68
September	615	36,538 00
October	614	17,501 39
November	148	7,093 55
December	151	8,457 75
1865.
January	160	7,878 93
February	206	10,504 46
March	226	13,667 68
April	153	9,151 60
May	91	2,870 00
June	81	3,713 83
July	70	4,360 60
August	73	2,908 30
September	45	649 15
Total	3,135	148,455 92

SUMMARY OF COST.

Labor		$148,455 92
Materials.
140 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$16,800 00
7,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	560 00
10,000 pounds spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	850 00
		18,210 00
Total		166,665 92

The Nashville and Clarksville railroad was relinquished as a military road and turned over to the owners September 25, 1865.

THE KNOXVILLE AND BRISTOL OR EAST TENNESSEE AND VIRGINIA RAILROAD

Extends from Knoxville to Bristol, 130 miles, with a branch 12 miles long to Rogersville. This road was open during the greater part of 1864 between Knoxville and Strawberry Plains, and at one time as far as Bull's Gap. On the 12th of March, 1865, orders were received from General Thomas to open this road to Bull's Gap, and put it in condition to sustain as heavy a business as was done on the Chattanooga and Atlanta line in the summer of 1864. The force sent to do this work reached Strawberry Plains on the 13th of March, and the road was opened to Bull's Gap on the 25th of same month. Orders were then received from General Thomas to continue the work and open the road to Carter's Station, 110 miles from Knoxville. This point was reached on the 29th of April.

TRACK.

Extensive repairs were required over the whole distance, and 12½ miles of main track and 5,755 feet of sidings were built. Total track laid was 13 miles and 3,115 feet.

BRIDGES.

Location.	Height.	Length.	Location.	Height.	Length.
	Feet.	Feet.		Feet.	Feet.
Flat creek	10	30	Chuckey creek, No. 1	25	140
Strawberry Plains	12	30	Chuckey creek, No. 2	20	100
Mossy creek	25	154	Chuckey creek, No. 3	28	180
Morristown	.....	24	Road crossing	16	75
		24	Culvert	.....	30
		24			150
Russelville	22	150	Henderson	25	245
3 miles beyond	.....	40		35	137
Do	.....	22			20
Bull's Gap	28	66	Limestone creek	25	352
Lick creek	26	875
		24	Total bridging built by gov't		4,168
Swan Pond	25	1,393

Water stations were built at—

	Tanks.
Friend's Station	2
Bull's Gap	2
Morristown	2
Chuckey creek	2
Total	8

The following tabular statement shows the cost of labor for construction and maintenance of way, and the number of men in the construction corps employed each month:

Month.	Construction corps.		Transportation department.	Total.
	No. of men.	Amount of pay-rolls.	Amount of pay-rolls.
1864.
June	.....	.....	$2,845 67	$2,845 67
July	.....	.....	4,340 42	4,340 42
August	.....	.....	4,038 88	4,038 88
September	.....	.....	4,928 36	4,928 36
October	.....	.....	5,590 04	5,590 04
November	.....	.....	4,720 18	4,720 18
December	.....	.....	336 52	336 52
1865.
January	.....	.....	6,808 62	6,808 62
February	875	$18,094 21	7,510 64	25,604 85
March	520	29,129 89	10,011 71	39,141 60
April	546	37,626 21	11,750 39	49,376 60
May	547	4,663 54	15,827 16	20,490 70
June	.....	.....	15,510 70	15,510 70
July	.....	.....	10,818 85	10,818 85
August	.....	.....	769 25	769 25
Total	2,488	89,513 85	105,807 39	195,321 24
Monthly average	622	22,378 43	7,053 82	13,021 41

SUMMARY OF COST.

Materials.

1,000 tons iron rails, at $120 per ton	$120,000 00
54,000 pounds chairs, at 8 cents per pound	4,320 00
181,000 pounds spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	15,385 00
33,750 cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	16,875 00
		$156,580 00
Labor as per tabular statement		195,321 24
Total		351,901 24

The East Tennessee and Virginia railroad was relinquished as a military road and turned over to the company August 28, 1865.

The western end of the Memphis and Charleston railroad was opened for a longer or shorter distance at various times during 1864 and 1865. Pocahontas Station, seventy-five miles from Memphis, was the farthest point east that was reached at any time.

Forty-eight (48) miles of the Mississippi Central railroad (from Grand Junction to Tallahatchie river) was opened and used for a short time, but it was operated in connection with the Memphis and Charleston road, and the following statements of cost, furnished by the general superintendent, Mr. A. F. Goodhue, includes both roads; but a small portion of the amount is properly chargeable to the Mississippi Central road:

Tabular statement showing cost of labor for each month.

Months.	Amount.	Months.	Amount.
1864.		1865.
February	$1,167 07	January	$1,499 67
March	1,186 19	February	1,786 68
April	688 54	March	1,789 96
May	738 55	April	5,166 40
June	2,254 33	May	6,439 25
July	3,954 18	June	9,616 34
August	5,115 95	July	10,399 25
September	2,509 50	August	8,492 98
October	2,354 07	September	2,547 57
November	1,540 97	Total	72,893 12
December	3,645 67	Monthly average	3,644 15

SUMMARY OF COST.

Labor	$72,893 12
Materials	134,194 77
Total	207,087 89

This part of the Memphis and Charleston railroad was relinquished as a military road and restored to the company September 12, 1865.

THE MOBILE AND OHIO RAILROAD

Was opened at the beginning of 1864 to Union City, but was abandoned about the 1st of May. It was reopened to Crockett, thirty-five miles from Columbus, Kentucky, in May, 1865.

The following statement of cost was furnished by Mr. Goodhue, general superintendent:

Tabular statement showing cost of labor for each month.

Months.	Amount.	Months.	Amount.
1864.		1865.
February	$389 02	January	$514 50
March	395 06	February	511 00
April	229 50	March	553 50
May	246 17	April	527 75
June	751 43	May	1,789 37
July	1,354 37	June	1,597 21
August	1,254 60	July
September	1,198 60	August	598 55
October	1,240 50
November	1,714 25	Total	16,582 88
December	1,617 50
		Monthly average	921 27

SUMMARY OF COST.

Labor	$16,582 88
Materials	3,762 44
Total	20,345 32

This road was relinquished as a military road and restored to the company August 25, 1865.

THE ATLANTA AND MACON RAILROAD

From Atlanta to Rough and Ready, eleven miles, was operated for a short time while we held Atlanta. The greater part of the iron on this portion was taken up and used for relaying the track destroyed by General Hood on the Chattanooga and Atlanta railroad in October, 1864

Recapitulation of cost of materials used and labor performed for construction and maintenance of way on the United States military railroads in the military division of the Mississippi.

Name of road.	From—	To—	Length, miles.	Bridges built by government, feet, lineal.	TRACK. Miles laid by government. Main track.	Sidings.	Total.	COST. Materials.	Labor.	Contract work.	Total.
Nashville and Chattanooga	Nashville	Chattanooga	151	21,727	129.75	19	148.75	$1,747,741 00	$1,946,553 62	$385,216 71	$4,079,511 33
Shelbyville Branch*	Wartrace	Shelbyville	9
McMinnville and Manchester*	Tullahoma	McMinnville	35
Nashville and Decatur	Nashville	Decatur Junction	120	24,275	31.50	2.65	34.15	416,480 00	692,835 91	549,326 13	1,658,642 04
Mount Pleasant Branch	Columbia	Mount Pleasant	12
Memphis and Charleston, (eastern division)	Stevenson	Decatur Junction	80	4,943	3.50	1.07	4.57	75,685 00	216,308 18	88,442 33	380,435 51
Chattanooga and Knoxville	Chattanooga	Knoxville	112	4,002	.35	3.38	38.38	542,030 50	506,554 45	161,990 26	1,210,575 21
Cleveland and Dalton Branch†	Cleveland	Dalton	27
Nashville and Northwestern	Nashville	Johnsonville	78	21,320	46.50	4.25	50.75	489,779 12	798,829 73	182,789 11	1,471,397 96
Chattanooga and Atlanta	Chattanooga	Atlanta	136	13,676	130.75	10.75	141.50	1,377,145 00	1,150,746 06	41,427 63	2,569,318 69
Rome Branch‡	Kingston	Rome	17
Atlanta and Macon‖	Atlanta	Rough and Ready	11
Nashville and Clarksville	Nashville	Clarksville	62	3,433	.62	1.13	1.75	18,210 00	148,455 92		166,665 92
Knoxville and Bristol	Knoxville	Bristol	110	4,168	12.50	1.09	13.59	156,580 00	195,321 24		351,901 24
Rogersville Branch§	Junction	Rogersville	12
Memphis and Charleston, (western division)	Memphis	Pocahontas	75					134,194 77	72,893 12		207,087 89
Mississippi Central¶	Grand Junction	Tallahatchie river	48
Mobile and Ohio	Columbus, Ky	Crockett, Tenn	35					3,762 44	16,582 88		20,345 32
Louisville City	River Landing	L. & N. R. R. depot	2
Total			1,132	97,544	391.12	42.32	433.44	4,961,607 83	5,745,081 11	1,409,192 17	12,115,881 11

Official copy from the records of the Quartermaster General's office:

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE, May 31, 1867.

BENJAMIN C. CARD,
Brevet Brigadier General, Assistant Quartermaster.

* Cost included in Nashville and Chattanooga railroad.
† Cost included in Chattanooga and Knoxville railroad.
‡ Cost included in Chattanooga and Atlanta railroad.
‖ Used but for a few days.
§ Included in Knoxville and Bristol railroad.
¶ Cost included in Memphis and Charleston railroad, western division.
 Taken up by government.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 1, 1867.

Major General O. O. HOWARD recalled and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You have stated in your examination that some property had been restored to rebels which had been libelled for confiscation, or perhaps had been confiscated by decree of court; can you state the number of pieces of property, and what they were?

A. I cannot state it from the records that I have. I know the fact, and can give you individual cases; but if the Committee would ascertain the property that was actually libelled in the courts, it would be necessary for them to examine the court records. The reason I have not these facts is the great cost of getting a transcript from the records.

Q. Will you give the Committee, then, some instances of property restored after proceedings had been commenced and not perfected, and also some instances of property restored where such proceedings had been perfected and the property condemned and sold?

A. The property of S. W. Armsteadt, near Fortress Monroe, Virginia, had been libelled for confiscation, condemned and sold, and was restored to him by the assistant Commissioner. According to the report of the assistant Commissioner for October, 1865, there are two cases of Goodrich & Co., of New Orleans, in which storehouses and lots—one estimated at $75,000 and one at $13,000—were libelled, condemned and sold, and subsequently restored by General Fullerton. There is a case of the property of Benjamin Johnson, of Prince William county, Virginia, marked confiscated, and restored to former owner. The records of the courts would have to be examined to ascertain what is meant by the entry "confiscated," whether it was only libelled for confiscation, or condemned and sold, and subsequently restored. There is also the case of David J. (or G.) Goodwin, of Portsmouth, Virginia, reported as confiscated, and subsequently restored. I will just say to the Committee that there is a large amount of property in the vicinity of Norfolk, in Norfolk county, Virginia, libelled for confiscation, and the only place to get a full account of it would be from the records of the courts. I never got a transcript of those records.

Q. Mr. William L. Trenholm, in his testimony, states that General Saxton restored certain property to him and to certain firms in Charleston, in compliance with an order from President Johnson himself, and further states that that order is on file in the Freedmen's Bureau, in Charleston. Have you in your possession or under your control a copy of that order? If so, please furnish it to the Committee.

A. My attention has never been called to any such order. It may be on my files, and if so, whether here or in Charleston, I can furnish it, and will do so.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you ever seen the judgment and decree of court in either of these cases?

A. No, sir; my statement is based upon the reports of the assistant Commissioners.

Q. Do you know the form of judgment or decree of court, whether it directs the sale of the property?

A. No, sir; the only information I have is from the source I have indicated, and that does not state explicitly the form of decree. When I first came to Washington, I had a conversation with the Secretary of War, and he informed me, if my memory serves me correctly, that he had suspended the sales in certain cases in Virginia. I should presume, therefore, that the decree ordered sale to be made.

Q. Did you consider the judgment of the court ordering the property to be sold as vesting the title in the United States before sale had actually been made?

A. That was my opinion. I thought the judgment of the court condemning the property vested the title in the United States.

Q. Do you think so now?

A. Yes, sir; I have not very thoroughly examined the matter. There were authorities on both sides.

Q. Do you know whether the Attorney General gave an opinion on that subject?

A. I only know that the President referred the matter to the Attorney General, and that the circular which I had prepared came back modified so as to allow me to use such property only after condemnation and sale. Whether the word "sale" was put in by the Attorney General or by the President, I don't know.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, June 1, 1867.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL, M. C., Chairman of Judiciary Committee pro tem.:

SIR: I have examined my files, and find two orders of General Saxton, dated, respectively, November 6th and 7th, 1865, restoring property to Mr. W. L. Trenholm.

As no reference is made in these orders to any special direction of the President, I will refer immediately to Charleston, and ascertain if there is any record of the kind there.

Very respectfully, yours,

O. O. HOWARD,
Major General, Commissioner, &c.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, June 5, 1867.

SIR: In accordance with my letter to you of the 29th ultimo, I have the honor to transmit herewith duplicate copies of the papers of J. W. Zacharie, of New Orleans, called for by your communication of the 9th ultimo.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY M. WHITTLESEY,
Brevet Brigadier General and A. A. A. General.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee.

(No. 912.)

I do solemnly swear (or affirm) in the presence of Almighty God that I will henceforth faithfully defend the Constitution of the United States and the union of the States thereunder, and that I will in like manner abide by, and faithfully support, all laws and proclamations which have been made during the existing rebellion with reference to the emancipation of slaves: So help me God.

J. W. ZACHARIE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 6th day of July, A. D. 1865.

CHARLES CLAIBORNE,
[L. S.] Clerk United States Circuit Court Sixth Judicial Circuit and Eastern District of Louisiana.

[Copy.]

STATE OF LOUISIANA, City of New Orleans:

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally appeared Thomas G. Rhett, who, being duly sworn, did depose and say that he held a commission as major in the army of the so-called confederate States, and was stationed in the department known as the Trans-Mississippi department, and comprising the States of Texas, Arkansas, and that portion of the State of Louisiana lying west of the Mississippi river, together with the Territories of Arizona, New Mexico, and the one known as the Indian Territory; and that he did duty in said department as chief of ordnance on the staff of the so-called General Smith, in which position he, by virtue of his office, knew of all contracts, sales, purchases, exchanges, or donations of arms, powder, lead, shot, cannon, nitre, metals of all kinds, caps, and all other ordnance stores sold, or in any manner furnished the so-called confederate States in the department aforesaid, by all or any parties, directly or indirectly; and that he further knew of all importations of munitions of war into said department from the month of December, 1862, to May, 1865, during which time deponent held the aforesaid office. Deponent further declareth that he has known J. W. Zacharie, of this city, for a number of years, and that he knows that said Zacharie never did either contract to sell or in any way furnish the so-called confederate States with munitions of war during the time aforesaid the deponent held the office aforementioned; that deponent would have known if said J. W. Zacharie had either imported or in any way furnished munitions to the aforesaid so-called confederate States, and that he knows that said Zacharie did not do both or either of these things. Deponent further declares that he made a statement under oath of the facts before mentioned in presence of the judge and clerk of the United States district court for the eastern district of the State of Louisiana at the last sitting thereof, and during the trial of the cause of the United States vs. the property of J. W. Zacharie.

(Signed) THOMAS G. RHETT.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 12th day of August, A. D. 1865, at my office in the city of New Orleans and parish of Orleans.

[L. S.] (Signed) K. LOEW,
Deputy Clerk U. S. District Court, Eastern District of Louisiana.

Personally appeared before me James Waters Zacharie, who, being duly sworn, declares, in answer to the interrogatories propounded to him by the officers of the Freedmen's Bureau:

To the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th he answers that he has never been in the employ of the so-called confederacy in any capacity.

To the 8th he answers in the negative.

To the 9th he left New Orleans on the 24th of August, 1861, for Havana, and returned on the 26th of January, 1862: remained until the 24th of February, and left for Mexico through Texas, and has been at Havana, Mexico, and Texas ever since, having left Matamoras on the 18th of May last, returning to New Orleans via Galveston, Texas, and arrived on the 4th of July last.

To the 10th, 11th, and 12th he answers in the negative.

To the 13th, at Matamoras and Brownsville, endeavoring to secure his property in Texas, and has been constantly travelling in Mexico, Cuba, and Texas.

To the 14th, he returned from Texas here by permission of the United States officers.

To the 15th, in his opinion he has given no aid to the rebellion.

To the 16th, 17th, 18th, and 19th he answers in the negative.

To the 20th, he took the oath on the 6th of July, 1865; the certificate is now in Washington.

To the 21st he answers in the negative.

To the 22d, about $250,000, but is mortgaged to the Citizens' Bank (to secure its stock) and others for upwards of two hundred thousand dollars, and if the mortgages were foreclosed, would not sell for its indebtedness, as there are judgments and privileges for taxes, &c., for the last four years, amounting to over $15,000.

To the 23d and 24th, not having seen the oath required by the President's proclamation of the 3d of December, 1863, he has not taken it, being then in Mexico or Texas.

(Signed) J. W. ZACHARIE.

Sworn to and subscribed before me on the 4th of November, 1865.

(Signed) EDWARD M. LUSIREN, J. P. E.

[Copy.]

UNITED STATES vs. THE PROPERTY OF J. W. ZACHARIE. } No. 8,009.

I hereby certify that the judgment decreeing a restitution of the libelled property to the defendant, rendered on 15th July, 1865, was signed on the 20th of same month, and that no appeal has been taken by the United States.

(Signed) K. LOEW, Deputy Clerk.

CLERK'S OFFICE, August 1, 1865.

I do further certify that the district attorney declines to appeal herein, and so stated in my presence.

K. LOEW, Deputy Clerk.

AUGUST 1, 1865.

OFFICE SUPERVISING SPECIAL AGENT,
TREASURY DEPARTMENT, THIRD AGENCY,
New Orleans, August 26, 1865.

THOMAS CONWAY, Esq, New Orleans:

SIR: I enclose herewith copies of papers, now in my possession, of P. W. Gray, confederate treasury agent, Trans-Mississippi department, showing that J. W. Zacharie was, a short time previous to the surrender of Kirby Smith, engaged in furnishing supplies to the rebels.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) BENJ. F. FLANDERS,
Supervising Special Agent, Treasury Department, 3d Agency.

Warrant No. 198.

TREASURY AGENCY, H. S. OFFICE,
Marshall, May 16, 1865.

Hon P. W. GRAY, Treasury Agent:

SIR: I have the honor to request a bill of exchange in favor of George W. Carter, at sixty days' sight, on Messrs. Fraser, Trenholm & Co., for eleven hundred and thirty-three $\frac{33}{100}$ dollars ($1,133 50) in sterling, at $4 85 to the pound, in payment of bill percussion caps. You will also cause to be issued one bill of exchange sterling on Messrs. Fraser, Trenholm & Co., in favor of Alexander Collie & Co., for £10,000; one in favor of Ball, Hutchings & Co., for £589 14 4; and the balance, of sixty-two thousand one hundred and ninety $\frac{12}{100}$ dollars ($62,190 12,) computing the pound sterling at $4 85, in bill of exchange in favor of Messrs. Alexander Collie & Co. This sum of $62,190 12 is to be used in payment of cargo of supplies bought from the agents of said Collie & Co., and introduced into our lines on board the ship Flamingo.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) W. C. BLACK.
Captain and Chief Foreign Supply Office.

The Gale warrant clerk will prepare warrants in favor of Captain Black for $69,788 90, with which he is to be charged, payable in coin out of the appropriation for purchase of naval stores.

(Signed) S. W. HAMPTON, Chief Clerk.

TREASURY AGENCY, May 16, 1865.

[Copy.]

Warrant, Treasury, 199.

TREASURY AGENCY, TRANS-MISSISSIPPI DEPARTMENT.

To the principal depository of the confederate States at Marshall, greeting:

Pay to W. C. Black, captain and chief foreign supply office, or order, out of the appropriation named in the margin, sixty-nine thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight $\frac{90}{100}$ dollars, in coin, and for which sum said W. C. Black, captain, is to be charged and held accountable.

Appropriation.—Purchase of cotton, naval stores, and other property, under direction of the President, to meet the engagement of the government, &c.

Draw draft on principal depository for £14,369 9*s.* 3*d.*

For so doing this shall be your warrant.

Given under my hand this sixteenth day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five.

(Signed) P. W. GRAY,
Agent of the Treasury, Trans-Mississippi Department.

R. & E.
$69,788 90, coin.

(Countersigned) T. H. KENNEDY,
Comptroller, Trans-Mississippi Department.

Recorded 17, J. D. May 17, 1865.

(Signed) D. F. SHALL, Auditor.

Received, for the above warrant, draft No. ——, on C. S. depository at ————, for $————, this —— day of ————, 186—.

TREASURY AGENCY, F. S. OFFICE,
Houston, May 6, 1865.

Capt. W. C. BLACK, Chief Foreign Supply Office, Marshall:

SIR: At sight please pay to J. W. Zacharie, or order, the sum of six thousand four hundred and sixty-five $\frac{28}{100}$ dollars, in sterling exchange, of the Hon. P. W. Gray, agent treasury, trans-Mississippi, on Messrs. Fraser, Trenholm & Co., Liverpool, England, in full of invoice surgical instruments and drugs, $6,465 28.

(Signed) HENRY SAMPSON,
Treasury Agent Foreign Supply Office.

TREASURY AGENCY, F. S. OFFICE,
Marshall, May 16, 1865.

Hon. P. W. GRAY, Treasury Agent:

SIR: I have the honor to request your bill of exchange on Fraser, Trenholm & Co, in favor of J. W. Zacharie, for sixty-four hundred and sixty-five $\frac{38}{100}$ dollars, in sterling, at the rate of $4 85 to the pound, in payment of the above draft.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) W. C. BLACK,
Captain and Chief Foreign Supply Office.

Upon referring to the books of P. W Gray, confederate treasury agent, it is found that on the 16th of May, 1865, a bill of sterling exchange was drawn by him for the within amount, £1,333 0*s.* 11*d.* = $6.465 28.

(Signed) BENJ. F. FLANDERS,
Supervising Special Agent T. D., 3d Agency.

A true copy:

(Signed) D. V. FURUS,
1st Lieutenant and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS BUREAU REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, &C.,
STATE OF LOUISIANA, New Orleans, September 8, 1865.

Major General O. O. HOWARD,
Commissioner, &c., &c., War Department, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to forward herewith additional evidence in the case of J. W. Zacharie, consisting of copies of papers found in the possession of the treasury agent of the late confederate States, (Trans-Mississippi department,) implicating him in running the blockade and furnishing the rebels with supplies, &c.; also additional testimony taken before the United States district court at the time the case of Zacharie was on trial before that court.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) THOMAS CONWAY,
Asst. Commissioner B. R., F., and A. L., State of La.

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF REFUGEES,
FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, October 7, 1865.

Brevet Brigadier General J. S. FULLERTON, Assistant Adjutant General:

GENERAL: I am directed by General Howard to enclose to you papers in the cases of Mrs. and Miss Eustis, of New Orleans, for action, in compliance with Circular No. 15, current series, from this bureau; also a letter from Mr. Zacharie, of that city, whose property was ordered to be restored, but the order revoked by telegram upon receipt, at this office, of certain papers from Mr. Conway, implicating Zacharie in blockade running, and stating that an appeal from the decision of the United States district court was to be taken.

It appears from Mr. Zacharie's letter that Mr. Conway was willing to give up the property upon the owner's signing a certain release, copy enclosed. With respect to this, General Howard directs me to say that he does not desire to bar parties from making or representing any claim upon the government.

You will please investigate the case, and, if you think proper, restore the property according to the original order sent from this office.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) WM. FOWLER,
Assistant Adjutant General.

NEW ORLEANS, September 26, 1865.

DEAR SIR: General Howard's order came to hand two weeks ago, and after presentation and long deliberation upon it, Mr. Conway offers to release the property on condition that I will sign the enclosed certificate, which is appended to the receipt of the property, and that he is to collect the rent for the month of September. As General Howard's order is dated September 2, in my opinion the property was released from that moment; and as the certificate required is a quit claim, I have declined signing it, preferring to await my father's arrival, and to let him act upon it. Conway's action in the matter amounts, virtually, to a setting aside of General Howard's order. My father is still absent in Texas, but we are expecting him in the first week in October. I would be glad if you could force Mr. Conway to comply literally with General Howard's order, and at the earliest practicable moment.

Yours, respectfully,

(Signed) F. C. ZACHARIE.

W. L. HODGE, Esq., Washington.

WASHINGTON, October 6, 1865.

DEAR GENERAL: You may recollect an order you gave, some weeks since, for restoration of the property, in New Orleans, to J. W. Zacharie, and I now submit a letter received to-day from Mr. Zacharie for your perusal, and will call to-morrow, to ascertain what action you can conveniently take in the matter.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) WILLIAM L. HODGE.

NEW ORLEANS, October 26, 1865.

GENERAL: I would respectfully make application for a formal release of my property by the Freedmen's Bureau. On the 20th of July last the United States district court of Louisiana decreed in my favor in the libel suit against my property; but when taking possession of, under written authority from the United States marshal, I was met by an opposition from your predecessor in office, who refused to comply with the mandate of the court, when I wrote to Washington, and procured an order from General Howard, chief of the bureau, dated September 2, directing him (Conway) to restore me the property, which he declined doing, unless I would sign a release of the government for all damages and rents that had accrued since the 1st of September, 1862, until now, which receipt, my friends in Washington have notified me, General Howard has instructed the bureau not to exact. The taxes and insurance, as well as other expenses, have remained unpaid from September 1, 1862, until now, during which the government has enjoyed the rents, and the acting quartermaster has continued collecting the rents since the reception of General Howard's order.

I now propose that if the bureau will return me $600, which is the amount collected since the reception of General Howard's order, and will pay the current expenses of the property while they were in possession,* I will sign a quit claim for all rents collected in the past three years. I consider this a liberal offer, as the rents far exceed the contingent expenses during the time of the government's occupation, and make it to obtain a speedy settlement with the bureau.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant.

(Signed) J. W. ZACHARIE.

Brevet Brigadier General J. S. FULLERTON,
Assistant Commissioner Freedmen's Bureau.

NEW ORLEANS, December 11, 1865.

DEAR SIR: Captain W. B. Armstrong, assistant quartermaster of the Freedmen's Bureau, in delivering me my property on your order, has refused to refund me the rents which he had collected subsequent to my amnesty oath, which my friend, William L. Hodge, esq., of Washington, informed me, under date of the 7th of October last. He says: "General Howard, whilst I was with him, caused a letter to be written to General Fullerton, directing him to examine into your case, and do what was right, expressly instructed him not to ask or exact the signature to the paper giving up all claims on the United States, or its agents, and if you have any just claim you should not be required to relinquish it: also, not to collect any rents subsequent to the amnesty oath or pardon, but leaving all previously collected an open question." And when calling on General Baird, and showing him Mr. Hodge's letter, he requested to look for the letter alluded to; he could find none, and thinks if you had such a letter as Mr. Hodge refers to, you must have taken it off with you. Should you have had such information, you will oblige me by writing to General Baird on the subject, and send your letter, under cover, to me, as it will save me $600, collected in August, as my amnesty oath was taken on the 6th of July, and I obtained a judgment in my favor, on the 15th of July, from the United States district court. As B. F. Flanders attested the same suit for the month of July, and was not under your control, I suppose I will lose that amount, unless I recover it before the Court of Claims.

Requesting the favor of an immediate answer, which will oblige, yours, respectfully,

(Signed) J. W. ZACHARIE.

General J. S FULLERTON.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, June 16, 1866.

Respectfully referred to Brevet Major General A. Baird, assistant commissioner, &c., New Orleans, Louisiana. The letter referred to within was written October 7, 1865, but contains no direction to refrain from collecting rents after the date of the amnesty oath. If any such rents were actually collected, the bureau will not restore them to Mr. Zacharie.

By order of Major General O. O. Howard, Commissioner, &c.

(Signed) WILLIAM FOWLER,
Assistant Adjutant General.

(*Taxes, premiums of insurance, and repairs.)

[Exhibits to accompany Postmaster General Randall's testimony.]

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I certify that the form of commission of deputy postmasters hereto annexed is that which has been used since 1836, when such officers have been confirmed by the Senate.

In testimony whereof, I, William H. Seward, Secretary of State of the United [L. S.] States, have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal of the Department of State to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-ninth day of May, A. D. 1867, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-first.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

Know ye, that, reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity, ability, and punctuality of , I have nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, do appoint deputy postmaster , and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfil the duties of that office according to law, and to have and to hold the said office, with all the powers, privileges and emoluments to the same of right appertaining unto him, the said , for the term of , unless the President of the United States, for the time being, should be pleased sooner to revoke and determine this commission.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal [L. S.] of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and and of the independence of the United States of America the

By the PRESIDENT:

Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I certify the form of commission of deputy postmasters hereunto annexed is that which has been used since 1837, when such officers have been appointed during the recess of the Senate.

In testimony whereof, I, William H. Seward, Secretary of State of the United [L. S.] States, have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal of the Department of State to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-ninth day of May, A. D. 1867, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-first.

[L. S.] WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

Know ye, that, reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity, ability, and punctuality of , I do appoint deputy postmaster , and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfil the duties of that office according to law, and to have and to hold the said office, with all the powers, privileges, and emoluments to the same of right appertaining unto him, the said , during the pleasure of the President of the United States, for the time being, and until the end of the next session of the Senate of the United States and no longer.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal [L. S.] of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and , and of the independence of the United States of America the

By the PRESIDENT:

Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I certify that the form of commission of deputy postmasters hereto annexed is that which has been adopted since the passage of the "Act regulating the tenure of certain civil offices," and which is used in case of suspension from office.

In testimony whereof, I, William H. Seward, Secretary of State of the United [L. S.] States, have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal of the Department of State to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-ninth day of May, A. D. 1867, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-first.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

Know ye, that, reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity and ability of , I do designate him to perform the duties of the office of deputy postmaster at , in the State of , and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfil the duties of that office according to law, and to have and to hold all the powers, privileges, and emoluments to the same of right appertaining unto him, the said , until the next meeting of the Senate of the United States, and until the case of , who has been suspended by the President from the performance of the duties of said office, shall be acted upon by the Senate, and no longer, unless the commission shall be sooner revoked, subject to the conditions prescribed by law.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal [L. S.] of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and , and of the independence of the United States of America the

By the PRESIDENT:

Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I certify that the form of commission of deputy postmasters hereto annexed is that which has been used since the adjournment of the Senate, in cases of vacancies by death or resignation.

In testimony whereof, I, William H. Seward, Secretary of State of the United [L. S.] States, have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal of the Department of State to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-ninth day of May, A. D. 1867, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-first.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

Know ye, that, reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity, ability, and punctuality of , I do appoint him deputy postmaster at , in the State of , and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfil the duties of that office according to law, and to have and to hold the said office with all the powers, privileges and emoluments to the same of right appertaining unto him, the said , until the end of the next session of the Senate of the United States, and no longer, subject to the conditions prescribed by law.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and , and of the independence of the United States of America the

By the PRESIDENT:

Secretary of State.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I certify that the form of commission of deputy postmasters hereto annexed is that which has been issued since the passage of the "Act regulating the tenure of certain civil offices," when such officers have been confirmed by the Senate.

In testimony whereof, I, William H. Seward, Secretary of State of the United [L. S.] States, have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal of the Department of State to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this twenty-ninth day of May, A. D. 1867, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-first.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

Know ye, that, reposing special trust and confidence in the integrity, ability, and punctuality of , I have nominated, and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, do appoint deputy postmaster, , and do authorize and empower him to execute and fulfil the duties of that office, with all the powers, privileges, and emoluments to the same of right appertaining unto him, the said , for the term of , subject to the conditions prescribed by law.

In testimony whereof, I have caused these letters to be made patent and the seal [L. S.] of the United States to be hereunto affixed.

Given under my hand, at the city of Washington, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and , and of the independence of the United States of America the .

By the PRESIDENT:

Secretary of State.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., May 30, 1867.

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

I certify that the form of commission of postmasters hereto annexed is that which has been used by this department in cases of appointment by the Postmaster General since the year 1836, and was adopted by the late Postmaster General, Amos Kendall, and has been continued in use, without change of form, by Postmasters General Niles, Granger, Wickliffe, Johnson, Collamer, Hall, Hubbard, Campbell, Brown, Holt, King, Blair, Dennison, and myself.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and caused the seal [L. S.] of said department to be hereunto affixed, at the city of Washington, this thirtieth day of May, A. D. 1867.

ALEXANDER W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

ALEXANDER W. RANDALL, POSTMASTER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

To all who shall see these presents, greeting:

Whereas, on the day of , 186 , was appointed postmaster at , in the county of , State of ; and whereas he did, on the day of , 186 , execute a bond, and has taken the oath of office, as required by law:

Now know ye, that, confiding in the integrity, ability, and punctuality of the said , I do commission him a postmaster, authorized to execute the duties of that office at aforesaid, according to the laws of the United States and the regulations of the Post Office Department; to hold the said office of postmaster, with all the powers, privileges, and emoluments to the same belonging, during the pleasure of the Postmaster General of the United States.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the [L. S.] Post Office Department to be affixed, at Washington city, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-first.

RALEIGH, June 20, 1867.

SIR: Yours of the 14th instant, making certain inquiries on behalf of the House Judiciary Committee, has been received.

At the close of the rebellion there were considerable quantities of what was called "State property" in various parts of the State. It consisted of cotton and resin, and of the mules and wagons used in transporting the same. I applied to the President to give this property to the State for the purposes of reconstruction, so as to avoid taxing the people in their impoverished condition. On the 8th of July, 1865, Mr. Secretary Seward addressed me a letter, from which the following is an extract:

"Mr. North (then provisional treasurer) will make an estimate of the expenses which may attend the special trust conferred upon you, namely, the organization of the State of North Carolina. The amount thus reasonably estimated will be paid at the War Department as an expense incident to the suppression of the rebellion. The estimate, however, will carefully include all expenses which may arise from the administration of the civil government of the State, including the charities thereof. It is understood here that, besides cotton that has been taken by the Secretary of the Treasury under act of Congress, there were quantities of resin and other articles, as well as funds, lying about in different places in the State and elsewhere, not reduced into possession by United States officers as insurgent property. The President is of opinion that you can appropriate these for the inevitable and indispensable expenses of the civil government of the State during the continuance of the provisional government. He is also of the opinion that you can levy taxes or assessments for the same inevitable and indispensable provisional expenses, and enforce their collection."

The above is doubtless the order or authority referred to in Mr. McPherson's manual, page 18; and I think this order may be found set out in full in his manual for 1865.

The construction given to this order or letter of authority by Provisional Treasurer North, in his report to me of date October 2, 1865, was as follows:

"The substance of this communication, so far as it related to the State property, I understood to be this: That the government of the United States would surrender to the State none of its property already seized, but would desist from further captures, and allow you, out of the debris of State property, at home and abroad, to raise what you could towards defraying the indispensable civil expenses of the State during the continuance of the provisional government."

In this construction I have no doubt I concurred. It is probable, though I do not now recollect any particular case, that cotton seized by the agents of the United States after the date of this order was restored to the State. But the report of Treasurer North, already referred to, shows that in June, 1865, Colonel David Heaton, treasury agent, under an order from Mr. Secretary McCulloch, shipped a considerable quantity of cotton "to New York as captured property without regard to State claims." I am not able to state with any exactness the amount realized from this property thus abandoned or given to the State; but the amount must have been near $100,000. No taxes were collected during my administration of seven months, the amount having proved sufficient to cover, during that period, all the expenses of the civil government.

I will take pleasure in giving the Committee any further information that may be in my possession.

Very respectfully,

W. W. HOLDEN.

E. G. BOWDOIN, Esq.,
Clerk Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 28, 1867.

SIR: In compliance with your request, I herewith transmit a copy of the circular of June 21, 1865, alluded to in my annual report of December 4, 1865. Circulars of September 14, 1865, and February 2, 1866, by which that first named was in some respects modified, are also enclosed.

You inquire whether any deeds were ever made for lands sold for taxes under the direct tax law, and asked to be informed of the reason in case no such deeds were made.

Your inquiry is understood to relate to the patents authorized by section 2 of the amendatory direct tax act of March 3, 1865. Much delay was occasioned in taking action under this section, in consequence of a difference of opinion as to whether the patents should issue from this department or from the General Land Office. The question having at length been referred to the Attorney General, he gave it as his opinion that the issue should be from the land office. A further doubt then arose as to the extent and character of the information which it was proper or possible for this department to furnish the Commissioner of the General Land Office in each case, in order that a patent might be issued. This latter difficulty had but a short time been removed before the passage of the law of February 25, 1867, (section 6 of a "resolution to provide for the ascertainment and apportionment of the proper quota of the direct tax of 1861 to the State of West Virginia, and for other purposes") which repealed the provision authorizing the issue of patents, and restored the original arrangement under which the purchaser was to receive only the certificate of sale. Whether patents had been issued on any of the small number of applications which had, up to that time, been regularly certified to the land office, I am not informed.

You also ask, referring, it is presumed, to the order of 1865 for the suspension of sales under the direct tax law, whether there was "any other order by the President suspending the collection of the direct tax."

There has been no order by the President on the subject, but on August 6, 1866, I issued directions as authorized by section 14 of an act "to protect the revenue, and for other purposes," approved July 28, 1866, suspending the collection of the direct tax in the States heretofore declared to be in insurrection until January 1, 1868.

I presume it is fully understood that the circulars mentioned in the first paragraph of this letter had no bearing on the collection of the direct tax, but referred entirely to internal revenue taxes.

Respectfully yours,

H. McCULLOCH
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

[Special No. 16.]

Concerning the collection of taxes in States lately in rebellion.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, June 21, 1865.

The attention of all officers of internal revenue is hereby called to the following regulations on the above subject, issued by the Secretary of the Treasury.

JOSEPH J. LEWIS, Commissioner.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, June 21, 1865.

Section 46 of the internal revenue act, approved June 30, 1864, provides that whenever the authority of the United States shall have been re-established in any State where the execution of the laws had previously been impossible, the provisions of the act shall be put in force in such State, with such modification of inapplicable regulations in regard to assessment, levy, time and manner of collection, as may be directed by the department.

Without waiving in any degree the rights of the government in respect to taxes that have heretofore accrued, or assuming to exonerate the tax-payer from his legal responsibility for such taxes, the department does not deem it advisable to insist at present upon their payment, so far as they were payable prior to the establishment of a collection district embracing the territory in which the tax-payer resides.

But assessors in the several collection districts recently established in the States lately in insurrection are directed to require returns, and to make assessments for the several classes of taxes for the appropriate legal period preceding the first regular day on which a tax becomes due after the establishment of the district; that is to say, in the several districts in question the proper tax will be assessed upon the income of the year 1864, inasmuch as the tax for that year is due upon the thirtieth day of June, subsequently to the establishment of the district. All persons found doing any business for which a license is required will be assessed for the proper license from the first day of the month in which the district is established.

Persons engaged in any business for which monthly or quarterly returns are required to be made will be assessed for the month or quarter for which returns should be made at the first return day after the establishment of the district; and the same principle will apply to those taxes which are payable at different periods. A manufacturer of tobacco, for instance, in a district established after the first and before the twentieth day of May, will be assessed upon his sales for the month of April.

When any manufactured articles are found in the hands of a purchaser, and it is shown to the satisfaction of the assessor that the goods were actually sold and passed out of the hands of the manufacturer before the commencement of the period for which he is properly taxable, the articles will not be subject to tax in the hands of such purchaser, unless transported beyond the limits of the States lately in insurrection.

The holder of any distilled spirits, manufactured tobacco, or other article which is liable to seizure on account of the absence of inspection marks, may present to the assessor the evidence that the articles in his hands, or, under the circumstances which obtain in the particular case, are not subject to tax, except as above stated; and if the assessor is satisfied, he will cause the packages to be so marked that they may be identified and sold without liability to seizure.

Whenever any collector shall have reason to believe that the holder of any goods on which the tax has not been paid intends to remove the same beyond the limits of the States lately in insurrection, and to evade the payment of the tax, he will seize the goods and take the necessary steps for their condemnation, unless the holder shall give bond, as hereinafter prescribed, for the transportation or exportation of the goods, or shall return the same to the assessor, and pay to the collector the amount of tax that shall be found due. In all cases in which a seizure shall be made under these instructions, the department, on being informed of such seizure, will consider the case, and extend such measure of relief as the facts shall justify.

In the States of Virginia, Tennessee, and Louisiana collection districts were some time since established, with such boundaries as to include territory in which it has but recently become possible to enforce the laws of the United States. In those districts the rule laid down above will be so modified as to require the assessment and collection of the first taxes which become due after the establishment of assessment divisions in the particular locality.

Whenever assessments are to be made, based upon transactions which may have been carried on in a depreciated currency, it will be proper for the assessor to ascertain the amount of the income, or value, or sales, or receipts, in lawful money of the United States, according to the best information which he can obtain as to the average value of such depreciated currency for the period covered by the assessment.

The duties upon cotton and spirits of turpentine are, by a special provision of the statute, made payable by the person in whose hands the articles are first found by the officers of internal revenue. With reference to those articles, therefore, the rule laid down will not apply, but assessments will be made wherever they are found.

Whenever any person holds, as a purchaser, any articles which, under the internal revenue laws, may be transported under bond, and desires to transport the same to any northern port or place, he may apply to the assessor to have the amount of tax ascertained and determined. The proper examination having been had, the assessor will certify the amount of duties thereon to the collector, and the collector will thereupon grant a permit for their removal, after the execution of a bond for their storage in bonded warehouse, such permit and bond being in the form required by the regulations for the establishment of bonded warehouses. On or before the tenth day of each month the assessor will transmit to the office of internal revenue a statement showing the amount of duties thus certified during the month preceding, and the collector will, on or before the same date, transmit a descriptive schedule of all bonds thus taken by him in the course of the preceding month.

When goods arrive in any nothern port under such transportation bond; or under a permit issued by a collector of customs, under the regulations of May 9, 1865, they will be received into the proper warehouse, established under the internal revenue laws, in the district into which the goods are brought, and the necessary certificates will be issued for the cancellation of the bond, in the same manner as if the goods were transported from another bonded warehouse. Whenever any person who is assessed for a license is found to have paid a license tax to a special agent, appointed under the regulations of the Treasury Department for commercial intercourse with insurrectionary districts, the collector will issue a license for the year ending May 1, 1866, and will collect only so much as may be due for the time intervening after the expiration of the license issued by the special agent.

The amount assessed and thus left uncollected will be abated when the proper claim is presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

H McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, September 14, 1865.

In the circular issued by this department on June 21, 1865, reference was made to the provision contained in section 46 of the internal revenue act of June 30, 1864, conferring upon the Secretary of the Treasury discretionary power in regard to the assessment, levy, time and manner of collection of taxes in the States lately in insurrection.

Under the authority given by that section, it was then stated that the department, without waiving, in any degree, the rights of the government in regard to taxes heretofore accruing, would not insist at present upon their payment, so far as they were payable prior to the establishment of a collection district embracing the territory in which the tax-payer resided.

It was further provided that manufactured articles found in the hands of a purchaser which were satisfactorily shown to have passed from the manufacturer before the establishment of the district should not be subject to tax unless transported beyond the limits of the States lately in insurrection.

No exception was then made in favor of articles which had remained in the possession of the manufacturers and thus become liable to the tax imposed by the existing law, the department preferring to test the practical workings of the regulations before exercising its power of modification in this important particular.

Representations since made relative to the hardship of this discrimination between manufacturer and purchaser have been corroborated by careful inquiry, and induce the conviction that a further exemption is justifiable and advisable.

It is found that considerable quantities of manufactured products have been retained by the manufacturer in his own hands, as the safest mode of investigating his property until the return of peace; that this retention was determined on and carried out without the knowledge, or opportunity of knowledge, of the law subjecting this property to heavy taxation on sale, and that a large part of the manufactures so retained, having been much deteriorated in value by lapse of time and want of proper attention, would not now sell for a sum equal to the tax.

A state of things so destructive to the usefulness of property, and to the prosperity of the manufacturing classes, is as adverse to the interests of the government as to those of the community.

For these reasons it is hereby ordered that all articles, in whatsoever hands found, which can be shown to the satisfaction of the assessor to have been manufactured before the establishment of the district, shall be held free from the present assessment or collection of tax unless transported beyond the limits of the States lately in insurrection.

Manufacturers of articles liable to seizure for want of inspection marks will present to the assessor evidence that such articles were manufactured prior to the establishment of the district, and the assessor, if satisfied, will cause such articles to be so marked as to be identified and sold without liability to seizure.

All articles transported beyond the limits of the States lately in insurrection will be subject to the tax due under the law in force at the time they were manufactured.

H. McCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

[Special, No. 31.]

Concerning the taxation of articles manufactured in the States lately in insurrection remaining in the possession of the manufacturers or producers.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, February 3, 1866.

The attention of all officers of internal revenue is called to the following order of the Secretary of the Treasury.

E. A. ROLLINS, Commissioner.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, February 2, 1866.

On September 14, 1865, an order was issued by this department, under the power conferred by section 46 of internal revenue act of June 30, 1864, directing that articles manufactured in the States lately in insurrection, prior to the establishment of collection districts therein, but retained in possession of the manufacturer until after such establishment, and thus made liable to the current rates of taxation, should be held free from present assessment until transported beyond the limits of the above-mentioned States, and should then be subjected only to the tax due at the time of their manufacture.

Abundant opportunity having now been given for the disposal of these manufactures, there is no good reason for continuing a privilege inconsistent with the general provisions of the law adverse to the interests of northern manufacturers, and susceptible, as experience has shown, of very great abuse.

It is therefore hereby ordered that on and after March 1, 1866, all southern manufactures in possession of the manufacturer shall be held subject to the present rates of duty, no exception being made in any case on account of the date of manufacture.

H. McCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, June 29, 1867.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 28th instant, inquiring whether information has been received from Charleston relative to an order of the President to General Saxton or any other assistant Commissioner of South Carolina directing the restoration of the property of William L. Trenholm, and to state, in reply, that no direct order was given by the President respecting this property. It was restored for the reason that Mr. Trenholm had received a special pardon.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. O. HOWARD, Major General, Commissioner.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, AND ABANDONED LANDS,
Washington, June 29, 1867.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit a list of property in the States lately in rebellion which has been reported as confiscated and subsequently returned to its former owners.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. O. HOWARD, Major General, Commissioner.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

Lands in southern States, reported as confiscated, restored to former owners.

VIRGINIA.

Owner.	Description of property.	Location.	How held.	By whom restored.	When restored.	Remarks.
French, James	50 acres and buildings	Elizabeth City county	Confiscated	S. O. No. 60, current series	April 6, 1866	Restored to Jos. R. Anderson.
Thornton, Wm. W	188 acres and buildings	Prince William county	do	S. O. 34, headq'rs ass't com Va., dated Feb. 21, 1866.	Feb. 21, 1866
Do	239 acres	do	do		do
Weedon, F. A	300 acres	do	do	S. O. No. 36, headq'rs ass't com., Va., Feb. 23, 1866.	Feb. 23, 1866
Causey, William	250 acres	Elizabeth City county	do	General Howard	March 24, 1866
Herbert, Joseph and Thomas	900 acres	do	do	do	do
Lattimer, Samuel	250 acres	do	do	do	do
Lewis, estate	96 acres	do	do	do	do
Mallory, C. K., and A. M. E. Wood.	240 acres	do	do	do	do
Moore, John	250 acres	do	do	do	do
Sinclair, Jeff	170 acres	do	do	do	do
Sinclair, Lafayette		do	do	do	do
West, Parker		do	do	do	do
Watts, Thomas		do	do	do	do
Watson, Henry		do	do	do	do
Whiting, Algenon		do	do	do	do
Brown, John	1 lot	do	do	do	do
Cary, John	do	do	do	do	do
Peake, sr., Thomas	2 lots	do	do	do	do
Phillips, Benj	1 lot	do	do	do	do
Schmeltz, F. A	do	do	do	do	do
Sinclair, sr., Jeff	do	do	do	do	do
Do	do	do	do	do	do
Vaughn, Dr	do	do	do	do	do
Cockerell, Benj	250 acres and house	Prince William county	do	S. O. No. 53, headq'rs ass't com., Va., Mar. 23, 1866.	March 23, 1866
Berkeley, Edmund	1,800 acres and buildings	do	do	S. O. No. 116, headq'rs ass't com., Va., July 30, 1866.	July 30, 1866
Beane, William	80 acres and buildings	Loudon county	do	General Howard	Sept. 15, 1865	Held by virtue circular No. 1, Land Division Bureau, &c.
Gregg, Nathan	150 acres and buildings	do	do	do	do
Rust, Armistead	400 acres and buildings	do	do	S. O. 55, headq'rs ass't com.	Sept. 14, 1865	Do.
Do	10 acres	do	do	S. O. 171, headq'rs ass't com.	Nov. 17, 1865	Do.
Fairfax, John W	150 acres	do	do	S. O. 187, headq'rs ass't com.	Dec. 18, 1866	Do.
Do	500 acres and 1 house	do	do	do	do	Do.
George, John	159 acres and buildings	do	do	do	Dec. 5, 1866	Do.
Head, George R	Lot and store	do	do	do	Dec. 22, 1866	Do.
Do	do	do	do	do	do	Do.
Hart, Joseph	75 acres and buildings	do	do	S. O. 183, headq'rs ass't com.	Dec. 10, 1866	Do.
McDaniels, Turner	26 acres and buildings	do	do	do	do	Do.
Manning, Jacob H	200 acres	do	do	S. O. 187, headq'rs ass't com.	Dec. 18, 1866	Do.

Rogers, Arthur L	10¼ acres	London county	Confiscated	S. O. 183, headq'rs ass't com.	Dec. 10, 1866	Held by virtue circular No. 1 Land Division Bureau, &c
Sugar, Joseph	10 acres and house	do	do	S. O. 187, headq'rs ass't com.	Dec. 18, 1866
Berkley, W. U	600 acres and house	do	do	S. O. 5, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 10, 1867	Do.
Head, George R	Lot and house	do	do	S. O. 10, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 21, 1867	Do.
Noland, Burr I		do	do	S. O. 11, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 22, 1867	Do.
Ranney, Sanford J	300 acres and house	do	do	S. O. 7, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 15, 1867	Do.
Berkeley, Chas. F	495 acres and buildings	do	do	S. O. 5, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 10, 1867	Do.
Dawson, Charles and A	298 acres and house	do	do	do	do	Do.
White, Caleb	Newton's wharf	Norfolk county	do	S. O. 14, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 28, 1867	Do.
King, John H	House and lot	Village of Occoquon	do	S. O. 13, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 26, 1867	Do.
Berkeley, Wm. U	House and 500 acres	Prince William county	do	S. O. 7, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 15, 1867	Do.
Smith, James	150 acres	Loudon county	do	S. O. 10, headq'rs ass't com	Jan. 21, 1867	Do.
Boland, John and Wm	562 acres and buildings	do	do	S. O. 28, ass't com., Va	Feb. 27, 1867	Do.
Boland, John	1,000 acres and buildings	do	do	do	do	Do.
Marslow, Richard	700 acres and house	do	do	S. O. 21, ass't com., Va	Feb. 12, 1867	Do.
Do		do	do	do	do	Do.
Massenberg, W	Lot and buildings	Elizabeth City county	do	S. O. 34, ass't com., Va	March 13, 1867	Do.
Adams, James		Loudon county	do	S. O. 26, ass't com., Va	March 2, 1867	Do.
Ish, Robert A	332½ acres	do	do	S. O. 34, ass't com., Va	March 13, 1867	Do.
Mason, Francis	600 acres	do	do	do	do	Do.
Do	1,600 acres	do	do	do	do	Do.
Do	400 acres	do	do	do	do	Do.
Do	1,300 acres	do	do	do	do	Do.
Booker, George	700 acres	Elizabeth City county	do	S. O. 24, ass't com., Va	Oct. 16, 1865	Do.
West, Parker	250 acres	do	do	S. O. 90, ass't com., Va	Oct. 30, 1865	Do.
Young, W. G	106 acres	Warwick county	do	S. O. 53, ass't com., Va	Sept. 12, 1865	Do.
Lee, Baker	950 acres and buildings	do	do	S. O. 99, ass't com., Va	Nov. 13, 1865	Do.
Johnson, Benj	130 acres	Prince William county	do	S. O. 109, ass't com., Va	Nov. 14, 1865	Do.
Do	816 acres	do	do	do	do	Do.
Smith, Frances L	500 acres	do	do	S. O. 122, ass't com., Va	Dec. 28, 1865	Do.
Lee, R. E	17 acres	"Arlington"	do	Special Ord. No. 21, par. 1	March 14, 1866	Relinquished to Mari Syphax, (colored.)
Corse, William D	87 acres	Fairfax county	do	Special Ord. No. 11, par. 1	Oct. 3, 1865
Landstreet, John	108 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 27, par. 1	April 7, 1866
Mase, William	80 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 15, par. 3	Oct. 13, 1865
Means, Lewis D	50 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 15, par. 2	do
Ball, George W	1,000 acres	Loudon county	do	Special Ord. No. 27, par. 1	Dec. 20, 1865
Bowie, Robert G	159 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 9	Oct. 4, 1865
Braden, Oscar	300 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 13	do
Chichester, Arthur L	400 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 13, par. 3	Oct. 9, 1865
Clark, Arch and Isaac	175 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 10	Oct. 4, 1865
Do	150 acres	do	do	do	do
Clagett, Henry E	House and lot	London co., (Leesburg)	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 7	do
Eldridge, John	400 acres	Loudon county	do	Special Ord. No. 13, par. 2	Oct. 9, 1865
Edwards, Thomas W	500 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 4, par. 1	Jan. 16, 1866
Harrison, Matthew	— acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 2	Oct. 4, 1865
Lynch, William B	House and lot	Loudon co., (Leesburg)	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 1	do
Do	do	do	do	do	do
Mott, A. R	do	do	do	Special Ord. No. 24, par. 1	March 21, 1866
Do	Store and lot	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 1	do
Do	House and lot	do	do	do	do
Orr, John M	5 acres	Loudon county	do	Special Ord. No. 13, par. 4	Oct. 9, 1865

Lands in southern States—Continued.

Owner.	Description of property.	Location.	How held.	By whom restored.	When restored.	Remarks.
Orr, John M.	House and lot	London co , (Leesburg).	Confiscated	Special Ord. No. 13, par. 4	Oct. 9, 1865
Do	do	do	do	do	do
Rust, George	75 acres	London county	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 3	Oct. 4, 1865
Do	309 acres	do	do	do	do
Do	250 acres	do	do	do	Oct. 9, 1865
Schrives, Daniel	do	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 12	Oct. 4, 1865
Tibbs, Charles T	House and lot	do	do	Special Ord. No. 19, par. 2	Nov. 3, 1865
Tibbs, Thomas F.	do	London co., (Waterford)	do	Special Ord. No. 32, par. 1	April 26, 1866
Thompson & McPaxson	150 acres	London county	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 8	Oct. 4, 1865
Thrift, Sanderson	do	do	do	Special Ord. No. 28, par. 1	Dec. 28, 1865
White, Joshua and Thomas	300 acres	do	do	Special Ord. No. 12, par. 1	Oct. 4, 1865
Cook, James M.	40 acres	Fairfax county	do	Special Ord. No. 62	Aug. 16, 1866
Do	100 acres	do	do	do	do

LOUISIANA.

Barthe, Leonce	Blacksmith shop	New Orleans	Confiscated	Assistant Comm'r Fullerton	No date	Libelled, condemned, and sold by U. S. marshal, La.
Bosworth, A. W.	House and lots	do	do	Commissioner Howard	Oct. 26, 1865	Condemned by U. S. court; special pardon.
Do	Personal	do	do	do	do	Condemned by U. S. court; special pardon.
Goodrich & Co	Buildings and lots	do	do	Assistant Comm'r Fullerton	Oct. 25, 1865	Libelled, condemned, and sold.
Merriman, A. W.	House and lot	do	do	Assistant Comm'r Conway	No date	Do.
Rosseau, L.	do	do	do	Assistant Comm'r Baird	Aug. 14, 1866	Libelled and condemned.
Grivot, Maurice	Houses and lots	do	do	do	Nov. 24, 1865	Libelled.
Holmes, C. E. and N.	do	do	do	Assistant Comm'r Fullerton	Oct. 24, 1865	Libelled.
Parham, John G.	do	do	do	Commissioner Howard	Oct. 21, 1865	Libelled; special pardon.
St. Paul, Henry	Vacant	do	do	Assistant Comm'r ———	No date	Libelled.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, June 28, 1867.

Miss ANNA SURRATT sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. In Massachusetts avenue, between 6th and 7th streets.

Q. State whether at any time the officers of the government have had in their possession letters written, or purporting to have been written, by J Wilkes Booth, and which had been at any time in your possession.

A. No, sir.

Q. Have officers in the War Department had in their possession letters which were afterwards delivered to you?

A. Yes; they had some of our business letters, which were taken from the house, and they gave these back to me.

Q. How many of those letters were there?

A. Indeed, I do not know. We had quantities of business letters there.

Q. When were they returned to you?

A. I cannot recollect. I cannot swear when I got them or who gave them to me. I do not know a soul by name up there.

Q. To whom did you apply for the purpose of getting those letters?

A. I do not recollect making any application for them. I think it was Mr. John Holahan, who was in the house with us, that went up for them

Q. Do we understand that he obtained them from the War Department?

A. I do not know. They were brought to the house. I may have applied for them myself, or I may not. I do not recollect at all.

Q. Did you take any interest in obtaining the restoration of those letters?

A. Yes. There was some paper signed by Lloyd, who had our place in the country, which it was necessary to get, and I think I went to the department one day to get it, and while there I think they delivered other letters to me in a satchel—some business letters.

Q. Were there not among those letters some written by J. Wilkes Booth?

A. No, indeed, sir.

Q. Or letters written by your mother to him?

A. No, sir. Every one of those letters was overlooked by Mr. Brophy and myself, and they were afterwards delivered to Mr. Belt, the State's attorney. I never saw in my life a letter written by J. Wilkes Booth.

Q. Did you know an officer in the War Department named Burnett?

A. I did.

Q. Do you not remember that he delivered those letters to you?

A. He was up there in the office. I think I went into his office first, and he sent me to another room where those things were.

Q. Did you know Mr. Burnett previously to the time when you applied for the letters?

A. Never to speak to him. He came to me one day in the court-room, and said that if I came to Secretary Stanton's office I could get the key of the house. Next day either he or Secretary Stanton said that if I came to the house the soldiers would deliver it up to me. Perhaps Mr. Brophy did it for me. I think Mr. Burnett's name was on the paper giving us permission to receive the key.

Q. Do you know whether Mr. Holahan made application to the President or any other person for the restoration of those letters?

A. No, indeed, I cannot say that. I can scarcely remember how the application was made, or anything about it; but I just remember getting the papers.

Q. You yourself never went to the President about them?

A. No, indeed; I never went to the President's house but once.

Q. Do you remember whether you gave a receipt for those letters?

A. I do not recollect. I remember giving General Hartranft a receipt for things belonging to mamma, which were sent to me from the penitentiary.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you recollect how many of those letters there were that were delivered to you?

A. No, sir; there were a great many of them. There were some old letters of my own among them.

Q. Had you any difficulty in getting those letters?

A. I do not recollect. I do not think I had much difficulty. I think they gave them to me the day I went up there. They were contained in a satchel.

Q. Was that a satchel that had been taken away from the house?

A. Yes, sir; the same satchel.

Q. Did anybody assort over those letters in your presence before giving them to you?

A. No, sir; I think not. There was a trunk belonging to Mr. Holahan which, I think, had some things in it.

Q. Were there any family letters taken away which they declined to deliver?

A. I cannot recollect what letters were in the house.

Q. Did you miss any?

A. I do not recollect. The business letters were left. Old letters that I may have received may have been gone, and I not notice them. It was only business papers that I was anxious to get.

Q. At the time the letters were delivered to you was Mr. Holahan with you?

A. It seems to me that there was a lady with me and a boy. Somebody brought the satchel for me in the car—a little boy, I think. I do not know who he was.

Q. Do you recollect what time these letters were delivered back to you?

A. No, indeed; I cannot tell what time it was.

Q. Was it any considerable length of time after the trial you have spoken of?

A. No, sir; it was after the trial. I did not leave the house till the fall. I think it was not long after mother's execution.

Q. Did you ever see the President to have any conversation with him?

A. President Johnson? No, indeed; I do not want to see him, either. They had some pieces of silver up there, too, which, I think, they gave up to me. I think Mr. Holahan brought some of the silver pieces home to me. They may have been in the trunk.

Q. Did the officers take a trunk away from the house?

A. They must have done so. This trunk belonged to Mr. Holahan, but it had some of my things in it.

Q. Was Mr. Holahan a resident in your family?

A. Yes. After I got the house back I did not know what to do with it. Mrs. Holahan came to me and said if she could do anything for me she would. They cleaned up the house and staid with me. This was the wife of Mr. Holahan.

Q. Do you recollect anything else in the satchel that was brought back?

A. Indeed I cannot swear to what was in the satchel.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, July 1, 1867.

HORACE GREELEY sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Have you at any time had a conversation or communication with the President or with any member of the Cabinet in reference to the trial or release of Jefferson Davis?

A. No, sir; not directly. I once talked with or rather heard a conversation with Mr. Speed about the case, but with no other member of the Cabinet.

Q. When did that conversation take place?

A. In the spring of 1866. I do not recollect the date. It was the day before you (Mr. Boutwell) offered a resolution about the case of Jefferson Davis in the House of Representatives.

Q. Who else was present at that conversation?

A. Mr. George Shea was the only third person present. He was counsel for Jefferson Davis.

Q. What was the nature of the conversation, so far as Mr. Speed took any part in it?

A. The object of Mr. Shea was to ascertain whether, if an application were made for bail, the government would resist it.

Q. What views on that subject did Mr. Speed present on that occasion?

A. None at all. He was very non-committal. I could not make out anything from his conversation. He did not know, or did not wish to say, what the views of the government were on the subject at all. I came away with no impression about what he would do. He said nothing that indicated whether he would or would not object.

Q. Did you ever have any communication with or information from the President in reference to the matter?

A. None in the world.

Q. Or with any other member of the Cabinet?

A. No, sir. Mr. Speed is the only member of the Cabinet by whom I remember having heard the name of Jefferson Davis mentioned.

Q. At the time of the release of Davis on bail in May last did you have any conversation with any member of the Cabinet?

A. No, sir. On my way to Richmond and back I did not stop at Washington.

Q. At the time you went to Richmond, had you any previous information as to what the policy of the government would be in reference to the releasing of Mr. Davis?

A. I had none. I had no information until we came into court as to what the government would do. I did not know whether the government was going to resist the application for bail or not.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. At whose suggestion or solicitation did you become bail for Jefferson Davis?

A. Mr George Shea's. He was a very old and intimate acquaintance and friend of mine.

Q. Had you no communication with any government officer soliciting you to become bail for Jefferson Davis?

A. No, sir; nor any intimation that it would be desirable.

Q. You had no communication upon the subject with the President or any of his officers?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you after you came here, or after you went to Richmond, solicited by any officer of the government to go bail for Jefferson Davis?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was Mr. Shea present at the time you signed the bond?

A. Yes.

Q. At Richmond?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Had you any communication with Jefferson Davis about going bail for him?

A. No, sir. I had never had any communication by letter or by word. I did not know him until I saw him in court.

Q. Did any one, after it was known that you proposed to go bail for Mr. Davis, apply to you not to do so, or write to you about it?

A. Well, sir, there was a hubbub about it at the time I was here, and Senator Wade and Senator Chandler talked with me about it. I think Senator Cresswell, of Maryland, was also present. I do not recollect any other person.

Q. On what ground did they advise you not to go bail for Jefferson Davis?

A. There was a conversation of half an hour between us on the subject. I cannot state definitely what particular reasons they urged. They thought it would be bad policy, and that it would have a bad influence.

Q. That it would have a bad effect on the republican party?

A. I believe so. That was the impression I had.

Q. Were there any other persons endeavoring to prevent your going bail for Jefferson Davis?

A. I do not recollect. There may have been one or two personal friends doing so, although it was not generally known that I intended to go bail.

Q. Did they put their objections on party grounds alone?

A. Generally.

Q. There was no principle involved in it?

A. I do not recollect. They made no impression on me other than that it would be injurious to the party.

Q. Did you tell them that it was a question of principle to bail Jefferson Davis, he having been imprisoned so long?

A. No, sir. In the first place, I was desirous to bring on the trial. The first year I thought we could compel the government to bring the prisoner to trial by a writ of habeas corpus. Finally, I thought the time for a trial, to any good purpose, had passed.

Q. Did you go bail for Jefferson Davis with a view of never having him tried?

A. No. I wished to have him tried, if the government should ever wish to try him.

Q. I understood you as saying that you thought the time for trying him to any good purpose had passed away?

A. That was my judgment.

Q. Is that your opinion now?

A. Yes; so far as I know the facts. If he had anything to do with assassinating President Lincoln, or poisoning or starving persons, I wish him to be tried. I do not know any facts that justify either charge.

Q. You know of no facts on the subject of his connection with the assassination of President Lincoln?

A. No, sir; none that would connect him with it.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, July 1, 1867.

STANLEY MATTHEWS sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. What is your residence, how long have you resided there, and what public positions have you held?

A. I reside in Glendale, Hamilton county, Ohio, and have done so for thirteen years past. I was district attorney for the southern district of Ohio, under Mr. Buchanan. I was colonel of volunteers in the army, from the spring of 1861 until the spring of 1863. I resigned that position to take a position on the bench of the superior court at Cincinnati.

Q. State whether you acted with the democratic party during the administration of Buchanan.

A. I did, except on the Kansas question.

Q. With what political party have you acted since the Kansas question?

A. With the republican party.

Q. State whether you were stationed, during any part of the time that you were in the military service, at Nashville; and if so, whether you there became acquainted with Andrew Johnson.

A. I was appointed provost marshal of Nashville by General Buell in February, 1862, and was on duty in that position till about the first of July in the same year. During that time I made the acquaintance of Andrew Johnson, who, during that time, was appointed military Governor of Tennessee.

Q. State whether you saw Andrew Johnson at Cincinnati in February, 1865; whether you had any interview with him, and what occurred.

A. I had an interview with Mr. Johnson in February, 1865, at the Burnett House, in Cincinnati, where he was stopping, on his way to Washington to be inaugurated as Vice-President. I called upon him, having been one of the electors for President and Vice-President, to pay my respects to him, and I had some conversation with him at that time on public affairs. The earlier part of the conversation had reference to some personal matters growing out of our relations when I was in Nashville as provost marshal. After they had been disposed of in conversation, I inquired as to the state of public feeling on political matters in Tennessee at that time. He remarked that very great changes had taken place since I had been there; that many of those who at first were the best Union men had turned to be the worst rebels, and that many of those who had originally been the worst rebels were now the best Union men. I expressed surprise and regret at what he said in reference to the matter. We were sitting near each other on the sofa. He then turned to me and said, "You and I were old democrats." I said, "Yes." He then said, "I will tell you what it is, if the country is ever to be saved, it is to be done through the old democratic party." I do not know whether I made any reply to that, or, if I did, what it was; and immediately afterwards I took my leave. That is the conversation.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. How did Mr. Lawrence know that the President had this conversation with you?

A. I do not know.

Q. Whom did you first tell of it?

A. I spoke of the conversation the same evening to one or two friends in Cincinnati, but to whom I do not recollect. I have a conjecture as to how the information came to the Committee. I repeated the conversation lately to Governor Dennison in Columbus, and shortly after that I received a letter from Mr Ashley inquiring about it. I have no reason to suppose that Governor Dennison communicated on the subject with Mr. Ashley, but have reason to suppose the contrary.

Q. Did you answer Mr. Ashley's letter?

A. I did.

Q. Did you give him the statement that you have now made?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are those the only times that you recollect having repeated this conversation?

A. I do not recall any other instance, although doubtless I have spoken of it oftener.

Q. Did it make a very strong impression on your mind at the time?

A. It did.

Q. I understood you to say you had considerable acquaintance with Mr. Johnson, at Nashville?

A. I was in the habit of meeting him often, officially and personally, in Nashville.

Q. Did the conversation with Mr. Johnson, in Cincinnati, change your opinion as to his political views?

A. It did not change my opinion of Mr. Johnson in any respect.

Q. After his statement to you at the Burnett House, you entertained the same opinion as to his political views that you did before?

A. I did.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What grounds had you previously had for reaching the conclusion which his conversation then communicated to you?

A. Simply my opinion of his past history and of his personal views in relation to himself—his desire for the Presidency, and my supposition as to the means which he expected to employ to succeed in his ambition.

Q. What facts had you knowledge of which led you to suppose that he was ambitious of the Presidency?

A. Nothing more than is furnished by his public history.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you vote the Lincoln and Johnson ticket?

A. I was one of the electors who met at Columbus and voted that ticket.

Q. How long was that after your first aquaintance with Mr. Johnson?

A. My personal acquaintance with him commenced at Nashville, in February, 1862.

Q. Was your entire acquaintance with him limited to the time you were in Nashville?

A. My entire personal acquaintance with him was limited to that period.

Q. You use the word "personal" as distinguished from the historical knowledge you had of him?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State what was his deportment or demeanor towards the disaffected rebel portion of the population of that district while he was military Governor of Tennessee. Did he show any partiality for that class of men, or did he seem to hold any of them in his confidence?

A. I think not, to my personal knowledge. On the contrary, in some instances, his conduct was what I considered severe and harsh.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, July 1, 1867.

JOHN MATHEWS sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Where do you reside?

A. I am residing at present in Rochester, New York.

Q. Did you know John Wilkes Booth?

A. I did.

Q. When did you last see him?

A. I saw him last on the night of the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, a few minutes before the occurrence; I saw him on the stage of the theatre; I was engaged that night in playing a part in the piece that was performed.

Q. When had you last seen him previously to that?

A. The same day, about three o'clock in the afternoon, on Pennsylvania avenue, near Willard's.

Q. Did you have any conversation with him at the last interview that night?
A. No, sir.
Q. Did you at the afternoon interview?
A. I did.
Q. What was the nature of the conversation?
A. I met him coming down the avenue on horseback; he stopped, and we spoke of the prisoners—Lee's officers, who had been brought in prisoners in a body, and had just passed by. Said I, "John, have you seen the prisoners?" "Yes, Johnny," said he, "I have." Then said he, placing his hand on his forehead, "Great God! I have no longer a country!" He then said to me—holding the reins of his horse in his left hand, and with his right crossed, holding mine—"Johnny, I wish to ask you a favor; will you do it for me?" I said, "Of course." Said he, "I have a letter which I wish you to deliver to the publishers of the National Intelligencer to-morrow morning, unless I see you in the mean time. I may leave town to-night, and it will not be much trouble for you to deliver that letter." I said, "Certainly, I will." At that moment General Grant passed by in an open carriage. Said I, "John, there goes General Grant; I understood he was coming to the theatre to-night with the President." He turned around hurriedly—looked very anxious—grasped my hand in a very nervous and excited manner, squeezed it, and said, "Good-bye; perhaps I will see you again." He galloped down the street, and that was the last I saw of him except to see him at a distance on the stage that night. It was nothing unusual for him to be on the stage, for he kept his horse or horses in a stable near the theatre, and he would often come in to get one of the boys to take care of his horse. That was the last time I saw him.
Q. Did you deliver the letter to the National Intelligencer?
A. No, sir.
Q. Have you it in your possession?
A. No, sir
Q. What did you do with it?
A. After the assassination, we all retired to the dressing rooms to disrobe ourselves of our professional apparel, and to attire for the street. Some persons going out at the side door were stopped, and it was said that nobody could leave the house—that we were all under arrest. The excitement was great I had a lot of clothing there which I wanted to take home, not knowing what the consequences might be. There had been shouts of "burn," and "hang," and "lynch," and people came in and said that a party had been formed in Willard's to come down and burn the house; and I verily believe that, but for the presence of Mr. Lincoln across the street, the house would have been burned. I took out my apparel, and got some of the colored people to carry it to my room. When taking off my coat the letter which Booth had given me dropped out of the pocket. I had forgotten all about it. I said, "Great God! there is the letter John gave me in the afternoon." It was in an envelope, sealed and stamped for the post office. I opened it, and glanced hastily over the letter. I saw it was a statement of what he was going to do. I read it over very hurriedly. It was written in a sort of patriotic strain, and was to this effect: That he had for a long time devoted his money, his time, and his energies to the accomplishment of an end; that a short time ago he was worth so much money—twenty or thirty thousand dollars, I think—all of which had been spent in furthering this enterprise; but that he had been baffled. It then went on: "The moment has at length arrived when my plans must be changed. The world may censure me for what I am about to do; but I am sure that posterity will justify me." Signed, "Men who love their country better than gold or life: J. W. Booth, ——Payne,——Atzerodt, and —— Herold." Those are the only names I can recollect. I have studied myself often to discover if the name of Surratt was not on it. The names were impressed on my memory by circumstances and coincidences. I had been in Alexandria a week or so before, and being very anxious to know what the great actor, poet, dramatist, and statesman, John Howard Payne, looked like, (the author of "Home, Sweet Home,") I there, for the first time in my life, saw a photograph of him, and bought it, and had it in my possession. I remembered Payne's name on that account. I remembered Atzerodt's name because it was written hurriedly, and I did not know whether the "z" was a "y" or "z." Herold's name I remembered because he spoke to me on the street that afternoon; he said, "How do you do, sir; this is Mr. Mathews, is it not?" I said, "Yes, sir; have I the pleasure of your acquaintance? If I ever had I forget you." Said he, "Do you recollect, a few weeks ago, a gentleman calling to see Mr Booth the last night he played at the theatre? You were passing in at the same time by the side door, and he asked you to see if Mr. Booth was there, and to tell him that a gentleman wished to see him about a horse." Said I, Yes." Said he, "I am the gentleman, and am a friend of Mr. Booth's." There was a little pause. Said, I, "Can I do anything for you? Are you living in the city?" "No," said he, "not exactly; I have lived here, but I am not living here at present." Said I, "Are you in business?" He said, "No; I am a druggist." Said I, "Can I be of any service to you? If you want a situation I will assist you among my acquaintances in that business to get you a situation." He said, "O, no, thank you; good afternoon." I remembered his name because he told me it.

Q. Did you make a copy of the letter?

A. No, sir. I am sorry I did not.

Q. What did you do with it?

A. I burned it up.

Q. How many times did you read it over?

A. Perhaps a couple of times. It was written on two sides of a sheet of letter paper. I thought to myself, "What shall I do with this letter? It could only convict him, and that has been done already, because the people in the house have recognized him. If this paper be found on me I will be compromised—no doubt lynched on the spot. If I take it to the newspaper office it will be known and I will be associated with the letter, and suspicions will grow out of it that can never be explained away, and I will be ruined." I therefore burned it. At the time of the trial at the Arsenal I saw that one of the editors of the National Intelligencer had been questioned regarding the letter, as Booth had stated in his diary that he left a letter for publication. I thought it my duty to go to that gentleman and excuse myself for not delivering the letter. I did so; told him how it came into my possession, and why I had not delivered it.

Q. State the name of the gentleman.

A. Mr. Coyle, the gentleman who was interrogated on the trial. I told him that the letter had been handed to me, and that I had been asked, as a favor, to deliver it, by John Wilkes Booth, who said it was not necessary to deliver it that night, but the next day; that I looked upon it as having reference to some business matter, some gold fluctuations, or oil speculation, or something of that kind, and that when I found out what it was I destroyed it. "And now," said I, "I have come to tell you that I have done so. I am very sorry for it, but how could I have acted differently?"

Q. In reference to the names that were signed, were they all in the same handwriting?

A. They were all in the same handwriting.

Q. Do you know Booth's handwriting?

A. I never saw him write, but I have seen his name on photographs of his own; and I am satisfied that was his handwriting, and have since seen an entire letter written by him; and am satisfied it was his handwriting.

Q. And that all the names appended to the letter were in his handwriting?

A. They were in the same handwriting.

By Mr. WILSON:

Q. When did you make the communication to Mr. Coyle?

A. After he was interrogated on the subject at the conspiracy trial.

Q. Was the trial still going on at the time?

A. I cannot say, indeed.

Q. How soon was it after he was examined as a witness?

A. I think it was some considerable time—perhaps after the trial, perhaps after the execution.

Q. Were you called as a witness on that trial?

A. No, sir.

Q. What did Mr. Coyle say when you made this communication to him?

A. He was as much astonished as I was. He said he was very sorry the letter had not been delivered. I told him that I was sorry myself

Q. Did you communicate the fact at that time to anybody else?

A. No, sir. After a while I consulted some acquaintances and asked them what they thought—whether I had acted wisely in the matter. They said that under the circumstances they did not see how I could have done otherwise. I am only sorry now that the letter was not delivered.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You say you do not recollect whether Surratt's name was to the paper or not?

A. No, sir. The only names impressed on my memory were those I have mentioned. Don't think it was.

Q. Were there other names to the paper besides those impressed in your memory?

A. I think not. At least I do not recollect any. If Surratt's name had been to it I think I would have recollected it, because it is an odd name.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you know Surratt?

A. I never saw him in my life.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. You have stated the contents of that letter. Do you mean to be understood as having stated fully and exactly what was written in that letter?

A. Yes, sir; the substance, without the exact words, but nearly those. The letter made an impression on my memory at the time.

Q. What is your profession?

A. I am an actor.

Q. You are accustomed to commit words to memory?

A. Yes, sir; I have to do so to a very inordinate degree, sometimes.

Q. Since the destruction of the letter, have you ever written out, from your memory, the contents of that letter?

A. I have frequently striven to do so. I have set down to do so, but I could not get the commencement of the letter—the starting of it.

Q. Have you ever repeated to other persons the contents of the letter, as your memory enabled you?

A. No, sir; unless I may have given some idea of its purport to Mr. Coyle.

Q. Do you recollect stating the contents of the letter to Mr. Ford, the manager of the theatre?

A. No, sir. It may be possible that Mr. Ford was present when I spoke of it to Mr. Coyle. On reflection I recollect I did speak of the contents to Mr. Ford.

Q. Did you, before the destruction of the letter, make known the fact that you had such a letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not consult anybody as to the expediency of destroying it?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Where did you first read the letter?

A. In my own room, as soon as I got to the house with my arms full of clothing.

Q. Immediately after you left the theatre?

A. Yes, sir. I was taking off my frock coat, which I had worn that afternoon, and the letter fell out.

Q. After you read it over what did you do with it?

A. I burned it up.

Q. At once?

A. At once.

Q. How many times did you say you read it?

A. I believe I read it twice; but being in a different handwriting from my own, of course I could not understand it so quickly.

Q. You were a little nervous at the time, I suppose?

A. Oh yes; it was a dreadful occasion.

Q. The reason was that you were afraid its being found upon you might implicate you?

A. Yes, sir; that was my only reason. For a few moments everybody in the back part of the theatre was virtually under arrest.

Q. Were you finally permitted to leave the theatre unmolested?

A. I saw in a few moments afterwards that the people were going out by the front door, and I went out that way.

Q. Was the declaration that you were all under arrest made by any person whom you knew?

A. No, sir.

Q. It was an exclamation of the crowd?

A. Some parties attempted to go out by the side door, and were stopped. They came back and said, "you are all under arrest, and cannot go out that way."

Q. Did you see Booth jump on the stage?

A. No, sir.

Q. You spoke of seeing him that afternoon; was it before the assassination?

A. Yes, sir, perhaps some ten or fifteen minutes.

Q. Where was he then?

A. He was at the back of the stage.

Q. Was he taking part in the play?

A. No, sir; he just dropped in, as he was accustomed to do.

Q. How did he get from there to the box where Mr. Lincoln was?

A. He must have gone out to the front. There was no other way of getting to the boxes from the stage.

Q. He must have gone by the way that Mr. Lincoln himself went to the box?

A. Yes; there was no other possible way for his getting there.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you hear any person in or about the theatre call out the time, or "ten o'clock," that night?

A. No, sir. I was on the stage.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Where were you at the time that Booth jumped on the stage?

A. I was on the stage, but not in view of the audience. I was immediately in the rear of the scene, which hid me from the view of the audience. I was playing the part of a lawyer who had been made drunk for the purpose of robbing him of certain papers, and was sitting behind the scene waiting to be discovered. I heard the pistol fired, and I waited a second or two. I recollected that I had never heard a pistol-shot used in the piece before; but as they were continually adding to that comedy jokes at the expense of Lord Dundreary, perpetrated by Asa Trenchard, I thought, "that is done for the purpose of frightening Dundreary." I waited for perhaps a quarter of a minute, which appears a long time on the stage, but there was no response. I did not hear Lord Dundreary shout "Murder," or anything of that kind. I waited a second or two more, when it occurred to me that somebody should be on the stage. At that moment I saw somebody pass by towards the back door. I walked down to the prompter's place, at the front entrance of the stage, and on looking out I saw a commotion among the audience. At that moment Mrs. Lincoln called, "some water—bring some water." And then somebody said, "the President is shot."

Q. You had no suspicion of what was to take place that night?

A. No, sir; no, sir.

Q. You had heard nothing of it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you mean to be understood that you did not tell Mr. Ford what was on the paper, or that you did not recollect?

A. It occurs to me that perhaps he was with Mr. Coyle at the time I spoke to him about the matter.

Q. Did you visit Mr. Ford at the Old Capitol prison?

A. Yes; but the subject was never mentioned there. I was acquainted with Colonel Wood, the keeper, and used to go to see him while Mr. Ford was there.

Q. Are you certain the subject was never mentioned there?

A. I am pretty certain. But it is possible that it may have been.

Q. To whom did you first disclose the fact of this letter; to a confidential friend?

A. To Mr. Coyle; and the more I think of the matter the more I think that Mr. Ford was present. I may have spoken to him of it at the Old Capitol. That is a question which has never occurred to me since, and which I have never thought of.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Were you acquainted intimately with Booth previous to that time?

A. Socially, I was.

Q. Do you recollect what sort of a horse Booth rode that afternoon?

A. It was not the horse that I was accustomed to see him ride. It was smaller than the one I used to see him ride.

Q. What was the color of the horse he rode that day?

A. It did not strike me that it was either black or white. It must have been some color between, either bay or gray, but I do not know.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you know Booth's horses?

A. Only one, which he was accustomed to ride, a large sorrel or bay horse. He had often promised me to let me ride one of his horses whenever I had time to go out, but I never availed myself of the offer.

Q. In repeating what was in the letter, you have given all of it, so far as you recollect?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you ever been sworn before in reference to the subject?

A. I have been several times before military gentlemen at the War Department, but I have not been examined on any trial, either civil or military. I believe it was before Colonel Burnett that I was examined. It was merely to inquire if I had known Booth, and if he had ever said anything to me about this matter.

Q. Did Colonel Burnett write down what you said?

A. I do not know. He was sitting at his desk. The matter of the letter was never alluded to.

Q. Were you ever examined with reference to this matter before?

A. No, sir, never; and I was not aware that anybody except Mr Coyle, Mr. Ford, a lawyer whose opinion I asked in the matter, and a confidential friend, knew anything about it. I had never spoken of it to anybody else, because it would acquire me a sort of cheap notoriety which I was not at all anxious to have.

Q. The examination to which you refer had relation to Booth and not to this matter?

A. Precisely so.

Q. Booth made no other communication to you than that which you have related?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you related all he said to you at the time he gave you the letter?

A. Yes, sir, everything; all that was said.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did his appearance at that time excite your surprise?

A. No, sir. He was nervous. Said I, "John, you are nervous; what is the matter?" Said he, "Nothing, Johnny, nothing, nothing." Then I asked him if he had seen the rebel prisoners, and the conversation continued as I have given it.

WASHINGTON, Monday, July 1, 1867.

JULIUS EDMOND DOETSH sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What is your residence and occupation?

A. I reside at Danville, Virginia. By profession I am a physician. I am at present general inspector under the internal revenue law.

Q. Have your duties as inspector given you knowledge of the distilling business in your district?

A. Yes; very much so. My commission is dated 9th April, 1867. Since that time I have made careful analysis of the distilling business in my district, and I am convinced that since the surrender there has been illegal distillation carried on to a very large extent—amounting in Patrick and Henry counties to several hundred thousand gallons. There never has been an officer there whose sole duty it was to counteract these frauds. Certainly there never was a charge brought against the perpetrators. The first time they were made public was when I seized a few distilleries some months ago. It would not be very safe for me to go farther, as they have already threatened to kill me; but I do not mind such threats. It took me a long time before I could get a guide. At length I got a very respectable man for a guide. Sometimes I had to lie in a house for a day or a day and a half, to find out where the liquor was stored. They sent several messages to this young man, and finally he will have to leave the country. There was a sort of conspiracy against myself, by those whose property was seized, to do me and my guide some harm. Some merchants at Cascade, 14 or 15 miles from Danville, whose contraband liquor had been seized, intended, I believe, to get me into a cellar containing some feet of water, and to leave me there. I am promised evidence as to that. One man, who was supposed by these parties to have given some information as to the whereabouts of liquor, was very badly beaten a short time after my departure.

Q. Have there been objections made by the people to pay the tax on distilled liquor?

A. That objection seems almost universal.

Q. Did the people give any reason why they should not pay the tax on distilled spirits?

A. Yes.

Q. What reasons did they give?

(Question objected to by Mr. Eldridge, on the ground that it had no bearing on the subject of the Committee's investigation. Objection overruled.)

A. It struck me that the universal remark made by people whose property was seized, and by others, was, that Virginia being a Territory, it was great impudence for any officer of the government to come there to collect tax, and that President Johnson had counselled the people of the South not to pay taxes—partly in his proclamations, and partly by speaking. In some instances I questioned them as to why they did not come to take distillers' licenses and have proper assessments made; and the reply was, that they did not think, so long as Virginia was a Territory, that they had anything of the kind to do. But when I told them that the people in the Territories had to do the same thing, they certainly at once saw the fallacy of their philosophy. I believe that the press may or would disseminate similar views in that district.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You say that the people there object to paying taxes because Virginia was not a State, but a Territory?

A. I do not say they object. I asked them to give me the sense of their not having come in and taken out licenses, and paid taxes on the distilled spirits, and the reply was, that as the State was a Territory, they believed they should not pay any taxes, and that even the President had counselled them not to do so.

Q. Did they tell you that the President called their State a Territory?

A. Yes. One young man, who could express himself very well, wanted to draw me out in my opinions, and he expressed these views. I told the man who acted as guide for me to pay particular attention to the matter, because it seemed to me like a fixed doctrine.

Q. Did they find out from the President's public speeches that he considered Virginia a Territory?

A. I should think so. I do not know where they derived their knowledge from.

Q. Did they say they got it from the President's speeches?

A. In the common parlance, yes. The people did not express themselves like lawyers.

Q. But, in common parlance, they said they got it from the President's speeches?

A. Yes; and they understood that to be the President's opinion.

Q. Who told you to come before this Committee as a witness?

A. I received a telegraphic despatch from the Committee directing me to come.

Q. The persons who made those threats against you were connected with distilleries, were they not?

A. Not all of them. Some of them were. They were all concerned indirectly in being able to buy liquor cheap.

Q. They were the liquor men?

A. Yes; they were almost all interested. But it is impossible to get information there from white persons. They would all willingly help to injure the government by cheating the revenue, and not paying taxes.

Q. Have you talked with anybody who so expressed himself?

A. No; but that is my general impression. From my knowledge of human nature, as a physician—having been a long time in European hospitals— I form impressions rather quicker than people generally do.

Q. Have you formed this opinion as a physician?

A. I should think that profession would be some help to me in reasoning quicker, and making an analysis of things in general.

Q. Have you applied your professional knowledge to this work?

A. Not entirely; but knowledge certainly increases the capacity of judging.

Q. Did you doctor the young fellow you spoke of?

A. I do not practice my profession now.

Q. Is your present business more profitable than the exercise of your profession?

A. No. I have not made more than two dollars and a half since I got my office as general inspector. It is probable that in those cases where I have seized the property, I may get the usual percentage. The reason I gave up the practice of medicine is, that I was known in Virginia as a Union man, and what they call a radical, and that, as such, it is impossible to live there by any profession which is dependent on public favor.

Q. What countryman are you?

A. I am a Prussian.

Q. How long have you been in Virginia?

A. Eight years. I practiced medicine in Richmond six and a half years.

Q. What is the office you hold?

A. Revenue inspector.

Q. Who got you that appointment?

A. I got it through the influence of Colonel Corse, now captain of the 45th infantry, and Mr. James Wood, assessor of internal revenue.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 2, 1867.

SIR: Your letter applying, on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, for a copy of "the order of 1865 suspending the collection of direct taxes," has been received.

As there was no order in that year suspending collections, you are understood to refer to the suspension of sales of property on which the direct tax had not been paid.

The order for that purpose was made through the internal revenue office, by means of a circular letter addressed to the different tax commissioners, of which a copy is herewith enclosed.

Respectfully, yours,

H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Chairman pro tem. House Judiciary Committee.

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE,
Washington, May 17, 1865.

GENTLEMEN: By direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, all sales of lands for taxes in insurrectionary districts are postponed till further orders.

Your board will proceed, however, with the assessment and collection of taxes as if this order had not been made, except that payment is not to be enforced by sale.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) JOSEPH J. LEWIS,
Commissioner.

JNO. HAWXHURST,
GILLET F. WATSON, and
A. LAWRENCE FOSTER, Esqr's, Direct Tax Commissioners, Norfolk, Va.

Similar letters were sent to John B. Rodgers, D. S. Smith, and E. P. Ferry, esq's, direct tax commissioners, Nashville, Tennessee; Wm. Henry Brisbane, W. E. Wording, and D. N. Cooley, esq's, direct tax commissioners, Beaufort, South Carolina; Hullinge Cowperthwait, E. H. Vance, and D. P. Tyler, esq's, direct tax commissioners, Little Rock, Arkansas; E. M. Randall and George W. Ames, esq's, direct tax commissioners, New Orleans, Louisiana; John R. French and Hiram Potter, jr., esq's, direct tax commissioners, Newbern, North Carolina; L. D. Stickney, Wm. Alsop, and Austin Smith, esq's, direct tax commissioners, Fernandina, Florida.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Tuesday, July 2, 1867.

JAMES SPEED, of Louisville, Kentucky, sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Were you Attorney General during a portion of Mr. Johnson's administration?

A. I was, from the time he came into office until July, 1866.

Q. During your period of office, did you at any time consider the question of the power of the President or of the heads of departments to appoint men to office who could not take and subscribe the oath of office prescribed by the statute of 1862, known as the test oath?

A. Yes, sir. I do not recollect having given any official opinion on the subject. I have had the records examined and could find no trace of an official opinion there. I recollect, however, that the subject was discussed as early as, and before, the 30th of May, 1865. Immediately after the collapse of the rebellion, the administration desired very earnestly to establish the various departments of the government in the seceded States. The Judiciary department was under my control. I was very anxious to send judges, marshals, and the appropriate officers of that department to the South. I find that on the 30th of May, 1865, Mr. Mason was commissioned as district attorney, and Mr. Dick was commissioned as district judge, of North Carolina. On or prior to the day that those commissions were made out, the subject of taking the test oath had been discussed in the Cabinet. There was very little discussion of it. Some of us were of the opinion that probably persons could be inducted into office and made de facto officers without taking the test oath. Under that opinion, not well considered, those commissions were issued. After they were issued I and other members of the Cabinet (Mr. Stanton more particularly) examined carefully the question, and came to the conclusion that no persons could be inducted into office down there without taking the test oath. Mr. Dick and Mr. Mason had gone home. I wrote to them to that effect, and they returned their commissions, not being able to take the test oath. From that time no persons were commissioned in that department who could not take the test oath.

Q. You mean in the department of the Attorney General?

A. Yes; those were the only two cases that I recollect where commissions were issued. That decided the matter for that department. Afterwards G. W. Brooks was commissioned district judge of North Carolina, and D. H. Starbuck district attorney, they being able to take the test oath. They were commissioned on the 19th of August, 1865.

Q. You said that the subject was considered in Cabinet some time previous to May 30, 1865; was it ever afterwards considered in the Cabinet?

A. I am very sure that it was, because I am sure that I advised Mr. Dick and Mr. Mason that, as they could not take the oath, they could not be inducted into office; and I am very sure that it was considered in the Cabinet. I think that Mr. Stanton and myself examined the matter carefully and earnestly.

Q. When the new appointments were made out for the district judge and district attorney of North Carolina, was the attention of the President called to the reason why the previously appointed officers had not qualified under their commissions?

A. I am satisfied that it was, but I cannot give the occasion and time. I am satisfied that, within a very few days after those commissions were issued, it was decided that they would have to return them.

Q. Have you any specific recollection whether the fact of that decision was made known to the President?

A. I have no specific recollection of the occasion. My recollection is very distinct to this effect—that when the matter was first brought before the Cabinet Mr. Stanton, who is a bright lawyer, aided me in looking into the matter, and we concurred in the notion that possibly persons might be inducted into office without taking the test oath. The matter was laid over, and we afterwards considered it more carefully, and both of us came to the conclusion most decidedly that it could not be done. Whether Mr. Stanton was at the second meeting of the Cabinet when the decided opinion was given I cannot say; but at the second meeting of the Cabinet a very decided opinion was given by me. My impression is that I did not write out any opinion, but that I talked from minutes which I held in my hand in relation to the matter.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Who were the officers whom you specially named?

A. The district judge and district attorney for the State of North Carolina. It may be that other appointments were made, but the commissions not issued, while I was thus suspended in opinion as to whether or not the test oath was absolutely necessary; but I recollect none others, and on searching the records the clerk could find no others. I recollect those cases independently of the records.

Q. In reference to the Cabinet meeting at which you gave an opinion adverse to commissioning those gentlemen, do you speak from your recollection of such meeting?

A. Altogether from recollection. I kept no diary or anything of that sort.

Q. Do you recollect the specific meeting?

A. I do recollect that the subject was brought up twice before the Cabinet. I recollect distinctly its being brought up for the first time prior to the date of those commissions, and our halting about it; and I recollect that afterwards, and after much consideration, the question was brought up again, and a very decided opinion given. I recollect that very well.

Q. What was the special subject discussed at that time? Was it in reference to those officers of whom you spoke?

A. No, sir; it was not in reference to them. It was in reference to inducting into office persons who could not take the test oath. The gentlemen of whom I spoke were, in character, learning, and everything, eminently qualified for the positions, and I desired very much to give them to them if they could have complied with the requirements of law.

Q. What members of the Cabinet were present at that meeting?

A. It would be impossible for me to say. Mr. Seward was not there, of course, because he was then wounded. I do not recollect whether Mr. Harlan had taken the place of Mr. Usher. I cannot say who was there.

Q. Can you give about the dates of those meetings?

A. No nearer than I have given them. The first was prior to the 29th of May, 1865; the second was after that time.

Q. About how long?

A. I cannot say.

Q. You have some idea whether it was days, weeks, or months?

A. It would be a mere guess. I was so overwhelmed with business that I cannot say. Nor is anything to be inferred from the length of time between the 29th of May and the 19th of August, for it took us a long while to hunt up competent persons down there who could take the oath. We were very solicitous to give the offices to people who resided in the State, and the offices were held open for that purpose.

Q. Was there a decision of the Cabinet on the question at the second meeting?

A. I do not recollect that any formal vote was taken. My impression is, that the whole thing was made to turn on my opinion and Mr. Stanton's. Mr. Stanton aided me. I only remember that the opinion was given, and I do not think that any question was made as to its being right or not.

Q. Was Mr. Stanton present at that Cabinet meeting?

A. I cannot be certain of that. I know perfectly well that Mr. Stanton was present the first time the subject was mooted, and I know that Mr. Stanton and myself conferred about the matter. I took advantage of his being so bright a lawyer, and our personal relations were very good. I was new to that sort of business, and often consulted Mr. Stanton on law questions.

Q. Can you name any member of the Cabinet besides yourself who was present?

A. I am pretty certain that Mr. Welles was there, and that Mr. Dennison was there, and I am very certain that Mr. McCulloch was there, because the question was one of greatly more interest in his department than in any other department. I recollect that the opinion startled him, as to the trouble which it would cause him in the management of his office. I further recollect that the opinion which we had previously given was a great relief to him in the management of his office, he having more appointees down there than any other department had, and the interests of the revenue requiring him to act more instantly. The first intimation was a matter of relief to him, and I recollect that the last was a matter of great disappointment to him.

Q. Were any appointments made in the Treasury or any other department after this opinion was given of persons who could not take the oath?

A. I know nothing at all of the appointments in the Treasury. I only know as to my own department.

Q. Was this last meeting before or after the 19th of August?

A. It was before the 19th of August. The only record I could find would be my letters to Mr. Dick and Mr. Mason, and I am not certain that I wrote to them. I saw one or both of them when they were here the first time, and I think that one or both of them were here afterwards. Whether I wrote to them, or whether on their second visit I communicated the fact, I cannot say.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You spoke of the conclusion to which you came that these men could not be inducted into office; what do you mean by inducting them into office?

A. Our first impression was, that by their taking simply what was called the constitutional oath they might be inducted into office, and the matter would lie over for Congress to say whether they could be confirmed or not; that they would be de facto officers by taking the constitutional oath. That was our first impression.

Q. Did you change your opinion in that regard?

A. Yes; we believed that we could not put them in office, and that their official proceedings without taking the test oath would not be valid.

Q. What would have prevented the President issuing those commissions?

A. I did not say that the President could not issue the commissions; but my opinion was that the officers would not be de facto officers in any sense unless they took the oath.

Q. That was a matter with them?

A. Yes; that was a matter with the appointees. If they could and did take the oath their official acts would be binding, even though they might have committed perjury. But I came to the conclusion that unless they took the oath their whole proceedings would be illegal.

Q. Did you come to the conclusion that there would be any illegality in the President issuing his commissions to those men?

A. I do not recollect that that question was considered.

Q. What is your opinion about it now?

A. I have not examined the question.

Q. Was not that involved in the enquiry?

A. Not merely about the commissions. The point I looked to most anxiously was, whether the acts of the officers themselves would be binding; whether the district judge could hold court and his acts be valid without his taking the test oath, and I came to the conclusion that they would not be.

Q. You did not come to the conclusion that the issuing of the commission would be in itself an illegal act?

A. I do not recollect that I considered that question.

Q. Were these two commissions which you issued, issued by the special direction of the President, or by any person's direction?

A. I cannot recollect that. I recollect very distinctly that I thought both gentlemen eminently qualified for the positions.

Q. You knew of no direction of the President in reference to them?

A. No, sir.

Q. How were commissions issued from your department to appointees?

A. Generally the appointees were selected by myself, and by a note to the President were commissioned by him. Very frequently, however, and more particularly during the latter part of the time I was in office, they came with a personal direction from the President, and I appointed very few myself.

Q. When did you enter upon the duties of your office?

A. I cannot recollect the date exactly. Mr. Lincoln telegraphed my appointment in cipher to Louisville in the latter part of November, 1864. I got to Washington the morning of the day that Congress met, on the first Monday of December, 1864. I saw the President, and told him I would accept the office, but would not go into office until I had been passed upon by the Senate. I therefore remained in Washington until my nomination was confirmed by the Senate, and then I took the oath of office. The exact day I cannot state. I only know that I was appointed on one of the last days in November, and that Congress not being then in session, I was not inducted into office until I was confirmed by the Senate some time in December.

Q. You remained in office until what time?

A. Until some time in the latter part of July, 1866.

Q. Up to what period of time did you make the appointments in your department yourself, as a general thing?

A. I think it was some time in March or April, 1866, that the President commenced making appointments. I had made them myself from the time President Johnson went into office until March or April, 1866. He interfered with my appointments very much less than Mr. Lincoln had done during his lifetime. He left the whole department to my management. I do not recollect that President Johnson interfered with any of my appointments, except one, until some time early in 1866. After the death of Mr. Lincoln and the resignation of the gentleman who had been marshal of the District of Columbia, I sent in a nomination for that office, and the President sent down another person's name. I did not know at the time the relations existing between the marshal of the District of Columbia and the President, else I would not have made the nomination. I did not know that the relations of the marshal of the District with the President were of so intimate and personal a character as I found them afterwards to be, and I found I had been wrong in not advising with the President. I had treated that office as I had treated other offices, but the President's person is, in the contemplation of the law, in charge of the marshal of this District, a fact which I did not know at the time. I thought I could appoint a marshal for this District the same as I could for any other district.

Q. Did the President ever direct you to appoint any rebel to office who could not take the test oath?

A. He never did.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. I call your attention to a paper entitled Circular No. 13, dated "War Department, Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands, Washington, July 28, 1865," found on page 126 of the printed testimony of this Committee, and I ask you whether that paper was ever submitted to you by the President, in writing or in print, for your opinion upon it?

A. The records of the office do not show that I was ever consulted or gave any opinion upon this paper, nor do I believe that such was the case.

Q. I will call your attention now to Circular No. 15, dated September 11, 1865, the fourth heading of which is in these words: "Land will not be regarded as confiscated until it has been condemned and sold by decree of the United States court for the district in which the property is found, and the title thereto vested in the United States." I ask you whether the subject of that statement was ever submitted to you by the President for an opinion as to whether that was law or not?

A. I do not recollect that the subject was ever submitted to me by the President. In the management of my department I had, of course, to consider it, and I have no doubt but that the letters on file, written by me to the various district attorneys, will show what my opinion was on that subject. I cannot state now what these letters contain, but my general impression is, that after a judgment of condemnation by a court, I regarded property as being withdrawn from the Executive control, and as being property in the possession and control of the court from that day forth; not depending upon its sale, but depending upon the judgment of the court.

Q. Have you any recollection of having recommended, at any time, the introduction into this article four, of the words "and sold," or anything equivalent thereto?

A. I have no recollection about it one way or the other, and what I have just said now in reference to my correspondence is a mere guess.

Q. Can you examine the letters on file and ascertain the facts and inform the Committee?

A. I suppose I can, and will do so.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Suppose the decree of the court to require a sale of the lands; do you think that the title of the United States vests without such sale?

A. No; I do not think that the title vests without sale, but think the property is withdrawn from the control of the Executive after the decree of the court.

Q. Before the title of the United States vests, or before any title adverse to the claimant actually vests, should there not be a sale?

A. That is a legal opinion which I would have to give right off now; and my own notion on that subject is, that if you were to apply to the district judge after the condemnation of property, and after the judgment, it would be a matter of discretion with him whether he would dismiss the proceedings or not.

Q. What is your opinion as to whether the title of the original claimant is divested by anything short of sale, if the decree itself requires sale?

A. Certainly it is not. The title is not divested except by sale. I answer generally that where property is seized by the government, it cannot be divested according to general rules except by judicial sale; but I answer further, that after the property is impounded and under the control of the court, and after the court has condemned it, then my general impression is that the court alone can dispose of that property. I answer that generally.

Q. Suppose that the condemnation is based upon the character of the party, and that the owner is pardoned?

A. Then the pardon would have to be pleaded in court, and it would be a judicial question as to what the court would do with the property.

Q. Is not the subject liable to be affected by the action of the Executive in the way of pardon, and the proceedings interrupted?

A. Of course, they might be interrupted by a pardon; but still it is a judicial question. The Executive may, before judgment is pronounced, direct the proceedings to be dismissed; but after condemnation by the court, then the property is regarded as in the custody and under the peculiar control of the court, and the Executive has no control over it without leave of the court.

Q. Your answer was that it passed beyond the control of the Executive?

A. Yes.

Q. It has not passed into such a state as that it cannot be affected by the acts of the Executive?

A. In some cases it cannot. If the pardon itself covered the offence, it would be a judicial question whether, under that pardon, the court would or would not restore the property; but the property would be restored after condemnation on the order of the court predicated on the pardon or on something else. It would not be restored by the mere order of the Executive. The party would not get his property directly because the Executive said he should get it back, but he would get it back upon the order of the court.

Q. That order of the court might be based upon the pardon or upon the order of the Executive?

A. Of course, it might.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you mean to say that it might be based upon the order of the Executive?

A. The order of the Executive would be considered by the court. I do not mean to say that the court would be controlled by it. The court might refuse to be controlled by it.

Q. I call your attention to circular No. 15, and ask whether the President ever requested your opinion about it?

A. I do not recollect that he ever did.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Was the opinion which you now express on that point entertained by you at that time?

A. That I cannot recollect. I suppose that the letters in the office will show what my opinion was on the subject at that time, but I am not very certain that I will find letters there.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Would you, as at present advised, have recommended the insertion of these words, "and sold"? Would you regard that as proper under the law?

A. I cannot undertake to give an opinion off-hand upon a particular statute. I have spoken in the most general terms of my opinion about the law in confiscation cases. I would rather decline giving an opinion just here. I can say that the control of the President over prize cases and over property proceeded against, and all that sort of thing, was, of course, a matter of anxious consideration by me all the time I was in office. As the cases arose I had to dispose of them. I have answered here only my general opinion that, in a prize case, where property is taken by a United States vessel, the President can order its restoration while it is in the hands of a military or naval officer; but that after it gets into the possession of the court, after there has been an adjudication and condemnation, then it is in the possession of the court, and it is the province of the judicial department to dispose of that property, and it is not under the direct control of the Executive. That, I think, was my opinion on looking into the law. I give it now as an off-hand opinion.

Q. Is it not a well-settled rule that the judgment and condemnation of a prize court operates as a divestiture of the title on the part of the original owner?

A. I will not answer that question. I only answer now in a general sort of a way that, if the court has condemned property, it is irregular for the Executive to take it out, except on the leave and under the opinion of the court.

Q. I ask you in that connection whether the matter of sale is not a mere question of convenience?

A. I would rather not answer those questions. I have answered them in a general sort of way, but I will not go into a law argument here about them.

Q. As to circular No. 15, would you have recommended the insertion of the words "and sold" in view of the second clause, which recites the act of Congress in its terms—that the bureau has charge of such tracts of land as have been abandoned, or to which the United States have acquired title by confiscation or sale—thus distinguishing between the two?

A. That would involve me in a careful investigation of the statute itself. When I came here I was brought into contact with a class of statutes that I had had nothing to do with, and I had to consider them anxiously while I was here. Since I have been away from here they have passed from my mind, and I cannot recollect even the subject of them.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. You do not state that this order was not submitted to you by the President?

A. No, sir; I do not. My impression is that it was not. I would not answer whether it was or was not.

Q. Is your recollection clear and distinct about the consultations and occurrences while you were here?

A. I have an impression that the questions from General Howard's department to me while I was here came to me rather awkwardly. They did not come from the President or directly from the Secretary of War, as they should have come, but they came on the application of General Howard himself, and I responded by letter to the Secretary of War. I think the books in the office will show that there was that awkwardness in the thing.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. The question is whether the President ever submitted that point to you as to the legality of restoring property that had been condemned?

A. I would answer, as I have answered before, that my impression is he did not, but he may have done it.

By Mr WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you say whether or not you did advise the insertion of those words "and sold?"

A. I do not recollect whether I did advise it.

Q. Do you think you would have done so?

A. That involves a careful consideration of the statute itself.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did General Howard ever consult you in relation to it?

A. I would say, in relation to him, as in relation to the President, that I cannot recollect. I had various conversations with General Howard, but whether on this subject or not I cannot say.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Have you any recollection of the case of the condemnation and sale of the property of Pierre Soulé, in New Orleans?

A. I have no recollection about it. The books in the office will show every thing connected with it. I do not recollect anything about it, except Mr. Soulé's coming here, and his application for a pardon. When I left the office I do not think there were three questions on my table unanswered. I kept close up with the business.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. If General Howard had referred that matter to you, you would have answered to the Secretary of War?

A. Inferior officers very frequently sent me questions in that way. If they were clearly stated, and if I thought them important, I answered them, but very frequently I sent them back. If General Howard's question on the subject of Pierré Soule's property was not answered, I can give no reason for it. I believe there was but one solitary question came to me that I felt reluctant about answering. I will take a memorandum of it and see whether there is anything in the office about it.

By Mr WILLIAMS:

Q. Attorney General Stanbery, in his examination, was asked the question by me, whether, in any case, he had instituted proceedings, civil or criminal, in personam or in rem, for the purpose of carrying into execution the laws passed by Congress in connection with the rebellion. He replied that he had not, and assigned as a reason that it was the policy of the office not to initiate proceedings, but, on the other hand, to suspend such as had been commenced, stating that he inherited that policy.

A. I think he is right in that, if I understand you. Immediately after the collapse of the rebellion, and when the people of the South were coming up here in great distress, I think that I favored and pressed, and that the administration consented to it, the suspension for the time of all proceedings even in cases pending, and that they stood suspended for some time. I think that afterwards we took a different sheer, and that a letter was addressed by me to the district attorneys generally, telling them to go on in cases where there was obvious contumacy; but that, where the people were really penitent, and wanted to come back and be good citizens again, the object of the government was not to persecute and oppress them, but to leave them free to use their property for the good of themselves and all around them. I think that was the policy of the office. If Mr. Stanbery said that he inherited the policy, I think he was right in saying so.

Q. Was that with the consent of the Executive?

A. Yes, sir. Clemency, and not persecution, was, I think, the policy of the government.

By Mr ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was that your policy?

A. It was mine as decidedly as it was anybody else's, and I think it was the policy of every member of the administration, as far as I knew.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What steps, if any, were taken during your administration to bring Jeff. Davis to trial?

A. Immediately after the capture of Jefferson Davis, the President and the Cabinet, but the President more particularly, were anxious for a speedy and prompt trial of Jefferson Davis. At that time a district court was holden at Norfolk, where Judge Underwood was the judge. There was no circuit judge down there. The matter of prosecuting Jefferson Davis was placed under my charge more particulary, and I was placed under instructions from the President to bring him to trial as speedily as I thought it could be done. The trial was first postponed until after developments should be made on the trial of the conspirators in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln. After that, I think I employed counsel, with the assent of the administration, to aid in the prosecution of Jefferson Davis; and we all came to the conclusion that, unless a judge of the Supreme Court of the United States should preside, he ought not to be tried; that the case itself was one in which a judge of the Supreme Court should preside. I had great disinclination to try such a case before Judge Underwood. I would not consent to it at all. The Chief Justice declined to go there because the country was not so quiet as that the law and not military rule prevailed. So long as I was in office I opposed the trial of Jefferson Davis before Judge Underwood, and as Chief Justice Chase could not or would not go there, the trial would not come off. The question was made about trying Jefferson Davis in Kentucky. That I opposed, because it would have to be a case of constructive presence in Kentucky. The question was mooted also as to trying him in Pennsylvania, in Indiana, or in Ohio, in connection with John Morgan's raid; but I opposed his being tried in any State, except in a State where he had been actually present. Then it was said that we could appoint a judge in Judge Caton's place, and try Jefferson Davis in East Tennessee. That was anxiously considered. On the consideration of it by the President and myself, we both concurred that it would not look well for the President to make a judge to try Jefferson Davis at the President's own home and in his own State. And so the thing stood until I left the office. I must say that I was, on those grounds, the principal cause of the non-trial of Jefferson Davis. At least, I believe so.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. That is, his trial for the crime of treason?

A. Yes; and I violently opposed his trial for the crime of treason before a military commission.

Q. Was there not an indictment pending against him at the same time in this District?

A. Yes; but there, again, would have been the question of his constructive presence.

Q. I thought that that was a case of actual presence?

A. I did not think that he was in arms in the District of Columbia. Breckinridge, I believe, had been over here with some forces, as he had been in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Kentucky.

Q. There was the great fact, however, of the withdrawal of those persons from the Senate?

A. Yes; but I had another reason which pressed upon me in relation to the matter, and which I think I had given in letters to the House of Representatives or to the Senate. I then was, and am still, of the opinion that a man ought not to be tried for treason except in the community and by the community in which he has offended, and, unless that community can be so pacified and corrected in its opinions as that a jury of it will find a man guilty, he had better not be tried or convicted at all.

Q. You were aware, of course, that he was held on allegations of a violation of the laws of war as known to civilized nations—for instance, of complicity in the assassination of President Lincoln and of inhumanity to prisoners?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you make any objection to his trial by military commission for those offences?

A. Of course, the opinion which I gave in reference to the trial of the conspirators by military commission would cover his case as well as the other cases. The question whether Mr. Davis was guilty of any offence against the laws of war was never submitted to me, and I examined only incidentally the evidence.

Q. I see you state in your opinion, wherein you assign as a reason for trying them as prisoners of war, that the condition of war was yet existing?

A. Yes; a state of war.

Q. I wish to know why he was not tried as a prisoner of war, so far as you are aware, and what was said on the subject?

A. I have given you all that I know on the subject, and I have stated as clearly as I can the reasons why I opposed the trial of Jefferson Davis, and I think I have fairly shouldered the responsibility.

Q. I am speaking now of his trial for other offences before a military commission?

A. On that subject the facts alleged against Jefferson Davis as to his violation of any of the laws of war were never laid before me.

Q. You were never examined before on that subject?

A. The deposition taken before the Committee at the last Congress will show all that I know on that subject.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Did you take the general charge of the proceedings instituted against Jefferson Davis in the district of Virginia so far as to give directions about it?

A. Yes; the question came up immediately after the capture of Jefferson Davis. It was taken for granted that, as the highest law officer of the government, I should prosecute in person. Under the present organization of the department, I have in my hands the recommendation of the pardoning power, and I brought the question before the Cabinet whether it was proper for me, as a member of the Cabinet, and having charge of the question of pardon in the event of conviction, to have my mind worked by entering actively into the prosecution. I objected to it. The Cabinet, President and all, insisted that I should take an active part in the prosecution. I consented to do so, but determined in my own mind that if the trial should result in a conviction I would not constitute a part of the Cabinet, or be an adviser of the President in regard to any clemency that might be asked for.

Q. Was the question whether any clemency should be exercised in case of conviction ever considered?

A. Never; it was never brought up in any way, that I recollect, except as to the incompatibility of my occupying the position of a Cabinet officer before whom such a question must come, and at the same time taking an active part in the prosecution.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. And that was suggested by you?

A. That was a suggestion by me. There seemed to be an inconsistency in the two positions; and when the Cabinet all determined that I should take an active part in the trial, I made up my mind that I should take no part in the other matter.

Q. Was the President always anxious and urgent for as speedy a trial of Jefferson Davis as possible?

A. I do not recollect anything except that immediately after the capture of Jefferson Davis for some time he was anxious for a speedy trial.

Q. At the time when you were given charge of the whole matter, did the President then express a desire that the trial should be speedy?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. The case was turned over to you with that understanding by the President?

A. It was turned over to me with that understanding.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did the President ever, in any way, interpose any objection to a speedy trial?

A. Never.

Q. So far as you ever heard any expression on his part, was it or was it not in favor of a prompt and speedy trial?

A. It was.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. At the time you left the office, was it your policy and purpose to have Davis brought to trial as soon as it could be done?

A. Yes; as soon as there could be a circuit judge to try him. I never would have consented to try such a case before Judge Underwood in that district.

Q. Did you expect yourself to take part in the trial and management of the case on the part of the government?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was the subject of the insufficiency, or the invalidity of the present indictment considered by you at any time?

A. It was not fully considered by me. The copies of the indictment, I think, were sent by me to Mr. Evarts and Governor Clifford. As the time was not fixed for the trial of Jefferson Davis, and as I could not say when he was to be tried, and had plenty of other work to attend to from day to day, I did not take up that subject.

Q. Did you ever have any interview with Chief Justice Chase about trying Jefferson Davis?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When was that?

A. I cannot recollect the date. I had an interview with Chief Justice Chase at the instance of the President. I went from the President's in my carriage to the house of the Chief Justice, and announced to him that my interview was at the instance of the President.

Q. In reference to what matter?

A. In reference to his holding court in Virginia—and the principal object of that was the trial of Jefferson Davis. The Chief Justice positively declined under the then existing condition of things to hold court there; and as he stated the facts, I concurred with him in opinion that, if I were Chief Justice, I did not think I would hold a court there. He thought that he would be holding rather a military than a civil court, and be trying a military rather than a civil case. On my return to the President I told him what the Chief Justice had said, and told him, as distinctly as I do you now, that I concurred with the Chief Justice in his opinion.

Q. Did you consider at that time the proclamation of amnesty and peace that had been issued by the President?

A. I do not recollect the time now, but I considered that at that time a court could only be holden in Virginia by reason of the fact that there was military possession. There was no such respect for law and for the power of law as that a judge could go there without the presence of military.

Q. That had relation to the public mind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. So far as the acts of the Executive were concerned, did you consider that all he could do to restore the civil in place of the military authority had been done?

A. That opens up a matter on which the President and myself differed in opinion.

Q. I speak now of your conversation with the Chief Justice; did he raise any question on the acts of the President?

A. I cannot give the details of the Chief Justice's conversation; the result I can give. Whether he mentioned amnesty, or this, that, or the other, I cannot say. I think that the Chief Justice drew some order or other, or requested me to get some order in reference to the writ of habeas corpus, and that he would go there and hold a court. This order the President declined to issue; but I cannot give any particulars. I have no memorandum at all, and can only give the results.

Q. Did not the Chief Justice express to you his opinion that the President's order was legally sufficient, but that in fact there was something equivalent to military control there?

A. My memory of the thing is only in reference to results. I would not undertake to say what the Chief Justice stated, or the points which he made. I recollect distinctly that he came to the conclusion not to hold court there; and on the grounds which he took I agreed with him.

Q. By what authority was Jefferson Davis held during this period of time?

A. He was held by military authority alone.

Q. Was he held under any warrant?

A. No, sir; I think he was captured by military authority.

Q. And held as a prisoner of war?

A. I think so.

Q. That was the manner in which you understood him to have been held?

A. All the time; and I thought it lawful, because I thought that peace could only be made by Congress, and not by the President. My opinion was all the time that it was a civil war, and that peace was to be decided by Congress, not by the President.

Q. Did you not consider peace to be a question of fact?

A. In some aspects it is a question of fact. For instance, it is a question of fact whether you can kill a man in battle while there is no war.

Q. Are not the states of war and peace questions of fact?

A. Not always. There have been states of war where not a gun was fired. I think that as between foreign nations a treaty makes peace, but that in civil war an act of Congress restores peace.

Q. Then until there is an act of Congress declaring peace, you think that war continues?

A. A state of war.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. During your term of office did you give any opinion on the subject of abandoned lands?

A. Yes, sir; not on the whole subject of abandoned lands, but I gave an opinion which arose in this way: Bishop St. John, of the Episcopal church, had left Norfolk when the federal forces took possession of the city. Both he and his wife left Norfolk, the title to his estate being in his wife. They came back after the collapse of the confederacy, and found their property in possession of the military. He demanded of the Secretary of War the restoration of the property. Mr. Stanton referred the question to me, and you will find my opinion, I think, in my communications of June 22, 1865, and of September 14, 1865. In these opinions I stated what I regarded as being abandoned land.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. The act of Congress defines the term, does it not?

A. Yes, sir, in a very general way; but whether a particular case comes within this term or not is often a troublesome question; and that was the question in the case of Bishop St. John.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. To whom was the opinion of June 22d given?

A. I think they were both given to Mr. Stanton.

Q. Did you at any time give to the President, in any form, any other or different opinion on the subject of abandoned lands than the opinions referred to?

A. I think not. I asked the clerk to refer me to all the opinions which I gave on the subject of abandoned lands, and he referred me to those two.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. I find, in a report made to Congress, in a message from the President, dated 10th January, 1867, a statement that Edward Johnson, a rebel general, was pardoned on the recommendation of ex-Attorney General Speed.

A. I have no doubt that is so. I earnestly desired General Johnson's pardon.

Q. I also find, in looking over this report, that in some cases a pardon has been ordered by the Attorney General.

A. I think that in a very few cases where I ordered pardons the President interfered. I think that in some Tennessee cases he refused; and, finally, I pardoned nobody from Tennessee without special directions.

Q. I wish to know why, in some cases, you "recommended" the pardon, and in others "ordered" it.

A. I would say, generally, that if I ordered a pardon without any recommendation, it was my recommendation. I infer that on personal interviews with the parties I signed the order for their pardon to the President.

Q. And in the other cases the pardon was made on your recommendation?

A. Yes, sir. I am very certain that Edward Johnson was pardoned not only on an application of mine in writing, but most probably on a personal interview with the President, in which I told him of the past personal relations between Johnson and myself. His father was my physician, and in boyhood we associated together. I took an active interest in his being pardoned.

Q. Do you recollect the case of Alexander C. Jones, a rebel brigadier general, who was pardoned?

A. I cannot individualize about it now, there were so many granted.

Q. Do you recollect the case of William S. Barry, a member of the rebel provisional congress, pardoned on your recommendation?

A. No, sir. Probably I recommended him from having a personal interview with the man himself. Very frequently, after seeing gentlemen, and talking with them, and informing myself that they intended right, I recommended their pardon.

Q. Do you recollect the case of Henry F. Elliott, a member of the rebel convention?

A. I do not.

Q. Or of W. T. Martin, a rebel major general?

A. Yes, sir; I recollect pardoning Mr. Martin. It was on the application and importunity of personal friends, and gentlemen in whom I had confidence. I recollect distinctly recommending him, because a relative of mine came here from Philadelphia and gave me such a description of the man that I recommended his pardon. He was above the rank of brigadier general, and therefore came under one of the excepted cases.

Q. What principle governed you in recommending men to pardon?

A. The general principle of clemency. If I saw the party, or if a gentleman in whom I had great confidence gave me a description of the party, which I relied upon, I recommended a pardon. I regarded it as best to relieve those persons of apprehension, and let them go to work. We operated on these exceptions in the office in this way: The person coming under the $20,000 clause, and the mere minor officers, were all thrown together, and there was very little question asked about them. Our object was to fling pardons broadcast. And so that there would be no questions in the future about slavery, we put a condition in the pardon that the person pardoned should accept the situation of the country in reference to the abolition of slavery. There was a condition in the pardon that he should never thereafter hold a slave, or make use of slave labor; and if we only gave pardons to a few it would be ridiculous to make that condition, whereas giving pardons to a great many persons of the influential classes would give force and effect to that idea. That induced us to be very liberal with pardons.

Q. Is that the principle on which you account for the pardoning of such a large number of leading men in the South who came under the exception?

A. I do not know whether that is the principle. The principle on which we acted in the office was, not to investigate closely the cases coming under the $20,000 clause, and the clause in relation to minor officers. Unless there was something against the party the pardon went as a matter of course. In the cases of higher officers the application had to come direct to the Attorney General or the President; and we made exceptions in particular cases.

Q. Do you recollect the case of Felix J. Batson, of the rebel congress, pardoned upon your recommendation?

A. I do not, sir; I do not.

Q. Do you recollect the pardon of a man named Howell, procured by Mrs. Cobb?

A. If Mrs. Cobb ever applied to me at all for a pardon I do not recollect it. I do not think she ever did. I do not know anything about the case, except the fuss that was made about it in the papers. It was the case out of which the prosecution of Baker grew. I have no recollection about the case. It was one coming under this $20,000 clause, and such cases only came to me in a batch for my signature.

Q. Do you know of any officer of your department or of the government participating in money obtained for procuring pardons?

A. Never in the world. I believe that outsiders made money out of the pardoning business; and the President and myself struggled anxiously to prevent it, and changed the mode of delivering pardons. We twisted and turned the thing in every way we could to prevent it.

Q. Did the President, so far as you know, endeavor to prevent speculation in obtaining pardons?

A. I thought he did very earnestly; as earnestly as I did.

Q. What means did you take to prevent agents and speculators from making money out of pardons?

A. At first, pardons were delivered to the parties on personal application, or to their agents, or to State agents. We tried to avoid speculation by delivering the pardons to the State agents for the various States in the South, but we found that that did not work, and we changed the plan, and sent the pardons by mail to the Governors of Kentucky and Tennessee, and to the provisional Governors of the other southern States, and let them distribute them. I do not know whether, in all the changes that we made, we effected any good.

Q. But you know that in your interviews with the President he was earnestly solicitous to prevent speculation in pardons?

A. I thought so.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Give us the history of your trip to Canada.

A. In July or August, 1865, I think, the President was informed that a Mr. Cleary, a Kentuckian, living in Canada, had the books and accounts of Jacob

Thompson, and that they could be had. I was sent to Canada. I had to go first to Detroit to see Mr. Emerson, a lawyer there, and took him with me to the Clifton House, immediately opposite Niagara, and telegraphed to Mr. Cleary to meet me at the Clifton House. I did meet Mr. Cleary at the Clifton House. On the day that I got there a publication was made of some of the testimony taken before the military commission, wherein Mr. Cleary was implicated. As soon as he saw me he knew that my object was to get hold of those papers. He brought a newspaper in which this testimony in reference to himself had been published. I had not seen it before, and did not know of the existence of such a thing. He said that with such charges pending he could enter into no negotiation at all about Jacob Thompson's papers, and would enter into none. I read the testimony, and thought that Mr. Cleary was right; that if charges of so serious a character as those were brought against him he ought not to part with the papers, which he relied upon, as he said, for his justification. I did not see the papers, nor did he tell me of their purport. I am satisfied that if it had not been for the publication of that testimony I could have had from Cleary Jacob Thompson's papers; but I did not get them or see them, and I came home again. My interview with Cleary was not over twenty minutes. He went back to Toronto, or wherever else he was living in Canada, and I crossed the river and came back to Washington.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you know or hear of a letter said to have been written by Mr. Johnson to Jefferson Davis?

A. I never heard of such a thing.

Q. A letter said to have been stolen from Mr. Johnson's table by one of Brownlow's sons?

A. That is the first I heard of it.

Q. Was Baker with you in Canada?

A. No, sir; I did not know Baker at the time. I never saw him but once.

Q. Did you ever see Booth's diary?

H. Never.

Q. Did you ever tell General Baker that you suspected your clerk, Pleasants, of making money out of the pardon business?

A. No, sir. He told me that he suspected him. I did not believe any such thing. General Baker called on me at my house. We had a long interview. He was very earnest and decided in his idea that Pleasants was guilty of impropriety in the office. I had the utmost confidence in Pleasants. Next morning I called to see the President, and told him of my interview with Baker, saying that I would investigate the matter quietly, and see if there was anything in it. I did investigate it, and found that it was merely a suspicion on Baker's part, and that he had some grounds for the suspicion. I was satisfied, however, that there was no real foundation for it. After I had made the investigation I told Pleasants the whole matter. The only plausible grounds for Baker's suspicion was this: pardons, as they were sent off, were enclosed in large official envelopes. We were then delivering pardons to State agents, to be transmitted to the various States for distribution. Baker had got hold of some of the envelopes in which pardons had been enclosed, and found that they were marked, "so much to be paid on delivery." This excited his suspicion, and made him believe that the wrong was in the Attorney General's office. I investigated it, and found that the pardons went in the envelopes without any such endorsement, and that these outside people were making money out of the pardons in this way. Then the President and myself made the change in the mode of delivery.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. How many rebel States had agencies here for that purpose?

A. That I cannot answer. I think that nearly all of them had agencies here for the purpose of representing their communities.

Q. Do you know Mr. Sayre, the agent for Alabama?

A. I heard of him at the time, and heard of great improprieties said to have been committed by him. It was through him that Baker's suspicions were excited against Mr. Pleasants.

Q. He stated, I believe, that he had resigned a commission in the marine service of the United States to go into the rebellion. Can you state what other agents were here who had actively participated in the rebellion?

A. I do not think I know personally any of the agents. They had no intercourse with me.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. How did you derive the information in regard to those Canada letters, which induced you to go to Canada?

A. The information came, I think, from Mr. Holt's office to Mr. Stanton, and was communicated by Mr. Stanton to the President. I think I had some sort of copies of letters, but to what extent I cannot now say, except that the groundwork seemed to be laid for obtaining all the account books and papers of Jacob Thompson while he was in Canada; and I verily believe I would have got them all if it had not been for the publication of the testimony before the military commission.

Q. Were there copies of any of those brought here before you went to Canada?

A. I took none to Canada. I do not know that I had any knowledge of anything other than that they were the original papers of Jacob Thompson.

Q. Were you induced to make your journey to Canada at the request of the President or Cabinet?

A. I do not think there was anybody consulted about it except Mr. Stanton, the President, and myself. I do not recollect that any other member of the Cabinet knew of my visit; probably Mr. Seward did. He was then sick, but I think it probable that I conferred with him on the subject. I do think it was a matter of Cabinet consultation. It was agreed between the President, Mr. Stanton, and myself that I should go and make the effort.

Q. You never had any of those original papers?

A. I never saw them at all. I may have seen the copies which the President had.

A. It was at the request or by the desire of the President that you went there?

A. Yes, sir. I could not leave the city of Washington without his consent, and would not have felt authorized to go on such a mission without full conference with the President. He knew all about it.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 3, 1867.

JAMES SPEED recalled, and examination resumed.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Have you examined the records in the office of the Attorney General for the purpose of ascertaining whether any letters were written by you covering the subject-matter of the fourth clause of circular 15 of the Freedmen's Bureau?

A. I have examined the records myself, and have had the chief clerk examine them. I did it with some industry, and he with greater (and he has a very exact memory about such things.) We found no general instructions at all. I found a great many letters to various district attorneys touching somewhat the subject. I have brought the letter-book with me, and will read to the Committee such letters as I can find bearing on the subject.

(Witness read to the Committee several letters, copies of which he was directed to furnish. They are appended to his testimony.)

Q. After the examination you have made of the records, will you now look at clauses four and five of circular No. 15, before referred to, and state whether you at any time gave to the President an opinion on which those two clauses have been based?

A. I can only answer as I answered yesterday. I do not recollect that I gave the President any advice or opinion on the subject.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Referring to the letter addressed to District Attorney Chandler, read by you, state whether the purpose and policy explained in it, touching the execution of the confiscation act, differ from that you had previously yourself desired or advised.

A. I can say only, in reference to that letter, that the occasion for it was, that complaints came from Virginia, more numerous than I can give you any idea of, that the marshal and district attorney were making use of the confiscation act for their private ends; that they were seizing property, and on receiving fees, were dismissing and not libelling the cases. The thing was laid before the President in such a shape that I regarded it to be his duty to take notice of it; and hence the letter was written requiring the district attorney to arrest further proceedings, and to report all that had been done.

Q. In your conferences with the President on that subject did you discover a difference of opinion between yourself and the President as to the mode and manner in which the confiscation act should be executed?

A. I think not. I do not recollect any.

Q. There was a coincidence of opinion?

A. I do not recollect that there was any difference of opinion.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State whether those complaints did not come from disloyal men?

A. No, sir.

Q. Not exactly in the sense in which the President uses the term—but who were themselves obnoxious to the penalties of the law?

A. No, sir. I recollect very well that they came from such sources that I should have regarded myself as derelict in duty if I had not inquired into them.

Q. Can you state the sources of the complaints?

A. I cannot. I have no doubt the records of the office will show.

Q. In the Alabama case the complaints seem to have come from men of that character?

A. When I left the office I was having a vast amount of trouble about the matters in Alabama. I handed over to Mr. Stanbery in them a bundle of troubles.

Q. The charges were just the same as in the Virginia case, and the officers were turned out?

A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Attorney General Stanbery testified before the Committee that, in his opinion, the confiscation acts were war measures, and that, the war being over, it was not proper to continue to enforce them. Did you concur in that opinion?

A. I did. I gave the President that opinion more than once.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you not state your opinion before the Committee, yesterday, that the war was not over; and did you not assign that as a reason for trying the conspirators before a military commission?

A. I gave the opinion that the "state of war" existed; but I believed that while you had no right to shoot men in battle, you had no right to use the confiscation act—that it was a war measure.

Q. You distinguish between war flagrante and war non cessante?

A. Yes, sir.

Q Did you think of looking for the papers in the case of Pierre Soulé?

A. Yes; I had the clerk to examine. The only thing that appears in the department of the Attorney General is a petition of Mr. Soulé for pardon, endorsed by the President on the envelope in which it is contained "The Attorney General. Pardon. A. J." On which the pardon issued. There is no record in the office of any communication in reference to the confiscation of Mr. Soulé's estate, and, according to my memory, I never heard of the matter. There is no trace of it in the Attorney General's office.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Was there any investigation by you as to his claim to a pardon, or as to any reason why he should not be pardoned?

A. I think Mr. Soulé applied to me in person—I am pretty certan he did—and I considered the thing. I know very well that a very accomplished lady from Virginia, a schoolmate of mine, came from Richmond to see me, and we had an interview on the subject. I referred her to the President, with a note of introduction on the subject of pardoning Mr. Soulé. I am pretty certain that she did not get the pardon. I think it was obtained by Mr. Seward long afterwards. I infer that from the fact that among the papers in the Attorney General's office is a letter, unsigned, but evidently drawn up in the State Department, addressed to the President on the subject of Mr. Soulé.

Q. The order of the President for his pardon is peremptory?

A. Yes; it is peremptory. The course of the office was, when I recommended pardons, they were made out, and the President sent down an order just marked "Attorney General. Pardon. A J." Whenever they came that way I made no inquiries, and the order was made.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Can you state whether the case of Howell was considered by you?

A. I do not know anything about the case. I do not know what the papers in the office show about it. Mrs. Cobb never applied to me for a pardon that I recollect; and I do not think I ever heard of the case until they were making a fuss about it in the papers.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE.
Washington, July 5, 1867.

SIR: The Attorney General, at the request of Hon. James Speed, directs me to transmit you the enclosed copies of letters from this office to various United States attorneys relative to proceedings in confiscation cases.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. F. PLEASANTS,
Chief Clerk.

Hon. J. F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, April 11, 1867.

SIR: I am instructed by the President to say that when the persons against whose property proceedings are pending in the court at Little Rock shall present to you pardons, you are fully authorized, if in your judgment it should be done, to discontinue such proceedings upon any terms not inconsistent with the terms of pardon.

This authority is to cover all cases, no matter under what act or acts of Congress the proceedings have been instituted.

Very respectfully, &c., &c.,

JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

ORVILLE JENNINGS, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Little Rock, Arkansas.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 9, 1865.

SIR: Yours of the 3d instant, to the assistant Attorney General, has been received, and I am directed by him to say, in answer thereto, that you will institute legal proceedings against all property in your district liable to confiscation, and prosecute the same with due diligence. This you will continue to do until you receive instructions to the contrary from this department.

Very respectfully, &c.,

WM. STEWART,
Chief Clerk.

BENNETT PIKE, Esq.,
United States Attorney Western District of Missouri,
St. Joseph, Missouri.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 13, 1865.

SIR: Your letter, with the enclosed papers, was received. You are to proceed in all cases where property is liable to confiscation to execute the laws of the United States. So long as the statute of 1862 remains the law, and parties amenable to it are not pardoned, it is your duty to proceed against this property and estate within the jurisdiction of your district court.

Very respectfully, &c.,

J. HUBLEY ASHTON,
Assistant Attorney General

CALEB BALDWIN, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Council Bluff, Iowa.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 24, 1865.

SIR: In relation to the cases of James Thomas, jr., and Charles T. Wortham, I have to say that the proper course for the parties is to appear in court in the confiscation suits and plead their respective pardons. This is the regular course, and should be adhered to.

Dismissals of suits outside of the court should be discouraged.

Very respectfully, &c., &c.,

J. HUBLEY ASHTON,
Assistant Attorney General.

L. H. CHANDLER, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Richmond, Va.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, September 5, 1865.

SIR: Many and various complaints have been made to the department that the people of Virginia are being unnecessarily vexed in the execution of the confiscation act by the law officers of the government.

The charge is plainly made that the seizures are initiated not with the purpose of promoting justice and re-establishing the authority of the law, but for private ends and private gain.

Some of those complaints are made by gentlemen of such high position and such unquestioned loyalty that the President feels it to be his duty to arrest for a time any further seizure of property under the confiscation act.

This is not done in the spirit or with the purpose of condemning unheard the officers complained of, but that the government may have an opportunity of looking into, as is its duty, these grave charges.

You will, therefore, after the receipt of this letter, and until you receive further instructions from this office, refrain from issuing to the marshal any orders for the seizure of property under the confiscation act; and you will also instruct the marshal to suspend executing, until further instructions, all orders directed to him by you for the seizure of property under that law which have not been executed by him.

You will also, at your earliest convenience, make a full and detailed report of the seizures heretofore made in your district. You will particularly state—

1. The names of the persons whose property has been seized.
2. The character of the property seized, whether land or personal property.
3. The counties or cities in which the properties are located.
4. The dates of the orders of seizure, and the times when they were executed.
5. The cases in which decrees have not yet been rendered.
6. The cases in which property has been seized, but in which no libels have been filed.
7. A statement showing the relation between the values of the respective properties sold under decrees of confiscation, and the amounts which they brought at the sales.
8. You are desired also particularly to inquire and report touching the manner in which the marshal executed the warrants directed to him by you for the seizure of real property; especially whether he rents the properties, or ejects those in possession, or requires them to execute bonds for the delivery of the properties, and if so, at whose cost.

Very respectfully, &c., &c.,

JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

L. H. CHANDLER, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Norfolk, Va.

[Copy.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., September 6, 1865.

SIR: The President received this morning a letter from Mrs. Lizinka C. Ewell, which he has referred to me, with directions to instruct you to dismiss all proceedings against Mrs. Ewell's property in your court, upon her paying all the costs.

Very respectfully, &c., &c.,

(Signed) JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

WILLIAM N. GROVER, Esq.,
United States Attorney, St. Louis, Missouri.

[Copy.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, September 20, 1865.

SIR: In answer to your letter of the 13th, I am instructed by the President to state that it is not the wish of the government to keep open the sores made in and by the late struggle. None of the persons named in your list, and under arrest, are of sufficiently national consequence for him to say that the nation's peace requires that they should be tried. There may be local reasons or a personal contumacy, of which he has no information, that should induce a trial. Whether that be so or not, he leaves to your discretion.

Should you determine to try any of the persons indicted, you can select your term. If you want aid, should such trial come off, let me know, and you shall have it.

Very respectfully, &c., &c.,

(Signed) JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

W. N. GROVER, Esq.,
United States Attorney, St. Louis, Missouri.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, June 29, 1867.

SIR: In accordance with your request, I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of my letter of January 16, 1867, to J. Q. Smith, esq., United States attorney for the northern district of Alabama, directing him to dismiss proceedings against the property of C. C. Clay.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General.

Hon. GEORGE BOUTWELL,
Chairman pro tem. Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

[Copy.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 16, 1867.

SIR: You are hereby instructed to dismiss any proceedings that may be pending in your district for the confiscation of the property of Mr. Clement C. Clay, and to report your action to this office.

Very respectfully, yours,

(Signed) HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General.

JAMES Q. SMITH, Esq.,
United States Attorney, Montgomery, Alabama.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, July 5, 1867.

SIR: In reply to your letter of the 2d instant, I have the honor to transmit herewith copies of the opinions given to the Secretary of War, in reference to abandoned lands, by the Attorney General, dated June 22, 1865, and September 14, 1865.

No other opinion has been given since on the same subject.

Very respectfully, yours,

HENRY STANBERY,
Attorney General.

Hon. J. F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

[Copy.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
June 22, 1865.

SIR: I have received a communication from Major General Howard, Commissioner of Freedmen, Refugees, and Abandoned Lands, asking my opinion on a question touching his official duty under the fourth section of the statute of March 3, 1865.

This question should more regularly have been submitted to me through you. I have no authority, as you are aware, to give an official opinion on any question not referred to me by the President or the head of an executive department. Presuming, however, that you would have sent Major General Howard's letter to me if he had desired it, I treat the question as one regularly submitted, and beg leave now to state to you my views on the point presented.

The point is this: Whether it is the duty of the Commissioner, under the act of 1865, to take charge and control of all abandoned lands, or all tracts of land that have been abandoned, or to which the United States may have acquired title, by confiscation or sale or otherwise, within the insurrectionary States; or whether it is his duty to take charge and have control of only such portions of the said lands as he may, under the direction of the President, set apart for the use of loyal refugees and freedmen?

There are few statutes that are disfigured by loose and indefinite phraseology to a greater extent than the act of 1865 establishing this bureau; but close attention to the words of the more prominent provisions of the law will enable us, I think, to answer the question of the Commissioner without doing much violence to any part of the act. Where Congress, as in this case, has taken so little pains to express its intention, no man can, of course, be certain that any construction of the words employed reaches the true meaning of the legislature.

By the first section of the act there is established in the War Department a Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, and Abandoned Lands. To this bureau, the section declares, there "shall be committed, as hereinafter provided, the supervision and management of abandoned lands, and the control of all subjects relating to refugees and freedmen from rebel States," &c. It will be observed, in the first place, that the absolute supervision and management of abandoned lands—the supervision and management of such lands, I mean, to all intents and for all purposes—are not committed to the bureau in this section, but simply the supervision and management of those lands to the extent and for the purposes afterwards provided in the act. It will be seen, in the second place, that the qualification intended, as it would seem, to be introduced by the words "as hereinafter provided," would appear, from the structure of the sentence, to attach only to the subject-matter of abandoned lands, and not to the subject-matter of freedmen and refugees. So that, while to the bureau is committed, by this first section, the control of all subjects relating to refugees and freedmen without any exception, qualification, or reservation, it would seem that it is entrusted with the supervision and management of abandoned lands only to the extent and in the manner provided in another part of the statute. Now, the fourth section of the act relates to the authority which the Commissioner may exercise and the duties he is to perform in regard to abandoned and other lands in the insurrectionary States. He has authority, under the direction of the President, to set apart, for the use of loyal refugees and freedmen, the lands in question; and he is required to assign to every male of that class of persons not more than forty acres of such land.

The first is the only authority, and the second is the only duty, so far as I am able to discover, that he has to exercise and perform in regard to the lands in question. So far as it may be necessary for him to exercise supervision and management of those lands, in order to the full execution of the authority and the due performance of the duty set forth in the fourth section of the act, is he required to supervise and manage them, and no farther, as I apprehend.

He has authority, under the act, to reduce into his control all the lands in question if they are needed for the use of the refugees and freedmen, or any portion of them that may be thus needed; but it is not his duty, under the statute, to assume the control of any of such lands that he does not desire to apply to the use mentioned in the statute, or to set apart for the benefit of the persons who are placed under his care.

It seems to me plain that Congress looks primarily, in this legislation, to the personal and social interests of loyal refugees and freedmen, and not to the care of the lands described in the fourth section of the act. It was intended that the lands should be made use of to conserve the interests of the refugees and freedmen; and that, so far as it might be necessary for the Commissioner, to supervise, manage, and control the lands, in order to execute the primary design of Congress, which was to provide, as I have said, for loyal refugees and freedmen, it was intended that he should exercise authority over them. In other words, his authority with regard to the lands is, in the contemplation of the statute, an incident of his power in regard to the persons mentioned in the act. This is the spirit, I believe, of the legislation; and so interpreting the act, I am of opinion that it is the duty of the Commissioner to take and have control of only such portions of the lands described in the statute as he may, in the exercise of the authority given to him by the act, and under the direction of the President, set apart for the use of loyal refugees and freedmen.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

[Copy.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
September 14, 1865.

SIR: Through the Adjutant General, by letter of date the 28th of August, 1865, you inform me that Bishop Johns, of Virginia, married a widow owning an estate in Norfolk of more than twenty thousand dollars in value. It is real estate, and the title is in her. When the rebellion broke out they resided in Norfolk. Upon the capture of that place by the federal forces they fled, leaving the property in the hands of an agent. The property was taken by the United States military, and is yet occupied by the quartermaster's department.

Bishop Johns and his wife, after the surrender of the confederate forces, returned to Norfolk, took the oath of amnesty, and now demand the property.

Upon these facts the following questions were asked:

1st. Should this property be turned back to Mrs. Johns, or over to the Freedmen's Bureau?

2d. Does Mrs. Johns need the President's pardon?

3d. If so, and pardoned, is she then fully entitled to her property?

I. The facts above stated show that Bishop and Mrs. Johns are traitors. When the rebels, with a treasonable intent, took possession of, and asserted and exercised dominion in Norfolk, they did not, as was their duty, fly from the place and seek the protection of the government; but when the government sent forces there to establish its authority, and to give protection and freedom to the loyal citizens, they fled with the rebels. Instead of rejoicing as good and loyal citizens of the old government, they turned their backs upon it, and gave the rebels and traitors all the aid in their power, which was sympathy, countenance, and confidence. Their conduct shows that the treasonable government of the confederacy had their allegiance, and as a compensation for that allegiance, they looked to it for protection. They are as guilty of treason as those who were able and did actually take up arms.

Being unpardoned traitors, of course the military need show no favors in surrendering the property. But if the military has no further use for the property, it is subject to be proceeded against for confiscation; and if no such proceeding is instituted, it will of course go into the possession of Bishop and Mrs. Johns.

In the act of Congress entitled "An act in addition to the several acts concerning commercial intercourse between loyal and insurrectionary States, and to provide for the collection of captured and abandoned property, and the prevention of frauds in States declared in insurrection," approved 2d of July, 1864, it is enacted "That all property, real or personal, described in the acts to which this is in addition, shall be regarded as abandoned where the lawful owners thereof shall voluntarily absent therefrom, and engaged either in arms or otherwise in aiding and encouraging the rebellion."

Property cannot be regarded as abandoned, according to the provisions of this act, unless the party is voluntarily absent therefrom, and engaged either in arms or otherwise in aiding or encouraging the rebellion. That the lawful owner has been voluntarily absent, and has been in rebellion, does not make it abandoned property. The lawful owner must, at the time the property is taken, be absent, and must at that time be actively engaged in the rebellion. Congress seems to have authorized the taking of the property of those persons who had abandoned their property and gone into the rebellion with the hope of being restored by the power of the rebellion. The property of such persons as should remain at their homes, or having once fled and given aid to the rebellion, shall have returned, (for it may be that they have abandoned the rebellion,) cannot be taken as abandoned.

As I understand the facts of this case, the property of Mrs. Johns never has been and is not now in possession of the government as abandoned property; it never has been in possession of the Treasury Department; it was taken by the military for its own uses and has been and is yet held by the military for its own uses. Not having been heretofore seized and held as abandoned property, it cannot now be seized and held as such, because Mrs. Johns is not now voluntarily absent, and is not now engaged either in arms or otherwise in aiding or encouraging the rebellion. Neither the letter nor the spirit of the act justifies seizures of property as abandoned, except when the lawful owner is engaged in actual hostility to the government, and is away from his property for that purpose.

By the fourth section of the act entitled "An act to establish a bureau for the relief of freedmen and refugees," approved 3d of March, 1865, it is enacted "That the Commissioner, under the direction of the President, shall have authority to set apart, for the use of loyal refugees and freedmen, such tracts of land within the insurrectionary States as shall have been abandoned."

When this act is read in connection with the act of 2d July, 1864, (a part of which has been before quoted, and being in pari materia they should be read together,) in my opinion the President is not endowed with the power to take possession of property as abandoned which is now in possession of the lawful owner, or when the lawful owner is not now in arms or otherwise aiding or encouraging the rebellion. The words "shall have been abandoned," as used in the act of the 3d of March, 1865, refer to such property as is described in the act of 2d July, 1864. The act of 3d March does not change the description or definition of abandoned property as given in the act of 2d July, 1864; it declares the uses to which abandoned property shall be applied.

II. From the facts stated, Mrs. Johns does need the pardon of the government. Without such pardon her property is liable to be seized, libelled, and confiscated, and sold by judicial process.

III. If pardoned unconditionally, she would be restored to all her rights of property; and if pardoned upon lawful conditions, then the conditions will show what rights of property are withheld.

It is also stated that a Mr. Chery, a resident of Portsmouth, went off with the rebels from there, but deserted them in the fall of 1862, and returned to Portsmouth. He is worth over twenty thousand dollars. It is asked whether he should be pardoned before his title to property is good? Until he is pardoned his property is liable to be confiscated.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

(Signed) JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 3, 1867.

JAMES R. HUBBELL sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. State if you had a conversation with the President of the United States in reference to the trial and punishment of Jefferson Davis; and if so, when, and what was said.

A. I had a conversation with the President on that subject, at the White House, in Washington, I think on the Saturday before the organization of the Thirty-ninth Congress, in 1865. I called on the President in company with Mr. Delano, of Ohio, and Mr. Lawrence, of Ohio. The conversation was general, and in the course of it the subject of the arrest, and imprisonment, and prospective trial of Davis was introduced, either by the President or one of the party. After the lapse of time, it is impossible for me to recollect the words used by the President. He said, in substance, that Davis and his coadjutors, in doing what they had done, in trying to establish the southern confederacy, and to take the southern States out of the Union, had taken appeal (I think was the expression used) to the arbitrament of the sword, and in that tribunal had been defeated; but he said that the decision in the tribunal of force amounted to nothing in settling the question whether Davis had been guilty of treason under the Constitution and laws. The decision simply amounted to this: that their forces were not as strong as the forces of the government; that they were overcome by the superior forces of the government in the tribunal of force. Then he went on to say that he thought Davis ought to be tried in a civil court—perhaps, he said, in the highest civil tribunal of the country—for treason, and that an opportunity should be given him to set up his defence, and then have the court decide the question whether, in doing what he had done, he had been guilty, under the Constitution and laws of the country, of the crime of treason; and that, on his trial, conviction, and sentence—if he should be sentenced to be executed for treason—the question whether he should be executed would be a question to be decided by the Executive, on application for clemency. When he made that remark, I think Mr. Lawrence spoke up and said, "hang him:" and then I put in a caveat, and said, "commute the sentence to banishment or imprisonment. I do not want anybody hung."

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. What did the President say to that?

A. I do not think he made any reply either way. He said nothing from which it could be inferred that he intended to pardon him.

Q. Did he not say that the question of his trial was one thing, and the question whether the sentence should be carried into effect was another thing?

A. No. He said he wanted him tried before a civil tribunal where he should have an opportunity to make his defence; that if it should be held that he had been guilty of treason under the Constitution and laws, we would then have the authority of a civil tribunal defining what constituted treason, which would be worth something in the future, and that whether he would be executed or not would be a question for the Executive, on application for pardon. Mr. Lawrence spoke up and said: "hang him," and I replied, that I was not in favor of hanging anybody—"commute his sentence either to banishment or imprisonment." I guess the subject dropped then. The President did not decide the issue raised between Lawrence and myself. I was pleased with what the President said on the subject. I inferred from Mr. Lawrence's manner that he was not so well pleased.

Q. Did not Mr. Johnson say that the important question, the main question, was the question of law as to whether Davis's acts constituted treason?

A. I cannot say that he did.

Q. Was not that inferable from what he did say?

A. I think so. That is the impression I got—that the important thing in the mind of the President was to have an authoritative decision on the crime of treason.

Q. And not the execution of the criminal?

A. To have an authority on the subject of treason.

Q. But that was not to vindicate public justice by execution of the criminal?

A. I suppose he knew he had the authority, if Davis were tried, convicted, and sentenced, to pardon him the same as if he were convicted of any other crime besides treason.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 5, 1867.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 3d instant, stating that you had been directed by the Committee on the Judiciary to request me to furnish that Committee with copies of all papers in this department going to show the manner in which President Johnson discharged the duties imposed upon him as military Governor of Tennessee. In reply, I have the honor to inform you that, having submitted your letter to the President, I have been instructed by him to cause search to be made with a view to a compliance with the request referred to. That search has been made accordingly, but has not resulted in the discovery of any papers on the subject on the records or files of this department.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10, 1867.

Hon. JAMES HARLAN sworn and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State what you know, if anything, in regard to the issue of agricultural college scrip under the act of 1862 to any of the States lately in rebellion against the government.

A. Some time during the summer of 1866 a gentleman appeared in the Interior Department representing himself to be the agent of the State of North Carolina, and made a demand for the agricultural college scrip to which that State was entitled. His request was submitted by me, as Secretary of the Interior, to the President, at a Cabinet meeting, and I received the directions of the President to cause the scrip to be issued to that State, and I gave the necessary directions to the Commissioner of the Land Office. I do not remember the actual issue of any scrip, or countersigning any scrip. It may have been countersigned by me as Secretary of the Interior before I left.

Q. Was the subject discussed in the Cabinet meeting to which you refer?

A. Yes, it was talked over as such questions were usually talked over; not in a formal way.

Q. Was there any question made, or any diversity of opinion expressed on the subject by members of the Cabinet, or did you yourself suggest any objections to the issue?

A. I think the question of the right of the State to the scrip at the time was talked over. It was, however, the settled policy of the President to permit each of these States to receive and enjoy all the rights and privileges of any other State in the Union, on the ground that they had been fully restored to the Union. There were members of the Cabinet who dissented from the theory; but with the concurrence of the majority and the President, it was acted upon as a settled question.

Q. State whether the scrip was issued as directed.

A. I do not remember issuing the scrip, or countersigning it, personally. But I remember giving the order to have it issued, and, I think, stating that the President directed it. The Commissioner of the Land Office may be able to state what took place, or the records of the office can show distinctly what was done. I suppose a copy of them can be obtained.

Q. Did that order have reference only to the State of North Carolina?

A. Only to the State of North Carolina.

Q. Was there any subsequent order in relation to other States?

A. None that I remember. The question of issuing scrip to the State of Arkansas was discussed; and my memory is that the department referred that question to the Attorney General, and he decided adversely to the right of Arkansas to receive it. I do not remember now any of the grounds for the opinion.

Q. A resolution passed by the present (the 40th) Congress, approved by the President the 30th of March last, recites that "the Land Office is now preparing to issue scrip in like manner to the States of Georgia, Virginia, and Mississippi;" do you recollect whether any order was issued for those States before you left the department?

A. None that I now remember; I think there was no such order while I was in the department.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10, 1867.

Hon. J. M. EDMUNDS sworn and examined.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. State your connection with the Land Office under Mr. Johnson's administration; in what capacity did you act?

A. I was Commissioner of the General Land Office until the 1st September, 1866.

Q. State whether you have any knowledge of the issue of agricultural colledg scrip under the act of 1862 to the State of North Carolina, or any of the other States lately in rebellion?

A. Scrip was prepared, and I think issued, while I was connected with the office, to the State of North Carolina, under the direction of the department.

Q. Do you know of the preparation of any such scrip for any other rebel States?

A. No; I do not.

Q. When did you leave the office?

A. First September.

Q. That is, the first September, 1866?

A. Yes; I do not think it was in preparation; it may have been possibly; I don't recollect.

Q. Do you recollect of any orders in reference to any of the other States?

A. No; I do not.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 11, 1867.

Hon. FRANCIS E. SPINNER sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Have you, as Treasurer, received money from seized, abandoned, and confiscated property?

A. I have.

Q. To what amount?

A. As Treasurer, there has been covered into the treasury $12,573,673 39.

Q. Have you received any money from the same source in any other capacity than as Treasurer of the United States?

A. I have.

Q. To what amount?

A. $3,574,370 38. The whole amount would be $16,148,052 77.

Q. In what capacity do you hold the money which has not been covered into the Treasury?

A. As special agent.

Q. How constituted?

A. By appointment of the Secretary.

Q. Do you know whether that appointment is authorized by any specific law?

A. I do not. I want to explain, however, that the money was centred in special agents all through the United States, and the Secretary made up his mind that it had better be brought here; and he asked me whether I would take the custody of it as Treasurer, or special agent. I consented to do so; without any pay, of course.

Q. What reason has there been why this money has not been covered into the treasury, and held as part of the public money?

A. I know of no reason, except, perhaps, that there are claims against it, and that there are constant repayments. If it once got into the treasury, there is no way of getting it out except by warrant under act of Congress.

Q. To what amount have such repayments been made?

A. The repayments amount to $4,357,990 08. From it should be deducted $1,600,000, leaving the amount of $2,751,900 08 refunded to other persons. There has been paid for expenses—for attorneys' fees, travelling expenses, commissions, salaries of special agents, revenue steamers, &c.—the sum of $952,012 47. There is in my hands now, as special agent, $870,367 83.

Q. Does that amount of expenses cover all the expenses through special agents and in every way, or have there been other expenses?

A. I suspect it does not cover them all; I think that expenses were paid at other places until the whole matter was put into my hands.

Q. Do you make any examination yourself, or through any officers under your control, in regard to these claims?

A. None whatever.

Q. Under what authority or voucher do you pay them?

A. A requisition is issued by the Commissioner of Customs, and is countersigned by the Secretary of the Treasury, on which I issue a draft myself in his favor.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the practice in reference to the examination of claims?

A. None whatever.

Q. When was this fund first placed in your hands?

A. From the account I should judge there was a requisition on me as early as the 16th of August, 1865. But at that time there could have been very little money in my hands. It is only within a year or fifteen months that the matter has been collected and put into my hands.

Q. Have you any rule, or do you know of any rule, by which certain moneys are covered into the treasury, and other moneys left in your hands as special agent?

A. No; I do not think there is any rule. The Secretary of the Treasury directed me to cover in two millions at one time and six hundred thousand at another time.

Q. Are these moneys, then, first lodged in your hands as special agent, and afterwards covered into the treasury?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know any reason why the whole amount is not covered in?

A. For the reason that I stated before. There may be claims against them, or there may be expenses on them to be paid. And when money once gets into the treasury, it can only be drawn out on a warrant pursuant to an appropriation bill.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. Do you know whether a portion of that money is for personal property seized and sold?

A. I suspect so. Here, for instance, is an item, "refunded to D. Barrow, release of 1,498 bales of cotton." The items are made up principally of such things. That is the character of most of the items.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When a claim is paid, are the private expenses deducted from the amount which the government has received?

A. That I don't know. I act as an executive officer only. They send me a requisition stating what it is for, and I know nothing of the proceedings before that.

Q. Are there any other funds in your hands as special agent that are not covered into the treasury?

A. I have a transfer account with the officers of the treasury, and I have an account for paying members of Congress. I don't recollect any other agency that I have.

Q. These are moneys which have been in the treasury, and which are drawn out under appropriation bills for specific purposes?

A. Yes; I think I have had but three agency accounts. There was one for the manumission of slaves in the District, but that account has been closed. I only recollect two other accounts outside of the treasury. One is a necessary one for the various assistant treasurers to make transfers, and the other is for paying members of Congress.

Q. Can you give the amounts received of sales of confiscated property and on sales of abandoned property separately?

A. No, sir; it is a single account in my office.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. What is the date of the latest check on that fund?

A. July 3, 1867.

Q. Was that to reimburse the claims for proceeds of cotton sold?

A. The entry here is to credit W. F. Minor $6,000.

Q. Have the checks been frequent on that fund during the present year?

A. No, sir. There have been but twelve checks on it since January, 1867; and that number includes one of $600,000 covered into the treasury, leaving it eleven in the last six months.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Does that account of yours contain money received from property sold not by any legal decision of a court, as well as property sold under such decisions?

A. I have no means of knowing, but I do not think that any of it is for property sold under the decrees of a court. I think it has been invariably where property has been seized under military authority, although I do not now the fact.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. For what purpose are these moneys in your hands? Why are they not at once covered into the treasury?

A. For the reason that I stated before, that once into the treasury they cannot be touched, and I suppose because the cases are unsettled, and there may be a refunding; that is, it is not known whether it will go to the United States or not.

Q. The cases from which these moneys did arise are not settled cases?

A. I think none of them are.

Q. As soon as they are settled cases, and the amount of money which goes to the United States is ascertained, do you then cover it into the treasury?

A. Not separately. It has been covered in in gross amounts invariably—in round thousands or millions.

Q. Is it the intention to cover it in as fast as the accounts will show the balance in favor of the United States?

A. Yes, and to make it safe; I think that is the Secretary's intention.

Q. Have you had any instructions in reference to this matter from the President himself?

A. I have not.

Q Have you had any communication with him about it?

A. No, sir.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 12, 1867.

NATHAN SARGENT sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What is your office in the Treasury Department?

A. Commissioner of Customs, Treasury Department.

Q. Have you in your bureau had charge of claims on account of property sold, the proceeds of property that had been confiscated and sold as abandoned?

A. Yes, sir; the accounts are kept there.

Q. Are claims made by parties examined and allowed or rejected in your bureau?

A. They are examined there, and generally allowed either upon the testimony or upon the order of the Secretary. We pay sometimes upon the order of the Secretary.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Claims for what?

A. Confiscated and abandoned property.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Who has charge of the examination of these claims; what person has?

A. Mr. J. R. Fletcher, clerk in my office.

Q. When was this branch of the business brought into your office?

A. I cannot answer distinctly; I think in 1862 it was transferred there.

Q. Have you rules and regulations relating to the testimony necessary to sustain claims?

A. There are rules and regulations that were adopted in reference to this property by the Secretary, published from time to time.

Q. Can you furnish the Committee with copies of these rules?

A. I presume I can. I have had some difficulty in finding enough for our own use. I think I can find a copy. There have been different regulations issued from time to time, and published.

Q. In the examination and decision of questions arising from these claims, do you follow these rules implicitly in all cases?

A. We endeavor to do so.

Q. What cases are referred to the Secretary?

A. The Secretary sometimes directs money to be paid to certain individuals out of the captured and abandoned fund.

Q. In any cases where there has not been an examination of the claim in your office?

A. I believe there has been some cases of that sort where there has been no account stated—for some particular property, or something of that sort—where there has been no account rendered. The Secretary will order so much to be paid to such an individual, and upon that we make a requisition.

Q. Does your office contain any evidence of the nature of the claim on which this order is based?

A. I think not.

Q. Will you furnish the Committee with the names of claimants whose claims have been allowed by order of the Secretary?

A. I can do so.

Q. The names of the claims allowed?

A. Yes. Allow me to remark, that when this business came into my office it was an anomalous business entirely, under no existing laws, and was varied from time to time, as circumstances required, by the Secretary, under rules and regulations. Foreseeing that it involved large sums, I from time to time urged the clerk in charge of that business to be very particular, and keep his books always exact; that there might be a time when investigations would be made into this matter. And we have endeavored to do so; but we have had a good deal of difficulty in keeping the accounts.

Q. Is there any law authorizing these proceedings, within your knowledge—do you refer to any law?

A. I do not refer to any special law on the subject. Laws relating to it are quoted and printed with the regulations, and referred to—the laws upon which these regulations are based.

Q. By what officer of the government is the money paid upon the claims which are allowed at your office?

A. Requisitions are generally made upon General Spinner, with whom the money is deposited.

Q. Does any money come into your office, or to any officer under you?

A. None whatever.

Q. Are there claims now pending that have not been audited?

A. There are accounts that are being in process of auditing. I do not know that there are any claims pending. I do not recollect any particular claim. We are now engaged particularly upon the account of Mr. Barney, late collector of New York, who handled a great deal of money. They are very large accounts.

Q. Claim of commission for——

A. There was a great deal of money went into his hands, and paid out by him on orders from the Secretary. That account comes up now for us to settle, and we have to judge of the vouchers which he presents. We are now in the course of settlement of that account. Then will come, perhaps, the account of Mr. Draper, also a very large one—an account of cotton, &c.

Q. Are the claims you have audited and allowed principally for cotton?

A. Some of them. A large number of claims may be for cotton. We pass on a variety of matters.

Q. Can you furnish the Committee with statements of the accounts, and the aggregate amount of claims that have been examined and allowed by your office?

A. I can do so; but it will take a good deal of time to do so. It is pretty large, and with the present force I do not know that I can do it for a great while. I can do it if you give me time.

Mr. BOUTWELL. I will give you what time you want.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You spoke of allowing claims, and auditing claims. Do you refer to claims that are made by individuals on account of property that has been converted into money and got into the hands of the Treasurer?

A. A good many of them.

Q. Are these such claims as you refer to?

A. I refer to them in part.

Q. What other class of claims do you refer to?

A. Claims for services rendered.

Q. As agents in collecting this property?

A. Yes; and a variety of ways.

Q. Some of these claims, to which you refer, are claims made by parties who insist that their property has been illegally and irregularly taken?

A. Many of them are that kind—most of them, perhaps. They claim that the property was not legally taken; that it belonged to them, or to somebody else; or something of that kind.

Q. And is that the reason why these moneys are not immediately covered into the treasury.

A. I imagine it is in order not only to pay the claims, but the expenses growing out of them. We should have no means of meeting the expenses if the money was covered into the treasury, because there is nothing to authorize us to draw it out. And there are many matters by which expenses are legally incurred that have to be paid and are paid by a draft requisition upon Mr. Spinner, who is the depositary of the money.

Q. Is this money covered into the treasury as fast as it is ascertained that the amount desired to be covered into the treasury is actually belonging to the United States?

A. I cannot say about that. I do not know that any has been covered into the treasury for some time. Whether it has or not I do not know. It may be, perhaps, without my knowledge.

Q. Is that particular business under the control of General Spinner?

A. It is under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury. Of course General Spinner is Treasurer.

Q. You spoke of moneys having been paid on the order of the Secretary of the Treasury?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In those cases where he has ordered the moneys to be paid he has made the investigations himself?

A. I take it for granted that he has, or Mr. Kauffman has, who has been in charge of that business from the beginning, under the Secretary. The order comes from his room and bears his initials and address to the Secretary. And the Secretary endorses from those initials. There are two branches of this business—one in the Secretary's office and one in mine.

Q. Which is in the Secretary's office?

A. The Secretary has the management of it supreme; it is under Mr. Kauffman, who acts for the Secretary.

Q. What class of claims does Kauffman examine?

A. The whole.

Q. Those you examine as well as others?

A. We do not settle the accounts. But when these claims are brought up they are examined by him and his clerks.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Do you recommend any allowance other than those for expenses for this branch of the business—I mean as officers of the government?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are not your duties other than those of an auditing officer for money paid out?

A. I am there a comptroller; I control those accounts as I control the customs accounts. But if there are matters of expenses and incidental things arising that do not come in exactly into the accounts they go to the Secretary, and upon his order I pay.

Q. But you do not pass upon any claims of parties who were owners of the property seized for the return of the money?

A. No. It does not come under the shape of accounts at all.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. In the organization of this business have you had any directions from the President of the United States?

A. Never.

Q. He has given you no directions or orders in regard to that business?

A. None whatever.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. How do you have knowledge of the claims on account of cotton seized as abandoned; you spoke of claims on account of cotton; do these claims come to your office?

A. I do not settle these claims. All the accounts of the special agents are examined and settled at General Spinner's.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. What class of claims for services do you examine and adjust?

A. The cases of special agents who are sent out to gather up captured and abandoned property, and also those who, coastwise, were authorized to issue permits for trade, &c.

Q. Is the compensation for their services fixed or regulated by any law?

A. I think not; I do not know of any law.

Q. By what rule, then, do you fix the amount of compensation which they shall receive?

A. By the ruling of the Secretary's agreements with them. When first they were appointed payment was fixed.

Q. Is the compensation always the same?

A. I believe so. I do not know that there is any variation.

Q. This compensation, then, if I understand you, is paid out of the proceeds of the abandoned property sold, before the proceeds were paid into the treasury?

A. Yes, sir; it is out of that fund that all these expenses are paid.

Q. No appropriation has been made by Congress for the payment of that class of claims?

A. No, sir.

OFFICE TREASURER OF THE UNITED STATES,
Accountant's Division, Washington, July 16, 1867.

SIR: In reply to your favor of the 15th instant, I enclose a statement of all the moneys received and paid out by me on account of captured and abandoned property.

All payments are made on requisitions of the Commissioner of Customs, approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, and all papers relating to these payments are on file in the Secretary's office.

Very respectfully,

F. E. SPINNER,
Treasurer of the United States.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman of Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

Captured and abandoned property in account with the Treasurer of the United States.

	DR.
1867.
July 10.	Total amount covered into the treasury as captured and abandoned property	$12,573,673 39
July 10.	Total amount received by me as special agent, $2,600,000, included in $12,573,673 39	6,174,379 38
		18,748,052 77
	CR.
1865.
Aug. 15.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunding to W. P. Kellogg, for intercourse fees erroneously collected	$10,000 00
Aug. 26.	N. Sargent's requisition, paying S. Mansfield & Co., druggists, for and on account of sales of drugs and medicines paid over to post quartermaster's department	22,602 86
Aug. 30.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunding fees, &c., erroneously collected by W. P. Kellogg	26,223 91
Sept. 6.	N Sargent's requisition, refunding fees, &c., erroneously collected by Jno. A. Hedrick	4,609 10
Dec. 28.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to Mrs. A. F. Elliott, on account of cotton erroneously seized	9,603 33
1866.
Jan'y 2.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunding to Mrs. Emily Miller, on account of cotton erroneously seized	8,009 62
March 1.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to Mrs. L. F. Gibson, on account of her claim	36,954 42
March 7.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to W. P. Smith as his interest in certain cotton, known as the "Elgee cotton"	15,000 00
March 7.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded by O. N. Cutler; fees improperly collected by him	10,120 12
March 23.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunding fees erroneously collected by W. P. Kellogg	9,501 78
April 2.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to J. C. Guild, for claim of J. Q. Huddleston	6,321 39
April 20.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to D. Barron, release of 189 bales of cotton	59,904 73
April 20.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to M. D. Shelby	26,293 26
April 26.	N. Sargent's requisition, favor of S. Draper, U. S. cotton agent, for the purpose of procuring sureties, &c., if necessary, in case of cotton replevied by firm of Dennistown & Co	500,000 00
May 14.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to Mrs. E. D. Batchelor	7,092 93
May 19.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to Mrs. M. T. Bonham	14,232 23
June 19.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to E. E. Lunsford, cotton improperly seized by W. P. Mellen	10,626 77
June 30.	N. Sargent's requisition, to be covered into the treasury by Hon. F. E. Spinner, account of captured and abandoned property	2,000,000 00
Sept. 10.	N. Sargent's requisition, restoring to T. H. Yeatman, attorney, 71 bales of cotton improperly seized	8,491 82
Sept. 19.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunding to W. Shaw proceeds of 123 bales cotton improperly seized	14,718 29
Nov. 15.	N. Sargent's requisition, erroneously collected from Dr. W. S. Millar and refunded	8,664 84
Nov. 22.	N. Sargent's requisition, erroneously collected from B. Josley and restored	40,000 00
Nov. 22.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to F. E. Spinner, Treasurer of the United States, to be credited to B. F. Flanders, it having been improperly covered into the treasury	800 11
Nov. 28.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to Dwight & Gill, 3,100 bales of cotton erroneously seized	69,099 80
Dec. 5.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by F. E. Spinner, Treasurer of the United States, to credit of T. C. A. Dexter	520,932 75
Dec. 6.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to Rev. R. Fuller, cotton seized from him	3,507 02
Dec. 10.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to B. Josley	31,533 56

Captured and abandoned property in account with the Treasurer of the United States--Continued.

	Cr.
Dec. 12.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by F. E. Spinner, Treasurer of the United States, to credit of H. Barney, or quartermaster's department, refunded to A. E. Tracy & Co., cotton erroneously seized	2,016 49
Dec. 22.	N. Sargent's requisition, fees erroneously collected from H. Maker	2,361,36
Dec. 28.	N. Sargent's requisition, refunded to M. Malsch, cotton erroneously seized from him	7,239 40
1867.
Jan. 7.	N. Sargent's requisition, returned to W. A. Scott, cotton seized	761 24
Jan. 9.	N. Sargent's requisition, returned to H. Warren, cotton seized	12,910 84
Jan. 9.	N. Sargent's requisition, returned to Temple Clark, cotton seized	9,214 84
April 19.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by Treasurer of the United States to credit of R. I. Howard, as a repayment	9,010 94
May 3.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by Treasurer of the United States to credit of W. D. Gallagher	13,609 74
July 3.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by Treasurer of the United States to credit of W. T. Minor	.....
1866.
Feb. 24.	N. Sargent's requisition, Mrs. M. Moulton, expenses, &c	22,500 00
Feb. 24.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by Treasurer of the United States to credit of N. M. Moulton	67,500 00
1867.
Jan. 14.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited at New York to credit of W. T. Minor	28,218 51
Jan. 25.	N. Sargent's requisition, returned to A. H. Lazau as indemnity for cotton wrongfully seized	42,420 80
Feb. 19.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by Treasurer of the United States	600,000 00
July 3.	N. Sargent's requisition, deposited by Treasurer to credit of W. T. Minor	6,262 64
From Aug. 15, 1865, to July 10, 1867.	N. Sargent's requisitions in favor of sundry persons for services, &c., such as lawyer's fees, traveling expenses, commissions, salaries of special agents, amounts due agents in settlement of their accounts, provisions and expenses of revenue steamers, &c	952,012 47
July 10.	Balance in my hands as special agent, and subject to draft	870,367 83
July 10.	Amount in treasury covered by warrants	12,573,673 39
		18,742,052 77

NOTE.—Very nearly all these repayments are on account of cotton wrongfully seized, or intercourse fees erroneously collected.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 20, 1867.

SIR: Enclosed I hand you a copy of a letter from F. E. Spinner, esq., Treasurer of the United States, explaining the item of $520,932 75, contained in the account rendered by him to the Committee, which I trust will be satisfactory.

I am, truly yours,

H. McCULLOCH.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

TREASURY OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, July 20, 1867.

DEAR SIR: In compliance with your verbal request, the special agency account has been examined, and it has been ascertained that the item of $520,932 75 was drawn on a requisition, which reads "to be deposited in the name of F. C. A. Dexter, superintendent, special agent, on account of internal revenue tax on cotton, said amount having been improperly credited in his account of captured and abandoned property, and excluded therefrom on adjustment in this office."

This requisition bears date December 6, 1866. It is found, on examination of the books of this office, that on the day following this date the amount was charged in my agency account on account of "captured and abandoned property," and was credited in the general treasury account as received from Dexter on account of internal revenue tax on cotton, and that it was covered into the treasury by warrant No. 592, in the quarter commencing January 1, 1867.

Very respectfully, yours,

F. E. SPINNER,
Treasurer of the United States.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday, July 18, 1867.

General ULYSSES S. GRANT sworn and examined.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. At what time were you made general of the army by your present title?

A. In July, 1866.

Q. Did you after that time have interviews with the President in reference to the condition of affairs in the rebel States?

A. I have seen the President very frequently on the subject, and have heard him express his views very frequently; but I cannot call to mind any special interview. I have been called to Cabinet meetings a number of times.

Q. With reference to those matters?

A. Generally, when I was asked to be at a Cabinet meeting, it was because some question was up in which, as General of the army, I would be interested.

Q. Did you have any interviews with him on the subject of granting amnesty or pardon to the officers of the confederate army, or to the people of those States?

A. Not that I am aware of. I have occasionally recommended a person for amnesty. I do not recollect any special interview that I have had on the subject. I recollect speaking to him once or twice about the time that he issued his proclamation. I thought myself at that time that there was no reason why, because a person had risen to the rank of general, he should be excluded from amnesty any more than one who had failed to reach that rank. I thought his proclamation all right so far as it excluded graduates from West Point or from the Naval Academy, or persons connected with the government, who had gone into the rebellion; but I did not see any reason why a volunteer who happened to rise to the rank of general should be excluded any more than a colonel. I recollect speaking on that point. Neither did I see much reason for the twenty thousand dollar clause. These are the only two points that I remember to have spoken of at the time. I afterwards, however, told him that I thought he was much nearer right on the twenty thousand dollar clause than I was.

Q. Do you recollect, when you had that interview with him, when you expressed those opinions?

A. About the time of the proclamation.

Q. Did the President, previous to issuing that proclamation, ask your opinion on the various points of it?

A. I do not recollect. I know that I was present when it was read, before it was issued. I do not think that I was asked my views at all. I had the privilege, of course, being there, to express my views.

Q. Was not that the purpose of your attendance—to get your views on the subject?

A. I cannot say that it was. About that time I was frequently asked to be present at Cabinet meetings.

Q. Were there other subjects discussed before you at the meetings referred to?

A. Yes, sir. Whenever I was there all the subjects that were up that day were discussed.

Q. I speak of that time.

A. I imagine not. My recollection is that it was solely to hear the proclamation read; but I would not be positive as to that. It is my recollection.

Q. Did you give your opinion to the President that it would be better at that time to issue a proclamation of general amnesty?

A. No, sir; I never gave any such opinion as that. By general amnesty I mean universal amnesty.

Q. Did you give your opinion to the President that his proclamation interfered with the stipulations between yourself and General Lee?

A. No, sir. I frequently had to intercede for General Lee and other paroled officers, on the ground that their parole, so long as they obeyed the laws of the United States, protected them from arrest and trial. The President at that time occupied exactly the reverse grounds, viz: that they should be tried and punished. He wanted to know when the time would come that they should be punished. I told him, not so long as they obeyed the laws and complied with the stipulation. That was the ground that I took.

Q. Did you not also insist that that applied as well to the common soldiers?

A. Of course it applied to every one who took the parole; but that matter was not canvassed except in case of some of the leaders. I claimed that, in surrendering their armies and arms, they had done what they could not all of them have been compelled to do, as a portion of them could have escaped. But they surrendered in consideration of the fact that they were to be exempt from trial so long as they conformed to the obligations which they had taken; and they were entitled to that.

Q. You looked on that in the nature of a parole, and held that they could only be tried when they violated that parole?

A. Yes; that was the view I took of the question.

Q. That is your view still?

A. Yes, sir; unquestionably.

Q. Did you understand that to apply to General Lee?

A. Certainly.

Q. That was your understanding of the arrangement which you made with General Lee?

A. That was my understanding of an arrangement which I gave voluntarily. General Lee's army was the first to surrender, and I believed that with such terms all the rebel armies would surrender, and that we would thus avoid bushwhacking and a continuation of the war in a way that we could make very little progress with, having no organized armies to meet.

Q. You considered that the like terms were given by General Sherman to the armies which surrendered to him?

A. Yes, sir; to all the armies that surrendered after that.

Q. And you held that so long as they kept their parole of honor and obeyed the laws they were not subject to be tried by courts?

A. That was my opinion. I will state here that I am not quite certain whether I am being tried, or who is being tried, by the questions asked.

Mr. ELDRIDGE. I am not trying anybody; I am inquiring in reference to the President's proclamation, and as to the views he entertained.

Q. Did you give those views to the President?

A. I have stated those views to the President frequently, and, as I have said, he disagreed with me in those views. He insisted on it that the leaders must be punished, and wanted to know when the time would come that those persons could be tried. I told him, when they violated their parole.

Q. Did you consider that that applied to Jefferson Davis?

A. No, sir; he did not take any parole.

Q. He did not surrender?

A. No, sir. It applied to no person who was captured—only to those who were paroled.

Q. Did the President insist that General Lee should be tried for treason?

A. He contended for it.

Q. And you claimed to him that the parole which General Lee had given would be violated in such trial?

A. I did. I insisted on it that General Lee would not have surrendered his army, and given up all their arms, if he had supposed that after surrender he was going to be tried for treason and hanged. I thought we got a very good equivalent for the lives of a few leaders in getting all their arms and getting themselves under control, bound by their oaths to obey the laws. That was the consideration which, I insisted upon, we had received.

Q. Did the President argue that question with you?

A. There was not much argument about it; it was merely assertion.

Q. After you had expressed your opinion upon it did he coincide with you?

A. No, sir; not then. He afterwards got to agreeing with me on that subject. I never claimed that the parole gave those prisoners any political rights whatever. I thought that that was a matter entirely with Congress, over which I had no control; that, simply, as general-in-chief commanding the army, I had a right to stipulate for the surrender on terms which protected their lives. That is all I claimed. The parole gave them protection and exemption from punishment for all offences not in violation of the rules of civilized warfare, so long as their parole was kept.

Q. Do you recollect at what time you had those conversations? Can you state any particular time, or up to any particular time, when they were finished?

A. The conversations were frequent after the inauguration of Mr. Johnson. I cannot give the time. He seemed to be anxious to get at the leaders to punish them. He would say that the leaders of the rebellion must be punished, and that treason must be made odious. He cared nothing for the men in the ranks—the common men. He would let them go, for they were led into it by the leaders.

Q. Was that said to you in conversation?

A. I have heard him say it a number of times. He said it to me, and he said it in my presence at the time that delegations were coming up to him from the South.

Q. What persons do you recollect as being present at those conversations—I mean what southern men?

A. I did not know them at all. I recollect that on one occasion he talked to a delegation from Richmond in that way. I do not know any of their names.

Q. Was that prior or subsequent to his proclamation?

A. It was subsequent, I think.

Q. Do you recollect at any time urging the President to go further in granting amnesty than he had gone in his proclamation?

A. Just as I said before, I could not see any reason why the fact of a volunteer rising to the rank of general should exclude him any more than any other grade. And with reference to the twenty thousand dollar clause, I thought that a man's success in this world was no reason for his being excluded from amnesty; but I recollect afterwards saying to the President that I thought he was right in that particular, and I was wrong. In reference to the other, I never changed my views. If he was going to give amnesty to a soldier at all, I did not see why the fact of a man's having risen to the rank of general should be a reason for excluding him.

Q. Did you not advise the President that it was proper and right he should grant amnesty?

A. I do not think I said anything on that subject. I only looked at the proclamation as one which he was determined to issue, and as a thing susceptible to amendment or improvement.

Q. Did you not give your opinion at all that amnesty ought to be granted to those people to any extent?

A. I know that I was in favor of some proclamation of the sort, and perhaps I may have said so. It was necessary to do something to establish governments and civil law there. I wanted to see that done, but I do not think I ever pretended to dictate what ought to be done.

Q. Did you not advise?

A. I do not think I ever did. I have given my opinions, perhaps, as to what has been done, but I do not think I advised any course myself any more than that I was very anxious to see something done to restore civil governments in those States.

Q. Did you not give your opinion at all to the President as to what should be done?

A. I do not think I did. After matters were done, I was willing to express an opinion for or against particular clauses.

Q. I suppose the President called on you for advice on those questions?

A. I say I was in favor, and so expressed myself, of something being done to restore civil rule there immediately, as near as it could be done under the circumstances.

Q. Did you suggest anything?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. I understand your position to be this: that you did not assume to originate or inaugurate any policy; but that, when any question came up, and your opinion was asked as to what the President was going to do or had done, you gave an opinion?

A. That was it, exactly; and I presumed the whole Committee so understood me. I have always been attentive to my own duties, and tried not to interfere with other people's. I was always ready to originate matters pertaining to the army, but I never was willing to originate matters pertaining to the civil government of the United States. When I was asked my opinion about what had been done, I was willing to give it. I originated no plan and suggested no plan for civil government. I only gave my views on measures after they had been originated. I simply expressed an anxiety that something should be done to give some sort of control down there. There were no governments there when the war was over, and I wanted to see some governments established, and wanted to see it done quickly. I did not pretend to say how it should be done, or in what form.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. I confined my questions entirely to war and peace. In expressing the opinion that something ought to be done and done quickly, did you make a suggestion of what ought to be done?

A. No, sir. I will state here that, before Mr. Lincoln's assassination, the question about issuing a proclamation of some sort, and establishing some sort of civil government there, was up; and what was done then was continued after Mr. Johnson came into office.

Q. Did you give your opinion on that after it was done?

A. I was present, I think, twice, during Mr. Lincoln's administration, when a proclamation which had been prepared was read. After his assassination it continued right along, and I was there with Mr. Johnson.

Q. Did you give President Johnson your opinion on the subject of the proclamation, which you say was up before Mr. Lincoln's death, and was continued afterwards?

A. I say I have given my opinion on particular passages of it.

Q. Tell us what conversations you had with President Johnson on the subject, so far as you can recollect it?

A. I have stated once or twice that, so far as I can recollect, I disagreed with two clauses of the proclamation. As to the plan of establishing provisional Governors there, that was a question which I knew nothing about, and which I do not recollect having expressed an opinion about. The only opinion I recollect having expressed on that subject at all was to the Secretary of War. I thought there would be some difficulty in getting people down there to accept offices, but I found afterwards they were ready enough to take them.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. If I understand you correctly, the only opinion that you expressed, and the only advice that you gave, were in reference to the military side of the question, and not in reference to the civil side?

A. Nothing further than that I was anxious that something should be done to restore some sort of government.

Q. But you gave no advice as to what should be done?

A. I gave no advice as to what should be done.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. State the conversation that you had on that subject.

A. I have had repeated conversations with the President, but I cannot specify what those conversations were any more than I have already done.

Q. Did you recommend certain generals of the confederate army to the President for pardon who fell within the exemptions?

A. Yes, sir. I recommended General Longstreet, I think, a year and a half ago; and, although I cannot recollect the names of anybody else, I think I recommended several others.

Q. Do you recollect recommending J. G. French, a graduate of West Point?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part did he take in the rebellion?

A. He was a brigadier general.

Q. Was he a graduate of West Point?

A. He was; and a class-mate of mine.

Q. Do you recollect recommending the pardon of George H. Stuart?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What part did he take in the confederate service?

A. He was a general, and commanded a brigade or division. He took no very conspicuous part.

Q. Was he a graduate of West Point?

A. I think so.

Q. He was not a class-mate of yours?

A. No, sir; he came long after me.

Q. Was there any special circumstance in his case which you considered?

A. Yes, sir. I did that at the instance of General Hunter, and as a special favor to him, and I did it because it affected an inheritance. Stuart's wife was a staunch, consistent Union woman throughout the war, notwithstanding her husband was in the rebel army. I think she never went South. She was as devoted to the Union cause as any woman whose husband was on our side.

There was considerable property in Maryland which had not been confiscated, which he inherits, and I thought that his wife and his children were entitled to that property. General Hunter thought so too. My recommendation was not out of any favor to General Stuart.

Q. Were those circumstances presented to the President as a reason for the pardon?

A. I do not know that they were, and I do not know that they were not. I think I merely signed a recommendation.

Q. Did that contain the statement you have given?

A. I do not recollect whether it did or not. I do not know that I stated the circumstances to the President.

Q. Do you recollect signing the recommendation of M. D. Ector, a rebel brigadier general?

A. No, sir. I do not recollect there being such a brigadier general in the rebel service.

Q. The report in the House is that he was pardoned on the recommendation of Lieutenant General Grant and John Hancock.

A. I do not recollect any such person as John Hancock, or the general named.

Q. Do you recollect ——— Lloyd J. Dean? (Beall?)

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you sign a recommendation, or make an application to the President for his pardon?

A. I do not think that the record will show that I recommended his pardon, but I am not sure as to that. I know that he sent his application through me, with the request that I should forward it to the President with some endorsement. My recollection is that I made an endorsement as to his general character, which was as high, up to the breaking out of the rebellion, as any man's could be.

Q. Were you acquainted with him previous to the breaking out of the rebellion?

A. Oh, yes, sir, for many years. I do not think that I recommended him, but still I may have done so. My recollection is that I simply endorsed his character on the application. The application was to the President, but sent through me.

Q. Do you recollect P. D. Roddy, said to be a rebel brigadier general?

A. Yes, sir. I do not recollect what my endorsement was in Roddy's case, but I know that if I had it to do over again I would recommend his pardon very quickly, and I presume I did so. If he is not pardoned yet, I would be very glad to sign a recommendation for him now.

Q. Do you recollect any other officers of the rebel army who were recommended to the President for pardon by you?

A. No, sir; I cannot mention any. You have already gone over a bigger list than I thought I recommended.

Q. Do you recollect the case of General Pickett?

A. I know that I was urged in that case over and over again, and I can send you from the office exactly what I did in the matter.

Q. Did you sign a recommendation in his case?

A. I do not think I did. I recollect receiving letter after letter from him, and letters were sent to me time and again on his behalf. He was specially uneasy lest he would be tried by a military commission on account of some men who were executed in North Carolina.

Q. Do you recollect talking to the President about him?

A. I do not recollect ever mentioning his name to the President. I will furnish whatever is in my office about him. I received one appeal after another, not only from Pickett himself and his relatives, but from officers in the army who knew him very well and favorably prior to the war.

Q. Do you know whether he has been pardoned yet?

A. I do not know.

Q. State what the circumstances of his case were, and whether you are in favor of his pardon.

A. I was not in favor of his pardon. I was not in favor, however, of his being tried by a military commission. I think that his great anxiety was to receive some assurance that he would not be taken up and imprisoned for offences alleged against him as commander in North Carolina. He wanted to be able to go to work and make a living. It is likely I may have recommended that he be given assurance that he would not be arrested and imprisoned. I do not think that I ever, under any circumstances, signed a recommendation for his pardon. You have no right to ask what my opinion is now.

Q. Was he an active rebel officer?

A. Yes, sir. He was charged with executing a number of North Carolina refugees who were captured with a garrison under General Wessels in North Carolina. Those men had gone there to evade the rebel conscription, or it may be had deserted from the rebel army, and they were tried as deserters, and quite a number of them executed. Pickett was commanding officer at that time, and there was a good deal said of his having approved the proceedings.

Q. Was this man French an active rebel officer?

A. He served in the field. I never heard much of him during the rebellion. He was not generally in the army against which I was personally engaged. He was at one time on the James river, when General McClellan was in command, and was afterwards in the West, but he never filled a conspicuous place.

Q. Did you ever advise the pardon of General Lee?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Were you ever consulted on that question by the President?

A. General Lee forwarded his application for amnesty through me, and I forwarded it to the President, approved.

Q. Did you have any conversation about it with the President?

A. I do not recollect having had any conversation with him on the subject. I think it probable that I recommended verbally the pardon of General Johnston, immediately after the surrender of his army, on account of the address he delivered to his army. I thought it in such good tone and spirit that we should distinguish between him and others who did not appear so well. I recollect speaking of that, and saying that I should be glad if General Johnston received his pardon, on account of the manly manner in which he addressed his troops.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You supposed his pardon would have a good effect?

A. Yes; I thought it would have a good effect. I am not sure whether I spoke on the subject to the Secretary of War or to the President.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you recollect having a conversation with the President at any time when General Hillyer was present?

A. I remember going with General Hillyer to see the President, but it was on the subject of an appointment which he wanted. I went to state to the President what I knew of General Hillyer. I do not recollect the conversation going beyond that range at all, though still it might have done so.

Q. You do not recollect any other meeting with the President when General Hillyer was present?

A. I do not know. I think I met him twice, perhaps, but it was on a subject in which General Hillyer himself was personally interested. Whether the President conversed on any other subjects at that time I do not recollect.

Q. Do you not recollect any conversation with the President, in the presence of General Hillyer, on the subject of granting amnesty to the people of the South?

A. No, sir; I do not recollect any conversation on the subject of general amnesty, and I know that I never was in favor of general amnesty. I do not recollect any conversation at that time on the subject of amnesty at all. I have stated here that I never recommended general amnesty, and never was in favor of it, until the time shall come when it is safe to give it.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. When you say that you did not recommend general amnesty, you mean universal amnesty?

A. I do not recollect of ever having any conversation on the subject of universal amnesty. I know I could not have recommended such a thing, because I never was in favor of it, until the time shall come when it is safe.

Q. I merely put the question in reference to your use of the term "general," because it might be supposed from that that the amnesty in the proclamation was not a general amnesty?

A. I meant universal amnesty, of course.

Q. You state that you differed with the President as to two points in his proclamation, but that his views afterwards changed. State when the President's mind underwent a change.

A. It would be very hard, I reckon, to fix any period for it.

Q. Was it in the summer of 1865?

A. Yes, sir; along in the summer of 1865.

Q. How long after the North Carolina proclamation of the 29th of May?

A. It is impossible for me to say.

Q. Was it more than two or three months?

A. I should think not.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. What did you mean by saying that the President's views afterwards changed?

A. I meant to say that while I was contending for the rights which those rebel paroled soldiers had, he was insisting on it that they should be punished. My remark was confined to that particular subject.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you have any correspondence with the President in writing?

A. Any correspondence I ever had with the President is official, and can be furnished. I had to make frequent endorsements on the subject of the rights of those paroled prisoners. The only correspondence that I could have had on the subject of amnesty was where I recommended men for pardon, as in the case of French and others.

Q. Did you keep copies of them?

A. Yes, sir, and will furnish them.

Q. Do you recollect the proclamation that is called the "North Carolina proclamation?"

A. Yes, sir; that was the first one published giving a State government.

Q. Did you have any conversation with the President as to the terms or purport of that proclamation?

A. I was, as I say, present when it was read. It was in the direction that I wanted. I was anxious to see something done to give some sort of temporary government there. I did not want to see anarchy.

Q. Did you give any opinion in favor of that proposition?

A. I did not give any opinion against it. I was in favor of that or anything else which looked to civil government until Congress could meet and establish governments there. I did not want all chaos left there, and no form of civil government whatever. I was not in favor of anything or opposed to anything particularly. I was simply in favor of having a government there; that was all I wanted. I did not pretend to give my judgment as to what it should be. I was perfectly willing to leave that to the civil department. I asked no person what I should do in my duties; I was willing to take all the responsibilities; and I did not want to give my views as to what the civil branch of the government should do.

Q. Some of those Governors were military officers and held rank in the army?

A. That was during the rebellion. Mr. Johnson was military Governor in Tennessee and General Hamilton in Texas. I do not recollect that there were any other military Governors; the others were provisional Governors. I did not care whether they were called provisional or military Governors. I looked upon them as equally provisional.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. You have stated your opinion as to the rights and privileges of General Lee and his soldiers; did you mean that to include any political rights?

A. I have explained that I did not.

Q. Was there any difference of opinion on that point between yourself and President Johnson at any time?

A. On that point there was no difference of opinion; but there was as to whether the parole gave them any privileges or rights.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. He claiming that it did not, and you claiming that it did?

A. He claiming that the time must come when they could be tried and punished, and I claiming that that time could not come except by a violation of their parole. I claimed that I gave them no political privileges, but that I had a right, as military commander, to arrange terms of surrender which should protect the lives of those prisoners. I believe it is conceded by everybody that I had that right. I know that Mr. Lincoln conceded it at the time.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. How recently has the President expressed to you the opinion that General Lee, or others who had the benefit of the parole, ought to be tried and punished?

A. Not since about two years ago.

Q. Have you at any time heard the President make any remark in reference to admission of members of Congress from the rebel States into either house?

A. I cannot say positively what I have heard him say on that subject. I have heard him say as much, perhaps, in his published speeches last summer, as I ever heard him say at all upon that subject. I have heard him say—and I think I have heard him say it twice in his speeches—that if the North carried the elections by members enough to give them, with the southern members, a majority, why would they not be the Congress of the United States? I have heard him say that several times.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. When you say "the North," you mean the democratic party of the North, or, in other words, the party favoring his policy?

A. I mean if the North carried enough members in favor of the admission of the South. I did not hear him say that he would recognize them as the Congress. I merely heard him ask the question "why would they not be the Congress?"

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When did you hear him say that?

A. I heard him say that in one or two of his speeches. I do not recollect where.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Have you heard him make a remark kindred to that elsewhere?

A. Yes; I have heard him say that, aside from his speeches, in conversation. I cannot say just when. It was probably about that same time.

Q. Have you heard him, at any time, make any remark or suggestion concerning the legality of Congress with the southern members excluded?

A. He alluded to that subject frequently on his tour to Chicago and back last summer. His speeches were generally reported with considerable accuracy. I cannot recollect what he said, except in general terms; but I read his speeches at the time, and they were reported with considerable accuracy.

Q. Did you hear him say anything in private on that subject, either during that trip or at any other time?

A. I do not recollect specially.

Q. Did you at any time hear him make any remark concerning the executive department of the government?

A. No. I never heard him allude to that.

Q. Did you ever hear him make any remark looking to any controversy between Congress and the Executive?

A. I think not.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. I understand you to say that you were very anxious, at the close of the war, that civil governments should be established in some form as speedily as possible, and that you so advised the President?

A. I so stated frequently in his presence.

Q. But that you advised no particular form or mode of proceeding?

A. I did not.

Q. Were you present when this North Carolina proclamation was read in the Cabinet?

A. I would not be certain, but my recollection is that the first time I heard it read was in the presence only of the President, the Secretary of War, and myself.

Q. Did you give your assent to that plan?

A. I did not dissent from it. That is just in accordance with what I have stated. It was a civil matter, and, although I was anxious to have something done, I did not intend to dictate any plan. I do not think I said anything about it, or expressed any opinion about it at that time. I looked upon it simply as a temporary measure, to establish a sort of government, until Congress should meet and settle the whole question, and that it did not make much difference how it was done, so there was a form of government there.

Q. Were you present at that time by invitation of the President or the Secretary of War?

A. I must have been.

Q. Were you not invited for the purpose of getting your views as to whether it was a judicious plan to be adopted for the time?

A. I suppose I was free to express my views. I suppose the object was, perhaps, that I might express my views if I could suggest any change.

Q. Were you at the time asked your views in reference to it?

A. I do not think I was. I think it was merely read over.

Q. You think you neither assented nor dissented?

A. I know that if I had been asked the question I would have assented to that or almost anything else that would have given stable government there.

Q. In reference to the amnesty proclamation, I wish to know whether you ever gave your opinion to the President as to whether it was too liberal or not liberal enough in its clauses?

A. I think I have answered that question pretty fully. When the proclamation was published, I told the President that there were two points on which I disagreed with him—that is, as to excluding volunteer generals, and as to the $20,000 clause. I do not say anything as to whether the rest of it was too liberal or too stringent. I can state what I thought about it, but not what I said about it.

Q. I wish to know whether, at or about the time of the war being ended, you advised the President that it was, in your judgment, best to extend a liberal policy towards the people of the South, and to restore as speedily as possible the fraternal relations which existed prior to the war between the two sections?

A. I know that immediately after the close of the rebellion there was a very fine feeling manifested in the South, and I thought we ought to take advantage of it as soon as possible; but since that there has been an evident change there. I may have expressed my views to the President.

Q. What is your recollection in reference to that?

A. I may have done so, and it is probable that I did; I do not recollect particularly. I know that I conversed with the President very frequently. I do not suppose that there were any persons engaged in that consultation who thought of what was being done at that time as being lasting—any longer than until Congress would meet and either ratify that or establish some other form of government. I know it never crossed my mind that what was being done was anything more than temporary.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. You understood that to be the view of the President?

A. I understood that to be the view of the President and of everybody else. I did not know of any difference of opinion on that subject.

Q. Did you understand that to be his view as other proclamations appeared from time to time?

A. I cannot say as to that. It would seem that he was very anxious to have Congress ratify his own views.

By Mr. WOODBRIDGE:

Q. I understood you to say that Mr. Lincoln, prior to his assassination, had inaugurated a policy intended to restore those governments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were present when the subject was before the Cabinet?

A. I was present, I think, twice before the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, when a plan was read.

Q. I want to know whether the plan adopted by Mr. Johnson was substantially the plan which had been inaugurated by Mr. Lincoln as the basis for his future action?

A. Yes, sir, substantially. I do not know but that it was verbatim the same.

Q. I suppose the very paper of Mr. Lincoln was the one acted on?

A. I should think so. I think that the very paper which I heard read twice while Mr. Lincoln was President, was the one which was carried right through.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. What paper was that?

A. The North Carolina proclamation.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. You understood that Mr. Lincoln's plan was temporary, to be either confirmed or a new government set up by Congress?

A. Yes; and I understood Mr. Johnson's to be so too.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Was there anything said on that subject, or was that your inference?

A. That was my inference.

Q. You never heard the President say the plan was to be temporary?

A. No; but I was satisfied that everybody looked on it as simply temporary until Congress met.

Q. You stated that the North Carolina proclamation was a continuation of the project submitted by Mr. Lincoln. I wish to inquire of you whether you ever compared them to ascertain whether they were the same or not?

A. No, sir; I never compared them. I took them to be the very same papers. The papers were substantially the same, if not the very same.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20, 1867.

General ULYSSES S. GRANT recalled and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Do you recollect having an interview with the President in company with General Hillyer, on the return of General Hillyer from the South?

A. Since my attention was called to it I do. I did not remember it when I gave my testimony the last day here.

Q. What is your recollection of what transpired and was said at that interview?

A. My recollection is that General Hillyer called to explain to the President what he had seen in the South, and what he had heard of the views and opinions of the people there; and that what he had seen was an acquiescence on the part of the southern people, and favorable to peace, harmony, and good will. That was said in general terms, but the language I do not remember.

Q. Do you recollect whether, at that interview, there was any expression by the President as to any political policy?

A. No, sir, I do not; I remember General Hillyer said something of having been invited to make a speech in New York, or some place, I do not remember where, and that he should do so, and send me a copy of his speech. I am very sure that he mentioned that in the presence of the President. What he said in that speech I do not remember now, but I presume the speech could be procured. I remember that General Hillyer gave the substance of what leading men said to him in the South. He particularly mentioned Judge Hale, of Alabama. He said that Judge Hale very candidly said that when they went into the rebellion they took their lives, property, &c., in their hands, and that when they were defeated, they should accept such conditions as the government chose to give; and that they claim now that what they did they did in good faith, and would not take it back again. Judge Hale claimed no right whatever after the failure of the rebellion, except such as was granted to them. That was the point he made. The conversation was made up considerably of instances of that sort. I recollect his mentioning meeting a special party in Mobile, and what occurred there.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, June 13, 1865.

LEE, GENERAL R. E.—For benefits, and full restoration of all rights and privileges extended to those included in amnesty proclamation of the President of 29th May, 1865.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES,
16th June, 1865.

Respectfully forwarded through the Secretary of War to the President, with earnest recommendation that the application of General Robert E. Lee for amnesty and pardon may be granted him.

The oath of allegiance, required by recent order of the President to accompany application, does not accompany this, for the reason, as I am informed by General Ord, the order requiring it had not reached Richmond when this was forwarded.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY UNITED STATES, 18th July, 1867.

Official copy:

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, June 13, 1865.

LEE, GENERAL ROBERT E.—Understanding that he and other officers are to be indicted by grand jury at Norfolk, Virginia, states his readiness to be brought to trial, but had supposed the terms of his surrender protected him; therefore prays, &c.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
18th June, 1865.

In my opinion, the officers and men paroled at Appomattox Court House, and since, upon the same terms given to Lee, cannot be tried for treason so long as they observe the terms of their parole. This is my understanding. Good faith as well as true policy dictates that we should observe the conditions of that convention. Bad faith on the part of the government, or a construction of that convention subjecting officers to trial for treason, would produce a feeling of insecurity in the minds of all the paroled officers and men. If so disposed they might even regard such an infraction of terms by the government as an entire release from all obligations on their part.

I will state, further, that the terms granted by me met with the hearty approval of the President at the time, and of the people generally.

The action of Judge Underwood in Norfolk has had an injurious effect, and I would ask that he be ordered to quash all indictments found against paroled prisoners of war, and to desist from further prosecution of them.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES, 18th July, 1867.

Official copy:

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

(Cipher.)

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
WASHINGTON, May 6, 1865, 1 p. m.

MAJOR GENERAL HALLECK, Richmond, Virginia:

Since receipt of your despatch of 3d, I think it will be advisable to leave Hunter alone for the present.

Although it would meet with opposition in the North to allow Lee the benefit of amnesty, I think it would have the best possible effect towards restoring good feeling and peace in the South to have him come in. All the people except a few political leaders in the South will accept whatever he does as right, and will be guided to a great extent by his example.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES, July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 12, 1866.

PICKETT, GENERAL GEORGE E.—Presents history of his case, refers to surrender and agreement of April 9, 1865, and asks for protection from prosecution for treason.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
March 16, 1866.

Respectfully forwarded to his excellency the President of the United States, with the recommendation that clemency be extended in this case, or assurance given that no trial will take place for the offence charged against George E. Pickett.

During the rebellion belligerent rights were acknowledged to the enemies of our country, and it is clear to me that the parole given by the armies, laying down their arms, protects them against punishment for acts lawful to any other belligerent. In this case, I know it is claimed that the men tried and convicted for crime of desertion were Union men from North Carolina who had found refuge within our lines and in our service. The punishment was a hard one, but it was in time of war, and upon the enemy; they no doubt felt it necessary to retain by some power the service of every man within their reach.

General Pickett I know, personally, to be an honorable man, but in this case his judgment prompted him to do what cannot well be sustained, though I do not see how good, either to the friends of the deceased, or by fixing an example for the future, can be secured by his trial now. It would only open up the question whether or not the government did not disregard its contract entered into to secure the surrender of an armed enemy.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY UNITED STATES, 19th July, 1867.

Official copy:

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, March 26, 1866.

BEALL, W. H. R.—Application for pardon.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
2d April, 1866.

Respectfully submitted to his excellency the President, through the honorable Secretary of War, and recommended.

U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY UNITED STATES,
19th July, 1867.

Official copy:

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Thursday, July 18, 1867.

General ULYSSES S. GRANT recalled and examined.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Did the President propose, at any time, to use the military power for the adjustment of the controversy in Baltimore between the police commissioners appointed by Governor Swann and those who claimed authority independent of Governor Swann?

A. I understood that he wanted to use it, and I called his attention to the law on the subject, which changed his views and determination evidently. I called his attention to the only circumstances in which the military forces of the United States can be called out to interfere in State matters. It was his intention to send troops there to enable Governor Swann, as he termed it, to enforce his decision in the case of those police commissioners.

Q. Did the President, on account of your opinion, change that purpose?

A. I made a communication to him on the subject, which led to the Attorney General giving an opinion as to the power to use the military forces of the United States to interfere in State affairs; and that led to a change of what was intended to be done. After this whole question was settled as to sending the military there, there were six companies of new troops organized in New York harbor, which belonged to regiments south of here, and I ordered them to their regiments, and to stop at Fort McHenry on their way down, in order to keep them there until after the election, with a view to have a force there in case there was a bloody riot.

Q. Do I understand you to say that the President changed his purpose in that respect before the difficulty had been adjusted in Baltimore?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. That was in accord with your opinion, endorsed by the Attorney General?
A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Have you a copy of the letter addressed by you to the President?
A. I have a copy of everything official except conversation.
(Witness was directed to furnish the official documents on the subject.)

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Did the President signify his wish concerning the army in writing or verbally?
A. Verbally and in writing.
Q. Were you sent for formally?
A. Yes, sir. I was sent for several times—twice, I think, while Governor Swann was there in consultation with the President. Finding that the President wanted to send the military to Baltimore, I objected to it.
Q. Are you distinct in your recollection as to when the President acquiesced in your views?
A. It was prior to the election, two or three days. When the matter was left entirely with me, I ordered those troops down to join their regiments, and to halt at Fort McHenry until after the election.
Q. Was it before or after the arrest of the commissioners appointed by Governor Swann, that the President withdrew his request to you to use the army in that controversy?
A. I cannot state precisely as to that. It was before I ordered the troops from New York. What took place was in conversation, until I found that there was rather a determination to send troops there, and then I communicated officially to the Secretary of War my objection to using troops in that way. That called out the opinion of the Attorney General, and it was then that what I proposed was acquiesced in. I thought this was in writing, but do not find the paper.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. The President seemed to think he had a right to send the army under the circumstances?
A. Yes, sir; he seemed to think so.
Q. After you sent your written communication, giving your views in reference to it, the President then left the subject entirely in your hands?
A. Yes, sir; he left it entirely in my hands. I think that is in writing.
(Witness was directed to furnish a copy of the communication.)

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. That was a formal withdrawal of his first opinion?
A. Yes, sir. I think I was sent a copy of the Attorney General's opinion as a sort of order in the matter, virtually leaving it to me.
Q. After that time you did have the management of it?
A. Yes, sir. I sent General Canby to Baltimore, and went there twice myself, and had troops stop there on their way to the South.
Q. It was entirely within your control?
A. Yes, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. They were solely for the purpose of being used in the case of a riot?
A. Solely for that purpose.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Merely as a police force?
A. Yes, sir.
I desire to make the following explanation of my evidence: On examination of the record I find there is more matter, in writing, from the President than, from memory, I thought there was. Also, that I have either misplaced or never wrote objections which I made verbally to what was asked of the President by Governor Swann, of Maryland, in the way of services of United States troops, and which the President seemed desirous of giving. Governor Swann visited the President, to my knowledge, (how often I do not know,) before the trial of the Baltimore police commissioners, to get the promise of military aid in case he should remove them. During the trial, and before the promulgation of his findings, he also visited the President for the same purpose. At least once before the trial, and once during the progress of the trial of the police commissioners, I was sent for to meet Governor Swann at the Executive mansion. Much was said by me on those occasions, but, as before stated, I have confused, in my evidence, what was verbal with what was written.

DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON,
Washington, D. C., October 23, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I have visited Baltimore for the purpose indicated in your verbal instructions of Saturday, the 20th instant. The controversy now pending grows out of a provision in the present State constitution which disfranchises persons who gave aid to, or sympathized with, the late rebellion.

Effect was given to this provision by very stringent laws, but it is alleged that during the past year attempts have been made to evade these laws by including in the registry of voters persons who are not under the constitution entitled to vote. This, on the ground that the oath required is illegal and void, and not binding in conscience or in law.

The correction of the registry is required by law to be completed on the 31st of October of each year. For this reason, and under an opinion of the Attorney General of the United States, the registry of 1865 controlled at the late municipal election, and the issue now presented was not so prominently exhibited.

About 14,000 names have been added in the registry of 1866 for the city of Baltimore, and about 10,000 in the remaining parts of the State, or about 28,000 in the entire State. Of this increase forty or fifty per cent. is due, it is alleged, to the registration of persons who, under the constitution and laws of the State, are not entitled to vote. It is contended by the one party that the simple registration is conclusive as to the right to vote, and by the other that it is only a prima facie evidence of that right; that it is subject to challenge and upon proof of disqualification to register.

The new registry becomes effective after the 31st instant, and will, of course, control at the coming State election; and the present contest, divested of all side issues, is for the power to admit to vote, or to exclude from voting, persons who are, or who are alleged to be, disqualified by the State constitution.

I know nothing of the charges against the police commissioners beyond what is stated in the public prints, and these relate mainly to duties that are committed by the constitution and by law to the judges of the elections. As these officers are amenable under the law to heavy penalties, and can easily be reached by ordinary legal proceedings, the present attempt appears to be an effort to secure political power by indirect means, and through that power to admit persons to vote who are disqualified by the State constitution, and must remain disqualified until that constitution is changed. It is so regarded by a large part of the population of Baltimore, who look upon it as an attempt to subvert the constitution of the State by indirect means, and are prepared to resist it.

The city was quiet, but the feeling upon this point is deep and intense. I had no means of ascertaining the extent of any organizations for this purpose, but I have no doubt that they exist, as I was informed by the police commissioners that they had been offered support in the city, but had declined it because they relied upon their innocence of the charges against them, and believe that the Governor would be convinced of this as soon as he ascertained their true character.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) E. R. S. CANBY,
Brevet Major General Commanding.

General U. S. GRANT,
Commanding United States Army, Washington, D. C.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
July 19, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 24, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose to you the within report from General Canby, commander of this military department, upon the threatened violence in the city of Baltimore previous to the approaching elections. Upon receiving your verbal instructions of the 20th instant, to look into the nature of the threatened difficulties in Baltimore, and to ascertain what course should be pursued to prevent it, I gave General Canby, whose department embraces the State of Maryland, instructions, also verbal, to proceed to Baltimore in person to ascertain as nearly as he could the cause which threatened to lead to riot and bloodshed. The report submitted is given in pursuance of these instructions.

Since the rendition of General Canby's report I had a long conversation with him and also with Governor Swann, of the State of Maryland. It is the opinion of General Canby, and the statement of Governor Swann, that no danger of riot need be apprehended unless the latter should find it necessary to remove the present police commissioners of Baltimore from office and to appoint their successors. No action in this direction has been taken yet, nor will there be until Friday next, when the trial of the commissioners, before the Governor, is set to take place. I cannot see the possible necessity for calling in the aid of the military in advance of even the cause (the removal of said commissioners) which is to induce riot.

The conviction is forced on my mind that no reason now exists for giving or promising the military aid of the government to support the laws of Maryland. The tendency of giving such aid or promise would be to produce the very result intended to be averted. So far there seems to be merely a very bitter contest for political ascendancy in the State. Military interference would be interpreted as giving aid to one of the factions, no matter how pure the intentions or how guarded and just the instructions. It is a contingency I hope never to see arise in this country, while I occupy the position of general-in-chief of the army, to have to send troops into a State in full relations with the general government, on the eve of an election, to preserve the peace. If insurrection does come, the law provides the method of calling out forces to suppress it. No such condition seems to exist now.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) U. S. GRANT, General.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 19, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., October 25, 1866.

SIR: From recent developments, serious troubles are apprehended from a conflict of authority between the executive of the State of Maryland and the police commissioners of the city of Baltimore. Armed organizations, it is alleged, have been made that, should a collision occur, armed bodies from other States would enter Maryland, with the view of controlling its people in the settlement of questions exclusively local in character. The Governor of Maryland has, therefore, deemed it expedient and proper to issue a proclamation, bearing date the 22d instant, warning all persons against such unlawful and revolutionary combinations.

In the event of serious insurrectionary disorders, the government of the United States might be called upon to aid in their suppression; and I, therefore, request that you will inform me of the number of federal troops at present stationed in the city of Baltimore or vicinity that would be available for prompt use, should their services be required, to protect the State from invasion and domestic violence, and to sustain the properly constituted authorities of Maryland.

Very respectfully, yours,

(Signed) ANDREW JOHNSON.

General U. S. GRANT,
United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Endorsement.]

Respectfully returned. When the President mentioned to me one week ago his apprehensions of difficulties in the city of Baltimore at or previous to the election, I caused an investigation to be made into the origin of the troubles, with the view of recommending such action as I might think should be taken by the military branch of the government.

The direction, if what was said in conversation might be regarded as direction, coming directly from the President, my report on the subject was made directly to him, without sending a copy to the War Department. For the information of the Secretary of War, I therefore now attach a copy of that report.

A return of all the troops in this military department shows the aggregate to be 2,224, of which "for duty" 1,550, every one of whom may, in view of facilities by rail and steamers, be regarded as in the vicinity of Baltimore, and full two-thirds of them would be available for prompt use, should their services be required to protect the State from invasion and domestic violence.

(Signed) U. S. GRANT, General.

OCTOBER 27, 1866.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., November 1, 1866.

SIR: In the report of General Grant of the 27th ultimo, enclosed in your communication of that date, reference is made to the force at present stationed in the military department of Washington, (which embraces the Dirtrict of Columbia, the counties of Alexandria and Fairfax, Virginia, and the States of Maryland and Delaware;) and it is stated that the entire number of troops comprised in the command is 2,224, of which only 1,550 are enumerated as "effective." In view of the prevalence, in various portions of the country, of a revolutionary and turbulent disposition, which might at any moment assume insurrectionary proportions and lead to serious disorders, and of the duty of the government to be at all times prepared to act with decision and effect, this force is not deemed adequate for the protection and security of the seat of government. I therefore request that you will at once take such measures as will insure its safety, and thus discourage any attempt for its possession by insurgent or other illegal combinations.

Very respectfully, yours,

(Signed) ANDREW JOHNSON.

To the honorable EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Referred to General Grant, with directions to take such measures as, in his judgment, are proper and within his power to carry into execution the within directions of the President.

(Signed) EDWIN M. STANTON.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., November 2, 1866.

GENERAL: General Grant desires me to say that there is in Baltimore very high political feeling, which may possibly result in collision and bloodshed. It is reported that organizations of ex-soldiers, called "Boys in Blue," exist there, and threats have been made that similar organizations from Pennsylvania would pour into Baltimore if there should be in that city a serious collision between the two political parties.

Such an invasion would inevitably cause serious bloodshed, and might lead to the most deplorable consequences. The General desires that you obtain all the information you can in reference to such movements if any should be contemplated, and use your influence in the way you deem most efficient to prevent such organizations from entering Maryland from Pennsylvania, and report at once by telegraph for orders as to the use of troops in case such an attempt should be made.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. B. COMSTOCK.

General G. G. MEADE,
Commanding Department of the East.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., November 2, 1866.

SIR: There is ground to apprehend danger of an insurrection in Baltimore against the constituted authorities of the State of Maryland on or about the day of the election soon to be held in that city, and that in such contingency the aid of the United States might be invoked under the acts of Congress which pertain to that subject. Whilst I am averse to any military demonstration that would have a tendency to interfere with the free exercise of the elective franchise in Baltimore, or be construed into any interference in local questions, I feel great solicitude that, should an insurrection take place, the government should be prepared to meet and promptly put it down. I accordingly desire you to call General Grant's attention to the subject, leaving to his own discretion and judgment the measures of preparation and precaution that should be adopted.

Very respectfully yours,

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., November 2, 1866.

GENERAL: Enclosed I send you orders just received from the President of the United States. They fully explain themselves. As commander of the military department including the State of Maryland, you will take immediate steps for carrying them into execution. There are now six or eight companies of infantry ready organized in New York that have been ordered to Baltimore on their way to their regiments here in Washington and in Virginia. Either visit Baltimore yourself or send a staff officer there to stop these troops at Fort McHenry until further orders. Also hold one of the infantry regiments on duty in this city in readiness to move at a moment's notice. By having cars ready to take a regiment all at once, they will be practically as near Baltimore here, as if in camp a few miles from that city.

These are all the instructions deemed necessary in advance of troops being legally called out to suppress insurrection or invasion. Having the greatest confidence, however, in your judgment and discretion, I wish you to go to Baltimore in person, and to remain there until the threatened difficulties have passed over. Proper discretion will no doubt go further towards preventing conflict than force.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT, General.

General E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Department of Washington.

P. S. The orders referred to have not as yet been received; when received they will be forwarded to your address, which you will please communicate.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, November 3, 1866.

GENERAL: I enclose herewith a copy of the President's instructions referred to in General Grant's letter to you of yesterday.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. B. COMSTOCK.

General E. R. S. CANBY,
Commanding Department of Washington.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Major and Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 4, 1866.

Major General E. R. S. CANBY, Baltimore, Maryland:

I will be at the Eutaw House at 8.30 this evening. Would like to see you, Judge Bond, the police commissioners, and one or two leading members of the Governor's party.

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 18, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

BALTIMORE, MARYLAND, November 5, 1866.

Hon E. M. STANTON, Washington, D. C.:

This morning collision looked almost inevitable. Wiser counsels now seem to prevail, and I think there is strong hope that no riot will occur. Propositions looking to the harmonizing of parties are now pending.

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
July 19, 1867.

Official copy.

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 7, 1866.

Major General CANBY, Baltimore, Maryland:

You may return to Washington, and the troops here may be restored where they were, and the railroad men relieved from readiness to transport troops to Baltimore. Leave directions for sending the troops at Fort McHenry as suggested in your despatch on Friday or Saturday. It may be well to retain them where they are for a day or two to guard against accident.

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 19, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 8, 1866.

General E. R. S. CANBY, No. 14 Calvert street, Baltimore:

General Grant directs me to say that you may now return everything to its condition before the recent election in Baltimore.

C. B. COMSTOCK,
Brevet Brigadier General and Aide-de-Camp.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 19, 1867.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 18, 1867.

WILLIAM S. HILLYER sworn and examined.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were you on the staff of General Grant?

A. I was during part of the war—from shortly after his first appointment until July, 1863.

Q. Did you ever visit the President with General Grant?

A. Yes.

Q. When?

A. I have visited him with General Grant on two or three occasions.

Q. When first?

A. The first interview, I think, was in the fall of 1865; the next interview was about February 1st, 1866.

Q. When, after that?

A. I do not now remember any visit made with General Grant subsequent to February, 1866. I think I have been there for a moment or two on two or three occasions. The only interview I now remember, of any length, was in February, 1866.

Q. Did you hear any conversation at any time between the President and General Grant on the subject of amnesty, or pardoning of rebels?

A. I was present at a two hours' interview about February 1st, 1866, when there was a general discussion of all matters pertaining to the condition of the South. To explain how that interview occurred—

Q. No matter about that. Tell us what did occur. State the conversation between the President, yourself, and General Grant. Was there any other person present?

A. No.

Q. Then state the conversation that occurred between yourself, the President, and General Grant, as near as you can.

A. It would be impossible for me to make any specific statements of that conversation. It was a general conversation, of which I cannot now recall any specific statement made by either the President, General Grant, or myself. I had just returned from a trip through part of the South.

Q. Through what part of the South?

A. Through Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

Q. What was the occasion of your visit to the President with General Grant? I will ask you were you applying for an appointment?

A. Not at that time. I was an applicant for an appointment, but that subject was never discussed between the President, General Grant, and myself.

Q. Was this one of the occasions on which you had come for that purpose?
A. No.
Q. What was the occasion?
A. I will state to you the history of it. In the fall of 1865 General Grant made a visit to the South. He went to the States of Virginia and the Carolinas; and during his absence my wife, at the request of Mrs. Grant, came and staid with her here. I waited for his return in order to make a trip South on business which I had at Mobile, and I came here on the morning that he returned from the South to take my family back to New York. We both arrived here before breakfast in the morning, and had a conversation at the breakfast table in reference to his absence South.
Q. You mean you and General Grant?
A. Yes. I told him I was about to go South myself, to Mobile, and that when I returned I would come and see him, and compare notes. I made this visit to the South, and was gone about six weeks; and on my return I came over to Washington and saw General Grant, when I stated to him my impressions of the South, and the condition of society there. And at either his or my own suggestion—I do not know whether at his or mine, but at either his or mine—we went to see the President on this subject. I had been invited to make a speech in New York in reference to my southern trip, and I spoke to General Grant on that subject.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you go there with that intent?
A. Yes. We went, and, I believe, had two hours interview, of which I cannot now remember any specific statement made by either General Grant, the President, or myself. There was a general conversation, at the end of which the President said to me that he desired that I should bear public testimony to what I had stated that day. And General Grant said that I had been invited to make a speech in New York and could do it in that way. I remember distinctly the President said to me that he desired I should say in that speech just what I said there that day.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Tell us the conversation between the President, General Grant, and yourself. Repeat as much of what you stated, the President stated, and General Grant stated, in the order in which each said it, as you can.
A. It would be utterly impossible now to recount the conversation.
Q. I do not expect you to do that; but state what you recollect, the substance of it. I do not expect you can repeat the whole of it, but go on and as near as you can, and as correctly as you can, state it.
A. I do not think I can give the conversation. It was a general conversation, in which there was entire unity between the President, General Grant, and myself. I do not now recollect any statement made by either of the party.
Q. You must remember what you were going to incorporate in the speech—a matter of that importance.
A. I could, by referring to that speech, refresh my memory. The speech was made immediately afterwards.
Q. Did you afterwards make that speech, and was there in that speech what you then said?
A. Yes; the substance of what I said was in that speech.
Q. Where did you make that speech?
A. In the city of New York.
Q. At what place?
A. At Masonic Hall.
Q. At what time?

A. The 9th of February.
Q. In what year?
A. 1866.
Q. Have you a copy of that speech?
A. I have it in New York.
Q. Can you furnish a copy of that speech to the Committee?
A. I think I can.
Q. Does that speech include the remarks which General Grant said to the President that you intended to make in the speech? Give us now as much of that conversation as you can recollect.
A. I understand you. And yet a conversation occurring over two years ago between three parties, and to which my attention has not been called since, I cannot recollect. I really cannot now individualize any remarks that were made on that occasion.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You say that the President desired you should incorporate in the speech what you then said. Now, what was that?
A. I would like very much to be permitted to look at that speech. I have made several speeches since. That speech was in favor of the policy of the President as applied to the condition of the South, and my observation of things in the South as sustaining his policy. It was a speech of some eighteen or twenty pages.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. And expressed approval or disapproval of Congress?
A. I think I took issue with Congress in my speech.
Q. I want to know whether you, in that speech or in this conversation, took the position that the policy of the President should be enforced as the policy of the country, regardless of the will of Congress?
A. I took this position—I recollect very distinctly now—(which was my then impression) that the President represented the popular sentiment of the North, and that Congress misrepresented the sentiments of the North. That was my then impression, and I remember stating that in my speech, and in that conversation with General Grant and the President, to which I have referred. I stated to the people of the South that the President represented, in my judgment, the opinion of the people of the North, and that the Congress misrepresented the sentiments of the people of the North.
Q. What did you include in the term "sentiments of the people of the North?"
A. I meant the opinion of the majority of the people of the North.
Q. In respect to what?
A. In respect to his policy of reconstruction—~~in respect to the rights~~ of the States to representation in Congress.
Q. Regardless of the will of Congress?
A. Regardless of the will of Congress—regardless of the will of that part of Congress——

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. What part of Congress do you refer to?
A. That part representing the States which was recognized as Congress.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you express that opinion in view of what you believed to be the public sentiment of the majority of the people of the North, or as your view of the President's power under the Constitution?
A. I spoke of it as what I regarded to be the sentiment of the majority of the people of the North, and of the republican party, as I then stated, and in my speech.

Q. You seem to have found out you have been mistaken in that.

A. I am, sir, very decidedly. I found out that I was mistaken in my opinion of the sentiments of the party at that time?

Q. State now precisely what you stated in that conversation, and which the President requested you to repeat in that speech.

A. If I could look at that speech I could recall a great deal which I do not now. I did not know that I was called here to testify to this, and I was taken by surprise as to the questions asked me. It is impossible for me to recollect a conversation which took place two years ago.

Q. I would like to have as much as you can recollect of it. You will have an opportunity of correcting your testimony.

A. This speech was written immediately after this conversation, and was an embodiment of my recollection of the points that were made in the conversation.

Q. Allow me, then, to ask you this question, if you do not recollect sufficiently so as to make a specific statement: Did General Grant express to the President his views as to the question of the amnesty which the President should grant, and did the President express his views on that question?

A. I could not state whether in that conversation General Grant individually expressed an opinion on the subject of amnesty or not. I cannot now remember any specific statement made by either party. The conversation was of two hours' duration, and there was entire harmony between the party; and the speech which I made was intended to be in harmony with the views of all parties present. If I had time, or if I had any idea of what I would be examined on, I might be able to recall some points of the conversation. But now it is in my mind as a general conversation, and I do not remember any specific remarks made by any one. If I could refer to my speech I could recollect everything I said myself.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. If I understand you, you called on the President on the suggestion of General Grant?

A. I am not sure whether I suggested it or he did so; but we went after my conversation with him on the subject. We first had a conversation alone, and then, at either his suggestion or mine, we went to talk to the President.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You expressed the views to General Grant that you afterwards expressed to the President, in substance?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you think you can recollect, so as to give us something that was said there?

A. By reference to my speech I can tell the points I made myself in the conversation.

Q. Can you tell those to which the President gave his assent?

A. He assented to all those propositions I made on the occasion.

Q. He, and General Grant, and yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. There was no discord?

A. There was no discord.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. If I understand you correctly, you state you made this speech in harmony with and in accordance with the wishes of the President, who was desirous you should make the same statements that you made in the South and to him.

A. Yes; his request was that I should bear public testimony. I supposed I was to go before a committee then in session. My making the speech was the result of an invitation I had previously received to make one in New York, and of which I had acquainted General Grant, who mentioned it to the President.

Q. Was that communication made by General Grant or by yourself?

A. In the conversation the President asked me to bear public testimony to what I had said, and General Grant responded that I had been invited to make a speech in New York and could do it then.

Q. And you stated to the President that you had represented in the South that the President represented the popular sentiment in the North, and that Congress misrepresented it?

A. Yes.

Q. Then you were expected to bear testimony on that point at the meeting in New York?

A. That was the point I stated in the conversation, and I was asked to state the same.

Q. It was one of the things which the President expected you to state to the meeting?

A. It was one of the things I had stated to him, and he asked me to state what I had stated to him.

Q. And at the meeting you stated that the President represented the majority of the people of the North, and that Congress did not?

A. Yes; in my opinion.

Q. And you further stated this was a matter belonging to the President, and was to be arranged without the will of Congress?

A. No.

Q. What did you say, then, in regard to the will of Congress?

A. That in my opinion the President represented the popular will and opinion of the North, and that Congress misrepresented the popular will; and that when the voice of the people of the North was fairly represented, the opinion and action of Congress would be in accordance with the views of the President.

Q. You stated in one of your answers that this matter was within the control of the President, regardless of the will of Congress?

A. I don't know I stated that.

Q. Were not the sentiments described by yourself as uttered by yourself in your speech at New York uttered in conformity with the wishes of the President?

A. I stated there what I stated here. The President desired that I should say in my speech what I stated in the conversation.

Q. Did you say anything in your speech not authorized in your conversation with him—anything he did not wish you to say?

A. I may have used figures of speech; I may have used denunciatory language.

Q. I mean in substance?

A. The substance of the speech was the substance of that conversation.

Q. And the points made?

A. Yes.

Q. And was it, as you understand, in entire accord with the sentiments of the President, as expressed to you in that conversation?

A. There was no dissent in the party.

Mr. ELDRIDGE. I suggest the gentleman be allowed to refer to his speech to refresh his memory.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Was it not entirely in accord with the views of General Grant?

A. General Grant was present, but I cannot now make any statement that was made by General Grant on that occasion except the one I refer to in making the speech. I only remember the fact that there was entire harmony in the party, and no exceptions taken to any proposition laid down, to my best recollection; but as to any positive assent or dissent, I do not now remember.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Be good enough to say, is not General Grant a very silent, reserved man, who talks very little?

A. That is his reputation, and a just one.

Q. Did he take any large share in the conversation to which you refer?

A. Yes; he joined in the conversation. The conversation was a general one, in which questions were asked and answers given.

Q. Was your speech read by the President after its delivery?

A. I think he so stated to me, although I am not positive about that.

Q. Did he approve it.

A. I know there was a reference made to the subject in a subsequent conversation, but I do not know that any special remarks were made about it. But he spoke of it, and I should judge from that that he read it.

Q. You cannot say that he approved of it?

A. I can only give my impression that he did.

Q. I do not ask you to detail the conversation, but what was it that gave you the impression that he did approve of it? he said nothing in the way of disapprobation?

A. I have no recollection, but I know that I got the impression that he read the speech. Allusion was made to the speech certainly, but I do not recollect that he said that he approved it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. How long after the conversation between General Grant, the President, and yourself, did you write the speech?

A. I returned to New York, and commenced writing the speech immediately.

Q. The same day, or next day?

A. I am not sure; within a day or two probably; it was as soon as I could after I returned home. I told General Grant that I would send him a copy of the speech before it was delivered, but did not do so. I did not have time or opportunity to do so; so that he did not see the speech until after its delivery.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When did you go South?

A. I think about December 1st, 1865.

Q. Why did you go?

A. I was employed as counsel; I went professionally.

Q. Had you a conversation with the President before you went?

A. I do not remember that I had.

Q. Did you have any correspondence with him while you were away?

A. None whatever.

Q. Do you know whether he knew you were going?

A. I think not.

Q. When you came here on your return, did you intend to see the President while you were here?

A. I desired to.

Q. You came here with that intention?

A. I am under that impression now.

Q. Where did you meet General Grant?

A. I met him, I think, at his office.

Q. You went there to see him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did that visit to General Grant have any connection with your purpose of seeing the President while you were here? Did you go to General Grant's office for the purpose of having him go with you to the President?

A. I think I may have expected, if I called on the President, that General Grant would go with me.

Q. You were acquainted with the President personally?

A. I knew the President previously.

Q. Were you upon such terms with him that you expected to get an interview with him without the aid of some person?

A. No; except as any other individual.

Q. Did not you then go to General Grant in part for the purpose of having him take you to the President?

A. I don't now remember whether I expected to see the President with General Grant; I went to see General Grant to talk with him.

Q. Upon this matter?

A. Yes.

Q. That was also the purpose of your proposed visit to the President—to talk with him on reconstruction and the condition of the South?

A. To give him my observations.

Q. Was it not, then, one part of your purpose in visiting General Grant to get his aid in obtaining an interview with the President?

A. It may have been, although I do not now remember.

Q. General Grant went with you?

A. Yes; it is very possible I may have suggested his going; I do not remember now how that was. I had been invited to make this speech, and I desired to talk with General Grant, and I presume I desired to talk with the President before I made the speech.

Q. Did you not come here for the purpose of talking with the President?

A. I presume so.

Q. Is it not a fact that General Grant listened to what you said to the President, and did or did not dissent from what you said?

A. General Grant participated in the conversation; it was a general conversation

Q. You mean a general conversation upon the condition of the South?

A. Yes; upon the condition of the South, and the tone and sentiments of the people of the South and in the North.

Q. This was in February, 1866?

A. Yes.

Q. When did you next have an interview with the President?

A. I saw the President shortly after I made that speech; I could not say when; within a few weeks—may be a month after.

Q. What was the subject of conversation in that interview?

A. We discussed general politics and local appointments.

Q. And when again did you see him?

A. I cannot say; I almost always see the President when I come to Washington.

Q. Have you been in the habit of visiting him?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you see the President in the months of November or December, 1866?

A. I do not think I have had any conversation with him of any duration prior to this matter.

Q. I speak now of November or December, 1866.

A. I have, very likely; there is nothing to call my attention to it.

Q. Do you recollect, in any conversation with the President, that the subject of the admission of members of Congress from the South was considered or talked of by him or by you?

A. I do not remember any specific conversation.

Q. Was anything said by the President, at any interview you had with him, as to whether men from the South should be admitted to Congress—men from the rebel States?

A. I think he expressed to me his views of the right of the southern States to representation. I don't recollect any specific conversation.

Q. In what words did he express his views as to their right to be admitted?

A. I do not remember any specific statement of his on the subject, but it was within the scope of our conversation; and being merely about general impression that we were speaking, he expressed his views in that way.

Q. Did he at any time speak to you of the organization of a House of Representatives in which the southern men, or men from the rebel States, should be admitted?

WITNESS. A separate house?

Mr. BOUTWELL. The House of Representatives in which they should be admitted.

A. No; not any other than the general admission of the southern members to the general Congress.

Q. Did he speak to you at any time of the possibility of a serious controversy between the executive and the legislative departments of the government?

A. No.

Q. You never had a conversation with the President in regard to the ways and means by which he should sustain himself as President of the United States under any circumstances that may arise?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you never had a conversation with him, presaged on the idea that there might be occasion for him to use force to maintain himself in the government?

A. Never.

Q. You have not so represented to anybody at any time?

A. No.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. You say you had agreed to send a copy of the speech to General Grant before it was delivered; did you send a copy of that speech to the President after it was delivered—either before or after?

A. I do not remember. It was published in all the New York papers, and was also published in pamphlet form. I do not suppose I did.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You said you were a candidate for promotion?

A. Not for promotion.

Q. For office?

A. Yes.

Q. What was the office?

A. I was named as a candidate for naval officer of the port of New York.

Q. You were not appointed then?

A. No.

Q. Were you subsequently promoted—subsequent to the conversation in February with the President; did you receive any office?

A. I hold office now under the Secretary of the Treasury. I am agent of the revenue in New York and Brooklyn.

Q. When were you appointed?

A. I think in March last—February or March.

Q. Agent for the revenue?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that an office requiring to be confirmed by the Senate?

A. No; it is an appointment given by act of Congress to the Secretary of the Treasury.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you get that appointment on the recommendation of General Grant?

A. General Grant endorsed me to the Secretary of the Treasury in reference to the naval office, and probably endorsed me for this.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Were you not brevetted brigadier general at that time?

A. I was brevetted, but I believe it was subsequent to the speech. But that was entirely on the recommendation of General Grant.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 20, 1867.

WILLIAM S. HILLYER recalled and examined.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Since your examination yesterday have you examined the speech and memorandum to which you referred?

A. I have examined a condensed report of my speech in the Herald of February 10, which I have brought here this morning. I could not get a separate copy of the speech, but will send one from New York. For the purpose of the examination this one can be used.

Q. Will you state now, as far as you can, the conversation between yourself, the President, and General Grant, at the interview spoken of?

A. I will. I will state to the Committee, as I stated yesterday, that I was entirely surprised as to what I was to be examined about, and, therefore, my recollection was not sufficient to give that conversation. I have used the time since the examination in giving serious reflection to the conversation, and I will state the salient points of it as I remember them. I desire to state this: that while I may be inaccurate as to the person of the three of us who made any particular statement, as to the substance of the conversation, and as to its being a general discussion in which all three participated, I cannot be mistaken, or that there was entire concurrence of opinion.

Q. You mean you cannot be mistaken that there was an entire concurrence of opinion between you?

A. Yes. The conversation, after a preliminary talk, as I recollect it, was my statement of my observation of the tone of southern sentiment in reference to the policy of the President and the result of my observations. I stated in that conversation that the southern people accepted the terms prescribed by the President in good faith; that the southern people had, in my opinion, very little love for the Yankees, but a great deal of respect for them; that they accepted the result of the war as a full and final termination of the rights of a State to secede; that they regarded slavery as dead beyond the possibility of revival; that the people of the South were greatly desirous of Yankee immigration, and that, as a general rule, the statement that it was unsafe for northern men to settle in the South was untrue. I recollect quoting the opinion of several officers, particularly of General Webster, formerly chief of staff to General Grant, who has settled in Alabama, and from General Dustan. All these points were illustrated by conversation and discussion. These were the points made. The question was then discussed, what more could the South do than she had done. She had laid down her arms; declared her ordinances of secession void; repealed all laws inconsistent with proper relations to the federal government; legislated against the remaining rebel debt; and had done what the North had failed to do, adopted the Constitutional amendment abolishing slavery. Further, that—this, I think, was stated by the President—the southern States were entitled to representation in Congress as much as the States which were then represented. And whilst there might be improper persons elected, whom it would be very proper for Congress to refuse to admit on personal grounds, the right of the State to representation was equal to the right of a northern State. These propositions I know were all discussed and all agreed upon. I remember stating that almost the first thing every southern man with whom I talked asked me, who knew my personal and official relations with General Grant, was, what were Grant's views on the subject? how did he and the President agree? And I universally stated, in reply, that the only point of difference I knew between them——

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Are you speaking now of the interview between you and the President?

A. Yes. I said the only difference I knew between them was that General Grant expressed an opinion that there were too many exceptions in the amnesty proclamation. The President made a statement then which I now recollect very distinctly; that if he was sure of anything, he was sure that he desired to carry out the policy of his predecessor. General Grant thereupon, and during this conversation, referred to the correspondence between himself and Lee, in which he stated that when he wrote the letter he had no authority to make terms of peace; that he said to him in that letter that the terms were well understood, and he supposed there would be no difficulty in determining what these terms were. The conversation was then directed to the meeting of the rebel commissioners, and it was stated by one of the party that the terms understood were, that the South should lay down her arms and obey the Constitution and laws of the country, and accept the abolition of slavery as an established fact, or, if necessary, should do such things as should make it an established law. All these things being done, she was entitled to her constitutional rights as before the rebellion. In this same conversation allusion was made to the opinions of Sherman, Thomas, and Sheridan, all of whom were supposed to agree with the policy of the President. The President also made criticism on, or rather a reference to, the report of Carl Schurz, in which he stated that Mr. Schurz had gone down South, not at his desire, but that he sent him down because of his importunity. That is the substance of the conversation according to my best recollection.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. When General Grant alluded to the terms that were well understood, did he refer to what these terms were?

A. I think he did; at least the matter was referred to in the general conversation. The view of Mr. Lincoln was, and as I stated, those were said to be the terms of Mr. Lincoln—the laying down of their arms, obedience to the Constitution and laws, the acceptance of the abolition of slavery as an established fact, or if not so, their performance of such legislation as should make it legally a fact. That, and nothing more. Of course, in undertaking to give a conversation which occurred so long ago I cannot be very definite.

By Mr THOMAS:

Q. When was that?

A. In February, 1866. And my mind is specially called to this fact from reading my speech, which was delivered as a sequence of that conversation.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What was referred to as "well understood terms," as I read from a quotation in your speech? Was that referred to or quoted by either of the parties in the conversation, and by whom?

A. My recollection is that the statement there is substantially what I made. I may put it a little more correct.

Q. It seems to me to be a quotation.

A. Not a literal quotation.

Q. What is that from?

A. It is from General Grant's letter to General Lee.

Q. Is that a part of General Grant's letter?

A. Yes; it is a quotation from that letter.

Q. And was that referred to by one of the parties in this conversation? and if so, by whom?

A. General Grant. My attention was called to that letter, and I went and got a copy of it in order to make a quotation from it in that speech.

Q. Was the subject of your making this speech referred to and talked over by the President, yourself, and General Grant?

A. It was at the close of the conversation that the President said to me, "I wish you"—I think he said to me he considered it a duty I owed the country to bear public testimony to what I said there that day. My own impression is he referred to my testifying before the Committee—some committee. Upon this General Grant, in response to that remark, said I had been invited to make a speech in New York before the "soldiers' organization," and that would be an appropriate place to bear the testimony. The President assented to that, and I said I would make the speech.

Q. Were points of that speech suggested to you? and if so, by whom?

A. Not specially, sir.

Q. Nothing said as to what you should produce in that speech?

A. I think not. I do not remember any suggestions, except that the President desired I should say just what I said there that day. I think that was the only remark made in reference to the subject-matter of the speech.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. You state there was perfect coincidence of opinion, on the occasion you speak of, between yourself, General Grant, and the President?

A. Yes.

Q. Was that an inference of yourself from the omission of any one gentleman to take opposite grounds to you, or by expressed acquiescence?

A. Not by expressed acquiescence, but by the fact that there was a general discussion in which, according to the best of my recollection, there might have been some matter mentioned which was not discussed. It is fair for me to state that it is inference from the conversation.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Was the point particularly discussed as to the right of these States, when they complied with these terms, to representation?

A. Yes.

Q. Did the three of you take part in that discussion?

A. That is my impression, although I do not now recollect by whom the remarks were made, except I remember the President particularly making the statement I have mentioned.

Q. Do you remember any question upon which you differed?

A. I do not. There was no expressed difference on the occasion on any subject, as far as I can remember.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. In your speech is this expression: "No, it is a miserable minority whose hearts are black with treason against the Constitution and the Union, and who to-day would rather acknowledge the southern confederacy than admit the rebel States back to their constitutional relations. Do the people of the North—do the republican party instruct those men to go to Washington and patch up the Constitution?" &c. Was any remark of that sort made at this interview by any of the three?

A. I do not remember. I think not, sir; I think that mode of stating it is probably my own, though the subject was discussed that the majority of the republican party were, in fact, supporters of the President.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. That was the opinion expressed?

A. Yes; but I do not think it was expressed in the language I used afterwards.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. In another part of your speech you say: "There is conspiracy hatching in Washington to depose the President of the United States. The conspirators are cautiously and untiringly at work to get Congress committed to the proposition that the disloyal States have ceased to be States of this Union." Was the first part of that extract the subject of consideration—"that there was a conspiracy hatching at Washington," &c.?

A. No; I do not think that was said in the conversation. The proposition was discussed that an effort was being made gradually to get a majority of Congress to endorse the proposition that the southern States had ceased to be States of the Union.

Q. What did Mr. Johnson say upon that subject?

A. Some one of the party expressed the opinion that Mr. Stevens would eventually bring the republican party up to that proposition, although at that time the majority were protesting they could not be brought that far.

Q. Was the subject of a joint resolution of Congress, declaring Mr. Johnson an usurper, a subject of conversation?

A. I think not, sir; that is an argumentative statement of my own.

Q. Was the subject whether Mr. Johnson, being a citizen of Tennessee, was ineligible to the Presidency considered?

A. No; I think not.

Q. You did put into the speech a great many things not discussed in the conversation?

A. I do not think everything I said in the speech was said in the conversation, but the substance of the conversation was the subject-matter of the speech.

Q. At any conversation which you had with the President, at any time, did he make any remark in reference to the admission of members of Congress from the rebel States to their seats?

A. I do not remember any statement of his except as to their right to admission.

Q. What did he say on that subject?

A. In this conversation he claimed that they were entitled to their seats; that these States were entitled to representation, although the individual members sent might be obnoxious to such an extent as would probably exclude them.

Q. Did he ever, at any time, make a remark or indicate any purpose on his part to aid in any way in introducing them into their seats?

A. None whatever.

Q. Did he, at any time, make a remark as to what his course would be in reference to the rebel States, or members claiming seats in Congress from the rebel States, in case enough of anti-republicans should be elected by the North to make a majority, counting the southern men as members, in Congress?

A. I do not remember any such remarks.

Q. It never was the subject of discussion?

A. I have no recollection of it.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Was the power of Congress over this question of reorganizing society in the South a subject of conversation? Did the President express any opinion on that point, as to the power of Congress over the question of reorganizing the southern States?

A. I do not remember any conversation on that point. The point that was specially urged was, that the southern States were entitled to representation under the Constitution, and in accordance with the acceptance by the South of the terms proposed.

Q. Do you mean they were entitled by reason of their acquiescence in President Johnson's arrangements?

A. No; but by reason of their reacceptance of their constitutional obligations.

Q. Under the government established by him. Did he contend that nothing else was required; no action on the part of Congress?

A. He claimed their representatives were entitled to admission without any further act than the act of presenting their credentials; of course, conforming to such qualifications as Congress saw fit.

Q. Did he express any opinions on the point that his pardons made men loyal, and they could not be held responsible by Congress for disloyal acts before he had pardoned them? Was there anything on that subject said?

A. I do not remember anything.

Q. Did he contend that those who were pardoned by him ought to be admitted by Congress as loyal men? Did he take that position?

A. I do not remember any conversation in reference to parties pardoned.

Q. Was there any conversation as to what constituted loyalty?

A. I have no recollection.

Q. Did the President contend that Congress ought to ignore the past, and hold men only responsible for the future?

A. I don't know that he made that argumentative statement, because the President certainly has always expressed his opinion that the South was just as much entitled to representation since the war ceased as before.

Q. I am now directing my inquiries to individuals of the South. Did the President say individuals of the South were as much entitled to come in and take their seats if they promised for the future?

A. If they had the qualifications prescribed by Congress.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. If they came up to these qualifications?

A. If they took the oath.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. He did not contend that they were entitled to seats without taking that oath?

A. He never contended that any individual man was entitled, but that the States were entitled to representation.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. He took it on the ground that they were States in the Union still?

A. That they had never ceased to be States of the Union, and therefore were entitled to representation.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Monday, July 22, 1867.

JOHN CORSON sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State whether you visited Nashville, Tennessee, as a messenger, with a subpœna, to secure the attendance of J. W. Adamson, a witness, before this Committee.

A. I visited Nashville for the purpose of subpœnaing Mr. Adamson. I had blank subpœnas with me.

Q. Did you make inquiry to ascertain whether such a person as J. W. Adamson was residing in Nashville?

A. I did.

Q. What inquiry did you make, and what was the result?

A. I introduced myself first by letter to General Carlin, head of the Freedmen's Bureau there, and was through him introduced to some other parties there, particularly to Mr. Lindsley, the postmaster, who had been a resident of Nashville for many years. I could not find any J. W. Adamson, an attorney, living there within the knowledge of anybody in Nashville.

Q. Did you make diligent inquiry to ascertain whether there was such a person as J. W. Adamson living in Nashville?

A. I did.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. You could not find any such man?

A. No, sir. There was an attorney of that name who had been there on a visit fifteen years ago, when on his way from New Albany to Mississippi.

Q. Did you ascertain that that man lived in Mississippi?

A. Mr. Lindsley, the postmaster, told me that he had a mere slight acquaintance with him when he was visiting there.

Q. Do you mean to state that that was the same man whom you went to Nashville to subpœna?

A. No; I mean that there was a man of that name there, an attorney, fifteen years ago.

Q. Did you make inquiry for him?

A. I went no farther than Nashville; I did not go into Mississippi. I could not learn from Mr. Lindsley or his friends that they knew anything of this man's whereabouts now, or whether he was living or not.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. State whether you were entrusted with a subpœna for securing the attendance of Mrs. Sarah Harris as a witness before this Committee.

A. I was, at two different times.

Q. State what effort you made to serve the subpœna, and the result of such effort.

A. The first time I went to Philadelphia to subpœna her I was directed to place myself in connection with General L. C. Baker, who would point out the lady to me. He failed to do so. He wanted me to remain in Philadelphia a few days, and that perhaps she might turn up after a while. I came back to Washington and communicated with the chairman of this Committee, who thought I had better let the thing stand until further orders. The next effort I made was on the first of July, when I left Washington with a subpœna for L. C. Baker, and one for Mrs. Sarah Harris, who was supposed to be living in Philadelphia. I subpœnaed Mr. Baker, and he put me in communication with a couple of detectives, to whom he offered a considerable sum of money if they would put the lady in my hands or put me in communication with her. Mr. Baker said he had traced her to a certain point on the street cars, where she got off two or three times. We went into that neighborhood and inquired at two sub-post offices. We found only one Harris in that neighborhood, a Mr. Harris, who had a daughter Sallie, then living in New York as Mrs. Kyle. I went to New York and found Mrs. Kyle, but she did not at all answer the description of Mrs. Harris. When I came back to Philadelphia I learned that General Baker, instead of coming to Washington, had gone to Boston, but had left word for me that the lady I was looking for was at the Union Hotel, on Arch street, living under the name of Mrs. Frost. I went and scared up Mrs. Frost. She was very anxious to come to Washington with me if I would pay her way, but she did not prove to be Mrs. Harris. She did not answer the description at all. One of the detectives said he would like to get the $500 which Baker offered, but that this was a "water haul." They were not willing to keep her at the Union Hotel without having her board paid, so I left five dollars with the landlord and told him to keep her for a couple of days. I came to Washington, reported to the chairman of the Committee what I thought about it, and wrote to the detectives in Philadelphia that there was no use in going any farther in the matter, but that, if they considered themselves in the employment of General Baker, they could still be on the lookout for the lady. But my impression is that she is a myth, and that there is no such woman.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. On what do you base that opinion?

A. The first time that I subpœnaed General Baker, and was on my way to Lansing to subpœna his brother, he said to me on Chestnut street, "Corson, I will have that woman in Washington if it costs me $10,000." That rather opened my eyes. I thought she must be a very valuable lady. My suspicion was excited that all was not right; still I said nothing. On my second trip after General Baker and Mrs. Harris, he took me to the detectives' office and said: "Gentlemen, I will tell you what I will do. If you get this woman into Mr. Corson's hands, or get him into communication with her, I will give you $500." That, and the fact that the detectives were not able to find her, made me suppose that there was no such person.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did Baker give you a description of Mrs. Harris?

A. Yes. He said she was a woman of perhaps forty, though well preserved; that she weighed 150 or 160 pounds, and that on the left side of the neck, half way between her collar and ear, she had quite a prominent mole, which I could not help seeing if I looked at that side of the neck.

Q. Did Baker tell you anything about interviews he had had with her?

A. Yes; he said he had met her day after day in the ladies' parlor of the Girard House. The morning when he and I were watching for her—he sitting at one end of the parlor and I at the other—the understanding was that the lady he would commence talking to would be the lady I wanted, and I was to serve the subpœna on her. But no lady came to talk with him, and we went out between ten and eleven o'clock. He said she was always there about nine o'clock; that she had not missed a morning for three weeks, and he wanted me to stay over till the following Monday. (This was a Saturday.) I came on to Washington and had an interview with the chairman of the Committee, who said, "Let that stand till you get further orders." That was my first trip after Mrs. Harris. I thought it very strange that she should have missed being there that morning of all mornings. Then he gave me a description of her, in which he did not mention the mole on her neck. He spoke particularly of her size and appearance, and dress which she always wore in the street.

Q. When was it that he spoke of the mole?

A. In the last interview, on the morning of the second of July.

Q. Did the lady whom you saw at the Union Hotel answer the description which Baker gave you of Mrs. Harris?

A. Not at all, except in one respect, that she was a pleasant, affable woman. He said that Mrs. Harris was a very intelligent woman, pleasant, affable, and prepossessing in her manner; so was this Mrs. Frost.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did this Mrs. Frost know anything of Baker?

A. She had known him in California, and I think she said they had come on the same steamer. She had been looking for him at his office twice. This I learned from her in the course of conversation.

Q. Had she ever seen him in Philadelphia?

A. I think she said she had not seen him since she came from California.

Q. Did you see Baker after that?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did she say that she had notified Baker that she was at the Union hotel?

A. No, sir; but I know how he found it out. A young gentleman, well acquainted with Baker, met him on the street and said, "Baker, I have found your flame." "What flame?" said Baker. "The lady whom you used to meet in the Girard House." "Ha! who is she?" said Baker. "She boards at the Union hotel. I dined right opposite to her. I found out her name, too." "And what is it?" said Baker. "Mrs. Frost." This is the story that Baker told me. I only know it from Baker's statement. One of the detectives and I went immediately to make inquiry about her. The landlady said she had a sore on the left side of her neck; that she was a resident of Philadelphia.

Q. It was through this young man that Baker professed to know that Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Frost were the same person, and that she was boarding at the Union hotel?

A. Yes, sir.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 2^, 1867.

HUGH MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury, recalled and examination continued.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. In a statement made by Treasurer Spinner of captured and abandoned property is an item of $500,000 paid Simeon Draper, United States cotton agent, for the purpose of procuring sureties for cotton replevined by Denniston & Co. What is the nature of that transaction?

A. A lot of cotton was seized in the South under the "captured and abandoned property" acts, and shipped to New York. On its arrival at New York it was attached or replevined by Denniston & Co., who claimed to be the owners. Under the advice of the district attorney, and of our special counsel, Mr. Ames, and Judge Hughes, it was deemed best for the government to retain possession of the property, and in order to do so, and to furnish the necessary security, we were obliged to deposit an amount sufficient to indemnify the securities. The suit is still pending.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. State what the value of the cotton property was.

A. I cannot now say what the value of the cotton property was.

Q. Do you know how many bales of cotton?

A. I do not recollect. The property sold for less than $500,000, but we were compelled to give security to that amount.

Q. Was it attached in the hands of the government?

A. I cannot state the exact character of the legal proceedings.

Q. Was there any motion made to dissolve that attachment?

A. The case has been managed by the district attorney, Mr. Courtney, and the special counsel of the government. I am not now prepared to state exactly how the proceedings were commenced, or how they have been conducted. The interests of the government have, however, not been neglected.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. In the same account of General Spinner's there is an item, "disbursed by me to the credit of F. C. A. Dexter $520,932 75." Can you explain the transaction that item refers to?

A. I have no knowledge of the transaction, but will furnish to the Committee at another day all the information I have upon the subject.

Q. In this same account there are a large number of items and payments chiefly on account of "cotton erroneously seized," as stated in several cases, amounting in all to two millions, or more. Can you refer the Committee to any statute authorizing the settlement of these claims in the Treasury Department—the payment of money?

A. I do not know that there is any statute expressly authorizing it. The agents of the department were instructed to take possession only of captured and abandoned property; property being moved in violation of the commercial intercourse laws, and property that belonged to the confederate government. Both of my two immediate predecessors and myself considered it right and proper to release lots that had been taken in violation of these instructions and of the acts of Congress, and to restore the proceeds to lawful claimants when sold.

Q. Does this account contain items which relate to the release of any property, or only the minutes of payments made on account of property taken and sold?

A. In this account the items include the return of moneys, proceeds of property which had been taken and sold, but which we afterwards found had been improperly taken under our instructions. There has been made by the department to Congress what was intended to be a full report of the cotton transactions, as required by the resolutions of the Senate and House of Representatives.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. You have made returns of the amount of cotton sold and cotton released?

A. We have made to both Houses a report of the moneys refunded to claimants, but not of the property released by agents. In many cases property was seized by agents to investigate its character, and afterwards released by them without the authority of the Secretary.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Is there any other account kept in the Treasury Department of a nature corresponding to this, which relates to items not included in this account?

A. I think all the moneys that have not been covered into the treasury are now in the hands of General Spinner, as special agent. They are in the treasury and subject to the use of the government, but not covered in. There may be a small balance still in the hands of Mr. Risley, supervising special agent, the proceeds of tobacco and other property sold by him.

Q. Was there at any time, or is there now, a practice of ordering persons who have collected money, or received money for property captured or seized erroneously, to pay out to individual claimants?

A. No claim has been paid in money, as far as I now recollect, except upon the order of the Secretary, and no claim has been paid which has not been accurately investigated.

Q. Have orders been drawn by the Secretary at any time on account of captured and abandoned property upon any other persons than General Spinner?

A. Some orders were drawn upon Mr. Mellen, who was the general agent, and who has had in his hands from time to time a considerable amount of money arising from the sales of captured and abandoned property, and in some few instances upon Mr. Risley, and perhaps other agents, for the payment of moneys to persons whose claims had been investigated and allowed by the Secretaries.

Q. We do not find in this account the payment to Mrs. Washington, to which you testified at a former time?

A. This payment was made by Mr. Risley, one of the supervising agents of the department, who had in his hands the proceeds of the sale of Colonel Washington's furniture.

Q. Can you furnish the Committee with a statement of all payments made on account of captured and abandoned property by drafts upon other persons than General Spinner?

A. I can, in due time.

Q. When did you enter on the office of Secretary of the Treasury?

A. In March, 1865.

Q. The first item in this account is dated August 15, 1865. Was there any consultation between you and the President in reference to the practice of paying claims on account of captured and abandoned property?

A. I do not recollect any special conversation with him. Prior to the appointment of General Spinner as special agent, the moneys remained in the hands of the general agent and supervising agents until their accounts were settled, or they were instructed to pay them into the treasury. I think, prior to General Spinner's appointment, all the claims were paid by orders upon those agents.

Q. Had any of these items been paid on the order of the President at any time, either these specified here, or contained in the accounts of the special agents?

A. Some five or six claims were paid upon the order of the President.

Q. Can you furnish the Committee with the names of the claimants, the nature of the claims, the amounts paid, copies of the President's order, and copies of all the papers, or a brief of the papers, relating to the several cases?

A. I am not prepared to do it now, but I will do so.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Do you recollect any case where the property itself was returned—in specie, in kind?

A. I have no recollection of particular cases, but in many instances property supposed to have been improperly seized was released by the agents, and also by the Secretary.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. These moneys that you have been speaking of as in the hands of General Spinner, as special agent, are kept for the purpose of adjusting accounts that are unsettled?

A. Nearly all the moneys received have been covered into the treasury. But such amounts are now remaining in his hands uncovered as we suppose may be necessary in the adjustment of claims that may hereafter be allowed, and for the payment of commissions of agents. A considerable part of the balances in his hands might now be covered in.

Q. Has it been the practice to cover these moneys into the treasury as soon as it was ascertained that the amount desired to be covered in was a balance due to the United States?

A. It has, as far as I am advised.

Q. Has that been the practice?

A. That has been the general practice. The proceeds of the sales of Savannah cotton, and of some other cotton captured at the South, were, however, deposited with the assistant Treasurer at Norfolk for a considerable time, and were not covered into the treasury, at the request of President Lincoln, who had been considering the expediency of appointing a commission for the purpose of investigating claims of loyal men for some of this cotton.

Q. When was General Spinner appointed to this position? Was it in the time of Mr. Lincoln?

A. General Spinner was appointed special agent long after the death of Mr. Lincoln. I cannot now recollect the precise time. He was appointed special agent because the Secretary desired to concentrate in his hands all the moneys which were held by the general and supervising agents for better security and for the use of the government.

Q. Where were such moneys as have since been held by General Spinner kept, and in whose hands previous to that time?

A. They had been generally kept in some government depository, to the credit of the general and supervising special agents. Until a short time prior to the collapse of the rebellion the amount received by the government from sales of captured and abandoned property was not very large, according to my present recollection.

Q. Was this captured cotton sold and converted into money previous to the adjustment of the claims made against them?

A. As a general thing it was. The cotton market at that time was in such a state that we were anxious to dispose of it as rapidly as it could be done advantageously, that is, for good prices, leaving the question of ownership to be decided subsequently.

Q. How many of these general and supervising agents were there?

A. There was one general agent and nine supervising special agents.

Q. Where were these located?

A. At different points in the southern States. These States were divided into districts, and each district was under the charge of a supervising special agent.

Q. What were the occasions of large claims made against the government for cotton? What did they grow out of?

A. Our agents under the law were instructed to take possession of captured and abandoned property, or all property owned or controlled by the confederate government. In many cases it was shown to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Treasury that they had taken possession of property which they were not authorized to take under the law, or under the instructions from the Secretary to them.

Q. Were these claimants, or many of them, persons who held permits from President Lincoln?

A. Many of them were.

Q. What was the nature of these permits?

A. Under permits given by Mr. Lincoln persons were authorized to pass through the lines of the Federal armies to purchase and bring within the lines cotton and other property; and, as I now recollect, they were authorized to take back in payment for such property certain descriptions of supplies. I do not know that I have ever examined carefully the permits, but they were carefully examined in the department in the investigation of claims arising under them.

Q. Under these permits the parties made claims upon the cotton which was afterwards taken and sold, and the money paid into the hands of the agents. Out of that arose some of these claims?

A. Under these permits purchases of cotton were made, and in some instances the cotton thus purchased was seized by our agents. Claims were made for the cotton, or the proceeds, on the ground that it was purchased by and under the authority of permits from the President.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. In your communication to the House of Representatives relative to the metropolitan revenue board, you stated that the occasion, or reason of the nomination of that board, was in part, or altogether, that some of the officers were inefficient, and that others were suspected of being in collusion with those who were defrauding the revenue by the sale and manufacture of spirituous liquors. I wish to ask you whether the names of these officers, to whom you thus refer, were made known to you?

A. I have had before me the names of many persons connected with the internal revenue department who were supposed to be either inefficient or suspected of being in complicity with those distillers who were defrauding the government.

Q. Was there by you, or by any person in the Treasury Department, an investigation or inquiry concerning those men who were supposed to be in complicity with the persons who were engaged in defrauding the revenue, for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was probable cause to believe they were guilty?

A. We have made use of such means as were within our control to ascertain the character of our agents.

Q. In some cases was the conclusion reached that there was probable cause to believe that certain persons were guilty of complicity with persons engaged in defrauding the revenue?

A. We have not been sufficiently satisfied of the complicity of any of our agents to justify their removal, except in those cases where removals have been made.

Q. In regard to persons who were incompetent, have they been all removed?

A. Not all, I apprehend.

Q. Why not?

A. Because their incompetency was a matter of opinion, and because we were not sure of being able to obtain in all cases better men in their stead.

Q. Has every man been removed who has been reported by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to be incompetent?

A. I recollect of no case in which a recommendation of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the removal of an officer, whose appointment was made by the Secretary, has not been complied with.

Q. Has the Commissioner of Internal Revenue recommended the removal of any officer of the revenue for complicity with those persons engaged in defrauding the revenue, or for incompetency, who has not been removed?

A. I recollect no such recommendation for removal which has not been acted upon in accordance with the recommendation. I received, some weeks since, a communication from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in regard to certain officers, but I do not now recollect its tenor. It is not unlikely that this communication may have contained recommendations for the removal of officers whose appointments were made by the President. Since that communication was received, pressing duties have prevented me from giving it careful attention or conferring with the Commissioner in regard to it.

Q. Have you called the President's attention to cases of supposed incompetency or criminality on the part of officers of the revenue for the purpose of obtaining their removal?

A. I have no recollection of having spoken to the President in regard to any particular cases, (although I may have done so,) except in regard to one of the revenue agents, the collector at Richmond, Virginia, and the assessor of the tenth district of New York. In some districts in which it was thought that changes should take place, names were sent to the Senate by the President to supersede officers then holding office, whose nominations were not, in some cases, confirmed by the Senate

Q. Were the names sent to the Senate those of persons recommended by you?

A. In some cases the recommendations were mine; in other cases they were the recommendations of members of Congress, or other persons.

Q. Have names been sent to the Senate and recommendations been made for the removal of all these officers whose removal had been recommended by you?

A. Not in all cases; but according to the best of my recollection, with the exceptions named, where removals have been advised by me, other names have been sent to the Senate, although they have not been in every instance the names of persons recommended by me.

Q. What was the effect, according to your knowledge, upon the revenue of the removals from office made in the year 1866 throughout the country?

A. It is difficult for me to form a reliable opinion on that subject. As a general thing the service suffers by frequent changes of officers.

Q Were not these removals made without any charges being preferred against the persons removed, either of incompetency or dishonesty, in the great majority of cases?

A. Most of them were made without such charges having been preferred.

Q. Has not the chief difficulty in the collection of the revenue from incompetency and fraudulent collusion arisen in these districts where removals were so made during 1866?

A. I should think not, but I am not prepared to speak distinctly upon that point. I am not aware that the revenues in the districts in which changes were made fell off in a larger degree than in other districts, although this may have been the fact. The revenues have been well kept up, and the receipts have been large until within the last few months.

Q. In what districts and from what districts or sections of the country have complaints come of the incompetency or dishonesty of the revenue officers?

A. Complaints have been made in most of the districts in which large revenues are collected of unequal taxation growing out of frauds by particular interests. I cannot now specify the districts, but complaints have generally come from districts in which a large revenue is, or should be, collected.

Q. Were not changes made of either assessors or collectors in nearly all the districts in large cities, such as New York, Philadelphia, and Cincinnati?

A. In Cincinnati and Philadelphia most of the assessors and collectors were changed; in New York city a small number only.

Q. Were changes made in 1866 of assessors and collectors in reference to promoting the public service in the revenue department, or for the purpose of affecting the elections in the States?

A. I suppose that many changes were made for the purpose of affecting the elections; but I have no reason to suppose that any changes were made which it was thought would injuriously affect the revenue.

Q. Is it not true that change of officers affects the revenue?

A. Frequent changes of officers, as I said before, are not regarded as advantageous to the revenue.

Q. If frequent changes of officers are disadvantageous to the revenue, is not the changing of single officers also disadvantageous, except you get better men?

A. The interests of the government would be better served if revenue officers did not hold their offices by permanent tenure. On this account I may say that the tenure bill will operate injuriously to the revenue, but the government is likely to suffer when an officer is removed, unless a better man is selected to fill his place.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Has the department been embarrassed in any manner by the action of the Senate in the appointments and nominations made?

A. Some nominations have been rejected by the Senate which I thought ought to have been confirmed; to that extent there has been embarrassment

Q. Have the rejections made by the Senate been of good and competent men, in your judgment, excepting their political views?

A. In many cases rejections have been made solely, as I have supposed, on political grounds. Proper nominations, in many instances, in my judgment, have been rejected.

Q. Have men been recommended to you as good men to fill places that were held and are now held by incompetent and bad men for the office, in your judgment, and you are prevented from filling those offices by good men by reason of the action of the Senate?

A. In some instances we have failed to effect such changes as we thought important to be made, by the refusal of the Senate to confirm nominations.

Q. The nominations recommended as good and competent men, and whom you believed to be such?

A. The nominations of men whom I had reason to suppose were competent men, and would be likely to fill the offices more advantageously to the service than the persons who were then in office.

Q. Previously to the assuming of the office of President by Mr. Johnson, was the practice of the government the same in the appointments to offices of those persons whose political views were in accord with the administration?

A. That has been the practice of the government for many years. All administrations, as far as I am advised, for many years past, have acted upon this principle.

Q. Did you know of Mr. Lincoln's appointing any person to office whose political views were not in accord with his own?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you know the fact that Mr. Johnson has appointed many whose politics are not in accord with his own?

A. I do.

Q. Has not a very large number of the appointments of Mr. Johnson been of men whose politics do not accord with his?

A. A large number of his nominations and some of his appointments have been of this description.

Q. Have not the majority of them been?

A. I cannot state definitely as to the proportion.

Q. Is it not a fact, so far as your department is concerned, and various departments you have knowledge of, that a very large number of the employés of the government are, to-day, opposed to the President in his political views?

A. This is true, as far as my department is concerned. I cannot speak of other departments.

Q. That relates to the country as well as to this city?

A. I can only speak advisedly as far as my own department is concerned. I do not know how it is with other departments, but my opinion is that three-fourths of the office-holders throughout the country may be regarded as opponents of the present administration. In my own department, at Washington, a very large majority of the employés are supposed to be in sympathy with Congress. I should suppose that seven-eighths of the Treasury clerks, and three-fourths of the revenue officers in the States and Territories, are republicans.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. In your department, have there not been removed by Mr. Johnson about one-third of the officers holding commissions from him?

A. During the last year, I think one-third of the leading officers of the customs and internal revenue service were removed.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Do you mean to say they were all removed for political reasons?
A. Not all; but I should say a large majority were.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Mr. Eldridge has inquired whether the government has not been embarrassed by the refusal of the Senate to remove inefficient and otherwise objectionable men. Did you ever present a case to the Senate where removal and supersedure was required that they refused?

A. I made a presentation of no case to the Senate; I merely sent names to the President, when changes were thought by me to be necessary, or when he directed me to do it.

Q. Without suggesting any ground of complaint against the incumbent?

A. In the nominations to the Senate nothing is said in regard to the character of the persons whose removal is required.

Q. Then, as I understand you, no such case has ever been presented to the Senate?

A. The President nominates without giving reasons; the Senate consents to or rejects the nominations as they think best.

Q. In other words, the department has made no complaint, and has not stated any grounds for the removal of these persons?

A. The department has no communication with the Senate in regard to nominations, and the President gives to the Senate no reasons for his nominations.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. It is not customary to report to the Senate, in making nominations, the characters of the persons named?

A. It is not.

Q. It never has been?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. In looking at that account exhibited to you, you pointed out the claims that were paid to persons claiming cotton under permits given to them?

A. My impression is that the report which has been made to Congress indicates the nature of the claims, but the report is not before me, and I cannot speak definitely.

Q. Does it indicate that the party making the claim makes it under a permit?

A. I cannot say.

Q. Is there any way of ascertaining that fact in the office?

A. It can be done by an investigation of the different cases, if it does not appear in the reports.

Q. Are there very many of these cases?

A. A good many.

By Mr. Lawrence:

Q. Is not the fact that there are so many republicans in office attributable to the fact that the Senate refuses to confirm appointments made in cases where changes were made?

A. It is true, undoubtedly, that in many instances the Senate has refused to confirm nominations, and to this fact may, in part, be attributed the fact that so many republicans are in office.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. I ask you if the employés in your department, of whom you have spoken and stated the relative proportions of, have not been subject to your removal at any time—the great body of them, if you desired to do so?

A. All the officers in my department, with the exception of heads of bureaus, and a few assistants and deputies, are subject to removal by the Secretary.

Q. They have been subject to removal by you at any time, if you desired to make political influence? In conformity with precedents you could remove them or not if you wished?

A. I could.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 22, 1867.

SIR: Enclosed I hand you, agreeably to the instructions of the Judiciary Committee, copies of four (4) certificates of temporary loan and schedule relating to the same, issued by the designated depositary at Cincinnati to Andrew Johnson, on the 8th day of July, 1864, and paid on the 4th of November, 1865.

Very respectfully,

H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

[Original.]

Schedule of principal and interest, at six per cent. per annum, on certificate of deposit No. 1335, new series, issued by the depositary of the United States at Cincinnati to Andrew Johnson, the 8th day of July, 1864, and paid the 4th day of November, 1865.

Principal	$10,000 00
One year and 119 days' interest	795 61
	10,795 61

Received payment. C. W. OVERAKER.

[Original.]

No. 1335.] OFFICE OF THE DESIGNATED DEPOSITARY OF THE UNITED STATES,
Cincinnati, July 8, 1864.

I certify that Andrew Johnson, Nashville, Tennessee, this day deposited, for at least thirty days, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, ten thousand dollars, for which interest, at the rate of six per centum per annum, will be paid to his order, together with the principal, in lawful money, after ten days' notice, upon the surrender of this certificate.

$10,000. ENOCH T. CARSON,
Designated Depositary.

Pay to the order of Frank Goodwin, esq., cashier.

W. S. HUNTINGTON, Cashier.
L. A. GREEN, Assistant Cashier.

[Original.]

Schedule of principal and interest, at six per cent. per annum, on certificate of deposit No. 1336, new series, issued by the depositary of the United States at Cincinnati to Andrew Johnson, on the 8th day of July, 1864, and paid the 4th day of November, 1865.

Principal	$10,000 00
One year and 119 days' interest	795 61
	10,795 61

Received payment. C. W. OVERAKER.

[Original.]

No. 1336.] OFFICE OF THE DESIGNATED DEPOSITARY OF THE UNITED STATES,
Cincinnati, July 8, 1864.

I certify that Andrew Johnson, Nashville, Tennessee, this day deposited, for at least thirty days, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, ten thousand dollars, for which interest, at the rate of six per centum per annum, will be paid to his order, together with the principal, in lawful money, after ten days' notice, upon the surrender of this certificate.

$10,000. ENOCH T. CARSON,
Designated Depositary.

Pay to the order of Frank Goodwin, esq., cashier.

W. S. HUNTINGTON, Cashier.
L. A. GREEN, Assistant Cashier.

[Original.]

Schedule of principal and interest, at six per centum per annum, on certificate of deposit No. 1337, new series, issued by the depositary of the United States at Cincinnati to Andrew Johnson, the 8th day of July, 1864, and paid the 4th day of November, 1865.

Principal	$10,000 00
One year and 119 days' interest	795 61
	10,795 61

Received payment.

C. W. OVERAKER.

[Original.]

No. 1337.] OFFICE OF THE DESIGNATED DEPOSITARY OF THE UNITED STATES,
Cincinnati, July 8, 1864.

I certify that Andrew Johnson, Nashville, Tennessee, this day deposited, for at least thirty days, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, ten thousand dollars, for which interest, at the rate of six per centum per annum, will be paid to his order, together with the principal, in lawful money, after ten days' notice, upon the surrender of this certificate.

$10,000. ENOCH T. CARSON,
Designated Depositary.

Pay to the order of Frank Goodwin, esq., cashier.

W. S. HUNTINGTON, Cashier.
L. A. GREEN, Assistant Cashier.

[Original.]

Schedule of principal and interest, at six per cent. per annum, on certificate of deposit No. 1338, new series, issued by the depositary of the United States to Andrew Johnson, the 8th day of July, 1864, and paid the 4th day of November, 1865.

Principal	$10,000 00
One year and 119 days' interest	795 61
	10,795 61

Received payment.

C. W. OVERAKER.

[Original.]

No. 1338.] OFFICE OF THE DESIGNATED DEPOSITARY OF THE UNITED STATES,
Cincinnati, July 8, 1864.

I certify that Andrew Johnson, Nashville, Tennessee, this day deposited, for at least thirty days, to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States, ten thousand dollars, for which interest, at the rate of six per centum per annum, will be paid to his order, together with the principal, in lawful money, after ten days' notice, upon the surrender of this certificate.

$10,000. ENOCH T. CARSON,
Designated Depositary.

Pay to the order of Frank Goodwin, esq., cashier.

W. S. HUNTINGTON, Cashier.
L. A. GREEN, Assistant Cashier.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
July 22, 1867.

Pursuant to the act of Congress of 22d February, 1849, I hereby certify that the annexed certificates of deposit on account of temporary loan to the United States, bearing the numbers 1335, 1336, 1337, and 1338, respectively, and schedules relating to the same, all hereunto annexed, are true and complete copies of the originals thereof remaining on file in this department.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the Treasury Department to be affixed, on the day and year first above written.

[SEAL.]

H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, August 16, 1867.

SIR: In accordance with my promise to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives at my examination on the 20th ultimo, I transmit herewith enclosed the briefs of eight cases in which claims were paid by order of the President.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman of Committee on the Judiciary, United States House of Representatives.

THE STATE WORKS OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

The buildings comprising these works, situated in Greenville, S. C., were erected by the State in the spring of 1862, on land given for the purpose by a citizen, and soon after the machinery, tools, &c., for the manufacture of arms, &c., were procured and placed therein by the State. Arms and ordnance were manufactured and issued to troops in the State service, and also to the State arsenal at Columbia, and to some extent to the confederate arsenal at Charleston. After the fall of 1864 the works were largely engaged, by order of the legislature, in supplying the country with necessary farming implements, and this was the principal business doing at the time of its suspension in May, 1865.

The President having been applied to in February, 1866, by the representatives of the provisional government of the State for the release of this property, issued the following order:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, March 14, 1866.

"SIR: In conformity to the opinion expressed by the Secretary of State in his letter addressed to you under date of March 8, instant, relative to the 'State works,' so called, and the equity and propriety of relinquishing the same to the State of South Carolina, you are hereby directed to cause the property above mentioned to be appraised; and if from the appraisal it shall appear that the net avails which would probably result to the United States from the sale of the property will not exceed the sum of sixty thousand dollars, ($60,000,) you will relinquish the same to the State, excepting implements of war, finished or unfinished.

"Respectfully,

"ANDREW JOHNSON, President.

"Hon. H. McCULLOCH,
"Secretary of the Treasury."

In accordance therewith the agent of the Treasury Department having charge of the property was directed to release it, which, as appears from his report, was done on the 26th of April, 1866; its appraised value being $33,928 79, as appears by the following affidavit:

"The undersigned having been appointed by T. C. Callicot, supervising special agent, to appraise certain property alleged to have been collected or received as abandoned or captured by the aforesaid special agent of the Treasury Department, having each of us made oath for the faithful discharge of our duty as such appraisers, do certify that we have carefully examined and appraised the property described in the annexed schedule, and that said property is worth thirty-three thousand nine hundred and twenty-eight $\frac{79}{100}$ dollars, ($33,928 79.)

"T. HEYWARD THAYER,
"L. B. CLINE,
"JOHN ADAMS,
"Appraisers.

"Sworn to and subscribed before me this eleventh day of April, 1866.

"C. E. KNIGHT,
"Captain Fifteenth Maine Volunteers, and Acting Provost Marshal."

EXECUTIVE MANSION, March, 1866.

Will the Secretary of State examine the within papers relative to the State works, so called, in South Carolina, and indicate his opinion whether (without waiving the right of the government to hold possession of the property in question as captured, or admitting the legal claim to it asserted by the State authorities) it would be equitable and advisable to allow them to retain the property in question on account of the expenses of the provisional government, in the same manner that the provisional government of North Carolina were allowed to take and retain possession of certain property for the same purpose?

(Signed) ANDREW JOHNSON.

[Copy.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 8, 1866.

SIR: The President has referred to me certain papers relating to the State works, so called, in South Carolina, together with a letter which you addressed to him on the 23d of February concerning this same subject.

The President desires my opinion upon the question whether (without waiving the right of the government to hold possession of the property in question as captured, or admitting the legal claim to it asserted by the State authorities) it will be equitable and advisable to allow them to retain the property in question in the same manner that the provisional government of North Carolina was allowed to take and retain possession of certain property of the same purport.

Having examined the papers, I have come to the following conclusions:

1. The State of South Carolina, from the time when its provisional government was authorized until this time, is to be considered, not as an insurgent or seditious or hostile State, but as a State loyal to the Union, and, as far as lies within its own power, a State engaged in repairing the damages and correcting the evils of the rebellion, and for these purposes co-operating with the federal government for the complete restoration of peace and harmony throughout the Union.

2. The State of South Carolina, thus loyal, is impoverished, and, like the State of North Carolina, needs and is entitled not merely to forbearance, but to magnanimity and favor, from this government, so far as may be consistent with the laws of the United States.

3. When the condition of affairs which exists in the States which were lately involved in rebellion is taken into consideration, it is easily seen that much of the captured property would, if sold, produce no considerable accessions or contributions to the treasury, while its relinquishment by this government to the loyal provisional State governments would afford them important and valuable aid in restoring themselves into complete relations with the Union.

4. The papers before me do not enable me to judge of the value for which the so-called State works in South Carolina could be sold by the United States. For this reason I am unable to advise definitely upon the point of the reasonableness of such relinquishment. If, however, I am permitted to assume that the net avails to the treasury of the United States, resulting from the sale of the property, would not exceed the sum of $60,000, I should be of opinion that in that case it might be properly and wisely relinquished, after appraisal, to the State of South Carolina, with the reservation that after peace shall have been proclaimed, and the State of South Carolina shall have been fully restored to her federal relations, the subject shall be referred to the consideration of Congress.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

(Signed) WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

[Copy.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION, March 14, 1866.

SIR: In conformity to the opinion expressed by the Secretary of State in his letter addressed to you under date of March 8, instant, relative to the State works, so called, and the equity and propriety of relinquishing the same to the State of South Carolina, you are hereby directed to cause the property above mentioned to be appraised; and if from the appraisal it shall appear that the net avails which would probably result to the United States from the sale of the property will not exceed the sum of sixty thousand dollars, ($60,000,) you will relinquish the same to the State, excepting implements of war, finished or unfinished.

Respectfully,

(Signed) ANDREW JOHNSON,
President.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

[Copy.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 10, 1867.

SIR: In the matter of the property known as the State works of South Carolina, I have the honor to say that in my opinion nothing less than an Executive order is sufficient to carry out the recommendations on the subject made by the Secretary of State under date of the 6th instant.

All the papers relating to the subject, in the department, are accordingly herewith respectfully transmitted to you for such direction as you see proper to give in the premises, accompanied by a draft of an order which, if signed by you, will, I think, secure the ends sought to be attained.

With great respect,

(Signed) H. McCULLOCH.
Secretary of the Treasury.

The PRESIDENT.

NOTE.—As this case was examined in the State Department, my attention was not very especially called to it, and I had forgotten its existence when I testified before the Committee in regard to the return of property to States.

AUGUST 16, 1867.

THE CLAIM OF JOHN BLEVINS.

The petition of John Blevins, addressed to the President, under date of July 27, 1865, sets forth, that during Grierson's raid near Okalona, Mississippi, the confederate soldiers were ordered to burn all cotton; and, between the choice of taking a receipt on the rebel government and its money, he decided to sell his cotton—amounting to 73 bales—to an agent of that government. That he was unable to use the proceeds of this sale at the time, and it became valueless in his hands. In consideration of these facts, he asks that the treasury agent, who had collected 64 bales of this cotton from his plantation, as the property of the rebel government, be directed to release it.

The President referred this petition to the Secretary of the Treasury, with the following endorsement:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION,
"September 12, 1865.

"The claimant in this case, Mr. John Blevins, is known to me as a citizen of East Tennessee, who has steadfastly maintained his loyalty to the government. From an examination of the case, I am satisfied the facts are as stated, and have no doubt but that the property should be restored to him as an act of justice. The Secretary of the Treasury will please cause this to be done.

"ANDREW JOHNSON, President."

In accordance therewith, the Secretary of the Treasury directed Harrison Johnston, the agent who had collected it, to release said cotton to Mr. Blevins Mr. Johnston released 22 bales, all he had left in his hands—part of the remainder having been burned with the arsenal at Columbus, Mississippi, and 32 bales having been shipped to the cotton agent at New York. The proceeds of the 32 bales, amounting to forty-eight hundred dollars, ($4800) were subsequently—on the 9th day of November, 1866—released to Mr. Blevins by the department.

THE CLAIM OF JOHN P. WHITE.

The sworn statements of John P. White and E. A. Erwin are to the effect, that in March, 1862, Hale and Sykes agents of Fite, Shephard & Co., of Nashville, Tennessee, purchased and paid for 27 bales of cotton of E. A. Erwin, of Lowndes county, Mississippi, and stored them on his plantation for safe-keeping, where it remained until August, 1865, when it was collected by H. Johnston, assistant special agent of the Treasury Department, under the following circumstances:

In 1863 Erwin sold to the confederate agent 50 bales of cotton, and held it subject to his order. That when he made this sale he had fifty bales of his own cotton on hand, in addition to the 27 bales sold to Fite, Shephard & Co. That subsequent to the sale of the 50 bales, and before July, 1865—he being in the confederate army much of the time—some persons, to him unknown, took and carried away 33 of the said 50 bales. In consequence of the deficiency thus arising, the agent of the United States Treasury Department seized the 27 bales above mentioned, which had previously been sold by Fite, Shephard & Co. to John P. White, the claimant.

The petition of John P. White bears the following endorsement:

"Referred to the honorable Secretary of the Treasury, with directions to issue instructions to the assistant special treasury agent at Columbus, Mississippi, to deliver to John P. White the 27 bales of cotton within referred to.

"ANDREW JOHNSON.

"DECEMBER 15, 1865."

In accordance therewith the special agent of the Treasury Department was directed, on the 18th day of December, 1865, to release the cotton in question.

NOTE.—It should be stated that no agent was authorized to seize cotton other than that actually offending. Where cotton could be identified as belonging to the so-called confederate government, it was seized; otherwise not.

The above named cotton was seized in lieu of another lot, and did not, therefore, come within the rule. The reason for this is manifest, to wit: That agents would be liable to seize on mere suspicion, or false evidence; but where the history of the cotton could be clearly traced, and it could be identified by marks, &c., the ground of seizure was tenable.

THE CLAIM OF JOHN M. TRIMBLE.

The petition of Mr. Trimble, which is substantially corroborated, states that he is, and has always been, a loyal man—that he rendered important and valuable services, as a guide and otherwise, to the army under Major General Thomas. That in consideration of such services General Thomas directed his chief quartermaster to receive certain cotton belonging to Mr. Trimble, in order that it might be the better secured to him, and that it be registered in his name and as his property, so that no loss will result to him, as might be the case were these precautions not taken. That, in pursuance of this order, the cotton (20 bales) was taken to Atlanta and delivered to the assistant quartermaster, who, instead of carrying out the order, mingled it with other cotton, which was sent to Nashville, and turned over to the treasury agent.

The petition of Mr. Trimble and accompanying papers were transmitted by the President, with the following endorsement:

"Respectfully referred to the honorable the Secretary of the Treasury. Being familiar, to some extent, with the merits of this case, and having read the accompanying communications from Major General Thomas and others, I feel well assured that the claim of Mr. Trimble ought to be adjusted by the Treasury Department.

"ANDREW JOHNSON."

The average proceeds of 20 bales of cotton, received from Nashville, amounting to $7,728 99, was released to Mr. Trimble on the 3d of May, 1866, in accordance with the recommendation of the President.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND,
Atlanta, Georgia, September 15, 1865.

Brigadier General J. KILPATRICK,
Commanding Third Cavalry Division:

The Major General commanding directs me to inform you that the bearer of this letter, Mr. Trimble, is a true and loyal citizen, and has proved his sincerity and loyalty by the rendition or valuable services to our army while acting in the capacity of a guide during the campaign just closed. Mr. Trimble has a quantity of cotton which he is desirous of disposing of, and the Major General commanding directs that you afford him facilities for its being brought to Atlanta by furnishing him the wagons for its transportation. It is to be turned over to Colonel L. C. Easton, chief quartermaster military division of the Mississippi, as seized by order of Major General Thomas, and will be registered in the name and as the property of Mr. Trimble, who will be able to prove his loyalty, and thereby have it restored to him, in accordance with the regulations of the Treasury Department, in all such cases made and provided.

The Major General commanding directs, also, that you furnish the necessary guard for the protection of the train carrying the within mentioned cotton to this place.

I have the honor to be, General, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) ROBERT H. RAMSEY,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant General.

Official copy:
(Signed) W. D. WHIPPLE,
Assistant Adjutant General.

THE CLAIM OF MRS. EMILY MILLER.

The petition of Mrs. Emily Miller, addressed to the President, represents that she is a resident of Port Gibson, Mississippi; that on the 20th of May, 1865, she was the owner of, and had in her actual possession, 72 bales of cotton, which were seized by a military officer and turned over to an agent of the Treasury Department.

The circumstances of the seizure and shipment of this cotton, and the fact of a claim being made for it at the time by Mrs. Miller, are certified to by two agents of the department.

The agent who received this cotton, in his report, stated that it was claimed by "a Mrs. Miller on the ground that she purchased it from the confederate States government previous to the surrender, paying therefor stock, provisions" &c.

In accordance with the following instructions of the President, the net proceeds of this cotton, amounting to eight thousand five hundred and fifty-eight dollars and fifty-six cents, ($8,558 56,) were paid to Mrs Miller on the 2d of January and 20th of April, 1866:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, December 1, 1865.

"In view of Mrs. Miller's character and circumstances, and of the oppressive manner in which a rigid application of the general rules under the Attorney General's opinion concerning captured property would affect a most meritorious and deserving woman, I am satisfied that her case, as presented within, should be made an exception thereto.

"The Secretary of the Treasury will, therefore, please give the necessary orders for the restoration of the proceeds of the property, as prayed for.

"ANDREW JOHNSON, President."

NOTE—Mrs. Miller was a non-combatant, and had sold her stock and provisions, for this cotton, to the so-called confederate States government, under compulsion.

Mrs. Miller manifested a great desire to aid the United States authorities, and volunteered information by which cotton could be secured to the United States.

THE CLAIM OF MADAME BERTINATTI.

This claim, amounting to sixteen thousand two hundred dollars ($16,200,) was paid on the 8th of June, 1866, on the order of the President, endorsed on a report to him from the Secretary of War, which report and endorsement are in the following words:

"WAR DEPARTMENT,
"Washington City, June 8, 1866.

"SIR: In respect to the claim of Madame Bertinatti, (formerly Mrs. Bass,) referred by you to this department, I have the honor to state:

"1. That the claim embraces two classes of subjects, viz: compensation for quartermasters and commissary stores, which, under existing laws, cannot be paid.

"2. That compensation is also claimed for cotton taken by the military forces from the plantation of Mrs. Bass, whose loyalty is certified by General Grant.

"The power to make compensation for this description of property is not vested in the War Department, and, as a general rule, I am informed that it is not allowed in the Treasury Department; but regarding the endorsement of Mr. Lincoln, made on the 25th day of January, 1864, as in the nature of an acknowledgment of the claim, and equivalent to an adjudication and order for its payment when the amount should be ascertained, I am of the opinion that it would be competent for the Treasury Department, with your sanction, to allow and pay the sum awarded by the board appointed by order of General Grant, under Mr. Lincoln's order of 25th January, 1864, and your order of June 10, 1865, to wit: $16,200.

"Respectfully submitted.

"EDWIN M. STANTON,
"Secretary of War.

"To the PRESIDENT."

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, June 8, 1866.

"Approved and referred to the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Madame Bertinatti the awarded value of the cotton within mentioned, to wit: $16,200.

"ANDREW JOHNSON."

THE CLAIM OF MRS. JULIA A. NUTT.

The affidavit of Mrs. Nutt, dated February 14, 1865, sets forth that she is a loyal citizen; that early in 1864 she realized the sum of $7,000 from the sale of certain cotton from Evergreen Plantation, Louisiana, which she deposited in the bank of Blossom, Riggin & Co., of Natchez. That this money belonged to her individually, and was in nowise controlled by her husband, Haller Nutt, since deceased. That on the 13th of June, 1864, at the request of Wm. Burnet, then treasury agent at Natchez, out of the $7,000 the sum of $6,345 36 was taken by the military authorities and paid over to Burnet as indemnity for the alleged improper purchase by Mr. Nutt of a lot of cotton from the overseer of a plantation said to be abandoned, and the disposal of this cotton by him. That she inherited the Evergreen Plantation from her parents, and has never given to Haller Nutt, by contract or otherwise, any part, interest, or share in that plantation, or the proceeds thereof.

Additional evidence is to the effect that she owned an undivided share of the plantation, the remainder being claimed by her husband as his by purchase, and that the $7,000 was the proceeds of cotton raised on this plantation, and was in her possession and name from the time it was paid by the commission merchant until it was seized.

The amount claimed—$6,345 36—was paid to Mrs. Nutt on the 9th of November, 1865, in accordance with the following endorsement of the President on a full and carefully written brief of the case:

"EXECUTIVE MANSION, November 7, 1865.

"From the statement of facts appearing in the within brief, I am satisfied the money in question should be paid to Mrs. Nutt; and the Secretary of the Treasury will please give the necessary directions to that effect.

"ANDREW JOHNSON, President."

It appears from the evidence in this case that the money was seized by the military authorities at the request of Wm. Burnet, treasury agent at Natchez, and turned over to him as the proceeds or value of twenty-five bales of cotton which he alleged was illegally taken by Haller Nutt from the Palmetto plantation, and which was represented to be abandoned or confiscable property, when in fact it was the proceeds of cotton grown on plantations owned in whole or in part by Mr. and Mrs. Nutt.

The alleged illegal transaction of Haller Nutt was that he purchased of one Deal twenty-five bales of cotton and disposed of it. It was claimed by Burnet that Deal was not the lawful owner of the cotton, but that it belonged to one Surget, who was in the rebel army; that Surget had abandoned his property, and that Burnet, as the agent of the Treasury Department, was entitled to possession thereof.

Mr. Nutt and Mr. Deal, on the contrary, claim that the cotton had been sold by Surget to Deal in payment of indebtedness to him as overseer and for debts incurred in carrying on the plantation.

Even if all the facts alleged by Burnet could be proved, the seizure of money belonging to Mrs. Nutt in her own right, and in no way connected with the alleged fraudulent transaction of her husband and Mr. Deal, would appear to be improper, nor is it seen how any proceeding at law could be had under which such money could be held.

[Copy.]

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES FORCES,
Natchez, Mississippi, July 21, 1863.

The troops of this command are instructed that they will in no way molest the property of Mr. H. Nutt, or his premises and plantations, situate on the Woodville road, known as Longwood and Cloverdale.

Marauding parties of negroes committing depredations on the premises of citizens will be arrested and severely dealt with.

By order of Brigadier General Ransom, commmanding:

(Signed) D. A. STARWING,
Colonel 72d Illinois Infantry Regiment.

NATCHEZ, MISSISSIPPI, May 20, 1864.

To Officers of the United States army and others:

I take great pleasure in certifying to the loyalty of Mr. Haller Nutt, of Natchez, Mississippi. I was the first United States provost marshal of Natchez, and held the office for several months, and therefore know the reputation he sustained as a Union man among the citizens—a reputation he has well sustained since the federal occupation nearly a year ago.

He was one of the few who greeted us cordially when the Union flag was raised here. His entire family are also loyal.

Respectfully, &c.,

(Signed) GEO. A. McKEE,
Maj. 11th Ill. Inf., and Provost Marshal District of Vicksburg.

I certify that the within is a correct copy of the original now in my possession.
(Signed) JULIA A. NUTT

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 6th day of August, 1864.
(Signed) J. H. PARKER,
Lieutenant and Provost Marshal.

[Copy of endorsement on Major George A. McKee's letter.]

Soon after the fall of Vicksburg, Mr. Nutt, of Natchez, Mississippi, with some three or four other gentlemen of the same place, visited me at Vicksburg. My understanding was that Mr. Nutt had been loyal to the government throughout. He was certainly a citizen who conducted himself in such manner as to entitle him to protection from the government, instead of the seizure of his property. Of the claim which is now being made for the recovery of money taken from Mr. Nutt I know nothing. I was not aware that money had been seized. I will state, however, that if investigation shows that money belonging to him has been seized and put into the United States treasury, his family are as much entitled to its recovery as the most loyal in the South, for I believe the family are of that class.
(Signed) U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

OCTOBER 24, 1865.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE TENNESSEE,
Vicksburg, Mississippi, September 21, 1863.

A safeguard is hereby granted to the plantation, houses, stock, and other personal property of Mr. Haller Nutt, on Lake St. Joseph, Tensas parish, Louisiana, known as "Winter Quarters."

All officers and soldiers belonging to the army of the United States are therefore commanded to respect this safeguard, and to afford, if necessary, protection to said Nutt and his property above referred to.

By order of Major General U. S. Grant:
(Signed) S. KENT,
Lieutenant Colonel, Provost Marshal General.

Fifty-fifth article, articles and rules of war.

"Whosoever belonging to the armies of the United States shall force a safeguard shall suffer death."

HEADQUARTERS 10TH DIVISION, 13TH ARMY CORPS,
Dr. Nutt's Plantation, April 29, 1863.

All troops and attachés of the tenth division are ordered to respect the property of this plantation. This is delivered to Mr. Smith, the person now in charge of the plantation.
(Signed) A. J. SMITH,
Brigadier General, Commanding 10th Division.

HEADQUARTERS 17TH ARMY CORPS,
Dr. Nutt's Plantation, April 29, 1863.

All officers and soldiers of my command are required to respect the property named above.
(Signed) JAS. B. McPHERSON,
Major General.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES FORCES,
Natchez, Mississippi, August 1, 1863.

Mr. Nutt, a resident of this city, is well known to me as a consistent Union man, and as such entitled to the protection of our troops; and his property should not be molested in any way, as he has already been reduced to poverty from affluence by the persecutions of the rebels and depredations of federal troops. I recommend him to all United States officers and soldiers.
(Signed) T. E. G. RANSOM,
Brigadier General, Commanding Post.

NATCHEZ, MISSISSIPPI, November 1, 1863.

MY DEAR SIR: On taking my departure from this place for a time, I desire to express to you my delight at finding you amongst some other friends of former years, of devoted Unionists from the very commencement of the rebellion. You, and others of the same stamp, should be cherished; and be assured that I shall ever be ready to give willing testimony to your unswerving devotion to the Union.

Your losses have been, I know full well, very great, and I hope the wicked rebellion will soon be crushed, (and crushed it will be,) and you be again enabled to resume that place in peace amongst your fellow-men you so enviably enjoyed before the rebellion commenced.

You have my heartiest wishes for the prosperity of yourself and amiable family, from whom I have received many kindnesses.

Very truly yours,

L. THOMAS, Adjutant General.

HALLER NUTT, Esq., Natchez, Mississippi.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES FORCES,
Natchez, Mississippi, October 14, 1863.

SIR: I desire to say, in regard to Mr. Nutt, that I have read his letter to the honorable Reverdy Johnson, and that it contains what I believe to be a true statement of his case, and I respectfully recommend that his application be granted. There is no doubt about Mr. Nutt's having been at all times and under all circumstances a loyal man.

Respectfully, &c.,

(Signed) M. M. CROCKER,
Brigadier General, Commanding at Natchez.

THE CASE OF S. MANSFIELD & CO.

S. Mansfield & Co., druggists at Memphis, Tennessee, were arrested in September, 1862, by order of Major General Sherman on the charge of disloyalty, and of selling goods to be taken into the rebel lines. Their store was seized and placed in charge of their clerk, who was directed to continue its oper[illegible]y authorities.

In January, 1864, General She[illegible]o. of the store and goods unsold.

The proceeds of sales while the[illegible]1 32 net, were transferred to the Treasury Department by the War Department.

Mansfield & Co. applied to the President for the release of these proceeds; and on receipt of the following instructions from him the amount above stated was paid to them August 25, 1865, and September 21, 1866:

"EXECUTIVE, August 24, 1865.

"Case of Mansfield & Co.

"General William T. Sherman having ordered the seizure of the store of Mansfield & Co., and having subsequently ordered its restoration, together with the contents and the proceeds of sale since October, 1862, (as appears by his endorsements accompanying the papers in the case,) for the purpose of giving full effect to the orders of the military commander, the Secretary of the Treasury is directed to cause the amount of the proceeds to be restored out of funds in the hands of any treasury agent not otherwise disposed of.

"ANDREW JOHNSON, President."

[Copy.

"OFFICE CHIEF QUARTERMASTER, DISTRICT WEST TENNESSEE,
"Memphis, May 19, 1865.

"In making my previous decision in the case of Mansfield & Co. I was chiefly guided by the fact that they had been deemed guilty by General Sherman, and by him were severely punished. I cannot, as an officer, go behind his decision; but as subsequent cases have occurred where the loyalty of the parties was quite as questionable as that of Mansfield & Co., and where these parties were very moderately fined by the military authority for offences similar to that charged against Mansfield & Co., I recommend that the Treasury of the United States pay all the moneys actually collected by the United States rental officer to the claimants, they relinquishing all other claims against the government, so far as the property in question is involved. Further inquiry has satisfied me that it is highly probable that General Sherman never would have deemed the parties guilty of dealing with rebels, and therefore disloyal, if he had had time to more fully investigate the matter; and assuming this to be true, I give full weight to the testimony of the loyal parties named in the petition. I further suggest that the matter be referred to General Sherman, personally, for his approval or disapproval of my recommendation.

"A. R. EDDY,
"Chief Quartermaster District West Tennessee."

"I gave an order for the restoration of the store of Mr. Mansfield near two years ago. Since my movement east, this part of Tennessee is not in my jurisdiction, and I have no authority in the premises. The store, contents, and proceeds of sale since October, 1862, should be returned.

"W. T. SHERMAN,
"Major General Commanding."

"We, residents of Memphis, Tennessee, and loyal citizens of the United States, have read the annexed petition [of Mansfield & Co.,] and know the parties well. We believe them to be loyal, true, and faithful, and would therefore respectfully join with them in asking of you, if you can consistently with your duty grant it, the relief prayed for.

"J. E. MERRIMAN.
"A. P. BURDITT.
"WILLIAM M. FARRINGTON.
"G. N. CARLETON.
"M. HILL.
"R. HOUGH."

"These men were Union men, first, last, and all the time.

"MORGAN L. SMITH,
"Brigadier General Volunteers."

WASHINGTON, July 20, 1867.

E. A. ROLLINS, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. State whether or not the Executive removals made in the year 1866 in the internal revenue department were beneficial to the revenue service.

A. I did not then, nor do I now, regard them so.

Q. As far as you know, were the persons removed charged with incapacity or dishonesty in the performance of their duties?

A. In but very few instances.

Q. You stated that the removals were injurious to the revenue service. Have you made any estimate, or have you any opinion, of the extent of the injury to the revenue service growing out of these removals?

A. I have made no estimate. It was from a variety of causes. The mere changing of experienced for inexperienced officers gave better opportunity for fraud upon such officers by experienced, designing tax-payers. I have no doubt that the loss to the revenue was many millions of dollars.

Q. Have you any means of saying whether the loss was five, ten, or twenty millions of dollars?

A. I have not. This must be a matter of estimate rather than of calculation. There can be but little actual, reliable data, except what comes out of the nature of the cases and the character of the several officers removed and appointed.

Q. Aside from the elements of experience, were the men appointed in the qualities which public officers ought to possess equal to those who were removed, considered as a body of men?

A. I do not so regard them.

Q. Do you trace any difficulties in collecting revenue on distilled spirits to the changes made in the year 1866?

A. I do. I suggested in a previous answer that there was better opportunity for fraud upon inexperienced officers. Designing distillers and rectifiers were actually encouraged to combine for purposes of fraud.

Q. Are there men in the revenue service whom you should have removed upon public grounds if the power of removal had been vested in you solely?

A. There are.

Q. Why have those persons not been removed?

A. Because I had not the power to remove them.

Q. What have you done, if anything, for the purpose of obtaining their removal by the agency of the Secretary of the Treasury or of the President, or of both?

A. I have had no conference with, nor have I made a communication directly to the President since the spring or early summer of 1866. To the Secretary I have from time to time expressed my opinion—unfavorable opinion—of some assessors and collectors, but made no formal communication until recently. I have filed with him, I believe, no distinct charges, based upon evidence received by me concerning these assessors and collectors of whom I had had an unfavorable opinion, and whose removal I believed would be of advantage.

Q. Why have you not recommended the removal of these persons?

A. I have done so informally, but not formally, because I have supposed my opinion would not receive much credit with the President. I have not formally done so until recently.

Q. What reason have you for supposing that the President would not have removed these incompetent officers and those persons who were supposed to be dishonest?

A. From nothing that the President has ever said to me; but from the character of the appointments made without recommendation from me.

Q. Do you mean to say your recommendations were in any case overruled by the President or disregarded?

A. No; I have not made recommendations or been asked to make recommendations.

Q. Have not the records of the office been consulted in reference to recommendations and opinions taken in reference to the expediency of removals or appointments by the President?

A. Not except in rare instances.

Q. Has the necessity or special necessity for the appointment of the metropolitan revenue board in New York arisen wholly or in part from the dishonesty and incompetency of assessors and collectors and their subordinates?

A. It has in part and almost entirely, I think. I believe, however, that for various reasons there is advantage in having the interests of a large commercial community, like that under the express care of the metropolitan board, under a single supervision.

Q. Do you look for a reasonably efficient and honest administration of the revenue service while these incompetent and dishonest men remain in office?

A. I do not look for a thorough and successful administration.

Q. State what, in your opinion, is the effect of the "tenure of office act," as it is called, upon the revenue service.

A. I think it has a tendency to keep bad men as well as good in office.

Q. Suppose that the appointing power was in the hands of an Executive who was disposed to exercise it solely in reference to the public service, removing dishonest and incapable men, and appointing as officers only those who were honest and capable,—under such circumstances would the present "tenure of office bill" be a wise measure in reference to the revenue service?

A. I do not think it would; but prejudicial—very prejudicial.

Q. You spoke of an interview with the President in the spring or summer of 1866; did that interview relate to the business of your office?

A. It did.

Q. What was the nature of the interview?

A. It was shortly after the re-districting, for collection purposes, of Virginia and North Carolina, and related to appointments to the offices of assessor and collector in the newly created districts.

Q. Did you converse with the President in reference to the candidates for appointments in those districts?

A. I did; and submitted to him, at the request of the Secretary of the Treasury, the applications and recommendations for appointments.

Q. Did the Secretary and yourself concur in specific recommendations in each district?

A. We did; but the papers were so numerous that the Secretary desired all the papers to be placed before the President.

Q. Were the persons recommended by the Secretary and yourself appointed in some or all the districts?

A. There was no formal recommendation from either the Secretary or myself. I think there was no disagreement about appointments in those districts.

Q. Were the persons that you desired appointed?

A. As the appointments were not to be made upon my recommendation, I did not examine them with sufficient care to have positive preferences in all cases. The appointments made were satisfactory to me.

Q. Was that the last interview you had with the President in regard to appointments?

A. It was.

Q. How did you reach the conclusion that your recommendations would not be followed to a reasonable extent by the President?

A. Because I was never afterwards consulted about the appointment of assessors or collectors.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You are acting Commissioner of Internal Revenue?

A. I am the present Commissioner.

Q. You are not in accord, yourself, with the President in his political views, I conclude from your answers.

A. I am a republican.

A. You do not agree with the policy of the President?

A. I do not.

Q. Have you ever, in a single case, represented to the President that any incumbent of the revenue service was dishonest or incompetent and ought to be removed?

A. I have not. It is not the practice for the head of a bureau to communicate by letter or through personal interview with the President, except as in the instance referred to—at the request of the Secretary of the department in which he is an officer.

Q. Is the office which you hold more likely to bring you information of the incompetency and dishonesty of the officer than any other office under the government is?

A. Such information would ordinarily be received by both the Secretary of the Treasury and myself. I presume that more information would be sent to my office than to his.

Q. Would you not consider it your duty, if you knew an assessor or collector of internal revenue who was dishonest, or incompetent, or unfaithful to his office, to make that fact known to the President?

A. I should not directly.

Q. You should not think that your duty?

A. No, not directly; because such has never been the practice of the department.

Q. How otherwise could these facts, except through you or the Secretary of the Treasury, be brought to the knowledge of the President?

A. They would be brought to his attention by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Q. Have you in any instance, where you have known the dishonesty and incompetency of internal revenue officers, presented the facts to the Secretary, and asked of him to present the facts to the President for his action?

A. I have presented the names of persons with my opinion of their unfitness, and requested their removal; but the facts upon which my opinion was based I have not reduced to writing, and, indeed, it is very difficult to ascertain with absolute certainty the collusion of an officer with tax-payers.

Q. Do you know that the Secretary of the Treasury has ever presented a case which you have brought to his knowledge to the President in which he did not act on it?

A. I do not.

Q. You have never in writing presented any case to the Secretary of the Treasury of incompetency, unfaithfulness, and dishonesty of any officers of whom you had knowledge?

A. I have presented names of persons of whom I had such opinion.

Q. I ask if you ever presented in writing a request stating the facts of incompetency and dishonesty of officers of whom you had knowledge?

A. I have requested in writing that persons should be removed for the good of the revenue.

Q. Who were they?

A. I would prefer not to give their names. They are still in service, and it would disturb the harmony of official intercourse so to do.

Q. You say you have presented cases of that kind in writing to the Secretary, stating the facts——

A. Stating my belief that the good of the revenue required a change.

Q. Who were they?

A. They are at present still in office, and because of the desirableness that official intercourse should not be disturbed, I would prefer not to give the names. I think it undesirable for the harmony of the department to give them. No statement of facts upon which my opinion was based accompanied my letter to the Secretary.

Q. Why did you not state the facts?

A. In that communication I stated that my reasons for the recommendation were already familiar to him.

Q. How many cases of that kind have you given?

A. I think I named six officers, adding that I would give others if my recommendation was favorably regarded by the President.

Q. When was this?

A. I do not remember the date; it was after the commencement of the present or July session of Congress.

Q. Do you know that that communication, so addressed to the Secretary, was ever presented to the President?

A. I do not, but in the communication I expressed a hope that, with vexed political questions measurably concluded, the nominations to the Senate would be brought back to the Treasury Department, where they could be more properly considered in connection with the interests of the service. I desire here to say that while subordinate appointments are ordinarily made by the Secretary upon the recommendation of assessors and collectors, he has quite uniformly removed his appointees without hesitation whenever I had evidence of their inefficiency or corruption. It is almost entirely with appointments not made by him that embarrassment in this particular has arisen.

Q. Did you name any persons as their successors?

A. I did not.

Q. Were these six officers republicans or democrats?

A. I have no means of knowing, with certainty, their political opinions. They were nearly all appointed by Mr. Lincoln. They generally reported as conservatives. I cannot say whether they are all so or not.

Q. Were there any more than these six cases to which you called the attention of the Secretary of the Treasury?

A. I think not, in writing. I stated that if these were regarded, I should recommend others for removal, including some of the new appointees.

Q. This was since the third of July?

A. Yes.

Q. Are these cases still undergoing investigation to ascertain the evidence upon which the charges are founded?

A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Have you obtained such evidence that you have positive knowledge of their utter incompetency?

A. I believed the evidence as to the incompetency of several sufficient.

Q. You stated that the revenue had fallen off millions, in your judgment, by the appointment of new revenue officers. Have you any means of ascertaining that fact except as a mere matter of guess?

A. The precise amount, of course, cannot be determined.

Q. Is it anything more than a guess?

A. I believe it is a fact.

Q. Is it anything more than a guess?

A. It is.

Q. Now tell us the district and place where it happened?

A. I believe that in most districts where the officers were changed loss occurred. There are 240 collection districts, and in 115 of them, I believe, assessors were removed. The removal of the assessors secured the removal of nearly all of the assistant assessors. These were removed during the recess of Congress. The majority of the assessors failed of confirmation, and others took their places. These latter again caused changes to be made of the assistant assessors, and thus in most of the districts the office of assistant assessor was held by three different individuals in a short period of time. The assistant assessor is the person who makes the assessment, and his experience, because of so many details of the law and its construction, must be of very great value to the revenue.

Q. Then the loss resulted, in their cases, where there were rejections by the Senate, as much from the rejection as from the original removal; the two combined was the cause, was it not?

A. I have no doubt in many instances both changes were disadvantageous.

Q. I asked if the failure to confirm by the Senate tended to produce the loss as well as the original change?

A. I have no doubt it did in many cases.

Q. You say you have a knowledge of the loss so you can state as a fact, on your oath, that millions were lost to the treasury by these changes?

A. I am thoroughly satisfied of it.

Q. Have you made any estimate of it—any calculation?

A. Not such an estimate as would enable me to give the reason why I should believe it was a million or two more or less than a given sum.

Q. Have you made so close a calculation as to put down the loss to particular localities a certain sum, and to others a certain sum?

A. No such calculation. In some districts there have been losses of large sums from insufficient and fraudulent bonds for the withdrawal of distilled spirits.

Q. Has not that been the case where parties held office before Mr. Johnson's time?

A. To a small extent.

Q. Have you ever figured upon paper and calculated the loss?

A. I never have.

Q. You can produce to the Committee no figures which you have made on paper of the amount of the loss?

A. I cannot.

Q. Have you made any calculation of the amount that has been lost in consequence of the incompetency of men concurring with the President, and of those who disagree with him, so as to know the difference between the two?

A. I have not.

Q. Do you know whether the greater loss has occurred to the revenue from the incompetency and corruption of the incumbents who concur with the President or of those who disagree with him?

A. I do not. The loss upon bonds to which I referred, however, was mainly in those districts where collectors were appointed in the recess, and rejected by the Senate.

Q. Have suits been brought upon these?

A. They are in the hands of the United States district attorneys of the several districts.

Q. Are you able to state, then, whether there will be a final loss upon them or not?

A. Some of those bonds are signed by persons who cannot be found, and who are now believed by officers to have given fictitious names. In most instances, however, I believe there are parties against whom suits may be brought; and it is, of course, impossible to say what amount may be collected.

Q. In the case of those six or more men whom you mentioned, the revenue service would have been benefited by their removal, would it not?

A. I think it would.

Q. Are there not other cases where, if the parties who held office at the time Mr. Johnson came into the Presidency had been removed, and good men appointed in their places, it would have been an improvement to the revenue service?

A. I think there are. But as a rule, in those States where removals were largely made, our best men were removed; that is, the character of the men removed, and their advantage to the government because of such character, was superior to that of those who were suffered to remain.

Q. Are you not influenced in that opinion somewhat by your politics?

A. It is not impossible. But yet there are instances where I believe an improvement has been made by the change.

Q. Have you been in the habit of recommending men to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the President for appointment to office?

A. I have not to the President. The Secretary's appointment and commissions are ordinarily prepared in my office, and for such persons as are recommended, whose recommendation comes within the established rules of the department.

Q. Have you recommended any one for office who did not agree with you in politics, or that you did not believe at the time agreed with you?

A. I have prepared commissions for, I may say, thousands——

Q. I said of your personal recommendations.

A. I have.

Q. Who are they?

A. I do not now recollect their names.

Q. Can you state particularly any names?

A. A good many whose recommendations came within the prescribed rules. I do not recollect cases, but I have no doubt I have many, very many.

Q. Can you name one person that was appointed to office on your recommendation who was not at the time believed by you to agree with you in politics?

A. I can; E. R. Wiggins, of Boston; a thorough democrat.

Q. What was he appointed?

A. Special agent.

Q. Can you name another?

A. I do not know that I can recall others. My practice has not been to inquire into their politics.

Q. Are there more than those six men, of whom you have spoken, that you would have removed without further investigation?

A. There are.

Q. Who are they?

A. For reasons before given I do not care to name them.

Q. Are there any others of whom you have made representations to the Secretary?

A. There are.

Q. And asked their removal?

A. And expressed to him my belief that they should be removed.

Q. Who are they?

A. For reasons heretofore given I do not think it well for the service to name them.

Q. Do you know that the President knows anything about them, or has ever known anything about them?

A. I do not.

Q. You have made no representations that have reached him, to your knowledge?

A. I have not.

Q. Would the knowledge that the appointing and removing power could act promptly have a tendency, of itself, to make officers efficient and prompt in their duties?

A. It ordinarily would.

Q. The knowledge, then, that officers now have that they cannot be removed, except by the delays for the action of the President and the Senate, has a tendency the other way, to prevent them from promptly discharging their duties?

A. In many cases; although in some a sense of security may induce thoroughness in discharge of duty.

LAWS AND REGULATIONS RESPECTING THE SALE OF MISCELLANEOUS MILITARY SUPPLIES.

[Furnished by the Secretary of War, at the request of the Committee.]

That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause to be sold any ordnance, arms, ammunition, or other military stores, or subsistence, or medical supplies, which, upon proper inspection or survey, shall appear to be damaged, or otherwise unsuitable for the public service, whenever, in his opinion, the sale of such unserviceable stores will be advantageous to the public service. (Act 3d March, 1825; page 52, Brightly.)

The inspection or survey of the unserviceable stores shall be made by an inspector general, or such other officer or officers as the Secretary of War may appoint for that purpose; and the sales shall be made under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Secretary of War. (ds.)

An officer commanding a department, or an army in the field, may give orders, on the report of the authorized inspectors, to sell, destroy, or make such other disposition of any condemned property as the case may require, the sale of ordnance and ordnance stores alone excepted, for which the orders of the War Department must always be taken. But if the property be of very considerable value, and there shall be reason to suppose that it could be advantageously applied or disposed of elsewhere than within his command, he will refer the matter to the chief of the staff department to which it belongs for the orders of the War Department. No other persons than those above designated, or the general-in-chief, will order the final disposition of condemned property, saving only in the case of horses, which shall be killed at once to prevent contagion, and of provisions and other stores which are rapidly deteriorating, when the immediate commander may have to act per force. * * * (Par. 1023 Army Regulations, amended.)

Military stores and other army supplies regularly condemned and ordered for sale shall be sold for cash, at auction, on due public notice, and in such market as the public interest may require. The officer making the sale will bid in and suspend the sale when, in his opinion, better prices can be got. * * * The net proceeds will be applied as the Secretary of War may direct. (Par. 1032 Army Regulations.)

SALE OF MILITARY SITES.

That the Secretary of War be, and he is hereby, authorized, under the direction of the President of the United States, to cause to be sold such military sites belonging to the United States as may have been found or become useless for military purposes. And the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, on the payment of the consideration agreed for into the treasury of the United States, to make, execute, and deliver all needful instruments conveying and transferring the same in fee; and the jurisdiction which had been specially ceded for military purposes to the United States by a State over such site or sites shall thereafter cease. (Act 2d March, 1819; p. 489 Brightly.)

That all the existing laws or parts of laws which authorize the sale of military sites which are or may become useless for military purposes be, and the same are hereby, repealed; and said lands shall not be subject to sale or pre-emption under any of the laws of the United States: Provided, further, That the provisions of the act of August 18, 1856, (page 370, Brightly,) relative to certain reservations in the State of Florida, shall continue in force. (Act 12th June, 1858; p. 1248, Brightly.)

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, July 19, 1867.

SIR: In compliance with a request of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, I have the honor to transmit a report of the Adjutant General, containing a statement of the names of the military Governors appointed during President Lincoln's administration, who were nominated to the Senate for brigadier generals of volunteers, and the dates of their nomination, and of the confirmation of those who were confirmed by the Senate. A copy of a report of Major General Thomas, which was requested at the same time by the Committee, and has just been completed by the Quartermaster General, is also forwarded herewith.

Your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON.

Hon. JAMES F. WILSON,
Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives.

REPORT.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, July 19, 1867.

It appears from the records of this office—

That Andrew Johnson, of Tennessee, was nominated to the Senate for brigadier general of volunteers March 3, 1862, and confirmed as such March 4, 1862.

That A. J. Hamilton, of Texas, was nominated to the Senate for brigadier general of volunteers December 31, 1863, and confirmed April 1, 1864, to rank from September 18, 1863, he having received an appointment from that date, and accepted the same September 21, 1863.

That George F. Shepley, of Maine, was nominated to the Senate for brigadier general of volunteers February 25, 1863, and confirmed March 11, 1863, to rank from July 18, 1862, he having received the appointment from that date, which he accepted July 31, 1862.

That John S. Phelps, of Missouri, was nominated to the Senate for brigadier general of volunteers, but that he was not confirmed by the Senate.

It does not appear that Edward Stanley was nominated to or confirmed by the Senate for brigadier general of volunteers.

Respectfully submitted:

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, April 28, 1866.

Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: I have the honor to report the execution of the instructions of the Hon. Secretary of War, of August 8, 1865, relative to the restoration of the railroads in this military division, (taken possession of and operated by the government during the war,) to their respective companies, as follows:

On the 21st day of August, 1865, I issued from these headquarters the following general order, viz:

[General Orders No. 20.]

The following letter of instructions, just received from the War Department, is published for the information of all concerned:

"WAR DEPARTMENT,
"Washington, August 8, 1865.

"GENERAL: It having been determined by the government to relinquish control over all railroads in the State of Tennessee, and their continuations in adjoining States, that have been in charge of and are now occupied by the United States military authorities, and no longer needed for military purposes, you are hereby authorized and directed to turn over the same to the respective owners thereof at as early a date as practicable, causing in all cases of transfer, as aforesaid, the following regulations to be observed and carried out:

"I. Each and every company will be required to reorganize and elect a board of directors, whose loyalty shall be established to your satisfaction.

"II. You will cause to be made out in triplicate, by such person or persons as you may indicate, a complete inventory of the rolling stock, tools, and other materials and property on each road.

"III. Separate inventories will be in the same manner made of the rolling stock and other property originally belonging to each of said roads, and that furnished by and belonging to the government.

"IV. Each company will be required to give bonds, satisfactory to the government, that they will, in twelve months from the date of transfer, as aforesaid, or such other reasonable time as may be agreed upon, pay a fair valuation for the government property turned over to said companies, the same being first appraised by competent and disinterested parties, at a fair valuation, the United States reserving all government dues for carrying mails, and other service performed by each company, until said obligations are paid; and if, at the maturity of said debt, the amount of government dues retained as aforesaid does not liquidate the same, the balance is to be paid by the company in money.

"V. Tabular statements will be made of all expenditures by the government for repairing each road, with a full statement of receipts from private freights, passage, and other sources; also, a full statement of all transportation performed on government account, giving the number of persons transported, and amount of freight, and the distance carried in each case; all of said reports or tabular statements to be made in triplicate; one each for the Secretary of War, the military headquarters of the department, and the railroad company.

"VI. All railroads in Tennessee will be required to pay all arrearages of interest due on the bonds issued by that State prior to the date of its pretended secession from the Union, to aid in the construction of said roads, before any dividends are declared or paid to the stockholders thereof.

"VII. Buildings erected for government purposes on the line of railroads, and not valuable or useful for the business of said companies, should not form a legitimate charge against such companies, nor should they be charged for rebuilding houses, bridges, or other structures which were destroyed by the federal army.

"VIII. You are authorized to give any orders to quartermasters within your division which you may deem necessary to carry into execution this order.

"By order of the President:

"EDWIN M. STANTON,
"Secretary of War.

"Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS.
"Commanding Military Division of the Tennessee, Nashville, Tennessee."

In accordance with the requirement contained in paragraph IV, Brevet Major General Q. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Colonel William E. Merrill, first regiment United States veteran volunteer engineers; Albert Fink, esq., Louisville, Kentucky; Walter McQueen, esq., superintendent Schenectady Locomotive Works, and J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, are appointed a board of appraisers, with Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, A. D. C., as recorder for the board. It shall be the duty of the board, in compliance with the directions given in paragraph IV, to assess, at a fair valuation, all government railroad property, to be disposed of under the provisions of the foregoing letter of instructions. The board of appraisers will assemble in the city of Nashville, at 10 o'clock a. m , September 1, 1865, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and will continue their sessions at this and such other points within this military division as the duties upon which they were called together may require.

By command of Major General George H. Thomas:

WILLIAM D. WHIPPLE,
Brigadier General and Assistant Adjutant General.

The several railroad companies immediately proceeded to reorganize and elect boards of directors, whose names, after being submitted to me for approval, were accepted, and directions given to turn over the railroads to the persons authorized to receive them, together with such government property as they might select, said property being appraised by the board convened for the purpose. (See correspondence in package marked A.)

Regulation II of the letter of instructions could not be strictly complied with without stopping the operations of the roads, but a complete inventory of all property in use on all the military railroads was taken, and the property held in readiness to be concentrated at Nashville, Chattanooga, and Memphis, on the days agreed upon between the several companies and Major Crilly, chief assistant quartermaster of the military railroads, to be transferred by the United States to the persons authorized to receive the same by those railroads, at which time inventories of property selected by and delivered to each road were made out in triplicate, one copy of which is forwarded herewith. (See enclosures marked 1 to 36.)

Regulation III, requiring separate inventories to be made of property captured by the United States military authorities, and returned to the railroad companies to which said property originally belonged, has been complied with. (See enclosures marked "B.")

In compliance with regulation IV, a bond was made out and submitted, September 1, 1865, to the Hon. Secretary of War for approval, (see communications "C" and "D,") to which bond all the railroad companies objected, as it bound the president and directors of each road, individually and separately, for its faithful execution. In a communication received from the Hon. Secretary of War, dated October 14, 1865, there was enclosed a form for a bond, (see papers "E" and "F,") and I was instructed to require each railroad company to execute either the one submitted by me to the War Department, or the one sent me by the department as a substitute. The latter was accepted. The board of appraisers called for by regulation IV was organized September 1, 1865, as per General Order No. 20, military division of the Tennessee, series of 1865, whose report (marked "G") I have the honor to forward herewith.

I compliance with paragraph V, I forward herewith a statement of all transportation performed on government account over the several military railroads, giving the number of persons transported, and amount of freight, and the distance carried in each case, as fully as now can be made out from the books of the railroad department; also, a statement of all receipts from private freights and other sources. (See communication from R. B. McPherson, assistant to superintendent United States military railroads, in package marked "H.") I am unable to comply more fully with the requirements of paragraph V, not having yet received from General McCallum the necessary statements of all expenditures by the government for repairing each road, &c. This report has been promised me for some time past by General McCallum, and will be forwarded as soon as received.

Paragraph VI is understood by the several railroad companies in Tennessee, they having been officially informed of the requirements contained therein.

Paragraphs VII and VIII have been complied with in all particulars.

In addition to the communications above mentioned, forwarded herewith, I have the honor to submit the report of Brevet Major F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, who was directly in charge of all railroad property, the report of Captain S. R. Hamill, assistant quartermaster, who succeeded him, and that of Brevet Major General J. L. Donaldson, chief quartermaster military division of the Tennessee, with their sub-papers. (See package marked "H.")

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Major General United States Army.

A true copy:

ALEXANDER BLISS,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

ROGERSVILLE, TENNESSEE, August 16, 1865.

DEAR SIR: At a meeting of the stockholders of the Rogersville and Jefferson railroad, at Rogersville, Tennessee, on the 10th July last, the following loyal men were elected directors of said company, viz: W. C Kyle, president, John Netherland, John Blevins, Charles J. McKinney, E. C. Gillenwaters, R. Chesnutt, David Kilpatrick; which I forward to you for your approval, according to the instructions of the Secretary of War, of the 8th instant, in relation to the returning of the railroads, rolling stock, and other property to the stockholders. All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) W. C. KYLE,
President Rogersville and Jefferson Railroad.

Major General THOMAS.

Official:

(Signed) GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, August 21, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of this day, reporting the names of the president and board of directors of the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company, and to notify you that I am satisfied of the loyalty of said president and board of directors.

The military superintendent of railways, Major I. Stevens, and Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, in charge of railroad disbursements and operations, inform me that they will be prepared to give possession of the East Tennessee and Virginia railroad on the 28th day of August, 1865.

In obedience with paragraph IV of letters of instructions from the honorable Secretary of War, dated August 8, 1865, I shall require the company to execute a bond, conjointly as a company, secured individually by the president and directors thereof, for the payment of the indebtedness of your company to the government for the government railroad property turned over, after the same has been first appraised by the board ordered to be convened under the same paragraph.

Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, has received instructions to prepare the necessary bonds, to be made payable one year after date, or at such other reasonable time as may be agreed upon between him and yourselves.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) GEO. H THOMAS,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

Mr. JOHN R. BRANNER,
President East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad, Nashville, Tennessee.

[Similar letters written to Thomas H. Calloway, Cleveland, Tennessee, president East Tennessee and Georgia railroad; William C. Kyle, Nashville, Tennessee, president Rogersville and Jefferson railroad; M. Burns, Nashville, Tennessee, president Nashville and Northwestern railroad, and Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, with the alteration, in reference to the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, that it will be turned over as soon after the 1st day of September as possible; John Baird, secretary and treasurer Central Southern railroad; Samuel Tate, president Memphis and Charleston railroad.]

Official:

(Signed) GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster U. S. Army.

STATE OF TENNESSEE, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Nashville, August 28, 1865.

GENERAL: Hon. John C. Humphreys, of Fayette, and Hon. F. S. Richards are appointed directors on behalf of the State in the Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company. They are gentlemen of the highest standing.

(Signed) A. J. FLETCHER,
Secretary of State.

Official:

(Signed) GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster U. S. Army.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 22, 1865.

DEAR SIR: On the 5th instant the stockholders in the Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company elected the following board of directors. Are they satisfactory? If not, please designate such as are not.

†James Robb, New York; 0 George P. Beirne, Alabama; †Joseph C. Bradley, Alabama; 0 J. I. Donegan, Alabama; L. D. Weakley, Alabama; †Henry S. McComb, Delaware; †Pitson Miller, Tennessee; †John W. Leftwich, Tennessee; †Sam Tate, Tennessee.

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) SAM TATE.

To his Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON, President.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE, August 7, 1865.

From my personal knowledge of several of the within named gentlemen, and from reliable representations made to me as to the others, I have no hesitancy in regarding them as a proper and perfectly acceptable board of directors of the Memphis and Charleston railroad.

(Signed) ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

Official:

(Signed) GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy of letter and endorsement:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, August 28, 1865.

SIR: I herewith submit for your approval a list of directors recently elected and appointed for the Memphis and Charleston railroad:

James Robb, New York; George P. Beirne, Alabama; Joseph C. Bradley, Alabama; Sam. D. Weakly, Alabama; J. I. Donegan, Alabama; Henry S. McComb, Delaware; Pitson Miller, Tennessee; John W. Leftwich, Tennessee; Sam. Tate, Tennessee; John C. Humphreys, F. L. Richards, on the part of the State of Tennessee. Total number, 11.

Humphreys and Richards are appointed by the Governor of Tennessee. I refer to the enclosed endorsement of the President for the qualifications and loyalty of the nine elected by the stockholders. The city of Charleston is entitled to appoint two directors, but having no civil organization there I have been unable to get them appointed.

Very respectfully,

(Signed) SAM. TATE,
President Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS, Nashville, Tennessee.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

OFFICE OF THE NASHVILLE AND CHATTANOOGA RAILROAD COMPANY,
Nashville, August 22, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor of submitting the names of the following persons elected as directors of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company for your approbation.

M. Burns, of Davidson; William T. Berry, of Davidson; J. R. Knowles, of Davidson; N. E. Allaway, of Davidson; James Woods, of Davidson; Aris Brown, of Davidson; A.

---

† Undoubtedly loyal; 0 refer to Bradley's letter.

Nelson, of Davidson; J. M. Hill, of Davidson; Levi Wade, of Rutherford; James H. Grant, Thomas H. Whitesides, of Bedford; Edmund Cooper, William S. Higgins, Coffee county; John F. Anderson, Franklin county; J. E. Thompson, Philadelphia.

All of which is respectfully submitted to your just consideration.

I am, general, your obedient servant,

(Signed) M. BURNS,
President Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Commanding Division of the Tennessee.

True copy:

J. F. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

OFFICE OF THE NASHVILLE AND CHATTANOOGA RAILROAD COMPANY,
Nashville, August 18, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit to you, for your approbation, a list of directors elected on the 16th instant, at a stockholders' meeting, held in this city, to conduct the affairs of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company for the ensuing twelve months, in accordance with instructions received from Washington, dated August 8. I would respectfully state that those persons elected as directors were elected in most instances, and as far as practicable, at the suggestion of his excellency the President of the United States; and would respectfully state that the company is now organized, and trust that it may receive your approbation; and would further state that they are ready to receive their road when it is in your opinion ready to be turned over to them. General, fully appreciating the difficulty in its transfer, if I can be of any service to you I will cheerfully do anything in my power that may aid you in its transfer.

I remain, general, your obedient servant,

(Signed) M. BURNS,
President Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company.

Major General G. H. THOMAS,
Commanding Division of the Tennessee.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, August 21, 1865.

Respectfully referred to the Hon. A. J. Fletcher, secretary of state, State of Tennessee, to know whether the within named are loyal men. Please return immediately if possible.

(Signed) GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Major General Commanding.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy of letter and endorsement:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

LIST OF DIRECTORS NASHVILLE AND CHATTANOOGA RAILROAD.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE, NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE,
August, 22, 1865.

M. Burns, a man whose main object, under all circumstances, is to make money; loyal to the "powers that be," whether rebel or Union.

William T. Berry, always loyal to the government.

J. R. Knowles, a loyal and good man.

James Woods, once got wrong, but is a quiet man, and is now considered safe.

Aris Brown, once a very decided rebel; remained so till lately; it is said he "submits."

A. Nelson, sympathized with the rebellion, but is a good man and will do his duty.

N. E. Alloway, was once disloyal, but is a shrewd, sensible man, and will probably do his duty. He will have much influence in the board.

John M. Hill, once a rebel, but considered reliable at this time.

Levi Wade, once a rebel; present status unknown.

James H. Grant, not known at the capital as a Union man.

Edmund Cooper, Congressman elect.

W. S. Huggins, unknown.

John T. Henderson, unknown.

William E. Gleaner, once an obstinate rebel, and was sent North for his refusal to take the oath of allegiance; present status not known.

Most of these men are of high standing, and will probably do no disloyal act, but the weight of their sympathies will be with the down-trodden South.

Respectfully,

A. J. FLETCHER,
Secretary of State.

Official:

GEORGE W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

[Telegram.]

ATLANTA, September 9, 1865.

GEORGE H. THOMAS, Major General United States Army:

I have this day appointed Robert Baugh, esq., of the city of Atlanta, superintendent of the Western and Atlantic railroad. He has full authority to arrange with you all preliminaries for a transfer of the road and stock according to the terms presented by the Secretary of War of the United States. This authority is conferred on him by virtue of his appointment; it has been also given by a resolution of the board of directors, which has been ratified by me. The people are quite anxious that the road should be turned over, and I trust that in a short time we shall be able to gratify them in this particular.

Yours, &c.,

J. JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor, Georgia.

Official:

GEORGE W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, September 15, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of 9th instant, (reporting the name of the superintendent of the Western and Atlantic railroad,) who is appointed by you, and authorized by a board of directors of said railroad, to arrange the preliminaries for the transfer of it, and to notify you that I am satisfied of the loyalty of said superintendent.

The military superintendent of railways, Major William I. Stevens, and Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, in charge of railroad disbursement and operations, inform me that they will be prepared to give you possession of the Western and Atlantic railroad as soon as you are ready to receive it.

In accordance with paragraph IV of letter of instructions from the honorable Secretary of War, dated Washington, August 8, 1865, I shall require the company to execute a bond conjointly as a company, secured individually by the president and directors thereof, for the payment of the indebtedness of your company to the government for government railroad property turned over, after the same has been first appraised by the board ordered to be convened under the said paragraph.

Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, has received instructions to prepare the necessary bonds, to be made payable one year after date, or at such other reasonable time as may be agreed upon between him and yourselves.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

Hon. J. JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of the State of Georgia, Milledgeville, Georgia.

Official:

GEORGE W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, August 19, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor, by direction of Major General Thomas, to enclose to you, for your information, an official copy of the orders from the War Department with reference to the turning of the railroads in this military division over to the companies formerly owning and operating them.

I am instructed by Major General Thomas to say, further, that, if you appoint a board of directors for the Georgia State road running from Chattanooga, Tennessee, to Atlanta, Georgia, whom you can recommend as being true and loyal men, and which board, in accordance with provisions of the first paragraph of said order, he can conscientiously approve of and accept, he will turn over said Georgia railroad to you upon the same terms precisely as the other railroads coming within his command are turned over to the companies.

The major general commanding would be pleased to have your views on the subject at as early a day as possible.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT H. RAMSEY,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General.

Hon. JAMES JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of Georgia, Milledgeville, Georgia.

Official:

GEORGE W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

FRANKLIN, TENNESSEE, September 6, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I herewith submit for your inspection and approval a list of the directors of the Tennessee and Alabama Railroad Company, fifteen in number, viz: John S. Claybrooke, Thomas F. Perkins, William P. Cannon, A. C. Mayberry, H. G. Mayberry, Samuel Henderson, B. B. Toon, R. H. Bradley, John B. McEwen, and John McGavock, of Williamson county; Absalom Thompson, William Park, and James Andrews, of Maury county; M. G. L. Claiborne and C. W. Hance, of Davidson county; John S. Claybrooke, president, post office, Triune, Tennessee; Frank Hardeman, secretary and treasurer, post office, Franklin, Tennessee. They were elected in conformity with the provisions of the charter on the first Tuesday in August last, the day of regular annual stockholders' meeting.

Respectfully submitted.

FRANK HARDEMAN,
Secretary and Treasurer Tenn. and Ala. R. R. Co.

Major General G. H. THOMAS.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tenn., September 8, 1865.

Respectfully referred to Hon. A. J. Fletcher, secretary of state, for his opinion as to the loyalty of the within named members of the board of directors of the Tennessee and North Alabama railroad, and also to request that the two directors to be chosen by the State be also named.

G. H. THOMAS,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

Official to endorsement:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE, September 9, 1865.

J. S. Claybrooke, Frank Boardman, Samuel Henderson, M. G. L. Claiborne, and William Parke are loyal and good men. Thomas F. Perkins, R. H. Bradley, John McGavock, John B. McEwen, William P. Cannon, and B. B. Toon have all been more or less in sympathy with the rebellion, but are regarded as honorable men, and will probably discharge their duties loyally. C. W. Hance, Absalom Thompson, James Andrews, and A. C. Mayberry are all liable to the objection of disloyalty. Thompson is the only one of them whose fidelity has been endorsed to me by acquaintances. H. G. W. Mayberry fled South in 1862, and only returned after Johnston's surrender. This is a bad sign, but it is said he ran to save his negroes. On the whole, the board is about as good as it can be made out of the material to be had. It is said that every prominent loyalist among the stockholders is on the board, and the least objectionable of the rebel stockholders were chosen.

Hon. Samuel Arnell, Columbia, and Dr. D. Cliffe, Franklin, are appointed State directors.

(Signed) A. J. FLETCHER.

True copy of letter and endorsements:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

OFFICE NASHVILLE AND NORTHWESTERN RAILROAD COMPANY,
Nashville, August 18, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor of submitting for your approval the following named directors of the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company:

M. Burns, president, A. H. Hicks, R. C. McNairy, J. M Newsome, D. T. McGavock. William H. Horn, W. F. Bang, W. F. Cooper, J. C. Rodimer, of Davidson county; John A. Gardner, W. W. Gleason, Robert Ury, C. S. Woods, H. Gardner, B. S. Allen, of West Tennessee.

All of which is submitted, respectfully, to your just consideration.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

(Signed) M. BURNS,
President Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Commanding Division of Tennessee.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

OFFICE EAST TENNESSEE AND GEORGIA RAILROAD COMPANY,
Knoxville, Tennessee, August 19, 1865.

GENERAL: I have the honor of submitting for your approval the following named directors of the East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Company:

Thomas H. Calloway, president, Bradley county; M. Burns, Nashville; John P. King, Augusta, Georgia; John King, Hamilton county; John Hambright, Ready county; James Parkerson, G. W. Ross, J. H. McGill, McMinnville; Robert Sneed, Daniel Heiskell, Monroe county; William M. Alexander, Roane county; James Donaldson, Blount county; Peres Dickerson, O. P. Semple, S. R. Rogers, A. J. Jackson, William Heiskill, William Hunt, Knox county.

All of which is most respectfully submitted for your consideration.

I have the honor to be, general, your obedient servant,

(Signed) THOS. H. CALLOWAY, President.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Commanding Division of Tennessee.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster, United States Army.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, August 24, 1865.

SIR: The following is a list of the directors and officers of the Central Southern railroad: Thomas Martin, Albert Buford, Newton White, Thomas R. Gordon, C. P. Reed, Giles A. Reynolds, C. N. Ordway, William Perry, Giles county, Tennessee; William J. Dale, John Ballanfant, James T. Moore, Giles T. Harris, John Frierson, Maury county; S. W. Fitzpatrick, Marshall county, directors. Thomas Martin, president; John Baird, secretary and treasurer.

Very respectfully, yours,

(Signed) JOHN BAIRD, Secretary.

Major General THOMAS.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, August 21, 1865.

SIR: In pursuance to the letter of instructions addressed to you by the Secretary of War, dated August 8, 1865, in relation to the railroads of Tennessee, I have the honor herewith to submit, that at a meeting of the stockholders of the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company, held in the city of Knoxville, on the 12th of July last, the company was reorganized by the election of the following persons as directors of said road, viz:

John R. Branner, Samuel C. Cunningham, Ephraim Davis, Ethan A. Sawyers, John Talbot, Perez Dickenson, Andrew Shell, George W. Nelson, Peter M. Reeves, William C. Kyle, N. W. Earnest, John R. Fain, George W. Telford, William Galbraith, A. G. Jackson.

The following State directors have been, as provided by law, appointed by the Governor, William G. Brownlow, viz: James M. Meek, esq., Judge R. R. Butler.

After the election and qualification of the above-mentioned directors, the board was regularly organized by electing John R. Branner, president.

All of which is respectfully submitted:

(Signed) JOHN R. BRANNER,
President East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company.

Major General GEO. H. THOMAS,
Commanding Division of Tennessee.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, September 8, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of this day, reporting the names of the president and board of directors of the Tennessee and Alabama Central Railroad Company, and to notify you that I am satisfied of the loyalty of said president and board of directors.

The military superintendent of railways, Major William I. Stevens, and Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster in charge of railroad disbursements and operations, inform me that they will be prepared to give you possession of the Tennessee and Alabama Central railroad on the 10th instant.

In accordance with paragraph IV of letter of instructions from the Hon. Secretary of War, dated Washington, D. C., August 8, 1865, I shall require the company to execute a bond, conjointly as a company, secured individually by the president and directors thereof, for the payment of the indebtedness of your company to the government for the government railroad property turned over, after the same has been first appraised by the board ordered to be convened under the said paragraph.

Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, has received instructions to prepare the necessary bonds, to be made payable one year after date, or at such other reasonable time as may be agreed upon between him and yourselves.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) GEO. H. THOMAS,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

Mr. JAMES W. SLOSS,
President Tennessee and Alabama Central Railroad, Athens, Alabama.

Similar letter written under date of September 10, 1865, to John S. Claybrooke, Triune, Tennessee, president Tennessee and Alabama railroad, notifying him that the Tennessee and Alabama railroad can be turned over September 15, 1865.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE U. S. MILITARY RAILROADS,
Nashville, Tennessee, September 23, 1865.

COLONEL: General Thomas directed me to communicate with Governor Brownlow and request him to appoint a receiver for the Edgefield and Kentucky railroad. The enclosed document appointing Mr. Cheatham is the result. Will you please endorse the order on it directing me to turn the road over to him, which is in accordance with the general's orders to me.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) F. J. CRILLY,
Captain, Assistant Quartermaster.

Colonel R. H. RAMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant General, Present.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy of letter and endorsement:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, September 23, 1865.

Captain F. J. Crilly, disbursing and chief quartermaster United States military railroads, will turn over to Mr. Richard B. Cheatham, receiver, the Edgefield and Kentucky railroad, upon the same terms and conditions required of the companies receiving their roads from the United States.

By command of Major General Thomas:

(Signed) ROBERT H. RAMSEY,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

ATLANTA, GEORGIA, September 9, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I have this day appointed Robert Baugh, esq., of the city of Atlanta, superintendent of the Western and Atlantic railroad. He has full authority to arrange with you all preliminaries for a transfer of the road and stock, according to the terms prescribed by the Secretary of War of the United States.

This authority is conferred on him by law, in virtue of this appointment. It has been also given by a resolution of the board of directors which has been ratified by me. The people are quite anxious that the road should be turned over, and I trust that in a short time we shall be able to gratify them in this particular.

Yours, &c.,

(Signed) J. JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of Georgia.

Major General G. H. THOMAS:

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

OFFICE OF THE TENNESSEE AND ALABAMA CENTRAL R. R. CO.,
Athens, Alabama, August, 1865.

GENERAL: I would respectfully report the following gentlemen as duly elected as directors and officers of the Tennessee and Alabama Central Railroad Company, to wit:

James W. Sloss, president; Geo. S. Houston, Luke Pryor, Jonathan McDonald, Warren W. Philips, Thos. Redur, Jonathan Fisher, Wm. H. Walker, Jas. W. S. Donnel; John T. Tanner, secretary and treasurer.

Very respectfully, yours,

(Signed) JAS. W. SLOSS, President.

Major General G. H. THOMAS,
Commanding District of the Tennessee, Nashville, Tennessee.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, September 11, 1865.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to inform you that the Tennessee and Alabama Central railroad was turned over to Mr. Sloss, president of that road, yesterday, (September 10,) and that Mr. John S. Claybrooke, president of the Tennessee and Alabama railroad, has been informed that his road can be turned over to the company on the 15th day of September, proximo.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT H. RAMSEY,
Colonel and Assistant Adjutant General.

Captain F. J. CRILLY,
Chief Quartermaster United States Military Railroads.

Official:

GEO. W. HOWARD,
Assistant Adjutant General.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY.
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

CHIEF QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE, U. S. MILITARY RAILROADS,
MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, January —, 1866.

GENERAL: In accordance with the provisions of General Orders No. 20, headquarters military division of the Tennessee, of August 21, 1865, I have the honor to transmit inventories of property sold to railroad companies under the Executive Orders of August 8 and October 14, 1865.

The names of the companies, and the money value of the property sold to each, is as follows:

Nashville and Chattanooga	$1,566,551 73
Nashville and Northwestern	520,320 71
East Tennessee and Georgia	366,183 02
Memphis and Ohio	106,929 13
Tennessee and Alabama	108,692 68
Mississippi and Tennessee	102,668 02
Mobile and Great Northern	14,637 73
Nashville and Decatur	70,984 88
Muscogee	5,244 20
Alabama and Florida	51,912 00
Rome Branch	22,086 05
Mississippi, Gainesville, and Tuscaloosa	33,476 39
Selma and Meridian	142,017 92
Georgia Railroad and Banking Company	11,935 05
Wells Valley	30,248 52
Macon and Brunswick	93,237 50
Southwestern	46,159 89
Edgefield and Kentucky	93,385 09
Memphis and Charleston	64,000 00
Central Southern	77,186 32
Tennessee and Alabama Central	84,143 00
Mobile and Ohio	420,143 70
New Orleans and Ohio	32,150 00
Memphis and Charleston	483,494 09
Memphis, Clarksville, and Louisville	337,082 36
East Tennessee and Virginia	265,655 65
Macon and Western	83,638 15
Montgomery and West Point	38,559 66
Alabama and Tennessee River	183,276 49
New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern	131,245 58
Adams Express	4,361 45
Southwestern Iron	32,515 00
Western and Atlantic	472,944 66
Mississippi Central	29,700 00
Total appraised value of property sold up to November 30	6,126,766 62

I also transmit inventories of all captured property, so far as known, in the possession of the military authorities, and which I have transferred to the respective companies, as follows, viz:

Rogersville and Jefferson, Macon and Western, Nashville and Northwestern, Tennessee and Alabama, Nashville and Chattanooga, Western and Atlantic, Southern Railroad, (Mississippi,) Edgefield and Kentucky, Mobile and Ohio, East Tennessee and Virginia, Montgomery and West Point, Memphis and Ohio, Mississippi Central, East Tennessee and Georgia, Louisville and Nashville, New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern, Southwestern, Memphis and Charleston.

I also transmit an official statement showing the accountability of each company to the United States November 30, 1865. I have brought all the amounts up to this date so as to make all the instalments due on the last day of each month.

The amount of the first instalment, due November 30, is calculated as one twenty-fourth part of the total of principal, increased by the interest on the whole amount accruing during the month of November.

The second monthly instalment, due December 31, is calculated as one twenty-fourth part of the principal increased by the interest accruing in the month of December on the balance of principal due from November 30.

The third monthly instalment, due January 31, is calculated as one twenty-fourth part of the balance of principal, increased by the January interest on the amount of principal due. The succeeding monthly instalments to be calculated in a similar manner.

It may not be out of place to speak of the great service performed by the gentlemen constituting the board of appraisement, and of the very able manner in which their responsible duties were performed. No doubt many hundred thousand dollars have been saved the government by the careful manner in which the appraisements were made.

There will be left on hand about twenty-one (21) serviceable engines, and two hundred (200) cars, which I have advertised to be sold at public auction in February.

Full opportunity has been given to all the southern companies to purchase railroad property, and I judge they all have as much as they can well pay for.

The roads operated by the United States were returned to their respective companies as promptly as the collection of the large amount of government railroad material along the different lines would admit.

The dates of transfer are as follows, viz:

East Tennessee and Virginia, East Tennessee and Georgia, Rogersville and Jefferson, August 28, 1865; Memphis and Charleston (from Stevenson to Decatur,) Nashville and Northwestern, September 1, 1865; Memphis and Charleston (from Memphis to Corinth,) September 12, 1865; Nashville and Decatur railroad line, Nashville and Chattanooga, September 15, 1865; Edgefield and Kentucky, and Clarksville, Louisville, and Memphis, September 23, 1865; Western and Atlantic, September 25, 1865; Mobile and Ohio, August 25, 1865.

The bonds required of the different companies to secure the payment for the property purchased have nearly all been executed and forwarded to the Quartermaster General. Some I was obliged to return to the companies for slight informalities. I believe they will all be in during the present week.

Owing to the crippled condition of most of the roads but few have commenced paying promptly their monthly instalments.

All the companies express their willingness to pay their indebtedness to the government, and only ask that the time be extended as much as possible until they can get their roads running, when they will pay up all back instalments.

In accordance with the instructions of the major general commanding, I have not pressed them yet for these payments.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Major and A. Q. M. U. S. A., Chief Q. M. U. S. Military railroads, Mil. Div. of the Tennessee.

General W. D. WHIPPLE,
Chief of Staff, Military Division of Tennessee, Present.

A true copy:

ALEXANDER BLISS,
Brevet Colonel, A. Q. M., U. S. A.

Report of sales of United States military railroad property, under Executive Orders of August 8 and October 14, 1865, in the military division of the Tennessee, under the direction of Brevet Major F. J. Crilly, A. Q. M., U. S. Army, for the month ending November 30, 1865.

	Name of company.	Total appraised value of property purchased.	Am't of interest from date of purchase to Nov. 30, 1865.	Total.	Am't of first instalment, due Nov. 30, 1865.	Am't paid Nov. 30, 1865.	Am't of instalments unpaid Nov. 30, 1865.
1	Rome Railroad Company	$22,086 05	$114 25	$22,200 30	$925 00		$925 00
2	Edgefield and Kentucky Railroad Company	93,385 69	757 76	94,142 85	3,900 00		3,900 00
3	Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company	14,657 73	67 38	14,705 11	620 00	$620 00
4	Southwestern Railroad Company	46,159 89		46,159 89		32,908 86
5	Wills Valley Railroad Company	30,248 52	254 05	30,502 57	1,300 00		1,300 00
6	East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Company	366,183 02	5,111 18	371,294 20	15,500 00	136 61	15,500 00
7	Montgomery and West Point Railroad Company	38,559 66	285 02	38,844 68	1,700 00	1,700 00
8	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Company	66,417 50		66,417 50		61,000 00
	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Company	26,820 00	41 09	26,861 09	1,244 71	1,244 71
9	Alabama and Florida Railroad Company	51,912 00	586 17	52,498 17	2,200 00	2,200 00
10	Muscogee Railroad Company	5,244 20	50 75	5,294 95	250 00	250 00
11	Macon and Western Railroad Company	83,638 15		83,638 15		56,305 04
12	Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company	420,143 70	1,682 38	421,826 08	17,576 00		17,576 00
13	Memphis and Ohio Railroad Company	106,929 13	801 68	107,730 81	4,500 00	4,500 00
14	Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad Company	102,668 02	907 24	103,575 26	4,500 00	4,500 00
15	East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company	265,655 65	3,800 47	269,456 12	11,228 00		11,228 00
16	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company	483,494 09	6,329 01	489,823 10	20,800 00	900 08	20,800 00
17	Memphis, Clarksville, and Louisville Railroad Company	337,082 36	1,061 36	338,143 72	14,100 00		14,100 00
18	Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company	1,566,551 73	20,605 34	1,587,157 07	66,140 00		66,140 00
19	Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company	520,320 71	8,880 74	529,201 45	22,501 00		22,501 00
20	New Orleans and Ohio Railroad Company	32,150 00	203 62	32,353 62	1,350 00		1,350 00
21	Tennessee and Alabama Railroad Company	108,692 68	1,655 66	110,384 34	4,600 00		4,600 00
22	Central Southern Railroad Company	77,186 32	1,173 28	78,359 60	3,300 00		3,300 00
16	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company	64,000 00		64,000 00
23	Tennessee and Alabama Central Railroad Company	84,143 00	1,278 97	85,421 97	3,600 00		3,600 00
24	Nashville and Decatur Railroad Company	70,984 88	719 33	71,704 21	3,000 00		3,000 00
25	Mississippi, Gainesville, and Tuscaloosa Railroad Company	33,476 39		33,476 39
26	Selma and Meridian Railroad Company	142,017 92	852 11	142,870 03	6,000 00		6,000 00
27	Southwestern Iron Company	32,515 00		32,515 00
28	Georgia Railroad Banking Company	11,935 05		11,935 05
29	Mississippi Central Railroad Company	29,700 00	35 64	29,735 64	1,239 00		1,239 00
30	Alabama and Tennessee River Railroad Company	183,276 49	1,093 83	184,370 32	7,700 00		7,700 00
31	New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern Railroad Co.	131,245 58	771 74	132,017 32	6,000 00	6,000 00
32	Adams Express Company	4,361 45		4,361 45
33	Western and Atlantic Railroad Company	472,944 66	5,764 27	478,708 93	19,975 00		19,975 00
	Total	6,126,766 62	64,884 32	6,191,650 94	245,748 71	172,265 30	224,734 00

Report of sales of United States military railroad property, &c.—Continued.

	Name of company.	Balance due Nov. 30, 1865.	Terms of sale.	Official statement when forwarded to Qr. Mr. Gen.	Bonds when forwarded.	Remarks.
1	Rome Railroad Co	$22,200 30	To be paid for in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.	Dec. 28, 1865	Dec. 28, 1865
2	Edgefield and Kentucky Railroad Co	94,142 85		Dec. 16, 1865
3	Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Co	14,085 11		....do	Dec. 16, 1865
4	Southwestern Railroad Co	13,251 03	Payable April 13, 1866, without interest	Dec. 18, 1865	Dec. 18, 1865	$32,908 86 paid Nov. 29, 1865.
5	Wills Valley Railroad Co	30,502 57	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.	Dec. 27, 1865
6	East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Co	371,157 59		....do	Jan. 3, 1866	$136 61 overcharged, deducted from Capt. Hopkins's account.
7	Montgomery and West Point Railroad Co	37,144 68		Dec. 16, 1865	Dec. 16, 1865
8	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Co	5,417 50	Payable on or before Dec. 1, 1865, without interest	Dec. 27, 1865		$10,000 paid Oct. 31, $51,000 Nov. 30. Special sale railroad iron, orders Q. M. General, Aug. 30.
	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Co	25,616 38	To be paid for in equal monthly instalments, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.	....do
9	Alabama and Florida Railroad Co	50,298 17		Dec. 15, 1865	Dec. 15, 1865
10	Muscogee Railroad Co	5,044 95		Dec. 27, 1865	Jan. 10, 1866
11	Macon and Western Railroad Co	27,333 11	Payable on or before May 1, 1866, without interest	Dec. 23, 1865	Dec. 23, 1865	$56,305 04 paid Nov. 20, 1865.
12	Mobile and Ohio Railroad Co	421,926 08	To be paid for in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.	Dec. 22, 1865	Dec. 28, 1865
13	Memphis and Ohio Railroad Co	103,230 81		Dec. 30, 1865
14	Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad Co	99,075 26		Dec. 23, 1865
15	East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Co	269,456 12		Jan. 7, 1866	Jan. 7, 1866
16	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Co	488,923 02		....do		$100 08 deducted for improper charge, Sept. 11, 1865.
17	Memphis, Clarksville, & Louisville RR. Co	338,143 72		Dec. 16, 1865
18	Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Co	1,587,157 07		Jan. 7, 1866
19	Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Co	529,201 45		Jan. 8, 1866
20	New Orleans and Ohio Railroad Co	32,353 62		Jan. 6, 1866
21	Tennessee and Alabama Railroad Co	110,348 34		Jan. 12, 1866
22	Central Southern Railroad Co	78,359 60		Jan. 11, 1866
16	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Co	64,000 00	Payable March 1, 1866	Jan. 7, 1866
23	Tennessee and Alabama Central RR. Co	85,421 97	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum,	Dec 31, 1865	Jan. 7, 1866
24	Nashville and Decatur Railroad Co	71,704 21	within two years.	Jan. 7, 1866
25	Miss., Gainesville, and Tuscaloosa RR. Co	33,476 39	Payable April 10, 1866, without interest	Jan. 5, 1866	Jan. 5, 1866
26	Selma and Meridian Railroad Co	142,870 03	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.	Jan. 13, 1866
27	Southwestern Iron Co	32,515 00	Payable in 40 days from Nov. 7, 1865	....do
28	Georgia Railroad Banking Co	11,935 05	Payable in six months without interest	Jan. 4, 1866	No bond req'd
29	Mississippi Central Railroad Co	29,735 64	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.	Jan. 13, 1866
30	Alabama and Tennessee River RR. Co	184,370 32		Jan. 9, 1866
31	N. Orleans, Jackson, and Gr. North. RR. Co	126,017 32		Jan. 13, 1866
32	Adams Express Co	4,361 45	Payable in 30 days without interest	....do
33	Western and Atlantic Railroad Co	478,708 93	Payable in two years in monthly instalments, interest 7 3-10 per cent.	....do
	Total	6,019,385 64

I certify that the above report is correct.

F. J. CRILLY, Brt. Maj. and A. Q. M., U. S. Army.
Chief Qr. Mr. Mil. R. Rds., Mil. Div. of the Tenn.

True copy.

F. J. CRILLY, Brt. Col. and A. Q. M., U. S. A.

Report of sales of United States military railroad property, under Executive Orders of August 8 and October 14, 1865, in the military division of the Tennessee, under the direction of Brevet Major F. J. Crilly, A. Q. M., U. S. A., for the month ending Dec. 31, 1865.

Running No.	Name of company.	Balance of principal due from Nov. 30.	Balance of interest due from Nov. 30.	Total due from Nov. 30.	Appraised value of property purchased in December.	Interest on purchases made in December.	Dec. interest on bal. of principal due from Nov. 30.	Total interest due Dec. 31.	Monthly instalment due December 31.	Amount of back instalment due December 31.
1	Rome Railroad Company	$22,086 05	$114 25	$22,200 30			$134 93	$249 18	$920 25	$925 00
2	Edgefield and Kentucky Railroad Company	93,385 09	756 76	94,142 85			578 99	1,336 75	3,891 65	3,900 00
3	Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company	14,017 73	67 38	14,085 11			86 91	154 29	584 08
4	Southwestern Railroad Company	13,251 03	254 15	13,251 03
5	Wills Valley Railroad Company	30,248 52		30,502 57			185 46	439 51	1,260 36	1,300 00
6	East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Company	366,046 41	5,111 18	371,157 59			2,269 49	7,380 67	15,251 94	15,500 00
7	Montgomery and West Point Railroad Company	36,859 66	285 02	37,144 68			228 53	513 55	1,535 82
8	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Company	25,575 29	41 09	25,616 38			158 57	199 66	1,065 64
	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Company	5,417 50		5,417 50
9	Alabama and Florida Railroad Company	49,712 00	586 17	50,298 17			308 21	894 38	2,071 34
10	Muscogee Railroad Company	4,994 20	50 75	5,044 95			30 96	81 71	208 09
11	Macon and Western Railroad Company	27,333 11		27,333 11
12	Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company	420,143 70	1,682 38	421,826 08			2,604 89	4,287 27	17,505 99	17,576 00
13	Memphis and Ohio Railroad Company	102,429 13	801 68	103,230 81			635 06	1,436 74	4,267 89
14	Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad Company	98,168 02	907 24	99,075 26			608 64	1,515 88	4,090 34
15	East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company	265,655 65	3,800 47	269,456 12			1,646 64	5,447 11	11,068 99	11,228 00
16	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company	482,594 01	6,329 01	488,923 02			2,992 08	9,321 09	20,108 09	20,800 00
	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company	64,000 00		64,000 00
17	Memphis, Clarksville, and Louisville Railroad Company	337,082 36	1,061 36	338,143 72			2,089 91	3,151 27	14,045 10	14,100 00
18	Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company	1,566,551 73	20,605 34	1,587,157 07			9,712 62	30,317 96	65,272 99	66,140 00
19	Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company	520,320 71	8,880 74	529,201 45			3,225 99	12,106 73	21,680 03	22,561 00
20	New Orleans and Ohio Railroad Company	32,150 00	203 62	32,353 62			199 33	402 95	1,339 59	1,350 00
21	Tennessee and Alabama Railroad Company	108,692 68	1,655 66	110,348 34			673 89	2,329 55	4,528 87	4,600 00
22	Central Southern Railroad Company	77,186 32	1,173 28	78,359 60			478 56	1,651 84	3,216 10	3,300 00
23	Tennessee and Alabama Central Railroad Company	84,143 00	1,278 97	85,421 97			521 69	1,800 66	3,505 96	3,600 00
24	Nashville and Decatur Railroad Company	70,984 88	719 33	71,704 21	$5,775 00	$3 46	440 11	1,162 90	3,208 76	3,000 00
25	Mississippi, Guinesville, and Tuscaloosa Railroad Co	33,476 39		33,476 39
26	Selma and Meridian Railroad Company	142,017 92	852 11	142,870 03			880 51	1,732 62	5,917 42	6,000 00
27	Southwestern Iron Company	32,515 00		32,515 00
28	Georgia Railroad and Banking Company	11,935 05		11,935 05
29	Mississippi Central Railroad Company	29,700 00	34 64	29,735 64	15,000 00	57 00	184 14	276 78	1,229 68	1,239 00
30	Alabama and Tennessee River Railroad Company	183,276 49	1,093 83	184,370 32			1,136 31	2,230 14	7,636 53	7,700 00
31	New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern Railroad Co.	125,245 58	771 74	126,017 32	25,900 00	119 14	776 32	1,667 40	6,344 66
32	Adams Express Company	4,361 45		4,361 45
33	Western and Atlantic Railroad Company	472,944 66	5,764 27	478,708 93			2,932 26	8,696 53	19,706 03	19,975 00
34	Virginia and Tennessee Railroad Company				81,140 00	236 47		236 47	3,380 84
	Total	5,954,501 32	64,884 32	6,019,385 64	127,815 00	416 07	35,721 20	101,021 59	245,502 43	224,734 00

Report of sales of United States military railroad property, &c.—Continued.

Running No.	Name of company.	Total instalments due December 31.	Monthly instalments and interest payable December 31.	Amount paid in December.	When paid.	Balance of principal due December 31.	Total of principal and interest due December 31.	Terms of sale.
1	Rome Railroad Company	$1,845 25	$722 43	$332 75	Dec. 1	$21,753 30	$22,002 48	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
2	Edgefield and Kentucky Railroad Company	7,791 05	4,470 04			93,385 09	94,721 84
3	Mobile and Great Northern Railroad Company	584 08	670 99			14,017 73	14,172 02
4	Southwestern Railroad Company					13,251 03	13,251 03	Payable April 18, 1866, without interest.
5	Wills Valley Railroad Company	2,560 36	1,445 82	1,300 00	Dec. 23	28,948 52	29,388 03
6	East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Company	30,751 94	17,521 43			366,046 41	373,427 08	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
7	Montgomery and West Point Railroad Company	1,535 82	1,764 35			36,259 66	37,373 21
8	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Company	1,065 64	1,224 21			25,575 29	25,774 95
	Macon and Brunswick Railroad Company			5,417 50	Dec. 23 & 27
9	Alabama and Florida Railroad Company	2,071 34	2,379 55			49,712 00	50,606 38	Do. do.
10	Muscogee Railroad Company	208 09	39 80	250 00	Dec. 31	4,744 20	4,825 91
11	Macon and Western Railroad Company					27,333 11	27,333 11	Payable on or before May 1, '66, without int.
12	Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company	35,081 99	20,110 88			420,143 70	424,430 97
13	Memphis and Ohio Railroad Company	4,267 89	4,902 95			102,429 13	103,865 87
14	Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad Company	4,090 34	1,798 98	2,900 00	Dec. 31	95,268 02	96,783 90	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
15	East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company	22,296 99	12,644 49	71 14	Dec. 1	265,584 51	271,031 62
16	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company	40,908 09	23,100 17			482,594 01	491,915 10
	Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company					64,000 00	64,000 00	Payable March 1, 1866, without interest.
17	Memphis, Clarksville, and Louisville Railroad Co.	28,145 10	16,135 01			337,082 36	340,233 63	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
18	Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company	131,412 99	74,985 61			1,566,551 73	1,596,869 69
19	Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company	44,181 03	24,906 02			520,320 71	532,427 44
20	New Orleans and Ohio Railroad Company	2,089 59	1,538 92			32,150 00	32,552 95
21	Tennessee and Alabama Railroad Company	9,128 87	5,202 76			108,692 68	111,022 23
22	Central Southern Railroad Company	6,516 10	3,494 66			77,186 32	78,838 16
23	Tennessee and Alabama Central Railroad Company	7,105 96	4,027 65			84,183 00	85,943 66
24	Nashville and Decatur Railroad Company	6,208 76	3,652 33			76,759 88	77,922 78
25	Mississippi, Gainesville & Tuscaloosa Railroad Co.					33,476 39	33,476 39	Payable April 10, 1866, without interest.
26	Selma and Meridian Railroad Company	11,917 42	6,797 93			142,017 92	143,750 54	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
27	Southwestern Iron Company			32,515 00	Dec. 13
28	Georgia Railroad and Banking Company					11,935 05	11,935 05	Payable April 30, 1866, without interest.
29	Mississippi Central Railroad Company	3,128 82	2,130 82			44,700 00	44,976 78	Payable in equal monthly instalments, on last day of each month, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
30	Alabama and Tennessee River Railroad Company	15,336 53	8,772 84			183,276 49	185,506 63
31	New Orleans, Jackson & Great Northern R. R. Co.	6,344 66	7,171 49	68 83	Dec. 31	151,076 75	152,744 15
32	Adams Express Company			4,361 45	Dec. 18
33	Western and Atlantic Railroad Company	39,681 03	22,638 29			472,944 66	481,641 19	Payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. per annum, within two years.
34	Virginia and Tennessee Railroad Company	3,380 84	3,617 31			81,140 60	81,376 47
	Total	470,236 43	278,067 73	47,216 67		6,035,099 65	6,136,121 24

True copy.

F. J. CRILLY, Brt. Col., A. Q. M., U. S. A.

Report of sales of United States military railroad property to the Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad Company for the months ending November 30 and December 31, 1865, January 31 and February 28, 1866; computed in accordance with instructions received from Major General George H. Thomas, commanding military division of the Tennessee.

For the month ending November 30, 1865: Appraised value of purchase made, $102,668 02; interest on purchases from date of purchase to November 30, 1865, $907 24; total interest due November 30, 1865, $907 24; equal monthly instalment due November 30, 1865, $2,851 89; total instalments due November 30, 1865, $2,851 89; date of payment, November 30, 1865; amount paid in November, 1865, $4,500 00; balance of principal due November 30, 1865, $99,075 26; total principal and interest due November 30, 1865, $99,075 26; excess of payment over interest and instalments due, $740 87.

For the month ending December 31, 1865: Balance principal due November 30, 1865, $99,075 26; interest for December on balance principal due November 30, 1865, $614 27; total interest due December 31, 1865, $614 27; equal monthly instalment due December 31, 1865, $2,851 89; total instalments due December 31, 1865, $2,851 89; date of payment, December 31, 1865; amount paid in December, 1865, $2,900; balance of principal due December 31, 1865, $96,789 53; total principal and interest due December 31, 1865, $96,789 53; excess of payment over interest and instalments, $174 71.

For the month ending January 31, 1866: Balance principal due December 31, 1865, $96,789 53; interest for January on balance principal due December 31, 1865, $600 10; total interest due January 31, 1866, $600 10; equal monthly instalment due January 31, 1866, $2,851 89; total instalments due January 31, 1866, $2,851 89; payments made January 30, 1866, $1,014 62, $5,301 45, $4,157 93; amount paid in January, 1866, $10,474; credited interest on payment to January 31, 1866, $97 75; balance of principal due January 31, 1866, $86,817 88; total principal and interest due January 31, 1866, $86,817 88; excess of payments over interest and instalments due, $7,294 47.

For the month ending February 28, 1866: Balance principal due January 31, 1866, $86,817 88; purchases made in February, 1866, $55,082 50; interest on February purchases, $60 20; interest for February on balance principal due January 31, 1866, $486 18; total interest due February 28, 1866, $546 38; equal monthly instalment due February 28, 1866, $3,611 97; total instalments due February 28, 1866, $3,611 97; payment made February 28, 1866; amount paid in February, 1866, $4,315 00; balance of principal due February 28, 1866, $108,131 76; total principal and interest due February 28, 1866, $108,131 76; excess of payment over interest and instalment, $7,451 12.

I certify that the above is correct.

S. R. HAMILL,
Captain, Acting Quartermaster, Disbursing Quartermaster
United States Military Railroads, Military Division of the Tennessee.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Acting Quartermaster United States Army.

Consolidated report of sales of United States military railroad property, under of the Tennessee, under the direction of Captain S. R.

Running number.	Name of company.	Balance of principal due February 27, 1866.	Balance of interest unpaid February 28, 1866.	Purchases made in March, 1866.	Interest on March purchases.	Interest for March, 1866, on balance of principal unpaid February 28, 1866.	Total interest due March 31, 1866.	Balance of instalments unpaid February 27, 1866.
1	Rome R. R. Co	$19,560 85				$128 28	$121 28	$1,160 13
2	Edgefield and Kentucky R. R. Co	114,772 86	$2,712 66			711 59	3,424 25	16,463 49
3	Mobile and Great Northern R. R. Co	13,469 35				83 51	83 51	1,256 96
4	Southwestern R. R. Co	11,204 68
5	Wills Valley R. R. Co	28,948 52	781 10			179 48	960 58	3,777 48
6	East Tennessee and Ga. R. R. Co	352,098 35	1,971 75			2,183 01	4,154 76	47,161 01
7	Montgomery and W. Point R. R. Co	33,734 98	188 92			209 16	398 08	1,622 40
8	Macon and Brunswick R. R. Co	25,575 29	501 45			158 57	660 02	3,203 78
9	Alabama and Florida R. R. Co	45,880 84	256 93			284 46	541 39	2,571 16
10	Muscogee R. R. Co	4,563 31	25 55	$41 91	$0 75	28 29	54 59	254 23
11	Macon and Western R. R. Co	27,333 11
12	Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co	376,061 35				2,331 58	2,331 58	2,621 93
	Mobile and Ohio R. R. Co	40,612 00				251 79	251 79	2,737 00
13	Memphis and Ohio R. R. Co	99,982 93	559 90			619 89	1,179 79	10,745 45
14	Mississippi and Tennessee R. R. Co	108,131 76				670 42	670 42
15	E. Tennessee and Virginia R. R. Co	265,566 08	1,497 17			1,646 51	3,133 68	44,330 91
16	Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co	482,397 69
	Memphis and Charleston R. R. Co	64,000 00
17	Mem., Cl'ksville, & Louisville R.R.Co.	337,082 36	6,977 91			2,089 91	9,067 82	56,230 32
18	Nashville and Chattanooga R. R. Co	1,561,575 93	8,751 57			9,700 37	18,451 94	259,904 35
19	Nashville and Northwestern R. R. Co	519,680 17				3,222 02	3,222 02	84,262 82
20	New Orleans and Ohio R. R. Co	32,150 00	782 32			199 33	981 65	5,367 81
21	Tennessee and Alabama R. R. Co	90,512 55				561 18	561 18
22	Central Southern R. R. Co	64,245 64				398 32	398 32
23	Tenn. and Ala. Central R. R. Co	70,033 66				434 21	434 21
24	Nashville and Decatur R. R. line	122,836 05				761 58	761 58	2,720 47
25	Miss., Gainesville, and Tus. R. R. Co	33,476 39	888 90			207 55	1,096 45	5,579 40
26	Selma and Meridian R. R. Co	91,097 77	510 15	4,310 00	38 79	564 81	1,113 75
29	Mississippi Central R. R. Co	59,305 65				367 70	367 70	3,056 05
30	Alabama and Tenn. River R. R. Co	183,276 49	4,392 80			1,136 31	5,529 11	30,603 81
31	N. O., Jackson, and Gt. N'n R. R. Co	143,881 33				892 06	892 06	2,018 72
33	Western and Atlantic R. R. Co	472,944 66	14,277 28			2,932 26	17,209 54	79,068 63
34	Virginia and Tennessee R. R. Co	102,880 00	1,402 58			637 86	2,040 44	11,991 46
35	South Carolina R. R. Co	23,458 50	65 68			145 44	211 12	977 44
36	McMinnville & Manchester R. R. Co	20,310 00	56 87			125 92	182 79	846 25
	Total	6,015,641 10	46,591 49	4,351 91	39 54	33,856 37	80,487 40	680,623 49

Excess of payments over interest and instalments $41 56
Do. ..... do. 8,397 79

See, also, enclosure A.

Time of payment extended to April 10, 1866, with interest, at 6 per cent. per annum, from March 1, 1866.

Nashville and Decatur line have transportation accounts awaiting examination and audit to more than meet their payments now due, but which, owing to so much ahead of them, could not be credited to the "Line" this month.

Executive Orders of August 8 and October 14, 1865, in the military division Hamill, A. Q. M., for the month ended March 31, 1866.

Equal monthly instalments due March 31, 1866.	Total instalments due Mar. 31, 1866.	Date of payments made in March, 1866.	Amounts paid in March, 1866.	Credit interest to March 31, 1866, on payments made.	Balance of interest due and unpaid March 31, 1866.	Balance of instalments due and unpaid Mar. 31, 1866.	Balance of principal due March 31, 1866.	Total principal and interest, due March 31, 1866.
$920 04	$2,080 17	March 5, $1,034 20; March 31, 1,033 05.	.....	$5 38	.....	$128 22	$17,608 90	$17,609 00
4,781 80	21,245 29	.....	.....	.....	$3,424 25	21,245 29	114,772 86	118,197 11
610 69	1,867 59	.....	.....	.....	89 51	1,867 59	13,469 35	13,552 86
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	11,204 68	11,204 68
1,258 56	5,036 04	.....	.....	.....	960 58	5,036 04	28,948 52	29,909 10
15,246 87	62,407 88	.....	.....	.....	4,154 76	62,407 88	352,098 35	356,253 11
1,605 63	3,228 03	.....	.....	.....	398 08	3,228 03	33,734 98	34,133 06
1,114 07	4,407 85	.....	.....	.....	660 02	4,407 85	25,575 29	26,235 31
2,165 49	4,736 65	.....	.....	.....	541 39	4,736 65	45,880 84	46,422 23
217 56	471 79	March 5, $286 67; March 31, 279 78.	$566 45	1 49	.....	.....	4,091 87	4,091 87
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	27,333 11	27,333 11
18,519 48	21,141 41	March 30.....	19,713 29	3 94	.....	3,755 76	358,675 70	358,675 70
5,050 00	7,787 00	March 21.....	5,295 76	10 59	.....	2,732 44	35,557 44	35,557 44
4,461 88	15,207 33	March 22.....	6,283 57	11 31	.....	10,092 24	94,867 84	94,867 84
3,611 97	3,611 97	March 15, $1,050 81; March 31, 4,174 89.	5,225 70	3 36	.....	.....	103,573 12	103,573 12
11,061 76	55,392 70	.....	.....	.....	3,133 68	55,392 70	265,506 08	268,699 76
.....	.....	Feb. 12, $4,264 34; March 1, 7 84.	4,272 18	.....	.....	.....	478,125 51	478,125 51
.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	64,000 00	64,000 00
14,042 61	70,272 93	.....	93	.....	9,066 89	70,272 93	337,082 36	346,149 25
65,233 58	325,137 93	March 9, $1,021 65; March 23, 14,128 92.	18,150 57	40 31	261 06	325,137 93	1,564,475 93	1,564,836 99
21,754 16	106,016 98	.....	.....	.....	3,222 02	106,016 98	519,680 17	522,902 19
1,339 11	6,706 92	.....	.....	.....	981 65	6,706 92	32,150 00	33,131 65
4,525 63	4,525 63	March 31.....	5,086 81	.....	.....	.....	85,986 92	85,986 92
3,212 29	3,212 29	March 31.....	3,610 61	.....	.....	.....	61,033 35	61,033 35
3,501 69	3,501 69	March 31.....	3,935 90	.....	.....	.....	66,531 97	66,531 97
5,610 71	8,361 18	Feb. 14, $85 00; March 31, 7,366 68; March 31, 829 37.	8,221 05	64 77	.....	776 94	115,251 81	115,251 81
1,394 85	6,974 25	.....	.....	.....	1,096 45	6,974 25	33,476 39	34,572 84
6,129 16	6,129 16	March 31.....	510 15	.....	603 60	.....	95,407 77	96,011 37
2,692 11	5,748 16	.....	.....	.....	367 70	5,748 16	59,305 65	59,673 35
7,603 64	38,237 45	March 6.....	15,340 18	76 70	.....	28,349 68	173,388 72	173,388 72
7,026 45	9,045 17	March 28, $7,085 00; March 31, 78 75.	7,163 75	4 25	.....	2,769 23	137,605 39	137,605 39
19,693 80	98,762 43	.....	.....	.....	17,209 54	98,762 43	472,944 66	490,154 20
4,328 04	16,319 50	.....	.....	.....	2,040 44	16,317 50	102,880 00	104,920 44
977 44	1,954 88	.....	.....	.....	211 12	1,951 88	23,458 50	23,669 62
846 25	1,692 50	.....	.....	.....	182 79	1,692 50	20,310 00	20,492 79
230,597 26	921,220 75	.....	105,504 75	222 10	48,599 53	846,513 02	5,976,154 03	6,024,753 56

Excess of payments made over instalments due, $21,046 25.

NOTE.—The time for paying the first monthly instalments with accrued interest for the East Tennessee and Georgia and the East Tennessee and Virginia railroads has been extended to the 1st of August next.

I certify that the above report is correct.

S. R. HAMILL, Captain, A. Q. M.,
Disbursing Q. M. U. S. Mil. R. R., Mil. Dir. of the Tenn.

True copy.

F. J. CRILLY, Bvt. Col., A. Q. M. U. S. A.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, September 1, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit copy of agreement and bond to be executed by the different railroad companies in this military division desiring to purchase rolling stock, &c., from the United States, under your letter of instructions of August 8. The bond is intended to make the directors jointly and individually liable with the company. After due consideration, I believe this to be the only kind of bond which will secure the payment of the amount due at the specified time, for the reason that all the companies are mortgaged, and it would be impossible for them to execute any bond as a company, in favor of the United States, that would have precedence over those already given. The presidents and directors are strongly opposed to giving their personal bonds, but propose that the title to the property remain with the United States until payment is made, and to execute a deed of trust to that effect. A large amount of the property turned over to them will soon be suspended, and even the rolling stock is liable to accidents common to railroads, and might at any time be entirely destroyed by fire or collision. I respectfully request I may receive instructions as to what form of bond will be considered satisfactory to the government.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

Articles of agreement,

Entered into this ——— day of ———, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, between ——— ———, an officer in the service of the United States of America, on the first part, for and on the part of the United States, and by direction of the President of the said United States through the Hon. Edwin M. Stanton, Secretary of War, in a letter of instruction to Major General G. H. Thomas, United States army, dated Washington, D. C., the eighth day of August, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and which is as follows, viz:

"WAR DEPARTMENT,
"Washington City, August 8, 1865.

"GENERAL: It having been determined by the government to relinquish control over all railroads in the State of Tennessee, and continuations in adjoining States, that have been in charge of, and are now occupied by, the United States military authorities, and no longer needed for military purposes, you are hereby authorized and directed to turn over the same to the respective owners thereof at as early a date as practicable, causing in all cases of transfer as aforesaid the following regulations to be observed and carried out:

"1. Each and every company will be required to reorganize and elect a board whose loyalty shall be established to your satisfaction.

"You will cause to be made out in triplicate, by such person or persons as you may indicate, a complete inventory of the rolling stock, tools, and other materials and property on each road.

"3. Separate inventories will be in the same manner made of the rolling stock and other property originally belonging to each of said roads, and that furnished by and belonging to the government.

"4. Each company will be required to give bonds satisfactory to the government that they will, in twelve months from the date of transfer as aforesaid, or such other reasonable time as may be agreed upon, pay a fair valuation for the government property turned over to said companies, the same being first appraised by competent and disinterested parties, at a fair valuation, the United States reserving all government dues for carrying mails and other service performed by each company until said obligations are paid; and if, at the maturity of said debt, the amount of government dues retained as aforesaid does not liquidate the same, the balance is to be paid by the company in money.

"5. Tabular statements will be made of all expenditures by the government for repairing each road, with a full statement of receipts from private freights, passage, and other sources; also a full statement of all transportation performed on government account, giving the number of persons transported and amount of freight, and the distance carried in each case; all of said reports or tabular statements to be made in triplicate, one each for the Secretary of War, the military headquarters of the department, and the railroad company.

"6. All railroads in Tennessee will be required to pay all arrearages of interest due on the bonds issued by that State prior to the date of its pretended secession from the Union, to aid in the construction of said roads, before any dividends are declared or paid to stockholders thereof.

"7. Buildings erected for government purposes on the line of railroads, and not valuable or useful for the business of said companies, should not form a legitimate charge against such companies, nor should they be charged for rebuilding houses, bridges, or other structures which were destroyed by the federal army.

"8. You are authorized to give any orders to quartermasters within your division which you may deem necessary to carry into execution this order.

"By order of the President:

"EDWIN M. STANTON,
"Secretary of War.

"Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
"Commanding Military Division of Tennessee, Nashville, Tenn."

And the ——— Railroad Company, of the State of Tennessee, by ———, of the county of ———, State of ———, president; and ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; ———, of the county of ———, State of ———; and ———, of the county of ———, State of ———, ——— ———, directors of said company, on the second part.

This agreement witnesseth, that the said ———, for and in behalf of the United States of America, and the said ——— Railroad Company, and the said ———, president, and ———, directors of said company, for themselves, their heirs, executors, and administrators, have mutually agreed, and by these presents do mutually covenant and agree to and with each other as follows, viz:

First. In accordance with the instructions of the President of the United States, as above written, the party of the first part agrees to sell and deliver to the party of the second part such rolling stock, machinery, and tools as they may require to operate the said ——— railroad, the value of which will be determined by a board of appraisement convened by General Orders No. 20, headquarters military division of the Tennessee, dated Nashville, Tennessee, August twenty-first, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, (official copy being hereunto appended.)

Second. The report of the board of appraisement convened as above mentioned, when properly approved by the major general commanding the military division of the Tennessee, and fixing the value and amount of the articles sold to the said ——— Railroad Company, ———, president, and ———, directors, will be appended to this agreement, and constitute and be considered as a part of said agreement, and the total money value of said rolling stock, machinery, and tools, as so appraised, will be inserted in a bond which we, the said ——— railroad company, and ———, president, and ———, directors, agree to execute for the faithful performance of this agreement.

Third. Payment shall be made by the said ——— Railroad Company, and ———, president, and ———, directors, for the value of said rolling stock, machinery, and tools sold to them as above stated, at the value as appraised and as hereunto appended, on the ——— day of ———, eighteen hundred and sixty-——, in lawful money of the United States of America, after deducting therefrom the amount due said company by the United States for transportation.

Fourth. No member of Congress, officer or agent of the government, or any person employed in the public service, shall be admitted to any share herein, or to any benefits which may arise herefrom.

In witness whereof, the undersigned have hereunto placed their hands and seals the day and date first above written.

Witness:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., October 14, 1865.

GENERAL: The provisions and benefits of the Executive Order of 8th of August are hereby extended to all railroads within the limits of your command desiring to purchase railroad rolling stock and material from the United States, for the purpose of repairing the losses of the war.

You are also authorized to direct the sale to any such railroads of rolling stock now within the limits of your command, and not needed by the United States for actual use, upon the following conditions, if they are preferred to the terms of the order of 8th August, and the individual security required by you under that order:

You will take care that this property is distributed among the several roads in proportion to their actual needs, and that none is sold to any railroad in excess of the reasonable requirements of its business, or to be used for purposes of speculation, sale, or hire to other roads.

You will require from all such railroad companies satisfactory bonds, in the form herewith enclosed, binding them to the payment to the United States of the full appraised value of the property sold to them, in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum, within two years, credit being allowed to them, on the first of each month, for any service of military transportation rendered by them during the preceding month, at the established rates now allowed to northern railroads for such service.

Full reports of all sales under this order will be made to the War Department from time to time, as required by existing orders.

The serviceable railroad iron in possession of the quartermaster's department at Chattanooga and Nashville is excepted. It will be sold only for cash at the prices fixed by the War Department.

By order of the President:

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Commanding Military Division of the Tennessee,
Headquarters, Nashville, Tennessee.

Bond.

Know all men by these presents, that the ——— Railroad Company, duly incorporated by the act of the ——— of the State of ———, by ——— ———, its president, acting for and in behalf of said railroad company, do hereby acknowledge itself and its successors held and firmly bound unto the United States of America in the full and just sum of ——— dollars, lawful money of the United States; for which payment well and truly to be made to the disbursing quartermaster of the United States military railroads, at his office in Nashville, or to such other disbursing quartermaster as may be designated by the War Department, within two years from the date of these presents, the said railroad company, by its president, hereby binds itself and its successors firmly by these presents.

Sealed with its corporate seal, attested by the signature of its president, and affixed by the express authority of its directors, this ——— day of ———, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-—— (186—.)

The nature of the above obligation is such, that whereas the above-bounden railroad company has purchased and received, or shall receive, from the War Department of the United States, rolling stock, iron rails, cross-ties, chairs, spikes, timber, and other materials for operating its railroad, in quantities, at prices, and to an amount and value which shall be evidenced by the receipts given for the same by the said railroad company to the proper officers of the said War Department, upon a credit of two years from the date of these presents, payable in equal monthly instalments, with interest at the rate of 7 3-10 per cent per annum, within the said two years, either in cash to the disbursing quartermaster of the United States military railroads, at his office in Nashville, or to such other disbursing quartermaster as may be designated for this purpose by the War Department, or in transportation of the troops or military supplies of the United States, under the orders of the proper military authorities, at the rates of fare and tolls allowed for such service to northern railroads; and whereas the said railroad company desires, and by these presents intends, to secure to the United States the complete and punctual payment as aforesaid of the amounts which may be due for the said materials received or to be received by it from the United States:

Now, therefore, if the said railroad company shall well and truly pay as aforesaid either in cash, in equal monthly instalments, or in transportation as aforesaid, to the United States, within two years from the date of these presents, all that shall be due as aforesaid to the United States on account and in payments or all the materials received as aforesaid from the United States, then this obligation shall be void and of no effect.

But if the said railroad company shall fail to pay to the United States all or any portion of what may be due to the United States on account of the said materials received from the United States, within two years from the date of these presents, either in cash as aforesaid, or in transportation as aforesaid, or shall fail to pay any of the monthly instalments aforesaid punctually when due, then this obligation shall remain in full force and effect to the extent that may be necessary to fully repay to the United States for the full amount which may be due on account of the said materials so received as aforesaid, and all loss or damage which may have been incurred by the United States by reason of the said railroad company's failure to pay for the same what shall be due therefor when the same shall be due.

And as a further security for such payment and indemnity to the United States, the United States shall have a lien upon the property sold to said company, and in default of such complete and punctual payment of all moneys which may be due on account of the aforesaid purchase of materials, be fully authorized to take possession of and sell said property, and also to place in charge and control of the said company's railroad an agent of the said United States, who shall be fully empowered, and by these presents is fully empowered, in case of such default as aforesaid, to collect all the revenues of the said company, and apply the same to the payment to the United States of all the moneys which shall be due at the times of such application of such revenues to the United States for any such materials which shall have been delivered by the United States to the said railroad company, or by reason of any loss or injury to the United States resulting from such default in payment of the same And the said company shall have no authority to sell or convey out of its possession, without the consent of the United States first in writing obtained, any of the property referred to in this agreement; but shall hold and retain the same to the exclusive use of said company in carrying on the business of transportation of persons and property over its line of road until the whole is fully paid for as aforesaid.

In witness whereof, the corporate seal of said railroad company is affixed hereto by authority of its directors and attested by its president.

_____ _____.

Witness:

_____ _____.

NOTE.—The amount of this bond to be double the valuation of the property sold and delivered. Internal revenue stamps should be affixed to the amount of fifty cents for every thousand dollars.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Chief Quartermaster's Office, Nashville, Tennessee, February 13, 1866.

GENERAL: In making statement of transportation on United States military railroads the following items were omitted both in my report and the report of Mr. McPherson:

Transportation of fourth corps, 18,000 men from Huntsville to Chattanooga, sixty miles, Memphis and Charleston railroad, $21,600; Chattanooga to Knoxville and return, one hundred and ten miles, East Tennessee and Georgia railroad, $79,200; Knoxville to Greenville, seventy-four miles, East Tennessee and Virginia railroad, $26,640.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. DONALDSON, Brevet Major General,
Chief Quartermaster, Military Division of the Tennessee.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS, U. S. Army,
Commanding Military Division of the Tennessee.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

MEMORANDUM.

Military railroads were taken possession of in March, 1862.

Captain R. Stevenson, assistant quartermaster, was in charge to October 3, 1862. He died and was succeeded by Lieutenant C. H. Irwin, to February 8, 1863, when Captain S. Perkins, jr., assistant quartermaster, took charge. Captain Perkins remained in charge to July or August, 1863, when Captain John Stewart, assistant quartermaster, assumed charge. Captain Stewart was relieved in December, 1863, by Captain James F. Rusling, assistant quartermaster, who a few days afterwards was succeeded by Captain J. C. Crane, assistant quartermaster, December, 1863, who remained in charge till May, 1864, when he was relieved by the present officer, Captain S B Brown, assistant quartermaster, January 1, 1866.

From August 28, 1862, to January 8, 1863, military railroads were not opened, as the enemy had possession from Nashville south.

The Chattanooga railroad was in operation to Tullahoma only till July, 1863, and to Stevenson in September, and Bridgeport in October, 1863; it was not opened to Chattanooga till December, 1863.

True copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, March 29, 1866.

CAPTAIN: The major general commanding is in receipt of a communication from Minor Merriweather, secretary and treasurer of the Mississippi and Tennessee railroad, stating the inability of the company to which he belongs to continue the regular payment of the monthly instalments due the United States for property purchased by them for the road, and asking an extension of twelve months to the time required by their bond in which to make their payments.

As the company has manifested a disposition to meet their liabilities to the government, and as the reasons given by Mr. Merriweather for asking for an extension of time are considered good and sufficient by the major general commanding, the latter directs that the amount originally due the United States from this road be divided into thirty-six equal parts, one part to be paid monthly, counting from the time when the first one-twenty-fourth monthly instalment under the bond became due, that to be considered as the date of the first of the thirty-six instalments under the arrangement, with interest at seven and three-tenths.

Credit will be given the road for any surplus that may have been paid in, but no interest thereon will be returned.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. D. WHIPPLE,
Brevet Brigadier General and Chief of Staff.

Captain S. R. HAMILL,
Chief Quartermaster United States Military Railroads,
Nashville, Tennessee.

A true copy:

S. R. HAMILL,
Captain and Assistant Quartermaster.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Chief Quartermaster's Office, Nashville, Tennessee, January 23, 1866.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit a report of Colonel James F. Rusling, inspector quartermaster's department, to myself, on the subject of freight and passenger receipts, &c., on railroads while in the possession of the United States during the rebellion. The report is only approximate, as you will see by reading it. It has been found impossible to make more than an approximate report by reason of the confusion which prevailed when we first seized the roads, the seesawing of the armies back and forth over them, whereby they came first into the hands of the rebels and then into ours, the frequent changes of quartermasters, and last, but not least, the want of unity of action between the various quartermasters and superintendents. I am bound to say that this last obstacle did not exist after I took charge, November 1, 1863. I was in perfect accord with Mr. J. B. Anderson and his successor, General McCallum, and the records, consequently, are comparatively perfect; but previous to that time there is no trace of a directing mind in railroads, so far as the duties of the quartermaster's department are concerned, and Mr. Anderson and his predecessor, Colonel Innes, seem to have run the roads pretty much as a wagon-master runs a train, without keeping any special record of its operations. Colonel Rusling's present statement is derived mostly from Mr. McPherson's statement to you, with such addenda as he could obtain. On the whole, I do not think we can get at any thing more accurate, and therefore submit it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. L. DONALDSON,
Brevet Major General, Chief Quartermaster Military Division, Tennessee.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Commanding Military Division of the Tennessee, Nashville, Tennessee.

A true copy:

ALEXANDER BLISS,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

OFFICE INSPECTOR QUARTERMASTER'S DEPARTMENT,
Nashville, Tennessee, January —, 1866.

GENERAL: In pursuance of your request a fortnight since, I beg leave to submit herewith approximate reports of persons and freight transported over United States military railroad here, as far as I have been able to obtain the necessary data.

In addition thereto, I would state the following facts that I have derived from various sources. It appears that the railroads running south from here were taken possession of, with offices, shops, rolling stock, &c., in March, 1862, on the arrival here of our army after the fall of Fort Donelson. Fort Donelson surrendered February 16, 1862, and our forces arrived here about one week after. Soon after Captain R. Stevenson, assistant quartermaster, was placed in charge, in addition to other duties here.

It appears that the Nashville and Chattanooga and the Nashville and Decatur railroads were at once opened as the troops advanced, reaching Murfreesboro' and Columbia in March and Stevenson and Decatur late in April. Up to May 15, 1862, it appeared that the main body of General Buell's army (about 48,000 men) were supplied largely by the Nashville and Decatur line; the balance, some 12,000 men, under General O. M. Mitchell, were stationed along the Nashville and Chattanooga line and about Stevenson, threatening Chattanooga, and were supplied mainly by that line. Late in May, Buell swung around more toward Chattanooga, and then both roads were used about equally. This continued until about August 8, 1862, both roads being used very considerably, when, in consequence of Bragg's march north, our forces fell rapidly back on Nashville, the enemy following, and by September 8 our supplies had been withdrawn and the last train from the south got into Nashville. Our line, it seems, fell back covering both roads, so that both were abandoned about same time, September 8. When our forces again advanced, late in the fall of 1862, they found trestle-work and bridges gone generally, so that the roads were scarcely used, if at all, until in February, 1863.

By the death of Captain Stevenson the roads passed into the hands of Lieutenant (now brevet colonel) C. H. Irwin, about October 1, 1862, but, as above stated, they do not appear to have been used much until February following, because of siege of Nashville, nearness of our own troops, broken condition of roads, &c. His first shipments were made to Lavergne, February 8, 1863, and he appears to have kept an accurate account, from that time on, of stores forwarded, but not of troops transported. The latter was in the hands of Mr. J. B. Anderson, the then civil superintendent, and I have not been able to obtain here any accounts of same whatever. This brings us forward to March 19, 1863, when Colonel Irwin was relieved by Captain S. Perkins, jr., assistant quartermaster, who remained in charge, as near as I can find, to August 1, 1863. Captain Perkins is now out of the service, in Akron, Ohio, and I have not been able to secure any data from him. I presume, however, that he kept very full and accurate accounts, as things had begun to settle down by this time, and he had Colonel Irwin's precedents to go upon. Colonel Irwin informs me that he had written and telegraphed him for a report on the subject, as far as he is able, and I suppose you will get something from him soon.

Captain Perkins was relieved on or about August 1, 1863, by Captain John Stewart, assistant quartermaster, who continued in charge until November 19, 1863, when he was relieved by myself. Subsequently I was relieved December 1, 1863, by Captain John C. Crane, assistant quartermaster, who continued in charge of freight and passenger transportation, until May 1, 1864, when he was relieved of this portion of his railroad duties by Captain S. B. Brown, assistant quartermaster, who has remained in charge down to the present date.

During this last period, from August 1, 1863, the accounts kept by the various officers are comparatively accurate as to stores transported, but are not so satisfactory as to troops. Current supplies have mostly been regularly itemized and shipped by bill of lading, &c., the usual reports of stores forwarded being rendered to the Quartermaster General; but this is not invariable, and the data as to other shipments are merely so many "cars of baggage," or "cars of troops" forwarded, from which the actual amount of contents can only be surmised. Instances have occurred, as in the hurried or heavy shipments of troops, when no transportation tickets were issued, and but little, if any, record kept of the movement at all. There was a general looseness, indeed, in this respect, resulting from the fact that the roads were being run as government roads, with no charges made or expected to be made for government freight and travel.

The Chattanooga road I find was opened up again as Rosecrans advanced in 1863, reaching Tullahoma in July, Stevenson in August, Bridgeport in September, and Chattanooga in December, 1863. The Nashville and Decatur road was opened up again to Decatur in March, 1864.

The section of the Memphis and Charleston railroad from Decatur to Stevenson was put in operation about same time. The East Tennessee and Georgia was opened up to Knoxville the latter part of April, 1864, though the East Tennessee and Virginia, from Knoxville east, and that portion of East Tennessee and Georgia, from Knoxville to Tennessee river, had been operated for some months before, to some extent, by General Burnside. The Western and Atlantic followed Sherman, in May, 1864, as he marched on Atlanta, keeping close on his heels, and was in full operation to Atlanta about September 1, 1864. The Rome branch was opened as Sherman covered that region, and used slightly. The Nashville and Northwestern was got in running order some distance out in the fall of 1863, but it was not pushed through to Johnsonville until May, 1864, which may be regarded as its real opening. The Edgefield and Kentucky was in operation as far as Springfield early in the winter of 1864, but did not reach Clarksville or become of much use until June, 1864.

All of these roads were, at different times and for different periods, broken and abandoned, so that it is most difficult to fix anything like their real work, or their real claims, if any, upon the government. I enclose, however, an approximate report, marked A, of operations of Lieutenant (now Brevet Colonel) Irwin, compiled from data now in his possession. The freight transported is nearly correct, but the troops I have had to estimate, because of the absence of all records. I also enclose an approximate report of troops and freight transported by United States military railroads from August 1, 1863, to date of transfer of roads to companies, marked B. These reports both show the probable number of troops transported, and average distance, with cost to the government of same had the established rate of two cents per mile each been charged; also, the probable amount of government stores transported, and average distance, with cost to the government of same had the established rate of two cents per ton per mile been charged. They give the following results:

Estimated charges for troops transported by Lieutenant Irwin		$1,970 00
Estimated charges for freight transported by Lieutenant Irwin		7,854 40
Total		9,824 40
Estimated charges for troops transported by United States military railroads	$1,289,721 72
Estimated charges for freight transported by United States military railroads	2,593,856 40
		3,882,578 12
Adding these together we have—total charges		3,892,402 52

I also enclose a report, marked C, showing cash earnings of roads while in hands of the United States, from August 1, 1863, to date of transfer to companies. These, it will be seen, foot up $1,203,687 64.

The cash earnings previous to August 1, 1863, must have been considerable, as charges were made for all private freight and travel, and the amount of cotton and tobacco that came in on return trains was often very large, as Brevet Colonel Irwin informs me. As evidence of this he stated, from opening of the roads up to September, 1862, the total expenses were paid for by the cash earnings, with the exception of about $30,000 drawn from the quartermaster's department. All these passed into the hands of Mr. J. B. Anderson, then general superintendent, who rendered an account of same to the Secretary of War, as I am informed.

For the reports, marked B and C, I am chiefly indebted to Mr. R. B. McPherson, general superintendent United States military railroads, "who has compiled same," as he informs me, "from books and records of United States military railroads," now in the office of the general superintendent here. He does not pretend that report B is accurate, but he claims that it is as full and complete as he is able to make from data in existence, and this is no doubt true. In making it he has had recourse to shipping books, way bills, reports, telegrams, letters, &c., as well as books of transportation quartermasters, and I recommend it to be accepted as about the best that can be made or even approximated to under existing circumstances.

For the gap in reports covered by period of Captain Perkins, I recommend that you await Captain Perkins's report, which can readily be reduced to same form as those herewith. For that of Captain Stevenson I recommend that you call on Quartermaster General for copies of his report of stores forwarded, from which you will be able to estimate his troops transported, the same as I have done in report A. I learn that such reports were kept by him, and that his papers were forwarded to Quartermaster General by Brevet Colonel Irwin in 1865. My basis for estimate of troops in report A was that of one man to each four tons of freight forwarded. I assumed this ratio because you will see that the ratio in report B appeared to be about one man to each two tons of freight forwarded, this being the case where shipments of troops were general, and often heavy. But during Colonel Irwin's and Captain Stevenson" administration much fewer troops were transported because of shortness of rolling stocks orders compelling troops to march, and less distance from base.

Submitting which as the best my time will allow, and returning memoranda and reports furnished me,

I remain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES F. RUSLING,
Colonel and Inspector Quartermaster's Department.

Brevet Major General J. L. DONALDSON,
Chief Quartermaster Military Division, Tennessee.

A true copy:

ALEXANDER BLISS,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

A.—Statement of the business of the United States Military Railroads, Division of the Tennessee, from February 8, 1863, to March 19, 1863, inclusive.

Railroads.	No. of troops transported.	Average distance.	Troops transported one mile.	Amount at 2 cts. per man per mile.	Amount of government stores transported.	Average distance.	Am't of stores transported one mile.	Amount at 2 cts. per ton per mile.	Total cost to the government if charged established rates.
		Miles.			Tons.	Miles.	Tons.
Nashville and Chattanooga railroad	2,900	32	92,800	$1,856 00	11,560	32	369,920	$7,398 40	$9,254 40
Nashville and Decatur railroad	300	19	5,700	114 00	1,200	19	22,800	456 00	570 00
Total	3,200	.....	98,500	1,970 00	12,760	.....	392,720	7,854 40	9,824 40

True copy.

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

B.—Statement of the business of United States Military Railroads, Division of the Tennessee, from August 1, 1863, to the date of their transfer to original owners.

Railroads.	No. of troops transported.	Average distance.	Troops transported one mile.	Amount at 2 cents per man per mile.	Amount of government stores transported.	Average distance.	Am't of stores transported one mile.	Amount at 2 cts. per ton per mile.	Total cost to the government if charged established rates.	Date of transfer to civil authorities.
		Miles.			Tons.	Miles.	Tons.
Nashville and Chattanooga	392,484	110	43,173,240	$863,464 80	744,377	110	81,881,470	$1,637,629 40	$2,501,094 20	September 14, 1865.
East Tennessee and Georgia	43,582	75	3,268,650	65,373 00	94,835	75	7,112,625	142,252 50	207,625 50	August 28, 1865.
East Tennessee and Virginia	21,121	75	1,584,075	31,681 50	44,813	75	3,360,975	67,219 50	98,901 00	August 28, 1865.
Western and Atlantic	47,574	90	4,281,660	85,633 20	109,748	90	9,877,320	197,546 40	283,179 60	September 25, 1865.
Rome Branch	9,073	17	154,241	3,084 82	13,220	17	224,740	4,494 80	7,579 62	September 25, 1865.
Nashville and Decatur	49,324	75	3,699,300	73,986 00	151,598	75	11,369,850	227,397 00	301,383 00	September 14, 1865.
Memphis and Charleston	24,578	30	737,340	14,746 80	50,171	30	1,505,130	30,102 60	44,849 40	September 1, 1865.
Nashville and Western	100,312	75	7,523,400	150,468 00	182,454	75	13,684,050	273,681 00	424,149 00	September 1, 1865.
Edgefield and Kentucky	709	20	14,180	283 60	33,833	20	676,660	13,533 20	13,816 80	September 1, 1865.
Total	688,757	.....	64,436,086	1,288,721 72	1,425,049	.....	129,692,820	2,593,856 40	3,882,578 12

True copy.

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

Statement of the business on the United States Military Railroads, Division of the Tennessee, from August 1, 1863, to the date of transfer to the original owners.

Roads.	Cash earnings.				Troops transported.			Government stores transported.			Total.	Date of transfer.
	Freight.	Passengers.	Express, &c.	Total.	One mile.	Average distance.	Amount.	One mile.	Average distance.	Amount.
						Miles.		Tons.	Miles.
Nashville and Chattanooga	$241,283 02	$170,588 27	$221,039 43	$632,910 72	43,173,240	110	$863,464 80	81,881,470	110	$1,637,629 40	$3,134,004 92	Sept. 14, 1865.
East Tennessee and Georgia	7,374 62	33,431 19	41,772 35	82,578 16	3,268,650	75	65,373 00	7,112,625	75	142,252 50	290,203 66	Aug. 28, 1865.
East Tennessee and Virginia	8,205 23	19,152 64	3,513 97	30,871 84	1,584,075	75	31,681 50	3,360,975	50	67,219 50	129,772 84	Do.
Western and Atlantic	41,535 33	57,371 17	32,946 01	131,852 51	4,281,660	90	85,633 20	9,877,320	90	197,546 40	415,032 11	Sept. 25, 1865.
Rome Branch					154,241	17	3,084 82	224,740	17	4,494 80	7,579 62	Do.
Nashville and Decatur	91,718 24	50,459 70	62,290 62	204,468 56	3,699,300	75	73,986 00	11,369,850	75	227,397 00	505,851 56	Sept. 14, 1865.
Memphis and Charleston	18,812 11	57,371 17	14,616 06	90,799 34	737,340	30	14,746 80	1,505,130	30	30,102 60	135,648 74	Sept. 1, 1865.
Nashville and Northwestern	5,883 51	14,292 75	4,749 70	24,925 96	7,523,400	75	150,468 00	13,684,050	75	273,681 00	449,074 96	Do.
Edgefield and Kentucky	2,545 65	2,283 40	451 50	5,280 55	14,180	20	283 60	676,660	20	13,533 20	19,097 35	Do.
Total	417,357 71	404,950 29	381,379 64	1,203,687 64	64,436,086		1,288,721 72	129,692,820		2,593,856 40	5,086,265 76

NASHVILLE, January 19, 1866.

I certify that the above statement is as full and complete as I am able to make from the books and records of the military railroad department.

R. B. M'PHERSON, Assistant to General Superintendent.

A true copy.

ALEXANDER BLISS, Brevet Colonel, A. Q. M., U. S. A.

C.—Statement of the cash earnings of the United States Military Railroads, Division of the Tennessee, from August 1, 1863, to date of transfer to original owners.

Roads.	Freights.	Passengers.	Express, &c.	Total.	When transfer'd.
Nashville and Chattanooga	$241,283 02	$170,588 27	$221,039 43	$632,910 72	Sept. 14, 1865.
East Tennessee and Georgia ...	7,374 62	33,431 19	41,772 35	82,578 16	Aug. 28, 1865.
East Tennessee and Virginia...	8,905 23	19,152 64	3,513 97	30,871 84	Do.
Western and Atlantic	41,535 33	57,371 17	32,946 01	131,852 51	Sept. 25, 1865.
Rome branch					Do.
Nashville and Decatur.....	91,718 24	50,459 70	62,290 62	204,468 56	Sept. 14, 1865.
Memphis and Charleston.....	18,812 11	57,371 17	14,616 06	90,799 34	Sept. 1, 1865.
Nashville and Northwestern ...	5,883 51	14,292 75	4,749 70	24,925 96	Do.
Edgefield and Kentucky.....	2,515 65	2,263 40	451 50	5,230 55	Do.
Total.....	417,357 71	404,950 29	381,379 64	1,203,687 64

True copy.

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel, Assistant Quartermaster United States Army.

RECORD.

Proceedings of a board of appraisers convened at Nashville, Tennessee, by virtue of the following order, viz:

[General Orders No. 20.]

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
Nashville, Tennessee, August 21, 1865.

The following letter of instructions, just received from the War Department, is published for the information of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 8, 1865.

GENERAL: It having been determined by the government to relinquish control over all railroads in the State of Tennessee, and their continuations in adjoining States that have been in charge of, and are now occupied by, the United States military authorities, and no longer needed for military purposes, you are hereby authorized and directed to turn over the same to the respective owners thereof at as early a date as practicable, causing in all cases of transfer, as aforesaid, the following regulations to be observed and carried out:

I. Each and every company will be required to reorganize and elect a board of directors whose loyalty shall be established to your satisfaction.

II. You will cause to be made out in triplicate, by such person or persons as you may indicate, a complete inventory of the rolling stock, tools, and other materials and property on each road.

III. Separate inventories will be, in the same manner, made of the rolling stock and other property originally belonging to each of said roads, and that furnished by and belonging to the government.

IV. Each company will be required to give bonds, satisfactory to the government, that they will in twelve months from the date of transfer, as aforesaid, or such other reasonable time as may be agreed upon, pay a fair valuation for the government property turned over to said companies, the same being first appraised by competent and disinterested parties at a fair valuation, the United States reserving all government dues for carrying the mails, and other service performed by each company, until said obligations are paid; and if at the maturity of said debt the amount of government dues retained as aforesaid does not liquidate the same, the balance is to be paid by the company in money.

V. Tabular statements will be made of all expenditures by the government for repairing each road, with a full statement of receipts from private freights, passage, and other sources; also a full statement of all transportation performed on government account, giving the number of persons transported, and the amount of freight and the distance carried in each case; all of said reports or tabular statements to be made in triplicate; one each for the Secretary of War, the military headquarters of the department, and the railroad company.

VI. All railroads in Tennessee will be required to pay all arrearages of interest due on the bonds issued by that State prior to the date of its pretended secession from the Union, to aid in the construction of said roads, before any dividends are declared or paid to the stockholders thereof.

VII. Buildings erected for government purposes on the line of railroads, and not valuable or useful for the business of said companies, should not form a legitimate charge against such companies, nor should they be charged for rebuilding houses, bridges, or other such structures which were destroyed by the federal army.

VIII. You are authorized to give any orders to quartermasters within your division which you may deem necessary to carry into execution this order.

By order of the President:

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

Major General GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Commanding Military Division of the Tennessee.

In accordance with the requirements contained in paragraph IV, Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Colonel William E. Merrill, first regiment United States veteran volunteer engineers; Albert Fink, esq., Louisville, Kentucky; Walter McQueen, esq., superintendent Schenectady Locomotive Works, and J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, are appointed a board of appraisers, with Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de-camp, as recorder for the board. It shall be the duty of the board, in compliance with the directions given in paragraph IV, to assess at a fair valuation all government railroad property to be disposed of under the provisions of the foregoing letter of instructions. The board of appraisers will assemble in the city of Nashville at 10 o'clock a. m., September 1, 1865, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and will continue their sessions at this and such other points within this military division as the duties upon which they are called together may require.

By command of Major General George H. Thomas:

WILLIAM D. WHIPPLE,
Brigadier General and Assistant Adjutant General.

Official:

ROBT. H. RAMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant General.

SEPTEMBER 1, 1865—10 a. m.

The board met pursuant to the above order. Present, Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Colonel W. E. Merrill, first regiment United States veteran volunteer engineers; Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de-camp, recorder.

Absent, Albert Fink, esq., Louisville, Kentucky; Walter McQueen, esq., en route to Nashville, and J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, not heard from.

The board adjourned to 10 a. m. the 4th instant.

SEPTEMBER 4, 1865—10 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, not heard from.

After consultation with the officers of the military railroad department, it was decided by the board to appraise the locomotives first, and the following numbers were appraised at the sums respectively set opposite to them, viz:

No. 28, $12,500; 36, $14,500; 73, $16,500; 87, $16,500; 88, $16,500; 89, $16,500; 117, $16,500; 120, $17,000; 180, $16,250; 181, $16,500; 182, $16,750; 185, $16,500; 187, $17,000; 188, $17,000; 194, $16,000; 202, $16,500; 125, $17,000; 126, $16,500; 127, $16,500; 203, $15,500; 205, $15,500;

At 6 p. m. the board adjourned to the 5th instant at 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1865—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, not heard from.

Appraised twenty-four locomotive engines, as follows, viz:

No. 15, $8,500; 19, $8,500; 19, $8,500; 27, $10,750; 35, $15,500; 54, $13,250; 71, $16,250; 72, $16,250; 81, $17,000; 84, $15,500; 96, $13,500; 101, $8,000; 111, $12,000; 112, $14,000; 113, $12,500; 128, $17,000; 132, $16,750; 135, $17,000; 167, $13,500; 177, $13,500; 191, $16,750; 193, $17,400; 196, $16,250; 210, $15,500.

After which a consultation was held with various members of the military railroad department to devise means of facilitating further appraisements of box cars, machinery, &c.

Adjourned at 5.30 p. m. until 9 a. m. September 6.

SEPTEMBER 6, 1865—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, not heard from.

Appraised eleven (11) locomotive engines, as follows, viz:

No. 14, $10,500; 29, $8,500; 44, $16,000; 118, $17,000; 124, $17,250; 129, $17,000, 139, $17,250; 172, $15,000; 176, $16,750; 184, $17,000; 192, $17,000.

The board then proceeded to appraise the fixed machinery in the car shops, as follows:
One stationary double engine, counter shaft and pulleys complete, $12,000.
Injector to same, $250.
Three (3) boilers to same, $2,250.
Boiler, front grate and breeching, $1,000.
Steam fire-engine, first class, $750.

Wood machine shop.

No. 4. Circular saw and bench fixtures, including saw, bench, mandrils, counter-shaft and windlass, $250.
No. 1. Boxing machine, $150.
No. 1. Resawing machine, $450.

Iron machine shop, (first story.)

No. 1. Boring and turning mill and counter-shaft, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 10,) $1,750.
No. 1. Hydraulic press for drawing on and off wheels, with gauge and fixtures, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 19,) $1,250.
No. 2. Driving-wheel lathe, double headed counter-shafts, complete, (Wm. Sellers & Co., No. 176,) $4,000.
No. 1. Wheel quartering machine, double-headed, fixtures, counter-shafts, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 6,) $1,800.
No. 20. Axle lathe, with counter-shaft, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 26,) $800.
Nos. 1 and 2. Travelling-head shaping machine or compound planers with vices, at $1,500 each, (Bement & Dougherty, Nos. 6 and 13,) $3,000.
No. 4. Small shaping machine, (Gould & Brothers,) $350.
Nos. 1, 2, and 3. Planers at $1,600, $1,500, and $1,450, (Bement & Dougherty, Nos. 27, 26, and 27.) $4,550.
No. 4. Overhead drill, $300.
No. 1. Putnam column drill press, $550.
No. 1. Slanting machine, counter-shaft, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 8,) $1,600.
No. 3. 54-inch engine, lathe counter-shaft, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 11,) $3,500.
No. 1. Straightening machine, $800.

Third shop, (second story.)

No. 1. Milling machine, counter-shaft, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 178,) $700.
No. 1. Colter and Key, seat drilling machine, counter-shaft, complete, (Bement & Dougherty,) $1,000.
No. 1. Gear cutting machine, (Gould Brothers,) $500.
No. 5. Compound planer, counter-shaft, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 19,) $800.
No. 6. Compound planer, counter-shaft, (Gould Brothers.) $250.
No. 3. Compound planer, counter-shaft, travelling head, (Wm. Sellers & Co., No. 41,) $1,500.
No. 6. Planer, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $400.
No. 5. Planer, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $600.
No. 3. Column drill press, (Sellers & Co., No. 56,) $550.
No. 2. Drill, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $325.
No. 4. 36-inch lathe slide, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 16,) $2,500.
No. 6. Engine lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $1,000.
No. 16. Slide and screw-cutting Putnam lathe, captured at gun factory, C. S. A., Nashville, 18½-inch swing, $550.
No. 15. Slide and screw-cutting Putnam lathe, 20-inch swing, $700.
No. 14. Slide and screw-cutting Putnam lathe, 23-inch swing, $750.
No. 13. Slide and screw-cutting Putnam lathe, 26¼-inch swing, $850.
No. 12. Duplicate of 13, $900.
No. 11. Double-headed lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $1,000.
No. 10. Lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $600.
No. 9. Lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $600.
No. 8. Lathe, (claimed by Anderson, taken from gun factory, C. S.,) $550.
No. 19. Bolt lathe, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 52,) $600.
No. 18. Bolt lathe, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 51,) $600.
No. 17. Hand lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $125.
One double engine hoisting machine, taken from the "Overton House," $1,200.
No. 7. Lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $850.
No. 5. Lathe, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $1,200.
No. 5. Nutt tapping machine, (taken from Brannan's shops, Nashville,) $150.
No. 3. Bolt and nutt tapping machine, (bought of Cleburne, Nashville,) $175.
No. 1. Bolt cutting machine, (Bement & Dougherty,) $850.

No. 2. Bolt cutting machine, (Wm. Sellers & Co., 136,) $750.
No. 1. Boiler roller, (Wm. Sellers & Co., No. 6,) $650.
One grindstone, 8 by 36, pulley shaft, and cast-iron frame, $150.
Grindstone, 12 by 52, wooden frame, $50.
The board then adjourned to September 7, 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 7—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., not heard from.

Appraised eight (8) locomotive engines, as follows, viz:

No. 186, $17,000; No. 189, $17,900; No. 159, $16,750; No. 161, $17,000; No. 32, $15,000; No. 74, $17,400; No. 77, $16,000; No. 94, $14,000.

The following heavy tools were then appraised in the engine or round house, viz:

One (1) hand shearing machine, $200.
No. 1. Hand punch, $250.
No. 1. Hand screw and hydraulic punch, $100.
No. 2. Portable boiler rollers, $400.
No. 2. Small compound lever hand punch, $75.
No. 2. Hand shears, $75.

In work shop, (first story.)

One (1) link planer attachment, $125.

In work shop, (second story.)

One portable cylinder borer, (boxed up,) $300.

It was resolved by the board that all new and unused machinery, not included in the foregoing categories of appraisements, will be disposed of at the builders' present market rates, transportation not to be added.

Owing to the great number of cars, viz., over three thousand, (3,000,) the board resolved to classify the cars (box) into four classes, the flats into two classes, hand cars into two classes, and hand truck cars into two classes—the appraisement to be made according to the samples offered in each class. Passenger cars are to be appraised each one separately.

The appraisement on engine No. 36, (locomotive,) made on the 4th of September, and valued at $14,500, was reconsidered by the board, and increased to $16,000. The subject of buildings was then brought before the board, and was considered until 5.30 p. m., when the board adjourned until 9 a. m., September 8.

SEPTEMBER 8—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, not heard from.

Eight (8) locomotive engines were appraised as follows, viz:

No. 45, $16,500; No. 76, $16,000; No. 85, $17,000; No. 140, $17,000; No. 164, $16,500; No. 165, $16,500; No. 170, $15,000; No. 171, $15,000.

An examination was then made by the board of the various buildings in and about the railroad yard, with a view of making an appraisement on the same at a later period.

The following amount of wood, remaining on the line of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad, was then appraised by the board, as follows:

16,614¾ cords of four-foot wood, at $3 per cord.
4,880¼ cords of 30-inch wood, at $3 50 per cord.
4,880½ cords of four-foot wood, in the woods at Vaughn's Gap, at $2 25 per cord.
1,280 cords of four-foot wood, in the woods at Johnsonville, at $3 per cord.

The board then considered the subject of cars, and resolved to appraise them by classes, as follows:

Box cars.

Class 1.—Those strengthened in bolsters, without defects, and that have been in use about six months, with good combination or rubber springs, $950. For every additional six months' use deduct $75 more.

Class 2.—Those not strengthened in bolsters, but in complete repair, and in use about six months, with good combination or rubber springs, $900. For every additional six months' use deduct $75 more.

If "Davis springs" are used in the foregoing classes, (No. 1 or No. 2,) deduct $50 (fifty dollars) additional.

Class 3.—Those not in good repair: Deduct from the valuation according to the foregoing rules, and, in addition thereto, the probable cost to put the car in good running order.

Class 4.—Those that are too old or too much injured to be worth repairing are to be disposed of as the United States military railroad authorities may see fit.

Flat cars.

Class 1.—Those in good running order, not used more than six months, $700; deduct for every six months' additional use $50.

Class 2.—From those out of repair deduct from the valuation, as per rules of class 1, the amount necessary to put it (the car) in good running order.

Hand cars.

Class 1.—New, $150.

Class 2.—All others in running order, $100.

Hand truck cars.

Class 1.—New, $75.

Class 2.—All others in running order, to be valued at an average price of $50.

The board then adjourned until September 9, at 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 9—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Furnsworth, esq., not yet heard from, and A. Finke, esq.

Seventeen locomotive engines were appraised as follows, viz:

No. 18, $8,000; 46, $16,000; 60, $5,000; 79, $16,500; 80, $17,000; 92, $14,000; 122, $15,000; 123, $17,250; 104, $4,000; 155, $16,500; 176, $14,250; 178, $14,500; 183, $13,000; 198, $13,000; 204, $14,500; 207, $5,000; Wisconsin, $4,500.

The board then appraised the machinery in the car shops as follows, viz:

One hydraulic press for drawing on and off car wheels, and fixtures, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 6,) $1,000.

One small screw-cutting lathe and fixtures, (Fay & Co.,) $550.

One axle lathe, 16" 24', and fixtures, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 31,) $800.

Car-wheel borer and fixtures, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 13,) $1,650.

Wood hand-lathe, no fixtures, $75.

Overhead drill and fixtures, (Fay & Co.,) $300.

Upright drill and fixtures, (Lowell Machine Company,) $250.

Screw cutter and fixtures, (Fay & Co.,) $650.

Screw cutter and fixtures, (maker unknown,) $600.

Grindstone, wooden frame and pulleys, 44 by 6 inches, $30.

Wood planer, circular cutter and fixtures, (Fay & Co.,) $1,750.

Circular saw, cast iron bench, arbors and three saws, (Fay & Co.,) $125.

Saw tooth gummer or cutter, (Toole & Silver, Salem,) $50.

Thirty-inch grindstone, $25.

Horizontal wood-boring machine and fixtures, (Fay & Co.,) $150.

Cut-off saw, saw bench, two saws with counter shaft, (Fay & Co.,) $250.

Circular saw, cast iron bench arbors with two saws, (Fay & Co.,) $125.

Patent scroll saw fixtures, (Fay & Co.,) $275.

Tenon-cutting machine, (Fay & Co.,) $300.

Incomplete heavy timber-splitting saw and table, with rollers, $125.

Daniel's planer, 60 by 27, and fixtures, carriage 70 feet long, $800.

Morticer and borer, (Rodgers & Co.,) $500.

One stationary engine, shaft pulleys, fly wheel, two boilers, heater, boiler fronts, and breeching, (counter-shaft and belt not included,) $4,000.

Wood-lathe and counter-shaft, $100.

Wood-shaping machine, counter-shaft, (Fay & Co,) $200.

Small circular saw-arbor and bench, $50.

Foot-morticing machine scroll saw, $50.

Rotary steam fire-engine, first-class, $750.

In the foundry attached to car shops.

Large crane, $650.

Small cupola, $200.

Large cupola, $800.

Patent fan and pipes, (McKinzie,) $600.

Small stationary engine, boiler and heater, smoke pipe and counter-shaft, $1,600.

Blacksmith shop attached to car shop.

Patent fan, $125.

Small furnace, $150.

The board then appraised the following tools:

In locomotive machine shop.

80 tool boxes at $1 25 each.
2 tackle blocks at manufacturers' present price.
20 wooden buckets at 25 cents each.
4 steel bars at 25 cents per pound.
13 boring bars at 10 cents per pound.
1 cylinder bar at 12½ cents per pound.
68 rose bits at $1 50 per pound.
1 hand brace at $1 25.
Work benches, 389 feet long by 2' 3½ wide, at $1 per running foot.
Work benches, 163 feet long by 2' 4½ feet wide, at $1 per running foot.
18 tool cupboards at $2 each.
20 boring cutters at 50 cents per pound.
3 pairs large calipers at $3 per pair or each.
3 belt clamps at 15 cents per pound.
26 horseshoe clamps at 15 cents per pound.
8 steel clamps at 30 cents per pound.
3 screw chucks at manufacturers' present prices.
13 universal chucks at manufacturers' present prices.
4 drill chucks at $1 per pound.
19 brass chucks at $1 per pound.
5 planer chucks at 20 cents per pound.
170 screw chasers at $1 50 per pound.
275 steel cold chisels at 30 cents per pound.
135 sets of dies at $3 per pound.
25 steel drifts at 30 cents per pound.
4 sets dogs (lathe) at 25 cents per pound.
4 sets dogs (planers) at 12½ cents per pound
308 steel drills at 35 cents per pound.
21 pin drills at 50 cents per pound.
5 screw-drivers at 50 cents each.
15 wheel gauges at 10 cents each.
34 hubs for dies at $2 per pound.
50 machinist hammers at 50 cents per pound.
1,400 feet fire-hose (including couplings) at $1 per foot.
7 jackscrews at $15 each.
30 iron mandrels at 7 cents per pound.
33 steel nut drills at 40 cents per pound.
9 steel plain round drills at 30 cents per pound.
4 brass hose nozzles at $15 each.
56 machine oilers at 20 cents each.
2 glue pots at $1 25 each.
20 steel punches at 30 cents per pound.
2 face plates at 10 cents per pound.
3 belt punches at 25 cents per pound.
42 centre punches at 30 cents per pound.
14 angle plates at 10 cents per pound.
6 ratchets at $10, $15, $20, according to size.
106 reamers at $2 per pound.
1 platform scale at manufacturers' present price.
4 hack saws at $2 each.
4 blacksmiths' sledges at 12½ cents per pound.
4 grindstones at 2 cents per pound.
7 oil stones at $7 for the lot.
13 centre squares at 50 cents per pound.
84 parallel strips at 12½ cents per pound.
1 tinners' snips at $1.
9 screw stocks at 25 cents per pound.
1 set of type (letter) at 20 cents each letter.
1 set of type (figures) at 20 cents each figure.
108 hand turning tools at 30 cents per pound.
608 turning tools at 30 cents per pound.
236 planing tools at 30 cents per pound.
44 boring tools at 30 cents per pound.
19 slotting machine tools at 30 cents per pound.
375 steel taps at $3 per pound.
2 gas-pipe tongs at 15 cents per pound.
45 vices at 20 cents per pound.
85 monkey-wrenches at $1 each for the lot.

1 clamp wrench at 15 cents per pound.
36 tap wrenches at 15 cents per pound.
1 socket wrench at 15 cents per pound.
87 key iron wrenches at 15 cents per pound.

In erecting shops (locomotive.)

2 iron tackle blocks at manufacturers' present prices.
20 wooden buckets at 25 cents each.
9 portable work benches, 15 feet long and 3 feet 5 inches wide, at $20 each.
9 side benches, 308 feet long and 3 feet 6 inches wide, at $1 per running foot.
7 pinch bars at 12½ cents per pound.
788 steel cold chisels at 30 cents per pound.
1 stock at 25 cents per pound.
2 screw-drivers at 50 cents each.
60 engine hammers at 50 cents per pound.
5 jackscrews at $15 each.
4 hydraulic jacks at $100 each.
5 hack saws at $2 each.
1 tinners' snips at $1.
2 oil stones at $2 for the lot.
86 vices at 20 cents per pound.
4 spirit levels at $1 25 each.
107 padlocks at 50 cents each for the lot.
25 Dutch lamps at 25 cents each.
48 spring-bottom oilers at 25 cents each.
30 steel punches at 30 cents per pound.
9 tool racks at $12 each.
2 pair trams at $5 each.
114 monkey-wrenches at $1 each.
89 iron key wrenches at 15 cents per pound.

In boiler shop and round-house.

2 anvils at 18 cents per pound.
4 blacksmiths' bellows at $15 each.
1 set black clamps at 8 cents per pound.
21 pinch bars at 12½ cents per pound
7 steel bars at 25 cents per pound.
25 iron clamps at 10 cents per pound.
204 cold chisels at 30 cents per pound.
38 steel drills at 30 cents per pound.
4 top fullers at 50 cents per pound.
2 flatters at 50 cents per pound.
4 forges at 7 cents per pound.
1,550 feet gum hose, (old,) at 50 cents per foot.
26 chipping hammers at 50 cents per pound.
61 engine hammers at 50 cents per pound.
8 button hand at 40 cents per pound.
35 jackscrews at $15 each.
12 hydraulic jacks at $100 each.
20 steel mandrels at 30 cents per pound.
25 iron mandrels at 10 cents per pound.
1 face plate at 7 cents per pound.
19 steel punches at 30 cents per pound.
5 ratchets at $10, $15, and $20, according to size.
8 blacksmiths' sledges at 12½ cents per pound.
8 bottom swedges at 25 cents per pound.
24 scrapers at 8 cents per pound.
20 blacksmiths' tongs at 12½ cents per pound.
73 vices at 20 cents per pound.
119 key iron wrenches at 15 cents per pound.
20 tap wrenches at 15 cents per pound.
17 spanner wrenches at 15 cents per pound.
32 box wrenches at 15 cents per pound.
64 socket wrenches at 10 cents per pound.
111 spring steel key wrenches at 25 cents per pound.
91 monkey-wrenches at $1 each.

After which the board adjourned until Monday, September 11, at 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 11—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, and A. Fink, esq., Louisville, Kentucky.

The board appraised nine locomotive engines as follows, viz:

No. 34, $15,000; 43, $14,000; 47, $16,500; 50, $13,500; 75, $14,500; 119, $17,000; 141, $17,000; 201, $16,500; 206, $16,000.

Tools in blacksmith shop, (locomotive shop.)

Anvils, 18 cents per pound.
Swedge blocks, 5 cents per pound.
Wheelbarrows, $1 each.
Steel cold chisels, 30 cents per pound.
Office clock, at manufacturer's price.
Spring clamps, 10 cents per pound.
Blacksmith's cranes, 15 cents per pound.
Desks, $2 each.
Blacksmith forges, 7 cents per pound.
Cast bolt furnace, 7 cents per pound.
Top fullers, 50 cents per pound.
Bottom fullers, 25 cents per pound.
Flatters, 50 cents per pound.
Patent fan, $1 40.
Wrought-iron horses, 12½ cents per pound.
Cast-iron horses, 7 cents per pound.
Steel hammers, 50 cents per pound.
Backing hammers, 50 cents per pound.
Hand hammers, 50 cents per pound.
Cast-iron mandrels, 7 cents per pound.
Steel mandrels, 30 cents per pound.
Iron mandrels, 10 cents per pound.
Fance plates, 7 cents per pound.
Steel punches, 30 cents per pound.
Spring rollers, $25 each.
Battering rams, 10 cents per pound.
Platform scales, at manufacturers' prices.
Squares, $1 25 each.
Sledges, 15 cents per pound.
Iron safe, at manufacturers' price.
Axle straightener, $5.
Bottom swedges, 25 cents per pound.
Slack troughs, 7 cents per pound.
Cupping tools, 50 cents per pound.
Blacksmith's tongs, 12½ cents per pound.
Heading tools, 15 cents per pound.
Vices, 20 cents per pound.

Carpenter shop, (locomotive shop.)

Tackle blocks, wood, $12 each.
Tackle blocks, iron, manufacturers' prices.
Buckets, 25 cents each.
24 work benches, $200 for the lot.
Glue pots, $1 25 each.
Grindstones, 2 cents per pound.
Oil stones, (10,) $10 for the lot.
Hand screws, manufacturers' prices.
Glue stoves, $8 each.
Vices, 20 cents per pound.
Monkey-wrenches, (8,) $1 each.

Pattern shop, (locomotive shop.)

Fire buckets, 50 cents each.
Work benches, (20,) $15 each for the lot.
Tool cupboard, $15.
Varnish cans, (29,) 25 cents each for the lot.
Glue kettles, $1 25 each.
No. 1 sawing machine, $275.
No. 27 double-headed lathe, $250.
No. 28 double-headed lathe, $330.

8 oil stones, $8 for the lot.
Glue stove, $6.
Circular saw table, $100.
Wooden trestles, (31,) $8 for the lot.
1,130 patterns for iron castings, and 840 patterns for brass castings, $5,000 for the lot.

Paint shop.

Glazier's diamond, manufacturer's price.
Paint stones, $8 each.

Engine-house.

Crane for setting tires, $300.
All shafting, pulleys, hangers, bearings, and couplings are appraised by the board at 15 cents per pound.
New belting at manufacturers' prices; worn belting at a discount of 25 per cent. therefrom; the whole to be sold in one lot.

Foundry at car shop.

Wooden flasks, $350 for the lot.
Cast-iron flasks, 7 cents per pound.
Iron clamps, 7 cents per pound.
Weights, 5 cents per pound.
Wrought iron kettles, 12¼ cents per pound.
Wrought iron tongs and ladles, 12¼ cents per pound.
The appraisement of tools as given in the foregoing lists will apply to tools of similar classes in all other workshops of the United States military railroads in Tennessee.
Wrecking car, "A," with ordinary fixtures permanently attached to it, two sets of blocks and falls, and two ratchet jacks, $2,000.
Wrecking car "C," with same fixtures as "A," $3,000.
The board then adjourned until September 12 at 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 12—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana.
The following buildings were appraised, viz:

Wooden buildings.

Storehouse and office	$7,000
Quartermaster's office	8,000
Auditor's office	3,500
Printing house	2,500
Machinist's office, with storerooms below	7,000
Paint and pattern shop	5,000
Two large machine shops, two stories each	35,500
Engine-house	33,000
Blacksmith's shop and extension	13,500
Commissary storehouse next to freight depot	8,000
Extension to freight house	5,000
		$128,000
Car shop	17,000
Paint shop	4,500
Blacksmith and machine shops and shed	6,000
Office and storeroom	3,000
Brass and iron foundry and sheds	5,000
		35,500
		163,500

Brick buildings and other brick structures:

Stationary engine building, (locomotive shops,)	12,000
Brick drying house at car shops	2,000
Brass foundry chimney	300
Masonry setting of engine at car shops, with iron chimney	1,400
Brick work in foundry	300
		16,000
Total		179,500

Many of the foregoing buildings being temporary wooden structures, and the business of the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company not requiring them all, the board resolved to appraise them in one lot at $100,000, Provided the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company take them all in a body.

The board then determined to proceed at 8 a. m. on the 13th to Chattanooga, Tennessee, stopping at such intermediate points as they should find property to appraise.

Adjourned.

SEPTEMBER 13, 1865.

The board met at 8 a. m., and proceeded by special train to Lavergne, Murfreesboro', Decherd, Cowan, Stevenson, Whiteside, and Chattanooga. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., Madison, Indiana, and A. Fink, esq., Louisville, Ky., (sick.)

Appraised as follows:

At Lavergne:

A caloric pumping machine, with wrought-iron pipe, manufacturer's present prices, $500.

At Murfreesboro':

A caloric pumping machine, wrought-iron pipe, at manufacturer's price, at $500.
Horse-power pump, at $150.

At Decherd:

Locomotive No. 51, at $14,000.
A McGowan pump with boiler and building, at $1,200.

Buildings.

Office of superintendent of bridges and buildings, 36½ by 18, at $300.
Two-story frame building and addition, at $2,000.
Despatcher's office, 29½ by 20, (Davenport,) at $300.
Two sleeping quarters, $1,500 and $1,200, at $2,700.
Round house, 204 by 60, at $3,000.
Turn-table, stone work on the above, at $3,000.
Sand house, 37 by 18, at $200.
Small mess house at $125.
Blacksmith shop, 60 by 30, at $400.
Two mess houses, at $300 each, $600.
Eating house and platform and addition at $2,000.
Adams express and telegraph office platform at $700.
Car shop and addition at $800.
Commissary storehouse and platform at $500.
Woodshed, 200 by 20, at $800.

At Cowan:

A double McGowan pump (water power) at $500.
Locomotives, No. 90, at $19,000; No. 93, at $18,000.

At Stevenson:

Locomotive No. 56 at $14,500.

Buildings.

Office of supervisor, 40 by 20, at $500.
Blacksmith and car shop, 55 by 18, at $200.
Round house, (refuse lumber,) 64 by 56, no value.
Small dwelling, about twenty feet square, at $200.
Long building at $100.
Old mess house at $400.

At Whiteside:

Wrecking car "B" (with two sets blocks and fall, two ratchet jacks, and permanent fixtures belonging to it) at $2,200.
Locomotive No. 42 at $16,000, No. 49 at $14,000.

SEPTEMBER 14, 1865.

At Chattanooga:

Locomotives.

No. 16, $10,000; No. 31, $16,500; No. 41, $16,000; No. 17, $9,000; No. 33, $14,500; No. 48, $14,500; No. 21, $7,500; No. 37, $16,000; No. 53, $14,000; No. 25, $16,000; No. 38, $16,500; No. 61, $8,500; No. 26, $16,250; No. 39, $17,000; No. 63, $14,000; No. 30, $16,250; No. 40, $15,500; No. 64, $14,000; No. 65, $16,500; No. 146, $16,250; No. 70, $15,750; No. 147, $15,500; No. 78, $14,000; No. 148, $16,250; No. 83, $15,500; No. 150, $16,500; No. 91, $18,000; No. 151, $16,500; No. 95, $14,000; No. 152, $16,500; No. 103, $10,000; No. 153, $16,750; No. 105, $15,500; No. 154, $15,000; No. 115, $17,000; No. 156, $16,500; No. 116, $17,000; No. 160, $16,500; No. 121, $17,500; No. 162, $16,500; No. 130, $16,500; No. 166, $15,000; No. 131, $17,250; No. 173, $15,000; No. 133, $17,500; No. 175, $15,000; No. 134, $17,000; No. 199, $16,000; No. 142, $16,500; No. 200, $16,500; No. 144, $16,500; No. 208, $15,500.

Boiler and wheels only captured, rest all new.

Machinery.

Double head driving-wheel lathe, $4,500.
Horizontal boring and drilling machine, (B. & D.,) No. 32, $1,000.
Vertical drill, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 62, $1,200.
Vertical drill, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 63, $1,200.
Planer, 36 by 12, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 123, $2,000.
Planer, 36 by 12, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 124, $2,000.
3 lathes, 20-inch swing, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 260, $1,000.
3 lathes, 20-inch swing, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 263, $1,000.
3 lathes, 20-inch swing, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 265, $1,000.
Compound planer, with vice, (B. & D.,) No. 20, $800.
Cotler machine, (B. & D.,) No. 12, $1,000.
Screw-cutter, (B. & D.,) No. 3, $750.
2 overhead drills, each, $350.
Upright drill, $175.
Planer, 2½-inch swing, $450.
Small screw-cutter, with taps and dies, $400.
Double nut-tapping machine, (B. & D.,) No. 12, $450.
3 bolt lathes, Nos. 53, 54, 57, (B. & D.,) each $600.
20-inch lathe, screw-cutting, (bought at Columbus, Kentucky,) $650.
30-inch lathe, screw-cutting, (bought at Columbus, Kentucky,) $750.
24-inch lathes, screw-cutting, (bought at Columbus, Kentucky,) White's patent, $700.
Portable grindstone, pulley, cast-iron frame and wheels, at $175.
Engine lathe, 24-inch swing, (B. & D.,) No. 52, at $1,500.
Engine lathe, 24-inch swing, (B. & D.,) No. 50, at $1,800.
Cylinder borer at $300.
Traveling head-shaping machine, (B. & D.,) No. 14, $1,500.
Planer, 17 by 36, (Sellers & Co.,) No. 123, at manufacturers' prices, viz., $2,709.
Wheel-boring and turning machines, (B. & D.,) No. 11, at manufacturer's price, viz., $2,968.
Slotting machine, (B. & D.,) No. 15, manufacturer's price, $2,099.
Shears and punch, (B. & D.,) No. 4, manufacturer's price, $1,865.

In blacksmith's shop.

Fan (B. & D.) at $125.
Howell's patent trip-hammer, at $1,500.

In engine room.

Rotary steam fire-engine, at $750.
Wrought-iron crane, at 25 cents per pound.
Two stationary engines, at $2,500 each; with pumps, heater, injector, and fly-wheel, $5,000.
Three boilers, at $700 each, $2,100.
Boiler front and iron smoke-stack $1,500.
Castings for floors, at 7 cents per pound.
Brick work, at $500.
Stone work, at $500.

Car shops.

Double cylinder wood planer, $1,750.
Circular saw and table, shaft and pulley, mandrel and two (2) saws, $125.
Grindstone, wooden frame, and pulley, $60.
Grindstone, wooden frame, and pulley, $60.
Daniel's planer, 60 by 27, $800.
Large car-mortising machine, $500.
Small circular saw and table, $30.
Tenoning machine, $300.
Foot mortising machine, $50.

Screw-cutter, taps, and dies, at $350.
Upright drill, at $350.
Patent fan, at $75.
Stationary engine, with pumps, at $1,500.
Boilers, at $1,400.
Boiler front, breeching, and smokestack, at $1,300.
Brick setting, at $400.

In foundry.

Cylinder rollers, at $650.
Hydraulic punch, at $100.

CHATTANOOGA, September 15, 1865.

The board appraised six (6) locomotive engines, as follows, viz:
No. 137, $17,250; No. 143, $16,500; No. 149, $16,500; No. 190, $17,000; No. 195, $16,500; No. 209, $15,500.
Also a steam pump and water-tank, on Chattanooga creek, at $1,200.
And the following buildings:

Car shop, 180 by 50, at	$9,000
Blacksmith shop, 100 by 40, at	2,000
		$11,000
Machine shop, 300 by 70, at		21,000
Blacksmith shop, 150 by 50, at		4,500
Transfer-pit and masonery, at		2,000
Reservoir		500
Station agent office		3,000
		42,000

The above is including mess-houses Nos. 10 and 12, and out houses near all the buildings aforementioned. If taken all in a body the board appraised the lot at $25,000.
The board then proceeded by rail to Atlanta, Georgia, arriving there on the morning of the 16th, and appraised locomotives Nos. 52 and 86, as follows:
No. 52, at $14,000; No. 86, at $17,000.
The board then returned to Dalton, stopping on the way at Allatoona, to appraise a steam pump, including water-pipe, which was valued at $800.

SEPTEMBER 17, 1865.

Leaving Dalton at 8 a. m., the board proceeded to Cleveland, Charleston, Sweetwater, Athens, and Knoxville, making the following appraisements:
At Charleston: Railroad depot, 24 by 60, at $600.
At Athens: Railroad depot, 24 by 60, at $600.
At Sweetwater: Railroad depot, 24 by 60, at $600.
At Mouse Creek: Locomotive No. 136, at $17,000.
At various places: Eight switch houses, 8 by 8, at $25 each.
Arrived at Knoxville at 3.30 p. m., and adjourned until Monday, the 18th; no hour.

KNOXVILLE, September 18, 1865.

The board met pursuant to adjournment.
Present, Brevet Major General Z. B. Towers, United States volunteers; Colonel W. E. Merrill, first United States volunteer engineers; W. McQueen, esq., of Schenectady, New York; S. C. Kellogg, brevet major and aide-de-camp, recorder. Absent, A. Fink, esq., of Louisville, Kentucky; J. Farnsworth, esq., of Madison, Indiana.
Appraised locomotive engine No. 168, at $14,500. And the following machinery and tools, viz:
Rotary steam pump, at $750.
Hydraulic punch, at $100.
Compound planer, 12 by 24, (Gould Brothers,) at $600.
Upright drill, (Sellers & Co., No. 69,) at $600.
Small bolt lathe, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 58,) at $600.
Turning lathe, 7½, captured at Rome, Georgia; belongs to a man named Nobles. Government has expended $350 on it—at $350.
Three universal chucks, 9″, 15″, 20″, $150.
Blacksmith vices, at 20 cents per pound.
Blacksmith anvils, at 18 cents per pound.
Grindstones, at 2 cents per pound.
Iron bench screws, at 2½ cents each.
Smokestack, complete, at $100.

Smokestack saddle, 454 pounds, at 5 cents per pound, $22 70.
Blacksmith forges, at 7 cents per pound.
Tender and truck wheels, at $24 each wheel.
One 4-foot 8 inch grindstone, at $40.
Coal stoves, 5 feet high, each $20.
Coal stoves, small, each $6 50.
Box stoves, at $15.
7,174 feet of pine lumber, at per M $40.
11,136 feet of hard lumber, at per M $25.
1 blacksmith's bellows, at $15.
600 feet 10-foot fencing entire, at $100.
One spring balance and dish, at $2.
Corn brooms, at 50 cents each.
Portable forge, at manufacturer's price.
1,691 bushels of coal, per ton $10.
4 office arm-chairs, at $1 50 each, $6.
1 office stool, at 75 cents.
1 office desk (black walnut) and table, at $15.
2 office tables (pine) at 1 each, $2.
1 copy press and stand, at manufacturer's price.
3 ratchet drills, at $15 for the lot.
White lights, (good second hand,) at New York price, less 10 per cent.
Buckets, stoves and stove-pipes, marked second hand in inventory, at New York price, less 50 per cent.
Old brass castings, at 30 cents per pound.
New iron castings, at 7 cents per pound.
Old iron castings, at 2 cents per pound.
Coal per ton, at $10.
Oak lumber, at $25 per thousand.
Pine lumber, (rough, choice and grooved or matched,) at $10 per thousand for the lot.
Stone hammers, at 40 cents per pound.
18 monkey-wrenches, at $1 each.
20 trackmen's tool boxes, at $60 for the lot.
All other tools, paints, oils, and other railroad supplies, not specified above, are to be appraised at New York market prices if new. If used previous to their transfer to the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company, they are to be appraised at New York market prices less 15 per cent.
The following buildings at Knoxville were also appraised by the board, viz:
Blacksmith shop, frame and foundation, 50 by 80, with wood blast pipe, at $1,800.
Brass foundry, with one set of tools complete, at $60.
Two-story mess-house, 24 by 40, at $450.
Office, 30 by 50, at $2,000.
Master-mechanic's dwelling, at $250.
Master-mechanic's office, at $800.
Small blacksmith shop, at $100.
One-story mess-house, at $125.
Adjourned until September 19; no hour.

SEPTEMBER 19, 1865.

The board met, pursuant to adjournment, at 6 a. m. Present, all the members except J. Farnsworth, esq., and A. Fink, esq.
Appraised the following locomotive engines, viz:
No. 24, $16,000; 138, $17,000; 145, $16,500; 174, $15,500.
The board then proceeded to Chattanooga; arrived at Chattanooga at 6 p. m., and adjourned to September 20.

CHATTANOOGA, September 20, 1865.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Colonel W. E. Merrill, first United States volunteer engineers; Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de-camp, recorder; J. Farnsworth, esq., Chicago, Illinois. Absent, Walter McQueen, esq., Schenectady, New York; A. Fink, esq., Louisville, Kentucky.
Appraised the following locomotives, viz:
No. 157, $16,350; 158, $16,500; 163, $16,500; 169, $15,000; wrecking car D, with ordinary permanent fixtures, two sets blocks and falls, two ratchet jacks, at $2,500.
Buildings turned over September 19 to the East Tennessee and Georgia railroad were appraised by the board as follows:
Storehouse, 151 by 32½ feet, (No. 40,) at $2,000.
Two-story frame building, 32 by 60 feet, at $700.
Mess-house, 16 by 30, and addition, at $350.

Mess-house, 16 by 30, and addition, at $350.
Mess-house, 21 by 28, and addition, (No. 31,) at $200.
Mess-house, 20 by 42, (No. 30,) at $275.
Mess-house, 21 by 57, and addition, (Nos. 25 and 27,) at $350.
Mess-house, 21 by 57, and addition, (Nos. 21 and 23,) at $350.
Mess-house, 20 by 36, (No. 1,) with porch, at $275.
At 7.30 p. m. the board proceeded, via Stevenson, to Huntsville, Alabama.

HUNTSVILLE, September 21—10 a. m.

The board appraised the following machinery:
Lathe, 28-inch, $950.
Column drill-press lathe, 18-inch, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 98,) $950.
Do. screw-cutting, with taps and dies, $500.
Grindstone, wooden frame and pulley, $50.
Three wooden trestles for engine rods, each $15.
Lumber, at $25 per thousand feet.
Castings, at 7 cents per pound.
The board then proceeded to Nashville, where it arrived at 9 p. m., and then adjourned until the 22d at 9. a. m.

NASHVILLE, September 22—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except A. Fink, esq., and Walter McQueen, esq.
Appraised locomotive engines Nos. 23 and 211 as follows: No. 23 at $7,500, and No. 211 at $12,500; also blacksmith and car shop at Smyrna, on line of Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, at $150.
A large number of passenger and box cars were examined by the board without arriving at any conclusion as to valuation.
Adjourned until September 23, at 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 23—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except A. Fink, esq., and Walter McQueen, esq.
Appraised the following lumber at Nashville:
Oak, poplar, black walnut for engines and tenders, and all the fine lumber in carpenter shop, at $35 per thousand for the lot.
Pattern lumber, at $75 per thousand feet for the lot.
Engine pilots, at $35 each, as they now stand.
Engine cabs, at $75 each, as they now stand.
The board also examined a large number of box and passenger cars with a view to a final appraisement by averaging a price per lot of the selections made by each railroad company.
Adjourned until Monday, September 25, at 9 a. m.

SEPTEMBER 25—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members except A. Fink, esq., and Walter McQueen, esq.
Reconsidered appraisement of buildings at Nashville, Tennessee, made on the 12th instant, said appraisement having been made at $100,000 for the lot, on condition that they were taken collectively by the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company, on whose property they now stand, and application having been made by the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company to Captain F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster, to except from the above conditions four buildings as follows, viz: Storehouse and offices, at $7,000; quartermaster's office, at $8,000; auditor's office, at $3,500; printing house, at $2,500; total, $21,000; and it being represented to the board satisfactorily that the United States authorities would need the four above-mentioned buildings for some time to come, the board reconsidered the former appraisement made, altering it so as to read "$90,000 for all buildings except storehouse and offices, quartermaster's office, auditor's office, and printing house."
The board also appraised the following, viz:
Castings (iron) for engines, good and bad, 4¼ cents per pound for the lot.
Castings (iron) in blacksmith shop, at 75 cents per pound.
Castings (brass), selected, at 50 cents per pound.
Castings (brass), good and bad, at 40 cents per pound for the lot.
Timber and cross-ties and cord wood on East Tennessee and Virginia railroad, East Tennessee and Georgia railroad, Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, and Nashville and Decatur railroad: Timber at 15 cents per cubic foot, cross-ties at 30 cents each, cord wood at $3 per cord, sawed wood at $3 50 per cord.
Two derricks, with fixtures complete, as follows: 154 pounds inch rope; 1,234 pounds 1½-inch rope; 4 single tackle-blocks, 1½-inch; 4 single tackle-blocks, 1 inch; 2 snatch tackle-blocks, 1 inch; 2 crane wrénches (cast-iron,) 462 pounds; 2 cranks (wrought iron,) 118 pounds; 2 booms and derricks, at $100 each, $200.

A. Fink and J. Farnsworth, esqs., having applied to be relieved from further duty with the board, urging as an excuse therefor important private interests demanding their attention elsewhere, they were relieved accordingly.

The board then adjourned until W[illegible]ter McQueen, esq., could return from Schenectady, New York.

By virtue of the following order the board met at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 11th day of October, and proceeded thence to Memphis, Tennessee:

[Special Orders No. 99.—Extract.]

"HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE,
"Nashville, Tennessee, October 5, 1865.

"IV. The following named officers, members of the board of appraisers of the United States military railroad property in the military division of the Tennessee, are directed to go to Louisville, Kentucky, to meet other members of the board, and then proceed to Memphis, Tennessee. Having finished the appraisement of the United States railroad property at Memphis, unless otherwise ordered, they will return to Nashville:

"Brevet Major General Z. B Tower, United States volunteers.
"Brevet Major W. E. Merrill, United States engineer corps.
"Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de camp, United States volunteers.
"By command of Major General Thomas:

"GEO. W. HOWARD,
"Assistant Adjutant General."

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE, October 16, 1865—10 a. m.

The board met pursuant to the foregoing order. Present, Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Brevet Major W. E. Merrill, United States engineers; Walter McQueen, esq., of Schenectady, New York; and Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de-camp, recorder.

Appraised the following locomotive engines:

Tennessee, at $15,000; Michigan, at $15,000; Maine, at $9,000; Connecticut, at $5,000; Eagle, at $3,000; Hammond, at $4,000; Ohio, at $13,000; Iowa, at $13,000; Bay State, at $8,000;* Granite State, at $9,000;* New Jersey, at $9,000;* California, at $5,500.*

[The four engines marked thus* belong to the Memphis and Ohio railroad, the foregoing appraisement being for repairs made to them by the United States government.]

Machinery.

Stationary engine, with fly-wheel, counter-shaft, pump, heater, boilers, and brick setting, at $3,250.
Rotary steam fire-engine at $500.
Slotting machine (Sellers & Co., No. 38,) at $1,500.
Upright drill, 24-inch, (Sellers & Co., No. 71,) at $1,300.
Wood turning lathe at $50.
Patterns at $500.
Circular saw, with table and counter-shaft, at $75.
Grindstone, frame, and counter-shaft, at $75.
Patent lathe and counter-shaft at $75.
Iron lathe, 2-feet swing, at $175.
Wheel borer at $500.
Machine for pressing on and off wheels at $150.
Grindstone, frame, and pulleys, at $40.
Driving wheel lathe (Gage, Warner & Whitney, makers) at $2,800.
Upright drill (Parmalee & Mix, New Haven) at $325.
Paint mill at $50.
Nut-tapping machine (no taps or dies) at $350.
Compound planer, traveling head, (Sellers & Co., No. 42,) at $1,025.
Lathe, 30-inch swing, 20-foot bed, at $950.
Lathe, 16-inch swing, 9-foot bed, (Bement & Dougherty, No. 99,) at $850.
Lathe, 24-inch swing, 10-foot bed, at $600.
Upright drill, 2 feet with counter-shaft, (Gage, Warner & Whitney, makers, Nashua, New Hampshire,) at $600.
Planer, 6-foot bed, (John Parchley, maker,) at $650.
Mason's patent fan at $150.
Boiler-rollers at $400.
Shears at $250.

Saw-mill, new and unused, at $3,200.
Portable pumping engine, (on car No. 85,) at $1,200; or car and engine at $2,000.
Trucks, with wheels complete, at $275.
The board then adjourned until the 17th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

OCTOBER 17, 1865—10 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members.
Appraised the following locomotive engines:
Keystone, at $17,000; Rhode Island, at $5,000; Empire, at $17,000; W. H. Whitton, at $12,000; and stable, near Memphis and Charleston railroad depot, at $250.
Water tank at machine shop, 10 by 22, at $200.
Smokestack, with saddles, at $125.
28 doors to round house at $20 each, $560.
Cistern for stationary engine at $500.

At Columbus, Kentucky.

One 8-horse power engine at $800.
One turning lathe at $250.
One circular saw, 12 inches, and frame, at $50.
One truck car, No. 1, at $50.
Three hand cars, Nos. 1, 2, and 3, at $100 each, $300.
Thirteen flat cars, as follows, viz: No. 1, at $700; Nos. 501, 505, 508, 509, 506, 521, 531, 532, 533, 546, and 7, at $650 each; No. 36, at $350.
Twenty box cars: No. 78, at $400; Nos. 635, 804, 805, 800, 801, 612, 638, 803, 647, 649, 651, 657, 658, 602, 802, and 648, at $750 each; No. 659, at $800; Nos. 1 and 2, at $1,000 each.

Cars selected by the Memphis and Charleston railroad, at Memphis, as follows, viz:
Passenger cars, Nos. 5, (B. & P.,) at $1,800 each; passenger car, (pay car,) at $2,900; passenger cars, (2d class,) Nos. 1 and 7, at $1,500 each; truck cars, No. 1, at $50, and No. 3, at $75; hand cars, Nos. 1 and 6, at $600 each, and No. 8, at $150.

Box cars, (108.)

No. 24, at $600; No. 215, at $650; Nos. 26, 28, 30, 32, 31, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54, 56, 58, 60, 62, 64, 66, 68, 70, 72, 74, 76, 78, 80, 82, 84, 86, 88, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 100, 101, 102, 104, 106, 108, 110, 112, 114, 120, 129, 203, and 1,064 at $700 each; Nos. 2, 4, and 202, at $750 each; Nos. 6, 8, 18, 20, 22, 124, 126, 128, 130, 132, 134, 136, 138, 140, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 148, 150, 152, 154, 156, 158, 160, 162, 164, 166, 168, 170, 172, 174, 176, 186, 190, 192, 194, 198, 200, and 204, at $800 each; No. 188, at $850; No. 122, at $900; Nos. 10, 12, 14, 16, 178, 180, 182, 184, and 196, at $950 each.

Flat cars, (68.)

Nos. 41, 517, and 551, at $500 each; Nos. 10, 252, 266, and 518, at $600 each; Nos. 14, 95, 97, 99, 103, 105, 107, 109, 113, 115, 431, 510, and 525, at $650 each; Nos. 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 19, 23, 25, 79, 81, 83, 87, 89, 91, 93, and 127, at $700 each; Nos. 27, 29, 31, 33, 35, 37, 39, 41, 43, 45, 47, 49, 51, 53, 55, 57, 59, 61, 63, 65, 67, 69, 71, 73, 75, and 77, at $750 each; Nos. *85 and 123, at $800 each.

All Kentucky Central railroad cars belonging to the United States government on the line of the Memphis and Charleston railroad are appraised at $400 each.
One water-tank engine, about ten miles from Memphis, is appraised at $800.
The board then adjourned to meet at Nashville.

NASHVILLE, October 20, 1865—10 a. m.

The board met, all the members present, and appraised one flatboat, used by the Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company, at Decatur, Alabama, as a ferry, at $600.
700 bushels of coke at Chattanooga, 50 cents per bushel.
Also the following buildings on the Nashville and Northwestern railroad, viz:

At Johnsonville, Tennessee:

Building No. 2. Two-story frame, 56 by 20, at $350.
Building No. 3. One-story frame, 14 by 12, at $50.
Building No. 9. Blacksmith shop, 26 by 16, at $50.

* No. 85 has a portable pumping engine on it, appraised by the board at $1,200.

Building No. 11. One-and-a-half-story frame, 40 by 20, at $275.
Building No. 12. One-and-a-half-story frame, 30 by 20, at $150.
Building No. 14. Mess-house, 35 by 13, } at $175.
Building No. 15. Kitchen, 18 by 13, }

At Waverly, Tennessee:

Building No. 17. Frame, shingled, 20 by 14, at $110.

At McEwen's:

Building No. 18. One-story frame, 20 by 14, at $90.

At Gillam's, Tennessee:

Building No. 19. One-story frame, 20 by 14, at $110.

At Smeadville, Tennessee:

Building No. 20. One-story frame, 20 by 14, at $110.

At White Bluff, Tennessee:

Building No. 21. One-story frame, 20 by 14, at $100.

At Kingston Springs, Tennessee:

Building No. 22. One-story frame, 20 by 14, with two sheds, at $120.

At Pegram's, Tennessee:

Building No. 23. Two-story frame, 20 by 14, at $100.

The board then proceeded to affix prices to the inventories of articles, old and new, issued to the Mobile and Ohio railroad, and to the Macon and Western railroad. A complete schedule of the prices of articles issued and turned over to all the railroads will be included in these proceedings when all the items shall have been acted upon by the board.

At 6 p. m. the board adjourned until the 21st, at 9.30 a. m.

OCTOBER 21—9.30 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment; present, all the members.

Affixed prices to inventories of property, old and new, issued to the Southwestern Railroad Company.

Appraised the iron pipe and fixtures laid about the railroad buildings at Nashville, as follows, viz:

At stationary engine-house, thence to cistern:

Four-inch iron pipe, 20 feet, at $2 per foot.
Four-inch cast-iron pipe, 120 feet, or 2,280 pounds, at 7 cents per pound.
Two four-inch brass valves, at 68 cents each.

At blacksmith shop:

One-inch iron pipe, 120 feet, at 20 cents per foot.
Three-fourths-inch iron pipe, 50 feet, at 14 cents per foot.
Half-inch iron pipe, 87 feet, at 11 cents per foot.
Half-inch bibb cocks, 20 feet, at $2 40 each.
Twelve-inch galvanized iron blast pipe, 200 feet, at 75 cents per foot.
Nine-inch galvanized iron blast pipe, 180 feet, at 50 cents per foot.

At machine shop:

Three-inch iron pipe, 94 feet, at $1 25 per foot.
Two-inch iron pipe, 27 feet, at 50 cents per foot.
One-and-a-half-inch iron pipe, 37 feet, at 33 cents per foot.
One-inch iron pipe, 5 feet, at 20 cents per foot.
Three-fourths-inch iron pipe, 15 feet, at 14 cents per foot.
Three-inch angle valve, 1 foot at $30 each.

At round-house:

437 feet four-inch cast-iron pipe, 8,303 pounds, at 7 cents per pound.
Eight three-inch angle valves, at $30 each.

The board then adjourned until Monday, October 23, at 9.30 a. m.

OCTOBER 23, 1865—9.30 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members.

Appraised all the articles, viz:

Two portable engines, 7x8 and 4½x8, $800 each.
One portable engine, small upright, 6¾x11, no boiler, $300.
One portable engine, (horizontal,) 7x12, $1,000.
One portable engine, 4½x10, $500.
No. 24. 16-inch lathe, (B & D., No. 96,) $848.
No. 25. Lathe for cutting off axles, $800.
No. 23. Lathe, slide and screw cutter, 5 feet 8 inch swing, (Rufus & Pond,) $1,800.

No. 21. Lathe, 30-inch swing. (Sellers & Co.,) $2,988.
No. 4. Planer, (Brannan,) $700.
No. —. Planer, (Lucas & Pond.) $4,000.
No. 8. Planer, (Sellers & Co.,) $3,735.
No. 5. Bracket drill, not appraised.
No. 8. Drill press, (Sellers & Co.,) $550.
No. 10. Drill press, portable, (Lamback,) $150.
No. 11. Drill press, portable, (Lamback.) $150.
No. 6. Screw-cutter, (Sellers & Co.,) $650.
No. 7. Screw-cutter, (Sellers & Co.,) $850.
No. 1. Steam hammer, (Bloomfield patent,) $2,500.
No. 2. Steam hammer, (Morrison's patent,) $2,000.
No. 3. Steam hammer, (Morrison's patent,) $1,600.
No. 4. Steam hammer, (Howell, Louisville,) $800.
No. 5. Steam hammer, (Merrick's patent,) $1,500.
No. 3. Blowing fan, $125.
No. 1. Worthington pump, $300.
No. 2. Worthington pump, $250.
Nos. 3, 4, and 5. Worthington pumps, with boilers, $300 each.
Nos. 3, 4, and 5. Worthington pumps, without boilers, $300.
No. 6, 6-inch cylinder pump, without boiler, $150.
No. 7, 4½ inch cylinder pumps, without boiler, $100.
One cut-off saw, (railway,) $125.
Fay's patent scroll machine, $200.
Wood lathe fixtures, viz: heads, pulleys, and cone for counter-shaft rests, $75.

The board then took up the inventories of supplies, &c., issued and transferred to the various railroad companies, and affixed prices to the same, of which mention will be made hereinafter.

At 6 p. m. adjourned until October 24, at 9.30 a. m.

OCTOBER 24, 1865—9.30 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members.

Continued the work of affixing prices to the inventories, commenced on the 23d instant, and remained in the same occupation throughout the 25th, 26th, 27th, and 28th instant, the board being in session each day from 9.30 a. m. until 6 p. m.

OCTOBER 30, 1865.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, all the members, viz: Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Brevet Major A. E. Merrill, United States engineer corps; Walter McQueen, esq., Schenectady, New York; Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de-camp, United States volunteers.

Appraised one saw gummer, $30.
1,400,000 feet of oak bridge timber, $12½ per thousand.
300,000 feet pine bridge timber, $15 per thousand.
8,650 fire-brick, at $55 per thousand.

And the following hospital buildings, United States military railroad:

No. 132. 174x20, front building, offices and quarters.
First Ward.—No. 133, 60x20; No. 134, 50x20; No. 135, 50x20; No. 136, 50x20.
Second Ward.—No. 137, 50x20; No. 138, 50x20; No. 139, 60x20; No. 140, 50x20.
Third Ward.—No. 141, 60x20; No. 142, 50x20; No. 143, 50x20.
Mess-house and outbuildings.—No. 144, 18x17; No. 145, 18x16; No. 146, 79x20; No. 147, 85x20; No. 148, 30x16; No. 149, 20x12.
Mess-houses and outbuildings.—No. 150, 20x12; No. 151, 40x18; No. 152, 12x10; No. 153, 20x8.

In all numbering twenty-two (22) buildings, which the board agree to appraise at ten thousand dollars ($10,000) for the lot.

The following engineering instruments were then appraised, viz:
One transit, (J. T. Hobby, New York,) $75.
Three transits, (J. T. Hobby, New York,) $100 each.
One transit, (J. T. Hobby, New York,) $150.
One transit, (W. & L. E. Gurley, Troy, New York,) $175.
One level, (W. & L. E. Gurley, Troy, New York,) $150.
One level, (J. T. Hobby, New York,) $130.
Two levels, (J. T. Hobby, New York,) $125 each.
One level, (E. Brown & Son,) $125.
One level, (J. T. Hobby, New York,) $100.
Seven leveling rods, $10 each.
One chain, $6.
One chain, $2.

One box of mathematical instruments, incomplete, $2.

The board then agreed upon the following appraisement of passenger cars, viz: No. 1, $2,700; 2, $2,450; 3, $3,000; 4, $1,900; 5, $2,050; 6, $1,900; 7, $1,800; 8, $1,800; 10, $2,000; 17, $2,000; 18, $2,000; 19, $2,000; 20, $1,950; 22, $2,000; 23, $2,150; 24, $2,000; 34, $800; 39, $2,000; 40, $1,900; 41, $1,950; 43, $2,200; 45, $1,650; 47, $1,900; 49, $1,600; 50, $1,600; 48, $1,600; 35, $1,700; 36, $1,000; 37, $1,850; 217, $1,900; 219, $1,700.

Walter McQueen, esq., at his own request, was relieved from further duty with the board, leaving the few items of unfinished business still to be acted on, to be completed by the remaining members of the board.

Adjourned at six p. m., until October 31, at nine a. m.

OCTOBER 31—9 a. m.

The board met pursuant to adjournment. Present, Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers; Brevet Major W. E. Merrill, United States engineer corps; Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, aide-de-camp, United States volunteers, recorder, and appraised as follows, viz:

Iron pipe laid about the railroad buildings at Nashville.

1,155 feet of 6-inch main pipe, $2 50 per foot.
1,626 feet of 4-inch cast-iron pipe, $1 50 per foot.
200 feet of 1½-inch wrought-iron pipe, 62½ cents per foot.
500 feet of 1-inch wrought-iron pipe, 50 cents per foot.
One 6-inch street valve for fire-plug, $45.
One 6-inch stop valve, $40.
Two 4-inch street valves, each, $30.
Two 4-inch stop valves, each, $25.

Wood yard.

2,300 feet of 2-inch pipe, 75 cents per foot.
One 4-inch stop valve, 30 cents per foot.

Hospital grounds.

1,100 feet of 2-inch pipe, 75 cents per foot.
250 feet of 1-inch pipe, 50 cents per foot.
Four 2-inch street valves, each, $15.
Two 2-inch stop valves, each, $12.

Mess-house.

500 feet of 2-inch pipe, 75 cents per foot.

Special mess-house.

300 feet of 1-inch pipe, 50 cents per foot.

McLemore street mess-house.

100 feet of 1-inch pipe, 50 cents per foot.

The board then resumed the work of affixing prices to the inventories of property transferred to the various railroad companies, at which occupation the board was engaged daily until November 22, when Brevet Major W. E. Merrill, United States engineer corps, was relieved from further duty with the board, and proceeded to obey General Orders 371, paragraph 21, War Department.

The following articles were also appraised by the board during the interval above mentioned.

Transferred by Captain Hopkins, assistant quartermaster, United States military railroad, at Chattanooga.

One common rough wooden building, 17x57, taken by the East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Company, $450.
One small rough wooden building, $75.
Horses (not in good condition,) each, $100.
Carts, $25.
Carts (half worn) $20.
Horse collars, each, 50 cents.
Halters, each, $2.
Halters, $1 75.
Singletrees, $1.
Wagon bridles, $1 75.
Wheel-horse harness, per set, $12.

One small shed roof on Line street, Nashville, 10x15, $15.
Building, (portion of Taylor depot,) 78x21x12, $400.
Building, (corner of Summer and Broad streets,) 51x20x12, $250.
Building, (station-house Pulaski,) 40x16x15, $320.
Building, (station-house State line,) 30x26x12, $390.
Screw turn-table on Nashville and Northwestern railroad, $35.

The following prices for box and flat cars were decided upon by examining and comparing the long list of special appraisements previously made, in accordance with the rules determined by the full board mentioned, September 8.

Name of road.	Box cars.	Flat cars.
Memphis, Clarksville, and Louisville, each	$755 00	$000 00
Edgefield and Kentucky, each	800 00	610 00
Nashville and Chattanooga, (new lot,) each	847 00	650 00
Nashville and Northwestern, each	830 00	650 00
Nashville and Decatur	825 00	.....
Tennessee and Alabama, each	826 00	650 00
Central Southern	835 00	650 00
Tennessee and Alabama Central	816 00	650 00
Wills Valley, each	815 00	650 00
East Tennessee and Georgia, each	845 00	650 00
East Tennessee and Virginia, each	847 00	650 00
Rogersville and Jefferson, each	850 00	650 00
Western and Atlantic, each	820 00	650 00
Rome, each	715 00	530 00
Macon and Western, each	790 00	625 00
Southwestern, each	839 00	650 00
Macon and Brunswick, each	815 00	650 00
Montgomery and West Point	847 00	.....
Alabama and Florida, each	847 00	625 00
Alabama and Tennessee River, each	855 00	650 00
Selma and Meridian, each	805 00	625 00
Mississippi, Gainesville, and Tuscaloosa, each	855 00	625 00
Mobile and Ohio	780 00	.....
New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern	780 00	.....
Mississippi and Tennessee, each	730 00	600 00
Memphis and Charleston, each	830 00	650 00
Memphis and Ohio, each	730 00	600 00
New Orleans and Ohio, each	715 00	.....
Mobile and Great Northern, each	735 00	575 00
Nashville and Chattanooga, (2d quality,) each	725 00	550 00
Mississippi Central, each	710 00	525 00
Adams Express Company	700 00	.....
Rolling Mill Company	.....	600 00

The following list contains the prices of all articles affixed by the board to the different inventories which are not previously recorded, viz:

Articles.	New.	Used.
Acid, nitric ..... per pound	$0 16
oxalic ..... per pound	.....
muriatic ..... per pound	08
sulphuric ..... per pound	04
Adzes, railroad ..... per dozen	27 25	$21 00
carpenters' ..... per dozen	25 25	21 00
Alcohol ..... per gallon	4 40
Ammoniac, sal ..... per pound	18
Antimony ..... per pound	.22
Anvils, wrought ..... per pound	18
cast ..... per pound	07
swedge ..... each	15 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Augers, assorted ..... per dozen..	$9 00	$6 00
2-inch ..... per dozen..	18 00
1¼-inch ..... per dozen..	16 00
1½-inch ..... per dozen..	12 00	12 00
1-inch ..... per dozen..	9 00
¾-inch ..... per dozen..	8 40
⅝-inch ..... per dozen..	7 80
⅜-inch ..... per dozen..	8 64
¼-inch ..... per dozen..	6 00
½-inch, $7 20; 1⅝-inch, $14; 1¾-inch, $17; 1⅞-inch, $17 50; 1⅛-inch, $10 44.
Awls, brad ..... per dozen..	55
scratch ..... per dozen..	80	72
belt ..... per dozen..	2 50
Axes, chopping ..... per dozen..	15 00	12 00
broad ..... per dozen..	31 50	21 00
hand ..... per dozen..	18 00	15 00
Axles, engine, tender, or car ..... per pound..	07
driving-wheel ..... per pound..	10
Arms, engine pump ..... per pound..	15
hand-car ..... per pound..	07
barge	.....	600 00
balance-beam ..... each..	20 00
Balances, engine spring ..... each..	18 00
spring ..... each..	2 00
spring, with dish ..... each..	3 00
Barrows, wheel ..... per dozen..	38 00	18 00
wheel, large ..... each..	.....	4 00
Basins, wash ..... each..	67	50
Bars, steel ..... per pound..	.....	25
boring ..... per pound..	.....	10
claw ..... each..	6 00	4 50
lining ..... per pound..	15
crow ..... per pound..	15
cylinder ..... per pound..	15
switch ..... per pound..	15	12½
tamping ..... per pound..	15
timber ..... per pound..	15
pinch ..... per pound..	15
shackle draw ..... per pound..	15
draw, cast-iron ..... per pound..	07
Belting leather, 1-inch ..... per foot..	11
1½-inch ..... per foot..	16	12
2-inch ..... per foot..	23	17
2½-inch ..... per foot..	27	20
3-inch ..... per foot..	35	26
3½-inch ..... per foot..	41	31
4-inch ..... per foot..	46	35
4½-inch ..... per foot..	52
5-inch ..... per foot..	57	46
Belting leather, 5½-inch ..... per foot..	$0 67
6-inch ..... per foot..	72	$0 58
7-inch ..... per foot..	85	68
8-inch ..... per foot..	1 03	82
9-inch ..... per foot..	1 12
10-inch ..... per foot..	1 30	1 10
11-inch ..... per foot..	1 38
12-inch ..... per foot..	1 56
13 inch ..... per foot..	1 70
14-inch ..... per foot..	1 88
15-inch ..... per foot..	2 08
16-inch ..... per foot..	2 28
17-inch ..... per foot..	2 43

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Belting leather, 18-inch ..... per foot..	$2 63
19-inch ..... per foot..	2 78
20-inch ..... per foot..	3 05
21-inch ..... per foot..	3 25
22 inch ..... per foot..	3 45
23-inch ..... per foot..	3 60
24-inch ..... per foot..	3 85	3 08
assorted ..... per foot..	.....	52
Belting rubber, 1-inch ..... per foot..	.....
2-inch ..... per foot..	22
3-inch ..... per foot..	33	25
4-inch ..... per foot..	45	31
5-inch ..... per foot..	50	42
6-inch ..... per foot..	68	51
7-inch ..... per foot..	77	58
8-inch ..... per foot..	92	69
9-inch ..... per foot..	1 00	80
10-inch ..... per foot..	1 21	91
11-inch ..... per foot..	1 35	1 01
.....	1 49	1 12
Benches, work ..... each..	.....	10 00
work ..... per running foot..	.....	1 00 work, portable, 15 feet by 3 feet 5 inches ..... each..	.....	20 00
small vice ..... each..	.....	5 00
pattern makers' ..... each..	.....	15 00
blacksmiths' ..... each..	.....	5 00
draw ..... each..	.....	95 00
work and screw ..... each..	.....	15 00
small ..... each..	.....	7 50
side ..... each..	.....	15 00
small trestle ..... each..	.....	3 50
Benzine ..... per gallon..	50
Bell, signal gong ..... each..	6 50	5 50
engine alarm ..... each..	7 50	6 50
engine and frame	80 00
Bevels, sliding T ..... per dozen..	6 00	5 00
Bellows, blacksmiths' ..... each..	.....	15 00
..... each..	.....	35 00
42 inches ..... each..	34 00
48 inches ..... each..	46 00
60 inches ..... each..	.....	45 00
Bell, call	.....	2 50
Beeswax ..... per pound..	50
Bits, car ..... per set..	10 50	7 50
auger, assorted ..... per set..	4 00	3 00
brace, assorted ..... per set..	4 00	3 00
rose ..... per pound..	.....	1 50
auger, 4-2 ..... per dozen..	2 50
auger, 5-2 and 6-2 ..... per dozen..	2 75
auger, 7-2 and 8-2 ..... per dozen..	3 00
Bits, auger, 9-2 and 10-2 ..... per dozen..	3 25
11-2 ..... per dozen..	4 00
12-2 ..... per dozen..	4 25
13-2 ..... per dozen..	4 50
14-2 ..... per dozen..	4 75
15-2 ..... per dozen..	5 00
16-2 ..... per dozen..	5 75
copper hatchet ..... per set..	5 00
Black, drop ..... per pound..	18
blue, (in tubes) ..... per dozen..	1 50
India ..... per pound..	37½
lamp ..... per pound..	10
ivory, (in tubes) ..... per dozen..	1 50
Blenders ..... each..	1 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Blue, cobalt, (in tubes) ..... per dozen..	4 38
ultramarine ..... per pound..	65
ultramarine, (in tubes) ..... per dozen..	4 38
ultramarine, (in oil) ..... per pound..	60
Prussian ..... per pound..	1 10
Prussian, (in tubes) ..... per dozen..	1 50
Bolts, common, coupling, &c ..... per pound..	15
bridge, assorted ..... per pound..	09
carriage, assorted ..... per hundred..	7 50 carriage, per hundred, 2×½, $7 20; 2½×½, $7 60; 3½×½, $8 40; 3×⅝, $8; 4×½, $8 80; 4½×½, $9 20; 5×½, $9 60; 5½×½, $10; 2×⅝, $3 70; 2½×⅝, $3 95; 2¾×⅝, $4 07; 3×⅝, $4 20; 3½×⅝, $4 45.
square head, assorted ..... per hundred..	7 50
copper ..... per pound..	45
door ..... per dozen..	1 75
Boards, bulletin ..... each..	2 50
Borax ..... per pound..	50
Bowls, tin, sugar ..... each..	.....	$0 25
Books, blank, 6 quires ..... each..	3 00
blank, 4 quires ..... each..	1 48
blank, 3 quires ..... each..	1 38
blank, 2 quires ..... each..	1 20
memorandum ..... each..	50
time, (small) ..... per dozen..	45
time, (large) ..... each..	50
copying ..... each..	4 00
receipt ..... each..	50
invoice ..... each..	1 25
oil and tallow ..... each..	25
conductors' ticket ..... each..	25
way-bills ..... per dozen..	8 00
Boxes, post office delivery ..... each..	1 00
post office delivery, large ..... each..	.....	2 00
tool ..... each..	.....	1 25
twine ..... each..	50
mess ..... each..	.....	2 00
bill head ..... each..	1 50
ration ..... each..	.....	4 00
emery ..... each..	.....	25
pepper ..... each..	.....	05
lamp ..... each..	.....	1 00
ticket ..... each..	7 00
tender ..... each..	.....	3 00
Blower, fan, No. 3	100 00
fan, 30 inches	125 00
and shafting	600 00
Two boilers, 24 feet long, 40 inches diameter, with pumps	1400 00
Boiler, front, breeching, and smokestack	1300 00
Boiler, tin ..... each..	3 00
Brooms, corn ..... each..	50	$0 25
hickory ..... each..	25
Brick setting for furnace	.....	400 00
Braces, iron ..... per dozen..	13 00	9 00
and bits ..... per set..	5 00	4 00
hand ..... each..	.....	2 00
Brick, fire ..... per thousand..	55 00
Brushes, scrubbing ..... per dozen..	3 00	2 50
whitewash ..... per dozen..	7 50	6 00
copying ..... per dozen..	9 00	8 40
counter ..... each..	33	25
car window ..... each..	1 87

List of prices—Continued.

Paint brushes, twine-bound, (extra.)

Description.	Price.	Description.	Price.
C, No. 7-0.....per dozen..	$26 00	A, No. 3-0.....per dozen..	$12 15
C, No. 6-0.....per dozen..	23 15	M, No. 2-0.....per dozen..	10 25
C, No. 5-0.....per dozen..	20 25	M, No. 1-0.....per dozen..	8 45
C, No. 4-0.....per dozen..	17 35	M, No. 1.....per dozen..	7 00
C, No. 3-0.....per dozen..	14 50	M, No. 2.....per dozen..	5 62
C, No. 2-0.....per dozen..	12 50	B, No. 3.....per dozen..	4 70
C, No. 1-0.....per dozen..	10 25	B, No. 4.....per dozen..	3 70
A+B.		B, No. 5.....per dozen..	2 85
A, No. 6-0.....per dozen..	18 50	B, No. 6.....per dozen..	2 20
A, No. 5-0.....per dozen..	15 65	B, No. 7.....per dozen..	1 70
A, No. 4-0.....per dozen..	13 88

Paint brushes, wire-bound.

M, No. 7-0.....per dozen..	$20 15	B, No. 1.....per dozen..	$7 70
M, No. 6-0.....per dozen..	16 80	B, No. 2.....per dozen..	5 90
M, No. 5-0.....per dozen..	13 45	B, No. 3.....per dozen..	4 40
M, No. 4-0.....per dozen..	11 25	B, No. 4.....per dozen..	3 85
M, No. 3-0.....per dozen..	10 12	B, No. 5.....per dozen..	3 25
M, No. 2-0.....per dozen..	9 20	B, No. 6.....per dozen..	2 60
M, No. 1-0.....per dozen..	8 05	B, No. 7.....per dozen..	.....

Varnish brushes, oval, wire-bound.

M, No. 6-0.....per dozen..	$16 80	B, No. 1.....per dozen..	$8 05
M, No. 5-0.....per dozen..	15 20	B, No. 2.....per dozen..	7 70
M, No. 4-0.....per dozen..	13 45	B, No. 3.....per dozen..	5 90
M, No. 3-0.....per dozen..	11 25	B, No. 4.....per dozen..	4 40
M, No. 2-0.....per dozen..	10 12	B, No. 5.....per dozen..	3 25
M, No. 1-0.....per dozen..	9 20	B, No. 6.....per dozen..	2 60

Varnish brushes, oval, twine-bound.

Extra A+B:			M, No. 2.....per dozen..	$7 65	$6 40
C, No. 4-0.....per dozen..	$18 20	$15 30	B, No. 3.....per dozen..	6 00	5 40
C, No. 3-0.....per dozen..	15 30	13 00	B, No. 4.....per dozen..	5 00	4 40
M, No. 2-0.....per dozen..	13 45	11 25	B, No. 5.....per dozen..	4 00	3 25
M, No. 1-0.....per dozen..	11 00	9 15	B, No. 6.....per dozen..	3 00	2 70
M, No. 1.....per dozen..	9 40	7 50

List of prices- Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Bristle hair varnish brushes, flat, in tin, E, 1 inch wide....per dozen..	$2 70
1¼ inch wide....per dozen..	3 25
1½ inch wide....per dozen..	3 80
1¾ inch wide....per dozen..	4 50
2 inches wide....per dozen..	5 38
2¼ inches wide....per dozen..	6 35
2½ inches wide....per dozen..	7 20
2¾ inches wide....per dozen..	8 05
3 inches wide....per dozen..	9 00
3½ inches wide....per dozen..	10 80
Brushes,* paint, good, 2-0....per dozen..	.....	$7 90
paint, good, 3-0....per dozen..	.....	8 70
paint, good, 5-0....per dozen..	.....	14 40
paint, good, 6-0....per dozen..	.....	18 00
varnish, 2-0....each..	.....	87
varnish, 3-0....each..	.....	1 00
varnish, 4-0....each..	.....	1 20
varnish, 5-0....each..	.....	1 35
paint, old worn....per dozen..	.....	4 00
Brass, sheet....per pound..	55
roll, assorted....per pound..	55
old scrap....per pound..	30
Brasses, engine truck and car....per pound..	45
Brown, Spanish....per pound..	04
Vandyke....per pound..	20
Vandyke, in tubes....per dozen..	1 50
Brads....per dozen papers..	75
nails....per pound..	07
Buttons, brass, on plate....per gross..	10 00
enameled, black and green....per gross..	1 25
enameled tufting....per gross..	1 40
Butts, assorted brass, cast, or wrought iron....per pair..	15
loose joint, 3 by 2½ and 2½ by 2½....per pair..	25
loose joint, 4 by 4....per pair..	40
loose joint, 3 by 3½....per pair..	35
loose joint, 3 by 3....per pair..	30
Buckets, wooden....each..	68	{ 25 { 50
engine, galvanized....each..	1 50	1 00
tin, paint....	50	25
varnish....	.....	15
tin, assorted....	50	40
tallow....	50	40
Bunks....	2 00	1 50
Burrs, copper....per pound..	75
Boards, foot....for loading each..	.....	2 00
Bands, elastic....each..	02
Burlaps....per yard..	35
Bunting, red....	42
Buggies, timber....each..	4 00	2 50
Brakes, finished....each..	3 00
shoes....per pound..	07	07
levers....per pound..	12½	12½
head, (cast iron)....	07	07
(wood)....each..	50
Burners, coal-oil....each..	.....	25
Boards, office, drawing....	3 00	3 00
Bushings, bell-cord....per dozen..	4 50
Blocks, cast-iron truss, truck, anvil, chilled swedge, shaping, &c., per lb..	07	07
backing, swedge, cast iron....per pound..	05	05

* Paint and varnish brushes that have been used are appraised at 20 to 50 per cent. discount from the price of new, according as they have been much or little used.

List of prices—Continued.

BLOCKS.

Size.	* Iron bushed.			† Iron bushed.			‡ Iron bushed.
	Single price.	Double price.	Triple price.	Single price.	Double price.	Triple price.	Single price.	Double price.	Triple price.
3	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	$1 00	$1 25	.....
4	$2 00	$2 50	.....	$1 75	$2 50	.....	1 50	2 00	.....
5	2 25	3 00	$3 50	2 00	2 75	.....	1 75	2 25	.....
6	2 75	3 75	4 50	2 35	3 35	$4 00	2 00	3 00	$3 75
7	3 50	3 50	5 50	3 00	4 00	5 00	2 75	3 75	4 50
8	4 25	5 50	6 50	3 75	5 00	6 00	3 25	4 50	5 50
9	5 25	6 50	8 00	4 75	5 75	7 25	4 00	5 25	6 75
10	6 25	7 75	9 50	5 50	7 50	8 50	.....	.....	.....
11	7 50	9 00	11 50	6 75	8 00	10 25	.....	.....	.....
12	8 75	10 75	13 75	7 75	9 75	12 25	.....	with thimble.
13	11 00	14 25	17 75	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	15 75
14	13 50	16 50	20 50	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	18 50

Size.	‖ Heavy pure'e blocks, double strapped, iron bushed.		Size.	Snatch blocks.		Size.	Snatch blocks.
	Double price.	Triple price.		Iron bushed.	Roller bushed.		Iron bushed.	Roller bushed.
15	$20 00	$25 00	10	$7 00	$8 00	18	$20 00	.....
16	22 25	27 75	11	7 75	9 00	20	25 00	.....
17	25 00	31 00	12	8 50	10 00	22	30 00	.....
18	28 00	34 00	13	11 00	13 00	24	35 00	.....
20	32 00	40 00	14	13 00	15 50	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	15	15 00	18 00	.....	.....	.....
.....	.....	.....	16	17 00	21 00	.....	.....	.....

Articles.		New.	Used.
Carpet, Brussels	per yard	.....	$2 00
Case, drawer paint	each	.....	10 00
tin stencil	each	$1 00
book	each	.....	2 00
pigeon-hole	each	.....	5 00
pigeon-hole	each	.....	2 00
pigeon-hole, (large)	each	.....	25 00
ticket	each	.....	3 00
.....	each	.....	5 00
.....	each	.....	8 00
pigeon-hole, (large)	each	.....	20 00
Cover, flag	each	25
Cans, 1-quart	each	30	23
½-gallon	each	50	40
1-gallon	each	87	70
2-gallon	each	1 50	1 25
3-gallon	each	1 75
4-gallon	each	1 87
5-gallon	each	2 00

* Heavy well-made blocks, with full-served straps. † Light well-made blocks, with half-served straps.
‡ Light well-made blocks, with plain strap. § Heavy well-made double riveted, double strapped.

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.		New.	Used.
Cans, 8-gallon	each	$3 50	$3 20
10-gallon	each	4 00
15-gallon	each	5 00
20-gallon	each	6 00
50-gallon	each	15 00
80-gallon	each	20 00
100-gallon	each	25 00
200-gallon	each	40 00
220-gallon	each	50 00
tallow	each	50
brass	each	.....	1 25
emery, (large)	each	.....	25
emery, (small)	each	.....	10
Canvas	per yard	1 00
Castings, iron	per pound	07
brass	per pound	45
Caps, stove-pipe	each	75
Car, hand	each	150 00	100 00
hand, (worn)	each	.....	75 00
hand, (worn, bad order)		.....	50 00
truck, dump, same as above		75 00	50 00
Candles, star	per pound	32
Catches, car window	each	30
Calendar	each	75	50
Calipers, 2-inch	each	50
4-inch	each	60
5-inch	each	65
6-inch	each	70
8-inch	each	75
Cement	per barrel	2 00
Chimney's, head-light	each	33
coal-oil lamp	per dozen	75
Chalk, white	per pound	04
red	per pound	05
Centres for lathes	per pound	50
Candlesticks	each	10	06
Chairs, cushioned	each	2 50
Chisels, corner	each	.....	75
hand, tinners'	per set	4 00
blacksmiths'	per pound	.....	30
cold	per pound	30	25
cold, track	each	1 50
firmer	per set	4 00
firmer, socket	per set	6 60
framing, ½-inch	per dozen	8 40
framing, ¾-inch	per dozen	10 20	8 57
framing, 1-inch	per dozen	12 00	10 20
framing, 1¼-inch	per dozen	12 75	11 00
framing, 1½-inch	per dozen	13 50	11 60
framing, 1¾-inch	per dozen	14 25	12 12
framing, 2-inch	per dozen	15 00	12 80
slicks	each	4 00	3 00
large cast-steel	per pound	30
Chains, assorted	per pound	15
log	per pound	.....	12
block and fall	per pound	.....	12 ½
civil engineers'	each	.....	6 00
Chucks, universal	per inch	4 00
cast	per pound	.....	20
Cloth, emery	per ream	35 00
enameled	per yard	1 00
Clocks	each	.....	10 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Clocks.....each..	.....	$7 50
Chest, lamp.....each..	$1 50
Chairs, office.....each..	1 50	1 25
office.....each..	.....	1 00
common.....each..	1 00
railroad, wrought.....per pound..	07
Clasps, door.....per pound..	.....	12½
Chasers, lathe.....per pound..	1 50
Clips, boards.....each..	75	50
letter.....each..	15	10
Cleaver, meat.....each..	.....	1 50
Clamps, switch.....per pound..	10
iron, spring.....per pound..	12½
wood.....each..	1 50	1 00
timber.....each..	.....	1 50
bench.....each..	.....	1 50
belt.....per pound..	15
Cord bell.....per pound..	32
Cranes, B. S.....per pound..	.....	15
Coupling, brass.....per pound..	.....	50
three links.....per pound..	12½
hose.....new, $3 60 each; used, 50 cents per pound..	3 60	50
Copper, ingot.....per pound..	30
sheet.....per pound..	45
bar.....per pound..	45
Compasses.....per pair..	50
Compasses, wing.....per pair..	86
Coolers, water, from $3 to $6, according to size and style.....
Cocks, cylinder.....each..	2 50	2 00
blow-off.....each..	6 50
bilds, assorted.....per dozen..	36 00
miss. gauge, assorted.....new, $36 per dozen; used, $2 each..	36 00	2 00
miss. gauge, ¼-inch.....each..	1 50
pet.....each..	2 50
racking, brass.....each..	1 00
stop, 2-inch.....each..	7 00
heater.....each..	3 00	2 50
Crane, driving wheel.....	.....	200 00
Cots.....each..	2 50	2 00
Crayons.....per gross..	3 00
Crucibles.....per No...	8½
Cutters, tin, paper.....each..	10
spring.....each..	1 50
iron.....each..	1 50
Cups, oil, steam-chest.....each..	5 00
oil.....each..	1 50
tin.....per dozen..	1 25	1 00
glass, sponge.....each..	.....	25
tin, 1-quart.....each..	.....	20
Cupboard, pigeon-hole.....each..	.....	20 00
pigeon-hole, (small).....each..	.....	11 50
.....each..	.....	5 00
.....each..	.....	2 50
counter.....each..	.....	7 50
ticket.....each..	.....	7 50
tool, (Decatur railroad).....each..	.....	5 00
Cushion.....each..	.....	1 00
Coke.....per bushel..	50
Coal.....per bushel..	35
Coal at the mine.....	25
Desks, office, from $2 to $100, according to size and style.....
field.....	.....	5 00
Demijohns, 2-gallons.....each..	.....	1 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Dividers, per pair	$0 86
Dividers, spring, 6-inch, per pair	50
spring, 8-inch, per pair	75
spring, 10-inch, per pair	1 00
Dies and taps, per pound	3 00
Die, date, each	.....	$2 00
Diamond, glaziers', each	5 00	4 00
Dippers, tin, each	15
Drivers, screw, per dozen	4 50	3 60
Dippers, oil, each	75	50
Drills, steel, for drilling machine, per pound	35	30
hand, per pound	20
pine, per pound	50
ratchet, No. 1, each	8 00
ratchet, No. 2, each	10 80
ratchet, No. 3, each	12 80
ratchet, No. 4, each	15 20
ratchet, (large), each	.....	15 00
ratchet, (small), each	.....	7 50
ratchet, (worn), each	.....	6 00
friction and fiddle, (worn)	.....	2 00
Drier, patent, per pound	20
Duster, feather, each	2 50	2 00
large	.....	2 75
painters', per dozen	5 00
hair, each	50
Duck, per yard	90
Drums, per pound	15
Doors, unfinished, each	2 50
Diagrams and stands, per lot of four	.....	25 00
Dogs, lathe, per pound	.....	25
iron screwed, per pound	.....	25
planers, per pound	.....	12½
Ears, kettle, assorted, per gross	2 00
brass screw, per gross	2 50
Edges, steel straight, per pound	30
Elbows, stove-pipe, each	75
gas-pipe, ⅜-inch, each	10
gas-pipe, ⅝-inch, each	15
gas-pipe, ¾-inch, each	20
gas-pipe, 1-inch, each	30
gas-pipe, 1¼-inch, each	60
gas-pipe, 2-inch, each	90
gas-pipe, 2¼-inch, each	1 50
Emery flour, per pound	10
Engine, portable, 8-horse power	.....	800 00
Envelopes, letter, per thousand	6 00
official, per thousand	6 75
Erasers, ink, steel, each	75
rubber, each	5
Eyes, brass screw, per dozen	20
brass bell-cord, per dozen	2 00
japanned bell-cord, per dozen	1 00
Ends, draw, bar, and equalizers, per pound	12½
Easel, each	5 00
Fasteners, car window, each	30
metallic, per paper	30
Ferrules, per pound	15
Fullers, assorted, top and bottom, per pound	.....	37½
Faucets, brass, each	1 75
Fillers, lamp, each	50	40
Fitches, per dozen	2 50
Fixtures, grindstone, per set	2 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Fixtures, cook-stove ..... per set..	$7 00
Flannel, Canton ..... per yard..	60
Flues, engine ..... per pound..	10½
copper ..... per pound..	55	$0 45
Former, stove-pipe ..... each..	.....	20 00
Forges, cast iron, complete ..... each..	.....	205 27
cast iron ..... each..	.....	50 00
cast iron, blacksmiths' ..... per pound..	7
portable and bellows ..... each..	.....	30 00
Forks, table ..... per dozen..	1 00	75
flesh ..... each..	.....	50
Frames, car door ..... each..	5 00
Frames and slides for box car windows ..... each..	1 00
Frogs, plated ..... per pound..	08½
chilled iron ..... per pound..	7
patent portable ..... per pair..	100 00
Funnels, tin ..... each..	30	25
Fuse, safety ..... per thousand feet..	10 00
Furnace, plumbers' ..... each..	1 50
Figures, steel ..... per set..	5 00
steel ..... each..	20
Files, 4-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	1 58
5-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	1 96
6-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	2 31
7-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	2 80
8-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	3 45
9-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	4 10
10-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	5 00
11-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..
12-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	6 93
13-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	8 19
14-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	9 66
15-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	12 00
16-inch flat bastard ..... per dozen..	14 49
4-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	1 75
5-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	2 10
6-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	2 16
8-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	3 24
9-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	4 02
10-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	4 80
11-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..
12-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	8 04
13-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	9 36
14-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	9 66
15-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	12 00
16-inch square bastard ..... per dozen..	14 49
4-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	1 75
5-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	2 10
6-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	3 40
7-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	3 00
8-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	3 60
9-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	4 44
10-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	5 16
11-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..
12-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	7 80
14-inch half-round bastard ..... per dozen..	10 20
15-inch round bastard ..... per dozen..	13 44
16-inch round bastard ..... per dozen..	15 96
18-inch round bastard ..... per dozen..	21 84
6-inch hand bastard ..... per dozen..	2 80
8-inch hand bastard ..... per dozen..	4 10
10-inch hand bastard ..... per dozen..	5 77
12-inch hand bastard ..... per dozen..	8 19
14-inch hand bastard ..... per dozen..	11 97

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.		New.	Used.
Files, 16-inch hand bastard	per dozen	$17 22
round, parallel, bastard, same price as above.
4-inch flat smooth	per dozen	2 16
6-inch flat smooth	per dozen	3 12
8-inch flat smooth	per dozen	4 68
10-inch flat smooth	per dozen	6 24
12-inch flat smooth	per dozen	9 00
13-inch flat smooth	per dozen	10 92
14-inch flat smooth	per dozen	12 60
16-inch flat smooth	per dozen	18 48
4-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	2 40
5-inch half round smooth	per dozen	2 76
6-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	3 24
7-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	4 08
8-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	4 80
9-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	5 64
10-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	6 72
12-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	10 20
13-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	12 60
14-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	14 28
16-inch half-round smooth	per dozen	20 16
5-inch round smooth	per dozen	2 88
6-inch round smooth	per dozen	3 24
9-inch round smooth	per dozen	5 64
10-inch round smooth	per dozen	6 72
12-inch round smooth	per dozen	10 20
14-inch round smooth	per dozen	14 28
4-inch hand smooth	per dozen	2 40
5-inch hand smooth	per dozen	2 88
6-inch hand smooth	per dozen	3 84
8-inch hand smooth	per dozen	5 16
10-inch hand smooth	per dozen	7 32
12-inch hand smooth	per dozen	11 16
14-inch hand smooth	per dozen	15 12
16-inch hand smooth	per dozen	22 68
8-inch flat dead-smooth	per dozen	9 10
10-inch flat dead-smooth	per dozen	12 40
12-inch flat dead-smooth	per dozen	17 64
14-inch flat dead-smooth	per dozen	25 20
16-inch flat dead-smooth	per dozen	36 96
2½-inch taper	per dozen	1 60
3-inch taper	per dozen	1 68
4-inch taper	per dozen	1 68
5-inch taper	per dozen	1 96
7-inch taper	per dozen	2 80
8-inch taper	per dozen	3 36
10-inch taper	per dozen	5 00
8-inch mill saw	per dozen	3 36
9-inch mill saw	per dozen	4 10
10-inch mill saw	per dozen	5 20
12-inch mill saw	per dozen	6 93
13-inch mill saw	per dozen	8 19
14-inch mill saw	per dozen	9 66
16-inch mill saw	per dozen	14 50
11-inch round second-cut	per dozen	7 56
12-inch round second-cut	per dozen	9 24
3-inch hand saw	per dozen	1 40
3½-inch hand saw	per dozen	1 40
4-inch hand saw	per dozen	1 58
5-inch hand saw	per dozen	2 10
6-inch hand saw	per dozen	2 80
7-inch hand saw	per dozen	3 36
8-inch hand saw	per dozen	4 10
9-inch hand saw	per dozen	4 94

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Files, 10-inch hand saw ..... per dozen..	$5 78
10-inch half-round second-cut ..... per dozen..	6 09
12-inch half-round second-cut ..... per dozen..	9 24
14-inch half-round second-cut ..... per dozen..	12 64
16-inch half-round second-cut ..... per dozen..	18 06
8-inch flat second cut ..... per dozen..	3 96
10-inch flat second-cut ..... per dozen..	5 76
13-inch flat second-cut ..... per dozen..	10 92
14-inch flat second-cut ..... per dozen..	12 64
16-inch flat parallel ..... per dozen..	19 78
12 inch round parallel ..... per dozen..	10 80
10-inch hand round ..... per dozen..	5 25
assorted ..... each..	75
14-inch square smooth ..... per dozen..	13 68
paper ..... each..	1 00
ready reference ..... each..	25
wire ..... each..	10
Fittings, gas-pipe ..... per pound..	28
Folder, paper ..... each..	20
Frames, tank ..... each..	.....	$100 00
Flags, red signal ..... each..	25
Gauge, wire ..... each..	2 00
truck ..... each..	1 00
steam ..... each..	25 00
marking ..... per dozen..	1 50	1 25
screw ..... each..	2 50
panel ..... per dozen..	4 50
mortice ..... each..	75
Gates, oil ..... each..	1 50
molasses ..... each..	50
Gimlets ..... per dozen..	38
Glass, tail-light ..... per dozen..	5 00
head-light, (28 inches diameter) ..... each..	1 50
single, 10×12 ..... per box..	4 65
single, 10×14 ..... per box..	4 80
single, 10×16 ..... per box..	5 00
single, 8×10 ..... per box..	4 00
single, 12×16 ..... per box..	5 20
single, 12×14 ..... per box..	5 48
single, 12×18 ..... per box..	5 50
single, 17×24 ..... per box..	7 00
single, 20×24 ..... per box..	7 10
single, 24×24 ..... per box..	8 00
double, 10×12 ..... per box..	9 80
double, 10×14 ..... per box..	10 40
double, 12×16 ..... per box..	10 96
double, 12×18 ..... per box..	11 52
double, 20×24 ..... per box..	13 80
double, 24×24 ..... per box..	16 12
double, 21×28 ..... per box..	16 12
double, 24×30 ..... per box..	16 1[illegible]
Glue, white ..... per pound..	30
common ..... per pound..	15
Grease, car ..... per gallon..	90
Green, emerald ..... per pound..	40
emerald, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 33
silk ..... per pound..	1 25
Quaker ..... per pound..	25
Hibernian ..... per pound..	25
chrome ..... per pound..	20
chrome, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 33
Paris ..... per pound..	40
Gummer, saw ..... each..	30 00
Gouge, flat ..... per set..	.....	10 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Gouge, turning ..... per set	.....	$10 00
firmer ..... per set	$6 50	5 20
Grater, tin ..... each	.....	06
Gibs ..... each	2 25
Gamboge, in tubes ..... per dozen	1 50
Griddles, stove ..... each	50
Hammers, single set ..... per set	.....	25 00
blacksmiths' backing ..... each	.....	1 50
riveting ..... each	1 50
raising ..... each	3 30
shoe ..... each	.....	37½
ballast ..... each	1 00
spike ..... each	1 75
engineers' ..... each	2 00
round cornered ..... each	1 50
claw, steel ..... per dozen	9 00	7 65
blacksmiths' ..... each	1 50	*12½
counter-sink ..... per pound	.....	12½
copper, soft ..... per pound	45	30
tack ..... per dozen	1 50
tinners' ..... each	1 75
stone-masons' ..... each	1 75	1 50
Handles, axe ..... per dozen	2 25	1 75
pick ..... per dozen	2 00	1 60
hatchet ..... per dozen	60
file ..... per dozen	1 00
file, offset ..... each	25
augur, assorted ..... per dozen	75
spike maul ..... per dozen	1 75	1 40
hammer ..... per dozen	1 50	1 00
chisel ..... per dozen	50
sledge ..... per dozen	2 50
adze ..... per dozen	4 50	3 00
adze, tack ..... per dozen	4 50	3 00
broad-axe ..... per dozen	4 00	3 50
Hair, curled ..... per pound	60
Hatchet, shingling, assorted ..... per dozen	8 00	6 80
broad ..... per dozen	12 00	10 00
Hangers, shafting ..... per pound	15
Heads, coppersmith ..... per pound	10
Heaters ..... each	60
Hinges, hasp, 6-inch ..... per pair	30
hasp, 8-inch ..... per pair	37
hasp, 10-inch ..... per pair	65
hasp, assorted ..... per dozen	3 60
strap, 6-inch ..... per pair	30
strap, 8-inch ..... per pair	35
strap, 10-inch ..... per pair	45
strap, 12-inch ..... per pair	75
strap, 14-inch ..... per pair	87
brass ..... per pair	30
Horse, wood ..... each	.....	50
Hose, rubber, 6-inch conducting, two-ply ..... per foot	2 27	1 70
7-inch conducting, two-ply ..... per foot	2 65	1 99
8-inch conducting, two-ply ..... per foot	3 03	2 27
9-inch conducting, two-ply ..... per foot	3 41	2 56
10-inch conducting, two-ply ..... per foot	3 73	2 79
¾-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	34	26
¼-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	40	30
1-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	45	34
1¼-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	56	42
1½-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	68	51
1¾-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	78	59
2-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot	90	68

* Per pound.

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Hose, rubber, 2½-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot..	$1 01	$0 76
2½-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot..	1 13	85
2¾-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot..	1 23	92
3-inch hydrant, three-ply ..... per foot..	1 35	1 01
¼-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	30	23
⅜-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	41	31
½-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	47	35
¾-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	54	41
1¼-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	68	51
1½-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	81	61
1¾-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	95	71
2-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	1 08	81
2¼-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	1 22	92
2½-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	1 35	1 01
2¾-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	1 49	1 12
3-inch engine, four-ply ..... per foot..	1 62	1 22
2½-inch, with couplings and nozzle ..... per foot..	.....	1 55
3½-inch, three-ply, with couplings and nozzle ..... per foot..	.....	1 75
Hooks, clothes ..... each..	10
belt, No. 9 ..... per thousand..	2 00
belt, No. 6 ..... per thousand..	4 00
packing ..... each..	25
cant ..... each..	1 00
and thimbles, switch rope ..... per pound..	15
shear ..... each..	3 00
Hoods, stove-pipe ..... each..	1 50
Holders, tinners' stake ..... each..	9 90
pen ..... per dozen..	1 00
Hods, coal ..... each..	1 00	75
Head, square ..... each..	5 00
stake ..... each..	.....	1 75
Ink, writing ..... per bottle..	75
copying ..... per bottle..	75
carmine ..... per bottle..	12½
blue ..... per bottle..	50
Iron, bar, half-round, round, and square ..... per pound..	06
assorted ..... per pound..	06
angle ..... per pound..	07
sheet, 10 inches to 24 inches ..... per pound..	08
sheet, 24 inches to 26 inches ..... per pound..	11
Russia ..... per pound..	25
galvanized ..... per pound..	18
tank ..... per pound..	08
flue ..... per pound..	10½
boiler ..... per pound..	10½
pig ..... per ton..	45 00
railroad ..... per ton..	90 00
hoop ..... per pound..	09
Irons, dog ..... per pound..	07
truck ..... per pound..	12½
blacksmiths' ..... per pound..	15	12½
soldering ..... each..	.....	72
switch ..... per pound..	10
Injectors, No. 5 ..... each..	90 00
Jacks, elevating, and frame for trundling drivers ..... each..	.....	60 00
Journal, large ..... each..	15 00
Jacks, lever, large ..... each..	15 00
lever, small ..... each..	10 00
screw ..... each..	15 00
hydraulic ..... each..	.....	90 00
hydraulic, 4 tons ..... each..	60 00
hydraulic, 10 tons ..... each..	100 00
hydraulic, 15 tons ..... each..	125 00
track ..... each..	7 50	6 50

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Keys, cross-head, iron ..... per pound..	$0 15
cross-head, steel ..... per pound..	30
spring hanger ..... per pound..	25
car lock ..... each..	25
Kettle, camp ..... each..	1 00
cast ..... each..	1 00
tea ..... each..	1 00
Knives, table ..... per dozen..	2 00	$1 60
table, and forks ..... per dozen..	.....	2 50
drawing, 10-inch ..... per dozen..	13 00
drawing, assorted ..... per dozen..	.....	10 00
butcher ..... per dozen..	4 00
pallette ..... each..	65
putty ..... per dozen..	1 65	1 44
shoe ..... per dozen..	1 00
packing ..... per dozen..	1 65
spatchel ..... each..	.....	50
farriers' ..... each..	.....	50
cast steel for Daniels's planer ..... per pound..	50
Knobs, mahogany ..... per gross..	2 50
Ladders, step, from 75 cents to $5 each.
20-feet ..... each..	.....	4 00
Lamps, Dutch ..... per dozen..	2 00
hand ..... each..	.....	25
head ..... each..	100 00
tail ..... each..	17 00
car candle ..... each..	5 00
bracket, coal oil ..... each..	5 00
swinging, coal oil ..... each..	5 00 coal oil, from $1 25 to $3 each.
cab ..... each..	50
bull's eye ..... each..	1 00
red ..... per dozen..	35 00
white ..... per dozen..	10 00
blue ..... per dozen..	10 00
green ..... per dozen..	35 00
office ..... each..	1 00
Lake, madder, in tubes ..... per dozen..	3 75
violet, in tubes ..... per dozen..	3 75
maroon, in tubes ..... per dozen..	3 75
crimson, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
purple, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
yellow, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
Lustre, British, (papers) ..... per gross..	6 50
Leather, sole ..... per pound..	50
lace ..... per side..	3 25
Leaf, gold ..... per package..	10 00
Lead, pig ..... per pound..	10
bar ..... per pound..	12
sheet ..... per pound..	16
white, dry ..... per pound..	14
white, in oil ..... per pound..	12
red, in oil ..... per pound..	14
red, dry ..... per pound..	15
black ..... per pound..	10
sugar ..... per pound..	55
sugar, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
Letters, steel ..... per set..	10 00
Letters, steel ..... per each letter..	.....	20
Ledger, large ..... each..	15 00
Levels, spirit ..... each..	1 25	1 00
Lifts, window ..... per gross..	8 00
Lime ..... per pound..	01

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.		New.	Used.
Lines, chalk	per dozen	$1 00	$0 75
metallic measuring tape, 50 feet	each	8 00
metallic measuring tape, 75 feet	each	10 00
metallic measuring tape, 100 feet	each	12 00
tape, ass skin, 60 feet	per dozen	9 00
tape, linen, 50 feet	each	75
tape, linen, 100 feet	each	1 12
tape, linen, assorted	per dozen	10 00	7 50
seagrass	per dozen	1 75
Litharge	per pound	14
Links	per pound	15	12½
Locks, door	each	50
switch	per dozen	20 00
spring chest	per dozen	6 00
chest	per dozen	3 00
pad	per dozen	3 00	*20
drawer	per dozen	3 00
drawer, iron	per dozen	2 00
cupboard	per dozen	1 50
passenger car	per dozen	20 00	†10 00
freight car	per dozen	20 00
mortice	per dozen	15 00
small trunk, iron	per dozen	3 00
small desk	per dozen	3 00
rim and knob	per dozen	15 00
tumbler	per dozen	15 00
Lye, concentrated	per pound	3½
Lye, concentrated, in boxes	per dozen	3 00
Ladles, lead	each	.....	1 50
Ladles, lead	per pound	.....	12½
Lumber, pine	per M	40 00
pine and poplar	per M	35 00
pine, rough	per M	30 00
cherry, rough	per M	30 00
cherry, 1-inch	per M	35 00
poplar	per M	32 00
poplar, dressed	per M	37 00
pine, boards dressed	per M	45 00
pine, framed for carundans	per M	75 00
pine, clear in pattern shops, not dressed	per M	75 00
pine, clear in pattern shops, dressed	per M	80 00
pine, flooring	per M	45 00
pine, worked and framed for hand cars	per M	100 00
pine, dressed for car roofing	per M	50 00
oak, assorted	per M	30 00
oak, dressed	per M	35 00
oak, dressed for transoms	per M	40 00
oak, dressed for tanks	per M	40 00
oak, dressed and framed for brake beams	per M	60 00 for general car repairs	per M	35 00
ash	per M	30 00
beech	per M	25 00
black walnut	per M	45 00
ash, worked and framed for hand cars	per M	75 00
yellow pine	per M	35 00
rough, assorted	per M	30 00
black walnut, dressed	per M	50 00
ash, dressed	per M	35 00
cherry and walnut, boards	per M	35 00
pine, scantling	per M	25 00
Marlin, tarred	per pound	35

* Each. † Old.

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Mauls, spike ..... each..	$2 00
railroad spike ..... each..	3 50	$3 00
bridge spike ..... each..	.....	3 50
wooden ..... each..	.....	1 00
Mallets, carpenters' ..... per dozen..	3 00	2 75
tinners' ..... each..	.....	10
Matches ..... per gross..	1 75	*1 00
Metal, babbitt ..... per pound..	45
Mills, paint 25 pounds ..... each..	5 00
paint, 50 pounds ..... each..	6 00
paint, 100 pounds ..... each..	8 00
coffee ..... per dozen..	4 50
Mucilage ..... per bottle..	20
Mauls, paint ..... each..	6 00
Mandrels, cast-iron ..... per pound..	07
wet iron ..... per pound..	10
steel ..... per pound..	30
Measures, tin, 1 pint ..... each..	25
tin, 1 quart ..... each..	30
tin, ½ gallon ..... each..	37½
tin, 1 gallon ..... each..	50
Matting ..... per yard..	30
Nails, cut, assorted ..... per pound..	7
finishing ..... per pound..	7
finishing, (papers) ..... per paper..	10
wrought ..... per pound..	10
plush ..... per gross..	1 60
enameled ..... per gross..	1 60
silver head lining ..... per paper..	40
clout, 1¼-inch ..... per paper..	14
Nippers, cutting ..... each..	1 65	1 40
Nuts, square, assorted ..... per pound..	12
hexagon, assorted ..... per pound..	13
octagon ..... per pound..	13
Needles, upholsterers' ..... each..	25
Nozzles, brass ..... each..	.....	15 00
hose, leather-lipped ..... each..	.....	10 60
hose, lipped ..... each..	.....	6 00
Ochre, yellow ..... per pound..	03
transparent, gold tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
Oil, lard ..... per gallon..	2 20
raw linseed ..... per gallon..	1 60
boiled linseed ..... per gallon..	1 70
neat's-foot ..... per gallon	1 75
lubricating ..... per gallon..	1 60
coal ..... per gallon..	1 25
petroleum ..... per gallon..	80
Lead-light ..... per gallon..	2 25
Oilers, engine ..... each..	1 00	75
spring bottom ..... per dozen..	3 00
spring bottom, No. 2 ..... per dozen..	4 00	3 00
machine ..... each..	50	20
spring top ..... each..	25
Ovens, Dutch ..... each..	.....	1 50
Patterns, assorted, one lot of 109—for the lot	.....	500 00
Packing, hemp ..... per pound..	20
yarn ..... per pound..	20
steam ..... per pound..	20
gum ..... per pound..	90
Pans, dish ..... each..	1 50	1 25
dust ..... each..	25
ash, cast ..... per pound..	.....	07

* Poor.

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Pans, mess ..... per dozen..	$1 50
mess ..... each..	.....	$30
tin ..... each..	75	50
tin, six-quart ..... each..	50
bake ..... each..	50
dripping	.....	25
Paper, flat-letter ..... per ream..	.....	.....
letter ..... per ream..	6 75
note ..... per ream..	5 50
cap ..... per ream..	8 40
P. O ..... per ream..	12 00
printing ..... per ream..	22 00
folio post, ruled ..... per ream..	10 00
folio post, unruled ..... per ream..	9 60
emery, assorted ..... per ream..	7 00
sand ..... per ream..	4 50
oil ..... per sheet..	20
blotting ..... per sheet..	12
cross-section ..... per quire..	6 50
white drawing ..... per yard..	60
hardware ..... per ream..	12 00
Paints, in tubes, assorted ..... per dozen..	1 50
Paint, mineral ..... per pound..	04
assorted ..... per pound..	15
mixed ..... per pound..	10
Pencils, lettering ..... each..	03
lead ..... per dozen..	1 00
slate ..... per box..	50
Pens, steel ..... per box..	60
ruling ..... each..	75	50
Pipe, brass ..... per pound..	55
copper ..... per pound..	45
lead ..... per pound..	16
stove ..... per pound..	15
stove ..... per joint..	50
stove, Russia iron ..... per pound..	30
and plate ..... each..	2 00
hose, with brass nozzle	6 00
gas, ⅛-inch ..... per foot..	07
gas, ¼-inch ..... per foot..	08
gas, ⅜-inch ..... per foot..	10
gas, ½-inch ..... per foot..	11
gas, ¾-inch ..... per foot..	14
gas, 1-inch ..... per foot..	20
gas, 1¼-inch ..... per foot..	25
gas, 1½-inch ..... per foot..	32
gas, 2-inch ..... per foot..	47
gas, 2½ inch ..... per foot..	84
gas, 3-inch ..... per foot..	1 22
gas, 3½-inch ..... per foot..	1 50
gas, 4-inch ..... per foot..	1 88
gas, 4½-inch ..... per foot..	2 25
gas, 5-inch ..... per foot..	2 58
gas 6-inch ..... per foot..	2 75
gas, 7-inch ..... per foot..	5 18
gas, 8-inch ..... per foot..	6 75
gas, 9-inch ..... per foot..
gas, 10-inch ..... per foot..
Pink rose ..... per pound..	18
Pink Dutch ..... per pound..	25
Picks, railroad or earth ..... per dozen..	16 00	14 00
tamping ..... per dozen..	20 00	17 00
Pins, coupling ..... per pound..	12½
Plates, tin ..... per dozen..	1 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Plates, cast iron ..... per pound..	$0 07
Plugs, gas-pipe ..... each..	40
Planes, assorted ..... each..	.....	$1 00
double jack ..... each..	1 10	1 00
smooth ..... each..	75
jack rabbit ..... each..		1 00
jointer or fore ..... each..	1 50	1 25
plough ..... each..	9 00
plough panel ..... each..	9 00
bead ..... each..	60
matched ..... per pair..	1 37
moulding ..... each..	.....	1 50
rabbit, ⅛ to 1-inch ..... each..	66
rabbit, 1¼-inch ..... each..	71
rabbit, 1½-inch ..... each..	77
rabbit, 1¾-inch ..... each..	84
rabbit, 2-inch ..... each..	92
rabbit, ¼ and ⅜-inch ..... each..	60
rabbit, ½-inch ..... each..	68
rabbit, fillister ..... each..	1 50	1 25
Plaster Paris ..... per pound..	02
Pots, watering ..... each..	1 00
marking ..... each..	30	20
glue ..... each..	80
glue, small ..... each..	50
tea, three-quart ..... each..	1 75
coffee ..... each..	2 00	1 50
Points, glazier's ..... per paper..	20
glazier's ..... per pound..	25
Power, horse, Emery's patent ..... each..	125 00	100 00
Poker, fire ..... each..	25
Potash, Prussiate ..... per pound..	50
Powder, blasting ..... per pound..	30
Punches, blacksmith's hand ..... each..	.....	25
paper ..... each..	2 50
hollow tinner's ..... each..	2 50
tinner's assorted ..... each..	50
belt ..... per dozen..	3 75
B. maker's, (screw) ..... each..	5 00
blacksmith's ..... per pound..	30
railroad ..... each..	.....	25
sheet-iron, (machine) ..... each..	.....	75 00
Pincers ..... per pair..	75
shoe ..... per pair..	75
Pilot engine, (good) ..... each..	.....	35 00
Pumps, McGowan force, (worn) ..... each..	52 50	50 00
McGowan force ..... each..	.....	45 00
Worthington's ..... each..	300 00
Worthington's, with engine ..... each..	800 00
copper ..... each..	.....	10 00
oil ..... each..	.....	6 00
steam fire ..... each..	.....	750 00
Press, copying and stand, appraised according to size and condition, from $5 to $30 each.
Press, manifest ..... each..	.....	50 00
hand drill ..... each..	.....	10 00
Putty ..... per pound..	6
Plates, angle ..... per pound..	.....	10
Plyers ..... per pair..	1 00	75
gas-pipe ..... per pair..	.....	1 50
Rugs ..... per pound..	10
Racks, pen ..... each..	10
Rasps, wood, 12-inch ..... per dozen..	8	50 00
wood, 12-inch ..... per dozen..	9	3 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Rasps, wood, 14-inch ... per dozen	$0 09	$50 00
Reamers, cast steel ... per pound	.....	2 00
Racks, tool ... each	.....	12 00
Range, cooking, No. 4 ... each	300 00	200 00
Red, India ... per pound	15
India, in tubes ... per dozen	1 50
Venetian ... per dozen	1 50
Venetian ... per pound	5
Reports, telegraphic train ... each	3
Riddles, sand (old) ... each	.....	1 00
Rings, packing ... per pound	45
flush ... per dozen	12½
Rivets, iron, in kegs ... per pound	12
iron, in papers ... per pound	17
smokestack and stovepipe ... per pound	17
tank ... per pound	17
boiler iron ... per pound	9
r'd head iron ... per pound	25
r'd head brass ... per pound	25
copper belt ... per pound	66
black assorted ... per pound	25
tinned ... per pound	30
Resin ... per pound	8
Rods, tank, &c., (iron) ... per pound	12½
Rope, switch ... per pound	24½
⅝ inch ... per pound	32
Manilla, (old) ... per pound	24	15 00
hair ... per pound	45
Rollers, spring, (machine) ... each	.....	25 00
small tin, (machine) ... each	.....	11 00
Rulers ... each	1 50
ebony ... each	30	25
rubber ... each	50
Refrigerator ... each	.....	10 00
Railing, office ... each	.....	10 00
Ratchets and dogs ... per pound	.....	15
Saws, circular, 8-inch ... each	2 75
circular, 10-inch ... each	3 75
circular, 12-inch ... each	4 50
circular, 14-inch ... each	5 25
circular, 18-inch ... each	8 00
circular, 20-inch ... each	10 00
circular, 24-inch ... each	14 00
circular, 28-inch ... each	18 75
circular, 30-inch ... each	22 00
circular, 36-inch ... each	34 75
cross-cut ... per foot	1 00
hand, (assorted) ... each	3 00	2 50
rip, (assorted) ... each	3 00	2 50
meat ... each	.....	1 00
back, 10-inch ... per dozen	18 00
back, 12-inch ... per dozen	20 00
back, 14-inch ... per dozen	22 00
back, 16-inch ... per dozen	24 00	20 00
back, 18-inch ... per dozen	26 00
buck ... each	.....	1 00
buck blades ... each	50
buck blades ... each	25
buck and frame ... each	.....	2 00
tenon ... each	5 00	4 00
Saw, compass, 12 and 14-inch ... each	60	50
jig, 30-inch ... each	.....	75

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Safes office, appraised according to size and condition, at from $50 to $200, each.
Safes, paymasters', Deabold & Brenneman.....each..	$30 00
match.....each..	10
stove-pipe.....each..	1 00
Scoops, large, tin.....each..	75
Scissors, lamp.....pair..	.....	$0 50
Salt.....per pound..	03
Scales, platform, 600-pounds.....each..	25 00
platform, 1,500-pounds.....each..	68 00
platform, 1,400-pounds.....each..	65 00
platform, 2,000-pounds.....each..	.....	50 00
platform, 3,000-pounds.....each..	90 00

Brass screws—ten per cent. off.

Nos.	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	20	22	24	26
In.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.	cts.
¼	89	89	89	92	96	102	111
¼		89	89	92	96	102	111	119	129	143
¼		90	90	93	98	104	112	120	131	144	159	180
⅜				96	101	107	114	123	135	149	164	180	203	233	270	315
⅜						110	119	129	141	156	174	195	218	267	305	345
½						114	126	140	155	173	194	218	245	275	308	353		413
½							135	146	173	203	233	260	290	333	359	383	413	459	525
½								188	200	231	258	288	323	363	413	465	525	600	780
½									245	269	293	324	365	413	473	540	617	702	810	960	1125
2										300	327	357	416	474	533	581	650	708	834	1050	1200
2½												413	470	531	590	615	705	780	870	1125
2½														589	645	695	780	866	1053	1245	1463
3																813		1023	1296	1575	1950	2400

Flat-head iron screws.

No. 1,	⅝-inch, at....	$0 29	No. 8,	⅝-inch, at....	$0 41	No. 10,	⅞-inch, at...	$0 53
2,	⅝-inch, at....	29	9,	⅝-inch, at....	47	11,	⅞-inch, at...	57
3,	⅝-inch, at....	29	10,	⅝-inch, at....	50	12,	⅞-inch, at...	62
4,	⅝-inch, at....	29	11,	⅝-inch, at....	53	13,	⅞-inch, at..	69
5,	⅝-inch, at....	30	12,	⅝-inch, at....	56	14,	⅞-inch, at...	75
6,	⅝-inch, at....	32	4,	¾-inch, at....	33	15,	⅞-inch, at...	87
7,	⅝-inch, at....	36	5,	¾-inch, at....	36	16,	⅞-inch, at...	98
8,	⅝-inch, at....	39	6,	¾-inch, at....	39	5,	1-inch, at...	44
2,	½-inch, at....	29	7,	¾-inch, at....	42	6,	1-inch, at...	45
3,	½-inch, at....	29	8,	¾-inch, at....	45	7,	1-inch, at...	48
4,	½-inch, at....	29	9,	¾-inch, at....	48	8,	1-inch, at...	50
5,	½-inch, at....	30	10,	¾-inch, at....	51	9,	1-inch, at...	53
6,	½-inch, at....	32	11,	¾-inch, at....	54	10,	1-inch, at ..	56
7,	½-inch, at....	36	12,	¾-inch, at....	57	11,	1-inch, at...	60
8,	½-inch, at....	39	13,	¾-inch, at....	66	12,	1-inch, at...	65
9,	½-inch, at....	44	14,	¾-inch, at....	72	13,	1-inch, at ..	72
10,	½-inch, at....	47	15,	¾-inch, at....	84	14,	1-inch, at...	80
2,	⅝-inch, at....	30	16,	¾-inch, at....	96	15,	1-inch, at...	90
3,	⅝-inch, at....	30	5,	⅞-inch, at....	39	16,	1-inch, at...	1 02
4,	⅝-inch, at....	32	6,	⅞-inch, at....	41	17,	1-inch, at...	1 13
5,	⅝-inch, at....	33	7,	⅞-inch, at....	44	18,	1-inch, at...	1 26
6,	⅝-inch, at....	36	8,	⅞-inch, at....	47	20,	1-inch, at...	1 74
7,	⅝-inch, at....	39	9,	⅞-inch, at....	50	7,	1¼-inch, at...	56

List of prices—Continued.

No. 8, 1¼-inch, at	$0 57	No. 17, 1⅞-inch, at	$1 59	No. 16, 2½-inch, at	$1 89
9, 1¼-inch, at	60	18, 1⅞-inch, at	1 76	17, 2½-inch, at	2 06
10, 1¼-inch, at	65	20, 1⅞-inch, at	2 01	18, 2½-inch, at	2 19
11, 1¼-inch, at	69	22, 1⅞-inch, at	2 25	20, 2½-inch, at	2 54
12, 1¼-inch, at	75	24, 1⅞-inch, at	2 78	22, 2½-inch, at	3 15
13, 1¼-inch, at	83	10, 2-inch, at	86	24, 2½-inch, at	3 90
14, 1¼-inch, at	92	11, 2-inch, at	93	13, 2¾-inch, at	1 59
15, 1¼-inch, at	1 05	12, 2-inch, at	1 07	14, 2¾-inch, at	1 76
16, 1¼-inch, at	1 20	13, 2-inch, at	1 19	15, 2¾-inch, at	1 89
17, 1¼-inch, at	1 29	14, 2-inch, at	1 32	16, 2¾-inch, at	2 06
18, 1¼-inch, at	1 41	15, 2-inch, at	1 46	17, 2¾-inch, at	2 33
20, 1¼-inch, at	1 76	16, 2-inch, at	1 59	18, 2¾-inch, at	2 51
8, 1⅓-inch, at	65	17, 2-inch, at	1 76	20, 2¾-inch, at	3 00
9, 1⅓-inch, at	68	18, 2-inch, at	1 89	22, 2¾-inch, at	3 69
10, 1⅓-inch, at	71	20, 2-inch, at	2 19	24, 2¾-inch, at	4 43
11, 1⅓-inch, at	77	22, 2-inch, at	2 54	14, 3-inch, at	1 89
12, 1⅓-inch, at	83	24, 2-inch, at	3 38	15, 3-inch, at	2 06
13, 1⅓-inch, at	92	11, 2¼ inch, at	1 07	16, 3-inch, at	2 33
14, 1⅓-inch, at	1 05	12, 2¼-inch, at	1 20	17, 3-inch, at	2 80
15, 1⅓-inch, at	1 19	13, 2¼-inch, at	1 34	18, 3-inch, at	2 88
16, 1⅓-inch, at	1 32	14, 2¼-inch, at	1 46	20, 3-inch, at	3 42
17, 1⅓-inch, at	1 46	15, 2¼-inch, at	1 59	22, 3-inch, at	4 20
18, 1⅓-inch, at	1 58	16, 2¼-inch, at	1 77	24, 3-inch, at	5 10
20, 1⅓-inch, at	1 89	17, 2¼-inch, at	1 89	26, 3-inch, at	5 70
9, 1⅜-inch, at	78	18, 2¼-inch, at	2 06	16, 3½-inch, at	2 82
10, 1⅜-inch, at	81	20, 2¼-inch, at	2 36	17, 3½-inch, at	3 14
11, 1⅜-inch, at	86	22, 2¼-inch, at	2 88	18, 3½-inch, at	3 51
12, 1⅜-inch, at	95	24, 2¼-inch, at	3 75	20, 3½-inch, at	4 31
13, 1⅜-inch, at	1 05	12, 2⅓-inch, at	1 31	22, 3½-inch, at	5 00
14, 1⅜-inch, at	1 19	13, 2⅓-inch, at	1 46	24, 3½-inch, at	5 54
15, 1⅜-inch, at	1 32	14, 2⅓-inch, at	1 59	26, 3½-inch, at	6 08
16, 1⅜-inch, at	1 46	15, 2⅓-inch, at	1 77

Articles.	New	Used.
Screws, assorted, per gross	$1 00
blued, do, per gross	1 00
iron, do, per gross	1 00
brass, do, per gross	1 50
bench, wood and iron, each	2 50	$2 00
hand, wood, each	1 00
hand, iron, per dozen	6 00
lag, per pound	12½

List of prices—Continued.

Round and flat head silver and brass capped screws.

½-inch.		§-inch.		¾-inch.		⅞-inch.		1-inch.		1¼-inch.
No.		No.		No.		No.		No.		No.
3	$1 37	3	$1 39	4	$1 48	6	$1 69	6	$1 75	7	$2 07
4	1 41	4	1 43	5	1 55	7	1 83	7	1 93	8	2 24
5	1 47	5	1 51	6	1 65	8	1 99	8	2 16	9	2 66
6	1 57	6	1 60	7	1 75	9	2 17	9	2 38	10	3 12
7	1 69	7	1 74	8	1 89	10	2 39	10	2 66	11	3 44
8	1 83	8	1 85	9	2 07	11	2 67	11	2 98	12	4 05
9	1 99	9	2 02	10	2 14	12	3 01	12	3 44	13	4 52
10	2 20	10	2 21	11	2 52	13	3 50	13	3 77	14	4 97
		11	2 44	12	2 77	14	4 10	14	4 23	15	5 43
		12	2 77	13	3 12	15	4 69	15	4 75	16	5 89
				14	3 59	16	5 31	16	5 43	17	6 36
				15	4 16			17	5 89	18	6 93
				16	4 83			18	6 36	20	8 08

1½-inch.		1¾-inch.		2-inch.		2¼-inch.		2½-inch.		2¾-inch.
8	$2 88	9	$3 77	9	$1 38	12	$6 36	14	$9 04	16	$11 76
9	3 22	10	4 13	10	4 62	13	7 21	15	9 93	18	14 53
10	3 56	11	4 51	11	5 05	14	8 18	16	10 70	20	18 09
11	3 98	12	4 98	12	5 49	15	9 09	17	12 01	22	21 71
12	4 42	13	5 61	13	6 40	16	9 93	18	13 30	24	26 28
13	4 97	14	6 37	14	7 29	17	10 85	20	16 21
14	5 59	15	7 28	15	8 20	18	12 01	22	19 17
15	6 36	16	8 32	16	9 10	20	13 40	24	22 53
16	7 15	17	9 49	17	10 01	22	17 32			3-inch.
17	8 08	18	10 81	18	10 89	24	20 51
18	9 24	20	12 47	20	12 84					16	$12 98
20	12 01	22	14 78	22	16 17					18	15 75
		24	17 32							20	19 95
										22	24 25
										24	30 03
										26	36 96

Articles.		New.	Used.
Scales, platform, 3,200 pounds	each		$80 00
platform, 4,000 pounds	each	$120 00
platform, 4,000 pounds	each		90 00
platform, counter	each	12 00
Fairbanks's, No. 2	each	68 00
track, No. 2	each	750 00
Howe's army	each	35 00
Scale, letter	each	5 00
Scales, 1 set and weights	each		75 00
Screen, fire	each		75
Scythes, briar	per dozen		14 00
Scrapers, engine	each		50
hoe	per pound		12½
Sienna, Italian	per pound	18
raw	per pound	5
burnt	per pound	18
burnt, in tubes	per dozen	1 50
burnt, in oil	per pound	20

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Sieves, sand and funnel ..... each	.....	$5 00
Nos. 1 to 8 ..... each	$1 50
No. 18 ..... each	3 50
brass ..... each	.....	1 00
flour, (old) ..... each	.....	30
Set rivets ..... each	50
hand-saws ..... each	25
mill-saws ..... each	50
Scuttle, coal ..... each	.....	75
Shelac, gum ..... per pound	65
Shovels ..... each	1 25	75
fire ..... each	50
and scrapers for forge ..... per pound	.....	12½
Shears, bench ..... each	10 00	6 00
sheet-iron ..... each	12 00
small, B. makers' size, 3-inch bil ..... each	8 00
boiler makers', No. 2 ..... each	75 00
bankers' ..... each	2 50
tinners' ..... each	12 00
draw ..... each	33
lever, 10-inch blade ..... each	.....	20 00
Shaves, spoke ..... each	50
Shafting ..... per pound	15
Sinks, drifts ..... per pound	.....	12½
Skins, chamois ..... each	75
Sledges, stone ..... per pound	18	12½
blacksmiths' ..... per pound	18	12½
Snips, tinners' ..... each	1 00
circular ..... each	1 25
Sockets, car spring ..... per pound	7
Sprinkler ..... each	1 00
Solder, spelter ..... per pound	45
soft ..... per pound	45
Sash, glazed, (6 lights,) 10 by 12 ..... each	2 00
glazed, (6 lights,) 10 by 14 ..... each	2 20
glazed, (6 lights,) 10 by 16 ..... each	2 25
glazed, (6 lights,) 12 by 16 ..... each	2 50
glazed, (12 lights,) 10 by 16 ..... each	4 50
Sponge, fine ..... per pound	5 00
common ..... per pound	2 50
Springs, rubber ..... per pound	75
engine ..... per pound	18
patent spiral ..... per pound	18
packing ..... per pound	18
combination ..... per pound	45
Spittoons, wood ..... each	25
tin ..... each	50
Spouts, bent, assorted ..... per gross	2 50
can, assorted ..... per gross	2 50
Spades ..... per dozen	16 50	13 20
Spoons ..... per dozen	1 00
table, (old) ..... per dozen	1 50	45
tea ..... per dozen	50
basting ..... each	20
Spikes, railroad ..... per pound	7
wrought and bridge ..... per pound	9
cut ..... per pound	7
marlin ..... each	.....	2 50
Square, carpenters' steel ..... each	1 50	1 25
square, carpenters' steel, (old) ..... per dozen	.....	10 00
try, assorted ..... per dozen	6 00
try, 3-inch ..... each	25
try, 7-inch ..... each	50
try, 12-inch ..... each	90

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.		New	Used.
Stacks, engine smoke	each	$125 00	$100 00
smoke	per pound	15
Stops, car-seat	per pound	85
Stamps, ticket	each	5 00
Stocks and dies, No. 1	each	10 00
No. 2	each	40 00
No. 3	each	.....
No. 4	each	34 00
No. 6	each	12 00
No. 27	each	4 88
No. 29 and 31	each	4 50
Screw-cutter, (worn)	each	.....	2 00
Staples	per pound	25
Skillet, stove	each	50
Stone, grind	per pound	2
oil	per pound	1 00
Stones, rotten	per pound	10
pumice	per pound	6
lamp	per pound	7
grind	each	.....	25 00
paint	each	.....	8 00
Stoves, cook, and fixtures	each	25 00	20 00
cook	each	18 00
cook, large	each	30 00
cook, large	each	40 00
Russia iron	each	12 00
sheet iron	each	9 00
box	each	10 00
coal	each	15 00
cylinder, 1,600 pounds	each	50 00
cast-iron, 300 pounds	each	15 00
cast-iron, 900 pounds	each	25 00
Strainer, copper		1 00
Stand, safe		.....	3 00
wash, appraised according to size and style, at $2 to $5 60	each ink, appraised according to size and style, at	each	25	to 2 00
letter press	each	.....	1 50
switch	per pound	10
Stake, blow horn	each	.....	5 00
beak horn	each	.....	17 00
candle mould	each	.....	3 00
needle case	each	.....	2 50
square head	each	.....	3 00
coffee pot	each	.....	4 00
tea kettle	each	.....	9 00
wrought iron	each	.....	6 70
bench, tinners'	each	.....	7 50
hatchet	each	.....	7 50
double seaming	each	.....	9 00
Stocks and dies, gas pipe, 2 inch	each	16 00
No. 19	each	6 75
No. 33	each	4 00
No. 51	each	3 40
No. 53	each	2 00
	each	5 00
Steel, cast	per pound	20
frog	per pound	16
blister	per pound	15
spring	per pound	14
bar scrap	per pound	15
Skids, for loading	each	2 00
Strips, copper	per pound	45

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Sulphur, flour ..... per pound..	$0 80
Swedges, top ..... per pound..	50
bottom ..... per pound..	25
assorted ..... per pound..	37½
steel ..... each..	1 25
anvil ..... each..	30
and chisels ..... per pound..	15
Slate, double ..... each..	1 00
office, (single) ..... each..	35	$0 25
Stocks, iron ..... per pound..	.....	25
Staffs, flag ..... each..	10
Stools ..... each..	.....	1 00
bench ..... each..	.....	50
Shades, lamp ..... per dozen..	2 50
Stencils, copper ..... per pound..	.....	30
Shingles ..... per M..	7 50
Screens, fire ..... each..	.....	3 00
Tape, office ..... per spool..	1 50
Tables, appraised according to size and style, at from $1 00 to $18 00.
Tacks, assorted ..... per dozen papers..	72
2½ oz ..... per dozen papers..	38
3 oz ..... per dozen papers..	43
4 oz ..... per dozen papers..	48
6 oz ..... per dozen papers..	58
8 oz ..... per dozen papers..	62
10 oz ..... per dozen papers..	72
12 oz ..... per dozen papers..	82
14 oz ..... per dozen papers..	92
16 oz ..... per dozen papers..	1 02
gimp, assorted ..... per dozen papers..	38
upholsterer's ..... per dozen papers..	1 25
Tops, zinc, lamp, screw ..... per gross..	5 00
brass lamp, screw ..... per gross..	5 50
tallow can ..... per gross..	2 50
Templete switch ..... each..	5 00
Trams, from $2 00 to $5 00 per pair
T's, gas pipe, 2-inch ..... each..	1 25
Tallow ..... per pound.	12
Tanks, (not put up) ..... each..	200 00
10 feet, (set up) ..... each..	.....	200 00
6 feet by 12 feet, (set up) ..... each..	.....	350 00
7 feet by 14 feet, (set up) ..... each..	.....	400 00
Tank and fixtures near N. and D. junction	.....	490 60
Elkmont station, N. and D.	.....	1020 00
Linnville station	.....	980 00
Pulaski station	.....	1034 00
Smith's station	.....	592 00
West Harpeth station	500 00
Franklin station	915 00
Little Harpeth station	190 00
Brown's Creek station, N. and D.	917 00
Lydel's station	960 48
Tunnel station	.....	600 00
small	.....	3 00
hoops ..... per pound.	10
Tent, Sibley ..... each..	.....	75 00
Ties, cross ..... each..	30
cross, (under size) ..... each..	20
switch ..... each..	60
Tin, block ..... per pound..	45
sheet, 10 by 14 ..... per box.	14 00
Ix., 10 by 14 ..... per box.	15 00
I. C., 10 by 14 ..... per box.	15 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Tin, sheet, I. C., 14 by 20 ..... per box..	$16 75
C., 14 by 20 ..... per box..	16 75
Ix., 14 by 20 ..... per box..	21 50
II., 14 by 20 ..... per box..	20 00
II. II., 14 by 20 ..... per box..	23 00
22 by 18 ..... per box..	17 00
20 by 24 ..... per box..	18 00
Torpedoes, signal ..... per gross..	25 00
Tongs, B. S ..... per pound..	15	$0 12½
roofing ..... per pair..	3 00
gas pipe, ⅜ ..... per pair..	2 00
½ ..... per pair..	2 00
¾ ..... per pair..	2 10
1 ..... per pair..	2 50
1¼ ..... per pair..	2 75
1½ ..... per pair..	2 75
1¾ ..... per pair..	2 75
2 ..... per pair..	3 00
3 ..... per pair..	3 50
adjustable ..... per pair..	4 00
Tools, B. S ..... per set..	.....	30 00
B. S., government, (for two sets old)	.....	110 00
B. S ..... per set..	.....	112 50
copper smith ..... per set..	.....	250 00
B. S ..... per pound..	.....	15
heading ..... each..	.....	75
sash, assorted ..... per dozen..	3 50
No. 1 ..... per dozen..	1 75
No. 2 ..... per dozen..	2 00
No. 4 ..... per dozen..	3 00
No. 5 ..... per dozen..	3 25
No. 6 ..... per dozen..	5 00
No. 7 ..... per dozen..	5 50
Turpentine ..... per gallon..	1 10
Twine, hemp ..... per pound..	75
tufting ..... per pound..	1 00
Thread, black ..... per pound..	2 00
Tyres, engine ..... per pound..	25
flange ..... per pound..	25
Type, letters and figures ..... per letter..	20
Trucks, baggage ..... each..	10 00	8 00
engine ..... each..	.....	250 00
car ..... each..	.....	22 00
Timber, 15 to 30 cents per running foot, half square, 12 cents per running foot.
oak, B. M ..... per M..	15 00
poplar, B. M ..... per M..	15 00
pine bridge, B. M ..... per M..	20 00
Truss, iron ..... per pound..	12½
Umber, burnt ..... per pound..	06
burnt in oil ..... per pound..	21
burnt in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
raw ..... per pound..	05
raw, in oil ..... per pound..	21
Varnish, Demar ..... per gallon..	4 00
coach-body ..... per gallon..	5 00
brown Japan ..... per gallon..	2 25
black Japan ..... per gallon..	1 50
asphaltum ..... per gallon..	2 75
copal ..... per gallon..	3 00
Valves, globe, brass, ¼-inch ..... each..	1 75
globe, brass, ⅜-inch ..... each..	2 00
globe, brass, ½-inch ..... each..	2 60

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.		New.	Used.
Valves, globe, brass, ¾-inch	each	$3 60
globe, brass, 1-inch	each	5 30
globe, brass, 1¼-inch	each	7 60
globe, brass, 1½-inch	each	9 60
globe, brass, 1¾-inch	each	12 00
globe, brass, 2-inch	each	14 40
globe, brass, 2½-inch	each	24 00
globe, brass, 3-inch	each	36 00
tank	per pound	07
Vermilion, American	per pound	35
English	per pound	1 60
Chinese	per pound	1 75
Verdigris	per pound	1 00
in tubs	per dozen	1 50
Ventilators	each	.....	$3 00
Vices	per pound	20	20
Vitriol	per pound	08
White silver, in tubes	per dozen	1 50
flake, in tubes	per dozen	1 33
flake	per pound	35
flake, in oil	per pound	30
Whiting, Spanish	per pound	03½
Waste, cotton	per pound	35
Washer's, cast, assorted	per pound	10
wrought, assorted	per pound	10
Weights, paper, appraised according to size and style, at from 10 cents to 50 cents
White china	per pound	25
Whistle, engine	each	50 00
Wardrobes, appraised at $7 to $15 each, according to size and style
Wheels, engine tender, on axles	per pair	85 00
engine tender, on axles	each	24 00
car, on axles	per pair	.....	65 00
passenger car, on axles, (old)	per pair	75 00	55 00
car, 26-inch, (good)	each	22 00	20 00
car, 28-inch	each	22 00
truck, 16-inch	each	.....	5 60
truck, small iron	each	.....	5 00
engine, spoke	each	25 00
car, double plated	each	26 00
car, single plated	each	22 00
car, spoke	each	24 00
car, 24-inch	each	20 00
hand-car and crank	per pound	12½
Wrenches, monkey, 12-inch	per dozen	14 00	12 00
monkey, 14-inch	per dozen	18 00	15 00
monkey, 15-inch	per dozen	10 75	15 60
monkey, 18-inch	per dozen	.....	19 20
monkey, 20-inch	per dozen	24 00
monkey, assorted	each	1 25	1 00
assorted	per pound	15	12½
bridge	per pound	15
wheel	per pound	15
gas-pipe	each	5 00
packing	each	.....	50
spanner	each	.....	50
truck	each	.....	1 25
Wire, iron, 8-inch and 9-inch	per pound	10
iron, 12-inch	per pound	11½
iron, 15-inch	per pound	14
iron, assorted	per pound	15
tinned	per pound	25
copper	per pound	65

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Wire, brass ..... per pound..	$0 65
Wicks, lamp ..... per pound..	50
flat ..... per dozen..	25
Webbing, French ..... per yard..	15
Windlass, hand	.....	$50 00
Wire netting ..... per square foot..	35
Weights, (scrap value) ..... per pound..	.....	05
Wood ..... per cord..	3 00
Yellow chrome ..... per pound..	50
chrome, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 33
Naples, in tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
Canary ..... per pound..	50
Yokes, ox and bows ..... each..	6 00
Yellow, brilliant, tubes ..... per dozen..	1 50
Zinc, sheet ..... per pound..	15
slab ..... per pound..	12
French ..... per pound..	16

After the departure of the other members of the board, Brevet Major General Z. B. Tower, United States volunteers, president of the board, and Brevet Major S. C. Kellogg, recorder, were engaged in examining and attesting inventories, and preparing the records up to the 30th of December, 1865, when the proceedings of the board were closed.

Respectfully submitted.

S. C. KELLOGG,
Brevet Major and Aide-de-camp, U. S. Volunteers, Recorder of the Board.

Z. B. TOWER,
Brevet Major General, U. S. Volunteers, President of the Board.

SUPPLEMENT.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Bushings, silver mounted ..... per dozen..	$1 50
Buttons, nail-red plush ..... per gross..	1 60 black patent ..... per gross..	1 25
green patent ..... per gross..	1 25
red patent ..... per gross..	1 25
Cups, tin paint, large ..... each..	.....	$0 37½
Handles, chest ..... per pair..	50
Hangers, bell rope, and rims ..... per dozen..	4 00
Jack's hydraulic, (seven tons) ..... each..	85 00
Frying pans ..... each..	.....	25
Four sets tackle blocks, three and four sheaves, 2¼-inch ..... per set..	85 00
Three sets tackle blocks, two and three sheaves, 2-inch ..... per set..	42 00
Buckets, with covers, 2½-gallon ..... each..	75
Folder, iron, wood	.....	4 00
Files, flat, dead smooth, 5-inch ..... per dozen..	6 24
flat, smooth, second cut, 16-inch ..... per dozen..	20 58
flat, smooth, second cut, 15-inch ..... per dozen..	16 80
Files, flat, dead smooth, 11-inch ..... per dozen..	8 08
flat, dead smooth, 6-inch ..... per dozen..	3 73
flat, dead smooth, 4-inch ..... per dozen..	2 62
Mandril stove-pipe, No. 70 ..... per pound..	07
Oilers, tin, one quart ..... each..	.....	30
tin, half gallon ..... each..	.....	50
Picks, stone masons' ..... each..	.....	$1 00
Pans, dripping, oil ..... each..	.....	1 00
Riddles, moulders' ..... each..	.....	1 00

List of prices—Continued.

Articles.	New.	Used.
Rasps, horse, 12-inch ..... per dozen	$7 77
Rivets, seat-back ..... per pound	1 00
brass, for car seats ..... per pound	1 00
Moulders' shovels ..... each	1 30
Parlor stove ..... each	15 00
Stretchers, upholsterers' ..... each	50
Scoops, flour, small ..... each	50
Shears, bench, 8-inch ..... each	5 50
Swedges, pan ..... each	.....	5 00
Trowels, masons' ..... each	.....	75
plasterers' ..... each	.....	75
Tacks, plasterers', 20-ounce ..... per dozen papers	1 22
18 ounce ..... per dozen papers	1 12
Wedge, stone masons' ..... for lot of 10	.....	1 00
Folder, 24-inch	14 50
Fasteners and hinges, window blinds ..... per pair	60
Duck, 3 yards wide, car roofing ..... per yard	2 70
Circular shears, tinners' tool	25 00
Square shears, tinners' tool	40 00
Wrenches, patent ..... each	1 50
Sieves, flour ..... each	50
One piece old shafting ..... per pound	.....	5
Box car, 411, without trucks, (W. and A. R. R.)	.....	100 00
Shipping books ..... each	15 00
Requisition books ..... each	25 00
Virginia and Tennessee railroad box cars	820 00
Virginia and Tennessee railroad flat cars	620 00
Regulator, upholsterers' ..... each	25
Building, 78 by 21 by 12, portion of Taylor depot	.....	400 00
51 by 20 by 12, corner of Summer and Broad streets, Nashville	.....	250 00
Shed roof on Line street, Nashville, 10 by 15	.....	15 00
Ties, cross, under size, culls ..... each	20
Wood in woods ..... per cords	2 25
Old lime at Chattanooga ..... per bushel	.....	20
Charcoal, (refuse) ..... per bushel	.....	10

S. C. KELLOGG,
Brevet Major, Captain, and Aide-de-camp, Recorder of the Board.

Approved:

Z. B. TOWER,
Brevet Major General, United States Volunteers, President of the Board.

JULY 17, 1867.

A true copy:

F. J. CRILLY,
Brevet Colonel and Assistant Quartermaster, United States Army, in charge Fourth Division Quartermaster General's Office.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, July 22, 1867.

SIR: In compliance with the request of yourself and Hon. Thomas Williams to the Secretary of War, of this date, I have the honor to enclose herewith copy of a letter dated December 21, 1866, to the commanding general, department of the Potomac, directing him to discharge Dr. James L. Watson from military custody, and to dissolve the military commission before which he was to be tried.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Hon. WILLIAM LAWRENCE,
Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 21, 1866.

GENERAL: The case of James L. Watson, on trial by a military commission under your orders, and in respect to whom a writ of habeas corpus was applied for, has been submitted to the Attorney General, who reports to the President his opinion that the military commission ordered by you has not competent jurisdiction for the trial of Mr. Watson.

The President therefore directs that the commission be dissolved and James L. Watson discharged from military custody without delay, and that you report your action to this department.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Brevet Major General J. M. SCHOFIELD, United States Army,
Commanding Department of the Potomac, Richmond, Va.

ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 22, 1867.

Official:

E. D. TOWNSEND
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 23, 1867.

SIR: In reply to your request of the 14th instant for copies of certain papers mentioned in report of Major General George H. Thomas, dated April 28, 1866, I am directed to transmit herewith a copy of Executive Document No. 155, House of Represeptatives, 39th Congress, 1st session, containing report of all captured property returned to railroad companies. The Quartermaster General reports that the inventories referred to will take some time to copy, but will also be transmitted if the accompanying document is not sufficient.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. SCHRIVER,
Inspector General.

E. G. BOWDOIN, Esq.,
Clerk Judiciary Committee, House of Representatives.

REPORT

OF

SUB-COMMITTEE TO SELECT DOCUMENTS.

The Committee, to whom it was referred to examine the documents called for by the Judiciary Committee with respect to the investigation ordered by the House by resolution of March 7, 1867, and report what portion, if any, should be published in connection with the report of the Committee, respectfully report:

That they have examined the documents above referred to, and respectfully recommend that the following documents or parts of documents be made a part of the report of this Committee, and published therewith:

1. Of H. R. Ex. Doc. No. 155, 39th Congress, 1st session, relative to railroad property in possession of the government, insert the letter of General M. C. Meigs, dated July 23, 1866, on pages 1–3, and also the report No. 2 on pages 428–431, and the statement on pages 518–520, (8 pages.)

2. Senate Ex. Doc. No. 7, 39th Congress, 1st session, giving information why Jefferson Davis is still held in confinement, and why he has not been put upon his trial, (4 pages.)

3. Senate Ex. Doc No. 45, 39th Congress, 1st session. Veto of the first bill passed for the admission of Colorado, but omitting the bill itself at the end of the document, (3 pages.)

4. Senate Ex. Doc. No. 57, 39th Congress, 1st session. Message of the President showing action of Executive Department with respect to concurrent resolution of Congress, requesting the President to submit to the legislatures of the States an additional article to the Constitution of the United States. Inserting to close of circular at the bottom of second page, and omitting all thereafter, (2 pages.)

5. Senate Ex. Doc. No. 14, 39th Congress, 2d session. Message of the President, February 2, 1867, relative to appointment of persons to office whose names had not been submitted to the Senate, (16 pages.)

6. H. R. Ex. Doc. No. 116, 39th Congress, 2d session. Message of the President giving names of persons pardoned by the President, and petitioners therefor, (85 pages.)

7. H. R. Ex. Doc. No. 68, 39th Congress, 2d session. Message of the President transmitting papers relative to New Orleans riots. Of this document the Committee recommends the insertion of the first forty-three pages, or all except the testimony forming a part of the document; but as quite a number of the letters and despatches in the first forty-three pages are duplicated, they recommend that the clerk, in furnishing the document to the printer for publication, mark for omission so much as may prevent duplication of any part that may be published, (43 pages.)

8. H. R. Ex. Doc. No. 99, 39th Congress, 1st session. Message of the President relative to pardons and restoration of abandoned property. Of this document the Committee recommend the insertion of the opinion of the Attorney General, pages 3–8; also, the report of General Howard, pages 11–13, and the list of property restored on pages 14 and 15, and at the top of page 16, (10 pages.)

9. H. R Ex. Doc. No. 81, 39th Congress, 1st session. Message of the President relative to the modification of the oath of office, (5 pages.)

10. Senate Ex. Doc. No. 26, 39th Congress, 1st session. Message of the President transmitting information in regard to provisional governors of States. Of this document the Committee recommend the insertion of—

(1.) The letter from William H Seward to William W. Holden, and the proclamation of the President, on the 11th and 12th pages, to bottom of 12th page.

(2.) The letter from William H. Seward to William W. Holden, on the 17th page.

(3.) The telegram and letters on the 47th page, and the letter from William H. Seward to William W. Holden on the top of the 48th page.

(4.) The letter from William H. Seward to W. L. Sharkey, and telegram from W. L. Sharkey to William H. Seward, on the 55th page, and telegram from William H. Seward to W. L. Sharkey, dated July 24, 1865, on 60th page, and letter from William H. Seward to W. L. Sharkey, dated August 28, 1865, on the 60th page.

(5.) The letter from W. L. Sharkey to William H. Seward, dated October 19, 1865, and the telegram from William H. Seward to W. L. Sharkey, dated November 3, 1865, both on the 78th page.

(6.) Letters and telegrams between the State Department and James Johnson, provisional Governor of Georgia, from October 17, 1865, to October 28, 1865, on the 80th and 81st pages.

(7.) Letter from William H. Seward to Louis E. Parsons, dated June 21, 1865, at top of 97th page.

(8.) Letter from William H. Seward to Louis E. Parsons, dated November 4, 1865, on page 109.

(9.) Letter from B. F. Perry to William H. Seward, dated July 22, 1865, and reply, dated July 22, 1865, on pages 112 and 113.

(10.) Letter from William H. Seward to B. F. Perry, dated September 29, 1865, on the 118th page.

(11.) Letters and telegrams between William H. Seward and B. F. Perry, from bottom of 197th page to middle of 201st page.

(12.) Letter from William H. Seward to William Marvin, dated July 14, 1865, on the 202d page; letter from William Marvin to William H Seward, dated August 29, 1865, on the 203d page; the last or tenth clause of Governor Marvin's proclamation, on the 205th page, and letter from William H. Seward to William Marvin, dated September 12, 1865, on the 205th page.

(13.) Telegram from William Marvin to William H. Seward, dated November 18, 1865, and reply of Seward to Marvin, dated November 20, 1865, on the 215th page.

(14.) Telegrams from W. W. Holden to the President, and reply, beginning at telegram date of September 21, 1865, on 223d page, and inserting to bottom of 224th page.

(15.) Telegrams from the President to W. L. Sharkey, dated August 15, 1865, and August 21, 1865, on the 229th page.

(16.) Telegram from J. Johnson to the President, dated October 27, 1865, and reply, dated October 28, 1865, on page 236.

(17.) Telegrams from J. Johnson to the President, dated November 21 and November 24, 1865, and reply, dated November 26, 1865, on 239th page; also, from same to same, dated December 10, 1865, and reply, dated December 11, 1865, on 240th page.

(18.) Telegram from B. F. Perry to the President, dated November 27, 1865, and reply of the same date, on the 256th page.

11. H. R. Report No. 30, 39th Congress, 2d session. New York custom-house frauds. Of this document the Committee recommend the insertion of the testimony of Thomas J. Barr, found on pages 79 to 83 of the above document, (4 pages.)

12. Senate Ex. Doc. No. 1, 39th Congress, 1st session. Letter of Secretary of War giving information in relation to persons employed in that department who had not taken the oath prescribed by law, and persons appointed to offices not authorized by law, (2 pages.)

13. Senate Ex. Doc. No. 3, 39th Congress, 1st session. Letter of the Secretary of the Treasury on the same subject, (10 pages.)

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN C. CHURCHILL,
Chairman of Sub-Committee.

(No. 1.)

RAILROAD PROPERTY.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 23, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to return herewith resolution of the House of Representatives of June 4, 1866, referred by the War Department to this office June 5 for report.

A copy of the resolution was transmitted, June 6, to D. C. McCallum, director and general manager of military railroads of the United States, for report from the files of his office of the information called for. Herewith is respectfully forwarded, under date of July 19, the full report of General McCallum, embracing that of Brevet Major F. J. Crilly, assistant quartermaster United States army, under whose supervision the transfer of all the railroad property in the military division of the Tennessee and in the military division of the Mississippi was effected.

In addition thereto is respectfully forwarded a report with schedules of railroad property in the possession of the United States May 1, 1865, prepared from reports received at this office from officers in the military division of the Gulf, showing the disposition of such property, with the authority therefor, and steps taken to recover the value thereof, appended in each case; altogether comprising, it is believed, a full schedule of all railroad property in the possession of the government on May 1, 1865, whether held by right of capture or purchase; also, what disposition has been made of such property—if sold, whether for cash or credit; and if for credit, under what law or authority.

Attention is invited to the letters of General McCallum and Major Crilly, transmitting their respective reports, and especially to the statements contained therein, that, owing to the large amount of property transferred, and the many different sources from which it was derived, it would be impossible, in every case, to trace each separate item back to its original purchase-bill within the present session of Congress, and consequently so much of the resolution requiring the original cost of the property held by the United States by right of purchase has not been fully complied wit. For information on this subject, the following extract from the letter transmitting General McCallum's report is quoted:

"The greater portion of this property had been on hand and in use a long time, and though the prices obtained were below the cost, with some exceptions, they are believed to be very favorable to the government; this is particularly true with the property sold on credit, the companies purchasing it paying better prices than when sold for cash."

Upon an examination of the prices obtained for the railroad property in the military division of the Gulf, a similar state of circumstances is found to exist.

The following is a statement of the amounts of sales of railroad property:

For cash	$3,403,412 22
On credit	7,418,962 30
Total	10,822,374 52

Attention is invited to the enclosed consolidated statement of the indebtedness of railroad companies, May 31, 1866, for the purchase of railway material of the United States on credit, prepared from reports transmitted to this office by quartermasters in obedience to General Orders No. 80, Quartermaster General's office, December 22, 1865, (accompanying.)

In order to secure payment of the indebtedness of railroads for the purchase of property of the United States, every railroad company to which sales have been made on credit is required to give bond in double the amount of the value of the property transferred to it, as per form contained in Executive Order of October 14, 1865, (accompanying,) by the terms of which the United States has a lien upon the property transferred, and each company is required to make prompt payments of the instalments as they fall due. These bonds, with lists and receipts of the property transferred, have, in every instance, been executed, and are on file in this office.

A great number of these roads have failed to comply strictly with the terms of their bonds; but owing to the devastating effects of the war, and the great expenses incurred in repairing the roads by rebuilding bridges, trestles, &c., and the prostrate condition of the southern roads, it is believed that they are actually unable to meet their engagements with the United States, and that to attempt to enforce prompt payments would be to arrest the operations of the roads, and thus to defeat the object of the Executive in the policy which dictated Executive Orders relative thereto. A general willingness to meet their engagements with the government appears to be manifested, however, by the greater number of the roads purchasing property, and a very large proportion of the payments already made have been in cash. All moneys accruing to their credit for the transportation of troops and supplies have been stopped against them and applied in liquidation of their indebtedness to the government; and arrangements have been made with the Post Office Department by which all payments for mail services performed by indebted railroads are withheld and placed to the credit of such roads on account of the purchase of military railroad property.

It is believed that these arrangements are sufficient to secure, ultimately, the payment of the indebtedness, with interest in full, of all railroads for the purchase of railway material of the United States.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. C. MEIGS,

Quartermaster General, Brevet Major General United States Army.

Hon. EDWIN M STANTON,

Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

REPORT

OF ALL

RAILROADS OPERATED AND CONTROLLED BY THE UNITED STATES

AT ANY TIME DURING THE WAR.

No. 2.—*Report of all railroads operated and controlled by the United States, at director and general manager, giving the name of the road, number of miles what authority transferred,

No.	Name of road.	Distance operated.			Estimated
		From—	To—	Miles.	Per mile.
	DEPARTMENT OF VIRGINIA.
1	Washington and Alexandria	Washington	Alexandria	7	$57,142 85 5-7
2	Orange and Alexandria	Alexandria	Mitchell's Station	68	40,000 00
3	Warrenton Branch	Warrenton Junction	Warrenton	9	40,000 00
4	Alexandria, London, and Hampshire.	Alexandria	Vienna	15	30,000 00
5	Richmond, Fredericksburg, and Potomac.	Aquia Creek	Falmouth	15	30,000 00
6	Richmond and York River	White House	Fair Oaks	20	15,000 00
7	South Side	City Point	Burkeville	62	42,000 00
8	Richmond and Petersburg	Manchester	Petersburg	22	40,000 00
9	Clover Hill Branch of Richmond and Petersburg railroad.	Clover Hill Station	Coal Mines	18	20,000 00
10	Richmond and Danville	Manchester	Danville	140	30,000 00
11	Norfolk and Petersburg	Norfolk	Blackwater	41	50,000 00
12	Seaboard and Roanoke	Portsmouth	Suffolk	17	35,000 00
13	City Point and Army Line	Pikin Station, &c	Humphrey's Station	18	11,111 11 1-9
14	Manassas Gap	Manassas Junction	Strasburg	62	40,000 00
15	Winchester and Potomac	Harper's Ferry	Stevenson	28	25,000 00
	Total			514
	MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE.
1	Louisville City	River Landing	Louisville and Nashville railroad depot.	2	15,000 00
2	Nashville and Chattanooga	Nashville	Chattanooga	151	50,000 00
3	Shelbyville Branch	Wartrace	Shelbyville	9	30,000 00
4	Nashville and Decatur	Nashville	Decatur	120	50,000 00
5	Mt. Pleasant Branch	Columbia	Mt. Pleasant	12	30,000 00
6	Nashville and Northwestern	Nashville	Johnsonville	78	30,000 00
7	Nashville and Clarksville	do	Clarksville	62	30,000 00
8	McMinnville and Manchester	Tullahoma	McMinnville	35	30,000 00
9	East Tennessee and Georgia	Chattanooga	Knoxville	112	30,000 00
10	Dalton	Cleveland	Dalton	27	30,000 00
11	East Tennessee and Virginia	Knoxville	Carter's Station	110	40,000 00
12	Rogersville and Jefferson	Junction of East Tennessee and Virginia railroad.	Rogersville	12	25,000 00
13	Western and Atlantic	Chattanooga	Atlanta	136	40,000 00
14	Rome	Kingston	Rome	17	25,000 00
15	Macon and Western	Atlanta	Rough and Ready	11	30,000 00
16	Memphis and Charleston	Decatur, Ala	Stevenson, Ala	80	40,000 00
		Memphis, Tenn	Pocahontas	75	45,000 00
17	Mississippi Central	Grand Junction	Tallahatchie River	48	40,000 00
18	Mobile and Ohio	Columbus, Ky	Crockett's Station	35	40,000 00
19	Memphis and Little Rock	Duvall's Bluff	Little Rock, Ark	49	30,000 00
	Total			1,181

* The time of taking possession of the roads is not given, for the reason that the possession thereof was not continuous, being held and abandoned as the United States armies advanced or retreated.

any time during the war, under the direction of General D. C. McCallum, operated, estimated value, how held, date of transfer, and to whom and by value.	How held.	How disposed of.

Total.		Date.	To whom delivered.	By whose authority.
$480,000	By right of capture ..	Aug. 8, 1865	W., A., and G. R. R. Co....	By order of Sec'y of War.
2,720,000	.....do.....	June 27, 1865	Board of public works of Va.	Do.
300,000	.....do.....	.....do....	.....do.....	Do.
450,000	.....do.....	Aug. 8, 1865	.....do.....	Do.
450,000	.....do.....	May 23, 1861	Abandoned.....
300,000	.....do.....	June 13, 1861	Track taken up, material removed, and road abandoned.	Lieut. Gen. U. S. Grant.
2,480,000	.....do.....	July 24, 1865	Southside R. R. Co	By order of Sec'y of War.
880,000	.....do	July 3, 1865	Board of public works of Va	By order of Gen. Halleck.
360,000	.....do.....	.....do.....	.....do.....	Do.
4,200,000	.....do.....	July 4, 1865	.....do	Do.
2,200,000	.....do	July 1, 1865	N. and P. R. R. Co.....	Do.
595,000	.....do.....	.....do.....	S. and R. R. R. Co	Do.
200,000	Built by the United States.	June —, 1865	Track taken up and sold by the United States.	By order of Sec'y of War.
2,480,000	By right of capture...	Nov. 10, 1864	Track removed and road abandoned.
700,000	.....do.....	Jan. 20, 1866	W. and P. R. R. Co	Do.
18,775,000
$30,000	Built by the United States.	Mar. —, 1865	Track taken up.....	Do.
7,550,000	By right of capture ..	Sept. 25, ——	N. and C. R. R. Co.....	Executive orders of August 8 and October 14.
270,000	.....do.....	.....do.....	.....do.....	Do.
6,000,000	.....do.....	.....do.....	T. and A., C. S. and T., and A. C. R. R. Cos.	Do.
360,000	.....do.....	—— —, 1864	Track removed by the United States.	By order of Gen. Grant.
			Road turned over to N. and D. R. R. Co.	Executive orders of August 8 and October 14.
2,310,000	27½ miles by right of capture, 50½ miles built by the United States.	Sept. 1, ——	N. and N. W. R. R. Co.....	Do.
1,800,000	By right of capture ..	Sept 23, ——	M., C., and L. R. R. Co	Do.
1,050,000	.....do.....	.....	27 miles and 2,750 feet of track removed and used in repairs of other roads; road abandoned.	By order of Lt. Gen. Grant.
3,300,000	.....do.....	Aug. 28, ——	E. T. and Ga. R. R. Co	Executive orders of August 8 and October 14.
710,000	..... do.....	.....do.....	.....do.....	Do.
4,400,000	.....do.....	..... do.....	E. T. and Va. R. R. Co.....	Do.
300,000	.....do.....	.....do.....	R. and J. R. R. Co	Do.
5,140,000	..... do.....	Sept 25, ——	State of Georgia	Do.
340,000	.....do.....	..... do.....	Rome R. R. Co	Do.
330,000	.....do.....	Nov. —, 1864	Track removed and road abandoned.	By order of the general commanding.
3,200,000	.....do.....	Sept. 1, ——	M. and C. R. R. Co	Executive orders of August 8 and October 14.
3,375,000	.....do.....	..... do	.....do.....	Do.
1,920,000	.....do.....	Aug. 24, 1864	Abandoned
1,400,000	.....do.....	Aug. 25, ——	M. and O. R. R. Co	Do.
1,470,000	.....do.....	Nov. 1, ——	M. and L. R. R. R. Co.....	Do.
45,705,000

No. 2.—Report of all railroads operated and

No.	Name of road.	Distance operated.			Estimated
		From—	To—	Miles.	Per mile.
	MIDDLE DEPARTMENT AND DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA.*
1	Western Maryland railroad	Relay	Westminster	29	$25,000 00
2	Hanover Branch railroad	Hanover Junction	Hanover	13	20,000 00
3	Gettysburg railroad	Hanover	Gettysburg	17	20,000 00
4	Franklin railroad	Chambersburg	Hagerstown	22	20,000 00
	Total			81
	DEPARTMENT OF GEORGIA.
1	Savannah and Gulf railroad	Savannah	Ogeeche River	11	30,000 00
2	Georgia Central railroad	In and around the city of Savannah.		3	33,333 33
	Total			14
	DEPARTMENT OF NORTH CAROLINA.
1	Atlantic and North Carolina railroad.	Morehead City	Goldsboro'	95	30,000 00
2	North Carolina railroad	Goldsboro'	Charlotte	223	30,000 00
3	Wilmington and Weldon railroad.	Wilmington	Weldon	162	30,000 00
4	Raleigh and Gaston railroad	Raleigh	Cedar Creek	25	30,000 00
	Total			505
	DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF.
1	New Orleans, Opelousas, and Great Western railroad.†	New Orleans	Brashear City	80

*No special orders were given relative to relinquishing these roads. The necessity for military occupation having ceased the several companies were allowed to resume control.

†This road was controlled and operated by the quartermaster's department and not by the military railroad department.

controlled by the United States, &c.—Continued.

value.	How held.	How disposed of.
Total.		Date.	To whom delivered.	By whose authority.
$725,000	Seized	July 7, 1863	W. M. R. R. Co
260,000	do	Aug. 1, 1863	Hanover Branch R. R. Co
310,000	do	do	Gettysburg R. R. Co
440,000	do	Oct. 1, 1862	Cumberland Valley R. R. Co.
1,765,000
$330,000	By right of capture	June 20, ——	S. and G. R. R. Co
1,000,000	do	do	Ga. Cen. R. R. Co	Major General Gilmore.
1,330,000
$2,850,000	do	Oct. 25, ——	A. and N. C. R. R. Co	By order of Sec'y of War.
6,630,000	do	Oct. 22, ——	N. C. R. R. Co	Do.
4,860,000	do	Aug. 27, ——	W. and W. R. R. Co	Do.
750,000	do	May 3, ——	R. and G. R. R. Co
5,150,000
	do	Jan. 31, 1866	N. O., O., and Gt. W. R. R. Co	Executive orders of August 8 and October 14.

Statement of the indebtedness of railroad companies for the purchase of railroad material of the United States, on credit, under Executive Orders of August 8, and October 14, 1865, showing the appraised value of property transferred by the United States, with interest accrued thereon to May 31, 1866, amount payments made, and balance remaining due at that date.

Name of road.	Value of property sold.	Interest to May 31, 1866.	Total indebtedness May 31.	Payments.	Balance.
Wills Valley Railroad Company	$30,248 52	$1,313 75	$31,562 27	$1,300 00	$30,262 27
Edgefield and Kentucky	111,772 86	4,824 48	116,597 34	.....	116,597 34
Macon and Brunswick	93,237 50	953 01	94,200 51	67,662 21	26,547 33
Montgomery and West Point	38,559 66	1,516 16	40,075 82	9,566 76	30,509 06
Southwestern	46,159 89	.....	46,159 89	46,159 89	.....
Rome	22,086 05	816 20	22,902 31	7,256 71	15,645 60
Memphis and Ohio	106,920 13	4,379 67	111,308 80	15,283 57	96,025 23
Memphis, Clarksville, and Louisville	337,082 36	13,329 29	350,411 65	150 00	350,261 65
Mississippi and Tennessee	127,750 52	4,500 89	132,251 41	30,401 35	101,849 46
Alabama and Florida	79,021 01	2,254 77	81,275 81	21,033 03	60,242 78
East Tennessee and Georgia	366,183 02	18,010 29	384,193 31	26,942 97	357,250 34
Muscogee	5,214 20	244 04	5,458 24	1,316 45	4,141 79
Macon and Western	83,638 15	.....	83,638 15	81,282 60	2,355 55
Nashville and Chattanooga	1,566,551 73	76,526 33	1,643,078 06	158,745 53	1,484,332 83
Tennessee and Alabama Central	84,143 00	3,958 31	88,101 31	25,071 06	63,030 25
Mobile and Ohio	505,143 70	17,482 65	522,626 35	221,341 58	301,284 77
Mobile and Great Northern	18,036 72	561 08	18,600 80	7,581 18	11,011 62
Memphis and Charleston	547,491 09	9,779 97	557,274 06	79,774 41	477,499 65
Alabama and Tennessee River	183,276 49	7,567 75	190,844 24	15,340 18	175,504 06
Mississippi, Gainesville, and Tuscaloosa	31,476 39	1,504 86	31,981 25	.....	31,981 25
Georgia Railroad and Banking Company	11,935 05	.....	11,935 05	11,935 05	.....
New Orleans and Ohio	32,150 00	1,373 88	33,523 88	.....	33,523 88
Nashville and Decatur	135,171 92	4,018 66	139,220 58	31,015 04	108,205 54
Western and Atlantic	472,944 66	22,979 47	495,924 13	.....	495,924 13
Central Southern	77,186 32	3,631 17	80,817 49	22,996 13	57,821 16
East Tennessee and Virginia	265,655 65	13,434 96	279,090 61	7,888 42	271,202 19
Southwestern Iron Company	32,515 00	.....	32,515 00	32,515 00	.....
Adams Express Company	4,361 45	.....	4,361 45	4,361 45	.....
Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Co	525,400 26	67,723 49	551,123 75	23,044 75	530,079 00
Mississippi Central	78,460 00	2,144 18	80,604 18	14,415 29	66,188 89
New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern	200,805 58	6,658 03	207,523 61	49,967 58	157,556 06
Tennessee and Alabama	108,692 68	5,117 81	113,810 49	32,349 20	81,461 29
Selma and Meridian	146,327 92	4,815 21	151,143 13	56,038 49	95,111 64
Virginia and Tennessee	102,880 00	3,295 58	106,175 58	.....	106,175 58
Wilmington and Weldon	110,000 00	2,274 21	112,274 21	4,536 57	107,737 64
Atlantic and North Carolina	51,453 93	1,786 05	53,239 98	5,948 01	47,291 94
Western North Carolina	14,209 82	465 06	14,734 88	2,038 35	12,696 53
Petersburg	65,000 00	1,411 80	63,411 80	18,012 67	48,399 13
Virginia Central	70,000 00	3,995 13	73,995 13	4,424 71	69,570 42
Richmond, Fredericksburg, and Potomac	7,449 27	.....	7,449 27	7,449 27	.....
Orange and Alexandria	90,395 74	4,176 93	94,572 67	8,642 75	85,929 92
Alexandria, Loudon, and Hampshire	62,592 96	1,903 85	64,496 81	.....	64,496 81
Manassas Gap	4,663 51	119 72	4,783 23	309 00	4,474 14
McMinnville and Manchester	20,340 00	430 57	20,770 57	.....	20,770 57
South Carolina	23,458 50	497 31	23,955 81	.....	23,955 81
Memphis and Little Rock	153,287 17	7,459 99	160,746 16	.....	160,746 16
New Orleans, Opelousas, and Great Western	110,573 45	2,768 19	116,541 94	.....	116,541 94
Total	7,370,196 16	292,027 20	7,662,223 36	1,151,146 56	6,508,076 80

List of railroad property transferred by Captain J. B. Dexter, assistant quartermaster United States volunteers, to the president and directors of the New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern railroad, belonging to the United States government, for the value of which said road has given bond for $66,100 to secure payment.

Date.	Articles.	Cost when new.	Cost of articles and prices charged.
1865.
Mar. 10	21 platform cars.....each...	$550 00	$11,550 00
	5 platform cars.....do....	400 00	2,000 00
	2 wood cars.....do....	600 00	1,200 00
	5 box cars.....do....	650 00	3,250 00
	1 box car.....do....	450 00	450 00
	3 cattle cars.....do....	550 00	1,650 00
	25 coal cars.....do....	300 00	7,500 00
	1 dummy car and engine.....do....	4,000 00	4,000 00
	14 push-cars.....do....	50 00	550 00
	8 hand cars.....do....	50 00	400 00
	1 turn-table.....do....	500 00	500 00
	Total value of railroad property transferred.....	.....	33,050 00

[No. 2.]

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, COMMUNICATING, IN COMPLIANCE WITH A RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE OF DECEMBER 21, 1865, INFORMATION UPON WHAT CHARGES AND FOR WHAT REASONS JEFFERSON DAVIS IS STILL HELD IN CONFINEMENT, AND WHY HE HAS NOT BEEN PUT UPON HIS TRIAL.

To the Senate of the United States:

I have received the following preamble and resolution adopted by the Senate on the 21st ultimo:

"Whereas the Constitution declares that 'in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right of a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the State or district wherein the crime shall have been committed;' and whereas several months have elapsed since Jefferson Davis, late president of the so-called confederate States, was captured and confined for acts notoriously done by him as such, which acts, if duly proved, render him guilty of treason against the United States, and liable to the penalties thereof; and whereas hostilities between the government of the United States and the insurgents have ceased, and not one of the latter, so far as is known to the Senate, is now held in confinement for the part he may have acted in the rebellion, except said Jefferson Davis: Therefore,

"Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested, if compatible with the public safety, to inform the Senate upon what charges or for what reasons said Jefferson Davis is still held in confinement, and why he has not been put upon his trial."

In reply to the resolution, I transmit the accompanying reports from the Secretary of War and the Attorney General, and at the same time invite the attention of the Senate to that portion of my message, dated the 4th day of December last, which refers to Congress the questions connected with the holding of circuit courts of the United States within the districts where their authority has been interrupted.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, January 5, 1866.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, January 4, 1866.

SIR: To the annexed Senate resolution, passed December 21, 1865, referred to me by you for report, I have the honor to state:

1. That Jefferson Davis was captured by United States troops in the State of Georgia, on or about the 10th day of May, 1865, and by order of this department has been, and now is, confined in Fortress Monroe, to abide such action as may be taken by the proper authorities of the United States government.

2. That he has not been arraigned upon any indictment or formal charge of crime, but has been indicted for the crime of high treason by the grand jury of the District of Columbia, which indictment is now pending in the supreme court of said District. He is also charged with the crime of inciting the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, and with the murder of Union prisoners of war, by starvation and other barbarous and cruel treatment towards them.

3. The President deeming it expedient that Jefferson Davis should first be put upon his trial before a competent court and jury for the crime of treason, he was advised by the law officer of the government that the most proper place for such trial was in the State of Virginia. That State is within the judicial circuit assigned to the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, who has held no court there since the apprehension of Davis, and who declines for an indefinite period to hold any court there.

The matters above stated are, so far as I am informed, the reasons for holding Jefferson Davis in confinement, and why he has not been put upon his trial.

4. Beside Jefferson Davis, the following persons who acted as officers of the rebel government are imprisoned, to wit: Clement C. Clay, at Fortress Monroe, charged, among other things, with treason, with complicity in the murder of Mr. Lincoln, and with organizing bands of pirates, robbers, and murderers in Canada, to burn the cities and ravage the commerce and coasts of loyal States on the British frontier; D. L. Yulee, at Fort Pulaski, charged with treason while holding a seat in the United States Senate, and with plotting to capture the forts and arsenals of the United States, and with inciting war and rebellion against the government; S. R. Mallory, at Fort Lafayette, charged with treason, and with organizing and setting on foot piratical expeditions against the United States commerce and marine on the high seas.

Other officers of the so-called confederate government, arrested and imprisoned, have been released on parole to abide the action of the government in reference to their prosecution and trial for alleged offences, on their applications for amnesty and pardon. Among these are G. A. Trenholm, secretary of the treasury; John A. Campbell, assistant secretary of war; James A. Seddon, secretary of war; John H. Reagan, postmaster general; R. M. T. Hunter, senator; Alexander H. Stephens, vice-president, and sundry other persons of less note.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
December 21, 1865.

Mr. Howard submitted the following resolution, which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Whereas the Constitution declares that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right of a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the State or district wherein the crime shall have been committed;" and whereas several months have elapsed since Jefferson Davis, late president of the so-called confederate States, was captured and confined for acts notoriously done by him as such, which acts, if duly proved, render him guilty of treason against the United States, and liable to the penalties thereof; and whereas hostilities between the government of the United States and the insurgents have ceased, and not one of the latter, so far as is known to the Senate, is now held in confinement for the part he may have acted in the rebellion, except said Jefferson Davis: Therefore,

Resolved, That the President be respectfully requested, if compatible with the public safety, to inform the Senate upon what charges or for what reasons said Jefferson Davis is still held in confinement, and why he has not been put upon his trial.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
January 4, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt from you of a copy of the resolution of the Senate of the United States, of date the 21st of December, 1865. In that resolution the Senate respectfully request to be informed upon what charges and for what reason Jefferson Davis is still held in confinement, and why he has not been put upon his trial.

When the war was at its crisis, Jefferson Davis, the commander-in-chief of the army of insurgents, was taken prisoner, with other prominent rebels, by the military forces of the United States. It was the duty of the military so to take them. They have been heretofore, and are yet, held as prisoners of war. Though active hostilities have ceased, a state of war still exists over the territory in rebellion. Until peace shall come in fact and in law, they can rightfully be held as prisoners of war.

I have ever thought that trials for high treason cannot be had before a military tribunal. The civil courts have alone jurisdiction of that crime. The question then arises, Where and when must the trial thereof be held?

In that clause of the Constitution mentioned in the resolution of the Senate, it is plainly written that they must be held in the State and district "wherein the crime shall have been committed." I know that many persons (of learning and ability) entertain the opinion that the commander-in-chief of the rebel armies should be regarded as constructively present with all the insurgents who prosecuted hostilities and made raids upon the northern and southern borders of the loyal States.

This doctrine of constructive presence, carried out to its logical consequences, would make all who had been connected with the rebel armies liable to trial in any State and district into which any portion of those armies had made the slightest incursion. Not being persuaded of the correctness of that opinion, but regarding the doctrine mentioned as of doubtful constitutionality, I have thought it not proper to advise you to cause criminal proceedings to be instituted against Jefferson Davis, or any other insurgent, in States or districts in which they were not actually present during the prosecution of hostilities.

Some prominent rebels were personally present at the invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania; but all, or nearly all, of them received military parole upon the surrender of the rebel armies. Whilst I think that those paroles are not ultimate protection for prosecution for high treason, I have thought that it would be a violation of the paroles to prosecute those persons for crimes, before the political power of the government has proclaimed that the rebellion has been suppressed.

It follows from what I have said that I am of the opinion that Jefferson Davis and others of the insurgents ought to be tried in some one of the States or districts in which they in person respectively committed the crimes with which they may be charged. Though active hostilities and flagrant war have not for some time existed between the United States and the insurgents, peaceful relations between the government and the people in the States and districts in rebellion have not yet been fully restored. None of the justices of the Supreme Court have held circuit courts in those States and districts since actual hostilities ceased.

When the courts are open, and the laws can be peacefully administered and enforced in those States whose people rebelled against the government; when thus peace shall have come in fact and in law, the persons now held in military custody as prisoners of war, and who may not have been tried and convicted for offences against the laws of war, should be transferred into the custody of the civil authorities of the proper districts, to be tried for such high crimes and misdemeanors as may be alleged against them.

I think that it is the plain duty of the President to cause criminal prosecutions to be instituted before the proper tribunals, and at the proper times, against some of those who were mainly instrumental in inaugurating, and most conspicuous in conducting the late hostilities.

I should regard it as a direful calamity if many whom the sword has spared the law should spare also; but I would deem it a more direful calamity still, if the Executive, in performing his constitutional duty of bringing those persons before the bar of justice to answer for their crimes, should violate the plain meaning of the Constitution, or infringe, in the least particular, the living spirit of that instrument.

I have the honor to be, most respectfully,

JAMES SPEED, Attorney General.

The PRESIDENT.

(No. 3)

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, RETURNING TO THE SENATE THE BILL ENTITLED "AN ACT FOR THE ADMISSION OF THE STATE OF COLORADO INTO THE UNION," WITH HIS OBJECTIONS TO ITS BECOMING A LAW.

To the Senate of the United States:

I return to the Senate, in which house it originated, the bill which has passed both houses of Congress, entitled "An act for the admission of the State of Colorado into the Union," with my objections to its becoming a law at this time.

First. From the best information which I have been able to obtain, I do not consider the establishment of a State government at present necessary for the welfare of the people of Colorado. Under the existing territorial government all the rights, privileges, and interests of the citizens are protected and secured. The qualified voters choose their own legislators and their own local officers, and are represented in Congress by a delegate of their own selection. They make and execute their own municipal laws, subject only to revision by Congress—an authority not likely to be exercised, unless in extreme or extraordinary cases. The population is small, some estimating it so low as twenty-five thousand, while advocates of the bill reckon the number at from thirty-five thousand to forty thousand souls. The people are principally recent settlers, many of whom are understood to be ready for removal to other mining districts beyond the limits of the Territory, if circumstances shall render them more inviting. Such a population cannot but find relief from excessive taxation if the territorial system, which devolves the expenses of the executive, legislative, and judicial departments upon the United States, is for the present continued. They cannot but find the security of person and property increased by their reliance upon the national executive power for the maintenance of law and order against the disturbances necessarily incident to all newly organized communities.

Second. It is not satisfactorily established that a majority of the citizens of Colorado desire, or are prepared for, an exchange of a territorial for a State government. In September, 1864, under the authority of Congress, an election was lawfully appointed and held, for the purpose of ascertaining the views of the people upon this particular question. 6,192 votes were cast, and of this number a majority of 3,152 was given against the proposed change. In September, 1865, without any legal authority, the question was again presented to the people of the Territory, with the view of obtaining a reconsideration of the result of the election held in compliance with the act of Congress approved March 21, 1864. At this second election 5,905 votes were polled, and a majority of 155 was given in favor of a State organization. It does not seem to me entirely safe to receive this, the last mentioned result, so irregularly obtained, as sufficient to outweigh the one which had been legally obtained in the first election. Regularity and conformity to law are essential to the preservation of order and stable government, and should, as far as practicable, always be observed in the formation of new States.

Third. The admission of Colorado, at this time, as a State into the federal Union, appears to me to be incompatible with the public interests of the country. While it is desirable that Territories, when sufficiently matured, should be organized as States, yet the spirit of the Constitution seems to require that there should be an approximation towards equality among the several States comprising the Union. No State can have less or more than two senators in Congress. The largest State has a population of four millions; several of the States have a population exceeding two millions; and many others have a population exceeding one million. A population of 127,000 is the ratio of apportionment of representatives among the several States.

If this bill should become a law, the people of Colorado, thirty thousand in number, would have in the House of Representatives one member, while New York, with a population of four millions, has but thirty-one; Colorado would have in the electoral college three votes, while New York has only thirty-three; Colorado would have in the Senate two votes, while New York has no more.

Inequalities of this character have already occurred, but it is believed that none have happened where the inequality was so great. When such inequality has been allowed, Congress is supposed to have permitted it on the ground of some high public necessity, and under circumstances which promised that it would rapidly disappear through the growth and development of the newly admitted State. Thus, in regard to the several States in what was formerly called the "northwest territory," lying east of the Mississippi, their rapid advancement in population rendered it certain that States admitted with only one or two representatives in Congress would, in a very short period, be entitled to a great increase of representation. So, when California was admitted on the ground of commercial and political exigencies, it was well foreseen that that State was destined rapidly to become a great, prosperous, and important mining and commercial community. In the case of Colorado, I am not aware that any national exigency, either of a political or commercial nature, requires a departure from the law of equality, which has been so generally adhered to in our history.

If information submitted in connection with this bill is reliable, Colorado, instead of increasing, has declined in population. At an election for members of a territorial legislature held in 1861, 10,580 votes were cast. At the election before mentioned, in 1864, the number of votes cast was 6,192; while at the irregular election held in 1865, which is assumed as a basis for legislative action at this time, the aggregate of votes was 5,905. Sincerely anxious for the welfare and prosperity of every Territory and State, as well as for the prosperity and welfare of the whole Union, I regret this apparent decline of population in Colorado; but it is manifest that it is due to emigration which is going on from that Territory into other regions within the United States, which either are in fact, or are believed by the inhabitants of Colorado to be, richer in mineral wealth and agricultural resources. If, however, Colorado has not really declined in population, another census, or another election under the authority of Congress, would place the question beyond doubt, and cause but little delay in the ultimate admission of the Territory as a State, if desired by the people.

The tenor of these objections furnishes the reply which may be expected to an argument in favor of the measure derived from the enabling act which was passed by Congress on the 21st day of March, 1864. Although Congress then supposed that the condition of the Territory was such as to warrant its admission as a State, the result of two years' experience shows that every reason which existed for the institution of a territorial instead of a State government in Colorado, at its first organization, still continues in force.

The condition of the Union at the present moment is calculated to inspire caution in regard to the admission of new States. Eleven of the old States have been for some time, and still remain, unrepresented in Congress. It is a common interest of all the States, as well as those represented as those unrepresented, that the integrity and harmony of the Union should be restored as completely as possible, so that all those who are expected to bear the burdens of the federal government shall be consulted concerning the admission of new States; and that in the mean time no new State shall be prematurely and unnecessarily admitted to a participation in the political power which the federal government wields, not for the benefit of any individual State or section, but for the common safety, welfare, and happiness of the whole country.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15, 1866.

(No. 5.)

MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, COMMUNICATING, IN COMPLIANCE WITH A RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE OF DECEMBER 12, 1866, INFORMATION IN RELATION TO THE APPOINTMENT OF PERSONS TO OFFICE SINCE THE ADJOURNMENT OF THE LAST SESSION OF CONGRESS, WITHOUT THE SUBMISSION OF THE NAME OF SUCH PERSON TO THE SENATE FOR ITS CONFIRMATION.

To the Senate of the United States:

The accompanying reports from the heads of the several executive departments of the government are submitted in compliance with a resolution of the Senate dated the 12th ultimo, inquiring "whether any person appointed to an office required by law to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate, previous to the assembling of the present Congress, to fill a vacancy, has been continued in such office and permitted to discharge its functions, either by the granting of a new commission or otherwise, since the end of the session of the Senate on the twenty-eighth day of July last, without the submission of the name of such person to the Senate for its confirmation; and particularly whether a surveyor or naval officer of the port of Philadelphia has thus been continued in office without the consent of the Senate; and if any such officer has performed the duties of that office, whether he has received any salary or compensation therefor."

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, January 31, 1867.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,

Washington, December 17, 1866.

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred the resolution of the Senate of the 12th instant, requesting the President to inform that body "whether any person appointed to an office required by law to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate, previous to the assembling of the present Congress, to fill a vacancy, has been continued in such office and permitted to discharge its functions, either by the granting of a new commission or otherwise, since the end of the session of the Senate on the twenty-eighth day of July last, without the submission of the name of such person to the Senate for its confirmation," &c., has the honor to state, in reply to that part of the resolution which relates to this department, that its records do not show that any person has been appointed to an office under its supervision or commissioned during the recess of the Senate to fill a vacancy, or otherwise, except such as have been nominated to the Senate at its present session.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

The PRESIDENT.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,

December 22, 1866.

SIR: I transmit herewith the reply of this department to the resolution of the Senate of December 12, requesting you to inform that body "whether any person appointed to an office required by law to be filled by and with the advice of the Senate, and who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate previous to the assembling of the present Congress, to fill a vacancy, has been continued in such office, and permitted to discharge its functions, either by the granting of a new commission or otherwise, since the end of the session of the Senate on the twenty-eighth day of July last, without the submission of the name of such person to the Senate for its confirmation, and particularly whether a surveyor or naval officer of the port of Philadelphia has thus been continued in office without the consent of the Senate; and if any such officer has performed the duties of that office, whether he has received any salary or compensation thereof." The persons whose names appear on the enclosed statement were appointed during the recess of the Senate in 1865, and owing to clerical inadvertence their nominations were not submitted to the Senate during the last session, with the exception of Peter McGough and A. S. Cadwallader, they having been recommissioned or others appointed in their places. The nomination of Mr. McGough is now before the Senate, and that of Nathan C. James in place of Mr. Cadwallader.

James L. Selfridge was appointed assessor of internal revenue, eleventh district Pennsylvania, July 14, 1865, vice Samuel Oliver, resigned.

Samuel P. Gary appointed assessor, fifth district of Wisconsin, June 6, 1865, vice G. Gary, resigned.

Thomas W. Tipton, appointed assessor, Nebraska, July 10, 1865, vice J. H. Burbank, resigned.

Joseph E. Webster appointed assessor, second district of Georgia, July 14, 1865. New office; no predecessor.

William I. Phillips appointed assessor, second district of Texas, July 1, 1865. New office, no predecessor.

A. S Cadwallader appointed collector, fifth district of Pennsylvania, vice J. W. Cowell, resigned, (September 13, 1865.)

Peter McGough appointed collector, twentieth district of Pennsylvania, March 27, 1865, vice W. F. Clark, resigned.

William S. Ingham appointed assessor, third district of Missouri, April 27, 1865, vice C. B. Wilkinson, transferred to the sixth district under a new organization.

William A. Price appointed collector, sixth district of Missouri, October 12, vice C. B Wilkinson, removed.

Alonzo M. Keeler appointed collector, fifth district of Michigan, November 27, 1865, vice D. Mussy, resigned.

In cases of resignations and removals, the incumbent has never been allowed to vacate the office until his successor had been appointed and qualified, when the books, papers, &c., pertaining to the office have been turned over by the retiring party to the new appointee, thus leaving the office at no time actually vacant.

Edward Wallace, naval officer, and E. Reed Myer, surveyor of the port of Philadelphia, were both originally confirmed by the Senate and commissioned for four years; the former July 26, 1861, and the latter July 27, 1861. Upon the expiration of these commissions, (occurring during the recess of the Senate in 1865,) they were reappointed to the offices by temporary commissions, as shown in the statement.

The nominations of these officers to the Senate at its last session were accidentally omitted, and upon the adjournment of that body and the discovery of the omission, they were again furnished with temporary commissions.

September 18, 1866, Joseph P. Flanigan was commissioned as naval officer, vice Edward Wallace, removed, and November 20, 1866, Joseph Severns was appointed surveyor in place of E. Reed Myer, resigned.

The enclosed reports from the First Comptroller and Commissioner of Customs are submitted as a reply to that portion of the resolution referring to the salary and compensation paid to the different officers of the internal revenue and customs, mentioned in the report.

I am, sir, very respectfully,

HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The PRESIDENT.

Names of officers of the internal revenue appointed during the recess of the Senate in 1865, and whose names were withheld from the Senate in 1866, and they continued in office after the adjournment thereof.

Names.	Office.	District and State.	Date of appointment.	In whose place.	Remarks.
J. L. Selfridge	Assessor	Eleventh, Penn	July 14, 1865	—— Oliver	Daniel H. Nieman appointed in his place November 11, 1866.
Samuel P. Gary	do	Fifth, Wisconsin	June 6, 1865	—— Gary	Adolph Sorrenson appointed in his place September 22, 1866.
Thomas W. Tipton	do	Nebraska	July 10, 1865	—— Burbank	Andrew S. Holliday appointed in his place September 17, 1866.
Joseph E. Webster	do	Second, Georgia	July 14, 1865		Re-commissioned September 19, 1866.
William I. Phillips	do	Second, Texas	July 1, 1865		Could not qualify. J. A. Henderson appointed in his place October 24, 1866.
A. S. Cadwallader	Collector	Fifth, Penn	Sept. 13, 1865	—— Cowell	Still in office.
Peter McGough	do	Twentieth, Penn	March 27, 1865		Still in office.
William S. Ingham	do	Third, Missouri	April 29, 1865	New office	John M. Glover appointed in his place September 25, 1866.
William A. Price	do	Sixth, Missouri	Oct. 12, 1865	do	James W. Black appointed in his place September 19, 1866.
Alonzo M. Keeler	do	Fifth, Michigan	Nov. 27, 1865	—— Murphy	Seymour Brownell appointed in his place October 4, 1866.
		OFFICERS OF THE CUSTOMS.
Edward Wallace	Naval officer	Philadelphia, Penn	July 26, 1865	Edward Wallace, (reappointed.)	Joseph R. Flanigan appointed in his place September 18, 1866.
E. Reed Myer	Surveyor	Philadelphia, Penn	July 27, 1865	E. Reed. Myer, (reappointed.)	Joseph Severns appointed in his place November 20, 1866.

The persons whose names appear on this list were appointed during the recess of the Senate in 1865, and owing to clerical inadvertence their nominations were not submitted to the Senate during the last session. With the exception of Peter McGough and A. S. Cadwallader they have been recommissioned or others appointed in their places. The nomination of Mr. McGough is now before the Senate, and that of Nathan C. James, vice Cadwallader.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Comptroller's Office, December 18, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 15th instant, enclosing copy of resolution of the Senate, calling for information relative to appointments to offices during the recess, their compensation, &c.; also a list which shows such appointments as have been made under the internal revenue, with dates, &c., and asking me to furnish at the earliest practicable moment such information as this office may afford, to be used in reply.

In compliance with your request, I enclose herewith a statement containing the desired information; and I beg leave to refer you to my letter of the 14th instant, stating certain facts to be used in answer to Mr. Senator Edmunds's letter to the Secretary.

Very respectfully, &c.,

R. W. TAYLER, Comptroller.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Comptroller's Office, December 14, 1866.

SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, with copy of one from Hon. George F. Edmunds, chairman of the Joint Select Committee of Congress, and requesting a statement of such facts as this office may afford, to be used as a reply to Mr. Edmunds's inquiries.

Mr. Edmunds asks whether, since the 9th day of February, 1863, any money has been paid from the treasury to any person acting or assuming to act as an officer, civil, military, or naval, as salary in any office where such office was not authorized by some previously existing law, and whether any money has, during the same period, been paid to any person appointed during the recess of the Senate to fill a vacancy in any existing office, which vacancy existed while the Senate was in session, and the incumbent of which office was one whose final appointment required the advice and consent of the Senate, before such appointee has been confirmed by the Senate, or in any case in which such confirmation never took place; and also asks the Secretary to communicate the name of each person thus receiving money from the treasury, together with the name of the office or duty for which the payment was made, the times and amounts of the money thus paid, and the names of each of the officers of the Treasury Department upon whose warrant or signature or authority such payment was made.

In answer to the inquiries of the committee, the Comptroller states that the records and files of this office do not show that any payment has been made in either of the cases referred to, and he has no personal knowledge of any such payment having been made.

The Comptroller does not intend to state that no payment of the character named has been made, but only that, if it has been, the records of the office do not show it, and that he has no knowledge of its having been made.

The commissions of officers are never exhibited to the Comptroller, nor are the dates of their appointments generally communicated to him. When oaths of office have been taken and bonds given they are generally made known to the Comptroller, and generally filed in his office, in cases subject to his supervision, or otherwise the facts are communicated to him from the proper office, and he necessarily assumes that an officer has been properly appointed and is entitled to the salary or compensation attached to the office after properly qualifying and entering upon the discharge of its duties, unless the contrary appears; and he cannot assume that a person appointed to office has been improperly appointed or is not entitled to compensation. Nor can he enter upon the inquiry, in cases of appointments to fill vacancies, as to when or how the vacancy occurred. The record of appointments is not kept by the Comptroller, and he has no means of knowing when vacancies occur, or whether appointees have or not been confirmed by the Senate. He can therefore but assume, when notice of an appointment is communicated to him in the usual way by the proper office, that the appointee, when properly qualified, is entitled to the compensation attached to the office.

In but one instance of a vacancy of the character named has the question of paying the officer been brought directly to the consideration of the Comptroller, and in that case the salary was withheld until after the Senate had confirmed the appointment at the next succeeding session.

In a few other cases of internal revenue officers the Comptroller learned, incidentally, that they had been appointed during the recess to fill vacancies existing during the previous session of the Senate, and therefore directed that their compensation should be withheld until the action of the Senate should have authorized its payment.

And the Comptroller has given direction generally that in all like cases coming to the knowledge of the clerks in his office, this course should be pursued; and he has no knowledge of any payment in conflict with the act of February, 1863.

Respectfully submitted.

R. W. TAYLER, Comptroller.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Statement exhibiting the amounts allowed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and approved by the Comptroller, to the several assessors and collectors of internal revenue referred to in the list submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury, for salary and commissions, as shown by the estimates of the several collectors as disbursing agents, since July 28, 1866.

Name.	Office.	District and State.	Period covered by allowance.	Salary allowed.	Commissions allowed.	Remarks.
J. L. Selfridge	Assessor	Eleventh, Penn.	July, 1866	$123 00
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00	$259 05	Commissions allowed on settlement of account from July 29 to September 30, 1866
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	119 00
Do	do	do	Oct., 1866	123 00
Do	do	do	Nov., 1866			D. H. Nieman, his successor, allowed salary from November 14, sixteen days, $64.
Total				488 00	259 05
S. P. Gary	do	Fifth, Wisconsin	July, 1866	123 00
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00		No advance for pay of assessor or collector since that for August, 1866.
Total				246 00
T. W. Tipton	do	Nebraska				Salary of A. S. Holliday, his successor, $119, allowed for November, 1866.
J. E. Webster	do	Second, Georgia	July, 1866	123 00
Do	do	do	August, 1866
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	880 00		Salary allowed at $2,500 per annum, and $81 additional for July, 1866.
Do	do	do	Oct., 1866
Do	do	do	Nov., 1866
Total				1,003 00
A. S. Cadwallader	Collector	Fifth, Penn	July, 1866	123 00	543 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits in June, 1866.
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00	791 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits in July, 1866.
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	119 00	791 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits in August, 1866.
Do	do	do	Oct., 1866	123 00	804 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits in September, 1866.
					*698 00
Do	do	do	Nov., 1866	119 00	655 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits in October, 1866.
Total				607 00	4,282 00
† Peter McGough	do	Twentieth, Penn.	July, 1866	123 00	816 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits for June, 1866.
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00	607 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits for July, 1866.
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	119 00	752 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits for August, 1866.

Statement exhibiting the amounts allowed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, &c.—Continued.

Name.	Office.	District and State.	Period covered by allowance.	Salary allowed.	Commissions allowed.	Remarks.
Peter McGough	Collector	Twentieth, Penn.	Oct., 1866	123 00	781 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits for September, 1866.
Do	do	do	Nov., 1866	119 00	697 00	Commissions being on collections and deposits for October, 1866.
Total				607 00	3,743 00
W. S. Ingham	do	Third, Missouri	July, 1866	123 00	437 00
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00	478 00
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	119 00	716 00	No advance yet made to J. M. Glover, his successor.
Total				365 00	1,631 00
W. A. Price	do	Sixth, Missouri	July, 1866	123 00	475 00
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00	517 00
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	119 00	686 00	An advance of $2,943 made to J. W. Black, his successor, for October and November expenses.
Total				365 00	1,678 00
A. M. Keeler	do	Fifth, Michigan	July, 1866	123 00	333 00
Do	do	do	August, 1866	123 00	30 00
Do	do	do	Sept., 1866	119 00	317 00	An advance of $2,149 made to S. Brownell, his successor, for October and November expenses.
Total				365 00	700 00

* Balance due on compensation and expense account to June 30, 1866.
† Compensation and expense account adjusted November 21, 1866, for fiscal year ending June 30, 1866, and balance found due him thereon of $3,029 31, which remains unpaid.
‡ Compensation and expense account adjusted October 27, 1866, for fiscal year ending June 30, 1866, and balance found due him thereon of $2,727 57, which remains unpaid.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, Comptroller's Office, December 18, 1866.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of the Commissioner of Customs, December 17, 1866.

SIR: In answer to your letter of the 15th instant, making inquiry in regard to Edward Wallace, late naval officer, and E. Reed Myer, late surveyor of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, I have the honor to report that Mr. Edward Wallace continued to discharge the duties of naval officer up to the 30th of September last. His accounts have been adjusted to the 30th June, 1865; the remainder of his accounts from that time up to the end of his official term are unadjusted in the office of the First Auditor. Mr. E. Reed Myer remained in office until the 30th November last. His accounts have been adjusted to 30th June, 1865; the remaining portion of his accounts are in the First Auditor's office.

Both of these gentlemen have been allowed all the emoluments of their offices up to the time of the last adjustment by this office, viz, June 30, 1865.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. SARGENT,
Commissioner of Customs.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, December 18, 1866.

SIR: The Senate resolution of the 12th instant, requesting the President "to inform the Senate whether any person appointed to an office required by law to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate, previous to the assembling of the present Congress, to fill a vacancy, has been continued in such office and permitted to discharge its functions, either by the granting of a new commission or otherwise, since the end of the session of the Senate on the 28th day of July last, without the submission of the name of such person to the Senate for its confirmation; and particularly whether a surveyor or naval officer of the port of Philadelphia has thus been continued in office without the consent of the Senate; and if any such officer has performed the duties of that office, whether he has received any salary or compensation therefor," is before this department, by reference, for answer.

I have no knowledge of any such case as is contemplated by the resolution, having occurred in respect to any officer appointed by, connected with, or under the control of this department.

This department does not furnish the means of information as to the names of nominees submitted to or withheld from the Senate by the President, and I cannot, therefore, speak with absolute certainty; but I am not aware of any instance in which an officer, under the control of this department, who had been appointed in the recess of the Senate previous to the assembling of the present Congress, and whose name was not submitted to the Senate at its last session for confirmation, "has been continued in such office and permitted to discharge its functions either by the granting a new commission or otherwise."

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. H. BROWNING,
Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDENT.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, December 17, 1866.

Mr. PRESIDENT: In reply to so much of the Senate's resolution of December 12, respecting appointments to office required to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, &c., &c., &c., hereto annexed, as pertains to this department, I have the honor to transmit herewith the Adjutant General's report of the 14th instant, containing the information desired.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 14, 1866.

SIR: In obedience to your instructions, I have the honor to make the following report in reply to certain inquiries of the Senate addressed to the President and conveyed in their resolution of the 12th instant.

The records of this office have been carefully searched, but their examination has failed to elicit any case similar to that presented in the resolution. Since the adjournment of the thirty-eighth Congress no person, appointed to any office in the army or volunteer force, has been continued in such office without having been nominated to and confirmed by the Senate at the first session of the present Congress. There have been no exceptional cases, so far as full appointments are concerned. Appointments by brevet would hardly seem to be included among those concerning which these inquiries have been made, being offices yielding no profit to the incumbent by way of salary or emoluments. Several cases have occurred through inadvertence merely, in which officers receiving brevet appointments (during the recess) as an appreciation by the government of their gallant services during the war were omitted from the nomination list sent in to the Senate at their next session. In order, therefore, that the brevet promotion should not entirely fall, these appointments expiring by constitutional limitation on the last day of the next ensuing session of Congress, new letters of appointment have been issued to these officers. Their names now appear upon the list of nominations for brevet appointment sent in to the Senate by the President on the 11th instant, in order that the action of the Senate may be obtained upon them, and that, if confirmed, commissions in due form may be conferred upon them.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. TOWNSEND
Assistant Adjutant General.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

NAVY DEPARTMENT, Washington, December 13, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of a resolution of the Senate, dated the 12th instant, requesting information of the President concerning the appointment of persons during the recess of Congress, required by law to be confirmed by the Senate, &c.

No appointments requiring confirmation by the Senate have been made since the adjournment of the last session of Congress.

Promotions of naval officers have been made in due course, as vacancies have occurred.

Very respectfully,

GIDEON WELLES,
Secretary of the Navy.

The PRESIDENT.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, December 14, 1866.

SIR: In answer to the inquiries in the following resolution of the Senate of the United States, passed December 12, 1866, and referred by you to this office, "Resolved, That the President be requested to inform the Senate whether any person appointed to an office required by law to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate previous to the assembling of the present Congress, to fill a vacancy, has been continued in such office, and permitted to discharge its functions, either by the granting of a new commission, or otherwise, since the end of the session of the Senate on the 28th day of July last, without the submission of the name of such person to the Senate for its confirmation; and particularly whether a surveyor or naval officer of the port of Philadelphia has thus been continued in office without the consent of the Senate; and if any such officer has performed the duties of that office, whether he has received any salary or compensation therefor," I have to say that no such cases as those described in the resolution have occurred, within the knowledge of this office.

I have the honor to be, with the greatest respect,

HENRY STANBERY, Attorney General.

The PRESIDENT.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, December 12, 1866:

Resolved, That the President be requested to inform the Senate whether any person appointed to an office required by law to be filled by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who was commissioned during the recess of the Senate previous to the assembling of the present Congress, to fill a vacancy, has been continued in such office, and permitted to discharge its functions, either by the granting of a new commission, or otherwise, since the end of the session of the Senate on the 28th day of July last, without the submission of the name of such person to the Senate for its confirmation; and particularly whether a surveyor or naval officer of the port of Philadelphia has thus been continued in office without the consent of the Senate; and if any such officer has performed the duties of that office, whether he has received any salary or compensation therefor.

Attest: J. W. FORNEY, Secretary.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
January 15, 1867.

SIR: In answer to the foregoing resolution, (so far as relates to the action of this department,) I have the honor to transmit, herewith, a list of offices at which appointments of postmasters were made during the recess of the senate, March 11, 1865, to December 4, 1865, which appointments appear not to have been sent to the Senate for confirmation, and the names of the postmasters at such offices who still discharge the duties thereof, as shown by the records of this department.

In many of these cases the commissions expired previous to the adjournment of the Senate in March, 1865, and nominations were not sent to the Senate by President Lincoln. The cases have been continued along, without your attention having been called to them, so far as I remember, during the last session of the present Congress. I append also a list of cases, now in the same condition, which were sent to the Senate at its last session, and not acted upon either in confirmation or rejection. I am now having them all prepared for your action and for the action of the Senate.

With very great respect, I am your obedient servant,

ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.

The PRESIDENT.

List of post offices at which appointments were made during the recess of the Senate, March 11, 1865, to December 4, 1865, which appointments appear not to have been sent to the Senate for confirmation; and the names of postmasters at such offices who still discharge the duties thereof.

Office.	State.	Postmaster.	Date of appointment.
Boston	Massachusetts	John G. Palfrey	Appointed July 7, 1865.
Bath	New York	Ebenezer Ellis	Appointed July 12, 1865.
Fulton	do	Allan C. Livingston	Appointed July 12, 1865.
Goshen	do	Charles T. Jackson	Appointed April 11, 1865.
Bridgeton	New Jersey	Joseph S. Miner	Appointed April 26, 1865. Mr. Miner was not nominated to the Senate. On the 19th of July, 1866, Daniel B. Thompson was nominated to the Senate, but not confirmed. On the 28th of September 1866, Samuel R. Fithian was appointed postmaster by the President. Fithian's commission suspended, and Miner is now the acting postmaster.
Morristown	do	Alanson A. Vance	Reappointed July 14, 1865. On the 8th of May, 1866, Wm. E. Atno, jr., was nominated to the Senate by the President in place of Vance, whose commission had expired. Mr. Atno, jr., was rejected by the Senate on the 13th of July, 1866. On the 17th of November, 1866, Albert H. Stanburrough was appointed postmaster at Morristown by the President, but his commission being suspended, Mr. Vance is now the acting postmaster.
Ashland	Pennsylvania	Levi C. Leib	Appointed July 28, 1865.
New Castle	do	David Emery	Appointed July 12, 1865.
Warren	do	Christian Smith	Appointed March 17, 1865. On the 23d of July, 1866, Leonard D. Crandall was nominated to the Senate by the President as postmaster, but was not confirmed by that body. Mr. Smith is now the acting postmaster.
Tamaqua	do	Daniel Eveland	Appointed April 11, 1865. On the 23d July, 1866, John Sheilly was nominated to the Senate by the President as postmaster, and rejected by that body on July 27, 1866. Daniel Eveland appears on the books of the department as the acting postmaster, though it is said he has abandoned the office.
Hagerstown	Maryland	John Schleigh	Appointed July 7, 1865.
Finley	Ohio	Joseph B. Rothchild	Appointed August 4, 1865. On the 9th November, 1866, Cloys B. Wilson was appointed postmaster at Finley by the President, but his commission being suspended, Mr. Rothchild is now the acting postmaster.
Ripley	do	Henry Biehn	Appointed April 11, 1865.
Pontiac	Michigan	Salmon S. Matthews	Appointed April 11, 1865.
Port Huron	do	William Hartsuff	Appointed August 10, 1865.
Bloomington	Indiana	Joseph G. McPheeters, jr.	Appointed March 14, 1865.
Columbus	do	Samuel J. Harris	Appointed August 18, 1865.
Elkhart	do	Robert K. Brush	Appointed March 20, 1865.
Greensburg	do	Marine D. Tackett	Appointed July 20, 1865.
Lawrenceburg	do	James Vaughn	Appointed October 17, 1865.
New Albany	do	John M. Wilson	Appointed March 14, 1865.
Peru	do	James H. Fetler	Appointed July 7, 1865.
Shelbyville	do	John S. Campbell	Appointed June 16, 1865.
Charleston	Illinois	David C. Ambler	Appointed June 16, 1865.
Moline	do	George D. Gould	Appointed April 25, 1865, and not nominated to the Senate. On the 28th September, 1866, Henry E. Wells was appointed postmaster at Moline by the President, and his commission being suspended, Mr. Gould is at present in possession of the office.
Rockford	do	Anson S. Miller	Appointed March 14, 1865. On the 12th June, 1866, Jason Marsh was nominated to the Senate by the President as postmaster at Rockford, and rejected by that body on the 23d July, 1866. On the 5th October, 1866, Azro E. Goodwin was appointed postmaster by the President; and Goodwin's commission being suspended, Mr. Miller remains in charge of the office.

Cape Girardeau	Missouri	Lewis F. Klosterman	Appointed July 7, 1865.
Columbia	do	Mrs. Ann Gentry	Reappointed April 21, 1865. On the 1st November, 1866, Paul Hubbard was appointed postmaster at Columbia by the President, but his commission being suspended, Mrs. Gentry is still the acting postmaster.
Jefferson City	do	Allen P. Richardson	Reappointed July 7, 1865.
Pilot Knob	do	Ferdinand Schmitz	Appointed July 7, 1865.
St. Charles	do	Albert H. Edwards	Appointed March 17, 1865.
Lexington	do	John B. Alexander	Reappointed June 16, 1865. On the 19th July, 1866, H. K. Davis was nominated to and rejected by the Senate on the 27th July, 1866; Mr. Alexander still holds the office.
Napoleon	Arkansas	William Robertson	Appointed October 17, 1865.
Columbus	Kentucky	James M. Moore	Appointed July 7, 1865.
Mount Sterling	do	James Howard	Appointed July 7, 1865.
Munfordville	do	David T. Moneypenny	Appointed November 14, 1865.
Shelbyville	do	William Standeford	Appointed March 17, 1865.
Chattanooga	Tennessee	Elbert A. James	Appointed July 18, 1865.
Parkersburg	West Virginia	James M. Boreman	Reappointed July 7, 1865. On the 12th July, 1866, J. C. Walker was nominated to the Senate, but not confirmed by that body, as postmaster at Parkersburg. Mr. Boreman still holds the office.
Virginia City	Montana Territory	James Gibson	Appointed April 11, 1865.
Cohoes	New York	Izrahiah W. Cheesebro	Appointed May 2, 1865. On the 16th of June, 1865, J. H. Masten was appointed postmaster in place of Cheesebro, but his name was not sent to the Senate. On the 25th of July, 1866, Mr. Izrahiah W. Cheesebro was nominated to the Senate as postmaster by the President, and rejected by that body on the 27th of July, 1866. On the 19th October, 1866, Samuel D. Trull was appointed postmaster, and his commission being suspended, Masten is now acting postmaster.

List of nominations sent to the Senate by the President for confirmation, and not acted on by that body.

Crandall, L. D., Warren, Pennsylvania, nominated to Senate July 23, 1866.

Dunn, Michael, Fort Leavenworth Kansas, nominated to Senate July 10, 1866.

Gibson, James, Virginia City, Montana, nominated to Senate April 18, 1866, and withdrawn April 26.

Gash, Henry W., Macomb, Illinois, nominated to the Senate May 1, 1866, and withdrawn June 4.

Green, Henry A., Jersey City, New Jersey, nominated to the Senate July 20, 1866.

Ireland, Thomas, Annapolis, Maryland, nominated to the Senate April 10, 1866.

Marsh, H. C., Muncie, Indiana, nominated to the Senate March 21, 1866.

Merrill, Edwin S., Winchendon, Massachusetts, nominated to the Senate July 23, 1866.

McDowell, J. A., nominated to the Senate July 27, 1866.

Newman, A. G., Columbia, Missouri, nominated to the Senate February 6, 1866.

Osborn, John, Greencastle, Indiana, nominated to the Senate May 1, 1866, reported May 18, and withdrawn May 22.

Oliver, J. B., Rahway, New Jersey, nominated to the Senate July 10, 1866, and withdrawn July 20.

Rosseline, Charles, nominated to the Senate July 27, 1866.

Starr, H. A., Milwaukee, Wisconsin, nominated to the Senate May 23, 1866, and withdrawn June 4.

Smith, Ethanan, Towanda, Pennsylvania, nominated to the Senate July 23, 1866.

Shelley, John W., Hornellsville, New York, nominated to the Senate July 26, 1866.

Taylor, J. E., nominated to the Senate July 27, 1866.

Walker, J. C., Parkersburg, West Virginia, nominated to the Senate June 13, 1866.

Williams, D. J., nominated to the Senate July 27, 1866.

Hutchinson, W. S., Columbia, California, nominated to the Senate July 17, 1866.

Biehn, Henry, Ripley, Ohio, nominated to the Senate July 23, 1866.

[No. 6.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, FURTHER IN ANSWER TO A RESOLUTION OF THE HOUSE OF 10TH DECEMBER LAST, RELATIVE TO PERSONS PARDONED BY THE PRESIDENT.

To the House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith a report from the Attorney General, additional to the one submitted by him December 31, 1866, in reply to the resolution of the House of Representatives of December 10, 1866, requesting a "list of names of all persons engaged in the late rebellion against the United States government who have been pardoned by the President from April 15, 1865, to this date; that said list shall also state the rank of each person who has been so pardoned, if he has been engaged in the military service of the so-called confederate government, and the position, if he shall have held any civil office under said so called confederate government; and shall also further state whether such person has at any time prior to April 14, 1861, held any office under the United States government, and, if so, what office, together with the reasons for granting such pardons; and also the names of the person or persons at whose solicitation such pardon was granted."

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, March 2, 1867.

MARYLAND.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
William H. Archer	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford, E. H. Webster, and W. W. Watkins	Nov. 14, 1865.
William T. Besant	do	Governor Bradford and W. J. Maultby	Sept. 11, 1865.
John R. Buchanan	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 11, 1865.
R. M. Beale	do	Governor Bradford, H. C. England, H. F. Veirs, R. M. Williams, John T. Bevans, Bernard Munday, and W. V. Bowie.	Oct. 28, 1865.
L. T. Brien	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 28, 1865.
J. B. Balderston	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
Henry Bell	do	do	July 26, 1865.
S. C. Botts	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
Thorndike Brooks	Ex-United States navy. Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford and Chauncey Brooks	July 26, 1865.
John W. Bennett	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford and United States Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
George E. Baker	do	Governor Bradford	Nov. 14, 1865.
Lemuel T. Beall	do	do	Oct. 14, 1865.
McY. Barry	Left a loyal State, and a blockade runner	do	July 26, 1865.
D. S. Boyle	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford and United States Attorney William Price.
L. O. Bennett	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
H. Cretin	do	do	Oct. 28, 1865.
John Cretin	do	do	Oct. 28, 1865.
G. Carter	do	Governor Bradford and United States Attorney William Price	Sept. 2, 1865.
William E. Cocke, jr	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000	Hon. Attorney General Speed and David T. Patterson	Nov. 8, 1865.
E. J. Chiswell	Left a loyal State	A. J. Hamilton, military Governor of Texas	June 17, 1865.
D. Conde	do	Governor Bradford and District Attorney Price	July 26, 1865.
Philip Cashmyer	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bradford, J. P. W. Phall, Brevet Brigadier General Mulford, Charles Palmer, Franklin Stearns, F. J. Smith, Brevet Major General James W. Turner, Hon. John M. Botts, Colonel Michael Corcoran, 69th reg't N. Y. M., O. B. Miller, colonel, &c., Colonel John L. Croker, 93d regiment N. Y. V., Lieutenant Colonel L. J. Lowman, 8th regiment, Pennsylvania, Lieutenant Colonel Lewis Benedick, jr., 73d N. Y. V., Major J. Louges, 1st artillery, U. S. A., Major A. S. Cassidy, 93d N. Y., Major A. Steinhaufer, 68th regiment N. Y., Surgeon John McGregor, 3d Conn. V., Captain John Downey, Co. D, 11th N. Y. Vol., First Lieutenant A. M. Underhill, 11th N. Y. Vol., Lieutenant Colonel G. W. Neff, 2d Ky. infantry, and Lieutenant Colonel R. A. Constable, 75th Ohio volunteers.	Sept. 20, 1865.
James G. Clark	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
Lawrence F. Dickinson	do	Governor Bradford and R. H. Jones	Sept. 20, 1865.
W. H. B. Dorsey	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 14, 1865.
Ferdinand Duvall	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
W. F. Dement	do	Governor Bradford and P. W. Crair	Oct. 9, 1865.
H. Clay Dallam	do	United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	Sept. 27, 1865.
Jesse W. Downey	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
G. W. Emmerich	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed and William Price, United States district attorney	July 19, 1865.
Joseph Forrest	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 9, 1865.
Adolphus Fearhake, jr	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
John Gill	do	By order of the President	Oct. 13, 1865.
R. Biddle Grogan	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.

Maryland—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
G. R. Gaither	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
J. H. Herbert	do	Governor Bradford, United States District Attorney William Price, C. A. Gambrill, Robert Tyson, and H. D. Harvey	July 26, 1865.
W. J. Hull	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	Sept. 2 1865.
I. E. Hall	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 28, 1865.
George Henry	do	do	Oct. 28, 1865.
William J. Hill	do	do	July 6, 1865.
W. K. Howard	do	Frank P. Blair, sr	July 11, 1865.
T. M. Healey	do	Ordered by the President	June 14, 1865.
William M. Hill	do	Governor Bradford and John B. Blacke	Sept. 20, 1865.
James Hawken	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 14, 1865.
Maurice A. Healey	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
Richard P. Hays	do	Governor Bradford, Hon. Montgomery Blair, S. T. Hays, J. W. Brown, R. F. Trail, F. S. Poole, William Metzger, William Cissel, James E. King, William T. Jones, John Gall, and Hatten Brown.	Sept. 20, 1865.
W. T. Harwood	do	Governor Bradford and Hon. Montgomery Blair	Sept. 20, 1865.
A. J. Harding	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
William D. Hartley	do	Governor Bradford, John W. Bear, J. M. Stephens, late adjutant 5th Maryland volunteer infantry, J. N. Linaweaver, James Ensor, H. B. Jones, A. J. Miller, and W. Buckley.	Sept. 11, 1865.
Clement D. Hill	do	Ordered by the President	Oct. 2, 1865.
Otis Johnson	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
A. Jones	do	Governor Bradford and United States Attorney W. J. Jones	Sept. 2, 1865.
George C. Jenkins	do	Ordered by the President	Oct. 25, 1865.
Caleb S. Keech	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 28, 1865.
R. G. Keene	do	do	Oct. 28, 1865.
J. Mortimer Kilgour	do	Governor Bradford and Richard J. Bowie	Oct. 14, 1865.
Robert V. Lanier	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
S. H. Lyon	do	J. L. Chapman, mayor of Baltimore, United States Attorney William Price, William Fisher, Thomas Wilson, John M Frazier, speaker house of delegates, H. McKim, Charles C. Cox, lieutenant governor of Maryland, John Hopkins, and J. W. Garrett.	Aug. 15, 1865.
Richard S. Merryman	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 14, 1865.
C. G. W. Macgill	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	Sept. 20, 1865.
T. B. Maynard	do	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
Albert Maynard	do	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
Henry McAtee	do	Governor Bradford and J. M. Frazier	Oct. 28, 1865.
W. P. McCabe	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
Charles Marshall	do	United States District Attorney	July 21, 1865.
William H. McLanahan	do	United States District Attorney, Governor Bradford, and J. W. Clumplit	Aug. 2, 1865.
Samuel McCubbin	do	William Prescott Smith, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company	July 13, 1865.
Henry Marriott	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
E. C. McSherry	do	do	July 26, 1865.
Daniel Murray	do	Governor Bradford, United States District Attorney William Price, and A. S. Ridgely	Sept. 25, 1865.
Robert M. Miles	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.

William P. McCabe	Left a loyal State	Ordered by the President	Mar. 17, 1866.
William Henry Norris	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	Sept. 19, 1865.
W. H. Newell	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
R. H. Norris	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
B. W. Owens	do	By order of the President	Aug. 19, 1865.
James W. Owens	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 11, 1865.
Nicholas Owings	do	Ordered by the President	June 20, 1866.
John Y. Parker	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 14, 1865.
W. S. Purnell	do	Governor Bradford and W. H. Purnell	Oct. 14, 1865.
George W. Purnell	do	Governor Bradford, Hons. John A. J. Creswell, T. A. Spencer, W. H. Purnell, George M. Covington, A. M. Payne, John E. Lecompte, William C. Mumford, G. H. Richardson, J. S. Lecompte, J. W. Merrill, and W. H. W. Farrow.	Oct. 14, 1865.
W. R. T. Pitts	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
O. H. Pearre	do	United States District Attorney William Price	Aug. 15, 1865.
Aubray Pearre	do	United States District Attorney William Price	Aug. 15, 1865.
V. L. Perry	do	Governor Swann and United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	July 6, 1866.
John H. Parkhill	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
E. T. Paca	do	do	July 26, 1865.
H. M. Pettit	do	do	July 26, 1865.
William L. Ritter	do	Governor Bradford	Nov. 14, 1865.
John Ridgely	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
J. H. Smith	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	Oct. 28, 1865.
D. H. Stephenson	do	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
George R. Simpson	do	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
J. Y. Scharf	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
W. C. Schley	do	Governor Bradford, United States District Attorney W. J. Jones, and W. Schley	Sept. 11, 1865.
M. O. Shriver	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
T. H. Shriver	do	do	July 26, 1865.
J. H. Septer	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 30, 1865.
P. M. Shipley	do	do	Oct. 14, 1866.
A. E. Shipley	do	do	July 6, 1866.
St. Clair F. Sutherland	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed and Major General Donaldson	Sept. 9, 1865.
A. K. Shriver	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney William Price	July 26, 1865.
Henry C. Selman	do	Governor Bradford, Hon. M. Blair, John W. Crown, P. F. Trail, E. D. Cruit, F. S. Porle, William Metzger, William Cissel, James E. King, William T. Jones, John Gall, and H. Brown.	Sept. 20, 1865.
Ignatius D. Thomson	do	Governor Bradford, United States District Attorney William Price, Hon. Reverdy Johnson, and H. S. Ridgly.	July 26, 1865.
John H. Steele	do	Governor Bradford	Nov. 14, 1865.
Grafton Tyler	do	Lieutenant Governor Cox, of Maryland, and Hon. Mayor Wallach	July 25, 1865.
I. West Thompson	do	Hon. J. A. J. Creswell	July 17, 1865.
Edmund Thomas	do	Governor Bradford and William P. Maulsby	Sept. 20, 1865.
Levin Thomas	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
A. C. Trippe	do	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	Oct. 14, 1865.
S. H. Trundle	do	Governor Bradford	Oct. 14, 1865.
James W. Upshur	do	do	Oct. 14, 1865.
Thomas J. Wheeden	do	United States District Attorney William Price and C. M. Stewart	July 31, 1865.
Levi S. White	Left a loyal State, and a blockade runner	Ordered by the President	June 13, 1865.
William Woodville	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford and United States District Attorney W. J. Jones	Sept. 11, 1865.
I. L. Wagner	do	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
Thomas H. West	do	Governor Bradford and Hon. Francis Thomas	Sept. 20, 1865.
William B. Wilson	do	Governor Bradford	Nov. 14, 1865.

Maryland—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
John T. Wakenight	Left a loyal State	Governor Bradford	Sept. 20, 1865.
H. H. Wootten	do	Governor Bradford, R. J. Bowie, Washington Bonifant, M. Blair, William Willins, W. H. Purnell, E. Hammond, and W. W. Watkins.	Oct. 28, 1865.
Samuel C. White	do	Governor Bradford, George W. Dawson, and Daniel T. White	Sept. 20, 1865.

KENTUCKY.

Jas. S. Allen	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, R. T. Baird, George D. Prentice, A. J. Ballard, and A. M. Stout	Oct. 16, 1865.
Clayton Anderson	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000	Hon. Attorney General Speed, G. W. Dunlane, W. F. Barrett, R. H. Watts, J. M. Wright, D. P. Henderson, F. C. Coleman, B. D. Lusk, W. R. Handy, C. R. Dupuy, E. Mitchell, T. D. Tilford, T. T. Taylor, John M. Burr, W. R. Kinney, J. K. Goodloe, J. T. Boyle, W. C. Hits, J. G. Barrett, John B. Smith, G. W. Harris, T. T. Shreu, J. M. Heath, J. S. Todd, J. M. Armstrong, John Hurderker, W. R. Boice, George A. Caldwell, J. B. Bonnon, F. H. Kean, S. G. Gibbs, J. M. Bryant, H. Denk.	July 1, 1865.
R. H. Anderson	Petty civil officer	R. H. Stanton and J. J. Anderson	Sept. 2, 1865.
N. Frank Brown	Left a loyal State. Rebel clerk	R. H. Stanton and John J. Anderson, collector 6th district	July 14, 1865.
Duncan Bell	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	B. S. Campbell, J. H. Caldwell, J. S. Phelps, W. A. Davis, G. Spratt, W. Terry, Hons. James Guthrie, G. Davis, C. C. Smith, A. Harding, L. S. Trumbull, B. C. Ritter, L. H. Rousseau, and W. H. Randall.	April 7, 1866.
J. D. Bright	do	Governor Bramlette	Aug. 2, 1866.
Cassius Bell	do	Governor Bramlette, B. S. Campbell, J. H. Caldwell, Jas. S. Phelps, W. H. Davis, G. Spratt, William Terry.	April 7, 1866.
Thomas S. Bryan	do	William Terry, G. B. Long, R. Barrell, J. H. Caldwell, Jas. S. Phelps, W. H. Davis, and G. Spratt.	April 7, 1866.
William Bell	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and Major General Palmer	April 21, 1866.
James W. Bird	do	Major General Palmer	April 21, 1866.
R. Scott A. Briggs	do	Postmaster T. K. Marshal, E. H. McKay, collector, J. W. Shaw, T. W. Taylor, John H. Terwell, James C. Duncan, R. A. Houston, Richard Johnson, J. T. Teshenor, Captain J. D. Wickliff, J. E. Hunts, W. T. Spalding, R. D. Hackley, J. S. Bean, John E. Newman, judge 8th judicial district, D. J. Weed, deputy provost marshal, W. F. Graves, Samuel Boyanton, W. F. Stoughton, and James Wood.	Aug. 18, 1865.
Joseph Y. Briggs	do	Judge T. P. Smithieum, postmaster, Chaplain T. K. Marshal, Postmaster B. Caldwick, R. D. Hackley, A. C. Thompson, D. P. Wood, W. T. Spalding, and Captain John D. Wickliffe.	Aug. 18, 1865.
R. J. Breckenridge	Member of rebel congress. Left a loyal State	R. J. Breckenridge, sr.	Aug. 11, 1865.
James B. Barrack	Left a loyal State. Tampering with United States mail.	Governor Bramlette, George D. Prentice, W. F. Evans, W. T. Barret	Sept. 23, 1865.
R. J. Burns	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, Judge D. Garmon, King Garmon, (William King, captain 39th Kentucky volunteers,) Thomas J. Sowards, James M. Thornburg, captain 39th Kentucky volunteers; C. C. Bawels, H. Williamson, clerk Pike county court, T. J. Owens, Jonathan Gamm, L. C. Ditz, J. R. Mann, Thomas Johnson, J. H. Stump, Sergeant John Dameron, H. M. Dougherty, George Stump, S. M. Furgurson, and J. W. Dills.	Sept. 19, 1865.

S. M. Bemis	Left a loyal State	Colonel Pennebaker and Attorney General Speed	July 21, 1865.
J. H. Brent	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed and Major General Frank P. Blair	July 18, 1865.
W. M. Badger	do	W. S. Thomas, Eli H. Brown, W. P. Baker, M. L. Cooper, James E. Stone, notary public, G. W. McAdams, J. S. Reading, W. P. D. Bush, and Governor Bramlette.	Aug. 2, 1865.
Marion M. Burch	do	Governor Bramlette	Oct. 1865.
Thos. L. Burnett	Member of rebel congress	Major General J. M. Palmer, W. F. Bullock, and T. L. Burnett	June 25, 1865.
Walter O. Bullock	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette	Aug. 15, 1865.
H. W. Bruce	Member of rebel congress	R. H. Stanton, Lizzie B. Bruce, John L. Helm, and Hon. Attorney General Speed	June 12, 1866.
A. J. Barry	Left a loyal State	Hon. Attorney General Speed and Hon. F. P. Blair	July 22, 1865.
Thomas W. Bullock	do	Governor Bramlette and John C. Bullett	Aug. 8, 1866.
E. M. Bruce	Member of rebel congress	Governor Bramlette, John T. Fisk, L. M. Sherley, Charles S. Harrison, Hon. Attorney General Speed, G. C. Smith, and Major General Rousseau.	June 12, 1865.
Albert J. Berry	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, Judge Campbell, Hon. Mayor of Newport, Hons. R. T. Baker, Jacob Hawthorn, M. M. Benton, General John W. Finnell, Colonel Armstrong, and General Artsman.	July 5, 1865.
W. F. Bullock, jr	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Messrs. Ballard, Muir, Ripley, and Bell	July 6, 1865.
Wm. C. P. Breckenridge	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed and Rev. R. J. Breckenridge	Aug. 11, 1865.
A. P. Bruce	do	Rev. R. J. Breckenridge, Governor Bramlette, Brigadier General Fry, Joseph Smith, R. H. Mizz, C. Rodes, J. W. Grocter, Reuben Gentry, J. P. Fisher, R. W. Washington, John Cowan, J. E. Lee, George Y. Lee, J. J. Craig, G. Rice, G. W. Welsh, Charles Ridgeway, T. E. Quisenberry, R. P. Jacobs, J. J. Bell, and J. T. Boyle.	July 6, 1866.
Henry Bruce	Worth over $20,000	Governor Bramlette, Rev. R. J. Breckenridge, Speed S. Fry, late brigadier general U. S. V.; Major General Palmer, J. F. Speed, Henry Birtie, J. M. Armstrong, John Cowan, H. P. Bosley, G. Rice, Ben. Bell, T. E. Quinsberry, J. A. Jacobs, Jos. Smith, A. R. McKee, O. Beatty, S. H. Ralston, J. W. Irwine, J. W. Cardwell, W. B. Edelen, S. P. Barber, R. P. Jacobs, W. R. Creror, James Kinnard, S. S. M. Roberts, and Colonel Pennybacker.	July 6, 1866.
James Guthrie	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Governor Bramlette, and Senator Guthrie	May 23, 1866.
John H. Cave	Indicted for treason	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Governor Bramlette, and Major General J. M. Palmer	April 21, 1866.
A. E. Camp	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette	April 9, 1866.
Edward Crossland	do	Hon. James Speed, Attorney General, Judge R. R. Williams, Hon. S. Anderson, John S. Bolinger, and Colonel Charles D. Pennybaker.	Nov. —, 1865.
Benjamin C. Craig	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette	July 6, 1866.
H. B. Clay and his wife, Nannie B. Clay.	Worth over $20,000	Governor Bramlette, A. G. Hodges, John M. Clay, M. C. Johnson, D. A. Juyie, G. Robertson, and H. C. McDowell.	Aug. 26, 1865.
Benjamin R. Cowherd	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, General Rousseau, and late Brevet Major General W. T. Ward	Sept. 13, 1865.
Corby Coward, jr	do	Governor Bramlette, Major General Rousseau, and late Major General Ward	Sept. 13, 1865.
E. M. Clark	do	Governor Bramlette, G. S. Shanklin, L. S. Trimble, H. Grider, A. Harding, B. C. Ritter, and Hon. L. H. Rousseau.	Mar. 19, 1866.
J. B. Caplinger	Worth over $20,000	Governor Bramlette, J. B. Cochran, Z. Wheat, G. A. Armstrong, G. W. Fishback, J. T. Ballard, A. P. Hickman, G. W. Harkinson, J. L. Caldwell, J. K. Holsean, T. Wilson, Abraham Kotchlid, J. W. Williams, J. L. Atherton, C. Morton, B. F. Blackiston, S. Vannatta, T. A. Winlock, and G. W. Caplinger.	Oct. 2, 1865.
Thomas J. Chenowith	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and L. W. Andrews	Sept. 2, 1865.
John W. Cardwell	do	Governor Bramlette, G. S. Fry, and W. G. Patillow.
W. L. Crabb	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Gramlette	July 6, 1866.
Thomas J. Dean	Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, Jeff. C. Davis, brevet major general, Hon. Attorney General Speed, and W. R. Smith.	June 9, 1866.
William W. Dunlap	Student at West Point. Refused to take the oath and resigned.	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Governor Bramlette, Major General Rousseau, William L. Neale, W. L. Boice, William Davis, collector internal revenue, 5th district, and D. S. Goodloe.	Oct. 21, 1865.
R. B. Drake	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and J. F. Speed, esq	July 6, 1866.

Kentucky—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
C. B. Dobyns	Left a loyal State	Ordered by the President	Sept. 2, 1865.
Blanton Duncan	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000. Indicted for treason. Rebel blockade runner and confederate printing contractor.	Hon. Attorney General Stanberry, Governor Bramlette, Hons. G. S. Shanklin, A. Harding, B. C. Ritter, H. Grider, L. T. Trimble, James Guthrie, Garrett Davis, Thurlow Weed, N. Y., Richard Schell, N. Y., James Hughes, (Edward Kidder, James H. Chadbourn, J. Shackelford, Wilmington, N. C.,) and C. Wendell, Washington, D. C.	Oct. 12, 1866.
Benjamin F. Danley	Worth over $20,000	G. C. Smith, Rev. R. J. Breckenridge, Governors Holden and Worth	Jan. 31, 1866.
George M. Everhart	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000	Hon. Attorney General Speed, R. McP. Smith, Tenn., F. B. Fogg, Tenn., W. T. Barry, Tenn., A. M. Gazly, J. M. Armstrong, James Craik, R. J. Comsby, and L. B. Smith, all of Louisville, Ky.	June 30, 1865.
Joseph C. Frank	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, John T. Pickett, C. W. Bruce, R. H. Stanton, and John L. Scott	Sept. 28, 1866.
John W. Friddle	do	General Rousseau, Philip Speed, and T. S. Bell	Oct. 9, 1866.
George W. Figeley	do	United States Attorney B. H. Bristow, Thomas B. Fairleigh, H. S. Stites, and J. S. Phelps.	July 18, 1866.
S. H. Ford	do	Governor Bramlette and R. T. Billard	July 6, 1866.
William Field	do	Attorney General Speed and John Roberts	Oct. 16, 1865.
Thomas Field	do	do	Oct. 16, 1865.
James M. Groves	Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, C. G. Lebree, C. R. Rutherford, J. D. Christian, J. H. Lowry, B. T. Perkins, J. G. Hollingsworth, H. C. Petree, T. T. B. Barney, M. S. Coutter, J. A. McReynolds, Frank H. Bristow, L. R. I. Shuff, E. B. Edwards, and T. McGiven.	Apr. 7, 1866.
Grandison G. Goodwin	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, B. S. Campbell, J. H. Caldwell, James S. Phelps, William H. Davis, G. Spratt, and William Terry.	Apr. 7, 1866.
Lewis W. Garth	do do	Governor Bramlette, B. S. Campbell, J. H. Caldwell, James S. Phelps, William A. Davis, G. Spratt, and William Terry.	Apr. 7, 1866.
S. Gray	Member of so-called council of the provisional government of Kentucky.	Governor Bramlette	Nov. 17, 1865.
W. D. Gilmore	Left a loyal State	do	Oct. 26, 1865.
William P. Grayson	do	Governor Bramlette, Attorney General Speed, Arch. Dixon, John Young Brown, S. B. Vance, Judge Charles Eaves, W. H. Delano, F. E. Walker, C. M. Pennel, Jackson McClain, M. Yeaman, B. P. Cissell, H. Yeaman, James T. Clay, A. T. Dudley, W. W. Cutton, deputy sheriff; E. D. McBrid, jailer; Adam Rankin, clerk of court; W. S. Hicks, J. H. Howell, T. Sapiess, J. C. Stapp, W. S. Holloway, W. A. Hopkins, D. Banks, C. H. Johnson, C. Bailey, W. R. Lancaster, H. Dixon, John McBride, D. P. Lockett, J. B Vaughan, T. J. Johnson, P. H. Hillzer, J. D. Hughes, Sol. S. Seizemore, C. H. C.; S. W. Rankin, G. D. Posey, P. H. Lockett, S. Young, E. R. Moore, J. F. Meyer, G. A. Mager, John McCullugh; Geo. Syne, C. W. Hutchins, R. Dixon, John J. Berry, S. J. Alves, P. B. Matthews, T. F. Cheney, L. G. Taylor, B. C. Redford, Thomas B. Young, Jo. Dixon, James M. Callender, R. Stiles, J. S. Taylor, J. G. Holloway, W. B. Woodruff, J. Johnson, J. H. Butler, J. B. Hart, P. A. Blackwell, D. Hart, S. Nelson, W. J. Marshall, James Alves, J. O. Cheney, J. R. Dixon, J. E. Fagan, S. P. Smith, J. F. Jones, B. P. Green, M. L. Hicks, J. Held, jr., J. Held, sr., William Steele, A. T. Leslie, P. Thompson, H. P. S. Knight, E. Atkins, I. B. Walker, W. J. Payne, G. E. Funk, J. P. Breckenridge, N. C. Perry, George S Morris, C. B. Tolman, W. P. Fowler, S. W. Powell, and George M. Priert.	Jan. 27, 1866.
I. B. Green	do	Governor Bramlette	Aug. 25, 1865.

Frank Gorm, jr	Violation of oath	Charles G. Wintusmith	Sept. 2, 1865.
Alvin Hughes	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette and Major General Palmer	Apr. 21, 1866.
Daniel Hagar	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and S. H. Ford	July 6, 1866.
T. H. Hunt	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed	Aug. 24, 1865.
H. J. Hudder, jr	do	do	Aug. 8, 1865.
A. G. Hawes	do	do	June 12, 1865.
James A. Hoge	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Governor Bramlette, William L. Vance, E. J. Polk, T. J. Polk, J. L. Smeadley, James E. Thompson, Charles A. Hardin, J. H. Fairman, W. M. Tomlinson, James Harlin, jr., W. T. Curry, C. S. Abell, Richard Board, B. S. Hardin, R. P. McGrath, and Robert Alexander.	July 11, 1866.
James Hemaker	Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, Captains William King and T. J. Sowards, Commander John Dills, jr., officers of the late 39th Kentucky volunteers. The following are non-commissioned officers and privates of same regiment: D. B. Coleman, J. W. Hale, J. Farmer, W. C. W. Sowards, Fred. Charles, D. Newson, T. W. Rose, S. Newson, D. Newson, R. Little, P. H. Vaughan, L. Thannberg, W. R. Dotran, G. Bennett, James Baly, Hiram Lambert, M. McCoy, H. S. Carter, Rhodes Medd, H. C. H. Daniels. Hibbins Williamson, clerk court; S. K. Dana, clerk court; Thomas Johnson, jailer.	Aug. 28, 1865.
Mrs. Kitty G. Hill	Worth over $20,000	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Governor Bramlette, and A. D. Hunt	May 4, 1866.
Larkin Harried	Indicted for treason	Ordered by the President	July 6, 1866.
William Hayes, M. D	Left a loyal State	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
John W. Headley	Left a loyal State and a Canada raider	G. D. Prentice and John Barbee	Sept. 2, 1865.
Henry Hart	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000	Ordered by the President	Sept. 9, 1865.
James B. Hawkins	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and John E. Hawkins	May 31, 1865.
C. A. Hawkins	do	W. J. Hawkins	Sept. 5, 1865.
Richard Hawes	Rebel provisional governor of Kentucky. Left a loyal State.	Hon. Garrett Davis, C. N. Hawes, and E. M. Bruce	Sept. 2, 1865.
S. K. Hays	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette	Nov. 9, 1865.
I. G. Hunter	do	J. W. Finnell	Sept. 2, 1865.
Lemuel S. Hardin	do	Governor Bramlette	Oct. 24, 1866.
Edwin J. Hall	Worth over $20,000. Left a loyal State	Attorney General, General Rousseau, D. Thurston, and H. J. Stiles	Dec. 19, 1865.
William Jennings	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette	Sept. 13, 1865.
C. F. Johnson	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, A. D. Hunt, and J. F. Speed	June 27, 1865.
James C. Johnson	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed	July 22, 1865.
William Johnson	do	do	July 22, 1865.
George M. Jessie	do	Hons. L. S. Trimble, G. S. Shanklin, James Guthrie, L. Rousseau, Garret Davis, W. A. Perry, J. P. Ellis, D. L. Luckett, J. N. Webb, M. B. Luesien, George T. Hunsten, R. B. Gray, M. Murphy, William Forquer, J. M. Jones, Frank Gross, Ben. B. Gray, J. N. Webb, John Corbin, sr., W. J. Wright, W. H. Moody, B. L. Owens, J. R. Benjamin, Thomas S. Haydon, David Fitzgerald, George C. Caslinan, E. M. Drane, and C. T. Chilton.	May 11, 1866.
William P. Johnston	do	Ordered by the President	Apr. 2, 1866.
A. H. Kerr	Worth over $20,000	J. E. Merriman, William M. Farrington, E. W. McKing, J. M. Hill, and F. S. Richards	Aug. 31, 1865.
Alexander Kirkland	Left a loyal State	Governor Pierpont, of Virginia, B. B. Woodson, and William T. Johnson	Sept. 2, 1866.
Philip Lee	do	P. B. Muir, M. C. Taylor, and W. H. Hays	June 21, 1865.
H. B. Lyon	Graduate of West Point and rebel brig. general	Hon. L. S. Trimble and F. H. Skinner	June 11, 1866
W. M. Lackey	Worth over $20,000	Governor Bramlette, Rev. R. J. Breckenridge, J. F. Speed, Henry Pirtle, J. M. Armstrong, John Cowan, H. P. Bosley, G. Rice, Benjamin Bell, T. E. Quisenberry, J. A. Jacobs, James Smith, A. R. McKee, O. Beatty, L. H. Ralston, John W. Irwin, J. M. Cardwell, W. B. Edelen, S. P. Barbee, R. P. Jacobs, W. R. Orien, James Kinnard, S. S. M. Roberts, G. M. Welsh, Thomas W. Vernon, John C. Cooper, G. McRoberts, M. D., J. S. Lytle, R. Carron, J. R. Warren, A. G. Huffman, W. B. Berry, W. F. Evans, and E. B. Caldwell, sheriff of Lincoln county.	July 6, 1866.

Kentucky—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By who a recommended.	Date of pardon.
Sanford Lyne	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and Major General John M. Palmer	Sept. 11, 1865.
Isaac Landes	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Major General Palmer, James F. Buckner, John P. Ritter, John B. Gowen, sup't freedman, Judge H. M. Littell, James O. Ellis, H. A. Phelps, John M. Gowan, R. L. Grissam, R. H. Kelley, H. W. Kelley, D. M. Claggett, E. A. Starling, county attorney, J. I. Lander, John M. Carroll, sheriff, and Benjamin C. Welch.	Apr. 13, 1866.
John D. Morris	Left a loyal State. Rebel bank agent	Governor Bramlette, James F. Buckner, A. L. Jones, and James P. Flint	July 17, 1865.
Robert K. Moore	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette and W. C. Whittaker, late major general U. S. volunteers	July 6, 1866.
J. L. McDowell	Indicted for treason	Hon. Attorney General Speed, late Lieutenant Colonel A. S. Boylers, D. M. Nelson, Duval English, major eleventh Kentucky cavalry, Thomas H. Ritchey, J. P. Orr, jr., J. B. English, R. S. Beck, James P. Orr, P. M., Sheriff J. M. Brown, M. S. Montgomery, R. H. Buckley, J. P. Ellis, R. B. Gray, M. Murphey, J. W. Barham, J. N. Caplinger, and George C. Cassleman.	June 13, 1866.
J. S. McDowell	....do
E. V. McDowell	....do
Warren Mitchel	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000	Hon. Attorney General Speed and Joshua Hill	July 3, 1865.
J. A. Munday	Left a loyal State	A. J. Ballard, Hon. James Guthrie, and G. P. Arbegust	June 28, 1865.
Edward Miller	....do	Hons. Attorney General Speed, A. J. Ballard, L. Rousseau, M. J. Grul, W. D. Gallagher, Philip Speed, George D. Prentice, and A. Guthrie Cooke.	June 28, 1865.
H. L. Meriwether	....do	Governor Bramlette	Oct. 17, 1865.
C. J. Murray	....do	Governor Bramlette and Attorney General	Apr. 19, 1866.
B. S. Murray	....do	....do	Apr. 19, 1866.
William T. Marshall	....do	Hon. Attorney General Stanbery	Nov. 25, 1866.
C. C. Morgan	....do	Governor Bramlette, Isaac Caldwell, and A. D. Hunt	July 26, 1865.
Alexander G. Morgan	....do	Attorney General Speed	July 22, 1865.
George R. Miller	....do	J. J. Ballard, Major General Rousseau, W. D. Gallagher, Philip Speed, and George D. Prentice.	June 28, 1865.
R. M. Martin	Left a loyal State and rebel raider	Governor Bramlette and E. Rumsey Wing	Sept. 19, 1866.
J. B. McMillin	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, P. H. Leslie, and M. S. Reynolds	Dec. 28, 1866.
J. H. D. McKee	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, Judge J. H. Hickman, O. C. Egbert, George W. Mathews, R. M. Kercheval, C. H. Fenwick, M. V. Royally, B. S. Meyers, J. L. McGinis, Wiley Searcy, John Druffen, W. H. Sneed, M. Searcy, D. D. Wilson, W. M. Searcy, and K. Brown.	July 11, 1865.
James McFall	....do	Governor Bramlette and Major General Palmer	Sept. 11, 1865.
George S. Morris	Left a loyal State. Worth over $20,000	T. P. Smith, Governor Bramlette, B. B. Muir, and T. S. Bell; also Attorney General	Apr. 4, 1866.
Robert C. Nunnelley	Left a loyal State	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Squire Turner, R. White, R. Russell, J. W. Carpenter, C. F. Burnham, P. P. Ballard, D. Breck, C. Field, Green Clay, T. Emlercy, A. B. Lyman, R. C. Nunnelley, R. G. Burton, E. H. Field, David Russell, S. S. Parker, C. C. Ball, S. P. Wallers, B. Cronke, G. B. Turley, N. Parish, W. Walker, T. H. Embry, T. W. Bust, C. Kurtz, E. H. Field, E. S. Shakerford, jr., J. W. Crook, S. F. Emby, W. G. Briggerstaff, L. E. Francis, John Scott, J. Y. Estill, W. M. Ballard, Richard White, of Nashville; James C. Caldwell, and Joseph Jones.	May 26, 1866.
James T. Neal	....do	Hon. Attorney General Speed	Nov. 20, 1865.
John C. Noble	....do	Hon. Attorney General Stanberry and L. S. Trimble, M. C.	Dec. 27, 1866.
George W. Owen	Indicted for treason. Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, J. H. Langsford, C. M. Harwood, J. A. Middleton, J. W. Owen, L. W. Smith, W. H. Bell, D. Harbinson, W. R. Smith, Pulaski Ellingwood, William Stanbery, H. Frazier, Thomas Welles, M. C. Taylor, J. R. Duping, R. B. Winlock, J. S.	June 16, 1866.

		Roberts, S. H. Ellingwood, William McFadden, John A. Middleton, jr., Erazmus Frazier, W. M. Sharrard, Gordon Wallace, J. W. Robb, and William C. Bullock.
V. B. O'Neal	Left a loyal State	Hon. Attorney General	Nov. 1, 1866.
Walter Overton	do	Governor Bramlette	July 31, 1865.
Thomas Pike	do	United States Attorney B. H. Bristow and L. W. Cowell	July 18, 1866.
James S. Peak	Worth over $20,000	Major General Rousseau	Sept. 27, 1865.
John R. Proctor	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette	July 6, 1866.
A. H. Price	do	Governor Bramlette, late Major General E. H. Hobson, A. H. Price, Hon. G. C. Smith.	Sept. 15, 1865.
J. R. Price	do
John M. Johnson	do	General Rousseau and Hon. R. W. Johnson	Sept. 9, 1865.
James R. Price	do	Hon. Attorney General, Governor Bramlette, James Simpson, and Harmson Thomson	Jan. 27, 1865.
Henry Pelham	do	Governor Bramlette	July 6, 1866.
W. W. Parker	do	Hon. Attorney General	July 6, 1866.
James I. Peak, sr.	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 17, 1865.
Richard Potts	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, L. H. Rousseau, major general; W. L. Neale, W. R. Proice, M. L. Rice, and Willard Davis.	Oct. 21, 1865.
Jno. Powell and David Powell	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason.	Governor Bramlette, Judge Daniel Gannon, Wm. King, Lieutenant James M. Thornburg, Captain T. J. Sowards, O. C. Bawels, 39th Kentucky, A. Williams, T. J. Owens, Jonathan Gannon, L. C. Dils, J. R. Mann, Thos. Johnson, Lieutenant Jas. H. Stremp, Jno. Damron, H. M. Dougherty, George Strump, William Swords, Lieutenant Colonel S. M. Ferguson, and Colonel Jno. Dils, jr., late of the 39th Kentucky volunteers.	Sept. 19, 1865.
Wm. D. Reed and Booker Reed	Left a loyal State	T. B. Cochran, late lieutenant colonel 3d cavalry, United States volunteers, W. T. Ward, late brevet major general of volunteers, J. B. Cochran, J. H. Ward, and W. P. Boone.	Dec. 24, 1865.
J. E. Rankin	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed	June 27, 1865.
A. K. Richards	do	Governor Bramlette, Major General Rousseau, J. F. Robinson, S. F. Gano, W. C. Goodloe, Rev. R. S. Breckenridge, and Hon. Attorney General Speed.	Sept. 8, 1865.
C. H. Rochester	do	J. F. Speed and G. A. Caldwell	July 5, 1865.
D. Howard Smith	do	Hon. Attorney General Stanbery and Hon. L. H. Rousseau	Dec. 3, 1866.
W. R. Smith	Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette and Major General Jeff. C. Davis	June 9, 1866.
S. B. Shipp	Left a loyal State	Attorney General Speed	Aug. 15, 1865.
A. M. Sea	do	Governor Bramlette and R. H. Stanton	Aug. 26, 1866.
Chas. J. Steritt	do	Governor Bramlette and A. G. Hodges	Aug. 8, 1865.
Theophilus Steele	do	Attorney General Speed and Rev. R. J. Breckenridge	Aug 11, 1865.
Robert Tyler	do	J. F. Speed	Feb. 20, 1866.
John Tutt	do	Governor Bramlette	May 3, 1865.
W. H. Turkington	do	Samuel Hoard, J. W. Muell, A. Grannis, M. Morrison, J. H. Brown, D. B. Fisk, Lyon Healy, S. M. Fassette, J. M. Stuart, Joseph Taylor.	July 6, 1866.
Phil. B. Thompson	do	Governor Bramlette, J. D. Hardin, J. W. Cardwell, J. G. Keyle, W. T. Curry, Jas. E. Thompson, C. H. Spilman, R. F. Vandeffer, Wm. Frailions, Richard Figg, C. S. Abell, D. W. Thompson, A. G. Keyle, and James Taylor.	Sept. 2, 1865.
M. M. Yeager	do	S. B. Cox, Hiram Wallingford, J. P. F. C., Jno. M. Harbeson, and W. T. Dudley	Sept. 2, 1865.
Amos R. Taylor	do	Governor Bramlette	Sept. 11, 1865.
Alexander Utley	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, A. P. Cochran, and Ward & Son	June 20, 1866.
Lewis M. Vanmeter and Jno. M. Vanmeter.	Worth over $20,000. Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette, A. S. Allen, Charles Edgington, and G. Clay Smith	Sept. 21, 1865.
J. W. Valentine	Left a loyal State	General Rousseau, R. Rodes, Wm. V. Loving, W. E. Hobson, A. W. Graham, S. A. Barclay, C. E. Bennett, P. J. Potter A. G. Hobson, Jno. Loving, Alex. Pyler, G. G. Potter, W. J. Hobson, J. M. Lyler, J. L. Shower, P. Thomas, P. Hines.	July 6, 1866.
W. C. D. Whips	Indicted for treason	J. G. Baret, W. C. Hite, G. L. Talbot, Colonel T. B. Fairleigh, G. Ballard, A. D. Hunt	Aug. 8, 1865.
J. F. Witherspoon	Left a loyal State	Governor Bramlette	Sept. 11, 1865.
Franklin Williamson	Left a loyal State. Indicted for treason	Governor Bramlette, Colonel John Dills, jr., Captain W. King, Lieutenants Stump and	Sept. 19, 1865.

Kentucky—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
		Thornburg, late of the 39th Kentucky volunteers, Dan. Garnon, T. J. Owens, L. Soward, F. J. Sowards, D. B. Colman, D. Coleman, J. M. Hurley, Franklin King, J. V. Mullins, L. C. Detz, A. J. Breeding, H. Lambert, J. Hatfield, U. McCoy, J. F. Stafford, S. R. Hurley, J. M. Francis, R. Dotran, P. M. Prater, W. Hurly, E. Collins, C. Luster, all privates and non-commissioned officers of the 39th Kentucky volunteers.
J. H. Wolfe	Left a loyal State	Hon. Attorney General Stanbery and D. Howard Smith	Aug. 2, 1865.
Jno. C. Wall	do	L. S. Trimble, G. S. Shanklin, A. Harding, and B. E. Ritter	Aug. 27, 1866.
Moses Webster	do	Governor Bramlette, S. G. Burbridge, and S. W. Price, late colonel 21st Kentucky	July 6, 1866.
D. W. Vandell	do	Russell Houston	Sept. 2, 1865.

LOUISIANA.

Elizabeth Adams	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Apr. 10, 1866.
Wm. D. Anderson	do	do	Apr. 10, 1866.
R. W. Adams	Ex-United States and rebel surveyor of the port of New Orleans.	do	July 11, 1865.
Bernard Avegno	Worth over $20,000	do	May 29, 1866.
Mrs. Olivia Andrews	do	do	Dec. 5, 1865.
John Andrews	do	do	Mar. 12, 1866.
D. D. Avery	do	do	Sept. 25, 1865.
John Adger	do	do	Oct. 26, 1865.
J. T. R. Allen	do	Attorney General Speed	Sept. 8, 1865.
R. E. Amis	do	Governor Wells	Oct. 31, 1865.
Mrs. Henrietta Amis	do	do	Oct. 31, 1865.
R. T. Buckner	do	do	June 15, 1866.
C. J. Barstow	Rebel railroad agent	Governor Wells and James Dixon	Aug. 26, 1866.
A. Boudurant	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Apr. 23, 1866.
H. Boudurant	do	do	Apr. 23, 1866.
Joseph D. Bryan	do	do	Apr. 21, 1866.
Joseph N. Bryan	do	do	Apr. 21, 1866.
J. N. Bringham	Rebel receiver	do	Nov. 6, 1865.
J. S. Barry	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
A. W. Bosworth	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
H. J. G. Battle	Rebel depositary	Governor Wells, A. H. Lenard, Samuel Wells, C. W. Lewis, Thomas S. Lard, George Williams, and J. I. Weems.	Aug. 26, 1865.
A. T. Bowie	Worth over $20,000	Hon. Reverdy Johnson	Nov. 2, 1865.
Wm. J. Briscoe	do	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
John Boudurant	do	do	Dec. 5, 1865.
E. Bowman	do	do	Nov. 2, 1865.
Sarah A. Biggs	do	Governor Wells and W. L. Sharkey	Feb. 5, 1866.
Adele Browder	do	Attorney General Speed	Aug. 19, 1865.

T. C. Bethell	do	By order of the President	Aug. 16, 1865.
L. A. Bringier	do	Governor Wells	Oct. 10, 1865.
William A. Bisland	do	do	Oct. 13, 1865.
Sheperd Brown	Left a loyal district, and worth over $20,000	do	Aug. 26, 1865.
W. F. Bledsoe	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
W. C. Black	Rebel chief of foreign supply office	do	Sept. 21, 1865.
Joseph Bensadon	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Nov. 24, 1865.
Thomas L. Bague	Worth over $20,000	Hon. J. A. Rozier and J. N. Lee	Oct. 20, 1866.
A. E. Buss	do	Governor Wells	Apr. 19, 1866.
W. N. Buck	do	do	Apr. 10, 1866.
Matilda J. Bowie	do	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
Euclid Borland	do	do	Apr. 26, 1866.
James Bowman	do	do	Apr. 10, 1866.
Charles J. Bowman	do	do	Apr. 10, 1866.
B. T. K. Bennett	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Apr. 17, 1866.
Louis Buck	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Nov. 6, 1865.
W. A. Broadwell	Worth over $20,000	J. B. Douglas, R. S. Dodd, J. H. Waugh, John F. Baker, Hon. John Hogan, C. B. Brown, and Austin A. King, (citizens of Missouri.)	Aug. 23, 1866.
J. P. Broadwell	do		Aug. 23, 1866.
J. L. Cowan	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Wells	Oct. 12, 1865.
J. D. Conn	Worth over $20,000	do	April 4, 1866.
George W. Campbell	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Aug. 11, 1865.
J. B. Chandler	Worth over $20,000	do	April 17, 1866.
Philemon Chew	Rebel agent to collect cotton	do	Dec. 5, 1865.
George Connelly	Worth over $20,000	Major General Canby	April 4, 1866.
C. M. Conrad	Member of rebel congress	J. P. Sullivan	July 6, 1866.
L. L. Conrad	Worth over $20,000	do	July 6, 1866.
Charles A. Conrad	do	do	July 6, 1866.
A. Condroy	Rebel tax collector	Governor Wells	Oct. 21, 1865.
John Chaffe	Rebel funding agent	do	Oct. 6, 1865.
Robert Colon	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Wells, H. Johnson, W. L. Collinsworth, John Gullath, J. Conger, Henry Bryant, M. Johnson, J. J. Pestridge, W. C. Wallace, Allen J. Smith, J. Y. Allen, J. H. Hill, E. C. Kidd, Fred. Hamilton, J. E. Hamlett, C. Ives, and I. J. Sims.	Oct. 4, 1865.
Theodore Chachere	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Wells, Thomas C. Anderson, Elbert Gautt, and N. Jenkins	Sept. 18, 1865.
J. W. Capron	Rebel tax collector	Governor Wells and J. E. Wallace	Oct. 28, 1865.
A. P. Cleaveland	Left a loyal district	T. J. Dix, Thomas Shoo, W. G. Wheeler, and J. Burke	July 3, 1865.
James W. Collier	Rebel receiver	Governor Wells and John A. Watkins	Aug. 14, 1865.
L. Crandall	Left a loyal district	Thomas Cottman	June 4, 1865.
John M. Cannon	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Oct. 12, 1865.
James Callihan	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	April 21, 1866.
Charles J. Carney	do	do	Dec. 5, 1865.
A. Cammack	Rebel agent to Europe, and worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, H. W. Taylor, J. G. Belden, B. L. Lynch, John Armstrong, J. Morgan Hall, John L. Lee, A. S. Mansfield, and A. C. Graham.	Sept. 15, 1865.
Mary W. B. Conner	Worth over $20 000	Rev. A. C. Kerr	Sept. 6, 1865.
Mrs. Eliza A. Cochran	do	Governor Wells	Sept. 5, 1865.
D. R. Carroll	do	do	Oct. 13, 1865.
William Cloman	do	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
Jos. W. Carroll	do	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Sept. 18, 1865.
D. S. Cage	do	Governor Wells and James S. Hamilton	Sept. 18, 1865.
A. G. Cage	do	do	Sept. 18, 1865.
Mrs. C. Carson	do	Hon. F. P. Blair	Nov. 4, 1865.
J. R. Carwell	Left a loyal district	Governor Wells	June 11, 1866.
John Davidson	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and G. A. Pierce	May 9, 1866.

Louisiana—Continued.

Name	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
E. C. Davidson	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, Randell Hunt, and Captain F. H. Marsh	July 5, 1866.
S. H. Davis	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property.	Governor Wells	Oct. 4, 1865.
W. H. Dameron	Left a loyal district	Governor Wells, G. Burk, and J. P. Harrison	Sept. 18, 1865.
Alexander Dimitry	Rebel chief of the finance bureau of the post office department.	Hon. J. Holt	Aug. 8, 1865.
P. H. Dieffenwierth	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
S. P. Duncan	do	General Grant	July 11, 1865.
J. D. Dameron	do	H. Kennedy and Thomas Cottman	Oct. 9, 1865.
H. R. Doyal	do	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Aug. 31, 1865.
M. Emonet	Rebel postmaster	Governor Wells, B. Girard, N. O. Noblon, Albert Voorhies, John Ray, D. Marquese, and North, Guthil & Co.	Oct. 4, 1865.
William A. Elmore	Ex-United States and rebel superintendent of the mint.	Thomas Cottman	Aug. 2, 1865.
Charles N. Ealer	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Wells, Charles O. Hardy, and Thomas C. Anderson	July 6, 1866.
W. H. Edrington	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Nov. 6, 1865.
E. D. Fenner	Left a loyal district, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	do	Sept. 21, 1865.
George Foster	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Feb. 23, 1866.
W. H. Foster	do	Governor Wells and Samuel Henderson	April 27, 1866.
Robert T. Ford	Left a loyal State	Attorney General Speed	April 19, 1866.
J. E. Fagot	Left a loyal district	Governor Wells, A. Philips, O. Morel, E. W. Huntington, D. Augustin, F. A. Woolfley, and J. S. Whitaker.	Sept. 18, 1865.
Emily A. Ferriday	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	April 4, 1866.
George Folsom	do	do	Dec. 13, 1865.
C. R. Fassitt	do	Senator Saulsbury, of Delaware	Feb. 15, 1866.
D. S. Fontenot	do	Governor Wells	Aug. 26, 1865.
Thomas P. Frith	do	do	July 3, 1865.
C. Fellows	do	Attorney General Speed	Oct. 18, 1865.
John Fox	do	do	Sept. 29, 1865.
D. R. Fox	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property	Governor Wells, A. Robinson, S. Brulard, Charles Brulard, D. B. Wilkinson, E. Debbois, Lne. Dobard, John L. Titus, S. Soulant, S. Docard.	Oct. 4, 1865.
W. A. Feret	Worth over $20,000	J. O. Harrison and W. T. Withers	Sept. 21, 1865.
Henry W. Farley	do	Governor Wells	Oct. 6, 1865.
A. Glenn	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property.	do	Sept. 21, 1865.
William H. Gayle	Clerk of rebel court	do	Jan. 26, 1866.
Maurice Grivot	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells and E. Roselius	Dec. 30, 1865.
Thomas M. Gatlin	Worth over $20,000	Albert Voorhies and E. Roselius	Nov. 26, 1866.
T. Gibson	do	Attorney General Stanbery	Sept. 25, 1866.
Charles R. Griswold	do	Governor Wells and James L. Wemmas	May 15, 1866.
J. Geisinburg	Rebel coroner, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Wells	Sept. 11, 1865.
Henry Ginder	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	By order of the President	Sept. 8, 1865.
James M. Gillespie	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
George V. Gilmer	do	do	Dec. 29, 1865.
Thomas M. Gilmer	do	do	Oct. 9, 1865.

R. Y. Graves	....do	Governor Wells, H. Kilpatrick, James I. Wemms, and Thomas N. Brown	Aug. 26, 1865.
Adam Griffin	Rebel cotton agent, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Aug. 30, 1865.
S. L. Gibson	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, L. V. Reeves, and G. W. Williams	April 21, 1866.
A. J. Guivot	Assistant treasurer of the rebel government	Governor Wells, J. N. Lea, J. S. Whitaker, and J. Ad. Rosier	Aug. 2, 1865.
A. S. Huntington	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, S. E. Parsins, provisional Governor of Alabama, and James L. Bliss	April 17, 1866.
William R. Hynes	....do	Fussell Houston	Nov. 5, 1866.
A. H. Harris	Rebel district attorney	Governor Wells	Aug. 26, 1865.
J. P. Harrison	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells, Hon. J. Holt, Samuel H. Forrey, and J. Ad. Rosier	Aug. 8, 1865.
Samuel Henderson	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property.	Governor Wells	Sept. 21, 1865.
Thomas Henderson	....do	....do	Sept. 21, 1865.
J. Y. Hollingsworth	Worth over $20,000	....do	April 30, 1866.
F. H. Hatch	Ex-United States and rebel collector of customs for the port of New Orleans.	Governor Wells, R. K. Howell, J. N. Lea, and J. Q. A. Fellows	Aug. 14, 1865.
A. H. Hopkins	Left a loyal district	Governor Wells	April 4, 1866.
John L. Hodges	Worth over $20,000	....do	April 21, 1866.
Hawes Harris	....do	John W. Finnell	Sept. 8, 1865.
Henry M. Hyams	....do	....do	Sept. 30, 1865.
James Hewitt	....do	Attorney General Speed	Oct. 23, 1865.
J. D. Hill	....do	Thomas Cottman, State agent	July 31, 1865.
Louis Heyleger	....do	By order of the President	Feb. 21, 1866.
George W. Huntington	....do	Governor Wells	Nov. 3, 1865.
Southey Hays	....do	....do	Dec. 5, 1865.
C. C. Herrington	Surgeon of the privateer York	....do	July 6, 1866.
Mrs. C. D. Hodge	Worth over $20,000	....do	Dec. 13, 1865.
J. F. Harrison	....do	....do	Dec. 5, 1865.
John M. Huger	Rebel receiver	William H. Hunt and Governor Wells	April 17, 1866.
James C. Jones	....do	Governor Wells	April 21, 1866.
Joshua James	....do	....do	April 30, 1866.
A. H. Jordan	....do	....do	April 30, 1866.
R. M. Johnson	....do	Albert Voorhies, William R. Whitaker, Jacob Barker, W. F. C. King, and E. Roulins	Oct. 18, 1866.
Allen Jones	....do	Governor Wells	April 4, 1866.
Cheny Johnson	....do	By order of the President	Mar. 25, 1866.
B. Jacobs	....do	Albert Voorhies, James I. Weems, G. W. Dilliard, and Martin Talby	Nov. 26, 1866.
E. Jacobs	....do	....do	Nov. 26, 1866.
Mayfield Johnson	Rebel tax collector	Governor Wells, Ed. E. Kidd, G. Kahn, J. G. Allen, E. R. Cage, Ollen Smith, James E. Hamlett, H. W. Showard, H. C. Staten, J. C. Bridger, W. J. Allen, William F. Clark, L. R. Kavanaugh, John Gullott, J. Conger, H. Bryant, E. J. Chatham, William H. B. Smith, W. J. Hood, Jim Johnson, H. S. Collingsworth, R. Colan, E. E. Andrews, Jas. M. Allen, W. V. Britt, Fred. Hamilton, W. T. Kidd, and C. Ives	Oct. 26, 1865.
J. B. Johnson	Rebel postmaster	Governor Wells	Sept. 29, 1865.
Mrs. Anna M. Jennings	Proceedings commenced for confiscation, and worth over $20,000.	....do	Nov. 10, 1865.
Charles Jones	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, James G. Taliaferro, and Hon. John Ray	April 4, 1866.
George L. Kouns	Proceedings commenced for confiscation, and worth over $20,000.	William M. Daily, special agent Post Office Department	June 14, 1866.
Hollen C. Key	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and Major General Granger	June 28, 1866.
R. Rufus King	....do	Governor Wells	April 30, 1866.
J. P. Koffskey	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property.	....do	April 17, 1866.
Jean Kouns	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Mar. 25, 1866.
Ben. B. Kouns	....do	....do	Mar. 25, 1866.
D. F. Kinner	....do	Silas F. Miller	Oct. 4, 1865.

Louisiana—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
Richard King	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Sept. 1, 1866.
John E. King	Rebel commissioner	Governor Wells	Aug. 29, 1865.
Hugh S. Kennedy	Rebel assessor of war tax	do	Nov. 3, 1865.
T. H. Kennedy	Left a loyal district, and comptroller of the treasury agency of the trans-Mississippi department.	do	Sept. 5, 1865.
J. J. Kline	Rebel receiver for the court	Governor Wells, J. H. Kilpatrick, J. I. Weems, Thomas H. Morris, and R. C. Cummings	Aug. 26, 1865.
Mrs. Jane Kempe	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
Alex. D. Kelley	do	H. Kennedy and Thomas Cottman	Oct. 6, 1865.
B. S. Keene	do	Attorney General Speed	July 21, 1865.
W. B. Keene	do	do	July 21, 1865.
H. P. Kermochan	Aiding the rebellion	Governor Wells	Dec. 14, 1865.
Frances Lurges	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Apr. 17, 1866.
M. Lattier	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and J. I. Weems	June 11, 1866.
A. J. Lowry	do	Governor Wells and Russell Houston	Apr. 3, 1865.
S. Levy, jr	do	By order of the President	Mar. 25, 1866.
B. F. Logan	do	Governor Wells and James I. Weems	June 11, 1866.
J. Lenabard	Left a loyal district	Governor Wells	May 9, 1866.
T. C. Littell	Rebel collector of State taxes	Governor Wells, Thomas C. Anderson, Elbert Gantt, N. Jenkins, and B. A. Martel	July 13, 1865.
Stephen D. Linton	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Dec. 19, 1865.
Louis Lay	Blockade runner, and worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, A. E. Rignon, H. Kloppenburg, J. Thomkill, B. F. Sneketts, M. J. Newman, Newman Murphy, A. M. Buchanan, J. Crawford, L. N. Tanny, P. B. O'Brien, W. W. Wilson, and Henry Degruy.	Sept. 5, 1865.
T. P. Leathers	Worth over $20,000	Major General L. Thomas	July 26, 1865.
Robert W. Lusher	Rebel tax collector, commissioner of the rebel court, and marshal of the district.	Governor Wells	Sept. 2, 1865.
James H. Low	Registered enemy of the United States, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Morgan, New York	Oct. 2, 1865.
S. L. Levy	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Nov. 13, 1865.
Ezra Levy	do	do	Sept. 14, 1865.
John Lords	do	Attorney General Speed and E. M. Sheild	Oct. 24, 1865.
Charles Lords	do	do	Oct. 24, 1865.
T. Landry	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property, and worth over 20,000.	Governor Wells, Robert B. Jones, John H. Hesley, and W. H. Hyman	Oct. 21, 1865.
Ambrose Lecompte	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Apr. 21, 1866.
John L. Lobdell	do	do	Apr. 21, 1866.
Annie M. Marshall	do	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
Thomas H. Mortis	do	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
Philip Maher	do	do	Apr. 3, 1865.
Sarah Morris	do	do	Apr. 10, 1866.
J. W. Montgomery	do	By order of the President	Sept. 26, 1866.
John W. Montgomery	do	Governor Wells	Apr. 10, 1866.
J. T. Munroe	Left a loyal district	By order of the President	Apr. 26, 1866.
J. B. Mathews	Rebel receiver	Governor Wells	Feb. 21, 1866.

H. D. Manderville	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and Major General Granger	June 28, 1866.
John Mullan	do	Governor Wells	Apr. 23, 1866.
Philip A. Mullan	do	do	Apr. 23, 1866.
Dennis A. Mullan	do	do	Apr. 23, 1866.
S. McC. Montgomery	do	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Nov. 20, 1865.
H. W. Montgomery	Proceedings commenced for confiscation, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Wells and H. Bonney	July 11, 1865.
E. T. Merrick	Rebel judge, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Wells, Mayor Kennedy, and Hon. C. Rozelius	July 25, 1865.
W. C. Maples	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, F. D. Wimbuly, J. D. Watkins, J. T. Hayes, J. J. Carter, J. W. McDonald, S. G. McKennie, W. S. Hadley, A. J. Reynolds, J. H. Murrell, C. S. Smith, William Hardy, T. B. Neal, J. D. Harper, J. P. Smith, J. W. Quarles, John F. Tompkins, John Chaffey, and D. Lacey.	Sept. 11, 1865.
John L. McCauley	Foreign agent of the rebel government, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Wells, H. W. Taylor, Albert Cammack, B. L. Lynch, Thos. C. Herndon, Hudson Grimes, J. Morgan Hull, John C. Ricks, John L. Lea, John Armstrong, A. C. Graham, A. S. Mansfield, James Syme, N. P. Noblom.	Sept. 15, 1865.
Thomas D. Marshall	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Apr. 17, 1866.
J. L. Manning	do	Governor Wells and Mayor Kennedy	Oct. 28, 1865.
Robert Mott	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells, C. Burritt, H. Kennedy, John Chapman, William McKim, William S. Pike, Thomas Ripps, John A. Stevenson, W. M. Perkins, Samuel M. Todd, G. Sontag, A. Harris, John H. Ludwysen, M. T. N. Robinson, A. Wallace Hunter, J. G. Hirdes, G. M. Morrison, T. N. Blash, J. G. Dunlap, and Thomas Cupps.	Sept. 18, 1865.
R. C. Mott	Civil officer	Governor Wells	Nov. 15, 1865.
H. C. Miller	Rebel attorney for the district of Louisiana	Governor Wells, C. Rozelius, William H. Hunt, and M. Blair	July 25, 1865.
A. Millspaugh	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Wells, Charles Smith, J. C. White, H. Millspaugh, George W. Ames, T. M. Wells, naval officer United States custom-house, and W. Taliaferro, postmaster, New Orleans.	July 31, 1865.
Thomas C. Manning	Rebel receiver	Governor Wells	Aug. 29, 1865.
James Marks	Worth over $20,000	do	Mar. 30, 1866.
C. H. Morrison	do	do	Mar. 29, 1866.
N. M. Marks	do	Governor Wells, J. H. Kilpatrick, T. N. Braden, Philo Alden, J. N. S. Long, and James I. Weems.	Apr. 21, 1866.
J. A. Macauley	do	Governor Wells	Dec. 13, 1865.
John Macdonald	Rebel postmaster	Governor Wells, John E. King, Thomas C. Anderson	Sept. 18, 1865.
L. B. Morris	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Nov. 7, 1865.
John Moore	do	do	Feb. 23, 1866.
D. C. McCan	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Oct. 23, 1865.
Paul McEnery	Rebel State depositary	Governor Wells, Robert Ray, John Ray, S. L. Slack, W. G. Q. Baker, John W. Scarborough, and Robert B. Jones.	Oct. 18, 1865.
Mrs. Jane M. McDowell	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Apr. 17, 1866.
Richard McCall	do	do	Apr. 4, 1866.
John McVea	do	do	Mar. 29, 1866.
James M. McGill	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
Samuel McCutchon	do	do	Sept. 18, 1865.
James McCloskey	do	By order of the President	July 26, 1866.
Samuel W. McKneely	do	Governor Wells, James I. Weems, and J. H. Kilpatrick	Aug. 26, 1865.
E. Jones McCall	do	Governor Wells	Sept. 18, 1865.
James W. McCutchen	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property, and worth over $20,000.	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
R. N. McMillan	Ex United States and rebel collector of the district of Teche.	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
James A. McRady	Worth over $20,000	do	May 16, 1866.

Louisiana—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
R. T. Noel	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and James I. Weems	June 11, 1866.
E. D. Newell	do	Governor Wells	Apr. 10, 1866.
Thomas M. Newell	do	do	Apr. 10, 1866.
J. O. Nixon	Engaged in privateering	By order of the President	Apr. 26, 1866.
M. H. O. Norton	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and S. P. Lea	Apr. 30, 1866.
Richard Nugent	Rebel commissioner for the State of Louisiana	Governor Wells	Sept. 14, 1865.
John J. Noble	Rebel commissioner to receive subscriptions to the fifteen million loan.	do	Oct. 6, 1865.
Isaac T. Naff	Rebel tax assessor	By order of the President	June 29, 1865.
William Offutt	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Apr. 10, 1866.
Sharpley Owen	do	T. J. Bell, George W. Johnson, Virgil McKnight, R. S. Woolfolk, George A. Caldwell, L. M. Sherley, W. C. Stite, J. A. Hartwell, John B. Smith.	Oct. 29, 1866.
James B. Pickett	do	Governor Wells	Apr. 21, 1866.
Harlow J. Phelps	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	William M. Dailey, special agent Post Office Department	June 14, 1866.
Arthur Picolet	Worth over $20,000	Attorney General Stanbery	Oct. 12, 1866.
William A. Pegram	do	J. J. Weems	Nov. 12, 1866.
J. F. Pargond	do	Governor Wells	Jan. 11, 1866.
Mrs. Eliza Patrick	do	do	May 31, 1866.
L. T. Pim	Left a loyal State	Hon. Montgomery Blair	June 5, 1866.
William S. Parham	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Aug. 14, 1865.
E. P. Pollard	do	Major General L. Thomas	Oct. 19, 1865.
J. J. Pringle	do	Lieutenant General Grant	July 11, 1865.
A. J. Powell	Left a loyal district	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Sept. 23, 1865.
W. M. Perkins	Rebel commercial agent	Governor Wells and Mayor Kennedy	Sept. 23, 1865.
J. Payne	Worth over $20,000	Hon. J. Holt	July 11, 1865.
Mrs. C. M. Pritchard	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property, and worth over $20,000.	J. A. Lea	Sept. 26, 1865.
David Pipes	Left a loyal district, and worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, S. J. Norwood, A. F. Currie, and W. H. Green	Nov. 9, 1865.
Armand Pitot	Left a loyal district, and property held by supervising agent of Treasury Department.	C. Roselieus	Sept. 21, 1865.
Elijah Peale	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, Hon. John Covode, and J. G. Belden	Oct. 18, 1865.
Ellen H. Percy	do	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
William T. Palfrey	do	Hon. Richard W. Dana, jr., and Rev. James F. Clark	Jan. 15, 1866.
C. W. Philips	do	Governor Wells	Jan. 9, 1866.
James M. Porter	Rebel inspector of the revenue, and assistant marshal.	do	Apr. 21, 1866.
A. J. Powell	Left a loyal district	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
H. A. Patin	Rebel postmaster	Governor Wells, L. B. Binant, P. Garn, R. T. Eastin, and G. A. Fournet	Oct. 4, 1865.
J. G. Parham	Rebel clerk in the department of Louisiana	Governor Wells, G. Beube, and J. P. Harrison	Sept. 18, 1865.
Zenas Preston	Rebel provost marshal, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Wells	Oct. 13, 1865.
John G. Peck	Worth over $20,000	do	April 3, 1866.
J. J. Poindexter	do	do	April 17, 1866.
F. H. Quitman	do	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
T. W. Roberts	do	By order of the President	Mar. 25, 1866.

Andrew S. Routh	....do	Governor Wells	April 10, 1866.
Augustus Richard	....do	By order of the President	June 11, 1866.
Mrs. Ann E. Routh	....do	Governor Wells	Mar. 13, 1866.
John K. Routh	....do	Governor Wells, Hon. Reverdy Johnson	May 5, 1866.
Miss Celestine Reynes	Left a loyal district and property seized by military authorities.	Governor Wells	July 26, 1865.
G. W. Race	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells and Mayor Kennedy	Aug. 2, 1865.
John Ruth	Worth over $20,000	Attorney General Speed	Sept. 28, 1865.
Mrs. E. C. Rugely	....do	Governor Wells and Hon. N. Farwell	Oct. 24, 1865.
J. B. Robinson	....do	Governor Wells, G. Burke, W. Harlington, and J. P. Harrison	Sept. 18, 1865.
P. A. Rost	Rebel commissioner to Paris, London, and Madrid and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Jacob Barker, John E. King, Louis F. Martin, John Ray, and R. C. McKliffe	Sept. 18, 1865.
Asa Russ	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Sept. 29, 1865.
Joseph D. Richards	Clerk of rebel district court	Governor Wells, L. V. Chachere, J. J. Beauchamp, and W. A. Moriarty	Aug. 29, 1865.
G. W. Race	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells, Samuel M. Todd, William S. Pike, William M. Perkins, B. R. Swasey, John A. Stevenson, G. Soutag, A. Harris, A. Wallace Hunter, J. G. Hirdes, G. W. Morrison, John Frankford, Luther Hontes, John Turpin, Thomas Cupps, L. F. Foner, H. G. Stitson, H. Millspaugh, G. Repe, E. M. Rusha, J. G. Dunlap, J. M. Mead, Thomas F. Nelson, A. Hoffman, and M. L. Williams.	Sept. 18, 1865.
J. L. Riddell	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Wells and Hon. Montgomery Blair	Aug. 14, 1865.
John Smoker	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Sept. 21, 1865.
E. W. Smith	....do	....do	April 30, 1866.
George O. Sweet	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	....do	Feb. 1, 1866.
L. J. Smith	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Nov. 1, 1866.
Francis P. Stubbs	Rebel marshal	Governor Wells	Oct. 18, 1865.
William Silliman	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells and H. B. Chase, mayor of Clinton	Nov. 9, 1865.
R. H. Snyder	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Wells	Nov. 7, 1865.
Mrs. Jane N. Sims	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property	Governor Wells, D. A. Maytin, Thomas Sloo, Robert Gribble, and J. Burke	Aug. 15, 1865.
Henry St. Paul	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Wells	Sept. 8, 1865.
Thomas Simms	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property	Governor Wells and H. Kennedy	Oct. 6, 1865.
D. E. Scruggs	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	June 25, 1866.
William T. Scovell	....do	....do	Mar. 25, 1866.
Charles W. Stinde	....do	....do	Mar. 25, 1866.
J. B. Slawson	....do	Hough Kennedy and Thomas Cottman	Oct. 9, 1865.
Mrs. C. A. Slocomb	....do	Major General B. F. Butler	Aug. 3, 1865.
Ida Slocomb	....do	....do	Aug. 3, 1865.
Mrs. Caroline A. Slocomb	....do	....do	Aug. 3, 1865.
C. H. Slocomb	....do	Thomas Cottman, State agent	July 31, 1865.
Eustace Surget	....do	Lieutenant General Grant	July 11, 1865.
E. S. Story	....do	Governor Wells and E. D. Hobbs	July 11, 1865.
E. Solomons	....do	Attorney General Speed	July 22, 1865.
G. W. Scovell	....do	Governor Wells	Aug. 26, 1865.
Theo. O. Stark	Aiding the rebellion	Governors Wells and Sharkey	Aug. 23, 1866.
S. F. Slatter	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Nov. 13, 1865.
H. H. Slatter	....do	....do	Nov. 13, 1865.
Michael Schlatre	....do	....do	Nov. 6, 1865.
Mrs. E. Savage	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property	Attorney General Speed	Nov. 4, 1865.
R. H. Short	Worth over $20,000	Thomas Cottman, State agent	July 31, 1865.
Norman Story	....do	Governor Wells and L. Thomas, Adjutant General	Sept. 2, 1865.
R. B. Sumner	Worth over $20,000, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Wells and Hough Kennedy	Dec. 30, 1865.

Louisiana—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
John A. Stevenson	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	C. Roselius, Michael Hahn, and Randell Hunt	April 16, 1866.
Abel Skannal	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	April 21, 1866.
John M. Sandidge	do	do	April 17, 1866.
Mrs. Mary E. Sandidge	do	do	Apr. 17, 1866.
W. C. Sickles	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Wells and S. Allen	July 6, 1866.
Alfred Townsend	Rebel postmaster	Governor Wells, Henry Ballard, and Charles Webb	Aug. 15, 1865.
Lewis Taxada	Violated oath	Governor Wells and W. B. Hyman	July 11, 1865.
J. W. Taybor	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Lieutenant Colonel Van Anda, commanding post	July 6, 1865.
Martin Tally	Worth over $20,000	James I. Weems	Sept. 12, 1866.
John Thornhill	do	Governor Wells	Apr. 27, 1866.
Paul J. Theriot	Violated oath, and proceedings commenced as abandoned property.	Governor Wells, F. Schexwailder, Thomas E. Cantey, H. Landum, and J. S. Whitaker	June 5, 1866.
Eli Tullis	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
Mary E. Taylor	do	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
T. C. Twichell and wife	Proceedings commenced as abandoned property, and worth over $20,000.	Julian Neville, Thomas Sloo, A. Brother, and J. M. Luprye	Sept. 18, 1865.
W. A. Violett	Worth over $20,000, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Wells, Hough Kennedy, George Jonas, Charles Briggs, Thomas Sloo, John S. Pike, J. P. Roux, Benjamin F. Flanders, C. Roselius, Jacob Barker, A. Brother, and Samuel Bell.	Sept. 21, 1865.
John L. Vickers	Worth over $20,000	John Chaffe, W. A. Lacy, J. N. Munell, J. D. Watkins, C. H. Murphey, J. R. Head, and John G. Roles.	Oct. 11, 1866.
S. W. Vance	do	Governor Wells, H. Kilpatrick, M. P. Long, and James I. Weems	Aug. 26, 1865.
J. W. Vance	do	do	Aug. 26, 1865.
Thomas E. Vick	do	Governor Wells	Nov. 3, 1865.
E. L. Wailes	do	do	May 5, 1866.
M. N. Wood	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	William M. Daily, special agent Post Office Department	June 14, 1866.
John L. Williams	Rebel financial agent	By order of the President	Aug. 27, 1866.
R. S. Wilkins	Rebel war tax assessor	Governor Wells	Sept. 18, 1865.
George W. Ward	Rebel custodian of funds, and property sequestrated.	J. O. Fallen, Silas F. Miller, James Taylor, W. C. Stile, and L. M. Sherley	July 21, 1865.
J. B. Walton	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Aug. 4, 1866.
A. C. Watson	do	Governor Wells	Dec. 5, 1865.
N. O. Ware	do	John B. Sale, W. L. Walton, Robert S. Adams, William L. Cox, B. R. Howard, J. R. Sanders, and B. H. Shepard.	Dec. 5, 1865.
L. D. C. Wood	do	Governor Wells	Jan. 20, 1866.
John S. Wallis	do	do	Sept. 8, 1865.
Felix Walker	do	do	July 31, 1865.
D. D. Withers	do	do	Oct. 7, 1865.
Avery S. Winston	do	do	Nov. 3, 1865.
R. White	do	do	Mar. 29, 1866.
Valentine Werner	do	Governor Wells and Michael Hahn	April 4, 1866.
John Young	Rebel commissioner	Governor Wells, W. Jaspin Blackburn, J. W. McDonald, and J. D. Watkins	Sept. 18, 1865.
Joseph N. Young	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells	Nov. 7, 1865.

MISSOURI.

R. M. Anderson	Indicted for treason	Hon. Austin A. King	Apr. 11, 1865.
John W. Atkinson	do	do	Apr. 11, 1865.
D. S. Atkinson	do	do	Aug. 18, 1866.
William E. Boswell	do	Hon. Austin A. King and T. E. Noel	Aug. 9, 1866.
J. F. Brookhart	do	do	Aug. 9, 1866.
H. C. Bedinger	Left a loyal district		July 18, 1866.
John Q. Barbridge	do	Governor of Missouri	Oct. 4, 1865.
William H. Brand	do	do	Sept. 2, 1865.
A. T. Bankhead	do	Hon. J. B. Henderson	June 5, 1865
H. J. Brother	do	Governor of Missouri	Sept. 11, 1865.
M. D. Ballis	do	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
George W. Bates	do	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
Robert Becket	do		Feb. 14, 1866.
J. W. Bartley	do	do	Mar. 14, 1866.
A. Don Brown	do	Hon. F. P. Blair	July 2[illegible], 1866.
R. O. Bogges	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. [illegible], 1866.
H. A. Bragg	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri and Hon. J. B. Henderson	May 21, [illegible].
A. G. Baird	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
Joseph Busenbark	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Caleb Crews	do	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 20, 1866.
F. T. Chew	do	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 18, 1866.
T. J. Caldwell	Left a loyal district	Hon. John Hogan	Apr. 11, 1866.
H. E. Clark	Worth over $20,000	Governor of Missouri	Sept. 5, 1866.
David Craig	Indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri and United States attorney	Aug. 20, 1865.
Greenville Crisp	Left a loyal district		Oct. 30, 1865.
James A. Carson	do		Oct. 5, 1865.
John Casey	do		Oct. 5, 1865.
Stephen Cooper	do	Governor of Missouri	Mar. 8, 1866.
H. R. C. Cowden	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
B. P. Caldwell	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Thomas J. Caldwell	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Benjamin Crump	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
W. A. Campbell	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Joseph Davis	do		Oct. 4, 1866.
S. J. Drysart	Worth over $20,000, and indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri, Hon. J. W. Hurris, and Hon. James S. Rollins	Apr. 3, 1866.
L. B. Dougherty	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Jan. 10, 1866.
N. B. Davidson	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
A. P. Doak	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
L. M. Drace	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John Ecton	Worth over $20,000	do	Jan. 9, 1866.
Morris Edwards	Indicted for treason	do	Aug. 9, 1866.
A. W. Ewing	do	Governor of Missouri and United States attorney	Aug. 26, 1866.
B. Fisher	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri	June 20, 1865.
J. H. Fulkerson	do	The Attorney General and Hon. John Hogan	Dec. 22, 1865.
J. M. Fulkerson	do		Mar. 8, 1866.
R. B. Fulkerson	do	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
A. K. Glover	Indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri and United States attorney	Mar. 14, 1866.
S. S. Graham	do	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 9, 1866.

Missouri—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
Robert Gilleland	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 15, 1866.
Thomas Gladden	do	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 15, 1866.
William T. Grahum	do		Apr. 11, 1866.
John S. Graves	do		Apr. 11, 1866.
William Gaut	do		Apr. 11, 1866.
S. D. Givens	do		Apr. 11, 1866.
Charles Hodges	do	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 18, 1866.
William Helm	Left a loyal district	do	Jan. 9, 1866.
Morris Hodges	do	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 15, 1866.
William T. Herndon	Indicted for treason	Hon. T. E. Noel	Aug. 9, 1866.
R. W. Houx	do	Hon. F. P. Blair	July 18, 1866.
Wetcom Hodges	do	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 18, 1866.
A. Head	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri and Hon. T. E. Noel	July 2, 1866.
Thomas A. Harris	do		Sept. 4, 1866.
E. B. Hull	do	Hon. J. B. Henderson	Oct. 4, 1865.
John M. Hickey	do	Governor of Tennessee	July 25, 1865.
Warwick Hough	do	Hon. John Hogan	Nov. 16, 1865.
Benjamin F. Hays	do		July 26, 1866.
E. W. Herndon	Worth over $20,000	Governor of Missouri	May 3, 1865.
William Hodges	Left a loyal district		Apr. 11, 1866.
George R. Hunk	do	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
Benjamin S. Hiatt	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John Hughes	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Mathias Houx	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Lemuel Jones	Indicted for treason		Jan. 29, 1866.
William L. Jeffers	Prisoner of war		Apr. 12, 1866.
Jackson Kinsey	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 18, 1866.
Isaac Kinsey	do	do	Aug. 18, 1866.
A. Kirkpatrick	do	do	Aug. 18, 1866.
James Kelly	Worth over $20,000	Hon. F. P. Blair	Nov. 1, 1866.
Joseph Kelly	do	do	Nov. 1, 1866.
S. G. Kitchen	Left a loyal district		July 16, 1866.
William H. Kennan	do	Governor of Missouri	July 6, 1866.
W. T. Lambkin	do		July 26, 1865.
S. P. Letton	do	Hon. A. A. King	Jan. 9, 1866.
R. T. Lindsay	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
William Lusk	Indicted for treason	The governor of Missouri and United States attorney	Mar. 14, 1866.
A. M. Lay	Left a loyal district	do	Dec. 22, 1865.
Robert Lewis	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 9, 1866.
John C. Lee	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Samuel Lunday	do	do	Apr. 11, 1865.
M. W. Lowry	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Robert McCulloch	do	The Attorney General	Jan. 18, 1866.
James N. McDowell	do		Oct. 20, 1865

J. C. McKinney	do	Governor of Missouri	Mar. 8, 1866.
N. P. Minor	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri and Hon. J. B. Henderson	July 6, 1866.
A. J. Magenis	do		June 5, 1865.
U. F. Murray	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
H. T. McClure	Worth over $20,000	The Attorney General	Feb. 6, 1866.
James McQuilty	Left a loyal district	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
Andrew McQuilty	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John P. Murray	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Hiram Marsh	Indicted for treason	Hon. A. A. King and Hon. T. E. Noel	Aug. 9, 1866.
T. B. Murray	Left a loyal district	Hon. A. A. King	Mar. 8, 1866.
W. E. P. Moore	do	Hon. R. T. Van Horn	May 30, 1866.
Jacob P. Marr	Indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri and United States attorney	Mar. 14, 1866.
N. L. Norton	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri	June 23, 1866.
W. L. Neely	do	Hon. R. T. Van Horn	May 30, 1866.
M. A. Pullen	do	Governor of Missouri, General Grant, Hugh Campbell, Hon. M. Blair, Hon. H. T. Blow, and Hon. R. Walker.	June 19, 1865.
C. H. Prather	do	Governor of Missouri	July 6, 1866.
Lewis W. Pemberton	do	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
L. G. Pettis	do	do	Apr. 11, 1865.
Charles G. Phillips	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
W. M. Pitts	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
Isaac Ruffner	Worth over $20,000	Governor of Missouri and Attorney General	Feb. 7, 1866.
P. S. Ryles	Indicted for treason	Hon. T. E. Noel	Aug. 9, 1866.
Michael Rentich	Left a loyal district	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 15, 1866.
Thomas C. Rowland	Indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri	July 6, 1866.
Hedgeman Reynolds	do	Hon. A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
James E. Rankin	do	do
John M. Shonse	Left a loyal district	R. T. Van Horn	May 30, 1866.
J. D. Scaggs	do	Hon. A. A. King	Aug. 18, 1866.
A. W. Slayback	do	Hon. G. Clay Smith, B. M. Hughes, and J. N. Rhodes	Mar. 21, 1866.
Benjamin J. Sandridge	Indicted for treason	Colonel John F. Philips, Brigadier General Gage, and E. B. Brown	Aug. 9, 1866.
Epaphroditus Sydnor	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri and J. B. Henderson	Oct. 4, 1866.
Caleb S. Stone	Rebel cotton agent	Major General Dodge and General Barnes	June 14, 1865.
James J. Searcy	Indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri	Aug. 8, 1866.
Dewitt C. Stone	Left a loyal district	do	Oct. 4, 1865.
John Tamplon	do	do	July 2, 1866.
W. W. Salmon	Indicted for conspiracy	Austin A. King, John M. Richardson, and Henry Stanbery, Attorney General	Aug. 20, 1866.
J. C. Strange	Left a loyal district	Governor of Missouri	Apr. 11, 1866.
Samuel Simpson	do	do	July 2, 1866.
L. A. Scott	do	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 20, 1866.
James Stewart	do	Governor of Missouri	Aug. 9, 1866.
G. W. Thompson	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
J. T. V. Thompson	Indicted for treason	Governor of Missouri and John Hogan	Mar. 23, 1866.
Clay Taylor	Left a loyal district	Major General Herron, B. Gratz Brown, Samuel B. Churchill, Henry T. Blow, J. B. Henderson, and Governor Fletcher.	Sept. 18, 1865.
William Tives	do	Governor of Missouri	Apr. 11, 1866.
S. T. Tives	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
J. C. C. Thornton	do	A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.
R. F. Taylor	do	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 15, 1866.
Thomas Thomas	Proceedings for confiscation commenced	Governor of Missouri	Aug. 9, 1866.
Benjamin F. Thomas	Indicted for treason	do	Mar. 14, 1866.
John Umstadt	Left a loyal district	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 20, 1866.

Missouri—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
William G. Virgin	Proceedings for confiscation commenced	Governor of Missouri	Aug. 9, 1866.
Joel W. Warren	do	do	Aug. 9, 1866.
D. W. Williams	do	Hon. John Hogan	Aug. 20, 1866.
John P. Warwick	do	Governor of Missouri	Aug. 9, 1866.
John F. West	Left a loyal district	do	Aug. 15, 1866.
William C. Webb	Proceedings for confiscation commenced	do	Jan. 9, 1866.
John V. Webb	do	do	Jan. 9, 1866.
Kemp M. Woods	do	do	Jan. 9, 1866.
John E. Wright	Left a loyal district	J. B. Henderson	Oct. 27, 1865.
Charles N. Wright	do	do	Oct. 27, 1865.
Richard O. Woolfolk	do	J. B. Henderson and Governor of Missouri	Oct. 4, 1865.
Wyatt Webb	do	A. A. King	Apr. 11, 1866.

TENNESSEE.

R. A. Armstrong	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 26, 1865.
F. Alexander	Indicted for furnishing supplies to rebels	A. J. Tipton, J. B. Douthat, and H. C. Bensley	Nov. 13, 1865.
J. D. Akan	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 15, 1865.
Joseph R. Anderson	Rebel tax assessor	By order of the President	May 30, 1865.
Robert A. Armstrong	Indicted for treason	John Williams, John Baxter, and T. M. Hazen	Nov. 13, 1865.
T. H. Allen	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 6, 1866.
Audley Anderson	Rebel enrolling officer	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
John Alexander	Indicted for treason	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
W. T. Avery	Rebel officer in post office department	Henry G. Smith, J. E. Merriman, J. M. Hill, Wm. M. Farmingham, and D. M. Leatherman	July 10, 1865.
John Allison	Indicted for treason	Henry Hoss, John A. Wilds, James A. Dilworth, and Governor Brownlow	Nov. 6, 1865.
John D. Alexander	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, John S. McGoughey, Joseph H. Thompson, Joseph Ramsay, and W. Thompson.	Aug. 15, 1865.
W. W. Blackmore	Partisan ranger	Joseph Thompson, Joseph Ramsay, and W. Thompson	Oct. 22, 1866.
J. A. Buckner	Rebel enrolling officer	Robert Netherlands	June 12, 1865.
A. A. Broyles	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Henry Hoss, S. J. W. Lucky, Samuel B. Cunningham, J. M. Hoss, J. A. Dilworth, and A. R. Nelson.	Nov. 6, 1865.
James W. Bowman	Indicted for treason	A. W. Armstrong, L. D. Dearmond, John Williams, J. M. Julian, James King, Charles Morrow, and Thomas A. Smith.	Sept. 18, 1865.
William L. Brown	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 18, 1865.
J. L. Bullock	Indicted for conspiracy	Samuel M. Arnell, J. B. Frierson, A. J. Fletcher, and Governor Brownlow	July 26, 1865.
Robert M. Barton	Indicted for treason	John E. Kidwell, William A. Kidwell, G. W. Lynch, J. Netherland, O. P. Semple, and James P. Swann.	Aug. 27, 1865.
John E. Blackwell	do	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 13, 1865.
Samuel J. Bryan	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	James T. Sheely, William Foster, Thomas Cofer, A. J. Chrisman, Jas. M. Clark, D. L. Hurtsell, and Governor Brownlow.	Oct. 21, 1865.

A. A. Bruner	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 12, 1865.
Hiram Bogle	Rebel postmaster	Thomas Clark, Governor Brownlow, James C. Sheddan, Henry Brakehill, J. A. Porter, John Jones, J. S. Doyle, R. M. Brown, and John Flenniken.	Oct. 12, 1865.
H. T. Bradford	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 5, 1865.
Z. L. Burson	Indicted for treason	E. R. McLain, J. Netherland, Jos. M. Logan, S. H. Smith, and John R. Bronner	Sept. 20, 1865.
E. K. Buchman	Indicted for giving aid and comfort to rebels	Stephen D. Stewart, Richard Deakins, James Bowman, Joshua S. Hamilton, E. Ford, William H. Britt, A. M. Stewart, and Governor Brownlow.	July 26, 1865.
A. M. Brown	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Henry Stoss, G. W. Telford, Samuel Snapp, Andrew Shell, S. S. Logan, and Governor Brownlow.	July 26, 1865.
S. W. Baines	Indicted for treason, and rebel sheriff	Nathan Shipley, Thomas E. Jones, John Jones, Elias Arterburn, Elbert A. Shipley, and Governor Brownlow.	Nov. 6, 1865.
William M. Bayless	Indicted for treason and rebel enrolling officer	D. P. Hensley, L. W. Holdwell, Isaac Emmert, B. Bashor, B. F. Smith James B. Strain, Isaac Sayborn, and Governor Brownlow.	Aug. 8, 1865.
John W. Barker	Worth over $20,000	Hon. C. Johnston	Aug. 18, 1866.
William K. Blair	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	By order of the President	Aug. 20, 1866.
Washington Barrow	Worth over $20,000	Major General Dix and Governor Brownlow?	Oct. 6, 1865.
W. Brazelton	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 6, 1865.
A. L. Burene	Rebel postmaster	S. H. Henderson, A. P. Caldwell, Richard M. Delb, W. M. Piper, Chas. J. McKinney, Thomas J. Amis, and Governor Brownlow.	Oct. 23, 1865.
Neill S. Brown	Indicted for treason	James Whitworth and Governor Brownlow	Oct. 26, 1865.
F. A. Butler	Rebel postmaster	John Williams, A. G. Jackson, Gaines McMillan, E. Longley, and Governor Brownlow.	July 15, 1865.
W. P. Brewer	Indicted for treason	E. A. Millard, M. Lipps, Henry Johnson, and Governor Brownlow	Oct. 23, 1865.
William C. Baley	Rebel postmaster	Thomas Smith, John M. Strong, William M. Sawyers, C. Rutherford, J. H. Rudd, A. A. Meek, P. H. Skaggs, W. H. Carter, Jos. C. Strong, and O. P. Temple.	Nov. 13, 1865.
A. J. Bankston	Left a loyal district	G. W. Gaines, Robert Carter, Daniel Heiskell, and R. F. Sorrggs	Nov. 13, 1865.
James Biggs	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 20, 1865.
H. B. Bowling	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	D. K. Young and Samuel D. Leinhart	Oct. 30, 1865.
Jacob F. Broyles	Indicted for treason	J. L. Simpson, J. M. Hoss, Samuel B. Cunningham, W. M. Reese, J. Boyd, E. Armstrong, and Samuel Miller.	Oct. 24, 1865.
E. Birdwell	do	J. N. Baker, Samuel Snapp, F. Hunt, John H. Fain, and J. Gott	Nov. 13, 1865.
William D. Browder	do	James M. Autt, B. G. Glage, Lee Vaghn, Richard McAndrew, Daniel Heiskell, Thomas Yearwood, G. Smythe, and Governor Brownlow.	Oct. 21, 1865.
Edward Brown	do	A. C. Robeson, George W. Bridges, R. M. Fisher, James H. Hornsby, Horace Phillips, John G. Helm, M. Gaston, C. P. Alexander, B. Gilbert, A. L. Henderson, William Burns, B. Willis, W. C. Owen, G. W. Standefer, Geo. W. Ross, G. W. Kinder, and Governor Brownlow.	Oct. 21, 1865.
John Berry	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
R. P. Birdwell	Indicted for treason	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
H. T. Berry	do	Alfred C. Williams, A. Jobe, A. J. Sifon, James M. Cameron, and C. C. Wilcox	Sept. 27, 1865.
Joseph Birdwell	do	J. N. Barker, Samuel Srapp, Franklin Hunt, and John C. Lain	Nov. 13, 1865.
A. Boggess	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 9, 1865.
J. W. Bowman	do	William Heiskill, G. W. Adney, John W. Parmester, R. Snead, and E. C. Srigg	Nov. 13, 1865.
John W. Barkers	Worth over $20,000	John W. Gorham	Nov. 20, 1865.
Philemon Bird	do	W. Crutchfield, W. C. King, G. W. Rider, J. H. Gant, Geo. W. Bridges, John H. Hardie, Thomas Crutchfield, G. W. James, and Governor Brownlow.	Nov. 4, 1865.
William E. Butler	do	John M. Carmack and Governor Brownlow	Nov. 1, 1865.
Jesse Butcher	Indicted for treason	R. H. Savage, William Bayless, Amos Evans, Alfred Wilson, A. Haynes, J. C. Baker, Daniel Smith, Alfred S. Miller, R. A. Hardy, and Governor Brownlow.	Apr. 30, 1866.
William Browder	do	By order of President Johnson	July 6, 1866.
James Biggs	do	Samuel Henry, James Davis, Isaac Brannan, R. A. Crawford, William Brannon, and Governor Brownlow.	Nov. 20, 1866.
J. J. Browder	do	By order of the President	Dec. 20, 1865.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
John L. Brown	Indicted for treason	R. M. Brown	Oct. 25, 1865.
Lewis Bowers	do	James Jones, George Kinney, D. R. Gass, Colonel David Fry, John A. Mason, A. W. Walker, J. C. Hawkins, and Governor Brownlow.	May 16, 1866.
John W. Bryan	Worth over $20,000	Samuel J. Carter, T. A. Atchison, and Governor Brownlow	Nov. 23, 1865.
William P. Bryan	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 9, 1865.
Thomas J. Brown	do	do	Sept. 3, 1865.
John M. Bass	do	Attorney General Speed	Sept. 6, 1865.
B. M. Browder	do	B. B. Glenn and Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
W. G. Bryan	do	Judge Patterson and Edward Cooper	Oct. 3, 1865.
Thomas J. Brown	do	By order of the President	Aug. 18, 1865.
Samuel J. Boyce	do	C. W. Vinson, M. R. Thurman, A. James, and William W. Boyce	Mar. 6, 1866.
John M. Boyd	do	By order of the President	May 28, 1866.
H. B. Bowling	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	May 16, 1866.
R. C. Brinkley	Worth over $20,000	J. M. Toomey	Sept. 14, 1865.
J. K. Christian	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1866.
G. W. Cunningham	do	Governor Brownlow, John P. White, Samuel J. Carter, M. Burns, and James R. Sillin	Aug. 12, 1865.
James F. Cummings	do	Attorney General Speed, Hon. E. Cooper, and Isaac Scott	July 6, 1865.
John W. Campbell	do	Governor Brownlow, Judge Smith, and Alvin Hawkins	Aug. 19, 1865.
Jeremiah Cleveland	do	Governor Brownlow and Hon. E. Cooper	Aug. 26, 1865.
John T. Carmichael	do	Hon. H. Maynard	July 7, 1865.
E. Cates	Worth over $20,000, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Brownlow, A. M. Cate, and J. W. Henderson	Aug. 29, 1865.
M. R. Cockrill	Worth over $20,000	Attorney General Speed, Governor Brownlow, Horace H. Harrison, and Russel Houston	Nov. 14, 1865.
S. R. Cockrill	do	Governor Brownlow and Russel Houston	Oct. 18, 1865.
Philip Critz	Indicted for treason	George Bradshaw, G. W. Wells, and Daniel Rogan	Feb. 8, 1866.
James K. Cox	do	James Henry, David Chandler, A. L. Sparks, John Williams, Andrew Krett, and John F. Henry.	May 16, 1866.
D. R. Cook	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, W. H. Fitch, J. E. Merrimand, William Wallace, P. M. Winters, R. Saunders, and Thomas Leonard.	Aug. 11, 1865.
James E. Carter	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	May 28, 1866.
David J. Carr	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	D. J. Gibson, Alfred Carr, Henry Hoss, William H. Maxwell, J. F. Grisham, Shelby T. Shipey, H. H. Carr, Peter M. Reeves, Samuel Cunningham, S. M. Hoss, and Tipton Jobed.	June 12, 1865.
William R. Cunningham	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Mar. 28, 1866.
John Cameron	Indicted for treason	do	Apr. 17, 1866.
W. A. Crawford	do	Governor Brownlow, John Keys, Joseph C. Cox, J. B. Hurt, Henry Hoss, L. W. Keen, and J. D. Cox.	Aug. 15, 1865.
J. B. Clements	Rebel marshal of Tennessee	Mary A. White, John P. White, M. Burns, and Edwin H. East	Aug. 8, 1865.
B. N. Clements	Rebel officer in post office department	do	Aug. 8, 1865.
William H. Crawford	Indicted for treason	Colonel Johnson	Sept. 18, 1865.
R. G. Clark	do	P. Dickinson, John Williams, John M. Fleming, John Baxter, James H. Cowan, and Alvin Barton.	Oct. 26, 1865.
Charles Coffin	do	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 25, 1865.
John W. Childress	Left a loyal district, and proceedings commenced on abandoned property.	Mrs. James K. Polk	July 11, 1865.

W. H. Cannon	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 30, 1865.
John B. Cottrell	Indicted for treason	do	July 11, 1865.
Joseph H. Crouch	do	do	July 11, 1865.
Jesse H. Crouch	do	do	July 11, 1865.
R. G. Clark	do	John Williams, G. M. Hazen, W. C. Kyle, and R. A. Crawford	Oct. 5, 1865.
James Cox	do	William C. Snapp and Samuel Evans	Nov. 16, 1865.
Samuel B. Campbell	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	William White, J. R. Pace, A. A. Kyle, W. C. Kyle, John Biernes, Samuel Wells, James W. Sheffy, F. McMillin, James H. Gilmore, and Governor Brownlow.	Nov. 7, 1865.
William B. Childress	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1865.
James P. Coffin	Indicted for treason, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Brownlow, S. L. Henderson, Archibald Martin, Joseph Thompson, William White, and R. Mitchell	Nov. 4, 1865.
G. S. Cecil	Indicted for treason	S. E. Lyon, John Devault, William P. Miller, W. B. Crookshank, A. W. Brabson, and A. B. Brabson.	Nov. 6, 1865.
Joseph A. Conley	do	Governor Brownlow, Samuel Garst, Isaac Bacon, Henry M. Jones, John Beall, William Pursell, John K. Carr, N. Campbell, Jesse Bacon, Samuel Miller, and D. G. Gibson.	Sept. 27, 1865.
James A. Cate	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 27 1865.
J. A. Crumley	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Jacob Hendrickson, Thomas C. Johnson, A. Jobe, Thomas M. Hilton, James T. Scott, and A. Carr.	Sept. 27, 1865.
H. T. Carr	Member of rebel legislature	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 14, 1865.
Samuel C. Crozer	Indicted for treason	do	Sept. 27, 1865.
James W. Cox	do	Governor Brownlow, James Haws, John Beals, A. M. Workman, Jas. A. Wells, Calvin Cox, David F. Hall, and John B. Hale.	Sept. 27, 1865.
John H. Crawford	do	By order of the President	Nov. 7, 1865.
Joseph D. Clarke	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 19, 1865.
J. R. Crumley	do	E. A. Millard, Robert White, and E. W. Ellis	Oct. 21, 1865.
R. F. Crumley	do	do	Oct. 21, 1865.
Alfred Caldwell	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 25, 1865.
J. O. Craighead	Indicted for treason	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
R. P. Chase	Rebel postmaster	Samuel Evans	Nov. 13, 1865.
W. W. Cox	Indicted for treason	Joseph M. Logan, H. C. Smith, William B. Proffit, E. L. C. Wilson, Jacob Douglass, John B. Douglas, G. W. Wells, James Flinn, George Finck, E. More, Isaac Chase, and Governor Brownlow.	Oct. 2, 1865.
David Caldwell	Proceedings commenced on abandoned property	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 12, 1865.
Charles Cook	Indicted for treason	do	Aug. 12, 1865.
Rev. W. H. Crawford	do	Robert Taylor	Nov. 13, 1865.
J. P. Carruthers	Left a loyal district	By order of the President	July 26, 1866.
Thomas Claiborne	Ex-captain United States army and rebel lieutenant colonel.	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 12, 1865.
J. B. Cook	Left a loyal district, and indicted for treason	A. Marshman, George W. Bridges, James T. Shelly, Oliver M. Dodson, Enoch Collins, James Howe, George W. Ross, James B. Taylor, James R. Gettys, James H. Hornsby, Thomas P. Duggon, J. D. Moore, George W. Bridges, William H. C. Thompson, Thomas B. McClure, James M. Henderson, M. S. Phillips, R. M. Fisher, William Burns, John F. Sliver, David Cleage, N. J. Peters, and William Burk.	Nov. 13, 1865.
W. W. Carnes	Educated at United States naval school, and captain in rebel army.	Samuel Yate	Nov. 27, 1866.
D. F. Cocke	Worth over $30,000	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 14, 1865.
Henderson Carters	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, J. S. Hurst, H. C. Hurst, A. G. Small, A. D. Briant, J. H. McGill, James Hickey, R. M. Fisher, John L. AtLee, James Seemer, J. Grubb, B. Wells, G. W. Kinder, and George W. Ross.	Oct. 21, 1865.
Frank C. Dunnington	do	By order of the President	Aug. 18, 1865.
N. S. Dulaney	do	Governor Brownlow, S. D. Stewart, George G. Stewart, A. M. Stewart, J. N. Baker, George Faust, and Samuel Evans.	July 25, 1865.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
David D. Duff	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Mar. 8, 1866.
B. G. Dysart	Left a loyal district	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 15, 1865.
Philip Davis	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Captain Hendrickson, Edmon Glover, Owen Sams, Moses P. Robinson, Rindy Glover, Eliza Jane Sames, Susan Miller, George Miller, Joseph Lyon, Mary A. Lacy, Ann Lacy, Catharine Penex, and Nancy Ann Lacy.	Sept. 27, 1865.
James M. Dobbs	Worth over $20,000	R. Henderson, R. N. Croft, W. Crutchfield, John King, Samuel Crutchfield, A. James, and G. W. Rider.	Jan. 13, 1866.
B. F. Dill	do	W. Wallace and Henry P. Hulbert	July 28, 1865.
L. V. Dixon	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 12, 1865.
J. Alexander Davis	Indicted for treason	Joseph H. Davis, A. J. White, Joseph W. Hicks, J. C. Siplan, John G. Brown, and W. H. Craigmiles.	July 6, 1866.
E. L. Dugger	do	Governor Brownlow	May 16, 1866.
W. H. DeWitt	Rebel member of Congress	Hon. William B. Stokes, Andrew McClain, Charles C. Shryer, J. Shackelford, and Governor Brownlow.	Dec. 8, 1865.
J. E. Dulaney	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, W. C. Snapp, F. Steerm, T. B. Rhu, Samuel Evans, E. Ayers, and Samuel Snapp.	July 25, 1865.
R. D. Duncan	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 10, 1865.
Houston P. Dickey	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Dec. 29, 1865.
William L. Dewitt	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 24, 1865.
William W. Dickey	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	R. R. Cleaveland, W. N. B. Jones, Thomas J. Moore, A. W. Cozart, and Thomas Laughlin.	July 6, 1866.
William P. Deadrick	Worth over $20,000	John W. Leftwich	July 18, 1866.
M. D. Deadrick	do	do	July 18, 1866.
Thomas Donelson	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
W. R. Delaney	do	do	Aug. 12, 1865.
John R. Delaney	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, E. W. Ellis, Samuel McGaughey, and E. D. Reeder	Aug. 12, 1865.
John F. Donk	Left a loyal district	Horace H. Harrison	June 6, 1865.
George Dixon	do	J. E. Merriman, I. M. Hill, A. P. Bardell, P. Miller, William M. Farington	July 5, 1865.
A. J. Dodson	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, James D. Porter, John W. Mattock, Samuel W. Burk, Hamilton Dearee, C. C. Guffey, Joel Perkinson, W. A. Brelson, G. W. Etter, R. A. Lowry, B. J. Stone, J. W. Brown, B. F. White, Thomas Epperson, John Orton, F. A. Petit, John Rogers, R. B. Thompson, F. M. Millard, and J. W. Melton.	Nov. 13, 1865.
A. V. Deaderick	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 27, 1865.
J. G. Deaderick	do	do	Sept. 27, 1865.
W. V. Deaderick	do	do	Sept. 27, 1865.
John R. Davis	Left a loyal district	J. G. Frazer and M. Frazer	June 21, 1865.
A. R. Edmonds	Rebel postmaster	A. A. Kyle, R. Mitchell, W. C. Kyle, and Joseph M. Logan	Sept. 30, 1865.
Paul F. Eve	Left a loyal district	A. S. Lindsly, M. Burns, Samuel J. Carter, and Governor Brownlow	Aug. 18, 1865.
Thomas Evans	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, David Cleage, John King, J. L. Hopist, George W. Bridges, James Howe, R. M. Fisher, Thomas B. McClure, J. C. McGaughey, Thomas Caldwell, John F. Sliver, J. Grubb, M. R. May, A. M. Dodson, and W. H. Briant.	Oct. 24, 1865.
T. W. Evans	do	John P. White, H. Douglass, and E. M. Bruce	Aug. 26, 1865.
William S. Emmons	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow and Samuel Milligan	May 16, 1866.
Henry Etter	do	Governor Brownlow, Seth J. Lucky, J. M. Hoss, Henry Hoss, and William H. Maxwell.	Oct. 2, 1865.

J. G. Eanes	ditto	Governor Brownlow, J. N. Barker, Samuel Evans, J. O. B. Cloud, G. W. Sells, and S. D. Stewart.	July 25, 1865.
W. W. Epps	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	James A. Wells, Joseph Keebler, L. C. Hale, S. R. Haws, James Hawes, David S. Hall, S. H. Baxter, and M. English.	June 9, 1865.
Thomas Evans	Left a loyal district, and worth over $20,000	James T. Shelly, General Joseph Cooper, George W. Bridges, James Howe, William H. Bryant, J. M. Grubb, R. M. Fisher, O. M. Dodson, A. Blizard, and James R. Gettys.	Oct. 26, 1865.
Samuel B. Ellis	Rebel postmaster and enrolling officer. Indicted for treason.	Lawrence Bowers, H. Hall, Isaac Wine, Samuel Wine, Thomas Dyer, John Raggia, Henry Fall, J. F. Grisham, and D. J. Carr.	Nov. 6, 1865.
William R. Ellison	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 17, 1866.
Joseph Etter	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	George Jones, Jacob Keicher, Isaac Bible, Adam Knipp, and D. R. Gass	Apr. 9, 1866.
Henry Farmer	Left a loyal district	Governor Brownlow, William Cross, John Black, John A. McKarney, Alfred Cross, and Samuel Worthington.	July 6, 1866.
John L. M. French	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	May 3, 1866.
William D. Fain	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Charles J. Jenkins, governor of Georgia	Feb. 14, 1866.
C. O. Faxon	ditto	William Faxon, of the Navy Department	Sept. 5, 1865.
Thomas A. Faw	Rebel postmaster	Henry Johnson, Peter M. Reeves, Tipton Jobe, John H. Bowman, James S. Hunt, Samuel H. Miller, J. M. Carr, E. S. Miller, N. S. Williams, and J. F. Grisham.	May 31, 1865.
John L. M. French	Worth over $20,000	John B. Brownlow and Hon. William B. Stokes	May 3, 1866.
Isaac W. R. Franklin	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	June 13, 1866.
M. S. Frierson	ditto	Governor Brownlow, James H. Thomess, W. C. Whithone, A. O. P. Nicholson, and Russell Houston.	Oct. 12, 1865.
H. L. W. French	ditto	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
John H. Finley	ditto	ditto	Oct. 2, 1865.
W. S. Findlay	Rebel postmaster	ditto	Aug. 12, 1865.
W. G. Foiste	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Samuel Edgeman, E. D. Pence, George Faust, James G. Hicks, John S. Gaines, Lott Pence, Joseph Lynn, John H. Fain, and William H. Fain.	Aug. 15, 1865.
L. B. Fite	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow, M. Burns, and Joseph S. Fowler	Aug. 19, 1865.
R. P. Fickle	Indicted for treason	F. L. Baumgardner, J. F. Anderson, and John S. Snapp	Nov. 16, 1865.
Thomas W. Farley	ditto	William Buckles, William L. Smithson, James Mills, Lewis Whitaker, J. D. S. Phipps, G. W. Sells, and M. Tipps.	Nov. 13, 1865.
R. C. Foster	ditto	Horace N. Harrison and David T. Patterson	Oct. 30, 1865.
Robert C. Foster	ditto	Governor Brownlow and H. H. Harrison	Sept. 5, 1865.
A. Fine	ditto	G. W. Nelson, G. W. Lefford, D. Nead, J. Y. Hartsell, and D. J. Carr	Apr. 11, 1866.
H. M. Folsom	ditto	John K. Miller, C. C. Wilcox, John W. Ellis, J. B. Miller, John F. Bowan, A. Jobe, G. B. Daniel, John M. Smith, Henderson Roberts, and James Anefel.	Aug. 15, 1865.
George W. Folsom	ditto	John K. Miller, J. B. Miller, John M. Smith, A. Jobe, C. C. Wilcox, Landin Carter, H. Roberts, and R. J. Nolby.	Aug. 15, 1865.
George P. Faw	ditto	Governor Brownlow, R. K. Butler, H. C. Smith, James White, D. T. Wilds, Henry Hoss, and Lawrence Bowers.	May 31, 1865.
R. G. Fain	Educated at West Point, and rebel colonel	A. P. Caldwell, H. Davis, A. R. Nelson, F. S. Heiskell, A. A. Kyle, and C. A. Mitchell	Oct. 2, 1865.
H. A. Farnsworth	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Oct. 12, 1865.
George W. Gardenhire	Left a loyal district	James R. Hood, A. P. Hunter, H. H. Kroft, R. Henderson, and A. James	May 5, 1866.
William H. Grider	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, H. Grider, B. C. Ritter, L. S. Trimble, A. Harding, and C. S. Shanklin.	Mar. 9, 1866.
A. L. P. Green	ditto	Governor Brownlow, Russell Houston, John McClelland, M. Burns, John P. White, John H. Smith, H. G. Scovel, J. B. Knowles, and A. B. Shankland.	Sept. 25, 1865.
W. W. Gibbens	Indicted for treason	William Heiskell, A. G. Jackson, James C. Luttrell, E. C. Srigg, E. W. Armstrong, and James M. Meek.	May 9, 1866.
M. C. Galloway	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	By order of the President	Oct. 3, 1865.
David Good	Rebel enrolling officer	G. D. Mitchell, J. M. Brobeck, M. C. Hunter, Samuel Meek, John H. Fain, and William Henry Maxwell.	Nov. 6, 1865.
A. L. Gammon	Indicted for treason	Stephen D. Stewart, James B. Stewart, A. M. Stewart, H. L. Gammon, and D. J. Ford	Oct. 21, 1865.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
Isaac W. George	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, John F. Henry, James Henry, J. C. Gillespie, A. A. Kennedy, Peter Rule, and A. McBath.	Sept. 22, 1865.
William Gammon	Rebel postmaster	By order of the President	June 12, 1865.
William Gofourth	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, A. A. Kyle, W. C. Kyle, John Blevins, John Caldwell, Andrew Shell, James W. Meek, N. W. Earnest, E. A. Sawyer, G. W. Telford, John Talbot, Peter M. Reeves, G. W. Nelson, W. Galbraith, John C. Fain, and E. Davis.	Aug. 15, 1865.
John F. Goodner	....do	Governor Brownlow, Hon. William B. Stokes, J. G. Frazer, Z. W. Frazer, and W. B. Campbell.	Oct. 27, 1865.
James W. Gillespie	....do	Governor Brownlow, David Cleage, James M. Henderson, C. M. Keith, A. Blizard, T. W. Burge, John F. Stover, R. M. Fisher, and M. L. Phillips.	Oct. 9, 1865.
Albert Graham	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	July 2, 1866.
George L. Gillespie	Indicted for treason	....do	July 6, 1866.
H. Goucheneur	....do	M. A. Roadman and Jos. Rutherford	Apr. 17, 1866.
Thomas M. Gregg	....do	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 17, 1866.
Francis Gibson	Rebel enrolling officer	Governor Brownlow, John B. Clark, H. Hunt, Jacob Barron, and M. S. Mchoney	Oct. 19, 1865.
Thomas P. Graham	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, W. C. Kyle, R. C. Woodson, William Eppes, M. B. Overton, J. Netherland, and James P. Swann.	Nov. 1, 1865.
Nathan Gammon	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Sept. 5, 1865.
W. D. Gale	Worth over $20,000	William T. Berry and M. Burns	Aug. 12, 1865.
George L. Gillespie	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow	July 6, 1866.
John C. Grace	Indicted for treason	....do	Dec. 28, 1865.
A. S. Grant	....do	....do	Dec. 28, 1866.
Austin Hall	....do	B. F. Tipton, J. J. Jenkins, Henry Hall, Eli Floyd, Amos Gobble, J. K. Grills, M. L. Carter, Richard Floyd, L. S. Roberts, Joseph Howell, W. T. Pennear, and E. Baker.	May 16, 1866.
J. M. Harbison	Rebel postmaster	J. Netherland	Feb. 19, 1866.
B. D. Harman	Worth over $20,000	Hon. E. Cooper and L. Owen	Oct. 5, 1865.
William R. Hunt	....do	Hon. E. Cooper, F. S. Richards, and P. B. Glenn	July 15, 1865.
Robert B. Hurt	....do	R. J. Meigs	July 25, 1865.
Benjamin Horn	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, F. L. Baumgardner, Peter Youkley, and William Snapp	Dec. 30, 1865.
A. N. Harris	....do	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1865.
Richard M. Hopper	Rebel postmaster	....do	Nov. 13, 1865.
E. Hord	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, R. J. Netherland, A. Hoffman, D. Rogan, and S. L. Henderson	Sept. 27, 1865.
C. A. Harrison	Indicted for treason	A. J. Fletcher, Secretary of State; William Cureton, M. A. Rodman, S. Morgan, and Governor Brownlow.	Oct. 31, 1865.
Hiram Heartsill	Rebel postmaster	L. Gifford and D. G. Vance	Nov. 13, 1865.
Isaac Hicks	Indicted for treason	F. L. Baumgardner, John S. Snapp, J. F. Anderson, and John H. Fain	Nov. 16, 1865.
J. C. M. Hankal	Rebel enrolling officer	Governor Brownlow, E. S. Cox George C. Bowman, J. Thompson, and Isaac White	Sept. 27, 1866.
John Hoyal	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, Hon. William B. Stokes, Asa Faulkner, John Morgan, J. J. Collins, Joseph J. Hoge, A. Cox, Franklin Locke, James A. Darwin, Wood Wilson, James G. Spears, N. Reith, A. A. Pearson, R. Henderson, J. S. Gillespie, and James R. Wood.	Oct. 9, 1865.
S. B. Henderson	Indicted for treason	William Heiskell, G. M. Hazen, S. A. Rogers, and P. H. Cardwell	Nov. 13, 1865.
John P. Hammer	Rebel enrolling officer and indicted for treason	J. Whitaker, J. D. S. Phipps, G. W. Sells, H. Lipps, William L. Smithson, William Buckler, James Mills, and Louis Whitaker.	Nov. 13, 1865.

P. S. Hale	Rebel postmaster	C. H. Mitchell, John Laughan, W. C. Kyle, A. B. Reede, and Joseph H. Logan	Oct. 23, 1865.
Thomas W. Humes	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 22, 1865.
Joseph Henderson	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Aug. 18, 1865.
W. H. S. Hill	Left a loyal district	Governor Brownlow, Hon. E. Cooper, John C. Gant, John W. Bowen, R. R. Butler, James H. Randolph, W. Spencer, Z. W. Frazer, and A. W. Moss.	Aug. 28, 1865.
J. W. Horton	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 19, 1865.
H. L. W. Hill	Ex-member 36th Congress United States	Horace H. Harrison and G. J. Stubblefield	Sept. 22, 1865.
Philip Harmon	Indicted for treason	Samuel Mark, George Copp, Samuel D. Mitchell, John H. Fain, and William H. Maxwell.	Nov. 6, 1865.
William H. Hidell	Left a loyal district	Alexander H. Stephens	Sept. 20, 1865.
R. M. Hopper	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 13, 1865.
W. A. Henderson	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1866.
J. C. Holland	....do	J. E. Merriman, I. M. Hill, J. P. Ware, and John W. Leftwich	Mar. 2, 1866.
John B. Hamilton	Left a loyal district	John W. Leftwich	July 14, 1866.
John F. House	Member of rebel provisional congress	Edward H. East	Dec. 27, 1866.
A. B. Harbison	Indicted for treason	Abraham Lillard, W. B. Reynolds, J. L. McCleary, Samuel Parks, James Parks, George M. Coleman, and George W. Bridges.	Sept. 29, 1866.
William N. Hays	....do	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 17, 1866.
J. W. Hambleton	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Mar. 27, 1866.
R. R. Harris	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 12, 1865.
William P. Harbison	....do	By order of the President	July 6, 1866.
R. P. Henderson	....do	....do	July 6, 1866.
J. H. Hughes	Ex-United States and rebel mail contractor	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 12, 1865.
John G. Henderson	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, William Heiskell, Samuel Lemart, S. D. Mitchell, S. A. Rodgers, D. R. Young, and A. A. Kyle.	Dec. 20, 1865.
Charles W. Inman	....do	George W. Dice, James H. Walker, and William Hammond	Nov. 13, 1865.
Howell E. Jackson	Rebel receiver	R. B. Glenn and Governor Brownlow	Jan. 26, 1866.
C. A. Jordan	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, A. H. Crowe, J. Grubb, R. M. Fisher, A. Blizard, J. F. Slover, J. H Hornesby, G. W. Ross, William H. Briant, and H. H. Rider.	Oct. 21, 1865.
C. Jones, sr.	Worth over $20,000	E. W. M. King, J. E. Merriman, William M. Farmingham, and I. M. Hill	June 16, 1865.
P. A. V. Johnson	....do	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 19, 1865.
William Jack	Indicted for treason and worth over $20,000	D. H. Gorman, Joseph O'Neil, Robert Henry, Thomas J. Gorman, G. W. Gorman, M. A. Rodman, and H. H. Baer.	Oct. 31, 1865.
W. B. Jones	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow and Samuel Sate	Oct. 2, 1865.
Caleb B. Jones	....do	Governor Brownlow and Samuel Sate	Oct. 2, 1865.
John W. Jones	....do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
Alvy. Jack	Indicted for treason	A. J. Fletcher, secretary of state, Governor Brownlow, James Clark, J. A. Hill, G. W. Gorman, and M. A. Rodman.	Oct. 31, 1865.
J. B. Johnson	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 19, 1865.
L. F. Johnson	Indicted for treason	....do	Nov. 16, 1865.
Andrew Jackson	Graduate of West Point	By order of the President	Oct. 3, 1865.
George W. Jones	Member of rebel congress	....do	June 16, 1865.
Ira P. Jones	Indicted for treason	John Kimble, William H. Smith, James Whitworth, and M. Burns	Oct. 20, 1865.
W. W. James	....do	Governor Brownlow, Samuel Evans, Andrew Shell, Samuel Snapp, John R. Spurgin, Peter Yookley, A. Gibson, Joshua Hamilton, G. W. Seils, Samuel Thomas, William Thomas, E. Ayres, Gideon Cate, J. N. Brown, George Anderson, J. N. Barker, and John Spurgin.	Sept. 27, 1865.
William Jones	....do	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1866.
E. F. Johnston	Left a loyal district	R. M. Edwards, James Batt, E. Burgess, W. H. Craigmiles, John Osment, and John F. Hayes.	Aug. 20, 1866.
Samuel D. Jackson	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Dec. 14, 1865.
Cave Johnson	....do	By order of the President	Aug. 19, 1865.
James Kinchloe	....do	Governor Brownlow, Mat. S. Mahoney, Landon E. Hale, and James Y. Deakins	Oct. 2, 1865.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
James Kennedy	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, William Heiskell, James C. Luttrell, A. G. Jackson, and E. C. Srigg	Sept. 27, 1865.
William H. King	Rebel justice of peace	Governor Brownlow, J. Waxler, J. Gott, John Gott, and F. L. Baumgardner	Oct. 2, 1865.
John G. King	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, M. G. Galliher, William F. Smithson, M. Lipps, E. W. Ellis, A. A. Kyle, R. R. Butler, A. Gibson, and R. J. Netherlands.	Sept. 27, 1865.
L. M. King	do	William E. Snapp, E. D. Reeder, and Samuel McGaughey	Oct. 21, 1865.
John Kennedy	Left a loyal district	Governor Brownlow, William Heiskell, John Williams, J. Rodgers, John M. Strong, and Robert N. McEwen	Sept. 13, 1865.
D. N. Kennedy	Rebel collector of war tax	Attorney General Speed	June 29, 1865.
Alfred King	Left a loyal district	By order of the President	Sept. 18, 1865.
John Kitzmiller	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, J. M. Hoss, Samuel B. Cunningham, W. R. Seviers, and Henry Hoss.	Jan. 6, 1866.
D. M. Kay	do	By order of the President	June 15, 1865.
E. A. Keeble	do	do	Sept. 18, 1865.
L. M. King	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, Samuel McGaughey, Wm. C. Snapp, and E. D. Reeder	Aug. 12, 1865.
James King	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1865.
R. A. King	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
James M. King	do	David T. Patterson, N. Y. Elliot, and B. D. Thomas	Aug. 26, 1865.
William G. Keys	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 13, 1866.
J. C. Luttrell	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, William Heiskell, James H. Armstrong, James Rodgers, John Baxter, O. P. Temple, Jos. M. Logan, and A. G. Jackson.	Sept. 11, 1865.
J. C. Lea	Left a loyal district	By order of the President	Sept. 6, 1865.
C. E. Lucky	Indicted for treason	Samuel Milligan, Henry Hoss, S. F. Shipley, J. F. Grisham, James Lyon, and John H. Fain.	Aug. 28, 1865.
Thomas Lathim	Rebel clerk of court	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 15, 1865.
E. Link	Left a loyal district	do	May 15, 1866.
Elijah Lee	do	J. D. Abbott, Jacob F. Peck, T. A. Henderson, sen., John D. Hamelton, Thomas A. Henderson, and Moulton Jones.	Nov. 13, 1865.
James M. Lee	Left a loyal State	J. D. Abbott, Jacob F. Peck, T. A. Henderson, John D. Hamelton, Thomas A. Henderson, and G. W. Gaines.	Nov. 13, 1865.
William H. Long	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
Frank H. Lytle	do	Governor Brownlow, E. L. Jordon, James M. Tompkins, E. H. East, W. Spencer, W. Bosson, and N. Y. Elliot.	Nov. 13, 1865.
William Lenoir	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster and worth over $20,000.	Governor Brownlow, John Caldwell, Thomas H. Callaway, and O. P. Temple	Aug. 12, 1865.
W. A. Lenoir	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, John Caldwell, O. P. Temple, and William Heiskell	Aug. 12, 1865.
Caswell D. Luttrell	Worth over $20,000 and indicted for treason	D. M. Key	Dec. 9, 1865.
John Leiper	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Aug. 10, 1865.
B. B. Leake	do	do	July 27, 1865.
Thomas J. Lee	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, William Simpson, W. C. Kyle, J. Netherland, A. A. Kyle, and C. A. Mitchell.	Mar. 26, 1866.
S. D. J. Lewis	do	By order of the President	May 5, 1866.
John D. Lotspeich	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow	Dec. 29, 1865.
Charles Lotspeich	do	do	Dec. 29, 1865.
John Lyle	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, John W. Cameron, Tipton Jobs, J. M. Johnson, and Henry Johnson	Dec. 4, 1865.

J. B. Long	Left a loyal State	General John A. Logan	Nov. 13, 1865.
N. J. Lillard	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Jan. 6, 1865.
Charles W. Meek	Rebel tax collector, and worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, A. A. Kyle, G. W. Telford, G. W. Nelson, D. T. Wilds, Daniel Regan, A. C. Fain, C. A. Evans, N. W. Earnest, S. D. Mitchell, John H. Fain, Samuel Snapp, and J. M. Hoss.	July 21, 1865.
Robert Mathews	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	By order of the President	Sept. 13, 1865.
James Miller	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, E. Smerley, Peter M. Reeves, Henry Johnson, and M. D. L. Boren	Nov. 13, 1865.
James S. McEatt	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 14, 1865.
D. Morris	Indicted for treason	Samuel Milligan, John B. Brownlow, David S. Patterson, William McFarland, James Fulton, S. M. Sawyers, Milton Shield, S. C. Perryman, F. S. Leeper, William Harris, William Galbraith, John C. Fate, and John Talbott.	Nov. 10, 1865.
C. C. Miller	Rebel postmaster	T. J. W. Lucky, J. Netherland, A. A. Kyle, and W. C. Kyle	Nov. 13, 1865.
Frank A. Moses	Indicted for treason	James C. Luttrell, John Williams, John Baxter, E. C. Trigg, William Hunt, William Heiskell, Thomas W. Humes, G. W. Adney, and James M. Meek.	Nov. 13, 1865.
G. Moore	do	By order of the President	Mar. 8, 1866.
Charles W. Malone	Worth over $20,000	W. L. Sharkey	July 21, 1866.
G. T. Magee	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, C. C. Wilcox, John K. Miller, Landan Carter, A. Jobe, M. Williams, James N. Cameron, and Samuel W. Scott.	Oct. 2, 1865.
Aaron L. Mims	do	Governor Brownlow, James Clark, A. Ramsey, G. W. Clark, M. A. Rodman, and James Fulton.	Apr. 1, 1866.
William Miller	do	By order of the President	July 6, 1866.
John A. Murphy	do	Governor Brownlow, E. A. Millard, F. L. Baumgardner, and E. W. Ellis	July 31, 1865.
W. S. Munday	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow, Joseph S. Fowler, R. F. Warner, S. C. Mercer, J. G. Frazer, R. L. Stanford, James Mullins, and S. Y. Carter.	Aug. 12, 1866.
E. W. Munford	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 30, 1866.
John M. Morrow	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Samuel Kubler, D. B. Barkley, and Joseph Sherfy	Oct. 21, 1865.
A. G. Mason	do	By order of the President	Sept. 22, 1865.
A. J. Montgomery	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 15, 1866.
Joseph H. Martin	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1865.
William M. Miller	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, William J. Donaldson, Thomas C. Miller, J. L. Cain, E. L. Andrus, Thomas J. McBroon, Thomas White, Joseph E. Kel, John R. Long, J. P. Hann, G. G. Read, and George S. Ellis.	Sept. 15, 1865.
Thomas L. Marshall	Indicted for treason	Charles A. Fuller, John McClelland, E. R. Glasscock, and John P. White	Sept. 19, 1865.
William P. Martin	do	Russell Houston	Oct. 2, 1865.
Samuel D. Morgan	Indicted for treason, and worth over $20,000	M. Burns	Sept. 20, 1865.
Irby Morgan	Worth over $20,000	Edward H. East	Sept. 20, 1865.
J. J. Murphy	do	General John G. Grierson, William H. Fitch, T. Dean, J. E. Merriman, Robert C. Gist, William Wallace, and H. T. Hurlburt.	Aug. 2, 1865.
A. Mullendore	Indicted for treason	S. C. McCrosky, James M. Sharp, S. B. Henderson, John Mitchell, Jackson Hout, and W. W. Montgomery.	May 16, 1866.
John Mullendore	do	John Mitchell, James M. Sharp, W. C. Pickery, and W. W. Montgomery	May 16, 1866.
William Morrow	do	Governor Brownlow	May 20, 1866.
A. J. Marchbanks	do	By order of the President	Aug. 30, 1865.
James M. Mark	do	Governor Brownlow, M. C. Hunter, George Copp, Samuel D. Mitchell, John H. Fain, and William H. Maxwell.	Sept. 11, 1865.
L. D. Myers	do	Governor Brownlow	Dec. 14, 1865.
A. M. Millard	do	do	July 25, 1865.
William McClellan	Rebel postmaster	By order of the President	June 12, 1866.
John B. McLin	Indicted for treason	do	June 18, 1866.
John A. McAffry	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 5, 1865.
Alexander McLin	do	Governor Brownlow, Henderson Presnell, John Miller, M. M. Stover, Joseph Broyles, E. E. Mank, and M. C. Hunter.	Oct. 2, 1865.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date.
H. L. McClung	Indicted for treason, and worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow and E. Longley	Nov. 1, 1865.
M. B. McMahon	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	June 6, 1866.
Houston McBee	do	do	July 6, 1866.
Joseph McCorkle	do	do	July 6, 1866.
J. B. McFerrin	Worth over $20,000	J. Cooper, Powhatan W. Maxey, Rees W. Porter, R. J. Morris, S. E. Hare, Jordan Stokes, John P. White, Hough Douglas, and M. Burns.	June 28, 1865.
W. D. McNish	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 19, 1865.
John F. McClure	Indicted for treason	do	Nov. 21, 1865.
F. H. McClung	do	P. Dickinson	Sept. 6, 1865.
George R. McClellan	do	Governor Brownlow	July 25, 1865.
T. M. McClanahan	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	John W. Leftwitch, William M. Smith, and Alvin Hawkins	Aug. 19, 1865.
William McPherson	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Henry Thomas, Marion Tipton, William Garner, Samuel Gibson, and J. K. Grills.	May 16, 1866.
J. C. McManus	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Jan. 26, 1866.
Robert P. McCulloch	Left a loyal State, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	do	Jan. 5, 1865.
R. J. McKinney	Rebel judge	Thomas A. R. Nelson, Jos. M. Logan, J. Netherland, John Williams, R. N. Armstrong, John Baxter, John M. Fleming, C. W. Jones, James P. Swann, and Thomas W. Humes.	Nov. 11, 1865.
W. H. Vance	Worth over $20,000	A. A. Steel and J. D. Johnson	Feb. 1, 1866.
Henry V. Nave	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 5, 1865.
J. C. A. Newton	Rebel enrolling officer	J. B. Cloud, L. D. Crysel, S. L. Logan, Samuel N. Cloud, James Lynn, J. E. Patton, and Finley Cox.	June 12, 1865.
John C. Neil	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, Thomas B. McClure, and J. M. Henderson	Sept. 6, 1865.
William C. Newell	do	Henry Hull, A. G. Hamilton, T. H. Crouch, J. M. Hoss, E. S. Cox, J. F. Grisham, and S. J. W. Lucky.	June 6, 1865.
H. T. Osborne	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 6, 1865.
Thomas E. Oldham	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Sept. 15, 1865.
John Overton	Worth over $20,000	do	Aug. 10, 1865.
E. P. Payne	do	W. P. Sones, A. S. Lindsley, D. F. Wilkins, and D. B. Thomas	June 30, 1865.
George B. Parker	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	May 5, 1866.
James Preston	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, J. Netherland, Jos. M. Logan, Charles R. Vance, A. Gibson, R. R. Butler, E. A. Millard, James J. Hatcher, Nat. B. Owens, and Samuel S. Logan.	Aug. 15, 1865.
Alexander J. Porter	Left a loyal district, and worth over $20,000	Jordan Stokes, M. Burns, and S. J. Carter	July 19, 1865.
John Powell	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	A. A. Kyle, John Blevins, W. C. Kyle, J. R. Pace, R. J. Netherlands, and Milton Shields	May 31, 1865.
Samuel Powell	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 23, 1865.
J. B. Palmer	Rebel major general	By order of the President	May 21, 1866.
George Pattison	Indicted for treason	J. E. Merriman, J. H. Way, Henry G. Smith, F. S. Richards, J. M. Hill, George R. Rutter, and L. S. Knowlton.	Aug. 31, 1865.
M. T. Peoples	do	Christopher Price, Robert L. Rowe, C. P. Bowman, D. P. Britt, A. A. McNabb, S. M. Anderson, J. H. Martin, D. W. Smalling, N. J. Johnson, and William Baker.	Sept. 19, 1865.
R. J. Person	Worth over $20,000	John B. Bibb and R. C. Wintersmith	Nov. 1, 1865.
G. M. D. Perry	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	Nov. 7, 1865.
William Peoples	do	Henry Johnson, S. M. Anderson, A. R. McNabb, and Thomas A. Faw	Nov. 6, 1865.

J. N. Patton	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Aug. 26, 1865.
G. M. D. Parry	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
John H. Parker	....do	By order of the President	Aug. 2, 1866.
Corry Pettigrew	Worth over $20,000	D. H. Davis and L. S. Thurstin	June 27, 1866.
John Pogue	Rebel mail contractor	Governor Brownlow	July 31 1865.
John Parham	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Sept. 25, 1865.
J. W. Quenichet	....do	Governor Brownlow, A. P. Burditt, William M. Forrington, and H. B. Howell	Oct. 27, 1865.
George Roller	Indicted for treason, and worth over $20,000	John Williams, W. C. Kyle, A. P. Caldwell, Jos. M. Logan, and A. A. Kyle	Oct. 2, 1865.
Orville Rice	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	W. C. Kyle, C. A. Mitchell, J. N. Netherlands, and A. A. Kyle	Jan. 19, 1866.
Jos. S. Rhea	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, C. J. Whicks, J. M. Hoss, D. J. Gibson, and James A. Dilworth	April 30, 1866.
L. F. Ragsdale	....do	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 28, 1865.
R. V. Richardson	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Nov. 10, 1865.
J. C. Ramsey	Rebel district attorney	....do	Nov. 10, 1865.
B. Ridley	Left a loyal State, and indicted for treason	Attorney General Speed	July 24, 1865.
John Russell	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, A. W. Walker, Samuel Henry, Andrew Reeder, James Davis, and William Brannan.	May 16, 1866.
J. L. Rhea	Rebel register	S. G. W. Lucky	May 30, 1865.
J. D. Robertson	Rebel route agent	Governor Brownlow, B. McDonnell, M. Lipps, E. D. Reeder, and G. W. St. John	Aug. 19, 1865.
John Russell	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, S. D. Love, William Rodgers, Thomas Boyd, and O. P. Temple	Aug. 19, 1865.
William P. Reeves	....do	Governor Brownlow, S. J. W. Lucky, Elbert S. Cox, Henry Hoss, Samuel B. Cunningham, and J. M. Hoss.	Aug. 19, 1865.
F. A. Ramsey	....do	By order of the President	Oct. 13, 1865.
James A. Rhea	....do	Governor Brownlow, Hon. Horace Maynard, S. J. W. Lucky, and James Lynn	Aug. 15, 1865.
Robert B. Rhea	....do	Governor Brownlow, F. L. Baumgardner, William C. Snapp, Samuel Thomas, William Thomas, Adam Thomas, and J. M. Yost.	July 25, 1865.
R. F. Reynolds	....do	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1865.
James Rankin	....do	Governor Brownlow, A. J. Fletcher, Charles Brockway, M. A. Rodman, James Laven, G. W. Gorman, James Clark, and J. A. Hill.	Oct. 31, 1865.
V. S. Rader	....do	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 20, 1865.
Andrew Rader	....do	....do	Nov. 20, 1865.
John T. Reynolds	....do	James W. Harold, Sam. Milligan, and R. A. Crawford	Nov. 13, 1865.
Joseph Russell	Worth over $20,000	J. Netherland, Samuel Neil, William M. Piper, Thomas G. Brownlow, and A. A. Kyle	Nov. 13, 1865.
F. W. A. Ramsey	Left a loyal State and indicted for treason	Governor Grownlow	July 31, 1865.
Thomas Russell	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, A. W. Walker, L. C. Hoss, Samuel Henry, W. S. Rush, R. A. Crawford, and James Davis.	May 16, 1866.
F. W. Rowser	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 19, 1865.
William B. Reese	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	June 12, 1865.
J. E. R. Ray	Indicted for treason, and rebel secretary of state.	Alvin Hawkins, James Worthen, John A. Rogers, T. J. Latham, John P. White, Ed. H. East, and John W. Leftwich.	July 21, 1865.
A. M. Rutledge	Graduate of West Point	Horace H. Harrison, Russell Houston, and E. H. East	Sept. 18, 1865.
Joseph Radd	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	April 17, 1866.
J. C. Roberts	....do	....do	Nov. 15, 1865.
George Robertson	Worth over $20,000	....do	April 30, 1865.
John D. Riley	Left a loyal State	J. Netherland, W. C. Kyle, John R. Brunner, John Williams, James White, and William M. Piper.	Jan. 19, 1866.
James Rankin	Indicted for treason	A. J. Fletcher, secretary of state	Oct. 31, 1865.
John Rhea	Rebel tax collector	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
Charles G. Rankin	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, James W. Galbraith, W. B. Rush, William Stanfield, John Johnson, William Johnson, Anthony Moore, John S. Scott, Eli Marsh, J. Jones, and J. A. Galbraith.	Oct. 2, 1865.
Daniel L. Reeves	Worth over $20,000	A. J. Fletcher, secretary of state, and Hon. E. Cooper	Aug. 26, 1865.
George Shults	Rebel justice of peace	Governor Brownlow	Jan. 19, 1866.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
James K. Simpson	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	April 17, 1866.
John Shields	do	Governor Brownlow, Isaac Brannan, Samuel Henry, M. S. Patterson, and R. A. Crawford	Mar. 19, 1866.
William J. Sykes	Rebel commissioner	By order of the President	Dec. 20, 1865.
W. C. Slemons	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, J. D. Cox, Samuel E. Griffith, and J. Boyd	May 2, 1866.
Charles Stokely	do	Governor Brownlow	June 13, 1866.
G. A. Shook	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
James L. Sparks	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow and L. W. Keen	Oct. 2, 1865.
B. P. Spicer	Rebel sheriff	D. B. Thomas and W. B. Campbell	Dec. 19, 1866.
Nelson Seal	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, A. A. Kyle, M. B. Overton, J. Netherland, Noel Colson, and W. C. Kyle.	Mar. 28, 1866.
William Shewn	do	Governor Brownlow	Dec. 24, 1865.
W. S. Scott	Rebel sheriff	do	Nov. 20, 1865.
W. W. Stringfield	Indicted for treason	S. T. Logan, John Williams, A. G. Jackson, Joseph Jackson, William Heiskell, and James H. Armstrong.	Nov. 13, 1865.
Alexander Stuart	do	Governor Brownlow, A. J. Fletcher, J. W. Clark, M. A. Roadman, J. A. Hill, and H. H. Baer.	Oct. 31, 1865.
William M. Stokely	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, S. R. Rodgers, and William Heiskell	Sept. 27, 1865.
Morris C. Sullins	Indicted for treason and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Governor Brownlow, John Lathlee, William W. Alexander, G. W. Kinder, Samuel Armstrong, George W. Ross, M. L. Phillips, Lon. Blizard, John G. Helm, A. Caretwell, A. C. Robeson, S. W. Hyden, G. W. Gilbert, Joseph Matthews, M. R. May, James Turner, James H. Hornsby, R. M. Fisher, Benjamin Walls, and L. Dodson.	Oct. 21, 1865.
M. Stratton	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 26, 1865.
Thomas Sharp	Rebel agent to Europe	do	Sept. 27, 1865.
G. C. Sandusky	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, P. M. Mullen, James E. Collins, W. B. Adams, W. G. West, and Thomas J. Locke.	Oct. 24, 1865.
James Swagerty	do	Governor Brownlow, A. J. Fletcher, William Cureton, H. H. Baer, A. McNabb, and M. A. Rodman.	Oct. 24, 1865.
G. P. Smith	do	By order of the President	Oct. 25, 1865.
John Smith	do	Governor Brownlow, A. J. Fletcher, Thomas Noe, J. A Clark, jr., and H. H. Baer	Oct. 31, 1865.
James Shields	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, William P. Long, George G. Taylor, J. L. Cain, W. M. Miller, and E. L. Andruss.	Nov. 5, 1865.
Samuel C. Swann	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 5, 1865.
S. P. Smith	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, H. S. French, D. D. Dickey, and John H. Smith	Aug. 15, 1865.
Alexander E. Smith	Indicted for treason and worth over $20,000	John Baxter, J. M. Fleming, O. P. Temple, and G. Jones	Nov. 8, 1865.
Frank Smith	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Oct. 28, 1865.
John H. Speed	do	do	Oct. 5, 1865.
Hannah W. Swan	do	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 27, 1865.
Junette Sp tswood	do	Attorney General Speed	Oct. 5, 1865.
Mary H. Speed	do	do	Oct. 5, 1865.
John S. Sanborn	do	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 6, 1865.
E. W. Sehon	do	By order of the President	Aug. 14, 1865.
John L. Sehon	Rebel district attorney, and worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 14, 1865.
J. E. Saunders	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
Thomas Smith	do	do	Dec. 30, 1865.

James P. Snapp	Indicted for treason	A. J. Cox, F. L. Baumgardner, William C. Snapp, and Samuel Snapp	Oct. 19, 1865.
John Shaver	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	By order of the President	May 30, 1865.
C. J. St. John	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, H. C. Fain, F. L. Baumgardner, W. C. Snapp, F. Sturn, T. B. Rhea, Samuel Evans, J. Hamilton, and G. W. Sells.	July 26, 1865.
Henry Sliger	do	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 8, 1865.
J. L. Saffarans	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	do	Aug. 18, 1865.
B. A. Sinclair	Rebel postmaster	J. A. Lackey, Isaac M. Steele, J. C. Marley, J. N. Waralan, H. J. Turner, George Johnston, and Isaac Sampson.	Aug. 2, 1865.
James M. Sharp	do	Governor Brownlow, William Heiskell, H. D. Houck, Charles Inman, C. W. Jones, Robert Pickens, and W. C. Pickens.	Aug. 18, 1865.
Adam Sliger	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 8, 1865.
D. W. Stewart	do	H. H. Baer, M. McNabb, T. E. Flinn, C. Brockway, and M. A. Roadman	Oct. 18, 1865.
V. K. Stevenson	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Attorney General Speed	Aug. 14, 1865.
G. C. Torbitt	Worth over $20,000	Judge Patterson and Russell Houston	Oct. 28, 1865.
Frazer Titus	do	John W. Leftwich, J. M. Hill, and J. E. Merriman	Aug. 14, 1865.
T. W. Turley	Proceedings commenced for confiscation, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Brownlow and David S. Patterson	Oct. 9, 1865.
James T. Thornton	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	July 21, 1865.
John C. Tate	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	James Fulton, Milton Shields, John Talbott, and A. A. Kyle	Nov. 13, 1865.
John S. Thomas	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, James M. Crockett, J. B. Miller, and L. H. Ellis	Sept. 27, 1865.
George D. Taylor	do	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 27, 1865.
A. W. O. Totten	Worth over $20,000	do	Jan. 18, 1866.
Dr. N. Thomas	do	Cave Johnson	Oct. 12, 1865.
P. H. Taylor	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
T. H. Trice	Rebel collector of customs	Governor Brownlow, A. P. Burdett, J. E. Merriman, William M. Farmingham, and Henry T. Shulbert.	Aug. 19, 1865.
R. A. Thompson	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
George Taliaferro	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	July 6, 1866.
James L. Talbot	Rebel clerk of court	Governor Brownlow	Oct. 2, 1865.
J. P. Tipton	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, J. B. Dunhat, E. Simerley, John K. Miller, John M. Smith, A. C. Williams Henderson Roberts, and A. Jobe.	Oct. 2, 1865.
Samuel Tate	Left a loyal State	By order of the President	May 31, 1865.
John S. Thomas	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Daniel Campbell, James Dugger, James P. Scott, James D. Smith, J. B. Miller, A. Jobe, John M. Smith, and A. C. Williams.	Aug. 25, 1865.
J. S. Thomason	Rebel enrolling officer	J. Netherland	June 16, 1865.
N. M. Taylor	Indicted for treason	David T. Patterson	Aug. 31, 1865.
William H. Tallferro	do	Governor Brownlow	Dec. 20, 1865.
William A. Upton	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	By order of the President	Dec. 29, 1865.
William A. Upton, jr	Indicted for treason	do	Dec. 29, 1865.
R. Vestal	do	Governor Brownlow	Nov. 13, 1865.
William P. Vestal	do	Anderson Hill, William Heiskell, William J. Bise, A. G. Jackson, E. C. Trigg, F. W. Coleman, and John Williams.	Nov. 13, 1865.
Charles R. Vance	Rebel commissioner	Samuel Milligan, James M. Devault, Samuel Bachman, David Pence, John G. Gott, William Pile, James F. Marion, James G. Hicks, Thomas Fain, Harry Prior, John Palmer, and Joel Litz.	Nov. 7, 1865.
Jacob Wagner	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow	Feb. 26, 1866.
P. B. Whitlock	do	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
P. B. Whitlock, jr	do	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
John Wood	do	By order of the President	Apr. 17, 1866.
Alexander Wheless	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow, H. S. French, John Trimble, and John McClelland	Aug. 8, 1865.
O. M. White	Rebel enrolling officer, and indicted for treason.	Governor Brownlow, John R. Spurgin, Wm. Thomas, Samuel Thomas, A. Thomas, T. B. Rhea, Henry Garst, G. W. Spurgin, and Joseph Wise.	Aug. 8, 1865.

Tennessee—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
T. J. Wilkinson	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	William B. Campbell	Dec. 7, 1866.
J. G. Wallace	Rebel district attorney	Governor Brownlow and A. J. Fletcher	Nov. 13, 1865.
John E. Williams	Rebel postmaster	Governor Brownlow, Henry Hoss, James G. R. Boyd, and James A. Dilworth	Apr. 30, 1866.
James Williams	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	By order of the President	June 27, 1866.
M. J. Wright	Rebel brigadier general	William H. Fitch, J. E. Merriman, J. M. Hill, R. Hough, William Wallace, John Bullock, Henry T. Hurlburt, Samuel T. Morgan, and Robert C. Gist.	Aug. 3, 1866.
Isaac E. Wilson	Rebel sheriff, and indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Thomas S. Smyth, R. A. Donnely, Fred. Shimp, Robert E. Berry, G. H. Shown, James D. Donnelly, D. W. Wills, J. W. Roberts, and A. G. Shour.	Oct. 2, 1865.
B. L. Warren	Indicted for treason	James Henry, Spencer Henry, John F. Henry, Wm. Heiskell, and James H. Armstrong	Aug. 16, 1865.
A. G. Watkins	——do——	Governor Brownlow, J. F. Sleeper, James M. Nicholson, W. Galbraith, E. E. Watkins, John Talbott, M. R. Murrell, and John C. Tate.	Oct. 17, 1865.
John Walker	——do——	By order of the President	Nov. 13, 1865.
B. C. Wells	Rebel enrolling officer	J. C. Hattery, A. Lollor, John Dilboore, William B Wilson, William M. Sullivan, and J. Gilmer.	Nov. 13, 1865.
A. Wright	Worth over $20,000, and proceedings commenced for confiscation.	D. M. Leatherman, Henry G. Smith, and P. Miller	July 26, 1865.
Isaac A. White	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, Thos. Russell, Wm. S. Headrick, Leventon Bird, and T. P. Headrick	Nov. 13, 1865.
H. J. Welcker and B. F. Welcker	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Governor Brownlow, W. S. Patton, James M. Sturgis, Joseph D. Turner, J. M. Littleton, George Littleton, Mitchell Rose, Thomas J. Mason, F. Young, H. Crumbliss, William B. Dalton, Wiley M. Christian, Albert T. Lea, and Alexander D. Rhea.	Sept. 15, 1865.
M. C. Whitthone	Indicted for treason	A. M. Hughes	July 25, 1865.
Thomas Webster	Left a loyal State, and worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow, D. D. Holman, and John McClelland	Nov. 17, 1865.
John Wright	Indicted for treason	Henry Johnson, E. Johnson, T. H. Miller, Elbert E. Miller, James M. Carr, William Lyle, Tipton Jobe, W. H. Taylor, William H. Young, William Baker, William I. Topping, James Miller, and E. Simerly.	Oct. 27, 1865.
Richard J. White	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Sept. 14, 1865.
R. T. Wilson	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 15, 1865.
H. L. Walling	Rebel postmaster	By order of the President	July 6, 1866.
George R. West	Worth over $20,000	Hon. A. M. West	June 8, 1866.
James P. White	——do——	Governor Brownlow	Sept. 13, 1865.
W. Williams	——do——	By order of the President	Aug. 8, 1865.
R. J. Wilson	——do——	John Caldwell and William Heiskell	Nov. 13, 1865.
W. S. Whitman	——do——	M. Burns, A. V. S. Lindsley, and E. R. Glascock	Aug. 19, 1865.
M. J. Wicks	——do——	Governor Brownlow	Mar. 2, 1866.
George W. Winchester	——do——	——do——	Nov. 17, 1865.
John M. Watson	Left a loyal State	Governor Brownlow and E. H. East	Oct. 2, 1865.
Coleman M. Witt	Rebel postmaster	George T. Taylor, C. J. Bennett, Milton Shields, John F. Noe, and John M. Bewley	Nov. 21, 1866.
J. J. Williams	Indicted for treason	By order of the President	May 3, 1866.
H. C. Yeatman	Worth over $20,000	Governor Brownlow	Aug. 19, 1865.
B. F. Yoe	Indicted for treason	Governor Brownlow, William Henry Maxwell, John A. Rader, Joseph M. Logan, J. Netherland, and Alex. Cawood.	Aug. 30, 1865.
James H. Yett	——do——	J. Netherland, Thomas A. R. Nelson, and R. A. Crawford	Mar. 28, 1865.
Hamilton Yett	——do——	Governor Brownlow	Apr. 17, 1866.

TEXAS.

William T. Austin	Rebel marshal	Governor Hamilton	Feb. 23, 1866.
S. B. Allen	Rebel depositary	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
W. F. Alexander	Worth over $20,000	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
H. B. Andrews	Member of rebel legislature, and worth over $20,000.	do	Mar. 24, 1866.
J. D. Andrews	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, J. S. Roberts, and Sterling Fisher	Dec. 8, 1865.
William B. Aiken	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
S. W. Allen	do	do	Sept. 19, 1865.
J. Atkinson	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
William Ahrenbeck	do	Governor Hamilton and L. Sherwood, Texas, Durfee & Jacques, Tufts, Butis & Co., Hanford Brenning, Hopkins, Dwight & Turnbridge, Joseph A. Spurgin, and M. Burtis, New York.	Apr. 7, 1865.
Philip H. Adams	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Smith Brown, O. Benedict, John Love, W. R. Bratton, A. L. Smith, and D. F. Knight.	Apr. 11, 1866.
William Anderson	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 20, 1866.
T. C. Armstrong	Worth over $20,000	Edward Austin and George W. Grover	Sept. 26, 1866.
William B. Armstrong	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, W. W. Bishop, John T. Flint, H. Christian, E. D. Stubblefield, J. N. Damon, and Joseph Carter.	Apr. 30, 1866.
S. L. Allen	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Dec. 1, 1865.
John Adriance	Rebel cotton agent, and worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
M. H. Barnett	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, M. L. Armstrong, G. W. Wright, and William Bramlette	Dec. 8, 1865.
John A. Bagby	Collector of rebel war tax	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Barnett	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, C. Cowan, G. M. Shoaf, and O. O. Surcy	Jan. 12, 1866.
James K. Blair	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Joseph Bates	Worth over $20,000	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
O. L. Battle	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John M. Brown	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
C. S. Betts	Rebel postmaster, and collector of war tax	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
George Ball	Engaged in blockade running, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Hamilton, F. Flake, Albert Ball, George W. Grover, and H. Stewart	Aug. 19, 1865.
J. W. Brown	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and James H. Bell	Nov. 18, 1865.
G. M. Bryan	do	Governor Hamilton, General R. B. Hays, Hon. Samuel F. Miller, and Hon. John Hancock	Sept. 14, 1865.
S. A. Belden	do	General Banks, Ami Wood, United States commercial agent, Mexico, Israel Bigelow, and Hon. Lyman Turnbull.	Oct. 12, 1865.
J. T. Brady	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
William Brady	do	John H. Semmes, William J. Murtagh, Mayor Wallach, and Thomas E. Lloyd, (citizens of Washington.)	Aug. 8, 1865.
Charles E. Bolles	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton and David B. Bonfrey	Oct. 31, 1865.
John Bremond	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.
A. J. Burke	do	Governor Hamilton, Lorenzo Sherwood, M. Taylor, Amaron L. Reid, Charles Dunn, Gibson, Durfee & Jaques, Hall, Southwick & Co., and John Burtes.	Nov. 13, 1865.
W. P. Ballinger	Rebel receiver	Governor Hamilton, Judge Miller, and Hon. John Hancock	Aug. 19, 1865.
J. M. Brown	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and Major General Granger	Aug. 19, 1866.
Thomas E. Blackshear	do	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 22, 1865.
W. J. Bryan	do	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
Moses A. Bryan	do	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
C. Ballard	do	do	Nov. 14, 1865.
James E. Boulden	do	By order of the President	Jan. 20, 1866.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
Eliza A. Boyd	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Mar. 6, 1866.
Jacob L. Briggs	do	Governor Hamilton, Hon. E. D. Morgan, and George Opdyke	Jan. 11, 1866.
Jack Baker	do	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 12, 1866.
Henry W. Bendy	Agent of rebel treasury department	By order of the President	Mar. 29, 1866.
J. P. Bingham	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
H. Bass	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
George W. G. Browne	Clerk of rebel district court	Hon. L. D. Evans, E. M. Pease, B. Graham, S. W. Baker, and James H. Raymond	Aug. 8, 1866.
Felix A. Blucher	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Sept. 1, 1865.
Solomon Bowers	Marshal of the rebel district court	Governor Hamilton, William H. Ledbetter, Z. M. P. French, W. B. Price, L. F. Price, John W. Farley, T. M. Grasmeyer, C. Hermann, C. Walter, H. Huttel, William B. McClellan, T. E. Lewis, and G. A. Eckels.	Apr. 30, 1866.
H. S. Bennett	Worth over $20,000	Hon. L. E. Evans	Dec. 5, 1866.
James Bourland	do	Hon. John Hancock	Nov. 30, 1866.
John B. Banks	do	Governor Hamilton, H. Duty, A. Brown, Robert H. Smith, and E. B. Turner	July 31, 1866.
R. T. Bryarly	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 26, 1866.
C. W. Buckley	do	do	Nov. 18, 1866.
G. A. Batte	Rebel assessor of tax	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
Eli Bailey	Rebel postmaster	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
George W. Breeding	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton and Hon. George W. Smith	Apr. 30, 1866.
John Blair	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Hon. L. N. Cooper, John H. Potts, and O. C. Aldrich	Apr. 30, 1866.
James M. Burris	Rebel mail contractor	Governor Hamilton	July 6, 1866.
C. C. Binkley	Rebel State commissioner	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Mrs. Mary S. Boyce	Worth over $20,000	V. B. Bell, United States Treasury agent, and J. B. Jones, captain commanding post Jefferson.	Mar. 6, 1866.
William A. Baker	Rebel States tax assessor, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Hamilton, Brevet Major General C. C. Andrews, Brevet Brigadier General Clark, Ingham S. Roberts, Sterling Fisher, J. E. Lille, Irvin C. Lord, H. H. Dooley, H. R. Allen, E. Simmler, and C. Dart.	Oct. 27, 1865.
C. E. Bolls	Rebel tax assessor	S. D. Wood	June 28, 1866.
Charles L. Bolton	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, H. Stewart, and Samuel Harris	May 15, 1866.
W. H. H. Baldridge	Ex United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
William B. Botts	Deputy clerk of rebel district court	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Dunbar Bragg	Rebel postmaster and tax collector	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Brown	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, J. S. Roberts, J. R. Morris, George Hancock, and A. Gowan	Aug. 24, 1865.
Dewitt C. Booth	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 2, 1865.
Joseph Bird	Rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 1, 1865.
J. M. Brooks	Rebel tax collector, and worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
D. W. Bouldin	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 10, 1865.
J. De Cordova	Collector of rebel war tax	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Thomas F. Critchfield	Rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
R. E. Campbell	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
T. A. Caldwell	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
O. L. Cochran	do	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
W. W. Cockrun	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
T. Clay	Worth over $20,000	do	Jan. 25, 1866.

John A. Clark	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 20, 1865.
J. T. Cassiano	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Thos. H. Stubbling, Jas. Fisk, Hon. J. A. Paschal, and Nat. Lewis	Dec. 8, 1865.
R. C. Campbell	do	Governor Hamilton, A. M. Branch, C. J. Keenan, J. H. Bantow, Thos. Carothers, John S. Bessor, J. A. Baker, and Samuel D. Way.	Dec. 8, 1865.
E. W. Cawthon	do	Governor Hamilton	Feb. 5, 1866.
John W. Chadwick	do	do	Dec. 18, 1865.
Philip D. Crume	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
C. H. Cooper	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Rufus Cates	Rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 8 1865.
L. Cannon	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 24, 1865.
Philip Cheek	do	do	Sept. 22, 1865.
R. M. Collins	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
Aaron Coffee	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
F. W. Chandler	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
John Caldwell	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
Walter Caruth	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
William Caruth	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Jacob Carroll	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
S. E. Clement	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Ira M. Camp	do	do	Sept. 22, 1865.
William Chappell	do	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
Ramsey M. Cox	do	Governor Hamilton, H. Christian, Warner Wallace, James W. Moore, Joseph Cater, E. D. Stubblefield, A. W. Richard, and J. N. Dennon.	Mar. 13, 1866.
J. H. Cutler	Rebel assessor	Governor Hamilton, John Rugley, Samuel W. Hardeman, J. Plunkett, Alexander J. Rugeley, William F. Davis, S. G. Powell, P. S. McNeal, Henry Thorp, W. G. Warren, and James R. Thompson.	Mar. 8, 1866.
A. C. Crawford	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 11, 1866.
E. H. Cushing	do	do	Apr. 26, 1866.
Daniel Cole	Rebel postmaster	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
Nelson Clements	Blockade runner, and worth over $20,000	By order of the President	July 6, 1866.
T. P. Collins	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 30, 1866.
Hiram Close	Worth over $20,000	do	Aug. 8, 1866.
William R. Cowan	Collector of rebel war tax	do	Aug. 8, 1866.
O. H. P. Cavender	Rebel postmaster	do	July 6, 1866.
M. Cartwright	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and L. D. Evans	Dec. 4, 1866.
William H. Clement	Rebel postmaster	Samuel D. Gibley, F. A. Goodley, George M. Johnson, D. W. Crow, S. S. Johnson, H. V. Hamilton, J. W. Davenport, S. S. Gibbs, E. F. Swann, Samuel L. Earll, W. Bell, B. Walker, F. M. Hays, J. M. Secton, J. F. Rasbury, Burk Yarbrough, John C. Robertson, and F. N. Gray.	Oct. 11, 1866.
John A. Clarke	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Thomas F. Webb, Nat. Mitchell, and R. W. Davis	July 6, 1866.
James P. Cole	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	June 25, 1866.
W. W. Chandler	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 20, 1865.
A. W. Carneal	Assessor of rebel tax	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
John R. Clate	Collector of rebel tax	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
William E. Crump	Worth over $20,000	do	Apr. 28, 1866.
B. J. Chambers	do	Governor Hamilton, Samuel Wright, and L. W. Spence	Apr. 28, 1866.
James Y. Collier	do	Governor Hamilton, J. B. Williamson, D. B. Bonfry, S. D. Wood, and L. D. Evans	Apr. 28, 1866.
Patterson Clark	Collector of rebel tax	Governor Hamilton, James G. Cleary, D. C. Grover, Martin O. Tool, T. J. Smith, W. B. Burdine, Charley Bradley, Martin Everhart, Patrick Quinn, H. T. Clare, James Wilson, C. B. Palmer, N. C. Webster, Luke Hart, John Hynes, R. C. Wright, R. R. David, D. W. Sullivan, J. B. Madrey, P. R. Mitchell, W. R. Hayes, and Charles Kibbe.	Nov. 3, 1865.
L. D. Carrington	Worth over $20,000	John Hancock and Georgo Hancock	May 14, 1866.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
W. H. D. Carrington	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	May 14, 1866.
John Dean	do	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John P. Davie	do	do	Oct. 21, 1865.
William Davis	do	do	Nov. 17, 1865.
R. M. Dickson	Rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 3, 1865.
W. W. Downs	Worth over $20,000	do	Feb. 28, 1866.
J. W. Downs	Collector and assessor of rebel tax	do	Feb. 28, 1866.
J. L. Darragh	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 12, 1865.
Isaac N. Dennis	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
John Duncan	do	Governor Hamilton and James H. Bell	Nov. 18, 1865.
Samuel Damon	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
John Dickinson	do	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
Francis T. Duffan	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Daniel Devine	do	do	Jan. 25, 1866.
George W. Davis	Rebel postmaster	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John W. Duncy	Worth over $20,000	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
R. C. Doom	Rebel collector of revenue	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
W. W. Dunlap	Collector of rebel war tax	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
George J. Durham	do	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
E. C. Dewey	Rebel postmaster	Hon. L. D. Evans	Aug. 27, 1866.
J. D. Dumas	Rebel collector and assessor	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 25, 1866.
James P. Dumas	Worth over $20,000	do	Apr. 25, 1866.
David H. Davis	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Thomas H. Duggan	Commissioner of rebel States	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
C. F. Duer	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster, and worth over $20,000.	do	Oct. 27, 1865.
S. H. Dardens	Member of rebel congress	do	Nov. 14, 1865.
William M. Ewing	Collector of rebel tax	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
L. E. Edmondson	Worth over $20,000	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John Ewing	Rebel deputy marshal and worth over $20,000	do	Feb. 23, 1866.
J. C. Eccles	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
John Echols	do	do	Nov. 17, 1865.
John P. Evans	do	do	Sept. 22, 1865.
W. C. Edwards	Collector of rebel tax	do	July 6, 1866.
Cornelius Ennis	Worth over $20,000	do	Sept. 28, 1866.
Thomas H. Espy	Collector of rebel war tax	do	July 6, 1866.
William Freeman	Worth over $20,000	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
John H. Fowshee	Rebel mail contractor	do	Jan. 11, 1866.
O. A. Fisher	Rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
J. M. Fort	Worth over $20,000	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
William Forrester	do	do	Feb. 5, 1866.
John V. Ford	do	do	Apr. 18, 1866.
Gabriel Felder	do	do	Dec. 16, 1865.
James M. Foster	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.

J. S. Franklin	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	Henry Conelly, governor of New Mexico	Jan. 6, 1865.
Abraham Freeman	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, A. Bledrol, William S. White, William M. George, T. B. McCardy, H. J. Moffett, James J. Lavender, William R. Moffett, John Mackay, and W. S. George.	Mar. 21, 1866.
John D. Ford	....do	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 18, 1866.
David Ferguson	Collector of rebel war tax	Governor Hamilton, W. Andrus, Ben. F. Atkins, and A. E. Ford	Apr. 30, 1866.
W. G. L. Foley	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	June 22, 1866.
Henry Fanthorp	....do	....do	Sept. 19, 1865.
William Forraus	Rebel tax collector	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Samuel W. Fisher	Rebel surveyor of customs	....do	Apr. 30, 1866
J. L. Green	Worth over $20,000	....do	Oct. 24, 1865.
R. J. Goode	Rebel assessor of tax	....do	Jan. 12, 1866.
Thomas Gibbs	Worth over $20,000	....do	Mar. 6, 1866.
Sanford Gibbs	....do	....do	Jan. 15, 1866.
E. A. Glover	....do	Governor Hamilton, Thomas B. White, A. T. Oliver, and Phil. M. Curry	Feb. 5, 1866.
J. D. Giddings	Rebel receiver, and worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, O. H. P. Garrett, J. A. Randle, James J. Armblister, W. F. Garrett, and John A. Buckholes.	Dec. 8, 1865.
A. Groesbeck	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 11, 1866.
B. M. Grace	....do	....do	Mar. 21, 1866.
George Gordon	....do	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
William H. Hill	....do	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
William C. Greer	....do	....do	Sept. 22, 1865.
Leonard W. Groce	....do	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
George W. Glasscock	....do	....do	Oct. 28, 1865.
William S. Glass	Rebel States receiver	....do	Jan. 4, 1865.
E. D. Galbraith	Worth over $20,000	....do	Nov. 18, 1865.
W. B. P. Gaines	....do	Governor Hamilton, D. J. Baldwin, A. M. Cochran, Captain and Provost Marshal James H. Bell.	Nov. 18, 1865.
William B. Grimes	....do	Governor Hamilton	Oct. 27, 1865.
Edward H. Green	Rebel assessor of tax	....do	July 6, 1866.
W. A. Green	Collector of rebel tax	....do	July 6, 1866.
James W. Gwinn	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, J. W. Heathard, R. E. Bordan, and W. R. McMullen	Apr. 30, 1866.
Thomas B. Greenwood	Rebel deputy marshal	Governor Throckmorton and Hon. R. A. Reeves	Dec. 5, 1866.
L. V. Greer	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and Hon. L. D. Evans	Dec. 4, 1866.
John H. Gibson	....do	Governor Hamilton	May 15, 1866.
G. H. Giddings	Rebel mail contractor	Hon. John Hancock	May 12, 1866.
John A. Green	Rebel receiver	....do	May 12, 1866.
T. C. Gregory	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Thomas B. Grayson	Collector of rebel war tax	....do	May 5, 1866.
James Galbraith	Assessor of rebel war tax	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
George Goldthwaite	Commissioner of rebel States district court	Brevet Brigadier General Clark and George W. Paschal	Oct. 12, 1865.
H. T. Garnett	Worth over $20,000	By order of the President	Dec. 2, 1865.
C. B. Garwood	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 30, 1866.
J. L. Gay	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, L. Lindsay, W. B. Price, and Z. M. P. French	Apr. 28, 1866.
L. G. Harman	Rebel Indian agent	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Joel W. Hagee	Rebel postmaster	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
W. H. Hord	Rebel brigadier general	Governor Hamilton, J. K. Record, Ed. C. Browder, and Nat. M. Banford	Dec. 8, 1865.
L. M. Hitchcock	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Governor Marvin, (Florida,) and Lorenzo Sherwood	Oct. 18, 1865.
J. J. Hendley	....do	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 13, 1865.
Thomas W. House	....do	Governor Hamilton, Brevet Brigadier General Clark, Ingham S. Robbins, C. J. Manis, Sterling Fisher, J. C. Lord, and H. R. Allen.	Sept. 20, 1865.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
William J. Hutchins	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Brevet Brigadier General Clark, Brevet Major General C. C. Andrews, Major General Granger, Major Mower, Ingbram S. Roberts, Sterling Fisher, J. C. Lord, H. R. Allen, and J. E. Lillie.	Sept. 20, 1865.
Thomas R. J. Hill	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 14, 1865.
A. W. Hill	do	do	Nov. 14, 1865.
J. C. Higgins	do	do	Nov. 14, 1865.
Leonard C. Hupp	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
William M. Harrison	Member of rebel legislature, and worth over $20,000.	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
G. T. Howard	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, L. J. Farwell, ex-governor of Wisconsin, and R. J. Meigs, sr.	Dec. 1, 1865.
E. P. Hunt	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
William Hendley	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John W. Harris	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
J. W. Henderson	do	Governor Hamilton, A. S. Roberts, A. P. Wiley, D. J. Baldwin, W. A. Daly, C. B. Sabine, Sterling Fisher, H. H. Dooley, and J. E. Lillie.	Dec. 8, 1865.
Galen Hodges	do	Governor Hamilton, William H. Burkhart, D. E. E. P. Warman, W. Hillard, and P. E. Nicholson.	Mar. 13, 1866.
Richard A. Howard	do	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 29, 1866.
Warren Hooks	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
James E. Hopkins	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
E. M. Hopkins	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Reece Hughes	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Hill	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Whitfield Harral	do	do	Oct. 24, 1865.
J. R. Hawkins	do	Governor Hamilton and James H. Bell	Nov. 18, 1865.
William P. Hill	District judge of the rebel States	Governor Hamilton, J. S. Roberts, Sterling Fisher, James Burke, J. Bailey, and J. R. Morris.	Nov. 14, 1865.
L. P. Harris	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, J. L. Camp, and W. P. Beall	Apr. 11, 1866.
John H. Herndon	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
W. J. E. Heard	do	Governor Hamilton and Francis M. White	Nov. 18, 1865.
C. K. Hall	do	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 22, 1865.
B. A. Harrison	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
Eliza Herton	do	Governor Hamilton and Hon. James H. Bell	Nov. 18, 1865.
R. J. Horton	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
John Horan	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 20, 1865.
William V. Hughes	do	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
J. B. Hamell	Rebel assessor of war tax	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
W. K. Hamblen	Rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 1, 1865.
John H. Hutchins	Commissioner of rebel district court	Governor Hamilton, Albert Ball, George W. Grover, and H. Stewart	Aug. 19, 1865.
W. R. Hinckley	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, D. Shamsins, Josiah Dowling, T. A. Hester, and A. K. Fraster	Nov. 7, 1865.
William R. Hobbs	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 7, 1865.
James G. Holloway	Rebel assessor of tax	do	Mar. 8, 1866.
William P. Hughes	Rebel postmaster	do	July 6, 1866.
Alexander Henderson	Rebel deputy marshal	John W. Leftwich	Aug. 8, 1866.

George W. Hoffey	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 30, 1866.
William W. Holman	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and Hon. L. D. Evans	Dec. 4, 1866.
E. R. Hord	Rebel collector of customs, and worth over $20,000.	By order of the President	Oct. 1, 1866.
B. F. Harris	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
M. J. Hall	Depositary of rebel treasury	Governor Hamilton and Hon. Thomas H. Duvall	Oct. 24, 1865.
Edward Hickey	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and George W. Paschal	July 18, 1866.
John F. Heinitz	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	July 6, 1866.
E. G. Houston	Rebel commissioner	Governor Hamilton, Thomas H. Stribling, W. E. Jones, and J. A. Paschal	Apr. 30, 1866.
T. A. Harris	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Z. M. P. French, L. Lindsey, W. B. Price, G. W. Shiks, William B. McClellan, and John W. Fahey.	May 28, 1866.
John C. Hill	Collector of rebel war tax		Dec. 6, 1865.
John R. Henry	Worth over $20,000, and collector of rebel tax	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 6, 1865.
R. K. Hartley	Member of rebel legislature, and worth over $20,000.	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John T. Holt	Rebel assessor of war tax	Governor Hamilton and James Raymond	Apr. 28, 1866.
W. A. Highsmith	do	Governor Hamilton, H. W. Brown, H. M. Lister, James B. Cope J. Shutz, and Wm. T. Allen.	Apr. 30, 1866.
William B. Heard	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 18, 1866.
S. B. Hendricks	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, M. C. Rogers, T. Gibbs, S. Gibbs, A. M. Branch, and Samuel D. Hay.	Nov. 14, 1865.
Simeon Hart	Worth over $20,000	Hon. John Hancock, Hon. L. D. Evans, F. P. Sister, John D. Elliott, Hon. George W. Glascock, and Colonel C. B. Forshey.	Nov. 3, 1865.
William Ingram	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 4, 1866.
David Irvin	do	Attorney General Stanbery	Sept. 27, 1866.
Charles H. Jordan	do	Lorenzo Sherwood	Jan. 25, 1866.
A. Jeffries	Rebel postmaster and assessor	Governor Hamilton and James H. Raymond	Feb. 23, 1866.
Churchill Jones	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 11, 1866.
John Jones	do	do	Dec. 6, 1865.
Lewd Jordan	do	do	Dec. 6, 1865.
Henry N. Jones	do	do	Sept. 22, 1865.
J. C. Jones	do	do	Nov. 20, 1865.
M. T. Johnson	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
J. W. Jordan	do	do	Oct. 13, 1865.
William S. Jones	do	Hon. James H. Bell, Emmitt Jones, A. E. Ford, W. Andrews, Thomas Vogel, and E. G. Lowell.	Nov. 18, 1865.
F. M. Jackson	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
John H. Jones	do	Governor Hamilton, Captain A. M. Cochran, D. E. E. Brennan, and William H. Burkhart	Jan. 25, 1866.
Thomas H. Jones	do	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 25, 1866.
J. T. Jeffries	Rebel States tax collector	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
W. H. Jackson	Rebel States tax assessor	do	Dec. 1, 1865.
C. R. Johns	Rebel commissioner of court, and worth over $20,000.	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
William E. Jones	Ex-U. S. and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Hon. T. H. Duval, George W. Paschal, J. H. McFarland, Hon. John Hancock, L. E. Turner, and T. M. Litton.	Sept. 20, 1865.
Tom G. Jones	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
E. B. Jarman	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, W. B. Price, William Lewis, A. L. D. Moore, Z. M. P. French, John W. Fahey, and Livingston Lindsay.	July 14, 1866.
William C. Jones	do	Governor Hamilton	May 15, 1866.
J. R. Jefferson	Rebel States marshal, and agent for the purchase of arms.	Hon. John Hancock William M. Taylor, N. G. Shilley, and George W. Jenie	May 5, 1866.
S. S. Jackson	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 30, 1866.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
John Ireland	Rebel receiver	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 25, 1866.
Henry K. Judd	Rebel tax collector	....do	May 14, 1866.
Alexander M. Jackson	Rebel chief justice of the Territory of Arizona	....do	May 14, 1866.
John A. King	Assessor of rebel tax	....do	Nov. 13, 1865.
W. M. Klyce	Rebel postmaster	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John H. Kampmann	Worth over $20,000	....do	Feb. 14, 1866.
William Kennedy	....do	....do	Nov. 18, 1865.
M. Kopperl	....do	....do	Oct. 13, 1865.
Mifflin Kenedy	....do	Governor Hamilton, Brevet Major General G. A. Smith, Charles Worthington, Major General Steele, (Robinson, Rea & Co., James A. Hutchison, David E. Park, Caldwell & Bro., M. N. Beltzhoover, In, McD. Crossan, James B. Lynn, Spang, Chalfant & Co., McKnight & Co., James N. Bennett, W. Bagley, R. C. Gray, Robert Finney, Jones & Laughlin, Thomas M. Howe, James M. Cooper, William R. Dimmick, Moorhead & Co., A. D. Smith & Bros., James Dalzell & Son, citizens of Pittsburg, Pa.,) Hon. J. Moorhead, and Hon. Thomas Williams.	Nov. 25, 1865.
Richard King	....do	Governor Hamilton, Major General Steele, Brevet Major General Giles A. Smith, and Charles Worthington, collector of customs.	Nov. 25, 1865.
John E. King	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 17, 1865.
John Karner	Worth over $20,000	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Robert B. Kingsbury	Ex-U. S. and rebel collector of customs	....do	June 17, 1865.
Hough Kirkpatrick	Worth over $20,000	....do	Apr. 25, 1865.
Ezra Keyser	Rebel provost marshal and tax collector	Governor Hamilton, N. G. Shelley, Sam. T. Scott, John R. McCall, J. D. Buchanan, B. A. Risher, and G. H. Giddings.	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Kennedy	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Ingraham S. Roberts, and Sterling Fisher	Apr. 4, 1866.
Joseph Kleiber	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Major General Steele, and Major General Weitzel	Apr. 4, 1866.
Robert Klebury	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 14, 1865.
W. A. Lockhart	Rebel assessor and collector of taxes	....do	Apr. 4, 1866.
John M. Lewis	Rebel assessor of tax	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
A. H. Latimer	Rebel postmaster	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Mathew Leeper	Ex-U. S. and rebel Indian agent	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
A. P. Lufkin	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, J. H. McFarlan, Albert Ball, and George W. Grover	Dec. 8, 1865.
W. B. Leigh	Rebel commissioner	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 11, 1866.
William M. Lubbock	Worth over $20,000	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Frank J. Lewis	....do	....do	Oct. 21, 1865.
H. Ledbetter	Rebel postmaster, and worth over $20,000	....do	Nov. 18, 1865.
Samuel K Lewis	Worth over $20,000	....do	Nov. 18, 1865.
N. D. Labadie	....do	....do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Thomas M. League	Rebel civil agent	....do	Oct. 17, 1865.
Charles Lovenskiold	Commissioner of rebel district court and collector of tax.	Hon. George W. Paschal	June 7, 1866.
John V. Law	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 20, 1865.
A. S. Lathrop	Collector of rebel tax	....do	Nov. 18, 1865.
A. E. G. Lee	Civil agent of rebel government	By order of the President	July 26, 1866.
F. W. Latham	Worth over $20,000	J. George Harris	Nov. 19, 1866.

Allen Lewis	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Aug. 19, 1864.
M. A. Long	Rebel receiver	ditto	Jan. 25, 1866.
Albert M. Lea	Graduated at West Point	Major General H. G. Wright, Brevet Brigadier General F. T. Dent, Victor W. Grahn, Charles H. Lemard, and L. Kent, collector of customs.	Sept. 20, 1866.
J. K. Metcalfe	Worth over $20,000	Major General Augur, C. H. Crane, surgeon U. S. A.	Feb. 14, 1866.
Shubael Marsh	ditto	Governor Hamilton, J. A. Randal, and Jos. J. Ambrister	Apr. 11, 1866.
William Milburn	Receiver of rebel district court	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 11, 1866.
W. B. Miller	Worth over $20,000	ditto	Dec. 8, 1865.
John M. Moore	Rebel agent for purchasing military stores, and worth over $20,000.	ditto	Dec. 1, 1865.
W. H. Morris	Rebel postmaster	ditto	Nov. 14, 1865.
Nestor Maxon	Rebel receiver of district court	Governor Hamilton, Major General Steele, and Major General Weitzel	Apr. 4, 1866.
Thomas Moore	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
N. J. Moore	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton and Hon. J. B. Johnson	Dec. 8, 1865.
James Masterson	Rebel deputy marshal	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
James H. Moody	Assessor of rebel tax	Governor Hamilton, Hon. E. A. McClerncken, and J. A. Womack	May 5, 1866.
J. B. Murphy	Rebel receiver	Governor Hamilton	July 2, 1866.
Edward Manton	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and Hon. John Hancock	July 6, 1866.
Thomas F. Marchison	Ex-U. S. and rebel postmaster	Governor Throckmorton, P. T. Faunehill, Jeff. E. Thompson, John M. McDonald, B. C. Holland, L. E. Brown, Thomas Braceshaw, Thomas B. Greenwood, and William Clanton.	Dec. 5, 1866.
George F. Marchbanks	Rebel tax assessor and mail contractor	Governor Hamilton, Hon. Arvin Wright, and Benjamin F. Hawkins	Apr. 30, 1866.
Jos. B. Merideth	Rebel tax collector	ditto ditto ditto	Apr. 30, 1866.
T. D. Moseley	ditto	Governor Hamilton, J. M. Long, James P. Neal, W. A. Morris, M. H. Bowers, S. G. Haynee, and John R. McCall.	Nov. 13, 1865.
Marcus F. Mott	Clerk of rebel court	Governor Hamilton	Aug. 19, 1865.
Nelson Merrill	Ex-U. S. and rebel postmaster	ditto	Nov. 17, 1865.
Samuel F. Moseley	Rebel depositary of treasury, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Hamilton and Hon. T. H. Duval	Oct. 24, 1865.
L. M. Mays	Rebel States commissioner	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
W. T. Murray	Ex-U. S. and rebel postmaster	ditto	Apr. 30, 1866.
Doctor J. C. Massie	Worth over $20,000	ditto	Dec. 8, 1865.
David V. Myers	ditto	ditto	Dec. 20, 1865.
R. H. Medley	ditto	Governor Hamilton, Hon. J. B. Williamson, and Hon. Daniel B. Bonfry	Mar. 6, 1866.
James M. Murphy	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
John C. Murphy	ditto	Governor Hamilton and J. B. Jones, captain and provost marshal	Dec. 8, 1865.
C. C. Millican	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
A. Mims	ditto	ditto	Nov. 18, 1865.
James M. Maxey	Rebel receiver	ditto	Oct. 21, 1865.
A. W. Moore	Worth over $20,000	ditto	Nov. 14, 1865.
William A. Menger	ditto	ditto	Sept. 20, 1865.
T. A. Maverick	ditto	ditto	Nov. 18, 1865.
A. T. Morris	ditto	ditto	Nov. 18, 1865.
John T. Miller	ditto	Governor Hamilton and Hon. James H. Bell	Nov. 18, 1865.
David G. Mills	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Oct. 6, 1865.
Robert Mills	ditto	A. A. Low, William A. Stewart, Moses Taylor, Samuel Houre, and Charles A. Heckscher, New York; George Ball, B. R. Dan, and L. H. Wood, Texas.	Oct. 6, 1865.
J. C. Moore	Ex-U. S. and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
John S. McCampbell	Rebel receiver	Governor Hamilton, Hon. E. P. Upton, A. M. Wigginton, and R. W. Davis	Apr. 30, 1866.
H. W. McMorris	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, A. McClure, and James M. Perry	Apr. 27, 1866.
James McLeod	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	May 2, 1866.
Thomas F. McKinney	ditto	Major General Wright	Dec. 1, 1866.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
William McIntosh	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, S. Cooper, G. B. Reed, H. Mitchell, and H. Hardy	July 6, 1866.
J. M. McLannahan	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.
B. F. McDonough	Rebel collector of customs	By order of the President	Aug. 11, 1865.
Alex. McDow	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Mar. 13, 1866.
William McCraven	do	Governor Hamilton and D. J. Baldwin	Oct. 18, 1865.
Alex. McGowen	do	Governor Hamilton, D. J. Baldwin, J. S. Roberts, Sterling Fisher, J. E. Lillie, J. R. Morris, James Burk, J. C. Yeaton, F. S. Rottenstein, C. B. Sabin, Oscar Deitzel, F. A. Lawyer, William H. Flint, and W. A. Daly.	Oct. 27, 1865.
H. C. McIntyre	do	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 19, 1865.
Dugald McAlpine	do	do	Sept. 22, 1865.
John G. McNeel	do	do	Oct. 9, 1865.
W. W. McMahan	do	Governor Hamilton and Hon. George H. Schley	Apr. 11, 1866.
T. H. McMahan	do	Governor Hamilton	Aug. 19, 1865.
S. R. McKee	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
J. D. McGary	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
L. E. Newhans	Rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
E. Nance	Worth over $20,000	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Washington L. Nunneley	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
E. B. Nichols	Foreign agent of rebel government, and worth over $20,000.	Major General Granger and Hon. John Hancock	Sept. 2, 1865.
J. R. North	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.
Thomas C. Nelson	do	Governor Hamilton, W. A. Daly, James Burk, J. R. Morris, G. Dumble, E. M. Pease, H. H. Dooley, Sterling Fisher, and J. E. Lethe.	Dec. 8, 1865.
Joseph Ney	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	May 10, 1866.
John D. Newell	Worth over $20,000	Hon. John Hancock	May 5, 1866.
Josiah Nichols	Rebel collector of war tax	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
William Oldham	Worth over $20,000	do	June 15, 1866.
Mrs. Rosanna Osterman	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
J. D. Overton	Rebel deputy marshal	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
Sidney C. Olive	Under bonds to the United States	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
John Oatman, jr.	Rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Robert J. Patton	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
William M. Payne	do	Governor Hamilton and Hon. A. P. McCormick	Apr. 11, 1866.
John H. Pope	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 21, 1865.
Thomas B. Powers	Rebel privateer and blockade runner	Governor Hamilton and Mrs. Sam. Houston	Jan. 4, 1866.
J. H. Pankersley	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
Howard P. Perry	do	By order of the President	Dec. 12, 1865.
T. A. Patillo	Rebel receiver	Hon. L. D. Evans, Davis B. Bonfrey, Hon. S. D. Ward, and Horace Boughton	Apr. 30, 1866
Robert P. Price	Left a loyal State; worth over $20,000	George W. Dent, General Frank P. Blair, and Hon. James S. Rollins	May 28, 1866.
Charles Power	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 20, 1865.
George Pfeuffer	Violated his oath	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
S. S. Perry	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
H. L. Paxton	do	Victor B. Bell, agent Treasury Department, Captain J. B. Jones, commanding post, S. H. Ellis, B. T. Estes, and Lewis Alexander.	Mar. 6, 1865.

Adin Powell	do	Governor Humilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Henry Pinney	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Apr. 11, 1866.
G. W. Patton	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton and Thomas Ford	Apr. 11, 1866.
William Perry	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Robert Peebles	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Ira Prewitt	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, T. S. Parker, William Alexander, and F. J. Wates	Apr. 30, 1866.
James H. Polley	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	July 6, 1866.
Elbert Pinney	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	L. Robinson and Ed. B. Warner, Illinois, A. C. Jackson and William Lane, Texas	Dec. 8, 1865.
Moses L. Parton	Assessor of rebel tax	Governor Hamilton and Hon. J. B. Johnson	Dec. 8, 1865.
Valentine B. Pool	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Mar. 8, 1866.
George H. Pegnus	Rebel postmaster	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Pinchback	Worth over $20,000	do	Mar. 13, 1866.
J. A. Quintero	Rebel confidential agent to Mexico	Major General Weitzel and Charles Worthington	Dec. 20, 1865.
C. Rhodius	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, A. Sumering, C. Rossy, Peyton Smith, Conrad Seabaugh, J. A. Paschal, William E. Jones, and D. Cleaveland.	Jan. 5, 1866.
George H. Roberts	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, D. J. Baldwin, I. S. Roberts, A. McGovern, and W. A. Daly	Oct. 27, 1865.
John B. Root	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
H. C. Robertson	Worth over $20,000	do	Dec. 1, 1865.
J. W. Russell	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Nathan Ross	do	Governor Hamilton, G. W. Wright, and M. S. Armstrong	Dec. 8, 1865.
W. Richardson	do	By order of the President	Mar. 29, 1866.
Erastus Reed	Rebel transportation agent	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 11, 1866.
J. L. Rountree	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, D. C. Barmore, R. R. Kelley, J. F. Proctor, R. Howard, J. P. Thomas, and John Barton.	Apr. 30, 1866.
W. H. Randolph	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Hon. Benton Randolph, M. S. Gibbs, and W. B. Rome	Apr. 30, 1866.
N. S. Rector	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton	Oct. 12, 1865.
R. A. Rutherford	do	do	Oct. 12, 1865.
Stephen Reaves	Commissioner of rebel States' court	Governor Hamilton and Hon. Samuel L. Earle	Apr. 30, 1866.
William Rust	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton and Hon. James Bell	Nov. 18, 1865.
A. S. Richardson	Commissioner of rebel court and dep'y marshal	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 19, 1865.
Edwin Rust	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton, R. M. Johnson, and F. W. Moore
James H. Raymond	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	May 5, 1866.
B. H. Risher	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
H. H. Runge	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
A. H. Rippetoe	Rebel tax collector, and worth over $20,000	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
Henry Runge	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
H. R. Runnels	do	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
H. W. Runnels	do	Victor B. Bell, assistant supervising agent Treasury Department, J. P. Jones, captain, commanding post, and Samuel F. Moreley.	Mar. 6, 1866.
			Mar. 6, 1866.
H. R. T. Rose	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton
Henry Rosenberg	Rebel clerk	John Hitz, consul general of Switzerland	Apr. 25, 1866.
W. M. Rice	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 16, 1865.
M. C. Rodgers	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, Hon. Benton Randolph, M. S. Gibb, W. B. Rome, Peter Royal, J. H. Banton, Robert C. Campbell, L. A. Abercombie, A. M. Branch, L. B. Hightower, Fletcher Hume, James A. Baker, S. D. Hay, A. C. Woodall, A. T. McKinney, A. P. Wiley, and C. C. Caldwell.	Oct. 18, 1865. Dec. 8, 1865.
Ober Roberts	do	Goveror Hamilton and Hon. Samuel L. Earle	Apr. 30, 1866.
J. C. Rushing	Rebel receiver	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 30, 1866.
D. C. Russel	Worth over $20,000	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Henry Rhine	do	Hon. L. D. Evans, F. P. Sawyer, and E. B. Turner	Dec. 8, 1865.
E. S. Runnells	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Reid	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
H. Randolph	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Shadrach Rowe	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
Mrs. Mary Ryan	do	Hon. James Bell, Emmett Jones, George W. Feris, and Benjamin F. Atkins	Nov. 18, 1865.
William Ryan	do	Hon James Bell, A. P. Thompson, John Dickinson, and John C. Cutter	Nov. 18, 1865.
E. S. C. Robertson	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
D. Rawdon	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
Mrs. Ellen H. Reily	do	A. F. Hawkins, Benjamin Gruiz, Richard A. Buckner, and H. T. Duncan	Sept. 23, 1865.
J. C. P. Rennymore	Assessor of rebel tax	Governor Hamilton, Hon. Benton Randolph, W. B. Rome, M. S. Gibbs, John A. Baker, and John Branch.	Nov. 13, 1865.
James Sorley	Rebel collector of customs	Governor Hamilton, Edward T. Austin, and Albert Ball	Feb. 10, 1866.
D. M. Stapp	do	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 12, 1866.
Sidney Seymour	Ex-United States and rebel deputy postmaster	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
John J. Stubblefield	Rebel collector of tax and deputy marshal	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
Wm. M. Saunders	Rebel mail contractor	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
J. W. Smith	Rebel depositary	Governor Hamilton, Hon. W. H. Hord, Hon. A. Bledsoe, and W. K. Master	Dec. 8, 1865.
Sinclair Stapp	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 11, 1866.
J. M. Steiner	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Richard Coke, and A. P. Blocker	Dec. 9, 1865.
James B. Shaw	do	P. W. Gray, John H. Reegan, D. G. Burnet, and W. P. Ballenger	Oct. 27, 1865.
Wm. R. Smith	do	Governor Hamilton	Oct. 27, 1865.
John A. Santers	do	Lorenzo Sherwood	Sept. 13, 1865.
John S. Sydnor	do	Governor Hamilton, F. Flake, Albert Ball, H. Stewart, and George W. Grover	Oct. 12, 1865.
Charles Stillman	do	Attorney General Speed	Oct. 23, 1865.
A. G. Stevens	Assessor of rebel tax, and worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Thomas C. Smith, W. A. Blair, J. R. North, J. F. Shannon, B. E. Larver, and J. M. Baker.	Dec. 1, 1865.
Gordon W. Shanklin	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Hon. H. Christian, Warner Wallace, Joseph Carter, Cary White, E. D. Stubblefield, A. W. Richard, and J. N. Damon.	Mar. 13, 1866.
George Stoneum	do	Governor Hamilton and Hon. J. M. Patrick	Feb. 5, 1866.
Mrs. Sarah Scott	do	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 18, 1866.
John Speak	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
J. W. Smith	Rebel States receiver	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
James H. Starr	Rebel receiver, agent of post office department, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Hamilton and Hon. J. B. Johnson	Dec. 8, 1865.
Alex. Sessums	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Brevet Maj. Gen. C. C. Andrews, Brevet Brig. Gen. G. W. Clark, Ingham S. Roberts, C. J. Harris & Co., Sterling Fisher, J. C. Lord, and H. R. Allen.	Sept. 20, 1865.
William D. Smith	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.
W. C. Swanson	do	do	Nov. 13, 1865.
Asa E. Stratton	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
W. M. Sergeant	do	Governor Hamilton, F. H. Merriman, and E. M. Pease	Oct. 28, 1865.
George A. Smith	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
Orange Swan	do	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
David T. Stevens	do	Governor Hamilton, Hon. James Bell, and William J. Phillips	Nov. 18, 1865.
B. A. Shepherd	do	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 5, 1865.
George W. Sampson	do	Benj. B. Sherman, H. B. Claflin & Co., B. D. Silliman, N. Y., Geo. W. Paschal, Texas	Oct. 2, 1865.
Wm. M. Sledge	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.

J. R. Shipman	ditto	Hon. James Bell, E. J. Lovell, and E. H. Carlisle	Nov. 18, 1865.
John Sweeny	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
John W. Swisher	Rebel agent to Mexico to purchase arms, and worth over $20,000.	ditto	Nov. 18, 1865.
Charles Saul	Worth over $20,000	ditto	Nov. 13, 1865.
William T. Scott	ditto	Governor Hamilton, E. A. Blanch, B. Smalley, S. D. Wood, Henry Ware, N. W. Board, P. W. V. Board, J. W. Johnson, D. S. Jennings, and William Evans.	Oct. 24, 1865.
J. S. Sullivan	ditto	Governor Hamilton, Hon. Geo. W. Paschal, W. Andrews, Geo. H. Schley, and G. Cook	Apr. 16, 1866.
M. W. Sims	ditto	By order of the President	Apr. 23, 1866.
Thomas M. Smith	Rebel postmaster	Hon. Geo. W. Paschal	Apr. 19, 1866.
William M. Sergeant	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Mar. 19, 1866.
Peter V. Shaw	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton, Hon. W. B. Price, W. B. McClellan, Z. M. P. French, L. Lindsay	Apr. 30, 1866.
Sam. T. Scott	Rebel deputy marshal	Governor Hamilton	Sept. 20, 1865.
John Scaley	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, T. Flake, Albert Ball, G. W. Grover, and H. Stewart	Aug. 19, 1865.
Harvey Smith	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton, Hon. H. Christian, W. W. Bishop, D. F. Chamberlain, C. F. Lee, Sames P. Reed, M. W. Damron, R. A. Myers, and A. W. Richard.	Apr. 30, 1866.
Andrew F. Smith	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 30, 1866.
W. F. Swain	Rebel postmaster and deputy marshal	ditto	Nov. 18, 1865.
Henry Sampson	Rebel agent of the produce loan	Hon. L. D. Evans, Geo. W. Carter, W. P. Ballenger, and P. W. Gray	Nov. 19, 1865.
C. B. Stewart	Rebel collector of revenue, and worth over $20,000.	Governor Throckmorton, D. G. Burnet, Geo. W. White, J. W. Carter, G. H. Giddings, and L. D. Evans.	Sept. 4, 1866.
John J. Smith	Worth over $20, 000	Governor Throckmorton	Dec. 12, 1866.
William Sutherland	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	July 6, 1866.
J. Carroll Smith	Worth over $20,000	ditto	June 25, 1866.
Walter S. Sutherland	Rebel postmaster	ditto	July 6, 1866.
James Simerton	Worth over $20,000	ditto	May 2, 1866.
N. G. Shelley	Rebel receiver	By order of the President	May 5, 1866.
Moses C. Steele	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, A. W. Morrow, Theodore Ketchum, J. A. Hampton, A. S. Walker, and William H. Sweeney.	Apr. 20, 1866.
Thomas M. Smith	ditto	Governor Hamilton, J. S. Odiorne, S. F. Bell, W. S. Calohan, and J. W. Herrman	Apr. 30, 1866.
James R. Sweet	Worth over $20,000	Governor Wells, Louisiana	Apr. 28, 1866.
Morgan L. Smith	ditto	Lorenzo Sherwood, Joseph A. Sprague, Peter Cooper, New York, A. L. Reid, New York, Charles Dana Gibson, New York, N. W. Burtes, New York, Durfee & Jacques, New York, John J. Cisco, New York, and John A. Dix, New York.	Sept. 13, 1865.
Wesley Smith	Assessor and collector of rebel taxes	Captain J. M. Walker, assistant provost marshal	July 31, 1865.
W. S. Smith	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
E. Sampson	Commissioner of rebel court, and depositary at San Antonio.	ditto	Jan. 26, 1866.
W. J. Sorrelle	Rebel postmaster	ditto	Dec. 8, 1865.
William Thaxton	Rebel tax collector	ditto	Dec. 8, 1865.
J. D. Todd	ditto	ditto	Dec. 8, 1865.
John Twohig	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Major General Canby, Colonel Reeve, Brevet Brigadier General Vinton, and Bevet Lieutenant Colonel Bliss.	Dec. 16, 1865.
A. Toutant	ditto	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 1, 1865.
John A. Talbot	ditto	ditto	Mar. 6, 1866.
J. A. Thomason	ditto	ditto	Dec. 8, 1865.
M. W. Tiigg	Rebel tax collector, and worth over $20,000	ditto	Nov. 14, 1865.
Ph lip C. Tucker	Commissioner of rebel court, and worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and E. M. Pease	Dec. 8, 1865.
J. A. S. Turner	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
John L. Thorpe	ditto	ditto	Nov. 8, 1865.
C. H. Taylor	ditto	ditto	Oct. 12, 1865.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
Thomas U. Toler	Rebel collector of taxes	Governor Hamilton, W. Frank Carter, chief justice, R. W. Duke, and John A. Fain	Apr. 11, 1866.
M. W. Townsend	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton	Mar. 19, 1866.
Ward Taylor, jr	do	do	Apr. 30, 1866.
F. M. Taylor	do	do	Dec. 1, 1865.
R. S. Thomas	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, George W. Carter, and C. Caldwell	Oct. 24, 1865.
P. F. Taney'ahill	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton	May 21, 1866.
A. J. Terry	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton and Hon. A. P. McCormick	July 2, 1866.
John Thatcher	do	Governor Hamilton, T. H. Merriman, Edward T. Clustin, and J. R. Morris	May 26, 1866.
E. J. C. Thompson	Rebel revenue collector	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 25, 1866.
Thomas M. Turner	Rebel tax assessor	do	Dec. 8, 1866.
John W. Tabor	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton, C. Cowan, chief justice, William Lester, and J. A. Glenn	Apr. 30, 1866.
A. W. Terrell	Rebel brigadier general	Hon. James H. Bell, Hon. L. D. Evans, and Thomas Savage, (V. C. G., Havana)	Nov. 30, 1865.
H. D. Taylor	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Ingham S. Roberts, C. J. Harris, J. R. Morris, Texas, and Samuel Drake Smith, New York.	May 14, 1866.
A. Underwood	do	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
C. Upson	Rebel justice of Arizona	do	Nov. 14, 1865.
James Vance	Worth over $20,000	do	Jan. 25, 1866.
William H. Vance	do	do	Jan. 25, 1866.
W. A. Van Alstyne	do	Attorney General Speed and L. M. Sherley	Oct. 6, 1865.
William Vance	do	Hon. W. T. Otto	Sept. 13, 1865.
Frederick Voigt	Rebel postmaster	Governor Throckmorton	Sept. 4, 1866.
Charles A. Warfield	Rebel tax collector	George W. Dobbin, Baltimore	Feb. 21, 1866.
A. E. Westal	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 11, 1866.
James T. D. Wilson	do	Governor Hamilton, D. J. Baldwin, C. C. Caldwell, W. A. Daly, J. S. Roberts, James H. Yeaton, J. R. Morris, James Burke, and C. B. Sabin.	Dec. 8, 1865.
T. R. Williams	do	Governor Hamilton and Robert H. Taylor	Dec. 8, 1865.
Willis Whitaker	do	Governor Hamilton	Apr. 18, 1866.
P. M. Walton	do	do	Jan. 12, 1866.
A. H. Wood	do	do	Jan. 12, 1866.
T. W. Winston	do	Governor Hamilton, Hon. J. Z. Williamson, David B. Bonfry, and S. D. Wood	Mar. 6, 1866.
J. D. Waters	do	Governor Hamilton, Albert Ball, and George W. Grover	Dec. 8, 1865.
W. G. Warren	do	Governor Hamilton and A. P. McCormick	Mar. 13, 1866.
George W. White	do	Governor Hamilton	Mar. 13, 1866.
John A. Williams	do	Governor Hamilton, J. S. Roberts, and Sterling Fisher	Mar. 13, 1866.
Otis M. Wheeler	do	Governor Hamilton	Oct. 21, 1865.
George Williams	Rebel tax collector, and worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
William G. Webb	Rebel receiver, and worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 18, 1865.
James A. Wimbish	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 14, 1865.
R. S. Willis	do	Lorenzo Sherwood, Texas, Thomas Collier, John B. Boseet, and Edward Cambell	Aug. 26, 1865.
P. J. Willis	do		Aug. 26, 1865.
R. B. Wofford	do	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 14, 1865.
George W. White	Rebel purchasing agent of the commissary department, and worth over $20,000.	By order of the President	Sept. 14, 1865.
L. L. Williams	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.

Robert H. Williams	Worth over $20,000	do	Sept. 20, 1865.
G. W. Wright	do	do	Dec. 8, 1866.
T. G. Wright	do	do	Dec. 8, 1865.
W. R. D. Ward	do	do	Oct. 24, 1865.
Jesse Womack	do	do	Oct. 24, 1865.
James C. Watkins	Rebel tax collector	do	Nov. 20, 1865.
Andrew J. Ward	Worth over $20,000	Hon. L. D. Evans, W. S. Hodge, W. P. Ballinger, Geo. W. White, and F. Flake	Oct. 18, 1865.
William Wortham	Rebel postmaster	Gov. Hamilton, A. T. Monroe, John H. Potts, A. H. Casteil, O. C. Aldrich, and A. A. Aldrich	Apr. 30, 1866.
John A. Winn	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 13, 1865.
Moses G. Wilson	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton, O. H. P. Garrett, J. A. Randee, and W. P. Garrett	Nov. 14, 1865.
Theodore Wiedenfeld	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Hamilton, Wm. E. Jones, James E. Ranck, and J. A. Paschal	Apr. 11, 1866.
George White	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton, H. Christian, James W. Moore, E. D. Stubblefield, Joseph Carter, and W. W. Bishop.	Dec. 8, 1865.
E. S. Wood	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Albert Ball, Geo. W. Grover, Texas; James C. Hand & Co., Savery & Co., Wood V. Perot, Henry Simons, C. A. Walborn, Philadelphia; Walsh, Coulter & Co., W. Gothout & Bro., John D. Locke, Fairbanks & Co., and Stokes and Brother.	Aug. 29, 1865.
W. D. Wood	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton, L. W. Cooper, and John H. Polls, chief justice	Apr. 30, 1866.
H. Wilkes	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Nov. 18, 1865.
John Walston	Rebel deputy marshal	do	Aug. 19, 1865.
W. C. Wilson	Rebel depositary	do	Nov. 20, 1865.
Thomas D. Wilson	Worth over $20,000	do	Sept. 22, 1865.
W. R. Wilson	do	do	Oct. 21, 1865.
Henry Ware	do	J. B. Williamson, W. T. Scott, N. V. Board, P. W. V. Board, J. W. Johnson, D. S. Jennings, B. Smalley, P. G. Nebhist, John W. Slater, S. D. Wood, and Governor Hamilton.	Oct. 23, 1865.
John F. W. Wedikind	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 1, 1865.
H. E. Woodhouse	Worth over $20,000	Hon. James Dixon, United States Senate	Dec. 21, 1865.
W. H. Witt	Rebel postmaster, and worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton	Dec. 8, 1865.
Joseph Werner	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton and Benton Randolph	May 5, 1866.
John C. West	Rebel district attorney	Governor Hamilton	Jan. 25, 1866.
Richard Waterhouse	Rebel brigadier general	Attorney General Stanbery	Oct. 15, 1866.
N. B. Yard	Worth over $20,000	Governor Hamilton, Gen. W. Carter, L. K. Preston, N. R. Wilson, Edwin B. Settle, W. B. Smith, D. Bradbury, E. C. Singer, Geo. Butler, J. Atkinson, Texas; Hon. E. D. Morgan, and Hon. George Opdyke, New York.	Jan. 11, 1866.
Francisco Yturria	do	By order of the President	May 10, 1866.
James A. York	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton	Oct. 24, 1865.
J. W. Young	Rebel tax collector	Governor Hamilton, W. C. Wiseman, S. Wright, and James Wilcox	July 6, 1866.
George Yarbrough	Rebel postmaster	Governor Hamilton and Hon. Samuel L. Earle	Apr. 30, 1866.

FLORIDA.

Paul Arnau	Ex-United States and rebel collector of the district and port of St. Augustine.	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Oct. 24, 1865.
Moses E. Barber	Worth over $20,000	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
John Beard	Rebel receiver of the district of Tallahassee	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
James Banks	Rebel district attorney	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
John Broward	None	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
John Bellamy	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 23, 1865.
James Burt	do	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
John G. Bradley	do	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
W. J. Baily	do	do	Oct. 2, 1865.

Florida—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
G. F. Baltzell	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Sept. 13, 1865.
Bolling Baker	First auditor of the rebel treasury department	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
A. T. Banks	Commissioner to take testimony	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
James Banks	Rebel State's attorney	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
W. C. Brown	Rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
William Baily	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
N. Baker	Ex-United States and rebel collector of customs	do	July 6, 1866.
John L. Branch	Rebel war tax assessor	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Green A. Chaires	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1866.
John Collier	None	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
William L. Campbell	Rebel war tax assessor	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
William L. Crigler	Furnishing supplies to rebels	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
E. A. Clark	Rebel deputy marshal	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
W. Chapman	Rebel tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Joshua Carraway	Rebel tax assessor	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
William Archer Cocke	Rebel clerk in post office	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
E. A. Clarke	Rebel deputy marshal	do	Oct. 12, 1865.
W. K. Coulter	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
A. H. Cole	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
F. R. Cotten	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Jos. Chaires	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
G. Chaires	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
C. Powell Chaires	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
T. B. Chaires	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Isaac L. Coon	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Joseph M. Crewes	Rebel tax assessor	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Douglass Dunmott	Ex-United States and rebel collector	do	July 6, 1866.
James H. Dyke	None	do	July 6, 1866.
George Dawson	Rebel civil agent to British North America	do	July 6, 1866.
James O. Devall	Rebel tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
David R. Dunham	Rebel clerk of court	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
Columbus Drew	Rebel commissioner district court	General Scammeroff and Richard Wallach	July 11, 1865.
J. M. Daniels	Rebel clerk of district court	John S. Sammis, S. S. Williams, Calvin Oak, H. H. Hory, and Governor Marvin	Oct. 10, 1865.
Andrew Denham	Commissioner to rebel loan	Governor Marvin	Sept. 2, 1865.
John Darling	Rebel receiver of the land office	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
C. E. Dyke	None	do	Oct. 2, 1865.
Benjamin Ellison	Worth over $20,000	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
George R. Fairbanks	do	Governor Marvin	Apr. 6, 1865.
G. R. Foster	Rebel receiver of district court	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
Samuel Z. Gonzales	Ex-United States and rebel naval storekeeper	do	Oct. 23, 1865. Oct. 10, 1865.
William M. Garrison	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
Robert H. Gamble	Worth over $20,000	General Newton, commanding the district	July 18, 1865.
Robert Gamble	do	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Nov. 9, 1865.

William Grothe	Rebel postmaster	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Oct. 10, 1865.
C. Houston	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
H. L. Hart	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
William Hope	do	do	July 6, 1866.
Fred. C. Humphreys	United States and rebel military storkeeper	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
William B. Hardee	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
J. R. Harris	Rebel States depositary	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
John A. Henderson	Rebel tax collector	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
L. I. Hogans	Rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
Henry Hyer	Worth over $20,000	do	Mar. 20, 1865.
R. W. B. Hodgson	Rebel receiver of sequestrated property	M. A. Williams, L. Wilson, and William Marvin, provisional governor	Oct. 10, 1865.
Dunnam Hancock	Rebel postmaster	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Oct. 10, 1865.
Alexander B. Hawkins	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Theo. Hartridge	Indicted	do	Aug. 26, 1866.
G. W. Holland	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
J. M. Hill	do	do	Nov. 3, 1865.
Thomas O. Holmes	do	do	Mar. 8, 1866.
William B. Hooker	do	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
E. R. Ives	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
William L. Jones	do	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
Peter Knowles	Worth over $20,000	do	July 6, 1866.
William A. Lovell	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 23, 1865.
David G. Leigh	Rebel tax collector	do	July 6, 1866.
C. P. Luther	Rebel mail contractor	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Felix Livingston	Ex-United States and collector of the port of Fernandina, Florida.	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Daniel G. Livingston	Rebel depositary	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
William F. Loyd	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
Benjamin C. Lewis	Rebel clerk of depositury	do	Sept. 13, 1866.
M. Lively	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
T. B. Law	Rebel tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Daniel Ladd	orth over $20,000	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
W. R. Moore	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	July 6, 1866.
J. G. McGehee	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 3, 1865.
George H. McGinnis	None	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
J. F. McClellan	Rebel district attorney	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Ferdinand McLeod	do	do	Aug. 11, 1865.
D. B. McGinnis	Rebel tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
William P. Marvin	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Thomas Munroe	do	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
J. D. Macleod	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
T. N. Myrick	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
J. M. Marvin	do	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
James A. Newmans	Rebel tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
A. B. Noyes	Ex-United States and rebel collector of customs	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Miles Nash	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
William W. O'Cain	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Thomas Orman	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
M. D. Papy	Rebel tax assessor	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
N. H. Payne	Left a loyal district	Major General Dyer	Aug. 19, 1865.
Charles H. Parsons	Rebel postmaster	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Oct. 18, 1865.
Madison Post	Rebel tax assessor	do	July 6, 1866.

Florida—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of par. don.
B. A. Putnam	Ex-United States and rebel judge	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida
George E. Pace	Rebel postmaster	do
W. R. Pettes	Depositary of rebel treasury	do	Sept. 5, 1865.
Thomas J. Perkins	Rebel loan agent	General Newton, commanding district	July 18, 1866.
Thomas Randall	None	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Oct. 10, 1865.
John H. Rhodes	Rebel mail agent	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
A. H. Reed	None	do	Sept. 18, 1866.
R. G. Sheppard	do	do	Sept. 18, 1866.
John G. Smith	Rebel deputy marshal and tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Smith Simkins	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Joseph Sierra	Ex-United States and rebel collector of customs	do	Oct. 23, 1865.
John G. Smith	Rebel collector of taxes	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
William S. Spencer	Rebel assessor of war tax	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
George Stone	Judicial proceedings commenced as abandoned property.	D. C. Ambler, H. H. Hory, John S. Sammis, Calvin Oak, and Governor Marvin	Oct. 10, 1865.
N. O. J. Staley	Rebel tax assessor	A. H. Bush, C. F. Britton, Thomas H. White, F. R. Pitman, Alexander Merritt, William J. Skinney, W. Wilson, M. D., and Governor Marvin.	Aug. 29, 1865.
Joseph Sierra	Ex-United States and rebel collector of customs	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Oct. 23, 1865.
Pliny Sheffield	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Daniel Sloan	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
W. R. Swain	do	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
E. E. Simpson	do	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Jacob Summerline	do	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
E. M. Thompson	Rebel receiver	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
Richard Turnbull	Worth over $20,000	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
John L. Tatum	Ex-United States and rebel district attorney	do	Oct. 24, 1865. Oct. 10, 1865.
Samuel B. Thomas	Rebel agent of commissary department	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
E. J. Vann	Rebel receiver under the sequestration act	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
A. J. Weeks	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Allen Williams	do	E. R. Ives, Thomas A. Carruth, and Governor Marvin	Aug. 29, 1865.
A. J. F. Wright	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	William Marvin, provisional governor of Florida	Aug. 29, 1865.
D. R. Williams	Worth over $20,000	do	July 6, 1866.
J. J. Williams	do	W. W. Holden, General Newton, and Governor Marvin	Sept. 13, 1865.
G. R. Walker	do	William R. Pettes, M. D. Papy, James B. Gamble, D. S. Walker, D. P. Hoges, and Governor Marvin.	Mar. 8, 1866.
William T. Wood	do	Governor Marvin	Aug. 29, 1865.
J. F. White	Rebel tax assessor	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Dr. Weedon	Left a loyal district	do	Oct. 18, 1865.
Isaac Widgeon	Rebel district commissary	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
Richard M. Germond	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
Robert H. Gamble	Rebel tax collector	do	Oct. 10, 1865.
C. C. Yonge	Rebel quartermaster	do	Aug. 29, 1865.
W. A. Young	Rebel special messenger	do	Oct. 10, 1865.

J. C. Greely	Member of rebel legislature	Nathaniel Fraser, United States district judge, Nathaniel Usher, United States district attorney, and Franklin Fraser, clerk United States district court.	June 27, 1865.
Joseph Finnegan	Rebel brigadier general	Provisional Governor Marvin, Governor D. S. Walker, Hon. Henry Wilson, United States Senate, Hon. Luke P. Poland, United States Senate, and Hon. Alexander Ramsey, United States Senate.	April 5, 1866.

ARKANSAS.

R. B. Archer	Rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy	Sept. 5, 1865.
Thomas P. Arnold	Rebel tax collector	Colonel D. May and Governor Murphy	Nov. 9, 1865.
John D. Adams	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States Attorney Orville Jennings	Oct. 24, 1865.
W. E. Ashley	do	Governor Murphy, C. P. Bertrand, and S. H. Tucker	July 7, 1865.
Henry C. Ashley	do	do	July 7, 1865.
B. B. Allis	do	By order of the President	Oct. 24, 1865.
A. D. Allen	do	John T. London, R. J. Hill, and George S. Statham	Mar. 9, 1866.
Amos Brown	do	Governor Murphy, Judge D. Woods, D. H. Williams, and Harry Marley	Mar. 19, 1866.
John W. Brown	do	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
Asaph Brown	do	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
J. M. Brown	do	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
W. H. Brooks	Indicted for treason	Governor Murphy and United States Attorney O. Jennings	Mar. 19, 1866.
J. T. A. Bates	Left a loyal district	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
A. W. Barclus	Rebel postmaster	do	Oct. 30, 1866.
S. H. Bayless	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Murphy and Colonel D. May	Oct. 30, 1866.
John W. Barton	Rebel postmaster	United States Attorney O. Jennings	Oct. 9, 1865.
James M. Brooks	Worth over $20,000	do	Oct. 9, 1865.
Morgan Bitck	Left a loyal district. Violated his oath	Governor Murphy and Colonel J. W. Johnson	Sept. 5, 1865.
C. R. Barham	Rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
W. E. Bryant	do	Governor Murphy and Colonel D. May	Oct. 9, 1865.
John Brown	Rebel depositary	United States Attorney O. Jennings, W. H. Harper, and William Bross	Oct. 9, 1865.
Michael Bozeman	Worth over $20,000	United States Attorney O. Jennings and governor	Oct. 30, 1865.
W. A. Bocks	do	do	Oct. 30, 1865.
David Block	Worth over $20,000, and rebel cotton agent	United States attorney O. Jennings	June 27, 1865.
Dennis Barlow	Rebel tax assessor	Governor Murphy, W. A. Britton, George Ashby, J. W. Calloway, J. M. Carmichael, J. P., R. G. Parillo, B. L. Watkins, Joe H. Thomas, B. E. Barinds, George W. Tarleton, Judge J. H. Haugh, J. Eder, D. J. McDonald, and W. D. Neeley.	Mar. 19, 1866.
Solomon Basham	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, H. T. Thomson, Harry Steward, G. W. Newland, J. C. McCord, L. C. White, and James F. Cooper.	Mar. 19, 1866.
James M. Brown	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy, D. Dickson, A. J. Ward, John Austin, D. C. Williams, Luther C. White, and Samuel F. Cooper.	Mar. 19, 1866.
James H. Crow	Rebel tax collector	United States District Attorney Orville Jennings	Oct. 6, 1865.
W. A. Calloway	Rebel postmaster	United States District Attorney O. Jennings, W. S. Stroop, and G. Ashby	Oct. 9, 1865.
W. H. Calloway	Rebel assessor of taxes	United States Attorney O. Jennings, W. A. Britton, J. M. Carmichael, B. L. Watkins, W. S. Stroop, George Ashby, J. H. Haugh, T. F. Moreland, and W. T. Morehead.	Oct. 9, 1865.
H. H. Coleman	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy and H. C. Caldwell, United States district judge	Mar. 9, 1866.
J. M. Craig	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney Jennings	Oct. 26, 1865.
Pleasant M. Cox, sr	do	Ordered by the President	Dec. 23, 1866.
R. M. Campbell	do	do	Jan. 17, 1867.
C. W. Campbell	do	do	Jan. 17, 1867.
Johnson Chapman	do	United States District Attorney O. Jennings	Oct. 9, 1865.

Arkansas—Continued.

Name.	Exception under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
J. T. Chidester	Ex-United mail contractor and rebel clothing contractor.	Governor Murphy and Judge Caldwell	Oct. 19, 1865.
D. H. Cooper	Rebel brigadier general, rebel superintendent of Indian affairs, and ex-United States and rebel Indian agent.	Hon. D. N. Cooley, General James G. Blunt, Winchester Colbert, governor of Chickasaws; P. P. Pitchlynn, principal chief; Governor Murphy and Governor Sharkey.	Apr. 27, 1865.
John J. Clendenin	Worth over $20,000	United States District Attorney O. Jennings and Hon. Simon Cameron	July 7, 1865.
Edward Cross, sr	Rebel depositary	Governor Murphy and United States district attorney	Nov. 9, 1866.
James M. Coulter	Worth over $20,000	....do	Oct. 24, 1865.
Morgen Cryer	....do	....do	July 6, 1866.
Mrs. M. P. Davies	....do	....do	Nov. 9, 1865.
James Dickerson	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney E. D. Ham	Nov. 13, 1865.
David B. Dickson	Worth over $20,000	United States District Attorney O. Jennings	Sept. 21, 1865.
D. C. Edmiston	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, M. L. R. Harrison, S. F. Cooper, Hiram Brodie, and D. C. Edmundston.	Apr. 11, 1866.
J. Epperson	....do	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
E. H. English	Indicted for treason. Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, United States District Judge Henry Caldwell, S. H. Tucker, L. E. Barber, John Kirkbury, Hon. E. Baxter, W. V. Meader, Brigadier General P. Clayton, L. Gibson, J. R. Berry, and Charles T. Jordan.	Nov. 13, 1865.
Catlett Fish	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
Berryman Ford	....do	....do	Mar. 19, 1866.
N. H. Fish	Worth over $20,000	....do	Mar. 19, 1866.
Silas F. Fields	Indicted for treason. Proceedings commenced for confiscation.	Hon. Attorney General Speed and United States Attorney Jennings	Jan. 13, 1866.
William C. Fisher	Proceedings commenced for confiscation	United States District Attorney Orville Jennings	Nov. 20, 1865.
S. C. Faulkner	....do	Governor Murphy	Oct. 18, 1865.
A. B. Greenwood	Rebel tax collector	....do	Nov. 9, 1865.
J. B. Gray	Rebel postmaster	....do	Nov. 9, 1865.
L. W. Gates	Violated his oath	....do	Sept. 5, 1865.
W. H. Gaines	Worth over $20,000	United States District Attorney Jennings, United States District Judge Henry Caldwell, and John Wilson, Third Auditor.	Nov. 9, 1865.
J. Garland	....do	United States District Attorney Jennings	Sept. 21, 1865.
Green Gibson	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Oct. 2, 1865.
O. A. Greening	Rebel tax collector	....do	Nov. 9, 1865.
R. M. Gaines	Worth over $20,000	....do	Nov. 9, 1865.
N. W. Holland	Violated his oath	....do	Mar. 19, 1866.
John P. Humphreys	....do	....do	Mar. 19, 1866.
William H. Hawkins	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States Attorney Jennings	Apr. 16, 1866.
Thomas Harrell	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
Isham Harrel	....do	....do	Mar. 19, 1866.
Thaddeus Haney	....do	....do	Mar. 19, 1866.
William A. Hill	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy, J. M. Johnson, and United States District Attorney Ham	Nov. 10, 1865.
J. C. Hawkins	Aiding the rebellion	Governor Murphy	Nov. 4, 1865.
C. M. Henry	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy, Hon. E. W. Gantt, and W. D. Gwin	Nov. 9, 1865.
J. H. Hilliard	....do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, A. D. Hunt, A. O. Brumm, and A. J. Ballard	Sept. 19, 1865.

David Hamiter	do	Hon. Attorney General Speed, Governor Murphy, United States Attorney Jennings, and A. D. Hawkins.	Nov. 8, 1865.
Henry Hays	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Nov. 4, 1865.
C. F. Harvey	Rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy and Hon. R. J. Z. White, secretary of state	Sept. 11, 1865.
F. M. Henry	Assessor of taxes	United States District Attorney O. Jennings	Sept. 21, 1865.
W. B. Halliburton	Collector of rebel war tax. Proceedings commenced for confiscation.	do	Sept. 21, 1865.
W. C. Hatley	Postmaster	Governor Murphy, W. F. Bracy, George H. Stinson, J. G. Browning, J. T. Bearden, J. S. H. Barry, John J. Silliman, and G. F. McGinnis, brigadier general volunteers.	Nov. 9, 1865.
T. B. Hanley	Member rebel congress	Governor Murphy and United States attorney	Dec. 12, 1866.
C. R. Johnson	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States Attorney O. Jennings	Mar. 19, 1866.
Mrs. Matilda Johnson	do	Ordered by the President	Aug. 17, 1866.
James F. Johnson	Rebel agent of the produce loan	Governor Murphy, United States District Attorney Jennings, and Judge Liberty Bartlett, of the United States district court	July 6, 1866.
Ben. Johnson	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney Jennings	Nov. 9, 1865.
B. P. Jett	Rebel appraiser	United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq	Nov. 7, 1865.
James B. Keatts	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Apr. 6, 1865.
H. F. Kirby	do	do	Sept. 5, 1865.
E. Kinsworthy	Proceedings instituted for confiscation	Hon. W. Byers	Oct. 24, 1866.
Ferdinand Lee	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney Jennings	Mar. 19, 1866.
George Looney	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
B. H. Layne	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States district attorney	Apr. 6, 1866.
John B. Luce	Rebel receiver of property sequestered belonging to northern States.	Ordered by the President	June 13, 1866.
David R. McCalib	Left a loyal State	Governor Murphy, M. S. R. Harrison, and J. A. L. McColloch	Apr. 11, 1866.
E. McNair	Rebel brigadier general	United States Attorney O. Jennings and W. D. Snow	Dec. 12, 1865.
Charles McDermott	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy, John Wassell, R. L. Dodess, and John Kirkwood	Nov. 9, 1865.
E. W. McClare	Postmaster	Governor Murphy	July 6, 1866.
S. McColloch	Violated his oath	do	July 18, 1866.
James M. McDaniel	Worth over $20,000. Property libelled for confiscation.	Governor Murphy, United States District Attorney O. Jennings, and Hon. Liberty Bartlett, judge 5th judicial district.	Feb. 17, 1866.
J. M. McClure	Rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
J. A. L. McColloch	Violated his oath	do	Sept. 13, 1865.
D. M. Moore	do	do	May 22, 1866.
George Morrow	do	Governor Murphy and United States marshal	Apr. 7, 1865.
Samuel Mitchell	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy, United States district attorney, Hons. W. Byers and G. H. Kyle	Mar. 19, 1865.
E. C. Morton	Worth over $20,000, and rebel postmaster	Hons. H. C. Caldwell, United States district judge, Liberty Bartlett, judge 5th judicial circuit, S. H. Tucker, R. L. Dodless, John Kirkwood, and Brigadier General P. Clinton.	Sept. 21, 1865.
John Matlock	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy	Nov. 9, 1865.
James A. Martin	Clerk in rebel treasury of Arkansas. Property libelled for confiscation.	Governor Murphy, United States District Attorney O. Jennings, John Kirkwood, John Wassell, S. H. Tucker, and Peter Hanger.	Nov. 9, 1865.
H. M. Maguire	Violated his oath	Hon. Elias Harrell, judge of 8th judicial circuit	Oct. 2, 1865.
B. W. Martin	Rebel State tax collector	United States Attorney O. Jennings	Sept. 21, 1865.
Henry Morrill	Rebel agent abroad, and worth over $20,000	Hons. Roscoe Conkling, Thurlow Weed, of New York, and United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq.	Nov. 3, 1865.
Columbus Nail	Worth over $20,000. Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
John B. Ogden	Ex-United States and rebel district court clerk	United States District Attorney E. D. Hunn, esq., United States Marshal L. C. White, Captain John T. Loudon, H. C. Caldwell, Jesse Turner, D. C. Williams, D. Dickson, and A. M. Callahan.	Sept. 22, 1865.
L. K. Person	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq.	Mar. 19, 1866.
J. T. Porter	do	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.

Texas—Continued.

Name.	Exemption under amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865.	By whom recommended.	Date of pardon.
Thomas J. Pollard	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, J. M. Johnson, and United States District Attorney E. D. Ham	Apr. 30, 1865.
G. N. Peary	Property libelled for confiscation	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney O. Jennings	Nov. 1, 1865.
Benj. R. Polk	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	May 5, 1865.
R. L. Phillips	Rebel postmaster	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
Wm. F. Pope	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	July 7, 1865.
Lucius E. Polk	Brigadier general in rebel army	Hon. Attorney General Speed and Russell Houston	June 10, 1865.
James F Quaile	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy and John J. Walker	Apr. 11, 1866.
A. H. Rutherford	Rebel receiver of property sequestered belonging to northern States.	Governor Murphy	Nov. 9, 1865.
J. M. Russell	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, United States Marshal L. C. White, Samuel F. Cooper, clerk United States district court, western district.	Apr. 30, 1865.
Elias Rector	Proceedings instituted for confiscation. Indicted for treason. Worth over $20,000.	Governor Murphy, George W. Paschal, E. C. Boudinot, W. P. Adair, Cherokee delegate; John F. Brown, Seminole delegate; Holmes Colbert, Colbert Carter, R. H. Love, and John Page, Chickasaw delegates; R. M. Jones, James Riley, Alfred Riley, and Alfred Wade, Choctaw delegates; Winchester Colbert and Edmund Pickens, Chickasaws.	Jan. 29, 1866.
J. B. Russell	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy and J. A. L. McCulloch	Apr. 7, 1866.
D. H. Reynolds	Rebel brigadier general	Governor Murphy, United States district attorney, Hons. W. D. Snow and George W. Morgan.	Nov. 13, 1866.
William W. Ross	Worth over $20,000	United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq.	Oct. 6, 1865.
Mrs. Susan Read	do	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney Jennings, esq.	Nov. 9, 1865.
N. K. Shofner	Violated his oath	Colonel J. M. Johnson, Elias Harrell, judge 8th judicial circuit; E. D. Ham, United States district attorney; J. M. Johnson, and Lieutenant Johnson.	Oct. 2, 1865.
Robert Simpson	do	Governor Murphy	Nov. 9, 1865.
W. H. Steel	Rebel deputy marshal. Rebel assessor	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
C. B. Saunders	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, C. D. Johnson, A. K. Berry, J. S. Polk, W. H. Harper, S. M. Addison, and William H. Forrest.	Oct. 9, 1865.
Joseph Simpson	do	Governor Murphy and Hon. Elias Harrell, judge 8th judicial circuit	Nov. 9, 1865.
Rev. W. C. Stout	Violated his oath. Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq.	Nov. 9, 1865.
J. J. Samuel	Rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy	Nov. 9, 1865.
D. P. Satterwhite	do	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
James M. Saunders	Violated his oath	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
R. M. Stevenson	Worth over $20,000, and occupied several rebel petty civil offices.	Governor Murphy, Brigadier General P. Clayton, and John Kirkwood	Oct. 26, 1865.
John H. Saunders	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and district attorney United States	Mar. 19, 1866.
Benjamin Strickler	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy, J. K. Pycatt, J. T. Carter, and James S. White	Apr. 11, 1866.
W. J. Strain	do	Governor Murphy	May 26, 1866.
Robert Strain	do	do	May 26, 1866.
Bernart Smaate	do	do	May 26, 1866.
George Strain	do	do	May 26, 1866.
William Shumate	do	Governor Murphy and D. Walker	Apr. 30, 1866.
S. H. Shipley	do	Governor Murphy	Mar. 19, 1866.
H. J. Stamps	Ex-United States and rebel postmaster	do	Mar. 19, 1866.
C. W. Saunders	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney Jennings, esq.	Oct. 12, 1865.

J. H. Stephens	Rebel postmaster	United States District Attorney Jennings, esq., H. B. Stuart, P. M. Carmichael, J. H. Wiggins, W. L. Cronch, W. A. Britton, and W. A. Cantamery.	Oct. 9, 1865.
C. C. Stewart	Worth over $20,000	United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq.	Oct. 6, 1865.
D. F. Shall	Property confiscated. State depositary and several petty offices.	Governor Murphy, United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq., C. P. Bertrand, S. H. Tucker, J. Kirkwood, and R. S. Dodge.	Oct. 21, 1865.
Larkin Scott	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	July 6, 1866.
D. H. Sessions	Worth over $20,000, and rebel cotton agent	do	Dec. 1, 1866.
J. S. Trimble	Under arrest for treason, and required to pay heavy costs.	Ordered by the President	July 1, 1866.
T. S. Toland	Rebel postmaster	Governor Murphy, E. W. Gantt, and W. D. Snow	Nov. 9, 1865.
W. B. Trout	do	United States District Attorney Jennings, W. L. Morehead, B. Lee Watkins, P. M. Carmichael, D. Spencer, W. A. Britton, A. S. B. Grune, W. S. Cronich, W. T. Crawley, and H. B. Sears.	Nov. 9, 1865.
Robert Tickell	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy	Apr. 11, 1866.
A. C. Wells	Violated his oath	do	Nov. 9, 1875.
Jonathan Wells	do	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
J. A. Wells	do	do	Nov. 9, 1865.
E. Worthington	Worth over $20,000	Hons. Attorney General Speed, L. H. Rousseau, A. H. Randall, G. Clay Smith, and Samuel McKee, members for Kentucky; R. K. Williams, and Governor Murphy.	Jan. 31, 1865.
David Walker	do	Governor Murphy and United States District Attorney O. Jennings, esq	Oct. 9, 1865.
William Wilson	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	May 26, 1866.
W. H. Wilson	do	do	July 6, 1866.
R. H. Wynn	Worth over $20,000	Governor Murphy, E. W. Gantt, and Hon. W. D. Snow	Nov. 9, 1865.
S. W. Williams	Attorney general of State. Member of State military board.	Governor Murphy and Hon. W. C. Caldwell, United States district judge	July 7, 1865.
J. D. Willett	Indicted for treason	Governor Murphy	July 7, 1865.
G. Wilcox	Ex-United States and rebel district attorney	Governor Murphy, Colonel J. M. Johnson, Hon. R. T. White, secretary of State of Arkansas, Hon. J. R. Berry, auditor public accounts, Hon. William Fishback, and J. E. Baxter.	Sept. 7, 1865.
W. E. Woodruff, jr	Indicted for treason, and rebel clerk	Governor Murphy, C. P. Bertrand, John Wassel, John Kirkwood, and D. L. Dodge	Nov. 6, 1865.
William E. Woodruff	Violated his oath. Property seized	Hon. James Speed, George D. Prentice, sr., Governor Murphy, C. P. Bertrand, R. L. Dodge, S. H. Tucker, and Hon. H. C. Caldwell.	Nov. 6, 1865.
Drewry Wall	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy and Hon. Elias Harrell, judge of the 8th judicial circuit	Nov. 6, 1865.
H. A. Welles	Rebel postmaster	United States District Attorney O. Jennings	Nov. 9, 1865.
George C. Watkins	Member military court-martial. Indicted for treason.	Governor Weller, United States district judge, and United States district attorney	July 12, 1865.
William J. Young	Violated his oath	Governor Murphy	May 26, 1865.
John T. Young	do	do	May 26, 1865.
James Yell	Indicted for treason. Member rebel secession convention. Rebel major general.	Attorney General Speed, Governor Murphy, Hon. W. D. Snow, Hon. O. P. Snyder, Hon. R. J. G. White, Josiah Snow, and Major General J. J. Reynolds.	Nov. 9, 1865.

[No. 7.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, IN ANSWER TO A RESOLUTION OF THE HOUSE OF THE 12TH ULTIMO, TRANSMITTING ALL PAPERS RELATIVE TO THE NEW ORLEANS RIOTS.

To the House of Representatives:

In compliance with the resolution of the House of Representatives of the 12th ultimo, and its request of the 28th instant, for all correspondence, reports, and information in my possession in relation to the riot which occurred in the city of New Orleans on the 30th day of July last, I transmit herewith copies of telegraphic despatches upon the subject, and reports from the Secretary of War, with the papers accompanying the same.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, January 29, 1867.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, January 16, 1867.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to transmit herewith a letter from the Adjutant General, of January 14, with all the correspondence, reports, and information in the War Department relative to the riot which occurred in the city of New Orleans on the 30th of July last, called for by a resolution of the House of Representatives, dated December 12, 1866, hereunto annexed and referred by you to this department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
December 12, 1866.

On motion of Mr. Niblack,

Resolved, That the President be requested to communicate to this house, if not incompatible with the public interest, all correspondence, reports, and information in his possession in relation to the riot which is alleged to have occurred in the city of New Orleans on the 30th day of July last.

Attest:

EDWARD McPHERSON, Clerk.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, January 14, 1867.

SIR: In compliance with your instructions I have the honor to submit herewith copies of all reports and testimony of military commissions and other papers relating to the riot which occurred at New Orleans the 30th July last, called for by resolutions of the House of Representatives of 12th and 13th December, 1866, as follows:

Telegram dated July 28, 1866, from Brevet Major General Baird to the Secretary of War.

Report dated July 30, 1866, and accompanying papers, from General Baird to the Secretary of War.

Copies of telegrams, dated August 1, to Albert Voorhies, esq., and General Baird, at New Orleans.

Copy of telegram from General Baird, dated August 2.

Copy of instructions, dated August 3, from the Secretary of War to General Grant.

Communication dated August 3, 1866, and accompanying papers, from Albert Voorhies, lieutenant governor of Louisiana; Andrew J. Herron, attorney general of Louisiana; and John T. Monroe, mayor of New Orleans, to the President.

Report of Major General Baird, dated August 15, 1866, concerning the riot of July 30, 1866.

Letter of Major General Baird, dated August 17, 1866, transmitting detailed report of Surgeon Hartsuff in relation to the casualties resulting from the riot.

Letter of Major General Sheridan, dated September 5, 1866, transmitting proceedings and report of a board convened by Major General Baird to investigate the occurrences in New Orleans July 30, 1866, with brief of proceedings; also an affidavit charging Mayor Monroe with conception and perpetration of certain crimes.

Letter of General F. J. Herron, dated September 8, 1866, transmitting copy of the testimony given before the board to investigate the riot in New Orleans, which he desires to have substituted for the testimony in the report of the board.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

A.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 10, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to enclose to you mail copies of General Sheridan's despatches on the New Orleans riots, and to ask their publication in full. Already a garbled version of one of these despatches, and an incomplete copy of another, have appeared in the public prints. These publications put General Sheridan in the position of taking a partisan view of the whole question, and, what is still worse, of being one day on one side of the question, and again on the other. His despatches, given in full, show that he takes no partisan view, but that he reports what he conceives to be the facts without regard to who is hit.

I am just in receipt of a despatch from General Sheridan showing displeasure at his despatches getting into print in a mutilated and incomplete form.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT, General.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

Received 5 p. m., in cipher, Washington, D. C., August 9, 1866:

NEW ORLEANS, LA., 1 p. m., August 9, 1866.

Brevet Major General J. A. RAWLINS, Chief of Staff:

I see that my despatch to General Grant, of August 1, is published with one paragraph suppressed. Can you tell who was guilty of this breach of military honor?

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General.

Official copy:

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 11, 1866.

Mr. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to submit herewith a letter from General Grant asking for the publication of General Sheridan's despatches relating to the New Orleans riots. I do not feel authorized to act in the matter without your direction, and therefore submit General Grant's application and the accompanying papers for such instructions as you may be pleased to give.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON.

The PRESIDENT.

[Endorsements.]

WAR DEPARTMENT, August 11, 1866.

Secretary of War submits a letter from General Grant asking the publication of General Sheridan's despatches on the subject of the New Orleans riots.

Returned to the honorable Secretary of War.

The President would suggest a careful examination of all the despatches sent from this office, the War Department, and the headquarters of the army, to General Sheridan, General Baird, and the civil authorities of Louisiana, and all despatches received in reply, or on the subject of the riot or the assembling of the convention of 1864, with a view of determining the propriety of at once publishing them in full, in order of their dates.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

AUGUST 11, 1866.

The within-mentioned despatches, &c., were collected and transmitted to the President between August 11 and August 25.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 9.25 p. m. July 27, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, July 27, 1866:

His Excellency President JOHNSON:

SIR: Governor Wells has, in compliance with the proclamation of R. K. Howell, president pro tem., signed writ of election to fill vacancy in convention of 1864, and forwarded the same to the office of the Secretary of State.

ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana.
ANDREW J. HERRON,
Attorney General of Louisiana.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 2 p. m. July 28, 1866, from New Orleans, July 28, 1866:

President JOHNSON:

Radical mass meeting, composed mainly of large number of negroes, last night, ending in a riot. The committee of arrangements of said meeting assembling to-night. Violent and incendiary speeches made; negroes called to arm themselves; you bitterly denounced. Speakers: Field, Dostie, Hawkins, Henderson, Heirward, and others. Governor Wells arrived last night, but sides with the convention move. The whole matter before grand jury, but impossible to execute civil process without certainty of riot. Contemplated to have the members of the convention arrested under process from the criminal court of this district. Is the military to interfere to prevent process of court?

ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana.
ANDREW J. HERRON,
Attorney General of Louisiana.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., July 28, 1866—5.40 p. m.

ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana, New Orleans, La.:

The military will be expected to sustain, and not to obstruct or interfere with the proceedings of the courts. A despatch on the subject of the convention was sent to Governor Wells this morning.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., July 28, 1866.

His Excellency Governor WELLS, New Orleans, La.:

I have been advised that you have issued a proclamation convening the convention elected in 1864. Please inform me under and by what authority this has been done, and by what authority this convention can assume to represent the whole people of the State of Louisiana.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 8.30 p. m., July 28, 1866, from New Orleans, July 28 1866:

President JOHNSON:

Your telegram received. I have not issued a proclamation convening the convention of 1864. This was done by the president of that body, by virtue of a resolution adjourning the convention subject to his order; and in that case also authorizing him to call on the proper officers to issue writs of election in unrepresented parishes. My proclamation is in response to that call, ordering an election on the 3d of September. As soon as vacancies can be ascertained, an election will be held to fill them, when the entire State will be represented.

Your obedient servant,

J. MADISON WELLS,
Governor Louisiana.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 10.20 p. m., July 28, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, July 28, 1866:

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War:

A convention has been called, with the sanction of Governor Wells, to meet here on Monday. The lieutenant governor and city authorities think it unlawful, and propose to break it up by arresting the delegates. I have given no orders on the subject, but have warned the parties that I could not countenance or permit such action without instructions to that effect from the President.

Please instruct me at once by telegraph.

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 4.40 p. m. July 30, 1866, from New Orleans, July 30, 1866:

The PRESIDENT of the United States:

We are in the midst of a terrible riot, caused by the assembling of the convention. Owing to the mixed condition of affairs among the State officers, I see no hope of quiet without you give us a military governor. Cannot General Granger be sent here?

F. J. HERRON,
Late Major General United States Army.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., July 30, 1866.

ANDREW J. HERRON, Attorney General of Louisiana, New Orleans:

You will call on General Sheridan, or whoever may be in command, for sufficient force to sustain the civil authority in suppressing all illegal or unlawful assemblies which usurp or assume to exercise any power or authority without first having obtained the consent of the people of the State. If there is to be a convention, let it be composed of delegates chosen fresh from the people of the whole State. The people must be first consulted in reference to changing the organic law of a State. Usurpation will not be tolerated. The law and the Constitution must be sustained, and thereby peace and order.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 4.45 p. m. July 30, 1866, from New Orleans, July 30, 1866:

His Excellency President JOHNSON:

Convention met; a riot broke out in the city; so far, the police has the upper hand. Several white and colored persons killed. Called on General Baird for assistance, which is cheerfully tendered. Intense excitement. Convention broken up.

ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor, Louisiana.

OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH,
Headquarters, War Department.

The following telegram received 12.45 p. m. July 31, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, July 30, 9 p. m., 1866:

The SECRETARY OF WAR:

A serious riot has occurred here to-day. I have been in full consultation with the city authorities, and have kept my troops well in hand for such an emergency. The riot commenced unexpectedly, and before the troops could reach the scene of action a number of persons were killed and wounded. I have felt compelled to declare martial law, and have appointed a military governor of the city. All is quiet now. Several prominent gentlemen connected with the convention are killed or wounded.

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, Louisiana, July 30, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that a very serious riot has occurred here to-day. I had not been applied to by the convention for protection; but the lieutenant governor and the mayor had freely consulted with me, and I was so fully convinced that it was so strongly the intent of the city authorities to preserve the peace, in order to prevent military interference, that I did not regard an outbreak as a thing to be apprehended. The lieutenant governor had assured me that even if a writ of arrest was issued by the court, the sheriff would not attempt to serve it without my permission, and for to-day they designed to suspend it.

I ordered a steamer to be at Jackson barracks (three miles below the city) at an early hour in the morning, and a tug to be ready to bear orders to the commanding officer of the 1st infantry, stationed at that point. At 11½ o'clock a. m. Lieutenant Governor Voorhies came to see me, and, after conversation, (he feeling confident at the time of the ability of the police to preserve order,) I proposed to bring to the city four companies one hour in advance of the proposed meeting of the convention—at six o'clock p. m.—to be kept near by, in case they should be required to keep clear the streets in the vicinity of the hall in which the convention was to meet. He agreed with me that it would be very desirable, but left me, not apprehending difficulty.

At 12 o'clock m. I drove to see Judge Howell, president of the convention, to request that arrangements might be made to keep any crowd that might assemble to protect the convention out of the streets, so as to avoid an accidental collision. When I reached his house, I learned that the convention was to meet at 12 o'clock m., and that he had gone to it. Returning to my headquarters I soon received a letter from the lieutenant governor informing me that large parties of negroes were collecting from all quarters, and coming into the centre of the city, yet he was not sure of his information. However, I at once sent for the troops. Very soon afterwards I learned that a riot had taken place near the convention hall, and I sent a staff officer to investigate the facts. On his return, he reported having met Judge Howell, who said the convention had adjourned for want of a quorum, but would meet again at 1½ o'clock p. m. This reassured me. But I again sent to hasten the arrival of the troops. Immediately after this the riot assumed a serious character. The police, aided by citizens, became the assailants, and, from the evidence, I am forced to believe exercised great brutality in making their arrests. Finally they attacked the convention hall, and a protracted struggle ensued. The people inside the hall gave up. Some who surrendered were attacked afterwards, and brutally treated. Quite a large number were injured—I cannot now say how many—Governor Hahn, Dr. Dostie, Mr. Fish, and perhaps other members of the convention among the number.

On the arrival of the troops, I soon cleared the streets, and quiet was restored.

From the evidence of bad feeling on the part of the citizens, and of sympathy with them on the part of the police, I felt compelled to declare martial law in the city, and to appoint a military governor, from which I hope good results will ensue.

I enclose herewith copies of my correspondence with the mayor, and of a despatch, which the lieutenant governor claims to have received from the President.

I regret that no reply to my despatch to you of Saturday has yet reached me. General Sheridan is still absent in Texas.

I remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General, Commanding Department.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, MAYORALTY OF NEW ORLEANS,
City Hall, July 25, 1866.

GENERAL: A body of men claiming to belong to the convention of 1864, and whose avowed object is to subvert the present municipal and State government, will, I learn, assemble in this city Monday next.

The laws and ordinances of the city, which my oath of office make obligatory upon me to see faithfully executed, declare all assemblies calculated to disturb the public peace and tranquillity as unlawful, and as such to be dispersed by the mayor, and the participants held responsible for violating them.

It is my intention to disperse this unlawful assembly, if found within the corporate limits of the city, by arresting the members thereof and holding them accountable to existing municipal laws, provided they meet without the sanction of the military authorities.

I will esteem it a favor, general, if, at your earliest convenience, you will inform me whether this projected meeting has your approbation, so that I may act accordingly.

I am, general, respectfully,

JOHN T. MONROE, Mayor.

Brevet Major General BAIRD,
Commanding Department of Louisiana.

A true copy:

NATHANIEL BURBANK,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, Louisiana, July 26, 1866.

SIR: I have received your communication of the 25th instant, informing me that a body of men claiming to be members of the convention of 1864, whose avowed object is to subvert the present municipal and State governments, is about to assemble in this city; and regarding this assemblage as one of those described in the law as calculated to disturb the public peace and tranquillity, and therefore unlawful, you believe it to be your duty, and that it is your intention, to disperse this unlawful assembly if found within the coporate limits of the city, by arresting the members thereof and holding them accountable to the existing municipal laws, provided they meet without the approbation of the military authorities. You also inquire whether this projected meeting has my approbation, so that you may act accordingly.

In reply, I have the honor to state that the assemblage to which you refer has not, so far as I am aware, the sanction or approbation of any military authority for its meetings. I presume the gentlemen composing it have never asked for such authority to meet, as the military commanders, since I have been in the State, have held themselves strictly aloof from all interference with the political movements of the citizens of Louisiana. For my own part I have carefully refrained from any expression of opinion upon either side of the many questions relating to the reconstruction of the State government. When asked if I intended to furnish the convention a military guard, I have replied: "No; the mayor of the city and his police will amply protect its sittings." If these persons assemble, as you say is intended, it will be, I presume, in virtue of the universally conceded right of all loyal citizens of the United States to meet peaceably and discuss freely questions concerning their civil government; a right which is not restricted by the fact that the movement proposed might terminate in a change of existing institutions.

If the assemblage in question has the legal right to remodel the State government, it should be protected in so doing; if it has not, then its labors must be looked upon as a piece of harmless pleasantry, to which no one ought to object. As to your conception of the duty imposed by your oath of office, I regret to differ with you entirely. I cannot understand how the mayor of a city can undertake to decide so important and delicate a question as the legal authority upon which a convention claiming to represent the people of an entire State bases its action. This doubtless will be decided upon in due time by the legal branch of the United States government. At all events, the Governor of the State would seem to be more directly called upon to take the initiative in a step of this kind, if it was proper and necessary.

What we most want at the present time is the maintenance of perfect order and the suppression of violence. If, when you speak of the projected meeting as one calculated to disturb the public peace and tranquillity, I am to understand that you regard the number of persons who differ in opinion from those that will constitute it so large, and the lawlessness of their character so well established, that you doubt the ability of your small force of police to control them, you have in that case only to call upon me, and I will bring to your assistance not only the troops now present in the city, but, if necessary, the entire force which it may be in my power to assemble, either upon land or water.

Lawless violence must be suppressed; and in this connection the recent order of the Lieutenant General, designed for the protection of citizens of the United States, deserves careful consideration. It imposes high obligations for military interference to protect those who, having violated no ordinance of the State, are engaged in peaceful avocations.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General, Commanding Department of Louisiana.

Hon. JOHN T. MONROE,
Mayor of New Orleans.

A true copy:

NATHANIEL BURBANK,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

[From a New Orleans newspaper of Monday morning, July 30, 1866.]

PRESIDENT JOHNSON AND THE CONVENTION—THE MILITARY EXPECTED TO SUSTAIN, NOT TO OBSTRUCT, THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COURTS.

The following despatch from President Johnson to Lieutenant Governor Voorhies is one from which, in the circumstances that called it forth, satisfactory deductions may be drawn. We cannot doubt that the President gives no countenance to the pretensions of those members of the defunct convention of 1864 who are endeavoring to reinstate it; and we can only believe, as commander-in-chief, he will see that, on proper occasion, the judicial and other authorities of the State, as now constituted, will be protected by the military against violence from within or from without:

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 28, 1866.

To ALBERT VOORHIES, Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana:

The military will be expected to sustain and not obstruct or interfere with the proceedings of the courts.

A despatch on the subject of the convention was sent to Governor Wells this morning.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 4.30 p. m. July 31, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, July 31, 1866:

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War:

All now is quiet in the city, but I still have the troops under arms and shall keep them so for some days. Nearly all unite in attributing the chief blame to the police for the troubles yesterday. Thirty-seven persons are reported as killed, all belonging to the convention or friendly to it.

A. BAIRD, Major General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 8.50 p. m. July 31, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, July 31, 1866:

The ADJUTANT GENERAL United States Army, Washington:

Comparative quiet has been restored in this city by the military, who still occupy the streets. There is, however, apprehension of slight disturbances in the lower faubourg of the city.

In consequence of the limited force at my command I am compelled to make use of the city police, whose conduct in the riot of yesterday is most reprehensible. There is every reason to fear the imminent peril to which the lives and property of Union men of this city will be subjected by restoration of the reins of power to the present civil authorities of this city.

A. BAIRD, Major General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 11.15 p. m. July 31, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, July 31, 1866:

Major General O. O. HOWARD:

The riot has been suppressed. I have declared martial law in the city. About forty persons have been killed and a large number wounded, nearly all being friendly to the convention.

A. BAIRD, Brevet Major General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 11.15 p. m. July 31, 1866, from New Orleans, July 31, 1866:

His Excellency President JOHNSON:

Your despatch received. General Baird has declared martial law in this city. The grand jury has indicted the members of the convention, who met yesterday, as an unlawful assembly. Process for their arrest in hands of sheriff suspended by General Baird until he receives direct instructions from Washington. I showed him your despatch to me.

ANDREW J. HERRON,
Attorney General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 6.15 p. m. August 1, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 1, 1866:

U. S. GRANT, General:

You are doubtless aware of the serious riot which occurred in this city on the 30th. A political body, styling themselves the convention of 1864, met on the 30th for, as it is alleged, the purpose of remodelling the present constitution of the State. The leaders were political agitators and revolutionary men, and the action of the convention was liable to produce breaches of the public peace. I had made up my mind to arrest the head men, if the proceedings of the convention were calculated to disturb the tranquillity of the department, but I had no cause for action until they committed the overt act. In the mean time official duty called me to Texas, and the mayor of the city, during my absence, suppressed the convention by the use of the police force, and in so doing attacked the members of the convention and a party of two hundred negroes with fire-arms, clubs, and knives, in a manner so unnecessary and atrocious as to compel me to say that it was murder. About forty whites and blacks were thus killed, and about one hundred and sixty wounded. Everything is now quiet, but I deem it best to maintain a military supremacy in the city for a few days until the affair is fully investigated. I believe the sentiment of the general community is great regret at this unnecessary cruelty, and that the police could have made any arrest they saw fit without sacrificing lives.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

[Endorsement.]

Respectfully submitted to his Excellency the President of the United States, for his information.

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES ARMY, August 2, 1866.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 6.40 p. m. August 1, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 1, 1866:

U. S. GRANT, General:

You need feel no uneasiness about the condition of affairs here: I think I can arrange matters without difficulty.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

[Endorsement.]

Respectfully submitted to his Excellency the President of the United States, for his information.

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES ARMY, August 2, 1866.

[Cipher.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 1, 1866.

Major General BAIRD, New Orleans:

Please report immediately the condition of things at New Orleans in cipher.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Sent 2.30 p. m.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 9 a. m. August 3, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 2, 1866:

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War:

All is quiet upon the surface, but there are still slight disturbances in some localities. The police are still afraid to go upon their beats singly, and some radical citizens are afraid to sleep in their houses. The proclamation of martial law was necessary, because the police are regarded by a large portion of the community as the rioters, and were feared. I am confident it saved many lives and great excess. Its administration extends only to holding the city authorities and the police under the supervision of the military governor. It should be kept until military investigation can determine whether any of the city officers are guilty: I would then advise its withdrawal. The governor felt compelled to ask for a military guard for his protection.

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., August 1, 1866.

Major General ABSALOM BAIRD, Commanding, &c., New Orleans, Louisiana:

You will not interpose any obstacle in the way of the civil authorities, but render whatever aid may be required by them for the preservation of the public peace.

The foregoing telegram is transmitted to you by order of the President. You will acknowledge its receipt.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, August 1, 1866.

Received 6.10 p. m. Sent 7 p. m.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 9.20 a. m. August 3, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 2, 1866:

Brevet Major General E. D. TOWNSEND, Assistant Adjutant General:

Your despatch received. No obstacle will be interposed in the way of the civil authorities.

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, August 1, 1866.

ALBERT VOORHIES, Lieutenant Governor, or ANDREW J. HERRON, Attorney General, New Orleans:

Were the civil authorities, State or federal, conferred with by General Baird before he declared martial law? Could not the civil authorities, State and federal, enforce the law and preserve order with the aid of the military and without the aid of martial law? I hope that order has been restored and the riot not as disastrous as represented. Please show this despatch to General Baird.

The foregoing telegram is transmitted to you by order of the President. You will please acknowledge its receipt.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, August 1, 1866.

Received 6.10 p. m. Sent 6.50 p. m.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 3.40 p. m. August 2, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 2, 1866:

Brevet Major General E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.:

Despatch received. Civil authorities were not, to our knowledge, conferred with by General Baird as to propriety of declaring martial law. Civil authorities could easily enforce the law and preserve order with the aid of the military. Martial law wholly unnecessary. Order fully restored before the arrival of the troops.

The rioting was almost entirely confined to immediate vicinity of Mechanics' Institute, and suppressed by police in less than two hours, and before arrival of troops.

Left copy of your despatch at General Baird's headquarters.

ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor.
ANDREW J. HERRON,
Attorney General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received, in cipher, 6 p. m. August 2, 1866, from New Orleans Louisiana, August 2, 1866:

General U. S. GRANT, Washington, D. C.:

The more information I obtain of the affair of the 30th in this city the more revolting it becomes. It was no riot: it was an absolute massacre by the police, which was not excelled in murderous cruelty by that of Fort Pillow. It was a murder which the mayor and police of this city perpetrated without the shadow of a necessity; furthermore, I believe it was premeditated, and every indication points to this. I recommend the removing of this bad man. I believe it would be hailed with the sincerest gratification by two-thirds of the population of the city. There has been a feeling of insecurity on the part of the people here on account of this man, which is now so much increased that the safety of life and property does not rest with the civil authorities, but with the military.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received, in cipher, 10 p. m. August 3, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 3, 1866:

General U. S. GRANT, Washington, D. C.:

I have the honor to report quiet in the city, but considerable excitement in the public mind. There is no interference on the part of the military with the civil government, which performs all its duties without hindrance.

I have permitted the retention of the military governor appointed during my absence, as it gives confidence and enables the military to know what is occurring in the city. He does not interfere with civil matters.

Unless good judgment is exercised, there will be an exodus of northern capital and Union men, which will be injurious to the city and to the whole country. I will remove the military governor in a day or two. I again strongly advise that some disposition be made to change the present mayor, as I believe it would do more to restore confidence than anything that could be done. If the present governor could be changed also it would not be amiss.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 3, 1866.

Major General SHERIDAN, New Orleans, La.:

Continue to enforce martial law so far as may be necessary to preserve the peace; and do not allow any of the civil authorities to act if you deem such action dangerous to the public safety. Lose no time in investigating and reporting the causes that led to the riot, and the facts which occurred.

U. S. GRANT, General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received 5.5 p. m. August 4, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 4, 1866:

General U. S. GRANT, Washington, D. C.:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of the date of August 3, 5 p. m.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

[By U. S. Military Telegraph.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., August 4, 1866.

Major General SHERIDAN,
Commanding, &c., New Orleans, La.:

We have been advised here that, prior to the assembling of the illegal and extinct convention, elected in 1864, inflammatory and insurrectionary speeches were made to a mob, composed of white and colored persons, urging upon them to arm and equip themselves for the purpose of protecting and sustaining the convention in its illegal and unauthorized proceedings, intended and calculated to upturn and supersede the existing State government of Louisiana, which had been recognized by the government of the United States. Further, did the mob assemble and was it armed for the purpose of sustaining the convention in its usurpation and revolutionary proceedings? Have any arms been taken from persons since the 30th ultimo, who were supposed or known to be connected with this mob? Have not various individuals been assaulted and shot by persons connected with this mob without good cause, and in violation of the public peace and good order? Was not the assembling of this convention and the gathering of the mob for its defence and protection the main cause of the riotous and unlawful proceedings of the civil authorities of New Orleans? Have steps been taken by the civil authorities to arrest and try any and all those who were engaged in this riot, and those who have committed offences in violation of law? Can ample justice be meted by the civil authorities to all offenders against the law? Will General Sheridan please furnish me a brief reply to the above inquiries, with such other information as he may be in possession of. Please answer by telegraph at your earliest convenience.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 8.50 a. m. August 6, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 5, 1866:

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch of August 4, and will reply speedily.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 8.50 a. m. August 6, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 5, 1866:

General U. S. GRANT, Washington, D. C.:

I have the honor to report quiet in the city yesterday and to-day; but many unfounded rumors afloat which excite the timid. The exciting reports will be in circulation for a day or two yet.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following cipher telegram received 4.30 p. m. August 6, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 6, 12 m., 1866:

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON, President United States:

I have the honor to make the following reply to your despatch of August 4. A very large number of the colored people marched in procession on Friday night, July twenty-seventh, (27,) and were addressed from the steps of the City Hall by Dr. Dostie, Ex-Governor Hahn, and others. The speech of Dostie was intemperate in language and sentiment. The speeches of the others, so far as I can learn, were characterized by moderation. I have not given you the words of Dostie's speech, as the version published was denied; but from what I have learned of the man I believe they were intemperate.

The convention assembled at twelve (12) m., on the thirtieth, (30th,) the timid members absenting themselves because the tone of the general public was ominous of trouble. I think there were but about twenty-six (26) members present. In front of the Mechanics' Institute, where the meeting was held, there were assembled some colored men, women, and children, perhaps eighteen (18) or twenty (20,) and in the Institute a number of colored men, probably one hundred and fifty (150.) Among those outside and inside there might have been a pistol in the possession of every tenth (10th) man.

About one (1) p. m. a procession of, say, from sixty (60) to one hundred and thirty (130) colored men marched up Burgundy street and across Canal street towards the convention, carrying an American flag. These men had about one pistol to every ten men, and canes and clubs in addition. While crossing Canal street a row occurred. There were many spectators on the street, and their manner and tone towards the procession unfriendly. A shot was fired, by whom I am not able to state, but believe it to have been by a policeman, or some colored man in the procession. This led to other shots, and a rush after the procession. On arrival at the front of the Institute there was some throwing of brickbats by both sides. The police, who had been held well in hand, were vigorously marched to the scene of disorder. The procession entered the Institute with the flag, about six (6) or eight (8) remaining outside. A row occurred between a policeman and one of these colored men, and a shot was again fired by one of the parties, which led to an indiscriminate fire on the building through the windows by the policemen. This had been going on for a short time, when a white flag was displayed from the windows of the Institute, whereupon the firing ceased and the police rushed into the building.

From the testimony of wounded men, and others who were inside the building, the policemen opened an indiscriminate fire upon the audience until they had emptied their revolvers, when they retired, and those inside barricaded the doors. The door was broken in and the firing again commenced, when many of the colored and white people either escaped through out the door, or were passed out by the policemen inside; but as they came out the policemen who formed the circle nearest the building fired upon them, and they were again fired upon by the citizens that formed the outer circle. Many of those wounded and taken prisoners, and others who were prisoners and not wounded, were fired upon by their captors, and by citizens. The wounded were stabbed while lying on the ground, and their heads beaten with brickbats in the yard of the building, whither some of the colored men had escaped and partially secreted themselves. They were fired upon and killed or wounded by policemen. Some were killed and wounded several squares from the scene. Members of the convention were wounded by the policemen while in their hands as prisoners—some of them mortally.

The immediate cause of this terrible affair was the assemblage of this convention: the remote cause was the bitter and antagonistic feeling which has been growing in this community since the advent of the present mayor, who, in the organization of his police force, selected many desperate men, and some of them known murderers. People of clear views were overawed by want of confidence in the mayor and fear of the thugs, many of which he had selected for his police force. I have frequently been spoken to by prominent citizens on this subject, and have heard them express fear and want of confidence in Mayor Monroe. Ever since the intimation of this last convention movement, I most condemn the course of several of the city papers for supporting, by their articles, the bitter feeling of bad men. As to the merciless manner in which the convention was broken up, I feel obliged to confess strong repugnance.

It is useless to attempt to disguise the hostility that exists on the part of a great many here towards northern men, and this unfortunate affair has so precipitated matters that there is now a test of what shall be the status of northern men. Whether they can live here without being in constant dread or not; whether they can be protected in life and property, and have justice in the courts. If this matter is permitted to pass over without a thorough and determined prosecution of those engaged in it, we may look out for frequent scenes of the same kind, not only here, but in other places. No steps have as yet been taken by the civil authorities to arrest citizens who were engaged in this massacre, or policemen who perpetrated such cruelties. The members of the convention have been indicted by the grand jury, and many of them arrested and held to bail. As to whether the civil authorities can mete out ample justice to the guilty parties on both sides, I must say it is my opinion uncquivocally that they cannot. Judge Abell, whose course I have closely watched for nearly a year, I now consider one of the most dangerous men that we have here to the peace and quiet of the city. The leading men of the convention—King, Cutler, Hahn, and others—have been political agitators, and are bad men. I regret to say that the course of Governor Wells has been vacillating, and that during the late trouble he has shown very little of the man.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

The following telegram received in cipher, 4.10 p. m. August 7, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 7, 1866:

U. S. GRANT, General:

I have the honor to report a rapid change for the better throughout the city. There was much excitement on Sunday and Monday, in consequence of an unfounded rumor that there would be a collision between the whites and blacks yesterday. There was no good reason to expect such an event, however.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General Commanding.

[Telegram.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 7, 1866.

Major General P. H. SHERIDAN.
Commanding, &c., New Orleans, La.:

The President directs me to acknowledge your telegram of the sixth, (6th,) in answer to his inquiries of the fouth (4th) instant. On the third (3d) instant instructions were sent you by General Grant, in conformity with the President's directions, authorizing you to "continue to enforce martial law so far as might be necessary to preserve the public peace, and ordering you not to allow any of the civil authorities to act if you deem such action dangerous to the public safety; and also that no time be lost in investigating the causes that led to the riot, and the facts which occurred." By these instructions the President designed to vest in you, as the chief military commander, full authority for the maintenance of the public peace and safety, and he does not see that anything more is needed pending the investigation with which you are intrusted. But if in your judgment your powers are inadequate to preserve the peace until the facts connected with the riot are ascertained, you will please report to this department for the information of the President.

EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

NEW ORLEANS, August 3, 1866.

SIR: Your excellency is in possession of the main facts as regards the conspiracy which, by reviving the convention of 1864, purposed to subvert the civil government of the State of Louisiana.

An informal meeting of twenty-nine members—one hundred and fifty being the whole number, and seventy-six a quorum—proceeded to depose the president of the convention, (who considered the convention as extinct and himself functus officio,) and to elect R. K. Howell as president pro tem. They adjourned to meet again, and a proclamation was issued by R. K. Howell, president pro tem., convening the convention to meet on the 30th of July last, and directing his excellency the Governor of the State to issue writs of election to fill vacancies.

So far the whole matter was looked upon as a harmless experiment, although mischievously intended; the people were confident that the Governor would not condescend to notice this proclamation, and in case the convention would commit any illegal act of interference, that he would have it dispersed at once.

Unfortunately, however, after a lapse of nearly a month, the Governor issued writs of election to fill up fifty-one vacancies in that body. This document, to which the secretary of state refused to give his attestation under the seal of State, was issued under the attestation of the private secretary of the Governor.

The people of the State became alarmed when no doubt could be entertained as to the fact that their chief magistrate had given willing aid and assistance to subvert the government, the preservation of which was especially entrusted to his keeping.

On Friday, the 27th of July, a large meeting was held in the hall of the house of representatives, professedly for the advocacy of universal suffrage, but in reality to organize for the meeting of the convention on the Monday following. The object of this meeting was to arouse the passions and prejudices of the colored population, so as to make them the victims of a riot by urging them headlong into a conflict with the State and municipal authorities.

On the other hand, we were determined to prevent all riots and bloodshed by pursuing such a course as would baffle the nefarious calculations of these agitators. Our remedy, and the only remedy, must be by pursuing the usual process of law, and even then, to proceed in such a way as to fasten upon them the responsibility of any collision whatever.

The case was submitted to the grand jury by the attorney general, and in the mean time the Lieutenant Governor and the mayor called upon Major General Baird to ascertain whether, if a warrant issued upon a regular indictment were placed in the hands of the sheriff for the arrest of the members of the convention, the military would interfere. The answer was that the sheriff would himself be arrested, and that the convention, meeting peaceably, could not be interfered with by the officers of the law.

It is proper to state that the mayor had previously addressed a note to Major General Baird, enquiring whether he would be interfered with by the military in case he would proceed to disperse the convention as an unlawful assemblage. The answer to this communication was, that the meeting of the convention being peaceable, could not be suppressed by the mayor, and that the military authorities would prevent the interference of the city authorities.

It was suggested by the Lieutenant Governor that the civil officers, under these circumstances, would not interfere to prevent the meeting of the convention, but he proposed that in case a warrant of arrest were placed in the hands of the sheriff, the latter, before attempting to execute it, would call upon the general, who, thereupon, would endorse his objections, and the matter would at once be submitted to his excellency the President. This arrangement was satisfactory to both parties.

On the same day the attorney general and the Lieutenant Governor telegraphed to the President to ascertain whether the process of court for the arrest of the members of the convention could be thwarted by the military. The answer was, that, instead of obstructing, the military was expected to sustain the courts.

On Sunday, 29th, the municipal and State authorities called upon the press to advise the people as to the proper conduct to be held the next day, so as to avoid all collision and riot, and the mayor issued a proclamation to the same effect. The press of the city, with the exception of the radical organ, gave wise and salutary counsels to the public, inviting all citizens to avoid congregating about the capitol, and to demean themselves with prudence and discretion.

On the morning of the 30th the Lieutenant Governor called upon General Baird to communicate to him the President's despatch, and also enquired from the general if he would not have some troops in the vicinity of the hall to preserve peace and good order. General Baird answered that application had been made by members of the convention for that purpose, and that his reason for not complying was that he did not wish to appear to side with either party, or to uphold the convention. The suggestion was then made that to have too large a police force on that spot might be construed as meant to overawe the members, and that, inasmuch as the civil authorities did not intend interfering with the convention until instructions received from the President as above agreed on, it was not improper to have troops to co-operate with a small police force to preserve peace and prevent all possible attempt to bring about a collision. This suggestion met the approbation of the general, who then stated that he would give immediate orders to have the troops in readiness.

Before the end of this interview it was again agreed upon between General Baird and the Lieutenant Governor that whatever warrant of arrest might be placed in the hands of the sheriff would be submitted to him before any attempt to have it executed, and that, upon endorsement of the general's objections, the matter would be referred to the President.

The mayor, being informed of this arrangement, sent but a small police force to the vicinity of the hall; and the troops that were to act in conjunction with them were eagerly expected.

At noon, information having reached the Lieutenant Governor that in the third district there was a commencement of effervescence, and that large numbers of negroes were coming toward Canal street from above and below, he immediately sent a despatch to the general, conveying this intelligence, and urging that the troops be sent without delay. About one hour afterwards the riot broke out, ending in the dispersion of the convention and the capture of the rioters, including several members of said body.

It is not our purpose to argue the question of fact as to the actual commencement of the collision, and to fix precisely the mode and manner in which it originated. We will, however, remark that the collision was, in every instance, brought about by the armed mob sustaining the convention. Suffice it to say that the civil authorities took all the precautions possible to prevent the outbreak; that they appealed during three days previous to have the aid of the military to preserve order at the place where was to meet the convention; that the authorities, State and municipal, had come to an understanding to act in concert with the military for that purpose; that the citizens, no more than the police, contemplated to prevent the convention to hold their meeting peaceably, and to adjourn and disperse unmolested; and that the warrant for their arrest would have been submitted to the military, as agreed upon, although the President's despatch to the Lieutenant Governor, and the subsequent one to the attorney general, were imperative that the military must sustain and not thwart the courts.

The military authorities have been, for the three days previous to the riot, in constant communication with the attorney general, the Lieutenant Governor, and the mayor, with the view of preventing the impending riot. These efforts were unsuccessful, and could not counteract the effects of the incendiary counsels and appeals of those who, for sinister purposes, had had in view this very result in order to reap a political harvest.

That the civil authorities have done their duty in this respect is patent; that more could have been done by them was impossible, as they were not allowed to remove the cause of the riot by taking the proper measures to prevent the meeting of the convention; and we doubt not a moment that the military commander himself will be the first to corroborate these facts, and to arrest all calumnious imputation against the conduct of our people under these trying circumstances.

As regards the proclamation of martial law, the least that can be said of it is, that it was inopportune, for the rioting had ceased completely, the police being master of the situation. The colored population as a body did not participate in these disgraceful scenes, and freedmen in the vicinity of the riot were standing as backers an without being molested. The colored mob, in unison with a few white rioters who were leading them in this affair, were no doubt well organized. That they were well armed is undoubted, since forty-two policemen and several citizens were either killed or wounded by them, although the conflict was over in less than two hours. Twenty-seven rioters were killed, and a considerable number wounded. At dark, when all was over, when those of the mob were either dispersed or in prison, and tranquillity and order were restored, martial law was proclaimed, and the prisons where the rioters were confined were emptied by orders from headquarters. These measures, undoubtedly, were not intended for reviving the hopes of the outlaws, but were they not calculated to inspire them with false hopes? The very next morning the organ of the agitators was issued, containing as usual most inflammatory articles, and so the succeeding issues.

Had the military authorities on Monday afternoon (30th) taken a stand solely to co-operate with the civil authorities, the most beneficial effects would have been the result.

We remain, respectfully, your obedient servants,

JOHN T. MONROE, Mayor.
ALBERT VOORHIES,
Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana.
ANDREW J. HERRON,
Attorney General of Louisiana.

His Excellency President ANDREW JOHNSON.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, January 19, 1867.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a report by the Adjutant General, of this date, enclosing copies of telegrams received and sent by this department and the headquarters of the army, relative to the riot in the city of New Orleans on the 30th of July last.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

The PRESIDENT.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington City, January 19, 1867.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith copies of telegrams received and sent by this department and the headquarters of the army, in relation to the riot at New Orleans on the 30th of July last, as follows:

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, July 28, 1866, from Brevet Major General A. Baird to the Secretary of War.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, July 30, 1866, from Brevet Major General A. Baird to the Secretary of War.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, July 31, 1866, from Brevet Major General A. Baird to the Secretary of War.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, July 31, 1866, from Brevet Major General A. Baird to the Adjutant General United States army.

Copy of telegram, dated August 1, 1866, from the Secretary of War to Major General Baird.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 1, 1866, from E. D. Townsend, assistant adjutant general United States army, to Albert Voorhies, lieutenant governor, and Andrew J. Herron, attorney general of Louisiana.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 1, 1866, from General E. D. Townsend, assistant adjutant general, to General Baird.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 1, 1866, from Major General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 2, 1866, from Brevet Major General A. Baird to the Secretary of War.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 2, 1866, from Brevet Major General A. Baird to General E. D. Townsend, assistant adjutant general.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 2, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 2, 1866, from Lieutenant Governor Voorhies and Attorney General Herron to General E. D. Townsend.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 1, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 3, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 3, 1866, from General U. S. Grant to General P. H. Sheridan.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 4, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 7, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 7, 1866, from the Secretary of War to General P. H. Sheridan.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 9, 1866, from General P. H Sheridan to Brevet Major General J. A. Rawlins.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 9, 1866, from General U. S. Grant to General P. H. Sheridan.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 11, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 13, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

Copy of telegram, dated Washington, August 16, 1866, from General U. S. Grant to General P. H. Sheridan.

Copy of telegram, dated New Orleans, August 17, 1866, from General P. H. Sheridan to General U. S. Grant.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 9, 1866.

Major General SHERIDAN, New Orleans, La.:

Your despatches did not get into print from these headquarters. If you do not object, I will ask to have your despatches published in full. Answer.

U. S. GRANT, General.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET
Assistant Adjutant General

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

Received, Washington, D. C., August 11, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, August 11, 1866:

General U. S. GRANT, Commanding Armies of United States, Washington, D. C.

I did not for one moment suppose that my despatch of August 1 was published by authority from your headquarters. I think I have a right to feel justly indignant at the person who gave the authority. As to the publication of my other despatches, it is not for me to say. They were not written for publication unless my lawful superiors chose to make them public.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General United States Army.

Official

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Assistant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

Telegram received 3:30 p. m. at Washington, D. C., August 13, 1866, from New Orleans, Louisiana, 12 m., August 13, 1866:

U. S. GRANT, General:

The military board called by General Baird to investigate the occurrences in this city of July 30, is progressing as rapidly as possible. I see in the papers, by reports of officials here, an attempt made to cast blame on the military for not being present on the 30th. There could have been no object in its being present except to keep the police from perpetrating a revolting massacre. Its absence for this reason I regret. From the accounts of my own scouts who saw the affair from first to last, from my own officers, and from disinterested and truthful persons, I believe that at least nine-tenths of the casualties were perpetrated by the police and citizens stabbing and smashing in the heads of many who had been already wounded or killed by policemen.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 16, 1866.

Major General SHERIDAN, New Orleans, Louisiana:

In view of the threat contained in an anonymous letter you send to me, I advise increasing your force about the city from other parts of your command. As soon as they can be organized two more companies will be sent to each of your infantry battalions; besides, the companies that have never yet joined will be sent as soon as the cholera disappears.

U. S. GRANT, General.

Official copy:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

Received 4:45 p. m. in cipher at Washington, D. C., ——— —, 1866, from New Orleans, 11 p. m., August 17, 1866:

U. S. GRANT, General United States Army:

I am in receipt of your telegram of the 16th. Everything is very quiet and in fine condition here. As soon as it was found that the military would be allowed to maintain the supremacy in the city, there was a general backing down. I have no fear of my ability to take charge of the city, and consider the force here adequate, unless there was some very great disturbing cause. As to the anonymous threats I am not afraid of them, and as to idle threats of driving the troops out of the city, there would not be much of the city left when it was done. I am all right, and will take care of myself.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General.

Official:

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant General.

PROCLAMATION.

MAYORALTY OF NEW ORLEANS,
City Hall, 30th day of July, 1866.

Whereas the extinct convention of 1864 proposes meeting this day; and whereas intelligence has reached me that the peace and good order of the city might be disturbed:

Now, therefore, I, John T. Monroe, mayor of the city of New Orleans, do issue this my proclamation calling upon the good people of the city to avoid with care all disturbance and collision; and I do particularly call upon the younger members of the community to act with such calmness and propriety as that the good name of the city may not be tarnished, and the enemies of the reconstruction policy of President Johnson be not afforded an opportunity, so much courted by them, of creating a breach of the peace, and of falsifying facts to the great injury of the city and State; and I do further enjoin upon all good citizens to refrain from gathering in or about the place of meeting of said extinct convention, satisfied from recent despatches from Washington that the deliberations of the members thereof will receive no countenance from the President, and that he will sustain the agents of the present civil government, and vindicate its laws and acts to the satisfaction of the good people of the city and State.

[SEAL.] JOHN T. MONROE, Mayor.

WAR DEPARTMENT, OFFICE UNITED STATES MILITARY TELEGRAPH.

Received 9.20 a. m., 3d, in cipher:

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA,
August 2, 1866—1 p. m.

General E. D. TOWNSEND, Assistant Adjutant General:

Your despatch received. No obstacles will be interposed in the way of the civil authorities.

A. BAIRD,
Major General Commanding.

Official copy:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 3, 1866.

GENERAL: You will please transmit to General Sheridan the following instructions:

"Continue to enforce martial law, so far as may be necessary to preserve the peace, and do not allow any of the civil authorities to act if you deem such action dangerous to the public safety. Lose no time in investigating and reporting the causes that led to the riot, and the facts which occurred."

Your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

General GRANT, Commanding, &c.

Official copy:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA, August 17, 1866.

COLONEL: I have the honor to forward herewith the detailed report of Surgeon Harrsel in relation to the casualties resulting from the riot of the 30th ultimo.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. BAIRD,
Brevet Major General, Commanding.

Lieutenant Colonel GEORGE LEE,
Assistant Adjutant General, Headquarters Department Gulf.

[Endorsements on the above.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, Louisiana, August 17, 1866.

Respectfully forwarded to Brevet Major General Rawlins, chief of staff, United States army, for information of the General commanding, in connection with papers on same subject forwarded on the 16th instant.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General United States Army, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
September 21, 1866.

Respectfully forwarded to the Secretary of War:

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF LOUISIANA,
New Orleans, Louisiana, August 14, 1866.

SIR: The commanding general desires a little explanation of the difference existing in the report of the number of police wounded on the 30th ultimo, as given in your report (10) and as stated by the chief of police (about 22.)

He desires to be informed what circumstances have come to your knowledge tending so greatly to diminish the number given by the city authorities.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. V. CAZIARC,
Brevet Captain and Aide-de-camp.

Assistant Surgeon A. HARTSUFF,
United States Army, Sedgwick Hospital.

A true copy:

LOUIS V. CAZIARC,
Brevet Captain and Aide-de-camp.

[Endorsement on the above.]

HEADQUARTERS GENERAL HOSPITAL,
Greenville, Louisiana, August 14, 1866.

Respectfully returned. I called on the chief of police and obtained a list of names of wounded policemen, which, I believe, was twenty-two (22.) I have visited the several policemen wounded at their residences, and some of the twenty-two I found were not injured, and others were on duty the day following the riot. I found only ten (10) injured.

A. HARTSUFF,
Assistant Surgeon United States Army.

A true copy:

LOUIS V. CAZIARC,
Brevet Captain and Aide-de-camp.

NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA, August 13, 1866.

GENERAL: I have the honor to furnish the following summary of killed and wounded in the riot of July 30, 1866.

	Killed.	Wounded severely.	Wounded slightly.	Total wounded.	Pistol wounds.	Incised wounds.	Contusions.
Members of convention	1	4	4	8	4	1	3
White citizens, loyal	2	4	5	9	3	2	4
Colored citizens	34	40	79	119	44	30	45
Policemen	.....	.....	10	10	7	1	2
White citizens, disloyal	1	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....	.....

Believed by me killed and wounded, of whom I could not get absolute facts:

Killed, colored	10
Wounded, colored	20

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. HARTSUFF,
Assistant Surgeon United States Army.

A true copy:

LOUIS V. CAZIARC,
Brevet Captain, Aide-de-camp.

[Special Orders No. 99.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF LOUISIANA,
Medical Director's Office, New Orleans, Louisiana, August 2, 1866.

I. Assistant Surgeon A. Hartsuff, United States army, will visit the headquarters of chief of police, the different hospitals, and other localities in which information can be procured with reference to the number of persons killed and wounded in the recent riot, and report upon the character of their wounds, reporting, also, the names and localities.

II. All persons are directed to furnish every facility to Doctor Hartsuff for this purpose.

By order of Brevet Major General A. Baird:

THOMAS A. McPARLIN,
Brevet Colonel and Surgeon United States Army, Medical Director.

In compliance with the above order I have the honor to report that I have visited the several hospitals of this city, called on the chief of police, coroner and others, and taken all necessary measures to acquaint myself with facts, as required by the above order.

The difficulties of obtaining a complete list of the wounded have been insurmountable; some of those slightly wounded have fled from the city, and some probably remaining in the city cannot be found. The list of killed, too, is believed to be incomplete, but as I have been unable to obtain absolute facts in many of the cases reported to me, I have refused to incorporate them in my list, which is enclosed.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. HARTSUFF,
Assistant Surgeon United States Army.

A true copy:

LOUIS V. CAZIARC,
Brevet Captain, Aide-de-camp.

1. John Muss, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions of head.
2. Fuller Loulong, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions.
3. George Cooper, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of body.
4. Ann Jackson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions.
5. James Somerville, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of face.
6. Alexander Taylor, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of head.
7. Adam White, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of leg, severe.
8. Achille Smith, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
9. William Griffin, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol shot of neck and groin. Died July 31, 1866.
10. Stephen Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp, gunshot wound of head, severe.
11. Reuben Hobbs, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of the right thigh, severe.
12. Warren Washington, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
13. Henry Nicholas, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of neck.
14. John Chester, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot in abdomen, severe.
15. Stephen Jackson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
16. William Bloom, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of occipital bone, severe.
17. William Harris, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of left lung. Died August 2, 1866.
18. Jim Moss, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of leg, severe.
19. Elijah Smith, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of leg.
20. John Domingo, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp, severe.
21. Bill Williams, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of left thigh.
22. John Rollards, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
23. Peter Crocker, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of head.
24. Alfred Mayo, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of neck and head, severe.
25. Dick Hobert, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of leg.
26. Gill Peeks, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
27. Frank Edwards, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of right fore-arm, back, and head.
28. Unknown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
29. Unknown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of head.
30. Unknown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of left lung.
31. Thomas Base, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions.
32. Nat. Brown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of neck.
33. Osborn Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of back.

34. George Lisle, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of fore-arm.
35. Henry Robinson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of fore-arm and frontal bone.
36. Unknown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions of knee, head, and side.
37. Unknown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions of left knee.
38 Charles Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head and fracture of condyles of left knee.
39. Gilbert Reynolds, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
40. Henry Murray, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of leg.
41. General Scott, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of left lung.
42. Leon Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, sprain of left knee.
43. Charles Wallace, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of right fore-arm.
44. John Sparrin, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wounds of fore-arm and head.
45. Elias Young, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
46. George Fitzhugh, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of head, severe.
47. George Burke, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of right thigh, severe.
48. Aaron Brown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of leg, severe.
49. John Gibson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of left thigh, severe.
50. Frank Smith, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of right knee.
51. James Roffin, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of face, severe.
52. Lewis Campbell, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of leg.
53. Edward Francis, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of right thigh.
54. Saul Coleman, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of left knee.
55. William Daugerfield, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
56. Peter Green, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol shot of right lung.
57. Nat Frazier, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, stab of left lung.
58. Mark Thompson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
59. Battice Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
60. James H. Taylor, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound.
61. Hypolie Varriett, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
62. Isaac Crop, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of right thigh.
63. James Lewis, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of back.
64. Peter Brown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of leg.
65. James Washington, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of abdomen. Died August 6, 1866.
66. Robert Ballard, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of spinal column, severe.
67. Charles Farrar, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of left lung, severe.
68. Sylvester Jackson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of right fore-arm.
69. William Woden, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of left thigh, severe.
70. Marshall Simon, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of face.
71. Ludain Nora, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of left thigh.
72. Anthony Nash, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of left fore-arm.
73. Jeremiah Blackstone, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, injury of legs.
74. Oscar Bellevere, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of face.
75. Eugene Foster, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion.
76. John Harrison, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of abdomen, severe.
77. Emanuel Thompson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head and face.
78. Samuel Butler, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp, severe.
79. Eugene Gorden, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of right arm.
80. Charles Hughs, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
81. Gabriel Toroby, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of leg, severe.
82. Jacob Milton, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of neck.
83. Charles Jordan, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, stab over region of left clavicle, severe.
84. William G. Guerellittle, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of thigh.
85. Joseph Claiborne, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of thigh.
86. Thomas Valsin, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, sword-cane wound of left lung.

87. Jule Peters, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
88. Robert Easby, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp and injury to feet.
89. Albert Green, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head and face.
90. Benjamin Pulbot, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incision of feet and contusion of head.
91. John Sidney, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, injury of head.
92. John Bush, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, injury of feet and head.
93. Bill Sparks, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
94. George Wells, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of face.
95. Adolph Albarin, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
96. John Jackson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of leg.
97. Samuel Jones, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of face and legs.
98. Philip Brown, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, sword-cane wound.
99. Hayden Stewart, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of left thigh.
100. John Baptist, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
101. Peter Sanville, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, cut of scalp.
102. James Aaron, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of face.
103. Charles Fisher, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of left thigh.
104. Antoine Raymond, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of cheek.
105. Antural Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp.
106. Victor Laboraux, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions of head and abdomen.
107. Daniel Bidwell, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, complicated dislocation of left arm joint, with protrusion of bones, severe.
108. John Patrick, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture of right femur, upper third, severe.
109. Stephen Johnson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of head. Died July 30, 1866.
110. Alfred Mayo, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of head and neck, severe.
111. Victor Laboraux, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head.
112. Brazille Kemp, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of head, severe.
113. Benjamin Hyat, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of arm.
114. Sam Jones, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of forearm.
115. Frank Haskins, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of neck.
116. Thornton James, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, bruises of head.
117. Thomas Corner, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, bruise of head and arm.
118. John Henderson, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of throat, severe.
119. Rev. Mr. Horton, Marine Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound right arm and hand, contusion left side, and fracture of head by club. Died August 5, 1866.
120. Owen Rennes, Charity Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, fracture, severe.
121. Michael Hickey, Charity Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of ankle, severe.
122. Lyman Mooney, Charity Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of thigh, severe.
123. M. Sokoloski, No. 120 Basin street, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of groin; policeman.
124. J. W. Henessy, 268 Common street, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion of head; policeman.
125. Owen Keenan, 390 Lafayette street, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot wound of head; policeman.
126. Hiram Henry, Hotel Dieu, New Orleans, Louisiana, shot in the foot; policeman.
127. M. Smith, 329 New Levee, New Orleans, Louisiana, shot in the right thigh; policeman.
128. Dan Harrigan, 81 Front Levee street, New Orleans, Louisiana, struck on the leg; policeman.
129. Michael Hahn, Sedgwick Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of head.
130. Alfred Shaw, Sedgwick Hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of back and bruise.
131. A. P. Dostie, Hotel Dieu, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of spine, and sword-thrust of stomach. Dead.
132. S. S. Fish, Hotel Dieu, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of head and back, severe.
133. Rev. Mr. Jackson, Calliope street, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot penetrating wounds, both lungs, severe.
134. George Howes, ——— ———, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions of body.

135. C. W. Stauffer, No. 97 Magazine street, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusion.
136. M. Waples, with Judge Waples, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions.
137. M. Duffey, Hotel Dieu, New Orleans, Louisiana, contusions.
138. C. B. H. Duplessis, No. 252 Johnson street, between barracks and hospital, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of face and neck.
139. Eugene Sties, 326 St. Philip street, New Orleans, Louisiana, ankle broken, severe.
140. George Ross, 46 Montegut street, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of right arm; policeman.
141. William Lambias, 133 Magazine street, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of left leg; policeman.
142. James Brooks, 99 Spain street, New Orleans, Louisiana, stabbed in the right hand.
143. William Theard, ——— ———, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of left hand.
144. H. Hurst, Old Magazine street, New Orleans, Louisiana, gunshot wound of left shoulder, left fore-arm and right side.
145. Dr. Hire, corner Poyfarre and Mayo streets, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of hand and contused wound of side, severe.
146. Lieutenant Smith, ——— ———, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol wound of right arm.
147. J. M. Leclere, 147 Dauphin street, New Orleans, Louisiana, deep cut over left eye: general contusions of body.
148. Charles Azerette, corner of Ursuline and Old Levee streets, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of scalp, severe.
149. L. J. P. Capla, corner Barracks and St. Cloud streets, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound over left eye.
150. Alfred Capla, corner Barracks and St. Cloud streets, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot destroying left eye; extensive contusions of head.
151. Manuel Camps, 245 Dumaine street, New Orleans, Louisiana, incised wound of head: punctured wound of back; extensive contusions of head and face.
152. Jules Lanaber, corner Claiborne and St. Ann streets, New Orleans, Louisiana, extensive contusions of head; pistol wound of right thigh; pistol-shot of left knee; incised wound of left shoulder.
153. Martin Self, 250 St. Philip street, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot in breast, ball remaining; pistol-shot in right hip, ball remaining, and pistol-shot of back.
154. S. Rock, 189 St. Cloud street, New Orleans, Louisiana, pistol-shot of head; extensive contusions.
155. Captain C. Loup, No. 189 St. Cloud street, New Orleans, Louisiana, stabbed in the abdomen. Killed.

CORONER'S REPORT.

July 31, 1866.—Charles Johnson, (colored,) 30 years, a pistol ball penetrating the peritoneum of the small intestine; James Nelson, (colored,) 28 years, a pistol ball penetrating the right lung, at the basis thereof; Collins Page, (colored,) 28 years, a pistol ball in the brain and two in the body; Constant Loup, (white,) 36 years, stabbed with a dirk or knife, causing a wound three inches in length, cutting the intestine of the liver; E. H. Cenas, (white,) 22 years, a pistol ball which cut the carotid artery on the right side.

August 1, 1866.—Wilson Johnson, (colored,) 40 years, a pistol ball in the right lung, and several wounds inflicted on the head with a blunt instrument.

The foregoing is a list of the bodies on which I have made a separate inquest, while engaged at that duty. Notice was left at about 10 o'clock a. m. at my office, requiring me to proceed at once to the workhouse to make inquest on the bodies of twenty-two (22) negroes who were killed in the riot of July 30 last. My deputy, Mr. L. Barthe, without delay, complied, and found 22 bodies enclosed in coffins, around which a hot fire had been lit for protection against the arising stench and for purification of the air. Not a solitary person was found on the spot to identify the bodies; and, as it was of the utmost urgency to have the bodies removed, (as the workhouse contained a population of 450 persons,) my deputy was constrained to make a general inquest in the presence of a jury, who found that the 22 persons in question had come to death by pistol-shots and stabbings, done during the riot of July 30, 1866.

Your most obedient servant,

C. C. DELIRY, Coroner.

A true copy of original report of Surgeon Hartsuff:

LOUIS V. CAZIARC,
Brevet Captain and Aide-de-camp.

Official copy:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE GULF,
New Orleans, Louisiana, September 6, 1866.

GENERAL: I have the honor to transmit herewith the proceedings of a board convened by Major General Baird to investigate the occurrences in this city of July 30, last, with a brief of the proceedings thereof; also an affidavit of certain parties charging Mayor Monroe and other city officials with the conception and perpetration of crimes which they allege as having been perpetrated on that day.

I am, general, yours respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major General United States Army.

Major General J. A. RAWLINS, U. S. A.,
Chief of Staff Armies of the United States, Washington, D. C.

Endorsed on the above:

Respectfully forwarded to the Secretary of War.

U. S. GRANT, General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES UNITED STATES,
September 21, 1866.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF INVESTIGATION UPON THE NEW ORLEANS RIOTS.

The board, having maturely considered the foregoing evidence, would respectfully report as follows:

The immediate causes of this riot, which the board are directed to investigate, are, in their opinion to be found in the violent feelings of hostility towards the so-called convention of 1864, which had for some time prevailed in the community, and which were finally, by the course of events, fanned into the flame of an actual outbreak of riot, bloodshed, and massacre.

The board do not consider themselves called upon to decide or discuss in any manner the question of the legal existence and powers of the convention as such. Whether any attempted official action on their part would have been recognized by the courts as of any legal validity is a point admitting of grave doubt. This, however, was not the question under discussion between the civil and military authorities, the decision of which was, as it appears, pregnant with the gravest of consequences to the State and the nation. That question was, whether the persons claiming to constitute such convention should be allowed to assemble.

The board will endeavor to state, briefly and comprehensively, the action of the civil and military authorities upon this point, and will make a short comparison of testimony thereon, with a view of deciding the cause and fixing the responsibility for the non-arrival of the United States troops in time to prevent the bloodshed which took place. The events of the day will then be considered in chronological order, the board making the best summary in their power of the voluminous evidence which they have taken, and which, in their opinion, points with irresistible force to the quarter in which the accountability for crime will be found to rest.

In the excited state of public feeling before described Mayor Monroe applied by letter to General Baird to know if he can be allowed to disperse this alleged unlawful assembly by the arrest of its members by his police. General Baird replies in effect, that it is not for the mayor to decide that these citizens are criminals, and that he will not permit the arrest; but that if a riotous attack on the assembly be anticipated, which the police may be unable to quell or prevent, in that case the whole military power will be furnished, if required, to assist in keeping the peace. (See copies marked D and E.) But Mayor Monroe makes no application for military aid. General Baird also states his objections to allowing the arrest by the sheriff, but promises to telegraph to Washington for instructions. He does so telegraph, but receives no answer. The other party telegraphs, and are answered that the military will be expected to sustain the courts. This does not remove General Baird's objections to the arrest. It is agreed that the sheriff shall not make the arrest, but that General Baird shall endorse his objections on the warrant, and forward the whole case to Washington.

So far, nothing is said of a riot except General Baird's offer of troops should one be anticipated.

General Baird is unwilling to assume the attitude of protecting the assembly unless called on by civil authorities to aid in preventing or suppressing a riot.

Let us now compare the evidence as to when and by whom he was so called on.

Lieutenant Governor Voorhies says: "I then mentioned to the general whether he would not have troops in the vicinity of Mechanics' Institute that day to prevent any disturbance. This was the day of the riot—it must have been towards ten o'clock. (Page 421.) * * When I made the request General Baird seemed pleased with it, because coming from our side. He said he would do so with pleasure, and gave immediate orders, (page 422.) When I left I stepped up to the mayor's office to see if troops had been sent; I did not say what troops; I only asked for troops. When I made that statement to the mayor he seemed pleased with the arrangement. This was about eleven o'clock, (page 423.)

See also Lieutenant Governor Voorhies's letter of July 30, (copy marked C:) "After leaving you I called upon the mayor, who was pleased to hear what co-operation he could have from the military department."

Major General Baird says: "Soon after eleven o'clock the lieutenant governor called upon me. * * I told the governor the disposition I had made of the troops. * * * I stated, also, that if I was not afraid that my motives would be misinterpreted, and that it would be said that I was guarding the convention, I would have been glad to have posted a few soldiers in the street. * * Governor Voorhies expressed pleasure, and agreed to this with pleasure, and stated that he would be glad to have them, and that he would see that my motives were not misinterpreted. I then said I would send for a few companies. * * * This was the first understanding between me and any one, and the first proposition made with regard to having troops present. (Page 435.) * * * Shortly after two o'clock Mayor Monroe came in hurriedly to see me. He asked when the troops I spoke of bringing up would arrive. I said I expected them; that they ought to be in Canal street by that very time. He then asked me: 'Will they be white troops? Will they act along with the police?' I replied that a part of them would be white troops, the 1st infantry, and that I would use them to put down the riot, no matter who was concerned in it. * * * At no time did he ask me for the assistance of troops, with the exception of the request implied in those three interrogatories." (Page 437.)

Mayor Monroe says, (page 160:) "On Saturday, previous to the convention, I called on General Baird, and gave him to understand I feared a difficulty, providing there were not a few United States troops sent there to preserve order, knowing full well there was a bad feeling existing between my police and the negroes and those who favored this convention. It was previously agreed before Saturday, between General Baird and myself, that a small force of troops would be sent to Mechanics' Institute. * * * I relied on my proclamation to keep at least the white people away. General Baird informed me that he would send a small detachment of troops. * * I told him that if such was the case the convention might assemble. * * * On the morning of the assembling, every ten minutes, I sent [a messenger] to report to me whether the military had yet got there or not. This was about ten o'clock. To my surprise they continued to return and report that the military had not yet arrived, as had been agreed upon between General Baird and myself. * * I informed General Baird on Friday and on Saturday that this convention was to assemble at 12 o'clock Monday, and it would be necessary to have them there previous to that hour, and he informed me that he would have a small detachment of white troops there on Monday morning before the hour of 12 o'clock. Expecting they would come, I allowed no policemen to go there," &c.

Major General Baird says: "The first communication I had was a letter from Mayor Monroe, (on file.) The next communication was on Saturday, the 28th, when Mayor Monroe called upon me and introduced Lieutenant Governor Voorhies. * * * No request whatever was made to me for troops at that interview."

This interview is minutely described by the general and lieutenant governor. (Page 419.) Its object was to induce the general to allow the arrest of the convention; the subject of troops or apprehended riot was not alluded to.

It will be observed that the only essential difference between Governor Voorhies and General Baird on this point is as to which first proposed on Monday the sending of troops. The agreement is made; Voorhies goes to the mayor and tells him of it, and the mayor is pleased to hear of it.

Mayor Monroe swears that General Baird promised and agreed to and with him on Friday and on Saturday to send troops.

General Baird swears that he never so promised or agreed with him or any one except with Governor Voorhies on the morning of the riot.

Voorhies' testimony on this point is consistent with Baird's and inconsistent with Monroe's.

Compare, also, the testimony of Monroe (page 510) and General Herron, (page 529,) in regard to the meeting in the mayor's parlor, and the employment of police and military.

See also the testimony of the chief of police, Adams, (page 14,) who details the instructions he received from the mayor and his orders to keep the police away, and reasons therefor, but in which appears no word of allusion to expected military aid. This testimony was given before that of Mayor Monroe.

Supposing Baird and Monroe to be of equal credibility under oath, the evidence of Voorhies, Herron, and Adams is sufficient to indicate on which side the false swearing lies.

Let us now consider a little further the evidence bearing upon General Baird's action in regard to the troops.

The civil authorities propose to disperse and arrest the convention—first, by the city police; next, by the sheriff's posse, and request the military not to interfere. General Baird telegraphs at once for instructions. He receives no answer. The civil authorities receive a despatch, which they interpret to mean that General Baird is not to prevent the arrest. General Baird's objections are not removed, and it is agreed that the convention shall meet unmolested, and that on the sheriff's warrant General Baird shall endorse his objections and forward the papers to Washington.

So far no application for troops or desire for military assistance is made or hinted at by the civil authorities. But General Baird thinks it prudent to have on that day water transportation in instant readiness to bring up the troops if required. Had he, without the slightest request by the civil authorities, or an intimation that they were not amply competent to keep the peace, brought up the troops and stationed them around the building, the riot would have been prevented. But this course would have been complained of as an uncalled for usurpation; would have been construed into taking sides with the convention; and, in General Baird's opinion, would not have received the approval of his superiors.

On the morning of the riot General Baird is under the impression, shared by members of this commission, and known by them to have been prevalent, that the hour of meeting was to be six p. m. Mayor Monroe states that, in his applications for troops, he stated the hour of meeting to be twelve; but the commission have already given their reasons for discrediting this witness, and for believing that such alleged applications were never made.

At last—at some time between ten and twelve Monday morning—Governor Voorhies asks, or General Baird proposes, the sending of troops. It is assented to; and now, for the first time, General Baird has the request or sanction of the civil power for the presence of his troops. He does not wait for a formal requisition, nor does he ask why the lieutenant governor acts in place of the governor; he sends a messenger at once for troops, and tells the lieutenant governor that he will have them in the street an hour before the convention met. He thinks that if the governor noticed this remark, he must have seen that there was an error about the time, as it was then near twelve o'clock. From that time it cannot be denied that General Baird used every effort to hasten the arrival of the troops, who did not, unfortunately, come up until the slaughter was over and the riot had ceased at that point.

On a review of this evidence, the board cannot but decide that no blame should be attached to General Baird for his action in the premises. Under the impression that the hour of meeting was six, the troops had not quitted the barracks, when, shortly before twelve, the general receives, for the first time, the request or sanction of the civil authorities for their appearance. It was then too late.

Before proceeding further in the description of the events of the day of the riot, the board would consider some of the exciting causes by which, in their opinion, the passions of a large portion of the community had become inflamed to the highest point against this so-called convention and the negro suffrage party by which it was supported.

These were, in the opinion of the board, the tone of the press for some time past, whose hardly concealed threats pointed clearly to violence; the published charge of Judge Abell to the grand jury, (copy marked A;) Mayor Monroe's declared intention to employ his police against the convention unless prevented by the military; the speeches made at the universal suffrage meeting of Friday night, and the exaggerated and incorrect reports thereof published in the papers—all these combined, in the opinion of the board, to produce a conviction among the large class always ready for violence that this meeting might be considered as in the condition or status of complete outlawry, with no right to protection and fair game for the pistol and the knife.

With regard to the meeting on Friday night, there can be no doubt that it exerted a highly exasperating influence on the minds of the opponents of the convention. Negro suffrage was openly advocated; violent speeches were made, in which rebels were denounced, and there can be no doubt that a most ill-advised appeal was made by one speaker to the negroes to come "in their might" on the next Monday to the meeting of the convention.

In one respect this meeting was certainly incendiary in its effect. It fired into absolute fury the smouldering wrath of the classes alluded to against the convention party, and by bringing a procession of negroes to the hall, gave an occasion and pretext for the contemplated and premeditated attack. As an indication of the intensity of feeling thus excited, may be mentioned the remarks of "ladies" advocating the immediate killing of the leaders, Dostie and Henderson, in their houses. (Page 51.)

In regard to the expressions used by the speakers outside the hall, the evidence is conflicting. Mr. Tilton, (page 232,) who listened to the speakers from his balcony on the corner of the block opposite to that of which the Mechanics' Institute is the centre, testifies to the most violent appeals to the negroes to "fight for their votes," "to come armed to the convention," "no cowards wanted," "the stones of the streets crying out for blood of rebels," &c., &c. These expressions transcend even the reports published in the city papers; while, on the other hand, Mr. Shelley, (page 450,) the New York reporter, who was present on the platform within a few feet of the speakers, hears nothing of the call to the negroes to come armed, and gives a very different description of the speeches.

The board are compelled to state that Mr. Tilton's manner and appearance while giving evidence indicated, almost painfully, his liability to the highest degree of nervous excitement, and without implying any intentional falsification, the board can but think that his confessed condition of alarm and indignation at the time caused him greatly to distort the sense of the expressions which he caught. That his position was not such as to enable him to judge of the speeches in any connected sense, would seem probable from his own testimony concerning the events of Monday, when, from the same balcony, he watched two speakers addressing the negroes, and inferred from their gestures that they were exhorting them to disperse.

Mr. Tilton's feelings towards the convention are stated with great frankness. He would not have done what the police did in protecting members. On the contrary, as a property-holder and tax-payer, he would have been for the killing of every man in the room. (Page 238.) The unconscious influence which such feelings cannot but exert upon testimony is well exemplified in this case.

To return to the narration of events. It seems that on the Saturday before, an informal meeting of the mayor, different members of the city council, the chief of police, and some prominent merchants, was held for the purpose of considering the situation and deciding on a course of action. To this meeting was invited ex-General F. J. Herron, who was asked for his opinion. He replies that though politically opposed to that party, he would, were he mayor, allow the convention to meet and send his whole police force there for its protection, and let the matter of arrest by the sheriff be referred to Washington, as proposed. (Page 511.) This opinion meets with favor, (except from one person, who thinks the convention should be hanged,) and General Herron leaves with the full impression that such course has been decided on—that the meeting will be protected by the police and no violence occur. But at twelve o'clock Sunday night the night watchmen are drawn off their beats and held at the various stations. In the morning the whole uniformed police are so massed and held in readiness; whether by orders or without orders, nearly every man is armed. They are not sent to the convention for its protection, as advised by General Herron. On the contrary, they are scrupulously kept from appearing on the streets, the mayor, as he states, relying on his proclamation to keep away the whites, and on the troops which, as he states, General Baird has promised to send, to keep the negroes in order. He fears that the appearance of the police might overawe the convention.

The board are reluctantly compelled to discredit Mayor Monroe, and to believe that he knew that not a soldier had been asked for, and that when he massed his armed police and held them aloof from the building no barrier remained between the convention and negroes and the infuriated citizens with whose threats the city was yet ringing, except his paper proclamation. He states, moreover, that he knew that the hatred of the mob towards the convention and negroes was shared by his police. In this state of affairs, should the negroes assemble in any number, a collision might be considered inevitable, and an attack by the mob upon the convention as sure to follow. Then the police, massed, armed, and ready, are let loose upon the scene "to quell the riot." How they did quell it will appear from the evidence.

It appears that the convention met, called the roll, and adjourned for an hour to procure the attendance of absent members. According to universal testimony, with a single exception, no member of the convention was armed, and they had not only determined to make no opposition to an arrest, but had made all arrangements for procuring their release upon habeas corpus. (Page 218.) It was during this adjournment that a procession of negroes, with a drum and fife and a United States flag, approached the building. As might have been expected, in marching through the excited crowd that filled the street, a collision occurred, the procession was insulted and a shot or two fired, it would seem, at the procession, though there is conflicting evidence upon this point. But this disturbance is quickly over. A negro is arrested and taken away. The procession re-forms and marches on to the building. On arriving in front the street is nearly clear, the crowd of negroes previously there having been addressed by members of the convention and advised to disperse. There is, however, a crowd of whites and some police near the corner of Canal street. While the procession was standing there it is insulted by a white boy, who in return is set upon by the blacks. He is rescued by a policeman, who takes him in the direction of Canal street. Bricks are thrown after them and a shot fired, whether from the negroes or white crowd cannot be decided, as the evidence is conflicting. This is the signal for the white crowd—consisting, according to Mr. Todd's evidence, of paroled ex-confederate soldiers (page 189)—to open a smart fire. This was returned by such negroes (about ten or a dozen) as had revolvers, and by the rest with brickbats. This continues for a few minutes, until the superiority in fire-arms of the whites causes several negroes to drop dead or wounded. This causes a panic, and the negroes run, some into the building and some into doorways, in the endeavor to escape or hide. A lull in the firing ensues, and the next thing is the simultaneous advance of the police in three directions upon the building, firing as they advance. Negroes in the doorways are shot, the building surrounded by mob and police, who open fire at the windows. Some of the police testify that the first firing was from the windows: but this evidence the board consider as utterly overborne by the mass of opposing testimony from all parties. But now some few shots—the number stated all the way from five to thirty, the last estimate made by the police—are returned from the windows of the hall. These shots were fired by those negroes of the procession who had taken refuge in the hall, some two or three of whom, it appears, had pistols. They are, however, immediately ordered away from the windows, and, as far as possible, are brought inside the railing and seated, and the siege of the building commences in earnest.

Before describing further operations the board would call attention to the evidence concerning the character of the mob, acting in support and in concert with the police, and the reason there appears to be to infer that some organizations or bands of ex-confederate soldiers came by some pre-arranged purpose to the attack. The various badges or distinguishing marks testified to as borne by citizens on that day are: I. A crescent and a star, (pages 339, 283.) II. A crossed-cannon badge, known to be that of the Washington artillery, (pages 199, 426, 328, 354.) III. A white handkerchief tied around the neck, (pages 34, 39, 71:) and IV. A blue ribbon in the button-hole, though there is some reason to suppose the latter to have been the mark of supernumerary or ununiformed police. It will be remarked that one witness was himself directed to assume the white handkerchief badge by a friendly policeman who desired to save him. Whether the organization known as "Hays's Brigade Association," which was ordered to be dissolved by General Sheridan, was present as a body, or merely by the common impulse of its members, cannot be ascertained; but of its actual presence there can be but little doubt. Many of the police were members, and such expressions as "There goes Hays's brigade," (page 78;) "D—n you, you are fighting Hays's brigade," (page 114;) "Is all Hays's brigade up? No, if it had been not one would have escaped," (page 41:) plainly show where the strength of the supporting force to the police lay. It is within the knowledge of the board that one plan of action, which was the subject of street talk some weeks previous, was for Sheriff Hays, if given a warrant against the convention, to call upon this association as his posse comitatus; and when General Sheridan's order was published dissolving such associations, the negro paper exulted that Hays's brigade would not, as threatened, break up the convention. The board cannot but think that any person examining the evidence must come to the conclusion that such associations were present in pursuance of a pre-arranged and preconcerted programme. Direct testimony on the subject of such preconcert can probably never be obtained, but the weight of circumstantial evidence, in the board's opinion, leads irresistibly to one conclusion. In connection with the subject of marks and badges, the board would call attention to the very significant fact, testified to by many witnesses, that the police in many instances had reversed their hat bands, and thereby concealed their numbers, (pages 196, 227, 462, 222.) On this fact the board considers it unnecessary to comment.

In regard to the scenes which now took place around the building, and the manner in which the allied forces in the street conducted the siege, the board cannot undertake to present even a summary of the evidence. They can only say that the work of massacre was pursued with a cowardly ferocity unsurpassed in the annals of crime. The escaping negroes were mercilessly pursued, shot, beaten, and stabbed to death by mob and police. Wounded men on the ground begging for mercy were savagely despatched by mob, police, firemen, and, incredible as it may appear, in two instances by women, (pages 326, 330.) But in two or three most honorable and exceptional cases white men and members of the convention were protected by members of the police, both against the mob and against other policemen. The chief of police, by great exertions, defended in this manner Governor Hahn. After the attack had commenced the police appeared to be under no control as such, but acted as and with the mob. Their cheers and waving of hats as they threw the mangled Dostie, then supposed a corpse, like a dead dog into the cart, sufficiently show their unison of feeling with their allies, (pages 340, 243, 358.) It will appear from the evidence of an assistant editor of the New Orleans Times, that it was only by announcing his character as such that he saved himself from instant death at the hands of the police, (page 21.) A reporter of the same paper saved himself in a similar manner, but narrowly escaped subsequent maltreatment on suspicion of having worn crape for Lincoln, (page 306.)

On the subject of the massacre in the streets, and the share of the police therein, the board would refer to the evidence of General F. C. Herron, General Benton, Major Moore, Major Frye, Doctor Cooper, Captain Chambers, Doctor Bentley, Doctor New, Messrs. Frazer, Cope, Miller, Poynot, Hire, Hickox, B. Rush, Plumley, Fox, Duplessis, Stuart, Haynes, Gourdrean, and many others.

At a little before one o'clock a signal of twelve strokes was struck upon the city fire bells. The chief engineer testifies that he had been warned on the day previous that such would be the signal for a concentration of police in case of riot. This signal is not a fire alarm, as there are but nine districts in the city, and for a general alarm the number of strokes is twenty. Nevertheless, two engines turned out and repaired to the scene of riot. Firemen were seen acting as and with the police, making arrests as special police, (page 320,) and lending the assistance of their iron wrenches in the congenial occupation of despatching the wounded, (page 263.) Whether this was in pursuance of any previous orders, private or otherwise, the board regard as immaterial. There can be no doubt that the signal was recognized throughout the city as indicating that the attack had commenced, and as a call to arms to all who might desire to participate therein. "Look out for hot work, now," is the cry of the streets as the first strokes of the bell resound. It is in evidence that in one instance orders were given to stop a saw-mill on hearing the signal. It is understood that during confederate occupation this number of strokes was the alarm signal to the military in case of an expected attack, and it would almost seem that the stirring appeal had not yet lost its power, since, according to the testimony of one witness, it evoked at least one confederate officer, in full uniform and side-arms, to report for active duty, (page 359.) The condition of affairs and occurrences in the besieged building are described by great numbers of those who were present. The witnesses corroborate and support each other on all essential points, the differences being such as must be expected in the accounts given by the actors in scenes of excitement and terror, and which variations in fact strengthen the general case by showing the absence of any comparison or prearrangement of testimony.

The important facts are, that after the first fighting in the streets had ceased, and the fire of the besiegers was directed at the windows, prominent members of the convention requested and ordered all spectators, white and black, to come at once within the railing or bar of the house and sit down. This was effected; those who could not find seats seating themselves on the floor. The doors and windows were ordered to be closed. Before this was effected it is probable that the return shots, so variously estimated, were fired from the windows. This, however, was soon stopped by orders from those of the whites who retained their presence of mind. The police then made their first entrance by breaking open the doors, and, according to almost universal testimony, except their own, opened an indiscriminate fire into the room. This was instantaneous, and preceded by no demand or call for surrender. When they had emptied their revolvers they were driven out with chairs by the negroes, and an attempt made to barricade the door, but unsuccessfully, as they again and repeatedly gained an entrance, and the same occurrences took place, the police emptying their revolvers and being driven out by the negroes. Mr. Horton was shot while imploring a cessation of fire from the police. During these repeated attacks a few shots were returned by the few negroes of the procession, who, as before stated, had revolvers, and two policemen were wounded in the building, though whether by these shots, or the careless and excited fire of their own side, seems doubtful. The police testify that fire was opened upon them first in every instance, but without considering that any different testimony would have the effect of criminating themselves, and regarding their credibility as equal to that of the other witnesses, yet the mass of opposing testimony is considered as so overwhelming that the board feel compelled upon this point to reject the police evidence as invalidated and worthless. The general value of their testimony may be estimated from the fact that out of the large number examined as witnesses but three are willing to admit having actually seen fire-arms on that day carried or used by the police.

At some point of time, not definitely fixed, during these charges into the hall, a white flag was displayed from one of the windows. This does not, however, seem to have had the effect of checking the fire from the outside, and, according to the testimony of the witness O'Connell, (page 195,) and another, (page 317), the police, obtaining access to the room on a promise of protecting the inmates, deliberately opened fire upon the survivors as before. The police themselves state as above that on this occasion, as before, they were first fired on from the hall. In nearly all these irruptions into the hall the police were accompanied by the mob, and a member of the State legislature, Mr. James Phillips, is identified as prominent in the attack. Finally, the assailants obtain full possession of the building; the negroes in hiding are brought out and despatched; others, perched for safety on cross-beams and rafters, are picked off like game by well aimed shots, (pages 76, 61;) the whites taken to the station-houses with blows and abuse; and at last, just as the advancing bayonets are seen to glisten on the levee, the "riot" is over for lack of victims.

On the subject of the character of the negro procession, whose ill-timed and unfortunate appearance was the immediate occasion of the outbreak, the board are unable to see any evidence in support of the hypothesis that it was anything deserving the name of an armed organization. Most of its members had such canes and clubs as negroes carry on all holiday excursions, and perhaps a dozen had pistols. No doubt that many of these were carried with the idea that an attack upon themselves was by no means improbable; but that the procession itself could be regarded as a body organized to fight would seem, to persons of military experience, to have been disproved by events, over thirty negroes being shot dead during the affair, while the supposed organization cannot succeed in killing in return a single assailant, young Cenas, the only man killed on that side, being supposed to have received a stray shot from his own party. It is true that, according to one witness, armed organizations are alluded to as existing by Dr. Dostie; but if this procession may be considered a fair specimen, the board cannot consider the civil government of Louisiana as in much danger of being overturned thereby. The only evidence tending to show a previous hostile intent on the part of the negroes is that of Mr. Sauve (page 64.) the planter, who, by the way, is the only witness who hears the screams of "murder the white men," and who testifies to having been told by one of his servants that a white man had been on the plantation taking names, and telling the negroes to prepare for war; and that the negroes of the procession told him they had been ordered to come and defend the convention. Whatever the purpose with which these negroes came, it is evident that they intended no offensive action. The Rev. Mr. Henry (page 477) is told by the procession negroes that they are pledged to have no trouble on their part.

On a personal inspection of the hall by this board, there were found on and around the door the marks of six pistol shots, which had been fired by the besieged upon their assailants. That the arms were of small calibre appears from the fact that of two which struck the pine panel of the door, but one had sufficient force to penetrate it. On the opposite wall, which received such bullets of the assailants as missed their aim, twenty-two shots were counted. The fact, repeatedly testified to, that the police, on emptying their revolvers, were attacked with chairs and driven from the hall, the board consider as establishing, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that except the two or three pistols in the hands of the procession negroes, the besieged party were totally unarmed.

Of the further occurrences of the day of the riot, the board would respectfully call attention to the brutal treatment, and almost inhuman neglect, of the wounded and dying prisoners at the various station-houses, before they were, by military orders, removed to the hospitals. The evidence of Lieutenant Colonel Crosby, (page 403,) Major Sheridan, (page 407,) and Dr. Avery (page 464) on this point, shows as horrible a scene of suffering and neglect as could have been presented on a lost battle-field. They would also call attention to the evidence on the subject of the renewal of the attack on negroes, and the shooting of them in their dwellings, by both citizens and police, late on the same night, in Victory street, (pages 369, 374, 390.) The board will state it as their firm conviction, that but for the declaration of martial law and the presence of the troops, fire and bloodshed would have raged throughout the night in all negro quarters of the city, and that the lives and property of Unionists and northern men would have lain at the mercy of the mob. The conservators of the peace being, for the time, the instigators of violence, nothing would have remained but an arming for self-defence, and a scene might have ensued unparalleled in the history of the age. As in the Gordon riots in London, and more recent draft riots in New York, the affair would have passed beyond the power of its originators into the hands of that class whose only object would have been plunder and destruction, irrespective of party. In the board's opinion, the property of the southern merchant, no less than the life of the negro and the Unionist, was that night under the protection of the federal bayonet alone.

On the subject of the action of the grand jury in the indictment and arrest of the members of this convention, and their subsequent investigation into, and report upon, the causes of riot, the board do not feel themselves called upon to express an opinion, but would merely call attention to the evidence. (Pages 517, 521, 525, 527, 532, 534.) There seems, to say the least, to be a direct opposition in legal opinion as to the validity of such action, and the presence upon the panel of one who, so far from being a registered voter, was a registered and unpardoned enemy, only three months returned, would seem to cast some suspicion upon the manner in which that panel was made up. But this board do not consider themselves as authorized or called upon to revise the action of the grand jury. Whether their manner of action was according to law, and the substance of their report supported by facts, are questions which the legal profession and the community at large will decide for themselves.

Finally, the board would state that, in their opinion, the whole drift and current of the evidence tends irresistibly to the conclusion that there was among the class of violence known to exist in the city, and among the members of the ex-confederate associations before alluded to, a preconcerted plan and purpose of attack upon this convention, provided any possible pretext therefor could be found.

Threats to members to "prepare their coffins," (page 314,) warnings to friends to keep clear of the vicinity, (pages 69, 201, 491,) anonymous letters dissuading those whose purpose to be present was known, (page 94,) all these taken together, the board regard as of a significance which can hardly be misinterpreted. Though not in evidence, it is within the personal knowledge of the board that a mock obituary notice of the demise of the convention on the 30th of July was some weeks previous posted in the city.

Whether, and to what degree, Mayor Monroe can be regarded as an accomplice in, or as knowing to, this purpose and intention of attack, will probably, by direct testimony, never appear. Whether any definite instructions were given to the police the board regard as immaterial. He knew their feelings towards this party of negro suffrage to be identical with those of the mob. Three-fourths of them were ex-confederate soldiers, and at least one of their officers, appointed by himself, a notorious thug, assassin, and former leader of the very men of blood who might be expected to be foremost in the attack. Had the police been sent to the hall in advance, with orders to preserve the peace, they could have had no excuse for an attack on the convention; on the contrary, they must have acted in its defence; and this was the advice of General Herron. But if the police are kept away until an attack is made and fighting ensues, then precipitated in mass upon the scene, it is easy to foresee what will be their action in quelling the riot. The convention and its supporters have been long held up as outlaws, revolutionists, and usurpers, against whom the police would have acted by order of the mayor but for the interference of General Baird. As it is a maxim that a man must be presumed to intend the legitimate consequences of his acts, the board are reluctantly forced to the conclusion, that although the instances of Governor Voorhies and others were successful in causing the issue of the proclamation, yet that Mayor Monroe well knew that, before the excited passions of the mob, it would be as a barrier of straw to fire; that no troops had been asked for, and that without the presence of police violence was inevitable. When, therefore, he withdrew and massed his armed police, and on the breaking out of the riot precipitated them upon the scene, the board are compelled to conclude that he knew what their action would be, and that he intended the inevitable consequence of his own acts.

The board would call attention to the evidence which seems in many instances to indicate clearly the identity of parties guilty of murder. The impossibility of bringing such criminals to justice, under the civil government as it now exists, would be, in their opinion, universally acknowledged in this community.

Reliable evidence would seem to fix the identity of one of the murderers of Captain Loup, the ex-United States officer, (pages 83, 85.) The evidence against the notorious Lucien Adams, though direct, is that of negroes, (pages 300, 301.) In this connection, the board would respectfully call attention to the small proportion of negro testimony taken, and to the fact that all important points regarded as established rest upon white testimony alone.

Attention is called to the manner in which, since his advent into office, Mayor Monroe has made his appointments and changes on the police, and his disregard of the recommendations and advice of the chief, page 444. His appointment of Lucien Adams as a sergeant is considered by the chief as outraging the feelings of the community. But the board are compelled to state that, in their opinion, it is to the party of which such men as Lucien Adams were leaders that Mayor Monroe owed his re-election, and that he now fears to disobey their dictation.

In regard to the chief of police, and his share of responsibility for the riot, it will be remarked that he was but a subordinate carrying out the orders of his superior. The board are inclined to regard him as well disposed in the main, and only regret that he should not have thought it his duty to resign, rather than to aid in executing a programme of which he must have foreseen the result. There is but one point on which his testimony may be regarded as invalidated. In common with the mayor and police generally, he denies the giving of any orders to arm. If the evidence of the policeman Dorsey, page 133, and the clerk and telegraph operator Cazeau, page 546, is to be credited, such orders were sent by the mayor through the chief and subordinate on Sunday.

In conclusion, the board will state that it is by no means their opinion that hostility to northern and Union men so pervades the community at large, as of itself either to endanger their life or property, provided they refrain from claiming freedom of speech concerning subjects on which, like that of slavery before the war, no difference of opinion is tolerated. But in regard to the party which elected Mayor Monroe, and which through him now controls in a great measure the municipal government and city police, this party the board do consider as most thoroughly imbued with the spirit of hostility alluded to, and as soon as the lapse of sufficient time shall have convinced them that no punishment is to be anticipated for past offences, and that they need be no longer "on their good behavior," then, in the board's opinion, a period of insecurity for northern life and property will recommence.

The recent success of this party at the polls is, in the board's opinion, due first to the fact that its candidate was peculiarly identified with the confederate cause; and secondly, to the unfortunate apathy of the best classes of the community on the subject of municipal elections, which appears to be the curse of large cities, and results in throwing the government thereof into unworthy hands.

The commission have thus endeavored to give as concisely as possible the conclusions at which they have been compelled to arrive on the subject of the causes of, and responsibility for, the recent bloodshed. What, if any, action is called for, is for the decision of higher authority.

JAS. A. MOWER,
Brevet Major General United States Army, President.
S. M. QUINCY,
Brevet Brigadier General Volunteers,
J. IRVIN GREGG,
Brevet Brigadier General United States Army, Members.
GEO. BALDY,
Brevet Brigadier General Volunteers, Recorder.

Opinion of the Attorney General.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE, May 1, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 21st of April, 1865.

By the Constitution of the United States, (2d art., section 2, cl. 1,) the President is vested with the "power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States, except in cases of impeachment."

By the thirteenth section of the act of Congress entitled "An act to suppress insurrection, to punish treason and rebellion, to seize and confiscate the property of rebels, and for other purposes," approved 17th July, 1862, "the President is authorized, at any time hereafter, by proclamation, to extend to persons who may have participated in the existing rebellion, in any State or part thereof, pardon and amnesty, with such exceptions, and at such time and on such conditions, as he may deem expedient to the public welfare."

The right and power of the President to pardon, and to issue any proclamation of amnesty, are derived from the clauses in the Constitution and the act of Congress as quoted above.

By the Constitution and the act of Congress, the power to pardon in individual cases, and the power of extending, by proclamation, amnesty to classes of individuals, are solely in the hands of the President. It is, therefore, needless to discuss the question whether the act of Congress was necessary, in order to enable the President lawfully to issue a proclamation of pardon and amnesty.

The power of exercising and extending mercy resides in some department of every well-ordered government. When order and peace reign, its exercise is frequent and its influence valuable. Its influence is of value inestimable at the termination of an insurrection so widespread as the one which in our country is just being suppressed. Its appropriate office is to soothe and heal, not to keep alive or irritate the rebellious and malignant passions that induced, precipitated and sustained the insurrection. This power to soothe and heal is appropriately vested in the executive department of the government, whose duty it is to recognize and declare the existence of an insurrection, to suppress it by force, and to proclaim its suppression. In order, then, that this benign power of the government should accomplish the objects for which it was given, the extent and limits of the power should be clearly understood. Therefore, before proceeding to answer the questions propounded in your letter, it would seem to be eminently proper to state some of the obvious principles upon which the power to grant pardons and amnesty rests, and deduce from those principles the limitations of that power.

The words amnesty and pardon have a usual and well-understood meaning. Neither is defined in any act of Congress; the latter is not used in the Constitution.

A pardon is a remission of guilt; an amnesty is an act of oblivion or forgetfulness.

They are acts of sovereign mercy and grace, flowing from the appropriate organ of the government.

There can be no pardon where there is no actual or imputed guilt. The acceptance of a pardon is the confession of guilt, or of the existence of a state of facts from which a judgment of guilt would follow.

A pardon may be absolute and complete, or it may be conditional and partial. The whole penalty denounced by the law against an offender may be forgiven, or so much of it only as may seem expedient. The power to pardon is not exhausted by its partial use. A part of the penalty may be forgiven now, and at a future time another part, and so on till the whole is forgiven. This power may be so used as to place the offender upon trial and probation as to his good faith and purposes.

A pardon may be upon conditions, and those conditions may be precedent or subsequent.

The conditions, however, appended to a pardon cannot be immoral, illegal, or inconsistent with the pardon.

If a condition precedent annexed to a pardon be immoral, as that the person in whose favor it is issued should never speak the truth; or illegal, as that he should commit murder; or inconsistent with the pardon, as that he should never eat or sleep, the pardon would never attach or be of avail. On the other hand, if those conditions were subsequent—that is, if it were declared that the pardon should be void if the party ever spoke the truth, or if he did not commit murder, or if he should eat or sleep, the pardon would attach and be valid, and the condition void and of no effect. If a condition subsequent is broken, the offender could be tried and punished for the original offence. The breach of the condition would make the pardon void. Any conditions, precedent or subsequent, may, therefore, be appended that are not immoral, illegal, or inconsistent with the pardon. This great and sovereign power of mercy can never be used as a cover for immoral or illegal conduct.

As a pardon presupposes that an offence has been committed, and ever acts upon the past, the power to grant it never can be exerted as an immunity or license for future misdoing.

A pardon procured by fraud or for a fraudulent purpose, upon the suppression of the truth or the suggestion of falsehood, is void. It is a deed of mercy, given without other fee or reward than the good faith, truth, and repentance of the culprit. On the other hand, as an act of grace freely given, when obtained without falsehood, fraud, and for no fraudulent use it should be liberally construed in favor of the repentant offender.

A promise to pardon is not a pardon, and may at any time be withdrawn; but a pardon may be offered, and the offer kept open, and thus be continuing, so that the person to whom it is offered may accept it at a future day. After the pardon has been accepted it becomes a valid act, and the person receiving it is entitled to all its benefits.

The principles hereinbefore stated forbid, however, that an offer of pardon be construed as a license or indulgence to commit continuing or future offences, or as giving immunity from the consequences of such offences.

After the offender shall have received notice of the offer, or after a reasonable time shall have elapsed within which he must be presumed to have received notice of the offer, he cannot continue his ill-doing and then accept and rely upon the offer of pardon as an indemnity against what he did before and also what he did after notice. Such a construction of the pardoning power would virtually convert it into a power to license crime.

The high and necessary power of extending pardon and amnesty can never be rightfully exercised so as to enable the President to say to offenders against the law, "I now offer you a free pardon for the past; or at any future day when you shall, from baffled hopes, or after being foiled in dangerous and bloody enterprises, think proper to accept, I will give you a pardon for the then past."

When men have offended against the law, their appeal is for mercy, not for justice. In this country and under this government violators of the law have offended against a law of their own making; out of their own mouths they are condemned—convicted by their own judgments—and, under a law of their own making, they cannot appear before the seat of mercy and arrogantly claim the fulfilment of a promise of pardon which they have refused and defied.

The excellence of mercy and charity in a national trouble like ours ought not to be undervalued. Such feelings should be fondly cherished and studiously cultivated. When brought into action, they should be generously but wisely indulged. Like all the great, necessary, and useful powers in nature or in government, harm may come of their improvident use, and perils which seem passed may be renewed, and other and new dangers be precipitated. By a too extended, thoughtless, or unwise kindness, the man or the government may warm into life an adder that will requite that kindness by a fatal sting from a poisonous fang.

Keeping in view these obvious and fundamental principles that fix and limit the powers of pardon and amnesty under the Constitution and the law, I will proceed to consider the questions propounded by you on the proclamations dated, respectively, the 8th day of December, 1863, and the 26th day of March, 1864, commonly called the amnesty proclamations.

You ask my opinion, first, as to the proper construction and effect of those proclamations upon the citizens and residents of rebel States who have taken the oath of amnesty prescribed therein.

These two proclamations must be read together and regarded as one instrument. That must, at least, be so from the date of the last proclamation, 26th March, 1864. No doubt, many persons did, between the 8th December, 1863, and 26th March, 1864, take the oath, who could not have done so had the original proclamation contained the exceptions set forth in the second. What the rights are of those who took the oath in that intermediate space of time, and who could not have taken it after the 26th March, 1864, is purely a judicial question. The facts in such cases are accomplished, and the rights arising out of those facts have attached and become vested. If not improper, it would be, at least, idle in me to express an opinion on those cases. The judicial department of the government must determine the law in those cases, when they are properly presented before the courts.

For all practical purposes, so far as the executive department of the government is concerned, both proclamations may therefore be regarded as of date the 26th March, 1864. From that point of view their proper operation and effect are now to be considered.

It is plainly stated on the face of the second proclamation that its objects "were to suppress the insurrection, and to restore the authority of the United States, and with reference to these objects alone." In the midst of a gigantic effort on the part of traitors to dismember our country and overthrow our government, the President, in the legitimate exercise of his great powers, invoked the healing influences of charity and forgiveness. His great heart but responded to the eager desire of the American people to win back this misguided people to their allegiance and to peace and order by gentleness, rather than to compel obedience by the dread powers of war.

It must not be supposed that, in giving expression to and making a law of this noble wish of his heart, and the heart of the people whom he represented, it was intended to give license and immunity to crime and treason for the then future. His expressed object was "to suppress the insurrection, and to restore the authority of the United States, and that alone."

His object was made still more manifest when he said that the person "shall voluntarily come forward and take the said oath, with the purpose of restoring peace and establishing the national authority."

The reluctant, unrepentant, defying persons who, in their hearts, desired the success of the rebellion and the overthrow of the government, were not invited to take the oath; and if any such should take it, they would but add perjury—a God-defying sin—to that of treason; and if that fact can be shown to a judicial tribunal, it seems to me that they should take no benefit from the pardon and amnesty. A mind and heart unpurged of treason were not invited by the amnesty proclamation to add thereto the crime of perjury.

It seems to me, then, that all the citizens and residents of the rebel States, not excepted from the amnesty, who did, after the issuing of the proclamation, or after notice thereof, or within a reasonable time within which it must be supposed they had notice, refrain from further hostilities, and take the oath of amnesty voluntarily, with the purpose of restoring peace and establishing the national authority, being at the time free from arrest, confinement, or duress, and not under bonds, are entitled to all the benefits and rights so freely and benignly given by a magnanimous government. When the oath has been taken without the purpose of restoring peace and establishing the national authority, though taken promptly, it seems to me that the amnesty and pardon do not attach. This, however, is a judicial question, which the courts may decide contrary to my opinion. I ought not, perhaps, to express any.

In giving this construction to the amnesty proclamation, I have been constantly impressed by a paragraph in the last annual message of the President of the United States. It reads as follows: "A year ago general pardon and amnesty, upon specified terms, were offered to all, except certain designated classes; and it was, at the same time, made known that the excepted classes were still within contemplation of special clemency. During the year many availed themselves of the general provision, and many more would, only that the signs of bad faith in some led to such precautionary measures as rendered the practical process less easy and certain. During the same time, also, special pardons have been granted to individuals of the excepted classes, and no voluntary application has been denied. Thus, practically, the door has been for a full year open to all, except such as were not in condition to make free choice; that is, such as were in custody or under constraint. It is still open to all. But the time may come—probably will come—when public duty shall demand that it be closed, and that, in lieu, more rigorous measures than heretofore shall be adopted."

A profound respect for the opinions of that great and good man, Abraham Lincoln, late President of the United States, induces me to ponder long and well before I can venture to express an opinion differing even in a shade from his. But all who had the good fortune to know him well must feel and know that from his very nature he was not only tempted but forced to strain his power of mercy. His love for mankind was boundless, his charity all-embracing, and his benevolence so sensitive that he sometimes was as ready to pardon the unrepentant as the sincerely penitent offender. Clearly and pointedly does the above paragraph show to the world that such was his nature. He says: "During the whole year that special pardons have been granted to individuals of the excepted classes, no voluntary application has been denied." The door of mercy to his heart was, we know, ever open; and yet he closes the paragraph with this significant sentence: "But the time may come—probably will come—when public duty shall demand that it be closed, and that, in lieu, more rigorous measures than heretofore shall be adopted."

It is probably fair to infer that the late President understood his proclamation of amnesty as giving pardon to all, no matter how long they had refused, and whether they had offended after notice of the offer or not. Whether his powers extended so far is, to say the least, a doubtful question.

I am clear and decided in my conviction that the President had no power to make an open offer of pardon which could be relied upon as a protection for offences committed after notice of the offer. This opinion is deduced from principle, and independently of the language of the proclamation.

The language of the first proclamation is, however, consonant with this opinion. It is addressed to "all persons who have participated in the existing rebellion"—words referring to the past.

If I am right in this construction of the proclamation—and I am satisfied in my own mind that I am—another proclamation should be issued. Persons should not be invited to take an oath and to comply with terms under which they cannot obtain firm legal rights. It is especially due to those who have heretofore and would now avail themselves, in good faith, of the benefits of pardon and amnesty, that another proclamation should be substituted, covering the now past. Persons who have been constantly engaged in rebellion should know distinctly what they are to do, when and how they are to do it to free themselves from punishment, in whole or in part, or to reinstate themselves as before the rebellion. Such as have been affected merely by their treasonable associations should be absolutely forgiven. Appropriate conditions should be appended to the pardon of many. The grace and favor of the government should now be large and generous, and the operation and effect of its proffered mercy should not be left uncertain.

The second question you ask is as to the rights of the citizens and residents of the rebel States who have not taken or offered to take the oath and comply with the terms of the proclamation.

Here, again, we meet trouble and uncertainty.

The expressed objects of the proclamation are to suppress the insurrection, and to restore the authority of the United States. Can any one be permitted to take the oath, and comply with the terms prescribed in the proclamation, in a State or a community where the civil and military power of the insurrection has been destroyed and the rebellion suppressed, and the authority of the United States is established without let or hindrance? Or does the insurrection continue, in legal contemplation, though not in fact, until the executive department of the government shall, by proclamation, declare that it has been suppressed? And would this proclamation of pardon and amnesty continue and be open after proclamation that the rebellion had been suppressed?

It would seem from the proclamation that the amnesty was extended to those who were willing to aid in suppressing, as well as restoring; and yet it may and doubtless will be contended, and with much force and show of reason, that all who have stood by and clung to the insurrection till its organization and power, both civil and military, were gone, have nevertheless a right to take all the benefits of the amnesty, because they will lend a reluctant aid in restoring an authority which they hate. Amnesty is proffered for aid in suppressing and restoring; amnesty is demanded for aid in the work of restoration: full reward is required for less than half of the service that is needed.

As a measure to aid in the suppression of the rebellion, the late proclamation has done its full and complete office. Now, one is desired to aid in restoring order and reorganizing society in the rebellious States. Reconstruction is not needed; that word conveys an erroneous idea. The construction of this government is as perfect as human wisdom can make it. The trial to which its powers and capacities have been subjected in this effort at revolution and dismemberment proves with what wisdom its foundations have been laid. Ours is a task to preserve principles and powers clearly and well defined, and that have carried us safely through our past troubles. Ours is not a duty to reconstruct or to change. Society in the rebel States has not been and is not now in a normal condition, nor in harmony with the principles of our government. That society has rebelled against them, and made war upon the principles and powers of our government. In so doing it has offended, and stands a convicted culprit. Mercy must be largely extended. Some of the great leaders and offenders only must be made to feel the extreme rigor of the law—not in a spirit of revenge, but to put the seal of infamy upon their conduct. But the mercy extended to the great mass of misguided people can and should be so used as to reorganize society upon a loyal and freedom-loving basis. It is manifestly for their good and the good of mankind that this should be done. The power of pardon and mercy is adequate to this end. Such conditions, precedent and subsequent, can legally and properly be appended as will root out the spirit of rebellion, and bring society in those States into perfect accord with the wise and thoroughly tried principles of our government.

If this power of pardon is wisely used, peace will be established upon a sure and permanent basis.

On these grounds, in addition to what has been before said, I am of the opinion that another and a new offer of amnesty, adapted to the existing condition of things, should be proclaimed.

I do not conceive that it is in place just now, even if I were prepared to do so—which I am not, because not sufficiently advised of the temper of those so lately in rebellion—for me to say what should be the terms of the suggested proclamation.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

The PRESIDENT.

[Circular.]

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, June 7, 1865.

By direction of the President, all persons belonging to the excepted classes enumerated in the President's amnesty proclamation of May 29, 1865, who may make special applications to the President for pardon, are hereby notified that, before their respective applications will be considered, it must be shown that they have respectively taken and subscribed the oath (or affirmation) in said proclamation prescribed. Every such person desiring a special pardon should make personal application in writing therefor, and should transmit with such application the original oath (or affirmation) as taken and subscribed before an officer authorized under the rules and regulations promulgated by the Secretary of State to administer the amnesty oath prescribed in the said proclamation of the President.

JAMES SPEED,
Attorney General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, BUREAU OF REFUGEES, FREEDMEN, &C.,
Washington, April 23, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to furnish the following report in answer to the resolution of the House of Representatives of March 5, 1866, inquiring concerning the restoration to former owners of property in the States lately in rebellion, seized by the United States, under the act of July 17, 1862, or as abandoned property.

A list of property seized under the act of July 17, 1862, and subsequently restored to former owners by the bureau, is appended. The greater portion of property of this character is situated in Virginia, and was formally set apart for the use of refugees and freedmen by circular from the bureau, approved by the President.

It became apparent, however, that much of it had been improperly seized, and, to avoid injustice, action under the circular was temporarily suspended. Part of this property had been merely libelled. Against part the proceedings had gone to a decree of condemnation and sale. Very little, however, was actually sold.

On the 12th September, 1865, circular No. 15, series 1865, was issued from this bureau to govern its action respecting property. This circular, originally drafted by the Commissioner, was submitted to the President, who materially amended the original provisions. It was promulgated as received from him.

With respect to property seized under the act of July 17, 1862, this circular declares that it shall be regarded as confiscated only after an actual sale has taken place, and directs assistant commissioners of the bureau to restore it when it appears satisfactorily that it has not been confiscated. Such property has, therefore, been restored upon proof that proceedings against it had been dismissed in the United States courts.

The records of this office do not show whether parties to whom such property has been restored were connected with the army of the so-called Confederate States, or whether they gave aid or comfort to the rebellion.

A list of abandoned property upon which allotments have been made to freedmen, and which has been subsequently restored to former owners, is also appended. Of this the estate of William Aiken, in South Carolina, was restored by order of Major General D. E. Sickles, commanding the department. Three estates were surrendered for the reason that they were not actually abandoned. Of the remainder some were given up because very few freedmen were resident upon them, and those could be more advantageously located elsewhere. The others were restored after mutually satisfactory agreements had been entered into between the freedmen and the former owners.

All of these pieces of property were embraced in General Sherman's Field Order No. 15, and the authority for the action taken by the bureau in respect to them was derived from the instructions of the President, contained in General Orders No. 145 from the War Department, bearing date October 9, 1865.

The appended list shows, as far as is known, the names of such parties to whom property of this character was restored, who were connected with the army of the so-called Confederate States.

The property held under the act of July, 1862, and the abandoned property actually allotted to resident freedmen, comprise but a small proportion of the entire amount which the bureau has held in its possession.

The order of the President of June 2, 1865, directing all persons in the service, civil or military, of the United States to turn over to this bureau all property of the character referred to in the act establishing it, resulted in the transfer to the bureau of a large amount of property, the greater portion of which came under the designation of "abandoned." It was supposed that the bureau could retain possession of this property until the purposes for which it was granted were accomplished.

Measures were taken to divide and allot it to freedmen, and owners applying for its restoration on the ground that they had received the pardon of the President were refused.

In August, 1865, an application was received from B. B. Leake, of Tennessee, a former soldier of the rebel army, who had received a special pardon. His property was clearly abandoned, and his application was not granted. An appeal was made to the President, and on the 16th of August was received at this bureau with the following endorsement:

"EXECUTIVE OFFICE, August 16, 1865.

"Respectfully returned to the Commissioner of Bureau Refugees, Freedmen, &c. The records of this office show that B. B. Leake was specially pardoned by the President on the 27th ultimo, and was thereby restored to all his rights of property, except as to slaves. Notwithstanding this, it is understood that the possession of his property is withheld from him. I have, therefore, to direct that General Fisk, assistant commissioner at Nashville, Tennessee, be instructed by the chief Commissioner of Bureau of Freedmen, &c., to relinquish possession of the property of Mr. Leake, held by him as assistant commissioner, &c., and that the same be immediately restored to the said Leake. The same action will be had in all similar cases.

"ANDREW JOHNSON,
"President United States."

In complying with these definite instructions, the bureau has been compelled to part with the greater portion of the property once under its control. Except in the very few cases where property has been actually sold under the act of July 17, 1862, and in that portion of South Carolina and Georgia embraced in the provisions of General Sherman's Field Order No. 15, its tenure of property has been too uncertain to justify allotments to freedmen.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. O. HOWARD,
Major General, Commissioner, &c.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

List of property seized under act of July 17, 1862, and restored to former owners.

Name.	No. acres.	Location.
Booker, George	850	Back river, Elizabeth City county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
West, Parker	200	James river, Elizabeth City county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
Young, W. G	3,900	Elizabeth City county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
Smith, Francis L	500	Prince William county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
Thornton, William W	140	Do. do. do.
Weedon, F. A	218	Do. do. do.
Goodwin, David G	450	Norfolk, Va. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Va.
Armistead, John	75	Elizabeth City county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
Sinclair, Jeff. B	600	Do. do. do.
Wray, George	300	Do. do. do.
Vaughn, Robert H	500	Do. do. do.
Winder, Levin	600	Do. do. do.
Anderson, William	100	Do. do. do.
Lee, Parker P	1,000	Do. do. do.
Phillips, Thomas	30	Do. do. do.
Phillips, John	*	Do. do. do.
Jones, William	200	Do. do. do.
Johnson, Benjamin	75	Prince William county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
Kearns, Edward	†	City of Portsmouth, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
Murdaugh, James	†	Do. do. do.
Baker, Richard H	†	City of Norfolk, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of Virginia.
DeBree, John	†	Do. do. do.
Taylor, William E	†	Do. do. do.
Johnston, James H	†	Do. do. do.
Ward, Matthias	†	Do. do. do.
Bean, William	100	Loudon county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of the District of Columbia.
Gregg, Nathan	*	Do. do. do.
Lynch, William B	†	Do. do. do.
Harrison, Matthew	*	Do. do. do.
Rust, George T	625	Do. do. do.
White, E. V	*	Do. do. do.
Claggett, Henry O	†	Do. do. do.
Payson, F. M. C	150	Do. do. do.
Bowie, Robert G	150	Do. do. do.
Clark, A. A. C	325	Do. do. do.
White, Josiah F	300	Do. do. do.
Shreve, Daniel F	250	Do. do. do.
Braden, Oscar S	300	Do. do. do.
Aldridge, John	400	Do. do. do.
Beverly, Robert, trustee for Mary Chichester.	*	Do. do. do.
Tebbs, Charles B	80	Do. do. do.
Ball, George W	1,000	Do. do. do.
Thrift, Sanderson	307	Do. do. do.
Edwards, Thomas W	500	Do. do. do.
Mott, A. R	§	Fairfax county, Virginia. Restored by order of assistant commissioner of the District of Columbia.
Corse, H. D	87	Do. do. do.
Means, Lewis D	50	Do. do. do.
Muse, Mrs. Priscilla J	80	Do. do. do.
Dulaney, W. H., administrator of the "Ball estate."	992	Do. do. do.
Landstreet, John	98	Do. do. do.
Rost, P. A	†	New Orleans, Louisiana. By order of assistant commissioner of Louisiana.
Soulé, Pierre	†	Do. do. do.
Story, Benjamin S	†	Do. do. do.
Grivot, M	†	Do. do. do.
McKnight, Thomas	†	Do. do. do.
Story, Norman	†	Do. do. do.
Goodrich & Co	†	Do. do. do.
Murrell, G. M	†	Do. do. do.
Murrell, E. H	†	Do. do. do.
Murrell, O. G	†	Do. do. do.
Clayton, R. E	†	Do. do. do.
Finnangan, Harris	§	Little Rock, Arkansas. By order of assistant commissioner of Missouri and Arkansas.
Total number of acres	15,452

* Not reported. † House and lot. ‡ Buildings. § Houses and lots.

Statement of abandoned property restored to former owners, upon which allotments had been made to freedmen.

Name.	No. acres.	Location of property.
Beckett, Theodore	500	Edisto, Johns, and Wardmalaw Islands, S. C.
Seabrook, jr., William	400	Edisto island, S. C. (Confederate army.)
Mikell, Jenkins	700	Do. do.
Lastree, Edward	500	Do.
Hunnahan, William	214	Do.
Bailey, Ephraim	489	Do.
Whaley, William	350	Do.
Aiken, William	1,020	Jehossee Island, S. C.
Rivers, Constans	188	James island, S. C.
Dill, Joseph	160	Do.
Roper, Thomas	670	Johns island, S. C.
Hopkinson, J	680	Johns and Wardmalaw Islands, S. C.
Hart, J	400	Do.
Hart, Thomas	200	Do.
Whaley, Ben	300	Do.
James, Rose	400	St. Paul's parish, S. C.
Dunn, Mrs. Mary	200	Dunfuskie Island, S. C.
Stoddard, John, executor estate of Mungin.	1,226	Do.
Waring, Colonel	200	Skidaway Island, Ga.
Nichols, J. R	495	Do.
Prichard, Colonel J. R	200	Skidaway Island, Ga. (Confederate army.)
Cheves, Dr. John R	500	Ogeechee river, Chatham county, Ga. (Confederate army.)
Scriven, John R	300	Do. do. do.
Potter estate	1,000	Chatham county, Ga.
Scriven, George P	400	Chatham county, Ga. (Confederate army.)
Huger, Judge	600	Ogeechee river, opposite Savannah, Ga.
Heywood, Daniel	700	Do. do.
Izard, Smith	700	Do. do.
McMillan, K	500	Do. do.
Rose, Hugh	400	Do. do.
Total acres restored*	14,652

* Restored by order of assistant commissioner of South Carolina and Georgia.

In addition to the properly seized under the act of July, 1862, and abandoned property allotted to freedmen 400,000 acres of abandoned land not allotted to freedmen have been restored to former owners.

Recapitulation.

Property seized under act of July, 1862, and restored by this bureau	acres..	15,452
Abandoned property allotted to freedmen and restored by this bureau	do....	14,652
Abandoned property not allotted to freedmen restored by this bureau	do....	400,000
Total		430,104

[No. 9.]

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, TRANSMITTING COMMUNICATIONS FROM THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY AND POSTMASTER GENERAL, SUGGESTING A MODIFICATION OF THE OATH OF OFFICE PRESCRIBED BY CONGRESS, APPROVED JULY 2, 1862.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I herewith transmit communications from the Secretary of the Treasury and the Postmaster General, suggesting a modification of the oath of office prescribed by the act of Congress approved July 2, 1862. I fully concur in their recommendation, and, as the subject pertains to the efficient administration of the revenue and postal laws in the southern States, I earnestly commend it to the early consideration of Congress.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5, 1866.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, March 19, 1863.

SIR: Herewith I hand you the names of collectors of internal revenue, assessors, assistant assessors, collectors and surveyors of customs, &c., &c., appointed since the overthrow of the rebellion in the southern States, who have not been able to take, literally, the oath of office prescribed by the act approved July 2, 1862. Besides these officers, a considerable number, perhaps the larger proportion, of those holding subordinate positions in the revenue departments, have been also unable to comply with the requirements of the statute. As a consequence, they have served without compensation, as their accounts could not be audited by the accounting officers of the government.

Many of these officers have performed very important duties with more fidelity; and not a few must be in great distress by reason of their inability to draw their salaries and commissions.

When these appointments were made, it was feared that it would be difficult to find competent officers in many of the southern revenue districts who could take the oath referred to, but so important did it seem to you and to your Cabinet for the purpose of equalizing the public burdens, that the revenue system should be established throughout the recently rebellious States with as little delay as practicable, and that the unpleasant duty of collecting taxes from an exhausted and recently rebellious people should be performed by their own citizens, that I did not hesitate to recommend for appointment, and you did not hesitate to appoint, men of whose present loyalty there was no question, but who might have been, either willingly or unwillingly, during the progress of the rebellion, so connected with the insurgent State and confederate government as to be unable to take the oath of office. This was not done from any disposition to disregard the law, but with an honest and sincere purpose of collecting the revenues with as little odium to the tax-payers as possible.

The country was in a peculiar condition. The rebellion had come to a sudden close All resistance to the authority of the United States had ceased, and some seven millions of people, in a state of utter disorganization, were left without any civil government whatever, and without even an adequate military protection against anarchy and violence. Under these circumstances, as it seemed clearly to be the duty of the Executive to proceed at once to establish the federal authority and civil government in these States, so it seemed to be necessary to carry into effect the revenue laws of the general government. As the country was passing from a state of war to a state of peace, and the emergency seemed to be too pressing to admit of delay until the meeting of Congress, it was thought that the test oath might, in view of the great objects to be attained, in some cases be dispensed with; or rather, that persons might be permitted to hold revenue offices who could take it only in a qualified form. No one could have regretted more than yourself and the members of your Cabinet the necessity which existed for this course; but there seemed to be no alternative, and it was confidently hoped that, under the circumstances of the case, it would be approved by Congress.

Among all those whose names are presented to you, I have no reason to suppose that there is one who can be justly charged with being instrumental in instigating the rebellion, although a few may have contributed to its support and continuance.

Some, with strong attachments for the Union, had followed the States in which they lived into the war against the United States under the baleful influence of the doctrine of State sovereignty. Some had held office under the insurgent authorities as the only means of supporting their families; others, to escape conscription, or to be in a better condition to resist, at the proper time, confederate rule. Not one is known to have been a disunionist, or unfriendly to the government, at the commencement of the war. A very slight change in the oath, a change that would not cover a particle of present disloyalty, would enable the most of them to hold the offices they are now so acceptably filling. Great loss to the government and great inconvenience to this department must result from the discontinuance of their services; but it is due to them, unless relief should be given to them at an early day, that they should be notified of the fact that as their services cannot be legally paid for, they will be no longer required. At the same time I would respectfully suggest, if it should be necessary to give them this notice, that Congress be asked that authority be granted for the payment of the salaries and commissions to which they would be entitled had they taken the oath. It is true they were advised that their accounts could not be audited until Congress had modified the oath; but as they expected, as did yourself and your Cabinet, a modification of it early in the session, and as they have been living and working in this hope, it would seem to be unjust, as well as unwise, for the government to decline paying them for the valuable services which they have rendered.

In regard to future appointments I have to say that I am well satisfied that it will be difficult, if not impossible, to find competent men at the South to fill the revenue offices, who can qualify under the statute. Especially will this be so in regard to the subordinate positions. In the progress of the rebellion very few persons of character and intelligence in most of the e States failed, in some way or other, to participate in the hostilities, or to connect themselves with the insurgent government. This is almost universally true of the young men, who are expected to fill clerkships and other inferior places in the revenue service. Men of the necessary qualifications who were able to take the oath, and were inclined to accept appointments, have, as far as they could be found, already been employed by the government. For those offices that must soon become vacant if Congress should not deem it to be safe or proper to modify the oath, I am at a loss to know where the right men are to be obtained, or how the revenues in many of the southern districts are to be collected.

It is urged, I know, that there are plenty of men at the South who can comply with the statute, and that, if this should not prove to be the fact, men at the North can be found who will accept prominent offices at the present salaries, and also the subordinate positions, if the proper inducements in the way of increased salaries are held out to them.

It is true there are still some applicants for office in the southern States who present what they call "a clean record for loyalty," but, with rare exceptions, they are persons who would have been able to present an equally fair record for place under the confederate government if the rebellion had been a success, or persons lacking the qualifications which are needed in revenue positions.

In regard to the matter of compensation, I have only to remark that the law fixes definitely the salaries and commissions of most officers, and that the pay of subordinate officers is altogether inadequate to tempt northern men to assume the risk and incur the odium of collecting taxes in the southern States, except, perhaps, in the commercial cities of the seaboard.

I deem it my duty further to remark that I do not consider it advisable for the government to attempt to collect taxes in the southern States by the hands of strangers. After having given the subject careful consideration, anxious as I am to increase the revenue and to lighten by distributing and equalizing the burdens of the people, with no party interest to promote, and with nothing but the good of the government at heart, I have come to the deliberate conclusion that it would be better for the country, politically and financially, to suspend the collection of internal revenue taxes in the southern States, except in commercial cities, for months, if not for years to come, rather than to undertake to collect them by men not identified with the tax-payers in sympathy or in interest.

The rebellion grew out of an antagonism of opinion between the people of the free and slave States, the legitimate result of a difference of institutions. With the abolition of slavery, all real differences of opinion and all serious causes of estrangement ought rapidly to disappear. It will be a calamity, the extent of which cannot now be estimated, both to this nation and to the cause of civil liberty throughout the world, if, instead of looking towards reconciliation and harmony, the action of the government shall tend to harden and intensify a sectionalism between the northern and southern States. It is difficult to conceive of a more unfortunate course for the government of the United States to pursue than to make tax-gatherers at the South of men who are strangers to the people. It needs no reference to history (although it is full of lessons upon this subject) to illustrate the fatal consequences of such a policy.

The importance of this subject must be my apology for thus calling your attention to it. I am greatly embarrassed, on the one hand, by the consideration that, by sanctioning the longer continuance in office of persons who have not taken the oath, I am not acting with entire fairness to them, and am subjected to the charge of disregarding the law; and, on the other hand, by the consideration that, if they should be dismissed, or requested to resign, the public revenues would be very considerably diminished, and reconciliation and harmony between the government and a large portion of its citizens greatly retarded. I would, therefore, respectfully suggest that the whole matter be referred to Congress for such action as, in their judgment, the interest of the service and the interest of the Union may seem to require.

I am, with great respect, very truly yours,

HUGH McCULLOCH, Secretary.

The PRESIDENT.

List of assessors and collectors in the southern States who have not taken the oath of office without qualification.

James H. Norwood, assessor first district South Carolina.
Charles J. Elford, assessor third district South Carolina.
Alexander M. McDowell, assessor first district, Alabama.
William H. Vasser, assessor third district Mississippi.
Benjamin F. McDonough, assessor first district Texas.
Montgomery Moses, collector first district South Carolina.
James G. Gibbes, collector third district South Carolina.
Robert B. Kingsbury, collector second district Texas.
John B. Black, Andrew G. Boskin, Bolivar J. Hayes, Godfrey Leaphart, Richard C. Griffin, William W. Adams, George Allen, John H. Marshall, (no oath,) John S. Hair, Richard W. Gaillard, Robert Hawthorne, Thomas M. Graham, William Butler, James H. Shumate, Homer L. McGowan, Thomas S. Crayton, William E. Walters, W. E. Holcomb, B. F. Morgan, James E. Haygood, William Goldsmith, Henry M. Smith, Joseph M. Elford, John C. P. Jeter, H. F. Adicks, Walter B. Mitts, assistant assessors third district South Carolina.

Ishmael S. Harwell, Sampson S. Lanier, Lemuel A. Collier, Elias M. Kiels, Charles W. Braswell, John W. Leslie, Thomas E. Randolph, Charles R. Warren, Joseph Silver, Lewis J. Laird, Edward Ward, assistant assessors first district of Alabama

Thomas W. King, George N. Forbes, assistant assessors second district Georgia.

There are undoubtedly others (assistant asssessors) whose oaths have not yet been received.

E. A. ROLLINS.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of Commissioner of Customs, March 19, 1866.

SIR: In compliance with your request to furnish you with the names of such customs officers as have taken the oath prescribed by act of July 2, 1862, in a modified form, I have the honor to state that the following are the only persons falling within that category, to wit:

James M. Matthews, collector, Rappahannock, Virginia.
William S. Croft, collector, Georgetown, South Carolina.
Gordon Forbes, surveyor, Yeocomico, Virginia.
William Leitch, surveyor, Charleston, South Carolina.
F. M. Robertson, special examiner of drugs, Charleston, South Carolina.
Edgar M. Lazarus, appraiser. Charleston, South Carolina.
J. F. Walker, appraiser, Charleston, South Carolina.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

N. SARGENT, Commissioner.

Hon. H. MCCULLOCH, Secretary of the Treasury.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
Washington, March 17, 1866.

SIR: As a means of restoring the business interests in the southern States, and of aiding in the re-establishment of their constitutional relations with the general government, it was deemed important by yourself and Cabinet that the mails should be introduced and post offices reopened in those States as rapidly as practicable; to which end the energies of this department were promptly and have been continuously directed. I regret to have to inform you that my expectations have not been fully realized. Various causes have doubtless contributed to the failure in accomplishing all that was hoped for, but that resulting from the oath prescribed by acts of July 2, 1862, and March 3, 1863, has not been the least, while it has been the one to which my attention has been most frequently called. This, as I am inclined to believe, has not been owing exclusively to there not being loyal persons who could take the oath, but to the limited compensation in most of the offices, offering insufficient inducements to persons to act as postmasters, and also to the unwillingness of many who might otherwise act to do so in consequence of the compromise of their social position, which they fear would result from taking the oath, where the great majority of their neighbors consist of those who had in some form aided the rebellion. To obviate these difficulties, in part, resort has been had to the appointment of women as postmistresses, which has proved to be of doubtful utility to the service, and necessity has also compelled the appointment of very many ignorant persons, incompetent to discharge the duties of their offices.

As a remedy for the future, I would venture to suggest a modification of the oath by inserting the word "voluntarily" immediately preceding the word "sought," so that the clause would read, "That I have neither voluntarily sought, nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States." This would enlarge the class of persons who could qualify as postmasters and mail contractors, and be in harmony, as it seems to me, with the general provisions and purposes of the oath, and thus facilitate the speedy re-establishment of the postal service, to the common benefit of all sections of the country; for it must be borne in mind that while the people of the southern States are more directly interested in the restoration of this service, the citizens of all the other States are also largely interested.

It may not be uninteresting to you to know that of the 2,258 mail routes in operation in the disloyal States at the breaking out of the rebellion, the service of 757 only has been restored; and that of 8,992 post offices in those States only 2,042 appointments of postmasters have been made, of whom 1,177 only have qualified for office, 757 of them being males, and 420 females. Of the 865 who have not qualified, it is believed that quite all of them have not done so because of the oath.

I should add, in justice to the department, in view of the inefficient service, as shown by the foregoing facts, that no propositions for transportation of the mails for a fair consideration have been declined, while postmasters have been uniformly and promptly appointed upon reliable recommendations.

I need not enlarge upon the evils resulting from so partial a restoration of the postal service in the southern States, nor upon the benefits to the government and to the people of all sections of the country that would result from a more general and efficient restoration of that service.

I respectfully submit, whether it will not be proper for you to invite the attention of Congress to the subject.

Very respectfully, yours, &c.,

W. DENNISON

The PRESIDENT.

[No 10.]

PAPERS ACCOMPANYING THE REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE—NORTH CAROLINA.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, May 29, 1865.

SIR: I enclose a copy of the President's proclamation of this date appointing you provisional Governor of the State of North Carolina. The reasons for the appointment are fully set forth in the preamble of the instrument. You will hold the office during the pleasure of the President. Your compensation will be at the rate of three thousand dollars a year from this date. For this you may draw monthly or quarterly, sending your drafts to this department.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

WILLIAM W. HOLDEN, Esq.

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas the fourth section of the fourth article of the Constitution of the United States declares that the United States shall guarantee to every State in the Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion and domestic violence; and whereas the President of the United States is, by the Constitution, made commander-in-chief of the army and navy, as well as chief civil executive officer of the United States, and is bound by solemn oath faithfully to execute the office of President of the United States, and to take care that the laws be faithfully executed; and whereas the rebellion, which has been waged by a portion of the people of the United States against the properly constituted authorities of the government thereof, in the most violent and revolting form, but whose organized and armed forces have now been almost entirely overcome, has, in its revolutionary progress, deprived the people of the State of North Carolina of all civil government; and whereas it becomes necessary and proper to carry out and enforce the obligations of the United States to the people of North Carolina, in securing them in the enjoyment of a republican form of government:

Now, therefore, in obedience to the high and solemn duties imposed upon me by the Constitution of the United States, and for the purpose of enabling the loyal people of said State to organize a State government, whereby justice may be established, domestic tranquillity insured, and loyal citizens protected in all their rights of life, liberty, and property, I Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, and commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, do hereby appoint William W. Holden provisional Governor of the State of North Carolina, whose duty it shall be, at the earliest practicable period, to prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary and proper for convening a convention, composed of delegates to be chosen by that portion of the people of said State who are loyal to the United States, and no others, for the purpose of altering or amending the constitution thereof; and with authority to exercise, within the limits of said State, all the powers necessary and proper to enable such loyal people of the State of North Carolina to restore said State to its constitutional relations to the federal government, and to present such a republican form of State government as will entitle the State to the guarantee of the United States therefor, and its people to protection by the United States against invasion, insurrection, and domestic violence; provided, that in any election that may be hereafter held for choosing delegates to any State convention as aforesaid, no person shall be qualified as an elector, or shall be eligible as a member of such convention, unless he shall have previously taken and subscribed the oath of amnesty, as set forth in the President's proclamation of May 29, A. D. 1865, and is a voter qualified as prescribed by the constitution and laws of the State of North Carolina in force immediately before the 20th day of May, A. D. 1861, the date of the so-called ordinance of secession; and the said convention, when convened, or the legislature that may be thereafter assembled, will prescribe the qualification of electors, and the eligibility of persons to hold office under the constitution and laws of the State, a power the people of the several States composing the federal Union have rightfully exercised from the origin of the government to the present time.

And I do hereby direct—

First. That the military commander of the department, and all officers and persons in the military and naval service, aid and assist the said provisional Governor in carrying into effect this proclamation, and they are enjoined to abstain from, in any way, hindering, impeding, or discouraging the loyal people from the organization of a State government as herein authorized.

Second. That the Secretary of State proceed to put in force all laws of the United States, the administration whereof belongs to the State Department, applicable to the geographical limits aforesaid.

Third. That the Secretary of the Treasury proceed to nominate for appointment assessors of taxes and collectors of customs and internal revenue, and such other officers of the Treasury Department as are authorized by law, and put in execution the revenue laws of the United States within the geographical limits aforesaid. In making appointments the preference shall be given to qualified loyal persons residing within the districts where their respective duties are to be performed. But if suitable residents of the districts shall not be found, then persons residing in other States or districts shall be appointed.

Fourth. That the Postmaster General proceed to establish post offices and post routes, and put into execution the postal laws of the United States within the said State, giving to loyal residents the preference of appointment; but if suitable residents are not found, then to appoint agents, &c., from other States.

Fifth. That the district judge for the judicial district in which North Carolina is included proceed to hold courts within said State, in accordance with the provisions of the act of Congress. The Attorney General will instruct the proper officers to libel and bring to judgment, confiscation, and sale property subject to confiscation, and enforce the administration of justice within said State in all matters within the cognizance and jurisdiction of the federal courts.

Sixth. That the Secretary of the Navy take possession of all public property belonging to the Navy Department within said geographical limits, and put in operation all acts of Congress in relation to naval affairs having application to the said State.

Seventh. That the Secretary of the Interior put in force the laws relating to the Interior Department applicable to the geographical limits aforesaid.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this twenty-ninth day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and of the independence of the United States the eighty-ninth.

[SEAL.]

ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President:

WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

Like proclamations, with only the necessary changes of names and dates, were subsequently issued as follows:

On the 13th of June, 1865, one appointing William L. Sharkey provisional Governor of the State of Mississippi.

On the 17th of June, 1865, one appointing James Johnson provisional Governor of the State of Georgia.

On the 17th of June, 1865, one appointing Alexander J. Hamilton provisional Governor of the State of Texas.

On the 21st of June, 1865, one appointing Lewis E. Parsons provisional Governor of the State of Alabama.

On the 30th of June, 1865, one appointing Benjamin F. Perry provisional Governor of the State of South Carolina.

On the 13th of July, 1865, one appointing William Marvin provisional Governor of the State of Florida.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE.
Washington, July 8, 1865.

SIR: Your letter to the President of the 26th ultimo was delivered by Mr. Worth. The President is gratified with the opinion expressed favorable to the prospect of State organization in North Carolina. Your remarks in regard to collisions between colored troops and white persons have been referred to the War Department. Mr. Worth will make an estimate of the expenses which may attend the special trust conferred upon you—namely, the organization of the State of North Carolina. The amount thus reasonably estimated will be paid at the War Department as an expense incident to the suppression of the rebellion. The estimate, however, will carefully exclude all expenses which may arise from the administration of the civil government of the State, including the charities thereof. It is understood here that, besides cotton which has been taken by the Secretary of the Treasury under act of Congress, there were quantities of resin and other articles, as well as funds, lying about in different places in the State, and elsewhere, not reduced into possession by United States officers as insurgent property. The President is of opinion that you can appropriate these for the inevitable and indispensable expenses of the civil government of the State during the continuance of the provisional government. He is also of the opinion that you can levy taxes or assessments for these inevitable and indispensable expenses, and enforce their collection. Should you adopt this course, and find yourself impeded or embarrassed in the execution of the measure, you will then report to this department, and orders will be given by the War Department to the military authorities to take charge of the matter.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor of North Carolina, Raleigh.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 11, 1865.

The President directs me to say that he expects you to continue in the exercise of the functions of provisional Governor of North Carolina until you shall have been relieved by directions from him.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor of North Carolina, Raleigh.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 21, 1865.

SIR: The President sincerely trusts that North Carolina will, by her legislature, promptly accept the Congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery.

He relies upon you to exercise all your functions hereafter with the same wisdom and in the same spirit of loyalty and devotion to the Union that have marked your administration hitherto.

The President desires you to feel entirely assured that your efforts to sustain the administration of the government and give effect to its policy are fully appreciated, and that they will in no case be forgotten.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor of North Carolina, Raleigh.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 4, 1865.

SIR: The time has arrived when, in the judgment of the President of the United States, the care and conduct of the proper affairs of the State of North Carolina may be remitted to the constitutional authorities chosen by the people thereof, without danger to the peace and safety of the United States. By direction of the President, therefore, you are relieved from the trust which was heretofore reposed in you as provisional Governor of the State of North Carolina. Whenever the Governor elect shall have accepted and become qualified to discharge the duties of the executive office, you will transfer the papers and property of the State now in your custody to his excellency Governor Worth.

It gives me especial pleasure to convey to you the President's acknowledgment of the fidelity, loyalty, and discretion which have marked your administration.

You will please give me a reply, specifying the day on which this communication is received.

I have the honor to be your excellency's most obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor of the State of North Carolina.

[A letter of similar purport has been addressed to each of the provisional Governors of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, December 4, 1865.

SIR: By direction of the President I have the honor herewith to transmit to you a copy of a communication which has been addressed to his excellency W. W. Holden, late provisional Governor of North Carolina, whereby he has been relieved of the trust heretofore reposed in him, and directed to deliver into your excellency's possession the papers and property relating to that trust.

I have the honor to tender you the co-operation of the government of the United States, wherever it may be found necessary, in effecting the early restoration and the permanent prosperity and welfare of the State over which you have been called to preside.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your most obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency JONATHAN WORTH,
Governor of the State of North Carolina.

[A letter of similar purport has been addressed to each of the Governors of South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, and Florida.]

MISSISSIPPI.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 13, 1865.

SIR: The President directs me to inform you that he has appointed you provisional Governor of the State of Mississippi. A copy of his proclamation, of this date, for the reorganization of the government of that State, is herewith communicated, and also an official oath, which you will cause to be administered to you by a magistrate competent for that purpose.

Your compensation will be at the rate of three thousand dollars a year, from this date. You may draw for it as it may become due, monthly or quarterly, directing your draft to this department.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

W. L. SHARKEY, Esq., Washington, D. C.

[Same, mutatis mutandis, to James Johnson, of Georgia; Andrew J. Hamilton, of Texas, and Benjamin F. Perry, of South Carolina.]

[For accompanying proclamation to foregoing letter see President's proclamation appointing William W. Holden provisional Governor of North Carolina.]

[Telegram.]

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI, July 21, 1865.

Hon. W. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State:

A negro was murdered by a white man, neither of them belonging to or connected with the army. The crime is punishable under our law with death, as any other murder. The accused is in military custody in Vicksburg. General Slocum refuses to obey a writ of habeas corpus issued by a judge competent to issue, but claims the right to try him by military authority. If this be triable by military authority, why not all other crimes, and what is the use of civil government? The record will be sent on.

W. L. SHARKEY,
Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, July 24, 1865.

W. L. SHARKEY, Provisional Governor, Mississippi, Jackson:

Your telegram of the 21st has been received. The President sees no reason to interfere with General Slocum's proceedings. The government of the State will be provisional only, until the civil authorities shall be restored, with the approval of Congress. Meanwhile military authority cannot be withdrawn.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, August 28, 1865.

SIR: I have submitted to the President the letters and papers which your excellency transmitted to me on the 12th of August last, and which show that a white man by the name of Jackson killed a negro man in Warren county, Mississippi, about fifty miles above Vicksburg. The military authorities at Vicksburg sent up a force, had Jackson arrested, brought to Vicksburg, and imprisoned. After advising with Governor Sharkey, Judge Merwin issued a writ of habeas corpus for Jackson, and General Slocum, the commander of the department, refused obedience to the writ. Merwin held his office as judge by the appointment of Governor Sharkey.

Upon due consideration of the state of affairs in Mississippi, as well as in several of the other States which have been afflicted by the evils of insurrection, the President is of the opinion that it is inexpedient to rescind the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in the case which, in the papers named, you have submitted to him.

Anarchy must in any case be prevented, as the process of reorganization, though seemingly begun very well, nevertheless is yet only begun.

I have the honor to be your excellency's obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency WILLIAM H. SHARKEY, Provisional Governor of Mississippi.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Jackson, Mississippi, October 19, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that Benjamin G. Humphreys, who was elected to the office of Governor of the State at the late election, has been duly installed into office, and that all the other State officers have been duly qualified. The civil constitutional government of the State is now complete, and the legislature is in session.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. L. SHARKEY,
Late Provisional Governor.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 3, 1866.

His Excellency WILLIAM L. SHARKEY, Provisional Governor of Mississippi, Jackson:

Your letter of the 19th ultimo has been received. It is the expectation of the President that you will continue your functions as provisional Governor until further notice from this department.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

GEORGIA.

[For letter of notification from Secretary of State to James Johnson, see that to William L. Sharkey; and for the accompanying proclamation, see proclamation of May 29 appointing William W. Holden provisional Governor of North Carolina.]

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 17, 1865.

J. JOHNSON, Provisional Governor of Georgia, Milledgeville:

Your letter of the 7th received. Send hither list of members elected to the convention in order that pardons may be issued. The amnesty oath may be taken by the members.

W. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary of State.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 17, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's letter of the 7th instant, in which you express a desire to be informed concerning the proceedings to be adopted with reference to those persons who have been elected to the convention, and who may be classed among those who are required to apply for pardon by the President's proclamation, and the form of oath to be administered to each member of the convention which is to assemble. In reply, I have, by direction of the President, to request you to forward to this department a list of the members of the convention who are liable in the manner indicated, in order that they may be pardoned, and to inform you that the amnesty oath is preferred for the purpose you mention.

I am your excellency's very obedient servant,

W. HUNTER, Acting Secretary.

His Excellency JAMES JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of the State of Georgia, Milledgeville.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, October 25, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your excellency's letter on the 19th instant, naming those members of the convention who are excluded from amnesty by the President's proclamation. Thanking you for your prompt compliance with my request, I have to inform you, in reply, that your communication has been submitted to the Attorney General.

I have the honor to be your excellency's obedient servant,

W. HUNTER, Acting Secretary.

His Excellency JAMES JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of the State of Georgia, Milledgeville.

[Telegram.]

MILLEDGEVILLE, October 27, 1865.

Hon. W. H. SEWARD:

We are pressed on the war debt. What should the convention do?

J. JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of Georgia.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, October 28, 1865.

His Excellency JAMES JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of Georgia, Milledgeville:

Your several telegrams have been received. The President of the United States cannot recognize the people of any State as having resumed the relations of loyalty to the Union that admits as legal, obligations contracted or debts created in their name to promote the war of the rebellion.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

ALABAMA.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 21, 1865.

SIR: Herewith you will receive a copy of the President's proclamation of this date for the reorganization of the State of Alabama. Having been appointed provisional Governor for that purpose, a form of oath is also enclosed, which you will cause to be administered to you by a competent magistrate. You will proceed to Alabama, without unnecessary delay, and adopt such measures as to you may seem advisable for accomplishing the objects of your appointment. You will be allowed a compensation at the rate of three thousand dollars a year, for which you may draw monthly or quarterly as it may become due, sending your drafts to this department.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

LEWIS E. PARSONS, Esq.,
Appointed Provisional Governor of Alabama.

[For accompanying proclamation see proclamation of May 29 appointing William W. Holden provisional Governor of North Carolina.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 4, 1865.

SIR: Your note of the third instant has been received and submitted to the President. He directs me to approve of the prudence and loyal spirit by which your communication is distinguished. For the present he deems it sufficient to say that the action of this government in regard to the questions which you have referred to him must, as far as possible, be reserved for the exercise of discretion as events shall occur. You will continue to exercise the functions heretofore confided to you as provisional Governor of Alabama until you shall be relieved by express direction of the President. The time when it shall be deemed suitable to relinquish any of those powers to authorities which may be constituted within the State cannot now be indicated.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency LEWIS E. PARSONS,
Provisional Governor of the State of Alabama, Montgomery.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

[For letter of notification from Secretary of State to Benjamin F. Perry see that to William L. Sharkey, and for the accompanying proclamation see proclamation of May 29 appointing William W. Holden provisional Governor of North Carolina.]

WILLARD'S HOTEL, July 21, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I desire to know what provision has been made for defraying the expenses of the provisional government in South Carolina; likewise whether I am allowed a private secretary and his compensation; also as to stationery, blanks, &c.

In your communication to me enclosing my commission you state that I am to receive a salary of $3,000, and may draw for the same on your department monthly or quarterly. As we have no money in South Carolina at this time, it would be a very great accommodation to me to allow me to draw a quarter's salary at this time. If this can be done, and you will send me a draft for the same, you will very much oblige me.

I would like to have as full instructions from you as to my duties as you can give. I have already issued my proclamation ordering an election for members of the convention, first Monday in September, and I can assure you that South Carolina will cheerfully take her position in the Union again as soon as Congress meets; she will have her senators and representatives there, with her new constitution abolishing slavery, giving the election of governor and presidential electors to the people, and abolishing the odious parish representation which has been the cause of all our troubles.

I am, with great respect and esteem, yours truly, &c.,

B. F. PERRY.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 22, 1865.

SIR: I have received your letter of yesterday, and trust that the favorable anticipations which it expresses in regard to the reorganization of the State of South Carolina will be realized.

The inevitable and indispensable charges attending the measure, including your salary as provisional Governor, will be paid by the War Department as an expense incident to the suppression of the rebellion. You will, consequently, frame and submit to that department an estimate of those expenses, in order that the necessary arrangements for defraying them may be made.

I am, sir, your very obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor of South Carolina, now in Washington.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 29, 1865.

SIR: I have had the honor to receive, and I have submitted to the President, your letter of August 28, in which you state—

"I desire to be instructed as to my duty after the State convention of South Carolina shall have formed a State constitution abolishing slavery and popularizing the organic laws of the State. It is probable that the convention will provide for the election of members of the legislature and the election of Governor by the people on the second Monday in October;"

And in which you solicit answers to the questions—

"When these elections have taken place, is it my duty to convene this new legislature as provisional Governor, or are my functions at an end when the new State government is organized? How long shall I continue to act as provisional Governor? Do my functions continue till the State is admitted back into the Union?"

In reply, I have the honor to inform you that the President does not think it now necessary to anticipate events. He will expect you to report proceedings and events as they occur in South Carolina, carefully and freely, for the information of this government. In any case, you will continue to exercise the functions heretofore vested in you by the President until you shall be relieved from that duty by his express orders to that effect.

Congratulating you upon the favorable aspect of events in your State, I have the honor to be your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor of South Carolina, Columbia.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 6, 1865.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY, Provisional Governor of South Carolina:

Your despatch to the President of November 4 has been received. He is not entirely satisfied with the explanations it contains. He deems necessary the passage of adequate ordinances declaring that all insurrectionary proceedings in the State were unlawful and void ab initio. Neither the Constitution nor laws direct official information to the State of amendments to the Constitution submitted by Congress. Notices of the amendment by Congress abolishing slavery were nevertheless given by the Secretary of State at the time to the States which were then in communication with this government. Formal notice will immediately be given to those States which were then in insurrection.

The objection which you mention to the last clause of the constitutional amendment is regarded as querulous and unreasonable, because that clause is really restraining in its effect, instead of enlarging the powers of Congress. The President considers the acceptance of the amendment by South Carolina as indispensable to a restoration of her relations with the other States of the Union.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 6, 1865.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY, Columbia, South Carolina:

Your telegram of yesterday is very gratifying to the President. I now find that the constitutional amendment was posted, immediately after its passage, to the Governors of all the States, without exception. The accidents of war, no doubt, prevented it from reaching the acting Governor of South Carolina, which was in rebellion.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 9, 1865.

Governor PERRY, Provisional Governor of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.:

The President directs me to write to you that an early adoption of the congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery by the South Carolina legislature, is deemed peculiarly important, and especially desirable with reference to the general situation of the Union.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

[Telegram.]

WASHINGTON, November 10, 1865.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY, Provisional Governor of South Carolina:

Your letter of the 4th instant is just now received. While much has been done in South Carolina that is conducive to peace and restoration, the President still thinks that it is impossible to anticipate events. He expects, therefore, that you will continue to exercise the duties heretofore devolved upon you as provisional Governor of South Carolina until you shall be relieved by his order. He observes with regret that neither the convention nor the State legislature has pronounced debts and obligations contracted in the name of the State for unconstitutional and even rebellious purposes to be void. He equally regrets that the State seems to decline the congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery. I telegraphed to you yesterday on the latter point, as follows: "The President directs me to write to you that an early adoption of the congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery by the South Carolina legislature is deemed peculiarly important, and especially desirable with reference to the general situation of the Union."

I have now only to say that the President's opinions before expressed remain unchanged.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

GREENVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA,
November 17, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I have the honor of enclosing to you the adoption of the congressional amendment of the federal Constitution, abolishing slavery, by the legislature of South Carolina.

I am, with great respect, &c.,

B. F. PERRY.

Hon. W. H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

Whereas the Congress of the United States, by joint resolution approved on the first day of February, anno Domini 1865, proposed an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which amendment is in the following words, to wit:

ARTICLE XIII.—Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the limits of the United States or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

SECTION 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation:

1. Resolved therefore by the senate and house of representatives of the general assembly of the State of South Carolina in general assembly met, and by the authority of the same, That the aforesaid proposed amendment of the Constitution of the United States be, and the same is hereby, accepted, and adopted and ratified by this State.

2. Resolved, That a certified copy of the foregoing preamble and resolution be forwarded by his excellency the provisional Governor to the President of the United States, and also to the Secretary of State of the United States.

3. Resolved, That any attempt by Congress towards legislating upon the political status of former slaves, or their civil relations, would be contrary to the Constitution of the United States as it now is, or as it would be altered by the proposed amendment, in conflict with the policy of the President, declared in his amnesty proclamation, and with the restoration of that harmony upon which depends the vital interests of the American Union.

IN THE SENATE,
Columbia, South Carolina, November 13, 1865.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a correct copy of resolutions this day passed by both houses of the general assembly.

WM. E. MARTIN,
Clerk of the Senate.

The words "limits of the" are erroneously inserted in the fifth line of the Article XIII as copied in the above.

WM. E. MARTIN,
Clerk of the Senate.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 20, 1865.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor of South Carolina, Greenville, South Carolina:

Your despatch of this date was received at half-past 10 o'clock this morning. This freedom of loyal intercourse between South Carolina and her sister States is manifestly much better and wiser than separation. The President and the whole country are gratified that South Carolina has accepted the congressional amendment to the Constitution abolishing slavery. Upon reflection, South Carolina herself would not care to come again into the councils of the Union incumbered and clogged with debts and obligations which had been assumed in her name in a vain attempt to subvert it. The President trusts that she will lose no time in making an effective organic declaration disavowing all debts and obligations created or assumed in her name or behalf in aid of the rebellion. The President waits further events in South Carolina with deep interest.

You will remain in the exercise of your functions of provisional Governor until relieved by his express direction.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

GREENVILLE, SOUTH CAROLINA,
November 20, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I have the gratification of informing you that the legislature of South Carolina adopted the congressional amendment of the federal Constitution, abolishing slavery, by a very large vote last Monday. I had left Columbia, or I would have informed you of it sooner. I hope this will open the doors of Congress to our members.

B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor.

Hon. W. H. SEWARD.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 27, 1865.

SIR: Your letter of the 17th instant, enclosing a certified copy of the resolutions of the general assembly of the State of South Carolina, adopted on the 13th instant, ratifying the amendment proposed by Congress in February last to the Constitution of the United States, prohibiting slavery, &c., has been received, and, with its enclosure, placed on file in this department.

I am your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

BENJAMIN F. PERRY, Esq.,
Provisional Governor of South Carolina, Greenville, South Carolina.

[Telegram.]

COLUMBIA, November 27, 1865.

Hon. W. H. SEWARD:

Your telegram of the 20th instant was not received in due time, owing to my absence from Columbia. The convention having been dissolved, it is impracticable to enact any organic law in regard to the war debt. That debt is very small, as the expenditures of South Carolina were reimbursed by the confederate government. The debt is so mixed up with the ordinary expenses of the State that it cannot be separated. In South Carolina all were guilty of aiding the rebellion, and no one can complain of being taxed to pay the trifling debt incurred by his own account in perfect good faith. The convention did all that the President advised to be done, and I thought it wrong to keep a revolutionary body in existence, and advised their immediate dissolution, which was done. There is now no power in the legislature to repudiate the debt, if it were possible to separate it from the other debts of the State. Even then it would fall on widows and orphans whose estates were invested in it for safety.

B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 30, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the 27th instant informing me that, as the convention had been dissolved, it was impossible to adopt the President's suggestion to repudiate the insurgent debt, and to inform you that while the objections which you urge to the adoption of that proceeding are of a serious nature, the President cannot refrain from awaiting with interest an official expression upon that subject from the legislature.

I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency B. F. PERRY,
Provisional Governor of the State of South Carolina, Columbia.

FLORIDA.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, July 14, 1865.

SIR: I am directed by the President to inform you that on yesterday he appointed you provisional Governor of the State of Florida. A copy of his proclamation for the organization of that State is herewith enclosed, which will serve to guide you in the discharge of your duties. You will also herewith receive a form of an official oath, which you will cause to be administered to you, and will then return the same for file in this department.

Your compensation will be at the rate of three thousand dollars a year, which you can receive monthly or quarterly, as you may prefer, on directing your drafts to this department.

I am, sir, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

WILLIAM MARVIN, Esq., Washington.

OFFICE OF THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNOR,
Tallahassee, Fla., August 29, 1865.

SIR: I arrived in Jacksonville on the 2d of August, made a speech to the people on the 3d, and issued from the press on the same day a printed address, which I have heretofore sent you. I left Jacksonville on the 7th, on my way to Tallahassee. The people, being advertised of my route, met me at Lake City and at Madison, at both of which places I made a speech. I was received at Tallahassee and addressed by a committee of the citizens in a formal manner. I have seen and conversed with people from all parts of the State. The result of my observations is that the people have had quite enough of war: that they are quite willing to accept the new order of things as settled. I think they are prepared to incorporate into their State constitution all necessary provisions to secure the freedom of all men alike, without distinction of color, and they regard the whole doctrine of secession as an exploded political heresy. They will be disposed to elect loyal men to Congress. In short, I am at present hopeful as to the future political status of the State. My apprehensions for the future are founded on the social condition of the people—of two races nearly equal in numbers being able to live in peace and harmony together.

Both races are at present under the discipline of military rule—living in peace and tolerable harmony. The negroes generally remain on the plantations under contracts for labor and wages or a part of the crop.

Much credit is due to Brigadier General Vogdes, who was the first to take military occupation of the country, for the good sense and sound principles he displayed in his general orders regulating the police and labor of the country.

Major General Foster co-operates with me cheerfully in everything I desire.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM MARVIN,
Provisional Governor.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

PROCLAMATION.

* * * * * * * *

Tenth. Upon the establishment of a republican form of State government, under a constitution which guarantees and secures liberty to all the inhabitants alike, without distinction of color, there will no longer exist any impediment in the way of restoring the State to its proper constitutional relations to the government of the United States, whereby its people will be entitled to protection by the United States against invasion, insurrection, and domestic violence.

Given at Tallahassee, Florida, this 23d day of August, 1865.

WILLIAM MARVIN,
Provisional Governor.

SAMUEL J. DOUGLAS, Private Secretary.

AUGUST 26, 1865

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 12, 1865.

SIR: Your excellency's letter of the 29th ultimo, with the accompanying proclamation, has been received and submitted to the President. The steps to which it refers, towards reorganizing the government of Florida, seem to be in the main judicious, and good results from them may be hoped for. The presumption to which the proclamation refers, however, in favor of insurgents who may wish to vote, and who may have applied for, but not received, their pardons, is not entirely approved. All applications for pardons will be duly considered, and will be disposed of as soon as may be practicable. It must, however, be distinctly understood that the restoration to which your proclamation refers will be subject to the decision of Congress.

I have the honor to be your excellency's obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency WILLIAM MARVIN,
Provisional Governor of the State of Florida, Tallahassee.

[Telegram.]

TALLAHASSEE, FLORIDA, November 18, 1865.

Hon. WILLIAM H. SEWARD, Secretary of State:

Since the legislatures of Alabama, Georgia, and other southern States meet before the Florida legislature does, and if they should ratify the proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States, then the Florida legislature will do the same; otherwise there will be difficulty on the subject.

WM. MARVIN,
Provisional Governor of Florida.

[Telegram.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 20, 1865.

His Excellency W. MARVIN,
Provisional Governor of Florida, Tallahassee:

I have received and laid before the President your despatch of the 18th instant. While you inform us of several good things done in Florida, you at the same time inform us that if Alabama, Georgia, and other southern States, whose legislatures are to meet before the Florida legislature, accept the congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery, in that case the Florida legislature will accept it; but otherwise there will be difficulty on the subject.

The President hopes you are mistaken in regard to this evidence of a disposition on the part of Florida to make her resumption of loyal relations to the Union depend upon a condition which seems to him to be improper and inadmissible. He trusts that she will promptly accept the constitutional amendment.

You will continue to exercise the functions of Governor in the State of Florida, heretofore confided to you, until relieved by the express direction of the President.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

NORTH CAROLINA.

[Telegram.—Received 1.30 p. m., September 21.]

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, September 21, 1865.

To the PRESIDENT:

SIR: I have decided that a person who belongs to the excluded classes cannot vote; so they cannot sit in convention unless they exhibit their pardons. Ex-Governor Graham, of Orange, in a letter published in the newspapers, holds that unpardoned persons can sit in the convention. He declines being a candidate, but urges this view. Am I right or wrong? The letter to ex-Governor Graham, to which he replies, taking this view, does not show a good spirit.

The election here is progressing quietly. A large vote will be polled in the State. I will telegraph you as the returns come in.

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C. September 21, 1865.

Governor W. W. HOLDEN, Raleigh, North Carolina:

Your decision is correct—that under the proclamation they cannot vote for members, or sit in convention as members, without first being pardoned or taking the amnesty oath. If the party comes within any one of the exceptions, he must obtain a pardon before voting or sitting as a member. All those who are aspirants to seats in the convention, and are elected, will be pardoned upon your recommendation and a submission of their names by telegraph.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President United States.

[Telegram.]

RALEIGH, North Carolina, September 23, 1865

His Excellency the PRESIDENT:

One-half of the State has been heard from; result very gratifying. Such men as Pearsons, Reade, Moore, Warren, Donnell, Dockey, Caldwell, Dick, Brown, Phillips, Poole, Benum, Little, Boyden, Thompson, Buxton, Lash, Starbuck, Gilliam, Grisson, Wright, Smith of Johnson, Logan, and Morris, are elected; also Satterthwaite. Please have pardons forwarded for the following members elect:

John Pool McGuhee, Daniel L. Russel, sr., M. T. Manly, A. B. Baines, D. G. McRae, (not D. D. K.,) John B. O'Dunn, C. Perkins, Alfred Dockerey, C. Harris, C L. Cowle—all sound, and all but one or two ultra Union men. I look for a short and harmonious session of the convention. The ultra Union or strictest sect sentiment will control in everything.

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.]

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, September 25, 1865.

Hon. ANDREW JOHNSON:

Please include in the list of pardons of members elect to the convention A. A. McKay, of Sampson. His application filed marked suspended, but he is now thoroughly sound. I am sorry to state that Judge K. M. Pearson has been defeated. The returns generally are very satisfactory. Quite a large vote has been polled. You would greatly oblige me by having all the pardons for this State made out and forwarded.

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.—Received 10 p. m.]

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, September 29, 1865.

The PRESIDENT of the United States:

SIR: I have received the pardons of all delegates elected to the convention except the following: M. E. Manly, of Craven county; D. G. McRea, of Cumberland county; A. B. Barnes, of Nash county; A. A. McKay, of Sampson county.

Please telegraph at once that these persons are pardoned, so that I can admit them to their seats on the assembling of the convention.

Very respectfully,

W. W. HOLDEN,
Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.—Received 12.40 p. m.]

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, September 30, 1865.

The PRESIDENT of the United States:

SIR: I have now received pardons for all the members elected to the convention except M. E. Manly, of Craven county. Please telegraph me that he has been pardoned, so that he can take his seat in the convention.

Very respectfully,

W. W. HOLDEN.

MISSISSIPPI.

[Telegram.—Sent in cipher.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., August 15, 1865.

Governor W. L. SHARKEY, Jackson, Mississippi:

I am gratified to see that you have organized your convention without difficulty. I hope that without delay your convention will amend your State constitution, abolishing slavery and denying to all future legislatures the power to legislate that there is property in man; also that they will adopt the amendment to the Constitution of the United States abolishing slavery. If you could extend the elective franchise to all persons of color who can read the Constitution of the United States in English and write their names, and to all persons of color who own real estate valued at not less than two hundred and fifty dollars, and pay taxes thereon, you would completely disarm the adversary and set an example the other States will follow. This you can do with perfect safety, and you thus place the southern States, in reference to free persons of color, upon the same basis with the free States. I hope and trust your convention will do this, and, as a consequence, the radicals, who are wild upon negro franchise, will be completely foiled in their attempt to keep the southern States from renewing their relations to the Union by not accepting their senators and representatives.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, D. C., August 21, 1865.

Governor W. L. SHARKEY, Jackson, Mississippi:

Your despatch* received. I am much gratified to hear of your proceedings being so favorable. If you need military force to preserve order and enforce the law, you will call upon the commandant of the department, General Slocum, who will furnish whatever force is needed.

I would not organize the militia until further advances are made in the restoration of State authority. The military authority and the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus will be withdrawn at the earliest moment it is deemed safe to do so. Your convention can adopt the amendment to the Constitution of the United States, or recommend its adoption by the legislature. You no doubt see the turn that is being given to the attempts in the south to restore State governments by the extreme men in the north; hence the importance of being prompt and circumspect in all that is being done.

The proceedings in Mississippi will exert a powerful influence on the other States which are to act afterwards.

God grant you a complete success, and that your doings will set an example that will be followed by all the other States.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

GEORGIA.

[Telegram.—Received 9 a. m., 28th.]

MILLEDGEVILLE, GA., October 27, 1865.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States:

We need some aid to repeal the war debt. Send me word on the subject. What should the convention do?

J. JOHNSON,
Provisional Governor of Georgia.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., October 28, 1865.

JAMES JOHNSON, Provisional Governor, Milledgeville, Ga.:

Your despatch has been received. The people of Georgia should not hesitate one single moment in repudiating every single dollar of debt created for the purpose of aiding the rebellion against the government of the United States. It will not do to levy and collect taxes from a State and people that are loyal and in the Union, to pay a debt that was created to aid in an effort to take them out, and thereby subvert the Constitution of the United States. I do not believe the great mass of the people of the State of Georgia, when left uninfluenced, will ever submit to the payment of a debt which was the main cause of bringing on their past and present suffering, the result of the rebellion. Those who vested their capital in the creation of this debt must meet their fate, and take it as one of the inevitable results of the rebellion, though it may seem hard to them. It should at once be made known, at home and abroad, that no debt contracted for the purpose of dissolving the Union of the States can or ever will be paid by taxes levied on the people for such purpose.

*The despatch referred to is not found among the records of the Executive Office.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[Telegram.—Received 2.50 p. m., November 24.]

MILLEDGEVILLE, GEORGIA, November 21, 1865.

ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States:

No members of Congress elected can take the oath. Shall I issue certificates of election? The legislature will probably be to some extent impracticable and refractory. I am inclined to think a suspension of pardons might have a salutary effect. I shall be a candidate for the Senate, and of course will be defeated.

J. JOHNSON, Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.—Received 8.10 p. m.]

MILLEDGEVILLE, GEORGIA, November 24, 1865.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON, President of the United States:

Will the inauguration of the Governor elect relieve me of duty? Please give me directions.

J. JOHNSON, Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., November 26, 1865.

JAMES JOHNSON, Provisional Governor, Milledgeville, Georgia:

You will continue to act as provisional Governor of Georgia until relieved and your successor recognized by the government. At present, as provisional Governor, I would issue no certificates of election to members of Congress elect. If I understand your despatch, none of the members elect to Congress from Georgia can take the oath of office, as it now stands. Please advise me of their real status as to loyalty and qualification, in regard to disability, under the law and the Constitution. I regret to hear that you have apprehensions as to the action of your legislature, and hope that all will come out right.

You will accept the approbation of the government for the loyal and efficient manner in which you have discharged your duty as provisional Governor.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[Telegram.—Received 8 p. m.]

MILLEDGEVILLE, GEORGIA, December 10, 1865.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON:

Your message is generally well received, and I think I can safely assure you that you may rely upon the legislature and the Governor elect to co-operate with you in the policy you have adopted and recommended. I am of opinion that the situation will be still further improved by allowing the inauguration of the Governor, if it is agreeable to your views and policy. So believing, I respectfully ask that I may be relieved. This, I think, can safely be done, and such are the assurances given me by the friends of the administration.

J. JOHNSON, Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.—Sent 11.25 a. m.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 11, 1865.

JAMES JOHNSON, Provisional Governor, Milledgeville, Georgia:

The Governor elect will be inaugurated, which will not interfere with you as provisional Governor. You will receive instructions in a few days in regard to being relieved as provisional Governor.

Why can't you be elected as senator? I would issue no commissions for members of Congress; leave that for the incoming Governor.

We are under many obligations to you for the noble, efficient, and patriotic manner in which you have discharged the duties of provisional Governor, and you will be sustained by the government.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[Telegram.—Received 7.20 p. m.]

COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA, November 27, 1865.

President JOHNSON:

Will you please inform me whether the South Carolina members of Congress should be in Washington at the organization of the House. Will the Clerk of the House call their names if their credentials are presented to him? Will the test oath be required, or will it be refused by Congress? If the members are not allowed to take their seats, they do not wish to incur the trouble and expense of going on, and the mortification of being rejected. Do give your views and wishes.

B. F. PERRY, Provisional Governor.

[Telegram.]

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., November 27, 1865.

B. F. PERRY, Provisional Governor, Columbia, South Carolina:

I do not think it necessary for the members elect from South Carolina to be present at the organization of Congress. On the contrary, it will be better policy to present their certificates of election after the two houses are organized, and then it will be a simple question under the Constitution of the members taking their seats. Each house must judge for itself the election returns and qualifications of its own members. As to what the two houses will do in reference to the oath now required to be taken before the members can take their seats is unknown to me, and I do not like to predict; but, upon the whole, I am of opinion that it would be better for the question to come up and be disposed of after the two houses have been organized.

I hope that your legislature will adopt a code in reference to free persons of color that will be acceptable to the country, at the same time doing justice to the white and colored population.

ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

[No. 11.]

NEW YORK, Tuesday, December 18, 1866.

THOMAS J. BARR sworn and examined.

By Mr. BROOMALL:

Q. You are of the firm of Phelps & Barr?

A. There is no such firm existing. We were associated together in regard to the general order business; that was all.

Q. Had you any interview with Mr. Smythe himself?

A. Yes, sir; I had two interviews with him.

Q. Will you state whether you made, or he entertained, any proposition for the purchase of the general order business?

A. When we went to him we had a letter from the President to him, recommending us to have the general order business from the Battery to Fifty-ninth street, North river. He said it was given out, except a portion he had reserved for himself.

Q. Can you give us the date of this application?

A. I could not now. It was within two weeks after he was confirmed as collector, I think—the same week he came back from Washington; it was within three days after he came back.

Q. Do you know whether it was before or after his negotiation with Miller & Conger?

A. I do not know whether it was before or after, but it must have been after, for he said it was all given out.

Q. Were you offering money for the business?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything said by him about money being necessary for the purpose?

A. He would not talk much about the North river side, but he said he had been offered a certain amount of money for the East river side. He told me the amount he was offered, but I cannot remember what it was now. He said he might probably give us a portion of the East river side. We took it for granted that if we offered a little more than what he said he had been offered we could have got all the East river side.

Q. Did he tell you for what amount the North river side had been disposed of?

A. He did not; but he said, "You know, gentlemen, the North river general order business is the big plum for the collector." That was the expression used.

Q. Do you know whether that business had been sold under previous collectors?

A. I do not; only from hearsay.

Q. Do you know a female by the name of Mrs. Perry?

A. Yes; I know her to this extent, that Mr. Phelps introduced her to me as a familiar acquaintance of the President, and one who had influence with him, which she could use to induce him to give us this general order business.

Q. Did you make any arrangement with her?

A. She was to have one-third of the profits of the business if we got it.

Q. Was there a written agreement to that effect?

A. There was.

Q. You did not know her before Mr. Phelps introduced her to you?

A. No; I never saw her but three times altogether, once in Washington and twice here.

Q. What proof did she exhibit to you to satisfy you she had influence with the President?

A. I think she showed me a letter, but I am not sure whether it was then or afterwards.

Q. Did she show you at one time a letter from the President?

A. I would not like to say positively she did, but my impression is that she did. I would like to think this matter over before giving a positive answer. She showed me some letters and papers, and I think she showed me a letter from the President.

Q. Do you know where she lives?

A. I think she lives in Cincinnati.

Q. You were to give her one-third of the profits?

A. Mr. Phelps made the bargain with her in Washington. I was present after they came back, when the matter was all talked over again.

Q. She was to get you the business, and then to have one-third of the profits?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you know anything of this woman since?

A. I do not. After we had presented the recommendation which the President gave us to Mr. Smythe, and had been treated so cavalierly by him, we wrote to Mrs. Perry that if she did not get a more imperative letter from the President than the one she sent, we could not do anything with Mr. Smythe. It appears the President then said to her, when she again saw him, that he had done all he could for her. She then came on here and saw Mr. Smythe, and I think there was some arrangement made between them. She told us Smythe said she should drop the two gentlemen who were connected with her?

Q. Then the letter she exhibited to you was not that letter?

A. No.

Q. Do you recollect the contents of that letter?

A. The letter was written by Mr. Raymond, recommending Mr. Phelps for some position, and it was also signed by several other Congressmen, and the President endorsed it.

Q. Was the letter she showed you such a one as to impress you with the opinion that she had influence with the President?

A. I believed she had influence with the President, but I cannot say what made me think so; whether it was from her own conversation or from a letter she showed me I cannot say. Mr. Phelps had all the negotiation with her in this matter. Mr. Smythe told me at the first interview I had with him that he had to give away part of the North river storage business to get confirmed. His words were, he had to provide for parties in Washington in order to get confirmed.

Q. Did he name any of the parties?

A. He did.

Q. Tell us who he named.

A. He said a portion of it was to be given to Senator Doolittle's son.

Q. Did he mention any other persons?

A. No; if he did I cannot recollect them now.

Witness put in copies of the following letters, originals of which were, he thought, with Collector Smythe:

NEW YORK, January 25, 1866.

RESPECTED AND DEAR SIR: We beg leave to make application to have our warehouses designated as the general order warehouses, to receive unclaimed goods from vessels discharging at this port and lying at the wharves on the North river side of the city, from the Battery to pier No. 59, under the same rules and regulations that now exist in relation to such special warehouses.

THOMAS J. BARR.
EDWARD R. PHELPS.

His Excellency ANDREW JOHNSON,
President of the United States.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 25, 1866.

Mr. E. R. Phelps being highly recommended by the Hon. Henry J. Raymond and other representatives from the State of New York, I shall be glad if the general order warehouse business from the Battery to pier No. 59, on the North river, can, consistently with the interests of the government, be given to Messrs. Thomas J. Barr and Edward R. Phelps.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

I have already favorably endorsed the application of Edward R. Phelps and Thomas J. Barr for the general order business from the Battery to pier No. 59, on the North river, New York city. I hope they may receive the appointment from the collector of customs.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Mr. Barr being requested to give the Committee his opinion of the general order business, made the following statement:

The practice has heretofore been for the collector to assign the general order business to certain persons, allowing them to locate the warehouses for the reception of the goods at such points as they might see fit to locate them at, without regard to the interests of the public. My suggestion is, that those warehouses should be located, by authority from the government, at points on both rivers that would be most conducive to the interests of the public at large. The present warehouse for the North river goods is, I am informed, at the corner of Bank street and Eleventh avenue. Goods that are landed at the foot of Fulton street must be trucked, I think, two miles up town to this place, and when wanted by the importers, nine-tenths of whom live down town, have to be brought back the same distance; and the four or five additional cartage rates they have to pay are not the only annoyance the merchants are subjected to by this arrangement, but they also run the risk of having their goods injured by the weather during their transit. This is wrong; and if the collector fails to make such changes as are required to correct it, Congress should take the matter into its own hands. It is not the charges for warehousing alone that cause this general dissatisfaction, but it is the manner in which the business is conducted. For instance, there is some difficulty in regard to the marks on some packages of goods, and, instead of having the warehouse convenient to the merchant, he is obliged to go miles out of his way to have them corrected, when it could be done within a half a mile of his store if the warehouse was situated where it ought to be.

A great many complaints are made about the rates charged under general order stores, but in many instances they are less than merchants contract to pay in private bonded warehouses. In 1857 the Chamber of Commerce established a tariff of rates for this storage, which was accepted by the public and by the Treasury Department. That was previous to the war, when the labor was at a very low rate. Mr. Barney, when he was collector, added 150 per cent. to these rates; and Mr. Draper, immediately upon assuming office, reduced the 150 per cent. added by Mr. Barney to 60 per cent. In 1857 the rate of labor was fifteen cents per hour; the highet rate was eighteen cents, and some of the warehouses only paid twelve and a half cents. We now pay forty cents an hour. As general order goods rarely remain in store more than a month, labor is an important item in the charge for storage. We have to pay now nearly 300 per cent. increase on the rates of 1857; but we were only allowed by the ruling of Mr. Draper to charge 60 per cent. The rates of 1857 were based upon labor at fifteen cents an hour; now, when labor is forty cents an hour, should we not be entitled to more than 60 per cent. increase? If you attempt to charge the merchants more than the 60 per cent. they will not pay it, but will go down to the custom-house and have the bill corrected according to the rates of 1857, with the 60 per cent. added. If we say to them "We will not warehouse your goods for these rates," they will say "We don't care, the rate for general order goods is fixed." There are cases where we could get a dollar for storage we are compelled to accept at sixty-four cents under general orders. In fact, a neighbor of ours, in a private store, where the expense is less than in a bonded store, is receiving $1 25 for crate storage. Another difficulty in the general order business is this: Under general orders we are compelled to take whatever may be sent to us—that is, if it is safe to take it into the store. We may receive one package of an invoice, or we may receive ten or a hundred; and we never know the goods are to be delivered, or when they may be wanted In private warehousing, a warehouseman always receives a specification of the goods, and knows how to put them up in reference to their easy and convenient delivery when called for. In general orders the want of a knowledge of this fact entails additional expense.

The stores set apart for the receipt of general order goods are always expected to be ready to receive all the goods that are sent to general order within the district. The result is, that a large space is kept vacant, waiting for them, which often might be filled with private bonded goods. There were many lofts in our store which might have been filled with goods at remunerative storage prices, but which we were compelled to keep empty, not knowing when the general order goods would arrive. It has sometimes been proposed to make all stores general order stores. The objection to that is, if all stores were made general order stores, and liable to receive general order goods, not knowing when these goods would come in, they might be filled with private goods, and when the general order goods came there would be no room for them. For that reason particular stores should be designated.

The rate of insurance on a general order store is ten cents on the $100 more than on a private bonded warehouse. And if one load of general order goods were taken into a private bonded warehouse the underwriters would increase the rates at once that amount on all the goods in the store. I think you will see that, for all these reasons, a general order store should receive a larger compensation for the goods stored there than a private bonded warehouse should. Sometimes it has happened that we have taken a good deal of goods made up in single packages, and have been obliged to store them altogether. When at a subsequent period one of these packages would be called for, it required a great amount of labor to find and deliver it.

In regard to the rates established by the Chamber of Commerce I will say: The Chamber of Commerce is composed of merchants whose interests are, of course, to have their goods stored as cheaply as possible, and it is not, therefore, best that they should have the fixing of the rates. I would suggest that these rates should be fixed by a committee appointed by Congress, together with a committee appointed by the Chamber. This would be the fairest way of doing it where there are such conflicting and antagonistic interests. I don't know that there is one warehouseman a member of that body.

NEW YORK, January 15, 1867.

THOMAS J. BARR recalled and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you ever have an interview with Mr. Johnson in reference to the general order business?

A. Yes.

Q. Who was with you?

A. Mrs. Perry; and myself and Mr. Johnson talked about the matter. There were several others in the room at the same time. The President did not know what the business was, and I explained it to him. He then told his secretary to write a letter to the collector of the port of New York, telling him to give the general order business from pier 59, North river, to the Battery to Messrs. Barr & Phelps if it would be no injury to the government. We had a written agreement with Mrs. Perry, by which she was to receive one-third of the profits of the business.

Q. Was that known to the President?

A. Not through me; but at the interview we all talked together.

Q. Did the President seem to be aware of the arrangement?

A. I should say he did by the way he acted.

Q You had previously a written agreement with her; had she this agreement?

A. She had a copy of it.

Q. Did you leave her with the President?

A. No; we went out together.

Q. Was the letter written to Mr. Smythe?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you bring that letter to Mr. Smythe?

A. I did.

(The Chairman here read a letter.)

Q. Was this the letter?

A. It was; but there was another letter I think a little stronger.

Q. Did you ever have an interview with Mr. Smythe after his confirmation?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this letter handed then to Mr. Smythe?

A. Yes. He said he had to make arrangements with that business to get confirmed, and that he had but a very little portion of it for himself, but that he might give us a part of that portion.

Q. Have you these letters?

A. I think I can produce them.

[No. 12.]

LETTER OF THE SECRETARY OF WAR, COMMUNICATING, IN COMPLIANCE WITH A RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE OF THE 13TH INSTANT, INFORMATION IN RELATION TO PERSONS IN THE EMPLOYMENT OF THAT DEPARTMENT WHO HAVE NOT TAKEN THE OATH PRESCRIBED BY LAW, AND TO PERSONS APPOINTED TO OFFICE NOT AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, December 15, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the following resolution of the Senate:

Whereas it is provided by act of Congress that every person in the civil, military, or naval departments of the public service, except the President of the United States, shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, and before being entitled to any of the salary or other emoluments thereof, take and subscribe a certain oath in prescribed form; and it is further provided in another act of Congress, (February 9, 1863, section 2, chapter 25,) that "no money shall be paid from the treasury of the United States to any person acting as an officer, civil, military, or naval, as salary in any office, which office is not authorized by some previously existing law, unless where such office shall be subsequently sanctioned by law;" and whereas it is reported that, notwithstanding these acts of Congress, certain persons have been allowed to enter upon the duties of office, and to receive the salary and emoluments thereof without taking the prescribed oath, and certain other persons have been appointed to offices "not authorized by any previously existing law;" Therefore

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War be requested, so far as the records of their respective departments allow, to inform the Senate whether any persons have been permitted to enter upon the duties of office, and receive the salary and emoluments thereof, without taking the oath prescribed by Congress; or, if they have taken it, adding thereto explanations; and, also, whether persons have been appointed to any office "not authorized by any previously existing law;" and if any persons have been so permitted or appointed, then to report if the same have received any salary or emoluments, and what they were, and out of what fund they have been paid, with reasons for such permission or appointment, and also the explanation, if any, assigned by such parties at the time of taking such oath.

And in reply thereto, I respectfully state:

First. That the records of this department do not furnish any information, except in the case hereinafter mentioned, upon the inquiry whether any persons have been permitted to enter upon the duties of office and receive the salary and emoluments thereof without taking the oath prescribed by Congress, or whether they have taken it, adding thereto explanations, or whether persons have been appointed to any office not authorized by any previously existing law, or whether any persons so permitted or appointed have received any salary or emoluments.

Second. That the records of this department do show that the persons hereinafter named, who were appointed provisional Governors of States recently in insurrection, have received compensation for their services to the United States government out of the contingent fund of the War Department at the same rate allowed to Andrew Johnson, military Governor of the State of Tennessee, under his appointment of March 3, 1862, viz: at the rate of $3,000 per annum, to wit:

W. W. Holden, provisional Governor of North Carolina	$1,750
B. F. Perry, provisional Governor of South Carolina	750
Lewis J. Parsons, provisional Governor of Alabama	1,000
James Johnson, provisional Governor of Georgia	1,000

Third. That in August last an office was organized in the Adjutant General's bureau for the collation, safe-keeping, and preservation of the rebel archives, and Doctor Francis Lieber was appointed chief of that bureau. The reason for this appointment was the necessity of having those archives collated by a publicist of known character and reputation, in order that they might be available to the government without delay. He has received the sum of $1,447 84 out of the provost fund in charge of the Adjutant General. It was the expectation that if this appointment should be considered unauthorized by any existing law, its obvious necessity would be sanctioned by Congress. No other appointment in this department has been made not authorized by existing law, and this is believed to be within the scope of the authority for appointments in the War Department.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Hon. L. F. S. FOSTER,
President of the Senate.

[No. 13.]

LETTER OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY, COMMUNICATING, IN COMPLIANCE WITH A RESOLUTION OF THE SENATE OF THE 13TH INSTANT, INFORMATION IN RELATION TO PERSONS IN THE EMPLOY OF THAT DEPARTMENT WHO HAVE NOT TAKEN THE OATH PRESCRIBED BY LAW, AND TO PERSONS APPOINTED TO OFFICE NOT AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, December 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of the following preamble and resolution passed by the Senate on the 13th instant, viz:

"IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
"December 13, 1865.

"Whereas it is provided by act of Congress that every person in the civil, military, or naval departments of the public service, excepting the President of the United States, shall, before entering upon the duties of his office, and before being entitled to any of the salary or other emoluments thereof, take and subscribe a certain oath in prescribed form; and it is further provided in another act of Congress, (February 9, 1863, chapter 25, section 2,) that 'no money shall be paid from the treasury of the United States to any person acting as an officer, civil, military or naval, as salary in any office, which office is not authorized by some previously existing law, unless where such office shall be subsequently sanctioned by law;' and

"Whereas it is reported that, notwithstanding these acts of Congress, certain persons have been allowed to enter upon the duties of office, and to receive the salary and emoluments thereof, without taking the prescribed oath, and certain other persons have been appointed to offices 'not authorized by any previously existing law:' Therefore,

"Resolved, That the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of War be requested, so far as the records of their respective departments allow, to inform the Senate whether any persons have been permitted to enter upon the duties of office, and to receive the salary and emoluments thereof, without taking the oath prescribed by Congress, or, if they have taken it, adding thereto explanations; and also whether persons have been appointed to any office 'not authorized by some previously existing law;' and if any persons have been so permitted or appointed, then to report if the same have received any salary or emoluments, and what they were, and out of what fund they have been paid, with the reasons for such permission or appointment, and also the explanations, if any, assigned by such parties at the time of taking such prescribed oath.

"Attest:

"J. W. FORNEY, Secretary."

In reply, I have to say, that the records of this department do not show that persons have been appointed to any office not authorized by some existing law; but they do show that some persons have been, in the recently insurgent States, appointed officers under the customs and internal revenue laws, and are still holding their offices without having taken and subscribed the oath referred to in the resolution of the Senate; but, with a single exception, no salaries have been paid to them up to the present date.

The accompanying reports from the Commissioners of Customs and of Internal Revenue exhibit the names of such persons and the form of oath subscribed by each, together with such explanations as will give to the Senate the necessary information upon the subject.

Upon the surrender of the confederate armies, it was regarded by the President and his Cabinet as a matter of great importance that revenue offices should be established in the southern States, in order that commerce and trade might be resumed, and the authority of the government in one of its most important branches should be again recognized in all parts of the Union with as little delay as practicable. It was also regarded as a matter of scarcely less importance that citizens of the respective States in which offices were located, and not strangers, should be appointed revenue officers. In carrying into effect these views it became necessary to call into requisition the services of some southern men who had participated in the rebellion. None, however, have been appointed to office, or permitted to hold office under the law for the collection of the revenues, who are known to have instigated the rebellion, or who could properly be considered as justly responsible for it. It has been my purpose to recommend the appointment, and to sanction the appointment, of such only as could take the oath literally; and failing to be able to find such persons, to confine the appointment to those who gave no aid to the rebellion until the government of the United States had failed to give them the protection to which they were entitled; and there was no government but rebel government (State and confederate) to which they could look for safety or support in the perilous circumstances in which, without any previous action of their own, they had been forced. It is believed that very few persons not belonging to one or the other of these classes are holding positions under this department.

In most of the southern States nearly every man of the character and intelligence necessary to qualify him for a position as a revenue officer, some time during the progress of the war, either engaged in hostilities against the government of the United States, or held (willingly or unwillingly) office under rebel authority. Hence it has been necessary, as before stated, to employ in a few important but not very remunerative positions, in most of the subordinate ones, men of this class, especially as the salary and emoluments of the offices were generally too small to induce northern men to accept them. Even if the offices were desirable to any but residents, I have not supposed that it would be the policy of Congress to subject the people of the south to the humiliation, or the revenue system to the odium, which would be the result of employing northern men to collect federal taxes in the southern States; and I have not doubted that Congress would so modify the oath that this department would be sustained in employing in the collecting of the revenues those who, by circumstances which they could not control, had been forced into the rebellion, but of whose present loyalty there is no question.

I would therefore respectfully suggest, in view of the facts thus presented, that immediate action upon this subject by Congress is absolutely necessary.

The accounts of officers who have not taken the qualifying oath have not been audited, and valuable services are being rendered by them, for which they are receiving no compensation. Very great inconvenience is already experienced, and grievous complaints are being made by some of our best officers, on account of the non-payment of their subordinates; and I deem it to be my duty to say that, without a modification of the oath, the revenue system cannot be safely or properly administered in many districts of the southern States.

HUGH McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

The Hon. PRESIDENT of the Senate.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of Commissioner of Customs, December 11, 1865.

SIR: As requested, I have the honor herewith to furnish you with such information, called for by resolution offered by Mr. Sumner and passed by the Senate in regard to officers who have not taken the oath prescribed by the act of July 2, 1862, as exists in this office. Most of the officers of customs, or connected therewith, appointed since the adjournment of Congress on the 4th of March last, have taken the oath prescribed by the above-mentioned act; some of them, however, have not; but in most cases where it has not been taken entire, it has been varied by more or less being stricken out or omitted, according to the feelings or circumstances of the appointee. In some cases, instead of the oath prescribed by the act above mentioned, they have taken an oath called the "proclamation oath," which is hereto annexed as taken, together with other oaths taken.

The following persons have taken the oath prescribed by the act referred to, more or less of which they have stricken out, (copies of which are hereunto annexed,) to wit:

James M. Matthews, collector, Tappahannock, Virginia.
William S. Croft, collector, Georgetown, South Carolina.
Gordon Forbes, surveyor, Yeocomico, Virginia.
William Y. Leitch, surveyor, Charleston, South Carolina.
F. M. Robertson, special examiner of drugs, Charleston, South Carolina.
Edgar M. Lazarus, appraiser, Charleston, South Carolina.
J. F. W. Walter, appraiser, South Carolina.

The proclamation oath, instead of the oath of act of July 2, 1862, was taken by—

J. F. Marrast, inspector, Mobile, Alabama.

The appointees named below have taken the oath of office, but have not taken the oath required by act of July 2, 1862:

Richard W. Woodbridge, deputy collector, Savannah, Georgia.
Zachariah N. Winkler, clerk, Savannah, Georgia.
Octave Aubert, clerk, Brownsville, Texas.
Ernest Tasset, book-keeper, Brownsville, Texas.
Fortune Jones, messenger, Brownsville, Texas.
Edmund Daly, inspector, Brownsville, Texas.
Francis Reast, deputy collector and inspector, Boston, Texas.
Joseph Backus, mounted inspector, Saluria, Texas.
James McCoppen, deputy collector pro tempore, Saluria, Texas.
Thomas P. McManus, deputy collector pro tempore, Eagle Pass, Texas.
James Coffee, deputy collector pro tempore, Saluria, Texas.

The person last named, in his oath of office, which is a written one, omits the clause "I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States."

The collector at Brownsville, in his letter transmitting the oaths of some of his appointees, states that the only forms he could procure there were those which did not contain the oath of July 2, 1862. The collector of Saluria district, Texas, states that it is difficult for him to find suitable employés in his district who can take that oath. Where the oath has not been taken, the collectors have been notified by communications of the tenor of the letter annexed, that such appointees were entitled to no compensation until they had taken the oath.

No oaths, either of office or of allegiance, have been received from the following named persons. Probably in most of the cases the oaths may have been taken, but they have not been forwarded by the collectors. They have been notified to transmit them to this office without delay.

William B. C. Duryee, deputy collector, Ferdandina, Florida.
Benjamin Clark, porter, Fernandina, Florida.
William H. Sweetser, temporary inspector, Beaufort, North Carolina.
James H. Taylor, temporary inspector, Beaufort, North Carolina.
George P. Thayer, clerk, Nashville, Tennessee.
James B. Murtagh, deputy weigher, New Orleans, Louisiana.
John H. Ball, aid to revenue, New Orleans, Louisiana.
Joshua H. Dailey, inspector, Hatteras inlet, North Carolina.
Albert Bingham, chief clerk, Port Royal, South Carolina.
Walter F. Bingham, temporary clerk, Port Royal, South Carolina.
Thomas M. Gardner, temporary inspector, Wilmington, North Carolina.
H. D. Gilbert, temporary inspector, Wilmington, North Carolina.
William G. Burch, temporary inspector, Wilmington, North Carolina.
Thomas B. Smith, weigher and gauger, Wilmington, North Carolina.
John H. Wood, porter, Charleston, South Carolina.
Squire Summers, porter, Memphis, Tennessee.
E. Murray, inspector, weigher, &c., Mobile, Alabama.
Edmund K. Lowd, deputy collector, New Smyrna, Florida.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. SARGENT, Commissioner.

Hon. H. McCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Office of Commissioner of Customs, October 16, 1865.

SIR: Your official bond has been received, and your commission is herewith enclosed.

The act of July 2, 1862, prescribes an oath to be taken by officers of the government, and it is deemed advisable that on entering your office you should distinctly understand that you will have to depend entirely on the action of Congress to obtain your salary and emoluments, as no compensation whatever can be allowed you under the law as it now stands.

I have mailed to your address the United States Statutes at Large from 1861, and a copy of the general regulations of this department of 1857. Your attention is particularly called to the 4th chapter of the general regulations, and to the laws fixing the rate of duty on imports and tonnage.

You will, at your earliest convenience, transmit to this office a schedule of all public property that comes into your hands as collector.

Any further instructions you desire will be furnished on application to this office.

Yours, respectfully,

N. SARGENT, Commissioner.

JAMES M. MATTHEWS,
Collector of Customs, Tappahannock, Va.
Care of Dr. R. ARTHUR, 117 North Charles street, Baltimore, Md.

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, James M. Matthews, having been appointed to the office of collector of customs for the district of Tappahannock, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of collector of the customs, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

JAMES M. MATTHEWS.

Sworn to and subscribed this 30th day of September, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

A. H. GARNETT, J. P.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.)

I, James M. Matthews, of Tappahannock, State of Virginia, do solemnly swear that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.

JAMES M. MATTHEWS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 30th day of September, A. D. 1865.

A. H. GARNETT, J. P.

—

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, William S. Croft, having been appointed to the office of collector of the customs for the district of Georgetown, in the State of South Carolina, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of collector of customs, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

WILLIAM S. CROFT, Collector.

Sworn to and subscribed this 16th day of September, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

E. WATERMAN,
Judge of Probate and ex officio Q. U.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.)

I, William S. Croft, do solemnly swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.

WILLIAM S. CROFT.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 16th day of September, A. D. 1865.

E. WATERMAN,
Judge of Probate and ex officio Q. U.

In a note accompanying Mr. Croft writes: "I take this occasion to say that I accept the terms of the act of July 2, 1862, and will depend upon the action of Congress to obtain the salary and emoluments of my office."

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, Gordon Forbes, having been appointed to the office of surveyor of the customs for the port of Yeocomico, in the State of Virginia, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of surveyor of the customs, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

GORDON FORBES.

Sworn to and subscribed this 27th day of October, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal

W. NEWTON, Jr., J. P.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.)

I, Gordon Forbes, of Westmoreland county, State of Virginia, do solemnly swear that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have neither sought nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.

GORDON FORBES.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 27th day of October, A. D. 1865.

J. M. MATTHEWS, Collector.

—

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, William Y. Leitch, having been appointed to the office of surveyor of the customs for the district of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of surveyor of the customs, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

WILLIAM Y. LEITCH, Surveyor.

Sworn to and subscribed this 7th day of September, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

A. G. MACKEY, Collector.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.)

I, William Y. Leitch, do solemnly swear that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.

W. Y. LEITCH.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this —— day of July, A. D., 1865.

CHARLES P. WANNALL, J. P.

Mr. Leitch declines to take the oath of July 2, 1862, without modification.

A. G. MACKEY, Collector.

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, F. M. Robertson, having been appointed to the office of special examiner of drugs for the district of Charleston, State of South Carolina, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of special examiner of drugs, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

F. M. ROBERTSON,
Special Examiner of Drugs.

Sworn to and subscribed this 14th day of September, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

A. G. MACKEY, Collector.

This endorsement on the margin :

Dr. Robertson declines to take the oath prescribed by act of Congress of July 2, 1862, unless modified.

A. G. MACKEY, Collector.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.]

I, F. M. Robertson, of Charleston, South Carolina, do solemnly swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter. So help me God.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 15th day of September, A. D. 1865.

ALFRED H. DUNKIN,
Appointed Judge of Second Circuit Provost Court, Charleston, South Carolina.

I served on a medical board in Charleston for the examination of surgeons and assistant surgeons in the medical staff of the confederate States army.

F. M. ROBERTSON.

—

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, Edgar M. Lazarus, having been appointed appraiser of merchandise for the port of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of appraiser of merchandise, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

EDGAR M. LAZARUS, Appraiser.

Sworn to and subscribed this 7th day of September, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

A. G. MACKEY, Collector.

Mr. Lazarus declines to take the oath of July 2, 1862, except in a modified form.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.)

I, Edgar M. Lazarus, do solemnly swear that I have neither sought, nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.

EDGAR M. LAZARUS, Appraiser.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 7th day of September, A. D. 1865.

E. O. TREVILLE,
Assistant Provost Judge.

—

OATH OF OFFICE.

(20TH SECTION ACT MARCH 2, 1799.)

I, J. F. W. Walter, having been appointed appraiser of merchandise for the port of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina, do solemnly, sincerely, and truly swear that I will diligently and faithfully execute the duties of the said office of appraiser of merchandise, and will use the best of my endeavors to prevent and detect frauds in relation to the duties imposed by the laws of the United States. I further swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States.

J. F. W. WALTER, Appraiser.

Sworn to and subscribed this fifth day of September, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

A. G. MACKEY, Collector.

(ACT JULY 2, 1862.)

I, J. F. W. Walter, do solemnly swear that I have neither sought, nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion; and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God.

J. F. W. WALTER, Appraiser.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 7th day of September, A. D. 1865.

E. O. TREVILLE,
Assistant Provost Judge.

Mr. Walter declines to take the oath of July 2, 1862, except in a modified form.

PROCLAMATION OATH.

I, J. F. Marrast, do solemnly swear, in the presence of Almighty God, that I will hereafter faithfully defend the Constitution of the United States and the Union of the States thereunder; and that I will, in like manner, abide by and support all laws and proclamations which have been made during the existing rebellion with reference to the emancipation of slaves: So help me God.

J. F. MARRAST.

Sworn to and subscribed this 1st day of August, 1865, before me. Witness my hand and seal.

GEORGE H. YOUNG, Deputy Collector.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF INTERNAL REVENUE.
Washington, December 18, 1865.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith a detailed statement of the qualifications of the official oaths of Montgomery Moses, collector of the first district of South Carolina; James G. Gibbs, collector of the third district of South Carolina; Robert B. Kingsbury, collector of the second district of Texas; James H. Norwood, assessor of the first district of South Carolina; Charles J. Elford, assessor of the third district of South Carolina; Alexander M. McDowell, assessor of the first district of Alabama; William H. Vasser, assessor of the third district of Mississippi, ; Benjamin F. McDonough, assessor of the first district of Texas; William J. Phillips, assessor of the second district of Texas; and George A. Sykes, direct tax commissioner of the district of the State of Mississippi. All other assessors, collectors, and direct tax commissioners appointed have taken the oath prescribed in the act of July 2, 1862, without qualification.

Assistant assessors are appointed upon the nomination of the assessors of the several districts in which their services are to be rendered. Commissions have been forwarded to the assessors, accompanied by blank oaths to be taken and subscribed by the assistants before receiving their commissions from the assessors. The assessors have also been instructed to return to this office the oaths subscribed and taken. This practice has prevailed for a long time with reference to all the districts of the country. All of the oaths returned are unqualified.

From letters received from several of the assessors in States lately in insurrection, however, it appears that they have met with great difficulty in finding persons of suitable age and experience for the office of assistant assessor who have not been in some way so connected with the recent rebellion as to forbid their taking the oath prescribed in the statute of 1862. Some have represented that no men could be found in their districts who could take the oath who were suited to the office. To such this office has replied that no payments could be made for services rendered, to any one who could not subscribe to the required oath. There is reason to believe, however, that some have served as assistants without the statutory qualifications, although I cannot speak with certainty of this, as all the oaths received by assessors from their assistants have not yet been transmitted to this office.

Only one of the persons specially named above, viz: B. F. McDonough, assessor of the first district of Texas, has been paid. He has received salary for the months of October and November last—$242. This was paid through the inadvertence of a clerk ignorant of the fact that he had taken a qualified form of oath. Five hundred dollars were at the same time furnished Collector Happ, of the same district, for disbursement to the assistant assessors thereof.

No assistant assessors have been paid in districts where the assessor has taken the oath in a qualified form except as above stated.

Very respectfully, I am, sir, your obedient servant,

E. A. ROLLINS, Commissioner.

Hon. HUGH MCCULLOCH,
Secretary of the Treasury.

LIST OF COLLECTORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE SOUTH WHO HAVE TAKEN QUALIFIED OATHS OF ALLEGIANCE.

Montgomery Moses, collector of the first district of South Carolina, strikes out the following part of the oath, viz: "That I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power, or constitution within the United States hostile or inimical thereto."

James G. Gibbs, collector of the third district of South Carolina, strikes out the following part of the oath, viz: "That I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power, or constitution within the United States hostile or inimical thereto."

Robert B. Kingsbury, collector of the third district of Texas, makes the following statement, which he attaches to his oath: "I was a deputy collector of customs under the United States government when the rebellion commenced, and held that office under rebel authority, as I feared for my personal safety if I resigned at that time, but subsequently resigned, giving to the collector as a reason for resigning the fact of my being a Union man. Was also an alderman of the city of Brownsville, Texas, under rebel authority, which position was almost nominal, and was held by me previous to the war. Have been a member of a military company for home service or protection. I opposed the ordinance of secession, and have been from the commencement of the rebellion a sincere and earnest Union man. I may have given aid, counsel, countenance, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility to the United States, as I have dealt with and paid money to individual rebels and taxes to rebel authorities, and conformed unwillingly in various ways perhaps to rebel rule, but abandoned my property in Texas subsequently, and was an exile at the time of Kirby Smith's capitulation, and have the pardon of the President.

"ROBERT B. KINGSBURY."

LIST OF ASSESSORS OF INTERNAL REVENUE SOUTH WHO HAVE TAKEN QUALIFIED OATHS OF ALLEGIANCE.

James H. Norwood, assessor of the first district of South Carolina, strikes out the following part of the oath, viz: "That I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States."

Charles J. Elford, assessor of the third district of South Carolina, strikes out the following part of the oath, viz: "That I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power, or constitution within the United States hostile or inimical thereto."

Alexander M. McDowell, assessor of the first district of Alabama, strikes out the following part of the oath, viz: "That I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power, or constitution within the United States hostile or inimical thereto."

William H. Vasser, assessor of the third district of Mississippi, takes the following oath: "I, William H. Vasser, of the county of Monroe and State of Mississippi, do solemnly swear that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I did not, until the force of circumstances compelled me so to do, give any aid, countenance, counsel, or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I did seek and procure the office of regimental commissary of the so-called confederate States, for the reason that I was within the conscript age; that I have neither sought nor accepted, nor attempted to exercise the functions of any other office under any pretended authority in hostility to the United States. I do further swear that I resisted the party and principles which inaugurated secession; that I do not now, and never did, advocate secession. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign and domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion, and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of the office on which I am about to enter: So help me God."

Benjamin F. McDonough, assessor of the first district of Texas, writes the following statement at the bottom of the oath: "I have not taken the above oath, for the reasons that, during the war, I held the office of collector of customs of the port of Sabine, and having two sons in the rebel service, supplied them with necessary means for their personal comfort."

William J. Phillips, assessor of the second district of Texas, takes the oath with the following statement annexed: "I take the oath with the following exceptions, viz: Shortly after Texas commenced hostility against the United States I was elected chief justice of Wharton county. I was not a candidate, and did not seek the office. I accepted said office because it exempted me from military service, and prevented me from being forced to take arms against the United States government. The citizens of said county petitioned me to resign said office after twelve months' service, because I was a 'Union man,' and would not tax the county to aid the rebellion. I then made arrangements, and left my family in Wharton and went to Mexico, where I resided for over twelve months. I was the only man in my county that opposed and voted against secession. I never was enrolled in the confederate army."

LIST OF DIRECT TAX COMMISSIONERS SOUTH WHO HAVE TAKEN QUALIFIED OATHS OF ALLEGIANCE.

George A. Sykes, direct tax commissioner of the district of the State of Mississippi, takes the following oath: "That I have always been a Union man—opposed to secession; have never held any office under any pretended authority in hostility to the United States; and any aid given to the rebellion was more the result of public sentiment than choice."

(No. 4.)

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, COMMUNICATING TO THE SENATE A REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE, SHOWING THE PROCEEDINGS UNDER CONCURRENT RESOLUTION OF THE TWO HOUSES OF CONGRESS OF THE 13TH INSTANT, REQUESTING THE PRESIDENT TO SUBMIT TO THE LEGISLATURES OF THE STATES AN ADDITIONAL ARTICLE TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I submit to Congress a report of the Secretary of State, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution of the 18th instant, respecting a submission to the legislatures of the States of an additional article to the Constitution of the United States. It will be seen from this report that the Secretary of State had, on the 16th instant, transmitted to the Governors of the several States certified copies of the joint resolution passed on the 13th instant, proposing an amendment to the Constitution.

Even in ordinary times any question of amending the Constitution must be justly regarded as of paramount importance. This importance is at the present time enhanced by the fact that the joint resolution was not submitted by the two houses for the approval of the President, and that of the thirty-six States which constitute the Union, eleven are excluded from representation in either house of Congress, although, with the single exception of Texas, they have been entirely restored to all their functions as States, in conformity with the organic law of the land, and have appeared at the national capital by senators and representatives who have applied for and have been refused admission to the vacant seats. Nor have the sovereign people of the nation been afforded an opportunity of expressing their views upon the important questions which the amendment involves. Grave doubts, therefore, may naturally and justly arise as to whether the action of Congress is in harmony with the sentiments of the people, and whether State legislatures, elected without reference to such an issue, should be called upon by Congress to decide respecting the ratification of the proposed amendment.

Waiving the question as to the constitutional validity of the proceedings of Congress upon the joint resolution proposing the amendment, or as to the merits of the article which it submits, through the executive department, to the legislatures of the States, I deem it proper to observe that the steps taken by the Secretary of State, as detailed in the accompanying report, are to be considered as purely ministerial, and in no sense whatever committing the Executive to an approval or a recommendation of the amendment to the State legislatures or to the people. On the contrary, a proper appreciation of the letter and spirit of the Constitution, as well as of the interests of national order, harmony, and union, and a due deference for an enlightened public judgment, may at this time well suggest a doubt whether any amendment to the Constitution ought to be proposed by Congress, and pressed upon the legislatures of the several States for final decision, until after the admission of such loyal senators and representatives of the now unrepresented States as have been or as may hereafter be chosen in conformity with the Constitution and laws of the United States.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 22, 1866.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 20, 1866.

The Secretary of State, to whom was referred the concurrent resolution of the two houses of Congress of the 18th instant in the following words: "That the President of the United States be requested to transmit forthwith to the executives of the several States of the United States copies of the article of amendment proposed by Congress to the State legislatures, to amend the Constitution of the United States, passed June 13, 1866, respecting citizenship, the basis of representation, disqualification for office, and validity of the public debt of the United States, &c., to the end that the said States may proceed to act upon the said article of amendment, and that he request the executive of each State that may ratify said amendment to transmit to the Secretary of State a certified copy of such ratification," has the honor to submit the following report, namely: that on the 16th instant the Honorable Amasa Cobb, of the Committee of the House of Representatives on Enrolled Bills, brought to this department and deposited therein an enrolled resolution of the two houses of Congress, which was thereupon received by the Secretary of State and deposited among the rolls of the department, a copy of which is hereunto annexed. Thereupon the Secretary of State, on the 16th instant, in conformity with the proceeding which was adopted by him in 1865 in regard to the then proposed and afterwards adopted Congressional amendment of the Constitution of the United States concerning the prohibition of slavery, transmitted certified copies of the annexed resolution to the governors of the several States, together with a certificate and circular letter. A copy of both of these communications is hereunto annexed.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD

The PRESIDENT.

[Circular.]

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, June 16, 1866.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit an attested copy of a resolution of Congress, proposing to the legislatures of the several States a fourteenth article to the Constitution of the United States. The decisions of the several legislatures upon the subject are required by law to be communicated to this department.

An acknowledgment of the receipt of this communication is requested by your excellency's most obedient servant,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

His Excellency the GOVERNOR of the State of ———.

TESTIMONY OF MICHAEL BURNS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON SOUTHERN RAILROADS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 23, 1867.

MICHAEL BURNS sworn and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Where do you reside, and what is your occupation?

A. I reside at Nashville, Tennessee, and I am president of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, and also of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad.

Q. President of both roads?

A. Yes.

Q. How long have you been president of these roads?

A. I think one of the roads organized in 1864, and the other in 1863 or 1864.

Q. Are those two roads embraced in the same organization, or are they under different charters?

A. They are under different charters, sir.

Q. Is there any other connection between the two excepting that they both have the same president?

A. They have the same president, same superintendent, general freight agents, and some other officers, but they are separate organizations.

Q. Are their financial systems kept separate?

A. They are.

Q. Were you elected president of the two roads at the same time?

A. No, sir. I was elected president of one in July and of the other in August.

By Mr. MCCLURG:

Q. Was it in August and July, 1864?

A. I think I was elected president of the Nashville and Northwestern in 1863, but I did no act of business with it until 1865.

Q. Have you been re-elected to the presidency of either road? If so, how many times?

A. I have been re-elected three times to the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, and twice to the presidency of the other road.

Q. What is the length of the term of the presidential office for these roads?

A. Twelve months.

Q. How early did you take actual charge of the supervision of the roads, or either of them?

A. The military turned over the Northwestern railroad on the 1st September, 1865, and on the 15th September they turned over the Chattanooga railroad; fifteen days difference between the surrender.

Q. Had you any practical connection with either of the roads prior to these dates? and if so, what was it?

A. I was vice-president of the Northwestern railroad previous to the war, and I was a director on the Chattanooga railroad.

Q. My question bore reference to the time that intervened between your election as president and the time when the roads were turned over respectively.

A. I had nothing to do with them except in some little details. I had nothing to do with the running of them or their management, or anything of that kind. The military did that.

Q. How were they run and managed?

A. Altogether under the military authorities. The military superintendent of roads managed the roads, to the best of my knowledge.

Q. Were you consulted in reference to their management?

A. Never, sir.

Q. Did you ever interpose, or attempt to do so, in any way with respect to their management?

A. I have no recollection of having had anything to do with them.

Q. What was the condition of the Northwestern road at the breaking out of the war?

A. The road was partially built.

Q. Do you know what is the entire length of the road?

A. The survey makes it 172 miles, but an accurate survey would make it about 169 miles.

Q. What being the termini?

A. Hickman, in Kentucky.

Q. Is the road now complete to Hickman?

A. No.

Q. How far is it completed?

A. From Hickman to Huntingdon, and from Nashville to the Tennessee river.

Q. How much of the road was completed when it was turned over to you in 1865?

A. From Johnsonville to the Tennessee river. Portion of the western end was torn up. The United States took away fifteen miles of iron.

Q. What is the distance from Johnsonville to Nashville?

A. Seventy-eight miles.

Q. What is the distance from Johnsonville to Hickman?

A. It is called 172 miles, but it is not quite that length.

Q. At the beginning of the war how much of the road was completed between Nashville and Johnsonville, and how much between Johnsonville and Hickman?

A. There was about 55 miles, to McKenzie, completed—I think 50 to 55 miles—at the west end, and 29 or 30 miles at the eastern end; and about 6 miles from the Tennessee river, running up to Waverly, the iron was laid there.

Q. Did you have any work done towards bridging the Tennessee?

A. No; they had commenced to do so, but did nothing you would call work.

Q. Between the commencement of the war and the turning over the roads, what changes had been effected in the way of construction or destruction?

A. The bridges over the Harpeth were destroyed. I was at Nashville during the war, except some time that I was at the north, and I cannot tell, from personal knowledge, as I was not over the road except when it was finished to the Tennessee river; was informed that the bridges were destroyed. I have the report of the superintendent of the road with me, which will show the facts.

Q. When the road was turned over to you, how much of it was in running order?

A. There was about 78 miles.

Q. By whom had the road been worked upon during the war?

A. By the United States.

Q. What part of it did they improve?

A. They improved the part from the twenty-ninth section to Johnsonville.

Q. About how many miles did they improve?

A. About forty-three and a half miles.

Q. How much of that distance was entirely built by the government—excavation, grading, &c.?

A. I have the engineer's report, made under order of General Rosecrans, showing the entire facts of the case, and will put it in evidence.

Q. I want to know whether there had been any work done between the 29th section and the six-mile point, after the intermediate part had been entirely built.

A. About 111,500 cubic yards of grading was done by the United States; ties were distributed and iron placed at Johnsonville and Nashville, previous to the war, by the company, which the United States used.

Q. Had any work been done on the road during the rebel occupation?

A. Before the fall of Fort Donelson there was some work being done by the company, but it ceased after the fall of that place.

Q. Did the rebel authorities ever make any use of the road?

A. If they did I do not know of it.

Q. Who was president of the road previous to the war?

A. Mr. V. K. Stevenson.

Q. Was he also president of the Nashville and Chattanooga?

A. Yes.

Q. Had you, as president of the road, or had the company, anything to do in relation to the work done by the government in completing the road?

A. I took no active part in it, or had anything to do with it, further than that I was anxious to see it done. I once went from New York to Nashville and saw Generals Rosecrans and Thomas, and they told me they were also anxious to see it done. The Cumberland river was very low at the time, and the Nashville and Northwestern railroad was considered of vast importance as a military road, in order to have the army properly supplied. I proposed to General Rosecrans, while he was commanding the department, to give an order to have it done, and he did so.

Q. Did Mr. Johnson, at that time, as military Governor of Tennessee, have anything to do with the completion of the road? and if so, what had he to do?

A. Nothing further than that General Rosecrans gave the order to Governor Johnson for the supervision of the road, and to have it completed. I have the order with me, and will make it a part of my testimony.

Q. Was he personally interested in the road as a stockholder, or in any way?

A. Not to the extent of a cent, that I know of. He told me that if it was of advantage to the government he would recommend it, and if not, that he would not. He told me so several times.

Q. Who is General Donaldson?

A. He was quartermaster in my place.

Q. How far is that from Reynoldsburg?

A. From two and a half to three miles.

Q. In what condition was the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad at the time it was turned over?

A. It was said to be in fair condition, but I found it in a very poor way; it was all run down. Roads want work to keep them in order.

Q. Is it an easy or difficult road to keep in order?

A. It is a difficult road to keep in order, as it has heavy grades.

Q. How was the iron of that road when it was turned over?

A. It was a mixture. They took some of our old iron and sold it, and put some light and some heavy on the road in its place.

Q. Were you personally over the roads shortly after they were turned over?

A. I was.

Q. Do you know how much of the track had been relaid?

A. I don't know; but the side tracks were extended.

Q. The original rails were what are called the U rails—the stringer?

A. Yes; but the stringers had been taken up to a great extent. I have the report of the superintendent of the road, and would wish to submit it as evidence, as he is more familiar with the matters than I am. I will also submit Colonel Yates's report.

Q. By whom was it moved south?

A. By the former president, Mr. Stevenson, or the commanding general of the rebel army. All the available and valuable stock, or what was suitable for use, had been taken off by him, or by military order, when the rebels retreated.

I had run some down to the Northwestern, and kept them until General Buell came to Nashville. They were the stock of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad, with some of other roads.

Q. Did the Northwestern railroad, before the war, furnish itself with much stock?

A. Yes; not with much, but with all it wanted.

Q. What number of locomotives and cars had it?

A. I think it had five or six locomotives. I don't know the number of cars, but think some ten or twelve.

Q. Were they at Nashville or at Hickman?

A. There was some at both ends of the road. There was one engine at Johnsonville and a few cars—six or seven.

Q. What became of all the stock of the Northwestern road?

A. The government got nearly all. I endeavored to hold it as long as I could, but that at the western end was taken by the rebels.

Q. How much of it was restored?

A. I think they restored two engines. They restored everything I could claim or swear to.

Q. Did you ever get back any of the stock run off by Stevenson?

A. Yes.

Q. How much?

A. A hundred and odd cars and twenty locomotives, all in bad condition.

Q. How was that recovered?

A. It was on side tracks in Georgia, and was sent for by consent of General Thomas.

Q. Had it been used down there during the war?

A. I presume so.

Q. What was the affinity of Mr. Stevenson, the former president, with the government or with the rebels?

A. I believe he was quartermaster in the rebel army.

Q. On what side were his sympathies from the beginning?

A. To the best of my knowledge, I think I heard him express himself opposed to the rebellion at one time, and he did not co-operate actively with it. I think he was opposed to it at the commencement, but am not positive.

Q. How soon did he begin to co-operate actively with it?

A. I think after the State seceded, or when he got or wanted to get a position.

Q. In the spring of 1861?

A. About that time.

Q. By what authority did you get possession of those two roads in 1865?

A. By an order from the War Department at Washington, through General Thomas.

Q. The order of August 8, 1865?

A. Yes.

Q. Were the conditions of that order complied with in every respect? The first condition says, "Each and every company will be required to reorganize and elect a board of directors whose loyalty shall be established to your satisfaction." That is, to General Thomas's satisfaction. Was that done?

A. It was, sir.

Q. Who were the directors of the Nashville and Chattanooga road when it was turned over?

A. I was the president. Mr. Erris Brown, J. M. Hill, E. N. Alloway, J. R. Knowles, A. Welson, John F. Anderson, Levi Wade, J. Edgar Thomson, James H. Grant, E. Cooper. There were also two directors from Charleston, and one from Augusta by right of subscription, and not elected by the stockholders.

Thomas Ryan and Henry Cobie were from Charleston, and J. P. King from Augusta, but we had nothing to do with electing them.

Q. When you say "we had nothing to do with electing them," what do you mean?

A. I mean that the stockholders had nothing to do with the election. The city of Charleston subscribed $500,000 to the stock of the Nashville company, with the stipulation of having the privilege of nominating two directors, and the Georgia Railroad and Banking Company $250,000, with the stipulation of having the privilege of nominating one director; so the stockholders had nothing to do with their election. Mr. Ryan is dead, and Mr. McGraun has been elected in his place. I submitted the names of the directors of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad to General Thomas, and he accepted them; and to the directors of the Northwestern he made no objection.

Q. Have there been any changes in the company proper?

A. There have been some changes made. Mr. Watkins has been elected in the place of Mr. Knowles, Mr. S. Morgan in place of Mr. Alloway, Mr. James Merrill in place of Mr. Woods, who did not possess sufficient stock to qualify him to act as a director. Mr. Knowles and Mr. Hill were away from home for some time, and in consequence were left out.

(The examination at this stage was adjourned until the 25th instant.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 25, 1867.

MICHAEL BURNS recalled and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did the same board of directors act for both roads?

A. They were separate boards, but some men were members of both boards.

Q. Did you or did your roads purchase any property from the government? and if so, to what amount?

A. The amount of the bond of the Nashville and Northwestern railroads, with interest to December 31, 1866, would amount to $549,185 16; that is, from the quartermaster's report to me. The Nashville and Chattanooga railroad purchased to the amount of a little over one million and a half dollars—$1,526,578 47.

Q. How did you determine the property you received?

A. I considered the wants of the road, and how much we would need, by my own judgment and the advice of others.

Q. Were you allowed to select such as you might think desirable?

A. I was to some extent; but part of what I first selected was afterwards taken back from me; other persons came and claimed portions of the property and it was turned over to them.

Q. Did you take any more for either road than you actually used—you never resold any of it?

A. I never sold a dollar's worth of it; I have no recollection of having done so, directly or indirectly. There were some perishable articles transferred from one road to the other, such as wood or repairing materials.

Q. Did your purchases include fixtures?

A. Yes; one purchase included $108,000 for frame buildings, which I was almost forced to take, as the quartermaster insisted they should be first sold. They tore down a brick building, or round-house, and erected a frame building instead of it, and some of the new structures were put on other people's lots and we had to remove them.

Q. Did you buy any machinery?

A. Yes; so far as I wanted I purchased some of it.

Q. Did that purchase include the stationary engine built by the government for the navy yard at Memphis?

A. I think I got that stationary engine built by the government.

Q. How was the payment of these sums secured?

A. By the company's bond at two years, with interest at 7 3-10 per cent. We were also to move troops and supplies and carry the mails, which we would have faithfully done. This was to be credited on the purchase bond.

Q. Did you have anything to do with determining the prices of the various articles.

A. No; the prices were fixed by a board of appraisers appointed by the government, five of whom were appointed, but only three or four served. They fixed very extravagant prices, and I had no choice in the matter; I either had to take them at that valuation or leave them.

Q. Were these prices fixed by this board deviated from in any instance?

A. They might have been; the quartermaster might have done so without my knowing it. They also insisted that we should take the disabled and broken engines.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. You took them on valuation?

A. Yes; on a pretty fair valuation.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. How much have you paid on this indebtedness?

A. I don't know the exact amount, as we have not got some of our vouchers. I carried 34,524,000 pounds of freight and 25,283 troops for the government, for which I was paid at a price fixed by the government in 1862, which is altogether inadequate from the enhanced prices, and which on the amount carried would be $252,333 82 less than I would receive from private individuals for freights of passengers.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Were you not paid the same they were paying all through the war elsewhere?

A. No; they paid the Louisville road more than they paid us. The government paid them more than they paid any one of these lines, as I have learned, but I don't know how much exactly.

Q. I thought they had a fixed schedule.

A. The Louisville road was an exception, as I am told; we carried the mails, and are carrying them now; we are getting $100 per mile for carrying them, and I understand that other roads are getting $150 to $200 for the same service; we are only getting $30 per mile on the Northwestern railroad.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Have you paid up your indebtedness to the United States, from time to time, according to the terms of your bond?

A. I have carried the mails, troops, supplies, &c., faithfully in accordance with my agreement, and any other work I was called on by the government to do.

Q. Did you pay any of your indebtedness in money?

A. I paid, I think, $67,000; I was led by the order of August 8 to believe I would get a just settlement. The government is indebted to the company $3,766,915 64, as shown by the Quartermaster General's account; we have paid in all cash, for various things bought from the government, $268,480 08.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. What is your claim for?

A. For the use of the road during its occupancy by the United States.

Q. Where did you get that credit?

A. I understand it came from the department here at Washington.

Q. Who informed you that you had a credit of $3,766,915?

A. I was informed from a letter of the Quartermaster General's to John Bryan that Mr. McPherson was detailed by the department to make out an account in accordance with the order of August 8, and he rendered an account of $3,134,004, and omitted to give anything for the year 1862, alleging he had no data to go by for that year.

Q. Who is Mr. McPherson?

A. I understand he is a brother of General McPherson, and he was appointed either by the Secretary of War or by General Thomas to make out those accounts.

The following is General Meig's letter to Mr. Bryan:

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., December 13, 1866.

SIR: Upon your recent verbal application to the Secretary of War, on behalf of the Nashville and Cattanooga railroad, the Secretary of War referred the matter to me for report as to the condition of this case and the points in controversy. I reported to the Secretary of War that materials and rolling stock, to the appraised value of $1,556,551 73, were sold to the company, which gave its bond for $3,174,314 14 for the regular monthly payment of an instalment of one-twenty-fourth part of the debt, with interest at seven and three-tenths per cent. The debt is to be wholly extinguished November 30, 1867, two years from date of bond. The company has paid $178,867 28 on this debt. Major General Thomas, commanding department of Tennessee, under executive order, made a report, by which it appears that the expenditures made by the United States on this road have amounted to $1,079,511 33; and that the benefits derived from the road are as follows:

Cash receipts from transportation of private passengers and freights	$632,910 72
Estimate of what it would have cost the government to transport the troops and supplies if paid for per head and per pound	3,134,204 92
Total	3,766,915 64

Leaving a balance of $312,595 69 as the excess of expenditure by the government over its actual and estimated receipts, on account of Nashville and Chattanooga railroad. To this is to be added the value of the property of the United States sold to this road, and remaining unpaid, $1,509,443 78; making a total of $1,822,139 47 as the balance of the indebtedness of this road to the United States, supposing it to be credited with the value of the government use of it during the war.

In a conversation with you at the time the application was made, I called your attention to the terms and provisions of the act of 1862, section 3, and to its bearings upon the case. The Secretary of War having directed me to reply to your application, I have the honor to communicate the above information.

M. C. MEIGS, Quartermaster General.

Mr. JOHN BRYAN,
Care of J. T. Brady, New York.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Have you been allowed these credits at the department?

A. No. They are on the books to the credit of the company; but they bring other debits against us, which, in my opinion, are not correct. They charge us with a large expenditure on the road which was not done, as I believe.

Q. In stating the account of the road upon the basis of the order of August 8, they credit the road with this sum of $3,766,915 64, and debit it with a sum still larger than that?

A. Very much larger, sir.

Q. By the terms of your bond, except you paid promptly, the road was to be retaken by the government and the stock repossessed?

A. There was to be a receiver put on the road.

Q. How did you prevent that being done?

A. I had representations made to the department of the injury that would be done to trade and commerce by interfering with the road. They took the same enlightened view of the matter.

Q. What were the earnings of your road during the last year for which you reported?

A. The net earnings of the road for the fifteen months ending on the 1st of January last was about $524,000, or little over that. I would wish to remark, in connection with that, that I included the amount of work done for the government in this as a considerable portion of my profits; it was not cash.

Q. What disposition was made of this money?

A. The company had an interest account to pay of nearly $500,000, and had also a large floating debt to pay. I paid all my debts honestly as far as I was able, and knowing the government was in the company's debt, I thought they might reasonably wait a little until I settled with them.

Q. What was the interest account you speak of?

A. On the bonds of the company endorsed by the State, and which were held in New York and other places during the rebellion.

Q. Was it interest that accrued during the war?

A. Yes, sir; and mainly held in New York and in Boston by parties who were clamorous for their money. During the war they could not get it.

Q. What was the floating debt you referred to?

A. It was for labor and wood and other things.

Q. How did that accrue?

A. It accrued during the war and before, but principally before the war.

Q. I see from your last report, a copy of which I have here——

A. I did not print the last report, sir.

Q. This seems to have been made by Messrs. Grant, Huggins, and Whiteside.

A. That was a report from December 1, 1860, to June 30, 1865.

Q. At page 30 of that report there is the following passage, referring to an item of $308,872 61: "And this amount is mainly derived from the cotton secured and brought from the South by the perseverance of our president, M. Burns, esq."

A. That was from the sale of some 1,200 bales of cotton got down South. I only got about $225,000 for this cotton, as the price fell.

Q. How was that derived?

A. It was from the earnings of the rolling stock and the former manager of the road while South. I got an order to get out the cotton, and I went to General Thomas and told him the facts. He said he knew nothing about it, and did not want to be bothered with it, but that if I gave him my bond that the cotton belonged to the company he would give me an order to get it out. I did so, and he gave me a permit, and I got it out and sold it.

Q. Who gave you the order suspending the collection of the debt due to the government?

A. It came to the quartermaster's department from Washington, from either the Secretary of War or from the President. I heard the order read, but it did not come into my hands.

Q. This indebtedness that we have been speaking of is the debt of the Nashville and Chattanooga. Has like disposition been made with the Northwestern railroad?

A. Yes; the same extension was given the Northwestern railroad by General Thomas in order to give time to finish the road.

Q. Is the government indebted to the Northwestern road?

A. Yes; we claim $848,160 96.

Q. Is that over and above the work done completing the road?

A. It is exclusive of that. I here submit a statement of it from report of J.

B. Yates, engineer, who made a report as to the cost of finishing the portion unfinished of it between Nashville and the Tennessee river:

United States Government to Nashville and Northwestern Railroad, Dr.

For property taken from the Northwestern railroad, at Nashville, by the United States military railroads, as follows:
For one turn-table	$1,000 00
For one water tank	100 00
For 892 tons railroad iron, at $100 per ton	89,200 00
For 24,000 pounds iron fish bars and bolts, at 8½ cents per pound	2,040 00
For 900 pounds railroad spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	76 50
For interest from time bill was rendered, August 1, 1863, to September 1, 1865, at 7.5 per cent	14,055 00
		$106,471 50
Use of one (1) locomotive and tender, the Stranger, from February, 1862, to September, 1865, 1,307 days, at $10 per day	13,070 00
Use of one (1) four-wheeled pony engine, from February 1, 1862, to September, 1865, 1,307 days, at $10 per day	13,070 00
Use of six (6) flat cars, from February 1, 1862, to September 1, 1865, 1,307 days, at $3 50 per day	27,447 00
Use of one (1) box car, from February 1, 1862, to September 1, 1865, 1,307 days, at $2 50 per day	3,267 50
		56,854 50
Amount of material used and destroyed on the western division Nashville and Northwestern railroad, November 1, 1862, between Hickman and McKenzie:
1,249¼ tons railroad iron, at $100 per ton	124,950 00
68,892 pounds railroad chairs, at 8 cents per pound	551,936 00
3,090 pounds railroad spikes, at 8½ cents per pound	262 65
3 complete sets switch fixtures, at $75 per set	225 00
34,692 cross-ties, at 50 cents per tie	17,346 00
Replacing 14.7 miles track, at $500 per mile	7,350 00
Estimated cost of buildings at Hickman	5,000 00
Bridge and trestle at Obion river, and on the bottom, 4,000 lineal feet, at $5 per foot	20,000 00
Replacing 14.7 miles of ballast between Hickman and McKenzie, at $1,000 per mile	14,700 00
Interest from November 1, 1862, to September 1, 1865, at 7.3 per cent	40,405 72
		235,769 73
		399,085 73

RECAPITULATION.

Material taken from eastern division	$106,471 50
Use of engines and cars, as per statement	56,854 50
Materials taken from western division	235,759 73
		$399,085 73

We, the undersigned, hereby certify that we have examined the above account, and, from the best information we possess, believe the prices and amounts to be reasonable and just.

WM. B. INNES.
J. B. YATES.

Recapitulation amount from above	$399,085 73
Amount for the use of the road, as per order of August 8, 1865, due by United States to Nashville and Northwestern railroad	449,074 96
	848,160 69

I also submit the report of Colonel Yates, who was detailed by General Rosecrans to make survey and report the cost of finishing the road. There was only one road at that time to supply the troops, and I saw General Rosecrans and he ordered Governor Johnson to build the road. I also submit a copy of General Rosecrans's letter to Governor Johnson, and a letter of mine to Colonel Innes, and Colonel Innes's report.

Report and estimate of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad, and the time and cost necessary to place said road in running order.

After carefully examining the plans and profiles of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad, I would respectfully make the following report:

The length of the road is seventy-seven and a half miles. Of this there are twenty-eight miles of iron laid, from Nashville out, and by building two small bridges this portion would be ready for trains.

From the Tennessee river towards Waverly there are six miles of iron laid. There is a landing at the Tennessee river which has been used for unloading iron from boats, and could be used to unload freight until a better one could be constructed.

I have subdivided this report as follows, to wit: Bridging, grading, grades, ties and track, iron, wood, time required, cost.

Estimate showing data for report B. Report of M. Burns, president, (sheet C.) Proposition of M. P. Clark, contractor, (sheet D.)

With this report I would respectfully submit the following profile of the work:

BRIDGING.

There will be twenty-four bridges to guard, but by referring to the profile it will be seen that most of them are temporary trestles, built so as to save heavy hauls and expedite the opening of the road. It will be necessary to build four hundred lineal feet of girder bridging, or trestle, to use the first twenty-nine miles of the road.

By referring to profile and map A, and sheet B, the different locations of the bridges will be seen. The whole number of bridges is twenty-eight, but some are so near together that one stockade will answer for two bridges.

GRADING.

The grading is all done on the first twenty-eight miles. On sections 29, 36, 49, 51, 52, 53, 54, and 57 there is some heavy work to do. Section 53 is the heaviest one. The accompanying profile shows the state of the work, and gives the data for estimate.

The grading is estimated at twenty-five cents—the least it can be done for, as the material is all clay.

GRADES.

The grades of the road are such as to admit of the easy passage of long trains throughout the whole line.

TIES AND TRACK.

Seven thousand ties are still needed to finish the road. The estimated price, twenty cents per tie, is large, and will cover all this expense, as the timber required is near the road.

The track is laid twenty-eight miles west of Nashville, and six miles from the Tennessee river, east; leaving forty-three and a half miles of track still to lay. Track can be laid from each end of the road, which will very much expedite the work.

IRON.

The iron was purchased and delivered. A great amount has been used by government. (See report of Mr. Burns, the president of the road, attached to this report.)

WOOD.

Any amount of seasoned wood can be purchased along the line of the road, and there need be no delay on this account.

TIME REQUIRED.

Appended to this report is a statement from Mr. Clark, who was one of the contractors on the road for a long time, to the effect that, with such assistance as government can furnish, he can make ready the road in ninety days for traffic. I think the time is long enough, from the amount of work to do. We can commence immediately to lay track from each end of the road, and, with a system, have the whole work going on throughout the entire line.

The points at which working parties will need to be guarded will be twenty-nine, fifty, and seventy miles west of Nashville, being the grading and track and working parties.

Total estimate and cost to finish the road.

Grading:
To 115,100 yards, at 25 cents per yard	$28,775 00
Trestling:
To 5,200 feet trestling, at $4 per foot	20,800 00
Ties:
To 7,000 ties, at 20 cents each	1,400 00
Track laying:
To 43½ miles, at $125 per mile	5,437 00
Total	56,412 00

Respectfully submitted.

J. B. YATES,
Major First Michigan Engineers.

Examined.

WM. P. INNES,
Colonel and Commander.

Bridging and trestling destroyed and to be rebuilt, grading to be done on the Nashville and Northwestern railroad.—(See profile in connection with this sheet, sheet B.)

BRIDGING.

Section.	Stei.	Length.	Height.
14	....	200 feet trestle	20 feet.
18	.....	200 feet trestle	20 feet.
49	2,540	1,100 feet trestle	25 feet.
51	2,644	500 feet trestle	22 feet.
53	2,800	900 feet trestle	12 feet.
54	2,827	300 feet trestle	25 feet.
55	2,850	1,000 feet trestle	30 feet.
57	2,975	800 feet trestle	75 feet.

GRADING.

Section.	Cubic yards.	Section.	Cubic yards.
29	15,000	53	50,000
36	5,000	54	12,000
49	12,000	55	2,000
52	7,000	57	17,000

WM. P. INNES,
Colonel Commanding First Michigan Engineers.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE, February 14, 1863.

I would respectfully make the following report in reference to the iron belonging to the Nashville and Northwestern railroad:

When the United States forces first occupied Nashville, there was twenty-eight miles of iron laid from Nashville west, and six miles on the western end, running east. There was about fifteen (15) miles of iron at Nashville ready to lay with spike and fish-bars; also fifteen (15) miles of iron delivered at Reynoldsburg, on the Tennessee river, and about fifteen (15) miles of iron delivered at Hickman, on the Mississippi river; the latter iron I had brought up to Huntingdon, in Carroll county, Tennessee, and is now there unused, as I believe. This iron can be brought to Hickman and then put on transports to Reynoldsburg to the end of the road, and from there by rail over the road to where it may be needed. The iron that was at Nashville was taken by the government and used on roads, with the exception of some that I had sent out on the line of the road and some that is at Fort Zolli-coffer, on the Cumberland river. This report is made with as much reference to accuracy as it is in my power to make it, as my engineer left and the roadmaster; but I think it rather under than over the amount.

Respectfully, yours,

M. BURNS,
President of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad.

Colonel WILLIAM P. INNES,
First Michigan Engineers.

STATE OF TENNESSEE, County of Davidson, ss:

William P. Innes, late Colonel first regiment Michigan engineers and mechanics, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That for the past five years he has been acquainted with the condition and operations of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad; that on or about the 10th day of February, 1862, he was ordered by Major General Buell, commanding United States forces, to rebuild some of the bridges that had been destroyed on the line of the road; that as far as he had opportunity of judging, the road was in fair order, being laid with U rail on cedar stringers; he was soon ordered forward with two battalions of his regiment to Shiloh and Corinth, and about the 4th of July, 1862, was ordered by Major General Buell to put the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad in order from Stevenson to Duck river; that by about the 1st of August, 1862, all the bridges had been rebuilt and the road opened all the way through. At this time General Mitchell was at Huntsville, and his army was supplied from Nashville, as well as General Buell's army. This deponent further says that the road was then considered in fair order and capable of doing a very large business, the only thing needed being cross-ties instead of stringers to lay the iron upon. The federal army about this time returned to Kentucky, and the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad was not used or controlled by the army again until about January, 1863, when it was opened from Nashville to Murfreesboro' under the superintendence of this deponent, by the replacing of all iron, ties, &c., destroyed; this deponent getting out a large number of cross-ties to take the place of the stringers previously in use. This deponent further says that the road, as so repaired by him, supplied General Rosecrans's command as long as he remained at Murfreesboro'.

On or about the 25th of June, 1863, the army advanced to Tullahoma, to which point bridges were rebuilt and the road put in operation. This deponent was soon after ordered to put the road in order to Bridgeport, which was done about the end of July, 1863, or first of August, 1863. About the middle of August this deponent was ordered by General Rosecrans to take charge of the road as military superintendent, and acted in that capacity until General Rosecrans was relieved of his command, at which time this deponent rejoined his regiment. This deponent further says that during the time he held the position of military superintendent he supplied General Rosecrans's army, then located at Bridgeport; and that, in addition to supplying the army, he moved the 11th and 12th army corps (consuming but five or six days in transporting them) over the road from Nashville to Stevenson and intermediate points; that these two corps comprised some 25,000 men and officers, with horses, batteries, camp and garrison equipage, baggage, &c. This work was all done with the road in about the same condition it was when taken possession of by the government.

After this deponent was relieved as military superintendent large expenditures were made on the road-bed for new iron, ties, &c. This deponent further says that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, as large an amount of business as ever has been done could have been accomplished without the renewal of so much iron. The road, in the opinion of this deponent, only needed retying to make it sound; and that opinion is fully borne out by comparing the U rail now in use with the new rail put down contiguous to it. The U rail now in use on the road is fully equal, if not superior, to a large amount of the new iron laid down by the government.

This deponent further says that he considers vast sums charged against the road might have been avoided had the same care been exercised that was in operating the Louisville and Nashville railroad, which road was under the control of private parties.

And further this deponent saith, that of the U iron taken up by the government authorities, some was sold to the Southwestern Iron Company at Chattanooga, Tennessee; some to the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company, and some resold to the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company. Other iron was sold to other parties to this deponent unknown.

This deponent further says that the depot buildings erected by the government, and afterwards sold to the company, were in great part not needed by the company to do its legitimate business; the company using fewer engines and cars than were used by the United States government.

The buildings owned by the company before the government took the road would be sufficient for its operation; and this same fact will apply with equal force to the side tracks both on line of road and in depot grounds at termini.

And further this deponent saith not.

WILLIAM P. INNES.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND,
Stevenson, Alabama, August 26, 1863.

GOVERNOR: If consistent with your orders from the President, I wish to place under your orders the building of the Northwestern railroad. Major General Gordon Granger will receive instructions to furnish on your requisitions such military force as may be required for the protection of the road. You can also have the services of Brigadier General Gillem, and such part of the Tennessee troops as shall be mustered into the service as you may need, including Gillem's regiment. Your requisition for the necessary funds will be sent to the department chief quartermaster, who will be directed to make requisition for and supply what you may need. The chief commissary will in like manner be directed to supply subsistence for the troops and men employed in the construction of the road. He will give directions to the post commissary how requisitions are to be made. Colonel Innis, military superintendent of railroads, will detail the requisite number of engineers, and furnish rolling stock necessary to carry on the work. It is possible we can spare Colonel Thompson and the first and second regiments of colored troops to be employed on the line. Ask President Lincoln if he cannot send you some colored or engineer troops from General Grant's department for the same purpose. The whole to be under your command. As a matter of course, I shall desire to have reports from you of the progress of the work.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W S. ROSECRANS,
Major General Commanding.

Brigadier General ANDREW JOHNSON,
Military Governor of Tennessee.

Official copy:

HENRY M. CEIST,
Lieutenant and Act'g Ass't Adj't General.

OFFICE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT N. & C. AND N. & N. W. R. R., Nashville, Tennessee.

I, John B. Yates, first captain, then major, and latterly colonel, first regiment Michigan engineers and mechanics, certify on honor that, after the occupation of Nashville by the United States forces, February, 1862, I was directed by General O. M. Mitchell to build Stewart's creek, Overall's, and Stone river bridges, at Murfreesboro', then having command of two companies first regiment Michigan engineers and mechanics. At that time there were to be built three bridges between Nashville and Murfreesboro', over Mill creek. This work was done by two companies of first regiment Michigan engineers and mechanics, under Major Hopkins, by General D. C. Buell's orders. I built Stewart's creek, Overall's creek, and Stone river bridges, which, when done, opened the road to Duck river, a distance of fifty-nine miles from Nashville. In addition to Duck river bridge, there was a bridge at Cowan to build, which placed the road in running order to Stevenson. The Nashville and Chattanoga road was in good order, with the exception of these bridges; most of the iron being U rail, laid on ties, and only a portion laid on stringers track. The stringers track must not be understood to be the same as strap track, but was heavy U rail on longitudinal stringers, and the most that the track needed was ties, as the U iron was of good material, and with ties closely placed would have made a good track—much better than the light iron which has been placed on the road by the United States military authorities. Notwithstanding the heavy business that has been done on the U iron for the last five (5) years, it is still in use on the line of the road. When the road was opened to Stevenson by General Buell, with the usual repairs and the judicious placing of the ties on the road, it could have supplied his army (in my opinion) without any trouble and at comparatively little expense. As a civil road, or in time of peace, it could have done all the work that is done on it now, and in the same time that it has been in the hands of the company, since being turned over by the government, fourteen months, could have been made as good a road as it is now. Side tracks, water tanks, &c., are larger and more numerous than the legitimate travel of the company requires. Upon General Buell's return from Alabama, the bridges were burned between Stevenson and Nashville. After General Rosecrans had advanced to Nashville, I was made assistant superintendent of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, early part of August, 1863. At that time bridges had only been rebuilt and section men placed on the track; with the usual repair force and construction train (same as are employed now) we were able to supply General Rosecrans's army, running some eight (8) trains each way daily—sixteen trains in all, carrying one hundred and twenty to one hundred and thirty cars, and transporting a large number of troops, for the months of September, October, and November, having in these three months moved over the road the 11th and 12th corps, army of the Potomac, under General Hooker, without the loss of a single life; the work all being done on the old Nashville and Chattanooga road-bed, nothing having at that time been rebuilt except the bridges destroyed by General Buell. Twice the amount of work could have been done if necessary, if the management had been in possession of the requisite amount of machinery and rolling stock to do it. General Grant and staff, General Meigs, chief quartermaster United States, were sent over the Nashville and Chattanooga road, from Nashville to Stevenson, while I was acting assistant superintendent, as safely and at greater speed than we are running trains now. If the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad had been left in the hands of the company under the same terms as the Louisville and Nashville railroad was, the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad would be a rich corporation to-day and the road a first class one, and this would have been done at not much greater expense than it has cost the Louisville and Nashville railroad to do the same thing.

J. B. YATES,
Late Colonel First Michigan Engineers and Mechanics.

I also appended the following:

Statement of the business of the Nashville and Northwestern line of the United States military railroads, division of the Tennessee, from August 1, 1863, to September 15, 1865.

Cash earnings	$5,883 51
Freight
Passengers	14,292 75
Express and other sources	4,749 70
Total cash earnings	24,925 96
Government business:
For freight transported, 182,454 tons; average distance, 75 miles; tons carried one mile, 13,684,050, at 2 cents per ton per mile	$273,681 00
Number of troops transported, 100,312; average distance carried, 75 miles; number of troops carried one mile, 7,523,400, at 2 cents per man per mile	150,468 00
	449,074 96

I certify that this statement is as full and complete as I am able to make from the books of the United States military railroads.

R. B McPHERSON,
Assistant to General Superintendent.

NASHVILLE, January 19, 1866.

Q. Then you claim that the government is justly indebted to the Northwestern railroad $848,160 96, with no claims on it except for the stock which you purchased?

A. They finished a portion of the road, according to the engineer's report, 111,500 cubic yards, and laid iron on 43½ miles; but in my opinion the value of the iron they took away was more than the value of the iron they put on, because they took away superior iron and gave us inferior. They also used up the road, and took away a lot of wood I had and gave no account of it. At that time we could not tell how things went, and could not watch them all. The iron put down by the United States was much lighter than the iron they took away.

Q. Upon a just and fair settlement between the Northwestern railroad and the government, in your opinion, which would be in debt?

A. On a just settlement, I would honestly say the United States would be in debt, from the best lights I have on the subject.

Q. Upon a just and fair settlement between the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad and the United States government, which would be in debt?

A. The United States government would be largely in their debt, from the best information I have received.

Q. About how much would the government be in debt to each road?

A. I don't know how much, but it would be considerable on a fair settlement.

Q. Had any person to go to Washington to see about this debt, and to get the time extended for your payments?

A. I came myself.

Q. Has the company employed any other agent than yourself?

A. Yes; they have employed agents from time to time.

Q. For that purpose?

A. Yes, and for other purposes.

Q. What other agents were employed beside yourself?

A. I found that I had not a great deal of influence, and as the guardian and representative of a good many widows and orphans having stock in this road, I felt it to be my duty to do the best I could to protect their interest. When I went to the departments myself I got very little satisfaction, and I got tired of going there.

Q. Who did you employ as agents?

A. Senator Fowler, who is a public-spirited man, and knew all the facts in connection with the road, was the only one, to my knowledge, that went direct to Washington on that business except myself.

Q. Was he paid by the company for his services as agent?

A. I should think it was only fair and just that I should pay him his expenses. He was not then in the Senate; he was only a private individual, and I think there was no wrong in doing so. I have also agents named Jenkins & Brien to assist me in this business. I found I could do nothing myself, and I had to employ some agents.

Q. How much has it cost each company to negotiate and obtain the extension of time on their bonds?

A. Literally speaking, I don't think it cost us one cent. I think the government knew the facts of the case just as well as I do, and was determined not to press us. That was the conclusion I came to. The whole thing, except my own expenses, did not cost probably more than $3,000 or $3,500.

Q. We want to know who received this money. Men cannot be induced to take hold of other persons' business without compensation in some way.

A. I found our delegation from Tennessee very kind about this matter, and they were willing to lend a helping hand without any cost. They thought it was a claim that ought to be settled, and that the welfare of that section of the country depended on it to some extent, and for that reason they helped it without expectation of either fee or reward.

Q. They acted because it was a matter affecting the interest of their constituents?

A. Yes; they looked at it in that manner. And I think, Mr. Chairman, you were also always willing to do your duty to your State.

Q. Now, suppose the government should not allow this credit which is claimed, and that they demanded the purchased property should be restored to the government, and the possession of the road surrendered to them, what would you do?

A. I can only speak for myself, and as long as I represent the interests of others, if the government should attempt to seize the road I will bring the matter into the courts, and I will go to the utmost end to oppose them. I know I am right. I have a great many people depending on me, and I have a right to take care of their interests. These people are loyal and pay their taxes, and the government should not deal unfairly with them.

Q. Is it your opinion that railroads should or should not suffer from the ravages of war?

A. I may reply to that, they should bear a portion of the incidental ravages; but the earnings of that road are just claims, and I, as president of the road, should see and collect those debts as my duty.

Q. How was the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad employed while it was inside the rebel lines?

A. I think the rebels made use of it, of course.

Q. You said the other day the president of it, Mr. Stevenson, was an active and influential rebel, and was in the quartermaster's department of the so-called confederate government. State whether the other officers who had charge of that road before the occupation of Nashville by our troops, in the spring of 1862, were also active and influential rebels.

A. I don't know much about that. Mr. Gleaves, the treasurer, and Mr. Cole, the superintendent, went off with them south.

Q. I find in a table at page 30 of the pamphlet referred to it mentions an item of $164,238 25 confederate bonds. Do you know how these were acquired?

A. I presume from the earnings of the road, or of the rolling stock, while in the south.

Q. When the road was used to carry troops and supplies to the rebels?

A. I presume so; like every other road in the south.

Q. And that with the willing assent and assistance of the officers and managers of the road?

A. There were a great many of the stockholders who would not assent to it, but they could do nothing. The rebel authorities had the power to use them, and they exercised that power pretty freely.

Q. Was it not so used before the rebel authorities had control of it?

A. I don't know.

Q. Was it not used to carry off the first volunteers raised in Tennessee, and who came up to Virginia before the articles of secession were passed?

A. Very likely; but I had nothing to do with the active management of the road at that time.

Q. You were then living at Nashville, and was vice-president of the road?

A. No, sir; but of the Northwestern road.

Q. There is some testimony before us that complaints have been made of your management of the road in this respect; that since they have been turned over to the companies Union men who had been in the federal service have been turned off and returned rebel soldiers put in their places. How is that?

A. It is not so, sir; my superintendent and assistant superintendent, who have the duty of employing the men, were federal officers. I have never made any inquiries or cared anything about the political affiliations of any of them, as I wanted only efficiency. We have a mixed lot of employés. Colonel Innis, superintendent, and Mr. Yates, assistant superintendent, were federal officers. We get along very well together. Some of these gentlemen have been a long time together.

Q. Does this same statement apply to the lower class of employés?

A. I don't know what the lower class of employés are; if there is any such thing as you state I am not aware of it. There are often times when I have to discharge a man, and probably for reasons that I don't want to give, and it may sometimes be attributed to other causes than the true ones. Some of the conductors who had been there during the time the roads were under the military occupation resigned their situations. I issued an order to give drawback tickets in order not to have any money received on the cars; they took offence at this, as they thought probably it was reflecting on them; I said it was not so. They then tendered their resignations and I accepted them. We had not an unpleasant word.

Q. How did General Thomas treat the roads—in a liberal spirit or in a rigorous, exacting spirit?

A. I can say that I have the utmost regard for General Thomas; he always treated me kindly; and I think his disposition was to be kind and just to all men. I think he is an honest-hearted, upright man, and I always found him so in the dealings I had with him.

Q. You speak of the general character of General Thomas. My inquiry was whether in his dealings with the roads he pursued a liberal and generous policy, or whether he had been rigorous and stringent in his demands?

A. I think, as far as my own knowledge goes, that while he has been disposed to be liberal, at the same time he has been rigorous in requiring compliance with the terms of the bond, and in all matters pertaining to his duty.

Q. Have there been any complaints made on the part of the road against anything he has done?

A. I never heard of any complaint having been made against him by any road. If you required him to do anything, if he could do so, he would; and if he could not, he would tell you so.

Q. Have there been any approaches made on the part of the roads, or by any of the persons connected with them, or in their interest, to General Thomas, or to the subordinates under him?

A. I never attempted to make a present to General Thomas, nor would I permit any of my employés to do so. I would pass the military over the road, or would pass any person General Thomas would recommend, as a matter of courtesy. That is the general custom of the road.

Q. Do you know whether these extensions which have been granted to your road from time to time have been made on the hypothesis that you are not really indebted to the government on a just settlement, or have they been granted because, in the opinion of the government, it would be oppressive to exact payment according to the terms of the bond?

A. I think the action of the government was influenced by both these considerations. The government was well aware it was in our debt, and, on the other hand, also thought that, by pursuing a liberal course towards the roads, they would be assisting in restoring the commercial relations and developing the resources of the country. I had some conversasion with Mr. Lincoln and he took the same view of the matter.

Q. What did Mr. Lincoln have to do with it?

A. The roads were in military possession during Mr. Lincoln's administration. At the time when I demanded possession of the road I knew I could not get it, but my object was to show the ownership and to keep the matter clear, so that I could demand pay for the use of the road. Mr. Lincoln told me that it was just that we should be paid, and he was very much in favor of building the Northwestern road. I had a long conversation with him on two occasions, and he said it was just and proper we should be paid. These were the words he made use of. I told him that, being the representative of others, I had a duty to perform in making the claim.

Q. Do you know that Mr. Lincoln was in favor of opening the Northwestern road as a line of communication?

A. He told me he wanted to do everything he could in order to feed his army, and he was glad I brought the thing before him.

Q. Have you any papers or other documentary matters showing the relations of your road to the government, or of the government to your road, that you can submit to us?

A. I have a report from the superintendent and assistant superintendent of engineers, which are appended.

Q. Please submit a copy of it and make it a portion of your evidence.

A. I will do so.

Q. Is there any other fact in that connection that you think would aid the Committee in investigating this matter which you have not stated? If so, please state it.

A. Nothing that I recollect.

By Mr. McCLURG:

Q. In what year did you become identified with these roads about which we have been speaking, so as to feel an interest for yourself and others in the success of these roads.

A. I was elected to fill an unexpired term in 1864; re-elected in 1865, and again re-elected in 1866. I am now filling that time. The elections referred to were as president of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad. I was elected in 1864 as president of the Nashville and Northwestern railroad, and in 1866 I was re-elected.

Q. When did you demand possession of the road from Mr. Lincoln?

A. In 1864.

Q. Can you tell us how often your agents, Mr. Fowler and Mr. Brien, or others, were sent to Washington for the purpose of obtaining an extension of the time for the payment of the bond?

A. Mr. Brien never came to Washington for that purpose. Mr. Fowler was here only once, and that was before he was a senator, and he did it more as a friendly act for me than for anything else, and I believe he did not do it for remuneration or pay, but, of course, I paid his expenses.

Q. What is the expense of the journey from your part of the country to Washington and return?

A. It costs me from $200 to $300 or $400. I think I paid him $500, because I did not wish to limit his expenses.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. What amount did you pay Mr Brien?

A. I paid him nothing; his pay is contingent.

Q. Contingent on what?

A. Contingent on collecting my debt against the government.

By Mr. MCCLURG:

Q. Contingent upon collection of the debt from the government?

A. Yes.

Q. State how the remainder of the $3,000 or $3,500 which you mentioned as having been paid out was disbursed.

A. I gave Senator Patterson a fee for similar services on behalf of the company; but that was before Mr. Patterson was a senator.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. What time was that?

A. Some time in 1865; I recollect he declined to take it one time from me, but as I incurred the obligation, I determined that I should pay him.

Q. What amount did you pay him?

A. $2,500.

Q. At what time?

A. To the best of my belief, in April or May, 1865. I am giving this from recollection.

Q. Was it before you bought the property or afterwards?

A. It was before the roads were turned over. I must say Mr. Patterson declined to receive it. After he was senator, he told me he would not have any more to do with it, and I have not since asked him to assist me, to the best of my recollection.

Q. Was that first time he acted before or after the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. To the best of my belief, before it.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. During Mr. Lincoln's administration?

A. I am pretty certain it was under Mr. Lincoln's administration. The payment, however, was made after he came to Washington, after his election as senator.

By Mr. MCCLURG:

Q. The payment was after he became senator?

A. After he came to Washington, but before he took his seat, or Tennessee was admitted into the Union.

Q. Mention any other persons to whom you paid any money.

A. I have no recollection of having paid any one else.

Q. Do you know whether any offer in the way of money or coupons or bonds was made directly or indirectly to Mr. Johnson—President Johnson?

A. No.

Q. Or offered?

A. Not that I know of. At one time I offered Governor Johnson a portion of my salary if I got the roads, but he got angry and declined it; and said he was not a rich man, but would remain poor sooner than incur obligations.

Q. Are you acquainted with the books of the company?

A. I am.

Q. Does President Johnson own stock in either of these roads?

A. Not a dollar, to my knowledge.

Q. Do you know whether or not he owns stock in either of these roads, held by any other person?

A. I don't think he owns any, direct or implied, in either of these roads; I regard him as scrupulously honest in these things, as I understand is inferred by your question.

Q. Are you acquainted with President Johnson's financial condition?

A. No, I am not.

Q. You speak of the earnings of the Nashville and Chattanooga road for the fifteen months up to January 1, 1867, having been applied to the payment of former debts; what were they?

A. To the payment of the coupons and floating debt of the company.

Q. Who are these bonds held by?

A. Mainly in New-York, and some I don't know where they are held.

Q. The debts for work and labor you spoke of; what class of men were they due to—disloyal or loyal?

A. I cannot say.

Q. Where do these persons reside?

A. In Tennessee, mainly.

Q. You speak of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad having furnished rolling stock to the government. Was the attempt not made by that road, when they found our armies about to get possession of that part of the country, to run off that stock?

A. They did run it off; there was some left, but it was disabled stock. You misunderstand me; I did not say the Chattanooga railroad furnished rolling stock to the United States.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. All that could be taken was run off?

A. Yes.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. I understood the government furnished to the road rolling stock, and would be entitled to a drawback by reason of it, from this large amount?

A. You understand me correctly, sir. I furnished, however, myself two trains to the government in this manner: An engineer on the road came to me when everything was being run off and said, "Look here, I don't want to go south; what will I do?" I said back down on the Northwestern road and keep your trains there. He did so, and I held these trains; and when General Buell came he asked for them. I told him where he could get them; he requested me to send for them; he said his lines did not extend far enough out, and as they would be a great accommodation to him, he would be gratified if I sent for them.

I did so, and they were taken by the United States, and not returned until after the war.

Q. You said, in your opinion, if a balance was struck between these two roads and the government, it would be in debt to your road?

A. That is my opinion.

Q. Do you in your calculation give the government credit for what it expended on that road?

A. Even by giving them just credit for it the government would still be in our debt. I have got Colonel Innes's and Colonel Yates's report appended to my testimony in regard to the condition of the road when taken.

Q. You speak of the road having owned 1,200 bales of cotton before you became president, and of your having got it out; to whom did that belong, or to whom did the money paid for it go?

A. To the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company.

Q. But what that road paid for the cotton, to whom did it go?

A. To the owners of the cotton.

Q. Who were they?

A. I don't know.

Q. Loyal or disloyal?

A. I don't know; very likely disloyal. I cannot, however, tell, as they were in Georgia.

Q. Was it purchased before our government got possession of that road?

A. After the fall of Fort Donelson the then president, or the rebel so-called government of the road, took off the rolling stock down south. During the time he was there he was running this stock on other roads, and this cotton was portion of the proceeds of the earnings of this rolling stock during the war. He invested a portion of the earnings in cotton, some of which was burned, and I found these 1,200 or more bales as the assests. General Steadman was then in Augusta, Georgia, and would not allow it to be brought out. When this was reported to me I went to General Thomas, and, as I have stated in a previous part of my testimony, I got a permit from him to bring it out by giving my bond that it belonged to the company.

Q. After you sold the cotton what did you do with the money?

A. I deposited it in the Manhattan Bank of New York, to pay the coupons on our bonded debt.

Q. Was all that amount exhausted in that way?

A. Yes, and a great deal more.

Q. Was any of that money paid to planters?

A. None of that money.

Q. As I understood you, the road owed for that cotton certain debts?

A. You misunderstood me. The rolling stock used in the south by the former president earned money, which was invested in that cotton.

Q. How was it invested in cotton?

A. The cotton was bought.

Q. From whom?

A. From the planters, I presume.

Q. Was it paid for at the time it was bought?

A. I presume so. I found it as assets of the company, and paid the company's debts with it.

Q. What business were you engaged in during the early days of the rebellion?

A. I was in Nashville engaged in the saddlery, hardware, and shoe-finding business, and remained there, and in that business, until the federal army took possession of that part of the country.

Q. In what way did you dispose of your work?

A. I sold it all through the country; whenever I could sell it I did so.

Q. Where did it particularly go to?

A. I had an extensive trade in Tennessee, Kentucky, Georgia, Alabama. I did a very large wholesale and retail business.

Q. Did you supply the confederate government?

A. I declined to do so, but I sold to persons whom I suppose sold to it. I declined to deal with the confederate government myself.

Q. Have you received confederate scrip or money in payment?

A. Yes.

Q. Were you compelled to take it?

A. I should either take it or not sell my goods, or take notes that were not rated better at that time.

Q. Did you ever make any effort to get out of the country to the Union lines?

A. No; I remained at home. I was once at Louisville, and returned home; but that was before the war was prosecuted vigorously.

Q. Were you open and decided in your feeling and expressions for or against the Union? What was your political status?

A. I was this: I was opposed to the war, and would not vote for secession, because I thought it unnecessary and uncalled for. I had two alternatives, either to leave the country or stay at home. I staid at home and sympathized with the southern people, but took no active part in anything. I never took the oath of allegiance to either government during the war. I was not very violent on either side.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Under what order was the Nashville and Northwestern railroad turned over?

A. Under the order of August 8, 1865.

Q. Did you not make a special arrangement with the President of the United States for turning over that road before any of them?

A. No.

Q. Here is language used in a letter to General Donaldson, June 27, 1865: "I have the honor to submit to your consideration the following proposition on behalf of the Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company, of which I am the president, in pursuance of an interview with his excellency the President of the United States and the commanding general, Major General G. H. Thomas, who told me the government was willing to turn over to the Nashville and Northwestern railroad their road, with all the appurtenances thereto." Tell us what was the reason for that?

A. I presume, to the best of my knowledge, it was this: The road had become a burden to the government, and they were about to abandon it. I was afraid the bridges might be torn down and other damages done, and I made this request in order to get possession. The Cumberland river at that time was in such condition that supplies could be got by that channel, and in consequence the government was about ceasing to use the road, and I therefore wanted to get it.

Q. Here is an order, dated July 17, 1865, turning over the Northwestern road to you. Did you decline it?

A. I did not get it until September 1, 1865. I would not take it without getting the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad also.

Q. There is no mention made of your declining to do so. It seems this Northwestern railroad was turned over to you by this order?

A. I don't know anything further than that I declined taking it, because I knew it would not pay, and wanted to get both; but it was not absolutely offered me by the military superintendent of roads until September 1, 1865, when I took it.

Q. Look at that communication and see if there is any mention made of the other road. You say you would not take one without the other?

A. I declined it in the presence of General Thomas, unless I got the other road. The United States never actually offered to turn it over until September 1, 1865, when I took it.

Q. Have you a written declination?

A. No.

Q. You have no written statement to show that you declined taking one without both?

A. No; it was a verbal declination.

Q. What advantage has Reynoldsburg over Clarksville?

A. It has the advantage that the river is navigable to there at all seasons.

Q. Is it navigable to Clarksville?

A. No; there are shoals both above and below it. The line shoals and others are below it, I think. You cannot get up there at low water; the Cumberland river is not navigable to Clarksville at low water.

Q. When we took possession of the country the Chattanooga railroad run off what they could, except what you saved?

A. I saved all the Northwestern stock I could, but I could only save of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad the stock that could not be moved.

Q. Did they move the machinery of the machine-shops?

A. They moved everything they could that was convenient to be moved.

Q. Did they disable the road as they retired?

A. I don't know. They took away the rolling stock.

Q. In regard to the work done for your road by Senators Fowler and Patterson, were they both employed for the same purpose—the same identical business?

A. What I wanted Mr. Patterson to do was to have the military turn over the roads to us.

Q. Did they perform the same amount of work?

A. Mr. Fowler was to try to get the extension of the bond if he could.

Q. Explain why you paid Mr. Fowler only $500, and paid Mr. Patterson $2,500?

A. I did not want Mr. Fowler to come here at his own expense when he was coming on my business.

Q. So was the other. Did Mr. Patterson do much for you?

A. Little or nothing.

Q. And yet you paid him more money than you paid to the other?

A. Well, I thought he could do more than he did do.

Q. If I understand you, you paid him after the work was done?

A. Because I incurred the obligation.

Q. What was the obligation you were under to him?

A. Some of my directors and stockholders advised me to see him and have him do something for us, and I told him I would pay him by their directions. They thought he might be beneficial in having the roads turned over.

Q. Explain what your agreement with him was? Did you agree to pay him $2,500?

A. That was all, and he was to see General Thomas and the military authorities.

Q. I understand you made an agreement with him that he was to see General Thomas, and he was to get $2,500 for that?

A. Not to see General Thomas alone, but to do what service he could to get the road turned over to the company.

By Mr. CHANLER:

Q. Did you employ him as counsel?

A. I did.

Q. He is a lawyer, and you employed him as such?

A. He is a lawyer, and as such I employed him.
Q. Did you ever employ him as counsel before?
A. No; he was not in that part of the country.

By Mr. McCLURG:

Q. Did he go to Washington on that business?
A. I think not.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Was Mr. Patterson engaged in getting the extension of time for the road?
A. Not that I know.
Q. How many such extensions have been granted to your railroads?
A. I know of only one, which exists yet.
Q. General Thomas granted you one?
A. I think it was the Secretary of War granted it by order of the President.
Q. General Thomas, from a report, granted you an extension on this condition: that the company commences payments in instalments on April 22, 1866. Had you no other extension?
A. That is the only extension to my knowledge. There was an extension given the Nashville and Northwestern railroad in order to finish it, as it was in an unfinished condition, and is so yet, and this is the one General Thomas gave.
Q. You say Mr. Brien has a contingent fee. State the whole of that arrangement with him, and what he gets that fee for.
A. Mr. Jenkins and Mr. Brien get their fees to get my claim against the government settled.
Q. State the amount of that contingent fee.
A. If they get the claim the company has against the government settled they will get $100,000; if they do not get my claim settled they lose their pay and get nothing. This would be a small amount.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. What advantage did you expect to derive when you promised Mr. Johnson to share your salary with him?
A. Because I knew him for a long time, and that he was driven from his home, and I thought needed assistance.
Q. You offered him, from sympathy, to share your salary with him?
A. I had no salary then; it was in case I got the roads turned over.
Q. What was he to have in that case?
A. Half of my salary; which he declined, as stated before.
Q. What advantage did you expect to derive by doing so?
A. I did not expect much benefit. It was no object to me; I could live without it.
Q. Then it was out of charity to Mr. Johnson that you made the offer to him?
A. It was not; but it was an act of gratitude. He had done me many favors before, and I thought I could aid him. He declined my offer very feelingly, as I thought.
Q. Have you been on intimate terms with Mr. Johnson since then?
A. I have, sir, to some extent.
Q. Would it be to the advantage of the persons holding the bonds of the railroads that the company should pay the interest?
A. Undoubtedly.
Q. What could the persons who hold these bonds claim when the roads were turned over?
A. Of course they would claim their interest on back coupons.
Q. Are not these Tennessee State bonds and coupons held in New York and paid in New York?

A. They are held in New York and other places, and made payable in New York.

Q. Had you ever any conversation with President Sloss, in which you told him that he was a fool to pay his indebtedness, and that you both could escape it by delay?

A. I might have said that, because I considered I had a just claim against the government which ought to be settled.

Q. Have you advised other railroads of the same thing?

A. I may have done so. I have, as I said, a just claim against the government, and others have also just claims, and I might have said if we made common cause we could make better arrangements. But I don't say I did so, or that I did not say so.

Q. You don't say you did or did not?

A. I don't remember distinctly.

Q. You made this claim to get payment for the use of your road during its occupation by the military?

A. Yes, and I think it a just and proper claim. I might have said to Mr. Sloss this or something similar. In fact, if I told him anything it was this: "The United States owes us a good deal, and we should insist on a settlement. There is no use in your making payments when there is money due to you."

By Mr. McCLURG:

Q. Is Senator Patterson a stockholder in either of the two roads of which you have been speaking, or is he a bondholder?

A. He is a stockholder in the Chattanooga road. I don't know anything about his holding bonds.

Q. What amount of stock does he hold?

A. Not a large amount, probably $3,000; it may be more or it may be less. I remember issuing him stock, but I do not remember the exact amount.

Q. When did you issue him stock?

A. Some time in 1865 or 1866.

Q. Name the month you did so.

A. I cannot do so. It was at the end of 1865 or beginning of 1866. I could tell from the books of the company if I was at home.

Q. Do you know if he holds stock in the Nashville and Northwestern?

A. If he does I don't know of it.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Have you ever drawn on the President; and if so, when?

A. I have drawn on him for $15,000 at one time, and $14,600 at another time.

Q. How did you come to draw on the President for that money? How came you to be mixed up with him in monetary matters?

A. I was not mixed up with him. I know nothing of the origin of the debt; but I heard that when he was military Governor of Tennessee he had an order to draw on the Union Bank and on the Planters' Bank for $200,000.

By Mr. MERCUR:

Q. From whom had he the order?

A. I do not know. The officers of the bank said if he drew that amount he would ruin, as I heard, the banks. We then let them off by paying $20,000 each. This money was, as I understand, for the use of the lunatic asylum and penitentiary, which had no money at the time, and also some to pay troops. He gave the banks an order on the United States which he endorsed himself individually. After he became President the parties became clamorous for their money. He said he thought they should not demand the money from him in full. He then asked them to compromise it; and he thought they ought to take $10,000 each. The banks sent on a Mr. White to arrange the matter. Mr. White returned with an offer from the President of $10,000 each. I told the President when he mentioned the matter to me, in the latter part of 1866, that I thought the banks would not take that offer, and that he should offer more. I telegraphed early in January, 1867, to him that the Union Bank claim could be settled for $15,000. He acceded to this proposition after having sent and received some telegrams from me, and he ordered me by telegram to draw on him for the amount. When I went to make the arrangement with the bank they would not take less than $16,250. I got fretted about it, and in order to be rid of it, having told him I could settle for the $15,000, I gave a check on my own private account in the bank for the $1,250 they claimed over what I said to him I could settle it for. This fact President Johnson knows nothing of ; and were it not for the manner in which you have compelled me to disclose it, as I am under oath, I would never have mentioned it, and President Johnson should never have known of it with my consent. The claim of the Planters' Bank had been previously paid by him. They took $14,600. The reason he claimed a compromise was, that when he got the money the currency of the bank was about twenty per cent. below par.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Then, as I understand, Governor Johnson was endorsing for the government and had to pay the money himself?

A. So I understand it.

Q. Do you know how Governor Johnson paid that?

A. I do not. I will here put the following telegrams in reference to the matter in evidence:

No. 1.

WASHINGTON, D. C., October 24, 1866.

To M. Burns:

Call on Dempsey Weaver and Joseph W. Allen, and if they will take the cost of twenty State bonds, which can now be had at 72 and 73, you will draw on me for the amount, payable at the First National Bank, Washington. Let me hear from you as soon as convenient.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

No. 2.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 13, 1866.

To Michael Burns:

Are you likely to make any arrangement with the Union Bank? Perhaps it would be better for me to authorize Mr. Allen to draw on me for the amount proposed in his letter to me some time since, which was $15,000.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

No. 3.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20, 1867.

To M. Burns:

You will make the arrangements as indicated in your despatch, and draw upon me for the amount.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

No. 4.

WASHINGTON, D. C, January 21, 1867.

To M. Burns:

Will Mr. Allen not take twenty State bonds for the claim? I have the bonds, and it would be much easier for me to let them go than to raise the currency. If not, draw for the $15,000, as stated in my former despatch.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

No. 5.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 22, 1867.

To M. Burns:

All right. Draw for $15,000.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Q. Explain this telegram No. 1.

A. This gentleman, Mr. Weaver, was asked whether he would take twenty bonds, or the amount that twenty bonds would bring—in other words, he could take twenty bonds or the proceeds of twenty bonds. Mr. Weaver took the proceeds of twenty bonds.

Q. Was this paper that was endorsed by Governor Johnson protested, to your knowledge?

A. In my opinion it was, because it was considerably past due, and banks are in the habit of protesting such matters.

Q. Tell us who was this paper drawn upon, if you can?

A. I think it was drawn in favor of Mr. Fowler. In fact, I think it was in this way: it was drawn by the Governor on the United States treasury in favor of Mr. Fowler, and endorsed by Mr. Fowler, and by Governor Johnson individually.

Q. You have already stated it was endorsed by the President.

A. I am speaking from memory. I think the President drew on the department in favor of Mr. Fowler, and Mr. Fowler endorsed it, and then Mr. Johnson became the individual last endorser. I think he signed it as military Governor and also as Andrew Johnson individually; and as signed by Andrew Johnson individually the banks came on him for payment.

Q. If I understand you, Mr. Johnson drew where he had no funds to pay?

A. I cannot say that.

By Mr. MERCUR:

Q. Mr. Johnson drew as Governor and endorsed individually?

A. Yes.

Q. Is your idea that the money could not have been raised on his draft as Governor without his individual endorsement?

A. I think it could; but I think he put down his name where he might as well have left it out.

Q. Have you any means of knowing whether he paid this debt out of his own funds or out of government funds?

A. I have no means of knowing. The original transaction I know nothing of except from hearsay.

Q. You know he drew the drafts, of $20,000 each, as military Governor, and endorsed them as an individual, and that he has paid them. That is all you know about it?

A. I don't know of my own knowledge, but that is my understanding. But I know that the drafts were paid that I drew on him.

Q. Did you pay the bank?

A. The draft was sent to the National Bank and he paid it here.

By Mr. MCCLURG:

Q. This telegram (No. 5) authorizes you to draw on him. Now, when you drew on him what did you take up?

A. His draft was sent on here to be taken up by him.

Q. You took it up yourself?

A. I did not take it up. Mr. Johnson telegraphed to me to draw on him for $15,000, and I did so. I told Mr. Allen to send the original draft on to the First National Bank here, enclosed in an envelope, so that the First National Bank should not know that it contained President Johnson's paper; and when the draft I drew on him in favor of the Union Bank was paid, the letter containing his original draft was to be handed over to him.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When you drew for this $15,000, in whose favor did you draw?

A. In favor of the Union Bank. I think that draft came to the First National Bank here, and was paid here.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Mr. Allen got his draft and was paid; but there was some paper there Mr. Johnson wanted?

A. He got it at the National bank.

By Mr. MCCLURG:

Q. What was that paper that Mr. Johnson got?

A. The paper he endorsed.

By Mr. CHANLER:

Q. He redeemed his own paper?

A. Yes.

By Mr. MCCLURG:

Q. For how much?

A. For twenty thousand dollars and interest.

Q. What was the discount then?

A. From twenty to twenty-five per cent.

By Mr. WASHBURN:

Q. Why did you not, after you had taken up this paper, retain it for your own safety?

A. I did not take it up, and because President Johnson paid his draft he ought to have it.

By Mr. CHANLER:

Q. Did you get any percentage or premium of this transaction?

A. No.

Q. By whose order was this paper forwarded to the First National Bank, if you had taken it up by draft?

A. You misunderstand me. I did not take it up by draft. The paper and draft came on to Washington together.

Q. Did you not take up this protested paper of Mr. Johnson's when you drew on the First National Bank?

A. I did not take it up; it was taken up here. I drew on him as instructed according to the despatches, and the original draft and my draft came on here together, with instructions that if my draft was paid, the original draft should be delivered up to him.

Q. What did you retain as your security?

A. I retained nothing. Mr. Allen, who was the cashier and trustee of the bank, put the original draft in an envelope, addressed to President Johnson, and also put the one which I drew on Mr. Johnson in another envelope, and sent them both together to the First National Bank here, with instructions that when the draft of $15,000 was paid by President Johnson, the other was to be returned. There was an understanding between the cashier of the bank and I, that in case Mr. Johnson should not pay the $15,000, the original paper was to be returned to the Union Bank and mine canceled.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Were both drafts settled for the same amount?

A. One was settled for $14,600, and the other for $15,000, by Mr. Johnson.

Q. What prevented the Union Bank from drawing, themselves, on the President for the money?

A. Merely the telegram I received.

Q. Then why did you go into the matter?

A. Because I was a friend.

By Mr. CHANLER:

Q. You did not wish to change the arrangement in the telegram?
A. I did not wish to do so.
Q. It was an act of courtesy on your part?
A. Yes, as I was certain that the amount would be paid.

Permit me to add that when Mr. Johnson became President, and he endeavored to lessen the expenses of the government, he found these roads were costing him a vast amount of money; and as the war was over, and he had no need of the roads, in order to get rid of this great expense, he deemed it prudent to turn these roads over to their owners, I presume with the advice of his Cabinet, stipulating these companies should transport troops and supplies over the road, giving credit for it on the bond which they gave the government for the stock turned over to them. They also stipulated the companies should convey the mails. All of those services have been faithfully performed by the roads. When these bonds were given, the companies had no means of discovering how much was due them by the government. In accordance with the executive order of the 8th of August, 1865, they were led to believe justice would be done them, and that the government would act with justice and generosity towards them, as they were of great advantage in developing the resources of the country, and restoring its commerce and industry; and, also, as a great many of the stockholders were orphans and widows, the companies trusted a fair and equitable settlement would be made by the United States government. Fully relying on the justice and magnanimity of the United States they made the purchase referred to.

M. BURNS.

I append a correct list of the directors of the road:

List of directors elected August 15, 1865, to serve for one year.

Davidson county directors.—James Wood, William T. Berry, J. B. Knowles, Anson Nelson, Aris Brown, J. M. Hill, N. E. Alloway; M. Burns elected president.
Rutherford county.—Levi Wade, J. H. Grant.
Bedford.—Hon. E. Cooper, Thomas C. Whitesides.
Franklin county.—J. F. Anderson.
Coffee.—W. S. Huggins.
Pennsylvania.—J. Edgar Thompson.
Charleston.—Henry Cobia, Thomas Ryan.
Georgia railroad.—Hon. J. P. King.
On behalf of the State.—Hon. William Bosson, T. C. Caldwell.

The following were elected August 15, 1866, for one year:

Davidson county.—William T. Berry, Anson Nelson, Sam. Watkins, James M. Murrel, S. D. Morgan, Aris Brown, W. F. Cooper; M. Burns elected president.
State directors.—Hon. William Bosson, Thomas H. Caldwell.
Rutherford.—Levi Wade, E. A. Ruble.
Bedford.—Hon. E. Cooper, Thomas C. Whitesides.
Franklin.—J. F. Anderson.
Coffee.—William S. Huggins.
Charleston.—Henry Cobia, M. McGrath.
Georgia railroad.—Hon. J. P. King.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, November 1, 1867.

SIR: In compliance with the request contained in your letter of the 21st ultimo, I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the information of the Judiciary Committee, a schedule of railroad property captured by the United States forces during the late war and subsequently returned to the several railroad companies owning it.

By order of the Secretary of War.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ED. SCHRIVER,
Inspector General.

E. G. BOWDOIN, Esq.,
Clerk Judiciary Committee House of Representatives.

QUARTERMASTER GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., October 30, 1867.

GENERAL: I have the honor to return herewith the letter, with enclosure, of Mr. E. G Bowdoin, clerk Judiciary Committee House Representatives, referred to this office October 22, 1867, and to enclose statement of railroad property captured by the military authorities and returned to the several railroad companies at the close of the war.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES THOMAS,
Brevet Major General United States Army,
Assistant Quartermaster General in charge

Brevet Major General ED. SCHRIVER,
Inspector General United States Army.

SCHEDULE OF RAILROAD PROPERTY CAPTURED BY THE MILITARY AUTHORITIES DURING THE WAR AND SUBSEQUENTLY RETURNED TO THE SEVERAL RAILROAD COMPANIES OWNING IT.

Orange and Alexandria Railroad Company.—158 tons railroad iron, 70 car wheels, 1 wiring machine, 3 planing machines, 1 set sheet-iron tools, 1 pair shears, 100 feet shafting, 3 planers, assorted, 3 drill presses, 1 fanning machine, 1 bolt cutting machine, 2 horn stakes, 1 set pipe tools, 2 hammers, 2 lathes, assorted, 1 locomotive engine.

Manassas Gap Railroad Company.—538 tons railroad iron, 18 car wheels, 5 lathes, assorted, 1 machine shop and building, 3 circular saws and frames, 32 pairs car wheels and axles, 2 box cars, 1 drill press, 2 planing machines, 1 stationary engine, 1 transfer grindstone, 1 crane for blacksmith's forge, 8 cars, 3 flat cars.

Alexandria, London, and Hampshire Railroad Company.—162 $\frac{17}{40}$ tons railroad iron, 1 lathe, assorted, 1 locomotive engine, 10 track bars, 6 picks, 3 hammers, 1 planer, assorted, 6 cars, 6 shovels, 1 track gauge.

Richmond and York River Railroad Company.—538 $\frac{134}{140}$ tons railroad iron.

Norfolk and Petersburg Railroad Company.—1408 tons railroad iron, 1 car body, old, 998 pounds steel springs, 4,640 pounds old tin, 33,080 pounds cast iron, scrap, 8 cars, 31,959 pounds wrought scrap iron and bars, 8,059 pounds castings, 7,958 pounds old axles, 42,900 pounds old car wheels.

Seaboard and Roanoke Railroad Company —508 $\frac{3}{4}\frac{3}{4}$ tons railroad iron, 66,394 pounds wrought iron scrap and bars, 71,258 pounds castings, 28,614 pounds old axles, 112.157 pounds old car wheels, 2,640 feet old railroad iron, sidings, 6 flat cars, 11 cars, 4,541 pounds steel springs, 8,533 pounds old tin, 59,336 pounds cast iron scrap, 156,463 pounds old railroad iron, 2 box cars.

Raleigh and Gaston Railroad Company.—25 augers, 340 car axles, 21 hand car axles, 7 driving axles, 7 anvils, 12 carpenter's benches, 135 pounds brass, 3 drafting boards, 6 crucibles, 1 cupola iron, 1 cupola brass, 3 truck cars, 38 box cars, 40 drills, 1 passenger car, 1 baggage car, 11 box cars, 16 flat cars, 87 copper tubes, 1 stationary engine, 1,924 pounds brass, 1 boiler, fifty horse power, 1 locomotive boiler, 1 crane, 9 chills with small flasks, 3 chills with large flasks, 1 bucket and rope, 27 flat cars, 2 locomotive engines, "Raleigh" and "Halifax," 1 locomotive engine, "Tornado," 1 locomotive engine, 303 iron foundry flasks, 72 brass foundry flasks, 1 steam hammer, 771 pounds bar lead, 130 pounds black lead, 6 lathes, 3,956 feet lumber, 1 mill blacking and belt, 1 bruising machine, 1 bruising machine with augers complete, 3½ kegs nails, 45 gallons oil resin, 1 force pump, and pulleys and shafting, 5 platform cars, 1 set of patterns, 43 sets of patterns, new, 1,320 coupling pins, 1 press drill, 800 feet rope, 1 screw plate and die, 5 pounds soapstone, 4 grindstones, 3 fans, blower and belt, 6 blacksmith's forges, 1 frame gig saw, 225 hammer handles, 80 assorted handles, 16,939 pounds assorted iron, 45,262 pounds scrap iron, 11,000 pounds Scotch pig iron, 48,314 pounds old cast iron, 7 iron foundry ladles, 7 brass foundry ladles, 3 sets machinery for lathes, 1 machine for burnishing iron, 1 machine for shaping iron, 1 machine for planing iron, 1 machine for slitting iron, 1 mortising machine, 2 foot mortising machines, 2 wood planing machines, 156 reamers, taps, &c., 165 feet machine shop shafting and pulleys, 60 feet car shop shafting and pulleys, 7 stoves, 7 bench screws, 4 gig saws, 1 set brass foundry tools, 1 set iron foundry tools, 1 set blacksmith's tools, 2 saw jacks, 1 hand vice, 125 assorted wrenches, 29 tons car wheels, 6 driving wheels, 12 trees for drivers, 8 pairs car trucks, 2 engine trucks, 10 bench vices, 1 finishing vice, 10 screw wrenches, 390 car wheels.

Wilmington and Weldon Railroad Company.—10 anvils, 10 sets blacksmiths' tools, 1 apparatus for welding rails, 230 axles, wheels, &c., 1,200 pounds brass and copper, 2,010 feet belting 88 Bristol brick, 1 engine bell, 1 bolt cutter, 1 top and die, 2 hand bellows, 2 fan blowers, 625 pounds old chain, 300 tons iron, 5,000 pounds bar iron, 1,000 pounds sheet iron,

2 hydraulic jacks, 10 small jacks, 25 locomotive tires, 16 pounds lampblack, 3 coach lamps, 6 lathes, 1 locomotive used as stationary engine, 1 dubbing machine, 1 tenoning machine, 1 moulding machine, 1 cupola, 15 chisels, 16 con plates, 300 pounds clamp iron, half pound chalk, 2,280 pounds iron castings, 54 drills, 2 crane derricks, 1 drop derrick, 1 stationary engine, 10 iron flasks, 8 iron forges, 3 grindstones, 3 gong cobs, 1 trip hammer, 2 sheets boiler iron, 51 reamers, 5 circular saws, 1 gig and frame saw, 350 feet shafting and pulleys, 1 stock and die, 1 pair brass tongs, 12 driving wheel tires, 2 ventilators, 47 rolls webbing, 3 planing mills, 1 coal mill, 700 pounds nails, 1 dozen packages nails, 1 planer, 3 chuck plates, 4 punches, 9 pulleys, 150 pounds paint, 25 pounds paint, 100 pounds putty, 2 drill presses, 1 wheel press, 100 pounds rivets, 100 pounds rope, 15 pounds rosin, 41 gross screws, 1 saw mill, (complete,) 1 pump, 3 cotton steelyards, 116 taps, 2 chests tools, (incomplete,) 100 pounds burnt amber, 13 bench vices, 90 car wheels, 5 driving wheels, 1 office table, 2 baggage cars, 10 locomotive engines, 1 office clock, 9 passenger cars, 9 box cars.

Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company.—1 anvil, 1 bolt cutter, 1 cupola, 1 stationary engine, 1 stream pump, 1 drill press, 1 grindstone and fixtures, 3 passenger cars, 1 mail car, 12 box cars, 1 iron safe, 5,000 pounds wrought scrap iron, 1 bellows, 1 desk, 2 fans, 5 lathes, 1 planer, 1 wheel press, 1 shaper, 1 baggage car, 12 flat cars, 5 locomotive engines, 50,000 pounds cast scrap iron.

North Carolina Railroad Company.—1 mail car, 12 box cars, 2 truck cars 4 passenger cars, 4 flat cars.

New Orleans, Opelousas, and Great Western Railroad Company.—9 locomotives engines, 3 passenger cars, 2 caboose cars, 3 box cars, 1 wood car, 1 horse car, 2 stock cars, 4 platform cars, 13 work benches, 37,483 pounds steel springs, 9 jack screws, 12,446 pounds car stock, 1 saw table, 44 mandrils, 774 pounds mandrils, 1 press, 1 table, 5 axles, 21 heading tools, 3 sledges and handles, 1 traveller, 6 cup tools, 1 framing block, 2 iron rams, 3 swedge blocks, 510 pounds blacksmith tools, 1 lot of patterns, 2,030 pounds old bolts and nuts, 181 feet gas pipe, 2 hand cars, 40,070 pounds old iron, 370 tires, 1 armour, 2 railroad maps, 1 portable locker, 11 push cars, 1 drill press, 7 pinch bars, 259 car wheels, 3 wood car catchers, 2 iron car catchers, 13 taps and dies, 1 wheel and stand for bridge, 60,670 pounds old bridge castings, 3 pumps, 1 clock, 54 wrenches, 69 drills, 27 reamers, 5 sets stocks and dies, 1 large oil can, 58 pairs tongs, 1 surface gauge for planer, 2 face plates, 1 cistern, 2 pair callipers, 5 swing tools, 395 car axles, 2 models for steamboats, 1 portable engine and boiler, 5 lathes, 6 ash rakes, 3 engine truck wheels, 4 old pumps and stands, 1 planing machine, 1 bolt cutter, 2 stationary engines and boiler, 689 pounds railroad iron, 7,249 pounds burnt car springs, 1 steel chisel bar, 4 desks, 95 taps, (assorted,) 29 taps, 1 ratchet brace, 1 spirit level, 3 fire pokers, 1 cupboard, 4 parallel bars, 106 lathe tools, 1 brass faucet, 1 block and fall, 7 dogs, 1 spanner, 5 boring bars, 6 vices, 16 counter borers, 12 caulking tools, 1 coppersmith forge and pipe, 1 set rollers for boiler makers, 40 feet turn-table, 1 pound sienna, 2 cranes, 13 fullers, 2 button sets, 3 anvils, iron parts of trucks, 6 cutters, 19 chases, 2 large racket jacks, 10 punches, 11 trucks, 1 paint mill, 1 iron tank, 3 forges, 3 flatters, 6 sets hammers, 11 chisels, 26 swedges, parts of trucks.

New Orleans, Jackson, and Great Northern Railroad Company.—2 box cars, 2 passenger cars, 1 platform car, 2 sets gas fixtures, 12 book and ticket cases, 5 desks, 1 iron safe, 2 flat cars, 1 baggage car, 2 tables, 1 set drawers, 3 armours, 1 steam gauge adjuster.

Edgefield and Kentucky Railroad Company.—2 locomotive engines.

Montgomery and West Point Railroad Company.—1 locomotive engine.

Macon and Western Railroad Company.—1 box car.

Nashville and Northwestern Railroad Company.—2 locomotive engines.

Tennessee and Alabama Railroad Company.—6 locomotive engines, 1 portable engine, 1 boiler iron punch, 1 turn-table and foundation, 1 cylinder boring machine.

Rogersville and Jefferson Railroad Company.—1 box car, 1 flat car.

Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company.—1 locomotive engine.

Southwestern Railroad Company.—1 box car.

Southern Railroad Company, of Mississippi.—1 locomotive engine, 2 box cars.

East Tennessee and Georgia Railroad Company.—2 locomotive engines, 1 box car, 1 wheel press, 1 pair car trucks, 1 flat car.

Mississippi Central Railroad Company.—1 box car.

Memphis and Ohio Railroad Company.—41 tons scrap iron, car wheels, 6 locomotive engines, 5 tons scrap iron, axles, 1 ton scrap iron, 4 frogs, 10 tons railroad iron bars, 20 flat cars, 4 box cars, 8 tons scrap iron, wheels and axles, 2 tons scrap iron, 2 trucks, 1 wheel press.

East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad Company.—7 locomotive engines, 4 passenger cars, 15 box cars, 4 flat cars, 17 monkey wrenches, 10 packing wrenches, 1 round house, 1 machine shop, 1 blacksmith ship, 3 engine lathes, 2 upright drills, 1 stationary engine and boiler, (complete,) 6 blacksmith anvils, 1 wood lathe, 1 rope and tackle, 1 wood planer, 1 circular saw and frame, 1 rip saw and frame, 1 turn table, 1 blacksmith bellows, 1 crane for blacksmith shop, 1 pair platform scales, 2 ratchet drills, 9 wood benches, 9 wood bench screws, 9 wood hand screws, 2 wood stoves, 2 lever jacks, 1 letter press, 1 water bucket, 2 oil cans, (small,) 2 oil cans, (large.) 2 cylinder head-wrenches, 1 car shop, 1 wheel borer, 1 small planer, 1 engine driver lathe, 1 bolt-cutting machine, 1 jig saw and frame, 1 paint mill, 1 grindstone and frame, 1 boring machine, 5 blacksmith vices, 1 tank plate punch, 1 wheel press No. 3, 1 black walnut desk and table, 1,792 pounds brass castings, 4 chilled tires, 1 grindstone, 1 pair engine trucks, 2 boring machines, 4 parallel vices, 2 jack screws, 11 joints stove pipe, 1 clock, 2 sets screws, 1 cold chisel, 2 jacks and levers, 1 hammer, 2 sets screw wrench, 1 follower wrench, 2 red flags, 2 jacks, 1 office chair, 2 pinch bars, 1 pair tongs, 1 rod wrench, 2 spanners, 1 hose wrench, 1 tallow can, 1 office desk.

Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company.—4 locomotive engines, 2 engines with tenders, 1 clock regulator, 4 flat cars.

Memphis and Charleston Railroad Company.—2 passenger cars, 1 portable cylinder borer, 2 screw jacks, 1 set small stove pipe rollers, 8 locomotive engines, 10 box cars, 1 bar borer, 1 test and gauge pump, 1 set large rollers, 7 buildings, 2 flat cars, 1 clock regulator, 6 desks, (counting and office,) 4 cases, 3 iron safes, (assorted,) 370 tons scrap iron, 1 black mill coal, 96 trucks, (warehouse, hand and baggage,) 1 coal grinder, 13 water tanks, 5 chairs, 3 letter presses, 5 draughting and office tables, 1 brass furnace, 1 wheel press, 72 car axles, 43 car wheels, 1 cistern and frame.

Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad Company.—9 locomotive engines, 2 flat cars, 16 water tanks, 5 planers, 3 saws, 1 lathe, 1 stationary engine and boiler, 1 counter shaft and pulley, 1 locomotive tank, 1 hand wheel press, 6 box cars, 1 passenger car, 1 screw-cutting machine, 3 morticing machines, 1 rabbitting machine, 3 moulding machines, 1 tongue and grooving machine, 1 lumber truck, 1 grooving machine, 164½ feet shafting.

Western and Atlantic Railroad Company.—21 locomotive engines, 1 passenger car, 2 flat cars, 1 stationary engine and boiler, 2 portable engines and boilers, 4 forges, anvils, bellows, and tools complete, 1 set rollers, 1 compound planer, 2 lathes, carriers, tools, shafting, and belt, 5 engine truck wheel, 3 box cars, 5 flat push or dump cars, 14 machinery cars, 2 horns, 6 vices, 8 sets machinists' tools, 1 screw cutter, dies, and tops complete, 1 grindstone and fixtures, 1 lot 1,000 wrenches.

Georgia Central Railroad Company.—1 iron safe, 14 locomotive engines, 10 locomotive tenders, 7 passenger cars, 113 box cars, 15 baggage cars, 12 stock cars, 15 bench vices, 2 wheelbarrows, 50 platform cars, 11 conductors' cars, 480 car wheels, 117 car axles, 14 wheels on axles, 8 sledge hammers, 4 sets blacksmiths' tools, 9 jack screws, 2 bolt cutters, 2 screw-cutting lathes, 1 sliding lathe, 1 pair boiler maker's shears, 1 pattern maker's lathe, 6 chalk lines, 10 auger handles, 33 bench stops, 96 glass lamp chimneys, 24 paint brushes, 2,550 wood screws, 3,850 carriage bolts, 35 bars flat steel, 100 bars round iron, 310 bars flat iron, 20 bars square iron, 4 bundles hoop iron, 400 brass car locks, 60 mineral knobs, 168 clothes hooks, 40 pairs strap hinges, 100 bell rope bushings, 115 bell rope rollers, 30 lamp bushings, 1 drill press, 1 horizontal drill machine, 1 vertical drill machine, 3 wheel drawing machines, 2 sets boiler and sheet-iron rollers, 1 stationary engine, 1 chisel and handle, 10 circular saws, 1 Fairbanks's scales, 8 oil and turpentine cans, 1,175 gross assorted screws, 7,500 fire bolts, 42 pounds nuts, 1,800 pounds washers, 1,300 pounds bolts, 4,700 pounds car brasses, 260 iron door bars, 144 door locks, 52 boxes window glass, 38 pounds finishing nails, 300 belt clasps, 30 hasps and staples, 25 car hangers, 528 sash stoppers, 1,320 sash lifters, 20 stove bushings, 28 sets plated car seat findings, 28 sets brass car seat findings, 15 car door plates, 125 pounds block tin, 420 pairs cast butts, 120 noiseless pulleys, 6 assorted files, 18 cast-iron urinals, 10 shackles, 90 pounds glue, 25 pounds borax, 50 pounds sulphur, 171 pounds white lead, 75 pounds umber, 260 pounds yellow ochre, 150 pounds black lead, 378 pounds chalk, 706 pounds fire-proof paint, 15 pounds India red, 33 gallons boiled oil, 53,928 feet sawed timber, 120 feet 7-inch belting, 24 ventilators, 7 pieces India-rubber belting, 1 piece leather belting, 13 pounds brass wire, 24 soldering irons, 72 sash fastenings, 6 sheets tin, 10 time books, 90 volute car springs, 113 drop car springs, 45 bumper car springs, 180 India-rubber car springs, 8 English car springs, 16 steel car springs, 120 pounds lampblack, 20 pounds pumice stone, 240 pounds Spanish brown, 120 pounds whiting, 100 pounds litharge, 287 pounds tallow, 85,000 pounds scrap iron, 20 feet 2¼-inch belting.

Memphis and Little Rock Railroad Company.—6 locomotive engines.

San Antonio and Mexican Gulf Railroad Company.—2 engines, 5 box cars, 15 trucks for box cars, 16 platform cars, 2 hand cars.

INDEX.

A.

Adamson, letter.....2, 15, 450, 463, 468, 470, 471, 858
Appointments in the recess of Congress..79, 83, 336, 339, 472, 496, 542, 660, 685, 696, 931, 983
Abandoned property, restoration of.... 84, 103, 111, 115, 128, 298, 512, 518, 617, 694, 761, 795, 802, 811, 817, 1086
Abandoned and confiscated property in Louisiana, statement of proceeds of..149, 512, 518, 761
Abandoned and confiscated property in North Carolina..... 154
Assassination.....282, 375, 379, 534, 673
Andrews, Edward W., testimony of..... 316
Andrews's letter, West Virginia deserters.....317, 361, 407, 494, 541
Abandoned and confiscated property in South Carolina..... 320
Appointments for political reasons.....333, 340, 384, 619, 866, 878
Andrews, Samuel J., testimony of..... 361
Atzerodt, confession of.....394, 680
Anderson, Joseph R., pardon case..... 417
Attorney General's order to suspend all trials for treason in Maryland..... 449
Arkansas, appointment of Hon. John S. Phelps as military Governor 733
Atlanta and Macon railroad, cost of..... 759
Abandoned lands, Speed's written opinion as to..... 811
Agricultural college scrip and the rebellious States.....815, 816
Abandoned and captured property, full account of amounts received and paid out...823, 860
Appointments, post office, in the recess of the Senate, list of..... 990

B.

Baker, L. C., testimony of.....2, 29, 32, 449
Baker's interview with Johnson about Mrs. Cobb..... 10, 13
Baker's book, suppression of.....13, 371, 452
Barr, Thomas J.....15, 1108
Booth's diary.....28, 32, 280, 275, 323, 324, 408, 450, 457, 483, 672
Booth, his death.....29, 323, 325, 408, 479, 487
Beckwith, General Amos, testimony of..... 33
Bartle, George, testimony of..... 67
Burns, Michael, testimony of.....163, 1124
Burns's order from Johnson to bring out cotton..... 173
Burns, Michael, his disloyalty.....177, 498
Black, Hon. J. S., testimony of..... 271
Blockade running.....288, 294, 298, 319
Baird, General, his despatch..... 398
Booth's burial place.....409, 452, 486, 679
Burton, General H. S., testimony of..... 415
Baker, Lieutenant L. B., testimony of..... 479
Booth, articles found on his person..... 488, 677
Booth's letter to the Intelligencer.....490, 532, 783
Blair, Hon. Montgomery, testimony of..... 586
Booth and the assassination..... 673
Booth's letter to Dr. Stewart..... 677
Booth's letters..... 777
Baltimore, Johnson's desire to use the military power in..... 838
Barr, Thomas J., testimony of..... 1108

C.

Cobb, Mrs.....5, 367, 345, 313, 493, 501, 589, 664
Cahill, pardon of..... 8, 466
Colorado, admission of.....18, 21, 23, 979
Cooper, Hon. Edward.....18, 21, 23
Chaffee, Hon. Jerome B., testimony of..... 21
Cooper, Hon. Edward, testimony of..... 23

Cotton, release of, McCurdy case..... 36
Cotton, release of, Harrison case..... 36
Cotton, release of, Jolly case..... 38
Cotton, release of, Wm. Smith case..... 40
Cotton, release of, George case..... 41
Cotton, release of, Mrs. Bonham case..... 41
Citizen, New York, article..... 42
Capehart, Charles E, testimony of..... 51
Creecy, C. Eaton, testimony of..... 82
Cox, of Georgetown, case of, abandoned property..... 89
Circular No. 13, President's construction of..... 90
Circular No. 13, copy of..... 95
Circular No. 8..... 103
Circular No. 4..... 112
Circular No. 10..... 118
Circular No. 11..... 119
Circular No. 13..... 120
Circular No. 3..... 121
Circular No. 2..... 122
Circular No. 5..... 123
Circular No. 15..... 124, 523
Confederate specie..... 291, 296
Conger, Colonel E. J., testimony of..... 323
Chambersburg, post office appointment case..... 342
Canby, General E. R. S., testimony of..... 364
Cotton frauds, Violet case..... 365
Congress, meeting of, after surrender of Lee's army..... 401, 611
Canby's, General, nullification of rebel State authorities..... 411
Confiscation..... 420, 428, 561, 795, 817
Confiscation, opinions of Attorney General Stanbery..... 420, 561
Clay, C. C., jr., case of, relative to..... 428, 500, 811
Clay, C. C., jr., Attorney General's order to suspend trial for treason..... 448, 550
Castleman, Ben., and the Canada letters..... 461
Caruthers, Charles H., saw Adamson letter..... 471
Chandler, Wm. E., testimony of..... 472, 660
Chandler, Hon. Lucius H., testimony of..... 502
Chester, Samuel P., and the assassination..... 535
Coyle, John F., and the Evans letter..... 541, 618
Chase, Hon. S P., testimony of..... 544
Chase's conversation with Johnson as to trial of Davis..... 544
Chase's proclamation requested of the President..... 549
Chase's letters to Judge Underwood..... 585
Coyle, John F., testimony of..... 618
Cobb, Joseph R., testimony of..... 664
Cipher, confederate..... 675
Cotton, surrender of..... 688
Compensation to officers who had not taken the test oath..... 663, 697
Compensation of military Governor of Tennessee..... 725
Chattanooga and Knoxville railroad, cost of..... 744
Chattanooga and Atlanta railroad, cost of..... 751
Confiscated and restored property, cases of..... 761, 774
Confiscation, General Howard's opinion as to..... 762
Circular, Treasury, No. 16, as to taxes in rebellious States..... 771
Confiscation, opinion of Attorney General Speed..... 795, 807
Confiscation, effect of pardon as to..... 796
Confiscation cases, relative to..... 809
Confiscated property, amount of covered into the treasury of the United States..... 817
Captured and abandoned property, full account of amounts received and paid out..... 823
Congress, legality of, President's views..... 833
Corson, John, testimony of..... 858
Claims paid by order of the President, eight cases..... 870
Colorado, President's veto message..... 979

D.

Devlin, pardon of..... 8, 466, 664
Doolittle, Senator, and the general order business..... 17, 1110
Davis's complicity in assassination..... 30
Davis, J. D., case of..... 84, 96
Davis, J. E., pardon of..... 86

Davis, George, case of 155
Davis, Jefferson, relative to his surrender .. 371, 379, 396, 413, 414, 415, 416, 421, 502, 544, 554, 578, 644, 779
Davis, Jefferson, reward for his capture 379
Davis, Jefferson, relative to his trial 379, 381, 397, 421, 502, 544, 554, 578, 644, 779, 798, 814, 977
Davis, Attorney General Speed's opinion as to his trial 422
Davis, Attorney General Stanbery's opinion as to his trial 423, 554
Davis's bail 579, 779
Doetch, Julius E, testimony of 788
Documents, report of sub-committee to select 967

E.

Evans, Hon. John, testimony of 18
Edson, William, pardon case 467
Evarts, Hon. William M., testimony of 644
Eckert, General T. T., testimony of 671
Examiner, Richmond, suppression of 700
Exhibits to Postmaster General Randall's testimony 767
Edmunds, Hon. J. M., testimony of 816
Eight cases claims paid by order of the President 870

F.

Flint, Henry M., testimony of 45, 419
Florence, Colonel T. B., and the West Virginia deserters 57, 273, 493
Fullerton, General Howard's instructions to 96
Fullerton's questions of General Howard 99
Fullerton, General J. S., testimony of 99, 512
Fullerton's instructions from the President 100, 105, 107
Frazer, Trenholm & Co 116, 287, 298, 299, 318
Fowler, Hon. J. S., testimony of 175
Florence, T. B., testimony of 273
Ford, John T., testimony of 532

G.

General order business in New York 15, 1108, 1110
Goodloe, Daniel R., testimony of 149
Geiger, Joseph H., testimony of 264
Gillmore's nullification of proclamations of Governors of Georgia, South Carolina, and Florida 410
Gobright, L. A., testimony of 525
Gayle, George W., his offer for assassination 564
Gayle, George W., his pardon 564, 565
Greeley, Hon. Horace, testimony of 778
Grant, General U. S., testimony of 825, 838
Grant, his opinions as to Lee and his soldiers as to the effect of their parole 825
Grant, his opinion that the provisional governments were to be temporary only 835
Grant, his recommendation for Lee's pardon 836

H.

Howell, pardon case 9, 492, 345
Holt, General Joseph, testimony of 28, 285
Halpine, Charles G., testimony of 42
Hunter, William, testimony of 66
Huntington, J. L. W., testimony of 80
Howard, General O. O., testimony of 84, 761
Howard's, General, visit to New Orleans in case of Fullerton 97
Howard's, General, answers to Fullerton's questions 99
Huntington, William S, testimony of 178
Hunter, Hon J. W., testimony of 264
Hampton, Wade, appointment case 341
Howell, pardon case 345, 388, 586, 664
Hubbard, John B., testimony of 394
Harris, Mrs. Sallie, and Adamson letter 450, 468, 858
Hamilton, General, appointment of, as military Governor of Texas 735

Howard, General, opinion as to confiscation 762
Holden's letter as to State property 769
Hubbell, Hon. James R., testimony of 814
Harlan, Hon. James, testimony of 815
Hillyer, General William S., testimony of 845
Hillyer's conversation with the President 845
Howard, General, report to Secretary of War relative to restoration of abandoned property 1086
Holden, appointment of, as provisional Governor of North Carolina 1093

I.

Internal revenue officers, appointment of 71, 78, 80, 82, 384, 660, 864, 879, 983, 985
Internal revenue, changes in officers, effect of 80, 865, 878
Ireland, Robert, testimony of 315
Intelligencer, Booth's letter to 783

J.

Johnson and Mrs. Cobb 8
Johnson and Mrs. Perry 15
Johnson and the Colorado Senators 19, 21
Johnson's conversation with Parsons 35
Johnson's conversation with Sharkey 41
Johnson's opposition to the constitutional amendment 42, 269, 300, 630, 1122
Johnson's conversation with Halpine 42
Johnson's questions to Attorney General as to constitutionality of 39th Congress 46
Johnson's conversation with Flint (Druid) 46
Johnson's conversation with Fullerton 100
Johnson's conversation with Starbuck 156
James, John H., testimony of 159
Johnson's notes or drafts 163, 174, 175, 178, 179, 180, 182
Johnson's conversations with Michael Burns 166
Johnson's order to Burns to bring out cotton 173
Johnson's bank account 178, 179, 180, 182
Johnson's transfer of Nashville and Northwestern railroad 187
Johnson's order of August 8 for the relinquishment of railroads in Tennessee 189
Johnson's order of October 14, 1865, extending order of August 8 to all roads in General Thomas's command 190
Johnson's extension of order to all roads 191
Johnson's order suspending collection of money due from Nashville and Chattanooga railroad 24
Johnson's order extending the time of payment to Edgefield and Kentucky railroad 243
Johnson's conversations with Rush R. Sloan 269
Johnson's veto message by Black 271
Johnson's conversations with Black 273
Johnson's conversation with Weatherby 299
Johnson's order restoring property in South Carolina 320
Johnson's policy 377, 401
Jones, Samuel S., testimony of 387
Johnson's order for the surrender of Davis 414, 415, 416
Johnson, Colonel Robert, testimony of 492
Johnson's conversations with District Attorney Chandler in reference to Jeff. Davis 503
Johnson's speeches on his tour 526
Johnson's conversations with Chief Justice Chase as to the trial of Davis 544
Johnson, Robert, and the Howell pardon 591
Johnson's despatch to Herron 629
Johnson's bonds 634, 643
Johnston-Sherman treaty 706
Johnson's appointment as military Governor of Tennessee 725
Johnson's conversation with Stanley Matthews at Cincinnati 781
Johnson's declaration that the country was to be saved through the old democratic party 781
Johnson's conversation with Hubbell 814
Johnson's desire to have the leaders of the rebellion punished 827
Johnson's conversations with General Grant 825
Johnson's opinion as to Lee and his soldiers as to the effect of their parole 827, 833
Johnson's desire to use the military power in Baltimore 838
Johnson's certificates of deposit 868

K.

Kelly, pardon case 10, 594
Kohnstamm, pardon case 406, 417
King, W. H. C., and the despatch to Herron & Voorhies 628
Knoxville and Bristol railroad, cost of 756

L.

Letter, Johnson to Davis 2, 15
Letter, Johnson for Mrs. Cobb 5
Letter, Johnson to Speck 5
Letter, Delavan as to Colorado 21, 26
Letter, Chaffee and Evans to Cooper, relative to Colorado 27
Letters, Davis's, in Canada, abstract of 28, 29, 30, 282, 805, 460
Ledger, Philadelphia, article 45, 419
Leake, Johnson's order in case of 88, 115, 515
Louisiana, Freedmen's Bureau in 103, 512
Louisiana, proceeds of abandoned and confiscated property in 149, 512
Lancaster post office, appointment case 344
Lincoln's, President, last order 400
Lincoln, President, and the Virginia legislature 403, 412
Lincoln's telegram to General Weitzel 412
Long, Colonel Andrew K., testimony of 586
Louisiana, appointment of Shepley as military Governor 732
Letter, Holden's, as to State property 769
Letter, Seward's, as to Johnson's administration in Tennessee 815
Letter from War Department relative to return of captured property to railroad companies 966

M.

Matchett saw Adamson's letter 15, 470
McEwen, Colonel Matthew, testimony of 56
McGinnis, jr., John, commission of, as minister to Sweden 66, 67
McCulloch, Hon. Hugh, testimony of 71, 604, 680, 860
Moore, T. S., testimony of 306
McClellan, appointment case 342
Munroe, John T., Mayor, suspension of 411, 412
Maryland, Attorney General's order to suspend all trials for treason in 449, 553
Moore, William G., testimony of 540
Morrow, Colonel Robert, testimony of 634
Military railroads, Wright's report on cost of 736
Memphis and Charleston railroad, cost of 742
Mobile and Ohio railroad, cost of 758
Military railroads in the division of the Mississippi, total cost of 760
Matthews, Stanley, testimony of 780
Matthews's conversation with Johnson at Cincinnati 761
Matthews, John, testimony of 782
Maryland, President's desire to use the military power in Baltimore in 1866 838
Military sales, laws authorizing and regulating, in what cases 884
Military Governors appointed in Mr. Lincoln's administration 885
Military railroads, sales of property 899
Military railroads, record of appraisers 916
McCallum's report of railroad property of the United States 972
Message, President's, relative to appointments 981
Message, President's, veto of Colorado bill 979
Message, President's, relative to pardons, list of 992
Message, President's, relative to New Orleans riots 1052
Message, President's, relative to modification of test oath 1089
Message, President's, relative to constitutional amendment 1122

N

New Orleans riots 33, 398, 531, 628, 635, 641, 1052
North Carolina, abandoned and confiscated property in; Piedmont railroad 149, 151, 420
North Carolina, public sentiment in 150, 155
Northwestern railroad, surrender and cost of 159, 187, 209, 220
Nashville and Northwestern railroad 165, 178, 187, 192, 209, 746
Nashville and Chattanooga railroad 165, 240, 739

Nashville and Northwestern railroad, occupation of, by General Sherman 216
North Carolina, property turned over to the provisional government 383, 681, 691
Neiman, D. H., appointment case 386
North Carolina provisional government, expenses of 704
North Carolina, appointment of Edward Stanley as military Governor 728
Nashville and Chattanooga railroad, cost of 739
Nashville and Decatur railroad, cost of 742
Nashville and Northwestern railroad, cost of 746
Nashville and Clarksville railroad, cost of 755
North Carolina, Holden's letter as to State property 769
North Carolina agricultural college scrip 815, 816
North Carolina provisional government, establishment of 1093

O.

Orange and Alexandria railroad 194

P.

Pardon of Baker's convicts 8, 12, 466
Pardon brokerage, Mrs. Cobb 8, 313, 345, 387, 493, 664
Pardon brokerage, Mrs. Washington 9, 10, 586, 594
Pardon brokerage, Mrs. Stewart 9
Pardon brokerage, Mrs. Reed 9
Pardon brokerage, Robert Johnson 9
Pardon brokerage, J. M. Plensants 10, 12, 312, 865
Pardon brokerage, Colonel Calvin L. Sayre 12, 309, 315, 316, 464, 806
Pardon brokerage, Colonel T. B. Florence 53, 57, 58, 275, 362, 592, 540, 493
Phelps, Edward R., testimony of 15
Perry, Mrs. W. C 15, 18, 497, 1109, 1112
Phelps, Barr, and Mrs. Perry, general order business 16, 497, 1109
Patterson, Senator, and the general order business 17
Patsons, Hon. Lewis E., testimony of 31
Provisional Governor Parsons 31
Provisional Governor Sharkey 40, 373
Pardon of Washington county, Pennsylvania, deserters 51, 273
Pardon of West Virginia deserters 56, 273, 276, 283, 316, 361, 407, 494, 540
Purnell, George, testimony of 78
Pardon of J. E. Davis 86
Pardons by the President, his construction of 88
Pardon of and restoration of property to Soulé 92
President's order suspending tax in Louisiana 107
Pardon of Governor Aiken 116
Pardon of William Whaley 116
President's order as to abandoned and confiscated lands 121
President's order in case of B. B. Leake 126
Property restored, statement of 128, 512
Pardons, routine for obtaining 587
President's notes or drafts 163
Patterson, Senator, and the Tennessee railroads 168, 171
President's veto message, by Black 271
Pardon of George A. Trenholm 289
Pardon of James T. Welsman 297
Pardon of Thomas C. Weatherby 306
Pardon brokerage 306, 804
Pleasants, Matthew F., testimony of 312
Pardon of William L. Trenholm 318
Philadelphia post office appointment case 342
Pardon, Howell case 345, 492, 590, 661
Provisional Governors, their compensation 373, 376, 383, 395
President's policy in appointment of provisional governors 375
President's policy in reconstruction 377
Payne, confession of 380, 381, 673, 680
Provisional governments only temporary 382, 406, 835
Pardon case, Joseph R. Anderson 417
Pardon, Kohnstamm case 406, 417
Pardon of William Edson 467
President's order not to proceed against paroled officers and soldiers 512
President's speeches on his tour 525
President's speech at St. Louis 531

President's phonographic writer 536
President's views as to confiscation 561
Pardon of Gayle, the assassin 564, 565
Pardons, list of applications for, in Attorney General's office 570
Pardon brokerage, Elwood case 683
President's conversation with James M. Scovel 620
President's bonds 634, 643
Property abandoned, captured, confiscated, Treasury circular relative to 686
Property surrendered to provisional governments 697
Provisional governments, expenses of 698
President's authority to pay provisional governments 698
President's order to pay Governor Perry 703
Provisional Governors, amount paid 704
Phelps, Hon. John S., his appointment as military Governor of Arkansas 782
Postmaster's commissions, forms of 767
Pardon of Pierre Soulé 808
Pickett, George E., case of 837
President's request of Grant for number of military forces in Baltimore and Washington 841, 842
President's conversation with General Hillyer 845
President's message as to trial of Davis 977
Post office appointments in the recess of the Senate 990
Pardons, list of, and by whom recommended 993
Property seized and restored to former owners, list of 1088
Provisional Governors, President's correspondence with 1095

R.

Resolution, March 7, 1867 1
Resolution, January 7, 1867 1
Restoration of abandoned property, President's policy 88, 111, 320
Restored property, statement of 128, 512, 518, 1088, 823, 800
Railroad, Greensboro' and Danville 151, 201
Railroad, Piedmont, transfer of 152
Railroad, Nashville and Northwestern 159, 165, 184, 186, 192, 199, 200
Railroad, Nashville and Chattanooga 165, 240
Railroad, transfers of, policy 183, 184, 185, 198
Railroad, Orange and Alexandria 183, 194
Railroads, disposition of, quartermaster general's plan 188
Railroads, Johnson's order of August 8 189
Railroads, Johnson's order of October 14, 1865 190
Railroads, extension of order to all roads 191
Railroads, extension of indebtedness 191
Railroad, Alexandria, London, and Hampshire 197
Railroads, military, expenses of running 200
Railroads, rules for transfers of 203, 206
Railroad, Nashville and Chattanooga, President's order suspending collections from, for their indebtedness to government 240
Railroad, Edgefield and Kentucky, extension for payment granted to, by President 243
Railroad extensions 222
Randall, Hon. A. W., testimony of 333
Richmond Examiner, suppression of 700
Report, Wright on military railroads 736
Randall, Postmaster General, exhibits to accompany his testimony 767
Rollins, Hon. E. A., testimony of 878
Railroads, military, sales of property 893
Railroads, military, record of appraisers 916
Railroad property captured and returned, schedule of 1152
Report of sub-committee to select documents to be made part of the testimony 967
Railroad property of United States during the war, report of General Meigs 969
Railroad companies, their indebtedness 976
Restored property, list of 1093
Railroad property returned, list of 1152

S.

Surratt, Isaac N., to assassinate Johnson 8
Smythe, Collector, and the general order business 17
Stanbery, Hon. William L., testimony of 40
Soulé, Pierre, case of 00, 805

Saxton, General Rufus, testimony of 111
Sea islands, seizure of 111, 112, 699
Starbuck, D. H., testimony of 151
Stanton, Hon. E. M., testimony of 183, 276, 395, 698
Sloan, Rush R., testimony of 268
Singleton's mission to Richmond 292, 295
Sayre, Calvin L., testimony of 309
Sharpsburg, post office appointment case 314
Sheer, Alfred R., testimony of 345
Seward, Hon. William H., testimony of 363
Sharkey, case of appointment and oath 373
Sharp, Colonel, relative to the assassination 375
State Department, its province 376, 378, 405
Seward's opinion as to the trial of Davis 379
Seward's telegram to Sharkey 382
Selfridge, James L., testimony of 384, 472
Selfridge, appointment case 385
Sheridan, his despatch 398, 536, 538, 635, 1053
Semmes, Raphael, case of 399, 702
Stanton's history of Johnson's policy 401
Stanton's opinion as to provisional governments 406
Stanbery, Hon. Henry, testimony of 417, 550
Smith, James Q., correspondence with Attorney General 428, 550
Speed's, Attorney General, stay of confiscation cases 431
Stanbery, his opinion of the confiscation act 550, 552
Scovel, James M., testimony of 619
Sub-committee to rebel documents, report of 967
Surratt, John H., relative to 674
Stewart, Dr., and Booth 676
Stewart, Booth's letters to 677
Seward's letter to Holden as to State property 686
Saxton and the Sea islands 699
Stanley, Hon. Edward, his appointment as military Governor of North Carolina 728
Stanley, instruction of Secretary of War to 730
Stanley, his reasons for resignation 731
Shepley, Hon. George F., his appointment as military Governor of Louisiana 732
Surratt, Miss Anna, testimony of 777
Speed, Hon. James, testimony of 791
Speed's opinion as to the test oath 793
Speed's opinion as to effect of pardon relative to confiscation 796
Speed's visit to Canada 804
Speed's written opinion as to abandoned lands 811
Seward's letter as to Johnson's administration in Tennessee 815
Spinner, Hon. Francis E., testimony of 816
Swann's desire for military aid in Baltimore in 1866 840
Sales of military property, laws regulating 884
Stanton's instruction to Thomas relative to railroad transfers 886
Schedule of railroad property captured and returned 1152
Seward to the President relative to appointments 981
Speed's, Attorney General, written opinion as to amnesty and pardon 1082

T.

Telegrams, Johnson to Nashville 6, 678
Thompson, Jacob, and the assassination 29
Test oath, none in Sharkey's case 40, 369, 373
Tennessee railroads, transfer of 183
Trenholm, George A., testimony of 257, 289
Trenholm, William L., testimony of 318
Tyson, Bryan, relative to 338
Test oath, modification of 372, 395, 399, 604, 661, 662, 791, 1089, 1113, 1114
Treason cases in Virginia 510
Treason, President's order not to proceed against paroled officers and soldiers 512
Treason, President's view of 561, 814
Test oath, removal of all who could not take it 661
Tennessee, Johnson's appointment as military Governor 725
Tennessee, Military Governor Johnson's instructions and authority 725
Texas, appointment of General Hamilton as military Governor 735
Trenholm, W. L., restoration of property to 762, 773
Treasury Circular, Nov. 1st, as to taxes in [illegible] States ..... [illegible], 809

Taxes in rebellious States 771, 790
Thompson's, Jacob, papers 804
Thomas's, General George H., report relative to the restoration of railroads 886

U.

Underwood, Judge J. C., testimony of 578

V.

Veto of military bill, by Black 271
Violet, W. G., case of, cotton frauds 365
Veto message of Colorado bill 977

W.

Washington county, Pennsylvania, deserters, pardon of 57, 273
West Virginia deserters, pardon of 56, 273, 276, 283, 316, 361, 407, 494, 540
Welsman, James T., testimony of 297
Weatherby, Thomas C., testimony of 299
West Manchester post office appointment case 343
Watkins, C. G., saw Adamson letter 471
Wood, William P., testimony of 490
Warden, William W., testimony of 535
Washington, Mrs. Ella B., testimony of 594
Washington, Colonel 694
Wright's, W. W., report on cost of military railroads 736
Watson's, Dr. James L., discharge from military custody 965

Z.

Zacharie, case of 101, 516, 525, 762

IMPEACHMENT INVESTIGATION.

SUPPLEMENTARY TESTIMONY.

CONTENTS.

	Page.
Moore, Colonel William G	1166
Alberger, Morris	1169
Murtagh, William G	1172
Coyle, John F	1173
Florence, Colonel Thomas B	1175
Gilman, J. E	1178
Baker, General L. C	1189
Ashley, Hon. James M	1194

TESTIMONY OF COLONEL WILLIAM G. MOORE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 15, 1867.

Colonel WILLIAM G. MOORE recalled and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When you were examined by the committee on the 25th day of May, you stated, in reference to the pardon of certain West Virginia soldiers, that you received the application from Thomas B. Florence, and submitted the paper to the President. You also stated that the papers, as far as you recollected, were simply a letter signed by Dr. McEwen, and a list of the persons who were to be included in the order. Have you any recollection of any other letters or papers which accompanied that application?

A. I have not.

Q. I hold in my hand what purports to be a copy of a letter, which reads as follows:

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
Washington, October 23, 1866.

SIR: The President directs me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 20th instant, and to inform you that the lists transmitted therewith have been referred to the Secretary of War, with the following indorsement: "All pains and penalties attaching to these men on account of the charge of desertion are remitted, and the charge will be removed from the rolls." I am, very respectfully, yours,

WILLIAM G. MOORE,
Assistant Adjutant General.

With the following memorandum the letter was franked thus:

From the President of the United States:

ROBERT JOHNSON, Private Secretary.

And post marked October 25th. It does not appear to whom it was addressed. State if you recollect having written such a letter; and if so, to whom.

A. I have been thinking the subject over since I have received the letter, a copy of which I transmitted to the chairman of this committee, and I am yet unable to recollect distinctly either the fact of the receipt of such a letter from Mr. Andrews, or its acknowledgment. The reason why I was able to state the facts that are embraced in my former testimony was, that after a statement made upon the subject of the order in question by General Butler, in the House of Representatives, I referred to such papers as could be found to refresh my recollection on the subject, and I recollect that at the time the President asked in regard to this letter from Mr. Andrews, whether any such paper had been received; I looked over the files but could not find it. I yet thought it might be among the private papers. I have looked over that file, but have not yet discovered it. Being still not satisfied with the result of the investigation, yesterday evening I asked Colonel Johnson to look again among the papers, as he remains at the mansion during the evening. He made the examination, but was not able to find any such letter from Mr. Andrews, so that I cannot yet say whether any such letter has or has not been received.

Q. On the 13th instant you transmitted to me, as chairman of the committee, a copy of a letter dated at Marietta, Ohio, November 7, 1867, as follows:

Colonel WILLIAM G. MOORE,
Assistant Adjutant General, Washington, D. C.:

A year ago last October you addressed a letter to E. W. Andrews, at Martinsburg, West Virginia, (who was then running as a candidate for Congress on the democratic ticket,) acknowledging the receipt of an application from him for the release of a lot of deserters. This letter is now in the hands of parties here who are now negotiating with parties at Washington for its possession. Deputy Sergeant Alberger has been here, and reported the same genuine, stating that it would so far contradict your evidence as to place you with Conover. Of this I know nothing; you can judge. If, however, it is important to you, you must take immediate steps to procure it. To do this, you must send a reliable party here at once. By applying to the clerk at the Mansion House at this place, he will find me, and I feel confident I can procure the letter for the same amount offered by the committee. I know warnings of this kind are constantly flying but you will undoubtedly, in this instance, perceive the fact and the necessity of some action.

Respectfully yours,

H. LOCKWOOD.

Have you any recollection of having written such a letter?

A. I have no positive recollection of having written such a letter.

Q. What is your impression as to whether such a letter was written?

A. I have thought over the subject this morning, and am unable to come to a positive conclusion as to whether my impression upon that point is the result of the communication which you have just read, or of facts that really occurred in October, 1866.

Q. Have you any knowledge of the Andrews letter reaching the President, or have you reason to believe that he knew of such a letter and its contents?

A. I have not. As I stated, I think the President asked me, when he sent for the papers at the Attorney General's office on the occasion to which I have referred, whether I recollected any such letter, and that my reply was that I did not. I asked him what was the purport of the letter, and he stated what he understood was represented as its purport; but I have failed altogether to recollect the receipt of the letter.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Is the letter which has been read to you, and which has no direction, such a letter as would have been addressed by you to Colonel McEwen, supposing such a letter had been written upon that subject?

A. That is the style I should have used in reply to a communication of that kind. It does not here appear to have any address, and that perplexes me.

Q. There was a letter from Colonel McEwen among the papers?

A. Yes, sir; that I stated.

Q. The papers were presented by Colonel Florence at the department?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it have been according to the practice of your department to have written to him?

A. No, sir; because he was on the ground, and would know what action had been taken without any communication.

Q. Did you understand Colonel Florence was making the application on behalf of another person—for instance, in behalf of Colonel McEwen?

A. I think he mentioned that fact at the time he spoke to me concerning the papers. Besides, the application was signed by Dr. McEwen

Q. Supposing that among the papers which were presented in the case had been one from Mr. Andrews, but without any intimation that he had any connection with the case, aside from his recommendation, would it have been according to the practice of your department to have written any letter to him upon the subject, as to what action you took in the matter?

A. Yes, sir; I think it would have been in accordance with the usual custom that prevails in the office.

Q. You would have written to him as well as to Colonel McEwen?

A. No, sir; I would not have written to Colonel McEwen, because he was represented by Colonel Florence, who was on the ground.

Q. You think, in that case, you would neither have written to Colonel Florence nor Colonel McEwen, although the letter of McEwen was among the papers?

A. No, sir; I should not have done so. In the case which you have suggested the course would have been this: The President would have given me an order to write the usual letter and I should have written it, and it would have made no impression upon my mind, it being a mere matter of routine.

Q. Then, if in addition to the papers now produced there had been a letter from Mr. Andrews, such as is supposed to have been written by him or by his son, the only communication made from your office would have been to Mr. Andrews?

A. I think that would have been the course very likely to have been taken.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Supposing Colonel McEwen had presented an application for the pardon of these men, and had presented letters with that application from ten or a dozen men, would you have written to each of these men who had sent a letter by McEwen?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then, why do you say it would be the practice of the office to write to Mr. Andrews when McEwen makes the application?

A. I made that reply upon the ground that there had been a separate and independent letter from Mr. Andrews.

Q. The application was made by McEwen?

A. Yes, sir; but if there had been a separate letter addressed to the President by Mr. Andrews, independently of the other papers, I think it would have been acknowledged. Of course, no one can tell what would or would not be the course in a hypothetical case.

Q. Still, you have no recollection of seeing such a letter from Mr. Andrews, or of having written an answer to it?

A. I have no positive recollection of seeing such a letter, or of writing an answer to it. As I have said to the committee, I have been embarrassed by the impressions that have been produced on my mind by this letter, dated at Marietta, Ohio. I have here the original of the letter from Marietta, if the committee desire to examine it.

Q. Do you know this man Lockwood?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you keep copies of the letters you write?

A. Not mere acknowledgments. I would not, for instance, keep a copy of such a letter as has been read here.

Q. Have you ever seen this Andrews, or had any conversation with him?

A. No, sir; not that I am aware of.

Q. Do you know whether this man Lockwood is a real person or not?

A. I do not.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you send an answer to Lockwood's letter?

A. No, sir; I prepared one, but upon consideration I concluded not to send it. I drew up an answer, in which I stated that I had no objection to the production of the letter before the Judiciary Committee; that, on the contrary, if it were in my possession, I should deem it my duty to transmit it at once to the committee. I did not know by whom this note from Marietta might have been written, and I did not wish my name connected with any affair having in it a money consideration. I shall, of course, continue my search for the letter said to have been written by Mr. Andrews, and if I am able to find it shall ask the privilege of appearing again before the committee. It is altogether beyond my ability now to say whether I did or did not receive or acknowledge such a letter. My recollection is very distinct of the action taken having been altogether based on Dr. McEwen's statement.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You state that you had a conversation with the President about this letter. Did the President himself, in that conversation, say that he had or had not any recollection about that letter?

A. He asked me if I had any recollection of such a letter. I told him I had not. He then said he had heard such a letter existed, but he had no recollection of it. He thought if I had seen it I might remember it.

Q. Did he state to you at that time that he had heard of the letter, or how he had heard of it?

A. No, sir; but, as I have said, I think it was in connection with some statement made upon the floor of the House by General Butler.

TESTIMONY OF MORRIS ALBERGER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 15, 1867.

MORRIS ALBERGER sworn and examined.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Were you at one time directed by the Sergeant-at-arms to go to Marietta, Ohio, and make inquiries concerning certain statements in a letter to General Butler, purporting to have been written by one J. E. Gilman, September 10, 1867, a copy of which was furnished to you?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. When did you go to Marietta, if at all, for that purpose?

A. It was about a month ago.

Q. State in full what persons you saw in reference to the matter, what inquiries you made, and what information you obtained.

A. I was instructed to go and see Mr. Gilman, and find out what there was about the letter, if there was a letter, and to endeavor to get a copy of it. I went to Marietta and found Mr. Gilman. He said he would go and get it. He was all day in getting it. In the afternoon he said he had the letter in his possession, and made me promise that I would not reveal the name of the person to whom it was addressed. I asked him if I could have a copy of it. He said he did not know; he would have to go and see the people who controlled the letter. He was gone some time, and came back again, giving me this copy, which I compared with the original and found to be correct. The letter was mailed from Washington, and had the postmark on it. I stated at the time I made the promise that it would be subject to the condition that I might be required to reveal the name to the committee.

Q. To whom was the letter addressed?

A. It was addressed to Mr. Andrews, of Martinsburg. I would not be positive as to his initials. I am under the impression they were E. A. Mr. Gilman told me that the letter was to the father, not to the son.

Q. Do you know the handwriting of Colonel Moore?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you seen him write?

A. On one occasion; when he was in the army I used to run across it a great many times. I was familiar with it at one time. I have not had occasion to see any of his writing for some time, but I think I should know it without any difficulty.

Q. When you saw this letter in Mr. Gilman's hands, did you form any opinion as to whether it was a genuine letter?

A. I am very certain it was a genuine letter. The date, postmark and everything indicated that it was. The envelope had on it the autograph of Robert Johnson, the President's private secretary, and indicated that it was mailed from the Executive Mansion.

Q. How was it addressed on the outside?

A. I think to E. A. Andrews, Martinsburg.

Q. Was the same writing on the outside as on the inside of the letter?

A. I would not be certain of that. I only looked at the envelope to see if it was of the description in general use at the Executive Mansion.

Q. Did you form any opinion from the handwriting in the body of the letter, or from the signature appended to it, as to whether it was written or signed by Colonel Moore?

A. I made up my mind who wrote the letter before I got to the signature.

Q. Did Gilman, or any other person who had custody, or professed to have custody of it, give any indication of the means by which they came into its possession?

A. No, sir. He made a good many statements. He said the son had written the letter to the President, signing his father's name; that the reply had come back to the father, who professed to know nothing about it and was angry, or, as Gilman stated, "raised the devil that such a thing had been done." He said he was not at liberty to say how the letter came to Marietta; but that it was now held in possession by these parties who were in debt, and would not part with it until they raised money enough to pay their debts.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did he say how much they would require for the letter?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. What amount?

A. Three thousand dollars. He afterwards threw off five hundred dollars, or stated that he was willing to. He did not want to make anything out of it. If, however, he could get anything out of it, he was willing to go halves with me on the five hundred dollars.

Q. Did you get the name of the party who had control of the letter?

A. No, sir; he would not give me the name of the party who had the original letter. I think he has it himself.

Q. Did you ever meet anybody by the name of Lockwood in connection with the affair?

A. No, sir. Gilman mentioned the names of two or three parties in town, but I was not at all familiar with them, and did not pay much attention to it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you learn who this Gilman is?

A. He is a professor of music—a young man of very good standing, and thought a good deal of by the people of the town.

Q. Where did you find him?

A. I found him at his place of business, No. 25 Front street, I think.

Q. Was he keeping a music store?

A. Yes, sir; he had a right good stock of music, musical instruments, pianos, &c. I have several letters from him.

Q. You said he told several stories about it. What do you mean by that?

A. He told me a great many things about these parties in Marietta.

Q. Stories that differed from each other?

A. No, sir; not at all. A great many things I considered immaterial and paid no attention to them.

Q. You made inquiries about him?

A. Yes, sir; I did afterwards.

Q. Did you have any connection with any other parties about the letter?

A. No, sir. The only connection I had with any other parties was to find out the standing of Gilman, his respectability, and what kind of a man he was.

Q. He introduced you to no parties connected with the letter?

A. No, sir. He refused to allow me to see any other parties connected with the letter.

Q. When he professed to go back to see the parties about it, do you know where he went?

A. No, I do not. He was gone a good while.

Q. Did he leave the store?

A. Oh, yes, sir. He left the store and went off on the street. I went out and watched him. When he came back he said he had a copy of the letter and the original letter.

Q. How came you to go there to see him?

A. I was requested to go there by Mr. Ordway, the Sergeant-at-arms.

Q. Did you have this letter to General Butler with you?

A. I did not know until now that the letter was to General Butler. I had this copy with me.

Q. Did this man Gilman say how he came to know that the letter had been thought to be important by the committee?

A. I believe he made the remark that he had seen statements in the papers about the pardon of a hundred and odd deserters; that this letter had come to his knowledge, and that he had communicated with some of the committee, or some gentlemen here, about it.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Are we to understand that you knew the handwriting of that letter before you saw the signature?

A. Yes, sir; I made up my mind who wrote the letter before I saw the signature.

Q. You are certain it was Colonel Moore's handwriting?

A. As certain as I could be under the circumstances.

Q. When did you see Colonel Moore write?

A. I cannot exactly state the time. It is not many months ago that I saw him write at his own house. I called at his house with a friend, and he indorsed a couple of cards my friend had.

Q. Did he write his name?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. You are familiar enough with his handwriting to say that you think this letter you saw was written by him?

A. I am more familiar with his signature than his handwriting. I believe that to be his signature, and I believe it to be his handwriting.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Are you an expert in testing the genuineness of handwritings?

A. I cannot say that I am.

Q. Have you ever devoted yourself specially to that?

A. No, sir; I have a pretty good memory, and when I see a thing I can generally distinguish it and remember it.

Q. You say you did not notice the handwriting of the superscription on the envelope?

A. I only noticed it to see to whom it was addressed, and the place. And then I looked more to see the quality of the paper and the printing at the head, "From the President of the United States. Robert Johnson, private secretary," and the Washington postmark.

Q. Are you familiar with Robert Johnson's signature or handwriting?

A. I would not swear to his signature.

Q. What was the date of the postmark?

A. The letter was postmarked "Washington, October 23." It was stamped on the envelope. I think the letter had the same date.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did you offer any price for the letter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were you authorized to do so by any member of the Judiciary Committee?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was anything ever said upon the subject within your knowledge?

A. He asked my opinion as regards the worth of the letter.

Q. Did you express an opinion?

A. I did.

Q. What value did you express?

A. I told him I did not consider it worth more than the postage stamp; I did not see any chance for my two hundred and fifty.

TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM J. MURTAGH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 18, 1867.

WILLIAM J. MURTAGH sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. State if you are the editor and proprietor of the Republican newspaper printing establishment of this city, and have been since the 18th of May, 1866?

A. I am now sole proprietor. I purchased the interest of Mr. Hanscom in April last. E. D. Peck is the editor. In May, 1866, the paper was owned jointly by Simon P. Hanscom and myself.

Q. State whether, since the 18th of May, 1866, the Republican newspaper establishment has printed any advertisements, notices, &c., for the government; and if so, to what extent?

A. Ever since the passage of the law by Congress I have published all the government advertising regularly.

Q. Can you state how the circulation of your paper has compared with the circulation of other newspapers in the city since May, 1866?

A. I cannot. The matter of circulation is a difficult one to determine. There is always a jealousy among newspapers in regard to their circulation.

Q. Was any sworn affidavit of the circulation of the Republican newspaper furnished to the government or any department of it?

A. I cannot say positively without making an examination. I think there was not.

Q. By whom was the printing to be done furnished to you?

A. None of the advertisements were furnished me. They were furnished originally under the authority of the President. Mr. Lincoln gave me the official advertising. Subsequently Mr. Johnson re-affirmed that order, or indorsed it, stating that it was to be continued. After the passage of the act of May, 1866, I received no advertisements officially from the department at all. All that I published was under the order of the President, which I have referred to. I obtained the advertisements from the other newspapers.

Q. Have you been paid for the work that has been done by your establishment?

A. I have, to a limited extent. For all done under the act of May, 1866, I claimed I was entitled to pay. After the passage of the act of 1867 I have asked no pay for government advertising done.

Q. Since the passage of the act of March 2, 1867, has your establishment published any advertisements, notices, proposals for contracts, &c., from the Executive or other department of the government, or published any laws of Congress?

A. Yes, sir, we have published them all regularly; but, as I stated, have received no pay for work done since the passage of the act of March 2, 1867.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What construction did you give to the law of 1866, which, as you supposed, entitled you to pay?

A. The law of 1866 referred to such advertisements as were required by law to be published in the city of Washington. Very few advertisements were required by law to be published in the city of Washington; and, as I supposed, we were entitled to pay under the previous order of the President, directing the government advertisements to be published in our paper. Senator Wade, who had charge of the matter, in the law of 1867 struck out the words, "required by law to be published in the city of Washington," after which I was satisfied I had no right to claim pay.

Q. From what department of the government did you receive the pay you did receive?

A. From the War, State, and Treasury Departments, amounting in all to about $5,000.

Q. Were your bills paid by the usual process of auditing in the departments, and examined?

A. They were. Mr. Baker, the financial clerk in the State Department, paid me, as he always did, after referring the matter to Mr. Smith, the legal clerk, who examined the accounts and found them correct.

Q. What papers were selected under the law of 1867 in this city?

A. The Star and Chronicle. They were designated, I think, in June, about the time the law went into operation.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Up to what time precisely were you paid?

A. I was paid on the basis of the advertisements for the previous year. I cannot tell the exact date. It was up to the time the law of 1867 went into operation.

Q. What amounts did you receive from different departments?

A. As I recollect, something over $700 from the State Department, about $200 from the Treasury Department, and about $4,100 from the War Department.

Q. Were you paid on a special order from the President?

A. None of these sums were paid on a special order from the President. After Mr. Stanton was removed I sent my account to the President, with a note to the effect that I would like to have it examined and adjusted, and I think he indorsed it, "referred for examination." He made no order for its payment.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN F. COYLE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 19, 1867.

JOHN F. COYLE recalled and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Will you furnish to the committee a statement of the amounts of money paid to you by the different departments of government between May, 1866, and March, 1867, for advertising and printing notices, &c., in the National Intelligencer newspaper?

A. The amount as furnished by my cashier and bookkeeper is $7,435 25, as follows:

War Department	$6,019 00
Patent Office	544 00
Post Office Department	418 50

Treasury Department	$212 50
Aqueduct Office	23 25
House of Representatives	96 00
Library of Congress	16 00
Supreme Court	12 25
Commissioners of Public Buildings	50 50
Indian Bureau	688 75
Pension Office	314 50
Interior Department	105 00
Capitol Extension	20 50
Naval Storekeeper	13 50
	7,434 25

Q. State if the President made a speech on the 13th of November, 1867, at the White House, to a crowd of people there assembled; and if so, can you furnish a copy of the speech as it was made?

A. He did make a speech. I was present at the White House, but not in hearing of the speech. The copy we received, as I understood on that night, we were to receive and did receive from Mr. Gobright, of the Associated Press, and will be found published in the Intelligencer of the morning of the 14th.

Q. State if you have any means of knowing whether that is a correct report of the speech?

A. It is presumed to be correct; the speech was read by the President from manuscript.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were these payments made to you for services rendered prior to the 10th of June, 1866?

A. Some of them were, and the others paid for were not those coming under the law, which specifies that all advertisements published in Washington shall be in these two papers.

Q. What were these advertisements for which this account covers?

A. They were some of the general advertisements of the office; I do not remember what.

Q. Who were they ordered by?

A. By the War Department, Patent Office, Indian Office, and other departments, I presume. I was not myself cognizant of the facts.

Q. Do you know of the President himself, either verbally or in writing, directing the payment of any of these sums?

A. He did not. I may state in respect to the account at the War Department that it was rendered to Mr. Stanton, but during his stay there we could never get any settlement; he would neither allow it nor reject it. At the commencement of the present administration the President selected our paper, as he had the right to do according to the law prior to the passage of this late act, for the publishment of the official advertisements. During Mr. Stanton's stay there we took occasion to speak of him, and about his official conduct, as we felt on the subject; whereupon he wrote a peremptory order directing all branches of the War Department not to advertise with us. We paid no attention to it, but continued to publish the advertisements under the order of the President, prior to June, 1866. These accounts were rendered as they became due, and would eventually reach the Secretary's table, where they remained unacted upon. When he went out of office we rendered the accounts again, and as the President, under the law, had ordered us to publish the advertisements, we appealed to him to have our accounts examined and adjusted. Under his direction they were examined at the War Department, found to be correct, and were paid, as were also those of the Republican.

Q. Has the President taken any part or given any direction with regard to the accounts which have accrued since June 10, 1866?

A. None, and these other payments have all been made by the several departments in their discretion.

Q. Did the President pay you out of the public funds for publishing his late speech?

A. Certainly not. He never spoke to me about his speech. We published it as we do any other public man's speech. I may say that we publish a great many advertisements of public interest for the benefit of our subscribers, keep a regular account of them, and enter them as if they were to be paid, and we may eventually appeal to the Court of Claims for their payment.

The speech of the President referred to in the above testimony was subsequently furnished by the witness, and is as follows:

The speech of the President.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: It is not my intention to make an address upon this occasion, but simply to tender you my thanks for this demonstration—a demonstration approbating what your fellow-citizens have declared in the recent elections in various States of the Union. They will appreciate your response to what they have done, and send back greeting that the Union of the States must be maintained according to the original design of our fathers.

I confess I am gratified, but not surprised, at the result of the recent elections. I have always had undoubting confidence in the people. They may sometimes be misled by a "lying spirit in the mouths of their prophets," but never perverted; and in the end they are always right. In the gloomiest hours through which I have passed—and many of them, God knows, have been dark enough—and when our Constitution was in the utmost peril; when our free institutions were assailed by a formidable force, and our great republic seemed to be tottering to its fall, and when I felt how vain were my efforts alone to preserve these institutions in their integrity, and to save the republic from ruin, I was still hopeful; I had still an abiding confidence in the people, and felt assured that they, in their might, would come to the rescue. They have come! And thank God they have come, and that our republic may yet be saved. [Tremendous cheering.]

It was but the other day that I officially declared that the remedy for the present unhappy condition of the country must come from the people themselves. They know what that remedy is, and how it is to be applied. At the present time they cannot, according to the forms of the Constitution, repeal obnoxious laws; they cannot remove or control this military despotism. The remedy is nevertheless in their hands, and is a sure one, if not controlled by fraud, overawed by arbitrary power, or, from apathy on their part, too long delayed. With abiding confidence in their patriotism, wisdom, and integrity, I am still hopeful that in the end the rod of despotism will be broken, the armed heel of power lifted from the necks of the people, and the principles of a violated Constitution preserved. The people have spoken in a manner not to be misunderstood. Thank God! they have spoken; for it is upon their intelligence and their integrity that I have always relied, and still rely. The Constitution of the country, which was imperilled, has recently been before them for consideration, and it has had new life and vigor imparted to it from its original source—the people. It comes back to us with renewed strength and power. Let it now be translated high up in the heavens, written in letters of living light, as the symbol of liberty and Union, justice, magnanimity, and fraternity! Good night.

TESTIMONY OF THOMAS B. FLORENCE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., November 18, 1867.

THOMAS B. FLORENCE recalled and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Have you been the editor and proprietor of the Constitutional Union newspaper and printing establishment since the 18th of May, 1866?

A. Yes.

Q. Since that time, have you printed in your newspaper any advertisements, notices, proposals for contracts, or other printing for any of the officers or departments of government, or published any laws or treaties; and, if so, to what extent?

A. I have since the 18th of May, 1866, but not since March 2, 1867, when a law was passed which cut me out altogether. Since then I have put in the advertisements in the edition published in the city of Georgetown. I publish a Washington newspaper called the Constitutional Union, and a Georgetown paper called the Evening Union.

Q. Where are they both, in fact, printed?

A. They are printed in Washington.

Q. Have you received any pay for printing or advertising done for the government since the 18th of May, 1866?

A. Yes.

Q. From whom, and what amounts?

A. From the War Department, through Mr. Stanton; from the Treasury Department, through Mr. McCulloch; and I am not sure whether I have received anything from the Interior Department or not. They owe me a trifling amount, which would have been paid long ago if Mr. Harlan had remained in office. I cannot state the exact amounts without further investigation, but will endeavor to ascertain and furnish them to the committee.

Q. What two papers were designated, under the laws referred to, to do the advertising and printing in Washington?

A. The Star and Chronicle. My paper published in Georgetown, according to my understanding, was not excluded by the law of 1866 from publishing the advertisements.

Q. Did you furnish a sworn statement of the bona fide circulation of each regular issue of your newspaper for the three months preceding the 10th of June, 1866?

A. No; I did not intend to compete with the Washington newspapers for the publication of the government advertisements, and hence I did not furnish any statement.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with the President about this advertising and printing?

A. Yes; and I found a good deal of fault with him for not insisting that I should be paid. I did the work in good faith, and thought that I was entitled to the pay.

Q. Did you ever ask him to have the patronage assigned to you?

A. Oh, yes.

Q. Did he direct it to be done?

A. He favored it; I do not know that he directed it.

Q. Was that since May, 1866?

A. No; since that time I do not think I have spoken to him on the subject, except to say that I ought to be paid. I exercised my right of judgment as to the propriety of it, and concluded I knew what ought to be done as well as he. I have talked with him several times about receiving pay for advertisements published in my Georgetown paper.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Why do you think, if Mr. Harlan had continued in office, you would have been paid?

A. Because he knew more about it.

Q. What was the reason the present Secretary did not pay you?

A. I do not know.

Q. Have you applied to him?

A. Once, directly to him. His reply was that he would look it up. I do not wish to express my opinion about it, for it might be a little rough.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you receive pay for advertisements published in the Constitutional Union previous to the passage of the law of 1866?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Was any money received by you for publishing these notices or advertisements in the Constitutional Union since that time, unless for work done previously?

A. No; not after the time fixed for that law to go into operation. Indeed, I did not put them into the Constitutional Union. I published them in the Georgetown paper.

Q. You claim pay, as I understand, for the advertisements published in the Evening Union in Georgetown. Did the President ever at any time give to you or to the head of any department, to your knowledge, any verbal or written order or direction to pay you anything?

A. No; not that I am aware of.

WASHINGTON, November 21, 1867.

THOMAS B. FLORENCE recalled and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Have you prepared the statement you were asked about yesterday?

A. No, I have not; I can recite to you in round numbers that I received from the War Department about $3,000; from the Navy Department approximating $400; and from the Treasury Department $350 or thereabouts. I said in my testimony that I had received nothing from the Interior Department. I meant to have said that I had been paid nothing by Mr. Browning. I was paid two or three hundred dollars for Interior Department advertisements by his predecessors.

Q. This was for advertising done prior to the 10th of June, 1866?

A. I am now speaking of work done since June, 1866, but it was for advertising done in a Georgetown paper. I should have added that I got from Mr. Denison for post office advertisements about $200 since June, 1866. I have received nothing from the State Department, though I claim they ought to pay me.

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

Q. Did you publish these advertisements at the request of the heads of the different departments?

A. There was a tacit understanding that I should do it. I went to those having control of the matter, in the early part of the administration, and they requested me to do it.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Were you paid any of these sums of money on the written or verbal order of the President?

A. I apprehend not; I do not know.

Q. Did you have an office in Georgetown?

A. A publication office—yes, sir. The papers were printed in Washington, but this was a distinct issue for Georgetown. It was not the Constitutional Union; it was the Evening Union.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN E. GILMAN.

WASHINGTON, November 22, 1867.

JOHN E. GILMAN sworn and examined.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. State your residence.

A. I reside at Marietta, Ohio, and have been living there at different times some twelve or fifteen years.

Q. In what business are you engaged?

A. I am a piano dealer.

Q. Have you seen a letter purporting to have been written by William G. Moore, assistant adjutant general, dated Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C., October 23, 1866?

A. I have seen a letter that I suppose o be the one you mean. I cannot tell what the date of it was or very much about it. I only saw it but once and then for a moment.

Q. I now exhibit to you a copy of the letter to which I refer, to be found in the testimony of William G. Moore, taken before this committee on the 15th of November, 1867. State what information you have in relation to the original of that letter.

A. My information is entirely hearsay. I have been acting only as attorney in the matter. I could not say whether I saw the original of the letter, a copy of which you have shown me, or not. My glance at it was so cursory that I am unable to say even whether it is substantially the same. I did not read the letter through. I only glanced over another person's shoulders, and being rather near-sighted, could not read it readily.

Q. To whom was the letter addressed?

A. That I could not say positively. I have no recollection on the subject.

Q. Who had the letter?

A. That I could not answer. I had it at one time to show to Mr. Alberger.

Q. From whom did you obtain the letter?

A. That is a question that, as an attorney in the matter, I do not feel at liberty to answer. You will appreciate the reason of that.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is a proper one and the committee will require you to answer it.

WITNESS. In the first place, I am under oath not to tell; and in the second place, I fear it will render entirely null and void your endeavors to get the letter.

Q. Do you decline to answer?

A. I would like to have some legal advice in the matter before answering or declining to answer.

Q. When and how did you first learn of the existence of this letter?

A. I do not remember the date. It was about the time of the date of my first letter on the subject, if you have that. I was told that such a letter existed and made some inquiries about it. The statement was made that they proposed to give it up to the President. I advised very strongly against that; I did not consider the President a fit man for the station; there was a committee appointed to inquire what there was for or against him, and I thought that the proper place for the letter to go.

Q. Do you know such a person as H. Lockwood, of Marietta?

A. I am not acquainted with him.

Q. Is there such a man there?

A. I do not know.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you not write a letter to Colonel Moore, proposing to surrender this letter up?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know of such a letter having been written to Colonel Moore on the subject?

A. I do not know positively. I was told that some negotiations were pending, as I think my letters will show.

Q. Do you know this man Lockwood?

A. I do not know such a person in Marietta, nor anywhere, who could possibly be connected with this matter.

Q. Do you know any man who wrote to Colonel Moore and signed his name "H. Lockwood," or anybody who assumed to write a letter to Colonel Moore on this subject?

A. No, I do not.

Q. Who told you there were negotiations pending in relation to this letter?

A. The same parties with whom I had negotiations in regard to the letter, and from whom I received it.

Q. Are you an attorney-at-law?

A. I am not.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Do you know the handwriting of this party with whom you had negotiations?

A. I do not.

Q. Where were you when this communication was made to you?

A. At Marietta, Ohio.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Does the gentleman who made that communication to you reside at Marietta?

A. I do not know where he considers his residence. He was there at the time. I should say he resides at Marietta, but I do not know whether he considers that as his residence.

Q. In what business is he engaged?

A. In no business that I know of.

Q. Is he a young man?

A. A man about thirty.

Q. How long has he been residing in Marietta?

A. That I could not tell. I do not know.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. When did you first see or know him?

A. About the first of January, I think, of the present year.

Q. Had he been in Marietta before?

A. I could not tell you that.

Q. Is he a relative of yours?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you learn of the existence ot this letter before that time?

A. I supposed there was one in existence from what I read in the papers. I did not know anything about it.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. To what letter do you refer as showing about the date of your first becoming acquainted with the existence of this letter?

A. My first letter to Mr. Ashley.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. Have you ever written to any member of the committee on the subject?

A. I have not. The only members of Congress I ever wrote to on the subject were General Butler and Mr. Ashley.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Are you acquainted with Mr. Ashley or General Butler?

A. I have a very slight acquaintance with Mr. Ashley. General Butler I am not acquainted with at all.

Q. When did you become acquainted with Mr. Ashley?

A. I formerly lived in Toledo and had frequent opportunities of meeting with him; and I met him once in New York, where I had a coversation with him in regard to money matters. I only know General Butler by sight.

Q. Can you fix any date to your first letter to Mr. Ashley?

A. I do not remember the date.

Q. Did you first make the acquaintance of this man you have spoken of as having negotiations with, in connection with this letter?

A. When I first made his acquaintance I did not know that such a letter was in existence?

Q. How many times did you meet him before you found that out?

A. I was in the habit of meeting him frequently on the street and in the cars. I could not tell how many times. I had been acquainted with him, I should judge, in the neighborhood of three months.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. Did this person who you say had the letter ever live at Martinsburg, West Virginia?

A. I do not know whether he did or not.

Q. Do you know where he had lived prior to the time you first saw him?

A No. I think he lived in the east somewhere.

Q. Where did he board when he was in Marietta?

A. When I first saw him he was travelling from Marietta to Petroleum. He spent most of his time at Petroleum, but I think he called Marietta his home. When in Marietta he boarded at the National House, I think.

Q. Has he relatives in and about Marietta? and, if so, state who they are.

A. That touches so closely upon the other questions that if you will allow me to wait, before answering, until I have consulted counsel, I will be obliged to you.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Look at the letter now shown you and state whether you wrote it.

A. I did.

Q. What circumstances placed you in correspondence with Mr. Alberger?

A. He was sent to Marietta by order of the committee, as he informed me, to see whether the letter was genuine or not. He also brought out a subpœna, which was left to his discretion to serve or not, as he thought proper. I showed him what my position was in regard to the letter, and finally succeeded in getting him a sight of the letter. After he returned I wrote this letter to him here in Washington.

Q. State what occurred, and what was said and done by Mr. Alberger and yourself, during his visit to Marietta.

A. After telling me who he was, and the purpose for which he came, I told him I would like to show him the letter, but doubted very much whether I could succeed in doing so. I went twice before I could succeed in getting the letter for him, and then it was under a written promise from him that he would not attempt to seize it, and that he would not disclose the name of the party to whom it was written.

Q. What do you mean by the expression in this letter to Alberger, "anything to keep my hold on it good"?

A. I meant this: I had been told that negotiations were going forward with the President's secretary for the delivery of the letter to him, and that unless something was done in the interest of the Judiciary Committee, or some action taken in the matter, I should entirely lose what hold I had on the letter.

Q. Do you say you were acting for the Judiciary Committee?

A. I was, in their interest.

Q. Who authorized you to act for the Judiciary Committee?

A. No person; and I did it from no motive except such as every person in the country should have.

Q. You do not mean to say that you had any authority from the committee?

A. I had no authority from the committee.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you received any letters from the President or any of his secretaries?

A. No, sir; nor any communication of any kind.

Q. What do you mean by saying that negotiations were going on with them for the possession of this letter.

A. I was told that negotiations were going on between the party holding the letter and the President's secretary.

Q. Were there more parties than one concerned in any of these negotiations?

A. I think there were, because the party with whom I had negotiations told me he had not the letter in his possession, but thought he could secure it.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did you not know that this statement about negotiations going on with Colonel Moore was a mere pretence to make something out of the government?

A. I did not.

Q. Did you not know that the parties to whom you refer resorted to these expedients to try to enhance the supposed value of the letter?

A. I resorted to no expedients, and had no interest in it.

Q. Were you not, in a certain contingency, to have $500?

A. Which I stated to Mr. Alberger I waived all claim to. I did state to Major Alberger that if $3,000 was obtained they promised me $500, but that so far as that was concerned I yielded all claim to it; that I did not care about making money in that way.

Q. Did you not tell Major Alberger that if you got that $500 you would divide it with him?

A. Yes; I told him that I would not refuse $500 if it was offered to me, and that if I got the $500 I would be willing to divide it with him.

Q. Did you think, in that proposition, you were acting in the interest of the committee?

A. I was not aware that I said anything to him out of the way, inasmuch as I gave him permission to tell the committee my words. I thought I was taking a great deal of trouble in the matter, and if the committee were willing to give me anything for my trouble, I would not object to receiving it. I did not lay claim to anything.

Q. Was not your proposition to Mr. Alberger that if he could manage to get the $500 you would share it with him?

A. I had no such intention.

Q. Was not that what you told him?

A. No, sir; not with any such intention.

Q. Did not Alberger reply that he could do no such thing as that?

A. No, sir; he said that so far as that was concerned, his salary was sufficient to support him, and he did not care about it.

Q. You did not make that offer to Alberger with the idea that you would play smart with him and get it?

A. No, sir; I did not offer it with any idea of bribing him or any one.

Q. Do you say that you authorized Alberger to state to the committee the proposition you made to divide this $500 with him if you obtained it?

A. No; I do not know that I did. I authorized him to say that the price named could be diminished by the $500, which it was understood I should have if the entire amount asked was paid.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You have stated substantially that the person who held possession of this letter was a stranger to you until recently, within the past year. Will you explain how it came that that stranger applied to you to act as an attorney in the negotiations you speak of?

A. I do not know any other reason than that at the time he first spoke of the subject he had been drinking considerably, and was not quite master of his own actions in the matter.

Q. Why should he apply to you rather than to any other stranger?

A. At the time he applied to me I was hardly a stranger to him, having seen him more or less for some time.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Had you been drinking with him?

A. No, sir; I am not in the habit of drinking.

Q. Where did you find him at that time?

A. I met him in the street.

By Mr. BOUTWELL:

Q. What circumstances, after you first became acquainted with this man, led you to have such relations with him as to induce him to negotiate with you in regard to the letter?

A. Frequent travelling on the cars together.

Q. Did you not travel frequently with a great many other persons?

A. Not so frequently as with him and one or two others. My business calls me to Parkersburg every few days, and I saw him on the cars between Marietta and Parkersburg more frequently, perhaps, than any other person not connected with the road.

Q. Is that a road that passes by or through Petroleum?

A. From Marietta to Petroleum the route would be to Parkersburg, and then take the train east from Parkersburg.

Q. What takes you to Parkersburg so frequently?

A. I have a store there.

Q. And one in Marietta also?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is this person you refer to in the same business with yourself?

A. No, sir; not at all.

Q. Does he belong to any association or organization that you belong to?

A. No, sir.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. What is his profession or business?

A. I do not know at this time. Then he was engaged in something in relation to oil matters.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Matchett, formerly a chaplain in the army?

A. No, sir.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. You have said that in your negotiations in relation to this letter, your only object was to serve the government. How do you expect to serve the government in this connection unless you disclose the name of the man who has this letter?

A. I am inclined to think I should render a greater service to the government by withholding than giving his name.

Q. Suppose it were important for us to have possession of the letter?

A. I think if it were important you would adopt a different course to obtain it.

Q. You mean, buy it?

A. Yes.

By Mr. LAWRENCE:

Q. You say you took an oath not to communicate the name of the party who gave you this letter; before whom did you take that oath?

A. Before no person; only between ourselves.

Q. Who administered the oath?

A. He did.

Q. In what form was it administered?

A. No special form.

Q. Can there be an oath without a form?

A. There may be without a prescribed form.

Q. In what form did you take it?

A. It was merely an agreement that I should not disclose the names of these parties.

Q. Did you swear with the uplifted hand?

A. Yes.

Q. Was he an officer having authority of law to administer oaths?

A. No, sir.

Q. Then it was simply a promise?

A. I consider an oath binding on a man whether administered by the clerk of a court or by any other person. I should consider my word as good as an oath.

Q. Would you consider an oath administered with the forms of law as imposing no higher moral obligation?

A. I do not think it makes any difference; an oath is an oath, whoever it may be administered by.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you ever had a personal interview with Mr. Ashley in reference to this matter?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you seen him since you have been in the city?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you seen any person in Washington about it?

A. No person except Major Alberger.

Q. Did this man you speak of ever live in Washington?

A. I do not think he ever did. I have no reason to believe he ever did.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. What were the terms you made with this man?

A. That I would not reveal the names of the parties with whom I was negotiating. That was the substance of the promise.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. How many persons did you make that promise to?

A. I only made it to one, and I do not know but one connected with the transaction; but I have reason to believe there are others. I have no suspicion who they are, and I only suppose there are others from the fact that when I went to get the letters they had to consult with others; I do not know with whom.

Q. State what steps you took to secure this letter after Alberger came to Marietta.

A. Major Alberger came in in the morning, and met me in my store, and we had some conversation. Then I started off to find this party. This was in the morning, between ten and eleven o'clock. In the mean time Alberger went over to the National House. I met this man on the street, and took him into my store. Then afterwards, some customers coming in, I went into my uncle's office. Alberger took dinner with me, and in the afternoon we came down street, and he remained in the store while I went to find this man. I went up street and looked into two or three places where he was in the habit of going, and finally met him on the street.

Q. Where did you go then to negotiate with him?

A. I think we went into the Mansion House, to the office. He handed me a paper which he wanted Alberger to sign, promising that he would not use the names of any of the parties. I carried that to Alberger and got him to sign it. After some further negotiation I went back, and he waited for me at my uncle's office.

Q. What is your uncle's name?

A. James A. Tenney.

Q. What is his business?

A. Dentist.

Q. During these negotiations, did you see any other parties in connection with the matter than this one?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did he communicate to you that there was any other party?

A. He told me there were other parties in it. He did not tell me who they were or where they were from, and I do not know who they were.

(The CHAIRMAN stated that the witness would be required to disclose the name of the party from whom he received the letter referred to. He would, however, be allowed to consult counsel in reference to the matter if he desired.

The witness retired, and subsequently returned, having consulted counsel. The question was repeated.)

Q. State the name of the party from whom you received the letter.

A. Protesting against the right of the committee to require me to answer, I give the name as Watson Andrews.

Q. Do you know where he now is?

A. I do not know; he is probably at Marietta.

Q. Is he any relation to the Mr. Andrews who was a candidate for Congress in West Virginia?

A. I do not know of my own knowledge. I have never seen the Mr. Andrews to whom you refer, but I believe him to be a relative of Watson Andrews.

Q. What is his reputed relationship?

A. I have never heard any one but himself say anything about it, and I have never heard him give his father's initials. I know his father lives somewhere in Virginia; whether East or West Virginia, I do not know. I believe they moved there from Connecticut.

Q. Do you know from information or otherwise whether the father was a candidate for Congress?

A. I believe he was. I could not say positively that he was.

Q. Did you learn that fact from Mr. Watson Andrews?

A. I did.

Q. Who are his relatives in Marietta?

A. One of them is the president of Marietta College, and another is a professor in the same college. E. B. Andrews is the professor; I do not know the president's initials.

Q. Did you ever hear Watson Andrews speak of his brother Samuel J. Andrews?

A. I have heard him speak of his brother "Sam."

Q. And of his father, Edward?

A. I never heard him give his father's name.

Q. Can you state to whom that letter was addressed?

A. It was addressed to a Mr. Andrews. I could not give his first name. I did not look at this letter for the very reason that I supposed it might possibly get me into trouble.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. Was the envelope of the letter also addressed to Mr. Andrews?

A. The letter, when I received it and handed it to Major Alberger, was in a blank envelope. The original envelope I saw, but at such a distance that I could not tell how it was addressed or postmarked.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. How old a man is Watson Andrews?

A. I think he must be near thirty. He hardly looks as old as that.

Q. Can you give any description of him, so as to identify him?

A. He is rather a small man, and has black hair.

Q. Do you know of his being in the army? Did he wear army clothes?

A. He was in the army. He did not wear army clothes at this time.

Q. Has he been continuously in the army since last January?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know of his being in Washington since that time?

A. I do not think he has; he may have been.

Q. Do you know whether or not he has been a witness before this committee?

A. I do not know. He never said whether he had or not.

Q. Did he tell you how he became possessed of this letter?

A. No.

Q. Have you no idea how he became possessed of it?

A. All I know about it is that the father was a candidate for Congress. A claim agent became acquainted with the fact of certain soldiers being on the rolls as deserters, and he thought he would make some money by getting their back pay and bounty. He went out to this place, where an election was to be held. The old gentleman was, I think, not at home. He saw the son and a partner of the old gentleman. He told them that if they would write a letter for Mr. Andrews to the President these deserters' pardons would very likely get back in time to vote, and that they would secure his election. The son, I think it was, wrote such a letter to the President, recommending that the enclosed list of deserters be pardoned, stating the circumstances of the case. I am told you have that letter before you.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Told so by whom?

A. By Watson Andrews. And the secretary of the President, as I understand, wrote this letter in answer, stating that the men had been pardoned. Mr. Andrews, senior, I believe, knew nothing of the letter until the whole transaction was over. That is the whole extent of my information.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you get this information from the newspapers, or from what source?

A. Partly from the newspapers and partly from Captain Andrews.

Q. Can you state what portion of the information you got from him?

A. It is so mixed up I do not think I can.

Q. Do you know this man to be really Watson Andrews?

A. Only by common report.

Q. Can you name any person who knows him to be Watson Andrews?

A. I know he visited at his uncle's, and they seemed to recognize the relationship. I do not know that I ever heard them speak of him as a nephew.

Q. Do you know any persons there of his acquaintance?

A. I know the Andrews family very well.

Q. Do you know any of his associates; and if so, who?

A. Yes; Colonel Andrew J. Smith, formerly on General Hancock's staff.

Q. Are they companions together?

A. They used to be friends, and I believe now they speak when they meet. There is a man by the name of Post, who used to be a very intimate friend of his. I think there is an interruption in the friendship between him and Colonel Smith. I do not know how it is as to this other person.

Q. Have you any doubt about his really being a relative of this family?

A. No.

Q. And the true name of this young man is Watson Andrews?

A. I believe it to be so.

Q. Have you told us where and when you first saw him?

A. I first saw him somewhere in Marietta. I first became acquainted with him at my house in January last. He boarded there for a short time.

Q. Did you not become acquainted with him before you took him as a boarder?

A. I had not anything to do with the management of the house. The house is kept by my mother and I board with her. I do not think I knew him before he came there to board. I do not recollect positively.

Q. Does your mother keep a boarding-house?

A. Yes; we have three or four families there.

Q. Are you a married man?

A. Yes.

Q. Was this person a married man?

A. Yes.

Q. Any children?

A. No.

Q. Are they boarding there yet?

A. No; they are, I think, at Mrs. Cook's, about a quarter or a third of a mile from my mother's.

Q. Have you told us all you know about this man?

A. I believe I have, and all I know of his connection with this matter.

Q. Have you seen other parties you believe to be connected with it?

A. I have seen his brother Sam. I do not know him, or I am not acquainted with him. I have seen him in Marietta. He has been there on business within a few weeks.

Q. When did you first see him?

A. I suppose five or six weeks ago.

Q. Is he younger or older than Watson?

A. Younger.

Q. Larger or smaller?

A. Rather larger and rather taller. I do not think they resemble each other very much, though my recollection is rather indistinct as to that.

Q. How do you know he is a brother of Watson?

A. Only from my wife telling me so. She came home one day, and said Mr. Andrews's brother was in town. I do not think I have been introduced to him. I only know he is his brother, of course, from common report. A stranger coming into a town like Marietta always attracts attention and remark.

Q. Where did you understand Sam to reside?

A. I do not know; I do not think I heard.

Q. Do you know any of the other members of the family?
A. I have seen, I think, two other members of the family who attended college as students; I do not remember their names.
Q. Were they brothers of Watson Andrews?
A. Yes.
Q. Older or younger?
A. Younger, I think.
Q. Are they there yet?
A. I think not; I do not know whether they have graduated or not.
Q. Have you associated with them?
A. No; not very intimately with any of the family.
Q. Do you know whether Sam visited the Andrews family in Marietta?
A. I think he did, for at that time Watson was boarding with his uncle.
Q. Does Sam wear soldier's clothes?
A. I do not remember what kind of clothing he did have on.
Q. Do you know whether he was in the army or not?
A. No.
Q. Was Watson an officer in the army?
A. He was a captain, I think. I have not seen his commission. He was called captain.
Q. Have you seen either of them associating with other persons about Marietta, who were known to you as residents of the place?
A. No; there have been oil men going and coming, but they have not remained there for any length of time.
Q. Where is this Petroleum you speak of?
A. In West Virginia, about thirty miles from Parkersburg. I have seen these men in company with residents of Marietta. I am not in the habit of taking notice of such things.

By Mr. CHURCHILL:

Q. How long had you known this man, Watson Andrews, before he spoke to you of this letter?
A. I think about three months. I do not recollect the exact time. My first letter to Mr. Ashley will tell about the time.
Q. Did you understand from Watson Andrews that the person to whom the letter was addressed was his father?
A. I really cannot tell whether he said so in so many words; I have that impression. I think it probable he did tell me so, though I could not name any particular time.
Q. Did you understand from him whether this letter was received by the father or by his brother Sam.?
A. I do not think I ever knew.
Q. Did you understand from Watson Andrews from whom he received the letter?
A. No. And I do not know that he has the letter now. I found it in his possession.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. When you applied to Watson Andrews did he tell you he had to consult some one else?
A. Yes; and I suppose he consulted some one else, though I have no knowledge who that person is.
Q. Have you any belief about that?
A. No; I could not name any person he would be likely to consult unless it was his brother. His brother was in town at that time.
Q. Where was Sam. staying at that time?

A. I think at their uncle's. I think so merely from Watson's boarding there at that time.

Q. Is there any other person whom you believe or suspect was consulted at that time?

A. No, sir.

Q. Can you give the date when you asked him for the letter?

A. It was the day Major Alberger was there, (consulting memorandum;) it was the 19th of October, 1867.

Q. Have you any memorandum there of what occurred at that time?

A. I have simply this memorandum: "General Butler's private secretary here talking with me all day;" that is all the memorandum I have of it. This is a daily record of my business. I do not know that Alberger said he was General Butler's private secretary; I had that impression.

Q. You have now given the committee all you know in reference to this matter?

A. I have, and very much against my will.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Have you consulted Mr. Ashley about giving your testimony here?

A. I have not spoken with Mr. Ashley since I came to the city, until a few minutes ago in this committee room.

Q. Did you ask his advice as to whether you should disclose this man's name?

A. Yes; he advised me to tell all I knew in regard to the matter.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Do you know whether this Andrews was acquainted with the clerk at the Mansion House in Marietta?

A. My brother has been clerk at the Mansion House until very recently—until, I think, within four weeks; he is now in Baltimore; he knew the Andrewses by sight, as they have boarded there; I do not think he was acquainted with them.

Q. Do you know, or have you any reason to believe, your brother or either of the Andrewses had been using the name of Lockwood in corresponding in regard to this matter?

A. I do not know anything about it; I should hardly suppose my brother would be connected with such a practice; he is a mere boy, scarcely eighteen, and not at all mature; I do not know anything at all about it.

Q. Did you hear either of the Andrewses speak of a man by the name of Lockwood?

A. No.

Q. Can you give the name of the present clerk of the Mansion House?

A. I think he is one of the Andrewses; I have not been there for some time; I do not know whether it is Sam. or Watson, if either.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you know anything of a letter, signed by H. Lockwood, having been written to the private secretary of the President relative to this matter?

A. No; I was only told that negotiations were going forward with Colonel Moore.

Q. Did he say he had received any letter from Colonel Moore?

A. I do not think he did; but I scarcely passed a word with him on the subject, except to advise him not to do anything of the kind.

Q. Did you know any negotiations were going on with a man of the name of Lockwood?

A. No; I never heard the name in any such connection until since I came here.

Q. Have you any belief as to who wrote that letter?

A. I have only the same means of belief that you have—that it came from some of these parties; I know nothing more in regard to it than any of the committee. Whatever impression about it I have is derived from the facts I have disclosed.

Q. Did either of these parties know you were coming here to testify?

A. No; I presume they do now, and that everybody knows; I do not think they have any means of information on the subject that the public generally have not. The only persons I communicated with were my wife and the cashier of a bank with whom I was obliged to have some communication about money matters.

The letters shown to witness, and identified by him in the above testimony, are as follows:

MARIETTA, OHIO, September 10, 1867.

DEAR SIR: During the last session of Congress you will remember that an investigation was called in relation to the payment of one hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars to one hundred and ninety-three deserters, who were pardoned by direction of the President, for alleged political purposes. During the investigation by the Judiciary Committee the adjutant general of the President, Mr. Moore, testified that no letter had ever been received by the President from any political party in relation to the pardoning of these deserters. There was a letter written by Moore himself, by direction of the President, acknowledging the receipt of an application for their pardon, accompanied by the list of names of said deserters, from a candidate of the democratic party. This letter of acknowledgment also gives the order from the President for the release and payment of these deserters. Parties can be produced who will testify, if necessary, to the contents of the letter of application to the President. The party holding this letter of the President is negotiating with others for its possession, but I am satisfied that I can secure it, for a consideration, if immediate steps are taken. I have no interest in this, only so far as my interest in the welfare of the country and party goes. If you wish any information in reference to my character or standing, I can refer you to my friend Colonel S. H. Stafford, of this place, who was formerly a member of your staff. Please let me hear from you, if you consider it of importance.

I remain, yours, in haste,

J. E. GILMAN.

Hon. B. F. BUTLER.

MARIETTA, November 6, 1867.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Boutwell can make up his mind in relation to the letter and value of the evidence, giving me some idea of what action the committee will take in the matter, before the committee meet again. Will you please to send this to him, and request him to write me in reference to it. Anything to keep my hold on it good.

I remain, yours, in haste,

J. E. GILMAN.

M. H. ALBERGER.

TESTIMONY OF GENERAL L. C. BAKER.

WASHINGTON, November 22, 1867.

L. C. BAKER recalled and examined.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you ever state to any one that this Mrs. Harris was in this city and stopping at Willards' Hotel?

A. No; I stated to some one (I do not recollect who it was) that she was coming over in the cars. I had made an arrangement with her to come here, and I expected her over.

Q. Do you remember having any conversation with Mr. Smith, the reporter, with regard to this woman?

A. I do not recollect that I ever did; I might have had a conversation.

Q. Don't you remember telling him that you had brought the woman over here; that she was stopping at Willards' Hotel; and that you were anxious to see Mr. Ordway, in order to have her subpœnaed at once?

A. I recollect now I stated to Mr. Smith that I had made an arrangement for the woman to come here and be at Willards' Hotel, and that I wanted Mr. Ordway to go with me and subpœna her and take her right before the committee.

Q. When was that?

A. I have no idea; it was at the time I was meeting her in Philadelphia.

Q. Was it before or after the subpœna, which you say was served on her the 2d of July?

A. Before.

Q. Where did you make that arrangement?

A. At the Girard House. She had a man with her, who was cautioning her against coming to Washington all the time, I had been trying to get her here. I saw her on Sunday night, and gave her fourteen dollars to pay her expenses on here. I think it was on Monday that I met Mr. Smith. I did not want to be seen with her, because I thought it would embarrass me in making my arrangements to get the letters. I finally persuaded her to come on here; she was to have come that morning, and I recollect saying to Mr. Smith either that I have, or will have, that woman at Willards' this morning, and that I will go to Mr. Ordway and get a subpœna; but she did not come, and I do not believe she was ever in the city in her life.

Q. Was this conversation with Mr. Smith the same day you left with the Sergeant-at-arms for Philadelphia?

A. No; I guess it was long before that.

Q. Didn't you leave the same day for Philadelphia?

A. I was over there two or three times, and I do not know which time you mean.

Q. When the Sergeant-at-arms went over with you?

A. The Sergeant-at-arms never went over with me to Philadelphia that I know of.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. By what train did you come from Philadelphia?

A. By the morning train.

Q. By what train was she to come?

A. She was to come in the same train, or the train after.

Q. Do you, or not, know whether she was on the same train?

A. No, I do not think she was on the same train, because when I got up to the depot I waited there; when I saw her on Sunday night, she did not know that she would have time to go to Fifteenth street and Girard avenue, where she was stopping, and get her things ready, and if she did not she was to come in the next train. I was down at the depot waiting for her, and I went there on the arrival of three or four trains for her, but she did not come. I recollect now the statement I made to Mr. Smith very well.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you not tell him she was at Willards'?

A. I might have said she was there, or that she was to be here; I know I thought I had done a pretty smart thing to get her over here.

Q. Did she come on the same train with you?

A. No; she said she had some clothes to get ready before she could get away.

Q. Why did you leave without being certain that she would be here?

A. If she would not come I could not compel her to come; I had then been talking with her for some two or three weeks; others were cautioning her against coming to Washington.

Q. Could you not ascertain at the depot in Philadelphia whether she was deceiving you, or whether she was coming through with you?

A. I was coming through to Washington myself.

By Mr. THOMAS:

Q. Can you name any person who was ever present and saw you conversing with this woman?

A. No; she would never have any interview with me in the presence of others.

Q. Can you name anybody who ever saw her enter a house in which you were?

A. I never met her at any place except the Girard House in Philadelphia, and the Belvidere House in New York.

Q. Can you name anybody who saw her enter either of these houses at the time you mention?

A. No, sir; I cannot.

Q. How could she have had any interview with you without coming in contact with somebody in the hotel?

A. I met her in the parlor of the Girard House; I knew nothing about this woman at all; I had pretty much abandoned the idea of getting these letters.

Q. Can you name anybody who will come and testify that there is such a woman in existence?

A. No, I do not know that I can; I explained when I was before the committee, on a former occasion, all I knew about the woman, and when and where I first saw her.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You never explained about your arrangement to come on here?

A. That was after I had been examined the first and second time. I think it was since I was examined the last time.

Q. Do you remember Mr. Smith telling you where you would find the chairman of the committee?

A. I do not recollect that he did; I do not know that I asked him.

Q. Did you not tell him you would take a carriage and go at once to see the chairman about it?

A. No; I do not think I told him I would go to the chairman. I think I told him I would go to Mr. Ordway.

Q. You do not remember his telling you where Mr. Wilson was, and your saying you would go and see him?

A. I might have told him that; I cannot tell.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Why did you not state the arrangement you had made with this woman to be here that morning in the account you gave to the committee to-day?

A. It never occurred to me; I had made so many arrangements with her.

Q. Had you ever made any arrangement more important and definite with her than this?

A. Yes; I made an arrangement with her at the Belvidere House. She had no idea of coming before the committee at all; she wanted money for the letters; my idea was to have her here, so that she could negotiate with Mr. Ashley, or somebody else, for the letters. I thought if she would come to Washington she could be taken before the committee and forced to give up the letters.

By the CHAIRMAN:

Q. Did you ever tell Mr. Matchett you had not been treated well by Congress in the distribution of the award for the capture of Booth, and that you intended to make yourself whole out of the proceedings of this committee?

A. I never made any such statement in my life; I deny making any such statement. I have always stated that I believed I never got what was justly my due in the matter of the award; but that I was going to make it out of the committee, or retaliate, I never stated to anybody.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you tell Ashley you had arranged with this woman to come to Willards'?

A. I do not think I have seen Ashley since that time.

Q. Did you tell anybody else besides Mr. Smith about it?

A. I presume so; I do not recollect who I talked to about it. If the committee would understand for one moment the position in which I was placed with this woman, that I had no means of bringing her here, and my anxiety to get hold on the letters, they would appreciate what I endeavored to do.

Q. What became of that copy of Booth's diary said to have been made by Colonel Conger?

A. I do not know; I think I gave it to General Eckert. I either gave it to Eckert or Stanton; I certainly did not retain it in my possession; I did not think I had any right to retain it.

Q. How do you explain the fact that neither General Eckert nor Mr. Stanton could produce it?

A. I swear positively that I delivered it either to Stanton or Eckert.

Q. Where did you get the copy of the diary which you published in your book?

A. I only published a small portion of it.

Q. Where did you get that?

A. It was cut out of the newspapers; the newspapers published it before I did. A part of it was published within three months after the capture of the assassins.

Q. Do you know where Charles H. Caruthers now is?

A. He was here in Washington. I never knew him till he came to me, and I have seen him three or four times since. I rode in the cars with him from Baltimore once; the last time I saw him was about the time Surratt was tried. I was in Washington, and met him.

Q. Do you know C. G. Watkins?

A. Yes; he was with this man Adamson two or three times, and lives somewhere about Leonardtown, I believe, in lower Maryland; there are plenty of people who know him.

Q. What is he?

A. I don't know; he was a blockade runner. I have heard of the name very frequently. I have not seen him since 1865, when I saw him with this man Adamson. He had known Adamson before.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Matchett?

A. I know him.

Q. What is his first name, and what is his profession?

A. W. B.; he is a minister of the gospel, I believe.

Q. Have you met him frequently?

A. Yes; I arrested him in 1862, and put him in the Old Capitol prison.

Q. Have you seen him recently?

A. Yes, I saw him this morning.

Q. Did he go to Philadelphia to help you get Mrs. Harris?

A. Yes. He said Ashley sent him over; he had a blank subpœna which he filled up for Mrs. Harris.

Q. Did he come alone to you, or with somebody else?

A. I think he was alone

Q. Did you telegraph to him to come?

A. I do not recollect whether I telegraphed to him, or to Ashley. He came on, and went with me to New York.

Q. Did he subpœna this woman?

A. He called it subpœnaing her; he handed her a paper. I was not standing by the carriage at the time. I pointed out the carriage to him. I did not want her to see me with the sergeant-at arms. I was afraid she would not go. I put her into the carriage, pointed it out to Matchett, and he handed her the paper. I suppose it was a subpœna. I saw him have a subpœna with Ordway's name on it; and he says he handed it to her.

Q. How did you find her in a carriage?

A. I put her in a carriage to go to the Astor House, to see some parties there; she did not tell me who they were. I do not know whether she went there or not. After Matchett handed the paper to her I did not follow her.

Q. Where did you find her?

A. At the Belvidere House, on Fourth avenue and Thirteenth street.

Q. Is that all you and Matchett have had to do together about furnishing witnesses before this committee?

A. Oh, no. I don't know where I first fell in with Matchett in connection with this matter. I know I met him with Ashley, I think, when I came on from the west, the first time I was before the committee; I had not seen him for some time. I think it was in Ashley's committee room. Matchett followed me out of the room, and from the conversation we had I understood he had something to do with Ashley in hunting testimony; he afterwards came to my house in Philadelphia, and had a conversation with me about these letters. He appeared to be very anxious to have the letters obtained. He said that Ashley sent him. I do not know that I ever went with him to hunt any witnesses except this woman. He has talked a great deal about witnesses, and had subpœnas for them which he showed me. I cannot recollect any names, but he pretended to have a big pile of subpœnas and to be looking after witnesses.

Q. In the employment of Ashley?

A. In the employment of the committee; but he said Ashley gave him his instructions; at least that was the inference I got from his conversation.

Q. In your former examination you spoke of having $1,000 placed in your hands to get these letters with; if you had the opportunity, why did you not get them?

A. Because I did not have money enough.

Q. Was not $1,000 enough?

A. No, sir; not by a great deal.

Q. How much was wanting?

A. $25,000.

Q. Who made that proposition?

A. This woman made it.

Q. I understand that after this money was placed in your hand, you made no effort at all; why was that?

A. I found that I could not do anything at all towards getting these letters with that, and that it was no use to make any efforts.

Q. Who furnished you $1,000?

A. I received it from Whitney Jones, postmaster at Lansing, Michigan; I don't know where he got it. I do not think he stated.

Q. Were you expecting that money?

A. I was expecting more than that.

Q. Who had promised it to you?

A. Ashley. I do not know that there was any given amount fixed. I expected money in the first place sufficient to enable me to investigate whether these letters were genuine.

Q. How much did you expect?

A. I do not know. I did not know what I would have to do. I suppose a couple of thousand dollars.

Q. Did Ashley agree to furnish that?

A. Yes, three or four times in the committee room, in his room at the Metropolitan, in Philadelphia, and at various places.

Q. Has he been to see you on this business in Philadelphia?

A. Yes; two or three times.

Q. Where did you see Matchett this morning?

A. On Maryland avenue.

Q. Did you see him in Ashley's room to-day?

A. No; I have not seen Ashley since I came here.

Q. Have you spent no money that has been furnished you in getting these letters or subpœnaing these witnesses?

A. Not a dollar; I spent my own money.

Q. In your former examination you stated you knew these parties demanded money for the letters, but that before you had a chance to do anything the money was demanded, and you paid it back. Who made that demand?

A. Colonel Jones, the man from whom I had it; he said there had been nothing done, and the parties might be dissatisfied. I paid the money back to him and took his receipt. I didn't want anything to do with it in the first place.

Q. You said in your former examination that Matchett had seen the letters this woman had. Where did he see them?

A. In my office on 18th street, in Washington.

Q. You have said that you had an understanding with Mr. Jones as to how you were to get these letters. What was that understanding?

A. The only understanding was, that if the letters, after being submitted to the committee, proved to be genuine, the parties were to be paid; that was my understanding with Jones and the others.

Q. Who were the others?

A. This woman for one.

Q. Did you have any understanding with this committee, or any member of this committee, that they would pay you any money at any time?

A. No; and I never had any conversation with any member of this committee in reference to procuring witnesses.

Q. Don't you know that this man Matchett has been in the business of manufacturing evidence?

A. I never heard anything, except what I heard in the Conover case.

Q. Don't you know the fact from him, or from your communications with him, that he was ready to do it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Do you know Conover?

A. I never spoke to Conover in my life, or saw him but once; they wanted me to go and see him at the jail, but I would not go.

Q. Who wanted you to go?

A. Matchett; I don't think anybody else spoke to me about it.

TESTIMONY OF HON. JAMES M. ASHLEY.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Saturday, November 23, 1867.

JAMES M. ASHLEY sworn and examined.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You are the member of Congress who preferred the charges in the House of Representatives against the President for impeachment?

A. I am.

Q. Have you produced to this committee all the testimony of which you have any knowledge to sustain these charges?

A. All that I can present to the committee at this time.

Q. Have you produced to the committee all the evidence on which you made the charges?

A. Substantially all.

Q. Do you know a man by the name of Matchett?

A. I do.

Q. What is his first name?

A. I think it is William.

Q. Where is he now?

A. I think he is in the city. I saw him yesterday or the day before.

Q. Have you been engaged a considerable time during the sessions of the committee in endeavoring to procure testimony for the purpose of sustaining these charges?

A. I have.

Q. Have you ever employed Matchett to obtain testimony?

A. No. I have employed him to go to points for me where I could not very well go myself.

Q. Did you take him with you to Philadelphia to see Lafayette C. Baker?

A. No. I did not take him with me, but he may have been there at one of the times I was in Philadelphia.

Q. Did he go with you?

A. No.

Q. Did you send this man Matchett with a subpœna for Mrs. Harris?

A. I gave him a blank subpœna and told him to summon her, or the person pointed out by Baker.

Q. From whom did you procure the subpœna?

A. I do not recollect. I had half a dozen of them. I think I got them at the office of the Sergeant-at-arms, but I don't recollect.

Q. Did you send him with a subpœna to subpœna Mrs. Harris?

A. To subpœna a woman who, Baker said, was in Philadelphia with a letter which I wanted. I think Harris is the name.

Q. Did you write this letter?

FORTIETH CONGRESS, U. S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., July 22, 1867.

GENTLEMEN: I suggest that a petition something like the enclosed be prepared and signed by you for the pardon of Mr. Dunham. I think he is clearly entitled to it, and I hope you will aid him all you can.

J. M. ASHLEY.

Hon. J. HOLT, Hon. A. G. RIDDLE.

A. I presume I did. I do not recollect the exact wording of the letter, but that is substantially my recollection of it. I did write such a letter and give it to Dunham's wife, who called upon me.

Q. Did you enclose in that letter a petition such as is suggested by the letter itself?

A. No, sir. I think she had one drawn up by her husband.

Q. Did you enclose a petition like that in the letter?

A. I wrote the letter and handed it to her, and I think she put it in the envelope which contained the petition from her husband which she had shown me.

Q. Who is the man Dunham referred to?

A. He is a man with whom I became acquainted through some gentlemen calling on me one day to sign a petition for his reprieve or pardon. I think Mr. Radford, of New York, first introduced me to Dunham's wife and wanted me to sign a paper to the President for his pardon.

Q. Was that the first acquaintance you had with Dunham?

A. Yes, I believe so. I do not think I knew of his existence before that.

Q. Has he an alias?

A. I believe so. I understood one of his aliases to be "Conover." I did not know he had anything to do with the assassination trials. I was on the Pacific coast during the progress of the assassination trials and lost all the history of that matter. I did not know that he was in jail until I read the petition and had it explained to me. This petition was signed by Mr. Rogers, a member of the Judiciary Committee, and other members of this house. I did not sign the petition.

Q. When did you become acquainted with Dunham or Conover?

A. Perhaps it was a month after that, or it may have been less.

Q. Did you have any intercourse with Conover in reference to furnishing testimony on this impeachment examination?

A. I had several interviews with him—four, five, or six—(I do not recollect the number)—in which he promised to give me information that would lead to the obtaining of two or three letters purporting to have come from President Johnson and from Jefferson Davis.

Q. At what date did you get acquainted with him?

A. I do not recollect the date. It was shortly after this petition was presented to me—within two or three weeks, I should think. I declined to sign the petition because I did not know anything of the case.

Q. When was your introduction to Mrs. Dunham?

A. I think it was in the winter—in January or February last. I am pretty confident that my first introduction to Conover was after the introduction of my impeachment resolution in the House, which was in January, 1867. I have that petition, I think, among my papers—the original petition that she presented to me.

Q. Do you mean the petition of Charles Dunham?

A. The petition for his pardon by the President. The first introduction I had to his wife was in the ladies' reception room in the House.

Q. Did you write this letter?

THURSDAY MORNING, April 18, 1867.

DEAR SIR: A telegram calls me to Philadelphia, and I go on the 11 o'clock a. m. train. I therefore send you an envelope in which you can send me by mail your statement. I hope you will be able to put it in the office this evening, so that I can get it by next Monday. Wishing you every success, I am truly yours.

J. M. ASHLEY.

A. I wrote him a note substantially like it.

Q. What statement did you refer to in that letter?

A. I required him to tell me in writing, as nearly as he could recollect, the contents of the letters which he professed to give me an account of, and the names and residences of those who then had them in possession, giving me such facts as would enable me to get them.

Q. Do you know a man named Dawson?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Did you talk with Conover or Dunham of a man named Dawson, or a man named Allen?

A. I do not recollect of his ever saying anything to me about either Allen or Dawson.

Q. Did you suggest to have, in the statement that was to be furnished by him, for the names of Dawson and Allen blanks left, to be filled by such persons as he knew would take their places?

A. No, sir. I never made any such suggestion to him, nor he to me.

Q. Did you ever talk with him about Dawson or Allen?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. Did you know such parties.

A. I did not.

Q. Where did you hold your intercourse with Dunham?

A. In the reception room in the jail.

Q. Did you ever meet him at Willards' Hotel?

A. No, sir. I never saw him except in the jail where he was confined.

Q. Did you write this letter?

TOLEDO, OHIO, April 28, 1867.

MY DEAR SIR: On my return home to-day I found your favor and the promised statement enclosed. I expect to be in Washington on Thursday, and will see you that day or the next morning.

Truly your friend,

J. M. ASHLEY.

C. A. DUNHAM, Esq., Washington, D. C.

A. I wrote a note of that import, I presume.

Q. Have you that statement?

A. I have not. I sent it to Matchett, but I think I can get it.

Q. Did that relate to a charge against the President of having had to do with the assassination of President Lincoln?

A. I think there is a declaration in that statement that he (Dunham) is cognizant of the existence of a letter which would implicate the President in a guilty knowledge of the assassination. He made that statement in his letter to me. But the greater part of the paper referred to knowledge which he professed to have of other matters. There was nothing in the paper which was of any value to me, and I did not bring it to the notice, I think, of a single member of the committee.

Q. Did you not bring it to the notice of General Butler, and did not he and you have consideration of it?

A. No sir; I think I never showed it to him. I did not think there was enough in it to induce me to do so. The statements were so exaggerated that I did not spend much time over it after I got it. I finally said to Dunham: "If you get me the letters, then whatever aid I can give you I will."

Q. Did that statement refer to letters?

A. Yes, sir; I think so.

Q. Are you certain of it?

A. I think I can get the paper itself. I will not be positive about its contents. I sent the paper to Matchett after some publications came out in this city, and he told me the other day that he never got it until some days ago. I sent it by express. He said it was misdirected.

Q. In whose handwriting was that statement?

A. In Dunham's, as I have every reason to believe.

Q. You say that the statement was so exaggerated that you did not believe its contents?

A. I thought from numerous other statements which had been made to me that there might be such letters in existence; but the statement was so indefinite and so vague that I never sent a man to look into it, or "to work the case up," as detectives call it. I believe I never showed the statement to any one.

Q. Did you ever show it to Mr. Butler?

A. I think not. I don't believe I ever showed it to a single man.

Q. Did you not make a statement of it to this committee?

A. I think I have said that I had such a statement from this man, but I believe I never read it to a single member of the committee.

Q. Did that paper relate to evidence which it was supposed would implicate Mr. Johnson in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. Yes, sir. There were paragraphs in the paper which related to Johnson's supposed guilty knowledge of the assassination.

Q. Was there a suggestion in that paper that certain proofs would be necessary in order to fasten that on Mr. Johnson?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. There was no such intimation in the paper?

A. I think not.

Q. Did this appear in the paper: "For the names of Dawson and Allen, used by them, leave blanks, or substitute the names of such persons as you know will take their place?"

A. No, sir. I am very clear that there was nothing like that in the statement.

Q. Why did you send that statement away after this talk about it in the papers?

A. I was at home in Toledo, and sent it here to Mr. Matchett because he wrote for any paper I might have from Dunham.

Q. Why did you not keep it for your own protection?

A. I did not need protection of that kind.

Q. Why did you not keep it for this committee?

A. I think I can get it for the committee now, if they want it.

Q. Did you think it of any use?

A. I did not think it of any use.

Q. Did you consider that, from its exaggerated or from its frivolous and unconnected statements, it was not truthful, so that you did not care anything about it on that account?

A. The statement was so indefinite that I did not think any detective would undertake to hunt up evidence upon it. It might have been true, for all I knew, but I certainly would not undertake to look it up.

Q. Have you not stated to members of the House of Representatives that you had evidence in your possession which would implicate Mr. Johnson in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. No; not evidence in my possession. I may have said that I had statements made, in writing and otherwise, by this man and that, which induced me to believe it. I may have said that.

Q. Have you ever brought that evidence on which you believe it before this committee?

A. No, sir.

Q. Why did you not?

A. I have spoken to members of this committee about it. I have had no evidence which I regarded as valid; it was only an isolated statement of parties here and there, and not sufficiently strong to warrant me in presenting it.

Q. Then do you say before this committee that you had no evidence against Mr. Johnson which you considered as valid?

A. Yes. I had no evidence which I regarded as sufficient for the conviction of a criminal before a jury, and hence I never presented it.

Q. You had no evidence in your possession which you considered of sufficient importance to be considered by this committee?

A. No; I had not. If I had I should have presented it.

Q. I repeat the question whether you have not told members of the House of Representatives that you had evidence in your possession which satisfied you that Mr. Johnson had taken part or was implicated in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. I have said that I believed, from all that I had been able to gather during this investigation, that Mr. Johnson had a guilty knowledge of the assassination.

Q. You have said that before. I repeat the question as I put it before, and I want an answer to it specifically.

WITNESS. Have I not answered it?

Mr. EDDRIDGE. No, sir; I think not. I repeat the question:

Q. Have you stated to members of the House of Representatives that you had evidence which satisfied you that Mr. Johnson was connected with or implicated in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. Yes, certainly I have.

Q. Then I ask you why did you not produce this evidence to the committee?

A. Because it was not of that legal character which would have justified me in presenting it. It satisfied me from my stand-point, and that is what I meant.

Q. Then what do you mean by saying that you had no evidence in your possession which you considered valid?

A. It was not that kind of evidence which would satisfy the great mass of men, especially the men who do not concur with me in my theory about this matter. I have had a theory about it. I have always believed that President Harrison and President Taylor and President Buchanan were poisoned, and poisoned for the express purpose of putting the Vice Presidents in the presidential office. In the first two instances it was successful. It was attempted with Mr. Buchanan, and failed. It succeeded with Mr. Taylor and Mr. Harrison. Then Mr. Lincoln was assassinated, and from my stand-point I could come to a conclusion which impartial men, holding different views, could not come. It would not amount to legal evidence.

Q. Do you mean to say you have formed an opinion and expressed it to members of Congress that there was evidence to implicate Mr. Johnson which was not legal evidence?

A. Yes, sir; it satisfied me, just as a man will say that he is satisfied a person is guilty of murder even when he escapes in a trial before a jury.

Q. Then you stated to these men, when you did make this statement, a conclusion which was founded on evidence which you did not consider legal?

A. It was founded on isolated statements which, standing alone, would have been of no legal value, and I think the majority of men would not have come to the conclusion I did on reading or hearing the statements made to me; hence I did not care to present it or come before the committee with it.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Do you not think that if you had any evidence tending in the slightest degree in that direction, it would have been proper for this committee to see for itself whether the evidence was important or not?

A. I had made no charge of that kind in the specifications for the impeachment of the President, and I did not think that this committee was specially charged with its investigation after the close of the thirty-ninth Congress. I therefore did not care to waste my time in looking up matters which were so indefinite as many of these statements which had been made to me were. It is difficult at all times to ferret out a great crime, and I had neither the time nor the means with which to do it.

Q. That is not an answer to my question. Would it not have been proper to inform this committee, so that it might have resorted to means within its power to investigate the matter?

A. I have presented all the facts that I knew anything of in reference to this matter to General Butler, since his committee was formed, especially charged with this matter; and I have talked to him and given him whatever information I had, and my convictions—suspicions if you will—as to Mr. Johnson's complicity in the assassination.

Q. Were you not investigating this matter and holding consultations with Conover long before General Butler's committee was formed?

A. Yes.

Q. And was not that for the purpose of getting evidence to use before the Judiciary Committee?

A. I intended to use it either before this committee, or before the House, or before the Senate, in case of trial, if I ever obtained it. I was led to believe, by the statements of Baker and other men, that there were in existence letters tending to show Johnson's guilty knowledge. There seemed to be a uniformity of statement in reference to the existence of certain letters, coming from parties who, so far as I knew, were not in collusion with each other; and I was impressed with the fact that such letters did exist, and I certainly expected to get them if they did exist. So far as this committee was concerned, as I made no specific charge against the President on that head, I did not care to say anything to the committee about it, because the mere publicity given to such a thing the greater difficulty there would be in obtaining the evidence.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you not examine a witness before this committee yourself on that very question?

A. I may have asked one or more witnesses some questions on that subject during the life of the thirty-ninth Congress.

Q. Would you make so grave a charge as that against the President of the United States on bare suspicion?

A. No, sir; not on bare suspicion.

Q. Would you make such a charge as that against the President of the United States on illegal or invalid evidence?

A. I say I never made such a charge.

Q. I understood you to say that you had done so to members of Congress?

A. I said I had that kind of evidence which satisfied me of it.

Q. But you say now that it only raised a suspicion in your mind that it was so?

A. From the first I had a suspicion, and these statements, which came to me from a variety of sources, tended to confirm it and to bring me to believe that Johnson had a guilty knowledge either before or after the fact.

Q. Have you ever offered this committee a particle of evidence tending to prove any one of the charges, which the committee has not received?

A. No, sir.

Q. Have you ever proposed to produce any testimony to this committee tending to prove either of the charges you made against the President, where the committee has not been willing to receive it?

A. I have not.

Q. You say that your interviews with Conover were not alone to get evidence that Mr. Johnson was connected with the assassination, but evidence of other charges. Did you seek to get such evidence through Conover?

A. I was anxious to get any evidence to maintain the charges that I had made here, and I hoped that out of any letters of this kind which might come into my possession some such evidence would be elicited. I did not see very well how a general conspiracy could have existed, and a guilty knowledge of the great crime of assassination could have existed, without something else being disclosed also to maintain the charges which were already before the committee for investigation.

Q. How many times did you have interviews with Conover?

A. Five or six times.

Q. No more than that?

A. I think not.

Q. Did you have interviews with him late at night; after 12 o'clock at night?

A. No, sir. I believe I saw him two or three times at night, and the other times in daylight.

SATURDAY, A. M., June 1, 1867.

DEAR SIR: Your note is just received. Let your counsel act as they deem best, taking advantage of every legal point which may be presented. I think the course proposed by them is all that we want.

Truly,

J. M. ASHLEY.

Q. Did you write this letter to Conover?

A. I think so, substantially. I wrote him some such letter:

Q. Did you write this letter?

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, July 8, 1867.

MY DEAR SIR: I have just seen your wife, and have your letter. You may rest assured that I do not credit the false and stupid reports made against you. If you had the letters, I know you would never send copies to J———. If you can put the originals in my hands, I shall see that no one shall take or destroy them, without your express order in writing, except you are released. Will see your wife again this evening.

Respectfully, J. M. ASHLEY.

C. A. DUNHAM.

A. Yes, I think so; that is substantially as I wrote it.

Q. Who is J———?

A. Johnson.

Q. Did you know of this letter being written?

APRIL 24, 1867.

DUNHAM: It is all right. The matter will rest for the present, or till the thing is argued in May. You will not leave the city ad interim. Mr. A. will will return next week, when any other matters will be adjusted.

Yours, W. B. M.

A. No, sir; that was never written by me.

Q. Was it written by Mr. Matchett, under your directions?

A. No, sir. No man ever wrote him a letter by my directions.

Q. Is Matchett's name W. B. Matchett?

A. I think so.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. State to the committee any knowledge that you have of Mr. Johnson's complicity in the assassination of Mr. Lincoln, and which you have withheld from this committee.

A. I have not had a living witness that I could present, or I should have come to the committee with him.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Give to the committee any evidence or fact which you know, tending in any degree to fasten the assassination on Mr. Johnson.

A. I never withheld anything from the committee which I regarded as evidence; but I did not look for evidence in that direction, particularly for this committee, after the expiration of the thirty-ninth Congress.

Q. Then you state now, as you did before, that you know of no other evidence tending to show that fact?

A. I know of none at present which I could bring to the knowledge of the committee, or I should bring it. I have given General Butler all the matters that I regarded as of sufficient importance, to let him look them up and see whether there was anything in them or not—such as letters—some of them anonymous, and some of them, doubtless, with fictitious names.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. How long was it after you made these charges before the House against the President of the United States, which led to this investigation on the subject of impeachment, until you first saw this man Conover?

A. I think it was about a month, more or less; not very long.

Q. Under what circumstances did you first have an interview with him, and what led to it?

A. His wife presented me a petition to sign for his pardon. I declined to sign it. Mr. Matchett and she finally came to me and told me that her husband knew of matters of great importance to me and to the country, and that if I would aid him in being released, he would put me in possession of them. After listening to this statement, I think I asked her to bring me a statement from him in writing, which she did, or which somebody did; I think she did. That statement led to an interview. I thought I would go and see Conover, as he requested it.

Q. That was some time in January or February last?

A. Along in the winter; it may have been in March. I can fix the time better if I look over some of my papers.

Q. That was your first interview with Conover?

A. Yes; the first time I ever saw him was in jail.

Q. And that interview, you say, was sought in the first instance by Mrs. Conover?

A. Yes; that is, she told me what she thought her husband could do.

Q. What was the date of your last interview with Conover?

A. I do not recollect. I think it was along in April.

Q. Was your first interview before he was convicted of the crime of perjury?

A. I think not, but I am not certain.

Q. How many interviews did you have with him before his trial?

A. I do not remember to have seen him before his trial.

Q. To the best of your recollection?

A. I really do not recollect whether I saw him before the trial or not. My impression is that I did not see him during the trial, but I am not clear about it. I really did not get interested enough in the thing until I was promised a written statement from him, which I will produce if I can lay my hand on it.

Q. All the interviews you had with him were in the jail of Washington?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you, in visiting the jail, seek privacy?

A. I was always alone with him.

Q. Did you resort to any means to prevent the fact of your visit being known to the public?

A. No, sir. There were people coming in and out of the jail in daylight and at night, while I was there.

Q. At what hour at night did you visit him?

A. Usually after dinner.

Q. Were you ever there as late as 10 o'clock at night?

A. I may have been. I do not recollect. I am usually in bed by 11 o'clock. I do not think I ever went to the jail after 10. I remember at one time remaining an hour or longer with him, and it may have been after 10 o'clock when I left.

Q. Did you ever more than one time remain as long as an hour?

A. Yes. I think I did twice.

Q. Did you ever suggest to this man Conover any character of evidence that it was important to obtain?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever intimate to him that you desired to get evidence of certain facts against the President which it was important to obtain?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever hold out any inducement to him to furnish information of any kind?

A. I told him that if he furnished those letters which he professed to have knowledge of, I would use whatever influence I had to secure his release.

Q. Did you ever have an interview with either of the judges of the supreme court of the District of Columbia on the subject of the trial of Conover?

A. I asked Judge Fisher, and I think Judge Cartter, to suspend sending him off until I could see what he could get. In the mean time I told his counsel, who came to me, that if I were in their place I would push for a new trial, and would use all the delays incident to the law.

Q. Did you ever suggest to Judge Fisher or Judge Cartter any course that might be taken by the court for the purpose of operating on the mind of Conover?

A. No, sir; I only asked them to suspend sending him to Albany.

Q. Did they take any action on your suggestion?

A. I think they did. I think they did not send him off for two or three weeks, till I could see what could be got.

Q. Did you ever have any conversation with either of those judges in reference to the point on which an effort might be made to arrest judgment or to get a new trial?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was there ever any talk among the members of the court before his sentence in reference to the statute under which the sentence would be passed?

A. I do not know; I never made a suggestion to them about it.

Q. What did you mean in this note to Conover where you suggest that his counsel is taking the right course, and that he had better rely upon them; had you ever intimated to him that you had a talk with the court on the subject?

A. I told him I had asked the court to suspend the execution of his sentence, giving him time to get those papers

Q. Did you ever tell him that if he would furnish you any important evidence against the President you would secure his release?

A. Yes; I told him I would do what I could to secure his release.

Q. Were you ever at the jail with him as late as eleven o'clock at night?

A. I think not.

Q. How did you come to have such frequent and prolonged interviews with him?

A. I never remember seeing him but twice for any length of time. One of those interviews was to learn something in connection with the Surratt trial. His wife had said to me that he knew of some witnesses who would be important on that trial, and I was anxious to get the facts, and I went and took them in writing and gave them to Mr. Riddle, who was one of the counsel for the government in the Surratt trial.

Q. Did you ever remain in conference with Conover as late as eleven o'clock at night?

A. I think not It might possibly be so, but I do not think that I was later than twenty or thirty minutes after ten.

Q. Were those protracted interviews with him after he was sentenced?

A. I think they were.

Q. Did you ever have an interview with any other convict in the jail on the subject of procuring testimony?

A. No, not in this case. I had an interview with a man named Cleaver in the jail, of whom this man Conover gave me information. That was altogether in reference to the Surratt matter.

Q. Was Cleaver under sentence for any crime at the time?

A. Yes.

Q. How many interviews did you have with Cleaver?

A. Two, I think.

Q. Did you ever hold out any inducement to him to furnish evidence?

A. Not with reference to anything here. It was in reference to the Surratt trial. I told him that if he was in possession of any facts of importance, I would take them and present them to Mr. Riddle, and if the evidence was of value he would undoubtedly be released.

Q. Have you seen Cleaver since?

A. Yes; he has come to my room two or three times since.

Q. How was his release secured?

A. I do not know whether he was pardoned by the President or not. I think he was, but I am not certain. I think Mr. Riddle presented the case to Mr. Seward, and that Mr. Seward got him pardoned by the President; but of that I have no personal knowledge.

Q. Did you ever send Matchett to Conover with any instructions?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often?

A. May-be half a dozen times.

Q. What were the instructions?

A. Substantially as you see them in those notes, that if he would get the papers and give them to me I would not use them or allow them to be used by anybody unless they should inure to his benefit, and that I should have his consent in writing to their use before I should use them.

Q. Look at this memorandum, marked A, and state whether you ever saw it before.

A. I never saw it in writing. I may have seen it in the newspapers. I did not read it carefully if I did.

The memorandum is as follows:

A—Memorandum.

Shortly before the inauguration of Lincoln and Johnson, the latter, through or in connection with Booth, sent several letters to the confederacy, one of which was intended for Jefferson Davis. These letters were borne by a messenger named Allen, who had been acting as a scout or spy for one of the Union generals. Allen was provided with a safe conduct through our picket lines, and was supposed to have been sent on secret duty in connection with his command. He was also provided with papers from a rebel emissary at the north, to insure him proper treatment when he should enter the confederate lines. After delivering his mail in Richmond, he returned bearing several letters which he received from J. P. Benjamin. These letters were enclosed to Booth. On returning to Washington Allen called on Booth and delivered the package, and Booth, after examining some of the letters, went out, as he said, in search of his messenger. The messenger could not be found, and Booth asked Allen if he was too tired to go as far as the Kirkwood House. Allen replied in the negative, when Booth, drawing forth the package brought from Richmond, selected a letter addressed to "Andrew Johnson, Vice-President elect of the United States," and asked Allen to deliver it. Allen promised to do so, and then accompanied Booth to the bar-room to first take a drink. Here Allen met a friend, who was invited to join them in taking a drink, and afterward accompanied him to the Kirkwood, and heard him inquire if Mr. Johnson was in, and saw him go for his (Johnson's) room. This friend waited until Allen came down stairs, when he asked him, jocularly, what in the devil business he had to do with Johnson; if he was already begging for an office. Allen can be produced, as well as the friend who accompanied him to the Kirkwood from Booth. Allen, before going to Richmond, had been led by Booth to believe that he was a confidential and secret agent for the government, and that the letters borne by him had reference to peace propositions, which would speedily lead to a suspension of hostilities and the restoration of the Union. Add, also, that it can further be proved by two persons, formerly rebel soldiers, that Booth, on the first or second day before his death, fell in with them near Garrett's, and asked their advice and assistance in his efforts to escape. He informed them that he had killed Lincoln, and thereby made a good southern man President. One of the parties, whose name is Dawson, said to him that, if he meant that he had made Andy Johnson President, he had done the worst possible thing for the South, as he was more extreme in his views and a greater enemy to the South than Lincoln. Booth replied that it was a mistake; that Johnson, as a candidate and office-seeker, had to say a great many things, but that as President he could do as he pleased; that he was bound to be a friend of the South; and that if he went back on him (Booth) he would have him hung higher than Haman. These men belong to good families, and bear excellent characters, and can be produced as witnesses.

Q. Do you know of any memorandum of that character having been furnished to any one?

A. No, sir.

Q. Are you acquainted with Matchett's handwriting?

A. Yes, sir; it is a peculiar handwriting, and I think I would know it. I never saw that memorandum in writing; I may have seen it in newspapers, but I never read it carefully before.

Q. You know nothing either of it or of the note, which purports to be appended to it?

A. No, sir.

Q. Were any persons ever brought to this city under the directions or suggestions of Conover, to be examined by you or any other gentleman here, to your knowledge?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you ever have any witnesses here who professed to know important facts, in reference to this charge against the President, about this conspiracy, whom you examined or had examined by members of Congress or others?

A. No, sir; I have never had any person brought here to be examined by any one except myself.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Has Matchett procured any person for that purpose?

A. Not with my knowledge or approval. He may have sent persons to me, but I do not remember any.

Q. You have not seen any one?

A. I think not—no person except those who have been examined before this committee, who knew any facts of importance.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. Did you, with General Butler or anybody else, examine witnesses to see whether their testimony, as they stated the facts, bore upon this investigation?

A. I have had numbers of men brought to me, or coming to me voluntarily, who thought they knew important matters, and when they made their statement it was worthless. Those who knew nothing I declined to have summoned.

Q. Did you ever know anything of a man named Harrison, in connection with testimony which he was to furnish?

A. I do not recollect any such name.

Q. Did you ever take persons who professed to know important facts, or to have the means of getting at important papers, to General Butler, or any other member of the House, to be examined?

A. I may, and probably have sent to General Butler persons who have come to me since the assassination committee has been formed, professing to give me information on that subject.

Q. Did you ever go to General Butler or Mr. Bingham, or any other member of the House, with persons who professed to know facts?

A. I may have been with Mr. Bingham when Mason was here, but I do not think I was; I know I spoke to Bingham about it, and told him that this man was here, and that I would like to have him examine him.

Q. Who is Mason?

A. He was a professed British subject, who was brought here at the Surratt trial. I do not think, however, that I was ever present when Mr. Bingham examined him, if he did examine him.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. You say he is the only one with whom you went to Bingham with reference to this matter?

A. I do not think I even went with him.

Q. You do not think you went with any one?

A. No. I have been present when Bingham has examined one or two parties, but I think it was in connection with the assassination trial.

Q. Do you not recollect two men coming here professing to know Dunham—men whom he suggested—and that you and Matchett had interviews with them?

A. No, sir; no man ever came here at his suggestion whom I ever saw, that I remember. I do not recollect a single living witness suggested by him who ever came in contact with me. It may have been so, but I have no recollection of any such thing.

Q. Do you recollect Mrs. Dunham going off to Ogdensburg after a witness?

A. I do not know where she went; she went off half a dozen times, professing to get evidence.

Q. Did she not go to get witnesses suggested by Conover?

A. I do not think she ever went to get any living witness; I think she went after papers; certainly no witness ever came with her, and she never got any papers relating to the question of impeachment.

Q. Did she not, at the time she went to Ogdensburgh, go there by the direction of Conover, or Dunham?

A. I do not know that she ever went to Ogdensburg.

Q. Did she not profess to go?

A. I do not know where she went; she went off.

Q. To get some testimony suggested by Dunham?

A. I do not know whether it was suggested by him or not, but I presume it was. All that I was after was the manuscript letters.

Q. Who furnished her the money to go with?

A. I furnished her some once or twice.

Q. How much money did you furnish her?

A. I do not recollect how much; I gave her once $50, and once $5; I do not think I ever furnished her with anything but those amounts.

Q. Did you examine two witnesses with reference to their proving the statements in this memorandum, "A?"

A. I never remember examining anybody to prove anything in that memorandum, or any memorandum furnished by Dunham.

Q. Did Dunham tell you, in conversations that you had with him, that he could get witnesses to prove the facts stated in that memorandum?

A. I never had any conversation with him about it, and never saw it in manuscript at all. The evidence I was after was said to be in writing. That was all I cared to get. All I asked for, and all I wanted, was two letters which he professed to have, or was able to get. All his statements about witnesses, whatever they were, I paid no attention to.

Q. Did you tell any member of Congress that there were two witnesses in town who were able to give important testimony on the subject of Mr. Johnson's connection with the assassination of Mr. Lincoln?

A. I do not recollect. I may have done so. If I did, I alluded to this man Mason, and a man he named who resided in or near this city.

Q. But you say his testimony had no relation to Mr. Johnson?

A. He professed in his conversation with me to know things that would tend to implicate Johnson, and, if he told me the truth, he did know.

Q. In the written statement which he has made there is nothing which would implicate Mr. Johnson—is there?

A. No, I think not; at least, that is my recollection of it now.

Q. Was it before or after he made that written statement that you talked with him?

A. It was long after—months after. It was during the Surratt trial. He was here in town two or three weeks, and he came to my room two or three times.

Q. If those letters were the only subject of your conversation with Dunham, what was the necessity of your meeting him so frequently and being with him so long each time?

A. One of the times I was in conversation with him about this man Cleaver, whom I did not know anything about, and after I got out of him all the facts I could, I terminated my interview; but he was disposed to talk, and he would talk a half hour at a stretch if you would listen to him. Some of his conversation when I first knew him was rather entertaining, and I listened to him, hoping to get something of importance from him.

Q. You sat there and talked with him merely for the purpose of passing an hour by his entertainment?

A. I wanted to see what I could get out of him. He was rather an extraordinary man in his appearance and conversation, and I felt convinced he knew more about the assassination than he was willing to tell. I was disposed to listen to him, and did listen to him.

Q. Did you ever get any letters in your possession from him?

A. Nothing that was of any value.

Q. What do you refer to in your letter in which you say, "On my return home to-day I found your favor?"

A. That is the statement which he promised to give me in writing in detail.

Q. The one which Matchett now has?

A. Yes; the one I sent to him.

Q. Is that in Conover's handwriting?

A. Yes.

Q. You say you can produce it?

A. I think so.

Q. It is stated in this paper that the word "verbal" is stricken out before the word "statement." Why did you strike that out?

A. I do not know anything about it. I do not see what sense it would make.

By Mr. MARSHALL:

Q. How long have you been acquainted with Matchett?

A. My acquaintance with him commenced after this investigation began.

Q. Under what circumstances were you introduced to him?

A. I think the first time I ever saw him was in connection with this Dunham case. I think he was interested in procuring a pardon for Dunham. He seemed to know Mr. Radford, and whether Mr. Radford introduced him to me or not I cannot say At all events, he was introduced to me about that time—along last winter.

Q. Dunham had not been tried last winter, had he?

A. He must have been tried and convicted before there was a pardon asked for him. Matchett may have come and introduced himself just as hundreds of other men do.

Q. Did you not have connection with Matchett during nearly all those interviews that you had with Conover?

A. I do not think that he was present at any one of them.

Q. Did you not have interviews with him in reference to your conferences with Conover?

A. I have told him much that Conover said to me.

Q. You stated a while ago that you had sent him frequently to Conover?

A. Yes; I sent him half a dozen times, or more.

Q Was not that all before this application for pardon?

A. No; I think it was afterwards.

Q. Did you not know anything about the character of Matchett?

A. Nothing, only that he was represented to me to be a clergyman who had been a chaplain in our army du ing the war.

Q. Who represented him as such?

A. He represented himself, and so did others who came with him to my room. I think he showed me his commission, signed by Governor Morgan, of New York.

Q. Was Matchett frequently at your room?

A. Yes.

Q. You cannot state distinctly the date of your first acquaintance with him?

A. No. It commenced, I know, after this investigation. That is, I think it did; I feel confident it did.

Q. Did Matchett volunteer his services in aiding you in this matter?

A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Did Matchett ever receive any pay for his services?

A. No, sir; not from me. I have paid his expenses whenever I sent him away, but I never have paid him any per diem.

Q. You think he came to you and volunteered his services in the matter?

A. Yes. I do not recollect exactly how I got acquainted with him. He probably came and volunteered his services and then I made inquiries about him. A great many men came and did so and gave me references. I employed Major Alberger for some time. He was recommended to me by General Butler. He had been on his staff, I think.

By Mr. ELDRIDGE:

Q. Did you and Mr. Butler send Matchett for two witnesses or more who came here to Washington and were examined by you and whom you afterwards introduced to members of Congress?

A. No, sir; I do not recollect any such transaction ever occurring. I never examined a single witness with General Butler.

Q. Did General Butler examine persons and then introduce them to you?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you and General Butler introduce to members of Congress men whom Matchett had procured?

A. I never did. I do not know what General Butler did.

Q. Dunham says in his statement, "These persons were inspected by Ashley and Butler, and were found to possess the requisite qualifications as to intelligence and personal appearance, but, unfortunately for the impeachers, it was deemed necessary to make some changes and modifications and additions to their statements before presenting them." Is there anything true in that?

A. Not a word, as far as I know.

Q. You did not introduce any witness to any member of Congress who had been procured by Matchett through Dunham?

A. No, sir.

JAMES M. ASHLEY.