Expressing concern regarding persistent and credible reports of systematic, state-sanctioned organ harvesting from non-consenting prisoners of conscience in the People's Republic of China, including from large numbers of Falun Gong practitioners and members of other religious and ethnic minority groups.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

JUNE 25, 2015

Ms. ROSS-LEHTINEN (for herself, Mr. CONNOLLY, Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. POE of Texas, Mr. DÍAZ-BALART, Ms. BROWNLEY of California, Mr. FARR, and Mr. VALADAO) submitted the following resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and in addition to the Committee on the Judiciary, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

RESOLUTION

Expressing concern regarding persistent and credible reports of systematic, state-sanctioned organ harvesting from non-consenting prisoners of conscience in the People's Republic of China, including from large numbers of Falun Gong practitioners and members of other religious and ethnic minority groups.

Whereas when performed in accordance with ethical standards, the medical discipline of organ transplantation is one of the great achievements of modern medicine,
Whereas Chinese authorities reported in 2011 that the majority of organs used for transplantation in China were procured from executed prisoners;

Whereas voluntary and informed consent is the precondition for ethical organ donation and international medical organizations state that prisoners, deprived of their freedom, are not in the position to give free consent and that the practice of sourcing organs from prisoners is a violation of ethical guidelines in medicine;

Whereas the Government of the People’s Republic of China and Communist Party of China continue to deny reports that many organs are taken without the consent of prisoners yet at the same time prevents independent verification of its transplant system;

Whereas the organ transplantation system in China does not comply with the World Health Organization’s requirement of transparency and traceability in organ procurement pathways;

Whereas the United States Department of State Country Report on Human Rights for China for 2013 stated, “Advocacy groups continued to report instances of organ harvesting from prisoners”;

Whereas Huang Jiefu, director of the China Organ Donation Committee, announced in December 2014 that China would end the practice of organ harvesting from executed prisoners by January 1, 2015, but failed to address organ harvesting from prisoners of conscience;

Whereas rates of voluntary organ donation in China remain severely depressed and are insufficient to account for the volume of organ transplant procedures performed;
Whereas Falun Gong, a spiritual practice involving meditative “qigong” exercises and centered on the values of truthfulness, compassion, and tolerance, became immensely popular in the 1990s;

Whereas in July 1999, the Chinese Communist Party launched an intensive, nationwide persecution designed to eradicate the spiritual practice of Falun Gong, reflecting the party’s long-standing intolerance of large independent civil society groups;

Whereas since 1999, hundreds of thousands of Falun Gong practitioners have been detained extra-legal in reeducation-through-labor camps, detention centers, and prisons, where torture and abuse are routine;

Whereas in many detention facilities and labor camps, Falun Gong prisoners of conscience comprise the majority of the population, and have been said to receive the longest sentences and the worst treatment;

Whereas former Falun Gong prisoners of conscience have reported receiving targeted medical exams in detention designed to assess the health of their organs, which other prisoner groups were generally not subjected to;

Whereas Freedom House reported in 2015 that Falun Gong practitioners comprise the largest portion of prisoners of conscience in China, and face an elevated risk of dying or being killed in custody;

Whereas in 2006, Canadian researchers David Matas, human rights attorney, and David Kilgour, former Canadian Secretary of State for Asia-Pacific, conducted an independent investigation into allegations of organ harvesting from Falun Gong prisoners in China, and concluded that Falun Gong prisoners were the only plausible source for 41,500 organ transplants performed from 2000 to 2005;

Whereas their report found that agents of the Chinese state have conducted “large-scale organ seizures from unwilling Falun Gong practitioners”, whose vital organs “were seized involuntarily for sale at high prices, sometimes to foreigners, who normally face long waits for voluntary donations of such organs in their home countries”;

Whereas Matas and Kilgour have implicated state and party entities in illicit organ harvesting, including domestic security services and military hospitals;

Whereas researcher and journalist Ethan Guttmann estimates that approximately 65,000 Falun Gong adherents may have been killed for their organs from 2000 to 2008, and that a number of other religious and ethnic minorities may also have been targeted;

Whereas Guttmann published findings that Chinese security agencies began harvesting organs from members of the predominantly Muslim Uyghur ethnic minority group in the 1990s, including from Uyghur political prisoners;

Whereas the United Nations Committee Against Torture and the Special Rapporteur on Torture have expressed concern over the allegations of organ harvesting from Falun Gong prisoners, and have called on the Government of the People’s Republic of China to increase accountability and transparency in the organ transplant system and punish those responsible for abuses; and

Whereas the killing of religious or political prisoners for the purpose of selling their organs for transplant is an egregious and intolerable violation of the fundamental right to life: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) condemns the practice of state-sanctioned forced organ harvesting in the People’s Republic of China;

(2) calls on the Government of the People’s Republic of China and Communist Party of China to immediately end the practice of organ harvesting from all prisoners of conscience;

(3) demands an immediate end to the 16-year persecution of the Falun Gong spiritual practice by the Government of the People’s Republic of China and the Communist Party of China, and the immediate release of all Falun Gong practitioners and other prisoners of conscience;

(4) encourages the United States medical community to help raise awareness of unethical organ transplant practices in China;

(5) calls on the People’s Republic of China to allow a credible, transparent, and independent investigation into organ transplant abuses; and

(6) calls on the United States Department of State to conduct a more detailed analysis on state-sanctioned organ harvesting from non-consenting prisoners of conscience in the annual Human Rights
Report, and report annually to Congress on the im-
6

1 implementation of section 1182(f) of title 8, United
2 States Code, barring provision of visas to Chinese
3 and other nationals engaged in coerced organ or 4 bodily tissue transplantation.

Mr. SALMON. I now recognize members to speak on these items beginning with myself and the ranking member.

Today we consider three resolutions: Resolution 339, on Mongolia's 25 years of democracy; Resolution 343, on the People's Republic of China state-sanctioned organ harvesting; and Resolution 374, reaffirming Singapore's partnership with the United States.

First, we turn to H. Res. 339, sponsored by Representative Joe Pitts from Pennsylvania. This resolution recognizes Mongolia's success as a young democracy and free market system which has emerged from the fall of the Soviet Union. Mongolia evolved from a one-party Communist state to a democracy upon the introduction of its Constitution in 1992. Since then, Mongolia has held six Presidential and parliamentary elections, each deemed generally free and fair by the State Department. The United States strongly supports democracy promotion around the Globe and will continue to work with Mongolia to promote peace, stability, and other good things in the region.

This legislation encourages the U.S. Government to expand academic, cultural, and people-to-people partnerships with Mongolia to ensure this beacon of democracy in Asia endures.
I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute that gives the recognition to Mongolia's open government initiative and substantial U.N. peacekeeping efforts.

I have an additional amendment to offer that recognizes Mongolia's eligibility for the Millennium Challenge Corporation Fiscal Year 2015 compact assistance.

I urge my colleagues to support both of these amendments and the underlying resolution.

Next, I would like to express my support for the consideration of H. Res. 343, condemning Chinese state-sanctioned forced organ harvesting. This legislation, sponsored by our colleague Representative Ileana Ros-Lehtinen of Florida, has the support of 152 cosponsors. Reports allege that tens of thousands of Chinese detainees, largely associated with the Falun Gong, fell victim to non-consensual organ harvesting while still alive. H. Res. 343 encourages China to end the practice of organ harvesting from prisoners of conscience and calls on the Department of State to provide an analysis of these activities.

Representative Gerry Connolly from Virginia will offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute that provides further information on the practice of organ harvesting in China, and I encourage my colleagues to support this measure as well.

Finally, we consider H. Res. 374, which reaffirms the United States' important economic and security partnership with Singapore. I would like to recognize and welcome the attendance of Mr. Denny Heck of Washington. Mr. Heck, along with Mr. Bradley Byrne of Alabama, introduced this resolution and are the co-chairs of the Congressional Singapore Caucus.

Since the Republic of Singapore gained independence in 1965, this city-state has been a critical regional partner of the United States. The United States-Singapore economic relationship has been vibrant, especially since the U.S.-Singapore Free Trade Agreement was signed in 2004, the first bilateral trade agreement between the United States and an Asian country.

In 2014, Singapore was the United States' 18th largest trading partner, and we are pleased that Singapore is part of the 12-nation Trans-Pacific Partnership Agreement. The United States welcomes it broadening military partnership with Singapore based on the 1990 memorandum of understanding for a continued security presence and the 2015 defense cooperation agreement. This resolution also underscores Singapore's commitment to peaceful resolution of disputes, such as those in the South China Sea. As the United States works to implement the rebalance to Asia, Singapore will undoubtedly play an incredibly important partner in that process.

Given the storied history of the United States-Singapore relationship, it is important to recognize this relationship, especially on the 50th anniversary of bilateral diplomatic relations.

I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute that reflects additional U.S.-Singapore cooperative efforts. In the face of a deteriorating security environment in Asia-Pacific, reaffirming this partnership is critical. This resolution is an important part of this affirmation. I encourage my colleagues to support the measure.

These measures will be considered en bloc, and I urge the subcommittee's support for all three measures.
I now recognize the ranking member for his comment on today’s procedures.

Mr. SHERMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you for the bipartisan approach you are taking.

There are two, I think, noncontroversial—completely noncontroversial—bills. The first deals with Mongolia. I will, of course, support the bill and your amendment to it as well. Democracy has been thriving in Mongolia for 25 years. This bill recognizes the 25th anniversary of that democracy, and recommends the U.S. Government expand academic, cultural, and other people-to-people partnerships between Mongolia and the United States. It advocates and urges Mongolia to further develop democratic institutions, promote transparency, accountability, and community engagement. This is a country with a truly amazing history, and I join you in supporting the bill.

The other noncontroversial bill deals with Singapore. I commend Mr. Heck for being here and for offering this resolution. Singapore was established in its independence 50 years ago. The country’s history began in a unique way, being expelled from Malaysia in August 1965. After that separation, the fledgling nation had to become self-sufficient and faced problems, including mass unemployment, housing shortages, lack of land, and a lack of virtually all natural resources. Not only does this resolution commemorate the 50th anniversary of Singapore’s independence, but it highlights the strong bilateral cooperation between the United States and Singapore.

And I might add that Singapore is one of the very few countries in Asia where we have a trade surplus, and I look forward to looking at that trade relationship and seeing if we can replicate it with others in Asia.

Turning to the third resolution dealing with the Falun Gong, China’s human rights record is abysmal. Its treatment of religion and those who wish to practice religion is abysmal. It appears that Beijing simply fears anything it does not control. If they were providing open government in which all could participate, they would have far less to fear. We should specifically condemn China’s treatment of Falun Gong members, who have faced perhaps more discrimination and more retribution and more mistreatment than any other religion in China; though, there are many others that could argue that they, too, are subject to that abuse.

But there are parts of this resolution that do give me pause. In particular, the second full “whereas” clause on page 3 of the amendment in the nature of a substitute, which says: “Whereas researcher and journalist Ethan Gutmann estimates that approximately 65,000 Falun Gong adherents”—and this is a strange phrase—“may have been”—and then it goes on to say—“killed for their organs from 2000 to 2008.” I can’t find anyone in the human rights community, any of the established human rights organizations, to lend their credibility to this as even a reasonable estimate.

It also gives me pause to say that a researcher determines that a certain number may have been killed. The chairman points out that he believes that people’s organs were harvested when they were alive. This clause talks about them being killed. I think this resolution would be preferable if it simply deleted this “whereas” clause, or—and I may offer this as an amendment in the full committee; I will not offer an amendment here—if we said: Okay, it is indeed true that Ethan Gutmann has this estimate, but others concerned with human rights, those who are focused on human rights in Asia and in China, do not subscribe to that estimate.

Either way, I think that this resolution can be improved. And it is factually true that Ethan Gutmann does put out this estimate. But when you cite the estimate in a “whereas” clause in a resolution, you are not only making a statement of fact; you are citing it and giving it credibility. And I think that at a maximum, we should delete this. As a minimum, we should qualify it by indicating that others who are very concerned with human rights in China don’t embrace this. Again, that would be something for the full committee and not the subcommittee.

And I will yield to the chairman.

Mr. SALMON. I am not particularly married to that “whereas” clause, and if that is something that is causing the gentleman some concern, I would entertain a motion for that clause being stricken or modified.

Mr. SHERMAN. I will make that motion. I will make the motion that we simply delete that “whereas” clause beginning with the word “whereas” and ending with the word “targeted” as it appears as the second full “whereas” clause on page 3 of the Connolly amendment in the nature of a substitute. That is my motion.

[The information referred to follows:]

Amendment to the Amendment in the Nature of the Substitute to H. Res. 343 offered by Mr. Sherman of California

On Page 3, strike the second full Whereas clause, which follows:

Whereas researcher and journalist Ethan Gutmann estimates that approximately 65,000 Falun Gong adherents may have been killed for their organs from 2000 to 2008, and that a number of other religious and ethnic minorities may also have been targeted;

Mr. SALMON. And I would be very, very supportive of that.

Without objection, then—if there is no objection on the panel, then I am going to go ahead and strike that.

Without objection, so ordered.

Okay.

Anything else?

Mr. SHERMAN. That is it.

Mr. SALMON. We aim to please.

Mr. SHERMAN. I commend Mr. Heck.

Mr. SALMON. We did.

Mr. SHERMAN. But we didn’t do it enough. You can never do it enough.
Mr. SALMON. We could make it into a song.

No, I am very, very pleased that you are here. And trying to observe the rules of the committee as far as speaking, but, Mr. Heck, this wouldn’t have come to the floor, this Singapore resolution, without your great work, and we very, very much appreciate it, and thanks for being here today.

Mr. Rohrabacher.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Thank you very much.

And I rise in support of these three pieces of legislation. First and foremost, let us remember that Mongolia, the people there have been courageous in their implementation of an entirely new economic system at a time when they are in a relatively isolated area of the world. There was great hardship there in Mongolia while they were transitioning out of the Soviet economy. And it is much to the credit of the people of Mongolia that they were able to stick it out, and they actually have maintained a Democratic government and were able to move forward and now I think are exemplary in the way they have conducted their own society, again, starting way behind the curve 25 years ago.

Next is Singapore, and let us note this about Singapore, Singapore, too, also started with much of a handicap. If you take a look at Singapore the people of Singapore had less land, fewer resources, and more people than China, and so you have what appears to be a country with a lot of liabilities and not many assets. But they have turned that country—in a 50-year period, Singapore has become exemplary to the world of a society that works.

And it was my honor to meet President Lee in Singapore, the first President Lee. I haven’t met his son yet, but President Lee was a dramatic leader who made that country work, as I say, with few resources, lots of people. Unlike China, they never, for example, went to a one-child policy, yet they established a country in which, because of the prosperity level of their people, you had basically a stable population without having to have the draconian and antifreedom policies that we saw in China, which the Chinese have just recently backed off on.

Lastly, about our friends in the Falun Gong and China, talking about China, the Falun Gong, while I agree with Brad, with my good friend, Mr. Sherman, that, yes, maybe there isn’t an exact reading on this, you can’t get an exact reading from a dictatorship, from a group of gangsters. You cannot get an exact reading on how many people they have murdered in order to sell their body parts.

Yeah, the only way we could express it is “may,” but we can say, for the record—and I put it on the record now—there have been many investigations into this, especially by parliamentarians from Canada, who I have spoken to personally, who went into China, documented how many prisoners, Falun Gong prisoners, were taken to certain prisons and how many didn’t come out. And the fact that those very same prisons were the prisons in which body parts were being sold to people from the West and other places. So although, yeah, you can’t say, “No, there may be body parts being sold there,” because they are not going to show you this, but when you have a dictatorship, this is just about as proven as it gets.

The Falun Gong, by the way, are people who have no violent threat to anybody. Falun Gong are people who believe in meditation and yoga and are peaceful people. The fact that the Chinese Communist leadership still feels compelled to murder the Falun Gong to try to destroy it as an option for the Chinese people speaks a lot about the nature of the Chinese regime today. It is an evil regime that continues to put people in jail, murder them, and sell their body parts because they are part of a pacifist organization.

So all of this I think we should make sure we heed in these three pieces of legislation.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for your leadership.

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Chabot, did you have an opening statement?

Mr. CHABOT. Yes, it is very brief, Mr. Chairman. I want to thank you, and I want to commend you and the ranking member for bringing all three of these bills before the committee today.

And I will speak just briefly on H. Res. 343, a bill that expresses concern, as my colleague indicated, in regards to China’s state-sanctioned harvesting of organs from prisoners, particularly members of the Falun Gong and other religious and ethnic minorities. And I know I have met with many Falun Gong practitioners from my district in past years who have brought me all kinds of horrific stories about what they either experienced themselves in China or others that they know of or relatives that are still there. And it is unbelievable that this happens in the 21st century.

I brought similar legislation before this committee when I was chair, and I am pleased to see that the subcommittee is raising awareness of the issue by bringing this matter before the subcommittee again. China’s organ harvesting, it is deplorable, and it is sad to me to think, again, that in 2016 this heinous practice is still occurring. China continues to deny that organs are taken from prisoners without consent, but there is still no independent verification of a state-sponsored organ transplant system. And it is our duty as the leader of the free world to continue to call on China to end this disgraceful barbarism.

And I yield back.

Mr. SALMON. I thank the gentleman.

Do any other members on the panel seek any recognition for opening statements?

If not, then the question occurs on the adopting the items, as amended, en bloc.

All those in favor, say aye.

Those opposed, say no.

In the opinion of the Chair, the ayes have it, and the en bloc items are approved.

Without objection, H. Res. 339, H. Res. 343, and H. Res. 374, as amended, will be reported favorably to the full committee. And the staff is directed to make any technical and conforming changes.

I would like to thank all members and staff for the assistance and cooperation that went into today’s markup, and I would like now to move into the hearing side of the—I am sorry. I will adjourn the markup, and I will go ahead and convene the next meaning, which is a hearing dealing with human rights in China, and I will allow the panelists time to take the dais.

[Whereupon, at 2:44 p.m., the subcommittee was adjourned.]
