U.S. SENATE,
PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS,
OF THE COMMITTEE ON HOMELAND SECURITY AND GOVERNMENTAL AFFAIRS,
Washington, DC.

The Subcommittee met, pursuant to notice, at 10 a.m., in room SD-342, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Hon. Rob Portman, Chairman of the Subcommittee, presiding.

Present: Senators Portman, Lankford, Johnson, Carper, Heitkamp, Peters, Hassan, and McCaskill.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR PORTMAN¹

Senator PORTMAN. Good morning, everyone. We are here today because this Subcommittee is continuing to conduct oversight into an issue we have been following actually for more than 3 years now, going back to 2015. We have an interest in ensuring that unaccompanied minors are protected from human trafficking and other forms of abuse.

We also have an interest in ensuring that these children appear at their immigration court proceedings, and we care about upholding the integrity of our immigration system.

Let me begin by saying I am concerned that some in the Administration and some here in Congress misunderstand the scope and purpose of our 3-year investigation and the report we are discussing in this hearing.

I would think that every single member of this panel agrees that our broader immigration system is broken. Of course, I am not suggesting we all agree on the solutions. The point is that is not what this investigation and this report are about.

In particular, some believe we should be addressing the push factors that drive people to come to our borders; in particular, the conditions in the Northern Triangle countries of Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras. These are legitimate and very difficult issues, and I know the Ranking Member has been very involved in these policies, as I have been and others have been, but that is not the focus here today. That is not what we are here about.

We are focused on the very narrow issue of what happens to children who have already have come into our country and who have been apprehended by our government. We want to ensure they are treated appropriately and that they make it to their immigration court proceedings. Unfortunately, we have seen examples of children placed with sponsors being trafficked, and right now, the best information we have is that about 50 percent of these children do not show up for their immigration court proceedings.

This is not a partisan issue, and let us face it. There is plenty of blame to go around.

The specific, tragic occurrence of children being placed with human traffickers that initiated this Subcommittee's investigation happened under the Obama Administration. This is a systemic problem that has continued under the Trump administration. We are interested in solving this problem. We want to ensure these kids get proper care, but also expedite the enforcement of these cases in a timely and responsible way. This is our chance to get this right.

Since 2012, more than 200,000 children without legal status have crossed our borders without a parent or guardian. The law calls these children "unaccompanied alien children" (UACs). These children frequently face significant trauma on their way here, and once they are here, as one Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) official recently characterized it, they are "in a legal no-man's land."

These children are typically apprehended by U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) of the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). Then, within 72 hours, under law, DHS transfers them to an HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) facility. At this point, HHS becomes responsible for these children's care.

HHS typically places these children with sponsors, which can be their parents or other family members, but also sometimes other, unrelated adults.

In 2015, I learned that HHS had placed eight of these children with human traffickers. Those traffickers then put those children, all minors, into a forced labor situation on an egg farm in my home State in Marion, Ohio. The traffickers threatened the children and their families with violence and death. The children worked for 10 to 12 hours a day as they lived in squalor.

The Subcommittee investigated, and we released a comprehensive report in 2016 finding that HHS failed to do basic background checks on the traffickers who came forward to sponsor these children.

We also found that no government agency claimed any responsibility for these children once the government placed them with sponsors, even sponsors who are not the children's parents or legal guardians. To this day, that remains the case, even though we believe the law gives HHS continuing responsibility, especially if they are not placed with a parent or legal guardian.

HHS and DHS promised to do better. They did improve their background check process, and I commend them for that. They still have not taken responsibility for the welfare of these children post-release.

In February 2016, after our hearing and calls from this Subcommittee for better coordination between the agencies, DHS and HHS entered into a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA). They agreed to create a specific Joint Concept of Operations (JCO), to document and improve their processes related to unaccompanied children. As part of the Memorandum of Agreement, they committed to completing that JCO no later than February 22, 2017.

They missed that deadline. Not by a week, not by a month, but by more than a year. We held another hearing, and after being pressed on why the JCO was still unfinished, the Departments promised to complete it by July 30, 2018, a few weeks ago. They did finish it on July 31, 17 months later than they had committed to do so.

Unfortunately, the JCO only reiterates on paper the insufficient policies that have been in place for years through previous Administrations. It is important to put processes on paper so that the left hand knows what the right hand is doing, and I am glad they did that. The JCO largely reiterates the status quo and does little to improve unaccompanied children's safety and ensure UACs show up to their immigration court proceedings.

That said, we think it is important that the public see the JCO to understand it for themselves. We are working with the Departments to get a version of the JCO that is appropriate to release, and we are waiting for final sign-off.

I am not prepared to release it unless the Administration agrees that it is appropriate to release it.

I am disappointed the Departments did not take the opportunity in this JCO to address some of the problems we have all observed for years and I think are widely acknowledged. Unaccompanied children are still crossing our borders. HHS is still placing them with sponsors and losing track of them.

At our last hearing in April, HHS testified that they had started calling sponsors 30 days after placement to check on the children. I think that is good that they are making these calls, which started in 2015 apparently. It is troubling that for the 3-month time period from October to December 2017 that HHS testified about, they said they "could not ascertain with certainty" the whereabouts of 1,475 children, and that 28 children had run away from their sponsors. They argue they have no responsibility to know where those children are. Remember, that is just one 3-month period.

We need an update on those children today, how are those calls going, what are the results, as well as determining going forward what are we going to do about the information we get from those calls.

Yesterday, Senator Carper and I released a report¹ on the problems the Subcommittee has identified with the UAC program. It details the lack of progress from HHS and DHS in improving programs designed to care for these children, ensure their safety, and ensure they appear at their immigration court proceedings.

Currently, 80,266 UAC cases are pending before the immigration courts. More than 8,000 of them have been pending for more than 3 years. The longer these children wait, the less likely they are to appear at their court proceedings. Today, 53 percent of unaccompanied children never show up for their court proceedings, an increase of about 12 percent since 2016.

¹The report referenced by Senator Portman appears in the Appendix on page 72.

I know this is a difficult situation, and the gentlemen who are before us today from the Administration are faced with a very difficult task. It is not easy, but these Federal agencies have failed to address most of the recommendations for improving the UAC program offered by this Subcommittee and the Government Accountability Office (GAO). We need to know why.

We have a serious problem on our hands. These children are at risk for trafficking and abuse. When these children do not appear for their hearings, they lose their chance to argue for immigration relief, and many remain in this country illegally, which undermines our Nation's immigration laws.

In those cases, the judge usually enters an in absentia removal order. We may hear about that today. Most of these children are never removed. The best number we have is that about 3 percent of UACs are actually deported. The current situation is not good for these children or good for our immigration system.

The Subcommittee's report compiles our findings based on 2½ years of oversight. I urge you to read it. It addresses a wide range of issues, from problems with the JCO to the backlog of immigration court cases.

As I said earlier, there is plenty of blame to go around. I am a lot more interested in solving this problem than making this into a partisan issue. I hope we will not do that today because this is our chance to get this right.

We are working on legislation, and I wanted to be sure we had this hearing first so that we could hear from experts from the Administration as we are working on that bipartisan legislation.

I appreciate Senator Carper working closely with me on this issue. I look forward to talking with our witnesses today about how we can improve this system to ensure these children's safety and ensure the integrity of our immigration system. Senator Carper.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR CARPER¹

Senator CARPER. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Let me begin by welcoming our witnesses today, and I want to thank our Chairman for holding this hearing. I want to thank our staffs. They worked very hard with GAO. We worked with a bunch of folks that you work with too in an effort to find the solutions to what are some of the most troubling problems created by our broken immigration system.

You are going to hear almost an echo over here when I give my opening statement. We have worked very closely on these issues and share a lot of the same views on these issues.

This is the third Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation (PSI) hearing on this subject. I am pleased that the two of us and our staffs were able to come to some consensus on how to do better by the vulnerable children we are going to be discussing here today.

These children come to our country primarily from Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador, as we know, to escape extreme poverty and, in many cases, unspeakable violence at home, some of which I have witnessed and what we have witnessed ourselves. In too many cases, as this Subcommittee has repeatedly highlighted, we are failing in our responsibility to protect and properly care for those kids.

A 2008 law enacted under former President George W. Bush clearly places children who arrive at our borders or ports of entry (POEs) without a parent or guardian under the care and custody of the Department of Health and Human Services. In carrying out its responsibilities under this law, HHS must place these children in safe homes, offer them mental care and other services as they might need, and ensure that they are participating in immigration court proceedings.

But despite the best efforts of this Subcommittee, GAO, and others, including those at this table, to diagnose problems and recommend solutions that would lead to still better care for migrant children, too many of them are still falling through the cracks.

In January 2016, PSI held a hearing examining how Health and Human Services had placed eight Central American children with sponsors in Ohio who turned out to be human traffickers. Our Chairman has already talked about this. As someone who has spent a number of years in Ohio, this is one that comes close to home for me as well.

But since then, HHS and the Department of Homeland Security have taken steps that should make it less likely that children might wind up exploited like those in Ohio were.

For example, HHS policy now calls for more background checks of sponsors while offering more services for children who might need help adjusting to their new homes.

The Department also now requires that all children and their sponsors be contacted at least once within the 30-day placement so that problems can be detected and referred to local authorities. Those are positive steps, but the children we are placing in communities across the country are still at great risk of abuse and neglect.

When we last held a hearing on this issue in April, we heard reports of children being placed in homes with people they do not know who expect them to work to help with living expenses. We heard about children, sometimes due to a need to send money home or pay debts to smugglers, working sometimes all night and unable to stay awake at school the next day. To top things off, HHS informed us in their testimony at the time that they had actually lost track of about 1,500 children who were placed in their care. Dozens more ran away from home or were found to have moved in with someone not vetted by HHS at all.

Since that hearing, the Department of Homeland Security and HHS have finally completed their work on a document called a "Joint Concept of Operations" that details each Department's role and responsibilities in handling and providing care for unaccompanied children. The issuance of this document, due I believe about a year and a half ago, is welcome and it is appreciate. As helpful as it is to finally review it, the document fails to solve, as best I can tell, any of the major problems this Subcommittee has highlighted since 2015, and that the HHS Office of Inspector General (OIG) warned us about it a decade ago.

Let me be clear. A decade is far too long to wait to make sure that kids like these in our care are safe. To my surprise, actually to my bewilderment, HHS still does not acknowledge its role in en-sureing the well-being of unaccompanied migrant children, despite what I see as a clear mandate from the Congress. Unfortunately, as they prepared for today's hearing, PSI staff members were repeatedly told by HHS that the Department was still studying the relevant statutes and consulting its Office of General Counsel (OGC) on what more it can do. Still studying. You have to be kidding. Still studying after almost a decade.

At the same time, based on fiscal year (FY) 2017 numbers, only about 30 percent of children placed with sponsors are receiving follow up care, and HHS only performs home studies in about, I think, 7 percent of cases. As we have discovered, this lack of attention from HHS or any other agency allows children to, in many cases, just disappear.

Based on the latest data provided by the Department of Justice (DOJ), the majority of unaccompanied migrant children—in fact, just over half—wind up not showing up at all in immigration court at some point, and when they do not show up for court, they could be automatically ordered removed to their home country and lose their chance to make their case for asylum.

Unfortunately, rather than offering solutions to these problems and proposing better ways to track and care for unaccompanied children, this Administration has decided in recent months to take steps that are almost certain to make these problems worse.

The Administration's decision this spring to separate parents from their children at our borders created some 2,500 new unaccompanied children for HHS to care for. A number of those children have since been reunited with their families, but HHS was forced to release 425 of them or so to non-parental sponsors. Another 560 remain in care of HHS.

There are also concerns that ICE could exploit an information-sharing agreement that DHS has struck with HHS not to ensure that the homes children are placed in are safe, but rather to conduct enforcement actions against sponsors. I find this possibility deeply troubling.

In my State, the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) activity is run out of the agency's Philadelphia field office. According to reports this spring in the Philadelphia Inquirer, Philadelphia-based ICE agents appear to be the most aggressive in the country, going out of their way to target migrants in the region who have no criminal record and who have families and deep ties to their communities. If ICE agents in Philadelphia or elsewhere are free to target sponsors this aggressively, I am concerned that fewer will step forward to serve as sponsors, and HHS will end up with even more unaccompanied children on its hands.

In the absence of leadership from the Administration, I believe Congress must now come forward with legislation that would ensure we are living up to our most basic responsibilities to the vulnerable children coming to us for help.

I am pleased, Mr. Chairman, that our staffs have begun working on legislation that seeks to make it crystal-clear what HHS's responsibilities are in this area. It is imperative that we make real progress—real progress—in the coming days so that we can introduce legislation that will lead to better outcomes for these children and more certainty that they are safe from human trafficking, safe from abuse, safe from neglect during whatever time they spend in this country of ours.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, let me just add that, as necessary as our draft legislation is, it only solves part of the problem. We will not make real progress in stemming the tide of migration at our Southern Border and keeping migrant children out of harm's way unless we make a long-term commitment to the neighbors in Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador to help address the poverty, crime, and hopelessness that plagues those countries.

Like most of my colleagues on this Committee, I visited all three countries and North America multiple times over the years. I have met with their leaders and seen on the ground how the communities are struggling to deal with challenges that would be unimaginable to most Americans. A good number of those challenges are fueled by our addiction to drugs, and our past interventions in their regional conflicts. As long as these challenges go unaddressed, children and other vulnerable Central Americans will continue to make the dangerous trip across Mexico to our Southern Border.

A sustained commitment from us, from our partners in the region, and from the governments in the Northern Triangle to improve the lives of the citizens of Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador is the smart way—and I think the right way—to address the root causes of migration that we see in our country.

My thanks, Mr. Chairman, to you, to our staffs for our collective efforts in these issues, a special thanks to GAO, and we look forward to hearing from each of you today.

Thank you.

Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Senator Carper.

Chairman JOHNSON has asked to submit something for the record.¹ He has another hearing he has to go to. I offer the same thing to our other colleagues here, if they are interested.

Chairman JOHNSON.

OPENING STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN JOHNSON

Chairman JOHNSON. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I will be pretty brief.

First of all, I really want to thank you and Senator Carper for working on this. This is a huge problem. It is one that has to be addressed, and you are laying out the reality of the situation. I have not read the entire report word for word, but what I have looked at, it is a very thorough report. I commend you and your staff for doing that.

The full Committee obviously has been fully engaged in border security and fixing our broken legal immigration system. I did want to talk about the overall broader problem. This is a subset of the problem, but this is not the root cause.

As Senator Carper was talking about, there is a larger problem here, and from my standpoint, a better solution would be to reduce, if not stop, the flow, as you mentioned of 212,000 unaccompanied children coming in from Central America and subjecting themselves to real dangers.

¹The information submitted by Senator JOHNSON appears in the Appendix on page 313.

I would hope you agree with me, as you have talked to members of the Administration, both the Obama Administration and Trump administration, that are dealing with this issue. These are people with compassion. We are a very compassionate nation. I truly believe that the people I am talking to, whether it is at the Secretary level, the deputies, the commissioners, or the directors. The top priority is the safety of these children. I believe that in my heart.

We have real problems. The reinterpretation of the Flores decision is forcing both Administrations' hands. The Obama Administration was opposed to that decision because it forced catch-and-release, which is not good, and we do not have the time to verify if this really is the father, is this really the parent of this child. We have created, with these legal precedents—we have created some problems that are very difficult for the people that we task solving these problems to deal with.

What I would like to introduce into the record is a Judicial Watch report obtained by a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request, Significant Incident Reports that were obtained from May 1, 2014, through November 12, 2014. They have made public the 688 major Significant Incident Reports (SIRs).

These are reports, and what I am going to read to you—and it is hard to read, but this is what is happening on the journey. You are talking about, the enslavement of eight individuals in Ohio at that egg farm, totally unacceptable, but on the way, the conditions are horrific.

I apologize for this, but I think people need to understand what the real reality is of what you are trying to deal with here.

Day of the incident, June 1, 2014. The youth reported she was raped by four different men 2 years ago on a failed attempt to enter the United States.

Incident report from June 2014. During her journey from El Salvador to Mexico, on day one, her guide's boss came to the warehouse and had two men hold her hands back while he raped her. Client states she was raped three times that day by the guy's boss and was told that she was his "mujer," which means woman.

August 22, 2014. It was during her second journey that she was sexually assaulted and raped by the "coyote" guide that was escorting her and her sister and several other immigrants. She indicated that throughout her journey, she was told about his life story and how his 6-year-old daughter was raped and murdered by a gang. He told her he was going to do the same thing to her, telling things as he was going to tie her up, put a cover on her mouth, and rape her. One night during the journey, he entered her hotel room and raped her.

Incident report from August 25, 2014. She disclosed being held captive for 15 days during her journey to the United States by a coyote's brother. After being sexually abused by the coyote's boss, she was transferred to an abandoned home with four other girls, where she was sold to various men on a daily basis. She reports being sexually abused and bitten for 15 straight days.

Report from September 17, 2014. She reports she was tied down and beaten by cartel members daily. She stated that—withheld name—held her at gunpoint and raped her in front of other immigrant females.

Final incident report, October 28, 2014. In Veracruz, Mexico, she was raped by the owner of a hotel she and her cousins were staying at.

These are all individual cases here. Amnesty International estimated in 2010, 60 percent of young women making that journey are raped.

From Fusion, 2014, they estimate about 80 percent of individuals, of women are raped on that journey.

The solution here, the problem is the people that we are incentivizing to come to this country, and the conditions are horrific on that journey.

I would just like to enter that in the record, and thank you for the time.

Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Others like to enter any opening statements? Senator McCaskill.

Senator McCASKILL. No, thanks.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator Heitkamp.

Senator HEITKAMP. No, thanks.

Senator PORTMAN. OK.

Alright. We will have the opportunity to have a further dialogue later, and given the fact that we have a number of Members here, I will make a very short statement after the witnesses and then turn it over to you all and then will be here for the entire hearing.

Let us go ahead and call our panel of witnesses for this morning's hearing.

First, we have Richard Hudson. He is the Acting Chief of the Law Enforcement Operations of the U.S. Border Patrol of U.S. Customs and Border Protection at the Department of Homeland Security.

Second, we have Robert Guadian. He is the Acting Deputy Assistant Director for Field Operations West of the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement at the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

Third, we have Commander Jonathan White, who serves with the U.S. Public Health Service Commissioned Corps and is the Federal Health Coordinating Official for the 2018 UAC Reunification Effort at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Finally, we have James McHenry, who is Director of the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR) at the U.S. Department of Justice.

I appreciate all of you being here today, appreciate your service, and we look forward to hearing your testimony.

The rules of this Subcommittee require that all witnesses be sworn in. At this time, I would ask you to please stand and raise your right hand.

Do you swear that the testimony you are about to give before the Subcommittee will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing by the truth, so help you, God?

Mr. HUDSON. I do.

Mr. GUADIAN. I do.

Mr. WHITE. I do.

Mr. MCHENRY. I do.

Thank you.

Let the record reflect that the witnesses all answered in the affirmative. We will be using a timing system today. All of your written testimony will be printed in the record in its entirety, and we would ask you to try to limit your oral testimony to 5 minutes. We will have a chance to have a dialogue once your testimony is completed.

Mr. Hudson, we will hear from you first.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD M. HUDSON,¹ ACTING CHIEF, LAW ENFORCEMENT OPERATIONS DIRECTORATE, U.S. BORDER PATROL, U.S. CUSTOMS AND BORDER PROTECTION, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. HUDSON. Thank you, Chairman.

Chairman Portman, Ranking Member Carper, and distinguished Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for the opportunity to appear before you today on behalf of U.S. Customs and Border Protection.

I am proud to have served the U.S. Border Patrol and the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) for just short of 24 years, and I look forward to sharing my experience with you today.

Border Patrol's role in the immigration process is to apprehend, process, and transfer individuals who illegally cross our borders between the ports of entry. Our colleagues and the CB Office of Field Operations (OFO) perform similar processing roles for those who are determined to be inadmissible at ports of entry, while at the same time facilitating the legitimate trade and travel that moves through the ports each day.

Today, I would like to discuss the processing of unaccompanied alien children, and how this role interacts with our partners represented today.

Between October 1, 2017, and July 31, 2018, more than 41,000 UACs have been apprehended by the U.S. Border Patrol. An additional 7,000 have been deemed inadmissible at our ports of entry.

Since 2014, when we saw the first surge of UACs, CBP has encountered nearly 250,000 UACs along the Southwest Border. These children arrive at our borders after a difficult and dangerous journey, and many have been subjected to abuse at the hands of human traffickers, criminals, and opportunists.

The men and women of CBP treat each of these children with the utmost professionalism and compassion and work to ensure their welfare while they are in our custody.

Upon encountering a child at the border, either at or between the ports of entry, CBP officers and U.S. Border Patrol agents complete initial processing of the child at short-term holding facilities. These are not long-term detention facilities like those operated by our partners at ICE and HHS. They are designed to hold individuals for less than 72 hours.

However, our facilities meet the standards of the CBP Transport, Escort, Detention, and Search (TEDS) policy, and CBP complies with the legal requirements of the Flores Settlement Agreement.

¹The joint prepared statement of Mr. Hudson and Mr. Guadian appears in the Appendix on page 54.

During processing, a U.S. BP agent or CBP officer will interview each child as well as any adults accompanying the child to determine familial relationships. They also review available documentation and conduct electronic records check to determine such familial relationships.

When a child lacks lawful immigration status in the United States and it is determined the child is not accompanied by a parent or legal guardian or if the parent or legal guardian is transferred to a criminal detention setting due to criminal charges, the child is designated a UAC.

Pursuant to the requirements of the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA), the child will be transferred to the care of the Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Refugee Resettlement. If during processing risk factors indicate that a UAC is a potential victim of human trafficking, CBP immediately notifies U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Homeland Security Investigations (HSI). If a U.S. BP agent or CBP officer suspects that any member of the group in which the UAC was traveling is involved or complicit in the trafficking act, they will generally detain all individuals for further processing and interviewing by HSI.

The child is then referred to HHS ORR by way of a separate notification via email or telephone call to a case officer.

At every phase, CBP processes all UACs in accordance with applicable laws, regulations, court orders, and policies. We are committed to enforcing the law fairly and consistently, but above all else, we are committed to the welfare of the people we encounter, particularly vulnerable children.

We will continue to safely and efficiently process and transfer all UACs from CBP custody to HHS ORR.

I am honored to represent the men and women who dedicate their lives in support of the Border Patrol's mission and protect our great Nation. They have an important and difficult job, but one they execute with professionalism, integrity, and compassion.

Thank you for the opportunity to testify today, and I look forward to answering your questions. Thank you.

Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Chief Hudson. Mr. Guadian.

TESTIMONY OF ROBERT GUADIAN,¹ ACTING DEPUTY ASSISTANT DIRECTOR FOR FIELD OPERATIONS WEST, U.S. IMMIGRATION AND CUSTOMS ENFORCEMENT, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. GUADIAN. Chairman Portman, Ranking Member Carper, and distinguished Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for this opportunity to appear before you today to discuss the Department of Homeland Security's critical mission to protect the homeland and ensure the integrity of our Nation's immigration system through the enforcement of our Country's immigration laws, which includes its role in protecting unaccompanied alien children from human trafficking and abuse.

¹The joint prepared statement of Mr. Guadian and Mr. Hudson appears in the Appendix on page 54.

DHS is responsible for the protection and well-being of these children for the short time they are in the physical custody of DHS. From the time they first come into contact with U.S. immigration authorities until they are transferred to the care of the Department of Health and Human Services, despite the short time these children are in DHS custody, this is a responsibility we take very seriously, and we welcome the opportunity to discuss our role in this process today.

Typically, unaccompanied alien children are first encountered when presenting themselves to U.S. Customs and Border Protection at a port of entry or when apprehended by U.S. Border Patrol when attempting to enter the United States between POEs. However, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement may also apprehend UACs in the interior of the United States during immigration enforcement actions.

Upon encounter, the apprehending agency must determine whether a child meets the statutory definition of unaccompanied alien child. A UAC is defined by statute as a child who: A, has no lawful immigration status in the United States; B, has not attained 18 years of age; and C, with respect to whom there is no parent or legal guardian in the United States or no parent or legal guardian in the United States is available to provide care and physical custody.

Designation of a child as a UAC, which can change over time, depending on the circumstances of a particular minor's case, does not provide lawful immigration status. However, UACs are afforded certain procedural safeguards with respect to asylum processing that are not available to other aliens, including other minors who are accompanied by a parent or guardian.

Absent exceptional circumstances, once a determination is made that the child is indeed a UAC, DHS is then required by law to physically transfer the child to Department of Health and Human Services, Office of Refugee Resettlement Care within 72 hours.

During the brief period UACs are in DHS custody, pending transfer to HHS, they are placed into a separate holding area apart from adult detainees for their safety.

Throughout the process, DHS takes great care to ensure UACs are treated appropriately and humanely and are safe from trafficking and abuse. This includes, among other things, screening UACs for indicators of trafficking and/or abuse, identifying gang affiliation or criminal activity, and working with our partners in HHS to ensure appropriate care and protection.

DHS also facilitates timely placement decisions with HHS, which allows for expeditious custody transfer and limits time spent in DHS custody.

On February 19, 2016, DHS and HHS signed a memorandum of agreement regarding the care, custody, and transfer of UACs between our respective Departments to continue to address the needs of UACs. DHS and HHS signed another MOA on April 13, 2018, to address information exchanges between these Departments to enhance cooperation and to put in place additional safeguards, including the fingerprinting by ORR of all potential sponsors and adult household members. ICE then uses fingerprints provided by ORR to complete a check for criminal activity to ensure ORR has as much information as possible when determining suitability of sponsors, and that the UAC will not be placed in a dangerous situation or fall victim to trafficking.

To further ensure that UACs are protected from trafficking and abuse and pursuant to the 2016 MOA, DHS and HHS have also completed and shared with the Subcommittee a Joint Concept of Operation, which memorializes the existing processes and procedures in areas where the two Departments have joint responsibility. This important document lays out the responsibilities of each Department and further delineates these responsibilities to the components and agencies within DHS and HHS.

DHS cares deeply about UACs in its custody, takes seriously its responsibility to protect them from human smuggling, trafficking, and other criminal actions, and is committed to working with our partners in HHS to ensure that UACs are protected from trafficking and abuse.

Thank you and I welcome your questions.

Senator PORTMAN. Commander White, we will hear from you now.

TESTIMONY OF COMMANDER JONATHAN D. WHITE,¹ U.S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE COMMISSIONED CORPS, FEDERAL HEALTH COORDINATING OFFICIAL FOR THE 2018 UAC REUNIFICATION EFFORT, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Mr. WHITE. Good morning. Chairman Portman, Ranking Member Carper, I would like to thank all of you for the opportunity to appear before this Subcommittee on behalf of the Department of Health and Human Services. I am Jonathan White. I am a career officer in the U.S. Public Health Service Commissioned Corps. I have served HHS in three Administrations. I am presently assigned to the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response (ASPR) and have previously served as the Deputy Director of the Office of Refugee Resettlement over the Unaccompanied Alien Children's Program. I am here to provide an update on an interagency effort that HHS expects will have a positive impact on the work of the UAC program.

HHS has a process for placing UACs with parents or other sponsors that is designed to fully comply with the 1997 Flores Settlement Agreement, the Homeland Security Act (HSA) of 2002, and the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, and to ensure the care and safety of UACs who are referred to ORR.

The memorandum of agreement with the Department of Homeland Security that was signed to become effective on June 7, 2018 is an enhancement to HHS policy to require fingerprint background checks from parents or other sponsors and other adults who live in the household. The MOA improves the process for the two Departments to share information about UACs at the time of referral from ICE or CPB to ORR while the children are in the care and custody of ORR and upon release from ORR care and custody. DHS and HHS recognize special attention is required to ensure that the transfer, the placement, and the release of UACs occurs in a manner that is safe for the minor and the communities into which they are released.

The MOA sets forth a process by which DHS will provide HHS with information necessary to conduct suitability assessments for sponsors using appropriate Federal, State, and local law enforcement and immigration sources.

Specifically, ORR requires a background check of all potential sponsors, including parents and any adults who live in their household. Under the MOA, ORR will transmit those fingerprints to DHS to perform criminal and immigration status checks on ORR's behalf. DHS will then submit those results back to ORR.

The information sharing addressed in the MOA is consistent with the requirement of the TVPRA that the Secretaries of DHS and HHS develop policies and programs to ensure that unaccompanied alien children in the United States are protected from traffickers and other persons seeking to victimize or otherwise engage such children in criminal, harmful, or exploitative activity. In fact, the MOA provides a framework to implement the more specific mandate that upon request from the Secretary of HHS, the Secretary of DHS shall provide information necessary to conduct suitability assessments from appropriate Federal, State, and local law enforcement and immigration databases.

The MOA does not address all appropriate coordination between DHS and HHS on UAC matters, nor is that the intent of it.

The DHS-HHS MOA of February 2016 called for the establishment of a working group comprised of UAC subject-matter experts from both Departments to address operational matters for inclusion in a Joint Concept of Operations. On July 31 of this year, the agencies completed the JCO, and I would like to highlight for you some of the significant matters covered in the JCO.

The JCO provides field guidance and standardization of inter-agency policies, procedures, and guidelines related to the processing of UACs who are encountered by DHS, whose care is then transferred to HHS, after being placed in removal proceedings pursuant to Section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

The JCO does not take the place of agency policy regarding the processing of UACs, nor is it a substitute for legislative action, where required. Rather, it is an interagency agreement to standardize agency operational relations.

The JCO memorializes current practices for custody transfer and transportation, including the placement into and the discharge from ORR custody; immigration processing and influx matters; services requirements, such as medical evaluations and emergencies and the Flores minimum standards for HHS facilities; and the reporting of allegations of abuse.

Cooperation between DHS and HHS regarding the transport, processing, placement, care, and discharge of UACs is essential. Both Departments take their roles seriously and work closely with interagency and foreign counterparts on a daily basis to ensure the fulfillment both of DHS' mission to enforce Federal law and HHS' mission to provide care and release consistent with the best interest of the child.

The agencies expect the JCO to be a living document that will change as laws, policies, and procedures change. HHS believes it is a significant component in the growing array of tools the agencies use as we go forward to providing care and services to UACs.

I would like to thank the Senators for their continued interest in the Administration's efforts. We have had many productive and beneficial meetings discussing this with your staff and will continue to assist you in any way we can.

Thank you for this opportunity to update you on ORR's recent efforts in the UACs program and for your ongoing commitment to the safety and well-being of UACs.

I will be happy to answer any questions you may have. Thank you.

Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Commander White.

We will now hear from you, Mr. McHenry.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES R. MCHENRY III,¹ DIRECTOR, EXECUTIVE OFFICE FOR IMMIGRATION REVIEW, U.S. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Mr. MCHENRY. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, Ranking Member Carper, and other distinguished Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for the opportunity to speak with you today regarding the Department of Justice's role in efforts to protect unaccompanied alien children, from human trafficking and abuse. Stopping human trafficking and abuse is a top priority for the Department, and we welcome this opportunity to talk about the Department's efforts in ending this scourge, especially in the broader context of illegal immigration.

Before discussing UAC specifically, though, let me first provide information about the Department's anti-trafficking work in general, as the Department marshals numerous resources across many different components to combat human trafficking and abuse.

Earlier this year, the Attorney General (AG) convened a Human Trafficking Summit to emphasize the Department's strong commitment to fighting this menace and to discuss ways to build on the Department's successes in combating trafficking. In fiscal year 2017, the Department secured convictions against nearly 500 traffickers, and its prosecution efforts on this front continue unabated.

The Department's efforts to combat trafficking also extend beyond criminal prosecutions. For instance, it provides anti-trafficking training and technical assistance to Federal, State, and local law enforcement partners. The Department also works with trafficking victims to help ensure their rights are respected and to recover any restitution.

Further in fiscal year 2017, the Department invested more than $47 million in programming to combat human trafficking, with most funding supporting direct services to survivors.

The Department has also established policies to ensure that UACs in the United States are protected from traffickers and other individuals who may seek to harm them. For example, for aliens in immigration proceedings, employees of the Department's Executive Office for Immigration Review, follow established protocols, for referring cases of suspected child abuse or human trafficking.

Additionally, by regulation, immigration proceedings involving an abused alien child are closed to the public.

EOIR also administers the Legal Orientation Program for Custodians (LOPC) of UACs, in cooperation with the Department of Health and Human Services. The LOPC provides legal orientation services to UAC custodians, including information regarding a custodian's responsibility to ensure the child's appearance at all immigration proceedings and a custodian's responsibility to protect the child from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking.

In the immigration context, human trafficking often goes hand-in-hand with alien smuggling and other schemes to facilitate the improper entry of aliens into the United States, as both smugglers and traffickers seek to exploit weaknesses in border security and enforcement of the immigration laws.

Consequently, the Department prioritizes criminal enforcement of immigration laws passed by Congress. Further, it maintains no blanket exemption from criminal prosecution for individuals who violate those laws, including and especially smugglers and human traffickers.

Although the Department of Justice generally has no operational or logistical role in either the physical care or processing of aliens for removal from the United States, including UACs, it recognizes that UACs in immigration court proceedings are an issue of significant concern. There are over 80,000 pending UAC cases currently before EOIR, which is approximately 11 percent of its overall pending caseload. The median time between the filing of a notice to appear (NTA) in a UAC case and the first hearing is 161 days. More than 70 percent of pending UAC cases have been pending for over one year, and the median time to complete a UAC case is 465 days. Only about 9,600 UAC cases have been completed in immigration court through the first three quarters of this fiscal year, compared over 135,000 non-UAC cases.

Further, each month, approximately 580 UACs, or almost 20 a day, fail to attend their immigration proceedings, and the rate of UAC removal orders issued in absentia has risen significantly since fiscal year 2014. Approximately 6,000 to 7,000 UACs annually have failed to attend their immigration court hearings in recent years, and UACs are about twice as likely to fail to appear for immigration court as other aliens. In short, the data reflects significant concerns with UAC cases that we are interested in addressing.

Our current immigration system faces numerous challenges. Issues with UACs in immigration proceedings have added to these challenges, as have efforts by traffickers to exploit weaknesses in the overall immigration system. Despite these challenges, the Department of Justice is unequivocally committed to bringing to justice anyone who engages in the abominable crime of human trafficking, including the trafficking of UACs, and it stands ready to work with Congress to strengthen existing laws in order to achieve that goal and to address the many challenges facing our immigration system today.

I would be pleased to answer any questions the Subcommittee may have.

Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Mr. McHenry.

I think you have made the case well that we need some reforms, and some of the numbers you just gave us are shocking, including a median of 465 days. That is about 16 months between the time someone has given their first notice and the time a case is completed and the enormous backlog.

I am going to use not all of my time here—we each are given 7 minutes—because I want to give my colleagues who have to go to another hearing an opportunity to ask their questions, but let me just say I think the fundamental issue here that we are talking about, as important again as these broader immigration issues are, is who is responsible when a child comes across a border.

We heard from Chief Hudson that that child is placed immediately in some sort of a facility, not for more than 72 hours.

We heard from Mr. Guadian that they then go to HHS.

We heard from Commander White that HHS has these children in an HHS-sanctioned facility until they find a sponsor. We heard from Mr. McHenry some of the challenges with getting those kids to their court proceeding to find out whether they have a legitimate claim if they are trying to come into the country under asylum. We also heard the system is just not working well, that more than half these kids are not even showing up for their hearing. That we do have, unfortunately, these stories of kids being abused and trafficked.

I appreciate the fact that we have made some improvements in terms of the background checks, as I said earlier. I might want to follow up later on the fingerprints and what DHS does with those and how we work to ensure that those who are being trafficked are dealt with.

Let me ask you the fundamental question, and I guess this most appropriately goes to HHS. DOJ may want to chime in here. Do you all believe that you have the authority—and I suppose you are going to say the funding as well—to be able to continue to take responsibility for these children after they leave your care; in other words, the detention facility? Do you believe you have the authority to continue to have responsibility for these children?

Mr. WHITE. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

HHS does not presently have the authority to exercise supervision or oversight of children who are not in the physical care and custody of ORR. It certainly does not have the appropriations, and I would submit that at present, it is not capacitated to do that, particularly with regard to those elements of the oversight that require law enforcement functions, given that ORR within Administration for Children and Families (ACF) and HHS is not a law enforcement agency.

The answer is we have neither the authorities nor the appropriations to exercise that degree of oversight after minors exist ORR care.

Senator PORTMAN. As you know, Commander White, this is where we have a difference of opinion. I think I speak for Senator Carper and myself at least in saying we believe you do have that authority. We believe Congress has given you that authority, and by the way, if you do not, who does? You actually have the sponsors sign an agreement. Who enforces that agreement? Someone has to do that? Why even have an agreement with a sponsor if there is no way to enforce it?

We think you have that responsibility, but if you do not, I assume you want Congress to give you that authority; is that correct?

Mr. WHITE. I am not the one to say what we would wish. I will say only that we do not have that authority, neither do we have the appropriations, which would be—the requirement would be considerable—

Senator PORTMAN. Yes, I understand that.

Mr. WHITE [continuing]. To create a national child welfare system in 50 States.

Senator PORTMAN. Yes. Additional funding would be required, but our issue is when that child leaves your detention facility and goes to that sponsor and you have the sponsor sign an agreement, who is responsible for enforcing that agreement? Who is responsible for ensuring that that kid gets to his or her court proceeding? Who is in charge? Who is in charge now?

Mr. WHITE. The number one responsibility for ensuring that the child attends the hearing is the sponsor.

Senator PORTMAN. How about the welfare of the child?

Mr. WHITE. The welfare of the child is the responsibility of the sponsor. If there are deficiencies in that, that is subject to the oversight and authority of the State or local child welfare authority that has jurisdiction over where that child resides, like any child in any community in America.

Senator PORTMAN. Yes. We will have a discussion about this, but from talking to a number of these State officials and State agencies, they do not even know these children are in their State. How would they know that? They are not even given notice of it often. The kids move, and they do not have responsibility under law, in their view.

We do think Congress has provided that, but this is a gray area, clearly, because you all disagree. DOJ disagrees. Would you support legislation that clarifies the responsibility and authorities as well as providing the necessary funding?

Mr. WHITE. It is not for me to say what I would support. I will say only that, of course, HHS, as always, will execute all of its requirements under law, and where we have authorities and appropriations, we will execute those faithfully, as we always have.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator Carper.

Senator CARPER. Overnight, your agencies were able to come to consensus on a joint statement to the press that, in my opinion, makes baseless accusations about the accuracy of the report that we released yesterday in the areas that we chose to focus on.

I have to tell you, I was surprised at how quickly you were able to agree to the statement in the last 24 hours, given how long it took for us to finally receive the Joint Concepts of Operations that we are discussing here today.

That said, I want to take you at your word that you want to work with us on this issue, but I am struggling to do that when in your joint statement, your testimony, and this JCO, it all failed to do what this Subcommittee, the Senate, has been asking you to do for years now. That is to take responsibility for these kids.

As my colleagues know, I always try to come to hearings like this looking for areas of agreement, not just where do we disagree, but where do we agree, where can we work together. That might be a little hard to find today, but what you offer us that we can work with? What can you offer us that we can work with? What can you say the Administration will do going forward to respond to our requests that you do more to track and care for these kids?

This is really a question for all of the witnesses. Let me start with you, Commander White. What can you offer us?

Mr. WHITE. Senator, as you know, HHS through ORR's UAC program provides excellent care for these children while they are in the care and custody of ORR. That custodial relationship does end when those children exit ORR care.

What we have done and what we continue to do is make continuous improvements regarding the safety of children, regarding the piece of their lives after their time in ORR care that we do have an influence in, which is the vetting of sponsors.

There have been tremendous advances in the last 2 years in particular in the efforts made within HHS and in partnership with our DHS colleagues to ensure that each release to a sponsor is safe, including the background checks of parents, of other sponsors, and of others that live in the household, including the increased steps that we have taken to not only verify parentage but verify child safety. Those efforts will continue.

The JCO is the capstone of years of operational improvement within HHS and in partnership with DHS. It reflects and summarizes those accomplishments over the last few years. That effort is ongoing, and I can tell you as a person who has worked in the ORR program, never ending. There is a ceaseless effort to see what can we do tomorrow to make kids safer than they were yesterday. That is on the mind of everybody who works in ORR, and we absolutely value working with you on that.

Senator CARPER. Hold it right there. Thank you very much.

Mr. McHenry, same question. What can you offer us that we can work with? What can you say of the Administration going forward, going forward to respond to our request that you do more to track and care for these kids going forward?

Mr. MCHENRY. As I indicated in my opening statement, the Department does not have an operational or logistical role in the care and custody of UACs, that is primarily with HHS, but what we can do—and we are happy to take back any suggestions the Subcommittee may have—our area is limited primarily to the immigration court process.

As I indicated, our judges, our court personnel, they have protocols to follow if individuals show up, and if there is any evidence that they might be trafficked, they follow those protocols. We can ensure that the regulations are followed so that proceedings are not open, so that people cannot just come in if an abused alien child is having a case.

We can also have our LOPC program, which I alluded to, that provides services, meets with the custodians, either in person or by telephone, explains to them their responsibilities, which includes a responsibility to make sure that children attend their hearings and to make sure that the children are safe from mistreatment or potential trafficking. Those are the three areas that we can offer.

Senator CARPER. Alright. Thanks.

Mr. Hudson, please. Same question.

Mr. HUDSON. Thank you, Senator.

I was pleased to hear that the Committee has recognized that there is an influx of UACs that are problematic for immigration enforcement. We are committed to working with the Committee, the full Senate, and Congress at different solutions that could help end the illegal immigration that we are seeing along the Southern Border.

Senator CARPER. Alright. Thank you. Mr. Guadian.

Mr. GUADIAN. Thank you, Senator.

As you know, Senator, ICE's role in the care of unaccompanied children is very narrow under the TVPRA.

To answer your question on what ICE can offer up, we have submitted some legislative proposed reforms to close the loopholes in certain legislation to eliminate the push and the pull factors that are driving these UACs into our country.

Thank you.

Senator CARPER. Mr. White, one more question, if I could. The Office of Refugee Resettlement is required to contact all unaccompanied children and their sponsors 30 days after release.

During the Subcommittee's hearing—back in April—we learned that HHS previously lost track of nearly 15 to 100 children. I do not need to remind you, Commander White, of how shocked we were to hear that news at our last hearing.

What steps has HHS taken to learn more about the location and welfare of each of these children?

Mr. WHITE. There are no lost children. There are some families that do not take our call. There is a big difference.

Our requirement is to have the programs that have provided care to the children reach out 30 days after to the sponsor and the child and see if there is anything they need or anything they can help them with. But it is not mandatory that the sponsor or the child take the call. Many immigrant families after the children leave ORR care do not want anything more to do with us and do not want anything more to do with the systems that they have been through.

Senator CARPER. Why do you think that is?

Mr. WHITE. Senator, many individuals come out of the shadows to take their child from us, and some of them return to the shadows. These are individuals who are living undocumented in the United States in most cases, and they believe they have cause to fear us.

Senator CARPER. Alright. My time has expired. Thank you.

Senator PORTMAN. I am going to take a moment of my time that I had left and go to Senator Heitkamp, and we will get back to this, Commander White. But your blanket statement that there are no lost children is simply inaccurate.

There are lost children, clearly. I cannot believe that you would think that because you do not know where 1,500 were in a 3-month period between October and December of last year. You do know that a couple dozen of these kids actually ran away from their sponsors if there are no lost children. Of course, there are lost children.

That is the whole point here. No one is responsible. You just made the good point that they do not have to take the call. Why do not they have to take the call? What does the sponsor agreement mean if they do not have to take a call at least, and who enforces that sponsor agreement? Your answer to me is going to be nobody. Senator Heitkamp.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR HEITKAMP

Senator HEITKAMP. A couple of things, and I do want to get into this idea that the children are safe when they are in your custody because that is certainly not what we are hearing.

I want to ask you, Do you want responsibility for these kids after they leave? Do you want to have the ability to do site visits, make sure that they attend the hearings, and make sure that they are followed up on? Do you want that authority?

We disagree that you do not have it, but I want to know. Does HHS want that authority?

Mr. WHITE. I could not speak for what HHS wants. I can say only that we will fully discharge requirements that we have.

I will note—

Senator HEITKAMP. That is not an answer. We have a gap here. If this were a IV-E investigation of a State foster care system, they would fail, and you basically would withdraw Federal money because there would be inadequate protections for kids.

Now we have this group of children that for whatever reason—we can argue about pull factors or push factors. We can argue about that, but they are children, and they are in our country. The question is, What do we do with them when they are in our country?

I am frustrated, and I think you hear the frustration here, because what we hear is not, see no evil, “We are not going to pay any attention to what happens with these kids afterwards, and if they do not show up, well, that is just the way it is.”

I want to explore this idea that you just said that when they are in your care, they are safe, that they are protected. You cannot have not noticed all of the stories about sexual assault on children, about physical inattention, and about injections of children without any permission.

In fact, we had a professional who works at the Boston Medical Center. She is the Director of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry—said, “If you are a predator, this a gold mine.”

I am concerned even beyond what happens with these kids when they are out of your custody, and we cannot seem to agree on whether you have any responsibility for them. I am concerned about what happens to them when they are in your custody. What are you doing to follow up on these dramatic and very disturbing reports that we are hearing about child sexual assault, about physical abuse? Even something like scrubbing a toilet with your bare hands. These are all legitimate reports that we are hearing over and over again, and for you as an official of HHS to come to this hearing and say, “They are well treated,” tells me you are not taking this information seriously.

There have been 125 reports to law enforcement of child sexual assault in detention centers that are run by HHS or at least contracted to run by HHS, does not that concern you, Commander?

Mr. WHITE. Ma'am, any allegation of abuse or harm to a child in care concerns me and everyone who works in HHS and in ORR profoundly.

It is not the case that we are not taking——

Senator HEITKAMP. You are saying none of this is true?

Mr. WHITE. No. That is not what I am saying at all.

Senator HEITKAMP. Oh, OK.

Mr. WHITE. I am saying that the statement that you just made that we have done nothing about these is untrue. Let me try and pick which one to talk about first. Would it be helpful if I talked first about what we do any time there is an allegation of sexual assault?

Senator HEITKAMP. You know what would be good is for you to backtrack on your original statement that kids in your custody are safe, that there is no mismanagement within custody, within those facilities of what is happening with these kids. That would be the first thing, an acknowledgment that you do have a problem.

Mr. WHITE. My statement that we remain committed to the safety of every child in our care and work to effect the safety of every child in our care is true.

Senator HEITKAMP. OK. That is not what you said, though. What you said is children in your custody are safe.

Mr. WHITE. Our program exists to keep those children safe, and any child——

Senator HEITKAMP. You are failing. That program is failing by all accounts. Let us move beyond that, and why do not you tell me what you do. Have you withdrawn any kind of contract to any of these facilities where these allegations have been levied? Have you done any kind of investigation? Are you currently reviewing whether you should move children who are in facilities where there has actually been criminal charges against employees of these facilities, criminal charges brought that they sexually assaulted numerous children in these facilities? Where are those investigations?

Mr. WHITE. Yes. There are investigations made by ORR and by Federal and State law enforcement and licensure authorities for every instance where there is an allegation of abuse against a child.

Senator HEITKAMP. Has anyone lost their license, or have you removed children from any of these facilities?

Mr. WHITE. I would have to get back to you on whether anyone has lost their license because that is a State question.

We have absolutely removed every child from a facility where there was a credible allegation of abuse while we conduct an investigation, every single child.

Senator HEITKAMP. How many children have you removed from facilities at HHS because of allegations of sexual or physical abuse?

Mr. WHITE. We would have to get back to you on that at——

Senator HEITKAMP. Yes. Please do.

Mr. WHITE. When there was an allegation of abuse, one of the ones you alluded to of sexual abuse of minors at a facility, upon receiving that credible allegation, we removed every child out of the facility. That does indeed happen.

Senator HEITKAMP. I can tell you along with the rest of America, this sickens me. It sickens me that these children have been put in this position and in harm's way, and that we in the U.S. Government have responsibility for these children.

Now let us just move on because I only have about 50 seconds left.

We need an answer to the question of whether the Federal Government is going to take any responsibility beyond what you are doing right now to track and make sure that children are safe once they leave detention, and that is really why we are here. We cannot get a sense of where are these kids and we keep being told, "Well, they are not missing."

I think the Chairman made an excellent point. There are lost kids. There are kids we do not know where they are, and we have to have some level of responsibility beyond what we are seeing here. That is why we are here. We are not the enemy. We are just trying to figure out how this system can work better, and then all the advocates here who are all children advocates—and I hope you are too—can then provide the resources, and provide the legislation.

I think the legislation is there, but certainly do something proactively to change this outcome because we cannot let this continue. This is wrong, and most of America thinks it is wrong as well.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator Hassan.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR HASSAN

Senator HASSAN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman and Ranking Member, for this hearing and for following up on this important issue. I really appreciate the Subcommittee's continued focus here.

I want to thank the witnesses for being here today and I think I want to start by just echoing what you have heard from some of my colleagues.

Let us be really clear here. If a sponsor is not answering a phone call, you do not know where that child is. You cannot tell us there is nobody lost if you have not had a conversation about whether the sponsor still knows where the child is. One of the things that concerns me is I hear the words "agency by agency represented here," "limited responsibility," "not our job," "not our focus," "We do not know once X, Y, or Z happens." That is not acceptable. A siloed response to child welfare is not acceptable.

These children are here, and the American people want to know we are doing what we would do for any child to make sure they are safe. That requires a level of interagency cooperation and a level of cooperation—Federal, State, to local government—that is not reflected in your testimony and has not been reflected in your actions.

I want to start, Commander White, with the question about our relationships with the States. States can do more to help unaccompanied children who have been placed with sponsors if the States know that the children had been placed there, such as providing child welfare services, the information that kids are coming and where they have been placed, and notifying school systems that there are now children in their jurisdiction who should be attending school.

But in our last hearing, Assistant Secretary Steven Wagner said that the agency usually fails to give States this basic information.

I am a former Governor, and I find that really troubling. I am well aware that there are sometimes issues between State and Federal Governments with communication, but the reason that the agency is cited for this lack of communication is that you do not know who to contact in the State. That seems awfully weak to me.

The last hearing we had here, one of the DHS representations said, "Well, I have a great relationship with emergency personnel in the State." My suggestion might be to DHS, pick up the phone and ask them who the child welfare person is in the State. Your emergency people will know that.

In New Hampshire, you can call the Governor's office, 603-271-2121, and they will tell you who is in charge of child welfare agencies in the State.

What specific steps has HHS taken to get that information? Have you reached out to the Governor's offices in States where you are placing children? Have you reached out to the Attorneys General or to the child welfare agencies that HHS has relationships with?

Mr. WHITE. Thank you, Senator.

I believe when Acting Assistant Secretary Wagner spoke, he was referring to contacts with local government, which is what was being explored. I think when he spoke to the difficulty of identifying the appropriate office in each case, it would be—that was about local government.

Senator HASSAN. That actually is not what I think the record will show. It was a specific question about States. What are you doing to reach out to State governments, notifying them when children are coming into their States and where they are going so that they could in turn—they have relationships with locals—notify the school systems, for instance?

Mr. WHITE. I will take that back for action, what we have provided, as you know, is summary-level information by county each month to the States, but we have not provided individual notifications to States on each reunification of a child. That is correct.

Senator HASSAN. You need to be doing more, and I was given a commitment at the last hearing on this issue that you would be doing more.

I would like to see you all stepping up to this because, for example, if a sponsor turns out to be a safety risk to a child, despite the best efforts of the Federal Government to make sure that sponsor is well suited, if that child does not come into school and the school knows the child is supposed to be, the school can investigate. The school can save a child from abuse, neglect, or trauma, but not if they do not know that the child is there. It seems to me the very least the Federal Government could do is provide that information and then follow up on it and make sure it is being distributed.

Thank you for the commitment today, and I will have my office follow up with yours, so that we can actually get some specific dates about when we will see a plan for notification to States, local governments, and school districts about when unaccompanied minors are coming into their jurisdictions, since you also have said that those State and local entities have responsibility for the safety of these children once they get out of HHS's custody.

I would like to move on to a related issue, which is helping to reconnect families after the Trump administration forcibly took children away from their parents at the border earlier this year.

I think we all agree that taking children from their parents is morally reprehensible and an affront to our American values, and pediatricians, psychologists, and health professionals have made clear the lasting harm of these forced separations.

Commander White, in testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee last month, you noted that you and others have raised concerns about separating parents and children based on—and this is a quote—“significant risk of harm to children” due to the “significant potential for traumatic psychological injury,” also a quote.

Could you explain what you mean by the significant risk of harm and traumatic psychological injury? What does that mean in practice, and what is the scientific basis for these concerns?

Mr. WHITE. Thank you, Senator.

It is well established in the pediatric psychiatric literature as well as in the practice research for child welfare and foster care systems that separation of children, particularly young children, from their families is a traumatic event.

There is a significant potential for both short-term diagnosable psychological illness and long-term psychological illness as a result of that traumatic event. That is well supported in the scientific literature. That was what I was referring to, although I think it is probably well understood without being a mental health professional how separating a child from their family could cause them injury.

Senator HASSAN. Thank you.

You noted in your testimony last month that you and others—and, this is a quote—“raise concerns about policies that would result in separating families.” What specific actions did you or others take to make this argument or to prevent separations?

Mr. WHITE. I participated only in discussions of potential policy outcomes, not in any which followed the policy announcements.

We raised concerns through our own leadership. Additionally, I communicated these concerns in interagency discussions. As a reminder, as I said this in the last testimony, our concerns focused both on the best interest of the child but also on the operational implications for the program and its capacity to serve children. Both of these were addressed in our concerns that we shared.

Senator HASSAN. Thank you, and thank you, Mr. Chair, for letting me go over a bit.

I think the best interest of children would be served if you all start working together and really lean into this as opposed to working in silos and disclaiming responsibility and authority.

Thank you.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator McCaskill.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR MCCASKILL

Senator MCCASKILL. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I have had some experience in children that have been removed from their families in my years as an assistant prosecutor handling criminal cases and then in years as the elected prosecutor in Kansas City. I can assure you if a child was removed from their family and 6 months later it was determined that no one was paying attention to where that child was, literally no one, it would be a huge scandal in my State. It would be a scandal in all of our States.

This is about the fourth or fifth time I have been on this dais, and no one seems to be worried about the fact that you all get to wash your hands of these children.

You want to talk about catch and release. You are catching these children, and then you are releasing them. Everyone goes like this, "Not my problem."

I think the thing that really stuck out to me and the report that the Committee issued was the finding, and this was finding number 14. HHS has a plan to notify State governments before placing unaccompanied children previously held in secure facilities, but HHS has failed to implement that plan. HHS explained it cannot implement the plan because it cannot determine who to notify in State government.

Let me just tell you, Commander. I will make an offer to you today. I think my staff can get you a list of agencies and phone numbers before close of business tomorrow. Would that be helpful?

Mr. WHITE. I will be glad to convey that. I think there are very real questions about—

Senator McCASKILL. No, there are not.

Mr. WHITE [continuing]. Who are the appropriate—

Senator McCASKILL. No, there are not. Every State has a child welfare agency. In Missouri, it is the Missouri Department of Social Services, the Children's Division, and they are responsible for foster care, for child placement, and for monitoring child detention centers. They are responsible for the welfare of children who have been separated from their families, and they have contacts in every corner of my State.

There is a hotline that they administer. There are all kinds of ways that they can communicate with school systems, with local governments, with all the people that are working as foster parents. There is a huge network in every single State. Because you know what the States do? They take their responsibility for having children in their care seriously.

For some reason, in the Federal Government, we have decided a child in the care of the Federal Government, "Well, they will not take our phone calls." Are you kidding me? If there was someone who was supposed to be watching a child in Missouri that had been placed there by the State and they refused to take the phone calls of the social worker that was responsible for monitoring that home, they would have them—well, not always because they are overworked and underpaid. They do not do it as thoroughly as they need to, frankly, because their budgets have been cut, and they have large caseloads. But that is their responsibility, and they acknowledge that it is.

We cannot get anybody to acknowledge that they have responsibility for where these children are and what they are doing 30 days after they leave a Federal facility. Somebody is going to step up here, or we are going to actually do something remarkable. We are going to have a bipartisan bill that lays out this responsibility.

But you could do it now. There is nothing in the law preventing you from doing it. Nothing.

I will get you the list of the 50 agencies. The notion that you all said to this Committee that you do not know who to contact, that is all anybody needs to know. That is all anybody needs to know about how serious you are.

For you, Mr. McHenry, I know that our Attorney General feels very strongly about enforcing immigration law. All of us do too. There is not anybody up here who does not want to secure the border. We all want to secure the border. But the notion that we have 8,000 children who have been on the docket for more than 3 years and you have 129 authorized judges that have not been hired, if some of the energy that is being expended on press conferences and talking about separating kids from their parents as a deterrent, if some of that energy would be expended on hiring up all of the vacancies that you currently have for immigration judges and maybe doing a surge capacity to get at this backlog of children, that would be really helpful.

Is there a reason that you are not hiring the 129 positions that are currently paid for and in your budget but sit vacant?

Mr. MCHENRY. The number is a little bit misleading for a couple of reasons. First, our authorization up until March of this year was only for 384 judges, and we will fulfill that in about 2 weeks.

The omnibus bill that was passed in March added us another 100 judges, but we have not filled those. But we expect to certainly within the next year.

Our bigger problem is not hiring. We have gotten the hiring process down to as little as 266 days right now. Our bigger problem is going to be space and logistics. By the end of this year, we will have approximately 426 permanent courtrooms. That is less than our authorization. We cannot hire judges until we have the courtrooms or until we have the space for them, and we cannot procure more space until we get our appropriations.

Senator MCCASKILL. That is a fair point, Mr. McHenry.

But I will tell you when it came time to find space to put all these families in detention facilities, the government was willing to go to extraordinary lengths. Call in the military. Use military bases. Surely we can find a few courtrooms. This is not a complicated schematic to find a courtroom.

Frankly, I have been in a lot of courtrooms that did not look like a courtroom. You can make a courtroom, and frankly, you can do a lot of this remotely also, if you would have any idea where these kids were and if anybody was designating the resources to follow up and make sure that these children are coming to their hearings.

Is not it true, Mr. McHenry, if these children have lawyers, then—like 80 to 90 percent of them are showing up for their hearings?

Mr. MCHENRY. We have not done a study on that. I believe—
Senator MCCASKILL. But there is a study that has been done.

Mr. MCHENRY. I believe the contractor who runs our LOPC program did a study on that in 2014 and found that they were 10 percent more likely to appear.

Senator MCCASKILL. I disagree with you. I believe the study showed that there was a very high attendance rate. Has the Department of Justice put out a call for pro bono lawyers to represent these children?

Mr. MCHENRY. Every respondent who is in proceedings, whether they are a child or an adult or a family or whatever, receives a pro bono list.

Moreover, the representation rate for UACs in proceedings right now, whose proceedings have been pending for over a year, is already 75 percent.

The vast majority of them whose cases are going on are getting representation of some sort.

Senator MCCASKILL. Our numbers do not match up. I am going to have my staff follow up with your staff to make sure that we all are working off the same numbers because my understanding is the vast majority of the children do not have lawyers, but those that do have lawyers are showing up for court, which all goes under the category of this idea that we cannot call them or we cannot make them show up.

They are here. If we have the ability to hold them in custody, we certainly have the ability to get them to court. I would certainly want to follow up with those things.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I apologize for going a minute over.
Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Senator. Senator Lankford.

OPENING STATEMENT OF SENATOR LANKFORD

Senator LANKFORD. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Gentlemen, thank you for being here. We obviously have a lot of questions and a lot of issues we are trying to be able to work our way through and be able to get greater information.

Let me start with a very basic question: Who is setting the standard for the placement for where the children are going?

Let me give you some basic criteria here. Do they have to be legal citizens of the United States when we actually do a placement? Do they have to have a background check? Do they have to be an immediate relative?

Some basic things on placement, who sets that standard?

Mr. WHITE. Senator, that standard is set primarily by statute and then by the policies and procedures of ORR, which are published online and available.

Section 2 of the policy manual covers the process for vetting of sponsors and release.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. Let me back up. Do they have to be a legal citizen of the United States to be able to receive one of the UACs in their home?

Mr. WHITE. No, sir.

Senator LANKFORD. Is that something done in statute, or is that done by ORR?

Mr. WHITE. I believe that is based on an understanding of statute and that it directs us regarding the prioritization of sponsors.

Senator LANKFORD. You are saying to require that individuals are placed into a legal resident of the United States would require legislative action? It would not be an ORR decision?

Mr. WHITE. I would have to defer that to general counsel, but that is certainly my personal understanding.

Senator LANKFORD. Alright. Let me ask the next one. What about a background check for each individual in the home where they are placed?

Mr. WHITE. That is required by ORR policy.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. But that is not statutory. How extensive is the background check for the individuals, and is the individual one individual in the home or the individuals in the home?

Mr. WHITE. Every adult in the household has to meet background check standards. Those background check standards would include a fingerprint background check against the National Crime Information Center (NCIC), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), criminal history. It also includes a check against State criminal histories. It includes a check against the sex offender registries of every State. It includes a check against State child abuse and neglect records of every State where that person has lived in the last 5 years, and of course, it also involves the pretty extensive vetting by the social worker's work in the program based on interviews and documents received from the sponsor.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. What is your best guess on the percentage of UACs that are placed in homes where they are not legally present in the United States?

Mr. WHITE. Where the sponsor does not have legal status?

Senator LANKFORD. Correct.

Mr. WHITE. I do not have an exact number, but it will be the great majority.

Senator LANKFORD. Great majority being 51 percent? Great majority being 90 percent? Give me a ball park.

Mr. WHITE. I do not have such numbers.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. Let me ask this, then. If we do not know if they have legal status or what that percentage is of those that have legal status and those that do not, but you are saying they all have completed a background check, that background check does not include a legal status requirement?

Mr. WHITE. There is not a requirement that they have legal status; however, the background check process, as revised by the MOA, does include DHS providing immigration information from its databases to HHS.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. Help me connect the dots, then. We do know then how many individuals do not have legal status?

Mr. WHITE. I do not have that number with me.

Senator LANKFORD. But that is a known number?

Mr. WHITE. I would have to go back and see. It is historically not something that we have captured in a reportable format.

That may have changed in the months since I left ORR, particularly in light of the new MOA.

Senator LANKFORD. Does that seem odd to you that we are placing children in a home where we do not know if they are legally present in the United States or not, or does that seem normative?

Mr. WHITE. No, sir. I think we know in virtually every case whether they are lawfully in the United States. What we do not have is a reportable aggregated number on that.

Senator LANKFORD. That is a number we should have, just to be able to get a good feel for that and what that would mean.

Tell me on a—let us say 30 days later. You talked about them taking phone calls or not taking phone calls—

Mr. WHITE. Right.

Senator LANKFORD [continuing]. And engaging with you. Within 30 days, do you still have ongoing contact with those children that have been placed?

Mr. WHITE. We would make that contact through the phone calls. Where there are any concerns or if we fail to reach any children, that does trigger a reporting process to authorities, which are typically State and local authorities, which have jurisdiction over the child's case.

Senator LANKFORD. Let me ask you a question with that. One month after that child has been placed, how many of those children do we still know where they are living and we still have contact with?

Mr. WHITE. I do not have those numbers with me. I can get back to you on that.

Senator LANKFORD. What I am trying to figure out is, at what point—well, let me ask one more question, and I will do the overview with it. How many of these children are showing up for their hearings? Take even the first hearing, the UACs that are there, the first hearing that they have been asked to show up at. What percentage are they arriving at that first hearing?

Mr. WHITE. I would have to defer to DOJ for that question.

Senator LANKFORD. Mr. McHenry.

Mr. MCHENRY. We do not track based on individual hearing. Proceedings can have multiple hearings—

Senator LANKFORD. Right.

Mr. MCHENRY [continuing]. And moreover, their presence may be waived. In certain circumstances, they may appear by telephone or by VTC. We would not have that number.

Senator LANKFORD. I am trying to figure out how many that we actually know are showing up to hearings or still engaged in the process. Do you have a number on that at all?

Mr. MCHENRY. The closest estimate we have is our in absentia rate, the number who receive an order of removal for not showing up at the hearing.

Senator LANKFORD. But that is not showing up for anything, then?

Mr. MCHENRY. That is not showing up for the hearing at which the judge issues the order.

Senator LANKFORD. Right.

Mr. MCHENRY. They may show up at some hearings but not others, so maybe it continued, whether they appear or not. There is not going to be a rate for individual hearings. The closest estimate we can come or the closest metric we can use is the in absentia rate.

Senator LANKFORD. Which is what for UACs?

Mr. MCHENRY. For the last three or four fiscal years, it has been about 6,000 to 7,000—annually, it is currently running about 580 per month.

Senator LANKFORD. What is the percentage on that, then?

Mr. MCHENRY. The percentage out of the total number of cases is probably slightly less than 10 percent. We have roughly 80,000 cases pending, and if we have 7,000 a year—

Senator LANKFORD. The 10 percent that are in absentia, 90 percent that are showing up for those final hearings, or the reverse?

Mr. MCHENRY. These are pending cases, so they have not had a final hearing yet.

Senator LANKFORD. If you have been ruled in absentia, then they were making a final decision.

Mr. MCHENRY. If you are talking about all completed cases—and it is about 12,000 or 13,000 per year—then it is a little over 50 percent who are getting an in absentia order and having their case completed that way.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. Without showing up.

What I am trying to figure out is, in going back to some of the prior conversation, if they are in foster care in my State and they are not showing up for hearings or we do not know where they live or they are not answering a phone call, someone goes to check on them to be able to find out where are you, why are you not showing up for a hearing, and why are you not engaged. What I am trying to figure out is, at what point are we engaging back to say this individual did not take a phone call, did not show up at a hearing, has not answered our phone call, someone is checking to find out where are there or are they still there. Is that happening?

Mr. WHITE. If we attempt to make contact with a child or a parent and we do not make contact, where there is a concern, we make a report. Depending on the nature of the concern, we would make that report either to a Federal or State law enforcement agency or the child welfare authority that has jurisdiction where the child lives.

Senator LANKFORD. In that State. Then do we know if the State is following up or any individuals or following up or law enforcement is?

Mr. WHITE. We would know more about it if there were a Federal law enforcement follow-up. As a reminder, ORR is not a law enforcement authority.

Senator LANKFORD. Right.

Mr. WHITE. Neither do we have a custodial role once the children exit ORR care. We guarantee that children show up for their hearing when they are still in ORR care.

Senator LANKFORD. But once they are delivered to someone else, then that is something else? Someone else has the ball then at that point?

Mr. WHITE. HHS does not have the authority for custody of minors after they exit ORR care and custody.

Senator LANKFORD. I am still trying to process this because TVPRA states this: "The care and custody of all unaccompanied alien children, including the responsibility for their detention, where appropriate, shall be the responsibility of the Secretary of Health and Human Services."

Mr. WHITE. We have neither the authority nor the appropriations to provide oversight or control of children who exit ORR care and custody. Those minors are assigned a sponsor. All of those who remain in the custody of the Federal Government are in ORR care and custody, and that is what the TVPRA is referring to.

Senator LANKFORD. OK.

Senator PORTMAN. Thanks, Senator Lankford. Those were all good questions that deserve an answer.

I think the summary—Mr. McHenry, correct me if I am wrong—in terms of how many unaccompanied kids actually show up for a hearing, I think their best number is that it is less than half. About 53 percent are not showing up.

Mr. MCHENRY. That is correct. If we are looking at completed cases, cases that had been finished, that is about the current rate right now.

Senator PORTMAN. Yes. That would be shocking to most Americans to find out. About 3 percent of these kids who are unaccompanied end up being deported. The rest are either granted asylum, otherwise found through some other immigration provision to be able to stay in this country, or they are lost in the system somewhere. That is one of the issues here. The issue is who is responsible for ensuring these kids are not abused, and making sure that they are getting the proper care. These are vulnerable kids, but also, the integrity of our immigration system, and neither one is being accomplished right now.

This notion, we can argue about whether you have authority or not. I think it is pretty clear. Senator Lankford talked about the TVPRA, which is the more recent legislation, but I look at the Flores decision. It goes back to 1997. It says that the former INS, where Chief Hudson used to work, had authority to take children from sponsors who abuse them. The decision of this court was that that was the responsibility of INS in addition to the statutory language that was mentioned.

HHS inherited INS's responsibilities for unaccompanied minors under the Homeland Security Act of 2002. Do you agree with that, Mr. McHenry?

Mr. MCHENRY. Yes. The Homeland Security Act transferred most of the enforcement authorities under immigration law to DHS.

Senator PORTMAN. From INS to HHS.

We do not see this as a really difficult legal issue. We think you have the authority and responsibility. We think that is clear, but if you disagree with us, I assume you are going to be calling on us to write legislation to give you that authority because I assume you want it. How else are you going to enforce these sponsor agreements?

Here is a sponsor agreement. It is a page and a half. This was required by the Flores decision, and it is very specific as to what these sponsors are responsible for, including ensuring that these unaccompanied kids get to their hearing. That is laid out very clearly here. It is not happening.

Who is enforcing these agreements today, Mr. White, Mr. McHenry? Who is enforcing these agreements?

Mr. WHITE. We are not a law enforcement agency. When a child reenters or care or a sponsor seeks to sponsor a second child, any prior history of not fulfilling any term of their agreement would definitely affect the decision. A sponsor who has not, in the past, lived up to their agreement, this would be a factor in determining their suitability to sponsor that child again or another child.

Senator PORTMAN. Nobody is enforcing the agreement is what you are saying? All you can do is say if somebody wants to be a sponsor again you can look back to see what they have done, but nobody is enforcing the agreement.

At our last hearing, we talked about these calls, and we appreciate the fact that at the last hearing, HHS told us what it did learn from calls from October to December 2017, a 3-month period.

We had a little disagreement earlier when you, Commander White, said that there are no lost children. There clearly are. Your own testimony said that there were 28 kids who had run away, 1,500 kids roughly who—and I quote HHS testimony under oath, “We could not ascertain with certainty,” end quote, the whereabouts of almost 1,500 kids. That is just reality.

HHS has also told us more recently, it is a legal no-man’s land. In other words, these kids are in a situation where they do not have a legal status. There is no requirement in this sponsor agreement that they take the call. You are correct. I would assume you would like to see that. Is that true?

Mr. WHITE. I think post-release services are all voluntary.

Senator PORTMAN. No, but would you like to see them be required to at least take a call from you to find out what is happening 30 days later? Why are you making the call if you do not want them to take it?

Mr. WHITE. I would certainly welcome stronger supports for children who have been in care and their families.

Senator PORTMAN. Stronger supports?

Mr. WHITE. Stronger supports. I would welcome that.

Senator PORTMAN. Good. You would welcome it. You would welcome them taking a call—

Mr. WHITE. Absolutely.

Senator PORTMAN [continuing]. Being required to say this is the status of the child; this is what is going on.

Mr. WHITE. I also understand why some parents do not take the call, and that that does not necessarily mean that they are bad parents or that there is something wrong with that family system. I understand the reasons that many parents are reluctant to take our call.

Senator PORTMAN. At the last hearing, HHS told us what it had learned, during this one period of 3 months, and we asked at that time for updated numbers for this year because it just went until December 2017.

I know staff has indicated to us that you are prepared to answer that question today. What are the updated numbers for 2018? How many UACs or sponsors have we called in 2018? How many sponsors have we been able to reach, or how many UACs have we been able to reach? How many have agreed to participate in a call? How many UACs were still with their sponsors? How many had left their sponsors? How many did HHS refer to get help from the National Call Center or other resources, including going back to Homeland Security? How many UACs were no longer living with their sponsors? How many did you get an updated address and phone number for? How many had run away? How many were you able to, “ascertain with certainty,” to use the language that was used in the last hearing? Can you tell us what the status is this year in 2018 with regard to the calls?

Mr. WHITE. I do not have those numbers, but we will provide them to you, sir.

Senator PORTMAN. You will provide them?

Mr. WHITE. We will.

Senator PORTMAN. When will you provide those, Commander?

Mr. WHITE. I would have to ask, but I would assume that we could provide those to you in a very short timeframe.

Senator PORTMAN. Short timeframe?

Mr. WHITE. Yes.

Senator PORTMAN. I have to be a little skeptical since the—

Mr. WHITE. I do not blame you.

Senator PORTMAN [continuing]. JCO took 17 months from the time you committed to have it to us until you had it to us. Do you think you can have it to us within 2 weeks?

Mr. WHITE. I believe we can. Yes, sir.

Senator PORTMAN. OK. Two weeks from today, we will appreciate getting that information because it is really important to know how this system is working or not working. We have, obviously, a lot of troubling data from the previous 3-month period, and we would like to know where we are.

If it is getting better, that is great. That is what we want to see. If, as we probably all suspect, it is not, we have to figure something out here.

Mr. WHITE. We will provide it to you, and we are eager to work with you on seeing the best outcomes that we can achieve for the children who have been in our care.

Senator PORTMAN. We talked earlier about the need to deal with the push factors. I certainly could not agree more, and some of us have been involved in that issue. The fact is, though, these children end up coming here, and someone needs to take care of them. We need to get them to their court date.

In terms of getting them to their court date, expediting that process, Mr. McHenry, back to you again because you are the one who is responsible, I suppose, at DOJ to try to expedite this process. You said 8,000 of those cases had been pending for more than 3 years; is that correct?

Mr. MCHENRY. That is what our current numbers show, yes.

Senator PORTMAN. Yes. Should we prioritize unaccompanied children cases?

Mr. MCHENRY. We do in certain circumstances, but there is a limitation to them.

As you know, under the statute, if they file for asylum, that has to be adjudicated by the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) first. They have the initial jurisdiction. The immigration case is on hold until USCIS makes that determination.

Additionally, many UACs apply for special immigrant juvenile status, which is a multistep process. They have to get a dependency order typically from a State.

Senator PORTMAN. Let us back up for a second on USCIS, since we have with us here today, DHS representatives. My understanding is that is not where the backlog occurs. In other words, they handle their cases in a pretty expedited basis. Am I inaccurate about that?

Mr. MCHENRY. I would have to defer to them. I do not have the numbers.

Senator PORTMAN. Maybe you can talk a little bit how you do that. This is the initial claim of asylum and how much of a backlog there is in those cases. Is that the slowdown, as Mr. McHenry is suggesting?

Mr. HUDSON. I can speak to the front end of the process. Anytime we take anyone into custody and they do have a credible fear claim, we clearly document that in all of our paperwork. We notify, in the administrative file, ICE, ERO, who then sets up the CIS initial screening interviews, and then we refer to ERO for more information on that. But we do take that information and take that credible fear claim.

Senator PORTMAN. OK. My time is expiring here, but let me just say it would be helpful to have that information. Our understanding is that is not where the backlog is, but if that is the case we want the agencies to work better together to ensure that does not slow us down.

I think one of the big problems is, Mr. McHenry, you said it takes 266 days to hire someone.

Mr. MCHENRY. That number is actually going down, as 2 years ago, it was an average of 742 days. Now—

Senator CARPER. That is like 2 years.

Mr. MCHENRY. Yes.

Senator CARPER. To hire somebody?

Mr. MCHENRY. Yes. Our most recent class, though, has individuals who were hired in 266 days, and the next class we have coming in will be even faster. The number is going down considerably.

Senator PORTMAN. "Even faster" is an interesting way to talk about taking 266 days to hire somebody. I think most people who are listening would think that is crazy, and why can we not expedite that?

If you need help from us—and we are looking at this as part of the legislative solution we talked about earlier—we want to expedite these. We want to get these judges in place. We want to be sure you are up to your fully authorized amount. We understand you need some more courthouse space. We want you to have that.

We also think that having 58 courts around the country is inadequate. A lot of these courts are not close to where these children end up, and that makes it even more difficult to get them to their courthouse.

I would tell you, we used to have a court and a judge in my hometown of Cincinnati. We do not anymore. Now it is just in Cleveland. That is an issue. That 4-hour drive is an issue.

I would suggest that we are ready to help on that, and we need to do it.

One final question. If the custody ends, as Commander White has said, when the child is placed with a sponsor, who is the legal guardian of these children when the child goes, as was the case of these eight Guatemalan kids to a trafficker? It is not a parent. It is not even a family member, which continues to happen today, that kids are given to sponsors who are not family members. What is the sponsor's responsibility there? Who is the legal guardian of this child? Someone has to be the legal guardian of the child. Who is it?

Mr. WHITE. It is the sponsor who is responsible for the emotional and the physical needs of the child.

Senator PORTMAN. But not the legal guardian?

Mr. WHITE. The legal guardian is the parent who in some cases may also be—

Senator PORTMAN. You are giving a lot of these kids to sponsors who are not parents.

Mr. WHITE. Ten percent of reunifications go to sponsors who are either distant relatives or nonrelatives. They are vetted to a higher—

Senator PORTMAN. An uncle or an aunt is not a legal guardian either.

Mr. WHITE. That is right. Most of these children's legal guardian—

Senator PORTMAN. Or somebody adjudicated to be a legal guardian, right, Mr. McHenry?

Mr. MCHENRY. Legal guardianship is usually a matter of State law, and it would likely vary, depending on the local State practices.

Senator PORTMAN. OK. I just want to make that point. There is this legal no-man's land, as HHS has told us, and we need to resolve that issue, among others. Being sure these kids are properly treated, being sure they have a guardian, being sure that they are getting to their court proceedings, that the immigration laws are being held up, and the integrity of the system, all are important. Senator Carper.

Senator CARPER. Our staffs have been working on drafting legislation to enable you, the folks who work with you, and for you, to meet their obligations. I think there are moral obligations to these kids that have come here.

Chairman Johnson gave us right at the beginning of the hearing—he read an accounting of just horror stories, one horror story after the other, after the other. They explain pretty well why people give up everything in their home countries, to try to travel through difficult, dangerous journey to try to get here to face an uncertain future. They do live, in many cases, horrific lives in Honduras, Guatemala, and El Salvador.

One of the things that I had focused on and a number of us have focused on is what can we do—as we have done in Colombia, in helping Colombia, transform a country that was literally about to go down 20 years ago to being a prosperous, generally successful country today. There is something called the Alliance for Prosperity, which we are funding, and we need to continue fund in the next budget going forward.

We are going to write legislation. We are starting on that now, as you know, and you can make us an unguided missile or a guided missile.

I am just going to ask you. We will just start with you, Chief. This is not really your bailiwick, but you bring a lot of expertise and experience into this. Some counsel or advice that you would have for us and our staffs as we draft some legislation to address some of the concerns that we are hearing about again today, what piece of advice do you have for us to focus on?

Mr. HUDSON. Thank you for that, and we are committed to working with the members in the Senate to look at any legislation that would help with border security.

What I would offer is that we have had a number of court decisions and rulings that kind of juxtapose the intent of the law against where it actually falls out today, and I think any action that could bring some more clarity to some of these interpretations would be helpful from an immigration enforcement perspective, sir.

Senator CARPER. Give us one more. That is a good one.

Mr. HUDSON. You have the disparate treatment under TVPRA for those contiguous country UACs, for example. If you have a Mexican UAC or a Canadian UAC in our custody, if they pass the trafficking screening test, meaning there is no derogatory information and no fear of harm on return, we can return them to their native land, if they should so desire and withdraw their application.

That is not so with UACs from noncontiguous countries. We are required to put them under TVPRA into 240 proceedings, so that is another example, sir.

Senator CARPER. Thank you.

Mr. Guadian, same question. Make us a guided missile.

Mr. GUADIAN. Yes, sir. Thank you Senator, for this opportunity.

I would offer that you close the loophole in the Flores agreement for the 20-day release, mandatory release in the Flores agreement currently.

I would also offer and agree with the Chief that the TVPRA be amended to make sure that all juveniles are treated the same. Just because there is a Mexican juvenile or a Canadian juvenile, they should not be treated any differently than Central Americans. We can currently, after an initial vetting, looking for trafficking signs—we can return those individuals to those countries. We currently cannot do that with Central American kids. That would eliminate a push-pull factor.

Senator CARPER. Chief, I saw you nodding your head. Do you want to comment, please?

Mr. HUDSON. No. I am in full agreement with my partner from ERO. Those are the two largest things I think that are affecting the process and flow today as we are seeing it from the immigration process perspective.

I think Flores is a complicated matter, and it is before the courts today, different machinations of that, but if we could hold family units, for example, for the pendency of their proceedings together, we would not be putting them on the streets where they are having to look for jobs, having to look for different avenues of support.

We could have a determination made by the immigration judge whether or not they have a credible fear claim or an asylum claim or any other benefit that they may get. But, at this point, once they leave our custody, it is difficult, as we have pointed out today, to find where any immigration violator may be.

Senator CARPER. Alright.

Commander, Mr. McHenry, briefly respond to what you heard from your colleagues at the table. Do you agree with the advice that they have given and shared with us or disagree, or would you modify it? Just very briefly.

Mr. WHITE. I do not think I have a comment on any of those things.

I think from our point of view, what would likely be most important in looking ahead to legislation is that we think it was a wise decision to assign the care of children to a child welfare agency, not a law enforcement agency. I would encourage you, please do not make us a law enforcement agency.

Senator CARPER. OK. Can you give us more than that? We are going to write legislation. We are doing it. Give us more than that.

Mr. WHITE. Law enforcement should be a prerogative of those who are trained law enforcement professionals, and care on the best interest of the child, that of social workers. To the degree that there is interagency authorities being looked at, I think it is very important that HHS remain the agency tasked with the best interest of the child, rather than to assign it enforcement duties.

I also think it is very important that if we expand the role of the government in services to children after they exit ORR care that the central focus remain on the best interest of the child, and as much as possible on the permanency of families.

When we look at things like enforcing sponsor agreements, there needs to be attention to avoiding situations that result in separation of children from their families and sponsors become their families for matters other than the immediate safety of the child. That would be my strong recommendation to you.

Senator CARPER. Alright. Thank you.

Mr. McHenry, keep in mind, in the next couple of weeks, we are going to be working on what we call a mini omnibus appropriations bill, and it will include probably the Department of Defense (DOD), probably the Department of Health of Human Services, and in terms of funding, in addition to actually working on the authorizing language that we are talking about that, but in addition to that, some funding shortfalls, some places we ought to be especially mindful of. Any advice you have for us there?

Mr. MCHENRY. On the operational side, I would defer to my colleagues at DHS because they are on the front lines of the enforcement.

Our equities, as you have alluded to, we completely agree that we need to increase our adjudicatory capacity, which means typically more judges, more space, more resources, and also maximize the current capacity. Several members have mentioned video teleconferencing, trying to reach out, trying to hold hearings in locations, apart from our permanent court sites. We certainly welcome any suggestions the Subcommittee may have and be happy to work with you through our Office of Legislative Affairs.

Senator CARPER. We have three counties in Delaware, southern most counties. Sussex County, it is a very large county. The county seat is called Georgetown, and there are a number of folks there from particularly Guatemala who have come over the years. Some are documented; others are not. But when folks go from the Georgetown area, Southern Delaware, to a courthouse, they go to Philadelphia, which is quite a hike. It is not as far as Cincinnati to Cleveland, but it is a pretty good hike. If somebody is going to make that hike, a kid is going to be out of school or whatever. Maybe out of work, whoever is taking them is probably going to give up a day's work getting them up there and back.

The idea of having sufficient judges, be able to hire the more expedient way, but also to actually have some courthouses that we can go to. We have a State courthouse right in Georgetown, where a whole lot of the—if you drew a 10-mile diameter circle around that courthouse, you would probably accomplish most of the refugees, folks that come to our State.

But is it feasible for immigration proceedings to take place occasionally in a State setting, a State courthouse setting, which is right there in the community?

Mr. MCHENRY. There are some logistical challenges. We have to enter into an agreement with whichever agency, whichever body controls the local site. We have to make sure the security is correct that the systems are compatible.

We would also have to coordinate with the Department of Homeland Security because they are a party to all of the proceedings. They have a right to send an attorney as well to make sure that they have somebody available.

There are other mechanisms we can use. As I mentioned, if an individual is represented, their presence can be waived. They can move to appear telephonically. There are other ways of getting around it, even if VTC does not turn out to be feasible. We can certainly take the suggestion and look into it.

Senator CARPER. Alright. Thanks very much.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator Heitkamp.

Senator HEITKAMP. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

I want to go back to follow up with you, Commander. I can appreciate—and I think we are all appreciative of your understanding as a social worker—I think that is your training—of what happens with childhood trauma and what the long-term ramifications can be, and so I do not mean to be harsh. I think that all of us who have watched this are deeply concerned.

I want to get to this issue, not just of what happens when they leave, but what is happening when they are in facilities.

One facility provider basically—if my rough math is right, 11,000 children have been assigned to Southwest Key over a number of facilities, not one facility, but they are obviously a large provider.

The reports coming out of Dallas say that they basically in a half-year period have a contract that is worth a half a billion dollars that they are being paid, which if you do rough math, that is about $45,000 per child. I think that we should have some pretty high expectations at $45,000 per child.

I would love a list of all the contractors that you currently have, the number of complaints and the severity of the complaints in each one of those cases, what disciplinary action has been, and how you are cooperating consistently with State authorities, who usually are the licensing authorities. I understand that.

If you can in fact get us where you are at right now with contractors and what additional needs you may see, so that we can have a better idea.

I want to comment briefly on Senator Johnson's comment. Senator Carper and I have been very engaged in trying to get asylum seekers to stay in place and seek asylum where they are, and I think that to simply say this is a horrible path forward and separating kids, that is the way we are going to provide deterrent, I think we have to look at all the reports of people saying, "That is no deterrent for us because the conditions at home are just as horrific as the conditions of the journey." We have to figure this piece out, and it is kind of beyond the scope of this hearing.

I do think that one of the key issues for me is my initial question which is does HHS want this responsibility? The way I look at the function that you perform and basically who reports to you, every State division of children or human services—in our case, it is the department of human services which is responsible for child welfare in North Dakota—they have an ongoing relationship with HHS. It is not unusual for us to ask you to perform the functions in a Federal kind of umbrella that the States perform in their State foster care programs.

I think you have to do some soul searching. Are you willing to take that responsibility, and if you are willing to take that responsibility—let us just get beyond the "Do you have it right now?" because I think there is a disagreement here. But if you are willing to take that responsibility, what do we need to provide? That is what I think Senator Carper is getting at. How can we in good faith and collectively not file reports back and forth for which we respond, but how can we put the kids first and decide what we are going to do to fix this problem? I would really encourage you to take what we have said here back to your supervisors and back to the chain of command and say, "You may not have a choice." Rather than resisting taking this responsibility, figure out how you are going to assume this responsibility and what you need to do it because I do not think there is any tolerance up here, certainly with us, for not knowing where these kids are. That is just a nonstarter for me.

I want to know where all these kids are. I want to know what their status is. I want to know whether they have been placed in places that are safe, and we know a lot of these kids come here as indentured servants. A lot of these kids are required to work to pay off whatever the transportation was if they truly were unaccompanied. We cannot be ignoring the possibilities here and the possibility of abuse outside the system, but we have to rectify the abuse inside the system that we all agree you have responsibility for.

I want to thank you for your acknowledgment of trauma, your care of children. I did not mean to be too harsh, but it is imperative that we get our arms around this problem and move forward with a solution-based evaluation and numbers. Please get back to us and let us know what we can do to help you perform this function and be better foster parents.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. WHITE. Yes, ma'am.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator McCaskill.

Senator MCCASKILL. Yes. I would like to ask both Commander White and Mr. McHenry. Mr. McHenry, you have a lot of experience around the law. Should not we put in the law that there is a requirement that these children be put in touch and that the State child welfare agency should be notified when they are going to be in their States at a minimum?

Mr. MCHENRY. That would be principally an operational issue. We are happy to take back any suggestions, but I would have to defer to my colleagues as to whether that would make sense to them, logistically and operationally.

Senator MCCASKILL. Yes. The welfare of these children are sometimes—these determinations are made sometimes in adult courts, but they are also sometimes made in juvenile courts around the country. I know you are operational, and you are custodial—and at the border, and you are interior, and you are in custody, and then you are done. We have this gaping hole, and we need you all to come together.

We do not always get it right in the Senate or in the Congress, and we will get closer to right if you all get together and decide where is the best place to cite responsibility for continuing oversight of these children once they leave secure facilities.

I too get revved up. I do not think you are doing anything other than wanting children to be safe, Commander White. I know that, but you have to objectively realize the extreme frustration that we are feeling on this side of the table.

Senator Portman and I had a hearing on this back in 2015, and all of these issues were discussed. Nothing happened, and I was just as angry at the Obama Administration, frankly, as I am frustrated at this Administration over the failure to recognize this gaping hole.

We have to figure out the legal status of these children after they leave custody of HHS. If they are not with their parents, then who is making the decision on whether or not they receive medical procedures? Who is making the decision as to whether or not they are actually going to school every day? Who is doing that?

It is such a problem screaming for a solution, and I just do not think we are going to be satisfied. Do you have an opinion as to who should have legal responsibility for these children once they leave HHS's custody, Commander White? Just your personal opinion. I am not trying to hold the agency to your opinion, but you are experienced in this area. You do have background in this area. What do you think would be the most efficient and effective way to secure the safety of these kids?

Mr. WHITE. I do not have a personal opinion. I do believe really strongly that there is no way with the existing authorities and the existing appropriations that HHS could do what you are asking, which is not the same thing as saying it could never be done. I think the reason that there have been so many conversations between this Subcommittee and our agency is that the existing authorities and the existing appropriations are far away from what will be required to achieve that result.

I believe that if it could be solved simply by holding HHS's feet to the fire, we would have been there by now because I feel this Subcommittee has done that.

If that is the desire, that will take clarification of authorities and very significant appropriations to accomplish that goal for the approximately 212,000 minors still under the age of 18 who have been in ORR care and who are in the United States right now.

Senator MCCASKILL. I know the appropriations part is important, and I certainly support that.

I will tell you realistically that the State child welfare agencies do not have a choice. They have legal control over these kids. It does not matter what they get appropriated. If the social worker's casework goes from visiting households of 50 children to visiting households of 200 or 300 children, that is the reality in many States.

It does not change the fact that someone is legally responsible, and so I know the appropriations need to follow, but first, we have to have clear legal responsibility. It is really important.

Chief Hudson, briefly, before my time is out, when you separated the children from their parents, was there a plan in place to have them reunited with their families at the point in time they were separated?

Mr. HUDSON. CBP and the Border Patrol only dealt with reunifications with regard to those individuals who are in our custody. That when they went to the criminal process, they got time served, and when they returned back into our custody from the courts, the children were still there. There were approximately 500 of those reunifications that we were involved in.

The larger reunification effort, we were not involved in for the physical reunification. We supported our partners in ERO and HHS to continue to evaluate data, to make sure we had all the finer points, and it really was revalidation. We had the information. It is just checking, dotting the i's and crossing the t's.

Senator MCCASKILL. I understand that there was a subset that you all had direct responsibility for. I guess what I am asking you and Mr. Guadian, at the time the decision was made to separate children, was there a plan within DHS about potential reunification? Because these kids started going all over the country in a relatively short period of time, and clearly, some of the reunification bumps have been because we want to do background checks and we have to get fingerprints and all of that. I understand that.

But were you aware? Did you ever see? Were you ever briefed on a plan that these things are being done? If reunification occurs either by directive of the government or by directive of a court, there is a plan by which this can happen?

Mr. HUDSON. Ma'am, I was never a party to any of those discussions, nor have I seen any documents relating to that.

Senator MCCASKILL. Mr. Guadian, have you ever seen any document such as that or any discussion in your email traffic about we are going to do this, but we have planned how we could reunify if in fact the decision is made either by courts or by directive of the government to get these kids back with their families?

Mr. GUADIAN. Thank you for that question, Senator.

As my director has testified previously, ICE has always had a plan for reunification at removal. The difference here was the quantity.

The process was at removal—

Senator MCCASKILL. Did the agency not know how many children were going to be separated? You guys have historical data about how many kids are coming across month by month, day by day, and week by week. You have known for the last 6 months how many children were coming across unaccompanied that were being apprehended with their families. I am sure you had some idea of the numbers.

Mr. GUADIAN. What I can tell you, Senator, is that ICE has always had that process where we reunify at removal.

As far as the kickoff for the zero tolerance plan (ZTP), that was a 45-day window. I did not have visibility of the numbers of cases that were referred, but what I can tell you is that ICE always had a plan to reunify at removal.

Senator MCCASKILL. OK. I just do not buy the numbers thing because you can pull up the numbers with four or five clicks, so you knew the numbers. If there was not a plan in place for the kind of numbers you encountered, that lies squarely within the responsibility of the Administration not adequately planning for it.

Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Senator PORTMAN. Senator Lankford.

Senator LANKFORD. Mr. Chairman, thank you.

I want to be able to follow up on one key area. It seems to be the elephant in the room in this conversation. We are having a difficult time tracking children in their location after they are placed, but we are most often placing them in homes of people that have been illegally present in the United States, sometimes for years. Those are individuals that, by definition, have lived under the radar and separated from the rest of society. I am trying to figure this out.

It seems they were set up for failure at the start if we are placing individuals into a home with a sponsor that is illegally present in the United States.

My question on this is trying to have a dialogue. Have we set you all up for failure from this based on how it is set up and designed?

Of course, children are going to disappear, and we are going to lose track of them if they are in a home of individuals or in a group of people or with their family if that family is, by definition, trying to disappear within society as well and have often done it for a long time. Unless I am getting this wrong from the stats that I have seen in the past, most of the UACs that are coming are coming and joining a family member already here. Is that correct that there is a family member already here and that UAC is coming to join them?

Mr. WHITE. That is correct for the great majority of UACs who are discharged to a sponsor out of ORR care. Yes, sir.

Senator LANKFORD. Let me ask a simple question. If the requirement was that we do not place a UAC with a sponsor that is not a legal citizen in the United States, what does that change?

Mr. WHITE. For one thing, it would create a requirement for hundreds of thousands of beds over the next couple of years. It would mean that for—

Senator LANKFORD. Do you think the same number is coming, or do you think those UACs are coming because dad or uncle is already here in the United States, and someone is saying to a 14-year-old boy in Guatemala, "It is time to go to the United States and go work with your uncle or with your dad, so we are going to pay for a trafficker for you to get there. You are going to get there and get checked in and get checked in and find him?" If that is not an opportunity that they have to be able to be placed with a sponsor of an uncle or a dad that is already here, that they know that is not an opportunity, do you think the numbers change, or do you think the numbers just stay consistent?

Mr. WHITE. I would not speculate on how long it would take to change or what the change would be. I am simply saying that the vast majority of releases, as I have already testified, are to sponsors without legal status. We are at 90 percent bed capacity today and a record number of beds and two temporary in-flux shelter systems set up.

You asked me what the consequences would be, Senator, and the most immediate consequence would be that it would back up in the border stations and produce a humanitarian crisis.

Senator LANKFORD. Right. You are out of bed space, but the alternative is what this Committee is complaining about, is releasing people into the country and we lose track of them. We are setting you up for failure because you are putting them with sponsors that we do not have track of already that are already living in the shadows here in the country. It seems to be this really odd side-by-side that you are getting griped at for losing track of people that by definition, the adult that they are with, we already have lost track of.

What I am trying to figure out is how to be able to solve this long term and what are the key solutions of this.

Mr. McHenry, what happens if we place children only in a home with someone who is legally present in the United States or a U.S. citizen?

Mr. MCHENRY. I would have to defer to my operational colleagues. It would not necessarily affect the court proceedings because the person would still have a court case.

In terms of bed space or appropriations or anything like that, I would have to defer to my colleagues.

Senator LANKFORD. Do we have any numbers at all on the percentage of individuals that show up for their court proceeding if they were placed with someone who is a legal resident or a U.S. citizen versus someone that we do not know their legal status?

Mr. MCHENRY. That is not something we would track necessarily for their immigration hearing. We do not know who they are placed with, necessarily. We just know their address and where they are supposed to be.

Senator LANKFORD. Or where they were when we placed them, but not necessarily where they are now?

Mr. MCHENRY. Right. They have an obligation to notify the court if they do move or if their addresses changes from the first one that was provided to us.

Senator LANKFORD. How often does that happen that people notify the court when they have changed addresses?

Mr. MCHENRY. I do not have those statistics in front of me.

Senator LANKFORD. I think we are setting you all up for failure in this, and that is the grand challenge that I am trying to figure out is what happens if we have a very simple change. We do not place an unaccompanied minor into a home with someone who is not a U.S. citizen and who is not legally present in the United States. If that change is made—and I understand what you are saying initially. You would have to do some advance work and some preparation for that. What happens not only with the push factor or literally people in Central America saying, "It is time to go to work in the United States. Go join your uncle. Go join your dad that is there?" Because predominantly, the UACs we are talking about are young teenager males. Is that correct? These are not 3-year-old young ladies and 3-year-old guys. Is that correct?

Mr. WHITE. Approximately one-third are girls. Approximately one-quarter would fit the description of 16- and 17-year-old boys.

Senator LANKFORD. You are saying a 25 percent total of the number that are coming in are 16- or 17-year-olds. How many of them are 12 and up, versus 11 and down? Because that has been a break point in running our stats.

Mr. WHITE. It does change over time, and this year, we have seen many more who are what we call "tender age"; that is to say, age 12 and under. But that would typically be about 20 percent of the total who would be under 13.

Senator LANKFORD. OK. 13 and up, 80 percent of the people that are coming.

This is something we need to be able to continue this conversation on to be able to figure out how we can help resolve some things long term.

Thank you, all.

Senator PORTMAN. Thank you, Senator Lankford.

We have zero time left on our vote. We are going to close this up. Senator Carper may come back in for a cameo, but I just want to say thanks to the Members who attended today, and of course, thank you to the witnesses for being here for your testimony, for your service, and for appearing again before us in the Subcommittee, some of you for the second time.

We need to repair the immigration systems. There is no question about that. Addressing both the push and the pull factors, that again was not what this hearing was about. This hearing is about the fact that in the meantime, there are children here in our country. Those children need to be protected. We need to be sure that they are not abused, and they are not trafficked.

This investigation, as you know, was launched by the fact that there were children who were given by our government, HHS, to traffickers, actually the traffickers that had brought them up from Guatemala, unscrupulous. They did abuse these children. Eight of them ended up in an egg farm in Marion, Ohio. They have now been prosecuted. That is good, but there are other cases as well that we know of. We need to be sure we are protecting those kids who cross our border.

We also need to be sure that they show up at their immigration court proceeding, and that is a point that I think has been made repeatedly today. By the way, that is for their own benefit to be able to make their legal case as well as the integrity of our immigration system.

We believe that we have received some commitments from you all today that will help us get to the bottom of this. We thank you for that. We look forward to getting the additional data that we need to understand the nature of the problem better.

We also appreciate the commitment to help us with the legislative solution that Senator Carper and I have talked about and others to help solve this problem—Senator Lankford, Senator McCaskill.

We need to be sure that we do address this because we know we can do better, as Commander White said. We must do better for these children and for our system.

The hearing record will remain open for 15 days for any additional comments or questions from any of the Subcommittee Members.

I said before you came in, Senator Carper, we have no time left on the vote, but I thought you might want to have a final comment.

Senator CARPER [Presiding.] Yes. I would very much. Thank you.

Thank you again for being here for your testimony.

I am not altogether satisfied. I think you probably know that, but we are grateful that you came. We need to continue to engage in a very serious way.

We are going to write legislation. I think it will have bipartisan support, and we are in the midst of an appropriations process, which actually has some—can be a help in enabling you to do your jobs better.

I will say this in closing. I always come back to root causes. There is a reason why these people are trying to go through hell on earth just to get here, and we need to help them address those. They can do it; we can help. Alliance for Prosperity is really almost a descendent of Plan Colombia, which worked. We need to make sure that we stick with it until it helps reduce the demand for people to get out of those, in some cases, hell holes where they work and live.

Second thing, we have to do a better job of making sure that folks who are interested in trying to get some kind of amnesty or to be able to come here under extreme conditions, that they can actually apply for that in their countries and own embassies, so they do not have to come here to present their case. We need to do that.

The third thing is we are having a hard time establishing who has responsibility. This is a shared responsibility. When we have these kids here, they have been placed with a sponsor. It is a shared responsibility. As a former Governor, it is a shared responsibility between some of us—us, you—and it is a shared responsibility with States, Governors' offices, and offices of child welfare. This is a shared responsibility, and we need to make sure that we are calling on others in an appropriate way to share this responsibility with us. We have to do it all.

I will close with this. Everything I do, I know I can do better. The same is true with this situation. We can do this better, and we must.

Thank you so much.

With that, I think this hearing is adjourned.

[Whereupon, at 12:19 p.m., the Subcommittee was adjourned.]

APPENDIX

STATEMENT OF CHAIRMAN ROB PORTMAN
U.S. SENATE PERMANENT SUBCOMMITTEE ON INVESTIGATIONS
Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking & Abuse
REMARKS AS PREPARED
August 16, 2018 PSI Hearing

We're here today because this Subcommittee is continuing to conduct oversight into an issue that we've been following for more than three years now, going back to 2015. We have an interest in ensuring that unaccompanied minors are protected from human trafficking and other forms of abuse. We also have an interest in ensuring that these children appear at their immigration court proceedings and we care about upholding the integrity of our immigration system.

Let me begin by saying I am concerned that some in the administration and some here in Congress misunderstand the scope and purpose of our three-year investigation and the report that we're discussing in this hearing. I would think every member of this panel agrees that our broader immigration system is broken. Of course, I'm not suggesting we all agree on the solutions. But that is not what this investigation and report are about. In particular, some believe we should be addressing the 'push factors' that drive people to come to our borders—in particular, the conditions in the Northern Triangle countries of Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras. These are legitimate and very difficult issues, and I know the Ranking Member has been very involved in these issues, as I have been and other members have been, but that is not the focus here today. That's not what we're here about.

We are focused on the very narrow issue of what happens to children who already have come into our country and who have been apprehended by our government. We want to ensure they are treated appropriately and that they make it to their immigration court proceedings. Unfortunately, we have seen examples of children placed with sponsors being trafficked, and right now, the best information that we have is that about 50 percent of these children do not show up for their immigration court proceedings.

This is not a partisan issue, and, let's face it, there is plenty of blame to go around. The specific, tragic occurrence of children being placed with human traffickers that initiated this Subcommittee's investigation happened under the Obama administration. But this is a systemic problem that has continued under the Trump Administration. We're interested in solving this problem.

We want to ensure these kids get proper care, but also expedite the enforcement of these cases in a timely and responsible way. This is our chance to get this right.

Since 2012, more than 200,000 children without legal status have crossed our borders without a parent or guardian. The law calls these children 'unaccompanied alien children' or UACs. These children frequently face significant trauma on their way here. And once they are here, as one Department of Health and Human Services official recently characterized it, they are 'in a legal no-man's land.'

These children are typically apprehended by U.S. Customs and Border Protection of the Department of Homeland Security. Then, within 72 hours, under law DHS transfers them to an HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement facility. At this point, HHS becomes responsible for these children's care.

HHS typically places these children with sponsors, which can be their parents or other family members, but also sometimes other, unrelated adults.

In 2015, I learned that HHS had placed eight of these children with human traffickers. Those traffickers then put those children, all minors, into forced labor situation on an egg farm in my home state in Marion, Ohio. The traffickers threatened the children and their families with violence and death. The children worked for 10 to 12 hours a day as they lived in squalor.

This Subcommittee investigated, and we released a comprehensive report in 2016 finding that HHS failed to do basic background checks on the trafficker who came forward to sponsor these children.

We also found that no government agency claimed any responsibility for these children once the government placed them with sponsors—even sponsors who are not the children's parents or legal guardians. To this day, that remains the case, even though we believe the law gives HHS continuing responsibility, especially if they are not placed with a parent or legal guardian.

HHS and DHS promised to do better. They did improve their background check process—and I commend them for that. But they still have not taken enough responsibility for the welfare of these children post-release.

In February 2016, after our hearing and calls from this Subcommittee for better coordination between the agencies, DHS and HHS entered into a Memorandum of Agreement. They agreed to create a specific Joint Concept of Operations, or JCO, to document and improve their processes related to unaccompanied children. As part of the Memorandum of Agreement, they committed to completing that JCO no later than February 22, 2017.

They missed that deadline. Not by a week, not by a month, but by more than a year. So we held another hearing, and after being pressed on why the JCO was unfinished, the departments promised to complete it by July 30, 2018, a few weeks ago. They finished it on July 31—seventeen months later than they had committed to do so.

Unfortunately, the JCO only reiterates on paper the insufficient policies that have been in place for years through previous administrations. It's important to put processes on paper so the left hand knows what the right hand is doing, and I'm glad they did that. But the JCO largely reiterates the status quo, and does little to improve unaccompanied children's safety and ensure UACs show up to their immigration court proceedings.

That said, we think it's important that the public see the JCO to understand it for themselves. We are working with the departments to get a version of the JCO that is appropriate to release, and we are waiting for final sign-off. I'm not prepared to release it unless the administration agrees that it's appropriate to release it.

I'm disappointed the departments did not take this opportunity address problems we've all observed for years and I think are widely acknowledged. Unaccompanied children are still crossing our borders. HHS is still placing them with sponsors and then losing track of them. At our last hearing in April, HHS testified that they had started calling sponsors 30 days after placement to check on the children. I think that's good that they're making these calls, which started in 2015 apparently. But it was troubling that for the three-month time period from October to December 2017, HHS testified that they 'could not ascertain with certainty' the whereabouts of 1,475 children, and that 28 children had run away from their sponsors. And, again, they argue they have no responsibility to know where those children are. Remember, that's just one three month period. We need an update on those children today. How are those calls going? What are the results? As well as determining, going forward, what are we going to do about the information that we get from those calls.

Yesterday, Sen. Carper and I released a report on the problems the Subcommittee has identified with the UAC program. It details the lack of progress from HHS and DHS in improving programs designed to care for these children, ensure their safety, and ensure they appear at their immigration court proceedings.

Currently, 80,266 UAC cases are pending before the immigration courts—more than 8,000 of them have been pending for more than three years. The longer these children wait, the less likely they are to appear for their court proceedings. Today, 53 percent of unaccompanied children never show up for their court proceedings—an increase of 12 percent since 2016.

I know this is a difficult situation— and the gentlemen here before us from the administration are faced with a very difficult task. It's not easy, but these federal agencies have failed to address most of the recommendations for improving the UAC program offered by this Subcommittee and the Government Accountability Office. We need to know why.

We have a serious problem on our hands. These children are at risk for trafficking and abuse. When these children do not appear for their hearings, they lose their chance to argue for immigration relief, and many remain in this country illegally, which undermines our nation's immigration laws. In those cases, the judge usually enters an in absentia removal order, we may hear about that today. But most are never actually removed. The best number we have is that only three percent are deported. The current situation is not good for these children or our immigration system.

The Subcommittee's report compiles our findings based on two and a half years of oversight. I urge you to read it. It addresses a wide range of issues, from problems with the JCO to the backlog of immigration court cases.

As I said earlier, there is plenty of blame to go around. But I'm a lot more interested in solving this problem than making this into a partisan issue. I hope we don't do that today because this is our chance to get this right. We're working on legislation and I wanted to be sure we had this hearing first so that we could hear from experts from the administration as we're working on that bipartisan legislation. I appreciate Sen. Carper working closely with me on this issue.

I look forward to talking with our witnesses today about how we can improve this system to ensure these children's safety and the integrity of our immigration system.

Statement of Ranking Member Tom Carper “Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking and Abuse”
August 16, 2018

Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for holding this hearing and for leading this subcommittee in its efforts to find solutions to one of the more troubling problems created by our broken immigration system. This is the third PSI hearing on this subject, and I’m pleased that the two of us and our staffs have been able to come to some consensus on how to do better by the vulnerable children we’ll be discussing here today.

These children come to our country primarily from Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador to escape extreme poverty and unspeakable violence at home. In too many cases, as this subcommittee has repeatedly highlighted, we’re failing in our responsibility to protect and properly care for them.

A 2008 law enacted under former President Bush clearly places children who arrive at our borders or ports of entry without a parent or guardian under the care and custody of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). In carrying out its responsibilities under this law, HHS must place these children in safe homes, offer them mental health care and other services they might need, and ensure that they’re participating in immigration court proceedings. But despite the best efforts of this subcommittee, GAO, and others to diagnose problems and recommend solutions that would lead to better care for migrant children, too many of them are falling through the cracks.

In January 2016, PSI held a hearing examining how HHS had placed eight Central American children with sponsors in Ohio who turned out to be human traffickers. Since then, HHS and the Department of Homeland Security have taken steps that should make it less likely that children might wind up exploited like those in Ohio were. For example, HHS policy now calls for more background checks of sponsors while offering more services for children who might need help adjusting to their new homes. The department also now requires that all children and their sponsors be contacted at least once within 30 days of placement so that problems can be detected and referred to local authorities. These are positive steps, but the children we’re placing in communities across the country are still at great risk of abuse and neglect.

When we last held a hearing on this issue in April, we heard reports of children being placed in homes with people they don’t know who expect them to work to help with living expenses. We heard about children, sometimes due to a need to send money home or to pay debts to smugglers, working all night and unable to stay awake at school during the day. And to top things off, HHS informed us in their testimony at the time that they had actually lost track of about 1,500 children who were placed in their care. Dozens more ran away from home or were found to have moved in with someone not vetted by HHS at all.

Since that hearing, DHS and HHS have finally completed work on a document they call a ‘Joint Concept of Operations’ that details each department’s roles and responsibilities in handling and providing care for unaccompanied children. This issuance of this document - due a year and a half ago - is welcome and appreciated. But as helpful as it was to finally review it, the document fails to solve any of the major problems this subcommittee has been highlighting since 2015, and that the HHS Office of Inspector General warned us about a decade ago.

Let me be clear. A decade is far too long to wait to make sure children in our care are safe. To my surprise and bewilderment, HHS still does not acknowledge its role in ensuring the wellbeing of unaccompanied migrant children despite what I see as a clear mandate from Congress. “Unfortunately, as they prepared for today’s hearing, PSI staff members were repeatedly told by HHS that the department was still studying the relevant statutes and consulting its Office of General Counsel on what more it can do. Still studying! You’ve got to be kidding! Still studying after almost a decade!

At the same time, based on Fiscal Year 2017 numbers, only about 30 percent of children placed with sponsors are receiving follow-up care, and HHS only performs home studies in about 7 percent of cases. As we’ve discovered, this lack of attention from HHS, or any other agency, allows children to just disappear. Based on the latest data provided by the Department of Justice, the majority of unaccompanied migrant children – 53 percent, in fact – wind up not showing up at an immigration court at some point. When they don’t show up for court, they can be automatically ordered removed to their home country and lose their chance to make their case for asylum.

Unfortunately, rather than offering solutions to these problems and proposing ways to better track and care for unaccompanied children, the Trump administration has decided in recent months to take steps that are almost certain to make these problems worse. The administration’s decision this spring to separate parents from their children at our border created 2,500 new unaccompanied children for HHS to care for. A number of these children have since been reunited with their families, but HHS was forced to release 423 of them to non-parental sponsors. Another 560 remain in HHS care. There are also concerns that ICE could exploit an information-sharing agreement that DHS has struck with HHS not to ensure that the homes children are placed in are safe, but rather to conduct enforcement actions against sponsors. I find this possibility deeply troubling.

In my state, ICE activity is run out of the agency’s Philadelphia field office. According to reports this spring in the Philadelphia Inquirer, Philadelphia-based ICE agents appear to be the most aggressive in the country, going out of their way to target migrants in the region who have no criminal record and who have families and deep ties to their communities. If ICE agents in Philadelphia or elsewhere are free to target sponsors this aggressively, I’m concerned that fewer will step forward to serve as sponsors and HHS will end up with even more unaccompanied children on its hands.

In the absence of leadership from the administration, I believe Congress must now come forward with legislation that would ensure we’re living up to our most basic responsibilities to the vulnerable children coming to us for help. I’m pleased, Mr. Chairman, that our staffs have begun working on legislation that seeks to make it crystal clear what HHS’s responsibilities are in this area. It’s imperative that we make real progress in the coming days so that we can introduce legislation that will lead to better outcomes for these children and more certainty that they're safe from human trafficking, abuse, and neglect during their time in our country.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, let me add that, as necessary as our draft legislation is, it only solves part of the problem. We won't make real progress in stemming the tide of migration at our southern border and keeping migrant children out of harm's way unless we make a long-term commitment to our neighbors in Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador to help address the poverty, crime, and hopelessness that plagues those countries.

I've visited all three countries in the Northern Triangle multiple times over the years. I've met with their leaders and seen on the ground how communities there are struggling to deal with challenges that would be unimaginable to most Americans. A good number of those challenges are fueled by our addiction to drugs and our past interventions in regional conflicts. As long as these challenges go unaddressed, children and other vulnerable Central Americans will continue to make the dangerous trip across Mexico to our southern border.

A sustained commitment from us, from our partners in the region, and from the governments in the Northern Triangle to improve the lives of the citizens of Guatemala, Honduras, and El Salvador is the smart way -- and the right way -- to address the root causes of the migration we see into our country.

My thanks again, Mr. Chairman, to you and our staffs for our collective efforts on these issues. I look forward to hearing from our witnesses.

INTRODUCTION

Chairman Portman, Ranking Member Carper, and distinguished Members of the Subcommittee: Thank you for the opportunity to testify at today's hearing to examine efforts by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to protect unaccompanied alien children (UACs) from human trafficking and abuse during the pendency of their immigration court proceedings. DHS is responsible for the protection and well-being of these children from the time they first come into contact with U.S. immigration authorities until they are transferred to the care of HHS, and takes this responsibility very seriously. DHS appreciates the Subcommittee's continued dedication to this issue, and we look forward to continuing the constructive dialogue we have had with you and your staff on this issue over the last several months.

UAC Definition and Special Considerations

A UAC is defined by statute as a child who: A) has no lawful immigration status in the United States; B) has not attained 18 years of age; and C) with respect to whom (i) there is no parent or legal guardian in the United States, or (ii) no parent or legal guardian in the United States is available to provide care and physical custody. Designation as a UAC does not provide lawful immigration status, but UACs are afforded certain procedural safeguards with respect to asylum processing that are not available to other aliens, including accompanied minors. For example, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) has initial jurisdiction over any asylum application filed by a UAC, regardless of whether the UAC is in removal proceedings, reunites with a parent or legal guardian, or turns 18 after filing the application. For non-UACs in removal proceedings, it is an Immigration Judge from the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), not a USCIS Asylum Officer, who adjudicates an asylum application. Additionally, the Unaccompanied Alien Child Screening Addendum (CBP Form 93) is used to screen UACs for human trafficking indicators – including trafficking by transnational criminal organizations, such as MS-13. If a Border Patrol Agent or CBP Officer suspects that any member of the group in which the UAC was traveling is involved or complicit in the trafficking act, they will detain all individuals for further processing and interview by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement's (ICE) Homeland Security Investigations (HSI), the Department's primary investigative arm responsible for the investigation of human smuggling and trafficking.

Under the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA), a UAC who is a national or habitual resident of Canada or Mexico and who is apprehended at the border may be permitted to withdraw an application for admission and be returned to his or her country of origin if there are no human trafficking indicators or claims of fear of return, and the child is able to make an independent decision to withdraw the application. Additionally, UACs who are nationals or habitual residents of Canada or Mexico who are not eligible or wish to be voluntarily repatriated are required to be placed into removal proceedings before a DOJ Immigration Judge. Similarly, and as required by the TVPRA, a UAC from a non-contiguous country who is encountered at the border is generally issued a Notice to Appear (NTA) and placed in removal proceedings before a DOJ Immigration Judge. Like all individuals, UACs are afforded an opportunity to claim asylum or other form of relief or protection from removal consistent with our immigration laws.

UAC Encounters and DHS Custody

Typically, UACs are first encountered when presenting themselves to U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) at a port-of-entry (POE), or when apprehended by U.S. Border Patrol when attempting to enter the United States between POEs. However, ICE may also apprehend UACs in the interior of the United States during immigration enforcement actions. Upon encounter, the apprehending agency must determine whether a child meets the statutory definition of a UAC. Absent exceptional circumstances, once a determination is made that the child is indeed a UAC, DHS is then required by law to physically transfer the child to HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) custody within 72 hours of the UAC determination being made. While UACs are in DHS custody pending transfer to HHS, they are placed into a separate holding area apart from adult detainees for their safety.

Protecting UACs from Trafficking and Abuse

DHS takes great care to ensure UACs are treated appropriately and humanely while in our custody, and are safe from trafficking and abuse. This includes, among other things, using CBP Form 93 to screen UACs for indicators of trafficking and/or abuse, identifying gang affiliation or criminal activity, and working with our partners in HHS to ensure appropriate care and protection. CBP facilitates timely placement decisions with HHS, which allows for expeditious custody transfer.

The CBP Form 93 includes examples of trafficking indicators and requires the processing Border Patrol Agent or CBP Officer to ask age appropriate questions to help identify if a UAC may have been, or is likely to be, the victim of trafficking. This screening tool provides a mechanism for officers and agents to consistently and thoroughly screen UACs. This tool contains sections relating to the UAC's fear of return to their country of nationality or last habitual residence as well as indicators of human trafficking. For UACs who are nationals or habitual residents of a contiguous country, it also addresses the UAC's ability to make an independent decision to withdraw their application for admission. This form's use is consistent with the requirements of the TVPRA.

Based on the totality of the situation, including visual and verbal responses, the Border Patrol Agent or CBP Officer determines if the UAC is a victim or potential victim of trafficking. CBP conducts these screenings at the processing location – generally at a port of entry or Border Patrol station. CBP is currently revising this form to ensure Border Patrol Agents and CBP Officers obtain information of the highest integrity.

When DHS encounters known or suspected gang members within the UAC population, biographic information is collected and stored in the electronic systems of record. This approach enables the capture, organization, and presentation of data and allows DHS to readily identify known gang members or aliens who admit to having a gang affiliation. The electronic system collects fingerprint information and runs record checks on these individuals to ensure criminals are prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. This information is conveyed to HHS and other interagency partners, as appropriate, when a placement request is generated via an HHS intake form. Secure placement will be requested for any UAC who has a known gang affiliation, but the decision on placement is ultimately made by HHS.

On February 19, 2016, DHS and HHS signed a Memorandum of Agreement (MoA) regarding the care, custody, and transfer of UACs between our respective departments. The purpose was to continue addressing the needs of UACs; ensure the safe and expedited transfer and placement from DHS to HHS custody; maximize efficiency in the allocation and expenditure of respective program costs; ensure information is transmitted to facilitate appropriate placement decisions so HHS can promptly place the child in the least restrictive setting that is in the child's best interest until the child is released to an appropriate sponsor; continue the statutorily-required consultation between departments with respect to UAC placement determinations; protect UACs in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking; and to promote effective immigration processing, as well as the safe repatriation and/or reintegration of UACs, if necessary.

DHS and HHS signed another MoA on April 13, 2018, to address information exchanges between each Department and to enhance cooperation. Several additional safeguards were put in place, including the fingerprinting by ORR of all potential sponsors (including parents and legal guardians) and adult household members. ICE will then use the fingerprints to complete a check for criminal activity in order to ensure the sponsor is suitable to take charge of a UAC, and that the UAC will not be placed in a dangerous situation or fall victim to trafficking. Additionally, if ICE or CBP become aware of any criminal information, such as gang affiliation, that it did not have at the time of initial referral to ORR, they will notify ORR as expeditiously as practicable, using their best efforts to provide information within 48 hours of discovery.

Since these MoAs were signed, DHS has continued to work with HHS to make meaningful improvements to our information sharing arrangements, in line with the Administration's immigration principles and priorities, and in accordance with the applicable laws. For example, both departments have: (i) clarified procedures surrounding the timely issuance of NTAs; (ii) realigned enforcement priorities so that no class or group of aliens is automatically exempt from possible enforcement actions; and (iii) re-examined the potential threat posed by bad actors posing as sponsors so that the safeguards in place to protect UACs are not exploited.

In order to further ensure that UACs are protected from trafficking and abuse, and pursuant to the 2016 MoA, DHS and HHS have completed and shared with the Subcommittee a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO) which memorializes the existing processes and procedures in areas where the two departments have joint responsibility. This important document lays out the responsibilities of each Department, and further delineates these responsibilities to the components and agencies within DHS and HHS.

It is also important to note that UAC designations are not permanent. The UAC designation ceases when an individual no longer statutorily meets the definition of a UAC. DHS continues to emphasize that UAC designations must only be applied to those individuals who meet – and continue to meet – the statutory definition of a UAC. This not only safeguards the child, but it protects the integrity of our immigration system and ensures the protections that were designed for truly vulnerable children are available to them. That said, DHS takes its role in combating human trafficking very seriously, and will continue to take steps to ensure every individual is protected, even if they no longer qualify as a UAC.

UAC Removals

Since the initial surge in FY 2014, there has been a significant increase in the arrivals of both family units and UACs across the southern border, a trend which continues despite the Administration's enhanced enforcement efforts because of the numerous loopholes that currently exist in our immigration laws. Thus far in FY 2018, approximately 44,000 UACs and 106,000 members of family units have been apprehended at the southern border. These numbers represent an increase from FY 2017, when approximately 49,000 UACs and 105,000 members of family units were apprehended throughout the entire fiscal year.

In addition, most of these family units and UACs are nationals of the Central American countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras. While historically Mexico was the largest source of illegal immigration to the United States, the number of Mexican nationals attempting to cross the border illegally has dropped dramatically in recent years and the net flow of migration from Mexico, legal and illegal, has decreased. This is significant, because removals of non-Mexican nationals take longer, and require ICE to use additional detention capacity, expend more time and effort to secure travel documents from the country of origin, and arrange costly air transportation.

Regarding UACs, the issues is exacerbated, as those UACs from countries other than Canada and Mexico are exempt from expedited removal pursuant to the TVPRA, which further encumbers the already overburdened immigration courts. With a backlog of over 700,000 cases on the non-detained docket alone, it takes years for the cases of these UACs to work their way through the system. And even after they receive a final order of removal (which most do), few are ever actually returned to their country of origin.

It is important to note that current laws and court rulings which favor the release of family units and UACs often require the federal government to release illegal alien families and UACs into communities across the United States. This practice has not only led to aliens failing to appear for court hearings and failing to comply with removal orders, but has also incentivized smugglers to place children into the hands of adult strangers so they can pose as families and be released from immigration custody after crossing the border. This creates a safety issue for these children, who have already made an extremely dangerous journey to reach the United States, risking possible trauma, abuse, abandonment, injury, and death along the way.

With regard to removals, the TVPRA requires DHS to ensure that each UAC removal is fully coordinated with host government authorities. Coordination with foreign government officials includes: providing the UAC with an opportunity to communicate with a consular officer prior to departure; repatriating at a designated port-of-entry; and ensuring that a receiving government official or designee signs for custody to record the transfer; in addition to other requirements specific to each country, such as certain hours during which repatriations may be conducted.

CONCLUSION

DHS cares deeply about what happens to the children in its custody and takes seriously its responsibility to protect them from human smuggling, trafficking, and other criminal actions. There is perhaps no bigger source of frustration for our Department than encountering children who have been exploited or abused by smugglers and traffickers. DHS is committed to working with our partners in HHS to ensure that UACs are protected from trafficking and abuse while they are in the care of the U.S. Government. We look forward to continuing our work with this Subcommittee, with our partners at HHS, and others throughout the Federal Government to protect UACs from trafficking and abuse. Thank you for the opportunity to testify. We look forward to answering your questions.

Before the

“Examining Efforts by HHS, DHS, and DOJ to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children”

August 16, 2018

Chairman Portman and Ranking Member Carper, thank you for the opportunity to appear before this Subcommittee on behalf of the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). I am Jonathan White, a career officer in the U.S. Public Health Service Commissioned Corps and have served in HHS in three administrations. I am presently assigned to the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response (ASPR), and previously served as the Deputy Director of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) for the Unaccompanied Alien Children's (UAC) Program. I will provide an update on an interagency effort that HHS expects to have a positive impact on the work of the UAC program.

Checking the Background of Sponsors and their Cohabitants

HHS has a process for placing UAC with parents or other sponsors that is designed to comply with the 1997 Flores Settlement Agreement, the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (HSA), and the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA), and ensures the care and safety of UAC referred to ORR.

Memorandum of Agreement with the Department of Homeland Security

The Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) with the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), signed to become effective on June 7, 2018, is an enhancement to HHS policy to require fingerprint background checks for parents or other sponsors and other adults living in the household. The MOA also improves the process for the Departments to share information about UAC at the time of referral from U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement or U.S. Customs and Border Protection to ORR, while in the care and custody of ORR, and upon release from ORR care and custody. DHS and HHS recognize special attention is required to ensure the transfer, placement, and release of UAC in a manner that is safe for the UAC and the communities into which they are released.

The MOA sets forth a process by which DHS will provide HHS with information necessary to conduct suitability assessments for sponsors using appropriate Federal, State, and local law enforcement and immigration sources. Specifically, ORR requires a background check of all potential sponsors, including parents and cohabitants. Under the MOA, ORR will transmit the fingerprints to DHS to perform criminal and immigration status checks on ORR's behalf. DHS will then submit the results to ORR.

The information sharing addressed in the MOA is consistent with the requirement of the TVPRA that the Secretaries of DHS and HHS "develop policies and programs to ensure that unaccompanied alien children in the United States are protected from traffickers and other persons seeking to victimize or otherwise engage such children in criminal, harmful, or exploitative activity." 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(1). In fact, the MOA provides a framework to implement the more specific mandate that upon request from the Secretary of HHS, the Secretary of DHS "shall provide information necessary to conduct suitability assessments from appropriate Federal, State, and local law enforcement and immigration databases." 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(3)(C). The MOA does not address all appropriate coordination between DHS and HHS on UAC matters, nor is that the intent of it.

Joint Concept of Operations

The DHS-HHS MOA of February 2016 called for the establishment of a working group comprised of UAC subject matter experts from both departments to address operational matters for inclusion in a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO). On July 31, 2018, the agencies completed the JCO, and I would like to highlight for you some of the significant matters covered in the JCO.

The JCO provides field guidance and standardization of interagency policies, procedures, and guidelines related to the processing of UAC encountered by DHS, whose care will be transferred to HHS, after being placed in removal proceedings pursuant to Section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). The JCO does not take the place of agency policy regarding the processing of UAC nor is it a substitute for legislative action, where required; rather it is an interagency agreement to standardize agency operational relations.

The JCO memorializes current practices for custody transfer and transportation, including the placement into and the discharge from ORR custody; immigration processing and influx matters; services requirements, such as medical evaluations and emergencies and the Flores minimum standards for HHS facilities; and the reporting of allegations of abuse. Cooperation between DHS and HHS regarding the transport, processing, placement, care, and discharge of UAC is essential. Both departments take their roles seriously and work closely with interagency and foreign counterparts on a daily basis to ensure the fulfillment both of DHS's mission to enforce federal law and HHS' mission to provide care and release consistent with the best interest of the child.

The agencies expect the JCO to be a “living document” that will change as laws, policies, and procedures change. HHS believes it is a significant component in the array of tools the agencies will use as we go forward in providing care and services to UAC.

Conclusion

I would like to thank the Senators for their continued interest in the Administration’s efforts. We have had many productive and beneficial meetings discussing this with your staff and will continue to assist you in any way we can.

Mr. Chairman, Ranking Member Carper, and other distinguished Members of the Subcommittee, thank you for the opportunity to speak with you today regarding the Department of Justice's role in efforts to protect unaccompanied alien children (UAC) from human trafficking and abuse. Stopping human trafficking and abuse is a top priority for the Department, and I welcome the opportunity to talk about the Department's efforts in ending this scourge, especially in the context of illegal immigration.

Before discussing UAC specifically, let me first provide information about the Department's anti-trafficking work in general. The Department marshals numerous resources across many different components to combat human trafficking and abuse. Earlier this year the Attorney General convened a Human Trafficking Summit to emphasize the Department's strong commitment to fighting this menace and to discuss ways to build on its successes in combating trafficking. All 94 of the Department's U.S. Attorneys' Offices have designated Human Trafficking Coordinators, and they have developed anti-trafficking strategies for their districts in order to help ensure effective enforcement of the law. Their efforts are assisted by the Department's Human Trafficking Prosecution Unit (HTPU), which focuses on forced labor, transnational sex trafficking, and sex trafficking of adults; and Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section, which focuses on sex trafficking of minors within the United States and the sexual exploitation of minors outside of the United States when it is committed by United States citizens or permanent residents. In FY 2017 the Department secured convictions against nearly 500 traffickers, and its prosecution efforts on this front continue unabated.

The Department also works with other federal agency partners, including the Department of Homeland Security (DHS), and with international partners and foreign governments, in order to fight trafficking both in the United States and abroad. In 2017, for example, the Department, working in conjunction with DHS and the government of Mexico through a bilateral initiative, secured convictions against eight members of the Rendon-Reyes Sex Trafficking Organization for sex trafficking adults and minors from Mexico and Central America.

The Department's efforts to combat trafficking also extend beyond criminal prosecutions. For instance, the HTPU provides anti-trafficking training and technical assistance to federal, state, and local enforcement partners. The Department also works with trafficking victims to help ensure their rights are respected and recover any restitution. The Department administers numerous grant programs related to anti-human trafficking efforts, principally programs to aid survivors. In FY 2017, the Department invested more than $47 million in programming to combat human trafficking, with most funding supporting direct services to survivors.

In accordance with the law, the Department has established policies to ensure that UAC in the United States are protected from traffickers and other individuals who may seek to harm them. For aliens in removal proceedings, employees of the Department's Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR) follow established protocols, as required by law, for referring cases of suspected child abuse or human trafficking. For UAC in particular, EOIR also administers the Legal Orientation Program for Custodians of UAC (LOPC) in cooperation with the Department of Health and Human Services. The LOPC provides legal orientation services to custodians of UAC, including information regarding a custodian's responsibility to ensure the UAC's appearance at all immigration proceedings and a custodian's responsibility to protect the child from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking. The LOPC currently operates in fifteen locations nationwide and is supported by a nationwide call center.

In the immigration context human trafficking often goes hand-in-hand with alien smuggling and schemes to facilitate the improper entry of aliens into the United States, as both traffickers and smugglers seek to exploit weaknesses in border security and enforcement of the law. Children who are smuggled into the United States are especially vulnerable to human trafficking. Consequently, the Department prioritizes criminal enforcement of immigration laws passed by Congress. Further, it maintains no blanket exemption from prosecution for those who violate the laws passed by Congress, including for smugglers and human traffickers.

Executive Order 13767 directed the Attorney General to establish guidelines and allocate resources to ensure that border prosecutions enforcing the immigration laws Congress has passed are a high priority of the Department. On April 11, 2017, the Attorney General issued a memorandum to all federal prosecutors outlining certain immigration-related offenses, including alien harboring and smuggling under 8 U.S.C. § 1324, as high priorities for criminal prosecution. Additionally, the Attorney General directed each district to designate a Border Security Coordinator to be responsible for, among other activities, overseeing the investigation and prosecution of these offenses. Further, Executive Order 13773 made the dismantling of transnational criminal organizations, including human trafficking rings, a clear policy priority of the Executive Branch.

Although the Department of Justice generally has no operational or logistical role in either the care or processing of aliens for removal, including UAC, it recognizes that UAC in immigration proceedings are an issue of significant concern. There are over 80,000 pending UAC cases currently before EOIR, which is approximately eleven percent of the overall pending caseload. Over seventy percent of those cases have been pending for over one year. In FY 2018 to date, only 9600 UAC cases have been completed in immigration court, compared to 135,000 non-UAC cases that have been completed. Furthermore, each month approximately 580 UAC fail to attend their immigration proceedings, and the rate of UAC removal orders issued in absentia has risen significantly since FY 2014. Approximately 6000 to 7000 UAC annually have failed to attend their immigration court hearings in recent years, and UAC are about twice as likely to fail to appear for immigration court as the overall alien population. In short, the data reflects significant concerns with UAC cases in immigration proceedings related to ensuring both that UAC appear at their hearings and that UAC cases are resolved in a timely manner consistent with due process.

Our current immigration system faces numerous challenges, ranging from a lack of clarity regarding criminal grounds of removability to space and resource constraints to the use of litigation to make nationwide law rather than the use of rulemaking or legislation. Issues with UAC in immigration proceedings have added to these challenges, as have efforts by traffickers to exploit weaknesses in the overall system. Despite these challenges, the Department of Justice is unequivocally committed to bringing to justice anyone who engages in the abominable crime of human trafficking, including the trafficking of UAC, and it stands ready to work with Congress to strengthen existing laws in order to achieve that goal.

I. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Since 2015, the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations has conducted extensive oversight of federal government programs designed to care for children who enter the United States without a parent or legal guardian and ensure they are not trafficked or abused. Although the Department of Health and Human Services (“HHS”) and Department of Homeland Security (“DHS”) have taken incremental steps toward improving the care of these children—called unaccompanied alien children (“UACs”) under federal law—they still do not take sufficient responsibility for guarding their safety and ensuring they appear at their immigration court proceedings.

Most significantly, no agency claims any legal responsibility for the children’s well-being once HHS places them with sponsors—including sponsors who are not their parents or legal guardians—and no agency makes any effort to ensure UACs placed with sponsors appear at their immigration court proceedings. And while DHS and HHS recently completed a Joint Concept of Operations (“JCO”)—some 17 months after it was due—the JCO only addresses current policy and fails to address any of the recommendations for improving the UAC system offered by the Subcommittee or the Government Accountability Office (“GAO”). Thus the JCO is largely a recitation of the status quo, and does little to offer hope that federal agencies are working effectively to improve UAC safety and ensure that the immigration system is functioning properly.

HHS, DHS, and the Department of Justice (“DOJ”) have taken some modest steps in the right direction, but major deficiencies persist that leave the children at significant risk for trafficking and abuse and undermine our immigration system. This report documents the Subcommittee’s findings over the past two and a half years since its initial hearing and report on UACs.

Over the past six years, more than 200,000 children unaccompanied by parents or legal guardians have entered the United States without legal status. This influx of children strains the federal government’s limited resources and poses significant challenges for immigration enforcement. When DHS apprehends UACs, it must transfer them to the HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement (“ORR”) within 72 hours. ORR then works to place those children with adult sponsors in the United States—typically a parent or other family member, but in some instances, non-family members—to await their immigration court proceedings. If ORR cannot place a child with a sponsor, ORR continues to house the child in the least restrictive environment appropriate for that specific child’s circumstances until completion of any removal proceedings in immigration court.

In 2015, the Subcommittee learned that over the course of four months in 2014, ORR placed eight children with members of a human trafficking ring. The traffickers lured the children into the United States with promises of education and a better life. After DHS apprehended the children and transferred them to HHS, members of the ring applied to serve as their sponsors by posing as family members or friends of the children. Once HHS placed the children with the traffickers, the traffickers put the children into forced labor on an egg farm in Marion, Ohio. The children worked for no pay for 12 hours a day, six to seven days a week, and lived in deplorable conditions. The traffickers threatened them and their families with violence if the children did not comply with them. Ultimately, DOJ charged seven defendants with a range of crimes, including human trafficking, forced labor, conspiracy, witness tampering, and encouraging another person to illegally enter the United States. As of this report, six of those defendants have been convicted for their roles in the scheme and sentenced to prison; the seventh case has not yet been decided.

In response to these tragic events, in 2015, the Subcommittee investigated HHS's process for screening potential UAC sponsors and other safeguards to protect UACs from trafficking and abuse. The Subcommittee found that HHS failed to conduct sufficient background checks of potential sponsors and other adult members of their households; failed to conduct site visits of the sponsors' homes; failed to recognize that a group of sponsors was accumulating multiple unrelated children; and, in one instance, permitted a sponsor to block a child-welfare case worker from visiting one of the victims. The Subcommittee also found that sponsors frequently failed to ensure that the children appeared for their immigration court proceedings, usually causing them to be ordered deported and to lose their opportunity to make their case to stay in the United States. And of particular significance, the Subcommittee found that once HHS places children with sponsors, no federal agency acknowledges any responsibility for the children's safety.

On January 28, 2016, the Subcommittee held a hearing and released a report detailing the deficiencies it found in HHS's processes for ensuring the safety of these children. One month after the hearing, HHS and DHS entered into a Memorandum of Agreement ("Agreement I") stating their commitment to protecting UACs both before and after HHS places them with sponsors. In Agreement I, DHS and HHS committed to establishing the JCO to define their respective responsibilities to protect these children within one year—by February 22, 2017.

Through continued oversight, the Subcommittee found that DHS and HHS failed to address many of the deficiencies the Subcommittee previously identified. Moreover, the departments failed to meet their own deadline for the JCO by more than 17 months. When Subcommittee staff asked DHS about the delay, DHS Assistant Secretary for Border, Immigration, and Trade Policy Michael Dougherty responded that he did not see the point in finishing the JCO and did not understand why the Subcommittee cared about it because the JCO only would reduce current policies to writing. The Subcommittee explained the importance of putting policies in writing to provide accountability and transparency. It was evident that the departments did not regard the JCO as a high priority.

Following a Subcommittee hearing in April 2018 addressing the status of the JCO, DHS and HHS committed to completing the JCO by July 30, 2018. The departments completed the JCO on July 31, 2018. Completing the JCO represents progress: it commits to writing a process and assigns responsibilities for the transfer of UACs and sponsor background checks. This provides certainty to the departments and transparency to the public. But it only reflects longstanding protocol, not improvements in the system that would better guard the safety of UACs and ensure they appear for their immigration court proceedings.

The Subcommittee also learned of additional problems in the UAC program beyond what it observed in 2015. HHS testified that when it made 30-day follow-up telephone calls to UACs placed with sponsors over a three-month period in 2017, it “could not ascertain with certainty” the whereabouts of 1,475 of those children, and 28 had run away from their sponsors. HHS argues that it has no responsibility to track these children after placement and took no action based on the results of these calls to find those children.

According to DHS officials, HHS regularly fails to provide required post-placement plans to DHS for children in HHS care who turn 18 years old. Through these plans, HHS is supposed to update DHS on the child’s circumstances and recommend whether DHS should take the child into custody or release the child on his or her own recognizance once the child ages out of the UAC program. HHS also does not contract with appropriate residential treatment facilities to house children who need both significant psychiatric services and housing in a secure setting.

Although DOJ immigration courts have more than 700,000 backlogged cases—more than 80,000 of which are UAC cases—DOJ has failed to hire its allotted number of immigration court judges. It also has not explored options for making court proceedings more accessible to UACs to increase the likelihood that they will appear for their immigration court proceedings.

Furthermore, some steps DHS and HHS have taken to improve the UAC program may have unintended consequences. At midnight on the night before the Subcommittee’s April 2018 hearing, DHS and HHS released another Memorandum of Agreement (“Agreement II”) governing information sharing between the agencies regarding potential sponsors. Agreement II requires HHS to share the immigration status of potential sponsors and other adults in their households with DHS to facilitate HHS’s background checks. Agreement II may improve UAC safety in some respects because HHS will have increased information about potential sponsors. Advocates for UACs have expressed concern, however, that Agreement II will deter potential sponsors from stepping forward to claim UACs because most potential sponsors are undocumented and will fear providing their information for use by DHS. If those concerns come to fruition, fewer sponsors will be available to claim UACs, and HHS will have to house a greater number of UACs for longer periods of time.

Although HHS and DHS have taken incremental steps toward improving the care of UACs, they still do not take sufficient responsibility for ensuring these children's safety and for ensuring they appear at their immigration court proceedings. DOJ also has not done all it can to reduce the backlog of immigration court cases. Most significantly, no agency claims any responsibility for the children's well-being once HHS places them with sponsors who are not their parents or legal guardians. These deficiencies compromise the well-being of children in the government's care, leave the children at significant risk for trafficking and abuse, and undermine our immigration system.

This report documents the Subcommittee's findings over the past two and a half years since its initial hearing and report in January 2016 on UACs. The Subcommittee has focused on weaknesses in the care of children who arrive in the United States unaccompanied and are placed with sponsors who are not their parents or legal guardians.

Most of these problems started under the Obama Administration and have continued into the Trump Administration. Over the past four months, however, the Trump Administration took steps that exacerbated these problems. Although this report does not address the ongoing family separation crisis in detail, it is important to note the strains that crisis currently is placing on the UAC program. On April 6, 2018, the Attorney General directed all U.S. Attorney's Offices along the Southwest Border to prosecute all DHS referrals of individuals under 8 U.S.C. § 1325(a), which prohibits both attempted illegal entry and illegal entry into the United States by an alien—the so-called “zero tolerance” policy.¹ One month later, DHS began referring adults who arrived in family units to DOJ for prosecution. Under the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act (“TVPRA”)² and a 1997 consent decree called the Flores Agreement,³ the government must place

UACs in the least restrictive setting that is in the best interests of the child. In 2016, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit expanded that requirement to children arriving in the United States with their parents.⁴ Because those authorities limit detention of children with accompanying adults, when the U.S. Marshals Service took custody of parents, their children were separated from them and effectively became unaccompanied. DHS then transferred the children to ORR, which processed them as UACs.

By June 20, 2018, DHS stopped referring adult aliens traveling with children for prosecution.⁵ Over those 10 weeks, however, the Administration separated more than 2500 children from their parents.⁶ Once separated, the children became UACs and were transferred to HHS custody. Since June, the Administration has been working under a court order to reunite the families. As of this report, 1,569 of those children were reunited with their parents in ICE custody and 423 were discharged—most released to sponsors.⁷ Approximately 559 children, however, have not been reunited with their families and remain in HHS care.⁸

These burdens on HHS—processing and housing these additional UACs and working to reunite the families—have stretched thin its already-limited resources for the UAC program. For example, although the Subcommittee has repeatedly asked HHS to update its numbers regarding the results of its 30-day wellness check telephone calls, HHS told the Subcommittee that it can either work to reunite families or update data—but not both.⁹ Because of the toll the family reunification effort is taking on HHS's resources, HHS claims it is unable to respond to Congress regarding the thousands of other children who arrived in the country unaccompanied and who were placed with sponsors this year.

II. THE SUBCOMMITTEE'S INVESTIGATION

Since its January 2016 hearing and report, the Subcommittee has continued its oversight of the departments' processes for caring for unaccompanied alien children. On April 26, 2018, the Subcommittee held a follow-up hearing to inquire about the overdue JCO and allow the public to hear directly from DHS and HHS officials regarding how they protect these children.

In the course of its continued oversight, the Subcommittee has received numerous briefings from HHS, DHS, and DOJ. The briefings addressed the agencies' processes for apprehending UACs, transporting them to HHS, placing them with sponsors, ensuring their safety and appearance at immigration court proceedings, and adjudicating immigration cases. The Subcommittee also received briefings from the DHS Office of Inspector General, HHS Office of Inspector General, and the GAO.

The Subcommittee has met or spoken with 16 organizations that provide services, such as legal representation and welfare services, to UACs, either on a pro bono basis or under an HHS grant. The Subcommittee also spoke with four state government officials regarding states' responsibilities to provide services to UACs, including public education and welfare and emergency services. Subcommittee staff visited the Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center, a secure facility that houses about 30 UACs found guilty of a crime or deemed to be a risk to themselves or others.

III. FINDINGS OF FACTS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Findings of Fact

- (1) No federal agency claims legal responsibility or authority to ensure UACs are not being trafficked or abused once ORR places a child with a sponsor. HHS officials recently offered conflicting testimony on this issue. HHS Director of the Administration for Children and Families Steven Wagner testified that HHS is reviewing its policy. HHS Secretary Alex Azar testified that HHS's previous interpretation—that the department has no authority—stands. Current ORR leadership told the Subcommittee staff they recognize that prior administrations' interpretation of HHS's legal authority places these children in a "legal no man's land."
- (2) DHS and HHS took 29 months to create a JCO governing their responsibilities for the care and safety of UACs and missed their own deadline by 17 months. Moreover, one senior DHS official questioned why Subcommittee staff believed the JCO was important, implying that he did not see value in completing the JCO and committing DHS and HHS processes to paper.
- (3) The JCO reflects the status quo and does not address any of the recommendations offered by the Subcommittee or the GAO. The JCO offers no clarification of the federal government's responsibility for UACs once HHS places them with sponsors.

- (4) No federal agency tracks UACs after ORR places them with sponsors. Without a method to track UACs after placement, the federal government has few means to determine whether the children are safe or to ensure they appear at their immigration court proceedings.
- (5) HHS's follow-up telephone calls to UACs placed with sponsors from October to December 2017 demonstrate that HHS does not know with certainty where approximately 20 percent of UACs are three months after placement. ORR found that out of 7,635 attempted telephone calls, 28 UACs "had run away" and "ORR was unable to determine with certainty the whereabouts of 1,475 UAC." In response to those findings, HHS took no further action to determine their whereabouts.
- (6) HHS has directed its legal service grantees to cease providing legal representation to new UACs placed with sponsors because it believes its authority to provide such services is "shaky." According to UAC legal service providers, UACs represented by attorneys are significantly more likely to appear at their immigration court proceedings.
- (7) No agency ensures UACs placed with sponsors appear at their immigration court proceedings or enforces the sponsorship agreement requiring sponsors to ensure the children's appearance at the proceedings. If UACs fail to appear at their immigration court proceedings, the court typically will enter an in absentia removal order. Those children lose their opportunity to present a case for staying in the United States unless they petition to re-open their case, and if they leave the country, they likely will be barred from future entry.
- (8) UACs are failing to appear for their immigration court proceedings at increased rates. The percentage of UACs ordered removed in absentia increased from 41 percent in 2016 (6,089 out of 15,016 completed cases) to 48 percent in 2017 (6,634 out of 13,758 completed cases).
- (9) According to UAC legal service providers, many UACs fail to appear for their immigration court proceedings because the courts are located far from where they live and they have no means to get to court. Some UACs also fail to appear because their sponsors do not realize they need to file for a change of venue if they move.

- (10) The backlog of immigration court cases, including UAC cases, is significant, and DOJ does not have enough immigration court judges to process the cases. Currently, 732,730 immigration cases total are pending; of those, 80,266 are UAC cases. More than 8,000 UAC cases have been pending for more than three years.
- (11) DOJ has not hired its full allotted complement of immigration court judges. Currently, 355 immigration judges handle all immigration court cases, including 29 judges invested on August 10, 2018. DOJ has authority to hire 129 additional judges.
- (12) The median length of time UAC cases currently have been pending since the filing of a notice to appear is 480 days. This significant lapse of time makes it less likely UACs will appear for their immigration proceedings.
- (13) HHS does not notify state governments before placing UACs with sponsors in those states. Without state notification, states are hamstrung in providing welfare and other services to the children or to ensure they attend public school.
- (14) HHS has a plan to notify state governments before placing UACs previously held in secure facilities, but HHS has failed to implement that plan. HHS explained it cannot implement the plan because it cannot determine whom to notify in the state governments.
- (15) HHS regularly fails to submit required post-placement plans to DHS for UACs who turn age 18 while in HHS's care. These plans are supposed to inform DHS about each UAC and recommend whether DHS should detain the UAC or release the UAC into the community.
- (16) HHS does not contract with appropriate facilities to house UACs who must be held in a secure facility and who also have significant mental health or emotional issues. Housing UACs who have significant mental health or emotional issues with the general population in secure facilities exposes those UACs, the facility staff, and other children to an increased risk of harm.
- (17) Due to delays in ORR's internal review processes, some UACs are spending more time than necessary in secure facilities. This is contrary to the statutory mandate that UACs should be placed in the least restrictive setting that is in the best interests of the child.

Recommendations

As discussed in detail below, HHS has not implemented most of the recommendations in the Subcommittee's 2016 report, Protecting Unaccompanied Alien Children from Trafficking and Other Abuses: The Role of the Office of Refugee Resettlement. The Subcommittee offers the following recommendations in addition to the recommendations in that report.

- (1) HHS should acknowledge that, under the TVPRA and the Flores Agreement, it has the legal responsibility to ensure that children it places with sponsors who are not the children's parents or legal guardians are not abused or trafficked. If HHS continues to refuse to acknowledge its responsibility, Congress should pass legislation clarifying HHS's obligations.
- (2) DHS and HHS should review their information-sharing processes and methods outlined in the JCO to ensure that email communications do not lead to errors in transferring UACs from DHS to HHS custody.
- (3) DHS and HHS should evaluate their information-sharing policies described in Agreement II to mitigate circumstances that could dissuade potential sponsors from claiming UACs because of fear of enforcement.
- (4) HHS should track UACs after it places them with sponsors to ensure that they are safe and appear at their immigration court proceedings.
- (5) If HHS cannot reach a UAC after the UAC is placed with a sponsor by telephone, HHS should make continued efforts to determine the location and living conditions of the UAC.
- (6) HHS should enforce the sponsorship agreement requirement that sponsors ensure that the UACs appear at their immigration court proceedings.
- (7) HHS should increase its efforts to enlist and coordinate pro bono legal services for children living with sponsors.
- (8) DOJ should hire its full allotted complement of 464 immigration court judges.
- (9) HHS should determine the appropriate point of contact in all 50 state governments to notify regarding the placement of UACs within each state.

- (10) HHS should notify state governments before placing UACs with sponsors in those states.
- (11) HHS should offer training to state and local government officials to educate them on their role, responsibilities, and authorities with regard to UACs.
- (12) HHS should always submit the required post-placement plans to DHS for UACs who turn age 18 while in HHS's care.
- (13) HHS should contract with a secure residential treatment facility to house UACs who must be held in a secure facility and who have significant mental or emotional issues.
- (14) HHS should streamline its decision-making process for determining whether children in secure or staff-secure facilities are eligible to move to a lower level facility or for release to a sponsor.

IV. BACKGROUND

Under the Homeland Security Act of 2002, “unaccompanied alien children” are children under 18-years-old who have “no lawful immigration status in the United States” who either do not have a parent or legal guardian in the United States or whose parent or legal guardian in the United States cannot care for them.¹⁰ When UACs enter the United States, two DHS agencies—Customs and Border Protection (“CBP”) and Immigration and Customs Enforcement (“ICE”)—are responsible for apprehending them. An immigration court run by the DOJ Executive Office for Immigration Review (“EOIR”) ultimately hears the child’s case.

Between a child’s apprehension and final immigration court proceedings, HHS is responsible for caring for the child and, typically, placing him or her with a sponsor in the United States. Two main authorities govern the treatment of UACs during that time: the TVPRA and the 1997 Flores Agreement. This section details the responsibilities of each agency from apprehension of a UAC through the UAC’s immigration court proceedings and the legal authorities governing the treatment of UACs throughout that process.

A. Department of Homeland Security: Apprehension and Transfer

DHS has an intermittent role in the UAC program. Two of its divisions, CBP and ICE, are charged with apprehending undocumented immigrants, including ¹⁰ 6 U.S.C. § 279(g)(2).

UACs—CBP at the country’s borders¹¹ and ICE within the country’s interior¹². CBP apprehends the majority of UACs.¹³ Once they apprehend a UAC, they hold the child in a DHS facility generally for no more than 72 hours.¹⁴ DHS then transports the child to an ORR facility and transfers physical custody of the child to ORR.¹⁵ In 2017, DHS referred 40,810 UACs into HHS’s care.¹⁶ As of March 31, 2018, HHS had received 21,574 referrals in FY2018.¹⁷

Recently, ICE, CBP, and ORR signed a Memorandum of Agreement (“Agreement II”) governing information sharing between the agencies regarding UACs.¹⁸ Agreement II provides that at the time of the initial transfer of a UAC from CBP or ICE to ORR, the apprehending agency will electronically transfer to ORR through the UAC Portal—an online information-sharing system—information about the UAC. That information includes basic biographical data such as name, date and country of birth, and potential sponsor information; situational factors, such as information about the UAC’s health and travel companions; human trafficking indicators; and known criminal or behavioral issues.¹⁹

Agreement II states that DHS “will normally include in the Transfer Packet” copies of relevant documents, including identity documents; immigration records; the record of the person and property transferred; the child’s notice to appear in immigration court; copies of any criminal records; and “CBP form 93, Unaccompanied Alien Child Screening Addendum (trafficking information), if conducted.”²⁰ Within 24 hours of receiving notification from CBP or ICE that a UAC needs placement, ORR sends an email notifying both ICE and CBP of the

For children age 14 and older, a U.S. Border Patrol agent or CBP officer usually serves a Notice to Appear ("NTA") on the child, which the child must sign.²³ If the child does not speak English, CBP provides a translator.²⁴ For children under age 14 or who are over age 14 and not capable of signing the NTA, CBP transfers the child to HHS and serves the NTA on HHS—usually via hand delivery, but sometimes by U.S. mail.²⁵ After service upon the child or HHS, an ICE Field Office Juvenile Coordinator files the NTA with the immigration court. ICE usually delays filing for up to 60 days to give HHS time to release the UAC to a sponsor to ensure the NTA is filed in the jurisdiction where the UAC lives with the sponsor.²⁶

B. Department of Health and Human Services: Care While Awaiting Immigration Court Proceedings

ORR, a division of the HHS Administration for Children and Family Services, is responsible for UACs until resolution of their immigration court proceedings or until they turn 18, whichever comes first. This report details below the two main authorities that govern HHS's care of UACs during that time: the TVPRA and the 1997 Flores Settlement Agreement. It also describes the various HHS housing and care alternatives available for UACs.

1. Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act

Under the TVPRA, in general, within 72 hours of apprehension, DHS must transfer UACs to ORR.²⁷ The TVPRA provides that “the care and custody of all unaccompanied alien children, including responsibility for their detention, where appropriate, shall be the responsibility of the Secretary of Health and Human Services.”²⁸ HHS is to “promptly place[]” the children “in the least restrictive setting that is in the best interest of the child.”²⁹

ORR places most UACs with adult sponsors in the United States who agree to care for them and ensure their appearance at immigration proceedings.³⁰ Between October 1, 2014 and June 30, 2018, HHS released 149,867 UACs to sponsors.³¹ According to HHS, in 2017, ORR released 49 percent of UACs to one of their parents (“Category 1 sponsors”). It released 41 percent to close relatives (“Category 2 sponsors”). And it released 10 percent to distant relatives or unrelated adults (“Category 3 sponsors”).³² This report describes how ORR accommodates children for whom sponsors are not available or appropriate in subsection (d) below.

Before placing a child with a sponsor, the HHS Secretary must determine that “the proposed custodian is capable of providing for the child’s physical and mental well-being.”³³ The Secretary also, “at a minimum,” must verify “the custodian’s identity and relationship to the child, if any,” and must make “an independent finding that the individual has not engaged in any activity that would indicate a potential risk to the child.”³⁴ In practice, ORR Federal Field Specialists—field staff located throughout the country, Case Managers, and contractor Case Coordinators carry out those duties.³⁵

The Secretary then must determine whether a home study—an in-depth review of the child’s potential living circumstances³⁶—is necessary. The Secretary must conduct home studies for children who meet certain criteria, such as children who have been the victim of a severe form of trafficking or physical or sexual abuse, special needs children, or children for whom the sponsor “clearly presents a risk of abuse, maltreatment, exploitation, or trafficking.”³⁷ In addition, the Secretary may conduct home studies for other children.³⁸

The Secretary must provide post-release services, such as mental health care and social services, for children for whom a home study is conducted.³⁹ HHS offers those services through grants to service providers.⁴⁰ Using its discretion, HHS also is offering post-release services to an expanded number of children.⁴¹ In Fiscal Year 2017, HHS received funding to provide post-release services to 11,000 children out of 41,000 children released to sponsors.⁴² Even in cases in which HHS is required to provide post-release services, however, sponsors are not required to accept those services. ORR Director Scott Lloyd characterized them as “merely a set of voluntary services” HHS makes available to sponsors.⁴³

In addition to governing the placement of UACs into appropriate living situations, the TVPRA requires the secretaries of HHS, DHS, and the Department of State, and the Attorney General to develop policies and programs to protect UACs in the United States from human traffickers.⁴⁴

2. The Flores Agreement

In conjunction with the TVPRA and other statutory provisions, a 1997 consent decree known as the Flores Settlement Agreement (“Flores Agreement”) also governs HHS’s care of unaccompanied alien children.⁴⁵ The former Immigration and Naturalization Service (“INS”) originally entered into the Flores Agreement for the federal government. HHS inherited the INS’s responsibilities under the Flores Agreement in the Homeland Security Act of 2002, which transferred to ORR “functions under the immigration laws of the United States with respect to the care of unaccompanied alien children that were vested by statute in, or performed by, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization.”⁴⁶

The Flores Agreement arose out of a class action lawsuit initiated in 1985 challenging INS’s policies to strip search unaccompanied alien children and to release them only to parents or legal guardians.⁴⁷ After more than a decade of litigation, the plaintiffs and the INS entered into a consent decree that set out “nationwide policy for the detention, release, and treatment of minors in the custody of INS.”⁴⁸ It established a policy that the INS would:

place each detained minor in the least restrictive setting appropriate to the minor’s age and special needs, provided that such setting is consistent with its interests to ensure the minor’s timely appearance before the INS and the immigration courts and to protect the minor’s well-being and that of others.⁴⁹

It clarified that nothing in the agreement:

shall require the INS to release a minor to any person or agency whom the INS has reason to believe may harm or neglect the minor or fail to present him or her before the INS or the immigration courts when requested to do so.⁵⁰

If the INS could not place a child with a sponsor, the Flores Agreement outlines conditions for housing the child in government-contracted facilities.⁵¹

Under the Flores Agreement, sponsors must execute an agreement to, among other things:

- “provide for the minor’s physical, mental, and financial well-being”;
- “ensure the minor’s presence at all future proceedings before the INS and the immigration court”;
- “notify the INS of any change of address within five . . . days following a move”; and
- “in the case of custodians other than parents or legal guardians, not transfer custody of the minor to another party without the prior written permission of the District Director.”⁵²

The agreement states that “[a] positive suitability assessment may be required” before releasing a child to a sponsor, including investigation of the sponsor’s living conditions, verification of the sponsor’s identity and employment, interviews of household members, and a home visit.⁵³

The Flores Agreement makes clear that “[t]he INS may terminate the custody arrangements and assume legal custody of any minor whose custodian fails to comply with the agreement The INS, however, shall not terminate the custody arrangements for minor violations of [the provision requiring notification of the INS of change of address].”⁵⁴ HHS, however, reported to the Subcommittee that it did not inherit that authority under Flores and cannot terminate sponsorship.⁵⁵

Claire McCaskill, Ranking Member, S. Permanent Subcomm. on Investigations (Sept. 13, 2016).

3. DHS and HHS Information Sharing While a UAC is in HHS Physical Custody

a) Background Checks

Under Agreement II, HHS and DHS committed to sharing resources to facilitate sponsor background checks. ORR is to request information from ICE on “all potential sponsors and adult members of potential sponsors’ households, in order to aid HHS in determining the suitability of a potential sponsor.”⁵⁶ The information-sharing process is supposed to proceed as follows: ORR notifies potential sponsors that ORR will give their information to ICE to run a background check.⁵⁷ ORR provides ICE with the “name, date of birth, address, fingerprints . . . and any available identification documents or biographic information regarding the potential sponsor and all adult members of the potential sponsor’s household.”⁵⁸

ICE then provides ORR with information about the potential sponsors and other adults in the household within 72 hours, including information regarding “citizenship, immigration status, criminal history, and immigration history.”⁵⁹ ORR remains responsible for searching other databases, including public records, the Sex Offender Registry, National Criminal History, Child Abuse and Neglect, State Criminal History Repository, and local police records.⁶⁰

b) UAC Incident Reporting

While UACs are in ORR care—either while awaiting sponsorship or living in one of the settings described below—ORR must report information regarding certain circumstances to various DHS components within 48 hours.⁶¹ Specifically, ORR must report a UAC’s unauthorized absence from the HHS facility; arrest of a UAC; alleged or suspected fraud, human smuggling, human trafficking, drug trafficking, weapons trafficking, or gang-related activity; abuse of a UAC while in ICE or CBP custody; violence by a UAC; or a change in the UAC’s level of care (e.g., from a secure facility to a staff-secure facility).⁶²

If ICE or CBP becomes aware of any criminal information about a UAC that they did not have at the time of transfer, they are to notify ORR and provide supporting documentation as quickly as possible to help ORR determine if it should transfer the UAC to a different setting.⁶³

4. Alternatives to Sponsorship

When sponsors are not available or appropriate to house a UAC, HHS houses those children with grantee organizations in a variety of settings. As of August 9, 2018, HHS was housing 11,423 UACs, although that number fluctuates daily.⁶⁴ The average length of stay for a UAC in HHS care is 41 days.⁶⁵

HHS places children in settings appropriate to each child's needs. For example, HHS houses children without an appropriate sponsor in either a foster-care setting or in shelters until resolution of their immigration proceedings or until a sponsor becomes available.⁶⁶ Those facilities also include specialized housing for children with specific needs, such as very young (or "tender-aged") children; pregnant girls or girls who have infant children with them; mentally or physically disabled children; and children who are victims of abuse.⁶⁷

HHS houses UACs who pose a risk to themselves or the community or who are flight risks in more restrictive settings, in accordance with the Flores Agreement. HHS places children who pose a moderate risk in staff-secure shelters, where they generally have freedom within the shelter, but are monitored by staff.⁶⁸ For children who present a higher risk, HHS contracts with three youth detention facilities, which house the children in a secure setting.⁶⁹ Children housed in staff-secure or secure settings have the right to have their placements reviewed by the care provider staff, the UAC's case coordinator, and ORR every 30 days to determine whether they can be moved down a level or released to a sponsor.⁷⁰

If a child turns 18 while living in an HHS facility, the child's case is transferred to DHS.⁷¹ At that point, HHS is required to provide a post-placement report to DHS about the former UAC with recommendations for handling the case.⁷²

Servs. (Aug. 9, 2018) (572 of those children were separated from their parents from May to July 2018 under the Administration's zero-tolerance policy; the remainder are traditional UACs who arrived in the United States without an accompanying adult).

DHS then has the option to detain the former UAC or allow him or her to live in the community while awaiting his or her immigration court case.⁷³

C. Department of Justice: Adjudication of UAC Immigration Cases

As in adult civil immigration cases, the DOJ Executive Office for Immigration Review (“EOIR”) adjudicates UAC civil removal cases. ICE attorneys represent the government during immigration court proceedings.⁷⁴ As discussed above, after DHS serves the NTA upon either the child or HHS, an ICE Field Office Juvenile Coordinator files the NTA with an immigration court.⁷⁵ For UAC cases currently pending before the immigration courts, the median length of time the cases have been pending since the UAC’s notice to appear was filed is 480 days.⁷⁶ More than eight thousand cases have been pending for more than three years.⁷⁷

UACs typically argue that they are eligible to stay in the United States because they qualify for immigration relief, including asylum⁷⁸ or Special Immigrant Juvenile Status^{79,80}. USCIS officers have initial jurisdiction over UAC applications for asylum⁸¹ and Special Immigrant Juvenile Status.⁸² During the

⁷⁹ UACs are eligible for Special Immigrant Juvenile Status if they obtain a state court order stating that they cannot reunite with one or both of their parents because of abuse, neglect, or abandonment, and then apply to the United States Customs and Immigration Service for relief. pendency of those proceedings, the immigration court may stay removal proceedings.⁸³

If a UAC fails to appear for his or her court date, the immigration court typically follows a two-step process.⁸⁴ First, the court determines whether the notice was proper, generally looking for proof that the address on file for the UAC matches the mailed notice.⁸⁵ If so, the court considers whether the UAC is removable. The ICE counsel submits evidence at this point to establish removability.⁸⁶ If the government meets its burden of proof on both steps, the court submits an in absentia removal order.⁸⁷ An in absentia removal order can have serious consequences for a UAC: if the UAC leaves the country and attempts to re-enter, the UAC may be ineligible for various forms of immigration relief for 10 years after entry of the final removal order.⁸⁸

V. THE SUBCOMMITTEE'S 2015–2016 INVESTIGATION AND IMMEDIATE AFTERMATH

A. Subcommittee Investigation, Report, and Hearing

In 2015, the Subcommittee learned that over four months in 2014, a human trafficking ring lured Guatemalan children and adults to the United States with promises of jobs and education.⁸⁹ ORR failed to conduct appropriate background checks,⁹⁰ and consequently, placed eight of those children with sponsors in the United States who were affiliated with the trafficking ring.⁹¹ ORR missed red flags, such as sponsors requesting to host multiple children and one sponsor preventing a child-welfare case worker from visiting with one of the victims.⁹² For more than a year, the children were forced to work six or seven days a week, 12 hours per day on an egg farm in Marion, Ohio.⁹³ Their traffickers threatened physical harm to them and their families and withheld their paychecks to force them to work in deplorable conditions.⁹⁴

Six individuals were convicted and sentenced to federal prison for their participation in the trafficking scheme.⁹⁵ In December 2017, DOJ charged a seventh defendant for his participation in the labor trafficking scheme.⁹⁶

After learning about the Marion case in 2015, the Subcommittee investigated the circumstances that resulted in HHS placing these children with human traffickers, focusing on Category 3 sponsors—sponsors without a close relationship to the child, including distant relatives or unrelated adults. The Subcommittee reviewed HHS child placement case files, emails, and documents and interviewed ORR personnel.⁹⁷ On January 28, 2016, the Subcommittee released a report and held a hearing regarding the investigation.⁹⁸

The investigation “revealed that HHS has failed to take adequate steps to ensure that UACs are placed with safe and appropriate sponsors.”⁹⁹ The Subcommittee found systemic deficiencies in HHS’s UAC placement process, specifically:

- HHS’s process for verifying relationships between UACs and Category 3 sponsors was unreliable and vulnerable to abuse. HHS did not require Category 3 sponsors to provide any documentation of their relationship with the UACs they sought to sponsor.¹⁰⁰

HHS policy at that time also did not disqualify sponsors based on criminal history.¹⁰²
- HHS rarely conducted home studies. The agency performed home studies—that is, an inspection and evaluation of the physical home in which a child will be placed—in less than 4.3 percent of cases from 2013 through 2015, and it failed to conduct home studies in even some statutorily-mandated cases. HHS did not conduct any home studies in the Marion cases.¹⁰³
- After releasing a child to a sponsor, HHS allowed the sponsor to refuse post-release services offered to the child—and even to bar contact between the child and HHS care providers attempting to provide those services. That policy caused HHS to miss a potential opportunity to uncover the crime perpetrated in the Marion cases when one of the victim's sponsors refused to permit a social worker access to the child.¹⁰⁴
- HHS policy allowed non-relatives with criminal histories to sponsor children. HHS instructed care providers that no criminal offense was a per se bar to sponsorship.¹⁰⁵
- Sponsors often failed to ensure UACs appear at immigration proceedings. Failure to appear at an immigration hearing can have significant adverse consequences, and ensuring the child's appearance at immigration proceedings is a principal task of a child's sponsor. At the time of the Subcommittee's 2016 report, 40 percent of completed UAC immigration cases over an 18-month period resulted in an in absentia removal order based on the UAC's failure to appear.¹⁰⁶

- No federal agency claimed to have authority or responsibility for the care of UACs after they are placed with non-parental sponsors in the United States. HHS claimed it had no responsibility for the care and safety for UACs after it placed them with sponsors it selected, in tension with 8 U.S.C. § 1232, which makes the “care and custody” of all UACs the responsibility of HHS.¹⁰⁷
- ORR never promulgated its policies as regulations or subjected them to notice-and-comment rulemaking. Instead, ORR maintained most of its policies in a constantly-changing Policy Guide that gives no certainty to UAC care providers or to UACs, nor transparency to Congress or the public.¹⁰⁸

B. February 2016 Memorandum of Agreement

Shortly after the Subcommittee’s January 26, 2016 hearing, DHS and HHS entered a Memorandum of Agreement (“Agreement I”).¹⁰⁹ In Agreement I, the two agencies recognized their shared goals to ensure the “safe and expedited transfer and placement of UAC from DHS to HHS custody”; maximize efficiency in the use of resources; transmit information “to facilitate appropriate placement decisions”; “protect UAC in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking”; and “promote the effective immigration processing and safe repatriation and reintegration of UAC.”¹¹⁰ Agreement I was to provide a “framework for interagency coordination” for the agencies’ respective responsibilities.¹¹¹

Under Agreement I, the agencies agreed to establish a Joint Concept of Operations (“JCO”) “that should be completed no later than one year following the signing of this MOA, which should include, but need not be limited to standard protocols for consistent interagency cooperation on the care, processing, and transport of UAC.”¹¹² The JCO was supposed to be completed by February 22, 2017; it was not finished until 17 months later, on July 31, 2018.

The agencies also agreed to establish a Senior Leadership Council to coordinate agency cooperation with regard to UACs and to establish an Interagency Work Group to develop policies and resolve complaints about the UAC process.¹¹³

C. Limited HHS Reforms in 2015 and 2016

Following the 2015 indictment of the defendants in the Marion case and the January 2016 Subcommittee hearing and report, HHS announced limited changes to its UAC program policies, including:

- Post-Placement Follow-Up Calls: In 2015, HHS released a new policy providing that ORR must attempt to contact all UACs and their sponsors 30 days after release. According to the HHS Office of Inspector General, these calls allow ORR to identify and report concerns to local child welfare or law enforcement agencies.¹¹⁴
- National Call Center: In June 2015, HHS announced an ORR National Call Center—a 24-hour hotline available for UACs, parents, and sponsors to connect them to community resources.¹¹⁵
- Enhanced Background Checks: Under its prior policy, HHS only conducted background checks on potential sponsors. In January 2016, HHS changed its policies to require additional background checks on other adults living in the potential sponsor's household and other caregivers.¹¹⁶
- Additional Home Studies: According to HHS policy, a home study is now required if an individual seeks to sponsor multiple UACs.¹¹⁷ HHS policy states that HHS will perform a home study and provide post-release services, such as mental health treatment, to a broader set of potentially vulnerable UACs, including children 12-years-old and under.¹¹⁸

VI. THE SUBCOMMITTEE'S ONGOING INVESTIGATION: DHS AND HHS FAILURE TO ADDRESS 2016 FINDINGS

After its initial report and hearing in January 2016, the Subcommittee continued its oversight of the executive branch's care for UACs. The Subcommittee found that DHS and HHS took some steps to improve their care of UACs, such as running more consistent background checks on potential sponsors and other adults in the sponsors' households. The Subcommittee supports those efforts. The Subcommittee also found, however, that DHS and HHS have failed to address many of its previous recommendations to ensure UAC safety. Problems that started under the Obama Administration persist today under the Trump Administration.

As discussed below, the Subcommittee found that HHS and DHS have not addressed one of the most significant findings from the Subcommittee's investigation—that no federal agency claims responsibility for UACs placed with non-parental sponsors (Categories 2 and 3). HHS and DHS also failed to enter the JCO by February 22, 2017. In fact, they finally issued the JCO on July 31, 2018, 17 months beyond their own deadline, with no explanation for the delay. The JCO is limited to current, long-standing practice, and fails to address known deficiencies squarely within its scope. HHS still does not track UACs after HHS places them with sponsors, and the rate of UACs failing to appear at their immigration court proceedings is increasing. Neither HHS nor DOJ have taken meaningful steps to address those problems.

A. Continued Denial of Responsibility for Unaccompanied Alien Children After Placement

A decade ago, the HHS Office of Inspector General identified a foundational problem with the UAC program. After HHS places children with sponsors, no agency acknowledges that it has authority or responsibility for ensuring the children's safety. In March 2008, the Inspector General found that there was no formal agreement between DHS and HHS delineating their responsibilities with regard to UACs. And without such an agreement, "it is not clear which Department is responsible for ensuring the safety of children once they are released to sponsors and which Department is responsible for ensuring sponsors' continued compliance with sponsor agreements."¹¹⁹ In December 2008, Congress passed the TVPRA, which states that "the care and custody of all unaccompanied alien children, including responsibility for their detention, where appropriate, shall be the responsibility of the Secretary of Health and Human Services."¹²⁰

¹²⁰ 8 U.S.C. § 1232(b)(1).

In 2016, the Subcommittee confirmed that, in practice, nothing had changed since 2008. No agency believed it had responsibility for the care and safety for UACs after HHS places them with sponsors—a position in tension with the TVPRA, which places that responsibility on HHS.¹²¹ In its 2016 report, the Subcommittee explained that under the TVPRA, it is clear that the “care and custody” of all UACs are “the responsibility of HHS, without limitation.” The report highlighted that HHS’s interpretation is inconsistent with the Flores Agreement, which authorized the INS to terminate sponsorship in cases of abuse of neglect.¹²²

Over the past two and a half years, the Subcommittee has continued its oversight of the departments to ensure they made the recommended improvements—and, in particular, that HHS acknowledge its responsibility for UACs after HHS places them with non-parental sponsors. Some HHS officials at various points in time appear to be re-evaluating HHS’s responsibilities; others have continued to argue that HHS has no responsibility for these children. For example:

- In a February 2016 letter to Sen. Claire McCaskill, the then-Acting Assistant Secretary for the Administration for Children and Families wrote, “once a child is released to a sponsor, ORR’s legal and physical custody terminates.” He explained that the Homeland Security Act of 2002 and the TVPRA “set forth a system that is intended to be temporary in nature, with a focus on caring for children while in our physical custody, and releasing children to appropriate sponsors.” He argued that “if Congress had intended ORR’s legal custody to continue after a child is released to a sponsor, the TVPRA would not have needed certain of its post-release provisions.” He offered as an example that, had Congress intended HHS to have “continuing legal custody post-release,” “HHS would necessarily have the authority and responsibility to provide services to the child after release,” but, “[i]nstead, Congress specifically required follow-up services” in some cases, and “authorized follow-up services” in others. He also argued that the program would need to be “structured and resourced in a very different way” to accommodate long-term legal custody.¹²³
- In response to the Subcommittee’s questions for the record after the January 2016 hearing, HHS stated that “[t]he Flores consent decree cannot grant HHS any authority that it does not have by statute.” Thus, it is “HHS’s view . . . that ORR does not have the same ability to remove a child from a home and reassume custody as the former INS had at that time.”¹²⁴

- In a January 2018 briefing, ORR Director Scott Lloyd told Subcommittee staff ORR’s current interpretation of the TVPRA is that HHS no longer has responsibility for UACs once they are placed with sponsors because the children are no longer “unaccompanied.”¹²⁵ He continued, however, that HHS was reviewing its interpretation of the statute. He said ORR had submitted a request to the HHS Office of General Counsel asking (1) whether anything prohibits HHS from asserting a custodial relationship over a UAC post-placement and (2) whether anything requires a formal custodial role for HHS over UACs post-placement.¹²⁶ ORR sent follow-up questions to the Office of General Counsel after Mr. Lloyd briefed the Subcommittee.¹²⁷ Despite repeated requests for information, HHS has not told the Subcommittee whether the Office of General Counsel has responded to those questions.
- At the Subcommittee’s April 26, 2018 hearing, HHS’s Acting Assistant Secretary of the Administration for Children and Families Steven Wagner confirmed that “we are taking a fresh look at that question as a matter of both legal interpretation and appropriate policy.”¹²⁸
- In a May 2018 briefing, current ORR leadership told Subcommittee staff they recognize that prior Administrations’ interpretation of HHS’s legal authority places these children in a “legal no man’s land.”¹²⁹
- On June 26, 2018, HHS Secretary Alex Azar testified that “once [UACs] are placed with a sponsor, they are no longer subject to our jurisdiction. We cannot . . . pull a child back from a relative. We don’t have the legal authority. . . . We don't have any authority to go out and pull a child back from a sponsor once they're in that sponsor's custody."¹³⁰

These interpretations of HHS's responsibilities and authorities do not account for the plain language of the definition of "unaccompanied alien child," at least with regard to children HHS places with Category 2 and 3 sponsors. Those children remain unaccompanied and under the HHS Secretary's care. The Homeland Security Act of 2002 defines "unaccompanied alien child" as:

a child who—(A) has no lawful immigration status in the United States; (B) has not attained 18 years of age; and (C) with respect to whom—(i) there is no parent or legal guardian in the United States; or (ii) no parent or legal guardian in the United States is available to provide care and physical custody.¹³¹

Category 2 and 3 non-parental sponsors are not legal guardians of UACs unless they obtain an order from a state court. Thus, until the children are reunited with their parents or legal guardians, or until their sponsors obtain such an order, they remain unaccompanied alien children by definition, and still under the care and protection of HHS. Inferences drawn from grants of HHS's authority to provide services to these children do not alter the meaning of that provision. HHS's refusal to take responsibility for UACs throughout their immigration proceedings even in light of its statutory authority—particularly for those UACs it places with non-parental sponsors—undermines both UAC safety and the immigration system.

B. Failure to Enter Joint Concept of Operations on a Timely Basis

1. GAO and HHS OIG Recommendation for Agreement

In 2008, the HHS Inspector General recommended that DHS and HHS enter an agreement to define their responsibilities with regard to UACs. The HHS Inspector General found that “[w]hen responsibilities were divided between HHS and DHS, no formal memorandum of understanding . . . was established to clarify each Department’s roles.” And as discussed above, the Inspector General continued, “[I]t is not clear which Department is responsible for ensuring the safety of children once they are released to sponsors and which Department is responsible for ensuring sponsors’ continued compliance with sponsor agreements.”¹³²

In 2015, the GAO also highlighted the need for such an agreement. The GAO found that the transfer process from DHS to HHS was “inefficient and vulnerable to errors.” From reviewing emails from a pair of three-day periods in 2014, the GAO “identified miscommunications between agencies, as well as errors during both time periods, including UAC who had to be redesignated to different shelters after initial placements and UAC who were assigned to multiple shelters simultaneously.”¹³³

The GAO echoed the HHS Inspector General’s recommendation, advising that DHS and HHS “should jointly develop and implement a documented interagency process with clearly defined roles and responsibilities, as well as procedures to disseminate placement decisions, for all agencies involved in the referral and placement of UAC in HHS shelters.”¹³⁴ In 2016, the Subcommittee found that, despite these recommendations, DHS and HHS had not established any agreement to govern their responsibilities for UACs.¹³⁵

2. Agreement I and Joint Concept of Operations

On February 22, 2016, following the Subcommittee's investigation and hearing, DHS and HHS signed Agreement I providing a framework for interagency coordination with respect to UACs. Agreement I recognized the two departments' shared commitment to "protect UAC in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking."¹³⁶ Under Agreement I, the departments also planned to establish a Senior Leadership Council to coordinate interagency cooperation on UAC "care, processing, and transport," as well as an Interagency Working Group.¹³⁷

In Agreement I, the departments agreed to "establish a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO) that should be completed no later than one year following the signing of this MOA [on February 22, 2016], which should include, but need not be limited to standard protocols for consistent interagency cooperation on the care, processing, and transport of UAC"¹³⁸ The agencies were supposed to complete the JCO by February 22, 2017.

According to the GAO, Agreement I identified priority issues for the departments to address related to UACs, including issues with chain of custody and the transport of UACs, but the JCO was to include the necessary operational specifics to address deficiencies identified by the GAO. To consider the recommendation closed, the GAO expects to see HHS and DHS complete and implement the JCO.¹³⁹

(2018) (statement of Kathryn A. Larin, Dir., Educ., Workforce & Income Sec. Team, U.S. Gov't Accountability Off.).

3. Deficiencies in Agreement II and the Joint Concept of Operations

Only after the Subcommittee repeatedly asked DHS and HHS why the JCO was delayed, DHS and HHS took two significant steps: first, they entered a new Memorandum of Agreement (“Agreement II”) on April 13, 2018; and second, on July 31, 2018, they completed the JCO.

a) Agreement II

Agreement II governs information-sharing between ICE, CBP, and ORR regarding UACs and their potential sponsors, as described in Section IV above. The primary purpose of the information sharing under Agreement II is to “provide HHS with information necessary to conduct suitability assessments for sponsors from appropriate federal, state, and local law enforcement and immigration databases.”¹⁴⁰

In 2016, the Subcommittee found that HHS’s failure to conduct sufficient background checks contributed to the circumstances that led HHS to place eight children with human traffickers.¹⁴¹ More comprehensive background checks of more adults who will be living with UACs likely will increase UAC safety, and in that regard, Agreement II is an improvement over the processes the Subcommittee observed in 2016.

Immigration advocacy groups and UAC care providers have pointed out, however, that Agreement II does not limit DHS’s use of the information HHS sends to it about potential sponsors and other adults in their households.¹⁴² Many of them have expressed concern that, unless it is clear DHS will not use that information for enforcement purposes, fewer potential sponsors will apply to sponsor UACs because many of them are undocumented and fear enforcement.¹⁴³ Indeed, ORR personnel estimated that roughly 90 percent of current sponsors are undocumented.¹⁴⁴ According to ORR, it is too early to determine whether the changes to the information-sharing process will dissuade a significant number of potential sponsors from stepping forward.¹⁴⁵ ORR Director Lloyd commented that he believed “a motivated sponsor won’t let immigration status deter” him or her from coming forward for a child.¹⁴⁶

If the advocacy groups and care providers are correct, however, and fewer sponsors are available, ORR will have to house more UACs for longer periods of time. The National Immigrant Justice Center has commented that, in this case, “children will remain confined in federal facilities at taxpayer expense, exacerbating the trauma and distress of survivors of violence and abuse in particular.”¹⁴⁷

Furthermore, based on ORR briefings, it is not apparent that HHS has sufficient capacity or has made comprehensive contingency plans to house significantly more UACs.

b) Joint Concept of Operations

On July 31, 2018, DHS and HHS finalized the JCO—17 months after the departments’ own deadline and 10 years after the HHS Office of Inspector General first recommended they develop such an agreement. The JCO represents an initial step in improving UAC care. It is important to commit each department’s responsibilities to paper to clarify who is responsible for taking specific actions with regard to UACs when the departments interact with each other. It likely will reduce some errors created by miscommunications between the departments. It also sets standard procedures that allow department leadership and Congress to hold personnel accountable for fulfilling their responsibilities toward UACs—at least where DHS and HHS interact with each other.

Over the course of 10 years, however, the departments should have been able to create a comprehensive plan for ensuring UAC safety. Agreement I gestured toward the notion that the JCO might do more than recite the status quo. It discussed the departments’ shared goals to “protect UAC in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors” and “promote the effective immigration processing and safe repatriation and reintegration of UAC.”¹⁴⁸ It provided that the JCO “should include, but need not be limited to, standard protocols for consistent interagency cooperation on the care, processing, and transport of UAC”¹⁴⁹

The JCO is, in fact, limited to those standard protocols—and does not resolve longstanding problems with those protocols. The JCO states that it “memorializes current practices in accordance with” immigration laws and “[d]epartmental and agency guidelines, policies, and procedures.”¹⁵⁰ It defines its “purpose and scope” as follows:

The JCO provides field guidance and standardization of interagency policies, procedures, and guidelines related to the processing of UAC encountered by DHS, whose care will be transferred to HHS, after being placed in removal proceedings pursuant to section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality Act¹⁵¹

In a briefing with Subcommittee staff, DHS personnel emphasized that the JCO does not replace current policies or announce new policies; rather, it describes “what’s been happening for years” between the departments.¹⁵² They said that the departments already should be in full compliance with the protocols described in the JCO.¹⁵³

Even within the confines of its limited subject matter, the JCO does not address significant problems that the GAO previously identified in the DHS-HHS communication process. For example, in 2015, the GAO observed that “[t]he interagency process to refer UAC from DHS to HHS shelters is inefficient and vulnerable to error. DHS and HHS rely on e-mail communication and manual data entry to coordinate the transfer of UAC to shelters.”¹⁵⁴ Now, in 2018, the shelter placement process still relies on emails. According to the JCO, “ORR makes the placement determination and notifies both the Referring Agency [CBP or ICE] and the facility’s representative by email . . . when UAC placement has been obtained.”¹⁵⁵ When asked whether current processes address the problems the GAO found in 2015 with email communications, a DHS official responded that the “important thing is that the communications are happening.”¹⁵⁶ The departments do not appear to have changed their notification processes that the GAO found led to errors in placements in 2015.

Significantly, the JCO does not address care of UACs once HHS places them with sponsors. As discussed above, no agency takes responsibility for UACs after HHS transfers them into a sponsor's care. The JCO does not change that enormous gap in UAC care.

4. Limited Post-Release Services and Failure to Track UACs After Placement

Over the last decade, HHS has had limited ability to track UACs after HHS places them with sponsors and provides post-release services in only a small number of cases. Post-release services in the form of social work, wellness checks, and legal aid provide HHS the best window into UAC-sponsor relationships, but HHS provides post-release services in few cases—and recently has eliminated legal services for children released to sponsors. These deficiencies continue to hamper HHS's care of UACs and leave these children at risk for trafficking and abuse.

In 2008, the HHS Office of Inspector General found that ORR's precursor, the Division of Unaccompanied Children's Services:

does not have a method to track children after they are released to sponsors and therefore is unable to determine whether the processes facilities use to screen sponsors are effective and whether sponsors continue to provide for children's physical, mental, and financial well-being.¹⁵⁷

In 2016, the Subcommittee found that HHS still did not have a mechanism to track UACs after their placements with sponsors.¹⁵⁸ The Subcommittee observed that post-release services were HHS's best means of tracking UACs and developing insight into their circumstances—but HHS provided post-release services in only about 10 percent of cases each year.¹⁵⁹ The Subcommittee noted that every UAC care provider it interviewed recommended that HHS provide post-release services to all UACs placed with Category 3 sponsors.¹⁶⁰

Similarly, later in 2016, the GAO found that HHS had very little information about UACs after HHS released them to sponsors, and no means by which to collect such information systematically.¹⁶¹ The GAO observed that “[w]ithout processes to ensure that the data from its activities are reliable, systematically collected, and compiled in summary form, ORR may be missing an opportunity to provide useful information about [the UAC] population for the use of other government agencies.”¹⁶²

This situation largely remains the same today, with a few notable changes. HHS still has limited ability to track UACs after HHS places them with sponsors in the United States. HHS has reported to the Subcommittee, however, that it has made at least three significant changes to its post-release service practices, although they are of mixed effect.

First, HHS reported to the Subcommittee that it is offering post-release services to an increased number of UACs, both for the total number of UACs served and as a percentage of UACs referred to HHS by fiscal year.¹⁶³ In FY 2016, ORR provided 10,546 UACs with post-release services—which represents 17.8 percent of the 59,170 UACs DHS referred to HHS that year. In FY 2017, ORR provided 13,381 UACs with post-release services—representing 32.7 percent of UACs referred by DHS that year.¹⁶⁴

During that same time, ORR reduced the total number of home studies it conducted. It conducted 3,540 home studies in FY 2016, for 5.9 percent of all UACs DHS referred to HHS. It conducted 3,173 home studies in FY 2017, for 7.7 percent of UACs referred that year.¹⁶⁵ As discussed in more detail in the Subcommittee’s 2016 report, home studies are universally performed before placing a child in foster care. Particularly for children placed with Category 3 sponsors, sponsorship placements are substantially similar to foster care placements.¹⁶⁶

Post-release services frequently provide HHS its only insight into the children’s well-being, and the children’s best shot at receiving help if their living situations prove to be unsafe.¹⁶⁷ The Subcommittee supports ORR’s increase in post-release services, but cautions that the increase should not come at the expense of thorough home studies prior to placement.

Second, in August 2015, HHS began calling each UAC 30 days after placement with a sponsor to check on their welfare.¹⁶⁸ The Subcommittee observed in 2016 that “[t]hat process appears to have limited utility” because HHS had no means to follow up with a child with whom it had failed to make contact.¹⁶⁹ The data bear out that observation. At the Subcommittee’s April 2018 hearing, Steven

Wagner, the HHS Acting Assistant Secretary for the Administration for Children and Families, testified regarding those 30-day wellness check calls:

From October to December 2017, ORR attempted to reach 7,635 UAC and their sponsors. Of this number, ORR reached and received agreement to participate in the safety and well-being call from approximately 86 percent of sponsors. From these calls, ORR learned that 6,075 UAC remained with their sponsors. Twenty-eight UAC had run away, five had been removed from the United States, and 52 had relocated to live with a non-sponsor. ORR was unable to determine with certainty the whereabouts of 1,475 UAC. Based on the calls, ORR referred 792 cases, which were in need of further assistance, to the National Call Center for additional information and services.¹⁷⁰

Although the Subcommittee views the follow-up calls as a small step in the right direction, it is concerning that HHS apparently takes no action to address the alarming situations it discovers when it makes those calls. In many of the cases Mr. Wagner described above, HHS should have taken further action to ensure the children's welfare. For example:

- HHS either could not reach or did not get sponsors' consent to participate in 14 percent, or about 1,070, of these calls. HHS should have a mechanism to reach sponsors and UACs, and sponsors should be required to communicate with HHS when contacted. It should be a significant red flag if a sponsor refuses to speak with HHS on the telephone 30 days after HHS releases a child to that person.
- HHS found that 28 UACs had run away from their sponsors. It does not appear that HHS took any action in response to those discoveries or had any means by which to determine their location. HHS should develop a mechanism to track those children and to inform local authorities when children run away from their sponsors.
- HHS found that 52 UACs were no longer living with their sponsor. In these situations, HHS has no way of knowing whether those 52 UACs are living in safe conditions. Furthermore, under both the sponsor agreement¹⁷¹ and the Flores Agreement,¹⁷² sponsors are required to proactively notify the government if UACs change households—but HHS does not enforce that portion of the agreement. UAC care providers told the Subcommittee that a UAC's parents or other relatives often fear making themselves known to the government because they are also in the country without authorization. In those cases, they sometimes hire or persuade someone else to act as the child's sponsor, and once HHS releases the child to the sponsor, the child leaves the sponsor's care to live with her parents or other relatives.¹⁷³ This scenario endangers these children and prevents HHS from being able to ensure their safety, provide follow-up services where necessary, or ensure they appear at their immigration court proceedings.¹⁷⁴

- HHS “could not ascertain with certainty the whereabouts of 1,475 UAC.” To date, the Subcommittee is not aware that HHS has taken any follow-up action to determine where those children are, with whom they are living, and if they are safe. It is inexcusable that the government places children with adults to await their immigration court proceedings and, within 30 days, has lost track of 20 percent of those children. HHS must develop measures to track these children and hold sponsors accountable to their sponsorship agreements.

The 30-day follow-up wellness call is a positive measure—but its results ultimately highlight the deficiencies in the current system. Moreover, the Subcommittee has repeatedly asked HHS to update the numbers with the results of the calls it has made in 2018. As of this report, HHS failed to provide those numbers. HHS officials told the Subcommittee that it could either focus its resources on reuniting families separated under the zero-tolerance policy or on providing new data.¹⁷⁵ The Subcommittee supports reuniting the families quickly. It is concerning, however, that HHS is not tracking the results of its 30-day wellness check calls, reducing the already-limited visibility HHS and Congress have into the lives of children who arrived in the United States unaccompanied and who HHS placed with sponsors.

Third, and finally, HHS has directed its grantee legal service providers to stop accepting new clients from the population of UACs already released to sponsors. According to ORR Director Scott Lloyd, HHS's authority to provide legal services to children released to sponsors is “shaky.”¹⁷⁶ This interpretation is contrary to law. The TVPRA provides that the HHS Secretary:

shall ensure, to the greatest extent practicable and consistent with section 292 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1362), that all unaccompanied alien children who are or have been in the custody of [HHS or DHS] . . . have counsel to represent them in legal proceedings or matters and protect them from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking. To the greatest extent practicable, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall make every effort to utilize the services of pro bono counsel who agree to provide representation to such children without charge.¹⁷⁷

Under the TVPRA, HHS still has an obligation to help those children obtain counsel. Given its decision to eliminate representation by its grantees for children placed with sponsors, ORR should increase its support for pro bono legal services for children living with sponsors. UAC legal service providers have testified about the positive effects legal representation has on UAC court attendance and welfare, noting that attorneys can provide an additional point of contact to help ensure UAC well-being.¹⁷⁸

The limitations on HHS's ability to track UACs and its engagement with UACs post-placement have significant consequences. The Subcommittee has learned of allegations of at least one additional case of a child being placed into forced labor that perhaps could have been caught earlier if the child had been receiving post-release services. A UAC care provider reported to the Subcommittee:

The limited use of home studies and post-release services has resulted in children being released to situations of abuse, abandonment, neglect, and trafficking. These are youth like Juan,¹⁷⁹ who was released from ORR care without services to his half-uncle in Florida. Shortly after his reunification, Juan's uncle withdrew him from school and sent him to work in the fields with his two cousins (who had not been in the care of ORR). This forced labor continued until Juan's cousin was injured and brought, with Juan, to the Emergency Room, where the injury raised abuse and trafficking concerns. [Child Protective Services] investigated the situation and removed the children from the home, placing the children in state custody.¹⁸⁰

Other care providers relayed similar, anecdotal scenarios of UACs they had seen put into forced labor.

Another UAC care provider testified at the Subcommittee's April 2018 hearing about a case involving a 17-year-old Honduran girl who entered the country and was apprehended in 2016. The care provider testified:

ORR found Anabel's mother in Cincinnati, Ohio and released Anabel to her mother. Anabel's mother did not receive a home study before Anabel was released from ORR, and Anabel did not receive post-release services. Before reunifying with her mother, Anabel had not seen her mother in over 10 years . . . For reasons unclear, Anabel's mother kicked Anabel out of the house approximately 5 months after Anabel was released to her care by ORR. Anabel was forced to move-in [sic] with an uncle, who provided Anabel with very little supervision.¹⁸¹

5. Increased Rates of Failure to Appear for Immigration Court Proceedings

It is critically important for UACs to appear at their immigration court proceedings. Appearing at their proceedings gives UACs the opportunity to apply for immigration relief or protection from removal, such as asylum or Special Immigrant Juvenile Status, and it upholds the orderly functioning of the country's immigration system. Failure to appear, on the other hand, usually results in the court ordering the child removed in absentia, which bars subsequent immigration relief for a period of 10 years if the child leaves and then attempts to re-enter the United States.¹⁸²

In 2016, the Subcommittee found that a substantial number of UACs failed to appear for their immigration court proceedings from July 2014 through December 2015.¹⁸³ The Subcommittee now has found that over the intervening two and a half years since its last report, UACs are failing to appear at their immigration court proceedings at increased rates, as demonstrated in the table below. And of UACs ordered removed from the country, more than 80 percent of them are ordered removed in absentia.¹⁸⁴

Because failure to appear at their proceedings can have significant consequences for UACs, by law, HHS must cooperate with DOJ “to ensure that custodians receive legal orientation programs” and that such programs “address the custodian’s responsibility to attempt to ensure the child’s appearance at all immigration proceedings and to protect the child from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking.”¹⁸⁶ Before HHS releases a UAC to a sponsor, the sponsor must sign a form agreeing to attend the legal orientation program and to “ensure the minor’s presence at all future proceedings before DHS/Immigration and Customs Enforcement . . . and DOJ/EOIR.”¹⁸⁷ Given the rates of non-appearance, it is clear that a majority of sponsors are not upholding that obligation, and no government agency is enforcing the agreement.

According to legal service providers, one of the main reasons UACs fail to appear for their proceedings is the significant amount of time between a UAC’s apprehension and his or her first court appearance. The median length of time UAC cases currently have been pending since the filing of a notice to appear is 480 days.¹⁸⁸ This significant lapse of time can cause UACs to miss their court dates.¹⁸⁹ The GAO also has observed that if a significant amount of time passes before a respondent’s hearing, witnesses are less likely to be available and pro bono attorneys are less inclined to accept cases scheduled far into the future.¹⁹⁰ Similarly, DHS attorneys told the GAO that it is difficult to assign one attorney to the entire life of a case, which increases the amount of time and money necessary for new attorneys to prepare for the case.¹⁹¹

The delay is largely attributable to DOJ EOIR's substantial backlog of immigration cases, including UAC cases.¹⁹² The GAO examined trends in EOIR's backlog last year. From FY 2006 through FY 2015, the number of EOIR's open cases grew 44 percent, from approximately 517,000 cases to 747,000 cases.¹⁹³ According to the GAO, the rate of new cases filed each year remained relatively steady, but the backlog gradually increased because the immigration courts completed cases at a reduced rate.¹⁹⁴ In FY 2006, the immigration courts completed about 287,000 cases, and in FY 2015, they completed about 199,000.¹⁹⁵ This was so even though the number of immigration court judges increased from 212 to 247 over that same period of time.¹⁹⁶ EOIR explained that new judges process cases more slowly than experienced judges.¹⁹⁷ Furthermore, cases began taking longer. In FY 2015, the median case completion time was 43 days; in FY 2015, it was 286 days.¹⁹⁸ EOIR attributed this increase to changes in the complexity of the cases filed—cases for relief such as asylum and removal withholdings increased and voluntary departure applications decreased.¹⁹⁹ And the 2014 surge of UAC cases—which tend to be more complex—also contributed to the backlog.²⁰⁰

As of July 2, 2018, 80,266 UAC cases were pending²⁰¹—roughly 11 percent of the total 733,730 immigration cases pending across the country.²⁰² Currently, 355 immigration judges handle these cases, including 29 new immigration judges invested on August 10, 2018.²⁰³ DOJ has authority to hire 129 additional judges.²⁰⁴ To reduce this backlog, it is critical that DOJ make full use of the resources and authorities Congress has given it to conduct these proceedings. The GAO also has recommended that EOIR develop and implement a workforce plan that accounts for long-term staffing needs, the complexity of cases, and EOIR's performance goals.²⁰⁵ This planning is especially critical given that as of 2017, 39 percent of immigration court judges were eligible for retirement.²⁰⁶

At the Subcommittee's April 26, 2018 hearing and in briefings, legal service and care providers have offered the Subcommittee several additional observations about why they believe UACs fail to appear at their court proceedings in some cases:

- UACs struggle to appear in person at courts far from where they live. Only 29 states, Puerto Rico, and the Northern Mariana Islands have immigration courts,²⁰⁷ and in many cases, even courts in-state are far from where UACs live. In Ohio, for example, only one court—located in Cleveland—hears juvenile removal proceedings.²⁰⁸ Similarly, in Delaware, the nearest juvenile immigration court is in Philadelphia.²⁰⁹ According to a legal service provider, in the past, some of these courts allowed UACs to appear by telephone, but now, they require UACs to appear in person. The legal service providers explained that the UACs have to drive as far as four hours to attend their proceedings, and often the UACs do not have the resources or ability to travel.²¹⁰ They suggested that it would be helpful if the court would hold hearings in multiple locations or allow children to appear via telephone or videoconference.²¹¹
- UACs are unaware of the need to request a change of venue. One legal service provider testified before the Subcommittee that she frequently represents UACs placed into immigration court proceedings in one jurisdiction and released to sponsors in another jurisdiction, sometimes across the country. She said that many UACs and their sponsors do not know they need to request a change of venue in order to proceed with the case in the sponsor's home jurisdiction.²¹²

- ICE priorities. The service providers explained that sponsors—who are frequently undocumented immigrants themselves—are afraid to take the children to court because they fear ICE will arrest them at the courthouse.²¹³
- Language barriers and unclear instructions. UACs and their sponsors receive a packet of information about the responsibilities they undertake with the placement. The legal service providers told Subcommittee staff that UACs and their sponsors often struggle to understand the legal requirements and the materials in the languages provided without the help of counsel, and, in some cases, an interpreter.²¹⁴

VII. ADDITIONAL PROBLEMS PROTECTING UACS AND ENSURING APPEARANCE AT REMOVAL PROCEEDINGS

While reviewing HHS and DHS's progress in addressing the deficiencies the Subcommittee described in its January 2016 report, the Subcommittee identified several additional problems in the UAC program. As discussed in more detail below, despite relying on state agencies to ensure UAC welfare, HHS does not notify state governments of UACs' placements. The Subcommittee learned that HHS frequently fails to provide required age-out plans to DHS when UACs in HHS's custody turn 18. And HHS has not enlisted services from the appropriate providers to care for children who need to be in a secure setting who also have significant mental health issues, putting both those children and the children with whom they are housed at risk.

A. Lack of Notification to States of UAC Placement

HHS believes that once ORR releases UACs into their sponsors' care, their well-being is in the purview of local authorities.²¹⁵ Even if an HHS-contracted care provider has concerns about a UAC's care or safety, those providers report the problems to state and local authorities, not HHS.²¹⁶ When state agencies call ORR with concerns about UACs, HHS refers them to ICE.²¹⁷ HHS does not take responsibility for UACs under any of those circumstances,²¹⁸ nor does HHS track the number of UACs placed into state welfare programs²¹⁹.

Although HHS places enormous responsibility on state governments to ensure UAC welfare, HHS generally does not notify state or local governments when it places children with sponsors in those communities. The GAO found that representatives from city governments were unaware that UACs were living in their cities.²²⁰

The Subcommittee interviewed 16 UAC care and legal service providers. Most of them agreed that it would be “wonderful”²²¹ and “very helpful”²²² if HHS were to notify state and local governments when it places UACs in a state. They explained that it would help the care providers to have lists of UACs in their communities so they could proactively reach out to offer services to the UACs and to connect them with other pro bono service providers, such as attorneys to represent them in their immigration court proceedings.²²³ Some cautioned, however, that guardrails would need to be in place to protect the UAC and sponsor information privacy.²²⁴

The care providers also frequently mentioned that state and local governments do not understand their obligations and authorities with respect to UACs. One said that a state’s child welfare services personnel were reluctant to get involved in helping UACs who had been abused.²²⁵ All agreed that it would be “incredibly helpful” for ORR to provide trainings to state and local governments.²²⁶

The Subcommittee also spoke with state and local government officials. Those officials all also agreed that it would be useful for them to receive information about the UACs living in their communities for a variety of reasons. For example, Dr. Pattiva Cathell, an English Language Learner Counselor at Sussex Central High School in Delaware, observed that UACs frequently need special resources, such as language interpreters—but the school district cannot plan for those resources or even know to prepare for the additional number of students until the UACs arrive at school throughout the year.²²⁷

Furthermore, unless they are notified, local governments are not aware that UACs are living in their school districts and should be attending school. In that case, if UACs do not come to school, the local government has no reason to check on them or raise concerns about their welfare, negating a significant opportunity to learn of problems in a sponsorship situation.²²⁸ Dr. Cathell testified before the Subcommittee that schools frequently are the first to observe problems. She said her school identified many incidents in which UACs under the age of 18 work while

On October 30, 2017, HHS changed its policy to provide that ORR would notify states regarding one population of UACs: it planned to notify local law enforcement when releasing UACs from a secure or staff secure facility to sponsors in those communities.²³⁰ Currently, HHS houses about 180 UACs in secure or staff-secure settings, so this policy has the potential to affect only a miniscule portion of the UAC population. Moreover, HHS told Subcommittee staff that, in January 2018, the Department had not implemented the policy change because it was struggling to identify the appropriate point of contact at local law enforcement agencies across the country.²³¹ As of this report, HHS has begun a pilot program in two areas—Suffolk County, New York, and Los Angeles, California—to notify states regarding placement of these children.²³²

B. HHS Failure to Submit Post-Placement Plans

Under the JCO—which represents longstanding policy, according to the departments—HHS is required to provide “post-placement,” or “post-18” plans when UACs in HHS care turn 18-years-old.²³³ Once a UAC in HHS’s care turns 18, ORR refers the UAC to ICE’s Enforcement and Removal Operations (“ERO”), which is responsible for evaluating a UAC’s immigration status.²³⁴ HHS must provide post-placement plans to ERO prior to the child’s 18th birthday.²³⁵ These plans need to include information to allow ICE to evaluate the individual’s circumstances and decide whether to detain the individual, release him or her on bond, or release him or her into the community after turning age 18.²³⁶ The information includes familial and community ties, any criminal activity, and indications of flight risk.²³⁷

According to DHS, however, HHS frequently fails to provide those plans.²³⁸ In Fiscal Year 2017, 731 UACs turned 18 while in HHS's physical and legal custody.²³⁹ ICE only received post-placement plans for 230 of those UACs—just over 31 percent of cases.²⁴⁰

C. Secure Facilities

In addition to ongoing concerns about HHS's ability to ensure the safety of UACs after they are placed with sponsors, recent allegations in media reports and lawsuits raise concerns about the treatment of UACs in HHS's custody at secure facilities. Subcommittee interviews of staff at two of these facilities highlighted the efforts the staff undertake to protect the UACs, but also the difficulties of managing the UAC population with too few employees at one facility, and caring for UACs better suited for a secure residential treatment facility at the other. Staff at both facilities recommended that ORR provide secure facilities with policies tailored to their function. Currently, ORR applies the same policies to shelters, staff secure, and secure facilities.

By law, HHS must place UACs in the least restrictive setting appropriate for the child's needs.²⁴¹ There are three primary settings for UACs in HHS's care: shelters, staff secure facilities, and secure facilities.²⁴² Shelters are the least restrictive.²⁴³ Staff secure facilities provide a heightened level of staff supervision for UACs with behavioral or mental health needs or UACs who pose a flight risk.²⁴⁴ Secure facilities are juvenile detention facilities for UACs who require the highest level of supervision, such as UACs who pose a danger to themselves or others, or if they have been charged with a crime.²⁴⁵ HHS contracts with state and local juvenile correctional facilities for beds in three secure facilities: Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center ("SVJC" or "the Center") and Northern Virginia Juvenile Detention

(“NOVA”) in Virginia, and the Yolo County Juvenile Detention Center in California. As of February 28, 2018, 67 UACs were in secure facilities.²⁴⁶

1. Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center

Because several lawsuits have focused on SVJC’s care of UACs and because it houses the highest number of UACs in a secure facility—34 at last count—Subcommittee staff visited the Center on April 16, 2018. Since that visit, two recent investigations have yielded findings of no abuse or neglect at the Center. Shenandoah Valley Social Services investigated complaints alleging child abuse and neglect at SVJC and “did not find any clear evidence of abuse or neglect as defined by Virginia State Policy.” It therefore “made an ‘Unfounded’ disposition,” but offered several recommendations for improving UAC care at the Center.²⁴⁷ Similarly, the Virginia Department of Juvenile Justice released a report of its own review of SVJC finding that SVJC was “in compliance with applicable regulations and certification standards” and recommended “areas where SVJC could improve programming for the youth in the custody of ORR.”²⁴⁸

Subcommittee staff interviewed five staff members and several UACs regarding: (1) use of force and restraints; (2) mental health care; and (3) prolonged release time.

a) Use of Force and Restraints

Prior to visiting SVJC, attorneys for UACs told Subcommittee staff that they had observed children with serious injuries following altercations with SVJC staff, including one child who suffered a broken foot.²⁴⁹ One said she saw marks on UACs wrists after the staff had used “soft restraints”—similar to seatbelt material—on them.²⁵⁰ A UAC class action lawsuit filed in October 2017 raises similar allegations.²⁵¹

During the Subcommittee staff visit, the Center personnel explained that the Center rarely uses physical restraints (meaning using their hands to physically hold a child) or mechanical restraints (meaning handcuffs or a restraint chair). The Center’s policy is to do so only when children pose a risk to themselves or others, and only until the child calms down. They noted that, unlike a mental health residential treatment facility, they are unable to administer medication to calm a child, so they have limited options if a child is a danger to himself or others.²⁵²

b) Mental Health Care

Both SVJC staff and other UAC care and legal service providers told the Subcommittee that UACs coming into the United States over the past several years are significantly more traumatized and in need of mental health services than children who came to the country previously.²⁵³ SVJC staff explained to Subcommittee staff that the SVJC is not a residential treatment center and, as a juvenile detention facility, they are not equipped to deal with youth who have severe mental health issues. On-staff clinicians focus on keeping the UACs stable until their immigration proceedings, not on full-fledged psychiatric care, although a psychiatrist is available to work with the UACs.²⁵⁴

Several of the SVJC staff recommended that HHS contract with a secure residential treatment facility to house UACs who need significant mental health treatment and who also must be in a secure setting. They explained that HHS already contracts with residential treatment facilities, but because they are not secure settings, those facilities reject UACs referred by SVJC.²⁵⁵

The Subcommittee supports this recommendation. The Flores Agreement provides that a “facility for special needs minors . . . or others in appropriate circumstances,” such as cases in which “a minor has drug or alcohol problems or is mentally ill,” “may maintain that level of security permitted under state law which is necessary for the protection of the minor or others.”²⁵⁶ The ORR Policy Guide also accounts for such a need, stating, “[i]f a child has a mental health issue in addition to behavioral concerns or criminal history warranting placement into a restrictive level of care, ORR may place the youth in a residential treatment center or other therapeutic setting.”²⁵⁷

ORR should contract with an appropriate secure residential treatment center to house and treat children with significant mental health issues who also must be in a secure setting.

c) Prolonged Confinement

In June 2017, ORR changed its policy to require that the Director of ORR sign off on the release of UACs from secure or staff secure facilities.²⁵⁸ Care providers, including SVJC staff, told Subcommittee staff they had observed an increase in the amount of time UACs are detained in these facilities. These providers suggested the delays may be due in part to this new policy. The SVJC staff said the delays and uncertainty increased UACs' sense of hopelessness, which sometimes contributes to deterioration in their behavior.²⁵⁹ Furthermore, keeping UACs in a secure setting longer than necessary violates their right to live in the least restrictive setting that is in their best interests established in the Flores Agreement.

A 2017 federal district court case illustrates the problems prolonged condition can cause. The court held that ORR and SVJC violated a Honduran UAC's due process rights after case workers recommended that the child be reunified with his mother, and—14 months later—ORR summarily denied his release.²⁶⁰ The court identified multiple deficiencies in ORR's detention review procedures, but held that ORR's significant and unexplained delay in responding to the mother's reunification request alone amounted to a violation of due process.²⁶¹ The court noted that psychological and behavioral reports regarding the UAC's condition during his confinement "reflect a worsening of [the child's] psychological condition in some respects. Perhaps if the reunification had been addressed more expediently, [the child] would not have had some of the behavioral problems that he has had, which ORR is now relying upon to deny reunification."²⁶² The court attributed these behavioral problems to his prolonged detention.²⁶³

2. Yolo County Juvenile Detention Center

At the Yolo County Juvenile Detention Center in California, the Chief Probation Officer, Brent Cardall, recently asked the County to terminate its contract with ORR to house UACs because of UAC assaults on staff, as well as concerns about the staff-to-UAC to ratio.²⁶⁴ He highlighted the severe trauma and mental illness he has observed among youth in the secure facility.²⁶⁵ He raised further concerns that ORR officials were not present at recent discussions to renew the county's contract and said that the federal government is "not a great partner" on the contract.²⁶⁶

Cardall estimated that to improve security at the facility, the contract would have to increase from $3 million annually to $4.3 million annually, or ORR would have to reduce the number of UACs it sends to the facility from 24 down to 16.²⁶⁷ The Yolo County Board voted three-to-one to seek an amended contract reducing the number of UACs in the facility.²⁶⁸ Ultimately, Yolo received an additional $2.2 million to hire nine more full-time staff at the detention center,²⁶⁹ and in July 2018, ORR provided $150,000 to the Yolo facility to pay for the UACs' summer educational programs.²⁷⁰

VIII. CONCLUSION

In 2015, the Subcommittee learned that HHS placed eight children with human traffickers, who sent them into forced labor in Ohio. The Subcommittee's oversight demonstrated that HHS disregarded basic standards of child welfare by failing to conduct background checks on those sponsors and to follow up on situations that should have raised concerns immediately.

Only after that tragedy did HHS begin improving its background check process. And only after the Subcommittee published a report and held a public hearing did DHS and HHS agree to create a structure for coordinating their UAC operations, even though the HHS Inspector General and GAO had been recommending they create such a structure for almost a decade.

It then took another two and a half years for the departments to put pen to paper and create the JCO—and it appears that the departments had no intention of completing that document until the Subcommittee began asking questions again. Once the JCO was finished, it demonstrated that the departments have not tried to improve their processes, but, instead, simply documented the status quo.

In the interim, while waiting for the JCO, the Subcommittee has received more allegations of children placed with sponsors who put them into forced labor—discovered not because HHS followed up with those children, but because a school counselor or emergency room personnel caught the problem. Still no one in the federal government accepts any responsibility for children once it places those children with sponsors who may be complete strangers to them. Furthermore, since the Subcommittee's 2016 report and hearing, the Administration has been reducing home studies and legal services provided to children living with sponsors. During that same time, the backlog of UAC cases before the immigration courts has been steadily increasing, causing more UACs to linger longer in a “legal no-man's land.” And then when their court dates finally arrive, more than half of UACs do not appear for their court proceedings and are ordered removed in absentia, frequently costing them their opportunity to argue for immigration relief and causing them to be subject to a ban on entry for 10 years if they leave the country.

These problems are in addition to those the Subcommittee observed in the secure detention facilities. And this report does not address concerns about other HHS-grantee facilities that house UACs still in HHS's physical custody.

The current circumstances surrounding the UAC system are untenable. The Subcommittee will continue its oversight efforts to identify gaps in the care of this vulnerable population and deficiencies in the U.S. immigration system, and it will work with the departments to improve these conditions.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
CENTRAL DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

JENNY LISETTE FLORES, et al, Plaintiffs

v.

Case No. CV 85-4544-RJK(Px)

STIPULATED SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

WHEREAS, Plaintiffs have filed this action against Defendants, challenging, inter alia, the constitutionality of Defendants' policies, practices and regulations regarding the detention and release of unaccompanied minors taken into the custody of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) in the Western Region; and

WHEREAS, the district court has certified this case as a class action on behalf of all minors apprehended by the INS in the Western Region of the United States; and

WHEREAS, this litigation has been pending for nine (9) years, all parties have conducted extensive discovery, and the United States Supreme Court has upheld the constitutionality of the challenged INS regulations on their face and has remanded for further proceedings consistent with its opinion; and

WHEREAS, on November 30, 1987, the parties reached a settlement agreement requiring that minors in INS custody in the Western Region be housed in facilities meeting certain standards, including state standards for the housing and care of dependent children, and Plaintiffs' motion to enforce compliance with that settlement is currently pending before the court; and

WHEREAS, a trial in this case would be complex, lengthy and costly to all parties concerned, and the decision of the district court would be subject to appeal by the losing parties with the final outcome uncertain; and

WHEREAS, the parties believe that settlement of this action is in their best interests and best serves the interests of justice by avoiding a complex, lengthy and costly trial, and subsequent appeals which could last several more years;

NOW, THEREFORE, Plaintiffs and Defendants enter into this Stipulated Settlement Agreement (the Agreement), stipulate that it constitutes a full and complete resolution of the issues raised in this action, and agree to the following:

I DEFINITIONS

As used throughout this Agreement the following definitions shall apply:

1. The term "party" or "parties" shall apply to Defendants and Plaintiffs. As the term applies to Defendants, it shall include their agents, employees, contractors and/or successors in office. As the term applies to Plaintiffs, it shall include all class members.
2. The term "Plaintiff" or "Plaintiffs" shall apply to the named plaintiffs and all class members.
3. The term "class member" or "class members" shall apply to the persons defined in Paragraph 10 below.
4. The term "minor" shall apply to any person under the age of eighteen (18) years who is detained in the legal custody of the INS. This Agreement shall cease to apply to any person who has reached the age of eighteen years. The term "minor" shall not include an emancipated minor or an individual who has been incarcerated due to a conviction for a criminal offense as an adult. The INS shall treat all persons who are under the age of eighteen but not included within the definition of "minor" as adults for all purposes, including release on bond or recognizance.
5. The term "emancipated minor" shall refer to any minor who has been determined to be emancipated in an appropriate state judicial proceeding.
6. The term "licensed program" shall refer to any program, agency or organization that is licensed by an appropriate State agency to provide residential, group, or foster care services for dependent children, including a program operating group homes, foster homes, or facilities for special needs minors. A licensed program must also meet those standards for licensed programs set forth in Exhibit 1 attached hereto. All homes and facilities operated by licensed programs, including facilities for special needs minors, shall be non-secure as required under state law; provided, however, that a facility for special needs minors may maintain that level of security permitted under state law which is necessary for the protection of a minor or others in appropriate circumstances, e.g., cases in which a minor has drug or alcohol problems or is mentally ill. The INS shall make reasonable efforts to provide licensed placements in those geographical areas where the majority of minors are apprehended, such as southern California, southeast Texas, southern Florida and the northeast corridor.

7. The term "special needs minor" shall refer to a minor whose mental and/or physical condition requires special services and treatment by staff. A minor may have special needs due to drug or alcohol abuse, serious emotional disturbance, mental illness or retardation, or a physical condition or chronic illness that requires special services or treatment. A minor who has suffered serious neglect or abuse may be considered a minor with special needs if the minor requires special services or treatment as a result of the neglect or abuse. The INS shall assess minors to determine if they have special needs and, if so, shall place such minors, whenever possible, in licensed programs in which the INS places children without special needs, but which provide services and treatment for such special needs.

8. The term "medium security facility" shall refer to a facility that is operated by a program, agency or organization licensed by an appropriate State agency and that meets those standards set forth in Exhibit 1 attached hereto. A medium security facility is designed for minors who require close supervision but do not need placement in juvenile correctional facilities. It provides 24-hour awake supervision, custody, care, and treatment. It maintains stricter security measures, such as intensive staff supervision, than a facility operated by a licensed program in order to control problem behavior and to prevent escape. Such a facility may have a secure perimeter but shall not be equipped internally with major restraining construction or procedures typically associated with correctional facilities.

II SCOPE OF SETTLEMENT, EFFECTIVE DATE, AND PUBLICATION

9. This Agreement sets out nationwide policy for the detention, release, and treatment of minors in the custody of the INS and shall supersede all previous INS policies that are inconsistent with the terms of this Agreement. This Agreement shall become effective upon final court approval, except that those terms of this Agreement regarding placement pursuant to Paragraph 19 shall not become effective until all contracts under the Program Announcement referenced in Paragraph 20 below are negotiated and implemented. The INS shall make its best efforts to execute these contracts within 120 days after the court's final approval of this Agreement. However, the INS will make reasonable efforts to comply with Paragraph 19 prior to full implementation of all such contracts. Once all contracts under the Program Announcement referenced in Paragraph 20 have been implemented, this Agreement shall supersede the agreement entitled Memorandum of Understanding Re Compromise of Class Action: Conditions of Detention (hereinafter "MOU"), entered into by and between the Plaintiffs and Defendants and filed with the United States District Court for the Central District of California on November 30, 1987, and the MOU shall thereafter be null and void. However, Plaintiffs shall not institute any legal action for enforcement of the MOU for a six (6) month period commencing with the final district court approval of this Agreement, except that Plaintiffs may institute enforcement proceedings if the Defendants have engaged in serious violations of the MOU that have caused irreparable harm to a class member for which injunctive relief would be appropriate. Within 120 days of the final district court approval of this Agreement, the INS shall initiate action to publish the relevant and substantive terms of this Agreement as a Service regulation. The final regulations shall not be inconsistent with the terms of this Agreement. Within 30 days of final court approval of this Agreement, the INS shall distribute to all INS field offices and sub-offices instructions regarding the processing, treatment, and placement of juveniles. Those instructions shall include, but may not be limited to, the provisions summarizing the terms of the Agreement attached hereto as Exhibit 2.

III CLASS DEFINITION

10. The certified class in this action shall be defined as follows: "All minors who are detained in the legal custody of the INS."

IV STATEMENTS OF GENERAL APPLICABILITY

11. The INS treats, and shall continue to treat, all minors in its custody with dignity, respect and special concern for their particular vulnerability as minors. The INS shall place each detained minor in the least restrictive setting appropriate to the minor's age and special needs, provided that such setting is consistent with its interests to ensure the minor's timely appearance before the INS and the immigration courts and to protect the minor's well-being and that of others. Nothing herein shall require the INS to release a minor to any person or agency whom the INS has reason to believe may harm or neglect the minor or fail to present him or her before the INS or the immigration courts when requested to do so.

V PROCEDURES AND TEMPORARY PLACEMENT FOLLOWING ARREST

12. Whenever the INS takes a minor into custody, it shall expeditiously process the minor and shall provide the minor with a notice of rights, including the right to a bond redetermination hearing if applicable. Following arrest, the INS shall hold minors in facilities that are safe and sanitary and that are consistent with the INS's concern for the particular vulnerability of minors. Facilities will provide access to toilets and sinks, drinking water and food as appropriate, medical assistance if the minor is in need of emergency services, adequate temperature control and ventilation, adequate supervision to protect minors from others, and contact with family members who were arrested with the minor. The INS will segregate unaccompanied minors from unrelated adults. Where such segregation is not immediately possible, an unaccompanied minor will not be detained with an unrelated adult for more than 24 hours. If there is no one to whom the INS may release the minor pursuant to Paragraph 14, and no appropriate licensed program is immediately available for placement pursuant to Paragraph 19, the minor may be placed in an INS detention facility, or other INS-contracted facility, having separate accommodations for minors, or a State or county juvenile detention facility. However, minors shall be separated from delinquent offenders. Every effort must be taken to ensure that the safety and well-being of the minors detained in these facilities are satisfactorily provided for by the staff. The INS will transfer a minor from a placement under this paragraph to a placement under Paragraph 19 (i) within three (3) days, if the minor was apprehended in an INS district in which a licensed program is located and has space available; or (ii) within five (5) days in all other cases; except:

1. as otherwise provided under Paragraph 13 or Paragraph 21;
2. as otherwise required by any court decree or court-approved settlement;
3. in the event of an emergency or influx of minors into the United States, in which case the INS shall place all minors pursuant to Paragraph 19 as expeditiously as possible; or
4. where individuals must be transported from remote areas for processing or speak unusual languages such that the INS must locate interpreters in order to complete processing, in which case the INS shall place all such minors pursuant to Paragraph 19 within five (5) business days.

B. For purposes of this Paragraph, the term "emergency" shall be defined as any act or event that prevents the placement of minors pursuant to Paragraph 19 within the time frame provided. Such emergencies include natural disasters (e.g., earthquakes, hurricanes, etc.), facility fires, civil disturbances, and medical emergencies (e.g., a chicken pox epidemic among a group of minors). The term "influx of minors into the United States" shall be defined as those circumstances where the INS has, at any given time, more than 130 minors eligible for placement in a licensed program under Paragraph 19, including those who have been so placed or are awaiting such placement.

C. In preparation for an "emergency" or "influx," as described in Subparagraph B, the INS shall have a written plan that describes the reasonable efforts that it will take to place all minors as expeditiously as possible. This plan shall include the identification of 80 beds that are potentially available for INS placements and that are licensed by an appropriate State agency to provide residential, group, or foster care services for dependent children. The plan, without identification of the additional beds available, is attached as Exhibit 3. The INS shall not be obligated to fund these additional beds on an ongoing basis. The INS shall update this listing of additional beds on a quarterly basis and provide Plaintiffs' counsel with a copy of this listing.

13. If a reasonable person would conclude that an alien detained by the INS is an adult despite his claims to be a minor, the INS shall treat the person as an adult for all purposes, including confinement and release on bond or recognizance. The INS may require the alien to submit to a medical or dental examination conducted by a medical professional or to submit to other appropriate procedures to verify his or her age. If the INS subsequently determines that such an individual is a minor, he or she will be treated as a minor in accordance with this Agreement for all purposes.

VI GENERAL POLICY FAVORING RELEASE

14. Where the INS determines that the detention of the minor is not required either to secure his or her timely appearance before the INS or the immigration court, or to ensure the minor's safety or that of others, the INS shall release a minor from its custody without unnecessary delay, in the following order of preference, to:

- A. a parent;
- B. a legal guardian;
- C. an adult relative (brother, sister, aunt, uncle, or grandparent);
- D. an adult individual or entity designated by the parent or legal guardian as capable and willing to care for the minor's well-being in (i) a declaration signed under penalty of perjury before an immigration or consular officer or (ii) such other document(s) that establish(es) to the satisfaction of the INS, in its discretion, the affiant's paternity or guardianship;
- E. a licensed program willing to accept legal custody; or
- F. an adult individual or entity seeking custody, in the discretion of the INS, when it appears that there is no other likely alternative to long term detention and family reunification does not appear to be a reasonable possibility.

15. Before a minor is released from INS custody pursuant to Paragraph 14 above, the custodian must execute an Affidavit of Support (Form I-134) and an agreement to:

- A. provide for the minor's physical, mental, and financial well-being;
- B. ensure the minor's presence at all future proceedings before the INS and the immigration court;
- C. notify the INS of any change of address within five (5) days following a move;
- D. in the case of custodians other than parents or legal guardians, not transfer custody of the minor to another party without the prior written permission of the District Director;
- E. notify the INS at least five days prior to the custodian's departing the United States of such departure, whether the departure is voluntary or pursuant to a grant of voluntary departure or order of deportation; and
- F. if dependency proceedings involving the minor are initiated, notify the INS of the initiation of a such proceedings and the dependency court of any immigration proceedings pending against the minor.

In the event of an emergency, a custodian may transfer temporary physical custody of a minor prior to securing permission from the INS but shall notify the INS of the transfer as soon as is practicable thereafter, but in all cases within 72 hours. For purposes of this Paragraph, examples of an "emergency" shall include the serious illness of the custodian, destruction of the home, etc. In all cases where the custodian in writing seeks written permission for a transfer, the District Director shall promptly respond to the request.

16. The INS may terminate the custody arrangements and assume legal custody of any minor whose custodian fails to comply with the agreement required under Paragraph 15. The INS, however, shall not terminate the custody arrangements for minor violations of that part of the custodial agreement outlined at Subparagraph 15.C above.

17. A positive suitability assessment may be required prior to release to any individual or program pursuant to Paragraph 14. A suitability assessment may include such components as an investigation of the living conditions in which the minor would be placed and the standard of care he would receive, verification of identity and employment of the individuals offering support, interviews of members of the household, and a home visit. Any such assessment should also take into consideration the wishes and concerns of the minor.

18. Upon taking a minor into custody, the INS, or the licensed program in which the minor is placed, shall make and record the prompt and continuous efforts on its part toward family reunification and the release of the minor pursuant to Paragraph 14 above. Such efforts at family reunification shall continue so long as the minor is in INS custody.

VII INS CUSTODY

19. In any case in which the INS does not release a minor pursuant to Paragraph 14, the minor shall remain in INS legal custody. Except as provided in Paragraphs 12 or 21, such minor shall be placed temporarily in a licensed program until such time as release can be effected in accordance with Paragraph 14 above or until the minor's immigration proceedings are concluded, whichever occurs earlier. All minors placed in such a licensed program remain in the legal custody of the INS and may only be transferred or released under the authority of the INS; provided, however, that in the event of an emergency a licensed program may transfer temporary physical custody of a minor prior to securing permission from the INS but shall notify the INS of the transfer as soon as is practicable thereafter, but in all cases within 8 hours.

20. Within 60 days of final court approval of this Agreement, the INS shall authorize the United States Department of Justice Community Relations Service to publish in the Commerce Business Daily and/or the Federal Register a Program Announcement to solicit proposals for the care of 100 minors in licensed programs.

21. A minor may be held in or transferred to a suitable State or county juvenile detention facility or a secure INS detention facility, or INS-contracted facility, having separate accommodations for minors whenever the District Director or Chief Patrol Agent determines that the minor:

A. has been charged with, is chargeable, or has been convicted of a crime, or is the subject of delinquency proceedings, has been adjudicated delinquent, or is chargeable with a delinquent act; provided, however, that this provision shall not apply to any minor whose offense(s) fall(s) within either of the following categories:

- i. Isolated offenses that (1) were not within a pattern or practice of criminal activity and (2) did not involve violence against a person or the use or carrying of a weapon (Examples: breaking and entering, vandalism, DUI, etc. This list is not exhaustive.);
- ii. Petty offenses, which are not considered grounds for stricter means of detention in any case (Examples: shoplifting, joy riding, disturbing the peace, etc. This list is not exhaustive.);

As used in this paragraph, "chargeable" means that the INS has probable cause to believe that the individual has committed a specified offense;

B. has committed, or has made credible threats to commit, a violent or malicious act (whether directed at himself or others) while in INS legal custody or while in the presence of an INS officer;

C. has engaged, while in a licensed program, in conduct that has proven to be unacceptably disruptive of the normal functioning of the licensed program in which he or she has been placed and removal is necessary to ensure the welfare of the minor or others, as determined by the staff of the licensed program (Examples: drug or alcohol abuse, stealing, fighting, intimidation of others, etc. This list is not exhaustive.);

D. is an escape-risk; or

E. must be held in a secure facility for his or her own safety, such as when the INS has reason to believe that a smuggler would abduct or coerce a particular minor to secure payment of smuggling fees.

22. The term "escape-risk" means that there is a serious risk that the minor will attempt to escape from custody. Factors to consider when determining whether a minor is an escape-risk or not include, but are not limited to, whether:

- A. the minor is currently under a final order of deportation or exclusion;
- B. the minor's immigration history includes: a prior breach of a bond; a failure to appear before the INS or the immigration court; evidence that the minor is indebted to organized smugglers for his transport; or a voluntary departure or a previous removal from the United States pursuant to a final order of deportation or exclusion;
- C. the minor has previously absconded or attempted to abscond from INS custody.

23. The INS will not place a minor in a secure facility pursuant to Paragraph 21 if there are less restrictive alternatives that are available and appropriate in the circumstances, such as transfer to (a) a medium security facility which would provide intensive staff supervision and counseling services or (b) another licensed program. All determinations to place a minor in a secure facility will be reviewed and approved by the regional juvenile coordinator.

24A. A minor in deportation proceedings shall be afforded a bond redetermination hearing before an immigration judge in every case, unless the minor indicates on the Notice of Custody Determination form that he or she refuses such a hearing.

B. Any minor who disagrees with the INS's determination to place that minor in a particular type of facility, or who asserts that the licensed program in which he or she has been placed does not comply with the standards set forth in Exhibit 1 attached hereto, may seek judicial review in any United States District Court with jurisdiction and venue over the matter to challenge that placement determination or to allege noncompliance with the standards set forth in Exhibit 1. In such an action, the United States District Court shall be limited to entering an order solely affecting the individual claims of the minor bringing the action.

C. In order to permit judicial review of Defendants' placement decisions as provided in this Agreement, Defendants shall provide minors not placed in licensed programs with a notice of the reasons for housing the minor in a detention or medium security facility. With respect to placement decisions reviewed under this paragraph, the standard of review for the INS's exercise of its discretion shall be the abuse of discretion standard of review. With respect to all other matters for which this paragraph provides judicial review, the standard of review shall be de novo review.

D. The INS shall promptly provide each minor not released with (a) INS Form I-770; (b) an explanation of the right of judicial review as set out in Exhibit 6, and (c) the list of free legal services providers compiled pursuant to INS regulation (unless previously given to the minor).

E. Exhausting the procedures established in Paragraph 37 of this Agreement shall not be a precondition to the bringing of an action under this paragraph in any United District Court. Prior to initiating any such action, however, the minor and/or the minors' attorney shall confer telephonically or in person with the United States Attorney's office in the judicial district where the action is to be filed, in an effort to informally resolve the minor's complaints without the need of federal court intervention.

VIII TRANSPORTATION OF MINORS

25. Unaccompanied minors arrested or taken into custody by the INS should not be transported by the INS in vehicles with detained adults except

- A. when being transported from the place of arrest or apprehension to an INS office, or
- B. where separate transportation would be otherwise impractical.

When transported together pursuant to Clause (B) minors shall be separated from adults. The INS shall take necessary precautions for the protection of the well-being of such minors when transported with adults.

26. The INS shall assist without undue delay in making transportation arrangements to the INS office nearest the location of the person or facility to whom a minor is to be released pursuant to Paragraph 14. The INS may, in its discretion, provide transportation to minors.

IX TRANSFER OF MINORS

27. Whenever a minor is transferred from one placement to another, the minor shall be transferred with all of his or her possessions and legal papers; provided, however, that if the minor's possessions exceed the amount permitted normally by the carrier in use, the possessions will be shipped to the minor in a timely manner. No minor who is represented by counsel shall be transferred without advance notice to such counsel, except in unusual and compelling circumstances such as where the safety of the minor or others is threatened or the minor has been determined to be an escape-risk, or where counsel has waived such notice, in which cases notice shall be provided to counsel within 24 hours following transfer.

X MONITORING AND REPORTS

28A. An INS Juvenile Coordinator in the Office of the Assistant Commissioner for Detention and Deportation shall monitor compliance with the terms of this Agreement and shall maintain an up-to-date record of all minors who are placed in proceedings and remain in INS custody for longer than 72 hours. Statistical information on such minors shall be collected weekly from all INS district offices and Border Patrol stations. Statistical information will include at least the following: (1) biographical information such as each minor's name, date of birth, and country of birth, (2) date placed in INS custody, (3) each date placed, removed or released, (4) to whom and where placed, transferred, removed or released, (5) immigration status, and (6) hearing dates. The INS, through the Juvenile Coordinator, shall also collect information regarding the reasons for every placement of a minor in a detention facility or medium security facility.

B. Should Plaintiffs' counsel have reasonable cause to believe that a minor in INS legal custody should have been released pursuant to Paragraph 14, Plaintiffs' counsel may contact the Juvenile Coordinator to request that the Coordinator investigate the case and inform Plaintiffs' counsel of the reasons why the minor has not been released.

29. On a semi-annual basis, until two years after the court determines, pursuant to Paragraph 31, that the INS has achieved substantial compliance with the terms of this Agreement, the INS shall provide to Plaintiffs' counsel the information collected pursuant to Paragraph 28, as permitted by law, and each INS policy or instruction issued to INS employees regarding the implementation of this Agreement. In addition, Plaintiffs' counsel shall have the opportunity to submit questions, on a semi-annual basis, to the Juvenile Coordinator in the Office of the Assistant Commissioner for Detention and Deportation with regard to the implementation of this Agreement and the information provided to Plaintiffs' counsel during the preceding six-month period pursuant to Paragraph 28. Plaintiffs' counsel shall present such questions either orally or in writing, at the option of the Juvenile Coordinator. The Juvenile Coordinator shall furnish responses, either orally or in writing at the option of Plaintiffs' counsel, within 30 days of receipt.

30. On an annual basis, commencing one year after final court approval of this Agreement, the INS Juvenile Coordinator shall review, assess, and report to the court regarding compliance with the terms of this Agreement. The Coordinator shall file these reports with the court and provide copies to the parties, including the final report referenced in Paragraph 35, so that they can submit comments on the report to the court. In each report, the Coordinator shall state to the court whether or not the INS is in substantial compliance with the terms of this Agreement, and, if the INS is not in substantial compliance, explain the reasons for the lack of compliance. The Coordinator shall continue to report on an annual basis until three years after the court determines that the INS has achieved substantial compliance with the terms of this Agreement.

31. One year after the court's approval of this Agreement, the Defendants may ask the court to determine whether the INS has achieved substantial compliance with the terms of this Agreement.

XI ATTORNEY-CLIENT VISITS

32. A. Plaintiffs' counsel are entitled to attorney-client visits with class members even though they may not have the names of class members who are housed at a particular location. All visits shall occur in accordance with generally applicable policies and procedures relating to attorney-client visits at the facility in question. Upon Plaintiffs' counsel's arrival at a facility for attorney-client visits, the facility staff shall provide Plaintiffs' counsel with a list of names and alien registration numbers for the minors housed at that facility. In all instances, in order to memorialize any visit to a minor by Plaintiffs' counsel, Plaintiffs' counsel must file a notice of appearance with the INS prior to any attorney-client meeting. Plaintiffs' counsel may limit any such notice of appearance to representation of the minor in connection with this Agreement. Plaintiffs' counsel must submit a copy of the notice of appearance by hand or by mail to the local INS juvenile coordinator and a copy by hand to the staff of the facility.

B. Every six months, Plaintiffs' counsel shall provide the INS with a list of those attorneys who may make such attorney-client visits, as Plaintiffs' counsel, to minors during the following six month period. Attorney-client visits may also be conducted by any staff attorney employed by the Center for Human Rights & Constitutional Law in Los Angeles, California or the National Center for Youth Law in San Francisco, California, provided that such attorney presents credentials establishing his or her employment prior to any visit.

C. Agreements for the placement of minor in non-INS facilities shall permit attorney-client visits, including by class counsel in this case.

D. Nothing in Paragraph 32 shall affect a minor's right to refuse to meet with Plaintiffs' counsel. Further, the minor's parent or legal guardian may deny Plaintiffs' counsel permission to meet with the minor.

XII FACILITY VISITS

33. In addition to the attorney-client visits permitted pursuant to Paragraph 32, Plaintiffs' counsel may request access to any licensed program's facility in which a minor has been placed pursuant to Paragraph 19 or to any medium security facility or detention facility in which a minor has been placed pursuant to Paragraphs 21 or 23. Plaintiffs' counsel shall submit a request to visit a facility under this paragraph to the INS district juvenile coordinator who will provide reasonable assistance to Plaintiffs' counsel by conveying the request to the facility's staff and coordinating the visit. The rules and procedures to be followed in connection with any visit approved by a facility under this paragraph are set forth in Exhibit 4 attached, except as may be otherwise agreed by Plaintiffs' counsel and the facility's staff. In all visits to any facility pursuant to this Agreement, Plaintiffs' counsel and their associated experts shall treat minors and staff with courtesy and dignity and shall not disrupt the normal functioning of the facility.

XIII TRAINING

34. Within 120 days of final court approval of this Agreement, the INS shall provide appropriate guidance and training for designated INS employees regarding the terms of this Agreement. The INS shall develop written and/or audio or video materials for such training. Copies of such written and/or audio or video training materials shall be made available to Plaintiffs' counsel when such training materials are sent to the field, or to the extent practicable, prior to that time.

XIV DISMISSAL

35. After the court has determined that the INS is in substantial compliance with this Agreement and the Coordinator has filed a final report, the court, without further notice, shall dismiss this action. Until such dismissal, the court shall retain jurisdiction over this action.

XV RESERVATION OF RIGHTS

36. Nothing in this agreement shall limit the rights, if any, of individual class members to preserve issues for judicial review in the appeal of an individual case or for class members to exercise any independent rights they may otherwise have.

XVI NOTICE AND DISPUTE RESOLUTION

37. This paragraph provides for the enforcement, in this District Court, of the provisions of this Agreement except for claims brought under Paragraph 24. The parties shall meet telephonically or in person to discuss a complete or partial repudiation of this Agreement or any alleged non-compliance with the terms of the Agreement, prior to bringing any individual or class action to enforce this Agreement. Notice of a claim that defendants have violated the terms of this Agreement shall be served on plaintiffs addressed to:

The INS shall send copies of this Agreement to social service and voluntary agencies agreed upon by the parties, as set forth in Exhibit 5 attached. The parties shall pursue such other public dissemination of information regarding this Agreement as the parties shall agree.

XVIII ATTORNEYS FEES AND COSTS

39. Within 60 days of final court approval of this Agreement, Defendants shall pay to Plaintiffs the total sum of $_____, in full settlement of all attorneys' fees and costs in this case.

XIX TERMINATION

40. All terms of this Agreement shall terminate the earlier of five years from the date of final court approval of this Agreement or three years after the court determines that the INS is in substantial compliance with the Agreement, except the following: the INS shall continue to house the general population of minors in INS custody in facilities that are state-licensed for the care of dependent minors.

XX REPRESENTATIONS AND WARRANTY

41. Counsel for the respective parties, on behalf of themselves and their clients, represent that they know of nothing in this Agreement that exceeds the legal authority of the parties or is in violation of any law. Defendants' counsel represent and warrant that they are fully authorized and empowered to enter into this Agreement on behalf of the Attorney General, the United States Department of Justice, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and acknowledge that Plaintiffs enter into this Agreement in reliance on such representation. Plaintiffs' counsel represent and warrant that they are fully authorized and empowered to enter into this Agreement on behalf of the Plaintiffs, and acknowledge that Defendants enter into this Agreement in reliance on such representation. The undersigned, by their signatures on behalf of the Plaintiffs and Defendants, warrant that upon execution of this Agreement in their representative capacities, their principals, agents, and successors of such principals and agents shall be fully and unequivocally bound hereunder to the full extent authorized by law.

Minimum Standards for Licensed Programs

A. Licensed programs shall comply with all applicable state child welfare laws and regulations and all state and local building, fire, health and safety codes and shall provide or arrange for the following services for each minor in its care:

1. Proper physical care and maintenance, including suitable living accommodations, food, appropriate clothing, and personal grooming items.
2. Appropriate routine medical and dental care, family planning services, and emergency health care services, including a complete medical examination (including screening for infectious disease) within 48 hours of admission, excluding weekends and holidays, unless the minor was recently examined at another facility; appropriate immunizations in accordance with the U.S. Public Health Service (PHS), Center for Disease Control; administration of prescribed medication and special diets; appropriate mental health interventions when necessary.
3. An individualized needs assessment which shall include: (a) various initial intake forms; (b) essential data relating to the identification and history of the minor and family; (c) identification of the minors' special needs including any specific problem(s) which appear to require immediate intervention; (d) an educational assessment and plan; (e) an assessment of family relationships and interaction with adults, peers and authority figures; (f) a statement of religious preference and practice; (g) an assessment of the minor's personal goals, strengths and weaknesses; and (h) identifying information regarding immediate family members, other relatives, godparents or friends who may be residing in the United States and may be able to assist in family reunification.
4. Educational services appropriate to the minor's level of development, and communication skills in a structured classroom setting, Monday through Friday, which concentrates primarily on the development of basic academic competencies and secondarily on English Language Training (ELT). The educational program shall include instruction and educational and other reading materials in such languages as needed. Basic academic areas should include Science, Social Studies, Math, Reading, Writing and Physical Education. The program shall provide minors with appropriate reading materials in languages other than English for use during the minor's leisure time.

5. Activities according to a recreation and leisure time plan which shall include daily outdoor activity, weather permitting, at least one hour per day of large muscle activity and one hour per day of structured leisure time activities (this should not include time spent watching television). Activities should be increased to a total of three hours on days when school is not in session.

6. At least one (1) individual counseling session per week conducted by trained social work staff with the specific objectives of reviewing the minor's progress, establishing new short term objectives, and addressing both the developmental and crisis-related needs of each minor.

7. Group counseling sessions at least twice a week. This is usually an informal process and takes place with all the minors present. It is a time when new minors are given the opportunity to get acquainted with the staff, other children, and the rules of the program. It is an open forum where everyone gets a chance to speak. Daily program management is discussed and decisions are made about recreational activities, etc. It is a time for staff and minors to discuss whatever is on their minds and to resolve problems.

8. Acculturation and adaptation services which include information regarding the development of social and inter-personal skills which contribute to those abilities necessary to live independently and responsibly.

9. Upon admission, a comprehensive orientation regarding program intent, services, rules (written and verbal), expectations and the availability of legal assistance.

10. Whenever possible, access to religious services of the minor's choice.

11. Visitation and contact with family members (regardless of their immigration status) which is structured to encourage such visitation. The staff shall respect the minor's privacy while reasonably preventing the unauthorized release of the minor.

12. A reasonable right to privacy, which shall include the right to: (a) wear his or her own clothes, when available; (b) retain a private space in the residential facility, group or foster home for the storage of personal belongings; (c) talk privately on the phone, as permitted by the house rules and regulations; (d) visit privately with guests, as permitted by the house rules and regulations; and (e) receive and send uncensored mail unless there is a reasonable belief that the mail contains contraband.

13. Family reunification services designed to identify relatives in the United States as well as in foreign countries and assistance in obtaining legal guardianship when necessary for the release of the minor.

14. Legal services information regarding the availability of free legal assistance, the right to be represented by counsel at no expense to the government, the right to a deportation or exclusion hearing before an immigration judge, the right to apply for political asylum or to request voluntary departure in lieu of deportation.

B. Service delivery is to be accomplished in a manner which is sensitive to the age, culture, native language and the complex needs of each minor.

C. Program rules and discipline standards shall be formulated with consideration for the range of ages and maturity in the program and shall be culturally sensitive to the needs of alien minors. Minors shall not be subjected to corporal punishment, humiliation, mental abuse, or punitive interference with the daily functions of living, such as eating or sleeping. Any sanctions employed shall not: (1) adversely affect either a minor's health, or physical or psychological well-being; or (2) deny minors regular meals, sufficient sleep, exercise, medical care, correspondence privileges, or legal assistance.

D. A comprehensive and realistic individual plan for the care of each minor must be developed in accordance with the minor's needs as determined by the individualized need assessment. Individual plans shall be implemented and closely coordinated through an operative case management system.

E. Programs shall develop, maintain and safeguard individual client case records. Agencies and organizations are required to develop a system of accountability which preserves the confidentiality of client information and protects the records from unauthorized use or disclosure.

F. Programs shall maintain adequate records and make regular reports as required by the INS that permit the INS to monitor and enforce this order and other requirements and standards as the INS may determine are in the best interests of the minors.

Exhibit 2
Instructions to Service Officers re:
Processing, Treatment, and Placement of Minors

These instructions are to advise Service officers of INS policy regarding the way in which minors in INS custody are processed, housed and released. These instructions are applicable nationwide and supersede all prior inconsistent instructions regarding minors.

(a) Minors. A minor is a person under the age of eighteen years. However, individuals who have been "emancipated" by a state court or convicted and incarcerated for a criminal offense as an adult are not considered minors. Such individuals must be treated as adults for all purposes, including confinement and release on bond.

Similarly, if a reasonable person would conclude that an individual is an adult despite his claims to be a minor, the INS shall treat such person as an adult for all purposes, including confinement and release on bond or recognizance. The INS may require such an individual to submit to a medical or dental examination conducted by a medical professional or to submit to other appropriate procedures to verify his or her age. If the INS subsequently determines that such an individual is a minor, he or she will be treated as a minor for all purposes.

(b) General policy. The INS treats and shall continued to treat minors with dignity, respect and special concern for their particular vulnerability. INS policy is to place each detained minor in the least restrictive setting appropriate to the minor's age and special needs, provided that such setting is consistent with the need to ensure the minor's timely appearance and to protect the minor's well-being and that of others. INS officers are not required to release a minor to any person or agency whom they have reason to believe may harm or neglect the minor or fail to present him or her before the INS or the immigration courts when requested to do so.

(c) Processing. The INS will expeditiously process minors and will provide them a Form I-770 notice of rights, including the right to a bond redetermination hearing, if applicable.

Following arrest, the INS will hold minors in a facility that is safe and sanitary and that is consistent with the INS's concern for the particular vulnerability of minors. Such facilities will have access to toilets and sinks, drinking water and food as appropriate, medical assistance if the minor is in need of emergency services, adequate temperature control and ventilation, adequate supervision to protect minors from others, and contact with family members who were arrested with the minor. The INS will separate unaccompanied minors from unrelated adults whenever possible. Where such segregation is not immediately possible, an unaccompanied minor will not be detained with an unrelated adult for more than 24 hours.

If the minor cannot be immediately released, and no licensed program (described below) is available to care for him, he should be placed in an INS or INS-contract facility that has separate accommodations for minors, or in a State or county juvenile detention facility that separates minors in INS custody from delinquent offenders. The INS will make every effort to ensure the safety and well-being of juveniles placed in these facilities.

(d) Release. The INS will release minors from its custody without unnecessary delay, unless detention of a juvenile is required to secure her timely appearance or to ensure the minor's safety or that of others. Minors shall be released in the following order of preference, to:

- (i) a parent;
- (ii) a legal guardian;
- (iii) an adult relative (brother, sister, aunt, uncle, or grandparent);
- (iv) an adult individual or entity designated by the parent or legal guardian as capable and willing to care for the minor's well-being in (i) a declaration signed under penalty of perjury before an immigration or consular officer, or (ii) such other documentation that establishes to the satisfaction of the INS, in its discretion, that the individual designating the individual or entity as the minor's custodian is in fact the minor's parent or guardian;
- (v) a state-licensed juvenile shelter, group home, or foster home willing to accept legal custody; or
- (vi) an adult individual or entity seeking custody, in the discretion of the INS, when it appears that there is no other likely alternative to long term detention and family reunification does not appear to be a reasonable possibility.

(e) Certification of custodian. Before a minor is released, the custodian must execute an Affidavit of Support (Form I-134) and an agreement to:

- (i) provide for the minor's physical, mental, and financial well-being;
- (ii) ensure the minor's presence at all future proceedings before the INS and the immigration court;
- (iii) notify the INS of any change of address within five (5) days following a move;
- (iv) if the custodian is not a parent or legal guardian, not transfer custody of the minor to another party without the prior written permission of the District Director, except in the event of an emergency;
- (v) notify the INS at least five days prior to the custodian's departing the United States of such departure, whether the departure is voluntary or pursuant to a grant of voluntary departure or order of deportation; and

(vi) if dependency proceedings involving the minor are initiated, notify the INS of the initiation of a such proceedings and the dependency court of any deportation proceedings pending against the minor.

In an emergency, a custodian may transfer temporary physical custody of a minor prior to securing permission from the INS, but must notify the INS of the transfer as soon as is practicable, and in all cases within 72 hours. Examples of an "emergency" include the serious illness of the custodian, destruction of the home, etc. In all cases where the custodian seeks written permission for a transfer, the District Director shall promptly respond to the request.

The INS may terminate the custody arrangements and assume legal custody of any minor whose custodian fails to comply with the agreement. However, custody arrangements will not be terminated for minor violations of the custodian's obligation to notify the INS of any change of address within five days following a move.

(f) Suitability assessment. An INS officer may require a positive suitability assessment prior to releasing a minor to any individual or program. A suitability assessment may include an investigation of the living conditions in which the minor is to be placed and the standard of care he would receive, verification of identity and employment of the individuals offering support, interviews of members of the household, and a home visit. The assessment will also take into consideration the wishes and concerns of the minor.

(g) Family reunification. Upon taking a minor into custody, the INS, or the licensed program in which the minor is placed, will promptly attempt to reunite the minor with his or her family to permit the release of the minor under Paragraph (d) above. Such efforts at family reunification will continue so long as the minor is in INS or licensed program custody and will be recorded by the INS or the licensed program in which the minor is placed.

(h) Placement in licensed programs. A "licensed program" is any program, agency or organization licensed by an appropriate state agency to provide residential group, or foster care services for dependent children, including a program operating group homes, foster homes or facilities for special needs minors. Exhibit 1 of the Flores v. Reno Settlement Agreement describes the standards required of licensed programs. Juveniles who remain in INS custody must be placed in a licensed program within three days if the minor was apprehended in an INS district in which a licensed program is located and has space available, or within five days in all other cases, except when:

(i) the minor is an escape risk or delinquent, as defined in Paragraph (l) below;

(ii) a court decree or court-approved settlement requires otherwise;

(iii) an emergency or influx of minors into the United States prevents compliance, in which case all minors should be placed in licensed programs as expeditiously as possible; or

(iv) where the minor must be transported from remote areas for processing or speaks an unusual language such that a special interpreter is required to process the minor, in which case the minor must be placed in a licensed program within five business days.

(i) Secure and supervised detention. A minor may be held in or transferred to a State or county juvenile detention facility or in a secure INS facility or INS-contracted facility having separate accommodations for minors, whenever the District Director or Chief Patrol Agent determines that the minor -

(i) has been charged with, is chargeable, or has been convicted of a crime, or is the subject of delinquency proceedings, has been adjudicated delinquent, or is chargeable with a delinquent act, unless the minor's offense is

(a) an isolated offense not within a pattern of criminal activity which did not involve violence against a person or the use or carrying of a weapon (Examples: breaking and entering, vandalism, DUI, etc.); or

(b) a petty offense, which is not considered grounds for stricter means of detention in any case (Examples: shoplifting, joy riding, disturbing the peace, etc.);

(ii) has committed, or has made credible threats to commit, a violent or malicious act (whether directed at himself or others) while in INS legal custody or while in the presence of an INS officer;

(iii) has engaged, while in a licensed program, in conduct that has proven to be unacceptably disruptive of the normal functioning of the licensed program in which he or she has been placed and removal is necessary to ensure the welfare of the minor or others, as determined by the staff of the licensed program (Examples: drug or alcohol abuse, stealing, fighting, intimidation of others, etc.);

(iv) is an escape-risk; or

(v) must be held in a secure facility for his or her own safety, such as when the INS has reason to believe that a smuggler would abduct or coerce a particular minor to secure payment of smuggling fees.

"Chargeable" means that the INS has probable cause to believe that the individual has committed a specified offense.

The term "escape-risk" means that there is a serious risk that the minor will attempt to escape from custody. Factors to consider when determining whether a minor is an escape-risk or not include, but are not limited to, whether:

- (a) the minor is currently under a final order of deportation or exclusion;
- (b) the minor's immigration history includes: a prior breach of a bond; a failure to appear before the INS or the immigration court; evidence that the minor is indebted to organized smugglers for his transport; or a voluntary departure or a previous removal from the United States pursuant to a final order of deportation or exclusion;
- (c) the minor has previously absconded or attempted to abscond from INS custody.

The INS will not place a minor in a State or county juvenile detention facility, secure INS detention facility, or secure INS-contracted facility if less restrictive alternatives are available and appropriate in the circumstances, such as transfer to a medium security facility that provides intensive staff supervision and counseling services or transfer to another licensed program. All determinations to place a minor in a secure facility must be reviewed and approved by the regional Juvenile Coordinator.

(j) Notice of right to bond redetermination and judicial review of placement. A minor in deportation proceedings shall be afforded a bond redetermination hearing before an immigration judge in every case in which he either affirmatively requests, or fails to request or refuse, such a hearing on the Notice of Custody Determination. A juvenile who is not released or placed in a licensed placement shall be provided (1) a written explanation of the right of judicial review in the form attached, and (2) the list of free legal services providers compiled pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 292a.

(k) Transportation and transfer. Unaccompanied minors should not be transported in vehicles with detained adults except when being transported from the place of arrest or apprehension to an INS office or where separate transportation would be otherwise impractical, in which case minors shall be separated from adults. INS officers shall take all necessary precautions for the protection of minors during transportation with adults.

When a minor is to be released, the INS will assist him or her in making transportation arrangements to the INS office nearest the location of the person or facility to whom a minor is to be released. The Service may, in its discretion, provide transportation to such minors.

Whenever a minor is transferred from one placement to another, she shall be transferred with all of her possessions and legal papers; provided, however, that if the minor's possessions exceed the amount permitted normally by the carrier in use, the possessions must be shipped to the minor in a timely manner. No minor who is represented by counsel should be transferred without advance notice to counsel, except in unusual and compelling circumstances such as where the safety of the minor or others is threatened or the minor has been determined to be an escape-risk, or where counsel has waived notice, in which cases notice must be provided to counsel within 24 hours following transfer.

(l) Periodic reporting. All INS district offices and Border Patrol stations must report to the Juvenile Coordinator statistical information on minors placed in proceedings who remain in INS custody for longer than 72 hours. Information will include: (a) biographical information, including the minor's name, date of birth, and country of birth, (b) date placed in INS custody, (c) each date placed, removed or released, (d) to whom and where placed, transferred, removed or released, (e) immigration status, and (f) hearing dates. The Juvenile Coordinator must also be informed of the reasons for placing a minor in a medium security facility or detention facility as described in paragraph (i).

(m) Attorney-client visits by Plaintiffs' counsel. The INS will permit lawyers for the Reno v. Flores plaintiff class to visit minors even though they may not have the names of minors who are housed at a particular location. A list of Plaintiffs' counsel entitled to make attorney-client visits with minors is available from the district Juvenile Coordinator. Attorney-client visits may also be conducted by any staff attorney employed by the Center for Human Rights & Constitutional Law of Los Angeles, California, or the National Center for Youth Law of San Francisco, California, provided that such attorney presents credentials establishing his or her employment prior to any visit.

Visits must occur in accordance with generally applicable policies and procedures relating to attorney-client visits at the facility in question. Upon Plaintiffs' counsel's arrival at a facility for attorney-client visits, the facility staff must provide Plaintiffs' counsel with a list of names and alien registration numbers for the minors housed at that facility. In all instances, in order to memorialize any visit to a minor by Plaintiffs' counsel, Plaintiffs' counsel must file a notice of appearance with the INS prior to any attorney-client meeting. Plaintiffs' counsel may limit the notice of appearance to representation of the minor in connection with his placement or treatment during INS custody. Plaintiffs' counsel must submit a copy of the notice of appearance by hand or by mail to the local INS juvenile coordinator and a copy by hand to the staff of the facility.

A minor may refuse to meet with Plaintiffs' counsel. Further, the minor's parent or legal guardian may deny Plaintiffs' counsel permission to meet with the minor.

(n) Visits to licensed facilities. In addition to the attorney-client visits, Plaintiffs' counsel may request access to a licensed program's facility (described in paragraph (h)) or to a medium-security facility or detention facility (described in paragraph (i)) in which a minor has been placed. The district juvenile coordinator will convey the request to the facility's staff and coordinate the visit. The rules and procedures to be followed in connection with such visits are set out in Exhibit 4 of the Flores v. Reno Settlement Agreement, unless Plaintiffs' counsel and the facility's staff agree otherwise. In all visits to any facility, Plaintiffs' counsel and their associated experts must treat minors and staff with courtesy and dignity and must not disrupt the normal functioning of the facility.

Contingency Plan

In the event of an emergency or influx that prevents the prompt placement of minors in licensed programs with which the Community Relations Service has contracted, INS policy is to make all reasonable efforts to place minors in licensed programs licensed by an appropriate state agency as expeditiously as possible. An emergency is an act or event, such as a natural disaster (e.g. earthquake, fire, hurricane), facility fire, civil disturbance, or medical emergency (e.g. a chicken pox epidemic among a group of minors) that prevents the prompt placement of minors in licensed facilities. An influx is defined as any situation in which there are more than 130 minors in the custody of the INS who are eligible for placement in licensed programs.

1. The Juvenile Coordinator will establish and maintain an Emergency Placement List of at least 80 beds at programs licensed by an appropriate state agency that are potentially available to accept emergency placements. These 80 placements would supplement the 130 placements that INS normally has available, and whenever possible, would meet all standards applicable to juvenile placements the INS normally uses. The Juvenile Coordinator may consult with child welfare specialists, group home operators, and others in developing the list. The Emergency Placement List will include the facility name; the number of beds at the facility; the name and telephone number of contact persons; the name and telephone number of contact persons for nights, holidays, and weekends if different; any restrictions on minors accepted (e.g. age); and any special services that are available.
2. The Juvenile Coordinator will maintain a list of minors affected by the emergency or influx, including (1) the minor's name, (2) date and country of birth, and (3) date placed in INS custody.
3. Within one business day of the emergency or influx the Juvenile Coordinator, or his or her designee will contact the programs on the Emergency Placement List to determine available placements. As soon as available placements are identified, the Juvenile Coordinator will advise appropriate INS staff of their availability. To the extent practicable, the INS will attempt to locate emergency placements in geographic areas where culturally and linguistically appropriate community services are available.

4. In the event that the number of minors needing emergency placement exceeds the available appropriate placements on the Emergency Placement List, the Juvenile Coordinator will work with the Community Relations Service to locate additional placements through licensed programs, county social services departments, and foster family agencies.

5. Each year, the INS will reevaluate the number of regular placements needed for detained minors to determine whether the number of regular placements should be adjusted to accommodate an increased or decreased number of minors eligible for placement in licensed programs. However, any decision to increase the number of placements available shall be subject to the availability of INS resources. The Juvenile Coordinator shall promptly provide Plaintiffs' counsel with any reevaluation made by INS pursuant to this paragraph.

6. The Juvenile Coordinator shall provide to Plaintiffs' counsel copies of the Emergency Placement List within six months after the court's final approval of the Settlement Agreement.

Agreement Concerning Facility Visits Under Paragraph 33

The purpose of facility visits under paragraph 33 is to interview class members and staff and to observe conditions at the facility. Visits under paragraph 33 shall be conducted in accordance with the generally applicable policies and procedures of the facility to the extent that those policies and procedures are consistent with this Exhibit.

Visits authorized under paragraph 33 shall be scheduled no less than seven (7) business days in advance. The names, positions, credentials, and professional association (e.g., Center for Human Rights and Constitutional Law) of the visitors will be provided at that time.

All visits with class members shall take place during normal business hours.

No video recording equipment or cameras of any type shall be permitted. Audio recording equipment shall be limited to hand-held tape recorders.

The number of visitors will not exceed six (6) or, in the case of a family foster home, four (4), including interpreters, in any instance. Up to two (2) of the visitors may be non-attorney experts in juvenile justice and/or child welfare.

No visit will extend beyond three (3) hours per day in length. Visits shall minimize disruption to the routine that minors and staff follow.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT
AMONG
THE OFFICE OF REFUGEE RESETTLEMENT
OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
AND
U.S. IMMIGRATION AND CUSTOMS ENFORCEMENT AND
U.S. CUSTOMS AND BORDER PROTECTION OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY REGARDING
CONSULTATION AND INFORMATION SHARING IN UNACCOMPANIED ALIEN CHILDREN MATTERS

I. Parties

The Parties to this Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) are the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) in the Administration for Children and Families of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) (collectively "the Parties").

II. Purpose

The purpose of this MOA is to set forth the expectations of the Parties and implement processes for the Parties to share information about unaccompanied alien children (UACs) at the time of referral from ICE or CBP to ORR; while in the care and custody of ORR, including in the vetting of potential sponsors and adult members of potential sponsors' households; and upon release from ORR care and custody. This MOA sets forth a process by which DHS will provide HHS with information necessary to conduct suitability assessments for sponsors from appropriate federal, state, and local law enforcement and immigration databases, as required by law. Such information includes information to which HHS would otherwise not have access and without which suitability assessments are incomplete. The Parties recognize such information-sharing as a top priority requiring special attention to ensure that the transfer, placement, and release of UACs are safe for the UACs and the communities into which they are released.

This MOA does not address all necessary coordination between the Parties, nor is that the intent of this document. It is not a substitute for, nor does it supersede or revise, the Parties' responsibilities under the Memorandum of Agreement between the Department of Homeland Security and the Department of Health and Human Services Regarding Unaccompanied Alien Children, executed on February 22, 2016, which established a framework for interagency coordination.

III. Authorities

This MOA is authorized under, and entered into consistent with, the following provisions of law:

- A. Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296, §§ 102(b), 462, 116 Stat. 2135, 2142, 2202 (codified at 6 U.S.C. §§ 112(b), 279);
- B. William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-457, § 235, 122 Stat. 5044, 5077-79 (codified in principal part at 8 U.S.C. § 1232);
- C. Privacy Act of 1974, as amended, 5 U.S.C. § 552a;
- D. Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended, §§ 103(a), 287 (codified at 8 U.S.C. §§ 1103(a), 1357); and
- E. Tariff Act of 1930, as amended, § 589 (codified at 19 U.S.C. § 1589a).

IV. HHS and DHS Responsibilities Upon Initial ReferralA. Initial Referral and Transfer

1. At the time of initial referral, the DHS component (ICE or CBP) referring the UAC to HHS (specifically, ORR) will electronically transfer the following information about the UAC, to the extent such information is known and can be gathered in an operationally reasonable manner, to ORR through the UAC Portal or by some other appropriate method:
 - a. Basic biographical data (e.g., name, date of birth, country of birth, potential sponsor information);
 - b. Situational factors (e.g., health, pregnancy, travel companions);
 - c. Human trafficking indicators; and
 - d. Known criminal or behavioral issues, including arrests, criminal charges and convictions, immigration history, gang affiliation or suspected gang affiliation, and violence or behavioral concerns.
2. To ensure ORR has available information and supporting documentation to make an informed placement decision, the apprehending DHS component (ICE or CBP) will normally include in the Transfer Packet:
 - a. Copies of all identity documents;
 - b. DHS Form I-213, Record of Deportable/Inadmissible Alien;
 - c. DHS Form I-216, Record of Persons and Property Transferred;
 - d. DHS Form I-217, Information for Travel Document or Passport;

- e. DHS Form I-770, Notice of Rights and Request for Disposition;
 - f. DHS Form I-862, Notice to Appear or other charging document;
 - g. CBP Form 93, Unaccompanied Alien Child Screening Addendum (trafficking information), if conducted;
 - h. Other applicable DHS, ICE, or CBP forms, if applicable, such as DHS Form I-200, Warrant for Arrest of Alien; and
 - i. Copies of any publicly available federal, state, or local criminal records in the possession of the apprehending DHS component (ICE or CBP) at the time of transfer and appropriate available documentation describing any gang, immigration, criminal, or other activity that may affect placement.
3. As expeditiously as possible, but no later than 24 hours after receiving notification from ICE or CBP of a UAC needing placement at an ORR facility, ORR will send a notification email notifying both ICE and CBP of the placement location. At a minimum, the message will include:
- a. Identifying information of the UAC at issue;
 - b. Facility name and location; and
 - c. Facility point of contact (name and telephone number).

B. ORR Care

1. While UAC are in ORR care, ORR will notify ICE or CBP of the following situations, as expeditiously as possible, but no later than 48 hours after the occurrence:
- a. Unauthorized absences. The ORR-funded care provider will contact the ICE Enforcement and Removal Operations (ERO) Field Office Juvenile Coordinator (FOJC) by telephone and provide notice by email.
 - b. Arrest of a UAC in ORR custody. The ORR-funded care provider will contact the FOJC by telephone and provide notice by email.
 - c. Death of a UAC. ORR headquarters will immediately notify, by telephone, ICE ERO.
 - d. Alleged or suspected fraud, human smuggling, human trafficking, drug trafficking, weapons trafficking, or gang-related activity. ORR will notify the ICE Homeland Security Investigations Tip Line by email and, for human trafficking specifically (either by or of a UAC), ORR will also email the ICE Human Trafficking Help Desk.
 - e. Abuse of a UAC in ICE or CBP custody. If ORR becomes aware of allegations of abuse of a UAC while he or she was in ICE or CBP custody, ORR will notify the appropriate DHS component (ICE or CBP) as required under ORR policy.
 - f. Violence by a UAC while in ORR care. ORR will notify the FOJC of incidents of physical violence or assault by a UAC in its care, including incidents between a UAC and facility staff.

- g. Change in level of care. ORR will provide notice by email to the FOJC of any step up/step down to or from secure care for the UAC.
2. ORR will provide to the FOJC copies of all age-determination findings concluding that an individual is 18 years of age or over, as soon as possible from the time of such determination.
 3. If ICE or CBP becomes aware of any criminal information (e.g., information regarding gang affiliation) that it did not have at the time of initial referral and transfer, ICE or CBP will notify ORR as expeditiously as practicable after becoming aware of the information (using their best efforts to provide such notification within 48 hours), and provide supporting documentation, to aid in ORR's consideration of whether transfer of the UAC may be necessary.
 4. To the extent permitted by law, and consistent with policy, DHS will report to ORR the results of any investigations (including investigations commenced following ORR's notification under Section IV(B)(1) of this MOA) they conduct that would be relevant to ORR's determinations concerning UAC care and placement. Such information will be provided as expeditiously as possible, and normally within 96 hours of such information becoming available.

V. HHS and DHS Responsibilities Prior to ORR Release of a UAC to a Sponsor

A. HHS's Responsibilities

1. Pursuant to 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(3)(A), HHS must make a determination that a proposed sponsor is capable of providing for the child's physical and mental well-being. Such determination includes verification of the proposed sponsor's identity and relationship, as well as a finding that the proposed sponsor has not engaged in any activity that would indicate a potential risk to the child. In all placement determinations, HHS must ensure, among other things, that the UAC is likely to appear for all hearings or proceedings in which they are involved, is protected from smugglers and traffickers, and is placed in a setting where the UAC will not pose a danger to himself or others. 6 U.S.C. § 279(b)(2). In order to fulfill its statutory duty under 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(3)(A) and to ensure that all proposed placements meet the standards set forth in 6 U.S.C. § 279, ORR will take the following steps:
 - a. Prior to any release of a UAC from ORR care and custody to any sponsor, ORR will request from ICE information about all potential sponsors and adult members of potential sponsors' households, in order to aid HHS in determining the suitability of a potential sponsor. Such information includes the citizenship, immigration status, criminal history, and immigration history (to the extent consistent with the Privacy Act of 1974). ORR will advise the potential sponsor that this process is a required step in the UAC placement process.

- B. ORR will provide ICE with the name, date of birth, address, fingerprints (in a format and transmitted as prescribed by ICE from time to time), and any available identification documents or biographic information regarding the potential sponsor and all adult members of the potential sponsor's household. ICE will then provide ORR with the summary criminal and immigration history of the potential sponsor and all adult members of the potential sponsor's household to the extent available to ICE, consistent with the applicable confidentiality provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). ORR will use the criminal and immigration history information provided by ICE in ORR's individualized determination of sponsorship eligibility.
1. ICE will ascertain only criminal and immigration history information. ORR will remain responsible for searching various databases including public records, Sex Offender Registry, National (FBI) Criminal History, Child Abuse and Neglect, State Criminal History Repository, and local police records for all potential sponsors.

C. DHS's Responsibilities

1. Upon notice from an ORR-funded care provider that a potential sponsor or adult member of a potential sponsors' household requires screening for criminal and immigration histories and that ORR has received proper authorization from the potential sponsor or adult household members, ICE will conduct the initial screening. At a minimum, the review will include:
 - a. A biographic criminal check of the national databases;
 - b. A biographic check for wants and warrants; and
 - c. An immigration status check of the immigration databases.
2. ICE will run the fingerprints of the potential sponsor and/or adult household member and review the response received for any criminal activity.
3. ICE will provide the relevant criminal and immigration history information (consistent with the applicable confidentiality provisions of the INA) on the potential sponsor and adult household members within 72 hours, excluding weekends and holidays, after ORR requests the information and provides ICE with the necessary background information on the potential sponsor or adult member of the potential sponsors' household.

VI. Severability

Nothing in this Agreement is intended to conflict with current law or regulation or the directives of DHS, CBP, ICE, HHS, or ORR. If a term of this MOA is inconsistent with such authority, then that term shall be invalid, but the remaining terms and conditions of this agreement shall remain in full force and effect.

VII. Disputes

Disagreements between the Parties arising under or related to this MOA will be resolved by consultation. Attempts to resolve disputes will occur first at the lowest level possible. Any issues left unresolved after due consultation may be raised to the appropriate levels in the Parties, or if necessary, DHS and HHS.

VIII. Funding

Each Party intends to bear its own costs in relation to this MOA. Expenditures are subject to the Parties' budgetary resources and availability of funds pursuant to applicable laws and regulations. The Parties expressly acknowledge that this MOA in no way implies that funding is to be made available for such expenditures and does not obligate the Parties to expend any funds. Nothing in this MOA is intended to or shall be construed to require the obligation, appropriation, or expenditure of any money from the U.S. Treasury in violation of the Antideficiency Act, 31 U.S.C. §§ 1341-1519.

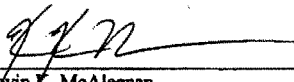

IX. No Private Rights

This MOA is an agreement between the Parties and is not intended to, does not, and should not be construed to create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity by any party in any administrative, civil, or criminal matter, against the United States, or any of its agencies, officers, or employees. This MOA does not and is not intended to place any limitations on the otherwise lawful enforcement or litigative prerogatives of the Parties.

X. Effective Date, Modification, and Termination

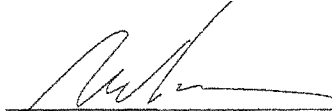

This MOA will take effect thirty (30) days after signature by the Parties and will remain in effect until revised or revoked in writing by mutual agreement of the Parties, or terminated without cause by any Party upon thirty (30) days advance notice in writing of intent to terminate.

Attachment

1. During the hearing, Sen. McCaskill asked Mr. Greenberg and Mr. Carey to provide, by February 4, 2016, a formal legal analysis supporting HHS's "long-standing policy" that ORR has no responsibility for unaccompanied alien children (UAC) after their placement with sponsors. On February 22, 2016, HHS provided a response to Sen. McCaskill's request, which argued that the Trafficking Victims Protection Act prevented HHS from asserting "continuing legal custody post-release" of a child. Please answer the following questions:

a. HHS's February 22, 2016, letter stated that ORR operates the Unaccompanied Children Program "consistent with the Flores Settlement." Under paragraph 16 of the Flores Settlement, however, ORR has the authority to "terminate the custody arrangements [that ORR enters into with UAC sponsors] and assume legal custody of any minor whose custodian fails to comply" with such a custody agreement. Please explain why paragraph 16 would not allow ORR to assume post-release custody of a UAC in the event a sponsor fails to fulfill his or her obligations.

ORR relies on the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (HSA) and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA), to provide the contours of the Unaccompanied Children Program, which we operate consistent with the Flores Settlement.

Paragraph 16 of the Flores Settlement provided that "The INS may terminate the custody arrangements and assume legal custody" of a minor whose custodian fails to comply with the Affidavit of Support, but HHS's view is that ORR does not have the same ability to remove a child from a home and reassume custody as the former INS had at that time. Although ORR cannot directly reassume custody of a child, its concern for the child's welfare continues and staff work closely with other Federal, State, and local authorities as noted below.

ORR undertakes an extensive screening process before releasing a child to a sponsor, provides information to sponsors about community resources, and provides post-release services and other resources consistent with the statute and ORR policy.

If any of our provider grantees or staff have reason to believe that a child is unsafe, they are required to comply with mandatory reporting laws, State licensing requirements, and Federal laws and regulations for reporting to local child protective agencies and/or law enforcement.

b. HHS has explained to the Subcommittee that it has never invoked the authority provided in paragraph 16 and is unsure whether it or the Department of Homeland Security would be the proper agency to do so. Please state which agency, in the view of HHS, may properly invoke the authority in paragraph 16.

The Flores consent decree cannot grant HHS any authority that it does not have by statute. As noted above, although the Flores Settlement provided that "The INS may terminate the custody arrangements and assume legal custody" of a minor whose custodian fails to comply with the Affidavit of Support, HHS's view is that ORR does not have the same ability to remove a child from a home and reassume custody as the former INS had at that time. We note, moreover, the interplay of the Flores Settlement Agreement (FSA) and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act (TVPRA) and Homeland Security Act (HSA) is complex and the subject of significant legal uncertainty. Indeed, it continues to be the subject of litigation.

MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE DEPARTMENT OF HOMELAND SECURITY
AND
THE DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES
REGARDING
UNACCOMPANIED ALIEN CHILDREN

1. Parties

The Parties to this Memorandum of Agreement (hereinafter "MOA") are the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) (hereinafter, collectively, the "Parties").

2. Purpose

To continue to address the needs of unaccompanied alien children (UAC), as defined at 6 U.S.C. § 279(g)(2), the Parties recognize the following shared goals: ensure the safe and expedited transfer and placement of UAC from DHS to HHS custody; maximize efficiency in the allocation and expenditure of the Parties' respective program costs; ensure information is transmitted between the Parties to facilitate appropriate placement decisions and for HHS to promptly place the child in the least restrictive setting that is in the child's best interest until the child is released to an appropriate sponsor; continue the statutorily-required consultation between departments with respect to UAC placement determinations; protect UAC in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking; and promote the effective immigration processing and safe repatriation and reintegration of UAC.

The Parties acknowledge the critical role of consistent interagency coordination on the care, processing, and transport of UAC. This MOA is intended to provide a framework for interagency coordination on the responsibilities of the Parties in coordinating and establishing procedures, shared goals, and interagency cooperation with respect to UAC.

3. Authority

The primary authorities that authorize or support this MOA are:

- A. Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. No. 107-296, §§ 102(b) (2), 462, 116 Stat. 2142, as amended (codified at 6 U.S.C. §§ 112(b) (2), 279);
- C. William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, Pub. L. No. 110-457, § 235, 122 Stat. 5044, 5074, as amended (codified in part at 8 U.S.C. § 1232);
- D. Immigration and Nationality Act of 1952, as amended;
- E. Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013, Pub. L. No. 113-4, 127 Stat. 54;
- F. Title 8, Code of Federal Regulations.

4. Responsibilities

- A. The Parties agree to establish a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO) that should be completed no later than one year following the signing of this MOA, which should include, but need not be limited to standard protocols for consistent interagency cooperation on the care, processing, and transport of UAC, during both steady state operations as well as in the event the number of UAC exceeds the standard capabilities of the Parties to process, transport, and/or shelter with existing resources.
- B. The Parties agree to establish the following structure for UAC coordination to monitor and resolve issues, share information, and establish and maintain the JCO:
1. The Parties will establish and co-chair a Senior Leadership Council to serve as the coordinating body for consistent interagency cooperation on the care, processing, and transport of UAC. The Senior Leadership Council will also serve as a forum for discussing broader policy issues arising from these operational concerns. The Senior Leadership Council shall be composed of an equal number of senior officials from HHS and DHS representing relevant operational, policy, and administrative divisions responsible for UAC policies and operations, and will be co-chaired by two senior officials, one each designated by HHS and DHS.
 2. The Parties will establish and co-chair an Interagency Work Group. The Group shall be composed of subject matter experts from each Party's relevant agencies and shall be co-chaired by a representative of HHS and DHS who shall be appointed by the Senior Leadership Council. Members may be added to the Interagency Work Group as co-chairs determine such additions to be necessary.
 3. The Senior Leadership Council will:
 - i. Oversee and monitor the work by the Interagency Work Group, including the development of the JCO and the implementation of the Unified Coordination Group Plan for UAC Surge (which outlines the coordinated Federal response activities for a surge influx of UAC using an integrated concept of operations (UAC Plan for UAC Surge));
 - ii. Review, approve, and ensure implementation of the policies, procedures, and protocols presented by the Interagency Work Group;
 - iii. Provide direction and instruction to the Interagency Work Group; and
 - iv.
 - v. Convene additional work groups as it deems necessary and appropriate.
 4. The Interagency Work Group will be composed only of federal officials from each Party's relevant headquarters and component agencies, including but not limited to representatives from HHS ACF, and such other HHS representatives as HHS may determine and representatives from DHS CBP, DHS ICE, DHS OHA, DHS CRCL, DHS PLCY, DHS CISOMB, DHS FEMA, DHS PRIV, and DHS USCIS.
 - i. Members may be added to the Interagency Work Group as co-chairs determine such additions to be necessary.

- ii. Members will participate in any subject matter interagency group established at the direction of the Executive Office of the President (EOP) to ensure cooperation and coordination across the Federal Government, to the extent such participation is consistent with the EOP directive.
 - iii. Members will prepare the JCO and implement the UAC Plan for UAC Surge as directed by the Senior Leadership Council, develop policies and procedures to ensure coordinate operations across agencies, and support and guide basic operational decisions at the field level to the extent permitted by law. Both the JCO and UAC Plan for UAC Surge are to be appropriately cleared within respective agencies and, if necessary, in the Interagency Work Group.
 - iv. The Interagency Work Group will also serve as a forum for resolving immediate complaints or concerns raised about the UAC process, identifying areas of concern, and attempting to resolve matters at the SME level before raising issues to the Senior Leadership Council.
5. Meetings of the Senior Leadership Council should take place quarterly. Meetings of the Interagency Working Group will take place as needed, and no less than once per month.

C. Information Sharing/Reporting Requirements

- 1. The Parties agree to establish data-sharing capabilities to facilitate coordinated UAC-related operations to the extent authorized by applicable law, regulations, and policy to facilitate coordinated UAC-related operations, as needed. In the event of a request for information from Congress, the media, or a member of the public, the originator of the information is responsible for responding to such requests. If the Party receiving such request is not the originator, that Party will expeditiously route the request to the originating agency within the other Party. With respect to reports and other products created jointly by the Parties, the Parties should consult with each other prior to the disclosure of the information.
- 2. The Parties agree to provide each other with UAC-related reports in a mutually agreed upon format, with mutually agreed upon regularity and with mutually agreed upon content.
- 3. The Parties agree on the need to ensure a closely coordinated and prompt response to seasonal and other changes in UAC migration patterns and flows.
- 4. The Parties agree to review and coordinate other migration plans (or portions thereof) that may relate to the UAC population to ensure the UAC population is properly incorporated.

D. Administrative Development

- 1. Each Party will make all reasonable efforts to notify the other about upcoming changes in UAC policy and procedures that may impact the other agency's policies or operations (absent exigent circumstances).
- 2. During UAC-relevant grant solicitation or panel review periods, each Party will invite the other agency to contribute any information that could be valuable to deliberations on awards.

5. Disputes

Disagreements between the Parties arising under or relating to this MOA will be resolved by consultation between the Parties. Attempts to resolve disputes will be made first at the lowest level possible. Any issues unresolved, after due consultation, may be raised to the appropriate level within each Party.

6. Effective Date, Modification, and Termination

This MOA is in effect upon the date of the last signature affixed hereto and will remain in effect until such time as the Parties enter into a new MOA, revise this MOA in writing by mutual consent, or terminate this MOA upon no less than 30 days' prior written notice by either Party. This MOA will be reviewed for modifications not less than once every five years from the effective date.

7. No Private Right

This MOA does not and is not intended to, shall not be construed to, and may not be relied upon to create any rights, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law by any person or entity in any matter, including any civil, criminal, or administrative matter. This MOA is intended to provide a framework for the Parties for handling the various matters described herein; it is not intended to be legally binding on either Party.

8. Other

If a term of this MOA is inconsistent with such authority, then that term shall be invalid, but the remaining terms and conditions of this MOA shall remain in full force and effect.
- B. Each Party shall use its own appropriated or allotted funds and resources in performing activities under this MOA. The MOA does not provide for the reimbursement of funds. If the Parties wish to enter into a reimbursement arrangement, the Parties will enter into that arrangement separate and apart from this MOA.

ADMINISTRATION FOR CHILDREN & FAMILIES

FEB 22 2016

The Honorable Claire McCaskill
Ranking Member
Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations
Homeland Security & Government Affairs Committee
U.S. Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

Dear Senator McCaskill,

I am writing to follow up with you regarding your questions in the January 28, 2016, hearing before the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigation (PSI) regarding its report, "Protecting Unaccompanied Alien Children from Trafficking and Other Abuses: The Role of the Office of Refugee Resettlement." Unaccompanied children who make the dangerous journey from Central America to the United States, often in the hands of human smugglers, come in search of a better life. Many of the children our office comes into contact with tell stories of fleeing poverty and violence. Like you, we believe that the safety and well-being of unaccompanied children is of paramount importance. We appreciate the work of the Subcommittee on this important issue.

Clearly, these are vulnerable children in difficult circumstances, and we treat each child referred to our care with compassion and a commitment to their safety and well-being. The HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement's (ORR) Unaccompanied Children's Program in the Administration for Children and Families provides care and custody to unaccompanied children referred to it. Our mission to care for unaccompanied children who have been referred to ORR has two key parts. The first is to create a safe and healthy environment in our shelters, one that ensures access to nutritious food, clean clothes, education and medical services. The second is to identify the least restrictive placement in the best interest of the child, usually with a sponsor, for each child while they await their U.S. immigration proceedings, subject to considerations of risk of flight, and danger to the child or community. ORR's policies are based on federal statutes and are consistent with the settlement agreement in Flores v. Reno, Case No. CV 85-4544-RJK (C.D. Cal. 1996) (known as the Flores settlement agreement).

Over the last year, ORR has made a number of enhancements to its process for safely releasing children to qualified sponsors, strengthening its pre-screening protocols and augmenting the resources and protections available post-release. In addition, as described more fully below, HHS has carefully reviewed the Subcommittee's report and is working to identify additional areas where it can continue to improve the protections in place.

At the recent hearing before the Subcommittee, you asked a number of questions about HHS's responsibilities with respect to these children after their release to sponsors. As we have previously explained to the Subcommittee, HHS's longstanding view across administrations is that, under the authorities governing the Unaccompanied Children Program, once a child is released to a sponsor, ORR's legal and physical custody terminates. But the fact that our custody ends upon release does not mean that our commitment to providing resources, connecting children to services, and protecting vulnerable children from abuse or exploitation ends. We have authorities that permit us to provide a range of services and resources post-release, and we make use of that authorization to establish policies and procedures that, among other things, are intended to protect those children that may be vulnerable to abuse or exploitation after they are released from our care. Through these services and resources, if any of our provider grantees or staff have reason to believe that a child is unsafe, they comply with mandatory reporting laws, state licensing requirements, and federal laws and regulations for reporting to local child protective agencies and/or law enforcement.

The Unaccompanied Children Program provides care to children referred to its custody and is responsible for the process of releasing children to their parents, relatives or other appropriate sponsors with whom they can live during their immigration proceedings. As you know, ORR relies on the Homeland Security Act of 2002 and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA), to provide the contours of the Unaccompanied Children Program, which we operate consistent with the Flores Settlement. The authorities and the resources given to the Unaccompanied Children Program in ORR set forth a system that is intended to be temporary in nature, with a focus on caring for children while in our physical custody, and releasing children to appropriate sponsors. Additionally, if Congress had intended ORR's legal custody to continue after a child is released to a sponsor, the TVPRA would not have needed certain of its post-release provisions. If HHS had continuing legal custody post-release, for example, HHS would necessarily have the authority and responsibility to provide services to the child after release. Instead, Congress specifically required follow-up services in those limited cases where a home study was conducted, and it authorized follow-up services for certain other children with mental health or other needs. In addition, section 235(c)(5) of the TVPRA (8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5)) discusses legal services for children who "are" in the custody of HHS as well as those who "have been in the custody of the Secretary."¹ Taken together, these examples support the conclusion that the Unaccompanied Children Program's approach to legal custody is consistent with the statute and Congressional intent.

If the intent of the Congress had been for the Unaccompanied Children Program to retain legal custody over the children after their release to sponsors, the program would have needed to be structured and resourced in a very different way. The program is not structured in a manner similar to state procedures for child foster care, in which custody of the child is transferred to the state after a judicial proceeding and the child is placed with a foster parent selected and licensed by the state. State child foster care systems include, for example, foster care maintenance payments and payments for health care expenditures, which the Unaccompanied Children Program does not have the authorization or funding to provide.

Services and Resources Available to Children and Sponsors After Release

Within its current authorities, ORR deploys its resources in order to provide post-release services and resources as effectively as possible, and has improved those offerings over the last year. ORR provides post release services for any child who received a home study, on a case-by-case basis if it is determined the child has mental health or other needs, and for certain other categories of children. In Fiscal Year 2015, ORR provided post-release services for 8,618 unaccompanied children.

In July 2015, ORR began a pilot project to provide post-release services to all unaccompanied children released to a non-relative or distant relative sponsor, as well as children whose placement has been disrupted or is at risk of disruption within 180 days of release and the child or sponsor has contacted ORR's hotline.

In May 2015, ORR expanded the capability of an existing telephone hotline, used to help parents locate children in ORR custody, to accept calls from children with safety-related concerns, as well as to sponsors calling with family problems or child behavior issues, or in need of assistance connecting to community resources. Every child released to a sponsor is given a card with the hotline's phone number on it (Spanish language access as well) and all providers and sponsors are also provided with the hotline phone number.

Starting last summer, care providers now call each household 30 days after the child is released from ORR care to check on the child's wellbeing and safety.

Despite ORR's efforts to place children with appropriate sponsors and provide safety-net resources post-release, the Ohio case highlights the fact that, in some instances, dishonest people may attempt to exploit the system and break the law in order to take advantage of unaccompanied children and their families. We take any situation where unaccompanied children may be in danger extremely seriously. When we learn of alleged fraud or cases of exploitation, ORR works with all appropriate law enforcement agencies and state child welfare organizations with the goal of ensuring that—as in the Ohio case—those who take advantage of children are brought to justice to the full extent of the law and children and their families are protected. And we are continually working to review our policies to make sure that they are as strong as they can be.

While the changes ORR has made over the last year establish important new safeguards, ORR is mindful of the continued need to closely examine its policies and procedures, and is actively working to identify additional steps it can take to strengthen its program. We have reviewed the Subcommittee's report in detail and have incorporated the report findings into our ongoing review as we work to identify and implement additional program enhancements. ORR has taken a number of initial steps in recent weeks. First, ORR has posted a Senior Advisor for Child Well-Being and Safety position, which will augment existing child welfare expertise and support leadership's development of additional program improvements related to child safety post-release. Second, ORR has established a new discretionary home study policy, which will allow ORR care providers to recommend home studies in instances not required by TVPRA or existing ORR policy. Third, ORR is working with subject matter experts across the Administration to identify and incorporate enhanced interview and document verification techniques into the sponsor assessment process. We would be happy to keep the Subcommittee informed as we continue to work to strengthen the program going forward.

While we are grateful that Congress provided the $948 million in base funding for the program requested in the FY 2016 President's Budget, Congress did not enact the requested $400 million contingency fund in the FY 2016 Omnibus appropriation. The contingency fund would have helped ensure ORR had sufficient capacity to adjust to large and unpredictable fluctuations in need for shelter capacity. Without a contingency fund, our ability to respond to significant increases in migration is compromised. It would be difficult to significantly or substantially expand post-release services without the confidence that ACF has the funding it needs to fulfill its current responsibilities to take custody of unaccompanied children, and to provide appropriate shelter and care for them until they can be placed with a parent or sponsor.

Again, thank you for your interest in the Unaccompanied Children Program and your work on this important issue. I hope you find this information helpful. Please let my staff know if we can be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Mark H. Greenberg
Acting Assistant Secretary for the Administration for Children and Families

Hi [REDACTED],

We will have follow-up related to the responses below, but in the meantime I wanted to pass along a related briefing request:

We would also like to request a separate briefing focused on HHS ORR's gang initiative discussed during the January 17th briefing. In general, we are interested in the origins of this initiative and any specific safety or security-related incidents among UACs that may have led to the program being prioritized by HHS ORR. We are also interested in learning more about the secure and staff secure facilities that HHS ORR maintains. Please be prepared to discuss the locations of these facilities, the number of UACs housed in each with demographic breakdowns by gender and country of origin, and the number of supervisory officers assigned to work in each facility.

Please let us know if you need a more formal request or if you have any questions.

Best,

Here are the answers to your follow-up questions. Please note that since the ORR team started pulling this information after the briefing, we missed a question in your Jan. 26 email. We'll still need to get you the data on number of staff secure facilities (we've already asked). I'll give you a buzz tomorrow or Tuesday to discuss next steps considering there are several of your folks working with ORR currently.

1. When did ORR make a request of OGC to review the statutory authority to determine if ORR could follow-up on UACs post-release and take them back into custody?

ORR Response: In April 2017, a request was sent to general counsel concerning the issue. Conversations about the operational and legal implications and considerations have been ongoing. Most recently, in January 2018, additional questions were sent to general counsel.

2. What does HHS do with information received when they are contacted by state child welfare agencies with concerns about a UAC's safety and welfare? How is that information used by HHS for future child protection?

ORR Response: When a sponsor does not fulfill his/her sponsorship obligation (an agreement is signed at the time of release) for any reason they are flagged in the ORR portal. This alerts ORR if they try to sponsor another child. Child abuse would fall into this category of not upholding the sponsorship agreement because of failure to protect the child. Other reasons, for example, might include not enrolling the child in school or not participating in post release services.

3. Have there been any changes to policies regarding the provision of post-release services since summer 2017?

ORR Response: ORR Post Release service policy is published on the ORR website, <https://www.acf.hhs.gov/orr/resource/children-entering-the-united-states-unaccompanied-section-6#6.2>. Updates are noted at the bottom of the policy with the date the policy was updated.

4. In FY17, out of 41,000 total UAC releases, HHS was allotted funding for the provision of PRS to 11,000 children. How many UAC were actually provided PRS in FY17?

ORR Response: In FY16, ORR conducted 3,540 home studies and provided 10,546 UACs with post release services. In FY17, ORR conducted approximately 2,900 home studies and provided 11,500 UACs with post release services.

5. The list of contractors and grantees providing post-release services.

ORR Response:

- BCFS Health and Human Services
- The Children's Village, Inc.
- Florence Crittenton Services of Orange County, Inc.
- Heartland Human Care Services
- Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Services, Inc.
- MercyFirst
- Morrison Child and Family Services
- Southwest Key Programs, Inc.
- United States Conference of Catholic Bishops
- United States Committee for Refugees and Immigrants

6. ORR policy on placements in secure and staff secure facilities.

ORR Response: We have attached the full Policy and Procedures relating to placement in ORR facilities, and our corresponding forms. Below are descriptions of the attached documents.

- Template UAC Initial Placement Form- This is our referral form. It is duplicated in the Portal for referrals received directly there. We require receipt of this form for all referrals made.
- UAC Placement Tool- Intakes completes the first part of this tool (which is housed in the Portal) as an aid in determining placement level of care when processing referrals for minors with criminal history, gang involvement, or other factors (as outlined in the Policy Guide) that may require a more restrictive placement. The referral information and score from this tool are shared with an FFS Supervisor who approves type of placement for the UAC. (This procedure is outlined in the UAC MAP Section 1.3.2)
- UAC Policy Guide Section 1- This is where all the policies relating to placement in ORR facilities are housed. The policies that relate most directly to Intakes are in Section 1.2-1.3. These are also found online here: <https://www.acf.hhs.gov/orr/resource/children-entering-the-united-states-unaccompanied-section-1#1.1>

7. Details on the JCO process including the dates the JCO was shared with DHS and returned to HHS, the expected timeline based on a joint commitment with DHS, and more information on what is holding up progress on the JCO.

ORR Response: ORR submitted the last draft to DHS on October 6. DHS submitted their revised comments to the ORR draft on January 24, 2018.

8. How often do sponsors decline post-release services or not follow through?

ORR Response: About 13% of sponsors decline or do not follow through with post release services.

Thanks!

Definitions

Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR): The Office of Refugee Resettlement is a federal office in the Administration for Children and Families, an operational division of U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and oversees care for unaccompanied children in the United States.

Care Provider: A care provider is any ORR funded program that is licensed, certified or accredited by an appropriate State agency to provide residential care for children, including shelter, group, foster care, staff-secure, secure, therapeutic or residential treatment care for children.

Reunification: Reunification is the process of a child being released from ORR care to a sponsor. A child is reunified only when the sponsor has been approved by the government as a safe caregiver for the child.

ORR National Call Center (ORRNCC): The call center is a helpline for unaccompanied children, sponsors, and their families to support them throughout the reunification process, including after the child is released to a sponsor's care.

Family Reunification: Family reunification is an older term used in the Flores Settlement Agreement to refer to the process of releasing an unaccompanied child to the care of a parent, relative or other sponsor.

Sponsor: A sponsor is an individual (in the majority of cases a parent or other relative) or entity to which ORR releases an unaccompanied child out of Federal custody.

Post-Release Services: Post-release services are synonymous with follow-up services. They are services provided to an unaccompanied child based on the child's needs after he/she leaves ORR care. Post-release service providers coordinate referrals to supportive services in the community where the unaccompanied child resides and provide other child welfare services, as needed. Post-release services can occur until the minor attains 18 years of age. Post-release services can occur in combination with a home study or independently. Participation in Post Release Services is a voluntary choice by the sponsor and unaccompanied child.

Fingerprint Instructions for Sponsors

In order to sponsor a minor in the custody of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), you must undergo a background check that requires you to be fingerprinted. Background checks typically take between one to two weeks to complete.

You must be fingerprinted within 3 days to begin the family reunification process. Please note that any delays made in filing any required paperwork or not attending a scheduled fingerprinting will delay the release of the minor you are attempting to sponsor.

Steps for Fingerprinting

1. Read the Authorization for Release of Information carefully and complete the form.
2. Fax or email the Case Manager the completed form and a copy of your photo ID. If you are unable to fax or email the documents, please send it by express or priority mail as soon as you are able to do so.
3. After submitting the form, the Case Manager will either arrange a fingerprinting session for you or will give you the contact information of the designated digital fingerprinting site to arrange your own appointment. If you are unable to travel to the designated digital fingerprint site, you may discuss with your Case Manager the option to provide two sets of paper fingerprints cards.
4. Attend your fingerprinting session at the scheduled time at the designated digital fingerprint site.
5. Contact the Case Manager after you attend your fingerprinting session to let him or her know you have done so and wait for any other instructions.

Requesting Background Check Results

Sponsors and adult household members may review the results of their FBI fingerprint background checks by sending a request to the care provider organization where the minor you are sponsoring currently resides or by sending a request directly to the ORR, Division of Unaccompanied Children's Operations, contact information available at http://www.acf.hhs.gov/programs/orr/programs/unaccompanied_alien_children.htm.

Challenging a FBI Criminal Background Check

If a sponsor or an adult household member believes the FBI criminal background check results are incorrect, he or she may challenge the accuracy or completeness of the information. The sponsor or adult household member may contact the agency that contributed the information the sponsor believes is incorrect. Additional details about obtaining a change, correction, or update of an FBI identification record are set forth in the U.S. Code of Federal Regulations at 28 CFR § 16.34.

Discharge Paperwork

Unaccompanied children are provided with several important documents at the time of their release. It is important to review these documents carefully and to keep them safe. You will receive:

- Verification of Release Form (VRF)
- Immunization records and initial medical screening
- Initial dental exam and any significant dental records
- List of all medications the UC is taking, including dosage and reason plus original prescription
- Name and contact information of medical, mental health, and dental care providers so sponsor and UAC may request additional records if needed
- Educational assessments and records
- Sponsor Care Agreement
- Safety Plan

Your child will come home with a folder of documents. Keep these papers safe! You will need them for the child's school enrollment, court, and doctor's visits, and more.

Verification of Release Form (VRF)

This form is an official U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) form, issued by HHS's Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), and should be considered evidence that the sponsor has custody of the child, the child resides with the sponsor at the address reflected, and the age of the child. Although schools, school districts, and other units of government should not ask for this VRF form and sponsors are not required to submit it to a school or other unit of government, sponsors may choose to voluntarily present this form to a school or other unit of government. If presented, schools and other units of government should accept this form as one appropriate means for establishing proof of identity, residency, and/or age for purposes of enrolling a child in school. The VRF looks like this:

According to the Department of Education, all children in the United States are entitled to equal access to a public elementary and secondary education, regardless of their or their parent's level of immigration status, ethnicity, or immigration status. This includes recently arrived and unaccompanied children, who are in immigration proceedings while staying in local communities with a sponsor, family member, or other responsible adult sponsor while residing with a sponsor. These children have a right under Title I of the federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act to enroll in public elementary and secondary schools in their local communities and to benefit from educational services, to the full extent of the law.

Medical Records

At the time of release, the child will receive copies of his/her medical records, which are very important to the child's safety and access to services after release. Many families do not qualify for health insurance, and costs for medications and treatment can be expensive. If you do not have health insurance or cannot add the child to your insurance plan, look for low-cost community health care clinics in your community. For assistance finding low-cost health care options, call the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001.

Prescriptions

The child's medical records will include prescriptions for medicine and instructions for how the child should take the medicine, so this paperwork is very important.

If there are any recommendations to keep the child healthy, like taking certain medicines or going to certain appointments, as a sponsor you are required to make sure the child receives that treatment after they are reunified. Review the medical paperwork carefully to make sure you are completely aware of any medicine or treatment the child should be receiving.

Medical and Mental Health History

The discharge packet may include medical, dental, and mental health examinations, treatment, or tests that were done while the child was in care. When you take the child to the doctor, dentist, counselor, or psychiatrist for check-ups in your community, these records can be helpful to the child's practitioners to understand the child's needs.

Vaccination Records

Pay extra attention to the vaccination record. The vaccination record shows all of the immunizations the child received while in shelter care to help protect them against diseases like measles, hepatitis, and varicella. When you enroll the child in school, the school will request to see this vaccination record as part of the enrollment process. Common vaccinations children receive in ORR care include inoculations against the following dangerous diseases:

- Polio
- MMR
- Hepatitis A
- Hepatitis B
- Varicella
- Pneumococcal
- Meningococcal
- Diphtheria
- Tetanus
- Pertussis

Some diseases require a series of vaccinations to prevent, so the child will need to continue receiving vaccinations from a doctor in your community after their release to protect them from those diseases.

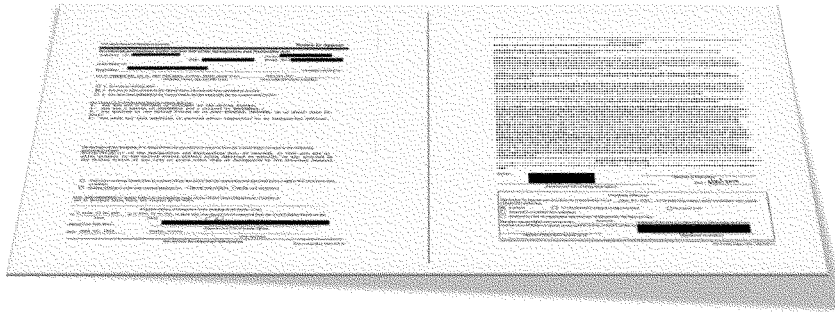

Your child may need to continue a series of vaccinations to keep them safe from certain diseases after they come home. You will need to help the child access medical care to receive those vaccines in your community.

Notice to Appear (NTA)

The child will also receive a document called the Notice to Appear, or NTA. This document demonstrates that the child is required to attend court as part of his/her immigration proceedings.

The NTA has the child's legally filed alien number, date of birth, and name. Even if the information on this form is incorrect, for example, if the child's name is spelled incorrectly, the information on this form is what the government officially has on file for the child. So, when you call to get updates on the child's court status, to ask questions about their case, or to work with an attorney, they will ask for the information as it is written on the NTA, even if the child's name is incorrectly hyphenated or spelled incorrectly. The NTA looks like this:

Safety Plan

The child will also be released with a document called a “safety plan.” This plan is very important for both you and the child. It provides lists of important numbers to call, actions to take in unsafe situations, and warning signs or risks to look out for. Many ORR care providers will also include directions and maps to important resources in your community, like instructions on how to reach the police station if you are in danger. Keep this document handy and make sure your child has immediate access to it. This is an example of what a safety plan may look like:

ADMINISTRATION FOR
 Office of Refugee Resettlement

Division of Unaccompanied Children Operations
Sponsor Care Agreement

You have applied to the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) to sponsor an unaccompanied alien child in the care and custody of the Federal Government pursuant to the Flores v. Reno Stipulated Settlement Agreement, No. 85-4544-RJK (Px) (C.D. Cal., Jan. 17, 1997), Section 462 of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (6 U.S.C. §279) and Section 235 of the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (8 U.S.C. §1232). If your sponsorship application is approved, you will receive an ORR Verification of Release form and will enter into a custodial arrangement with the Federal Government in which you agree to comply with the following provisions while the minor is in your care:

- Provide for the physical and mental well-being of the minor, including but not limited to, food, shelter, clothing, education, medical care and other services as needed.
- If you are not the minor's parent or legal guardian, make best efforts to establish legal guardianship with your local court within a reasonable time.
- Attend a legal orientation program provided under the Department of Justice/Executive Office of Immigration Review (EOIR)'s Legal Orientation Program for Custodians (Sponsors), if available where you reside.
- Depending on where the minor's immigration case is pending, notify the local Immigration Court or the Board of Immigration Appeals within five (5) days of any change of address or phone number of the minor, by using an Alien's Change of Address form (Form EOIR-33). In addition if necessary, file a Change of Venue motion on the minor's behalf. The Change of Venue motion must contain information specified by the Immigration Court. Please note that a Change of Venue motion may require the assistance of an attorney. For guidance on the "motion to change venue," see the Immigration Court Practice Manual at <https://www.justice.gov/eoir/office-chief-immigration-judge-0>. For immigration case information please contact EOIR's immigration case information system at 1-800-898-7180. Visit EOIR's website for additional information at <http://www.justice.gov/eoir/formslst.htm>.
- Notify the Department of Homeland Security (DHS)/U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services within ten (10) days of any change of address, by filing an Alien's Change of Address Card (AR-11) or electronically, at <http://1.usa.gov/AC5MP>.
- Ensure the minor's presence at all future proceedings before the DHS/Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and the DOJ/EOIR. For immigration case information, contact EOIR's case information system at 1-800-898-7180.

- Ensure the minor reports to ICE for removal from the United States if an immigration judge issues a removal order or voluntary departure order. The minor is assigned to a Deportation Officer for removal proceedings.
- Notify local law enforcement or your state or local Child Protective Services if the minor has been or is at risk of being subjected to abuse, abandonment, neglect, or maltreatment or if you learn that the minor has been threatened, has been sexually or physically abused or assaulted, or has disappeared. Notice should be given as soon as it becomes practicable or no later than 24 hours after the event or after becoming aware of the risk or threat.
- Notify the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children at 1-800-843-5678 if the minor disappears, has been kidnapped, or runs away. Notice should be given as soon as it becomes practicable or no later than 24 hours after learning of the minor's disappearance.
- Notify ICE if the minor is contacted in any way by an individual(s) believed to represent an alien smuggling syndicate, organized crime, or a human trafficking organization. Provide notification as soon as possible or no later than 24 hours after becoming aware of this information. You can contact ICE at 1-866-341-2423.
- In the case of an emergency (serious illness, destruction of home, etc.), you may temporarily transfer physical custody of the minor to another person who will comply with the terms of this Sponsor Care Agreement.
- If you are not the child's parent or legal guardian, in the event you are no longer able and willing to care for the minor and unable to temporarily transfer physical custody, and the minor meets the definition of an unaccompanied alien child, you should notify the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001.
- The release of the above-named minor from the Office of Refugee Resettlement to your care does not grant the minor any legal immigration status and the minor must present himself/herself for immigration court proceedings.

Key components of the Sponsor Care Agreement are discussed in greater detail throughout this handbook. For example:

- Providing for the physical and mental well-being of the minor, including but not limited to, food, shelter, clothing, education, medical care and other services as needed – page 20
- Establishing legal guardianship with your local court within a reasonable time – page 28
- Attending a legal orientation program – page 23

Post Release Case Management

For some children, ORR will approve for case management services to continue even after the child has been released to your care. These services are called Post Release Services. If your child has been assigned these services, your agreement to participate in these services can be a requirement for the child to be released. A case manager will visit your home several times to support you and your family, and will meet directly with you and with the child. The case manager will not provide direct monetary support, but they will connect the family with many resources in the community, and will help the family identify solutions if they encounter problems along the way. If you relocate, it is very important to tell your post release case manager, so that they can provide you with direction on filing paperwork, and so that they come to the right address when they come to visit the child.

Children are assigned post release case management services for many reasons, but always because the federal government has determined that these services would be beneficial to help keep the child supported and safe after reunification. Cooperation with post release services will not only help the child, but can be very helpful to the whole family.

Caution: Fraud & Financial Exploitation

It is important for sponsors and family members to know that there are criminals who target families of children involved in the reunification process. It is unknown how these criminals get information for the children's families, but it is highly suspected that they are associated with smuggling rings or "guides". These criminals commonly ask sponsors/family for money in order to have the children released to family, that say that there is a fee for the reunification process, or say that the money will be used to cover the cost of travel to get the child to the family. This is called financial exploitation because usually these individuals are acting on their own and the money requested is not being used for what they claim.

There are NO FEES associated with the processing or reunification of children in ORR care. No one should contact you and ask you for money, your bank account information, your credit card number, or ask you to send payment or money order to another person or account.

When the time comes to have the child released from a shelter or foster home, you will have to make flight arrangements for the child and possibly an escort if the child is younger than 14 years old. Travel costs should ONLY be paid directly to company, an airline, or care provider facility. No one should ask you to pay travel costs to a certain person or personal account.

Furthermore, if you are being requested to make payment for fees or expenses related to the processing, reunification, or travel of a child please contact ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001 for assistance. You should view the request with extreme caution and follow these best practices, as recommended by the Federal Bureau of investigations (FBI):

- Be skeptical of individuals representing themselves as officials and asking for payments or donations door-to-door, via phone, mail, e-mail, or social networking sites.
- Be skeptical of individuals requesting payment or contributions by courier or wire, or those who request your bank account or credit card number.
- Verify the legitimacy of the government agency or non-profit organization by utilizing various Internet-based resources which may confirm the correct phone number, e-mail, and/or the group's existence and its non-profit status rather than following a link to an e-mailed site.
- Call the official telephone number of the government agency seeking money to ensure the request for payment is legitimate.
- Do not respond to any unsolicited (spam) incoming e-mails. Do not click links contained within those messages.
- Be cautious of e-mails that claim to show pictures of intended recipients in attached files which may contain viruses. Only open attachments from known senders.
- Make contributions directly to known organizations rather than having others make the donation on your behalf to ensure contributions are received and used for intended purposes.
- Do not give your personal or financial information to anyone who seeks payment or solicits contributions. Providing such information may compromise your identity and make you vulnerable to identity theft.

WARNING

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM CRIMINALS TARGETING FAMILIES OF UNACCOMPANIED CHILDREN

There are criminals who target relatives of unaccompanied children entering the United States by demanding money from sponsors and/or family members, claiming the money will cover processing, reunification, and travel expenses needed to allow the children to be reunited with their families.

Fees for Processing or Reunification

There are no fees associated with the processing or reunification of an unaccompanied child. You do not need to pay money. No one should contact you and ask you for money, your bank account number, your credit card number, or ask you to send payment or a money order to another person or account.

Fees for Travel

You are responsible for the cost of your child's transportation and, if the care provider is escorting the child, for the care provider's transportation or airfare. If an airline escort is used, you are responsible for paying the airline's unaccompanied minor service fee. Travel costs should only be paid directly to a company, usually the airline or the care provider facility. No one should ask you to pay travel costs to an individual or to a personal account.

THESE ARE ILLEGAL ATTEMPTS TO STEAL YOUR MONEY. IF YOU ARE CONTACTED AND ASKED FOR FEES, OR ASKED TO PAY OR WIRE MONEY, PLEASE IMMEDIATELY CALL THE ORR NATIONAL CALL CENTER HELP LINE.

ORR National Call Center (800) 203-7001

Anyone who is requested to make payment for fees or expenses related to the processing, reunification, or travel of unaccompanied children should view such a request with extreme caution and follow these best practices, as recommended by the Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI):

- Be skeptical of individuals representing themselves as officials and asking for payments or donations door-to-door, via phone, mail, e-mail, or social networking sites.
- Be skeptical of individuals requesting payment or contributions by courier or wire, or those who request your bank account or credit card number.
- Verify the legitimacy of the government agency or non-profit organization by utilizing various Internet-based resources which may confirm the correct phone number, e-mail, and/or the group's existence and its non-profit status rather than following a link to an e-mailed site.
- Call the official telephone number of the government agency seeking money to ensure the request for payment is legitimate.
- Do not respond to any unsolicited (spam) incoming e-mails. Do not click links contained within those messages.
- Be cautious of e-mails that claim to show pictures of intended recipients in attached files which may contain viruses. Only open attachments from known senders.
- Make contributions directly to known organizations rather than having others make the donation on your behalf to ensure contributions are received and used for intended purposes.

Child Rights in Care vs. After Release

Just as a child's safety is protected while in ORR care, a child has rights when they are released to you. As the sponsor, you will be legally responsible for ensuring the child's rights are protected when they are released to your care. Some of the most important rights include:

Right to Education

Children are required to attend school up to a certain age (16, 17, or 18 years old, depending on the state you live in) and generally may attend regular public school until they complete high school or reach the eldest eligible age (19, 20, or 21 depending on the state you live in). You can find details on compulsory ages where children must be attending school in your state at this website: <http://www.ncsl.org/research/education/upper-compulsory-school-age.aspx>

You are required to enroll the child in school immediately after reunification. If the child is of an age where school attendance is required in your state and you do not enroll the child, this can be considered Child Neglect.

You must help the child to enroll in school immediately following family reunification. A good first step to enroll your child is to call or visit your local school to set up an appointment. They will tell you what documents they require for enrollment, and what the process looks like. For assistance enrolling, you can contact the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001.

Not only is education required for children in the United States, but school attendance can affect an unaccompanied child's case in court. Sponsors are legally responsible for making sure the child is successfully enrolled in school and that the child consistently goes to class. For teenagers and youth who are about to turn 18, they may have the option to enroll in a General Education Diploma (GED) program. This program can help youth receive credit for finishing high school. For teenagers and youth about to turn 18, this may meet their educational requirements.

To enroll in public school, you will likely need to show the child's age, where the child is living in the school district, and records of vaccinations/immunity. Schools typically accept any of a variety documents to show age, including:

- Religious document, like a baptism certificate
- Hospital paperwork
- Physician's certificate showing date of birth
- An adoption record
- An affidavit from a parent
- A birth certificate
- Previously verified school records

Examples of documents schools typically accept to show residency include:

- Copies of phone and water bills
- Affidavits
- Lease agreements

If the sponsor is unable to produce a document establishing the child's residence, the child still has a right under Federal law to enroll immediately in school.

Schools might ask you for additional information about the child's past educational history, nationality, language(s) spoken at home, and your household income. This additional information is usually collected to help determine what educational assistance and services the child may need. This information may also help the school place the child in appropriate grade and courses. Schools must let children enroll in school, even if you do not, or cannot give any of this additional information. Schools are required to identify children who may not be able to speak, read, write or understand English so that they can teach English as well as other subjects. Schools are also required to identify and evaluate children (ages 3 to 21) who may have mental or physical disabilities in order to provide regular or special education and services to meet their needs. Schools are prohibited from using this additional information to discriminate against you or the child. Schools are prohibited from discriminating against you or the child based on race, color, national origin, religion, gender, sexual orientation, disability, citizenship, or immigration status.

In most states, children can be enrolled in school past the age of 18. You can check to see the oldest age you can enroll a child in public school at this website:

<http://www.childtrends.org/?indicators=high-school-dropout-rates>

It can also be helpful to ask what social work or counseling staff they have at the school. Ask for your child to have a meeting with the school social worker or counselor. The transition to a new school can be very difficult for a child, so arranging supports early on can help make the child feel more comfortable.

Children have the right to access public school, even if they do not have status yet, but sometimes this gets confusing at enrollment. If you have any difficulty getting the child enrolled, you can call the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001 and a case manager will help you work with the school to get the child enrolled.

Information about enrolling your child in a GED program can be found here:

Truancy

When a child refuses to go to school and skips class, this is called "truancy." Because education is a legal requirement, both sponsors and children need to comply with the child's school attendance. If the child misses too many days at school, the child may have to go to truancy court, or the sponsor may have to pay fines.

If a child is refusing to go to school, there may be many reasons why. Unaccompanied children sometimes are bullied by other children at school, they may get frustrated with trying to study in English, or they may feel overwhelmed. If your child is refusing to go to school, try to figure out why, and talk to the school to help support the child to attend. Children have the right to go to school, and as a sponsor, you have the right to advocate for your child. If you or your child want to talk about challenges at school and think about ideas to increase school attendance, you can call the ORR National Call Center for support.

Right to Physical Well-Being

Child abuse and neglect laws differ between every state, but no matter where you are in the United States, as the child's sponsor, you are held legally responsible for protecting the child's physical and emotional well-being. Children are considered "children" until they turn 18.

Physical harm to a child is never permitted in the United States, even as a form of discipline. Adults may never hit, kick or otherwise harm the children in their care. All caregivers, including sponsors, must also take precautions to ensure other people do not harm the children in their care.

Provision of Basic Needs

The sponsor must provide the children in their care with adequate food, shelter, clothing, medical care, and supervision. Caregivers are never permitted to deny a child basic food and water as punishment, and they may never force the child to leave their home. The sponsor must also ensure the child has adequate clothing to keep them safe and healthy, including sweaters and coats for cold weather. Sponsors are never permitted to force a child to work for these basic needs.

Sponsors are required to ensure the children in their care receive medical care. This ranges from basic check-ups and regular vaccinations to medical attention for an injury or illness as needed. This also applies to psychiatric medications. If a child is prescribed necessary medications to keep him safe, sponsors are required to make sure the child gets the medicine he/she needs. Medical care can get expensive, and there are often supports in many locations that can help with medical costs. To identify low-cost medical services in your area, call the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001.

Children may not be forced to pay for their food, their room, or rent in your home. Children may never be forced to leave the home to make it on their own.

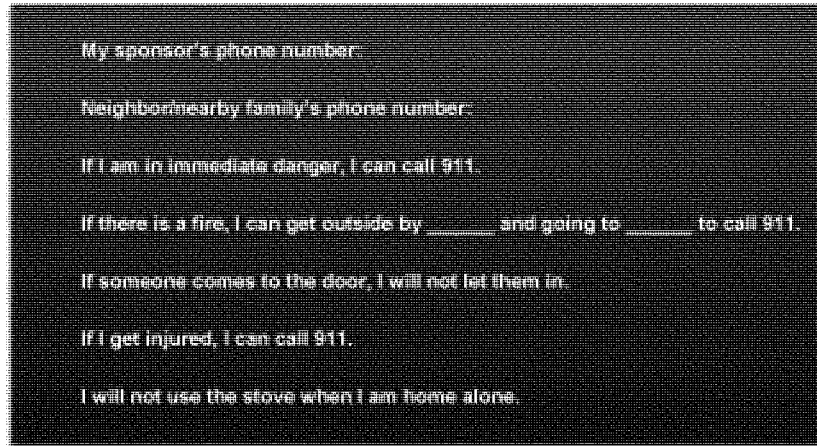

You may never threaten or harm the child in your care, including withholding food or water as a form of punishment.

Adequate Adult Supervision

Sponsors must also keep children safe by making sure they have adequate adult supervision. States have different rules about this, but overall, children may not be left at home unattended, and should not be left alone caring for other children. In the states that allow teenagers to be at home without an adult, they still require that the child is prepared to protect himself. So, if your state allows you to leave the child at home, the child needs to know important information, like how to escape if there is a fire, what to do if a stranger knocks on the door, or who to call in an emergency.

For example, you can put together a plan with your child in writing, and keep the plan on your refrigerator for easy access. The plan could include:

Part of supervision requirements include knowing where the child is when they are not at home. If the child runs away, this must be reported to police. Police will come to your home to interview you and get information to try to find the child to make sure he/she is safe. As a sponsor, failure to report a runaway is in some states a criminal act. For help reporting that a child has left your care, or if you are afraid that the child might run away, you can call the ORR National Call Center for support at 1-800-203-7001.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC) is a great resource for reporting your child missing, and NCMEC will keep this information in a centralized database to communicate with law enforcement nationally. To report your child missing to NCMEC, call 1-800-843-5678.

Right to Emotional Well-Being

Sponsors are also required to protect a child's emotional well-being. In the United States, adults may not threaten a child with harm. Sponsors also may not insult or emotionally reject children.

An example of this could include a sponsor telling a child he is unwanted or unwelcome in his home. These kinds of behaviors are considered emotional abuse, and there are state regulations that prohibit it.

Protecting Children from Themselves

Sponsors must provide a safe and supportive home, where the child is included in family activities. If a child is struggling with an emotional problem and might hurt himself, sponsors are also required to make sure the child gets help from a professional to keep him safe. This could include taking the child to the Emergency Room at your local hospital.

Specific self-harming behaviors to look out for include a child cutting, scraping, burning, or otherwise intentionally hurting himself. Children may try to hide this behavior, and may try to cover arms and legs or lock themselves in rooms while they are self-harming. This topic is further explored on page 27.

Protecting Children from Inappropriate Romantic Relationships

As a general rule, adults (over 18) may not engage in romantic or sexual relationships with children (under 18). Every state has specific laws about these relationships.

One very common and dangerous threat to a child's physical AND emotional well-being is an unsafe romantic relationship. In the United States, children cannot be in a romantic relationship with an adult. Each state has very specific laws preventing these relationships, but the general rules are that children (under 18) may not be in romantic relationships with adults (18 years old or more). Even if the child is not having sex with their adult partner, if there is any sort of sexual touching, sexual communication, or sexual photographs, this is a crime in the United States. It is still a crime even if the interactions occur on social media, like Facebook. The adult partner in the relationship may face very serious legal consequences for being part of any kind of sexual activity with a child, including fines, jail time, and a permanent, publicly visible criminal record that may make it difficult to secure employment.

Reporting Child Abuse and Neglect

The failure to protect a child's physical or emotional well-being is called child abuse and neglect. As a sponsor, you are not only required to follow the rules outlined above, but you are also required to protect the child from any other person who might cause physical or emotional harm to the child. If a sponsor knows that a child in his care is being harmed and does not report it to authorities, the sponsor's failure to report may also be considered neglect. To report abuse or neglect, you can call your local Child Protective Services number or your local police. These numbers are available at www.childhelp.org.

If you need help reporting abuse, identifying the best local phone numbers to call, or finding solutions, you can call the ORR National Call Center for support at 1-800-203-7001.

You may also call Childhelp to report child abuse and neglect at 1-800-422-4453.

To report human trafficking, call the National Human Trafficking Resource Center (NHTC) at 1-888-373-7888.

Right to Go to Court

Sponsors must take the search for an attorney for their child very seriously, and ensure that the child has every opportunity to meet with the attorney in preparation for court. Thousands of unaccompanied children every year are determined by the court to be legally allowed to stay in the United States, which allows children to grow up under U.S. protections, without the constant fear of being deported. You can get legal assistance, or help finding local, low-cost attorneys, by calling the Legal Orientation Program for Custodians (LOPC) hotline at 1-888-996-3848.

You are required to make arrangements to ensure an adult takes the child to court when the court date is scheduled. An attorney can help your child's case.

As a sponsor, one of the most important requirements of sponsorship is to make sure the child gets to court for their court date. Sponsors do not have to personally take the child to court, but they must make dependable arrangements to ensure the child attends his/her hearing. If a child does not attend, in many cases, courts will automatically issue a deportation order, so it is very, very important that the child attends. If the court issues the child a deportation order, sponsors are responsible for ensuring the child reports to ICE for removal from the United States.

As a sponsor you are required to keep the courts updated on the child's location, so that the child can attend court in the area where they reside. A child's relocation must be reported. To update the courts on a child's changed address, you will need to complete a Change of Address (COA) form and a Change of Venue (COV) form. The ORR National Call Center can help you complete these forms and determine where to mail them. To check on your child's court date, you can call the Immigration Hotline at 1-800-898-7180 to get regular updates.

Working and Human Trafficking

Unaccompanied children are not authorized to work while they wait for their court date. Since unaccompanied children are not legally able to work, if they choose to work, the jobs available to them may be low-paying or dangerous. There are very strict rules in the United States about any child working in certain low-wage or dangerous jobs. If a child works in conditions that the Department of Labor says are unsafe or exploitative, this may be considered human trafficking, even if the child appears to agree to work. This includes any kind of work that is sexual in nature,

The child may never be forced to work or be threatened in order to work. The child may not be forced to repay his or his family's debts. This could be considered human trafficking, which is a very serious crime in the United States.

like prostitution, stripping, escorting, or posing for photographs nude or in underwear. An adult who is part of trafficking a child can be prosecuted in federal court, with very severe consequences if found guilty.

More information about children, youth, and work regulations in the United States can be explored at <https://www.osha.gov/youngworkers/employers.html>.

No one is permitted to force an unaccompanied child to work in the United States, even if there is a debt. No sponsor is permitted to require a child to work to repay his or his family's debt or pay for room and board.

Forcing, scaring, threatening, or tricking a child to work is also human trafficking. This means physically forcing a child to work is never permitted, but that also it is a federal crime to convince a child to work by threatening to kick him out of the home, report him to immigration or police, take revenge on the child's family in home country, or other threats. Each of these actions could be considered human trafficking, which is a very serious crime in the United States.

Unaccompanied children may be vulnerable to trafficking. Sometimes children or their families may owe funds for travel. Paying back those funds may not always be easy, and the child or their families may feel threatened or coerced into working to pay back the money owed. For an underage child in the U.S. who cannot work legally, being forced to work, not attending school in order to work, and working for no pay (working for a place to sleep or food) could all be considered human trafficking. Unaccompanied children may have made the trip to the U.S. to support their families in home country, or to help their families in the U.S., and may feel they need to work to provide for those family members. The need to make monies quickly may make them susceptible to traffickers, who are very good at convincing them it is necessary.

Unaccompanied children may be exposed to sex trafficking due to an attempt to develop a sense of belonging, perhaps seeking affection from older parental figures, or due to emotional issues related to attachment. In the U.S. it is illegal for underage children and adults to have relationships, which may be different from what is accepted in their home country.

This cultural difference may make children think initially that it is okay, when it is not. Sponsors who encourage or allow trafficking events to occur while they are responsible for the care of the child may be engaging in illegal activity.

If a sponsor or child receives contact from any individual(s) believed to represent an alien smuggling syndicate, organized crime, or a human trafficking organization, sponsors should report this to ICE immediately. For assistance reporting, you can contact the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001.

Right to Equal Protection

Around the world, there are millions of people who identify as LGBTQI: Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Questioning, or Intersex. There are many unaccompanied children who identify this way, and they are protected in the United States in the same way every child is protected. This means the child's physical and emotional well-being must be protected in your care.

Talking about sexuality and gender identity can be very difficult for children and needs to be a safe conversation in your home. Take care not to share your child's sexuality or gender identity without his/her permission. That is his/her information to share. If you are uncomfortable or unsure about discussing gender identity with the child and supporting him/her, call the ORR National Call Center for local resources to help you best support the child.

A LGBTQI child has the same equally protected rights as child who is not. Public schools are legally required to protect all students from harassment. Under the U.S. Constitution, these schools must address any harassment against LGBTQI children the same way they would address harassment against any other student. Public schools cannot ignore harassment or bullying based on appearance or behavior that does not "match" a child's gender: boys who wear makeup, girls who dress "like a boy," or students who are transgender. School officials cannot tell a child that they have to change who they are or that they brought the harassment on to themselves by dressing or behaving "inappropriately." If your child is being harassed or bullied in school, you should report it immediately to a school official. They have a legal responsibility to respond.

Children who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, questioning, or intersex are provided equal protection as all other children in the United States.

Domestic Violence

You or someone in your home may already be experiencing a domestically violent relationship. This kind of relationship could be between spouses, siblings, or anyone who harms or threatens one another in the home. Domestic violence includes physical harm, emotional degradation, and the threat of harm. If you are experiencing domestic violence, there are a few things you may want to consider:

Domestic violence, even if the child is never physically harmed, can have an enormous impact on a child's development, their sense of safety, and their well-being. Children may try to stop violence in the home, putting themselves in harm's way. If you are considering sponsoring a child and there is already violence in your home, think carefully about the child's safety.

If someone in your home is harming you, there are safe places you can go. If you are in immediate danger, call 911. Police will come to help protect you, even if you don't have status.

Domestic violence does not tend to just go away. Abusers often need very comprehensive counseling support before their behaviors change permanently, if they ever do, and this can take a very long time.

Bringing a child into the home is increased responsibility and can be added stress for all members in the home. If the home already has violence, the reunification of a child into the home may make the violence worse.

You have options. If there is violence in your home, when you are ready to leave, there are safe places you can go. Call the National Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-799-7233 to talk through your options and plan for your safety. You can also visit their website at www.thehotline.org. If you are ever in immediate danger, you can call 911, and police will help you even if you do not have status.

Pursuing Legal Guardianship

Sponsors who are not the child's mother or father may want to consider pursuing legal guardianship of the child. Legal guardianship gives sponsors many of the same rights that a biological parent has to the child. For example, legal guardianship allows the sponsor to make important decisions on behalf of the child, such as agreeing to medical care or allowing marriage. Legal guardians can also claim children on their tax forms as a deduction. A family law attorney can help you pursue legal guardianship of the child in your care, and this attorney is often different from the attorney who may help the child with his/her immigration case. You can call the ORR National Call Center to help you locate family attorneys in your area.

Sponsors who are not the child's parent and who are struggling to care for a child may contact the ORR National Call Center for assistance, at 1-800-203-7001.

When a Child Comes Home

Every child and every family is different. Sponsorship can be a very rewarding experience, and many families report feeling fulfilled and relieved to be surrounded by their loved ones. There are some trends that many families experience, which may help to prepare you prior to your child's reunification.

“Honeymoon” Period

When an unaccompanied child first arrives at his sponsor's home, sometimes they might experience a “honeymoon” period. This refers to a period of time, which may be days, weeks, or months, when the child is new to the home and is on his/her best behavior. The child may be excited to be in a new place, not sure what the rules are, and eager to make a good impression. After a while, the child's behavior may begin to change as he/she gets more comfortable, and may begin to test the rules as any teenager does. It can be distressing for a sponsor to see the child's behavior change, but this is a normal experience for children after reunification.

Financial Challenges

Caring for another person can be very expensive, especially teenagers. Many families feel the financial impact when a child reunifies to their home, and it can be difficult to manage expenses, especially for the first few months. As soon as you can, plan out your budget, including expenditures and savings, and stick to it. Most communities have many resources that can relieve some of your expenses, like food banks, low-cost clothing stores, and free medical clinics. If you need help strategizing on your budget or finding resources in your community, you can contact the ORR National Call Center for support at 1-800-203-7001.

Difficulty Adapting

By the time a child gets to your home, they have been through a lot of changes very quickly. They may have experienced difficult things in their home country, they may have had a dangerous and frightening journey, they may have been detained suddenly by U.S. authorities, and then had to get used to living with many other children they have never met before in a shelter setting. Starting over in your home is one change in a series of many, life-changing events, and it can be a lot to take in for a child.

Once a child is in your home, the child has many new things to learn: house rules, new people, new customs, new culture, and a new language. One of the hardest things for a child to learn is how exactly they fit into a family. Especially for children reunifying with a parent, sibling rivalry can be extremely challenging for an unaccompanied child. Children may compete for their parents' love or attention, or they may feel unclear whether they are loved at all.

If someone in your home is harming you, there are safe places you can go. If you are in immediate danger, call 911. Police will come to help protect you, even if you don't have status.

Take Deliberate Action to Help the Child Feel like he “Belongs”

One of the most common experiences unaccompanied children have after reunification is the feeling that they do not “belong.” Children often report that they feel like a burden on their sponsors, that they are not really part of the family, or that their sponsors do not care about them. Often, these are the same children who eventually run away or run into behavioral problems. As a sponsor, plan to be very clear and verbal about wanting the child in your home and being glad that they are there. The child needs to hear it, repeatedly, consistently, even if their behavior is becoming a challenge. Never talk about sending a child back to their home country as a form of punishment, or indicate that you wish they had not made the journey. This is deeply hurtful for the child, and it may be very hard for you to regain the child’s trust after saying something like that.

Pay extra attention to making sure the child is included in family activities, and that they are treated with equal affection and attention as any other children in the home. It might not seem like a big deal to you, but they will be very, very aware of how they are treated compared to others. Set aside quality time to spend with the child, just you two, to keep building on your relationship and help the child to feel special. Quality time doesn’t have to be anything well-planned or expensive, it could be something as simple as grocery shopping or going for a walk around the neighborhood. When a child is struggling to adapt to a new environment, these moments with you can be very meaningful and important for the child.

Pay Attention to the Child’s Friends and Romantic Relationships

Also pay attention to who the child builds friendships and relationships with. Unaccompanied children will be very eager to find a place to belong, so they feel like they are wanted in this new, overwhelming environment. The child may get a group of friends or a romantic partner very quickly, to have stability and feel better about all of the changes. This can be a good thing, but it can also be dangerous.

Talk to Your Teen about Making Safe Sexual Decisions

For older children and teens, boyfriends and girlfriends are especially important for the sponsor to monitor. When they first arrive, children do not yet have large social networks (groups of friends or peers) to protect them, they may be unsure of themselves, and they may be eager to fit in – this makes them more susceptible to an abusive or unsafe relationship, or to having sex in a relationship before they are ready. It might also make them more likely to send text messages or online messages with inappropriate photographs of themselves. Talk to your child about making safe sexual decisions, like never taking nude photos, never texting sexual content, abstaining from sex, waiting to have sex until they are ready, and using protection when they do eventually have sex. It is also important to talk to the child about the importance of setting boundaries with their partners to avoid violence in relationships. Reassure them it is never acceptable for their partner to intentionally hurt their feelings, or to hurt them physically. If you open the door early on for the child to talk to you about relationships and sex, it will make the conversation much easier for the child when they want your guidance down the line.

Your Child's Use of the Internet and Social Media

Monitor your child's use of the internet and social media. Children may meet strangers this way, and this can be dangerous.

Many unaccompanied children find romantic partners online, through Facebook or other social media. The danger with these relationships is that it's hard to know who the child is really talking to, or whether you can trust their online boyfriend or girlfriend is who they say they are. It is not uncommon for children to fall into trafficking or abusive relationships online. Chatting online can lead to children being convinced by their online partner to run away or get into trouble, or could even put your family in danger.

One of the best ways to monitor your child's use of the internet is to join social media yourself. If you join too, it gives you the chance to "friend" your child and see their profile, who their friends are, and what kind of communication they may be having publicly. If you have a computer at home, make sure it is set up in a public area of the house, so that you can see how it is being used. Set up rules about how frequently you will check their accounts online, or how often you will check their cell phone.

Common social media outlets include Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, Whatsapp, Tumblr, Snapchat, Vine, Tinder and many others. Be aware of what social media tools your child is using, and be proactive about monitoring your child's use of these tools. Make sure they do not indicate their location on social media websites or "check in" to specific addresses, so that it is not easy for a dangerous person to find them.

Trends Based on a Sponsor's Relationship with the Child

Some of the trends we see are specific to the type of relationship the child has to their sponsor. Whether a child is reunifying with a mother, a brother, a cousin, or a family friend can impact what some of the challenges might look like once the child comes home.

For Sponsors who are Parents

For sponsors who are the mother or father of the unaccompanied child, you might experience that the child is really upset about you leaving to the U.S., even though you left to help the family. It's a confusing emotion – the child may understand logically why you left, but the heart doesn't always think logically. It might also be hard for you – leaving wasn't easy, and it's hard as a parent to see your child push you away. As the adult, you need to do everything you can to communicate to the child that they are loved. You need to make sure any fears you have of rejection don't get in the way of consistent, loving attention, even if you keep getting pushed

For parents, you and your child will need to learn how to be together again as a family. The love is there, it just takes time and communication to get comfortable.

away. The more consistently loving you can be, the easier it will be for the child to trust that you still love him. This is especially relevant if you have had other children since you came to the United States, or if you have spent more time in recent years with other children in the home. Your child will have a lot of adapting to do, and it might hurt him to see the other children in the home already comfortable with you. He/she might feel jealous of them, or worry that you love them less, and the other kids might feel territorial or jealous too. Be very sensitive to this fear, and do everything you can to show that you love your child just as much as any other kids in the home. Make sure you talk to your family to prepare them before he comes to your home, and make clear that you expect all household members to warmly invite the child into the family.

It also might be hard because you have a certain memory of what the child was like back in home country, and the child has a memory of you too. People change over time, and their personalities get shaped by their experiences. You'll see behaviors you don't recognize in your child, and your child might feel overwhelmed when the dream he has had about what the U.S. will be like isn't very accurate. Be supportive and consistent, and remember that the child is a product of his past and didn't become a "bad" kid. You can help change problem behaviors by giving him the new experiences he needs to change over time. The ORR National Call Center is available to support you with parenting challenges and to link you with local resources if you run into problems.

For Sponsors who are Family Members

For family members who are not the mother or father of the child, it can be difficult to care for a family member's child, because the way their mom or dad parents might be different from the way that you do. If it's safe, it can be helpful to facilitate communication between the child and his parents. Reach out to the child's parents for their advice on how to handle certain behaviors, what they see as working best with the child, and their thoughts on how you can be most supportive for him. The bottom line is that while the child is in the U.S., he/she is under your care, so you ultimately need to make the parenting decisions for the child. Relatives often see just the favorable, well-behaved side of children, and might not see the deep-down behaviors that parents see. You will see a wide range of behaviors, including negative behaviors, once the child comes home and gets comfortable, and you'll need to be consistent, kind, and responsible with the child no matter what new or challenging traits they demonstrate. The ORR National Call Center is available to support you with parenting challenges and to link you with local resources if you run into problems.

For family members and family friends, it can be hard to learn how to parent a new child. Remember, as a sponsor, you have agreed to care for this child as a parent would.

For Sponsors who are Family Friends

As a family friend, parenting another person's child can be very difficult. It can be hard to take ownership over such a responsibility. This is what you have agreed to, which means you are far more than just a place for the child to sleep and eat. If it's safe, involve the child's family where you can to help you strategize on parenting, but no matter what, don't take a back seat on parenting the child. He/she is reunifying with you as a child with a caregiver, not as a friend or a roommate. Ultimately, if things go wrong, you are held as accountable for the child as a parent would, because you are his primary caregiver. Your support and commitment to strong parenting will have a drastic effect on the child's success here in the U.S., so taking ownership of the parenting role right away will only help you. The ORR National Call Center is available to support you with parenting challenges and to link you with local resources if you run into problems.

Trauma and Behaviors

Many unaccompanied children have experienced very difficult, sad, or scary things while they were in home country, or on the journey to the United States. These kinds of experiences are described as “traumatic,” when the experience overwhelmed the child’s ability to cope. This does not mean the child has done anything wrong, or that there is anything weak about the child, but that their body is having long-term physical responses to the bad experiences they had before.

Even if your child has told you, it’s possible that he has experienced very difficult things before he arrived into your care. Previous traumatic experiences can have a big, long-term impact on a child’s behavior, and counseling services can help.

hardship in a child’s behavior. eye out for these for you to seek Common traumatic experiences that unaccompanied children report include gang violence, sexual abuse, domestic violence, physical abuse, being separated for a long time from parents, and witnessing the death or suffering of people they love.

These kinds of experiences are very hard to talk about, especially for children. Many children have not yet told their sponsors about some of the things that have happened to them. This can be a challenge as a sponsor, because past can have big, every day effects on When the child comes home, keep any behaviors, as they are important signals professional help to support the child.

Self-Harming

Self-harming means a child is purposefully hurting himself, often with repeated injuries that are small and easy to hide. Behaviors may include cutting, burning, head banging, wound picking, hair pulling, severe scratching, deep biting, and bruising. Children may use razor blades, scissors, paper clips, staples, broken glass, erasers, cigarettes, lighters, matches, or other objects to hurt themselves. When children self-harm, they are often doing it as a way to cope with difficult experiences. Cutting is an expression of something much bigger going on inside, and stressful life changes, like reunification, can make the behavior worse.

Self-harming is not uncommon, and it is a difficult habit to break. It is harmful and can lead to much bigger problems down the road, and the eventual risk for serious injury or possible suicide is higher than other children who do not self-harm.

Do not fly off the handle if the child discloses to you that he is hurting himself, or if you find out in another way. Use your judgment – if the injuries are superficial, treat them immediately, and call your supports and your mental health referrals. If the injuries are significant and they might need professional medical treatment, go to the emergency room right away or call 911 for help.

The reasons behind self-harming are very complex and differ for everybody. As a sponsor, you need to be supportive, open, and empathic if the child opens up to you about it, and you need to arrange professional help immediately. The issue is so complex that it needs to be addressed by professionals for the safety of the child.

Thinking about Suicide

The child in your care may tell you that he/she is thinking about dying, or even killing himself. That can be a scary message to hear. If you think the child in your care is about to hurt himself, call 911. Protective authorities will come to your home to help the child regardless of your or your child's immigration status – they respond to 911 calls only to keep people safe. You can also take the child to the closest Emergency Room at your local hospital. Every Emergency Room has staff available to assess people in crisis, and to assess whether your child is an immediate risk to himself.

If a child brings up suicidal thoughts to you, consider the following responses, suggested by the Suicide Prevention Lifeline (www.suicidepreventionlifeline.org):

- Be direct. Talk openly and matter-of-factly about suicide.
- Be willing to listen. Allow expressions of feelings. Accept the feelings.
- Be non-judgmental. Don't debate whether suicide is right or wrong, or whether feelings are good or bad. Don't lecture on the value of life.
- Get involved. Become available. Show interest and support.
- Don't dare him or her to do it.
- Don't act shocked. This will put distance between you.
- Don't be sworn to secrecy. Seek support.
- Offer hope that alternatives are available but do not offer glib reassurance.
- Take action. Remove dangerous objects from your home, like guns or stockpiled pills.
- Get help from persons or agencies specializing in crisis intervention and suicide prevention.

Bedtime Troubles

Children who have a history of traumatic experiences often have nightmares, reliving the terrible things that happened to them. Some children refuse to go to bed and fight bedtime, some struggle to sleep because they are too afraid, and others may wet the bed.

These kinds of problems affect a child's entire day, not just the night. They may struggle to think clearly, have poor school performance, or may be grumpy during the day, since they are never really getting a good night's sleep. It will be hard to help the child adjust to your home when the child's basic need – sleep – is not being met. If you see a child having difficulty with bedtime, professional support can be an enormous help to get rid of nightmares, help the child feel secure enough to sleep, and stop the bed-wetting. Once these stressful and exhausting behaviors go away, the child is likely to do better in school and adapt better to the home.

Nightmares and sleeping problems can be an important sign that your child is struggling and needs help.

Isolation

We often hear about unaccompanied children getting to their sponsor's home, but then wanting to stay alone in their bedroom or refusing to socialize with the family. There may be a lot of reasons for why the child acts this way. A new environment, especially for a traumatized child, can be a very overwhelming experience for a child, even if they already know everyone who lives in the house. Some children may want to stay alone because they feel sad about something that has happened, others may be very frightened to leave their room or the house. Still others may feel stuck, like they are not yet a part of your family. If you know the reason why the child is isolating himself, this can help you better understand ways to help him feel better. Seeking professional help for the child can help both you and the child better understand what is going on, and can help you come up with really good ideas to support the child and your family.

Eating or Not Eating

Some children, in response to changes, have disruptions in their eating habits. This could mean that they over-eat (feeling hungry and unsatisfied all the time) or under-eat (not want the meals or snacks offered). Typically this will get better within a few days. You can reach out to the ORR National Call Center for additional information if this does not get better. The call center can assist with tips and tricks to encourage healthy eating. You can also have them see your local doctor just to determine they are healthy.

Emotional Outbursts

A child's body experiences big changes after something traumatic happens. In response to that traumatic experience, the body, outside of the child's control, can change the way the muscles move, the heart beats, and the lungs breathe, and this can last for many years or more. The body can react very strongly to something that seems to you like it is very little, or not a big deal.

If a child in your care seems to have really strong emotional outbursts, it is possible they have had a really difficult past, and their bodies are reacting. The outbursts might look like extreme anger that cannot calm down, or extreme sadness that seems impossible to make better. It can be hard as a sponsor to see your child acting this way, but it is very important that you do not let yourself overreact, too. If a child is having big emotional outbursts, remember that it is the child's body acting that way, and that no one likes to feel that upset all the time. The good news is that these kinds of outbursts can be helped by a professional, who is trained to help the child regain control of their body. If you need help identifying a professional in your community to help the child control these outbursts, you can call the ORR National Call Center for support at 1-800-203-7001.

Big, frequent emotional outbursts may be the child's body's response to trauma and stress. It can be helped.

Defiance

Sometimes we hear about unaccompanied children refusing to follow the sponsor's rules or listen to what the sponsor has to say. Like emotional outbursts, there are a lot of reasons why a child might act this way. Sometimes, children have had to "act tough" for a long time in their home country to prevent others from harming them. That kind of behavior is hard to change overnight, even if the child is safe in your home.

A child might also break your rules because they know they can make you mad. Children who have experienced a lot of chaos at home, like lots of arguing or fighting between parents or other kids, sometimes try to re-create that chaos wherever they go, because that is what is predictable to them. They may push you, because they can count on you getting mad, and that certainty feels good to them, not the anger itself.

You can probably guess that no matter the reason behind defiance, it can get kids in a lot of trouble. When you remain calm and consistent it can help, but sometimes that's not enough. If you see this happening, it may be helpful to bring in a professional to help the child feel safe enough to lose the tough-guy act, or to learn how to feel normal even when there isn't chaos.

Sexualized Behaviors

Some sexual behaviors in children may be normal for their developmental stage. It becomes a problem when these behaviors impact their everyday lives, hurt the quality of their social relationships, or impact other people. When this happens, usually it means that the child again has had a very difficult past, and this is their body's reaction to it.

If a child in your home is engaging in any level of sexual behavior with others in your home, this can be a big problem. It can be scary for sponsors to see this behavior in the children they care for. It is important to remember that sexualized behavior in children is often a response to what the child has experienced in the past, and does not mean that the child is "bad" or cannot be helped. If you see problematic sexualized behaviors in the child in your care, make sure you have a plan in place to keep each person in the home safe and supervised, and reach out for support for the child to help them overcome the past experiences that are causing them to behave this way. You can reach out to the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001 to identify local resources to help you support the child.

Sexual Abuse or Sexual Harassment

Some UC may be victims of sexual abuse or harassment. Call the UC Sexual Abuse Hotline at 1-855-232-5393 for assistance with or if you have knowledge of a UC in this situation. If you are an unaccompanied child, a family member, sponsor, legal service provider, child advocate or any other individual with knowledge or suspicion of sexual abuse or sexual harassment occurring at a care provider operating on behalf of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), the Administration for Children and Families, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

The Hotline is connected to live representatives who are bilingual in English and Spanish and experienced in interviewing minors. Translators will be provided for all other languages. The hours of operation are 8 a.m.—11:45p.m. EST, seven days a week. Individuals may report anonymously if desired.

Substance Abuse

Sometimes we hear about unaccompanied children using drugs or alcohol. There are many reasons for why a child might be using. Some children might use because it helps them cope with something bad that happened to them in the past. Some children use because they are in a brand new place, are desperate to be accepted and feel like they belong, and they feel more socially accepted when they use substances. Some children may have had to use for various reasons in home country, and have now developed an addiction that is hard to break. Whatever the reason, substance use can be dangerous for children, can cause long term damage to their bodies, or could even result in death. In almost all states in the U.S., the legal drinking age is 21, so if a child gets caught with alcohol, both the child and you can get in a lot of trouble. You can get in even more trouble if you purchase alcohol or drugs for the child to use. Most drugs in most states are also illegal.

Although there are legal and health problems related to substance use, if your child is using, it is your job as a sponsor to make sure the child has access to help. Be careful not to accuse or blame the child when talking with him about drugs or alcohol. Instead, talk to the child about what your worries are, and try to get an understanding for what specific substances the child is using, when, and with whom. If the child is addicted to a substance, you will need to look for help to support him to stop using. If the use is related to a certain group of friends, rethink your supervision plan with the child, and strategize with the child about ways he can avoid using. A drug and alcohol counselor can help you think of ways to have this discussion, things you can do to protect the child, and places you can take the child to help him stop using. To find a drug and alcohol counselor in your area, contact the ORR National Call Center at 1-800-203-7001.

Bullying

Many unaccompanied children report getting bullied by other children, especially when they first join school. Children tend to pick on children who seem different, and unaccompanied children may dress differently, speak a different language, look different, or have different customs. Bullying can take many forms, from actual physical fighting or harming someone else, to intentionally making someone feel excluded, bad, or ashamed. Sometimes bullying is face to face in or after school, but it could also be by phone, text message, or online. Be careful not to underestimate how upsetting bullying can be for a child. Bullying can cause extreme distress and interfere with a child's daily living, in and out of school. Because it is so harmful for kids, there are laws about bullying and most schools have policies about how they will address it.

If your child is getting bullied, it is very common and encouraged for sponsors to contact the school or even go to the school in person to talk to the principal, teachers, or social workers. They will be required to take steps to protect the child. It might also be helpful for the child to join other positive activities outside of school, including sports, mentoring programs, or counseling. If you need help communicating with the school, advocating for the child, or thinking about ways to help keep the child safe, call the ORR National Call Center for support at 1-800-203-7001.

For more information about bullying, visit www.stopbullying.gov or call 1-800-273-TALK (8255).

Parenting

ORR works with many children and families, before and after reunification. Along the way, we have heard the following parenting tips, which can help make the child's transition easier once he gets home.

Rules and Consistency

Set rules and boundaries from the very beginning, and be very clear about what the expectations are in your house. It can be helpful to set the rules with the child, so that you are setting and agreeing to the expectations together. This sends the message to the child that you respect him, and it gives him the opportunity to discuss with you the reasoning behind the rules. The child is also more likely to follow the rules if he helped come up with them. Stick to your rules, and be as predictable as you can. Kids, especially unaccompanied children, often feel calmer and more under control when they know what behavior you expect from them.

Unaccompanied children have often had a lot of surprises and frightening changes over the last few years. They may get very upset, scared, or feel like they don't belong when routine changes, or when something catches them off guard. Do your best to set a daily routine that you stick to, so that the child can get comfortable with a daily schedule. For example, you might schedule dinner to be every night at 6:00, you might go grocery shopping every Sunday, or the kids might all floss, brush their teeth, and shower every night before bed. These kinds of routines can be very comforting to a child, and can create a sense of calm and belonging in world that is otherwise all brand new and full of surprises.

Encourage the behaviors you want to see

Catch the child doing something right. When you see the child behaving well, provide them specific praise for the action they are doing, in the moment. This can help encourage the child to keep repeating those behaviors, and sets the stage for you to give feedback if the child is breaking the rules. The child is much more likely to listen to the negative feedback if they trust that you also notice all the good things they do. Respect the child's ideas and thoughts. Remember, "I don't agree with you," is very different from "You're wrong."

When your child breaks the rules

Expect that the child will not always follow your rules, and will probably break them pretty often. Think about what you will do in response to problem behaviors.

One technique is to focus on responding to the child, not reacting. This means taking time to think through what is really happening before you address a behavior or problem. It also means making sure your response fits the situation, and isn't too casual or too overblown. Always ask yourself, "What message do I need to send to the child?" "Are my emotions getting in the way of sending the message I want to send?" and "Do I really understand the reasons behind the child's behavior?" Take the time you need to gather your thoughts, and to respond to the child in the way you really want to. Wasting an opportunity for kind, thoughtful feedback by yelling or saying something you don't mean can set you back a few steps in parenting, and make it harder to enforce rules with the child in the future.

Another technique is to carefully think about whether a child's behavior is actually harming anyone. If the answer is "no," you may want to think about how you respond, and give the child some leeway where it is safe. Do your best to set boundaries on the things that are most important, so that you are picking the battles that are the most meaningful.

Have a plan for appropriate discipline with the child. In the United States, caregivers are never permitted to physically harm the child as a form of punishment, so hurting the child cannot be an option. Think about what kind of limits or restrictions you can set without harming the child, so that when the child misbehaves, you are prepared.

Sometimes, all of the good parenting in the world just doesn't seem to be enough. Recognize when a problem is bigger than you can handle. There is nothing shameful in being smart enough to reach out for help when the child needs it. That's good parenting.

Call the UC Sexual Abuse Hotline at 1-855-232-5393 if you are an unaccompanied child, a family member, sponsor, legal service provider, child advocate or any other individual with knowledge or suspicion of sexual abuse or sexual harassment occurring at a care provider operating on behalf of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), the Administration for Children and Families, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

Through its network of care providers, ORR cares for unaccompanied children (UC) who enter the United States without a parent or legal guardian and without lawful immigration status following their apprehension by the Department of Homeland Security and referral to ORR.

ORR and its care providers serving unaccompanied children have a zero tolerance policy for sexual abuse and sexual harassment. Any person with knowledge or suspicion of sexual abuse or sexual harassment occurring at a care provider facility should call the UC Sexual Abuse Hotline at 1-855-232-5393.

The UC Sexual Abuse Hotline reports, as appropriate, any allegations received directly from any child or third party to State Child Protective Services (CPS), local law enforcement, and HHS. HHS forwards each Hotline report to the appropriate care provider, who ensures that all children and youth are safe and provided with appropriate services and that all required reports have been submitted.

The Hotline is connected to live representatives who are bilingual in English and Spanish and experienced in interviewing minors. Translators will be provided for all other languages. The hours of operation are 8 a.m.—11:45 p.m. EST, seven days a week. Individuals may report anonymously if desired.

25 WAYS TO MAKE KIDS SAFER

AT HOME

- Teach children their full name, address, and home telephone number. Make sure they know your full name.
- Make sure children know how to reach you at work or on your cell phone.
- Teach children how and when to use 911, and make sure they have a trusted adult to call if they're scared or have an emergency.

- Instruct children to keep the doors locked and not to open doors to talk to anyone when they are home alone.
- Choose babysitters with care. Once you have chosen the caregiver, drop in unexpectedly to see how your children are doing. Ask children about their experience and listen carefully to their responses.

GOING TO AND FROM SCHOOL

- Walk or drive the route to and from school with children, pointing out landmarks and safe places to go if they're being followed or need help.
- Remind children to take a friend whenever they walk or bike to school and to stay with a group at the bus stop.

- Caution children never to accept a ride from anyone unless you have told them it is okay to do so in each instance.

OUT AND ABOUT

- Take children on a walking tour of the neighborhood, and tell them whose homes they may visit without you.
- Teach children to ask permission before leaving home.
- Remind children not to walk or play alone outside.
- Remind children it's okay to say no to anything that makes them feel scared, uncomfortable, or confused. Teach children to tell you if anything or anyone makes them feel this way.
- Teach children to never approach a vehicle, occupied or not, unless they are accompanied by a parent, guardian, or other trusted adult.
- Practice "what-if" situations and ask children how they would respond. "What if you fell off your bike and you needed help? Who would you ask?"

- Teach children to check in with you if there is a change of plans.
- During family outings, establish a central, easy-to-locate spot to meet should you get separated.
- Teach children how to locate help in public places. Identify people who they can ask for help, such as uniformed law enforcement, security guards, and store clerks with nametags.
- Help children learn to recognize and avoid potential risks, so that they can deal with them if they happen.
- Teach children that if anyone tries to grab them, they should make a scene and make every effort to get away by kicking, screaming, and resisting.

ON THE NET

- Learn about the Internet. Visit www.NetSmartz.org for more information about Internet safety.
- Place the family computer in a common area, rather than a child's bedroom. Monitor their time spent online and the websites they've visited, and establish rules for Internet use.
- Know what other access children have to the Internet at school, libraries, or friends' homes.
- Use privacy settings on social networking sites to limit contact with unknown users, and make sure screennames don't reveal too much about children.

- Encourage children to tell you if anything they encounter online makes them feel sad, scared, or confused.
- Caution children not to post revealing information or inappropriate photos of themselves or their friends online.

Prevent Gang Involvement

Introduction

Parents play an important role in keeping young people out of gangs. There are many things parents can do to help their children stay away from gangs, including monitoring their activities, fostering close relationships with them, and using positive and consistent discipline. However, parents often lack factual information about gangs. This guide is designed to provide parents with answers to common questions about gangs to enable them to recognize and prevent gang involvement.

Why do youth join gangs?

There are a lot of reasons why youth get involved in gangs. Sometimes youth get "pulled" into a gang because they think they might earn a lot of money and gain status, or they may think it is a good way to show family, neighborhood, or cultural pride. Other times youth get "pushed" into a gang because they are afraid for their safety and think a gang will provide protection from neighborhood crime and violence, or they have been pressured by the gang to join.

What are the consequences of gang involvement?

Even though some youth believe that gang involvement might provide safety, protection, excitement, and opportunities to earn money, the truth is that gang involvement is very dangerous and limits opportunities for the future. Research has shown that youth who are gang-involved are more likely to commit crimes, which increases their chances of being arrested and incarcerated, and to be victims of violence themselves. Young girls are especially vulnerable to sexual victimization. Youth who get caught up in gangs are also less likely to graduate high school, less likely to find stable jobs, and more likely to have alcohol and drug problems and even health problems later in life.

How do I know if my child is involved in a gang?

The most common age that youth join a gang is around 15, but the early adolescent years (12–14 years of age) are a crucial time when youth are exposed to gangs and may consider joining a gang. While it is more common for boys to get involved in gangs, girls also face similar pushes and pulls and can also become involved in gangs. Gang involvement can be fluid, as some youth move in and out of gang-involved friendship groups. Thus, parents should pay attention to even small changes in behavior.

Common Gang Identifiers for Parents

Colors

While some gangs have reduced their use of specific colors to avoid identification by law enforcement, many gangs still use one or more colors as a symbol to represent themselves. These colors may be worn on shirts; bandanas; multicolored or single-colored beads; and belts, hats, shoes, shoelaces, hair bands, and jewelry. These colors may also appear in other possessions such as school supplies and room decorations.

Symbols and Numbers

Symbols and numbers have special significance within the gang culture. Common symbols of some of the large gangs in the United States include stars (five- and six-pointed), crowns, pitchforks (pointing up or down), three dots in a triangle, and numbers. These characters do not have the same meaning across the country, and symbolism varies regionally. Contact your local school resource officer or other law enforcement representative to get specific information on the meanings of unidentifiable symbols or numbers you may see in your area.

Clothing and Apparel

Gang-involved youth may dress a specific way to identify with a particular gang, set, clique, or crew. This might include clothing or bandanas worn only in certain colors; pants worn well below the waist; gang-themed T-shirts with pictures of gangs, prison scenes, graffiti, or slogans; two- or three-toned bead necklaces; or colored fabric belts, occasionally with metal buckles that bear the initial(s) of the gang. However, gang clothing trends change and are often different from one place to another, so clothing alone may not be enough to indicate a youth's affiliation with a particular gang.

Grffiti

Gangs use graffiti to mark their territory, brag about their reputation, mourn fallen friends, and threaten or challenge rival gangs. For this reason, graffiti can be very dangerous and should be removed as soon as possible. Youth who are engaging in graffiti may have items such as spray paint, spray-paint plastic tips, wide-tipped markers, or sketchbooks with graffiti works in progress. They may also have paint on their clothing, backpacks, or other items.

Social Media

The Internet has provided a new medium for gang communication and promotion. Social media Web sites, such as Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, YouTube, and others allow gang-involved individuals to represent their gang affiliation, taunt others, post threats, and organize and promote their gangs' activities. Social media escalates the potential for violence, since it reaches such a large audience.

Gang-influenced Music and Movies

Gangsta/gangster rap is a style of rap music characterized by violent, tough-talking lyrics that glorify street-gang culture. Popular movies also focus on street gangs and their activities. Youth may show their interest in gangs through fascination with music and movies that portray street-gang culture. However, interest in these types of entertainment alone may not be enough to indicate involvement in a gang.

Sports Items

Letters, colors, or symbols associated with professional sports teams may have specific gang meanings in local street gang culture. Sports apparel may be purchased in nontraditional colors to correspond with a gang's colors or may be altered with graffiti or extra symbols or writing.

Tattoos

Gang-related tattoos are used to show affiliation, rank, crimes committed, racial and ethnic alliances, and loyalty to a gang. These tattoos often include the name, initials, or symbols of a specific gang and may be found on the hands, neck, face, chest, back, or arms.

Hand Signs

Some gangs use specific hand gestures and handshakes to communicate their affiliation with the gang, to issue threats or challenges to rival gangs, or to communicate in code when authority figures are present. These gestures can be known as "throwing up" or "stacking."

Other changes to look for:

- Withdrawing from family activities and planned events
- Changed academic performance or declining school attendance
- Defiant or confrontational behavior, such as talking back, verbal abuse, name-calling, and disrespect for parental authority
- Staying out late without reason
- Unusual desire for secrecy
- Angry outbursts, excessive aggression
- Excessive worry about safety; constantly surveying surroundings for danger
- Sudden negative attitudes about law enforcement or adults in positions of authority (school officials or teachers)
- Change in attitude about school, church, or other normal activities or change in behavior when attending these activities
- Drastic changes in personal style
- Withdrawal from longtime friends and forming bonds with an entirely new group of friends
- Suspected use of drugs, such as alcohol, inhalants, and narcotics
- Possession of firearms, ammunition, or other weapons
- Nonaccidental physical injuries (such as evidence of being beaten or injuries to hands and knuckles from fighting)
- Unexplained cash or goods, such as clothing, video games, or jewelry

How Can I Help My Child?

Talk to your child about the negative consequences of gang membership and ways to avoid them.

Be clear that you disapprove of gangs and do not want to see your child hurt or arrested. Be firm in your expectations that your child should NOT:

- Associate with any gang-related individuals.
- Hang out where gang members congregate.
- Attend any party or social event sponsored by gangs.
- Use any kind of hand or finger signs that may be meaningful to gangs, especially in pictures (even as a joke).
- Wear clothing that may have meaning to gangs in your area.

Explain to your child that these clothing items can put her or him in danger and that you will not purchase them or allow them to be worn.

Try to know your child's friends and the friends' parents. Be aware of their attitudes toward drugs, alcohol, and gangs. When children start to feel pressure to use drugs or join gangs, it usually comes from their friends.

Familiarize yourself with the Internet, popular sites, games, and your child's online activity.

Communicate with your child about the potential negative consequences of online activity, including what he or she may post online. Spend time online with your child. Ask your child to show you his or her favorite online activities, sites, and online contacts. Finally, keep the computer in a common area and utilize the computer's and Web sites' parental controls to limit the child's access to Web sites and social media.

Talk to your child about ways to deal with pressure from friends.

Help your child practice simple ways to respond to peer pressure. For example, if your child is challenged by a peer who says, "If you were my friend, you would," your child can respond, "If you were my friend, you wouldn't ask." Then, he or she should walk away.

Limit interaction with gang-involved individuals.

One of the strongest risk factors for joining a gang is being in the same house as someone who is involved in gangs. If your child has older siblings or other relatives in your home who are associated with gangs, be very mindful of the influence they have on your child, and intervene immediately if your child starts to copy their dress, attitudes, and/or behaviors.

Set clear limits with your child.

Children and teenagers need to clearly know what is expected of them and the consequences for acting otherwise. When your child misbehaves, be sure to use fair and consistent discipline, while demonstrating unconditional love and support for your child.

Plan family time.

Make time for your family to play and meals together, take trips (even to local parks or activities), have family traditions, and have family meetings to talk about plans, feelings, and complaints.

Subject: [REDACTED] Follow Up- UAC and Trafficking

[REDACTED],
It was great to meet you on Wednesday. We are very appreciative for Senator Portman's leadership on this important issue. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] we wanted to share the trafficking case example below.

Case Example – Trafficking by Sponsor in FL

The limited use of home studies and post-release services has resulted in children being released to situations of abuse, abandonment, neglect, and trafficking. These are youth like Juan,* who was released from ORR care without services to his half-uncle in Florida. Shortly after his reunification, Juan's uncle withdrew him from school and sent him to work in the fields with his two cousins (who had not been in the care of ORR). This forced labor continued until Juan's cousin was injured and brought, with Juan, to the Emergency Room, where the injury raised abuse and trafficking concerns. CPS investigated the situation and removed the children from the home, placing the children in state custody. (*Child's name changed to protect identity.)

Have a nice weekend.

Sincerely,
[REDACTED]

Agenda

USCIS Asylum Division Quarterly Stakeholder Meeting

Friday, Aug. 11, 2017
Tomich Center
111 Massachusetts Ave. NW
Washington, D.C. 20001
2 – 4 p.m. (Eastern)

I. Welcome and Introductions

II. Asylum Division Updates

- a. The current RAIO-CT and ADOTP classes have enrolled 84 and 47 students, respectively.
- b. Regularly Provided Statistics (posted on USCIS.Gov)
 - Affirmative Asylum Statistics (April 2017 – June 2017)
 - NACARA Statistics (June 1999 – June 2017)
 - Credible and Reasonable Fear Statistics and Nationality Reports (April 2017 – June 2017)
 - Unaccompanied Alien Children Statistics (April 2017 – June 2017)

We publish the regularly provided statistics on the uscis.gov website before the quarterly engagement so you can review them before the meeting and print a copy if you so choose.

III. Asylum Office Jurisdiction Over Affirmative Asylum Applicants with Expedited Removal Orders and/or Notice To Appear (NTAs)

- a. We have a handful of clients who have been released from detention and issued NTAs, but those NTAs have not been filed with the immigration court. Immigration courts will not accept an asylum filing if an NTA has not yet been filed with the court. USCIS also rejects asylum filings for these applicants citing lack of jurisdiction, even though the 2013 Affirmative Asylum Manual states that the asylum office maintains jurisdiction unless an NTA has been served on an applicant and filed with the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR). How can the issue be addressed to allow applicants caught in this "catch 22" to file before the one-year deadline? Does the asylum office consider itself to have jurisdiction when ICE has produced an NTA and served it upon an applicant, but ICE has not filed the NTA with EOIR? If the asylum office does not accept jurisdiction because it wants to give ICE an opportunity to file the NTA, would it make a difference if substantial time has passed without ICE taking any action?

Response: Due to ongoing litigation in Mendez-Rojas v. Duke, we are unable to respond to these questions at this time. Please note, if you have specific cases with related concerns and if ICE or CBP issued the NTA, we recommend you contact ICE to request that ICE file the NTA with the immigration court. If an Asylum Office issued the NTA after conducting a credible fear screening, please contact the Asylum Office to request that it file the NTA with the immigration court.

- b. Some practitioners have seen that their local asylum offices are declining jurisdiction over affirmative asylum applications due to the existence of an expedited removal order even if:

- That order was later rescinded/vacated/never effectuated due to the superseding issuance of a Notice to Appear, and

- No charging document was filed with an immigration court. When the asylum office learns of the expedited removal order, they are administratively closing the case sua sponte for lack of jurisdiction.

In many cases practitioners and applicants are not provided notice of the administrative closure, and closure appears to stop the EAD clock and erase the time elapsed on the clock.

Please confirm the Asylum Division's interpretation of regulations and the INA regarding jurisdiction.

Response: See the response to question III.a. above.

IV. Policy Memorandum PM-602-0137

- a. USCIS issued a Policy Memorandum PM-602-0137, dated Oct. 5, 2016, "Revised Guidance for Processing Asylum Cases Involving Terrorism-Related Inadmissibility Grounds and Amendment to the Hold Policy for Such Cases." Based on this memo, cases that were previously on hold at HQ due to possible TRIG will be "referred" to EOIR.

Can you please provide an update on how many cases remain at HQ that were previously on hold due to TRIG?

Response: We have approximately 10-15 TRIG cases that were removed from TRIG hold following the October 2016 policy memorandum still pending with HQ.

What is the process to remove these cases from hold for referral to EOIR and how long is this process expected to take?

Response: We cannot provide a timeline for when the processing of these cases will be completed. We are making every effort to review cases and return them to the field in a timely manner.

How will cases in which a TRIG exemption is authorized be processed under the new policy?

Response: Cases involving a TRIG exemption continue to receive two levels of review prior to decision service.

- b. What is the date of the next of the next TRIG Quarterly Stakeholder Meeting?

Response: The next meeting has not been scheduled at this time. Please address inquiries on the scheduling of the next engagement to Karen Sohrakoff, chief of the RAIO TRIG Unit.

V. Conflicts While Awaiting Adjustment

- a. Normally, a person who entered as a nonimmigrant, but has become in violation of his status, will be allowed to adjust status through the petition of a U.S. citizen immediate relative. If such a person has an I-130 and I-485 pending, and is awaiting his adjustment interview, upon the non-grant of an affirmative asylum application, would the asylum office refer the case to the EOIR, or allow the person to continue to await his adjustment interview? What would be the result of a non-grant of a person awaiting a TPS application adjudication, referral to the EOIR or allow the person to await adjudication of the TPS application?

Response: Asylum offices are required by regulation to issue Notices to Appear to affirmative asylum applicants who are not in valid immigration status and are not found eligible for asylum, but asylum offices may be willing to coordinate on a case-by-case basis with other USCIS components to delay issuance of an NTA if the adjudication of a concurrently pending application and/or petition is imminent.

VI. Changes of Address

- a. If an asylum applicant lives in the jurisdiction of an asylum office, for example New Jersey, and moves to the jurisdiction of another office, for example New York, does the applicant need to do anything other than file an AR-11 to ensure that the case is transferred to the correct office? For example, should she write a letter to one or both offices?

Concerning the above example, does the transferred case join the asylum office queue based on the date of application? For example, in the example above, if the applicant filed in January 2015 and moved from the NJ jurisdiction to the NY jurisdiction, she should now be "current" for a NY interview. Should she expect to be interviewed immediately or are case transfers added to the queue in some other way?

Response: Asylum offices are notified of a change of address automatically, if the customer follows the directions in the uscis.gov website under File a Change of Address Online, including answering "yes" to the question: "Is this change of address for an application or petition currently in progress?" These steps must be taken to notify the asylum office where the application is pending of the change of address.

The Change of Address Online system captures the data provided by a customer or the representative in one central location to fulfill two processes: 1) notifying USCIS that a customer has changed his/her address and 2) in the case of a customer with a pending benefit request, informing the specific USCIS office of the change of address to ensure that asylum offices send mail to the proper address.

The applicant may also submit a change of address through the mail by sending one copy to the address on the website and one copy to the asylum office where the application is currently pending. Both steps must be taken if completing the change of address by mail.

Yes, the transferred case joins the asylum office queue at the new office based on the filing date.

- b. Asylum adjudication jurisdiction—if an applicant changed address while asylum is pending, does the case follow to respective jurisdiction or stay with the initial jurisdiction?

Response: Generally, if the applicant has not been interviewed before the move, the applicant will be interviewed in the new asylum office jurisdiction. If the applicant was interviewed before moving to a new asylum office jurisdiction, generally the case will be adjudicated by the asylum officer in the old jurisdiction unless an additional interview is required.

VII. Biometrics Notices

- a. During the call in January (I believe) there was mention that the biometric notices were going to be for date/time specific appointments. Notices arriving still have the two week window. Is this going to change?

Response: Yes. As of Aug. 3, the Asylum Division began to issue biometric notices for date/time specific appointments for all cases. However, applicants may continue to receive biometrics notices with two-week windows that were scheduled before the change for a short time during the transition.

- b. What should practitioners do when the USCIS notification for asylum interview arrives before biometrics notification? Who should we contact to initiate fingerprints? Should we alert USCIS?

Response: In the fall of 2016, the Asylum Division began to “refresh or re-submit” existing asylum-related fingerprints for applicants such that the applicant no longer had to attend an appointment for biometrics collection. This provides better customer service to the applicants and also allows the Application Support Centers (ASC) to better handle increasing new asylum application receipts. If the applicant or dependent was previously fingerprinted for the asylum application and receives the interview notice without receiving a biometrics appointment, the applicant is not required to go to the ASC again for biometrics collection prior to the interview.

If the applicant or dependent has never been fingerprinted for the asylum application and received the interview notice before the biometrics appointment notice, please contact the asylum office where the application is pending so that they can schedule a biometrics appointment before the asylum interview.

- c. After an asylum application is filed, we are receiving a biometrics notice with a range of dates, usually a week during which the applicants need to go to the local ASC office to have their fingerprints done. However, the local ASC office is refusing to fingerprint applicants with this type of notice and is asking them to provide a notice with a specific date and time. What should be done in this case?

Response: Applicants should now receive a biometrics notice with a specific date and time. Please continue to attend biometrics appointments and take your appointment notice. If you need to re-schedule your appointment, follow the instructions on the notice or contact the local asylum office for assistance.

VIII. Affirmative Asylum Scheduling Bulletin and Interview Priorities

- a. Asylum offices have stated at some local liaison meetings that the Affirmative Scheduling Bulletin is not accurate (delays are longer than what the website indicates). Will the bulletin be generally updated for accuracy?

Response: Creating the scheduling bulletin is not a science. It's an estimation based on the number of cases scheduled for interview the previous month and the number of cases that were not scheduled for interview (from a particular filing month). The Asylum Division will look into ways to make the bulletin less manual and more accurate and informative, to include additional priorities and interview locations.

- b. Will the asylum offices continue to prioritize scheduling of children's cases? If so, would they consider issuing a separate scheduling bulletin for children's cases so representatives can better plan for when those cases will be scheduled?

Response: The scheduling priorities currently remain the same. See the response to VIII.a above.

- c. I recall there was a recent announcement that the scheduling bulletin would include circuit rides. When is this likely to be implemented?

Response: See the response to VIII.a above.

- d. Are the asylum offices still scheduling interviews on a first-in-first-out basis? Have there been any changes in the prioritization or scheduling process for asylum interviews or are any such changes anticipated in the future?

Response: Generally, the asylum offices continue to follow the scheduling priorities as described on uscis.gov in the Affirmative Asylum Scheduling Bulletin. The Asylum Division continuously examines scheduling priorities based on receipts, pending caseloads, resources and priorities.

- c. How many cases, as a percentage, typically have an applicant called back in for a follow-up/second interview? Anecdotal reports suggest an uptick in this occurring.

Response: We do not track this information in our case management system.

- e. Can you please tell me how to request an expedited hearing?

Response: Asylum office directors may consider applicants' requests for urgent interview scheduling outside of the prioritization categories on a case-by-case basis. Please submit any urgent interview scheduling requests in writing to the asylum office with jurisdiction over your case. Go to the USCIS Service and Office locator page for contact information.

- f. On average, how many months does the asylum process take?

Response: The length of time for completing an affirmative asylum application depends on various factors, including but not limited to:

- The date the application was filed;
- The caseload of the asylum office with jurisdiction over the application; and
- Whether the applicant is interviewed at a local asylum office or at a circuit ride interview location.

Please see the Affirmative Asylum Scheduling Bulletin | USCIS Affirmative Asylum Scheduling Bulletin for more information about interview priorities on uscis.gov/asylum.

IX. Including Updated Information in the Applicant's File in Time for the Interview

- a. Many years go by before one obtains an interview with a two weeks' notice given before the interview. What is the best method to submit updated information or additional evidence to the asylum office? Is it better to do so in person at the time of the interview or should we do so within the two weeks by sending it to the asylum office? My problem with the latter is often times the additional documents do not get placed in the correct file for the officer to find before the interview.

Response: Check with the asylum office with jurisdiction over your case for local procedures for submitting supplemental documentation. Generally, you should submit the supplemental documents before or immediately after you receive the interview notice (within two weeks before the interview date). If you cannot submit the supplemental documents before two weeks, bring extra copies for the interviewing officer. You may drop them off earlier in the week with the interviewing officers at your circuit ride location.

X. Post-Interview Delays

- a. We have experienced high number for asylum seekers approaching our agency asking for assistance. Could you please explain the delays in processing asylum applications, more specifically for clients from Syria? Some of these clients have been interviewed by an asylum officer more than once, and yet their cases are still pending for over two years. Is there a way for an applicant's attorney to advocate for an expedited decision following an asylum interview, for example, in the case where a client's family is in danger as they wait for the decision? How might an applicant find out how long a decision might take if they have been waiting for a year or longer for an interview decision?

Response: We are not aware of delays specific to Syrian asylum cases. Asylum office directors have the discretion to consider applicants' requests for urgent post-interview processing on a case-by-case basis. Please submit your request to the asylum office with jurisdiction over your case.

- b. Does USCIS have any estimates of how much longer the additional screening of applicants will add to current waiting times? Is there anything in particular that stakeholders who work with the affected populations can do to help USCIS with the new and expanded processes?

Response: See the Executive Orders on Protecting the Homeland page on DHS's website for information outlining the impact of the executive orders.

- c. Is there any policy change regarding asylum issues?

Response: There are no changes regarding affirmative asylum issues.

XI. I-94s for Defensive Asylees

- a. There is a problem around I-94s which has taken up so much time—yours, mine, and the new asylees! The problem is that sometimes new asylees are not handed an I-94 when they are released from detention, following a grant of asylum. Some are able to obtain one when they reach their destination and contact the local USCIS office. How do I resolve this problem?

Response: The procedures for requesting and receiving an I-94 card after a grant of asylum by an immigration judge are available online at Immigration Benefits in EOIR Removal Proceedings. At the final hearing, you will receive orally and in writing the "Post-Order Instructions," which explain you must make the request to the local USCIS Field Office. The Asylum Offices do not provide I-94 cards to individuals granted asylum by an immigration judge.

XII. Unaccompanied Children

- a. Is there any new or anticipated guidance on circumstances under which unaccompanied children will be re-designated as accompanied? Likewise, is there guidance or procedures for when those designated as unaccompanied children turn 18?

Response: Under Executive Order 13767 and the DHS implementation memo for Executive Order 13767, DHS is currently developing uniform guidance and procedures on applications for asylum filed by UACs for adjudication by USCIS under the "initial jurisdiction" provision of the TVPRA. However, the May 2013 USCIS memo, Updated Procedures for Determination of Initial Jurisdiction over Asylum Applications Filed by Unaccompanied Alien Children, is still in effect. The memo has not been rescinded nor replaced with new procedures for determining initial jurisdiction.

- b. Are the asylum offices still following the 2013 memo that says they will not do an independent analysis of UAC status for individuals who were designated UACs and never affirmatively "re-designated"? In other words, will the AO still treat an I-589 as filed by a UAC even if the applicant is now over 18 or appears to have reunified with a parent, so long as there was no re-designation?

Response: The May 2013 USCIS memo, Updated Procedures for Determination of Initial Jurisdiction over Asylum Applications Filed by Unaccompanied Alien Children, is currently still in effect. At this time, the memo has not been rescinded or replaced with new procedures for determining initial jurisdiction. Under Executive Order 13767 and the DHS implementation memo for Executive Order 13767, however, DHS is currently developing new uniform guidance and procedures on applications for USCIS adjudication of asylum applications filed by UACs under the "initial jurisdiction" provision of the TVPRA.

- c. Does the Asylum Office have jurisdiction over cases filed by a UAC who was in court even if the UAC took prosecutorial discretion and the case was admin closed or terminated? If they were designated as UACs and never re-designated, would the Asylum Office have jurisdiction even if several years have passed and the individual is no longer a minor?

Response: Under current procedures, if a UAC's removal proceedings were administratively closed, the NTA is still active in the case. Therefore, the Asylum Office may have jurisdiction over an asylum application pursuant to the "initial jurisdiction" provision of the TVPRA. If a UAC's removal proceedings were terminated, the Asylum Office would have jurisdiction over an asylum application as an affirmative asylum application since the applicant is no longer in removal proceedings, regardless of whether the application was filed by a UAC.

Under the 2013 memo currently still in effect, if CBP or ICE determined that an applicant was a UAC, and, as of the date of initial filing of the asylum application, that UAC status determination was still in place, USCIS will take initial jurisdiction over the case.

Under Executive Order 13767 and the DHS implementation memo for Executive Order 13767, however, DHS is currently developing new uniform guidance and procedures on USCIS adjudication of applications for asylum filed by UACs under the "initial jurisdiction" provision of the TVPRA.

- d. Sponsors and other adult caregivers are expressing increasing fear of attending child asylum interviews as witnesses or "trusted adults" because of increased immigration enforcement efforts. Does the Asylum Division have a policy regarding the sharing of witness and other adults' information with Immigration and Customs Enforcement? Will asylum officers be encouraged to give more weight to written declarations given these concerns?

Response: Asylum officers continue to be instructed to elicit testimony on all relevant eligibility requirements. Asylum interview notes are part of the record in the A-File. If the application is not approved, the asylum office transfers the file to ICE OPLA for removal proceedings. If the asylum application is approved, USCIS informs ICE so that appropriate arrangements may be made to terminate proceedings. Asylum officers will consider written declarations.

- f. We have learned of a situation in which the SF Asylum Office denied a UAC's asylum claim based on evidence from ICE's EARM (Enforcement Alien Removal Module) system. Counsel for the UAC was not provided with the evidence or given an opportunity to address it at any time during the application process. Has USCIS implemented a new policy permitting asylum officers to issue denials without giving an applicant the opportunity to respond to the evidence used to deny the case? Please provide a copy of any written agency guidance regarding this practice.

Response: No, there is no new or revised policy. Please direct case specific inquiries and concerns to the interviewing office.

XIII. Gang-Related Questions

- a. Are there new policies or practices on sending gang-related cases to Headquarters for review? If so, does this apply to victims of gang activity? Does the policy/practice apply to minors as well as adults? Advocates have also heard that any unaccompanied minors that are or were previously in a "staff-secure" or "secure" Office of Refugee Resettlement facility will have their cases sent to Headquarters for review. Is there a new policy in place on this?

Response: The Asylum Division has always maintained and exercised the ability to request certain cases be submitted to Headquarters for review before decision issuance, even if for only a short period of time, in order to get a better understanding of the types of cases being seen in the field. Recently, there has been significant reporting on gang activity in the United States associated with Central American gangs. As such, we believe it is prudent at this time to ensure that we understand what cases may be coming through the affirmative asylum process in which there are indications that the applicant has a history of violent criminal activity or gang affiliation or involvement. Therefore, we have asked offices to submit proposed grants to Headquarters for review if the adjudicator detects indicators of past or current gang affiliation regardless of whether the applicant is a juvenile or an adult.

Under ORR rules for placement, this type of history may be a factor considered when determining placement in these facilities. Therefore, as part of this request, we have requested to review proposed grants where the applicant was previously or is currently being held in a "staff-secure" or "secure" ORR facility. We may conduct a similar review of proposed referrals/denials in the future. We have not asked to see cases based on whether an applicant is a victim of gang activity.

- b. Advocates have observed an increase in the number and detail of questions on whether unaccompanied minors had ever associated with gangs, or been victim of a gang. We have also noted an increase in questions relating to the child's journey to the United States and specifically who bore any costs associated with the journey. Can you comment on the purpose or intention of such questions?

Response: We are not aware of an increase in the number or type of questions being asked about gang association, being a victim of gang violence, the applicant's journey to the U.S., or those who bore the costs for this journey. Adjudicators are trained to develop the record as necessary to make a legally sufficient determination, which could include asking about any of the issues raised in this question, depending on the facts of the case.

- c. Which unaccompanied child asylum case decisions are currently being sent to Headquarters for review before the decisions can be issued? How long is it taking for Headquarters to complete these reviews? What percentage of UAC cases requires Headquarters review now?

Response: We do not ask that UAC cases come to Headquarters categorically. They may be submitted for review if they are subject to the review discussed above, involving potential gang affiliation, or for other reasons, such as if they are novel, high profile, likely to be publicized, or involve national security issues. We do not have data on how long these cases take to review or what percentage of UAC cases receive Headquarters review.

- d. AILA has received reports that asylum officers have implemented new procedures related to the adjudication of cases that may have possible MS-13 connections or possible gang-related issues. Has Headquarters provided any new guidance to the field concerning the adjudication of asylum cases with possible MS-13 connections or gang-related issues? If yes, please specify what these changes are. Are there written policies on these changes? Will USCIS provide stakeholders with a copy of these written policy changes?

Response: Other than the steps mentioned above to require that certain proposed grants come to Headquarters for review, no additional guidance has gone to the field concerning the adjudication of asylum cases with possible MS-13 connections or gang-related issues.

- e. Please identify which categories of asylum cases are now being sent to Headquarters for review. Will USCIS provide stakeholders with a copy of this updated written policy guidance?

Response: Cases that currently come to Headquarters include those described above in XIII.a. and c., including cases that may be likely to be publicized or are otherwise high profile, as well as any that involve national security issues.

XIV. Publication of Lesson Plans and Training Modules

- a. Why does the Asylum Division publish just some, but not all, lesson plans and training modules? Why not publish all of them?
- b. Will the Asylum Officer Basic Training Course lesson plan materials be made available in the USCIS Electronic Reading Room or in any other public location? If not, please explain.
- c. When will USCIS guidance and officer training materials on children's asylum claims, such as the RAIO training materials, be available on the website again?

Response: Most training materials used to train new officers at RAIO are no longer available on RAIO's public website. The Asylum Division's lesson plans that are used to train asylum officers have been removed completely from the website and we are working to remove the remaining lesson plans because they will be posted for the public to access elsewhere.

In response to a series of recent Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) requests, all of our current lesson plans have been submitted to the USCIS FOIA office. The FOIA office will determine whether the materials are subject to any exceptions to disclosure. Any materials deemed sensitive or subject to a FOIA exception will be redacted by the FOIA office as appropriate. The FOIA office will post the remaining lesson plans, which we expect to be the majority of the lesson plans, in the USCIS Electronic Reading Room. Some of the materials have already been posted there, including training materials on adjudicating children's asylum claims and gender-related claims. We are working with the USCIS FOIA office to determine when the remaining materials will be posted.

XV. Staffing

- a. How are the overall staffing levels for asylum officers? Are there many openings? Are there plans to increase the workforce at this time?

Response: The Asylum Division is currently authorized 625 field asylum officers. As of July 10, there are 516 field asylum officers onboard with an additional 102 individuals selected to fill some of the remaining vacancies. USCIS is currently engaged in its annual staffing needs assessment. No additional information is available at this time.

- b. Please provide the current number of asylum officers currently on staff.

Response: See response to XVII.a above.

- c. Please provide the average number of asylum officers assigned to conduct affirmative asylum interviews from January to August 2017, broken down by month.

Response: We do not capture the requested data.

- d. During the May 2, 2017 Asylum Stakeholder meeting, the Asylum office indicated that asylum officers had been assigned to conduct CFIs and RFIs at the following detention centers: Cibola, Eloy, Florence, Adelanto, Imperial, Otay Mesa, Pearsall, Polk, Dilley, and Karnes. Please provide an updated list of the detention centers where asylum officers have been assigned to conduct CFIs and RFIs. Please provide the current number of asylum officers assigned to each facility.

Response: The facilities have not changed. The number of asylum officers assigned to these locations fluctuates weekly and, at times, daily. During the week of July 24, a total of 46 asylum officers were assigned to the above mentioned sites.

XVI. CBP and Transgender Asylum Seekers

- a. I'm concerned about reports I've heard from Human Rights First and the Transgender Law Center that asylum seekers, including a number of transgender women fleeing violence in Central America, are being told by CBP at the border that they can't seek asylum and whether USCIS is working with CBP on addressing this issue. I would like to know if USCIS is working with CBP to address reports of CBP officers turning asylum seekers away at the border.

Response: The issue of CBP actions at the border related to asylum seekers is subject to litigation. Due to the litigation, we are unable to respond to this question.

XVII. Initiation of Removal Proceedings

- a. Has there been any change in the past eight months to the policy or procedure for initiating removal proceedings against asylum applicants who have applied for asylum affirmatively and whose affirmative asylum cases have yet to be adjudicated by the asylum office?

Response: No, the Asylum Division has not made such changes in the past eight months.

- a. For FY 2016 and 2017, how many cases have removal proceedings been initiated against people who had affirmative applications for asylum pending without decision at the time the NTA was issued? Please provide a breakdown by (a) asylum office, and (b) nationality of applicant. In how many of these cases had the affirmative asylum applicant been (a) charged with a criminal offense; (b) convicted of a criminal offense?

Response: USCIS Asylum does not track this information in our case management system.

- c. If a case looks improbable, inconsistent with country conditions, or just falsified, is the interview process speeded up, to throw the person in court? Cases in the asylum office now take 27 months to be heard.

Response: USCIS schedules the affirmative asylum interview and considers the evidence on a case-by-case basis. If the individual does not establish eligibility for asylum and is not in lawful immigration status, the asylum office places the individual in removal proceedings.

XVIII. Detention and Affirmative Asylum

- a. I have heard of those asylum applicants who have been stopped at checkpoints where CBP agents are present. The applicants have informed agents that they filed their asylum application before the expiration of their six months of their I-94 and are still being detained.

The ICE agent or CBP agent are saying that an asylum applicant has no legal status even if they filed before the six months of the expiration of their I-94, which is troubling, because if they detain every person who is awaiting an asylum interview, it would be contradictory to the acknowledgement of receipt that they receive after they file their I-589, which states you're allowed to remain in the United States while your asylum application is pending.

Therefore, perhaps further clarification is necessary to the CBP or to ICE agents so that a memo can be sent out that asylum applicants should not be detained, since they have an asylum application pending and it is not their fault that the USCIS has a backlog of asylum applications and they cannot have their interview conducted within six months so they should not have to bear the consequence of their asylum application not being processed for an interview and thus being detained saying that they're under no lawful status and that asylum applicants have no lawful status.

Even though they do not have a lawful status they are an asylum applicant and their I-797 acknowledgement of receipt states that you are allowed to remain in the United States while you're asylum application is pending. Therefore, my question is whether there is any clarification to ICE agents or to CBP agents, so they are aware that those asylum applicants with pending asylum applications before the USCIS, should not be detained if their six months have expired and their I-589 is pending before USCIS.

Response: ICE and CBP have the legal authority to determine whether to take aliens into custody when they encounter them at the border or inside the United States, and to determine whether to place them into removal proceedings. If ICE or CBP places them into removal proceedings, USCIS loses jurisdiction over the application and they may apply for asylum or other protection as a defense to removal while in detention.

XIX. Credible Fear and Reasonable Fear Cases

- a. USCIS revised its Credible Fear of Persecution and Torture Determinations and Reasonable Fear of Persecution and Torture Determinations on Feb. 13, 2017. These new lesson plans are effective as of Feb. 27, 2017. Has any additional guidance been issued to the field concerning CFIs and RFIs?

Response: No.

- b. During the May 2, 2017, Asylum Stakeholder meeting, the Asylum Office stated that there is a random review process for CFI and RFI cases. Please identify any categories of CFI and RFI cases that are required to be reviewed by Headquarters.

Response: Headquarters does not review any specific categories of CFI or RFI cases. Cases are selected at random for submission to Headquarters for review.

XX. Attorney Interaction with the Asylum Officer at the Interview

- a. Under the current training model, what exactly are new asylum officers trained to expect from their interactions with attorneys representing asylum applicants at the asylum interview? Interactions with asylum officers still vary substantially from officer to officer. Some welcome attorney participation to clear up obvious confusion so the interview is not needlessly sidetracked for 15-20 minutes because something is lost in translation. Others clearly do not want the attorney to open her mouth. What does the asylum division consider to be appropriate in terms of an attorney speaking during an asylum interview? I know that the older Asylum Officer Basic Training Course stated: "In certain instances, it may be appropriate for the representative to comment during the course of the interview to avoid confusion or misunderstandings. Such comments may be helpful and should not be discouraged."

This issue was also raised in the May 2, 2017, Stakeholder Meeting. However, I recently experienced the variance in asylum officer attitudes toward attorney participation in the asylum interview in interviews on June 7 and June 14. I feel it is necessary to continue to raise this issue until the problem has been rectified. Is the Asylum Division taking steps to assure that all asylum officers are familiar with the desired role that attorneys should play in an asylum interview? This seems particularly important as there are over 270,000 (likely tens of thousands more by the time the stakeholder meeting takes place) pending applications in which interviews will be necessary.

Response: All asylum officers receive training on non-adversarial interview techniques. The training materials emphasize the role of the asylum officer to manage the interview.

"Because of the non-adversarial nature of the process, described below, the role of the representative during the interview is minimal. You [the asylum officer] control the interview and will ask most of the questions. You may allow the representative to comment or ask questions during the course of the interview to clarify specific points. After your last question, you should give the attorney an opportunity to offer a closing statement. You have the discretion to limit the length of the closing statement, or in rare circumstances, require that a statement be submitted in writing instead." Interviewing – Intro to the Non-Adversarial Interview.

We have shared your concerns with the Arlington Asylum Office. The Arlington Asylum Office encourages attorneys to engage with local office management, by asking for a supervisor, after the completion of the interview if you have a particular concern regarding the officer's conduct in an interview. Also, all asylum offices have regular local stakeholder engagements and we encourage you to submit your questions to be discussed at those engagements. Contact the local asylum office management for the details regarding these engagements.

XXI. Information Provided at the Waiting Room Window

- a. Some applicants report that when they inquire at the asylum office window, they are told their exact position on the short notice list (for example: "You are number 245."). Others are told that no information can be shared on that topic. For applicants that eagerly await their interviews because they seek to be reunited with their loved ones after receiving asylum, it helps when they can receive at least some information about where they are in the process. However, for those that are turned away with no information, it causes them confusion and frustration. Many have heard from friends that they were provided information when they inquired at the office window, so the applicant will wonder why she was not treated the same way. I would encourage the open sharing of this kind of information... but at the very least, there should be a consistent policy of dealing with these inquiries. Does such a policy already exist?

Response: The Asylum Division has general national customer access standards which establishes multiple means for applicants to contact asylum offices while also protecting their confidentiality under 8 C.F.R. § 208.6. Asylum office management may also develop local procedures which meet the national standards. We have shared your concerns with Arlington Asylum management, and they will endeavor to provide standardized responses to this question.

What are post-release services?

Post-release services ensure safety, well-being, and a path to permanency for unaccompanied alien children¹ (UAC) released from federal custody to family members and other caregivers throughout the United States. Through risk assessment, action-planning with families around areas of need and concern, systems advocacy with community providers, and culturally-appropriate services and community referrals, post-release services strengthen families and protect children. Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service (LIRS) and the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) have provided post-release services for children released from federal custody since 1994.

Who receives post-release services?

In the US, UAC who are apprehended by immigration authorities due to their lack of immigration status are placed in the custody and care of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Refugee Resettlement (HHS/ORR). HHS/ORR makes and implements placement and service decisions of all UAC's while in federal custody. UACs have the right under federal law to be released to family members or other responsible adults (referred to as "sponsors"). HHS/ORR-funded care providers refer UAC who are released to family members (or other approved sponsor) to one of the HHS/ORR-funded agencies providing post-release services based on their assessment of the needs of the child, relationship and motivation of the sponsor, and ability of the sponsor to meet the child's unique needs. Not all children released from federal custody receive post-release services. The percentage of released children who receive post-release services fluctuates and is subject to allocation of funding.

¹ The term 'unaccompanied alien child' means a child who has no lawful immigration status in the United States; has not attained 18 years of age; and with respect to whom there is no parent or legal guardian in the United States; or no parent or legal guardian in the United States is available to provide care and physical custody. (Homeland Security Act of 2002).

When are post-release services required?

The Trafficking Victims Protection Re-Authorization Act (TVPRA) of 2008 requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to conduct follow-up services², during the pendency of removal proceedings, for children for whom a home study was conducted. Home studies are required if the child is a victim of severe trafficking in persons, has a disability as defined in Section 3 of the American Disabilities Act, if the child has been a victim of physical or sexual abuse under circumstances that indicate that the UAC's health or welfare has been significantly harmed or threatened, or if the proposed sponsor clearly presents a risk of abuse, maltreatment, exploitation, or trafficking to the child.³ The TVPRA also authorizes the Secretary to conduct follow-up services in cases involving children with mental health or other needs who could benefit from ongoing assistance from a social welfare agency. A sponsor is not obligated by law to accept post release services.

Why are post-release services necessary?

Child welfare practitioners have found the provision of family preservation services following family reunification to be essential to reducing the risk of harm to children and increasing the ability of parents to protect and supervise. Although family reunification, when safe and appropriate, is in the child's best interest, it can also be a highly stressful time, in particular, for families that have been separated for years, or, for children who are released to adults with whom they have little or no previous relationship. For UAC and their sponsors, environmental factors such as immigration status, English language ability, extent of integration, and lack of an extended family support structure in the US further compound the risk for breakdown upon reunification. Ultimately, supporting a successful reunification through post-release services reduces the likelihood of family breakdown, placement into foster care, commission of crime, recidivism into the juvenile justice system, recidivism into treatment placement, or first time entry into adult corrections.

Where are post-release services available?

UAC referred to LIRS and USCCB receive post-release services from a local, community-based organization anywhere in the US or U.S. territories. Post-release services follow the child; therefore, if the child and family move, or the approved sponsor arrangement breaks down and the child moves in with another family member, the child continues to receive services anywhere in the US.

Who assists children and families through post-release services?

LIRS and USCCB provide post-release services through their established networks of community-based agencies with expertise in professional child and family services and services for immigrants. We believe community-based services are essential and practitioners with established local partnerships and knowledge of local resources are best equipped to do this work. Education and ongoing support are necessary to assist community-based providers in tailoring their service approach to adequately address the unique needs of undocumented and mixed status families and help them navigate systems such as medical and mental health services, schools, direct assistance and the immigration courts.

Who has custody of children during the post-release service period?

The federal government relinquishes custody of the UAC once they are released to sponsors. Therefore, HHS/ORR retains no custodial authority once a child is released to a sponsor, even in cases in which LIRS/USCCB are providing post-release services. Although the sponsor signs a document stating s/he will care for the child, this document does not grant legal guardianship. Sponsors may apply for and receive legal guardianship according to state law; however, due to fear of being made known to immigration authorities, instability in housing or employment, and other challenges faced by undocumented sponsors, it is common that sponsors do not obtain guardianship leaving the UAC with no legal guardian.

² While the term "follow up services" is used in the TVPRA, we use the term "post release services" for the purpose of this document since the implementing agency within HHS, the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), uses the term "post release services", and our agencies have also adopted the term. They are two terms used synonymously.

How do post-release providers assist children and their families?

USCCB and LIRS implement a strengths-based family strengthening and kinship navigator approach adapted to the UAC's unique needs. This approach engages the family as active participants in goal-planning and achievement by empowering them to navigate community resources independently. This includes identifying the family's protective factors,⁴ such as strong extended family relationships, the desire for education and achievement for their children, and the maintaining of cultural connections while integrating into U.S. society.

An assigned case manager coordinates an individualized package of services to UAC and their sponsors depending on their unique needs. Services include:

- Home visits and family preservation services
- Ongoing psycho-educational support and opportunities to foster community integration
- Systems advocacy and education to overcome barriers to services to include enrolling in public school, ensuring access to individual service plans (IEP) in school to include ESL courses and tutoring, and finding affordable and bilingual health care providers
- Identification of resources to support the family in meeting basic needs
- Connection to community supports, whether places of worship, ethnic community, and/or support groups
- Continuous assessment of child safety and well-being
- Referring children to low cost or pro bono immigration legal assistance and educating children and their families about immigration processes
- Convening, supporting, and encouraging interdisciplinary panel to discuss cases, as needed

When does Child Protective Services assist?

Local child protective services (CPS) are contacted per mandated reporting requirements, i.e. in cases of alleged child maltreatment by the sponsor. If needed, CPS may assign a guardian ad litem, or open an investigation. Responses by CPS to cases of alleged maltreatment of undocumented children vary by location, and LIRS and USCCB provide ongoing education to CPS about the needs of children in immigration proceedings.

What is the post-release service period?

The TVPRA mandates post-release services for children who received a home study continue throughout the duration of his or her removal proceedings, or, until they turn 18 years old, whichever happens first. For children released without a home study, post-release services are provided for six months, and potentially longer if in a professional's judgment, the child could benefit from ongoing assistance.

Who funds post-release services?

Currently, most post-release services are funded by HHS/ORR. However, LIRS and USCCB also provide non-governmental assistance to children identified as needing services after release from custody.

Please contact us if you would like further information about post release services for a child you know, or for information about becoming one of our network providers.

Dear Chairman Portman and Senator McCaskill:

Thank you for your May 31, 2016, letter concerning the responses we submitted to the questions for the record following the January 28, 2016, hearing by the Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations entitled, "Adequacy of the Department of Health and Human Services' Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking."

The Department of Health and Human Services recognizes and appreciates the importance of Congressional oversight and is committed to continuing to work with you regarding your inquiry into this matter. As such, we have provided further information responding to your May 31, 2016, letter in the attached document. We are working with your staffs to further explain how HHS cooperated fully with Federal law enforcement authorities in connection with the Marion, Ohio, criminal matters. In addition, the answers to the remaining questions will be forthcoming in the near future.

We hope you find this information helpful. Please let us know if we can be of further assistance.

1. During the hearing, Sen. McCaskill asked Mr. Greenberg and Mr. Carey to provide, by February 4, 2016, a formal legal analysis supporting HHS's "long-standing policy" that ORR has no responsibility for unaccompanied alien children (UAC) after their placement with sponsors. On February 22, 2016, HHS provided a response to Sen. McCaskill's request, which argued that the Trafficking Victims Protection Act prevented HHS from asserting "continuing legal custody post-release" of a child. Please answer the following questions:

d. HHS's February 22, 2016, letter argued that because "Congress specifically required follow-up services in those limited cases where a home study was conducted, and...authorized follow-up services for certain other children with mental health or other needs," Congress did not intend to grant ORR the general ability to retain or assume post-release custody of UACs. Please explain how 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(3)(B), which grants ORR the ability to conduct follow-up services in the above-mentioned cases, prohibits ORR from assuming post-release custody of UACs in other cases.

HHS's longstanding interpretation of the statute is that this section of the statute is about services, once a child has already been released – not custody.

The authorities and the resources given to the Unaccompanied Children Program in ORR set forth a system that is intended to be temporary in nature, with a focus on caring for children while in our physical custody, and releasing children to appropriate sponsors. Additionally, if Congress had intended ORR's legal custody to continue after a child is released to a sponsor, HHS believes that the TVPRA would not have needed certain of its post-release provisions. If HHS had continuing legal custody post-release, for example, HHS would necessarily have the authority and responsibility to provide services to the child after release. Instead, Congress specifically required follow-up services in those limited cases where a home study was conducted, and it authorized follow-up services for certain other children with mental health or other needs. In addition, section 235(c)(5) of the TVPRA (8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(5)) discusses legal services for children who "are" in the custody of HHS as well as those who "have been in the custody of the Secretary." Taken together, HHS believes that these examples support the conclusion that the Unaccompanied Children Program's approach to legal custody is consistent with the statute and Congressional intent.

If the intent of the Congress had been for the Unaccompanied Children Program to retain legal custody over the children after their release to sponsors, the program would have needed to be structured and resourced in a very different way. The program is not structured in a manner similar to state procedures for child foster care, in which custody of the child is transferred to the state after a judicial proceeding and the child is placed with a foster parent selected and licensed by the state. State child foster care systems include, for example, foster care maintenance payments and payments for health care expenditures, which the Unaccompanied Children Program does not have the authorization or funding to provide.

e. Please explain why, if 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(3)(B) requires follow-up services in certain cases, HHS has allowed sponsors to hold a veto over these services or bar care providers from communicating with UACs.

8 U.S.C. 1232(c)(3)(B) gives ORR the authority to provide services. Participation in post-release services is a voluntary choice by the sponsor and unaccompanied child, and 8 U.S.C. 1232(c)(3)(B) does not compel their participation. As we wrote previously, a sponsor declining post-release services prior to a final placement decision would be a factor ORR would consider in determining whether the child's basic needs would be met by that sponsor. Based on reporting from ORR's post-release service providers, the vast majority of sponsors accept post-release services when they are offered; very few decline.

If any of our provider grantees or staff have reason to believe that a child is unsafe, they comply with mandatory reporting laws, State licensing requirements, and Federal laws and regulations for reporting to local child protective agencies and/or law enforcement.

f. Please describe any specific legal impediment to ORR conducting a home study when a UAC sponsored by a Category 3 sponsor fails to appear at an immigration hearing.

Home studies are conducted before a final placement decision is made for the child, and would not be applicable to a situation in which a Category 3 sponsor fails to appear at an immigration hearing, which would occur post-release. Follow-up services are done post-release. There is no legal impediment to doing follow-up services. However, a substantial increase in the number of children provided post-release services would require additional resources beyond what is currently provided by Congress to the program. And, as discussed above, post-release services are voluntary and if they uncover concerns about the child's well-being, then steps are taken in accordance with applicable state law.

4. Under federal law, "the care and custody of all unaccompanied alien children, including responsibility for their detention, where appropriate, shall be the responsibility of the Secretary of Health and Human Services." 8 U.S.C. § 1232(b)(1). Notwithstanding the clarity of that provision, you testified that it is the Department's long-standing interpretation of the law that HHS is not responsible for an unaccompanied alien child after he or she is placed with a sponsor. In the Department's view, which Federal agency is responsible for unaccompanied alien children living with sponsors in the United States?

We can only speak to HHS's own authority on this issue and believe we have answered this question.

HHS's longstanding view across administrations is that, under the authorities governing the Unaccompanied Children's Program, once a child is released to a sponsor, ORR's legal and physical custody terminates. But the fact that ORR's custody ends upon release does not mean that its commitment to providing resources, connecting children to services, and protecting vulnerable children from abuse or exploitation ends. HHS has authorities that permit it to provide a range of services and resources post-release, and it makes use of that authorization to establish policies and procedures that, among other things, are intended to protect those children that may be vulnerable to abuse or exploitation after they are released from our care.

Dear Mr. Lloyd,

Thank you for your cooperation during the recent Child Protective Services investigation. This investigation has been completed according to Virginia State Code (Title 63, Chapter 12-1, Section 63.1-24.17) which deals with complaints alleging child abuse and neglect.

We did not find any clear evidence of abuse or neglect as defined by Virginia State Policy; therefore, we have made an "Unfounded" disposition. The following are recommendations which the Department is making in regards to policy and procedure within the Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center; while the allegations within the received report were unfounded, the Department believes that the specific population of unaccompanied minors within the Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center would benefit from access to the following.

1. An evidence-based mental health screening with specific regard to past history of traumatic experienced or witnessed events; this screening is recommended upon admission to the facility, as well as on an as-needed basis as determined by the facility.

2. Evidence-based, trauma-informed mental health services to be administered on an as-needed basis to the population of unaccompanied minors with past history of experienced or witnessed traumatic events as determined by the mental health screening tool and per the facility.
3. Cultural competency training to be administered to all staff upon hiring and on an as-needed basis.

The Department will maintain the information on this investigation for one year after the date of the complaint. The record will be purged after that one year period if there are no subsequent founded or unfounded reports received regarding you or the same child/children within that time period.

Recommendation for Virginia Board of Juvenile Justice

Memo From Child Protective Services (CPS)

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

BACKGROUND

In fall 2017, three migrant children detained by the federal government's Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) at the Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center (SVJC) filed a federal class action lawsuit alleging abuse by the guards at SVJC. In early 2018, out of concern for the safety of the residents, Virginia Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) certification team reviewed prior certification documents and visited SVJC to monitor and observe conditions in the facility. The certification team did not find any immediate concerns regarding the health and safety of the residents.

On June 21, 2018, a story was published reporting the alleged abuse contained in the lawsuit. The Governor takes these allegations very seriously and, recognizing the severity of the information contained in the lawsuit, directed Secretary Brian J. Moran to initiate an inquiry. The Secretary immediately contacted the director of Department of Juvenile Justice and the Governor's Chief of Staff to identify a plan of action and commenced the investigation.

Findings and the process of the investigation are contained below.

ROLE OF THE DEPARTMENT OF JUVENILE JUSTICE

Pursuant to regulations issued by the State Board of Juvenile Justice, DJJ has oversight but not operational responsibility for locally operated juvenile detention centers. According to 6VAC35-20-36.1, whenever the DJJ becomes aware of a health, welfare, or safety violation in a locally operated detention center, the Department shall take immediate action to correct the violation, if not already done by the program or facility.¹ The actions include reporting the situation to child protective services (CPS), the Virginia State Police, or the local law enforcement agency as applicable. Additionally, 6VAC35-20-37 provides for the DJJ Director to take immediate administrative actions when evidence is found of health, welfare, or safety violations to include but not limited to:

- The immediate removal of juveniles from the program. The immediate removal by DJJ would be limited to court involved youth who are in local or state custody. The Director would notify ORR of the action and ORR is responsible for any removal of youth in federal custody.
- Placing the facility on probationary certification status.

¹ Virginia regulation, 6VAC35-101-95, requires the juvenile detention center staff to report all known criminal activity by residents or staff to the facility administrator. The facility administrator shall notify the appropriate persons or agencies to include law enforcement, child protective services and DJJ, if applicable and appropriate, of suspected criminal violations by residents or staff. The law enforcement agency and CPS would determine necessary action.

- Issuing a preliminary order to suspend the certification of the detention center when conditions or practices exist in the facility that pose an immediate and substantial threat to the health, welfare, or safety of the residents.

After DJJ's thorough investigation, it did make referrals to local child protective services, but based on their investigation, determined that no further action was necessary. See Department of Juvenile Justice Report.

The SVJC is an independent juvenile detention facility for youth managed by the Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center Commission. SVJC staff are not state employees. Furthermore, DJJ does not have any official relationship or jurisdiction over the ORR, nor the federally supervised youth at SVJC. The ORR is a federal program under the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) that works with unaccompanied minors while their immigration cases are pending.

Unaccompanied minors are immigrant youth under the age of 18 who have no parent or legal guardian in the United States. Unaccompanied minors are placed at SVJC when ORR has determined that a less secure placement would not be appropriate. The DJJ has no contractual relationship with ORR, nor auditing or monitoring authority or responsibility over the federal youth housed at SVJC. The federal youth program is audited and overseen solely by ORR. Pursuant to a cooperative agreement that SVJC entered with ORR and HHS, ORR monitors SVJC for compliance with their requirements through announced and unannounced monitoring visits. These are not the youth who have been subject to the recent family separation policies of the Trump administration.

SECRETARY OF PUBLIC SAFETY AND HOMELAND SECURITY AND DEPARTMENT OF JUVENILE JUSTICE INQUIRY

On the evening of June 21, 2018, upon the Governor's directive, Secretary Moran and DJJ Director, Andrew Block, met with the SVJC Superintendent and toured the facility, including visiting the units housing the youth in ORR custody.

On June 21, 2018, with permission and conditions set by ORR, the DJJ certification and quality assurance teams conducted interviews with SVJC staff and all federal residents at SVJC at that time. According to the SVJC, none of the youth originally named as plaintiffs in the October '17 lawsuit were still present at SVJC during the visits and interviews. Additionally, a protective order had been entered in March 2018 that prohibits SVJC and ORR from disclosing the identities of any of the plaintiffs in the litigation. The following day, the Secretary participated in a call with DJJ detailing the results of their interviews at the facility. The team, with the addition of DJJ investigators who are sworn law-enforcement officers, returned to SVJC on June 25 to continue their interviews and review the files of federal residents.

On June 22, 2018, Secretary Moran communicated with Virginia's Congressional delegation and other government leaders, including all members of the Virginia General Assembly. He provided them with a fact-sheet and other details relevant to the investigation and the facility's relationship with the Commonwealth.

On June 27, 2018, Secretary Moran and Governor's Office staff completed a conference call with Scott Lloyd, Director of ORR, and Laura Trueman, Principal Deputy Director of the Office of Intergovernmental and External Affairs at HHS, regarding standard overview of facilities in Virginia and other background and operational information.

THE FINDINGS

On June 28, the DJJ submitted a preliminary report and Child Protective Services (CPS) provided an update to their investigation to Secretary Moran. The conclusions of their investigations indicate that there were no life, health, or safety concerns for the residents at SVJC.

As of July 3, CPS completed its investigation into the allegations of abuse and found that there was no evidence of abuse or neglect (see accompanying DJJ and CPS reports).

DEPARTMENT OF JUVENILE JUSTICE REPORT

INTRODUCTION

On June 21, 2018, Governor Ralph Northam requested Brian J. Moran, Secretary of Public Safety and Homeland Security, and the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) to conduct an inquiry into the allegations contained in a lawsuit regarding the safety of federal residents housed at the Shenandoah Valley Juvenile Center (SVJC). At the time of the inquiry there were 22 residents placed by the Office of Refugee and Resettlement (ORR) at the facility. As reported by the residents, one resident has been there since September 30, 2016, and the other 21 residents were admitted between November 12, 2017, and June 12, 2018. According to the SVJC, the residents who were named plaintiffs in the October '17 lawsuit were no longer in the facility at the time of the interviews.

While the DJJ team found SVJC in compliance with applicable regulations and certification standards, they did identify areas where SVJC could improve programming for the youth in the custody of ORR. Accordingly, this memo includes both a description of the investigative process and findings, as well as a set of recommendations for SVJC.

The memo also includes a recommendation that DJJ will forward to the Board of the Virginia Department of Juvenile Justice: to amend current certification standards so that DJJ can better track the youth who are housed in local detention centers but in the legal custody of a different agency.

REVIEW PROCESS

Following the Governor's directive, a DJJ team of certification and quality assurance staff visited SVJC on June 21, 2018, and June 25, 2018. It is also worth noting that subsequent to the initial filing of the lawsuit in October of 2017, DJJ staff monitored ongoing conditions at SVJC. Specifically, DJJ certification staff conducted a modified certification visit to SVJC to monitor and observe conditions in the facility in March of 2018, and also reviewed prior certification documents to determine if any problems similar to those alleged in the lawsuit had been flagged. Neither the review of prior reports, nor the visit in March identified any immediate concerns about the life, health, and safety of the residents in the facility.

During the June 21 visit, DJJ staff interviewed all of the federal residents at SVJC. The team was not able to substantiate the conditions described in the lawsuit concerning the operations of SVJC or the mistreatment of residents. After obtaining permission from ORR, the team returned on June 25 and reviewed case files, medical files, room confinement forms, and other documentation to assess compliance with regulations relating to the quality of care. For the case review process and interviews, ORR placed the following restrictions:

- Case files are federal property and cannot be duplicated or copied;
- Audit team could not keep written notes of information in case files; and
- A SVJC staff member had to be present for all interviews.

FINDINGS

During interviews, three residents reported that they had experienced abusive behavior by staff. A further review of documentation revealed that two of these complaints were reported by the facility to Child Protective Services (CPS). CPS determined that these complaints did not meet the legal definition of abuse and neglect. Upon further consideration, CPS reopened the two cases and was on-site for a further review to include interviews with all of the federal residents. The third report was an initial complaint that occurred during the interview process and was reported to CPS by DJJ staff.

SVJC uses room confinement as part of its behavior management system to ensure the safety and security of residents, staff, and the facility. During interviews with the federal residents, and supported by room confinement records in the case files, there were no instances where residents were confined more than 24 hours. With the exception of one 23-hour confinement, confinements lasted approximately 4 hours. Pursuant to the case file records, in each instance of confinement, visual inspections of the residents by staff were made at least once every 30 minutes.

The facility uses approved restraints pursuant to the Regulations Governing Juvenile Secure Detention Centers, 6VAC35-101-1130. Review of training records indicated that all staff are trained in the use of restraints through a behavioral management system titled "Handle With Care."² Per regulation, mechanical restraints shall not be used as punishment; however, they are used for the protection of resident and staff. The regulation requires that SVJC train staff in the use of mechanical restraints including but not limited to the restraint chair and mesh spit guards. The restraint chair is used for out-of-control residents who cannot be safely restrained by less intrusive methods. While in the chair, a mesh spit guard can be placed on the resident's head to prevent spitting or biting. No residents interviewed had knowledge of the use of the restraint chair. In two instances reviewed, staff were disciplined for using an unapproved physical restraint technique that did not follow "Handle with Care" guidelines. Neither of these restraints related to the use of the restraint chair.

Interviews with staff and residents revealed due process is not well understood and this lack of understanding appears to be related to language barriers. A review of resident files showed disciplinary reports where federal residents acknowledged by noting and signing their right to appeal or not to appeal disciplinary action.

A review of files documented that medical concerns are responded to immediately. However, there was one incident wherein one resident did not receive medication as prescribed because the medication ran out. The resident missed one day of medication.

Regarding nutrition, residents stated they receive three meals a day and one evening snack. A review of resident files indicated special diets are documented and prepared for residents as required.

² See, "Behavioral Management System, Inc.", Mark Chapman, 1984.

Interviews revealed that residents generally understood the grievance process and how to get issues resolved. Documentation in the files indicated the same.

Two DJJ investigators accompanied the team on June 25 and were tasked with identifying any gang activity. The investigators toured four housing units and observed three gang identifiers relating to MS-13. Two were drawings of the devil horn hand sign used by MS-13 and one was a "MS-13" etched in the window of one of the resident's doors. A fourth gang identifier was an 18th Street symbol scratched into the door of a resident's room. Overall, the housing units were very clean and free from graffiti. When identified by ORR prior to placement at SVJC, the file records indicated that SVJC received the notification of potential gang involvement upon admission.

CHILD PROTECTIVE SERVICES FOLLOW-UP

Based on the referrals from DJJ staff, Child Protective Services (CPS) staff from Shenandoah Valley Social Services conducted follow-up investigations, including individual interviews with a staff member who had allegedly engaged in abusive behavior.

Following these investigations, CPS found no abuse or neglect had taken place.

CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

On June 21, 2018, a DJJ team consisting of five members from the Certification Unit and the Quality Assurance Unit visited SVJC.³ On June 25, 2018, an eight member team from the Certification Unit, the Quality Assurance Unit, and the Investigative Unit also visited SVJC.⁴ CPS staff from Shenandoah Valley also conducted follow-up visits.

During this investigation DJJ staff found no life, health, or safety violations for youth in ORR's custody who have been placed at SVJC. Likewise, CPS, in their investigation, did not find evidence to support allegations of abuse or neglect. The team did find that the SVJC is a well-run facility that attempts to treat its staff and residents with respect and dignity.

While DJJ staff did not find sufficient evidence to support the conditions described in the lawsuit, the DJJ staff nevertheless identified areas where SVJC could strengthen its programming for this uniquely challenging group of youth—young people who have been frequently exposed to high levels of trauma, who are separated from their families, and who confront numerous language and cultural barriers, among others, to succeeding in SVJC and upon their release.

In addition, DJJ identified a gap in its certification authority over local detention centers which is that, without permission from the custodian agency (in this case ORR), DJJ does not have access to the records of youth, nor the youth themselves, who are in the custody of ORR or other third parties. Accordingly, in this memo DJJ has also included a recommendation that it intends to propose at the next DJJ Board meeting.

Finally, while DJJ staff found nothing to indicate their misuse or abuse at SVJC, given the concerns raised by the allegations in the lawsuit about physical restraints more generally, and the fact that the Board of DJJ is charged with regulating their use, DJJ will inform and educate the Board about their use in Virginia in order that the Board may properly consider the current regulations and whether any changes might be necessary.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR SVJC

RECOMMENDATION 1

SVJC should provide staff with training and professional development in the areas of positive youth development, cognitive behavioral interventions and trauma informed care.

It would benefit SVJC to invest in training for the administrative, management and line staff in the areas of positive youth development, cognitive behavioral interventions and trauma informed care. SVJC operational tenets are geared more toward a correctional philosophy and environment than a therapeutic model. SVJC currently operates a Community Placement Program for DJJ that incorporates the tenets of DJJ's community treatment model. The Missouri Youth Services Institute (MYSI) has trained all staff in the CPP in the principles of a therapeutic environment. As the youth placed by ORR are typically long term residents and similar to DJJ youth in that they have significant exposure to trauma, it would be of value for SVJC to adopt a similar community treatment model framework into the units housing the federal residents. Consistent staff and interactions with residents can diminish aggressive behaviors. If ORR were willing to collaborate with DJJ in this effort, it would promote a consistent philosophical approach within SVJC.

RECOMMENDATION 2

SVJC should increase the staff's understanding of and sensitivity toward the unique cultural backgrounds of the youth in the federal program, expand the culturally relevant programming for these youth, and increase the number of bilingual staff.

Culturally competent practices are crucial for ensuring effective services and treatment delivery to the Latino population at SVJC. SVJC staff need increased awareness of cultural factors that influence the federal residents' behavior and thinking patterns. A lack of social and emotional support networks impact stress and anxiety for the Latino youth and frequently is displayed as aggressive and negative behaviors. SVJC should reach out to and collaborate with local Latino serving agencies for assistance in the development of culturally relevant training and resources, and for assistance with recruitment of bilingual staff. Additional bilingual line staff and mental health counselors that understand the variations in the Spanish language within different Latino cultures would assist in addressing miscommunication and misunderstandings by the federal residents.

SVJC should strengthen the procedures for the use of mechanical restraints and re-train staff on the use of physical and mechanical restraints.

Although SVJC's procedures for mechanical restraints meet certification regulations, the procedure could be clearer and specific to the use of mechanical restraints. The use of a restraint chair and spit guards, as well as when and how it is used, should be better defined. DJJ suggests re-training all staff on the use of all restraints both physical and mechanical to include enhanced training on de-escalation techniques (see Recommendation 4).

RECOMMENDATION 4

SVJC should provide ongoing training in the effective use of de-escalation techniques for all staff at SVJC.

SVJC staff require additional training on effective de-escalation practices. De-escalation techniques can prevent disruptive behavior, reduce the need for physical or mechanical restraints, and enhance the safety of the resident and staff. As many de-escalation techniques require effective communication this recommendation is linked to the need for additional bilingual staff.

RECOMMENDATION 5

SVJC should explore design and furniture modifications to create a setting more conducive to working with a population that has high rates of trauma.

SVJC was designed and constructed as a secure juvenile detention center meant to provide short-term confinement for pre-adjudicated youth. At the forefront, it must provide a safe and secure environment for residents and staff and protect the public safety. The physical design of the facility is based on a more traditional correctional setting. Housing units and individual rooms are designed for direct supervision of residents and monitoring by staff inside and outside of the housing areas. As SVJC is not able, without considerable cost, to change the physical design of the housing units or rooms, it should explore other options with regard to furniture styles, arrangement of furniture and paint colors that could help modify the environment and make it more developmentally appropriate and trauma responsive.

JUVENILE JUSTICE

RECOMMENDATION 1

The Board of Juvenile Justice should promulgate an amendment to the regulations governing local juvenile detention centers to require that any time such a center enters into a contract with a third-party to house youth in the custody of the third-party, the contract must allow for DJJ staff to have the same access to the youth and their records as DJJ has to all other youth in that facility.

RECOMMENDATION 2

DJJ will inform and educate the Board about the use of mechanical restraints in juvenile correctional centers and locally operated juvenile detention centers in Virginia in order that the Board may properly consider the current regulations regarding the use of mechanical restraints and whether any changes might be necessary.

MEMO FROM CHILD PROTECTIVE SERVICES (CPS)

On 06/22/2018, the Shenandoah Valley Department of Social Services (SVDSS) began receiving numerous calls regarding allegations of abuse/neglect, which had been outlined in media reports released on 06/21/2018, as referenced within the executive summary of the DJJ report preceding this appendix. Specific to the calls received were allegations of abuse/neglect by guards against unaccompanied migrant children being detained at the SVJDC. These reports alleged the migrant children to having been "beaten and handcuffed" while also being "tied to chairs with bags placed over their heads". Additional allegations referenced these minors as being left "nude and shivering within their concrete cells". While none of these current reports identified any specific alleged abuser(s)/neglector(s), two previous reports had alleged physical abuse by one facility guard in the attempt to restrain two migrant children. As both of these previous reports had been determined invalid of meeting the requirements for a CPS response, it was suggested this decision be reconsidered. Therefore, on 06/22/2018, the SVDSS initiated an investigation into all allegations received.

The SVDSS began the process of interviewing all migrant children on 06/25/2018. This included eighteen children, again, all migrant children housed at the SVJDC. Interviews continued on 06/27/2018 and 06/28/2018 to include both migrant children and a number of administrative and supervisory staff. A final interview with the alleged abuser took place on 07/03/2018.

The interview process with all children included the CPS investigator employed by the SVDSS, the use of an interpreter retained by the SVDSS in addition to oversight by the CPS Regional Consultant with the Virginia Department of Social Services. Interviews with administrative and supervisory staff in addition to the alleged abuser involved the CPS investigator and the CPS regional consultant. The investigative process also included a full tour of the juvenile facility in addition to the review of hard record files for each migrant child. Also reviewed was video footage relating specifically to one of the allegations of physical abuse. Video footage relating to the second allegation of physical abuse was no longer accessible.

In conclusion of the CPS investigation, no information was obtained to implicate any additional alleged abuser(s)/neglector(s). Furthermore, the information obtained through child interviews found no evidence to support the allegations of any mistreatment or neglect. This was further evidenced by a complete tour of the SVJDC and visual inspection/demonstration of the restraint and protective equipment utilized by the facility, which, according to the DJJ, does meet certification regulations. Finally, a face-to-face interview with the alleged abuser and a review of the available video footage specific to the allegations of physical abuse found no preponderance of evidence to support a CPS finding. Verbal notification of these preliminary findings being in support of an unfounded CPS disposition was provided to the alleged abuser and the SVJDC on 07/03/2018. The final report documenting all evidence obtained and including all required, written notifications will be completed by 08/03/2018.

Introduction

An unaccompanied alien child (UAC) is defined in statute as a child who: A) has no lawful immigration status in the United States; B) has not attained 18 years of age; and C) with respect to whom (i) there is no parent or legal guardian in the United States, or (ii) no parent or legal guardian in the United States is available to provide care and physical custody.

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) each have separate responsibilities for the care, custody, and transfer of UAC. U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) apprehends and holds UAC encountered at or near the border. U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) apprehends UAC in the interior of the country, is responsible for custody transfer and repatriation activities, and represents the U.S. Government in removal proceedings before the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ). HHS' Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) is responsible for coordinating and implementing UAC care and placement responsibilities once UAC¹ are transferred to the program by DHS, as well as conducting suitability determinations to ensure safe releases of UAC to sponsors who can provide for their physical and mental well-being.

The 1997 Flores Settlement Agreement, Homeland Security Act of 2002, (6 U.S.C. § 279), and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA) (8 U.S.C. § 1232) directly impact UAC policies and procedures. Departmental guidance, policies, procedures, and interagency agreements further inform UAC operations.

Office of Inspector General (OIG) Report Background

In March 2008, the HHS Office of Inspector General (OIG) issued a report recommending that HHS and DHS establish a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) that would, "...clearly delineate the role and responsibilities of each Department" with regard to UAC operations. In written comments to the draft report, HHS' Administration for Children and Families (ACF) pointed out that ORR was drafting a Joint Operations Manual with DHS as a first step toward drafting an MOU. Due to intervening changes in statutory authority and other administrative priorities, work on a Joint Operations Manual stalled.

2016 Memorandum of Agreement

On February 19, 2016, DHS and HHS signed a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) regarding UAC. The purpose was to accomplish the following: continue addressing the needs of UAC to ensure the safe and expedited transfer and placement from DHS to HHS custody; maximize efficiency in the allocation and expenditure of respective program costs; ensure information is transmitted to facilitate appropriate placement decisions and for HHS to promptly place the child in the least restrictive setting that is in the child's best interest until the child is released to an appropriate sponsor; continue the statutorily-required consultation between the departments with respect to UAC placement determinations; protect UAC in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking; and promote effective immigration processing as well as the safe repatriation and reintegration of UAC.

Working Group Structure

The 2016 MOA called for the establishment of a working group comprised of UAC subject matter experts from both departments to address operational matters for inclusion in a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO). The working group from HHS included ORR staff from a diverse group of backgrounds including supervisory program operations staff; field components; grantee oversight; monitoring and compliance; and policy and procedures. The working group met on several occasions in late 2016 and concluded that a JCO outlining the responsibilities of DHS and HHS in the overlapping operations concerning processing, care (services), and transportation of UAC, would fulfill each responsibility required under Paragraph 4A of the 2016 MOA. The co-chairs of the working group left open the possibility of further collaboration on additional overlapping topic areas for inclusion in the JCO outline once the initial draft is published in order to further document joint efforts between the agencies or address operational issues in a cooperative manner.

2018 Memorandum of Agreement

On April 13, 2018, ORR, ICE, and CBP entered into a new Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) regarding consultation and information sharing practices between the agencies. In the 2018 MOA, ORR agreed to do the following: fingerprint all sponsors and adult members of the sponsor's household prior to the release of a UAC from ORR care and custody; transmit fingerprints/biographic information on sponsors and adult household members to DHS while a UAC is in ORR care; and to report certain situations or incidents to DHS component agencies as outlined in the MOA. DHS agreed to provide ORR certain documents at the time of initial referral necessary for ORR to make informed placement decisions; provide ORR with criminal history information or investigatory information, to the extent allowed by law, that would aid ORR in making care and placement decisions for UAC; provide ORR summary responses to fingerprint/biographic submissions, specifically immigration status information, criminal history checks of the national databases, and checks for wants and warrants. The 2016 MOA remains in effect and is not superceded by the 2018 MOA.

I. TRANSPORTATION

Transportation from DHS custody to HHS custody and determination of placement while in HHS custody, is a shared responsibility between CBP, ICE – Enforcement and Removal Operations (ICE/ERO), and HHS/ORR.

A. PLACEMENT INTO ORR CUSTODY

1. Notification

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. ORR makes the placement determinations and notifies both the Referring Agency and the facility's representative by email ("Placement Confirmation") when UAC placement has been obtained, which must occur within 72 hours of the UAC determination. See UAC MAP, sections 1.3.1-1.3.2
- ii. Upon placement confirmation from ORR, ICE/ERO is responsible for facilitating the UAC transfer from DHS custody to HHS custody. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.1; UAC MAP, section 1.3.4.
- iii. ICE/ERO is responsible for transfer to ORR care provider facilities after ORR designates placement. ICE/ERO may have local agreements in place with CBP to conduct transfers to ORR care providers.
- iv. In most areas, the ICE/ERO transportation contractor coordinates directly with CBP and HHS for operational arrangements and estimated time of arrival notices. To meet the statutorily mandated 72-hour transfer requirement the ICE/ERO transportation contractor tracks movements from the Referring Agency's time of UAC determination.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. Notification to ORR should be made as soon as possible, but no later than 48 hours after apprehension or any claim or suspicion that an alien in custody is under the age of 18.²
- ii. Notification to ICE/ERO for transportation is made immediately upon receipt of placement notification.

c. Requirements:

- i. UAC Initial Placement Referral Form: The UAC Portal should be used whenever feasible. However, in the event that the UAC Portal is not available, a placement request can be submitted by completing the UAC Initial Placement Referral Form and submitting to the ORR Intakes mailbox. A completed UAC Initial Placement Referral Form, along with any supporting documentation, should be scanned and emailed to orducs_intakes@acf.hhs.gov (with read receipt), or faxed to (202) 401-1022. If there are concerns regarding the placement request, please call ORR Intakes directly at (202) 401-5709. See UAC MAP, sections 1.3.1-1.3.2

- ii. For UAC with indicators requiring placement in a restrictive setting (e.g. secure, staff secure, or residential treatment facility), Intakes staff additionally complete the Intakes Placement Checklist and forward the placement request to an ORR FFS Supervisor for a final placement decision. The Intakes team communicates the final placement decision to DHS. See UAC MAP sections, 1.2.4; 1.3.2

2. Preparation

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. Prior to transporting, CBP and ICE are responsible for ensuring that the UAC has been processed, charging documents have been properly served as applicable, ORR shelter placement has been requested, and bed space is confirmed.
- ii. CBP is responsible for the initial medical screening. The CBP Transport, Escort, Detention, and Search (TEDS) policy states that if officers/agents suspect that a detainee has an observed or reported medical condition, such as a contagious disease, appropriate protective precautions must be taken and any required notifications be made according to the operational office's policies and procedures.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. If a UAC encountered at a land border or port of entry of the United States does not meet criteria for withdrawal of an application for admission per 8 U.S.C. §§ 1232(a)(2)(A) and (B), or if no determination can be made within 48 hours of apprehension in accordance with 8 U.S.C. § 1232(a)(4), the UAC must be transferred to ORR within 72 hours after the UAC determination.³

c. Requirements:

- i. IHSC-795J, Medical Summary (Juvenile): The UAC cannot travel without a recent medical summary, including an attached list of any medications.

³ 8 U.S.C. § 1232(a)(4).

- ii. CBP-93, UAC Screening Addendum: Utilized, as appropriate, to assess the likelihood that a UAC has been a victim of trafficking or is at risk of being trafficked, has a fear of return, and assesses the child's ability for independent decision-making.
- iii. Form I-770, Notice of Rights and Request for Disposition: DHS must provide this form to all UACs.

3. Logistics

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. ICE/ERO is required to provide appropriate numbers of escort and transportation vehicles for transporting UAC, in accordance with agency policy.
- ii. Non-Secure Staff/Shelter
 - 1. Commercial Air: The ICE/ERO UAC transportation contractor coordinates directly with HHS, and CBP as appropriate, for operational arrangements and estimated time of arrival notices. The ICE/ERO UAC transportation contractor provides unarmed escorts nationwide on long-distance commercial air services of UAC that terminates at non-secure ORR shelters.
 - 2. Ground Transport: The ICE/ERO UAC transportation contractor also provides ground transportation to local ORR shelters in some areas.
 - 3. Charter: The ICE/ERO UAC transportation contractor can coordinate charter flights for travel to New York, Chicago, Miami, and Phoenix, if approved by ICE/ERO Juvenile & Family Residential Management Unit. These cities have high concentration of ORR shelter beds.
- iii. Secured Staff Shelter
 - 1. ICE/ERO conducts transportation to ORR secure and staff-secure facilities.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

Movements are conducted expeditiously to ensure there are no TVPRA violations. In most cases, transportation occurs within 24 hours of placement confirmation.

c. Requirements:

- i. Notification to ORR through U.S. Border Patrol's (USBP) system of record (E3) or the UAC Portal includes (see UAC MAP, sections 1.1, 1.3; 2018 MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, Section IV(A)(1)):
 - 1. Basic UAC Biographical Data (name, date of birth, country of birth, potential sponsor information);
 - 2. Situational Factors (Health, Pregnancy, travel companions, etc.);

 - 3. Facility point-of-contact name and phone number.
- iii. DHS I-191: ICE/ERO generates DHS I-191, Accounting for Disclosure, for each record, or group of records disclosed to ORR.

4. Custody Transfer

- a. Responsible Agency:
 - i. ORR assumes custody upon physical arrival of UAC at the designated care provider facility. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.1.
- b. Timeframe/Deadline:
 - i. Except in the case of exceptional circumstances, any department or agency of the Federal Government that has a UAC in its custody shall transfer the custody of such child to the Secretary of Health and Human Services not later than 72 hours after determining that such child is a UAC.
- c. Requirements:
 - i. The custody-transfer packet includes (see UAC MAP, section 1.3.4; MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(A)(2)):

 10. DIHS-794, In-Processing Health Screening Form;
 11. Any medical paperwork (e.g., hospital records); and
 12. List of medications.
- ii. Although it is standard operating procedure for ICE/ERO to deliver custody transfer packets in the manner prescribed in this section, an ORR care provider cannot refuse to accept a UAC because of missing DHS-issued paperwork, without ORR's permission. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.3.3.

B. DISCHARGE FROM ORR CUSTODY

1. Notification

- a. Responsible Agency:
 - i. Release to Sponsor: ORR is responsible for notifying ICE/ERO that a UAC is being prepared for release, and again when a UAC is released. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.2; 2.8.3; UAC MAP, section 2.8.
 - ii. Age-Outs: ORR is responsible for notifying ICE/ERO that a UAC is turning 18 years old or that an age-determination has found the alien to be more than 18 years old. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP, section 1.6.

iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: ICE/ERO will notify ORR that a UAC in ORR's custody was granted Voluntary Departure or was issued a Final Order of Removal.⁴

b. Timeframe/Deadline

- i. Release to Sponsor: The ORR care provider will notify ICE/ERO at least 24 hours prior to the UAC's physical release from ORR custody. The ORR care provider will notify ICE/ERO again within 24 hours of the UAC's physical release. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.2; 2.8.3; UAC MAP section 2.8.
- ii. Age-Outs: The ORR care provider and/or ORR/Federal Field Specialists (FFS) notify ICE/ERO that the child will be turning 18 years old approximately 30 days before the UAC's 18th birthday, and again 24-hours prior to the UAC's 18th birthday. In the case of an age redetermination, ORR will notify ICE/ERO within three (3) calendar days from when ORR reasonably suspects that an individual in ORR's custody is over 18 years old. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP, section 1.6.
- iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: ICE/ERO will notify ORR and the ORR care provider within three (3) business days of a grant of Voluntary Departure or the entry of a Final Order of Removal issued for a UAC in ORR custody.

c. Requirements:

- i. Release to Sponsor: The ORR care provider provides a Discharge Notification to ICE/ERO with the UAC's biographical information, the name of the UAC's sponsor, the relationship to the sponsor, and the sponsor's address. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.3; UAC MAP, section 2.8.
- ii. Age-Outs: The ORR care provider and/or ORR/FFS will notify the ICE/ERO ICE/ERO Juvenile Coordinator via email of the pending Age-Out. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP, section 1.6.
- iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: ICE/ERO transmits copies of the Immigration Judge's order to the ORR care provider and ORR/FFS. ICE/ERO is responsible for obtaining necessary travel documents from the consulate of the UAC's country of origin.

2. Preparation

⁴ It is likely that a UAC's attorney will notify ORR and the child ORR care provider prior to the ICE/ERO notification of the immigration case outcome. However, ICE, as the prosecuting office, will be in the best position to notify ORR in all cases.

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. Release to Sponsor: ORR is responsible for preparing the UAC for transport to a sponsor, with assistance from the sponsor as required. ORR, working with the ORR care provider, will follow all ORR policies regarding adult escorts to ensure UAC arrive safely to a point of release with the UAC's sponsor. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.2.
- ii. Age-Outs:
 - 1. Post-18/Release on Own Recognizance (ROR), and all other cases: Attorney and/or ORR/FFS may work with ICE/ERO Field Office Juvenile Coordinator (FOJC) to determine whether a UAC approaching 18 years old may be OREC thereafter. Once the DHS/ICE FOJC has made a decision they will notify the UAC's ORR care provider, attorney, and the ORR/FFS that the UAC may be directly released from the ORR. See ORR Policy Guide, section 3.3.2.
 - 2. Age Determinations/Transfers to DHS custody: For cases where an alien was determined through joint HHS-DHS policies to be over 18 years old or for UAC approaching 18 who are not ROR cases, the ORR care provider will notify the individual and attorney or ORR funded local-legal service provider that the individual is being prepared for transfer to ICE/ERO. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP, section 1.6; TVPRA, 8 U.S.C. § 1232(c)(2)(B).
- iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal:
 - 1. The ORR care provider requests that the ORR funded local-legal service provider screen the UAC for immigration relief if the UAC has no legal relief options and no available sponsor and/or the UAC requests an expedited hearing or other hearing before an immigration judge. See ORR Program Guidance, Notice to Appear Changes (July 3, 2014).
 - 2. ICE/ERO has responsibility to notify the local consulate of a pending Voluntary Departure or Final Order of Removal in order to obtain travel documents. DHS and ORR will closely coordinate preparations between each respective agency, the UAC, and the consulate, as required.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. Release to Sponsor: ORR care providers are expected to physically release the UAC within three (3) calendar days of an ORR/FFS approving the release, absent exigent circumstances. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.2.
- ii. Age-Outs:

1. Post-18/ROR: ORR care provider submits a Post-18 Plan to ICE/ERO FOJC two (2) weeks prior to UAC's 18th birthday, if applicable. See ORR Policy Guide, section 3.3.2.
2. Age Determinations: ORR provides the results of an age re-determination, including relevant evidence to ICE/ERO FOJC within three (3) business days of receiving results. ORR and ORR care provider will follow existing policies to prepare UAC for transfer to ICE/ERO within 30 days of turning 18 years old. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP, section 1.6.
3. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: Timing for scheduling of expedited hearings is dependent on local immigration court rules, and current joint-EOIR, DHS, and ORR procedures.

c. Requirements:

- i. Release to Sponsor: ORR care providers ensure UAC is prepared for travel; an escort is arranged, if applicable; DHS has been notified of the pending release; and, the sponsor and UAC's family have received notification of the pending release. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.2; UAC MAP, section 2.8.
- ii. Age-Outs:
 1. Post-18/ROR: ORR care provider submits the Post-18 Plan to the ORR and the ICE/ERO FOJC for comment. UAC MAP section 3 - PENDING
 2. Age Determinations: ORR provides the results of an age re-determination, including relevant evidence to ICE/ERO FOJC within 3 business days of receiving results. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP, section 1.6.
 3. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: DHS provides notice to consulates. DHS is responsible for obtaining travel documents from consulate.

5. Logistics

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. Release to Sponsor: ORR coordinates transportation and logistics directly with sponsor according to ORR's policies and procedures. See ORR Policy Guide, sections 2.8.2; 2.8.3; UAC MAP, section 2.8.
- ii. Age-Outs:

1. Post-18/ROR: Logistics for release are contained in the individual Post-18 Plan, agreed to in advance of the UAC turning 18 years old. UAC MAP section 3 - PENDING.
2. Age Determinations: If an age re-determination indicates the UAC is over age 18, ORR will coordinate with the ICE/ERO FOJC to pick-up the alien for transfer into DHS custody, or other plans as requested. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6; UAC MAP section 1.6.
3. All other cases: The ICE/ERO FOJC coordinates transportation for the UAC with the ORR care provider. Transport will occur on the day the alien turns 18 years old. See UAC MAP, section 1.6.

iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal:

1. Upon request from a consulate and approval from ORR, the ORR care provider shares relevant contact and background information on a UAC's family in their country of origin. ORR Policy Guide, sections 5.4.6, 5.4.7.
2. Once the consulate informs DHS that travel documents have been approved and the UAC's family is contacted in the country of origin, DHS makes transportation arrangements for the UAC's repatriation to his or her country of origin. DHS informs the ORR care provider of the repatriation and coordinates with the provider the date and time ICE/ERO will arrive at the facility to transport the UAC for repatriation.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. Release to Sponsor: The ORR care providers are expected to physically release UAC within three (3) calendar days of an ORR/FFS approving the release, absent exigent circumstances. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.2; UAC MAP, section 2.8.
- ii. Age-Outs: Logistics for age out cases should be completed at least three (3) calendar days prior to the UAC turning 18 years old, but in no event less than 24-hours prior to the UAC's 18th birthday. UAC MAP, section 1.6.2.
- iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: Repatriation of UAC will occur between 5 to 15 days of receiving travel documents from the consulate.

c. Requirements:

- i. Release to Sponsor: Requirements follow ORR's general policies for release to a sponsor are found in the ORR Policy Guide, Section 2. ORR provides a copy of the appropriate Discharge Notification to the local ICE/ERO FOJC and to the Immigration Court with jurisdiction over the UAC's case. The discharge notification form should include:

1. Date of Discharge
2. UAC Name
3. UAC A#
4. UAC Date of Birth
5. UAC Country of Birth
6. Sponsor's Name
7. Relationship to Sponsor
8. Sponsor's Address (verify the validity of the address given by using the U.S. Postal Service webpage).
9. Sponsor's Telephone Number

ii. Age-Outs:

1. Post-18/ROR: Post-18 Plan; Birth certificate, copy of ICE/ERO email confirming ROR. UAC MAP section 3 – PENDING.
2. Age Determinations: Copy of documents used to verify age, including but not limited to (see ORR Policy Guide, section 1.6.2):
 - i) Official government-issued documents, including birth certificates. If the UAC in question is not in possession of original documentation, or if the authenticity of the original documentation is in question, government officials of the UAC's home country must be consulted in order to verify the validity of the documentation, in accordance with applicable privacy rights (e.g., protection of asylum seekers).
 - ii) Other reliable records (e.g., baptismal certificates, school records, medical records) that indicate the UAC's date of birth.
 - iii) Statements provided by the UAC regarding his or her age or birth date.
Note: A UAC's uncorroborated declaration regarding age is not used as the sole basis for an age determination.
 - iv) Statements from the UAC's parent(s) or legal guardian(s), if such persons can be identified and contacted.
 - v) Statements from other persons.
 - vi) Information from another government agencies (Federal, State, local or foreign).
 - vii) State/local arrest records.
 - viii) Child welfare agency records.
 - ix) Medical records, including copies of documents used to make a medical age assessment. In accordance with 8 U.S.C. §1232(b)(4), neither DHS nor HHS relies exclusively on radiographs to determine age.

3. All other cases: ICE/ERO provides order confirming UAC to be remanded into DHS custody.
- iii. Voluntary Departure/Final Orders of Removal: ICE/ERO FOJC notifies ORR and the ORR care provider of the imminent transfer of custody, and to prepare the UAC for travel. ORR care provider will ensure all needed legal documents are maintained and collected for copy into the UAC case file.
1. If an Immigration Judge orders a UAC removed from the United States or grants voluntary departure, DHS arranges for the UAC's safe return to his or her country of origin or last habitual residence according to applicable policies and procedures.
 2. DHS recognizes that UAC are particularly vulnerable population and must be repatriated with special consideration and care. To safeguard the welfare of all UACs, DHS Components follow established policies⁵ whenever repatriating UAC through the following actions:
 - i) Repatriate during only daylight hours;
 - ii) Ensure receiving government official or designee signs for custody to record the transfer;
 - iii) Repatriate the UAC at a designated port of entry;
 - iv) Provide the UAC an opportunity to communicate with a consular official prior to departure; and
 - v) Preserve the unity of families during repatriation (for repatriation to Mexico, doubts of kinship should be coordinated with the Consulate of Mexico to safeguard the UAC's well-being).
 3. The majority of UAC repatriations conducted by ICE/ERO occur via commercial air. ICE/ERO provides two escort officers for each UAC. An additional officer is added for each group that exceeds five UACs. Instances where both male and female children are being transported require an escorting officer of each gender.

⁵ Note that current DHS policies regarding repatriation of UAC from non-contiguous countries go beyond what is statutorily required in 8 U.S.C. §USC 1232(a)(2)(C).

II. PROCESSING

DHS and HHS collaborate and coordinate the processing of all UAC. In so doing, the agencies comply with 6 U.S.C. § 279 and all agency internal policies, procedures, and guidance to ensure that UAC are treated with dignity and respect and with special concern for their vulnerability as UAC. The agencies also adhere to the TVPRA. All UAC are processed expeditiously and are given priority over other aliens in custody in order to move them swiftly to HHS/ORR placement.

Immediately after a minor is apprehended, one of the first tasks of the apprehending DHS component is to determine age, identity, and immigration status. As age and identity are determined, the apprehending DHS component creates an Alien File (either a permanent “A-file” or a temporary “T-file”), according to departmental guidelines prior to transfer of the UAC to ORR. The A-file or T-file must generally contain, at a minimum, the original Form I-862 Notice to Appear (NTA), with signature and service on the alien (if the UAC is above 14 years of age), plus three copies, and any documentary evidence. If the UAC is below 14 years of age, then the certificate of service on the NTA will be served upon HHS/ORR when the custody of the UAC is transferred. The ICE/ERO FOJC provides instructions to the apprehending agency for delivery of the A-file or T-file to ICE/ERO.

A. Immigration Process Matters

1. Issuing NTAs to UAC (under 14; 14 and over)

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. Upon encountering a potential UAC, the relevant agency must identify the age, identity, and immigration status of the minor. If the UAC is determined to be 14 years of age or older, an officer of the apprehending agency may take fingerprints of the UAC and initiate a search in the IDENT system to verify identity and determine if there have been any prior DHS apprehensions. The officer or agent will also initiate a criminal record check to establish if the UAC has had any previous criminal history.
- ii. NTAs can only be signed by UAC 14 years of age and older, and must be left blank for UAC under 14 years of age.
- iii. For UAC under 14 years of age, the NTA must be personally served on the “conservator.” In most cases, the conservator will be an ORR care provider facility employee. ICE/ERO FOJC is responsible for visiting the ORR facility to personally serve the conservator, ensuring that the conservator legibly signs the NTA and prints his or her name and title beneath the signature. This requirement will ensure that ICE/ERO can demonstrate proper service of the NTA to the immigration court.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. UAC that are 14 years of age and older will be issued NTA prior to transfer to the custody of ORR.
- ii. When CBP issues an NTA to a UAC under 14 years of age, it may be necessary to delay service of the NTA until custody can be transferred to ORR. ORR should sign the NTA and other legal documentation and receive all copies of legal documentation on behalf of the UAC.
- c. Requirements: Refer to JCO Section I(A)(4)(c)(i) for relevant documents provided in the DHS Transfer Packet. See also UAC MAP, section 1.3.4; 2018? MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(A)(2).

2. Filing NTAs (special procedures)

- a. Responsible Agency:
 - i. Generally, CBP initiates the vast majority of removal proceedings for UAC.
 - ii. ICE/ERO also encounters UAC during interior enforcement operations, initiates removal proceedings, maintains and performs general UAC case management, and resolves any issues with the A-File and NTA to ensure proper service and to file the NTA with the DOJ's EOIR.
- b. Timeframe/Deadline:
 - i. The NTA is filed (i) 60 days after the UAC's apprehension (a UAC in an ORR care provider facility); (ii) upon notice by ORR to file the NTA while the UAC is in an ORR care provider facility; or (iii) upon notice provided in the ORR Discharge Notification form that a UAC was released to a sponsor (in the jurisdiction of the UAC located at sponsor's address). See ORR Program Guidance, Notice to Appear Changes (July 3, 2014).
- c. Requirements:
 - i. ICE/ERO requires a properly served NTA to file with EOIR in order to initiate immigration proceedings.

3. Information Requests between HHS and DHS

- a. Responsible Agency:
 - i. ORR:

1. Case File Information: ORR is responsible for processing DHS requests, as applicable, for information on all UAC in ORR custody and for information contained in UAC case files. See Requests for UAC Case File Information (September 23, 2013).
2. Unauthorized Absence notices: In the event that a UAC absconds from ORR custody, ORR is responsible for notifying the local ICE/ERO FOJC with jurisdiction over the case. ORR will immediately notify local law enforcement agencies. See ORR Policy Guide, section 5.8.1.
3. Allegations of Abuse in DHS custody:
 - i) For an allegation of sexual abuse that occurred while the UAC was in DHS custody, the ORR care providers must report the allegation to the DHS Office of Civil Rights and Civil Liberties (CRCL), CBP, and ICE. See ORR Policy Guide, section 5.8.4.
 - ii) If a UAC makes an allegation of abuse, other than sexual abuse, that occurred while he or she was in the custody of DHS, ORR care providers must report the incident to DHS by emailing a copy of the significant incident report (SIR) to CRCL. See ORR Policy Guide, section 5.8.4.
4. Death of a UAC in ORR custody: ORR reports deaths of UAC in ORR custody to the ICE/ERO FOJC with jurisdiction over the case. See ORR Policy Guide, section 5.8.1.
5. Arrest of a UAC in ORR custody: The ORR funded care provider contacts the DHS/ICE FOJC with jurisdiction over the case by telephone and provides notice by email. See MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(B)(1).
6. Alleged or suspected fraud, human smuggling, human trafficking, drug trafficking, weapons trafficking, or gang-related activity. ORR notifies the ICE Homeland Security Investigations Tip Line by email and, for human trafficking specifically (either by or of a UAC), ORR also emails the ICE Human Trafficking Help Desk. See MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(B)(1).
7. Violence by a UAC while in ORR care. ORR notifies the ICE/ERO FOJC of incidents of physical violence or assault by a UAC in its care, including incidents between a UAC and facility staff. See MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(B)(1).

8. Change in level of care. ORR provides notice by email to the ICE/ERO FOJC of any step up/step down to or from secure care for the UAC. See MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(B)(1).

ii. DHS

1. If ICE or CBP becomes aware of any criminal information (e.g., information regarding gang affiliation) that it did not have at the time of initial referral and transfer, ICE or CBP will notify ORR as expeditiously as practicable, and as a matter of general practice, within 48 hours after becoming aware of the information. This includes providing supporting documentation to aid in ORR's consideration of whether transfer of the UAC may be necessary.
2. To the extent permitted by law, and consistent with policy, ICE or CBP will report to ORR the results of any investigations (including investigations commenced following ORR's notification under Section IV(B)(1) of 2018 MOA ORR-ICE-CBP) they conduct that would be relevant to ORR's determinations concerning UAC care and placement. Such information will be provided as expeditiously as possible, and ideally within 96 hours of such information becoming available.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

i. ORR:

1. Case File Information: DHS requests for UAC case file information are triaged and responded to, as soon as possible, according to the nature of the request and any exigent circumstances regarding the request. See Requests for UAC Case File Information (September 23, 2013).
2. While UAC are in ORR care, ORR will notify ICE or CBP of incidents identified in section (3)(a)(i)(1)-(8) as expeditiously as possible, but no later than 48 hours after discovery of the incident. See MOA ORR-ICE-CBP, section IV(B)(1).

c. Requirements:

i. ORR:

1. Case File Information: Request for UAC case file information will follow ORR's policies regarding the disclosure of confidential information to government agencies.⁶ Additionally, the requesting party must file an

⁶ See Requests for UAC Case File Information.

*Authorization for Release of Records.*⁷ ORR may redact information as required to protect the privacy or confidentiality of non-subjects to the request. ORR does not typically share psychiatric or psychological records absent a court-issued subpoena for those records. See Requests for UAC Case File Information (September 23, 2013).

2. ORR follows reporting requirements as outlined in the 2018 ORR-ICE-CBP MOA as described in (a)(i)(3) and (b)(i)(2) above.

4. Change of Address/Change of Venue Notices

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. ORR is responsible for the filing of applicable Change of Address (COA) and Change of Venue Notices (COV), for UAC transferring placement between ORR care provider facilities (including Long Term Foster Care providers). The UAC's sponsor is responsible for COA/COV notices for the UAC once the UAC is released. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.4.2; UAC MAP, section 1.4.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. Transfers: The ORR care provider case manager at the referring ORR care provider completes copies of the immigration court COA/COV documents and the Notice of Transfer to the ICE Chief Counsel Change of Address/Change of Venue. UAC MAP, section 1.4.
- ii. Releases: The ORR care provider facility provides the sponsor with the local immigration court's change of address/change of venue information, if the UAC's NTA has already been filed with the immigration court. See UAC MAP, section 1.4.

c. Requirements:

- i. Transfers: Copies of COA/COV and the UAC's NTA are sent to the receiving jurisdiction's immigration court and emailed or mailed to the local ICE/ERO FOJC and the local ORR-funded Legal Service Provider (LSP). See UAC MAP, section 1.4.

⁷ The Authorization for Release of Records, normally requires the consent of the UAC prior to release of their records in most instances. ORR has an exception to this requirement for other government agencies requesting UAC case files. ORR will examine the nature of the request, including the reasons for the requested information, and make a determination on a case-by-case basis on what information to release, if any, to DHS. Typically, a UAC's health information is not disclosed, nor is a sponsor's home study or post-release service information unless relevant to the DHS request.

- ii. Releases: Prior to the physical release to a sponsor, the ORR care provider case manager will ensure the UAC (as appropriate) and sponsor are educated on the COA/COV process and informed on how to file for and verify that COA and COV has been completed. See ORR Policy Guide, section 2.8.1; UAC MAP, section 2.8.

B. Referral & Placement Process

1. Notification of Referral (referral to ORR)

a. Responsible Agency:

- i. The apprehending DHS agency is responsible for the notification to ORR of a UAC requiring placement. See ORR Policy Guide, section 1.1.

b. Timeframe/Deadline:

- i. The referring DHS component will notify ORR, once the referring agency or apprehending agency has identified a minor as a UAC or with any claim or suspicion that an alien in their custody is under 18 years of age. Notifications will be made as soon as possible, but not to exceed 48 hours after the UAC determination.

c. Requirements:

- i. Once a UAC has been identified, a request for ORR placement must be submitted via ORR's UAC Portal. Generally, it is the apprehending agency's responsibility to refer the child to ORR via the UAC Portal. USBP has developed an electronic process whereby information entered into its system of record (E3) is automatically transferred into ORR's UAC Portal. All ICE/ERO FOJCs should have access to the UAC Portal. See UAC MAP, section 1.3. In the event a child is separated from a parent or other related adult USBP or ICE will enter this information into the UAC Portal.
- ii. In the event that the UAC Portal is not available, a placement can be requested by completing the UAC Initial Placement Referral Form and submitting to the ORR intake mailbox at Orrducs_Intakes@acf.hhs.gov. See UAC MAP, section 1.3.
- iii. The referring agency will complete the UAC Initial Placement Referral Form in its entirety, including as much detail as possible. The referring agency should review and verify all information to ensure accuracy of UAC medical information (where possible), UAC's criminal records (if applicable), sibling or other family with whom the UAC was traveling. Contact information for parents, legal guardians, or adult relatives should also be included, as this information can assist in ORR's reunification process. Medical conditions and criminal history must be disclosed if known, to allow ORR to place each UAC in a facility that is equipped to handle that UAC's specific needs. See UAC MAP, sections 1.3, 1.3.2.

2. Placement Process

- a. Responsible Agency:

Medical clearance, including screening, evaluation, and treatment, is a major component of the processing, movement, and release of UAC. UAC are typically in good health; however, some may have communicable diseases, significant behavioral or mental health issues, access and functional needs, or acute/chronic medical conditions. Likewise, many UAC come into Federal custody with experiences of trauma, including cases of victimization, sexual assault, and human trafficking. Some are pregnant.

UAC services in DHS and HHS custody are based upon the minimum standards of Exhibit 1 and Paragraph 12 of the Flores Settlement Agreement, as applicable.

A. SERVICE REQUIREMENTS

- a. Responsible Agency:
 - i. ICE/ERO conducts a pre-transport screening to evaluate UAC for febrile respiratory disease and visible signs of potential communicable diseases prior to transfer from CBP to an ORR shelter in accordance with the Pre-Transport Screening Protocol. UAC diagnosed with fever, cough, sore throat, or visible signs of potential communicable diseases will not be cleared for transfer via commercial flight. Febrile UAC, or those visually presenting with symptoms mentioned, will be re-submitted to HHS/ORR for re-designation to local ORR shelters.
 - ii. While in CBP custody, in accordance with the CBP National Standards on TEDS Policy, CBP Officers and Agents must be alert to medical symptoms such as coughing, fever, diarrhea, rashes or emaciation, in addition to obvious wounds, injuries, cuts, bruising or bleeding, heat related injury or illness, and dehydration. Any observed or reported injury or illness must be reported, and appropriate medical care must be provided or sought in a timely manner. TEDS also requires CBP to be alert to physical, mental, or developmental disabilities that may require particular care or oversight.

For other medical incidents, such as admittance to a hospital for less serious events, telephonic notification is not required, but the incident must be reported through an Executive Summary and Significant Event Notification (SEN) application within 24 hours. ICE/ERO should notify ORR once the UAC is released from the hospital or emergency care facility.

ii. While in CBP custody, CBP assumes the responsibility to provide appropriate medical care for all UACs. Once the UAC is cleared for travel by a competent medical professional, CBP will request placement from ORR via the UAC Portal, to which all medically relevant information is relayed.

c. Requirements:

Conclusion

Cooperation between DHS and HHS regarding the transport, processing, placing, and care of UAC is essential. Both departments take their roles seriously and work closely with interagency and foreign counterparts on a daily basis to ensure the humane treatment of UAC while simultaneously enforcing the laws Congress has passed.

The JCO provides field guidance and standardization of interagency policies, procedures, and guidelines related to the processing of UAC encountered by DHS, whose care will be transferred to HHS, after being placed in removal proceedings pursuant to section 240 of the INA. The process for returning UACs to a contiguous country (i.e., Canada or Mexico) through withdrawal of an application for admission will be in accordance with the TVPRA.

This document does not take the place of agency policy regarding the processing of UAC nor is it a substitute for legislative action, where required; rather it is an interagency agreement to standardize agency operational relations. The JCO will prove helpful in many situations, but it is not intended to be all-inclusive or to provide comprehensive guidance for every situation. If field staff members have a question that is not addressed here, they shall elevate the issue through their respective chain of command.

The JCO will be made available to all applicable staff within each department, as appropriate. Updates, amendments, and expansions will occur as needed with agreement from both departments. Suggestions for changes and additions are to be referred to each department's respective chain of command for consideration; however, all additions or alterations must be submitted to and approved by headquarters-level policy and counsel offices.

Nothing in this document shall be construed to impair or otherwise affect the authority granted by law to an executive department or agency and to the extent this JCO contradicts any existing statute or regulation, the conflict should be resolved in favor of the statute or regulation. This document is not intended to, and does not, create any right or benefit, substantive or procedural, enforceable at law or in equity by any party against the United States, its departments, agencies, or entities, its officers, employees, or agents, or any other person.

ADMINISTRATION FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES

Case No. 15-0149

July 14, 2017

William Marshall
Judicial Watch
425 Third Street SW, Suite 800

Dear Mr. Marshall:

This is an interim response to your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for Significant Incident Reports (SIRs) from May 1, 2014 through November 12, 2014, and associated summary reports. We are attaching responsive summary reports and look forward to further discussion about whether these materials can satisfy your request.

I have determined to withhold information under the FOIA exemption (b)(6), which protects information about individuals when disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. In this case, the withheld information consists of personally identifiable information of unaccompanied children and associated private individuals and employees of the grantees. In withholding the information, each individual's privacy interest was balanced against any public interest in disclosure. In each instance where information was withheld, I determined that the individual's privacy interests in safeguarding their personal information from abuse, fraud and theft outweighed any public interest in disclosure of the withheld information and that disclosure of the withheld information would reveal very little or nothing about the operations or activities of HHS, or any component thereof.

If you believe that the information withheld should not be exempt from disclosure, or this response constitutes an adverse determination, you may appeal. By filing an appeal, you preserve your rights under FOIA and give the agency a chance to review and reconsider your request and the agency's decision. Your appeal must be electronically transmitted to FOIARequest@hhs.gov or mailed within 90 days from the date of receipt of this letter, to:

Ms. Catherine Teti
Deputy Agency Chief FOIA Officer
U.S. Department of Health and Human Services
Office of the Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs
Room 729H
200 Independence Avenue, S.W.
Washington, DC 20201

Please clearly mark both the envelope and your letter "Freedom of Information Act Appeal."

During the course of initial assessment, minor disclosed a significant history of verbal and physical abuse, as well as forced labor by grandmother. Minor indicates that she has lived in the care of her grandmother since her mother immigrated to the United States approximately 10 years ago, and that her grandmother has hit her and verbally abused her that entire time. Minor indicates that her grandmother would hit her with her fists and any objects lying around such as belts, sticks, flat sides of knives, cooking spoons, etc. Minor recounts one instance when her grandmother struck her repeatedly in the face, resulting in black eyes and a bloody nose. Minor indicates that her grandmother would sometimes strike her in front of other workers at the tortilla plant or in front of family members, and would publicly belittle her. Minor also discloses that her grandmother would refuse to pay for minor's personal expenses, such as necessary clothes or school supplies, and when mother would send money from the US to fund minor, minor felt that she had to hide the money from her grandmother or else she would take it away. Minor has indicated that she was forced to work as "compensation" for her grandmother's care, and would often work 19 hour days without pay. Minor indicates that grandmother would also verbally and physically abuse minor's 15 year old sister, but that minor would attempt to deflect that abuse by taking it on herself. Minor denies that grandmother abused minor's cousin, whom grandmother preferred and doted upon.

Client disclosed to clinician that his teacher appropriately touched him and behaved inappropriately with him while client was Phoenix Children's Hospital and for some time while in shelter. messages. For example, client reports that she would draw pictures of hearts with a key and would tell him that he had "the key to her heart". Client did not further elaborate on the content of the letters as he stated he felt uncomfortable repeating it. Client stated he would destroy all the letters as he did not want to keep them. Client also shares that Mrs. [redacted] has told him that she would like to reconnect with him after he leaves the shelter and also asked for client's Facebook name to be able to find him, in which client refused by lying that he did not have an account. Additionally, client states that during [redacted] visitation, whether a youth care worker (YCW) was present or not, she inappropriately touched him. Client reports that on approximately 5 different occasions, [redacted] came to visit and sat toward the end of the bed where client was laying (while YCW was present – but not looking) and reports that she would slide her hand under the covers and inside the leg pant and would begin to "seductively" (word client used to describe the touch) massage his leg. Client states he found himself moving his legs away from her body but she continued to touch him. Client denied his genital area being touched. Additionally, client also shares that she "always" grabs his hand and begins to massage it all the way to his shoulder. On Sunday April 20th, client reported that [redacted] visited him. Client states that when she walked in, he was sitting on a couch with a blanket over him. Client states that [redacted] sat next to him and said she was cold and pulled his blanket over her body until both were sharing the same blanket. Client states he felt uncomfortable sharing the same blanket so he pulled it back to him and walked to his bed while [redacted] stayed on the couch and continued conversation. While lying in bed, he states to have looked over at [redacted] who was sitting on the couch and client states [redacted] had her legs fully spread apart (while wearing a dress) and claims to have been exposing her genital area. Client states he was shocked and looked away. Client reports that she kept talking but he did not want to look at her because he could see through the corner of his eye that she was not closing her legs. Client states that an YCW was present but was facing client therefore unable to see [redacted] behavior. On Monday April 21st client states he noticed [redacted] chewing gum and asked her if she had another piece - she answered that she did not. Client states she then told him she could give him the piece she was chewing. Client reports she placed the piece of gum on the tip of her tongue and leaned over about an inch away from his face while her hand was placed on his neck. Client states he turned his face as he thought that she would kiss him and told her "No, I don't want it, it's full of germs". On another occasion, client states that [redacted] was ending her visitation and decided to give him a hug before leaving. Client states that she gave him a tight hug and sucked on his neck. Client explained that it was not a "hickey" or a "kiss" - he specifically reports it being a "suction made with her lips" on the left side of his neck. Client tried to avoid [redacted] by pretending to be asleep. He would also try to change conversation when comments she made were inappropriate, and pretended to be in pain so the visitation would terminate. Finally, client mentioned that while in class, [redacted] ended to give him much attention and would want to sit next to him during lunch time. While sitting in lunch or in class, he states that [redacted] would constantly rub her leg against his. Also, while in class, he states he would receive letters from her on a daily basis with "compromising" content. YCW in place was immediately instructed not to leave client unattended or unsupervised during visitations.

Summary of SIR:

Client reported to clinician that during her journey from El Salvador to Mexico, her guide left her in a warehouse in Mexico with his boss, a 'narco,' and a group of other guides. Client reports this occurred about 1 month ago and that she was in the warehouse for a week and half. Client does not know why she was left there and asked to continue with her group, but her guide said that she had to say. Client stated the warehouse was used a location for guides and narcos to drink, smoke, and meet with the boss. While client was there, she was not given food or phone calls and was unable to sleep due to being afraid. Twice she went to the nearby river used for crossing immigrants and was told to observe so she could someday be a guide. When client was not at the river, she spent her time inside crying or hitting her head against a wall hoping to kill herself. Client reported that her guide's boss came into the warehouse often and while he was there he kissed her, groped/bit her chest, or pinched her legs. Client has several small bruises on her legs that are still visible and showed them to clinician. Client stated the guide's boss also put a gun to her head and told her to stop crying or that he would kill her. Client reported they also threatened to kill her entire family, but denied that they knew any information about her family in El Salvador. One day, her guide's boss came to the warehouse and had two men hold her hands back while he raped her. Client states she was raped three times that day by the guide's boss and was told that she was his 'mujer' (woman). Client stated the guide's boss is the only one who touched/raped her. After a week and half in the warehouse, client was told that she could leave. Client crossed the river alone and shortly after, an immigration helicopter apprehended her and took her to an immigration holding facility. Client was noted to be tearful and sad when she recounted the story. Client said that when she is left alone, she starts feeling afraid and thinking of the man who raped her and wants to kill herself so she can be with God. Client said that if she wanted to kill herself, she could use any available object to asphyxiate herself. Client denies any current intent to kill herself because she is not alone and feels supported and safe in the shelter environment. Client reports one previous suicide attempt 1 year ago; client took a blade and cut her wrist due to being bullied in her school. Client reports severe sleep disturbances, stating that she is unable to sleep because she thinks of the man who raped her or that when she does fall asleep, she has nightmares about what happened in the warehouse. Client reports appetite disturbances and states that last night was the first time she ate in almost 2 weeks. Client finished half of her breakfast on 6/14/14 while speaking with clinician and finished most of her lunch on 6/14/14 while speaking with clinician. Client reports having 'atackes de nervios' (anxiety attacks) as well, with the last attack occurring last night in the shelter. Client describes these attacks as several minutes when she cannot breathe, begins shaking, sweating, crying, feels dizzy, and is unable to think straight. Client reports she had these attacks several times a day while in the warehouse and also while in immigration. Client denies having any anxiety attacks today, 6/14/14. Client states she also experienced flashbacks while in the immigration facility and thought that she was back in the warehouse with the narcos/guides. Client denies experiencing any flashbacks today, 6/14/14. Client reports a generalized fear of all men right now but denies being afraid of any particular male in the shelter.

Minor reported that he was then forced to work for the " [redacted] under a man named [redacted] who worked under [redacted].

Minor reports that these people forced him to smuggle drugs across the border against his will for about two years. He reports that he lived on the streets during this time, but that they always had a close eye on him and did not allow him to leave the area and he was afraid to go to another area and be picked up by another cartel. He stated that sometimes his boss, [redacted] "gave him money to be able to feed himself, but he was not paid a regular salary for this work.

Minor reports that on his trips across the border he would try to surrender himself to border officials and was arrested a total of 16 times. He stated that he would be sent back across the bridge to [redacted] and that there a member of the cartel would be waiting for him and would alert his boss to pick him up. He stated that the cartel would pay the DIF guards to get their workers back. Minor reported that he felt that he had no way out this situation. He stated that he was beaten when he did not do his job well or when the other smugglers reported to the boss that [redacted] had turned himself in to immigration officials. He was told by the cartel that he owes them money because he lost drugs when he was smuggling for them and that because of information he gave to immigration officials about one of their sites which caused them to lose money. He does not know how much he supposedly owes them. He stated that during this time he had no contact with his family because his mother's friend, [redacted] had told him that the number changed and that she did not have the contact number. He also stated that he never wanted to tell the cartel that he had any family because he knew that other minor's families were threatened so that the minors would continue working. Minor always told the cartel members that he was abandoned and that he had no family, in order to protect his family. Minor reports having been abused by these people in the following ways: They tied him up on various occasions for up to a week at a time. They hit him, pushed him down and broke his tooth, and beat him on multiple occasions which left him swollen, bruised and scarred on his backside. Minor reported that he didn't go to the hospital after his beatings even though he was badly hurt because there are cartels informants working there. He reported that he simply sat in a bathtub of cold water to feel better. He reported that his last beating of this type was about two months ago (April 2014) in which he received 40 hits on the back side by a large wooden boat paddle with holes in it so that they could swing it faster and harder. Minor was seen by doctor at Madison School Based Health Center on 6/9/14 and it was found that minor does have bruising and scars on his backside. He stated that at one point the cartel locked him up in a house where people stayed while waiting to cross the border and made him clean the house and wash clothes. Minor appeared very anxious and was emotional. He had some trouble answering questions due to being pressured and anxious, but was cooperative and expressed gratitude for being listened to. He reports being unsure who he can trust, but desperate for help. Minor reports that while enslaved by the cartel he thought of drinking bleach that he used to clean the house where they had him, but did not because he had a dream that told him not to give up and he did not want to hurt his family. He denies any current suicidal ideas, plans or intentions. Minor reports that while still in Mexico that he had some dreams about being beaten again by the cartel and that he felt like it was happening again and he could not protect himself. Summary of SIR:

CM met with UAC and disclosed that she was abused by her caretakers in home country (a church pastor and his wife) up until the time she traveled to the US. UAC and her brother went to live with the pastor's family because her grandmother became unable to take care of them and their uncles were not interested in caring for them any longer. There was a monetary agreement between the UAC's parents and the pastors; the pastor would care for the UACs and pay them to work if the parents paid 1400.00 to the pastor monthly. She stated that at first, the pastor treated her and her brother well but slowly began to become angry at the UACs and would start to hit them hard with his hand and with a belt. She also states that both she and her brother were working (her brother was working on the farm owned by the pastor and she was mainly working in the home cooking and cleaning), but they were not receiving any money. If they refused to work or were late for work, they would be scolded and beaten. She states that the pastor and his wife also abused their own children as well. UAC reports that the worst abuse occurred when the pastor hit her brother's arm so hard 4 times that he broke it, and was taken to the hospital for treatment. UACs both fear the pastor and his wife and fear having to return to their home country.

In the context of a clinical session the minor disclosed additional information about encounters with gangs in home country that are indicative of possible trafficking concerns. The minor stated she was forced to do work for the local MS gang in her community. When she was 13 or 14 years old the gang members from around her community began telling her to help them and threatened that if she did not they would kill her and her family. She complied so that no harm would come to her family. They would make her keep watch or be a "vigilante" and she would have to notify them if she saw police coming by making hand signs. The minor states they made her do this several times, perhaps about 15 times. She also disclosed that two of them would touch her inappropriately and one of them, multiple times, made her touch him with her hands in their genital area. They made her pay for their cell phone to be recharged with minutes with her own money multiple times. She began getting away from them by trying to avoid them by only going outside her home when it was necessary and walking with someone like her mother when she was out so that they would not bother her. She states the last time they forced her to do anything was about mid-2013. She expressed she was afraid to report this before for fearing they would harm her or her family.

The minor stated she was forced to do work for the local gang in her community. When she was 13 or 14 years old the gang members from around her community began telling her to help them and threatened that if she did not they would kill her and her family. She complied so that no harm would come to her, or her family. They would make her keep watch or be a "vigilante" and she would have to notify them if she saw police coming by making hand signs. The minor states they made her do this several times, perhaps about 15 times. She also disclosed that two of them would touch her inappropriately and one of them, multiple times, made her touch him with her hands in their genital area. They made her pay for their cell phone to be recharged with minutes with her own money multiple times. She began getting away from them by trying to avoid them by only going outside her home when it was necessary and walking with someone like her mother when she was out so that they would not bother her. She states the last time they forced her to do anything was about mid-2013. She expressed she was afraid to report this before due to fearing they would harm her or her family. UPDATE 8.4.14: The minor disclosed additional information regarding abuse by gang members and possible trafficking concerns during a clinical session on 8.4.14. The minor reported that the gang also forced her to do deliveries or "drops". The first time she tried to refuse but they threatened her by saying they would kill her if she did not. The minor states they would have her take a suitcase, go by bus and then drop them off in specified locations. Sometimes she simply rode the bus to another station and dropped the suitcase somewhere in the bus station and other times she left them in cemeteries or by statues in town. She states they told her not to open the cases and therefore, she does not know what they were. She states the suitcases were heavy and wherever she left them she would see men pick them up. Sometimes the trips were long. Sometimes the bus trip was more than 3 hours one way and she would sometimes still have to walk far to the drop location. She was not given money for the bus fare and was forced to pay this herself. They did not pay her to do these deliveries. She would sometimes go 1-3 times per week. She does not recall exactly how many times she had to do this but states it was several times, possibly more than 50. She reported she did not report this in her initial disclosure because she was scared to but states she now realizes they were things she was forced to do. She also had to help other gang members in her school with their homework. She reports they "constantly threatened" her that she would be harmed if she said anything to anyone. Additionally, she disclosed that since she was 3 years old her older brother, [REDACTED] was in a gang and his gang member friends would come to the home even though her brother was already in prison at the time. Without her brother knowing, his friends would come to the home when she was unattended and touch her in her private parts. This continued to occur up until she traveled to the USA. They would touch her whenever they saw her. These were among the same young men who forced her to work and forced her to touch them sexually.

Summary of SIR:

The cottage shift leader reported that [REDACTED] was crying when the group returned to the cottage from the gym area. [REDACTED] reported to the staff member that he was kicked in his left leg while he was at the gym. [REDACTED] reported it was a staff member who did it in a way to tell him that it was time to leave. [REDACTED] reported that he didn't think the staff tried to hurt him and was playing around but it did hurt him a lot. [REDACTED] reported after being asked again who did this to him that he actually didn't see the staff doing this, but he assumed it was the one behind him. [REDACTED] was told that this was going to be looked into further so we could find out who was the one who kicked him. He stated once more that he didn't see who else was behind him.

After further investigation within the QI Department it was found that Staff member from POH Program did in fact kicked minor [REDACTED] as a way to call for him so he could get ready to leave the gym with the group. Although it appears that this was horse playing (video shows this) it violates the agency's rules and regulations. Staff was placed on administrative leave as of today 8/5/14.

Minor reported from that moment forward they began meeting twice a week. Minor stated she would pay him 500-800 Lempiras per week to sleep with her. Minor reports she would also send gifts to him through his friends. Minor reports the intercourse was consensual and they did not have an agreement in which she had to pay him. Minor explains he believes she did it either for pity or because she knew he was a minor without a job. Minor explains they cared for each other and had a great open communication. Minor denies being coerced.

Minor also reported he was held against his will at a house in Mexico and made to agree to work as a guide. Minor reported he traveled with his sister and his nephew through Guatemala and Mexico. Minor reported he did not try to escape the house for fear of the cartels. The coyote told him to work for him as a guide. Minor reports he turned the coyote down many times, until finally he realized the coyote was not going to let him leave unless he agreed to work as a guide for other immigrants. Minor reports he agreed and finally was allowed to assist another guide to learn the route to the U.S. Minor reports he decided to escape and turn himself in to ICE once he arrived to the U.S. Minor reports the coyote grabbed his birth certificate once the minor told him he would work for him. Minor reported the man wanted his birth certificate so the minor would not try to escape. Minor reported his sister told him the coyote would tell her to not pressure him to release the minor or he would be turned into "la maña"(Mexican cartel) or return him dead. Date of the Incident Reported to ORR: 08/11/14

Summary of SIR:

Youth reported possible concern for debt bondage/labor trafficking. Upon conducting mental health assessment with youth, he indicated that while he was staying in a "bodega" waiting to be assisted with crossing into the United States, he was forced to sell merchandise to other immigrants who were also staying in the bodega. Prior to leaving home country, youth was informed that he would be traveling with a coyote from Guatemala to Mexico. After arriving to Mexico, he was informed he would stay in a bodega in Reynosa, Tamaulipas for up to eight days. Youth indicated that the coyote stayed with him in the bodega for six days and informed him prior to leaving that he would only be there a few more days. Youth reported he was in the bodega for over 30 days. He indicated that he arrived in the bodega on July 7, 2014 and within one week he was forced to sell merchandise in a makeshift store that was housed inside the bodega. Youth stated that he sold merchandise for the people in charge of the bodega for three weeks, before being allowed to leave. Youth indicated that when he arrived there was another person who was running the store but after the individual left he was put in charge of the store. He indicated that he would sell sodas, cigarettes, marijuana joints, and beer to other immigrants who were also staying in the bodega. He indicated that on most days he would work from 8:00am until midnight or 1:00am; however, on various occasions they would wake him up at 5:00am and have him sell merchandise until 3:00am. He indicated that he had no control over the hours he was asked to work and it was at their request. Youth indicated he never sold merchandise to outsiders and everything was sold internally to the immigrants. He indicated the person in charge would also sell cocaine; however, he was never asked to handle or sell the cocaine. Youth was never paid for his services nor given an option whether he wanted to sell the merchandise. Youth indicated that he feared leaving because he thought they would beat/punish him for attempting to leave. Rumors among the immigrants included that shortly prior to the youth's arrival to the bodega someone tried leaving and was beat for attempting to leave. Other rumors among the immigrants suggested that if anyone tried leaving they could possibly be killed. Youth was not sure if the rumors were true, but he feared for his safety. He indicated that he would have to pay the people in charge for his meal. On two separate occasions he had to call his uncle to send him money so he could pay them for his meals. People in charge of the bodega would keep a large portion of the money, as a fee for the inconvenience of going to get the money for the youth. Youth indicated they would often give him little money back and sometimes he would go days without eating because he could not afford to buy food. He indicated that he once went four days without food and was only given water to drink. Youth did not want to call his family for more money because he knew the people in charge would keep most of it for themselves. He was informed by the people in charge that it was not safe for him to leave due to high immigration patrol on the border. Youth was finally given permission to leave the bodega on August 6, 2014 and it was then that he finally made his journey to the United States. Client is not sure why he spent so many days in the bodega and is uncertain if his uncle owes any money for his journey. Youth indicated that they never physically abused him; however, they would often say belittling and disrespectful comments to the youth. In the context of clinical session minor reported he was held against his will at a house in Mexico and made to agree to work as a guide. Minor reported he traveled with his sister and his nephew through Guatemala and Mexico. Minor reported once they arrived to (b)(6), they found a coyote to help them cross through the Rio Bravo. Minor shared his sister was not able to afford the money the coyote asked for to be able to cross all three of them over the Rio Bravo into the U.S. Minor reports his sister went ahead of him while the minor remained with the coyote in a house. Minor reports his sister sent the remaining money soon after she arrived to the U.S., but the coyote did not allow the minor to leave the house. Minor reported he spent about 3 months living in the house. Minor shared he would receive some food, have access to TV, internet, a bed and be able to spend time in a hammock. Minor explains he used to be treated better at the beginning of his stay, but things changed after the wife of the coyote tried to make a sexual advance on him. Minor reported the lady touched his genitals without his consent, but he was able to stop her and not allow her to sexually abuse him. Minor reported since then he would not be allowed to wash his clothes regularly, sleep with covers, or eat warm food. Minor reported many of the people that came into the house would leave. Minor shared the largest amount of people who be at the home would be about 17 people. Minor reports the coyote would tell him he would be leaving soon, but would not keep his word. Minor reported the coyote did not allow him to leave the home and would tell him the cartels would grab, torture him, make him a killer, or be made to sell drugs. Minor reported he did not try to escape the house for fear of the cartels. Minor shared the coyote would then tell him to work for him as a guide. Minor reports he turned the coyote down many times, until finally he realized the coyote was not going to let him leave unless he agreed to work as a guide for other immigrants. Minor reports he agreed and finally was allowed to assist another guide to learn the route to the U.S. Minor reports he decided to escape and turn himself in to ICE once he arrived to the U.S. Minor reports the coyote grabbed his birth certificate once the minor told him he would work for him. Minor reported the man wanted his birth certificate so the minor would not try to escape. Minor reported his sister told him the coyote would tell her to not pressure him to release the minor or he would be turned into "la maña" (Mexican cartel) or return him dead. Minor reports his sister would be asked for money that would not be given to the minor.

Minor reported 2 years ago he met a woman (26) while at his sister's store. Minor reported the two of them ate lunch together and were physically attracted to one another. Minor reports the intercourse was consensual and they did not have an agreement in which she had to pay him. The minor disclosed additional information regarding abuse by gang members and possible trafficking concerns during a clinical session on 8.4.14. The minor reported that the gang also forced her to do deliveries or "drops". The first time she tried to refuse but they threatened her by saying they would kill her if she did not. The minor states they would have her take a suitcase, go by bus and then drop them off in specified locations. Sometimes she simply rode the bus to another station and dropped the suitcase somewhere in the bus station and other times she left them in cemeteries or by statues in town. She states they told her not to open the cases and therefore, she does not know what they were. She states the suitcases were heavy and wherever she left them she would see men pick them up. Sometimes the trips were long. Sometimes the bus trip was more than 3 hours one way and she would sometimes still have to walk far to the drop location. She was not given money for the bus fare and was forced to pay this herself. They did not pay her to do these deliveries. She would sometimes go 1-3 times per week. She does not recall exactly how many times she had to do this but states it was several times, possibly more than 50. She reported she did not report this in her initial disclosure because she was scared but states she now realizes they were things she was forced to do. She also had to help other gang members in her school with their homework. She reports they "constantly threatened" her that she would be harmed if she said anything to anyone. She disclosed that since she was 3 years old her older brother, _____ was in a gang and his gang member friends would come to the home even though her brother was already in prison at the time. Without her brother knowing, his friends would come to the home when she was unattended and touch her in her private parts. This continued to occur up until she traveled to the USA. They would touch her whenever they saw her. These were among the same young men who forced her to work and forced her to touch them sexually. (SIR addendum completed)

The client stated she reported the information differently when she came to Casa Conroe because in the previous shelter she was told she wasn't going to be able to work and that she needed to go to school. Client stated she and her sister reported that information to their aunt who then said they would go to school and work when they were able to work. The client stated she asked the aunt about coming to the US to work and the aunt said that she could. The client stated the aunt also said that the girls could work off their debt of 12,000 Quetzal to the "coyote" for crossing them over. The client stated that the aunt said she could arrange for her to work picking grapes and that she could go to work with her since the client's sister was going to babysit the aunt's child. Case manager [redacted] has spoken to the client's mother, father, aunt, and uncle all are giving different stories. Case manager attempted to contact clients' aunt [redacted] and left a detailed voice message explaining the transfer of both clients to Casa Conroe. Immediately case manager received a call from a different number and the caller identified himself as [redacted]. [redacted] stated that he was in charge of his nieces' case. He provided a phone number and he also stated to deal with him about anything regarding the case and not his wife. Case Manager interviewed Clients' mother [redacted]; case manager used a translator to ensure that [redacted] understood all questions during the interview. During the interview [redacted] stated that initially her daughters' Martha [redacted] were heading to a place called "Florida" to study. [redacted] reported that her daughters were traveling to the United States to stay with unknown persons from their village in Guatemala. [redacted] explained that individuals from the village are taking families' children to the states to give them education and a better life. She stated that she does not know the individuals' names because her husband was the one who made all the arrangements for her daughters' trip. [redacted] explained that she was confident because other people from their village had sent children and they had made it to the United States with the same people; therefore she thought her daughters would make it too. [redacted] stated that her husband borrowed money from family members in Guatemala to pay the coyote. [redacted] reported that her sister-in-law was not aware of her daughters' trip to the states because they were supposed to arrive in Florida with the individuals that promised to help give her daughters an education. [redacted] reported that once the coyote reached the Mexican border in the United States he called and asked for more money in dollars to get the clients across to the United States. The clients were later apprehended by immigration. [redacted] was also questioned about [redacted] and [redacted] previous statement about traveling to the United States to work. Angelina stated that she does not know why her daughters lied about going to the US to work, she believes that the clients were nervous and scared and probably thought it could help them stay in the states. Additionally, [redacted] reported that after her daughters were detained, her husband [redacted] explained to her that a relative in Santa Cruz Barillas was sick and he was going to go care for the relative. [redacted] explained that her husband [redacted] told her that their daughters had been detained by immigration and that if someone called, for her to say that he had to go care for a family member in Barillas. [redacted] also said that [redacted] agreed to care for the clients and that she now has "some type" of legal status. [redacted] stated that she wants for her daughters to be released to [redacted] and her husband. The aunt stated that she never gave any money to the coyotes and that she did not help plan the trip. She restated that she was unaware of the client's plan to travel to the United States. [redacted] stated that after talking to the clients, she talked to [redacted] and [redacted] and they stated that the clients were going to Florida to stay with [redacted] cousin in Georgia but that she had no legal status therefore could not claim the minors. [redacted] stated that she does not know the name of [redacted] cousin and that she does not know any other family members in the US. Summary of SIR:

UAC reports her childhood was filled with both happy and sad moments. She reports that her father was an alcoholic and she believes he abused additional substances as well. The UAC reports when she was between the ages of 5 and 7, she can recall that he father often hit her mother. When asked to describe how her father hit her mother, the UAC indicated he would beat in any way that he possibly could. She reports he punched her, pushed her, kicked her, slapped her and pulled her hair. The UAC denies physical abuse by her father. The UAC reports at the age of 7 her parents separated and the UAC and her 4 siblings (the UAC is the middle child), moved to another house with her mother. The UAC reports this is when everything changed. The UAC reports her mother began to abuse alcohol and would leave the children (all under the age of 15 at the time) alone at night while she went out to the bar. The UAC reports her mother began to blame the children for her separation with the father. The UAC reports her mother would say things like "you children are the reason your father hit me." The UAC reports after nights of partying and drinking, her mother would come home and begin hitting and yelling at the children. The UAC reports her mother would wake the children up and begin hitting them with whatever object she could find (belt, shoe, furniture etc.). The UAC reports this went out for 4 years and her mother's behavior and alcoholism continued to get worse. The UAC reports when she was 11 years old, her mother left the home, abandoned the children and moved out. After her mother left, the UAC reports she continued to send money to the children so they could pay for rent in the house where they resided. The UAC reports occasionally the mother would call to talk to the children. The UAC reports her oldest sister who was 16 at the time became primary caretaker of the four children who remained in the home. The UAC reports eventually this sister also left the home and another sister who was age 15 at the time became primary caretaker of the three children who remained in the home. Over time this sister left the home, placing the UAC in charge of taking care of herself and her two younger siblings. The UAC reports she became primary caretaker around the age of 14. Her two youngest siblings began to tell their mother that they did not living with the UAC. At this point, the mother assumed custody of the two younger children and asked the UAC to move in with her. The UAC reported she chose not to go with her mom because they "do not have a good relationship" and she "does not trust mother." The UAC reports she is angry that her mother abandoned her when she was little. The UAC reports for the past year she has lived on and off with her mother but has spent most of her time in the streets with friends and living alone in the house where she grew up. The UAC reports her mother sent her money to maintain this residence and she worked on and off doing odd jobs such as cutting hair and babysitting to pay for food and necessities. The UAC reports when her mother found out the UAC was pregnant she offered to help the UAC (UAC is five months pregnant). However the UAC reports her mother is a liar and she does not believe her mother truly wanted to help her. The UAC reports her mother would often take her in and then kick her out. The UAC reports for the past 3-5 months she has lived completely on her own and a neighbor occasionally helped her with things such as supplying food. (Drug Abuse) The UAC reports she began using drugs and alcohol at the age of 13. The UAC reports she has tried cocaine a few times. The UAC reports for the past two years she has used alcohol (tequila, rum, vodka, whiskey) combined with marijuana on a daily basis. She reports frequent use of marijuana and alcohol for the past 4 years in total. The UAC denies symptoms of withdrawal and reports she is not addicted to the drugs. The UAC reports she used the drugs when she was sad or mad and for fun. The UAC reports she last used marijuana and alcohol in July 2014.

The UAC reports sometimes she did this to make little drawings on her body; however most of the time she did this due to feelings of sadness and anger. The UAC reports she would use any object sharp enough to cut (needles, box cutter, razors, pencils, eating utensils, lids from cans etc.). The UAC reports she last had self-injurious behaviors approximately 3-4 weeks ago. The UAC reports 4 prior suicide attempts. The last attempt occurred three months ago when the UAC jumped off a bridge. The UAC reports she suffered cuts and bruises but did not receive medical attention. The UAC reports additional attempts included attempting to: strangle herself with a rope, cut her veins, drown herself. The UAC reports she had "muchas ideas" when discussing ways that she imagined she would kill herself. The UAC denies current suicidal ideations. The UAC reports she often got into fights in her home country with both men and women. She reports no current homicidal ideations but reports in the past she has had thoughts of hurting others. The UAC reports she occasionally has nightmares. She reports recent nightmares of people telling her to do bad things (i.e. hurt others). The UAC reports she always wakes up when this is happening and she can never recall the face of the people in the dreams. Her last nightmare is reported as 1 month ago. The UAC reports sexual abuse in the form of fondling on two separate occasions. At the age of 14, the UAC reports her mother's boyfriend came into her bedroom while she was sleeping and began to fondle her under her clothing. She woke up and told him she would report him and this never happened again. The UAC reports she never told anyone about this incident. The UAC reports when she was about 15 years old, one evening she was drunk and sleeping and her sister's fiancé began to fondle her. She has recollections of him touching her breasts and vagina. The UAC reports she woke up screaming and she told her sister about the incident. The UAC reports her sister blames her for this incident. The UAC reports approximately 5 years ago, she burned the table, sofa, and chairs in her family home. The UAC reports she used a lighter to set fire to the objects. She reports she did this because she was mad and angry with her mother. The UAC's mood was stable throughout the interview. She maintained eye contact with this clinician and maintained steady speech. Her mood and affect were normal. She was oriented to time, person, self, and place. The UAC appears to have limited insight into her behaviors. It is this clinician's impression that the UAC lacks healthy coping skills to deal with abandonment issues, residual effects of trauma, anger issues and symptoms of depression. This clinician has concerns about the UAC's current mental health functioning.

The minor reported that her mother used to treat her well until she was older, about 10 years old. She reported that five years ago her mother stopped sending her to school and put the minor to work in the mother's business to help out the family. The minor stated she wanted to continue to study but her mother made her stop going, saying that it was useless because the girls who went to school only came back "with bellies" (pregnant). Her mother initially had a tortilla business in which the minor was made to work daily after waking at 2 am until about 8 pm when she went to bed. Several years ago her mother switched to another food business making a typical cultural food called "pupusas". The minor would help with tasks and making and selling them. She worked from about 6am until 8pm. The minor stated there was too much work and she did not like to do it. She last worked with her mother 3/31/14, the day before she fled her mother's home. The minor stated her mother became verbally and physically abusive around the time she was taken out of school and made to work. The minor reported that if she expressed not wanting to work or not doing the work correctly, the mother engaged in coercive practices such as hitting the minor repeatedly if she refused. The minor would then work mainly for fear of being hit or related intimidation. She was verbally abusive to the minor daily, making derogatory comments to her if she did not get up and work or listen to her mother. The minor stated she does not know how many times her mother hit her physically because it was several times. She estimates her mother may have hit her about 3 times per week. She would hit her if she did not work, or follow the mother's instructions. The minor stated she would typically hit her either with an open hand or use objects such as belts, rope or cords. She would hit her usually on her back and sometimes leave red marks that faded shortly after. The minor reported she once hit her with a wooden stick on her legs and left her whole thigh very badly bruised for 15 days.

Minor reports that the local gang members were members of the 18th street gang. When he had to work, he would lie to his mother and say that he was going out with friends, or he would ask permission to visit the houses of friends, when in reality he would go to the job. The minor reports that he would perform the tasks of collecting extortion money approximately 2 to 3 times a week, although sometimes they would seek him out only once a week. He states that it differed from week to week and that they would seek him out when they had an assignment for him. The minor does not remember the exact date of when he was kidnapped, but remembers that it was a Friday in June. The minor reports that he was outside of a shoe store in his town when he was kidnapped. He reports that something was put over his head, and that a cloth was pressed to his mouth, which made him sleepy. He guesses that he was drugged, as he does not remember much of what happened after he was taken. The minor reports that when he was abducted, he was alone as far as he knew. He knows that he was kept at an unknown location overnight before he was taken and arrived at the final destination, which was the run down house in what, he later discovered, was Mexico. He states that his head was covered most of the time, so his awareness of his surroundings was limited. He reports that he was the only person who was being held while in the run-down house in Mexico. He reports that there were other persons there, but that they would only smoke and hang out, which lead him to believe that they were not in his same situation. The minor reports that he was put to work cleaning windshields on the street by his captors. He states that he would stand by a traffic light and when the traffic stopped, he would clean windshields. All money he earned was taken away from him per his report. The man who ended up helping him first approached him at the traffic light when he was in his car. He states that as he cleaned the man's windshield, the man began to talk to him, and offered to help him, and invited him to get in his car. The minor reports that he initially did not trust the man after all that had happened to him thus far, and refused the man's help. He states that the man then drove off, apparently parked his car, and returned on foot to talk to the minor and offer him help. The minor states that he is sure the man offered him help because he felt sorry for him based on his appearance. The minor states that he was dirty and wearing torn clothes at this point. The minor reports that he decided to go with the man the same day he spoke to him, and that he never returned to the run-down house where he was held. He reports that after talking to the man for a portion of his day, he decided to take a chance, and just left with the man. He did not return to the run-down house.

Summary of SIR:

Minor disclosed a history of suicidal ideation and gestures due to stress of abandonment, receiving threats and being coerced to engage in sexual activity. The details the minor provided are indicative of possible trafficking. The minor disclosed she fled home country from threats and coercion. The minor explained that both parents abandoned the family. The minor and her two younger sisters continued to live in the home because her grandmother lived in the home next door and would care for them daily. However, the grandmother soon became ill from diabetes and strokes when the minor was 13 and could no longer speak or get out of bed. When she was 13, a man, from a group who called themselves "Los Olanchanos", came to her home and began forcing her to pay him "renta" (200 lempiras per day). She never knew his name and states he was at least 35 years old. The minor stated the man was not a gang member, but part of a group who "cleaned the streets" of the town ridding it of gang members. However, they were also known for threatening people for money and would not let people leave the town. He threatened to kill her if she did not pay and on days she could not pay the full amount, he would force her to have sexual intercourse with him as her payment. The minor reported he assaulted her sexually in this manner multiple times beginning at age 13 because sometimes she did not have the money or at times needed the money for her and her sisters to live off of. Shortly after he began forcing her to pay the "renta", the minor asked him if he could help her get a job so she could have money to pay him. He made a false ID and began connecting her with different jobs. The minor would do different jobs. She worked in a supermarket working with inventory and giving product samples. At another time, she worked selling flowers and then in a clothes store. The minor would work about 4 days per week from 9am until about 6pm. She was typically paid 5,000 Lempiras per month, of which she was expected to give the equivalent of 200 lempiras per day to the man collecting renta. She states he would come by on Saturdays usually to pick it up. About 2.5 months ago, the minor told him she did not want to work for him anymore because she could no longer carry on with these experiences. He grabbed her angrily by the shoulders and pushed her, causing her to fall back and hurt her back on the corner of a table. She recalls not being able to get off the floor for some time and was not able to get out of bed for many days. The man, seeing she was hurt, brought her medication to help her get better and would visit her while she was home injured. When she felt better, she traveled to the USA. A man who usually guarded the town to know who left and entered helped her to leave the town so she could begin her trip north. As a result of these experiences, she struggled emotionally due to abandonment, stress of caring for her sisters, and the threats and coercion she was experiencing. She began feeling depressed and having suicidal ideation at age 13. She engaged in cutting with razors with the intent to end her life about once per month. She denies ever cutting deeply. She reported only having two very faint scars on her wrist/forearm that this clinician could barely see. She also reports there were times she stuck herself with needles. The minor states she continued with wanting to end her life and engaging in cutting from ages 13-15. At 15 she went to a religious retreat where she was able to confide in an adult about her problems and receive counsel from them. She reports this retreat helped her to feel much better. She has not had suicidal ideation or engaged in self-injury since. She denies any current thoughts to harm herself and feels safe in the center. She is able to use appropriate coping skills.

met with UAC to clarify discrepancy in his initial interview. UAC first denied that he was smuggling people into the United States. Now, he is reporting that he was forced to smuggle people and that he was threatened to be killed if he refused. He stated that from Nov, 2013 until Aug, 2014 he was forced by [redacted] to work for them. During these 10 months [redacted] could physically abuse him, by punching him and kicking him. In Aug, 2014 he ran away from them to try to enter US and go to Texas, where his grandmother had agreed to meet him but he was caught by immigration and sent here. UAC originally reported to this clinician that he had a very stable life in Mexico with his mother and extended family. He denied any form of physical, sexual or emotional abuse. However, today he stated that since his grandmother left him to go to Texas when he was five years of age, and his mother became the primary caregiver, he suffered abuse and neglect. UAC told this clinician that the scars on his forehead are because his mother threw an item at him when he was eight years of age which resulted in him going to the hospital. Moreover, he reported that she was neglectful and that she only cared about herself, and she often left him with other people to care for him and his younger sisters. UAC Stated that he lied at his initial intake because he was not sure what to expect from this program but he feels safe now to talk about his history.

She had conveyed to him that she would also be going to the park later, but no time was given to him. The babysitter showed up at the park at around 7:10 pm (earlier than what the youth expected). As she arrived at the park, and he noticed her he and his friend ran off. She approached the area where they were sitting at and she found an empty box of cigarettes with ashes of Marijuana. She returned home, and looked around to see if the youth had arrived, but did not find him. She waited for him outside, and he suddenly around 7:40 pm came out through the side drive way (pretending as if he had been at the home the entire time). She proceeded to ask him about what had gone on at the park of which he ignored her, and as he passed her she noticed his eyes appeared red, and he smelled like Marijuana. The youth went straight to his bedroom. A short time later he went to the kitchen, and ate two servings of food.

During bedtime tonight (9/3/14), client asked if I could give advice about a secret she had. I notified her that it is my job to report everything she tells me, that I could not withhold information. Client notified me that she has withheld information about her baby's father from staff. had previously stated that her baby's father was not in the picture. Tonight, client disclosed that the baby's father is the brother of our former client (who came to America with) and that the baby's father was her boyfriend. Client stated that her current sponsor, is not just a family friend but her "mother in law" and boyfriend's mom (and previous client Ruth's mother). Client explained that paid for client to come to America so that her grand-baby would have a good life. Client didn't want to mention this because she was scared that she will get deported back to Guatemala if staff knew that her sponsor's son was her boyfriend. Client said that the baby's father was abusive to her in Guatemala and throughout their relationship and that he even choked her once. Also, client states that her baby's father is unsure if the baby is actually his. Client "mother in law" does not know that her son was abusive to our client expresses that she really likes and ex-client but she feels that if she goes to live with them that she will be obligated to be with her baby's father. Client does not want to be with her baby's father as of right now because of his previous abusive tendencies. (As reported by Youth Care Worker) 9/4/14: Clinician meets with UAC. UAC reports she feels sad. UAC presents with depressed affect and is teary eyed throughout the session. UAC does not communicate much with this worker. UAC reports she did not go to school today because she has concerns that she will act out in school. The UAC reports when she felt this way in the past she would engage in self-injurious behaviors or destroy things. UAC reports she was up all night and she could not sleep. UAC reports she wants to forget about everything bad that happened in her home country and she has racing thoughts at night. UAC reports everything is her fault because she made decisions to engage in risky behavior in home country. Clinician explains her past actions are not her fault and coming forward with the information is a positive coping skill and she has made improvements while in our care. Encourage UAC to write her thoughts down under the supervision of a staff member by using a crayon or marker (as she is not permitted to have a pen or pencil due to prior SIB). Encourage UAC to get some rest today. Inform nursing of situation so she can be assessed by doctor.

Obtained via FOIA by Judicial Watch, Inc.

During session with clinician, the UAC reports she has had trouble sleeping on and off because she is up thinking about things that she did in her home country. The UAC reports she is ashamed of the things she did. The UAC indicates she just wants to erase it all. Explain to the UAC that stuffing her thoughts, feelings and emotions will not lead to a good outcome and it is better to express herself. The UAC begins to share that when she had no money in home country because her mother would not send it, she would participate in sexual escort services and engage in sexual acts with men, usually men who preferred young girls and who were much older than the UAC. The UAC reports she knew there were safer ways to get money but this was faster and more lucrative. The UAC reports she did this from time to time in home country when she had no money. The UAC reports she would buy food and necessities with the money. The UAC is teary eyed when discussing this incident but eventually seems to understand these actions were not her fault, as the clinician works to empower her and reframe the situation. Thinking about the past is impacting the UAC's functioning (i.e. lack of sleep) from time to time. However, this clinician believes the UAC is making progress in her ability to express herself and articulate her thoughts and feelings.

when she observed [redacted] lying down on the family room sofa covered by a blanket. FM approached minor to see because she thought it odd for minor to have her legs open, she saw [redacted] making movements with her hands. When [redacted] realized FM was watching, she ran upstairs to her room and covered herself with a blanket. FM attempted to speak with minor to ask her what she was doing, minor refused to speak. FM allowed minor a few minutes alone and left her in her bedroom. During home visit, foster mother stated she and [redacted] were the only ones downstairs at that time and she had been preparing a meal while supervising [redacted] in the room next to the kitchen. FM stated she realized [redacted] had her legs open and was making movements under the blanket in her genital area which appeared to her to be masturbation. During session with minor, [redacted] stated she was lying on the sofa while brushing her hair. Minor recalled she began playing with the brush between her legs but not near her "private area." Minor denied she was touching her genitals. Minor denied ever being sexually abused. [redacted] stated she has never been touched in a sexual nature by anyone and she has never touched any person, either voluntary or coerced. Minor denied any form of sexual abuse. Clinician engaged in a psycho-educational conversation in regards to changes which occur during adolescence. Clinician explained that there are physical changes which occur when children reach adolescence, which could happen at different age depending on each person. Clinician explained to minor masturbation is a natural response which can occur during hormonal changes in the body. Clinician explained the role of hormones and how this influences sexual maturity. Clinician normalized masturbation and having curiosity as a normal part of the adolescent process, but noted the differences between appropriate sexual behavior and inappropriate sexual behavior. Clinician engaged minor in a discussion to differentiate what is appropriate and inappropriate. Clinician informed minor that masturbation is a very personal and intimate act and so other children or people are not to be involved in any form and this should only occur in a private setting where no one else could see or has awareness of such. Clinician explained to minor that this is not something encouraged due to her young age, but it is something understood to be normal and expect-able due to her age. Clinician discussed other physical changes which occur in the female body during adolescence. Minor asked if shaving legs such as what she sees on television is part of the changes. Clinician stated there are several physiological and physical changes which occur during adolescence and puberty, which include hair growth in certain areas. Minor appeared to be much more relaxed and comfortable during the latter part of the session. A "compromiso de seguridad" (i.e.) safety plan was discussed to explain what is appropriate and inappropriate sexual behavior. Safety plan includes the use of a private setting if minor were to feel curious about touching herself as well as a list of foster mother, sponsor, Lead Case Manager [redacted] or myself (Clinician) who can speak with minor and answer any questions as well as to provide support and information.

Minor was held captive 3 months and sexually assaulted and forced to work for them while captive. The information provided is indicative of possible trafficking concerns because the minor reported the gang forced her to sell drugs. The minor stated she received gang threats, beginning in 2012 from [redacted] gang in El Salvador. She was informed by her mother that they were requesting her mother to pay them a monthly fee. The minor does not know the quantity but states they threatened them about the money via letters stating they would kill the whole family. The minor's mother could not pay the fee and was being harassed by the gang members. Minor reported that in February 2013, three gang members took her by force when she was alone returning from a store. The minor reports that she was held against her will for about 3 months. She was held in a home that was about one hour from her own house. Minor [redacted] also reported that she was also sexually assaulted by the same gang members. She became emotional and stated she does not know how many times they sexually assaulted her because she would not remember. She reports she thinks she was drugged because sometimes she would lose consciousness and they also would make her inhale marijuana smoke. Minor reported that she was also forced to sell drugs. They wanted her to sell marijuana and when she refused they told her "if you don't go out and sell we will kill her and her whole family, including her older sister (sponsor) and her baby". The minor states they knew her sister was pregnant when she left. Due to the threats she complied. They had her wait in the home and when people came to the front patio to buy marijuana she had to go out and sell it to them. She would have to do this about 1-2 days per week. In those days she would sometimes get about 5 people coming to buy drugs. They would not let her go off the property. Minor reported that one day she was able to escape. She states that they all went out and one stayed to watch her. However, he was a male who knew her family and for that he told her to escape. The minor states she learned he was beaten badly for her escape. She called her mother to pick her up after she escaped and went home. Minor reports the threats continued. They continued to threaten for money though her mother could never pay. They told the family that no one could ever leave the home alone because they would take them. The minor stopped going to school for a while as a result. This January she tried going again but had to stop because they would not leave her alone. They would always monitor her when she went to and from school and they would threaten to take her from the bus stop or school. They continue to watch her home "day and night" to monitor and scare the family. Minor left home to come to the United States on 08/15/2014 as she fears for her safety.

Summary of SIR:

UAC reports she has had trouble sleeping on and off because she is up thinking about things that she did in her home country. The UAC reports she is ashamed of the things she did. The UAC indicates she just wants to erase it all. UAC shared that when she had no money in home country because her mother would not send it, she would participate in sexual escort services and engage in sexual acts with men, usually men who preferred young girls and who were much older than the UAC. The UAC reports she knew there were safer ways to get money but this was faster and more lucrative. The UAC reports she did this from time to time in home country when she had no money. The UAC reports she would buy food and necessities with the money. The UAC is teary eyed when discussing this incident but eventually seems to understand these actions were not her fault, as the clinician works to empower her and reframe the situation. Thinking about the past is impacting the UAC's functioning (i.e. lack of sleep) from time to time. However, this clinician believes the UAC is making progress in her ability to express herself and articulate her thoughts and feelings.

During the course of a clinical session the minor disclosed traumatic experiences occurred during her journey from home country to the USA including sexual assaults and witnessing death and dismemberment. The minor reported she traveled from home country to the USA in the mid-to-late summer of 2013. She traveled with her 17 year old maternal cousin. The two minors traveled together from home country with a guide leaving home approximately 7/6/13. They traveled by bus to the Guatemala and Mexico border where they stayed in a home or "casa hogar" 3 days where they were helped but their guide abandoned them. They then began going by train until around Mexico City. They continued on by train and soon met another guide who told them he would help them cross the rest of the way and that everything would go well. However, he instead took them to his home for 5 days and abused the minor sexually on three occasions. She states he threatened her that if she did not do what he said he would find her family in Honduras and bring them harm and turn her in to who would "do worse" to her and then kill her. She believes his friend may have abused her cousin but she is unsure because she did not report anything to the minor. After the 5 days, per the minor, his boss made him release them because their families paid for their release. He sent the minors from there by bus to [redacted] They were walking 7 days in the desert in Mexico without food and water and feeling very ill. Summary of SIR:

During an attempted assessment on Wednesday, November 19, 2014 clinician and CW were able to see that minor has difficulties speaking Spanish. Nevertheless minor reported that she traveled from Guatemala to the United States alone. However the minor gave a contradicting version the very next day stating that she traveled with an unknown man and woman from Guatemala to Mexico to work in Cancun. The very next day the version of the story once again changed and she stated she traveled with the woman alone until she made it to Mexico where this unknown man appeared. As noted the story is not consistent as the minor continues to give different versions. Minor first reported that she worked in Cancun for two months making 300 pesos. She stated she worked in a man's house cleaning plates. She reported she lived with this man in one of his rooms. Minor reported that the man's house in Cancun was a very big house that had six bedrooms and there were other children working for him, both male and female. Upon further conversation she added to the story reporting that she also worked in Monterrey for two extra months in a restaurant where she made 300 pesos for those two months where a woman paid her the money. When asked which city she worked in first she stated she was taken to Monterrey first and then to Cancun. During an assessment with the minor on Monday, November 24, 2014 CW and clinician were able to have a translator who spoke her native language. During this assessment minor reported that she traveled from Guatemala with a woman who she met in her hometown but did not previously know. Minor stated that the woman asked her if she wanted to work in Cancun since she is very poor in Guatemala. Minor reported she asked her mother who gave her the permission to go and ultimately minor states it was her decision to go. Then minor reports that after arriving to Mexico the man appeared whom she worked for in Cancun who paid her 300 pesos for two months of labor. Minor reported she worked washing dishes and cooking 7 days a week from 5 AM to midnight. She also reported there were other minors in the home working for the same man. Then after speaking further minor reported that she left Guatemala with both an unknown man and unknown woman. Stories are not consistent and details regarding the identity of this man and woman have not yet been obtained. Minor reported that all together in the four months she worked in Mexico she made 600 pesos. She stated that the unknown woman that brought her from Guatemala to Mexico to work, took $500 pesos out of the $600 pesos she made as her payment for bringing her to Mexico. However this information is contradicting due to the fact that $377.50 pesos were taken from the minor upon arriving to the program. During sessions both CW and clinician noticed that minor speaks always covering her face and looking down. She will either put on the hood of her jacket to cover her face or use her hand to cover her face. During the assessment with the translator minor began to tremble from the very beginning of the conversation. During the translation minor gave different versions of her story several different times in which even the translator took notice of. Anytime she was asked questions about her travel or labor in Mexico a different version was told.

This concern is based upon report that her family owes a debt; the unknown motives of those who wanted to bring her to the U.S.; and that she reported that she traveled to the U.S after being promised a job by a lady in New Jersey.

The minor stated that she was held captive by in for about 2 months during her trip. She was traveling with a group and they stayed in a home to rest before continuing on with their trip. When the group she was with left the minor was told she could not continue with them because she was sexually assaulted during her trip. They called the minor's brother in the USA and told him she was going to wait a while there because she was not feeling well due to someone "trying to violate her" and they wanted to wait until she was better. The minor states they kept her there 2 months and only let her call her brother with monitored calls and she had to say she was okay and doing fine. In that time they forced the minor to learn to drive and use weapons because they wanted her to work for them. They threatened to kill her if she did not comply and told her they would tell her brother she "got lost". On two occasions they forced her to go with another male to make trips smuggling other immigrants from Mexico City to She went by "microbus" with them and had to help drive. On each trip they took about 30 people. She was paid 2,000 pesos per person but she typically had her money taken back by them. In the first trip they were caught by the police. The minor states she was let go because they also trained her to pass off as a Mexican national. On two occasions they took her to other locations in to see where they keep other hostages captive. They expressed they wanted her to learn to kill people. She told them she was not yet ready. The minor was also going to be groomed to bring drugs on her trip but they said she needed more training. She reported the first thing they teach is "not to have fear". The minor states her brother began being suspicious of why her journey was taking so long and was calling the man in as well as the guides he knew were guiding his sister by phone from El Salvador to Mexico. He was trying to figure out why she was taking long and pressure the men to send her. One of the men told her brother "how much money can we send you to forget about your sister?" Her brother told them to send her and did not accept a price. One of the men holding her told her to continue on to cross the border and that she was to tell her brother that she does not want to stay in the USA and wants to return. They explained he would probably get angry and ask her to repay him the money he spent on her trip. They said they would then send her the money to repay her brother and give her money to travel back. They told her if she did not return they would kill her brother and then find her and bring her back even if it took a year. They then took her themselves to cross the river.

He reported that this person told him "Te voy a entrar en el tambo." (I am going to put you in the barrel) He reports that this refers to the way that the cartel disposes of bodies. When minor stated that he did want to go to the commandante to ask for permission that they told him to get him in the truck with them and told him that going to the commandante meant that he was going to be killed. They drove him around the block and then took him back to the bodega and threatened to kill him and beat him with a board. He stated that from that point on that he was "locked up" against his will and was not allowed to leave the bodega. They continued to force him to work as a foot guide. During some part during the journey the youth informed the guide that she wanted to stay in Mexico and not travel to the United States. When the guide sexually assaulted youth, he told her to engage in sexual relations with him for exchange that he would let her stay in Mexico. After several refusals to have sexual relations with the guide, youth reported the guide left the hotel room. The next morning the guide called her adoptive brother living in the U.S. and passed the phone to the youth. The guide put his finger to his mouth as a gesture to keep quiet about the sexual assault. Youth's adoptive brother told youth on the telephone that she could not stay in Mexico and should return to El Salvador because he was afraid she would not follow his orders and stay in Mexico. Youth assumes that the guide informed her adoptive brother about her plans to stay in Mexico as she did not tell him. Youth did not hear the conversation her adoptive brother had with the guide. After the phone call with youth's adoptive brother, the guide did not want her to continue her journey, however, youth reported another guide in charge allowed her to continue on to Mexico. Based on youth's responses above, youth does present concerns of exploitation or possible trafficking.

This SIR adds further information regarding trafficking original SIR 10/19/14. Minor stated that after he was apprehended for the first time by ICE, about a month and a half ago, he did not want to continue working for the Cartel, and told his boss about this. Minor stated his boss initially said that it was fine, but after a month his boss went to his house and told him he had to work smuggling drugs to the US. [redacted] reported that his boss told him that if he refuses to transport the drugs, he was going to be physically punished with a wooden board. Minor stated that it is very common that the cartel physically penalizes minors with wooden boards that have holes on them to make them more harmful. Minor reported that the moment he was given the drugs, his boss told him that if he loses the drugs he would be killed. Because he was apprehended by immigration officers with the drugs he was forced to smuggled, Minor stated there is a 98% probability that he is going to be killed by the Cartel once he is back to Mexico. Minor stated that there are alternatives for him not to be killed: 1. Pay about $500 dollars to the Consulate when arriving to Mexico, and not being released to the DIF. 2. Become an assassin for the cartel. Minor stated if he becomes an assassin, he would have to kill whoever they said, otherwise his fingers would be broken [redacted] stated he has seen people many times being hurt with the wooden board with holes as punishment when members of the cartel do not follow orders. He stated he saw a person being killed in front of him. He stated there were 7 more people carrying drugs that day (about 9 months ago) when they looked for the drug that they were going to smuggle. Minor said they did not find the drugs and realized it was taken by the army. Minor stated the bosses told the 8 people to say who was the person who told the army, otherwise their fingers would be cut one by one.

stated he found out who did tell the army. He described this person being beaten, taken to a place where all the assassins who work for the cartel were waiting in about 30 trucks. Minor stated this person was killed in front of everyone by a shot in the head, and then his body was thrown in a pile of tires and then burned. Minor stated he thought that could happen to him if he does something he is not supposed to do.

Minor disclosed that on September 27, 2014 during her journey, she was touched inappropriately by a Honduran immigrant who was about 40-years-old. This occurred in a bodega in while laying down to go to sleep in a room with four other immigrants that she traveled with. She states that she was lying in a bed and the male subject lay on a mattress on the floor perpendicular to her. She noticed that the guide in charge of her group left the room for no apparent reason. It was then that the subject got up from his mattress and began touching her legs by sticking his hands through the bottom of her pants. He was only able to reach her thighs when minor ran out of the room to tell another male immigrant. They both then went to tell the main guide in charge about what had happened. By that time, the male subject had left the bodega and the guide stated that if he returned, they would "tablear" him or hit him with boards as a consequence for what he did. The minor was then put in a room with only females and the offender did not return. Minor is certain that the man's intention was to touch her genitals and possibly rape her.

"Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking and Abuse"

Thursday, August 16, 2018
Dirksen Senate Office Building 342

My name is Bill Canny. I am the Executive Director of the Department of Migration and Refugee Services (MRS) within the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB). On behalf of USCCB/MRS, I would like to thank the Senate Homeland Security & Government Affairs, Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, as well as the Subcommittee Chair Senator Ron Johnson (R-WI) and Ranking Member Senator Claire McCaskill (D-MO) for the opportunity to submit this written statement for the record.

The care of unaccompanied immigrant children is of great importance to the Catholic Church. USCCB/MRS has operated programs, working in a public/private partnership with the U.S. government, to help protect unaccompanied children from all over the world for nearly 40 years and trafficking victims for more than 10 years. In this statement, I share insights from our work serving these children and their families and offer recommendations to help ensure that unaccompanied children are protected from situations of abuse and human trafficking.

U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops & Catholic Social Teaching

The Catholic Church in the United States has played a critical role in the care of unaccompanied children and prevention of human trafficking, and USCCB/MRS has been a leader in the protection of and advocacy for unaccompanied children and human trafficking survivors. Our work assisting unaccompanied children is rooted in the belief that they, like all God's children, were created in His image and have a unique and sacred human dignity.

Since 1994, USCCB/MRS has operated the "Safe Passages" program. This program serves undocumented immigrant children apprehended by the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and placed in the custody and care of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR), within the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). Through cooperative agreements with ORR, and in collaboration with community-based social service agencies, the Safe Passages program provides community-based residential care (foster care and small-scale shelter placements) to unaccompanied children in ORR custody, as well as family reunification services (pre-release placement screening and post-release social services for families). In fiscal year 2017, the USCCB/MRS Safe Passages program served 1,294 youth who arrived as unaccompanied children—1,042 through the family reunification program and 252 through the residential care programs.

In collaboration with HHS and the Department of Justice, and through private programming, USCCB/MRS also provides critical case-management, employment services, and victim identification training to help prevent human trafficking and to assist those victimized by it, including unaccompanied children. As Catholics, we believe that such work and efforts to combat human trafficking are, as Pope Francis has aptly stated, "a moral imperative."¹

Preventing Abuse and Trafficking of Unaccompanied Children

Once an unaccompanied child arrives at our border, we have a moral obligation to ensure his or her safety and wellbeing. As Pope Francis has said: “Among migrants, children constitute the most vulnerable group, because as they face the life ahead of them, they are invisible and voiceless.”²

a. The Importance of Family Reunification Services

Facilitating release of unaccompanied children to family or “sponsors” pending their immigration removal proceedings is both a humane and fiscally-sound policy. Not only is reunification with family typically in a child’s best interest, but maintaining children in government custody is incredibly costly.³ It is vital, however, to ensure that families are supported and connected to community resources, that they understand their legal obligations, and, most importantly, that children are not released to unsafe situations.

As a social service provider, we have seen that unaccompanied children are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking, domestic servitude, and other exploitative situations. In the case of children in a forced migration context, prior victimization in their home country or during their journey to the United States, debts incurred for smuggling or transit fees, and their undocumented status are all characteristics that put them at heightened risk and make them easy prey for traffickers and others with ill intent.

Family reunification services – home studies and post-release services – are therefore vital to promote safe placements of children in appropriate environments. During a home study, a community-based case worker assesses the safety and suitability of the proposed caregiver and placement, including the caregiver’s capacity to meet the child’s unique needs, any potential risks of the placement, and the caregiver’s motivation and commitment to care for the child. Home studies result in a recommendation on whether placement with the proposed caregiver is in the child’s best interest. Post-release services (PRS) include risk assessment and action-planning with families around areas of need and concern, connection to community services, and referral to legal services. Consequently, these services are not only critical to ensuring a child’s safe placement, but they also mitigate the risk for family breakdown, facilitate community integration, and help the family understand the need to comply with their immigration court proceedings.

While some recent improvements have been made to address the gaps in adequate family reunification services, the vast majority of unaccompanied children released from ORR care do not receive these important services. In fact, in FY 2017, ORR provided family reunification services for less than thirty-two percent of the 42,416 children released from its care - with only seven percent of youth receiving home studies.

Unfortunately, we know that the limited use of these services has resulted in children being released to unsafe placements, including situations of abuse and trafficking, and left without vital services for which they qualify under law. These are children like Raul,⁴ a teenager from Central America who suffered severe abuse in his home country. Raul's uncle "sold" his sisters and physically abused Raul. Raul has scars all over his body from the severe abuse, but Raul fears telling his sponsor (who is his biological father) because his uncle threatened his mother's life if anyone learned of the situation. As a result of this trauma, Raul is now wetting the bed, having nightmares, and constantly fears for his mother's safety. Despite this past abuse and clear need for family reunification services, including counseling services, Raul was released from ORR care without a home study or post-release services. USCCB/MRS was alerted to this case by Raul's legal counsel.

b. The Unintended Risks of Information Sharing

In addition to the underutilization of these valuable family reunification tools, we also believe that certain elements of well-intentioned policy changes regarding information-sharing of sponsors may put children at increased risk. In May 2018, ORR and the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) offices of Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and Customs and Border Protection (CBP) entered into a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) mandating continuous information-sharing on unaccompanied immigrant children beginning when CBP or ICE takes the children into custody through their release from ORR custody.⁵ This includes information sharing on the children's potential sponsors, as well as anyone else living with the sponsors. One intent of such information sharing is to improve sponsor vetting and ensure safe placement of children, which we greatly appreciate and consider to be beneficial.

We are concerned, however, that the MOA may have severe unintended consequences in terms children's increased length of stay in ORR custody and the increased possibility of risk for abuse or trafficking. We are troubled over the possibility of these unintended consequences because the MOA fails to place any limitations on the use a sponsor's data by ICE and CBP. Without any limitations on and sufficient communication about the use of such data, family reunifications, the fundamental principle of child welfare, may likely be undermined by turning safe placement screening into a mechanism for immigration enforcement or, in the least, may be perceived by the immigrant community as such. It is anticipated that the MOA, as written, may accelerate not only the decline in releases to parents, but also releases overall, leading to longer and costly stays in ORR custody. USCCB/MRS is also highly concerned that, given the MOA, undocumented family members may fear coming forward to sponsor their children, instead seeking - or even paying - documented individuals in the community to come forward and claim to be a child's sponsor. This type of arrangement will put unaccompanied children and their families at increased risk of exploitation and trafficking by the third-party.

Recommendations

In light of these concerns and vulnerabilities, we recommend the following ways in which the important child protection and human trafficking prevention work of ORR can be strengthened:

- Clearly Designate Responsibilities of ORR After Release. Congress should pass legislation to ensure that ORR is clearly authorized to provide for the care of children even after their release to a sponsor. Unfortunately, USCCB/MRS has witnessed instances in which a sponsor placement breaks down but Children's Protective Services (CPS) is unwilling to get involved and take custody of the child. In some of these instances, it has also been difficult to get ORR to resume care for the child.

We appreciate Senator Portman's attention to this issue and the efforts of all the offices engaged in bipartisan discussions to try to find a solution. We also welcomed the willingness of Senate offices to engage providers like USCCB/MRS in the conversation. We look forward to seeing what comes out of these discussions.

- Increase Funding for Family Reunification Services. In accordance with domestic child welfare best practices, Congress should urge ORR to increase the number unaccompanied children and families receiving family reunification services. As noted above, expanded family reunification services would increase protection for these children, allow them to be linked to local resources, provide education on immigration court requirements, and also provide monitoring of the child's safety and wellbeing – promoting the overall safety of our communities. We note that such programming should focus on strengthening the family to best promote long-term placement stability and integration.
- Work to Identify Additional Risk Factors for Children. We appreciate the steps ORR took in 2016 to designate additional risk factors warranting "discretionary" home studies (those not mandated by law). We encourage ORR, however, to regularly engage with providers to evaluate new and additional risk factors that could help to indicate concerns with placement of unaccompanied children. These factors, such as a youth being a pregnant or parenting teen, should be added to the list necessitating a discretionary home study.
- Ensure Flexibility to Respond to Newly Identified Needs. Children who are receiving PRS-only services, (those who generally do not get home studies), typically receive services for a shorter period of time than those children for whom family reunification services (PRS and a home study) are required by law. In some instances, we have seen children appropriately being designated to receive PRS-only services, only for the provider to later discover concerns that would have warranted legally mandated family reunification services (PRS and home study). In our experience, ORR has not allowed these children to be re-designated to receive the lengthier services.

ORR must ensure that the system maintains flexibility to address such situations. When risk factors are identified by service providers, it should allow for re-designation the child for legally-mandated PRS, even after release, so that the child can receive services through the pendency of his or her immigration court proceedings.

- Limit Use of Sponsor Information to Prevent Trafficking Risk. Congress should encourage DHS leadership, through rulemaking or policy memoranda, to limit the ability of information obtained pursuant to the MOA to be used for enforcement purposes absent extenuating circumstances (such as those individuals who are national security threats or have felony convictions which present a public safety concern).

Conclusion

How we respond to the children arriving at our border is a test of our moral character. In the words of Pope Francis, we must “not tire of courageously living the Gospel, which calls you to recognize and welcome the Lord Jesus among the smallest and most vulnerable.”⁶ As always, USCCB/MRS stands ready to offer our assistance to Congress, DHS, and HHS/ORR to strengthen protections for unaccompanied children and to help prevent and mitigate situations of human trafficking, abuse, and neglect.

From Human Trafficking and Abuse”

Question#:	1
Topic:	MOA Information Sharing
Hearing:	Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking and Abuse
Primary:	The Honorable Rob Portman
Committee:	HOMELAND SECURITY (SENATE)

Question: In April 2018, HHS and DHS signed a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) governing information sharing about UACs and potential sponsors. Advocates for UACs have expressed concerns that because the MOA might allow DHS to use sponsor information for enforcement purposes, fewer potential sponsors—who are frequently undocumented—might apply to house UACs because they fear enforcement.

Please describe how the MOA works in practice.

Response: On February 19, 2016, the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) and the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) signed a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) regarding the care, custody, and transfer of unaccompanied alien children (UAC) between the respective departments. The purpose was to continue addressing the needs of UAC by ensuring the safe and expedited transfer and placement from DHS to HHS custody; maximizing efficiency in the allocation and expenditure of respective program costs; ensuring information is transmitted to facilitate appropriate placement decisions so HHS can promptly place the child in the least restrictive setting that is in the child’s best interest until the child is released to an appropriate sponsor; continuing the statutorily-required consultation between departments with respect to UAC placement determinations; protecting UAC in the custody of the United States or released to sponsors from mistreatment, exploitation, and trafficking; and promoting effective immigration processing, as well as the safe repatriation and reintegration of UAC.

Subsequently, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), and HHS signed a MOA on April 13, 2018, to address information exchanges between each department and to enhance cooperation. Under the MOA, the HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) fingerprinted all potential sponsors (including parents and legal guardians) and adult household members. ICE then used the fingerprints to complete a check for criminal activity to assist ORR in its individualized determinations of sponsor suitability. Additionally, if ICE or CBP became aware of any criminal information, such as gang affiliation, that it did not have at the time of initial referral to ORR, they notified ORR as expeditiously as practicable, using their best efforts to provide information within 48 hours of discovery.

On December 19, 2018, ORR issued an internal operational directive regarding the fingerprinting of adult household members and sponsors under the MOA. Pursuant to the internal operational directive, ORR may complete its suitability assessments of sponsors without obtaining any fingerprints from adult household members in appropriate cases. While ORR will continue to fingerprint all sponsors, ORR may release children to Category 1 and 2 sponsors before ICE returns its background check results.

Further, the DHS-HHS MOA of February 2016 called for the establishment of a working group comprised of UAC subject matter experts from both departments to address operational matters for inclusion in a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO). On July 31, 2018, the agencies completed the JCO, which provides field guidance and standardization of interagency policies, procedures, and guidelines related to the processing of UAC encountered by DHS, whose care will be transferred to HHS, after being placed in removal proceedings pursuant to section 240 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. The JCO does not take the place of agency policy regarding the processing of UAC, nor is it a substitute for legislative action, where required; rather it is an interagency agreement to standardize agency operational relations. Additionally, the JCO memorializes current practices for custody transfer and transportation, including the placement into and the discharge from ORR custody; immigration processing and referrals and placement processing; influx matters; services requirements, such as medical evaluations and emergencies, and the Flores Settlement Agreement minimum standards for HHS facilities; and the reporting of allegations of abuse. Cooperation between DHS and HHS regarding the transport, processing, placement, care, and discharge of UAC is essential. Both departments take their roles seriously and work closely with interagency and foreign counterparts daily to ensure the humane treatment of UAC while simultaneously enforcing federal laws.

Question: Is the sponsor information shared under the MOA being used for immigration enforcement activities?

Response: Those individuals who are identified as potentially removable aliens through the information shared pursuant to the MOA may be referred to local ICE field offices for

Topic:	Children Separated
Hearing:	Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking and Abuse
Primary:	The Honorable Claire McCaskill
Committee:	HOMELAND SECURITY (SENATE)

Question: How many children were separated from their parents between May 6, 2018 and June 20, 2018?

Response: We are working with our interagency partners at the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to finalize that count.

Question: How many children were separated each month from an adult sibling between May 6, 2018 and August 16, 2018?

Response: Pursuant to federal law, including the Homeland Security Act of 2002 and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, DHS policy states that a “family unit” is an alien parent or legal guardian and alien child(ren). Therefore, if an inadmissible child arrives with a non-custodial adult relative, such as an aunt, uncle, grandparent, or adult sibling, the child is an unaccompanied alien child. This designation does not result in a family separation, as the grouping is not considered to be a family unit. DHS does not maintain statistics on the separation of children from non-parent/guardian adults.

Question: How many children were separated from another adult relative such as a grandparent, aunt or uncle between May 6, 2018 and August 16, 2018?

Response: Pursuant to federal law, specifically the Homeland Security Act of 2002 and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, the term unaccompanied alien child means a child who has no lawful immigration status in the United States; has not attained 18 years of age; and with respect to whom there is no parent or legal guardian in the United States or no parent or legal guardian in the United States is available to provide care and physical custody. Therefore, if an inadmissible child arrives with a non-custodial adult relative, such as an aunt, uncle, grandparent, or adult sibling, the child is an

Committee:	HOMELAND SECURITY (SENATE)

Question: How does Customs and Border Protection (CBP) record that the separation of a family unit has taken place?

Response: At ports of entry, when there is an inadmissible alien family unit and criminal history or child welfare reasons require CBP to separate an adult parent or legal guardian from his or her child, CBP policy dictates that a port manager at the GS-14 level or above approve the separation. Please note, the decision to separate a family cannot be delegated below the GS-14 level. The following also applies:

- The CBP OFO Manager who approved the family separation notifies the ICE ERO Juvenile Coordinator; the notification cannot be delegated to a lower level manager.
- Form I-213 (Record of Deportable/Inadmissible Alien) must be annotated with the reasons for the family separation.
- Upon determination that a child is a UAC and does not meet the criteria to voluntarily withdraw their application for admission (e.g., if from a contiguous country, able to make an independent decision, not a victim of a severe form of trafficking, and no fear of return), a referral for placement is made by notification to both the ICE/ERO/ Field Office Juvenile Coordinator (FOJC) and to Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR).

Between the ports of entry, the Border Patrol records all family groups and family units within our system of record. If the on duty Watch Commander determines a separation is necessary for criminal history or child welfare reasons, we annotate a field within the system of record, indicating the child(ren) are now unaccompanied and in need of placement. This opens a portal to transfer and enter information for HHS/ORR's use in finding appropriate placement for the Unaccompanied Alien Children. The electronic system of record is used to notify the ERO Field Office Juvenile Coordinator that a UAC has been identified and is being placed with HHS.

Question: Is this process the same for the separation of a child from a non-parent family member?

Response: Yes. Pursuant to federal law, including the Homeland Security Act of 2002 and the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008, DHS policy states that a "family unit" is an alien parent or legal guardian and alien child(ren). Therefore, if an inadmissible child arrives with a non-custodial adult relative, such as an aunt, uncle, grandparent, or adult sibling, the child is an unaccompanied alien child . This designation does not result in a family separation, as the grouping is not considered to be a family unit.

If CBP determines the family unit to be fraudulent or if there is a criminal history for the adult(s) in the family, the adult(s) will be separated from the juveniles. CBP does not track separations that originate from fraudulent family cases, unless trafficking is suspected. In cases of suspected trafficking, CBP refers the cases to ICE Homeland Security Investigations.

Response: U.S Customs and Border Protection currently has 31.5 miles of primary pedestrian bollard wall on the BMGR constructed under the Pedestrian Fence 70 (PF70) program in 2007. This was a bollard-hybrid design.

Question: What federal department or agency paid for the fencing that currently exists?

Response: U.S Customs and Border Protection.

Question: Please provide a description of the barrier that is being planned, including its anticipated cost, construction schedule, height, length, and design.

Response: The Department of Homeland Security and U.S Customs and Border Protection have requested that the Department of Defense construct a 30-foot steel bollard barrier in a secondary position offset 150 feet from the existing primary barrier, an all-weather single lane road, and vehicular and pedestrian access gates. Cost and schedule are to be determined by DoD.

Question: Will the new barrier replace existing fencing, or will it serve as a secondary barrier?

Response: The new barrier will serve as a secondary barrier.

Question: How does the barrier that is being planned relate to the 28 miles of replacement primary pedestrian barrier CBP is planning to build in the U.S. Border Patrol's Yuma Sector using Fiscal Year (FY) 2018 appropriated funds?

Response: CBP's Fiscal Year 2018 border barrier replacement funding includes approximately 28 miles of primary replacement in Yuma Sector. Approximately 12 of

Primary:	The Honorable Claire McCaskill
Committee:	HOMELAND SECURITY (SENATE)

Question: According to a report that was publicly released by the Government Accountability Office (GAO) on August 6, 2018, an Operational Review Board composed of Border Patrol subject matter experts reviewed and edited initial Decision Support Tool rankings.

Please identify all members of the Operational Review Board by name and title, and please provide documentation of the board's decision to edit initial Decision Support Tool rankings.

Response: The Operational Review Board (ORB) was comprised of the following subject matter experts from the U.S. Border Patrol (USBP) Headquarters:

Acting Chief of Law Enforcement Operations Directorate, Chair
Associate Chiefs from the various corridors who had operational knowledge of their respective sector areas of responsibility
Assistant Chiefs from the various corridors who had operational knowledge of their respective sector areas of responsibility
Headquarters Intelligence Assistant Chiefs and Analysts who were familiar with Transnational Criminal Organizations (TCOs) Techniques Tactics and Procedures (TTPs) and nation-wide threats and trends
CBP professionals from the Office of Acquisitions

The board's decision to edit the initial Decision Support Tool (DST) rankings was based on subject matter expertise and other factors and was documented on Appendix B of the Border Security Improvement Plan (BSIP) dated January 4, 2018. The ORB's process for the final rankings is provided below which is an excerpt from the BSIP.

A core group of USBP subject matter experts reviewed the scores and rankings derived from the border wall decision support tool to determine final recommendations for Impedance and Denial (I&D) investments to USBP executive leadership. During the meeting, USBP shared intel and threat analysis to set the stage for the discussion. Sector-by-Sector reviews of all segments and associated rankings were then conducted.

Rationale for all border groupings was restated and confirmed, with few refinements to groupings made in real-time. Further validation of segment scoring and groupings set the stage for prioritizing groups of proposed border wall miles.

ORB conducted a comparative review that assessed the segments and groups against one another to ensure individual scoring accurately reflected border-wide operational

Question#:	11
Topic:	Enforcement Actions
Hearing:	Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking and Abuse
Primary:	The Honorable Claire McCaskill
Committee:	HOMELAND SECURITY (SENATE)

Question: How many enforcement actions has Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) taken against unaccompanied alien child (UAC) sponsors each month between January 20, 2017 and August 16, 2018.

Response: U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) has taken enforcement actions against 41 individuals who came to its attention pursuant to the April 13, 2018 Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) between ICE, U.S. Customs and Border Protection, and the Department of Health and Human Services. However, based on the information received by ICE, it cannot specify whether the 41 individuals were potential sponsors or adult household members. The MOA addresses information exchanges between each department, enhances cooperation, and includes additional safeguards for the vetting of potential sponsors or adult household members of unaccompanied alien children. ICE Enforcement and Removal Operations does not otherwise track the requested data.

Question: Was the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) notified in advance of these enforcement actions? If so, what coordination took place?

Response: ICE does not provide notification to the Department of Health and Human Services Office of Refugee Resettlement in advance of enforcement actions against unaccompanied alien children sponsors or adult household members.

Question#:	12
Topic:	Notifications
Hearing:	Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children from Human Trafficking and Abuse
Primary:	The Honorable Claire McCaskill
Committee:	HOMELAND SECURITY (SENATE)

Question: Under the Memorandum of Agreement and the Joint Concept of Operations, will ORR be notified if ICE plans to conduct enforcement actions against the sponsors of UACs?

Response: U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), and the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) signed a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) on April 13, 2018, to address information exchanges between each department, to enhance cooperation, and to include several additional safeguards.

Similarly, to further ensure that unaccompanied alien children (UAC) are protected from trafficking and abuse, and pursuant to the 2016 MOA, DHS and HHS have completed a Joint Concept of Operations (JCO), which memorializes the existing processes and procedures in areas where the two departments have joint responsibility in protecting UAC. This important document lays out the responsibilities of each department, and further delineates these responsibilities to the Components within DHS and HHS.

ICE greatly values its working relationship with the HHS Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) in addressing the UAC population; however, ORR is not a law enforcement agency, nor does it have a role in the apprehension, removal, and in some cases, criminal prosecution of aliens. Generally, ICE would not share any law enforcement sensitive information, including details of any planned enforcement actions or targeting information in advance of the action to protect the integrity of the operation and ensure the safety and welfare of the public, officers, and the target aliens. Further, there is nothing within the JCO or the MOA that addresses advance notice of enforcement actions.

Question: What steps will ICE take to ensure the safety of UACs or the safety of any other children present in a sponsor's home during and after an enforcement action?

Response: Since this MOA was signed and the JCO completed, DHS has continued to work with HHS to make meaningful improvements to our information sharing arrangements, in line with the Administration's immigration principles and priorities, and in accordance with the applicable laws. This includes policies surrounding ICE enforcement operations. Targeted enforcement actions are an integral part of ICE's mission to enforce the nation's immigration laws. ICE prioritizes enforcement efforts on those aliens who pose a threat to public safety or national security, while not excluding from enforcement any immigration violators encountered during the course of daily operations. Targeted arrests may occur against specific individuals who have been identified and thoroughly investigated through a variety of resources. In accordance with existing law and policy and at its discretion, ICE may take additional aliens into custody who are encountered during the course of targeted enforcement actions and who are not legally present in the United States.

That said, ICE Enforcement and Removal Operations officers may encounter juveniles during enforcement activities. The presence of any juveniles at a target location, or in the care of a targeted alien, is always a possibility and officers investigate the presence of juveniles prior to conducting any enforcement operation. During targeted enforcement operations, ICE personnel ensure that the agency's immigration enforcement activities do not unnecessarily disrupt the parental rights of both alien parents or legal guardians of juveniles. If ICE takes a primary caregiver into custody, procedures vary depending on whether the juvenile is accompanied, unaccompanied, a citizen, or a non-citizen.

Further, if any juveniles are present during an enforcement action, officers work to ensure that a parent or legal guardian is present to ensure the safety of the juvenile. Often, officers will also coordinate with the arrested alien to identify another family member or neighbor that can ensure the safety of the juvenile or juveniles until another family member can arrive on scene. In the absence of an identified responsible adult, coordination takes place with the local and/or state child protective service and/or HHS to ensure that the juvenile or juveniles are placed in a safe environment prior to leaving the scene of the arrest with a family member or other responsible adult.

“Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children
 From Human Trafficking and Abuse”
 August 16, 2018

1. For each year between FY 2014 and FY 2018, what was the average length of time that unaccompanied alien children (UAC) were in the custody of the Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR)? Please provide a detailed breakdown for each month based on the age and gender of the children.

RESPONSE: ORR does not collect data for length of care based on gender and age. The following is the average length of care for all children:

Average Length of Care FY 15-FY 2018*
FY 14	Data not available
FY 15	34 Days
FY 16	38 Days
FY 17	48 Days
FY 18	60 Days

*Excludes foster care as well as therapeutic and residential treatment UAC cases.
 Source: Unaccompanied Alien Children Program Monthly Statistics

2. What is the longest length of time that children are permitted to stay in ORR custody? After that period ends, what happens to the child?

RESPONSE: There is no limit on the length of time that children may stay in ORR custody. However, UAC may not remain in ORR care after turning 18 years of age (“aging out”), when they may be transferred to the Department of Homeland Security, or receive lawful immigration status. Under its policy, ORR does not release UAC on his/her own recognizance.

The following factors may contribute to extended stay cases (more than 4 months):

- The child or youth has no viable sponsor.
- A legal service provider or attorney has screened the child or youth as eligible for immigration relief.

- Another reason prevents the UAC from returning to the home country, such as the child's country of origin is in a state of emergency.

Whenever possible, ORR attempts to place extended stay cases in long-term foster care (LTFC), where UAC receive many services, such as education, in a community setting. For more information about LTFC provision of services, see Section 3.6 of the ORR Online Policy Guide.

3. For each year between FY 2014 and FY 2018, please provide a breakdown of the age and gender of all children in ORR custody.

RESPONSE: Please see attachment 1, which provides the number of initial placements by month.

4. If a child calls the ORR hotline and reports that they are being abused or harmed in some way, what responsibility does HHS have to ensure that child's safety?

RESPONSE: ORR takes all allegations of abuse or neglect seriously.

If a child who has been released to a sponsor calls the ORR hotline and reports that he or she is being abused or harmed in some way, ORR has protocols in place to ensure allegations are promptly reported to Child Protective Services or law enforcement.

All reports made to the ORR hotline must be documented and reported in accordance with mandatory reporting laws, state licensing requirements, federal laws and regulations, and ORR policies and procedures. The call center must report concerns about children's safety and well-being to appropriate investigative agencies, as applicable. The call center also notifies ORR of immediate dangers to a released child's safety and well-being.

ORR handles these types of reports similarly to how ORR addresses information from the Safety and Well-Being Follow-Up Call, which care providers conduct 30 calendar days after release of the UAC. These procedures are included in the UAC Manual of Procedures (UAC MAP), which is disseminated to every ORR care provider, staff, and contractors. Relevant procedures are as follows:

Child May be in Immediate Danger

If the follow-up call indicates that the child may be in immediate danger (i.e., in immediate danger of serious harm), the designated staff does the following:

- Calls 9-1-1 immediately.
- Stays on the phone with the child until authorities arrive.
- Reports any emergency involving 9-1-1 to the ORR National Call Center Help Line at 1 (800) 203-7001.
- Complies with mandatory reporting laws, state licensing requirements, and federal laws and regulations for reporting to local child protective agencies and/or law enforcement.

- If the sponsor is the alleged perpetrator, flags the sponsor and provides explanation as to why the sponsor is being flagged in the UAC Portal.
- Emails notification to the federal field staff (FFS) who approved the release (and the Post Release Service provider, if applicable) and includes UAC name and A number; UAC date of release; new sponsor/child contact phone number; sponsor address; previous ORR placement; summary of call; actions taken (including information on reporting the incident and any associated case numbers).

The FFS who is notified that the child may be in immediate danger immediately elevates the incident to the FFS supervisor, reviews the allegation, and ensures that the incident was reported to the appropriate authority to investigate. The FFS also elevates any identified safety trends or issues to the FFS supervisor, such as an indication that the sponsor is involved in trafficking UAC. If the care provider's designated staff did not report the allegation correctly, the FFS provides technical assistance.

If the care provider notifies the Intakes Hotline that the follow-up call indicates that the child may be in immediate danger and was reported to 9-1-1, ORR intakes immediately notifies the FFS supervisor (or on-call FFS supervisor if after hours). The FFS supervisor immediately informs the senior FFS supervisor.

Child May Be Unsafe

If the follow-up call indicates that the child may be unsafe (but not in immediate danger) the designated staff completes the steps above under Child May Be in Immediate Danger with the exception of dialing 9-1-1 and contacting the ORR Intakes Hotline.

The FFS who is notified that the child may be unsafe, reviews the allegation and ensures that it was properly reported and, if it wasn't, provides technical assistance.

5. How many allegations of abuse has ORR received regarding children in the care of sponsors between FY 2016 and FY 2018? How are these allegations investigated?

RESPONSE: The ORR hotline reported 1,142 allegations of abuse to ORR when children were in care of sponsors between FY 2016 and the first two weeks of October 2018. Note that the figure includes all incidents that indicate any interaction with Child Protective Services, not just those in which the sponsor was the perpetrator.

ORR is not a law enforcement or investigative body, however, ORR follows protocols for mandatory and other reporting requirements. These incidents are investigated according to the procedures outlined in response to Question #4 above.

When ORR receives notification that a child is in danger, ORR reviews the matter to determine what, if any, additional action should be taken, including but not limited to reporting the matter to local law enforcement and protective services, or state child welfare licensing authorities, providing post release services to the released child and his or her sponsor, requiring corrective action to be taken to remedy any failure to comply with federal and state laws and regulations, licensing and accreditation standards, ORR policies and procedures, and child welfare standards, or providing technical assistance, as needed, to ensure that deficiencies are addressed.

6. How many allegations of abuse has ORR received regarding children in ORR care between FY 2016 and FY 2018? How are these allegations investigated?

RESPONSE: Care providers report to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) any allegations of sexual abuse that are subject to federal reporting laws or could constitute violations of federal law. Sexual abuse is defined at 34 U.S.C. 20341 and in ORR regulations at 45 C.F.R. 411.6. Sexual abuse can include allegations such as touching of the buttocks or allegations of sexual assault, whether it was a minor-on-minor or staff-on-minor allegation. Additionally, care providers report sexual abuse to child protective services (CPS), the state licensing agency, and the HHS Office of Inspector General (OIG). In FY 2016 and 2017, care providers reported 612 allegations of sexual abuse to the FBI. Of those 612 allegations, 105 allegations involved a staff member at an ORR-funded care provider facility. In October 2017 through July 2018, care providers reported 412 allegations of sexual abuse to the FBI. Of those 412 allegations, 49 allegations involved a staff member at an ORR-funded care provider facility.

ORR reviews every report of sexual abuse submitted by care providers. When appropriate, ORR issues corrective actions or stops further placement of unaccompanied alien children until the care provider addresses identified issues. CPS and state licensing investigate allegations of sexual abuse according to state law, and the FBI and the HHS OIG investigate allegations according to federal laws and procedures.

- 1. You recently provided the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) phone numbers for deported parents, after you were ordered to do so by the court in Ms. L v. ICE. Many of those phone numbers were apparently in the government’s possession much earlier. What is your justification for not providing those phone numbers on a rolling basis, as you obtained them?

RESPONSE: The Federal plan for reunification of separated children with class member parents outside the United States, developed by HHS in partnership with the Departments of Homeland Security, State, and Justice, includes a role for the ACLU. Under the plan, HHS provides the ACLU Steering Committee with the contact information for class member parents in their home country so that the ACLU can make contact with such parents outside the United States, advise them of their rights and options, and receive from the parents a final, knowing, and voluntary decision as to whether the parent wishes the child to be reunified with the parent in home country, or for his or her child to continue through standard ORR sponsorship processes to be discharged to a sponsor (almost always a family member) here in the United States. The plan was approved by Judge Dana Sabraw. ORR does not routinely provide contact information for parents in their home country to nongovernmental entities absent a court order.

“Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children From Human Trafficking and Abuse”
August 16, 2018

1. In 2018 to date, how many children total have been placed with:
 - a. Category 1 (parent or legal guardian) sponsors
 - b. Category 2 (close relative) sponsors
 - c. Category 3 (other) sponsors

RESPONSE: The following chart provides the requested data:

UAC Discharged by Sponsor Category - Fiscal Year '18
Sponsor Category	# of UAC Discharged
Category 1 (parent or legal guardian)	14,651
Category 2 (close relative)	16,464
Category 3 (other)	3,787
Grand Total	34,902

2. How many UACs are currently in each type of HHS care (e.g., shelter, foster care, secure, staff secure, tender-aged facility)? How much does it cost to house one UAC per day in each of those types of settings?

RESPONSE:

The table below highlights the type of UAC care provider, the number of UAC in care, and the care provider's occupancy percentage as of March 11, 2019.

Data as of March 11, 2019
Type	Shelter	Transitional Foster Care	Residential Care	Staff-Secure	Secure	LTFC	Therapeutic	Influx Shelter - Active	Total
In Care	8049	1279	36	96	16	439	8	1750	11673
% occupancy	86%	87%	72%	64%	28%	72%	67%	100%	87%

The average daily cost to care for a child in a permanent HHS shelter is approximately $262 per day. The cost to care for a child in Influx Care Facilities varies but is approximately $700 to $800 per day at the current site.

3. In 2018, how many children:

a. Has HHS offered post release services?

RESPONSE: All UAC who meet the Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVRPA) criteria for a home study also receive mandatory post release services (PRS) following their release from ORR custody.

The TVPRA also authorizes ORR to provide PRS to UAC with mental health or other needs that could benefit from ongoing assistance from a social welfare agency.

Other UAC may also receive PRS if they are specially identified as needing additional assistance in connecting to appropriate resources in the community.

b. Have received post-release services?

RESPONSE: In FY18, 14,088 released minors received PRS.

c. Have refused offered post-release services?

RESPONSE: ORR does not yet have data available on PRS declined by sponsors in 2018.

4. What kinds of post-release services has HHS provided UACs in 2018? How many UACs have received each type of service in 2018?

RESPONSE:

PRS include the following service referral areas:

- Placement Stability and Safety: PRS providers must work with sponsors to address challenges in parenting a UAC. This may include guidance about maintaining a safe home; supervision of the UAC; protecting the UAC from threats by smugglers, traffickers, and gangs; as well as information about child abuse, neglect, separation, grief and loss, and how these issues affect children.
- Immigration Proceedings: The PRS provider must monitor and help facilitate the sponsor's plan to ensure the UAC's attendance at all immigration court proceedings and compliance with DHS requirements.
- Guardianship: If the sponsor is not a parent or legal guardian of the child, then the PRS provider must provide the sponsor information about the benefits of obtaining legal guardianship of the child. If the sponsor is interested in becoming the child's legal guardian, then the provider may assist the sponsor in identifying the legal resources to do so.
- Legal Services: PRS providers must assist the sponsor in accessing relevant legal service resources including resources for immigration matters and unresolved juvenile justice issues.
- Education: PRS providers must assist the sponsor with school enrollment and monitor the UAC's progress in school. PRS providers may also assist with alternative education plans for UAC who exceed the state's minimum age requirement for mandatory school attendance.
- Medical Services: PRS providers must assist the sponsor in obtaining medical insurance for the UAC and in locating medical providers that meet the individual needs of the child and the sponsor. If a child requires specialized medical assistance, the PRS provider must assist the sponsor in making and keeping medical appointments and monitoring the UAC's medical requirements.
- Individual Mental Health Services: PRS providers must provide the sponsor with relevant mental health resources and referrals for the UAC. The resources and referrals must take into account the individual needs of the UAC and sponsor. If a UAC requires specialized mental health assistance, PRS providers must assist the sponsor in making and keeping mental health appointments and monitoring the UAC's mental health requirements. PRS providers must provide guidance on the administration and monitoring of psychotropic medications, as needed.
- Family Stabilization/Counseling: PRS providers must provide the sponsor with relevant resources and referrals for family counseling and/or individual counseling that meet individual needs of the child and the sponsor.
- Substance Abuse: PRS providers must assist the sponsor in locating resources to help address any substance abuse-related needs of the UAC.
- Gang Prevention: PRS providers must provide the sponsor information about gang prevention programs in the sponsor's community.

- Other Services: PRS providers may assist the sponsor and UAC with accessing local resources in other specialized service areas based on the needs and at the request of the UAC.

PRS are not mandatory and released minors and their sponsors may choose to participate or not in these services. Once a minor is released to a sponsor, s/he is no longer in the custody of ORR.

ORR does not have data on PRS referrals for FY18. However, the table below highlights the types of community-based resources or services to which PRS providers referred released minors, in FY17.

Areas of Referrals for Community-Based Services	Number of minors referred to services in FY2017
Placement Stability and Safety	3,660
Legal Services	10,759
School Enrollment / Education	10,096
Medical Services	10,408
Individual Mental Health Services	8,287
Family Stabilization / Counseling	9,673
Substance Abuse	3,660

5. What kinds of legal services does HHS provide UACs?

RESPONSE: ORR has a contract to provide legal services to UAC. Legal service providers provide:

- Know Your Rights presentations;
- Screenings for legal relief and for human trafficking concerns;
- Direct representation for UAC in ORR care to the greatest extent practicable;
- Pro Bono legal representation to the greatest extent practicable; and
- Friends of the court services where applicable and allowed under local immigration court rules.

The providers collaborate with the Executive Office for Immigration Review in providing legal orientation presentations to all sponsors of UAC.

6. From January 1, 2016 to the present, how many UACs (a) in HHS facilities and (b) living with sponsors received each kind of legal service in each year?

RESPONSE: ORR provides Know-Your-Rights presentations to all children and youth within 7 to 10 days of admission into ORR custody in the minor's native language. Also, ORR conducts a legal screening, done by a case worker, paralegal, or attorney, which assesses a child's background, journey into the U.S., family members, and history of persecution, violence, and/or abuse for all UAC in its care.

ORR also provides direct representation to youth who are without reunification options (to those children for whom no sponsor is identified). ORR provides representation to these children regardless of whether they are identified for a form of immigration legal relief or not. ORR also provides direct representation to certain UAC who have entered into immigration proceedings while in HHS care.

ORR is under no legal obligation to pay for legal representation for UACs. Nonetheless, in certain circumstances specified in ORR guidelines, ORR does provide legal representation.

ORR also provides each minor with a Legal Resource Guide, which includes a list of potential pro bono and other legal service providers in their state.

The table below shows the services provided by ORR's legal service provider.

NOTE: These numbers depict the total number of unique services for each year. The sum of the services exceed the total unique number of children who received that service because, in a small number of cases, the same child may receive the same service multiple times.

7. From January 1, 2016 to the present, for how many UACs did HHS perform home studies in each year?

RESPONSE:

8. Please explain any changes made to the legal services provided to unaccompanied alien children (UACs) (a) in HHS facilities and (b) released to sponsors in 2018. Please also explain any planned changes to those services, including what those changes are and the reasoning for making those changes.

There have been no changes to legal services available to children in ORR care provider facilities. UAC in ORR custody receive Know Your Rights presentations, legal services screenings, court preparation assistance, and, if the child has no reunification options or enters immigration proceedings while in ORR care, direct representation from a legal service provider, funded by ORR.

RESPONSE: ORR previously paid for direct representation when a UAC was released in one of nine cities. However, due to funding constraints, ORR has halted the provision of legal services to these UACs. On May 18, 2018, ORR sent a directive to the legal services contractor instructing the contractor to not initiate new cases for UAC that are released in one of nine cities.

9. In 2017, HHS asked its Office of General Counsel (OGC) to evaluate its responsibilities and authorities for caring for UACs placed with sponsors. In early 2018, HHS asked OGC additional questions on that same topic. Has HHS received a response from OGC? If so, what was that response? If not, when does HHS expect a response?

RESPONSE: HHS has consistently maintained the position that custody of UAC terminates upon release. While ORR may continue to follow up in cases, and offer post-release services in other cases, the legal custodial relationship ends upon release. Most recently, the Administration articulated this position in its proposed rule on the “Apprehension, Processing, Care, and Custody of Alien Minors and Unaccompanied Alien Children.” See proposed rule at 45 C.F.R. 410.207 (83 FR 45486) (“Upon release to an approved sponsor, a UAC is no longer in the custody of ORR.”)

10. Have any HHS facilities that care for UACs lost their license to care for UACs or other children since January 1, 2016?

RESPONSE: On October 24, SouthWest Keys surrendered their license to two of their facilities in Arizona. No other ORR-funded facility has lost its license since January 1, 2016.

11. Since January 1, 2016, how many children has HHS removed from facilities that care for UACs because of allegations of physical or sexual abuse?

RESPONSE: In September of this fiscal year, ORR transferred a total of 90 UAC from one SouthWest Key facility following abuse allegations. In 2017, ORR transferred 95 UAC from one SouthWest Key facility to another shelter. In late March and early April 2016, ORR transferred 31 UAC out of a Galveston care provider agency.

12. In April 2018, HHS and DHS signed a Memorandum of Agreement (MOA) governing information sharing about UACs and potential sponsors. Advocates for UACs have expressed concerns that because the MOA might allow DHS to use sponsor information for enforcement purposes, fewer potential sponsors—who are frequently undocumented—might apply to house UACs because they fear enforcement.

a. Please describe how the MOA works in practice.

RESPONSE: ORR’s current procedures for requesting background checks from sponsors and adult household members are outlined in the UAC Manual of Procedures (UAC MAP). This includes requesting an Authorization for Release of Information from all individuals who will need fingerprints; updating all requests for background checks in the UAC Portal; and coordinating with other federal agencies to put in requests, process results, and make release decisions based on these and other factors.

An abridged excerpt of current fingerprint background check procedures from the UAC MAP are included in Appendix 1.

b. Is the sponsor information shared under the MOU being used for immigration enforcement activities?

RESPONSE: ORR's policy continues to be that ORR does not disqualify potential sponsors on the basis of their immigration status. ORR uses immigration status information to determine if a sponsor care plan will be needed if the sponsor needs to leave the United States.

ORR is not a law enforcement agency. HHS defers to DHS regarding questions about how it uses information obtained from the MOU with HHS.

c. Does HHS anticipate that undocumented sponsors may be less likely to offer to house UACs as a result of the MOA?

RESPONSE: ORR is continually reviewing data to determine new trends in submission of family reunification applications.

ORR also continually responds to unanticipated needs from the UAC program. However, ORR's mission has always remained the same: to care for the well-being and safety of UAC in its care and to identify and assess potential sponsors.

ORR tracks UAC placements and releases on a daily basis. This hands on approach helps us respond immediately when the need arises for additional bed capacity or other short term measures.

d. Has the Department prepared for that possibility? If so, how? If not, why not?

RESPONSE: The implementation of the MOA correlated with increases in UAC length of care and with growth in the UAC population. ORR has actively worked to both reduce length of stay and expand bed capacity.

 Please note that ORR is in the process of updating the MAP based on a new operational directive that was issued on 3/25/19. Procedures for this operational directive have not yet been incorporated into the MAP.*

FINGERPRINT CHECK (INCLUDES NATIONAL (FBI) CRIMINAL HISTORY CHECK, DHS CRIMINAL HISTORY CHECK, AND IMMIGRATION STATUS CHECK)

1. The case manager obtains an Authorization for Release of Information (ARI) and government issued photo ID for all relevant parties.

NOTE: If needed, some ORR digital fingerprint sites offer in-person assistance completing the FRP and/or ARI.

2. The case manager asks any sponsor, adult household member, and/or adult caregiver who claims to be a U.S. citizen to provide a copy of his/her U.S. Birth Certificate, Certificate of Naturalization or Certificate of Citizenship, or U.S. Passport.

NOTE: Not submitting a copy of a U.S. Birth Certificate, Certificate of Naturalization or Certificate of Citizenship, or U.S. Passport will affect the accuracy of the Immigration Status Check and PSC/DCS may document the subject of the check as having possible immigration issues.

3. The case manager assists the potential sponsor, adult household member, and/or adult caregiver in scheduling a fingerprint appointment at an ORR digital fingerprint site to occur within 3 business days of receiving the signed ARI and government issued photo ID. If distance or other limitations prevent the individual(s) from traveling to an ORR digital fingerprint site, the case manager explains the process of using paper fingerprint cards.

NOTE: If the fingerprint subject received assistance completing the FRP and/or ARI at an ORR digital fingerprint site, the digital site will email the completed and signed FRP documents and/or ARI to the case manager.

NOTE: If the fingerprint subject uses paper fingerprint cards, the fingerprint cards must be mailed back to the case manager.

4. The case manager completes the Check Requested field in the Background Check table in the Sponsor Information section of the UAC Portal.
5. The case manager fully completes the Sponsor Check Coversheet. If any of the following conditions apply the case manager documents the condition in the comments section of the Sponsor Check Coversheet:
 - If paper fingerprint cards are used, the name of the mail carrier (UPS, FedEx, etc.) and the tracking number must be included.
 - If the case manager is requesting the fingerprint check be expedited, the reason must be noted (see Quick Glance: Expediting Fingerprint Check Results for full requirements).
 - If the case manager believes the individual previously completed a fingerprint check, that must be noted and the approximate date should be included.
 - If the individual is the sponsor or household member for more than one UAC, the name and A# of those UAC must be included.

Quick Glance: Expediting Fingerprint Check Results

Case managers may request expedited processing for Fingerprint Checks under the following circumstances:

- Imminent age out
- Legal issue
- UAC medical issue
- Cat I cases that require fingerprint check results before the UAC may be released (see Quick Glance: Release of UAC Prior to Receiving Fingerprint Check Results)

To request expedited processing and allow PSC/DCS to appropriately prioritize expedited cases, the case manager must include "REQUEST TO EXPEDITE:" before the subject line of the email and notate the following in the Comments section of the Sponsor Check Coversheet:

- Basis for the request
- Date by which results are needed
- If there are other items pending (e.g., home study) that would not allow for immediate release of the UAC once fingerprint check results have been received

PSC/DCS will prioritize all cases for which expedited processing is requested that fall under the circumstances listed above, but cannot guarantee results will be available within the requested date.

If the case manager requests expedited processing for any circumstance not listed above, PSC/DCS will elevate the request to ORR HQ for approval.

6. The case manager reviews the Sponsor Check Coversheet, ARI, government issued photo ID, and paper fingerprint cards (if applicable) for accuracy, completeness, and legibility.
7. If paper fingerprint cards are used, the case manager uses an express mail service (e.g., UPS, FedEx, USPS Priority Mail) to send the following to PSC/DCS for next morning delivery:
 - Two original fingerprint cards (ORR does not collect Social Security Numbers and this field should be blacked out)
 - Copy of the Sponsor Check Coversheet
 - Copy of the Authorization for Release of Information
 - Copy of the subject's government issued photo ID

8. The case manager formally requests the Fingerprint Check using the email template below.

Email Template: Fingerprint Check Requests
From:	Case Manager
To:	SponsorCheck.os@hhs.gov
Subject:	Fingerprint Check Request for [sponsor's initials] <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If requesting expedited results, add "REQUEST TO EXPEDITE:" • If the case requires results before the UAC may be released, add "RESULTS REQUIRED:"
Attachments:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Sponsor Check Cover Sheet • Authorization for Release of Information • Copy of government issued photo ID (If individual is claiming U.S. citizenship, a U.S. Birth Certificate, Certificate of Naturalization or Certificate of Citizenship, or U.S. Passport is preferable)
NOTE: All of the documents listed above as attachments must be submitted to PSC/DCS together. The documents must be merged into one PDF. Case managers must password protect any Personally Identifiable Information (PII) that is sent to PSC/DCS. The Sponsor Check Cover Sheet, ARI, and photo ID must be password protected. The body of the email includes the message that the password for the attached documents will be sent separately. A second email should include the universal UAC Password which should be used by all care providers and ORR staff and contractors. Do not include PII in follow up emails.

9. The case manager determines if the UAC is eligible for release prior to receipt of background check results (see Quick Glance: Release of UAC Prior to Receiving Fingerprint Check Results).

NOTE: The Case Manager should staff eligible cases with the FFS, or notify the FFS of an eligible case via email, as soon as possible. The Case Manager and FFS document in the Release Request that the case is being processed without waiting for fingerprint results because the case falls under the "December 2018 Operational Directive."

Quick Glance: Release of UAC Prior to Receiving Fingerprint Check Results

A UAC may be recommended and approved for release without obtaining the Fingerprint Check results if:

- The sponsor is Category 1 or Category 2

- A public records check did not reveal possible disqualifying factors under Section 2.7.4;
- There is no documented risk to the safety of the unaccompanied alien child and the child is not considered especially vulnerable;
- The case is not being referred for a home study;
- All family reunification application, assessments, documentation, and other required background check results (with the exception of CA/N Check results) needed to approve a safe release have been received and reviewed by the case manager; and
- Receipt of the Fingerprint Check results is the only step preventing a release recommendation.

Note: If the case manager anticipates that the Fingerprint Check results will not be received until after the UAC is released, they must still request the Fingerprint Check from PSC/DCS prior to submission of the Release Request. This includes submission of all required paperwork (Sponsor Check Coversheet, Authorization for Release of Information, and Photo ID). Sending an email without paperwork is not sufficient.

In any instance where a UAC is released and possible derogatory information is later discovered after Fingerprint Check results are received, the FFS makes a case by case determination on what follow up is required, if any. State CPS or law enforcement may be notified if there is determined to be any immediate danger to a child's welfare. The FFS may also attempt to refer the case for post-release services.

10. PSC/DCS reviews incoming fingerprint check requests for accuracy, completeness, and legibility. If any required documents are missing or the request does not comply with other requirements, PSC/DCS rejects the submission and informs the case manager that the request must be resubmitted. PSC/DCS processes background checks in the order in which they are received and any requests that need to be resubmitted fall to the bottom of the queue.
11. PSC/DCS completes the Date Requested, Date Results Received, and Results fields in the Background Check table in the Sponsor Information section of the UAC Portal when the Fingerprint Check is complete and, if applicable, uploads criminal history reports to ORR Connect (SharePoint website).
12. PSC/DCS emails a spreadsheet containing Fingerprint Check results to the designated ORR staff once a day. The spreadsheet includes the following:
 - Immigration Status Check results
 - i. Immigration Status – whether the individual is a U.S. citizen, appears legal, or appears to have possible immigration issues)
 - ii. Law Enforcement Support Center (LESC) Immigration Status – this is the result provided by DHS/ICE

- National (FBI) Criminal and DHS Criminal History Check result (i.e., whether the individual appears clear, if the case was referred to the assigned FFS, or if the individual had unclassifiable fingerprints)
- Confirmation results were entered into the UAC Portal
- Whether criminal history record was uploaded into ORR Connect

NOTE: For expedited cases, PSC/DCS sends results directly to the case manager and copies the FFS instead of including the results in the spreadsheet (See Quick Glance: Expediting Fingerprint Check Results).

13. The designated ORR staff emails the Fingerprint Check results received from PSC/DCS individually to each care provider facility and copies the assigned FFS.
14. The care provider distributes Fingerprint Check results received from the designated ORR staff to the assigned case managers.

NOTE: If the prints are unclassifiable, the case manager assists the individual in scheduling a fingerprint appointment at an ORR digital fingerprint site so that a second set of prints may be obtained, even if the UAC has already been released. If the individual does not have access to an ORR digital fingerprint site, then paper fingerprint cards may be used.

NOTE: ORR federal staff and PSC/DCS do not release criminal history records produced by National (FBI) Criminal History Checks or DHS Criminal History Checks to ORR grantees, ORR contractors, third party reviewers, outside organizations, or individuals. ORR does not confirm or deny the existence of the records and does not share the content of a record verbally or in writing.

NOTE: Fingerprint Check results are valid for 270 days from the date results are received, which is documented in the Date Results Received column of the Background Check Table in the UAC Portal. If the UAC is not approved for release before fingerprint check results expire, the sponsor, adult household member, and/or adult caregiver must be re-fingerprinted and a new fingerprint check must be requested from PSC/DCS.

Quick Glance: Requesting Status Updates for Background Check Results FINGERPRINT CHECKS Case managers may email PSC/DCS to request a status update on their Fingerprint Check request. However, unless the case has been expedited, the case manager must wait at least seven business days from the time they emailed a complete Fingerprint Check request to PSC/DCS (or from the time when PSC/DCS received paper fingerprint cards if digital fingerprints were not taken) before asking for a status update.

During periods of influx or other circumstances where there is a delay in processing Fingerprint Checks, PSC/DCS may direct case managers to wait for a longer period of time before requesting a status update. In order to avoid exacerbating situations in which there are processing delays, case managers must follow any such guidance provided by PSC/DCS.

To request a status update, case manager must enter "Status Update Request for [sponsor/household member's initials]" in the subject line of the email and include the following information in a separate password-protected document:

- For All Requests: sponsor/household member name and date of birth, UAC name and A#
- For Digital Fingerprints: ORR digital fingerprint site name, date fingerprinted
- For Paper Fingerprints: courier name and tracking number, shipping date

Questions for the Record
Executive Office for Immigration Review
Before the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs
For a Hearing Entitled
“Oversight of Efforts to Protect Unaccompanied Alien Children
From Human Trafficking and Abuse”
August 16, 2018

Questions Posed By Senator Claire McCaskill

1. For each year between FY 2013 and FY 2018, please provide the following information:
- A. How many unaccompanied alien children (UAC) had representation during the course of their immigration proceedings? How long was the duration of that representation?

Response: By statute, the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) works to address issues of representation for UAC in, or who have been in, its care and custody. The Department of Justice respectfully defers to HHS regarding UAC’s access to counsel.

The Executive Office of Immigration Review (EOIR) does not calculate the length of representation in cases in immigration proceedings. The chart below indicates the number of overall UAC cases with representation of record during the course of immigration proceedings by fiscal year. This includes both active pending and completed cases.

FY	Represented
FY 2013	6,881
FY 2014	16,482
FY 2015	33,841
FY 2016	51,920
FY 2017	59,512
FY 2018	57,376

In addition to the cases reflected on the chart, there are currently 17,885 UAC cases that are pending but inactive because they have been administratively closed. Of those, 16,479, or approximately 92 percent, have representation.

B. How many children were represented when they were ordered removed?

Response: Please see the chart below regarding the number of UAC who had representation at the time they were ordered removed.

FY	Total
FY 2013	237
FY 2014	212
FY 2015	1,007
FY 2016	768
FY 2017	1,168
FY 2018	1,779

C. How many UACs were ordered removed? How many were subsequently removed by Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE)?

Response: The chart below indicates the number of removal orders issued to UAC each fiscal year. EOIR plays no role in executing removal orders and respectfully defers to the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) regarding the number of UAC who were actually removed subsequent to the issuance of a removal order.

FY	Removal Orders
FY 2013	1,130
FY 2014	2,139
FY 2015	7,530
FY 2016	6,805
FY 2017	7,576
FY 2018	7,722

D. How many UACs have cases that are still pending before the Executive Office for Immigration Review (EOIR)?

Response: As of September 7, 2018, there are 83,343 UAC cases actively pending before EOIR. The chart below indicates the fiscal year in which the currently pending cases were initiated.

FY Initiated	Pending
< FY 2013	486
FY 2013	434
FY 2014	3,277
FY 2015	8,256
FY 2016	19,846
FY 2017	28,775
FY 2018	22,269
Total	83,343

There are also currently 17,885 UAC cases that are pending but inactive because they have been administratively closed.

- E. How many UACs were ordered removed in absentia? How many of those children that were ordered removed in absentia had representation?

Response: Please see the chart below.

FY	In Absentia	In Absentia with Representation
FY 2013	829	89
FY 2014	1,849	165
FY 2015	6,374	616
FY 2016	6,072	680
FY 2017	6,609	843
FY 2018	6,191	968

2. For each year between FY 2013 and FY 2018, please provide a breakdown of the length of time it took to process cases on the detained docket, broken down by case type. Please provide a similar breakdown for the non-detained docket.

Response: Please see the charts below.

Median (In Days) for Detained Initial Case Completions
FY	Removal	Asylum-Only	Withholding-Only	Credible Fear Review	Reasonable Fear Review	Claimed Status Review	Rescission
FY 2013	26	72	83	4	7	5	N/A

Median (In Days) for Non-Detained Initial Case Completions
FY	Removal	Rescission
FY 2013	637	476

FY 2016	595	386
FY 2017	637	962
FY 2018	752	487

3. How are UACs provided notice of where and when their immigration court proceedings will take place?

Response: The initial hearing time and date may be set by DHS upon service of a Notice to Appear (NTA) on the UAC. If the UAC is under the age of 14, DHS must also serve the individual with whom the UAC resides and, whenever possible, serve a near relative, guardian, committee, or friend. For UAC between the ages of 14 and 18, the NTA does not need to be served on an adult, except for those UACs residing within the Ninth Circuit. If the UAC is in HHS custody, DHS serves the head of the facility. If the UAC has counsel or a representative of record, that individual is also served. Service may be in person or by mail.

If the hearing date and time are not set by DHS in the NTA, EOIR will mail a hearing notice to the UAC at the last address provided. EOIR mails a hearing notice, generally by first class mail, to the UAC's or custodian's address (as applicable) as indicated on the NTA or as last provided by the custodian. The hearing notice contains the date, time, and location where the proceeding will be held, the rights the individual has in removal proceedings, notice of a requirement to inform the immigration court of any address changes, and other information. EOIR also operates an automated case information hotline to allow respondents to call to receive the date, time, and location of upcoming hearings. The child's custodian is responsible for providing notice of address changes, which must be filed with the immigration court within five business days of the address change. If the individual has counsel or a representative of record, notice of the hearing is also provided to that individual. An initial hearing notice is typically sent by mail. Subsequent notices are given at the conclusion of each hearing and are generally served in person.
