Introduction

This booklet details the Members of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and its predecessor Committees, and their organization. The U.S. House of Representatives, Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure exercises legislative authority over a broad spectrum of the national activities that influence the development of America and the lives of its people.

The Committee can trace its roots back to the early beginnings of the Republic, and its influence has stimulated national growth and prosperity; from the first U.S. public works project in the First Congress in 1789—a lighthouse on Cape Henry in Hampton Roads, Virginia—to the present day.

Prior to the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (Pub. L. 97-601) the jurisdictional aspects of the Committee can be traced to the following predecessor Committees: The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; the Committee on Rivers and Harbors; the Committee on Roads and Canals; and the Committee on Levees.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS

The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds was established in 1837 with jurisdiction over “subjects relating to the public edifices and grounds within the city of Washington.” The jurisdiction was expanded slightly in 1869 to include the care of the Restaurant within the Capitol. In 1871, the jurisdiction was further expanded to include “all the public buildings constructed by the United States.” Again, in 1880, the Committee’s jurisdiction was clarified further to include “public works and occupied or improved grounds of the United States, other than appropriations thereof.”

COMMITTEE ON RIVERS AND HARBORS

The Committee on Rivers and Harbors was established in 1883 with jurisdiction to study measures “making appropriations for rivers and harbors.” In 1920, the Committee was expanded to include bills “authorizing the improvement of river and harbors,” which had been up until that time held with the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. The jurisdiction was further expanded in 1911 to include the functions of the Committee on Levees and Improvements of the Mississippi River (originally, Committee on Levees). In 1916 certain jurisdiction interests of the Committee were moved to the Committee on Flood Control.

COMMITTEE ON ROADS AND CANALS

The Committee on Roads and Canals was established in 1831, and it was determined that its establishment would “lead to the impression that the House was disposed to systematize internal improvement, and with it the present high duties on imports, &c.”
During the 25th Congress (1837-39) the House rejected a proposal to change the name to the Committee on Public Improvement, but in 1869 it approved a motion to change the name to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

The Committee reported legislation concerning the survey, construction, and improvement of canals within the United States as well as a canal across the Isthmus of Panama. The Committee's jurisdiction also included improvements in river navigation, construction of bridges over rivers, maintenance of breakwaters and harbors associated with water routes, and the subscription of the United States to capital stock in canal companies. It reported proposals for the construction of roads, such as the Cumberland Road and a Columbus and Sandusky Turnpike, and methods of financing them, primarily through land-grants. As early as the 20th Congress (1827-28) the committee reported legislation to aid the construction of railroads including the granting of charters to railroad companies.

COMMITTEE ON PACIFIC RAILROADS

On July 1, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed a bill authorizing the construction of a transcontinental railroad between the Missouri River and California. Construction was to be aided by land grants and Government loans. During the 1850's the Army Topological Engineers had explored various routes for such a railroad and from as early as 1855 select House committees had been responsible for legislation regarding the construction of a transcontinental railroad. On March 2, 1865, the standing Committee on Pacific Railroads was established and assigned jurisdiction over subjects relating "to the railroads and telegraph lines between the Mississippi River and the Pacific coast." By 1911, the Committee had become largely inactive, and it was terminated.

COMMITTEE ON ROADS

The Committee on Roads was established in 1913 with jurisdiction over "matters relating to the construction or maintenance of roads, other than the appropriations therefor." The Committee on Roads was responsible for legislation providing for Federal aid to the States for the construction of rural post roads, and the Federal highways. In 1921, the Committee reported the Federal Highway Act.

COMMITTEE ON LEVEES

The Committee on Levees was established in 1875 to inquire into building and repairing levees on the Mississippi River. On November 7, 1877, the Committee's name was changed to the Committee on Levees and Improvements of the Mississippi River. The jurisdiction included building and repairing levees as well as making other improvements on the Mississippi River. In 1911, the jurisdiction of the Committee was merged into the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.
COMMITTEE ON FLOOD CONTROL

The Committee on Flood Control was established in 1916 and merged the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and the Committee on Levees and Improvements of the Mississippi River. The Committee's jurisdiction focused on flood control and prevention.

COMMITTEE ON MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries was established on December 21, 1887. The Committee's jurisdiction encompassed the merchant marine, including all matters relating to transportation by water, the Coast Guard, life-saving service, lighthouses, lightships, ocean derelicts, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Panama Canal, and fisheries.

In 1919, the Committee was given jurisdiction over wireless telegraphy (radio), and in 1932 its name was changed to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries. After a dispute with the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the jurisdiction over radio services was transferred to that committee in 1935 and the term "radio" was dropped from the name of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

In 1995, during restructuring of the Committees, the jurisdiction of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries was split between the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Natural Resources.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC WORKS

With the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (Pub. L. 97-601) the Committee on Public Works was established and merged the jurisdictional authorities of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; the Committee on Rivers and Harbors; the Committee on Roads; and the Committee on Levees.

In 1975, the Committee's name was changed to become the Committee on Public Works and Transportation.

In 1995, the name was again changed to become the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure. The Committee also gained additional jurisdictional authorities from the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries (est. 1887) when that Committee was dissolved.

When listing the Members of the Committee, where there is a defined Majority/Minority split, the Members are listed in columns based upon party designation (generally around the 46th Congress). Members whose party designation differs from their caucus are additionally designated. Changes to the initial roster are denoted after the line. Third Parties are listed under the Minority side after a space.

Abbreviations for the parties are as follows:

Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds

The standing Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds was established in 1837, replacing the Select Committee on Public Buildings which had been created in 1819. This new five-member committee was empowered “to consider all subjects relating to the public edifices and grounds within the city of Washington which may be referred to them, and report their opinion thereon, together with such propositions relating thereto as may seem to them expedient.”¹ In 1871, Representative Henry L. Dawes of Massachusetts presented a resolution which increased membership on the committee to nine and gave it jurisdiction over “all the public buildings constructed by the United States.”²

Further changes were made in 1880, when the committee was expanded to 16 members and its jurisdiction expanded to cover “the public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States, other than appropriations therefore.”³ The jurisdiction of the committee did not change after 1880, but the number of members was increased several times.

The committee reported legislation for the construction throughout the country of public buildings, including customs houses, post offices, and Federal court houses; the erection of monuments and memorials; the purchase of property for public use; improvements to public property; and compensation for workers erecting public buildings. During the early years of the committee, much of the legislation reported had to do with constructing and improving public buildings in Washington, DC, and commissioning artists to create art work for those buildings.⁴

² CLEVELAND M. BAILEY, West Virginia, elected to the Committee, January 28, 1946.
Established in December 1883, the Committee on Rivers and Harbors was given jurisdiction over subjects relating to the improvements of rivers and harbors and had the responsibility of reporting the river and harbor bill, which previously had been handled by the Committee on Commerce. The Committee’s jurisdiction changed over time. When the Committee on Levees and Improvements of the Mississippi River was terminated in 1911 its responsibilities were transferred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. In 1916 the subject of flood control was removed from the committee’s authority and assigned to the new Committee on Flood Control. After 1920 the committee could no longer report appropriation bills for rivers and harbors and its legislative authority was limited to reporting only bills that authorized improvements to rivers and harbors.

These shifts in authority still left many subjects within the jurisdiction of the committee. These included improvement of watersheds and dams thereon, construction of locks on navigable streams, construction and maintenance of equipment for river improvements, erosion of banks on navigable streams, pollution of navigable waters, intrastate inland waterways, and navigation of international boundary streams. The committee was terminated early in the 80th Congress on January 3, 1947. Its successor was the Committee on Public Works.¹

The committee originated as a select Committee on Roads and Canals during the 14th Congress (1815) and was appointed at each succeeding Congress until December 1831 when Charles Mercer of Virginia made a motion to establish a standing Committee on the subject. Although an objection was raised that the select committee had managed the subject adequately, and that the establishment of a standing Committee on roads and canals would “lead to the impression that the House was disposed to systematize internal improvement, and with it the present high duties on imports, &c., ” the motion to create the standing committee passed by a vote of 96 to 90. During the 25th Congress (1837-39) the House rejected a proposal to change the name to the Committee on Public Improvement, but in 1869 it approved a motion to change the name to the Committee on Railways and Canals.

The committee reported legislation concerning the survey, construction, and improvement of canals within the United States as well as a canal across the Isthmus of Panama. The committee’s jurisdiction also included improvements in river navigation, construction of bridges over rivers, maintenance of breakwaters and harbors associated with water routes, and the subscription of the United States to capital stock in canal companies. It reported proposals for the construction of roads, such as the Cumberland Road and a Columbus and Sandusky Turnpike, and methods of financing them, primarily through land-grants. As early as the 20th Congress (1827-28) the committee reported legislation to aid the construction of railroads including the granting of charters to railroad companies.

The Committee on Roads was created in 1913 with jurisdiction over matters relating “to the construction or maintenance of roads, other than appropriations therefore.” The statement outlining the committee’s jurisdiction contained the proviso that measures for specific roads could not be included in bills for general legislation, nor could any bill relating to a specific road “embrace a provision in relation to any other specific road.” During the first decade of its existence, the committee reported bills authorizing aid to the States in the construction of rural post roads, and with the 1921 Federal Highway Act in the construction and maintenance of highways, forest roads, trails, and rural post roads. Under the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, the committee was disbanded and its jurisdiction included in those of the new Committee on Public Works.

Committee on Pacific Railroads

On July 1, 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed a bill authorizing the construction of a transcontinental railroad between the Missouri River and California. Construction was to be aided by land grants and Government loans. During the 1850’s the Army Topological Engineers had explored various routes for such a railroad and from as early as 1855 select House committees had been responsible for legislation regarding the construction of a transcontinental railroad. On March 2, 1865, the standing Committee on Pacific Railroads was established and assigned jurisdiction over subjects relating “to the railroads and telegraph lines between the Mississippi River and the Pacific coast.”¹ By 1911, the committee had become largely inactive, and it was terminated.²

Committee on Roads

The Committee on Roads was created in 1913 with jurisdiction over matters relating “to the construction or maintenance of roads, other than appropriations therefore.” The statement outlining the committee’s jurisdiction contained the proviso that measures for specific roads could not be included in bills for general legislation, nor could any bill relating to a specific road “embrace a provision in relation to any other specific road.” During the first decade of its existence, the committee reported bills authorizing aid to the States in the construction of rural post roads, and with the 1921 Federal Highway Act in the construction and maintenance of highways, forest roads, trails, and rural post roads. Under the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, the committee was disbanded and its jurisdiction included in those of the new Committee on Public Works.

Committee on the Mississippi Levees

The committee was established during the 44th Congress on December 10, 1875, at the prompting of Representative Randall Gibson of Louisiana, to inquire into building and repairing levees on the Mississippi River.

On November 7, 1877, in the 45th Congress, the committee's name was changed to the Committee on Levees and Improvements of the Mississippi River. This was done by changing the name of its predecessor, the Committee on the Mississippi Levees. The purposes of the committee included building and repairing levees as well as making other improvements on the Mississippi River. The committee was terminated in the 62nd Congress on April 5, 1911. Its successor was the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.¹

Committee on Flood Control

The committee was authorized February 3, 1916, early in the 64th Congress, and was given jurisdiction over subjects relating to flood control. In the previous two Congresses such flood control matters had been entirely under the jurisdiction of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and some flood control issues had been in the jurisdiction of the Committee on Levees and Improvements of the Mississippi River before that committee was abolished in 1911. The Committee on Flood Control was terminated early in the 80th Congress on January 3, 1947. Its successor was the Committee on Public Works.¹

Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries

The Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries was established on December 21, 1887. The House Rules defined its jurisdiction as those matters concerning the merchant marine. This included all matters relating to transportation by water, the Coast Guard, life-saving service, lighthouses, lightships, ocean derelicts, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, the Panama Canal, and fisheries. Legislation referred to the committee also included matters involving seamen (their assignments, wages, treatment, and health) and officers (their titles, conduct, and licensing); the naming, measuring, licensing, and registering of vessels; navigation and related laws; pleasure yachts; collisions at sea, as well as international arrangements to prevent them; coasting districts; maritime schools; and, taxes, fines, and penalties on vessels. The committee has also regulated shipping in the Philippines and Hawaii. As did most committees of the House, the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee created subcommittees to handle portions of its jurisdiction.

In 1919 the committee was given jurisdiction over wireless telegraphy (radio), and in 1932 its name was changed to the Committee on Merchant Marine, Radio, and Fisheries. After a dispute with the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the jurisdiction over radio services was transferred to that committee in 1935 and the term “radio” was dropped from the name of the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee. Under the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 the jurisdiction of the committee was enlarged and more fully defined. Its formal statement of jurisdiction read as follows:

a) Merchant marine generally. b) Coast and Geodetic Survey. c) Coast Guard, including lifesaving service, lighthouses, lightships, and ocean derelicts. d) Fisheries and wildlife, including research, restoration, refuges, and conservation. e) Measures relating to the regulation of common carriers by water (except matters subject to the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission) and to the inspection of merchant marine vessels, lights and signals, lifesaving equipment, and fire protection on such vessels. f) Merchant marine officers and seamen. g) Navigation and the laws relating thereto, including pilotage. h) Panama Canal and the maintenance and operation of the Panama Canal, including the administration, sanitation, and government of the Canal Zone; and interoceanic canals generally. i) Registering and licensing of vessels and small boats. j) Rules and international arrangements to prevent collisions at sea. k) United States Coast Guard and Merchant Marine Academies

In 1995, during restructuring of the Committees, the jurisdiction of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries was split between the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Natural Resources.

Committee on Public Works

Under the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 the Committees on Public Buildings and Grounds, Rivers and Harbors, Roads and Canals, and Flood Control were combined to form the Committee on Public Works. Its jurisdiction from the beginning of the 80th Congress (1947-48) through the 90th Congress (1967-68) remained the same:

(a) Flood control and improvement of rivers and harbors. (b) Measures relating to the Capitol Building and the Senate and House Office Buildings. (c) Measures relating to the construction or maintenance of roads and post roads, other than appropriations therefore; but it shall not be in order for any bill providing general legislation in relation to roads to contain any provision for any specific road, nor for any bill in relation to a specific road to embrace a provision in relation to any other specific road. (d) Measures relating to the construction or reconstruction, maintenance, and care of the buildings and grounds of the Botanic Gardens, the Library of Congress, and the Smithsonian Institute. (e) Measures relating to the purchase of sites and construction of post offices, customhouses, Federal courthouses, and Government buildings within the District of Columbia. (f) Oil and other pollution of navigable waters. (g) Public buildings and occupied or improved grounds of the United States generally. (h) Public reservations and parks within the District of Columbia, including Rock Creek Park and the Zoological Park. (i) Public works for the benefit of navigation, including bridges and dams (other than international bridges and dams). (j) Water power.¹

The four original committees retained their separate identities but were reduced to subcommittees. In addition, the committee created subcommittees for Beach Erosion, 80th Congress (1947-48) and for Watershed Development, 86th-90th Congresses (1959-68). Special Subcommittees included those: to Investigate Questionable Trade Practices, 80th Congress; to Study Civil Works, 82nd Congress (1951-52); on the Federal-Aid Highway Program, 86th-90th Congresses; and on Economic Development Programs, 89th-90th Congresses (1965-68). Ad Hoc Committees were established on

Montana Flood Damage, 88th Congress (1963-64); on Appalachian Regional Development, 88th-90th Congresses; and on the 1967 Alaska Exposition, 89th Congress.²
