ROUND TWO: FEDERAL AGENCIES AND CONFERENCE SPENDING

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 2006

U.S. SENATE,
SUBCOMMITTEE ON FEDERAL FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT,
GOVERNMENT INFORMATION, AND INTERNATIONAL SECURITY, OF THE COMMITTEE ON HOMELAND SECURITY AND GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC.

The Subcommittee met, pursuant to notice, at 2:33 p.m., in room SD–342, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Tom Coburn, Chairman of the Subcommittee, presiding.

Present: Senators Coburn and Carper.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR COBURN

Senator COBURN. The Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management will come to order.

I want to welcome our guests. I want to apologize for being late. That is one of my sticklers, and we are a couple of minutes late. Senator Carper will be here for a short period of time. He has some other things that he has to take care of, and I am going to just start with out him.

I want to explain to you why we are having this hearing, and it is not really about conferences and travel. It is really about, Can the American people trust us to be prudent in a time when we are spending $400 billion of their kids' money every year that we do not have?

And I am reminded of President Roosevelt, prior to World War II, when he cut his own programs that he had instituted by 23 percent to make sure we had the resources to do what was in the best long-term interest of our country. I am reminded of Harry Truman, who did the same thing for the Korean War. We did not fund the Korean War on the backs of our grandchildren.

In an area where we have discretion, where leadership can make a difference, where we can make a difference by leading by example and have impact in every other area of the Federal Government, we ought to do so. And quite frankly, the leadership that I have seen is not doing that—and I am not just talking about this area. This is an area, because I think there is some waste, that if we concentrate on that and use as an example, we might, in fact, find other areas where we might not have to borrow money from our grandkids.

So you see a couple of charts over there.[1] It is not meant to embarrass anybody, and this is not about beating up on anybody today, but really having some examples. I came back from Iraq this weekend, and one of the problems that concerns me—I had two hotel nights, got to stay in really nice hotels. Was fed well, and the person that traveled with us, the military liaison, paid all our expenses, and everything else. There is $670 in these two envelopes of per diem, which is at the same rate that Federal employees get per diem, that is mine. Well, that is ludicrous. The only other trip I have taken as a U.S. Senator was China, and I turned back in $573. Well, nobody is required to turn that money in.

So that says, first of all, there is a problem with per diems in excess. Second, it is not reported as taxable income when, in fact, it really should be. And, third, the idea that we have conferences and we pick the conference not on the basis of need, very often, but we pick the conference based on whether or not we can take some paid time off associated with it. And so the decision is made on where the conference is rather than on the necessity of having the conference.

And I am not saying that is necessarily wrong. I understand the extreme need for you to bring people together and I know you cannot always do it on digital videoconferencing. I have done that between Geneva and here and Belgium and here. I have done a lot of that, and I know that sometimes the quality of that is not great. But the thing that is going before us is we are at war. And if the Members of Congress are not going to lead, you all can. You can set an example.

We had two Departments, EPA and HHS, after our first hearing that set into place some very good requirements. And just a couple of things that I would put forward to you all as leaders is I think that some important questions ought to be asked—and you can get this from my staff—about conference and travel, and they are the following: Does the conference help further the Department's mission? Really, does it change the mission? Does it enable the mission? Could the information be shared through another means, such as videoconferencing or Internet? Is the location appropriate and is the location justified given the fact that we are in a time of war?

What would the average American think about their tax dollars being spent on this conference at this location? What would they think?

Now, we are going to put out all the ones that we think are somewhat questionable onto the Internet, and I am sure that most Americans are not going to agree that they are appropriate. They may be justified, but they are not going to agree. So we ought to create an expectation that we are frugal with their money for the future's sake.

Is the number of employees attending justified? Does participation in the conference validate or endorse our foreign policy or our values or the Administration's policy? Or does it undermine it? Does the conference give a platform to ideas and panelists who undermine our American interests rather than support our interests?

[1] Charts referred to appears in the Appendix on page 33–35 respectively.

Is it a wise use of tax dollars when we have almost a $9 trillion debt, growing at a half a trillion dollars a year? And is it must-do for efficiency and economy for the Department?

I know each of you are professionals. I know you are good managers. What I want to do is have you refocus an effort. With $1.6 billion on conferences—I have examples. I will not go into them. I will put my written statement into the record. But I think there are some highly questionable trips out there, and that means probably 85 percent are fine. And what I am talking about is the 15 percent that is not.

When DHS is going to increase their conference spending 148 percent this year, I think, their conference level, and others—the Department of Labor is the lowest in terms of increasing expenditures, but on average, we have seen a 14-percent increase on average per year in the last 6 years. That is with the data that we have today. And that is in spite of advancing technology.

Can't we do better? Can't we manage it better? Can't we make better decisions? And can't each of us in the areas of influence on this one area, which sets the tone, can we not also change this process—and I know you do not set the process, and I assure you, I am going to change this process. But can we not make it accountable?

Per diem money that is not spent ought to be turned in to the Federal Government when we are spending $430 billion under real accounting rules more than we have every year. It should not be to enrich people who take conference trips.

With that, I will end my statement.

[The prepared statement of Senator Coburn follows:]

PREPARED STATEMENT OF SENATOR COBURN

Welcome to Round 2 of Federal Agencies and Conference Spending. This past February we held a hearing after an oversight investigation revealed that the Federal Government had spent over $1.4 billion on conference-related travel and meetings in the last five years. I called another hearing on this topic because this figure is set to increase by at least $300 million after 2006 totals are tallied. The ten witnesses appearing before the Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management have been called because they either have not provided information I requested about their fiscal year 2006 conference activity or their responses were late.

I still have not received 2006 information from USAID or the Department of Agriculture. The Departments of Justice and Treasury submitted their data yesterday afternoon. Several of you informed my staff that people were on vacation in August so that is why you were unable to complete the request on time. However, when the information was due in early July, I don't see how August vacations are relevant. I hope that these agencies can assure us today that they'll submit final reports to this Subcommittee at the end of the month when the fiscal year concludes, and for those who have already responded, please update your information.

I want to thank the Departments of Labor, Commerce and Treasury for submitting their testimony on time. The other seven witnesses were late. I set these deadlines so I can review your testimony ahead of time and we can have a productive session at the hearing.

THE FINDINGS

- In a review of your conference data, a few things that caught my eye between location, attendance levels, topic and cost:
- USAID reported sending 3 people to Orlando for a conference they described as: "workshops and networking for feds in D.C."
- The Department of Labor sent 5 people to Vietnam for a conference on strategies for workforce development. They also sent someone to Hong Kong for an OSHA conference.

- The Department of Interior spent $722,000 to send 125 employees to a 4-day conference just 70 miles outside of Washington, DC. That is about $5,800 per attendee. They could have sent each employee and spouse on a 7-day luxury cruise for the same cost.
- The Department of Agriculture sent 550 people to a Rural Development Conference in Oregon.
- DHS sent 842 FEMA employees to the National Disaster Medical Service Conference in Reno, NV this past April at a cost of $1.5 million. I looked at the program line up for this conference and attendees had free time after 4:30 p.m. every day. The first two days were all optional sessions. The conference website boasts the many pools, casinos, restaurants, go-kart tracks and shopping available for hotel guests.
- The Department of Treasury sent 11 employees to a series of wine seminars throughout California.

My point in bringing up these particular conferences is teleconferencing and the use of email to exchange information virtually reduce the need for employees to travel to most of these conferences. Instead of sending someone to the Rotary Club meeting in St. Croix, Virgin Islands, the Department of Labor could have hopped on a conference call. Or instead of sending someone to Fiji for a maritime seminar, the Department of Homeland Security could have had the information presented at the meeting emailed back to them in America.

One thought I had is that it might be cheaper to hold conferences here in Washington. I am not saying that all conferences are a waste of time and money. Some conferences are very necessary and that's precisely why I am interested in this topic, to make sure that we are using resources for things that are "must-do's" for the efficiency and economy of the Department.

ASTONISHING INCREASE IN SPENDING SINCE 2000

I continue to be concerned about the amount of time, money and human capital the government spends sending people to these meetings and sponsoring the conferences themselves. Between 2005 and 2006 the agencies represented here today increased their conference spending almost 20 percent. After the Subcommittee brought this issue to your attention last year most of you continued to increase this type of spending. At the very least this type of spending should return to 2001 levels and remain flat as that was the year American taxpayers began funding an expensive war.

Since 2000, the government has spent almost $1.5 billion, a number that will be surpassed at the conclusion of this fiscal year. Given the number of holes in the data submitted to this Subcommittee, I am sure this number is much higher. But what is most astounding to me is the rate at which this spending has increased—some 70 percent in 5 years, or 14 percent a year.

I note that between the witnesses today, some of you are below this average, and others exceed it. This was calculated using the latest available data.

- OPM: spending has declined.
- Interior: Couldn't submit complete data.
- Labor: 21% spending increase
- Agriculture: 53% spending increase
- Commerce: 57% spending increase
- Treasury: 96% spending increase
- Justice: 141% spending increase
- USAID: 147% spending increase
- DHS: 148%—which is pretty impressive for an agency that is 3 years old.
- Education: 261% spending increase.

Above and beyond these enormous increases, I have to wonder about the loss in productivity within agencies when employees are out of the office and sitting at a conference out of town. On top of the conference and travel costs add in each day's salary when that employee wasn't doing his regular job. The loss of man hours is tremendous if you consider the fact that federal employees attend thousands of conferences a year.

I also continue to be amazed that these large spending increases on conference travel—an activity that many see as a luxury rather than a necessity—have occurred during a time of war. Only one agency here today has reduced this type of spending. It used to be the case that government set priorities and cut back non-defense spending during war time. President Roosevelt cut non-defense spending by over 20 percent and several years later, President Truman cut non-military spending by 28 percent. Today, things are different.

TECHNOLOGY SHOULD REDUCE NEED FOR TRAVEL, ESPECIALLY BY LARGE DELEGATIONS

Technology is dramatically reducing the need for travel. In the modern telecommunications era, it is unnecessary to spend time and resources to finance so many conferences. Teleconferences and video conferencing, for example, can save money while allowing the same type of information sharing at a mere fraction of the cost. Yet, this is not the trend we see. Three Departments actually doubled the number of conferences they sent people to last year: Agriculture sent people to almost 800 last year; Commerce staff attended 900 conferences this year; and Education sent people to 600 conferences. DHS officials attended 660 last year and they will attend a whopping 2,217 this year. Last year USAID participated in 1400 conferences. For an agency of 2,500 employees, I was shocked by this number. It will be interesting to see 2006 data when they submit it.

FIRST HEARING ROUND UP

I am pleased to report that as a result of our first hearing, both HHS and EPA have issued internal conference directives to help supervisors manage conference requests and spending. EPA asks managers to consider email and videoconferencing options before attending a conference. They also ask staff to consider lower cost locations and to hold conferences on an 18-month cycle instead of annually. These are positive steps being taken by individual agencies that I hope to see more of in the very near future. But we won't know if these process changes are sufficient until we see conference spending at these agencies reduced next year. We'll all be back to find out.

In February, at the first hearing in this series, a former government official informed the Subcommittee that many federal employees lobby to attend conferences in beach, resort, casino or European tourist destinations including the Virgin Islands, Paris, Las Vegas, Maui, Geneva, and Australia. Many who attend the conferences then use annual leave to stick around for a few extra days or weeks, essentially charging taxpayers the cost of a plane ticket for their personal vacations. In other words, the destination drives the decision to attend rather than the agency mission. This witness also reported at the hearing that there are few internal controls on conference attendance or spending and questioned the cost effectiveness of the array of conferences.

I am still awaiting responses on specific conferences, but in terms of taxpayer funded vacations we found that:

- The Department of Commerce sent 31 people to Greece for the International Sea Turtle Symposium at a cost of $84,000. Between the 31 attendees, they took 81 days of annual leave.

LACK OF TRANSPARENCY

I hope this hearing prompts you all to increase transparency within your agencies. With increased transparency I believe many of these problems could be avoided. There should be a formal vetting and justification process for conference requests, especially when technology allows for teleconferencing and use of the Internet to exchange information.

As we go forward, I would encourage agencies to be sure that every conference attended by Federal employees passes the following tests:

(1) Does the conference help further the Department's mission?
(2) Could the information be shared through another means such as a teleconference or the Internet?
(3) Is the location appropriate and justified? What would the average American think about their tax dollars being spent on this conference in this location?
(4) Is the number of employees attending justified?
(5) Does participation in the conference validate or endorse ideas or values harmful to American interests and culture?
(6) Does the conference give a platform to ideas and panelists who undermine American interests?
(7) Is this a wise use of tax dollars when we have an $8 trillion+ national debt?
(8) Is it a "must-do" for efficiency and economy for the Department?

Every conference should be readily defensible, on its face, to regular Americans in terms of topic, location and participants. The conferences must be related to the Department's mission. If annual leave is requested in conjunction with a conference, managers must scrutinize conference topic and consider value to agency's work and focus. I look forward to our discussion today.

Senator COBURN. We will start with our first panel of witnesses by hearing from Lisa Fiely, Chief Financial Officer, U.S. Agency for International Development; Nina Rose Hatfield, Deputy Assistant Secretary, Policy, Management, and Budget, U.S. Department of Interior; Lee Lofthus, Acting Assistant Attorney General for Administration, Department of Justice; the Hon. Michell Clark, Assistant Secretary for Management, Department of Education; and Ed Hugler, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Operations, Department of Labor.

Ms. Fiely, you are recognized.

TESTIMONY OF LISA FIELY,[1] CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, U.S. AGENCY FOR INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Ms. FIELY. Chairman Coburn and distinguished members of the Subcommittee, I want to thank you for the opportunity to appear before you today to discuss USAID's use of conferences as a venue for learning, information exchange, and program implementation.

I would like to start by giving you a brief description of what the U.S. Agency for International Development is and what we do. We are one of the premier bilateral foreign aid agencies in the world and the principal U.S. agency for delivering foreign assistance, with missions in over 80 countries. We are the chief foreign aid arm of the U.S. Government, and we have been in the development business for over half a century.

USAID's current budget stands at more than $9 billion with those resources going through grants and contracts with hundreds of U.S. local and international nonprofit organizations and companies. The total official development assistance provided by the United States in 2005 came to $27.5 billion, which was a near tripling of the ODA since 2001.

USAID invests these resources in a wide variety of projects including malaria, HIV/AIDS, small business development, agricultural development, conflict resolution, rural electrification, microfinance, and many other activities. We also work with countries seeking to improve their economic governance structures to attract local and international private investment by reforming their fiscal, tax, customs, banking, energy, agriculture, and environmental policies.

It is in our interest to work with host country governments that strive for democratic legitimacy and rule of law, and respect human rights. We are not the lenders like the World Bank or the IMF; rather, we put our resources to work on a wide variety of grassroots projects in many different settings. As you can discern, as an Agency, we are all over the map literally as it applies to our locations, but figuratively as well, as it applies to our extremely varied nature of our programs as I have described them. I would dare to say that under our new framework, which our new Administrator, Ambassador Tobias, is currently putting in place, the Agency's programs will be more focused and defined; geographically, however, we will still be all over the map.

[1] The prepared statement of Ms. Fiely appears in the Appendix on page 36.

Because of what we do and where we do it, it is very difficult to accomplish these initiatives using the normal business and operational paradigms. We have to deal with geographical physical distances, language barriers, communications barriers. Oftentimes the points we are trying to get across can so easily be lost in translation, and absent the physical presence and ability to see the disconnect or lack of understanding, an entire issue at hand can be lost. I say this as a backdrop to my discussion about the Agency's use of conferences.

Oftentimes a conference or meeting is actually a venue for USAID to conduct program business. The interaction of key players in a worldwide environment is how we sell our product, and our product may very well be an understanding of the need for a particular intervention. Sometimes all that is standing between a program and a project working or not working is letting the folks know about the latest thinking in how it might be used to help their country's programs. Another example is in the Europe and Eurasia region where USAID sponsors conferences and workshops that seek to transfer knowledge from our "graduate" countries such as Poland to countries like Romania which are still in the process of transition. All of the conferences attended are not directly working conferences, but many of them are, and many others are used as training.

We received your initial request for data back in February 2006 and did not send an initial response until June 2006. This was totally unacceptable, and we recognize that. We should have been able to respond much quicker, but because we did not separately track conference information, we were forced to go out with a data call to our 80 missions worldwide to request the information. I can happily say that we have instituted in 2007 a new expanded object coding system which will give us the ability to arrive at these numbers rapidly and systematically. Literally with the press of a button we can arrive at the dollar figures. The amounts which we reported to you earlier range from $3.5 to $8.9 million. Based on our 2007 requests, we are looking at an upper-limit figure of approximately $7.2 million. This is a substantial reduction.

I apologize that I do not have the data for you today on 2006 numbers requested in your August 28 letter, but we just received this letter in my office on September 11, and we currently have a data call out to all of our missions. So we are in the process of gathering the 2006 and the 2007 projections for you.

If you were to ask me if all of the conference travel was, in fact, necessary, I cannot personally tell you that it was. But what I would point out is that the nature of what we do and where we do it makes conference meetings travel extremely expensive. I would further point out that at USAID money spent on attendance at or hosting of conferences and seminars is in direct competition with our program execution dollars. I would venture to say that as a head of office, our managers would not approve a frivolous conference at the expense of putting money on the ground where positive results can be measured to the Agency's favor.

In the statement previously provided to the Subcommittee, I gave several examples of results we have derived from our participation in conferences. In the interest of time, I would like to just give one of those as an example, and that would be the United States as the main cosponsors of the International Partnership on Avian Flu. In the most recent conference held in Vienna in July 2006, the participating nations reviewed the international contributions to combat avian and pandemic influenza and agreed to focus on the critical countries such as Indonesia where donor assistance is desperately needed. The result was that an international coalition of donors mobilized approximately $40 million in assistance to Indonesia. This shows where we use conferences as a backdrop, as a venue to promote and successfully further our programs.

In conclusion, at USAID we employ strict controls over both conference sponsorship as well as conference attendance. Our Agency policy requires that approving officials ensure that the "minimum number of attendees needed to fulfill agency requirements are in attendance at any individual conference." Further, in those cases where our Agency is the sponsoring agency, we require our offices to go out and get three estimates of the cost for various locations and go with the most economical estimate. We believe that our separate policy governing conferences coupled with the strict required approvals for hosting conferences lends strong stewardship in this area.

In my 30-year career at the Federal Government, I have worked at several agencies—in fact, many of the agencies that you are paneling today. I have also been responsible for drafting conference policies at many of these agencies. I have seen conferences used as a work venue, a training venue, and as a reward venue in some agencies. There is no doubt that there is potential for abuse, which is why we have controls in place and why we at USAID welcome the constructive oversight on the part of this Subcommittee.

Senator COBURN. Thank you very much.

I want to welcome my Co-Chairman, Senator Carper, who will have to leave at about 3:30. So we are going to try to go through these panelists, and then he will have an opening statement as he asks questions.

Ms. Hatfield.

TESTIMONY OF NINA ROSE HATFIELD,[1] DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY, POLICY, MANAGEMENT, AND BUDGET, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR

Ms. HATFIELD. Mr. Chairman, I am Nina Rose Hatfield, the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Business Management and Wildland Fire at the Department of the Interior, and I am pleased to be here today to discuss conference spending by Interior.

The Department of the Interior is the Nation's principal conservation agency. We are a large, decentralized agency with over 70,000 employees and 180,000 volunteers located at approximately 2,400 operating locations across the United States. The Department manages one in every five acres of the United States and maintains some 40,000 facilities.

As this Nation's premier land manager, our very diverse mission inevitably places us amid conflict as different people have diverse aspirations for those 500 million acres of public lands that we manage. As guardian of thousands of buildings, roads, trails, research facilities, and scientific systems, our mission also triggers many basic management challenges.

In conducting our jobs, we work closely with States, tribes, and local governments, particularly in seeking public input relative to our mission for the management of lands and resources. Much of our work involves meeting and collaborating with others. In the case of the U.S. Geological Survey, our science agency, there is a compelling need to work closely with academia. In many of our jobs, attending training and conferences is an important tool for employee development, learning, and sharing information.

I also believe that the conferences in certain cases represent an indispensable tool for us in terms of promoting sound policy development and practice. Good policy for land all across the United States cannot always be developed in Washington, DC, and we believe that there are times when interaction with these impacted communities can help our decisionmakers identify options and craft more collaborative and effective solutions.

In fiscal year 2000, Interior obligated about $209 million on total travel and conference expenses, or about 1.6 percent of our total obligations. In fiscal year 2005, we obligated about $210 million, or just under 1.0 percent of our total obligations. In 2000 dollars, this equates to about $188 million, or about a 10-percent decrease. The fiscal year 2000 total conference registration fees, they totaled $25 million. And in fiscal year 2005, that figure for conference registration fees declined to $23.3 million.

We are committed to ensuring that our travel dollars are maximized by limiting attendance at meetings and conferences, using teleconferences and other alternatives to travel, and taking advantage of cost efficiencies in travel.

While we believe that conference spending can help further the mission of the Department of the Interior, we also recognize our joint concern that conference attendance and spending should be appropriately controlled. And the Department of the Interior has made significant investments in a technological infrastructure that allows us to do videoconferencing and teleconferencing across the country. We will continue to use these electronic conferencing whenever possible to reduce the need for in-person attendance at training and professional meetings.

We believe that in tough budget times, conference spending will continue to be reviewed carefully to ensure that it is contributing to mission-essential work, and we take every effort to make sure that we promote a very businesslike approach to conference planning and reduction of our agency costs.

Our departmental policy demands that senior management monitor conferences closely. The Department of the Interior has a longstanding policy requiring that conferences involving 30 or more employees be approved by the Program Assistant Secretary. At least one of our bureaus has a policy that requires approval for smaller meetings and conferences. We believe that this review ensures that our conferences are mission related and that the location and timing of the conference are cost beneficial.

Now, since our systems do not track the specific data that you have requested, our staff is gathering details of conference information through data calls to our bureaus, and we will look forward to providing you further information in the next few weeks as we can get that information from our bureaus.

We also look forward to assuring you, Mr. Chairman, that at Interior we are very accountable for how we are spending our dollars and that we are maximizing the way we use our dollars to make sure that we achieve the mission that we have for the American public.

With that, I will look forward to any questions.

Senator COBURN. Thank you very much. Mr. Lofthus.

TESTIMONY OF LEE J. LOFTHUS,[1] ACTING ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR ADMINISTRATION, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. LOFTHUS. Good afternoon, Chairman Coburn and Ranking Member Carper. I thank you for the opportunity to appear before you today to discuss the issue of conference spending in Federal agencies. The Justice Department's leadership appreciates your interest in this topic and shares your concern for assuring the American people that their tax dollars are wisely spent.

By way of background, our conference travel is performed to support the Department's mission on the war on terror and our traditional emphasis on fighting crime and protecting our communities. Our multiple missions requires keeping our nationwide and global base of over 105,000 employees educated and trained and in close coordination with our State and local law enforcement partners. We accomplish these efforts using a variety of approaches, including enhanced information technology, training and technical assistance, and through participation in conferences arranged by DOJ components and by other organizations involved in law enforcement and terrorism prevention.

Our DOJ-sponsored conferences have ranged in purpose from countering gang violence to preventing identity theft to delivering critical training in identifying and countering improvised explosive devices. These efforts have borne results in the form of substantial reductions in the level of violent crime, drug use, property crime, and in improved emergency preparedness.

Our annual expenditures on conferences have ranged from $33.8 million in 2001 to approximately $42 million anticipated in 2006, with our highest annual expenditure—$58 million—occurring in 2004. Although these are significant expenditures, they are roughly two-tenths of 1 percent of our annual discretionary funding.

It is also important to note a critical trend. Of the six larger DOJ organizations that typically spend over $1 million a year on conferences, only one organization—the FBI—has generally been increasing its conference spending. Conference spending in the non-FBI components of the Department of Justice has dropped by more than half since 2004. FBI's needs have increased legitimately as it pursues its transformation into its national security, counterterrorism, counterintelligence, and cyber crime roles.

Let me briefly describe how we manage conference travel. Conference travel is generally approved by the individual components of the Department of Justice. Conference decisions are made, first and foremost, on whether the participation furthers the component's core mission. Second, we try to make use of alternative mechanisms such as videoteleconferencing where we can.

For example, I am pleased to report that the Federal Bureau of Prisons estimates it has saved over $2 million this year by conducting over 8,000 videoteleconferencing sessions in lieu of traveling for in-person meetings or conferences.

We also had a new policy implemented this year for all DOJ-arranged conferences held at non-Federal facilities, and those type of conferences are subject to my review and approval.

The 2005 DOJ Reauthorization Act states that unless authorized in writing by the Attorney General or his designee—me—DOJ shall use for any predominantly internal training or conference only a facility that does not require payment to a private entity. The act also requires an annual report to Congress that details the events we hold in non-Federal facilities. Pursuant to this act, we issued a DOJ-wide policy earlier this year regarding use of non-Federal facilities. Our guiding principles are:

First, minimize all conference costs and maximize the use of Federal facilities;

Second, that the CFO approval must be obtained regardless of cost;

And, third, that the locations or accommodations that may have the appearance of being lavish must first be approved by the head of the component making the request and then approved by me.

With this new policy, we introduced a new online tracking capability that facilitates a prompt review by our finance staff of all non-Federal conference facility requests. As a result of implementing these internal controls, we assure conferences are necessary and that the site selections are cost effective. We maintain an online list now of approximately 60 different government training locations for our component site selection consideration. This new policy was initially challenging to implement, but the process is now fully in place, and we estimate that these additional policies, this scrutiny has resulted this year in approximately $1.1 million in savings to the taxpayers.

Conferences, used wisely, are extremely important to achieving our national security and law enforcement missions at the Justice Department.

Mr. Chairman, this concludes my prepared remarks. I would be happy to answer any questions. Thank you.

Senator COBURN. Thank you very much.

Mr. Clark, thank you very much for being here.

TESTIMONY OF MICHELL CLARK,[1] ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR MANAGEMENT, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Mr. CLARK. Thank you, Chairman Coburn and Senator Carper. Thank you for inviting the Department of Education to this hearing. My name is Michell Clark, Assistant Secretary for Management at the Department of Education. I appreciate this opportunity to testify on the Department's policies and practices as they relate to conference sponsorship, attendance, and related costs.

As public stewards, we have a special obligation to ensure that taxpayer dollars are spent wisely, appropriately, and in a manner consistent with congressional intent. We are fulfilling those goals.

It begins with a strong policy on departmental travel. I have here the Department's official Handbook for Travel Policy. It does not make for exciting reading, but its common-sense rules illustrate our principles.

The very first requirement is that travel will be authorized "only when it is necessary to accomplish the Department's mission in the most effective and economical manner." Travel outside a 35-mile radius of the employee's daily commute must be authorized by the Department.

A Travel Management Center makes all arrangements, searching for best values and Federal discounts. Use of an outside contractor for official travel must be justified in writing with a cost comparison. We also have strict policies regarding acceptance of payment for official travel from non-Federal sources. Such an acceptance must be approved by the Department's chief of staff with concurrence by the Ethics Division of the Office of the General Counsel.

Under the Constitution, education is primarily a State and local responsibility. Much of our work entails person-to-person contact with our numerous State and local partners and stakeholders, the people who administer programs for 54 million K–12 and 22 million post-secondary students. One of the most effective ways to communicate with them is through conferences which enable us to interact with hundreds or thousands of people at a time.

Take our Federal Student Aid (FSA), conferences. These conferences are a critical source of training for financial aid administrators. They allow us to provide more than 6,000 participating schools with updates on changes to Title IV student aid programs and policy.

For the past 2 years, FSA has hosted two Electronic Access Conferences per year—one in the East and one in the West—with plans to move to a single conference in 2008.

Each conference is attended by as many as 2,500 customers who choose from up to 70 informative training sessions. FSA staff serve as session instructors and provide logistical support. They account for less than 10 percent of total conference attendees annually.

We have also held conferences on the new IDEA legislation and regulations, helping State and local education officials learn about new provisions affecting students with disabilities. In addition, we have held conferences on the Title I program for low-income students.

Hundreds of our educational partners and stakeholders attend workshops and confer with Department officials on a variety of subjects. These range from changes to Department regulations, to aligning instructional methods with State accountability standards, to providing choice and supplemental educational services to a greater number of families.

Much of this recent conference activity was spurred by the passage of the No Child Left Behind Act, the greatest education accountability law in our Nation's history. These conferences actually improve accountability. They help stakeholders better understand how to increase academic achievement for all students. They also help grant recipients avoid missteps that could lead to costly program fraud, waste, or abuse.

In the most recent fiscal year, about $6.3 million was spent on conferences, a figure that included normal staff salaries, which would have been paid regardless of the setting. By contrast, our Department's discretionary budget was more than $56 billion.

Seventy-six percent of the conferences sponsored or attended by the Department staff between October 2004 and May 2006 involved fewer than three Department employees. A total of 67 conferences were held in the Washington, DC, area.

We are using technology to further reduce the need for travel. Our use of videoteleconferencing has increased by 78 percent since 2003.

We recognize that accountability does not occur without transparency, and we are increasing our efforts. Our Office of Communications and Outreach has compiled information on annual conference attendance and sponsorship, coordinating with various offices to find ways to improve their management and administration.

And Weekly Speaking Reports let our senior officials know who is going where and why, and how this contributes to meeting the Department's goals and priorities.

As we continue to implement No Child Left Behind Act's accountability provisions, we must hold ourselves accountable as well. We are working hard every day to set a good example.

Prior to 2001, the Department of Education had earned only one "clean" audit. We are about to receive our fifth consecutive. We were the first Cabinet Department to achieve "green" status on the Improved Financial Performance PMA scorecard. Our administrative expenses account for only about 2 percent of our total budget. And in 2004, we received the Presidential Award for Management Excellence for improved financial performance.

We are continuously searching for innovative new ways to accomplish our goals in the most effective and efficient manner. Those goals include measuring and improving academic performance, sharing best instructional practices, promoting global competitiveness, and reducing conference costs.

We will continue to improve our financial management and oversight of policies governing conference and travel-related costs. And we are eager to work with the Office of Management and Budget and Congress every step along the way.

Thank you very much for the opportunity to present.

Senator COBURN. Thank you, Mr. Clark. Mr. Hugler.

TESTIMONY OF EDWARD C. HUGLER,[1] DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR OPERATIONS, OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Mr. HUGLER. Senator Coburn and Ranking Member Carper, thank you for the opportunity to testify on behalf of the Department of Labor. My name is Ed Hugler, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Administration and Management.

The Department of Labor is very proud of its record of fiscal restraint, management excellence, and of ensuring that every Federal dollar is well spent. The President's 2007 budget request is the lowest discretionary budget authority for the Department of Labor since fiscal year 1997. Between 2001 and 2007, the Department's discretionary budget has declined by a cumulative 8.7 percent.

At the same time, the Department of Labor remains the only Executive Branch agency to achieve a "green" status rating on the President's Management Agenda for all five initiatives. And, in addition, the Department has received nine consecutive clean audits of its financial statements from its Inspector General.

Since 1993, the Department has had permanent authority to pay for attendance at meetings which are related to the activities for which we receive appropriations or which contribute to better management of those activities. With our focus on doing more with less, and on fiscal accountability, the Department has very structured controls around participation in and sponsorship of conferences to ensure that, in fact, they do clearly align in advance with the Department's mission, promote the accomplishment of our performance goals, and enhance the ability of our employees to better serve the public.

Some of the criteria that we consider in approving conference participation include: Educating the public about the programs of the Department of Labor that enhance employment opportunities, business prosperity, and worker safety and health. We also consider promoting compliance by helping employers and employees better understand our labor laws. And we also look for opportunities to help workers acquire the skills that they need to be competitive in the 21st Century workforce.

The Department also has very specific guidelines for conference selection. That would be for conferences that we sponsor. It includes cost comparisons and travel costs to focus attention on choosing the site that is in the best interest of the Federal Government. In addition, the Department has specific policies governing authorization of travel expenses for conference attendance. These guidelines ensure that managers only authorize travel that is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the government and include specifically consideration of budget constraints, adherence to our travel policies, and the reasonableness of expenses. And I might add, Dr. Coburn, that they also specify consideration of alternatives such as teleconferencing.

Mr. Chairman, in response to your request, the Department of Labor has provided budget data on total obligations for conference activities in fiscal year 2001 through 2006, including estimates for the last 2 months of this fiscal year. That data shows that Labor obligations were $5.1 million to sponsor, cosponsor, or participate in conferences in 2005, which represented about four-tenths of 1 percent of the Department's total discretionary budgetary resources.

For 2006, we estimate that conference-related obligations will decline to $4.7 million, a reduction of about 8 percent below the year-earlier level, and 28 percent below the 2003 level.

At this time we expect Labor's total obligations for conferences in fiscal year 2007 to be at or below the fiscal year 2006 levels.

I thank you very much again for the opportunity to appear today, and I look forward to your questions.

Senator COBURN. Thank you for your testimony. Senator Carper.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CARPER

Senator CARPER. Thanks, Mr. Chairman. I have no statement. I think I would just like to get right to the questions, if that is OK with you.

Thank you very much for being here and for your testimony today. Could we just sort of go from my left to my right, your right to your left, and let me just ask each of you to share with us one or two of your best practices that you think other agencies would be well to emulate as we try to restrain the growth of costs in conjunction with travel and conferences.

Ms. FIELY. Sure. As I said earlier, anyone wanting to have their bureau or office host a conference, we have them go through a cost comparison and come up with three alternatives, and we go with the most economical alternative, taking into consideration not only the hotel and per diem costs of the actual location, but the actual flight costs of people that will be attending as well, since we are a worldwide organization. For example, oftentimes if you want to go to Africa, you have to go to Europe first, so it gets very expensive. So you have to figure out the various trails that people have to take.

Also, in our office we have individual approval procedures within each bureau and office that are instituted on a procedural level, sort of like desk-type procedures that each office has to follow in getting approvals. We have an approval for over 30 folks, which I think you heard some of the other agencies have that, and that is also in the CFR that requires that.

We have tried the use of telecommunications and teleconferencing. It becomes very problematic in some of the countries that we are located in because the bandwidth is just not there to avail ourselves. But we do try to take advantage of that whenever we can.

Senator CARPER. OK. Thanks. Ms. Hatfield.

Ms. HATFIELD. We do have a departmental policy that if it is going to be a conference of more than 30 people, the programmatic Assistant Secretary has to approve that. And as a part of the justification for doing that, the proponent of the travel would have to also supply information about the hotel rates, would have to provide estimates of airfare from various cities to look at the alternative that the official can select from in terms of whether or not—or which location we would actually have the conference in. And at the same time, the justification, as many of the others have indicated, does have to specify what the purpose of the conference is and how that does relate to our mission. And so all of that is done up front as a routine, and it has actually been the routine in the Department of the Interior for a number of years.

In addition to that, as I said, we have invested in our bureaus to enable videoconferencing and teleconferencing across the country. Recognizing that a large part of our 70,000 employees are located west of the Mississippi River, that does enable us to do a lot of business from Washington to our field locations.

At the same time, we have also created the capability of having broadcasts so that we do some of our training by broadcast from a central location and have our employees actually take the training at their local location through a conferencing capability and television capability.

So we have worked on that for some time because we have recognized that every travel dollar that is used is something that does take away from our capability to perform the mission on the ground. So we have been as innovative as we could about that.

Senator CARPER. Mr. Lofthus.

Mr. LOFTHUS. Thank you, Senator. One of the things we have looked at in our organizations that have large field structures and that have a nationwide presence, we have looked very closely at the videoteleconferencing abilities of our organizations. The Bureau of Prisons, I already mentioned, is a heavy user; the FBI is a heavy user of teleconferencing; the U.S. Attorneys, and the U.S. Trustees. So we are trying to look for alternatives to going out and physically holding conferences and having people travel in at great expense. That has allowed us to take some organizations that traditionally had annual conferences to meet with their field offices and their field employees. They are now able to have those conferences in some cases every other year or maybe once every 3 years, and that has been a tremendous savings, and I think that is one of the reasons you see the Justice Department overall travel and conference costs diminishing.

Also, on a given outside schedule of training or conference event, we have a policy that limits the number of people from an individual office that can go to that event, so we do not have the entire office get up and go. We try to select one or two people who can go and then come back and share the benefits of the conference with others.

Senator CARPER. Good. Thanks. Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. Thank you, sir. We have recently installed teleconferencing facilities within most of our regional locations that will help us with training, sharing information, etc., across the Department.

The second thing that I would cite is that we have instituted an annual review by our Office of Communications and our Management Improvement Team that are looking at the spending for conferences and attendance and travel to ensure that we are getting the best use of the dollars that we have.

We still believe that the program offices have the best understanding of the requirements, but we have instituted a department-level review to ensure that—and to look and hopefully identify opportunities for having, if you will, multi-purposes conferences within more than one program office participating.

Senator CARPER. Mr. Hugler, before you answer, let me telegraph my next and probably last question, and I am going to go back through your ranks and ask you to tell me where you think—you may have been talking about some of what I call the low-hanging fruit in some areas where you have made good progress. But let me come back and ask you where some work still is to be done in each of your departments that you are aware of, please. Mr. Hugler, if you would just respond to my first question.

Mr. HUGLER. Yes, I will. Let me presage my remarks with the fact that I have been in Federal service for nearly 30 years, so I have participated in many conferences, and I have authorized participation in many conferences.

Senator CARPER. Have there ever been any conferences when you have finished them you say, "I am not sure that was really worth the money we spent"? I think I have.

Mr. HUGLER. I think I have, too, and I did not go back again. I agree with you. It looked good on paper, and it was not what I expected it to be. I think they were rare, but that did happen.

I think the bottom line, though, is to have internal controls at the point the decisions are made whether or not to participate in the conference. I really think that is the bottom line. I think it is difficult to, if you will, legislate financial discipline. That needs to be part of an organizational culture. People need to understand that is the environment they are operating in, and I really do think that is the best solution to control spending as it relates to conference attendance.

Beyond that, I think having the proper level of management review counts for a lot. I review travel authorizations, travel requests, conference requests, and am very picky about what gets approved because we do have limited resources.

I think also it is very healthy to have what I will call strong audit controls so when I turn in a travel voucher I know it is going to get audited, and I know people have a checklist which they are going to check me against, and if I have asked for more than I am due, I am not going to get it and I am going to get asked why I submitted it. I think that also improves the environment.

Beyond that, teleconferencing and videoconferencing, I think, is very successful internally to the Department of Labor. I myself participate in no fewer than probably three meetings a week that participants are conferenced into. So that works in my own personal experience, as does videoconferencing. That is a little more complicated inasmuch as you have to have compatible technology on both ends.

But those would be the main things that I would commend attention to.

Senator CARPER. Good. Thanks. Mr. Chairman, do I have time to do the second question?

Senator COBURN. Sure.

Senator CARPER. Good. Thanks.

If we could come back, in no particular order, when you look at your own departments and areas where some work is still to be done, where there is some savings still to be found, what might those be? And if you cannot think of any in your own department—I hope you can, because I say it about my own office, and I said this when I was governor, too. Everything we do I know we can do better. And I suspect the same is true for you all.

Ms. FIELY. I guess where I would come from on this one is it is not so much the conference fees. For the most part, conference fees are a minor portion of what it costs to go to a conference, and especially with our Agency being international, it is the travel cost. And I would say if anything were going to be looked at closely, it would be the travel regulations. I think right now in some cases the travel regulations tie our hands where we are going with city pairs and we could go out directly and get cheaper flights. There are ways to save money by being able to avail yourself, and in some cases the agencies cannot.

Also, at least in the case of USAID——

Senator COBURN. Let me interrupt you there. Can you tell us what we need to do so you can? That is a key—this is a commonsense thing.

Ms. FIELY. Sure. I would like to be able to give you that.

Senator COBURN. You cannot make a decision that saves us money because some Federal regulation keeps you from doing it.

Senator CARPER. Or a law.

Senator COBURN. Or a law.

Ms. FIELY. I would welcome an opportunity to give you something as a follow-on.

Senator COBURN. I would very much appreciate that. Thank you.

Ms. FIELY. Sure. I would like to put something together and get it to you.

Senator COBURN. I would welcome that.

Ms. FIELY. But that is where I think the real savings is, in restructuring the travel regulations and allowing people to take advantage of a lot of the savings that is out there.

Senator CARPER. All right. Thanks. Anyone else, please? No particular order.

Mr. HUGLER. I would just make one other suggestion. At the Department of Labor, we have used more and more training by computer over the Internet among our employees. Again, when we have requirements to train every employee in the Department of Labor, 16,000 or 17,000 people, that has the potential to be—not necessarily a lot of conferences, but certainly a lot of meetings and bringing people together, that can be avoided and very cost effectively avoided by what I will call computer-based training. We have annual requirements for all employees to receive certain training, and we have done that for the last several years over the Internet, and it does two good things. One is it allows the employees to take that training when they have the time. And, two, we have a record of when, and the fact that they completed the training. So both of those are very cost effective.

Senator CARPER. Thanks. Anyone else, please?

Ms. HATFIELD. That has also been true at Interior. We have really intensified the use of computerized training for the same reasons, especially when you have things like computer security training in which all of your employees have to have that training in order to continue to have access to their computers. We do that via the computer, and that does give us a record.

I think that we have also tried as a management team to look at some internal policies, at things like not having multiple employees have multiple rental cars at the same conference and things like that, so that we would decrease the overall travel costs.

So I think there are things like that that we continue to do.

Senator CARPER. Mr. Lofthus.

Mr. LOFTHUS. I would just add one thing, which is in terms of the biggest payoff for us, I think it has come from simply more vigorous scrutiny of the necessity of the conference in the first place. I know when we were looking at proposed conferences that some of our organizations wanted to do this year, we looked at them and we asked some questions, and so far this year, we have canceled 13 conferences because of the view that they could be done through another fashion or maybe they are annual conferences and we can get away with doing them once every couple of years. And there is a real payoff there.

Senator CARPER. Thanks. Mr. Clark.

Mr. CLARK. I would echo some of the comments from others. We, too, have increased our use of the Internet to do the training that we do, for computer training, for our coop training, and for other areas, and we are looking for other opportunities to build other courses that we can do online.

In addition, I guess I would encourage us to look at the use of electronic tools to manage conference attendance and travel so that we can do a better job of identifying issues up front and then being able to reconcile at the end or audit, if you will, at the end the amount that is paid and the number of attendees at the conferences, etc.

Senator CARPER. Thank you.

Ms. Fiely gave us something for our to-do list, and I think she is going to come back to us in writing. And let me just ask, if you will, for each of you to put on your thinking caps, talk with your other colleagues with whom you work, and come back to us maybe in writing in the next week or so and tell us some things that we need to do or that we need to ensure that others do, maybe within the Executive Branch, to better realize the further savings opportunities that are out there.

This has been most informative. Thank you to each of you.

Senator COBURN. I would echo Senator Carper. We know you all have competence, and sometimes we are your greatest hindrance in doing what you know to do because there is some regulation or some assumption that you are not going to do it right, so somebody has put a regulation in to protect it. If we cannot trust our Federal employees, we might as well hang it up. And so what we have to do is put regulations out there that assume people are going to do the right thing, not assume people are going to do the wrong thing.

And, on my staff, I know, you go to the travel office here, and then you get on the Internet right after that, and you can find oftentimes a fare 40 percent less than what the travel office just gave you, which was "the best fare." And so we need to give you the flexibility to do your jobs. You are trained to do them. You are executive leaders. You know what to do. And we need to do that. So I would echo that.

I want to make a couple of comments. We have had a 70-percent increase—well, we do not know what it is going to be through the end of this year, probably a 72-, 73-percent increase in conference spending. And yet the Federal Government has grown by 48 percent during that time. So there has got to be something here that we are missing that says why have conferences and conference spending—the other point—and that is what I want you to think about. And I understand USAID. We have done all this stuff in Africa on PEPFAR and AIDS and all this other stuff, and the Justice Department, I can understand that as well. But some things, for example, Interior, we have never been able to get your numbers. Yours are the first numbers we have been able to get. And part of that has to do with the management and accounting systems within Interior. They do not have the tools to get the numbers.

Well, you cannot manage what you cannot measure, and so the President's Management Agenda is a key part in being able to control this as well as many other expenditures.

Ms. HATFIELD. If I might comment on that, sir?

Senator COBURN. Sure.

Ms. HATFIELD. We have about 17 different financial systems operating at the moment, all of which are no longer supported by their vendor. So we are in the process now of trying to bring up a modern financial system for the Department so we will have a single system. And, undoubtedly, that effort is going to help us in terms of being more accountable in an easier fashion than having to do the kind of data calls that we are doing now to get that data.

But I would point out that we have actually, to the extent that we can track it, reduced the overall costs that we are spending on conferences over the last 5 years. So I think that is indicative of the fact that we are very conscientious about it.

Senator COBURN. Why couldn't my staff have that data, couldn't get it? The fact is when we inquire to get it, we cannot get it.

Ms. HATFIELD. It is very difficult.

Senator COBURN. Your staff cannot give it to us, and so I would love to see those numbers.

Because we are pressed for time—we do have a vote that is scheduled for 4 o'clock—I am going to be submitting to each of you very specific questions. I am highly concerned about some of the conferences that I have read about, some of the agendas of some of the conferences I have read about. And I am not going to put that out—it will become a part of the record in the questions that we ask, with no blame and no thought that anybody intentionally is wasting any money, but to get you to answer back, and let's make this—if we make small things—all the small things on significant issues, before you know it we will be declining the size of the Federal Government. We are making it much more efficient, and we are preserving future opportunity and the American dream for our grandchildren.

I want to thank each of you for your testimony. We would like to have fairly prompt responses, if you can. If you can't respond promptly, just say, "We can't respond promptly because it is going to be difficult for us to get this," and we understand that there are other issues that you are struggling with.

Let me thank you for being here, and we will call forward the next panel.

Senator COBURN. On panel two, we have Clarence C. Crawford, Chief Financial Officer, Office of Personnel Management; Eugene Schied, Deputy Chief Financial Officer, Department of Homeland Security; Jeff Nulf, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Administration, Department of Commerce; Richard Holcomb, Deputy Chief Financial Officer and Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary for Headquarters Operations, Department of the Treasury; and Hon. Charles R. Christopherson, Chief Financial Officer, Department of Agriculture.

Welcome to you all, and you will be recognized for 5 minutes, and then we will have questions. Mr. Crawford.

TESTIMONY OF CLARENCE C. CRAWFORD,[1] CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, OFFICE OF PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT

Mr. CRAWFORD. Thank you, Senator Coburn and Senator Carper. In the interest of time, I will just summarize my points.

Senator COBURN. Good.

Mr. CRAWFORD. We are happy to be here on behalf of the Office of Personnel Management. We are happy to be here to be able to testify before you. My Director, Linda Springer, is a former CFO in the private sector, so she is very much committed to ensuring that OPM spends taxpayer dollars wisely and that we use those funds to carry out our mission, which is to ensure that the Federal Government has an effective workforce.

OPM supports the prudent use and participation in conferences, those conferences that actually help to improve an employee's ability to do his or her job.

As a central agency, we receive numerous requests to present or to participate in conferences. Director Springer has made it very clear to the senior staff to scrutinize every conference. Supervisors understand that they are to make sure that the conference makes good business sense, make sure that it supports our mission, and make sure that we send the right person.

To complement our efforts in this regard, we have also implemented a new strategic plan. We are in the process of changing our culture and instilling sound financial management throughout OPM. In large measure, that is why we have been able to manage our conference spending at about 4 percent of our personnel compensation cost.

In 2004, we made a decision to change the way we sponsor conferences. Rather than continue to host a number of conferences throughout the year, as we have done in the past, OPM decided to consolidate our conferences and offer one Federal human capital conference, and that conference is held about every 18 months. And we have found that to be an effective way to deliver information to the human capital community. In addition, we obviously are webcasting. We are posting things on the Web. We are doing videoconferencing as well.

[1] The prepared statement of Mr. Crawford appears in the Appendix on page 312.

Our conference spending for 2004 was $358,000, for 2005 it was $331,000. We are expecting this year to have it come in at about $327,000. We are projecting conference spending for 2007 to be $177,000.

Mr. Chairman, we would be happy to take any questions that you have.

Senator COBURN. You have said enough. Music to my ears. Mr. Schied.

TESTIMONY OF EUGENE SCHIED,[1] DEPUTY CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. SCHIED. Thank you, Chairman Coburn, for this opportunity to testify before you today on travel and conference spending at the Department of Homeland Security. I will briefly summarize my statement that I have submitted for the record.

Travel and conference attendance are important and necessary to DHS' fulfillment of its mission. Secret Service agents travel regularly to fulfill their protective responsibilities. FEMA employees travel and spend extensive time away from home when responding to disasters. Air marshals travel daily to protect our aviation transportation system. As I am sure you agree, travel expenses are necessary to DHS.

Travel costs related specifically to conferences are a relatively small portion of our overall budget and a small portion of our travel budget.

Senator COBURN. Let me interrupt you for a minute to make sure you understand. This is not about legitimate travel within your agency. This is about travel and conference costs.

Mr. SCHIED. OK. Conferences are an important part of DHS' outreach efforts with our other Federal, State, local, international, and private sector partners. Often this involves travel outside of Washington to meet with those partners in homeland security. DHS' participation in conferences can be a cost-effective way for DHS to communicate with our stakeholders.

I know that appropriate discretion must be taken and used in deciding when to travel to conferences. I believe I share the Subcommittee's concerns that conference dollars must be spent judiciously, limited to necessary government participation. Policies governing employee travel are the responsibility of the CFO. In his testimony yesterday before the House Government Reform Subcommittee on Government Management, Finance, and Accountability, DHS CFO Norquist outlined financial management improvements DHS is pursing, including people, policies, processes, systems, and assurance. Three of these five areas are important to how we are trying to improve our oversight of conference spending.

First, DHS is in the process of building a comprehensive set of financial management regulations to govern DHS-wide financial management operations. We need to develop one DHS way of conducting financial management, including policies related to travel and conferences.

DHS has management directives that specifically address travel for office government business and attendance at conferences and meetings. The current management directives on conferences encourage DHS employees to participate in conferences as a means of exchange and communication of ideas and knowledge; however, the directive recognizes that attendance must be prudent, relevant to the employees' job performance, and beneficial to the mission of DHS.

We will be supplementing the new policy with a guidebook that outlines questions that approving officials and travelers should contemplate when choosing to attend conferences.

The second area of improvement needs to be our ability to oversee travel spending through information systems, and as you mentioned, sir, to the last panel, you cannot manage what you cannot measure. Producing the type of information requested by this Subcommittee for DHS is a very manual-intensive process, which explains much of our delay in responding to your information requests. Manually intensive processes I find are also much more prone to error and inconsistency in reporting, which is why to date the Department has only been able to provide partial information for fiscal year 2006. While some of the data, such as total travel spending, writ large, is relatively easy to obtain through the Federal accounting classification, salary costs and other costs associated specifically with conference attendance is not readily extractable from our automated financial systems.

The final area in which we need to improve is in the area of assurance. DHS must have in place a means by which we can test the policies and procedures that we have to assure that our internal controls are well designed and operating effectively. Managers cannot assume that the controls are only working well just because the auditors do not tell us to the contrary, and so to this end, the CFO is creating a CFO's assurance team that will test the processes and validate effectiveness of controls such as those over financial conference attendance.

Mr. Chairman, DHS is very committed to the responsible stewardship of the taxpayer's dollars entrusted to us by Congress. We know the dollars are limited, the DHS mission is large, and we must take steps to assure that we are putting their dollars to the best use. Most of the travel spending is necessary to the mission and, likewise, conference attendance can be an important tool by which we communicate with the public and our partners in protecting the homeland. However, we recognize travel and conference attendance, as with all things that we do, has its vulnerabilities to waste and abuse. It is the responsibility of the CFO's office to promulgate travel and conference policy and, thus, also to monitor the spending in ways that we can ensure our policies are effective.

Thank you for the opportunity to share this information, and I look forward to your questions.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. Mr. Nulf.

TESTIMONY OF JEFFERY K. NULF,[1] DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR ADMINISTRATION, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Mr. NULF. Good afternoon, Chairman Coburn. Thank you for the opportunity to testify before you on behalf of the Department of Commerce on the topic of conference spending in Federal agencies.

Your requests for information and the invitation to speak to you today have focused attention on an area that, for the Department of Commerce, not only is an important element in mission support and employee development, but also presents an opportunity for savings at a time when we are trying to do more with fewer resources.

In furtherance of sound management and as a result of current and coming budgetary constraints, the Secretary and the Deputy Secretary have instructed the Department's Presidential Appointees and Heads of Operating Units to direct resources to mission-critical activities, and to do so by taking a hard look at what is expended on administrative functions. All elements of the Department have been charged with meeting our program responsibilities efficiently and effectively while reducing the amounts spent on non-essential activities. Our bureaus report to the Deputy Secretary on a quarterly basis regarding their performance in this and other areas.

The Department of Commerce is a diverse organization, as you know, largely scientific, with numerous compelling responsibilities. It is essential for the employees working towards accomplishing the Department's missions to have a current understanding of developments in their program areas. Commerce employees predict the weather, manage the Nation's fisheries, allocate radio spectrum, and we create better ways to measure everything from the structure of atoms to the flammability of buildings. Our employees help American business learn how to expand markets for their products, count people for the census, and support the Nation through the provision of economic information such as quarterly reports on international trade activity, residential construction and sales, and the gross domestic product.

Participation at critical conferences furthers these mission-related activities by providing continuing education for our scientists, our engineers, economists, and other professionals. Conference attendance also furnishes venues where the exchange of ideas in an intellectually stimulating environment can lead to new solutions to problems faced by our country and the world. We believe that investment in conference attendance, balanced with sound stewardship of taxpayer dollars, is necessary for the Department to meet its responsibilities to U.S. citizens and the world community.

The Department is a large organization with extremely varied responsibilities. We have in place no single policy that governs conferences and related activities, nor do we have a line item in our budget for conferences or a conference spending ceiling to restrict expenditures in this area. We have confidence that our managers are making prudent decisions regarding which conferences to attend and who should be attending them. We do recognize our affirmative obligation to restrain resources expended on travel in general and conference attendance in particular. Concurrently, we recognize that in austere financial times, conference spending is among the top candidates for reduction and offers an opportunity for savings that can be applied to mission-essential work.

Although Commerce Department spending increased rapidly between fiscal years 2000 and 2003, as you know from the information we provided in January, our conference expenditures decreased in fiscal year 2004 and fell again in fiscal year 2005, the most recent year for which we have complete data. In examining the available 2006 data, we have identified several indicators that we consider positive in terms of the efficient use of taxpayer dollars for conferences.

Among these: The single most frequently used geographic area for conferences attended by Commerce employees is local—right here in the Washington metropolitan area.

There also is a relatively small number of Commerce attendees—five or fewer—that have attended 87 percent of the conferences in which Commerce employees are involved.

Conferences sponsored or cosponsored by the Department typically are held in cities where the sponsoring organization is located, thereby minimizing travel expenditures as well as overall costs.

As an example, of 69 conferences sponsored by NIST, only three were held outside of Washington, DC, or Boulder, Colorado, which is where all their employees are located at.

This is not to suggest that we do not participate in conferences held in locations perceived to be more exotic. Indeed, the North Pacific Marine Sciences workshop, sponsored by NOAA, was held in Hawaii, but this was truly the most economical place for this event to occur. Similarly, NOAA's cosponsored Gulf of Mexico Alliance meetings were in New Orleans and Naples, Florida, both on the Gulf Coast.

The fiscal year 2006 conference spending data that we have collected indicates a continuing downward trend in conference spending. To date, the Commerce Department has spent $7.8 million on conference-related activities in fiscal year 2007 and 2006. This is about 62 percent of our fiscal year 2003 high. Projections for fiscal year 2007 suggest that conference-related spending will drop further, to around $7.5 million. These figures are good news, but we remain interested in identifying where we might continue our reduction efforts.

Mr. Chairman, we appreciate and share your concern that current technology be used to bring people together for electronic conferencing. The Department will continue to seek creative means to leverage its ability to video- and teleconference in order to reduce, as much as possible, the need for in-person attendance at training and professional meetings. Consistent with that objective, we have created within the Department an online Learning Management System that now provides our employees desktop access to over 1,600 training courses. This, of course, will not take the place of professional conferences, but it certainly is an economical approach to professional development.

Mr. Chairman, thank you very much for the opportunity to share with you this information about what we are doing at the Department of Commerce, and I look forward to answering your questions.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. Mr. Holcomb.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD HOLCOMB,[1] DEPUTY CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, AND ACTING DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR HEADQUARTERS OPERATIONS, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

Mr. HOLCOMB. Chairman Coburn, thank you for the opportunity to appear before the Subcommittee today.

The mission of the Department of Treasury is to promote the conditions for prosperity and stability in the United States and encourage prosperity and stability in the rest of the world.

Communication is the key to our relationship with the individual American taxpayer and the corporate entities that between them provide the bulk of the revenue that supports the business of our government. We use a variety of media to communicate our messages in support of the governmental activities for which we are responsible.

We make use of conferences to broadcast and explain matters to individuals as well as corporate bodies that relate to changes in tax law, tax collection, banking and thrift procedures, and commodities regulation. Consequently, the vast majority of the conferences we sponsor are either Internal Revenue Service or Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau events that focus on taxpayer advocacy, small business practitioner forums, or on a specific sector such as the wine and alcohol industry.

The Taxpayer Advocacy Panel within the IRS listens to taxpayers, identifies taxpayers' issues, and makes suggestions for improving Internal Revenue Service services and aiding with customer satisfaction. The Taxpayer Advocacy Panel acts as a two-way conduit focusing on taxpayer advocacy as well as providing a venue for raising issues by citizens. There are seven geographically based area boards aligned with the current Taxpayer Advocate Service areas. These area boards address local issues and schedule outreach activities. Issue committees, with nationwide membership, identify and work servicewide issues and are closely linked to the Wage and Investment and Small Business/Self-Employed program owners.

A major part of TTB's mission is to have its industry members voluntarily comply with rules and regulations. Part of this can be accomplished through field presence via tax audits and product integrity investigations. Another very effective tool to reach voluntary compliance is to inform our industry members of what is expected of them. TTB seminars allow us to reach a wide audience and give industry members the instructional tools that are necessary to successfully meet the Federal rules that apply to their businesses. These events represent a cross-section of industry producers, wholesalers, and/or importers. They provide outreach to industry members who are geographically dispersed across the country and a platform for information sharing and learning about current issues and trend in the marketplace.

These seminars attract active permittees, those interested in obtaining permits, industry trade associations, industry lawyers, and State regulatory agencies. Attendees are able to obtain relevant information on Federal rules and regulations that apply to their businesses, ask specific questions that pertain to their daily activities, receive updates on the latest issues that apply to their activities, and important contact information. The end result is a better understanding of their roles as permit holders and increased voluntary compliance with Federal law. It also allows TTB employees to hear firsthand the issues and concerns that our industry members have pertaining to the regulation of alcohol and tobacco products.

We consider conferences and seminars as vital to our understanding and to taxpayer understanding of the rules and regulations of tax law and trade code. We consider there is nothing more important than an informed public, particularly where it involves taxation and compliance.

We regret the delay in providing the requested information that you and your office sought. Our financial databases do not distinguish between types of business trips and do not cross-reference other business expenses. We intend to develop a system that will be more responsive to your and our needs in the future and will provide us with a positive business tool in safeguarding the money entrusted to us by the American public.

This completes my prepared remarks, and I look forward to answering your questions.

Senator COBURN. Thank you very much, Mr. Holcomb. Mr. Christopherson.

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES R. CHRISTOPHERSON, JR.,[1] CHIEF FINANCIAL OFFICER, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Chairman Coburn, I appreciate the opportunity to give testimony concerning conference attendance and expenditures at the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The USDA is a diverse and complex organization with programs that touch the lives of all Americans every day. Our six strategic goals for 2005 through 2010 are to: Enhance international competitiveness of American agriculture; enhance the competitiveness and sustainability of rural and farm economies; support increases economic opportunities and improved quality of life in rural America; enhance protection and safety of the Nation's agriculture and food supply; improve the Nation's nutrition and health; and protect and enhance the Nation's natural resource base and environment.

In order to achieve these goals, the Department leverages the services of a vast number of entities. These entities include State and local governments, colleges and universities, school districts, community organizations, faith-based organizations, associations, other Federal agencies, and international-based organizations. Conferences are very important in the communication, training, and coordination needed to deliver the regulations and requirements of hundreds of programs.

The USDA has a formal travel policy that includes conferences. As the Chief Financial Officer of the Department, the policy is under my administrative responsibility. The Department's policy and available funding in the individual agencies provide the checks and balances on the sponsoring and attending conferences.

In late August, we provided data on conference attendance and costs for the time period between 2001 and fiscal year 2005. In 2005, the Department's expenditures for conference fees equaled approximately $22 million. The costs for conferences is approximately 0.02 percent of our total expenditures.

Conferences at the USDA are mainly sponsored by its agencies for outreach or training of employees, States, colleges and universities, and communities. During 2005, the outreach and training conferences accounted for 72 percent of total attendance.

Two groups that I would like to highlight for this testimony are our mission areas responsible for Natural Resources and Environment and Research, Education, and Economic.

The Natural Resources and Environment mission area includes the Forest Service and the Natural Resources Conservation Service, NRCS. The 2002 farm bill vastly increased funding for conservation by authorizing increased spending for several programs under prior farm bills and establishing two additional programs.

While NRCS activities benefit all of the people in all the Nation, the primary customers are individuals that make natural resource and management decisions on non-Federal lands. These include farmers, ranchers, and other members of the private sector; units of government; and not-for-profit organizations. NRCS partners with other 3,000 local conservation districts to assist in implementing its programs. Targeted conservation areas and management practices change often. These changes are due to various regional management requirements, new research, certain conservation practices, natural events, and legislative changes. In addition, NRCS has been impacted by a large amount of employee retirements in 2004 and 2005. To address critical training needs NRCS held "regional training boot camps" in 2005.

Research, Education, and Economics (REE) is responsible for the research and statistics covering the full breadth of the Department's programs. Their research benefits the lives of Americans and provides competitive advantages to our products in the world market.

REE does not act alone in its research. It is accomplished in partnership with universities and other institutions. Much of the travel in this mission area involves coordination and collaboration with other scientists, institutions, and organizations. This enables the REE mission area to be far more efficient in carrying out its responsibilities of research, education, and economic activities. Such collaboration through conferencing avoids excessive duplication and enhances efficiency and effectiveness. In addition, our scientists are widely recognized for their unique and high level of expertise and are in active demand by various groups and organizations to share their knowledge and expertise at conferences and meetings.

About one-fourth of the conferences we attend are sponsored by non-USDA groups. The subject matter of these conferences is geared towards historically disadvantaged groups, State government, nutrition, conservation, science, information technology, foreign marketing, and safety.

To help reduce expenses and continue to educate our greatest resource, the Department has developed and implemented an electronic education medium, AgLearn. This year the system has been used by 69,000 employees to complete 1,422 different training courses. The Department understands the value and cost savings that AgLearn provides as its primary education source for USDA employees.

The Department uses conferences and other methods to support the requirements of the mission areas. Due to the diversity and breadth of our programs, our conference attendance is located across the United States.

We believe that transparency into the Department's expenditures is very important. We have set this as a goal in our strategic plan as well. Through our Financial Management Modernization Initiative, we have addressed the need for electronic approvals and detailed centralized information for management. During this initiative, we will include an evaluation of our current policies and procedures, including the approval of underwritten and attended conferences.

I appreciate this opportunity to testify and would welcome any questions.

Senator COBURN. Thank you. I thank each of you.

Let me just go through a couple things. Secretary, the budget for conferences and spending in the year 2000 for the Department of Agriculture was $6,600,000, and you just told me it was $22 million in 2005. That is almost a 400-percent increase in conferences, when we are having the biggest budget deficits that we have had in our history. Explain that to me.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Well, there are a couple of issues there. One, I would say our 2001 numbers were difficult to obtain, at best, and may not be fully correct. I think you will see that as you get into 2002, you see numbers that are more respectful to what——

Senator COBURN. I actually quoted you a 2000 number, not a 2001 number. And you are saying that is a questionable number, too?

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. As we went back, correct. We actually run our nine general ledger systems. All of them, as you have heard from other members, they are not supported by their vendors anymore. We have travel vouchers at probably close to 6,000 to 7,000 different offices in which we accumulate data, and we are addressing this through our modernization effort, but we are not quite there yet.

Senator COBURN. Good enough. Treasury, according to the numbers that I have, went from—it doubled from 2001 to 2005.

Mr. HOLCOMB. Correct, sir. Yes, sir.

Senator COBURN. OK. How much digital videoconferencing do you all do on a lot of this training? Are you utilizing that?

Mr. HOLCOMB. Sir, the cost increase was in large part driven by the IRS' increase in Taxpayer Advocacy Panel meetings and outreach to taxpayers in their geographical regions. It reflects the IRS' effort for education and positive marketing.

Senator COBURN. Well, let me clarify that. Then that should not be included in conferences. That is part of your function. A conference is not where you go to teach somebody else. It is where you go to learn from somebody else. And I think we need this clarification. This is a real important thing. If you are carrying out your mission by teaching the American citizens and the recipients of your Department information where you are holding the conference for them, I am not as concerned about that as I am us going for us. And so if you can clarify some of those numbers, I think it would be important.

Mr. Nulf had said you all do not have a line item for conferences.

Mr. NULF. That is correct.

Senator COBURN. And it is interesting to me—and your statement was, I believe, that you feel comfortable with your management of conferences—Hawaii Association of Land Surveyors, Honolulu, Hawaii. Niederberg Auction and Wine Conference, South Africa.

Mr. NULF. Yes, sir.

Senator COBURN. You feel real comfortable that those two are necessary for you all to carry out your function and that the employees that took that did not take extra time off to use the Federal Government's airfare to go to South Africa or Hawaii?

Mr. NULF. Correct, sir. The Niederberg Wine Conference, one attendee was there from ITA, who was based in South Africa, sir. It cost the government approximately $378, and that is actually a reflection of that person's compensation during the course of the day.

We have 378 employees primarily based at NOAA in Hawaii, sir, for the conferences that—— Senator COBURN. But this was not a NOAA—or I guess it would have been if it is land survey, satellite survey.

Mr. NULF. Yes, sir.

Senator COBURN. OK. All right. Good answers.

DHS, from what I can see, conferences at the Department of Homeland Security have doubled in terms of dollars and quadrupled in terms of numbers. Is that accurate?

Mr. SCHIED. I do not necessarily think that would be accurate for the reason of, again, going back, some of the data we have reported in past years I think is spotty. I think some of the information, again, like I said in my testimony, for 2006 is also—we are having—still having a challenge getting together information, getting a common set of definitions across all our components so that, as you just pointed out, some of what we have reported is conferences where we go out and reach out to others. So sorting through that to try and get an apples-to-apples comparison is still challenging for us.

Senator COBURN. Well, that is 2005 to 2006. That is 2.5 times, from 6.1 to 15.4, and from 600 conferences to 2,200 conferences.

Mr. SCHIED. The data for 2005 did not include—I am pretty sure did not include the largest conference organization within DHS, which is the Coast Guard. We were unable in 2005 to get information from them. They are included in the 2006 information, and they are close to a third, if not a half of the information that we have provided to the Subcommittee for 2006.

Senator COBURN. That is fair. I am going to be here 4 more years, so the idea that we do not have the data today, that does not work next year when we have another hearing. We have got to know. And I will say that to the staff that are here from the previous testifiers. We are going to get good numbers, and we are going to follow them, and you all are the chief financial people that manage that. And I am fine with that. That is a legitimate reason to have a difference that is explainable. It will not be next year, and it will not be the year after that, and it will not be all the way up to 2010.

Why wouldn't the Coast Guard have provided how much money it spends on conferences?

Mr. SCHIED. Sir, I do not know why it was not reported for 2005. For 2006, they were able to get it and it was reported.

Senator COBURN. OK. Well, we will submit questions to you all. We would love to have quick turnaround. I am going to release to the press my summary that my staff has done for me on this last year. As a matter of fact, I will tell you what I will do. I will not release it to them yet. I will release to you first, and you straighten this out where we are wrong in terms of individuals, where you think we have made a wrong assumption, because we cannot know what you know. That is part of what this is. And then after that, then we will release to the press some areas of concern we have. We will not do that until you have had a chance to look at it and justify it.

We will submit questions. Again, the question that has to be in your mind—and this is different. OPM is going the other way. The Department of Labor is going the other way. Think about the fact that we are spending money on conferences at twice the rate the Federal Government is growing, and that is something we cannot sustain. And I would also suggest in my—I have an accounting and production management degree and ran a good size business for a period of time. My experience is that if you put something that has to be accounted for on paper, people watch it. And I would suggest a line item on travel-related expenditures and conference expenditures in every Department of this Federal Government.

Again, I am going to go back and say probably 85 percent of everything we are doing absolutely has to be done. I do not have any criticism of that. If we can save 15 percent everywhere in the Federal Government in everything that we do, we preserve the future for our kids.

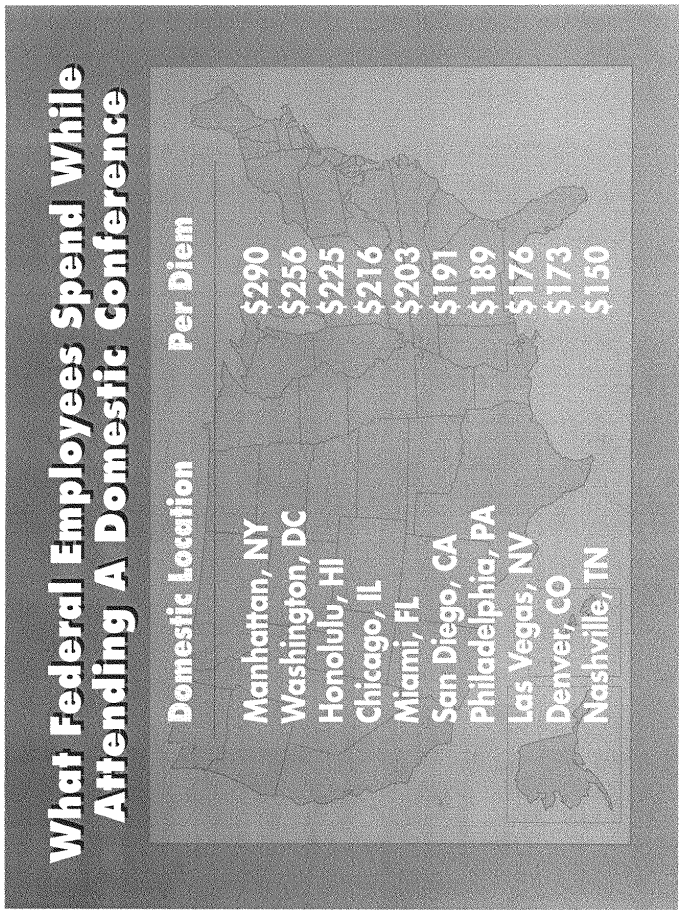

The other thing—and I did not get a chance to say it to the others—I want to thank you for your service. A lot of people will not step up and do what you do, will not take—we have this attitude. We have fantastic Federal employees in this country. The biggest problem is Congress will not let them manage, and we do not let information flow up from the actual people through the management to get the best value for our money. So it is not about you and it is not about being critical of individuals who are serving this government. It is about how do we all work together to make the best future we can for the next couple of generations?

So I want to personally thank each of you for your service, as well as the other panel, and say I look forward to working with you. We are going to do this again next year, so bone up and send it out, and let's get it online. My hope eventually—you all know that the Federal Financial Accountability Act passed. We are going to know every penny you spend everywhere, and it is going to be online starting in 2008 so that the American taxpayers are going to see how much you spend on conferences and with who and where, and it is all going to be out there. And when the blogosphere gets a hold of it, the justifications are going to get tough. And so the justifications had better be right before it gets out there. And that is what you all—you want good accountability. You want to walk home at night and say, "We did a great job for the American people." And I believe you do, and I believe that is your intent. We have just got to get better at managing this financial crisis that is coming at us. And it is big. And if you think you do not have enough money to manage now, you wait until 2012 because that is when it is going to hit and everybody is going to get squeezed big time.

Thank you all for your service and for being here and preparing for our Subcommittee hearing. Thank you. The hearing is adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 4:03 p.m., the Subcommittee was adjourned.]

Statement of Lisa Fiely
Chief Financial Officer
United States Agency for International Development

Before the
Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management,
Government Information and International Security

Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs

September 14, 2006

Chairman Coburn, Ranking Member Carper, and distinguished members of this Subcommittee, I thank you for the opportunity to appear before you today to discuss USAID's use of conferences as a venue for learning, information exchange, and program implementation.

Let me give you a brief description of what the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) is and what we do. USAID is one of the premier bilateral foreign aid agencies in the world, and the principal U.S. agency to deliver foreign assistance, with offices in over 80 countries. We are the chief foreign aid arm of the U.S. Government and have been in the development business for over half a century now.

USAID's current budget stands at more than $9 billion with those resources going through grants and contracts with hundreds of U.S. local and international non-profit organizations and companies. The total official development assistance (ODA) provided by the United States for 2005 came to $27.5 billion - a near tripling of ODA since 2001.

USAID invests these resources in a wide variety of projects including: malaria, HIV/AIDS, small business development, agricultural development, conflict resolution, rural electrification, microfinance and many other activities. We also work with countries seeking to improve their economic governance structures to attract local and international private investment by reforming their fiscal, tax, customs, banking, energy, agriculture and environmental policies.

It is in our interest to work with host country governments that strive for democratic legitimacy and rule of law, and respect human rights. We are not lenders like the World Bank or the IMF. Rather, we put our resources to work on a wide variety of grassroots projects, in many different settings. As you can discern as an Agency we are all over the map literally as it applies to our locations but figuratively as well as it applies to the extremely varied nature of our programs as I have described them. I would dare to say that under our new framework which our new Administrator, Ambassador Tobias, is currently putting in place the Agency's programs will be more focused and defined, geographically, however, we will still be all over the map.

Because of what we do and where we do it, it is very difficult to accomplish these initiatives using "normal" business and operational paradigms. We have to deal with the geographical physical distances, language barriers, communications barriers. Oftentimes the points we are trying to get across can so easily be lost in translation and absent the physical presence and ability to see the disconnect or lack of understanding an entire issue at hand can be lost. I say this as a backdrop to my discussion about the Agency's use of conferences.

Oftentimes a conference, meeting etc. is actually a venue for USAID to conduct program business. The interaction of key players in a worldwide environment is how we sell our product and our product may be an understanding of the need for a particular intervention. Sometimes all that is standing between a program and project working or not working is letting folks know about the latest thinking in how it might be used in their country's programs. Another example is in the Europe and Eurasia region where USAID sponsors conferences/workshops that seek to transfer knowledge from "graduate" countries such as Poland to countries like Romania which are still in the process of transition. All of the conferences attended are not directly working conferences but many of them are, and large portions as well are training.

We received your initial request for data back in February of 2006, and did not send an initial response back until June of 2006. It is regrettable that it took so long for USAID to produce this information for you. We should have been able to respond much quicker but because we did not separately track conference information we were forced to go out with a data call to 80 missions worldwide to request the information. I can happily say that we have instituted for FY 2007 a new expanded object coding system which will give us the ability to arrive at these numbers rapidly and systematically, literally with the press of a button for the dollar figures. The amounts which we reported to you follow:

Year	Amount Spent on Conferences	Percent of Total Budget
2001	$3,613,194	0.05%
2002	$6,966,497	0.08%
2003	$8,732,006	0.06%
2004	$8,863,409	0.07%
2005	$8,939,525	0.11%

Based on our 2007 requests we are looking at an upper limit figure of approximately $7.2 million. This would be a substantial decrease.

I apologize that I do not have for you today the 2006 numbers requested in your August 28 letter, however, I just received that letter this week on September 11th and we currently have a data call out and will provide what information we can to you as soon as possible .

If you were to ask me if all of the conference travel was in fact necessary, I cannot personally tell you that it was. But what I would point out is that the nature of what we do and where we do it makes conference meetings extremely expensive. But I would further point out that at USAID money spent on attendance at or hosting of conferences and seminars is in direct competition with program execution dollars. I would venture to say that as a head of office, our managers would not approve a frivolous conference at the experience to putting money on the ground where positive results can be measured to the agency's favor.

I would like to now give you a few examples of the results we have derived from our participation in conferences around the world.

The United States is one of the main co-sponsors of the International Partnership on Avian and Pandemic Influenza (IPAPI). At the most recent conference held in Vienna in July of 2006 the participating nations reviewed international contributions to combat avian and pandemic influenza and agreed to focus on the critical countries such as Indonesia where donor assistance is desperately needed. The result was that an international coalition of donors (U.S., Japan, Australia, Canada, Netherlands, South Korea, Kuwait, and the World Bank) mobilized approximately $40 million in assistance to Indonesia.

During the past year, USAID sponsored in-country stakeholder workshops in each of the seven countries targeted (so far) under the President's Malaria Initiative (PMI). These workshops typically lasted 1-2 days and brought together all organizations (public, NGO, private, international) involved with malaria prevention and treatment in the country. The objectives were to forge a consensus on how to reduce malaria mortality by 50% by 2010 (the goal of the PMI) and commit to work together to make this happen. Specific work plans were drafted following these meetings. These workshops were chaired by the Directors of the National Malaria Control Programs. Costs of conducting these events were very modest (about $2,500 or less). As a result of strong in-country coordination and committed implementation of this initiative, the PMI is able to report over 5 million beneficiaries during the first nine months of field operations.

In May, 2003, USAID worked with Canadian CIDA and the Minister of Health of Uganda to organize and co-sponsor a high level consultation on accelerating progress toward the 2015 International Development Goal for Child Survival. This meeting was linked to a meeting of the "High Level Forum" of heads of bilateral and multilateral development agencies in Ottawa. This meeting presented the results of an analysis of child survival programs by leading international experts, followed by discussion among senior policymakers and ministry–level representatives of developing countries of options for expanding present efforts. This conference led directly to the formation of a global partnership that includes USAID and CIDA as well as the World Bank, UNICEF, WHO, other donors such as DfID, and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. Through the actions of this partnership, countries have already received increased support for child health programming, and new initiatives are being launched, including a plan for improving child survival in Africa launched this month by these partners and the African Union. So far in 2005 and 2006, approximately $50 million in additional funding has been pledged by donors to accelerate child survival in high mortality countries.

Pneumonia is one of the major causes of preventable infant and child death in developing countries, resulting in about 2 million deaths a year. A global program for pneumonia treatment had been started in the late 1980s by WHO, but throughout the 1990s coverage of this program remained stagnant. USAID believed that this lack of progress was due to restricting this treatment to formal health facilities, while field trials had clearly demonstrated the effectiveness of treatment by community health workers. In 2002, USAID convened an informal consultation with WHO, UNICEF, and other major child survival partners to discuss this problem. The result was an international consultation held in Stockholm, where the scientific evidence and the experience of countries actually implementing community treatment of child pneumonia were presented. The country experience – much of it from USAID-supported programs like Nepal and Honduras – was especially persuasive. This review led directly to a major change in policy, with WHO and UNICEF issuing a joint statement recommending community-level treatment of pneumonia in countries where health facility coverage is limited. As a result, new programs have been launched to address community-based treatment of pneumonia in six countries, with an additional six countries now planning to begin this program in the coming year.

These are just a few examples of the benefits derived from participating in these conferences which are critical to furthering these mission related activities. Hopefully, I have also demonstrated that they are working venues for this Agency and provide a platform for information exchange leading also to problem resolution on a worldwide scale.

At USAID, we employ strict controls over both conference sponsorship as well as conference attendance. Our Agency policy requires that approving officials ensure that the "minimum number of attendees needed to fulfill agency requirements are in attendance at any individual conference." Further in those cases where the Agency is sponsoring a conference..."sponsoring Bureaus and offices must compare the cost of at least three conference locations....." We believe that our separate policy governing conferences coupled with the strict required approvals for hosting conferences lends strong stewardship in this area over our scarce resources.

Mr. Chairman and members of the Subcommittee, I would like to thank you for this opportunity to share with you information about the U. S. Agency for International Development's conference activities and spending, and I look forward to answering any questions you may have on this topic.

2). Please submit final FY 06 conference activity report by October 10.

- The total amount spent by the department and its agencies and offices on FY 06 conferences—including general support, programming, staff salaries, travel and other associated costs—

FY 2005	$8,939,525
FY 2006	$7,139,550

- A full listing of each conference that received support from the department and its agencies and offices during FY 06 including the location of the conference, the number of department employees who attended and the primary sponsor of the conference; the cost of the conference.

  Please see attached listing of USAID Conferences October 2005 through September 2006 and USAID Estimated Conferences October 2006 through September 2007.

3.) How many conferences did USAID participate in 2005? In 2006?

- How many attendees in 2005? In 2006?

FY 2005	3,909 attendees at 1,479 events
FY 2006	1,513 attendees at 1,029 events

4.) When managers approve conference attendance requests is there a policy in place which requires scrutiny of number of attendees? In other words, does attendance by more than one employee receive additional scrutiny and require manager approval?

USAID employs strict controls over both conference sponsorship as well as conference attendance. Our Agency policy requires that approving officials ensure that the "minimum number of attendees needed to fulfill agency requirements are in attendance at any individual conference." Further, in those cases where the Agency is sponsoring a conference..."sponsoring Bureaus and offices must compare the cost of at least three conference locations....." We believe that our separate policy governing conferences coupled with the strict required approvals for hosting conferences lends strong stewardship in this area over our scarce resources.

(USAID directives additionally require each Bureau or independent office to have its own internal procedures for evaluating the need for and cost of all planned conferences.)

Statement of Nina Rose Hatfield
Deputy Assistant Secretary, Policy, Management and Budget
U.S. Department of the Interior

Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management,
Government Information, and International Security
Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs
U.S. Senate

Oversight Hearing on Federal Conference Spending

September 14, 2006

Chairman Coburn and distinguished members of the Committee, I am Nina Rose Hatfield, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Business Management and Wildland Fire at the Department of the Interior. I am pleased to be here today to discuss conference spending by Interior.

The Department of the Interior is the nation's principal conservation agency. Our bureaus include the Bureau of Land Management, the National Park Service, the Fish and Wildlife Service, the Bureau of Reclamation, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, the Minerals Management Service, the United States Geological Survey, and the Office of Surface Mining. We are a large, decentralized agency with over 70,000 employees and 180,000 volunteers located at approximately 2,400 operating locations across the United States. The Department manages one in every five acres of the United States, and maintains some 40,000 facilities. We discharge our responsibilities on a $16.4 billion total annual budget.

As manager of over 500 million acres, Interior has a mission that lies at the confluence of people, land, and water. How well we do our job at Interior affects whether:

- people have water in their homes;
- farmers can irrigate their fields;
- families can warm and cool their homes with affordable, reliable energy;
- Indian children enjoy educational opportunities;
- communities avoid risks from catastrophic fires and natural hazards;
- our children and grandchildren can enjoy the grand vistas of the Grand Canyon, or the geologic rainbows of Arches National Park; and
- habitats flourish for this Nation's diverse flora and fauna

As this Nation's premier land manager, our mission inevitably places us amid conflict as different people have diverse aspirations for these public lands. As guardian of thousands of buildings, roads, trails, research facilities, and scientific systems, our mission also triggers many basic management challenges.

In conducting our jobs we work closely with States, Tribes, and local communities particularly in seeking public input relative to our mission for the management of lands and resources. Much of our work involves meeting and collaborating with others. In the case of the U.S. Geological Survey, which is a science agency, there is a compelling need to work closely with academia. In many of our jobs, attending training and conferences is an important tool for employee development, learning, and sharing information.

I appreciate the Committee's efforts to ensure travel and conferences costs are limited to essential training and interaction with the public. That said I also believe that conferences, in certain cases, represent an indispensable tool for promoting sound policy development and practice. Good policy for lands all over the country cannot always be developed in Washington D.C.; there are times when interaction with impacted communities can help decision makers to identify options and craft more collaborative, effective solutions.

Our travel and conference budget is relatively small. In FY 2000, Interior obligated $206.6 million on total travel and conference expenses, or 1.5% of its total obligations. In FY 2005 Interior obligated $207 million or 0.9% of its total obligations. In 2000 dollars, this equates to $185 million, or a 12% decrease. Of the FY 2000 total, conference registration fees totaled $25 million. In FY 2005, that figure declined to $23.5 million. Interior is committed to ensuring our travel dollars are maximized by limiting attendance at meetings and conferences, using teleconferencing and other alternatives to travel, and by taking advantage of cost efficiencies in travel.

Since our travel budget is relatively small, we do not have special systems or staff to track the information on conference attendance and costs at the level of detailed requested by the Committee. In FY 2004, at the request of the Interior Appropriations Committee we made a special effort of quarterly data calls to capture the costs of conferences where 30 or more Interior staff were in attendance. In FY 2004 these conference costs amounted to approximately $6 million dollars or 3 percent of the total travel obligations for the bureaus covered under the Interior appropriations bill.

Attending and sponsoring conferences is part of our mission work and an important training tool as we face an increasing rate of retirements. Conferences are an excellent mechanism to share ideas, make contacts in your area of expertise, learn of new tools and technologies, and keep abreast of new legal requirements. Conferences sponsored by Interior bureaus cover such topics as Interagency Fire coordination, Law Enforcement coordination, regional mapping and species conservation. Frequently, representatives from State and local governments and non-profits active in the conservation arena are invited to attend.

This willingness to engage stakeholders on the ground is a key part of the cooperative conservation philosophy that the Department of the Interior is seeking to instill department-wide. Cooperative conservation is an approach to conservation that emphasizes the promotion of citizen stewardship and partnerships with States, tribes, and communities. Conferences are sometimes used to bring together citizens and decision makers, facilitating the exchange of information on ways to protect and enhance wildlife, lands, and waters across the nation. Examples of conferences planned by Department of the Interior bureaus over the last two years that reflect the cooperative conservation approach are the BLM's New Mexico Lands Workshop and South Central Oregon Fire Conference, the Bureau of Reclamation's Conference on the Environmental Impact Statement for the Folsom Project, and the Fish and Wildlife Service's Maine Coastal Waters Conference.

I myself sponsor an annual conference. When I became Deputy Assistant Secretary it became clear that our managers needed to break out of their stovepipes and communicate with each other to improve our business management practices. The annual conferences are designed for managers from finance, property, budget and performance, asset management, human resources, information technology, and procurement/competitive sourcing business areas. The workshops included presentations and discussion opportunities on the Financial and Business Management System (FBMS) implementation, Homeland Security Presidential Directive-12, new requirements in OMB Circular A-123 andA-76, President's Management Agenda, EEO Management Directive-715 and CFR-1614 changes, FISMA, FASAB, Government Performance and Results Act, Enterprise Security Network, Activity-Based Costing, and OMB's Program Assessment Rating Tool. This year, approximately 300 people attended this 4 day conference held in March in suburban Baltimore, 60% of whom were staff from the DC area. The total cost was less than $400,000. The information provided was current and specific to Interior. One conference is held in lieu of the numerous conferences that were conducted in the past for each management area. The conference also provides required training, CLEs, for procurement, finance, and other specialists. Conferences or classes provided by outside vendors would cost significantly more, often $1,500 for tuition alone. I believe our conference to be a bargain.

Although I have emphasized my belief that conference spending can help to further the mission of the Department of the Interior, I also recognize your concern that all conference attendance and spending should be appropriately controlled. The Department of the Interior has made significant investments in technological infrastructure for video- and teleconferencing. We will continue to promote the use of electronic conferencing whenever possible to reduce the need for in-person attendance at training and professional meetings. In tough budget times, conference spending should be reviewed carefully to ensure that it is contributing to mission-essential work. Every effort must be made to promote a business-like approach to conference planning and to reduce agency costs.

Senior management already monitors conferences closely. The Department of the Interior has a longstanding policy requiring that conferences involving 30 or more employees be approved by the Program Assistant Secretary. Approval may be delegated not lower than the Deputy Assistant Secretary. Some bureaus have policies for approval of smaller meetings or attending conferences. This review ensures the conferences are mission related and that the location and timing of the conference are cost beneficial.

I regret that at this time I am unable to provide all of the information you requested concerning conference spending in the last two fiscal years. My staff is gathering detailed conference information through data calls to the bureaus. We will provide further information to you in the next few weeks.

Mr. Chairman and members of the Subcommittee, this concludes my testimony. I would like to thank you again for this opportunity to discuss the Department of the Interior's activities and spending related to conferences. I would be happy to answer any questions at this time.

QUESTIONS FOR THE RECORD FROM DR. COBURN

Please respond as soon as possible:

1). Please provide more details about the following conferences including the dates. These were taken from your November 14, 2005 report.

- Conservation/Refuge Summit in Shepherdstown, WV, 125 Interior employees, 250 attendees total, $722,000 (5/23-5/27 2004)

  -Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

  Answer: The Conservation in Action Summit, held at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's National Conservation Training Center in Shepherdstown, West Virginia, focused on the implementation of refuge programs consistent with the National Wildlife Refuge System Improvement Act, focusing on the consistent management of the 545-unit National Wildlife Refuge System. The summit included working sessions to meet the challenges of wildlife and habitat management, the future of refuge recreation, the important role of science on refuges, and the strategic growth of the Refuge System. The cost of the summit was approximately $420,000, less than the $722,000 planning budget.

  -How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

  Answer: The conference attendees were refuge employees. As refuges are located throughout the country in all 50 States, the conference attendees traveled from out-of-town to attend the conference. The conference was held at the National Conservation Training Center, which is owned and operated by the Fish and Wildlife Service to provide training to refuge and other staff.

- 460 People to Los Angeles, CA for Interagency meeting, $750,000. (11/17 - 11/20 2003)

  -Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

  Answer: The purpose of the conference was to focus on conservation through partnerships, a key component of achieving the Department's goals for conservation. The Department is responsible for management of over 500 million acres or approximately one-fifth of the United States as well as the protection of natural and cultural resources. These objectives are met through cooperative and partnership programs that engage local communities and others in the development of a sense of shared stewardship.

  A total of 1,555 attendees participated in the conference, including: 414 from the Department of the Interior (260 from NPS, 66 from BLM, 29 from FWS, 20 from Reclamation, 20 from BIA, and 19 from other Departmental offices); 119 from the USFS; and 86 came from the Corps of Engineers. The remaining attendees came from non-Federal partner organizations, such as, the National Parks Conservation Association, the National Wildlife Federation, and the National Recreation and Parks Association. In addition to registered participants, 56 employees attended the conference as support staff to assist with logistics and training. Of those, 46 came from NPS, 7 from other Federal agencies and 3 from non-Federal agencies. The attendance figure of 460 represents the number of registered attendees (414), and support staff (46) that came from the Department of the Interior.

-How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

Answer: Consistent with the Department's geographically dispersed organization, most of the Department's attendees came from outside the Los Angeles metropolitan area.

- 286 US Geological Survey managers attend a conference in Austin, TX to meet other managers and exchange ideas, $339,299. (3/29-4/2 2004)

-Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

Answer: US Geological Survey is a very distributed scientific organization, with over 400 offices in all 50 states. Several years ago, USGS reorganized from a science-discipline based approach into a more regionalized approach, attempting to integrate work across the disciplines. The conference in Austin was held after the reorganization was complete and it focused on developing a bureau-wide common framework of communication, integration, best practices, and opportunities for collaboration. The conference was intended to replace multiple regional and discipline meetings with one national conference. The conference supported the following goals and accomplishments:

  - Create an open forum that allows managers to meet one another, exchange ideas, explore opportunities for integrated research, and present feedback to bureau leadership.
  - Enhance understanding of the breadth of scientific activities conducted and discuss how they could be focused to support the Department of the Interior's strategic objectives. Technical presentations illustrated successful integration and allowed managers to become better acquainted with one another and better integrate studies.
  - Share information, ideas, and opportunities for enhancing USGS science support for resource management agencies.
  - Share challenges USGS managers have encountered and the novel solutions they have developed through interactive presentations, training modules, and breakout sessions on business and management issues.
  - A summary of FY 2003 audit results was presented with a discussion of additional compliance actions necessary to strengthen financial operations.

-How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

Answer: Three attendees of the conference came from the Austin area. The rest of the attendees were from USGS offices, which are located throughout the country.

- 63 Bureau of Land Management employees attended a conference on current issues in Anchorage, AK, $44,802. (3/8-3/10 2004)

-Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

Answer: This conference was attended by 63 BLM employees from the Washington Office, State Offices, Field Offices, and Centers. This conference of external affairs and public affairs professionals provided an opportunity to ensure consistency in communications policies and procedures, communications strategies, and support for bureau programs. Attendees were afforded an opportunity to meet and better coordinate support for Administration priorities, including the President's Energy Policy, land management, and resource protection. This conference provided attendees with information and approaches to improve relationships with communities, partners, customers, contractors, volunteers, and stakeholders and an improved ability to assist in carrying out BLM's mission by actively working with them, and obtaining feedback and input on BLM's programs and business processes, plans, and practices.

-How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

Answer: Of the 63 attendees, 6 were local and 57 traveled from out-of-town.

- 300 employees attended a facilities management conference in Orlando, FL, $17,878. (5/2-5/5 2004)

-Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

Answer: The biennial 2004 Facilities Management Conference was sponsored by the Planning, Design, Construction and Maintenance Council whose members include Interior bureaus, the Indian Health Service and the Forest Service and the DOI Property Management Partnership. The conference provided a program with unique opportunities for facilities management, maintenance, property and engineering personnel to receive training on new methods and best practices, share operational and technical information, and exchange experiences with representatives from other bureaus, agencies, and Tribes. The Department's attendees of the conference included representatives from NPS, BLM, FWS, Reclamation, BIA, USGS, NBC, OSM, MMS, and Departmental Offices, as well as representatives from other agencies such as the Forest Service, Federal Highway Administration, EPA, and the Indian Health Service.

-How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

Answer: Approximately one dozen attendees came from the local commuting area. All others were from out of town.

- 80 Bureau of Land Management employees attend a conference in Riverside, CA, $51,013. (3/22-3/26 2004)

-Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

Answer: This was BLM's conference on the National Trails System. The workshop resulted in the development of the BLM's National Scenic and Historic Trails Strategy and Work Plan, released by the BLM Director on February 13, 2006 - the first direction ever produced for these trails at a national level. The conference also promoted partnership development, understanding and relationship-building between BLM staff, management, partner agencies and key trail-wide organization representatives and facilitated internal BLM discussion and understanding of key field management issues and policy areas, which would serve as the basis for program guidance development. There are 24 congressionally designated national scenic and historic trails in the National Trails System. These trails cross BLM-administered land in about 12 States, affecting work in about 85 offices. The BLM is responsible for the day-to-day management of portions of 13 (over 5,000 miles) of these multi-state trails as units of the National Landscape Conservation System. Sixteen nonprofit organizations from the Partnership for the National Trails System assist BLM with the management of these trails, as well as assistance from and cooperation with the U.S. Forest Service and National Park Service. The BLM manages more Federal miles of national historic trails than any other Federal agency and has been named as administrator or co-administrator on three of these trails by the Secretary of the Interior. In the 35-year history of the National Trails System, the Bureau never held a national level workshop to share, discuss and learn about managing these trails. The conference included attendees from BLM, NPS, Forest Service, and the National Trail Organization Representatives.

-How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

Answer: Of the 56 BLM attendees, 49 traveled from out-of-town to attend this workshop. In addition, there were 24 other out-of-town attendees: 6 from NPS, 2 from the U.S. Forest Service, and 16 representatives from national trails organizations.

- 34 Bureau of Land Management employees attended team building conference in Ruidiso, NM, $11,000. (9/8-9/10 2004)

-Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.

Answer: The conference was a team-building session for the Socorro Field Office intended to address issues identified in a General Management Evaluation. BLM offices in New Mexico had participated in a General Management Evaluation, or GME, in order to address management and employee issues and concerns and to evaluate work processes to identify efficiencies, inefficiencies, and best management practices. The GME took a careful look at management accountability for quality and timeliness of program performance, increasing productivity, controlling costs and mitigating adverse aspects of agency operations, and assuring that programs are managed with integrity and in compliance with the law. Recommendations made by the GME team members for improvements in the Socorro Field Office included a workshop in team-building. The costs identified included a team-building facilitator and trainer.

-How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

Answer: The majority of the attendees traveled from other locations in New Mexico.

- 786 Fishing Working Service employees to a conference to further partnerships within the department in Los Angeles, CA $1,102. (11/17-11/20 2003)

  -Please explain the purpose of Interior participation in the conference.
  -How many attendees traveled out of town to attend this conference?

  Answer: The above conference was duplicated in the report as a Fish and Wildlife Service and Interagency Conference. The correct data for this conference is provided above in second bullet which requested data on 460 attendees for a conference in Los Angeles, California for November 17th through the 20th, 2003.

2.) As you indicated in your testimony, the Department does not track conferences agency-wide, can you at the least provide total amount of money spent on conference registration fees, space rentals (if applicable), etc. for the logistical details of such events for 2004, 2005, and 2006?

Answer: Because of the limitations of our finance system, the Department cannot provide an amount for the conference registration fees, space rentals and logistical details.

3). Please submit final FY06 conference activity report by October 5.

- The total amount spent by the department and its agencies and offices on FY06 conferences-including general support, programming, staff salaries, travel and other associated costs-

  Answer:

  In FY 2006 we estimate the Department and its bureaus held 90 conferences at an estimated cost of $5.739 million with just over 7,000 employees attending. Interior has about 75,000 employees.

  Interior defines conference as a meeting or training where 30 or more Interior employees are on per diem. We do not consider salaries as a conference cost, as these are already sunk costs. There is no budget object class for conference space rentals. Please note that there is no financial or travel system that captures the information requested. The Department did a data call out to its bureaus. A few small bureaus maintain conference lists centrally while the larger bureaus issued a data call out to their regional contacts to review their records. Not all conferences may be captured. For bureaus that sponsored only a few conferences, these bureaus were able to query the various systems where costs are captured to develop a reasonably accurate figure. Other bureaus that include estimates as part of their senior management approval process used those estimates. Costs associated with attendance at Departmentally-sponsored conferences was determined by reviewing registration lists and GSA flight costs, added in per diem and lodging costs, and estimated rental car and mileage costs.

- A full listing of each conference that received support from the department and its agencies and offices during FY06 including the location of the conference, the number of department employees who attended and the primary sponsor of the conference; total number of attendees for the fiscal year; and the total number of conferences held.

  Answer:

  Please see attached list for FY 2006 and for FY 2005 which you requested in your August 28th letter.

  Also attached is an update to the 2000-2004 travel costs obligation information you requested in 2005.

4.) Has your department and its agencies purchased equipment to allow teleconferencing? What impact-- if any-- has the purchase of this technology had on the number of employees traveling to meetings and the amount spent on conferences?

Answer: The use of teleconferencing is a standard practice at Interior and is extensively used. Investments in teleconferencing have been made and continue to be made (as summarized below). For example, the Department's National Business Center manages a videoconferencing facility at the Main Interior Building that is available for use by all Interior bureaus and offices.

As a result the Department has been able to reduce travel expenses. In FY 2000, travel expenses Department-wide were $206.6 million or 1.5 percent of total spending. In 2004, travel costs were $218.7 million, or one percent of spending.

Teleconferencing cannot completely eliminate the need for conferences, as face-to-face communications, on-site training, and collaboration with stakeholders will continue to be needed on a diverse range of agency-related issues. The Department's programs are largely land and resource management and providing assistance such as delivering programs to Indian Tribes. These activities require extensive communication and collaboration, often across dispersed geographic boundaries and including multiple bureaus.

Highlights of Interior's teleconferencing investments and capabilities include:

- The Bureau of Land Management purchased video conferencing equipment for the Washington office in 2004. BLM is currently in the process of initiating a 3-year lease on additional video conferencing equipment for each of its State offices and national center locations.

- The United States Geological Survey has videoconferencing equipment in major offices located in Reston, VA; Denver, CO; Menlo Park, CA; Sioux Falls, SD; and Rolla, MO. USGS participates in and has implemented cost savings initiatives and uses teleconferences, conference calls, and cyber seminars to the maximum extent possible.

- The National Park Service makes extensive use of electronic mail, conference calls, and teleconferencing capabilities to handle large amounts of internal business and to disseminate information on new programs or policies. For example, the Pacific West Region uses video conferencing equipment to conduct quarterly work sessions with the Denver Service Center and parks. Using this technology has saved the region an estimated $10,000 per quarter. This is effective because of the nature of the information flow and the topics covered.

- The Department of the Interior University has developed online web-based training that is provided to all Interior employees in an effort to reduce the cost of providing training, as well as the travel costs associated with training. In addition to cost savings, this method of training delivery provides for a uniform, consistent message that reaches all Interior employees. For example, our Records Management Awareness course incorporates special requirements for handling of Indian Trust records and special requirements stemming from Departmental legal cases.

Course development costs of around $20,000 for a one-hour online course amount to 25 cents per end user (around 80,000 students trained). This can be compared to roughly $2,000 to provide an equivalent course to 25 students in a classroom situation, or $80 per student. Total cost to provide the training to all 80,000 employees in classrooms would be $6,400,000. This does not include any travel costs to get the students and instructors to the training site.

5.) In 2004, Interior sent 50 or more people to at least 67 conferences. It seems many of your conferences are related to internal matters. This being the case, would it be more economical to email out the reports and power point slides, and then do a formal teleconference or conference call?

Answer: The Department makes extensive use of web sites, electronic mail, compact disks and packaged briefing materials, conference calls, on-line learning and video conferencing to handle large amounts of internal business and to disseminate information. The Department routinely sends out all employee emails to distribute current information and instructions; the Department's web sites post the Department's manuals and policies, procedures, news and extensive programmatic information; and committees, workgroups, and councils work through mailings and other means to communicate information.

These activities help to reduce the need for conferences and travel. However, there continue to be a need where such forms of communication, training, and collaboration are not sufficiently effective. In situations where the event is focused on the audience listening to a speaker, then a teleconference or video conference is economical and productive. If the audience is required to participate, then a teleconference or video conference may not be feasible. Teleconferences and video conferences have limited capacities based on the number of locations participating and the number of conferencing lines available.

Department of Justice

STATEMENT

LEE J. LOFTHUS
ACTING ASSISTANT ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR ADMINISTRATION

BEFORE THE

SUBCOMMITTEE ON FEDERAL FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT, GOVERNMENT INFORMATION, AND INTERNATIONAL SECURITY
COMMITTEE ON HOMELAND SECURITY AND GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS
UNITED STATES SENATE

CONCERNING

CONFERENCE SPENDING WITHIN FEDERAL AGENCIES

PRESENTED ON

SEPTEMBER 14, 2006

Statement of Lee J. Lofthus
Acting Assistant Attorney General for Administration
U.S. Department of Justice

Before the Senate Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs
Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management, Government Information, and International Security

September 14, 2006

Good afternoon Chairman Coburn and distinguished members of the Subcommittee. I thank you for the opportunity to appear before you to discuss the issue of conference spending in federal agencies. The Justice Department appreciates your interest in this topic and shares your concern for assuring the American people that their tax dollars are spent appropriately for this purpose.

DOJ's mission

Last Monday the Nation marked the 5-year anniversary of the terrorist attacks on American soil. We are reminded by recent events in Afghanistan and the Middle East, and the dismantling of terrorist plots in the United Kingdom, that while America is safer now than it has ever been, additional challenges remain. For the men and women of the Department of Justice, these events have only strengthened their conviction and reaffirmed their commitment to work to protect the lives and liberties of all Americans.

Even as the Department focuses on the war against terror, we continue our traditional emphasis on fighting crime and protecting our communities. The Nation is faced with the continuing challenges of crime, gang violence, and the proliferation of illicit drugs as well as new challenges of crimes against children, which demand a timely and firm response. These and other law enforcement and public safety efforts represent a large portion of the overall mission of the Justice Department.

Our traditional law enforcement responsibilities, as well as our primary emphasis on prevention of terrorist acts, require coordination of efforts among all levels of government. This coordination includes sharing of national security-related intelligence; the conduct of joint operations integrating the efforts of our partners at all governmental levels against a wide variety of criminal enterprises; and the provision of law enforcement leadership and criminal justice services to our federal, state, municipal and international agencies and partners. The Department's components accomplish these efforts using a variety of information sharing approaches including enhanced information technology, training and technical assistance, and participation in conferences arranged by DOJ component agencies and by other organizations involved in law enforcement and terrorism prevention. These efforts have borne results in the form of substantial reductions in the level of violent crime, drug use, and property crime over the past decade.

Conference participation within DOJ

Departmental participation in conferences, training, and non-operational travel is managed and approved by the individual bureaus and offices of DOJ. Funding for participation in these events is subject to the availability of resources in individual component appropriations for these functions.

Actual Expenditures for Conferences

In our most recent report on costs incurred for DOJ participation in conferences that we prepared and forwarded to this committee, we indicated that our total annual Department-wide expenditures on conferences from the beginning of 2001 have ranged from $33.8 million in 2001, to $42.2 million anticipated for 2006, with our highest annual expenditure -- $58 million – occurring in 2004. Although these are significant expenditures of Departmental resources, they amount to 0.2 percent (two-tenths of one percent) of our annual discretionary funding over the 6-year period. We are in the process of preparing a list of the specific conferences we anticipate for 2007, with the associated costs, which the Chairman requested in his August 28, 2006, invitation to participate in this hearing.

Conferences Held at Non-Federal Facilities

Although conference spending within the Department is generally budgeted and approved by component heads, subject to the availability of appropriated resources, conferences sponsored by DOJ components that are proposed to be held at non-government facilities are subject to my review and approval.

Section 1173 of Public Law 109-162, the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 (The Act), states that unless authorized in writing by the Attorney General, the Department of Justice (and each entity within it) shall use for any predominantly internal training or conference meeting only a facility that does not require a payment to a private entity for the use of the facility. The Act also requires the Attorney General to prepare an annual report to the Chairmen and ranking minority members of the Committees on the Judiciary of the Senate and of the House of Representatives that details each training and conference meeting that required specific authorization. The report must include an explanation of why the facility was chosen and a breakdown of any expenditures incurred in excess of the cost of conducting the training of conference meeting at a facility that did not require such authorization.

DOJ Policy

Pursuant to this Act, DOJ developed policies regarding the use of non-federal facilities. Our guiding principles are:

- Approval must be obtained regardless of the cost of the conference facility and/or conference;
- Requests must be submitted by the official responsible for approving the event;

- As an internal control, the after-conference report must be submitted by the same individual that submitted the request;
- Locations or accommodations that may have the appearance of being lavish must be approved by the head of the component submitting the request;
- Market research must be performed as set forth in the FAR, Part 10, in order to obtain the comparative cost information necessary to submit the request;
- Estimated costs must be determined and itemized by category (e.g. meeting space, meals and incidental expenses, transportation, and other costs);
- Commitments or announcements regarding events in a non-federal facility must not be made until approval is granted by me; and
- Proper procurement regulations must be followed once approval is granted.

The policy also introduced a new Department Non-federal Facility Request Center including an on-line request format that, when completed, is sent to a centralized e-mail address for processing. As a result of instituting these internal controls, we have been able to keep DOJ's 32 Departmental training locations actively engaged; and we have referred potential conference events to approximately 60 other government training locations.

This policy was initially challenging to implement because it required a procedural change in the way certain conferences are approved. But, we are now confident that each component is fully aware of the new approval procedures. The additional scrutiny has resulted in approximately $1.1 million in savings to the taxpayers.

As the Acting Chief Financial Officer, I assure you that I enforce all of our internal policies for sponsorship of, and attendance at, conferences; and I am supportive of expenditures for well-conceived and cost-conscious alternatives to participation in conferences proposed for remote locations or locations presenting the appearance of being a resort or having lavish accommodations.

Conference participation by employees of the Department of Justice is scrutinized by the appropriate supervisory levels, weighed against competing resource needs for overall component operations, brought to my attention for approval when non-federal facilities are proposed, and reported annually to the Congress as required in legislation and report language. These mechanisms have been put in place to assure our citizens that DOJ resources are efficiently and effectively spent to further the Department's mission and to foster national priorities for law enforcement and public safety.

I thank you for the opportunity to appear before the Subcommittee to discuss this important topic, and I look forward to answering any questions you may have.

E) Federally Employed Women's Conference, Atlanta, GA, 8 listings

QUESTION E1: Did employees of the FBI take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates of the leave?

ANSWER: One employee took annual leave immediately before or after the conference. Leave was taken on July 14, 2006, the Friday before the conference began.

QUESTION E2: Please explain the purpose of the FBI's participation in the conference.

ANSWER: The FBI Office of Equal Employment Opportunity Affairs (OEEOA) informed all FBI divisions of the upcoming Federally Employed Women (FEW) 37th National Training Program. The FBI is committed to improving the ability and skills of all women in government and eliminating sex discrimination in the federal workplace. Additionally, in July 1999 FEW and the Office of Personnel Management signed a Partnership Agreement that constituted an acknowledgement of common goals and a commitment to a cooperative working relationship. The FBI employees felt that they could benefit from the FEW Conference 2006 training program entitled "New Connections - New Directions," which focused on providing participants with the tools required to establish and build a successful career and to deliver quality public service.

QUESTION E3: Is this something the FBI participates in annually?

ANSWER: Yes, the FBI participates in this conference annually.

QUESTION E4: What is the purpose of the conference?

ANSWER: The purpose of the conference is to promote equality for women and address concerns of women in the federal workforce. FEW is a private nonprofit organization founded in 1968 to support the implementation of the Federal Women's Program. FEW is the national organization concerned with furthering the potential of all women in the government and eliminating sex discrimination in federal service. The purpose of the conference is to provide training to ensure that employees possess the knowledge, skills, and abilities necessary to build a successful career, deliver quality public service, and to perform current duties more efficiently and effectively.

QUESTION F5: What were the dates of the conference?

ANSWER: July 17th - July 21st 2006.

G) Voting Symposiums, Washington DC

QUESTION G1: Please explain the purpose of Justice's participation in the conference.

ANSWER: In 2002, Attorney General John Ashcroft established the Department's Voting Integrity Initiative to spearhead our efforts to combat election fraud and civil rights offenses involving voting. The Attorney General placed election crimes and civil rights offenses involving voting, along with other forms of public corruption, among the Department's top law enforcement priorities. One key component of this initiative was the training symposium, known today as the Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Symposium.

QUESTION G2: Is this something Justice participates in annually?

ANSWER: Yes. The initiative was designated under the supervision of the Attorneys General of the Civil Rights Division and the Criminal Division and requires the annual training to address the Department's efforts to combat election fraud and voting rights abuses. The forum is sponsored as a joint partnership, to share conference responsibilities, between the Civil Rights and Criminal Divisions.

QUESTION G3: What is the purpose of the conference?

ANSWER: The purpose of the symposium is to ensure that each United States Attorney's Office has an AUSA (who currently serves as a District Election Officer (DEO) in their respective district) who is trained in the handling of election crime and voting rights allegations. The AUSAs, as well as other Department attorneys, participating in the symposium are directly involved in voting rights protection and enforcement. Accordingly, the Department has established a high degree of oversight to ensure that our responses are effective and appropriate (9 U.S.A.M. 85-210).

QUESTION G4: What were the dates of the conference?

ANSWER: October 4-5, 2005. The initiative requires that the symposium be held on an annual basis and that attendance by the districts is mandatory. The 2006 Ballot Access and Voting Integrity Symposiums were hosted in July 26-27, 2006.

H) International Forensic Science Symposium, Taipei, Taiwan, 1 person

QUESTION H1: Did employees of the FBI take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates of the leave?

ANSWER: No, the attendee did not take annual leave before or after the conference.

QUESTION H2: Please explain the purpose of the FBI's participation in the conference.

ANSWER: The FBI participated in this event in order to gain insight into new, innovative ideas and techniques in the field of forensic analysis. In particular, it allowed the FBI employee to learn more about the Redundant Array of Independent Disks (RAIDS) system, which involves the use of digital forensic analysis.

QUESTION H3: Is this something the FBI participates in annually?

ANSWER: No. This was the first time that an FBI employee attended this conference. The attendee was invited to apply for membership and continue to attend, but no decision has been made at this time.

QUESTION H4: What is the purpose of the conference?

ANSWER: The purpose of this conference is to allow leading experts in the field of forensic science to share their ideas and techniques on forensic analysis and investigation.

QUESTION H5: What were the dates of the conference?

ANSWER: The dates of the conference were November 5-17, 2005.

QUESTION #2

Please submit final FY06 conference activity report by October 5. Please submit a supplemental report we will add to your 9/13 report, but please calculate grand FY06 totals.

- The total amount spent by the department and its agencies and offices on FY06 conferences – including general support, programming, staff salaries, travel and other associated costs –

- A full listing of each conference that received support from the department and its agencies and offices during FY06 including the location of the conference, the number of department employees who attended and the primary sponsor of the conference; the cost of the conference.

  Please also include:

  1) total number of attendees for the fiscal year
  2) total number of conferences in which you participated

ANSWER: See enclosed Excel chart.

QUESTION #3

When managers approve conference attendance requests is there a policy in place which requires scrutiny of number of attendees? In other words, does attendance by more than one employee receive additional scrutiny and require manager approval?

ANSWER: All conference attendances require manager approval. Components have policies in place that limit the number of attendees to a conference with exceptions made where additional attendance is needed for proper representation of the component and/or department, and where additional attendance is needed for proper training of the staff.

TESTIMONY FOR

ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR MANAGEMENT MICHELL CLARK

for the Senate Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management,

Thursday, September 14, 2006 / Washington, D.C.

Chairman Coburn, Senator Carper, and distinguished members of the committee, thank you for inviting the Department of Education to this hearing.

My name is Michell Clark, Assistant Secretary for Management at the Department. I appreciate this opportunity to testify on the Department's policies and practices as they relate to conference sponsorship, attendance and related costs.

As public stewards, we have a special obligation to ensure that taxpayer dollars are spent wisely, appropriately and in a manner consistent with congressional intent. We are fulfilling those goals.

It begins with a strong policy on Departmental travel. I have here the Department's official Handbook for Travel Policy. It does not make for exciting reading. But its common-sense rules illustrate our principles.

The very first requirement is that travel will be authorized "only when it is necessary to accomplish the Department's mission in the most effective and economical manner." Travel outside a 35-mile radius of the employee's daily commute must be authorized by the Department.

A Travel Management Center makes all arrangements, searching for best values and federal discounts. Use of an outside contractor for official travel must be justified in writing with a cost comparison. We also have strict policies regarding acceptance of payment for official travel from non-federal sources. Such an acceptance must be approved by the Department's chief of staff with concurrence by the Ethics Division of the Office of the General Counsel.

Under the Constitution, education is primarily a State and local responsibility. Much of our work entails person-to-person contact with our numerous State and local partners and stakeholders, the people who administer programs for 54 million K-12 and 22 million post-secondary students. One of the most effective ways to communicate with them is through conferences, which enable us to interact with hundreds or thousands of people at a time.

Take our Federal Student Aid, or FSA, conferences. These conferences are a critical source of training for financial aid administrators. They allow us to provide more than 6,000 participating schools with updates on changes to Title IV student aid programs and policy.

For the past two years, FSA has hosted two Electronic Access Conferences per year—one in the East and one in the West—with plans to move to a single conference in 2008.

Each conference is attended by as many as 2,500 customers, who choose from up to 70 informative training sessions. FSA staff serve as session instructors and in logistical support; they account for less than 10 percent of total conference attendees annually.

We have also held conferences on the new IDEA legislation and regulations, helping State and local education officials learn about new provisions affecting students with disabilities. We've also held conferences on the Title I program for low-income students.

Hundreds of our educational partners and stakeholders attend workshops and confer with Department officials on a variety of subjects. These range from changes to Department regulations, to aligning instructional methods with state accountability standards, to providing choice and supplemental educational services to a greater number of families.

Sometimes requests for conference training and assistance are made by Members of Congress on behalf of their constituents. We are happy to comply.

Much of this recent conference activity was spurred by passage of the No Child Left Behind Act, the greatest education accountability law in our nation's history. These conferences actually improve accountability. They help stakeholders better understand how to increase academic achievement for all students. They also help grant recipients avoid missteps that could lead to costly program fraud, waste, or abuse.

In the most recent fiscal year, about $6.3 million was spent on conferences, a figure that included normal staff salaries, which would have been paid regardless of the setting. By contrast, our Department's discretionary budget was more than $56 billion.

Seventy-six percent of the conferences sponsored or attended by Department staff between October 2004 and May 2006 involved fewer than three Department employees. A total of 67 conferences were held in the Washington, D.C. area.

We are using technology to further reduce the need for travel. Our use of video-teleconferencing has increased by 78 percent since 2003.

We recognize that accountability does not occur without transparency. Our Office of Communications and Outreach has compiled information on annual conference attendance and sponsorship, coordinating with various offices to find ways to improve their management and administration.

And Weekly Speaking Reports let our senior officials know who's going where and why, and how this contributes to meeting the Department's goals and priorities.

As we continue working to implement No Child Left Behind's accountability provisions, we must hold ourselves accountable as well. We are working hard every day to set a good example.

Prior to 2001, the Department of Education had earned only one "clean" audit in our history; we're about to receive our fifth. We were the first Cabinet Department to achieve "green" status on the Improved Financial Performance PMA scorecard. Our administrative expenses account for only about two percent of our total budget. And in 2004, we received the Presidential Award for Management Excellence for improved financial performance.

We are continuously searching for innovative new ways to accomplish our goals in the most effective and efficient manner. Those goals include measuring and improving academic performance, sharing best instructional practices, promoting global competitiveness and reducing conference costs.

We will continue to improve our financial management and oversight of policies governing conference and travel-related costs. And we are eager to work with the OMB and Congress every step along the way.

Thank you, and I will be happy to take questions.

###

1. Electronic Aid Conference, 148 people, San Diego, CA
   How much did it cost?

   Please explain ED's participation in the conference.
   Federal Student Aid (FSA) was the host of the conference. FSA hosts two fall conferences each year, one in the east and one in the west, to accommodate the geographic diversity of the Department's school customer base. This also permits FSA to easily integrate its regional staff into conference locations in near-by cities. Last year, regional staff represented almost a quarter of the on-site Department attendees.

   Federal Student Aid staff, who annually account for less than 10% of total conference attendees, support these conferences in several ways including as session instructors and by providing conference logistics. FSA's Executive Management Team approves all staff members attending each conference.

   What is the purpose of the conference?
   To provide critical training forums for financial aid administrators. There are over 6000 schools that participate in the Department's student aid programs, which account for approximately $80 billion. Each conference is attended by as many as 2,500 customers who can choose from up to 70 different training sessions.

   The various locations were used because they best met the required date, function space and sleeping room requirements for FSA's conferences at the time they were selected. The size of these conferences prohibits FSA from choosing all but the nation's largest conference hotels, where hotel rates can be negotiated for Departmental staff. The locations change each year.

   What were the dates of the conference?
   November 2-5, 2003

2. Electronic Aid Conference, 158 people, New Orleans, LA
   How Much Did it Cost?
   $1,216,404.15

   Please explain the purpose of Ed's participation in the conference.
   See response above.

   What is the purpose of the conference?
   See response above.

   What were the dates of the conference?
   December 2-5, 2003

3. Electronic Aid (Spring) Conference, 139 people, New York, NY
   How much did it cost?
   $1,079,329.26

Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference?
Same as above. In 2005, FSA discontinued its spring conference and now relies on the two fall conferences to provide training and to update participants on changes to federal student aid programs.

What is the purpose of the conference?
Same as above.

What were the dates of the conference?
March 29-31, 2004

4. Pacific Regional Education Lab Conference, Honolulu, HI
   How much did it cost?
   $1,934.69

   Did attendees take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?
   No leave was taken.

   Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference.
   To moderate plenary sessions on using Federal resources to improve student learning; make presentations on Federal fiduciary requirements for establishing financial management systems, requirements for consolidating grants to improve student achievement(including distance learning to meet challenges of the Pacific Islands' remote locations), and meeting the needs of English language learners and disabled students.

   What is the purpose of the conference?
   To provide the Pacific entities (American Samoa, Guam and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands) with technical assistance on how to use their consolidated Federal grants to improve student achievement; to provide the Freely Associated States (Palau, Marshall Islands, and the Federated States of Micronesia) with guidance on the effective use of Compact Funds and the Supplemental Education Opportunity grants under the newly-negotiated Compact II; and, to provide all entities with guidance on the financial management of their federal grants. The Pacific entities were all determined to be high risk grantees and have special conditions on their federal grants. This conference was to provide them with technical assistance.

   What were the dates of the conference?
   October 13-17, 2004

5. Federal Education Programs Seminar, 1 person, Honolulu, HI
   How much did it cost?
   $2,712.30

   Did attendees take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?
   No leave was taken.

   Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference.

To moderate sessions on developing a comprehensive plan to improve student achievement. Made presentations on establishing education standards and developing assessments aligned to those standards, and the requirements for highly qualified teachers and why they are important for education reform. Staff provided technical assistance work sessions with break out groups to address the special needs of each entity throughout the conference.

What is the purpose of the conference?
To provide guidance to the Pacific entities on improving student achievement through standards-based reform and to provide guidance on meeting the challenge of educating English language learners in the context of education reform.

The Pacific Resources for Education and Learning (PREL) chose Hawaii as the location for the Federal Education Programs Seminar because it was centrally located for the key participants -- American Samoa, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands. This conference coincided with a PREL meeting that had participants who were appropriate attendees for the conference.

What were the dates of the conference?
June 4-9, 2005

6. Annual Binational Migrant Education Forum, 3 people, Guadalajara, Mexico
How much did it cost?
$6,502.51

Did attendees take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?
No leave was taken.

Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference.
To implement the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) on Education between the Government of the United States and the Government of the United States of Mexico that was signed by the respective Secretaries of Education; to present information on programs affecting migrant students under the Elementary and Secondary Education Act; to work with States on developing a strategic plan for addressing educational needs of migrant students; to review issues related to visas and the teacher exchange program; to identify new areas of cooperation and strengthen existing ones; and, to meet with Mexican federal and state representatives to address educational issues that affect binational migrant students.

What is the purpose of the conference?
The Binational Migrant Education Forum provides an opportunity for the Migrant Education Programs from the United States and Mexico to strengthen and further their collaboration in addressing the educational needs of children who are migrating between the U.S. and Mexico with their parents or guardians who work in the agricultural or fishing areas as migrant workers. Through the Forum, educators work to promote the learning and achievement of these binational migrant students through a program of initiatives, identified as focus areas, which include information and dissemination; teacher exchange programs; access to schools; and culture and education resources.

What were the dates of the conference?
June 4-9, 2005

7. 26th Annual TRIO Conference, 1 person, San Juan, Puerto Rico

How much did it cost?
$1403

Did attendees take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?
No annual leave was taken.

Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference.
Staff spoke at the general session and provided a Federal update to about 100 conference participants; also provided technical assistance to current grantees.

What is the purpose of the conference?
The Caribbean Association of TRIO Programs (CATP) sponsors this conference. CATP represents Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. CATP promotes access, retention and opportunity for disadvantaged and minority youth in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands. It is one of 11 regional associations of professionals working on federally-funded TRIO projects. The CATP meeting is held in Puerto Rico since the members of the association live and work in Puerto Rico.

The federal TRIO programs are educational outreach programs designed to motivate and support students from disadvantaged backgrounds to progress through the academic pipeline. In FY 2005, the Department funded 2,707 grants under the Federal TRIO Programs to serve an estimated 877,777 students. Of this number, 55 TRIO projects are in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands serving an estimated 21,655 students.

What were the dates of the conference?
May 18-19, 2005.

8. Federal Update Student Loan Programs, 1 person, Honolulu, HI

How much did it cost?
$2131

Did attendees take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?
The employee took three days of annual leave -- Friday, March 4, 2005, and Thursday and Friday, March 10th and 11th, 2005.

Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference.
Department staff provided a Federal update on the Title IV student financial aid programs, with particular focus on the Perkins Loan program, to about 250 attendees and participated in training programs for new loan administrators.

What is the purpose of the conference?

The Sungard Summit is held annually and attracts about 5,000 attendees. Department staff have participated in this conference for the past five years; this is the first time it was held in Hawaii. Sungard is a major provider of computer software and other information technology services to institutions of higher education and other sectors. Sungard provides student loan servicing software and other information technology software packages to support schools in the administration of their student financial aid programs.

What were the dates of the conference?
March 7-9, 2005.

9. Rural Independent Living Conference, 1 person and an assistant as a reasonable accommodation, Honolulu, HI
How much did it cost?
$5,496.45

Did attendees take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?
No annual leave was taken before or after the conference.

Please explain the purpose of ED's participation in the conference.
Staff were asked to address the conferees at the opening plenary session and to conduct workshops on effective ways for centers for independent living to access and provide transportation to persons with disabilities. Department staff participated in the opening plenary session and provided the groundwork for what would be discussed over the next few days. Staff conducted two widely attended workshops. The first provided an in-depth discussion on the reorganization of the Rehabilitative Services Administration (RSA) and how grantees would be affected. The second session focused on newly implemented standards and performance measures that would affect grantees, and in particular, measures addressing a new program focus on transportation for persons with disabilities in rural areas. Staff also participated in a plenary session with representatives of the Department of Transportation to discuss transportation issues and options for persons with disabilities in rural areas.

What is the purpose of the conference?
The conference is the single largest gathering of key stakeholders and grantees representing rural independent living programs. This year's focus was on improving transportation options for persons with disabilities in rural areas.

What were the dates of the conference?
October 7-11, 2005

STATEMENT OF
EDWARD C. HUGLER,
DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR OPERATIONS,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY FOR ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

BEFORE THE

U.S. SENATE

September 14, 2006

Dr. Coburn, Ranking Member Carper, and other distinguished Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for the opportunity to testify today on the topic of "Federal Agencies and Conference Spending."

The Department of Labor (DOL) is proud of its track record of fiscal restraint, management excellence, and of ensuring that every federal dollar is well spent. The President's 2007 Budget requested the lowest discretionary Budget Authority for the Department since FY 1997. Between 2001 and 2007, the Department's discretionary budget declined by a cumulative 8.7 percent. As of June 2006, DOL remained the only Executive Branch agency to achieve a "green" status on all five of the government-wide President's Management Agenda (PMA) initiatives. In April 2006, the Department continued its first-place ranking in the Mercatus Center's scorecard of Performance and Accountability Reports (PARs). The most recent PAR included our ninth consecutive clean audit of the Department's FY 2005 financial statements. And last December, the Department received the President's Quality Award for Performance in Integrating Management Systems, becoming the first Department to achieve this award for management excellence.

Departmental Authority and Policy on Conferences

Since enactment of its FY-1993 appropriation, the Department has had permanent authority to pay "for expenses of attendance at meetings which are concerned with the functions or activities for which the appropriation is made or which will contribute to improved conduct, supervision, or management of those functions or activities." With our focus on doing more with less, we have imposed even greater rigor in the application of our budgetary resources.

The Department has structured controls to restrict DOL participation in and sponsorship of conferences in which the subject matter or objective clearly advances DOL's mission, promotes achievement of our strategic and annual performance goals, or enhances the ability of our employees to serve the public. Through this restrictive approach, DOL sponsors, co-sponsors, or approves staff participation in conferences for such mission-related, as well as congressionally mandated, purposes, as:

- Educating the public about the available resources and programs of the Department that enhance employment opportunities and business prosperity, worker health and workplace safety;
- Enhancing the welfare and protecting the rights of American workers, including promoting compliance by helping both employers and employees understand our labor laws and regulations;
- Supporting efforts to help workers gain the skills they need for the 21st Century workforce;
- Enhancing diversity in the workforce; and
- Educating departmental field staff about new techniques to improve workforce health and safety.

Guidelines for Conference Participation

DOL has specific guidelines for conference participation. They include:

- Policies governing conference site selection are established in Department of Labor Manual Series (DLMS), General Travel Regulations for Conference Planning (DLMS 7-1, Part 16). This policy ensures that agencies exercise strict fiscal responsibility in choosing a site that is in the best interest of the Government. The site selection process includes conducting cost comparisons in terms of size, scope, and location, and maintaining written documentation of alternatives considered, as well as the selection rationale used. Our guidance also ensures that conference sites are selected that minimize conference administrative costs and conference attendees' travel costs to be paid by the Government, as well as conference attendees' time costs.

- Policies governing the authorization of travel expenses associated with conference attendance are established in DLMS 7-1, Subpart B, General Travel Regulations for Official Government Business Travel. These guidelines ensure that agencies authorize only such travel that is necessary to accomplish the purposes of the government effectively and economically. In determining whether travel is necessary, our guidance requires consideration of budget constraints, adherence to travel policies, and reasonableness of expenses. In addition, strict management oversight ensures that the conference clearly advances the Department's mission, promotes the achievement of performance goals or enhances services to the public as described above.

- Policies governing employee participation in developmental opportunities are in accordance with the Government Employees Training Act (GETA) of 1958, which establishes a flexible framework for the training and development of the Federal workforce. GETA allows agencies to fund employee training and development to assist in achieving their mission and performance goals by improving employee and organizational performance. The Department's Human Resources Center in the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Administration and Management (OASAM) provides leadership, coordination, guidance, and technical expertise in all areas related to management of DOL's human resources – including training, development, and continuous learning.

Trends in Conference Spending

In response to the Chairman's request, DOL has provided the Committee budget data on total obligations for conference activities in fiscal years (FY) 2001-2005, with estimates for FY 2006. As our data illustrate, DOL obligated $5.1 million to sponsor, co-sponsor, or participate in conferences in FY 2005. In FY 2005, obligations for conferences represented just 0.04 percent of the Department's total discretionary budgetary resources. For FY 2006, we estimate that conference-related obligations will decline to $4.7 million, a reduction of nearly 8 percent below the year-earlier level, and 28 percent below the FY 2003 level. Over the past five years, the Department's obligations for conferences totaled $29 million, or 0.05 percent of discretionary budgetary resources of $60 billion. At this time, it is not possible to provide a list of FY 2007 conferences, dates, or precise estimate of DOL's total obligations for conferences, but we expect it to be at or below the FY 2006 level. Our track record of restrained spending for conferences demonstrates that DOL has obligated federal funds prudently, using funds for conferences that are important to the Department's mission and yield value to taxpayers.

DOL is committed to maintaining strong financial management. We are continuously monitoring our internal controls and strengthening our Departmental policies to ensure cost-effective ways to maximize our resources.

Thank you for the opportunity to appear before you today to discuss the nature and extent of DOL's conference spending. I will be happy to take your questions.

Follow Up on Conferences
Prepared on October 3, 2006

Note: Cost of staff salaries is not included

Conference:	ESA -- Manhattan Reunion 60th Anniversary of the Development of the Atomic Bomb During WWII
Location:	Elmira / Corning, NY
Dates:	June 24-26, 2004
Federal Staff:	2
Annual Leave Taken:	none
Purpose of conference:	The purpose of the conference was to bring together people involved with the Manhattan Project on a national level. The conference included several key speakers, including chemists, engineers, the city of Knoxville, the Oak Ridge Tourism Bureau, etc.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	The Division of Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation (part of DOL's Office of Workers' Compensation Programs) administers a program that provides compensation to nuclear weapons workers (including civilian workers on the Manhattan Project) and their survivors. The purpose of DOL's participation was to provide information on the program to an audience that could have a large number of potential program beneficiaries. DOL gave a PowerPoint presentation on June 26, 2004. DOL also staffed a booth with information about the program during the conference, and assisted people in completing the necessary forms to claim benefits under the program. This event was a 60th year reunion symposium. DOL has not participated in any subsequent meeting with this group.
Cost:	$4275.00 (Includes employees' registration fee, booth registration fee, and travel for the three DOL participants (one of whom was a contractor and therefore not counted on the original report)

Conference:	OSHA -- Youth Rules Rally
Location:	Houston, TX
Dates:	Spring 2004
Federal Staff:	6
Annual Leave Taken:	none
Purpose of conference:	This is a combination of two events that the Houston Offices participated in during 2004. USDOL and Rice University host a free "Labor Forum" each year typically in May. At this event, Rice University allows USDOL to use Classroom space to make presentations to stakeholders concerning USDOL Topics. This Outreach Forum is held during working hours and has no additional cost to USDOL.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	The Youth Rules Rally is a partnership between USDOL, the City of Houston, EEOC and the Gulf Coast Chapter of the American Society of Safety Engineers. It is based on USDOL Secretary Chou's youth initiative. This event is held annually at the George R. Brown Convention Center (in space donated by the City of Houston). This event is typically held in the spring of each year, before school is out of session.

Cost:	For these events, the total cost to USDOL is the salary costs of the presenters / assistants; the cost of the outreach materials distributed to the participants, and the use of the USDOL OSHA and ESA booths (no charge for the booth space at either event.)
Conference:	OSHA -- Heritage of India Festival 2004
Location:	Valhalla, NY
Dates:	August 8, 2004
Federal Staff:	3
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	To inform and educate the community. The Indian Cultural Program included informational booths on government services, health services, vendors—cultural food, clothing and other articles; and cultural entertainment.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	To educate and inform the community about OSHA; to provide safety and health information, publications, and answer questions for a large, diverse population. Labor participates annually.
Cost:	$200 (Note: OSHA had a complimentary booth this year.)
Conference:	OSHA – Hispanic Heritage Day
Location:	White Plains, NY
Dates:	August 1, 2004
Federal Staff:	1
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	To educate and inform the community. The Hispanic Cultural Program included informational booths about government services, health services, vendors—cultural food, clothing and other articles; and cultural entertainment.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	OSHA targets the Hispanic Community for outreach because of an increase in Hispanic worker fatalities. By providing a booth at this event, OSHA is able to educate and inform the community about OSHA; to provide safety and health information, publications, and answer questions for a large population. Labor participates annually.
Cost:	$100 (Note: We had a complimentary booth this year.)

Conference:	OSHA -- Latino Americano Festival
Location:	Syracuse, NY
Dates:	August 21-22, 2004
Federal Staff:	4
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	This event was identified because OSHA had a booth. This is an event where the general public comes to visit, make purchases and obtain information from a variety of vendors. The Hispanic Cultural Program included informational booths on government services, health services, vendors—cultural food, clothing and other articles; and cultural entertainment.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	OSHA targets the Hispanic Community for outreach because of an increase in Hispanic worker fatalities. By providing a booth at this event, OSHA is able to inform and educate the community; to provide safety and health information, publications and to answer questions for a large, diverse population. Labor participates annually.
Cost:	$50

Conference:	OSHA -- Meadowlands Fair Flea Market
Location:	East Rutherford, NJ
Dates:	FY 2004 – The flea market goes from May - Mid- October - 6 days a week but OSHA had people there only on Wednesday and Saturdays from the last week in June to last week in September.
Federal Staff:	11
Annual Leave Taken:	No overnight travel is involved.
Purpose of conference:	This event was identified because OSHA purchased a booth. This is an event where the general public comes to visit, make purchases and obtain information from a variety of vendors.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	Because a large number of people attended this event, including a large number of people from the Hispanic Community in the Northern NJ/ NYC Area, this event is ideal for outreach to a population which faces a high rate of workplace injury. OSHA set up a table and distributed literature about OSHA and safety and health. Labor participates annually.
Cost:	$20 for table / booth space

Conference:	OSHA -- Puerto Rico Federal Safety and Health Congress / Expo
Location:	San Juan, PR
Dates:	August 2-5, 2004
Federal Staff:	13 people
Annual Leave Taken:	One individual took one day of annual leave after the conference but did not remain in Puerto Rico. Individual had a subsequent 2 week vacation planned beginning the next Monday so took annual leave on the Friday after the conference before beginning his scheduled vacation.

Purpose of conference:	This is an "OSHA Sponsored" conference in support of the Federal Councils which promote safety and health in the Federal sector.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	Of the 13 people in attendance, 4 were from the local Puerto Rico office working the conference and the OSHA booth. With the exception of an area director, they were mostly in and out a very short time to assist and then departed to conduct routine work.
Cost:	$21,755
Conference:	OSHA -- St. Croix Rotary Club Conference
Location:	St. Croix, VI
Dates:	December 18, 2003
Federal Staff:	One person
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	This event was described as a conference because we provided a speaker. It was simply a standard, single day speech at a local Rotary Club luncheon meeting.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	OSHA's Puerto Rico Area Office works on both St. Croix and St. Thomas. Since OSHA does not maintain an office on either island, PR staff travel between the islands as the work load (enforcement, consultation & outreach) dictates.
Cost:	$588
Conference:	ESA -- Youth Rules Rally
Location:	Houston, TX
Dates:	March 17, 2005
Federal Staff:	8
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	The goal of the Youth Rules Rally is to improve public awareness (teens, parents, and businesses) of youth employment laws, with a focus on increasing compliance with youth employment standards.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	The purpose of Labor participation is to improve public awareness of the Fair Labor Standards Act – Child Labor Provisions. This has become an annual event.
Cost:	$1,529

Conference:	ESA -- Youth Rules Rally
Location:	San Antonio, TX
Dates:	April 2, 2005
Federal Staff:	5
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	The goal of the Youth Rules Rally is to improve public awareness (teens, parents, and businesses) of youth employment laws, with a focus on increasing compliance with youth employment standards.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	The purpose of Labor participation is to improve public awareness of the Fair Labor Standards Act – Child Labor Provisions. This has become an annual event.
Cost:	$532

Conference:	OSHA -- Meadowlands Fair Flea Market
Location:	East Rutherford, NJ
Dates:	FY 2004 -- The flea market goes from May - Mid- October - 6 days a week but OSHA had people there only on Wednesday and Saturdays from the last week in June to last week in September.
Federal Staff:	11
Annual Leave Taken:	No overnight travel was involved.
Purpose of conference:	This event was identified because OSHA purchased a booth. This is an event where the general public comes to visit, make purchases and obtain information from a variety of vendors.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	Because a large number of people attended this event, including a large number of people from the Hispanic Community in the Northern NJ/ NYC Area, this event is ideal for outreach to a population which faces a high rate of workplace injury. OSHA set up a table and distributed literature about OSHA and safety and health. Labor participates annually.
Cost:	$20 for table/booth space

Location:	Syracuse, NY
Dates:	FY 2005
Federal Staff:	20 local staff members who worked two to a shift over the course of the fair adding up to a total of 20 worker shifts not, 20 individual employees.
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	Because OSHA paid booth fees, the New York State Fair was identified as a conference. This was an event that offered an opportunity to reach an extremely large number of employers and employees with an annual estimated attendance of close to one million people.

Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	This was the New York State Fair where OSHA did have a booth, answered questions about safety and health and gave out OSHA pamphlets. During our annual Outreach Planning session (for FY 05) it was decided that we should attend to try and get OSHA's Safety and Health message out to the public. Labor does not participate annually -- at our FY 06 Outreach Planning meeting, we did a basic cost/benefit review and as a result we did not do this event in 2006.
Cost:	Booth cost- $1,785 for a 12 day rental. No travel costs were associated with this event, save normal commuting mileage for those driving their own vehicles, as no overnight stays were required.

Conference:	Women's Bureau -- Association for Gender Equity Leadership in Education 26th Annual National Conference
Location:	Honolulu, HI
Dates:	FY 2005 July 24-27 2005
Federal Staff:	1 (Region 9, San Francisco Regional Administrator attended)
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	• Leadership and advocacy…to ensure the infusion of equity principals into educational programs and services. • Professional development…to connect equity research and practice, and broaden the knowledge base and support system for members. • Collaboration, networking and outreach…to build broader constituencies and influence other organizations and associations. •
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	• Conducted a workshop at the conference on "Expanding Opportunities through Women's Bureau 21st Century Initiatives". • In conjunction with the conference, the Women's Bureau's held a Regional Women's Leadership Forum in partnership with the local One Stop organization. This was part of our 2 year Women's Bureau Program Initiative held in every state that impacted more than 1480 participants. This event drew leaders from the area to learn about current Women's Bureau programs and how to tap into our projects and resources. • Met with participants from Region 10 as part of new regional administrator assignment in Seattle area. The Women's Bureau does not participate annually.
Cost:	$1,340

Conference:	Women's Bureau -- Displaced Homemakers Conference
Location:	Milwaukee, WI
Dates:	FY 2005 March 8-9, 2005
Federal Staff:	2 (Region 5, Chicago Regional Administrator and the Program Specialist attended)

Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	Training conference for WI Tech colleges and Displaced Homemakers program employees.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	Women's Bureau Regional Administrator was invited as a speaker to share about the WB programs. Women's Bureau does not participate annually.
Cost:	$805

Conference:	ETA -- Strategies for Economic Development: Keys to Success in the 21st Century
Location:	Hanoi, Vietnam
Dates:	September 18-20, 2006
Federal Staff:	Five (4 from ETA; 1 from ILAB)
Annual Leave Taken:	One participant took four days of leave; one participant took 2 days of leave.
Purpose of conference:	This conference was held in conjunction with Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC). Vietnam hosted the 2006 APEC under the theme of "Towards a Dynamic Community for Sustainable Development and Prosperity." Vietnam has been a full member of APEC since 1998. There are four sub-themes: • Enhanced Trade and Investment with the Busan Roadmap and Doha Development • Strengthen Economic and Technical Cooperation for Gap Bridging and Sustainable Development • Improve Secure and Favorable Business Environment • Promote Community Linkages
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	Frequency: One time. Purpose: Developing strong political engagement at key APEC events and advancing APEC as the premier regional forum for the United States. Participation at this conference laid the groundwork for strong deliverables on US government priorities at the APEC leaders meeting in November in Hanoi, which the President will attend. • The Department of State invited the Department of Labor to design a conference presentation to support the sub-theme of "Strengthen Economic and Technical Cooperation for Gap Bridging and Sustainable Development." • Using federal staff and 8 non-federal experts, DOL conducted workshops on important elements of workforce development such as the provision of income support to unemployed workers, the role of entrepreneurialism in economic growth strategies; the role of workforce and labor market information in helping workers understand high growth employment and career opportunities and their corresponding skill needs, and also how it is important to develop the youth workforce pipeline. • This initiative focused on improving human capacity and skills in the APEC region. The intent was to share information with the APEC economies – particularly developing and middle income economies – by conveying fundamental techniques and principles of public-private partnerships and explaining the operation of demand-driven services designed to address labor market inefficiencies. Conference Information/Background Rationale: • The State Department invited the Employment & Training Administration to participate in an international dialogue with fellow Asian Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) member economies, and to jointly sponsor this conference with the government of Vietnam. The Department/ETA was assisted by the U.S. Embassy staff, for all of their help in preparing for and hosting the conference. • The theme of the conference, "Strategies for Workforce Development: Keys to Success was designed to assist developing economies because globalization is rapidly transforming economic structures around the world, creating millions of new jobs in industries that did not even exist a decade ago. • The United States is a member economy from APEC and is in the process of transforming its economy and its public workforce system. • Vietnam is currently experiencing high economic growth, leading to an increased demand for more skilled workers. Accession to the World Trade Organization will only hasten Vietnam's economic integration into the world economy. • To remain competitive in the global economy, it is critical that all member economies develop innovative strategies for educating and training a prepared workforce for the high growth, high skilled jobs of the 21st century economy. • The United States has strived to build a public workforce system that is "demand-driven" – preparing and training the highly skilled workers that businesses need to be competitive and to thrive in today's economy. Over the past five years, we have focused our investments on promoting the development of collaborative partnerships between the public workforce, economic development and education systems to better understand how we can educate and train a workforce to meet the talent demands of businesses. • The conference's agenda was designed to provide Vietnam and the other economies with information on several key aspects of workforce development that affect us all: the 21st century global economy; the fundamentals of building a public workforce system; strategies to create innovative public-private partnerships that address workforce challenges, and understand the role of public and private training providers in educating workers to meet the skills needs of employers. • ETA conducted workshops on important elements of workforce development such as the provision of income support to unemployed workers, the role of entrepreneurialism in economic growth strategies; the role of workforce and labor market information in helping workers understand high growth employment and career opportunities and their corresponding skill needs, and also how it is important to develop the youth workforce pipeline. • Two "case studies" were presented: Vietnam's workforce opportunities in today's global economy, and an in-depth look at the Microsoft Topic 64 initiative, which is an example of a public-private partnership for workforce development. • Fourteen of the 21 APEC economies were represented and experts in workforce development lead the plenary sessions and workshops presenting concrete examples and timely information from Australia, Canada, Peru, Thailand, the United States, and Vietnam.

Conference:	OSHA -- Hong Kong's OSHA conference
Location:	Hong Kong, China
Dates:	February 26-28, 2006
Federal Staff:	One person
Annual Leave Taken:	The employee did not use any leave in connection with the conference.
Purpose of conference:	The Ministry of Labor in Hong Kong requested OSHA's participation at their Safety and Health conference to discuss the following: • OSH standards and enforcement in the construction industry, particularly SMEs and small-scale building repair/renovation; • OSH standards and enforcement in theme park operations; • OSHA's application of safety management approaches in sizeable construction projects and manufacturing establishments.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	An OSHA employee was asked to visit Hong Kong and deliver 3 speeches as part of the Secretary's Information Exchange Initiative. The speeches were: • Overview of OSHA Construction; • Partnerships, Alliances, APP./APP.-C and the OSHA Challenge; • Theme Park Construction Safety & Operation Safety. The first two speeches, each an hour and a half in length were delivered to audiences of over 500 people and the last speech was delivered during a 4 hour lecture meeting with the top executives from Hong Kong's Ministry of Labor and Hong Kong OSHA, approximately 26 people were in attendance.
Cost:	$4,416 (Invited by the government of Hong Kong, an OSHA employee attended Hong Kong's OSHA conference in February 2006. The government of Hong Kong paid for part of the trip and the State Department approved it.)

Conference:	OSHA -- Governor's Conference, US Virgin Islands OSHA
Location:	St. Thomas, VI
Dates:	February 7-9, 2006
Federal Staff:	OSHA actually shows 7 attendees, all of whom were representatives from Region II which has responsibility for the USVI.
Annual Leave Taken:	None
Purpose of conference:	The Governor of the USVI asked OSHA to assist/run this conference in his attempt to bring occupational safety and health issues to the fore in his territory and to help improve their occupational safety program.

Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	OSHA staff made a number of presentations at the conference as well as providing hands-on safety and health training for the USVI safety and health staff. Several attendees also met separately with representatives of the Governor's staff to review OSHA's concerns about the management of their program.
Cost:	$13,428

Conference:	MSHA -- AIOH Conference 2005, Australian Institute of Occupational Hygienists
Location:	Terrigal, NSW, Australia
Dates:	December 3-7, 2005 plus NSW Standing Dust Committee Meeting on December 8
Federal Staff:	One person -- invited Keynote Speaker Melinda Pon (Note: one of several U.S. speakers. Dr. John Howard, NIOSH, and John Henshaw, formerly OSHA, now private citizen, were also keynote speakers along with another 3 or 4 individuals.)
Annual Leave Taken:	5 days (December 9, 12, 13, 14, and 15)
Purpose of conference:	The Australian Institute of Occupational Hygienists (AIOH) is a not-for-profit professional organization similar to the American Industrial Hygiene Association and the American Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists in the United States of America. The objective of AIOH is to help ensure that workplace health hazards are eliminated or controlled by promoting the profession of occupational hygiene in industry, government and the general community, improving the practice of occupational hygiene and the knowledge, competence and standing of its practitioners and providing a forum for the exchange of occupational hygiene information and ideas.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	AIOH invited attendee to "provide the Australian occupational hygienists with an overview as to how MSHA is addressing the issue of worker exposure to respirable dust, respirable quartz, noise and diesel particulate within the U.S. mining industry." The title of the presentation was "Miners' Health Update from the US Perspective." Copy is available if needed. Discussions were held with Australian industry, labor and regulatory occupational hygienists and practitioners, particularly in the coal mining states of Queensland and New South Wales, on the respirable dust and quartz monitoring practices, regulatory compliance and compensation requirements, and prevention and control procedures to limit coal miners' exposure to respirable coal dust and quartz. Additionally, discussions were held on the non-existence of black lung cases in Australia and the prevalence of silicosis, as compared to the US experience. Australian occupational health and safety professionals on the issues related to miner substance abuse, Australian codes of practice and fitness for work programs as well as the labor's perspective on the adequacy of the existing requirements and precautionary words of advice for the US moving forward on regulating alcohol and illegal and illicit substances in the workplace. Information was obtained from Australian regulatory, industry and labor health and safety professionals on the Australian and state statutory requirements and guidelines on the use of remote-control mining equipment, including proximity detection, and risk protocols for the safe operation of surface and underground mobile equipment in the coal mining environment.

Cost:	Attendee traveled on official U.S. Government business. This matter has been discussed with SOL, and was approved by senior officials at ILAB, SOL (ethics), OASAM and MSHA. The paperwork, including the invitation and all necessary approvals is available if needed. AIOH covered all air, hotel and land costs. AIOH also covered the costs for registration, accommodation, meals and conference social functions.

Conference:	MSHA -- Atlantic Alliance Meeting, Health and safety Authority, Ireland and health and Safety Exec of Northern Ireland
Location:	Dundalk, Ireland
Dates:	June 20-21, 2006
Federal Staff:	2 people
Annual Leave Taken:	2 days (June 22 and 23)
Purpose of conference:	The Atlantic Alliance is a structured international organization established to promote a network to advance the safety, health, and welfare of persons working in the quarry industry. The Atlantic Alliance identifies and shares best practices, information, experiences, and innovation in the areas of safety and health for the quarry industry. Members include governmental agencies with responsibility for safety and health in this sector and nongovernmental organizations from Germany, Ireland, England and the United States of America. The Atlantic Alliance formed the model for the ongoing successful alliance between MSHA and the National Stone, Sand and Gravel Association. The annual Atlantic Alliance conference held in rotating countries is designed to motivate an exchange of information on a continuous basis and to build a platform for regularly matching work safety needs and solutions between the respective organizations of the participants. The conference deals with critical safety and health issues in the quarry industry and promotes measures and initiatives to secure a reduction in accidents and illnesses. Issues addressed at the conference included: asbestos /nonasbestos, silica, vibration and noise directives, and drugs and alcohol.
Purpose of DOL participation and if annual:	As a leading safety and health organization, MSHA is committed to developing the best approaches to health and safety. By actively participating at this conference, MSHA solidifies its position as a leader in the industry and benefits from the shared ideas that have proven effective elsewhere. For example, MSHA learned that the quarrying industry in the UK adopted a "Hard Target" initiative several years ago and has dramatically reduced their injuries as a result. Ideas were shared on how the other member countries could do the same. A website is currently being developed to share "best practices" between the member countries. At the conference MSHA learned that equipment manufacturers were promoting safety features on equipment used in Europe that was not being offered for installation on similar equipment in the United States. For example, a major manufacturer of heavy equipment was promoting windshields that extended to the floorboard on some models of heavy equipment used in Europe. The extended windshield eliminated a blind spot for the operator, and coincidentally helped resolve another issue, identifying whether the equipment operator was wearing a seatbelt. MSHA put pressure on the manufacturer to include the extended windshield on models sold in the United States. The manufacturer is now making the extended windshield available in the United States. Finally, following on this experience with MSHA that developed from the Atlantic Alliance, the equipment manufacturer's association concluded that a safety alliance with MSHA would be beneficial, and the safety alliance is in the process of being formed. MSHA would hope to use this alliance to promote the use of cameras to eliminate all hazardous blind spots on heavy equipment.

Federal Agencies and Conference Spending

September 14, 2006

Dr. Coburn and Members of the Subcommittee:

On behalf of the Director of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM), I want to thank you and the members of the Subcommittee on Financial Management, Government Information, and International Security for the opportunity to testify today on the subject of "Federal Agencies and Conference Spending." Please know that Director Springer, as a former private sector chief financial officer and the former controller at the Office of Management and Budget, is totally committed to ensuring that OPM spending of tax dollars is justified and will further both our strategic mission for the agency and our goals for the Federal workforce we serve.

OPM supports the prudent participation in conferences that enable employees to do a better job in supporting the agency's mission "to ensure that the Federal Government has an effective civilian workforce." These could include training conferences organized by OPM as well as those sponsored by other federal agencies and professional associations. These could also include continuing professional education programs to maintain important and relevant staff certifications.

As a central agency, OPM staff receives numerous requests to present or attend conferences. However, Director Springer requires her senior staff to carefully scrutinize all conference participation. The conferences must make business sense for OPM programs and the agencies we support.

Previous to 2004, OPM held a number of multi-day annual conferences covering topics such as employee and labor relations, workforce issues, and Federal Government benefits administration. We ended that practice in FY 2004 and moved to one consolidated human capital conference, the "Federal Workforce Conference", which we now host every eighteen months. We found this approach to be a far more cost effective means of disseminating valuable strategic human capital information and direction with agency partners. There are a number of up-front costs for OPM associated with running the Federal Workforce Conference which are offset by participant registration fees. In addition to the training benefits received by the participants, this approach realizes budget savings for both OPM and its agency customers by reducing planning activities and travel requirements.

In the current fiscal environment, it is incumbent on all Federal agencies to take a hard look at spending to identify areas for greater efficiencies and reduced costs, while still producing valuable results. Conference sponsorship and attendance is no exception. During July of this year, we provided to the Committee total conference spending for FY's 2001 through 2007. For FY's 2001 to 2003, the amounts were $81,000, $68,000 and $145,000, respectively, based on the best information available. The actual conference spending for FY 2004 was $358,000 and in FY 2005 it was $331,000. We continue to estimate that the FY 2006 amount will be approximately $327,000 or less than four tenths of one percent of personnel compensation. While we are estimating FY 2007 expenditures at $290,000, conference activities will be evaluated after passage of OPM's appropriations bill and preparation of operating plans.

Dr. Coburn, OPM is very committed to maintaining proper stewardship of Federal funds. As the Chief Financial Officer, I can assure you that we will continue to avoid unnecessary conference expenditures, and where appropriate, to vigorously pursue more cost-effective methods of participating.

Thank you for this opportunity to speak before the Subcommittee, and I would be pleased to respond to any questions that you may have.

Dear Dr. Coburn:

Thank you for the opportunity to provide this letter for your hearing record which provides the views of the Office of Personnel Management (OPM) with respect to our responsiveness to your subcommittee on the issue of Federal agency conference spending. I appreciated the opportunity to testify before your subcommittee on September 14 on behalf of our Director, Linda M. Springer.

We wish to point out that Director Springer took prompt action upon receipt of your initial letter to OPM on February 3, 2006. The Director responded to you on February 9, 2006 indicating we were working as quickly as possible to gather the requested information pertaining to FY2001-2007 conference spending. On March 9, 2006, the Director followed up with a second letter which enclosed 13 pages of detailed information, including division breakouts for FY2005 and FY2006 to date. On July 10, 2006, the Director followed up further with a third letter, in response to your June 9, 2006 request for updated information as of mid-June.

We regret that the Director's third letter was provided to the subcommittee on Monday, July 10, 2006 when you had requested that it be provided by Saturday, July 8, 2006. I was not aware until seeing your prepared opening statement and learning of subsequent communications between OPM staff and staff for your subcommittee, that this delay on OPM's part during the weekend of July 8th was the sole reason OPM was invited to testify. If that had been made clear in the letter of invitation dated August 28, 2006, or in the background information sent by e-mail to OPM that same day by your staff, I would have been very pleased to have addressed that concern in my prepared testimony and oral remarks to the subcommittee.

As I indicated when I testified, we believe OPM has a good story to tell with respect to our conference spending funding trends and consolidation efforts, and we appreciate that you have acknowledged that fact. We look forward to continued cooperation with your subcommittee and assure you we will continue to be fiscally responsible as we accomplish our mission of ensuring that the Federal Government has an effective civilian workforce. Thank you for including this letter in your hearing record.

Sincerely,

Clarence C. Crawford
Chief Financial Officer

Question 1 – Please provide more details about the following conferences including the dates. These were culled from both 2005 and 2006 data (from the July 10 report).

SHRP -- NIH National Institute for Environmental Health Science Environmental Solutions to Childhood Obesity Conference Jun 1-2, 2005

a. Did OPM staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? If so, what were the dates? No.

b. Please explain the purpose of OPM participation in the conference. OPM's WorkLife Policy Group supports agency WorkLife staff with policy and guidance in many areas related to balancing work and family. In addition, most federal employee family members are insured through the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program. OPM's WorkLife staff has overlapping concerns regarding Federal employee's being overweight and obesity, family balance and keeping insurance costs down. Attendance at this conference provided the staff with the opportunity to get first hand information regarding solutions and interventions that could be useful in shaping WorkLife Policy for the Federal government.

c. Was OPM a sponsor? Primary sponsor? OPM was not a sponsor.

d. How much did it cost to participate? There was no cost associated with attending the conference.

e. How many OPM personnel attended? Two OPM employees attended the conference, broken down as follows: (1) one OPM employee attended the full conference, and (2) one attended select sessions, about half a day total attendance.

MSD -- Federal Dispute Resolution Conference, New York. Sent 4 people at a cost of $10,033 of which $5,953 was for travel. Aug 7-11, 2005

a. Where were the 4 OPM personnel traveling from? Washington, D.C.

b. Did OPM staff take annual leave right before or after, if so, what were the dates? No.

c. Please explain the purpose of OPM participation in the conference.
Four employees responsible for processing EEO complaints attended the conference in order to update their knowledge of EEO case requirements and for professional development.

d. Is this something OPM participates in annually? Not necessarily; continuing technical education may be obtained through various sources.

e. Was OPM a sponsor? Primary sponsor? No.

HRLOB -- African-American Federal Executives annual conference in Williamsburg, VA Apr 10-13, 2006

a. Is this an OPM sponsored event? No.

b. Are there any other sponsors? The event was hosted by the African American Federal Executive Association.

c. How many people across the government attend? Estimate is 150-200.

d. What is the purpose of the conference? Promote the professional development/ advancement of African Americans into/within the senior levels of the U.S. Government.

e. What is the cost of the conference each year? (provide 2005 and 2006 numbers) 2005 - $325 per person; 2006 - $475 per person

f. Do you rent out a hotel, or just the conference space in the hotel ballroom? Please provide more details on the space that was rented? OPM did not host the conference.

g. How much did it cost? OPM did not host the conference.

h. How many OPM personnel attended? One.

HRLOB -- 2005 National Organization for Mexican American Rights Conference in Albuquerque, NM Aug 29-30, 2005

a. Please explain the purpose of OPM participation in the conference. Attendance and presentation by the Program Director supports the OPM Federal Information and Diversity Initiatives (USAJOBS).

b. Is this something OPM participates in annually? No.

c. Was OPM a sponsor? Primary sponsor? No.

d. How much did it cost? $438.

e. How many OPM personnel attended? One.

SHRP -- 2006 American College of Sports Medicine Conference in Denver, CO, $1,484 for one person May 31 – Jun 3, 2006

a. Please explain the purpose of OPM participation in the conference.
The American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM) is the worldwide leader in physical activity and related research and leadership development. This meeting presented critical new findings about the relationship of physical activity and nutrition to health, well-being and disease prevention. Developing and implementing worksite health promotion policies and programs based in current science is the foundation of excellent wellness programs. OPM's Work/Life Group has the lead responsibility for developing and maintaining health and wellness policies and programs that promote sound wellness practices at Government worksites. This is the foundation of OPM's HealthierFeds program. This training offers the opportunity for OPM staff to engage nationally-recognized experts on a variety of health and wellness matters.

b. Is this something OPM participates in annually? No.

c. Did OPM staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? If so, provide dates. No.

d. Was OPM a sponsor? Primary sponsor? No.

The updated spreadsheet is attached.

Please include:

The total amount spent on FY 06 conferences – including general support, programming, staff salaries, travel, and other associated costs – and whether it changed from $327,000.

The total amount spent on FY 06 conferences is $353,338. This is $26,338 higher than originally estimated. The difference is attributed to the HCLMSA division reporting its additional presenters at OPM's 2006 consolidated workforce conference in Baltimore.

A full listing of each conference that received support during FY06 including the location of the conference, the number of employees who attended and the primary sponsor of the conference.

This information is included on the attached spreadsheet.

Also include the total number of OPM employees who attended conferences during Fiscal Year 2006 and the total number of conferences in which OPM participated?

The total number of employees who attended conferences during Fiscal Year 2006 is 267. The total number of conferences in which OPM participated is 88.

Statement by

Eugene Schied

Deputy Chief Financial Officer

Department of Homeland Security

Before the Senate Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management, Government Information, and International Security

Hearing on

The Department of Homeland Security's

Conference Spending

September 14, 2006

Thank you Chairman Coburn and the other distinguished members of this Subcommittee for allowing me this opportunity to testify before you regarding the Department of Homeland Security's (DHS) policies and oversight on spending on travel and conferences. My testimony will focus on the necessity and extent of DHS travel and conference spending, and the responsibility and work of the DHS Chief Financial Officer's Office to develop guidance and policy, and to oversee this spending.

Importance to Mission

Travel and conference attendance are important and necessary to DHS' fulfillment of its mission. Secret Service agents travel regularly to fulfill their protective responsibilities and for their investigations. FEMA employees travel and spend extensive time away from home when responding to disasters. ICE incurs travel expenses in the removal of aliens from the United States. The Border Patrol deploys agents away from their home stations as part of border operations. Air Marshals' travel daily to protect our aviation transportation system. Law enforcement and Coast Guard personnel have regular training requirements to maintain their certifications and qualifications. I am concerned that efforts to take across-the-board reductions to DHS' travel budget could curtail our ability to carry out important parts of the DHS mission, or require DHS to redirect or reprogram money from other spending categories in order to conduct mission-essential travel.

Travel expenses related specifically to conferences are also a necessary and important cost of business at DHS. Conferences are an important part of DHS outreach efforts with our other federal, state, local, international, and private sector partners. Often, we must travel out of Washington to meet with our partners in homeland security. DHS' participation in conferences is a cost effective way for DHS to communicate with our stakeholders, and to hear what they have to say. Conferences are also an important tool of DHS' employees in certain positions, such as contract specialists and accountants, to maintain required professional certifications.

When reviewing the location of DHS conference participation, keep in mind that only a fraction of DHS' employees are located in Washington. Homeland Security employees are located in all 50 states and 80 countries around the world, and many attend conferences in their local working areas.

While travel and conferences are important to our work, we also know that appropriate discretion be used in deciding when to attend. In FY 2006, the data reported to the CFO's office suggests that DHS will spend approximately $15 million in travel related to conferences.

Responsibility and Policy

DHS is still a relatively new organization. Policies governing employee travel are the responsibility of the CFO. In his testimony yesterday before the House Government Reform Subcommittee on Government Management, Finance, and Accountability, DHS CFO David Norquist outlined the need for DHS to make financial management improvements across a continuum of areas that included people, policies, processes, systems and assurance. Three of these 5 areas touch on how we will improve our oversight of travel spending.

The first is policy. DHS lacks a comprehensive set of Financial Management Regulations used to manage DHS-wide financial management operations. As a result, DHS agencies often revert to their legacy policies. We need to develop one DHS way of conducting financial management, from budgeting policy, to financial reporting, and this is also true of travel policies. It is a top priority of our CFO that DHS develop and adopt a wide-ranging set of financial management policies over the next two years.

One set of regulations gives us a common standard and understanding from which we will operate. It simplifies our control environment. It provides us the standards of accountability. While the CFO's office issues various instructions and guidance throughout the year, we need to develop a deeper and broader set of standard policies. In our effort to do so, we will not seek to reinvent the wheel. Many good policies already exist in the Federal Government. Our progress will be measured as we move down the list of policies we need to develop, so that in FY 2008 we will have a full spectrum of financial policies for DHS.

Specifically regarding travel and conferences, DHS has management directives that specifically address travel for official government business and attendance at meetings and conferences. The current management directive on conferences (MD 3160) encourages DHS employee participation in conferences as a means to exchange and communicate ideas and knowledge; however, the directive recognizes that attendance be prudent, relevant to the employees job performance, and beneficial to DHS' mission. Employee attendance at conferences is generally delegated to the head of their office, with international travel being subject to review and approval by the Office of International Affairs and the Security Office, as appropriate.

Moving forward, DHS OCFO is drafting more comprehensive policy and guidance on travel and conference attendance. The intent is to provide more detailed and useful information and instruction on the subject. This new travel policy and guidebook will be based on the governing laws and regulations, and is intended to supplement the Federal Travel Regulations, in a useful format, and will replace several existing DHS directives.

Monitoring Travel and Conference Spending

A second area where we need to improve our ability to oversee travel spending is information systems. DHS operates in a decentralized financial management environment. Producing the type of information requested by this Subcommittee is a very manual-intensive process, which explains much of the delay in responding to information requests. Manually-intensive processes are also much more prone to error and inconsistency in reporting, which is why to date the Department has only been able to provided partial information for FY 2006. While some requested data, such as travel expenses, are relatively easier to obtain because of the federal accounting classification and the use of federal travel charge cards, information on the salary costs related to conference participation is generally not readily extractable in an automated way from our financial systems.

An important part of being responsible for policies is monitoring policy compliance; without monitoring policies will lack effectiveness. The CFO's office has undertaken efforts to provide DHS with more timely, useful corporate-level information on DHS funding and financial management performance, which I anticipate will also be useful in monitoring travel costs. While DHS reports timely financial information to Treasury on a monthly basis, the type and detail of information reported to Treasury is different than that which I need to oversee the Department's finances and to monitor areas such as travel and conference spending.

Assurance and Internal Controls

This final area in which we need to improve our oversight is assurance. DHS must have in place a means by which we can test whether our policies and internal controls are well designed and operating effectively, over areas such as travel. This means that management must move away from reliance on what outside auditors and reviewers tell us is wrong with DHS, and for management to be in a position to find what is wrong and fix it before it gets to the auditors. Management can not assume that controls are working well just because the auditors don't tell us to the contrary. Management must create an infrastructure that is self-monitoring and can provide internal assurance that a sound, reliable controls environment exists within DHS. To this end, the CFO will create the CFO's assurance team that will ensure that we test our processes to validate the effectiveness of our financial management policies. This assurance team will also be the CFO's first response team for financial problems, which will invariably surface. As the problems arise, the team will make sure that management takes the appropriate steps, such as developing corrective actions plans, to fix the problems.

Conclusion

Mr. Chairman, DHS is very committed to the responsible stewardship of the taxpayer's dollars entrusted to us by Congress. Dollars are limited, our DHS mission is large, and we must make sure that we are putting our dollars to their best use. Travel and conference attendance, as with many of the things we do, has its vulnerabilities to waste and abuse. It is the responsibility of the CFO's office to promulgate travel policy, and thus to also monitor spending in this area in a way that ensures our travel policy is effective. At this time our policies, and our ability to monitor them are admittedly limited, but we have efforts underway to improve both the policy and guidance, and our monitoring.

From all of the mission-essential travel that DHS employees undertake in a given year, it can be easy to throw darts at particular instances of travel that appear questionable. But the vast majority of travel is a non-discretionary means to achieving our mission, from the training-related travel of our law enforcement, to the travel necessary to protect the border. Likewise, conference attendance is an important tool by which we communicate with the public and our partners in protecting the homeland. Thank you for the opportunity to share information on our travel and conference policy with the Subcommittee, and I stand ready to address any questions you may have on this topic.

2. Please submit a final FY2006 conference activity report by October 5, if there are updates to be made to your September 7th report. Please be sure to include:

- The total amount spent by the department and its agencies and offices on FY2006 conferences; including general support, programming, staff salaries, travel and other associated costs.
- A full listing of each conference that received support for the Department and its agencies and offices during FY2006; including the location of the conference, the number of Department employees who attendee and the primary sponsor of the conference. Noting the:
  - Total number of attendees for the fiscal year, and
  - Total number of conferences in which the Department participated in.

Response: The report is attached

3. Has the Department of Homeland Security and its agencies purchased equipment to allow teleconferencing?

Response: DHS leverages both audio and video teleconferencing technology. Currently these technologies are procured and operated by the Component and/or Mission that has a requirement to leverage the technology. In regards to video teleconferencing, DHS has an active video services project underway to develop and implement an enterprise solution as part of its Infrastructure Transformation Program initiative. The solution will replace or integrate legacy systems into an enterprise capability. The project is currently in the requirements gathering phase, with a minimal upfront investment to expand existing capability within a selected Component's capability to satisfy Departmental needs. Initial equipment/software investment in the video services enterprise effort includes Tandberg gatekeepers, border controllers, server licenses, network integration packages and media ports. The next step in this effort is to complete the requirements gathering activity and move into the design phase for an enterprise solution.

• What impact, if any, has the purchase of this technology had on the number of employees traveling to meetings and the amount spent on conferences?

Response: In the absence of teleconferencing capabilities, the Department would require additional funding for travel to meetings and conferences. Teleconferencing capabilities also improve staff productivity because they are not wasting time commuting to and from meetings.

4. When managers approve conference attendance requests is there a policy in place which requires scrutiny of number of attendees? In other words, does attendance by more than one employee receive additional scrutiny and require manager approval?

Response: Currently DHS has one management directive addressing attendance at meetings and conferences. The directive, No. 3160, Attendance at Meetings and Conferences, addresses when it is appropriate to send an employee to a meeting or conference. Policy stated in the directive says that "…there is also a need to ensure that attendance at meetings and conferences is held to a prudent level…") In addition, the Department of Homeland Security complies with FTR Section 301-74 and Appendix E of FTR Chapter 301 regarding conference attendance and conference planning. The FTR clearly states that:

§301-74.1 What policies must we follow in planning a conference?
When planning a conference, you must:
(a) Minimize all conference costs, including administrative costs, conference attendees' travel costs, and conference attendees' time costs;

(b) Maximize the use of Government-owned or Government provided conference facilities as much as possible;
(c) Identify opportunities to reduce costs in selecting a particular conference location and facility (e.g., through the availability of lower rates during the off-season at a site with seasonal rates); and

DHS sponsors some conferences as part of the outreach activities with state and local agencies and scientific bodies that promote certain aspects of our mission. For these conferences it is appropriate to have a strong Departmental presence. Other conferences sponsored by the Department are designed to promote efficient, effective work processes and policies that address the needs of the multiple components of DHS. It is appropriate for strong departmental presence at those conferences as well.

A manager generally has no access to travel requests outside his/her span of control. So, if a manager in the CFO's office approved staff to attend an AGA conference he would have no knowledge of who was approved from the office of the IG. Also, there is a timing issue. Most, but not all, conferences are scheduled way in advance. People who want to attend may be signing up over a 6-8 month period. So, unless you check at the last minute for all attendees from an agency, you won't get a true picture. Additionally, since travel and training are done at the component level, and there is no single travel/training system across DHS, there is no reasonable way to find out how many DHS employees attended a particular conference.

Statement of Jeffery K. Nulf
Deputy Assistant Secretary for Administration
U. S. Department of Commerce
Before the
Subcommittee on Financial Management, Government Information, and International Security
Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs
United States Senate
September 14, 2006 – 2:30 p.m.

Statement for the Record

Good afternoon Chairman Coburn, Senator Carper, and Members of the Committee. Thank you for the opportunity to testify before you on behalf of the Department of Commerce on the topic of conference spending in federal agencies.

Your requests for information and the invitation to speak to you today have focused attention on an area that, for the Department of Commerce, not only is an important element in mission support and employee development, but also presents an opportunity for savings at a time when we are trying to do more with fewer resources.

In furtherance of sound management and as a result of current and coming budgetary constraints, the Secretary and the Deputy Secretary have instructed the Department's Presidential Appointees and Heads of Operating Units to direct resources to mission-critical activities, and to do so by taking a hard look at what is expended on administrative functions. All elements of the Department have been charged with meeting our program responsibilities efficiently and effectively while reducing the amounts spent on non-essential activities. Our bureaus report to the Deputy Secretary on a quarterly basis regarding their performance in this and other areas.

The Department of Commerce is a diverse organization, largely scientific, with numerous compelling responsibilities. It is essential for the employees working towards accomplishing the Department's missions to have a current understanding of developments in their program areas. Commerce employees

- predict the weather,
- manage the nation's fisheries,
- allocate radio spectrum,
- and create better ways to measure everything from the structure of atoms to the flammability of buildings.

Our employees

- help American business learn how to expand markets for their products
- count people for the census
- and support the Nation through the provision of economic information such as quarterly reports on international trade activity, residential construction and sales, and the gross domestic product.

Participation at critical conferences furthers these mission-related activities by providing continuing education for our scientists, engineers, economists, and other professionals. Conference attendance also furnishes venues where the exchange of ideas in an intellectually stimulating environment can lead to new solutions to problems faced by our country and the world. We believe that investment in conference attendance, balanced with sound stewardship of taxpayers' dollars, is necessary for the Department to meet its responsibilities to U.S. citizens and the world community.

The Department is a large organization with extremely varied responsibilities. We have in place no single policy that governs conferences and related activities, nor do we have a line item in our budget for conferences, or a conference spending ceiling to restrict expenditures in this area. We have confidence that our managers are making prudent decisions regarding which conferences to attend and who should attend them. We do recognize our affirmative obligation to restrain resources expended on travel in general and conference attendance in particular. Concurrently, we recognize that in austere fiscal times, conference spending is among the top candidates for reduction, and offers an opportunity for savings that can then be applied to mission-essential work.

Although Commerce Department conference spending increased rapidly between fiscal years 2000 and 2003 (as you know from the material we provided you in January), our conference expenditures decreased in FY 2004 and fell again in FY 2005, the most recent year for which we have complete data. In examining the available FY 2006 data we identified several indicators that we consider positive in terms of the efficient use of taxpayers' dollars for conferences. Among these are the following:

- The single most frequently used geographic area for conferences attended by Commerce employees is local—the Baltimore-Washington metropolitan area.
- There is a relatively small number of Commerce attendees—5 or fewer—at 87 percent of the conferences in which Commerce employees are involved.

- Conferences sponsored or co-sponsored by the Department typically are held in cities where the sponsoring organization is located, thereby minimizing travel expenditures and overall cost.
    - As an example, of 69 conferences sponsored by NIST, only three were held outside the Washington, DC, or Boulder, Colorado, areas, where all NIST employees live and work.
    - The National Weather Service's Northeast Storms Conference was held in Burlington, Vermont,
    - and its Des Moines Severe Storms Conference was held in Des Moines, Iowa.

This is not to suggest that we don't participate in conferences held in locations perceived to be more exotic. Indeed, the North Pacific Marine Sciences workshop, sponsored by NOAA, was held in Hawaii, but this was the most economical place for this event to occur. Similarly, NOAA's co-sponsored Gulf of Mexico Alliance meetings were in New Orleans and Naples, Florida, both on the Gulf coast.

The FY 2006 conference spending data that we have collected indicates a continuing downward trend in conference spending. To date, the Commerce Department has spent $7.8 million on conference-related activities in FY 2006. That is about 62 percent of our FY 2003 high. Projections for FY 2007 suggest that conference-related spending will drop further, to around $7.5 million. These figures are good news, but we remain interested in identifying where we might continue our reduction efforts.

Mr. Chairman, we appreciate your concern that current technology be used fully to bring people together for electronic conferencing. The Department will continue to seek creative means to leverage its ability to video- and teleconference in order to reduce, as much as possible, the need for in-person attendance at training and professional meetings. Consistent with that objective, we have created within the Department an online Learning Management System that now provides our employees desktop access to some 1600 training courses. This, of course, won't take the place of professional conferences, but it certainly is an economical approach to professional development.

We also are aware that some agencies have developed policy statements that specifically address conference attendance and spending. We look forward to exploring this approach along with other actions that may assist us in assuring that conference spending is fully justified and appropriately controlled within the Department of Commerce.

Mr. Chairman, and members of the Subcommittee, I would like to thank you again for this opportunity to share with you information about the Commerce Department's conference activities and spending, and I look forward to answering any questions you may have on this topic.

QUESTION SUBMITTED BY SENATOR DR. TOM COBURN

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE CONFERENCES

QUESTION: Please provide more details about the following conferences including the dates. These were taken from your 2/6/06 and 9/13/06 reports. You have touched on some of these conferences previously. Please also include supplemental information.

How much did it cost? Did Commerce staff take leave immediately before or after the conference? Please explain the purpose of Commerce participation in the conference. Is this something Commerce participates in annually? What is the purpose of the conference? What were the dates of the conference?

1 person to the U.S. Entrepreneurial Forum in Lima, Peru

This conference was attended by local International Trade Administration (ITA) staff with no resulting costs to Commerce. No annual leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. ITA organized this conference and others in 17 cities around the world. The goal for these conferences to support encouragement of free enterprise and private participation around the world and reflect the vital role of free enterprise in achieving rising levels of production and standards of living essential to economic progress and development. Accordingly, it is declared to be the policy of the United States to encourage the efforts of other countries to increase the flow of international trade, to foster private initiative and competition, to discourage monopolistic practices, to improve the technical efficiency of their industry, agriculture, and commerce, and to strengthen free labor unions; and to encourage the contribution of United States enterprise toward economic strength of less developed friendly countries, through private trade and investment abroad, private participation in programs carried out under this chapter (including the use of private trade channels to the maximum extent practicable in carrying out such programs), and exchange of ideas and technical information on the matters covered by this subsection. Although ITA has organized many conferences like this many times over the last few fiscal years, this has been the only one in Lima, Peru. This conference took place on March 23 through March 27, 2004.

1 person to the Sea Turtle Awareness Day in Galveston, TX

The cost was $304 for the salary of a contractor. No travel cost was involved since it was a local event. No annual leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. The purpose of this meeting was to educate local officials and the public on sea turtle nesting activities to prevent violation of endangered species regulatory restrictions. Contact with the beach-going public and interaction with local and state sponsored projects such as beach re-nourishment, shoreline development and protection are a local issue for County, City and State officials. Such projects can be accommodated given correct information to support monitoring and reporting (including the beach-going public) and adjustment by local officials to seasonal nesting. The purpose for Commerce's participation was to educate Galveston Municipal and County officials, Texas General Land Office officials, U.S. Army COE staff, USFWS staff and interested public from local beach communities on nesting activities of the endangered Kemp's Ridley sea turtle on Galveston Island. Kemp's Ridley sea turtles are now returning to nest on Texas beaches after decades of absence. Commerce has participated for the past three years, since it has become evident that sea turtles are nesting in increasingly larger numbers on the upper Texas coast (including Galveston Island) each year. The meeting was held on April, 9, 2005, at the NOAA National Marine Fisheries Service facility in Galveston, where research on sea turtles is conducted.

1 person to the Denmark Tourism Conference in Copenhagen, Denmark

This conference was attended by local International Trade Administration (ITA) staff with no resulting costs to Commerce. No annual leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. The overarching purpose of this annual conference was to promote tourism to the United States. Commerce participates in this conference annually to support the See America's pavilion and expand the network among tour operators. This conference took place on January 28 through January 30, 2005.

46 staffers to the National Association of Manufactures Conference in Chicago, IL

The total cost for U.S. Foreign Commercial Service (US & FCS) staff to travel to, plan and support event activities was $186,772. No annual leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. This event was a trade show that is sponsored annually by the National Association of Manufacturers. In support of the Department of Commerce Manufacturing Initiative and to promote U.S. manufacturing exports, US & FCS sponsored export promotion activities on the trade show floor. Staff did not participate in the conference portion of the National Association of Manufactures trade show. This conference was attended by several Senior Commercial Officers from in the Africa, Near East and South Asia sector and the East Asia Pacific sector, as well as domestic Trade Specialists. These Trade Specialists counseled U.S. manufacturers about export opportunities in their countries in 600 one-on-one meetings. Country-specific seminars for U.S. businesses were also held. In addition to the Commercial Service export counseling, the multi-agency Export Pavilion exhibited at the show. The Export Pavilion promotes U.S. Government export assistance for U.S. companies and features U.S. F.C.S., Export Import Bank of the U.S., Small Business Administration, the Foreign Trade Statistics and Regulations of the U.S. Census Bureau, and the National Customs Brokers and Forwarders Association of America. This conference took place on February 23 through February 26, 2004.

1 person to the Annual Las Vegas International Hotel and Restaurant Show

The cost to Commerce for participation in this conference was $245 for registration fees. Commerce staff did not take leave immediately before or after the conference. The conference was organized for travel and tourism professionals from California and Nevada to address issues that impact the hotel and restaurant sectors of the travel and tourism industries of both states. The conference drew many travel and tourism industry professionals that had a vested business interest in the progress of the U.S. Government in working toward a potential tourism facilitation arrangement with China. An ITA staffer from Commerce participated as a speaker/panelist on the issue of China outbound travel to the United States. In addition, ITA staffer shared the positive progress of the U.S. Government's efforts to expand travel and tourism flows between the United States and. The Department of Commerce does not regularly participate in this conference. This conference occurred on April 11, 2006 through April 13, 2006.

1 person to the Nevada Rural Tourism Conference in Carson City, NV

The cost to Commerce for participation in this conference was $34 for registration fees. Commerce staff did not take leave immediately before or after the conference. The ITA staffer delivered a keynote speech on international travel trends to the United States and the role of rural tourism in attracting international travelers to this country. The aim of this conference, attended annually by the Department, is to expand the international visitation levels to the Nevada's rural areas. This conference occurred on April 5, 2006 through April 7, 2006.

1 person to the Hawaii Association of Land Surveyors Conference in Honolulu, HI

There were no admission or participation fees for this conference and a local NOAA staffer based in Honolulu attended. No leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. A National Ocean Service staffer was the keynote speaker and he conducted a workshop on Basic Global Positioning Systems. His participation in the Conference is a requirement of his position as the National Geodetic Survey State Advisor. As result, NOAA has participated in this conference each year since 2003. The stated purpose of this conference is to present and discuss the new specific Basic Geodetic Survey and Global Positioning Systems requirements and updates for Hawaiian land surveyors. This conference occurred on February 2, 2006 through February 3, 2006.

34 employees to the Alaska Marine Science Symposium in Anchorage, AK

The cost to Commerce for participation in this conference was $55,984 for staff salary and travel costs. No leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. The purpose of the conference is to present research results of North Pacific Research Board funded projects and to assist in communication and coordination of Alaska research being conducted by the marine research community. It provides a forum for scientists, Alaska Natives, environmentalists, government officials, representatives of the fishing and tourism industries, and other interested people to exchange views on the restoration of coastal habitats, fisheries, mammals, birds, recreational and cultural resources. NOAA provided keynote speakers, panel participants and presented research project results. NOAA also participated in this conference to gain further understanding of current marine research being conducted in Alaska by all entities. This is a conference that the Department participates in annually. This conference occurred from January 21 through January 27, 2006.

11 employees to the U.S./Central Europe Airport Issue Conference in Budapest, Hungary

The cost to Commerce for participation in this conference was $14,153 for staff salary and the travel costs of one U.S. based ITA staffer. The other ten Commerce staff were all stationed in Central Europe. No leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. The purpose of the conference was to present upcoming airport infrastructure projects in Central and Eastern Europe and to provide the relevant government and airport officials a venue to meet technology and services providers as well as an opportunity to present their projects. This annual conference is a major international industry event sponsored by the American Association of Airport Executives in coordination with the Federal Aviation Administration. The event brought together airport executives from leading U.S. and European airports, as well as representatives from airport service companies and relevant government regulatory agencies. The role of the Department's employees was to work with the organizers to identify and recruit the appropriate foreign government airport executives and government officials to the event and then to ensure that the interests of U.S. companies involved in airport technology and infrastructure were represented and promoted during the conference. This conference occurred from November 6 through November 8, 2005.

1 person to the Facing and Solving Housing Conference in Mexico, Mexico City

There were no travel costs, admission fees or participation fees because a local ITA staffer based in Mexico City attended. No leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. The goal of this conference was to discuss and display new housing products and technologies relevant to the Mexican market. Annually, Commerce participates in this conference to promote the export of U.S. goods and services into the Mexican market. Staff is assigned responsibilities for industry sectors that have the best prospects for U.S. products and services. Housing is a growing market in Mexico with substantial trade opportunities for U.S. products, technologies and developers. This is an important industry event that ITA attends in order to maintain contacts in the local housing industry and stay current on market trends and opportunities. The ITA staffer was a participant at a trade show attached to the conference. This conference occurred from June 14, 2006 through June 16, 2006.

1 person to Mexico's Dental Industry Conference and the New Dental Medicines Conference in Mexico City, Mexico

There were no travel costs, admission fees or participation fees because a local ITA staffer based in Mexico City attended both of these conferences sponsored by the Mexican Dental Association. No leave was taken immediately before or after this conference by the local staffer. The goal of this conference is to discuss and display new dental techniques and equipment for the Mexican market. Each year Commerce participates in this conference to promote the export of U.S. goods and services into the Mexican market. Staff is assigned responsibilities for industry sectors that have the best prospects for U.S. products and services. The dental sector is an important market in Mexico with substantial opportunities for U.S. products and technologies. These are significant industry events that ITA attends in order to meet key contacts in the Mexican dental industry and stay current on market trends and US trade opportunities. Mexico's Dental Industry Conference occurred from May 3, 2006 through May 6, 2006. The New Dental Medicines in Mexico Conference occurred from November 25, 2005 through November 30, 2005.

1 person to the Nederburg Auction and Wine Conference in Cape Town, South Africa

The cost to Commerce for participation in this conference was $372, which is the estimated salary cost for ITA staffer's time to attend the event. No leave was taken immediately before or after this conference. This conference, attended by a commercial officer employed by ITA in Cape Town, was held in nearby Stellenbosch, South Africa. The U.S. wine industry is one of many businesses that the Department has an affirmative obligation to promote, and this event, held for the past 32 years, is one that is well attended by wine industry representatives from all over the world. The 2006 conference represented a break from tradition, in that the keynote speakers were not wine producers, but several American women of African descent who are promoting wines among women and minorities. The Department's attendee assisted the Nederburg Auction in bringing U.S. speakers to the event and, at the request of the meeting's sponsors, participated in a briefing on the South African market and on services provided by the Commerce Department. The conference took place on April 4, 2006.

QUESTION SUBMITTED BY CHAIRMAN TOM COBURN

FISCAL YEAR 2006 CONFERENCE ACTIVITY

QUESTION: What was the total amount spent by the department and agencies and offices on Fiscal Year 2006 conferences - including general support, programming, staff salaries, travel and other associated costs.

ANSWER: The total amount spent by the Department of Commerce bureaus on FY 2006 conferences was $7.4 million.

QUESTION: Please submit a full listing of each conference that received support from the department and its agencies and offices during Fiscal Year 2006.

ANSWER: For a full listing of each conference that Department bureaus supported or participated in FY 2006 entirely, please refer to the enclosed table. This table replaces the previous full listing of FY 2006 conferences covering only the period of October 1, 2005 through May 31, 2006 that was provided to the Chairman on August 28, 2006.

QUESTION: When managers approve conference attendance requests is there a policy in place which requires scrutiny of number of attendees? In other words, does attendance by more than one employee receive additional scrutiny and require manager approval?

ANSWER: The Department is a large, highly dispersed organization with extremely varied responsibilities. We have in place no single policy that governs conference attendance and related activities. We rely on our managers to make prudent decisions regarding which conferences to attend and who should attend them, and we hold managers accountable for those decisions. Travel and conference attendance by Department of Commerce employees always requires management's approval. Supervisors are aware of requests from multiple employees to attend the same conference, and they do not approve such requests unless budgetary circumstances permit it and program needs demand it. Further, in some Commerce organizations, attendance by multiple employees at a single conference must be approved by senior management. We do recognize our affirmative obligation to restrain resources expended on travel in general and conference attendance in particular. Concurrently, we recognize that in austere fiscal times, conference spending is among the top candidates for reduction, and offers an opportunity for savings that can then be applied to mission-essential work.

U.S. TREASURY DEPARTMENT
OFFICE OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS

EMBARGOED UNTIL 2:30 p.m. EDT on September 14, 2006
Contact: Eileen Gilligan (202) 622-2960

Statement of Richard Holcomb
Deputy Chief Financial Officer
U.S. Department of the Treasury

Before the
Subcommittee on Federal Financial Management,
Government Information, and International Security

Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs

September 14, 2006

Chairman Coburn and distinguished members of this Committee, thank you for the opportunity to appear before the Committee today. One of the oldest departments in federal government, Treasury has a long and distinguished tradition of serving the American public. The mission of the Department of the Treasury is to promote the conditions for prosperity and stability in the United States and encourage prosperity and stability in the rest of the world. We take our responsibilities in the domestic and international financial arenas very seriously which includes maintaining the day to day fiduciary functions for the nation as a whole.

As the Federal Government's financial manager, we collect United States revenues and disburse eighty-five percent of the federal payments. In addition we manage borrowing and perform central accounting functions. We administer the financial system in such a way as to promote legitimate purposes and prevent the system from being used for purposes that support criminal activity. Our role in executing the Nation's financial sanctions policies and countering money laundering and other financial crimes, particularly terrorist financing, has become increasingly important in recent years.

Communication is the key to our relationship with the individual American taxpayer and the corporate entities that between them provide the bulk of the revenue that supports the business of our government. We incorporate a variety of media to communicate our messages in support of the governmental activities for which we are responsible. For example, we print informational flyers in 33 languages for distribution worldwide when we change the design and look of our paper currency and coinage. We make extensive use of electronic media for providing Internal Revenue Service information, procedures, forms, and policy. Our headquarters and all of our Bureaus make extensive use of websites and online newsletters for general information concerning their functions as well as the specific details of important matters to individual citizens.

We make use of conferences to broadcast and explain matters to individuals as well as corporate bodies that relate to changes in tax law, tax collection, banking and thrift procedures, and commodities regulation. Consequently, the vast majority of the conferences we sponsor are either Internal Revenue Service or Alcohol and Tobacco Tax and Trade Bureau (TTB) events that focus on taxpayer advocacy, small business practitioner forums, or a specific sector such as the wine and alcohol industry.

The Taxpayer Advocacy Panel listens to taxpayers, identifies taxpayers' issues and makes suggestions for improving Internal Revenue Service services and aiding with customer satisfaction. The Taxpayer Advocacy Panel acts as a two-way conduit; serving as a focus group for the Internal Revenue Service providing input on strategic initiatives, as well as providing a venue for raising issues identified by citizens. Structurally, there are seven geographically based Area Boards aligned with the current Taxpayer Advocate Service areas. These Area Boards address local issues and schedule outreach activities. Issue Committees, with nationwide membership, identify and work service-wide issues and are closely linked to the Wage and Investment and Small Business/Self-Employed program owners.

A major part of TTB's mission is to have its industry members voluntarily comply with rules and regulations. Part of this can be accomplished through an increased field presence via tax audits and product integrity investigations. Another very effective tool to reach voluntary compliance is to inform our industry members of what is expected of them. TTB seminars allow us to reach a wide audience and give industry members the instructional tools that are needed to successfully meet the Federal rules that apply to their businesses. These events represent a cross-section of industry producers, wholesalers, and/or importers. They provide outreach to industry members who are geographically dispersed across the country and a platform for sharing information and learning about current issues and trends in the marketplace.

Two of the largest groups of industry members are wineries (4,830 permits) and wholesaler/importers (22,396 permits). Combined, these groups make up 67% of the permits that have been issued by TTB. Thus, winery and wholesaler/importer seminars have been the main focal point of the TTB seminar program.

These seminars attract active permittees, those interested in obtaining permits, industry trade associations, industry lawyers and state regulatory agencies. Attendees are able to obtain relevant information on the Federal rules and regulations that apply to their businesses, ask specific questions that pertain to their daily activities, receive updates on the latest issues that may apply to their activities, obtain information on TTB's electronic initiatives, and important contact information. The end result is a better understanding of their roles as permit holders and increased voluntary compliance with Federal law. It also allows TTB employees to hear first hand the concerns and issues that our industry members have pertaining to the regulation of alcohol & tobacco products.

TTB also attends international meetings and conferences at the request of or invitation from the Office of the United States Trade Representative (USTR) or from other public or private sector individuals representing the alcohol or tobacco regulated industries. At these meetings/conferences, TTB provides technical advice to the USTR on how trade negotiations might impact the administration of US alcohol and tobacco laws and regulations, provides guidance to US industry members, foreign government officials, and the general public on US import/export rules for alcohol and tobacco, and facilitates the import/export trade in alcohol by educating the public on regulatory requirements for both US and foreign markets.

We consider both of these recurring sets of conferences and seminars as vital to the understanding of the rules and regulations pertaining to both individual taxpayers as well as the affected industry. We consider there is nothing more important than an informed public, particularly where it involves taxation and compliance.

Conference participation is closely monitored by the sponsoring offices within the Department. We closely follow travel regulations and our automated travel approval process alerts supervisors to approve necessary travel in the conduct of our conferences and seminars. IRS, in particular, has established rules that delineate identifying low cost locations, numbers of attendees, and approval levels for conferences that cost in excess of $100,000.

We regret the delay in providing the requested information. Our financial data bases do not distinguish between types of business trips and do not cross reference other business expenses. We intend to develop a system that will be more responsive to your needs in the future and will provide us with a positive business tool in safeguarding the money entrusted to us by the taxpayers we serve.

Funding for Department of the Treasury Conferences is as follows:

- Fiscal Year 2001 $1,520,923
- Fiscal Year 2002 $2,017,866
- Fiscal Year 2003 $1,527,519
- Fiscal Year 2004 $2,298,125
- Fiscal Year 2005 $2,986,623
- Fiscal Year 2006 $2,472,925 (as of the end of the 3rd Quarter)

Mint-Wide Policy Memo DIR-21

MEMORANDUM FOR PLANT MANAGERS
ASSOCIATE DIRECTORS
ASSISTANT DIRECTORS
DIRECTOR'S STAFF

FROM: Henrietta Holsman Fore
Director
United States Mint

SUBJECT: Travel Approvals

I. INTRODUCTION

This memorandum establishes United States Mint travel policy on: (1) approval of travel authorities; and (2) approval of specific entitlement and/or unusual circumstances that occur in travel situations. This policy will ensure that the Mint travel approval procedures and authorities are consistent with the Federal Travel Regulation, ensure consistency in the application of travel regulations for all Mint facilities, and empower Mint officials with the authority to control the travel budgets for their respective office or location.

1. Associate Directors, Chief Counsel and Plant Managers.

These persons can approve the travel authorities and/or entitlement for their staff members for all routine and/or normal travel situations. This includes, but is not limited to:

a. Travel to other Mint sites;
b. Travel to attend conferences or training, provided these are not held in unusual domestic or any foreign locations;
c. Use of rental cars while traveling;
d. Authorization for actual subsistence;
e. Pre-employment interview travel;
f. Settlement activities;
g. Authorization for weekend returns; and

h. Non-use of a contract carrier flight.

NOTE: These approving officials may delegate this authority. If they do so, a memorandum must be sent to the app ropriate Accounting Office and the Mint Travel Manager at Headquarters to document the delegation.

2. Director of the Mint.

The Director's travel (including use of the authorities listed below) must be approved by the Deputy Director or Chief Financial Officer.

The Director has authority to approve travel authorities of all Mint employees, and any unusual or uncommon travel entitlement that cannot be approved at the lower level as indicated in #1 above. This will include, but is not limited to:

a. Foreign travel and travel to unusual domestic locations:

   The Director must approve all international and unusual domestic travel. Unusual domestic travel can be defined as travel to destinations that may be considered as resorts or gambling towns, locations outside of the Continental United States or any other destination that reasonably could raise questions as to the propriety of the travel. Additional details regarding unusual domestic travel may be obtained from the Mint Travel Manager. To obtain approval, the traveler must submit a justification memo along with the travel authorization through the Associate Director for the Director's approval. This memo must clearly state the traveler's reason for traveling to an international or an unusual domestic location; it should also cite all attempts towards accomplishing the same business domestically or at a Mint facility. Copies of all approved foreign and unusual travel authorizations and declined requests must be sent to the Office of Corporate Policy and Legislative Affairs.
b. Use of premium class transportation, i.e., business class.
c. Acceptance of travel expenses from non-government sources (after legal review by the Mint's Chief Counsel).
d. Travel expenses of a spouse in connection with an agency or Departmental awards ceremony.

3. Deputy Director.

The Deputy Director's travel (including use of the below authorities) must be approved by the Director of the Mint or the Chief Financial Officer.

The Deputy Director has the authority to approve use of premium class transportation, i.e., business class, acceptance of travel expenses from non-government sources (after legal review by the Mint's Chief Counsel), travel expenses of a spouse in connection with an agency or Departmental awards ceremony and all the travel entitlement that can be approved by the Associate Directors, Chief Counsel and Plant Managers. (See #1 above)

4. Chief Financial Officer.

In addition to the authority specified in #1 above, the Chief Financial Officer has the authority to approve the Director and Deputy Director's travel authority, acceptance of travel expenses from non-government sources (after legal review by the Mint's Chief Counsel) and travel expenses of a spouse in connection with an agency or Departmental awards ceremony.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL EXECUTIVES

FROM: John M. Dalrymple /s/ John M. Dalrymple
Deputy Commissioner for Operations Support

SUBJECT: Off-site Meetings

The IRS has official guidelines in place for selecting locations and facilities for IRS off-site training. (See IRM 6.410.2.) Generally,

- Off-site meetings, conferences or training should be designed to minimize the number of employees who must travel or stay overnight;
- All cost comparisons to identify the lowest cost city for the meeting location must include the headquarters city;
- Whenever cost differences are negligible, the decision to use the headquarters or sponsoring IRS (host) city will prevail;
- Cost comparisons and the final decision for the location of the meeting must be documented and the approving official must retain those documents; and
- Meetings should not be held in locations that might be perceived as "resorts."

We generally have used these guidelines to good effect in making prudent and economical decisions when choosing locations and facilities for off-site meetings. In light of our tightening budgets, however, we need to institute an additional approval process. If you estimate that a proposed meeting will cost more than $100,000, please submit to my office for review and approval a memorandum with a description of the meeting, options for meeting locations and any associated cost information. The memorandum should be submitted prior to making any nonrefundable financial commitments and also should show approval by the appropriate Division Commissioner or business unit head.

This oversight is not intended to inhibit considering off-site meeting locations as there are situations when such locations are appropriate. It is intended to ensure that, in all circumstances, we thoroughly consider existing guidelines and that we have chosen the most efficient, effective and economical option for our meetings.

If you have any questions related to this memorandum, please contact Kirsten Wielobob at (202) 622-6860.

Committee on Homeland Security and Government Affairs

September 14, 2006

Chairman Coburn, Senator Carper and other members of the committee, I appreciate the opportunity to give testimony concerning conference attendance and expenditures at the Department of Agriculture. The United States Department of Agriculture is a diverse and complex organization with programs that touch the lives of all Americans every day. Our six strategic goals for 2005 -2010 are to:

1. Enhance International Competitiveness of American Agriculture;
2. Enhance the Competitiveness and Sustainability of Rural and Farm Economies;
3. Support Increased Economic Opportunities and Improved Quality of Life in Rural America;
4. Enhance Protection and Safety of the Nation's Agriculture and Food Supply;
5. Improve the Nation's Nutrition and Health; and

6. Protect and Enhance the Nation's Natural Resource Base and Environment.

In order to achieve these goals, the Department leverages the services of a vast number of entities. These entities include state and local governments, colleges and universities, school districts, community organizations, faith-based organizations, associations, other federal agencies, and international based organizations. Conferences are very important in the communication, training, and coordination needed to deliver the regulations and requirements of hundreds of programs. In addition, the Department's employees attend conferences to enhance their ability to perform their jobs. These conferences enable employees to stay current on new developments in their respective areas, expand their knowledge, and collaborate across boundaries with partners.

The Department of Agriculture has a formal travel policy that includes conferences. As the Chief Financial Officer of the Department the policy is under my administrative responsibility. Certain areas of the travel policy, including the approval for most conference expenses, have been delegated to the agencies for administration. The Department's policy and available funding in the individual agencies provide the checks and balances on sponsoring and attending conferences. Each agency has a Chief Financial Officer to maintain the fiscal management of their respective organizations. Conferences that employees attend require an approved training form from their supervisor prior to the payment of a conference fee. If the conference requires transportation and hotel, a travel voucher must also be approved. Conferences that are sponsored by the agencies have various administrative and purchasing approvals based on their total expense. In late August, we provided data on conference attendance and costs for the time period of FY2001 to FY2005 Including information recently provided by the Forest Service, in 2005, the Department's expenditures for conference fees equaled approximately $22 million. In 2005, the Department's total revenue was $21 billion with total expenditures of $112 billion The cost of conferences is approximately .02% of total expenditures.

Ensuring an ample food supply, inspecting the safety of our food, exporting agricultural goods to foreign markets, providing food assistance to our citizens, conserving our natural resources, developing rural infrastructure, and providing agricultural research are very important responsibilities. Conferences at the USDA are mainly sponsored by its agencies for outreach or training of employees, states, colleges and universities, and communities. During 2005, the outreach and training conferences accounted for 72% of total attendance.

Two groups that I would like to highlight for this testimony are our mission areas responsible for Natural Resources and Environment and Research, Education, and Economics. The Natural Resources and Environment mission area includes the Forest Service and the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS). The 2002 Farm Bill vastly increased funding for conservation by authorizing increased spending for several programs under prior Farm Bills and establishing the Conservation Security Program (CSP) and the Grassland Reserve Program (GRP). Last year, approximately 6,100 NRCS employees and 5,300 Forest Services employees were trained in regional locations throughout the United States. While NRCS activities benefit all of the people in the nation, the primary customers are individuals that make natural resource and management decisions on non-federal lands. They include farmers, ranchers, and other members of the private sector; units of government; and non-profit organizations. NRCS partners with over 3,000 local conservations districts to assist in implementing its programs. Targeted conservation areas and management practices change often. These changes are due to various regional management requirements, new research, certain conservation practices, natural events, and legislative changes. In addition, NRCS has been impacted by a large amount of employee retirements in 2004 and 2005. To address the critical training needs NRCS held "regional training boot camps" in 2005. Conferences in this mission area help fill the need to coordinate with states and other outside groups, the coordination of environmental science knowledge, the specialized regional training, and the implementation of new programs.

Research, Education, and Economics (REE) is responsible for research and statistics covering the full breath of the Departments programs Their research benefits the lives of Americans and provides competitive advantages to our products in the world market. REE success in agriculture research has produced stronger seeds, disease resistant trees, drought resistant plants, reductions in the use of insecticides and fertilizers, and higher milk production. Successes in research for the nations health include the addition of omega-3 fatty acids in baby formula, lactose-free dairy products, E-coli eliminating technology for meat, zero-calorie natural fat replacers in food, the mass production of penicillin, and DEET for insect repellent. Successes in research for consumer products associated with agriculture include the starch-based product named "Super Slurper" found in disposable diapers, flame-retardant finishes for clothing, bacteria and fungi resistant finishes for socks, and wrinkle free cotton fabric.

Although this seems like an exhaustive list of research successes, this is only a small portion of the total list of REE's accomplishments. REE does not act alone in its research; it is accomplished in partnership with universities and other institutions. Much of the travel in this Mission Area involves coordination and collaboration with other scientists, institutions and organizations. This enables the REE mission area to be far more efficient in carrying out its responsibilities of research, education and economic activities. Such collaboration through conferencing avoids excessive duplication and enhances efficiency and effectiveness. In addition, our scientists are widely recognized for their unique and high level of expertise and are in active demand by various groups and organizations to share their knowledge and expertise at conferences and meetings. We feel that having such highly qualified people enhances our stature as part of the greater scientific community and brings distinction and credit to the U.S. Department of Agriculture and our Nation.

About one-fourth of the conferences we attend are sponsored by non-USDA groups. The subject matter at these conferences is geared towards historically disadvantaged groups, state government, foreign marketing, and various other topics. Four percent of non-USDA sponsored conferences pertain to historically disadvantaged groups. These conference titles include Blacks in Government, Chinese American Annual Conference, Hispanic Association of Colleges and Universities Annual Conference, and Federal Asian Pacific American Counsel Conference. An additional four percent are State sponsored conferences dealing with nutrition and research. The remaining conference subjects include nutrition, conservation, science, information technology, foreign marketing, and safety.

To help contain expenses and to continue to educate our greatest resource, the Department has developed and implemented an electronic education medium, AgLearn. This year the system has been used by 69,000 employees to complete 1,422 different courses. The system provides the ability to deliver required training modules to employees across the country through their desktop computer. Desktop computer training provides several benefits. They are (1) employees can complete training modules as their schedule allows, (2) employees receive a consistent message from their training regardless of when they participate, (3) costs are reduced by eliminating travel (time and expense), and (4) participation can be tracked for required training. In 2007, we will be adding customer feedback and satisfaction to better tune this methodology for training our employees. The Department understands the value and cost savings that AgLearn provides as its primary education source for USDA employees.

The Department uses conferences and other methods to support the communication, coordination, and educational, and research requirements of the mission areas. Our programs support the basic needs and competitive requirements of the nation. Due to the diversity and breath of our programs, our conference attendance is located across the United States.

I regret that the requested information was delayed. The Department operates in a decentralized format on nine general ledger systems that transfer summary information into a consolidated data warehouse for final reporting. Like private companies in the 1980s, the Department is moving through the transformation to update technology to increase the productivity of our employees and provide better information to management. Our structure and information is mostly decentralized relying heavily on Departmental policies, manual processes, and human capital. The information you requested is held at a vast number of offices across the United States.

We believe that transparency into the Department's expenditures is important. We have set this as a goal in our strategic plan as well. Action items in the plan include "provide transparency and accountability to administrative costs; and increase the use of financial information in day-to-day decision making and budget formulation." Through our Financial Management Modernization Initiative we have addressed the need for electronic approvals and detailed centralized information for management. During this initiative we will include an evaluation of our policies and procedures concerning the approval of underwritten and attended conferences.

I appreciate this opportunity to testify before this committee and would welcome any questions.

Mission Area: Farm & Foreign Agricultural Service
Agency: Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS)
Conference: Fruit Logistical Conference, Germany, 1 person

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$3,000.00
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Berlin, Germany.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	To make contacts with foreign fruit importers, wholesalers, retailers and government officials; evaluate trends in foreign fruit production, consumption and trade; and to assess market opportunities and foreign competition in fruit trade.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	To bring together private sector and government officials from throughout the world to discuss issues relevant to the production, marketing, consumption, and trade in fruit.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	February 2-3, 2006.

Mission Area: Farm & Foreign Agricultural Service
Agency: Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS)
Conference: Asia Fruit Congress, China, 1 person

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$2,500.00
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Beijing, China
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	To make contacts with foreign fruit importers, wholesalers, retailers and government officials; evaluate trends in foreign fruit production, consumption and trade; and to assess market opportunities and foreign competition in fruit trade.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	To bring together private sector and government officials from throughout the world to discuss issues relevant to the production, marketing, consumption, and trade in fruit.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	April 8-10, 2006.

Mission Area: Farm & Foreign Agricultural Service
Agency: Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS)
Conference: Bio-energy Conference (China Corn Outlook Conference), China, 1 person

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$0.00; traveler was an invited participant at the conference; all travel costs were provided by the conference organizer.
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Beijing, China.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	FAS was invited by organizer to participate in conference and to present world situation and outlook for corn. Conference also afforded an opportunity to make contacts with foreign trade and government contacts.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	To bring together key industry and government officials to discuss world situation and outlook for corn (production, consumption and trade, including outlook for biofuels.).
7. What were the dates of the conference?	April 18-19, 2006.

Mission Area: Farm & Foreign Agricultural Service
Agency: Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS)
Conference: National Leadership Training Conference, Hawaii, 1 person

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$5,488.00
2. Where did it take place (city)?	Honolulu, Hawaii.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	The conference represents a major component of USDA's Civil Rights Program as it pertains to Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	Yes.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	The Federal Asian Pacific American Council's (FAPAC) mission is to promote equal employment opportunity and cultural diversity for Asian Pacific Americans (APA) within the Federal and District of Columbia governments through education and recognition of outstanding performance. The annual conference is their flagship event.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	May 8-12, 2006.

Mission Area: Farm & Foreign Agricultural Service
Agency: Foreign Agricultural Service (FAS)
Conference: International Textile Manufacturer's Federation Annual Conference, Hungary, 1 person

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$1,266.00
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Budapest, Hungary.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	Participation in this event gave FAS the opportunity to further expand its knowledge base and to provide better support/advice to the U.S. cotton industry.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	To bring together industry and government officials from throughout the world to discuss issues relevant to the textile and fiber industries.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	September, 2001 ( file archived, dates not readily available).

Mission Area: Food, Nutrition and Consumer Services
Agency: Food and Nutrition Services (FNS)
Conference: FSP Big Cities Meeting, Illinois, 93 people (34 Federal government, 59 State and local government)

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$77,000.00 - represents total costs including travel for 93 individuals at approximately $830 each.
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Chicago, Illinois.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	Yes. One FNS employees took one day annual leave after the conference (April 15, 2005) to stay in Chicago.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	The purpose of FNS participation is to establish FNS priorities for improving operation of the Food Stamp Program (FSP), with particular emphasis on improving payment accuracy within the program.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	FNS sponsored this conference for the first time in 2005. There are no plans to hold another one at this time.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	The conference provided an opportunity for State government leaders from 15 to 20 of the largest project areas in the country to meet and hear FNS leaders' priorities on improving FSP operations. The conference also offered a leadership forum for promoting the exchange of information regarding successful strategies to improve program operations. Over the past several years, working together, FNS and the States have reduced payment error rates to historic lows. Sponsoring a conference where information and ideas on improving program operations are exchanged is one reason for this operational improvement.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	Tuesday, April 12 to Thursday, April 14, 2005.

Mission Area: Marketing & Regulatory Programs
Agency: Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS)
Conference: Elephant Training, Florida, APHIS Animal Care, 20 people

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$24,036.11
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Tampa, Florida.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	Elephants present unique challenges for inspection and monitoring under the Animal Care Welfare Act (AWA). It is necessary for our Inspectors to have this training to better serve the welfare of the elephants.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	To gain information on the different types of elephant management systems and inspection processes.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	June 21, 2006 – June 24, 2006.

Mission Area: Natural Resources and Environment
Agency: Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS)
Conference: TSP Coordinators Training, Nevada, 250 people

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$233,250.00
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Reno, Nevada.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	The 2002 Farm Bill expanded the opportunities for our clients to access timely and quality technical assistance from both the public and private sector. The investment of the Farm Bill made it impossible to service all of our customers' needs with our workforce. The services of third party technical service providers (TSP) from the public and private sector were made available to farmers and ranchers through financial assistance. In order to begin this effort, the agency developed interim guidance in the Interim Final Rule and Interim Policy. The state offices waited for additional guidance that was the focus of the proposed TSP Training Conference in November, 2004. The agency published a Final Rule and Final Policy just before the Conference and they were a focus for the conference. Topics cascading from the Final Rule and Policy included financial management, technical proficiencies, reporting, payments and other essential elements to managing a successful TSP activity in the states. It is imperative that we provide adequate, classroom type instruction to the state TSP Coordinators, Budget Officers, Assistant and State Conservationists, and contracting officers that are intimately involved in managing the TSP effort. Failure to convey this training in person with peer involvement and questions from the audience will have a negative impact on our TSP endeavors. A successful training conference will result in these officials having the knowledge and ability to manage a successful TSP activity in the states, which protects the investment we are making of more than 63 million dollars in FY03 and FY 04 with another 40 million expected in FY 05 and successive years.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	The conference will provide training to TSP Coordinators, ASTC-Programs, State Conservationists and others in the Final TSP Rule, New TSP Policy, NTE Rates and other related topics.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	November 15-18, 2004.

Agency: Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS)
Conference: CSP Program Training, Indiana, 299 people

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$319,341.00
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Indianapolis, Indiana.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	Yes. One NRCS employee took annual leave after the conference (February 4, 2005) at the conference location.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	This training is essential to the continued success of the roll-out of the program. State and Field staffs must understand: -The new rules and regulations; -Become familiar with newly developed assessment tools; -Gain knowledge of the new planning standards; -Comprehend the new contract development conditions; -Engage in the use of newly developed electronic tools and technology; -Have knowledge and understanding of the payment criteria; -Understand the public media strategies for delivering the program; and -Implement the program in selected watersheds by the end of the fiscal year. Given the range of watershed locations and the number of employees involved, providing regional training to the selected State and Watershed Employees is a more efficient and a better use of agency time and funds.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	Yes.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	The Chief requested a meeting for the selected States and Watershed Employees and State Conservationist, as appropriate, for 2005 sign-up for the Conservation Security Program (CSP) training.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	February 1-3, 2005.

Mission Area: Natural Resources and Environment
Agency: Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS)
Conference: Pacific Basin Leadership Team Meeting, Guam, 12 people

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$18,735.00
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Tumon, Guam.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	It was an opportunity for staff to meet and work together to provide workload direction in the Pacific Basin.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	No.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	Team Building and Strategic Planning.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	September 6-8, 2005.

Office of the Chief Economist (OCE)
Conference: Agricultural Outlook Forum, Virginia, approx. 1,400 incl. 700 USDA people; 700 private sector participants

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	$109,458
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	Arlington, Virginia.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	No.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	Information dissemination is a key objective of the Forum. The Forum is sponsored by USDA; the Chief Economist chairs the Forum steering committee which is primarily composed of Under Secretaries of USDA mission areas. The steering committee sets the conference theme which varies from year-to-year depending on current issues. The Forum program committee is chaired by the chairman of the World Agricultural Outlook Board (WAOB). At present, 13 USDA agencies, including WAOB, participate in planning this annual event. Each agency brings a unique perspective and set of proposed topics to the program committee. The final program is set by the committee as a whole. Normally, the program consists of 36 sessions presented in 5 concurrent tracks offered to forum participants. The majority of the Forum's 130 moderators and speakers are from academia, other government agencies, and the private sector. USDA agencies provide about one-third of the moderators and speakers. All speeches and PowerPoint presentations are posted on the USDA Web site. The WAOB chairman is responsible for orchestrating the Forum, including registration and logistical arrangements.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	Yes. This is an annual event sponsored by USDA.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	USDA's first annual national Outlook Forum was held/initiated in 1923 to help the nation establish an "intelligent balance of production, marketing, and consumption of farm products." This was to be accomplished by providing farmers and others in the agricultural sector with useful commodity supply and demand estimates and forecasts in the context of the global economic outlook for the coming year. Today, the goal of the Forum remains much the same. The Office of the Chief Economist's World Agricultural Outlook Board has been responsible for planning and organizing this annual event on behalf of the Department since the 1980's. The Forum brings together eminent leaders in agriculture including farmers, ranchers, economists, professors, statisticians, consultants, industry leaders, and government policymakers. Attendees are given the opportunity to engage in lively exchanges with Forum speakers. While the Forum continues to put a spotlight on the commodity outlook for the coming year, its focus has broadened to include breakout sessions on the latest scientific research, new products, bioenergy, the changing dynamics of rural America, global trade prospects, health issues, and the economy. The Forum supports USDA's mission by giving USDA employees and the public the opportunity to gain a broadened understanding of the current issues that are important to the future of agriculture through 2 days of sessions and collegial exchanges. At the Forum, the economic outlook for the coming year is presented by the Chief Economist and the outlook for U.S. trade and agricultural policy is presented by the Under Secretary for Farm and Foreign Agricultural Services. The Secretary of Agriculture presents the keynote address. Recent distinguished speakers have included Nobel prize winner Norman Borlaug, USTR Robert Portman, and the CEOs of major corporations such as McDonalds, John Deere, and Kraft Foods.

7. What were the dates of the conference?	February 24-25, 2005.

Office of the Inspector General (OIG)
Conference: Professional Development Conference (PDC), Texas, 280 people

Question	Response
1. How much did it cost?	Approximately $506,620.00: estimated travel costs ($395,720) and actual speaker/logistics costs ($113,900).
2. Where did it take place (city and state)?	San Antonio, Texas.
3. Did Ag staff take annual leave immediately before or after the conference? What were the dates?	Yes. One OIG employee took annual leave after the conference (July 25, 2005) in San Antonio, TX.
4. Please explain the purpose of Ag participation in the conference.	OIG developed this conference as a way to provide required training for its audit staff and deliver that training in an efficient and cost effective manner. Our auditors are required to receive a minimum of 80 continuing professional education (CPE) credits every two years to maintain their professional competence and to be in compliance with government auditing standards (GAGAS) pursuant to the Inspector General Act of 1978 (5 U.S.C. App. 3). Therefore, OIG must provide some training for all auditors each year. The PDC is one of the avenues that OIG utilizes to ensure that its audit staff complies with the CPE credit requirement. Second, in obtaining the required training, our auditors keep abreast of current changes in the accounting profession and stay on top of emerging agricultural issues affecting the government environment in which they audit. Lastly, a conference is an efficient way to train the entire audit staff together and to discuss audit-related strategies, objectives, policies, issues, concerns, and changes to ensure consistency across the organization.
5. Is this something Ag participates in annually?	Yes. While OIG must provide annual training to all auditors, training can be done on a national, divisional, or regional basis on different years. At times, OIG will hold an audit PDC for all auditors throughout the nation, solely for the audit mission. In other years, Audit will hold regional PDCs, or an OIG-wide PDC may be held involving all OIG staff.
6. What is the purpose of the conference?	Please see the response to question 4 above.
7. What were the dates of the conference?	July 18 through 22, 2005.
