For those activities which are more commercial in nature, the Secretary has 1 year to recommend to the Congress a plan for permanent disposition of these functions. These activities can then be assumed by the private sector, focusing Government dollars toward fundamental research initiatives.

Under title II of the bill, the three defense labs—Sandia, Lawrence Livermore, and Los Alamos—are all transferred to the Department of Defense under the direction of the Secretary of Defense. The nondefense laboratories are transferred to the Navy for review by a non-defense energy laboratory commission. The Commission can recommend restructuring, privatization or concur with the bills closure language.

Furthermore, if the commission identifies additional labs or functions which are national security related, the commission can recommend a transfer of functions to one of the defense labs or a transfer of those facilities to the DOD.

Once the commission has submitted its recommendations, Congress has fast-track authority to consider the report and act on recommendations. Failure by Congress to act will result in closure of facilities within 18 months of the reports issuance.

Under title III of the bill, the Power Marketing Administrations (PMA) and the Strategic Petroleum Reserve [SPR] and the Naval Petroleum Reserve are addressed under title IV of the bill. The SPR is transferred to the Department of Defense where a GAO study is ordered to conduct an inventory of the PMA assets and liabilities. The GAO is then instructed to conduct a study of options for program privatization initiatives. These changes to the civilian waste program represent the best way to ensure the Federal Government meets its obligation to begin accepting waste by 1998.

The merits and importance of this legislation have been recognized not only by Secretary Weinberger, but also by two former Defense Secretary Weinberger, but also by two former Energy Secretaries Donald Hodel and John Herrington. I am delighted that our legislation has their support, as well as the support of the Cato Institute, the Competitive Enterprise Institute, and Citizens Against Government Waste.

I would like to close by quoting Nobel Prize-winning economist Milton Friedman who in 1977 likened a national energy agency to a Trojan Horse, saying “it entrenches a bureaucracy that would have a self-interest in expanding in size and power and would have the means to do so.”

Over the years, we have witnessed Dr. Friedman’s prediction come true—and all at the cost of hundreds of billions of dollars to taxpayers’ dollars. As a result, the DOE has managed to see its 19th anniversary this year. It should not be around for its 20th. It is time to put this Trojan Horse out to pasture.
