

from Ohio (Mr. SAWYER) was saying, count everyone and then do a study on a statistical sample for test purposes or an ICM of some type.

So there are ways to do that, but we have to start basically with counting everyone first, and I yield.

Mr. MOLLOHAN. The gentleman, Mr. Speaker, is suggesting that the one panel was compromised in some political way. Is he suggesting that the other two at the National Academy of Sciences was politically compromised? And what about all these other organizations?

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Reclaiming my time, they were a hand-picked panel. We can create a panel of prestigious academics, will come up with a different study.

Mr. MOLLOHAN. It is quite a conspiracy.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. I have the time, if I might say, so the thing is we need to trust the system. It has to be done where we work together, Republican and Democrats, and we should not delegate it. It is something we do not delegate to some hand-picked group of academics over at the Academy of Sciences. It is our responsibility, not their responsibility.

It is our responsibility to do that. We need the input and advice of all the sources, but it is not going to be trusted if we turn it over to a group of academics who want to have this great statistical experiment, and I think I am excited for them to have this great statistical experiment, but let us just count everyone.

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is obvious from the discussion we are going to have a lively evening, and we have got some real substance here as we have two very well-educated gentlemen going back and forth.

I think, in regards to the census part of this rule, I think it was best summarized by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE), and that is, as my colleagues know, it is fundamental, and I quote her again because I think it was an excellent quote, fundamental to our democracy that everyone counts.

That is exactly the point that the gentleman from Florida is making, and that is this is not the time for a census experiment. This is not the time to put experimental aircraft in the side of this count. This aircraft has to fly and has to fly for a long time. Let us do it, and let us do it right. Sure, it is going to cost a little more money, sure we have got to count everybody, but that is what the Constitution demands.

That issue aside, the issue of the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. HEFLEY):

His amendment is certainly to bring up some lively debate that it is in order that that debate be allowed on this floor.

And finally, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, it is important to note that throughout the number of speakers that we have had today in regards to this rule I have not heard anyone that objects to the rule. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), my good friend from the Committee on Rules, said, I think, and I quote that he reluctantly supported it. We have got the support for the rule. It is time to move the rule. It is time to get on with the general debate.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3736, WORKFORCE IMPROVEMENT AND PROTECTION ACT OF 1998

Mr. MCINNIS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 105-660) on the resolution (H. Res. 513) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 3736) to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to make changes relating to H-1B non-immigrants, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

BIPARTISAN CAMPAIGN INTEGRITY ACT OF 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MCINNIS). Pursuant to House Resolution 442 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2183.

□ 1744

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2183) to amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to reform the financing of campaigns for elections for Federal office, and for other purposes, with Mr. SHIMKUS (Chairman pro tempore) in the chair.

□ 1745

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). When the Committee of the Whole House rose on Monday, July 20, 1998, the request for a recorded vote on the amendment by the gentlewoman from Washington (Mrs. LINDA SMITH) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) had been postponed.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SALMON TO THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. SALMON to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:

Add at the end the following new title:

TITLE _____—POSTING NAMES OF CERTAIN AIR FORCE ONE PASSENGERS ON INTERNET

SEC. 01. REQUIREMENT THAT NAMES OF PASSENGERS ON AIR FORCE ONE AND AIR FORCE TWO BE MADE AVAILABLE THROUGH THE INTERNET.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President shall make available through the Internet the name of any non-Government person who is a passenger on an aircraft designated as Air Force One or Air Force Two not later than 30 days after the date that the person is a passenger on such aircraft.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply in a case in which the President determines that compliance with such subsection would be contrary to the national security interests of the United States. In any such case, not later than 30 days after the date that the person whose name will not be made available through the Internet was a passenger on the aircraft, the President shall submit to the chairman and ranking member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House of Representatives and of the Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate—

(1) the name of the person; and

(2) the justification for not making such name available through the Internet.

(c) DEFINITION OF PERSON.—As used in this Act, the term "non-Government person" means a person who is not an officer or employee of the United States, a member of the Armed Forces, or a Member of Congress.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SALMON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut may state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I just need to know what list we are following in terms of order. I am not suggesting that the gentleman is out of order. I just do not know.

I thought we were going from the Smith amendment to the Rohrabacher amendment, which is the amendment which eliminates the individual contribution limits. I thought that was the next amendment in order. Is there an order that we are following?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair believes The Committee is following the order under the previous order of the House.

Mr. SHAYS. Right. Do we have that order available so that we could see what that order is?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The order on July 17 was accompanied by a list of amendments in a prescribed order.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I believe it has the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRBACHER), which is unanimous consent No. 16 to be followed by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL), which is unanimous consent No. 17, again with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL), unanimous consent No. 18. That is what I had down as the order.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair understood that the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SALMON) was offering Amendment No. 14.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I am sorry. The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SALMON) is next. I am sorry. I thought that amendment had been withdrawn. Okay.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SALMON) for 5 minutes.

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, Air Force One and related aircraft have a noble history. These special aircraft were first put into service for President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1944.

In 1961, the designation Air Force One was first used on behalf of President John F. Kennedy. President Lyndon Johnson took the oath of office on Air Force One in 1963.

Air Force One also provides all presidents with the security and the communications equipment they would need in case of an international crisis, a noble history now sullied.

President Clinton and Vice President GORE created a new use for Air Force One and Air Force Two, taxpayer-funded boondoggles for fat-cat contributors and toys for special interests.

According to the Boston Globe, President Clinton flew aboard Air Force One with 56 major contributors during 1996 and 1997, often with government picking up the tab. Donors who gave $5,000 or raised at least $25,000 for the Clinton-Gore campaign accompanied Clinton aboard the presidential aircraft.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment is very straightforward. It requires the President to make available via the Internet the name of any nongovernment person who is a passenger on an aircraft designated as Air Force One or Air Force Two no later than 30 days after that person is a passenger.

An exception is made if there are national security concerns. In such cases, the President shall submit to the chairman and ranking member of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence of the House and Select Committee on Intelligence of the Senate the name of the person and the justification for not making the name available through the Internet.

It is time the American people, our constituents, know which special interests are flying on taxpayer-funded aircraft. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) rising in opposition to the amendment?

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I am rising in opposition. I would like to reserve the time in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) for 5 minutes.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, just by way of explanation, what is the intent of the amendment? Because perhaps we can work out an agreement on it.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Chairman, the intent of the amendment is simply disclosure. It is not just for this administration, for any administration in the future. I have a concern that there are possibly people who are contributors to either of the parties or to candidates who may be rewarded by flying on Air Force One.

I am simply wanting to make sure that any nongovernmental person that flies aboard Air Force One or Air Force Two, those are the two specified in the amendment, would be disclosed via the Internet so that we would have full disclosure of who those people might be.

If there is a national security concern which would preclude them from disclosing that information, then that would be granted. That would waive them from that requirement.

Mr. MEEHAN. Reclaiming my time, right now the names of the people who fly on Air Force One would be of public record; is that correct?

Mr. SALMON. According to my understanding, not necessarily so, and not necessarily in a timely manner. I am asking that, through my amendment, that it be done within 30 days, just like we do in our campaigns. When we get contributions from special interests, we have to publish that information and fully disclose it to the public. I am simply asking that the White House live by the same standards when it comes to possible perks for contributors.

Mr. MEEHAN. Reclaiming my time, what specifically would be the provisions with regard to something that was in the national security interest not to disclose a name?

Mr. SALMON. That would be determined by members on the Committee on National Security. As I mentioned, they would be required to submit in writing to the chairman of the committee, the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and the ranking member. If they concur there is a national security reason for not disclosing that information, then it is not disclosed.

Mr. MEEHAN. Reclaiming my time, the Pentagon would not be able to make those determinations, or the State Department would not be able to make those determinations?

Mr. SALMON. I am sure that they would work in tandem with those members. If they feel that there is a valid concern, absolutely, their input would be, I am sure, paramount, as it always is. If they feel that there is a literal reason that national security might be compromised by disclosing those names, that would be a compelling reason enough to not have to disclose that information, and that is included in the amendment.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, we would accept the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Arizona yield to me?

Mr. SALMON. I yield to the gentleman from Connecticut.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to agree that this is an amendment that we can accept, and I apologize to the gentleman. I thought he had withdrawn it, but I think this amendment does no harm to the bill.

Mr. SALMON. Mr. Chairman, I thank both gentlemen.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SALMON) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

The amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. ROHRBACHER TO THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. ROHRBACHER to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:

Add at the end of title V the following new section (and conform the table of contents accordingly):

SEC. 510. PARTIAL REMOVAL OF LIMITATIONS ON CONTRIBUTIONS TO CANDIDATES WHOSE OPPONENTS USE LARGE AMOUNTS OF PERSONAL FUNDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 315 of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 (2 U.S.C. 441a) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(i)(1) If a candidate for Federal office makes contributions or expenditures from the personal funds of the candidate totaling more than $1,000 with respect to an election, the candidate shall so notify the Commission and each other candidate in the election. The notification shall be made in writing within 48 hours after the contribution or expenditure involved is made.

"(2) In any case described in paragraph (1), any person who is otherwise permitted under this Act to make contributions to such other candidate may make contributions in excess of any otherwise applicable limitation on such contributions, to the extent that the total of such excess contributions accepted by such other candidate does not exceed the total of contributions or expenditures from personal funds referred to in paragraph (1)."

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply with respect to elections occurring after January 1999.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 17, 1998, the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) and a Member opposed, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER).

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, today I rise to introduce a nonpartisan amendment that will level the campaign playing field. Currently, the campaign playing field is heavily weighted to the advantage of wealthy Americans. By lifting the $1,000 limit a candidate may raise when a candidate is being faced with a wealthy opponent, this cap will be raised, which will make it possible to match the amount his or her wealthy opponent contributes to his or her own campaign.

In other words, and I know this sounds a little complicated, if my amendment passes, if my wealthy competitor writes a $1 million check to his or her own campaign, I will no longer be faced with the impossible task of raising the same amount of money that my opponent has donated to his or her campaign in $1,000 increments. Instead, the cap will be lifted so that it is possible for me to match the amount that my own opponent has spent on his or her own campaign.

As current campaign law stands, wealthy candidates can spend an unlimited amount of their own money, while their unfortunate opponents are stuck with raising small amounts of money in order to match that amount that their wealthy opponent has contributed to their own campaign. This has given the wealthy a tremendous advantage over their opponents.

It is the most glaring inequity of our current campaign finance system, and it has resulted in a spectacle that no one would have predicted. It is the unintended consequence of limiting contributions to political campaigns.

Instead of opening up our elections to the American people, today politics is becoming the arena of the rich, rich candidates who have nonwealthy opponents at a tremendous disadvantage. The rich pour resources into their own campaigns. This means most of us are in a position of getting steamrolled by a wealthy opponent.

So I urge my colleagues to level the campaign playing field and to update our campaign finance laws and give nonwealthy Americans a chance to be elected to Congress. Rather than having to worry and have the parties out always recruiting wealthy people, let us level this field so that if someone is wealthy and pumps $1 million into their campaign, a nonwealthy opponent can raise an equal amount to have an equal race.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this amendment which was, frankly, one of my amendments. I do think that Congress needs to deal with how we respond to those who have unlimited wealth, and one way is to do it the way the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) has suggested.

Unfortunately, his amendment, an amendment that I offered on another bill, would kill the coalition that exists for passing bipartisan reform.

Let me explain to my colleagues that the Meehan-Shays bill does three basic things. It bans soft money, the unlimited sums from individuals, corporations, labor unions, and other interest groups that go to the political parties and then get rerouted right back down to individual candidates.

It secondly calls the sham issue ads what they truly are, campaign ads, which means we cannot use corporate money or dues money from labor 60 days from an election. It means that we have to report our expenditures.

The third thing we do is we have FEC enforcement, Federal Election Commission enforcement, and disclosure by way of electronic means in the Internet.

This amendment seeks to do something beyond the scope of our basic bill. I will also say that our basic bill includes the commission bill, the commission bill brought forward on a bipartisan basis. We would suggest that the very issue that the gentleman is presenting to this Congress should be dealt with by the commission.

We have 37 amendments, if no more are withdrawn before we deal with the Meehan-Shays substitute and deal with the various amendments. Sixteen are poison pills, seven are "no" votes in our view, four are leaning "no", seven are neutral, three are "yes".

The bottom line to the amendment of the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER), he is one of the 16 poison pill amendments that will kill our coalition. On that basis, I have to encourage defeat of it.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1800

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, how much time is remaining?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). The gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) has 2½ minutes remaining; the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) has 3 minutes.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I hope everyone is listening very closely to this argument. Supposedly, this will kill the whole purpose of this bill. That is a lot of baloney. If we are talking about campaign finance reform and we are going to leave the whole campaign arena to rich people, what good is that reform?

In fact, without my amendment, the good work of the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) is going to do nothing but further give very wealthy Americans the leverage to take control of the political process in America. So what is all this reform about if we are not going to handle that problem?

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN).

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, the problem with this amendment is we are trying to find a way to reduce the influence of money in American politics; we are not trying to find a way to allow hundreds of thousands of dollars of additional money into the process.

This amendment would potentially create a huge loophole through which wealthy individuals could funnel hundreds of thousands of dollars in contributions to a single candidate through the hard money system. The reason why the Shays-Meehan bill bans soft money is to put an end to the notion of these enormous contributions from private individuals.

This amendment would provide a new way for special interests to influence the legislative process. That is why I would urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment. Even when we have a wealthy candidate putting his or her own money into it, that is an excuse for a private individual to then begin to funnel hundreds of thousands of dollars into a campaign.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Obviously, if we just listen very closely to what is being said here, these gentlemen are trying to cut off other avenues for ordinary Americans to raise money for their campaigns, leaving the political arena in the control of such wealthy Americans that every Member of this body who is not rich shudders at the thought of having a wealthy candidate in their district step forward and pump so much money in that he or she will be eliminated just because they just cannot raise the money in small increments.

The Shays-Meehan supposed reform is making this problem worse, and by not accepting this amendment, I am afraid that they are disclosing themselves at just how effective they think their own bill is going to be.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, how much time remains for both individuals?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) has 2 minutes remaining; the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) has 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. RIVERS), our distinguished colleague.

Ms. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, there is a very interesting debate going on here, because the arguments are being put forward as if there is currently a provision within the system that allows for an offset of one individual, if a wealthy individual runs against them.

The law is very clear right now that if someone chooses to fund their campaign on their own dollars, they are allowed to do that, and a candidate who is running against them can raise money through a variety of ways to do it. They are not limited in how much money they can raise.

Nothing in Shays-Meehan limits the ability of people to raise money. So the argument that Shays-Meehan has to be amended to deal with a problem created by that proposal is ludicrous. It leaves the system exactly as it is now. Someone who is using their own money is free to use as much of that wealth as they would like to. Individuals who rely on contributions can raise as much as they wish, but this is not necessary.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Of course, anyone listening to this debate must wonder what bill we are really discussing after listening to that last statement.

The purpose of this bill, as we have heard from the authors of this bill, is to reduce the avenues of money coming into political campaigns. Let us restrict it.

What I am saying is that today, with an unintended consequence of similar legislation in the past, we have given a tremendous advantage to rich people. Both of our parties are going out enlisting very wealthy Americans, rich people, in order to run for office, and more and more millionaires are coming here, because we are restricting the avenues in which ordinary Americans can raise money for political campaigns. My amendment would correct that unintended consequence of this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

With the 1 minute I have remaining, I would just like to acknowledge the fact that the amendment that our colleague wants to offer is offering an amendment that would allow unlimited contributions from an individual; he can raise $1 million from one individual. This is contrary to the reform measure that we are bringing forward.

We ban soft money that goes to the political parties, the unlimited sums from individuals, corporations, labor unions and other interest groups. We call the sham issue ads what they truly are, campaign ads, and we have FEC disclosure and enforcement. We are against allowing unlimited sums from individuals, and that is why we oppose this, and that is why it would break apart the coalition that exists between Republicans and Democrats to pass this bill.

This amendment is offered in good faith by my colleague, but the bottom line is, it will kill Meehan-Shays.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First and foremost, this does not permit unlimited contributions, the gentleman is absolutely wrong, and I hope people are paying attention to the debate. The unlimited contributions that we are setting is the limit which a wealthy person puts into his or her own campaign. That is stated very clearly. There is a limit. Why should we permit wealthy Americans to buy these seats because we have not given a fair chance for nonwealthy Americans to have a shot at the election process?

This is not fair, and that is what we are trying to do. I thought that is what this bill was all about. I guess it is not.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, how much time do I have left?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman has 15 seconds remaining.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The bottom line is if a wealthy person spends $1 million under my colleague's proposal, he could raise $1 million from another wealthy individual.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) has 15 seconds remaining.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Obviously we would like to be fair to all Americans, and that is not what this bill is all about, if we prevent nonwealthy Americans from raising the funds they need to deter these attacks on wealthy citizens trying to steal these elections for themselves.

Let us make sure we open up the system, make sure there is more money available to all candidates, not just to the rich.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. All time having expired, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

The question was taken; and the Chairman pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 442, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) will be postponed.

It is now in order to consider the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL).

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. PAUL TO THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PAUL to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:

Add at the end the following new title:

TITLE ____—BALLOT ACCESS RIGHTS

SEC. ____01. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Voting participation in the United States is lower than in any other advanced industrialized democracy.

(2) The rights of eligible citizens to seek election to office, vote for candidates of their choice and associate for the purpose of taking part in elections, including the right to create and develop new political parties, are fundamental in a democracy. The rights of citizens to participate in the election process, provided in and derived from the first and fourteenth amendments to the Constitution, have consistently been promoted and protected by the Federal Government. These rights include the right to cast an effective vote and the right to associate for the advancement of political beliefs, which includes the "constitutional right . . . to create and develop new political parties." Norman v. Reed, 502 U.S. 279, 112 S.Ct. 699 (1992). It is the duty of the Federal Government to see that these rights are not impaired in elections for Federal office.

(3) Certain restrictions on access to the ballot impair the ability of citizens to exercise these rights and have a direct and damaging effect on citizens' participation in the electoral process.

(4) Many States unduly restrict access to the ballot by nonmajor party candidates and nonmajor political parties by means of such devices as excessive petition signature requirements, insufficient petitioning periods, unconstitutionally early petition filing deadlines, petition signature distribution criteria, and limitations on eligibility to circulate and sign petitions.

(5) Many States require political parties to poll an unduly high number of votes or to register an unduly high number of voters as a precondition for remaining on the ballot.

(6) In 1983, the Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional an Ohio law requiring a nonmajor party candidate for President to qualify for the general election ballot earlier than major party candidates. This Supreme Court decision, Anderson v. Celebrezze, 460 U.S. 780 (1983) has been followed by many lower courts in challenges by nonmajor parties and candidates to early petition filing deadlines. See, e.g., Stoddard v. Quinn, 593 F. Supp. 300 (D.Me. 1984); Cripps v. Seneca County Board of Elections, 629 F. Supp. 1335 (N.D.Oh. 1985); Libertarian Party of Nevada v. Swackhamer, 638 F. Supp. 565 (D. Nev. 1986); Cromer v. State of South Carolina, 917 F.2d 819 (4th Cir. 1990); New Alliance Party of Alabama v. Hand, 933 F.2d 1568 (11th Cir. 1991).

(7) In 1996, 34 States required nonmajor party candidates for President to qualify for the ballot before the second major party national convention (Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, and Wyoming). Twenty-six of these States required nonmajor party candidates to qualify before the first major party national convention (Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, and West Virginia).

(8) Under present law, in 1996, nonmajor party candidates for President were required to obtain at least 701,089 petition signatures to be listed on the ballots of all 50 States and the District of Columbia—28 times more signatures than the 25,500 required of Democratic Party candidates and 13 times more signatures than the 54,250 required of Republican Party candidates. To be listed on the ballot in all 50 States and the District of Columbia with a party label, nonmajor party candidates for President were required to obtain approximately 651,475 petition signatures and 89,186 registrants. Thirty-two of the 41 States that hold Presidential primaries required no signatures of major party candidates for President (Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin). Only three States required no signatures of nonmajor party candidates for President (Arkansas, Colorado, and Louisiana; Colorado and Louisiana, however, required a $500 filing fee).

(9) Under present law, the number of petition signatures required by the States to list a major party candidate for Senate on the ballot in 1996 ranged from zero to 15,000. The number of petition signatures required to list a nonmajor party candidate for Senate ranged from zero to 196,788. Thirty-one States required no signatures of major party candidates for Senate (Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming). Only one State required no signatures of nonmajor party candidates for Senate, provided they were willing to be listed on the ballot without a party label (Louisiana, although a $600 filing fee was required, and to run with a party label, a candidate was required to register 111,121 voters into his or her party).

(10) Under present law, the number of petition signatures required by the States to list a major party candidate for Congress on the ballot in 1996 ranged from zero to 2,000. The number of petition signatures required to list a nonmajor party candidate for Congress ranged from zero to 13,653. Thirty-one States required no signatures of major party candidates for Congress (Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Texas, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming). Only one State required no signatures of nonmajor party candidates for Congress, provided they are willing to be listed on the ballot without a party label (Louisiana, although a $600 filing fee was required).

(11) Under present law, in 1996, eight States required additional signatures to list a nonmajor party candidate for President on the ballot with a party label (Alabama, Arizona, Idaho, Kansas, Nebraska, North Dakota, Ohio, Tennessee). Thirteen States required additional signatures to list a nonmajor party candidate for Senate or Congress on the ballot with a party label (Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Idaho, Hawaii, Kansas, Louisiana, North Dakota, Nebraska, Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee). Two of these States (Ohio and Tennessee) required 5,000 signatures and 25 signatures, respectively, to list a nonmajor party candidate for President or Senate on the ballot in 1996, but required 33,463 signatures and 37,179 signatures, respectively, to list the candidate on the ballot with her or his party label. One State (California) required a nonmajor party to have 89,006 registrants in order to have its candidate for President listed on the ballot with a party label.

(12) Under present law, in 1996 one State (California) required nonmajor party candidates for President or Senate to obtain 147,238 signatures in 105 days, but required major party candidates for Senate to obtain only 65 signatures in 105 days, and required no signatures of major party candidates for President. Another State (Texas) required nonmajor party candidates for President or Senate to obtain 43,963 signatures in 75 days, and required no signatures of major party candidates for President or Senate.

(13) Under present law, in 1996, seven States required nonmajor party candidates for President or Senate to collect a certain number or percentage of their petition signatures in each congressional district or in a specified number of congressional districts (Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Virginia). Only three of these States impose a like requirement on major party candidates for President or Senate (Michigan, New York, Virginia).

(14) Under present law, in 1996, 20 States restricted the circulation of petitions for nonmajor party candidates to residents of those States (California, Colorado, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin). Two States restricted the circulation of petitions for nonmajor party candidates to the county or congressional district where the circulator lives (Kansas and Virginia).

(15) Under present law, in 1996, three States prohibited people who voted in a primary election from signing petitions for nonmajor party candidates (Nebraska, New York, Texas, West Virginia). Twelve States restricted the signing of petitions to people who indicate intent to support or vote for the candidate or party (California, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Utah). Five of these 12 States required no petitions of major party candidates (Delaware, Maryland, North Carolina, Oregon, Utah), and only one of the six remaining States restricted the signing of petitions for major party candidates to people who indicate intent to support or vote for the candidate or party (New Jersey).

(16) In two States (Louisiana and Maryland), no nonmajor party candidate for Senate has qualified for the ballot since those States' ballot access laws have been in effect.

(17) In two States (Georgia and Louisiana), no nonmajor party candidate for the United States House of Representatives has qualified for the ballot since those States' ballot access laws have been in effect.

(18) Restrictions on the ability of citizens to exercise the rights identified in this subsection have disproportionately impaired participation in the electoral process by various groups, including racial minorities.

(19) The establishment of fair and uniform national standards for access to the ballot in elections for Federal office would remove barriers to the participation of citizens in the electoral process and thereby facilitate such participation and maximize the rights identified in this subsection.

(20) The Congress has authority, under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States in sections 4 and 8 of article I, section 1 of article II, article VI, the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth amendments, and other provisions of the Constitution of the United States, to protect and promote the exercise of the rights identified in this subsection.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this title are—

(1) to establish fair and uniform standards regulating access to the ballot by eligible citizens who desire to seek election to Federal office and political parties, bodies, and groups which desire to take part in elections for Federal office; and

(2) to maximize the participation of eligible citizens in elections for Federal office.

SEC. 02. BALLOT ACCESS RIGHTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—An individual shall have the right to be placed as a candidate on, and to have such individual's political party, body, or group affiliation in connection with such candidacy placed on, a ballot or similar voting materials to be used in a Federal election, if—

(1) such individual presents a petition stating in substance that its signers desire such individual's name and political party, body or group affiliation, if any, to be placed on the ballot or other similar voting materials to be used in the Federal election with respect to which such rights are to be exercised;

(2) with respect to a Federal election for the office of President, Vice President, or Senator, such petition has a number of signatures of persons qualified to vote for such office equal to one-tenth of one percent of the number of persons who voted in the most recent previous Federal election for such office in the State, or 1,000 signatures, whichever is greater;

(3) with respect to a Federal election for the office of Representative in, or Delegate or Resident Commissioner to, the Congress, such petition has a number of signatures of persons qualified to vote for such office equal to one-half of one percent of the number of persons who voted in the most recent previous Federal election for such office, or, if there was no previous Federal election for such office, 1,000 signatures;

(4) with respect to a Federal election the date of which was fixed 345 or more days in advance, such petition was circulated during a period beginning on the 345th day and ending on the 75th day before the date of the election; and

(5) with respect to a Federal election the date of which was fixed less than 345 days in advance, such petition was circulated during a period established by the State holding the election, or, if no such period was established, during a period beginning on the day after the date the election was scheduled and ending on the tenth day before the date of the election, provided, however, that the number of signatures required under paragraph (2) or (3) shall be reduced by $\frac{1}{270}$ for each day less than 270 in such period.

(b) SPECIAL RULE.—An individual shall have the right to be placed as a candidate on, and to have such individual's political party, body, or group affiliation in connection with such candidacy placed on, a ballot or similar voting materials to be used in a Federal election, without having to satisfy any requirement relating to a petition under subsection (a), if that or another individual, as a candidate of that political party, body, or group, received one percent of the votes cast in the most recent general Federal election for President or Senator in the State.

(c) SAVINGS PROVISION.—Subsections (a) and (b) shall not apply with respect to any State that provides by law for greater ballot access rights than the ballot access rights provided for under such subsections.

(Participation by presidential candidates in debates with candidates with broad-based support)

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 17, 1998, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I believe this is a perfecting amendment, it is not in the nature of a substitute, and that has been cleared in the Committee on Rules.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk designated it as an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, both amendments that I have should be perfecting amendments, and if permissible, I ask unanimous consent that they both be accepted as such.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. It is an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute. The gentleman is amending the Shays-Meehan amendment in the nature of a substitute as permitted by the rules.

Mr. PAUL. I thank the Chair for the clarification.

Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment is very simple. It is an amendment that deals with equity and fairness, so I would expect essentially no opposition to this.

It simply lowers and standardizes the signature requirements and the time required to get signatures to get a Federal candidate on the ballot. There are very many unfair rules and regulations by the States that make it virtually impossible for many candidates to get on the ballot.

Mr. Chairman, I want to make 4 points about the amendment. First, it is constitutional to do this. Article I, section 4, explicitly authorizes the U.S. Congress to, "At any time by law make or alter such regulations regarding the manner of holding elections." This is the authority that was used for the Voters Rights Act of 1965.

The second point I would like to make is an issue of fairness. Because of the excess petition requirements put on by so many States and the short period of time required, many individuals are excluded from the ballot, and for this reason, this should be corrected. There are some States, take, for instance, Georgia, wrote a law in 1943. There has not been one minor party candidate on the ballot since 1943, because it cannot meet the requirements. This is unfair. This amendment would correct this.

Number 3, the third point. In contrast to some who would criticize an amendment like this by saying that there would be overcrowding on the ballot, there have been statistical studies made of States where the number of requirements, of signature requirements are very low, and the time very generous. Instead of overcrowding, they have an average of 3.3 candidates per ballot.

Now, this is very important also because it increases interest and increases turnout. Today, turnout has gone down every year in the last 20 or 30 years, there has been a steady decline in interest. This amendment would increase the interest and increase the turnout.

The fourth point that I would like to make is that the setup and the situation we have now is so unfair, many are concerned about how money is influencing the elections. But in this case, rules and regulations are affecting minor candidates by pushing up the cost of the election, where they cannot afford the money to even get on the ballot, so it is very unfair in a negative sense that the major parties penalize any challengers. And the correction would come here by equalizing this, making it more fair, and I would expect, I think, just everybody to agree that this is an amendment of fairness and equity and should be accepted.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I request the time in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BOEHLERT).

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment, but the real purpose is to focus my remarks on the need for the Shays-Meehan substitute rather than the specifics of this particular amendment, which are not the real issue.

The reason we need Shays-Meehan is quite simple and quite stark. The legitimacy of the American political process is being undermined.

I do not use these words lightly or as a mere rhetorical flourish. We can try to convince ourselves that all is well, salving ourselves with polls showing the approval for Congress is relatively high. Ironically, some argue that all is well because money is flowing into our campaign covers. This is like saying that a cancer patient is in better shape than someone without cancer, because that person might have more cells.

But in any event, a closer look tells a less rosy story. Polls show that many Americans do not know the first thing about Congress, the names of their representatives, which party is in control, and so forth. Discussions with average Americans uncover a deep cynicism about the political process; and looking at what in other circumstances we call the only poll that truly counts, Americans are simply abandoning the election booth.

Turnout is at an alltime low. Alienation from the political system is at an historical high. There could be no greater danger in a democracy. We are in the midst of a silent crisis.

Campaign finance reform does not rank high as a concern in polls simply because no one believes we can truly do it. They believe we are hapless and that the situation is hopeless, so they just continue to turn away. This is as corrosive a disease for the body politic as can be imagined. It is no less serious because the symptoms do not appear fully until it is too late to fashion a cure. So I congratulate the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) for designing a cure while there is still time.

Some people have said that the side effects of this cure are so severe that we should just let the disease take its course, but that is simply wrong. The cure is as mild as sunshine, ensuring that everyone can see who is spending money to influence the political system. Shays-Meehan is, quite literally, the very least we can do.

Let us look at some of the concerns opponents of this bill raise. They say that, like previous efforts at reform, it has many loopholes and unintended consequences. Yet, their solution is to have no system at all; in short, to get rid of individual loopholes by having a regime that is one giant void. That hardly seems like a positive alternative.

Opponents also raise the specter of a system overrun by Federal bureaucrats, their favored bugaboo, but this is really another way of saying that they do not want any limits on the flow of money into the political system.

Mr. Chairman, George Bernard Shaw once said, "A society's morals are like its teeth; the more decayed they are, the more it hurts to touch them." It is no accident that it hurts so much to discuss our political morality. It is time to correct it at its roots. I urge my colleagues to vote down this amendment and to support the Shays-Meehan substitute.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My amendment, once again, lowers and standardizes the required signatures to get Federal candidates on the ballot. There is a great deal of inequity among the States, and it works against the minor candidates and prevents many from even participating in the process.

For this reason, many individuals have lost interest in politics. They are disinterested, and every year it seems that the turnout goes down. This year is no exception. Forty-two percent of the American people do not align themselves with a political party. Twenty-nine percent, approximately, align themselves with Republicans and Democrats. Yet, the rules and the laws are written by the major party for the sole purpose of making it very expensive and very difficult, and sometimes impossible, to get on the ballot.

If we had more competition and more openness, we would get more people out to vote. It would not clutter the ballot, it would not have overcrowding, but it would allow discourse, and it would be beneficial to the process.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, my problem with this amendment is that it would prohibit States from erecting excessive ballot access barriers to candidates for Federal office. It would set ballot petition signature limits for the President, the Vice President, United States Senate, and House candidates. In addition, it would set ballot petition time limitations.

Protections are important, but individual States should be allowed to control their campaign laws. Assuring there are no undue barriers to prevent individuals from running for Federal office is imperative to keeping our political process fair, but I am concerned with the Federal Government imposing limitations on the States for how they govern ballot access.

This deals with an important set of issues, and should be dealt with not solely with this amendment, but rather, should be fully debated in the House after the Shays-Meehan substitute has passed.

One of the things that the Shays-Meehan bill does is to provide for an opportunity for debate and discussion through the Commission. This is an issue that I think there should be hearings on, I think we should have a dialogue about. But I just do not think that an amendment to the Shays-Meehan bill is the appropriate place to deal with this issue.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The gentleman suggests we should leave this to the States. I quoted and cited the constitutional authority for this. It is explicit. We have the authority to do this. There are many, many unfair laws.

Dealing with the President, for instance, the minor candidates, on average, to get on the ballot, are required to get 701,000 signatures. A major candidate gets less than 50,000. To get on an average Senate seat ballot, 196,000 signatures are required for the Senate, 15,000 for the major candidates. In the House, on the average for the minor candidate, it is more than 13,000, where it is 2,000 for a major candidate.

There is something distinctly unfair about this. This is un-American. We have the authority to do it. This is the precise time to do it. We are dealing with campaign reform, and they are forcing these minor candidates to spend unbelievable amounts of money. They are being excluded. They are 42 percent of the people in this country. They are the majority, when we divide the electorate up. They deserve representation, too.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant House Resolution 442, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) will be postponed.

It is now in order to consider the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL).

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. PAUL TO AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PAUL to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:
Add at the end the following new title:

TITLE —DEBATE REQUIREMENTS FOR PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

SEC. —01. REQUIREMENT THAT CANDIDATES WHO RECEIVE CAMPAIGN FINANCING FROM THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION CAMPAIGN FUND AGREE NOT TO PARTICIPATE IN MULTI-CANDIDATE FORUMS THAT EXCLUDE CANDIDATES WITH BROAD-BASED PUBLIC SUPPORT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to the requirements under subtitle H of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986. In order to be eligible to receive payments from the Presidential Election Campaign Fund, a candidate shall agree in writing not to appear in any multicandidate forum with respect to the election involved unless the following individuals are invited to participate in the multicandidate forum:

(1) Each other eligible candidate under such subtitle.

(2) Each individual who is qualified in at least 40 States for the ballot for the office involved.

(b) ENFORCEMENT.—If the Federal Election Commission determines that a candidate—

(1) has received payments from the Presidential Election Campaign Fund; and

(2) has violated the agreement referred to in subsection (a); the candidate shall pay to the Treasury an amount equal to the amount of the payments so made.

(c) DEFINITION.—As used in this title, the term "multicandidate forum," means a meeting—

(1) consisting of a moderated reciprocal discussion of issues among candidates for the same office; and

(2) to which any other person has access in person or through an electronic medium.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 17, 1998, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL).

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment is very simple. The major candidates receive a lot, a million dollars, to run their campaigns. Then they have national debates, and then they can purposely exclude other candidates. I am not talking about 10 or 20 or 30 very minor candidates, I am talking about candidates who spend weeks, months, years, hundreds of thousands of dollars, just to get on the ballot. Some will not even take the money, but some qualify to be on 40 and 50 ballots, and they are purposely excluded.

This amendment does not dictate to those who hold debates, but it would require that those major party candidates who take the taxpayers' money, they take it with the agreement that anybody else who qualifies for taxpayers' funding, campaign funds, or gets on 40 ballots, would be allowed in the debate.

I cannot think of anything that could boost the interest in the debates more. Fewer and fewer people are watching debates. There was the lowest turnout, the lowest listening audience to the debates in the last go around. It was the lowest since we have had these debates on television.

Forty-two percent of the people turned out and were interested in the debates prior to the election in 1992, and we had a major candidate, Ross Perot. Of course, the only reason he was able to achieve a significant amount of attention was because he happened to be a billionaire. That is not fair. In 1996, they did a poll right before the election to find out who was paying attention. We were getting ready to pick the President of the United States. It dropped to 24 percent.

If we want people to be civic-minded, interested in what we are doing, feeling like they have something to say about their government, we ought to allow them in. We should not exclude this 42 percent that have been excluded. I think opening up the debates in this way would only be fair and proper. It would be the American way to do it. I strongly urge my colleagues to support this fair-minded amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to take the 5 minutes in opposition to this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) is recognized for 5 minutes in opposition.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. FARR), who has been a leader in our efforts to find a way to pass real campaign finance reform.

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. The gentleman is doing a wonderful job on his bill, along with his colleague, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

Mr. Chairman, I rise on this amendment in deep concern and in opposition to the amendment. I think the sincerity of the author is true, but I think this is the wrong place. This whole bill is about congressional campaign finance reform. It is how we regulate the money that controls our elections, to get elected to this House. It is not about presidential elections.

There might be a great debate about how to do that, but as the gentleman knows, the presidential election process is controlled by each of the 50 States. We have no national primary in the United States. I think there is room for that kind of debate, whether we ought to move in that direction, whether the process for qualifying for a ballot ought to be more uniform, as the gentleman suggests.

But to take the gentleman's ideas about presidential debates and move them into this bill is, I think, the wrong way to go; the wrong place, the wrong time, and frankly, the wrong issue. So I strongly oppose this amendment. I think the gentleman is going to try to confuse what the underlying bill is all about.

We have to keep that in focus. We have to keep it limited to that issue. We cannot build the coalition that we need to build if we try to put everything in this bill, and make it a Christmas tree on all of the ills about lack of voting in America, lack of enough debate for those who wish to run for President of the United States from minor parties.

With all due respect for the gentleman's sincerity, I strongly oppose this amendment, and recommend that all my colleagues oppose the amendment, because it is probably technically germane, but it is not politically germane to what we are trying to accomplish.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

It is always interesting that when we have an appropriate amendment that seems to catch the attention of the Members, that it is probably not the appropriate time to bring it up, and that we should hold hearings and do it some other day.

We have been spending months, and I believe both sides of the aisle have been very sincere in their efforts to clarify and to improve our election process. I think this would be a tremendous benefit to the congressional candidates as well, because there would be more interest. People are not even listening to the debates. If they are not even willing to listen to the presidential debates, how can they get interested in Senate races and in House races?

The rating of the debates in 1996 was the lowest in 36 years. The Vice-Presidential debate, we cannot even get people to listen to the Vice-Presidential debates. It had dropped off 50 percent from 1992. In 1992, there was more interest. It is because we happened to have a billionaire interested, and he was able to stimulate some people in some debates.

All I am asking for is for us to endorse the notion, and we have the authority, the money comes from congressional appropriations. We have written these laws. These are election laws. We have this authority. We have the authority under the Constitution and we have the authority under our laws to do this.

So I would strongly suggest if Members are fair-minded and think they would like more interest, or if they want to continue the way we are going now, we are going to have less and less people interested. People are really tired of it. The American people do not understand this debate, but they do understand they would like to have somebody speak up for them.

Forty-two percent of the people have been essentially disenfranchised, and they are important. Hopefully they are important enough to go to the polls and let us know about it. But they have been disenfranchised because they have lost interest. They have been pushed around, either with ballot access rules and regulations, or not being allowed to appear.

This does not mean those candidates more on the right would happen to be in the debate, or more on the left. It would open it up. This is fair-minded, it is proper, it is a good place to do it. It is a chance to vote on it, and I ask for support on this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I will not use all of my time, but in conclusion, essentially what this does is, a presidential candidate who receives taxpayer-funded matching funds from participating in debates, they will not be able to participate in any debates to which equally qualifying candidates for funds would have participated in.

I agree that there should be more open and free debate, but I am also concerned that the bill might have the opposite effect. It might actually stifle debate, if a candidate who takes matching funds cannot participate in the debate.

Furthermore, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the Commission on Presidential Debates was established in 1987 to ensure debates are a permanent part of every general election.

□ 1830

It handles the rules of who participates and how the presidential debates will take place. I am concerned with the fact that if this amendment were to pass, Congress would essentially be setting the rules for who can and who cannot participate in presidential debates. I believe that that decision should remain with the independent commission.

Certainly, this is an item that in another forum that we could discuss, have hearings on, and I think that would be in our interest. But in any event, I feel, Mr. Chairman, that we should vote "no" on this amendment and take it up at another point in time.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. CASTLE).

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Chairman, I agree with the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) on this. And in a way I have a lot of sympathy for the amendment, because I am one who feels that everyone should have a right to participate in these debates and opportunities.

But, Mr. Chairman, there are times in almost any election, particularly at the presidential level, in which we need to focus on the candidates who are going to be the major candidates who the majority of people by far in this country are going to vote on.

I think it should be up to the independent commission to make that decision so that they can formulate it, come forward with it, and make absolutely sure that everyone in this country who is going to be voting for the most important person in the United States has the opportunity to focus on how well those individuals know the issues, can handle themselves and deal with one another. So, I rise with some reluctance in opposition to this, but I do feel it should be opposed.

In addition, I would just like to take this moment to thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) for the extraordinary work which they have done on this piece of legislation. It really has been an exceptional effort by them, and I think that they deserve all the credit we can possibly give them.

Indeed, at some later point perhaps an amendment like this should be considered, but I think in the context of this particular bill, and with the language which is in this amendment, we should rise in opposition to it and I would encourage us all to oppose it.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). All time having expired, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, further proceeding on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) will be postponed.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. It is now in order to consider the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY).

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that amendments Nos. 27 and 28 offered by me be withdrawn, and my amendments Nos. 25 and 26 be considered one after another, immediately after amendment No. 19, and the text of amendment No. 85 as submitted to the desk today be substituted for amendment No. 29.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair cannot entertain the third element of the gentleman's request.

Is there objection?

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object. I first did not understand what the Chair cannot entertain.

The CHAIRMAN. The request had three parts.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I would respectfully request that we have an understanding. We are eager to try to comply with the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), the majority whip, and also to welcome him back into the Chamber, because he has had some very difficult things to deal with with the death of our two colleagues who guard this place. But I would like to take each of those items so we can see what does not remain.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHAYS. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's questions. What I am attempting to do is to group three amendments together. The first amendment would deal with what we call issue alerts, or what I call issue alerts. The second amendment deals with background music. And the third amendment deals with coordination.

And in order to do that, in my unanimous-consent request I am withdrawing completely amendments Nos. 27 and 28. Then I am taking Nos. 25 and 26 and moving them up to this point in time. Mr. Chairman, amendments 25 and 26 are the background music and the coordination amendment.

I am taking the text of an amendment way down below, No. 85 as pointed out in the rules, and submitting that language and substituting that language for amendment No. 29, which was my limit express advocacy communications.

So, I would take out the limit advocacy communications amendment completely and substitute the amendment that deals with issue alerts, if that makes any sense.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, what is No. 85?

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MEEHAN. We would need to know—

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will suspend. The Committee of the Whole cannot entertain a request to change the form of one of the amendments.

Mr. SHAYS. Then should there be two unanimous consent motions?

The CHAIRMAN. If the gentleman would offer amendment 19, maybe the staff—

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, if I could withdraw my unanimous consent request and make a new one. That would be that I would ask unanimous consent that amendments 27 and 28 be withdrawn completely, and 25 and 26 be considered one after another immediately after amendment 19.

To save confusion, I will go on to amendment 19 and we will work it out with the Parliamentarian.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. DELAY TO THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. DELAY to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:

Add at the end of section 301(20) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as added by section 201(b) of the substitute, the following:

(C) Exception for legislative alerts: The term "express advocacy" does not include any communication which—

(i) deals solely with an issue or legislation which is or may be the subject of a vote in the Senate or House of Representatives; and

(ii) encourages an individual to contact an elected representative in Congress in order to exercise the right protected under the first amendment of the Constitution to inform the representative of the individual's views on such issue or legislation.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 17, 1998, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY).

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I apologize for confusing the Committee. Mr. Chairman, I am offering this amendment in order to ensure issue-oriented citizens groups their first amendment right to urge like-minded citizens to contact their elected representatives about upcoming votes in Congress.

The Shays-Meehan substitute, in my opinion, would restrict communications that express viewpoints to incumbent lawmakers during the period of time that this House could be in session. Now, these communications are intended to encourage like-minded citizens to express themselves regarding upcoming votes on the floor of the House. My amendment makes a distinction between communications that address upcoming votes and communications that endorse candidates for elections, two very real differences.

Due to the time limit, I will concentrate on just one of these restrictions. Under section 201 of Shays-Meehan, if a group sends out a communication at any time of the year, this would include flyers or newspaper ads or any other printed communications, that explain that Congressman Doe, for instance, voted incorrectly on a given issue the last time it came up and the same issue is coming up, say, again the next week. And if voters are interested in Congressman Doe reconsidering his vote, they should give him a call.

Under the onerous provisions of Shays-Meehan, Congressman Doe would regard this as an attack on him and, therefore, an example of impermissible express advocacy. Congressman Doe's reason would lie in section 201 of the bill which states a given communication is express advocacy if it contains words that can have no reasonable meaning other than to advocate support or defeat, or if it contains words that express unmistakable and unambiguous opposition. These are the words in the bill.

Now, maybe the citizens groups' words are like, "Do you know that Congresswoman SMITH has voted time and again in favor of brutal partial-birth abortion procedures and has repeatedly described partial-birth abortion as a godsend?"

Maybe the words are, and I quote, "Congressman JONES voted to strip women of their constitutional right to choose and call it a great stride for mankind," closed quote.

It does not matter what the issue is. It does not matter what side of the issue a group is on. These groups have a right, a constitutionally protected right, to inform like-minded constituents to contact their representative, to let their representative know how his constituents may feel.

Simply put, issue-oriented citizens' groups have a first amendment right to express their opinions. These citizens deserve an unfettered, unobstructed right, not only to be informed of political issues but also to enjoy freedom of political speech.

I think that section 201 of Shays-Meehan prohibits any citizen group, other than, say, a Federal PAC, from even mentioning the name of a Member of Congress in a broadcast communication for 60 days before a primary election and again for 60 days before a general election, easily the most critical periods in the American electoral process. These are the times during which citizens are frantically seeking to inform and educate themselves as to what candidates stand for and against, and this provision undermines and subverts the entire electoral process.

So my amendment, I think, is a necessary measure to protect and secure free speech and the integrity of our electoral process and allow citizens' groups to participate in the legislative process. So I ask support for my amendment and support for freedom of speech.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN).

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is once again an effort to really undermine and cancel out the so-called issue ads and all of the express advocacy and issue advocacy provisions in this bill.

If you look at the language of the amendment of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY), you see that there is an exception, an entire exception, to the issue advocacy provisions in case of any communication which deals solely with an issue or legislation which is or may be subject to a vote in the Senate or House of Representatives.

It does not say when. It could be next year. It could be 3 years from now. It could be anything. It encourages an individual to contact an elected representative in Congress in order to exercise the right protected under the first amendment.

So that once again opens the door to these so-called issue ads that attack a candidate in a clear campaign manner and does not say "defeats so and so," but says, after attacking him, after vilifying him or her, after making it clear that that person should be defeated, does not use the term "defeat" but says, contact so and so.

So, the amendment of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) goes far beyond this instance of where we may be in session and where perhaps a group is truly not trying to campaign against that person but get a message to that person or to his or her constituents about something that is immediately pending.

Also I would urge that the protections we have in here are more than adequate to take care of the problem that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) says he is trying to address. This is the effort of the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLITTLE), all over again to take out of Shays-Meehan the issue advocacy provisions that attempt to get at ads that proclaim or parade as noncampaign ads but are truly nothing but that.

□ 1845

There would be no other reasonable interpretation. So this is bigger than driving a Mack truck through Shays-Meehan. This is one of these amendments that has a huge truck with a lot of poison pills in them which will sink Shays-Meehan. I think it is bad policy in and of itself. It goes way beyond its pretended purpose.

The momentum is now on the side of campaign finance reform. We should defeat amendments, the purpose of which is to throw a huge barrier in front of our reaching the promised land. We can reach it. There are some in this body who want to destroy it by any means. This is one such instance. We do not have to be worried about freedom of speech, in our judgment. We have carefully drafted this.

Defeat the DeLay amendment.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

Mr. BLUNT. I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

If I heard the previous speaker correctly, and Shays-Meehan already allows this in all probability, why do we not just be specific about it? This really just says that you can contact, you can encourage others to contact a Member of the House or a Member of the Senate during this 60-day blackout period, if in fact there is an issue before the Congress or likely to come before the Congress, and encourage that they be contacted on how they would vote. When we come back in September, everything we deal with would be in that 60-day period, where it is arguable whether you could contact, whether you could encourage the contact of a Member of Congress.

I think it is probably not arguable that you could call a Member of Congress and say, we would like you to do this. It is probably not arguable that you could write your own letter. But Shays-Meehan appears to say that you cannot encourage others to do that.

We have got appropriations bills that will be coming, that we will send to the Senate, others that will be coming back in conference from the Senate. Are we saying that no group could send out a postcard that says, contact your Member of Congress about this issue that is coming up next week or a specific Member of Congress and mention their name? Are we saying that nobody could send out a postcard and say, last time this issue came up, this Member of Congress voted yes, contact them and encourage them to vote no on the bill that is coming up this week?

I think really this gets down to the very fundamental point of issues before the Congress at a time, if the gentleman from Michigan is correct and it is in there, what does it hurt to make it even more specific?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLUNT. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. My point is not that the DeLay amendment is in there. The way it is drafted, it refers to all of these sham ads, whenever they are produced, whether 60 days in advance or not. If you read section C, it applies to subsection A and B and all the provisions therein.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would help me here for a minute, figure this out, if you cannot mention the name of a Member of Congress on anything you pay for, including a postcard, within 60 days of the election, how do you alert others who feel the same way you do about an issue to contact a given Congressman who may be, a given Member of Congress who may be thinking about which way they want to vote on that issue?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, first of all, again, I urge that anyone who is thinking of supporting this amendment read it. It applies to all of the provisions on express advocacy, whenever an ad would be launched, whether it is 60 days, 90 days, 120 days or whatever. It destroys the entire issue advocacy provisions. That is number one.

Mr. BLUNT. Reclaiming my time, the amendment says that this deals solely with an issue or legislation which is or may be the subject of a vote in the Senate or House of Representatives.

Mr. LEVIN. But, if the gentleman will continue to yield, that could be 120 days before, it could be any time and something that is subject to a vote that could be a year away. So I just urge that the gentleman read the amendment.

Number two, in relation to the 60-day provision, that only relates to paid advertisements transmitted through radio or television 60 days preceding an election. And if it is a notification through paid media that is truly not an effort to influence a vote but influence an election, then it should come under the same rules and regulations as all other methods of communication relating to elections and candidates.

Mr. BLUNT. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I would just say that if we begin to say that we cannot, with a radio ad or some other communication, some instant communication, try to encourage that specific Members of the Congress be contacted, we are a long way down, I think, the wrong road.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCRELL).

Mr. PASCRELL. Mr. Chairman, if we are going to maintain the express advocacy standard championed by the Shays-Meehan legislation, and we need to do that, we cannot go halfway on this. The distinguished whip, the distinguished leader from the other side, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) knows that quite well. This is a complex issue. Folks listening and watching are trying to still figure out what is the difference between soft and hard money, maybe like some Members. But there is a very, very severe distinction here.

We are not saying in Shays-Meehan that the candidate or dollars cannot be spent on behalf of the candidate by other groups. What we are saying is it must be hard money or else it is wrong and it is banned. The whole purpose of this legislation is to ban soft money. We know how that has grown. We are talking about two political parties that have raised $67 million between them in the first 3 months of this year.

So we can really boil this down into two very basic things. There are those of us on both sides of the aisle who believe there is too much money in politics, too much money in our campaigns.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PASCRELL. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, could the gentleman tell me how much money is enough money in politics? Could the gentleman tell me how much money is enough? The gentleman said there is too much money in it. How much money is enough?

Mr. PASCRELL. If the average, Mr. Chairman, if the average campaign costs $660,000, we know that we cannot put a cap on it due to a Supreme Court decision, but working together I am sure we can come to specific advocacy issues of ourselves, such as banning soft money. Because if you have $10 to spend in your campaign and not $660,000, and third-party advocacy groups can spend whatever they wish, that is not controlling expenditures in a campaign. The gentleman knows it, and I know it.

So I believe this Shays-Meehan is simply attempting to ban soft money so that all of the hard money that is spent is disclosed. That is a critical issue, Mr. Chairman.

We want the dollars, we want the names and the addresses of people who contributed to our campaigns. That is a very underlying argument within Shays-Meehan, disclosure, the banning of soft money. And the sooner we do it, the better.

I think that this is what this is all about, what we are going to open up here, and trying to go in the opposite direction. What we are going to open up is more advocacy, more issue advocacy, more spending of money, not only 6 months or 6 weeks but 6 days before a campaign.

I believe Shays-Meehan is on target. I believe we cannot equivocate. This amendment is a poison pill.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. WHITFIELD).

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Chairman, the discussion that we are having right now goes to the very crux of this entire issue of campaign finance reform. Those who have been advocating reform talk about special interest money. One thing is pretty clear, special interest money is the money of any group you do not agree with.

Second of all, too much money, no one has been able to define what is too much money. Third of all, sham ads. What is a sham ad? It is an ad that you do not like. Then fourth of all, disclosure.

Now, I find it ironic that I am up here this evening speaking in favor of the majority whip's amendment to allow groups to take out ads in the newspaper or radio or whatever to express their concern about issues before the Congress; and you all want to stop that, in essence.

Yet a group called Public Campaign ran ads in every newspaper in my district 2 days ago saying that ED WHITFIELD does not think politicians are hooked on special interest money so he wants to triple the dose.

Now, I did not like this. It made me feel bad to read this, every newspaper in my district, but I think this group has a constitutional right to run this ad if they want to run it.

But in your definition of express advocacy, you expand it so far that you are going to eliminate and curtail the rights of groups like Public Campaign to talk about these issues.

In fact, the third way you expand express advocacy, it says, express advocacy is expressing unmistakable and unambiguous support for or opposition to one or more clearly identified candidates when taken as a whole and with limited reference to external events such as proximity to an election.

This ad meets that definition. And under the Shays-Meehan, this ad would be illegal. So here I am, up here defending the right of this third party, independent group to run these ads, and all that the majority whip's amendment does is to be sure that they have a right to do that.

I might further say that the third way you expand the definition of express advocacy, the Supreme Court already, in a case FEC versus Maine

Right to Life, has declared that specific language, not approximate language, but specific language unconstitutional.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First off, we do not ban anything. This is just totally a misstatement. The issue is whether it is an issue ad or a campaign ad. The issue is whether you come under campaign rules or do not come under campaign rules.

First and foremost, Mr. Chairman, we ban soft money. I do not think that there is any amendment to try to deal with that, so that is off the table.

The issue is dealing with sham issue ads that are truly campaign ads. It is not that they do not have a right to do it, but they are campaign ads and should come under the campaign rules. Organizations and labor unions and other interest groups have tried to get around the campaign laws by simply pretending that they are issue ads, by not saying vote for or vote against, but mentioning the name of the candidate and showing a picture. We have the bright line test expanded by the name of the picture or the name of the candidate. That is for radio and TV.

□ 1900

This is not radio or TV. This does not ban it based on the issue of 60 days before an election.

Now, there is the issue of unambiguous and unmistakable support for or opposition to a clearly identified Federal candidate can run at any time. Telling an individual that he should vote for something or vote against to me does not meet that test at all. It does not meet the unambiguous and unmistakable test that would affect this paper.

So the bottom line is radio and TV, yes. Name or the picture of the candidate 60 days to an election, that is right. We are trying to get at these campaign ads so people do not get around disclosure of them and are not able to use corporate and dues money. That is the purpose of it.

The bottom line to the gentleman's amendment is it is an exemption that totally swallows the rule. He basically abolishes by this amendment any attempt to deal with the whole issue of not dealing with the recognition of sham issue ads. It basically allows for this loophole because all you have to do is say, "Contact your representative," and then two days before the election you can then say, "Contact your representative and say whatever you want," which is the reason why I have objection to it.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHAYS. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. WHITFIELD. I would just say to the gentleman that I think he has confirmed my concern and his third method of expanding express advocacy can be by newspaper, radio, television or whatever. Reasonable minds can disagree about what is unmistakable and what is unambiguous, and that is the reason that the court has adopted a bright line test. Your expansion of express advocacy is going to end up right back in the courts.

Mr. SHAYS. The bright line test is emphatically what we do have, and the name or the picture of the candidate has been what is expanded to it.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Michigan (Ms. RIVERS).

Ms. RIVERS. Mr. Chairman, the previous speaker said that this issue goes to the crux of what this bill is about and it does.

A couple of weeks ago I very facetiously read a little poem by Dr. Seuss or in a Dr. Seuss like manner and I said that what this bill was about was about calling what waddles and quacks a duck, and that is what this bill is about. It is about ending the ability of some individuals and some groups to do an end run around the laws that we have in place for electing candidates.

This seems like a very innocent proposal. But frankly to pass it would allow some very pernicious political behavior to continue. This proposal includes a huge loophole, and the gentleman from Michigan did mention this to some extent. But I want to be very clear. The provision that the majority whip proposes would include not just issues that are scheduled to come up in front of a legislative body but issues that might or may be scheduled in the future. This is a huge issue. This means that any issue, any issue that conceivably could be put in front of a legislative body should fall within this particular exemption.

A couple of weeks ago when I spoke on issue advocacy, I read from the New York Times and other newspapers the express script of a campaign ad, really a whole series of campaign ads that ran in Staten Island. But they had similar gists to them. They went like this. Because one of the candidates was a member of the New York legislature, the ads ran talking about the number of times that that legislator had raised taxes, a number of things that he had done as a State legislator, they finished up by saying, even though there was no vote scheduled in the New York legislature on taxes, "Call Representative A and tell him to stop raising your taxes."

Would that fit within the exemption that the majority whip is proposing? Absolutely. Are we dealing with an express attempt to influence the election or defeat of a particular candidate? Yes. Are we talking about a legislative issue that just might at some time be in front of the legislative body that this individual belongs to? Yes. But this is the sort of behavior we are trying to stop. We are trying to make the rules clear and we are trying to make sure that everyone follows them. If you are attempting to elect or defeat a candidate, there are clear laws with which you must comply. What the majority whip tries to do is to blur those rules and to continue to provide an end run opportunity for those people who do not wish to follow the laws.

Please do not accept this. Let us do what I said a couple of weeks ago. Let us make sure that we call what waddles and quacks a duck.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. This is exposing Shays-Meehan for what it is. The opposition to my amendment is trying to confuse the Members. In one section of 202, they do talk about 60 days before an election. But in other sections in 202, they talk about other parts of the year. And 60 days it is radio or television communication. But in other parts of the year it could be the kind of ad that the gentleman from Kentucky was talking about.

My amendment is very, very simple. It simply states that an exemption to the express advocacy part of their bill that deals solely with an issue or legislation. I do not understand why the proponents of Shays-Meehan are scared to death to have ads run against them dealing with issues while we are in session or the next week of the session.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELAY. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. WHITFIELD. Mr. Chairman, there is one thing that I did want to clarify. Obviously if you have an ad that is running and under the new definition of express advocacy of Shays-Meehan that ad is included and, as I said, I think it is so broad and so ambiguous and subject to so many interpretations, the Supreme Court has already declared part of this language unconstitutional. But obviously you can run those ads. The gentleman was correct. You can run the ads, but the group would have to form a PAC, the group would have to have an attorney, the group would have to file all those reports with the FEC and that is precisely the type of chilling effect that the Supreme Court has repeatedly said you cannot require.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) for their extraordinary commitment to this issue and their hard work on it for many years.

Many of the amendments that come before us tonight collectively serve only one purpose, and, that is, to sidetrack reform. We have the power to change that today by passing and voting for Shays-Meehan, voting down absolutely every single amendment. We have a commission that is attached to it that can review all of these. The Shays-Meehan as we have said bans soft money and it also prevents the so-called independent groups from running sham issue advocacy ads whose true aim is to elect or defeat a particular candidate. This particular amendment really would create a sham legislative alert. Whether it is a sham issue advocacy ad or a sham legislative alert, all we are saying is disclose who is paying for it. Let the American public know who is wooing whom and pay for it, not with the huge loophole of soft money but with hard money.

I think that all of us have been attacked by these so-called independent groups in our campaigns. What is very troubling, in many cases I believe these independent groups are spending more money than the candidates themselves. But I am all for free speech. We all support free speech. Just let the American public know who is paying for it. Is that too much to ask? But the real point is that we have before us a very carefully crafted bill that has what I call the fragile flower of consensus. We have a majority of Members in this Congress that support Shays-Meehan. We can pass it and enact it into law. We can consider other important amendments in the commission bill. That is what we should be doing tonight.

What I find particularly troubling is that I suspect that many of the Members who have offered amendments this evening have absolutely no intention for voting for Shays-Meehan. Their real agenda is to try to destroy it with poison pills or with amendments that disrupt the balance that we have created.

Vote for Shays-Meehan. Vote against all amendments.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GREENWOOD).

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time. I would like to get back to the original intent of the maker of the amendment which I think is to preserve the right to give legislative alerts. I do not quarrel with the gentleman's motivation. I think the motivation is proper. I do think that the bill protects that right, because there is clearly a voting record or voting guide exception. The term express advocacy does not include printed communication that presents information in an educational manner solely about the voting record or positions on a campaign issue. I think that the gentleman's concern is well covered in the bill.

Let me tell Members the problem I think we are trying to solve with this legislation. I think the laws of this land with regard to campaign finance and campaign communication worked pretty well until the relatively recent number of years. And the intensity of the fight across the country for this Congress, for this House in particular, has been such that it has distorted the laws. It troubles me that whenever there is a special election in America now, we no longer rely upon the people of that community to listen to a good debate among the candidates, to identify who stands for which issue, participate in the campaign and they go vote. Instead, immediately out rushes Planned Parenthood, out rushes the Family Research Council, out rushes the AFL-CIO, out rushes the business organizations, term limits, every organization in America rushes out and starts dumping millions and millions of dollars into these sham ads which are just sham ads. They are sham ads not because, as my friend from Kentucky said, we do not agree with them, because they masquerade as something they are not. They masquerade as information when in fact they are the most clever and deceptive and non-productive and unsubstantive attacks on character and the record of the candidates, and they need to be managed as free speech does throughout our society.

I ask for a negative vote on the DeLay amendment.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maine (Mr. ALLEN), a distinguished freshman Member of Congress.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maine (Mr. ALLEN).

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Chairman, this amendment like others is a poison pill. It is designed to undermine campaign reform. It is designed to change the Shays-Meehan bill in a way to reduce its support.

I simply want to raise a couple of things, go back to a couple of things that have been said here. This is not about denying any group its right to speak in American politics. This is not about preventing groups from sending postcards. It is not about preventing people from communicating about their representatives. What it is about is saying, if you are going to communicate in a way that pretends to be about an issue but in fact is meant to influence an election, we need to know who is paying for the ads. We need to get disclosure. That is what this is about.

There are those on the other side who preach disclosure, disclosure, disclosure as one approach to the abuses of this campaign season, except when it comes to outside groups running ads. And then they say, "Oh, no, we can't have disclosure." We need disclosure when it comes to issue advocacy. That is why I think this is an amendment that needs to be defeated.

The second point I will make is just this. It was asked earlier how much money is too much money in politics. Well, this is not about free speech. It is about big money. It is not about protecting the free speech of a constituent. It is about preserving big money in this system. Too much money is unlimited money flowing to the national parties to run ads. Too much money in politics is unlimited money with no disclosure of who it is that is spending that money by outside groups.

The Shays-Meehan bill is a good approach to campaign reform. I believe there are other approaches.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ALLEN. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BLUNT. I would just like to ask the gentleman whom I think is well motivated and well intentioned in this debate, in your sense of an effort to persuade someone on an issue or to encourage a vote on the issue but you said that masquerades as that when it is really something else, who decides that is I think really my concern. Who draws the line between what masquerades as an ad or what is really clearly encouraging a result on an issue?

□ 1915

What we do not want to do here is shut the door on people's ability to rightly influence the legitimate debate of the Congress. And who decides where that line is? What is the standard?

Mr. ALLEN. I believe that in this, as in many other areas of law, that the law, the standard, will be developed. It will be developed by the FEC, it will be developed by the courts over time until we have a fairly clear understanding of what that standard is.

And we do this all the time. We write standards into law, and we hope they are clear enough to be effectively enforced.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the Meehan-Shays substitute bans soft money, and then what we also do is we recognize that the sham issue ads are truly campaign ads, and that is the key point. They are not sham in the sense that they do not have a right to speak, but they are not issue ads, they are campaign ads, and we call them such. One of our provisions is obviously already in existing law. Vote for or vote against it; it makes it a campaign ad. And people get around the sham issue ads by not saying vote for or vote against, but they might as well based on what they say. When they mention the name or show a picture of a candidate by radio or TV, we call them campaign ads; that is true. The fact is, though, that these voter alerts, we do not impact the voter alerts through that process of the picture or the name.

The bottom line is, this is an amendment that is an exemption that truly does swallow the rule. It abolishes any attempt whatsoever to deal with sham issue ads. It is a gigantic loophole that is intending to deal with something that is not a problem.

Now my colleague used the word "manage." I do not agree it is managed. I think it is simply saying playing by the same rules. People have a right to speak out. They can do their legislative alerts. But if they are on radio or TV 60 days to an election, it is going to be a campaign ad and they come under the campaign rules with all the voice that is allowed under that process.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SHIMKUS). The time of the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) has expired.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I think the opponents to my amendment are very upset with this amendment because this amendment may pass, and they are upset with this amendment and oppose this amendment because it exposes the biggest part of the Shays-Meehan bill that we object to, and that is the part that manages free speech.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania used the term we need to "manage" free speech. To me, that is an oxymoron. We cannot manage free speech, particularly in the part of political advocacy and political participation that my amendment addresses.

My amendment is very simple. It just exempts from the section of the bill any ads or alerts sent out by groups that deal solely with an issue or legislation which is or may be subject to a vote in the Senate or the House of Representatives. Now why would they be afraid of issue ads that express opposition for or support for a vote in the House of Representatives or the Senate?

And it also exempts any communication that encourages an individual to contact an elected representative in Congress in order to exercise the right protected under the first amendment of the Constitution to inform the representative of the individual's views on such an issue of legislation.

Now, if we look at some of the opponents and what they have actually been saying, I am going to dissect a little of it. Number one, they confuse the whole issue by talking about bigger issues, smaller issues, loopholes, sham ads. In fact, the gentlewoman from New York has turned a new term of art in addition to the term of art "sham ads" that has been started by the Shays-Meehan. Now we have sham issue alerts.

Can my colleagues imagine in this country of free speech, free speech guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, we are talking about sham issue alerts in the House of Representatives? We want to manage the free speech of groups that may want to tell the American people how we vote? This is what we have been talking about all along. The proponents of Shays-Meehan are proponents, number one, that are incumbents, and they are sick and tired of people around America revealing, using our communication services in this country to reveal how they vote, and so they want to get rid of these sham ads. Or they want to manage them in such a way as to discourage them.

The gentleman from New Jersey was talking about capping spending. The gentleman from Maine was talking about we need to know who these subversive people are that are writing ads that may tell the American people how we vote. And we need to know who is we? Who decides? Is we the big-brother government at the Federal Election Commission? Of course it is. They want big-brother government to manage free speech, if we put all the opponents' speech together. That is what they have been saying here.

What we are saying is very simple: As the gentleman from Connecticut has said, we take care of issue alerts in our bill. It is no problem. Of course, we cannot find it in their bill, but they just arbitrarily say we take care of it. Well, if they take care of it, why are they afraid of my amendment? They are afraid of my amendment because they are afraid for people to gather together, raise some money, send out an ad, do a radio spot that tells the American people and District 22 of Texas how the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TOM DELAY) votes.

Mr. Chairman, I am not afraid of how I vote, and I am not afraid to stand up and stand toe-to-toe and debate those groups that are against the way that I vote. That is the American process. What Shays-Meehan does in its limitation of free speech and its now-management of free speech is wants to shut down organizations' abilities and rights to freely express themselves in the political process because in their bill they say communications, radio and TV, that is run 60 days before an election, which means when we get back from the August recess in September, if my colleagues run a radio spot that happens to say, "Tom DeLay voted to ban partial-birth abortions and he is a bad dude for doing it," that organization could come under attack by the Federal Election Commission, and they have no defense to say we are just advocating a vote on the floor of the House during a pre-election period. But in my amendment that group, whether it be Planned Parenthood or others, could stand up and say, no, in the law it says that we are dealing with a vote on the floor of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

It just amazes me every time I debate this campaign reform why people want to limit people's freedom of speech to participate in the political process, and it all comes back to the same reason: They are afraid for the American people to know what is going on in this town, to know what is going on on the floor of this House, and they are uncomfortable sometimes by some of the ads that groups run, and they want to do away with them once and for all.

So I just ask the Members to look at my amendment, digest it, understand it and vote for it.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. All time having expired, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

The question was taken; and the Chairman pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 442, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) will be postponed.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that Amendments 27 and 28 offered by me be withdrawn and my amendments 25 and 26 in the order of July 17 on H.R. 2183 may be considered in the sequence at this point and that 26 be modified by the form at the desk.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair cannot entertain that request in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the unanimous consent, and I have Amendment No. 25 at the desk.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Does the gentleman intend to offer Amendment No. 20?

Mr. DELAY. No, Mr. Chairman. No. 25, I ask unanimous consent to take No. 25 out of order and consider it.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. That being the case, it is now in order to consider the amendment by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON). The Committee of the Whole may not entertain a request to consider an amendment that deviates from the previous order of the House.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. PETERSON OF PENNSYLVANIA TO THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania to the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. SHAYS:

Add at the end the following new title:

TITLE —VOTER ELIGIBILITY CONFIRMATION PROGRAM

SEC. —01. VOTER ELIGIBILITY PILOT CONFIRMATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General, in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security, shall establish a pilot program to test a confirmation system through which they—

(1) respond to inquiries, made by State and local officials (including voting registrars) with responsibility for determining an individual's qualification to vote in a Federal, State, or local election, to verify the citizenship of an individual who has submitted a voter registration application, and

(2) maintain such records of the inquiries made and verifications provided as may be necessary for pilot program evaluation. In order to make an inquiry through the pilot program with respect to an individual, an election official shall provide the name, date of birth, and social security account number of the individual.

(b) INITIAL RESPONSE.—The pilot program shall provide for a confirmation or a tentative nonconfirmation of an individual's citizenship by the Commissioner of Social Security as soon as practicable after an initial inquiry to the Commissioner.

(c) SECONDARY VERIFICATION PROCESS IN CASE OF TENTATIVE NONCONFIRMATION.—In cases of tentative nonconfirmation, the Attorney General shall specify, in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security and the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, an available secondary verification process to confirm the validity of information provided and to provide a final confirmation or nonconfirmation as soon as practicable after the date of the tentative nonconfirmation.

(d) DESIGN AND OPERATION OF PILOT PROGRAM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The pilot program shall be designed and operated—

(A) to apply in, at a minimum, the States of California, New York, Texas, Florida, and Illinois;

(B) to be used on a voluntary basis, as a supplementary information source, by State and local election officials for the purpose of assessing, through citizenship verification, the eligibility of an individual to vote in Federal, State, or local elections;

(C) to respond to an inquiry concerning citizenship only in a case where determining whether an individual is a citizen is—

(i) necessary for determining whether the individual is eligible to vote in an election for Federal, State, or local office; and

(ii) part of a program or activity to protect the integrity of the electoral process that is uniform, nondiscriminatory, and in compliance with the Voting Rights Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 1973 et seq.);

(D) to maximize its reliability and ease of use, consistent with insulating and protecting the privacy and security of the underlying information;

(E) to permit inquiries to be made to the pilot program through a toll-free telephone line or other toll-free electronic media;

(F) subject to subparagraph (I), to respond to all inquiries made by authorized persons and to register all times when the pilot program is not responding to inquiries because of a malfunction;

(G) with appropriate administrative, technical, and physical safeguards to prevent unauthorized disclosure of personal information, including violations of the requirements of section 205(c)(2)(C)(viii) of the Social Security Act;

(H) to have reasonable safeguards against the pilot program's resulting in unlawful discriminatory practices based on national origin or citizenship status, including the selective or unauthorized use of the pilot program.

(2) USE OF EMPLOYMENT ELIGIBILITY CONFIRMATION SYSTEM.—To the extent practicable, in establishing the confirmation system under this section, the Attorney General, in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security, shall use the employment eligibility confirmation system established under section 404 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-208; 110 Stat. 3009-664).

(e) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE COMMISSIONER OF SOCIAL SECURITY.—As part of the pilot program, the Commissioner of Social Security shall establish a reliable, secure method which compares the name, date of birth, and social security account number provided in an inquiry against such information maintained by the Commissioner, in order to confirm (or not confirm) the correspondence of the name, date of birth, and number provided and whether the individual is shown as a citizen of the United States on the records maintained by the Commissioner (including whether such records show that the individual was born in the United States). The Commissioner shall not disclose or release social security information (other than such confirmation or nonconfirmation).

(f) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE COMMISSIONER OF THE IMMIGRATION AND NATURALIZATION

SERVICE.—As part of the pilot program, the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service shall establish a reliable, secure method which compares the name and date of birth which are provided in an inquiry against information maintained by the Commissioner in order to confirm (or not confirm) the validity of the information provided, the correspondence of the name and date of birth, and whether the individual is a citizen of the United States.

(g) UPDATING INFORMATION.—The Commissioner of Social Security and the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service shall update their information in a manner that promotes the maximum accuracy and shall provide a process for the prompt correction of erroneous information, including instances in which it is brought to their attention in the secondary verification process described in subsection (c) or in any action by an individual to use the process provided under this subsection upon receipt of notification from an election official under subsection (i).

(h) LIMITATION ON USE OF THE PILOT PROGRAM AND ANY RELATED SYSTEMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, nothing in this section shall be construed to permit or allow any department, bureau, or other agency of the United States Government to utilize any information, data base, or other records assembled under this section for any other purpose other than as provided for under this section.

(2) NO NATIONAL IDENTIFICATION CARD.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize, directly or indirectly, the issuance or use of national identification cards or the establishment of a national identification card.

(3) NO NEW DATA BASES.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize, directly or indirectly, the Attorney General and the Commissioner of Social Security to create any joint computer data base that is not in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(i) ACTIONS BY ELECTION OFFICIALS UNABLE TO CONFIRM CITIZENSHIP.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If an election official receives a notice of final nonconfirmation under subsection (c) with respect to an individual, the official—

(A) shall notify the individual in writing; and

(B) shall inform the individual in writing of the individual's right to use—

(i) the process provided under subsection (g) for the prompt correction of erroneous information in the pilot program; or

(ii) any other process for establishing eligibility to vote provided under State or Federal law.

(2) REGISTRATION APPLICANTS.—In the case of an individual who is an applicant for voter registration, and who receives a notice from an official under paragraph (1), the official may (subject to, and in a manner consistent with, State law) reject the application (subject to the right to reapply), but only if the following conditions have been satisfied:

(A) The 30-day period beginning on the date the notice was mailed or otherwise provided to the individual has elapsed.

(B) During such 30-day period, the official did not receive adequate confirmation of the citizenship of the individual from—

(i) a source other than the pilot program established under this section; or

(ii) such pilot program, pursuant to a new inquiry to the pilot program made by the official upon receipt of information (from the individual or through any other reliable source) that erroneous or incomplete material information previously in the pilot program has been updated, supplemented, or corrected.

(3) INELIGIBLE VOTER REMOVAL PROGRAMS.—In the case of an individual who is registered to vote, and who receives a notice from an official under paragraph (1) in connection with a program to remove the names of ineligible voters from an official list of eligible voters, the official may (subject to, and in a manner consistent with, State law) remove the name of the individual from the list (subject to the right to submit another voter registration application), but only if the following conditions have been satisfied:

(A) The 30-day period beginning on the date the notice was mailed or otherwise provided to the individual has elapsed.

(B) During such 30-day period, the official did not receive adequate confirmation of the citizenship of the individual from a source described in clause (i) or (ii) of paragraph (2)(B).

(j) AUTHORITY TO USE SOCIAL SECURITY ACCOUNT NUMBERS.—Any State (or political subdivision thereof) may, for the purpose of making inquiries under the pilot program in the administration of any voter registration law within its jurisdiction, use the social security account numbers issued by the Commissioner of Social Security, and may, for such purpose, require any individual who is or appears to be affected by a voter registration law of such State (or political subdivision thereof) to furnish to such State (or political subdivision thereof) or any agency thereof having administrative responsibility for such law, the social security account number (or numbers, if the individual has more than one such number) issued to the individual by the Commissioner.

(k) TERMINATION AND REPORT.—The pilot program shall terminate September 30, 2001. The Attorney General and the Commissioner of Social Security shall each submit to the Committee on the Judiciary and the Committee on Ways and Means of the House of Representatives and to the Committee on the Judiciary and the Committee on Finance of the Senate reports on the pilot program not later than December 31, 2001. Such reports shall—

(1) assess the degree of fraudulent attesting of United States citizenship in jurisdictions covered by the pilot program;

(2) assess the appropriate staffing and funding levels which would be required for full, permanent, and nationwide implementation of the pilot program, including the estimated total cost for national implementation per individual record;

(3) include an assessment by the Commissioner of Social Security of the advisability and ramifications of disclosure of social security account numbers to the extent provided for under the pilot program and upon full, permanent, and nationwide implementation of the pilot program;

(4) assess the degree to which the records maintained by the Commissioner of Social Security and the Commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service are able to be used to reliably determine the citizenship of individuals who have submitted voter registration applications;

(5) assess the effectiveness of the pilot program's safeguards against unlawful discriminatory practices;

(6) include recommendations on whether or not the pilot program should be continued or modified; and

(7) include such other information as the Attorney General or the Commissioner of Social Security may determine to be relevant.

SEC. —02. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Justice, for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, for fiscal years beginning on or after October 1, 1998, such sums as are necessary to carry out the provisions of this title.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 17, 1998, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) and a Member opposed each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. SHAYS. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I just need to know. We have gone from Amendment 19, and now we are going to Amendment 21. Does that mean Amendment 20 has been dropped?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas did not offer Amendment 20.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I seek to take the time in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the amendment that I offer today is an amendment that is a pilot program. It would allow the Attorney General, in consultation with the Commissioner of Social Security and the Immigration and Naturalization Service, to establish a pilot program to test a confirmation system through which they respond to inquiries made by State and local officials, including local voting registrars with responsibility for determining an individual's qualification to vote in a Federal or State or local election, to verify the citizenship of an individual who has submitted a voter registration application and maintain such record of the inquiries made and verifications provided as may be necessary for pilot program evaluation.

This is a pilot project that would expire in 2001. It would give State and local officials the option, only an option if they want to use it, to verify the citizenship of voters using Social Security and INS records. It is totally voluntary. It is not a State mandate. It is a pilot program to be used in five States that already are testing an employee verification program for non-citizens: California, Florida, Illinois, New York and Texas. And this expires in the year 2001, and then a report would be written on how this system worked and if it was effective.

Currently, the law requires citizenship to vote. The Federal law requires it. All 50 States require it. I guess the question is, should we enforce the law? Or should we repeal the law and not require citizenship if one does not agree with this pilot? Currently, I would ask the question: Do we have the ability to enforce this law? And the answer is no.

□ 1930

Can local election officials currently stop the fraud that is far too common? Not often enough. So why do we have the requirement for citizenship? Elections are the very lifeblood of democracy. Fraud in election poisons our electoral system and undermines the trust that is essential to democracy.

Under this amendment we are introducing today, State and local election officials would be able to make inquiries to the Social Security Administration, which has a record of citizenship when they assign a Social Security number, and to the Immigration Naturalization Service which can also help verify people who have submitted to naturalization and citizenship. This would be set up by the Attorney General.

Voting, as I suggested, is the most fundamental act of citizenship. The people who administer our elections ought to have the access to the information they need to ensure integrity at the ballot box.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. FAZIO).

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this amendment. It is perhaps the most significant poison pill amendment that has been offered to the underlying Shays-Meehan reform bill.

The motor voter law which passed this Congress in the early 1990s has proven to be a helpful way of bringing new people to the political process. If there is a need in this country, it is to engage people in the public debate, to bring them on to the voter rolls and to get them to participate.

People across the country have chronicled the decline in voter participation in primary elections and general elections. The public interest is not served when less than a third of the American people take the opportunity to participate in the elections that keep this representative form of democracy vibrant.

The motor voter law was established with broad bipartisan support so that we would remove impediments to becoming registered voters. By all accounts, it is working. In fact, there are even those who would argue that it is probably working far more to the benefit of Members of the other party than many anticipated when Republicans lead the opposition to this law.

This amendment would take on motor voter by setting up a very difficult and unworkable voter eligibility system using Social Security and the INS. The amendment would have, I think, a chilling effect on the effort to bring more people into the political process and would, as well, raise serious questions, not only of individual privacy, but of administrative workability.

All it would take would be a brief recollection of the difficulty we had in the case of my colleague from California Rep. LORETTA SANCHEZ, attempting to get information from the INS in any timely fashion to give Members an impression that this proposal is a recipe for potential disaster.

There is no need for us at the moment to make any significant change in the motor voter law. There has been an outpouring of support for it from the League of Women Voters and many other groups who strive to introduce new participants to the American political process.

There has been no justification offered for this amendment. To the degree that we have people voting inappropriately, I know of no reason why our district attorneys, our State election officials, and others responsible at the State and local level do not have the authority today to step in and eliminate whatever minor amount of voter fraud may exist.

So this is really a solution in search of a problem. But in real terms, it threatens the passage of reform in this Congress, which we all know is far more important than tinkering with the motor voter law that, by all odds, has been implemented successfully.

If we were to take this amendment tonight and put it into this bill, we would destroy the coalition, the bipartisan coalition that is on the verge of enacting one of the most significant reforms in the last 25 years and under the guise of doing something to solve a problem that I believe no one can attest to in terms of the reality of its existence in any significant way anywhere in the country, including my home State of California.

It goes far beyond the scope of campaign finance reform. It would override innumerable anti-discrimination safeguards which must remain in the law to make sure that all Americans, regardless of birth place or appearance, ethnicity, race, creed, have equal access to the voter rolls.

Mr. Chairman, I am in strong opposition to the Peterson amendment. I would hope Members who care about the enactment of Shays-Meehan, who want to go right at the heart of the dilemma we face today, and that is that voters are opting out of the process because they do not believe that they can impact it. They think it is only for those with money who control our political system.

The Shays-Meehan campaign reform bill will do more to instill confidence in the average American that it still matters if they bother to vote. That is something that we ought to be working on, not this fictitious problem, which I know some people on the other side of the aisle are fixated on, that holds that there are somehow illegal voters determining the outcome of the elections.

If we really want to make sure that elections are fought fair and square, we ought to be encouraging more people to vote, not suppressing their interest, as this amendment does.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for yielding to me.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield 10 seconds to me?

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 seconds to my friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL).

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I am most grateful. I would simply ask that, at some point, the author might give me 30 seconds to ask a question, and that could come after the gentleman's prepared remarks.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to hear the gentleman's question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, that is very polite. I just wanted to ask about the bill's provision of what is called a final confirmation. If the Social Security or the INS does not have a record of you, as, for example, if you do not have a Social Security card, or you are born here so you do not have an INS record, the bill specifies that there must be what is called a "secondary verification," and it must provide "final confirmation." I just wonder what that might be. I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, let me talk about the bill a little bit while the gentleman from Pennsylvania is getting that answer for the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL).

Let me also say that I think this is essentially the same kind of campaign reform that the House voted for on February 12, a bill that the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) introduced, a bill that the chief election official from California said he thought was an improvement and an important addition to the ability of States to be able to, once again, manage the election process.

Until motor voter, with the exception of establishing age qualifications for voting for Federal office, which almost always, then, for reasons of practicality required the States to adopt that same age, we have left election administration to the States. This just simply allows the States to look at this to see if, in their State, this would work.

A majority of Members of this body said just a few months ago, on February 12, that this kind of thing was a good idea. It was a good addition to campaign reform.

I rise in support of the concept of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON), that if we are going to reform campaigns, let us reach campaigns. A number of States already require that citizens give the Social Security number for registration.

So in Georgia, in Hawaii, in Kentucky, in New Mexico, in South Carolina, and Tennessee and Virginia, the only change in this law would be that we also would have access to INS records. We would only have access to those records until 2001 to see if this concept is helpful or harmful.

It allows a pilot project for the States that want to do it. It does not require a single State to do a single thing. It was approved by a majority of voters that voted on the floor of this House in February.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) brings it as an additional element of campaign reform. It is not a mandate. It is a pilot program. I would suggest it is the kind of thing that we ought to return back to the States while we are talking about election reform.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL) to answer his question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I would be so grateful. Of course it is the gentleman's time. If he would yield to me, I have a follow-up.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I heard the gentleman's question. It is my understanding that, if the INS records and the Social Security records did not prove one to be a citizen, then the body requiring that information could, if they choose, remove one from the rolls or refuse to enroll one as a voter.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield to me just a second longer?

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Sure.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, let me say at the start, the gentleman has been very courteous to me and also my good friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

The gentleman says, at least as I read it, that if one is not going to be picked up by INS, which is going to be the case for those of us born in the United States, and, for some reason, one is not picked up by Social Security, which might be the case if one has not worked yet, it may be true for an 18 year old, then it says the Attorney General shall specify a secondary verification process to confirm the validity of information provided and to provide final confirmation or nonconfirmation.

So my question, if someone does not have a Social Security card because that person has not started working, and is born in this country, so there is no INS record, what would the secondary verification process be?

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Well, I think, one, if one has some record as a person to prove that one is a citizen, and one should have if one is, then one would provide that; and that serves the bill. Or the Attorney General could come forth with other means that he felt was ample proof.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield just for two seconds further?

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's answer. I will not use his time to make a comment about it.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, 5 years ago, as a new Member of the House of Representatives, I was so proud to support the motor voter bill, a bill which made it easier for people to vote. It made it easier by allowing more convenient access to voter registration for new voters or for voters who had moved to a new area.

The motor voter bill is a symbol of our country's belief that it is every citizen's right to have access to the ballot box, every citizen's right, not just some citizens.

Today, I am ashamed that some in this body would turn the clock back, back to a time when the Federal Government would make it more difficult, not less difficult, for every person to vote in this country, every legitimate person.

For example, the amendment by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) would unreasonably burden some would-be voters by requiring them to show proof of citizenship at the polls on election day. Because of what? Their appearance? The color of their skin? That they have an accent?

I would ask my colleagues, at a time when voter turnout is embarrassingly low in this democratic country of ours, do we really want to make it more difficult for citizens to exercise the right to vote? Of course the answer is no, which is exactly how we should vote on this ill-conceived amendment: "No" on the Peterson amendment, "yes" on the Shays-Meehan bill.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself what time is needed to respond.

It is interesting. A few moments ago, we were told that this was the most significant poison that is being attempted to be added to this bill. That is a pretty significant statement, that it is poison to try to eliminate fraud. I have a hard time understanding that.

I am going to say it again. It has been said that this is the most significant poison that will be offered to this bill that only has a pilot program that allows States, if they choose, to try to eliminate fraud. I find that hard to understand.

Someone else just said that it was unthinkable to amend motor voter. Motor voter had some problems and has some problems today because there is no system of verification. I could register my dog "Ralph" by calling him Ralph Peterson, and he would be registered. I could register my cat. I do not happen to have one, but I could.

Motor voter has opened the registration process to fraud. That is one of the weaknesses of motor voter. Just to share with you, a Committee on House Oversight task force uncovered serious voter fraud in California during the 1996 election.

□ 2045

They conducted an exhaustive year-long examination and found 820 individuals who were not citizens at the time of registration that likely voted. In 1996 the California Secretary of State found over 700 noncitizens on the California voter rolls and invalidated their registrations, and he would like this legislation to help him do that more effectively.

Texas Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Tom Harrison reports that 750 resident aliens from Guadalupe, Texas filed applications for absentee ballots in November of 1994 elections, after campaign workers told them that their green cards enabled them to vote by mail.

The Los Angeles Times reported in May of 1994 that Jay McKama, an undocumented immigrant, was sentenced to 16 months in State prison for registering noncitizens to vote. The bounty hunter worked for Steve Martinez, a Los Angeles political activist who paid $1 per registration. The practice of paying bounty hunters to register individuals to vote has contributed to an increase in noncitizen voting. In some cases noncitizens have been targeted by those bounty hunters.

Every time someone votes illegally, they cancel our vote. They cancel a good vote.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, I am glad the gentleman made that point, because our colleague from California just made the point that every legitimate voter, that is exactly the statement she made, should be allowed to register to vote and should be allowed to vote, and that is certainly right, and they should be allowed to do that with as little encumbrance as is reasonably possible. The least encumbrance would be no registration at all.

We tried that for generations in America, and finally we found out that that did not work, because people voted more than once, they voted at more than one location. We decided we had to have voter registration, and every legitimate voter should be allowed to register, every legitimate voter should be allowed to vote. But every time we let someone cast a ballot who is not a legitimate voter, who does not meet the requirements to vote in that election or in this country, we do just exactly what the sponsor of the amendment said; we cancel out the vote of voters who had a right to vote. That is every bit as big a problem as any other problem we could have in this process.

If people begin to think that there is no reason to go to the polls because their vote is going to be canceled by somebody who should not have been allowed to register because they were not a citizen, they stop going to the polls for that reason as well. Every legitimate voter should be able to vote.

This amendment, which the House has already passed in the form of a bill one other time and needs to be included in this reform package, merely says to the States, if the States want to try this as a way to verify that, in fact, the people who are casting ballots at your election have a right to do that as American citizens, give it a try until 2001 and we will see if that produces better results.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to convey to the gentleman that I rise to support the gentleman's idea and to oppose his amendment, and let me say why and why it is we call it a poison pill.

I think it was in 1995 when we voted for motor voter legislation. I voted against it and I drafted legislation to change it, not because I did not want to encourage Americans to register and to vote, but because I was afraid that we would never be able to purge people who should not vote, that, in fact, it would become a system too easily defrauded; and it does need to be changed, and I agree entirely with the gentleman and his proposal here.

It is a poison pill because the coalition that we need to pass this legislation consists of a lot of Democrats, and the motor voter bill is based on relatively party lines. What we do not want to happen, those of us who are just determined to do away with soft money in these sham ads, what we do not want to do is let the perfect become the enemy of the good.

We think that the gentleman's proposal, while it is a good one, becomes the enemy of the passage of our bill. It is not the idea that is poison, it is the way that it breaks up our coalition. I am sure that is not the gentleman's purpose.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL).

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague for yielding. I have a warning to libertarians. Libertarians, please be worried, be very worried about a bill that creates, and I quote, "... the Attorney General shall specify ... an available secondary verification process ... to provide final confirmation," regarding citizenship status.

I do not see how this can be done without a new federal record system on individuals. "Secondary" means if one cannot prove citizenship by INS records, cannot prove it by Social Security records. I do not see how this can lead to anything but a national I.D. system. That is in the gentleman's amendment. Therefore, I oppose it.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California for that warning to all of the libertarians and others. I appreciate that very articulate presentation.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. BILBRAY), another leader in the bipartisan effort to pass campaign finance reform.

(Mr. BILBRAY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BILBRAY. Mr. Chairman, I rise regretfully in opposition to this amendment. I do not rise in opposition to the intention and the spirit of the amendment.

I think that, quite appropriately, the gentleman from California pointed out that qualified voters should vote. I think that the gentleman from California who spoke in opposition to this motion probably made his point clear, by saying that we want people to vote. We want people to be able to vote. We want people to be able to register to vote.

In all fairness, I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania that citizens should be able to vote. Qualified citizens, not just any person. I strongly support the intention of the gentleman's amendment.

I think that, sadly, as somebody who was a county supervisor and supervised the electoral process for over 2.7 million people, that too often we talk about quantity, and not the quality of the process. The fact is that the integrity of our electoral process needs to be defended.

But tonight I must speak in opposition to this special vehicle, which is asking Shays-Meehan to carry this burden, while trying to keep enough votes together to be able to pass comprehensive campaign finance reform. There are people on both sides of the aisle who will use this as an excuse to oppose our campaign finance reform, Shays-Meehan, if we at this point require the system to require people to basically prove that they are qualified voters, that they are over 18, that they are a citizen of the United States.

I strongly support the intention that the gentleman is trying to make with his amendment. It is just that the vehicle, at this time, will kill campaign finance reform, because there are people in this Congress who will adamantly kill any piece of campaign finance legislation, no matter how good it is, if it means that we will address this problem of unqualified people being able to register and vote.

So I sadly have to oppose this, and I would ask the gentleman to join with those of us on both sides of the aisle that believe that the integrity of finance campaign reform and the integrity of our electoral process needs to be finally addressed one way or the other.

Campaign finance reform. We are trying to do it with this bill. I hope that, at the appropriate time in the future, Democrats will come across the aisle and join us in supporting the gentleman's thoughtful effort to ensure for the integrity of the electoral vote.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. WHITFIELD). The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MEEHAN) has 10½ minutes remaining; the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) has 5½ minutes remaining and the right to close.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT).

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, if a national I.D. card is what we are concerned about, take some of those aspects out in conference. I heard some Members say this is good, but it is so good, it might hurt the bill.

Bob Dole cannot write a check in a supermarket without proving his identity. One cannot get on a plane without proving some identity. One cannot get a driver's license in America without proving some identity.

What is more important, and I always hear, "This is good, but not now, do not do it now." This is campaign finance reform. If we do not do it now, this turkey is dead in the future. If we are going to do it, do it now, if this thing is going to fly. I support it.

Citizens should vote. Noncitizens should not vote. We insult no one by ensuring that an illegal vote does not cancel out our legal votes. In America the people govern. There is nothing more important in this bill than foreign money influence, attempts to corrupt us for foreign interests and illegal votes cast in elections.

Mr. Chairman, I took a lot of heat on the Democrat side, the only one who took a parliamentary stand in the matter of the Dornan-Sanchez race, and I think the gentleman has done a great job. But I think that should be straightened out, and we should have the facts before we certify anybody's election, especially when there is a taint of illegal votes.

So look, if Bob Dole cannot write a check in a supermarket without proving that check with some identification, if one cannot get a driver's license, if one cannot get on a plane, then by God, in America, one should be able to do some reasonable identification to prove one is a citizen. Citizens govern.

Mr. CAMPBELL's concerns are very important, and Mr. Chairman, let me say this. We keep making it easy for illegal citizens and illegal votes in campaigns, and we will have done nothing with campaign finance reform. All we do is massage the politics of the American theater as far as politics is concerned.

Mr. CAMPBELL has a legitimate concern. He is a very astute man. That could be worked out in conference, but the concept of illegal votes not in elections must be determined. If we do not do it this way, how the hell do we do it?

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment has nothing to do with campaign finance reform, absolutely nothing to do with campaign finance reform. This bill, as we are on the verge of passing, is not an excuse for anyone who has any idea about anything to come into this House floor and try to defeat this bill. This has nothing to do with campaign finance reform. We are on the verge of making history with the most significant campaign finance reform bill in 20 years. Let us get on and pass this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 4½ minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ).

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I thank him for all of his hard work on this issue.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT), my friend, says that in America people govern, and that is true. All of the people govern, including those who have surnames such as mine, and who were born in this country. And they do not deserve the right to be discriminatorily applied against, which is in essence what this amendment does.

I heard before the suggestion of the fact that what is wrong with the pilot program? Well, nothing is wrong with a pilot program, but even abridging rights in a pilot program does not make it constitutionally firm, it makes it constitutionally infirm.

I also heard the discussion about cancelling out of a vote, but what happens to the American citizen who, through your process, is denied the ability to vote because of some problem with the INS, some problem with Social Security; is not their cancellation of their vote equal to the cancellation we are so worried about?

For members of my family who live in Cuba and others throughout the world who do not have the right to vote for this, basic freedom is only a cherished dream. Well, what the author of this amendment, however, forgot about is that in America, voting is not a dream, it is not just another government benefit or program to be means tested, it is a constitutional guarantee, what all who came to this Chamber were sworn to uphold.

□ 2000

Americans should not be subjected to a government background check when they register to vote. But that is just what this amendment does, it turns the ballot box into an interrogation zone, where Americans are guilty until they have proven themselves innocent.

Imagine going to vote, myself going to vote, having been born in this country, a member of the United States Congress, and having to be interrogated at the ballot box to try to prove that I should be able to vote. Particularly, I would urge some of my colleagues to look at the history of what has happened in different States where ballot security squads were created to disenfranchise minority voters. The application at that table by those election judges will be discriminatorily applied, if they wish to do so.

What will be the guarantee? How will Members ensure that my vote is not annulled, as the gentleman is concerned about his being annulled? And to show they are citizens, Republicans want the Social Security Administration and the Immigration and Naturalization Service to run background checks and share private information on American voters.

If it is not to be discriminatorily applied, everyone who seeks to register would have all of their private information given to electoral officials. Is that what they want, Big Brother? I have heard so many of them rail against that.

Now, where is this test going to take place? This test of this security check-out program will take place in California, Florida, Texas, New York, and Illinois, States with large minority populations, especially Americans with Hispanic descent.

We already know the problems with identical names and dates of birth, especially among minority voters, that caused many legal voters to be targeted by what is now the discredited Dornan investigation. If this new program goes forward, many, many other innocent Americans may find government officials targeting them, too.

Clearly, the right to vote in this Nation should not be subject to government intrusion, and I say specifically that Hispanic American voters will not forget Members' continuing persecution of their rights. Vote against the Peterson amendment and keep Shays-Meehan in order.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA), a leader in our bipartisan effort.

(Mrs. ROUKEMA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, as a person who was one of the strong supporters of the pilot program of the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN), and I not only voted for it, I promoted it back in March, that would deal with the eligibility of voters and the reforms that the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ) was just referring to, and to the essence of the proposal of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON), here, I have to say that this is only an effort to really sabotage this bill.

We are so close. I am not going to let us take victory from the jaws of defeat, or defeat from the jaws of victory, either way that you want to say it. We must stick with Shays-Meehan. This is the golden opportunity in this Congress to get genuine campaign finance reform. The other issue is entirely separate, and we can take that up in a separate matter. I will be strongly supportive of that. But for now, we cannot sabotage Shays-Meehan. We must defeat the Peterson amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in reluctant—yet clear-eyed opposition—to the amendment offered by my Colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. PETERSON.

I want my Colleagues to know that I support the substance of this amendment. The events of the past several years have uncovered a disturbing trend in elections.

Without referring to a specific election or a specific state or a specific region, there is more than anecdotal evidence that more than a few of our elections are being tainted.

Tainted by voters who should not be voters. As Mr. PETERSON has reported—but this is not new. That's why we have had these legal actions.

Voters who have no right to participate in our electoral process.

My Colleagues, the very foundation of our representative democracy is "one man-one vote." We—in this body—have a solemn responsibility to preserve that foundation by protecting the integrity of the electoral process.

In this regard, I think it is a worthwhile exercise that we test new methods to verify the eligibility of all voters in all elections. Indeed, I voted for Rep. HORN's pilot program back in March.

And I have never been an enthusiastic supporter of the various motor-voter programs. I think they present an engraved invitation for fraud and abuse.

So I would support this legislation. But not here, Not now. Not on this bill. The clear purpose of this amendment is to undermine and divide support for this major reform that goes to the heart of abuses.

As you know, I have been an original co-sponsor of the Shays-Meehan campaign finance reform bill—in all of its various iterations. I think the lack of comprehensive campaign reform has been one of the most glaring failures of this Congress . . . the last Congress . . . the Congress before that . . . and several Congresses before that.

It just reinforces the cynicism of the American people about our motives and our actions.

We have here in the Shays-Meehan substitute a golden opportunity to snatch victory from the jaws of defeat. We have a real opportunity to pass genuine campaign reform.

Unfortunately, the Peterson amendment threatens our efforts here.

I support the goals of the Peterson amendment and would pledge to work with the gentleman from Pennsylvania to pass this amendment as a free-standing bill. But I cannot support it as an amendment to Shays-Meehan.

Defeat the Peterson amendment.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Chairman, I oppose this amendment on two grounds. I first oppose this amendment on the logic that says, because when you go to the supermarket and pay money, you sometimes have to show your license; and I oppose it on the logic that says when we go to get an airplane ride and we pay money, we have to show our license. Good grief, this is a constitutionally protected right. We do not have to pay money to vote, and why should we have to show a picture to vote?

On that ground, the logic of comparing this to airline traffic, or when we go to supermarkets, is beyond me. This is a constitutionally protected right. We should not have to pay money and we should not have to show our picture.

But I oppose it on other grounds, as well. The bottom line is, this is campaign finance reform we are debating. This legislation does not deal with campaign finance reform, it deals with motor voter. We are in the majority as Republicans, and we are pushing this proposal, this amendment. Just bring it out on its own separate merit and vote it up-or-down. Do not tie it in with campaign finance reform.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to another leader in our bipartisan effort, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. WAMP).

Mr. WAMP. Mr. Chairman, the operative word is "finance." This is about campaigns, this amendment. I agree, frankly, with the intent of the author of this amendment. I agree so many times with my friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT). But campaign finance is about raising money and spending money and reelecting Federal candidates. That is what we have been working on here.

This actually is a legitimate issue. It is like combining school vouchers with a higher education bill. They are both education, but they do not belong together. This issue does not belong in this bill. We need to pass this bill clean, and we need to vote down this amendment, even though I agree with the intent of the author, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Kentucky (Mrs. NORTHUP).

Mrs. NORTHUP. Mr. Chairman, the people that come before us and say they are for campaign finance changes say it will protect the integrity of elections. What about protecting the integrity of elections? Why do they want to so narrowly define it that they only stick to the subject areas they want to?

Kentucky is one of the States where we have to have a Social Security number to register. We did not do that to discriminate, we did that with a Democratic Party legislature, because we had such fraud in our voting process. We did it to protect the integrity of the election.

What the people who oppose this today say is that, we would rather make our bed and pass a law with people who do not want to protect certain portions of the integrity of the election process in order to pass our own version. This is exactly what I fear about campaign finance reform, that we will pass laws that certain people will not want enforced, they will not pursue, they will not really protect the election process.

If they are not willing to protect the laws that say only citizens can vote, I would never want to be on their team to pass any other laws.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would point out that the gentlewoman has no intentions of supporting campaign finance reform, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA) is recognized for 3½ minutes, the balance of time.

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, but more, I thank him for his efforts to get this to the floor and finally get it passed. I think we are going to get there.

Mr. Chairman, this is truly a poison pill, but it is a poison bill for a number of different reasons. Perhaps the most important to a number of people is the fact that it poisons the well to people who wish to become for the first time ever participants in our democracy, because they have just become U.S. citizens.

Let us make no mistake, this is not an effort to try to make sure that only American citizens vote. This is an effort to try to exclude those who are our newest American citizens from participating. Because if it were an effort to try to address the issue of all of our citizens, all of the people who live in this country being eligible to vote, then it would not target just the States where the most new citizens happen to reside, States like mine in California.

If we look at page 2 of the bill, there it is, States of California, New York, Texas, Florida, and Illinois. If I were to name the five States with the highest Latino population in the Nation, they would be States like California, New York, Texas, Florida, Illinois. What a coincidence that this bill goes after those States where the most Hispanics happen to reside. That is where there are a lot of new Hispanic voters.

What else does this bill do? It tells us that somehow, through the Social Security Administration and the INS, we are going to be able to determine the citizenship of the 267 some-odd million people who live in this country.

Wake up. Social Security has never been able to determine citizenship for anyone. Wake up, the INS cannot determine the citizenship for even all the folks who have immigrated into this country. Wake up, they are targeting only those who were not born in this country, and somehow in their mind they are not eligible to vote. Wake up, how will someone determine if this individual should or should not be checked in terms of citizenship?

Tell me how a county registrar of voters is supposed to determine which individual to ask, "Can I get your Social Security number?" How will someone at the Motor Vehicle Department, when someone is filling out an application for registration for voting, say, "Wait a minute, you have passed your license test to drive, but can I see your Social Security number? Because I need to check to find out if you are a citizen?"

What will determine when someone gets asked whether or not they are citizens or not? Will it be the way they speak or the way they look, or will it be by the spelling on the last name? When that official tries to check with the INS and SSA and finds out that they cannot do this, what happens to that person's eligibility to vote? This is a targeted effort, unfortunately, at people who are beginning to participate. It scares some people. I am sorry that it does. The intentions may be good, but the mechanics of this amendment are totally wrong.

Someone said, let us protect the integrity of elections. Absolutely, let us do that. Let us do so. But let us protect the integrity of the Bill of Rights. Let us protect the integrity of the right to privacy. Let us protect the integrity of the right to freedom. Let us protect the integrity of this effort to reform our campaign finance laws.

Let us not get involved in this whole debate about how we tell which of the 267 million people who reside in this country are or not citizens through a process that we know cannot work, because the Social Security Administration and the INS have told us they cannot give us that information.

Please defeat this amendment. This is not the way to do it, and certainly we send the wrong message to our newest citizens who are trying to live in this greatest of democracies.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I want to respond to two issues first. Someone talked about safeguards. It says right in the bill, to have reasonable safeguards against the pilot program resulting in unlawful discriminatory practices based on national origin or citizenship status, including the selective or unauthorized use of this pilot program.

Someone else said a national ID card. Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize, directly or indirectly, the issuance or use of national identification cards, or the establishment of a national identification card. Those are false, bogus arguments against this bill.

Is Shays-Meehan perfect? We are being told it is perfect. I get mail every day that says it is not perfect. I get phone calls every day that say it is not perfect. This is only a pilot program. If it works, we expand it. If it does not work in 2001, we throw it away. Why are we afraid about stopping voter fraud?

In my view, the two worst problems we face about elections are illegal foreign money and noncitizen voting, and Shays-Meehan does not do anything about either of them. The States that we have listed, many of them are asking for help. Local registrars are asking for help. How do they know if people are citizens when they register them? They are begging for us to help.

Mr. Chairman, this is an argument, and those who think we should not stop voter fraud, those who think we should not require citizenship, then should stand up and support a bill that does away with it, that you do not have to be a citizen to vote, that you just have to be here.

Mr. Chairman, this is a simple pilot project that makes sense, that can work. I urge all the Members to support it.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 442, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) will be postponed.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MRS. LINDA SMITH OF WASHINGTON TO THE AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SHAYS

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. BLUNT). The unfinished business is the demand for a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Washington (Mrs. LINDA SMITH) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Shays) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the ayes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mrs. LINDA SMITH of Washington to the amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 13 offered by Mr. SHAYS:

In Section 301(20) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as added by section 201(a) of the substitute, strike subparagraph (b) and add the following:

“(B) Voting Record and Voting Guide Exception—The term “express advocacy” does not include a communication which is in printed form or posted on the Internet that—

“(1) presents information solely about the voting record or position on a campaign issue of 1 or more candidates, provided however, that the sponsor of the voting record or voting guide may state its agreement or disagreement with the record or position of the candidate and further provided that the voting record or voting guide when taken as a whole does not express unmistakable and unambiguous support for or opposition to 1 or more clearly identified candidates,

(ii) is not made in coordination with a candidate, political party, or agent of the candidate or party, or a candidate's agent or a person who is coordinating with a candidate or a candidate's agent; provided that nothing herein shall prevent the sponsor of the voting guide from directing questions in writing to candidates about their position on issues for purposes of preparing a voter guide, and the candidate from responding in writing to such questions, and

“(iii) does not contain a phrase such as ‘vote for,’ ‘re-elect,’ ‘support,’ ‘cast your ballot for,’ (name of candidate) for Congress,’ (name of candidate) in 1997,’ ‘vote against,’ ‘defeat,’ or ‘reject,’ or a campaign slogan or words that in context can have no reasonable meaning other than to urge the election or defeat of 1 or more clearly identified candidates.”

In Section 301(8) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as added by section 205(a)(1)(B) of the substitute, strike paragraph (D) and insert:

“(D) For purposes of subparagraph (C), the term ‘professional services’ means polling, media advice, fundraising, campaign research or direct mail (except for mailhouse services solely for the distribution of voter guides as defined in section 431(20)(B)) services in support of a candidate's pursuit of nomination for election, or election, to Federal office.”

In Section 301(8)(C)(v) of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as added by section 205(a)(1)(B) of the substitute, add at the end thereof,
