PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 145

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1999

No. 98

House of Representatives

The House met at 9 a.m.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 19, 1999, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 25 minutes, and each Member except the majority leader, the minority leader or the minority whip limited to not to exceed 5 minutes. But in no event shall the debate continue beyond 9:50 a.m.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) for 5 minutes.

SUPPORT CARDIAC ARREST SURVIVAL ACT

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, this morning I am here to talk about the Cardiac Arrest Survival Act, which I will be introducing today. If this bill becomes law, it has the potential of saving thousands of lives each year.

I am pleased to have this opportunity to work with the American Heart Association and the American Red Cross on this very important measure.

Passage of this Act would go a long way towards making the goal of saving the lives of people who suffer sudden cardiac arrests possible. It would ensure that what the American Heart Association refers to as the "cardiac chain of survival" could go into effect.

That first chain of survival is early access, call 911, early CPR, early defibrillation, which I will go into in a moment, and early access to advanced care.

While defibrillation is the most effective mechanism to revive a heart that has stopped, it is also the least accessed tool we have available to treat victims suffering from heart attack.

Perhaps it would be helpful for those of my colleagues listening who are not well versed in the subject if I just take a moment and walk them through what we mean when we use that term "defibrillation."

A large number of sudden cardiac arrests are due to an electrical malfunction of the heart called ventricular fibrillation, VF. So when VF occurs, the heart's electrical signals, which normally induce a coordinated heartbeat, suddenly become chaotic, and the heart's function as a pump abruptly stops. Unless this state is reversed, then death will occur within a few minutes. The only effective treatment for this condition is defibrillation, the electrical shock to the heart.

My colleagues might be interested to know that more than 1,000 Americans each and every day suffer from cardiac arrest. Of those, more than 95 percent die. That is unacceptable in this country because we have the means, the very means at our disposal to change those statistics. That is why I have been committed to this cause.

Studies show that 250 lives can be saved each and every day from cardiac arrests by using the automatic external defibrillation, which we will call AED. Those are the kinds of statistics that nobody can argue with.

Let me show my colleagues on the next chart, did my colleagues know that for each minute of delay in returning the heart to its normal patterns of beating, it decreases the chance that that person will survive by 10 percent?

No one knows when sudden cardiac arrest might occur. According to a recent study, the top five sites where cardiac arrest occurs are at airports, county jails, shopping malls, sports stadiums, and golf courses. I believe we would all take great comfort in knowing that those who rush to our side to resuscitate us have the most up-to-date equipment available and are trained to use it.

The AEDs which are being produced today are easier to use and require minimal training to operate. They also are easier to maintain and cost less. This affords a wider range of emergency personnel to be trained and equipped.

Some of my colleagues might ask, if a majority of the States have laws authorizing nonemergency medical technician first responders to use AEDs, why do we need to pass this legislation? Good question.

This year's bill differs from previous versions I have offered, which primarily sought to encourage State action to promote public access to defibrillation. The States responded to this call, and many have passed regulation to promote training and access to AEDs.

However, this bill, Mr. Speaker, directs the Secretary of Health and Human Services to develop recommendations to public access of defibrillation programs in Federal buildings in order to improve survival rates of people who suffer cardiac arrest in Federal facilities. Federal buildings throughout America will be encouraged to serve as examples of rapid response to cardiac arrest emergencies through the implementation of public access to defibrillation programs.

The programs will include training security personnel and other expected users in the use of AEDs, notifying local emergency medical services of the placement of AEDs, and ensuring proper medical oversight and proper maintenance of the device.

In addition, this year's bill seeks to fill in the gaps with respect to States that have not acted on AED legislation by extending good samaritan liability protection to people involved in the use of the AED.

So, Mr. Speaker, I look forward to the support of my colleagues. I hope that they will cosponsor this bill. It has been endorsed by the American Heart Association and the American Red Cross. I hope all of my colleagues will join me by cosponsoring the bill whose stated goal is to prevent thousands and thousands of people suffering from cardiac arrest from dying by making equipment and trained personnel available at the scene of the emergency.

TOBACCO SMUGGLING ERADICATION ACT OF 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, the World Bank recently issued a report entitled, "Curbing the Epidemic: Governments and the Economics of Tobacco Control," which finds disturbing trends in tobacco use around the globe. This report concludes that, in another 2 decades, tobacco will become the single biggest cause of premature death worldwide, accounting for 10 million deaths each year. That is 10 million unique human beings choking to death with emphysema, withering away with lung cancer, or perhaps feeling the sharp pain of a heart attack as a result of nicotine addiction. Half of these deaths will occur to individuals in middle age, who will each lose 20 to 25 years of their life.

Effective and aggressive action against tobacco smuggling represents one key strategy necessary in what should be a comprehensive global effort to address this pandemic, according to both the World Bank and the World Health Organization. To assure that our country is participating in such action, I am today introducing the Tobacco Smuggling Eradication Act. This measure is important in both fighting organized crime and in promoting public health.

In a statement endorsing this bill yesterday, ENACT, a coalition of 55 major national medical and public health organizations, including the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, and the Campaign for Tobacco Free Kids, had this to say of my bill:

"Your bill would strengthen domestic antismuggling efforts and address the shameful fact that lax oversight of U.S. cigarette exports is fueling an international black market in U.S. cigarette brands. Researchers estimated that about one-third of all cigarette exports disappear into the black market. U.S. brands such as Marlboro, Camel, Winston, and Kent are the most commonly smuggled. Tobacco smuggling seriously undermines public health laws in other countries and is an embarrassment to our nation."

Just how big an embarrassment is reflected in this national news story from the Washington Post last December, entitled, "Tobacco affiliate pleads guilty to role in smuggling scheme." An affiliate of the RJ Reynolds Company, one of the tobacco giants, was caught up in illegality in participating in a scheme to avoid $2.5 million in U.S. excise taxes.

Nor is RJR the only tobacco giant caught up in such criminality. Last year, a senior judge in Hong Kong concluded that British-American Tobacco and Brown and Williamson were helping international organized crime by selling duty-free cigarettes "worth billions and billions of dollars with the knowledge that those cigarettes would be smuggled into China and other parts of the world."

While most of the attention with our relations with the country of Colombia focuses on the illegal drugs from there to here, a study last year found that more than four-fifths of the 5.5 billion Marlboro cigarettes that are produced here by Philip Morris and sold there in Colombia are illegal smuggled goods.

Far from hurting business, tobacco companies have found that they can move their lethal products around the world by assisting smugglers. Big tobacco profits from selling cigarettes to smugglers who reduce the price for the black market and increase consumption and sales, helping them build a global market.

My bill requires that packages for export be clearly labeled for export to prevent illegal reentry into the United States. That is the scheme that the RJR affiliate used, claiming that cigarettes were reentering our country for export to Russia and Estonia when, in fact, they were going on the black market smuggled from New York into Canada.

Our bill also requires that packages of tobacco products manufactured here or imported here also be uniquely marked. Law enforcement agents have said will give the opportunity to trace the products, verify the source, and have the labeling requirements that they need for effective law enforcement.

Under this bill, retailers and wholesalers will be required to keep documents on tobacco shipments which will greatly assist law enforcement. As our Treasury Secretary Larry Summers said last year during congressional testimony, "The Treasury Department believes that the creation of a sound regulatory system, one that will close the distribution chain for tobacco products, will ensure that the diversion and smuggling of tobacco can be effectively controlled."

With the help of the Treasury Department, that is exactly what this bill will do. It will also assist the States in enforcing and collecting their excise taxes on all tobacco products. Recent studies have indicated that the States of Washington, Michigan, Massachusetts, New York, and California each lose $30-100 million per year in excise taxes on tobacco products because of smuggling. Last year, big tobacco spent millions to promote false claims that our Federal legislative proposals to reduce youth smoking would cause smuggling. Now is the time for big tobacco to get behind this effective law enforcement legislation or once again to reveal its hypocrisy,

Mr. Speaker, with the introduction of this bill, we hope to stop the smuggling and stop the mugging of the world's children through nicotine addiction.

FRESHMEN REPUBLICANS INITIATE BEYOND THE BELTWAY PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. GREEN) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago, 19 Republican freshmen stood shoulder to shoulder on the front lawn outside this very building. We did so to launch our class-wide project that we are calling Beyond the Beltway.

The Republican freshmen are a diverse group coming from diverse backgrounds and representing equally diverse parts of America. But despite that diversity, we are all excited by some of the innovative reforms that we are seeing take place in State capitals throughout the land.

Governors and legislative leaders, Republicans and Democrats from States from California to New York, are meeting their policy challenges in exciting, innovative ways. With our Beyond the Beltway project, we are hoping as freshmen to open new doors for these leaders.

We know that, for far too long, Federal rules and bureaucracies have held them back and smothered their efforts through unnecessary burdens and restrictions. Now the freshmen are reaching out to leaders like my own Governor, Governor Tommy Thompson, in an effort to help them unleash a whole new wave of creativity and innovation in State after State.

It is the freshmen who are initiating this project because, even though we are Members of Congress, we are very much still State legislators, local officials, and private sector small business persons at heart.

Here specifically is what the beyond the Beltway project will do. The freshman class, as a group, have asked our governors, legislative leaders, directly and through the various associations to help us identify some of those Federal rules and restrictions that are holding them back. We want to turn these suggestions into an ongoing action agenda. Member by member and issue by issue, we want to provide relief.

We are coming forward now with the Beyond the Beltway initiative because we have also introduced the first measure result from this new dialogue. This legislation would direct each Federal agency to develop an expedited review process for waiver requests.

Mr. Speaker, as we know, oftentimes States need Federal approval or waivers to initiate their State programs if those plans deviate from the details of Federal programs.

The idea of this legislation is that where a State has been granted a waiver on a particular program, if another State seeks a similar waiver, we believe that they should only have to go through a streamlined or expedited waiver review process. We want to encourage the laboratories of democracy. We want to encourage modeling. We want to encourage benchmarking. We want to encourage borrowing of ideas.

Mr. Speaker, I would hope that my colleagues would join us in this expedited review bill and, more importantly, join the Republican freshmen in developing beyond-the-Beltway ideas. This is more than a short-term project. We hope it is the beginning of a new, longer, more open relationship between Congress and the States. Instead of the governors coming to us on bended knee, we are hoping to go to them for ideas and suggestions. We want to turn them loose. We believe that there is no telling how many of our major social, political challenges can be met if only we will move power and authority out of Washington and beyond the Beltway.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS BILL HAS SIGNIFICANT IMPLICATIONS FOR ARMENIA, NAGORNO KARABAGH, AND U.S. CAUCASUS POLICY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GUTKNECHT). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, this week the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations of the House Committee on Appropriations is expected to mark up the fiscal year 2000 bill regarding foreign assistance and other programs vital to maintain and enhance American leadership throughout the world.

This legislation is extremely important for the Republics of Armenia and Nagorno Karabagh as they emerge from the ashes of the former Soviet Union to establish democracy, market economies, and increased integration with the West. Thus, in my capacity as co-chair of the Congressional Caucus on Armenian Issues, I am asking my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join with me this week in urging the members of the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations to express our concerns on several key issues regarding Armenia, Nagorno Karabagh, and U.S. policy in the Caucasus region. This Subcommittee has many friends of Armenia, and I look forward to their support on these important issues.

First, Mr. Speaker, we will be urging that the Subcommittee earmark assistance for the Republic of Armenia at the highest level possible. The legislation that has been adopted by the other body, the Senate, last month earmarks $90 million for Armenia, with a subearmark of $15 million for the earthquake zone. We hope that the House subcommittee will consider providing a similar figure. It is important for the United States to maintain our support and partnership with Armenia as this country continues to make major strides toward democracy, most recently evidenced by the May 30 parliamentary elections. U.S. assistance also serves to offset the difficulties imposed on Armenia's people as a result of the hostile blockades maintained by their neighbors to the east, Azerbaijan, and to the west, Turkey.

I would also like to see the subcommittee continue humanitarian aid for Nagorno Karabagh, an historically Armenian-populated region that has proclaimed its independence and exercises democratic self-government but whose territory is still claimed by the neighboring country of Azerbaijan. The subcommittee took an historic step in the fiscal year 1998 bill by providing for the first time humanitarian assistance to Nagorno Karabagh. Unfortunately, much of that American assistance has not yet been obligated. I hope that the subcommittee, in the fiscal year 2000 bill, will make efforts to ensure that this assistance be fully obligated for the people of Nagorno Karabagh by directing the Agency for International Development to expedite delivery of this assistance.

Mr. Speaker, another key priority is to maintain Section 907 of the Freedom Support Act, which restricts certain direct government-to-government assistance to Azerbaijan until that country lifts its blockades of Armenia and Nagorno Karabagh. Last year, the full House voted to strip a provision from the fiscal year 1999 bill that would have repealed Section 907, and last month the other body defeated a provision to waive Section 907. Clearly, there is a bipartisan consensus in both Houses that the conditions for lifting Section 907 have not been met.

Another way in which the Foreign Ops bill can make a big difference is by encouraging progress on the Nagorno Karabagh Peace Process. The U.S. has been one of the countries taking the lead in the peace process, as a co-chair of the Minsk Group under the auspices of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe. Late last year, the U.S. and our negotiating partners put forward a compromise peace plan, known as the "Common State" proposal, as a basis for moving the negotiations forward. Despite some serious reservations, the elected governments of Armenia and Nagorno Karabagh have accepted this proposal in a spirit of good faith to get the negotiations moving forward, while Azerbaijan summarily rejected it. I hope the subcommittee would include language urging the administration to stay the course on the compromise peace proposal and to use all appropriate diplomatic means to persuade Azerbaijan to support it.

To further promote the peace process, we would ask that the subcommittee consider language calling on the State Department to work with the parties to the conflict to initiate confidence-building measures. These measures should be geared both towards a reaching of a negotiated settlement, such as strengthening the current cease-fire, as well as for establishing a framework for better integration following a negotiated settlement, such as transportation routes and other infrastructure, trade, and increased people-to-people contacts.

Mr. Speaker, I recognize that the members of this subcommittee are grappling with many competing demands in a complicated world with limited budgets. The fiscal year 2000 Foreign Ops Appropriations bill provides us with a chance to shape U.S. foreign policy for a new century and a new millennium. Armenia is a nation that measures its history in millennia, yet the Republics of Armenia and Nagorno Karabagh are very young democracies that embrace many of the same values that Americans cherish.

I hope that the legislation that the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations adopts this week will make a priority of supporting both Armenia and Nagorno Karabagh.

PROMOTING LIVABLE COMMUNITIES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, Michael Pollan in the New York Times Magazine article this weekend, "The Land of the Free Market and Livability," is certainly correct that government can and should be thinking of ways to align our policies for the types of communities that our hearts desire.

What I find disappointing is the assumption somehow that the choices consumers are making now based on their pocketbook are somehow solely the result of benign, inevitable market demands.

Having worked my entire career on the promotion of livable communities, I am struck by how the increasingly dysfunctional communities that are facing Americans across the country are a result of direct government interference in the marketplace. Consumers are behaving rationally by investing in ways where their incentives are skewed by government.

The most dramatic example is to be found in our treatment of the automobile. Seventy-five years ago, communities all across the country had profitable, private transit streetcar systems privately owned and profitable. Massive government spending, literally trillions of dollars, were used to promote automobile traffic, while at the same time there was no support given to transit; and indeed in many communities government contributed directly to the decline of transit and in some communities its demise by refusing to allow fares to increase with inflation and for capital investments to keep the systems healthy.

While the money from the road funds is perhaps the most visible, there were also huge subsidies for overseas defense to protect oil supplies and public ownership of oil and gas supplies. There were dramatic subsidies for public safety, for policing related to the automobile, and the removal of huge tracts of land in the tax rolls and for roads and road right-of-way and, of course, parking and tax subsidies. All of these combined to tip the playing field in favor of the automobile. Consumers responded rationally for themselves but in ways that very much skewed the pattern of transportation development.

Now, these clear transportation subsidies are but a small portion of the overall government interference in the market system. Our investments in public housing concentrated poor minority populations in central cities. We dramatically subsidized utility rates and sewer and water expansion that routinely hid the profits, from providing service to local inner cities, from increased costs associated with expansion into suburbs and greenfields. It resulted in many central city residents paying more for their own utilities and subsidizing lower rates for people outside the cities.

The most direct and obvious interference in the market was the emergence of single-use zoning in metropolitan areas where we made it illegal for the family owning, say, a restaurant or a drugstore from living or having their clerks live above that activity. People were zoned out of mixed-use neighborhoods and literally forced into their cars since the drastic separation of uses forced many Americans to rely increasingly on automobiles, and again that was very rational behavior.

The list goes on and on: flood insurance, water supply, brownfields programs, the Federal Government's own policy of locating facilities out further and further from concentrated uses, or the post office refusing to obey local land use laws and zoning codes. These are all examples of the government's own activities to destabilize neighborhoods in our central cities and our older suburbs.

It is hard for me to imagine any rational observer being able to characterize what has transpired in American communities over the last three-quarters of a century as benign, neutral, inevitable market forces. The challenge today for those who would have livable communities is not to overcome market forces but allow the market forces to work. This is an appropriate use of the political process. It is not a trivial point, as critics attempt to paint efforts for promoting livable communities on the part of the administration, those of us in Congress, or the vast grassroots efforts around the country as somehow social engineering or forcing people to do what they do not want to do.

It is essential to give legitimacy to the aspirations of thousands of activists in hundreds of communities across the country that are trying to promote livable communities. Just as we have established a pattern of unplanned growth for dysfunctional communities and regions, we can level the playing field to promote livable communities. I look forward to this Congress and this administration taking steps to be partners to promote these more livable communities.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 10 a.m.

Accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 27 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess until 10 a.m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. PEASE) at 10 a.m.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, the Reverend James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Remind us, O gracious God, that we are to be doing the works of justice and mercy in our communities and in our world. And as we seek to do the works of justice remind us again that we are not the message, but we are the messengers of reconciliation and peace and righteousness. We admit that we can become so involved in what we do that we promote ourselves and we become the focus instead of pointing to the way of truth and promoting the good works of justice for every person.

May Your blessing, O God, that is new every morning be with us until the last moments of the day, abide with us this day now and evermore. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. PITTS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a concurrent resolution of the House of the following title:

H. Con. Res. 144. Concurrent Resolution urging the United States Government and the United Nations to undertake urgent and strenuous efforts to secure the release of Branko Jelen, Steve Pratt, and Peter Wallace, 3 humanitarian workers employed in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia by CARE International, who are being unjustly held as prisoners by the Government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

THE VALUE AND NECESSITY OF A STRONG MINING INDUSTRY IN AMERICA

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, over the next few weeks I will be bringing to our colleagues and the Chair's attention the value and necessity of a strong mining industry in our Nation.

Mr. Speaker, nearly everything we eat, touch, wear, use, or even live in is made possible by the mining industry. Minerals comprise the basic necessities of life. Mineral-based fertilizers make possible the food we eat and the natural fibers in our clothes. From the concrete foundation, to the wallboard, pipes, and wiring, all the way up to the shingles on the roof, the construction industry utilizes minerals for building our homes.

Mr. Speaker, minerals, made possible through the mining industry, are essential for agriculture, construction, and manufacturing. The United States is one of the world's leaders in the production of important metals and minerals, and it is imperative that we maintain a strong mining industry, and remain competitive with other nations for scarce investment of capital.

Many investors have already left the United States for Latin America and Asia, where they are not faced with endless delays regarding Federal proposals, permits, expensive fees, and all sorts of other bureaucratic red tape.

Mr. Speaker, it is in our Nation's best interests to keep our mining industry strong.

OUR COUNTRY'S UNBELIEVABLE POLICY ON STEEL

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, after World War II we gave tours of our steel mills to Japan and Germany. We let them take pictures. We gave them blueprints. We even gave them foreign aid so they could build their own steel mills.

Today Japan and Germany have steel mills. America has photographs. If that is not enough to tarnish our stainless, Japan and Europe at this very moment keep dumping illegal steel into America while in Pittsburgh, the once steel capital of the world, they just demolished another steel mill.

Beam me up. This policy on steel is not only unbelievable, it is stupid. I believe, Mr. Speaker, we could do with less think tanks and styrofoam and a few more factories and steel.

THOSE PAYING 96 PERCENT OF TAXES SHOULD GET TAX RELIEF

(Mr. BALLENGER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLENGER. Mr. Speaker, here is a fun trick we can play on our liberal friends, especially the ones who never tire of saying that the rich do not pay their fair share.

In fact, this is a fun trick that we can play on most Democrats, with few exceptions. Ask them how much the rich pay in Federal income taxes. After they begin to look pale and ask, what do you mean, ask them what percentage of Federal income taxes are paid by the top 50 percent of income earners and what percentage of the taxes are paid by the bottom half.

Our liberal friends will not answer that question. Of course, they do not have any idea what the answer to the question is, and of course, even if they did, they would never tell us. They would be very embarrassed to have to admit that the top 50 percent of income earners pay 96 percent of all taxes, 96 percent. The bottom 50 percent pay a whopping 4 percent.

Those same liberals then will rant and rave and feign moral indignation that those paying 96 percent of the taxes, those who are carrying almost the entire load, should get any tax relief at all.

THE DEBATE OVER TAXES IS A DEBATE ABOUT FREEDOM

(Mr. CHABOT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, we are going to hear a lot of speeches this week, countless speeches, in fact, about taxes. We will hear that the debate over taxes is about fairness, about special interests, about the struggles of the middle class, about the American dream, about compassion, and about justice.

Yes, this debate is about all of those things, but principally the debate about taxes is about freedom. It is not a difficult concept. It is not an idea that requires advanced degrees or lengthy training. It is simply this, that if we let people keep more of their own money, people will have more freedom to live their lives as they see fit, not as the government sees fit.

Letting people keep more of what they earn will allow Americans to save more, build a better future for themselves and their families, and realize their dreams. So this week let us have a true discussion. Let us talk about finally cutting taxes in this country.

RETAIL RESPONSIBILITY—WAL-MART

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I learned recently that two large retail chains in middle America can truly make a difference when it comes to keeping violence and filth out of our young kids' minds.

I think both Wal-Mart and K-Mart should be commended for their recent stance on culture within the marketplace. These superstores may not be perfect, but they are taking an active role in not selling some of the extraordinarily violent and offensive music that could be lining their shelves and raking in the cash.

Some of the music they chose not to carry is climbing up the charts, but since so many parents have objected to its profanity and reference to suicide, these stores have pulled some albums from the shelves.

Mr. Speaker, do not get me wrong, these are mega-marts, not mega-moms or mega-dads, but they are proving that taking a small stand in the marketplace against the increasingly corrupt culture can be done, even if it means foregoing an influx of cash.

WE NEED POLICY INSTEAD OF PREENING, POSTURING, AND POLITICS

(Mr. HAYWORTH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, it is interesting when we return from district work periods where we have heard the wisdom of the people. Lincoln said, the American people, once fully informed, will make the correct decision.

I heard some very interesting things from my constituents this week. I would refer this House, Mr. Speaker, to the comments of the President of the United States and one of the more senior Members of this institution from Massachusetts.

The President of the United States earlier this year in Buffalo, New York, said, "We could give it, the budget surplus, all back to you and hope you spend it right, but," "but." Mr. Speaker, that speaks volumes, because given a choice, our president, sadly, believes that Washington bureaucrats need our hard-earned money more than we do.

Then, a senior Member, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK), yesterday said, speaking of the liberals, "It is not our responsibility to legislate anymore. It does not make sense for us to compromise."

Mr. Speaker, a legislator refusing to legislate? I hope we do not see a lot of preening and posturing and politics instead of policy.

TAX CUTS ARE AN ISSUE OF FREEDOM

(Mr. WELDON of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, we have to really hand it to the Democrats. They already have their line memorized and ready to repeat over and over again.

Republicans propose tax relief that largely excludes upper income people from benefiting; again, tax relief for everyone except the rich. And what are the Democrats saying about it already? Yes, "Tax cuts for the wealthy."

Any tax relief, tax relief at all, is immediately labeled by the other side as tax cuts for the wealthy. It is an insult to the millions of middle class taxpayers who would benefit from tax relief to be demonized by liberals who oppose tax relief everywhere and anywhere.

Of course, it is an insult to those who are carrying most of the load, the people who are paying the most in taxes.

In America, the issue is not whether upper income people need a tax cut. Of course they do not. But in America, it is an issue of freedom. It is their money. It does not belong to the government, and it does not belong to liberal politicians in Washington who want to spend it on more wasteful government programs.

DEMOCRATS HAVE NO INTENTION OF WORKING WITH THE REPUBLICAN MAJORITY

(Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, just listen to this quote taken from yesterday's Washington Post: "It is not our responsibility to legislate anymore. It doesn't make sense for us to compromise."

"It doesn't make sense for us to compromise?" These words come from a leader of the Democrat party, the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

It appears that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK) has let the cat out of the bag. The Democrats had no intention of working with the Republican majority. They will block all legislative efforts, and then turn around and blame Republicans, attacking the do-nothing Congress.

But the always fair and balanced media of course will help them in that effort. Then they will attack Republicans for Republican extremism, a charge we heard thousands and thousands of times since 1995 when Republicans took over the majority in the Congress.

Once again, the media will help them fix the image in the public's mind, but the truth is now there for all to see. We thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

TAX RELIEF

(Mr. ARMEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, the American people are overtaxed. They pay too much income tax, they pay too much sales tax, they pay taxes on their savings, they pay taxes on their investments, and they pay taxes when they die.

In fact, Federal taxes consume about 21 percent of national income, the highest proportion since World War II. But Mr. Speaker, help is on the way. In the coming days, the House will pass a tax bill that says to America, we think you deserve a long overdue refund for the surplus you created.

Mr. Speaker, make no mistake about it, our first priority is to save social security and Medicare for future generations of seniors. In fact, for every dollar of the surplus that we use for tax relief, there are $2 set aside for social security and Medicare.

I am happy to say, Mr. Speaker, that just yesterday at the White House the President agreed with the Republicans in the House and Senate that we ought to lock up that Medicare and social security surplus first. That is what we intend to do.

When Members hear the talk about how our tax cuts are taking money away from social security and Medicare, remember this, Mr. and Mrs. America, we will lock up our social security and Medicare, our retirement security fund, first, $2 for every $1 we will subsequently give in tax relief.

We will give tax relief if people are taxed for getting married, we will give tax relief if people are taxed for trying to go to school, we will give tax relief if they are taxed for getting buried, and we will give tax relief if people just have a general income and need some across-the-board relief.

In fact, the benefits here will go to the American people in better jobs, better economic growth, better employment opportunities, and more take-home pay, and that, Mr. Speaker, is what freedom is all about.

TITLE IX MEANS OPPORTUNITY FOR WOMEN ATHLETES

(Mrs. MALONEY of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the World Cup Soccer champions, I want to present this soccer ball to the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK), my colleague, and to former Member, Edith Green. In 1972, they offered and enacted the landmark Title IX legislation, the Bill of Rights for women in education and sports.

It said that any university that secured Federal funds must open up all programs on an equal basis. Prior to enactment of Title IX, female athletes had very little and limited opportunity to compete. I know that when I was in school, there were no women's sports programs.

Mr. Speaker, the Statue of Liberty has become a symbol of freedom to the world. Now when a woman or anyone holds up a soccer ball, this has become a symbol of opportunity, of equality in sports, and really the opportunity for women to achieve great things. Thank you, Title IX. Thank you to the women and men in this body that enacted it.

THE B.E.S.T. AGENDA FOR CONGRESS

(Mr. GUTKNECHT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Speaker, back in January when this Congress convened, I told my constituents that I thought we ought to pursue what I called the B.E.S.T. agenda. B-E-S-T. B for balancing the budget; E for educational reforms that focus on giving local school districts and parents more flexibility in dealing with education issues; S for saving Social Security, something that is important to all of us but particularly to those of us who are baby boomers who were born after World War II; and T for tax relief and reform.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted that we are pursuing this agenda and we are making tremendous progress. Our budget resolution calls for not only a balanced budget this year, but for the first time actually securing every penny of Social Security taxes only for Social Security.

Our educational reform, Ed-Flex, has already passed and is on its way to the States. Now we focus on tax relief.

Mr. Speaker, let me suggest that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ARCHER) has put down his marker. Mr. ROTH has put down his marker. The President is coming up with his own tax plan. But I hope at the end of the day there will be real tax relief for working families, and I hope we would focus first and foremost on eliminating the marriage penalty tax.

LIBERAL INSIDERS WARN AGAINST TAX CUTS

(Mr. SCHAFFER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, the Washington Post editorialized yet again against Republican tax cuts and our proposal. Hardly a week goes by without the Washington elite and other liberal insiders warning against the idea of letting Americans keep more of their own money.

To me that is a pretty good indication that that is exactly what we need to do.

And of course the same crowd also called Ronald Reagan's tax cuts dangerous, foolish, and irresponsible. They are now singing the same tune today.

They are also the same people who 2 years ago said that we could not cut taxes and balance the budget at the same time. And of course they are the same crowd that could not praise President Clinton enough for raising taxes by a record amount.

See, there are lots of people in this town who really do believe government can spend their money better than Americans can, and they really hate the idea that people should be able to keep the fruits of their labor and reap the benefits of saving, sacrificing, and realizing their dreams.

Mr. Speaker, of course they are against the tax cut.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken after debate on House Resolution 242 or House Resolution 243.

200th ANNIVERSARY OF THE DEATH OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

(Mr. GEKAS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, it occurred to me that while we are waiting to proceed with today's agenda that here in 1999 it is the 200th year, the 200th anniversary, and it should not be a happy anniversary, but it is an anniversary of the death of George Washington.

After the constitutional convention of 1787, of course the father of our country took over the presidency in 1789. He served 8 stalwart years, during which time he established the United States presidency for what it is, an individual who will chart the course of the country without ever attaining the role of king or of tyrant or of anything but a citizen politician who would guide the ship of State, along with the two other branches of government.

George Washington established that for all time. When he retired he went back to Mt. Vernon and there, guess what? He engaged in making sure that the firefighting equipment for the entire area was intact. He pruned trees, checked the crops, made sure that the river flow was adequate for the purposes of transportation, river transportation. Did a hundred different things as an owner of property, as a farmer.

He reestablished himself as a member of the community because he attended several meetings with fellow farmers just to make sure that the local ordinances and local safety measures and police and firefighting people were set to do their duties. The kinds of things that we know are necessary in today's communities, that is what George Washington, the father of our country, did in his retirement.

Later on this year when we get closer to the anniversary of his death, I plan to take a special order to again review the life of George Washington, this being the 200th anniversary of his death in 1799, and to recall that what we are here today is largely the product of his steady hand in war and in peace.

When we call him the father of our country, that is not a euphemism. That is a reality that we must all take into consideration as we review the history of our country.

TITLE 9 TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 916) to make technical amendments to section 10 of title 9, United States Code, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 916

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. VACATION OF AWARDS.

Section 10 of title 9, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by indenting the margin of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection (a) 2 ems;

(2) by striking "Where" in such paragraphs and inserting "where";

(3) by striking the period at the end of paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (a) and inserting a semicolon and by adding "or" at the end of paragraph (3);

(4) by redesignating subsection (b) as subsection (c); and

(5) in paragraph (5), by striking "Where an award" and inserting "If an award", by inserting a comma after "expired", and by redesignating the paragraph as subsection (b).

SEC. 2. COMMUNICATIONS ASSISTANCE.

The Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act (47 U.S.C. 1001-1021) is amended—

(1) in section 102, by adding at the end the following:

"(9) The term 'installed' means equipment, facilities, or services that are operable and commercially available for use anywhere within a telecommunications carrier's network.

"(10) The term 'deployed' means equipment, facilities, or services that are commercially available anywhere within the telecommunications industry and capable of being installed or utilized in a telecommunications carrier's network, whether or not such equipment, facilities, or services were actually installed or utilized within the carrier's network.

"(11) The term 'significantly upgraded or otherwise undergoes a major modification' means a material and substantial change in the configuration of a telecommunications carrier's network, including the installation of hardware or software that fundamentally alters the equipment, facilities, or services of that network, but does not include the upgrade of switching equipment or other modifications made in the ordinary course of business or made so as to comply with Federal or State law or regulatory requirements.";

(2) in section 107(a), by striking paragraph (3);

(3) in section 108(c)(3), by striking "on or before January 1, 1995" and inserting "before June 30, 2000";

(4) in section 109—

(A) in subsection (a)—

(i) in the heading strike "JANUARY 1, 1995" and inserting "JUNE 30, 2000"; and

(ii) by striking "January 1, 1995" and inserting "June 30, 2000";

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) in the heading strike "JANUARY 1, 1995" and inserting "JUNE 30, 2000"; and

(ii) in paragraph (1)—

(I) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by striking "January 1, 1995" and inserting "June 30, 2000"; and

(II) in subparagraph (J), by striking "January 1, 1995" and inserting "June 30, 2000"; and

(iii) in paragraph (2), by striking "January 1, 1995" and inserting "June 30, 2000";

(C) in subsection (d)—

(i) in the heading strike "JANUARY 1, 1995" and inserting "JUNE 30, 2000"; and

(ii) by striking "January 1, 1995" and inserting "June 30, 2000";

(5) in section 110, by striking "and 1998" and inserting "1998, 1999, and 2000"; and

(6) in section 111(b), by striking "on that date that is 4 years after the date of enactment of this Act" and inserting "no earlier than June 30, 2000".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, as part of the RECORD, I submit two specific letters that have to do with this legislation determining the jurisdiction for our committee.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE,

Washington, DC, July 12, 1999.

Hon. HENRY J. HYDE,

Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR CHAIRMAN HYDE: It is my understanding that you intend to bring H.R. 916, a bill to make technical corrections to section 10, of title 9, United States Code, before the House under the Suspension calendar in the near future. While H.R. 916 was not referred to the Committee on Commerce upon its introduction, it is my further understanding that you intend to bring up a manager's amendment which contains provision substantially similar to section 204 of H.R. 3303 as it passed the House in the 105th Congress (amending title I of the Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act (47 U.S.C. §1001 et seq.)) which falls within the jurisdiction of our two committees pursuant to Rule X of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

Because of the importance of this legislation, I recognize your desire to bring it before the House in an expeditious manner and will not object to its consideration under the Suspension calendar. By agreeing to permit this bill to come to the floor under these procedures, however, the Commerce committee does not waive its subject-matter jurisdiction over the aforementioned provisions. In addition, the Commerce Committee reserves its authority to seek conferees on any provisions of the bill that are within its jurisdiction during any House-Senate conference that may be convened on this or similar legislation. I ask for your commitment to support any request by the Commerce Committee for conferees on H.R. 916 or similar legislation.

I request that you include this letter and your response as part of the Record during consideration of the legislation on the House floor.

Thank you for your attention to these matters.

Sincerely,

TOM BLILEY,
Chairman.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY,

Washington, DC, July 13, 1999.

Hon. TOM BLILEY,

Chairman, Committee on Commerce,

House of Representatives, Rayburn Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter regarding your Committee's jurisdictional interest in H.R. 916.

I agree that portions of the bill are within your committee's Rule X jurisdiction and that you would be entitled to conferees on those issues should this bill go to conference. I also agree that these letters will be placed in the record.

Thank you again for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

HENRY J. HYDE,
Chairman.

Mr. Speaker, the bill before us is exemplary of something that we lawyers have, over the centuries, complained that a misplaced comma can sometimes so alter a provision in the law that it can wreak havoc in the courts of justice and in our communities. Such a mistake of a misplaced comma was made, and it was brought to our attention through a constituent of the gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), who in the arbitration laws of our codes found that a misplaced comma could throw out of whack an interpretation of a particular section.

So the bill before us is simply a technical correction to make sure that that misplaced comma is placed correctly. This is not one of the most momentous bills we have ever had in front of the House of Representatives, but it does emphasize that a technical correction from time to time is absolutely necessary if we are to do business properly in the Congress of the United States.

Similarly, in the telecommunications field another technical correction is one that we require and which will be embodied in this bill. It is the enforcement act of 1994, which we call CALEA, the Communications Assistance to Law Enforcement Act, also very important. But the grand-fathering certain provisions becomes very important as a technical correction, and we offer that along with the misplaced commas as the reason for our appearance here today.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 916, as amended.

As reported by the Committee on the Judiciary, H.R. 916, makes purely technical revisions to section 10 of title 9 of the United States Code, that correct some typographical flaws that has long evaded detection. Section 10 enumerates several grounds for vacating an arbitrator's award, but the fifth clause is obviously not a ground for vacating an award, but rather the beginning of a new sentence. The bill simply corrects this error. H.R. 916 also revises some compliance dates and related provisions in the Communications Assistance to Law Enforcement Act of 1994 ("CALEA"), Public Law 103-414.

CALEA was enacted to preserve the government's ability, pursuant to court order or other lawful authorization, to intercept communications involving advanced technologies (such as digital or wireless transmissions) and services (such as call forwarding, speed dialing, and conference calling). It is also intended to protect the privacy of communications and without impeding the introduction of new technologies, features, and services.

In the constantly evolving environment of digital telecommunications, the need for law enforcement to retain its ability to use court authorized electronic intercepts is even greater. Nevertheless, it appears that the Department of Justice, the FBI, and the telecommunications industry have been unable after several years of discussions and negotiations to resolve certain differences regarding compliance with CALEA. As a result, implementation of the act has been delayed.

This delay accordingly necessitates these revisions. They chiefly consist of replacing H.R. 916's effective date with one that takes into account this delay in CALEA's implementation. The act's grandfather provisions are likewise revised. Further, the bill defines certain terms that the Act failed to include and, hopefully, with their addition, will assist the parties involved in the implementation of CALEA.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation and concur with the description of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman GEKAS) of its purpose and effect. This misplaced comma was actually brought to our attention by a State Supreme Court justice of the New York State Supreme Court in my district who pointed out the obvious intent of Congress was very clear, but the comma and the paragraph were in the wrong place, and so this changes that.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think the courts have misinterpreted the law, but why tempt them to do so by not correcting this comma?

In addition, the technical change to the CALEA bill that is in this bill, the Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act, is also a technical change that extends several effective dates until the FCC and the FBI can work out certain technical standards that they are working out; and the minority has been consulted on this, and we certainly have no objection to it. It is a technical extension. We are in support of it.

So I urge all of my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the H.R. 916. During the 105th Congress I introduced as the original author the Communications Assistance to Law Enforcement Act (CALEA) Implementation Amendment of 1998 (H.R. 3321). Section 2, of H.R. 916 embodies the principles of this legislation I introduced in 1998.

Last year, the House of Representatives passed the Department of Justice Appropriation Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999, 2000, and 2001, which included language to deal with this important issue. However, the United States Senate did not act on this legislation.

I believe it is incumbent on us in Congress to recognize the delays that have occurred in the implementation of CALEA, passed by Congress and signed into law in 1994, by extending the time for compliance, and to clarify the "grandfathered" status of existing telecommunication network equipment, facilities, and services during the time period the CALEA-compliant technology is developed.

Fundamentally, the purpose of CALEA is to preserve the federal government's ability, pursuant to a court order or other lawful authorization, to intercept communications involving advanced telecommunication technologies, while protecting the privacy of communications; and without impeding the introduction of new technologies, features, and services. CALEA further defined the telecommunication industry's duty to cooperate in the conduct of electronic surveillance, and to establish procedures based on public accountability and industry standard setting.

CALEA necessarily involved a balancing of interests of the telecommunications industry, law enforcement, and privacy groups. The law allowed the telecommunication industry to develop standards to implement the requirements of CALEA, and establish a process for the U.S. Attorney General to identify capacity requirements of electronic surveillance. The law required the federal government to reimburse carriers their just and reasonable costs incurred in modifying existing equipment, services or features deemed necessary to comply with the assistance capability requirements of the law. The CALEA law also required the federal government pay for delays in the implementation of the law that have prevented the telecommunication industry and law enforcement from complying with its provisions.

The development and adoption of industry technical standards have been much delayed, and these standards are now being challenged before the Federal Communications Commission by both law enforcement and privacy groups. The release of the federal government's capacity notice for electronic surveillance needs was over two and a half years late. It is clear from telecommunications equipment manufacturers, that no CALEA-compliant technology will be available for purchase and implementation by telecommunication carriers by the effective date. Further, since the enactment of CALEA, substantial changes have occurred in the telecommunication industry, such as the enactment of the Telecommunication Reform Act of 1996, which resulted in many new entrants in the industry and other changes in the competitive marketplace. Finally, during the four year, "transition period" initially contemplated by Congress for the implementation of CALEA, the telecommunication industry has installed, and continues to deploy, technology and equipment which is not compliant with assistance capacity requirements of CALEA, since "CALEA technology" has not been fully developed or designed into such equipment.

Mr. Speaker, House of Representatives Report No. 103-827 makes it clear the federal government intended to bear the costs CALEA implementation during the four-year transition period between enactment and effective dates. Congress recognized it was much more economical to design new telecommunications switching equipment, features, services the necessary assistance capability requirements, rather than to retrofit existing equipment, features, and services. Congress recognized some retrofitting would nonetheless be necessary, provided that carriers would be in compliance with CALEA, absent a commitment by law enforcement to reimburse the full and reasonable costs of carriers for such modifications to their existing equipment.

The Department of Justice Appropriation Authorization Act for 1999 recognizes during the four year, CALEA transition, virtually no federal government funds have been expended to reimburse the telecommunication industry for its implementation costs of CALEA. During the first year transition period, virtually all telecommunications carrier equipment which had been installed or deployed, is based on pre-CALEA technology and does not include those features necessary to implement the assistance capacity requirements of CALEA.

It is therefore necessary to extend the time of compliance. This step is absolutely essential, to enable the industry to complete the standard-setting and development processes required to implement CALEA in an economical, efficient and reasonable fashion. This approval also recognizes existing telecommunications equipment, features, and services should be grandfathered during the interim.

On the completion of the development of CALEA compliant-technology, the federal government can then decide which carrier equipment it chooses to retrofit at federal government expense, and the manufacturers can then design CALEA capabilities and services to be deployed in carrier networks in the future.

Thus, it is necessary to move both the effective and the "grandfather" dates of CALEA to recognize the delays in CALEA implementation and to ensure its implementation continues as intended by Congress five years ago.

Mr. Speaker, it is also necessary to clarify the meaning of several terms in the cost reimbursement provisions of CALEA. The use of the terms 'installed' and 'deployed' in CALEA, are intended to make clear Congress intended separate and distinct meanings for these terms as they are used in CALEA. The term, "installed," refers to equipment actually in place and operable to the network of carriers.

The term "deployed," relates to equipment, facilities or services that are commercially available within the telecommunication industry, to be utilized by a carrier whether or not equipment, facilities or services were actually installed or utilized within the network of the carrier. The term, 'deployed,' is also intended to refer to technology available to the industry.

The use of these terms recognizes Congress clearly intended to reimburse the telecommunications carriers with federal government expenses, or grandfather the existing networks of carriers to the extent they were installed or deployed prior to the development of CALEA-compliant technology. This decision was based on industry standards developed to meet assistance capacity requirements of CALEA terms, "significantly upgraded" or "otherwise undergoes major modifications." These terms were intended to mean the carriers' obligations to assume the costs of implementing CALEA technology in a particular network switch, is not triggered until a particular network switch is fundamentally altered, such as by upgrading or replacing it with a new fundamentally altered switch technology. For example, changing from digital to asynchronous transfer mode (ATM) switching technology.

Thus, once CALEA-compliant technology is developed and can be designed into, or deployed in, carrier networks, the costs of such deployment shift to the industry. Prior to that time, however, existing carrier networks are "grandfathered" unless retrofitted at federal government expense as intended by Congress. In addition, switch upgrades or modifications performed by carriers to meet federal or state regulatory mandates or other requirements, such as number portability requirements, are not to be considered a "significant upgrade" or a "major modification" for purposes of CALEA.

Mr. Speaker, these provisions should make clear that existing carrier networks are grandfathered, unless retrofitted at federal government expense. The effective date for compliance with CALEA has been extended for approximately two years to provide additional time for industry development of CALEA-compliant technology, in response to industry technical standards to meet the assistance capacity requirements of CALEA.

I support this important legislation and ask my colleagues to support H.R. 916.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I join the gentleman from New York and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 916, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

The title of the bill was amended so as to read: "A bill to make technical amendments to section 10 of title 9, United States Code, and for other purposes."

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE HOUSE WITH REGARD TO THE UNITED STATES WOMEN'S SOCCER TEAM AND ITS WINNING PERFORMANCE IN THE 1999 WOMEN'S WORLD CUP TOURNAMENT

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 244) expressing the sense of the House of Representatives with regard to the United States Women's Soccer Team and its winning performance in the 1999 Women's World Cup.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 244

Whereas each of the athletes on the United States Women's Soccer Team has honored the Nation through her dedication to excellence;

Whereas the United States Women's Soccer Team has raised the level of awareness and appreciation for women's sports throughout the United States;

Whereas the members of the United States Women's Soccer Team have become positive role models for American youth aspiring to participate in national and international level sports; and

Whereas the United States Women's Soccer Team has qualified for the 2000 summer Olympic games: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

(1) congratulates the United States Women's Soccer Team on its winning championship performance in the World Cup tournament;

(2) recognizes the important contribution each individual team member has made to the United States and to the advancement of women's sports; and

(3) invites the members of the United States Women's Soccer Team to the United States Capitol to be honored and recognized by the House of Representatives for their achievements.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Res. 244.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 244 honoring the U.S. Women's Soccer Team and its winning performance in the 1999 women's world cup tournament.

For the past 3 weeks, no household in America has been immune to the fever that has swept our Nation during the 32 games of the women's world cup soccer series. When the series began, total attendance was set on the high side. Crowds of up to 350,000 were expected to extend the games in seven cities throughout the country. By Sunday when the series ended at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, more than 660,000 fans had attended including 90,000 people for the final. Another 40 million tuned in to watch the match on television.

What we saw in that final matchup of the series pitting China against Team USA was a battle of titans. For a grueling 120 minutes of play neither side budged, neither side blinked, and neither side gave up a goal. What we saw was an American dream come true. For generations little boys have grown up wishing to become another Babe Ruth, Mickey Mantle, Gale Sayers or Michael Jordan. But it is only recently that little girls have anywhere near the same dream, to one day be the next Billie Jean King, Martina Navratilova, or Jackie Joyner Kersee.

Now little girls have the dream. They have the women of Team USA. They have Briana Scurry, Carla Overbeck, Kate Sobrero, and Brandi Chastain.

They have Joy Fawcett and Julie Foudy, Michelle Akers and Kristine Lilley. They have Mia Hamm. They have Cindy Parlow, Tiffany Milbrett, Sara Whalen, Shannon MacMillan, and Tisha Venturini. They have Lorrie Fair, Christie Pearce, Tiffany Roberts, Danielle Fotopoulos, Saska Webber and Tracy Ducar.

The women of team U.S. won the World Cup series, but they also won the respect and admiration and the hearts of all Americans.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. KUYKENDALL), sponsor of the resolution.

Mr. KUYKENDALL. Mr. Speaker, I am proud today to rise in strong support of House Resolution 241, expressing the sense of the House regarding the United States Women's Soccer Team in its World Cup victory last Saturday afternoon and inviting that team to come to the House and be recognized.

It is a victory not simply for the United States but for the game of soccer, for women's athletics, and for all of us who have become jaded by the egotism and commercialism of professional sports. It is a huge win for teamwork and the pure joy of competing. To me, that makes the players of Team USA not just champions but heroes, heroes willing to accept the challenge and be role models for young people.

Few of us imagined when we passed Title IX back in 1972 that a women's final sporting event this year would have 90,000 attendees or over 40 million people watching it on TV. Impressive. Very impressive.

One of the hallmarks of this success has been a group that is headquartered in my district called the American Youth Soccer Organization. This group was founded before Title IX. It started in 1964. It started in Torrance. There were 125 children, ages 4 to 18, boys and girls, and their parents who thought there were four things important. One was that they are going to play well-balanced teams. Everyone is going to play. They are going to have the parents involved. They are going to have positive coaching.

That is now one of the most successful youth programs in America. There are hundreds of thousands of young people. It has taken us a generation, 35 years, to bring that to fruition and see it exemplified in this World Cup win.

Eight years ago, the United States women won the first World Cup in 1991. In 1991, we played in China. In 1991, hardly anybody in America knew we played. Yet, the women were dominant then. A young lady from my district at that time was the most valuable player of the World Cup. Her name was Karen Gabara. She is now the coach of the United States Navy team.

This group of women have made a mark on the country, and I think it is important that the country recognize their achievement, because their achievement is far more than athletic prowess.

It is not often that a group of people gather our heart, they put their arms around us. We want to put our arms around them. They are a wonderful group of examples for young people in this country, men or women, to look at. They play for the pride of being successful. They play because they enjoy it. They play because they know there is an example to be set. They obviously play with national pride, the United States national pride.

We are a great Nation. We are measured by many things. But, in this case, we are measured by the success of a young team of soccer players. I urge my colleagues all to support this.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY).

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I commend the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) for introducing this resolution and share in the excitement I think all of America feels today as we congratulate the U.S. Woman's National Soccer Team on their 1999 World Cup.

As we look back in the history of sports, certain moments transcend the arena and represent something larger than a single victory. The woman's World Cup final, which became the biggest woman's sporting event in history, is a testament to the respect and devotion that these champions have earned.

This achievement will be remembered with the awe of Jesse Owens competing in Nazi Germany or the 1980 U.S. Olympic Hockey Team defeating the Soviet Union.

These athletes represent the American dream, the ability of any person to become a teacher, an astronaut, or a World Cup champion.

The women's national team played with dedication, sportsmanship, and heart. I think one of the things that I found most telling was the team themselves and the members who participated actually functioned as a team.

Maybe all of us in America can reflect on that for a moment and take the word "I" out of our vocabulary and use the word "we," because we the people and we as a people can achieve great things if we work as a team.

I watched the young ladies on the Today Show being interviewed by Katie Couric and Matt Lauer, and each one of them went on to praise the other in even more glowing terms about how they helped succeed and how they helped the team.

So I hope as we reflect upon this wonderful victory that these ladies have celebrated and we think about the uplifting it brings to America and hopefully in the new century, as we approach the millennium, that all of us share in the spirit of pride of this country, of pride of individual abilities, of pride of collective victories, but, more importantly, as, working together, we can achieve the greatest things before us.

So, again, I commend the U.S. Women's National Soccer Team and to people everywhere as the role models they are and will be for future generations of America. They are a team that America can truly be proud of. I again thank the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) for introducing this bill.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, it certainly is my pleasure to be a cosponsor of this legislation. This past Saturday, the United States Women's World Cup Soccer Team put on a performance that will not soon be forgotten. The extraordinary game that was played in Pasadena, California, was not only a testament to the United States team's hard work but to what can happen when individuals are given an equal opportunity. That is why I am so pleased to cosponsor this legislation.

The educator, the professor from Yale, Dr. James Comer, said something that really applies to this situation. He said that a person can have all the genetic ability they want and they can have all the will they want, but if they do not have the opportunity, it is almost impossible for them to achieve their goals. Here we have a situation where these great, great young ladies were given an opportunity, and they certainly showed what they could accomplish.

Saturday's game was a competition against the Chinese National Team that involved strength, skill, endurance, and guts. The game remained tied through 90 exhausting minutes of regulation play and two 15-minute sudden death overtime periods. It then went into a shoot-out in which the United States women outshot the Chinese women five to four in order to capture the well-deserved title of world champions.

This victory is more than just one team coming out ahead of the other. It is a victory for the United States, for the sport of soccer as a whole and, most importantly, for women of all ages who aspire to be or already are athletes.

It makes me proud when I think about the possibilities. I told my daughter the other day as she graduated from high school, I said, "I am excited about your possibilities." And as a father of two daughters, it makes me excited about the possibilities of all women who want to be involved in sports.

The women of this World Cup team have proven that they cannot be taken lightly. The ever-popular saying, "you throw a ball like a girl" is quickly becoming outdated.

The over 90 million exuberant fans that attended the championship game made it the most highly attended women's sporting event in history. That certainly does not include the many, many fans, like myself, who Saturday were glued to the television set watching this exciting play.

Over 400,000 fans attended the games in which the United States competed, and approximately 650,000 fans attended the tournament overall. That says something. The world was certainly watching.

Since its conception in 1985, the United States Women's World Cup Team has proudly boasted a record of 144 wins, 12 ties, and only 31 losses. They defeated China in the very first Women's World Cup in 1991; and, in 1995, they finished third behind Norway and Germany.

The history of this team has been showered with success after success. However, this success has not come without hard work and an incredible attitude. Without a professional program for women, the national team has had to rely mostly on college teams to provide players with skills necessary for their success. In turn, the success of college programs is in a large part due to Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972.

With the passage of Title IX, schools were forced to fund women's athletic programs at the same level men's athletic programs were being funded. Schools still have the flexibility to choose sports based on student body interests, geographic influence, budget constraints, and gender ratio. Yet, there must be gender equity. That is so very important, gender equity. Women must have an opportunity to play and compete in the world of sports. Women have shown us just what they can do, given the opportunity.

I think that one of the things that we do not realize is, when we see young women performing, other young women watch them. Not only are they excited about soccer, but it also says that they can achieve other things, too, and that they are excited about the excellence that our team showed. It says to them that we will also compete in the legal world, we will also compete in the field of medicine and what have you.

So not only does it affect the soccer world, not only does it affect athletics, but it affects all of the young ladies, no matter where they are and no matter what status of life they are in.

The Women's National World Cup team are the pioneers for their sport and for women athletes all over the world. They have gladly assumed the status of role model and truly deserve it. Young girls all over the country adore them and look upon them as heroes or, as some would say, sheroes. But not only are young girls looking at them, men, young men, old men, all kinds of men are looking at them, too, because they see what they have been able to accomplish when given that opportunity.

Although women have been playing soccer for a long time, this World Cup team has opened the eyes of billions. I believe there is an exciting future ahead, and I will look forward to watching it unfold.

I am proud to support and be a cosponsor of this resolution honoring the 1999 Women's World Cup team. They have certainly given us a lot to be proud of.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA).

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the gentleman from California (Mr. KUYKENDALL) for introducing this very important legislation upon which there is certainly bipartisan support.

I want to add my cheers for the U.S. Women's National Soccer Team and 1999 Women's World Cup champions. These dedicated, determined and accomplished young women make me so proud to be associated with the cause of getting more girls and women involved with sports and fitness.

When I was growing up, girls did not play soccer. When we played basketball, it was only on half of the court. Women's choices in sports were relegated to cheerleading and getting a good seat as a spectator in the stands. That was before Title IX.

Title IX and the U.S. National Women's Soccer Team have changed the playing field for girls and women in athletics. Mia Hamm, Carla Overbeck, Julie Foudy, Tiffany Milbrett, Brianna Scurry, Brandi Chastain, and the whole U.S. team are all long distance runners in the challenge and the struggle to raise the status of women's sports to the same level as that of men's athletics.

They are heroes and healthy role models for our sisters, daughters, granddaughters that want to participate in sports. I have a number of granddaughters who are participating in soccer and other sports. They speak to the importance of the sports experience in building self-confidence, perseverance and the competitive edge.

Young women who participate in sports are more likely to finish school and less likely to have an unwanted pregnancy. The availability of athletic scholarships has enabled more women to pursue a college education and opened opportunities for women at dozens of colleges.

My praises to the Women's World Cup President Marla Messing, and World Cup Chair Donna de Verona, who had the vision and the dedication to focus the attention of a whole Nation on the Women's World Cup Championship. No longer is it an insult to tell someone, "You play like a girl." Now, indeed, it is a compliment.

Like the passage of Title IX in 1972, the 1999 Women's World Cup Championship will go down in history as the milestone, the turning point in elevating women's sports to the gold medal platform where it belongs.

I urge the House to vote unanimously for this resolution.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. ESHOO), one of the many world cup women we have in the House who is truly a role model for the world, just as these young ladies are with regard to the soccer world.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS), for yielding me this time and for his work on this resolution, as well as my colleagues who are cosponsors of this resolution. I cannot think of a time coming to this floor since I was elected to the House that I skipped over with glee to come to the floor to salute the women of this championship team.

I am not really someone that can give my colleagues very many statistics about sports, and I think that that was shaped from my childhood because we were really not encouraged to be participants on the playing field of sports. My father taught me how to swim very well and also how to water ski, but when it came to the other sports, we were not encouraged; the teams were not there in the schools that we went to. But this weekend that all changed when billions of people around the world were glued to their TV sets to watch the American team do something that really raised up the whole issue of women in sports and how we can compete and be world champions.

Our American flag that is behind you, Mr. Speaker, was carried throughout the stands in the Rose Bowl in California, my home State, and I think that the message that went around the world is that America can compete; that we all have a share in the opportunity in this country, which is really what the idea of America is all about.

So I salute each woman that brought this victory home, to each of them that wove together this exceptional team, and I say bravo, bravo, bravo, and especially as a woman Member of the Congress of the United States I could not be prouder of them. They have made history, they have raised up the hopes and the aspirations of every girl and young woman in our Nation and sent out the message around the world that America is a can-do country and that women indeed are part of the championship of this idea of America.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to how much time each side has?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) has 11 minutes remaining, and the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) has 10 minutes remaining.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON), another one of our world cup legislators.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time and I thank him for his leadership and the leadership of the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs. BIGGERT) as well for this timely and wonderful resolution.

I want to say up front, though, that now that we have our own women's world cup team, which has found a home in the hearts of their countrymen and countrywomen, that I hope, as the Member who represents the Nation's Capitol that women will find a home right here for a team from the yet-to-come but sure-to-come women's soccer league. We have in this town a men's soccer league championship team, D.C. United, which has won back-to-back championships. All we need now is a women's team to match our male champions.

I am awfully proud of the Congress' well, because the Congress had a lot to do with the victory that was achieved last week. Congress helped bring this victory when more than 25 years ago, we passed Title IX. Thus Congress was on the field when Briana Scurry, the goalie, blocked the Chinese penalty kick to set up Brandi Chastain, who of course, did the winning kick. When 90,000 people in the Rose Bowl cheered, they were also cheering for what Congress did when it enacted Title IX.

Title IX, each of these women has said when interviewed, made them the best in the world, because Title IX gave them the opportunity that bore fruit on the soccer field this past week. Title IX has done the same for women's basketball, and Title IX is doing the same for women's sports all across this land where women and girls have discovered that sports is for them, too.

Let the victory on the soccer field settle the controversy over the division of funds by colleges and universities between men and women's teams. Equality on the field.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPs), who, as the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia talked about opening the doors and what Title 9 has done, is one who is constantly doing everything in her power to open doors for all people.

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS), for yielding me this time, and I rise in wholehearted enthusiastic support of this bipartisan resolution, House Resolution 244, congratulating our U.S. Women's Soccer Team.

I am doing so today on behalf of the young women in my district in Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo Counties, girls for whom soccer is more than a sport, it is a passion; soccer and all of the other sports that are claiming increasing amounts of their time and enthusiasm. This is undeniably due to Title 9 and the fundamental principle that all programs deserve equal funding, and I thank those in this House that were instrumental in passing that landmark initiative.

I also commend this U.S. Women's Soccer Team for their extraordinary hard work and determination and their enthusiasm, which was so contagious. It was beautiful to watch them play. Not only did they give us the incredibly entertaining and most attended women's sports event in history, they are also now giving to young women all over the country remarkable role models to look up to.

Mr. Speaker, along with my colleagues, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY) and the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY), the chairs of the Women's Caucus, I recently invited the Women's Soccer Team to celebrate their success on Capitol Hill. We look forward to welcoming these American heroines to the Halls of Congress.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 seconds to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman and I congratulate all the ladies and offer my great congratulations to the soccer team. When women play, women win; and thank God for Title IX.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER).

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, the looks on the faces of the little girls looking up with hero worship to the women's soccer players made an awful lot of struggles that we have gone through worthwhile. When Title IX was first written and passed in the Congress, there was a great furor about it. The idea of making athletics open to women was almost anathema. We have seen now what a wonderful opportunity we have given; that girls in school know that they too can achieve in sports and that they too can be part of that wonderful experience.

It helps us to reduce the inequality and the differences in Americans and says to everybody, "You too can be a winner."

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, may I ask how much time I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) has 6½ minutes remaining.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to take a moment first of all to thank Leah Phillips, one of our interns who was very helpful to us, who also happens to play soccer at Mary Washington College, and I want to thank her for all her efforts and our entire staff for what they have done with regard to this very, very important resolution.

I want to send a message out to our U.S. Women's Soccer Team. We want you to understand, soccer team, that you have made us very, very proud. The fact that you took advantage of an opportunity and turned it into something very, very, very significant is so important to all of us.

So often in the past women have not had the opportunities that you have had. So often when we stand on the floor of this House and we speak, and so often when we push the button, green or red, we do not know exactly what impact we are having. But when the House of Representatives of the United States of America, as our Members watched you, we were reminded that the things we do here today do affect your lives.

But understand that you have affected so many people. There were little girls sitting around television sets watching you, watching your every move, and they see you as role models. By not only were the little girls watching you, there were little boys, too, and they were watching and they were excited and they saw all of those fans in the stands. And now when they go back to their fields this evening and tomorrow evening and they play the soccer games, they will be reminded of the greatness that you have brought to their living rooms and to their lives.

So, to you, some may say that sports does not mean a lot. Well, I happen to differ in that opinion. Sports mean a lot. It means a lot when one takes the opportunity and gives their blood, sweat and tears and gives it everything they have to be the best that they can be. All of us, as Americans, are very, very proud of you. Not only are we proud of you, we are proud of all that you stand for, all that is good in America; for it was your efforts, it is what you did, that said not only to America but to the world that we are, indeed, the greatest.

It was something called Title IX that opened up so many, many doors. Going back to what I said a little earlier, we realize that you have the genetic ability, we realize that you have the will, but what you have been given is the opportunity to make a difference, and you have. And so we say, we are proud of you, we wish you Godspeed, and may God bless.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. KELLY).

Mrs. KELLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the United States Women's Soccer Team for their spectacular efforts in the 1999 Women's World Cup. For the last 3 weeks the entire country has been consumed by soccer fever. Mr. Speaker, this is not only an achievement for the women on the team but an achievement for our Nation.

In a time when the most exciting part of the Superbowl seems to be watching to see the million-dollar commercials, this tournament was one of the most captivating athletic events of the year. Six hundred fifty thousand tickets were sold for the 32 matches and for the 90,000 spectators at the final game between the United States and China. They definitely got their money's worth.

After 90 minutes of regulation play and two 50-minute periods of sudden death overtime, the team moved to a penalty kick series where the U.S. women scored five goals to defeat China.

Mr. Speaker, this was the game of a lifetime. No one could imagine a more exciting end to this sensational run for these athletes. Many of these athletes have been playing soccer since they were 5 and 6 years old, and this achievement is the pinnacle of their athletic career. For the girls of this country, this event gave them the role models that they so often lack. But, Mr. Speaker, more importantly, this team and this championship season has given our Nation a great sense of pride.

I commend all the players on this 1999 Women's Soccer Team and all of those women and who inspired them to be the players that they are today.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mrs. BIGGERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I thank my esteemed colleague across the aisle, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS), for his remarks and the remarks on that side of the aisle and all my esteemed colleagues on this side of the aisle.

I would especially like to thank my colleague from California (Mr. KUYKENDALL) for offering this resolution and giving me the opportunity to handle the resolution on the floor.

Looking back on my own childhood, really, the sports that we had were ballet and music lessons. So soccer is a relatively new sport for Americans but especially for American girls. Of my three daughters, only the youngest, Adrienne, had the opportunity to play soccer from kindergarten on through college.

As the assistant soccer coach for her team in the mid and late 1980s, I can well remember the excitement of the girls and their parents when girls soccer first became a recognized team sport in our high school. That meant that Adrienne, just like my son Rody before her, would have the opportunity to play a sport that she loved throughout her years in school.

Thanks to the passage of Title IX in 1972, my daughter Adrienne, along with the women of Team USA and young women and young girls throughout America, has come to benefit from the opportunity enjoyed for so long by young men and boys throughout America. Title IX has enabled young women to participate in school sports, to learn the value of teamwork and competition, and to gain the self-confidence and skills that are so valuable in business and in other future careers.

Mr. Speaker, the women of Team USA have shown teamwork, dedication and a complete commitment to excellence in their field. They also showed a love for the sport and for those who will follow them. They are mentors, role models and an inspiration for all of us, regardless of age or gender.

Following their victory and visit to Disneyland on Sunday, the women of Team USA boarded a plane and flew east overnight, landing at Newark Airport at 4:30 in the morning. Here is how team member Brandy Chastain described their arrival. "There were 10 little girls waiting in the airport," Chastain said. They were wearing World Cup and Soccer USA stuff. They were all so excited. They had slept there. They were jumping around and asking for autographs. We all obliged. They deserved it."

Mr. Speaker, the women of Team USA deserve the recognition today. I urge my colleagues to show their support for this tremendous accomplishment by supporting the resolution of the gentleman from California.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to say that the distinguished congresswoman from California (Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD) had a similar resolution and she worked very hard on that, and I just wanted to express the fact that she, too, is very concerned about this. It is very important to her. I want to thank my colleagues on the other side for the resolution.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, as a parent and former coach, I rise in strong support of this Resolution to celebrate the many contributions the U.S. Women's National Soccer Team has given to the American people.

These young women have illustrated the American spirit on a global stage. They have shown young and old alike that teamwork still works. They have also demonstrated that it's not always about winning, but how you perform on and off the field. These are all positive life lessons that everyone around the globe can take to heart—especially our children, the next generation of leaders.

As one who has worked for a long time to improve the athletic opportunities for women and men, I am particularly heartened to see the success of our World Cup Champions. We must be ever vigilant in our quest to open more doors so those who want to participate in extracurricular activities can do so. I have seen first-hand how sports and team play have molded young kids into future leaders. We need more of that in today's society.

In closing, congratulations to Coach Tony DiCicco, his assistants, and the U.S. National Women who brought home the World Cup. I would hope that as they make their way around the country on their well-deserved victory tour they'll make a stop in Washington so all Americans can celebrate their accomplishments through a National Pep Rally at the U.S. Capitol.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of House Resolution 244, congratulating the U.S. women's national soccer team for winning the 1999 Women's World Cup. Their achievement is something in which all Americans can take pride.

On July 10, the U.S. women's national soccer team played the Chinese national women's soccer team to a scoreless draw after 90 minutes of regulation and 30 minutes of overtime. The match pitted two extremely well-balanced and talented teams against each other and while both teams' defenses held the other scoreless, all spectators were treated to a fast-paced and exciting match.

The success of the U.S. team is the clear result of Title IX, the 1972 law banning sex discrimination in schools, including discrimination in athletics. All of the players on the U.S. team are the children of Title IX and now all Americans can enjoy their success and the success of that landmark legislation.

I am proud to live in a country that has given women the ability to play in an event that has become the most successful women's sporting event in history. Over 90,000 fans attended the final, the largest attendance ever for a women's sporting event and the game received a 13.3 rating, a national record for a soccer match. In addition, the nearly month-long event sold over 650,000 tickets, far exceeding organizer's initial expectations.

As one of the host cities, San Francisco and its citizens participated in the excitement surrounding the 1999 Women's World Cup. I join the citizens of San Francisco in congratulating the U.S. women's national soccer team on attaining their second World Cup and wish them success in the Sydney Olympics in 2000.

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, last month few people knew that the United States had a Women's World Cup Soccer team but today there is talk of starting a professional women's soccer league. The women's world cup tournament, a one month long tournament that features the sixteen strongest teams in the world, has created a sort of "soccer frenzy." All of the credit for starting this new craze should be given to the women of the United States World Cup team. Girls, boys, men and women alike tuned in to watch the games of this tournament. People who had never before this tournament watched a soccer game in its entirety are now caught up in the craze.

This past Saturday these women played their hearts out to beat the National team of China. They never gave up and they worked—literally for Michelle Akers—to the point of exhaustion. They are heroes for millions of people not only because of their raw talent, but also because of their dedication and inspirational attitudes. They played for themselves, for the sport, and for everyone who supported them throughout the tournament.

I don't need to prove to you how likable these women are, how enjoyable they are to watch, or how successful they have been. Their numbers are the proof.

An overwhelming 90,000 fans attended their final game at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena this past Saturday and that 90,000 does not even come close to including the millions of people who tuned in to watch from around the world.

The women's national team, coached by Tony DiCicco, worked together in a way that should be inspiring for us all. Not only did they work together but they played together and celebrated together. They have displayed an amazing dedication to their fellow teammates and to their country that has made us all proud.

I fully support the passage of this resolution that is meant to honor these women for their hard work and dedication.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, Brandi Chastain of my hometown of San Jose, California did the nation proud on Saturday when she scored the final goal to win the World Cup for her team, country, and women everywhere.

When the game came down to the high-pressure penalty goal finale, Brandi stood before a crowd of 90,000, and without hesitation or even looking into the eyes of her only opponent, Chinese goalie Gao, pounded the soccer ball into the net and victory.

Brandi did for young women what Michael Jordan, Willie Mays, and Steve Young did for young men: She gave them a role model.

Brandi, a native of San Jose, has played for the U.S. National team since 1988. She announced her presence in 1991 with five goals in one game against Mexico. But this was no surprise to people at home who had seen her lead her high school, Archbishop Middy, to three straight state championships. She went on to be named All-American while playing for my alma mater Santa Clara University leading the Broncos to two final four appearances. Now she gives back to her sport as an assistant coach at Santa Clara University.

Brandi is a heroine, not only to the soccer players and fans in San Jose, but also to women throughout the world. She, along with her teammates, tirelessly fought to attain their goal of winning the World Cup. They prove that women can achieve the same high level of athleticism as their male counterparts. Most importantly, they showed that teamwork and dedication can make an entire country proud.

It is a great honor to stand up and commend Brandi Chastain and her teammates today for the hope and joy they have given young girls everywhere.

Mr. LUTHER. Mr. Speaker, the United States Women's Soccer Team deserves our nation's highest congratulations on their success in the World Cup. In particular, I would like to praise Briana Scurry, the goalkeeper for the team. Originally from Dayton, Minnesota, Ms. Scurry graduated from Anoka High School in my district in 1990. It was her speed and agility that allowed her to block the critical Chinese penalty kick and secure a victory for the U.S. team. Perhaps it is no surprise, then, that her teammates refer to her as "The Rock". Anoka High School, the State of Minnesota and the entire Nation are very proud of Ms. Scurry and all of the U.S. Women's Soccer Team. They are wonderful role models for the girls and women of America and the world. They have contributed immensely to women's sports, and we owe them a debt of gratitude.

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 241 and offer my hearty congratulations to the United States Women's Soccer Team. Their perseverance and grace on the field was a testament to the spirit of the American women. The crowd they drew to the Rose Bowl—more than 90,000 people, the largest ever to watch a women's sporting event—shows how far women's professional sports have come.

Among that crowd and in the vast international television audience were thousands of young girls, who play in local soccer leagues and on school teams. The U.S. Women's Team could not have provided better role models and I commend them for the contribution they have made to those young lives.

I hope these ladies will accept our invitation, so that we may give them our thanks in person.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the U.S. Women's Soccer Team. Once again, they have proven to be the world's best by winning the 1999 Women's World Cup tournament.

Last Saturday, 90,185 spectators in the Rose Bowl and millions of Americans via-television watched the U.S. women's soccer team defeat the People's Republic of China to earn the Women's World Cup title. Their victory has captured the hearts of our nation and helped raise awareness of women's sports nationwide. As role models to millions of young women across America, the U.S. Women's Soccer Team members stress teamwork and commitment and are true American sports heroes.

I want to personally congratulate my 51st District constituent, Shannon MacMillan of Escondido, Calif. Shannon plays forward and has been an integral part of the winning U.S. team. Her career highlights, which I have attached below, reminds us of her many accomplishments with the U.S. National team and her heroics in the 1996 Olympics.

To Shannon and all of the women of the 1999 Women's World Cup championship team, I say congratulations for a job well done.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, today we celebrate a great victory not only for the U.S. Women's Soccer Team, which has just won its second World Cup, but for girls and women throughout our Nation.

The Women's World Cup finals, held this past Saturday, July 10, 1999, in Los Angeles, drew more than 90,000 spectators in the stands and some 40 million television viewers—the largest audience ever for a women-only sporting event!

The 20 members of the U.S. Women's Soccer Team have won passionate fans not just among the 2.5 million girls playing soccer in the United States but among all Americans. These healthy, strong, disciplined, and exciting athletes are wonderful role models for our nation's girls and young women, and I know they will inspire many more to experience the joy, benefits, and opportunities that sports bring. Participation in soccer by women and girls increased by almost 24 percent between 1987 and 1998—I predict that this percentage will rise significantly over the next year.

I send my aloha and heartfelt congratulations to each and every one of the team members. Michele Akers, Brandi Chastain, Joy Fawcett, Julie Foudy, Mia Hamm, Kristine Lilly, and Carla Overbeck deserve special mention as they are all veterans of the 1991 Women's World Cup victory—a victory that was largely overlooked by the media and public. This team also won a gold medal at the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta, where they were again virtually ignored by the media.

But all of that has changed. Women's soccer is here to stay and the number of players and fans will continue to grow. We can all look forward to seeing this championship team again at the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, where the media will no longer dare to ignore women's soccer.

This is also a victory for Congress and a testament for the power of this institution to change our nation for the better. Mia Hamm, one of women's soccer's brightest stars, was born in 1972—the same year Title IX became law. Without Title IX, she and many of the other team members who brought such pride to all Americans might never have had the opportunity to develop their talent for and love of the sport.

When Edith Green and I drafted the original language for Title IX some 28 years ago, prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sex in educational programs receiving federal financial assistance, we dreamed that someday girls would enjoy equal access to academic and athletic opportunities in our schools. We are not there yet, but the achievements of and excitement generated by the U.S. Women's Soccer Team shows that we are on our way. No longer can anyone say that girls don't deserve equal opportunity in athletics because they don't have the interest or aptitude.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H. Res. 244, to honor and congratulate our United States Women's Soccer Team. The hard work, strength, determination and talent exhibited by these women captures the American spirit. It is this type of spirit that inspires us all to never give up on our dreams. In a sport that is not traditionally an American strong suit, these women worked tirelessly to attain a dream and awoke to 90,000 cheering fans helping make that dream a reality.

As a Southern Californian, I am particularly pleased that the Pasadena Rose Bowl played host to the World Cup finals. I was also honored to have the U.S. women's team grace the field of Pomona-Pitzer College in my congressional district to practice their talents. These women demonstrated "grace under fire" and were "class acts" in their representation of the United States. They set an example that all U.S. teams and Americans should aspire to emulate. I look forward to cheering these women on in Sydney next summer as the United States defends its gold medal. I am confident that these women will, once again, make America proud.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mrs.

BIGGERT) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 244.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2465, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 242 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 242

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2465) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill, and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. Points of order against provisions in the bill for failure to comply with clause 2 of rule XXI are waived. During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accord priority in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII. Amendments so printed shall be considered as read. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be 15 minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL) pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, during consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Committee on Rules met and granted an open rule for H.R. 2465, the Fiscal Year 2000 Military Construction Appropriations Act. The rule provides for 1 hour of general debate equally divided between the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member of the Committee on Appropriations.

The rule waives clause 2 of House rule XXI, prohibiting unauthorized or legislative provisions in a general appropriations bill, against provisions in the bill.

The rule authorizes the Chair to accord priority and recognition to Members who have preprinted their amendments in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The rule allows the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to postpone votes during consideration of the bill and to reduce votes to 5 minutes on a postponed question if the vote follows a 15-minute vote.

Finally, the rule provides for one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, the United States' military is clearly the best in the world. The young men and women in our Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines are thoroughly dedicated and patriotic professionals, the best our Nation has to offer.

So how do we reward them? We pay them with wages so low that many military families are forced to eat with food stamps, and we lodge them in substandard World War II era housing.

These, among other reasons, are why we are losing good men and women who stop serving their country because the hardships on their families are so great. This is inexcusable, and Congress has been working hard to do something about it. This year we have passed a 4.8 percent military pay raise, and with this bill we will improve military housing.

H.R. 2465 provides $747 million for new housing construction and $2.8 billion for the operation and improvement of existing housing. The bill also provides $964 million for barracks and medical facilities for troops and their families.

Finally, because of an increase in two-income and single-parent families, the bill provides $21 million for child development centers.

Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 242 is an open rule for a good, noncontroversial bill. In addition to taking care of our military personnel, this bill is good for the environment. It includes $69 million for environmental compliance programs.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule and to support the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. MYRICK) for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, this is an open rule. It will allow for consideration of H.R. 2465, which is a bill that makes appropriations for military construction worldwide.

As my colleague from North Carolina has explained, this rule will provide for debate to be controlled and directed and divided by the Chairman and Ranking Minority Member of the Committee on Appropriations. Under this rule, germane amendments will be allowed under the 5-minute rule, which is the normal amending process in the House.

All Members on both sides of the aisle will have the opportunity to offer amendments. This bill funds a range of construction projects on military bases, including barracks, housing for military families, hospitals, training facilities, and other buildings that support the missions of our armed services. The bill also funds activities necessary to carry out the last two rounds of base closings and realignments.

Modern facilities are necessary to maintain our national defense. New buildings can increase efficiency and improve morale. The money spent in this bill is a long-term investment in our defense capabilities.

The bill contains $39 billion for Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, which is partially in my district and partially in the 7th District that is held by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON), my colleague, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Construction.

Two of the Wright-Patterson projects funded in the bill are much-needed laboratories that will develop new technology for the weapons systems of the 21st century. The work in these buildings will continue a long tradition of military aviation research in the Miami Valley, Ohio, going back to the days of the Wright brothers.

I commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON), the chairman of the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER), the ranking minority member, for their work in crafting the bill and bringing it to the floor.

The bill was approved by the Committee on Appropriations on a voice vote. It has support on both sides of the aisle. It is an open rule. It was adopted by a voice vote of the Committee on Rules.

I support the rule and the bill and urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), the distinguished chairman of the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence.

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from North Carolina for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to rise in very strong support of this open rule, yet another open rule, from the Committee on Rules under the leadership of the gentleman from California (Chairman DREIER).

While the Military Construction Appropriations Bill is obviously one of the least controversial bills this House takes up every year in appropriations, it is critically important for our men and women in uniform and their families.

Quality-of-life issues are always important for every American, but for these people in the military, these quality-of-life issues have become even more problematical in recent years because the Clinton administration has asked our troops to do much more with much less. In some cases, our troops and their families are simply not being properly provided for. This is no secret, but it is a shame, and it is time we did something about it.

I was, therefore, disappointed with the Clinton/Gore administration budget request for military construction. It is yet another example of the neglect of our Armed Forces under this administration at the same time the administration misuses those forces to bail out their misguided policies.

I am pleased that the bill before us corrects several shortcomings in the administration's request. For example, it provides $1.6 billion more than the administration's request for military construction and a half billion more than the administration's request for family housing. That is, the spouses and children. I want to commend the Committee on Appropriations for its work and encourage my colleagues to support this rule, another fair, open rule and a good appropriations bill.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2466, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 243 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 243

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. Points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with section 306 or 401 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 are waived. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. Points of order against provisions in the bill for failure to comply with clause 2 of rule XXI are waived except as follows: beginning with "Provided" on page 37, line 23, through the closing quotation mark on page 38, line 13; beginning with "Provided" on page 59, line 13, through 22; beginning with "and such new" on page 76, line 16, through 22; and page 80, line 11, through "funding agreements" on line 23. Where points of order are waived against part of a paragraph, points of order against a provision in another part of such paragraph may be made only against such provision and not against the entire paragraph. The amendment printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. All points of order against that amendment are waived. During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accord priority in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII. Amendments so printed shall be considered as read. The chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be 15 minutes. During consideration of the bill, points of order against amendments for failure to comply with clause 2(e) of rule XXI are waived. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). The gentleman from Washington (Mr. HASTINGS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

(Mr. HASTINGS of Washington asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 243 would grant H.R. 2466, a bill making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies for fiscal year 2000, an open rule waiving points of order against consideration of the bill for failure to comply with sections 306 or 401 of the Congressional Budget Act.

The rule provides 1 hour of general debate to be equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations. The rule waives clause 2 of rule XXI, prohibiting unauthorized or legislative provisions in an appropriations bill, against provisions in the bill except as otherwise specified in the rule.

Mr. Speaker, the rule also makes in order the amendment printed in the Committee on Rules report which may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall not be subject to amendment and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. The rule waives all points of order against the amendment printed in the Committee on Rules report.

The rule further waives clause 2(e) of rule XXI, prohibiting nonemergency designated amendments to be offered to an appropriations bill containing an emergency designation, against amendments offered during consideration of the bill.

The rule authorizes the Chair to accord priority in recognition to Members who have preprinted their amendments in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. It also allows for the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to postpone votes during consideration of the bill and to reduce votes to 5 minutes on a postponed question if the vote follows a 15-minute vote.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2466 would provide regular annual appropriations for the Department of the Interior and for other related agencies, including the Forest Service, the Department of Energy, the Indian Health Service, the Smithsonian Institution and the National Endowment for the Arts and the Humanities.

The Subcommittee on Interior was originally allocated $11.3 billion, a 19 percent decrease in funding from last year. Last week, the subcommittee received a $2.7 billion increase in funding over this mark made possible by selling the electromagnetic spectrum sooner than was expected.

The bill provides $14.1 billion in budgetary authority for fiscal year 2000, $200 million below last year's level and $1.1 billion below the President's request.

Mr. Speaker, every year millions of Americans enjoy the world renowned parks, forests, wildlife refuges and other facilities funded in this bill. In addition, H.R. 2466 would do much to enhance, develop and protect our Nation's abundant natural resources in an environmentally responsible way and do so while staying within the overall discretionary spending caps.

The Committee on Rules was pleased to grant the request of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) for an open rule which will make it possible for Members seeking to improve this bill the fullest opportunity to offer their amendments during House consideration of H.R. 2466. Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, I encourage my colleagues to support both H. Res. 243 and the underlying bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. HASTINGS) for yielding me the time, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is an open rule providing for consideration of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Act. This bill helps the people of this Nation and the world to enjoy some of the most spectacular natural beauty that Mother Nature has to offer. It also helps us to be wise stewards of those natural resources. The bill also provides important assistance for Native Americans in health care and education. And the bill funds two of the most valuable and unusual Federal agencies that produce revenue for the United States instead of just taking it and have been proven to enhance and improve education and the SAT scores for students. We know now that any child who studies art for 4 years in high school, that their SAT scores go up around 59 points. That is cheap at the price, Mr. Speaker. I am speaking of the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts. As the chairwoman of the Congressional Arts Caucus, I have spent a great deal of time and effort encouraging my colleagues to adequately fund these important agencies which give us back so much.

The arts and humanities tell us who we were and who we are and who we hope to be. They help us to understand an increasingly complex world and help our children and youth express their hopes and dreams through creative expression. Most importantly, they get our youth ready for what we want, the smartest and brightest students in the next century. Exposure to modern dance increases their math scores, and the way to best learn about computers is to learn to play piano. These are not wild notions but are well-proven facts. I expect to offer an amendment to help these important agencies continue their vital mission, bringing artistic expression and an understanding of the human condition to the villages and cities and nooks and crannies of this Nation from sea to shining sea, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from Washington for his typical superb job in managing this rule. It is a very fair, balanced and open rule. It is nice to see that, because as my good friend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) knows, in years past we have had slightly controversial rules as we have dealt with this very important Interior appropriations bill.

I want to say that every year, millions of Americans and foreign tourists as well come and enjoy our renowned park system. In my important talking points here, the Florida Everglades are mentioned out of respect to my friend from Sanibel, FL (Mr. GOSS) the vice chairman of the Committee on Rules. And also the Angeles National Forest which according to the gentleman from Ohio is in fact the most utilized of our National Forest Service system. That is why this bill itself is very, very important.

One of the other things that I think we need to touch on that is key is the focus on dealing with fires which has been a real issue for us in the Angeles National Forest. Obviously the funding that has been placed into this bill by the gentleman from Ohio is going to be helpful in dealing with that.

I want to raise one other issue that I discussed with the gentleman from Ohio when he testified yesterday afternoon before the Committee on Rules. That has to do with the issue of the adventure pass. There has been a lot of concern raised in the San Gabriel Valley in eastern Los Angeles County about the adventure pass. As the gentleman from Ohio appropriately pointed out yesterday, it is a pilot program that is under way right now. But the concern that has been raised by a number of my constituents has been the fact that they have not yet been able to see tangible evidence that the resources that have come in from the use of that adventure pass have in fact gone towards improvement or dealing with the Angeles National Forest itself. And so I want to take a very close look at this program. We know that it is well-intentioned and the idea of having a user fee rather than taxing people who do not in any way utilize some kind of service is again laudable but we want to make sure that that fee that is there in fact does go to address the needs of those who are in fact paying for that pass. And so I want to see us move ahead.

There are a number of, I think, very important questions that need to be raised, but I do want to congratulate again the gentleman from Ohio and all of our colleagues who have worked long and hard on this bill.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN).

Mr. MCGOVERN. I want to thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of this rule and to alert my colleagues to an amendment that I will be offering later today. Along with the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT), I will be proposing to provide a very modest $30 million to the stateside program of the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

The stateside program has broad bipartisan support but unfortunately it receives no funding under the Interior appropriations bill before us today. The U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National Association of Counties, the National Governors Association, and regional governors associations from across the country support stateside funding.

In addition, groups as wide ranging as the National Association of Realtors and the Wilderness Society are strongly supporting our amendment. The League of Conservation Voters, the Sierra Club and the Appalachian Mountain Club have expressed their strong support. The time to act is now. We have an opportunity to make a very clear statement in this House today that States and local communities deserve the land and water conservation funding that they are owed. They deserve the support of this Congress.

As my colleagues know, there has been a lot of talk on both sides of the aisle about livable communities and ways to protect open space for future generations. Today Members of Congress will have the opportunity to put those words into action. I look forward to the debate on this issue when we consider the bill, and again I want to thank the gentlewoman from New York for having yielded this time to me, and I urge my colleagues to support the rule and to support the Land and Water Conservation Fund amendment.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Interior.

(Mr. REGULA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

I would just like to point out to my colleagues that even though we are $200 million under the enacted number for fiscal year 1999, we are adding 99 million additional dollars over last year for the parks, $200 million for Indian education and health programs, $205 million for high priority land acquisition, $33 million for national wildlife refuges, $114 million for Everglade restoration, and we have tried hard to have a bill that is balanced, it is non-partisan, it is fair, and it recognizes the fact that the public lands, which are about 30 percent of the United States that we provide the funding in this bill, are being dealt with in a responsible way.

In light of the comments by the chairman of the Committee on Rules, I thought it was interesting: Our subcommittee visited last week Olympic National Forest and park areas, and they have signs up for the various projects. It said, this project up on the Hurricane Ridge where they are redoing the center for the visitors, "This project being financed by your fees," and I think it is a very good way to tell the story of how the fees are being used, which was our intent to enhance the visitors' experience. And I thought it was also interesting that they had a little can there that people can put in some extra money, and it was getting filled up also. So it says the people, in addition to paying fees, are so happy with what is being done that they wanted to contribute some additional money.

The other subject that he mentioned, and appropriately so, was the fire issue. We have $561 million in here for wildfire fighting. But I think a program we have innovated that I like, and that is we get the local fire departments, the adjacent cities and villages to participate by providing a training program, $29 million to train these local firefighters how to deal with forest fires, and they can be on call to provide assistance, if necessary, to the firefighters that are part of the agency itself. It is working out very well. And, of course, it is important because fires in a forest or a park for that matter can spread beyond the borders. We have seen that a lot in California. And by getting the local fire fighting agencies as part of a cooperative agreement we really maximize the forces and the ability to deal with what is a serious threat, and it enables the agencies to not commit quite as much of their funds.

So, on balance, I hope my colleagues will look at the issues in this bill and judge it for what it is, which is a very good bill, very responsible and very fair.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. GOSS), the distinguished vice chairman of the Committee on Rules.

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I thank my able friend from Washington (Mr. HASTINGS), my colleague on the Committee on Rules, who does such a good job with yet another fair and open rule. The interior appropriations bill is an important bill, as the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) just said. It provides funding for the agencies involved in protecting our national resources for future generations for our children, as it were.

I am pleased that even though this bill frugally spends several billion less than last year it still provides adequate funding for the national parks, national forest system and the national wildlife refuges, which is the purpose of it. The Interior bill is especially important for my home State of Florida, which is why I take this time. It is the vehicle for the crucial Everglades restoration funds to meet the Federal commitment of our ongoing effort to restore and preserve for future generations the unique River of Grass we know and love.

The bill provides $114 million for the Everglades, which includes land acquisition, improved water delivery and Everglades park management. Under the leadership of the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee, the House has consistently led the charge on restoring the Everglades, and I am proud of that, and this year is no different.

I want to commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) for his attention to this unique national treasure and his personal visits to the area to understand it, and I note the irony that almost as we are speaking today President Clinton is in Florida at a very exclusive high roller fund-raising event that is held by one of the special interest groups that has not been enthusiastic about our efforts to deal with the Everglades, as we propose to do in this legislation.

So this bill comes at a very good time.

Also, vital to Florida's economy and our national commitment to wise stewardship of natural resources is the annual outer continental shelf oil and gas exploration moratorium, which protects our fragile coastline. Again, Florida takes great pride in its coastline, and we are very concerned about oil slicks and pollution. Each year for the last 13 years Congress has passed this moratorium. I am very pleased that this year's bill continues that effort.

And I must note the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), started this process many years ago, and it has been ably picked up by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA). We believe this is a good temporary solution, but we think we can find a more precise and permanent solution to the question of oil drilling off Florida's coast.

I have introduced H.R. 33 which would create a Federal State task force to review the relevant scientific and environmental data and then make a recommendation to the Secretary of Interior for permanent policy. I believe this approach offers a number of benefits, including making Florida a key player in the decision that will have great impact on our State, relying on scientific data rather than rhetoric and affording us the opportunity to institute a more precise policy than our current moratorium year to year.

The House Committee on Resources is scheduled to have a hearing on this bill the first week in August, and I remain hopeful we can move forward on this critically important issue to our State. Of course, there are some issues in the Interior bill that remain controversial, and that will certainly be the subject of some debate later this afternoon.

I look forward to the opportunity to resolve some of those controversies and move forward on this important legislation. I applaud the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) and Members of the Committee on Appropriations for their hard work at this point.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me and just wanted to reemphasize on the Everglades that we have put a condition in here to ensure that in the long haul that the water will be available to protect the Everglades because that is the primary responsibility of the American taxpayer, and the reason they are going to spend 7 to $10 billion of taxpayers' money from all across the country is to ensure the protection of the Everglades, and we tried to do that with the language in the bill.

Mr. GOSS. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, part of my applause for the chairman's efforts is his understanding of all the intricate issues and complexities that are involved. I think he has handled them well. I congratulate him on that, and I know that under his leadership we are going to keep this on course.

I urge support of the rule, and I urge support of the bill.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. RAHALL).

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I rise support of this rule, and I wish to particularly commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), my good friend, the Subcommittee on Interior chairman, as well as the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), the ranking member. These gentleman have had to wrestle hard with severe caps and meeting their responsibilities; and to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) in particular I say I am indebted to him on behalf of the coalfield residents throughout this country for the $11 million increase in Abandoned Mine Land funding.

And I also want to say to the gentleman from Ohio that many of us appreciate his support for the Heritage Area program, citizens working together from the grassroots to celebrate and promote their heritage. I am indebted to the gentleman from Ohio for funding this worthy program as well.

In conclusion, I like to draw attention to three amendments that will be offered to the bill today. One seeks to strike the funding limitation it carries for the American Heritage Rivers program. One of these heritage rivers flows through my congressional district, the New River. I cannot tell my colleagues how much excitement this designation has generated from local citizens, community leaders and chambers of commerce. I urge support of this amendment.

Another amendment to be offered by myself, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE) seeks to maintain some semblance of sanity in the mining law program. It is my hope that perhaps the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) will be kind to us when this amendment is offered.

And the third amendment to be offered by the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS) and myself and a cast of thousands seeks to bolster funding for the low income weatherization program. This is so critically important to so many people who are struggling to improve their lot in our society. I urge adoption of the rule, Mr. Speaker.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HASTINGS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 40 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. PEASE) at 2 o'clock and 34 minutes p.m.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1691, RELIGIOUS LIBERTY PROTECTION ACT

Mrs. MYRICK, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 106-229) on the resolution (H. Res. 245) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1691) to protect religious liberty, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and that I may include tabular and extraneous material on the bill (H.R. 2465) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 242 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2465.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2465) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, with Mr. GILLMOR in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON).

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. HOBSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, it is my pleasure to present the House recommendation for the Military Construction Appropriations Bill for fiscal year 2000.

Let me begin by thanking the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER), my ranking member, and all the members of our subcommittee for their assistance and interest in putting together this year's bill.

The bill presented to the House today totals $8.5 billion, the same as last year's enacted level, and it is $141 million below this year's House passed authorization bill.

The bill is within the 302(b) allocation for both budget authority and outlays, and it is in contrast to the administration's split funding budget request, which proposed spreading $8.6 billion over two fiscal years.

Considering the budget constraints we worked under, the recommendations before the House are solid and fully fund priority projects for the services and our troops.

Within the $8.5 billion provided, we have been able to address the true needs of our troops by supporting projects that improve their quality of life as they serve to protect our country. These priorities include $800 million for troop housing, $21 million for child development centers, $165 million for hospital and medical facilities, $69 million for environmental compliance, $747 million for new family housing units and for improvements to existing units, and $2.8 billion for operation and maintenance of existing family housing units. We believe that these priorities reflect the need to provide our military with quality housing, health care, and work facilities.

Also, by targeting adequate resources for new child development centers, we are recognizing the changing makeup of our military force, with the rising number of single military parents and military personnel with working spouses.

If we want to keep top-notch people in our military, then we have a reasonable obligation to meet the needs of our troops.

Again, I want to thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) and all the members of our subcommittee for their hard work and effort on this bill.

In closing, I want to point out that we have put together an $8.5 billion MILCON bill that is 3 percent of the total defense budget and equal to last year's enacted level. Most importantly, this $8.5 billion directly supports the men and women in our armed services.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I include the following material for the RECORD:

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON) has put a great deal of effort and leadership into this bill, and I thank him.

I have also come to appreciate the tremendous job of the staff on both sides for the majority and the minority, the tremendous job and the hours that they put in as a staff, and I want to thank them, as well, but particularly our clerk on the majority side, Liz Dawson, and her assistants, and on the minority side Tom Forhan for the minority side of the Subcommittee on Military Construction. It has not been easy balancing the dollars available against the priority needs for the men and women who serve our Nation, and they have served this subcommittee and this Congress as a total well in their effort.

This is a good bill and deserves our support. The military construction bill serves as the guardian of the quality of life of men and women who serve America in the military and their families whose lives are caught up in their breadwinners' service to the country.

This bill provides $8.5 billion to address some of the most pressing needs for better workplaces and housing for these men and women in uniform. I wish that we could do more. We have a huge backlog with respect to operational and training facilities, the barracks for the single military personnel, the family housing, the daycare centers, the health facilities. But we find ourselves at the same spending level as last year; in other words, a frozen budget at exactly the same level as the previous year. Still, the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman HOBSON) has done an excellent and fair-minded job.

In the area of housing, for instance, we all agree that our military families deserve decent housing. The President's budget request put a lot of reliance on the recent family housing privatization program, but that pilot program has had significant problems. Some people see privatization as a quick fix to address the unmet need for quality housing. But there have been false starts, and it is not at all clear that all the specific privatization proposals make long-term fiscal and budgetary sense for us.

In the short term, these problems with the privatization program have held up money appropriated for housing; and the delays have really hurt the families that the program is supposed to help. The chairman very deliberately tackled these problems head-on, and I am happy that several projects are now going forward while we take a harder look at the whole program.

At the same time, the bill before us here today also includes traditional MILCON housing and I believe keeps the housing program appropriately balanced, as it needs to be.

Let me conclude by simply saying that this is a solid bipartisan bill that deserves full support of the members of the committee as a whole and the Congress as a whole.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. MCKEON) a member of the Committee on Armed Services.

(Mr. MCKEON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I urge all of my colleagues to support this bill that has been brought by the chairman and ranking member. I want to commend them for the great work that they have done on this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I want to begin by applauding the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Military Construction Subcommittee for what they have done to ensure our military personnel live and work in safe and quality facilities. H.R. 2465 provides $4.2 billion for military construction projects and $3.6 million for family housing. This is $3 billion more than the President had requested. I want to commend the Chairman for his tremendous efforts.

I also want to highlight an issue of great importance to Lancaster—a major city in my district—and the military personnel in the state of California. In the last five years the California National Guard has lost the leases on five armories in the Los Angeles basin. This has led to severe overcrowding at the remaining armories. After examining 38 sites, the California National Guard chose the Antelope Valley Fairgrounds in the city of Lancaster as the site for a new armory.

Congress directed the Secretary of the Army to submit a plan and schedule for the consolidation and replacement of existing armories by January 15, 1999. In order to meet this schedule, the design and construction of the armory must take place in FY 2000. The City of Lancaster recently learned that it secured $1 million in state funds for this project, and now it needs the federal matching funds of $500,000 in FY 2000 and $2.5 million in FY 2001 to ensure that the project is kept within the time frame of the consolidation plan.

I would be extremely grateful if the Subcommittee would work with me to ensure this project can be completed on time.

Once again, I want to commend the gentleman from Ohio for his efforts in drafting this important piece of legislation, and I urge all of my colleagues to vote in favor of this bill.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS), who is a member of the Subcommittee on Military Construction.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I primarily want to rise to congratulate the leadership of this committee and the professional staff for putting together a quality product.

If I have any disappointment in this bill, it is simply that the American people will see nothing of this debate and will not hear about this process on the evening news. Because it seems that, with the national press, if it is not conflict, it is simply not news. Well, my message to the American people is, if they watch this military construction appropriations process, this is the way government should work.

The gentleman from Ohio (Chairman HOBSON) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER), the ranking minority member, have put the interest of our military families, the interest of a strong national defense, the interest of our Nation above the interest of any partisanship. Because of that, there will not be great debate on this floor and, consequently, many Americans will not know about the quality product. But, most importantly, the people who will find out about it, the men and women who are willing to put their lives on the line defending our country in uniform, in combat, they will be the winners from this legislation.

I think it is especially interesting to note, if we look at the supplemental appropriations legislation that passed this House several months ago, along with this legislation, the end product is that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) working together have helped renew a real commitment for quality-of-life programs for our military families both here and abroad.

I want to once again commend them for taking an interest in an issue that does not have any political payoff back home or in their districts, the interest of providing better quality housing for our men and women serving in uniform overseas.

I think the important message to come out of this bill, Mr. Chairman, is that wars are not won by technology alone. That is an important message that we must remind ourselves and the American people. To win them, wars require quality, well-motivated people. When we consider the number of people in our military that are married today, these quality of life issues, while they may not have defense subcontractor lobbyists from 40 States lobbying in their behalf, are at the heart and soul of our building and strengthening our national defense structure in America. The credit for that goes to the chairman and the ranking member and the professional staff for the great work they have done. I commend them for their work. I just wish the American people could turn on the television tonight and see Congress working on a bipartisan basis putting the interest of our country ahead of partisanship. Congratulations.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. TIAHRT), a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Chairman, I could stand here and talk to my colleagues about the numbers that are included in this bill. But instead I want to tell them about that mother of three who will be able to come home to an apartment where the appliances work. She was in an apartment that was too expensive, it was drafty, it was not safe for her kids to play, but now she can come home to an apartment where they are safe.

I want to tell them about that Marine corporal, Corporal Mollet, who is stationed in Iceland. Even though in the winter months the daylight only shows for 45 or 50 minutes, he can come home to a warm apartment where he can now exercise and keep in top shape.

This bill is making life better for the young men and women that serve our country. That is why I would urge all of my colleagues to support it. It is fiscally responsible and it does the right thing.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this well crafted, balanced, and bipartisan bill. This legislation, Mr. Chairman, is fiscally conservative yet comprehensive. My good friend, the Gentleman from Ohio, Mr. HOBSON, The Chairman of the Military Construction subcommittee, has authored a bill that adheres to the budget caps while adequately addressing the needs of our armed services.

Chairman HOBSON faced a daunting challenge in crafting this legislation. The Administration's budget request represented the lowest nominal request for military construction since 1981. The Administration instead made the unprecedented request to defer funding to future fiscal years through incremental, or forward funding of projects. Furthermore, the Administration requested no new family housing projects through traditional military construction, but rather asked for a vast expansion of the housing privatization pilot program without first examining the effect that this would have upon local school districts that rely upon Impact Aid funding.

I am pleased, Mr. Chairman, that this legislation fully funds all military construction projects and reallocates funds from the privatization pilot program to traditional military construction accounts. This would not have been possible without Chairman HOBSON's leadership. He has helped to create a strong, bipartisan bill in the face of numerous obstacles. I ask all Members to support this legislation.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill and would like to commend the work of both the chairman, Mr. HOBSON and the ranking member, Mr. OLVER.

I believe the priorities which they have established in this bill are good for both our nation and for our nation's defense.

The funding constraints imposed by the balanced budget agreement make our choices more difficult.

However, we still must ensure that other priorities do not drive us away from one of the primary responsibilities the Congress has, and that is ensuring for the nation's defense.

The construction of quality family housing and barracks, as well as hospitals and child development centers all relate directly to the quality of life issues so important to retaining our men and women who serve our nation and who deserve the best that we can provide them.

We have witnessed our military forces time and again respond to our nation's call and demonstrate the courage, commitment and dedication that make our nation's defense the envy of the world.

I want to thank the subcommittee for providing these men and women a quality of life that makes the burden of leaving their families behind a bit easier to bear.

I also rise the support this bill which appropriates $8.5 billion for critical military construction needs in fiscal year 2000 and want to applaud the chairman and ranking member for what is in the bill before us:

—$4.2 billion for military construction, including: $789 million for barracks construction, $24 million for child development centers, $165 million for hospital and medical facilities, and $497 million for Guard and Reserve components.

—$3.6 billion for family housing, including: $747 million for new construction and renovation of family housing units and $2.8 billion for operation and maintenance of existing units.

—$700 million for expenses related to base realignment and closure.

I also want to point out some of the projects included in this bill that will have such a positive impact on the defense installations in my district such as:

For the Patuxent River Naval Air Station: $3.06 million for a ship & air test and evaluation facility, $1.5 million for an indoor firing range, and $4.15 million for an aircrew water survival training facility.

For Fort Meade: $10.07 million for a sewage treatment plant.

In closing, I want to thank the subcommittee for funding these military construction priorities and for so effectively addressing the needs of our men and women in uniform and their families.

Mrs. CAPPs. Mr. Chairman, today I rise in support of H.R. 2465, the Military Construction Appropriations Act for FY 2000. This important bipartisan legislation provides $8.5 billion for military housing and addresses a variety of quality of life issues for U.S. troops.

It is time that we made basic improvements in base facilities to support our troops. H.R. 2465 will address such quality of life issues in a number of ways. For example, the bill provides almost $965 million for barracks, hospitals and medical facilities, and $747 million for new housing units for troops and their families.

I am particularly pleased that H.R. 2465 includes $16.8 million to continue a much-needed family housing project at Vandenberg Air Force Base in my district. Vandenberg is in the process of building 108 two, three, and four bedroom housing units on the base. The goal is to provide safe, modern, and efficient housing for service men and women and their family members.

This particular housing project provides the services with a unique model of how development can be structured to strengthen and enhance a sense of community among a highly transitory population.

I am also proud to say that this bill funds priority projects and services for American forces for the next fiscal year, and still manages to be fiscally responsible.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, this Member rises to address funding for a new Army Reserve Center in Lincoln, Nebraska.

The Army Reserve in Lincoln, Nebraska, currently leases a building assigned to the Agriculture Campus of the University of Nebraska in Lincoln. The University's plans for expanding its classroom space are being hindered by the Army Reserve's occupancy. Of late, the desire of the University to reclaim the facility has become more pressing. The Nebraska Army Reserve needs to construct a new building to serve as its center.

The Nebraska Army Reserve has identified an alternative to the current situation, but it lacks the funding needed to get it out of the starting blocks. Therefore, $1.3 million is needed to proceed with land acquisition and to develop preliminary design specifications. This Member supports the Nebraska Army Reserve's request for "seed money" in the amount of $1.3 million to fund the planning and acquisition of land for this relocated Center.

Our colleges and universities have enough challenges. Forcing them to delay, or work around, improvements to and expansion of their programs should not be unnecessarily adding to those challenges. We ask our military personnel to make enough sacrifices. Depriving them of modern, badly needed facilities should not be one of them.

While the bill before the House today does not include this funding request, this Member would note that the Senate version of the military construction appropriation, S. 1205, which was passed on June 16, 1999, by a vote of 97 to 2, already includes funding for this requirement.

To bring the House measure into agreement with Senate version, and for the reasons above, this Member urges the House conferees—who will be appointed to the conference on the Military Construction Appropriations bill—to agree to the Senate's funding level of $1.3 million for the construction of a new Army Reserve Center in Lincoln, Nebraska, in the conference report for H.R. 2465.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Military Construction Subcommittee, I rise in support of this bill. Over the past months, the subcommittee has heard from many members of our Nation's armed forces and has traveled to bases at home and abroad to see first-hand the needs of our men and women in uniform. Their primary concern has been the continued deterioration of the infrastructure which supports our defense mission here and around the world. The President's budget request for Fiscal Year 2000 did little to alleviate these concerns. In response to his inadequate request, the Subcommittee added $3 billion more than the President, an increase of 56%.

Our efforts are aimed at providing our armed forces with the best facilities, training, and equipment possible. Military construction accounts for $4.9 billion or 49 percent of this bill. These funds will be used for barracks, child development centers, medical facilities, and other projects to strengthen and support critical missions. National Guard and Reserve components will receive nearly $500 million.

We have worked hard to address quality of life issues as well. This bill sends a clear message that we will take care of our country's military and their families. Family housing projects account for $3.6 billion or 43 percent of the bill. Within the family housing section, $2.8 billion will go for operation and maintenance of existing units, and $747 million will be used for the construction of new housing.

Mr. Chairman, this bill is fiscally responsible. At the same time, it helps rebuild our military infrastructure and addresses quality of life issues which are so important to maintaining a strong and motivated military.

I urge my colleagues to support the hard work of the Committee and vote for this Military Construction bill.

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to express my strong support for H.R. 2465, the Military Construction Appropriations Act for FY2000. This legislation addresses "quality of life" issues for our service personnel.

H.R. 2465 will significantly improve the living and working conditions of our military personnel. As former Chairman of the Military Construction Appropriations Subcommittee, I have personally seen the poor and unsafe living and working conditions we subject our soldiers to both here in the U.S. and abroad. This legislation will go a long way in addressing many of these needs. We must do as much as we can if we hope to retain these quality personnel.

Our military is the most powerful fighting force in the world, yet our soldiers go home every evening to homes that are simply not acceptable or safe. I commend the members of the Military Construction Subcommittee and Chairman HOBSON for their dedication to the men and women of our Armed Services.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 2465 goes much deeper than just appropriating funds, this legislation will keep the people who protect and serve our country safe. We shouldn't keep asking our servicemen and women to put their lives on the line if we can't provide them with the basics they need to raise a family and live decently.

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 2465 and am particularly pleased with the work that was done in regard to the Lemoore Naval Air Station, which is located in my district in Lemoore, California. I would like to thank both Chairman HOBSON and Representative OLVER for all their hard work in ensuring that Naval Air Station Lemoore is prepared for the upcoming challenges the Navy will place on the base. I would also like to thank Representative MURTHA for his continued support of much needed projects at Lemoore.

I know that funding in this year's Military Construction Appropriations was under considerable budget constraints and so I am pleased that several vital projects for Lemoore were included in the final markup of the bill.

Naval Air Station Lemoore currently supports 27,000 military, civilian, dependent, and retired personnel as the Navy's only West coast Master Jet Air Station. With Lemoore Naval Air Station being designated as the base for the new F/A-18E/F Super Hornet Fighter Aircraft, it is projected that this figure will grow to 33,000 over the next 5 years.

Considering the cost of training these additional pilots, as well as the critical importance of the F/A-18's Super Hornets to the future of the Naval air program, military construction projects at Lemoore Naval Air Station have become a vital component of not only the base's mission, but the mission of our National Defense.

Due to this significant growth, secluded location and deteriorating facilities, quality of life construction projects have become critically important.

A recent survey done at Lemoore confirmed this reality when pilots reported that living conditions diminish morale and threaten pilot retention rates when they are not addressed.

I am confident that we can work to properly address these concerns if we are able to construct and upgrade facilities that directly affect the quality of life of our nation's military personnel.

The military construction projects in the Fiscal Year 2000 Appropriations for Lemoore provide a good start in addressing these issues, but we must see to it that the Defense's million to improve morale and retain pilots continues to be implemented in the years ahead.

The bill we have before us today, H.R. 2465, includes language supporting this effort and specifically directs the Navy to "accelerate the design of quality of life projects at Lemoore Naval Air Station, and to include the required construction funding in its fiscal year 2001 budget request." I am happy to see this direction included and am hopeful that the Administration and Congress will act accordingly.

Support of these military construction projects will help Naval Air Station Lemoore meet its national defense responsibilities in the coming decades.

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to lend my strong support for passage of H.R. 2465, the Fiscal Year 2000 Military Construction Appropriations Act.

This $8.5 billion measure recognizes the needs of our military infrastructure, continues our efforts at base closure and realignment, and most importantly puts military families first. One of the much needed items in this bill to improve the quality of life for our people in uniform is the $10.952 million appropriation for the construction of the Marseilles National Guard Training Facility in my Congressional District.

The Marseilles complex has been requested by the Illinois Department of Military Affairs and the Pentagon since 1994. Not until this year did the President recognize the need for this facility and I am pleased that President Clinton included funding for this project in his FY 2000 budget. This facility would be the first permanent training complex for the National Guard in the State of Illinois, serving all of the 10,245 members of the Guard in Illinois. Currently, members of the Illinois National Guard are forced to travel to bases in Wisconsin and Kentucky some as far as 350 miles away to conduct routine maneuvers. As you can imagine, this places a severe stress on the scope and timing of military operations, and even greater stress on the members of the Guard and their families.

The Marseilles site is easily accessible from Interstate 80 and is in close proximity to Interstates 39 and 55, Chicago, Joliet and Springfield. The Marseilles site is currently used by the Guard for small training exercises that are conducted out of tents and military vehicles with restroom facilities consisting of portable toilets that are of an unacceptable condition for these troops. The proposed complex in Marseilles would reduce travel time to and from training for most Illinois Guard members and would include barracks and dining facilities that would help to boost morale and retention within the ranks. The immediate construction of the Marseilles complex would provide the multiple benefits of substantially helping local business, spurring development in the undeveloped area south of the Illinois River, while providing a convenient training site that will help to ensure troop readiness and an acceptable quality of life.

Mr. Speaker, I extend my deep appreciation to Chairman HOBSON of the Military Construction Subcommittee, and on behalf of the residents and small business owners of Marseilles and the over 10,000 members of the Illinois National Guard I say thank you for helping to get this important project underway.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank our distinguished Chairman for his commitment to our Armed Services personnel, who rely on the United States Congress to address important quality of life issues. The Chairman and the members of his subcommittee deserve our gratitude for their fine work in crafting the legislation before us. In particular, I want to thank the Chairman for his personal attention to the needs of our soldiers and airmen, and their families, at Ft. Bragg and Pope Air Force Base in the 8th District of North Carolina.

It should be noted that back in February the Chairman and his subcommittee were handed a flawed funding proposal by the Administration—one that called for an unprecedented piecemeal funding approach. The Chairman and his subcommittee wisely rejected this proposal, realizing that incremental funding simply doesn't work for military construction. Instead, the House is considering legislation that properly addresses that military housing needs of our armed services.

Mr. Chairman, let me also take this opportunity to bring to the attention of the Chairman and those members who will join him in representing the House during the MilCon Appropriations conference an important issue to the 8th District and all of North Carolina. Included in the Senate version of this legislation is report language directing the Army National Guard to include for a combat arms educational facility in its Fiscal Year 2001 budget submission. The current facilities for the North Carolina Guard's education center are antiquated and no longer meet their needs.

I have before me a letter from Brigadier General Michael Squier, Deputy Director of the Army National Guard, stating that the Educational Facility is of the highest priority. Such a strong endorsement certainly indicates to me that this facility is an important project.

I appreciate the Chairman's consideration of the Senate language and his commitment to America's patriots in uniform.

DEPARTMENTS OF THE ARMY AND THE AIR FORCE NATIONAL GUARD BUREAU

Arlington, VA, May 25, 1999.

Hon. JESSE HELMS,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I deeply apologize for our error in submitting information on the Military Education Center at Fort Bragg. We had earlier reported that it was not in the Future Years Defense Plan. It most definitely is, as shown in the Army National Guard's Fiscal Year 2000 Budget Submission for Military Construction (copy enclosed).

This project is of the highest priority to the Army National Guard and has my personal interest along with that of Major General Rudisill, the Adjutant General of North Carolina.

Your support of the National Guard is appreciated as always.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL J. SQUIER,
Brigadier General, U.S. Army, Deputy Director, Army National Guard.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chair may accord priority in recognition to a Member offering an amendment that he has printed in the designated place in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Those amendments will be considered read.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may postpone a request for a recorded vote on any amendment and may reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the time for voting on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote, provided that the time for voting on the first question shall be a minimum of 15 minutes.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure functions administered by the Department of Defense, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, namely:

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, ARMY

For acquisition, construction, installation, and equipment of temporary or permanent public works, military installations, facilities, and real property for the Army as currently authorized by law, including personnel in the Army Corps of Engineers and other personal services necessary for the purposes of this appropriation, and for construction and operation of facilities in support of the functions of the Commander in Chief, $1,223,405,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004: Provided, That of this amount, not to exceed $87,205,000 shall be available for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services, and host nation support, as authorized by law, unless the Secretary of Defense determines that additional obligations are necessary for such purposes and notifies the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress of his determination and the reasons therefor.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, NAVY

For acquisition, construction, installation, and equipment of temporary or permanent public works, naval installations, facilities, and real property for the Navy as currently authorized by law, including personnel in the Naval Facilities Engineering Command and other personal services necessary for the purposes of this appropriation, $968,862,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004: Provided, That of this amount, not to exceed $65,010,000 shall be available for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services, as authorized by law, unless the Secretary of Defense determines that additional obligations are necessary for such purposes and notifies the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress of his determination and the reasons therefor.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, AIR FORCE

For acquisition, construction, installation, and equipment of temporary or permanent public works, military installations, facilities, and real property for the Air Force as currently authorized by law, $752,367,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004: Provided, That of this amount, not to exceed $32,104,000 shall be available for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services, as authorized by law, unless the Secretary of Defense determines that additional obligations are necessary for such purposes and notifies the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress of his determination and the reasons therefor.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, DEFENSE-WIDE (INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

For acquisition, construction, installation, and equipment of temporary or permanent public works, installations, facilities, and real property for activities and agencies of the Department of Defense (other than the military departments), as currently authorized by law, $755,718,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004: Provided, That such amounts of this appropriation as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense may be transferred to such appropriations of the Department of Defense available for military construction or family housing as he may designate, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes, and for the same time period, as the appropriation or fund to which transferred: Provided further, That of the amount appropriated, not to exceed $33,324,000 shall be available for study, planning, design, architect and engineer services, as authorized by law, unless the Secretary of Defense determines that additional obligations are necessary for such purposes and notifies the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress of his determination and the reasons therefor.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, ARMY NATIONAL GUARD

For construction, acquisition, expansion, rehabilitation, and conversion of facilities for the training and administration of the Army National Guard, and contributions therefor, as authorized by chapter 1803 of title 10, United States Code, and Military Construction Authorization Acts, $135,129,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, AIR NATIONAL GUARD

For construction, acquisition, expansion, rehabilitation, and conversion of facilities for the training and administration of the Air National Guard, and contributions therefor, as authorized by chapter 1803 of title 10, United States Code, and Military Construction Authorization Acts, $180,870,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, ARMY RESERVE

For construction, acquisition, expansion, rehabilitation, and conversion of facilities for the training and administration of the Army Reserve as authorized by chapter 1803 of title 10, United States Code, and Military Construction Authorization Acts, $92,515,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, NAVAL RESERVE

For construction, acquisition, expansion, rehabilitation, and conversion of facilities for the training and administration of the reserve components of the Navy and Marine Corps as authorized by chapter 1803 of title 10, United States Code, and Military Construction Authorization Acts, $21,574,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION, AIR FORCE RESERVE

For construction, acquisition, expansion, rehabilitation, and conversion of facilities for the training and administration of the Air Force Reserve as authorized by chapter 1803 of title 10, United States Code, and Military Construction Authorization Acts, $66,549,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004.

NORTH ATLANTIC TREATY ORGANIZATION SECURITY INVESTMENT PROGRAM

For the United States share of the cost of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Security Investment Program for the acquisition and construction of military facilities and installations (including international military headquarters) and for related expenses for the collective defense of the North Atlantic Treaty Area as authorized in Military Construction Authorization Acts and section 2806 of title 10, United States Code, $81,000,000, to remain available until expended.

FAMILY HOUSING, ARMY

For expenses of family housing for the Army for construction, including acquisition, replacement, addition, expansion, extension and alteration and for operation and maintenance, including debt payment, leasing, minor construction, principal and interest charges, and insurance premiums, as authorized by law, as follows: for Construction, $89,200,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004; for Operation and Maintenance, and for debt payment, $1,089,812,000; in all $1,179,012,000.

FAMILY HOUSING, NAVY AND MARINE CORPS

For expenses of family housing for the Navy and Marine Corps for construction, including acquisition, replacement, addition, expansion, extension and alteration and for operation and maintenance, including debt payment, leasing, minor construction, principal and interest charges, and insurance premiums, as authorized by law, as follows: for Construction, $312,559,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004; for Operation and Maintenance, and for debt payment, $895,070,000; in all $1,207,629,000.

FAMILY HOUSING, AIR FORCE

For expenses of family housing for the Air Force for construction, including acquisition, replacement, addition, expansion, extension and alteration and for operation and maintenance, including debt payment, leasing, minor construction, principal and interest charges, and insurance premiums, as authorized by law, as follows: for Construction, $344,996,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004; for Operation and Maintenance, and for debt payment, $821,892,000; in all $1,166,888,000.

FAMILY HOUSING, DEFENSE-WIDE

For expenses of family housing for the activities and agencies of the Department of Defense (other than the military departments) for construction, including acquisition, replacement, addition, expansion, extension and alteration, and for operation and maintenance, leasing, and minor construction, as authorized by law, as follows: for Construction, $50,000, to remain available until September 30, 2004; for Operation and Maintenance, $41,440,000; in all $41,490,000.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE FAMILY HOUSING IMPROVEMENT FUND

For the Department of Defense Family Housing Improvement Fund, $2,000,000, to remain available until expended, as the sole source of funds for planning, administrative, and oversight costs relating to family housing initiatives undertaken pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2883, pertaining to alternative means of acquiring and improving military family housing, and supporting facilities.

BASE REALIGNMENT AND CLOSURE ACCOUNT, PART IV

For deposit into the Department of Defense Base Closure Account 1990 established by section 2906(a)(1) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1991 (Public Law 101-510), $705,911,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That not more than $360,073,000 of the funds appropriated herein shall be available solely for environmental restoration, unless the Secretary of Defense determines that additional obligations are necessary for such purposes and notifies the Committees on Appropriations of both Houses of Congress of his determination and the reasons therefor.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill through page 20, line 17, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The text of the remainder of the bill through page 20, line 17, is as follows:

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts shall be expended for payments under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract for construction, where cost estimates exceed $25,000, to be performed within the United States, except Alaska, without the specific approval in writing of the Secretary of Defense setting forth the reasons therefor.

SEC. 102. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction shall be available for hire of passenger motor vehicles.

SEC. 103. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction may be used for advances to the Federal Highway Administration, Department of Transportation, for the construction of access roads as authorized by section 210 of title 23, United States Code, when projects authorized therein are certified as important to the national defense by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 104. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to begin construction of new bases inside the continental United States for which specific appropriations have not been made.

SEC. 105. No part of the funds provided in Military Construction Appropriations Acts shall be used for purchase of land or land easements in excess of 100 percent of the value as determined by the Army Corps of Engineers or the Naval Facilities Engineering Command, except: (1) where there is a determination of value by a Federal court; (2) purchases negotiated by the Attorney General or his designee; (3) where the estimated value is less than $25,000; or (4) as otherwise determined by the Secretary of Defense to be in the public interest.

SEC. 106. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts shall be used to: (1) acquire land; (2) provide for site preparation; or (3) install utilities for any family housing, except housing for which funds have been made available in annual Military Construction Appropriations Acts.

SEC. 107. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts for minor construction may be used to transfer or relocate any activity from one base or installation to another, without prior notification to the Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 108. No part of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts may be used for the procurement of steel for any construction project or activity for which American steel producers, fabricators, and manufacturers have been denied the opportunity to compete for such steel procurement.

SEC. 109. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense for military construction or family housing during the current fiscal year may be used to pay real property taxes in any foreign nation.

SEC. 110. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts may be used to initiate a new installation overseas without prior notification to the Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 111. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts may be obligated for architect and engineer contracts estimated by the Government to exceed $500,000 for projects to be accomplished in Japan, in any NATO member country, or in countries bordering the Arabian Gulf, unless such contracts are awarded to United States firms or United States firms in joint venture with host nation firms.

SEC. 112. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts for military construction in the United States territories and possessions in the Pacific and on Kwajalein Atoll, or in countries bordering the Arabian Gulf, may be used to award any contract estimated by the Government to exceed $1,000,000 to a foreign contractor: Provided, That this section shall not be applicable to contract awards for which the lowest responsive and responsible bid of a United States contractor exceeds the lowest responsive and responsible bid of a foreign contractor by greater than 20 percent: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to contract awards for military construction on Kwajalein Atoll for which the lowest responsive and responsible bid is submitted by a Marshallese contractor.

SEC. 113. The Secretary of Defense is to inform the appropriate committees of Congress, including the Committees on Appropriations, of the plans and scope of any proposed military exercise involving United States personnel 30 days prior to its occurring, if amounts expended for construction, either temporary or permanent, are anticipated to exceed $100,000.

SEC. 114. Not more than 20 percent of the appropriations in Military Construction Appropriations Acts which are limited for obligation during the current fiscal year shall be obligated during the last 2 months of the fiscal year.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 115. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction in prior years shall be available for construction authorized for each such military department by the authorizations enacted into law during the current session of Congress.

SEC. 116. For military construction or family housing projects that are being completed with funds otherwise expired or lapsed for obligation, expired or lapsed funds may be used to pay the cost of associated supervision, inspection, overhead, engineering and design on those projects and on subsequent claims, if any.

SEC. 117. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any funds appropriated to a military department or defense agency for the construction of military projects may be obligated for a military construction project or contract, or for any portion of such a project or contract, at any time before the end of the fourth fiscal year after the fiscal year for which funds for such project were appropriated if the funds obligated for such project: (1) are obligated from funds available for military construction projects; and (2) do not exceed the amount appropriated for such project, plus any amount by which the cost of such project is increased pursuant to law.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 118. During the 5-year period after appropriations available to the Department of Defense for military construction and family housing operation and maintenance and construction have expired for obligation, upon a determination that such appropriations will not be necessary for the liquidation of obligations or for making authorized adjustments to such appropriations for obligations incurred during the period of availability of such appropriations, unobligated balances of such appropriations may be transferred into the appropriation "Foreign Currency Fluctuations, Construction, Defense" to be merged with and to be available for the same time period and for the same purposes as the appropriation to which transferred.

SEC. 119. The Secretary of Defense is to provide the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and the House of Representatives with an annual report by February 15, containing details of the specific actions proposed to be taken by the Department of Defense during the current fiscal year to encourage other member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Japan, Korea, and United States allies bordering the Arabian Gulf to assume a greater share of the common defense burden of such nations and the United States.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 120. During the current fiscal year, in addition to any other transfer authority available to the Department of Defense, proceeds deposited to the Department of Defense Base Closure Account established by section 207(a)(1) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (Public Law 100-526) pursuant to section 207(a)(2)(C) of such Act, may be transferred to the account established by section 2906(a)(1) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1991, to be merged with, and to be available for the same purposes and the same time period as that account.

SEC. 121. No funds appropriated pursuant to this Act may be expended by an entity unless the entity agrees that in expending the assistance the entity will comply with sections 2 through 4 of the Act of March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a-10c, popularly known as the "Buy American Act").

SEC. 122. (a) In the case of any equipment or products that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided under this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that entities receiving such assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products.

(b) In providing financial assistance under this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall provide to each recipient of the assistance a notice describing the statement made in subsection (a) by the Congress.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 123. Subject to 30 days prior notification to the Committees on Appropriations, such additional amounts as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense may be transferred to the Department of Defense Family Housing Improvement Fund from amounts appropriated for construction in "Family Housing" accounts, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same period of time as amounts appropriated directly to the Fund: Provided, That appropriations made available to the Fund shall be available to cover the costs, as defined in section 502(5) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, of direct loans or loan guarantees issued by the Department of Defense pursuant to the provisions of subchapter IV of chapter 169, title 10, United States Code, pertaining to alternative means of acquiring and improving military family housing and supporting facilities.

SEC. 124. (a) Not later than 60 days before issuing any solicitation for a contract with the private sector for military family housing the Secretary of the military department concerned shall submit to the congressional defense committees the notice described in subsection (b).

(b)(1) A notice referred to in subsection (a) is a notice of any guarantee (including the making of mortgage or rental payments) proposed to be made by the Secretary to the private party under the contract involved in the event of—

(A) the closure or realignment of the installation for which housing is provided under the contract;

(B) a reduction in force of units stationed at such installation; or

(C) the extended deployment overseas of units stationed at such installation.

(2) Each notice under this subsection shall specify the nature of the guarantee involved and assess the extent and likelihood, if any, of the liability of the Federal Government with respect to the guarantee.

(c) In this section, the term "congressional defense committees" means the following:

(1) The Committee on Armed Services and the Military Construction Subcommittee, Committee on Appropriations of the Senate.

(2) The Committee on Armed Services and the Military Construction Subcommittee, Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 125. During the current fiscal year, in addition to any other transfer authority available to the Department of Defense, amounts may be transferred from the account established by section 2906(a)(1) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1991, to the fund established by section 1013(d) of the Demonstration Cities and Metropolitan Development Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 3374) to pay for expenses associated with the Homeowners Assistance Program. Any amounts transferred shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the fund to which transferred.

SEC. 126. Notwithstanding this or any other provision of law, funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts for operations and maintenance of family housing shall be the exclusive source of funds for repair and maintenance of flag and general officer quarters: Provided, That not more than $15,000 per unit may be spent annually for the maintenance and repair of any general or flag officers quarters without thirty days advance prior notification of the appropriate committees of Congress: Provided further, That out-of-cycle notifications are prohibited with the exception of those justified by emergency or safety-related items: Provided further, That the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) is to report on a quarterly basis to the appropriate committees of Congress all operations and maintenance expenditures for each individual flag and general officer quarters.

SEC. 127. The first proviso under the heading "MILITARY CONSTRUCTION TRANSFER FUND" in chapter 6 of title II of the 1999 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act (Public Law 106-31) is amended by inserting "and to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization Security Investment Program as provided in section 2806 of title 10, United States Code" after "to military construction accounts".

SEC. 128. Notwithstanding any other provisions in this Act, the following accounts are hereby reduced by the specified amounts—

- "Military Construction, Army", $38,253,000;
- "Military Construction, Navy", $30,277,000;
- "Military Construction, Air Force", $23,511,000;
- "Military Construction, Defense-wide", $23,616,000;
- "Military Construction, Army National Guard", $4,223,000;
- "Military Construction, Air National Guard", $5,652,000;

"Military Construction, Army Reserve", $2,891,000;

"Military Construction, Naval Reserve", $674,000; and

"Military Construction, Air Force Reserve", $2,080,000.

SEC. 129. The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force are directed to submit to the appropriate committees of the Congress by June 1, 2000, a Family Housing Master Plan demonstrating how they plan to meet the year 2010 housing goals with traditional construction, operation and maintenance support, as well as privatization initiative proposals. Each plan shall include projected life cycle costs for family housing construction, basic allowance for housing, operation and maintenance, other associated costs, and a time line for housing completions each year.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there amendments to the bill?

The Clerk will read the last 2 lines of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

This Act may be cited as the "Military Construction Appropriations Act, 2000".

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments?

If not, under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. PEASE) having assumed the chair, Mr. GILLMOR, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2465) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 242, he reported the bill back to the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Pursuant to clause 10 of rule XX, the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 418, nays 4, not voting 13, as follows:

Ms. BALDWIN changed her vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. WEYGAND. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent on Monday and earlier today due to the death of my uncle. Had I been here on Monday, I would have voted "yes" on roll-call votes 278 and 279. Today, I would have voted "yes" on rollcall 280.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PEASE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 243 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2466.

□ 1517

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole

House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, with Mr. LATOURETTE in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA).

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, for those who might not have noticed, this is Ohio day, both from the standpoint of the chairman of the two Appropriations bills being considered today and of the gentleman from Ohio presiding this afternoon.

Mr. Chairman, first of all, I want to pay a compliment to my ranking member, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS). This is his first year of being the Ranking Member on the subcommittee, and he has been a partner. We have worked together on the things in this bill in a nonpartisan way. I think it is fair, and I think a lot of this is thanks to the contributions that the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) made and also the staff, both his staff and the staff of the subcommittee. It has been a real pleasure to work with the gentleman from Washington on this bill.

Mr. Chairman, today I would ask Members in their mind's eye to fast forward to the year 2049, 50 years from now, because their actions and votes on this bill will be the America we leave to our children and grandchildren.

We have to ask ourselves some questions: Will it be an America free from the scars of resource exploitation? We have put an extra $11 million for the Abandoned Mine Reclamation Fund to avoid that problem.

Will it be an Everglades fully watered and with its unique ecology preserved and enhanced? Again, when it is all said and done, we will have spent about $10 billion of U.S. taxpayer dollars to take care of the Everglades. If Members read the language in the bill, they will see we are making a point that we want to ensure that there is an adequate water supply, not just now but 50 years from now.

Will it be a Nation with clean air, clean water, with rivers that we point to with pride? Will there be 629 million acres of forests, parks, fish and wildlife facilities and grazing lands, with beautiful vistas, with unique ecological wonders?

Will there be an Smithsonian that continues to tell the unique story of our Nation's heritage? Will there be a Kennedy Center that continues to excite millions of visitors with a wide range of artistic opportunities? Will there be a Holocaust Museum that continues to remind Americans and people from many nations that this tragedy shall never happen again? Will there be a National Gallery Of Art and Sculpture Garden that shares the treasures of many nations in addition to our own?

Will there be new sources of energy that foster a livable society with a prosperous economy? Will we be a Nation that respects its arts and its humanities?

Members get to answer those questions today by giving a resounding vote of yes to this bill. We will soon be voting on a $265 billion defense bill to defend many of the values that this bill represents. Fourteen billion dollars, the amount of this bill, is a small price to invest in preserving these values.

We have made a number of important policy changes. The Inspector General at the Department of the Interior told us that the National Park Service was unable to balance its books. We have instituted reforms and turned that situation around in 18 months. This bill continues those reforms. We have made changes in many programs as a result of 18 oversight hearings over the past 4 years.

We have heard about the $1 million comfort stations built by the U.S. Park Service. We have streamlined and reformed the way in which the Park Service manages its construction program, and we are not going to have those kinds of activities in the future.

According to testimony of the leaders of the National Park Service, the Forest Service, the Smithsonian, all of these agencies, that we have a $15 billion backlog maintenance. We have to take care of what we have, and we are doing that in this bill. We continue to work at it, and I think it makes a difference.

Our subcommittee recently visited some facilities in the State of Washington. In Olympic National Park we saw a building that was being fixed as a result of fees and as a result of the understanding that we need to take care of maintenance.

We are looking into problems of financial and contract management in the Department of Energy, the Forest Service, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

We have provided for the Everglades restoration effort in this bill. A unique feature, and I think it is one of management, that is that we require the States to provide a 25 percent match on weatherization. Forty-eight of the States have current balances, some of them over $1 billion. I think the States have a responsibility of participating, and frankly, if they do, they are going to be a little more careful how they manage the funds. Now they manage the funds and we provide all the money. Under this proposal, we have not reduced weatherization significantly; we are saying, States, you put up 25 percent and we will be able to do more. We will also get better management of the dollars involved. I think this is a very positive approach to this program. I hope Members will all support it by their votes on the bill.

We have added $99 million to the Operation of the National Parks. We hear this mantra, "they are going to shut down the parks." Do not believe it. We have added $99 million to support our national parks over what we provided last year, even though the bill in its present form is $1 million less than the 1999 bill, excluding the supplemental appropriations. It is $200 million less if we include the enacted bill, which would include the supplemental appropriations.

So we have been very careful in managing it, but we have tried to emphasize the things that are important to people: their parks, $99 million; $200 million for Indian education and health programs. I think we need to do more, but that is the best we could under the circumstances.

But when the American Dental Association testifies that only one Indian has dental care out of four, we need to remedy that. We need to ensure that every Native American has the health care he or she needs, and we likewise need to ensure that they have educational opportunities.

We saw the President visiting a reservation last week talking about the poverty there. The way to get out of poverty is to improve education. We have tried to address that as much as we could in this bill.

We have provided $205 million for high priority land acquisition. I know people would like to buy a lot more land, but that is the best we can do under the circumstances.

What we have tried is where we have inholdings, we have tried to focus on the importance of pulling together the lands that we have, so our priority has been to pick up wherever possible with a willing seller, a willing buyer, inholdings.

We have included $33 million additional for national wildlife refuges. I mentioned the Everglades. We have included land acquisition funds, but we have said that we want to guarantee that the water will be there not just tomorrow but 50 years from now, and to that end we have put in restrictive language to ensure that we have that guarantee before we commit vast sums of money from the taxpayers of this Nation. Their focus is on the Everglades. The taxpayers are not putting up $10 billion to $11 billion to provide more development money or more agriculture, they are putting up the money to take care of the Everglades, which belongs to all the people of this Nation. We have tried to recognize that.

I mentioned earlier that the AML fund is $11 million more than last year. We want to repair some of the scars we have inflicted on the landscape of America from coal mining. We have level funding for the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities. I think that is consistent with the fact that the bill is level funded in terms of the 1999 appropriations.

I think all of these programs taken together represent a good management of our Nation's resources, and most importantly, I think they represent policies and programs that every one of us who support this bill will be able to point to our actions with pride 50 years from now, and on into the future as far as the eye can see.

I hope that the Members will support the bill, that we will continue this effort that we are making in managing our resources and the dollars to give the public the best possible value received for the money they provide in the form of taxes.

OVERVIEW OF BILL

Mr. Chairman, today I am pleased to bring to the House for its consideration the fiscal year 2000 Interior Appropriations bill. While the pressures of the 1997 budget agreement between the Congress and the White House have required us to make some difficult choices in this year's bill, I believe we are presenting you a good bill. The bill provides for $14.057 billion in budget authority and $14.556 billion in outlays. Funding is $200 million below the FY99 enacted bill and $1.1 billion below the Administration's FY 2000 request. Within these limits we are continuing to focus our priorities on operational shortfalls and backlog maintenance in the national parks, wildlife refuges and national forests by providing modest increases for these priorities.

Despite our severe funding limitations, we continue the federal commitment for the restoration of the Everglades with $114 million. This funding includes the federal commitment necessary for the purchase of critical lands within Everglades National Park, as well as the other national parks and wildlife refuges, critical to the restoration effort. In providing this funding, we have included specific language to ensure a true environmental restoration of the Everglades by requiring specific water flow amounts and timing for these critical natural areas.

Throughout my tenure as Chairman of this Subcommittee, I have focused on bringing improved management and accountability to the taxpayer. You may remember that in last year's bill we made changes to the Park Service's Denver Services Center and the way the Park Service manages and funds construction projects, so that the taxpayer will never again be asked to fund a $784,000 outhouse in a national park. This year we have focused on the various trust funds of the U.S. Forest Service. These funds are off budget funds which have not been transparent to the taxpayer. We have included a number of changes to address this situation, and I will enumerate them more specifically when I address the Forest Service portion of the bill.

As federal spending for these programs continues to be squeezed by our obligations to the American people to maintain balanced budgets and protect Social Security and Medicare, we must increasingly focus exclusively on our federal responsibility. States must share in these programs as our partners. For this reason, we have not provided funding for the states to purchase lands under the Administration's Lands Legacy program. State continue to do extremely well financially under the excellent economic conditions we enjoy. We call on these same states to make the financial commitment to protect lands of priority to them.

In the area of energy programs funded within the bill, we continue this philosophy by asking the states to participate in funding the Weatherization program. Throughout the many years of this program, only the federal government has provided the funding for this program, and in our FY00 bill we ask the states to share in the program with a 25 percent cost share.

Like last year, we have funded the bill without the selling oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) to finance its operations. Congress created the SPR in 1975 to provide a national defense against future oil shocks. This year, we are pleased to report that the SPR is being filled with oil from royalties owed the federal government by entities producing oil from federal lands. This creative relationship between the Department of the Interior and the Department of Energy is working well, while at the same time adding to our nation's strategic oil defense.

THE NATION'S LANDS

The Interior Appropriations bill provides funding for the vast majority of our nation's federal lands. I would like to highlight the vast treasures we hold as a nation in the resources of our lands. Together as a nation we hold ownership of nearly one third of the land across this great country, and we cherish the open space and tranquility these vast holdings provide. They include 192 million acres in Forest Service land, 77 million acres within the National Park System, 94 million acres in Wildlife Refuges administered by the Fish and Wildlife Service and 264 million acres in Bureau of Land Management (BLM) holdings.

Although we often refer to our national parks as the "crown jewels" of our public lands which include the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone and Yosemite, many spectacular gems are also found on these other public lands. Both the Forest Service and the BLM administer their lands under a multiple use mandate, and therefore, these lands are used not only for recreation as our national parks, but also for hunting and fishing, as well as for generating revenues from minerals and oil and gas development.

While many people associate the Forest Service as a source for American's lumber needs, it is a little known fact that the Forest Service actually receives three times the number of visitors to its lands for recreational purposes than the national parks. Forest Service lands received more than 650 million visits last year.

The American public does not distinguish between federal lands administered by different agencies, and as such, I encourage these agencies to work together on behalf of the public. I would like to compliment the BLM and the Forest Service on their work to consolidate their activities at the field level to achieve savings and provide improved services to the public. The Department of Agriculture and Interior have also achieved success in coordinating their efforts on the development of the Joint Fire Science Plan which provides the scientific aspect of the fuels management programs of the Departments. I encourage all of the agencies to follow these excellent examples and coordinate their services effectively.

REVENUES FROM THE FEDERAL LANDS/REC FEE
DEMONSTRATION PROGRAM

In addition to the growing role as respite to millions of Americans from the everyday stresses of an increasingly urbanized society, these lands also provide a major source of revenues. Revenues from mining, oil and gas leasing and grazing are expected to generate more than $6 billion in fiscal year 2000. These resources belong to the American people, and they are benefitting from the revenues they generate.

During my first year as Chairman of this Subcommittee, I initiated the recreation fee program demonstration on our federal lands. This is a concept I have supported for many years; it allows the parks, wildlife refuges, national forests and public lands to collect a modest fee from visitors. This fee stays in the park where it is collected and allows the land manager to use the funds to conduct backlog maintenance or improve services for the visitor on that particular site. We are receiving tremendous support of these fees from the American people, the land managers and from national organizations involved with our federal lands. The fees are expected to generate over $400 million over a five year period and will greatly enhance our ability to reduce the maintenance backlog on the public lands. Other unexpected benefits of the program include a reduction in vandalism which the superintendent at Muir Woods in California called to my attention recently. With Americans making a contribution to the land, they feel they have a stake in its beauty and preservation.

FOREST SERVICE LANDS

The National Forest System lands represent about one third of the nation's forest land and historically have produced approximately 20 percent of the total softwood harvested in the United States each year. Much more timber is grown on these lands each year than is harvested. The timber sale program generates revenues for the Treasury and for local timber-based economies, as well as providing the raw material for lumber, paper and other forest products that are critical to our economy. The timber program on public lands, however, has declined from a high of 11.1 billion board feet in FY90 to the 3.6 billion recommended in this bill and the same level as in fiscal year 1999. This number is a dramatic reduction over the decade, and further cuts to it would be an irresponsible act of the Congress and dramatically impact timber-dependent communities.

Earlier I mentioned increased accountability of various Forest Service trust funds. Despite continuing concerns expressed by this Committee, the House Agriculture Committee and the GAO about the accountability of these funds, we remain deeply troubled about the way these trust funds are being administered. To address these concerns, this year we are requiring the Forest Service to submit a detailed plan of operations to the Congress for the Knutson-Vandenberg (KV) fund, the salvage sale fund and the brush disposal fund. The plan should include an explanation and justification for the program of work and expected accomplishments at each national forest unit using KV funds. To address ongoing concerns that these funds have been used for purposes other than those for which they are intended, we have limited their use at both the regional and Washington levels to only those activities strictly related to the program. We have specifically prohibited their use for general assessments within either the Forest Service or the Department of Agriculture. The American people deserve to know that these funds are being used for their intended purposes of reforestation together with restoration of watersheds and habitats, and therefore we have also required that these funds be displayed in future budget justifications for the Forest Service. I am pleased with the new requirements we are placing on the management of these funds.

We are making a significant commitment to fire-fighting in this bill, with $561 million for wildland fire management. The fund supports preparation for wildfires, wildfire operations and reduction of hazardous fuels.

Last year we included the transfer of the Volunteer Fire Assistance program from the Department of Agriculture Appropriations bill to this one. This small grant program, through the State and Private Forestry account, is a tremendous partnership between local volunteer fire departments and the federal government. It allows for enhanced training and equipment to these local fire-fighting agencies and provides for highly trained volunteers should their assistance be requested at federal fire sites. The bill includes $4 million for this grant program, with a total of $29 million in total for the Cooperative Fire Assistance program. Clearly, the bill makes a strong commitment to the fire-fighting needs on the local, state and federal levels.

INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE

Health Care for our native Americans is the responsibility of the federal government and remains a challenge for this subcommittee. We continue our commitment to Indian Health Services with total funding of $2.4 billion, a $155 million increase over fiscal year 1999. Within this increase is additional funding of $35 million to meet contract support costs, a growing obligation. Within this increase we have also included an additional $20 million to construct the highest priority hospitals and clinics, thus providing needed access to health care.

SCIENCE

The bill includes $820 million for the U.S. Geological Survey. This Department of the Interior agency performs first-class scientific research and analysis in areas including water resources, geology and biological resources. I am pleased to report that our transfer of the Biological Resources Division to the U.S. Geological Survey continues to work very well, and the other bureaus rely on the expertise of the outstanding agency to meet their scientific needs.

We have provided $188 million for ecological services for the Fish and Wildlife Service, including $105 million for endangered species work. As we all know, the Endangered Species Act needs to be reauthorized. I urge the Administration to present legislation to the Congress so that together we may address vitally needed reforms for the program.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

The Interior Appropriations Bill funds programs at the Department of Energy for research to develop technologies to more efficiently use fossil fuels. Low energy prices and energy efficient technologies are a major reason for our strong economy, so we must continue to support federal energy research programs for fossil energy, coal, oil and natural gas, as well as other sources of energy.

Funding for the Department of Energy's programs are cut $209 million below last year's level. With many fewer dollars, we continue to emphasize partnerships between the federal government and the private sector to ensure that there is a commitment to the technologies in the marketplace. Our goals continue to be to develop technologies that meet the highest energy efficiency and environmental standards possible. Fossil energy will remain the cornerstone of our nation's energy supply well into the next millennium and will also be the source of energy for the world's developing countries. Our continued leadership in this research is vital as we become an increasingly global economy.

DOE's Energy Efficiency account includes a number of programs, including the Industries of the Future program which is an outstanding public-private partnership as the nation's most energy intensive and highest polluting industries work with government in setting joint goals to increase efficiency and reduce waste as we look to these industries' futures. We have provided $193 million for this program, the success of which will continue to ensure world class economic strength in our leading industry sectors which employ so many Americans.

Funding for the state energy programs remains at the 1999 level of $33 million, and we have funded the Weatherization Assistance Program at $120 million, and we are now requiring a 25 percent cost share which I noted earlier. This requirement will allow us to leverage the program dollars and in turn expand the funding and the number of people who may benefit from the program.

Finally, we continue to support the Federal Energy Management Program (FEMP) and have provided $24 million for it. This program is an excellent industry/government partnership in which the private sector works with federal agencies to reduce energy usage by incurring the costs of installing high efficiency equipment in exchange for a share of the resulting energy savings. The program has great potential for energy savings, as the federal government is the largest energy user in the world.

NATIONAL ENDOWMENTS FOR THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES

Over the past few years, funding for the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) has been a challenge in this appropriations bill. During last year's floor debate on this bill, the House of Representatives voted to continue to provide federal funding for the NEA. This year we have included funding for the NEA and the NEH at the fiscal year 1999 levels of $98 million and $110 million, respectively. I believe the reforms we have put in place at the NEA are working, and the current directors of these agencies are doing a fine job on behalf of the American people.

CULTURAL AGENCIES

One of the most enjoyable tasks I have serving as Chairman of the Subcommittee, is overseeing the budget for our nation's cultural agencies. These fine agencies, including the Smithsonian Institution, the Kennedy Center, the National Gallery of Art and the U.S. Holocaust Museum all provide wonderful services to the American public not only when they come to visit our nation's capital, but also through numerous outreach programs throughout the states and local communities, as well as on the Internet.

July 13, 1999

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE

H5399

For fiscal year 2000 we are providing $438 million for the Smithsonian Institution. This funding includes $48 million for repair and restoration of Smithsonian facilities. "Taking care of what we have" is a high priority for me, and I am pleased that the Smithsonian agrees with this priority in maintaining their world class facilities for all Americans to enjoy.

Within the constraints of the tight budget, we have provided modest increases for the various cultural agencies within the bill.

CONCLUSION

Mr. Chairman, in closing I would like to reiterate that the bill I present before the House today is a good bill. It reflects the priorities of taking care of the lands and resources of all the American people. It is a responsible bill which keeps our obligation to balance the budget, while meeting the many responsibilities under our jurisdiction.

At this point Mr. Chairman, I would like to insert into the RECORD a table detailing the various accounts in the bill.

The table referred to is as follows:

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. DICKS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I rise as the ranking minority member of the subcommittee in support of H.R. 2466, the FY 2000 appropriations bill for the Department of the Interior and related agencies.

I, too, want to compliment the chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) and the staff of the committee, both the majority and minority staff members. Debbie Weatherly and Del Davis have done a very fine job on this bill, and all the other staff members, including Leslie Turner on my staff.

I would like to thank the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), who has skillfully crafted this bill. This bill is fair and balanced and I believe adequately addresses the needs of the programs within its jurisdiction.

Our allocation was not high, nearly $1 billion below the President's budget request, which required many difficult decisions. Under those difficult circumstances, I believe the bill is justly prioritized. I also add that I am extremely pleased that the bill is free of many legislative riders objectionable to the Congress.

It is my firm hope that we can continue to work with the administration on a few key items which the subcommittee was unable to fund in this tight budget year. The Lands Legacy Initiative proposed by the administration was not fully funded in this bill. I am hopeful that we can continue a dialogue as the bill moves through the legislative process and perhaps make more money available for some of the key land acquisitions put forward by the President.

This bill supports our national wildlife refuge system and continues critical efforts to address the needs of threatened and endangered species. These vital programs enable our agencies to achieve better ecosystem management and more comprehensive protection of our public lands.

Just last week I had the pleasure of hosting several Members, including the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), our chairman of the Subcommittee on Interior Appropriations, in my home State of Washington. We toured several area parks including the Olympic National Park in my congressional district and were able to view firsthand some of the work being done on the ground both through annual appropriations as well as through the fee demonstration project.

Once again, I commend the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman REGULA) for his attention and elevation of the backlog needs in our parks. We need to do something about that. This bill provides significant increases in operations money to protect the treasures of the park system throughout the United States.

The bill continues support for our Native American citizens and is instrumental in upholding their treaty rights. Through the Interior Appropriations bill, we support economic and educational assistance to the tribes, aid natural resource management and support tribal health programs through the Indian Health Service.

Lastly, the bill provides funding to support both the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities. Although we were not able to provide the requested increases called for in the President's budget, it is my firm hope that the House will approve funding for the endowments and we can continue to seek some increase as the bill moves through the process.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2466 and the important program it sustains.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. NETHERCUTT), a valued member of the subcommittee.

Mr. NETHERCUTT. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 2466, the fiscal year 2000 funding bill for the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies.

This bill provides $14.1 billion for the National Park Service, the United States Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, Smithsonian, and the Bureau of Indian Affairs. And I am happy to say that based on the hard work of the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman REGULA) and my colleagues, both the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) and other valued members on the subcommittee, we have an opportunity to support a bill that will manage and protect our environment; it will maintain our obligations to our sovereign Indian nations; it will protect our Nation's cultural resources and maintain fiscal responsibility.

It was not an easy task for the chairman of our subcommittee to come up with all of the pressures of this bill in the form that this bill takes. But it is a good package. I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) for inserting language that I authored in the report that will force the Pacific Northwest region, which covers my State of Washington, to look at all impacts to the endangered salmon problem in the Pacific Northwest and not just focus on dam removal as the solution to restoration of our salmon populations. It is not the solution. It is a multifaceted problem that requires a great deal of analysis and careful consideration.

Right now our region faces an immediate challenge with almost 8,000 pairs of Caspian terns which nest on a man-made island called Rice Island, which is located 20 miles upriver from the mouth of the Columbia River.

The National Marine Fisheries Service estimates that over the past 2 years these little birds have feasted on between 10 and 23 million juvenile salmon that are migrating out to the ocean. These birds are protected under the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, which the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is responsible for carrying out.

I appreciate the committee working with me on report language that requires the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to come up with a mitigation plan that will include, but not be limited to, transporting these birds to areas that are more in line with their natural habitat.

If we come up with a responsible plan for managing the Caspian terns, we will see a positive impact on the number of salmon returning to the Columbia and Snake Rivers to spawn. This is an important piece of the salmon restoration puzzle that we cannot ignore.

I am also pleased that within our budget limitations we were able to increase funding for health care provided the Native Americans through the Indian Health Service. The health disparities among Native Americans are profound. One area in particular is diabetes that seriously affects Native American populations and other minority populations in our country. The prevalence of diabetes among Native Americans is higher than it is for the rest of the Nation's population, and the rate is rapidly increasing to epidemic proportions in some tribes across this Nation.

For the second year in a row, we have provided funds in this bill for diabetes screening through the Joslin Diabetes Center, a great center dedicated to curing and doing more research and understanding the complications of diabetes.

We have also included language in the report to increase the number of podiatrists within the Indian Health Service to attempt to avoid one of the major complications of diabetes through preventive care and early treatment of diabetic foot ulcers for Native American populations.

Mr. Chairman, this bill contains a delicate balance for Forest Service funding and programs. As Members may remember, we reached a hard-fought agreement on this issue last year when supporters of active forest management agreed to eliminate the purchaser road credit program. That was a difficult problem to overcome, to eliminate that program. This program primarily affected small timber purchasers, many of which were in my district on the east side of the State of Washington.

While the agreement held throughout the process last year, attempts may be made today to unravel that agreement. So I urge all Members, all of my colleagues who may consider supporting a Forest Service amendment, to think hard about the agreement that was reached in good faith last year. We should not destroy the accord that was achieved.

All in all, this bill is well balanced. It considers carefully the delicate nature of the programs that are contained within the Interior appropriations measure. It is one that I hope will see great approval in this body. The chairman and the ranking member and all of us on the subcommittee worked very hard to make that balance occur. We still have to deal with the Senate. We have to get a bill that goes through the process to the President.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support the bill.

On July 20, 1969, the lunar landing module of Apollo touched down in the Sea of Tranquility on the surface of the Moon. Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin descended from the landing module and became the first humans to walk on any heavenly body. This feat established American supremacy in space even to the present day.

The Apollo 11 mission represents the success and preeminence of the American Space Program; we must preserve the monuments of this era. Of all the artifacts representing the glory and triumph of the Apollo Program, one in particular stands out—the Saturn V Rocket. The Saturn V is the largest, most powerful rocket ever produced in history. The Soviet Union was never able to even attempt to undertake such an ambitious project.

Only three Saturn V Rockets remain in the world today. The U.S. Space & Rocket Center is home to one of these historic vehicles which has the distinction of being designated a National Historic Landmark. The Saturn V at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center has been on display for thirty years, and the elements have caused significant deterioration of the vehicle. Although there is no question that it should be preserved for future generations as a monument of the American Space Program, once again we face budget constraints that make this task a difficult one.

Restoration of the Saturn V at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center should be a priority of the Smithsonian. I am hopeful that we will be able to allocate the resources necessary for the restoration and preservation efforts being made by the U.S. Space & Rocket Center before it is too late.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY), a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill and I want to commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), our chairman, and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), our ranking member, for the excellent job they have done putting this bill together under very difficult circumstances. I also want to thank the subcommittee staff for their hard work on the bill and thoughtful consideration of the many difficult issues that we faced.

What we have before us is a fair and balanced bill that genuinely takes into consideration the many different concerns and interests of Members of the House, and of the people that we represent.

None of us support every item in the bill, but I think all of us can agree that it is fair, reasonable, and representative. The difficult circumstances I allude to are obvious. Our subcommittee's allocation is far below the real needs of the agencies funded through this bill. Although we have heard widely varying figures on the National Park Service's maintenance backlog, it certainly amounts to several billion dollars at least. The same is true of the Forest Service.

As our population grows and our open space shrinks, we have an ever-increasing need to protect open space and wildlife to protect recreational opportunities for our people, to conserve the watersheds we all depend on, and to save our historic and cultural sites.

Our subcommittee received hundreds of requests from Members for projects that are sensible and worthy, but we could not fund them even though we would have liked to and should have. There simply was not enough money.

But our chairman, I think, in the final analysis has used his discretion very, very wisely. The bill and the bill report include language regarding the management of the Everglades restoration project that we hope and believe will guarantee that the project serves the national interest. And the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) should take full deserved credit for this.

We are putting Federal money into the reengineering of the Everglades because we want to see its unique ecosystem restored and conserved for the future because we want to reverse past mistakes that led to overdevelopment and overuse of fragile resources. This bill aims to ensure that that is what will happen and that the Federal funds will not ultimately be turned against the Everglades and be used to promote unwise development.

I am delighted to say that despite the constraints on this bill, it includes increased funds for the Park Service, which are badly needed to meet the demands both of conservation and increased visitorship. I am similarly very happy that the bill also includes a small increase in the Forest Service's recreation budget above the administration's request.

The national forests are more widely used for recreation even than the national parks; and recreation has become an increasingly important part of the Forest Service's mission, but its budget has not kept up. The increase is a much-needed step in the right direction.

The bill also provides for a small increase in the Forest Services State and private forestry budget. Again, this is very welcomed. These programs are not as well known as they should be, but they are immensely valuable to those States where most forests are in non-Federal ownership.

In my own State, they are particularly important for the role they play in protecting our urban watersheds, but they also provide critical assistance to people who never see a forest through their support for such beneficial and popular projects as urban tree planting and disease prevention.

The Interior bill's public lands titles almost always attract more attention than its energy research and conservation provisions, but I am also pleased in what we could accomplish in those areas as well. Our subcommittee heard a great deal about the progress that can be made if we keep supporting these programs in achieving energy independence and providing our citizens with a cleaner environment. I am particularly pleased that the bill increases funding for Energy Department conservation programs that can help our constituents reduce their household energy costs.

There were some disappointments. I am sorry that the bill provides no increase for the Arts and Humanities Endowments, despite the administration's excellent plan for new outreach and education programs at both those agencies. I am hoping we can correct that in an amendment.

I am sorry too the bill provides only a small fraction of the administration's request for its Lands Legacy programs. But these are good programs, and I hope that they could be improved upon in the final analysis.

Mr. Chairman, this is an excellent bill and our chairman and our ranking member deserve great credit for the way they have put it together.

I strongly believe we should acquire and protect critical lands for open space, recreation, and wildlife habitat while we can: I have seen to many lost opportunities in my own state. But I realize the funding constraints made full funding of Lands Legacy impossible. Finally, I regret that the bill does not include requested funding for the addition to the Roosevelt Memorial here in Washington that the last Congress authorized, but I hope that can be resolved soon.

I will be supporting several amendments that I believe would improve our bill, but again, I urge support for the bill itself.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), ranking Democrat on the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, a good friend.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) for yielding me this time. I know how precious it is during general debate; and I greatly appreciate it because there is a very important message that I want to share with my colleagues, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), chairman of the subcommittee, as well as the gentleman from Washington.

While the rest of America was heeding John Adams's appeal to celebrate the birth of our Nation with fireworks, Mother Nature went on a rampage of her own with fireworks of a different kind in the Boundary Waters Canoe area of Minnesota in my district.

Over the 4th of July with a storm packing 100-mile-an-hour winds that leveled 340,000 acres of the Boundary

Waters Canoe area, the Nation's largest water-based wilderness, 250,000 acres of lands, 21 million trees estimated down, 6 million cords, which is equal to the total wood supply, the total cut, for 2 years for the whole State of Minnesota.

We have an enormous fuel supply on the ground. Trees that began growing years before the Civil War were ripped out, flattened. Chain saws, 24-inch bar chain saws on either side of the tree cannot cut through them.

But the Forest Service did absolutely heroic service. I want to pay tribute to the Forest Service personnel who worked 18-hour days over several days to inspect 1,300 camp sites and rescue some 20 injured campers and free hundreds of others. There were 3,000 in the wilderness at the time.

I flew over the area on Sunday and observed a scene that perhaps the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) only can fully appreciate. It is like the aftermath of the Mount St. Helens' disaster where trees were just flattened, blasted. They are piled, in many cases, one on top of each other, 20 feet high. The line supervisor for the electric co-op said he walked a half mile in from the roadway to one of the sites to begin work on power restoration and never stepped on land the entire way, just walked on downed trees.

The Forest Service had been absolutely superb. The three rural electric co-ops have been magnificent. They have had their teams out there working 15- and 18-hour days, 35 hours the first few days.

There will be benefits for those areas outside the Boundary Waters. But inside the Boundary Waters, there are a number of Forest Service supply facilities. There is one that I have known about in the Kekekabic Trail. It has always been hidden from view. It now looks like the Little House on the Prairie. One cannot imagine the destruction until one sees it oneself.

The reason I raise this issue here is that there is no FEMA support for the Forest Service, no Federal agency benefits when a disaster declaration is made, which it will be made, I am confident, by the President. There is a disaster fund for the Department of Agriculture that may be available to bail out the Forest Service.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman REGULA).

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I am advised that they are using some of the rec. fee money for immediate solutions or assistance. The gentleman makes the point that we otherwise would be waiting, and this is a peak visitation time of year. So I am pleased that they are moving ahead and again serving the public, which was the objective of this program to begin with.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, but, ultimately, there is going to be a huge cost. We do not know what the extent of it is.

I raise the issue now to appeal to the leadership of the subcommittee that, by the time we get to conference, I am hoping my colleagues in the Senate will have the assessment, perhaps offer supplemental appropriations there to cover the cost for the Forest Service who are hiring people with money they do not have to serve time that is available now.

The resort community has lost a quarter of a million dollars business in the first 5 days. They do not have 100 feet of hiking trails opened for their visitors. The winter season is coming. We will not have cross country trails. We will not have snowmobile trails in the area outside the Boundary Waters unless the salvage work can begin promptly.

So, at the appropriate time, I appeal to the mercy and understanding of our colleagues to provide the additional funding. It will be in the few millions. It will not be in the billions or so that we have for Mount St. Helens, but it will be in the several millions.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to commend the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for his leadership, but I know of his great concern about the Boundary Waters in his area in Minnesota.

We also had another storm besides the incredible events at Mount St. Helens, the Columbus Day storm of 1962 when 8 billion board feet went down in both Washington and Oregon from an incredible storm. We have been there and seen that. In fact, that is how log exporting started in our country, because we had all this excess logs. We started exporting them to Japan and other countries. But we will be glad to work with the gentleman as we go through the process.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) and the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman REGULA) for their understanding.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such additional time as I may consume.

I want to talk about some positive things we observed during our visit to parks and forests in the Northwest. We saw a lot of volunteers there. I think one of the great stories of this bill and of our public lands is how many people, particularly senior citizens, volunteer their time.

One gentleman at Mount St. Helens who was telling the people all about what had happened there said he drove 60 miles each way every day to come up there and lecture, and he did a great job. He is doing this as a volunteer.

We are advised there are almost 300,000 people who volunteer their time, their energy and their knowledge serving in our public lands. I think that is a great story about the American people.

Secondly, in the number of visitors, we had over 1 billion 225 million visitor days in our public lands. I think this, too, illustrates how much the American people care about these lands.

Lastly, a little vignette that I observed at one of the places where they have the recreation fee demo program. They also had a place one could deposit some extra money if one chose to do so, and the jar was getting pretty well filled up, which said people are not only willing to pay a pretty modest fee, which they knew would stay in the parks or the forests or the wildlife refuges or BLM, as the case might be, but they also want to contribute some extra money.

So I think there are some really positive dimensions to this whole program in terms of how the American people feel about their public lands.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER), who has been a leader in this Congress on livability and particularly in the Columbia River Gorge where I had a chance to visit with him this last week.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Chairman, I commend the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman REGULA) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), the ranking member, because I think they started the debate with the proper tone. It is a 50-year vision, and it is just a starting point, I hope, for this Congress.

What the bill talks about today is fundamental infrastructure for livable communities. As we try and deal with the consequences of unplanned growth around the country, the stewardship of our public lands both in wilderness areas and what happens in our developed communities are more and more important.

I wanted to thank the committee for their hard work to diffuse some of the volatile legislative hot buttons, being able to provide at least a stable funding for the arts and minimize the toxic riders that have obscured the important debate that has attended this bill in the past.

Last week, it was my pleasure to watch the hard-working members of this subcommittee and their staff in our region of the Pacific Northwest. I am pleased that they had a chance to look firsthand at the Columbia River Gorge where I am convinced that each dollar that is invested will go further than any place else in America in protecting a critical legacy. We saw firsthand the impact of the subcommittee's efforts to try and make sure that we are maximizing resources and working creatively.

I think it is important that we allow the fee demo program to be able to work its way out and to look at the impacts. I hope that, in the words of the Chair and the ranking member, that what we are seeing here, although we will not be perhaps debating in heated form some amendments that may come forward, I hope that we will keep in mind what we are trying to do in terms of this being a starting point.

I am hopeful that this Congress will give the subcommittee the resources they need for today and tomorrow to be able to make the investment in protecting this legacy, not just for today but for the next half century.

I appreciate the hard work the committee has done and look forward to building upon it in the course of this Congress to be able to realize that vision.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. MCCARTHY), who I know has been a leader on historic preservation issues.

(Ms. MCCARTHY of Missouri asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. MCCARTHY of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my concerns about the funding levels in this bill for the National Endowment for the Arts. I am disappointed that this bill is substantially less than the President's budget request.

While I am pleased that the bill requires the NEA to give priority in granting funds for educational projects, I am particularly disappointed that the bill does not include funds for a new program, Challenge America, which includes arts education, youth-at-risk programs, cultural heritage preservation, and community arts partnerships.

As a former schoolteacher, I believe that a key solution to youth violence and a key component to youth development is access to the arts in schools. If we are serious about curtailing youth violence, it is imperative that adequate funding be provided to bring music and art to our children.

If the Challenge America program is funded, state arts agencies would receive 40 percent of these funds, and at least 1,000 communities nationwide will benefit.

Research has shown that arts programs can have a very positive effect on our youth, helping to increase academic achievement and decrease delinquent behavior.

Children who are exposed to arts perform 30 percent better academically. High-risk elementary students who participated in an arts program for 1 year gained 8 percentile points on standardized language arts tests.

The Smart Symphonies program initiated by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences provides free CDs of classical music for infants in response to findings that show, among other things, that early exposure to classical music increases a child's ability to learn math and science.

In Missouri's fifth district, the Young Audiences Arts Partners Program integrates community arts resources into the curriculum of participating school districts, with a focus on not only teaching students to appreciate the arts, but also on talking about issues that the arts raise in healthy, nonjudgmental ways.

Let us make a commitment to our children to provide them with the tools they need to be responsible citizens in a democracy, to make good, informed choices, to live in peace with their neighbors and coworkers, and to enjoy life to its fullest. Let us begin to show our commitment to our children by prioritizing funding for the arts and encouraging arts programs in our schools and communities.

Later in the debate, Mr. Chairman, an amendment will be offered to increase funding for the NEA, and I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS).

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) for yielding me this time, and I congratulate the chairman and the ranking member for their work on this important piece of legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to call attention to an amendment that I will be offering along with the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. LEWIS) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) later on in this bill.

That amendment deals with the issue of payment in lieu of taxes. As my colleagues know, Mr. Chairman, there are some 1,800 counties throughout the United States that have land in them that is owned by the Federal Government. Over the years, the Federal Government has not kept faith with these communities and has not paid a fair payment in lieu of taxes.

In the Congress, especially in recent years, we have been hearing a lot of discussion about what is called devolution, more respect, more authority for local counties and local towns. It seems to me that if we are sincere about respecting our States and our towns that we should be fair with them in terms of providing them the payment in lieu of taxes that they need.

So I would hope that, when this amendment comes up, which affects some 1,800 communities in America, it affects some 49 States, and it is an amendment similar to one that won here on the floor of the House last year, that we will once again support it.

It is unfair, it seems to me, to take advantage of communities all over this country, force them to inadequately fund their infrastructure, education, the services they provide their people because the Federal Government is not properly paying the in lieu of tax payments that it should.

I urge support of this amendment when it appears later.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD).

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Washington

(Mr. DICKS), the ranking member, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the provision within H.R. 2466 which provides Guam with an increase of $5 million for Compact Impact aid for next year. I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for their support on this issue.

This $5 million is very much needed for Guam, and it should be understood that it is really a kind of reimbursement for the cost of unrestricted migration to Guam as a result of U.S. Compact agreements with the Federated States of Micronesia and the Republic of the Marshall Islands.

For nearly 10 years, financial costs have totaled well over $70 million, and this year we have $4.5 million and we want to increase it by $5 million to $10 million. This helps defray the costs because the actual cost per year to Guam is around $15 to $20 million.

We take the responsibility of helping out our island neighbors seriously, and it is not a wrong thing to do, because it is a Federal responsibility. I know that in the upcoming debate there will be a point of order raised against this issue, and I very much ask all of my colleagues to consider the importance of this issue for a very small jurisdiction and the ultimate fairness of getting the Federal Government to be responsible, even though it only compensates for about half of the costs associated with this issue.

There was no effort on my part to attempt to divert funding from other territories for this issue; but in the final analysis, when we suggested other alternatives, this was the only one that seemed appropriate at the time. I am hoping that in conference all the issues related to territorial issues will be resolved, because there are a number of unmet funding needs that all of the small insular areas have to deal with, and I urge every consideration that the voting Members of this House can give to those who represent districts who cannot vote in this body.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to thank our distinguished Chairman for his commitment to the natural resources and national treasures of America. Chairman REGULA, his committee and staff have all worked tirelessly to present the legislation before us and they deserve our gratitude for their fine efforts.

In particular, I want to thank the Chairman for his personal attention to the maintenance needs of the Uwharrie National Forest. My constituents in the eighth district, as well as the thousands of frequent users from all over North Carolina, can look forward to safer, cleaner and better recreational experiences at the Uwharrie.

Again, I appreciate the time and thought put into this bill and to the Chairman's commitment to preserving the beauty of our nation.

Ms. MCCARTHY of Missouri. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding and for all his efforts on this measure. I request unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my concerns about the funding levels in the bill for the National Endowment for the Arts. I'm disappointed that this bill is substantially less than the President's budget request.

While I am pleased that the bill requires the NEA to give priority in granting funds for educational projects, I'm particularly disappointed that the bill does not include funds for a new program, Challenge America, which includes arts education, youth-at-risk programs, cultural heritage preservation, and community arts partnerships.

As a former school teacher, I believe that a key solution to youth violence and key component to youth development is access to the arts in schools. If we're serious about curtailing youth violence, it is imperative that adequate funding be provided to bring music and art to our children. If the Challenge America program is funded, state arts agencies would receive 40 percent of these funds, and at least 1,000 communities nationwide will benefit.

Research has shown that arts programs can have a very positive impact on our youth, helping to increase academic achievement and decreasing delinquent behavior. The YouthARTS Development Project is the result of a three-year collaborative effort of the Regional Arts and Culture Council of Portland, Oregon; the San Antonio Department of Arts and Cultural Affairs of San Antonio, Texas; and the Fulton County Arts Council of Atlanta, Georgia; and Americans for the Arts of Washington, DC. YouthARTS is funded in part by the NEA, and the program is implemented through local partners across the country.

The goals of YouthARTS include defining the critical elements and "best practices of arts programs designed for at-risk youth populations, strengthening collaborative relationships among local and federal partners, and leveraging increased funding for at-risk youth programs. YouthARTS has already conducted extensive research, which has shown that arts programs really can have an impact on youth, including increasing academic achievement and decreasing delinquent behavior. Perhaps the most amazing change occurred in Portland, where, at the beginning of the program, less than half of the youth were able to cooperate with their peers, but after participating in the arts program, 100% of these same youth were able to cooperate, and approximately one third of the participants reported a more favorable attitude toward school after participating. In Atlanta, 25% of youth who participated in the arts program reported a more favorable attitude toward school than they did before they began the program, and 50% reported a decrease in their delinquent behaviors. In San Antonio, more than 16% of the youth participating reported a decrease in delinquent behaviors.

Additional studies show that children who are exposed to the arts perform 30% better academically. High risk elementary students who participated in an arts program for one year gained 8 percentile points on standardized language arts tests. The Smart Symphonies program initiated by the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences (NARAS) provides free CD's of classical music for infants in response to findings that show, among other things that early exposure to classical music increases a child's ability to learn math and science.

munity arts resources into the curriculum of participating school districts, with a focus on not only teaching students to appreciate the arts, but also on talking about issues that the arts raise in healthy, nonjudgmental ways. Let us make a commitment to our children to provide them with the tools they need to be responsible citizens in a democracy—to make good, informed choices; to live in peace with their neighbors and coworkers; and to enjoy life to the fullest extent possible. Let us begin to show our commitment to our children by prioritizing funding for the Arts and encouraging Arts programs in our school and communities.

Later in the debate, an amendment will be offered to increase funding for the NEA and I urge my colleagues to support this amendment offered by the Gentlewoman from New York.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 2466, the Department of Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations for fiscal year 2000.

My support of this legislation is somewhat of a precedent. Too often in recent years in this House, I have been forced not only to speak out in opposition to this important appropriation bill but to actively work to defeat the legislation. Whether it be the riders, non-authorized funding for pet projects, or major policy debates over logging roads and the future of the Northwest temperate rain forests, the Interior Appropriations have annually been a magnet to controversy and the inclusion of extraneous provisions. Fortunately, this legislation has avoided most of those fatal flaws. It isn't always money. But this Interior Appropriations Bill has culminated in a super-imposed un-touchable and unacceptable bad policy in recent years. This year's bill is a much better result to this hour.

Such success is due to the bipartisan leadership of Chairman REGULA and Ranking Member DICKS. Under their leadership, the Committee has been able to forestall such controversial riders and policy provisions. Hopefully, that success will continue through today's floor action. A strong vote of support by this House will only strengthen the hands of the conferees in dealing with the inevitable add-ons of the Senate.

While I do support H.R. 2466, the bill does have several deficiencies. The principal shortfall is the anemic funding level provided in this legislation for many important programs. I recognize that this flaw is the result of the spending caps in law that afflict all domestic discretionary programs. The decision by the majority party to bleed dry these programs is a short-sighted decision that will undermine our national conservation efforts in the long run. While some seek to score political points in this legislation, the price of any rhetorical victories will be continued degradation of our national parks, forests and rangelands. Such continued degradation is a tragic political decision that will be exacerbated by the Chairman's amendment to cut an additional $138 million, 50% aimed at vital components of land management program and BLM land acquisition funding.

Today, this Body will have the opportunity to improve the legislation through the adoption of significant amendments. Such amendments include Mr. MILLER's of California, that will provide $4 million for the Urban Park and Recreation Recovery Program (UPARR) and Mr.

McGOVERN's amendment that will fund the state component of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. These programs, UPARR, LWCF, Emergency Energy Assistance Authorization, the Sanders Amendment, which tries to improve the Energy Assistance Program, are proven initiatives that provide crucial matching funds for local communities to improve and expand public recreational programs and facilities. With tight budgetary restraints, recreational program funding at all levels of government has suffered year after year. As a result, local parks and playgrounds are falling into disrepair and recreational programs are being closed. Those decisions are unfortunate. While our National Park System is our nation's crown jewels, our local park systems are our local family heirlooms. Our national parks are the place where traditions and memories are made and treasured. Local/State open spaces are the home to family picnics, youth soccer and baseball games, family nature hikes and the local concerts. They are the glue that bind our communities and families together. For this reason, President Clinton sought full funding of the LWCF/HPF within the context of the Lands Legacy Initiative 2000. To date, this initiative has unfortunately been sidetracked today's appropriation measure underlines the absolute need to set aside these funds in a trust fund provisions in this measure that are less than one-third the commitment and promise existing in law.

Today, our local parks and recreation programs are more important than ever. Just last month, the House debated the juvenile justice measure seeking punitive actions increasing penalties for juveniles who break the law. Today some amendments give us an opportunity to vote for youth crime prevention. At a time when Congress is acting on policy to put more kids in jail, it's high time we provide recreational opportunities and put more kids in youth sports, arts and other after-school programs and crime prevention activities that positively address the delinquency issue.

Unfortunately, the Committee chose to so inadequately fund the President's Lands Legacy Initiative. This new proposal would be a solid down payment on protecting and preserving our nation's critical lands. It is an initiative which should enjoy bipartisan support and provides a transition basis to rectify the current deficiencies in existing appropriation acts, that continue in this measure.

Mr. Chairman, I had the privilege of serving in this Body with Mo Udall. As Chair of the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, Mo would speak eloquently of our stewardship responsibility to pass on America's natural lands and resources to future generations in as good a condition as we inherited it. This bill takes modest steps to achieve that goal but we can and should do better.

Hopefully by the end of the cycle this year we will be doing be.

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Chairman, this Member rises today to express his great appreciation to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), chairman of the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee, and the distinguished gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), the Ranking Member on the Subcommittee, and to all members of the Subcommittee for the inclusion of a $10 million appropriation for the first phase of construction for a replacement Indian Health Service (IHS) hospital located in Winnebago, Nebraska, to serve the Winnebago and Omaha tribes. Of course, the Subcommittee is already well-aware of the ongoing situation with this hospital. Indeed, last year the Subcommittee kept the process going by including funds to complete the design phase of the project for which this Member and Native Americans in the three state region are very grateful. Now, construction dollars are needed.

Unfortunately, the Office of Management and Budget overruled Indian Health Service's FY2000 budget request for the first phase of construction, so there was no request by the Administration. Once the design is completed, it is important to begin funding for the first phase of construction without a delay. If there is a time lapse between completion of design and construction, it is very possible that costs will increase, making this project more expensive. That is why this appropriation action at this time is so critical.

In closing Mr. Chairman, this Member wishes to acknowledge and express his most sincere appreciation for the extraordinary assistance that Chairman REGULA, the Subcommittee, and the Subcommittee staff have provided thus far on this important project.

Mr. MCKEON. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to congratulate Mr. REGULA, the Chairman of the Interior Appropriations Subcommittee, for his fine work on this legislation. However, I would also like to pay tribute to a provision within this legislation on the Pacific Crest Trail.

The Pacific Crest Trail is a marvelous stretch of land that runs from California, through Oregon, and into Washington state. Established in 1968, this trail operates over 2,650 miles with a large portion of that land owned by the Federal government through the Park Service, Forest Service, or BLM. However, nearly 300 miles of this trail are located on simple right-of-passage easements across public land or along public highways. The land along the highways, it should be noted, were never intended as permanent routes and today have become extremely hazardous for users of the trail.

It should also be noted that during the last 20 years, Congress has appropriated more than $200 million to the Park Service to acquire private land for the Appalachian Trail, an effort that is now complete. During this same time period, the Pacific Crest Trail, managed by the Forest Service, has received a fraction of that amount for land acquisition. As I stated earlier, the 300 miles of trail that run along dangerous throughways are the result of this failure.

I am pleased to announce that Chairman REGULA has agreed with many of my California Colleagues that this trail needs to become a priority. I am pleased that he saw fit to include a line-item of $1.5 million for this project in the Interior Appropriations Act. I am more pleased that the report language included will leave no doubt in anyone's mind of the importance that this project now holds.

I would like to thank Chairman REGULA on behalf of myself, my constituents, the many users of the Pacific Crest Trail for his leadership on this important issue.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The amendment printed in House Report 106-228 may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered read, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chair may accord priority in recognition to a Member offering an amendment that he has printed in the designated place in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Those amendments will be considered read.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may postpone a demand for a recorded vote on any amendment and may reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the time for voting on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote, provided that the time for voting on the first question shall be a minimum of 15 minutes.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, namely:

TITLE I—DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

BUREAU OF LAND MANAGEMENT
MANAGEMENT OF LANDS AND RESOURCES

For expenses necessary for protection, use, improvement, development, disposal, cadastral surveying, classification, acquisition of easements and other interests in lands, and performance of other functions, including maintenance of facilities, as authorized by law, in the management of lands and their resources under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Land Management, including the general administration of the Bureau, and assessment of mineral potential of public lands pursuant to Public Law 96-487 (16 U.S.C. 3150(a)), $632,068,000, to remain available until expended, of which $2,147,000 shall be available for assessment of the mineral potential of public lands in Alaska pursuant to section 1010 of Public Law 96-487 (16 U.S.C. 3150); and of which not to exceed $1,000,000 shall be derived from the special receipt account established by the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, as amended (16 U.S.C. 4601-6a(i)); and of which $2,500,000 shall be available in fiscal year 2000 subject to a match by at least an equal amount by the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, to such Foundation for cost-shared projects supporting conservation of Bureau lands and such funds shall be advanced to the Foundation as a lump sum grant without regard to when expenses are incurred; in addition, $33,529,000 for Mining Law Administration program operations, including the cost of administering the mining claim fee program; to remain available until expended, to be reduced by amounts collected by the Bureau and credited to this appropriation from annual mining claim fees so as to result in a final appropriation estimated at not more than $632,068,000, and $2,000,000, to remain available until expended, from communication site rental fees established by the Bureau for the cost of administering communication site activities, and of which $2,500,000, to remain available until expended, for coalbed methane Applications for Permits to Drill in the Powder River Basin:

Provided, That unless there is a written agreement in place between the coal mining operator and a gas producer, the funds available herein shall not be used to process or approve coalbed methane Applications for Permits to Drill for well sites that are located within an area, which as of the date of the coalbed methane Application for Permit to Drill, are covered by: (1) a coal lease, (2) a coal mining permit, or (3) an application for a coal mining lease: Provided further, That appropriations herein made shall not be available for the destruction of healthy, unadopted, wild horses and burros in the care of the Bureau or its contractors.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MR. MCGOVERN

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 6 offered by Mr. MCGOVERN:

Page 2, line 13, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $1,000,000)".

Page 3, line 8, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $1,000,000)".

Page 19, line 16, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $30,000,000)".

Page 69, line 14, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $29,000,000)".

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer an amendment to restore $30 million in funding to the State-side program of the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

I know that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) and I disagree on this issue, but I want to thank him for his continuing graciousness as we take up debate on this important issue, and I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL), and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) for cosponsoring this amendment and for their commitment to preserving open space.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund has a proven track record and strong bipartisan support. It is based on a simple idea, that the receipts from nonrenewal public resources, like offshore oil and gas, should be reinvested into a renewable resource: public open space.

Now a trust fund was established over 30 years ago to meet the need for more open space. In that time, tens of thousands of park and recreation projects across the country have been funded. Ball fields, scenic trails, nature preserves, and historical sites all have been saved for future generations.

Unfortunately, in recent years, Congress has chosen to walk away from its commitment to States and local communities. While the Federal funding of the LWCF, which protects Federal lands, has been funded, the State-side program has been zeroed out. By failing to fund the State-side program, we are walking away from an important promise. This amendment proposes to help rectify that mistake by redirecting $30 million in the bill to the National Park Service for the purpose of funding the State-side program.

This amendment offsets this modest step by reducing funding for the Energy Department's fossil energy research and development by $29 million and for the Bureau of Land Management's transportation facilities and maintenance by $1 million. Frankly, Mr. Chairman, we should be arguing for much more than $30 million. It would take literally hundreds of millions of dollars to restore the trust in the trust fund and gives States what they are owed. All we are asking today is a modest step in the right direction.

Critics will argue that the States should take up the slack, that they should fund these projects by themselves. After all, many States have large surpluses, so why should they not foot the entire bill? I would point out the States have been and will be part of the State-side program. The program is a partnership, as States and towns match every Federal dollar.

By passing this amendment, we will urge States to use more of their own money to fund these vitals projects; we will help those States leverage money; we can help get open space preservation off the drawing boards.

That is why State and local officials across the country support the State-side program. Those opposed to this amendment should ask their governor, their mayor, their city counselor, their town manager if they support the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Ask them if they could use a little Federal help in preserving parks and open space.

Last year 10 States, 22 counties, and 93 towns voted on open-space initiatives. Almost 90 percent of these initiatives passed, triggering over $5 billion in preservation spending. Clearly, America is saying something. It is time that Congress listens.

We have all talked about issues of sprawl and livable communities. We have all seen, often in our own congressional districts, space that was once open and green converted into a strip mall or a housing development.

Now is the time to do something about it. Kids in cities need safe green places to play in. Without safe, healthy parks they go home to school and back without ever interacting with a natural area, a few trees, some grass, and a place to explore.

Unused open space in a rural area is nature. Unused open space in a city is a vacant lot with garbage, glass, dirty needles, and crime. In the suburbs, family farms and woodland are being paved over, succumbing to the ravenous appetite of sprawl and development.

Time is running out. For every year we walk away from funding the State-side program, another park disappears, another open field vanishes, another healthy green space is lost forever.

This amendment, as I said, is supported by every major environmental organization in the country. It is supported by our Nation's governors, it is supported by our Nation's mayors, it is supported by the National Association of Realtors. That speaks clearly to the broad support enjoyed by the State-side program.

I urge my colleagues to support this bipartisan effort to reinstate the State-side program of the Land and Water Conservation Fund and to support a healthier environment for us all.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, we have to rise and object to this amendment. We are faced with $15 billion in backlog maintenance in our parks, in our forests, and our other Federal agencies. In 1999 every State had a surplus. All States have a surplus. Forty-nine States had a surplus in 1998. It seems to me it is time for them to measure up in meeting their own needs.

The fact of the matter is they probably ought to send us some money to support our parks, because every national park, every national forest, every fish and wildlife facility, every BLM is in a State, and it is providing recreation. It is providing all kinds of benefits for the people of these States, and I think these facilities need additional support. The States should accept responsibility.

I can remember when there was a State-side program. A lot of the money went into golf courses, marinas, swimming pools, tennis courts, and other facilities of that type. I do not think it is the Federal responsibility to fund these programs for the States. They should meet their own needs. They have the money to do it with.

Thirteen States had a surplus in excess of $1 billion in 1998. Twenty-one States had a surplus in excess of 10 percent over their annual funding. One State has three times what it needs to manage its annual budget. Yet here we are talking about sending out some of the desperately needed money that we should use for additional land acquisition, where we have inholdings in our parks; to meet the maintenance needs of our parks; to do a responsible job of managing these parks.

For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, I think that the States should take their own responsibility and use their surplus funds to meet their needs, because many of these programs are coordinated with the Federal facilities, and certainly it is something that they have the resources to do that with. The responsible position on this amendment is to vote "no," to retain these funds for the Federal challenges that we have.

And, of course, the offset is fossil energy. This is an important program. The fossil energy program guarantees our future in terms of energy. Just this week it was announced that the price of gasoline was going up. How do we know there will not be another OPEC crisis? In this bill we are trying to provide the resources to DOE to ensure that that does not happen. If the States are to continue that kind of prosperity that is giving them these huge balances, they need to have a strong economy. A strong economy is built on energy all across the board. And to take a bite out of fossil energy research is certainly shortsighted in this day and age, because we have no idea what the needs will be.

Our energy programs are not only useful in terms of developing new techniques to use the resources we have, coal, natural gas, and the other types of energy that is part of the ownership of the United States, but these programs also generate jobs in the United States because we sell this technology to other countries. China, with 1.2 billion people is very energetically trying to get into the 21st century, and they need power. They need to use their coal resources. They will buy the technology that we develop in our fossil programs. That is good for America and good for jobs.

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman mentioned we take a bite out of the fossil fuel research and development account. My bill takes $29 million from an account that is in excess of $360 million. That is 8 percent, $30 million to go to help preserve parks, to help preserve ball fields and recreational areas for our kids in cities and suburban areas.

We all talk about livable communities, and $30 million is not that much. Quite frankly, as I said, we should be asking for much more than that, given the promise this Congress made to the American people.

Mr. REGULA. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is right, it is not that much. Spread over 50 States, it would barely make a dent. About all we would get done is hire the people to administer the funds. I think it is unrealistic to think about $30 million, and yet it would cripple some of these important fossil programs.

Furthermore, we have to take care of the maintenance of what we have. We have a Federal responsibility. These funds are generated from Federal lands.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. REGULA was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, these are funds are generated beyond the 3 mile limit offshore. The States get the revenues from their own State lands, and they get the revenues from the first 3 miles from offshore.

We asked the National Governors Association to tell us how much the States collect in revenues from their own lands, and they would not tell us. They did not want us to know because that would be something that would not be terribly attractive when they are trying to get their hand in the Federal till.

But I also might point out that the States now get over $600 million that they share with the Federal Government on royalties and payments to counties and so on. So keep in mind we are already doing a lot, and that coupled with their own State funds from their lands is more than the Land and Water Conservation Fund in total.

Mr. McGOVERN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, $30 million may not sound like a lot of money to some people in this chamber here, but it means a lot to some of the communities.

We are talking about towns trying to acquire land that may be only a couple hundred thousand dollars. And every State under this bill would get some money. The State of Ohio would get close to $1 million. That money would mean a lot to a lot of communities trying to protect open space and park land.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I rise in support of the interior appropriations bill and in support of this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), the chairman of the committee; the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), the ranking member; and the members of the subcommittee have done an excellent job on the bill, and I applaud them for their efforts.

I am also pleased to join my colleagues, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. McGOVERN), the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL), and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL), in support of our amendment to offer additional funding for the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

We in New Jersey see firsthand the benefits of natural resource protection. The citizens of my State have used our collective wisdom, I hope, to voluntarily preserve 40 percent, let me repeat, 40 percent of our land by the year 2010. The Garden State has a national reputation for making consistent efforts to preserve and protect our natural resources.

Between 1961 and 1995, New Jersey voters approved bond issues totaling more than $1.4 billion to acquire 390,000 acres of open space to preserve historic sites and to develop parks. Last November, there was overwhelming voter approval of a $1 billion open-space initiative.

Local citizens not only in New Jersey but on a national level keep making the argument that we are losing open lands to housing complexes, to shopping centers and that we need to do something to save our open spaces.

Today, we continue the fight to revitalize the Federal portion of the open space partnership. The Land and Water Conservation Fund, or what has been called the "cornerstone of American conservation and recreation," should be strengthened.

Our Nation is enjoying tremendous benefits from the LWCF. Since 1965, the LWCF programs have provided New Jersey with over $145 million in matching funds to acquire open space and develop recreational facilities.

America's favorite park is not one of those big parks somewhere else. America's favorite park is the neighborhood park that America can get to.

For example, the Land and Water Conservation Fund supported the first county park to open in Hudson County, New Jersey, in nearly 80 years. It also helped us add nearly 650 acres to Jenny Jump State Forest and to develop Liberty State Park, one of our Nation's most historic attractions.

These tremendous benefits do not stop in New Jersey. LWCF is doing wonderful things across the country. We can make preserving our open spaces a priority, but we need to preserve land. And the need to preserve land exceeds the supply of State and local funds. That is why we must restore the Stateside funding for LWCF. It would help us to acquire lands across the United States that are truly of national significance, from our precious coastal areas in California to the New Jersey highlands region.

It would help our Nation continue to develop urban waterfront parks, a vital part of restoring cities. And each State's growing partnership in preservation with local governments and nonprofit agencies would benefit from a restored Stateside allocation.

Across the United States, local governments are leading the way in the preservation of lands and natural resources, but they need Federal help to build on and complement what the States are already doing. This money could be used to protect our Nation's shorelines, to reduce pollution, to preserve open land, to increase recreational opportunities, and to maintain wildlife.

We are doing our part in New Jersey. Now we are asking that the Federal Government join us in our partnership by restoring Stateside funding for LWCF.

New Jersey's commitment to open space protection has helped increase awareness for environmental concerns throughout the country. We must take action today to protect open space and to provide outdoor recreation facilities across the Nation.

I ask my colleagues to support the McGovern-Campbell-Hoeffel-Holt amendment for Stateside funding of the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, here is the story: The money comes from a fund. The fund was created out of the leases on offshore oil. And a compromise was worked out. The compromise was in 1965. The compromise said, since there is serious environmental questions about offshore oil leases, nevertheless, there is a serious energy need. We are going to allow those offshore leases outside the State boundaries, but the money is going to go to create, maintain, preserve environmentally sensitive areas both on the coast and elsewhere.

That was the compromise. That was the quid pro quo which led to the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

The problem was that the exact expression of the compromise was not written into law and, as so often happens in the Congress of the United States, understandings that were reached at one time that were not reduced to the precise words of the statute were forgotten. As happened ever since we began the process of using trust funds to fund our deficit, the Land and Water Conservation Fund built up; and year after year, we used it just like we did the Social Security trust fund, to make the deficit seem smaller.

That is the story. That is what has been happening.

Now, we are all very proud of the fact that we might be coming to a point where we need not actually any longer borrow from the Social Security trust fund. In fact, we still do borrow from it. I think all of us remember last year we dealt with the borrowings from the Highway Construction trust fund and we said that was wrong, we should not continue to borrow from that trust fund for general revenue purposes to make the deficit seem smaller.

And any colleagues will remember that this year we finally got around to deal with the Airport trust fund, the fund that was created out of the fees charged to airline passengers that that money would not simply be used as a general slush fund to make the deficit seem smaller but that, in each case, we would use the money that we raised from the American people for the purpose that we said we were intending it when we imposed the tax or the charge or the fee in the first place.

So if that is the Social Security, we will put it away in a lock box for social security purposes only. If that is the Airport trust fund, it would only be used for improvements in safety in airports. If it is the gas tax, it would only be used for improvements of our interstate highway system and those systems that connect to it. In other words, keep the promise.

In the Land and Water Conservation Fund, we have not kept the promise. This fund generates over $900 million each year, this year in particular, and yet we are allocating just over $200 million for its intended purpose, the acquisition and the preservation of Federal lands.

At this point, I should say, and I should have said at the very start, I have nothing but the highest regard for the chairman of the subcommittee. He has always been very honest and forthright in his dealings with me. And I know that he personally would like to see more money available for the Federal component of preservation, acquisition, enhancement of our natural treasures.

I agree with the chairman that we are underfunding our parks and maintenance thereof. I totally agree with him. I just wish we could find more money for that purpose. But what I do not think is right is to continue a process of using money raised for one purpose for another in order to make the deficit seem smaller. We should not be borrowing, essentially, $700 million out of the $900 million that are raised from these offshore oil lifting fees for purposes that were never intended. They are going into the general revenue.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to my good friend, the chairman of the subcommittee to engage him in a colloquy if he would like.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I would say to my colleague, he understands that we have a moratorium on drilling in the Federal waters offshore California that would normally be generating these revenues?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I do.

Mr. REGULA. So I think it is a little bit out of place in a sense for California to want this money.

But, aside from that, am I correct, this is not limited to the purchase of land by the States? They could build marinas. They could build swimming pools. They could build tennis courts.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time just to respond, if my colleague believes in federalism, the States should control the priorities set for the resources devoted to the States.

I quite agree with the point of the gentleman that there ought to have been dedication of some of this money, if not all of it, to the Federal side. But I did not control the amendment this year. This year the amendment is a very small one.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. CAMPBELL was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA).

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I think the point the gentleman made, it is the "Land and Water Conservation Fund." Conservation includes taking care of maintenance. It means conserving the resources. We are using the money in this way. We did not use all of it to buy land, but we use it for conservation of our national resources.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, if I may put a question to the gentleman in return. If I have this wrong, I stand ready to be corrected.

Is it not true that the fund raises $900 million?

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, that is correct.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, and yet we are only devoting in the bill of the gentleman $205 million to this intended purpose?

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, that is correct. But we are also spending a lot of money on maintenance and conservation, which was part of the intent.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, I believe the gentleman has very good purposes for the money. I just do not think it is the purpose intended in setting up this system.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund was to preserve, to acquire, to maintain special land as a quid pro quo for allowing the lifting fee. And when we use it for other intended purposes, it is no different than using the Social Security trust fund or the Airport trust fund or the Highway trust fund.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I think it depends on the definition of the gentleman of "conservation."

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Chairman, I rise to strike the requisite number of words and speak in opposition to the amendment.

First of all, Mr. Chairman, we are not against livable space; and we are not against parks. We wish that the authors of this amendment would have sat down and talked to some us who come from areas where fossil fuel is important, and we could have had a discussion with the authors to try to determine how we might have accommodated what they want to accomplish without hurting something that is incredibly important not only to our States and to our region but to this country and, in fact, to the world.

In December of 1997, I was in Kyoto when we passed the Kyoto agreement. I was not in favor of that agreement. I thought that we had made some errors. But I talked to some people from around the world that said, we need cleaner technology; we like what you are doing with cleaner coal technology; we like some of the things are you doing; there is a marketplace out there.

This committee has had to cut fossil energy research by over 20 percent in the past 4 years. To make further cuts at a time when the world is looking to us for new technologies so we can have cleaner air and more fuel efficiency is an irresponsible act.

The United States has large quantities of crude oil within our borders. I can remember the gas lines back in 1973, and I can remember the gas lines in 1979 during those Arab oil embargoes. For every barrel of oil that we produce in this country, we leave two barrels behind in the ground. We need to develop the technology.

I heard somebody mention earlier that we are only talking about 9 or 10 percent of the budget. I have not been in Washington, D.C., long enough to put the word "only" in front of $30 million. This $30 million would be crippling to what we are trying to do.

We just had the EPA saying that we are going to go to a particulate matter standard of 2.5 microns. That is going to require an even greater reduction in sulfur and nitrogen emissions. It is just a matter of fact. We have entire regions of our Nation, entire communities, where the workers who developed that coal, who mine that coal, who brought that oil out of the ground have given us cheap energy to build the economy that we have today. And now the authors of this amendment are causing us to say, because we do not want the States to be partially responsible for more livable space and for more park space and for reclamation of land, that we are going to tell those areas, the heck with you. You have already given us that cheap technology. We are walking away from you, we are turning our back, and we are going to take 10 percent of your money, and we are going to move it over here without having that discussion.

The electric utilities have already made dramatic reductions in their emissions. Sulfur pollutants have been cut in half from the 1990 levels. Our coal reserves in this country are equal to one trillion barrels of oil. At current consumption rates, we can fuel our economy for the next 250 years. Coal is the Nation's most affordable fuel for power generation. It is why the U.S. has the least expensive electricity of any free-market country. We do not want to have to balance livable space and park space and who is responsible for it against a significant portion of that research dollars. And, again, that is what the authors of this amendment are asking us to do.

DOE's research and partnership with industry has focused on technologies that permit us to use the full potential of fossil fuels without damaging the environment.

Some of us who come from, and I hate sometimes to use the word "rustbelt," but for those of us who come from the Northeast and the Midwest where we lost tremendous numbers of jobs, areas where coal was mined, where oil was discovered, where the coal industry and the steel industry have gone down and people have been laid off by the tens of thousands, indeed hundreds of thousands, we are trying to balance reclamation of those brownfield sites, reclamation of those inner city areas that could be used as parks, with the creation of jobs, with the keeping of jobs.

They are causing us now to make Sophie's choice, to decide whether or not we want to be able to reclaim those sites, whether we want to be able to promote livable space, and whether we want to kill what is left of those blue-collar industries that are still in our area.

We still, fortunately, mine some coal in Pennsylvania. We would like to be able to have more fossil fuel R&D so that we can continue to produce more coal and we can find a market for it.

□ 1630

As the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) said, and I associate myself with his remarks, we want to create future jobs of showing the world how they can better use those carbon-based fuels, whether it is oil, whether it is natural gas, whether it is coal, we can take that technology and again creating a lot more jobs and new technologies here based on these old technologies.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KLINK. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. I thank the gentleman for yielding. It just struck me that we visited Mount St. Helens last week and they said that some of the ash from that disaster went all the way around the world and came back to Mount St. Helens. That illustrates how pollution travels worldwide. The point the gentleman makes is absolutely correct.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. KLINK) has expired.

(On request of Mr. REGULA, and by unanimous consent, Mr. KLINK was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, it is not just the United States that needs clean energy technology but that the rest of the world have it because otherwise we pay the price along with their own people.

Mr. KLINK. I thank the gentleman. Reclaiming my time, I just want to make a few points.

The kind of research that is taking place with these dollars that they want to shift over, it is not that their program is not important but we are talking about research that would reduce pollutants to 10 times below current Federal requirements, that would boost power plant efficiency to almost double what today's capabilities are, from 33 to 60 percent, so that one power plant of the future can do the work of two of the world's power plants today.

If Members want to burn less coal, if they do not want to have to look at building more nuclear power plants and doing other things that may be distasteful, let us continue that kind of research. I just think that we could find a better way to do this. I think it is unfortunate the offset, again that you are making us take Sophie's choice. I would request and ask all of the Members that are listening to this, Mr. Chairman, to vote "no" on this amendment.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment has a very simple purpose, to revive the State portion of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Under State law, law that has been in effect for 35 years, States are supposed to get a portion of revenues from offshore oil drilling to use for recreation and conservation projects. This amendment is a first step toward fulfilling that commitment which has been ignored over the past several years.

But this is not just a matter of fulfilling a commitment made to the States and the public when we allowed offshore oil drilling. This amendment would revive a program that had a proven track record of providing recreational facilities for millions of American families. This is a program that truly improved the quality of life.

There is no shortage of appropriate opportunities for using this money. Every State has a backlog of projects that has been piling up in anticipation of this money being restored. These projects will provide parks and playgrounds and preserve sensitive lands that otherwise would be subject to development.

The momentum for reviving the State portion of the Land and Water Conservation Fund has been growing this year as more Members have learned about the good that has come from this program. My own Commissioner of Parks and Recreation, Bernadette Castro, of New York, has been a real leader in the effort. The various bills to take the program off-budget and guarantee it a stream of funding are evidence of that newfound support. But those bills will not come up for some time and will probably not provide any money next year. We need to act now.

I do not envy the plight of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) who is dealing with a difficult hand because there are so many restrictions on what he can do. I would like to, if I could wave a magic wand, give him and the subcommittee more money to deal with, because I think they deal with it in a very responsible way. But this is a long-standing commitment. This is just an entry to restore a program that has served a very useful purpose.

We talk a lot about family values. What is more important to the family than having these magnificent parks and recreational areas so that they together can enjoy a good life.

I urge support of the amendment. I want to thank the chairman and the subcommittee for being very thoughtful and deliberative in the process. I would point out to the distinguished gentleman that there are some who want to do away entirely with the clean coal technology program under the theory that if we do away with it, that is environmentally responsible because we are dealing with fossil fuels and we all know that they pollute a lot. I am not one who subscribes to that. I have worked with the gentleman as he well knows to protect the clean coal technology program and constantly improve it under the theory that if we have cleaner burning coal in the future, we are going to have a cleaner, healthier, safer environment for all of us.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Does the gentleman have any evidence that any of these 50 States that have surplus balances have given some money to the local communities to build their tennis courts and swimming pools and marinas?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I only can say, reclaiming my time, what the Governor of the great State of New York, George Pataki, has done. He went to the people of the State of New York and asked them, he put his name and credibility on the line and he got passed, the voters passed, a $1.75 billion environmental bond issue. That bond issue is used for a whole host of very worthy projects within the State of New York that helps improve the quality of life.

I just want to have this money which is earmarked for a specific purpose, a portion of it used for that specific purpose, because I think the families of America deserve improved parks, I know that is one of the gentleman's primary objectives, and recreational areas. I think we can make a dent in it by what we do here by voting for this very important amendment.

Once again, let me thank the gentleman from Ohio for his leadership.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this amendment.

This amendment has a very simple purpose—to revive the state portion of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Under federal law—law that has been in effect for 35 years—states are supposed to get a portion of revenues from off-shore oil drilling to use for recreation and conservation projects. This amendment is a first step toward fulfilling that commitment, which has been ignored over the past several years.

But this is not just a matter of fulfilling a commitment made to the states and the public when we allowed off-shore oil drilling. This amendment would revive a program that had a proven track record of providing recreational facilities for millions of American families. This is a program that truly improved the quality of life.

And there is no shortage of appropriate opportunities for using this money. Every state has a backlog of projects that has been piling up in anticipation of this money being restored. These projects will provide parks and playgrounds and preserve sensitive lands that otherwise would be subject to development.

The momentum for reviving the state portion of LWCF has been growing this year as more Members have learned about the good that has come from this program. The various bills to take the program off-budget and guarantee it a stream of funding are evidence of that new-found support. But those bills will not come up for some time and will probably not provide money next year. We need to act now. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the McGovern-Campbell-Hoeffel-Holt amendment and urge its adoption. I listened very carefully to the comments of my friend from Pennsylvania and understand very well his concern about the fossil fuel research and development program that is being used as an offset for the proposed $30 million to be directed to the state-side program of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. I know that a number of my friends and my mentors from Pennsylvania have a concern about this amendment because of the offset.

It is only a partial answer to say to them that the offset represents 8 percent, certainly not a majority, 8 percent of the fossil fuel funding. A better answer, I believe, is that this amendment is not about fossil fuel research and development. As everyone knows, budgetary rules require us to have an offset. This is about restarting the state-side part of the land and water conservation program. If the fossil fuel program is as good as they say, and I have the belief that if it is as good as they say, then funding will be restored, funding will be provided. They currently receive $360 million for the fossil fuel program, and the state-side part of the Land and Water Conservation Fund gets zero.

If Members believe in the development of parks at the State and local level, if they believe in the development of recreational opportunities at the State and local level, we must pass this amendment to get this program back into business, and the fossil fuel programs supported by my very good friends will certainly attract their own level of support.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund has been the most successful of all Federal programs to direct Federal funding toward the acquisition of open space and parkland and to develop recreational opportunities. It is premised on very sound notion that when the nonrenewable resources on the Continental Shelf are developed for profit, that some share of that generated wealth should be given back to the Federal Government and the State governments to enhance recreational opportunities. It is the State part of that equation for 5 years that has not been funded at all. That is what we are trying to generate funding for through this amendment. These recreational opportunities are really the workhorse of our recreational opportunities in this country.

The programs to be funded by this State and Federal share would not be the parks with the grandeur of the Tetons or the vastness of Yellowstone but they would be the parks and recreational opportunities that people would use every day, the ballfields, the local parks, the swimming pools that all Americans need access to and that all Americans use. Even if they cannot afford a vacation out West, even if it is not accessible for them to go to Yosemite or Grand Teton, they can use these local recreational opportunities. That is what we are trying to restore. This State aspect of the Land and Water Conservation Fund worked well for a number of years although the entire fund has not been allocated the funding that it deserves, but for the last 5 or 6 years the program has not received funding at all.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOEFFEL. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his statement and rise in support of this amendment. This is a good amendment. This is a good bill. It does not have all the baggage on it that some of the bills have had in past years with regards to taking one step forward and two back. I commend the subcommittee chairman and the ranking member for their work.

On this particular topic, I think that this is an improvement, a modest improvement in this bill. This bill does not have enough money to go around, that is a problem we have to deal with through the 302(b) allocations and the budget caps that we have in place. The quicker we start facing up to that, the better off we are going to be.

But these dollars come, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania has stated, from the Outer Continental Shelf and the fact is that we are pledged to take $900 million from that, available until appropriated, for the Land and Water Conservation Fund, and a goodly portion of that should be going to the States. The fact is this bill has nothing in for that. It has less than a third of the money being appropriated from the Land and Water Conservation Fund and a small portion of the Historic Preservation Fund. It is almost over a billion dollars that were pledged using up one resource and investing in another. While this research on fossil fuel is good in itself, the fact is that we have to have a balanced bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) has expired.

(On request of Mr. VENTO, and by unanimous consent, Mr. HOEFFEL was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding and for his work on this and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN). I am pleased to rise in support.

Mr. HOEFFEL. I thank the gentleman for his comments.

I would simply conclude, Mr. Chairman, by saying it is critically important that we get this State aspect of the Land and Water Conservation Fund back into business so we can provide the matching funds to State governments to provide those local recreational opportunities that are so important to all Americans.

Mr. HOLDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment, not because of the cause that the authors of the amendment have championed but because where they intend to take their offsets from.

Mr. Chairman, we should not be disinvesting in fossil fuel research in this country. We should be reinvesting. Here in the United States we have between 250 and 300 years of a coal supply. That is more recoverable oil than the entire world has. That is correct. That is more than the entire world has in recoverable oil. We should not be disinvesting. We should be reinvesting.

I have the honor and privilege of representing the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania along with the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. KANJORSKI) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHERWOOD), a clean burning coal that meets all EPA requirements, low in sulfur and high in Btu. We should be investing in alternative uses of coal.

I currently have a bill pending before the Committee on Ways and Means to supply incentives, tax incentives so that we can take advantage of technology that already exists, where we can turn waste coal and raw coal into gasoline and into diesel fuel. These are the types of things we should be doing with fossil fuel research.

There is research being done at Penn State and Wilkes and many universities all over Pennsylvania and West Virginia. We should not be cutting research in these funds. We are too dependent in this country on foreign oil already.

I say to my colleagues in the Congress, we go through this fight every year. Every year this program is attacked. It has been cut significantly over the years. I thank the chairman and the ranking member for the number that they have arrived at this year, protecting the research that is in this bill. I encourage all my colleagues to vote against this amendment. It is bad for Pennsylvania, it is bad for West Virginia, it is bad for Kentucky, it is bad for southern Illinois. We should defeat this amendment.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Ms. WOOLSEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support the McGovern-Campbell-Hoeffel-Holt amendment and add $30 million to the Land and Water Conservation Fund state-side program, a program that funds local community needs, such as purchasing land for parks within a city itself. These funds come from Outer Continental Shelf oil drilling revenues. They are intended to be funded by $450 million annually for Federal land purchases and $450 million annually for state-side purchases. However, we only see a small fraction of that money for those intended purposes.

Since its inception in 1995, the Land and Water Conservation Fund has been invaluable in protecting wetlands, wildlife refuges, endangered species habitat and creating parks and open spaces as well as providing land for recreation.

Stateside has protected more than 2 million acres of recreational land and helped develop more than 27,000 basic recreation facilities nationwide.

This year the President asked for $200 million for Stateside, but for the fifth consecutive year Stateside was zeroed out by the committee. It is time we invest in the Stateside part of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. This could mean more than $2.5 million for my State, California, and this amendment would mean a lot to most of the States in this Nation.

As our Nation grows, we must fund preservation because funding preservation is smart growth. If someone has land in one of my colleagues' areas, in their community, that could be purchased in their district for everyone in the district to enjoy, because I know I do, and I bet all of my colleagues do, actually, they should support this amendment. Open space preservation is smart growth, and it is a bipartisan idea that has generated great support across the Nation.

In the last election, there were 148 ballot measures from coast to coast regarding open space. Amazingly, 84 percent of these measures passed, showing the strong support that American people have for open space and for Stateside programs; and hopefully my colleagues will also support the Resources 2000 bill of the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), H.R. 798, which would fully fund the Land and Water Conservation Fund permanently.

Please support the McGovern amendment.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in very strong support of the McGovern-Campbell-Holt and Hoeffel amendment, and I rise also to commend the chairman of this committee, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) for the job that they have done with this legislation under very, very difficult circumstances; and those difficult circumstances are one of the reasons that this amendment is here.

I believe that this amendment is an improvement to this legislation. I think it is an important amendment, it is an important amendment about the future of our local communities, about the quality of life, about the recreational opportunities of our families and about the preservation of important lands and important assets that provide the quality of life that most of us want for ourselves and for our constituents.

The Land and Water Conservation Fund is a fund that was developed out of a bargain between the development of the offshore oil and the preservation of nonreoccurring assets in our communities and throughout our Nation; and in the past, since 1965, we have appropriated some $3 billion to local governments, States and local governments, to help them protect and provide and conserve these assets. They have matched that with an additional $3 billion. That tells us the kind of priority that our local communities place upon this program.

But in 1995 it all stopped, it all stopped. One of the most successful programs that we have at the Federal level stopped. Since that time, if we were to put the money that this program was truly entitled to, there would have been an additional $2.5 billion that would have then been matched by another $2.5 billion, $5 billion going into improve the quality of life and to protect and conserve natural resources and assets and local communities based upon the priorities of those local communities.

Many speakers have gotten up here and told about how their States have passed bond issues to help to do this. Local jurisdictions have added to their tax revenues, they have added on to their sales tax, they have added on to their gas tax to try and protect these resources, and this money flows into that in a partnership with not only those local governments but with foundations and private individuals and corporations and others that contributed. This money becomes a catalyst for billions of dollars that benefit our local constituents and our local communities; and it is a very, very important amount of money. It is very important in the sense that the opportunities are being lost in so many of our communities through rapid growth to kind of provide the kind of protection that is necessary so we can have open spaces.

Yes, it might include a swimming pool or two; and, yes, it might include a swimming lagoon on important rivers and important reservoirs in areas that are regional facilities. And it might include trails, and it might include a lot of assets that local communities believe are important if they are going to provide the kind of quality of life that attracts families, that attracts businesses and that allows communities to thrive and to have a thriving economy.

That is what this legislation was set up to do, but the oxygen has been cut off, the money has been cut off for no good reason. Because it was not about this being a bad program or an unsuccessful program or a wasteful program. It was just a decision that was made. And yet the law remains on the books. It says we are supposed to dedicate this money.

This is very similar to the debates that we are having with respect to Social Security and we had with the Highway trust fund. We told the people of America that this money in this fund would be used for this purpose. There is a lot of concerns now that the offset is SPRO, or the offset is one of the energy funds.

Well, let me tell my colleagues the Stateside Land and Water Conservation Fund has been an offset for everything else this government has wanted to do because the money has been pirated out of this fund and used for whatever purposes to make the deficit look smaller or for whatever programs the Congress of the United States wanted to do. We owe this fund billions of dollars, and here we have an effort by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN) and the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) to restore $30 billion for the next fiscal year so our communities can get on with improving the quality of life and protecting these assets. And as flush as the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) will tell us the States are, I do not see people saying we are not going to send them PILT or we are not going to send them money, so this is about priorities.

But as flush as those States are, the list of projects that are essential and necessary to continue the growth; otherwise, do my colleagues know what they get? They get what we have in so many communities now, no growth, no improvements, no transportation improvements, because people see with congestion, the lack of quality of life, that they are not going to engage in that kind of economic growth.

This is one of the buffers that allows our communities to continue to be a decent place to live, a decent place to raise our children and to enjoy and to do business.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER) has expired.

(On request of Mr. REGULA and by unanimous consent, Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, the Land and Water Conservation Fund was reduced from 300 million to 25 in a Democrat Congress under the leadership of Mr. Yates, and I believe the gentleman in the well was a Member of the House at that time. I wonder how he felt about it at the time.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I disagreed with it then, and I disagreed before that was done. I mean, I think that this fund, and, as my colleagues know, I have introduced legislation to provide for the full funding, the full funding on water conservation, half to the Federal side and half to the State side, and an overwhelming number of Members of this House of Representatives supported either my bill or Mr. YOUNG'S bill to do that because they are hearing from their communities and also hearing what my colleagues have been telling us about the backlog in national parks and national lands of this country that needs to be done there.

We have starved these funds. It has been a bipartisan effort to starve these funds. I am not blaming the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA). He has come in almost at the end of the show where it is even more difficult to try to get his bill out of committee and meet the demands of this country. But that has been a bipartisan effort, but the time has come to reverse it. The time has come to reverse it, and this amendment is a modest step in the efforts to do that.

Mr. REGULA. If the gentleman would yield further, would the gentleman agree to lift the moratorium on offshore drilling in California so we could beef up the fund?

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Why would I do that when the gentleman is stealing all the money?

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. DOYLE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DOYLE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts. This well-intentioned amendment would increase funding for the Land and Water Conservation Fund, a goal I share. However, the programs proposed to be cut to offset this amendment are equally important and deserve another look.

By this amendment we propose to cut an additional $29 million from the fossil energy budget, and my friend tells me that is only an 8 percent cut. Well, let me tell my friend this program has seen steady decreases over the past 10 years, decreases of 7 percent, 10 percent, 13 percent depending on the year. Eighty-five percent of our U.S. energy supply currently comes from fossil fuels. This figure is going to go up, not down in the coming years. By the year 2015, 88 percent of the energy we consume will come from fossil fuels. The important research the Department of Energy performs on oil, gas, coal and other fuels is entirely directed at making these fuels burn more efficiently and with fewer emissions. I think these are goals we all support.

The emerging renewables, solar, wind and geothermal, currently supply less than 1 percent of the energy needs in the United States. Research on this small share of our energy supply has increased greatly during the last 10 years, despite its relative unimportance to our energy supply. I am all too aware that the Green Scissors Report, among others, has severely criticized the U.S. fossil energy research program. For this reason, Mr. Chairman, every July the fossil fuel research program becomes a convenient whipping boy for legislators looking for budget offsets. Well, I am sorry to see that these criticisms take no consideration of the fact that renewable energy still supplies a very small percentage of our energy needs.

As we work together towards a future energy-use environment of cleaner, more efficient fuels, we need to recognize that our energy supply, this country's energy habits, will not and cannot change overnight. Cleaner and more efficient means of accessing oil, gas and coal are sorely needed.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, I would point out to my friends that the fossil energy program has been revamped and retooled in response to input from Congress over the past few years. The fossil energy program has shifted to focus on such exciting new technologies such as fuel cells which are clean burning, relocatable energy sources that fit perfectly into a deregulated power environment; the "Vision-21" clean power plant, which will combine existing technologies to greatly reduce emissions from our utilities; and gas hydrates, an exciting, hidden source of natural gas on the ocean floor that is estimated to offer hundreds or even thousands of times more reserves than all the existing fossil energy supplies combined.

Mr. Chairman, as our energy researchers have pursued this fundamental shift in response to congressional criticism are we governing responsibly and effectively if we continue to take ill-considered cuts out of this program? Mr. Chairman, I strongly urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment offered by my colleague from Massachusetts.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of this amendment, and I want to salute my colleagues that have written it and brought it forward to us. I think that they have done a very, very important task for us and this is a very important debate.

Before I talk about the amendment and why I think it is a prudent one, I want to pay tribute to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), who has been faced with enormous challenges, a budget that does not match it, but I think a heart and a mind that has stretched to do magnificent things in our country. He is absolutely right that we are not committing the kind of resources that we should to the conservation and the protection of the lands that we are already responsible for. So in no way do my comments or should my comments be thought of as being critical of what he has done, Mr. Chairman. I appreciate his leadership and what has come from it.

When the Congress created the Land and Water Conservation Fund in 1964 to purchase land and water resources for the creation of open spaces and local and national parks and recreational areas, the Congress then took an enormous important step. One of my distinguished colleagues came to the floor earlier and said, this is Sophie's Choice. It is not. Sophie's Choice is a movie with a marvelous actress in it. This is not Sophie's Choice. This is about the Congress stepping up and really keeping at least part of her word from 1964.

Thanks to that congressional act, nearly 7 million acres of parkland are now protected, and over 37,000 State and local park and recreation projects have been created.

I cannot think of an action that the Congress has taken that meets with the success of this. This is one of the most meritorious cases in our Nation. In my district alone, with one of its great values being the environment and the protection of parklands and open space, nearly 8,000 acres have been preserved since 1964. In fact, it is an area that is one of the envies of our Nation because so much has been protected.

When we enacted the Land and Water Conservation Fund to an authorized level of $900 million, we continued to fund the program, but not at the levels that we had originally promised. In fact, they have gone lower and lower, and we have continued to divert funds away from land and water and conservation, and that is what this amendment tries to repair in a very small way today.

I think we should take the next step by fully and permanently funding the Act. My good and great friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), along with many others, seeks to do that. I am proud to cosponsor the Resources 2000 Act.

Today we are looking for just a small step. The Miller bill is the final big step. Of course, we know he wears a very large shoe, and that shoe would accomplish a lot if that step were taken. So I support this because I think it is important.

It is not only important because we see what it has done, but we know, as Auntie Mame said, that we have miles to go and places to see in our country. This is an act that gives our local governments and our State governments the right kind of leverage. It attracts, it becomes a magnet for private funds, and it is one of the ingredients for one of the greatest recipes of success in our country.

Going to our parks, I have been very fond of saying, is one of the cheapest vacations for the American people. We want them at all levels. Everyone cannot get to Yosemite. Everyone cannot get to a national park. So let us move on and take a small step of Congress reestablishing her word, the word that was established in 1964, and take this important step today by embracing this amendment. It is a great one, it is a good one. It will do good things for our country.

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. BECERRA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the McGovern-Campbell-Hoeffel-Holt amendment which would provide the funding for the Land and Water Conservation Fund stateside matching grants program.

If I may begin first by thanking the chairman and the ranking member for the attention they have given to a number of Members who have concerns for some of the projects that are State and local in orientation, I know it has been a difficult task, and everyone has pointed that out, that the money is just not there to certainly fund all these programs. So I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for the effort they have made.

By the way, I want to thank the staff, as well. For the most part, in every discussion we have had, the staff has been very willing to discuss options and try to help those of us who are interested in trying to provide some of those projects which are park-related to our constituents back home.

For someone like me who has nothing but an urban setting in his district, I am completely urban, I have nothing but L.A. city territory, I have a concrete forest that I represent, it is difficult sometimes to accommodate the needs, especially the green needs, of my constituents.

Let me give a quick example. While we are spending in this appropriations bill for the Department of Interior approximately $1.7 billion for the National Park Service, $1.2 billion for the Bureau of Land Management, and $840 million for the Fish and Wildlife Service, no money is being allocated at this stage for stateside matching grant programs under the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

For someone like me, that means the following. About 3 years ago I attended a middle school in my district. I asked what I thought was a pretty natural question. We were talking about the environment. I asked some of the kids in this class of about 30 kids, when was the last time they were at the beach. Los Angeles is right next to the beach. I was surprised when no one raised their hand.

I asked, well, how many have been to the beach? And we are talking about kids who are in their teens. About three of the 30 kids raised their hand. I am talking about kids who live no more than 20 miles from the beach. Most of these kids had never been to the beach in Los Angeles.

The closest State park to me is about 45 miles away. The closest national park is more than 60 miles away. Most of these kids have never been to either one of those, and they have not even been to something as close to them as the beach in Los Angeles.

It is difficult for some of our communities sometimes, especially in our very urban settings, the inner cities, to have opportunities to let kids understand what it is to see wildlife, to see nature in progress. For many of us, it is important to be able to help.

There is a project in Los Angeles right now which could use funding from the Stateside matching grant program under the Land and Water Conservation Fund. In fact, it is a program, a project that right now has a public and private partnership underway where right now the city of Los Angeles, the State of California, and the business community, along with community groups, have come in and provided 85 percent of the money they need to get a local park going so people can use it.

There is a park in a hilly area of Los Angeles which few people know about and use. If we can get this funding at the Federal level to help just a little bit more, we will be able to help thousands of inner city children who do not have access right now.

I know it is tough and I know the chairman and the ranking member have tried, but this is an amendment that will provide a meager amount, $30 million of the billions that we will be spending, on something that is so valuable, especially for kids who sometimes do not have access to any of this.

It is a worthy amendment. It came close to passing last year. I hope we have success this time around, because ultimately what we are talking about here is not some big national park or some big local park, we are talking about the smaller projects that reach really close to home where kids could ultimately use these facilities.

If we do not do it, again, we are going to deny these children not just the opportunity to play and recreate, but the chance to get a better sense of what it means to know the greater part of the country and nature as well, because too often, in the inner cities especially, many of these kids grow up not knowing anything but concrete buildings.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I see this conversation this afternoon as an effort to restart an important discussion. It is about keeping faith with our commitments with the States, keeping faith with the needs and the programs that they have.

As the gentleman from California mentioned a few moments ago, we rightly owe billions of dollars to the very States under the terms of the 1964 act. There are, indeed, other reasons. Not every State with a surplus, for instance, is responding in a way that deals with the park and recreation and open space needs.

In my own State, I am ashamed to admit, despite the strongest economy in anybody's memory, despite having perhaps the strongest one, in fact, for 2 years running we had the strongest economy in the country, and despite having a large ballot measure majority in support of parks and open space, I am finding our State legislature backing money out that has been approved by the voters, in efforts to shift it elsewhere.

So there are lots of reasons, lots of variations around the country that I have seen as I have worked with communities across the country dealing on livability issues.

But there is something else going on here. There is a massive grass roots effort where citizens at the State and local level are seizing control. In 1998 there were 184 initiatives on the State and local level. Eighty-seven percent passed, usually with overwhelming majorities. Citizens understand, in the words of our chairman and the ranking member, that it is important to invest in this timeless legacy. The time is now.

There are very complex and intricate funding packages that we are seeing developed across the country that have State funds, that have local funds, that have Federal funds under enhancements and transportation. We have land trusts. We have individuals coming forward, foundations. It is exciting to see people step forward to try and fill if the gap at this critical time and meet this critical need, sometimes moving past the politicians.

This $30 million is critical, not just because it will leverage literally hundreds of millions of dollars across the country. It is important because it restarts the discussion here about keeping our commitment with the Land and Water Conservation Fund. I think it is going to be the start of something that is very big.

As we discussed at the initiation of the debate on this bill, we want to start the discussion of the budget with a 50-year vision for this country. Everybody in this Chamber knows that we are going to add money to the budget process before we get out of town at the end of the fall, or the summer, or whenever we are finally set free. We are going to add more money. Everybody knows it.

Voting today to keep our commitment to the States, to the localities, to this massive national grass roots movement to try and restore our legacy, is going to give leverage to our subcommittee to be able to fight the good fight, and it is going to give heart to people across the country who are working to try and make their communities more livable.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the opportunity to share my biases.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman be more comfortable if the State of Oregon, which had a surplus balance in 1998 of $15 million, had spent some of that on local projects? And secondly, would he be more comfortable if this amendment were limited to land purchases and not marinas and tennis courts and swimming pools and any of the other things that they might find desirable?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. As I attempted to make clear, I am embarrassed that my State legislature has broken faith with the voters of Oregon by taking away money that they just approved at the ballot box and using it for other purposes.

So I feel that there is a very mixed record on the part of States. That is why I support efforts of the Committee on Appropriations to have appropriate guidelines for the disbursement of Federal funds.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) has expired.

(On request of Mr. REGULA, and by unanimous consent, Mr. BLUMENAUER was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Chairman, I would be happy under the leadership of this subcommittee to look for ways to provide more explicit guidelines to help make sure that we get the most bang for the buck.

I would be loathe, however, to tell some States and localities that have very particular needs for park and recreation that they could not have the restoration of a marina or for some type of open space.

I think we have seen dramatically different projects emerge as a result of this grass roots effort. I think it looks different than some of the things that frankly would raise my eyebrows from a few years ago.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman was critical of the legislature for taking the money back, but I would have to point out that if this were to be done on a substantial scale, we ought to take it out of the 378 national parks. It has to come from somewhere. I know initially it is possible, but in setting up priorities, it could very well come out of parks.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. BLUMENAUER was allowed to proceed for 30 additional seconds.)

Mr. BLUMENAUER. I just wanted to say that I think it is an inappropriate choice to cannibalize our national parks to keep a commitment that we have to State and local governments for their half of this fund.

I will work with the chairman, with the ranking member, as hard as I can to make sure that the gentleman has adequate resources to invest for the future without making a foolish decision to shortcircuit the next half century of preserving these great national treasures.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. SHERMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the McGovern-Campbell-Hoeffel-Holt amendment, but first to commend the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) for bringing to this floor a very good bill, and given the constraints they were under, bringing to the floor an excellent bill.

Focusing on the amendment, Mr. Chairman, at the beginning of today's session I had a chance to watch the floor. There, Member after Member rose to praise the women's soccer team that won the World Cup, to praise our heroes more eloquently than I can here, Michelle Akers, Mia Hamm, Brandi and Briana, so many who filled us with pride.

But will that praise merely be empty symbolism, or are we actually willing to do something? Are we just going to talk about what sports mean to our kids, about teamwork and confidence-building, or are we going to do something?

We who praise what this woman's soccer team has done, to make sure that girls as well as boys fill the clubs, fill the teams and are out there playing sports rather than being distracted by the latest splatter video game or experimenting with sex and drugs and violence, we who are so good at rhetoric need to put this Nation's money where our mouth is.

Likewise, we have to keep faith with the Land and Water Conservation Fund. We promised the people of this country over 20 years ago that the funds obtained from offshore oil drilling would go to preserve open space in our Nation, across the country, for our national parks and also in the State-side program for recreation.

Mr. Chairman, I know that this amendment has been criticized because it means an 8 percent cut to coal research. But, Mr. Chairman, we have had not an 8 percent, not an 18 percent, but a 100 percent cut in the State-side program of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. If this budget has got to be this tight, certainly the damage or the tightness or the inability to spend should be spread more equitably and $30 million should be found for recreation.

Mr. Chairman, most juvenile crime takes place between 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. What we need are supervised after-school activities, especially sports which build teamwork and which build confidence.

Mr. Chairman, in Montgomery County, for example, there are 1,000 soccer teams trying to play on a hundred fields. In Ft. Lauderdale there is a waiting list of a thousand kids waiting to play soccer. I had the chance to visit the grand opening of the new AYSO headquarters in the Los Angeles area, and everyone there involved in youth soccer said and asked just one question: Mr. Chairman, where will the children play?

The answer is to be found in this bill. It is time for us to expand the recreation facilities available to our youth and to have a vision of tomorrow's kids that involves teamwork outside and not splatter video games inside.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I also rise today in support of the amendment of my colleagues, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN), the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOFFEL), and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. HOLT) to add $30 million to the State-side funding of the Land and Water Conservation Fund. This is a critical program to communities such as mine where our natural and human resources, in this case our youth, are both in jeopardy.

The funding provided by this amendment will give a tremendous boost to the efforts of our local communities to provide recreational outlets to our young people. Sadly, for the fifth year in a row the Interior Appropriations bill has not provided funds for this program.

Mr. Chairman, the development of new recreational outlets is overwhelmingly supported and needed by our constituents. In my district, the commissioner of parks and public lands has repeatedly called upon me to seek such funding as is found in the increase in the State-side funding of the Land and Water Conservation Fund.

While some do, as we have heard not every community has a large surplus to spend. But even for the communities that do, it is time for the Federal Government to step up to the plate and do something positive for our young people and our communities, and it can do this through providing this funding.

I also want to take this opportunity to join my colleague, the gentleman from Guam (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA) in urging that all due consideration be given to the needs of all of the U.S. insular areas. While many of the districts of my colleagues are experiencing good fiscal fortunes, the non-State areas of Guam, American Samoa, and my district, the U.S. Virgin Islands, are experiencing very tough financial times.

While our local governments are working to do all that they can to reduce spending and get our budgets balanced, we still need the assistance of the Federal Government if we are to be successful.

It is unfortunate and the cause of great concern when the needs of one insular area is pitted against the other, forcing us to choose between accepting financial help at the expense of another sister insular area. I urge the members of the subcommittee to be mindful of this fact as we go forward in crafting the final version of the Interior Appropriations bill for fiscal year 2000.

Again, Mr. Chairman, I support this amendment.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts, and urge my colleagues to support this modest $30 million allocation for state-side Land and Water Conservation funding.

Since its inception in 1964, the LWCF has been an American success story, enjoying support from both Republican and Democratic administrations.

For the past five years, however, this House has ignored the needs of states and communities that want to preserve open space. Cutting out State-side LWCF funding has handcuffed communities that want to purchase athletic fields, preserve historic sites, and ensure public access to pristine wilderness.

In Maine $32 million of state side funding has supported more than 700 projects—from the Allagash Wilderness Waterway, to Wolf's Neck Park, to the Deering Oaks Playground.

Today, the need for state-side funding is greater than ever. In just the past year, more than four million acres of Maine's ten million acre north woods has changed hands. Much of this land, which has traditionally been held by Maine-based companies, is now in the hands of out of state and multi-national corporations. A lack of funding has prevented the state from taking full advantage of the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to protect more of Maine's most valuable natural resources.

The Maine state legislature, with strong bipartisan support, recently approved a fifty million dollar bond package for land acquisition. But to have a significant impact, these funds will have to be matched with private and federal dollars.

State-side funding is absolutely critical for Maine, and communities throughout this country, to achieve their land preservation goals.

It's time for Congress to right the wrong of the past five years and fulfill its promise of funds for states and communities to preserve open space.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, and empower local communities to preserve their natural resources for generations to come.

Mr. WEYGAND. Mr. Chairman, as co-chair of the House Livability Communities Task Force I strongly support the amendment offered by my colleague from Massachusetts, Mr. MCGOVERN.

Over the past several months I have been receiving letters from city and town planners, mayors, and town council members across Rhode Island expressing the importance of the Land Water Conservation fund to their communities.

Since 1966 the LWCF has provided more than $33 million, in grants, to the State of Rhode Island to preserve and protect open space and parks.

These funds have been used to make improvements to state beaches, in particular Misquamicut, Roger Wheeler, and East Matunuck all of which attract tourists from across New England.

The LWCF has also played a key role in the development of the State's park system. It is likely that without the LWCF Colt State Park, Lincoln Woods State Park, Fort Adams State Park and Goddard State Park would not exist as we know them today.

This amendment would provide the State of Rhode Island with approximately $308,000 for projects this may seem like a small amount of money but I can tell you from experience that money would go a long way to making improvements in Rhode Island's communities.

As a landscape architect, in both my professional and public careers I have seen first hand how these funds improve our communities.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support the McGovern amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 243, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN) will be postponed.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

WILDLAND FIRE MANAGEMENT

For necessary expenses for fire preparedness, suppression operations, emergency rehabilitation and hazardous fuels reduction by the Department of the Interior, $292,399,000, to remain available until expended, of which not to exceed $9,300,000 shall be for the renovation or construction of fire facilities: Provided, That such funds are also available for repayment of advances to other appropriation accounts from which funds were previously transferred for such purposes: Provided further, That unobligated balances of amounts previously appropriated to the "Fire Protection" and "Emergency Department of the Interior Firefighting Fund" may be transferred and merged with this appropriation: Provided further, That persons hired pursuant to 43 U.S.C. 1469 may be furnished subsistence and lodging without cost from funds available from this appropriation: Provided further, That notwithstanding 42 U.S.C. 1856d, sums received by a bureau or office of the Department of the Interior for fire protection rendered pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1856 et seq., Protection of United States Property, may be credited to the appropriation from which funds were expended to provide that protection, and are available without fiscal year limitation.

CENTRAL HAZARDOUS MATERIALS FUND

For necessary expenses of the Department of the Interior and any of its component offices and bureaus for the remedial action, including associated activities, of hazardous waste substances, pollutants, or contaminants pursuant to the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, as amended (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.), $10,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3302, sums recovered from or paid by a party in advance of or as reimbursement for remedial action or response activities conducted by the Department pursuant to section 107 or 113(f) of such Act, shall be credited to this account to be available until expended without further appropriation: Provided further, That such sums recovered from or paid by any party are not limited to monetary payments and may include stocks, bonds or other personal or real property, which may be retained, liquidated, or otherwise disposed of by the Secretary and which shall be credited to this account.

CONSTRUCTION

For construction of buildings, recreation facilities, roads, trails, and appurtenant facilities, $11,100,000, to remain available until expended.

PAYMENTS IN LIEU OF TAXES

For expenses necessary to implement the Act of October 20, 1976, as amended (31 U.S.C. 6901-6907), $125,000,000, of which not to exceed $400,000 shall be available for administrative expenses: Provided, That no payment shall be made to otherwise eligible units of local government if the computed amount of the payment is less than $100.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to tell the Members that the plan is to roll any votes on amendments to about roughly 6:30 to 7 o'clock. Then the votes will occur on whatever amendments are pending. And we may continue some further action tonight, but there will be no more votes after that block that we do at that time.

So for purposes of planning, Members can count on that as being the format for the rest of the day.

AMENDMENT NO. 13 OFFERED BY MR. SANDERS

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 13 offered by Mr. SANDERS: Page 6, line 4, after the first dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $20,000,000)".

Page 69, line 14, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $50,000,000)".

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, this tripartisan amendment is supported by the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. LEWIS), the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK). I should mention that last year a similar amendment passed this House by a vote of 241 to 185.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment deals with the very serious problem of underfunded mandates. It is an issue that we have heard a whole lot about in this body, of forcing citizens in close to 1,800 counties and 49 States to pay more in local property taxes than they should be paying because the Federal Government has fallen very far behind in its payment in lieu of taxes on federally owned land. In other words, the Federal Government is not paying its fair share and is doing a disservice to local communities all over this country.

Just as an example, in my own small State of Vermont, over 50 towns in our southern counties are affected: Bennington, Rutland, Addison, Windham, and Windsor Counties. This amendment addresses the overall problem of underfunded payment in lieu of taxes by increasing funding for this program by $20 million from $125 million to $145 million.

Although this same amendment passed last year with broad bipartisan support, the conference committee only increased payment in lieu of taxes by $5 million instead of the $20 million increase that my amendment would have provided, which is why we are back this year.

Mr. Chairman, in real dollars, inflation-accounted-for dollars, PILT payments to counties and towns all across this Nation have been decreasing for a very long time. In real dollars since 1980, appropriations for payments in lieu of taxes have decreased by nearly $60 million, a 37-percent decline in value.

And while this amendment will not rectify by any means the entire problem, it will at least allow communities around this country to know that we understand their problems and that we are making some real attempts to address those problems by appropriating this $20 million. In fact, even if this increase is approved, it would still represent a 26.3-percent decline in value since 1980.

Mr. Chairman, I should add, and this is an important point, that the authorization for PILT today is approximately $260 million, over twice the appropriation level. In other words, the authorizers understand the problems facing the communities all over this country; but unfortunately in recent years for a variety of reasons, the appropriation process has not followed suit.

Mr. Chairman, the PILT program was established to address the fact that the Federal Government does not pay taxes on the land that it owns. These Federal lands can include national forests, national parks, Fish and Wildlife refuges, and land owned by the Bureau of Land Management. Like local property taxes, PILT payments are used to pay for school budgets, law enforcement, search and rescue, firefighting, parks and recreation, and other municipal expenses.

Mr. Chairman, the important point has to be made. In recent years in this body, there has been a lot of talk about devolution, a lot of talk about fiscal responsibility, a lot of talk about respect for counties, towns and cities. And yet what we are saying after all of that talk is, gee, we do not have to pay our bills. We talk about respecting local governments, but yet we do not have to own up to the fact that we owe them substantial sums of money.

I know that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) is operating under real budget restrictions, and I happen to believe that we should do away with those budget caps and address many of the issues that we face. But I think when we deal with basic priorities, how do we talk about devolution and then turn our back and then say oh, yes, we will continue to owe counties, cities, and towns substantial sums of money?

Mr. Chairman, the $50 million that we are using for these purposes include $20 million in payment in lieu of taxes and $30 million for deficit reduction. Our national debt is still over $5 trillion. This amendment begins to address that issue. The funds would be transferred and offset from the Fossil Energy Research and Development Program, a program we have heard a whole lot about in the last few minutes. But let me say this in regard to that program. Let me quote from the report of the fiscal year 1997 Republican, underlined Republican, budget resolution. And I quote: "The Department of Energy has spent billions of dollars—"

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS) has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. SANDERS was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, this is the Republican budget. "The Department of Energy has spent billions of dollars on research and development since the oil crisis in 1973 triggered this activity. Returns on this investment have not been cost effective, particularly for applied research and development which industry has ample incentive to undertake. Some of this activity is simply corporate welfare * * *"

This is not the gentleman from Vermont; this is the Republican budget resolution. " * * * corporate welfare for the oil, gas and utility industries. Much of it duplicates what industry is already doing. Some has gone to fund technology for which the market has no interest."

Mr. Chairman, according to the Congressional Budget Office, the beneficiaries of the fossil fuel program are some of the largest multinational corporations in the world including Exxon, Chevron, Conoco, Texaco, Amoco, Phillips Petroleum, ARCO, and Shell. These companies in fact are making large profits. They do not have to come to the taxpayer for all of this support.

So I think the time is now to be fair to communities all over this country, and I would urge support for this important amendment.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I know it is a temptation to dip into the fossil program. It is a little bit ambiguous. If this were the late 1970s, we would not have any such amendments. We would have amendments increasing the fossil research, because when people were sitting in gas lines in the 1970s, when schools were closed down, hospitals were suffering for lack of fuel, we could not give enough money for fossil energy research. Now at this moment we have an adequate supply, so some say let us not worry about next week or next year, just cut the programs. And then if we have another crisis, we will dump a lot of money in.

Mr. Chairman, I would point out to the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS) one of the reforms we instituted is that on any of these programs, there has to be a match. We are not saying give them the money. That is what happened in the 1970s, when we shoveled money out with no requirement for matching funds. Now companies that want to do research on new fuels, California of course has reformulated gasoline which came out of the fossil program, they have to put up their own money to show that they believe in the program and that it is effective.

So I think to just take a cut at fossil is not the right policy for the future of this Nation. And I think some of the arguments that were made earlier are clearly along those lines.

We have reduced fossil by 20 percent over the 4 years of our watch in this committee. At the same time, we have increased PILT funding by 23 percent. And I would point out that this bill is flat funded.

□ 1730

So if we go to PILT for more money, we have to do less for something else.

I understand that communities would like to have this money. But one of the things they do not take into consideration is that when we develop Federal facilities it energizes the visitor base, it energizes a lot of activity that does bring money into the communities other than just from PILT, because they have a lot of tourism, they have those kind of activities that are important to the communities that have Federal facilities.

It would be nice to put more money in PILT if we had more money. But given the fact that we have a very tight budget, given the fact that we had 2,000 requests for projects from the Members of this House, we have done the best we could.

We recognize that fossil research is important for the future of this Nation and to maintain energy independence.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS).

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio for yielding to me.

Once again, let me point out, I know the gentleman's job is a difficult job, and he has to balance a whole lot of needs.

I guess what I am arguing, and I am glad to hear that companies like Exxon, Chevron, Conoco, Texaco, Amoco, Phillips Petroleum, some of the largest conglomerates in the world, are contributing something into the program. I am glad to hear that.

But the bottom line is, do my colleagues not think these companies, many of them, are enjoying record-breaking profits? Do my colleagues not think they can pay for their own research and developments rather than stick it to local communities, many of whom have got to raise their regressive property tax to fund their basic needs? That is the only point that I would make.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, it is easy to pick out the big ones and point to them, but a lot of this money goes to very small companies that have innovative ideas. Every company started with an idea that one person had, whether it is Bell Telephone, Graham Bell or whomever. We find that most of this research is being done by small companies. They come up with their 50 percent. It is not easy for them to do it, but they believe in their ideas.

A very small amount, relatively, is going to the large companies. They are doing a lot of research on their own.

But my concern is that we as a Nation do not want to become dependent for energy on other outside sources. We are going to spend $265 billion on defense. One of the most important elements of the defense of this Nation is to be energy independent. We found out in the late 1970s what it means to be dependent, in that case on OPEC. They called the tune, and we had lines for over a mile at our gasoline stations. We are trying to avoid that by looking to the future.

We have cut it 20 percent over the last 4 years. At the same time, we increased PILT 23 percent. I have to say to the gentleman, I think that is responsible management, given the amount of resources we have.

I know it is easy to take a whack on the fossil program. We have a prior amendment that has taken a whack on fossil. It is becoming the bank for every amendment that comes down the pike because it is sort of easy to attack because it is hard to visualize the benefits of a program like fossil energy research.

But the State of the gentleman from Vermont, I am quite sure, is very dependent on outside sources for energy. He would want his State to be energy independent for his industry and his other base to have the energy it needs. So I hope that the Members will reject this amendment.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS) and the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. LEWIS) for their hard work and diligence on this issue.

I would like to note that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), the chairman of Subcommittee on Interior who is running this bill here today, has been a friend of the PILT program.

While it is true this appropriations bill is flat funded, it requires difficult choices between many worthwhile projects and many worthwhile programs. But our amendment here, this amendment I am pleased to cosponsor with my friends, is really an amendment to help one of our local units of government, the local folks all across this Nation. The gentleman is right, we have to make priorities. Today I am going to stand with local units of government and ask for an increase in the PILT spending.

Mr. Chairman, as a cosponsor and strong supporter of this amendment, it would only restore desperately needed funding to the PILT program. Each year, thousands of counties across this Nation lose out on millions of dollars of property tax revenue simply because the Federal Government owns the land.

In my district, the Federal Government owns large portions of land. For example, approximately 70 percent of the land in Gogebic County is in the Ottawa National Forest and owned by the Federal government. Since the Federal government does not pay property taxes on its own land, the PILT program was established to compensate counties for land the Federal government owns.

Since its adoption in 1976, however, the PILT program has neither kept pace with its authorized funding levels nor with the true costs of providing services in support of Federal lands. In fact, the PILT program is currently funded at less than half its authorized level.

Rural counties rely on PILT payments to provide essential services such as education, law enforcement, emergency fire and medical, search and rescue, solid waste management, road maintenance, and other health and human services. Without adequate funding for this program, rural counties struggle to provide these vital services.

Mr. Chairman, if the Federal government was required to pay taxes on the property it owned like any other individual or corporation, it would have been delinquent a long time ago for failure to pay taxes. The Federal government owned so much land in some of these counties, some school districts in my congressional district cannot even bond for school improvements, for school repairs or to build new schools because there is not a large enough tax base in the county for the bond marketers to loan them the money.

So this decision and the decision we will make here tonight goes a long way in not only trying to bring some equity into the PILT program but the effects are much greater than just simply government paying its share of taxes. It is allowing communities to exist, to make improvements, and to have an equitable economic base to exist.

The Federal government has decided that it is in the best interest of the Nation to own and protect certain lands. I do not think anyone would argue with that. What we are arguing here tonight, what our amendment says, is that we must not penalize our local communities because they have the good fortune to have the Federal government have jurisdiction over land within their counties. It is irresponsible for the Federal government to take these lands off the tax roll and then not provide just compensation.

Again, since 1976, the value of that program has shrunk by more than 50 percent. Mr. Chairman, this request is only for a small increase in the PILT program, but its impact and importance on the rural counties is large.

I urge my colleagues to cast a vote in favor of equity by voting in favor of this amendment.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I join my colleagues who have previously spoken about the amendment in offering our praise to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), chairman of the Subcommittee on Interior, for the consideration that he has given in providing the funding for payment in lieu of taxes. It is reassuring and comforting to know that the committee has time and again kept faith with county governments across this country in recognizing the obligation of the Federal government to those areas of this Nation from whom land has been taken and put in public trust.

I understand the very difficult balancing act that the chairman has had to engage in. I was an original author with our former colleague, the gentleman from Colorado, Frank Evans, 25 years ago of this language. We started out with a provision that would have provided full tax equivalency, a great idea, great goal. I see the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) smiling about that, and I think he was, in principle, agreeing with us.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I can remember when Frank Evans offered the amendment in the Subcommittee on Interior that created PILT and was legislating on the appropriation. But I gather the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) did not object.

Mr. OBERSTAR. No, we did not object then.

A lot of things we do not object to legislating on appropriations bills, I would say to the gentleman from Ohio.

But we realized that that was not going to work when it turned out that one county with 1,500 people was going to get $4.5 million under this bill. So we agreed to limitations. But we also thought that successive governments, successive administrations would agree to increase the funding to keep pace with inflation. That has not happened in 20 years.

What we are doing here is helping the committee with a reallocation of priorities within its jurisdiction. We are in no way criticizing or increasing the total dollar amount but saying this should represent an adjustment of priorities within the committee's jurisdiction.

One simple down-home example, as the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) has already cited, Cook County, Minnesota, 900,000 acres, 9 percent is in private ownership. Nine percent of the land has to support 100 percent of the demands and 91 percent of the rest of the property. Three thousand six hundred people have to support all of that territory.

In the summer, there are 15,000 tourists that come into that area. Those tourism dollars do not pay for the cost of ambulances. They do not pay for the cost of emergency helicopters to go into the remote areas to rescue people who have been injured in canoe trips. They are not paying right now for the disaster that has swept through this area that I described earlier this afternoon with the July 4th storm that blew down 250,000 acres of trees, 6 million cords of wood on the ground now. This is going to be devastating for Cook County.

But they need this little bit of increase in funding to be able to meet the requirements of serving the public. They do not do it just in the summer months. They do not do it just now and then. Every day of the year that county government has to, with only 9 percent of the land, provide 100 percent of the cost, and we have not given them the resources. They cannot develop those public lands. So this little bit of payment helps make the adjustment.

The investment that the county has made, I have looked at these funds over the years, Mr. Chairman, they invested in capital equipment. They invested in capital improvements, in facilities that served the public. They are not using this money to cover the operating costs of the county, in the case of Cook County, nor in the case of Lake County or Saint Louis County. They are making permanent capital improvements to better serve the public. That is where these dollars go.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBERSTAR. I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Vermont.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I concur with the gentleman's remarks. I just mention to the Members that this amendment was endorsed by the National Association of Counties, by the Taxpayers for Common Sense, by Friends of the Earth, by the Rural Public Lands Council, by the Sierra Club, by U.S. PIRG, and by Public Citizen.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, just in conclusion, for all those who, and most of us do, support holding land in public trust for the use of all of our citizens, the common heritage of all Americans, these forest lands and park lands and wilderness lands, think of those who live on the perimeter whose lifestyles and livelihoods depend on that land held in public trust for all Americans and realize that, were they given the opportunity, they could have made some investments.

The payment in lieu of taxes helps replace the lost dollars. Support this amendment.

Mr. LEWIS of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, last year two hundred forty-one of us voted for an amendment to increase Payments in Lieu of Taxes by $20 million. Unfortunately, this addition for PILT was left out of the conference report.

This year we are again asking Congress to address the Federal Government's responsibility to help support local governments in areas where the Federal Government owns the land, removing it from the local tax base.

Federal landownership may not be as large an issue in my State of Kentucky as it is in others; however, for fiscal year 1998, local governments in Kentucky experienced nearly a $70,000 PILT loss from the previous year.

I support fossil fuel research and development projects, as these investments help make our energy more efficient, affordable and clean. However, the standard rate of PILT payments is authorized to increase from $1.47 per acre to $1.65 for this fiscal year. Full appropriation to meet this amount would have to be more than $200 million at minimum.

This amendment to provide a 16 percent PILT increase helps us to begin to reduce the continued shortfall between PILT authorization and appropriations.

Kentucky county governments that receive PILT payments depend on these funds to help provide basic services, from education to waste removal.

Edmonson County in my district is home to Mammoth Cave National Park. With a population of just 11,000 and a per capita personal income of $12,000, the importance of PILT payments to the continuation of county services at a bearable cost to the taxpayers can not be understated.

PILT funds help pay salaries and administrative expenses of the county. They help support a 24-hour ambulance service for the National Park, as well as county residents. Federal land control has contributed to the isolation of many areas in Edmonson County. When major transportation routes expanded, the county was bypassed, in favor of areas with a larger tax base to support the projects. Equitable PILT payments are needed to make up for the tax base Edmonson County has given up for the National Park.

The concerns of Edmonson County are not unique. As the Federal Government continues to place responsibilities on local governments, PILT increases are necessary to relieve taxpayers nationwide.

The Bureau of Land Management reports property taxes would provide local governments with $1.48 per acre on average. PILT payments amount to just more than 17 cents an acre.

Last year's PILT payments were 54 percent less than authorized by the Payment In Lieu of Taxes Act. This law requires the Federal Government to compensate local governments as an offset in lost property taxes due to Federal ownership.

A majority of us voted to increase PILT payments last year. Please join me again in a vote to add $20 million to PILT to help often-struggling rural areas provide vital services to their residents.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 243, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS) will be postponed.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

LAND ACQUISITION

For expenses necessary to carry out sections 205, 206, and 318(d) of Public Law 94-579, including administrative expenses and acquisition of lands or waters, or interests therein, $20,000,000, to be derived from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, to remain available until expended.

OREGON AND CALIFORNIA GRANT LANDS

For expenses necessary for management, protection, and development of resources and for construction, operation, and maintenance of access roads, reforestation, and other improvements on the revested Oregon and California Railroad grant lands, on other Federal lands in the Oregon and California land-grant counties of Oregon, and on adjacent rights-of-way; and acquisition of lands or interests therein including existing connecting roads on or adjacent to such grant lands; $99,225,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That 25 percent of the aggregate of all receipts during the current fiscal year from the revested Oregon and California Railroad grant lands is hereby made a charge against the Oregon and California land-grant fund and shall be transferred to the General Fund in the Treasury in accordance with the second paragraph of subsection (b) of title II of the Act of August 28, 1937 (50 Stat. 876).

FOREST ECOSYSTEMS HEALTH AND RECOVERY FUND

(REVOLVING FUND, SPECIAL ACCOUNT)

In addition to the purposes authorized in Public Law 102-381, funds made available in the Forest Ecosystem Health and Recovery Fund can be used for the purpose of planning, preparing, and monitoring salvage timber sales and forest ecosystem health and recovery activities such as release from competing vegetation and density control treatments. The Federal share of receipts (defined as the portion of salvage timber receipts not paid to the counties under 43 U.S.C. 1181f and 43 U.S.C. 1181f-1 et seq., and Public Law 103-66) derived from treatments funded by this account shall be deposited into the Forest Ecosystem Health and Recovery Fund.

RANGE IMPROVEMENTS

For rehabilitation, protection, and acquisition of lands and interests therein, and improvement of Federal rangelands pursuant to section 401 of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1701), notwithstanding any other Act, sums equal to 50 percent of all moneys received during the prior fiscal year under sections 3 and 15 of the Taylor Grazing Act (43 U.S.C. 315 et seq.) and the amount designated for range improvements from grazing fees and mineral leasing receipts from Bankhead-Jones lands transferred to the Department of the Interior pursuant to law, but not less than $10,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That not to exceed $600,000 shall be available for administrative expenses.

SERVICE CHARGES, DEPOSITS, AND FORFEITURES

For administrative expenses and other costs related to processing application documents and other authorizations for use and disposal of public lands and resources, for costs of providing copies of official public land documents, for monitoring construction, operation, and termination of facilities in conjunction with use authorizations, and for rehabilitation of damaged property, such amounts as may be collected under Public Law 94-579, as amended, and Public Law 93-153, to remain available until expended: Provided, That notwithstanding any provision to the contrary of section 305(a) of Public Law 94-579 (43 U.S.C. 1735(a)), any moneys that have been or will be received pursuant to that section, whether as a result of forfeiture, compromise, or settlement, if not appropriate for refund pursuant to section 305(c) of that Act (43 U.S.C. 1735(c)), shall be available and may be expended under the authority of this Act by the Secretary to improve, protect, or rehabilitate any public lands administered through the Bureau of Land Management which have been damaged by the action of a resource developer, purchaser, permittee, or any unauthorized person, without regard to whether all moneys collected from each such action are used on the exact lands damaged which led to the action: Provided further, That any such moneys that are in excess of amounts needed to repair damage to the exact land for which funds were collected may be used to repair other damaged public lands.

MISCELLANEOUS TRUST FUNDS

In addition to amounts authorized to be expended under existing laws, there is hereby appropriated such amounts as may be contributed under section 307 of the Act of October 21, 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1701), and such amounts as may be advanced for administrative costs, surveys, appraisals, and costs of making conveyances of omitted lands under section 211(b) of that Act, to remain available until expended.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Appropriations for the Bureau of Land Management shall be available for purchase, erection, and dismantlement of temporary structures, and alteration and maintenance of necessary buildings and appurtenant facilities to which the United States has title; up to $100,000 for payments, at the discretion of the Secretary, for information or evidence concerning violations of laws administered by the Bureau; miscellaneous and emergency expenses of enforcement activities authorized or approved by the Secretary and to be accounted for solely on his certificate, not to exceed $10,000; Provided, That notwithstanding 44 U.S.C. 501, the Bureau may, under cooperative cost-sharing and partnership arrangements authorized by law, procure printing services from cooperators in connection with jointly produced publications for which the cooperators share the cost of printing either in cash or in services, and the Bureau determines the cooperator is capable of meeting accepted quality standards.

UNITED STATES FISH AND WILDLIFE SERVICE RESOURCE MANAGEMENT

For necessary expenses of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, for scientific and economic studies, conservation, management, investigations, protection, and utilization of fishery and wildlife resources, except whales, seals, and sea lions, maintenance of the herd of long-horned cattle on the Wichita Mountains Wildlife Refuge, general administration, and for the performance of other authorized functions related to such resources by direct expenditure, contracts, grants, cooperative agreements and reimbursable agreements with public and private entities, $710,700,000, to remain available until September 30, 2001, except as otherwise provided herein, of which $11,701,000 shall remain available until expended for operation and maintenance of fishery mitigation facilities constructed by the Corps of Engineers under the Lower Snake River Compensation Plan, authorized by the Water Resources Development Act of 1976, to compensate for loss of fishery resources from water development projects on the Lower Snake River, and of which not less than $2,000,000 shall be provided to local governments in southern California for planning associated with the Natural Communities Conservation Planning (NCCP) program and shall remain available until expended; Provided, That not less than $1,000,000 for high priority projects which shall be carried out by the Youth Conservation Corps as authorized by the Act of August 13, 1970, as amended; Provided further, That not to exceed $6,532,000 shall be used for implementing subsections (a), (b), (c), and (e) of section 4 of the Endangered Species Act, as amended, for species that are indigenous to the United States (except for processing petitions, developing and issuing proposed and final regulations, and taking any other steps to implement actions described in subsections (c)(2)(A), (c)(2)(B)(i), or (c)(2)(B)(ii)); Provided further, That of the amount available for law enforcement, up to $400,000 to remain available until expended, may at the discretion of the Secretary, be used for payment for information, rewards, or evidence concerning violations of laws administered by the Service, and miscellaneous and emergency expenses of enforcement activity, authorized or approved by the Secretary and to be accounted for solely on his certificate; Provided further, That of the amount provided for environmental contaminants, up to $1,000,000 may remain available until expended for contaminant sample analyses; Provided further, That hereafter, all fines collected by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for violations of the Marine Mammal Protection Act (16 U.S.C. 1362-1407) and implementing regulations shall be available to the Secretary, without further appropriation, to be used for the expenses of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in administering activities for the protection and recovery of manatees, polar bears, sea otters, and walrus, and shall remain available until expended; Provided further, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, in fiscal year 1999 and thereafter, sums provided by private entities for activities pursuant to reimbursable agreements shall be credited to the "Resource Management" account and shall remain available until expended; Provided further, That, heretofore and hereafter, in carrying out work under reimbursable agreements with any State, local, or tribal government, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service may, without regard to 31 U.S.C. 1341 and notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, record obligations against accounts receivable from such entities, and shall credit amounts received from such entities to this appropriation, such credit to occur within 90 days of the date of the original request by the Service for payment.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. COBURN

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. COBURN:
Page 11, line 2, after the dollar amount insert "(reduced by $5,130,000)".

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, we do not have a copy of the amendment of the gentleman from Oklahoma, and I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington reserves a point of order.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, we have just heard a debate over why we should transfer money out of clean coal technology to a fund that was designed for conservation and protection of land and environment.

And we heard several people say that we ought to live up to that commitment, that that is the purpose for that fund. And we are going to vote on that in a little bit. This bill, in conjunction with the rest of the bills, has just as much commitment that should be attached to it.

I wanted to take a minute first and say to the chairman and the ranking member how much I appreciate the cooperation that they have given us this year in working on this bill, in taking our suggestions towards savings and the collegial manner in which they accepted some of our ideas and did not accept others. I am appreciative of the hard work they have done and the attitude with which they have accepted some of our ideas.

The purpose behind this amendment is to show the disparity when we look at just administrative accounts for the Fish and Wildlife Service. This bill, as it is presently written, has a 6.6 percent increase in administration of the Fish and Wildlife Service for a total of $114.7 million. And out of this, the central administration, that here in Washington, is increased by 6 percent; but the regional administration, those areas outside of Washington, are increased by only 3.5 percent.

So what, in effect, this bill does, besides the fact that it increases at three times the rate of inflation the bureaucracy associated with Fish and Wildlife, not touching any of the programs but just simply the administrative portion of this, it increases Washington-based bureaucracy at almost twice the rate at which we give increased funds for administration outside of Washington. The committee also increases the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation by 16.6 percent and increases the international affairs administration by 32 percent.

There is no question we should adequately fund these organizations, but I think there is a legitimate question that should be asked, and there should be an explanation by the committee as to why a bureaucracy here in Washington needs an increase in its administrative costs of 6.6 percent when, in fact, our seniors who are going to receive a Social Security increase in terms of cost of living are going to receive somewhere around 1.8 percent.

So we are going to recognize that it takes 3½ to four times to do in Washington what we are going to recognize that is needed by the members of our society who are receiving Social Security, not to mention the fact that this money is going to come out of Social Security, this increase in spending.

So the real question is, are we going to increase bureaucracy costs at a rate far above inflation and at the same time take the money to do that from the Social Security fund; or can we not pare it back to a 2 percent increase? Can we not realistically ask the employees of the Federal Government to live within the constraints we are asking the rest of the country to live within? So the purpose of this amendment basically brings us back down to a legitimate cost-of-living increase in terms of administrative costs.

I understand that Federal employees are going to have a pay increase out of that, but that is not the far and greater portion of this increase. And I would compare also the increases that were in the House-marked bill with what the Senate has marked up. And when we look at the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, they gave them an 8.3 percent increase. We have given them a 16.6 percent increase. In international affairs we gave them a 32 percent increase and the Senate gave a 4.7 percent increase.

Overall, the Senate increased 4.9 percent the cost of administration of the National Fish and Wildlife administrative overhead budget, and we have done them one better: we have increased it

6.6 percent. So all we are asking is simply give the American people a justification of why we should have this kind of increase in the administration of this agency and at the same time not be able to fund adequately some of the things that those that are dependent in our society are so desperately in need of.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COBURN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, one point I would make is that the Fish and Wildlife Service, as the gentleman knows, has been called upon here with an incredible number of habitat conservation plans all over the country, but particularly in the Pacific Northwest, California.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) has expired.

(On request of Mr. DICKS, and by unanimous consent, Mr. COBURN was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. DICKS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I would just say that there are requirements for them to have personnel. And I am very sensitive to what the gentleman said about the increase in personnel in the regions, because it is in the regional offices where most of these negotiations are under way; but there is tremendous pressure on them to be involved, for example at Pacific Lumber company on the big settlement in California, where they had to have people there who could negotiate with the State and with the private parties in order to reach these agreements, which involve thousands and thousands of acres of incredibly important habitat.

Mr. COBURN. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman makes my point. Why do we fund at a very small increase the district regional offices and we are doubling that amount for the bureaucracy here in Washington?

The point is there is no question they have a workload, and there is no question we have good employees in this agency. The question is can we afford at this day and time to grow the Federal bureaucracy here in Washington at a rate twice at which we are growing the regional bureaucracy.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I would support the gentleman if we were taking the money from out of D.C. and transferring it to the regions. That is the point I was trying to make. But as I understand the gentleman's amendment, we are not doing that. We are cutting the overall amount of money rather than transferring it from D.C. out to the regions.

Mr. COBURN. Reclaiming my time once again, the gentleman's position is whether we are taking it out of there or not, he favors a 6.6 percent increase for the bureaucracy here in Washington at the same time he is limiting the regional increase to 3.5 percent?

Mr. DICKS. No, I am not saying that. I am just saying the Fish and Wildlife Service, and also people back here, are called upon all the time to make judgments about what the regions are doing on these plans.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) has again expired.

(On request of Mr. DICKS, and by unanimous consent, Mr. COBURN was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, one of the problems here is the private sector are the people who enter into these HCPs under the ESA, and they need to have somebody to deal with. Now, some of those people are in D.C. as well. These issues get raised up to the national level to be decided.

So I am just trying to explain that there has been a tremendous increase because of all of the listings under the endangered species act. I could tell the gentleman about my own area, of the salmon listings, the Marbled Murrelets, the Spotted Owl, and the pressure not only on Fish and Wildlife but NMFS as well to work with the private sector.

Mr. COBURN. I would be happy to support the gentleman if he would offer an amendment that would move the differences in the increase from Washington to the regional offices. I would support that.

I plan on withdrawing this amendment because I have another amendment to follow it that is much less severe and brings us back in line with the Senate.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) has again expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. COBURN was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. COBURN. If we are going to enhance the ability of the Fish and Wildlife to do their job, the best way we enhance it is at the regional offices and not in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

I realize the gentleman has withdrawn his amendment, but I would point out a couple of facts, and that is that all we gave in the Washington office were for fixed costs, nothing more. There are no more people. It is a summary alignment that sort of distorted the numbers. So, in reality, we were just trying to get the fixed costs.

Also, I would mention to my colleagues that they have a wide range of responsibilities that do not always appear to most of us. When we were on the committee trip, we visited the forensic lab of the Fish and Wildlife Service, one of the finest facilities in the world, and they are called upon to provide assistance in many areas other than the United States, and of course they are compensated.

They deal with the problem of illegal taking of species. We have a treaty, the so-called Convention on International Trade and Endangered Species, and 150 nations are signatory to this treaty. It involves preventing the importation of endangered animals. They work with the Customs Service, a very impressive facility to say the least. And that of course comes under the administrative budget.

It is something that most people are not aware of, and yet it is a very vital part of having responsible enforcement of the Endangered Species Act and to ensure that we are not getting contraband in terms of furs or in terms of ivory that puts a burden on species in other parts of the world.

So I am pleased that the gentleman is going to withdraw this amendment, but I did want to mention these things because it is part of the Fish and Wildlife Service that does not get a lot of attention, but which is very important in terms of preserving species that I think are valuable to all of society.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, can the gentleman explain why our large increase in the international affairs is a $2 million increase in the budget for the administration of that one program and that is all here in Washington?

Mr. REGULA. I think I would respond to the gentleman by saying this is the program. It is not just administration. The number we have is the program. We had a lot of requests from Members on both sides of the aisle to give some additional assistance here.

I think, on balance, Fish and Wildlife has tried to be very responsible in the use of the monies we provide.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word. I am sort of sorry the gentleman withdrew his amendment because I share with him some concern about Fish and Wildlife, although I appreciate his doing that because I think that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), the chairman of the committee, as well as the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), has certainly worked hard to develop a bill that can be acceptable both to the minority and to the Senate and to the administration.

My purpose in rising today is really to enter into a colloquy with the chairman and to remind him and to remind the minority that during the recent conference committee we had on the Kosovo monies there came an issue before the committee that we had ample votes to put forth and to attach to the Kosovo legislation and it had to do with an endangered species, the Alabaman sturgeon.

If my two colleagues will recall that night, and Senator BYRD was there, calling me a rock for standing by him on a steel issue and he stood by me too on this sturgeon issue, and I appreciate Senator BYRD's doing that, but I am sure that my two colleagues are going to be upset and so is Senator BYRD when he finds out that, contrary to what we were told that night, that if we would withdraw our amendment that Fish and Wildlife would not proceed further on the endangered species program; that they are on until such time as the Senate had an opportunity to have a hearing on this prior to October of this year.

Well, contrary to the promise that we got that night, that was given to the chairman and the ranking member, and was given to me and Senator SHELBY, Fish and Wildlife ignored what they told us and proceeded almost a week later with calling for a public hearing on the sturgeon situation in Alabama, and called it at a time when neither Senator SHELBY nor I or any other member of the Alabama delegation could be there to testify.

So contrary to the wishes of the conference committee that night, they just are pressing right ahead. They simply ignore what they told us they were going to do. And I am here to tell my colleagues that we are going to have to address this once again during this process.

Not today, but sometime during this process we are going to have to teach Fish and Wildlife a lesson that they cannot come before a conference committee of the United States House and Senate and tell us they are going to do one thing, have us withdraw some proposal that is presented before us, and then turn around and do just exactly contrary to what they promised us they would do and what they backed up with a letter from the head of Fish and Wildlife.

So, Mr. Chairman, I know that you have already cut Fish and Wildlife somewhat this year. We may have to go deeper than this. But this issue of the sturgeon is going to come back in this process because we cannot tolerate a Federal agency doing this to such a prestigious committee chairman as my colleague and his ranking member.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CALLAHAN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I have two comments.

First of all, we as a committee have a difficult time making judgments on listings because of hundreds of them, as my colleague well knows.

Secondly, we do have a meeting scheduled next week on the very issue brought up. I would like to invite the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. CALLAHAN) to come to that meeting. We will be in touch with him. I plan to be there. We will have people from Fish and Wildlife, and I think we should raise the very issues that my colleague has pointed out here today.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the chairman for his comments.

The chairman is right, too. We cannot have this committee saying which species are going to be listed as endangered. And we did not ask that.

There is a 5-year study under way. We have found one of these endangered Alabama sturgeons that looks remarkably like the Mississippi sturgeon. And there are billions of them. But, in any event, we found one. We, through a grant from the U.S. Interior, have now established a program of breeding a sturgeon that looks like what they say is endangered. So we are right in the middle of a 5-year study.

Fish and Wildlife, knowing this, just suddenly decided that they wanted to go ahead and list it before we were successful in our endeavor. So I am not recommending that we start denying the Service the ability. All we asked for was a delay in order that we could have a hearing on this in the Senate.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would yield further, the meeting is scheduled for next Thursday. I was there the night when the commitment was made. We will raise all the issues that the gentleman has outlined today with Fish and Wildlife.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. COBURN

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 11, line 2, after the dollar amount insert "(reduced by $2,000,000)".

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I will not go through the details of the last amendment, but I would make a pleading to the chairman of this committee and the ranking member that the amount of increases that we have put in administration of the Fish and Wildlife far exceeds that which the Senate committee have put in and far exceeds that which is necessary on a routine basis for all of the bureaucracies within this government.

I know that we can probably come up with a justification for why we need to increase this 6.6 percent. But I would ask the ranking member and the chairman for us to really consider where this difference between the 4.9 percent increase that the Senate has and the 6.6 percent, where is the money going to come from?

We all know where it is going to come from. The money is going to come out of the Social Security trust fund in the year 2000. And if in fact we will pare back this $2 million, this $2 million is enough for 2,000 seniors to get Medicare for a year.

I am not saying the Senate is better at these than we are. What I am saying is, if we went out and asked the American public what kind of increase did they get in their operating budget to administer programs, whether it is State, local, municipal or if it is Federal, to see a 6.6 percent increase in a time when we are bound by the 1997 budget agreement, I know many of us do not feel bound by it, but I believe we should honor our commitments on this and live within the budget agreement that we voted for and passed and is a matter of law with the President, that increasing it 4.9 percent is a large increase in terms of administrative overhead and costs.

So my plea to my colleague is to at least consider this very small reduction in costs from 6.6 to 4.9 percent, saying, you know what, we really can be more efficient in the Federal government. We really do not have to spend this $2 million. We really can get by.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COBURN. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I would just say to the gentleman, we had extensive hearings on these issues; and in this bill he is going to see hundreds of puts and takes. We made cuts all over this bill, and a lot of programs were reduced. But in some cases we went along with what we considered legitimate increases. And we have got fixed costs. We have got pay. We have got GSA for the building space. I mean, these are all the costs of administration, and they do go up.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, the costs for these services last year in 1999, according to the committee print, was $109,363,000. The recommendation of my colleagues is to increase that to $116,680,000, or an increase of $7,000,317. I do not know about California, but I know about Oklahoma, and that is a big increase.

My question is, I am not saying that my colleagues could not come up with a justification. They could probably come up with a justification for raising it 10 percent or 15 percent. I will give my colleagues that, that they can come up with that. What I am saying is, realistically, they are going to go to conference with the Senate level that is well below them.

So my point is, will my colleagues consider trimming this $2 million to put it in line with the Senate, to put it in line with the realistic growth in it, and also to recognize that the $2 million is going to come out of the Social Security surplus?

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I am not prepared to go along with this. I think the recommendation of the committee is a sound recommendation.

Certain agencies, especially the Fish and Wildlife Service, with all the work that they have to do under the Endangered Species Act, I simply disagree with the gentleman respectfully. I think this is a justified increase.

I know the workload of these people because I am one of the people that is demanding that they increase their efforts. We need them to put in good people, and we want them to have good people in D.C. We want them to have good people in the regions who can make decisions and not hold up the private sector when they come up on HCPs, which happens to be something I happen to be very familiar with.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for his comments.

So, therefore, for the record, the position of the committee is that we will increase the bureaucracy in Washington at twice the rate we increase the bureaucracy in the private sector.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the interest of the gentleman and his concern about this. As we all know, our bill is underneath our allocation. So it fits into the budgetary scheme that has been created by the majority, one that I have serious reservations about, but it does.

So I would say to the gentleman, we do meet all the guidelines of the 1997 budget agreement, as far as I know. And we have tried to do the best job we could after hearing all of these witnesses. I mean, I would show the gentleman all of the books of testimony that we have. We have listened to these people go into great detail about the workload increases. I am a demon on administration, too.

Now, if this were another agency, let us say it was the National Endowment for the Arts or Humanities, I would insist that we hold down D.C. But in this case, because of the explosion of work that is being required of these agencies because of all of these listings, I must tell my colleague, I think 6 or 7 percent is very reasonable.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I say to the gentleman, he might not have heard the first portion of my statement. I did thank him and the chairman for the work they did and recognizing that this is a good bill. I am not saying this is not a good bill.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, but now the gentleman wants to come in and try to nitpick it a little bit.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would continue to yield, yes, I want to save $2 million for senior citizens for the Social Security system. There is no question I want to do that.

Mr. DICKS. But it is not going to do that. My colleague knows full well as I do that all it is going to do is get us underneath the allocation further and then the Senate or somebody else will say, well, let us increase something to get back up to the level that the majority has authorized under the Budget Act. We do not take the money from here and move it over to somewhere else.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would continue to yield, I am just trying to get us down to the Senate. It is ironic that we are above the Senate, but I am trying to get us down to the Senate.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, with all due respect, I think the gentleman should refer to it as the "other body" under the rules. I call upon the Chair to enforce the rules.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I would take that correction.

Mr. DICKS. And in good spirit.

But the other body, especially some of the leadership of the other body, may not support the Endangered Species Act and would like to see it undercut a little bit. So I would not be surprised if the other side cut back funding for the Fish and Wildlife Service because they are not as enthusiastic about it as maybe we are.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would continue to yield, I would just note from the committee print that the committee cuts ESA $5 million over last year, the Endangered Species Act in terms of the funding for it. So what they have done is cut the money for the Endangered Species Act but grow the bureaucracy. And to me I find that fairly contrary in terms of the idea.

Regardless of what the other body has done, my contention is I think that we can lead in the House over the other body and set an example.

I appreciate the gentleman yielding to me.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I think it should be pointed out here that part of this cut would come out of the money we give to the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation, which is a very responsible organization. They leverage these dollars three to one. For every one we have, they raise three in the private sector. They have a limit of 5 percent on administrative costs. They are extremely helpful in developing the habitat conservation programs.

I know that the HCPs would be something the gentleman, I believe, would strongly endorse. Because it basically takes the private sector, lays out an area for economic growth in an area for habitat, and I think it is, from what I have observed, a very positive program.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, it is a voluntary program. That is the great thing. The companies like Waterhouse, Plum Creek, Murray Pacific, they all come in, they negotiate with the Feds. But they have got to have somebody to negotiate with it.

Again, I say this, if the amendment of the gentleman were to take it out of the administration nationally and give it to the regions, I could probably support that. But just to cut it out.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would yield further, would the gentleman agree with me that at the end of this bill we would have a conforming amendment to do that?

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, well, we will consider that. We will think about that. I believe we have got some time between now and the end of this bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. Chairman, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 243, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. EHLERS

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. EHLERS:

Page 13, line 8, after the period add the following: "In addition to the other amounts made available by this paragraph, there shall be available to the Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service $422,000 to carry out section 1005 of the Great Lakes Fish and Wildlife Restoration Act of 1990 (16 U.S.C. 941c)."

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) reserves a point of order.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Chairman, the gist of this amendment is to fund an authorization which was adopted last year by the Congress and has been signed into law by the President.

I am speaking at this point on behalf of the Great Lakes. I recognize the work of the chairman of this committee, who has been very supportive of these efforts. I also recognize the activities of the chairman of the Committee of the Whole House, who has instituted some legislation in this regard. And, in fact, this amendment is an attempt to fund some activities that were sponsored by the chairman of the Committee of the Whole House.

Many Americans fail to recognize the significance of the Great Lakes. They constitute 20 percent of the world's fresh water. They constitute 95 percent of the United States' fresh surface water. They contain six quadrillion gallons of fresh water.

I find it ironic that this country has spent hundreds upon hundreds of millions of dollars, in fact, billions of dollars developing dams and other waterways in the West to provide fresh water and yet we often are stingy in providing funding for the Great Lakes, which is the greatest freshwater system in the world.

Last year, Congress unanimously passed and the President signed into law the Great Lakes Fish and Wildlife Restoration Act which reauthorized the original 1990 act. This act provides for the continuation of the Great Lakes Fish and Wildlife coordination offices, which are very important to the entire Great Lakes basin but importantly, as it relates to this amendment, the act creates a new grants program for implementation of fish and wildlife restoration projects. This structure provides a unique opportunity for enhancing coordination of restoration activities in the Great Lakes region, leveraging funds for restoration efforts and making real progress on the highest priority restoration activities needed in the region.

Enthusiasm for getting the program off to a rapid start is high in the region. In fact, interested parties have already drafted several proposals for the grant program, and the Council of Lake Committees has begun discussion of priorities.

I understand that no new grant programs were funded in this bill due to the tight budget cap and the chairman's desire to create a fair Interior appropriations bill. I also understand full well the difficulty of the appropriations process while in particular the difficulty the subcommittee chairman faced in trying to deal with this appropriations process while remaining within the caps in the 302(b) allocations.

I have a great deal of respect for the chairman of the subcommittee, Mr. REGULA. Because of that respect, I do not plan to pursue this amendment but plan to withdraw it. However, I did want to offer the amendment and debate it so that, if additional funds become available later in the appropriations process, the chairman and the subcommittee will look kindly upon funding this particular grant program. The amount of money is $422,000, which is relatively small compared to the total of the bill, and I believe it would go a great distance toward renewing the restoration efforts in the Great Lakes. It will provide sufficient funds to leverage a great deal of State money to be put into this effort.

I would appreciate any comments the chairman might make upon this issue before I officially withdraw it.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EHLERS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman makes a good point. We would hope that if there are additional funds available, that we might be able to do this. The Great Lakes are a very precious resource. Water, I think, generally is going to grow in its importance. Therefore, one of the great efforts we should make as a Nation is to preserve freshwater supplies. We have heard the stories that some States want to build pipelines up to the Great Lakes to tap into that water supply, and we have a responsibility to this Nation to maintain and improve the quality of our freshwater lakes and supply that is part of our Nation's resources.

Mr. EHLERS. Reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman for his comments and his willingness to consider this issue. Not only are other states hoping to tap into Great Lakes Water, but other countries are also seeking to tap into this supply and hope to ship water out of the Great Lakes to fulfill their own water needs. It is very important for us to maintain the purity of this water, make certain that it remains in this country, is used properly, and remains drinkable for our population. I thank the gentleman for his comments.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) for his support and for his commitment to completion of the Parker River Wildlife Refuge headquarters complex and its visitors center in Newburyport, Massachusetts. I understand that we are waiting to reach a final agreement on the total cost of the project. My current understanding is that sufficient funds from previous years exist to move this project forward in fiscal year 2000. Is that the gentleman's understanding as well?

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TIERNEY. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is correct. The Fish and Wildlife Service has told the committee that funds for planning and design are sufficient to continue this project through fiscal year 2000 and that further construction funding will not be needed for obligation until 2001. Let me assure the gentleman that the committee is committed to completing this project and to providing additional funding in the future when it is needed.

Mr. TIERNEY. Reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman and ask should new information come to light and should we reach resolution on the total cost of the project and additional funds are made available in the Interior allocation, would he consider some funding for the project in fiscal year 2000 as part of his conference negotiations?

Mr. REGULA. If the gentleman will yield further, again let me assure the gentleman that the committee considers this a worthy project and I will be happy to work with him as we move forward in conference negotiations with the other body.

Mr. TIERNEY. Again I thank the gentleman very much.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

CONSTRUCTION

For construction and acquisition of buildings and other facilities required in the conservation, management, investigation, protection, and utilization of fishery and wildlife resources, and the acquisition of lands and interests therein; $43,933,000, to remain available until expended.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GUTKNECHT

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GUTKNECHT:

Page 13, line 14, after the dollar amount insert "(increased by $250,000)".

Page 71, line 22, after the dollar amount insert "(reduced by $250,000)".

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio reserves a point of order.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, recently the President announced from the White House that the American bald eagle, a symbol of our Nation and the freedom we cherish, is no longer on our country's endangered species list. We can be proud of this accomplishment and acknowledge the efforts and the vision of the individuals who have helped save this majestic raptor from extinction.

Today, I come to the floor to ask this body's support for what I believe to be an exceptional opportunity to help one community's dream become a reality. But more importantly I believe this Congress can make a modest investment in providing an exceptional site where millions of Americans will be able to enjoy viewing the American bald eagle in its natural habitat. I am proud to report that the city of Wabasha, Minnesota, has made a real commitment to building a first-class facility where visitors can do just this.

But first I want to say that I am fully aware of the very difficult task before the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), his subcommittee and staff in developing this bill that addresses the stewardship of our Nation's natural and national resources in a responsible and balanced way. I appreciate their hard work and many worthy funding projects they have been asked to consider. Despite the subcommittee's support for the eagle center last year, I regret that the budget constraints within the U.S. Fish and Wildlife precluded the agency from extending financial support for the construction of the center.

Rather than asking the agency to draw on its limited operations budget, my amendment transfers $250,000 from the Energy Information Administration to the construction account within the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. With the EIA receiving an increase of $2.1 million over last year's budget for a total of $72.644 million, I would suggest that my proposed reduction would have a minimal impact on its operations. Indeed, the CBO has scored it to have a neutral budget impact. Again, this amendment requests a very modest contribution from the Federal Government for a project that will generate benefits that far exceed the costs.

For the past 9 years, 70 volunteers, people who live in Wabasha, Minnesota, have shared their riverfront with thousands of visitors who come to see a bald eagle in the wild. These visitors leave with a tangible connection to the eagles and a newfound interest in preserving our wildlife heritage and vanishing wild places.

But, Mr. Chairman, winters in Minnesota are very cold. An average visitor spends only about 10 minutes on the riverfront. An indoor eagle viewing and education facility would enhance the visitor experience. To get this incredible project moving forward, the city of Wabasha and the Minnesota legislature have already contributed over $1.9 million, about half of what the cost will be to build the national eagle center in Wabasha, Minnesota. Now the community is looking for a little support from Congress. I cannot think of a better way to celebrate the recovery of the once threatened American eagle.

Two years ago, CBS News reporter Harry Smith joined the ranks of America's wildlife watchers. He became a birdwatcher when he visited rural southeastern Minnesota to shoot a story about Wabasha's bald eagle center. He said, "It makes the heart quicken to see the splendid symbol of our Nation, hundreds of them, in their natural environment sitting in the cottonwoods and fishing, along the banks of the upper Mississippi River."

CBS News officials said the network received more phone calls requesting copies of Smith's eloquent story about the bald eagle's success in Wabasha than any story he has ever done.

Nowhere else in the lower 48 States can you and your family get a better view of our natural symbol. And there is nowhere else you can go to see so many bald eagles on any Sunday from November through March knowing that trained staff will be there to help you spot the birds and share information about them. And, Mr. Chairman, there is no admission charge.

Recently, the Minnesota Audubon Council and the Upper Mississippi River Campaign agreed to team up with the city to support the development of the project. They, too, recognize the eagles center as a unique visitor and teaching facility. In fact, Audubon is planning to use the center to be a key stopping point for the Great Rivers Birding Train which will run from the headwaters of the Mississippi River to the city of St. Louis.

Nationally and locally, investments in wildlife and wild places are an investment in this country's natural resource legacy and its economic future.

Mr. Chairman, I ask the chairman and my colleagues for their support of this very important amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Ohio insist on his point of order?

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman withdraws the point of order.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, there is no question that this is a great project for the people that have a chance to view it, and I am pleased to note that the State and the local community is supporting it. But I would have to point out to the gentleman that this is not Federal land and we cannot meet all the operational and maintenance needs of the refuge system, the Federal refuge system.

We have requests in our committee for $175 million worth of non-Federal projects. We just simply had to take a position that we cannot do any because if we do one, then we have to perhaps try to do a lot of others. There is a waiting list of construction and maintenance projects within the Fish and Wildlife, projects that are on existing Federal lands.

I would suggest to the gentleman that he might consider trying to get this authorized as a Federal site and then it would be easier for us to consider it. But under the present circumstances, we simply cannot start down the road of funding non-Federal projects. I would hope the gentleman would withdraw the amendment. We do have to oppose it on the basis that we have rejected $175 million worth of other projects.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. If the gentleman will yield, I think the difference here is that we are not going to be coming back every year for additional maintenance costs.

Mr. REGULA. I understand.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. The point here is that we have recognized this is the national eagles center. The city has contributed already almost $1 million, the State of Minnesota has contributed almost $1 million. They intend to raise in addition to that perhaps as much as $2 million in private resources. We are asking for a very modest investment, because it is important, it is our national symbol, it is the national eagles center. So we are asking for a very modest amount to be transferred out of a department budget that was increased by over $2.5 million.

Frankly, Mr. Chairman, I really do not want to have to come back for maintenance expenses every year. This would be just one way that the Federal Government could pick up a small portion of the overall cost.

Mr. REGULA. I understand what the gentleman is saying, but I have to point out, it is not an authorized Federal project and once we start funding these, this may be not a lot but the total of all of these projects is $175 million. We do not have it to begin with and we do not feel that we should be doing non-Federal projects when we have such a backlog of maintenance and high priority projects that are Federal lands.

I feel that the proper way would be either to get it authorized or, and I congratulate the communities, if they continue supporting this as either a State and local cooperative facility.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. With all due respect, I would hope that we can have a vote on this. We would like to have the gentleman's support. If in the end assuming that we may not prevail in this vote, it is something that is important, it is not just important to the people in Wabasha, Minnesota, it is really important to all Americans. As I say, it is one of the few places in the lower 48 United States where you can actually see eagles in the wild and I think it is going to be a tremendous resource not only for the upper Midwest but for all Americans.

Mr. REGULA. Reclaiming my time, I would ask the question of the gentleman, has there been any conversation with Fish and Wildlife as to whether or not they would like to have this in as part of their portfolio?

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Yes, I have talked to Fish and Wildlife. They very much would like to be a part of this. They did not make it a priority item on their budget list this year, but they asked me if perhaps I could get it included individually in this particular manner.

Mr. REGULA. Again reclaiming my time, I would strongly urge the gentleman to consider getting it authorized so it could be a Federal project. I realize he does not want ongoing funds, but these do have a way of needing some additional funding in future years.

□ 1830

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT).

The amendment was rejected.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair would note that the use of cellular telephones is not permitted either on the floor of the House or within the gallery, and the Chair would ask the visitor within the gallery to cease use of a cellular telephone.

The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

LAND ACQUISITION

For expenses necessary to carry out the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965, as amended (16 U.S.C. 4601-4 through 11), including administrative expenses, and for acquisition of land or waters, or interest therein, in accordance with statutory authority applicable to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, $42,000,000, to be derived from the Land and Water Conservation Fund and to remain available until expended.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Could I ask the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) what his intentions are now about how long we are going to go here before we are going to have the votes?

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, we have two additional amendments that I think we can dispose of very quickly, and then it would be our intent to go to the vote on the amendments that have been rolled, and those would be the last votes for today. We might continue. We will discuss that afterwards as to whether we want to continue any further debate on some of the amendments and roll them until tomorrow morning.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, does that include UPARR or not? Because we understand that is going to take 30 or 40 minutes.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, if my colleague likes, we have one, an amendment from the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. MCCREERY), which I will offer; and we are going to accept it. And the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) has an amendment he wants to offer, and we could do UPARR.

Mr. DICKS. Then we will be all right.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

COOPERATIVE ENDANGERED SPECIES
CONSERVATION FUND

For expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531-1543), as amended, $15,000,000, to remain available until expended.

NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE FUND

For expenses necessary to implement the Act of October 17, 1978 (16 U.S.C. 715s), $10,779,000.

NORTH AMERICAN WETLANDS CONSERVATION
FUND

For expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the North American Wetlands Conservation Act, Public Law 101-233, as amended, $15,000,000, to remain available until expended.

WILDLIFE CONSERVATION AND APPRECIATION
FUND

For necessary expenses of the Wildlife Conservation and Appreciation Fund, $800,000, to remain available until expended.

MULTINATIONAL SPECIES CONSERVATION FUND

For expenses necessary to carry out the African Elephant Conservation Act (16 U.S.C. 4201-4203, 4211-4213, 4221-4225, 4241-4245, and 1538), the Asian Elephant Conservation Act of 1997 (Public Law 105-96, 16 U.S.C. 4261-4266), and the Rhinoceros and Tiger Conservation Act of 1994 (16 U.S.C. 5301-5306), $2,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That funds made available under this Act, Public Law 105-277, and Public Law 105-83 for rhinoceros, tiger, and Asian elephant conservation programs are exempt from any sanctions imposed against any country under section 102 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. aa-1).

Appropriations and funds available to the United States Fish and Wildlife Service shall be available for purchase of not to exceed 70 passenger motor vehicles, of which 61 are for replacement only (including 36 for police-type use); repair of damage to public roads within and adjacent to reservation areas caused by operations of the Service; options for the purchase of land at not to exceed $1 for each option; facilities incident to such public recreational uses on conservation areas as are consistent with their primary purpose; and the maintenance and improvement of aquaria, buildings, and other facilities under the jurisdiction of the Service and to which the United States has title, and which are used pursuant to law in connection with management and investigation of fish and wildlife resources: Provided, That notwithstanding 44 U.S.C. 501, the Service may, under cooperative cost sharing and partnership arrangements authorized by law, procure printing services from cooperators in connection with jointly produced publications for which the cooperators share at least one-half the cost of printing either in cash or services and the Service determines the cooperator is capable of meeting accepted quality standards: Provided further, That the Service may accept donated aircraft as replacements for existing aircraft: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Interior may not spend any of the funds appropriated in this Act for the purchase of lands or interests in lands to be used in the establishment of any new unit of the National Wildlife Refuge System unless the purchase is approved in advance by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations in compliance with the reprogramming procedures contained in Senate Report 105-56.

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE

OPERATION OF THE NATIONAL PARK SYSTEM

For expenses necessary for the management, operation, and maintenance of areas and facilities administered by the National Park Service (including special road maintenance service to trucking permittees on a reimbursable basis), and for the general administration of the National Park Service, including not less than $1,000,000 for high priority projects within the scope of the approved budget which shall be carried out by the Youth Conservation Corps as authorized by 16 U.S.C. 1706, $1,387,307,000, of which $8,800,000 is for research, planning and inter-agency coordination in support of land acquisition for Everglades restoration shall remain available until expended, and of which not to exceed $8,000,000, to remain available until expended, is to be derived from the special fee account established pursuant to title V, section 5201 of Public Law 100-203.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I yield to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. JOHN).

Mr. JOHN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to rise in a brief colloquy with the subcommittee ranking member, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS).

Mr. Chairman, today I rise in support of the National Wildlife Refuge Fund, also known as the Refuge Revenue Sharing Fund, and this fund reimburses local governments for the burdens that the presence of the U.S. Wildlife and Fisheries Service acquired lands place upon them. Since Fiscal Year 1996, Congress has appropriated only $10 million for this fund, while at the same time has increased funding for the Service to provide for increased land acquisitions. These actions have caused a reduction in the funding for local governments, resulting in the loss of much-needed and very critical services.

Let me be very clear that I do support our Nation's refuges and the benefits that they provide. In fact, I have several refuges in my district alone. However, I do not believe that this is good policy to continue this trend that ultimately places an undue burden on our local governments across America.

Last year I testified in front of the Subcommittee on Interior regarding how initial transfers within local government accounts led to significant erosions of services in a parish which I represent, Cameron Parish, which is one-third owned, it has Federal refuges on them. When I testified last year, I also predicted that the percentage paid to local governments would fall below 70 percent of what we owe, of what Congress owes, unless Congress steps up to the plate. If enacted today, counties and parishes across America will receive only 56 percent of what they are entitled to through the National Wildlife Refuge Fund of Fiscal Year 2000.

I appreciate the subcommittee chair and ranking member and all the budget pressures that they are under when they are drafting and crafting this bill, but I respectfully request that during the conference committee that they be mindful of the impact that this trend has had on our local governments and work to seek additional funds for the National Wildlife Refuge Fund during the conference negotiations.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding, and I am speaking only for myself. I appreciate the gentleman raising this issue on the floor.

As my colleagues know, the committee expressed its concern regarding this trend in House Report 106-222. I assure my colleagues that we will continue to work with the gentleman and in conference to attempt to find additional resources.

The committee report says that the committee is concerned about the priorities of the Service with respect to how they relate to meeting its obligations under the National Wildlife Refuge Fund. In particular, the committee questioned why this Service has continued to acquire appreciably more land over the past few years and yet has not requested additional funding for the National Wildlife Refuge Fund. This issue should be addressed in the next year's budget request, and we will continue to work with the gentleman on this issue.

Mr. JOHN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. DICKS. I appreciate his raising it with me.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

NATIONAL RECREATION AND PRESERVATION

For expenses necessary to carry out recreation programs, natural programs, cultural programs, heritage partnership programs, environmental compliance and review, international park affairs, statutory or contractual aid for other activities, and grant administration, not otherwise provided for, $45,449,000: Provided, That no more than $100,000 may be used for overhead and program administrative expenses for the heritage partnership program.

AMENDMENT NO. 8 OFFERED BY MR. GEORGE MILLER OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 8 offered by Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California:

Page 17, line 13, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $4,000,000)".

Page 36, line 23, after each of the two dollar amounts, insert the following: "(reduced by $4,000,000)".

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is very simple. Currently, the CNMI territories have a built-up account of unspent Federal moneys in excess of $80 million that they have been unable or unwilling to match that we have appropriated to them. That is over 5 years of funding under the current regime that we have for these purposes. Because they have been unwilling or unable to match that funding, I am suggesting that we take $4 million out of that and put it into the very important and bipartisan supported Urban Parks and Recreation amendment known as the UPARR program for recreation recovery. This $4 million would allow a number of States that had had their proposals for grants turned down because funding was not provided: Alabama, 200,000; California, 630,000; Florida, 288,000; Georgia 569,000; Maryland, 249,000; Massachusetts, 600,000; Texas, 330,000; North Carolina, 88,000; Ohio, 500. These are States that have come forward and have programs to provide for the recovery of recreational facilities, worn-out facilities.

We heard earlier today about the problems that soccer teams and Little League teams and Pop Warner teams are having to find facilities to offer recreational opportunities. That is why this legislation is supported by the National Association of Police Athletic Leagues. The police associations understand the importance of giving young people constructive activities to participate in from 3 to 6 in the afternoon, but if they do not have these opportunities, unfortunately some of them go into crime and other destructive behavior.

We believe it is important to fund these efforts. There is so many, there is such a backlog of need, it will not harm the CNMI due to the fact that they have a tremendous backlog of appropriated moneys that this committee has appropriated and that they have been unable to spend.

This committee has made essentially the same decision in removing $5 million from that amount of money for the purposes of giving it to other territories who are in need of this, who have programs, who have the demand, are willing to come up, in many instances, with the money that is to be spent with a match by the local effort. I would not support this effort if this money was to come out of the other territories' budgets for that purposes, but because of the way the rules changed, I have to offer it in this fashion, but it is my intent to keep consistent with what the committee did with respect to other funds with regard to CNMI, and I would hope that the committee could support this amendment.

As my colleagues know, there has been a dramatic resurgence in support from environmental organizations, from the Conference of Mayors, from the League of Cities and from the Police Athletic Leagues, from the Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association, all of which are prepared and are raising money to help in this effort; and this Federal money, again, is used on a matching basis. Local governments must make this a priority, they must put up their own money, and this money is used to help out so many of those States like Ohio and Washington.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, we are going to accept this amendment, but let me have some qualifiers. I think that we need to explore this more clearly, but I believe the Commonwealth of Northern Mariana Islands is mandatory payment, and I do not believe that we can take money out of that as proposed in the amendment. And, therefore, in the absence of having access to the CNMI money, the money would therefore have to come out of the Office of Insular Affairs. And that means American Samoa operations. It means from Brown Tree Snake control, from technical assistance to the territories and other vital programs. And these are poor areas, and I do not think the gentleman would want to do that, given his concern for people.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate that qualifier, and I tried to say that in my rushed opening statement here. That would not be my intent.

As my colleagues know, this UPARR money is part of the President's request that my colleagues have tried to deal with, and I guess what I am counting on is, just as the gentleman tried to find additional moneys for the territories out of this account, that his creative talents would also find money perhaps for UPARR, which has such tremendous support on both sides of the aisle. If that is not able to happen, then I would not expect my colleague then to go to the next step, which would be to take money from the territories.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I appreciate the gentleman's comments, and based on that we accept the amendment.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman for his amendment. We accepted it last year, we continue to work with him, and hopefully it will go further this year than it did last year.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for his remarks.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, it is a very strong endorsement. I support it. I think it is a good program.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

I will not use the full time. I was very disappointed the chairman accepted the amendment. It is a bad amendment. See, my money is, in fact, guaranteed money to the CMI. I am sure he pointed it out. This is a mischievous amendment. It should never have been offered. I would suggest respectfully that the amendment should be soundly defeated. We will not vote on it because the gentleman has accepted it. But it better not be in the conference when it comes back to this House floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

HISTORIC PRESERVATION FUND

For expenses necessary in carrying out the Historic Preservation Act of 1966, as amended (16 U.S.C. 470), and the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-333), $46,712,000, to be derived from the Historic Preservation Fund, to remain available until September 30, 2001, of which $11,722,000, pursuant to section 507 of Public Law 104-333 shall remain available until expended: Provided, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, effective October 1, 1999 and thereafter the National Park Service may recover and expend all fee revenues derived from providing necessary review services associated with historic preservation tax certification, and such funds shall remain available until expended: Provided further, That section 403(a) of the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966 (16 U.S.C. 470x-2(a)) is amended by striking the last sentence.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. REGULA

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment on behalf of the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. MCCREARY).

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. REGULA:

Page 18, beginning at line 5, strike "Provided further;" and all that follows through line 8 and insert a period.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, we were unaware of local opposition to this language when it was inserted in the bill in the other body last year, and we included it this year, and we accept the amendment to strike the provision, and this will enable the parties to negotiate on the issue of moving this facility.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, we have no objection on this side.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA).

The amendment was agreed to.

□ 1845

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONSTRUCTION

For construction, improvements, repair or replacement of physical facilities, including the modifications authorized by section 104 of the Everglades National Park Protection and Expansion Act of 1989, $169,856,000 to remain available until expended: Provided, That, notwithstanding any other provision of law, hereafter all franchise fees collected from Statue of Liberty National Monument concessioners shall be covered into a special account established in the Treasury of the United States and shall be immediately available for expenditure by the Secretary for the purposes of stabilizing, rehabilitating and adaptively reusing deteriorated portions of Ellis Island grounds and buildings: Provided further, That, beginning in fiscal year 2001, expenditure of such fees is contingent upon a dollar-for-dollar, non-Federal cost share: Provided further, That the National Park Service will make available 37 percent, not to exceed $1,850,000, of the total cost of upgrading the Mariposa County, CA municipal solid waste disposal system: Provided further, That Mariposa County will provide assurance that future use fees paid by the National Park Service will be reflective of the capital contribution made by the National Park Service.

LAND AND WATER CONSERVATION FUND
(RESCISSION)

The contract authority provided for fiscal year 2000 by 16 U.S.C. 4601-10a is rescinded.

LAND ACQUISITION AND STATE ASSISTANCE

For expenses necessary to carry out the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965, as amended (16 U.S.C. 4601-4 through 11), including administrative expenses, and for acquisition of lands or waters, or interest therein, in accordance with statutory authority applicable to the National Park Service, $102,000,000, to be derived from the Land and Water Conservation Fund, to remain available until expended, of which $500,000 is to administer the State assistance program, and of which $42,400,000 for Federal land acquisition for the Everglades National Park, Big Cypress National Preserve, Biscayne National Park, and State grants for land acquisition in the State of Florida are contingent upon the following: (1) a signed, binding agreement between all principal Federal and non-Federal partners involved in the South Florida Restoration Initiative which provides specific volume, timing, location and duration of flow specifications and water quality measurements which will guarantee adequate and appropriate guaranteed water supply to the natural areas in southern Florida including all National Parks, Preserves, Wildlife Refuge lands, and other natural areas to ensure a restored ecosystem; (2) the submission of detailed legislative language to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations, which accomplishes this goal; and (3) submission of a complete prioritized non-Federal land acquisition project list: Provided, That from the funds made available for land acquisition at Everglades National Park and Big Cypress National Preserve, after the requirements under this heading have been met, the Secretary may provide Federal assistance to the State of Florida for the acquisition of lands or waters, or interests therein, within the Everglades watershed (consisting of lands and waters within the boundaries of the South Florida Water Management District, Florida Bay and the Florida Keys) under terms and conditions deemed necessary by the Secretary, to improve and restore the hydrological function of the Everglades watershed: Provided further, That funds provided under this heading to the State of Florida are contingent upon new matching non-Federal funds by the State and shall be subject to an agreement that the lands to be acquired will be managed in perpetuity for the restoration of the Everglades: Provided further, That lands shall not be acquired for more than the approved appraised value (as addressed in section 301(3) of Public Law 91-646) except for condemnations, declarations of taking, and lands with appraised value of $50,000 or less.

AMENDMENT NO. 7 OFFERED BY MR. MICA

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 7 offered by Mr. MICA:

Page 19, line 20, before the dollar amount, insert "$9,000,000 is for grants to the State of Florida for acquisition of land along the St. Johns River in Central Florida, and of which".

Page 19, line 20, after the dollar amount, insert "(reduced by $9,000,000)".

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, on that I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order is reserved.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I will try to be brief.

First of all, I want to thank the chairman of the committee, the ranking member, and others, staff that have been so courteous to me in the past in trying to meet some of the concerns relating to protection of lands, endangered lands in Florida and other projects.

Mr. Chairman, I rise with this amendment not to ask for any more money, we have $114 million for Everglades restoration, but asking for consideration as we move forward in this process to take a small amount, approximately $9 million, about 8 percent of this total, for use in preservation of the land along the St. John's River.

We cannot just put all of our dollars and all of our money into restoration projects in Florida. It is critical that we do not repeat the mistakes of the past. I was raised in south Florida, and now we are spending somewhere, in the Chairman's estimate, and the Corps of Engineers brought first on July 4 a proposal to spend somewhere between $7.8 and the chairman has estimated this may cost us $10 billion, between $8 and $10 billion to restore the Everglades.

What I am asking for here is consideration not to make the same mistake in central and north Florida, that we must preserve that land along John's River.

We have been successful today in acquiring 16,000 of 18,000 acres, which will connect the Ocala National Forest with the State Park just north of Orlando. That area is being inundated by growth that we saw years and years ago in south Florida, and we cannot make the same mistake now.

My plea this evening, Mr. Chairman, is that we take a few dollars and wisely set them aside for preservation of that precious St. John's River area that needs to be preserved, so we will not be coming back in 10 or 20 years and asking for billions and billions in restoration when we can spend a few million now for preservation.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment so we can proceed with the business. I know the chairman will acquiesce to my request in conference.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

SEQUENTIAL VOTES POSTPONED IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 243, proceedings will now resume on those amendments on which further proceedings were postponed in the following order: Amendment No. 6 offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN); amendment No. 13 offered by the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS); and an amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN).

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first vote in this series.

AMENDMENT NO. 6 OFFERED BY MR. MCGOVERN

The CHAIRMAN. The pending business is the demand for a recorded vote on amendment No. 6 offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the noes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

The Clerk redesignated the amendment.

RECORDED VOTE

The CHAIRMAN. A recorded vote has been demanded.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 213, noes 202, not voting 19, as follows:

Mr. LATHAM changed his vote from "aye" to "no."

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. KUYKENDALL. Mr. Chairman, I was unavoidably detained and missed rollcall vote No. 282, on the Sanders Amendment No. 13. Had I been here, I would have voted "aye."

Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained and missed rollcall vote No. 283, on the Coburn Amendment No. 2. Had I been here, I would have voted "no."

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

For the Members' information, what we plan to do is to rise from the Committee temporarily so that we can file Treasury Post Office, and we will then reconvene.

We have about four amendments that I think will be noncontroversial. We will try to get those out of the way, and that will conclude the business for the evening. There will be no more votes today.

Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD) having assumed the chair, Mr. LATOURETTE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

REPORT ON H.R. 2490, TREASURY, POSTAL SERVICE, AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. KOLBE, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 106-231) on the bill (H.R. 2490) making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under clause 1 of rule XXI, all points of order against provisions in the bill are reserved.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR
AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 243 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2466.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, with Mr. LATOURETTE in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose earlier today, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) had been disposed of. The bill has been read through line 6 of page 21.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GEORGE MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment and I ask unanimous consent that it be considered at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California:

Insert before the short title the following new section:

SEC. ____ None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used to directly construct timber access roads in the National Forest System.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to be joined by the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) and the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE) in offering this amendment. This is intended to be a friendly amendment, one that is consistent with the committee's recommendation in its report on page 91.

After many years of debate and close votes on this floor, this amendment would put the House clearly on record to end the controversial practice of using taxpayer subsidies to construct roads for commercial timber sales on national forest land. It is a straightforward amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the taxpayers have helped construct over 483,000 miles of authorized roads in our national forests. That is a road system that is eight times, eight times longer than the interstate highway system, enough to circle the globe 15 times. While the administration has been happy to request and Congress has been happy to provide funding for new road construction in the past years, we have not been very adept at providing funds for maintaining existing roads.

As a result, the Forest Service estimates that there is a backlog of $8.4 million in capital improvements needed on forest roads for heavily used passenger vehicles. Less than 20 percent of the roads are being maintained to the safety and design standards.

Under Secretary Jim Lyons and Forest Service Chief Mike Dombeck have testified repeatedly before Congress that it is fiscally and environmentally irresponsible to keep building new roads when they do not have the budget to address the annual maintenance needs or begin to address the backlog of maintenance on the existing road system. While I appreciate the committee has provided a $19 million increase in road maintenance, that is still much less than the $500 million annually needed that the agency estimates is necessary to catch up with the backlog of needs.

Recognizing that they have a major problem on their hands, the Forest Service is in the midst of an 18-month moratorium on new road construction in roadless areas in most national forests. The purpose of this time-out is to develop a long-term road policy and identify nonessential roads and those roads that should be reconstructed and maintained for safe and environmentally sound practices.

In my view, the remaining roadless areas in our national forests are vital reserves and must be maintained for clean water, fish and wildlife habitat, low-impact recreation, and wilderness values. I have joined with the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY), the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE), and the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN), along with 162 of our colleagues, in urging the administration to come up with long-term protections of these critical roadless areas.

In closing, I wish to recognize the chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), and the ranking member, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), for their work in the committee report to resolve what has been a contentious issue in past years. I also want to acknowledge the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) and our former colleague, Mr. Joe Kennedy, who were pioneers in this effort to reduce taxpayer subsidies to timber roads.

Mr. Chairman, I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word and to engage the author of the amendment, the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER), in a colloquy.

I would like to ask the gentleman from California if he could help me clarify his amendment. Is it the gentleman's intention that his amendment apply only to appropriations for direct construction of timber access roads and not to any of the necessary planning, engineering, management, and support activities conducted by the agency?

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman that he is correct.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, if the amendment is written to specifically target only appropriations for direct construction of timber access roads, I am pleased to support it. What I believe the gentleman is trying to accomplish is codification of the language already contained in the interior appropriations report on this matter.

For clarification, this amendment addresses the issue of appropriations for direct construction of timber access roads and does not affect the other necessary planning, engineering, management, and support activities of the Federal land management agencies. It will also not reduce or prohibit any funding which enables the agency to comply with necessary environmental regulations such as the Endangered Species Act, the Clean Water Act, and the National Environmental Policy Act.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I would say the gentleman is correct.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I would like to submit for the RECORD information regarding the Urban Park and Recreation Fund.

The following is according to the fiscal year 2000 budget justification submitted by the National Park Service in support of the Urban Park and Recreation Recovery Program:

URBAN PARK AND RECREATION FUND

Funding provided in the past has also contributed to the development of programs and projects such as the innovation project established in Tacoma, Washington. The goals of this innovative project were to provide at-risk youth alternatives to gangs and drugs through participation in outdoor recreation activities, and to develop life skills such as self-esteem, leadership, decision-making, and cooperation. The program was designed to operate as an extensive partnership involving professionals from the disciplines of parks and recreation, education, city government, social services and criminal justice. It was designed to operate year-around with expanded activity during the summer months and over extended holiday periods. Youth participants were involved through various avenues such as schools, home school associations, youth service agencies and neighborhood community centers. The program has provided various activities such as backpacking in Olympic National Park; white water rafting on the Thompson River in British Columbia; cross-country skiing in Mount Rainier National Park; winter camping, inner-tubing and snow shoeing in various winter sports areas; water safety instruction; fishing, canoeing, boating and swimming, mountain biking on designated State and Federal lands; weekly environmental education and outdoor skills workshops; leadership training for advanced youth participants; and youth hosting and meeting travelers from around the world.

The Tacoma program blossomed, leveraged other sources of funding and continues today as a model partnership program involving schools, government, criminal justice, social service and park and recreation agencies. It has since expanded to the adjacent community of Enumclaw, Washington. New partnerships have been formed with agencies such as Faith Group Homes and the Pierce County Juvenile Courts Probated Youth Program. This Tacoma program has received national recognition and was featured at a February 1995 invitational colloquium at Fort Worth, Texas, titled "Recreation for At-Risk Youth: Programs that Work," sponsored by the National Park and Recreation Association.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is a logical fulfillment of the agreement reached among Republicans last year to end the purchaser road credit. This amendment simply reiterates that no Federal funds have been appropriated to improve or construct timber access roads. Language with the identical substantive effect is already in the report accompanying the bill.

Just to clarify, this amendment applies only to the use of appropriated funds for actual construction of roads. Funds may still be used for the engineering design associated with road construction and reconstruction projects as well as for environmental reviews and public involvement. And private funds may still be used for road construction and reconstruction in any area where roads may be built, just as the report states.

This amendment is narrow, but it is a great step forward, concluding the work begun last year. Road costs must be borne by the companies that will benefit from their use. That is a win for the taxpayers and a win for the environment. I am pleased this amendment has drawn broad bipartisan support.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman for yielding, and I just wanted to say I was remiss in not mentioning his name when I was thanking those who had made this agreement possible so that the chairman and the ranking member could come to this agreement.

As the gentleman knows, he has the battle scars of many contentious battles on this floor over forest policy and road policy, and I want to thank him for his efforts last year, along with the members of the committee that dealt with the first step in this process, and for his support for this amendment, and again to the chairman and to the ranking member for their efforts in the markups of this legislation before it came to the floor.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOEHLERT. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, we have no problem with this amendment. It simply codifies what we had directed be done last year in the bill, and so it is appropriate to accept this amendment and we support it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 12 OFFERED BY MR. NEY

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendment No. 12, and I ask unanimous consent that it be considered at this time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Page 39, line 25, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $5,000,000)".

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, let me just start by congratulating the chairman, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), and the other members of the committee for a fine bill they have crafted. The purpose of this amendment will be to reduce the total amount for the departmental management in the Department of the Interior by $5 million.

As Members of the House, we just recently and have consistently cut our own Members' representational accounts. We have cut our franking accounts so we can show the American people we are willing to make sacrifices to balance the Nation's budget. I think it is only fair we begin cutting out some of the bureaucracy in some of the agencies, and I intend to do amendments along the appropriations process that will help to accomplish this.

With the help of the Congressional Research Service, I was able to find that the Department of Interior roughly has in the account $126 million in expense, of which travel is a part of it, for fiscal year 1998.

I think that there is significant and enough money in this account and it can sustain some type of cut that will again be part of the process to help to continue to balance our budget. I arrived at the $5 million figure by taking roughly 4 percent of the fiscal year 1998 report. Unfortunately, we do not have the 1999 numbers because they have not yet to be filed.

So, as my colleagues can see, the reduction of the $5 million comes out of the departmental management section of the bill, which is funded actually at $62.9 million. The Department of the Interior uses funds from this account and others for their travel. Reduction by the $5 million would fund the departmental management section at $57.9 million.

We as Members, Mr. Chairman, have sacrificed our MRAs, franking accounts, and rightfully so. We have even cut the Congressional Research Service. I feel that the bureaucracy can sustain this reduction.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would advise the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY) that we have cut this account $2 million already below the 1999 level and recognize that, in an effort to save money, this I think might be a little bit heavy. We need to assess it, and we could do that in the conference procedure.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I agree with the chairman. I mean, we have I think been very tight in terms of these increases. We have tried to hold them down. And we are talking about the management of the Department of the Interior, which is an agency that we demand a lot of. The Secretary of the Department of the Interior, his office, are under tremendous pressure on a whole series of fronts.

I mentioned to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. COBURN) earlier, just the work that is being done today with all the very important habitat conservation plans that require input from the Secretary, they have got all the tribal account problems that we have been trying to get straightened out; and I just think that we are within our allocation. We have cut a lot of accounts here. This is one that I hope that we could spare. And I agree with the chairman that this is something we ought to continue to look at as we go into the conference.

So I urge a "no" vote unless the gentleman wants to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. NEY. Mr. Chairman, let me just say that I do want to congratulate both gentlemen. I think they have done a fine job of this bill and on the accounts. And I just wanted to just note, we have cut in Congress our accounts and we have squeezed a little bit more.

So I just think that, in the areas of travel, all the agencies in the Federal government can squeeze just a little bit more out.

But I want to mention, my colleagues have done a fine job on the existing accounts.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, let me just tell the gentleman that some of these things that we are talking about are uncontrollable. And these are pay raises that are, under the law, required. They have got Worker Compensation payments, unemployment compensation payments, rental payments to the GSA, some of which go up automatically.

So I do not believe that there is anything untoward here or anything that is excess. It is just that the cost of administration of these agencies goes up some each year. I think that this is a reasonable request and, therefore, again I urge a "no" vote on this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. NEY).

The amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. FALEOMAVAEGA

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA: At the end of title I, page 56, after line 2, insert the following new section:

SEC. ____ (a) LOAN TO BE GRANTED.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law or of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter the "Secretary"), in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury, shall make available to the government of American Samoa (hereinafter "ASG"), the benefits of a loan in the amount of $18,600,000 bearing interest at a rate equal to the United States Treasury cost of borrowing for obligations of similar duration. Repayment of the loan shall be secured and accomplished pursuant to this section with funds, as they become due and payable to ASG from the Escrow Account established under the terms and conditions of the Tobacco Master Settlement Agreement (and the subsequent Enforcing Consent Decree) (hereinafter collectively referred to as "the Agreement") entered into by the parties November 23, 1998, and judgment granted by the High Court of American Samoa on January 5, 1999 (Civil Action 119-98, American Samoa Government v. Philip Morris Tobacco Co., et. al.).

(b) CONDITIONS REGARDING LOAN PROCEEDS.—Except as provided under subsection (e), no proceeds of the loan described in this section shall become available until ASG—

(1) has enacted legislation, or has taken such other or additional official action as the Secretary may deem satisfactory to secure and ensure repayment of the loan, irrevocably transferring and assigning for payment to the Department of the Interior (or to the Department of the Treasury, upon agreement between the Secretaries of such Departments) all amounts due and payable to ASG under the terms and conditions of the Agreement for a period of 26 years with the first payment beginning in 2000, such repayment to be further secured by a pledge of the full faith and credit of ASG;

(2) has entered into an agreement or memorandum of understanding described in subsection (c) with the Secretary identifying with specificity the manner in which approximately $14,300,000 of the loan proceeds will be used to pay debts of ASG incurred prior to April 15, 1999; and

(3) has provided to the Secretary an initial plan of fiscal and managerial reform as described in subsection (d) designed to bring the ASG's annual operating expenses into balance with projected revenues for the years 2003 and beyond, and identifying the manner in which approximately $4,300,000 of the loan proceeds will be utilized to facilitate implementation of the plan.

(c) PROCEDURE AND PRIORITIES FOR DEBT PAYMENTS.—

(1) In structuring the agreement or memorandum of understanding identified in subsection (b)(2), the ASG and the Secretary shall include provisions, which create priorities for the payment of creditors in the following order—

(A) debts incurred for services, supplies, facilities, equipment and materials directly connected with the provision of health, safety and welfare functions for the benefit of the general population of American Samoa (including, but not limited to, health care, fire and police protection, educational programs grades K - 12, and utility services for facilities belonging to or utilized by ASG and its agencies), wherein the creditor agrees to compromise and settle the existing debt for a payment not exceeding 75 percent of the amount owed, shall be given the highest priority for payment from the loan proceeds under this section;

(B) debts not exceeding a total amount of $200,000 owed to a single provider and incurred for any legitimate governmental purpose for the benefit of the general population of American Samoa, wherein the creditor agrees to compromise and settle the existing debt for a payment not exceeding 70 percent of the amount owed, shall be given the second highest priority for payment from the loan proceeds under this section;

(C) debts exceeding a total amount of $200,000 owed to a single provider and incurred for any legitimate governmental purpose for the benefit of the general population of American Samoa, wherein the creditor agrees to compromise and settle the existing debt for a payment not exceeding 65 percent of the amount owed, shall be given the third highest priority for payment from the loan proceeds under this section;

(D) other debts regardless of total amount owed or purpose for which incurred, wherein the creditor agrees to compromise and settle the existing debt for a payment not exceeding 60 percent of the amount owed, shall be given the fourth highest priority for payment from the loan proceeds under this section;

(E) debts described in subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), and (D) of this paragraph, wherein the creditor declines to compromise and settle the debt for the percentage of the amount owed as specified under the applicable subparagraph, shall be given the lowest priority for payment from the loan proceeds under this section.

(2) The agreement described in subsection (b)(2) shall also generally provide a framework whereby the Governor of American Samoa shall, from time to time, be required to give 10 business days notice to the Secretary that ASG will make payment in accordance with this section to specified creditors and the amount which will be paid to each of such creditors. Upon issuance of payments in accordance with the notice, the Governor shall immediately confirm such payments to the Secretary, and the Secretary shall within three business days following receipt of such confirmation transfer from the loan proceeds an amount sufficient to reimburse ASG for the payments made to creditors.

(3) The agreement may contain such other provisions as are mutually agreeable, and which are calculated to simplify and expedite the payment of existing debt under this section and ensure the greatest level of compromise and settlement with creditors in order to maximize the retirement of ASG debt.

(d) FISCAL AND MANAGERIAL REFORM PROGRAM.—

(1) The initial plan of fiscal and managerial reform, designed to bring ASG's annual operating expenses into balance with projected revenues for the years 2003 and beyond as required under subsection (b)(3), should identify specific measures which will be implemented by ASG to accomplish such goal, the anticipated reduction in government operating expense which will be achieved by each measure, and should include a timetable for attainment of each reform measure identified therein.

(2) The initial plan should also identify with specificity the manner in which approximately $4,300,000 of the loan proceeds will be utilized to assist in meeting the reform plan's targets within the timetable specified through the use of incentives for early retirement, severance pay packages, outsourcing services, or any other expenditures for program elements reasonably calculated to result in reduced future operating expenses for ASG on a long term basis.

(3) Upon receipt of the initial plan, the Secretary shall consult with the Governor of American Samoa, and shall make any recommendations deemed reasonable and prudent to ensure the goals of reform are achieved. The reform plan shall contain objective criteria that can be documented by a competent third party, mutually agreeable to the Governor and the Secretary. The plan shall include specific targets for reducing the amounts of ASG local revenues expended on government payroll and overhead (including contracts for consulting services), and may include provisions which allow modest increases in support of the LBJ Hospital Authority reasonably calculated to assist the Authority implement reforms which will lead to an independent audit indicating annual expenditures at or below annual Authority receipts.

(4) The Secretary shall enter into an agreement with the Governor similar to that specified in subsection (c)(2) of this section, enabling ASG to make payments as contemplated in the reform plan and then to receive reimbursement from the Secretary out of the portion of loan proceeds allocated for the implementation of fiscal reforms.

(5) Within 60 days following receipt of the initial plan, the Secretary shall approve an interim final plan reasonably calculated to make substantial progress toward overall reform. The Secretary shall provide copies of the plan, and any subsequent modifications, to the House Committee on Resources, the House Committee on Appropriations Subcommittee on the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies, the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources, and the Senate Committee on Appropriations Subcommittee on the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies.

(6) From time to time as deemed necessary, the Secretary shall consult further with the Governor of American Samoa, and shall approve such mutually agreeable modifications to the interim final plan as circumstances warrant in order to achieve the overall goals of ASG fiscal and managerial reforms.

(e) RELEASE OF LOAN PROCEEDS.—From the total proceeds of the loan described in this section, the Secretary shall make available—

(1) upon compliance by ASG with paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(2) of this section and in accordance with subsection (c), approximately $14,300,000 in reimbursements as requested from time to time by the Governor for payments to creditors;

(2) upon compliance by ASG with paragraphs (b)(1) and (b)(3) of this section and in accordance with subsection (d), approximately $4,300,000 in reimbursements as requested from time to time by the Governor for payments associated with implementation of the interim final reform plan; and

(3) notwithstanding paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, at any time the Secretary and the Governor mutually determine that the amount necessary to fund payments under paragraph (2) will total less than $4,300,000 then the Secretary may approve the amount of any unused portion of such sum for additional payments against ASG debt under paragraph (1).

(f) EXCEPTION.— Proceeds from the loan under this section shall be used solely for the purposes of debt payments and reform plan implementation as specified herein, except that the Secretary may provide an amount equal to not more than 2 percent of the total loan proceeds for the purpose of retaining the services of an individual or business entity to provide direct assistance and management expertise in carrying out the purposes of this section. Such individual or business entity shall be mutually agreeable to the Governor and the Secretary, may not be a current or former employee of, or contractor for, and may not be a creditor of ASG. Notwithstanding the preceding 2 sentences, the Governor and the Secretary may agree to also retain the services of any semi-autonomous agency of ASG which has established a record of sound management and fiscal responsibility, as evidenced by audited financial reports for at least 3 of the past 5 years, to coordinate with and assist any individual or entity retained under this subsection.

(g) CONSTRUCTION.—The provisions of this section are expressly applicable only to the utilization of proceeds from the loan described in this section, and nothing herein shall be construed to relieve ASG from any lawful debt or obligation except to the extent a creditor shall voluntarily enter into an arms length agreement to compromise and settle outstanding amounts under subsection (c).

(h) TERMINATION.—The payment of debt and the payments associated with implementation of the interim final reform plan shall be completed not later than October 1, 2003. On such date, any unused loan proceeds totaling $1,000,000 or less shall be transferred by the Secretary directly to ASG. If the amount of unused loan proceeds exceeds $1,000,000, then such amount shall be credited to the total of loan repayments specified in paragraph (b)(1). With approval of the Secretary, ASG may designate additional payments from time to time from funds available from any source, without regard to the original purpose of such funds.

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from American Samoa?

There was no objection.

(Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Chairman, it would have been totally impossible for me if it had not been for the support and certainly the patience of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations on the Interior, and also the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS), the ranking Democrat, for their support and assistance in getting this amendment worked out.

Mr. Chairman, my amendment would authorize a procedure by which the American Samoan government can irrevocably assign for 26 years the rights to its proceeds under the 46-State tobacco lawsuit settlement; and, in return, American Samoa will receive $18.6 million from the United States government for a period of 3 years. The United States will receive back about $40 million in principal and interest and an additional amount required by CBO to score the provision as budget neutral.

Mr. Chairman, the money would be used to reduce the critical existing debt of the local government and to implement certain fiscal reforms. For this arrangement to become effective, local government would have to enter into an agreement with the Secretary of the Interior for the use of the funds; and each payment would have to be approved in advance by the Secretary of the Interior.

Mr. Chairman, the money for the financial reform of the American Samoan government would be used to reduce the size of the territorial workforce. Options could be used such as buyouts, early retirements and would be included in the agreement instituted between the Secretary of the Interior and the local government.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment has the endorsement of both the chairman of the Committee on Resources, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), as well as the ranking Democrat, the gentleman from California (Mr. MILLER), supported this amendment.

I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Chairman, I include the following letter for the RECORD:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, July 1, 1999.

Hon. NORM DICKS,
Ranking Member, Subcommittee on Interior and Related Agencies, House Committee on Appropriations, Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN DICKS: We have been contacted by our Colleague, Mr. Faleomavaega, seeking clearance of the House Committee on Resources for a proposal he is seeking to have incorporated into the pending FY2000 Interior Appropriations legislation. His proposal would have the Secretary of Interior arrange for an "advance" to the government of American Samoa (ASG) in the form of a fully repayable loan, secured by ASG's future payments from the 46-state tobacco lawsuit settlement. The purpose of this advance would be limited to payment of existing ASG debt, with a small portion available to fund implementation of badly-needed ASG fiscal and managerial reforms, and would be overseen by the Secretary.

It is our further understanding that the Congressional Budget Office has determined the budget impact score of the proposal to be "neutral" since ASG would be required to fully repay the $18.6 million principal, with interest, over a period of 26 years.

This letter is to inform you and the Members of your subcommittee that, on behalf of the House Committee on Resources, we have not reservations or objections to inclusion of the provision as currently drafted into the pending Interior Appropriations measure. Properly implemented, we believe this self-help project will greatly benefit both the people and the government of American Samoa in resolving a crucial fiscal dilemma and building a foundation for future progress and greater self-sufficiency. We encourage adoption of the proposal.

Sincerely,

DON YOUNG,
Chairman, House Committee on Resources.

GEORGE MILLER,
Senior Democratic Member, House Committee on Resources.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, this is an 11-page piece of legislation. I think normally it should be handled by the authorizing committees. We do not have any objection to the substance of the amendment and are not going to oppose it. But I do think that it ought to be considered as part of the authorizing process. However, we will not object.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I want to compliment the gentleman for his outstanding work and his ingenuity. I have no objection to the amendment. In fact, we enthusiastically support it on this side.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from American Samoa (Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA).

The amendment was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. CROWLEY

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CROWLEY:
Page 101, line 23, insert after "individuals" the following: ", including urban minorities."

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be considered out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

(Mr. CROWLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today as a strong supporter of the National Endowment for the Arts and as a strong believer in the positive effect that the arts have on our urban communities.

The National Endowment for the Arts has continued its laudable mission to bring the arts to segments of the population that would otherwise have a hard time accessing them. Through local theater troop performances and through shows at small museums, hundreds of communities have received exposure to the arts because of the NEA.

In order to ensure that all Americans have equal access to the arts, the NEA strives to give priority "to providing services or awarding financial assistance for projects, productions, workshops, or programs that serve underserved populations."

The purpose behind my amendment is to help the NEA achieve its commendable goal of leaving no American untouched by the arts. To that end, I am proposing that this bill makes specific mention of one traditionally underserved population, urban minorities. I believe Congress should encourage the NEA to fund programs that improve the availability of the arts to minority populations in our cities.

Quite often, NEA funding has been directed to groups which serve an upper middle class audience. Many times these groups are inaccessible to many minority groups.

Mr. Chairman, in my own Congressional District of Queens, there is a large Latino population that the Queens Theatre in the Park targets each summer with its Latin Arts Festival, a multi-cultural ethnic celebration. This festival, though certainly successful in its own right, would greatly benefit from additional Federal funding.

The Queens Theater in the Park has consistently applied for Federal support from the NEA but has been denied funding despite the fact that they target an underserved community. For many families in my district, the average $75 cost to a Broadway play is far too expensive. Queens Theater in the Park and other local community arts groups are the only exposure many of my residents have to the arts.

That is but one example of the difficulty facing minority populations in accessing the arts in Queens, New York, and the Bronx and around this country. Projects targeted at urban youth would greatly help keep them off the streets and away from crime and drugs.

In the President's own NEA budget, he outlined a key initiative to use the arts as a way to help at-risk youths.

Mr. Chairman, in New York and in communities throughout our American cities there are tens of thousands of at-risk youths who will benefit from exposure to the arts. This amendment would help send a message to our urban youth that we are interested in improving their quality of life by helping to bring the arts to them.

The arts help break down the barriers caused by economic and cultural diversity that bring communities together and they offer hope.

I am not suggesting that we take funding away from any other program. I am only suggesting that we give projects affecting underserved minority communities, whether they be in our cities or our rural areas, equal access to important NEA funding.

Once again, let me state that this amendment will not expand the scope of the original language. It will merely perfect that language by emphasizing that urban minorities are included within the term "underserved population."

I urge my colleagues to stand up for equal access to the arts and support the Crowley amendment.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman for his amendment. I think it is very thoughtful.

I must tell him that I had the pleasure of taking one of the previous NEA directors, Jane Alexander, to Seattle; and we visited a very important program there at Garfield High School that was serving underserved minorities within the city of Seattle. Also, we had a very successful program in Tacoma with Dale Chihuly, who is one of the great glass artists of our time. He set up a program on the Hill Top in Tacoma, which is one of our urban areas in the city of Tacoma, and got these literally dozens of young children learning how to make glass pottery and other things; and it had a remarkable effect on their lives.

I think the gentleman brings a very serious point here, and I certainly am willing to accept his amendment and urge the House to accept it.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. REGULA) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) for their support in bringing this amendment to the floor today.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DICKS. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I think it is a good amendment. We made a real effort in the arts to broaden the base, and this is just one more step in making that happen.

I think when Mr. Yates was here we had some groups come in from situations that the gentleman described and performed, and it made us realize how important access to the arts were in their lives.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I urge a positive vote.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Crowley amendment. It is thoughtful. It will benefit arts in urban areas.

I also rise in support of the entire bill. I applaud the leadership of the chairman and the ranking member. I was concerned of how the committee would operate after my dear friend and colleague, Mr. Yates, left. But I see the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) is continuing with the chairman in a very firm and strong way.

I particularly applaud the committee for wisely rejecting efforts to load this bill up with controversial anti-environmental riders. Unfortunately, the version of this bill passed by the Committee on Appropriations in the other House contains numerous riders that would never pass on their own and have absolutely no place in this legislation.

One of these riders, in particular, robs the American taxpayer of over $66 million per year. This rider would permit big oil companies to continue to underpay the royalties they owe to the Federal Government, States and Indian tribes—cheating taxpayers of millions and millions of dollars.

It would do this by blocking the Interior Department from implementing a new rule which would require big oil companies to pay royalties to the government based on the market value of the oil they produce. Currently, the oil companies are keeping two sets of books, one which they pay themselves, market value, and one which they pay the taxpayers, the Federal Government, which is greatly undervalued to the true value of the oil.

Earlier this year, I released a report demonstrating how these companies have cheated the American taxpayer of literally billions of dollars in the past several decades. They do this by complex trading devices which mask the real value of the oil they produce. By undervaluing their own oil, these companies can avoid paying the full royalty payments they owe.

The Justice Department investigated these practices and decided they were so wrong that it filed suit against several major oil companies for violating the False Claims Act. As a result, one company settled with the government and paid over $45 million. Numerous other companies have settled similar claims brought by States and private royalty owners for millions, and, in one case, billions of dollars.

Mr. Chairman, the rule that the Interior Department is proposing is simple. It requires that oil companies pay royalties based on the fair market value of the oil they produce, just like everybody else when they sell their product to the Federal Government. But these oil companies that have been cheating the American taxpayer for years are now trying to block the Interior Department from implementing a rule using every excuse imaginable.

Mr. Chairman, this rider robs money from our schools, our environment, our States and our Indian tribes. It does this to benefit the most narrow special interest imaginable, big oil companies with billions of dollars in profits. I applaud the Committee on Appropriations for leaving this issue to the experts at the Interior Department and for not loading it up with other unnecessary and wrong anti-environmental riders.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY).

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. HAYES) having assumed the chair, Mr. LATOURETTE, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CLERK,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, DC, July 13, 1999.

Hon. J. DENNIS HASTERT,
The Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 2(h) of Rule II of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, I have the honor to transmit a sealed envelope received from the White House on July 13, 1999 at 1:00 p.m. and said to contain a message from the President whereby he transmits a six-month periodic report on the national emergency concerning weapons of mass destruction declared by Executive Order 12938.

With best wishes, I am
Sincerely,

JEFF TRANDAHL.

NATIONAL EMERGENCY CONCERNING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 106-93)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 204 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1703(c)) and section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1641(c)), I transmit herewith a 6-month report on the national emergency declared by Executive Order 12938 of November 14, 1994, in response to the threat posed by the proliferation of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons ("weapons of mass destruction") and of the means of delivering such weapons.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON,
THE WHITE HOUSE, July 13, 1999.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. BURTON of Indiana addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

REMEMBERING THE PLIGHT OF THE KASHMIRI PANDITS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, recent events in India's state of Jammu and Kashmir, where radical Islamic militants have infiltrated into India's territory with the support of, and apparently active collaboration with, Pakistan, have drawn international attention to this mountainous region. Now that Pakistan has apparently agreed to withdraw its fighters who have crossed onto India's side of the Line of Control, I hope that the attention of the U.S. and the world community will finally focus on the long-ignored plight of the Kashmiri Pandits.

The Pandits, who are the Hindu community of Kashmir, have an ancient and a proud culture. Their roots in the Kashmir Valley run deep. The Pandits have been amongst the most afflicted victims of the Pakistani-supported campaign of terrorism in Jammu and Kashmir. Virtually the entire population of 300,000 Kashmiri Pandits have been forced to leave their ancestral homes and property. Threatened with violence and intimidation, they have been turned into refugees in their own country.

Mr. Speaker, in June, the Pandits received somewhat of a mixed message from the National Human Rights Commission of India. In a positive step, the Commission did accept jurisdiction over the issue of human rights in Kashmir which was a matter of some question because of the special status that the state of Jammu and Kashmir enjoys under India's federal system. But the Commission also announced that it would not term the violence against the Pandits as genocide as has been requested by leaders of the Pandit community as well as myself and other Members of Congress. The National Human Rights Commission also rejected the request to define the Pandits as an Internally Displaced People. The Commission did acknowledge that the Pandits had been victims of killings and ethnic cleansings as part of the militants' campaign to get Kashmir to secede from India.

The National Human Rights Commission has recently set up a committee to address the Pandits' concerns, which includes representatives from the Commission, the Jammu and Kashmir State Government, and one representative from the Pandit community. But, Mr. Speaker, the committee has not yet met.

I am asking my colleagues to join me in signing a letter to the National Human Rights Commission asking that the decisions on genocide and internally displaced persons be reconsidered and that the new committee begin regular meetings. I have often cited India's Human Rights Commission as a model for other Asian nations and developing nations the world over to emulate. It is an example of India's commitment to democracy and the rule of law. I am sure the commission will give serious consideration to these requests by myself and other Members of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I have been calling along with some of my colleagues in this House for increased world attention to the plight of the Kashmiri Pandits. As I have gotten to know the Kashmiri-American community and have heard about the situation facing the Pandits, I have become increasingly outraged not only at the terrible abuses that they have suffered but at the seeming indifference of the world community. Mr. Speaker, India's government must work to provide conditions for the safe return of the Pandit community to the Kashmir Valley.

I also urge that our State Department continue to hold Pakistan accountable for provoking the current fighting in Kashmir by its support for the militants who have infiltrated India's territory.

Even before the current fighting, there has been a disturbing pattern of massacres of civilians carried out by the militants operating in Kashmir. While it is predominantly Hindus who have been the victims of these attacks, we have also seen attacks against Muslim residents of Jammu and Kashmir who have dared to assist the legitimate state authorities in putting a halt to the violence.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, this is the true face of the insurgency in Kashmir. The militants have transformed a peaceful, secular state in India, one which happens to have a predominantly Muslim population, into a killing field as part of the goal of turning the state into an area under strict Islamic rule. From the standpoint of international stability, this would be a disaster. From the human standpoint, the militants' campaign has already been a disaster as the displaced Kashmiri Pandit community demonstrates. It is wrong to continue to ignore their plight. We must address their concerns and hopefully the Human Rights Commission will do so and reconsider some of the decisions that it has already made.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DIAZ-BALART) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. DIAZ-BALART addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. LIPINSKI addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. BEREUTER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. BEREUTER addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

SALUTE TO BRIANA SCURRY AND THE U.S. WOMEN'S WORLD CUP SOCCER TEAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise proudly this evening to salute a constituent who is one of our Nation's newest sports heroes, Briana Scurry from Dayton, Minnesota. I also want to pay tribute to all the other members of our champion United States Women's World Cup Soccer Team who have made all Americans proud.

In the championship game Saturday, Mr. Speaker, in Pasadena, California, before more than 90,000 screaming fans, two great teams, one from the United States and the team from China, played to a scoreless tie in regulation time; then, two 15-minute sudden death overtimes, and still a dramatic, nail-biting 0-0 tie; a shootout and finally a world championship for our women's team, thanks to a diving save by our great world-class goalie, Briana Scurry.

Mr. Speaker, it was Briana Scurry, the Dayton, Minnesota, native who soared to deflect China's third penalty shot setting up the final victory. All of Minnesota celebrated with our Nation's sports fans as Briana ran to the stands following the game, slapping hands with the fans, the huge crowd as they chanted again and again, "Scurry! Scurry! Scurry!"

Mr. Speaker, Briana Scurry has been the number one United States goalie for 6 years. They call her "The Rock," they call her "The Wall," and she is both, as she showed the world Saturday night. Today, we call Briana and her marvellous teammates World Cup soccer champions.

Briana Scurry, Mr. Speaker, is also a great role model for other young women in sports. She is a great leader both on and off the soccer field. Briana excelled in her political science studies in college at the University of Massachusetts and she also gave a great deal back to her community, working as a volunteer for AIDS education and awareness and also for the Make A Wish Foundation.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, America's team was in good hands in this World Cup. There is little to worry about when Briana is in the net. She gave up only three goals in the entire World Cup championships and one of those, by the way, was kicked into our net by one of our own players. Briana shut out opponents four times in six games in the tournament, four shutouts in the six games comprising the World Cup championship.

Briana Scurry's work ethic, her fierce competitiveness, her engaging personality, great dedication and amazing talent all have had a powerful impact on the young women of Minnesota. Hockey may be king in Minnesota, Mr. Speaker, but soccer is kicking at its heels thanks to Briana Scurry.

At Anoka High School, Briana led her team to the 1989 State championship, was named All-American and was voted the top female athlete in Minnesota her senior year.

At the University of Massachusetts, Briana was the top college goalkeeper in 1993 and won two national "goalie of the year" awards her senior year. She led her team to the NCAA Final Four as well as to Atlantic 10 titles. Briana had 37 shutouts in her 4 years and a career goals-against average, listen to this, soccer fans, career goals-against average of 0.56. What a tremendous record.

So today, Mr. Speaker, we salute Minnesota's own Briana Scurry and all her teammates on America's World Cup championship soccer team. They proved what teamwork, dedication, hard work and heart can accomplish.

Mr. Speaker, congratulations to our new World Cup champions. They are role models for all of us, and all Americans are proud of them.

CONDEMNING THE CULTURE OF HATE THAT FOSTERS VIOLENCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, more than a week ago our Nation and my community in particular witnessed in horror the cruel and vicious consequences of the doctrine of hate. In a matter of days in the State of Illinois and Indiana a mad murderer full of rage and contempt for his fellow men took the lives of two innocent men and attempted to murder many more victims, including six Jewish men and two Asian students.

The spree of hate and violence began on Friday, July 2, just 2 days before we, citizens of this Nation of immigrants, celebrated Independence Day. It ended on July 5. I congratulate the efforts of law enforcement from the local level up to the FBI for so quickly identifying this individual, for its work with the community and for putting an end to his rampage. However, many questions still remain, including the role of white supremacist hate groups in fostering this attack.

In my district, where most of these attacks took place, my community breathed a sigh of relief when the killing spree came to an end. But we were left grieving for Ricky Byrdsong and his family; Woo-Joon Yoon, the Asian student from Bloomington, Indiana; and angry for the assault on Jewish men peacefully observing the Sabbath.

Ricky Byrdsong lived in Skokie, Illinois. He was a loving husband, a father, a leader in the community, a former basketball coach at Northwestern University, a man of deep religious faith and a constituent. He was murdered in cold blood. His only crime was the color of his skin. He was African American. Ricky Byrdsong was a proud American man who was living the American dream. He left an unmistakable and everlasting impression on all those who had the opportunity to meet him, and he positively touched the lives of countless youth during his lifetime.

He was committed to a cause. His cause was to help under-privileged youth reach their full potential and follow their dreams. He was working on his first book: Coaching Your Kids in the Game of Life. The book was scheduled to be released next year on Father's Day. At his funeral his pastor vowed that his book would be completed. Now his family will have to go on without him, his children will grow up without their father's guidance, his friends will no longer hear his infectious laugh, and the community, especially the children, has lost forever a leader.

I will never forget the look on the faces of the hundreds of people who attended his funeral last Wednesday. It was a look of disbelief, pain and yet inspiration because Ricky Byrdsong was truly inspiring. I never wish to attend another funeral of a victim of such hatred. Ricky Byrdsong has made our mission clearer than ever. The culture of hate has no place among us. We must educate and use the truth to counter the lies being spread by hatemongers, groups and so-called churches in our communities, schools, places of worship, neighborhoods and especially on the Internet to our youth.

As a society, we must not be intimidated by the few who refuse to live peacefully among us. We must stand firm and never ever be afraid. That is why I was so proud to join the Jewish Family and Community Services, Jewish Children's Bureau and the Anti Defamation League, the rabbis and other leaders of the Jewish community in Chicago, particularly Mr. Michael Kotzin of the Jewish United Fund and the Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago who showed such leadership, to join with them on the day after six Jewish men were shot to say that an attack on even one is an attack on all of us.

I wish to recognize the Jewish United Fund for opening a special fund to aid families affected by bigotry-related violence. The initial goal of the JUF Fund for Hate Crime Victims and Families will offer assistance to the family of Ricky Byrdsong for the children's higher education.

As the Sabbath came to a close last Saturday evening, we walked the streets of the Rogers Park neighborhood in solidarity. Rogers Park is the kind of community that haters hate the most. It is diverse, integrated, independent, peaceful and all-American. But in a perverse sense of Americanism during the 4th of July weekend a crazy person attempted to take that away, and he failed.

Our community is stronger than ever. We stood together at a time of great anxiety and grave danger. Now is the time for Congress to respond to the tragedies that took place on the 4th of July weekend and pass sensible gun safety legislation. Congress must act now to make it more difficult for individuals to obtain weapons in order to convert their hatred into terror and death.

Guns used by the assailant were bought from an illegal gun dealer. He recently purchased more than 60 guns for the sole purpose of selling them for a profit. Unfortunately, two of these guns were sold to a murderer, with complete disregard for the sanctity of life. We have a responsibility to protect the lives of our constituents. Congress must pass and the President must sign bills to limit the purchase of handguns to one per month and to require the registration of every handgun sold in the United States. Our constituents demand it, and our children deserve it, and we should also pass stronger hate crimes legislation so all of us will be safe in our communities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. STUPAK addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. WOOLSEY addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. CUMMINGS addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
HAILED AS LEADER IN ELECTRONIC INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, critics often hasten to draw attention to government agencies' failures, while ignoring successes if they notice them at all. Today I want to draw the House's attention to two prestigious awards and other accolades recently received by the Government Printing Office (GPO) for its leading role in electronic information dissemination through GPO Access, its acclaimed Internet information service (www.access.gpo.gov).

First, the Vice-President's National Partnership for Reinventing Government has honored the GPO and the Energy Department (DOE) jointly with a "Hammer Award" for the "Information Bridge," a project which makes available thousands of unclassified DOE scientific and technical reports in electronic format.

Using the World Wide Web, users enter the DOE electronic dissemination system through GPO Access, where they can view over 30,000 DOE reports already on-line, with more becoming available every day. The Information Bridge eliminates the need to disseminate these reports to depository libraries in printed form, thereby saving production and distribution costs to the government, and processing and storage costs to the libraries.

This is GPO's second "Hammer Award" for GPO Access; the first came in 1997 for re-engineering the Commerce Business Daily with the Commerce Department. In 1998 Vice-President GORE and Government Executive magazine named GPO Access one of the 15 "Best Feds on the Web."

In addition, the legal community has recently lauded GPO Access. Law Office Computing magazine's April/May issue named GPO Access one of the top 50 legal-research web sites for 1999. The magazine's top 50 web sites, which included only seven federal sites, were chosen as favorites of law librarians, attorneys and paralegals based on experience with the sites and their usability.

Further, the April 1999 issue of Chicago Lawyer magazine reports that the newsletter legal.online has selected GPO Access as both the "best research site for laws" and the "overall best Government site." Finally, the GPO just received the first American Association of Law Libraries' "Public Access to Government Information Award" as the "official, no-fee, one-stop public access point for the growing universe of web-based electronic Government information." These accolades follow GPO's selection in February by In-Plant Graphics magazine as the top in-plant operation in the country, and in March as a top technology innovator by PC Week magazine.

Public- and private-sector entities alike appreciate the leading role GPO is playing as we advance into the information age. Let's join in the applause for the dedicated professionals of the GPO.

COSTS THAT ILLEGAL NARCOTICS IMPOSE ON OUR SOCIETY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor again tonight to discuss the issue of illegal narcotics and the tremendous cost to our Nation. Over and over again it is important that I think we repeat the message that I have with me here today, and that is a simple one, that drugs destroy lives. And I believe if every Member of Congress takes a few minutes to look at the impact of illegal narcotics they will be absolutely startled as to the damage that it does to our society, the cost to countless families across this Nation and also the tremendous responsibility cast upon the Congress to finance the social, the judicial and other costs that illegal narcotics impose upon our society.

Tonight I want to talk for a few minutes about some of those costs and tell the Congress and the American people that there are some very specific and direct costs to illegal narcotics and what they have done to this Nation and to, again, families and young people. In fact, during the past year over 14,000 Americans lost their lives as a direct result of the misuse or abuse of illegal narcotics in this Nation.

I come from a beautiful area in central Florida. My district is between Orlando and Daytona Beach, a very peaceful, affluent, high employment, high income area. Even my area has been plagued with countless deaths. In fact, a recent headline in Orlando Sentinel newspaper blasted out that in fact the number of drug-related deaths had now exceeded the number of homicides. Drug overdose deaths now exceed homicides in central Florida.

So the statistics are not only bad in my area but across the Nation, with more than 14,000, and again we do not count in all of those that are in traffic accidents or in suicides or other unreported deaths that may have some other report of the demise of the individual which is not included in this 14,000 figure.

In 1995, we had almost 532,000 drug-related emergencies which occurred across this Nation, and that figure has been on the upswing particularly among our young people, which should be of concern again to every Member of Congress. In 1995 we also have a figure that is reported of a retail value of the illicit drug business being over $49 billion.

The cost goes on and on again to our society. Across the land tonight there are over 1.8 million, nearly 2 million, Americans incarcerated in our jails and prisons across the land. This is at incredible cost, the cost of the judicial system, the cost of the lost wages, the cost of social support for the families who have their loved ones incarcerated.

So the cost is not just 1.8 million people behind bars but in fact much greater cost. It is estimated out of the nearly 2 million in our jails, prisons and State facilities that 60 to 70 percent are there directly because of a drug-related offense, and these are not small offenses like possession of minor drugs, and these are not one time or misdemeanor occurrences or offenses. These are, in fact, we find from the hearings that we have conducted with our criminal justice drug policy subcommittee, these are, in fact, very serious felonies. And most of those people behind bars, again in studies, confirm this as recently as the hearings that we held today in our subcommittee, that these folks in most instances are violent offenders, that in fact those that are there because of drug-related crimes are there because they trafficked in drugs, they committed a murder, they committed a rape and an assault, a robbery while under the influence of illegal narcotics or in the pursuit of acquiring money or drugs.

So again, 2 million people behind bars is only the tip of the iceberg.

Drug-related illnesses in the United States and death and crime are estimated to cost Americans some $67 billion plus a year in the United States. This translates into very specific costs to every American who has to pay $1,000 a year to carry the costs of health care, extra law enforcement, car and automobile accidents, and crime and lost productivity due to drug abuse and use.

Eighteen percent of the 2,000 fatally injured drivers from seven States had drugs rather than alcohol in their systems when they died. Again, drugs do in fact destroy lives, and have a very specific cost impact to the American taxpayer, to every American citizen, in addition to just the incarceration cost and judicial cost.

Drug use and misuse and illegal narcotics also dramatically impact the productivity of America's workers. Seventy-one percent of all illicit drug users are 18 years of age or older, and they are also, interestingly enough, employed.

In a study by the U.S. Postal Service, the data collected showed that among drug users, absenteeism is 66 percent higher and health benefit utilization is 84 percent greater in dollar terms when compared against other workers. So in fact, the billions that we are talking about are only the tip of the iceberg when we translate this into lost productivity and absenteeism, and then the overutilization of our health benefit programs. Again, all of that does translate into extra costs for every citizen.

Again, drugs destroy lives, they cost us lives, and they cost every American in this Congress dearly.

Disciplinary actions are, interestingly, 90 percent higher for employees who are drug users as opposed to nonusers of drugs, another high price tag to pay for those who are involved in illegal narcotics or in drug use.

Let me talk tonight about how some specific drugs impact our society and young people in this Nation, and what the effects of some of these drugs are.

First of all, let me talk about crack and cocaine. The use and abuse of crack and cocaine, which also destroys lives, has somewhat evened out among the adult population. That is only because now we have an incredible supply of heroin, we have an unbelievable supply of methamphetamine.

So, for example, my area has a very substantial increase in heroin use and abuse and deaths, and the Midwest and some other areas have been impacted by methamphetamine, so crack and cocaine has leveled out. The supply availability and price of other drugs such as methamphetamines and heroin is available.

Even first-time crack or cocaine users can be subject to heart attacks which can be fatal. We heard testimony today from a wonderful lady, Mrs. Bennett, who testified before our subcommittee. She lost her young son, a first-time cocaine user who suffered a fatal reaction and died at a very young age. She brought his picture to our subcommittee, which conducted a hearing on the question of decriminalization and legalization of illegal narcotics.

She will tell the Members that drugs in fact destroy lives. They destroyed the life of her son, and this report that I have tonight about the use of crack or cocaine adding to your incidence of seizures or heart attacks is in fact very real. Even one hit of crack or cocaine can in fact kill one, because it can cause heart attacks, strokes, or breathing problems. This has medically been proven.

Crack and cocaine use are also connected, and abuse, are connected to car crashes, to falls, burns, drowning, and suicide, and sometimes, again, these go unreported. But my point again is that illegal narcotics, hard drugs like crack and cocaine do destroy lives.

The addiction we have not talked about, but that can ruin the physical and mental health of so many individuals, and often is not counted into the statistics that we report here. So again, we have an instance of one drug which has a devastating impact on so many lives, and does in fact destroy lives.

The other drug I will talk about for a few minutes is heroin. Heroin users are getting younger and younger. Since 1993, the use of heroin among our teenage population has risen some 875 percent in the United States. We have a tremendous supply of heroin coming into the United States. We have a reduction in price.

I will talk in a few minutes about how we are getting that tremendous supply coming in. But in fact, the people who are most subjected to heroin's deadly effects are our young people. Heroin users are getting younger. A recent survey indicates that kids are trying heroin at younger and younger ages.

For example, in 1995, this report that I have says that 141,000 people in America tried heroin for the first time. About a quarter of these first-time users were somewhere between the ages of 12 and 17. Even worse, more than half the people who were admitted to hospital emergency rooms for heroin-related problems were under age 18.

Again, the theme that we bring to the floor tonight is that drugs destroy lives, and drugs destroy young lives in an incredible number of instances. These statistics do indicate that we have a tremendous heroin abuse problem among our young people. Heroin is dangerous, and you have to be just totally irresponsible to put yourself using it.

We have also found in our studies and hearings that the heroin that is coming into the United States in 1998, 1999, today, is not the heroin that came in 10 or 15 years ago. The purity levels that were down in single digits are now 60, 70 percent pure. Young people and adults who try heroin have very deadly results, as I cited. Just in my local central Florida district and area, we now have heroin overdose deaths exceeding homicides. That picture is being repeated over and over across the land. In fact, we are now up to over 4,000 heroin deaths in the Nation, and the number is growing every year.

Most disturbingly, again, we see young people as the victims of heroin overdoses and heroin deaths. Drugs destroy lives. Again, let me cite some of the information that we found in our hearings on our Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, Drug Policy and Human Resources. Over half the crime in this country is committed by individuals under the influence of drugs.

In the hearing that we held today we had Tom Constantine, who is the immediate former director of our Drug Enforcement Agency of the United States, just retired in the last few days. He told us that over half of the individuals who had been arrested for Federal offenses are now testing positive for illegal narcotics.

We heard the sheriff of Plano County, the city of Plano and that area, testify before our subcommittee today. He also indicated that a very high number of those arrested for any offense in his jurisdiction also have some drug in their system.

The National Institute of Justice's ADAM, the drug testing program, it is referred to also as the Adam testing program, found that more than 60 percent of adult male arrestees tested positive for drugs.

It was interesting, in some of the information we obtained today, and this figure is very high for adult males, but I believe the figure was 71 percent of the women who were arrested tested positive for drugs, a startling statistic that, although we have fewer female arrestees, that a greater percentage of them are involved with illegal narcotics and have them in their system when they are tested upon arrest.

In most cities, over half the young male arrestees are under the influence of marijuana. Importantly, the majority of these crimes result from the effects of the drug and did not result from the fact that the drugs are illegal.

According to a study of the National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University, 80 percent of the men and women behind bars, about 1.4 million inmates, are seriously involved with alcohol and other drug abuse. I am going to try to refer a little bit later, if we have time, to the results of that report from the National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University.

This is an absolutely fascinating report just released this morning, and it talks about marijuana. It is the most comprehensive study ever conducted, that highlights the critical distinction between non-medical marijuana, medical uses of marijuana, and what is going on with those who abuse this substance, and some incredible statistics about, again, the effect on those individuals and how many of them are now in some type of a treatment program, and the problems that are related to this. We will talk more about that.

The former Secretary, I believe, of one of the administrations, Joe Califano, was involved, he was a former HEW Secretary, with this study. He is now president of that organization. We hope to have him testify at a future hearing on the results of their study.

Again, it is a dramatic study that does show that we have an incredible number of young people who are the victims of marijuana, which many try to tout as a soft drug or a non-harmful narcotic. But again, all the studies, the reports, the information lead us to one simple conclusion; again, that drugs destroy lives.

According to a study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association last year, non-drug users who lived in households where drugs, including marijuana, are used are 11 times as likely to be killed as those living in drug-free households. So if a young person or an individual comes from a house where drugs are being used, this study by the American Medical Association said they increase their chances of being killed by 11 times. So again, these are more statistics that confirm that drugs destroy lives.

Drug abuse in a home increased a woman's risk of being killed, according to this study, by a close relative, some 28 times. So those that are concerned, and we heard testimony today about spousal abuse, an incredible statistic, some 80 percent of the spousal abuse cases involved methamphetamines in one jurisdiction that was studied, and that would be abuse, battery, assault of a woman, a wife, a spouse.

But in a home that has drug use, a woman's risk of being killed is increased by 28 times, according to this AMA study.

Additionally, to confirm again the message we bring tonight that drugs destroy lives, I have a study by the Parent Resources and Drug Information Center. This is also referred to as PRIDE, the organization, and this PRIDE organization reported some of these facts.

Of high school students who reported having carried guns to school, and certainly there has been a great deal of talk about guns in this Congress on the floor of the House of Representatives, this said students who were reported having carried guns to school, 31 percent used cocaine, compared to 2 percent of the students who never carried guns to school.

The same relationship was found among junior high school. So more than likely, the school violence and those involved with carrying lethal weapons such as guns to school are much more likely to be drug abusers, drug users. Nineteen percent of gang members reported cocaine use compared to 2 percent among youths who were not in gangs. So whether it is someone carrying a gun to school or someone involved in a gang, drugs destroy their lives. And, in fact, drugs contribute to the crime disruption of our public school system and education. Again, drugs destroy lives.

Today, the subcommittee which I chair, the Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, Drug Policy and Human Resources, as I mentioned earlier, began another hearing to look into the question of drug legalization, drug decriminalization.

We heard from a number of witnesses, some on different sides of the issue. I try to always bring in a balanced approach. We heard one witness in particular in favor of legalization of marijuana, a representative from the NORMAL organization, it is called. We heard another individual report from a study who gave some of the comparisons that had been reviewed on marijuana use. And we heard from, again, a parent involved with a national organization. She had lost her son, as I mentioned, and was there testifying against decriminalization, against legalization.

We also heard from the police chief of Plano, Texas, also who spoke against legalization. We found also that we had some interesting testimony from our lead witness who was Tom Constantine, and as I mentioned he is the former head of the Drug Enforcement Agency. Mr. Constantine used several examples in his testimony to show how drugs drive demand.

A few years back, the Colombian drug cartels decided to enter the heroin market. Now 75 percent of the heroin sold in the United States is of Colombian origin.

Mr. Speaker, I want to talk a little bit about some of these narcotics and what Mr. Constantine brought up and what we heard today. If I can, I would like to take this down and have the chart on the drug Signature program.

All these illegal narcotics come from some place. And, in fact, we know today through scientific studies and through programs such as the heroin Signature program exactly where illegal narcotics originate. This is not a guessing game. This is today a science just like DNA. They can trace DNA to individuals; they can trace illegal narcotics back to their source.

Mr. Constantine, again, former DEA director, talked a little bit today about the heroin problem that we have. This 1997 study that he also presented to our subcommittee in a previous hearing shows exactly where heroin, one of the most deadly drugs, is coming from. And we know that 75 percent of the heroin is coming today from South America. We know that 14 percent is coming from Mexico. And then we have about 5 and 6 percent from Southwest and Southeast Asia. So we know very specifically that 89 percent of the heroin is coming from either Colombia or Mexico.

Some 6 years ago, this chart would be quite different. Most of the illegal narcotics were coming in from, in this case, heroin, was coming in from Southeast Asia and from other sources. In fact, 6 years ago, there was almost no heroin produced in Colombia.

How did we get to 75 percent, as Mr. Constantine testified and this chart documents? It is a simple thing. It is the policy of this administration.

Let me review for a moment, if I may, what took place and how we got into this situation. I have heard repeatedly, and I hear it over and over again, the war on drugs is a failure. I have heard it in the media, and I have heard it recast that the war on drugs is a failure. They would have the public and the Congress believe that the war on drugs is a failure.

In fact, since 1993, there has not been a war on drugs. In 1993, the Clinton administration basically closed down the war on drugs. What they did was they began very systematically. The first thing they cut was almost 90 percent of the drug czar's office and operations. So the drug czar's office was cut first, demoted, really. They brought in a drug czar who really ignored the problem, ignored promotion of any antinarcotics programs either before the Congress or with this administration.

What else did this administration do? The first thing they did was hire so many recent drug abusers in the White House that the Secret Service insisted on a program to do drug testing of White House employees. And I sat on the Committee on Government Operations and heard testimony to that effect.

But again, first they closed down the drug czar's office very nearly, then began hiring people who had very recent illegal narcotics use, forcing the Secret Service to force the White House to institute a drug testing program.

Next thing they did was hire probably the worst Surgeon General, the highest health officer, that this Nation had ever had and that was Joycelyn Elders. She sent a message to our young people that said just say maybe. And the statistics I cited tonight about heroin, about marijuana, about cocaine and about the increase in incidence among our young people I think can be traced from the beginning point of that policy of that closedown, of that shutdown, that ending of the war on drugs with a chief health officer of the United States of America saying to our young people just say maybe.

Then, if I can get the smallest charts here, again this is repeated over and over that the war on drugs is a failure. Let me have these charts here. These charts do not lie. They tell the truth. And I do not know if my colleagues can see them, but this shows drug spending on international programs. Now, international would be stopping drugs at their source, probably the most effective utilization of taxpayer dollars.

We know that in 1993 and prior to that time that nearly 100 percent of the cocaine was coming from Peru and from Bolivia, a little tiny bit from Colombia. We knew where cocaine was coming from then and coca could only be grown at certain altitudes in a certain terrain. There are not many places. It cannot be grown in Florida or North Carolina, to my knowledge. It can be grown only in that area.

In 1993, the next thing the Clinton administration did, and we have to remember they controlled the White House, they controlled the other body, the United States Senate, and they controlled a big majority of the House of Representatives. The first thing they did was cut these international programs, the source country programs.

The slashes here are incredible. Again, back under President Bush we had 660, and this is millions of dollars. We are not talking billions. But they slashed them to less than half by 1995-1996. This is where the Republicans took over the Congress.

In the last 2, 3 years we have really begun to restart the war on drugs. I sat on the Committee on Government Operations during that period when Mr. Brown was the drug czar, the drug czar in name. Even though I had requests from 130-plus Members of the House of Representatives on both sides of the aisle, only one hearing was held during the Democrat domination of the Congress and the White House. Only one hearing as I was a member of that committee, and that was for less than an hour. It was almost farcical. So the war on drugs was closed down and specifically the most cost-effective part of the war on drugs was closed down.

The other chart that I had here showed Colombia now producing 75 percent of the heroin. Colombia was not even on the charts as producing heroin in 1992, 1993. This administration stopped funding, cut this in less than half the international program. So there was not funding to stop drugs at their source.

If we look at 1998 and 1999, and take that in 1991-1992 dollars, we are not even up to the levels of the end of the Bush administration. And again this is so cost effective because we know where the heroin is produced. We have the Signature programs that show us exactly where the heroin is produced.

Now in addition to cutting these programs, what this administration did through a very direct policy was to stop money going to Colombia. The results in Colombia are incredible. I read a Washington Post piece, which the reporter really did not research well, but if we go back and look at what this administration did with the cuts here, they totally cut off Colombia as far as receiving any resources, helicopters, assistance, because they were afraid that some of that money might be used to fight the Marxist guerrillas who were in the jungles there.

So what this administration's direct policy was, and it was in direct conflict with the requests for the last 4 years since we have taken over the House of Representatives with a new majority, we begged, we pleaded, we sent letters, get aid, get assistance, get resources to Colombia.

What has happened? Colombia now produces 75 percent of the heroin coming into the United States since we closed down that program effectively. Seventy-five percent of the heroin coming in. No heroin produced in 1992, 1993, not even on the charts. Additionally, we could talk about Mexico, which is up to 14 percent. We get 89 percent of the heroin from the two of them, and that is part of another failed Clinton policy in certifying Mexico as cooperating.

But think about Colombia and what this policy has done. Not only do we have the heroin which was not there in 1992-1993, coming in in unbelievable quantities at a quality that is as deadly as can be, that is what is killing the kids in Plano. That is what is killing the kids in Orlando, Florida. That is what is destroying the lives again by the thousands, deadly high-purity heroin coming in through this policy.

But what is interesting is in 1992, 1993, Colombia produced almost no cocaine. It did process coca and it was a big producer. The coca which was partially processed was brought into Colombia and processed there and shipped out either directly to the United States or with their buddies and network through Mexico.

What has happened since that time, 1992, 1993, the last administration, is that in fact Colombia again is deprived of any assistance. We cut this program on source country in half, plus we completely decimated Colombia. Colombia is now the biggest producer of cocaine in the world. Tom Constantine testified today it is somewhere up in the 60 percent.

Fortunately, this new majority, under the leadership of first Mr. Zeff, who began restarting the war on drugs, a former Member, and the former chairman of the Subcommittee on National Security, International Affairs, and Criminal Justice was the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker HASTERT), who is now Speaker of the House was chair and was responsible for restarting the war on drugs. So that is why we see those figures going up here.

But even the funds that were put in last year, and I checked this, because, again, a recent story in the Washington Post and repeated across the land is that so much of our foreign assistance is going to Colombia. Well, that is bull, and that is nutso. That is not the truth.

This past year, we appropriated somewhere in the neighborhood of $280 million for Colombia. My colleagues have got to remember, up to this date, almost no money went to Colombia in fighting illegal narcotics. In fact, this administration kept the resources, the helicopters, the ammunition from this country.

So I checked to see where the money is that we appropriated last year and that the press is talking about, saying the war on drugs is a failure, and that the third biggest foreign aid recipient after Israel and Egypt is Colombia. Well, that is true for this fiscal year that that money is appropriated. But so far, according to our staff investigation, somewhere between $2 million and $3 million has gotten to Colombia. So we have not had a war on drugs. This other side of the aisle has killed the war on drugs. They completely decimated the war on drugs.

This just international programs and, again, the dollars that were slashed, they were kept from Colombia. If my colleagues think that it is bad enough we have cocaine and heroin coming in in these incredible quantities through a direct failed policy of this administration and the other side of the aisle, what they did, stop and think about what is happening in Colombia.

Everybody gets upset about Kosovo. Over a million people have been displaced in Colombia by the Civil War, by the Marxist guerillas who are funded almost totally by illegal narcotics profits and illegal narcotics trafficking. Thirty-five thousand people have died in Colombia. Thousands of judges, thousands and thousands of policemen, elected officials have been murdered and slaughtered in Colombia. It has disseminated a great nation. The reason was we did not want any arms to get there.

Now, an area the size of Switzerland is in control, and the new president, and I have to admire him, is trying to bring peace about, trying to negotiate with the guerillas. Some oppose that. Some of are in favor of it. But one cannot have a resolution to the problems with illegal narcotics which are funding the Marxist activities or a resolution of illegal narcotics transiting or being produced there, coming into the United States until we have peace plans.

So I have been supportive. I have met with President Pastrana. He has begged for our assistance. He has begged for our patience. He has begged for our understanding. He is trying to do anything.

He brought down the head of the New York Stock Exchange to talk to the guerillas to try to tell them that a free enterprise system is better than dogging it in the jungle and conducting war and slaughter of the Colombian people.

I say give peace a chance. I also say give a chance to restarting the war on drugs. These are the facts. What the newspapers have printed is bologna. It is not the truth about these international programs.

We have been able, through Speaker HASTERT, again, who chaired the Subcommittee on National Security, International Affairs, and Criminal Justice, who had responsibility before my new Subcommittee of Criminal Justice, Drug Policy, and Human Relations inherited it, but the Speaker was successful.

I went down with him. We met with President Fujimori of Peru. We met with President Hugo Banzer of Bolivia. Those two presidents have cut drug production of cocaine with a little bit of help from their friend. We are only talking $20 million, $30 million out of billions and billions that we are spending on law enforcement, incarceration, and treatment. Those two presidents have acted with a little bit of help and the few dollars in the international programs which we have restarted and cut 50 percent of the cocaine production. That is why we see cocaine down and more difficult to get.

The latest figures I have is President Fujimori in Peru, through his hard line, through his assistance, through the small amount of dollars we have gotten there, has reduced 60 percent. Both of them have plans to eliminate that. So a little bit of help in these international programs can be so cost effective. Do not tell me any different. I have been there. I have seen it. These are the facts.

Again, we hear the comments that interdiction and the war on drugs does not work and that we are spending too much money on interdiction. Look at what the Clinton administration did. Again, during the last years of the Bush administration, we were in the $2 billion on interdiction, in that range. The war on drugs was killed as far as interdicting drugs.

The second most cost effective way to get drugs is to stop them as they are coming in. Once they get passed the borders, forget it, folks. It is harder and harder. Ask any policeman. Ask anyone who has dealt with law enforcement. It is tough.

But here is what they did. They killed the war on drugs. The Clinton administration, which does not like the military to begin with, took the military out of the war on drugs. Look. From 1991 to 1992, $2 billion level down to about $1 billion, cut in half.

This just shows the military. I have not brought up the Coast Guard which protects Puerto Rico, which protects our coast line. They slashed the budgets there.

So that is why we have Colombia as the major producer of heroin, we know where it is coming from, the major producer of cocaine. This is why we have a stream, a supply. That is simple economics. It is economics 101, my friends, that, in fact, as one has a tremendous supply, the price goes down, and it is available. It is available to who at a low price? Our young people.

That is why the statistics I quoted here tonight and the theme that I had here tonight that drugs destroy lives is so true. This is the policy. The war on drugs died in January of 1993 with this President, with this administration.

My colleagues can see that, in 1998, 1999, we are barely getting back to the level we were with the Bush administration. So we have not even been able to restart the war on drugs.

The next myth is that we have not spent enough money on treatment. I believe in treatment. I think anyone who has a problem, we should get treatment to them. We should spend whatever. If we could spend $3 billion in Kosovo in a few months, we can certainly spend money on those who are addicted to illegal narcotics in the United States of America.

But, Mr. Speaker, here is the next point that I want to make. If we look back in 1991, 1992, we were spending $1.8 billion, $2.2 billion on treatment. 1999, it is not quite double. But in fact they have been putting their eggs in the treatment basket, and some of it has helped. But this also should destroy a myth that we have not increased money for treatment.

What is interesting is, since the Republicans took over the Congress, we can see some pretty dramatic increases in money for treatment. So, again, the myth that all the money is going into planes and to source country programs and interdiction equipment is just that, it is a myth. It is not the truth.

So that is a little bit of an update on how we got into this situation, where we are on the war on drugs. It is nice to come up here and talk about this. But I must say that, rather than just talk about it, we have tried to act. We have tried to act by putting our dollars into these programs. We have tried to look at those that are most cost effective.

Treatment. Again, we have no problem with treatment. Education basically was not on the charts. If we look back here at the beginning of this administration, almost no money for education.

Under Speaker Gingrich and under the leadership of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT), who is now the Speaker, we put in $195 million into an education program. It is relatively new. It has not completed its first year. But that money is matched by donations and by equal contributions. So we should have almost a half billion dollars in resources towards an education program.

It takes education. It takes treatment. It takes, as I said, most effectively, source country programs to eradicate drugs where they are grown and where they come from. Then it takes interdiction and also takes enforcement. So it takes all of these activities.

That is why, if we go back and look at the Bush administration and back to the Reagan administration when we had the beginning of the crack and the cocaine problem in the early 1980s, we saw an actual decrease in the number of individuals involved with illegal narcotics, or we saw some of the activity coming down where we saw the seizures going up and again some dramatic changes.

The most dramatic change that we have experienced, though, is the end of the war in drugs in January of 1993. It is so difficult to start that back up again.

In addition to providing an update on the war on drugs and where we are in the war on drugs, I also wanted to talk tonight, as I conclude, a little bit about some of the things that our subcommittee has been doing, our Subcommittee on Criminal Justice, Drug Policy, and Human Resources.

Several weeks ago, we conducted a hearing at the request of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER). As my colleagues may know, I have been highly critical, and our subcommittee has held extensive hearings on the question of assistance in Mexico. Because if we look at Colombia and we have seen the results of what happens in our failed policy with Colombia, we see where illegal narcotics, the tough stuff like heroin, cocaine are coming from. If we looked at the rest of the picture to see where the rest of the drugs are coming from, probably the balance of the drugs and 60 to 70 percent of all the hard narcotics and marijuana and everything coming into the United States comes in through Mexico.

Mexico has not cooperated. This Congress asked over a year ago, 2 years ago now, for Mexico to extradite individuals, Mexican nationals, drug lords, those who have been indicted in the United States and for whom we are seeking extradition. They have not complied. I will talk a little bit more about that in just a second.

In addition, we asked Mexico to sign a maritime agreement. To date, they still have not signed a maritime agreement to cooperate in going after people who are transiting and dealing in drugs in the high seas.

In addition, we asked Mexico to arm our DEA agents. They still have not allowed our DEA agents to protect themselves. My colleagues may say, why? Why? Because Enrique Camarena, one of our agents was tortured, an incredibly horrible death. We have a cap actually imposed by Mexico on the number of agents. We have a very small number. It is almost incredible for the size of the problem. But even so, those who are there are still put at risk, and Mexico still refused to help us.

Radar in the south. And I am getting some word that Mexico is beginning to cooperate in getting radar to the south so before the drugs come into Mexico, and we know they are coming from Colombia and Panama and other locations, that we could stop those illegal narcotics. But that is still not in place.

And then enforcing the laws that are passed. Now, we have gotten Mexico to pass some laws, and the laws are on the books, but there is not the enforcement. They have a corrupt judicial system; they have a corrupt law enforcement system from the guy on the beat or the gal on the beat all the way to the President's office. And that has been documented with the former President Salinas and his family, with those in incredible positions of power, with incredible amounts of money that they have skimmed off of the drug trade, including one Mexican general who tried to place $1.1 billion that he had gotten. We know he had gotten it through illegal narcotics proceeds, and he tried to place it in legitimate financial institutions. But we have not had cooperation.

I started with extradition. And let me say that several weeks ago, as I began to mention, our subcommittee, at the request of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER), conducted a hearing on one of the 275 extradition requests that we have. This was a case relating to the murder of Mrs. Bellush, a young mother of about five or six young children in Florida in Sarasota who was murdered several years ago. She was shot and then stabbed to death and left to die, with her young baby children left in the pool of her blood until the family members came home and found her.

We held a hearing to protest and to look into and investigate why Mexico had refused to extradite Mr. Del Toro.

Mr. Del Toro was not a Hispanic citizen. He was a citizen of the United States, born in the United States to parents who are United States citizens; and he helped commit this incredibly horrible crime and then fled to Mexico and has for the past several years used the Mexican judicial system to avoid coming back and facing justice in the United States. Thank goodness last night the Attorney General called me and said that the Mexican Supreme Court had ruled in favor of extradition and Mr. Del Toro is on his way back to face justice.

It is small compensation, small condolence to the Bellush family, but it is one extradition. Unfortunately, there are 274 other extradition requests on some 40 major drug dealers, Mexican nationals, who have been involved in illegal narcotics. Now, I believe we have had one Mexican national who has been extradited, but I have brought to the floor again some of the mugshots of these individuals.

Agustin Vasquez-Mendoza. He is wanted on conspiracy to commit armed robbery and highly involved in illegal narcotics trafficking and kidnapping and aggravated assault. He is a fugitive, has not been arrested and one of the individuals who we are trying to get back to the United States. Again I bring up the Amezcua brothers, who we also would like extradited to face justice in the United States.

So we have succeeded in one small case. We have some 200-plus requests for extradition of these individuals. I do not believe that Mexico, who has always been a close ally, and we have millions of Mexican-Americans in the United States, I do not believe these friends that we have had or Mexican-Americans agree with Mexico's current stance to thumb their nose at the United States and refuse to extradite these individuals who have been involved in murder, illegal narcotics, and trafficking.

So we will continue to put pressure on Mexico, which is now a major producer of heroin, but also the source of 60 to 70 percent of the illegal narcotics transiting into the United States. We will do everything possible.

We did introduce, just before we went into recess, a resolution which we hope to bring up on the floor which does praise Mexico for some of the small steps that they have taken, but also holds Mexico's feet to the fire to produce on extradition, to produce on a maritime agreement, to produce on assisting our DEA agents, to produce on enforcing the laws that they have passed rather than thumbing their nose at the United States.

So until we start working with the programs that do work, that are cost effective and at the source, in cooperation with these countries and as a cooperative partner, getting them the resources through these programs, we will not be successful.

Mr. Speaker, with that, I am pleased to sum up tonight with the message that I started out with and that is that drugs destroy lives. Over 14,000 Americans lost their lives last year, almost 100,000 since the beginning of the end of the drug war, which was January 1993. And again the statistics show and the facts show and prove that the war on drugs ended with the beginning of this administration, and it is so difficult to start it up and that there has been so much damage to our Nation, to our young people, and so many families across this land.

Mr. Speaker, since I have some time left, I would like to provide a little update as to what is going on as far as narcotics around the world. If my colleagues think the United States is tough, the headlines in one of the recent newspapers is, "Three Beheaded in Saudi Arabia For Drug Trafficking."

This is a report of Friday, May 8. "Three convicted drug traffickers were beheaded in Saudi Arabia on Friday. Saudi Arabia's Islamic courts imposed death sentences for murder, rape and drug trafficking. So far this year, 21 people have been executed, 29 put to death."

"China executes 58 to mark world anti-narcotics day." In China, they have a different approach to illegal narcotics. "China marked world anti-narcotics day by executing 58 drug traffickers." So just a little update on the news in China and how they treat drug traffickers.

Then this report from today's Financial Times. "Caribbean court will speed hangings." And this deals with drug trafficking which has prompted crimes. Let me read from this: "Many islands have witnessed rapid increases in murders and other violent crime over the past decade. Murders in Jamaica last year averaged 2.6 a day, twice the level of 10 years ago. Murders have doubled in Trinidad and Tobago over the past 5 years, with many of those linked to narcotics smuggling, say officials."

So they have a treatment, and the treatment really cuts down on recidivism, and that is hanging, which is being demanded by these nations that have also felt this scourge of illegal narcotics.

Mr. Speaker, I like to provide Members of Congress and the American people with little updates on what is going on in the war on drugs and how others from time to time approach this serious problem. Not that I recommend any of these procedures or remedies that I have reported here tonight. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues for their indulgence, and I will return again next week.

TITLE IX AND WOMEN'S SPORTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, one of the most exciting sporting events of all time took place in Pasadena's famed Rose Bowl. Over 90,000 spectators, a record attendance for a women's sports contest, saw the United States women's soccer team defeat China on penalty kicks. Many millions more around the world saw this thrilling match on television. In this country television ratings were higher than for the National Hockey League finals and most of the National Basketball Association playoffs.

I congratulate all the wonderful young women who participated, not just those from the victorious U.S.

team but also the fine athletes from the Chinese squad and representatives from the other 14 nations that participated in this wonderful Women's World Cup. Marla Messing and Donna de Verona deserve everyone's gratitude for staging this magnificent tournament.

I would also like to praise ABC and ESPN for showing every match in its entirety, without commercial interruption, and live, except when two contests were being played at the same time.

The opportunity for the American public to see the action is something I have long fought for. When the American women's soccer team won the world championship in 1991 in China by defeating Norway 2 to 1, the final was only seen in this country by tape delay several weeks later. In contrast, the same match was shown live on two stations in Norway.

Consequently, I protested strongly when Americans were denied the right to see on television any of the soccer or women's softball matches in the 1996 Olympics. This was inexcusable, particularly since both American teams won the gold medal. I also objected at the poor treatment received by television viewers who wished to watch the U.S. men's and women's hockey teams at last year's winter Olympics. Since the U.S. Olympic committee is chartered by Congress, I am urging the House of Representatives' Committee on Government Reform, of which I am a member, to exert strong oversight so that the American public will receive better treatment at next year's Olympics. I know that Americans are anxious to see their beloved soccer team perform once more, and I am sure they will also enjoy our wonderful women's softball athletes when they get the opportunity to see them in action.

I think it is important to call attention to the important role that Title IX, enacted into law in 1972, played in preparing our women's team for the World Cup, and I congratulate my colleague, the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK) for having authored and enacted that law in this House.

Prior to the enactment of Title IX, female athletes in this country had limited chances to compete. I know when I was in school if I wished to be involved in athletics the only opportunity was to be a cheerleader. Donna de Verona, an Olympic gold medalist in swimming in the 1964 Olympics, was unable to obtain an athletic scholarship at an American University despite her considerable outstanding talent.

We must not heed those who complain that Title IX is responsible for the elimination of college men's basketball, wrestling and other so-called nonrevenue sports teams. In fact, we must find ways of extending the philosophy of Title IX to other areas where women are discriminated against in the sports world. In this regard, I refer to professional sports.

In this respect, 27 years after the introduction of Title IX, women are drastically discriminated against in the professional sports world. As of now, the women who won the world championships for the United States in women's soccer have no opportunity to play as professionals in this country. On the other hand, the members of the men's soccer team that finished last in France at the Men's World Cup last year have ample opportunities to play professionally in the United States and abroad. I do not wish to demean our American men's soccer athletes. I am confident they will do much better at the next world cup.

I think it is important to point out that virtually all men's professional sports teams receive significant government assistance in the form of subsidies and substantial tax breaks for whatever venue they play in. Many of the stadiums are actually constructed by municipal governments and either turned over to a team or leased at a very low rent. I believe that we must see that these facilities and tax breaks are available to women's professional teams on an equal basis.

THE DEBT AND THE DEFICIT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HAYES). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. SMITH) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to talk about fiscal responsibility, the budget deficit and hopefully paying off the debt.

We have a very promising situation right now where we are finally headed towards balancing the budget. It was not too long ago when that seemed like an impossible dream. I remember in 1990 when we looked at budget deficits growing on a yearly basis, stacked on top of an already multi-trillion dollar debt, it seemed impossible to think that we would ever dig our way out of that hole, but thanks to a strong economy, the private sector kicking in and some good decisions made by both sides of the aisle and by President Clinton's administration, we are to the point where we almost have a yearly balanced budget. Now, we still have a $5.6 trillion debt to deal with, but we are headed in the right direction, for the moment.

That is why I rise to speak this evening, because the "for the moment" part could change. As we head into the budget negotiations that are starting in earnest in both chambers and at the White House, we need to be very careful not to lose the progress that we have gained and not to, in essence, snatch defeat from the jaws of victory which we still have plenty of time to do.

I think there are a couple of ways this might happen. The first way is when we start throwing numbers around of the surplus. We have heard the numbers in the trillions of dollars about how much money we have got lying around. I want to try this evening to clarify exactly what we are talking about, because there are a number of variables in these numbers that often do not come with the rosy scenarios that various politicians are laying out for people to hear.

We have heard, for instance, that we have and will run up, as currently projected, $6 trillion in surpluses over the course of the next 15 years. There are a number of problems with this scenario. First of all, of that $6 trillion, better than half, almost, I think it is like $3.1 trillion, will be ran up in the Social Security trust fund. Any surplus that we have in the Social Security trust fund is not money that we can spend because it is money that we borrow from that trust fund with a promise to pay it back plus interest so that we can meet the obligations of the Social Security trust fund. If we were to take that money and treat it as a surplus and spend it, we would in essence—not in essence, we would—be spending money twice. That is exactly the sort of thing that got us in trouble in the 1980s. If you spend money twice, you wind up in debt because you do not have it when you need it.

So right away we lose half of that 15-year figure, better than half of that 15-year figure. You could still look at that and say, "Gosh, $2.9 trillion over 15 years, that is still a lot of money." It is, but it presumes that our existing budget of all spending will be reduced by 20 percent. Not only will it not increase but we will make cuts of 20 percent. This was part of the 1997 balanced budget agreement that occurred before our economic situation got rosier and more money poured into the coffers. I do not want to be one to predict the future, but having been around this place for the last year or so and listening to people talk about all the various programs, from defense to education to you name it that people feel are underfunded, much less in need of a 20 percent cut, I find it very hard to believe that over the course of that 15 years we are actually going to have that 20 percent reduction. So if we assume that again, we are going to get in trouble. That puts us in a position where you realize there is not that much money there.

Lastly, and most importantly, these are projections, estimates. Now, we have to do projections and estimates. You have to sort of guess, if you will, at what your budgets are going to look like so you can plan for the future. That is acceptable, but I would not count our chickens before they hatch. Because that 15-year projection is based on 15 years of continued growth and low inflation. Now, granted the growth that is projected is lower than we have had in the last year or two, as we have had the long peacetime expansion, the longest that we have had in a while, but still there are times when revenues go down instead of up, when estimates get worse instead of better. I know this as every Member of this Chamber ought to know. Those times happened throughout the 1980s and into the early 1990s. We had projected balanced budgets at, gosh, I do not know how many times throughout the 1980s and 1990s, but the numbers always came in worse than expected, many times far worse than expected, dramatically growing the deficit instead of reducing it.

So if we assume that this 15-year period is going to produce continued growth, continued low inflation, we are asking for trouble. I would suggest that a more modest approach is at most let us assume that maybe half of that is going to happen and if the other half happens, fine, when it happens, then we can use it for tax cuts or needed spending, but let us not spend it before we get it.

And, fourth, the final point, we should not forget the $5.6 trillion debt that we have hanging over us. It would be nice to use a lot of this money to pay down that debt, to get us back to the point where we can have the fiscal responsibility that we need in this country. We spend over $200 billion, somewhere around $220 billion a year, in interest on the debt. That is money that cannot go for any program, cannot go for any tax cut, it is merely servicing our debt. If we were to pay down that debt, we could reduce that amount and have even more money and a more fiscally responsible budget.

Let me suggest that now is the time to do this, at a time when we have between 4 and 6 percent growth depending on the quarter, at the time when we have virtually nonexistent inflation. These are unprecedented times, at least unprecedented in the last 40 or 50 years in this country, and if we do not seize this opportunity at a time when unemployment is 4.2 percent, to be fiscally responsible, we will never do it when times turn bad. Because when times turn bad is precisely when you need to spend more money on things like education and infrastructure, when you need to give tax cuts to help people who are struggling due to the tough economic times. Now is the time to be fiscally responsible.

I want to touch on one more point on that. We have recently heard a lot of talk about tax cuts. Truthfully there are not many politicians who do not like tax cuts. We would love to be able to give as many of them as possible and in as many places as possible, but only in my opinion if they do not jeopardize fiscal responsibility.

The plan that has been rolled out by the majority Republican Party in recent days calls for $850 billion, or $875 billion, depending on whose figures you believe, over the next 10 years. Right away, please note that they estimate over the next 10 years, whereas the surplus figures that have been thrown around in the newspapers estimate over 15 years. So over 15 years, that $850 billion is even more. In fact, if you take that $850 billion, put it over the 10 years like it is, then take our projected surpluses back over 10 years, and that is the chart that I have with me today, you will see that we have a figure here that shows that the combined surpluses over those two periods are somewhere around $1 trillion.

If you then also add into it the fact that if you spend the $850 billion or if you give it to tax cuts basically, you will not be able to pay down the debt at all, you jack up your interest payments by almost $200 billion and you completely exhaust this projected surplus in 10 years. So we better do absolutely as well every single year and we better be prepared to cut the budget 20 percent or we can forget about fiscal responsibility. The number is simply too high. Yes, we ought to do tax cuts. I completely support that. I completely agree with that. We ought to target it to the middle class, target it to the people who maybe have not necessarily benefited as much from the recent economic boon as others. But we should not exhaust the entire projected surplus on these tax cuts, putting ourselves in a position where we cannot even begin to pay down the debt and probably will not be able to have a balanced budget if the numbers come in worse than they are currently projected. That is not fiscally responsible.

Let me throw one other frightening statistic at you as we are looking at these happy numbers of the projected surpluses. We project out 15 years, which is an interesting time frame to pick particularly when you factor in positive economic projections, because it is right about at that time period, the year 2014, when the costs of Medicare and Social Security are really going to accelerate. If you project it out a few more years, you would see how much that starts to hurt us as the baby boom generation starts to retire in earnest. We are going to be in big trouble.

All of these factors and statistics need to be considered. The fact that half the money is in the Social Security trust fund, the fact that right at the end of our projections we get hit with a huge bill for Medicare and Social Security. These are things that mitigate how much money we have. My grave concern, and I have seen it already, and had people come up to me, program after program, tax cut after tax cut is thrown at us and everyone says, "Well, gosh, you ought to be able to do it. You've got this multi-trillion dollar surplus that everybody keeps talking about." I hope in my remarks I have explained a little bit tonight that we do not have that multi-trillion dollar surplus in the bank by any stretch of the imagination.

I really think that the single best thing this Chamber can do for the people of our country right now in these strong economic times is balance the budget and pay down the debt. Then if we hit tough economic times, we will have a little leeway to borrow some money, help prime the pump, help get the economy back going again, but not if we cannot do it now. If we cannot do it now in these prosperous times, we will never do it. And God help us if it gets to the point where actually the projections go down, if we experience a year of negative growth, which by the way does happen, if inflation ticks back up closer to double digits than just one or two, then we will really be in a fix. Now is the time to prepare for the future.

I would like to close by just making one other point. This is tough. I recognize that. I am not going to stand here and say that fiscal responsibility is easy. Because we have a lot of needs in this country. I could tick off a dozen off the top of my head, defense spending, education spending, veterans, health care for seniors and children, environmental protection programs, and that is just a few. We also could have a tremendous need for a lot of tax cuts that would be tremendously helpful to the middle class and others. I know that. Every day in my office a number of people come in the door and request one of those programs. But the obligation and the responsibility of this Congress is to recognize that we are not the last people in this country who are going to need those things and if we spend all the money now, if we basically have no discipline and simply want to pass out the goodies to make as many people happy as is humanly possible, then 10, 20, 30 years from now our children, our grandchildren, those of us who are still around, are not going to have anything for these same programs. In the year 2020, 2050, they are going to need education and transportation and health care and defense spending every little bit as much as we need it now but they will not have it because we in our fiscally irresponsible way will have spent their money.

I grew up in the 1970s and the 1980s when prior Congresses were in essence spending all of my money. I did not much like it and I darn sure do not want to do it to future generations because I do not have the discipline to do what is right and what is best for this country and what is responsible.

Do not let rosy scenarios and pie in the sky numbers fool you about where the budget is going and what is going to happen. Demand fiscal responsibility from this Congress, demand that the budget gets balanced and we pay down the debt.

BLUE DOG VIEW OF FEDERAL BUDGET

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HAYES). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) is recognized to control the remainder of the minority leader's time.

Mr. STENHOLM. I thank my colleague for requesting this hour this evening. I very much appreciate the opportunity to participate. I will assure the Speaker, I do not intend to take the full remaining part of the time tonight. If some other colleagues do show up, I will yield to them under the rule.

Let me sort of begin where the gentleman from Washington just ended and on the chart that he has in the well and point out, contrary to a lot of rhetoric in this body over the last few days, there is no budget surplus this year. When we look at the year 2000, the off-budget surplus is $5 billion projected. In the year 2001, it is $24 billion projected. Therefore, I would hope that this body would resist the temptation that is prevalent today to talk in terms of an $850 billion tax cut over the next 10 years when, according to all arithmetic today that is conservative, you will find that it will have to be done with borrowed money.

Now, the people that I represent do not get excited about a tax cut that is paid for with borrowed money. The first thing they assume is that if you borrow $850 billion, the least you are going to pay for interest is about 5 percent, maybe 6 percent, because it is the government doing the borrowing, but then they understand that if that is done with borrowed money, there is a pretty good chance that the Federal Reserve is going to involve itself in our decisions.

I ask my colleagues tonight, what did the Federal Reserve do a couple of weeks ago? If memory serves me correctly, they increased interest rates by .25 percent. Why did the Federal Reserve and the wisdom of Alan Greenspan increase those interest rates? Because they were afraid the economy was about to start overheating, inflation was going to begin moving up and they wanted to nip it in the bud. Now, let us move ourselves back to the subject of tax cutting.

Why would we want a tax cut? Obviously because it is a politically popular thing to do. It makes good political rhetoric to say we are going to leave this money that has been accumulated by overtaxing the people and sending it back to you, but by the same breath, tax cuts stimulate the economy. Now, the problem that I have with this $850 billion tax cut is that if on the one hand we are going to stimulate the economy and that stimulation of the economy is going to cause interest rates to go up, who is going to benefit best? I would submit to you tonight, the best tax cut that this Congress can give to all of the American people is to act fiscally responsible and to make certain that interest rates do not go up, in fact can come back down. That is something we had better think about, because we are not in control of the Federal Reserve and it is predictable based on what Chairman Greenspan has been saying what will happen if in fact the economy starts to overheat. But I go back to my first comment and point out again, there is no budget surplus.

Now I have a little further problem with this chart and all of these guesstimations because that is what they are.

I have been around here a few years, and I remember the debate in this body not too many years ago in which we argued for hour after hour as to whether or not we could project 2 years, 3 years. Now all of a sudden we are accepting 15-year projections.

Now who among us can predict tomorrow, much less 15 years from today? Who among us can make these kind of decisions? And that is why the Blue Dogs, as we are affectionately called by some, in the budget proposal that we made earlier this year suggested, let us stop this business; yes, Mr. President, you, and to the leadership of this body, let us stop this business of taking 15-year numbers and acting like this $700 billion is going to occur, and let us go back to 5-year numbers. Let us be conservative. Let us use 5-year numbers and let us not get carried away either with our desire for cutting taxes or our desire on the part of some for spending more money.

Now, again, let me repeat, there is no budget surplus. Most of these surpluses are dealing with Social Security. When you look at the off-budget or the on-budget surplus, you do have projected over the next 5 years 231 billion. What is it about this that should bother us when we take a 231 billion projected surplus over the next 5 years and suddenly use that as justification to have an $850 billion tax cut?

And what ought to really bother this body is that when you look at that other number on this chart and you look at that 2414 number, that is when we have major problems dealing with Social Security. That is why another part of the Blue Dog budget has said: Let us devote 100 percent of the Social Security trust funds to solving the Social Security problem, and let us do this by paying down the debt. Let us pay down the debt with all of the Social Security trust funds. And we go further in saying let us take half of the non-Social Security surplus funds and pay down the debt with them. And then let us use the other half of that projected surplus to deal with the concept of tax cuts and the concept of increased funding, particularly for defense.

We find over the weekend the Pentagon began to raise concerns, and rightfully they did. Because when anyone looks at an $850 billion tax cut over the next 10 years and then sees how it literally explodes about 2014, that becomes a problem for the military, it becomes a problem for our veterans programs, it becomes a problem for Medicare and Medicaid, but it even more seriously becomes a major problem for Social Security in 2014 because that is the year in which the Social Security trust funds begin not to, or the amount of taxes we are all paying on Social Security, begin not to cover the expected outgo of 2014.

In other words, the current situation we have in which Social Security is bringing in more than we are paying out begins to turn the other way as the baby boom generation begins to retire.

It ought to bother us, and it ought to say to this body and to those as we speak who are marking up this tax bill in extreme haste tonight: Now is the time for us not to be liberal with our thinking but to be conservative with our thinking and to realize that these are projections, and no one responsibly spends projections like it is real money.

Let me give my colleagues a few numbers in backing up. There is no budget surplus this year. For the first 8 months of fiscal year 1999, October through May, the Treasury reported a cumulative surplus of 40.7 billion, but it is composed of an off-budget surplus of 78.8 billion minus an on-budget surplus of 38.1.

There is no surplus, and yet we keep talking like there is one.

Let me read an editorial that was printed in today's San Angelo Standard Times. This is the way it went:

Washington's Budget Discussions Annoying. It is surreal to listen to Washington politicians arguing about how they ought to spend tax cuts on new programs, a projected budget surplus of $5.9 trillion over the next 15 years. There are two niggling problems with such talk. One is that it is the wrong policy; the second is that not only is the amount of money being discussed little better than a blind guess, there is not even any assurance that there will be any surplus.

Consider that the new projections are $1 trillion higher than the one made just this past February. Then consider that just 10 months ago the projected surplus was about one-third the numbers being tossed around now. And finally consider that just 18 months ago we were still talking about deficits. Can anyone really have enough confidence in such inexact calculations to make any plans that rely on their accuracy? Is it not obvious that if economic conditions can improve so rapidly, they can worsen just as rapidly? In fact, would not the smart money say that after 98 months of economic expansion, the longest during the peacetime in the Nation's history, a downturn is vastly more likely than 15 more years of uninterrupted growth and that future plans ought to reflect that probability?

The only good thing about the current budget blabbering is that the $5.9 trillion figure is in the ball park of the amount owed on the national debt. Would it not be nice if that image, paying off the debt and not dollar signs begging to be given, this political barter, was the one that filled the politicians' heads? Would it not be nice if the trillions of dollars that have been and will be paid in interest on the debt could be used in some more productive way?

Making the current talk even more frustrating is that doing the right thing is not even a difficult political choice. Polls have consistently shown that, given the options, Americans want Congress and the President to get the Nation's fiscal house in order before doing anything else with extra money.

Maybe the glorious projections being tossed around will turn out to be right or maybe the surplus will wind up being even twice as large, three times as large. That would be splendid. But it is foolish and irresponsible to base policy on dreams and wishes. Washington should take care of the priorities first, the money owed and the money that will be owed to future Social Security and Medicare recipients before committing any budget surplus elsewhere.

I could not have said it better myself, and as we go into tomorrow's continued markup in the Committee on Ways and Means and then next week having an $850 billion tax cut on the floor, many of us are going to be reminding this body time and time again: If you really mean it when you say let us lock up the Social Security trust funds and not use them, if you really mean it when we talk about saving Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid, if you really mean it, that we are going to keep our Nation's fiscal house in order. We must not succumb to the temptation to spend this surplus that may or may not even be realized for any purpose, and that includes the cutting of taxes. Because if we make that mistake, let us remember what happened the last time when we were not able to meet the spending needs in the 1980s. We borrowed $3 trillion, almost $4 trillion. We borrowed because we could not and would not make the difficult decisions right here in this body.

Again, my plea to the leadership of this House: Let us make the tough decisions first, let us settle the appropriations battle, let us acknowledge that if in fact we do have a need to build up our Nation's military, and we do, that there is no way on this earth we will be able to meet those numbers unless we deal with them responsibly in the budget by making that decision first. Let us acknowledge, all of us, that if you are concerned about Social Security, you cannot wink at 2014, you cannot say we are going to pass that on to the future congresses, we do not care about what is going to happen then, oh, we care, but we have got a plan, and the plan is yet to be materialized.

Why would it not be the most responsible thing for us to have a Social Security bill on the floor? Why would it not be the most responsible to have a bill for Medicare reform on the floor and have honest to goodness projections?

Why do we have our hospitals in town this week again concerned, as my hospitals are here, as I met with them, hospital administrators from about 20 in my district who are concerned about having to shut down because the budget decisions that were made in the 1997 balanced budget agreement went too far. And as I point out to them, it did not go near as far as some folks in this body would have liked to have seen.

But why not have an open and honest debate about how we are going to deal with health care first? Why do we postpone that until after we have a vote on spending the entire surplus that may or may not be a real one?

These are some of the questions that I think we are going to have to ask and to answer over and over and over again.

Remember: When anyone talks about an $852 billion surplus that is not Social Security; remember the highway bill that this body passed last year overwhelmingly? Look at the money that we voted to spend there that busted the hound out of the caps, but nobody saying, oh, we were not busting them because that was just part of the highway bill.

Look at this year, when we passed an airport bill not too many days ago and folks were standing up on the Committee on the Budget and saying we are busting the caps. No, we are not, because the total has not been busted yet, but that old bucket is filling up, and as it fills up, we are going to have some extremely interesting times, and I do not want, I hope, to be part of another Congress that for political reasons absolutely and totally disregards the future of our children and grandchildren. That is what we will do if we choose to have a tax cut for self-gratification today. We will be saying to our children and grandchildren we do not give a rip about you. Because the urgency is what the polls that we have to be looking at this year, and that is somebody somewhere is saying we need a tax cut.

I agree we need a tax cut, but not with borrowed money. That is the significant thing that we are going to have to somehow get over, hopefully to a majority of this body, that it does not make economic sense for us to waste this opportunity of fiscal responsibility, the first time in many, many years that we have got 2 years in a row in which when you take Social Security trust funds and off-budget, on-budget, all of this malarkey that we talk about here, that we do have a surplus. If we apply it to the debt and honestly use this opportunity to deal with the long-term problems of Social Security, we can do something that our grandchildren will look back on. And I happen to have two. I should say my wife, Cindy, and I happen to have two.

And I have resolved, and many people asked me why I have been so involved as I have in the Social Security question. I am not on the Committee on Ways and Means. I have been working with the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE), my colleague. We have bipartisan support now for a proposal on Social Security that does what we say it will do. And people say, well, what do we say it will do? It goes a long way towards solving the long-term problems of Social Security, better than any other proposal out there.

And people say, "Well, CHARLIE, why are you so involved in Social Security?"

And I say two reasons. Their names are Chase and Cole. It is mine and my wife's 4-year-old and 2-year-old grandsons. I do not want them to look back 65 years from today and say, if only my granddad would have done what in his heart he knew he should have done when he was in the Congress, we would not be in the mess we are in today.

We have a wonderful opportunity, if we can find the bipartisan political courage to deal conservatively with this surplus, to avoid the temptation that some have today to spend the money, whether it be on tax cuts or whether it be on spending for new programs.

Members will see me up at this mike and at other mikes and using every possible opportunity over the next several days to encourage a majority of my colleagues to take this surplus and pay down the debt. Listen to what the American people are telling us in district after district. They are saying, pay down the debt.

Any small business man or woman knows what happens to their business when they get more debt than they can pay back. When the interest cost becomes insurmountable, an insurmountable problem to them, they understand. Why is it so difficult for Members of Congress to understand?

That is the message the Blue Dogs will be bringing. That is the message I hope we will find bipartisan support for.

URGING HOUSE LEADERSHIP TO BRING MANAGED CARE REFORM TO THE FLOOR FOR DEBATE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GARY MILLER of California). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) is recognized for 60 minutes.

COMMONSENSE RECOMMENDATIONS ON THE BUDGET, THE BALANCED BUDGET ACT, AND MEDICARE

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, I find myself agreeing with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM) on many of the issues that he has talked about regarding the budget. We are dealing primarily with what looks like a projected $1 trillion surplus. That is assuming that we do not have a recession over the next 10 years, that the economy continues to be as strong, and that we stay within budget caps related to the 1997 Balanced Budget Act.

But as my friend and colleague, the gentleman from Texas, rightly points out, I think we will need to go back and do some adjustments on the Balanced Budget Act, particularly as it relates to health care.

I have a lot of rural hospitals in my district, and there is a large teaching hospital in my State, just like there is in Texas, just like there is in every State in the country. Those rural hospitals and teaching hospitals over the next 4 or 5 years are going to lose millions and millions of dollars, and they will be in the red. We need to do something to adjust the payments, and we are not just talking about reductions in the rate of growth for their reimbursement, we are talking about a decrease, a real decrease and cuts from today.

For instance, the average rural hospital in the State of Iowa, my home State, currently gets paid by Medicare about $1,200 for their costs for a patient who has a cataract operation. That is projected to decrease to about $950 under the Balanced Budget Act. That is a real cut, that is not a reduction in the rate of growth. I could go through one procedure after another.

So when we look at the total budget, we have to also look at some adjustments that we are going to have to make in terms of Medicare. We are going to have to look at some real adjustments we are going to have to make in order to get our appropriations bills passed.

We cannot bring to the floor and expect it to pass a bill that would cut spending for the FBI by 20 percent. We cannot bring to the floor and expect the bill to pass if we would reduce funding for the immigration service, the INS, by 15 to 20 percent. That is a cut, not just reduce the rate of growth in their cost of living allowance. These are some real facts we are going to have to deal with.

Just like my friend, the gentleman from Texas, I think we ought to have a tax cut as well. But I cannot support an $870 billion tax cut that we are talking about here in the House, not $870 billion out of $1 trillion in terms of the surplus.

I think it would be much more reasonable for us to sit down, reach across the aisle, reach down Pennsylvania Avenue, and come to an agreement. Let us do some adjustments on that Balanced Budget Act, maybe one-third of that surplus. Let us maybe do one-third of that surplus for a tax cut. That is still a hefty tax cut.

And let us do something that all of my constituents say we ought to do. For once, and it would probably be the first time in 50 or 60 years, let us actually reduce the Nation's debt. Let us do some real deficit reduction. I got elected in 1994 and took office in 1995. The debt has increased every year since I have been in Congress. We have an opportunity this year to actually reduce the national debt.

What would be the benefit of that? Well, it would help reduce interest rates for everyone in the country. That makes a big difference if one is paying for a house or buying a car. By reducing that total debt that the country has, which is over $5 trillion, by reducing that now, it gives us some cushion for what we will have to spend later on when the baby boomers retire.

Those are just some commonsense recommendations to my colleagues on both sides of the aisle.

Mr. Speaker, I want to talk primarily tonight about managed care reform. So I find myself standing on the floor yet again calling for comprehensive patient protection to be debated on the floor of the House of Representatives as soon as possible.

By the way, Mr. Speaker, do Members know the difference between a PPO, an HMO, and the PLO? At least, Mr. Speaker, with the PLO, you can negotiate.

Mr. Speaker, the clock continues to tick on our legislative calendar. So I ask, for the hundredth time, when are we going to debate comprehensive managed care legislation on the floor of the House of Representatives, and will the debate be fair? And when will the House Committee on Commerce mark up a managed care reform bill?

The decision was made to let the Committee on Education and the Workforce take up the comprehensive patient protection legislation first, but they are stalled. Nothing has happened in the Committee on Commerce, and nothing is happening in the other committees.

How can any of us say that we are making a strong effort to address managed care reforms when the Committee on Commerce, the committee of primary jurisdiction, has yet to hold a markup session on a managed care bill?

Before I go any further, I want to commend my colleagues, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD) and the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA), for their strong advocacy of strong patient protection legislation in the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

My colleagues have pointed out that the bills of the Committee on Education and the Workforce that were touted to be comprehensive managed care bills were, in reality, nothing more than an assurance of business as usual for the HMOs. Actually, they were not even business as usual, as those bills from the Committee on Education and the Workforce actually make it harder for patients to fight HMO abuses under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, ERISA.

Mr. Speaker, I have spoken many times on this floor about how important it is for patients to have care that fits what are called "prevailing standards of medical care." This issue is being debated here on Capitol Hill this week by the other body. It is a very, very important issue. So I want to spend a little bit of time to talk to my colleagues about this issue.

Mr. Speaker, many health plans devise their own arbitrary guidelines and definitions for "medical necessity." For example, one HMO defines "medical necessity" as the cheapest, least expensive care, without any qualification ensuring that patients will still receive quality health care coverage.

We might ask, how is it that HMOs are allowed to do that? That is not the case for the majority of insurance companies who sell to individual people.

They have to follow State insurance laws. Under current Federal law, if you or a member of your family is insured by your employer in a self-insured plan, your employer can define "medical necessity" as anything that they want to. Furthermore, they are not liable for their decisions, except insofar as to give care that could be denied.

ERISA was originally designed as a consumer pension bill. It was designed to make pension plans uniform for employees, to make it easier for employers to issue pensions. It got extended to health plans sort of by a quirk 25 years ago. It was not even hardly debated here on the floor.

It did not make that much difference for a long time, when most health plans were traditional indemnity insurance plans. Then along came managed care. What happened? Those companies started making medical decisions. Then we started to run into the problems and the complications of those medical decisions.

Listen to some words that a former HMO reviewer gave as she testified before Congress. It was May 30, 1996, when this small, nervous woman testified before the Committee on Commerce. Her testimony came after a long day of testimony on the abuses of managed care.

This woman's name was Linda Peeno. She was a claims reviewer for several health care plans. She told of the choices that plans are making every day when they determine the medical necessity of treatment options.

I am going to recount her testimony: "I wish to begin by making a public confession." This is this HMO medical reviewer's words. "In the spring of 1987, I caused the death of a man. Although this was known to many people, I have not been taken before any court of law or called to account for this in any professional or public forum. In fact, just the opposite occurred. I was rewarded for this," she said. "It brought me an improved reputation in my job and contributed to my advancement afterwards. Not only did I demonstrate that I could do what was expected of me, I exemplified the good company medical reviewer. I saved the company half a million dollars."

As I was watching this lady testify, I could see that she was anguished. Her voice was husky. She was tearful. I looked around the room, and the audience shifted uncomfortably. They drew very quiet as her story unfolded. The industry representatives, the HMO representatives who were in that committee room, they averted their eyes.

She continued: "Since that day, I have lived with this act and many others eating into my heart and soul. For me, a physician is a professional charged with the care of healing of his or her fellow human beings. The primary ethical norm is do no harm. I did worse. I caused death."

She continued, "Instead of using a clumsy, bloody weapon, I used the cleanest, simplest of tools: My words. This man died because I denied him a necessary operation to save his heart. I felt little pain or remorse at the time. The man's faceless distance soothed my conscience. Like a skilled soldier, I was trained for the moment. When any moral qualms arose, I was to remember, I am not denying care, I am only denying payment."

She continued: "At that time, that helped me avoid any sense of responsibility for my decisions. Now I am no longer willing to accept the escapist reasoning that allowed me to rationalize that action."

I accept my responsibility now for that man's death as well as for the immeasurable pain and suffering many other decisions of mine caused.

Well, at that point Ms. Peeno described many ways managed care plans deny care, but she emphasized one in particular: The right to decide what care is medically necessary. She said, quote, "There is one last activity that I think deserves a special place on this list, and this is what I call the "smart bomb" of cost containment, and that is medical necessity denials. Even when medical criteria is used, it is rarely developed in any kind of standard traditional clinical process. It is rarely standardized across the field. The criteria are rarely available for prior review by the physicians or the members of the plan. And we have enough experience from history to demonstrate the consequences of secretive unregulated systems that go awry."

Well, Mr. Speaker, the room was stone quiet. The chairman of the committee mumbled "thank you." This medical reviewer could have rationalized her decisions as so many have done. She could have said, "I was just working within guidelines" or "I was just following orders." We have heard that one before. Or, "We have to save resources." Or, "Well, this is not about treatment, it is really about benefits."

But this HMO reviewer refused to continue this type of psychological denial and she will do penance for her sins the rest of her life. And to atone for that she is exposing the dirty little secret of HMOs determining medical necessity.

Mr. Speaker, if there is only one thing my colleagues learn before voting on patient protection legislation, I beg them to listen to the following: before voting on any patient protection legislation, keep in mind the fact that no amount of procedural protection or schemes of external review can help patients if insurers are legislatively given broad powers to determine what standards will be used to make decisions about coverage. As Ms. Peeno so poignantly observed, insurers now routinely make treatment decisions by determining what goods or services they will pay for.

Let me give an example of how they can arbitrarily determine medical necessity. There is a health plan out there that determines medical necessity by defining it as: The cheapest, least expensive care as determined by us. So well, what could be wrong with that? What is wrong with the cheapest, least expensive care?

Well, before I came to Congress and in some surgical trips that I make abroad I still do this, I took care of a lot of children with cleft lips and palates. Let me show the birth defect of one of these children. This is a little baby born with a complete cleft lip and palate. This occurs about one in 500 births, so it is pretty frequent. A huge hole right in the middle of the face. Imagine being a mom or dad and giving birth to a little baby with this birth defect, and then think of that HMO that defines medical necessity as the cheapest, least expensive care.

Mr. Speaker, the prevailing standard of care, a standard that we have used in this country for over 200 years, would say the prevailing standard of care to fix this defect in the roof of this child's mouth is a surgical operation to fix that. I have done hundreds of those operations. That is the standard care everywhere in the world. However, that HMO, by its contractual language, can say but the cheapest, least expensive care would be to use what is called a plastic obturator. It would be like an upper denture plate. That way the food will not go up into the roof of the mouth, up into the nasal passages so much.

Of course, with that little plastic device which would be the cheapest, least expensive care, the child will probably never speak as good as if the child had a surgical correction of this birth defect. But so what does the HMO care? They are increasing their bottom line, their profits. And furthermore, under Federal law they can define it any way they want to by their contractual language if one happens to get their insurance from an employer.

Mr. Speaker, I think that is a tragedy. I think that is a travesty. Congress created that law 25 years ago never expecting that this type of behavior would be done by HMOs. Yet 50 percent of the reconstructive surgeons who take care of children with this birth defect have had HMOs deny operations to surgically correct this condition by calling them, quote, "cosmetic operations."

This is not a cosmetic operation. Cosmetic operations are repairing baggy eyelids or a face lift. This is a birth defect. Prevailing standards of care would say surgical correction, not a piece of plastic shoved up into the roof of a patient's mouth with food and fluid coming out of their nose.

Who would do that, some would ask? Well, it happens. And we need to fix the Federal law that keeps that happening. What else about that Federal law needs to be fixed? Well, over the last few days I have watched the debate up here on the Hill in the other body. There was an amendment that dealt with who would be covered by patient protection legislation. The GOP bill would only cover about one quarter of the people in this country. There was an amendment to make it cover everyone in this country, these patient protections. Getting up and arguing against it were my GOP colleagues by saying, hey, we should not interfere with the States's ability, States's rights, let the States decide this. The only problem with this is that it is Federal law that has exempted State regulation and State oversight.

I want to see in a few days if my colleagues will talk the same tune when we are talking about liability. It was Federal law that gave a liability shield to HMOs so that if they do negligent, malicious behavior that results in injury, loss of limb, or death that they are not responsible.

Let me give an example of what I am talking about in terms of what HMOs have done. This is the case of a little 6-month-old boy. A little 6-month-old boy in Atlanta, Georgia, actually lives south of Atlanta, Georgia, woke up one night crying about 3:00 in the morning and had a temperature of 104 and looked really sick. His mother thought he needed to go to the emergency room. This is this little boy tugging on his sister's sleeve before his HMO health care. So his mother phoned the 1-800 number and she is told, "We will authorize you to go to an emergency room, but we will only let you go to this one hospital a long ways away. And if you go to a nearer one, we will not cover it."

So Dad gets in the car, Mom wraps up little Jimmy and they start on their trek. About halfway through the trip, they pass three hospital emergency rooms. Mom and Dad are not health professionals. They know Jimmy is sick but they do not know how sick, but they do know if they stop without an authorization, they could get stuck with thousands of dollars of bills because their HMO will not pay for it. So they push on to that one authorized hospital.

What happens? En route, little Jimmy's eyes roll back in his head, he stops breathing, he has a cardiac arrest. Picture Mom and Dad, Dad driving like crazy, Mom trying to keep her little infant alive to get to the emergency room. Somehow or other they manage to get to the emergency room. Mom holding little Jimmy leaps out the car screaming, "Help my baby, help my baby." A nurse comes out and starts to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. They bring out the crash cart and get him intubated and get the lines going and give him medicines and somehow or other this little baby lives. But he does not live whole.

Because he has had that cardiac arrest en route to the hospital, the only one authorized by that HMO which has made that medical decision, he ends up with gangrene of both hands and both feet and both hands and both feet have to be amputated.

Here is little Jimmy today. I talked to his mom about 6 weeks ago. Jimmy is learning to put on his leg prostheses with his arm stumps. He still cannot get on his bilateral hook prostheses for his hands by himself. Jimmy will never play basketball. He will certainly never wrestle. And some day when he gets married, he will never be able to caress the face of the woman that he loves with his hand.

Mr. Speaker, under Federal law if one's little baby had this happen to them and their insurance was from their employer who had a self-insured plan and their plan had made that decision, that negligent decision which had resulted in this disaster, under Federal law that plan would be liable for nothing other than the cost of the amputations.

Is that fair? Is that the way it is if one buys insurance as an individual from a plan that is covered by State regulation? No. So, Mr. Speaker, I would say to my colleagues, my colleagues in the other body and my colleagues in this body, when we get a chance to vote on whether health plans ought to be liable for decisions that they make that result in this type of negligence, a judge reviewed this case. A judge looked at the case. He said that the margins of safety by this HMO were, quote, "razor thin." I would add to that, about as razor thin as the scalpels that had to remove little Jimmy's hands and feet.

Mr. Speaker, I say to my friends on both sides of the aisle and in the other body, when we get a chance to vote on whether a health plan should be responsible for their actions that result in this type of injury, think, especially my fellow Republicans, think about how we always say as Republicans, hey, people should be responsible for their actions. Do not we say that? If somebody is able-bodied and they can work, they ought to be responsible for providing for their family? Do not we say that if somebody kills somebody or is a rapist that they ought to be responsible for their criminal behavior?

How can we then say that an HMO which makes this type of decision that results in this type of injury should not also be responsible? There is no other entity, no other business, no other individual in this country that has that type of legal protection. It is wrong. It should be fixed.

The State of Texas fixed this 2 years ago. They made their health plans liable. Now, of course this is being challenged because of the ERISA law. But since that time there has not been an explosion of lawsuits. There has only been one. I will read about it in a few minutes. But why has there not been? Because health plans suddenly realized that they cannot cut corners like they did with this little boy or they are going to be liable. They are going to be responsible.

Did it significantly increase premiums in Texas? No. Premiums in Texas have not gone up any higher than they have anywhere else in the country. Did it mean that managed care would die out in Texas? No. Several years ago, there were 30 HMOs in Texas. Today, there are 51. That law is working. It did not result in a huge number of lawsuits, and it has not resulted in a big increase in premiums like all the HMOs would have us believe.

Let me read today an editorial from USA Today. The title of this is, "Why should law protect HMOs that injure patients?"

Last July, Joseph Plocica's health plan discharged him from a hospital, against the advice of his psychiatrist, who said the Fort Worth resident had suicidal depression requiring continued help, according to a lawsuit. That night, Plocica proved his doctor right and his health plan wrong. He drank a half-gallon of antifreeze and died 8 days later.

As terrible as this story is, at least Plocica's bereaved family has more rights than most. A sweeping 1997 Texas law let them sue Plocica's health plan for malpractice.

That's a right denied to the roughly 120 million other Americans who receive their health care through work. This week, the federal law that protects those health plans from lawsuits is the focus of a contentious Senate debate over patients' rights.

The central question: Should HMOs, which often make life and death decisions about treatments, be legally accountable when their decisions go tragically wrong?

Like Mr. Plocica who drank antifreeze or little Jimmy here who lost his hands and feet.

"Right now", the USA Today editorial continues, the answer is no, although that is a luxury no doctor, and no other business, enjoy.

The provision might have made sense when it was passed by Congress in 1974 as part of a law designed to protect workers' pensions. Most employees were covered by old-style fee-for-service insurance plans and payment disputes took place after health care had been delivered. So a law limiting recovery to the cost of care did not hurt anybody. But today, more than 80 percent of workers are in managed care plans that actively direct what treatments parents received.

Unfortunately, despite efforts in Texas and a few other states to find ways around this law, the gaping liability loophole is not likely to be closed nationwide any time soon unless Congress acts.

Insurance and business groups have mounted an aggressive fight against a version of the Patients' Bill of Rights that allows patients to sue. They say opening up HMOs to lawsuits will result in a flood of litigation and kill cost control by doing little to improve quality care.

But in Texas, where these same groups made all the same arguments, the reality is far from different.

No flood of lawsuits. Only a handful of cases have been filed against HMO plans in Texas since the challenge to the law was overturned last fall. This is due, in part, to another feature of that 1997 law, which requires swift independent review of disputes.

Rates have not shot up. In the two years since the law was passed, HMO premiums in the state are almost exactly where they stood in 1995. Cost increases in Dallas and Houston were below the national average last year.

Quality may be improving. News accounts from Texas suggests that HMOs, now accountable for their decisions, are more careful making those decisions.

Doctors report health plans are less likely to drag their feet, for instance, and less likely to deny treatments doctors believe are needed.

There's no reason to believe a national law would produce any different results, continues this editorial.

Studies by the Congressional Budget Office and the nonprofit Kaiser Family Foundation find HMO liability would produce negligible premium hikes. Only industry-sponsored studies find otherwise.

Lawmakers would do well to look at the facts before leaving this critical patient right on the cutting room floor.

Mr. Speaker, I do not think we should hesitate about having HMOs be responsible, despite the fact that the HMO industry has spent more than $100,000 per Congressman lobbying against a strong Patients' Bill of Rights. Surveys show that, despite all that advertising, that money spent on advertising by the insurance and HMO industry for the last 2 years, there has been no significant change in public opinion about the quality of HMO care.

Despite tens of millions of dollars of advertising, a recent Kaiser survey shows no change in public opinion: 77 percent favor access to specialists, 83 percent favor independent review, 76 percent favor emergency room coverage, 70 percent favor the right to sue one's HMO. Other surveys show that 85 percent of the public think Congress should fix these HMO abuses.

If these concerns are not addressed, I think the public will see examples like this, and they will ultimately reject the market model as it now exists. However, if we can enact true managed care reform such as that embodied by my own Managed Care Reform Act of 1999 or the Dingell or the Norwood bills, then consumer rejection of a market model will be less likely.

Common sense, responsible proposals to regulate managed care plans are not a rejection of the market model of health care. In fact, they are just as likely to have the opposite effect. They will preserve the market model by saving it from its own most irresponsible and destructive tendencies.

Mr. Speaker, let us pass real HMO reform. Let us learn from States like Texas. After all, is it not Republicans who often say that the States are the laboratories of democracy? Yes, let us have some insurance tax incentives. But let us be very careful about repeating some mistakes that have been made with ERISA in the past that led to fraud in regards to association health plans.

Finally, the Speaker of the House told me before the July 4th recess that it was his intent to have HMO reform legislation on the floor by the middle of July. Well, Mr. Speaker, here we are. According to my watch, it is now the middle of July, and we have no date yet even for a full committee mark-up in the House of Representatives. Why? Well because it is not clear that another HMO protection bill could make it through committee. Too many Republicans and Democrats of each committee want to see some real reform to prevent this type of tragedy, real reform, not a fig-leaf piece of legislation.

I think there are even majority votes in both the Committee on Education and the Workforce and the Committee on Commerce for strong medical necessity and enforcement measures. Maybe that is the reason why the committee chairmen are not moving ahead. Maybe that is why the leadership of this House is not telling them to get their act in order, get this to the floor.

Well, the Senate is debating HMO reform this week. So let us see what happens there.

I think today the Washington Post called it about right when it referenced the GOP Senate bill. It said, "The Republican bill professes to provide many of the same protections, but the fine print often belies its claims. Among much else, it turns out to apply only to some plans and to only about one-fourth as many people as the Democratic bill would cover."

The Post then talked about the GOP criticisms of the Democratic bill, "Critics say that the Democratic bill, by weakening the cost-containment industry, would drive up costs." The Post continues, "Our contrary sense is that, in the long run, it would strengthen cost containment by requiring that it be done in a balanced way", exactly the sentiments that I expressed a few minutes ago.

Today the Washington Post closed that editorial by saying, "The risks of increased costs tend to be exaggerated in debate. The managed care industry says that, by and large, it already does most of the modest amount this bill would require of it. If so, the added cost can hardly be as great as the critics contend."

Mr. Speaker, when we are talking about the cost for a strong Patients' Bill of Rights, we are talking about something in the range of $36 per year for a family of four. Is that not worth it to prevent an HMO tragedy like happened to this little boy?

Mr. Speaker, please keep your promise. By next week, we should have debated HMO reform in full committee, and we should be headed to the floor. Is that going to be the situation? Or is it the Speaker's intention to try to limit debate on this important issue by putting it right up against August recess, when Members have planned vacations with their families, in order to limit debate.

Well, Mr. Speaker, if that is so, it will be seen for what it really is, a cynical abuse of scheduling because the leadership of this House really does not want a full debate on protecting patients. Mr. Speaker, I hope that is not the case. The victims of managed care and their families are watching.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GARY MILLER of California). The Chair will remind all Members to refrain from references to the Senate including the characterization of Senate action and the urging of the Senate to take certain action.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Ms. BALDWIN (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for today after 5:30 p.m. and Wednesday, July 14 when on account of illness in the family.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for today on account of official business.

Mrs. THURMAN (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for today on account of illness in the family.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. PALLONE) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. PALLONE, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. LIPINSKI, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. WOOLSEY, for 5 minutes, today.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. STUPAK, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. CUMMINGS, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. HOYER, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. MICA) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. BEREUTER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana, for 5 minutes on July 20.

Mr. DEMINT, for 5 minutes on July 14.

Mr. RAMSTAD, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. FOSSELLA, for 5 minutes on July 14.

(The following Member (at her own request) to revise and extend her remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mrs. MALONEY of New York, for 5 minutes, today.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. THOMAS, from the Committee on House Administration, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

On July 12, 1999:

H.R. 4. To declare it to be the policy of the United States to deploy a national missile defense.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 42 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, July 14, 1999, at 10 a.m.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mrs. MYRICK: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 245. Resolutions Providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1691) to protect religious liberty (Rept. 106-229). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska: Committee on Resources. H.R. 535. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to make corrections to a map relating to the Coastal Barrier Resources System (Rept. 106-230). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. KOLBE: Committee on Appropriations. H.R. 2490. A bill making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes (Rept. 106-231). #### AMENDMENTS

Under clause 8 of rule XVIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 1691

OFFERED BY MR. CONYERS

(Amendment in the Nature of a Substitute)

AMENDMENT NO. 1: Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Religious Liberty Protection Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. PROTECTION OF RELIGIOUS EXERCISE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), a government shall not substantially burden a person's religious exercise—

(1) in a program or activity, operated by a government, that receives Federal financial assistance; or

(2) in any case in which the substantial burden on the person's religious exercise affects, or in which a removal of that substantial burden would affect, commerce with foreign nations, among the several States, or with Indian tribes;

even if the burden results from a rule of general applicability.

(b) EXCEPTION.—A government may substantially burden a person's religious exercise if the government demonstrates that application of the burden to the person—

(1) is in furtherance of a compelling governmental interest; and

(2) is the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest.

(c) REMEDIES OF THE UNITED STATES.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the United States to deny or withhold Federal financial assistance as a remedy for a violation of this Act. However, nothing in this subsection shall be construed to deny, impair, or otherwise affect any right or authority of the Attorney General or the United States or any agency, officer, or employee thereof under other law, including section 4(d) of this Act, to institute or intervene in any action or proceeding.

SEC. 3. ENFORCEMENT OF CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS.

(a) PROCEDURE.—If a claimant produces prima facie evidence to support a claim alleging a violation of the Free Exercise

Clause or a violation of a provision of this Act enforcing that clause, the government shall bear the burden of persuasion on any element of the claim; however, the claimant shall bear the burden of persuasion on whether the challenged government practice, law, or regulation burdens or substantially burdens the claimant's exercise of religion.

(b) LAND USE REGULATION.—

(1) LIMITATION ON LAND USE REGULATION.—

(A) Where, in applying or implementing any land use regulation or exemption, or system of land use regulations or exemptions, a government has the authority to make individualized assessments of the proposed uses to which real property would be put, the government may not impose a substantial burden on a person's religious exercise, unless the government demonstrates that application of the burden to the person is in furtherance of a compelling governmental interest and is the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest.

(B) No government shall impose or implement a land use regulation in a manner that does not treat religious assemblies or institutions on equal terms with nonreligious assemblies or institutions.

(C) No government shall impose or implement a land use regulation that discriminates against any assembly or institution on the basis of religion or religious denomination.

(D) No government with zoning authority shall unreasonably exclude from the jurisdiction over which it has authority, or unreasonably limit within that jurisdiction, assemblies or institutions principally devoted to religious exercise.

(2) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Adjudication of a claim of a violation of the Free Exercise Clause or this subsection in a non-Federal forum shall be entitled to full faith and credit in a Federal court only if the claimant had a full and fair adjudication of that claim in the non-Federal forum.

(3) NONPREEMPTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall preempt State law that is equally or more protective of religious exercise.

SEC. 4. JUDICIAL RELIEF.

(a) CAUSE OF ACTION.—A person may assert a violation of this Act as a claim or defense in a judicial proceeding and obtain appropriate relief against a government. Standing to assert a claim or defense under this section shall be governed by the general rules of standing under article III of the Constitution.

(b) ATTORNEYS' FEES.—Section 722(b) of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "the Religious Liberty Protection Act of 1998," after "Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993,"; and

(2) by striking the comma that follows a comma.

(c) PRISONERS.—Any litigation under this Act in which the claimant is a prisoner shall be subject to the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (including provisions of law amended by that Act).

(d) AUTHORITY OF UNITED STATES TO ENFORCE THIS ACT.—The United States may sue for injunctive or declaratory relief to enforce compliance with this Act.

(e) PERSONS WHO MAY RAISE A CLAIM OR DEFENSE.—A person who may raise a claim or defense under subsection (a) is—

(1) an owner of a dwelling described in section 803(b) of the Fair Housing Act (42 U.S.C. 3603(b)), with respect to a prohibition relating to discrimination in housing;

(2) with respect to a prohibition against discrimination in employment—

(A) a religious corporation, association, educational institution (as described in 42

U.S.C. 2000e-2(e)), or society, with respect to the employment of individuals who perform duties such as spreading or teaching faith, other instructional functions, performing or assisting in devotional services, or activities relating to the internal governance of such corporation, association, educational institution, or society in the carrying on of its activities; or

(B) an entity employing 5 or fewer individuals; or

(3) any other person, with respect to an assertion of any other claim or defense relating to a law other than a law—

(A) prohibiting discrimination in housing and employment, except as described in paragraphs (1) and (2); or

(B) prohibiting discrimination in a public accommodation.

SEC. 5. RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

(a) RELIGIOUS BELIEF UNAFFECTED.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize any government to burden any religious belief.

(b) RELIGIOUS EXERCISE NOT REGULATED.—Nothing in this Act shall create any basis for restricting or burdening religious exercise or for claims against a religious organization, including any religiously affiliated school or university, not acting under color of law.

(c) CLAIMS TO FUNDING UNAFFECTED.—Nothing in this Act shall create or preclude a right of any religious organization to receive funding or other assistance from a government, or of any person to receive government funding for a religious activity, but this Act may require a government to incur expenses in its own operations to avoid imposing a burden or a substantial burden on religious exercise.

(d) OTHER AUTHORITY TO IMPOSE CONDITIONS ON FUNDING UNAFFECTED.—Nothing in this Act shall—

(1) authorize a government to regulate or affect, directly or indirectly, the activities or policies of a person other than a government as a condition of receiving funding or other assistance; or

(2) restrict any authority that may exist under other law to so regulate or affect, except as provided in this Act.

(e) GOVERNMENTAL DISCRETION IN ALLEVIATING BURDENS ON RELIGIOUS EXERCISE.—A government may avoid the preemptive force of any provision of this Act by changing the policy that results in the substantial burden on religious exercise, by retaining the policy and exempting the burdened religious exercise, by providing exemptions from the policy for applications that substantially burden religious exercise, or by any other means that eliminates the substantial burden.

(f) EFFECT ON OTHER LAW.—In a claim under section 2(a)(2) of this Act, proof that a substantial burden on a person's religious exercise, or removal of that burden, affects or would affect commerce, shall not establish any inference or presumption that Congress intends that any religious exercise is, or is not, subject to any other law.

(g) BROAD CONSTRUCTION.—This Act should be construed in favor of a broad protection of religious exercise, to the maximum extent permitted by its terms and the Constitution.

(h) SEVERABILITY.—If any provision of this Act or of an amendment made by this Act, or any application of such provision to any person or circumstance, is held to be unconstitutional, the remainder of this Act, the amendments made by this Act, and the application of the provision to any other person or circumstance shall not be affected.

SEC. 6. ESTABLISHMENT CLAUSE UNAFFECTED.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to affect, interpret, or in any way address that portion of the first amendment to the Constitution prohibiting laws respecting an establishment of religion (referred to in this section as the "Establishment Clause"). Granting government funding, benefits, or exemptions, to the extent permissible under the Establishment Clause, shall not constitute a violation of this Act. As used in this section, the term "granting", used with respect to government funding, benefits, or exemptions, does not include the denial of government funding, benefits, or exemptions.

SEC. 7. AMENDMENTS TO RELIGIOUS FREEDOM RESTORATION ACT.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 5 of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 2000bb-2) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "a State, or subdivision of a State" and inserting "a covered entity or a subdivision of such an entity";

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "term" and all that follows through "includes" and inserting "term 'covered entity' means"; and

(3) in paragraph (4), by striking all after "means," and inserting "any exercise of religion, whether or not compelled by, or central to, a system of religious belief, and includes (A) the use, building, or conversion of real property by a person or entity intending that property for religious exercise; and (B) any conduct protected as exercise of religion under the first amendment to the Constitution.".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 6(a) of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 2000bb-3(a)) is amended by striking "and State".

SEC. 8. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—

(1) the term "religious exercise" means any exercise of religion, whether or not compelled by, or central to, a system of religious belief, and includes (A) the use, building, or conversion of real property by a person or entity intending that property for religious exercise; and (B) any conduct protected as exercise of religion under the first amendment to the Constitution;

(2) the term "Free Exercise Clause" means that portion of the first amendment to the Constitution that proscribes laws prohibiting the free exercise of religion and includes the application of that proscription under the 14th amendment to the Constitution;

(3) the term "land use regulation" means a law or decision by a government that limits or restricts a private person's uses or development of land, or of structures affixed to land, where the law or decision applies to one or more particular parcels of land or to land within one or more designated geographical zones, and where the private person has an ownership, leasehold, easement, servitude, or other property interest in the regulated land, or a contract or option to acquire such an interest;

(4) the term "program or activity" means a program or activity as defined in paragraph (1) or (2) of section 606 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d-4a);

(5) the term "demonstrates" means meets the burdens of going forward with the evidence and of persuasion; and

(6) the term "government"—

(A) means—

(i) a State, county, municipality, or other governmental entity created under the authority of a State;

(ii) any branch, department, agency, instrumentality, subdivision, or official of an entity listed in clause (i); and

(iii) any other person acting under color of State law; and

(B) for the purposes of sections 3(a) and 5, includes the United States, a branch, department, agency, instrumentality or official of the United States, and any person acting under color of Federal law.

H.R. 1691

OFFERED BY: MR. NADLER

(Amendment in the Nature of a Substitute)

AMENDMENT No. 2: Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Religious Liberty Protection Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. PROTECTION OF RELIGIOUS EXERCISE.

(a) GENERAL RULE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), a government shall not substantially burden a person's religious exercise—

(1) in a program or activity, operated by a government, that receives Federal financial assistance; or

(2) in any case in which the substantial burden on the person's religious exercise affects, or in which a removal of that substantial burden would affect, commerce with foreign nations, among the several States, or with Indian tribes;

even if the burden results from a rule of general applicability.

(b) EXCEPTION.—A government may substantially burden a person's religious exercise if the government demonstrates that application of the burden to the person—

(1) is in furtherance of a compelling governmental interest; and

(2) is the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest.

(c) REMEDIES OF THE UNITED STATES.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to authorize the United States to deny or withhold Federal financial assistance as a remedy for a violation of this Act. However, nothing in this subsection shall be construed to deny, impair, or otherwise affect any right or authority of the Attorney General or the United States or any agency, officer, or employee thereof under other law, including section 4(d) of this Act, to institute or intervene in any action or proceeding.

SEC. 3. ENFORCEMENT OF CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS.

(a) PROCEDURE.—If a claimant produces prima facie evidence to support a claim alleging a violation of the Free Exercise Clause or a violation of a provision of this Act enforcing that clause, the government shall bear the burden of persuasion on any element of the claim; however, the claimant shall bear the burden of persuasion on whether the challenged government practice, law, or regulation burdens or substantially burdens the claimant's exercise of religion.

(b) LAND USE REGULATION.—

(1) LIMITATION ON LAND USE REGULATION.—(A) Where, in applying or implementing any land use regulation or exemption, or system of land use regulations or exemptions, a government has the authority to make individualized assessments of the proposed uses to which real property would be put, the government may not impose a substantial burden on a person's religious exercise, unless the government demonstrates that application of the burden to the person is in furtherance of a compelling governmental interest and is the least restrictive means of furthering that compelling governmental interest.

(B) No government shall impose or implement a land use regulation in a manner that does not treat religious assemblies or institutions on equal terms with nonreligious assemblies or institutions.

(C) No government shall impose or implement a land use regulation that discriminates against any assembly or institution on the basis of religion or religious denomination.

(D) No government with zoning authority shall unreasonably exclude from the jurisdiction over which it has authority, or unreasonably limit within that jurisdiction, assemblies or institutions principally devoted to religious exercise.

(2) FULL FAITH AND CREDIT.—Adjudication of a claim of a violation of the Free Exercise Clause or this subsection in a non-Federal forum shall be entitled to full faith and credit in a Federal court only if the claimant had a full and fair adjudication of that claim in the non-Federal forum.

(3) NONPREEMPTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall preempt State law that is equally or more protective of religious exercise.

SEC. 4. JUDICIAL RELIEF.

(a) CAUSE OF ACTION.—A person may assert a violation of this Act as a claim or defense in a judicial proceeding and obtain appropriate relief against a government. Standing to assert a claim or defense under this section shall be governed by the general rules of standing under article III of the Constitution.

(b) ATTORNEYS' FEES.—Section 722(b) of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C. 1988(b)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "the Religious Liberty Protection Act of 1998," after "Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993,"; and

(2) by striking the comma that follows a comma.

(c) PRISONERS.—Any litigation under this Act in which the claimant is a prisoner shall be subject to the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995 (including provisions of law amended by that Act).

(d) AUTHORITY OF UNITED STATES TO ENFORCE THIS ACT.—The United States may sue for injunctive or declaratory relief to enforce compliance with this Act.

(e) PERSONS WHO MAY RAISE A CLAIM OR DEFENSE.—A person who may raise a claim or defense under subsection (a) is—

(1) an owner of a dwelling described in section 803(b) of the Fair Housing Act (42 U.S.C. 3603(b)), with respect to a prohibition relating to discrimination in housing;

(2) with respect to a prohibition against discrimination in employment—

(A) a religious corporation, association, educational institution (as described in 42 U.S.C. 2000e-2(e)), or society, with respect to the employment of individuals who perform duties such as spreading or teaching faith, other instructional functions, performing or assisting in devotional services, or activities relating to the internal governance of such corporation, association, educational institution, or society in the carrying on of its activities; or

(B) an entity employing 5 or fewer individuals; or

(3) any other person, with respect to an assertion of any other claim or defense relating to a law other than a law—

(A) prohibiting discrimination in housing and employment, except as described in paragraphs (1) and (2); or

(B) prohibiting discrimination in a public accommodation.

SEC. 5. RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.

(a) RELIGIOUS BELIEF UNAFFECTED.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize any government to burden any religious belief.

(b) RELIGIOUS EXERCISE NOT REGULATED.—Nothing in this Act shall create any basis for restricting or burdening religious exercise or for claims against a religious organization, including any religiously affiliated school or university, not acting under color of law.

(c) CLAIMS TO FUNDING UNAFFECTED.—Nothing in this Act shall create or preclude a right of any religious organization to receive funding or other assistance from a government, or of any person to receive government funding for a religious activity, but this Act may require government to incur expenses in its own operations to avoid imposing a burden or a substantial burden on religious exercise.

(d) OTHER AUTHORITY TO IMPOSE CONDITIONS ON FUNDING UNAFFECTED.—Nothing in this Act shall—

(1) authorize a government to regulate or affect, directly or indirectly, the activities or policies of a person other than a government as a condition of receiving funding or other assistance; or

(2) restrict any authority that may exist under other law to so regulate or affect, except as provided in this Act.

(e) GOVERNMENTAL DISCRETION IN ALLEVIATING BURDENS ON RELIGIOUS EXERCISE.—A government may avoid the preemptive force of any provision of this Act by changing the policy that results in the substantial burden on religious exercise, by retaining the policy and exempting the burdened religious exercise, by providing exemptions from the policy for applications that substantially burden religious exercise, or by any other means that eliminates the substantial burden.

(f) EFFECT ON OTHER LAW.—In a claim under section 2(a)(2) of this Act, proof that a substantial burden on a person's religious exercise, or removal of that burden, affects or would affect commerce, shall not establish any inference or presumption that Congress intends that any religious exercise is, or is not, subject to any other law.

(g) BROAD CONSTRUCTION.—This Act should be construed in favor of a broad protection of religious exercise, to the maximum extent permitted by its terms and the Constitution.

(h) SEVERABILITY.—If any provision of this Act or of an amendment made by this Act, or any application of such provision to any person or circumstance, is held to be unconstitutional, the remainder of this Act, the amendments made by this Act, and the application of the provision to any other person or circumstance shall not be affected.

SEC. 6. ESTABLISHMENT CLAUSE UNAFFECTED.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to affect, interpret, or in any way address that portion of the first amendment to the Constitution prohibiting laws respecting an establishment of religion (referred to in this section as the "Establishment Clause"). Granting government funding, benefits, or exemptions, to the extent permissible under the Establishment Clause, shall not constitute a violation of this Act. As used in this section, the term "granting", used with respect to government funding, benefits, or exemptions, does not include the denial of government funding, benefits, or exemptions.

SEC. 7. AMENDMENTS TO RELIGIOUS FREEDOM RESTORATION ACT.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—Section 5 of the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 (42 U.S.C. 2000bb-2) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking "a State, or subdivision of a State" and inserting "a covered entity or a subdivision of such an entity";

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking "term" and all that follows through "includes" and inserting "term 'covered entity' means"; and

(3) in paragraph (4), by striking all after "means," and inserting "any exercise of religion, whether or not compelled by, or central to, a system of religious belief, and includes (A) the use, building, or conversion of real property by a person or entity intending that property for religious exercise; and (B) any conduct protected as exercise of religion under the first amendment to the Constitution."

SEC. 8. DEFINITIONS.

As used in this Act—

(1) the term “religious exercise” means any exercise of religion, whether or not compelled by, or central to, a system of religious belief, and includes (A) the use, building, or conversion of real property by a person or entity intending that property for religious exercise; and (B) any conduct protected as exercise of religion under the first amendment to the Constitution;

(2) the term “Free Exercise Clause” means that portion of the first amendment to the Constitution that proscribes laws prohibiting the free exercise of religion and includes the application of that proscription under the 14th amendment to the Constitution;

(3) the term “land use regulation” means a law or decision by a government that limits or restricts a private person’s uses or development of land, or of structures affixed to land, where the law or decision applies to one or more particular parcels of land or to land within one or more designated geographical zones, and where the private person has an ownership, leasehold, easement, servitude, or other property interest in the regulated land, or a contract or option to acquire such an interest;

(4) the term “program or activity” means a program or activity as defined in paragraph (1) or (2) of section 606 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (42 U.S.C. 2000d-4a);

(5) the term “demonstrates” means meets the burdens of going forward with the evidence and of persuasion; and

(6) the term “government”—

(A) means—

(i) a State, county, municipality, or other governmental entity created under the authority of a State;

(ii) any branch, department, agency, instrumentality, subdivision, or official of an entity listed in clause (i); and

(iii) any other person acting under color of State law; and

(B) for the purposes of sections 3(a) and 5, includes the United States, a branch, department, agency, instrumentality or official of the United States, and any person acting under color of Federal law.

AMENDMENT NO. 19: At the end of the bill add the following:

TITLE —STUDY OF FORT KING, FLORIDA

SEC. ___01. CONGRESSIONAL FINDINGS.

The Congress finds that—

(1) the Second Seminole War, 1835–1842, is an important period of conflict in the history of the Nation and lasted longer than any other armed conflict in which the Nation participated, except the Vietnam War;

(2) Fort King, in central Florida, played an important historic role in the Second Seminole War as the site of the outbreak of hostilities between the United States Government and the Seminole Indians of Florida, who were led by Seminole Indian Chief Osceola;

(3) Fort King represents a unique site for exploration and interpretation of the attack that ignited the Second Seminole War on December 28, 1835; and

(4) Fort King and the surrounding area contain materials and artifacts used in the attack and in the life of the Seminole Indians.

SEC. ___02. REQUIREMENT OF STUDY.

The Secretary of the Interior (hereinafter in this title referred to as the “Secretary”) shall conduct a study to identify potential means to preserve, develop, and interpret Fort King, in central Florida, and the surrounding area. As part of the study, the Secretary shall propose alternatives for cooperation in the preservation and interpretation of Fort King and shall provide recommendations with respect to the suitability and feasibility of establishing Fort King as a unit of the National Park System.

SEC. ___03. FINDINGS INCLUDED IN STUDY.

The study required by section ___02 shall contain, but need not be limited to, findings with respect to—

(1) the role played by Fort King in the Second Seminole War;

(2) identification of the historical, cultural, and archaeological material found in Fort King and the surrounding area relating to life at the time of and preceding the Second Seminole War;

(3) the types of Federal, State, and local programs that are available to preserve and develop Fort King and the surrounding area and to make the fort and the surrounding area accessible for public use and enjoyment; and

(4) the potential use of, and coordination with, Federal, State, and local programs to manage, in the public interest, the historical and cultural resources found at and around Fort King.

SEC. ___04. CONGRESSIONAL REVIEW.

The Secretary shall submit a report detailing the results of the study required by section ___02 to the committees of jurisdiction of the House of Representatives and the Senate not later than 12 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

AMENDMENT NO. 1: Page 97, after line 13, insert the following:

STUDY ON USE OF ANTIQUES FIREARMS IN CRIME; REPORT TO THE CONGRESS

SEC. ____. (a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds that—

(1) recent events in Norristown, Pennsylvania have focused the region’s attention on the issue of antique firearms and their use in violent crimes;

(2) antique firearms are not subject to the same laws that regulate conventional firearms; and

(3) statistics on the use of antique firearms in crime are not consistently gathered, and crime perpetrated with antique firearms is not tracked.

(b) STUDY.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall collect statistics on the use of antique firearms in crime, and shall conduct a study on the use of antique firearms in crime. For purposes of this section, the term “antique firearms” has the meaning given the term in section 921(a)(16) of title 18, United States Code.

(c) REPORT.—Within 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall submit to the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate a written report on the statistics collected and the results of the study conducted under subsection (b).

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 145

WASHINGTON, TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1999

No. 98

Senate

(Legislative day of Monday, July 12, 1999)

The Senate met at 9:31 a.m., on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Gracious God, You have shown us that there is no limit to the strength You give when we unite in the cause that You have guided. There is a wonderful sense of oneness when we call on Your help together. You are delighted when Your people work together in harmony to confront problems and discover Your solutions. Help us see that our task is not to defeat each other or simply to defend our points of view, but to discuss issues in a way that all aspects of truth are revealed and the best plan for America is agreed upon. So, together, Democrats and Republicans, we ask You to bless the debate on health care this week. Keep all the Senators united in the common goal of working through the issues until they can agree on what is best for all Americans. Keep them and all who work with them focused on positive solutions. Dear God, give us a win-win week for the good of America and for Your glory. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senator BROWNBACK is designated to lead the Senate in the Pledge of Allegiance.

The Honorable SAM BROWNBACK, a Senator from the State of Kansas, led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one Nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). The acting majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, today the Senate will immediately proceed to a period of morning business until 10 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the Patients' Bill of Rights. Debate will resume on the pending second-degree amendment regarding emergency medical care coverage. Further amendments are expected to be offered and debated during today's session, with votes to be scheduled for this afternoon. For the information of all Senators, the Senate will recess from 12:30 to 2:15 p.m. for the weekly party conference meetings. When the Senate reconvenes at 2:15 p.m., Senator SMITH of New Hampshire will be recognized for up to 45 minutes. I thank my colleagues for their attention.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, if I could go ahead and proceed this morning, Senator JOHN ASHCROFT, Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON, and myself have reserved 20 minutes to discuss Chairman ROTH's tax package and the marriage penalty in particular. So I will begin that initial discussion in morning business.

TAX CUTS

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, the chairman of the Finance Committee will be coming out with his mark on tax cuts, and this is a critically important issue. It is an important one for the country. It is important, now that we are looking forward to having some surplus, that we say to the American people: You have been overpaying your taxes, and we want to give some of that back to you. This is over and above Social Security, the amount of the payroll tax that is going to Social Security. So we are setting aside the Social Security trust funds—a lockbox is what we call it, a lockbox for the Social Security surplus—and with the remainder talking about tax cuts, serious tax cuts.

One issue we want to discuss this morning is doing away with the marriage penalty. It seems extraordinary to me that we would have a tax policy in this country that actually penalizes people for getting married. With all the problems we have with families in our society, it seems, if anything, we would want to do just the opposite—we would want to give people a benefit for being married rather than taxing them for being married. And yet the way the code has evolved, today 21 million American married couples pay an average of $1,400 more in taxes just for the privilege of being married.

I think that is wrong. The Government should not use the coercive power of the Tax Code to erode one of the foundational units of our society, that of marriage. We should stop the taxation. We should put a stop to the marriage penalty tax. This year we can change that.

I am encouraged that the chairman of the Finance Committee, Senator ROTH, and his committee have put forward efforts to alleviate the marriage penalty. We have a unique opportunity to put that issue behind us.

I want to draw Senators' attention to another issue under the marriage penalty area which has not been talked about that much. That is the earned-income tax credit bias against married couples. A significant share of the marriage penalty occurs to low-income couples. It is caused by the loss of the earned-income tax credit when individuals' incomes are combined.

What happens is, you have two-wage-earner families that, if they were not married, if they were single and filing separately, would qualify for the earned-income tax credit. But if they get married and they earn over this mark, they get penalized again for being married.

Estimates by the CBO indicate that what we can do is double, for two-wage-earner families, the amount of income that can be received and still qualify for the earned-income tax credit. Virtually all the benefits of this adjustment in the earned-income tax credit would go to couples with incomes below $50,000. There are nearly 3.7 million couples in America today that do not receive the earned-income tax credit that would, if we double the amount that they can make, still qualify for the earned-income tax credit.

I point this out because people struggle mightily to raise families, and the notion that we would tax and then tax again low-income families, keeping them from receiving a benefit because they are married, makes absolutely no policy sense at all.

I don't see how on Earth anybody can argue this is a good idea or this is the right thing to do. I am hopeful the chairman of the Finance Committee has focused on this. We can do this. I hope the President will be willing to work with Members of Congress in both the House and the Senate in crafting a tax package we can all agree with, so the American people can stop overpaying their taxes—which they are currently doing.

The CBO is now projecting an onbudget surplus of $14 billion in fiscal year 2000, with the surplus growing to $996 billion over the 10-year period beginning in fiscal year 2000. We have this opportunity to eliminate the marriage penalty tax and to do away with paying the marriage penalty tax on upper-income levels and for those not being given the earned-income tax credit on the lower-income level.

Of course, the surging surplus I was discussing is as a result of payroll tax receipts. I continue to emphasize that.

The majority side wants to put a lockbox around any Social Security surplus and have that maintained only for Social Security. We can do these things. We need to work across the aisle. We need to work with the President. I hope he will be willing to work with Members as we move forward in dealing with the marriage penalty tax, which is a terrible signal to send across society, to send to people across America. We will be working with the chairman of the Finance Committee. I hope this is one tax that can find its death in this round of tax cuts. We will hopefully be going to reconciliation and discussing tax cuts this month. It is a very important topic we will discuss.

I encourage people paying a marriage penalty tax to contact Members regarding how the marriage penalty tax has directly impacted your lives. I have had any number of couples write saying: We wanted to get married but we found out we were going to pay this huge tax for getting married and we could not afford to do that; this is money we wanted to use for a downpayment of a house or to get a car that would work.

They were not able to do it because of the pernicious fiscal effect of the marriage penalty tax. It is a terrible signal we are sending across our society.

Senator HUTCHISON from Texas has been a leader on this issue of dealing with the marriage penalty tax. She has come to the floor, as well, to discuss what we can do. Now is the time to eliminate this marriage penalty tax.

I yield the floor.

VISIT TO THE SENATE BY THE HONORABLE JOHN HOWARD, PRIME MINISTER OF AUSTRALIA

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Members of the Senate greet the Honorable John Howard, Prime Minister of Australia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now stand in recess for 5 minutes to greet the Honorable John Howard, Prime Minister of Australia.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 9:45 a.m., recessed until 9:52 a.m.; whereupon, the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. VOINOVICH).

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I wonder how much time do we have remaining, with the added time based upon the Prime Minister's appearance?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, then I ask you to notify me at 3½ minutes. I intend to give the other 3½ minutes to Senator ASHCROFT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I was very pleased to meet the Prime Minister from Australia. He asked me where I was from, what State I represented. I said, "I represent the State that everyone says is just like Australia." He said, "Texas?" And I said, "Absolutely." I had a wonderful visit with him. He has a wonderful personality. We are pleased to welcome him to the Senate.

TAX CUTS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I thank Senator BROWNBAC.

Senator ASHCROFT from Missouri, Senator BROWNBAC, I, and many others have been talking about the marriage penalty tax for two sessions, and even a session before that.

We were stunned when we discovered 44 percent of married couples in the middle-income brackets—in the $40,000 to $60,000 range—were paying a penalty just for the privilege of being married.

We have introduced legislation to cut the marriage tax penalty. In fact, both the House and Senate have tax cut plans that we will be discussing over the next few months to try to determine what we can give back to the hard-working Americans who have been sending their money to Washington to fund our Government.

When we start talking about how we are going to give people their money back, I think we have to step back and talk about the basic argument, which is: What do we do with the surplus? And are tax cuts the right way to spend the surplus?

I will quote from a Ft. Worth Star-Telegram opinion piece by one of the editorial writers on that newspaper, Bill Thompson, from June 30, 1999.

He says there is only one question to ask about the budget surplus, and that is:

How should we go about giving the money back to its rightful owners?

And the rightful owners, surely even the biggest nitwit in Washington can understand, are the taxpayers of the United States of America.

The federal government is not a private business that can do whatever it wants to with unexpected profits.

Because, in fact, we are more of a cop. We are not a business that is trying to make a profit and then decide what to do with the profits.

. . . [T]here should be no discussion about the fate of the money. . . .

If there is money left over, we give it back to the people who own that money. We in Washington, DC, do not own that money. The people who earned it own it. It is time we start giving them back the money they have earned.

We are doing what we should be doing. We are cutting back Government spending, so people can keep more of the money they earn. If we do not give it back to them, we will be abusing the power we have to tax the people. We are talking about giving the money back to the people who earn it, and the first place we ought to look is to people who are married who pay more taxes just because they are married. If they were each single they would be paying lower taxes, but because they got married the average is $1,400 in the marriage penalty tax. That is unconscionable.

Since 1969, we have seen the marriage tax penalty get worse and worse and worse. It was not meant to be that way. Congress did not intend to tax married people more. But because more women have gone into the workforce to make ends meet and to do better for their families, the Tax Code has gotten skewed and the deductions have become unfair. So today we are saying the first priority should be to eliminate the tax that is more on married people than it would be if they were single.

I yield the remainder of my time to Senator ASHCROFT, who is working with me on this very important issue. We will give the taxes that people are paying to the Government back to them because it does not belong to us. It belongs to the people who earn it.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the article by Bill Thompson be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE BUDGET SURPLUS: THERE'S ONLY ONE TOPIC THAT NEEDS DISCUSSING

(By Bill Thompson)

Nothing will get the politicians' juices flowing like an avalanche of money. Put large piles of cash in front of a herd of politicians, and the ensuing stampede will crush everything in its path.

Nowhere is this truer than in Washington, D.C., where the latest predictions of burgeoning federal budget surpluses have the president, Congress and everyone in between all but trampling one another in their fervor to dive into those irresistible mountains of money.

Not surprisingly, all the official and semi-official public pronouncements, all the expert analyses and all the wide-eyed speculation about the fate of the extra money seem to arrive at the same conclusion: The politicians will spend it.

In fact, the only question that anyone who's anyone seems to be asking about this "windfall" revenue is: How should we spend it?

Well, call me naive or simple-minded or just plain dumb—many readers do so on a regular basis, after all—but in my humble opinion the deep-thinkers are asking the wrong question. The only legitimate question that anybody should be asking about the federal budget surplus is: How should we go about giving the money back to its rightful owners?

And the rightful owners, surely even the biggest nitwit in Washington can understand, are the taxpayers of the United States of America.

The federal government is not a private business that can do whatever it wants to with unexpected profits. It's not even one of those publicly traded corporations that can choose among options such as reinvesting in the company sharing the profits with employees or distributing the money to stockholders by means of increased dividends.

Government collects money from citizens in the form of taxes and fees for the purpose of providing designated services to those very same citizens. If for some reason the government should happen to collect more money than it needs to provide the designated services, there should be no discussion about the fate of the money: It goes back to the taxpayers who worked it over in the first place.

For politicians and bureaucrats to suggest that they are so much as considering any other use of a budget surplus should be looked upon as the worst sort of fiscal malfeasance.

True enough, the idea of using some of the budget surplus to bail out fiscally endangered programs such as Social Security and Medicare sounds tempting. But there's a problem—two problems, actually.

Problem No. 1 is that these breathtaking estimates of budget surpluses totaling trillions of dollars over the next 15 years are just that—estimates. An unexpected downturn in the nation's economy could blow the projections sky high and leave the taxpayers with mind-boggling financial commitments to those programs—and no money to meet them.

Problem No. 2: The commitment of future budget surpluses to these expensive entitlements is a phony solution that distracts attention from the desperate need for fundamental reforms to programs whose escalating costs simply must be brought under control sooner or later.

President Clinton's proposal to dedicate a portion of any budget surplus to pay down the national debt seems reasonable enough at first glance. But consider this: How can Clinton brag about cutting up Washington's credit card when his plan to pay off the card's outstanding balance hinges on projected income?

We should be paying off the debt with actual revenue that would be available for debt reduction if the government would cut expenses instead of constantly seeking new ways to spend the taxpayers' money.

No, this raging debate about how to spend the surplus is the wrong debate. The only question that politicians need to debate is whether to give the money back to the taxpayers in the form of a reduction in income tax rates, or through some sort of tax credit that enables taxpayers to deduct their share of the surplus from their tax bills.

The money belongs to the people. It should be returned to the people.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Texas for her kind remarks and for allowing me to speak on this important issue.

Americans are now paying taxes at a higher rate than ever before. The burden and cost of the government are more, and the Federal Government is responsible for the overwhelming lion's share. As a matter of fact, we are not just responsible for the Federal taxes, because we have mandated so many programs on State and local governments we are responsible for a lot of what they are taxing people. So we are being taxed at the highest rates in history—at the highest rates in history.

Now we announced, in spite of that, we are paying more in those taxes than it costs to run Government. We are paying more in than it costs to fund the programs we are getting. If you go to a grocery store and you are buying $8 worth of groceries and you give them a $10 bill, you are paying more than it costs for the service and they give you a couple of dollars in change.

There is a stunning debate in Washington. We are debating over whether or not to give people the change back. They are paying more than is required for the programs they have requested, and we are debating whether or not we are going to give them the change back. We ought to give the money back. They own it. They have overpaid.

No. 1, we are paying the highest taxes in history. No. 2, those taxes pay for more than what our programs cost; therefore, we are overpaying. No. 3, we ought to refund that overpayment to the American people.

I submit among those who ought to be the first in line to get money back are those who have been particularly abused, those who have been the subject of discrimination, those who have been the subject of wrongful taking of the money by Government. That is where you come to this class of people who are not normally thought of as being a special class. They are married people. Forty-two percent of all the married people in the United States end up penalized for being married. That is 21 million families. Mr. President, 21 million families pay an average of over $100 a month—that is $1,400 a year—because we have what is called the marriage penalty tax.

Before we decide on tax relief for the population generally, let's take some of these gross inequities out of the system, especially inequities that target one of the most important, if not the most important, components of the community we call America—our families. Our families are the most important department of social services, the most important department of education. The most important fundamental component of the culture is the family. It is where we will either succeed or fail in the next century. Our Tax Code has been focusing on those families and has been saying we are going to take from you more than we would take from anybody else.

This idea of penalizing people for being married is a bankrupt idea, and it is time to take the marriage penalty part of this law and administer the death penalty to the marriage tax.

I say it is time for us to end the marriage penalty. This will mean a substantial improvement in income for people who have been suffering discrimination because they are married. It is time for us to end the marriage penalty in the tax law.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Chair.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island is recognized.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes of the allotted 10 minutes, and I yield the remaining 5 minutes to the Senator from Maryland, Ms. MIKULSKI.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 5 minutes.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH CARE

Mr. REED. Mr. President, we are engaged in a historic debate about the future of health care in the United States. I have tried very diligently to ensure that children are a large part of this debate.

In conjunction with those activities, yesterday I had the opportunity to visit with pediatricians and pediatric specialists in my State of Rhode Island at Hasbro Children's Hospital, an extraordinary hospital in Rhode Island. I am very proud of it. While listening to those professionals, I got a sense of the real needs we have to address in this debate on the Patients' Bill of Rights.

First of all, there is tremendous frustration by these physicians and medical professionals about their ability to care for children, their ability to effectively provide the kind of care which parents assume they paid for when they enrolled in the HMO. They are frustrated by the mindless rules. For example, one physician related to me there is the standard practice of giving a child a complete examination at the age of 1. He had a situation where a child came in at 11 months 28 days. They performed the examination, and the insurance company refused to pay because, obviously, the child was not yet 1 year old. That is the type of incredible, mindless bureaucracy these physicians are facing every day.

I had another physician tell me—and this was startling to me—she was treating a child for botulism. She was told the company was refusing to pay after the second day. She called—again, here is a physician who is spending valuable time calling to find out why there is no reimbursement—and she was told simply by the reviewer—not a physician, the reviewer—that according to the guidelines of that HMO, no one can survive 2 days with a case of botulism; therefore, they were not paying for more than 2 days. Mercifully, the child survived, and eventually I hope they were paid for their efforts.

These are the kinds of frustrations they experience. This is throughout the entire system of health care. There are some very specific issues when it comes to children. One is the issue of developmental progress. An adult is generally fully developed in cognition, in mobility, in all the things that children are still evolving. Yet managed care plans seldom take into consideration the developmental consequences of a decision when it comes to children. Unless we require them to do that, they will continue to avoid that particular aspect. So a child can be denied services.

For example, special formulas for infants can be denied because the HMO will say: Well, it is not life-threatening; there is no serious, immediate health consequence. But the problem, of course, is, unless the child gets this special nutrient, that child is not going to develop in a healthy fashion. Five, six, seven, eight years from now, that child is going to have serious problems, but, in the view of an HMO, a dollar saved today is a dollar saved today. Oh, and by the way, that child probably will not even be in their health care system 5 years from now, the way parents and employers change coverage.

We have to focus on developmental issues. We also have to ensure children have access to pediatric specialists. There is the presumption that a rose is a rose is a rose, a cardiologist is a cardiologist, when, in fact, a pediatric cardiologist is a very specific discipline requiring different insights and different skills.

We also have to recognize that many very talented pediatricians find themselves overwhelmed today with the young children they are seeing. I had one physician tell me he sees children who have problems with deficit disorders, problems with attention issues, and they have prescribed some very sophisticated pharmaceutical pills and prescriptions that he, frankly, has trouble managing because he is not a child psychiatrist. Yet they have difficulty getting access from the general practitioner to the specialist, the child psychologist to the child psychiatrist.

The other thing is, the system has been built upon adult standards. One of the great examples given to me is that there are new standards now to reimburse physicians when they are doing a physical, but they are based upon adult standards. The important things a physician has to do to evaluate a child are not even compensated because they are immaterial to an adult. Why would the company spend money paying a doctor to do that? This whole bias towards adults distorts the care for children in the United States.

The Democratic alternative which is being presented today recognizes these issues in a very pronounced and emphatic way. We do explicitly provide for access to pediatric specialists; we do specifically require, in making judgments about health care, the development of a child must be considered as part of the medical necessity test; and we also talk about developing standards, measurements, and evaluations of health care plans that are based on children and not just adults.

I urge all of my colleagues to endorse this concept. The best reason to pass this Democratic alternative is to help the children of America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. REED. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Chair.

ACCESS TO EMERGENCY CARE

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to continue the discussion of the Patients' Bill of Rights and lend my voice to the Graham amendment for access to emergency care without penalty by an HMO when any prudent person presents their symptoms.

Before I do that, I congratulate the Senator from Rhode Island for his most eloquent and insightful remarks. For my colleagues, the Senator from Rhode Island has devoted his life to protecting the lives of Americans. As a West Point graduate serving in the U.S. military, he did that abroad, and now he does it in the Senate Chamber standing up for America's children. I thank him for his devotion and his gallantry. I am happy to be an able member of the Reed platoon.

I am pleased today to join with Senator BOB GRAHAM and other colleagues in speaking out about the people who go to an emergency room and want to be treated for their symptoms without fear of not having their visit covered by their HMO. When it comes to emergency care, people are afraid of both the symptoms they face as well as being denied coverage by their insurance company.

"ER" is not just a TV show; it is a real-life situation which thousands of Americans face every day. Yet I hear countless stories from friends and neighbors and constituents, as well as from talking to ER docs in my own State, who tell me they are afraid to see their doctor or take their child or parent to the emergency room because they will not be reimbursed and will be saddled with debt.

Patients must be covered for emergency visits that any prudent person would make. That means if they have symptoms that any prudent person says could constitute a threat to their life and safety, they should be reimbursed. The prudent layperson standard is at the heart of this amendment. It is supported by the American College of Emergency Physicians which has stated that the way the Republican bill is written, it "must be interpreted as constraints on a patient's use of the 'prudent layperson' standard."

The Republican bill only goes part way. We need to restore common sense to our health care system.

Let me give an example, the case of Jackie, a resident of Bethesda, MD. She went hiking in the Shenandoah mountains. She lost her footing and fell off a 40-foot cliff. She had to be airlifted to a hospital. Thanks to our American medical system, she survived. After she regained consciousness and was being treated at the hospital for these severe injuries, Jackie learned that her HMO refused to pay her hospital bill because she did not get prior authorization. This is outrageous. Imagine falling off of a 40-foot cliff, waking up in a hospital and being told that your HMO will not cover your bills because you did not call while you were unconscious.

In America, we think if you need emergency care, you should be able to call 911, not your HMO's 800 number.

Incredibly, some of my colleagues in the Senate say that all these stories are anecdotes and they are horror stories. These are not anecdotes. We are talking about people's lives.

If you would come with me to the emergency rooms at Johns Hopkins Hospital, the University of Maryland, Salisbury General on a major highway on the Eastern Shore, all over the State, you would learn that many people come to the ER because of not only accidents but they are experiencing symptoms where they wonder if their life could be threatened or the life of their child. The child is having acute breathing, and you do not know if that child is having an undetected asthma attack; or a man sitting at Oriole Park suddenly has shortness of breath, pains in his left side and leaves to go to the ER at the University of Maryland next to Camden Yards. Should they call 911 or should they call 800 HMO? I think they should call 911, and they should worry about themselves and their family and not about reimbursement.

So when we come to a vote, I really hope that we will pass the Graham amendment. The Republicans say they have an alternative. But it does not guarantee that a patient can go to the closest emergency room without financial penalty. Do not forget, it covers only 48 million Americans; it leaves out 113 million other Americans.

Let's do the right thing. Let's make sure that patients with insurance cannot be saddled with huge bills after emergency treatment.

I thank the Senate and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

PATIENTS' BILL OF RIGHTS ACT OF 1999

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now resume consideration of S. 1344, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1344) to amend the Public Health Service Act, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to protect consumers in managed care plans and other health coverage.

Pending:

Daschle amendment No. 1232, in the nature of a substitute.

Daschle (for Kennedy) amendment No. 1233 (to Amendment No. 1232), to ensure that the protections provided for in the Patients' Bill of Rights apply to all patients with private health insurance.

Nickles (for Santorum) amendment No. 1234 (to Amendment No. 1233), to do no harm to Americans' health care coverage, and expand health care coverage in America.

Graham amendment No. 1235 (to amendment No. 1233), to provide for coverage of emergency medical care.

Mr. FRIST addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

AMENDMENT NO. 1235

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I understand we are currently on the Graham amendment. Could you tell us how much time remains on either side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 33 minutes 8 seconds for the majority; and 7 minutes 59 seconds for the minority.

Mr. FRIST. Thank you.

Mr. President, today we will be talking about a number of issues that have to do with the Patients' Bill of Rights. Yesterday, the discussions began on what I regard as a very significant, important piece of legislation that is called the Patients' Bill of Rights. The debates that we will be having on the floor address really two underlying bills that were introduced formally yesterday: One is the Kennedy bill from the Democratic side, and the other is the Republican leadership bill. Both bills set out to accomplish what I think we all absolutely must keep in mind as we go through this process, and that is to make sure that we are focusing on the patients in improving the quality and the access of care for those patients and at the same time help this pendulum swing back to where patients and doctors are empowered once again; not to have this be so much in favor of managed care that, when it comes down to an individual patient versus managed care on certain issues, managed care enters into this realm of practicing medicine.

Again, I think if we keep coming back to focusing on the individual patient, we are going to end up with a very good bill.

We left off last night with the discussion of the Graham amendment which focuses on emergency services. In the Republican bill, basically there are a list of patient protections which include a prohibition of gag clauses, access to medical specialists, access to an emergency room, which is the real thrust of the Graham amendment, continuity of care—a range of issues that we call patient protections.

A second very important part of our bill focuses on quality and how we can improve quality for all Americans. I am very excited about that aspect of the bill. We will be discussing that later this week. That is our responsibility as the Federal Government, to invest in figuring out what good quality of care actually is. It is similar to investing in the National Institutes of Health: The research behind determining where the quality is, and spreading that information around the country so that excellent quality can be practiced and people can have access to that.

A third component of the Republican bill which I think is, again, very important that we will keep coming back to, is the access issue, the problem of 43 million people in this country who are uninsured. Some people say: No, that is a separate issue; we can put it off for another day.

But when you look at patient protections, you look at quality and you look at access. It is almost like a triangle. If you push patient protections too far you end up hurting access. If you push issues beyond what is necessary, to get that balance between coordinated care and managed care and fee for service and individual physicians' and patients' rights, if you get too far out of kilter, all of a sudden premiums go sky-high.

When premiums go sky-high in the private sector, employers, small employers start dropping that insurance. It becomes too expensive for an individual to go out and purchase a policy, and therefore instead of having 43 million uninsured, you will have 44 million, 45 million, or 46 million, all of which is totally unacceptable. As trustees to the American people, we simply cannot let that happen. Therefore, you will hear this quality and access and patient protection discussion go on over the course of the week.

Last night and today over the next 45 minutes or so we will be focusing on this patient access to emergency medical care. Let me just say that I have had the opportunity to work in emergency rooms in Massachusetts for years, in California on and off for about a year and a half, in Tennessee for about 6 years, and almost a year in Southampton, England.

Whether it is a laceration, whether it is a sore throat, whether it is chest pain, whether it is cardiogenic shock from a heart attack, access to emergency room care is critically important to all Americans.

We have certain Federal legislation which guarantees that access, but it is clear there are certain barriers that are felt today by individuals that their managed care plan is not going to allow them to go to a certain emergency room or, once they go, those services are not covered. That is the gist of what we have in the Republican bill—a very strong provision for patient access to emergency medical care.

This Republican provision, as reported out of the Health, Education, Labor, and Pension Committee where this was debated several months ago, requires group health plans, covered by the scope of our bill, to pay, without any prior authorization, for an emergency medical screening exam and stabilization of whatever that problem is—whether it is cardiogenic shock, whether it is a laceration or a broken bone or falling down the steps or a broken hip—to pay for that screening and that stabilization process with no questions asked—no authorization, no preauthorization, whether you are in the network or outside of the network.

The prudent layperson standard is very important for people to understand. The prudent layperson standard is at the heart of the Republican bill. We use the words "prudent layperson." By prudent layperson, we define it as an individual who has an average knowledge of health and medicine. The example I have used before is, if you have a feeling in your chest, and you do not know if it is a heart attack or indigestion, and you go to the emergency room, a prudent layperson, an average person, would go to the emergency room in the event that that was a heart attack, and therefore is the standard that is at the heart of the Republican bill. Now, there are two issues that need to be addressed. We talked about them a little bit yesterday. One is what happens with the poststabilization period. You are at home. You have this feeling in your chest. You go to the emergency room. Under our bill, you are screened; you are examined. Initial treatment stabilization of that condition is given.

Then the question is, What happens with poststabilization? This is where I have great concern in terms of what my colleague from Florida has proposed and what is in the underlying Kennedy bill. That is, once you get in the door, you can't open that door so widely that any condition is taken care of out of network. Why? Because it blows open the whole idea of having coordinated care, having a more managed approach to the delivery of health care.

This is a huge door you could get into. Then, once you get into that hospital door, you might say: Well, I have a little ache over here. Can you examine that and put me through all the diagnostic tests, regardless of what my health plan says and what I have contracted with my health plan to do?

That is where the concern is. The issue of poststabilization needs to be addressed; we need to talk more about it. Over the course of last night and, actually, the last several weeks, we have worked very hard to look at that poststabilization period. In just a minute, I will turn the floor over to my colleague from Arkansas to talk more about that.

The other issue is on cost sharing. We need to make sure there is no barrier there that would prevent somebody going to the closest emergency room or the emergency room of choice. It is an issue, I believe, we, as a body, Democrat and Republican, are obligated to address, to make sure that barrier is not there—again, returning to the patient so if the patient has any question at all, they don't have to think about payment and barriers and will they turn me away or, once I get in the emergency room, will they refuse to treat, but basically can I get the necessary care.

That is what is in the Republican bill. I am very proud of that. Can it be improved? Let's discuss it and see if there is anything we can do to make it better.

That is where we were yesterday, and that is where we are this morning. We will have a number of amendments as we go forward. Right now we are on the Graham amendment on emergency services.

At this juncture, on the amendment, I yield the time necessary to the Senator from Arkansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I thank my colleague, the distinguished Senator from Tennessee. I express not only my appreciation but the appreciation of all Senators for the expertise that Senator FRIST brings to this important issue, as well as the care and compassion he has demonstrated throughout his career, even during his time in the Senate, in caring for other people in emergencies.

He certainly brings a great deal of personal experience and expertise to this issue.

I rise to speak on this issue of access to emergency services and to explain why I believe my colleagues should oppose the Graham amendment. The amendment tree to which the Graham amendment was filed is now full. I alert my colleagues to an amendment I will be offering further along in the debate—I have been assured of the opportunity to do that—which will address the concerns raised by Senator Graham but, I think, addresses them in a far more responsible way.

Mr. GRAMM. That is GRAHAM of Florida.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. The Senator from Texas asks for that clarification.

I ask my colleagues to oppose the amendment by Senator GRAHAM of Florida, knowing they will have an opportunity to vote for a clarification amendment dealing with emergency services later on.

My amendment will remove the ambiguity that I think is so evident in the Graham amendment which will create such problems. The Republican provision, as reported out of the HELP Committee, requires group health plans covered by the scope of our bill to pay, without prior authorization, for an emergency medical screening exam and any additional emergency care required to stabilize the emergency condition for an individual who has sought emergency medical services as a prudent layperson.

As I listened to the comments of the distinguished Senator from Maryland, it is clear that what the Republican bill does and what my amendment will do needs clarification for my colleagues, because Jackie, the example that was given, would be covered, very clearly. The prior authorization issue is clearly covered. The closest emergency room issue is covered. The prudent layperson definition is repeatedly used.

Prudent layperson is defined as an individual who possesses an average knowledge of health and medicine. The purpose of this provision is to ensure that a person who has a reason to believe they are experiencing an emergency, according to the prudent layperson standard, will not, cannot, be denied coverage. If they are diagnosed with heartburn instead of a heart attack, they are still going to be covered under the prudent layperson definition.

In addition, by eliminating the requirement for prior authorization, no prior authorization will be required. Jackie doesn't have to make a phone call while she is unconscious; no one has to make a phone call asking for prior authorization. We ensure that individuals can go to the nearest emergency facility.

On the issue of cost sharing, plans may impose cost sharing on emergency services, but the cost-sharing requirement cannot be greater for out-of-network emergency services than they require for in-network services.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I will be glad to yield when I conclude my comments. Let me go ahead because I think I may answer many of those questions as I go through.

An individual who has sought emergency services from a nonparticipating provider cannot be held liable for charges beyond what that individual would have paid for services from a participating provider.

Senator ENZI and I offered an amendment to this effect in the committee, and it was adopted by the committee. That amendment and the provision that is in the underlying Republican bill says that if a group health plan, other than a fully insured group health plan, provides any benefits with respect to emergency medical care as defined in subsection (c), the plan shall cover emergency medical care under the plan in a manner so that if such care is provided to a participant or beneficiary by a nonparticipating health care provider, the participant or beneficiary is not liable for amounts that exceed the amounts of liability that would be incurred if the services were provided by a participating provider. It is not going to cost the patient more if they go to a nonparticipating provider in that emergency room than they would if they went to one that was within their network.

As I think was pointed out by my colleague, Senator FRIST, and Senator GRAHAM of Florida last evening, the committee report language needs clarification on the committee's intention on cost sharing for in- and out-of-network emergency services. My amendment will certainly make that clarification.

My amendment will also improve the access to emergency services provision reported by the HELP Committee by requiring the plan to pay for necessary care provided in the emergency room to maintain medical stability following the stabilization of an emergency medical condition until the plan contacts the nonparticipating provider to arrange for transfer or discharge. If the plan fails to respond within a very narrow, specific time period, the plan is responsible for necessary stabilizing care in any setting, including in-patient admission.

We clearly state in the amendment which I will offer that these stabilizing services must be directly related to the emergency condition that has been stabilized. I think this was the point Senator FRIST made so very eloquently: If you do not make that connection, if you do not have the requirement that it has to be related to the emergency condition that has been stabilized, then you truly have a loophole. You open the door that totally undermines the concept of coordinated care.

To understand the true impact of the Republican access to emergency services provision as clarified and improved by my amendment, let me offer the following scenarios and show how they are addressed by our provision in the bill.

Several examples have been repeated a number of times by my colleagues across the aisle. Let me use their examples. They specifically mentioned the case of a mother with a febrile child who called her health plan before going to the emergency room and was required to go to an in-network emergency facility, passing several nearby facilities on the way. Her child, tragically, had a serious infection which, due to the delay in care, resulted in amputation. There were very moving pictures of this particular child. Under our bill, a mother with a sick child will be able to access the closest emergency room, and she won't get stuck with the bill because she did not get prior authorization.

In a case referred to by my colleague from North Dakota, Senator DORGAN, if someone has taken a 40-foot fall and has been helicoptered to a hospital and delivered to an emergency room in a state of unconsciousness with fractured bones in three parts of her body, does that person have a right to emergency care under the Republican bill? The answer is yes, because we eliminate the prior authorization requirement. The case cited by my colleague from Montana, Mr. BAUCUS, where a woman came into an emergency room after falling and sustaining a complex fracture to her elbow, and the emergency physician diagnosed the problem and stabilized the patient. The stabilization process took less than 2 hours, but the patient's stay in the emergency room lasted for another 10 hours while the staff attempted to coordinate the care with the patient's health plan. The plan was unable to make a timely decision.

Under the Republican bill, the woman in this case will not have to wait hours on end for a response from her health plan. Under our provision, as improved by my amendment, the health plan must respond to the nonparticipating provider within a specific timeframe to arrange for further care.

Under the Democrats' bill, plans are required to pay, without prior authorization, for emergency services and "maintenance and post stabilization services as defined by HCFA [Health Care Financing Administration] and Federal regulations to implement the Balanced Budget Act of 1997." I believe this is where the Democrat provision goes wrong and, quite frankly, it shows where we can make a much-needed improvement to the Balanced Budget Act language.

In the September 28th Federal Register, Volume 63, HCFA defines poststabilization as "medically necessary, nonemergency services furnished to an enrollee after he or she is stabilized following an emergency medical condition."

Now, that definition is completely vague and completely open-ended. I think it would be a serious mistake to take that language and to transport it into this very important bill.

Under this definition, a plan could conceivably be required to pay for services by a nonparticipating provider that are completely unrelated to the emergency conditions for which that patient was treated. To go in for one particular emergency, and while you are in that poststabilization period, to say: By the way, I also have a problem here and here; can you deal with that? And then require the plan to cover it, I think that would be a very serious mistake. The confusion and the ambiguity in the language is further perpetuated by conflicting statements on the meaning of "poststabilization" found in other places in the regulations.

So my amendment will provide for timely coordination of care. It ensures that the patient will receive the appropriate stabilizing services related to their emergency medical condition. The prudent layperson standard assures that a plan cannot retrospectively deny coverage for an event that was felt to be an emergency medical condition at the time the individual sought emergency care. It eliminates the prior authorization requirement so an individual can go to the nearest emergency facility and not have to worry about whether they are going to be covered if they go to a nonparticipating provider and that they might get stuck with the bill.

While my colleagues say they are simply adopting what was passed under Medicare, it is my contention that the provision I am offering will be an improvement on what is in Medicare because of the open-endedness and ambiguity of the language. I suggest that at some point we are going to have to revisit the Medicare provision and improve it as well.

In the meantime, I urge my colleagues to oppose the Graham of Florida emergency room amendment and vote for the amendment I will be offering later in the debate. Since this amendment tree is now full, I will have to offer that at a later point.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senator from Arkansas yield?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I will be glad to yield if I can yield on your time. We have limited time remaining on our side.

Mr. GRAHAM. I will try to ask short questions, and I will appreciate short answers.

One, you signed the committee report which, on page 29, says the committee believes it would be acceptable to have a differential cost sharing for in-network and out-of-network emergency charges. Are you saying that statement of explanation of the bill is incorrect?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I believe that needs to be clarified, and my amendment will do that.

Mr. GRAHAM. When will you submit the language that will clarify what the committee report states?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I will be glad to do that this morning.

Mr. GRAHAM. Two, with reference to poststabilization, what the current law for Medicare requires, and what this would require, is that the emergency room call the HMO and request the HMO's authorization as to what treatment to provide in the poststabilization environment. It is only when the HMO is unresponsive—in the case of Medicare, within 1 hour. If they fail to respond, then the emergency room has the right to do what it thinks is medically necessary for the patient.

Now, did the committee hear any testimony that there had been major abuses under the Medicare 1-hour-respond-to-call standard?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. What I suggest to the Senator is that my amendment will make that same requirement, only that the poststabilization services have to be related to the emergency room event.

Mr. GRAHAM. The question is, Was there any testimony to the kinds of abuses you have outlined under the current Medicare law?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I am not certain at this point.

Mr. GRAHAM. Did the committee hold hearings on this bill, and did they not ask anybody what has happened under the 2½ years of experience we have had with Medicare and Medicaid?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I say to the Senator from Florida that, in fact, there are abuses, I believe—

Mr. GRAHAM. Can the opponents of this amendment put into evidence before the full Senate and the American people what those abuses have been? We have had 2½ years of experience, covering 70 million Americans. If there have been abuses, they ought to be available and not just speculated about.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. In responding to the Senator, if there are no abuses, there should be no concern about clarifying language to ensure that, in fact, poststabilization treatment is related to the emergency room event. That is what I believe needs to be done. I think whether or not we can point to specific abuses in Medicare or not, the ambiguity in the language in Medicare is open to those kinds of abuses, and we will certainly see that occur if it is expanded to all managed care plans in the country. We certainly need to clarify that and ensure that the poststabilizations are related to the emergency room event.

Mr. GRAHAM. Let me go to a third issue. I discussed this yesterday. In the Republican bill, it states that while the person is stretched out in the emergency room under tremendous physical and emotional stress, they have the responsibility of monitoring the emergency room physician to determine if the type of diagnosis that the emergency room physician is rendering is appropriate. Could you explain how a person in an emergency room circumstance is supposed to provide that kind of second-guessing of an emergency room physician?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. To the extent that the word "appropriate" should be removed, our amendment will, in fact, remove that. I don't believe that is an accurate reflection of what the Republican underlying bill would do.

Mr. GRAHAM. That is another defect. The use of the word "appropriate" is a gaping loophole.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. And which will be removed and clarified.

Mr. GRAHAM. I am concerned about the further provision which says that the patient is responsible for second-guessing the appropriateness of care rendered by the emergency room physician. Is that going to be taken care of?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I do not believe that is an accurate reflection of that provision.

Mr. GRAHAM. I suggest that the Senator might read the bill and see that it is precisely what the bill says. I am concerned because we had a discussion last night with Dr. FRIST, and now today, which indicates that the Republican proposal has a number of admitted inconsistencies, inaccuracies, and gaping holes. Rather than us relying upon an amendment nobody has seen that is supposed to rectify those, why don't we vote for the Democratic amendment that would solve these problems?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I think I have very clearly outlined what my amendment will do, and I have expressed very clearly my concerns about the Graham of Florida amendment. I will read right now, if you would like, the entire summary of the amendment and what it would do. I think it will respond to the concerns that many of my colleagues on the other side simply have misrepresented. What you call "gaping holes" simply need clarification, which my amendment will do. It will address it in a much more rational and responsible way than the very ambiguous language that I believe the Graham amendment contains.

Mr. GRAHAM. Well, I just offer a conclusion—not a question but a statement of fact. We have had 2½ years of experience with 70 million Americans. Our proposal will be available to all Americans in the instances of rampant abuse. I think it is incumbent upon those who make these charges to document it rather than just pontificate.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Reclaiming my time, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I yield 4 minutes to the Senator from North Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent that Mina Addo, Leah Palmer, Jana Linderman, and Deborah Garcia be given floor privileges today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, yesterday I described a case dealing with emergency rooms which I understand my colleague referred to in his remarks. I want to go back to that case because I think it describes the difference between our two proposals with respect to protections for emergency room treatment for patients.

I described the case of little Jimmy Adams. This is a picture of Jimmy. This is a picture of a young, healthy Jimmy tugging on his big sister's shirt.

Here is a picture of Jimmy Adams after he lost both his hands and both his feet because he couldn't get care at the closest emergency room.

This is what happened. He was sick with a 104 degree fever. His mother called the family HMO. Officials there said you must go to a certain hospital in our network. So his parents loaded Jimmy up at 2 o'clock or so in the morning and started driving. They had to drive past the first hospital, the second hospital, and then drove past the third hospital. Finally they got to the hospital the HMO asked them to take Jimmy to. By that time, Jimmy's heart had stopped. They brought out the crash cart, intubated, and revived him. Regrettably, however, he suffered gangrene, and his hands and his feet had to be amputated.

Why didn't they stop at the first emergency room? Because they couldn't; the HMO said they won't pay for that. Why didn't they stop at the second hospital emergency room or the third? The HMO won't fully pay for that care. So they drove over an hour with a young, sick child who, because he didn't get medical treatment in time, lost his hands and his feet.

Now, my colleague says the Republican plan will solve little Jimmy's situation. Regrettably, it will not. Yes, the Republican plan will provide that that family could stop at that first hospital for emergency care, but it also allows the HMO to penalize the family financially for doing so. It allows the HMO to establish a financial penalty for this family to stop at out-of-network hospitals.

If their bill doesn't do that, I want to see it. As I read the Republican proposal, they say: We have protections here.

In fact, they don't have protections. In virtually every area of the two proposals on managed care, we see exactly the same thing. They have an emergency room provision. Is it better than currently exists? Yes, it is better. Does it solve the problem? No. This family would have been told: If you stop at the first emergency room with Jimmy, we will impose a penalty upon you. We have the right to impose a financial penalty for going to the nearest hospital emergency room.

If the other side wants to prevent that, I say, join us in supporting the Graham amendment, because we prevent that. We provide real protection for families with respect to emergency room treatment. Our amendment won't allow an HMO to say: Take that sick child to an emergency room but, by the way, you have to go to an emergency room four hospitals; if you stop sooner than that, we will penalize you.

That doesn't make any sense to me.

This issue is not about theory. It is about real people like Jimmy. It is about what the two pieces of legislation say regarding patient protection. My colleague from Florida, Senator GRAHAM, described the differences between the two bills on emergency care. He asked the questions and didn't get the answers, because satisfactory answers don't exist with respect to our opponents' proposal. Their proposal is, in fact, a shell. It does not offer the protections that we are offering in the proposal before the Senate.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with Senator GRAHAM in support of access to emergency room care. During consideration of a Patients' Bill Rights in the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee, I offered a similar amendment in an effort to prevent insurance companies from denying access to life saving emergency care. Unfortunately, my amendment was defeated on a straight party line vote.

I had offered the amendment because of problems that I have heard from emergency room doctors and administrators about creative ways insurance companies seek to deny access to emergency care. I offered the amendment because I have seen in my own state of Washington the inadequacy of simply saying care is provided if a prudent lay person deems it an emergency. We have a prudent lay person standard in the State yet we have seen where patients are turned away and reimbursement is denied.

The big flaw with the Republican bill regarding emergency room care is the lack of coverage of poststabilization care. This is the key different between our bill and that offered by the Republican leadership. We recognize the importance of not only administering emergency services but stabilizing the patient as well.

Let me give my colleagues an example of the important of poststabilization care; you rush your sick child to the emergency room with a fever close to 105. The fever escalates quickly and without warning. The emergency room doctors and nurses are able to control the fever and stabilize the child, but are concerned about determining the cause of the fever. They recommend poststabilization treatment to determine what caused the child to become so ill so quickly. The insurance company denies this treatment and the parents are told to take their child home and hope to get into see their own primary care physician the next day. Later that evening the child's fever escalates and the child begins to have seizures as a result. The child is then admitted to the hospital for more expensive acute care.

Why was follow-up poststabilization care not provided? What are the long-term effects on the child? Did the insurance company save a dime of the premium paid by hard working Americans? No, in fact their callous behavior resulted in additional costs that could have been prevented.

I cannot imagine anything more frightening than holding a child who is experiencing uncontrollable seizures because their tiny body could not endure the impact of a high raging fever. Poststabilization is essential.

I urge any of my colleagues who think the Republican bill is sufficient to talk to ER doctors and nurses. Ask them how a patient is treated when brought into the ER. Let me give you another example that was discovered by the insurance commissioner's office in Washington state:

A 17-year-old victim of a beating suffered serious head injuries and was taken to an emergency room. A CAT scan ordered by an ER physician was rejected by the insurance company because there was no prior authorization for this test. In other words, we can stabilize the patient, but cannot do any post stabilization treatment to determine the extent of the injuries without seeking authorization from an insurance company hundreds of miles away.

Another example, in a state with a prudent lay person standard: The insurance commissioner's office found that an insurance company denied ER coverage for a 15-year-old child who was taken to the emergency room with a broken leg. The claim was denied by the insurer as they ruled the circumstances did not constitute an emergency. This is outrageous. A broken leg is not an emergency? By any standard, prudent lay person or medical standard, treatment of a broken leg would be considered an emergency.

I use these examples of real people and real cases to illustrate the flaws in the Republican bill. You can say you cover emergency room care and you can keep saying it hoping that it is true. But, unfortunately, the Republican bill does not provide adequate emergency room coverage.

I was disappointed in the HELP Committee markup when my amendment was defeated. I had truly hoped that we could reach a bipartisan agreement on emergency room care coverage. I had seen that we could reach a bipartisan agreement when it came to Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries. We approved these very same provisions for these beneficiaries during consideration of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997. I had assumed that we would give the same protections to all insured Americans. It was a priority in 1997 and should be a priority in 1999.

We have spent a great deal of public and private resources to build an emergency health care and trauma care infrastructure that is the envy of the world. This infrastructure has saved millions of lives and provides a standard of care that is hard to beat. Yet policies focusing on restricting access to this care threaten the very infrastructure of which we are so proud. The ER doctor must be the one to administer care without fear of insurance company retaliation.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment to provide 160 million insured Americans with access to state-of-the-art emergency room and trauma care. Please do not close the emergency room doors on these families.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I inquire as to how much time remains on each side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 10 minutes 43 seconds. The time has expired for the minority.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I will make a couple of clarifications. I am puzzled by the reference to a penalty, the allegation, the insinuation, that the Republican bill somehow would allow a penalty to be charged.

S. 326 as reported by the committee requires plans to pay for screening and stabilizing emergency care under the prudent layperson standard without prior authorization, and the plan cannot impose cost sharing for out-of-network emergency care that would exceed the amount of cost sharing for similar in-network services. There is no differential. There can be no penalty charged under the Republican bill.

The amendment I will offer requires that the plans must pay for emergency services required. To maintain the medical stability in the emergency department plan, the plan contacts the nonparticipating provider to arrange for discharge of transfer. If the plan does not respond—as under Medicare, does not respond—to authorization of a request within a set time period, the plan must pay for services required to maintain stability in any setting, including an inpatient admission.

The great difference is that under the language of the Graham of Florida amendment, the emergency room could be required to not only provide services unrelated to the emergency event but that the health insurance plan would then be required to pay for and reimburse.

It is a glaring ambiguity. It in fact is the gaping hole in the language, and it is that which needs to be rejected. I will ask my colleagues to oppose the Graham of Florida amendment because of that ambiguity of language. Simply taking language from the Medicare balanced budget amendment, transporting that into this without any concern for the poorly defined ambiguous language that is used, I think my colleagues—

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I think I have yielded quite enough. We have used quite a bit of our time in yielding.

I think it is very difficult to argue that treatment in an emergency room should be related to the emergency event. That is what we want to ensure.

We do not believe you can preserve any sense of coordinated care if you require health plans to pay for, in the poststabilization period, medical needs totally unrelated to the emergency that brought that patient to the emergency room.

That is sufficient for rejection of the Graham of Florida language.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

If no one yields time, the time running is the majority's time.

Mr. REID. That is because there is no time left on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. GRAHAM. With the additional time that the majority has, would they respond to questions on their time? Would they at least cite in the bill the language that they believe is insufficient and creates an ambiguity?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I inform my colleagues, since we are on managed time, they are more than welcome to use time on the bill. They have that option, and I am sure the Senator from Nevada will yield to the Senator.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend, we can't have quorum calls. The time should be running so that in 10 minutes you can offer your next amendment. A quorum call is not in keeping with what we are supposed to be doing.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, to respond to my colleague, we have had almost no quorum calls since the debate has begun. I am preparing to offer an amendment in a moment. That amendment will be ready.

I will suggest the absence of a quorum and send the amendment to the desk momentarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I want to take just one moment to respond to the question that was posed as to our specific concern about the language in the Graham of Florida amendment. The Graham of Florida amendment adopts the Medicare language. I will quote that Medicare language, from the September 28 Federal Register, volume 63. HCFA defines poststabilization, and I quote as I did before:

... medically necessary nonemergency services furnished to an enrollee after he or she is stabilized following an emergency medical condition.

That is as vague and open-ended as any language I could conceive. It is, in effect, a blank check for the emergency room, for the provider, for the patient. That is the language that needs clarification.

We believe the poststabilization medical services that are provided must be related to the emergency event that caused the individual to go to the emergency room. That is the clarification that is necessary. I will be delighted to once again go through the amendment summary that I will be offering, but that is a critical flaw in the Graham of Florida amendment. Because of that flaw in the language, I ask my colleagues to oppose the Graham of Florida amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM. Does the Senator from Arkansas yield? The Senator from Arkansas will not yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired on the amendment. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I think we have some colleagues who are out right now. It is my anticipation the majority leader will want to have the vote afterwards. If my colleague wants me to pursue it, I can send an amendment to the desk or I can ask for a quorum call and we can talk to the leaders to determine what time we want to vote.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend, I think it would be appropriate. I think there has been a general agreement as of yesterday that we would vote sometime this afternoon at the agreement of the two leaders. So I think it would be better to offer an amendment and move this matter along.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, momentarily I will send an amendment to the desk. I ask consent the time be charged on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1236

(Purpose: To protect Americans from steep health care cost increases or loss of health care insurance coverage)

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, one of the big concerns many of us have with the underlying legislation of the so-called Kennedy bill is its cost. How much will it cost employers? How much will it cost employees? What will it cost employees in lost wages? If employers have to pay increased costs for health insurance, are they not paying their employees as much as they would pay them?

Health care costs a lot. Many of us would say health care already costs too much. It is unaffordable for millions of Americans. They would like to have it. We have 43 million uninsured Americans today. Most of those Americans, I imagine, would like to be insured but they cannot afford it. So health care already costs too much. Unfortunately, the bill proposed by Senator Kennedy and many of the Democrats would make it worse. They would make the insurance a lot more expensive and therefore less affordable. As a result, millions of Americans would probably lose their health care insurance. We think that would be a mistake.

I said yesterday we should make sure we do no harm. We should not increase the number of uninsured. I am afraid the Kennedy bill, with its estimated increase of cost of 6.1 percent over and above the inflation already expected, would increase the number of uninsured by what is estimated to be about 1.8 million persons. That is too many. That is far too many. So the amendment I will be sending to the desk, as soon as I get a copy of it, will say we should not increase the cost of health insurance by more than 1 percent. If we do, the provisions of the bill are null and void.

Let's not do any damage. Let's make sure at the outset we say very plainly we are not going to increase the cost of health care by more than 1 percent. Let's not increase the number of uninsured by over 100,000. If we do that, we have done harm, we have done damage, we have done more damage than good.

Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senator GRAMM, and Senator COLLINS, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES], for himself, Mr. GRAMM, and Ms. COLLINS, proposes an amendment numbered 1236.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ EXEMPTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to a group health plan (or health insurance coverage offered in connection with the group health plan) if the provisions of this Act for a plan year during which this Act is fully implemented result in—

(1) a greater than 1 percent increase in the cost of the group health plan's premiums for the plan year, as determined under subsection (b); or

(2) a decrease, in the plan year, of 100,000 or more in the number of individuals in the United States with private health insurance, as determined under subsection (c).

(b) EXEMPTION FOR INCREASED COST.—For purposes of subsection (a)(1), if an actuary certified in accordance with generally recognized standards of actuarial practice by a member of the American Academy of Actuaries or by another individual whom the Secretary has determined to have an equivalent level of training and expertise certifies that the application of this Act to a group health plan (or health insurance coverage offered in connection with the group health plan) will result in the increase described in subsection (a)(1) for a plan year during which this Act is fully implemented, the provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to the group health plan (or the coverage).

(c) EXEMPTION FOR DECREASED NUMBER OF INSURED PERSONS.—For purposes of subsection (a)(2), unless the Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration certifies, on the basis of projections by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, that the provisions of this Act will not result in the decrease described in subsection (a)(2) for a plan year during which this Act is fully implemented, the provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to a group health plan (or health insurance coverage offered in connection with a group health plan).

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, let me back up a little bit and bring our colleagues, and maybe the public, up to speed as far as where we are because, from a parliamentary procedure standpoint, this is getting maybe a little bit confusing.

The Republicans offered as the underlying vehicle the so-called Kennedy bill, S. 6, the Patients' Bill of Rights. We did it because we wanted to expose that it has a lot of expensive provisions that, frankly, need to be deleted.

The Democrats offered a substitute yesterday, the Republicans' Patients' Bill of Rights Plus that was reported out of the HELP Committee. They offered that as a substitute.

Then Senator DASCHLE, on behalf of Senator KENNEDY, offered a perfecting amendment to the substitute—"the substitute" being the Republican bill—that said that should apply in scope to all plans. The Republican plan basically applies to self-insured plans. It does not duplicate State insurance, unlike the Democrats' bill that says we do not care what the States have done; we are going to insist you do everything we have dictated. They expanded the scope. That was a first-degree perfecting amendment.

The Republicans offered a second-degree amendment yesterday to the underlying first-degree amendment of the Democrats on scope that says two things: One, we think the primary function of regulating insurance should be maintained by the States. That was in the findings of the bill. And then in the legislative language: We should expand access and coverage to health care plans.

When the Democrats were so kind as to offer the Republican bill as a substitute, they forgot to offer our tax provisions. We included one of the tax provisions which we included in our Patients' Bill of Rights Plus, and that is 100 percent deductibility for the self-employed. We will be voting on that, and that will be the first vote this afternoon. We will probably be voting on that at the conclusion of Senator SMITH's statement or shortly thereafter. I expect that votes will occur on that sometime after 3 o'clock, maybe closer to 3:30.

The Democrats then were entitled to a second-degree amendment, and Senator GRAHAM of Florida offered a second-degree amendment dealing with emergency rooms. Senator HUTCHINSON and Senator FRIST debated against that and stated they would come up with an alternative dealing with emergency rooms. That will be voted on at some later point in the debate.

This afternoon we will have a debate on the Republican amendment dealing with 100-percent deductibility of self-employed persons, and we will have a vote on the Graham amendment dealing with the emergency room provision, and then the next amendment we will actually vote on, depending on whether or not either of these second-degree amendments is adopted, will be to the amendment tree or the side to which I just sent an amendment.

I sent an amendment to the first-degree amendment on the so-called Kennedy bill. This amendment says, whatever we do, let's not increase health care costs by more than 1 percent or increase the number of uninsured by over 100,000. It is very simple and very plain: Congress, don't do it; whatever you do, whatever mandates you are considering—and we recognize and applaud everybody for having good intentions—let's do no harm; let's not increase health care costs by more than 1 percent; let's not increase the number of uninsured by over 100,000.

If the Secretary of Health and Human Services determines that it would increase costs by that amount or increase the number of uninsured by that amount, then the underlying bill will not take effect.

Those are the basic provisions of the bill. I hope and expect all of our colleagues will support this amendment. I urge its adoption.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENZI) Who yields time?

If neither side yields time, time runs equally.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I yield the Senator from North Dakota 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I have not seen the specifics of this amendment, but I have heard the description. It is interesting to hear this discussion of costs because we already have experience on this issue. The President has implemented the Patients' Bill of Rights for the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program. This is already in place for Federal employees around the country. And we know what it costs; we don't have to guess. It costs $1 a month. CBO says the patients' protection bill will cost $2 a month. We know it costs $1 a month in the Federal employees health insurance program.

The costs that are described by my friend from Oklahoma are inflated for reasons I do not understand. We know what it costs. It costs $1 a month in the Federal health benefits program, because it is already implemented, and the Congressional Budget Office says it will cost $2 a month for our Patients' Bill of Rights.

Let's talk about costs from a different angle for a moment. I find it interesting that, when people talk about costs, they do not talk about the costs that have been imposed upon American citizens who need health care but are denied it by their HMO even though they have paid their premiums in good faith. What about the costs imposed on this young boy who was taken past three hospitals to go to the fourth because the family's HMO would not allow him to stop at the first. What is the cost imposed on that young boy who lost his hands and feet or the young boy I described yesterday whose HMO denied him therapy because it said a 50-percent chance of walking by age 5 is a minimum benefit?

Or let's talk about other costs, costs on the HMO side.

Let me read a table of the 25 highest paid HMO executives. I wonder if there is any interest or concern about their salaries while we are withholding treatment for people under the aegis of cost cutting. Let me list some of the 25 highest paid CEO executives.

Annual compensation, 1997: one CEO makes $30.7 million, another has a $12 million salary, a $8.6 million salary, a $7.3 million salary, a $6.9 million salary—these are annual salaries—$5.7 million, $5.3 million, $5.2 million, $5.1 million, all the way down the list of the 25 highest salaries.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DORGAN. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. REID. The Senator from North Dakota has talked about the salaries these executives make. Mr. President, he has not included the value of their stock, has he?

Mr. DORGAN. I have not. I have that on the next page. Let me describe that, starting at the top. Twenty-five companies: $61 million in unexercised stock options, on top of the salary, for one person in 1997, $32.7 million, $19.9 million, $19.0 million, $17 million—all the way down the list of 25.

It is interesting when people talk about costs. Is there any interest in this, any interest in talking about $35 million, $37 million, $38 million in unrealized stock options?

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DORGAN. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator add the stock options for that one individual and find out what it comes out to per year?

Mr. DORGAN. I do not have it listed quite that way, but I can tell my colleague that the average compensation plus stock options for these 25 executives is $16.7 million.

Mr. REID. It is fair to say it is a huge amount of money; isn't that true?

Mr. DORGAN. Oh, yes. One of them, for example, makes well over $30 million. Another is over $40 million. Of course that is a substantial amount of money.

The only point I am making is this: There is a lot of money and a lot of profit in this system. This has a lot to do with profits in for-profit medicine. On the other side, on the counter-balance, is the care for patients. Some people objected yesterday because we cited examples of patients who have been mistreated. They said this debate is not about individual patients. Of course it is. That is exactly what it is about. This debate is not about theory, it is about what kind of health care patients are going to get when they need it.

When your child is sick, what kind of treatment is your child going to get? Or if your spouse has breast cancer and your employer changes HMO plans, will someone say—I ask for 1 additional minute by consent—you cannot keep your same oncologist, you have to change doctors, even though you are in the midst of treatment? If your child needs to go to an emergency room, will someone say: We're sorry, you can't go to the one 2 miles away, you must go to the one 20 miles away? These are the kinds of issues, real people with real problems, that this debate is about. That is what this is about.

Every health organization in the country supports our bill. USA Today, in an editorial said: If you want a Patients' Bill of Rights from the Republican plan, you had better be patient because it doesn't provide a Patients' Bill of Rights.

There is a difference in these plans. At least we are on the right subject. But while we are on the subject of cost, let's talk a little about who is making the money here—$30 million, $20 million, $15 million in annual compensation—and then you talk to us about cost. We can't afford $1 a month to provide protection to Jimmy Adams so he can go to the nearest emergency room when he is desperately ill? Of course we can do that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired.

Ms. COLLINS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Maine.

Who yields time?

Ms. COLLINS. I yield myself such time on this amendment as I may consume.

Mr. President, this amendment goes to the heart of this debate. All of us agree HMOs must be held accountable for providing the care that they have promised. All of us agree we need a strong appeals process so that anyone who is denied medical treatment or medical care has an avenue that is cost free, expeditious, and easy to appeal an adverse decision from an HMO. That is not what this debate is about.

The debate is whether we solve these problems in a way that is going to cause health insurance premiums to soar, thus jeopardizing the health insurance coverage of millions of Americans, or are we going to take the approach that the HELP Committee bill takes, which is to address these problems in a way that is sensible and that addresses the concerns about quality, about unfair denial of care, without imposing such onerous and expensive Federal regulations that we drive up the cost of health insurance and cause some people to lose their coverage altogether.

That is the heart of this debate. That is the key difference between the bill advocated by my colleagues on the Democratic side of the aisle and the bill which we support.

This amendment is simple; it is straightforward. What this amendment says is, if the Kennedy bill, in fact, increases the cost of health insurance along the lines projected by the independent Congressional Budget Office, then it would be essentially no longer in effect for group health plans.

This is an important amendment. It recognizes that cost is the single biggest obstacle to providing health insurance. It addresses the issues the CBO has outlined in its report in which it warned about what would happen if the Kennedy bill goes into effect. What would happen is, under the Kennedy bill that is before us, 1.8 million Americans would most likely lose their health insurance; employers would drop coverage, particularly small businesses that may be operating on the margin already; self-employed individuals would find health insurance still further out of reach; and we would further exacerbate the problem of the growing number of uninsured in this Nation.

We have a record 43 million Americans without health insurance. We should not be increasing the number of uninsured.

So what our amendment does is very simple. It says if there is an increase in health insurance premiums beyond 1 percent, or if the number of uninsured Americans increases by more than 100,000 people, that we will take a second look, we will put a stop to the mandates that would be imposed by the Kennedy bill.

Surely, we should be able to come to an agreement that this is the right approach to take. If my colleagues on the Democratic side of the aisle believe that their bill will not have the kind of cost estimate that the independent CBO says it will have, then they should join with us in supporting this amendment because this amendment offers important safeguards.

It says the Senate should not be implementing, we should not be passing legislation that is going to drive up the cost of health insurance and further increase the number of uninsured Americans—a number that already stands far too high at 43 million people.

By contrast, the Republican approach seeks to expand, not contract, the number of Americans with insurance. We would do that, for example, by providing full deductibility for health insurance for self-employed individuals. This is a critical issue in my State of Maine where we have so many Mainers who are self-employed. Perhaps it is in keeping with the independent Yankee spirit of the State of Maine that we do have so many people who run their own businesses. We see them everywhere. It is the small businesses on Main Street of every town in Maine. It is our lobstermen, our fishermen, our gift shop owners, our electricians, our plumbers. We see it throughout our State. It would be the most important thing that we could do to help them to afford health insurance if we made their health insurance premium fully deductible.

So we have a very clear choice. Do we want the Kennedy approach, which is going to cause health insurance premiums to soar, causing small businesses to be unable to provide coverage at all and putting health insurance further out of reach for the 43 million uninsured Americans or do we want the approach that we have proposed through the HELP Committee bill?

Our legislation addresses the very real problems that do exist with managed care. Our approach would put treatment decisions back in the hands of physicians, not insurance company accountants, not trial lawyers. But our approach strikes that critical balance. We do so not by so overloading the system that we are going to drive up costs but, rather, by putting in common-sense safeguards that will solve the problems with managed care without jeopardizing the health insurance coverage of millions of Americans.

I urge my colleagues to join, I hope in a bipartisan way, in supporting this very important amendment. It is a way for the Senate to put itself on record as recognizing that cost is the single biggest obstacle to expanded health insurance coverage. I hope we will have bipartisan support for this amendment.

I thank my colleagues and yield the floor but reserve the remainder of our time.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I want to respond just a little bit to our colleague from North Dakota who said: Well, the Democrat bill would only increase costs by $1 a month. CBO says—I just read the CBO report. CBO does not say it. Or if my colleague would show me where it says that, I would be happy to maybe consume that page on the floor of the Senate. I don't know, but I read rather quickly. Maybe I missed it. I read fairly fast.

But the section I am looking at in CBO says—this is talking about the Patients' Bill of Rights, S. 6:

Most of the provisions would reach their full effect within the first 3 years after enactment. CBO estimates the premiums for employer-sponsored health care plans would rise by an average of 6.1 percent in the absence of any compensating changes on the part of employers.

That is 6.1 percent. The annual premium for health insurance for a family, according to Peat Marwick, in 1998, in an employer survey, was $5,800. And 6.1 percent of that is $355 per year.

If you divide that by 12, it is almost $30 a month—not $1 a month; $30 a month. That is not even close.

So I make mention of this. Again, I think people are entitled to their own opinion; they are not entitled to their own facts.

If CBO says this Kennedy bill only increases costs by $1 a month, I would like to see where it is. I just read the report—April 23, 1999. It says: 6.1 percent.

That is a fairly big difference. When I am saying the cost is almost $30 a month—$29.50 a month—versus $1 a month, we have a little difference. I am using CBO. Maybe my colleague from North Dakota reads it a little differently.

I think that is a rather significant difference: $30 a month will price a lot of people out of health insurance. This additional 6-percent increase, on top of the 9-percent increase which is already projected, is going to put a lot of people in the uninsured category. We don't want to do that. We should do no harm. We shouldn't put millions of people in the uninsured category.

I refer, again, to the CBO report, because I heard my colleague from Massachusetts assert that this will only cost a family one Big Mac a month. I don't know if he is using CBO, but we are using CBO. CBO says S. 6, the Patients' Bill of Rights, the Kennedy bill, will increase health care premiums by 6.1 percent, resulting in an $8 billion reduction in Social Security payroll taxes over the next 10 years. This is in the report. If Social Security taxes are going down by $8 billion, that means total payroll goes down over that same period of time by $64 billion, total payroll reduction.

Employers are going to say: Wait a minute, if you are driving up my health care costs, I can't pay you as much. I am going to pay you less or we will offset this reduction.

That is CBO. That is not the Republican organization. That is not DON NICKLES penciling it in. This is CBO, a nonpartisan group, saying there is $64 billion in lost wages if we pass the Kennedy bill. That is a whole lot of Big Macs. That is 32 billion Big Macs, if they cost $2 apiece. That isn't one Big Mac. As Senator GRAMM said, you can buy the McDonald's franchises for that. I expect you could.

For people who say the cost impact of the Kennedy bill is trivial and it would do no damage, if they believe that, have them vote for this amendment. I hope they will vote for this amendment.

We should do no harm. We should not increase the cost of health care by more than 1 percent. Shame on us if we do. We should do no harm. We should not increase the number of uninsured. We should not be passing bills that make matters worse. Let's work on quality. Let's improve access. Let's make sure more people have health care. Let's not do just the opposite. Let's not un-insure a couple million people by increasing the cost of health care so dramatically, as the Kennedy bill would do. That is the purpose of our amendment.

I compliment my colleague from Texas, who has been working on this amendment as the principal cosponsor with me, and also my colleague from Maine who spoke so eloquently on it earlier.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I yield, on the amendment, 5 minutes to the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, virtually every provision in both versions of the Patients' Bill of Rights starts with a phrase similar to this: If a group health plan or health insurance coverage offered by a health insurer provides any benefits with respect to specialist care, emergency service care, primary care, then this is what they have to do. What does that say?

One, it says no health plan is required to offer virtually any of the services that are covered by this bill. It is all a matter of free contract between the HMO and those persons to whom an HMO contract is being sold. The analogy is, what is it that you buy when you sign an HMO contract that says you are going to get access to specialists.

To stay with the McDonald's example, the question is not what the hamburger costs. The question is whether there is any beef inside the hamburger or whether all you are paying for with your $2 is a couple of buns.

The fact is, if there is an increase in cost, it probably means people aren't getting the kind of services they think they are getting when they contract with an HMO. We found out, as it relates to Medicare, that 40 percent of the complaints by Medicare beneficiaries against their HMO were in the emergency room. They went to the emergency room, they got treatment, and then they were found not to have a heart attack, not to have the onset of a stroke. That was the good news. The bad news was the HMO said: Well, because you went to the emergency room and you didn't have a heart attack, we are not going to pay your bill.

Is that the way we want to hold down the cost of care, by having essentially a bait-and-switch process built into one of the most intimate aspects of an American family's relationships, and that is how their health care will be provided and paid for?

The issue is whether people are going to get what they contracted for. If they don't want to contract for these services and therefore have a lower cost product, they are at liberty to do so.

The irony is, to go back to the last discussion we were having on the emergency room, the very provision that apparently is going to be substantially altered, in the unseen, unread, unknown Republican amendment that is being offered as an alternative to my emergency room amendment, has to do with poststabilization care. According to the oldest and one of the largest HMOs in the country, Kaiser-Permanente, which has voluntarily adopted exactly the procedure we are suggesting should be the standard for emergency room contract provisions, their use of poststabilization has saved them money. How has that happened?

Take the case of a child who has a high fever. The parents take the child to the emergency room. It is determined the child does not have a life-threatening condition, but there is uncertainty as to why they have had this high fever.

Under the Kaiser plan, the emergency room calls the HMO and says: Here is what the situation is with this child. What do you think would be the appropriate medical treatment? The HMO, Kaiser, and the emergency room work out a coordinated plan of treatment. In many cases, what it says is the child can go back home if the child, at 9 o'clock in the morning, will come to Kaiser's primary care physician to be treated. That is why Kaiser says it is not only good health but also it saves money.

Ironically, the first amendment offered, after it is stated by the opposition that they are going to strip, dilute, adulterate this provision which has the potential of saving money, is to offer this saccharin amendment which says: Now we will put a limitation on increases in cost.

I think we are all concerned about cost. We are all concerned about making health care more affordable and reducing the number of uninsured. But we want people who contract with an HMO to get what they paid for, not to get the two buns but no beef in their McDonald's hamburger.

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I yield myself 15 minutes.

I have to say we often see people do 180 degree turns around here. It never ceases to amaze me to hear our Democrat colleagues savaging HMOs. Let us remember they are the people who have been in love with HMOs for 25 years.

In fact, they loved HMOs so much that in these bills virtually crushing this ancient desk—the 1994 Clinton health care bill and the two Kennedy variations of it—they loved HMOs so much they would have set up health care collectives all over the Nation, run by the Federal Government, and would have fined Americans $5,000 for refusing to join their health care collective. They loved HMOs so much in 1994, they would have imposed a $50,000 fine on a doctor who prescribed medical treatment that was not dictated or allowed by their Government-run HMO health care collective.

They loved HMOs so much in 1994, if a doctor provided treatment you needed for your baby that was not provided for in their Government-run health care collective, and you paid him for it, he could go to prison for 15 years. That was their vision of a health care future for America.

But having loved HMOs so much that they wanted to mandate that everybody in America be a member of one run by the Government, now all of a sudden they have done a public opinion survey. They have gotten focus groups together, and they have decided Americans are not as much in love with HMOs as they are. And so as a result, now they have a bill that doesn't say, as they said in 1994, HMOs are the answer to everything. They have a bill that now says HMOs are the problem.

What we try to do in our bill is fix the problems, but we do something they will not do: We empower Americans to fire their HMO. We allow Americans to buy medical savings accounts, where they have the right to choose for themselves.

Our Democrat colleagues are adamantly opposed to that freedom because they want the Government to run the health care system. And you can't get the Government running the health care system if you start giving people the power to fire their HMO. So they want to regulate the HMOs. They want to give you the ability to contact a bureaucrat if you are unhappy. They want to give you total freedom to hire a lawyer. You can hire whatever lawyer you want to hire.

But what they will not do is give you the ability to hire your doctor. Why don't they want to do it? Because this is simply one step in the direction of this health care bill that they want and love, and which we killed. But in their heart, they still want Government health care collectives, and they want people fined and imprisoned if they don't provide medicine exactly the way the Democrats want it provided.

Now they say, well, something is wrong with the Republican bill because they are not overriding State law. They think that somehow Senator KENNEDY and President Clinton know more about Texas than the people in the Texas Legislature and the Texas Governor. They believe we should trample State law and we ought to make every decision in Washington, DC. We don't agree. They say they want America to know the difference. Please know that this is the difference.

If Senator KENNEDY and President Clinton know so much about Texas, when President Clinton finishes in the White House, maybe he ought to move to Texas and run for some public office. It would be an educational experience, I can assure you, both for him and the people of Texas.

But the point is, I am not going to let Senator KENNEDY and President Clinton tell the people in Texas how to run their State. I am not going to do it either. If I wanted to do that, I would run for the state legislature.

Let's get to the issue we are talking about here. The problem with the Kennedy bill is it drives up costs. The problem with the Kennedy bill is that the Congressional Budget Office has concluded that the Kennedy bill would drive up health care costs by 6.1 percent.

What that means is two things: One, 1.8 million Americans would lose their health insurance. Now, granted, if their bill passed, you would have the ability to pick up the phone book, look in the blue pages and call any government agency you wanted; you could hire any lawyer you wanted. But 1.8 million people would not have health insurance under this bill. Their bill would drive up health costs for those who got to keep their insurance by $72.7 billion over a 5-year period.

Let me convert that into something people understand. By 1.8 million people being denied health insurance because of the cost of all these lawyers and Government bureaucrats and therefore losing their insurance under the Kennedy bill, that would mean that in breast exams, 188,595 American women would lose breast exams that they would have under current law because Senator Kennedy's bill would drive up health insurance costs so much.

Because 1.8 million people would lose their health insurance under the Kennedy bill, there would be 52,973 fewer mammograms. Why? Is Senator Kennedy against mammograms? Of course he is not. But the point is, his bill, by driving up costs, by hiring all these bureaucrats and all these lawyers, where 60 percent of what comes out of these lawsuits goes to lawyers and not to people who have been damaged, hurt, or are sick—by imposing those new costs, 52,973 women per year would lose mammograms that they are getting, which are funded today under their health insurance policies.

Under Senator KENNEDY's bill, 135,122 women that get annual pap tests funded by their insurance policy would not get them because they would lose their insurance.

And so that no one thinks I am totally discriminating against men, prostate screenings would decline by 23,135. That's 23,135 men who would not get screened, who might die of prostate cancer because Senator KENNEDY thinks it is more important to be able to hire a lawyer than it is for people to have insurance so that they can get prostate screening.

Really, the bill before us is not about doctors. Nothing in Senator KENNEDY's bill lets you choose your doctor or fire your HMO. It lets you choose a lawyer and contact a bureaucrat. In doing so, it drives up costs by 6.1 percent and it denies 1.8 million people their health insurance. As a result, we get less care, not more; we get more expensive care, not cheaper. And anybody that believes that being able to hire a lawyer or contact a bureaucrat heals people clearly does not understand how medicine works.

The amendment before us is a very simple amendment. My guess is that after they pray over it a while, everybody will vote for it. It kills the Kennedy bill, no question about that. But I don't think they are going to want to vote against it because what this amendment says very simply is this: It sets up a triggering mechanism. It says that if this bill were to be adopted—which it won't be because we are going to defeat it this week because we have a better bill that works better—if it was found and certified that in any year, when fully implemented, this bill would drive up costs by more than 1 percent, the law would not go into effect. Or if in any year more than 100,000 people lost their health insurance as a result of the cost increase also imposed, then this bill would not be operative.

Now we know from CBO estimates that both of these things will occur. We have offered this amendment basically to point out the fact that the problem with the Kennedy bill is that it drives up costs, and it denies people health insurance.

Finally, let me say do I believe this is the end game? Suppose for a moment that we could pass their bill, if President Clinton could override every legislature and State, and we could have the Government decide, by law, what is the preferred service, what is the means of treating every disease so we would set by Federal statute all those things. Suppose that we did all those things and drove up health care costs, would the Democrats be happy? No, and neither would the American people.

Next year, they would come back with their old faithful, the Clinton health care bill, and they would say: Medical costs have risen by 6.1 percent, 1.8 million people have lost their health insurance, and there is only one solution. We have to have the Government take over the health care system. We will make everybody join an HMO. We will take their freedom completely away, and, in fact, we will fine them $5,000 if they refuse to do it, and we will make doctors practice medicine our way. We will fine them $50,000 if they give a treatment we don't approve, or we will put them in prison if they provide medical care that is not on our approved Federal list. That will be their answer to the problem they create with this bill. That is what this debate is about.

I am sure, having looked at their bill, they have done a poll, they have looked at a focus group, and they have determined that somehow they are going to gain some political points by the bill they put forward.

We have gone about it a little bit differently. We have spent 2 years with people such as BILL FRIST—who has actually practiced medicine; not only practiced, he is one of the premier doctors in America—putting together a bill that fixes the problems with HMOs, that doesn't write medical practice into law. If we had written medical practice into law 100 years ago, we would still be bleeding people for fevers.

We have put together a bill that tries to deal with abuses in HMOs so a final decision is made by an independent doctor as to what "necessity" is. We go a step further. We expand freedom so that people get a chance with our reforms, if they are not happy with their HMO, they can say something under our bill to the HMO that they can't say under Senator KENNEDY's bill. Under our bill, if all else fails, they can say to their HMO: You didn't do the job. You didn't take care of me, you didn't take care of my children, and you are fired. I'm going to get a medical savings account. I'm going to make my own decisions.

That is the difference between what Democrats call rights and what Republicans call freedom. Their rights are the right to more government, the right to more regulation, the right to look in the blue pages and call up a government bureaucrat, to look in the Yellow Pages under "Attorney" and call up a lawyer.

But their health care rights do not include the right to hire your own doctor or to fire your HMO. What kind of right is it when you have a right to complain and petition but you don't have a right to act?

Our bill is about freedom, the freedom to choose. That is the difference. Our Democrat colleagues don't support that freedom, because they want a government-run system.

Senator KENNEDY is not deterred. We may have killed the Clinton-Kennedy bill in 1994 taking over the health care system, but he dreams of bringing it back. If he can win on his bill this week, it is a step in that direction. But he is not going to be successful.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

If no time is yielded, the time is shared equally.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I want to make a couple more comments. I think some people have been loose with facts on saying the Kennedy bill would only cost $1 a month. One Member said it would only cost one Big Mac a month. That is absolutely, totally false.

I have been looking at the Congressional Budget Office cost estimate of the Kennedy bill, S. 6, the Patients' Bill of Rights of 1999. I will read a couple of provisions. If this report is wrong, I wish to be corrected. Members are making statements that it will only cost $2 a month, or one hamburger a month—unless they are buying that hamburger in Cape Cod or Hyannis Port. Maybe that is $30 a month. It is not a Big Mac in Oklahoma.

Page 3 of the CBO report says most of the provisions would reach the full effect within the first 3 years after enactment. CBO estimates the premiums for employer-sponsored health care plans would rise by an average of 6.1 percent in the absence of any compensating changes on the part of employers.

What would the compensating changes be? CBO says, on page 4, employers could drop health insurance entirely if we pass the Kennedy bill. Employers could drop health insurance entirely, which I am afraid many would do. They could reduce the generosity of the benefit package, according to CBO, increase the cost sharing by beneficiaries, or increase the employee's share of the premium.

This is CBO. This is not just DON NICKLES. This is not some right-wing conspiracy. They are saying if health care costs are increased this much, some employers will drop plans. Some employers will say employees have to pay a lot more. Some employers will come up with cheaper plans. CBO said some will reduce the generosity of the benefit package, come up with cheaper plans, not cover so much.

I thought the purpose of the bill was to improve health care quality, not come up with cheaper plans, not come up with fewer plans, not come up with greater uninsured. That is what CBO is saying increased costs would be.

How much would it cost? Again, I am a stickler for having facts. What is the estimated budgetary impact of the Kennedy bill? CBO says it would reduce Social Security payroll taxes by about $8 billion over the next 10 years, reducing Social Security payroll taxes by $8 billion. That means total payroll goes down by $64 billion. That is a big reduction. That is a lot of money coming out. That is a lot of money that people won't receive in wages, according to the CBO, because Congress passed a bill. Congress said: We know better; we should micromanage health care from Washington, DC. The net result is lost wages of $64 billion. That is not one Big Mac per month.

What is the cost per month? Family premium for health insurance, according to Peat Marwick: $5,826 in 1998; 6.1 percent of that is $355 per year. That is right at $30 per month an employer would pay. What does CBO say the employer would do if they were saddled with those kinds of increases? They would drop plans, drop health insurance entirely, reduce the generosity of the benefit package, increase cost sharing by beneficiaries, or increase the employees' share of the premium.

We should use facts. The cost of the Kennedy bill is not one Big Mac; it is about $30 a month for a family plan. According to CBO, I am afraid a couple of million people, at least 1.8 million people, would lose the insurance they already have. We should not do that. That would be a serious mistake.

Mr. FRIST. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. I am happy to yield.

Mr. FRIST. It is important for us to look at the CBO reports because they have obviously looked at various mandates in this bill. I ask the Senator if this is correct. It says:

CBO finds the bill as introduced [Senator KENNEDY's bill] would increase the cost of health insurance premiums by 6.1 percent.

Is that correct?

Mr. NICKLES. That is correct.

Mr. FRIST. Does that 6.1-percent increase include the cost of inflation in health care? Or is that separate from that?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator makes an excellent point. That is over and above whatever inflation is already anticipated for health care costs.

Mr. FRIST. So we have health care inflation. We know we worked hard to reduce it, but the rate of health care inflation already is two or three times that of general inflation. So that is already built into the equation. The increase, because of the Kennedy bill, is an additional 6.1 percent; is that correct?

Mr. NICKLES. That is correct.

Mr. FRIST. So we are talking about a potential increase of 9, 10, 11 percent in premiums?

Mr. NICKLES. Even higher than that. I think the estimate I have, that was done by the National Survey of the Employee-Sponsored Health Care Plans, Mercer, which is probably one of the biggest actuaries in health care, estimates a 9-percent increase for next year in health care costs. So if you put 6.1 percent on top of that, that is a 15-percent increase in health care costs for next year.

Mr. FRIST. So we have health care going to 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 percent, possibly higher because of the bill, coupled with things we cannot control. Yet we know this bill is something we can control.

For every 1 percent increase in premiums—you say it is going to be 10, 12, 13, 14, 15—how many people are driven to the ranks of the uninsured?

Mr. NICKLES. Most of the professionals and actuaries usually estimate about 300,000.

Mr. FRIST. The reasons for that seem to me to be fairly obvious. With premiums going sky high, and you are a small employer and trying to do the very best to take care of your employees and offer them insurance and you are barely scraping by with your margins, as small businesspeople are working so hard to do, is it not correct that an 11-, 12-, 15-percent increase is enough to make you say I just cannot do it anymore?

Mr. NICKLES. Unfortunately, that is the case.

Mr. FRIST. Is it correct, what the CBO says, responding to, "How will employers deal with these costs?" Do you agree with what the CBO says:

Employers could respond to premium increases in a variety of ways. They could drop health insurance entirely, reduce the generosity of the benefit package . . .

I tell you, as a physician, neither of those sound very attractive to me. We have to be very careful in this body that we don't cause them to drop their insurance or decrease their benefits package. I continue back with the quote:

. . . increase cost sharing by beneficiaries . . .

As an aside, I am not sure we want to throw that increased cost sharing on our beneficiaries unless it is absolutely necessary.

. . . increase the employees' share of the premium. CBO assumed employers would deflect about 60 percent of the increase in premiums through these strategies.

Mr. President, 60 percent, that is almost unconscionable unless these mandates are entirely necessary.

Mr. NICKLES. I thank my friend and colleague. He makes an excellent point. Again, this is CBO saying if we do this, employers are going to drop health insurance or they are going to drop the quality of the package. He makes an excellent point.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Parliamentary inquiry. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 6 minutes 10 seconds.

Mr. FRIST. And on the other side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the other side, 5 minutes 51 seconds.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this Patients' Bill of Rights is critical. For us to come in and return the balance between physicians and patients in managed care—and I think managed care has gone too far—we need to absolutely make sure patients and physicians are empowered so the very best care is given to that patient. It means we in this body have to be very careful not to drive the cost just sky high, through the roof. Why? Because all the information, all the data presented to us is if we make these premiums skyrocket people are going to lose their insurance.

We have not talked about that very much. I mentioned it to my colleagues. Is very important to get some insurance coverage. Some coverage gets you into the door. That makes sure you have access to health care.

If we look at the President's own advisory commission on managed care, they were very careful to consider costs. I think we should be, just as they were, very careful.

This is one of their guiding principles of President Clinton's Advisory Commission on Consumer Protection and Quality in the Health Care Industry. They basically say:

Costs matter . . . the commission has sought to balance the need for stronger consumer rights . . .

As an aside, we have to do that and accomplish that in this bill we have before us this week.

. . . with the need to keep coverage affordable . . . Health coverage is the best consumer protection.

I agree with this. We need to come back to this guiding principle and consider cost.

We talk about the mandates. Let me say, because I mentioned the commission, we have a lot of mandates in the underlying Kennedy bill. I think we need to go through and see what other people have said about these mandates; are they necessary? Because we know unlimited mandates imposed on insurance companies, States, individuals, if they are not necessary, are going to drive costs up and decrease access. If we look at the Democratic mandates—and I just put a few on here to see whether or not President Clinton's Advisory Commission on Consumer Protection and Quality recommended them—you will find the following.

Under a medical necessities definition, something we will be debating over the next couple of days: Rejected under the President's commission.

Under the health plan liability, coming back to bringing the lawyers into the emergency room and suing everyone: Rejected; mandatory repeal of standardized data, rejected by President Clinton's commission; State-run ombudsman program, rejected by the President's commission; restriction on provider financial incentives, rejected by the President's commission. All of these are mandates in the Kennedy bill today, all of which were rejected by the President's own commission.

Rules for utilization review, section 115 in S. 6, the Kennedy bill: Rejected by the commission. Provider non-discrimination based on licensure, rejected by the commission.

The point is not so much each of these and the sections I have enumerated here, 151, 302, 112, 151. The point is, in this body, as we go forward, we have to be very careful in all of the rhetoric and all of our commitment and all of our hard work, legitimately, on both sides, to protect patients. We have to be very careful not to go too far out of good intentions, to the point that it is unnecessary, if they do not need those rights, and it also drives the cost up.

So when you go through the Kennedy bill and see these mandates, President Clinton's own Advisory Commission on Consumer Protection and Quality looked at them, considered them, but rejected them.

Why? I cannot tell you for sure why because I was not in the room, but I think it comes back to the amendment we are talking about today and to what they have actually said in their guiding principles: Costs do matter.

The commission has sought to balance the need for stronger consumer rights—

Just as we are in our Republican Patients' Bill of Rights Plus bill—with the need to keep coverage affordable. . . . Health coverage is the best consumer protection.

I look back at Tennessee. Looking at the uninsured and the costs associated with the underlying Kennedy bill, the number in Tennessee that we throw to the ranks of the uninsured would be 20,872. Again, we talked about the 1.8 million nationwide. Look to our own individual States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I will close simply by saying I am very glad this amendment was brought to the floor because very early on it says this debate is more, it is in addition to just patient protections. Why? Because the ultimate patient protection means you get good quality of care and you have access to that care. So over the next several days our primary objective is to increase that quality of care, strong patient protections, but do all that without hurting people, without throwing them to the ranks of the uninsured.

That is our challenge. That is why I am very proud of our underlying Republican bill and look forward to supporting it and gathering more support as we go over the next several days.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

If neither side yields time, time will be charged equally.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, what is the time situation?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The side of the Senator from Massachusetts has 35 minutes; the other side has used up all its time.

Mr. KENNEDY. It is our intention to respond to these arguments briefly and then offer an amendment. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, as we see in this institution, there are amendments which are offered that are poison pill amendments. They are amendments that effectively kill legislation. That is really the purpose of this; we ought to be very clear about it. Senator GRAMM of Texas has indicated if that amendment is accepted, this whole debate comes to a halt and it ends any possibility of a Patients' Bill of Rights. That is what we are faced with at this time.

We will have an opportunity to judge whether the Senate wants to end any consideration of a Patients' Bill of Rights—or whether this is an issue that ought to be considered—when we vote on that particular amendment. We will have a chance to vote on the various amendments we have outlined and presented in different forms. We will continue to discuss these amendments over the course of this debate.

One of the techniques used in this institution—perhaps less so now than in the past—is to present the opposition's arguments with distortion and misrepresentation, and then differ with the distortions and misrepresentations. We saw a classic example of that with my good friend, the Senator from Texas, Mr. GRAMM. He went through this whole routine about what was in this bill and then he, in his wonderful way, differed with it, like only he had common sense and understanding of what is in that legislation.

Before responding to that, I start out with the basic core issues, which have been raised again and again by those who are opposed to our bill: One, costs; and, two, coverage.

When all is said and done and after we have listened to the distortions and misrepresentations of our good Republican friends, here is, majority leader TRENT LOTT on NBC "Meet the Press" saying: By the way, the Democrat's bill would add a 4.8 percent cost.

This is the Republican majority leader agreeing with the Congressional Budget Office figures. Maybe the other side gets a great deal of satisfaction—they certainly take a lot of time to distort and misrepresent the facts. But let's look at 4.8 percent—or even 5 percent—impact on a family's premium over 5 years. The family's premium might be $5,000 a year. Looking cumulatively at 5 percent—1 percent a year—that would be $250 for the total of 5 years, $50 a year.

You can misrepresent the figures, you can distort the figures, you can frighten the American people, which is a common technique; it was done on family and medical leave. Do you remember that argument put out by the Chamber of Commerce about the cost of family and medical leave to American business? They still cannot document it. Do you remember, when we had the minimum wage debate, claims about the cost to American business? They still cannot document it. As a matter of fact, Business Week even supports an increase in the minimum wage.

Now on the third issue, here it comes again, the bought-and-paid-for studies by the insurance industry. That is what these studies are all about. They are bought and paid for by the insurance companies, and they distort and misrepresent.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I will not yield at this time. You would not yield last evening when I was trying to ask Republicans about particular provisions.

How many times did we hear from the other side: Let's rely on the Congressional Budget Office, they know what is best. We were just with the President of the United States. He said every time he sat down with the Republican leadership, they said: We will not do anything unless we get the CBO figures.

We have given you the CBO figure. The majority leader agrees with the CBO figure. Let's put that aside.

The second issue is coverage. The issue is whether more people will lose their health insurance coverage because we are going to do all of the things that Senator GRAMM talked about. I yield to no one on the passage of health care in order to expand coverage. The idea that the groups in support of this particular proposal would support a proposal which means that 2 million Americans would lose coverage is preposterous on its face. On the one hand, they are so busy over here saying: Look who is supporting your program, the AFL-CIO. Do you think they are going to support legislation—I yield myself 2 more minutes—that will cause 2 million Americans to lose coverage? Are we supposed to actually believe that? Or all the many groups—I will not take the time to enumerate them—that support a comprehensive program to expand coverage? That is poppycock. That is baloney. They even understand that in Texas. It is baloney.

The idea that 180,000 women are going to lose breast cancer screening, 52,000 a year are going to lose mammograms, 135,000 women in this country are going to lose Pap tests when the American Cancer Society supports us lock, stock, and barrel—come on, let's get real. Whom do you think you are talking to, the insurance companies again? Can you imagine a preposterous statement and comment like that coming from the Senator from Texas? That just goes beyond belief.

I will make a final comment or two about freedom. We heard a lot about freedom. Remember that, we heard all yesterday afternoon about freedom? We heard about freedom this morning. We heard about freedom: We are for freedom. The other side is not for freedom, but we are for freedom. Support our position, you will be for freedom.

The insurance companies want freedom from accountability. That is what they want, freedom to undermine good quality health care for children, for women who have cancer, for the disabled. That is what they want—freedom from accountability and responsibility.

That is baloney, too. We want accountability. I am surprised to hear from the other side all the time about how they want personal responsibility and accountability.

I ask for another 2 minutes.

They always want personal responsibility and accountability with the exception of HMOs. Sue your doctors, fine, but not your HMOs, not your insurance companies, not those that have paid $100 million and effectively bought this Republican bill—yes; that is right—those provisions are dictated by the insurance companies.

That is what we have. The American people are too smart to buy that.

I know there are others who want to speak. I yield back my time.

AMENDMENT NO. 1237 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1236

(Purpose: To provide coverage for certain items and services related to the treatment of breast cancer and to provide access to appropriate obstetrical and gynecological care, and to accelerate the deductibility of health insurance for the self-employed)

Mr. KENNEDY. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY], for Mr. ROBB, for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mrs. BOXER, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. REID, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. DASCHLE and Mr. BYRD proposes an amendment numbered 1237 to amendment No. 1236.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Parliamentary inquiry. That amendment is offered on behalf of Senator ROBB and others; is that so?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. I would like to make a few comments. I will not address the amendment that was just sent to the desk, but I would like to respond to my colleague.

First, I started to call Senator FRIST. Sometimes I call him because we need help on the floor to debate things, such as medical necessity or other medical procedures. This time I thought I would call him because I thought we might need him because I was afraid somebody might have a heart attack getting so excited in the debate.

But let me just touch on a couple of comments that my good friend and colleague, Senator KENNEDY, made. He said: Enough about this cost stuff. He said: That was done by some study that was bought and paid for by the insurance companies.

Correct me if I am wrong, but I stand corrected if the Congressional Budget Office is bought and paid for by the insurance companies. If so, I would like to know it. I am not aware of that.

My colleague alluded to the fact that Republicans are bought and paid for. He was close to getting a rule invoked. I do not think he meant to say that. I will let that go.

I am not going to make allusions that trial lawyers have bought one side or that the unions have bought one side, although he did mention that the unions support his bill. It just happens to be that the unions are exempt from his bill. That is interesting. They are exempt for the duration of their contracts.

So his bill basically tells every private employer: You have to rewrite your contract next year, except for unions. Oh, if you have unions, you don't have to redo it until the end of your contract. If the contract is for 4 years, you don't have to touch it for 4 years. But anybody else, you rewrite it next year.

Maybe that is the reason the unions have signed on. Maybe there are other reasons or other special interest groups that have gotten into his bill.

But back to the cost. My colleague says: Well, it is only 1 percent per year. CBO says the cost would be 6 percent when it is fully implemented in 3 years—not 5 years. So Senator KENNEDY is able to say: Well, we think it is about 5 percent over 5 years; therefore, it is a 1-percent per year cost increase. And employees only pay 20 percent, which is how he gets his one Big Mac per month. It just does not work. It does not equate. The bill, when fully implemented, is 6.1 percent. That is in 3 years, and the cost is $355 per year.

If that happens, you are going to have a lot of people, according to CBO—not some study financed by the insurance companies—who are going to lose their coverage, a lot of people who are going to get less quality coverage, people who are going to have to pay a greater percentage of the coverage, people who are going to have to pay a greater percentage of the premiums if we pass the Kennedy bill. That is the bad news. The good news is we are not going to pass it.

But I think we have to stay with the facts. The facts are that the Kennedy bill increases costs dramatically and increases the number of uninsured dramatically. That would be a serious mistake. That is something we are not going to allow to happen.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Before the Senator speaks, may I do two quick things?

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Renato Mariotti, an intern, be allowed on the floor during this debate today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I ask unanimous consent that I follow Senator ROBB after we get back from caucuses, that I be first in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ROBB addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia has 10 minutes.

Mr. ROBB. Thank you, Mr. President. And I thank my colleague from Massachusetts.

Mr. President, while I would concede that most Members of this body are very concerned about issues that have special relevance to women, we all too often leave much of the advocacy on those issues to women who are colleagues in the Senate. In a legislative body with only 9 women and 91 men, the amount of time focused on issues of special concern to women is often skewed. As someone who has always prided himself on standing up for equality of opportunity, that seems profoundly unfair.

Women's health—and, specifically, the choices women have in our health care system—ought to be a special concern to everyone.

As a father of three daughters, I have come to better understand that the types of health care women need and the way they access it are often very different from the health care needs of men.

Unfortunately, our health care system has long ignored some important facts about women's health. During this important debate on the Patients' Bill of Rights, I have offered an amendment that would do something to correct that. I rise to explain the amendment which was just sent to the desk which will help women get the medical care they need.

The amendment has been crafted with Senators MURRAY, BOXER, and MIKULSKI and will remove two of the greatest obstacles to quality care that women face in our current system today: No. 1, inadequate access to obstetricians and gynecologists; and, No. 2, inadequate hospital care after a mastectomy.

We know today that for many women, their OB/GYN is the only physician they regularly see. While they have a special focus on women's reproductive health, obstetricians and gynecologists provide a full range of preventive health services to women, and many women consider their OB/GYN to be their primary care physician.

Unfortunately, some insurers have failed to recognize the ways in which women access health care services. Some managed care companies require a woman to first visit a primary care doctor before she is granted permission to see an obstetrician or gynecologist. Others will allow a woman to obtain some primary care services from her OB/GYN but then prohibit her from visiting any specialists to whom her OB/GYN refers her without first visiting a standard primary care physician. This isn't just cumbersome to women; it is bad for their health.

According to a survey by the Commonwealth Fund, women who regularly see an OB/GYN are more likely to have had a complete physical exam and other preventative services—like mammograms, cholesterol tests, and Pap smears.

At a time when we need to focus our health care dollars more toward prevention, allowing insurers to restrict access to health professionals most likely to offer women preventative care only increases the possibility that greater complications and greater expenditures arise down the road.

We ought to grant women the right to access medical care from obstetricians and gynecologists without any interference from remote insurance company representatives. This amendment is designed to do just that.

I offer this amendment on behalf of my colleagues because the Republican bill, which has been offered for the purposes of debate by Senator DASCHLE, will not grant women direct access to care.

First of all, their bill only covers a limited percentage of the women who have health care insurance in our country, leaving more than 113 million Americans without any basic floor for patient protections. Then, for the minority of patients that they do cover, the Republicans offer only a hollow set of protections but leave many women without direct access to the care they need. While their bill would allow a woman to obtain routine care from an OB/GYN, such as an annual checkup, the bill would not ensure that a woman can directly access important followup obstetrical or gynecological care after her initial visit. For example, if a woman were to have a Pap smear during a routine checkup at her gynecologist, and that Pap smear came back abnormal, the Republican bill would not guarantee that she could access important followup care from the same doctor.

Instead, their bill would allow insurers to force her to go back to a primary care gatekeeper physician to get permission for a followup visit to her gynecologist. This may sound unbelievable, but a recent survey showed that women face this obstacle 75 percent of the time. In addition, the Republican bill will now allow a woman to designate her OB/GYN as her primary care provider.

Their provision ignores one of the basic facts about the ways women receive health care in America today. While OB/GYNs have a special expertise on women's reproductive systems, they are also trained at primary care. For women, their OB/GYN is the only doctor that they see on a regular basis.

Because many of these women consider their OB/GYN to be their primary care physician, they depend on him or her for the full range of diagnostic and preventative services that are offered by other general practitioners. Statistics show that women are more likely to have had a physical from an OB/GYN in the past year than from any other doctor. One survey from the University of Maryland showed that OB/GYNs provide 57 percent of the general physical exams given to women. In another survey, when asked who they go to for primary care, 54 percent of the women said it is to their OB/GYN.

We know how women access primary care and we know that by allowing them to get this care, their health care will improve. Yet insurers often ignore the fact that many women rely on their OB/GYN for primary care, making it more difficult for them to access preventative care and other services.

Our amendment will grant women more direct access to health care professionals that they have come to depend upon.

The second piece of this amendment will address the inhumane treatment that some women have received after they have experienced the trauma of a mastectomy. Each year, millions of women are screened for cancer by mammogram and, sadly, nearly 200,000 of them are diagnosed with breast cancer.

The options women face in such circumstances are difficult, and in a time of great uncertainty, women ought not be forced to face unnecessary additional burdens. Unfortunately, some women have been told by their health insurer that a mastectomy will only be covered on an outpatient basis. Given the trauma that a woman faces with such major surgery, both physical and emotional, it is unconscionable that some insurers refuse to cover proper hospital care after a mastectomy. Much like the restrictions on access to obstetricians and gynecologists, these restrictions on hospital care after such traumatic surgery are simply bad for women's health. After a mastectomy, doctors tell us that hospitalization is often critical to foster proper healing, as well as to provide support to women who have just experienced the emotional trauma of such major surgery.

Our amendment will return control over this important medical decision to the medical professionals and ensure that doctors who actually know and examine their patients, not some distant, impersonal insurance company representative, make decisions about the length of stay in the hospital following a mastectomy. It would put into law the recommendations of the American Association of Health Plans, who said in 1996, that:

The decision about whether outpatient or inpatient care best meets the needs of a woman undergoing removal of a breast should be made by the woman's physician after consultation with the patient . . . as a matter of practice, physicians should make all medical treatment decisions based on the best available scientific information and the unique characteristics of each patient.

Although this commonsense, important provision was included in legislation offered by the other side of the aisle last year, it has inexplicably been dropped from their bill this year. We cannot, however, retreat from our commitment to the health and well-being of the women of America.

Finally, this amendment would help self-employed women and, indeed, all self-employed Americans better access affordable health insurance by making the cost of their insurance fully tax deductible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 10 minutes has expired.

Mr. ROBB. I ask for 1 additional minute.

Mr. KENNEDY. Fine. Are we still recessing at 12:30?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes. That is the order.

Mr. ROBB. Finally, this amendment would help self-employed women and, indeed, all self-employed Americans better access affordable health care by making the cost of their insurance fully tax deductible. The current tax system penalizes self-employed individuals, and this amendment will ensure they are treated equally.

I am concerned that the bill offered by the other side doesn't even cover 70 percent of Americans with health insurance. I am even more concerned, however, that the protections they offered to this limited number of Americans doesn't reflect the health needs of half of our population, the women in our population.

I know we can do better. We should do better. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment which recognizes the critical needs facing the women in this country today.

With that, I yield the floor, and I reserve any time remaining on my side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous unanimous consent, the Senator from Minnesota—

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that consent agreement be vacated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 2½ minutes to the Senator from Washington and 2½ minutes to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise as a sponsor of this amendment to protect women's health. This amendment offers true security to women; it deals with women's access to health care and women's treatment when they receive that care. This amendment ensures women get more than just routine care when they visit their obstetrician/gynecologist and it protects women against the pain and danger of so-called drive-through mastectomies.

While the underlying Republican bill does allow access to OB/GYN care, the HELP Committee went to great lengths to ensure women only had access for routine care—and nothing more. Let me quote from the committee report, "The purpose of this section is to provide women with access to routine OB/GYN care by removing any barriers that could deter women from seeking this type of preventive care." While the Republicans recognize the need for direct access, the language of their bill and their report makes it clear that direct access is guaranteed only for routine care.

Let me explain what that means. If during a routine examination, a woman's OB/GYN finds a lump or an inconsistency in her breast, the OB/GYN would not be allowed to refer the patient for further examination. Instead, the woman would have to go back to the gate keeper and hope that her primary care physician approved the referral. We should all agree this is a waste of time and energy—time and energy that would be better spent dealing with the potential breast cancer.

A recent study conducted by the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists shows that managed care plans are keeping women from receiving the health care they need and seeing the providers they choose. Sixty percent of all women who need gynecological care and 28 percent of all women who need obstetric care are either limited or barred from seeing their OB/GYNs without first getting permission from another physician. Once the patient is able to gain access to her own OB/GYN, she is forced to return to her primary care gate keeper for permission to allow her OB/GYN to provide necessary follow-up care almost 75 percent of the time.

What my Republican colleagues fail to understand is that women need OB/GYN care for much more than simple routine care. They also fail to understand the important relationship between a woman and her own OB/GYN. OB/GYN providers are often a woman's only point of entry into the health care system.

Our amendment would allow women direct access to OB/GYN care and follow-up care as well. It would also allow a woman to designate an OB/GYN provider as her primary care physician. We know historically that women have not been treated equally in receiving health care. We know that some physicians do not treat women with the same aggressive strategies as they treat their male patients, especially when women complain about depression or stress.

What we do know is that OB/GYNs have traditionally been strong advocates for women's health. They understand the physical and emotional changes a woman experiences throughout her life. The 1993 Commonwealth Fund Survey of Women's Health found the number of preventive services received by women, including a complete physical exam, blood pressure test, cholesterol test, breast exam, mammogram, pelvic exam, and pap smear, are higher for those whose regular physician is an OB/GYN than for those whose primary care doctor is not. Women are simply afforded greater access to preventive and aggressive health care services with OB/GYNs.

I am not sure why some of my Republican colleagues want to deny unobstructed access to important health care services for women. It cannot be about costs. The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the cost of direct access and primary care by OB/GYNs as only 0.1 percent of premiums. If my colleagues are so concerned about costs, can't they at least guarantee that women get the quality health care they pay for? This amendment ensures they will.

The other important provision in this amendment prohibits drive through mastectomies. It is outrageous that current trends in health care could force women to endure a mastectomy on an outpatient basis. It is wrong to send these women home to deal with the emotional and physical pain of the operation—as well as with the responsibility for draining surgical wounds and performing other post-surgical care. These women should not be abandoned during their time of need.

However, our amendment does not require a woman to stay in the hospital. Our amendment does not require a hospital stay for a set number of hours. Our amendment does require that the physician, in consultation with the patient, decides how long the woman should remain in the hospital. The physician determines what is medically necessary and what is in the patient's best interest.

I cannot believe there is anyone in this chamber who would want to see a loved one go through a mastectomy and be forced by her insurance company to go home immediately. If we have any compassion at all we should adopt this provision.

Let me respond to one criticism I've heard about this amendment from insurance companies. Some have claimed they do not have a policy of drive through mastectomies. I commend them and hope they would support this amendment to prohibit this cruel practice by other companies. I would also add that while most insurance companies may not engage in this kind of outrageous behavior today, how can we insure they will not tomorrow?

Our amendment is about protecting and improving women's health. For that reason, the College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists support it. If my colleagues truly consider themselves champions of women's health, they must vote for this amendment. I can assure you that women will not be fooled by the empty promises in the Republican bill. We know the difference between routine and comprehensive OB/GYN care. We know how traumatic and life-altering a mastectomy can be. We know we need real protection and this amendment provides it.

Mr. President, I especially thank Senator ROBB for his leadership on this issue.

He is right. There are only nine women in the Senate. We shouldn't have to rush to the floor to defend all of the women in this country every time an issue comes up that affects women's health. This is an issue that affects men as well. It affects their daughters, their wives and mothers, their aunts. I appreciate Senator ROBB and his leadership in making sure that women are protected when it comes to their health care.

Senator ROBB did an excellent job of outlining what our amendment does. It does two basic things:

It allows a woman the right to choose an OB/GYN as her primary care physician. As every woman in this country knows, their OB/GYN, their obstetrician/gynecologist, is the doctor they go to, whether it is for pregnancy, whether it is for breast cancer, whether it is for health care decisions that affect them later on in life. We want to make sure that women have access to those doctors without having to go back to a primary care physician.

When a woman is pregnant and she gets an ear infection, she may be treated dramatically different than someone else who has an ear infection, for example. A woman needs to have access to the OB/GYN, and this amendment Senator ROBB and I and the other Democratic women are offering assures the woman that access.

Secondly, it deals with the so-called drive-through mastectomy legislation where too many HMOs today are telling a woman after this radical surgery—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. MURRAY. I ask unanimous consent for an additional 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. MURRAY. Too many women today are told they need to go home before they are ready to take care of themselves or their families. This amendment doesn't designate a time. It says the doctor will determine whether that woman is ready to go home after this radical surgery.

I commend my colleagues for this issue. I urge the Members of the Senate to stand up, finally, for women's health and vote for this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I thank Senator Robb and Senator KENNEDY for their support of this very crucial legislation. We, the women of the Senate, really turn to men we call the "Galahads," who have stood with us and been advocates on very important issues concerning women's health.

Often we have had bipartisan support. I ask today that the good men on the other side of the aisle come together and support the ROBB amendment. We have raced for the cure together. We have done it on a bipartisan basis. Certainly, today we could pass this amendment. I challenge the other party to vote for this amendment because what it will do is absolutely save lives and save misery.

There are many things that a woman faces in her life, but one of the most terrible things that she fears is that she will go to visit her doctor and find out from her mammogram and her physician that she has breast cancer. The worst thing after that is that she needs a mastectomy. Make no mistake, a mastectomy is an amputation, and it has all of the horrible, terrible consequences of having an amputation. Therefore, when the woman is told she can come in and only stay a few hours—after this significant surgery that changes her body, changes the relationships in her family, she is told she is supposed to call a cab and go back home; it only adds to the trauma for her.

Well, the ROBB amendment, which many of us support, really says that it is the doctor and the patient that decides how long a woman should stay in the hospital after she has had the surgery. Certainly, we should leave this to the doctor and to the patient. An 80 year old is different than a 38 year old. This legislation parallels the D'AMATO legislation that had such tremendous support on both sides of the aisle. I say to my colleagues, if we are going to race for the cure, let's race to support this amendment.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, Senator BYRD is on his way here. He has asked for 1 minute. If the Senator from Oklahoma would indulge me, he should be here momentarily. I ask unanimous consent that Senator BYRD be entitled to 1 minute when he gets here, which should be momentarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, how much time remains before the recess?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unanimous consent allows 1 minute.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may speak for not to exceed 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate is finally considering managed care reform legislation. I believe that the Democratic version of the Patients' Bill of Rights is the right vehicle on which to bring reform to the nation.

Our colleague from Virginia, Mr. ROBB, has offered an amendment that highlights an important aspect of managed care that needs to be fine-tuned, and that is women's access to health care. This amendment would allow a woman to designate her obstetrician/gynecologist (ob/gyn) as her primary care provider and to seek care from her ob/gyn without needing to get preauthorization from the plan or from her primary care provider. Even though many women consider their ob/gyn as their regular doctor, a number of plans require women to first see their primary care provider before seeing their ob/gyn. This means that a costly and potentially dangerous level of delay is built into the system for women. This amendment would allow a woman's ob/gyn to refer her to other specialists and order tests without jumping through the additional hoop of visiting the general practitioner.

This amendment would also address the care a woman receives when undergoing the traumatic surgery of mastectomy. This provision would leave the decision about how long a woman would stay in the hospital following a mastectomy up to the physician and the woman. Some plans have required that this major surgery be done on an outpatient basis. In other instances, women have been sent home shortly after the procedure with tubes still in their bodies and still feeling the effects of anesthesia. This should not be allowed to happen. Plans should not put concern about costs before the well-being of women.

The Republican bill does not provide women with sufficient access to care. Plans would not be required to allow women to choose their ob/gyn as their primary care provider. In addition, the Republican bill would allow health plans to limit women's direct access to her ob/gyn to routine care which could potentially be defined by a plan as one visit a year. In addition, "drive-through mastectomies" would not be prevented under their bill.

Mr. President, the Robb amendment contains commonsense protections women need and deserve. I urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.

I yield the floor.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:30 having arrived, the Senate will now stand in recess until the hour of 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:36 p.m., recessed until 2:16 p.m.; whereupon the Senate reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. BENNETT).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from New Hampshire is recognized to speak for up to 45 minutes.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I ask I be recognized for a period of time, approximately 45 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the order, the Senator from New Hampshire is recognized for 45 minutes.

LEAVING THE REPUBLICAN PARTY, A DECISION OF CONSCIENCE

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, as many of you know, it has been a very difficult period of time for me these past several days. I want to recognize the sacrifices of my wife and three children over the past several weeks as I agonized through this gut-wrenching political decision. My wife, Mary Jo, and my daughter, Jenny, and son, Bobby, and son, Jason, have had to endure the ups and the downs and the difficulties of making such a decision. I am deeply grateful to them for their support and comfort because, without them, I could not really have gotten through it all.

My first political memories are of talking to my grandfather, who was a died-in-the-wool Republican. He always said he would vote for a gorilla on the Republican ticket if he had to. I remember conversations with him about the Dewey-Truman campaign. He was obviously for Dewey. It didn't work out very well. But I can also remember having conversations with my classmates, telling them that I, too, was for Dewey and explaining why I was for Dewey in that election.

At that time I was 7 years old. Years went by, and, in 1952, in the Eisenhower-Stevenson election, I was 11 years old. I bet a friend, who lived down the road and had a farm, a dollar versus a chicken that Eisenhower would win the election. I won, and my grandfather immediately drove me down to my neighbor's farm to pick up the chicken I had won. The young man's parents graciously acknowledged that I won the bet and provided me a nice barred rock hen that laid a lot of eggs over the next year or so.

In 1956, I volunteered to pass out literature for Eisenhower, and, as a college student, I worked for Nixon in 1964. But 1964 was the first election I voted in. Barry Goldwater's campaign was the one that really sparked my conservative passions. I worked as a volunteer in the Nixon campaigns in 1968 and 1972, but it wasn't like the Goldwater campaign. I remember walking into the booth, saying, this is a man I really believe in, and I said I really felt good about that vote.

In 1976, these conservative passions were again awakened while I worked for the conservative Ronald Reagan in the New Hampshire primaries against the incumbent President of the United States, Gerald Ford—not an easy thing to do for a lot of us who were basically grassroots idealists, if you will, who believed that Ronald Reagan should win that primary. In those days I was not a political operative; I was not a Senator; I was not a candidate; I was not an elected official. I was a teacher, a coach, a school board member, husband, father, small businessman—just an ordinary guy who cared about his country. I got involved because I cared, and I believed deeply in the Republican Party.

I came to this party on principle, pretty much initiating with Barry Goldwater but certainly finalized with Ronald Reagan. I was disappointed in Reagan's loss in 1976 because I believed that grassroots conservatives in the party, who had worked so hard for Reagan, lost to what I considered the party elitists, the establishment, who were there for Ford because he was President, not with the same passion that was out there for Reagan.

Watching that convention in 1976, I remember those enthusiastic grassroots party members who were unable to defeat that party machinery that was so firmly behind the incumbent

President. I remember seeing the tears in their eyes, and the passion. It was a difficult decision. It was close, as we all remember—just a few delegates. That was 1976. At that time, as a result of the election, it inspired me to run for political office for the first time.

When Reagan sought the nomination again in 1980 I ran in the primary, hoping to be part of this great Reagan revolution. Reagan was pro-life. He was for strengthening our military. He was anti-Communist. He was patriotic. He brought the best out in the American people. I was excited. In all those years that Reagan was President, the criticism, the hostile questions, the political cheap shots, he rose above it all. And most of them, indeed probably all who criticized him, weren't qualified to kiss the hem of his garment. He rose above them all. He was the best.

As a result of that, I began a grassroots campaign in 1979, and I lost by about a thousand votes with seven or eight candidates in the race, including one candidate, ironically, who was from my hometown. It was tough, but I decided to come back again in 1982, after losing, because I still wanted so much to be a part of the Reagan revolution. So I did come back in 1982. And that, my colleagues and friends, is when I had the first taste of the Republican establishment.

I had a phone call that I thought was a great sign. I had a call from the National Republican Party. Boy, was I excited. They told me that some representatives wanted to come up to New Hampshire from Washington to meet with me. They came to New Hampshire. We sat down at a meeting. It was brief. They asked me to get out of the race, please, because my opponent in the primary had more money than I did and had a better chance to win. I had been a Republican all my life, a Republican in philosophy, but that was my first experience with what we would call the national Republican establishment. I did not get out of the race. I beat my wealthy opponent in the primary, and I received the highest vote percentage against the incumbent Democrat that any Republican had ever received against him, and it was 1982, which was a pretty bad year for Republicans, as you all remember.

In 1984, several candidates joined the Republican primary again for an open seat in the Reagan landslide. Now everybody wanted it because the seat was open. I was just a school board chairman from a small town of 1,500, no political power base, no money, but I beat, in that primary, the president of the State senate, who was well known, and an Under Secretary of Commerce who was well financed. They still do not know how I did it, but it was door to door, and I fulfilled my dream of coming to Washington as part of the Reagan revolution in Congress.

I then had successful reelections in 1986 and 1988 and, of course, was elected to the Senate in 1990 and 1996. In the Reagan era, as in the Goldwater era, the pragmatists took a back seat to those who stood on principle. Idealists ruled; those who stood up for the right to life, a strong national defense, the second amendment, less spending, less taxes, less government. Man, it was exciting. Even though we were a minority in the Congress, it was exciting because Reagan was there. Principles in, pragmatism out. Man, it was great to be a Republican.

In 1988, a skeptical—including me—conservative movement rallied behind the Vice President in hopes that he would continue the revolution.

The signal that this revolution was over was when the President broke his "no new tax" pledge. We let pragmatism prevail. We compromised our pledge to the voters and our core principles, and we allowed the Democrats to take over the Government.

In 1994, idealism again came back. The idealistic wing of the party took charge. Led by Newt Gingrich, we crafted an issues-based campaign embodied in the Contract With America. We put idealism over pragmatism, and we were rewarded with a tremendous electoral victory in 1994, none like I have ever seen. I remember sitting there seeing those results come in on the House. I was happy for the Senate, but I was a lot happier for the House. Those of us who were there know how it felt.

As we moved into the 1996 elections, we again began to see this tug-of-war between the principal ideals of the party and the pragmatism of those who said we need "Republican" victories. Conservatives became a problem: We have to keep the conservatives quiet; let's not antagonize the conservatives, while the pragmatists talked about how we must win more Republican seats. Conservatives should be grateful, we were told, because we were playing smart politics, we were broadening the case. Elect more Republicans to Congress, elect more Republicans to the Senate and win the White House. What do we get? Power. We are going to govern.

In meeting after meeting, conference after conference, the pollsters and the consultants—and I have been a part of all of this. Mea culpa, mea culpa, mea maxima culpa. I have been involved in it. I am not saying I have not, but the pollsters and consultants advised us not to debate the controversial issues. Ignore them. We can win elections if we do not talk about abortion and other controversial issues, even though past elections have proven that when we ignore our principles, we lose, and when we stick to our principles, we win. In spite of all this, we continued to listen to the pollsters and to the consultants who insisted day in and day out they were right. Harry Truman, a good Democrat—my grandfather did not like him, but I did—said, "Party platforms are contracts with the people." Harry Truman was right.

Why did we change? We won the revolution on issues. We won the revolution on principles. But the desire to stay in power caused us to start listening to the pollsters and the consultants again who are now telling us, for some inexplicable reason, that we need to walk away from the issues that got us here to remain in power. Maybe somebody can tell me why.

Some of the pollsters who are here now who we are listening to were here in 1984. Indeed, they were here in 1980 when I first ran. I had always thought the purpose of a party was to effect policy, to advocate principles, to elect candidates who generally support the values we espouse, but it is not.

Let me be very specific on where we are ignoring the core values of our party.

"We defend the constitutional right to keep and bear arms," says the platform of the Republican Party, but vote after vote, day after day, that right is eroded with Republican support. I announced my intention to filibuster the gun control bill. Not only does it violate the Republican platform, but it violates the Constitution itself, which I took an oath to support and defend.

Then I hear my own party is planning to work with the other side to allow more gun control to be steamrolled through the Congress which violates our platform. Not only does it violate our platform, it insults millions and millions of law-abiding, peaceful gun owners in this country whose rights we have an obligation to protect under the Constitution.

The Republican platform says:

We will make further improvement of relations with Vietnam and North Korea contingent upon their cooperation in achieving a full and complete accounting of our POWs and MIAs from those Asian conflicts.

Sounds great. So I got up on the floor a short time ago and offered an amendment saying that "further improvement of relations with Vietnam are contingent upon achieving a full and complete accounting of our POWs and MIAs. . ."—right out of the platform word for word. Thirty-three Republicans supported me. The amendment lost.

The platform says:

Republicans will not subordinate the United States sovereignty to any international authority.

Only one—right here, BOB SMITH—voted against funding for the U.N. I can go through a litany—NAFTA, GATT, chemical weapons, and so forth. Vote after vote, with Republican support, the sovereignty of the United States takes a hit in violation of the platform of the Republican Party and the Constitution.

The establishment of our party and, indeed, the majority of our party voted to send $18 billion to the IMF. Let me make something very clear. I am not criticizing anybody's motives. Everybody has a right to make a vote here, and there is no argument from me on that. But I am talking about the relationship between the platform and those of us who serve.

This $18 billion came from the taxpayers of the United States of America, and it went to a faceless bureaucracy with no guarantee that it would be spent in the interest of the United States. We have no idea where this money will go and no control of it once it goes there.

Meanwhile, while $18 billion goes to the IMF, I drive into work and I find Vietnam veterans and other veterans lying homeless on the grates in Washington, DC, in the Capital of our Nation. How many of them could we take care of with a pittance of that $18 billion?

As Republicans who supposedly support tax relief for the American family, can we really say that $18 billion to IMF justifies taking the money out of the pocket of that farmer in Iowa who is trying to make his mortgage payment? Can we really say that? I do not think so.

Another quote out of the Republican platform:

As a first step in reforming Government, we support elimination of the Departments of Commerce, Housing and Urban Development, Education, and Energy, the elimination, defunding or privatization of agencies which are obsolete, redundant, of limited value, or too regional in focus. Examples of agencies we seek to defund or privatize are the National Endowment for the Arts, the National Endowment for the Humanities, the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and the Legal Services Corporation.

That is right out of the Republican platform. If I were to hold a vote today to eliminate any of these agencies, it would fail overwhelmingly, and it would be Republican votes that would take it down. Every Republican in this body knows it.

Can you imagine how much money we could save the taxpayers of this country if we eliminated those agencies and those Departments that the platform I just quoted calls for us to eliminate? It is not what I call for; it is what our party platform calls for. Why don't we do it? The answer is obvious why we don't do it: because we do not mean it, because the platform does not mean it. We do not mean it.

In education, our platform:

Our formula is as simple as it is sweeping: The Federal Government has no constitutional authority to be involved in school curricula or to control jobs in the workplace. That is why we will abolish the Department of Education, end Federal meddling in our schools, and promote family choice at all levels of learning. We therefore call for prompt repeal of the Goals 2000 and the School to Work Act of 1994 which put new Federal controls, as well as unfunded mandates, on the States. We further urge that Federal attempts to impose outcome- or performance-based education on local schools be ended.

If I were to introduce a bill on the Senate floor to end the Department of Education, to abolish it, how many votes do you think I would get? How many Republican votes do you think I would get?

If, as Truman said, it is a contract, then we broke it. Where I went to school, breaking a contract is immoral, it is unethical, and it is unprincipled, and we ought not to write it if we are going to break it. Let's not have a platform.

Our party platform says also:

We support the appointment of judges who respect traditional family values and the sanctity of innocent human life.

Listen carefully, I say to my colleagues.

In 1987, when President Ronald Reagan nominated Robert Bork to the Supreme Court, six Republicans voted against him, and he was rejected. What was Robert Bork's offense? That he stood up for what he believed in, that he was pro-life? He told us. He answered the questions in the hearing. God forbid he should do that. But when President Clinton nominated Ruth Bader Ginsburg, an ACLU lawyer who is stridently pro-abortion, only three Republicans voted no—Senator HELMS, Senator NICKLES, and myself.

Of course, all of the Republicans who voted against Bork voted for Ginsburg. I voted against Ginsburg because, as the Republican platform says, I want judges who respect the sanctity of innocent human life. I want my party to stand for something. Thirty-five million unborn children have died since that decision in 1973—35 million of our best—never to get a chance to be a Senator, to be a spectator in the gallery, to be a staff person, to be a teacher, to be a father, a mother—denied—35 million, one-ninth of the entire population of the United States of America. And we are going to do it for the next 25 years because we will not stand up. And I am not going to stand up any more as a Republican and allow it to happen. I am not going to do it.

Most interestingly, since that Roe V. Wade decision was written by a Republican, I might add, a Republican appointee, and upheld most recently in the Casey case, it is interesting there was only one Democrat appointee on the Court, Byron White, who voted pro-life. He voted with the four-Justice, pro-life minority. Five Republican appointments gave us that decision.

We are to blame. This is not a party. Maybe it is a party in the sense of wearing hats and blowing whistles, but it is not a political party that means anything.

About a week ago, my daughter, who works in my campaign office, told me the story of a 9-year-old girl whose dad called our office to say that his little daughter, 9-year-old Mary Frances—I will protect her privacy by giving only her first name—had said that she was born because of an aborted pregnancy, not an intentional one, an aborted pregnancy, a miscarriage at 22 weeks—22 weeks, 5½ months—and she lived.

She is 9 years old. She said: I want to empty my piggy bank, Senator SMITH, and send that to you because of your stand for life because I know that children who are 5½ months in the womb can live.

That is power.

Let me read from the pro-life plank of the Republican Party:

[W]e endorse legislation to make clear that the Fourteenth Amendment's protections apply to unborn children.

Anything complicated about that? Anything my colleagues don't understand about that?

We endorse legislation to make clear that the Fourteenth Amendment's protections apply to unborn children.

We are not going to apply any protections to unborn children. We will pass a few votes here, 50-49, if you can switch somebody at the last minute. I have been involved in those. Yes, we will do that, but we will not win. We are not going to commit to putting judges on the courts to get it done. Oh, no, we can't do that because we might lose some votes. So meanwhile another 35 million children are going to die.

This year I sponsored a bill out of the platform that says the 14th amendment's protections apply to unborn children. Do you want to know how many sponsors I have? You are looking at him. One. Me. That is it. Not one other Republican cosponsor.

In his letter to me—nice letter that it was—from Chairman Nicholson, he claims that "every one of our Republican candidates shares your proven commitment to life"—he says. Gee, could have fooled me. Then how come every candidate isn't endorsing the bill or speaking out on the platform if they don't want to endorse the bill?

The party, to put it bluntly, is hypocritical. It criticizes Bill Clinton, a Democrat, for vetoing partial-birth abortion and for being pro-abortion, but it does not criticize our own. It does not criticize the Republicans who are pro-choice. So why criticize Bill Clinton? Or why criticize any Democrat? We cannot get it done. We don't say anything about those people.

How about the Governors who vetoed the bill, the partial-birth abortion bill? You know, there are a lot of fancy words in the Republican platform. Every 4 years we go to the convention and we fight over the wording. Sometimes even a nominee says: Well, I haven't read it. At least he is being honest. Or, which is probably more the truth, we just ignore it. It is a charade. And I am not going to take part in it any more. I am not going to take part in it any more.

In the movie "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," after his own political party has launched attacks on him for daring to raise an independent voice, Jimmy Stewart's character is seated on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, and here is what he says: "There are a lot of fancy words around this town. Some of them are carved in stone. Some of 'em, I guess, were put there so suckers like me can read 'em."

You ought to watch the movie. It is a good movie. It will make you feel good.

Mr. President, I have come to the cold realization that the Republican Party is more interested in winning elections than supporting the principles of the platform. There is nothing wrong with winning elections. I am all for it. I have helped a few and I have won some myself, and there is nothing wrong with it. But what is wrong with it is when you put winning ahead of principle.

The Republican platform is a meaningless document that has been put out there so suckers like me and maybe suckers like you out there can read it. I did not come here for that reason. I did not come here to compromise my values to promote the interests of a political party.

I came here to promote the interests of my country. And after a lot of soul-searching, and no anger—no anger—I have decided to change my registration from Republican to Independent. There is no contempt; there is no anger. It is a decision of conscience.

Many of my colleagues have called me, and I deeply appreciate the conversations that I have had privately with many of you on both sides, but I ask my colleagues to respect this decision. It is a decision of conscience. Millions and millions of Independents and conservative Democrats and members of other political parties have already made this decision of conscience. As a matter of fact, there are more Independents than there are Republicans or Democrats.

I would ask you to give me the same respect that you give them when you ask them to vote for you in election after election. Indeed, we win elections because of Independents.

I found a poem, written by a man by the name of Edgar Guest, which my father, who was killed at the end of the Second World War, when I was 3 years old, had placed in his Navy scrapbook in 1941, just prior to going off to war in the Pacific—newly married about 2½ years. I can imagine what was going through his mind. But he placed it in his scrapbook and highlighted it.

I am just going to quote one excerpt. The poem is entitled, "Plea for Strength."

Grant me the fighting spirit and fashion me stout of will,

Arouse in me that strange something that fear cannot chill.

Let me not whimper at hardship.

This is the gift that I ask.

Not ease and escape from trial,

But strength for the difficult task.

Many have said that what I am doing is foolish. I have heard it from a lot of people—friends and colleagues. But you know what Mark Twain said—I think the Chaplain will like this:

I am a great and sublime fool. But, then I am God's fool. And all His works must be contemplated with respect.

I called Senator LOTT last week personally. It was the most difficult telephone call I think I had ever made.

I told him it was my intention to continue to vote in caucus with the Republicans, if he wanted me, provided that there was no retaliatory or punitive action taken against me. He was very gracious. He didn't like it—I don't blame him—but he was gracious. I appreciate his understanding, and I appreciate the compassion and understanding of many of my colleagues on both sides who have spoken with me these past few days.

I made another phone call, Mr. President. I called the chairman of the Republican Party, Mr. Jim Nicholson, last week to inform him of my decision and asked him if he could please maintain confidentiality until I had a chance to make my decision public. Before I had a chance to do that—indeed, about 20 hours after I had made the call—my home was staked out in New Hampshire. Where I was going to visit friends, their homes were staked out, sometimes until late into the evening, by the media, because the chairman put out a letter attacking me personally.

I am not going to dignify the letter by reading it here on the Senate floor. I do ask unanimous consent that the letter be printed into the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE,

Washington, DC, July 9, 1999.

Hon. ROBERT C. SMITH,
Dirksen Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR SMITH, I am writing concerning published reports that you have decided to abandon the Republican party and seek the Presidential nomination of a third party instead.

I believe this would be a serious mistake for you personally, with only a marginal political impact—and a counterproductive one, at that.

This would not be a case of the party leaving you, Bob, but rather of you leaving our party. Far from turning away from the conservative themes we both share, the party has championed them—and become America's majority party by doing so.

I truly believe, Bob, that your 1% standing in New Hampshire doesn't reflect Republican primary voters' rejection of your message, but rather its redundancy. Every one of our Republican candidates shares your proven commitment to life and to the goals of smaller government, lower taxes and less regulation of our lives and livelihoods—as does the party itself. In other words, I hope you do not confuse the success of our shared message with your own failure as its messenger.

I also urge that you reconsider turning your back on your many Republican friends and supporters, people who've always stood by you, even in the most difficult and challenging times. Most of all, I hope you will think of your legacy: it would be tragic for your decades of work in the conservative movement to be undone by a short-sighted decision whose only negligible impact would be to provide marginal help to Al Gore, the most extreme liberal in a generation.

Sincerely,

JIM NICHOLSON,
Chairman.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. I will only characterize the letter in the following way: It is petty, it is vindictive, and it is insulting. It is beneath the dignity of the chairman of any political party. It is an affront to the millions of voters who choose not to carry a Republican membership card but have given the party its margin of victory in election after election.

Remember that little girl I talked to you about a little while ago, Mary Frances? I do not know what she is going to grow up to be. She might be a Democrat. She might be a Republican. Maybe she will be an Independent. Maybe she won't vote. I don't know. But I'll tell you what, in the old baseball tradition, I wouldn't trade her for 1,000 Jim Nicholsons, not in a minute.

There was talk on the shows this weekend that I might be removed as chairman of the Ethics Committee. I must say, I was disappointed at the intensity of the attacks on me by unidentified sources, I might add, in the Republican Party. Interestingly, one of those reports was that the party is considering suing me for the money it spent during my reelection.

I want to make it very clear, because press reports were inaccurate on one point. Senator MCCONNELL called me personally yesterday to clarify that this particular report of a lawsuit is not true, and I accept his answer as absolute fact with no question. But some faceless party bureaucrat had a really good time writing that and then leaking it to the press. That is what is wrong with politics. He ought to be fired, but you will never find out who it is.

Another interesting report was that a different party operative presumed to suggest that "Smith should be booted out of the conference altogether if he is not a Republican; he shouldn't be in the Republican caucus." I wonder how much he is being paid to sit up there using up the party faithful's contributions to write that kind of garbage.

The chairman of the New Hampshire Republican Party, where for 15 years I have been a member, went on "Crossfire" the other night to debate BOB SMITH, but BOB SMITH wasn't there to answer for himself. He took the anti-BOB position. He attacked me viciously, saying it was a selfish move and that it meant the end of my political career.

There is something a little strange in that. If it is selfish and I am throwing away my political career, maybe somebody can explain what he means. Not a mention of 15 years of service to the State and to the party. Even Bill Press said: Can't you find something nice to say about BOB?

That is what is wrong with politics. It is the ugly. It is the bad. It is the worst. It is the worst.

In 1866 Abraham Lincoln said this—it is a very famous quote:

If I were to try to read, much less answer, all the attacks made on me, this shop might as well be closed for any other business. I do the very best I know how, the very best I can, and I am going to keep right on doing so until the end. If the end brings me out all right, what is said against me won't amount to anything. If the end brings me out wrong, 10 angels swearing I was right will make no difference.

Lincoln really knew how to say it. In a way, perhaps Chairman Duprey is right about my being selfish. I am putting my selfish desire to save my country ahead of the interests of the Republican Party, and some nameless, faceless bureaucrat in the party machinery decides to take off on me. I wish he would surface. I would like to meet him.

If that is selfish, then Duprey is right. If putting your country ahead of your party, if standing up for the principles you believe in is wrong, maybe it is time to get out of politics.

Over the past 15 years I have traveled all over America helping Republican candidates. I don't very often ask for help. I don't remember ever asking for help from the Republican Party to do it. I spent hours and hours on the phone raising money. And the party has helped me; I will be the first to admit it. Some have made a big deal out of that. They should help me. I think that is what the party is there for. I went to California, Louisiana, Iowa, Missouri, and North Carolina during the last year on behalf of Republican candidates. It had nothing to do with my Presidential campaign; it was entirely on behalf of other candidates. When the chairman of the senatorial committee asked Members to pony up money, he gave me a bill. He said: You have X in your account, and you owe me $25,000. I wrote him a check the next day. Everybody didn't do it though, did they, Mr. Chairman?

I have a bureaucrat out there somewhere in the party saying throw me out of the caucus. Frankly, I gave without hesitation because I believed things were changing. I don't take a back seat in my willingness as a Republican to help candidates in need. But oh, no, I have committed the unforgivable sin here in Washington; I have exposed the fraud. It is a fraud, and everybody in here knows it.

It is true in both parties that the party platform is not worth the paper it is written on. That is why I am an Independent. That is why I am going to stay an Independent, whatever happens in the future. I am still the same formula. I am still Classic Coke. I am not a new Coke. I am the same ingredients. I have merely redesigned the label. It is the same BOB SMITH. My colleagues over there looking for help, you are not going to get it. You know where my votes come from, so don't get excited.

In my travels, I have attended hundreds of Republican Party events, but the most consistent message I hear from the voters is one of frustration, deep frustration that the party is not standing on principle. Last year CQ published a list of leading scorers on party unity. This is a list they do every year, ranking the most loyal Republican votes.

It is interesting because I don't look at them as loyalty votes. I just make the votes. Well, guess what. Let's see—LARRY CRAIG was here. He is not here right now. LARRY CRAIG and I were No. 1—very interesting, when you look down the list. So I am No. 1 in party loyalty. How many major committee chairmen in the conference are on the list? Take a look at the list. I am not going to embarrass colleagues.

I am the most reliable Republican vote in the Senate, but I am attacked—not by colleagues, not by colleagues. It is obvious from these kinds of attacks that it is not about me. What it shows is a complete and final divorce between the party machinery and the principles for which it professes to stand. I say, with all due respect to my colleagues in the Senate, whether you are running a campaign for President or whether you are in the House or something else, we have to stop it. We have to get a handle on it. I think it is true in the other party as well.

We have to get a handle on it. They don't represent us well. It is an injustice to the candidates who run for and the people who serve in the Republican Party, and it has to stop. It is a cancer, and it is eating away at the two great political parties that rose to power; in this case, the Republican Party that rose to power on the moral opposition to slavery; and it killed the Whig Party, because it wouldn't stand up against slavery. It will kill the Republican Party if it doesn't stand up for what it believes in, especially against abortion.

I told you I watched the movie "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington" again over the weekend. I remember talking to Mike Mansfield, who was here a few weeks ago for one of the seminars that the leader puts on. He said that after he left the Senate was the first time he really went around and looked at the monuments; he read the writings; he took the time to smell the roses. He said: These just aren't hollow words or statues anymore; they have meaning to me.

This morning—I am not trying to be melodramatic—but I did it. I left early, about 5:45. I took Jimmy Stewart's example from the movie "Mr. Smith Goes To Washington."

I went to the Lincoln Memorial, the Jefferson Memorial, the Vietnam Wall, and the Arlington Cemetery where my parents are buried. I tried to smell the roses. Do you know what? These aren't memorials to people who fought for political parties. Lincoln helped to destroy his own political party. On that visit to Arlington this morning, I stopped at my parents' grave site. My father didn't fight for a political party. He didn't die for a political party. He fought for his country, as millions of others have done, and the ideals for which it was founded. I looked out at those stones all across Arlington Cemetery, and I didn't see any R's or D's next to their names. Then I went to the Vietnam Wall, and I didn't see any R's or D's next to anybody's name there. How about that?

Like Jimmy Stewart's character in the movie, I stand right here at the desk of Daniel Webster, one of the greatest lawyers of all time, one of the greatest Senators of all time, whose picture is on statues everywhere. Most people probably could not even tell you what party he belonged to, unless you are a history buff. Who cares what party he belonged to? You will remember that he stood up against slavery, and his quote, "Nothing is so powerful but the truth." And the opposite was John C. Calhoun, Henry Clay, the great orators of their time. You remember them for what they were and what they said, not for their party. Webster was an abolitionist and Calhoun the defender of slavery.

Calhoun said:

The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts, bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or a party.

We have lost sight of it. Man, there is so much history in this place. My wife conducts tours for people from New Hampshire and at times people she finds on the streets. If we would just take a few moments away from the bickering and the arguing and look around and enjoy it, do you know what. It would inspire us. It inspired me today. Maybe I should be doing it every day. Every year, a Senator is chosen to read Washington's Farewell Address. I have been here 9 years and was never asked. I never understood how that person gets picked, but they do. How many of us have actually taken the time to sit and listen to that Farewell Address? Well, Washington, in that Farewell Address, warns us that:

The common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise people to discourage and restrain it.

He spends a large part of his speech expounding on this point, and I encourage my colleagues to read it.

I ask unanimous consent that the relevant sections of Washington's Farewell Address be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. In the spirit of what Washington is saying, I think we need to rid ourselves of the nastiness and the partisanship that has destroyed the comity of this great body and has become a barrier to a full and spirited discussion of the issues in America generally. You may say: That is pretty good coming from SMITH; he is as partisan as they come. There is a time and place for partisanship. HARRY REID knows when I put the partisanship at the door. He knows, as cochair of the Ethics Committee with me.

Americans deserve an honest debate, an honest exchange of ideas. They want us to put these partisan interests aside. It is not partisan if somebody is against abortion or is for abortion; it is issue generated.

Americans want people who will lead, not follow polls. The American people are losing the faith in their ability to effect change, and rightfully so.

Since I came to Washington, I have seen Senators and Congressmen come and go. Do you know what. I will tell you what doesn't go. I refer to the entrenched political industry that is here to stay. Oh, it changes a little bit at the top when somebody else becomes the chairman. But the entrenchment is still there. The pollsters, the spin doctors, and the campaign consultants are all there. They all have their hands in your pockets, and they are doing pretty well.

They run the show, for the most part. They don't directly choose candidates in the sense of a smoke-filled backroom, but they do influence it because they are the ones who tried to talk me out of running in 1980—the same ones.

Some of the pollsters in the party have been around since I first came to town. Every time there is a Republican retreat—and I assume it is the same for the other party—and often at Republican conferences here in the Senate, we hear from the professional consultants and pollsters. They tell us what the message should be. They tell us how to make ourselves look good and how to make the other guys look bad.

We need to get out the fumigation equipment. We need to clean out the pollsters, the consultants, the spin doctors, and the bloated staffs who tell us what to say, how to say it, when to say it, and how long to say it. The American people elected us. Isn't it time we start thinking for ourselves and leading?

This well-paid political industry, let me tell you, colleagues, is not interested in whether or not you believe in the issues of your party. Don't kid yourselves. This is about power, access, and jobs. I can have tea and crumpets with the President of the United States if I help him win it. As long as you look like a winner, it doesn't matter what you believe. Don't kid yourselves. They seek out the candidates who have the package they want—name ID, money, slickness. But, most importantly, they want candidates who won't make waves, or say anything controversial about an issue that might cost us a seat. They package you, wrap you up, put a little bow on it, tell you what to say, and then they sell you to the American voters.

The political professionals tell us all the time, "Don't be controversial; it can cause you to lose your election."

Why are we afraid of controversy? Was Lincoln afraid of it? Was FDR? Was Calhoun? Was Washington? With controversy comes change—positive change sometimes. Imagine Patrick Henry, striding up to the podium in 1773 before the Virginia Assembly, prepared to give his great speech: "Give me liberty or give me . . ." and then he turns to his pollster and says: I wonder whether they want liberty or death. I better take a poll and find out.

Let's not declare our independence; that is pretty controversial. They could have said that in 1776. Let's not abolish slavery; that is controversial.

In the 1850s, the great Whig Party said:

Let's not talk about slavery, it's too controversial. Let's put the issue aside and focus on electing more Whigs.

But a loyal Whig Congressman named Abraham Lincoln thought otherwise.

The pollsters come into the hallowed Halls in meetings of Senators to tell us how we can talk to people, to all the men who are 35 and over, what to say to them; and women 25 and under, what to say to them; to Social Security people; to black people; and what we should say to Hispanics; or white people; what do we say to pro-choice or to pro-life. Pollsters, pollsters, pollsters.

We are looking at polls to decide whether or not to go to Kosovo. We take a poll to decide whether or not we should send our kids to die in a foreign country. Did Roosevelt do a poll on whether or not to retaliate against the Japanese? Partisanship is poisoning this town. The pollsters are poisoning this town. Help members of your own party and destroy the other guy.

My proudest moment in the Senate in the 9 years I have been here—other than some of the meetings HARRY REID and I have had together where we have to discuss the futures of some of you quietly—was when we went into the Old Senate Chamber and talked during the impeachment trial. You know it, all of you; it was the best moment we have had since we have been here. We took the hats off and we sat down and talked about things, and we did it the right way.

I wanted to have every caucus that we had on the impeachment trial bipartisan; I didn't want any separation. But we didn't get that. Boy, what a delight it would have been had we done that. I am not saying it would have made the difference; maybe it would not have. But that is not the purpose of bringing it up. It is my belief that if we had come together and looked at the evidence—you never know.

I am proudest of my service on the Senate Ethics Committee where six Senators, including my good friend, Senator REID, and I, discuss issues without one iota of partisanship.

When we investigated Bob Packwood, a fellow Republican came up to me after that vote in which we voted to expel a colleague, and he was angry. He was a powerful Republican, and this was not an easy conversation. He scolded me, saying, "I can't believe that you would vote to expel a fellow Republican. It's outrageous. How can you do that?" I said, "You will have the opportunity to sustain or overrule that vote on the floor of the Senate very shortly."

He came back later and said: Thank you for saving me a difficult vote.

We on the committee ignored the partisan mud balls. We did what was right.

I am not ashamed of being a member of a political party. The question is, Does party take precedence over principle? I want the 21st century to be remembered for debating important and controversial issues in public: Abortion, taxes, size of government, restoring our sovereignty, gun control, moral decadence, freedom. Don't avoid these issues simply to help our own political fortunes or to destroy our opponents.

Lt. William Hobby, Jr., wrote a poem called "The Navigator" during the Second World War. I think it captures the vision and spirit of what I believe America should be.

The Morning Watch is mustered, and the middle watch withdrawn
Now Ghostlike glides the vessel in the hush before the dawn.
Friendly gleams polaris on the gently rolling sea,
He set the course for sailors and tonight he shines for me.

We have the opportunity to take America into the 21st century of freedom, morality, support for the Constitution, respect for life, respect for the sacrifices made for us by our founders and the millions of veterans who have given so much of their precious blood. Politics should be about each one of us joining together to rediscover our moral compass, to reignite the torch of freedom, to return to our navigational chart: The Constitution, the Declaration of Independence, and the Bible.

In conclusion, in the movie "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," Jimmy Stewart portrayed a U.S. Senator who believed that America was good, that politics was good, and that the American people deserve good, honest leaders. I agree.

Chaplain Ogilvie said to me a few weeks ago:

Our time in History is God's gift to us. What we do with it is our gift to him. Let's not squander it with petty partisan politics.

EXHIBIT 1

EXCERPTS FROM WASHINGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES

FRIENDS AND FELLOW CITIZENS: The period for a new election of a Citizen, to administer the Executive Government of the United States, being not far distant, and the time actually arrived, when your thoughts must be employed in designating the person, who is to be clothed with that important trust, it appears to me proper, especially as it may conduce to a more distinct expression of the public voice, that I should now apprise you of the resolution I have formed, to decline being considered among the number of those, out of whom a choice is to be made.

I beg you, at the same time to do me the justice to be assured, that this resolution has not been taken, without a strict regard to all the considerations appertaining to the relation, which binds a dutiful citizen to his country—and that, in withdrawing the tender of service which silence in my situation might imply, I am influenced by no diminution of zeal for your future interest, no deficiency of grateful respect for your past kindness; but am supported by a full conviction that the step is compatible with both.

The acceptance of, and continuance hitherto in, the office to which your suffrages have twice called me, have been a uniform sacrifice of inclination to the opinion of duty, and to a deference for what appeared to be your desire.—I constantly hoped, that it would have been much earlier in my power, consistently with motives, which I was not at liberty to disregard, to return to that retirement, from which I had been reluctantly drawn.—The strength of my inclination to do this, previous to the last election, had even led to the preparation of an address to declare it to you; but mature reflection on the then perplexed and critical posture of our affairs with foreign Nations, and the unanimous advice of persons entitled to my confidence, impelled me to abandon the idea.—

* * * * *

I have already intimated to you the danger of Parties in the State, with particular reference to the founding of them on Geographical discriminations.—Let me now take a more comprehensive view, and warn you in the most solemn manner against the baneful effects of the Spirit of Party, generally.

This Spirit, unfortunately, is inseparable from our nature, having its root in the strongest passions of the human mind.—It exists under different shapes in all Governments, more or less stifled, controuled, or repressed; but, in those of the popular form, it is seen in its greatest rankness, and is truly their worst enemy.—

The alternate domination of one faction over another, sharpened by the spirit of revenge natural to party dissension, which in different ages and countries has perpetrated the most horrid enormities, is itself a frightful despotism.—But this leads at length to a more formal and permanent despotism.—The disorders and miseries, which result, gradually incline the minds of men to seek security and repose in the absolute power of an Individual: and sooner or later the chief of some prevailing faction, more able or more fortunate than his competitors, turns this disposition to the purposes of his own elevation, on the ruins of Public Liberty.

Without looking forward to an extremity of this kind, (which nevertheless ought not to be entirely out of sight,) the common and continual mischiefs of the spirit of Party are sufficient to make it the interest and duty of a wise People to discourage and restrain it.—

It serves always to distract the Public Councils, and enfeeble the Public administration.—It agitates the community with ill-founded jealousies and false alarms, kindles the animosity of one part against another, fomented occasionally by riot and insurrection.—It opens the doors to foreign influence and corruption, which find a facilitated access to the Government itself through the channels of party passions. Thus the policy and the will of one country, are subjected to the policy and will of another.

There is an opinion that parties in free countries are useful checks upon the Administration of the Government, and serve to keep alive the Spirit of Liberty.—This within certain limits is probably true—and in Governments of a Monarchical cast, Patriotism may look with indulgence, if not with favour, upon the spirit of party.—But in those of the popular character, in Governments purely elective, it is a spirit not to be encouraged.—From their natural tendency, it is certain there will always be enough of that spirit for every salutary purpose,—and there being constant danger of excess, the effort ought to be, by force of public opinion, to mitigate and assuage it.—A fire not to be quenched; it demands a uniform vigilance to prevent its bursting into a flame, lest, instead of warming, it should consume.—

It is important likewise, that the habits of thinking in a free country should inspire caution in those entrusted with its administration, to confine themselves within their respective constitutional spheres; avoiding in the exercise of the powers of one department to encroach upon another.—The spirit of encroachment tends to consolidate the powers of all the departments in one, and thus to create, whatever the form of government, a real despotism.—A just estimate of that love of power, and proneness to abuse it, which predominates in the human heart, is sufficient to satisfy us of the truth of this position.—The necessity of reciprocal checks in the exercise of political power, by dividing and distributing it into different depositories, and constituting each the Guardian of the Public Weal against invasions by the others, has been evinced by experiments ancient and modern; some of them in our country and under our own eyes.—To preserve them must be as necessary as to institute them. If in the opinion of the People, the distribution or modification of the Constitutional powers be in any particular wrong, let it be corrected by an amendment in the way which the Constitution designates.—But let there be no change by usurpation; for though this, in one instance, may be the instrument of good, it is the customary weapon by which free governments are destroyed.—The precedent must always greatly overbalance in permanent evil any partial or transient benefit which the use can at any time yield.—

Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, Religion and morality are indispensable supports.—In vain would that man claim the tribute of Patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great Pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of Men and Citizens.—The mere Politician, equally with the pious man, ought to respect and to cherish them.—A volume could not trace all their connexions with private and public felicity.—Let it simply be asked where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation desert the oaths, which are the instruments of investigation in Courts of Justice? And let us with caution indulge the supposition, that morality can be maintained without religion.—Whatever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure—reason and experience both forbid us to expect, that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle.—

It is substantially true, that virtue or morality is a necessary spring of popular government.—The rule indeed extends with more or less force to every species of Free Government.—Who that is a sincere friend to it, can look with indifference upon attempts to shake the foundation of the fabric?—

Promote, then, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge.—In proportion as the structure of a government gives force to public opinion, it is essential that the public opinion should be enlightened.—

* * * * *

Observe good faith and justice towards all Nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all. Religion and Morality enjoin this conduct; and can it be that good policy does not equally enjoin it?—It will be worthy of a free, enlightened, and, at no distant period, a great nation, to give to mankind the magnanimous and too novel example of a People always guided by an exalted justice and benevolence.—Who can doubt that in the course of time and things, the fruits of such a plan would richly repay any temporary advantages, which might be lost by a steady adherence to it? Can it be, that Providence has not connected the permanent felicity of a Nation with its virtue? The experiment, at least, is recommended by every sentiment which ennobles human nature.—Alas! is it rendered impossible by its vices?

In the execution of such a plan nothing is more essential than that permanent, inveterate antipathies against particular nations and passionate attachment, for others should be excluded; and that in place of them just and amicable feelings towards all should be cultivated.—The Nation, which indulges towards another an habitual hatred or an habitual fondness, is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest.—Antipathy in one nation against another disposes each more readily to offer insult and injury, to lay hold of slight causes of umbrage, and to be haughty and intractable, when accidental or trifling occasions of dispute occur.—Hence frequent collisions, obstinate, envenomed and bloody contests.—The Nation prompted by ill-will and resentment sometimes impels to War the Government, contrary to the best calculations of policy.—The Government sometimes participates in the national propensity, and adopts through passion what reason would reject;—at other times, it makes the animosity of the Nation subservient to projects of hostility instigated by pride, ambition, and other sinister and pernicious motives.—The peace often, sometimes perhaps the Liberty, of Nations has been the victim.—

So likewise a passionate attachment of one Nation for another produces a variety of evils.—Sympathy for the favourite nation, facilitating the illusion of an imaginary common interest in cases where no real common interest exists, and infusing into one the enmities of the other, betrays the former into a participation in the quarrels and wars of the latter, without adequate inducement or justification: It leads also to concessions to the favourite Nation of privileges denied to others, which is apt doubly to injure the Nation making the concessions; by unnecessarily parting with what ought to have been retained, and by exciting jealousy, ill-will, and a disposition to retaliate, in the parties from whom equal privileges are withheld; and it gives to ambitious, corrupted, or deluded citizens, (who devote themselves to the favourite Nation) facility to betray, or sacrifice the interests of their own country, without odium, sometimes even with popularity:—gilding with the appearances of a virtuous sense of obligation, a commendable deference for public opinion, or a laudable zeal for public good, the base or foolish compliances of ambition, corruption, or infatuation.

As avenues to foreign influence in innumerable ways, such attachments are particularly alarming to the truly enlightened and independent Patriot.—How many opportunities do they afford to tamper with domestic factions, to practise the arts of seduction, to mislead public opinion, to influence or awe the public councils! Such an attachment of a small or weak, towards a great and powerful nation, dooms the former to be the satellite of the latter.

* * * * *

Relying on its kindness in this as in other things, and actuated by that fervent love towards it, which is so natural to a man, who views in it the native soil of himself and his progenitors for several generations;—I anticipate with pleasing expectation that retreat, in which I promise myself to realize, without alloy, the sweet enjoyment of partaking, in the midst of my fellow-citizens, the benign influence of good Laws under a free Government,—the ever favourite object of my heart, and the happy reward, as I trust, of our mutual cares, labours and dangers.

GEO. WASHINGTON.

UNITED STATES,
17th September, 1796.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PATIENTS' BILL OF RIGHTS ACT OF 1999

AMENDMENT NO. 1237

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, for the information of our colleagues, we were in the process of debating the Robb amendment dealing with mandatory length of stays for mastectomies. That is a second-degree amendment to an amendment I offered on behalf of myself, Senator GRAMM, and Senator COLLINS that had a limitation on the cost. The cost of the underlying bill cannot exceed 1 percent, nor could it increase the costs or increase the number of uninsured by over 100,000 or the bill would not be in effect.

Senator ROBB's amendment strikes the amendment that limits the 1-percent cost. It is our intention to finish the debate on the Robb amendment. We will vote on the Robb amendment, and it will be our intention for the Republican side to offer a second-degree amendment. We will debate that amendment and vote on it and work our way through the amendments that have been stacked today.

I ask the Parliamentarian how much time remains on the Robb amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has 46 minutes remaining and the minority has 28 minutes remaining.

Mr. NICKLES. I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Maryland.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, what does a woman do in a few days before she is scheduled to have a mastectomy? How should she spend her time? What should she be doing? Should she be on the phone calling her HMO, trying to figure out what will happen to her after surgery? Who will take care of her, how long will she be in the hospital? Should she be on the phone, dealing with bureaucracy? Should she be dealing with paperwork? Should she be on the phone, dealing with an insurance gatekeeper?

No, I do not think that is what she should be doing and I think the Senate will agree with me. I think she should be with her family. I think she should be talking with her husband, because he is as scared as she is. He is terrified that she might die. He is wondering how can he support her when she comes home.

She needs to talk to her children so that they understand that even though she is going in for an operation, they know their mother will be there when she comes back home but she might not be quite the same. She needs to be with her family. She needs to be with her clergyman. She needs to be with those who love her and support her.

This is what we are voting on here today. Who should be in charge of this decision? When a woman has a mastectomy she needs to recover where she can recover best. That should be decided by the doctor and the patient. We hear about these drive through mastectomies, where women are in and out in outpatient therapy. They are dumped back home, often sent home still groggy with anesthesia, sometimes with drainage tubes still in place or even at great risk for infection.

Make no mistake, we cannot practice cookbook medicine and insurance gatekeepers cannot give cookbook answers. An 80-year-old woman who needs a mastectomy needs a different type of care than a 38-year-old woman. And a 70-year-old woman whose spouse himself may be 80 might have different family resources than a 40-year-old woman.

Even the board of directors of the American Association of Health Plans states this: “. . . the decision about whether outpatient or inpatient care meets the needs of a woman undergoing removal of a breast should be made by the woman's physician after consultation with the patient.”

As I said earlier, we go out there and we Race for the Cure. Now we have to race to support this amendment. Let's look at what we have done with our discoveries. We in America have discovered more medical and scientific breakthroughs than any other country in world history. It is America who knew how to handle infectious diseases. It is America who comes up with lifesaving pharmaceuticals.

We have been working together on a bipartisan basis to double the NIH budget. We have joined together on a bipartisan basis to have mammogram quality standards for women. Now we have to join together on a bipartisan basis and pass this amendment.

We must continue our discovery, we must continue our research, and we must continue to make sure that we have access to the discoveries we have made.

This is what this amendment is all about. It allows a woman and her physician to make this decision.

Some time ago very similar legislation was offered by the former Senator of New York, Mr. D'Amato. People on the other side of the aisle had cosponsored this bill. What we are saying here is, if you cosponsored it under Senator D'Amato, vote for it under the Robb-Mikulski-Boxer-Murray amendment. This should not be about partisan politics.

Let's put patients first. Let's understand what is going to happen to a woman. Let's understand what is going to happen to her family. And let the doctors decide. I told my colleagues a few weeks ago—I recalled a few months ago I had gall bladder surgery. I could stay overnight because it was medically necessary and medically appropriate. Surely if I can stay overnight for gall bladder surgery a woman should be able to stay overnight when she has had a mastectomy.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank Senator KENNEDY for his work on this, and Senator MIKULSKI for her inspirational talk, and Senator ROBB for offering an amendment that I think is crucial to the women of this country. I am eternally grateful to him for putting this amendment together.

Earlier, Senator SMITH made a very eloquent talk about the need to set aside politics and do what is right for the people. I think we have an extraordinary opportunity to do that on this Patients' Bill of Rights. It is really very simple to do. Whether we are Democrats or Republicans or Independents, we can set all that aside and follow this simple rule, asking every time we vote: What is best for the people of our Nation? That is it, the simple question: What is best for the children? What is best for the women? What is best for the men? What is best for the families, the old or the young, et cetera.

The Robb amendment is good for American women. As a matter of fact, the Robb amendment is crucially needed. It is desperately needed. The Senator from Maryland was eloquent on the point. Think about finding out you have breast cancer and learning you have to have a mastectomy. You do not need to be a genius to understand that you want a doctor making the decision as to how long you stay in the hospital.

It is very simple: Mastectomies are major surgery. Cancer is life-threatening and difficult. It is physical pain. It is mental anguish for you and your family. You don't want an accountant or a chief operating officer in an HMO telling you to leave after a few hours, with tubes running up and down you and being sick as a dog and throwing up and all the rest. I hate to be graphic about it, but we have to come to our senses in this debate. What is the argument against this? It is going to cost more? We know the CBO says it is maybe $2 a month to obtain all the benefits in the Patients' Bill of Rights. I think it is worth $2 a month to know a doctor makes the decision.

I want to talk about the CEOs of these HMOs. They make millions of dollars a year. They are skimming off the top, off of our health care quality, and putting it in their pockets. They make $10 million a year, $20 million a year, $30 million a year—one person. If his wife comes down with cancer and needs a mastectomy, do you think he is going to leave the decision to an accountant in an HMO? You know he is not. He is going to dig into his pocket, into his $30-million-a-year pocket, and pay for her to obtain good care.

What about the average woman? What about our aunts and our uncles and our neighbors? They deserve the same kind of attention and care. That is what the Robb amendment will do.

It will do something else. Again, I am so grateful to the Senator from Virginia on this point. Senator MURRAY had offered the mastectomy amendment in committee, and even Senators who were on the original Feinstein-D'Amato bill, Republican Senators, voted against her amendment in the committee. She is on the floor fighting for this.

Senator SNOWE and I, in a bipartisan way, introduced a bill that would require your OB/GYN, your obstetrician/gynecologist, to be your basic health care provider. Senator ROBB has included that in his amendment.

The reality is that a woman does consider her OB/GYN as her primary care physician. Let's make it a guarantee that her OB/GYN can refer her to a specialist. You do not have to jump through hoops.

Mr. President, 70 percent of the women in this country use their OB/GYN as their only physician from the time they are quite young. So the Robb amendment recognizes the reality.

Let me tell you why we should come together, both parties, on this amendment. Let's look at what happens to women who regularly see an OB/GYN. A woman whose OB/GYN is her regular doctor is more likely to have a complete physical exam, blood pressure readings, cholesterol test, clinical breast exam, mammogram, pelvic exam, and Pap test.

This is why it is so important. These are the threats to women.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 5 minutes have expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 1 minute.

Mrs. BOXER. So you can see that the women who use their OB/GYN on a regular basis get what is necessary for them to stay healthy, to avoid the traumas, to avoid the problem of missing, for example, a breast cancer because they do not have that regular mammogram.

In conclusion, we have Senator ROBB who has long been a champion for women's health, and I can tell you chapter and verse that I have worked with him over these years and he has taken the most important issues to the women of this country and has rolled them into one, plus an additional part that deals with the deductibility of premiums if you are self-employed.

This is a wonderful amendment. This is not an amendment that responds to Democrats, Republicans, or any other party. It is for American women and their families. I urge us to support this fine amendment.

I yield back my time.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I take 30 seconds to note that on Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 on the Patients' Bill of Rights, on an issue that is so basic and fundamental and important to American women, we have our Members who are prepared to debate this issue, an issue on which, if my colleagues on the other side have a difference, we ought to be debating. We cannot even get an engagement of debate on this.

I do not know if that means they are willing to accept it. I would have thought they would have the respect at least for the position of several Members, led by our friend and colleague from Virginia, to speak to this issue.

I yield the Senator from Arkansas 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mrs. LINCOLN. I thank my colleague.

Mr. President, I rise today to make clear my position on such a very important issue. In the forefront of the managed care debate in the early nineties, I diligently supported the concept of trying to manage care, to control the cost of health care in this country in order to provide more health care to more Americans. When we did that, we in Congress never envisioned that medical decisions would be taken away from medical professionals or that an insurance company would circumvent a patient's access to specialists.

Again we are debating this issue of how to provide better health care for more Americans. Today we are talking about the Robb amendment which is absolutely essential to women across this country.

Managed care has been a very necessary and useful tool in our nationwide health care network. It has helped us cut the costs, especially in Medicare. But the issue of making sure women have the opportunity to choose as their primary care giver an OB/GYN is absolutely essential. Most women in this day and age go from a pediatrician to an OB/GYN. To have to go back through a primary care giver in order to see an OB/GYN is absolutely ridiculous.

It is so important to do more to see that women have access to quality care. The Robb amendment takes us in the right direction with three very important provisions. It provides women with direct access to an OB/GYN. They should not have to obtain permission from a gatekeeper. I have had staffers in the past who had awful experiences of having to go to a primary care giver and not even bothering to see their OB/GYN to get the speciality care they needed because it took so much time to go through a primary care giver. That is absolutely inexcusable in this day and age with the kind of speciality care, research, and knowledge we have in our medical professionals.

A great example: A lump is discovered in a woman's breast during a routine checkup. The OB/GYN ought to be able to refer that woman for a mammogram rather than sending her back to the primary care physician. The Robb amendment would designate the OB/GYN as the primary care giver. Most women try to do that already. They already view their OB/GYN as their primary physician.

It is especially important for women in rural areas. They are limited in their access and capability to get to their physicians, and if they cannot see an OB/GYN from a rural area, then they likely are never going to get the speciality care they need and deserve.

Most important, we have to make sure our physicians are able to make those medical decisions. One of the most frustrating comments I ever heard from my husband, who is a physician, is when he spent 1 hour 45 minutes on the telephone with an insurance adjuster after seeing one of his partner's patients who had come through surgery. She was still running a fever, and the nurse called him and said: We have to send this woman home because the insurance company said we had to.

He spent 1 hour 45 minutes on the phone with that insurance adjuster, and at the end of that conversation he finally said: If you can send me your medical diploma and if you will sign an affidavit that you will take complete responsibility for this woman's life, then, and only then, should I be able to discharge her from this hospital, because she is sick.

Yet they were not going to pay for it. He said: We are going to keep her in the hospital, and you are going to be responsible, you are going to pay for that bill, and we are going to ensure the woman is well taken care of.

It is so important for the women across this country to know they will have the primary care they need through their OB/GYN.

I appreciate my colleagues' involvement.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to the Senator, the manager of the bill, can he indicate to me why no debate is taking place on the most important amendment we have had to the Patients' Bill of Rights in the 2 days we have been here? What has happened?

Mr. KENNEDY. The Senator raises a good question. We are not going to take advantage of the absence of our Republican colleagues. We are asking where they are. We know they are someplace. I can understand why they do not want to engage in this debate. We have a limited period of time. We are ready to debate. Our cosponsors are here and ready to debate this basic, very important issue. I believe they have made a very strong case.

I guess what they are waiting for is for us to run through the time and perhaps they will come out. Wherever they are, they will come out perhaps at least to try to defend their indefensible position on their legislation.

I note the Senator from Minnesota is here and wants to speak for 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I did not rise to defend the Republican Party position. I am sorry to disappoint my colleagues. I say to the good Senator from Virginia, I am not here to speak against his amendment.

I do find it interesting. I do not think I can repeat with the same eloquence and power what my colleagues have said about what this debate is about in personal terms when we are talking about women. But we could also be talking about a child having to get access to the services he or she needs. This is really a life-or-death issue. It is very important for people to make sure their loved ones, whether it be a wife, a husband, or children, get the care they need and deserve. That is what this debate is all about.

I notice that the insurance industry is spending millions and millions of dollars on all sorts of ads talking about how we are going to have 1.8 million more people lose coverage.

All of a sudden, the insurance industry is concerned about the cost of health care insurance. All of a sudden, the insurance industry in the United States of America is concerned about the uninsured. My colleague from Massachusetts says: Where are our colleagues on the other side of the aisle? Not too long ago, just a couple of hours ago, I heard colleagues come out on the Republican side and talk about how this patient protection was too expensive, families would lose their insurance company, the poor insurance industry—which is making record profits—cannot afford to provide this coverage. Where are they now?

As I look at the figures, 10 leading managed care companies recorded profits of $1.5 billion last year. United Health Care Corporation, $21 million to its CEO; CIGNA Corporation, $12 million to its CEO; and the figures go on and on. Yet we have colleagues coming out to this Chamber—apparently not now—trying to make the argument, even though the Congressional Budget Office says otherwise, even though independent studies say otherwise, that we cannot provide decent patient protection for women because it will be too expensive.

It is not going to be too expensive. What will be too expensive and what will be too costly is when women and children and our family members do not get the care they need and deserve and, as a result of that, maybe lose their lives, as a result of that they are sicker, as a result that there is more illness.

Where do the patients fit in? Where do the women fit in? Where do the children fit in? Where do the families fit in?

I say to Senator KENNEDY, we know where the insurance industry fits in. Here are their ads: Sure, the Kennedy-Dingell bill will change health care; people will lose coverage.

This is outrageous. The insurance industry thinks that by pouring $100 million, or whatever, into TV ads and scaring people, they are going to be able to defeat this effort. They are wrong. The vote on this amendment, and on other amendments, and on this legislation, will be all about whether Senators belong to the insurance industry or Senators belong to the people who elected us. We should be here advocating for people, not for the insurance industry.

I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes 14 seconds.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the Senator from Virginia 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I thank you. And I thank our distinguished colleague from Massachusetts for his leadership on this whole bill.

I use this moment to simply commend our colleagues, who happen to be women, who have made the most passionate, persuasive case for this particular amendment that could be made.

Frankly, in listening to my colleague from Maryland about the agony women go through before they have to make a decision about a mastectomy, talking about the difficult choices that women have to make, and adding to it the bureaucracy, where we bounce them back and forth, and talking about money—for this particular amendment, I have heard one estimate that it will be 12 cents a year for the increased cost—we will probably, I suggest, save more money in the lack of administration and bureaucracy than it would cost if we allow women to have as their designated primary care provider their obstetrician or gynecologist. This is the person they go to right now to receive their health care, as pointed out so eloquently by the Senator from California.

As the Senator from Arkansas has noted, this is a very real problem. Her husband happens to practice this particular form of medicine. She gave us a compelling reason as to why we should not subject the women of America to this kind of burden.

I am very grateful to my colleague from Washington, who has long led the fight on this particular issue, and my colleague from Minnesota, and others who have spoken out.

I, frankly, do not understand the argument against this particular proposal. There is no one here to make that argument. I am, frankly, surprised. This makes sense for the women of America.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, with that, I yield back my time to the Senator from Massachusetts so we might hear again from the Senator from Washington.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Thank you, Mr. President,

Again, I thank my colleague from Virginia, Senator ROBB, and all of the women and men on the Democratic side who have come out to speak for the Robb-Murray-Mikulski-Boxer amendment, which is so essential to women in this country.

I am astounded that the Republicans have fled the Chamber and have not returned to either agree with us in fighting for women's health or to explain why they are going to vote no.

I was astounded in committee when I offered this amendment and it was defeated on a partisan vote. Where are our colleagues on the Republican side who have come before us so many times and said that they are going to be there at the Race for the Cure? Where are the men of the Senate, when they have been there so many times, saying: You bet we stand for women's health.

This is a women's health issue. Young girls go to a pediatrician until they are 12, 13, or 14. At that time, they change doctors, not a primary care physician but an OB/GYN. Why should they be subjected now to HMO rules that say: We are going to change this, and you are going to have to go to a primary care physician in order to be sent to an OB/GYN? OB/GYNs are our primary care physicians.

As I stated this morning, if you are pregnant and have a serious cold or ear infection, or any other challenging problem that develops when you are pregnant, you will be given a different medication, a different procedure that you need to go through than if you are not pregnant.

Your OB/GYN is your primary care physician from the time you are a teenager until the time you reach menopause, whether you are there because you are pregnant or there because a physician is examining you to determine treatment. But you are there. The OB/GYN is your primary care physician. This amendment will guarantee it.

As Senator MIKULSKI so eloquently stated, a woman who has a mastectomy should not be sent home too soon whether she is 25 years old or 80 years old. In this country, on a daily basis, women are sent home too soon because it is considered, by HMOs, to be cosmetic surgery. This is not cosmetic surgery. A mastectomy is serious surgery. Women should be sent home when their doctor determines they are able to go home. That is what this amendment is about.

We urge our colleagues on the other side to vote with us, to join with us in being for women's health care.

I thank my colleagues who have been here to debate this issue. I especially thank Senator ROBB, who has been a champion for all of us. I look forward, obviously, to the adoption of this amendment since no one has spoken out against it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's side has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, we are reaching the final moments for considering this amendment. We, on this side, who have been strong supporters of the Patients' Bill of Rights, think this is one of the most important issues to be raised in the course of this debate. It is an extremely basic, fundamental, and important issue for women in this country.

Our outstanding colleagues have presented an absolutely powerful and indisputable case for our positions. We are troubled that we have had silence from the other side.

We listened yesterday about how beneficial the Republican bill was—when it refuses to provide protections to the millions of Americans our colleagues have talked about.

We are down to the most basic and fundamental purpose of our bill; that doctors and, in this case, women are going to make the decision on their health care needs, not the bureaucrats in the insurance industry.

This is one more example of the need for protections. Our colleagues have demonstrated what this issue is really all about. That is why I hope those Members on the other side that really care about women's health will support this amendment.

Mr. President, we are prepared to move ahead and vote on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

If neither side yields time, time runs equally against both sides.

Mr. KENNEDY. Do I have 1 minute left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Seventeen seconds.

Mr. JEFFORDS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. How much time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-five minutes 15 seconds.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I know that my worthy opponents have made note of our absence. We are not ignoring this issue. We have a better answer. There will be a Snowe-Abraham amendment presented, probably tomorrow, that will handle this issue. I think the Members will agree that the approach we take will be preferable to the one being taken right now.

I would like to address my colleagues generally on the situation at this time. The Patients' Bill of Rights Act addresses those areas of health quality on which there is broad consensus. It is solid legislation that will result in a greatly improved health care system for all Americans.

The Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, the HELP Committee, has been long dedicated to action in order to improve the quality of health care. Our commitment to developing appropriate managed care standards has been demonstrated by the 17 additional hearings related to health care quality. Senator FRIST's Public Health and Safety Subcommittee held three hearings on the work of the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, sometimes referred to as AHCPR. Each of these hearings helped us to develop the separate pieces of legislation that are reflected in S. 326, the Patients' Bill of Rights Act. People need to know what their plan will cover and how they will get their health care.

The Patients' Bill of Rights requires full disclosure by an employer about health plans it offers to employees. Patients also need to know how adverse decisions by a plan can be appealed, both internally—that is, within the HMO—and externally, through an independent medical reviewer. Under our bill, the reviewer's decision will be binding on the health plan. We are talking about an external, outside reviewer, and it is binding. There is no appeal. It is binding. They have to do it. However, the patient will retain his or her current rights to go to court.

Timely utilization decisions and a defined process for appealing such decisions are the keys to restoring trust in the health care system. Our legislation also provides Americans covered by health insurance with new rights to prevent discrimination based on predictive genetic information. This is a crucial provision. It ensures that medical decisions are made by physicians in consultation with their patients and are based on the best scientific evidence. That is the key phrase. We want to remember that one because you won't see it on the other side.

It provides a stronger emphasis on quality improvement in our health care system with a refocused role for AHCPR, taking advantage of all the abilities we have now to understand better what is going on with respect to health care in this country, to sift through the information that comes through AHCPR and make judgments on what the best medicine is.

Some believe that the answer to improving our Nation's health care quality is to allow greater access to the tort system, maybe a better lawsuit. However, you simply cannot sue your way to better health. We believe that patients must get the care they need when they need it. They ought not to have to go to court with a lawsuit. They ought to get it when they need it. It is a question of whether you want good health or you want a good lawsuit.

In the Patients' Bill of Rights, we make sure each patient is afforded every opportunity to have the right treatment decision made by health care professionals. In the event that does not occur, patients have the recourse of pursuing an outside appeal to get medical decisions by medical people to give them good medical treatment. Prevention, not litigation, is the best medicine.

Our bill creates new, enforceable Federal health standards to cover those 48 million people of the 124 million Americans covered by employer-sponsored plans. These are the very same people that the States, through their regulation of private health insurance companies, cannot protect. We will protect them.

What are these standards? They include, first, a prudent layperson standard for emergency care; second, a mandatory point of service option; direct access to OB/GYNs and pediatricians—that has not been recognized by the opposition—continuity of care; a prohibition on gag rules; access to medication; access to specialists; and self-pay for behavioral health.

It would be inappropriate to set Federal health insurance standards that duplicate the responsibility of the 50 State insurance departments.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Senator yield on that issue?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I am happy to yield.

Mr. KENNEDY. Can the Senator show us one State that has the patient protections included in our proposal? Is there just one State in this country, one State that provides those types of protections?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I believe Vermont does.

Mr. KENNEDY. All of the protections for the patients? I know the Senator understands his State well, but does the Senator know of any other State that provides these kinds of protections?

Mr. JEFFORDS. We are going to provide them with better protections.

Mr. KENNEDY. The scope of your legislation only includes a third of all the people who have private health coverage.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Well, in some areas we go beyond that, as the Senator well knows.

Mr. KENNEDY. No, I don't know. I don't know, because you talk about self-insured plans, and there are only 48 million Americans in those plans. You don't cover the 110 million Americans who have other health insurance plans.

Does the Senator know a single State that provides specialized care for children if they have a critical need for specialty care—one State in the country? We provide that kind of protection. Does the Senator know a single State that has that kind of protection?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I tell you, we have a better health care bill. That is all I am telling you. It will protect more people at less cost. Your bill is so expensive that you are going to affect a million people, and those people are the ones we want most to protect. Those are the people who are working low-income jobs and who will be torn off and removed from health care protection by your bill. We will not do that. We are going to protect those people who need the protection the most from being denied health insurance.

I take back the remainder of my time.

It would be inappropriate to set Federal health insurance standards that duplicate the responsibility of the 50 State insurance departments. As the National Association of Insurance Commissioners put it:

We do not want States to be preempted by Congressional or administrative actions. . . Congress should focus attention on those consumers who have no protections in the self-funded ERISA plans.

Senator KENNEDY's approach would set health insurance standards that duplicate the responsibility of the 50 State insurance departments. Worse yet, it would mandate that the Health Care Financing Administration, HCFA, enforce them, if the State decides otherwise. It would be a disaster—HCFA can't even handle the small things they have with HIPAA, the Medicare and Medicaid problems—to get involved in the demands that would be placed upon them by the Democratic bill.

This past recess, Senator LEAHY and I held a meeting in Vermont to let New England home health providers meet with HCFA. It was a packed and angry house, with providers traveling from New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Connecticut. That is who the Democrats would have enforce their bill. It is in no one's best interests to build a dual system of overlapping State and Federal health insurance regulation.

Increasing health insurance premiums causes significant losses in coverage. The Congressional Budget Office, CBO, pegged the cost of the Democratic bill at six times higher than S. 326. Based on our best estimates, passage of the Democratic bill would result in the loss of coverage for over 1.5 million working Americans and their families.

Now, why do you want to charge forward with that plan? To put this in perspective, this would mean they would have their family's coverage canceled under the Democratic bill—canceled. Let me repeat that. Adoption of the Democratic approach would cancel the insurance policies of almost 1.5 million Americans, CBO estimates. I cannot support legislation that would result in the loss of health insurance coverage for the combined population of the States of Virginia, Delaware, South Dakota, and Wyoming—no coverage.

Mrs. MURRAY. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Fortunately, we can provide the key protections that consumers want, at a minimal cost and without the disruption of coverage, if we apply these protections responsibly and where they are needed.

In sharp contrast to the Democratic alternative, our bill would actually increase coverage. With the additional Tax Code provisions of S. 326, the Patients' Bill of Rights Act, our bill allows for full deduction of health insurance for the self-employed, the full availability of medical savings accounts, and the carryover of unused benefits from flexible spending accounts.

Mrs. MURRAY. Will the Senator from Vermont yield for a question?

Mr. JEFFORDS. With the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act, we provide Americans with greater choice of more affordable health insurance.

Mrs. MURRAY. Will the Senator from Vermont yield for a question?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Yes.

Mrs. MURRAY. I thank the Senator. I was listening to his discussion about the Republican bill. The current pending amendment, the Robb-Murray amendment, allows women access to OB/GYNs as their primary care physicians. Will the bill the Senator is discussing provide direct access for all of those women who are not in self-insured programs in this country?

Mr. JEFFORDS. We will have an amendment which will deal with that problem.

Mrs. MURRAY. All women in this country who are not in self-insured programs will have access under the amendment you are going to be offering?

Mr. JEFFORDS. First of all, we defer to the States in that regard.

Mrs. MURRAY. Then I can assume that the women who are not in self-insured programs will not be covered by the Republican amendment.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Our bill covers, as we intended to cover, those who need the coverage now who have no coverage and get the protection to those who need the protection. We will have an amendment that will take care of the problems that are—

Mrs. MURRAY. Not the self-employed. That is the answer.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I think the Senator has her own time.

Mrs. BOXER. I wanted to ask the Senator one question.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Yes.

Mrs. BOXER. Is the Senator aware that when he talks about people losing their insurance, there is a $100 million effort going on by the HMOs to scare people into thinking that if the Democratic Patients' Bill of Rights passes—which is supported by all the health care advocate groups in the country—they will lose their insurance?

Is the Senator aware that his own Congressional Budget Office has clearly stated the maximum cost of the Democratic Patients' Bill of Rights is $2 a month?

And further, is the Senator aware that the President, by executive order, gave the Patients' Bill of Rights to Federal employees, and there has been no increase in the premium?

So what I am asking the Senator is, is he aware of this campaign by the HMOs? Has he seen the commercials? Does he believe the HMOs that who have an interest in this, the CEOs of which are getting $30 million a year, really have the interests of patients in their heart?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I say that the Senator was successful in stealing some time from me. Let me say that we have differences of opinions on these bills. There is no question that your bill is much more expensive, that it is going to cost 6 percent, and that CBO estimates 1.5 million people—all of which you say you care most about, I say to the Senator from California, the low-income people, the people who are just barely able to have plans right now, and small businesses that won't be able—1.5 million people will lose their health insurance if your plan is put in.

Mrs. BOXER. I say to the Senator—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont has the floor.

Mr. JEFFORDS. S. 326, the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act, provides necessary consumer protections without adding significant new costs, without increasing litigation, and without micromanaging health plans.

Our goal is to give Americans the protections they want and need in a package they can afford and that we can enact. This is why I hope the Patients' Bill of Rights we are offering today will be enacted and signed into law by the President.

Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I want to take a few minutes to return to the underlying amendment. It has taken me a while to read through the amendment. The first time I saw the amendment was 30 minutes ago. I have just read through the amendment offered by Senator KENNEDY and others which relates to certain breast cancer treatment and access to appropriate obstetrical and gynecological care.

I apologize for not being able to participate directly on in this issue earlier. At the outset, I will say that about 2 years ago, Senator Bradley from New Jersey and I had the opportunity to participate in writing an amendment that actually eventually became law which addressed the issue of postmaternity stay, postdelivery stay. We wrote that particular piece of legislation because we felt strongly that managed care had gone too far in dictating how long people stayed in the hospital and pushing them out after deliveries, and it was a little controversial, although I think a very good bill for the time, because it sent a message very loudly and clearly to the managed care industry that you need to leave those decisions, as much as possible, at the local level where physicians and patients, in consultation with each other, determine that type of care.

The amendment on the floor is different in that it focuses on another aspect of women's care and that is breast cancer treatment. As to the debate from the other side of the aisle, I agree with 98 percent of what was said in terms of the importance of having a woman be able to access her obstetrician and gynecologist in an appropriate manner, the need for looking at inpatient care, to some extent as it relates to breast disease. Yet I think the approach that Senator KENNEDY and others have put on the floor is a good start but has several problems. Therefore, I urge all of my colleagues to vote against that amendment, with the understanding we can take the good efforts from that amendment, correct the deficiencies, and address the very same issues that have been identified so eloquently by my colleagues across the aisle.

Now, in looking at the Kennedy-Robb amendment, on page 2, they talk about:

... health insurance coverage, that provides medical and surgical benefits shall ensure that inpatient coverage with respect to the treatment of breast cancer is provided for a period of time as is determined by the attending physician, in his or her professional judgment. . . .

So far, I agree wholeheartedly. But where I cannot vote in good conscience, or allow my colleagues to, without fully understanding the implications, is where they continue and say:

... consistent with generally accepted medical standards, and the patient, to be medically appropriate following—(A) a mastectomy; (B) a lumpectomy; or (C) a lymph node dissection.

I agree with all of that and inpatient care. The part that bothers me is the "consistent with generally accepted medical standards." This goes into the debate we will go into tomorrow, or the next day, on medical necessity and what medical necessity means.

When we talk about what is medically appropriate and medically necessary, you are going to hear me say again and again that we should not try to put that into law, Federal statute. We should not define "medical necessity" as generally accepted medical practices or standards. The reason is, as exemplified in this chart, nobody can define generally accepted medical standards. You will go up to a physician and a physician will say: That is what I do every day.

Well, that is not much of a definition, I don't think. Therefore, I am not sure we should use those terms and put them into a law and pass it as an amendment and make it part of the Patients' Bill of Rights.

This chart is a chart that shows the significant variation of the way medicine is practiced today, and that generally accepted medical standards has such huge variations that the definition means nothing. Therefore, I am not going to put into a Federal statute a definition that means very little because I think, downstream, that can cause some harm because maybe a bunch of bureaucrats will try to give that definition.

Mr. SANTORUM. If the Senator will yield, he is arguing that it doesn't mean anything. It means everything. Really it is sort of the opposite of that. It has such an expansive character to it that it can include inappropriate medicine, which is, I think, the point the Senator is making.

Mr. FRIST. I think that is right. My colleague said it much more clearly than I. The definition itself of "medically necessary and appropriate" is so important that we should not lock the definition into something that is so small, so rigid, that we can't take into consideration the new advances that are coming along. That is why when we say generally accepted medical standards or practices, it leaves out the best evidence, the new types of discoveries that are coming on line. That decision should be made locally and should not be definitions put into a statute. Therefore, I am going to oppose this amendment.

Mr. ROBB. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRIST. Let me try to get through my presentation.

Mr. ROBB. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRIST. I will not yield.

Let me go through for my colleagues why the variation in medical practice has implications that may be unintended and therefore we cannot let the amendment pass.

Reviewing regional medical variations for breast-sparing surgery—basically for breast cancer today—I don't want to categorize this too much because the indications change a little bit. In a lumpectomy—taking out the lump itself and radiating because it is the least disfiguring—the outcome is equally good as doing a mastectomy and taking off the whole breast.

In my training—not that long ago, 25 years—the only treatment was mastectomy. As we learned more and more and radiation therapy became more powerful, we began to understand there are synergies in doing surgical operations and radiation therapy and chemotherapy. We didn't have to remove or disfigure the whole breast. The new therapy ended up being better for the patient but was not generally accepted medically. That sort of variation is shown in this chart.

In this chart, the very dark areas use lumpectomy versus mastectomy. Comparing the two, the high ratio of around 20 to 50 percent, versus going down to the light colors on the chart where this procedure is not used very much, there is tremendous variation. The different patterns of color on the chart demonstrate that a procedure generally accepted in one part of the country may be very different in another part of the country.

For example, in South Dakota, using this ratio of lumpectomy versus mastectomy, the ratio is only 1.4 percent.

In Paterson, NJ, the generally accepted medical standards in that community go up almost fortyfold to 37.8 percent—the relative use of one procedure, an older procedure, versus a newer procedure.

Which of those are generally accepted medical standards? That shows the definition itself has such huge variation that we have to be very careful when putting it into Federal statute. We will come back to that because it is a fundamentally important issue. Medicine is practiced differently around the country. Therefore, the words "generally accepted medical standards" have huge variations. We have to be careful what we write into law.

What I am about to say builds on the work of Senators SNOWE and ABRAHAM.

How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 20 minutes 50 seconds.

Mr. FRIST. Again, Senators SNOWE and ABRAHAM will talk more about this a little bit later.

Instead of using language such as "generally accepted medical standards," it has a built-in inherent danger because it defines what "medical necessity and appropriate" are.

We should be looking at words as follows: That provides a group health plan and a health insurance issuer providing health insurance coverage, that provides medical and surgical benefits, shall ensure that inpatient coverage—just like the Kennedy-Robb amendment with respect to the treatment of breast cancer—is provided for a period of time as determined by the attending physician, as the Kennedy-Robb amendment does, in consultation with the patient. I think this is "in consultation with the patient."

No, they do not have in their bill "in consultation with the patient." I suggest "in consultation with the patient" should be part of their amendment.

We would put in "in consultation with the patient" to be "medically necessary and appropriate," instead of using their words "generally accepted medical standards," which has such huge variation.

Why not use the better terminology, "medically necessary and appropriate"?

Use the same indications. Mastectomy is what we will propose, what they propose. Lumpectomy is what we propose, what they will propose. Lymph node dissection, we will use that language.

But "generally accepted medical standards" is dangerous. We ought to use such words as "medically necessary and appropriate." Then we are not locked into the variation where there is a fortyfold difference in mastectomies versus lumpectomy, which shows the importance of being very careful before placing Federal definitions of what is "medically necessary and appropriate" in Federal law.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I was going to make a unanimous consent request.

Mr. FRIST. I yield to the unanimous consent request.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. LEAHY. I ask unanimous consent that Alex Steele of my office be granted privilege of the floor today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. In the Kennedy-Robb amendment is the issue of access.

Again, my colleagues on the other side hit it right on the head: Women today want to have access to their obstetrician. They don't want to go through gatekeepers to have to get to their obstetrician or gynecologist. That relationship is very special and very important when we are talking about women's health and women's diseases.

In the Kennedy-Robb amendment, the language is that the plan or insurer shall permit such an individual who is a female to designate a participating physician who specializes in obstetrics and gynecology as the individual's primary care provider.

It is true that in our underlying bill we don't say the plan has to say that all obstetricians and gynecologists are primary care providers. That is exactly right. The reasons for that are manifold.

Let me share with Members what one person told me. Dr. Robert Yelverton, chairman of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists' Primary Care Committee, stated:

The vast majority of OB/GYNs in this country have opted to remain as specialists rather than act as primary care physicians.

He attributes this to the high standards that health plans have for primary care physicians, saying:

None of us could really qualify as primary care physicians under most of the plans, and most OB/GYNs would have to go back to school for a year or more to do so.

You can argue whether that is good or bad, but it shows that automatically taking specialists and making them primary care physicians and putting it in Federal statute is a little bit like taking BILL FRIST, heart and lung transplant surgeon, and saying: You ought to take care of all of the primary care of anybody who walks into your office.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. FRIST. I will finish my one presentation, and we will come back to this.

Mrs. BOXER. Will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator does not yield.

Mrs. BOXER. Why do you not yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator did not agree to yield.

Mr. FRIST. I simply want the courtesy of completing my statement. I know people want to jump in and ask questions, but we have listened to the other side for 50 minutes on this very topic. I am trying to use our time in an instructive manner, point by point, if people could just wait a bit and allow me to get through my initial presentation of why I think this amendment must be defeated with a very good alternative.

I want to get into this issue of access to obstetricians and gynecologists. In our bill that has been introduced, we take care of this. I believe strongly we take care of it. We say, in section 723: The plan shall waive the referral requirement in the case of a female participant or beneficiary who seeks coverage for routine obstetrical care or routine gynecological care.

We are talking about routine women's health issues. We waive the referral process. There is not a gatekeeper. A patient goes straight to their obstetrician and gynecologist. That is what women tell me they want in terms of access to that particular specialized, trained individual.

It is written in our bill. Let me read what is in our bill.

The plan shall waive the referring requirement in the case of a female participant or beneficiary who seeks routine obstetrical care or routine gynecological care.

Therefore, I think the access provisions in the Kennedy-Robb amendment are unnecessary and are addressed in our underlying bill. Plus, they go one step further in saying that this specialist is the individual's primary care provider. I am just not sure of the total implications of that, especially after an obstetrician who is the chairman of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology very clearly states that merely assuming that a specialist is a good primary care physician is not necessarily correct.

Also, in our bill, beyond the routine care—this is in section 725 of our bill where we address access to specialists—we say:

A group health plan other than a fully insured health plan shall ensure that participants and beneficiaries have access to specialty care when such care is covered under the plan.

So they have access to specialty care when obstetrics care and gynecological care is part of that plan.

So both here and in the earlier provision of section 723, where we talk about routine obstetrical care, there is no gatekeeper; there is no barrier; a woman can go directly to her obstetrician and her gynecologist, which is what they want. Or, if you fall into the specialty category in provision 725, you have access to specialty care when such care is covered under the plan.

As I go through the Kennedy-Robb plan, and this is obviously the amendment that we are debating on the floor, there are a number of very reasonable issues in there. Again, I think the intent of the amendment is very good. I do notice secondary consultations in the amendment. I think, as we address the issue of women's health, obstetrical care, breast cancer treatment, access to appropriate care, which we plan on addressing and we will address, I believe, this is the amendment Senators SNOWE and ABRAHAM have been working on so diligently, the idea of secondary consultations.

About 2 months ago we did a women's health conference. It was wonderful. It was in Memphis, TN. It was on women's health issues. Maybe 200 or 300 people attended, focusing on women's health issues. We talked about the range of issues, whether it was breast cancer, cervical cancer, osteoporosis, diseases of the aging process, but an issue which came up was the issue of secondary consultations. Because it is dealing with something that is very personal to them, women say: Is there any way we can reach out in some way with health plans to lower the barriers for us to get a second opinion?

Why is that important? Part of that is important because of this huge variation. If you go to one doctor and he says do a mastectomy, which is very disfiguring, it is very clearly indicated—there are clear-cut indications for mastectomy or lumpectomy today. If you hear two different versions, you may want to get a secondary opinion or a secondary consultation.

What we are looking at in that regard is language similar to this: to provide coverage with respect to medical and surgical services provided in relation to the diagnosis and treatment of cancer shall ensure that full coverage is provided for secondary consultations by specialists in the appropriate medical fields.

"Medical fields," I think we need to go a little bit further and focus on whether it is pathology or radiology or oncology or surgery to confirm—and I think it should be part of the language—to confirm or to refute the diagnosis itself. That is full coverage by the plan for secondary consultations for cancer as it deals with women's health issues.

I think that will be an important part to include as we address this very specific field. It is totally absent in the Kennedy-Robb amendment. I propose offering an amendment which does much of what they say in terms of inpatient care, changing this terminology from "generally accepted medical standards," which I think is potentially dangerous, and move on to the language which I think should be used, which is "medically necessary and appropriate."

The access issue, I believe, we have developed. There are other issues in the bill that I will work with Senators ABRAHAM and SNOWE to address, in a systematically and well-thought-out way, so we can do what is best for women in this treatment of cancer, breast cancer, mastectomy, and access to obstetricians and gynecologists. That is something about which we need to ensure that no managed care plan says: No, you cannot go see your obstetrician; or, no, you cannot go see your gynecologist; or, no, you have to hop through a barrier; or, no, you have to go see a gatekeeper before you can see your obstetrician/gynecologist. We are going to stop that practice, and we are going to stop that in the Republican bill we put forward.

I have introduced the concept today—again, it is very important—of medical necessity and how we define what is medically necessary and appropriate. It is something critical. It is something we are going to come back to. I think with all the issues we are discussing, if we try to put in Federal law, Federal statute, a definition of what is medically necessary and appropriate instead of leaving it up to a physician who is trained in the field, a specialist, we are going in the wrong direction and have the potential for broadly harming people.

I urge defeat of this amendment with the understanding we are going to come back and very specifically address the issues I have talked about today.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the Robb-Murray amendment, which provides our mothers, wives, daughters and sisters with direct access to OB/GYN care and strengthens the ability of a woman and her doctor to make personal medical decisions.

The sponsors of this amendment, along with most women and most Americans, believe that a woman should have the choice and the freedom to select an OB/GYN physician as her primary care provider and to determine, in consultation with her doctor, how long she should stay in the hospital following surgery.

Those critical and deeply personal judgments should not be trumped by the arbitrary guidelines of managed care companies. The women in our lives deserve better than drive-by mastectomies. With the Robb-Murray amendment, we will say so in law, and ensure that women receive the services they need and the respect they are owed.

Studies show that when women have a primary care physician trained in OB/GYN, they receive more comprehensive care and greater personal satisfaction when they are treated by doctors trained in other specialties.

We should consider, too, that breast cancer is the second leading killer of women in this country. New cases of this disease occur more than twice as often as second most common type of cancer, lung cancer. More than 178,000 women in this country were diagnosed with breast cancer in 1998. I have no doubt we will someday find the origin and cure for this terrible malady. Until then, though, we have a duty to make the system charged with treating these women respectful and responsive to their needs.

Sadly, the evidence suggests we have a long way to go. We continue to receive disturbing reports about the insistence of some insurance companies to force women out of the hospital immediately after physically demanding and emotionally traumatic surgeries. We have been shocked by stories of women being sent home with drainage tubes still in their bodies and groggy from general anesthesia. This is distressing to me not just as a policymaker, but as a son, father, and husband.

Now, some critics of the Robb-Murray Amendment want to sidestep this problem, and suggest that we are legislating by body part. To that, I say:

Those who oppose this provision are wasting a valuable opportunity to increase the quality of physical health care for over half the population of the United States.

Those who oppose are ignoring the suffering and inconvenience of women throughout this country trying to receive the basic health care that they have every right to expect.

Those who oppose are failing to right a wrong that we have tolerated for too long.

Mr. President, women are being denied the quality of care they are paying for and to which they have a moral right. And this Senate has a chance today to begin fixing this inequity. I urge my colleagues to look beyond the rhetoric and see the very simple and fair logic that calls for the passage of this amendment, and join us in supporting it.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, how much time remains on this amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 7 minutes and 26 seconds on the side of the Senator from Oklahoma. The other side has used all its time.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, let me make a couple of comments. I heard my friend and colleague from Massachusetts say: Where is everybody in the debate? We have just received the amendment. I would like to look at it, and I had a chance to look at it while some of the debate was going on. I would like to make a couple of comments on it.

I found in the amendment—

Mr. KENNEDY. On that point, will the Senator yield?

Just on the point of the representation you just made. It is virtually the same amendment that was offered in the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield?

Mr. NICKLES. No, I do not.

Mr. KENNEDY. It is not a surprise. It is the same amendment, effectively.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator from Massachusetts says it is the same amendment offered in committee, but that is not factual. The Senator can correct me if I am wrong, but this amendment deals with Superfund. This amendment deals with transferring money from general revenue into Social Security. That was not offered in committee. There are few tax provisions in here. I asked somebody: What is this extension of taxes on page 17? My staff tells me it is a tax increase of $6.7 billion on Superfund. I don't know what that has to do with breast cancer, but it is a tax increase on Superfund.

I know we need to reauthorize Superfund. I didn't know we were going to do it on this bill. I stated in the past we are not going to pass the Superfund extension until we reauthorize it. We should do the two together. Why are we doing it on this bill?

So there are tax increases in here that nobody has looked at. They did not do that in the Labor Committee or the health committee, I do not think. I asked the Chairman of the committee. I don't think they passed tax increases on Superfund. That does not belong in the HELP Committee.

Certainly transferring money from the general revenue fund, as this bill does, into the Social Security trust fund, was not done in the HELP Committee, I do not think. It should not have been done. My guess is the Finance Committee might have some objections. Senator ROTH is going to be on the floor saying: Wait a minute, what is going on?

So there is a lot of mischief in these amendments. Some of us have not had enough time. One of the crazy things about this agreement is we are going to have amendments coming at us quickly. We have to have a little time to study them. Sometimes we find some things stuck in the amendments which some of us might have some objections with.

I want to make a couple of comments on the amendment. In addition to the big tax increases hidden in the bill, this amendment also strikes the underlying amendment that many of us have proposed on this side that says, whatever we should do we should do no harm. If we are going to increase premiums by over 1 percent; let us not do a bill. Maybe people forgot about that, but that is an amendment we offered earlier. This amendment, the Robb amendment, says, let's strike that provision. We do not care how much the Kennedy bill costs.

Some of us do care how much it costs. We do not want to put millions of people into the ranks of the uninsured. We do not want to do harm. Unfortunately, the amendment proposed by Senator ROBB and others would do that. It would strike that provision. It would eliminate that provision.

On the issue of breast cancer and mastectomy and lumpectomy and so on, Senator FRIST has addressed it a little bit. Senator SNOWE and others will be offering an amendment that is related and, I will tell you, far superior to the amendment we have on the floor.

I do not know if we will get to it tonight. Certainly, we will get to it tomorrow. It is a much better amendment. It is an amendment that has been thought out. It is an amendment that does not have Superfund taxes in it. It is an amendment that includes, as this bill does, transfers from the general revenue fund into the Social Security trust.

I urge my colleagues at the appropriate time to vote "no" on the Robb amendment, and then let's adopt the underlying amendment which says we should not increase health care costs by more than 1 percent; let's not do damage to the system; let's not put people into the ranks of uninsured by playing games, maybe trying to score points with one group or another group. Let's not do that. Let's not make those kinds of mistakes.

If people have serious concerns dealing with breast cancer and how that should be treated, again, Senator SNOWE, Senator ABRAHAM, and Senator FRIST have an amendment they have worked on for some time that I believe is much better drafted. It does not have Superfund taxes in it. It does not have a transfer of general revenue funds into the Social Security trust fund. It does not make these kinds of mistakes that we have, unfortunately, with this pending amendment.

Mr. GREGG. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. NICKLES. I ask how much time we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 2½ minutes.

Mr. GREGG. As I understand it, by repealing the underlying amendment, which would limit the cost increase to 1 percent and would say, in the alternative, if 100,000 people are knocked off the rolls of insured, the bill will not go forward. If we repeal that and those 100,000 people are knocked off the rolls, they are not going to have any insurance for mastectomies; right?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is exactly right.

Mr. GREGG. Basically, the proposal of the Senator from Virginia, supported by Senator KENNEDY, uninsured potentially 100,000 women from any mastectomy coverage as a result of their amendment or any other coverage.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator makes a good point, but probably not 100,000. Estimates would probably be much closer to 2 million people would be uninsured and have no coverage whatsoever in any insurance proposal if we adopt the underlying Kennedy amendment.

Mr. GREGG. Of those 2 million people, we can assume potentially half would be women. So we have approximately 1 million women who would not have insurance as a result of this amendment being put forward on the other side.

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, will the Senator from Oklahoma yield for a question? As a matter of fact, we have some information just provided to us that under the Kennedy legislation, S. 6, with 1.9 million people no longer being insured, you would have 188,595 fewer breast examinations. If people had their routine breast examinations, of those 1.9 million, a certain percentage would be women, that would be the number of breast exams that would no longer take place if this legislation passed.

We hear so much talk about "in human terms," and they say this argument does not cut. These people are going to lose insurance. They will lose insurance. They will not get coverage so you do not have to worry about covering them for a mastectomy. They are going to find out, in many cases, unfortunately, far too late for even those kinds of treatments to be helpful. That is what we are trying to prevent in not passing a bill that drives up costs dramatically which drives people out of the insurance area.

Mr. NICKLES. I appreciate my colleague's comment. I yield back the remainder of my time and ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield myself 2 minutes on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the more we debate, the more confused our good colleagues on the other side, quite frankly, become. The underlying amendment dealing with the OB/GYN is the amendment that was offered in committee and that is no surprise.

The other provision the Senator from Oklahoma talks about is funding the self-insurance tax deduction introduced by the Senator from Oklahoma without paying for it. This would subject the bill to a point of order if it was carried all the way through. He did not pay for it.

It is a red herring. Time and time again we have put in the General Accounting Office document which states that the protections in this bill will enhance the number of people insured, not reduce the number.

Does the Senator from Pennsylvania actually believe we are endangering breast cancer tests for women, reducing Pap tests, reducing examinations for breast cancer and yet the breast cancer coalition supports our proposal? Is he suggesting any logic to his position?

Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of the time and look forward to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield myself 1 minute on the bill.

The Senator from Pennsylvania is right. The whole essence of the second-degree amendment is to kill the underlying amendment because the Senator from Massachusetts does not want to say we will not increase costs by more than 1 percent, because, frankly, he wants to, and expects to, increase costs by 5 or 6 percent. The net result of that will be to uninsure a couple million people, half of which could be women, half of which will not get those exams, half of which will not get those screenings, half of which will not get the care they need. That is the purpose of the amendment.

In the process, he also increases Superfund taxes and also comes up with general transfers of money from the general revenue fund to the Social Security fund. That is a mistake.

I urge my colleagues to vote no and keep in mind that in dealing with breast cancer, Senator SNOWE, Senator FRIST, and Senator ABRAHAM will offer a much better proposal later in this debate. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having been yielded back, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1237. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant called the roll.

The result was announced—yeas 48, nays 52, as follows:

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BOND. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1238 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1236
(Purpose: To make health care plans accountable for their decisions, enhancing the quality of patients' care in America)

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senator FRIST, Senator JEFFORDS, and others, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. NICKLES], for Mr. FRIST, for himself and Mr. JEFFORDS, proposes an amendment numbered 1238 to amendment No. 1236.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, for the information of our colleagues, we have now disposed of the Democrats' second-degree amendment to the first-degree amendment proposed by the Republicans, which first-degree amendment would limit the cost of the Kennedy health care bill to 1 percent. Now I have sent a second-degree amendment up under the unanimous consent agreement. Each side could offer a second-degree.

The amendment I sent to the desk on behalf of Senators FRIST, JEFFORDS, and others, is a very important amendment, so I hope all of our colleagues will listen to it. The amendment would strike the medical necessity definition that was in the Kennedy bill and replace it with the grievance/appeals process we have in our bill. In other words, it is a very significant amendment, one that we had significant discussion on last week. Some of our colleagues said they really wanted to vote on it last week. We will get to vote on it, depending on the majority leader's intention. If the time runs on this amendment, all time would be used, and we would probably be ready for a vote at about 6:40. Of course, it would be the majority leader's call whether or not to have a vote.

The amendment deals with medical necessity. It replaces the definition in the Kennedy bill with the grievance and appeals process that we have in the Republican package, which I think is a far superior package as far as improving the quality of care. I compliment Senator JEFFORDS, Senator FRIST, and others for putting this together.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, this is an extremely important amendment. I think everyone ought to understand exactly what we are trying to do.

We are entering into a new era with respect to the availability of health care, good health care, excellent health care. We have seen pharmaceuticals being devised which would do miraculous things. We are also having medical procedures designed and devices created. But what we have not seen is their being available everywhere, or a standard that will make them available in areas where they ought to be available.

What we are trying to do today is establish that every American is entitled to the best medical care available, not that which is generally available in your area; not be different from one end of the country to the other but that everyone is entitled to that health care, especially if you are in an HMO. They should be, and must be, aware of what is the best health care that would serve you to make you a well person.

For a couple of days now, we have heard many tragic stories about children who were born with birth defects or who were injured because the private health care system failed them in some manner. I know my colleagues on the other side of the aisle have a bill they believe would address these situations. The Republican health care bill addresses the concerns people have about their health care without causing new problems.

Americans want assurance that they will get the health care they need when they need it. I am going to describe exactly how the Republican bill does just that. I am also going to describe how the Republican bill will create new patient rights and protections which would have prevented the tragic situations described by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

Finally, I want to talk about how the Republican bill achieves these goals in an accountable manner, without increasing health care costs, without a massive new Federal Government bureaucracy, and without taking health care insurance away from children and families. It doesn't cost money to increase your ability to make sure you are aware of what is available. The heart of the Republican Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act is a fair process for independent external review that addresses consumer concerns about getting access to appropriate and timely medical care in a managed care plan.

The Republican bill establishes gateways that ensure medical disputes get heard by an independent, external reviewer. The plan does not have veto power in these decisions. Denials or disputes about medical necessity and appropriateness are eligible for review, period. If a plan considers a treatment to be experimental or investigational, it is eligible for external review. The reviewer is an independent physician of the same specialty as the treating physician. In addition, the reviewer must have adequate expertise and qualifications, including age-appropriate expertise in the patient's diagnosis.

So, in other words, a pediatrician must review a pediatric case and a cardiologist must review a cardiology case. In the Republican bill, only qualified physicians are permitted to overturn medical decisions by treating physicians. The reviewer then makes an independent medical decision based on the valid, relevant scientific and clinical evidence. This standard ensures that patients get medical care based on the most up-to-date science and technology.

The Kennedy bill describes medical necessity in the statute. It does not define it in a manner that ensures that patients will get the highest quality care and the most up-to-date technology.

The Republican bill ensures that physicians will make independent determinations based on the best available scientific evidence. That is the standard, the best available scientific evidence. It is that simple. Health plans cannot game the system and block access to external review. To ensure this is the case, I have asked the private law firm of Ivins, Phillips & Baker to analyze the Republican external review provision, asking two key questions: First, could a plan block a patient from getting access to external review in a manner that is inconsistent with the intent of our provision?

Second, is there any factor that would prevent the external reviewer from rendering a fair and independent medical decision?

I request that the letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IVINS, PHILLIPS & BARKER,
Washington, DC, July 12, 1999.

Hon. JAMES M. JEFFORDS,
Chairman, Committee on Health, Education,
Labor and Pensions, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: You have asked us to provide you with our opinion on the outcomes of certain medical claims denials under the bill reported out of your Committee, The Patients' Bill of Rights Act of 1999, S. 326 (the "Bill").

In each of these examples, a claim is made for coverage or reimbursement under an employer-provided health plan, and the claim is denied. You have specifically asked us to comment on whether the claims would be eligible for independent external review under the Bill, which provides the right to such review for denials of items that would be covered under the plan but for a determination that the item is not medically necessary and appropriate, or is experimental or investigational.

A. Bill's provisions for independent external review

If a participant or beneficiary in an employer-provided health plan makes a claim for coverage or reimbursement under the plan, and the claim is denied, the Bill amends the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) to provide that he or she has the right to written notice and internal appeal of the denial within certain time-frames set forth by statute.<sup>1</sup> If the adverse coverage determination is upheld on internal appeal, the Bill provides that the participant or beneficiary in certain cases has the right to independent external review.<sup>2</sup>

The right to independent external review exists for denial of an item or service that (1) would be a covered benefit when medically necessary and appropriate under the terms of the plan, and has been determined not to be medically necessary and appropriate; or (2) would be a covered benefit when not experimental or investigational under the terms of the plan, and has been determined to be experimental or investigational.<sup>3</sup>

A participant or beneficiary who seeks an independent external review must request one in writing, and the plan must select an entity qualified under the Bill to designate an independent external reviewer. Under the Bill's standard of review, the independent external reviewer must make an "independent determination" based on "valid, relevant, scientific and clinical evidence" to determine the medical necessity and appropriateness, or experimental or investigational nature of the proposed treatment.<sup>5</sup>

B. Fact patterns

You have asked us to review whether the following fact patterns would be eligible for external review under the terms of the Bill. You have also asked for our judgment on whether any factor in these examples would compromise the reviewer's ability to make an independent decision.

Fact Pattern 1: An employer contracts with an HMO. The HMO contract (the plan document) states that the "HMO will cover everything that is medically necessary" and that the "HMO has the sole discretion to determine what is medically necessary."

Question 1: Would any denial of coverage or treatment based on medical necessity be eligible for external review?

Answer: All claims denials would be eligible for independent external review under the Bill.

The hypothetical employer who drafted this plan may have thought that, by covering all "medically necessary" items, the plan incorporates medical necessity as one of the plan's terms. Under this apparent view, any coverage denial by the HMO at its sole discretion, would be a fiduciary act of plan interpretation, rather than a medical judgment. Under this view, then, all claims denials would be contract decisions rather than medical ones, and no denials would be eligible for independent external review.

The terms of the Bill clearly prevent this end-run around its intent. The Bill provides that the right of external review exists for any denial of an item that is covered but for a determination based on medical necessity, etc., "under the terms of the plan." That is, the statutory language provides for external review of any determination of medical necessity, etc., even when that determination is intertwined with an interpretation of the plan's terms.

The report of your Committee clarifies that intent. The report explicitly notes that "some coverage discussions involve an element of medical judgment or a determination of medical necessity." After walking through an example of a coverage decision which involves such a judgment, the report concludes that your Committee intends that such "coverage denials that involved a determination about medical necessity and appropriateness" would be eligible for independent external review.<sup>5</sup>

That is, under the Bill any interpretation of the plan's terms triggers independent external review when that interpretation involves an "element of medical judgment."

To further remove any ambiguity on this point, the Committee report states that any determination of medical necessity is eligible for independent external review, even if the criteria of medical necessity are partly included as plan terms requiring contract interpretation: "The committee is interested in ensuring that, in cases where a plan document's coverage policy on experimental or investigational treatment is not explicit or is linked to another policy that requires interpretation, disputes arising out of these kinds of situations will be eligible for external review."<sup>6</sup>

Thus, even assuming that the HMO's determinations in this example are plan interpretations by a fiduciary, they are not saved from independent external review under your bill. Any coverage determination by the HMO in this example involves "an element of medical judgment or a determination of medical necessity," and is therefore eligible for independent external review under the Bill and Committee report. Moreover, the standard used by the HMO in this example for determining medical necessity is not "explicit," and is therefore eligible for independent external review under the Bill and Committee report.

In short, under the hypothetical plan of this example, all claims would involve determinations of medical necessity, and all denials would be eligible for independent external review.

Question 2: Is there any factor that would prevent the reviewer from rendering an independent decision?

Answer: No. The reviewer's decision must be independent. Under the Bill, the reviewer shall consider the standards and evidence used by the plan, but is intended to use other appropriate standards as well. It is expressly intended that the review not defer to the plan's judgment under the deferential "arbitrary and capricious" standard of review.

Under the Bill, the independent external review must make an "independent determination" based on "valid, relevant, scientific and clinical evidence," to determine medical necessity, etc. In making his or her determination, the independent external reviewer must "take into consideration appropriate and available information," which includes any "evidence based decision making or clinical practice guidelines used by the group health plan," as well as timely evidence or information submitted by the plan, the patient or the patient's physician, the patient's medical record, expert consensus, and medical literature.<sup>7</sup>

Footnotes at end of letter.

That is, under the Bill the reviewer is instructed to consider standards and evidence used by the plan, but is intended to include other standards and evidence as well. The Committee report clarifies this by stating that the external review shall "make an assessment that takes into account the spec-trum of appropriate and available information."<sup>8</sup> Fleshing out the above-cited list set forth in the statute, the report further clarifies that such information can include, for example, peer-reviewed scientific studies, literature, medical journals, and the research results of Federal agency studies.<sup>9</sup>

Moreover, the reviewer is not bound by the standard or evidence use by the plan, but must rather "make an independent determination and not be bound by any one particular element."<sup>10</sup> The Committee report further states that the independent reviewer should not use an "arbitrary and capricious" standard in reviewing the plan's decision.<sup>11</sup> That is, the reviewer is specifically prohibited from using the deferential standard now used by federal courts in reviewing certain coverage determinations by ERISA plan fiduciaries.

In short, the Bill provides that the reviewer shall use not only the standards and evidence considered by the plan, but other appropriate standards as well, in rendering its independent judgment.

Fact Pattern 2: A plan covers medically necessary procedures but specifically excludes cosmetic procedures. An infant born to a participant is born with a severe cleft palate. The infant's physician contends that plastic surgery to correct the cleft palate is necessary so the child can perform normal functions like eating and speaking. The plan denies the request on the grounds that it does not cover cosmetic surgery. The participant appeals the decision, arguing that the procedure is medically necessary. The treating physician provides supporting documentation that the procedure is medically necessary.

Question 1: Is the denial of surgery in this example eligible for external review?

Answer: Yes, the denial of surgery in this example is eligible for independent external review under the Bill.

The plan in this example covers surgery generally, but excludes "cosmetic" surgery. As with many plans, the term "cosmetic" is not defined. There is therefore no express basis in the plan's terms for inferring that "cosmetic" is defined as a procedure that is not "medically necessary and appropriate." Does this mean that the claims denial in this example is merely an act of plan interpretation, without any determination of medical necessity? And if so, does this mean that the denial is not eligible for external review?

No. Under the terms of the Bill, any denial based on medical necessity, etc., is eligible for external review. This is so even if the denial is based on plan terms that do not expressly incorporate a reference to medical necessity, as long as interpretation of those terms involves "an element of medical judgment."

This intent is spelled out in the report of your Committee, which, as already noted, states that "The committee recognizes that some coverage determinations involve an element of medical judgment or a determination of medical necessity and appropriateness."<sup>12</sup> The report goes on to give an example: "For instance, a plan might cover surgery that is medically necessary and appropriate, but exclude from coverage surgery that is performed solely to enhance physical appearance. In these cases, a plan must make a determination of medical necessity and appropriateness in order to determine whether the procedure is a covered benefit."

The report concludes that, "It is the committee's intention that coverage denials that involved a determination about medical necessity and appropriateness, such as the example above, would be eligible for external review."

In the example discussed here, the plan's denial is based on its determination that the procedure is "cosmetic" under the terms of the plan. This interpretation of the plan includes a significant element of medical judgment. This is so despite the fact that plan uses the term "cosmetic" without an express reference to medical necessity. The essential element of medical judgment is evidenced in part by the fact that the treating physician provides documentation for his or her judgment that the treatment is necessary for certain basic life functions.

In short, the coverage dispute in this example turns on whether the procedure is cosmetic under the plan's terms. Under the Bill as amplified by the report of your Committee, this determination includes an "element of medical judgment or determination of medical necessity." Therefore, the denial is eligible for independent external review under the Bill.

Question 2: Is there any factor that would prevent the reviewer from rendering an independent decision?

Answer: No, the reviewer's decision is independent, for the reasons set forth in our answer to this question in the above Fact Pattern 1. That is, under the Bill the reviewer shall use not only the standards and evidence considered by the plan, but other appropriate standards as well, in rendering its independent, nondeferential judgment as to whether the requested treatment is medically necessary and appropriate or experimental and investigational.

Fact Pattern 3: The employer contracts with an HMO that has a closed-panel network of providers which includes pediatricians. A baby born to a participant is born with a severe and rare heart defect. The infant's own network pediatrician, who is not a pediatric cardiologist (i.e., a pediatric subspecialist), recommends that the infant be treated by such a specialist. The network does not include a pediatric cardiologist. The plan denies coverage for a non-network pediatric sub-specialist, saying that one of the plan's network pediatricians can provide any medically necessary care for the infant.

Question 1: Is the denial in this case eligible for independent external review?

Answer: Yes, the denial of pediatric subspecialist care in this example is eligible for independent external review under the Bill.

The Bill requires that participants have access to specialty care if covered under the plan.<sup>13</sup> The report of your Committee explains that a health plan must "ensure that plan enrollees have access to specialty care when such care is needed by an enrollee and covered under the plan and when such access is not otherwise available under the plan."<sup>14</sup>

The bill defines specialty care with respect to a condition as "care and treatment provided by a health care practitioner . . . that has adequate expertise (including age appropriate expertise) through appropriate training and experience."<sup>15</sup>

In short, the Bill defines specialty care in terms of whether the care is "needed" by the enrollee, and by reference to whether the care is "adequate," and the expertise "appropriate."

Under the terms of the Bill, then, a physician's determination that specialty care is required is by its terms a judgment based on the medical necessity and appropriateness of that care. Therefore, the treating physician's recommendation in this example that the infant be treated by a pediatric subspecialist is a judgment of medical necessity. The plan's denial of such specialty care is a denial of an otherwise covered service, based on a judgment of the medical necessity or appropriateness of that service. The denial is eligible for independent external review under the terms of the Bill.

Question 2: Is there any factor that would prevent the reviewer from rendering an independent decision in this case?

Answer: No, the reviewer's decision is independent, for the reasons set forth in our answer to this question in the above Fact Patterns 1 and 2. That is, under the Bill the reviewer shall use not only the standards and evidence considered by the plan, but other appropriate standards as well, in rendering its independent judgment as to whether the requested treatment is medically necessary and appropriate or experimental and investigational.

Fact Pattern 4: A participant calls the plan to report that the participant's infant is very sick, and inquiries about emergency services. The plan representative pre-authorizes coverage in a participating emergency facility, which is 20 miles away. Alarmed by the infant's various severe symptoms, the participant instead takes the infant to a nearby emergency facility which is only 5 minutes away. Shortly after arrival, the baby is diagnosed as having spinal meningitis, and goes into respiratory arrest. The baby is immediately treated and stabilized, and tissue damage that might otherwise have resulted is avoided. The participant submits a claim to the plan for reimbursement of the emergency treatment. The claim for reimbursement is denied on the grounds that coverage was preauthorized only if provided in the more distant, in-network, emergency facility specified by the plan representative.

Question 1: Would the denial of reimbursement in this case be eligible for independent external review?

Answer: Yes, under the Bill the denial of reimbursement would be eligible for review by an independent external reviewer.

The Bill requires that if a plan covers emergency services, it must in some cases cover such services without pre-authorization, and without regard to whether the services are provide out-of-network.

Specifically, such coverage must be provided for "appropriate emergency medical screening examinations" and for additional medical care to "stabilize the emergency medical condition," to the extent a "prudent layperson who possesses an average knowledge of health and medicine" would determine that an examination was needed to determine whether "emergency medical care" is needed.<sup>16</sup> "Emergency medical care" is defined as care to evaluate or stabilize a medical condition manifesting itself by "acute symptoms of sufficient severity (including severe pain)" such that a "prudent layperson who possesses an average knowledge of health and medicine" could reasonably expect the absence of medical care to endanger the health of the patient or result in serious impairment of a bodily function or serious dysfunction of any bodily organ or part.<sup>17</sup>

That is, under the Bill, reimbursement for the services in this example must be provided if the services satisfy the "prudent layperson" standard of the bill. The prudent layperson standard is met if an individual without specialized medical knowledge could reasonably reach the decision, based on the patient's symptoms, that lack of medical care could possibly result in severely worsened health or injury, and that expert medical observation is therefore necessary.

A determination made by the "prudent layperson" is therefore a determination of medical necessity or appropriateness—albeit one made under a nontechnical, nonexpert, standard. Under the Bill, a plan is required to incorporate this lower, non-expert or "prudent layperson" standard in evaluating whether to cover non-pre-authorized, out-of-network emergency medical care.

In this example, the participant's judgment, based on the baby's symptoms, that the baby should be observed as quickly as possible by medical experts at the nearer facility, is a judgment of medical necessity and appropriateness, made under this lower, non-expert standard. Likewise, the plan's denial of coverage in this case is based on the plan's determination that the participant's judgment concerning medical necessity was in error even under this lower standard.

In short, the coverage dispute in this case involves a judgment of medical necessity and appropriateness under the "prudent layperson" standard mandated by the Bill, and is therefore eligible for independent external review under the Bill.

Question 2: Is there any factor that would prevent the reviewer from rendering an independent decision?

Answer: No, the reviewer's decision is independent, for the reasons set forth in our answer to this question in the above Fact Patterns 1, 2 and 3. That is, under the Bill the reviewer shall use not only the standards and evidence considered by the plan, but other appropriate standards as well, in rendering its independent judgment as to whether the requested treatment is medically necessary and appropriate or experimental and investigational.

I hope this letter has been responsive to your request. Please do not hesitate to have your staff contact me for any questions with respect to the points here discussed.

Very truly yours,

ROSINA B. BARKER.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Let me provide examples of how our external review provisions ensure that patients and children get medical care.

Chart 1 illustrates under the Republican bill that the health plan cannot "game the system" by blocking access to external review or using some cleverly worded definition of "medical necessity." The Republican provision ensures that people get the medical care they need.

Here is an example of an HMO that has a planned contract which says the HMO will cover "medically necessary care" but the HMO has the sole discretion to determine what is "medically necessary."

Of course, this is an extreme example. Let's see if it holds up under our external review provision. In this example, the patient and physician may not know the plan's rationale for denying a claim since it is the HMO's sole discretion to determine medical necessity. This can be frustrating for both the patient and the physician.

Under the Republican bill, a denied claim would be eligible for an outside independent medical review. In fact, all denied medical claims under this example would be eligible for review under our provision. This is confirmed by the outside legal analysis which I have submitted for the RECORD. The legal opinion says:

The statutory language provides for external review of any determination of medical necessity and appropriateness, even when that determination is intertwined with an interpretation of the plan's terms.

The external reviewer would make an independent medical determination. There is nothing in the HMO contract or in the legislative provision that prevents the reviewer from making the best decision for the patient. If the patient needs the medical care, the reviewer will make this assessment. They will get the care. The independent reviewer's decision is binding on the plan.

Chart 2 is an example of a cleft palate. This chart illustrates that patients, and especially children, will get necessary health care services. Plans will not be able to deem a procedure as "cosmetic" and thus block access to external review. Only physicians can make coverage decisions involving medical judgment.

An example we have heard many times from our colleagues on the other side of the aisle is of an infant born with a cleft palate. The infant's physician recommends surgery so the child can perform normal daily functions, such as eating and speaking normally. The treating physician says this surgery is medically necessary and appropriate. In this example, the HMO planned contract states: "The plan does not cover cosmetic surgery." It was denied as a claim, saying the child's surgery is not a covered benefit because it is a cosmetic procedure, despite the recommendations of the treating physician.

What does this mean? Does this mean this is the end of the road for this child's family? No. Under the Republican bill, this denial of coverage would be eligible for appeal because the decision involves an "element of medical judgment." Under the Republican bill, medical decisions are made by physicians with appropriate expertise. In this case, it means an independent reviewer would be required to have pediatric expertise.

Finally, the independent medical reviewer would look at the range of appropriate clinical information and would have the ability to overturn the plan's decision. The child would receive the surgery to correct the cleft palate, and the plan would cover this procedure because the reviewer's decision is binding on the plan.

The next chart is on emergency room coverage. The primary point of this chart is that under the prudent layperson standard, parents can use their judgment and take their sick child to the nearest emergency room without worrying about whether the plan will deny coverage.

Another example we are all familiar with is of little Jimmy whose tragic story has been told by Senator DURBIN. His parents called the HMO when their baby fell ill. The HMO nurse recommended the parents take their sick child to a participating hospital an hour's drive away. During their long drive, the family passed several closer hospitals along the way. The child's symptoms grew worse and the baby went into respiratory arrest. By the time they got to the hospital, the one that the HMO said was covered by a plan, it was too late. The tissue damage resulted in the loss of a limb and little Jimmy had to endure a quadruple amputation. This is a horrible situation.

Let's look at what the Republican bill would do to address this type of tragic and unnecessary situation. First, under our prudent layperson standard, a parent would not have to call the HMO to get permission to go to the nearest emergency room. In this case, the parents could have gone to the closest emergency room and little Jimmy would not have gone into respiratory arrest. This tragedy would have been averted under the Republican provision because our bill ensures that emergency room services must be provided without preauthorization and without regard to whether the services are provided out of network.

Say for the sake of argument that the plan denies reimbursements after the hospital has provided the treatment. Under the Republican bill, little Jimmy's family would not be stuck with the hospital charges. They could appeal this decision to an outside reviewer because the decisions about whether care is medically necessary are eligible for external review.

The law firm of Ivins, Phillips & Baker says that under our provision:

The coverage dispute in this case involves a judgment of medical necessity and appropriateness under the prudent layperson standard mandated by the bill, and therefore is eligible for independent external review under the bill.

This is a quote from the letter that has been previously printed in the RECORD.

Mr. SCHUMER. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. JEFFORDS. The independent medical reviewer can make an independent decision and overturn the plan denying reimbursement. This decision is binding on the plan and not appealable.

Mr. SCHUMER. Would the Senator from Vermont yield for a question?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Let me finish.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. JEFFORDS. As Members can see from the examples on these charts, the Republican Patients' Bill of Rights ensures patients get the medical care they need, that parents can be assured their children will be cared for by appropriate specialists, and that people can go forward to emergency rooms when they are sick, when the children are sick, and can do so with the assurance that their health plan will cover these services.

Establishing these important rights will help families avoid illness, injury, and improve the quality of health care. I believe this is why we are debating this issue today. You can't sue your way to health care. Congress can't create a definition of "medical necessity" that is better than letting physician experts make decisions on the best available science. They must practice the best available science.

However, we can improve access to health care services and ensure that people get timely access to the medical care they need. We can ensure that health care we provide is high quality health care. Most important, we can do all these things without increasing health care costs and causing more Americans to lose their coverage.

We accomplish all these goals with the Republican Patients' Bill of Rights. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this amendment goes to the heart of the issue. I urge our colleagues to pay attention to the exchange we are going to have on the floor of the Senate.

Let us look, first, at what is in the Democratic bill. In the Democratic bill, "medical necessity," as defined on page 86, is "medically necessary or appropriate." That is the standard definition medicine has used for 200 years. It is the standard recommended by none other than the Health Insurance Association of America itself, on page 269:

Medical necessity. Term used by insurers to describe medical treatment that is appropriate and rendered in accordance with generally accepted standards of medical practice.

Our legislation does what the Health Insurance Association of America recommended. This is the standard that has been used for 200 years. This is the standard that is supported by the medical profession.

The Republican plan knocks that standard out. It knocks it out. What do they put in as a substitute? As a substitute, on page 148, they say "medical necessity" used in making coverage determinations is determined "by each plan." "By each plan." The plan can define medical necessity any way it wants.

In their appeals procedure we find that medical necessity issues can be appealed, but medical necessity is defined by the HMO.

That sounds complicated. What does it mean in real terms? Let me read you a few examples of how HMOs have defined medical necessity. Here is a company—I will not give its name—and their definition. The company:

... will have the sole discretion to determine whether care is medically necessary. The fact that care has been recommended, provided, prescribed or approved by a physician or other provider will not establish the care is medically necessary.

In other words, medical necessity is whatever the HMO says. Whatever the HMO says.

Here is an example of Aetna U.S. Health Care, the provision in their Texas contract:

The least costly of alternative supplies. . . .

Here is another HMO:

The shortest, least expensive, or least intensive level. . . .

They throw out the medical necessity standard used for 200 years and say, medical necessity will be whatever the HMO wants it to be. That is the heart of this issue.

What do we find when the HMO uses their own medical necessity definition? Who makes the judgment? It is an insurance company bureaucrat. That is what this amendment is all about.

Finally, when you see the appeals procedures which will be addressed by my other colleagues, all you have to do is look at the Consumers Union and many other consumer groups. The consumer groups believe their appeals procedure does not provide adequate protections.

The American Bar Association believes basic consumer protections are not met. The American Arbitration Association makes the same judgment.

This is a status quo amendment. If you want to do nothing about the pain and injury being experienced by children, women, and family members in our country, go ahead and support this program. It is an industry protection amendment. It will protect the profits of the industry; it puts the profits of the industry ahead of protecting patients.

I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts is absolutely correct. This amendment essentially puts into the bill the basic premise of the Republican plan, which is to let the HMO define what is medically necessary, decide what the treatment should be, what the length of hospitalization should be for a patient, not based on that patient, not based on medical necessity, but based on standards that individuals who have not even seen the patient determine.

I must tell you I have a very real problem with that. The insurance plan would determine medical necessity, not the physician who sees the patient. It would substitute an independent review process for the knowledge and the skill of the independent physician who is actually seeing the patient, who has done the diagnosis, who knows the patient, the patient's history the patient's problems.

This past week I spent a good deal of time in California talking with physicians and patients up and down the State. I probably talked with more than 50 people, including patients, hospital administrators, county medical societies of many different counties as well as the California Medical Association. What I found was a dispirited, demoralized medical profession because medical decisionmaking was being taken out of their hands. I learned that a physician would prescribe medication, the patient would go to the druggist to have the medication filled and the druggist would make a substitution, often without even the doctor knowing. The patient would say: I cannot take this drug. And the pharmacist would have to say: We cannot furnish what your physician prescribed because it was not on your plan's list. This is what we mean by medical necessity—the most appropriate medical treatment for that particular patient in the judgment of the treating physician.

I contend there is not anyone who has not seen a patient, who doesn't know what patient is all about, who can adequately prescribe for that individual. That, in fact, is what is happening.

Let me read a statement by someone who testified before a congressional House committee a couple of years ago in a hearing. This individual was the reviewer for an HMO. As an HMO reviewer, she countermanded a physician. Let me read her words:

Since that day I have lived with this act and many others eating into my heart and soul. For me, a physician is the professional charged with the care of healing of his or her fellow human beings. The primary ethical norm is, 'Do no harm.' I did worse. I caused death.

Instead of using a clumsy weapon, I used the simplest, cleanest of tools, my words. This man died because I denied him a necessary operation to save his heart. I felt little pain or remorse at the time. The man's faceless distance soothed my conscience. Like a skilled soldier, I was trained for this moment. When any moral qualms arose I was to remember I am not denying care, I am only denying payment.

That is why this Republican amendment is so fallacious. Let me read the actual language in the bill:

A review of an appeal under this subsection relating to a determination to deny coverage based on a lack of medical necessity and appropriateness, or based on an experimental or investigational treatment, shall be made only by a physician with appropriate expertise including age appropriate expertise, who was not involved in the initial determination.

My father, chief of surgery at the University of California, would turn over in his grave with this kind of language. That is not what someone goes to medical school and does a residency, does a surgical residency, does graduate school work for, to get overturned by an insurance company reviewer who has not even seen the patient. This amendment, I contend, is in the worst of medical practice because it allows a panel that has never seen the patient to make the determination of whether a patient gets a lifesaving operation, gets a drug that might make them well, gets a treatment from which the physician thinks they might benefit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I would like to answer my good friend from California. I do not believe she was listening to my explanation of what this bill does. In fact, we do throw out 200 years of law practice. That shakes the legal community up a bit because they have to learn what is going on in modern medical situations. They have to become aware of how they find out what the best medicine is, not necessarily what is used in that area. It is the best medicine available.

We set a higher standard, and that is why the legal profession is a little bit upset. They do not want to have to learn all this medical stuff. They want to go back to the good old days when they could just call the local doctor and say: What is the general medical practice? And whatever that doctor does is the general medical practice. That is the present standard. We say that is not good enough now.

We are going to make sure that every person in an HMO has the right to the best medical care available, and that is what we explained with chart 1, chart 2, and chart 3. The decision is made by the external reviewer who says: Look, you can use this treatment now, you can use this pharmacy prescription, and that can be cured. You did not use it, you are not going to use it—that is wrong. Give them that care.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. JEFFORDS. Certainly.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Does the Senator from Vermont really believe the best treatment can be provided by a reviewer who has never seen the patient?

Mr. JEFFORDS. There is nothing that says the reviewer never sees the patient. The reviewer is an expert. He is the one who is qualified in that profession to know, who reviews the records. There is nothing that says he cannot also see the patient and interview the patient. This is not going to be a judgment done in some courthouse with a jury determining something. This is going to be done by an expert in the field who is dealing with a patient to make sure that patient gets the best available health care, the best of medicine that is available.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Will the Senator yield to me a moment?

I met some of the reviewers this past week. They did not see the patient. They made the decisions based on their insurance companies' definitions of medical necessity, not based on the particular needs of the individual patients.

Mr. JEFFORDS. This is new. This does not exist anywhere. We are creating a new policy to ensure the best health care possible for every American.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. I want to ask the Senator from California a question. Where in the earlier response does it say they will use the best practices?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. It does not.

Mr. KENNEDY. It does not say that. To the contrary, does the Senator not agree that we have example after example where HMOs have used definition based on lowest cost?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. As a matter of fact, I can read terminology right out of insurance contracts, which I was going to read had my amendment been able to come to the floor. As the Senator knows, the purpose of this amendment is essentially to defeat the amendment I was going to offer, that I did offer to the Agriculture Appropriations bill and that I said last week that I was going to offer to this bill, to allow the physician to give the treatment and prevent the HMO from arbitrarily interfering with or altering the treating physician's decision, whether it be the treatment or the hospital length of stay.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Massachusetts.

There are two pernicious parts to this amendment. One is removing the accurate definition of medical necessity, as the Senators from Massachusetts and California have pointed out, and the second is putting in an appeals process that is nothing short of bogus in a whole variety of ways. When you look at the appeals process that is being substituted by the Senator from Vermont, you understand how grudging it is, how imperfect it is, how it will not do the job. Let me give a few examples.

First, there is no timeliness. The HMO can initiate the appeals process whenever it wants. It could wait 3 months or 6 months or 9 months before review. Our amendment, which the Senator from North Carolina and I will offer, requires the review process to start when the patient asks.

Second, there is no requirement that the appeals process, after it is finished, be implemented. The HMO can appeal and appeal and appeal.

The two I want to focus on this afternoon are these: First, it is much more limited in scope. I say to my friends and my fellow Americans who are watching this debate, this is not two competing bills; this is one bill that does the job and one bill that seeks to please the insurance industry and still make it look as if the job is being done.

One of the main issues is scope: 160 million covered versus 48 million covered for emergency room, for medical necessity, and for other things. Thirty-eight million people would be included in the Schumer-Edwards amendment who are excluded by this amendment.

Perhaps the greatest area where this amendment is a false promise, is a hoax, is the independent review. The Senator from Vermont said the review is independent. Not so. In the amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont, the reviewer is appointed by the HMO. The reviewer is not even required to have no financial relationship with the HMO. Theoretically, under this proposal, the HMO could pay an "independent" reviewer. If we want an independent external review, why shouldn't that reviewer have no ties to the HMO?

How can we tell people that an independent review is independent when the insurer selects the reviewer? If you have ever heard of the fox guarding the chicken coop, here it is. An independent review, as in the amendment we will be voting on in the next few days, requires that the HMO not pick the reviewer. I know the Senator from Vermont has stressed that a pediatrician would review a child's case. I say to my colleagues, if I were a member of an HMO, I would not want a pediatrician who has a financial relationship with the HMO to review the case.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SCHUMER. The Senator did not yield to me. I will wait until his time to answer a question.

What I am saying is this: If you want a real review, and hundreds of thousands of Americans want such a review, then vote against this amendment, wait for the Schumer-Edwards amendment, and you will get a true independent review.

In conclusion, this is not so different from the gun debate we had a month and a half ago, where we had a powerful special interest on one side and the American people on the other side, and there were a series of proposals put forward that the powerful special interests liked but were intended to make the American people believe we were making progress.

I cannot tell you how or where or when, but just as in the gun debate, the American people will not be fooled. They want, they demand, a real Patients' Bill of Rights, one that covers 160 million Americans, not 48 million, one that has a real review process, not a sham review process where the reviewer can be paid by the HMO. Please vote down this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 5 minutes has expired.

Who yields time to the Senator from Pennsylvania?

Mr. JEFFORDS. I yield the Senator from Pennsylvania 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, it is extraordinarily complex to work your way through the various provisions. Representations are being made on both sides of the aisle which are contradictory.

The Senator from New York has just made a contention that the independent reviewer is not independent at all. My reading of the provisions in S. 326 at page 177 set forth the qualified entities as the reviewers and the designation of independent and external reviewer by the external appeals entity which specifies independence.

I will not take the time now to read it. But that reference, I think, would establish the true independence of the reviewer.

My principal purpose in seeking recognition was to deal with the comparison of the standards for "medical necessity," which is the core of the argument at the present time.

The pending amendment seeks to strike the language of the Kennedy amendment, which defines medical necessity as "medical necessity or appropriate means with respect to a service or benefit which is consistent with generally accepted principles of professional medical practice."

The language of the pending amendment, which would be substituted, provides for a standard of review as follows, at pages 179 and 180:

IN GENERAL.—An independent external reviewer shall—

(I) make an independent determination based on the valid, relevant, scientific and clinical evidence to determine the medical necessity, appropriateness, experimental or investigational nature of the proposed treatment; and

(ii) take into consideration appropriate and available information, including any evidence-based decision making or clinical practice guidelines used by the group health plan or health insurance issuer; timely evidence or information submitted by the plan, issuer, patient or patient's physician; the patient's medical record; expert consensus; and medical literature . . .

The accompanying report amplifies "expert consensus" as "including both what is generally accepted medical practice and recognized best practice" so that the language of the statute itself is more expansive in defining "medical necessity." The commentary goes on to include generally accepted medical practice and adds to it: the recognized best practice.

There is no doubt that in the articulation of these competing provisions, an effort is being made by one side of the aisle to top the other side of the aisle. It is a little hard, candidly, to follow the intricacies of these provisions because, as is our practice in the Senate, an amendment can be offered at any time, and to work through the sections and subsections is a very challenging undertaking.

Mr. SCHUMER. Would the Senator from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. SPECTER. No, I will not, but I will yield in a minute. I will not now because I am right in the middle of my train of thought. I will be glad to yield in a moment and respond to whatever question the Senator from New York may have.

I supported the Robb amendment, the last vote, because the Robb amendment had provided a standard for medical necessity, generally accepted medical principles, important operative procedures. At this stage of the record, without that definition of the requirement, as articulated in the Robb amendment, I thought that was improvement.

Now we are fencing. To say that the air is filled with politics in this Chamber today would be a vast understatement. But in at least my effort to try to understand what is going on and to make an informed judgment, I am prepared to make a judgment for the Robb amendment or the Kennedy amendment or the Schumer amendment contrasted with the Nickles amendment or the Jeffords amendment. It requires a lot of analysis.

But as I read these plans, I believe that Senator JEFFORDS, Senator FRIST, and Senator NICKLES are correct, that when you take a look at the language they are substituting, it places a higher standard on the HMO, the managed care operation, than does the provision in the Kennedy amendment which they are striking.

Now I would be glad to yield to the Senator from New York on his time.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. SPECTER. I am yielding for a question.

Mr. SCHUMER. I appreciate the Senator searching to come up with the right solution here. I would ask him—he is an excellent lawyer, far better than I am—on page 179 of the bill, (iv), says:

receive only reasonable and customary compensation from the group health plan or health insurance issuer in connection with the independent external review . . .

It seems to me—and I ask the Senator the question—that the plan proposed in the substitute envisions the insurer paying the reviewer. That seems to me not to be an independent review.

Mr. SPECTER. I ask the Senator, where are you reading from?

Mr. SCHUMER. This is S. 326, page 179. That is, as I understand it, the exact language of the amendment offered by the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. SPECTER. Would the Senator restate the question?

Mr. SCHUMER. Yes. My question is, given that the amendment envisions the insurer paying the reviewer, as listed in little number (iv) on page 179, how can we say the review in the Jeffords amendment is independent?

Mr. SPECTER. The fact that the insurer pays the reviewer does not impugn or impinge upon the reviewer's objectivity when there are specific standards for the selection of the reviewer and specific standards that the reviewer has to follow.

If I could use an analogy from a practice that I engaged in for a long time as district attorney of Philadelphia, the State paid the fee for the defendant in first-degree murder cases. But there was no doubt that notwithstanding the fact that the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania paid defense counsel, the defense counsel worked in the interests of the defendant.

When you have a determination as to what the HMO ought to be doing, that is something they ought to pay for. But there ought to be a structure to guarantee objectivity by the decision-maker.

Similarly, if I can amplify, if you have a Federal judge paid by the Federal Government, and the Federal Government is a party to the process, nobody would say that Federal judge is going to be biased toward the Federal Government simply because the Federal Government pays his salary.

Mr. SCHUMER. Would the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SPECTER. I do.

Mr. SCHUMER. If we could give these reviewers lifetime appointments and salary, I might agree with the analogy of a federal judge. But, of course, these reviewers could be immediately—

Mr. SPECTER. The defense lawyers do not have lifetime appointments.

Mr. SCHUMER. I understand.

The second question: On page 175, this reviewer is selected by the HMO, whereas in our plan there is an independent selection process. Again, I rely on the Senator's much greater knowledge of the law. If the reviewer were not selected by the HMO, they would obviously be more independent. That is on page 175.

Mr. SPECTER. If I may respond, on page 177, the qualified entities are defined, and they are the ones that make the determination of the independent reviewer. And a qualified entity is defined to be:

(I) an independent external review entity licensed or accredited by a State;

(II) a State agency established for the purpose of conducting independent external reviews;

(III) any entity under contract with the Federal Government to provide independent external review services;

(IV) any entity accredited as an independent external review entity by an accrediting body recognized by the Secretary for such purpose; or

(V) any other entity meeting criteria established by the Secretary for purposes of this subparagraph.

I think that language answers the question of the Senator from New York about independence and expertise.

Mr. SCHUMER. I ask the Senator, wouldn't we be better in guaranteeing independence by having the selection of the review panel be made independently of the HMO, given that the HMO—I understand there are some criteria here, but if we are trying to get a truly independent process, it strikes me that it would be a lot better to have the selection be made truly independently, not by the HMO, which obviously has an interest, albeit, as the Senator certainly recognizes and pointed out, with a bunch of criteria.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, if I may respond, I don't understand the question. The reason I don't understand the question is that the specification of independence here is so comprehensive that it guarantees independence.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 8 minutes to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, if the Senator from Pennsylvania will respond to a question.

Mr. SPECTER. I am glad to respond to a question at this time.

Mr. EDWARDS. I am looking at page 30 of the actual amendment that has been offered. Looking under subsection (B)(ii), this is the designation of independent external reviewer, which goes to the very heart of whether the review is independent or, in fact, is not independent. In subsection (ii) it says there is a requirement that the reviewer "not have any material, professional, familial, or financial affiliation with the case under review."

My question to the Senator is—and I would like to see the language in the actual amendment, if he could point to it—what is it that requires that the reviewer not have an ongoing financial relationship with the health insurance company or with the HMO, which would in fact, as the Senator I am sure would recognize, make them not independent?

Mr. SPECTER. Well, I believe that that is provided by the high level of independence specified in the preceding section (3)(A)(ii) which establishes the independence of the qualified entity which selects the independent reviewer.

Mr. EDWARDS. My question is, Can you point to specific language in the bill that requires that the reviewer, in order to be independent, not have an ongoing financial relationship with the health insurance company?

Mr. SPECTER. Well, there is no suggestion that there would be that kind of a relationship. The language which the Senator from North Carolina cited takes care of one category of potential conflict of interest, that they will not have any material, professional, familial, or financial affiliation with the case under review, the participant or beneficiary involved, the treating health care professional, the institution where the treatment would take place, or the manufacturer of any drug, device, procedure, or other therapy proposed for the participant or beneficiary whose treatment is under review.

If your question is, Would there be a triple firewall if you also specify the HMO? I would be inclined to have all the firewalls I could, as I do when I draft documents, as my distinguished colleague did when he practiced law.

Mr. EDWARDS. I thank the Senator very much, and I reclaim the remainder of my time.

Mr. President, there are two fundamental problems with this amendment that go to the very heart of this debate. First, as my colleague from New York pointed out, this review is not an independent review. It is not an independent review by any definition of independence. The reason is, No. 1, the health insurance company, the HMO, chooses the entity which chooses the reviewer. I want to be precise here. That is exactly what the bill provides. The health insurance company chooses an entity; that entity chooses the reviewer. So the health insurance company has control over who ultimately does the review.

No. 2, the only requirement with respect to financial independence or professional independence is the requirement that I just read to the Senator from Pennsylvania, that the reviewing entity not have a financial or professional relationship with the very specific case under review, which means there is nothing to prohibit a reviewer, the so-called independent reviewing body under their amendment, from being somebody who has a longstanding, ongoing relationship with the health insurance company or with the HMO.

Nobody in America, certainly none of my colleagues in the Senate, would believe that an independent review could be conducted by somebody who has an ongoing contractual relationship and receives money from the health insurance company. There is absolutely nothing in this bill which prohibits that. That is why the Senator from New York and I have proposed an amendment that makes it very clear that there is a truly independent reviewing body. That independence is critical and to the very heart of the review process. It is why we need it.

I notice both the junior and the senior Senators from Pennsylvania are on the floor now. In Pennsylvania, these reviews are conducted by a State regulatory body. They are not conducted by some person chosen by an HMO or a health insurance company. Second, in terms of what can be reviewed under the State law of Pennsylvania, any consumer grievance can be reviewed. It is not, as this bill is, limited to what constitutes medical necessity.

Third, under the law of the State of Pennsylvania, the review is de novo, which is absolutely not what this amendment provides.

Let me go back and summarize where we are. No. 1, we don't have, under this amendment, an independent review. We don't have it for two fundamental reasons: No. 1, the health insurance company, the HMO, is allowed to select the body that picks the reviewer. No. 2, the reviewing body is allowed to have a longstanding professional or financial relationship with the HMO that has denied the claim. There is absolutely nothing to prohibit that under this bill. Our amendment, which will be considered at a later time, would not allow that. So there is no independent review.

The second problem is—and this goes to the amendment offered by my colleague from California—this review process is meaningless so long as the reviewing body is bound by the definition of medical necessity contained and written by the HMO. It is absolutely bound by the language of the HMO.

I will add, in committee—I see my colleagues from Massachusetts and Tennessee are here—Senator KENNEDY asked a question to Senator FRIST. The question was:

Would the Senator accept language that mentions that the decision would be made independent of the words of the contract?

The question Senator KENNEDY posed was: Would you agree that in the appeals process, the determination could be made without regard to the HMO-written definition of medical necessity?

Senator FRIST's answer was: "No, sir," in the committee. So he would not concur to not be bound by the language in the HMO or health insurance contract.

So there are two fundamental problems, and they work in concert to be devastating and to make this amendment devastating to the whole concept of the Patients' Bill of Rights.

No. 1, there is no independent review. The people are picked by the HMO, and they are allowed to have an ongoing financial relationship with the HMO. No. 2, they are bound by an HMO-written definition of medical necessity. That is the very heart of the amendment of my colleague from California, because what this debate is ultimately about is whether health care decisions are going to be made by medical professionals, doctors, or whether they are going to be made by insurance company bureaucrats.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 8 minutes have expired.

Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. I thank the Chair.

First of all, it is with deep regret that I find myself on the opposite side of an issue from my good friend, the senior Senator from Vermont.

The question before us this afternoon is medical necessity. I believe this medical necessity provision is one of the most widely misunderstood issues in this entire debate.

I think what we want to make clear is what we are not talking about this afternoon. We are not talking about erasing the gains managed care has made in bringing down costs. We are not talking about forcing plans to cover unnecessary, outmoded, or harmful practices. We are not talking about forcing plans to pay for any service or treatment which is not already a covered benefit. This is absolutely not about giving doctors a blank check. What we are talking about is making sure that patients get what they pay for with their premium dollars. It is about ensuring that an objective standard of what constitutes prudent medical care is used to guide physicians and insurers in making treatment and coverage decisions.

This provision is about making sure that an infant suffering from chronic ear infections gets drainage tubes to ameliorate his or her condition. It is about making sure that a patient with a broken hip is not relegated to a wheelchair in perpetuity but, rather, given the hip replacement surgery that prudent medical practice dictates.

Although some would have us believe that "medical necessity" would undo managed care by giving doctors the power to dictate what treatments and services insurers must cover, this isn't accurate. The real issue is, how will questions of coverage and treatment be decided?

S. 1344—a bipartisan bill that I have had the privilege of introducing earlier this year with Senators GRAHAM, LIEBERMAN, SPECTER, BAUCUS, ROBB, and BAYH—would codify the professional standard of medical necessity.

As defined, medically necessary services are those "services or benefits which are consistent with generally accepted principles of professional medical practice." This means the care that a prudent practitioner would give. The medical necessity standard is a well-settled principle of legal jurisprudence which has been used by the courts to adjudicate health law cases for nearly a century.

Many insurance contracts in force today contain some version of this standard. In fact, remarkably similar language is found in contracts written by Prudential and Blue Cross and Blue Shield, to name a few. The contractual definition of medical necessity from a Blue Cross contract is care which is ". . . consistent with standards of good medical practice in the U.S."

One of the reasons managed care plans are so adamantly opposed to putting this standard into the law is that some in the industry are beginning to move in a very troubling direction, away from this standard. Here is how an insurance regulator in the State of Missouri explained this very alarming trend:

Increasingly, insurance regulators in my State are finding that insurers are writing "sole discretion" clauses into their contracts—meaning that it is solely up to the insurer to determine whether treatment is medically necessary. Therefore, without an objective standard of what constitutes medically necessary care, and a requirement that treatment and coverage decisions are supported by credible medical evidence, any external appeals process is meaningless.

If an insurance contract gives the plan sole discretion to determine what constitutes medically necessary care, an external review panel's hands are tied; it will have no choice but to enforce the terms of the contract, even if the coverage decision in question is completely irresponsible. Thus, if we don't codify the professional standard, any external review provision we pass in the Senate could be entirely meaningless.

I have a chart here. This includes the actual medical necessity provision from an insurance contract in force today. I have eliminated the company's name, but this tells the whole story. If a plan has the sole discretion to determine what is medically necessary care, it can ignore the doctor's recommendations, the patient's medical record, and any other evidence it cares to overlook in making its determination. You will see it here. Here is the name of the company. That company will have the sole discretion to determine whether the care is medically necessary. The fact that the care has been recommended, provided, described, or approved by a physician or other provider will not establish that care is medically necessary. In other words, talk about putting the fox in charge of the chicken coop. This is it. Here we have the company deciding whether care is medically necessary, and they have the final decision.

Let me give you a real world example of what can happen when a plan has an imprudent definition of medical necessity. A child named Ethan Bedrick was born with cerebral palsy and needed physical therapy to maintain some degree of mobility. The insurer paid for the physical therapy for a while but one day cut off payment for the services—which, by the way, were covered as an unlimited benefit under the plan's contract. The child's doctor thought the care was medically necessary to prevent further deterioration in Ethan's condition, and physical therapy is routinely provided to patients with cerebral palsy.

When the plan was questioned in court as to why the care had been denied, the response was given that it was not medically necessary because, under the plan's definition, medically necessary care is that which will restore a person to "full normalcy." Well, this child has cerebral palsy and he is not going to be restored to full normalcy.

If we do not include an objective standard of medical necessity in this legislation, insurers will be able to bait and switch when it comes to the delivery of services, just as they tried to do with Ethan Bedrick.

The professional objective standard—and not an insurer's practice guidelines or opinions—should be used to determine if care is medically necessary. Without the objective standard, what measure would an appeals body use to determine whether a treatment or coverage decision was accurate or appropriate? Let me deal with two arguments used by those against this medical necessity provision.

First, they say it will prevent "best practices" and will force plans to practice substandard care. I have trouble with that. Since the professional standard of medical necessity has been the standard used by the courts for over a hundred years and it is a feature of many insurance contracts today, why hasn't this already had the effect of preventing "best practice" medicine? In other words, I don't get the argument that somehow you are not going to practice the best medicine because you have to use what is medically necessary. The fact is that this standard does not lock in the state of medical practice today. Why do we make these giant strides forward? Because we are not locked in, as has been suggested.

Second, it is suggested that adopting this standard is tantamount to giving doctors a blank check and will force plans to cover a whole array of services which are not covered benefits, such as aromatherapy.

The plain fact is, if a plan excludes aromatherapy, or any other service, that is the end of the story. It excludes it. It is out. There is no fuss after that. If it is written in there, it is out. A patient would have no basis for an external appeal in a case where a denied service was clearly excluded.

In summary, I urge colleagues not to be swayed by the health insurance industry. Both Democrats and Republicans alike acknowledge the need for an external appeals process. But make no mistake about it, without a provision to ensure that plans are held to an objective standard of professional medical practice, legislation giving patients access to the external process will be ineffective.

I thank the Chair and the managers of the legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes, and then I will yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Maine.

My amendment is pending. I will review where we are today. My amendment does two things. No. 1, it strikes certain provisions that we believe will be harmful to the quality of health care, and it goes back to medical necessity and defining medical necessity in Federal statute. We will come back and talk about that. My colleagues will talk further about that shortly. We also strike certain provisions that will increase cost and ultimately reduce access to health insurance coverage. Again, people have heard me again and again going back to the patients. We can simply not do anything. I believe it diminishes quality and at the same time diminishes access to make ourselves feel good.

Now, what we have done, we struck that and we replaced that part of the bill—the accountability provisions, the provisions on internal appeal, on external appeal, the issues we have been talking about in the last 15 or 20 minutes—although there is a lot of misconception that we need to straighten out before we actually vote on this bill, because the internal appeals process and external appeals process, which in many ways are the heart of the Patients' Bill of Rights bill, are important to ensure that patients do get the medical care they need and ensure that ultimately it is physicians, not trial lawyers, not bureaucrats, who make the coverage decisions regarding medical necessity. That is what this amendment is all about. I want to steer the discussion right there.

To simplify things, so we will know how the process works, if you are a doctor and you are a patient, and you say that a particular procedure should be covered, and your plan for some reason says no, well, you need an appeals process if that is what you really believe is appropriate to get that sort of care. What you do under our bill is go to an internal appeals process and work through. That is something in the managed care network. It might be going to another physician within the network. It is a process that has to be set up by each and every managed care plan. That is what we call an internal appeals process.

The bill on the other side of the aisle also had an internal appeals process. If the doctor and patient and the managed care internally could not come to an agreement after going through a specified process, at that point the doctor and patient can go outside the plan. This is where the accountability is so important: Should my plan cover what is medically necessary and appropriate? Outside the external appeals process is where much of the discussion has taken place.

Our bill has that final decision of whether or not something is covered, whether or not it is medically necessary or appropriate, made by a medical specialist—these are words actually in the bill—independent medical specialist, physician making the final decision, not some bureaucrat, not some health care plan, not some trial lawyer. An independent medical specialist is making the final decision in this external process.

Mr. President, 20 minutes ago we had discussed that the external reviewer has to be independent—it is written into the bill that way—has to be a medical person from the same field, a specialist, if necessary. Are they part of the Health Maintenance Organization? Does the Health Maintenance Organization actually hire that person to make a decision?

We have not talked about what our bill does. Our bill says in this external review process there has to be a designated entity. Nobody has talked about that today. Words such as “unbiased, external entity” are in the bill. This unbiased entity is regulated by either the Secretary of Health and Human Services in Washington, DC, by the Federal Government, or by the State government. They regulate that entity, not the plan itself.

What about the independent reviewer? Where do they come from? The impression which I have heard again and again is the independent reviewer has ties to the medical care plan and will give a biased view. No; the independent medical specialist making the binding final decision is appointed by the third party entity—not the plan itself but this third party entity regulated by the Federal Government, State government, or signed off for by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. This independence from plan to entity has to be unbiased. That is No. 1, to assure independence.

No. 2, the entity is regulated by the Federal Government or the State government or the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

No. 3, it is written in the bill that that entity does the appointment of the independent medical specialist who makes the final decision.

What information does that medical specialist use to make the final decision? We don't limit the information. In fact, we encourage them to consider all information. It is very specifically written in the bill that the “independent medical specialist will make an independent determination based on the valid relevant scientific and clinical evidence to determine the medical necessity, appropriateness, experimental or investigational nature of the proposed treatment.” They will take into consideration “all appropriate and available information, including any evidence-based decisionmaking or clinical practice guidelines.”

The point is this external review person is independent and separate from the entity and separate from the HMO.

I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. First, I commend the Senator from Tennessee for his very lucid explanation clearing up a lot of the misinformation about what is in the Republican package with regard to the independent, impartial, unbiased external review.

This is a very complicated issue. On the surface, the Kennedy bill appears to have a great deal of appeal. It sounds so simple. It reminds me of that expression by H.L. Mencken when he said that for every complicated problem there is a solution that is simple, easy, and invariably wrong.

That fits the Kennedy bill on medical necessity.

Physicians clearly must play a central role in care decisions. No one disputes or wants to minimize the critical role of treating physicians in the process of determining what is medically appropriate and necessary care. However, the very same patient can go to different physicians, be told different things, and receive markedly different care.

This chart illustrates the problem. The Washington Family Physicians Collaborative Research Network studied how physicians treat bladder infections for adult women. This is the second most common problem seen in a physician's office. Mr. President, 137 treating physicians were asked to describe their treatment recommendations for a 30-year-old woman with a 1-day history of the infection and an uncomplicated urinary tract infection. They responded with 82 different treatment options.

Which of these is the prudent physician? Which of these 82 different treatments is the generally accepted principle of medical practice as provided by the Kennedy bill? The Kennedy bill would require health plans to cover all 82 different treatments without any thought being given to what is the best treatment, what is the most effective treatment, what is the newest treatment based on the latest in medical research.

Even if something is consistent with generally accepted principles and professional practice, it may not necessarily be the medically best treatment for that patient. Dr. Jack Wennberg is Dartmouth's premier expert in studying quality and medical outcomes. He testified before our committee recently that medical necessity in one community is unnecessary care in another.

Let me give an example from my home State of Maine. The Maine Medical Assessment Foundation conducts peer review and studies area variations in practice patterns in an effort to identify cases in which too many procedures being performed, unnecessarily putting patients at risk. They did a study that showed that physicians in one city in Maine were performing a disproportionately high rate of hysterectomies. They counseled the physicians in that city and were able to lower the rate, thus saving women from being exposed to unnecessary risks of surgery.

I ask my friends on the other side of the aisle, wasn't that review appropriate? Wasn't that review necessary? Wasn't that review a good idea to save these women from undergoing unnecessary hysterectomies?

Let me give some other examples. The Centers for Disease Control estimates that physicians performed 349,000 unnecessary C sections in 1991. Again, these women were placed at risk for unnecessary surgery. Isn't it a good idea to question in some of these cases the decision of the physician to order this unnecessary surgery?

Let me give yet another example. Despite solid evidence that women who undergo breast-sparing surgery followed by chemotherapy or radiation and women who undergo total mastectomies have similar survival rates, regional preferences—as opposed to medical necessity—still prevail in determining treatment.

There was a recent article in the New York Times which showed that the rate of mastectomies was 35 times higher for Medicare patients in one region of the country than in another. According to another study at Dartmouth, women in Rapid City, SD, were 33 times less likely to have breast-sparing surgery than women in a similar city in Ohio.

Yet another example involves children. Today, treatment for frequent ear infections includes the implantation of tubes. I have a nephew who had this procedure, and I am sure many of my colleagues have children who have gone through this as well. In fact, almost 700,000 children in the United States have had this procedure. According to a 1994 study published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, however, this treatment is inappropriate for more than a quarter of these children.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used her time.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield an additional 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine is recognized for an additional 3 minutes.

Ms. COLLINS. In another 41 percent of the cases reviewed, the clinical indications for having the tubes implanted were inconclusive at best.

A 1997 study showed that only 21 percent of elderly patients were treated with beta blockers after a heart attack, despite evidence that mortality rates are 75 percent higher for those not receiving treatment.

I would note, in contrast, that HMO members in plans that submit data to the National Committee on Quality Assurance are 2½ times more likely than members of fee-for-service plans to receive beta blockers.

I could go on and on and on. Perhaps the President's own commission said it best. It concluded that excessive procedures—procedures that lack scientific justification—could account for as much as 30 percent of our Nation's medical bills.

Not to mention posing unnecessary risks as well as pain and suffering for those who undergo these unnecessary procedures.

As we can see by these examples and countless more, there may well be valid, indeed, very worthwhile. In fact, there may be very good reasons for the health plan, in some cases, to suggest an alternative treatment to the one the treating physician has initially selected. It may be far better for the patient than the initial recommendation of his or her physician. These examples show that, even if something is consistent with generally accepted principles of professional medical practice, it is not necessarily appropriate high quality care. That should be our goal. Our goal should be to put the patient first and to provide the best quality care to that patient.

The Republican bill deals with the issue of medical necessity through a strong, independent, external appeals process. That is the way to deal with disputes about medical coverage. A Federal statutory definition of medical necessity is unwarranted and unwise.

I yield the floor, and I reserve the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 5 minutes 30 seconds; the Senator from Massachusetts has 13 minutes 30 seconds.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, that means there is about 20 minutes remaining. Just for the information of our colleagues, I think they can expect a rollcall vote on this and subsequent amendments to begin at about 6:45. So those offices should notify their Senators to expect rollcall votes beginning about 6:45.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, if this definition, the definitions we have been debating on what is medical necessity—if the Republican definitions were supported by medical organizations, I might think they are pretty good. But there is virtually no physician-oriented organization anywhere in the United States that I know of that supports this particular definition of medical necessity. Every single one of them supports the definition in the Daschle bill.

I think the Senator from Rhode Island and the Senator from North Carolina spoke eloquently as to why. Since the Senator from North Carolina remains on the floor, I would like to ask him this question. The Senator from Rhode Island read the definition from a particular insurer. Let me reread it:

[This company] will have the sole discretion to determine whether care is medically necessary. The fact that care has been recommended, provided, prescribed or approved by a physician or other provider will not establish that the care is medically necessary.

Then, in view of that, if you read on the top of page 180, in the bill, which sets out the guidelines for the standard of review for the independent reviewer, at the top of the page and the bottom of page 179:

The independent reviewer will take into consideration appropriate and available information including any evidence-based decisionmaking or clinical practice guidelines used by the group health plan or insurance issuer.

How would an independent reviewer make a decision?

Mr. EDWARDS. Under the definition the Senator has just read—and I might point out the appeals process that is contained in this amendment is completely controlled by the HMO or health insurance company's definition of medical necessity. Throughout the process it is totally controlled by it.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Then if I understand you correctly, if an insurer had in its plan that they will use the least costly alternative available, the independent reviewer would have to find for the least costly alternative?

Mr. EDWARDS. That is absolutely correct.

Let's suppose we had a young child who needed a particular kind of care and every physician who had treated that child recommended the care for the child. But there was a less costly procedure that could be used, so the care was denied. Throughout the appeals process, the determination of whether it ought to be reversed or not would be based on what is the least costly, because it is totally controlled by the definition written by the HMO.

In the language the Senator from California has just read to me, where it says it shall be within the "sole discretion," what that ultimately means is whatever appealing body is deciding, which is bound by that definition, which they are by this amendment—if they are bound by that definition, every appealing body would be left with no alternative but to affirm the decision because the contract says it is left within the sole discretion of the HMO.

It goes to the very heart of the Senator's amendment. It goes to the very heart of this debate. The whole question is, Are health insurance bureaucrats going to make health care decisions or are health care decisions going to be made by doctors and health care professionals?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I just read the language. There is no language in this that says the independent reviewer, even in a case of life or death, would necessarily see the patient.

Mr. EDWARDS. That is absolutely correct. There is nothing that requires the independent reviewer to see the patient. You could have some doctor who is nothing but a bureaucrat, who has not seen the patient, does not know what the patient needs, making the decision.

If I could add one thing, another problem with this so-called independent review process is the HMO, the health insurance company, are the ones that are determining. Remember, they choose this entity that chooses the reviewer. They determine who is biased or unbiased.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. And the entity pays the reviewer as well.

Mr. EDWARDS. They pay the reviewer. We have said it now five different times, but talk about putting the fox in charge of the chicken coop. What we need to be doing is to have some truly independent body making these determinations. They need to be able to make the determination based upon what the patient, in my example the child, really needs, based on what the doctor says the child needs.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. EDWARDS. No, I will not.

It is not based on what some insurance company has written into a HMO or health insurance contract.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. So, in other words—

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, regular order.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I believe I have the floor, Mr. President.

Mr. NICKLES. Parliamentary inquiry. Aren't Senators supposed to go through the Chair?

Mr. KENNEDY. Regular order. Senators are permitted to inquire and ask questions. That is the regular order, Mr. President. I insist on the regular order, not the interruption of the Senator from North Carolina. Whose time is this on, Mr. President?

Mr. NICKLES. The Senator from North Carolina—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time right now, at this point, is not being charged. The Senator from California had 5 minutes that she was controlling after it was allotted by the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Parliamentary inquiry. Can the Senator be inquired of by a Member of the Senate and answer a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The questions are most appropriately addressed through the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. But the Senator is entitled, the Senator from North Carolina, to inquire of the Senator from California, is he not?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Or vice versa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If he does so through the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Chair.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I inquire of the Senator from North Carolina, through the Chair, if I were a woman suffering from ovarian cancer and I have this policy that I read from, and my physician said there is a small chance a bone marrow transplant might help you—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield an additional 3 minutes.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. But there is a small chance a bone marrow transplant might help you, I would advise that you have it, and if the health plan with this language turned it down, I would have no opportunity to have that bone marrow transplant?

Mr. EDWARDS. You would have absolutely no opportunity and no opportunity to have the decision reversed. I might add, there is a double whammy in this amendment. The double whammy is that the only thing that can be appealed is the determination of what is medically necessary, and what is medically necessary, under the language of their bill is—and I am reading now from the bill—“when medically necessary and appropriate under the terms and conditions of the plan,” which is what the HMO and the health insurance company’s contract says.

People are getting whammied twice: No. 1, you cannot appeal but one thing, which is: Is it medically necessary? No. 2, that determination is based on what the health insurance company or the HMO wrote into the plan.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. In other words, if I may, through the Chair, if this amendment were to be adopted, every enrollee of an HMO plan would have to read the fine print very carefully, because all an HMO would have to do is put in a disclaimer, either medical necessity based on least cost or medical necessity based on the fact that the plan would have the ultimate say on how medical necessity is defined.

Mr. EDWARDS. The Senator is correct, and the patient would be stuck with that decision initially by the HMO and would be stuck with it throughout the entire appeals process and would have absolutely—it goes to the very heart of this debate: Do we want health insurance companies deciding what is medically necessary, or do we want health care providers, doctors, and patients making the decisions?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Who have seen the patient.

Mr. EDWARDS. Absolutely, doctors who have seen the patients. We believe doctors ought to make the decisions.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Senator very much. This has been a helpful clarification. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 5 minutes on the bill.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I was trying to make sure our colleagues understand the procedure in the Senate. When you have colloquies, you go through the Chair. I have noticed some colloquies on this side have bypassed the Chair. Some colloquies on that side have bypassed the Chair. That is not the rule of the Senate. It is important we have discussions according to the rules of the Senate. That is the way we should do it. That way, we do not freeze out other colleagues who want to participate in colloquies. I was not trying to get under my colleagues’ skin. It is important we follow the rules of the Senate.

I want to point out that a couple of the statements made by our colleagues are actually very inaccurate. Actually who pays for the plans and entities are very similar in both bills. Under the Democrat bill, S. 6, on page 66: A plan or insurer shall be conducted under contract between the plan or insurer in one or more qualified external appeals entities.

That is page 66.

Under the Republican bill, it is the same thing, the plan selects the entity. They do not select the person who does the review, they select the entity. The entity is licensed by the State, or it is a State agency established for that purpose, or it is an entity with a contract with the Federal Government and they have the reviewers.

My point is, both the Democrat plan and the Republican plan select the entities. They are the same. For them to say, oh, the Republican plan selects the reviewer is false. The Democrat plan, as well as the Republican plan pay for the entities, they select the entities, and the entities themselves are independent, and the entities select the individual reviewer.

There is a little—I do not want to use the word “hypocrisy”; it is not a word

I often use on the floor. But to be railing against the Republican plan, not stating the facts, and then say, oh, by the way; oh, the Democrat plan, the plan selects the entities as well, I just find it to be very inconsistent.

I urge my colleagues to see that in the Republican plan, the proposal we have before us, we say the plans select the entity, and the entity is a qualified entity if it is an independent external reviewer and credentialed by the State or a State agency established for the purpose of conducting the external review, or it is an entity under contract with the Federal Government, or it is an entity accredited as an independent external review entity by an accrediting body recognized by the Secretary of HHS.

I just mention that. It is important we be consistent and that people understand on both sides, the Democrat proposal selects an entity very similar to that of the Republican proposal.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 1 minute to the Senator from California and then 1 minute to the Senator from North Carolina.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I must respond to the Senator from Oklahoma because he mischaracterizes the Democratic plan. His statement might be correct if it were taken in an isolated sense. But if you take it with the medical necessity definitions on page 85 of the Democratic plan, you will see that “a group health plan and a health insurer, in connection with a provision of health insurance coverage, may not arbitrarily interfere with or alter the decision of the treating physician regarding the manner or setting in which particular services are delivered if the services are medically necessary or appropriate for treatment.”

Then it goes on to define medical necessity as a service or benefit which is consistent with generally accepted principles of professional medical practice. It does not give the plan the opportunity in its fine print to throw out medical necessity.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the Senator 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I say respectfully in response to my colleague from Oklahoma that there are two things about which I fundamentally disagree with him. No. 1, under our proposal, the State—totally independent—chooses the reviewing body. If my colleagues are really looking for an independent review, I ask them whether they would agree to allow the State to choose the reviewing body instead of the health insurance company, instead of the HMO choosing the entity that chooses the reviewing body. I cannot imagine how they would disagree with that if they are looking for a truly independent review.

Secondly, the entire issue revolves around what is medical necessity. I say to my colleagues, would they agree to change the language of this amendment so that the initial decision and every appeals decision of the appeals deciding body is not bound by the definition of "medical necessity" contained in the insurance written contract? Because so long as the appeals process is controlled by what the HMO wrote, what the health insurance company wrote at the beginning and all the way through the process, the patient does not have a chance. They will never have a chance. My question is to my colleagues—

Mr. GREGG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. EDWARDS. I will give the Senator an opportunity to respond. My question is whether they will agree, No. 1, with the State choosing a truly independent reviewing body, and, No. 2, whether they will agree that the reviewing body is not bound by a definition written by the health insurance or HMO company.

I yield for a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Who yields time?

Mr. GREGG. We have no time.

Mr. FRIST. We have 5 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield 1 minute to the Senator for a question.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate that.

Mr. KENNEDY. Does the Senator still have time left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority side controls 5 minutes 20 seconds, the minority side, 5 minutes 4 seconds.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I have a question for the Senator from North Carolina which is in reference to the Kennedy bill, section 133, subsection (1)(ii), on page 67:

If an applicable authority permits—

That will be the State authority—more than one entity to qualify as a qualified external appeals entity with respect to a group health plan or health insurer issuer, then the plan or issuer may select among such qualified entities the applicable plan.

So basically if the State picks two or three different reviewers, under your plan, then the plan gets to choose; isn't that correct?

Mr. FRIST. Whose time is this on?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On the majority side.

Mr. FRIST. I yield another 30 seconds.

Mr. GREGG. So there is an option under your proposal where plans would have a choice because that is what the language says?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. EDWARDS. Am I allowed to respond?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the Senator 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. EDWARDS. My response is very simple.

The language on the preceding page requires that the independent external review entity be designated by the State. That is, if I am reading the language correctly, contained on the preceding page. That is designated by the State. In fact, we say—this is at page 11, I say to the Senator—that "No party to the dispute shall be permitted to select the entity conducting the review."

So there are two things operating, I think, in combination in our bill. No. 1, the State has to designate an independent body, and, No. 2, we specifically require that no party to the dispute be involved in designating the reviewing entity.

I might add to that, I think it is also critically important who determines what is medically necessary and what the appeal decision body is bound by in terms of what is medically necessary because I think all of this becomes meaningless if they are bound by what the HMO or health insurance company wrote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired.

Mr. GREGG. Will the Senator yield me another 30 seconds?

Mr. FRIST. How much time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Four minutes 20 seconds. The minority has 4 minutes.

Mr. FRIST. I yield 30 seconds to the Senator.

Mr. GREGG. I, therefore, take it in the Kennedy plan, when it says, "the plan or issuer may select among such qualified entities," that that language is not operative, that that does not exist, that that language is a non-factor.

Let's get serious. This is what your bill says. It says the plans can be selected from the qualified entities. You can pick two or three plans, that the States have chosen to qualify two or three plans, and the people pick the plans. So you are totally inconsistent with your argument.

Mr. EDWARDS. May I respond?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield the Senator 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Carolina is recognized for 30 seconds.

Mr. EDWARDS. There is a very simple, straightforward answer to the question. I understand the Senator is reading the old bill. He is not reading the bill that is presently before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield 4½ minutes—how much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority side controls 4 minutes on the amendment.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield the remaining time to the Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. GREGG. Would the Senator yield me 10 seconds? Because a misstatement was made.

Mr. FRIST. I yield another 30 seconds to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I am reading from S. 6. That is the bill that was laid down. That is the bill we are debating.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. FRIST. I yield 4½ minutes to the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are only 3 minutes 50 seconds remaining on the majority side. The Senator from Wyoming is recognized for that time.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise in strong support of improved, reliable quality care for all Americans. To that end, I am pleased to join my colleagues in debating the dangerous concept of putting into law a definition of medical necessity.

The minority argues that putting a definition of medical necessity into the law would assure health care providers absolute autonomy in making all treatment decisions for their patients. They say that is exactly what they want. It is their prescription for high quality health care.

Well then, when asked what patients and providers would use as a guide for the choice of treatment options and delivery of care, particularly in such a dynamic and constantly innovating field such as health care, the minority relies squarely on "generally accepted medical practice."

The Democrat plan is a trial lawyer's dream. "Generally accepted medical practice" is lawsuit bait. But I can tell you that with the Democrat plan "medical necessity" would be absolutely necessary because it is the only way to bridge the bureaucracy.

This is the bill we are looking at from the Democrats. Who can follow the lines? Each one of those lines represent a lawsuit trap. This is lawsuit bait.

Unfortunately, for patients, "generally accepted medical practice" is the strict application of medical opinion versus the combination of your doctor's good judgment or opinion and the prevailing evidence-based practice of medicine. The minority approach turns its back on the scientific foundation of medicine. But what other solid ground is there upon which we could build greater quality into our health care system?

The minority, for the first time in Federal law, wants to carve this variability into law, and that law will be followed by rule and regulation—more lawsuit bait. This is a Federal one-size-fits-all budget-busting bureaucracy with lots of lawsuit bait and difficulty in following the whole process.

Let me share with my colleagues the language from the minority bill. Under the subtitle of "Promoting Good Medical Practice,"—a good title—lies a provision which, in my estimation, would have the exact opposite effect. The bill reads:

A group health plan, and a health insurance issuer in connection with the provision of health insurance coverage, may not arbitrarily interfere with or alter the decision of the treating physician regarding the manner or setting in which particular services are delivered if the services are medically necessary or appropriate for treatment or diagnosis to the extent that such treatment or diagnosis is otherwise a covered benefit.

Now, let me loop through the rest of their proposal to demonstrate how they essentially "ban" the use of trustworthy science and evidence-based medicine. At the end of the same subtitle, we are offered a definition of medical necessity or appropriateness. It reads, "medically necessary or appropriate means, with respect to a service or benefit, a service or benefit which is consistent with generally accepted principles of professional medical practice."

To recap the minority policy proposal, they've suggested that doctors make decisions about their patients based just on opinion, and that health plans would, by law, have to cover any and every treatment opinion prescribed by providers. The minority may argue that their proposal limits what plans must pay for to the terms of the contract. However, their plan requires plans to cover all treatments deemed medically necessary, so this provision would, in fact, encompass the universe of health care, heedless of quality and contract alike.

It's my opinion, and a major thrust of the Republican bill, that we should be doing everything we can to help health care providers in their efforts to provide the highest possible quality of care to patients. The minority tells doctors, who are now busier than ever and doing their best to stay atop the innovations in medicine, that "it's all on you."

Mr. President, since there has been an effort to infuse real life examples into this debate, it might be helpful for all of the health care consumers at home if we talk about how medical science versus "generally accepted practices" actually translates into real life. In the following examples, you'll begin to understand that "generally accepted practices" vary from town to town, and the gap gets wider from state to state. This basically means that the quality of your health care may depend more on where you live than on what the prevailing best medical science is on your illness.

Here's an example where I can use my home state of Wyoming. The average number of days spent in the hospital during the last 6 months of life for people living in Wyoming was between 4.4 days and 8 days. In contrast, the average number of days spent in the hospital for the last 6 months of life for people living in New York was between 12 and 22 days. This means that there is nearly a 250 percent variation among States for hospital length-of-stay at the end of life. Who's responsible for this variation and what does it mean about the quality of care we're receiving?

More importantly, how does this jibe with legislating a definition of medical necessity? Remember, the minority want us, for the first time, to carve this variability into law. The law will be followed by rule and regulation. Does this mean that for health plans that have beneficiaries in Wyoming and in New York that what might be determined a medically appropriate treatment for a New Yorker would be deemed medically inappropriate for a patient in Wyoming?

This variation is comprehensive, going beyond hospital lengths-of-stay, from the use of drug therapies to surgical practices. One of the most disheartening and horrifying statistic is regarding women with breast cancer. Despite the solid evidence that women who undergo breast-sparing surgery followed by chemotherapy or radiation and women who undergo radical mastectomies have similar survival rates, it is regional preferences, that is, the general practices of a region, that still prevail in determining a woman's course of treatment. In 1996, women with breast cancer in Rapid City, SD were 33 times less likely to have breast-sparing surgery than women in Elyria, OH. How can anybody look at these variations and view them as the only answer to good medicine?

These inconsistencies in the medical care Americans receive are something we all need to address; that includes health plans and doctors, and ourselves. Make no mistake about our potential as Congress to derail the efforts at quality improvement in American's health care if we're not very careful and very thoughtful about what it is we're doing here today.

On a positive note, we are seeing signs of improvement when it comes to doctors and health plans working together to improve the consistency and overall quality of health care. For example, according to a 1997 Quality Compass report by the National Committee on Quality Assurance, over 50 percent of elderly heart attack patients in HMOs that submitted data were treated with beta blockers, which can reduce mortality rates by 75 percent in those patients. In the same year, patients in regular fee-for-service plans received beta blocker only 21 percent of the time. This is almost a three-fold difference when you compare a coordinated approach to care with a "generally accepted practices" approach.

I am very concerned that we need to pass a proposal that responds to these "consistent inconsistencies" in the quality and practice of medicine in this country, while also guarding the doctor-patient relationship. After all, outside of family, many of us view our relationship with our doctor as our most trusted.

The solution lies in building on the doctor-patient relationship and infusing our health care system with evidence-based medicine. Our bill does that. Our bill does not turn a blind eye to either the strengths or the weaknesses of today's health care system.

Our bill takes a look at what we need to preserve and what we need to improve upon, and offers a responsible solution to enhancing quality and ensuring access.

Our bill will provide patients and their doctors with a new, iron clad support system that will insure access to medically necessary care. An independent, external appeals process will be available for patients whose plan has initially denied a treatment request that the patient and doctor have decided is necessary. In other words, our bill gets patients the right treatment, right away. And it's based on the independent decision of a medical professional who is expert in the patient's health care needs. In rendering a decision on the medical necessity of the treatment request, the expert review will consider the patient's medical record, evidence offered by the patient's doctor and any other documents introduced during the internal review. This covers the "generally accepted practice" standard that the minority offers as a singular solution.

Our bill goes further, capturing the other half of good quality health care, which is the evidence-based medicine rooted in science that I spoke about earlier. We would require the expert reviewer to also consider expert consensus and peer-reviewed literature and evidence-based medical practices. Let me say that again; evidence-based medicine, not the varied, town-by-town, tried but not necessarily true, general practice of medicine.

Because we feel so strongly about preserving the trusted relationship between doctors and patients by providing them with the best evidence-based medicine in making treatment decisions, we've included another lynchpin in our bill. We establish the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, whose purpose it is to foster overall improvement in health care quality, firmly bridging the gap between what we know about good medicine and what we actually do in health care today. The Agency is built on the platform of the current Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, but is refocused and enhanced to become the hub and driving force of Federal efforts to improve the quality of health care in all practice environments.

The Agency will assist, not burden physicians, by aggressively supporting state-of-the-art information systems for health care quality. This is in stark contrast to the minority proposal, which would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to Mandate a new, onerous data collection bureaucracy. The Agency would support research in primary care delivery, priority populations and, critical to my state of Wyoming, access in underserved areas. Most important with regard to this research, is that it would target quality improvement in all types of health care, not just managed care. The Agency would also conduct statistically and scientifically accurate, sample-based surveys, using existing structures, to provide high quality, reliable data on health outcomes. Last, the Agency would achieve its mission of promoting quality by sharing information with doctors, health plans and the public, not tying it up in the knots of an expanded Federal bureaucracy. We need to assist the providers on the front lines. Their job is to make clinical decisions. We need to give them the tools to make these medical decisions based on the proven medical advances made every day through our investment in medical research. It would be a huge mistake to put the Secretary and a Federal bureaucracy between doctors and patients.

Clearly, medical necessity is a long and complicated issue. It is also where the rubber meets the road on improving the quality of medicine in the purest sense. This is where we all must pony up on the true intent of our proposals regarding medical necessity. This is where we peel away the rhetoric and reveal the true implications of our vastly different standards regarding the quality of care we are willing to demand for Americans. I, for one, am demanding that my constituents get the best care possible, with a solid basis in proven, quality, evidence-based medicine and timely access to the advancements and innovations in health care.

Mr. President, I understand and greatly respect the role of doctors and all health care providers in this country. It is for that very reason that I support the creation of a new, independent appeals mechanism to support their efforts in treating their patients. This, in conjunction with strengthening the health care system through strong Federal support for access to evidence-based medicine.

Mr. President, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, much of this debate may seem technical, but the definition of medical necessity and a fair and independent appeals process are at the heart of any serious effort to end insurance company abuse. Our plan has it; their program does not. That is why Consumers Union—the outfit that publishes Consumer Reports—calls the Republican program “woefully inadequate” and “far from independent.”

No one supports their program but the insurance companies and the HMOs, the very organizations that profit from the abuses of the status quo. Their program is opposed by the American Cancer Society, and virtually every cancer organization in the country. It is opposed by the American Heart Association. It is opposed by the disability community. It is opposed by the women's community, and the people who represent children. These are the patient groups that have the most to lose from low quality and the most to gain from high quality. And they lose under the Republican program.

This amendment will determine whether Senators stand with the patients or with the HMOs.

We yield back the remainder of our time and are prepared to vote.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. I reserve my time.

Mr. NICKLES. Just to clarify, I think my colleague from Massachusetts spoke incorrectly. The insurance industry does not support our amendment. I think he said that they do. He happens to be factually wrong. I would like to have the RECORD be clear. We ought to be stating facts and we ought to be stating the truth. What he said was not correct. They do not like our bill, either. They have not supported our bill.

My colleague from Massachusetts earlier said they wrote our bill. He is absolutely wrong. I just want to make sure people have the facts.

Mr. President, I will yield back the remainder of our time.

First, I ask unanimous consent that at the expiration of debate time on the pending amendment, votes occur on the following pending amendments: amendment No. 1238, medical necessity, that is the pending amendment; the next amendment would be amendment No. 1236, which is the cost cap, limiting it to 1 percent; the next amendment would be amendment No. 1235 which deals with emergency rooms, by Senator GRAHAM; the next amendment would be amendment No. 1234, deductibility for the self-employed; and the next amendment would be amendment No. 1233, dealing with the scope.

I further ask unanimous consent that following the first vote, there be 4 minutes equally divided for closing remarks prior to the beginning of each vote.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, just in response to the Senator's earlier statement, I wonder why the insurance companies are spending more than $2 million opposing our program.

Mr. NICKLES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I reserve the right to object. Unless I am entitled to speak, I will object, Mr. President.

Mr. CHAFEE addressed the Chair.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I withdraw my objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CHAFEE. I wonder if we could have an agreement that on the successive votes the Senator from Oklahoma outlined there be a 10-minute break, or whatever he suggests, in there.

Mr. NICKLES. I think our friend from Rhode Island has made a good suggestion. I suggested possibly doing that. I think we will possibly do that after the first vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection to the request? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NICKLES. For the information of all of our colleagues, we are now getting ready to begin a series of votes, beginning with the first vote dealing with medical necessity. We expect there will be four votes tonight, so I encourage all our colleagues to come to the floor to vote.

I encourage all of our colleagues to stay on the floor because it is our intention to reduce the time allotted to each vote to 10 minutes after the first vote.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object—

Mr. NICKLES. I did not make a UC.

Mr. REID. Are we going to allow a minute of explanation? Is that in the unanimous consent request?

Mr. NICKLES. Under the unanimous consent that has already been agreed to, we have 4 minutes equally divided.

Mr. REID. I missed that. I apologize.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Massachusetts yield back the remainder of his time?

Mr. KENNEDY. Just 30 seconds of the time to point out, in response to the comments of the Senator from Oklahoma, the insurance industry has just spent $2 million in opposition to our program, which basically includes the provisions so eloquently commented on by the Senators from California and North Carolina. Zero has been spent by the insurance companies in opposition, to my best understanding, to the Republican proposal. If it looks like a duck and quacks like a duck, it is a duck.

This is the insurance company's proposal, the HMO proposal. They are the ones that will gain if this amendment of the Republicans is accepted. There is no question about that. It is the disabled, the cancer groups, and the children who will gain if our proposal prevails.

I yield back the remainder of the time.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1238.

The yeas and nays have not been ordered.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1238. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The result was announced—yeas 52, nays 48, as follows:

The amendment (No. 1238) was agreed to.

Mr. LOTT. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. NICKLES. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that remaining votes in this series be limited to 10 minutes in length. I urge Senators to stay in the Senate Chamber or not to go any farther than the cloakrooms so we can actually hold these next three votes to 10 minutes. Please do so. Senator DASCHLE and I intend to cut off the vote after about 10 or 11 minutes. Please stay in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1236

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 4 minutes equally divided.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield the Senator from Texas 1 minute.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, the Kennedy Patients' Bill of Rights drives up health care costs by 6.1 percent. It causes 1.8 million Americans to lose their health insurance. It raises the cost of health care for those who don't lose their health insurance by $72.5 billion. By driving up labor costs, it would destroy 194,041 jobs in the American economy by the year 2003. These are not our numbers. These are numbers based on estimates done by the CBO and private research firms that have used those numbers to project the economic impact.

Our amendment simply says if the Kennedy bill drives up health care costs by more than 1 percent when it is fully implemented, or if it pushes more than 100,000 Americans off the private insurance rolls by driving up cost, then the law will not go into effect; it will be suspended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. REID. The Senator from Rhode Island is yielded 2 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, once again we hear the same old misestimate of the costs associated with the legislation. The true cost calculated by the Congressional Budget Office is 4.87 percent over 5 years. That is exactly what Senator LOTT said on "Meet The Press" on July 11. In his words, "By the way, the Democratic bill would add 4.8 percent cost. That is less than 1 percent a year."

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, may we have order. I can't hear the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order. Those of you who have conversations, please take them to the Cloakroom. This is important debate.

The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. I thank the Chair.

As I indicated, the true cost is 4.8 percent over 5 years. "That is less than 1 percent a year." That is what Senator LOTT said on "Meet The Press." Indeed, if you calculate that down to a monthly cost, it is about $2 extra a month to the average family paying health care premiums. It is not going to cause a huge eruption of costs.

It is also to me somewhat disconcerting to think that the insurance industry is worried about people losing their health care coverage. They raise costs every day. They will raise costs to protect their profits.

What this legislation wants to do is guarantee that there is quality in the American health care system.

Make no mistake, this amendment is calculated and designed to undercut all the protections in the Patients' Bill of Rights. It is calculated within 2 years to undercut and remove all of the protections that are so necessary to the American family, which we are fighting for.

This would be a recipe also to reward those companies that have excessive costs, and it would be virtually impossible to figure out what costs are associated with their need for profits versus what costs are associated with the increase in quality in the system. They would be doing the audits. They would essentially be exempting themselves. We are giving them a key to let them out of the responsibilities to their patients and to their consumers. We can't do that.

This is just another red herring, another ruse, and another device to prevent the American people from achieving what they definitely want—rights in the health care system.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, just to correct my colleague from Rhode Island, he said the cost of the Kennedy bill is about $2 a month. That is not correct. That is not in CBO's report.

CBO says most of the provisions would take full effect within the first 3 years, not 5 years; not 1 percent, but a total of 6.1 percent. That is S. 6. That is what we are debating. That is what we are amending.

We are saying that costs shouldn't increase by more than 1 percent.

The Congressional Budget Office says the total costs would be $8 billion in lost Social Security taxes and total lost wages would be $64 billion. That is not a McDonald's hamburger. That is $64 billion in lost wages, according to the Congressional Budget Office. That is not a Republican insurance study. That was the Congressional Budget Office that said people would lose $64 billion in lost wages.

They also said as a result of the Kennedy amendment that people would drop insurance entirely; would reduce the generosity of health benefit packages; they would increase cost sharing by beneficiaries.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. NICKLES. I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

The amendment (No. 1236), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1235

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the Graham of Florida amendment. There are 4 minutes equally divided.

The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, most of us here have already voted in favor of the amendment which is before us. In 1997 we adopted virtually this identical language as it relates to the 70 million Americans who are covered either by Medicare or Medicaid. So the question before us is, Should we adopt a different standard of emergency room care for the rest, for the other 190 million Americans?

There are two principal differences between the current law for Medicare and Medicaid and what the Republican alternative would propose. First, as to access to the nearest available emergency room, the current Medicare/Medicaid law says you have the right to go to the nearest emergency room without any additional charge. That is the same provision that is in this amendment. The Republican provision says that a differential charge can be made so you would have to pay more if it happened that the closest emergency room was not an emergency room affiliated with your health maintenance organization.

The second difference is poststabilization care. What is poststabilization care? I quote the language from the Medicare regulations:

Poststabilization care means medically necessary nonemergency services needed to assure that the enrollee remains stabilized from the time that the treating hospital requests authorization from the health maintenance organization.

Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries get the benefit of poststabilization care. Our amendment would make that benefit available to all 190 million non-Medicare/Medicaid Americans. The Republican bill would not. It would not say that you are entitled to medically necessary services to continue you in a stabilized condition after you had contacted your HMO and received authorization to do so.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, there is no reason why all Americans should not have the same benefits that we voted less than 3 years ago to make available to the 70 million Medicare and Medicaid beneficiaries.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, may we have order in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will come to order.

Mr. NICKLES. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Arkansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I say to my colleagues, in the area of emergency group services, both bills eliminate prior authorization, and they should. You should not have to call your insurance company before you go to the emergency room. Both bills establish a process for timely coordination of care, including services to maintain stability of the patient.

I will be offering an amendment that will make it perfectly clear in the Republican bill that there can be no greater costs charged for those going to an out-of-network emergency room as those going to an in-network emergency room. There should not be a differential. I will make very certain in my amendment that there is no such differential.

The Graham amendment is flawed, and it is seriously flawed because it uses language that is confusing for patients, confusing for plans and providers, it is vague and ambiguous, and it does not ensure that poststabilization services are related to the emergency condition. That is a gaping loophole. It is a blank check to say you have to provide services for a condition that is absolutely unrelated to the reason you went to the emergency room.

My amendment I will be offering will fix that vague and ambiguous language to be sure that what is provided in the emergency room for poststabilization services are related to the condition for which the patient went to the emergency room.

This is a very dangerous amendment in that it is vague and ambiguous and leaves a blank check, a gaping loophole that needs to be fixed. I ask my colleagues to reject the Graham amendment.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The amendment (No. 1235) was rejected.

Mr. NICKLES. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1234

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on amendment No. 1234 by Senator NICKLES for Senator SANTORUM. There are 4 minutes equally divided. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield the principal sponsor of the amendment, Senator SANTORUM, 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I rise in strong support and encourage all my colleagues to support this amendment. The amendment does basically two things. No. 1, it establishes 100-percent deductibility for the self-employed, something for which I know many Members of both sides of the aisle have been striving. One of the things we have said about our health care proposal is that ours is much more comprehensive than the Democratic plan. It looks at the issue of access.

Mr. NICKLES. Could we have order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will please come to order. Again, this is an important debate.

The Senator from Pennsylvania is recognized.

Mr. SANTORUM. As I said, our bill is much more comprehensive. We looked at the question of access and making health insurance more affordable to cover more people, to bring them into the insurance market. Our bill, with this amendment, does that.

The other thing we do is we emphasize that we do not want the Federal Government, the Health Care Financing Administration, to oversee State-regulated plans. Almost all 50 States have passed a Patients' Bill of Rights. They traditionally regulate health insurance. They are doing a very good job. We do not need to impose HCFA regulations and HCFA control over every State insurance department. It is the wrong approach. It is Washington getting its teeth into the State pie. That is unnecessary.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. DASCHLE. I yield 1 minute to the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, this vote is directly related to whether the Senate is really interested in covering all Americans who have insurance or whether whatever passes applies to only the 48 million persons who are included in the Republican bill.

In the House of Representatives, all of the leading Republican legislation applies to all patients with insurance through their private employers—the whole 123 million here. The proposals put forward by the House Republicans who happen to be doctors also cover the people in the individual market. But not the Senate Republican bill.

It is an extraordinary irony, but HMOs are found in all of these other categories—under the 75 million, the 15 million, the 25 million—not in self-funded employer plans. So the Republican bill does not even cover the individuals who first raised the whole question of whether their current coverage is adequate. Whatever we are going to do, Republican program or Democrat, let's make sure we provide protections to all patients. Every category here on this chart. That is what our amendment does.

But their amendment would leave out more than 100 million Americans like Frank Raffa, a fire fighter for the city of Worcester, Massachusetts. He puts his life on the line every day, but he and millions of others are left out and left behind with the Republican program. Let's make sure we are going to cover all of them, all the workers in this country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time has expired.

Who yields time?

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Missouri, Senator BOND.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Before the Senator from Missouri starts, the Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, the opponents of this amendment overlook the fact that the States are involved. The States do regulate health insurance. The States are taking care of those they can cover.

This amendment says we should not wipe out State regulation. It also completes the job of ending the tremendous inequity in our health care system which said formerly that self-employed people could only deduct 25 percent of their health insurance premiums. Thanks to the bipartisan support we have had, we say now, by 2003, that there will be 100-percent deductibility. Right now, however, there are 5.1 million uninsured, 1.3 million children. For the woman who is starting a new business, the fastest growing sector of our economy, she starts up an information technology business and she is not able to deduct 100 percent of health care insurance for herself and her family until 2003. She cannot afford to wait to get sick until 2003.

I urge my colleagues to support immediate deductibility.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). The distinguished minority leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I think the distinguished Senator from Pennsylvania had it right. We all support 100-percent deductibility for the self-employed. We just voted for it an hour or so ago. There is no question all of the Senate supports it. We are on record in support of it. The question is whether we should accelerate it. We just voted to accelerate it on this side on the Robb amendment. That isn't the question on this amendment. This amendment is about whether or not we offer 100 million additional Americans the patient protections under the Patients' Bill of Rights.

In order to clarify that, I ask unanimous consent that the deductibility language be added to both the Republican bill, S. 1344, and the Daschle substitute.

Mr. NICKLES. I object.

Mr. DASCHLE. I ask unanimous consent that at least the deductibility amendment be allowed as part of the Kennedy amendment as well.

Mr. NICKLES. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. DASCHLE. That makes it very clear. This vote is about denying millions of Americans the right to patient protections, not about health and deductibility for self-employed businessmen.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1234. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

The result was announced—yeas 53, nays 47, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1233, AS AMENDED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to amendment No. 1233, as amended.

The amendment (No. 1233), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. DODD addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1239 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1232

(Purpose: To provide coverage for individuals participating in approved clinical trials and for approved drugs and medical devices)

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. DODD] for himself, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. REID, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. DASCHLE, proposes an amendment numbered 1239 to amendment No. 1232.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself, Senators HARKIN, BOXER, FEINGOLD, FEINSTEIN, JOHNSON, ROCKEFELLER, KENNEDY, MURRAY, and REID of Nevada.

As I understand it, we will debate it briefly this evening, and then it will be one of the first orders of business tomorrow morning.

This amendment has two parts to it. It would ensure that patients have access to the best possible care in two areas—cutting edge clinical trials and medically necessary prescription drugs.

Until recently, health plans routinely paid for the doctor and hospital costs associated with clinical trials, and many still do. But a growing number of insurance plans are now refusing to pay, disrupting an arrangement that immediately benefited individual patients and advanced our ability to treat future patients.

As my colleague from Vermont will recall from our debate in the Health and Education Committee, which he chairs, this amendment is a moderate one. It would require insurance plans to cover the costs of a patient's participation in clinical trials in only those circumstances that meet the following criteria: One, the clinical trial must be sponsored or funded by the National Institutes of Health, the Department of Defense, or the Veterans' Administration; two, the patient must fit the trial protocol; three, there is no other effective standard treatment available for the patient; four, the patient has a serious or life-threatening illness.

It seems to me that if a patient's situation meets those criteria, insurance plans ought not to deny access to clinical trials. This ought not to be a controversial proposal.

Let me lastly add that the plan's obligation is to pay only for the routine patient costs, not for the costs of running the trial that ought to be paid for by the sponsor of the trial—such as the experimental drug or medical device.

The cost of providing coverage for clinical trials is negligible. After all, similar routine patient costs for blood tests, physicians' visits, and hospital stays are covered for standard treatment anyway.

The Congressional Budget Office found that this patient protection would increase premiums a mere four-tenths of a percent over the next 10 years. That is less than 12 cents per person per month.

Many researchers believe even this minuscule amount is a dramatic overstatement of the cost. In fact, when the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, and the MD Anderson Cancer Center compared the cost of clinical trials to standard cancer therapies, both of these world-renowned cancer centers found that the average cost per patient actually was lower for those patients enrolled in clinical trials. So it actually can save money to give patients access to clinical trials, if you believe Sloan-Kettering and the Anderson Cancer Center.

The American Association of Health Plans—the trade association for the managed care plans—has urged its members to allow patients to participate in clinical trials and to pay the associated doctor and hospital costs. Let me quote from a news release of the American Association of Health Plans. They said:

AAHP supports patients having access to NIH-approved clinical studies, and supports individual health plan linkages with NIH-sponsored clinical trials. AAHP also believes that it is appropriate for health plans choosing to participate in NIH research studies to pay the routine patient-care costs associated with these trials.

This is the very trade association of the insurance plans urging its members to allow access to clinical trials and suggesting they ought to pick up the cost

The release goes on to cite the benefits of participating in clinical trials for patients and for the advancement of medicine.

We are asking that health plans do nothing more than what they already said they want and they intend to do.

The Republican proposal? What do they say about the clinical trials? They say the managed care bill should study this issue further. With all due respect, further studies will only cause unnecessary delays. We already have answers to many of the questions they want to study. We know what hinders a patient's participation in clinical trials. It is the plans' refusal to pay for them. We know what the costs are. They are minuscule. And plans presumably have figured out how to differentiate between costs of running the trials and costs of patient care since many of them already are doing it.

All we would get from another year of delay is more patients with life-threatening conditions being denied access to research that can save their lives.

I know this does not have to be a partisan issue. Republicans have not only supported related legislation but some—including Senator MACK, and my colleague, Senator SNOWE who is on the floor, and Senator FRIST—have been leaders on this issue. Our good friend and colleague from Maine, Senator SNOWE, has authored excellent legislation widely supported, I might add, by patient groups which would broadly provide access to almost all clinical trials for all privately insured patients. I commend her for that bill. Thirteen of our Republican colleagues have cosponsored the Mack-Rockefeller bill that would require Medicare to cover the cost of cancer clinical trials. The Representative from my State, Republican Congresswoman NANCY JOHNSON, has introduced a companion bill with several Republican cosponsors.

What I am offering has broad bipartisan support in a variety of legislative proposals. All we are saying is this Patients' Bill of Rights ought to include it.

Clearly, there is bipartisan interest in making sure patients all over this country with breast cancer, colon cancer, liver cancer, congestive heart failure, lupus, Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, diabetes, AIDS, along with a host of other deadly illnesses, have access to cutting-edge treatments. To allow a plan to deny a patient access to clinical trials is an outrage.

I hope this body will find it in its good judgment to adopt this amendment tomorrow when it comes up for a vote and to allow people to have access to these critical clinical trials.

The second part of this amendment deals with prescription drugs.

Nearly all HMOs and other insurance plans use a preferred list called a formulary to extract discounts from drug companies and to save on drug costs.

Many of the best plans already take steps to ensure these formularies aren't unreasonably rigid by putting processes in place that allows patients access to nonformulary medicines when their own doctors say those drugs are absolutely needed. In fact, the HMO trade association supports this practice as part of its Code of Conduct for member plans.

Why would a patient need a drug that is not in the plan's formulary? Patients have allergies in some cases to drugs on the formulary. They may be taking medications that would have bad interactions with the plan's preferred drugs, or simply have a medical need for access to some product that is not listed in the formulary—rather commonsensical reasons.

Without access to a reasonable process for making exceptions to the formulary, patients may be forced to try two or three different types of older, less effective medications and demonstrate that those drugs don't work or have negative side effects before the plan would allow access to offer formulary prescription drugs.

No patient, in my view, should be exposed to dangerous side effects, or ineffective treatment, just because the cheaper drug in their plan that was chosen does not work as well as the one their doctor would recommend.

I was pleased that during our committee markup our chairman, who is on the floor, and our Republican colleagues agreed to support a portion of the protection in the Democratic Patients' Bill of Rights plan that relates to access to prescription drugs. I will point out that, as with the majority of provisions in the Republican bill, even its limited protection would be denied to more than 100 million Americans whose employers don't self-insure their own health care coverage.

In addition, their provision contains a significant loophole that needs to be corrected. The Republican proposal requires plans to provide access to drugs off the formulary. However, it also says that the insurers can charge patients whatever they want to get those off-formulary products, even if they are medically necessary, and even if the drug is the only drug that can save that patient's life.

This subverts the purported intent of the very provision the Republican bill proposes; and that is to ensure that patients have access to medically necessary care. If a determination has been made by a doctor and the plan that a patient needs that specific drug and no other, why should that patient be subjected to higher costs—conceivably even a 99-percent copay?

The issue is not about patients simply preferring one brand over another. Our concern is for patients for whom a certain product is medically necessary. It is inconceivable they should be charged more for the care they need just because it doesn't make the plans formulary. This amendment would remedy that situation.

Lastly, our amendment would also address another roadblock that patients encounter trying to get life-saving prescription drugs. That is the practice of a plan issuing blanket denials on the ground that a drug is experimental even when it is an FDA-approved product.

If there is any question in your mind why the plans would resort to such a practice, I think it's useful to listen to their own explanation. In a letter to the majority leader in July of last year, the American Association of Health Plans, Blue Cross and Blue Shield, and the Health Insurance Association of America wrote:

If health plans are not allowed to deny coverage on the basis that the device is investigational, the health plans would have to perform a much more costly case-by-case review on the basis of "medical necessity".

They state the case for me.

In other words, according to the health plans themselves, their fear is that if they are prevented from issuing blanket, unfounded denials they might actually have to look at an individual patient's medical needs.

These two provisions of this amendment are critically important. Patients need access to clinical trials and they need access to prescription drugs. It doesn't get more basic than that.

Denying access to clinical trials doesn't just deny good care to the patient today who is desperately in need of a cure, but it denies state of the art health care to future patients as well, by impeding the development of knowledge about new therapies.

Senator MACK, Senator SNOWE, and many others have strongly supported legislation in this area. Some of their bills go further than my amendment does.

I hope tomorrow when the vote occurs we will have the support of a broad bipartisan coalition.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DODD. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from Connecticut, isn't it true we spend billions of dollars at the National Institutes of Health, the Veterans' Administration, and the Department of Defense on medical research that can only be made effective if they have clinical trials?

Mr. DODD. That is correct. The process of finding cures starts with an unknown product first being tested in the laboratory. The second place it is tested is with animals. Third is the clinical trial before it is on the market for general use.

If insurers impede enrollment in clinical trials that phase of research development will be adversely affected and valuable, life-saving products will be delayed from getting on the market for general use by the public.

It is an excellent question.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend, all the money, the billions and billions of dollars, spent by the entities I previously talked about, the money we spend is basically worthless unless we can have clinical trials.

Mr. DODD. To answer my colleague from Nevada, the Senator is absolutely correct. This is a tremendous waste of taxpayer money. There are those, I suppose, who are only concerned about that issue. I appreciate the Senator raising the point because it is indeed a waste of money.

It is also a waste of human lives. I think that people watching this debate here on the floor of the Senate will ask the question: What did the Senate do when it had a chance to protect my family, my child, my wife or my husband, to give them access to the cutting edge technologies when my insurer says no. I think they will be outraged if we don't provide them this protection.

In addition to the monetary cost issue, which our distinguished friend from Nevada has raised, to cause a human life to be lost because we denied access to clinical trials, I argue, is an even greater loss.

Mr. REID. There have been some who say it is too expensive. The Senator is aware of plans that have cut off clinical trials because it is "too expensive."

What I hear my friend saying is, the real expense is in the pain and suffering of the families who suffer from Parkinson's, Alzheimer's, lupus, and all the other diseases that the Senator has outlined so clearly.

Is it not true that is where the real suffering comes and that is where the expense comes—in the pain and suffering to those people—if we don't allow the clinical trials?

Mr. DODD. I appreciate the question of my colleague.

He is absolutely correct. I will make a dollars-and-cents case. The cost is 12 cents per patient per month, a negligible cost.

As I mentioned in earlier remarks, when Sloan-Kettering Cancer Institute and the MD Anderson Cancer Center examined the issue of cost—two world-class cancer research centers—their conclusion was that clinical trials are actually less costly than the standard care that will be used in the absence of clinical trials. "Less costly" is their conclusion.

If your argument is we cannot do this because it costs too much, one estimate suggests 12 cents per patient per month, and two of the world-class cancer centers in the world think it is actually a lower cost using the clinical trials.

Mr. REID. The final question I ask my friend from Connecticut: Isn't it true that huge amounts of money will be saved if these clinical trials are proved effective? The Senator knows that half the people in our rest and extended care facilities are there because of Parkinson's and Alzheimer's.

Assume, for example, that these clinical trials would delay the onset of one of these two diseases or if some miracle would occur we could cure those diseases. Would that save this country money?

Mr. DODD. The cost in savings would be astronomical.

When we delay a product going from the research phase to general use because patients are shut out of clinical trials, not only do patients today suffer, but future patients suffer, and the costs to the health care system as a whole go up.

AIDS is a wonderful example of this—the AIDS clinical trials have saved literally thousands of lives. People are working today who would not have been able to do so had it not been for clinical trials that helped to develop powerful new drugs. Imagine if the treatments that exist today existed a few years ago, what a different world it would be and how many lives would not have been lost—productive citizens today who would make a contribution to our society.

I reserve the remainder of our time.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I commend my good friend on the committee for the work he has done in this area. This is an area where we have joined together. It will ensure that we have a change, a positive change in the clinical trial aspect. I want to work together with the Senator in that regard.

I also want to say this bill is not finished yet. We have places to go and time to spend to bring it to a better form than it is now. I look forward to continuing to work to improve the bill.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. DODD. How much time remains? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has 29 minutes 33 seconds, and the Senator from Vermont has 49 minutes 15 seconds.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I think we are ready to do wrap-up.

Mr. JEFFORDS. That is my intention.

Mr. REID. The time has stopped running on the bill for both the majority and minority.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, this evening I cast several difficult votes regarding core principles facing this body as we work to ensure the health care rights of Americans are protected.

I voted for an amendment creating an external appeals process for patients who are denied medical care by their health plan. While I strongly support this initiative, I am concerned that this specific proposal needs further strengthening ensuring that the individual health care rights of Americans are the priority. I will be working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to strengthen the external appeals process, including access to reasonable legal remedies while ensuring that the external review process is conducted by unbiased and independent entities whose sole purpose is to protect the rights of American patients.

In addition, I support guaranteeing an individual medical care in an emergency room without prior approval from their HMO if the person believes that it is an emergency situation. However, I was forced to vote against an amendment which provided this protection but then superseded state rights and created an opportunity for emergency rooms to begin providing a litany of treatments outside of the realm of the perceived emergency which could have negative financial repercussions.

Finally, I support providing American women with direct access to OB/GYNs and ensuring they receive quality health care while battling breast cancer. However, I was forced to vote against an amendment providing this critical access because it eliminated an important provision ensuring that health care costs do not skyrocket thereby causing thousands, if not millions of new Americans to lose their health care coverage.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, today I take this opportunity to comment on the pending bill.

In my view, what we are discussing today is the most costly big-government health care plan since the Clinton health care reform plan was debated earlier this decade. We all know the fate of that attempt, and it is my hope we might now allow common sense to play a part in creating a Patients' Bill of Rights.

The demands on our health care system have changed dramatically in the past decade. So has our health care system. But, those changes have not affected all people evenly, and it's clear many people have had unfortunate experiences.

Going from the traditional doctor-patient relationship into a system where all aspects of care are subject to approval and authorization is understandably difficult. But, as the cost of quality care became an obstacle to access, the concept of managing care has evolved as the predominate method of insured medical service.

While health care in America, and our advances in medical technology remain the envy of the world, it would be a serious mistake to pretend that all are well-served by our present health care system.

The Federal Government, in an effort to give all Americans access to affordable care, has, in fact, encouraged participation in managed care plans. All federally-sponsored health care, which includes Medicare, Medicaid, the Federal Employees Health Benefit program and military health care, has experienced the emergence of managed care. Now we must deal with the issue of ensuring health care quality as a first priority. And we must do it in a way that will not raise costs of care or cause employers to stop offering health insurance.

While managed care has become the dominant delivery method of cost-effective healthcare in our nation, what is missing are standards that will ensure fairness to both patients and providers, and clarify what are often confusing medical and legal terms and hidden rules for both parties. The question before us now is how best to protect these patients while giving the health care industry incentives for finding efficient methods of delivering care.

All of us expect the highest quality health care for the citizens of this country, but, that care must be affordable. Anyone that believes having Congress dictate a costly, one-size-fits-all mandate will make health care more affordable or more available is, I believe, severely out of touch with reality.

That is why I am concerned about the pending legislation. This bill mandates new regulations which would increase premiums by 6.1 percent, not including inflation. It could raise the cost of a typical family's health insurance policy by more than $300 per year. That is not logical, responsible or acceptable. We have been down this road before with the "catastrophic health" bill of 10 years ago. The Senate passed it because people were told premium increases would be minimal. Then people got their bill. This pending bill will drive up the number of uninsured Americans. In my State of Colorado, it is estimated that this legislation would add more than 32,000 persons to the rolls of the uninsured. Our biggest health care problem already is that there are currently 43.5 million uninsured Americans. Who pays for their inevitable medical care? You, I, and every other taxpayer. It is clear that increased mandates increase costs, and that those increased costs reduce coverage.

It is no secret that higher health insurance premiums will force employers to drop optional medical coverage they offer employees. That should not be the intention of this legislation, but it is the reality. Every time a mandate raises the cost of insurance by one percent, more than 200,000 Americans lose their coverage.

Small businesses would drop coverage if exposed to the pending bill's liability provisions. Canceling coverage leaves patients exposed to expensive medical bills. That's not patient protection. We cannot pass legislation that forces employers to provide health care. They will close shop, because they can't afford it. The pending bill will lead to government-run health care. The bill's mandates could cost the private sector more than $56 billion, greatly exceeding the annual threshold established in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act, which most Members of this body voted for.

Many States are currently developing patient-protection legislation through their State legislatures and assemblies. My State of Colorado has already established mandates concerning an independent external review process for denied claims, a ban on gag clauses, and direct access to OB-GYN services.

Despite that fact, the pending bill, in an attempt to tighten federal control over the entire U.S. health system, applies federal mandates to all health insurance products.

Mr. President, I believe it is time to put the brakes on the runaway one-size-fits-all mandates which are inflicting hardship on our most vulnerable citizens and legitimate health care providers. The time to protect patients and providers is before costly mandates are enacted into law.

Let us think ahead. We have already seen through our experience with the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, that well-intentioned solutions enacted by Congress can turn into unworkable, burdensome regulations when imposed on the entire health care system. We are discussing sweeping legislation which, if passed and enacted, will have significant consequences for all Americans and their health care. I believe we can best protect these Americans by making reasonable changes which give them more choices. Let's provide access to affordable, quality care without inventing unnecessary new federal mandates for an already top-heavy health care structure.

I believe the Republican Patients' Bill of Rights Plus will do just that. It will improve quality of care and expand consumer choice as well as protect patients' rights.

It will hold HMOs accountable for providing the care they promised. It places treatment decisions in the hands of doctors, not lawyers. And, patients have the right to coverage for emergency care that a prudent lay-person would consider medically necessary.

The purpose of our bill is to solve problems when care is needed, not later after harm has occurred. Common sense demands we act reasonably. More importantly, the future health care of hundreds of millions of Americans demands we act with their interests in mind.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, in the 1970s, the State of Colorado adopted a well-child care law, legislation concerning the treatment of alcoholism and mental health, as well as legislation concerning insurance coverage of psychologists. In the 1980s home health care, hospice care, and mammography screening legislation was passed into law. In the 1990s, those who represent the people of Colorado in the State House saw fit to pass laws concerning the coverage of nurses, nurse midwives, nurse anesthetists, nurse practitioners, psychiatric nurses, the continuation of coverage for dependents and employees, and conversion to non-group health care.

This decade the Colorado Legislature also passed consumer grievance procedures, children's dental anesthesia and general dental provisions, direct access to OB-GYN, direct access to midwives for OB-GYN, emergency room services legislation, a ban on gag clauses, prostate cancer screening, breast reconstruction, maternity stay, and mental health parity legislation. Last, but certainly not least, among State laws enacted in my home State is a law concerning independent external appeals for patients and a comprehensive Patients' Bill of Rights, passed in 1997.

I am proud to have served in the Colorado State Senate, and I am proud to say that today I represent a state that has been responsive and aggressive in addressing health care issues and patients' rights.

At the same time, Mr. President, I am deeply troubled that there are those in this body who are advocates of Senator KENNEDY's Patients' Bill of Rights that would preempt a number of the laws that I just mentioned in the State of Colorado. In this country of 260 million Americans throughout the fifty states I believe that the people of those States are in the best position to make these specific decisions. I come from our nation's 8th largest State with a population of just 3.9 million people. I will not assume that any federal entity is more prepared to develop policy for Colorado than the people of Colorado, nor would I impose the policies unique to Colorado's needs on another State.

Something I find equally troubling is that in addition to infringing on the laws of the State of Colorado, the legislation that Senator KENNEDY and the Democrats have developed has the potential to increase health care costs, deprive 1.9 million Americans of health insurance who are currently covered, and cast heavy mandates down on individual states who are in a far better position to make these decisions for themselves.

I will speak today about a number of things I believe will enhance the quality of health care, increase access to care, and provide important protections for patients without unnecessarily placing mandates on individual states. These provisions are all part of a comprehensive package called the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act, which I feel properly addresses the needs of America's patients, physicians and health care providers.

The Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act establishes consumer protection standards for self-funded plans currently governed by the Employee Retirement and Income Security Act (ERISA). 48 million Americans are currently covered by plans governed by ERISA—these are American health care consumers who are not under the jurisdiction of state laws.

Our bill would eliminate gag rule clauses in providers' contracts and ensure that patients have access to specialty care. The legislation also requires that health plans that use formularies to provide prescription medications ensure the participation of doctors and pharmacists in the construction of the formulary. Further addressing patient choice and access, health plans would be required to allow women direct access to obstetricians and gynecologists, and direct access to pediatricians for children, without referrals from general practitioners.

These provisions are important steps in removing barriers that may prevent patients covered under ERISA from receiving necessary and proper treatment in a timely manner.

As a former small business owner I have a keen understanding of the issues that confront the self-employed. I also have experience in balancing the wages and benefits you extend to an employee with a healthy bottom line. I think it is important that we remember throughout the course of this debate that employers provide health care benefits as a voluntary form of compensation for their employees. We must be wary of legislation that will increase costs and liability for employers in a way that may reduce the quality and scope of benefit packages for employees.

Our bill, the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus, would make health insurance deductible for the self-employed and increase the availability of medical savings accounts. I believe that each of these provisions would give greater power to the individual and make private insurance more affordable for families and individuals. Large corporations can claim a 100 percent deduction for health care and small business should be treated the same.

Medical savings accounts, otherwise known as MSAs, combine a high deductible and low cost catastrophic policy with tax free savings that can be used for routine medical expenses. We should increase the availability to all families who desire MSAs. These efforts will prove particularly helpful to those individuals working for small business, and those in transition from one job to another since MSAs are fully portable.

I want to stress that our legislation will not mandate these accounts for everyone, but will simply establish the accounts as an option to those who feel they will be best served by MSAs. I believe that medical savings accounts are particularly important for uninsured, lower income Americans. Allowing consumers to pay for medical expenses through these affordable tax-deductible plans, tailored to their needs, is a viable free-market approach to decreasing the number of uninsured in America. This is a question of providing greater choice for health care consumers.

The Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act would also permit the carryover of unused benefits from flexible spending accounts, again increasing the number of options available to the consumers of health care.

In keeping with presenting more options to the consumer, The Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act includes language that would require all group health plans to provide a wide range of comparative information about the health coverage they provide. This information would include descriptions of health insurance coverage and the networks who provide care so that consumers covered by self insured and fully insured group health plans can make the best decisions based on their needs and preferences.

One of the most contentious issues in health care has been the issue of malpractice liability, grievance procedures and the mechanism for the appeal of decisions made by managed care companies. My colleagues across the aisle are interested in taking the grievance procedure into a court of law, allowing a patient greater access to litigation as a means of challenging a managed care organization's decision.

Lawsuits and the increased threat of litigation will demand that more money to be funneled into non-medical administration and away from what patients really want—quality health care. Furthermore, making the courts a de facto arbiter of health care decisions seems to me to be less efficient and less effective in dealing with the interests of the patient. The Kennedy bill is an enormous gift for the trial lawyers in America who stand to profit by high cost, long-term cases. Patients, not lawyers, will fare far better under the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus.

I am also concerned that expanding medical malpractice liability will lead to more defensive medical decisions regardless of the merit of a particular treatment. High liability exposure and cost has driven countless physicians from their profession for years, particularly in high-need rural areas.

This is not a provision we can afford in rural areas of western States like Colorado that are already underserved.

Rather than take health care out of the doctor's office and into the courts, the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act establishes strict time frames for internal and external appeals for the 124 million Americans who receive care from self insured and fully insured group plans. Routine requests would need to be completed within 30 days, or 72 hours in specific cases when a delay would be detrimental to the patient. Rather than use the courts in cases of health care appeals our legislation would establish a system of independent, internal and external review by physicians with appropriate expertise. We are talking about doctors with years of experience and medical training making health care decisions, not legal arguments.

I believe that such a system will be more responsive and more tailored to the needs of every individual patient—and it will do so without creating unnecessary bureaucracy. It is also important to note that these internal and external appeals will cost patients and employers considerably less than the alternative proposal that is heavy on lawsuits, lawyers and litigation.

Another area of concern that I believe needs to be incorporated in any sensible managed care reform legislation is the inclusion of protections for patients from genetic discrimination. The Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act would prohibit all group health plans and insurers from denying coverage or adjusting premiums based on predictive genetic information. The protected genetic information includes an individual's genetic tests, genetic tests of family members, or information about the medical history of family members.

No one should live in fear of being without health care based on genetic traits that may not develop into a health problem.

Mr. President, I believe these provisions will empower the individual, not the lawyers or bureaucracies. I am committed to the notion that each individual American consumer of health care is in the best position to choose where his or her health care dollar is best spent.

An administrative issue involved in this debate that I am very concerned with is the effort to attempt to force all health plans—not just HMOs—to report the medical outcomes of their subscribers and the physicians who treat them. This makes sense for a managed care plan such as an HMO, but it would be virtually impossible for a PPO or indemnity plan to monitor and classify this data without becoming involved in individual medical cases.

I believe that if we require all health plans to collect and report data like this we will be requiring all plans to be organized like an HMO. This would significantly reduce the number of choices consumers and employers currently enjoy in selecting their health care.

The Congressional Budget Office recently determined that if S. 6, the Kennedy version of the Patients' Bill of Rights, were to pass that this country would see private health insurance premiums increase 6.1 percent above inflation. What appears to be a minor increase to health care premiums would have disastrous and immediate consequences around the country, adding 1.9 million Americans to the ranks of the uninsured. In my home state that translates to 32,384 people. In Colorado the average household would lose $203 in wages and 2,989 jobs would be lost by 2003 for this "minor" increase.

We are talking about people in Colorado losing their jobs and their health care coverage because Washington wants to do what the State of Colorado has been working on for the last thirty years.

The Congressional Budget Office determined that our bill, the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus Act, would increase costs by less than 1 percent. While I urge my colleagues to be wary of any potential increase in costs for the American people, I also believe that the Patients' Bill of Rights Plus, and not the current Kennedy bill, directly addresses health care quality issues and increases choice for consumers with a minimal cost.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on a very important piece of legislation—legislation that is vital to the future of health care in this country, the Patients' Bill of Rights. Democrats have fought long and hard to debate this bill on the floor of the Senate and I am thankful for the opportunity to speak in support of the underlying measure.

Today more than 160 million Americans, over 75 percent of the insured population, obtain health coverage through some form of managed care. Managed care arrangements can and do provide affordable, quality health care to large numbers of people. Yet reports of financial consideration taking precedence over patients health needs deserve our attention. We hear stories and read news articles about people who have paid for health insurance or received employer-sponsored insurance, became ill, only to discover that their insurance does not provide coverage. Recent surveys indicate that Americans are increasingly worried about their health care coverage. 115 million Americans report having a bad experience with a health insurance company or knowing someone who has. This undermining of confidence in our health care system must be addressed. We must act to restore the peace of mind of families in knowing that their health insurance will be there when they need it most. We can accomplish this by establishing real consumer protections, restoring the doctors decision-making authority, and ensuring that patients get the care they need.

Some of the important issues that we are debating include the scope of coverage, definition of who determines "medically necessary," protecting the doctor/patient relationship, access to care, and accountability.

True managed care reform cannot come from a narrow bill that covers only a certain segment of the population. Today much of the regulation of managed care plans comes from the states. However, federal laws such as the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act, combined with the various state regulations, form a patchwork of regulation for managed care plans. Some in this chamber believe that the protections we are considering should only apply to ERISA-covered plans and not to the 113 million Americans who have private insurance that is regulated by the states. They argue that these issues should be left to the states to address. Democrats believe that everyone deserves equal protection, regardless of where they may live or work. The Patients' Bill of Rights would not interfere with patient protection laws passed by the states, it would simply extend these patient protection rights to all Americans.

As managed care has grown, so has the pressure on doctors and other health care providers to control costs. Complaints receiving widespread attention include denials of necessary care, lack of accountability, limited choice of providers, inadequate access to care, and deficient information disclosure for consumers to make informed plan decisions. Mr. President, a strong Patients' Bill of Rights should address the shortcomings of managed care. S. 6 takes a comprehensive approach in dealing with these issues, which is why I am a cosponsor of the measure.

The dominance of managed care has undermined the doctor-patient relationship. Often tools are used to restrain doctors from communicating freely with patients or providing them with incentives to limit care. We need to ensure that insurers cannot arbitrarily interfere in the medical decision making. The Patients' Bill of Rights includes a number of provisions to prevent arbitrary interference by insurers. Our bill establishes an independent definition of medical necessity, prohibits gag clauses on physicians and other restrictions on medical communications, and protects providers from retaliation if they advocate for their patients.

The issue of who decides what is medically necessary is probably the most fundamental issue of this debate. We must empower patients so they receive appropriate medical treatment, not necessarily the cheapest treatment, not necessarily the treatment that an insurance company determines is appropriate, but the best treatment. Currently, many doctors are finding insurance plans second-guessing and overriding their medical decisions. Democrats believe that the "medical necessity" of patient care should be determined by physicians, consistent with generally accepted standards of medical practice. Doctors are trained to diagnose and make treatment decisions based on the best professional medical practice. We need to keep the medical decisions in the hands of doctors and not insurance company bureaucrats.

Families in managed care plans often face numerous obstacles when seeking access to doctors and health care services. Some of these barriers include restrictions on access to emergency room services, specialists, needed drugs, and clinical trials. S. 6 would ensure access to the closest emergency room, without requiring prior authorization. It would provide access to qualified specialists, including providers outside of the network if the managed care company's choices are inadequate, and direct access to obstetricians and gynecologists for women and pediatricians for children. S. 6 would also ensure access to drugs not included in a managed care plan's covered list when medically indicated and provide access to quality clinical trials.

Finally, the underlying bill allows consumers to hold managed care companies accountable for medical negligence. Currently, insurers make decisions with almost no accountability. Patients deserve the right to a timely internal appeal and an unbiased external review process when they disagree with a decision made by the insurer. Patients also deserve recourse when the misconduct of managed care plans results in serious injury or death. However, under ERISA plans, patients have no right to obtain remedy under state law. These patients are limited to the narrow federal remedy under ERISA, which covers only the cost of the procedure the plan failed to pay for. S. 6 would ensure that managed care companies can be held accountable for their actions. It does not establish a right to sue, but prevents federal law from blocking what the states deem to be appropriate remedies. A strong legal liability provision will discourage insurers from improper treatment denials or delays and result in better health care.

Mr. President, only a comprehensive bill will guarantee patient protection with access to quality, affordable health care. We should not miss this important opportunity to enact meaningful legislation that is federally enforceable and will improve care and restore confidence in our health care system.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I now ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TRIBUTE TO DR. MARY E. STUCKEY, THE 1999 ELSIE M. HOOD OUTSTANDING TEACHER

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, it is with great pleasure that I pay tribute to The University of Mississippi's 1999 Outstanding Teacher of the Year, Dr. Mary E. Stuckey.

Each year my alma mater The University of Mississippi, known as Ole Miss, recognizes excellence in the classroom with the Elsie M. Hood Outstanding Teacher Award during its Honors Day Convocation. Nominations for this honor are accepted from students, alumni, and faculty. A committee of former recipients then selects the faculty member who best demonstrates enthusiasm and engages students intellectually.

Dr. Mary E. Stuckey is an Associate Professor of Political Science. An 11-year veteran of the Ole Miss Political Science Department, Dr. Stuckey's teaching interests include the Presidency and political communications as well as American Indian politics. Her research focuses on Presidential rhetoric, media coverage of the President, and institutional aspects of Presidential communication. Dr. Stuckey is also working on several projects regarding depictions of American Indians in the media and in national politics. In addition to these areas of interest, she also teaches in the McDonnell-Barksdale Honors College.

Dr. Stuckey's research has earned her several prestigious grants. These include the President Gerald R. Ford Library, the C-SPAN in the Classroom Faculty Development, a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship, and the Canadian Studies Faculty Research. She has also published several studies such as "The President as Interpreter-in-Chief" and "Strategic Failures in the Modern Presidency."

A native of southern California, Dr. Stuckey earned a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of California at Davis. She then completed her graduate studies at the University of Notre Dame and joined the Ole Miss faculty in 1987.

Now, Mr. President, let me tell you that Dr. Stuckey and I probably will not agree on much when it comes to political issues. But three members of my current staff, Steven Wall, Beth Miller, and Brian Wilson, tell me she is outstanding in the classroom. They all agree that she is an equal opportunity challenger, regardless of political views, when it comes to the study of politics. She requires her students to use logic rather than emotions when advocating any viewpoint. Dr. Stuckey does not penalize her students when they don't share her views; rather she rewards academic scholarship.

The study of political science is essential to any society. And I believe it is even more incumbent on us, as Americans, to do so. Thomas Jefferson once said, "Self-government is not possible unless the citizens are educated sufficiently to enable them to exercise oversight." He was right. Universities are an important institution to help instill in each generation an appreciation for the unique and honorable character required for our democratic republic. Americans want to learn from their past mistakes so they can strive to build a better society for their children and grandchildren. Dedicated and inspiring teachers, such as Dr. Mary E. Stuckey, this year's Elsie M. Hood Award recipient, are key to ensuring that our next generation of political leaders will have the necessary knowledge and character to make America strong.

ECONOMIC REFORMS IN RUSSIA

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I draw my colleagues' attention to an article that appeared earlier this year in Economic Reform Today. I ask unanimous consent that the full text of "Safeguarding Russian Investors: Securities Chief Speaks Out" be printed at the end of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, Economic Reform Today is a quarterly magazine published by the Center for International Private Investment. CIPE is one of the core grantees of the National Endowment for Democracy and is dedicated to promoting democratic governance and market oriented economic reform. Their work has been particularly important in assisting the ongoing transition to free markets in the former communist countries of Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union.

The article I will include in the RECORD, highlights Russia's continuing effort to implement political and economic reforms. This has been a painful process in Russia. However, it is my firm belief that Russia's transition to a free-market democracy will be measured in decades, not years. During this important time—CIPE and the other NED grantees—have been working to ensure that the Russian people have access to the information and resources necessary to make a successful transition.

Again, I encourage my colleagues to read this important article.

EXHIBIT 1

SAFEGUARDING RUSSIAN INVESTORS: SECURITIES CHIEF SPEAKS OUT

(If Russia is to gain economic stability and attract foreign investors it will need to respond better to the needs and concerns of investors. Dmitry Vasiliev has made this the chief reform priority of the securities commission that he heads. He is one of the strongest voices in Russia today calling for more efficient and transparent markets to provide the necessary foreign and domestic capital to jump start Russia's newly privatized enterprises. In this interview with Economic Reform Today, Vasiliev underscores the importance of establishing strong shareholders' rights as a cornerstone of economic reform)

ERT: You have made upholding shareholder rights one of the top priorities of the Federal Securities Commission (FSC). Why is this so important?

Mr. Vasiliev: Protecting investors' rights is an important prerequisite for attracting foreign investment, and, unfortunately, Russia faces serious problems in this area. Although we are gradually improving the quality of corporate governance, Russia is losing billions of dollars in investments because of poor investor safeguards, both in corporate and government securities. This is reflected in the lower value of Russian stock prices as compared with those of other emerging market countries. Better protection of investors' rights will attract more investors and allow companies to raise more capital and lead to the development of new technologies and more production.

ERT: Can you gauge the damage that denying these shareholder rights inflicts on the Russian economy?

Mr. Vasiliev: The Russian economy faces serious consequences unless it can offer adequate safeguards. Not only are foreigners reluctant to invest in Russia, but Russians do not trust it either. People are putting their savings into dollars because other forms of investment don't offer enough protection.

That's why we have concentrated our efforts on protecting the market from low-quality securities. Last year we denied registration to 2,600 issues; that is, we turned down 14% of all submitted prospectuses. That means we prevented 2,600 possible violations of shareholder rights. Of course we also had to cancel some issues that were already registered; for example, the well-publicized cases involving the largest Russian oil companies, such as Sidanko and Sibneft. Last week the Commission launched an investigation into the case of Yukos. We are determined to use all measure necessary to defend minority shareholders. In some cases the exchange or brokers themselves violate shareholder rights through manipulation. Our investigations have increased sevenfold in the last two years. We recognize, however, that we are only at the beginning of a long process.

A responsible government should observe a strict financial policy and minimize its borrowing, including issuing government bonds. The crisis over the past year was also a crisis of sovereign debt: the crash of the GKO (government bond) pyramid caused tremendous losses to the real economy and to the financial sector. As a result, the government is developing twelve new laws aimed at protecting investors. In March, Parliament adopted one of these laws, which protects investors in the securities markets. We also need to improve our joint stock company law in order to reduce share dilution and asset stripping, as well as to allow shareholders to dismiss management and stop asset theft. We also want to change the criminal code and make nondisclosure to investors and crime. I believe that we can learn from other countries' experiences, including the United States, in this area.

There are several typical violations of shareholder rights in Russia. The first is share dilution, which we have been trying to counter by denying issue registrations. The bill approved in March also introduces stricter procedures that should protect against share dilution.

The second is nondisclosure or provision of false information. We have begun to address this issue through the same bill, which allows the FSC to fine issuers of securities if they provide insufficient disclosure or misleading data. For example, if a prospectus contains false information, those who have signed it—the CEO, the auditor and the independent appraiser—bear a subsidiary responsibility if investors lost money because the information was false. Of course this is only the first step; we still have to iron out how to enforce the law and other procedural matters. In the West, for instance, you have "class action" suits, but courts do not hear such cases in Russia.

Another typical violation is transfer pricing abuse; that is, when commodities or securities are sold at artificial prices between or among affiliated companies. Here, as in the case of asset stripping, shareholders need to have stricter control over the actions of management. The FSC is trying to prevent the execution of large transactions without prior shareholders' approval. While we do not always succeed, we are trying to close this important loophole.

The issue of share conversion between a holding company and its subsidiaries is very serious. Shareholders of both the holding company and the subsidiaries must insist on a fair and independent appraisal of assets and establishment of a fair conversion rate. Government officials cannot solve this question; it's a matter for management and the shareholders and points up the importance of appropriate procedures for corporate decision making. For example, in some cases, such as Lukoil's, the share conversion process went pretty smoothly because Lukoil management took a balanced and well-conceived position. Other cases, such as Sibneft, resulted in huge scandals. This is a long-term process and the FSC will be focusing on this issue indefinitely.

ERT: Financial industrial groups have a very strong presence in the Russian economy. Experts argue that they need to be reformed or regulated. In your view, what type of regulation is necessary?

Mr. Vasiliyev: The economic crisis last year delivered a very serious blow to financial industrial groups (FIGs). It destroyed many of them, and weakened many of the so-called "oligarchs," who were forced to sell off parts of their empires. Yukos is just one example of the troubles facing these groups.

I believe that FIGs are not the most efficient way to achieve economic development. Equity or investment financing through the securities market and the banking system should be kept—and regulated—as separate systems. The experiences of other countries, including the US, show that heavy investment in industry by banks and financial institutions can have catastrophic consequences. Back in 1997, I was already insisting that Russia needs banks to stay away from risky speculative operations, not to hold stock in companies and not to invest in industry. What we had in the August 1998 crisis was the collapse of the settlement system.

At the same time we need investment banks involved in corporate finance, but investors know that many Russian banks are used for speculative operations not for settlement purposes. Russia's President Yeltsin recently sent a message to the Federation Council stating that the country needs both "settlement" banks and "investment" banks. The fact that President Yeltsin highlighted this critical issue is an encouraging sign for the ailing banking sector.

Creditors' rights also need to be protected. In Russia creditors are not offered adequate protection. The banks say that they need a controlling interest in a company in order to be able to lend money to it. Creditors' rights should be protected, but the solution to that is for banks not to participate in a company's equity capital. If banks would lend to companies rather than invest in government bonds, they would not be so involved in speculation and not be so dependent on getting controlling interest in companies.

State involvement in the economy should be minimal, but today it is still very high. Sweeping privatization is not the most important objective; the goal should be to privatize the land held by industrial companies so they can use it as collateral for loans. The sooner this is done the better, but this process has moved very slowly since 1994. In my opinion this aspect of privatization is more important than agricultural reform.

ERT: Can you delineate the responsibilities of the FSC and the Central Bank in regulating corporate transactions and capital markets? In what areas should they cooperate and in what areas should they have separate responsibilities?

Mr. Vasiliyev: I believe that each has its own functions—the main objective of the Central Bank, just like in any other country, is supporting the national currency. My task at the FSC is to protect investors and regulate the securities market.

ERT: In your view, what is the Russian public's perception of the local business community? If it is negative, how should businesses work to revamp this perception?

Mr. Vasiliyev: The attitude toward business people is not very good. I believe that the country's private sector should work on changing its tarnished image. It should be prestigious to be involved in business and society should appreciate that it has an important function. Changing the poor image of business will, of course, take a long time. The ideology of the old Soviet regime won't disappear overnight. In Russia it is the younger generation that is leaning toward capitalism.

The private sector, of course, will play a key role in the economy. It already plays an important role, but often in the form of speculation and the "shadow" economy. The Russian economy needs to move from the shadows to the daylight through simplification of regulation and licensing. We need to make it profitable to pay taxes. (See ERT No. 4, 1997 pp. 6–9 for a detailed discussion of how Russia's "shadow" economy operates.)

ERT: In Russia, much of the public perceives the privatization process as unfair. How would the changes in regulations that you have outlined in this interview improve this process?

Mr. Vasiliyev: We believe that the structure of ownership will gradually change. Many companies that were privatized as joint stock companies will probably leave the securities market. They are not interested in remaining publicly traded. We will probably have 500 to 1,000 publicly traded companies. Most small shops or factories employing less than 100 persons will gradually end up being privately owned or become closely held companies, which is fine. The number of publicly traded companies is declining in countries that went through mass privatization. We see this happening in the Czech Republic and it will eventually happen in Russia, too.

There were two components of Russia's privatization process. One was land privatization—the land "under" companies—and the other was securities markets development intended to rectify privatizations that were not done in a very efficient manner. We were forced to implement privatizations in the way we did. Other options then were not politically or psychologically acceptable in our country. I still believe this. But it is obvious that we encountered a lot of insider influence and very limited transparency because of the very fast pace of transition.

When we were first starting to privatize, I worked in the state property commission as a deputy to Mr. Anatoly Chubais, its chairman, and I drafted many documents on privatization. One of the main conditions we asked for was that companies become open joint stock corporations so that stock could be sold and bought. Now that there is a battle for control of these companies and the advent of outside shareholders is beginning to strengthen their positions, Russian companies are changing bit by bit. The securities markets are helping this transition.

The use of a central depository as a privatization mechanism has been adopted by many emerging market countries and is accepted by all securities commissions. If we could establish a central depository, we would be able to reduce the number of registrars and eventually move toward not using them at all. Later we could introduce centralized clearing settlements. These will lower investors' costs and significantly improve protection of their rights since they would then be protected from registrar-related risks. The attractiveness of the Russian market would benefit significantly from the results. So my position was and is that sooner or later this central depository will be created in Russia.

Right now our policy is that no single issuer can control more than 20% of a registrar, and that registrars handle a large number of issuers. They gradually are becoming more independent. Our largest registrars handle 200 to 300 issuers and millions of accounts so that they are no longer dependent on a particular issuer.

Of course, there are still registrars who are under the strong influence of a single issuer—Yukos, for example. But they are subject to strict control by the Commission. In the past year, we checked up on three-fourths of all registrars and have 125 of them left to check. Almost all of them are checked once a year.

ERT: More broadly, what lessons should policymakers in other developing countries learn from Russia's ongoing transition to a market-oriented economy?

Mr. Vasiliyev: The first lesson is that emerging markets cannot borrow the experience of Western countries. You cannot just transfer their legislation to other countries. We are at a different stage of development. The Russian economy and its financial instruments are nearly a century behind those of the US, for example, in terms of our legal base, the capitalization of our institutions, and our familiarity with how a market economy works.

The Russian economy faces several key obstacles. First is a lack of expertise among Russian managers. A typical manager cannot write a reasonable plan for investors. A manager may have a project and an investor may have cash to invest, but without a decent plan, nothing will develop. Second, Russia must simplify its taxation rules and reduce the tax burden. Only then will we see real economic growth and more revenues. Third, we must greatly simplify procedures for the control and licensing of businesses. Starting up and/or liquidating a business should be easy. This would enable us to reduce crime and corruption and transfer part of the informal economy to the formal sector.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Monday, July 12, 1999, the Federal debt stood at $5,621,471,104,821.73 (Five trillion, six hundred twenty-one billion, four hundred seventy-one million, one hundred four thousand, eight hundred twenty-one dollars and seventy-three cents).

Five years ago, July 12, 1994, the Federal debt stood at $4,621,828,000,000 (Four trillion, six hundred twenty-one billion, eight hundred twenty-eight million).

Ten years ago, July 12, 1989, the Federal debt stood at $2,800,467,000,000 (Two trillion, eight hundred billion, four hundred sixty-seven million).

Fifteen years ago, July 12, 1984, the Federal debt stood at $1,534,664,000,000 (One trillion, five hundred thirty-four billion, six hundred sixty-four million).

Twenty-five years ago, July 12, 1974, the Federal debt stood at $472,596,000,000 (Four hundred seventy-two billion, five hundred ninety-six million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $5 trillion—$5,148,875,104,821.73 (Five trillion, one hundred forty-eight billion, eight hundred seventy-five million, one hundred four thousand, eight hundred twenty-one dollars and seventy-three cents) during the past 25 years.

PRESERVING ACCESS TO CARE IN THE HOME ACT OF 1999

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to commend my colleague Senator JAMES JEFFORDS of Vermont on legislation he introduced that makes several important first steps in addressing some serious access problems in the Medicare home health care program. Senator JEFFORDS' legislation, the Preserving Access to Care in the Home (PATCH) Act of 1999, contains several important provisions to ensure that all Medicare beneficiaries have access to home health services.

Mr. President, I have been working to promote the availability of home care and long-term care options for my entire public life. I believe it is vitally important that we in Congress work to enable people to stay in their own homes. Ensuring the availability of home health services is integral to preserving independence, dignity and hope for some of our frailest and most vulnerable fellow Americans. I feel strongly that where there is a choice, we should do our best to allow patients to choose home health care. I think Seniors need and deserve that choice. I applaud Senator JEFFORDS for his leadership on this issue, and I look forward to working with him to ensure that Seniors have access to the care that they need.

INDIVIDUAL DEVELOPMENT ACCOUNTS

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, within the next several weeks, the Senate will debate an issue of extreme importance to the future of our economy—whether and in what manner to return nearly $800 billion in tax relief to the American people over the next ten years.

I strongly support this tax cut. I believe we owe it to the American people, who after all provided the hard work that produced our current surpluses. I also believe that these surpluses provide us with a unique opportunity to reduce and simplify our current onerous, Byzantine tax code. Finally, and most important for my purposes here today, we now have an important opportunity to target and encourage further saving and investment.

To keep our economy growing and our budget balanced, we must do more to encourage saving and investment. Therefore, it is my view that part of the tax cut should be crafted following an innovative concept called Individual Development Accounts or IDAs. IDAs are emerging as one of the most promising tools to help low income working families save money, build wealth, and achieve economic independence. This pro-asset building idea is designed to reward the monthly savings of working-poor families who are trying to buy their first home, pay for post-secondary education, or start a small business. The reward or incentive can be provided through the use of tax credits to financial institutions that provide matching contributions to savings deposited by low income people. In this way those savings will accumulate more quickly, building assets and further incentives to save.

I believe so strongly in the many benefits that IDAs can provide to low income families that I have cosponsored S. 895, the Savings for Working Families Act written by my colleagues, Senators LIEBERMAN and SANTORUM. Similar to 401(k) plans, IDAs will make it easier for low income families to build the financial assets they need to achieve their economic goals. But availability is not enough. We also must empower the working poor in America to make use of this important economic tool. That is why a second key component of the IDA concept consists of financial education and counseling services to IDA account-holders. These services will allow IDA users to further improve their ability to save and improve their quality of life.

Let me briefly outline the four key reasons why I believe the IDA concept is so crucial to a well-crafted tax cut.

First, asset building is crucial to the long-term health and well being of low income families. Assets not only provide an economic cushion and enable people to make investments in their futures, they also provide a psychological orientation—toward the future, about one's children, about having a stake in the community—that income alone cannot provide. Put simply, families that fail to save fail to move up the ladder of economic success and well-being. Unfortunately, saving strategies have been ignored in the poverty assistance programs established over the past 35 years. IDAs will fill this critical gap in our social policy.

Second, our great Nation needs to address the wealth gap, and bring more people into the financial mainstream. While there has been considerable attention given to the income cap among our citizens, I wonder how many Americans realize that ten percent of the families control two-thirds of our Nation's wealth or that one-half of all American households have less than $1,000 in net financial assets, or that 20 percent of all American households do not have a checking or a savings account?

Current Federal tax policy provides more than $300 billion per year in incentives for middle-class and wealthy families to purchase housing, prepare for retirement, and invest in businesses and job creation. Yet, public policies have largely penalized low income people who try to save and build assets and savings incentives in the tax code are beyond their reach. It is time for us to find ways to expand these tax incentives so that they can reach low income families who want to work and save.

Third, IDAs are a good national investment, yielding over $5 for every $1 invested. According to the Corporation for Enterprise Development or CFED, the initial investment in IDAs would be multiplied more than five times in the form of new businesses, new jobs, increased earnings, higher tax receipts, and reduced welfare expenditures. And these increases will come from genuinely new asset development. Savings will be produced that could not have been produced by other, more general means, and in areas where there were no savings before.

Finally, IDAs have a successful track record we should not ignore. IDAs are working now in our communities and they are having a tremendous effect on families who choose to save for the future. There are already 150 active IDA programs around the country, with at least another 100 in development. Approximately 3,000 people are regularly saving in their IDAs. The CFED has compiled encouraging evidence from their IDA pilot programs showing that poor people, with proper incentives and support will save regularly and acquire productive assets. There are almost 1,000 families participating in CFEDs privately funded IDA demonstration and as of December 31, 1998 these families saved over $165,000, an amount which leveraged another $343,000 in matching funds.

IDAs are already a tremendous success. But, unless additional resources can be found to provide the matching contributions so essential for IDAs to succeed, most low income families will never have the opportunity to save and build assets for the future. The major factor in delaying the creation of IDAs in the 100 communities mentioned above is the lack of a funding source that can provide the needed matching contributions. Our tax cut bill will and should provide nearly $800 billion in tax cuts over the next ten years. I believe that, within this bill, we should make a small investment of only $5-$10 billion in IDAs. This would ensure that millions of working, low income families who want to work and save for their first home, provide a post-secondary education for a child, or start a small business could establish their own IDA accounts.

I strongly encourage the Senate Finance Committee to look closely at IDAs as a means of helping low income families build the financial assets they need to achieve the American Dream.

FAIRNESS FOR FEDERAL WORKERS IN RHODE ISLAND

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise today to address an issue of critical importance to nearly 6,000 federal workers in the state of Rhode Island and to the agencies that employ them.

The absence of federal locality pay for workers in Rhode Island has created serious recruitment and retention problems for federal offices due to the substantial federal pay differential between Rhode Island and the neighboring states of Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Let me briefly give the background on this complex issue. Nine years ago, Congress enacted the Federal Employees Pay Comparability Act of 1990 to correct disparities between Federal and private salaries. The Act authorized the President to grant interim geographic pay adjustments of up to 8% in certain areas with significant pay disparities during 1991-1993. Beginning in 1994, the Act provided for a nationwide system of locality pay intended to close the gap between Federal and private salaries over a nine-year period.

Unfortunately, implementation of the Act has created significant pay disparities among Federal employees in southern New England, in particular between Federal employees in Rhode Island and those in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Rhode Island is literally surrounded by locality pay areas. On its western border, Rhode Island is adjacent to the Hartford locality pay area, which includes all of New London County, Connecticut. Rhode Island's entire northern border is adjacent to the Boston-Worcester-Lawrence locality pay area, which includes the towns of Douglas, Uxbridge, Millville, and Blackstone in Worcester County, Massachusetts; and all of Norfolk County, Massachusetts. The Boston pay locality even reaches around the state of Rhode Island to encompass the adjacent town of Thompson, Connecticut, which lies directly west of Woonsocket, Rhode Island, on the opposite side of our state from Boston. Finally, Rhode Island's eastern border is separated from the Boston locality pay area by as little as four miles.

One facility within a few miles of the Boston locality pay area, the Naval Undersea Warfare Center in Newport—a premier Navy R&D laboratory with world class facilities and progressive employee benefits—has seen its starting salaries continue to fall below the industry average. As a result, the Center's acceptance rate has dropped to approximately 40% and the average GPA of new employees is down.

The Federal Salary Council's eligibility criteria have created what I frequently refer to as a "donut hole" in locality pay in our region that leaves thousands of federal employees in Rhode Island with a minus 3.45% pay differential in 1999 when compared to federal employees just a few miles to the north, east, and west.

Mr. CHAFEE. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I will be happy to yield to the senior Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. CHAFEE. It is no wonder that Federal agencies in Rhode Island have trouble recruiting and retaining qualified employees given the very short travel time to the higher-paying Boston or Hartford locality pay areas. Most Americans know that Rhode Island is the smallest state in the nation, but I think it is worth emphasizing just how small the dimensions are, and the impact that has on commuting patterns in our region.

It is only 35 miles from the eastern edge of the Hartford locality pay area in Connecticut to the Boston locality pay area in Dartmouth, Massachusetts. In between, a little more than 30 miles across, is the state of Rhode Island and 3,700 federal employees without locality pay in Newport County. Where is the incentive for a federal employee living in central Rhode Island to continue working for a federal agency in our state when he or she could drive less than 20 miles in any direction and receive a nearly 4% raise?

Mr. REED. The Senator is correct. This situation makes no sense given the similar cost of labor across southern New England and the unusually heavy commuting patterns between Rhode Island and the Boston and Hartford pay localities, especially with the Boston area. It is only 45 miles from Providence to downtown Boston.

The question before us now is, how did we get into this situation, and how can we correct it? The main obstacle to federal locality pay in Rhode Island is the federal government's use of county data to determine the eligibility of "Areas of Application" to existing pay localities. First of all, I would note that Rhode Island has no county governments, and the Federal Salary Council's use of county data is, therefore, impractical and arbitrary. Secondly, the criteria for application are structured in such a way that our state cannot become eligible. To be considered, a county must be contiguous to a pay locality; contain at least 2,000 General Schedule employees; have a significant level of urbanization; and demonstrate some economic linkage with the pay locality, defined as commuting at a level of 5% or more into or from the areas in question.

Mr. CHAFEE. If the Senator will yield, I would point out that in our state, Newport County surpasses the employee requirement but is not contiguous to a pay locality because the President's Pay Agent excluded the towns of Westport and Fall River, Massachusetts from the Boston-Worcester-Lawrence pay locality. As a result, less than four miles separate the 3,700 Federal employees in Newport County from the locality pay provided to employees in the Boston pay locality.

Given our State's extremely small size and, as the Senator mentioned, the fact that Rhode Island has no county governments, the Salary Council's use of county data is inappropriate. The total land area of Rhode Island is only about two-thirds the size of Worcester County, Massachusetts, nearly all of which falls inside the Boston pay locality. As long as the Pay Agent applies its criteria on a county-by-county basis, no part of Rhode Island will be eligible for a higher level of locality pay, and existing Federal pay disparities between Rhode Island and its neighbors will continue to degrade Federal services in our state.

Simply put, the FEPCA law was intended to resolve a public-private pay disparity. In southern New England, however, it has created a public-public pay disparity.

Mr. REED. The Senator is absolutely right. And to remedy this situation, the bill we have introduced, S. 1313, the Rhode Island Federal Worker Fairness Act, will require the President's Pay Agent to consider the State of Rhode Island as one county strictly for the purposes of locality pay. We believe this bill will enable Rhode Island, the smallest state in the nation and about the same size as the average county in the United States, to apply for locality pay on an equal footing with county governments in other parts of the country.

We look forward to working with the distinguished Chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, Senator THOMPSON, and the Committee's ranking member, Senator LIEBERMAN, in our effort to reduce the inequities among Federal employees in our region and enable federal offices in Rhode Island to attract and retain qualified employees.

I yield the floor.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message from the President of the United States was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting a treaty which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

REPORT ON THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY CONCERNING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 47

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 204 of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act (50 U.S.C. 1703(c)) and section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act (50 U.S.C. 1641(c)), I transmit herewith a 6-month report on the national emergency declared by Executive Order 12938 of November 14, 1994, in response to the threat posed by the proliferation of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons ("weapons of mass destruction") and of the means of delivering such weapons.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 13, 1999.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

At 2 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hanrahan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 2035. An act to correct errors in the authorizations of certain programs administered by the National Highway Traffic Administration.

The message also announced that the House has agreed to the following concurrent resolutions, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 107. Concurrent resolution expressing the sense of Congress rejecting the conclusions of a recent article published by the American Psychological Association that suggests that sexual relationships between adults and children might be positive for children.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. TORRICELLI:

S. 1353. A bill to combat criminal misuse of explosives; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

DAANGEROUS EXPLOSIVES BACKGROUND CHECKS REQUIREMENT ACT

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, every year, thousands of people are killed or maimed because of the use or misuse of illegal explosive devices, and millions of dollars in property is lost. Between 1991 and 1995, there were more than 14,000 actual and attempted criminal bombings. Three hundred and twenty-six people were killed in those incidents and another 2,970 injured. More than $6 million in property damage resulted.

One bombing in particular, is carved into the national memory. On the morning of April 19, 1995, in one horrible moment, an explosion devastated the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, OK, and took the lives of 168 Americans. This tragedy, together with the bombing of the World Trade Center in New York, took the lives of many innocent men, women, and children, left others permanently scarred, and caused great suffering for the families of the victims—as well as all of America. These crimes were intended to tear the very fabric of our society; instead, their tragic consequences served to strengthen our resolve to stand firm against the insanity of terrorism and the criminal use of explosives.

In the wake of the Oklahoma City bombing, I was stunned—as were many—to learn how few restrictions on the use and sale of explosives really exist. I soon after introduced legislation to take a first step towards protecting the American people from those who would use explosives to do them harm. That bill, the Explosives Protection Act, would bring explosives law into line with gun laws. Specifically, it would take the list of categories of people who cannot obtain firearms and would add any of those categories not currently covered under the explosives law.

Today, I am taking the next step by introducing the Dangerous Explosives Background Check Requirement Act requiring background checks before the sale of explosives material identical to those already mandated for firearms sales. Current law prohibits felons and others from possessing explosives, but does little to actually stop these materials from getting into the wrong hands. This failure defies logic when we already have a system in place to facilitate background checks and assure that persons who are legally prohibited from purchasing explosives are not able to do so.

In November, 1998, the National Instant Criminal Background Check System (NICS) became operational. NICS is a new national database accessible to licensed firearms dealers that allows them to perform over-the-counter background checks on potential firearms purchasers. NICS, which checks national criminal history databases as well as information on other prohibited categories, such as illegal aliens and persons under domestic violence restraining orders, has already processed more than 3.7 million background checks and has stopped more than 39,000 felons and other prohibited persons from getting guns. In so doing, it has undoubtedly saved lives and prevented crimes from occurring.

Once again, it is time to bring the explosives law into line with gun laws by taking advantage of the success of the NICS system and expanding its use to include explosives purchases. In so doing, we will make it harder for many of the most dangerous or least accountable members of society to obtain materials which can result in a great loss of life. My hope is that this bill will, in some small way, prevent future bombings—whether by terrorists of symbolic targets, malcontents of random ones, or even spouses involved in marital disputes.

I hope we can quickly move to get this passed and protect Americans from future acts of explosive destruction. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation appear in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1353

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Dangerous Explosives Background Checks Requirement Act".

SEC. 2. PERMITS AND BACKGROUND CHECKS FOR PURCHASES OF EXPLOSIVES.

(a) PERMITS FOR PURCHASE OF EXPLOSIVES IN GENERAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 842 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subsection (a)(3), by striking subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting the following:

“(A) to transport, ship, cause to be transported, or receive any explosive materials; or “(B) to distribute explosive materials to any person other than a licensee or permittee.”; and

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) by adding “or” at the end of paragraph (1);

(ii) by striking “; or” at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting a period; and
(iii) by striking paragraph (3).

(2) REGULATIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall promulgate final regulations with respect to the amendments made by paragraph (1).

(B) NOTICE TO STATES.—On the promulgation of final regulations under subparagraph (A), the Secretary of the Treasury shall notify the States of the regulations in order that the States may consider legislation to amend relevant State laws relating to explosives.

(b) BACKGROUND CHECKS.—Section 842 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(p) BACKGROUND CHECKS.—

“(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

“(A) CHIEF LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICER.—The term ‘chief law enforcement officer’ means the chief of police, the sheriff, or an equivalent officer or the designee of such an individual.

“(B) SYSTEM.—The term ‘system’ means the national instant criminal background check system established under section 103 of the Brady Handgun Violence Prevention Act (18 U.S.C. 922 note).

“(2) PROHIBITION.—A licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer shall not transfer explosive materials to a permittee unless—

“(A) before the completion of the transfer, the licensee contacts the system;

“(B)(i) the system provides the licensee with a unique identification number; or “(ii) 5 days on which State offices are open have elapsed since the licensee contacted the system, and the system has not notified the licensee that the receipt of explosive materials by the transferee would violate subsection (i);

“(C) the transferor has verified the identity of the transferee by examining a valid identification document (as defined in section 1028) of the transferee containing a photograph of the transferee; and

“(D) the transferor has examined the permit issued to the transferee under section 843 and recorded the permit number on the record of the transfer.

“(3) IDENTIFICATION NUMBER.—If receipt of explosive materials would not violate section 842(i) or State law, the system shall—

“(A) assign a unique identification number to the transfer; and “(B) provide the licensee with the number.

“(4) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (2) shall not apply to a transfer of explosive materials between a licensee and another person if, on application of the transferor, the Secretary has certified that compliance with paragraph (2)(A) is impracticable because—

“(A) the ratio of the number of law enforcement officers of the State in which the transfer is to occur to the number of square miles of land area of the State does not exceed 0.0025;

“(B) the business premises of the licensee at which the transfer is to occur are extremely remote in relation to the chief law enforcement officer; and

“(C) there is an absence of telecommunications facilities in the geographical area in which the business premises are located.

“(5) INCLUSION OF IDENTIFICATION NUMBER.—If the system notifies the licensee that the information available to the system does not demonstrate that the receipt of explosive materials by the transferee would violate subsection (i) or State law, and the licensee transfers explosive materials to the transferee, the licensee shall include in the record of the transfer the unique identification number provided by the system with respect to the transfer.

“(6) PENALTIES.—If the licensee knowingly transfers explosive materials to another person and knowingly fails to comply with paragraph (2) with respect to the transfer, the Secretary may, after notice and opportunity for a hearing—

“(A) suspend for not more than 6 months or revoke any license issued to the licensee under section 843; and “(B) impose on the licensee a civil penalty of not more than $5,000.

“(7) NO LIABILITY.—Neither a local government nor an employee of the Federal Government or of any State or local government, responsible for providing information to the system shall be liable in an action at law for damages—

“(A) for failure to prevent the transfer of explosive materials to a person whose receipt or possession of the explosive material is unlawful under this section; or

“(B) for preventing such a transfer to a person who may lawfully receive or possess explosive materials.

“(8) DETERMINATION OF INELIGIBILITY.—

“(A) WRITTEN REASONS PROVIDED ON REQUEST.—If the system determines that an individual is ineligible to receive explosive materials and the individual requests the system to provide the reasons for the determination, the system shall provide such reasons to the individual, in writing, not later than 5 business days after the date of the request.

“(B) CORRECTION OF ERRONEOUS SYSTEM INFORMATION.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—If the system informs an individual contacting the system that receipt of explosive materials by a prospective transferee would violate subsection (i) or applicable State law, the prospective transferee may request the Attorney General to provide the prospective transferee with the reasons for the determination.

“(ii) TREATMENT OF REQUESTS.—On receipt a request under subparagraph (A), the Attorney General shall immediately comply with the request.

“(iii) SUBMISSION OF ADDITIONAL INFORMATION.—

“(I) IN GENERAL.—A prospective transferee may submit to the Attorney General information to correct, clarify, or supplement records of the system with respect to the prospective transferee.

“(II) ACTION BY THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.—After receipt of information under clause (i), the Attorney General shall—“(aa) immediately consider the information;

“(bb) investigate the matter further; and

“(cc) correct all erroneous Federal records relating to the prospective transferee and give notice of the error to any Federal department or agency or any State that was the source of such erroneous records.”.

(c) REMEDY FOR ERRONEOUS DENIAL OF EXPLOSIVE MATERIALS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 40 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 843 the following:

“§843A. Remedy for erroneous denial of explosive materials

“(a) IN GENERAL.—Any person denied explosive materials under section 842(p)—

“(1) due to the provision of erroneous information relating to the person by any State or political subdivision of a State or by the national instant criminal background check system referred to in section 922(t); or may bring an action against an entity described in subsection (b) for an order directing that the erroneous information be corrected or that the transfer be approved, as the case may be.

“(2) who was not prohibited from receiving explosive materials under section 842(i);

“(b) ENTITIES DESCRIBED.—An entity referred to in subsection (a) is the State or political subdivision responsible for providing the erroneous information referred to in subsection (a)(1) or denying the transfer of explosives or the United States, as the case may be.

“(c) ATTORNEY'S FEES.—In any action brought under this section, the court, in its discretion, may allow the prevailing party a reasonable attorney's fee as part of the costs.”.

(2) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 40 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 843 the following:

“843A. Remedy for erroneous denial of explosive materials.”.

(d) LICENSES AND USER PERMITS.—Section 843(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting “, including fingerprints and a photograph of the applicant” before the period at the end of the first sentence; and

(2) by striking the second sentence and inserting the following: “Each applicant for a license shall pay for each license a fee established by the Secretary in an amount not to exceed $300. Each applicant for a permit shall pay for each permit a fee established by the Secretary in an amount not to exceed $100.”.

(e) PENALTIES.—Section 844(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting “(1) after “(a)”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(2) BACKGROUND CHECKS.—A person who violates section 842(p) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.”.

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by subsections (a), (b), (c), and (e) take effect 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. KOHL (for himself and Mr. FEINGOLD):

S. 1354: A bill to provide for the eventual termination of milk marketing orders; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

CONSUMER DAIRY RELIEF ACT

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Consumers Dairy Relief Act, a bill that will save American consumers $500 million a year on their milk, cheese and dairy purchases. This legislation terminates the Federal Milk Marketing Orders by the year 2001.

Consumers are paying far more than necessary for their dairy purchases because our current system encourages milk production in high cost areas. Our nation's milk pricing laws, which were designed in the 1930's, are seriously outdated and long overdue to be reformed. Dairy farmers in Wisconsin have suffered under the present system for too long. Wisconsin loses, 1,500 dairy farmers a year, not because they are inefficient, but because a federal law discriminates against them by preventing them from competing on a level playing field.

Opponents of this legislation will tell you that we need to keep the present system in order to maintain a fresh milk supply in their states. While that may have been true in the 1930's, when we lacked the refrigeration technology necessary to store and transport milk, it is certainly not true today. We can now easily and safely transport perishable milk and cheese products between regions of the United States. In fact, the industry has actually perfected the system to such a degree that we now export cheese to countries around the world.

Mr. President, as the United States expands its role in the export dairy market and enters into more trade agreements, our domestic agricultural policy is coming under intense scrutiny. Another reason to eliminate our antiquated milk pricing system is that it will give us another negotiating tool to use during the next round of WTO discussions scheduled to take place in Seattle this fall.

Our trading partners are growing increasingly concerned about the intervention of the federal government in the pricing of milk. Earlier this month, The Dutch Ministry of Agriculture, Nature Management and Fisheries said they want to put the issue of USDA's Federal Milk Marketing Orders and dairy compacts on the table for discussion at the next round of Agricultural discussions in Seattle this fall.

By passing this legislation and reforming our milk pricing laws, we can eliminate another hurdle currently in the way of negotiating agricultural trade agreements that would open up new markets for our farmers.

Mr. President, if the Senate decides to discuss reforming our milk pricing system, we must give serious consideration to eliminating the present system. Today I have touched on a few of the reasons we need to scrap our current milk pricing system. There are many others, but I will save those for another time.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1354

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. EVENTUAL TERMINATION OF MILK MARKETING ORDERS.

(a) TERMINATION.—Notwithstanding the implementation of the final decision for the consolidation and reform of Federal milk marketing orders, as required by section 143 of the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform Act of 1996 (7 U.S.C. 7253), effective January 1, 2001, section 8c of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608c), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended by striking paragraphs (5) and (18).

(b) PROHIBITION ON SUBSEQUENT ORDERS REGARDING MILK.—Section 8c(2) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608c(2)), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended in the first sentence—

(1) in subparagraph (A), by striking "Milk, fruits" and inserting "Fruits"; and

(2) in subparagraph (B), by inserting "milk," after "honey,".

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 2(3) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 602(3)), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended by striking " , other than milk and its products,".

(2) Section 8c of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608c), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (6), by striking " , other than milk and its products,";

(B) in paragraph (7)(B), by striking "(except for milk and cream to be sold for consumption in fluid form)";

(C) in paragraph (11)(B), by striking "Except in the case of milk and its products, orders" and inserting "Orders";

(D) in paragraph (13)(A), by striking " , except to a retailer in his capacity as a retailer of milk and its products"; and

(E) in paragraph (17), by striking the second proviso.

(3) Section 8d(2) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 608d(2)), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended by striking the second sentence.

(4) Section 10(b)(2) of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 610(b)), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended—

(A) by striking clause (i);

(B) by redesignating clauses (ii) and (iii) as clauses (i) and (ii), respectively; and

(C) in the first sentence of clause (i) (as so redesignated), by striking "other commodity" and inserting "commodity".

(5) Section 11 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act (7 U.S.C. 611), reenacted with amendments by the Agricultural Marketing Agreement Act of 1937, is amended in the first sentence by striking "and milk, and its products,".

(6) Section 715 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1994 (7 U.S.C. 608d note; Public Law 103-111; 107 Stat. 1079), is amended by striking the third proviso.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section take effect on January 1, 2001.

By Mr. DODD (for himself, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. LEAHY, and Mrs. MURRAY):

S. 1355. A bill to establish demonstration projects to provide family income to respond to significant transitions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

THE FAMILY INCOME TO RESPOND TO SIGNIFICANT TRANSITIONS (FIRST) INSURANCE ACT

Ms. DODD. Mr. President. These last several weeks have been filled with profound questions about the strength of the American family and the priority we place on our children and on meeting the responsibilities of parenthood.

In my view, we must start at the very beginning. We know that some of the key moments of parenthood are in the first days and weeks of a child's life. These are the moments when parents fall in love with their children—when they learn the feel of their soft hair, the joy of their touch and the immense peacefulness of their sleeping faces.

These emotional bonds carry parents and children through all the challenging years that intervene between infancy and adulthood—from the terrible twos to adolescence.

Research tells us this bonding with parents is critical to a child's emotional, cognitive, and physical development. Scientists have produced vivid pictures of children's functioning brains—so not only do we know, we can also see that there is a difference between the way the brain of a neglected child and the brain of a nurtured child works.

Parents bonding with their children is not something one can mandate by law—but we must make sure that our policies support parents in these early days. And frankly, today as we sit on the cusp of the next millennium, we offer parents very limited support at this most critical time.

Today's working parents have less time to spend with their infants than past generations. Compared to 30 years ago, there has been an average decrease of 22 hours per week in time that parents spend with their children. That is nearly one day out of every week—or 52 days a year.

More parents work today than every before—fully 46 percent of workers are parents. Nearly one in five employed parents. Nearly one in five employed parents are single, and among these 27 percent are single fathers. The number of parents who were employed increased from 18.3 million in 1985 to 24.1 million in 1997.

One could argue whether these trends are going in the right direction. But no one can argue that they are the facts—the reality in which American families live everyday. And, my view, that reality is where public policy must operate.

Since 1986, I've worked, with many of my colleagues, to help working Americans meet these demands and care for new children and their close family members. In 1993, the Family and Medical Leave Act was finally signed into law, establishing a key safety net for America's families. I couldn't have done it without the support of my colleagues here in the Senate and the House, and without the support of the President.

But let's face it—the FMLA is like 911 for working Americans. It provides up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to qualifying employees for the birth or adoption of a child, their own illness or the serious illness of a parent, child or spouse without fear of losing their jobs or health insurance. But the fact remains this leave is unpaid—and that is a high bar for most American families.

While millions of Americans—many estimate over twenty million families—have benefitted from the law and have taken the time they needed, for many it has been at major financial cost. In fact, taking an unpaid leave often drives employees earning low wages into poverty. Twenty-one percent of low-wage earners who take a leave without full wage replacement wind up on public assistance; 40 percent cut their leaves short because of financial concerns; 39 percent put off paying bills; and, 25 percent borrow money.

And there are many more families who do not take a needed leave because they can't afford it. Nearly two-thirds of employees who need to take a family or medical leave, but do not do so, report that the reason they did not take the leave was that they could not afford it. These are families with brand new children or where a spouse, parent or child is seriously ill.

Many employers do provide workers with some pay during these difficult times—but the benefit of these policies is not distributed equally. Employees with less education, lower income, female employees, employees from racial minority groups and younger employees are less likely to receive any income during leaves.

Our nation is a leader in so many areas. And yet not when it comes to helping families balance the responsibilities of work and home. Nearly every industrialized nation other than the United States, as well as most developed nations, provide parents with paid leave for infant care.

I believe that we should learn from these nations, our own experiences, and the calls of American families and provide parents with the means to access desperately needed leave to care for new babies. This effort cannot be out of reach for a nation as rich and prosperous as our own.

The bi-partisan Commission on Leave, established as a part of the Family and Medical Leave Act and which I chaired, recommended further consideration and exploration of paid leave policies. Specifically, and I quote from the unanimous recommendations of the Commission, "the Commission recommends that the development of a uniform system of wage replacement for periods of family and medical leave be given serious consideration by employers, employee representatives and others." The Commission went on to recommend that we should look to expanding employer-provided systems of paid leave, and expanding state systems like unemployment insurance or temporary disability insurance, in states with those systems.

Mr. President, this is not a pie in the sky idea. Many states have already recognized the need for such support for new parents. California, New Jersey, three other states and Puerto Rico have in place temporary disability insurance programs, that at a minimal cost to employees and employers, provide support to mothers who are temporarily disabled after pregnancy and childbirth as well as other workers temporarily disabled.

Other states are moving to provide income to families through different mechanisms. Massachusetts, Vermont, Washington and several other states are all considering legislation to expand their state unemployment compensation systems to provide partial wage replacement to workers taking family or medical leave. Just a few weeks ago, President Clinton announced his support of these bold initiatives and directed the Department of Labor to work with the states to allow for this expansion of these state unemployment insurance systems.

But I believe there is more for the federal government to do. We should be a partner in these state efforts and help spur the development of the unemployment insurance model as well as other financial mechanism that will, I hope, make paid leave a reality for all new parents in America.

I am proposing today legislation that would establish a federal demonstration program—which I am calling FIRST (Family Income to Respond to Significant Transitions) Insurance.

FIRST Insurance would support state demonstration projects that provide partial or full wage replacement to new parents who take time off from work for the birth or adoption of a child. States could also choose to expand these benefits to support other care giving needs, such as taking time to care for an ill parent, spouse or child, or to support parents who choose to stay home with an infant.

These would be state or community-based projects, entirely voluntary—in no way mandated by federal law. Clearly, there is already much going on in this area. Thousands of employers offer their employees and their families paid leave. There are private insurance systems that cover wages in various circumstances including the birth of a new child. There are state and local dollars that supplement the incomes of new families as well as protect families at other times of economic crisis. These federal dollars would leverage these state, private and other dollars to expand access to paid leave to more parents.

The demonstrations funded will form the basis of a large-scale investigation of the most effective way to provide support to families at these critical times in a family's life. Key questions to be answered include the costs of these projects, the reach and the impact on families and children. The demonstrations will also allow comparisons of different mechanisms to provide leave—including expansion of state unemployment insurance systems, temporary disability programs, and other viable mechanisms.

Mr. President, when a person is injured on the job, or when someone loses their job because of a plant closing or some other factor beyond their control, our nation rightly protects their families from the risk of catastrophic financial loss. That's the purpose of workman's compensation and unemployment insurance.

If we can protect families at times like this, shouldn't we protect them at another time of crucial family need as they struggle to meet the joyful challenge of raising a newborn?

Mr. President, this initiative is just one part of a better deal we owe to America's families. Just as the horrible tragedy in Littleton, Colorado was a wake up call to parents across the country, it must be a wake up call to us to re-examine our policies around children, families and parenthood.

There is much to be done—child care, education, expanding the basic protection of the Family and Medical Leave Act to more workers, intelligent gun control policies, and better alternatives for our youth out of school. But I believe a key piece is supporting parents in the very first days, weeks and months of a child's life—and hope that we can work together to make sure these all important days are possible for all parents.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this measure be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows.

S. 1355

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Family Income to Respond to Significant Transitions Insurance Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) nearly every industrialized nation other than the United States, and most developing nations, provide parents with paid leave for infant care;

(2)(A) parents' interactions with their infants have a major influence on the physical, cognitive, and social development of the infants; and

(B) optimal development of an infant depends on a strong attachment between an infant and the infant's parents;

(3) nearly ⅓ of employees, who need to take family or medical leave, but do not take the leave, report that they cannot afford to take the leave;

(4) although some employees in the United States receive wage replacement during periods of family or medical leave, the benefit of wage replacement is not shared equally in the workforce, as demonstrated by the fact that—

(A) employees with less education and lower income are less likely to receive wage replacement than employees with more education and higher salaries; and

(B) female employees, employees from racial minority groups, and younger employees are slightly less likely to receive wage replacement than male employees, white employees, and older employees, respectively;

(5) in order to cope financially with taking family or medical leave, of persons taking that leave without full wage replacement—

(A) 40 percent cut their leave short;

(B) 39 percent put off paying bills;

(C) 25 percent borrowed money; and

(D) 9 percent obtained public assistance;

(6) taking family or medical leave often drives employees earning low wages into poverty, and 21 percent of such low-wage employees who take family or medical leave without full wage replacement resort to public assistance;

(7) studies document shortages in the supply of infant care, and that the shortages are expected to worsen as welfare reform measures are implemented; and

(8) compared to 30 years ago, families have experienced an average decrease of 22 hours per week in time that parents spend with their children.

SEC. 3. PURPOSES.

The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to establish a demonstration program that supports the efforts of States and political subdivisions to provide partial or full wage replacement, often referred to as FIRST insurance, to new parents so that the new parents are able to spend time with a new infant or newly adopted child, and to other employees; and

(2) to learn about the most effective mechanisms for providing the wage replacement assistance.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor, acting after consultation with the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(2) SON OR DAUGHTER; STATE.—The terms "son or daughter" and "State" have the meanings given the terms in section 101 of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (29 U.S.C. 2611).

SEC. 5. DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.

(a) GRANTS.—The Secretary shall make grants to eligible entities to pay for the Federal share of the cost of carrying out projects that assist families by providing, through various mechanisms, wage replacement for eligible individuals that are responding to caregiving needs resulting from the birth or adoption of a son or daughter or other family caregiving needs. The Secretary shall make the grants for periods of 5 years.

(b) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an entity shall be a State or political subdivision of a State.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—An entity that receives a grant under this section may use the funds made available through the grant to provide partial or full wage replacement as described in subsection (a) to eligible individuals—

(A) directly;

(B) through an insurance program, such as a State temporary disability insurance program or the State unemployment compensation benefit program;

(C) through a private disability or other insurance plan, or another mechanism provided by a private employer; or

(D) through another mechanism.

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—No entity may use more than 10 percent of the total funds made available through the grant during the 5-year period of the grant to pay for the administrative costs relating to a project described in subsection (a).

(d) ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.—To be eligible to receive wage replacement under subsection (a), an individual shall—

(1) meet such eligibility criteria as the eligible entity providing the wage replacement may specify in an application described in subsection (e); and

(2) be—

(A) an individual who is taking leave, under the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (29 U.S.C. 2601 et seq.), other Federal, State, or local law, or a private plan, for a reason described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of section 102(a)(1) of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (29 U.S.C. 2612(a)(1));

(B) at the option of the eligible entity, an individual who—

(i) is taking leave, under that Act, other Federal, State, or local law, or a private plan, for a reason described in subparagraph (C) or (D) of section 102(a)(1) of the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 (29 U.S.C. 2612(a)(1)); or

(ii) leaves employment because the individual has elected to care for a son or daughter under age 1; or

(C) at the option of the eligible entity, an individual with other characteristics specified by the eligible entity in an application described in subsection (e).

(e) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an entity shall submit an application to the Secretary, at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require, including, at a minimum—

(1) a plan for the project to be carried out with the grant;

(2) information demonstrating that the applicant consulted representatives of employers and employees, including labor organizations, in developing the plan;

(3) estimates of the costs and benefits of the project;

(4)(A) information on the number and type of families to be covered by the project, and the extent of such coverage in the area served under the grant; and

(B) information on any criteria or characteristics that the entity will use to determine whether an individual is eligible for wage replacement under subsection (a), as described in paragraphs (1) and (2)(C) of subsection (d);

(5) if the project will expand on State and private systems of wage replacement for eligible individuals, information on the manner in which the project will expand on the systems;

(6) information demonstrating the manner in which the wage replacement assistance provided through the project will assist families in which an individual takes leave as described in subsection (d)(1); and

(7) an assurance that the applicant will participate in efforts to evaluate the effectiveness of the project.

(f) SELECTION CRITERIA.—In selecting entities to receive grants for projects under this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) take into consideration—

(A) the scope of the proposed projects;

(B) the cost-effectiveness, feasibility, and financial soundness of the proposed projects;

(C) the extent to which the proposed projects would expand access to wage replacement in response to family caregiving needs, particularly for low-wage employees, in the area served by the grant; and

(D) the benefits that would be offered to families and children through the proposed projects; and

(2) to the extent feasible, select entities proposing projects that utilize diverse mechanisms, including expansion of State unemployment compensation benefit programs, and establishment or expansion of State temporary disability insurance programs, to provide the wage replacement.

(g) FEDERAL SHARE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the cost described in subsection (a) shall be—

(A) 50 percent for the first year of the grant period;

(B) 40 percent for the second year of that period;

(C) 30 percent for the third year of that period; and

(D) 20 percent for each subsequent year.

(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost may be in cash or in kind, fairly evaluated, including plant, equipment, and services and may be provided from State, local, or private sources, or Federal sources other than this Act.

(h) SUPPLEMENT NOT SUPPLANT.—Funds appropriated pursuant to the authority of this Act shall be used to supplement and not supplant other Federal, State, and local public funds and private funds expended to provide wage replacement.

(i) EFFECT ON EXISTING RIGHTS.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to supersede, preempt, or otherwise infringe on the provisions of any collective bargaining agreement or any employment benefit program or plan that provides greater rights to employees than the rights established under this Act.

SEC. 6. EVALUATIONS AND REPORTS.

(a) AVAILABLE FUNDS.—The Secretary shall use not more than 2 percent of the funds made available under section 5 to carry out this section.

(b) EVALUATIONS.—The Secretary shall, directly or by contract, evaluate the effectiveness of projects carried out with grants made under section 5, including conducting—

(1) research relating to the projects, including research comparing—

(A) the scope of the projects, including the type of insurance or other wage replacement mechanism used, the method of financing used, the eligibility requirements, the level of the wage replacement benefit provided (such as the percentage of salary replaced), and the length of the benefit provided, for the projects;

(B) the utilization of the projects, including the characteristics of individuals who benefit from the projects, particularly low-wage workers, and factors that determine the ability of eligible individuals to obtain wage replacement through the projects; and

(C) the costs of and savings achieved by the projects, including the cost-effectiveness of the projects and their benefits for children and families;

(2) analysis of the overall need for wage replacement; and

(3) analysis of the impact of the projects on the overall availability of wage replacement.

(c) REPORTS.—

(1) INITIAL REPORT.—Not later than 3 years after the beginning of the grant period for the first grant made under section 5, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to Congress a report that contains information resulting from the evaluations conducted under subsection (b).

(2) SUBSEQUENT REPORTS.—Not later than 4 years after the beginning of that grant period, and annually thereafter, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to Congress a report that contains—

(A) information resulting from the evaluations conducted under subsection (b); and

(B) usage data for the demonstration projects, for the most recent year for which data are available.

SEC. 7. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this Act $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2000 and such sums as may be necessary for each subsequent fiscal year.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am honored to join as a cosponsor of Senator DODD's "Family Income to Respond to Significant Transitions" (FIRST) Insurance Demonstration Project Act. From his work on the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993 to his countless efforts to improve the quality and accessibility of child care, Senator DODD has been a tireless advocate for families and children, and I commend his leadership on this important new initiation.

Millions of families have benefited from the Family and Medical Leave Act, but we must do more to support working families. Nearly two-thirds of employees cannot afford to take family or medical leave when a new child is born or a family member becomes ill. According to a survey by the National Partnership for Women and Families, 64 percent of Americans believe that the time pressures on working families are getting worse, not better. Two-thirds of women and men under the age of 45 believe that they will need to take a family or medical leave in the next 10 years. But, many of these families won't be able to afford it.

We should stop paying lip service to family values and find a way to help families afford family leave when they need it. This bill will provide grants to states and local communities to experiment with methods of wage replacement for workers who take family leave. States will use the grants for demonstration projects implementing wage replacement strategies to allow more employees to spend time with their families when family needs require it.

Under the Family and Medical Leave Act, businesses with 50 or more employees must provide up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave to employees to care for a newborn or newly-adopted child, or to care for a child, a spouse, or a parent who is ill. The Act has helped millions of workers care for their families, but too many obstacles prevent too many workers from taking leave. Forty-one million people, nearly half the private workforce, are not protected by the law because their company is too small to be covered, or because they haven't worked there long enough to qualify for the leave.

Others are covered and entitled to a leave, but cannot benefit from the Act because they cannot afford to take an unpaid leave of absence. Although some workers are fortunate enough to receive wage replacement during periods of family or medical leave, most hard-working low-wage earners do not receive this benefit. Low-income employees are less likely to receive wage replacement than more highly educated, well-paid employees. Women, minorities, and younger employees are less likely than men, white Americans, and older workers to receive wage replacement benefits when taking family leave.

As a result, 40 percent employees without full wage replacement cut their leaves short, 39 percent put-off paying bills, 25 percent borrow money, and 9 percent turn to public assistance to cover their loss wages. Taking unpaid leave often drives low-wage earners into poverty. Workers who need to care for an ill family member, an elderly parent, or a new baby should not be plunged into poverty.

Our bill will help families take needed leave by allowing states to implement alternative funding programs. For example, states may choose to expand state or private Temporary Disability Insurance plans to provide partial or full replacement of wages for those taking time off from work to care for a new child. States may also expand their Unemployment Insurance Compensation to make leave from work economically feasible. The FIRST Act is an important step in the right direction. This bill will provide states with $400 million for fiscal year 2000 to fund demonstration programs, assisting states which are already working to establish wage replacement leave programs.

I am proud that Massachusetts is moving forward to address this problem. A bill to establish a Family and Employment Security Trust Fund has already been introduced, providing family leave replacement through the unemployment insurance system. Thousands of workers in Massachusetts will be able to care for their families without falling into poverty—including low-income employees living from paycheck to paycheck. Groups in Maryland, Vermont, and Washington are taking the lead with similar legislation.

We need to put families first and this bill does that. I urge my colleagues to support this needed initiative.

By Mr. MOYNIHAN (for himself and Mr. SCHUMER):

S. 1356. A bill to amend the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 to clarify the limitation on the dumping of dredged material in Long Island Sound; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

THE LONG ISLAND SOUND PROTECTION ACT OF 1999

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill that will protect the natural beauty and resources of the Long Island Sound from current dredging policies that allow large amounts of material to be dumped into the estuary without stringent environmental review. The Long Island Sound Protection Act of 1999 would require all large dredging projects in the Sound to comply with sediment testing provisions of the Marine Protection Research and Sanctuaries Act, commonly known as the Ocean Dumping Act.

Under the Ocean Dumping Act, any Long Island Sound dredging project that disposes of more than 25,000 tons of dredged material must undergo toxicity and bioaccumulation tests before it is safe to dump. However, smaller nonfederal projects need only comply with the Clean Water Act, which does not require testing. In recent years, the Army Corps of Engineers has begun an unfortunate practice of avoiding the more rigorous requirements of the Ocean Dumping Act by individually permitting smaller projects that are clearly a part of larger dredging operations. Individually permitted, these projects need only comply with the Clean Water Act, even though they are dumped together in the Long Island Sound and have the same cumulative effect as one large project would to the local ecosystem. The Long Island Sound Protection Act would end this practice of stacking permits and would ensure that at least one environmentally acceptable disposal site is designated by the Environmental Protection Agency within a two-year period.

Dredging projects are critical to the people and businesses who rely extensively on the Sound to transport goods, services, and people every day. However, the health of the Long Island Sound ecosystem is also important to the 8 million people living within the boundaries of the Long Island Sound watershed, with more than $5 billion generated annually from boating, commercial and sport fishing, swimming, and beachgoing. The Long Island Sound is also an estuary of national significance that my State, in cooperation with the Environmental Protection Agency, has worked diligently to restore under the 1992 Long Island Sound Comprehensive Conservation and Management Plan. This bill would remove one of the barriers to achieving the laudable goals of this Plan.

A clean and safe Sound is important to us all. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1356

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Long Island Sound Protection Act".

SEC. 2. LONG ISLAND SOUND PROTECTION.

Section 106 of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act (33 U.S.C. 1416) is amended—

(1) by striking "(f) In" and inserting the following:

"(f) LONG ISLAND SOUND.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—In"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) MULTIPLE PROJECTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (1) shall apply to a project described in paragraph (1) if—

"(i) 1 or more projects of that type produce, in the aggregate, dredged material in excess of 25,000 cubic yards; and

"(ii) (I) the project or projects are carried out in a proximate geographical area; or

"(II) the aggregate quantity of dredged material produced by the project or projects is transported, for dumping purposes, by the same barge.

"(B) REGULATIONS.—As soon as practicable, but not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this paragraph, the Administrator shall promulgate regulations that define the term 'proximate geographical area' for purposes of subparagraph (A)(i).

"(3) DESIGNATED SITE.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this paragraph, the Administrator shall designate under section 102(c) at least 1 site for the dumping of dredged material generated in the vicinity of Long Island Sound.

"(4) PROHIBITION ON DUMPING OF DREDGED MATERIAL.—Except at the site or sites designated under paragraph (3) (if the site or sites are located in Long Island Sound), no dredged material shall be dumped in Long Island Sound after the date on which the Administrator designates at least 1 site under paragraph (3)."

By Mr. JEFFORDS:

s. 1357. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to enhance the portability of retirement benefits, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE RETIREMENT ACCOUNT PORTABILITY ACT

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, today I am introducing S. 1357, the Retirement Account Portability (RAP) Act. This bill is a close companion to H.R. 738, the bill introduced by Congressman EARL POMEROY of North Dakota. It was also included as title III of the Pension Coverage and Portability Act, S. 741, introduced earlier this year by myself and Senators GRAHAM and GRASSLEY. Generally this bill is intended to be a further iteration of the concepts embodied in both of those bills.

The RAP Act standardizes the rules in the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) which regulate how portable a worker's retirement savings account is, and while it does not make portability of pension benefits perfect, it greatly improves the status quo. No employer will be "required" to accept rollovers from other plans, however. A rollover will occur when the employee offers, and the employer agrees to accept, a rollover from another plan.

Under current law, it is not possible for an individual to move an accumulated retirement savings account from a section 401(k) (for-profit) plan to a section 457 (state and local government) deferred compensation plan, to an Individual Retirement Account (IRA), then to a section 403(b) (non-profit organization or public school) deferred annuity plan and ultimately back into a section 401(k) plan, without violating various restrictions on the movement of their money. The RAP Act will make it possible for workers to take their retirement savings with them when they change jobs regardless of the type of employer for which they work.

This bill will also help make IRAs more portable and will improve the use of conduit IRAs. Conduit IRAs are individual retirement accounts to which certain distributions from a qualified retirement plan or from another individual retirement account have been transferred. RAP changes the rules regulating these IRAs so that workers leaving the for-profit, non-profit or governmental field can use a conduit IRA as a parking spot for a pre-retirement distribution. These special accounts are needed by many workers until they have another employer-sponsored plan in which to rollover their savings.

In many instances, this bill will allow an individual to rollover an IRA consisting exclusively of tax-deductible contributions into a retirement plan at his or her new place of employment, thus helping the individual consolidate retirement savings in a single account. Under certain circumstances, the RAP Act will also allow workers to rollover any after-tax contributions made at his or her previous workplace, into a new retirement plan. Under the provisions of the bill as drafted, after-tax contributions will be rollable from a plan to an IRA and from an IRA to an IRA, but not from an IRA to a plan, nor on a direct plan to plan basis. I am open to recommendations on how we can improve the treatment of after-tax rollovers and I look forward to hearing from my colleagues and the public on that topic.

Current law requires a worker who changes jobs to face a deadline of 60 days within which to roll over any retirement savings benefits either into an Individual Retirement Account, or into the retirement plan of his or her new employer. Failure to meet the deadline can result in both income and excise taxes being imposed on the account. We believe that this deadline should be waived under certain circumstances and we have outlined them in the bill. Consistent with the Pomeroy bill, in case of a Presidentially-declared natural disaster or military service in a combat zone, the Treasury Department will have the authority to disallow imposition of any tax penalty for the account holder. Consistent with the additional changes incorporated by Congressman POMEROY this year, however, we have included a waiver of tax penalties in the case of undue hardship, such as a serious personal injury or illness and we have given the Department of the Treasury the authority to waive the deadline.

The Retirement Account Portability Act will also change two complicated rules which harm both plan sponsors and plan participants; one dealing with certain business sales (the so-called "same desk" rule) and the other dealing with retirement plan distribution options. Each of these rules has impeded true portability of pensions and we believe they ought to be changed.

In addition, this bill will extend the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation's (PBGC) Missing Participant program to defined benefit multiemployer pension plans. Under current law, the PBGC has jurisdiction over both single-employer and multiemployer defined benefit pension plans. A few years ago, the agency initiated a program to locate missing participants from terminated, single-employer plans. The program attempts to locate individuals who are due a benefit, but who have not filed for benefits owed to them, or who have attempted to find their former employer but failed to receive their benefits. This bill expands the missing participant program to multi-employer pension plans.

I know of no reason why individuals covered by a multiemployer pension plans should not have the same protections as participants of single-employer pension plans and this change will help more former employees receive all the benefits to which they are entitled. This bill does not expand the missing participants program to defined contribution plans. Supervision of defined contribution plans is outside the statutory jurisdiction of the PBGC and I have not heard strong arguments for including those plans within the jurisdiction of the agency. I would be pleased to hear the recommendations of any of my colleagues on this matter.

In a particularly important provision, the Retirement Account Portability bill will allow public school teachers and other state and local employees who move between different states and localities to use their savings in their section 403(b) plan or section 457 deferred compensation arrangement to purchase "service credit" in the defined benefit plan in which they are currently participating, and thus obtain greater pension benefits in the plan in which they conclude their career.

As a final note, this bill, this bill does not reduce the vesting schedule from the current five year cliff vesting (or seven year graded) to a three year cliff or six year graded vesting schedule that has been contained in other bills. I support the shorter vesting schedules, but I feel that the abbreviated schedule makes a dramatic change to tax law without removing some of the disincentives to maintaining a pension plan that businesses—especially small businesses—desperately need. More discussion of this matter is needed.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1357

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; AMENDMENT OF 1986 CODE.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Retirement Account Portability Act of 1999".

(b) AMENDMENT OF 1986 CODE.—Except as otherwise expressly provided, whenever in this Act an amendment or repeal is expressed in terms of an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

SEC. 2. ROLLOVERS ALLOWED AMONG VARIOUS TYPES OF PLANS.

(a) ROLLOVERS FROM AND TO SECTION 457 PLANS.—

(1) ROLLOVERS FROM SECTION 457 PLANS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Section 457(e) (relating to other definitions and special rules) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(16) ROLLOVER AMOUNTS.—

"(A) GENERAL RULE.—In the case of an eligible deferred compensation plan, if—

"(i) any portion of the balance to the credit of an employee in such plan is paid to such employee in an eligible rollover distribution (within the meaning of section 402(c)(4) without regard to subparagraph (C) thereof),

"(ii) the employee transfers any portion of the property such employee receives in such distribution to an eligible retirement plan described in section 402(c)(8)(B), and

"(iii) in the case of a distribution of property other than money, the amount so transferred consists of the property distributed, then such distribution (to the extent so transferred) shall not be includible in gross income for the taxable year in which paid.

"(B) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—The rules of paragraphs (2) through (7) (other than paragraph (4)(C)) and (9) of section 402(c) and section 402(f) shall apply for purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(C) REPORTING.—Rollovers under this paragraph shall be reported to the Secretary in the same manner as rollovers from qualified retirement plans (as defined in section 4974(c))."

(B) DEFERRAL LIMIT DETERMINED WITHOUT REGARD TO ROLLOVER AMOUNTS.—Section 457(b)(2) (defining eligible deferred compensation plan) is amended by inserting "(other than rollover amounts)" after "taxable year".

(C) DIRECT ROLLOVER.—Paragraph (1) of section 457(d) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (A), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting ", and", and by inserting after subparagraph (B) the following:

"(C) the plan meets requirements similar to the requirements of section 401(a)(31).

Any amount transferred in a direct trustee-to-trustee transfer in accordance with section 401(a)(31) shall not be includible in gross income for the taxable year of transfer."

(D) WITHHOLDING.—

(i) Paragraph (12) of section 3401(a) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(E) under or to an eligible deferred compensation plan which, at the time of such payment, is a plan described in section 457(b); or"

(ii) Paragraph (5) of section 3405(e) is amended by adding at the end the following: "Such term shall include an eligible deferred compensation plan described in section 457(b)."

(iii) Paragraph (3) of section 3405(c) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) ELIGIBLE ROLLOVER DISTRIBUTION.—For purposes of this subsection, the term 'eligible rollover distribution' has the meaning given such term by section 402(f)(2)(A)."

(iv) LIABILITY FOR WITHHOLDING.—Subparagraph (B) of section 3405(d)(2) is amended by striking "or" at the end of clause (ii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting ", or", and by adding at the end the following:

"(iv) section 457(b)."

(2) ROLLOVERS TO SECTION 457 PLANS.—

(A) Section 402(c)(8)(B) (defining eligible retirement plan) is amended by striking "and" at the end of clause (iii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iv) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following:

"(v) an eligible deferred compensation plan described in section 457(b) of an eligible employer described in section 457(e)(1)(A)."

(B) Paragraph (9) of section 402(c) is amended by striking "except that" and all that follows and inserting "except that only an account or annuity described in clause (i) or (ii) of paragraph (8)(B) shall be treated as an eligible retirement plan with respect to such distribution."

(C) Subsection (a) of section 457 (relating to year of inclusion in gross income) is amended by striking "or otherwise made available".

(3) MINIMUM DISTRIBUTIONS.—Paragraph (2) of section 457(d) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) MINIMUM DISTRIBUTION REQUIREMENTS.—A plan meets the distribution requirements of this paragraph if the plan meets the requirements of section 401(a)(9)."

(4) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (9) of section 457(e) is amended to read as follows:

"(9) BENEFITS NOT TREATED AS FAILING TO MEET DISTRIBUTION REQUIREMENTS OF SUBSECTION (d).—A plan shall not be treated as failing to meet the distribution requirements of subsection (d) by reason of a distribution of the total amount payable to a participant under the plan if—

"(A) such amount does not exceed the dollar limit under section 411(a)(11)(A), and

"(B) such amount may be distributed only if—

"(i) no amount has been deferred under the plan with respect to such participant during the 2-year period ending on the date of the distribution, and

"(ii) there has been no prior distribution under the plan to such participant to which this paragraph applied."

(b) ALLOWANCE OF ROLLOVERS FROM AND TO 403(b) PLANS.—

(1) ROLLOVERS FROM SECTION 403(b) PLANS.—Section 403(b)(8)(A)(ii) (relating to rollover amounts) is amended by striking "such distribution" and all that follows and inserting "such distribution to an eligible retirement plan described in section 402(c)(8)(B), and".

(2) ROLLOVERS TO SECTION 403(b) PLANS.—Section 402(c)(8)(B) (defining eligible retirement plan), as amended by subsection (a), is amended by striking "and" at the end of clause (iv), by striking the period at the end of clause (v) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following:

"(vi) an annuity contract described in section 403(b)."

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Subparagraph (B) of section 403(b)(8) is amended by striking "Rules similar to the" and inserting "The".

(c) EXPANDED EXPLANATION TO RECIPIENTS OF ROLLOVER DISTRIBUTIONS.—Paragraph (1) of section 402(f) (relating to written explanation to recipients of distributions eligible for rollover treatment) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (C), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (D) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(E) of the provisions under which distributions from the eligible retirement plan receiving the distribution may be subject to restrictions and tax consequences which are different from those applicable to distributions from the plan making such distribution."

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 72(o)(4) is amended by striking "and 408(d)(3)" and inserting "403(b)(8), 408(d)(3), and 457(e)(16)".

(2) Section 219(d)(2) is amended by striking "or 408(d)(3)" and inserting "408(d)(3), or 457(e)(16)".

(3) Section 401(a)(31)(B) is amended by striking "and 403(a)(4)" and inserting ", 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), and 457(e)(16)".

(4) Subparagraph (A) of section 402(f)(2) is amended by striking "or paragraph (4) of section 403(a)" and inserting ", paragraph (4) of section 403(a), subparagraph (A) of section 403(b)(8), or subparagraph (A) of section 457(e)(16)".

(5) Paragraph (1) of section 402(f) is amended by striking "from an eligible retirement plan".

(6) Subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 402(f)(1) are amended by striking "another eligible retirement plan" and inserting "an eligible retirement plan".

(7) Subparagraph (B) of section 403(b)(8) is amended by striking "shall apply for purposes of subparagraph (A)" and inserting "and section 402(f) shall apply for purposes of subparagraph (A), except that section 402(f) shall be applied to the payor in lieu of the plan administrator".

(8) Subparagraph (B) of section 403(b)(8) is amended by inserting "and (9)" after "through (7)".

(9) Section 408(a)(1) is amended by striking "or 403(b)(8)" and inserting ", 403(b)(8), or 457(e)(16)".

(10) Subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 415(b)(2) are each amended by striking "and 408(d)(3)" and inserting "403(b)(8), 408(d)(3), and 457(e)(16)".

(11) Section 415(c)(2) is amended by striking "and 408(d)(3)" and inserting "408(d)(3), and 457(e)(16)".

(12) Section 4973(b)(1)(A) is amended by striking "or 408(d)(3)" and inserting "408(d)(3), or 457(e)(16)".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE; SPECIAL RULE.—

(1) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions after December 31, 1999.

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, subsections (h)(3) and (h)(5) of section 1122 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 shall not apply to any distribution from an eligible retirement plan described in clause (iii) or (iv) of section 402(c)(8)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 on behalf of an individual if there was a rollover to such plan on behalf of such individual which is permitted solely by reason of any amendment made by this section.

SEC. 3. ROLLOVERS OF IRAS INTO WORKPLACE RETIREMENT PLANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subparagraph (A) of section 408(d)(3) (relating to rollover amounts) is amended by adding "or" at the end of clause (i), by striking clauses (ii) and (iii), and by adding at the end the following:

"(ii) the entire amount received (including money and any other property) is paid into an eligible retirement plan for the benefit of such individual not later than the 60th day after the date on which the individual receives the payment or distribution.

For purposes of clause (ii), the term 'eligible retirement plan' means an eligible retirement plan described in clause (iii), (iv), (v), or (vi) of section 402(c)(8)(B)."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (1) of section 403(b) is amended by striking "section 408(d)(3)(A)(iii)" and inserting "section 408(d)(3)(A)(ii)".

(2) Clause (i) of section 408(d)(3)(D) is amended by striking "(i), (ii), or (iii)" and inserting "(i) or (ii)".

(3) Subparagraph (G) of section 408(d)(3) is amended to read as follows:

"(G) SIMPLE RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS.—In the case of any payment or distribution out of a simple retirement account (as defined in subsection (p)) to which section 72(t)(6) applies, this paragraph shall not apply unless such payment or distribution is paid into another simple retirement account."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE; SPECIAL RULE.—

(1) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions after December 31, 1999.

(2) SPECIAL RULE.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, subsections (h)(3) and (h)(5) of section 1122 of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 shall not apply to any distribution from an eligible retirement plan described in clause (iii) or (iv) of section 402(c)(8)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 on behalf of an individual if there was a rollover to such plan on behalf of such individual which is permitted solely by reason of the amendments made by this section.

SEC. 4. ROLLOVERS OF AFTER-TAX CONTRIBUTIONS; HARDSHIP EXCEPTION.

(a) AFTER-TAX CONTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) ROLLOVERS.—Subsection (c) of section 402 (relating to rules applicable to rollovers from exempt trusts) (as amended by section 2) is amended by striking paragraph (2) and redesignating paragraphs (3) through (10) as paragraphs (2) through (9), respectively.

(2) DIRECT TRANSFERS.—Paragraph (31) of section 401(a) (relating to optional direct transfer of eligible rollover distributions) is amended by striking subparagraph (B) and redesignating subparagraphs (C) and (D) as subparagraphs (B) and (C), respectively.

(3) ANNUITIES.—Subparagraph (B) of section 408(d)(3) (relating to rollover contributions) is amended by striking "which was not includible in his gross income because of the application of this paragraph" and inserting "to which this paragraph applied".

(4) ELIGIBLE RETIREMENT PLAN.—Paragraph (7)(B) of section 402(c) (as redesignated by subsection (a)(1) and as amended by section 2) is amended—

(A) by striking "The term" and inserting "Except as provided in this subparagraph, the term", and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"Arrangements described in clauses (iii), (iv) (v), and (vi) shall not be treated as eligible retirement plans for purposes of receiving a rollover contribution of an eligible rollover distribution to the extent that such eligible rollover distribution is not includible in gross income (determined without regard to paragraph (1))."

(5) TAXATION OF DISTRIBUTIONS.—Paragraph (2) of section 408(d) is amended—

(A) by striking "For purposes" and inserting the following:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in this paragraph, for purposes",

(B) by striking "(A) all" and inserting "(i) all";

(C) by striking "(B) all" and inserting "(ii) all";

(D) by striking "(C) the" and inserting "(iii) the",

(E) by striking "subparagraph (C)" and inserting "clause (iii)", and

(F) by inserting at the end the following:

"(B) APPLICATION OF SECTION 72.—For purposes of applying section 72, if—

"(i) a distribution is made from an individual retirement plan, and

"(ii) a rollover contribution described in paragraph (3) is made to an eligible retirement plan described in section 402(c)(7)(B)(iii), (iv), (v), or (vi) with respect to all or part of such distribution, the includible amount in the individual's individual retirement plans shall be reduced by the amount described in subparagraph (C). As of the close of the calendar year in which the taxable year begins, the reduction of all amounts described in subparagraph (C)(i) shall be applied prior to the computations described in subparagraph (A)(iii). The amount of any distribution with respect to which there is a rollover contribution described in clause (ii) shall not be treated as a distribution for purposes of subparagraph (A).

"(C) AMOUNT DESCRIBED.—The amount described in this subparagraph is the sum of—

"(i) the amount of the rollover contribution described in subparagraph (B)(ii), and

"(ii) in the case of any portion of the distribution with respect to which there is not a rollover contribution described in paragraph (3), the amount of such portion that is included in gross income under section 72.

"(D) INCLUDIBLE AMOUNT.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'includible amount' shall mean the amount that is not investment in the contract (as defined in section 72)."

(6) TRANSFERS TO IRAS.—Subparagraph (C) of section 402(c)(5) (as redesignated by subsection (a)(1)) is amended by inserting after "other than money" the following: "or where the amount of the distribution exceeds the amount of the rollover contribution".

(b) HARDSHIP EXCEPTION TO 60-DAY RULE.—

(1) PLAN ROLLOVERS.—Paragraph (2) of section 402(c) (as so redesignated) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) TRANSFER MUST BE MADE WITHIN 60 DAYS OF RECEIPT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subparagraph (B), paragraph (1) shall not apply to any transfer of a distribution made after the 60th day following the day on which the distributee received the property distributed.

"(B) HARDSHIP EXCEPTION.—The Secretary may waive the 60-day requirement under subparagraph (A) where the failure to waive such requirement would be against equity or good conscience, including casualty, disaster, or other events beyond the reasonable control of the individual subject to such requirement."

(2) IRA ROLLOVERS.—Paragraph (3) of section 408(d) (relating to rollover contributions) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(H) WAIVER OF 60-DAY REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary may waive the 60-day requirement under subparagraphs (A) and (D) where the failure to waive such requirement would be against equity or good conscience, including casualty, disaster, or other events beyond the reasonable control of the individual subject to such requirement."

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Paragraph (4) of section 402(c) (as redesignated by subsection (a)(1)) is amended by striking "(8)(B)" and inserting "(7)(B)".

(2) Subparagraph (B) of section 403(a)(4) is amended by striking "(2) through (7)" and inserting "(2) through (6)".

(3) Section 403(b)(8)(A)(ii) (as amended by section 2) is amended by striking "section 402(c)(8)(B)" and inserting "section 402(c)(7)(B)".

(4) Subparagraph (B) of section 403(b)(8) (as amended by section 2) is amended by striking "(2) through (7) and (9) of section 402(c)" and inserting "(2) through (6) and (8) of section 402(c)".

(5) Subparagraph (A) of section 408(d)(3) (as amended by section 3) is amended by striking "402(c)(8)" and inserting "402(c)(7)".

(6) Paragraph (16) of section 457(e) (as added by section 2) is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A)(i) by striking "402(c)(4)" and inserting "402(c)(3)",

(B) in subparagraph (A)(ii) by striking "402(c)(8)(B)" and inserting "402(c)(7)(B)", and

(C) in subparagraph (B) by striking "paragraphs (2) through (7) (other than paragraph (4)(C)) and (9) of section 402(c)" and inserting "paragraphs (2) through (6) (other than paragraph (3)(C)) and (8) of section 402(c)".

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided by paragraph (2), the amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions made after December 31, 1999.

(2) HARDSHIP EXCEPTION.—The amendments made by subsection (b) shall apply to 60-day periods ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5. EXTENSION OF MISSING PARTICIPANTS PROGRAM TO MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 4050 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1350) is amended by redesignating subsection (c) as subsection (d) and by inserting after subsection (b) the following new subsection:

"(c) MULTIEMPLOYER PLANS.—The corporation shall prescribe rules similar to the rules in subsection (a) for multiemployer plans covered by this title that terminate under section 4041A."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 206(f) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1056(f)) is amended by striking "the plan shall provide that."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions made after final regulations implementing subsection (c) of section 4050 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as added by subsection (a)) are prescribed.

SEC. 6. RATIONALIZATION OF RESTRICTIONS ON DISTRIBUTIONS FROM DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLANS.

(a) DISTRIBUTIONS PERMITTED ON SEVERANCE FROM EMPLOYMENT.—

(1) 401(k) PLANS.—Section 401(k)(2)(B)(i)(I) (relating to qualified cash or deferred arrangements) is amended by striking "separation from service" and inserting "severance from employment".

(2) 403(b) CONTRACTS.—

(A) Clause (ii) of section 403(b)(7)(A) is amended by striking "separates from service" and inserting "severs from employment".

(B) Paragraph (11) of section 403(b) is amended—

(i) by striking "SEPARATION FROM SERVICE" in the heading and inserting "SEVERANCE FROM EMPLOYMENT", and

(ii) by striking "separates from service" and inserting "severs from employment".

(3) 457 PLANS.—Clause (ii) of section 457(d)(1)(A) is amended by striking "is separated from service" and inserting "has a severance from employment".

(b) BUSINESS SALE REQUIREMENTS DELETED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 401(k)(2)(B)(i)(II) (relating to qualified cash or deferred arrangements) is amended by striking "an event" and inserting "a plan termination".

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 401(k)(10) is amended—

(A) by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A plan termination is described in this paragraph if the termination of the plan does not involve the establishment or maintenance of another defined contribution plan (other than an employee stock ownership plan as defined in section 4975(e)(7))."

(B) in subparagraph (B)—

(i) by striking "An event" and inserting "A termination", and

(ii) by striking "the event" and inserting "the termination",

(C) by striking subparagraph (C), and

(D) by striking "OR DISPOSITION OF ASSETS OR SUBSIDIARY" in the heading.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 7. TRANSFEEE DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLAN NEED NOT HAVE SAME DISTRIBUTION OPTIONS AS TRANSFEROR DEFINED CONTRIBUTION PLAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 411(d)(6) (relating to accrued benefit not to be decreased by amendment) is amended by adding at the end the following new subparagraph:

"(D) PLAN TRANSFERS.—A defined contribution plan (in this subparagraph referred to as the 'transferee plan') shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of this paragraph merely because the transferee plan does not provide some or all of the forms of distribution previously available under another defined contribution plan (in this subparagraph referred to as the 'transferor plan') to the extent that—

"(i) the forms of distribution previously available under the transferor plan applied to the account of a participant or beneficiary under the transferor plan that was transferred from the transferor plan to the transferee plan pursuant to a direct transfer rather than pursuant to a distribution from the transferor plan,

"(ii) the terms of both the transferor plan and the transferee plan authorize the transfer described in clause (i),

"(iii) the transfer described in clause (i) was made pursuant to a voluntary election by the participant or beneficiary whose account was transferred to the transferee plan,

"(iv) the election described in clause (iii) was made after the participant or beneficiary received a notice describing the consequences of making the election,

"(v) if the transferor plan provides for an annuity as the normal form of distribution under the plan in accordance with section 417, the transfer is made with the consent of the participant's spouse (if any), and such consent meets requirements similar to the requirements imposed by section 417(a)(2), and

"(vi) the transferee plan allows the participant or beneficiary described in clause (iii) to receive any distribution to which the participant or beneficiary is entitled under transferee plan in the form of a single sum distribution."

(b) AMENDMENT TO ERISA.—Section 204(g) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1054(g)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4) A defined contribution plan (in this paragraph referred to as the 'transferee plan') shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of this subsection merely because the transferee plan does not provide some or all of the forms of distribution previously available under another defined contribution plan (in this paragraph referred to as the 'transferor plan') to the extent that—

"(A) the forms of distribution previously available under the transferor plan applied to the account of a participant or beneficiary under the transferor plan that was transferred from the transferor plan to the transferee plan pursuant to a direct transfer rather than pursuant to a distribution from the transferor plan,

“(B) the terms of both the transferor plan and the transferee plan authorize the transfer described in subparagraph (A),

“(C) the transfer described in subparagraph (A) was made pursuant to a voluntary election by the participant or beneficiary whose account was transferred to the transferee plan,

“(D) the election described in subparagraph (C) was made after the participant or beneficiary received a notice describing the consequences of making the election,

“(E) if the transferor plan provides for an annuity as the normal form of distribution under the plan in accordance with section 205, the transfer is made with the consent of the participant’s spouse (if any), and such consent meets requirements similar to the requirements imposed by section 205(c)(2), and

“(F) the transferee plan allows the participant or beneficiary described in subparagraph (C) to receive any distribution to which the participant or beneficiary is entitled under transferee plan in the form of a single sum distribution.”

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to transfers after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 8. EMPLOYERS MAY DISREGARD ROLLOVERS FOR PURPOSES OF CASH-OUT AMOUNTS.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO 1986 CODE.—

(1) Section 411(a)(11) (relating to restrictions on certain mandatory distributions) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(D) SPECIAL RULE FOR ROLLOVER CONTRIBUTIONS.—A plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of this paragraph if, under the terms of the plan, the present value of the nonforfeitable accrued benefit is determined without regard to that portion of such benefit which is attributable to rollover contributions (and earnings allocable thereto). For purposes of this subparagraph, the term ‘rollover contributions’ means any rollover contribution under sections 402(c), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 408(d)(3)(A)(ii), and 457(e)(16).”

(2) Clause (i) of section 457(e)(9)(A) is amended by striking “such amount” and inserting “the portion of such amount which is not attributable to rollover contributions (as defined in section 411(a)(11)(D))”.

(b) AMENDMENT TO ERISA.—Section 203(e) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1053(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(4) A plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of this subsection if, under the terms of the plan, the present value of the nonforfeitable accrued benefit is determined without regard to that portion of such benefit which is attributable to rollover contributions (and earnings allocable thereto). For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘rollover contributions’ means any rollover contribution under sections 402(c), 403(a)(4), 403(b)(8), 408(d)(3)(A)(ii), and 457(e)(16) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.”

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to distributions after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 9. PURCHASE OF SERVICE CREDIT IN GOVERNMENTAL DEFINED BENEFIT PLANS.

(a) 403(b) PLANS.—Subsection (b) of section 403 is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(13) TRUSTEE-TO-TRUSTEE TRANSFERS TO PURCHASE PERMISSIVE SERVICE CREDIT.—No amount shall be includible in gross income by reason of a direct trustee-to-trustee transfer to a defined benefit governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d)) if such transfer is—

“(A) for the purchase of permissive service credit (as defined in section 415(n)(3)(A)) under such plan, or

“(B) a repayment to which section 415 does not apply by reason of subsection (k)(3) thereof.”

(b) 457 PLANS.—

(1) Subsection (e) of section 457 is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(17) TRUSTEE-TO-TRUSTEE TRANSFERS TO PURCHASE PERMISSIVE SERVICE CREDIT.—No amount shall be includible in gross income by reason of a direct trustee-to-trustee transfer to a defined benefit governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d)) if such transfer is—

“(A) for the purchase of permissive service credit (as defined in section 415(n)(3)(A)) under such plan, or

“(B) a repayment to which section 415 does not apply by reason of subsection (k)(3) thereof.”

(2) Section 457(b)(2), as amended by section 2, is amended by striking “(other than rollover amounts)” and inserting “(other than rollover amounts and amounts received in a transfer referred to in subsection (e)(17))”.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to trustee-to-trustee transfers after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 10. PROVISIONS RELATING TO PLAN AMENDMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—If this section applies to any plan or contract amendment—

(1) such plan or contract shall be treated as being operated in accordance with the terms of the plan during the period described in subsection (b)(2)(A), and

(2) such plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of section 411(d)(6) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 or section 204(g) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 by reason of such amendment.

(b) AMENDMENTS TO WHICH SECTION APPLIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—This section shall apply to any amendment to any plan or annuity contract which is made—

(A) pursuant to any amendment made by this Act or pursuant to any guidance issued by the Secretary of the Treasury (or the Secretary’s delegate) under any such amendment, and

(B) on or before the last day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 2002.

In the case of a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), this paragraph shall be applied by substituting “2004” for “2002”.

(2) CONDITIONS.—This section shall not apply to any amendment unless—

(A) during the period—

(i) beginning on the date the legislative amendment or guidance described in paragraph (1)(A) takes effect (or in the case of a plan or contract amendment not required by such legislative amendment or guidance, the effective date specified by the plan), and

(ii) ending on the date described in paragraph (1)(B) (or, if earlier, the date the plan or contract amendment is adopted), the plan or contract is operated as if such plan or contract amendment were in effect, and

(B) such plan or contract amendment applies retroactively for such period.

By Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself,
Mr. REED, Mr. ENZI, and Mr.
LEAHY):

S. 1358. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide more equitable payments to home health agencies under the Medicare Program; to the Committee on Finance.

THE PRESERVING ACCESS TO CARE IN THE HOME
ACT OF 1999

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Preserving Access to Care in the Home Act of 1999, also known as the PATCH Act. This important bill has been crafted to protect access to care for those most in need, relieve the cash flow problems faced by agencies, and improve the interaction between home health agencies and HCFA. I want to recognize Senator REED, Senator ENZI, and Senator LEAHY. These cosponsors have shown tremendous effort and dedication in dealing with the crisis in home health care.

Abraham Lincoln said “The legitimate object of government is to do for a community of people, whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all, or cannot so well do for themselves, in their separate and individual capacities.” This is the essence of home health care.

Home health care means so much to so many people: it means that people recovering from surgery can go home sooner—it means that someone recovering from an accident can get physical therapy in their home, it means our seniors can stay at home, and out of nursing homes. It is smart policy from human and financial standpoints.

My own State of Vermont is a model for providing high-quality, comprehensive care with a low price tag. For the past eight years, the average Medicare expenditure for home health care in Vermont has been the lowest in the nation. Vermont’s home care system was designed to efficiently meet the needs of frail and elderly citizens in our largely rural State, but the Health Care Financing Administration’s (HCFA) reimbursement system was not. HCFA’s interim payment system (IPS) has been implemented in a manner that inadequately reimburses agencies for the care that they provide.

The Balanced Budget Act (BBA) did a lot of good, providing health care coverage for millions of low income children, providing targeted tax relief for families and students, tax incentives to encourage pensions savings, and extending the life of Medicare. However, as with most things in life, it was not perfect.

The BBA failed to recognize how the new home health reimbursement would affect small rural home health care providers. The IPS has caused such significant cash flow problems, that many agencies are struggling to meet their payroll needs. Home health care agencies are now facing the prospect of 15 percent budget cut next year. This budget cut, on top of already stretched budgets, would be disastrous for providers and patients alike.

The PATCH Act will rectify these problems.

First, the PATCH Act eliminates the 15-percent cut scheduled for next year. The actual savings under IPS have exceeded initial expectations, so the 15-percent cut is unnecessary to achieve the savings originally projected as needed.

Second, the PATCH Act clarifies the definition of "homebound" so that coverage decisions are based on the condition of the individual and not on an arbitrary number of absences from the home. Many seniors have found themselves virtual prisoners in their homes, threatened with loss of coverage if they attend adult day care, weekly religious services, or even visit family members in the hospital. This makes no sense because all of these activities are steps on the road to successful and healthy recovery. Often, home care professionals want patients to get outside a little bit, as part of their care plan. This helps fight off depression. Eligibility for home care should depend on the health of the patient.

Third, the PATCH Act creates an "outlier" provision so that medically complex patients suffering from multiple ailments are not excluded by the Medicare program. Agencies will receive reimbursements for reasonable costs so that they can continue to provide care for these complex patients without going bankrupt. Home health agencies can provide care to long-term chronic care patients at a lower cost than nursing homes, or hospitals.

Next, the PATCH Act also matches the rate of review to the rate of denial and provides a reward to agencies for "good behavior" and incentive to submit "good claims." Conducting high cost, intense audits on all agencies, regardless of the past efficiency of the agency, is expensive and unproductive. Many agencies are finding themselves swamped by pre-payment reviews for claims that they submit. These reviews require that health professionals spend a substantial amount of their time filling out forms instead of providing urgently needed care to the elderly. Matching the rate of review to the rate of denial adds to the efficiency of home health agencies, and the efficiency of the regulatory. If the finalized denial rate of claims for a home health agency is less than 5 percent then (a) there will be no prepayment reviews, and (b) the post-payment review shall not exceed 10 percent of the claims.

Finally, the bill restores the periodic interim payment system (PIP) and provides guidelines to HCFA on the development of a prospective payment system (PPS) that will be fair to Vermont's low-cost, rural providers.

The sooner you can return patients to their homes, the sooner they can recover. The familiar environment of the home, family, and friends is more nurturing to recovering patients than the often stressful and unfamiliar surroundings of a hospital. Home health allows them to receive treatment for their medical conditions while being integrated back into independence.

Home health is also a great avenue for education. It empowers families to assist in the care of their loved ones. This, too, results in lower costs because family members, in addition to health professionals, provide some of the care. Access to care in the home must be saved.

I look forward to turning this legislation into law. The women and men who provide home care are on the front line every day and deserve nothing but our best efforts.

By Mr. HOLLINGS:

S. 1359. A bill to amend chapter 51 of title 49, United States Code, to extend the coverage of the rules governing the transportation of hazardous materials, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

POSTAL HAZARDOUS MATERIALS SAFETY
ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 1999

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a bill to insure the safe transportation of hazardous materials (hazmat) via the United States Postal Service and its contract carriers.

The Hazardous Materials Transportation Safety Improvement Act of 1990, P.L. 103-311, specifically exempted the U.S. Postal Service from Department of Transportation (DOT) hazmat enforcement. Although they are exempt from DOT hazmat enforcement, the U.S. Postal Service self-governs hazardous materials transportation through internal regulations and inspections.

The National Transportation Safety Board has made numerous recommendations over the years to subject the U.S. Postal Service to DOT inspections and increased enforcement efforts. In addition, they have also recommended that the Postal Service be subject to enforcement obligations similar to those observed by other package and express mail operations. Due to the fact that only a small percentage of mail is transported exclusively by the U.S. Postal Service and most of it is contracted out to other carriers, it makes sense that all mail and package transporters be subject to the same DOT regulations and inspections.

We all remember the horrifying crash of ValuJet Airlines, flight 592, into the Everglades in May of 1996. Although the cause of the ValuJet accident was not attributed to the U.S. Postal Service, the situation in which it occurred demonstrated the importance of accurate labeling in the transportation of hazardous materials. Following the ValuJet accident, the NTSB made multiple recommendations to the U.S. Postal Service about increased safety in the transport of hazmat. However, in the year following the ValuJet incident there were thirteen additional hazardous materials incidents that occurred when U.S. mail was transported via air. There should be a better safety net for the public and the employees who are charged with the safe transport of the packages, mail and express items.

Similarly, the frightening success of the Unabomber throughout the 1980's and 1990's underscores the need for tougher controls over hazardous materials sent via the U.S. Postal Service. Ted Kaczynski repeatedly sent explosive devices in packages through the mail system resulting in three deaths and 29 injuries. These packages, which weighed on average between five and ten pounds, were never inspected for hazardous contents. Largely in response to the Unabomber, the U.S. Postal Service implemented new requirements addressing package mail, however if a hazmat package is not identified at the source, it is important that the Department of Transportation hazmat inspectors have the authority to inspect packages carried by surface and air carriers.

These accidents clearly demonstrate that the shipment of undeclared hazardous materials is a serious problem that needs more attention. While the U.S. Postal Service has worked hard to train its employees to recognize hazmat shipments, much of the transportation of postal material is done via contract carriers who are not U.S. Postal Service employees. Efforts to address this issue have been hindered by the exclusion of DOT inspectors from regulating hazardous materials shipped via the U.S. Postal Service.

Mr. President, I believe that the U.S. Postal Service and the DOT hazmat inspectors are faced with an enormous task—keeping our mail and our transportation systems safe. My bill would provide for increased authority in hazmat inspections by authorizing DOT inspectors to work in tandem with U.S. Postal Inspectors. The safety of our transportation system is dependent on the safety of the cargo it is carrying—all hazmat packages should be adequately inspected and if found unsafe, they should be treated appropriately, expeditiously and equally.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1359

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Postal Hazardous Materials Safety Enhancement Act".

SEC. 2. APPLICATION OF HAZMAT REQUIREMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5102(9)(B) of title 49, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(B) for purposes of sections 5123 and 5124 of this title, does not include a department, agency, or instrumentality of the Government."

(b) COORDINATION.—In carrying out the provisions of chapter 51 of title 49, United States Code, the Secretary of Transportation shall consult with the Postmaster General in order to coordinate, to the greatest extent feasible, the enforcement of that chapter.

SEC. 3 TRANSPORTATION OF HAZARDOUS MATERIALS VIA THE UNITED STATES MAIL.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 5102 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by—

(1) redesignating paragraph (13) as paragraph (14); and

(2) inserting after paragraph (12) the following:

“(13) ‘transportation of hazardous material in commerce’ and ‘transporting hazardous material in commerce’ include the transportation of hazardous material in the United States mail.”

(b) REPEAL OF EXCEPTION.—Section 5126(b) of such title is amended to read as follows:

“(b) NONAPPLICATION.—This chapter does not apply to a pipeline subject to regulation under chapter 601 of this title.”

By Mr. LEAHY:

S. 1360. A bill to preserve the effectiveness of Secret Service protection by establishing a protective function privilege, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SECRET SERVICE PROTECTION PRIVILEGE ACT OF 1999

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Secret Service Protective Privilege Act of 1999. This legislation is intended to ensure the ability of the United States Secret Service to fulfill its vital mission of protecting the life and safety of the President and other important persons.

Almost five months have passed since the impeachment proceedings against President Clinton were concluded, and the time has come for Congress to repair some of the damage that was done during that divisive episode. I refer to the misguided efforts of Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr to compel Secret Service agents to answer questions about what may have observed or overheard while protecting the life of the President.

Few national interests are more compelling than protecting the life of the President of the United States. The Supreme Court has said that the nation has “an overwhelming interest in protecting the safety of its Chief Executive and in allowing him to perform his duties without interference from threats of physical violence.” [Watts v. United States, 394 U.S. 705, 707 (1969).] What’s at stake is not merely the safety of one person. What’s at stake is the ability of the Executive Branch to function in an effective and orderly fashion, and the capacity of the United States to respond to threats and crises. Think of the shock waves that rocked the world in November 1963 when President Kennedy was assassinated. The assassination of a President has international repercussions and threatens the security and future of the entire nation.

The threat to our national security and to our democracy extends beyond the life of the President to those in direct line of the Office of the President—the Vice President, the President-elect, and the Vice President elect. By Act of Congress, these officials are required to accept the protection of the Secret Service—they may not turn it down. This statutory mandate reflects the critical importance that Congress has attached to the physical safety of these officials.

Congress has also charged the Secret Service with responsibility for protecting visiting heads of foreign states and foreign governments. The assassination of a foreign head of state on American soil could be catastrophic from a foreign relations standpoint and could seriously threaten national security.

The Secret Service Protective Privilege Act of 1999 would enhance the Secret Service’s ability to protect these officials, and the nation, from the risk of assassination. It would do this by facilitating the relationship of trust between these officials and their Secret Service protectors that is essential to the Service’s protective strategy.

The Service uses a “protective envelope” method of protection. Agents and officers surround the protectee with an all-encompassing zone of protection on a 24-hour-a-day basis. In the face of danger, they will shield the protectee’s body with their own bodies and move him to a secure location.

That is how the Secret Service averted a national tragedy on March 30, 1981, when John Hinckley attempted to assassinate President Reagan. Within seconds of the first shot being fired, Secret Service personnel had shielded the President’s body and maneuvered him into the waiting limousine. One agent in particular, Agent Tim McCarthy, positioned his body to intercept a bullet intended for the President. If Agent McCarthy had been even a few feet farther from the President, history might have gone very differently.

For the Secret Service to maintain this sort of close, unremitting proximity to the President and other protectees, it must have their complete, unhesitating trust and confidence. Secret Service personnel must be able to remain at the President’s side even during confidential and sensitive conversations, when they may overhear military secrets, diplomatic exchanges, and family and private matters. If our Presidents do not have complete trust in the Secret Service personnel who protect them, they could try to push away the Service’s “protective envelope” or undermine it to the point where it could no longer be fully effective.

This is more than a theoretical possibility. Consider what former President Bush wrote last April, after hearing of the independent counsel’s efforts to compel Secret Service testimony:

The bottom line is I hope that [Secret Service] agents will be exempted from testifying before the Grand Jury. What’s at stake here is the protection of the life of the President and his family and the confidence and trust that a President must have in the [Secret Service].

If a President feels that Secret Service agents can be called to testify about what they might have seen or heard then it is likely that the President will be uncomfortable having the agents near by.

I allowed the agents to have proximity first because they had my full confidence and secondly because I knew them to be totally discreet and honorable. . . .

. . . I can assure you that had I felt they would be compelled to testify as to what they had seen or heard, no matter what the subject, I would not have felt comfortable having them close in

. . . I feel very strongly that the [Secret Service] agents should not be made to appear in court to discuss that which they might or might not have seen or heard.

What’s at stake here is the confidence of the President in the discretion of the [Secret Service]. If that confidence evaporates the agents, denied proximity, cannot properly protect the President.

As President Bush’s letter makes plain, requiring Secret Service agents to betray the confidence of the people whose lives they protect could seriously jeopardize the ability of the Service to perform its crucial national security function.

The possibility that Secret Service personnel might be compelled to testify about their protectees could have a particularly devastating affect on the Service’s ability to protect foreign dignitaries. The mere fact that this issue has surfaced is likely to make foreign governments less willing to accommodate Secret Service both with respect to the protection of the President and Vice President on foreign trips, and the protection of foreign heads of state traveling in the United States.

The recent court decisions, which refused to recognize a protective function privilege, could have a devastating impact upon the Secret Service’s ability to provide effective protection. The courts ignored the voices of experience—former Presidents, Secret Service Directors, and others—who warned of the potentially deadly consequences. The courts disregarded the lessons of history. We cannot afford to be so cavalier; the stakes are just too high.

The security of our chief executive officers and visiting foreign heads of state is a matter that transcends all partisan politics. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and ask unanimous consent that the bill and a summary of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1360

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Secret Service Protective Privilege Act of 1999”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The physical safety of the Nation’s top elected officials is a public good of transcendent importance.

(2) By virtue of the critical importance of the Office of the President, the President and those in direct line of the Presidency are subject to unique and mortal jeopardy—jeopardy that in turn threatens profound disruption to our system of representative government and to the security and future of the Nation.

(3) The physical safety of visiting heads of foreign states and foreign governments is also a matter of paramount importance. The assassination of such a person while on American soil could have calamitous consequences for our foreign relations and national security.

(4) Given these grave concerns, Congress has provided for the Secret Service to protect the President and those in direct line of the Presidency, and has directed that these officials may not waive such protection. Congress has also provided for the Secret Service to protect visiting heads of foreign states and foreign governments.

(5) The protective strategy of the Secret Service depends critically on the ability of its personnel to maintain close and unremitting physical proximity to the protectee.

(6) Secret Service personnel must remain at the side of the protectee on occasions of confidential conversations and, as a result, may overhear top secret discussions, diplomatic exchanges, sensitive conversations, and matters of personal privacy.

(7) The necessary level of proximity can be maintained only in an atmosphere of complete trust and confidence between the protectee and his or her protectors.

(8) If a protectee has reason to doubt the confidentiality of actions or conversations taken in sight or hearing of Secret Service personnel, the protectee may seek to push the protective envelope away or undermine it to the point at which it could no longer be fully effective.

(9) The possibility that Secret Service personnel might be compelled to testify against their protectees could induce foreign nations to refuse Secret Service protection in future state visits, making it impossible for the Secret Service to fulfill its important statutory mission of protecting the life and safety of foreign dignitaries.

(10) A privilege protecting information acquired by Secret Service personnel while performing their protective function in physical proximity to a protectee will preserve the security of the protectee by lessening the incentive of the protectee to distance Secret Service personnel in situations in which there is some risk to the safety of the protectee.

(11) Recognition of a protective function privilege for the President and those in direct line of the Presidency, and for visiting heads of foreign states and foreign governments, will promote sufficiently important interests to outweigh the need for probative evidence.

(12) Because Secret Service personnel retain law enforcement responsibility even while engaged in their protective function, the privilege must be subject to a crime/treason exception.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to facilitate the relationship of trust and confidence between Secret Service personnel and certain protected officials that is essential to the ability of the Secret Service to protect these officials, and the Nation, from the risk of assassination; and

(2) to ensure that Secret Service personnel are not precluded from testifying in a criminal investigation or prosecution about unlawful activity committed within their view or hearing.

SEC. 3. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROTECTIVE FUNCTION PRIVILEGE.

(a) ADMISSIBILITY OF INFORMATION ACQUIRED BY SECRET SERVICE PERSONNEL WHILE PERFORMING THEIR PROTECTIVE FUNCTION.—Chapter 203 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 3056 the following:

“§3056A. Testimony by Secret Service personnel; protective function privilege

“(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) PROTECTEE.—The term ‘protectee’ means—

“(A) the President;

“(B) the Vice President (or other officer next in the order of succession to the Office of President);

“(C) the President-elect;

“(D) the Vice President-elect; and “(E) visiting heads of foreign states or foreign governments who, at the time and place concerned, are being provided protection by the United States Secret Service.

“(2) SECRET SERVICE PERSONNEL.—The term ‘Secret Service personnel’ means any officer or agent of the United States Secret Service.

“(b) GENERAL RULE OF PRIVILEGE.—Subject to subsection (c), testimony by Secret Service personnel or former Secret Service personnel regarding information affecting a protectee that was acquired during the performance of a protective function in physical proximity to the protectee shall not be received in evidence or otherwise disclosed in any trial, hearing, or other proceeding in or before any court, grand jury, department, officer, agency, regulatory body, or other authority of the United States, a State, or a political subdivision thereof.

“(c) EXCEPTIONS.—There is no privilege under this section—

“(1) with respect to information that, at the time the information was acquired by Secret Service personnel, was sufficient to provide reasonable grounds to believe that a crime had been, was being, or would be committed; or

“(2) if the privilege is waived by the protectee or the legal representative of a protectee or deceased protectee.

“(d) CONCURRENT PRIVILEGES.—The proximity of Secret Service personnel to a protectee engaged in a privileged communication with another shall not, by itself, defeat an otherwise valid claim of privilege.”.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 203 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3056 the following:

“3056A. Testimony by Secret Service personnel; protective function privilege.”.

SEC. 4. APPLICATION.

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall apply to any proceeding commenced on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

SUMMARY OF THE SECRET SERVICE PROTECTIVE PRIVILEGE ACT OF 1999

The proposed legislation would add a new section 2056A to title 18, United States Code, establishing a protective function privilege. There are four subsections.

Subsection (a) establishes the definitions used in the section.

Subsection (b) states the general rule that testimony by Secret Service personnel or former Secret Service personnel regarding information affecting a protectee that was acquired during the performance of a protective function in physical proximity to the protectee shall not be received in evidence or otherwise disclosed. The privilege operates only with respect to the President, the Vice President (or other officer next in the order of succession to the Office of President), the President-elect, the Vice President-elect, and visiting heads of foreign states or foreign governments.

Subsection (c) creates a crime-fraud exception to the privilege, which applies with respect to information that, at the time it was acquired by Secret Service personnel, was sufficient to provide reasonable grounds to believe that a crime had been, was being, or would be committed. This subsection also provides that the privilege may be waived by a protectee or by his or her legal representative.

Subsection (d) provides that the proximity of Secret Service personnel to a protectee shall not, by itself, defeat an otherwise valid claim of privilege. This addresses the situation in which Secret Service personnel overhear confidential communications between the protectee and, say, the protectee's spouse or attorney.

By Mr. STEVENS (for himself, Mr. INOUE, Mr. LOTT, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. AKAKA, and Mr. GRAHAM):

S. 1361. A bill to amend the Earthquake Hazards Reduction Act of 1977 to provide for an expanded Federal program of hazard mitigation, relief, and insurance against the risk of catastrophic natural disasters, such as hurricanes, earthquakes, and volcanic eruptions, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

NATURAL DISASTER PROTECTION AND INSURANCE ACT OF 1999

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, today I am introducing the Natural Disaster Protection and Insurance Act of 1999. This bill will provide the Nation with a way of dealing with major national disasters. As many of my colleagues are aware I have maintained an interest in this area for some time. Over the last decade we have witnessed natural disasters and the devastating effect that they can have on our property, economy and quality of life.

Damages from Hurricane Andrew resulted in the insolvency of insurance companies and a lack of confidence within the industry to deal with similar catastrophes in the future. Major hurricane risk is increasing. Some scientists predict that the next decade will bring more favorable conditions for a major hurricane hitting the U.S. than existed in the period leading up to the Hurricane Andrew.

Over half of the population of the United States resides within the coastal zone (approximately 300 km centered at the coastline). Infrastructure and population along our coast is growing rapidly and so our vulnerability to hurricanes is increasing dramatically.

My Home State of Alaska has had at least nine major earthquakes of 7.4 magnitude or more on the Richter scale. Alaska's 1964 Good Friday Earthquake was one of the world's most powerful, registering, a magnitude of 9.2 on the Richter scale.

The Alaska quake of 1964 destroyed the economic basis of entire communities. Whole fishing fleets, harbors, and canneries were lost. The shaking caused tidal waves. Petroleum storage tanks ruptured and the contents caught fire. Burning oil ran into the bay and was carried to the waterfront by large waves. These waves of fire destroyed docks, piers, and small-boat harbors. Total property damage was $311 million in 1964 dollars. Experts predict that a quake this size in the lower 48 would kill thousands and cost up to $200 billion.

According to Michael J. Armstrong, associate director, mitigation directorate of the Federal Emergency Management Agency:

Earthquakes represent the largest single potential for casualties and damage from a natural hazard facing this country. They represent a national threat, as all but seven States in the U.S. are at some level of risk.

In our most recent earthquake disaster, Northridge, (CA), a moderate earthquake centered on the fringe of a major metropolitan area caused an estimated $40 billion in damage. A large magnitude earthquake located under one of several urban regions in the United States could cause thousands of casualties and losses approaching $200 billion.

Accordingly, reducing earthquake losses is a matter of national concern—recent findings show a significantly increased potential for damaging earthquake in southern California, and in northern California on the Hayward Fault. Studies also show higher potential earthquakes for the Pacific Northwest and Coastal South Carolina. This is in addition to areas of earthquake risk that have already been identified, such as the New Madrid Fault Zone in the Central U.S. and Wasatch Front in Utah.

Before 1989, the United States had never experienced a disaster costing more than $1 billion in insured losses. Since then, we have had nine disasters that have cost more than $1 billion.

Today, Senators INOUE, LOTT, BOB GRAHAM, FEINSTEIN, AKAKA, and I introduce this bill to reduce the cost to the Federal Government of earthquakes, hurricanes, and other natural disasters.

First, the bill will reduce Federal costs by expanding the use and availability of private insurance.

Second, the bill will provide incentives to improve State disaster strategic planning.

And, third, the bill will create a national, privately funded catastrophic insurance pool to shoulder the risk of very large disasters.

Mr. President, the more private insurance individuals buy, the less disaster relief Federal taxpayers must pay. For instance, if this bill had been in place before Hurricane Andrew and California's Northridge Earthquake, I am advised that it could have reduced Federal costs by at least $5 billion.

I ask my colleagues to join me and the cosponsors in supporting this bill. Because major natural catastrophes are increasingly common and costly for U.S. citizens, we must be willing to make a commitment now to prepare for these future events in advance.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise to join the distinguished chairman and Ranking Member of the Senate Appropriations Committee in introducing legislation that creates a federal complement to efforts of state governments, local communities, and the private sector to make future disasters cost less.

Mr. President, I am a life-long Floridian. When children grow up in Florida they learn, usually from first hand experience, to expect devastating storm activity in their communities. Hurricane Season is an annual event. Florida suffers from often violent summer storms, tornadoes, and wildfires. With all of this natural disaster activity in my state alone, you can imagine that the costs of paying for the damages incurred by these events is quite staggering. These costs require the immediate action of Congress.

In August of 1992, Hurricane Andrew roared ashore in the middle of the night and devastated much of South Florida. The total costs of cleanup and rebuilding from Hurricane Andrew was $36 billion. This includes nearly $16 billion in total insured losses, of which $12 billion were homeowner policies. After Andrew 10 private insurance companies in the State of Florida were rendered insolvent and had to leave the state. Nearly 960,000 insurance policies were canceled or not renewed.

There may be more Hurricane Andrew's in our future. The National Weather Service has predicted 1999 will be an extremely active hurricane season. They have estimated that up to 14 named storms will develop in the Atlantic Ocean, 10 of those are expected to become hurricanes.

The rising costs associated with events such as Hurricane Andrew have also demonstrated that insurers face the risk of insolvency if they are overly concentrated in vulnerable regions of our country. Since 1992, insurers have widely avoided writing policies in disaster prone areas of Florida. A congressional report on this subject revealed that the total supply of available reinsurance is approximately $7 billion. This is only 10 percent of the potential loss which might occur from a worst case natural disaster scenario.

Companies that provide insurance of last resort have entered disaster-vulnerable insurance markets and filled this vacuum. Generally, these products of last resort provide less coverage than a commercial property insurance policy, but at much greater price. In Florida, such a policy averages in excess of 500 percent as compared to a commercial policy.

State Insurance Commissions and state legislatures have literally created rainy day funds in an attempt to prevent an insurance availability crisis. This includes: Florida Catastrophe Reinsurance Fund, the California Earthquake Authority, and the Hawaii Hurricane Relief Fund. In my State of Florida, we have also created programs to provide insurance for those who cannot purchase insurance from any private source because of the risk included including the Florida Joint Underwriters Associations, and the expansion of the Florida Windstorm Underwriters Association.

Our recent experience tells us that it is time for Congress to help reverse the rising costs of natural disasters. The Natural Disaster Protection and Insurance Act of 1999 is a step in the right direction. This legislation directs the Secretary of the Treasury to carry out a program to make reinsurance available for purchase by eligible state programs, private insurers and reinsurers by way of auctions. It provides a backstop for state-operated insurance programs, and complements existing insurance industry efforts without encroaching upon the private sector.

This initiative appropriately allows state and industry leaders to assist in addressing local needs. Specifically, Contractual coverage would include residential property losses resulting from disasters.

The Treasury Department would be prohibited from offering any coverage that competes with or replaces private insurers.

A portion of the premiums would go to a mitigation fund to support state level emergency preparedness.

This initiative is a bipartisan and bicameral effort. My Florida colleague, Congressman BILL MCCOLLUM, has joined Representative LAZIO to lead this effort in the House of Representatives. We have been working closely with the Administration, affected state and local level organizations, and private realtors and insurers. We all agree that the insurance industry cannot endure the ravage of large scale natural disasters alone. Action at the federal level is needed to continue insuring individual homeowners and business in areas vulnerable to catastrophe.

Mr. President, we have an opportunity today to continue the working partnership between the federal government, states, local communities and the private sector. The consequences of insurance shortages and exposure to known hazards must be addressed immediately. I encourage my colleagues to support this initiative.

S. 1332

At the request of Mr. BAYH, the names of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. SMITH), and the Senator from Maine (Ms. COLLINS) were added as cosponsors of S. 1332, a bill to authorize the President to award a gold medal on behalf of Congress to Father Theodore M. Hesburg, in recognition of his outstanding and enduring contributions to civil rights, higher education, the Catholic Church, the Nation, and the global community.

SENATE RESOLUTION 99

At the request of Mr. REID, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) was added as a cosponsor of Senate Resolution 99, a resolution designating November 20, 1999, as "National Survivors for Prevention of Suicide Day."

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED

PATIENTS' BILL OF RIGHTS ACT

NICKLES (AND OTHERS)
AMENDMENT NO. 1236

Mr. NICKLES (for himself, Mr. GRAMM, and Ms. COLLINS) proposed an amendment to the bill (S. 1344) to amend the Public Health Service Act, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to protect consumers in managed care plans and other health coverage; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. __. EXEMPTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to a group health plan (or health insurance coverage offered in connection with the group health plan) if the provisions of this Act for a plan year during which this Act is fully implemented result in—

(1) a greater than 1 percent increase in the cost of the group health plan's premiums for the plan year, as determined under subsection (b); or

(2) a decrease, in the plan year, of 100,000 or more in the number of individuals in the United States with private health insurance, as determined under subsection (c).

(b) EXEMPTION FOR INCREASED COST.—For purposes of subsection (a)(1), if an actuary certified in accordance with generally recognized standards of actuarial practice by a member of the American Academy of Actuaries or by another individual whom the Secretary has determined to have an equivalent level of training and expertise certifies that the application of this Act to a group health plan (or health insurance coverage offered in connection with the group health plan) will result in the increase described in subsection (a)(1) for a plan year during which this Act is fully implemented, the provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to the group health plan (or the coverage).

(c) EXEMPTION FOR DECREASED NUMBER OF INSURED PERSONS.—For purposes of subsection (a)(2), unless the Administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration certifies, on the basis of projections by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, that the provisions of this Act will not result in the decrease described in subsection (a)(2) for a plan year during which this Act is fully implemented, the provisions of this Act shall not apply with respect to a group health plan (or health insurance coverage offered in connection with a group health plan).

ROBB (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT
NO. 1237

Mr. KENNEDY (for Mr. ROBB (for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, Mrs. BOXER, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. REID, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. BYRD, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BRYAN, and Mr. HARKIN)) proposed an amendment to amendment No. 1236 proposed by Mr. NICKLES to the bill, S. 1344, supra; as follows:

In the amendment, strike all after the first word and insert the following:

STANDARDS RELATING TO BENEFITS FOR CERTAIN BREAST CANCER TREATMENT AND ACCESS TO APPROPRIATE OBSTETRICAL AND GYNECOLOGICAL CARE

(a) BREAST CANCER TREATMENT.—

(1) INPATIENT CARE.—A group health plan, or a health insurance issuer in connection with group health insurance coverage, that provides medical and surgical benefits shall ensure that inpatient coverage with respect to the treatment of breast cancer is provided for a period of time as is determined by the attending physician, in his or her professional judgment consistent with generally accepted medical standards, and the patient, to be medically appropriate following—

(A) a mastectomy;

(B) a lumpectomy; or

(C) a lymph node dissection for the treatment of breast cancer.

(2) PROHIBITIONS.—A group health plan, or a health insurance issuer in connection with group health insurance coverage, may not—

(A) deny to a patient eligibility, or continued eligibility, to enroll or to renew coverage under the terms of the plan or coverage, solely for the purpose of avoiding the requirements of this subsection;

(B) provide monetary payments or rebates to patients to encourage such patients to accept less than the minimum protections available under this subsection;

(C) penalize or otherwise reduce or limit the reimbursement of an attending provider because such provider provided care to an individual participant, beneficiary or enrollee in accordance with this subsection;

(D) provide incentives (monetary or otherwise) to an attending provider to induce such provider to provide care to an individual participant, beneficiary or enrollee in a manner inconsistent with this subsection; or

(E) subject to paragraph (3)(B), restrict benefits for any portion of a period within a hospital length of stay required under paragraph (1) in a manner which is less favorable than the benefits provided for any preceding portion of such stay.

(3) RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.—

(A) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to require a patient who is a participant, beneficiary or enrollee—

(i) to undergo a mastectomy, lumpectomy or lymph node dissection in a hospital; or

(ii) to stay in the hospital for a fixed period of time following a mastectomy, lumpectomy or lymph node dissection.

(B) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as preventing a group health plan or a health insurance issuer from imposing deductibles, coinsurance, or other cost-sharing in relation to benefits for hospital lengths of stay in connection with a mastectomy, lumpectomy or lymph node dissection for the treatment of breast cancer under the plan except that such coinsurance or other cost-sharing for any portion of a period within a hospital length of stay required under paragraph (1) may not be greater than such coinsurance or cost-sharing for any preceding portion of such stay.

(4) LEVEL AND TYPE OF REIMBURSEMENTS.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prevent a group health plan or a health insurance issuer from negotiating the level and type of reimbursement with a provider for care provided in accordance with this subsection.

(5) DEFINITION.—In this subsection, the term “mastectomy” means the surgical removal of all or part of a breast.

(b) OBSTETRICAL AND GYNECOLOGICAL CARE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If a group health plan, or a health insurance issuer in connection with the provision of group health insurance coverage, requires or provides for a participant, beneficiary, or enrollee to designate a participating primary care provider—

(A) the plan or issuer shall permit such an individual who is a female to designate a participating physician who specializes in obstetrics and gynecology as the individual's primary care provider; and

(B) if such an individual has not designated such a provider as a primary care provider, the plan or issuer—

(i) shall not require authorization or a referral by the individual's primary care provider or otherwise for coverage of covered gynecological care and pregnancy-related services provided by a participating health care professional who specializes in obstetrics and gynecology to the extent such care is otherwise covered, and

(ii) shall treat the ordering of other obstetrical and gynecological care by such a participating health professional as the authorization of the primary care provider with respect to such care under the plan or coverage.

(2) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in paragraph (1)(B)(ii) shall waive any requirements of coverage relating to medical necessity or appropriateness with respect to coverage of obstetrical and gynecological care so ordered.

(c) SPECIAL RULE.—Nothing in subsection (b) shall be construed as preventing a plan or issuer from offering (but not requiring a participant or beneficiary to accept) a health care professional trained, credentialed, and operating within the scope of their licensure to perform gynecological and obstetric care.

(d) APPLICATION OF SECTION.—This section shall supersede the provisions of sections 104(a) and 152.

(e) REVIEW.—Failure to meet the requirements of this section shall constitute a appealable decision under section 132(a)(2).

(f) PLAN SATISFACTION OF CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS.—Pursuant to rules of the Secretary, if a health insurance issuer offers health insurance coverage in connection with a group health plan and takes an action in violation of any provision of this subchapter, the group health plan shall not be liable for such violation unless the plan caused such violation.

(g) NONAPPLICATION OF CERTAIN PROVISION.—Only for purposes of applying the requirements of this section under section 714 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as added by section 301 of this Act), sections 2707 and 2753 of the Public Health Service Act (as added by sections 201 and 202 of this Act), and section 9813 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by section 401 of this Act)—

(1) section 2721(b)(2) of the Public Health Service Act and section 9831(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall not apply to the provisions of this section; and

(2) with respect to limited scope dental benefits, subparagraph (A) of section 733(c)(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, subparagraph (A) of section 2791(c)(2) of the Public Health Service Act, and subparagraph (A) of section 9832(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall not apply to the provisions of this section.

(h) NO IMPACT ON SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or amend the Social Security Act (or any regulation promulgated under that Act).

(2) TRANSFERS.—

(A) ESTIMATE OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall annually estimate the impact that the enactment of this section has on the income and balances of the trust funds established under section 201 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401).

(B) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—If, under subparagraph (A), the Secretary of the Treasury estimates that the enactment of this section has a negative impact on the income and balances of the trust funds established under section 201 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401), the Secretary shall transfer, not less frequently than quarterly, from the general revenues of the Federal Government an amount sufficient so as to ensure that the income and balances of such trust funds are not reduced as a result of the enactment of such section.

(i) LIMITATION ON ACTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided for in paragraph (2), no action may be brought under subsection (a)(1)(B), (a)(2), or (a)(3) of section 502 by a participant or beneficiary seeking relief based on the application of any provision in this section.

(2) PERMISSIBLE ACTIONS.—An action may be brought under subsection (a)(1)(B), (a)(2), or (a)(3) of section 502 by a participant or beneficiary seeking relief based on the application of this section to the individual circumstances of that participant or beneficiary; except that—

(A) such an action may not be brought or maintained as a class action; and

(B) in such an action relief may only provide for the provision of (or payment for) benefits, items, or services denied to the individual participant or beneficiary involved (and for attorney's fees and the costs of the action, at the discretion of the court) and shall not provide for any other relief to the participant or beneficiary or for any relief to any other person.

(3) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as affecting any action brought by the Secretary.

(j) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this section shall apply to group health plans for plan years beginning after, and to health insurance issuers for coverage offered or sold after, October 1, 2000.”

(k) INFORMATION REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) INFORMATION FROM GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—Section 1862(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(7) INFORMATION FROM GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—

“(A) PROVISION OF INFORMATION BY GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—The administrator of a group health plan subject to the requirements of paragraph (1) shall provide to the Secretary such of the information elements described in subparagraph (C) as the Secretary specifies, and in such manner and at such times as the Secretary may specify (but not more frequently than 4 times per year), with respect to each individual covered under the plan who is entitled to any benefits under this title.

“(B) PROVISION OF INFORMATION BY EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEE ORGANIZATIONS.—An employer (or employee organization) that maintains or participates in a group health plan subject to the requirements of paragraph (1) shall provide to the administrator of the plan such of the information elements required to be provided under subparagraph (A), and in such manner and at such times as the Secretary may specify, at a frequency consistent with that required under subparagraph (A) with respect to each individual described in subparagraph (A) who is covered under the plan by reason of employment with that employer or membership in the organization.

“(C) INFORMATION ELEMENTS.—The information elements described in this subparagraph are the following:

“(i) ELEMENTS CONCERNING THE INDIVIDUAL.—

“(I) The individual's name.

“(II) The individual's date of birth.

“(III) The individual's sex.

“(IV) The individual's social security insurance number.

“(V) The number assigned by the Secretary to the individual for claims under this title.

“(VI) The family relationship of the individual to the person who has or had current or employment status with the employer.

“(ii) ELEMENTS CONCERNING THE FAMILY MEMBER WITH CURRENT OR FORMER EMPLOYMENT STATUS.—

“(I) The name of the person in the individual's family who has current or former employment status with the employer.

“(II) That person's social security insurance number.

“(III) The number or other identifier assigned by the plan to that person.

“(IV) The periods of coverage for that person under the plan.

“(V) The employment status of that person (current or former) during those periods of coverage.

“(VI) The classes (of that person's family members) covered under the plan.

“(iii) PLAN ELEMENTS.—

“(I) The items and services covered under the plan.

“(II) The name and address to which claims under the plan are to be sent.

“(iv) ELEMENTS CONCERNING THE EMPLOYER.—

“(I) The employer's name.

“(II) The employer's address.

“(III) The employer identification number of the employer.

“(D) USE OF IDENTIFIERS.—The administrator of a group health plan shall utilize a unique identifier for the plan in providing information under subparagraph (A) and in other transactions, as may be specified by the Secretary, related to the provisions of this subsection. The Secretary may provide to the administrator the unique identifier described in the preceding sentence.

“(E) PENALTY FOR NONCOMPLIANCE.—Any entity that knowingly and willfully fails to comply with a requirement imposed by the previous subparagraphs shall be subject to a civil money penalty not to exceed $1,000 for each incident of such failure. The provisions of section 1128A (other than subsections (a) and (b)) shall apply to a civil money penalty under the previous sentence in the same manner as those provisions apply to a penalty or proceeding under section 1128A(a).”

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(1) LIMITATIONS ON WELFARE BENEFIT FUNDS OF 10 OR MORE EMPLOYER PLANS.—

(1) BENEFITS TO WHICH EXCEPTION APPLIES.—Section 419A(f)(6)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exception for 10 or more employer plans) is amended to read as follows:

“(A) IN GENERAL.—This subpart shall not apply to a welfare benefit fund which is part of a 10 or more employer plan if the only benefits provided through the fund are 1 or more of the following:

“(i) Medical benefits.

“(ii) Disability benefits.

“(iii) Group term life insurance benefits which do not provide for any cash surrender value or other money that can be paid, assigned, borrowed, or pledged for collateral for a loan.

The preceding sentence shall not apply to any plan which maintains experience-rating arrangements with respect to individual employers.”

(2) LIMITATION ON USE OF AMOUNTS FOR OTHER PURPOSES.—Section 4976(b) of such Act (defining disqualified benefit) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(5) SPECIAL RULE FOR 10 OR MORE EMPLOYER PLANS EXEMPTED FROM PREFUNDING LIMITS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(C), if—

“(A) subpart D of part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 does not apply by reason of section 419A(f)(6) to contributions to provide 1 or more welfare benefits through a welfare benefit fund under a 10 or more employer plan, and

“(B) any portion of the welfare benefit fund attributable to such contributions is used for a purpose other than that for which the contributions were made, then such portion shall be treated as reverting to the benefit of the employers maintaining the fund.”

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to contributions paid or accrued after the date of the enactment of this Act, in taxable years ending after such date.

(d) DEDUCTION FOR HEALTH INSURANCE COSTS OF SELF-EMPLOYED INDIVIDUALS INCREASED.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 162(l)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to special rules for health insurance costs of self-employed individuals) is amended to read as follows:

“(1) ALLOWANCE OF DEDUCTION.—In the case of an individual who is an employee within the meaning of section 401(e)(1), there shall be allowed as a deduction under this section an amount equal to the amount paid during the taxable year for insurance which constitutes medical care for the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse, and dependents.”

(2) CERTIFICATION OF LIMITATIONS ON OTHER COVERAGE.—The first sentence of section

162(l)(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended to read as follows: “Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any taxpayer for any calendar month for which the taxpayer participates in any subsidized health plan maintained by any employer (other than an employer described in section 401(e)(4)) of the taxpayer or the spouse of the taxpayer.”

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1998.

(e) EXTENSION OF TAXES.—

(1) ENVIRONMENTAL TAX.—Section 59A(e) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended to read as follows:

“(e) APPLICATION OF TAX.—The tax imposed by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1986, and before January 1, 1996, and to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999, and before January 1, 2009.”

(2) EFFECTIVE DATES.—The amendment made by subsection (e)(1) shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

FRIST (AND JEFFORDS)

AMENDMENT NO. 1238

Mr. NICKLES (for Mr. FRIST (for himself and Mr. JEFFORDS)) proposed an amendment to amendment No. 1236 proposed by Mr. NICKLES to the bill, S. 1344, supra; as follows:

At the end add the following:
Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, subtitle D of title I and all that follows through section 151 is null, void, and shall have no effect.

Subtitle E—Protecting the Doctor-Patient Relationship

SEC. 141. PROHIBITION OF INTERFERENCE WITH CERTAIN MEDICAL COMMUNICATIONS.

(a) PROHIBITION.—

(1) GENERAL RULE.—The provisions of any contract or agreement, or the operation of any contract or agreement, between a group health plan or health insurance issuer in relation to health insurance coverage (including any partnership, association, or other organization that enters into or administers such a contract or agreement) and a health care provider (or group of health care providers) shall not prohibit or restrict the provider from engaging in medical communications with the provider's patient.

(2) NULLIFICATION.—Any contract provision or agreement that restricts or prohibits medical communications in violation of paragraph (1) shall be null and void.

(b) RULES OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed—

(1) to prohibit the enforcement, as part of a contract or agreement to which a health care provider is a party, of any mutually agreed upon terms and conditions, including terms and conditions requiring a health care provider to participate in, and cooperate with, all programs, policies, and procedures developed or operated by a group health plan or health insurance issuer to assure, review, or improve the quality and effective utilization of health care services (if such utilization is according to guidelines or protocols that are based on clinical or scientific evidence and the professional judgment of the provider) but only if the guidelines or protocols under such utilization do not prohibit or restrict medical communications between providers and their patients; or

(2) to permit a health care provider to misrepresent the scope of benefits covered under the group health plan or health insurance coverage or to otherwise require a group health plan health insurance issuer to reimburse providers for benefits not covered under the plan or coverage.

(c) MEDICAL COMMUNICATION DEFINED.—In this section:

(1) IN GENERAL.—The term “medical communication” means any communication made by a health care provider with a patient of the health care provider (or the guardian or legal representative of such patient) with respect to—

(A) the patient's health status, medical care, or treatment options;

(B) any utilization review requirements that may affect treatment options for the patient; or

(C) any financial incentives that may affect the treatment of the patient.

(2) MISREPRESENTATION.—The term “medical communication” does not include a communication by a health care provider with a patient of the health care provider (or the guardian or legal representative of such patient) if the communication involves a knowing or willful misrepresentation by such provider.

SEC. 142. PROHIBITION AGAINST TRANSFER OF INDEMNIFICATION OR IMPROPER INCENTIVE ARRANGEMENTS.

(a) PROHIBITION OF TRANSFER OF INDEMNIFICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—No contract or agreement between a group health plan or health insurance issuer (or any agent acting on behalf of such a plan or issuer) and a health care provider shall contain any provision purporting to transfer to the health care provider by indemnification or otherwise any liability relating to activities, actions, or omissions of the plan, issuer, or agent (as opposed to the provider).

(2) NULLIFICATION.—Any contract or agreement provision described in paragraph (1) shall be null and void.

(b) PROHIBITION OF IMPROPER PHYSICIAN INCENTIVE PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan and a health insurance issuer offering health insurance coverage may not operate any physician incentive plan (as defined in subparagraph (B) of section 1876(i)(8) of the Social Security Act) unless the requirements described in subparagraph (A) of such section are met with respect to such a plan.

(2) APPLICATION.—For purposes of carrying out paragraph (1), any reference in section 1876(i)(8) of the Social Security Act to the Secretary, an eligible organization, or an individual enrolled with the organization shall be treated as a reference to the applicable authority, a group health plan or health insurance issuer, respectively, and a participant, beneficiary, or enrollee with the plan or organization, respectively.

SEC. 143. ADDITIONAL RULES REGARDING PARTICIPATION OF HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS.

(a) PROCEDURES.—Insofar as a group health plan, or health insurance issuer that offers health insurance coverage, provides benefits through participating health care professionals, the plan or issuer shall establish reasonable procedures relating to the participation (under an agreement between a professional and the plan or issuer) of such professionals under the plan or coverage. Such procedures shall include—

(1) providing notice of the rules regarding participation;

(2) providing written notice of participation decisions that are adverse to professionals; and

(3) providing a process within the plan or issuer for appealing such adverse decisions, including the presentation of information and views of the professional regarding such decision.

(b) CONSULTATION IN MEDICAL POLICIES.—A group health plan, and health insurance issuer that offers health insurance coverage, shall consult with participating physicians

(if any) regarding the plan's or issuer's medical policy, quality, and medical management procedures.

SEC. 144. PROTECTION FOR PATIENT ADVOCACY.

(a) PROTECTION FOR USE OF UTILIZATION REVIEW AND GRIEVANCE PROCESS.—In accordance with section 510 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, a group health plan, and a health insurance issuer with respect to the provision of health insurance coverage, may not retaliate against a participant, beneficiary, enrollee, or health care provider based on the participant's, beneficiary's, enrollee's or provider's use of, or participation in, a utilization review process or a grievance process of the plan or issuer (including an internal or external review or appeal process) under this title.

(b) PROTECTION FOR QUALITY ADVOCACY BY HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan or health insurance issuer may not retaliate or discriminate against a protected health care professional because the professional in good faith—

(A) discloses information relating to the care, services, or conditions affecting one or more participants, beneficiaries, or enrollees of the plan or issuer to an appropriate public regulatory agency, an appropriate private accreditation body, or appropriate management personnel of the plan or issuer; or

(B) initiates, cooperates, or otherwise participates in an investigation or proceeding by such an agency with respect to such care, services, or conditions.

If an institutional health care provider is a participating provider with such a plan or issuer or otherwise receives payments for benefits provided by such a plan or issuer, the provisions of the previous sentence shall apply to the provider in relation to care, services, or conditions affecting one or more patients within an institutional health care provider in the same manner as they apply to the plan or issuer in relation to care, services, or conditions provided to one or more participants, beneficiaries, or enrollees; and for purposes of applying this sentence, any reference to a plan or issuer is deemed a reference to the institutional health care provider.

(2) GOOD FAITH ACTION.—For purposes of paragraph (1), a protected health care professional is considered to be acting in good faith with respect to disclosure of information or participation if, with respect to the information disclosed as part of the action—

(A) the disclosure is made on the basis of personal knowledge and is consistent with that degree of learning and skill ordinarily possessed by health care professionals with the same licensure or certification and the same experience;

(B) the professional reasonably believes the information to be true;

(C) the information evidences either a violation of a law, rule, or regulation, of an applicable accreditation standard, or of a generally recognized professional or clinical standard or that a patient is in imminent hazard of loss of life or serious injury; and

(D) subject to subparagraphs (B) and (C) of paragraph (3), the professional has followed reasonable internal procedures of the plan, issuer, or institutional health care provider established for the purpose of addressing quality concerns before making the disclosure.

(3) EXCEPTION AND SPECIAL RULE.—

(A) GENERAL EXCEPTION.—Paragraph (1) does not protect disclosures that would violate Federal or State law or diminish or impair the rights of any person to the continued protection of confidentiality of communications provided by such law.

(B) NOTICE OF INTERNAL PROCEDURES.—Subparagraph (D) of paragraph (2) shall not apply unless the internal procedures involved are reasonably expected to be known to the health care professional involved. For purposes of this subparagraph, a health care professional is reasonably expected to know of internal procedures if those procedures have been made available to the professional through distribution or posting.

(C) INTERNAL PROCEDURE EXCEPTION.—Subparagraph (D) of paragraph (2) also shall not apply if—

(i) the disclosure relates to an imminent hazard of loss of life or serious injury to a patient;

(ii) the disclosure is made to an appropriate private accreditation body pursuant to disclosure procedures established by the body; or

(iii) the disclosure is in response to an inquiry made in an investigation or proceeding of an appropriate public regulatory agency and the information disclosed is limited to the scope of the investigation or proceeding.

(4) ADDITIONAL CONSIDERATIONS.—It shall not be a violation of paragraph (1) to take an adverse action against a protected health care professional if the plan, issuer, or provider taking the adverse action involved demonstrates that it would have taken the same adverse action even in the absence of the activities protected under such paragraph.

(5) NOTICE.—A group health plan, health insurance issuer, and institutional health care provider shall post a notice, to be provided or approved by the Secretary of Labor, setting forth excerpts from, or summaries of, the pertinent provisions of this subsection and information pertaining to enforcement of such provisions.

(6) CONSTRUCTIONS.—

(A) DETERMINATIONS OF COVERAGE.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prohibit a plan or issuer from making a determination not to pay for a particular medical treatment or service or the services of a type of health care professional.

(B) ENFORCEMENT OF PEER REVIEW PROTOCOLS AND INTERNAL PROCEDURES.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prohibit a plan, issuer, or provider from establishing and enforcing reasonable peer review or utilization review protocols or determining whether a protected health care professional has complied with those protocols or from establishing and enforcing internal procedures for the purpose of addressing quality concerns.

(C) RELATION TO OTHER RIGHTS.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to abridge rights of participants, beneficiaries, enrollees, and protected health care professionals under other applicable Federal or State laws.

(7) PROTECTED HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONAL DEFINED.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "protected health care professional" means an individual who is a licensed or certified health care professional and who—

(A) with respect to a group health plan or health insurance issuer, is an employee of the plan or issuer or has a contract with the plan or issuer for provision of services for which benefits are available under the plan or issuer; or

(B) with respect to an institutional health care provider, is an employee of the provider or has a contract or other arrangement with the provider respecting the provision of health care services.

SEC. 145. AMENDMENT TO EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT OF 1974.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding section 301(b), section 503 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1133) is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 503. CLAIMS PROCEDURE, COVERAGE DETERMINATION, GRIEVANCES AND APPEALS.

"(a) CLAIMS PROCEDURE.—In accordance with regulations of the Secretary, every employee benefit plan shall—

"(1) provide adequate notice in writing to any participant or beneficiary whose claim for benefits under the plan has been denied, setting forth the specific reasons for such denial, written in a manner calculated to be understood by the participant; and

"(2) afford a reasonable opportunity to any participant whose claim for benefits has been denied for a full and fair review by the appropriate named fiduciary of the decision denying the claim.

"(b) COVERAGE DETERMINATIONS UNDER GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—

"(1) PROCEDURES.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan or health insurance issuer conducting utilization review shall ensure that procedures are in place for—

"(i) making determinations regarding whether a participant or beneficiary is eligible to receive a payment or coverage for health services under the plan or coverage involved and any cost-sharing amount that the participant or beneficiary is required to pay with respect to such service;

"(ii) notifying a covered participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of such participant or beneficiary) and the treating health care professionals involved regarding determinations made under the plan or issuer and any additional payments that the participant or beneficiary may be required to make with respect to such service; and

"(iii) responding to requests, either written or oral, for coverage determinations or for internal appeals from a participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of such participant or beneficiary) or the treating health care professional with the consent of the participant or beneficiary.

"(B) ORAL REQUESTS.—With respect to an oral request described in subparagraph (A)(iii), a group health plan or health insurance issuer may require that the requesting individual provide written evidence of such request.

"(2) TIMELINE FOR MAKING DETERMINATIONS.—

"(A) ROUTINE DETERMINATION.—A group health plan or a health insurance issuer shall maintain procedures to ensure that prior authorization determinations concerning the provision of non-emergency items or services are made within 30 days from the date on which the request for a determination is submitted, except that such period may be extended where certain circumstances exist that are determined by the Secretary to be beyond control of the plan or issuer.

"(B) EXPEDITED DETERMINATION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—A prior authorization determination under this subsection shall be made within 72 hours, in accordance with the medical exigencies of the case, after a request is received by the plan or issuer under clause (ii) or (iii).

"(ii) REQUEST BY PARTICIPANT OR BENEFICIARY.—A plan or issuer shall maintain procedures for expediting a prior authorization determination under this subsection upon the request of a participant or beneficiary if, based on such a request, the plan or issuer determines that the normal time for making such a determination could seriously jeopardize the life or health of the participant or beneficiary.

"(iii) DOCUMENTATION BY HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONAL.—A plan or issuer shall maintain procedures for expediting a prior authorization determination under this subsection if the request involved indicates that the treating health care professional has reasonably documented, based on the medical exigencies, that a determination under the procedures described in subparagraph (A) could seriously jeopardize the life or health of the participant or beneficiary.

“(C) CONCURRENT DETERMINATIONS.—A plan or issuer shall maintain procedures to certify or deny coverage of an extended stay or additional services.

“(D) RETROSPECTIVE DETERMINATION.—A plan or issuer shall maintain procedures to ensure that, with respect to the retrospective review of a determination made under paragraph (1), the determination shall be made within 30 working days of the date on which the plan or issuer receives necessary information.

“(3) NOTICE OF DETERMINATIONS.—

“(A) ROUTINE DETERMINATION.—With respect to a coverage determination of a plan or issuer under paragraph (2)(A), the plan or issuer shall issue notice of such determination to the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) and, consistent with the medical exigencies of the case, to the treating health care professional involved not later than 2 working days after the date on which the determination is made.

“(B) EXPEDITED DETERMINATION.—With respect to a coverage determination of a plan or issuer under paragraph (2)(B), the plan or issuer shall issue notice of such determination to the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary), and consistent with the medical exigencies of the case, to the treating health care professional involved within the 72 hour period described in paragraph (2)(B).

“(C) CONCURRENT REVIEWS.—With respect to the determination under a plan or issuer under paragraph (2)(C) to certify or deny coverage of an extended stay or additional services, the plan or issuer shall issue notice of such determination to the treating health care professional and to the participant or beneficiary involved (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) within 1 working day of the determination.

“(D) RETROSPECTIVE REVIEWS.—With respect to the retrospective review under a plan or issuer of a determination made under paragraph (2)(D), the plan or issuer shall issue written notice of an approval or disapproval of a determination under this subparagraph to the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) and health care provider involved within 5 working days of the date on which such determination is made.

“(E) REQUIREMENTS OF NOTICE OF ADVERSE COVERAGE DETERMINATIONS.—A written notice of an adverse coverage determination under this subsection, or of an expedited adverse coverage determination under paragraph (2)(B), shall be provided to the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) and treating health care professional (if any) involved and shall include—

“(i) the reasons for the determination (including the clinical or scientific-evidence based rationale used in making the determination) written in a manner to be understandable to the average participant or beneficiary;

“(ii) the procedures for obtaining additional information concerning the determination; and “(iii) notification of the right to appeal the determination and instructions on how to initiate an appeal in accordance with subsection (d).

“(c) GRIEVANCES.—A group health plan or a health insurance issuer shall have written procedures for addressing grievances between the plan or issuer offering health insurance coverage in connection with a group health plan and a participant or beneficiary. Determinations under such procedures shall be non-appealable.

“(d) INTERNAL APPEAL OF COVERAGE DETERMINATIONS.—

“(1) RIGHT TO APPEAL.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) or the treating health care professional with the consent of the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary), may appeal any adverse coverage determination under subsection (b) under the procedures described in this subsection.

“(B) TIME FOR APPEAL.—A plan or issuer shall ensure that a participant or beneficiary has a period of not less than 180 days beginning on the date of an adverse coverage determination under subsection (b) in which to appeal such determination under this subsection.

“(C) FAILURE TO ACT.—The failure of a plan or issuer to issue a determination under subsection (b) within the applicable timeline established for such a determination under such subsection shall be treated as an adverse coverage determination for purposes of proceeding to internal review under this subsection.

“(2) RECORDS.—A group health plan and a health insurance issuer shall maintain written records, for at least 6 years, with respect to any appeal under this subsection for purposes of internal quality assurance and improvement. Nothing in the preceding sentence shall be construed as preventing a plan and issuer from entering into an agreement under which the issuer agrees to assume responsibility for compliance with the requirements of this section and the plan is released from liability for such compliance.

“(3) ROUTINE DETERMINATIONS.—A group health plan or a health insurance issuer shall complete the consideration of an appeal of an adverse routine determination under this subsection not later than 30 working days after the date on which a request for such appeal is received.

“(4) EXPEDITED DETERMINATION.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—An expedited determination with respect to an appeal under this subsection shall be made in accordance with the medical exigencies of the case, but in no case more than 72 hours after the request for such appeal is received by the plan or issuer under subparagraph (B) or (C).

“(B) REQUEST BY PARTICIPANT OR BENEFICIARY.—A plan or issuer shall maintain procedures for expediting a prior authorization determination under this subsection upon the request of a participant or beneficiary if, based on such a request, the plan or issuer determines that the normal time for making such a determination could seriously jeopardize the life or health of the participant or beneficiary.

“(C) DOCUMENTATION BY HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONAL.—A plan or issuer shall maintain procedures for expediting a prior authorization determination under this subsection if the request involved indicates that the treating health care professional has reasonably documented, based on the medical exigencies of the case that a determination under the procedures described in paragraph (2) could seriously jeopardize the life or health of the participant or beneficiary.

“(5) CONDUCT OF REVIEW.—A review of an adverse coverage determination under this subsection shall be conducted by an individual with appropriate expertise who was not directly involved in the initial determination.

“(6) LACK OF MEDICAL NECESSITY.—A review of an appeal under this subsection relating to a determination to deny coverage based on a lack of medical necessity and appropriateness, or based on an experimental or investigational treatment, shall be made only by a physician with appropriate expertise, including age-appropriate expertise, who was not involved in the initial determination.

“(7) NOTICE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Written notice of a determination made under an internal review process shall be issued to the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) and the treating health care professional not later than 2 working days after the completion of the review (or within the 72-hour period referred to in paragraph (4) if applicable).

“(B) ADVERSE COVERAGE DETERMINATIONS.—With respect to an adverse coverage determination made under this subsection, the notice described in subparagraph (A) shall include—

“(i) the reasons for the determination (including the clinical or scientific-evidence based rationale used in making the determination) written in a manner to be understandable to the average participant or beneficiary;

“(ii) the procedures for obtaining additional information concerning the determination; and “(iii) notification of the right to an independent external review under subsection (e) and instructions on how to initiate such a review.

“(e) INDEPENDENT EXTERNAL REVIEW.—

“(1) ACCESS TO REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan or a health insurance issuer offering health insurance coverage in connection with a group health plan shall have written procedures to permit a participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) access to an independent external review with respect to an adverse coverage determination concerning a particular item or service (including a circumstance treated as an adverse coverage determination under subparagraph (B)) where—

“(i) the particular item or service involved—

“(I)(aa) would be a covered benefit, when medically necessary and appropriate under the terms and conditions of the plan, and the item or service has been determined not to be medically necessary and appropriate under the internal appeals process required under subsection (d) or there has been a failure to issue a coverage determination as described in subparagraph (B); and

“(bb) the amount of such item or service involved exceeds a significant financial threshold; or

“(BB) there is a significant risk of placing the life or health of the participant or beneficiary in jeopardy; or

“(II) would be a covered benefit, when not considered experimental or investigational under the terms and conditions of the plan, and the item or service has been determined to be experimental or investigational under the internal appeals process required under subsection (d) or there has been a failure to issue a coverage determination as described in subparagraph (B); and “(ii) the participant or beneficiary has completed the internal appeals process under subsection (d) with respect to such determination.

“(B) FAILURE TO ACT.—The failure of a plan or issuer to issue a coverage determination under subsection (d)(6) within the applicable timeline established for such a determination under such subsection shall be treated as an adverse coverage determination for purposes of proceeding to independent external review under this subsection.

“(2) INITIATION OF THE INDEPENDENT EXTERNAL REVIEW PROCESS.—

“(A) FILING OF REQUEST.—A participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) who desires to have an independent external review conducted under this subsection shall file a written request for such a review with the plan or issuer involved not later than 30 working days after the receipt of a final denial of a claim under subsection (d). Any such request shall include the consent of the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) for the release of medical information and records to independent external reviewers regarding the participant or beneficiary.

“(B) INFORMATION AND NOTICE.—Not later than 5 working days after the receipt of a request under subparagraph (A), or earlier in accordance with the medical exigencies of the case, the plan or issuer involved shall select an external appeals entity under paragraph (3)(A) that shall be responsible for designating an independent external reviewer under paragraph (3)(B).

“(C) PROVISION OF INFORMATION.—The plan or issuer involved shall forward necessary information (including medical records, any relevant review criteria, the clinical rationale consistent with the terms and conditions of the contract between the plan or issuer and the participant or beneficiary for the coverage denial, and evidence of the coverage of the participant or beneficiary) to the independent external reviewer selected under paragraph (3)(B).

“(D) NOTIFICATION.—The plan or issuer involved shall send a written notification to the participant or beneficiary (or the authorized representative of the participant or beneficiary) and the plan administrator, indicating that an independent external review has been initiated.

“(3) CONDUCT OF INDEPENDENT EXTERNAL REVIEW.—

“(A) DESIGNATION OF EXTERNAL APPEALS ENTITY BY PLAN OR ISSUER.—

“(i) IN GENERAL.—A plan or issuer that receives a request for an independent external review under paragraph (2)(A) shall designate a qualified entity described in clause (ii), in a manner designed to ensure that the entity so designated will make a decision in an unbiased manner, to serve as the external appeals entity.

“(ii) QUALIFIED ENTITIES.—A qualified entity shall be—

“(I) an independent external review entity licensed or credentialed by a State;

“(II) a State agency established for the purpose of conducting independent external reviews;

“(III) any entity under contract with the Federal Government to provide independent external review services;

“(IV) any entity accredited as an independent external review entity by an accrediting body recognized by the Secretary for such purpose; or

“(V) any other entity meeting criteria established by the Secretary for purposes of this subparagraph.

“(B) DESIGNATION OF INDEPENDENT EXTERNAL REVIEWER BY EXTERNAL APPEALS ENTITY.—The external appeals entity designated under subparagraph (A) shall, not later than 30 days after the date on which such entity is designated under subparagraph (A), or earlier in accordance with the medical exigencies of the case, designate one or more individuals to serve as independent external reviewers with respect to a request received under paragraph (2)(A). Such reviewers shall be independent medical experts who shall—

“(i) be appropriately credentialed or licensed in any State to deliver health care services;

“(ii) not have any material, professional, familial, or financial affiliation with the case under review, the participant or beneficiary involved, the treating health care professional, the institution where the treatment would take place, or the manufacturer of any drug, device, procedure, or other therapy proposed for the participant or beneficiary whose treatment is under review;

“(iii) have expertise (including age-appropriate expertise) in the diagnosis or treatment under review and, when reasonably available, be of the same specialty as the physician treating the participant or beneficiary or recommending or prescribing the treatment in question;

“(iv) receive only reasonable and customary compensation from the group health plan or health insurance issuer in connection with the independent external review that is not contingent on the decision rendered by the reviewer; and “(v) not be held liable for decisions regarding medical determinations (but may be held liable for actions that are arbitrary and capricious).

“(4) STANDARD OF REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—An independent external reviewer shall—

“(i) make an independent determination based on the valid, relevant, scientific and clinical evidence to determine the medical necessity, appropriateness, experimental or investigational nature of the proposed treatment; and

“(ii) take into consideration appropriate and available information, including any evidence-based decision making or clinical practice guidelines used by the group health plan or health insurance issuer; timely evidence or information submitted by the plan, issuer, patient or patient's physician; the patient's medical record; expert consensus; and medical literature as defined in section 556(5) of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act.

“(B) NOTICE.—The plan or issuer involved shall ensure that the participant or beneficiary receives notice, within 30 days after the determination of the independent medical expert, regarding the actions of the plan or issuer with respect to the determination of such expert under the independent external review.

“(5) TIMEFRAME FOR REVIEW.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—The independent external reviewer shall complete a review of an adverse coverage determination in accordance with the medical exigencies of the case.

“(B) LIMITATION.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a review described in such subparagraph shall be completed not later than 30 working days after the later of—

“(i) the date on which such reviewer is designated; or

“(ii) the date on which all information necessary to completing such review is received.

“(6) BINDING DETERMINATION.—The determination of an independent external reviewer under this subsection shall be binding upon the plan or issuer if the provisions of this subsection or the procedures implemented under such provisions were complied with by the independent external reviewer.

“(7) STUDY.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, the General Accounting Office shall conduct a study of a statistically appropriate sample of completed independent external reviews. Such study shall include an assessment of the process involved during an independent external review and the basis of decision-making by the independent external reviewer. The results of such study shall be submitted to the appropriate committees of Congress.

“(8) EFFECT ON CERTAIN PROVISIONS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting or modifying section 514 of this Act with respect to a group health plan.

“(f) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to prohibit a plan administrator or plan fiduciary or health plan medical director from requesting an independent external review by an independent external reviewer without first completing the internal review process.

“(g) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

“(1) ADVERSE COVERAGE DETERMINATION.—The term ‘adverse coverage determination’ means a coverage determination under the plan which results in a denial of coverage or reimbursement.

“(2) COVERAGE DETERMINATION.—The term ‘coverage determination’ means with respect to items and services for which coverage may be provided under a health plan, a determination of whether or not such items and services are covered or reimbursable under the coverage and terms of the contract.

“(3) GRIEVANCE.—The term ‘grievance’ means any complaint made by a participant or beneficiary that does not involve a coverage determination.

“(4) GROUP HEALTH PLAN.—The term ‘group health plan’ shall have the meaning given such term in section 733(a). In applying this paragraph, excepted benefits described in section 733(c) shall not be treated as benefits consisting of medical care.

“(5) HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE.—The term ‘health insurance coverage’ has the meaning given such term in section 733(b)(1). In applying this paragraph, excepted benefits described in section 733(c) shall not be treated as benefits consisting of medical care.

“(6) HEALTH INSURANCE ISSUER.—The term ‘health insurance issuer’ has the meaning given such term in section 733(b)(2).

“(7) PRIOR AUTHORIZATION DETERMINATION.—The term ‘prior authorization determination’ means a coverage determination prior to the provision of the items and services as a condition of coverage of the items and services under the coverage.

“(8) TREATING HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONAL.—The term ‘treating health care professional’ with respect to a group health plan, health insurance issuer or provider sponsored organization means a physician (medical doctor or doctor of osteopathy) or other health care practitioner who is acting within the scope of his or her State licensure or certification for the delivery of health care services and who is primarily responsible for delivering those services to the participant or beneficiary.

“(9) UTILIZATION REVIEW.—The term ‘utilization review’ with respect to a group health plan or health insurance coverage means a set of formal techniques designed to monitor the use of, or evaluate the clinical necessity, appropriateness, efficacy, or efficiency of, health care services, procedures, or settings. Techniques may include ambulatory review, prospective review, second opinion, certification, concurrent review, case management, discharge planning or retrospective review.”

(b) ENFORCEMENT.—Section 502(c)(1) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1132(c)(1)) is amended by inserting after “or section 101(e)(1)” the following: “, or fails to comply with a coverage determination as required under section 503(e)(6).”

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of contents in section 1 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 is amended by striking the item relating to section 503 and inserting the following new item:

"Sec. 503. Claims procedures, coverage determination, grievances and appeals."

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply with respect to plan years beginning on or after October 1, 2000. The Secretary shall issue all regulations necessary to carry out the amendments made by this section before the effective date thereof.

DODD (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1239

Mr. DODD (for himself, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. REID, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. DASCHLE) proposed an amendment to amendment No. 1232 proposed by Mr. DASCHLE to the bill, S. 1344, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in subtitle A of title I, insert the following:

SEC. ____ COVERAGE FOR INDIVIDUALS PARTICIPATING IN APPROVED CLINICAL TRIALS AND ACCESS TO APPROVED DRUGS AND DEVICES.

(a) ERISA.—Subpart C of part 7 of subtitle B of title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as added by section 101(a)(2) of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 730A. COVERAGE FOR INDIVIDUALS PARTICIPATING IN APPROVED CLINICAL TRIALS AND ACCESS TO APPROVED DRUGS AND DEVICES.

"(a) COVERAGE FOR INDIVIDUALS PARTICIPATING IN APPROVED CLINICAL TRIALS.—

"(1) COVERAGE.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—If a group health plan, or a health insurance issuer in connection with group health insurance coverage, provides coverage to a qualified individual (as defined in paragraph (2)), the plan or issuer—

"(i) may not deny the individual participation in the clinical trial referred to in paragraph (2)(B);

"(ii) subject to paragraph (3), may not deny (or limit or impose additional conditions on) the coverage of routine patient costs for items and services furnished in connection with participation in the trial; and

"(iii) may not discriminate against the individual on the basis of the participant's, beneficiaries or enrollee's participation in such trial.

"(B) EXCLUSION OF CERTAIN COSTS.—For purposes of subparagraph (A)(ii), routine patient costs do not include the cost of the tests or measurements conducted primarily for the purpose of the clinical trial involved.

"(C) USE OF IN-NETWORK PROVIDERS.—If one or more participating providers is participating in a clinical trial, nothing in subparagraph (A) shall be construed as preventing a plan or issuer from requiring that a qualified individual participate in the trial through such a participating provider if the provider will accept the individual as a participant in the trial.

"(2) QUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL DEFINED.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'qualified individual' means an individual who is a participant or beneficiary in a group health plan or enrollee under health insurance coverage and who meets the following conditions:

"(A)(i) The individual has a life-threatening or serious illness for which no standard treatment is effective.

"(ii) The individual is eligible to participate in an approved clinical trial according to the trial protocol with respect to treatment of such illness.

"(iii) The individual's participation in the trial offers meaningful potential for significant clinical benefit for the individual.

"(B) Either—

"(i) the referring physician is a participating health care professional and has concluded that the individual's participation in such trial would be appropriate based upon the individual meeting the conditions described in subparagraph (A); or

"(ii) the participant, beneficiary or enrollee provides medical and scientific information establishing that the individual's participation in such trial would be appropriate based upon the individual meeting the conditions described in subparagraph (A).

"(3) PAYMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—Under this subsection a group health plan, or a health insurance issuer in connection with group health insurance coverage, shall provide for payment for routine patient costs described in paragraph (1)(B) but is not required to pay for costs of items and services that are reasonably expected (as determined by the Secretary) to be paid for by the sponsors of an approved clinical trial.

"(B) PAYMENT RATE.—In the case of covered items and services provided by—

"(i) a participating provider, the payment rate shall be at the agreed upon rate, or

"(ii) a nonparticipating provider, the payment rate shall be at the rate the plan or issuer would normally pay for comparable services under clause (i).

"(4) APPROVED CLINICAL TRIAL DEFINED.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—In this subsection, the term 'approved clinical trial' means a clinical research study or clinical investigation approved and funded (which may include funding through in-kind contributions) by one or more of the following:

"(i) The National Institutes of Health.

"(ii) A cooperative group or center of the National Institutes of Health.

"(iii) Either of the following if the conditions described in subparagraph (B) are met:

"(I) The Department of Veterans Affairs.

"(II) The Department of Defense.

"(B) CONDITIONS FOR DEPARTMENTS.—The conditions described in this paragraph, for a study or investigation conducted by a Department, are that the study or investigation has been reviewed and approved through a system of peer review that the Secretary determines—

"(i) to be comparable to the system of peer review of studies and investigations used by the National Institutes of Health, and

"(ii) assures unbiased review of the highest scientific standards by qualified individuals who have no interest in the outcome of the review.

"(5) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to limit a plan's or issuer's coverage with respect to clinical trials.

"(b) ACCESS TO NEEDED PRESCRIPTION DRUGS.—If a group health plan, or health insurance issuer that offers group health insurance coverage, provides benefits with respect to prescription drugs but the coverage limits such benefits to drugs included in a formulary, the plan or issuer shall—

"(1) ensure participation of participating physicians and pharmacists in the development of the formulary;

"(2) disclose to providers and, disclose upon request to participants, beneficiaries, and enrollees, the nature of the formulary restrictions; and

"(3) consistent with the standards for a utilization review program, provide for exceptions from the formulary limitation when a non-formulary alternative is medically indicated, except that—

"(A) an exception provided under this paragraph shall be provided in accordance with cost-sharing rules in effect for drugs included in the formulary; and

"(B) nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to prevent the plan or issuer from implementing a program of differential cost-sharing for drugs included in the formulary and drugs not included in the formulary, if the drugs that are not included in the formulary do not meet the conditions described in this section.

"(c) ACCESS TO APPROVED DRUGS AND DEVICES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A group health plan, or a health insurance issuer in connection with group health insurance coverage, that provides any coverage of prescription drugs or medical devices shall not deny coverage of such a drug or device on the basis that the use is investigational, if the use—

"(A) in the case of a prescription drug—

"(i) is included in the labeling authorized by the application in effect for the drug pursuant to subsection (b) or (j) of section 505 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, without regard to any postmarketing requirements that may apply under such Act; or

"(ii) is included in the labeling authorized by the application in effect for the drug under section 351 of the Public Health Service Act, without regard to any postmarketing requirements that may apply pursuant to such section; or

"(B) in the case of a medical device, is included in the labeling authorized by a regulation under subsection (d) or (3) of section 513 of the Federal Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act, an order under subsection (f) of such section, or an application approved under section 515 of such Act, without regard to any postmarketing requirements that may apply under such Act.

"(2) CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as requiring a group health plan or health insurance issuer to provide any coverage of prescription drugs or medical devices.

"(d) APPLICATION OF SECTION.—This section shall supersede the provisions of section 728.

"(e) REVIEW.—Failure to meet the requirements of this section shall constitute an appealable decision under this Act.

"(f) PLAN SATISFACTION OF CERTAIN REQUIREMENTS.—Pursuant to rules of the Secretary, if a health insurance issuer offers health insurance coverage in connection with a group health plan and takes an action in violation of any provision of this subchapter, the group health plan shall not be liable for such violation unless the plan caused such violation.

"(g) APPLICABILITY.—The provisions of this section shall apply to group health plans and health insurance issuers as if included in—

"(1) subpart 2 of part A of title XXVII of the Public Health Service Act;

"(2) the first subpart 3 of part B of title XXVII of the Public Health Service Act (relating to other requirements); and

"(3) subchapter B of chapter 100 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

"(h) NONAPPLICATION OF CERTAIN PROVISION.—Only for purposes of applying the requirements of this section under section 714 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (as added by section 301 of this Act), sections 2707 and 2753 of the Public Health Service Act (as added by sections 201 and 202 of this Act), and section 9813 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (as added by section 401 of this Act)—

"(1) section 2721(b)(2) of the Public Health Service Act and section 9831(a)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall not apply to the provisions of this section; and

"(2) with respect to limited scope dental benefits, subparagraph (A) of section 733(c)(2) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, subparagraph (A) of section

2791(c)(2) of the Public Health Service Act, and subparagraph (A) of section 9832(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall not apply to the provisions of this section.

“(i) NO IMPACT ON SOCIAL SECURITY TRUST FUND.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or amend the Social Security Act (or any regulation promulgated under that Act).

“(2) TRANSFERS.—

“(A) ESTIMATE OF SECRETARY.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall annually estimate the impact that the enactment of this section has on the income and balances of the trust funds established under section 201 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401).

“(B) TRANSFER OF FUNDS.—If, under subparagraph (A), the Secretary of the Treasury estimates that the enactment of this section has a negative impact on the income and balances of the trust funds established under section 201 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 401), the Secretary shall transfer, not less frequently than quarterly, from the general revenues of the Federal Government an amount sufficient so as to ensure that the income and balances of such trust funds are not reduced as a result of the enactment of such section.

“(j) LIMITATION ON ACTIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided for in paragraph (2), no action may be brought under subsection (a)(1)(B), (a)(2), or (a)(3) of section 502 by a participant or beneficiary seeking relief based on the application of any provision in this section.

“(2) PERMISSIBLE ACTIONS.—An action may be brought under subsection (a)(1)(B), (a)(2), or (a)(3) of section 502 by a participant or beneficiary seeking relief based on the application of this section to the individual circumstances of that participant or beneficiary; except that—

“(A) such an action may not be brought or maintained as a class action; and

“(B) in such an action relief may only provide for the provision of (or payment for) benefits, items, or services denied to the individual participant or beneficiary involved (and for attorney's fees and the costs of the action, at the discretion of the court) and shall not provide for any other relief to the participant or beneficiary or for any relief to any other person.

“(3) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as affecting any action brought by the Secretary.

“(k) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The provisions of this section shall apply to group health plans for plan years beginning after, and to health insurance issuers for coverage offered or sold after, October 1, 2000.”.

(b) INFORMATION REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) INFORMATION FROM GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—Section 1862(b) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395y(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(7) INFORMATION FROM GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—

“(A) PROVISION OF INFORMATION BY GROUP HEALTH PLANS.—The administrator of a group health plan subject to the requirements of paragraph (1) shall provide to the Secretary such of the information elements described in subparagraph (C) as the Secretary specifies, and in such manner and at such times as the Secretary may specify (but not more frequently than 4 times per year), with respect to each individual covered under the plan who is entitled to any benefits under this title.

“(B) PROVISION OF INFORMATION BY EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEE ORGANIZATIONS.—An employer (or employee organization) that maintains or participates in a group health plan subject to the requirements of paragraph (1) shall provide to the administrator of the plan such of the information elements required to be provided under subparagraph (A), and in such manner and at such times as the Secretary may specify, at a frequency consistent with that required under subparagraph (A) with respect to each individual described in subparagraph (A) who is covered under the plan by reason of employment with that employer or membership in the organization.

“(C) INFORMATION ELEMENTS.—The information elements described in this subparagraph are the following:

“(i) ELEMENTS CONCERNING THE INDIVIDUAL.—

“(I) The individual's name.

“(II) The individual's date of birth.

“(III) The individual's sex.

“(IV) The individual's social security insurance number.

“(V) The number assigned by the Secretary to the individual for claims under this title.

“(VI) The family relationship of the individual to the person who has or had current or employment status with the employer.

“(ii) ELEMENTS CONCERNING THE FAMILY MEMBER WITH CURRENT OR FORMER EMPLOYMENT STATUS.—

“(I) The name of the person in the individual's family who has current or former employment status with the employer.

“(II) That person's social security insurance number.

“(III) The number or other identifier assigned by the plan to that person.

“(IV) The periods of coverage for that person under the plan.

“(V) The employment status of that person (current or former) during those periods of coverage.

“(VI) The classes (of that person's family members) covered under the plan.

“(iii) PLAN ELEMENTS.—

“(I) The items and services covered under the plan.

“(II) The name and address to which claims under the plan are to be sent.

“(iv) ELEMENTS CONCERNING THE EMPLOYER.—

“(I) The employer's name.

“(II) The employer's address.

“(III) The employer identification number of the employer.

“(D) USE OF IDENTIFIERS.—The administrator of a group health plan shall utilize a unique identifier for the plan in providing information under subparagraph (A) and in other transactions, as may be specified by the Secretary, related to the provisions of this subsection. The Secretary may provide to the administrator the unique identifier described in the preceding sentence.

“(E) PENALTY FOR NONCOMPLIANCE.—Any entity that knowingly and willfully fails to comply with a requirement imposed by the previous subparagraphs shall be subject to a civil money penalty not to exceed $1,000 for each incident of such failure. The provisions of section 1128A (other than subsections (a) and (b)) shall apply to a civil money penalty under the previous sentence in the same manner as those provisions apply to a penalty or proceeding under section 1128A(a).”.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) MODIFICATION TO FOREIGN TAX CREDIT CARRYBACK AND CARRYOVER PERIODS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 904(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to limitation on credit) is amended—

(A) by striking “in the second preceding taxable year,” and

(B) by striking “or fifth” and inserting “fifth, sixth, or seventh”.

(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall apply to credits arising in taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001.

(d) LIMITATIONS ON WELFARE BENEFIT FUNDS OF 10 OR MORE EMPLOYER PLANS.—

(1) BENEFITS TO WHICH EXCEPTION APPLIES.—Section 419A(f)(6)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to exception for 10 or more employer plans) is amended to read as follows:

“(A) IN GENERAL.—This subpart shall not apply to a welfare benefit fund which is part of a 10 or more employer plan if the only benefits provided through the fund are 1 or more of the following:

“(i) Medical benefits.

“(ii) Disability benefits.

“(iii) Group term life insurance benefits which do not provide for any cash surrender value or other money that can be paid, assigned, borrowed, or pledged for collateral for a loan.

The preceding sentence shall not apply to any plan which maintains experience-rating arrangements with respect to individual employers.”

(2) LIMITATION ON USE OF AMOUNTS FOR OTHER PURPOSES.—Section 4976(b) of such Act (defining disqualified benefit) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

“(5) SPECIAL RULE FOR 10 OR MORE EMPLOYER PLANS EXEMPTED FROM PREFUNDING LIMITS.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(C), if—

“(A) subpart D of part I of subchapter D of chapter 1 does not apply by reason of section 419A(f)(6) to contributions to provide 1 or more welfare benefits through a welfare benefit fund under a 10 or more employer plan, and

“(B) any portion of the welfare benefit fund attributable to such contributions is used for a purpose other than that for which the contributions were made,

then such portion shall be treated as reverting to the benefit of the employers maintaining the fund.”

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to contributions paid or accrued after the date of the enactment of this Act, in taxable years ending after such date.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I would like to announce that the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs will meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, July 21, 1999, at 9:30 a.m. to conduct a hearing on S. 985, the Intergovernmental Gaming Agreement Act of 1999. The hearing will be held in room 485, Russell Senate Building.

Please direct any inquiries to committee staff at 202/224-2251.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on the Judiciary be authorized to meet for a hearing re judicial nominations, during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, July 13, 1999, at 2:00 p.m., in SD226.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON FORESTS AND PUBLIC LAND MANAGEMENT

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Subcommittee on Forests and Public Land Management of the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources be granted permission to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, July 13, for purposes of conducting a subcommittee hearing which is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. The purpose of this hearing is to receive testimony on issues relating to S. 1330, a bill to give the city of Mesquite, Nevada, the right to purchase at fair market value certain parcels of public land in the city, and S. 1329, a bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to convey certain land to Nye County, Nevada, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SUBCOMMITTEE ON HEALTH, EDUCATION, LABOR, AND PENSIONS

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions be authorized to meet for a hearing on "ESEA: Drug Free Schools" during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, July 13, 1999, at 9:30.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

SEIZING THE MILE

• Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise to commend John Sexton, Dean of New York University Law School, for his many years of hard work and dedication to the Law School, the residents of New York State, and to the improvement of legal education for all Americans. Since 1988, when Sexton became Dean, NYU Law School has become one of America's finest law schools. Dean Sexton should be recognized for his efforts. I ask that the text of "John Sexton Seizing the Mile" by Stephen Englund be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The text follows:

JOHN SEXTON SEIZING THE MILE

(By Stephen Englund)

In the late spring of 1997, veteran reporter James Traub asked, in a headline to a New York Times Magazine feature article, "Is NYU's law school challenging Harvard's as the nation's best?" It was a fair question. NYU Law had come a long way in a short time. A law school that had been little more than a commuter school at the end of World War II was, by 1997, considered by anyone familiar with current developments in legal education to be, as one professor said, "one of the five or six law schools that could plausibly claim to be among the top three in the country." Distinguished academics like Harvard's Laurence Tribe and Arthur Miller had placed NYU (with their own school and with Yale, Stanford and Chicago) in that group. As Tribe put it: "The array of faculty that has moved to NYU over the last decade or so has created a level of scholarship and intellectual distinction and range that is extremely impressive."

In 1997, the notion that NYU's School of Law might be the best was certainly provocative. But 18 months later, after an astonishing (indeed unprecedented) day-long forum at the school titled "Strengthening Democracy in the Global Economy"—a meeting that brought to Washington Square President Clinton, Britain's Prime Minister Tony Blair, Italy's President Romano Prodi and Bulgaria's President Peter Stoyanov, as well as First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton and a supporting cast of respected intellectuals and other leaders—many people are answering Traub's question with a resounding "Yes!"

Indeed, the rise of NYU over the past few years has been one of the most noted advances on the academic scene—with a growing number of those both in the academy and at the bar offering the view that NYU has become the nation's premier site for legal education. For instance, Michael Ryan, senior partner at New York's oldest law firm, Cadwalader, Wickersham, and Taft—himself a Harvard Law School graduate—told me: "NYU is a more exciting and innovative place than any other law school. The place combines the energy, vitality and diversity like that of the Lexington Avenue subway with the cohesiveness and spirit. The school's innovative global initiative is alone worth the price of admission. If I were a student, I'd choose it over any other school." Chief Judge Harry Edwards of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, viewed by many as the nation's second most important court, said virtually the same thing: NYU is absolutely the place to be these days. I hear more comments about the quality, excitement, and originality of what's going on there than I do about any other law school." As did Pasquale Pasquino, one of Europe's foremost political theorists, who is teaching at the law school this year: "NYU surely has the most prominent, the most productive and the most interesting faculty. Its programs raise some of the most interesting questions raised in any law school." And when I spoke with Dwight Opperman, who for decades was the leader of West Publishing, the world's largest publisher of law books, he volunteered: "NYU surpasses Harvard in many areas."

Frankly, when I first read Traub's article, and even more when I began to hear views like those of Ryan, Edwards, Pasquino and Opperman, I was more than a little bit surprised. How was it that NYU had come to be seen as seriously challenging—or even surpassing—"name brand" schools like Harvard, Yale, Chicago and Stanford? And how had it happened so quickly? As a former academic, I know that the academy is one of the least variable theaters on the world stage. Far more than in other realms, reputations of colleges, universities and professional schools are improved, if at all at a glacial creep, though they may decline precipitously. Little wonder, then, that NYU's rise to the top of legal education continues to be the topic of so much discussion.

What does explain NYU's ascendancy? Well, one key element is surely the astonishing migration of academic stars from other leading law schools to Washington Square. In academe, it is big news when an established professor at a leading school makes a "lateral move" to a peer institution—even more so when the professor leaves a distinguished chaired professorship in making the move. In legal education, such moves have been relatively rare, in part because law faculties are small (the largest in the country has only 70 to 80 members). Yet over the last 10 years, there has been an unprecedented migration to NYU from schools like Chicago, Harvard, Michigan Pennsylvania, Stanford, Virginia, and Yale, and NYU can now boast the most distinguished set or "laterals" of any law school.

Another element is its student body. For decades, NYU has drawn strong students, but today the school attracts many of the very best in the country. Today, by any objective criteria—grade point averages, LSAT scores, the number of graduate academic degrees earned, the languages spoken—NYU's student body is among the three or four most selective in the nation.

And then, too, there is NYU's remarkable record in providing those students, as they graduate, with the most coveted legal jobs. NYU's graduates long have dominated the public service bar, but the dramatic development of the past decade is that NYU has edged ahead of Harvard in providing the greatest number of hires by the American Lawyer's 50 leading law firms.

The school's arrival at the top has been ratified in perhaps the most brutal arena of them all: fund-raising. In December 1998, NYU Law completed an extraordinary successful five-year fund-raising campaign. Under the leadership of Martin Payson ('61), the campaign's chairman; Board Chair Martin Lipton ('55); and Vice-Chair Lester Pollock ('57), the campaign has generated 45 gifts in excess of $1 million. Eight have been in excess of $5 million, including gifts from Alfred ('65) and Gail Engelberg, Jay ('71) and Gail Furman, Rita ('59) and Gustave Hauser, LL.M. ('57), Jerome Kern ('60) Dwight Opperman, Ingeborg and Ira Rennert, and the Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen & Katz law firm. It took NYU just three years to reach its original five-year goal of $125 million, and it easily surpassed its revised goal of $175 million. Only Yale and Harvard law schools join NYU at this level.

Once I discovered these facts, the startling idea that NYU Law School may be the best in the country—perhaps in the world—began to grow on me. And I also realized that this transformation was a riveting tale of "from there to here"—one of the most remarkable in education history. Here it is in a nutshell.

A HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

Fade in. Scene One. It is 1942. Arthur T. Vanderbilt becomes dean of NYU Law School. Though already more than a century old (it was founded in 1835) and boasting graduates like Samuel J. Tilden, Elihu Root and Jacob Javits, NYU is not an impressive place. Its facilities are limited to two floor of an antiquated factory building in Greenwich Village. It is a "commuter school," drawing its students from the New York metropolitan area. Justice Felix Frankfurter, in his biography, described it as one of the worst schools in the country.

But the visionary Vanderbilt sees the potential oak lurking within the acorn. He sees NYU as a national and international "center of the law." Many in the upper reaches of the university see his dream as "Vanderbilt's folly," but the determined Vanderbilt, dedicated to the dream, presses on.

First, he begins to exploit the school's unique asset: its Greenwich Village location in the legal, financial, cultural and intellectual hub of the world, New York City. Methodically, he plans for an expansion of the school's physical plant. Soon he opens an attractive new classroom building that the law school can call its own, and he follows three years later, in 1955, with the school's first residence hall.

Along the way, seeking to raise much-needed cash, the dean's natural financial savvy intersects with luck, when he purchases the C.F. Mueller Macaroni Company for the law school. The company generates profits each year and gives the school lasting security, for when the Mueller Company is sold in 1977, it is worth more than 20 times the school's original investment. Even after providing $40 million to the then-financially pressed university, the law school realizes a gain of nearly $80 million. And, in return for having shared its profits with the university, the law school is granted a degree of autonomy unprecedented in education. It will henceforth do its own planning, and its decisions will be a product of its dean, its faculty and its own independent Board of Trustees.

Vanderbilt officially resigns in 1947 to become Chief Justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court, but he continues to play Pygmalion with the school until his death in 1957. He adds significant new programs designed to give the school a national reputation, he deploys a merit scholarship program to attract the best students and he begins the process of building a strong faculty. Still, though NYU Law School now is a very good school, Vanderbilt's dream is not nearly realized. Fade out.

Fade in Scene Two. It is the opening of the 1990 academic year. We are seated in a hall at the law school, listening to a distinguished leader of the faculty explain "How NYU became a Major Law School." The words spoken by Prof. Norman Dorsen are appealing—for their modesty as well as for their insight and depth. Dorsen, an eminent scholar and defender of civil rights, has just retired as president of the American Civil Liberties Union. Reading between the lines of his talk, it is clear he is also a painfully honest man. It's not difficult to sense that he is not entirely convinced that his law school is altogether as eminent a place as some have claimed it to be. Indeed, he tells his audience that recent years have been a time of "deceleration" in NYU's "steady drive to the summit of American legal education, which seemed inexorable a few years before."

What does Dorsen mean? After all, in the quarter century since Vanderbilt, the law school has added eight new buildings, including two splendid residence halls and a magnificent underground library—all state of the art. Its student body has become more selective and much more diverse, boasting students from a dozen countries. Its faculty now has a core of highly regarded scholars and clinicians. Still, in the previous five years, NYU has made only one addition to its tenure track faculty, and two junior leading lights have defected to Columbia (one of whom, David Leebron, would later become Columbia's dean). There was the discomfiting prospect that Columbia—and other schools would persuade more faculty members to move. This is not good, Dorsen says. It should be NYU that is doing the luring and hiring. In his view, the mood of contentment reigning at the law school, though understandable, is potentially destructive.

On the positive side, Dorsen says, the school does have a dynamic new dean, John Sexton. However, Sexton has been dean only two years now, and it is too soon to assay his potential. If Sexton succeeds in reigniting the law school's "steady drive" to the top, says Dorsen, it will be because he has managed to replenish the school's slipping endowment, to stanch the incipient hemorrhage of top scholars to other law schools and galvanize NYU Law with a sense of mission. Dorsen allows as how "there is ample ground to hope" this all might happen, so that "within a few years NYU will be firmly established in fact and in the consciousness of the profession and the public as being among the best in the nation." Fade out.

Fade in. Scene Three. It is 1994. Richard Stewart, formerly a chaired professor and associate dean at Harvard Law School and recently assistant attorney general for the environment, is sitting in John Sexton's office at NYU. Stewart is a towering figure in law, widely recognized as the nation's leading scholar in environmental and administrative law. Harvard wants him back. Columbia, where Stewart's former Harvard colleague and co-author is dean, has launched a major effort to attract him. But Sexton thinks Stewart should come to Washington Square—that he should become part of what he calls "the Enterprise," the group of NYU faculty who are devoted to making the school the world's leading center of the study of law.

The Enterprise is committed to several principles, Sexton tells Stewart. It rejects the notion, prevalent in elite schools, that faculty members are "independent contractors" teaching what they want to teach when they want to teach it, and available to colleagues and students as much or as little as they please. Instead, faculty in the Enterprise undertake a reciprocal obligation to each other and to their students—they pledge to be engaged with each other in a learning community, reading drafts and being present for one another in an ongoing conversation about law.

Sexton continues: "The Enterprise rejects contentment in favor of constant improvement and aspiration. The school always should be asking: How can we become better? Members of the Enterprise are willing, occasionally at least, to subordinate personal interests to those of the collective. They delight in having colleagues who challenge their ideas; they are not afraid to be around people who are smarter than they are."

In making his case to Stewart, Sexton reaches back to a phrase he first heard from the Jesuits: "Most of all, the Enterprise is committed to thinking constantly about the ratio studiorum of the school: why do we do things the way we do?" The Enterprise, Sexton tells Stewart, is open to everyone who wishes to join. It is the center of gravity of NYU's faculty, and NYU's unique attraction.

"Count me in, Stewart says. Fade out.

Fade in. Scene four. It is 1998. We are seated in another auditorium on the Washington Square campus of NYU, this time listening to Dr. L. Jay Oliva expatriate to NYU alumni and friends about his aspirations for the university he has presided over since he succeeded John Brademas in 1992. Some college presidents, he observes, especially those in the Midwest, strive to make their institutions as good as their football team. Others want it to be as fine as the music conservatory or the medical school. Here at NYU, Oliva says with a smile, "I will be satisfied when I leave office if the university matches the quality and the renown of its law school." Fade out.

THE NEW DEAN

NYU Law's ascent unquestionably has been the product of many factors. No. 1, just as Vanderbilt foresaw, is its unique location. By the dawn of the '90's, as Professor Richard Revesz notes, New York City itself was "no longer a minus" in hiring faculty. The city had solved many of its worst problems and was becoming attractive again, especially to academics in two-career families (Revesz's wife, Vicki Been, for instance is also professor at the law school). And Greenwich Village is a particularly attractive part of the city. However, to invoke "other factors" in accounting for NYU's rise to the top of legal education while downplaying the role of Dean John Sexton would be like trying to discuss the right of judicial review without highlighting John Marshall; it's talking "Scopes" while soft-pedaling Darrow. It's To Kill A Mockingbird without Atticus Finch. When Norman Redlich retired in 1988 and John Sexton, a member of the Enterprise, was selected as his successor, the law school got more than it expected. The dean calls himself "a catalyst, not the cause" of the law school's arrival at the top, but any measure and by all accounts, he is a catalyst nonpareil.

We owe to the ancient Greek poet Archilochus the familiar observation that "the fox knows many things, but the hedgehog knows one great thing." John Sexton, with his round cheeks, his bright eyes, and bushy hair, resembles as well as personifies the hedgehog. There is about Sexton a deep intelligence and a grand sense of humor, but the one "great thing" that he knows, and knows well, is single-minded devotion to a team or institution.

Sexton came to teach at NYU in 1981, immediately following a clerkship with Chief Justice Warren Burger, and was granted tenure a mere three years later. He has run NYU Law School for a decade now, and recently, happily signed on for another term of five years. This alone is rare. Law schools these days are desperate for deans because deans are desperate to leave their posts. The average tenure of an American law dean is fewer than four years. In the words of Chief Judge Harry Edwards: "John is a truly visionary dean, and if that statement sounds like an oxymoron, it's because no one these days thinks of law deans as visionary. They aren't thought to hold a job that allows them to be visionary. Even if some deans might want to do something special, the drudgery of running a law school, especially of holding its factions together, doesn't permit it. That's why deans turn over so quickly."

Sexton's personality is haimish-warm and embracing, your quintessential "good guy." John (as he urges everyone, including his students, to call him) is disarmingly self-effacing, gracious, ready and eager to brag about others, to share credit even for things he has largely accomplished on his own. He is above all eager to elicit people's counsel and ideas, to involve them in his grand project of building up the law school. Despite his Harvard J.D. and his Fordham Ph.D. (in religion), he is profoundly non-elitist. A Brooklynite who has kept (indeed cultivated) the accent, he is absolutely comfortable with himself. Being around the super-wealthy, the super-powerful, or the super-brilliant neither fazes nor inhibits him in the least. And he's no clothes-horse, either. There's often a slightly rumpled or professorial air about him.

In short, this man is, in style and appearance, closer to a New York ward heeler than, say, the cosmopolitan director of the Metropolitan Museum. From his nasal Brooklynese to the show-and-tell hands, from the wide-open, explosive laugh and the rapid-fire banter to the sharing of jokes and stories, Sexton is more like a New York mayor in the Ed Koch mold than he is a white-shoe lawyer or John Houseman's Professor Kingsfield in The Paper Chase. He can out-Rudin the Rudin Brothers at boosting New York—he follows and knows the Yankees, Knicks, Jets and Giants as few who aren't sports journalists do, and he can (and will) tell you where to find the best bagel in the five boroughs.

Among his skills is the ability to take the edge off irritability or anger, to foster a sense of camaraderie among the disparate group of people. And if he is no expert on culture (and doesn't pretend to be), Sexton is yet reminiscent of that mesmerizing czar of New York's not-for-profit theater, the late Joseph Papp. For, like the founder of the New York Shakespeare Festival, Sexton is a salesman, par excellence, of his "idea" and institution. He knows he's got the greatest thing in the world, and he's gonna button-hole, assault, cajole, and wear you down until you know it too. And if at first you don't agree with him, that's okay, he just hasn't done a good enough job of persuading you—yet.

With his students and faculty, Sexton can be—everyone says so—like a parish priest. As confidant and counselor, he is peerless, inclined, as he himself puts it, to "hear confessions" and impart advice, including no small amount of moral exhortation, with a helpfulness and zeal that are both legendary and unusual in the secular academy. "John gets this quizzical, almost surprised, look on his face while he's listening to you," a student in his civil procedure course said recently "as if he's not sure he grasps all of what you are saying—only he does. He seems bemused, but he isn't. When he speaks, he talks quickly and a lot, but he's helpful." A faculty colleague of Sexton's notes, "John is more expansive and discursive than articulate and concise, but he can also be dead-on cogent when he needs to be. He'll present all aspects of a subject, he'll summarize his opponents' viewpoints with a fairness they cannot reproach, but then, after all the praise and prefatory remarks and analysis, he'll bear in for the kill. When he gets to his point, watch out. It's not for nothing he was a national debating champ and coach when he was younger."

Though it is unusual for a law school dean to have a heavy teaching load (many do no teaching), Sexton teaches—and teaches. Indeed, he teaches more than many faculty who have no administrative responsibilities. This fall he is teaching three courses. "I draw energy from the students," Sexton says. "Being with them reminds me why we do everything else. They keep my eye on the ultimate goal. The students incarnate our possibilities." Even outside of class, Sexton spends a huge amount of time with students. His students congregate for casual hours in his office on Monday evenings—and the sessions often run past midnight. Students may raise any topic they like, except the day's lecture. Asked how he can spare so many hours for students and the classroom, Sexton replies, "I don't do the usual flag carrying, the external things. If you go back over my eleven years as dean, you could count on the fingers of one hand the number of black-tie dinners and dais-sittings I've done. I avoid events where I am introduced as a 'comma person' — you know, John Sexton, comma, dean of —." In short, if it isn't students, or meetings, or intellectual events, Dean Sexton is at home with his family.

Sexton at home differs little from Sexton in public. He is a paterfamilias who readily assumes tasks and responsibilities, from helping his daughter, Katie, 10, with her homework, to working out a solution to his aging mother-in-law's care needs. You wouldn't describe John as "uxorious" where his wife, Lisa Goldberg, is concerned (she, like her husband, is a Harvard-trained lawyer, and the executive vice president of the Charles H. Revson Foundation), but his devotion to her is such that the word passes through your mind. Home and hearth mean a great deal to John, and if "family" certainly starts with Lisa, Katie and grown son Jed, an actor, and Jed's wife, Danielle, it also includes others, for John and Lisa readily invite additions to the mishpocha. He enjoys contributing—he almost needs to contribute—to the sense of fulfillment and well-being of those around him.

A hedgehog in his devotion to one great idea, Sexton also is a hedgehog in the way he pursues it. The NYU Law dean hasn't the chameleon's morphing talent, and only some of the fox's canniness, but he is the exemplar of the persistent sell. Unlike any other leading law dean, Sexton, in service to his ideal, is not afraid to give himself away, to look ridiculous, to give everyone he talks to his or her full due—and maybe a little (actually, a lot) more—often at his own expense. Sexton readily refers to himself as "the P.T. Barnum of legal education," and if the listener actually goes away thinking "that is truly what this guy is," that's okay, as long as he or she has come to understand Sexton's "great idea" and agreed to serve it in some fashion.

In short, Sexton's is a personality that couldn't work for a standard academic mandarin, someone with a brittle ego or ticklish vanity. "Being John Sexton" requires too much self-confidence and idealism—above all too much ease with himself—for that. For only a man who knows who he is and who believes in his ideal will so willingly run the risk of being labeled "Crusader Babbitt," as a critic of Sexton recently described him.

Nowhere is Sexton's personality more, let's-say-it, profitable to NYU than in his job as fund-raiser. Like it or not—and no dean likes to admit it—fund-raising is the basis of the top job. It is necessary, if not sufficient; in legal terminology, it's dispositive—and it has been for decades.

Deans of professional schools hold a major trump card in raising money: they represent the school that graduated (read that, credentialed) the people to whom they are appealing. The appeal to alumni turns first and last on self-interest: helping us is helping yourself. This often works, but its success speaks less to the talents of the fund-seeker than it does to the motives of the potential donor.

John Sexton has raised a huge amount of money from NYU Law School's graduates, but he has raised still more from other sources. And he has done both less by appealing to self-interest than by stimulating interest in and commitment to ideas, and evoking collaboration in common causes and projects.

Chief Judge Edwards, a graduate of Harvard says, "John adds value to his appeal because he is able to convince people that they are an integral part of NYU's educational enterprise. He shows them how the law school will be a better place, better able to do its job, if they are a part of it, in this or that specific way or program. He's the first dean most people have met who has made a thought-out overture to them for their personalities, their ideas, their ongoing involvement, not just their money."

West Publishing's Dwight Opperman is a graduate of Drake University Law School, yet he has given millions of dollars to NYU. As he puts it: "I am approached all the time by people with their hands out. There are so many worthy causes and bright people to choose from. What John Sexton does better than anybody else I've ever met is to show me how I can be part of something original and interesting." Recently, for example, Opperman gave several hundred thousand dollars so that NYU could host the forum with President Clinton, Tony Blair and the other leaders.

Then, too, Sexton knows how to give even when he's not getting. A few months ago, the Las Vegas entrepreneur James Rogers was profiled in the New York Times for his record-setting gift of $115 million to his alma mater, the University of Arizona Law School. In the quest to make the best use of this generosity, Rogers and Arizona's law school dean, Joel Seligman, toured the country seeking advice from leaders at the nation's top law schools. In the end, Rogers asked Sexton to help them shape their plans. Why Sexton? Rogers says that he was impressed by NYU Law's "incredibly swift" rise in prominence: "It already has bested Harvard in some areas. It has great potential to get out in front and stay in front." And he was no less emphatic about "the spirit of the place." "The NYU people have high IQs and strong opinions, but they're united in their focus on being the best. They're a team."

On short notice, Sexton recently flew to Tucson for a weekend. In a series of intense discussions with Rogers, Seligman and the Arizona faculty, they discussed options for the University of Arizona Law School Foundation. (Sexton will be one of the seven members of the board.) He asked nothing for NYU, nor did he press Arizona to use NYU as a model. When asked, "What's in it for NYU?" Sexton responded: "That's an irrelevant consideration. Generosity like Jim's commands the sweat equity of everyone who cares about legal education and the law."

Rogers hasn't given a nickel to NYU Law school, but he's impressed with its dean. "John is generous and unself-seeking. He's genuine in his feelings. You know he means what he says. He isn't hidebound like a lot of academics can be. Some of the deans are caught up in their traditions and styles. But John is unfettered, in his imagination as much as his personality. They're all smart, of course, but John's inspiring, a true visionary. In his persuasiveness and energy level, he's above everyone else. You're ready to go out and conquer the world after a meeting with him."

When pressed, Sexton had little to say about his role as consigliere for Arizona, stressing only the generosity of Rogers' gift and the care that has gone into allocating it. As Judge Edwards puts it: "One of John's best traits is how self-effacing he is. He has no desire to come between someone else and the credit they deserve, or don't deserve. But he himself has big ideas that benefit people, and people know it. He has galvanized them in their self-interest and made them care."

MAKING NYU LAW SCHOOL THE BEST IT CAN BE

When Sexton took over as dean in the fall of 1988, the NYU law faculty already boasted more than a handful of men and women of great talent and considerable achievement. A few, such as Anthony Amsterdam, the criminal law scholar and renowned death penalty opponent, had national reputations. NYU's strengths as a law school were quadripolar: traditional meat and potatoes ("booklarnin'") curricula, clinical (practical) education, a developing cadre devoted to an interdisciplinary approach and a tradition of supplying legal talent to the public sector. In all these areas, the past decade has seen the law school advance both quantitatively and qualitatively.

The biggest advance has been the growth of its faculty. From the beginning of his tenure, Sexton told all who would listen that the key to making NYU the finest law school it could be would be using the faculty already at the school and the special notion of professional education articulated by the Enterprise to attract ever more outstanding scholar-teachers.

Since then, NYU's ability to attract brilliant lateral appointments has become legendary. In the last decade, the school snapped up nearly a score of celebrated scholars—names like Barry Adler (formerly of Virginia); Stephen Holmes (formerly of Chicago); Benedict Kingsbury (formerly of Duke); Larry Kramer (formerly of Michigan); Geoffrey Miller (formerly of Chicago); Daniel Shaviro (formerly of Chicago) Michael Schill (formerly of Pennsylvania); and Richard Stewart (formerly of Harvard). Moreover, NYU has made a conscious decision not to use outsized salaries to attract these top scholars—in other words, not to enter into the academic equivalent of what the sports world calls free agency. Instead, as Sexton puts it: "We seek to make ourselves irresistibly attractive to the people for whom we are right. If you want the benefits of the kind of reciprocal community the Enterprise has created, and if you are willing to undertake the obligations associated with that community, we want you, and we can offer you exactly what you want."

And let there be no doubt that the degree and kind of intellectual heat and light generated at NYU is doubtless a draw to faculty and students alike. A weekly bulletin informs the reader of an astonishing number of events, lectures, and meetings, usually animated by a vast array of eminent guests. Supreme Court Justices are regular visitors to NYU, as are their equivalents from foreign lands. So are leading corporate, labor, political and cultural leaders from the United States and abroad. As one faculty member put it: "Each week, there are two or three events here, any one of which would be the major intellectual event at most other schools."

A visiting professor summarized his recent year at NYU this way: "I've spent time at most of the leading law schools; simply put, none has the level of intellectual activity I found here." Another said, "Before I spent a semester here, I knew that NYU's faculty was among the very best in the country. What I didn't know was how much interaction there was among the faculty and students. I certainly didn't anticipate the steady flow of the leading thinkers and players in the law. It seems that everybody who is anybody in law either is at NYU, is about to be at NYU, or has just been at NYU."

Part of the extraordinary intellectual vitality of NYU can be captured in a word unfamiliar to an outsider—"colloquia." A colloquium is a specific and rigorous "meta-seminar" designed to engage faculty and students in demanding discourse at the most advanced level. Typically, a student's formal classroom time in one of the ten colloquia is divided between a session of several hours devoted to grilling a leader in the field (the "guest" participant) and an independent seminar session devoted to student work related to the week's topic. The distinction between teacher and student often dissolves in the colloquia, replaced by a joint pursuit of advanced study not only of the law but—more usually—of other disciplines as well. There are ten colloquia ranging from traditional topics such as "Legal History," "Constitutional Theory," and "Tax Policy," to the less expected "Law and Society" and Law, Philosophy and Political Theory." In short, interdisciplinary work is not only a priority, it is central—in no small part because the law school has an unusual number of world-class scholars from disciplines other than law—in fields ranging from economics, to politics, to philosophy, to psychology, to sociology. In fact, NYU Law School boasts one of the finest philosophy "departments" in the world, with Ronald Dworkin, Jurgen Habermas, Liam Murphy, Thomas Nagel, David Richards and Lawrence Sager all in residence. And Jerome Bruner, viewed by many as the father of cognitive psychology, is also at the law school.

The fact that Bruner is at NYU is itself a testament to creative thinking. Over the psychologist's protests that he "knew no law," the faculty brought him to NYU in 1992 to help the faculty and students analyze and understand legal cognition more profoundly. The a priori questions he studies, and which now valuably inform the general awareness of faculty and students not only at NYU but at other schools as well, include: "What does law presuppose about the function of the mind? How does the human penchant for categorization affect legal thinking? How do lawyers listen? Does stare decisis (the strength of precedent) apply to all human decision-making, not just legal?" This type of "meta" question is routine at NYU Law.

THE GLOBAL LAW SCHOOL INITIATIVE

There is another factor in the remarkable story of NYU's growth—a factor that has both helped to attract faculty and generated an unparalleled intellectual activity: the willingness to take risks. A common, if often rued, characteristic of most elite schools is that they tend to be conservative, risk-averse. As one dean candidly put it, "We change as slowly as an aircraft carrier turns." Such an approach is not the approach of NYU Law School. As Sexton puts it: "We embrace the positive doctrine of original sin. If we are not to be perfect in this life, we should seize our imperfection as an opportunity always to improve—to follow Martin Luther's advice to 'sin boldly.'" This led the National Law Journal to say about NYU in 1995: "NYU, already a powerhouse, has become the leader in innovation among elite law schools."

The best example of all is NYU's boldest gamble to date—what will turn out, incontrovertibly, to be the most extraordinary innovation of Sexton's tenure at the law school—NYU's Global Law School Initiative.

In proposing the initiative six years ago, Sexton and Norman Dorsen, the faculty member he calls the "father" of this venture, precipitated a revolution in legal education. Hailed today by many as the most significant step since Langdell developed the case method, the initiative is predicated on an inevitability of the next century, that the world will become smaller and increasingly interdependent. The importance of the rule of law as the basis of economic interdependence and the foundation of national and international human rights will become self-evident. As governments adopt legal systems based on the rule of law, more and more people will experience political and economic justice for the first time.

Taking globalization seriously means understanding that there are no significant legal or social problems today that are purely domestic—from labor standards and NAFTA to intellectual property and trade, to the impact of foreign creditors on domestic monetary policy.

NYU's faculty has long been interested in international issues, and its curriculum has reflected this. Its student body, composed of a high proportion of foreign students, have always been able to choose from array of traditional, clinical, and interdisciplinary courses offered by scholars in public and private international law, comparative law, international taxation and jurisprudence. But the Global Law School initiative is something different—subtler, grander, more challenging. It is not a program for the study of international or comparative law, it is about bringing a global perspective to every aspect of the study of law, leading to a new way of seeing and understanding not only law, but the world. Its central premise is that there is value in viewing and reviewing law and society from new vantage points; the more you widen the cultural-conceptual circle of discussants, the more the discussion widens, and the more likely it is that the overall fund of good ideas will grow.

Of the four major components of the Global Law School, the most important is the Global Law Faculty, a score of leading legal scholars and practitioners from around the world, who, though they retain their "day jobs," agree to come to Washington Square for a minimum of two months a year. The Global Faculty, which supplements and complements NYU's extraordinary American Faculty, represents six continents and eighteen nations and boasts the names of many of the planet's leading scholars: Sir John Baker, the eminent Cambridge University law historian and dean of Cambridge's law faculty; Upendra Baxi, vice chancellor of New Delhi University; Menachem Elon, retired deputy president of the Supreme Court of Israel; and Hisashi Owada, permanent representative of Japan to the United Nations, are just a few. These men and women are not "visiting professors" in the usual sense. They come in far greater numbers, are in residence longer, and they maintain a continuing relationship with NYU after they have returned to their home countries. Most return for second and third teaching and research stints at NYU. In Dorsen's words, "They are part of us, and we of them."

Fifty years ago, Arthur T. Vanderbilt saw the value of attracting students from abroad to the school, and he instituted a special program to bring experienced foreign lawyers to the school for a year of study. The Global Law School initiative takes Vanderbilt's notion to a new level. Stimulated in part by a $5 million gift from Rita and Gustave Hauser, NYU established what is now the world's premier legal scholarship program for foreign students, the Hauser Scholars Program. (Sir Robert Jennings, immediate past president of the World Court, has called it "the Rhodes Scholarship of Law.") Each year, a committee chaired by the president of the World Court chooses the finest young lawyers in the world and brings them to NYU. This has led others to come as well, and the result has been the creation of the most diverse student body anywhere: This academic year, there are more than 300 full-time students studying at the law school who are citizens of foreign countries; they come from almost three dozen countries and six continents.

Not surprisingly, the curriculum that flows from the Global Law School initiative goes well beyond supplementing a traditional American legal education with doses of comparative and international law. Mere supplementation would only reinforce the notion that foreign law is something peripheral, lurking on the outskirts of what a "good American lawyer" needs to know to ply his trade. Instead, NYU has forged a pedagogy and curriculum that give every student a deeper understanding of the global dimension of the life of a modern lawyer. Members of the Global Faculty teach a wide array of courses, including "basic" courses like dispute resolution, property or tax law, bringing new and critical thinking to fields that have long needed them.

The foreign students, too, bring different and important perspectives. As one American professor told me: "I was teaching Roe v. Wade (the abortion case) as usual when a female Chinese student asked me to use Justice Blackmun's decision to assess her government's policy which had required her to have an abortion. An American student never would have asked that wonderful question."

The Global School initiative has led NYU to create a broad range of inter-university agreements, institutes and centers designed to advance the global perspective. And the school's success with the program has generated conferences, forums and special events that have brought the world to NYU—and NYU to the world's attention. So, for example, a conference on the enforcement ability in domestic courts of judgments rendered by the array of new international tribunals brought three U.S. Supreme Court justices to NYU, where they spent three days in conversation with counterparts from around the world—using a set of papers prepared and presented by students as springboards for discussion. A conference on constitutional adjudication attracted U.S. Supreme Court Justices to Washington Square for four days of talks with twelve justices from the Constitutional Courts of Germany, Italy, and Russia.

And then there was last fall's day-long forum, "Strengthening Democracy in the Global Economy: An Opening Dialogue." There never had been an event like it at any university. The cast of participants was overwhelming. In a room packed with NYU's faculty and students, and before a world wide television and media audience (Ten networks were present and 350 journalists were credentialed), leaders grappled in genuine conversation with the need for new political and economic answers in a globalized world. When the capstone panel of the day (a two-hour reflection on the earlier discussions moderated by Dean Sexton and featuring the four heads of state) concluded with a look forward to the continuation of the dialogue under the auspices of the law school, it was clear that NYU Law had become the venue for a global conversation about law.

Successfully incorporating what Dorsen calls "the inevitable but only faintly understood globalization of law" is obviously a long-term proposition. So also is effecting the transformation of perspective that will change legal education. And everyone at NYU acknowledges that the Global Law School initiative faces challenges that will not be met easily—for instance, the difficulty of truly integrating foreign and American law students and faculty, day to day. Still, as First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton put it, it is now clear that "NYU Law School has arrived at a place where the rest of legal education will strive to be five or ten years from now."

A COMMUNITY WITH HEART . . .

When you ask Dorsen what he believes "excellence" in legal education is all about, the Stokes professor is quick to explain that, for him, it goes well beyond intellectual quality and attainment. The two additional factors Dorsen deems necessary—"and which have epitomized NYU Law School for me"—are "variety and heart." "Variety" of course refers to NYU's diversity, not only in gender and the social, ethnic, racial, and national backgrounds of its students and teachers, but also in the teaching styles and scholarly traditions, educational activities, programs, institutes, and opportunities; and, far from least, the array of legal and public vocations elected by graduates, far from all of whom go into corporate law.

As to "heart," this is "not a simple concept," Dorsen concedes, for all that it is absolutely pivotal. "Heart" is what it all rests on and serves—reputation, quality, prestige, success. It refers to judgement, morality, higher goals, and to the sense of community that comes with being united in a common pursuit. "Heart" is a fragile thing, "constantly at risk" in a world where "intense preoccupation" with individual pursuits easily drives out concern for public welfare and community values.

If you press members of the NYU Law School on this topic, "heart" (or some similar word or phrase) is what they answer to the questions of why they love the place and why it has fared so well. The challenge, beyond attracting faculty stars, the best students and terrific administrators, is to create an environment that is not only intellectually fulfilling but also socially congenial and inspiring to everyone. This is perhaps Sexton's most important contribution to NYU. With him as its catalytic stimulus, the law school has moved from the "independent contractor" model of an academic institution—with its competition and factionalism—to being what the dean, with his Jesuit education, loves to call "a communitas" of mutual collaboration and commitment.

As I looked at NYU Law 18 months after the publication of his profile of its dean, I again asked James Traub the question the New York Times had asked in the headline to his piece: "Is NYU's law school challenging Harvard's as the nation's best?" He replied: "Where NYU might beat even Harvard or Yale is as a place to be. NYU is ahead of everybody as a happy place. Law professors are notoriously critical and skeptical. They have trouble feeling part of any institution. You can feel the unease and the disarray at many of the best law schools in the country, but not at NYU."

As Richard Revesz, one of NYU's brightest young stars, says: "The possibilities in this place come together remarkably, combining individual freedom with the dean's sense of community. We have a pluralistic, not a homogeneous, community at NYU." His colleague, Stephen Holmes, a leading political theorist, formerly of the University of Chicago, puts it a little differently: "There is a poisonousness in academic life, and a degree of backbiting and professorial whining that are absent here. John's genius is creating opportunities for the faculty that take the edge of this tendency. He can take energies that can easily turn into mutual recrimination, energies that have done so in other places, and manage to make them productive. NYU is the least bitter institution I've worked at. There's a mutuality and purposiveness here. The administration makes it possible for each of us to do his or her best work without obsessing over our neighbor's advantage. No one seems to get a stomach-ache here because someone else is doing well."

When asked if that is due to a sense of community, Holmes says he doesn't especially like that word, but he affirms that "discussion at the law school mainly goes on, as in the colloquia, in a public setting. This is a very public-minded institution. It isn't dominated by the corridor setting and the gossip that that setting usually creates."

. . . and a dean with soul

At the drop of a very small pin, Sexton will expand warmly upon his current plans for the law school: to bring the global initiative to full fruition, to develop a curriculum for the 21st century that "addresses a broader range of the cognitive talents we in the law use in working with the law," to build the finest center in the world for research and teaching about law in order to ensure that law and lawyers are used to make our world better.

And—another bold idea—to make NYU tuition free. This last dream, especially close to his heart these days, would be funded partly by building the law school's endowment so that it generates more income and partly by a structured plan that will see NYU graduates who go into corporate law contributing back to the law school the tuition they never had to pay when they were law students. As president of the Association of American Law Schools—legal education's oldest and most distinguished collectivity—Sexton was remorseless in advocating his idea that practicing lawyers should contribute 1% of their income over $50,000 to the law school from which they graduated. "It is imperative," Sexton says, "to reduce the enormous debt our graduates incur to pay for their education." (It is not unusual for a student to graduate with $120,000 in law-school-related debt.) He continues: "If we do not reduce their debt, they will be forced to choose income over service."

Where did all these ideas come from? When asked, Sexton will remind you of Arthur Vanderbilt's hopes, of the dreams of "the Enterprise," and of Dorsen's expansive notion of "heart." But, too, he speaks of "the Tocquevillian ideal of the law," infusing that ideal with his own insights, as he did in a recent "President's column" in the newsletter of the Association of American Law Schools:

"From the beginning America has been a society based on law and forged by lawyers; for us, the law has been the great arbiter and the principal means by which we have been able to knit one nation out of a people whose dominant characteristic always has been our diversity. Just as the law has been the means for founding, defining, preserving, reforming and democratizing a united America, America's lawyers have been charged with setting the nation's values. Unlike other countries, America has no unifying religion or ethnicity; our principle of unification is law."

Least this be heard as after-dinner boiler plate, or, worse, an attempt to promote self-satisfaction in his audience, Sexton is quick to point to the historical irony that the American Constitution is becoming a model for nations that have never known the rule of law, precisely at a time "when we in America are becoming more humble about how much we don't know, how much we haven't managed to get right."

Sexton's high-minded idealism, some have noted, is suffused and informed by an Irish-Catholic religiousness lurking just below the surface of his energy, as between the words of all his speeches. It often leads him to enunciate strange definitions in the tin ears of a secular age. "Legal research," in the Sextonian reading, becomes "serious thinking about the 'ought' of the law, not the parody evoked by the phrase 'yet another law review article.'" Where most are content to speak of law as a profession, Sexton lovingly dubs it "a vocation, a deep calling, that governs or ought to govern our professional lives."

It is in this elucidation of ideals and the moral exhortation with which they are pressed home that Sexton is most himself. The single-mindedness of his dedication to his cause permits him more leeway than others allow themselves. As Chief Judge Harry Edwards puts it, "People with true values and beliefs have a big head start in any conversation." The school's former Board chair,

Martin Lipton, who recently became chair of the university's Board, adds, "Anyone who knows or works with John soon realizes that he is a man not only of vision but of complexity, a man whose drive toward meaning is not encompassed or summed up by the standard references of the academic marketplace: prestige, rankings, or VIPs."

A friend of the Sexton family, the writer and literary scholar Peter Pitzle, recalling John's original vocation as a professor of religion, puts it another way: "I would set John in the historic context of Americans who have worked to create an institution—a corporate body—that in some strange way is, or seeks to be, sanctified. I think it is this drive to sacralize that really animates what John is doing." He adds, "Though genius and genial are etymologically related, in life they rarely are. It seems to me that—rare though the combination is—John is both."

Another friend of Sexton's, and his colleague to boot, Richard Revesz recalls one of the biggest bestsellers of the early 1980s, a novel written by a professor of his at Princeton. In The Vicar of Christ, Walter Murphy tells the story of an American law school dean who ends up as Pope. Notes Revesz, with a smile, "Every time John starts out a conversation saying to me, 'Let me be your pastor, Ricky, tell me what's on your mind,' I think to myself of Murphy's novel and I wonder . . ."

TRIBUTE TO LILLIAN A. HART

• Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to the late Lillian A. Hart, a committed public servant and devoted wife, mother and grandmother, who bravely battled cancer in the last several months of her life.

Lillian has made it easy for us to remember her—she has left behind an impressive list of accomplishments that most people only hope to achieve in their lifetime. Lillian was a leader in the community and a role model for many women. She was a pioneer, exploring occupations and civic positions women had never held before.

Lillian was the first woman to be the state executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Kentucky, her most recent public position. Lillian served Kentucky in this capacity from 1981 to 1989, and received a national award in 1987, for her work on behalf of farmers and all Kentuckians.

Before Lillian became state executive director, she was also the first woman to be appointed a district director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. She served 19 Northern Kentucky counties as district director for 12 years, including in her home county of Pendleton.

Lillian was active in her community, once serving as president of the Pendleton County Republican Women's Club and being chosen as a delegate to the Republican National Convention. She also founded a chapter of Habitat for Humanity in Pendleton County, and was a member of the Kincaid Regional Theatre board of directors.

I am certain that the legacy of excellence that Lillian Hart has left will continue on, and will encourage and inspire others. Hopefully it will be a comfort to the family and friends she leaves behind to know that her efforts to better the community will be felt for years to come. On behalf of myself and my colleagues, we offer our deepest condolences to Lillian's loved ones, and express our gratitude for all she contributed to Pendleton County, the State of Kentucky, and to our great Nation.●

TRIBUTE TO MEG GREENFIELD

• Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to reflect on the passing of a truly remarkable woman: Washington Post Editorial Page Editor Meg Greenfield. A tough, tenacious and trail-blazing woman, Ms. Greenfield had a sharp intellect, a vibrant sense of humor, and a keen political instinct.

Meg Greenfield was at the center of many of Washington's intellectual, cultural and political developments in the past three decades. Her fiercely independent eye for news gave her the ability to cultivate relationships with individuals from every political, cultural and economic background. Her insightful portraits of life in our nation's capital were profound and memorable.

Ms. Greenfield forever changed the access and acceptance women have in the field of journalism. She astutely examined tough issues such as global disarmament and international affairs which were traditionally seen as "male" issues. She commanded respect and demanded fairness and impartiality from her staff.

In 1978, Ms. Greenfield moved the world with her commentary on issues of international affairs, civil rights and the press. For her efforts she claimed the much coveted Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing. One year later, she moved into the post of Editor for the Washington Post editorial page. A responsibility she undertook with dignity, grace, a keen wit and what she would call "the sensibility of 1950s liberals—conservative on foreign policy and national defense, but liberal on social issues" for over 20 years.

For these and many other reasons I admired Meg Greenfield and her vastly important work. She also played a critical role in my own career. When I ran for the United States Senate, I met with the Washington Post editorial board, and I had heard about the tough, no-nonsense Meg Greenfield. I was very impressed with her, and she believed in me and my ideas for Maryland.

The endorsement I received from the Washington Post in the 1986 Democratic primary was a turning point in the campaign. I was running against two very good friends of mine: the terrific Congressman from Montgomery County, Mike Barnes, and Maryland's Governor Harry Hughes. The confidence and support I received from Meg Greenfield and the Post editorial board gave me pride and momentum, and helped lead me to victory.

Meg Greenfield's colleagues at the editorial page wrote the day after her death, "The anonymity typical of editorial pages could not disguise the hand of Meg Greenfield. As a writer her work was often instantly recognizable . . . for its felicity and stateliness and not least for its wry and mischievous humor. As an editor she imprinted her special blend of a wise skepticism and a reach for the public good on a long generation of Post editorials." In this tribute, they describe not only her as the consummate professional, but as the wonderful and caring woman that she was.

Meg Greenfield will be dearly missed in the many circles of Washington life. Her spirit and legacy will inspire us for years to come.●

FREEMEN PROSECUTION AWARD

• Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I am pleased to come to the floor to honor a Department of Justice team that is receiving the top prosecution award today at Constitution Hall. This team of 12 prosecutors and investigators was faced with the challenging task of bringing LeRoy Schweitzer, Richard Clark, Daniel Petersen, Rodney Skurdal, Dale Jacobi, Russell Landers, and others, known as the "Freemen," to justice.

As you may remember, the Montana Freemen were a group of individuals who refused to recognize any authority by U.S. officials. Instead, they created their own "republic" and court system. After warrants were prepared for multiple counts of fraud, armed robbery, and firearms violations, they holed up on their ranch for 81 days in a tense standoff. The team recognized today were critical in preparing the warrants, negotiating the peaceful resolution of the standoff, and convicting twenty-one members of the group. In addition, this team worked with many other prosecution teams to prepare and present related cases in over thirty federal districts.

It makes me especially proud that there were seven Montanans among the group being recognized. They are Assistant U.S. Attorney James Seykora, Paralegal Specialist Deborah Boyle, IRS Special Agents Michael Mayott and Loretta Rodriguez, FBI Senior Resident Agent Daniel Vierthaler, FBI Special Agent Randall Jackson, and Montana Department of Justice Agent Bryan Costigan. I also appreciate the contribution of Robertson Park, George Toscas, David Kris, Tommie Canady, and Timothy Healy as award winners contributing from agencies outside of the state. I also think it's only appropriate to recognize the investigation and prosecution leader, Montana U.S. Attorney Sherry Matteucci. Although this entire prosecution effort fell under her responsibility, as a political appointee, she is not eligible for this award.

The Attorney General's Award for Exceptional Service is given once each year, with the decision based upon the following: performance of a special service in the public interest that is over and above the normal requirements and of an outstanding and distinctive character in terms of improved operations, public understanding of the department's mission, or accomplishment of one of the major goals of the department, exceptionally outstanding contributions to the Department of Justice or exceptionally outstanding leadership in the administration of major programs that resulted in highly successful accomplishments to meet unique or emergency situations, or extraordinary courage and voluntary risk of life in performing an act resulting in direct benefits to the department or nation. From where I sit, this team has met or exceeded all of these high standards during the course of the investigation. Few other prosecutions have received the external scrutiny in the press, Justice management, and the public eye as did the Freeman prosecution. A terrific amount of juggling priorities and concerns was necessary to pull off a peaceful resolution of this crisis. Their conviction record on this case was solid, and will likely be the model from any similar situations in the future.

So, it gives me great pleasure to bring our attention to this team's success, and I add my thanks for a job well done. We wish them nothing but continued success as they move on to other jobs within their home agencies. Again, congratulations on this great, well-deserved honor.●

BEATRIZ RIVAS ROGALSKI

● Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise to salute my Deputy Chief of Staff, Beatriz (Bea) Rivas Rogalski, on the occasion of her upcoming retirement after 25 years of distinguished service to the people of the United States. As director of casework in my House and Senate offices for more than 16 years, she has helped literally thousands of Californians get the timely assistance they need from their federal government. As Deputy Chief of Staff, she is beloved by staff members and constituents alike.

Bea began her public service as I did, in the office of then-Congressman John Burton. In 1974, Bea Rivas was a recent immigrant from El Salvador. While working at Macy's department store in San Francisco, she took a second part-time job to help support her mother.

Bea went to work in John Burton's campaign office on a temporary basis as a key-punch operator. Given a six-month project, Bea completed it in two months. Following the election, she went to work as a staff assistant in Congressman Burton's district office, answering phones and tracking bills. Her diligence and demeanor quickly impressed her supervisors, who promoted her to case worker.

It was a perfect fit. She quickly learned the most arcane workings of government and did her utmost to help constituents negotiate the shoals of bureaucracy.

Bea has what it takes to help people get their due from their government. She is kind, considerate, generous, and above all patient. I cannot overstate how she always listens carefully, always acts diligently, always goes the extra mile to take care of constituents' needs. She is incomparable and irreplaceable. She will also be irreplaceable.

Mr. President, by serving the people of California so well, Beatriz Rogalski has brought honor on this institution and the United States Government. I hope you will join me in thanking her and sending best wishes to her, her husband Hans Rogalski, and their son Hans, Jr.●

TRIBUTE TO HITCHINER MANUFACTURING COMPANY

● Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President I rise today to pay tribute to Hitchiner Manufacturing Co., Inc. for receiving Business NH Magazine's 1999 Business of the Year Award.

Since the company moved to Milford, New Hampshire in 1951, Hitchiner has been extremely active within the community. Hitchiner supports the community through contributions to the arts, education, and community welfare. Specifically, they offer much-needed dollars to local and state nonprofits and they make time available for their employees to participate in community affairs. Hitchiner President/CEO, John Morison III, believes when employees work in the community their experiences will translate into a positive experience for the company as a whole.

In addition to being involved in community affairs, Hitchiner Manufacturing is a leader in technology. The company is an international player for investment castings for customers such as General Motors, BMW and General Electric. Hitchiner will soon acquire their tenth patent, thereby establishing themselves as the leader in metallurgical advances.

Hitchiner's profit sharing philosophy has helped create a spirit of team work among its employees. President Morison believes that by sharing the profits and risks, of working as a team, the company will be better equipped to stay on the cutting edge of technology—this is the key to future success.

Mr. President, I salute Hitchiner Manufacturing Company, Inc. and commend their president, John Morison, for his innovative ideas and spirit of community. It is an honor to represent them in the United States Senate.●

SOUTH CAROLINA PEACHES

● Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize South Carolina's peach farmers for their hard work and their delicious peaches.

My staff has been delivering South Carolina peaches to offices throughout the Senate and the U.S. Capitol all day. Thanks to South Carolina peach farmers, those of us here in Washington will be able to cool off from the summer heat with delicious South Carolina peaches.

For a relatively small state, South Carolina is second in the nation in peach production. In fact, this year farmers across South Carolina planted more than 16,000 acres of peaches. As my colleagues can attest, these are some of the finest peaches produced anywhere in the United States.

As we savor the taste of these South Carolina peaches, we should remember the work and labor that goes into producing such a delicious fruit. While Americans enjoy peaches for appetizers, entrees, and desserts, most do not stop to consider where they come from. Farmers will be laboring all summer in the heat and humidity to bring us what we call the "perfect candy." What else curbs a sweet tooth—is delicious, nutritious, and satisfying, but not fattening? The truth is, Mr. President, that our farmers are too often the forgotten workers in our country. Through their dedication and commitment, our nation is able to enjoy a wonderful selection of fresh fruit, vegetables, and other foods. In fact, our agricultural system, at times, is the envy of the world.

Mr. President, as Senators and their staff feast on these delicious peaches, I hope they will remember the people in South Carolina who made this endeavor possible: David Winkles and the entire South Carolina Farm Bureau; and the South Carolina Peach Council. They have all worked extremely hard to ensure that the Senate gets a taste of South Carolina.

I hope everyone in our Nation's Capitol will be smiling as they enjoy the pleasure of South Carolina peaches.●

TRIBUTE TO TOM RECHTIN, SR.

● Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a fine Kentucky businessman, Tom Rehtin, Sr., President of Tom Rehtin Heating, Air Conditioning and Electric Company.

Tom was recently named "1999 Outstanding Business Person" by the Northern Kentucky Chamber of Commerce for his community leadership and 35 years of education advocacy. The honor was given as part of the A.D. Albright awards program, which is named for Northern Kentucky University's president emeritus, who was known for encouraging educational excellence in the region.

The Albright Award recognizes Tom's commitment to supporting and encouraging educational activities in the workplace and in the community. His own company serves as a model for his philosophy, as his employees attend and participate in numerous classes and seminars he facilitates. Tom Rehtin's company also employs student interns who are seeking certification.

Tom was also recently named the "1998 National Contractor of the Year" by the National Association of Plumbing, Heating and Cooling Contractors, and "Kentucky Contractor of the Year" by the Kentucky Association of Plumbing, Heating and Cooling Contractors.

Tom began working in the industry after high school and, over the years, moved through the ranks from an entry-level position to eventually owning his own company. Today, Tom is one of the most well-known and well-respected businessmen in the state, with over 12,000 customers in Northern Kentucky, Eastern Indiana, and Southern Ohio.

Tom is a three-time appointee by the Governor to the Kentucky HVAC Licensing Board, which oversees the licensing and continuing education programs for the state's HVAC journeymen and Master License holders. He has been an example to board members and the entire industry by implementing his own rigorous employee training programs. His leadership and success in the field is one of the reasons Tom has been named Vice President of the Kentucky HVAC Licensing Board.

My colleagues and I congratulate you, Tom, on your recent accomplishments and commend your many years of service to Northern Kentucky's business community. Best wishes for many years of continued success.

Mr. President, I ask that the following Campbell County Recorder article from June 17, 1999, be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

[From the Campbell County Recorder, June 17, 1999]

CHAMBER ANNOUNCES ALBRIGHT WINNERS
TOM RECHTIN

This year's Outstanding Business Person recipient, Tom Rehtin, has been a community leader, role model and an advocate for education for more than 35 years. Rehtin has used his personal and professional experience, knowledge and ability to include others to advance the educational system and consequently the economy in Northern Kentucky.

This recipient of the Albright Award encourages employees to attend certification classes, participate in seminars and get involved in company educational programs. He provides tuition assistance for employees and currently employs four student interns who are seeking certification.

He supports education within his company and is an educational advocate in the community. Coupled with Cincinnati Public Schools, he helped found the first apprenticeship and continuing education program in the Tristate. Along with the Northern Kentucky Home Builders Association, he helped develop the first heating and cooling apprenticeship program in Northern Kentucky, and as chairman of the apprenticeship committee, he continues to develop new programs and lead efforts to fund the program.

Further, Rehtin is a member of the Kentucky State Licensing Board, serves on a Citizens Task Force aimed at evaluating and improving Bellevue Schools, and founded SMART TECH—a class that is offered at NKU annually to journeymen to meet state licensing requirements. Most recently, he sought to carry out a federal School-To-Work federal initiative promoting schools and businesses to share knowledge and develop practical curriculums for students entering the workforce.

Outside of his work with education and his company, he is a member of the Chamber of Commerce's Workforce Readiness Council, a Master with the Boy Scouts of America, an athletic sponsor with the Bellevue Vets, a member of the Bellevue Renewal Committee and a council member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

The Chamber of Commerce is the largest volunteer business organization in Northern Kentucky. It works to encourage and promote economic well being, quality growth and community development for both Northern Kentucky and the region.●

TRI-CITIES, TN-VA: 1999 RECIPIENT OF THE ALL-AMERICA CITY AWARD

● Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, when our Founding Fathers began their fight for our Nation's independence, they had a vision of what America would be like. They saw a free and self-reliant people, ruled by State and local governments, who took responsibility for their own welfare and progress, and cared for themselves and for others in their own communities.

When Alexis de Tocqueville came to America almost a century later, that is what he saw. He later wrote that, in America, when a citizen saw a problem that needed solving, he would cross the street and discuss it with a neighbor, together the neighbors would form a committee, and before long the problem would be solved. "You may not believe this," he said, "but not a single bureaucrat would ever have been involved."

While today our citizens are increasingly ruled, not by local governments, but by Washington, the essence of what it means to be an American has not changed: We are a people willing to lend a hand, lift a spirit, and work together to make our land a better place.

For 50 years, the All-America City Awards have designated—from among all the cities in America—10 communities that have carried on this time-honored tradition and kept the spirit of America alive. And I'm proud to say that among this year's winners is Tri-Cities, TN-VA, a place our founding fathers would recognize as a fulfillment of their vision of what a free people, living and working together, can accomplish.

Among the criteria by which all participants were judged were citizen involvement, effective government performance, philanthropic and volunteer resources, a strong capacity for cooperation, and community vision and pride. And, Tri-Cities—the first-ever region to be so honored by this award—possesses those qualities in spades.

Included in the presentation which tipped the judges' decision in their favor were their efforts to involve youth in the decision-making process; improve health care in isolated communities and create an interest in rural medicine among future physicians; and celebrate and preserve the Appalachian region's oral and musical traditions. And they did it all without government handouts or mandates from Washington. Their message, set to the sound of bluegrass music: we are willing to work; we are willing to lead.

I think the song, written by a local storyteller and sung by all the Tri-Cities delegates, says it all:

If you call, we will answer;

If you need us, we will come.

We'll lend a hand—there's strength in numbers;

If we work together, we can get it done.

Mr. President, on behalf of all the people of Tennessee, and all Americans everywhere, I congratulate the citizens of Tri-Cities, Tennessee-Virginia for their accomplishment. Not only they, but all of us, are winners because of their efforts.●

CLEVELAND SCHOLARSHIP AND TUTORING PROGRAM

● Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, today I rise to recognize the achievements of the Cleveland Scholarship and Tutoring Program. Now in its third school year, this program, which is one of only two school choice experiments in the country, continues to offer hope and promise to nearly 3,700 inner city children and their parents by making private schools, including religious schools, affordable. I have been a long-time supporter of the Scholarship Program, as well as the school choice concept in general. Believing that competition fosters improvement, I made the implementation of this pilot school scholarship plan one of my education reform priorities by signing a 2-year budget package that included $5 million for the introduction of the program in 1995.

The Cleveland Scholarship Program is the first of its kind in the country that offers state-funded scholarships for use at both secular and religious private schools, giving low-income students access to an otherwise unattainable private school education in Cleveland, where schools graduate a mere 36 percent of its high school seniors. In September of 1996, during its first school year, the program provided scholarships to approximately 1,855 students for the public, private, or religious school of their choice. Recent growth of the program's budget enabled the parents of nearly 3,700 students to use vouchers to enroll in 59 participating area schools during the 1998-1999 school year.

Two separate studies by Harvard University on the Cleveland Scholarship Program found parents of voucher recipients were more satisfied with many aspects of their school than were parents of students in Cleveland public schools. That satisfaction included the school's academic program, school safety, school discipline, teacher skills, the teaching of moral values, and class size. A separate study found that test score results in mathematics and reading show substantial gains for Cleveland Scholarship Program students attending the Hope schools, two non-secular schools which were created in response to the establishment of the program. Additionally, parents of voucher recipients reported lower levels of disruption in their child's school—including fighting, racial conflict, and vandalism.

The results of these studies further underscore the success of this program. Time and again, data and surveys from the state have confirmed the Cleveland Scholarship Program meets the one true test of any taxpayer-supported program—it works. Although the program is not without its critics, I believe the best way to put these criticisms to rest is to continue demonstrating the program's effectiveness in Cleveland as we continue to look beyond the conventional and pursue creative and imaginative approaches to education.

I applaud the achievements of the Cleveland Scholarship Program and its contributions to the education of our children, and am proud to say that my hometown serves as a model for the rest of the Nation. ●

TRIBUTE TO CHRISTOPHER R. ROVZAR ON BEING NAMED PRESIDENTIAL SCHOLAR

● Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Christopher R. Rovzar, of Exeter, New Hampshire, for being selected as a 1999 Presidential Scholar by the U.S. Secretary of Education.

Of the over 2.5 million graduating seniors nationwide, Christopher is one of only 141 seniors to receive this distinction for academics. This impressive young man is well-deserving of the title of Presidential Scholar. I wish to commend Christopher for his outstanding achievement.

As a student at Phillips Exeter Academy in New Hampshire, Christopher has served as a role model for his peers through his commitment to excellence. Christopher's determination promises to guide him in the future.

It is certain that Christopher will continue to excel in his future endeavors. I wish to offer my most sincere congratulations and best wishes to Christopher. His achievements are truly remarkable. It is an honor to represent him in the United States Senate. ●

IN RECOGNITION OF REAR ADMIRAL LEONARD VINCENT, SUPPLY CORPS, U.S. NAVY

● Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I recognize and honor Rear Admiral Leonard Vincent, U.S. Navy as he retires upon completion of 32 years of service to the Navy, The Department of Defense and the Nation.

Born in Tulsa, Oklahoma, a graduate of McAlester High School, Oklahoma he enlisted in the Navy Reserve in 1961. He graduated from Southeastern State College, Durant, Oklahoma, in 1965 and received his commission as a Ensign in the Navy Supply Corps that same year. In 1976 he receive his Masters in Business Administration from George Washington University.

A distinguished professional, Admiral Vincent currently commands the Defense Systems Management College (DSMC). As the Commandant of DSMC, he has been a leader of change agents for acquisition reform. And he has brought a wealth of acquisition, logistics, and contract management experience to the vital task of training our nation's Department of Defense Acquisition Workforce.

Afloat he has served as the Supply Officer of an amphibious ship, the USS Pensacola (LSD 38) and the Supply Officer of a submarine tender, the USS Dixon (AS 37).

Ashore his assignments have included duty as Supply Officer with Naval Special Warfare Group and with Naval Inshore Warfare Command, Atlantic, both in Little Creek, Virginia.

His varied acquisition assignments include Director of Contracts, Naval Supply Center, Puget Sound; Contracting Officer for the Supervisor, Shipbuilding and Repair, Bath, Maine; Director of the Combat Systems department and Director of the Contracts department at the Navy's inventory control point, Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania; Assistant Commander for Contracts, Naval Air Systems Command; Deputy Director for Acquisition for the Defense Logistics Agency; and prior to his current assignment, RADM Vincent was the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, Fleet Supply and Ordnance, Pacific Fleet.

In addition to his current assignment, his command tours have included Commander, Defense Contract Administration Services Region, Los Angeles, California; Commander, Defense Contract Management Command International, Dayton, Ohio; and Commander, Contract Management Command, Washington, D.C.

Throughout his career Admiral Vincent has displayed exemplary performance of duty, extraordinary initiative and leadership, keen judgment, and dedication to the highest principles of devotion to his country. He leaves the military and the acquisition community better by having served them. His contributions will have lasting consequence.

Mr. President, Leonard Vincent, his wife Shirley and their three children, Lori, Tiffany and Stephen have made many sacrifices during his 32 year Navy career. A man of his leadership, enthusiasm and integrity is rare and while his honorable service will be genuinely missed, it gives me great pleasure today to recognize him before my colleagues and wish to him "Fair Winds and Following Seas" as he brings to a close a long and distinguished career in the United States Naval Service.

I ask that an article and narrative on Rear Admiral Vincent be printed in the RECORD.

The article and narrative follows:

REAR ADMIRAL LEONARD VINCENT—COMMANDANT, DEFENSE SYSTEMS MANAGEMENT COLLEGE

Rear Admiral Leonard "Lenn" Vincent became the Commandant Defense Systems Management College (DSMC), Fort Belvoir, Virginia, in January 1998. The College is a graduate-level institution that promotes sound systems-management principles by the acquisition workforce through education, research, consulting, and information dissemination.

Admiral Vincent entered the Naval Reserve program as a sea-man recruit in October 1961. Upon graduation from Southeastern State Teachers College in Oklahoma, he received a commission in July 1965 from the Officers Candidate School, Newport, Rhode Island, as an ensign in the Supply Corps, U.S. Navy.

Since returning to the Navy in 1970, RADM Vincent's wide variety of afloat and shore-based assignments have provided him extensive contracting, contract management, and logistics experience.

Afloat he has served as the Supply Officer of an amphibious ship, the USS PENSACOLA (LSD 38) and the Supply Officer of a submarine tender, the USS DIXON (AS 37).

Ashore his assignments have included duty as Supply Officer with Naval Special Warfare Group and with Naval Inshore Warfare Command, Atlantic, both in Little Creek, Virginia. He attended the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Virginia; and then in Washington, D.C., he earned a Masters in Business Administration from George Washington University.

His varied acquisition assignments include Director of Contracts, Naval Supply Center, Puget Sound; Contracting Officer for the Supervisor, Shipbuilding and Repair, Bath, Maine; Director of the Combat Systems department and Director of the Contracts department at the Navy's inventory control point, Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania; Assistant Commander for Contracts, Naval Air Systems Command; Deputy Director for Acquisition for the Defense Logistics Agency; and prior to his current assignment, RADM Vincent was the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, Fleet Supply and Ordnance, Pacific Fleet.

In addition to his current assignment as Commandant, DSMC, his command tours have included Commander, Defense Contract Administration Services Region, Los Angeles, Contract Administration Services Region, Los Angeles, California; Commander, Defense Contract Management Command International, Dayton, Ohio; and Commander, Contract Management Command, Washington, D.C.

His military decorations include the Defense Superior Service Medal with gold star, Legion of Merit with gold star, Defense Meritorious Service Medal, Meritorious Service Medal with three gold stars, Navy Commendation Medal, and Navy Achievement Medal.

NARRATIVE

Rear Admiral Vincent distinguished himself by exceptionally outstanding achievement throughout thirty two years of service culminating in his distinguished performance as Commandant of the Defense Systems Management College (DSMC) from 30 December 1997 to 31 July 1999.

Admiral Vincent exhibited extensive knowledge, technical competence, tireless energy, imagination, and superb leadership.

As Commandant, he focused the College on improvements essential for the entire Department of Defense Acquisition Workforce (AWF), and dramatically improved the quality and greatly expanded the scope of their education and training. During his tenure, student throughput increased by nearly five percent, greatly helping the military departments to meet the formal acquisition education requirements that public law imposed on all major system program managers. These achievements are all the more remarkable because they were accomplished during a period when DSMC funding decreased by over seven percent, and personnel by over 11 percent.

Admiral Vincent also successfully focused the exceptional capabilities of the College's staff and faculty on meeting the rapidly changing needs of the acquisition workforce. Upon assuming command of DSMC, he led the College's senior leadership through the development of a corporate plan that set the course into the new millennium for the education and training of acquisition professionals. This dynamic plan provided the foundation for DSMC operations and outlined a series of strategic goals, objectives, and metrics that guided the College through the efficient accomplishment of its four-pronged mission of providing education and training, research, consulting, and information dissemination. He successfully challenged the College to achieve these improvements, while maintaining the highest quality of support available to the acquisition workforce.

Anticipating the need to achieve a cultural transformation within the acquisition community, Admiral Vincent encouraged the students, staff, and faculty at DSMC to become change agents and instilled in them a sense of urgency to keep up the momentum of Acquisition Reform. He directed the assessment and revision of over thirty DSMC-sponsored courses to reflect the latest changes, ensuring that Acquisition Reform initiatives are seamlessly threaded throughout the 12 functional areas. To further enrich the learning environment, he spearheaded the effort to recruit students from industry, bringing a commercial business perspective into every classroom—he served as the catalyst to stimulate partnering with industry and effective teaming within program offices. Beginning with the students, staff, and faculty at DSMC, he successfully developed a cultural mindset that would revolutionize the way DoD approaches its business affairs—embracing best practices, empowering the workforce, and achieving optimal solutions at the lowest costs.

In a push to constantly improve the quality of integrated courses, Admiral Vincent created the Acquisition Management Curriculum Enhancement Program (AMCEP) to seamlessly integrate the Acquisition Management Functional Board requirements with the Defense Acquisition University (DAU) course development and delivery processes. The result was a continuous evolutionary process that facilitated and improved the current integrated acquisition management curriculum. The enhancement effort created a learning environment characterized by a problem-based learning curriculum which replicated to the highest possible fidelity actual problems the graduates would likely encounter in their subsequent assignments.

Additionally, to further improve the efficiency at DSMC, Admiral Vincent consolidated all information/automation systems enhancement efforts at the College under the Chief Information/Knowledge Officer. By concentrating the information technology activities under one person, Admiral Vincent effectively orchestrated the consolidation of automated systems requirements, significantly reducing costs and making educational information widely available to internal and external customers. Under Admiral Vincent's guidance, the College underwent the process of standardizing the automation equipment in each classroom and upgrading the server infrastructure, along with video tele-conference capability, to better support distance learning conversion efforts of DSMC courses. This initiative, while minimizing costs to infuse information technology capability, not only improved the students' learning environment, but also made acquisition education and training more accessible to the workforce.

Admiral Vincent also provided the thrust behind the development of the Integrated Curriculum Environment (ICE) database, an automated, centralized management system for DSMC courseware and supporting documentation. This standardized curriculum management tool will significantly simplify the course revision process, and eventually, will make course materials available electronically to all students and accessible by all graduates. Through his active leadership and visionary foresight of the information revolution, Admiral Vincent launched DSMC—and acquisition education and training—into the 21st Century, guiding the College through the transformation process of becoming the acquisition workforce's Center for Continuous Learning.

Admiral Vincent further improved the stature of DSMC as the Department of Defense world-class center for international acquisition education excellence. Under his leadership, DSMC co-sponsored the 10th Annual International Defense Educational Arrangement (IDEA) seminar with France and hosted the 11th IDEA seminar in the United States—a fifteen-nation symposium on Intra-European and Transatlantic armaments cooperation. Additionally, Admiral Vincent initiated the first IDEA Pacific seminar with the Australian Defense Force Academy, providing eight nations of the Pacific Rim with a forum for exchange of acquisition best practices. With the growing emphasis on international cooperation, the College also hosted biannual international acquisition forums for DUSD (International Programs) and the Services international program offices. As the principal U.S. representative to IDEA, Admiral Vincent provided the leadership and facilitated international cooperation, significantly advancing the understanding and effectiveness of international cooperative acquisition issues among participating nations.

His distinguished career included additional command tours as Commander, Defense Contract Administration Services Region, Los Angeles; Commander, Defense Contract Management Command International; Deputy Director for Acquisition Management and Commander, Defense Contract Management Command, Defense Logistics Agency.

Throughout the period of his assignment as Commandant, DSMC, and his thirty-two-year career, Admiral Vincent displayed exemplary performance of duty, extraordinary initiative and leadership, keen judgment, and dedication to the highest principles of devotion to his country. He leaves the Defense Systems Management College and the acquisition community better by having served them. His personal dedication has been solely responsible for numerous contributions of lasting consequence, which will enhance the ability of each Service to accomplish its mission better, now and in the future. His exceptional performance in extremely important and challenging positions has been in keeping with the highest traditions of the Service and reflects great credit upon himself, the United States Navy, and the Department of Defense.●

AND RELATED EXPENSES

For necessary expenses of construction, repair, alteration, and improvement of facilities, $4,923,000, to remain available until expended.

GENERAL PROVISIONS—DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

SEC. 110. Any obligation or expenditure by the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with law enforcement activities of a Federal agency or a Department of the Treasury law enforcement organization in accordance with 31 U.S.C. 9703(g)(4)(B) from unobligated balances remaining in the Fund on September 30, 2000, shall be made in compliance with reprogramming guidelines.

SEC. 111. Appropriations to the Department of the Treasury in this Act shall be available for uniforms or allowances therefor, as authorized by law (5 U.S.C. 5901), including maintenance, repairs, and cleaning; purchase of insurance for official motor vehicles operated in foreign countries; purchase of motor vehicles without regard to the general purchase price limitations for vehicles purchased and used overseas for the current fiscal year; entering into contracts with the Department of State for the furnishing of health and medical services to employees and their dependents serving in foreign countries; and services authorized by 5 U.S.C. 3109.

SEC. 112. The funds provided to the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms for fiscal year 2000 in this Act for the enforcement of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act shall be expended in a manner so as not to diminish enforcement efforts with respect to section 105 of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act.

SEC. 113. Not to exceed 2 percent of any appropriations in this Act made available to the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, Financial Crimes Enforcement Network, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, United States Customs Service, and United States Secret Service may be transferred between such appropriations upon the advance approval of the Committees on Appropriations. No transfer may increase or decrease any such appropriation by more than 2 percent.

SEC. 114. Not to exceed 2 percent of any appropriations in this Act made available to the Departmental Offices, Office of Inspector General, Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, Financial Management Service, and Bureau of the Public Debt, may be transferred between such appropriations upon the advance approval of the Committees on Appropriations. No transfer may increase or decrease any such appropriation by more than 2 percent.

SEC. 115. Of the funds available for the purchase of law enforcement vehicles, no funds may be obligated until the Secretary of the Treasury certifies that the purchase by the respective Treasury bureau is consistent with Departmental vehicle management principles: Provided, That the Secretary may delegate this authority to the Assistant Secretary for Management.

SEC. 116. VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE OFFICE OF THE TREASURY INSPECTOR GENERAL FOR TAX ADMINISTRATION. During the period from October 1, 1999 through January 1, 2003, the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration is authorized to offer voluntary separation incentives in order to provide the necessary flexibility to carry out the plan to establish and reorganize the Office of the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration ("the Office" hereafter).

(a) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "employee" means an employee (as defined by 5 U.S.C. 2105) who is employed by the Office serving under an appointment without time limitation, and has been currently employed by the Office or the Internal Revenue Service or the Office of Inspector General of the Department of the Treasury for a continuous period of at least 3 years, but does not include—

(1) a reemployed annuitant under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system;

(2) an employee having a disability on the basis of which such employee is or would be eligible for disability retirement under the applicable retirement system referred to in paragraph (1);

(3) an employee who is in receipt of a specific notice of involuntary separation for misconduct or unacceptable performance;

(4) an employee who has previously received any voluntary separation incentive payment by the Federal Government under this section or any other authority and has not repaid such payment;

(5) an employee covered by statutory reemployment rights who is on transfer to another organization; or

(6) any employee who, during the 24-month period preceding the date of separation, has received a recruitment or relocation bonus under 5 U.S.C. 5753 or who, within the 12-month period preceding the date of separation, received a retention allowance under 5 U.S.C. 5754.

(b) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration may pay voluntary separation incentive payments under this section to any employee to the extent necessary to organize the Office so as to perform the duties specified in the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, Pub. L. 105-206.

(2) AMOUNT AND TREATMENT OF PAYMENTS.—A voluntary separation incentive payment—

(A) shall be paid in a lump sum after the employee's separation;

(B) shall be paid from appropriations available for the payment of the basic pay of the employees of the Office;

(C) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(i) an amount equal to the amount the employee would be entitled to receive under 5 U.S.C. 5595(c); or

(ii) an amount determined by the Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration, not to exceed $25,000;

(D) may not be made except in the case of any qualifying employee who voluntarily separates (whether by retirement or resignation) before January 1, 2003;

(E) shall not be a basis for payment, and shall not be included in the computation, of any other type of Government benefit; and

(F) shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of any severance pay to which the employee may be entitled under 5 U.S.C. 5595 based on any other separation.

(c) ADDITIONAL OFFICE OF THE TREASURY INSPECTOR GENERAL FOR TAX ADMINISTRATION CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE RETIREMENT FUND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In addition to any other payments which it is required to make under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, the Office shall remit to the Office of Personnel Management for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund an amount equal to 15 percent of the final basic pay of each employee who is covered under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, to whom a voluntary separation incentive has been paid under this section.

(2) DEFINITION.—In paragraph (1), the term "final basic pay", with respect to an employee, means the total amount of basic pay which would be payable for a year of service by such employee, computed using the employee's final rate of basic pay, and, if last serving on other than a full-time basis, with appropriate adjustment therefor.

(d) EFFECT OF SUBSEQUENT EMPLOYMENT WITH THE GOVERNMENT.—An individual who has received a voluntary separation incentive payment under this section and accepts any employment for compensation with the Government of the United States, or who works for any agency of the United States Government through a personal services contract, within 5 years after the date of the separation on which the payment is based, shall be required to pay, prior to the individual's first day of employment, the entire amount of the incentive payment to the Office.

(e) EFFECT ON OFFICE OF THE TREASURY INSPECTOR GENERAL FOR TAX ADMINISTRATION EMPLOYMENT LEVELS.—

(1) INTENDED EFFECT.—Voluntary separations under this section are not intended to necessarily reduce the total number of full-time equivalent positions in the Office.

(2) USE OF VOLUNTARY SEPARATIONS.—The Office may redeploy or use the full-time equivalent positions vacated by voluntary separations under this section to make other positions available to more critical locations or more critical occupations.

SEC. 117. VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS FOR EMPLOYEES OF THE CHICAGO FINANCIAL CENTER OF THE FINANCIAL MANAGEMENT SERVICE. (a) AUTHORITY.—During the period from October 1, 1999 through January 31, 2000, the Commissioner of the Financial Management Service (FMS) of the Department of the Treasury is authorized to offer voluntary separation incentives in order to provide the necessary flexibility to carry out the closure of the Chicago Financial Center (CFC) in a manner which the Commissioner shall deem most efficient, equitable to employees, and cost effective to the Government.

(b) DEFINITION.—In this section, the term "employee" means an employee (as defined by 5 U.S.C. 2105) who is employed by FMS at CFC under an appointment without time limitation, and has been so employed continuously for a period of at least 3 years, but does not include—

(1) a reemployed annuitant under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system;

(2) an employee with a disability on the basis of which such employee is or would be eligible for disability retirement under the retirement systems referred to in paragraph (1) or another retirement system for employees of the Government;

(3) an employee who is in receipt of a specific notice of involuntary separation for misconduct or unacceptable performance;

(4) an employee who has previously received any voluntary separation incentive payment from an agency or instrumentality of the Government of the United States under any authority and has not repaid such payment;

(5) an employee covered by statutory reemployment rights who is on transfer to another organization; or

(6) an employee who during the 24 month period preceding the date of separation has received and not repaid a recruitment or relocation bonus under section 5753 of Title 5, United States Code, or who, within the twelve month period preceding the date of separation, has received and not repaid a retention allowance under section 5754 of that Title.

(c) AGENCY PLAN; APPROVAL.—

(1) The Secretary, Department of the Treasury, prior to obligating any resources for voluntary separation incentive payments, shall submit to the Office of Management and Budget a strategic plan outlining the intended use of such incentive payments and a proposed organizational chart for the agency once such incentive payments have been completed.

(2) The agency's plan under subsection (1) shall include—

(A) the specific positions and functions to be reduced or eliminated;

(B) a proposed coverage for offers of incentives;

(C) the time period during which incentives may be paid;

(D) the number and amounts of voluntary separation incentive payments to be offered; and

(E) a description of how the agency will operate without the eliminated positions and functions.

(3) The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall review the agency's plan and approve or disapprove such plan, and may make appropriate modifications in the plan including waivers of the reduction in agency employment levels required by this Act.

(d) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS.—

(1) A voluntary separation incentive payment under this Act may be paid by the agency head to an employee only in accordance with the strategic plan under section (c).

(2) A voluntary incentive payment—

(A) shall be offered to agency employees on the basis of organizational unit, occupational series or level, geographic location, other nonpersonal factors, or an appropriate combination of such factors;

(B) shall be paid in a lump sum after the employee's separation;

(C) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(i) an amount equal to the amount the employee would be entitled to receive under section 5595(c) of title 5, United States Code, if the employee were entitled to payment under such section (without adjustment for any previous payment made); or

(ii) an amount determined by the agency head, not to exceed $25,000;

(D) may be made only in the case of an employee who voluntarily separates (whether by retirement or resignation) under the provisions of this Act;

(E) shall not be a basis for payment, and shall not be included in the computation of any other type of Government benefit;

(F) shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of any severance pay to which the employee may be entitled under section 5595 of title 5, United States Code, based on any other separation; and

(G) shall be paid from appropriations or funds available for the payment of the basic pay of the employee.

(e) ELIGIBILITY FOR PAYMENTS.—Payments under this section may be made to any qualifying employee who voluntarily separates, whether by retirement or resignation, between October 1, 1999 and January 31, 2000.

(f) EFFECT ON SUBSEQUENT EMPLOYMENT WITH THE GOVERNMENT.—An individual who has received a voluntary separation incentive payment under this section and accepts any employment for compensation with any agency or instrumentality of the Government of the United States within 5 years after the date of the separation on which the payment is based shall be required to pay, prior to the individual's first day of employment, the entire amount of the incentive payment to FMS.

(g) CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE RETIREMENT FUND.—

(1) In addition to any other payments which it is required to make under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, FMS shall remit to the office of Personnel Management for deposit in the Treasury to the credit of Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund an amount equal to 15 percent of the final annual basic pay for each employee covered under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5 United States Code, to whom a voluntary separation incentive has been paid under this section.

(2) For the purpose of paragraph (1), the term "final basic pay" with respect to an employee, means the total amount of basic pay which would be payable for a year of service by such employee, computed using the employee's final rate of basic pay, and, if last serving on other than a full-time basis, with appropriate adjustment therefor.

(h) REDUCTION OF AGENCY EMPLOYMENT LEVELS.—

(1) The total number of funded employee positions in the agency shall be reduced by one position for each vacancy created by the separation of any employee who has received, or is due to receive, a voluntary separation incentive payment under this Act. For the purposes of this subsection, positions shall be counted on a full-time equivalent basis.

(2) The President, through the Office of Management and Budget, shall monitor the agency and take any action necessary to ensure that the requirement of this section are met.

(3) At the request of the Secretary, Department of the Treasury, the Office of Management and Budget may waive the reduction in total number of funded employee positions required by subsection (1) if it believes the agency plan required by section (c) satisfactorily demonstrates that the positions would better be used to reallocate occupations or reshape the workforce and to produce a more cost-effective result.

SEC. 118. ENFORCEMENT OF CERTAIN ANTI-TERRORISM JUDGMENTS. (a) DEFINITION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1603(b) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in paragraph (3) by striking the period and inserting a semicolon and "and";

(B) by redesignating paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) as subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C), respectively;

(C) by striking "(b)" through "entity—" and inserting the following:

"(b) An 'agency or instrumentality of a foreign state' means—

"(1) any entity—"; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

"(2) for purposes of sections 1605(a)(7) and 1610 (a)(7) and (f), any entity as defined under subparagraphs (A) and (B) of paragraph (1), and subparagraph (C) of paragraph (1) shall not apply."

(2) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1391(f)(3) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking "1603(b)" and inserting "1603(b)(1)".

(b) ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS.—Section 1610(f) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) in subparagraph (A) by striking "(including any agency or instrumentality or such state)" and inserting "(including any agency or instrumentality of such state)"; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

"(C) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, moneys due from or payable by the United States (including any agency, subdivision or instrumentality thereof) to any state against which a judgment is pending under section 1605(a)(7) shall be subject to attachment and execution, in like manner and to the same extent as if the United States were a private person."; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(3)(A) Subject to subparagraph (B), upon determining on an asset-by-asset basis that a waiver is necessary in the national security interest, the President may waive this subsection in connection with (and prior to the enforcement of) any judicial order directing attachment in aid of execution or execution against the principal office of a foreign mission to the United States used for diplomatic or related purposes, or any funds held by or in the name of such foreign mission determined by the President to be necessary to satisfy actual operating expenses of such principal office.

"(B) A waiver under this paragraph shall not apply to—

"(i) the principal office of a foreign mission if such office has been used for any non-diplomatic purpose (including as commercial rental property) by either the foreign state or by the United States, or to the proceeds of such nondiplomatic purpose; or

"(ii) if any asset of such principal office is sold or otherwise transferred for value to a third party, the proceeds of such sale or transfer."

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 117(d) of the Treasury Department Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105-277; 112 Stat. 2681-492) is repealed.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any claim for which a foreign state is not immune under section 1605(a)(7) of title 28, United States Code, arising before, on, or after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 119. Provided further, That the Customs Service Commissioner shall utilize $50,000,000 to hire 500 new Customs inspectors, agents, appropriate equipment and intelligence support within the funds available under the Customs Service headings in the bill, in addition to funds provided to the Customs Service under the Fiscal Year 1999 Emergency Drug Supplemental.

SEC. 411. CONVEYANCE OF LAND TO THE COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN. (a) ADMINISTRATOR OF GENERAL SERVICES.—Subject to subsection (f) and such terms and conditions as the Administrator of General Services (in this section referred to as the "Administrator") shall require in accordance with this section, the Administrator shall convey to the Columbia Hospital for Women (formerly Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-In Asylum; in this section referred to as "Columbia Hospital"), located in Washington, District of Columbia, for $14,000,000 plus accrued interest to be paid in accordance with the terms set forth in subsection (d), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to those pieces or parcels of land in the District of Columbia, described in subsection (b), together with all improvements thereon and appurtenances thereto.

The purpose of this conveyance is to enable the expansion by Columbia Hospital of its Ambulatory Care Center, Betty Ford Breast Center, and the Columbia Hospital Center for Teen Health and Reproductive Toxicology Center.

(b) PROPERTY DESCRIPTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The land referred to in subsection (a) was conveyed to the United States of America by deed dated May 2, 1888, from David Ferguson, widower, recorded in liber 1314, folio 102, of the land records of the District of Columbia, and is that portion of square numbered 25 in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia which was not previously conveyed to such hospital by the Act of June 28, 1952 (66 Stat. 287; chapter 486).

(2) PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION.—The property is more particularly described as square 25, lot 803, or as follows: all that piece or parcel of land situated and lying in the city of Washington in the District of Columbia and known as part of square numbered 25, as laid down and distinguished on the plat or plan of said city as follows: beginning for the same at the northeast corner of the square being the corner formed by the intersection of the west line of Twenty-fourth Street Northwest, with the south line of north M Street Northwest and running thence south with the line of said Twenty-fourth Street Northwest for the distance of two hundred and thirty-one feet ten inches, thence running west and parallel with said M Street Northwest for the distance of two hundred and thirty feet six inches and running thence north and parallel with the line of said Twenty-fourth Street Northwest for the distance of two hundred and thirty-one feet ten inches to the line of said M Street Northwest and running thence east with the line of said M Street Northwest to the place of beginning two hundred and thirty feet and six inches together with all the improvements, ways, easements, rights, privileges, and appurtenances to the same belonging or in any-wise appertaining.

(c) DATE OF CONVEYANCE.—

(1) DATE.—The date of the conveyance of property required under subsection (a) shall be the date upon which the Administrator receives from Columbia Hospital written notice of its exercise of the purchase option granted by this section, which notice shall be accompanied by the first of 30 equal installment payments of $869,000 toward the total purchase price of $14,000,000, plus accrued interest.

(2) DEADLINE FOR CONVEYANCE OF PROPERTY.—Written notification and payment of the first installment payment from Columbia Hospital under paragraph (1) shall be ineffective, and the purchase option granted Columbia Hospital under this section shall lapse, if that written notification and installment payment are not received by the Administrator before the date which is 1 year after the date of enactment of this section.

(3) QUITCLAIM DEED.—Any conveyance of property to Columbia Hospital under this section shall be by quitclaim deed.

(d) CONVEYANCE TERMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The conveyance of property required under subsection (a) shall be consistent with the terms and conditions set forth in this section and such other terms and conditions as the Administrator deems to be in the interest of the United States, including—

(A) the provision for the prepayment of the full purchase price if mutually acceptable to the parties;

(B) restrictions on the use of the described land for use of the purposes set out in subsection (a);

(C) the conditions under which the described land or interests therein may be sold, assigned, or otherwise conveyed in order to facilitate financing to fulfill its intended use; and

(D) the consequences in the event of default by Columbia Hospital for failing to pay all installments payments toward the total purchase price when due, including revision of the described property to the United States.

(2) PAYMENT OF PURCHASE PRICE.—Columbia Hospital shall pay the total purchase price of $14,000,000, plus accrued interest over the term at a rate of 4.5 percent annually, in equal installments of $869,000, for 29 years following the date of conveyance of the property and receipt of the initial installment of $869,000 by the Administrator under subsection (c)(1). Unless the full purchase price, plus accrued interest, is prepaid, the total amount paid for the property after 30 years will be $26,070,000.

(e) TREATMENT OF AMOUNTS RECEIVED.—Amounts received by the United States as payments under this section shall be paid into the fund established by section 210(f) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 490(f)), and may be expended by the Administrator for real property management and related activities not otherwise provided for, without further authorization.

(f) REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The property conveyed under subsection (a) shall revert to the United States, together with any improvements thereon—

(A) 1 year from the date on which Columbia Hospital defaults in paying to the United States an annual installment payment of $869,000, when due; or

(B) immediately upon any attempt by Columbia Hospital to assign, sell, or convey the described property before the United States has received full purchase price, plus accrued interest.

The Columbia Hospital shall execute and provide to the Administrator such written instruments and assurances as the Administrator may reasonably request to protect the interests of the United States under this subsection.

(2) RELEASE OF REVERSIONARY INTEREST.—The Administrator may release, upon request, any restriction imposed on the use of described property for the purposes of paragraph (1), and release any reversionary interest of the United States in the property conveyed under this subsection only upon receipt by the United States of full payment of the purchase price specified under subsection (d)(2).

(3) PROPERTY RETURNED TO THE GENERAL SERVICES ADMINISTRATION.—Any property that reverts to the United States under this subsection shall be under the jurisdiction, custody and control of the General Services Administration shall be available for use or disposition by the Administrator in accordance with applicable Federal law.

SEC. 412. Notwithstanding section 1346 of title 31, United States Code, funds made available for fiscal year 2000 by this or any other Act to any department or agency, which is a member of the Joint Financial Management Improvement Program (JFMIP) shall be available to finance an appropriate share of JFMIP salaries and administrative costs.

SEC. 413. The Administrator of General Services may provide from Government-wide credit card rebates, up to $3,000,000 in support of the Joint Financial Management Improvement Program as approved by the Chief Financial Officers Council.

TITLE V—GENERAL PROVISIONS

THIS ACT

SEC. 501. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 502. The expenditure of any appropriation under this Act for any consulting service through procurement contract, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 3109, shall be limited to those contracts where such expenditures are a matter of public record and available for public inspection, except where otherwise provided under existing law, or under existing Executive order issued pursuant to existing law.

SEC. 503. None of the funds made available by this Act shall be available for any activity or for paying the salary of any Government employee where funding an activity or paying a salary to a Government employee would result in a decision, determination, rule, regulation, or policy that would prohibit the enforcement of section 307 of the Tariff Act of 1930.

SEC. 504. None of the funds made available by this Act shall be available in fiscal year 2000 for the purpose of transferring control over the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center located at Glynco, Georgia, and Artesia, New Mexico, out of the Department of the Treasury.

SEC. 505. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be available to pay the salary for any person filling a position, other than a temporary position, formerly held by an employee who has left to enter the Armed Forces of the United States and has satisfactorily completed his period of active military or naval service, and has within 90 days after his release from such service or from hospitalization continuing after discharge for a period of not more than 1 year, made application for restoration to his former position and has been certified by the Office of Personnel Management as still qualified to perform the duties of his former position and has not been restored thereto.

SEC. 506. No funds appropriated pursuant to this Act may be expended by an entity unless the entity agrees that in expending the assistance the entity will comply with sections 2 through 4 of the Act of March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a-10c, popularly known as the "Buy American Act").

SEC. 507. (a) PURCHASE OF AMERICAN-MADE EQUIPMENT AND PRODUCTS.—In the case of any equipment or products that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided under this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that entities receiving such assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products.

(b) NOTICE TO RECIPIENTS OF ASSISTANCE.—In providing financial assistance under this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall provide to each recipient of the assistance a notice describing the statement made in subsection (a) by the Congress.

SEC. 508. If it has been finally determined by a court or Federal agency that any person intentionally affixed a label bearing a "Made in America" inscription, or any inscription with the same meaning, to any product sold in or shipped to the United States that is not made in the United States, such person shall be ineligible to receive any contract or sub-contract made with funds provided pursuant to this Act, pursuant to the debarment, suspension, and ineligibility procedures described in sections 9.400 through 9.409 of title 48, Code of Federal Regulations.

SEC. 509. Except as otherwise specifically provided by law, not to exceed 50 percent of unobligated balances remaining available at the end of fiscal year 2000 from appropriations made available for salaries and expenses for fiscal year 2000 in this Act, shall remain available through September 30, 2001, for each such account for the purposes authorized: Provided, That a request shall be submitted to the Committees on Appropriations for approval prior to the expenditure of such funds: Provided further, That these requests shall be made in compliance with re-programming guidelines.

SEC. 510. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used by the Executive Office of the President to request from the Federal Bureau of Investigation any official background investigation report on any individual, except when it is made known to the Federal official having authority to obligate or expend such funds that—

(1) such individual has given his or her express written consent for such request not more than 6 months prior to the date of such request and during the same presidential administration; or

(2) such request is required due to extraordinary circumstances involving national security.

SEC. 511. INVENTORY OF FEDERAL GRANT PROGRAMS. The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall prepare an inventory of existing Federal grant programs after consulting each agency that administers Federal grant programs including formula funds, competitive grant funds, block grant funds, and direct payments. The inventory shall include the name of the program, a copy of relevant statutory and regulatory guidelines, the funding level in fiscal year 1999, a list of the eligibility criteria both statutory and regulatory, and a copy of the application form. The Director shall submit the inventory no later than six months after enactment to the Committees on Appropriations and relevant authorizing committees.

TITLE VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS

DEPARTMENTS, AGENCIES, AND CORPORATIONS

SEC. 601. Funds appropriated in this or any other Act may be used to pay travel to the United States for the immediate family of employees serving abroad in cases of death or life threatening illness of said employee.

SEC. 602. No department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States receiving appropriated funds under this or any other Act for fiscal year 2000 shall obligate or expend any such funds, unless such department, agency, or instrumentality has in place, and will continue to administer in good faith, a written policy designed to ensure that all of its workplaces are free from the illegal use, possession, or distribution of controlled substances (as defined in the Controlled Substances Act) by the officers and employees of such department, agency, or instrumentality.

SEC. 603. Unless otherwise specifically provided, the maximum amount allowable during the current fiscal year in accordance with section 16 of the Act of August 2, 1946 (60 Stat. 810), for the purchase of any passenger motor vehicle (exclusive of buses, ambulances, law enforcement, and undercover surveillance vehicles), is hereby fixed at $8,100 except station wagons for which the maximum shall be $9,100: Provided, That these limits may be exceeded by not to exceed $3,700 for police-type vehicles, and by not to exceed $4,000 for special heavy-duty vehicles: Provided further, That the limits set forth in this section may not be exceeded by more than 5 percent for electric or hybrid vehicles purchased for demonstration under the provisions of the Electric and Hybrid Vehicle Research, Development, and Demonstration Act of 1976: Provided further, That the limits set forth in this section may be exceeded by the incremental cost of clean alternative fuels vehicles acquired pursuant to Public Law 101-549 over the cost of comparable conventionally fueled vehicles.

SEC. 604. Appropriations of the executive departments and independent establishments for the current fiscal year available for expenses of travel, or for the expenses of the activity concerned, are hereby made available for quarters allowances and cost-of-living allowances, in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 5922-5924.

SEC. 605. Unless otherwise specified during the current fiscal year, no part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be used to pay the compensation of any officer or employee of the Government of the United States (including any agency the majority of the stock of which is owned by the Government of the United States) whose post of duty is in the continental United States unless such person: (1) is a citizen of the United States; (2) is a person in the service of the United States on the date of enactment of this Act who, being eligible for citizenship, has filed a declaration of intention to become a citizen of the United States prior to such date and is actually residing in the United States; (3) is a person who owes allegiance to the United States; (4) is an alien from Cuba, Poland, South Vietnam, the countries of the former Soviet Union, or the Baltic countries lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence; (5) is a South Vietnamese, Cambodian, or Laotian refugee paroled in the United States after January 1, 1975; or (6) is a national of the People's Republic of China who qualifies for adjustment of status pursuant to the Chinese Student Protection Act of 1992: Provided, That for the purpose of this section, an affidavit signed by any such person shall be considered prima facie evidence that the requirements of this section with respect to his or her status have been complied with: Provided further, That any person making a false affidavit shall be guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction, shall be fined no more than $4,000 or imprisoned for not more than 1 year, or both: Provided further, That the above penal clause shall be in addition to, and not in substitution for, any other provisions of existing law: Provided further, That any payment made to any officer or employee contrary to the provisions of this section shall be recoverable in action by the Federal Government. This section shall not apply to citizens of Ireland, Israel, or the Republic of the Philippines, or to nationals of those countries allied with the United States in a current defense effort, or to international broadcasters employed by the United States Information Agency, or to temporary employment of translators, or to temporary employment in the field service (not to exceed 60 days) as a result of emergencies.

SEC. 606. Appropriations available to any department or agency during the current fiscal year for necessary expenses, including maintenance or operating expenses, shall also be available for payment to the General Services Administration for charges for space and services and those expenses of renovation and alteration of buildings and facilities which constitute public improvements performed in accordance with the Public Buildings Act of 1959 (73 Stat. 749), the Public Buildings Amendments of 1972 (87 Stat. 216), or other applicable law.

SEC. 607. In addition to funds provided in this or any other Act, all Federal agencies are authorized to receive and use funds resulting from the sale of materials, including Federal records disposed of pursuant to a records schedule recovered through recycling or waste prevention programs. Such funds shall be available until expended for the following purposes:

(1) Acquisition, waste reduction and prevention, and recycling programs as described in Executive Order No. 13101 (September 14, 1998), including any such programs adopted prior to the effective date of the Executive order.

(2) Other Federal agency environmental management programs, including, but not limited to, the development and implementation of hazardous waste management and pollution prevention programs.

(3) Other employee programs as authorized by law or as deemed appropriate by the head of the Federal agency.

SEC. 608. Funds made available by this or any other Act for administrative expenses in the current fiscal year of the corporations and agencies subject to chapter 91 of title 31, United States Code, shall be available, in addition to objects for which such funds are otherwise available, for rent in the District of Columbia; services in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 3109; and the objects specified under this head, all the provisions of which shall be applicable to the expenditure of such funds unless otherwise specified in the Act by which they are made available: Provided, That in the event any functions budgeted as administrative expenses are subsequently transferred to or paid from other funds, the limitations on administrative expenses shall be correspondingly reduced.

SEC. 609. No part of any appropriation for the current fiscal year contained in this or any other Act shall be paid to any person for the filling of any position for which he or she has been nominated after the Senate has voted not to approve the nomination of said person.

SEC. 610. No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be available for interagency financing of boards (except Federal Executive Boards), commissions, councils, committees, or similar groups (whether or not they are interagency entities) which do not have a prior and specific statutory approval to receive financial support from more than one agency or instrumentality.

SEC. 611. Funds made available by this or any other Act to the Postal Service Fund (39 U.S.C. 2003) shall be available for employment of guards for all buildings and areas owned or occupied by the Postal Service and under the charge and control of the Postal Service, and such guards shall have, with respect to such property, the powers of special policemen provided by the first section of the Act of June 1, 1948, as amended (62 Stat. 281; 40 U.S.C. 318), and, as to property owned or occupied by the Postal Service, the Postmaster General may take the same actions as the Administrator of General Services may take under the provisions of sections 2 and 3 of the Act of June 1, 1948, as amended (62 Stat. 281; 40 U.S.C. 318a and 318b), attaching thereto penal consequences under the authority and within the limits provided in section 4 of the Act of June 1, 1948, as amended (62 Stat. 281; 40 U.S.C. 318c).

SEC. 612. None of the funds made available pursuant to the provisions of this Act shall be used to implement, administer, or enforce any regulation which has been disapproved pursuant to a resolution of disapproval duly adopted in accordance with the applicable law of the United States.

SEC. 613. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, and except as otherwise provided in this section, no part of any of the funds appropriated for fiscal year 2000, by this or any other Act, may be used to pay any prevailing rate employee described in section 5342(a)(2)(A) of title 5, United States Code—

(1) during the period from the date of expiration of the limitation imposed by section 614 of the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1999, until the normal effective date of the applicable wage survey adjustment that is to take effect in fiscal year 2000, in an amount that exceeds the rate payable for the applicable grade and step of the applicable wage schedule in accordance with such section 614; and

(2) during the period consisting of the remainder of fiscal year 2000, in an amount that exceeds, as a result of a wage survey adjustment, the rate payable under paragraph (1) by more than the sum of—

(A) the percentage adjustment taking effect in fiscal year 2000 under section 5303 of title 5, United States Code, in the rates of pay under the General Schedule; and

(B) the difference between the overall average percentage of the locality-based comparability payments taking effect in fiscal year 2000 under section 5304 of such title (whether by adjustment or otherwise), and the overall average percentage of such payments which was effective in fiscal year 1999 under such section.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no prevailing rate employee described in subparagraph (B) or (C) of section 5342(a)(2) of title 5, United States Code, and no employee covered by section 5348 of such title, may be paid during the periods for which subsection (a) is in effect at a rate that exceeds the rates that would be payable under subsection (a) were subsection (a) applicable to such employee.

(c) For the purposes of this section, the rates payable to an employee who is covered by this section and who is paid from a schedule not in existence on September 30, 1999, shall be determined under regulations prescribed by the Office of Personnel Management.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, rates of premium pay for employees subject to this section may not be changed from the rates in effect on September 30, 1999, except to the extent determined by the Office of Personnel Management to be consistent with the purpose of this section.

(e) This section shall apply with respect to pay for service performed after September 30, 1999.

(f) For the purpose of administering any provision of law (including any rule or regulation that provides premium pay, retirement, life insurance, or any other employee benefit) that requires any deduction or contribution, or that imposes any requirement or limitation on the basis of a rate of salary or basic pay, the rate of salary or basic pay payable after the application of this section shall be treated as the rate of salary or basic pay.

(g) Nothing in this section shall be considered to permit or require the payment to any employee covered by this section at a rate in excess of the rate that would be payable were this section not in effect.

(h) The Office of Personnel Management may provide for exceptions to the limitations imposed by this section if the Office determines that such exceptions are necessary to ensure the recruitment or retention of qualified employees.

SEC. 614. During the period in which the head of any department or agency, or any other officer or civilian employee of the Government appointed by the President of the United States, holds office, no funds may be obligated or expended in excess of $5,000 to furnish or redecorate the office of such department head, agency head, officer, or employee, or to purchase furniture or make improvements for any such office, unless advance notice of such furnishing or redecoration is expressly approved by the Committees on Appropriations. For the purposes of this section, the word "office" shall include the entire suite of offices assigned to the individual, as well as any other space used primarily by the individual or the use of which is directly controlled by the individual.

SEC. 615. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no executive branch agency shall purchase, construct, and/or lease any additional facilities, except within or contiguous to existing locations, to be used for the purpose of conducting Federal law enforcement training without the advance approval of the Committees on Appropriations, except that the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center is authorized to obtain the temporary use of additional facilities by lease, contract, or other agreement for training which cannot be accommodated in existing Center facilities.

SEC. 616. Notwithstanding section 1346 of title 31, United States Code, or section 610 of this Act, funds made available for fiscal year 2000 by this or any other Act shall be available for the interagency funding of national security and emergency preparedness telecommunications initiatives which benefit multiple Federal departments, agencies, or entities, as provided by Executive Order No. 12472 (April 3, 1984).

SEC. 617. (a) None of the funds appropriated by this or any other Act may be obligated or expended by any Federal department, agency, or other instrumentality for the salaries or expenses of any employee appointed to a position of a confidential or policy-determining character excepted from the competitive service pursuant to section 3302 of title 5, United States Code, without a certification to the Office of Personnel Management from the head of the Federal department, agency, or other instrumentality employing the Schedule C appointee that the Schedule C position was not created solely or primarily in order to detail the employee to the White House.

(b) The provisions of this section shall not apply to Federal employees or members of the armed services detailed to or from—

- (1) the Central Intelligence Agency;
- (2) the National Security Agency;
- (3) the Defense Intelligence Agency;
- (4) the offices within the Department of Defense for the collection of specialized national foreign intelligence through reconnaissance programs;
- (5) the Bureau of Intelligence and Research of the Department of State;
- (6) any agency, office, or unit of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Drug Enforcement Administration of the Department of Justice, the Department of Transportation, the Department of the Treasury, and the Department of Energy performing intelligence functions; and
- (7) the Director of Central Intelligence.

SEC. 618. No department, agency, or instrumentality of the United States receiving appropriated funds under this or any other Act for fiscal year 2000 shall obligate or expend any such funds, unless such department, agency, or instrumentality has in place, and will continue to administer in good faith, a written policy designed to ensure that all of its workplaces are free from discrimination and sexual harassment and that all of its workplaces are not in violation of title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.

SEC. 619. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act may be used to pay for the expenses of travel of employees, including employees of the Executive Office of the President, not directly responsible for the discharge of official governmental tasks and duties: Provided, That this restriction shall not apply to the family of the President, Members of Congress or their spouses, Heads of State of a foreign country or their designees, persons providing assistance to the President for official purposes, or other individuals so designated by the President.

SEC. 620. None of the funds appropriated in this or any other Act shall be used to acquire information technologies which do not comply with part 39.106 (Year 2000 compliance) of the Federal Acquisition Regulation, unless an agency's Chief Information Officer determines that noncompliance with part 39.106 is necessary to the function and operation of the requesting agency or the acquisition is required by a signed contract with the agency in effect before the date of enactment of this Act. Any waiver granted by the Chief Information Officer shall be reported to the Office of Management and Budget, and copies shall be provided to Congress.

SEC. 621. None of the funds made available in this Act for the United States Customs Service may be used to allow the importation into the United States of any good, ware, article, or merchandise mined, produced, or manufactured by forced or indentured child labor, as determined pursuant to section 307 of the Tariff Act of 1930 (19 U.S.C. 1307).

SEC. 622. No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be available for the payment of the salary of any officer or employee of the Federal Government, who—

(1) prohibits or prevents, or attempts or threatens to prohibit or prevent, any other officer or employee of the Federal Government from having any direct oral or written communication or contact with any Member, committee, or subcommittee of the Congress in connection with any matter pertaining to the employment of such other officer or employee or pertaining to the department or agency of such other officer or employee in any way, irrespective of whether such communication or contact is at the initiative of such other officer or employee or in response to the request or inquiry of such Member, committee, or subcommittee; or

(2) removes, suspends from duty without pay, demotes, reduces in rank, seniority, status, pay, or performance of efficiency rating, denies promotion to, relocates, reassigns, transfers, disciplines, or discriminates in regard to any employment right, entitlement, or benefit, or any term or condition of employment of, any other officer or employee of the Federal Government, or attempts or threatens to commit any of the foregoing actions with respect to such other officer or employee, by reason of any communication or contact of such other officer or employee with any Member, committee, or subcommittee of the Congress as described in paragraph (1).

SEC. 623. Section 627(b) of the Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 1999 (as contained in section 101(h) of division A of Public Law 105-277) is amended by striking "Notwithstanding" and inserting the following: "Effective on the date of the enactment of this Act and thereafter, and notwithstanding".

SEC. 624. Notwithstanding any provision of law, the President, or his designee, must certify to Congress, annually, that no person or persons with direct or indirect responsibility for administering the Executive Office of the President's Drug-Free Workplace Plan are themselves subject to a program of individual random drug testing.

SEC. 625. (a) None of the funds made available in this or any other Act may be obligated or expended for any employee training that—

(1) does not meet identified needs for knowledge, skills, and abilities bearing directly upon the performance of official duties;

(2) contains elements likely to induce high levels of emotional response or psychological stress in some participants;

(3) does not require prior employee notification of the content and methods to be used in the training and written end of course evaluation;

(4) contains any methods or content associated with religious or quasi-religious belief systems or "new age" belief systems as defined in Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Notice N-915.022, dated September 2, 1988; or

(5) is offensive to, or designed to change, participants' personal values or lifestyle outside the workplace.

(b) Nothing in this section shall prohibit, restrict, or otherwise preclude an agency from conducting training bearing directly upon the performance of official duties.

SEC. 626. No funds appropriated in this or any other Act for fiscal year 2000 may be used to implement or enforce the agreements in Standard Forms 312 and 4355 of the Government or any other nondisclosure policy, form, or agreement if such policy, form, or agreement does not contain the following provisions: "These restrictions are consistent with and do not supersede, conflict with, or otherwise alter the employee obligations, rights, or liabilities created by Executive Order No. 12958; section 7211 of title 5, United States Code (governing disclosures to Congress); section 1034 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by the Military Whistleblower Protection Act (governing disclosure to Congress by members of the military); section 2302(b)(8) of title 5, United States Code, as amended by the Whistleblower Protection Act (governing disclosures of illegality, waste, fraud, abuse or public health or safety threats); the Intelligence Identities Protection Act of 1982 (50 U.S.C. 421 et seq.) (governing disclosures that could expose confidential Government agents); and the statutes which protect against disclosure that may compromise the national security, including sections 641, 793, 794, 798, and 952 of title 18, United States Code, and section 4(b) of the Subversive Activities Act of 1950 (50 U.S.C. 783(b)). The definitions, requirements, obligations, rights, sanctions, and liabilities created by said Executive order and listed statutes are incorporated into this agreement and are controlling." Provided, That notwithstanding the preceding paragraph, a nondisclosure policy form or agreement that is to be executed by a person connected with the conduct of an intelligence or intelligence-related activity, other than an employee or officer of the United States Government, may contain provisions appropriate to the particular activity for which such document is to be used. Such form or agreement shall, at a minimum, require that the person will not disclose any classified information received in the course of such activity unless specifically authorized to do so by the United States Government. Such nondisclosure forms shall also make it clear that they do not bar disclosures to Congress or to an authorized official of an executive agency or the Department of Justice that are essential to reporting a substantial violation of law.

SEC. 627. No part of any funds appropriated in this or any other Act shall be used by an agency of the executive branch, other than for normal and recognized executive-legislative relationships, for publicity or propaganda purposes, and for the preparation, distribution or use of any kit, pamphlet, booklet, publication, radio, television or film presentation designed to support or defeat legislation pending before the Congress, except in presentation to the Congress itself.

SEC. 628. (a) IN GENERAL.—For calendar year 2001, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall prepare and submit to Congress, with the budget submitted under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, an accounting statement and associated report containing—

(1) an estimate of the total annual costs and benefits (including quantifiable and non-quantifiable effects) of Federal rules and paperwork, to the extent feasible—

- (A) in the aggregate;
- (B) by agency and agency program; and
- (C) by major rule;

(2) an analysis of impacts of Federal regulation on State, local, and tribal government, small business, wages, and economic growth; and

(3) recommendations for reform.

(b) NOTICE.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall provide public notice and an opportunity to comment on the statement and report under subsection (a) before the statement and report are submitted to Congress.

(c) GUIDELINES.—To implement this section, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall issue guidelines to agencies to standardize—

- (1) measures of costs and benefits; and
- (2) the format of accounting statements.

(d) PEER REVIEW.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall provide for independent and external peer review of the guidelines and each accounting statement and associated report under this section. Such peer review shall not be subject to the Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.).

SEC. 629. None of the funds appropriated by this Act or any other Act, may be used by an agency to provide a Federal employee's home address to any labor organization except when it is made known to the Federal official having authority to obligate or expend such funds that the employee has authorized such disclosure or when such disclosure has been ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 630. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to establish scientific certification standards for explosives detection canines, and shall provide, on a reimbursable basis, for the certification of explosives detection canines employed by Federal agencies, or other agencies providing explosives detection services at airports in the United States.

SEC. 631. None of the funds made available in this Act or any other Act may be used to provide any non-public information such as mailing or telephone lists to any person or any organization outside of the Federal Government without the approval of the Committees on Appropriations.

SEC. 632. No part of any appropriation contained in this or any other Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes within the United States not heretofore authorized by the Congress.

SEC. 633. (a) In this section the term "agency"—

(1) means an Executive agency as defined under section 105 of title 5, United States Code;

(2) includes a military department as defined under section 102 of such title, the Postal Service, and the Postal Rate Commission; and

(3) shall not include the General Accounting Office.

(b) Unless authorized in accordance with law or regulations to use such time for other purposes, an employee of an agency shall use official time in an honest effort to perform official duties. An employee not under a leave system, including a Presidential appointee exempted under section 6301(2) of title 5, United States Code, has an obligation to expend an honest effort and a reasonable proportion of such employee's time in the performance of official duties.

SEC. 634. (a) None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used to enter into or renew a contract which includes a provision providing prescription drug coverage, except where the contract also includes a provision for contraceptive coverage.

(b) Nothing in this section shall apply to a contract with—

(1) any of the following religious plans:

- (A) Providence Health Plan;
- (B) Personal Care's HMO;
- (C) Care Choices;
- (D) OSF Health Plans, Inc.;
- (E) Yellowstone Community Health Plan;

and

(2) any existing or future plan, if the plan objects to such coverage on the basis of religious beliefs.

(c) In implementing this section, any plan that enters into or renews a contract under this section may not subject any individual to discrimination on the basis that the individual refuses to prescribe contraceptives because such activities would be contrary to the individual's religious beliefs or moral convictions.

(d) Nothing in this section shall be construed to require coverage of abortion or abortion-related services.

SEC. 635. FEDERAL FUNDS IDENTIFIED. Any request for proposals, solicitation, grant application, form, notification, press release, or other publications involving the distribution of Federal funds shall indicate the agency providing the funds and the amount provided. This provision shall apply to direct payments, formula funds, and grants received by a State receiving Federal funds.

SEC. 636. (a) Congress finds that—

(1) the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States (in this section referred to as the "VFW"), which was formed by veterans of the Spanish-American War and the Philippine Insurrection to help secure rights and benefits for their service, will be celebrating its 100th anniversary in 1999;

(2) members of the VFW have fought, bled, and died in every war, conflict, police action, and military intervention in which the United States has engaged during this century;

(3) over its history, the VFW has ably represented the interests of veterans in Congress and State Legislatures across the Nation and established a network of trained service officers who, at no charge, have helped millions of veterans and their dependents to secure the education, disability compensation, pension, and health care benefits they are rightfully entitled to receive as a result of the military service performed by those veterans;

(4) the VFW has also been deeply involved in national education projects, awarding nearly $2,700,000 in scholarships annually, as well as countless community projects initiated by its 10,000 posts; and

(5) the United States Postal Service has issued commemorative postage stamps honoring the VFW's 50th and 75th anniversaries, respectively.

(b) Therefore, it is the sense of the Senate that the United States Postal Service is encouraged to issue a commemorative postage stamp in honor of the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States.

SEC. 637. No funds appropriated by this Act shall be available to pay for an abortion, or the administrative expenses in connection with any health plan under the Federal employees health benefit program which provides any benefits or coverage for abortions.

SEC. 638. The provision of section 637 shall not apply where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term, or the pregnancy is the result of an act of rape or incest.

SEC. 639. EVALUATION OF OUTCOME OF WELFARE REFORM AND FORMULA FOR BONUSES TO HIGH PERFORMANCE STATES. (a) ADDITIONAL MEASURES OF STATE PERFORMANCE.—Section 403(a)(4)(C) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 603(a)(4)(C)) is amended—

(1) by striking “Not later” and inserting the following:

“(i) IN GENERAL.—Not later”;

(2) by inserting “The formula shall provide for the awarding of grants under this paragraph based on criteria contained in clause (ii) and in accordance with clauses (iii), (iv), and (v).” after the period; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(ii) FORMULA CRITERIA.—The grants awarded under this paragraph shall be based on—

“(I) employment-related measures, including work force entries, job retention, and increases in household income of current recipients of assistance under the State program funded under this title;

“(II) the percentage of former recipients of such assistance (who have ceased to receive such assistance for not more than 6 months) who receive subsidized child care;

“(III) the improvement since 1995 in the proportion of children in working poor families eligible for food stamps that receive food stamps to the total number of children in the State; and

“(IV) the percentage of members of families which are former recipients of assistance under the State program funded under this title (which have ceased to receive such assistance for not more than 6 months) who currently receive medical assistance under the State plan approved under title XIX or the child health assistance under title XXI.

For purposes of subclause (III), the term ‘working poor families’ means families which receives earnings equal to at least the comparable amount which would be received by an individual working a half-time position for minimum wage.

“(iii) EMPLOYMENT RELATED MEASURES.—Not less than $100,000,000 of the amount appropriated for a fiscal year under subparagraph (F) shall be used to award grants to States under this paragraph for that fiscal year based on scores for the criteria described in clause (ii)(I) and the criteria described in clause (ii)(II) with respect employed former recipients.

“(iv) FOOD STAMP MEASURES.—Not less than $50,000,000 of the amount appropriated for a fiscal year under subparagraph (F) shall be used to award grants to States under this paragraph for that fiscal year based on scores for the criteria described in clause (ii)(III).

“(v) MEDICAID AND SCHIP CRITERIA.—Not less than $50,000,000 of the amount appropriated for a fiscal year under subparagraph (F) shall be used to award grants to States under this paragraph for that fiscal year based on scores for the criteria described in clause (ii)(IV).”

(b) DATA COLLECTION AND REPORTING.—Section 411(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 611(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(8) REPORT ON OUTCOME OF WELFARE REFORM FOR STATES NOT PARTICIPATING IN BONUS GRANTS UNDER SECTION 403(a)(4).—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a State which does not participate in the procedure for awarding grants under section 403(a)(4) pursuant to regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the report required by paragraph (1) for a fiscal quarter shall include data regarding the characteristics and well-being of former recipients of assistance under the State program funded under this title for an appropriate period of time after such recipient has ceased receiving such assistance.

“(B) CONTENTS.—The data required under subparagraph (A) shall consist of information regarding former recipients, including—

“(i) employment status;

“(ii) job retention;

“(iii) poverty status;

“(iv) receipt of food stamps, medical assistance under the State plan approved under title XIX or child health assistance under title XXI, or subsidized child care;

“(v) accessibility of child care and child care cost; and “(vi) measures of hardship, including lack of medical insurance and difficulty purchasing food.

“(C) SAMPLING.—A State may comply with this paragraph by using a scientifically acceptable sampling method approved by the Secretary.

“(D) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to ensure that—

“(i) data reported under this paragraph is in such a form as to promote comparison of data among States; and

“(ii) a State reports, for each measure, changes in data over time and comparisons in data between such former recipients and comparable groups of current recipients.”

(c) REPORT OF CURRENTLY COLLECTED DATA.—Not later than July 1, 2000, the Secretary of Health and Human Services shall transmit to Congress a report regarding earnings and employment characteristics of former recipients of assistance under the State program funded under this part, based on information currently being received from States. Such report shall consist of a longitudinal record for a sample of States, which represents at least 80 percent of the population of each State, including a separate record for each of fiscal years 1997 through 2000 for—

(1) earnings of a sample of former recipients using unemployment insurance data;

(2) earnings of a sample of food stamp recipients using unemployment insurance data; and

(3) earnings of a sample of current recipients of assistance using unemployment insurance data.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATES.—

(1) The amendment made by subsection (a) applies to each of fiscal years 2000 through 2003.

(2) The amendment made by subsection (b) applies to reports in fiscal years beginning in fiscal year 2000.

SEC. 640. ITEMIZED INCOME TAX RECEIPT. (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than April 15, 2000, the Secretary of the Treasury shall establish an interactive program on an Internet website where any taxpayer may generate an itemized receipt showing a proportionate allocation (in money terms) of the taxpayer's total tax payments among the major expenditure categories.

(b) INFORMATION NECESSARY TO GENERATE RECEIPT.—For purposes of generating an itemized receipt under subsection (a), the interactive program—

(1) shall only require the input of the taxpayer's total tax payments, and

(2) shall not require any identifying information relating to the taxpayer.

(c) TOTAL TAX PAYMENTS.—For purposes of this section, total tax payments of an individual for any taxable year are—

(1) the tax imposed by subtitle A of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 for such taxable year (as shown on his return), and

(2) the tax imposed by section 3101 of such Code on wages received during such taxable year.

(d) CONTENT OF TAX RECEIPT.—

(1) MAJOR EXPENDITURE CATEGORIES.—For purposes of subsection (a), the major expenditure categories are:

(A) National defense.

(B) International affairs.

(C) Medicaid.

(D) Medicare.

(E) Means-tested entitlements.

(F) Domestic discretionary.

(G) Social Security.

(H) Interest payments.

(I) All other.

(2) OTHER ITEMS ON RECEIPT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In addition, the tax receipt shall include selected examples of more specific expenditure items, including the items listed in subparagraph (B), either at the budget function, subfunction, or program, project, or activity levels, along with any other information deemed appropriate by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to enhance taxpayer understanding of the Federal budget.

(B) LISTED ITEMS.—The expenditure items listed in this subparagraph are as follows:

(i) Public schools funding programs.

(ii) Student loans and college aid.

(iii) Low-income housing programs.

(iv) Food stamp and welfare programs.

(v) Law enforcement, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation, law enforcement grants to the States, and other Federal law enforcement personnel.

(vi) Infrastructure, including roads, bridges, and mass transit.

(vii) Farm subsidies.

(viii) Congressional Member and staff salaries.

(ix) Health research programs.

(x) Aid to the disabled.

(xi) Veterans health care and pension programs.

(xii) Space programs.

(xiii) Environmental cleanup programs.

(xiv) United States embassies.

(xv) Military salaries.

(xvi) Foreign aid.

(xvii) Contributions to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

(xviii) Amtrak.

(xix) United States Postal Service.

(e) COST.—No charge shall be imposed to cover any cost associated with the production or distribution of the tax receipt.

(f) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this section.

TITLE VII—CHILD CARE CENTERS IN FEDERAL FACILITIES

SEC. 701. SHORT TITLE. This title may be cited as the “Federal Employees Child Care Act”.

SEC. 702. DEFINITIONS. In this title (except as otherwise provided in section 705):

(1) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term “Administrator” means the Administrator of General Services.

(2) CHILD CARE ACCREDITATION ENTITY.—The term “child care accreditation entity” means a nonprofit private organization or public agency that—

(A) is recognized by a State agency or by a national organization that serves as a peer review panel on the standards and procedures of public and private child care or school accrediting bodies; and

(B) accredits a facility to provide child care on the basis of—

(i) an accreditation or credentialing instrument based on peer-validated research;

(ii) compliance with applicable State or local licensing requirements, as appropriate, for the facility;

(iii) outside monitoring of the facility; and

(iv) criteria that provide assurances of—

(I) use of developmentally appropriate health and safety standards at the facility;

(II) use of developmentally appropriate educational activities, as an integral part of the child care program carried out at the facility; and

(III) use of ongoing staff development or training activities for the staff of the facility, including related skills-based testing.

(3) ENTITY SPONSORING A CHILD CARE FACILITY.—The term “entity sponsoring a child care facility” means a Federal agency that operates, or an entity that enters into a contract or licensing agreement with a Federal agency to operate, a child care facility primarily for the use of Federal employees.

(4) EXECUTIVE AGENCY.—The term “Executive agency” has the meaning given the term in section 105 of title 5, United States Code, except that the term—

(A) does not include the Department of Defense and the Coast Guard; and

(B) includes the General Services Administration, with respect to the administration of a facility described in paragraph (5)(B).

(5) EXECUTIVE FACILITY.—The term “executive facility”—

(A) means a facility that is owned or leased by an Executive agency; and

(B) includes a facility that is owned or leased by the General Services Administration on behalf of a judicial office.

(6) FEDERAL AGENCY.—The term “Federal agency” means an Executive agency, a legislative office, or a judicial office.

(7) JUDICIAL FACILITY.—The term “judicial facility” means a facility that is owned or leased by a judicial office (other than a facility that is also a facility described in paragraph (5)(B)).

(8) JUDICIAL OFFICE.—The term “judicial office” means an entity of the judicial branch of the Federal Government.

(9) LEGISLATIVE FACILITY.—The term “legislative facility” means a facility that is owned or leased by a legislative office.

(10) LEGISLATIVE OFFICE.—The term “legislative office” means an entity of the legislative branch of the Federal Government.

(11) STATE.—The term “State” has the meaning given the term in section 658P of the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 9858n).

SEC. 703. PROVIDING QUALITY CHILD CARE IN FEDERAL FACILITIES. (a) EXECUTIVE FACILITIES.—

(1) STATE AND LOCAL LICENSING REQUIREMENTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any entity sponsoring a child care facility in an executive facility shall—

(i) comply with child care standards described in paragraph (2) that are no less stringent than applicable State or local licensing requirements that are related to the provision of child care in the State or locality involved; or

(ii) obtain the applicable State or local licenses, as appropriate, for the facility.

(B) COMPLIANCE.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act—

(i) the entity shall comply, or make substantial progress (as determined by the Administrator) toward complying, with subparagraph (A); and

(ii) any contract or licensing agreement used by an Executive agency for the provision of child care services in the child care facility shall include a condition that the child care be provided by an entity that complies with the standards described in subparagraph (A)(i) or obtains the licenses described in subparagraph (A)(ii).

(2) HEALTH, SAFETY, AND FACILITY STANDARDS.—The Administrator shall by regulation establish standards relating to health, safety, facilities, facility design, and other aspects of child care that the Administrator determines to be appropriate for child care in executive facilities, and require child care facilities, and entities sponsoring child care facilities, in executive facilities to comply with the standards. The standards shall include requirements that child care facilities be inspected for, and be free of, lead hazards.

(3) ACCREDITATION STANDARDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall issue regulations requiring, to the maximum extent possible, any entity sponsoring an eligible child care facility (as defined by the Administrator) in an executive facility to comply with standards of a child care accreditation entity.

(B) COMPLIANCE.—The regulations shall require that, not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act—

(i) the entity shall comply, or make substantial progress (as determined by the Administrator) toward complying, with the standards; and

(ii) any contract or licensing agreement used by an Executive agency for the provision of child care services in the child care facility shall include a condition that the child care be provided by an entity that complies with the standards.

(4) EVALUATION AND COMPLIANCE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall evaluate the compliance, with the requirements of paragraph (1) and the regulations issued pursuant to paragraphs (2) and (3), as appropriate, of child care facilities, and entities sponsoring child care facilities, in executive facilities. The Administrator may conduct the evaluation of such a child care facility or entity directly, or through an agreement with another Federal agency or private entity, other than the Federal agency for which the child care facility is providing services. If the Administrator determines, on the basis of such an evaluation, that the child care facility or entity is not in compliance with the requirements, the Administrator shall notify the Executive agency.

(B) EFFECT OF NONCOMPLIANCE.—On receipt of the notification of noncompliance issued by the Administrator, the head of the Executive agency shall—

(i) if the entity operating the child care facility is the agency—

(I) not later than 2 business days after the date of receipt of the notification, correct any deficiencies that are determined by the Administrator to be life threatening or to present a risk of serious bodily harm;

(II) not later than 4 months after the date of receipt of the notification, develop and provide to the Administrator a plan to correct any other deficiencies in the operation of the facility and bring the facility and entity into compliance with the requirements;

(III) provide the parents of the children receiving child care services at the child care facility and employees of the facility with a notification detailing the deficiencies described in subclauses (I) and (II) and actions that will be taken to correct the deficiencies, and post a copy of the notification in a conspicuous place in the facility for 5 working days or until the deficiencies are corrected, whichever is later;

(IV) bring the child care facility and entity into compliance with the requirements and certify to the Administrator that the facility and entity are in compliance, based on an onsite evaluation of the facility conducted by an individual with expertise in child care health and safety; and

(V) in the event that deficiencies determined by the Administrator to be life threatening or to present a risk of serious bodily harm cannot be corrected within 2 business days after the date of receipt of the notification, close the child care facility, or the affected portion of the facility, until the deficiencies are corrected and notify the Administrator of the closure; and

(ii) if the entity operating the child care facility is a contractor or licensee of the Executive agency—

(I) require the contractor or licensee, not later than 2 business days after the date of receipt of the notification, to correct any deficiencies that are determined by the Administrator to be life threatening or to present a risk of serious bodily harm;

(II) require the contractor or licensee, not later than 4 months after the date of receipt of the notification, to develop and provide to the head of the agency a plan to correct any other deficiencies in the operation of the child care facility and bring the facility and entity into compliance with the requirements;

(III) require the contractor or licensee to provide the parents of the children receiving child care services at the child care facility and employees of the facility with a notification detailing the deficiencies described in subclauses (I) and (II) and actions that will be taken to correct the deficiencies, and to post a copy of the notification in a conspicuous place in the facility for 5 working days or until the deficiencies are corrected, whichever is later;

(IV) require the contractor or licensee to bring the child care facility and entity into compliance with the requirements and certify to the head of the agency that the facility and entity are in compliance, based on an onsite evaluation of the facility conducted by an independent entity with expertise in child care health and safety; and

(V) in the event that deficiencies determined by the Administrator to be life threatening or to present a risk of serious bodily harm cannot be corrected within 2 business days after the date of receipt of the notification, close the child care facility, or the affected portion of the facility, until the deficiencies are corrected and notify the Administrator of the closure, which closure may be grounds for the immediate termination or suspension of the contract or license of the contractor or licensee.

(C) COST REIMBURSEMENT.—The Executive agency shall reimburse the Administrator for the costs of carrying out subparagraph (A) for child care facilities located in an executive facility other than an executive facility of the General Services Administration. If an entity is sponsoring a child care facility for 2 or more Executive agencies, the Administrator shall allocate the reimbursement costs with respect to the entity among the agencies in a fair and equitable manner, based on the extent to which each agency is eligible to place children in the facility.

(5) DISCLOSURE OF PRIOR VIOLATIONS TO PARENTS AND FACILITY EMPLOYEES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall issue regulations that require that each entity sponsoring a child care facility in an executive facility, upon receipt by the child care facility or the entity (as applicable) of a request by any individual who is—

(i) a parent of any child enrolled at the facility;

(ii) a parent of a child for whom an application has been submitted to enroll at the facility; or

(iii) an employee of the facility; shall provide to the individual the copies and description described in subparagraph (B).

(B) COPIES AND DESCRIPTION.—The entity shall provide—

(i) copies of all notifications of deficiencies that have been provided in the past with respect to the facility under clause (i)(III) or (ii)(III), as applicable, of paragraph (4)(B); and

(ii) a description of the actions that were taken to correct the deficiencies.

(b) LEGISLATIVE FACILITIES.—

(1) ACCREDITATION.—The Chief Administrative Officer of the House of Representatives, the Librarian of Congress, and the head of a designated entity in the Senate shall ensure that, not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the corresponding child care facility obtains accreditation by a child care accreditation entity, in accordance with the accreditation standards of the entity.

(2) REGULATIONS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—If the corresponding child care facility does not maintain accreditation status with a child care accreditation entity, the Chief Administrative Officer of the House of Representatives, the Librarian of Congress, or the head of the designated entity in the Senate shall issue regulations governing the operation of the corresponding child care facility, to ensure the safety and quality of care of children placed in the facility. The regulations shall be no less stringent in content and effect than the requirements of subsection (a)(1) and the regulations issued by the Administrator under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (a), except to the extent that appropriate administrative officers make the determination described in subparagraph (B).

(B) MODIFICATION MORE EFFECTIVE.—The determination referred to in subparagraph (A) is a determination, for good cause shown and stated together with the regulations, that a modification of the regulations would be more effective for the implementation of the requirements and standards described in subsection (a) for the corresponding child care facilities, and entities sponsoring the corresponding child care facilities, in legislative facilities.

(3) CORRESPONDING CHILD CARE FACILITY.—In this subsection, the term “corresponding child care facility”, used with respect to the Chief Administrative Officer, the Librarian, or the head of a designated entity described in paragraph (1), means a child care facility operated by, or under a contract or licensing agreement with, an office of the House of Representatives, the Library of Congress, or an office of the Senate, respectively.

(c) JUDICIAL BRANCH STANDARDS AND COMPLIANCE.—

(1) STATE AND LOCAL LICENSING REQUIREMENTS HEALTH, SAFETY, AND FACILITY STANDARDS, AND ACCREDITATION STANDARDS.—The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall issue regulations for child care facilities, and entities sponsoring child care facilities, in judicial facilities, which shall be no less stringent in content and effect than the requirements of subsection (a)(1) and the regulations issued by the Administrator under paragraphs (2) and (3) of subsection (a), except to the extent that the Director may determine, for good cause shown and stated together with the regulations, that a modification of such regulations would be more effective for the implementation of the requirements and standards described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of subsection (a) for child care facilities, and entities sponsoring child care facilities, in judicial facilities.

(2) EVALUATION AND COMPLIANCE.—

(A) DIRECTOR OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES COURTS.—The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts shall have the same authorities and duties with respect to the evaluation of, compliance of, and cost reimbursement for child care facilities, and entities sponsoring child care facilities, in judicial facilities as the Administrator has under subsection (a)(4) with respect to the evaluation of, compliance of, and cost reimbursement for such centers and entities sponsoring such centers, in executive facilities.

(B) HEAD OF A JUDICIAL OFFICE.—The head of a judicial office shall have the same authorities and duties with respect to the compliance of and cost reimbursement for child care facilities, and entities sponsoring child care facilities, in judicial facilities as the head of an Executive agency has under subsection (a)(4) with respect to the compliance of and cost reimbursement for such centers and entities sponsoring such centers, in executive facilities.

(d) APPLICATION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, if 8 or more child care facilities are sponsored in facilities owned or leased by an Executive agency, the Administrator shall delegate to the head of the agency the evaluation and compliance responsibilities assigned to the Administrator under subsection (a)(4)(A).

(e) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, STUDIES, AND REVIEWS.—The Administrator may provide technical assistance, and conduct and provide the results of studies and reviews, for Executive agencies, and entities sponsoring child care facilities in executive facilities, on a reimbursable basis, in order to assist the entities in complying with this section. The Chief Administrative Officer of the House of Representatives, the Librarian of Congress, the head of the designated Senate entity described in subsection (b), and the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, may provide technical assistance, and conduct and provide the results of studies and reviews, or request that the Administrator provide technical assistance, and conduct and provide the results of studies and reviews, for legislative offices and judicial offices, as appropriate, and entities operating child care facilities in legislative facilities or judicial facilities, as appropriate, on a reimbursable basis, in order to assist the entities in complying with this section.

(f) INTERAGENCY COUNCIL.—

(1) COMPOSITION.—The Administrator shall establish an interagency council, comprised of—

(A) representatives of all Executive agencies described in subsection (d) and other Executive agencies at the election of the heads of the agencies;

(B) a representative of the Chief Administrative Officer of the House of Representatives, at the election of the Chief Administrative Officer;

(C) a representative of the head of the designated Senate entity described in subsection (b), at the election of the head of the entity;

(D) a representative of the Librarian of Congress, at the election of the Librarian; and

(E) a representative of the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, at the election of the Director.

(2) FUNCTIONS.—The council shall facilitate cooperation and sharing of best practices, and develop and coordinate policy, regarding the provision of child care, including the provision of areas for nursing mothers and other lactation support facilities and services, in the Federal Government.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $900,000 for fiscal year 2000 and such sums as may be necessary for each subsequent fiscal year.

SEC. 704. FEDERAL CHILD CARE EVALUATION.

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator and the Director of the Office of Personnel Management shall jointly prepare and submit to Congress a report that evaluates child care provided by entities sponsoring child care facilities in executive facilities, legislative facilities, or judicial facilities.

(b) CONTENTS.—The evaluation shall contain, at a minimum—

(1) information on the number of children receiving child care described in subsection (a), analyzed by age, including information on the number of those children who are age 6 through 12;

(2) information on the number of families not using child care described in subsection (a) because of the cost of the child care; and

(3) recommendations for improving the quality and cost effectiveness of child care described in subsection (a), including recommendations of options for creating an optimal organizational structure and using best practices for the delivery of the child care.

SEC. 705. CHILD CARE SERVICES FOR FEDERAL EMPLOYEES. (a) IN GENERAL.—In addition to services authorized to be provided by an agency of the United States pursuant to section 616 of the Act of December 22, 1987 (40 U.S.C. 490b), an Executive agency that provides or proposes to provide child care services for Federal employees may use agency funds to provide the child care services, in a facility that is owned or leased by an Executive agency, or through a contractor, for civilian employees of the agency.

(b) AFFORDABILITY.—Funds so used with respect to any such facility or contractor shall be applied to improve the affordability of child care for lower income Federal employees using or seeking to use the child care services offered by the facility or contractor.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Administrator after consultation with the Director of the Office of Personnel Management, shall, within 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, issue regulations necessary to carry out this section.

(d) DEFINITION.—For purposes of this section, the term “Executive agency” has the meaning given the term by section 105 of title 5, United States Code, but does not include the General Accounting Office.

SEC. 706. MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS RELATING TO CHILD CARE PROVIDED BY FEDERAL AGENCIES. (a) AVAILABILITY OF FEDERAL CHILD CARE CENTERS FOR ONSITE CONTRACTORS; PERCENTAGE GOAL.—Section 616 of the Act of December 22, 1987 (40 U.S.C. 490b) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking “officer or agency of the United States” and inserting “Federal agency or officer of a Federal agency”; and

(B) by striking paragraphs (2) and (3) and inserting the following:

“(2) the officer or agency determines that the space will be used to provide child care and related services to—

“(A) children of Federal employees or onsite Federal contractors; or

“(B) dependent children who live with Federal employees or onsite Federal contractors; and

“(3) the officer or agency determines that the individual or entity will give priority for available child care and related services in the space to Federal employees and onsite Federal contractors.”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(e)(1)(A) The Administrator of General Services shall confirm that at least 50 percent of aggregate enrollment in Federal child care centers governmentwide are children of Federal employees or onsite Federal contractors, or dependent children who live with Federal employees or onsite Federal contractors.

"(B) Each provider of child care services at an individual Federal child care center shall maintain 50 percent of the enrollment at the center of children described under subparagraph (A) as a goal for enrollment at the center.

"(C)(i) If enrollment at a center does not meet the percentage goal under subparagraph (B), the provider shall develop and implement a business plan with the sponsoring Federal agency to achieve the goal within a reasonable timeframe.

"(ii) The plan shall be approved by the Administrator of General Services based on—

"(I) compliance of the plan with standards established by the Administrator; and

"(II) the effect of the plan on achieving the aggregate Federal enrollment percentage goal.

"(2) The Administrator of General Services Administration may enter into public-private partnerships or contracts with non-governmental entities to increase the capacity, quality, affordability, or range of child care and related services and may, on a demonstration basis, waive subsection (a)(3) and paragraph (1) of this subsection."

(b) PAYMENT OF COSTS OF TRAINING PROGRAMS.—Section 616(b)(3) of such Act (40 U.S.C. 490b(b)(3)) is amended to read as follows:

"(3) If a Federal agency has a child care facility in a Federal space, or is a sponsoring agency for a child care facility in a Federal space, the agency or the General Services Administration may pay accreditation fees, including renewal fees, for that center to be accredited. Any Federal agency that provides or proposes to provide child care services for children referred to in subsection (a)(2), may reimburse any Federal employee or any person employed to provide the services for the costs of training programs, conferences, and meetings and related travel, transportation, and subsistence expenses incurred in connection with those activities. Any per diem allowance made under this section shall not exceed the rate specified in regulations prescribed under section 5707 of title 5, United States Code."

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 616(c) of such Act (40 U.S.C. 490b(c)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "Federal" before "child care centers"; and

(2) by striking "Federal workers" and inserting "Federal employees".

(d) PROVISION OF CHILD CARE BY PRIVATE ENTITIES.—Section 616(d) of such Act (40 U.S.C. 490b(d)) is amended to read as follows:

"(d)(1) If a Federal agency has a child care facility in a Federal space, or is a sponsoring agency for a child care facility in a Federal space, the agency, the child care center board of directors, or the General Services Administration may enter into an agreement with 1 or more private entities under which the private entities would assist in defraying the general operating expenses of the child care providers including salaries and tuition assistance programs at the facility.

"(2)(A) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, if a Federal agency does not have a child care program, or if the Administrator of General Services has identified a need for child care for Federal employees at a Federal agency providing child care services that do not meet the requirements of subsection (a), the agency or the Administrator may enter into an agreement with a non-Federal, licensed, and accredited child care facility, or a planned child care facility that will become licensed and accredited, for the provision of child care services for children of Federal employees.

"(B) Before entering into an agreement, the head of the Federal agency shall determine that child care services to be provided through the agreement are more cost effectively provided through the arrangement than through establishment of a Federal child care facility.

"(C) The Federal agency may provide any of the services described in subsection (b)(3) if, in exchange for the services, the facility reserves child care spaces for children referred to in subsection (a)(2), as agreed to by the parties. The cost of any such services provided by a Federal agency to a Federal child care facility on behalf of another Federal agency shall be reimbursed by the receiving agency.

"(3) This subsection does not apply to residential child care programs."

(e) PILOT PROJECTS.—Section 616 of such Act (40 U.S.C. 490b) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(f)(1) Upon approval of the agency head, a Federal agency may conduct a pilot project not otherwise authorized by law for no more than 2 years to test innovative approaches to providing alternative forms of quality child care assistance for Federal employees. A Federal agency head may extend a pilot project for an additional 2-year period. Before any pilot project may be implemented, a determination shall be made by the agency head that initiating the pilot project would be more cost-effective than establishing a new Federal child care facility. Costs of any pilot project shall be paid solely by the agency conducting the pilot project.

"(2) The Administrator of General Services shall serve as an information clearinghouse for pilot projects initiated by other Federal agencies to disseminate information concerning the pilot projects to the other Federal agencies.

"(3) Within 6 months after completion of the initial 2-year pilot project period, a Federal agency conducting a pilot project under this subsection shall provide for an evaluation of the impact of the project on the delivery of child care services to Federal employees, and shall submit the results of the evaluation to the Administrator of General Services. The Administrator shall share the results with other Federal agencies."

(f) BACKGROUND CHECK.—Section 616 of such Act (40 U.S.C. 490b) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(g) Each Federal child care center located in a Federal space shall ensure that each employee of the center (including any employee whose employment began before the date of enactment of this subsection) shall undergo a criminal history background check consistent with section 231 of the Crime Control Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 13041)."

(g) DEFINITIONS.—Section 616 of such Act (40 U.S.C. 490b) is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(h) In this section:

"(1) The term 'Federal agency' has the meaning given the term 'Executive agency' in section 702 of the Federal Employees Child Care Act.

"(2) The terms 'Federal building' and 'Federal space' have the meanings given the term 'executive facility' in such section 702.

"(3) The term 'Federal child care center' means a child care center in an executive facility, as defined in such section 702.

"(4) The terms 'Federal contractor' and 'Federal employee' mean a contractor and an employee, respectively, of an Executive agency, as defined in such section 702."

This Act may be cited as the "Treasury and General Government Appropriations Act, 2000".

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate immediately proceed to executive session to consider the following nominations en bloc on the Executive Calendar, Nos. 157, 158, 161, 162, and 163.

I finally ask unanimous consent that the nominations be confirmed en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements related to the nominations appear in the RECORD, the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action, and the Senate then return to legislative business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations considered and confirmed en bloc are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

David L. Goldwyn, of the District of Columbia to be an Assistant Secretary of Energy (International Affairs).

James B. Lewis, of New Mexico, to be Director of the Office of Minority Economic Impact, Department of Energy.

THE JUDICIARY

T. John Ward, of Texas, to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Texas.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

Stuart E. Eizenstat, of Maryland, to be Deputy Secretary of the Treasury.

Lewis Andrew Sachs, of Connecticut, to be an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume legislative session.

REGISTRATION OF MASS MAILINGS

The filing date for 1999 second quarter mass mailings is July 26, 1999. If

TREASURY AND GENERAL GOVERNMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

AMENDMENT NO. 1240

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I send to the desk an amendment to Calendar No. 169, previously passed by the Senate. I ask unanimous consent it be immediately adopted and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1240) was agreed to, as follows:

Amend page 57, line 14 by reducing the dollar figure by $17,000,000.

On page 11, line 16 strike "$569,225,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$570,345,000".

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 106-4

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the following treaty transmitted to the Senate on July 13, 1999, by the President of the United States: Extradition Treaty with Paraguay (Treaty Document No. 106-4).

I further ask that the treaty be considered as having been read the first time; that it be referred, with accompanying papers, to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed; and that the President's message be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The message of the President is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the Extradition Treaty between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Republic of Paraguay, signed at Washington on November 9, 1998.

In addition, I transmit, for the information of the Senate, the report of the Department of State with respect to the Treaty. As the report states, the Treaty will not require implementing legislation.

The provisions in this Treaty follow generally the form and content of extradition treaties recently concluded by the United States.

Upon entry into force, this Treaty would enhance cooperation between the law enforcement authorities of both countries, and thereby make a significant contribution to international law enforcement efforts. The Treaty would supersede the Extradition Treaty between the United States of America and the Republic of Paraguay signed at Asuncion on May 24, 1973.

I recommend that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to the Treaty and give its advice and consent to ratification.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 13, 1999.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, JULY 14, 1999

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate complete its business today it stand in adjournment until the hour of 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, July 14. Further, I ask unanimous consent that on Wednesday, immediately following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate stand in a period of morning business until 10 a.m., with Senators speaking for up to 5 minutes each with the following exceptions: Senator GRAMS of Minnesota, 15 minutes; Senator DASCHLE, or his designee, for 15 minutes.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, Mr. President, I ask the minority's morning business be set aside, 10 minutes for the Senator from Wisconsin, Mr. FEINGOLD, and 5 minutes for the Senator from Rhode Island, Mr. REED.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is that in lieu of Senator DASCHLE's time?

Mr. REID. That is in lieu of the time for Senator DASCHLE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. JEFFORDS. For the information of all Senators, the Senate will convene at 9:30 and be in a period of morning business until 10 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will immediately resume consideration of S. 1344, the Patients' Bill of Rights legislation. Debate will continue on the pending amendment until all time has expired. Additional amendments are expected to be offered and debated throughout tomorrow's session of the Senate. Therefore, Senators should anticipate votes throughout the day on Wednesday. As always, Senators will be notified as votes are scheduled.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. JEFFORDS. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask unanimous consent the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 8:41 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, July 14, 1999, at 9:30 a.m.

CONFIRMATIONS

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

DECLARE A NONVIOLENT AND DIPLOMATIC WAR TO SAVE KASHMIR

HON. MAJOR R. OWENS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, recent violent developments in Kashmir, the disputed territory between Pakistan and India, have highlighted a very dangerous blunder of neglect in U.S. and international diplomacy. The failure of the world community under the auspices of the United Nations to demand a self-determination referendum for Kashmir has resulted in a festering stalemate with very serious potential consequences for that region and the entire Earth which would have to absorb radioactive contamination from any full scale war between two recently declared nuclear powers.

Now, before the temperature rises any further, it is imperative that we maximize the effort to achieve a nonviolent solution to this crisis that has persisted for much too long. The honorable and civilized solution is a very simple one. Let the people of Kashmir vote to determine their own destiny. Pressure both Pakistan and India to allow for a Democratic solution, the ballot box and not the gun—or nuclear bombs.

It is a well-known fact that India refused to accept a self-determining referendum. The nation that has proclaimed itself as the world's largest democracy has doggedly refused to permit the Kashmir people to vote. To placate India it has been proposed that a referendum be held which does not offer the option for Kashmir to become a part of Pakistan. A vote would be for statehood within India or for an independent Kashmir nation.

The speculation is that Indian officials fear that the predominantly Muslim population of Kashmir will not vote to become a state within the predominantly Hindu nation of India. It would indeed be ignoble for the international community to allow India to continue with this inhumane, anti-democratic stranglehold on Kashmir because it fears the outcome of a vote for self-determination.

A studied neglect of the Kashmir question by the world powers is no longer possible. The recent outbreak of warfare demonstrates the impossibility of the two nations of India and Pakistan ever resolving the issue through bilateral negotiations. The Chinese who have borders with both countries and a direct involvement in the Kashmir dispute will also not be very helpful in resolving the conflict. The problem of Kashmir must be immediately placed on the high priority agenda of the United Nations Security Council.

Surely the Kosovo tragedy has shown the citizens of the world who are not indifferent to human suffering that the failure to pursue aggressive nonviolent actions and intense diplomacy will result in an inevitable catastrophe.

IN HONOR OF JIM RUCKI

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Jim Rucki, a basketball coach for 10 years and baseball coach for 13 seasons at Rocky River High School, home of the Pirates.

Rucki capped his career at Rocky River High School by coaching his players to 22 wins this season and 20 victories last season thus leading them to their second consecutive state championship. Rocky River High School is the first Cleveland-area public school to make consecutive state-title game appearances since 1979.

While a basketball coach, Rucki led his teams to 160 victories including two conference titles, two district championships, and nine sectional titles. After more than 13 wonderful years of coaching, Coach Jim Rucki has proved himself to be an outstanding coach who truly loves what he does.

Not only is Coach Rucki an exceptional coach, he is also a modest one as well. Coach Rucki is known for saying that his players are the ones responsible for all the awards that he has earned.

However, Coach Rucki also stresses hard work off the field. As part of the educational process of his players, he expects that his players earn good grades in all of their academic classes. He truly knows the importance of education in the development of a young person's character.

Although Coach Rucki is moving, he will however continue to coach boys basketball, one of the sports he loves. Both his players and a very grateful community will deeply miss him and all of his hard work and we thank Coach Rucki for all that he has done. I ask you fellow colleagues to join with me and the community of Rocky River in congratulating Coach Jim Rucki on an excellent job throughout his coaching career.

DRINKING AND DRIVING AND DRUG TREATMENT

HON. BERNARD SANDERS

OF VERMONT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD statements by high school students from my home State of Vermont, who were speaking at my recent town meeting on issues facing young people today. I am asking that you please insert these statements in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as I believe that the views of these young persons will benefit my colleagues.

DRINKING AND DRIVING

(On Behalf of Chelsea Downing and Rebekah Blaisdell)

Chelsea Downing: Drunk driving has become a major problem in the small towns of northern Vermont. Just a year ago, four teens were killed in a car accident on their way back from Canada. Alcohol was proved to be a factor in this crash. Since the drinking age above the border is 18, teenagers drive to Montreal to enjoy bar-hopping with their friends. The driving coming home from the bars can be hazardous.

How can these problems be prevented? The question has lingered in the minds of many, since the number of Vermont traffic deaths involving drunk drivers under 21 have increased. Stopping underage drinking altogether is an extremely difficult task. If we can reduce the driving while young people are under the influence, serious deaths and injuries can be prevented. We need to focus on the driving aspect, because it yields much more serious consequences than just drinking alone.

The teen curfew is one action the state legislature has discussed. The curfew will prevent drivers under 18 from being on the roads after 11 p.m. This would restrict inexperienced drivers from being on the road when the risk period is high. But it also restricts young people from doing normal things, such as going to movies or the drive-in, or simply getting together with their friends. People above 18 can still drive. These are the people who can drink legally in Montreal. This curfew will not affect these teens, who face a long drive home from the bars in Canada. We have proof that this trip can be fatal.

The state of Vermont has recognized that we have a problem. Increased numbers of police officers, strict DWI laws, and teen curfews are a few of the things they are in charge of. These measures can help solve the problem, but what really will make the difference is what these teenagers are exposed to in their everyday lives. Their school, friends, and especially their parents are all responsible for the decisions they will have to make.

Teens need to recognize the consequences of drunk driving—that death can result. Real stories of the families who have lost children to accidents best express these outcomes. Schools should be obligated to hold assemblies for students, telling them real stories about what could happen. These presentations are necessary, especially for events such as homecoming and the prom, where underage drinking and driving is apt to occur.

Parents need to be involved in their children's lives, especially during the high-risk years. Increasing awareness is the best way to teach teenagers to consider the risks before involving themselves in dangerous situations.

Rebekah Blaisdell: As everyone knows, life and death goes hand and hand, but nobody ever tells us how to deal with it. Family members die, our leaders die; but our classmates aren't supposed to. Lately my life that had more death than anyone would like to deal with. In the past month, two of my classmates have died unexpectedly. Scott was a very good friend of mine, and I have known Gary since first grade. I will remember them forever, and they have a special place in my heart.

In each of these cases, we will never know why they died, if it was an accident or if it was of their own choice. This decision is left up to those of us who are still here. We will never know for sure, but every day I wonder if there was something I could have done. I don't understand why Scott and Gary had to die at such a young age, but my life will go on. I have to come to terms with this senseless loss. But lately, it seems the school has forgotten what happened just a month ago, three days of extra counselors because of Scott's death. Is that what his life was worth? Three days?

I will never forget what happened during my senior year, but soon this school will. In four years, nobody will know Scott or Gary's name, and if they do, they won't understand what happened to them or those around them. It bothers me, because people should remember. Events like this should never be forgotten, because if they are history will repeat itself and more people will die.

Even if Scott and Gary's deaths were accidents, schools should teach about depression, and provide a way for students to get help for themselves. I know each school has guidance counselors. But who wants to talk to somebody who might not even know your name?

All my life, I've had to deal with depression. And most people don't truly understand. I'm only 17. But already I have had at least seven of my best friends attempt suicide, and a couple have succeeded. People need to know where and how to find help, and if they're finding help for a friend, they need to know that their friend is not going to hate them, and if they do, they're still alive, and that's the point.

If people don't know or don't want to admit that they may be depressed, there is a bigger chance that they will take matters into their own hands. Depression is not a dirty or a bad word, and people who are depressed aren't any different from anyone else, they just need a little more support.

When it comes down to life and death, I've always opted for life. Life may be tough, but death is so final. Once the trigger is pulled or the plunge is taken, there is no turning back. No matter how hard life is, it will always get better.

DRUG TREATMENT

(On behalf of Lucas Gockley and Aaron Gerhardt)

Lucas Gockley: We are here today to talk to you about the methadone maintenance treatment for heroin addicts. Heroin a highly addictive drug derived from morphine. Some of the long-term diseases stemming from heroin use are weight loss, heart disease, AIDS, and death, eventually.

In Vermont, heroin use is increasing dramatically. In 1994, 118 people in a state-run treatment center said they used heroin. In 1996, 154 people said they were addicts. There has been a 50-percent increase in heroin use in the Rutland area alone. In 1997 in the Rutland area, there have been two drug store robberies and one bank robbery by heroin addicts looking for money to fund their habit. There have also been eight deaths due to heroin overdose in just Rutland County in 1996 and 1997.

State police figures show that crime due to heroin addiction has almost tripled in this state in a period between 1996 and 1997. Here at the university, there is a federally-funded detox center run by UVM's Dr. Warren Diggie, and the figures show that 60 percent of the heroin addicts he sees are repeat visitors.

Heroin use is on the rise in Vermont, and help for addicts is virtually nonexistent. The only effective treatment is the methadone maintenance treatment.

Aaron Gerhardt: Vermont has no real treatment facilities which addicts who have a desire to get off of heroin can use.

One question to ask about methadone maintenance treatment is, Does it work? In the European Archives of Psychiatry and Clinical Neurosciences, researchers found that "MMT"—or methadone maintenance treatment—"centers have a real efficiency, not only to reduce illicit opiate abuse between 50 and 80 percent, but also to reduce criminality, HIV risk, and mortality, and also to improve social rehabilitation without introducing other alternative substance abuse." Another study published in the American Journal of Drug and Alcohol Abuse found that heroin addicts who go through methadone treatment are less likely to use cocaine, amphetamines, tranquilizers and marijuana. It is clear that MMT does work.

The reason that MMI facilities need to be government-funded is because, currently, Medicare and Medicaid do not cover methadone maintenance treatments, and, frankly, the treatment is too expensive for the average addict to pay for. So it is much easier for them to stay home, using the welfare, and continue using heroin, which just contributes to the cultural stereotype of the free-loading drug addict. Government funding can help ease the burden for the addict, and it shows a concern on the part of the government to help the individual. Instead of condemning them as criminals, it just makes them seem more that they have a problem, instead of being bad people.

Also, within these facilities, the need for confidentiality is imperative. Addicts have to have a place where they can go to and not feel threatened by the threat of prosecution, persecution, and shame. The MMT centers need to have flexible hours so that addicts who are trying to stay productive members of society can go to them. A nine-to-five day for a center being open is not that feasible for an addict who is trying to hold a day job. Simply put, the best time for the clinical centers to be open would be 24 hours a day, which, granted, would be a little bit inconvenient for people, but for the addict, it helps.

It is also very important that these centers have counseling facilities available, and counselors available. The chances of success in methadone maintenance treatment greatly increases with psychotherapy. According to a 1995 study published in The Journal of Psychiatry, addicts who underwent psychotherapy were much more likely to complete the treatment and become well-rounded, productive members of society once more, and stay off the heroin.

So, over all, the benefits to Vermont are clear: MMT helps to lower crime, HIV risk, and death. Also, through MMI, addicts are more likely to stay off drugs for the rest of their lives and become productive members of society.

Congressman Sanders: Thanks. It sounds like you did some good research.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE DR. GENO SACCOMANNO

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is with a heavy and saddened heart that I now rise to honor the incomparable life of a man who gave immeasurably to his community, state, nation and all of humanity: Dr. Geno Saccomanno. During the course of his distinguished life, Dr. Saccomanno performed seemingly infinite acts of compassion, care, and kindness that impacted, very literally, many hundreds of thousands of people. Today, Mr. Speaker, as family and friends remember the remarkable life of this great American, I too would like to pay tribute to Dr. Geno Saccomanno and thank him for the remarkable life of service that he led.

Beginning in 1948 and continuing until the last days of his life, Dr. Saccomanno served with widely acclaimed distinction as a medical researcher at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, Colorado. In his time there, he would quickly become a driving force behind the transformation of St. Mary's from a small rural hospital to a regional hub of medical service. Ultimately, the rise of St. Mary's Hospital to the position of stature it now enjoys is irrevocably tied to the extraordinary work that Dr. Saccomanno did on its behalf.

Beyond bringing great renown to St. Mary's Hospital, Dr. Saccomanno's tireless efforts in the field of lung cancer research—the cause to which he devoted his life, also earned him great personal acclaim as a leading figure within his profession. His exhaustive research of cancer within uranium miners, which witnessed his testing of nearly 18,000 uranium miners, was internationally lauded for the medical breakthroughs it produced. Dr. Saccomanno's sputum cytology method for lung cancer screening, one of the many offshoots of his research in this area, is still used by hospitals both in the United States and Japan.

In addition to these professional achievements, Dr. Saccomanno also published a medical textbook, 80 research papers and invented medical instruments—including a brush to take cervical samples for Pap smears and a tube used in lung cancer screening.

While medical history will long remember him for his research prowess, the Grand Junction community will always proudly recall Dr. Saccomanno as a philanthropist of unmatched generosity. A statement offered by Dr. Saccomanno several years ago embodies this notion: "To help people, in our opinion, is a privilege. There is no endeavor that gives more pleasure than helping those in need." More than a superficial credo, his statement appears to be the foundation upon which he led his life. In all, Dr. Saccomanno gave beyond measure to causes too many to list. Most notably, Dr. Saccomanno and his family established the Saccomanno Higher Education Foundation, a $2.5 million endowment supporting high school graduates in need of financial support for college.

It is with this humble gesture, Mr. Speaker, that I say thank you and good-bye to a man that I am proud to have called a friend. Although no words or tribute could ever adequately express the depth of his life accomplishments, nor communicate the level of sadness we feel at his passing, I am hopeful that Dr. Saccomanno's wife, Virginia, daughters Carol, Linda, and Lenna, and all of his grandchildren will take solace in the knowledge that the world is a better place for having known Geno Saccomanno.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. RONNIE SHOWS

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Speaker, because inclement weather delayed my connecting flight from Jackson, Mississippi, on Monday, July 12, 1999, I was unable to cast recorded votes on rollcalls No. 277, 278, and 279.

Had I been present, I would have voted as follows: "Yea" on rollcall 277 to approve the Journal; "yea" on rollcall No. 278 to suspend the rules and agree to H. Con. Res. 107, expressing the Sense of Congress concerning the sexual relationships between adults and children; and "yea" on rollcall No. 279 to suspend the rules and agree to H. Con. Res. 117, expressing the Sense of the Congress concerning United Nations General Assembly Resolution ES-10/6

IN HONOR OF CLINT NAGEOTTE

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Clint Nageotte of the Brooklyn High School baseball team. Clint Nageotte has been playing the game he loves from the Little League fields to the fields of Brooklyn High School.

Rewriting the Brooklyn High School records, Clint has proved himself as both a remarkable pitcher and outstanding hitter. As a four-year letterman, Clint has 25 career victories, 326 strikeouts, 39 home runs, and 136 RBIs.

Leading his conference championship team all the way to their first State Final Four play-off in school history, Clint has a hitting average of .652 with 19 home runs this year alone. As a pitcher, Clint has an outstanding 7-2 record and an impressive 0.75 earned run average. Also leading the area, he struck out 119 batters in 56 innings of pitching.

Clint has been honored by the Cleveland Plain Dealer as The Player of the Year. Furthermore, Clint is a recipient of Mike Garcia Award, a very prestigious award given by the Cleveland Indians Baseball Club and the Wahoo Club. The Seattle Mariners have also chosen Clint in the fifth-round draft pick.

Clint has proved himself both on and off the field as an excellent team player and outstanding young man. Recognized both locally and nationally, I ask you to please join me in congratulating both Clint and his family on a job well done.

TRIBUTE TO THE LATE CAPTAIN
WILLIAM Y. CLARK

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor an entrepreneur, Captain William Y. Clark, a Long Island businessman who recently passed away at the age of 86.

Ask any parent and I am sure they will agree that leaving a legacy such as the reins of a family business is of great significance. Skillfully maintaining and expanding such an enterprise demands the infusion of innovative ideas which was William's speciality.

Captain William Clark was born in Shelter Island, Long Island, in 1913. He was educated at Shelter Island schools and Mt. Hermon College, in Massachusetts. Trained as a youth on diesel engines, the company he inherited has been in the Clark family continuously since 1790, when the first ferry ran.

He spent his life serving the community at the helm of South Ferry, Inc., the ferry service that runs from North Haven (outside Sag Harbor) to Shelter Island. Under Captain Clark's watchful eye, the company has become what it is today, a fleet of four boats which can hold up to twenty cars apiece.

Captain Clark was a longtime member of the Lions Club, East End Church of Christ and, when not on call with his company, a member of Shelter Island Fire Department. He also served on the board of Timothy Hill Children's Ranch in Riverhead.

The night before he passed away, he laid in a deep sleep. He would open his eyes, struggle for a breath, and then fall peacefully asleep again. However, when his family began to sing "God Bless America," he would awake and spread a truly joyous smile on his tired face. He could not speak very well, but he summoned the strength to share a few more laughs with his family. He fell asleep soon after, waking to greet his youngest grandchild, Shelli, who had flown in from college to be with him.

To his two children, four grandchildren, and one great-grandchild, Captain Clark will be remembered as the patriarch of a family business spanning more than two hundred years. To a great number of those in the community, he will be looked upon as a man who quietly helped to maintain their precious quality of life.

Captain Clark embodied the type of role model and innovator that all would have enjoyed being around and looked up to.

Colleagues, Mr. Clark is a community leader who will be sorely missed.

TRIBUTE TO JOHNNY CANALES

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask the entire House of Representatives to join me in commending a giant in the U.S. entertainment industry, Johnny Canales.

Tomorrow, on July 14, Johnny will receive the keys to the City of Brownville from Mayor Blanca Vela at an event intended to showcase how the United States educational system works. It is sponsored by the Students in Free Enterprise Alumnus, and will be televised live on Telemundo.

Johnny and his beautiful wife, Nora, have always been interested in the educational system of this country, but now have a personal stake in it since they now have a baby who will begin an education in 4-5 years.

As the Chairman of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Task Force on the Arts and Entertainment, I am delighted to tell you about my long-time friend, and Corpus Christi native, Johnny Canales. Johnny Canales is an extraordinary entertainer who touches the hearts, and tickles the fancies, of viewers and listeners of all ages and all income brackets throughout the world. He is a host-extraordinaire.

Today, and for many, many years, he has hosted "The Johnny Canales Show," a popular television show which showcases Hispanic talents from the Southwest and Mexico. Johnny's signature line then and now, when introducing groups or singers, is: "You got it." He brings stature and commitment to any endeavor with which he is associated.

In 1992, when I was serving as Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus Institute (CHCI), I had Johnny come to Washington to co-host the Institute's annual gala, the largest gathering of Hispanic elected officials in the country. True to form, he charmed each and every person there.

I was most impressed with the reception Johnny got over in Mount Pleasant, the predominantly Hispanic enclave in northeast Washington. CHCI once held afternoon concerts the day prior to the annual gala to share the sense of commonality with people in the community who could not afford the price of tickets to the Gala.

Johnny hosted the talents that would play at the Gala the following evening. Knowing that Johnny Canales would be the host was as big a draw as the bands which would be playing. I watched in awe as little boys and girls, largely of Central American heritage, cautiously walked up to Johnny to shake his hand . . . inevitably, they all said, "You got it," mimicking his signature line.

Mr. Speaker, since our business keeps me here this week and away from my friends who are celebrating Johnny's career, I hope all of you will join me in commemorating this patriot and great Hispanic talent.

SALUTE TO THE CITY OF YOAKUM, TEXAS

HON. RON PAUL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the City of Yoakum, Texas, which will celebrate its 112th birthday on Wednesday, July 28, 1999, with a festival at the city's Heritage Museum.

Yoakum is located partially in western Lavaca County and partially in eastern DeWitt County. Today, the city is known as the "Leather Capital of the World," due primarily to the economic impact of 12 leather goods manufacturing firms and some 16 factory locations in Yoakum.

In its early years, Anglo-Americans used Yoakum as a gathering site for thousands of bawling Texas Longhorns that were grouped into cattle drives and driven along the Chisolm Trail to market. Yoakum's townsite was established in 1887 with the arrival of the San Antonio & Aransas Pass Railroad—the railroad of Yoakum's history.

Once, Yoakum was the "Green Wrap" tomato capita of the world and still commemorates this heritage with the annual "Tom Tom Festival." As that industry faded, the community leaders—namely Mr. C. C. Welhausen—fostered the idea that Yoakum needed another industry as a base to its economy. The result: a leather industry era that now employs some 1,500 and produces millions of dollars of the Yoakum area economy.

Beef production is also huge in Yoakum, and both Lavaca and DeWitt Counties rank in the top five counties in the State of Texas in cow-calf operations. A true cowboy culture exists in the Yoakum area due to the thousands of head of cattle grown on area ranches.

I am proud to represent a city so full of rich, Texas heritage. Mr. Speaker, I hope you will join me sending happy birthday wishes to the City of Yoakum, Texas.

IN HONOR OF SERGEANT RONALD ICELY AND HIS 31 YEARS OF DEDICATED SERVICE TO THE RESIDENTS OF THE CITY OF MILPITAS

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to honor and congratulate Sergeant Ronald Icelly, for serving the residents of the City of Milpitas for more than 31 outstanding years.

Sergeant Ronald Icelly attended Mt. Whitney High School in Visalia, CA, and graduated in 1965. He then continued his education at College of the Sequoias and San Jose State University. He began his career in public service as a reserve officer with the San Jose Police Department while at San Jose State University in 1967. On August 1, 1968, Ronald Icelly was appointed to the Milpitas Police Department. He was promoted to senior officer in 1973, and promoted to Sergeant in 1975.

During his many years of service, Sergeant Icelly has received numerous letters of appreciation and commendation from the citizens of Milpitas as well as from many government agencies. He has been praised by his past supervisors for the high quality of his work, his leadership skills and investigative experience.

In his tenure as a police officer, Ronald Icelly saw Milpitas grow from a small community to a thriving city of 65,000 people. As the city grew his charge became more demanding, but Sgt. Icelly continued to serve commendably.

Early in his career Sergeant Icelly became a member of the department's K-9 squad. He served as K-9 officer for five years with his canines, "Romell" and "Toma". He also received advanced training in supervision, and homicide and sexual assault investigation.

Sergeant Icelly has served as a field training officer and field supervisor in the patrol and traffic sections. He was also a supervisor in the Investigation Division and the lead investigator in "felony persons" crimes that included high profile homicide, robbery and sexual assault cases.

Sergeant Icelly has been very active with the youth of the community throughout his career. He coached PAL basketball, PAL baseball, and little league baseball for nine years. Sergeant Icelly was also a charter member of the Milpitas Police PAL Board of Directors.

The city will be honoring Sgt. Ronald Icelly at a retirement dinner on July 30, 1999. I would like to join them in applauding his hard work and dedication. He has a fine record of accomplishments and is an inspiring example of citizenship. I wish Sergeant Icelly the best in all his future endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO GUS LEMIEUX

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to World War I veteran and Fond du Lac Reservation tribe member Gus LeMieux.

Not only is Gus LeMieux the oldest (at 100 years) Fond du Lac Reservation tribe member, but he is also the oldest serving World War I veteran in Douglas County, WI. Gus joined the U.S. Navy in 1916 and served on the U.S.S. Rhode Island and the U.S.S. Massachusetts, as well as on an oil tanker. He also served in the U.S. military on a submarine tender during World War I.

Now the oldest Fond du Lac Reservation tribe member, Gus is well-known in the community. He is admired not only for his standing as an Elder, but also because of his kindness and gentleness. A hard worker, Gus is well-liked and greatly respected.

Gus is a pillar of the community, both as a veteran in the Armed Forces and as a tribe member. I know my colleagues join me in thanking Gus LeMieux for serving the Fond du Lac Reservation and the United States during the past century.

CONGRATULATING CERTAINTEED
ON THEIR 20TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Chowchilla CertainTeed Fiberglass Insulation Plant on their 20th Anniversary as a major contributor to the Chowchilla and Madera County communities.

CertainTeed began construction in 1978 and started operation on May 15, 1979. Since then, the plant has generated over $200 million in wages and taxes, which have helped the local communities to grow and improve. CertainTeed has been an active member of these communities and has participated in various projects. They are strong supporters of the "Bucks for Books" campaign; have adopted a section of Highway 99 and kept it clean for 6 years; provided sandbags for flood support during the Chowchilla flood of 1997; have supported the Penn Literacy program for Fairmead School; are involved in the Madera County Industrial Group; and have made themselves available to many more programs in their community.

CertainTeed has been recognized with many awards throughout the years: the CertainTeed Interplant Safety Award—Best Record in Accident Prevention, the National Safety Council Award, the Outstanding Safety Performance Award, 1,500,000 Hours with No Lost Time Accidents in 1966, 1,243,090 Hours with No Lost Time Accidents in 1985, Madera Economic Development Commission Recognition, the California Department of Conservation Award of Appreciation for Glass Recycling, and the Group President's Award.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate CertainTeed on their 20th Anniversary and for the service they have provided to their community. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing CertainTeed many more years of continued success.

TRIBUTE TO FIRE CHIEF J.D.
KNOX

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this time to recognize the unparalleled service of Springfield Fire Chief J.D. Knox. He was named by the Springfield Firefighters Union as "Firefighter of the Year." When he responded to the nomination he said, "I was shocked. I thought it was a joke." Two years ago when Chief Knox became chief he had big ideas. He was determined to do things that had never been done.

Chief Knox is currently lobbying for Fire Department controlled ambulance service. Implementing such a program would save money and increase response time according to Chief Knox. I would like to thank Chief Knox for his dedication and open-mindedness that has made the Springfield Fire Department a world class organization.

TRIBUTE TO WILLARD MUNGER

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to State Representative Willard Munger of Duluth, Minnesota, who died Sunday at the age of 88 after a valiant fight with cancer.

On Sunday, the State of Minnesota and the City of Duluth lost a great friend in Willard Munger. The environment lost a valuable ally and tireless advocate. He was a man who worked for forty years as a defender of the environment.

Willard, who was born in 1911 in a log cabin, credited his grandfather, Lyman Munger, with instilling his love of nature. Lyman Munger, a Minnesota farmer and conservationist, told Willard when he was a young boy that he could save Minnesota's wilderness from destruction if he became a politician. And so he did. He first ran for the state legislature in 1934, and although he lost, he did not give up. In 1954, he won a House seat representing West Duluth.

Willard Munger was a thoughtful, devoted, and dedicated public servant—the consummate legislator. He served in the Minnesota House of Representatives for 42 years, longer than anyone in my home state's history. He was also the oldest sitting legislator in Minnesota's history. Some legislators get amendments passed, a few get bills passed, but only a very small number of public servants leave a legacy. Willard Munger leaves a lasting legacy of cleaner air and water—a heritage that will benefit future generations.

In Minnesota, Willard Munger's name is synonymous with environmental protection. Because of his relentless efforts, future generations will enjoy cleaner lakes and rivers and less pollution in the air. As Chairman of the House Environmental and Natural Resources Committee, he was a tireless advocate of numerous environmental causes, including energy conservation, alternative energy sources and preserving wetlands. Perhaps most importantly, he created Minnesota's Environmental Trust Fund, which funds projects for environmental protection and outdoor recreation. His forty-year career is a monument for the protection of Minnesota's waters, woodlands and air quality, and we all owe him a deep debt of gratitude.

Willard has been recognized in the past for his environmental efforts by having the Minnesota-Wisconsin Boundary Trail and the animal care center at the Lake Superior Zoo named in his honor. Today, we remember Willard Munger as a true pioneer in Minnesota politics and for his enduring commitment to protecting the environment for future generations.

HONORING PRIVATE CHESTER
BEYMER

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Private Chester Beymer upon his approval by the Government of France for the award of the National Order of The Legion of Honor. This award is the highest honor in France during World War I and is authorized in recognition of the 80th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice on November 11, 1918.

Chester Beymer is 100 years old and a long time resident of Fresno. He served during World War I with the communications department of the U.S. Army Tank Corps, American Expeditionary Force. He enlisted in Los Angeles in August 1918 at age 19. Pvt. Beymer left for France that October as part of the Automatic Replacement Draft. Pvt. Beymer's duties in France involved working with two man French tanks at the U.S. Army Tank Corps Center in Langres, Haute Marne, France. He arrived shortly before the war ended and remembers being on a troop train on Armistice Day and seeing many French flags and townspeople cheering at the train stations. He came back to the United States in March 1919 on a Japanese troop ship.

Chester Beymer was born on a farm in Tonganoxie, Kansas in 1898; he was one of six children in his family. In 1904 his family moved to El Modeno, California and by 1913 was settled in the San Joaquin Valley near Lindsey. After returning from World War I Chester worked in the Fresno area with the Southern Pacific Railroad and then the Alcohol and Tobacco Unit. He later worked with the Sugar Pine Lumber Company until the early 1930's. After prohibition he joined the Alcohol Tax Unit and later in 1941 the Income Tax Unit of the Treasury Department where he retired from in 1968. One hobby Chester enjoyed was being a ham radio operator. He still does his own taxes and considers the airplane and jet propulsion to be two of the most important inventions of the 20th century. His advice to the younger generation is to study hard while in school. Chester's extended family includes three sons, four grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Private Chester Beymer for his service to his country. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Chester many more years of continued success and happiness.

AN AMERICAN HERO

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, they say heroes come in all shapes and sizes, now we know they come from Michael, Illinois. On July 4th, 23-year-old Army Spc. 4 Anthony Gilman became the first U.S. casualty of the multinational peacekeeping mission in Kosovo. He was tragically killed when hit by an out of control pickup truck that was being driven by a Macedonian civilian.

His father said, "We're very proud of him, to me he's a hero. He wanted to serve his country. He enjoyed it." Anthony was about halfway through a 4-year enlistment during which he served in Germany, Turkey, and Greece. I cannot portray how proud I am of Anthony. He selflessly served his country and made the supreme sacrifice for the good of not only his country but the world. Our hearts and prayers are with him and his family.

THE RESTORATION OF WOMEN'S CITIZENSHIP ACT

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Restoration of Women's Citizenship Act, legislation that corrects an antiquated law that mars our nation's history.

In 1922, Rose Bouslacchi, an American citizen, married Conrad Sabatini, a tailor by profession and an immigrant from northern Italy. When the couple married, a federal law existed which stripped women of their U.S. citizenship if they married alien men. Later that year the U.S. granted Conrad Sabatini the privilege of citizenship but in accordance with the law, refused to reinstate Rose Bouslacchi's citizenship.

During the course of her life Rose Bouslacchi reared a family of five daughters, each a college graduate and each a contributor to the well being of our nation. Four became teachers and one became a nurse. Rose Bouslacchi was an active member of her church and worked with her husband in the running of their business. Her life embodied the values of family and faith, representing the best of America. But, Rose Bouslacchi could never be called an American again.

Rose Bouslacchi was not alone. There were many women affected by this law. On September 22, 1922, the Congress recognized the gross inequality of the Act, and in a series of acts, created procedures to reinstate citizenship for most of the women affected by this law. But the changes will never help Rose Bouslacchi. By a legislative oversight, the women who married between 1907 and 1922 were not able to retain their citizenship until procedures were created in 1952, at which point many of these women had passed on. The Restoration of Women's Citizenship Act will rid our history completely of this discriminatory law by granting citizenship posthumously to the women who didn't live long enough to take advantage of the Nationality Act of 1952.

I urge all my colleagues to join me in this important effort by cosponsoring the Restoration of Women's Citizenship Act.

TRIBUTE TO DANIEL MOLESKY

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an esteemed educator, Daniel Molesky of Hibbing, Minnesota.

After serving 35 years as an educator and school administrator in the State of Minnesota, Daniel Molesky recently announced his retirement. He received advanced degrees in math, physics, engineering, education curriculum, and school administration. After completing his education, Mr. Molesky was promoted to the rank of Master Sergeant in the U.S. Army before beginning his teaching career.

Mr. Molesky's ability to engage his students in the classroom eventually led to his promotion to principal in the Hibbing School District. As principal of Washington Elementary School, and later Jefferson Elementary School, Mr. Molesky interacted daily with more than 300 students, teachers, staff members, and parents. He always created a family environment in his school. Furthermore, Mr. Molesky was active in the Hibbing School District Safety Patrol and numerous education and community organizations.

As our nation experiences great technological innovation and success in the global market, the value of an education takes on even greater importance. Daniel Molesky of Hibbing, Minnesota has exhibited the characteristics we seek in our educators, school administrators, and community activists. I know my colleagues join me in congratulating Daniel Molesky for his 35 years of service to students, teachers and the entire Hibbing community.

CONGRATULATING THE MARJAREE MASON CENTER FOR 20 YEARS OF SERVICE

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Marjaree Mason Center for Fresno for 20 years of service assisting victims of domestic violence, and for making a difference in the community and the lives of so many victims.

Marjaree Mason, a well-known woman in this community and a native of Easton, was raped and murdered on November 13, 1978. She was 36 years old. Her death was the result of domestic violence.

Marjaree lived in Fresno for 31 years and was a graduate of Washington Union High School and Reedley College. At the time of her death she was completing her degree in business administration at California State University, Fresno and was employed by the National Economic Development Association.

Marjaree Mason was active in several organizations. She was a member of the National Council of Negro Women, the Ujima Ladies Group, Big Sisters of Fresno, the National Association of Women in Construction, and St. Rest Baptist Church.

With the approval of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Mason, the Marjaree Mason Center was named for her. Through community awareness, prevention and intervention—including education for both the victim and the batterer—they are working to lessen the kind of kind of domestic violence that tragically ended her life.

The Center is committed to the belief that women have the right to live their lives in a safe and healthy environment. The individuals involved with the Center also believe it is imperative that victims of domestic violence have access to a protective support system, including emergency shelter, counseling, and comprehensive referrals to individuals and organizations that can help them live in health and safety.

Mr. Speaker, I congratulate the Marjaree Mason Center for serving the community of Fresno for 20 years. I also urge my colleagues to join me in wishing the Marjaree Mason Center many more years of continued success.

CELEBRATING THE 31ST ANNUAL SPIVEY'S CORNER HOLLERIN' CONTEST

HON. BOB ETHERIDGE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a unique event in the Second Congressional District of North Carolina, the Spivey's Corner Hollerin' Contest.

Every third Saturday in June thousands of people from across the globe travel to the town of Spivey's Corner in Sampson County to hear and participate in the National Hollerin' Contest. June 19th marked the 31st anniversary of this special event. Each year, the event is held for the benefit of the Spivey's Corner Volunteer Fire Department.

The now-famous contest originated from a chance comment made by Spivey's Corner resident Ermon Godwin, Jr. in 1969 on a weekly radio talk show that he co-hosted. Mr. Godwin mentioned the tradition of hollerin' in Sampson County to the radio show's other host, John Thomas. Mr. Thomas half-jokingly suggested that the two hold a hollerin' contest. Much to their surprise, about five thousand people showed up on that June Saturday in 1969.

The Hollerin' Contest has evolved into a daylong event, featuring live music, food, and five separate hollerin' events. They are: the Whistlin' Contest, the Conch Shell and Fox Horn Blowin' Contest, the Junior Hollerin' Contest, the Ladies Callin' Contest, and the National Hollerin' Contest, the main attraction. In addition, many also participate in the watermelon roll, in which contestants attempt to run barefoot carrying a watermelon across a distance of about 20 yards as a member of the Volunteer Fire Department tries to knock the participant off his or her feet using a high-pressure hose.

Winners of the different events has garnered national recognition over the years, including appearances on The Tonight Show and Late Night with David Letterman. Sports Illustrated, The Voice of America, and documentary films have all featured the contest and its winners. As would befit its local roots, 30 of the 31 winners of the National Hollerin' Contest have been natives of Sampson County, including this year's champion. Tony Peacock, who now resides in Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

To further honor this unique event, I have sponsored the Spivey's Corner Hollerin' Contest in the Library of Congress Bicentennial Local Legacies Project. I am hopeful that the colorful tradition of hollerin' will now be preserved in the American Folklife Center of the world's most reknown library so that everyone can have a chance to celebrate this North Carolina unique cultural event.

TRIBUTE TO ROBERT SILVESTRI

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Robert Silvestri, the esteemed Chief of Police in Chisholm, MN.

Chief Silvestri recently announced his retirement after serving 33 years in the Chisholm Police Department. My hometown of Chisholm will miss the inspired dedication and commitment he brought to the police department.

Chief Silvestri began his law enforcement career by training at the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension in 1966. Following his training, Robert Silvestri became a patrol officer for the Chisholm Police Department. Eventually, his dedication to the police force led to his promotion as desk lieutenant, and then administrative assistant. Each of those positions gave Robert Silvestri a better understanding of and appreciation for all aspects of law enforcement. Because of his experience and knowledge of law enforcement, Robert Silvestri was hired as chief of police in 1983. He held this position until his recent retirement from the Chisholm Police Department.

Throughout his service at the Chisholm Police Department, Robert Silvestri believed strongly in the law enforcement community and his colleagues. Even through adversity, Chief Silvestri maintained a level head and respect for his fellow law enforcement officers. His open door made his co-workers feel at ease, and he learned to adapt his management and law enforcement skills to changing laws and societal behavior. Furthermore, I commend Robert's wife and the Silvestri family for supporting him through the years.

Police Chief Robert Silvestri maintained the public safety and tranquility in Chisholm for 33 years. I know my colleagues join me in congratulating Robert Silvestri for his many years of service and dedication to the Chisholm Police Department and the entire Iron Range community.

TRIBUTE TO MARK FRIESTAD

HON. EARL POMEROY

OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, today I want to recognize the winner of the 1999 "Great American Think-Off." This year's champion is Mark Friestad, a high school social studies teacher who proved to his students that learning is a life-long pursuit to be enjoyed and celebrated.

Mark is a dedicated young teacher in my hometown of Valley City, North Dakota, who exemplifies the state's exceptional teachers.

He was among 500 contestants from around the country competing in the Great American Think-Off held in New York Mills, Minnesota. The task was the best answer to the question: Which is more dangerous: Science or Religion? Selected as one of four finalists to debate the merits of his essay, Mark convinced the crowd of 400 with thoughtful arguments supporting his thesis. At the end of the day, the audience felt that he had best illustrated his point that the more dangerous idea between science and religion is the one accepted more blindly—science.

While Mark is to be commended for his insightful debate and well-researched essay, perhaps just as important is his participation. Reading about and studying topics of interest should not be limited to our school years, but rather encouraged and practiced at every age level. Formal education and official degrees are the runways for learning, but our country has taken flight thanks to the help of great life-long thinkers.

How fortunate we are to have thoughtful, studious individuals who dedicate their careers to the public education of our young people. I congratulate Mr. Friestad for teaching by example, and picking up the title of "America's Greatest Thinker" along the way.

A TRIBUTE IN HONOR OF THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE HENIKA DISTRICT LIBRARY IN
WAYLAND, MICHIGANHON. PETER HOEKSTRA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. HOEKSTRA. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to officially recognize the 100th anniversary of the Henika District Library, located in Wayland, Michigan, part of the Second Congressional District, which I represent.

The Henika Library was established in 1899 as a legacy of Mrs. Julia Henika, who upon her death left $2,000 to the Wayland Ladies Library Association for the construction of a library. Aided by contributions from Mrs. Henika's husband, George, and her mother, Mary Forbes, this picturesque library formally opened in 1900.

Initially, the library was run by the independent Library Association for many years before turning it over to the village of Wayland. At that time, the facility's first paid librarian, Miss Fannie Hoyt, was hired. She served in her position until the 1940s, when she was succeeded by Dorothy Peterson, who served as librarian until 1975. Barbara Crofoot then became the library's third head librarian and served for 10 years until she was succeeded by the current librarian, Lynn Mandaville.

Henika Library has served the Wayland area as a source of information and entertainment from the Gilded Age to the Information Age. The original building was first expanded in 1968 with an addition in the rear with a full basement, effectively tripling the size of the facility. A reading room was created the next year by enclosing the front porch.

In the early 1990s, the building received a complete makeover, inside and out, with financial assistance from the Wayland Downtown Development Authority, an outstate equity grant and contributions from the city of Wayland and Wayland Township. This remodeling made the library ready for the 21st century by providing public access computers, an online card catalog and public access to the Internet. In addition, a local company, Ampro Industries, donated several thousand dollars to remodel the basement children's library.

Today, Henika District Library continues to serve the community in the same manner

Julia Henika envisioned a century ago. I am proud to honor her memory and the hard work and dedication of so many people to make that vision a reality.

TRIBUTE TO WINSTON BLEDSOE

HON. ROY BLUNT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, senior citizen centers are fairly recent to our culture. Many of the centers that exist today were created in the early 1970's with the help of federal grants. Strong local leadership transform these centers into places many older citizens now depend on for warm wholesome meals, fellowship and recreation and a way to support the maintenance of an independent life style.

Twenty-seven years ago, using a $25,000 budget provided by a "model grant," Winston Bledsoe started the first agency in Southwest Missouri to organize and open senior centers. The Southwest Missouri Office on Aging grew out of that effort and opened nine senior centers in six weeks in 1973.

Today, the agency that Bledsoe helped create provides services and a daily meeting place for more than 40,000 seniors a year. The Southwest Missouri Office on Aging has 38 centers and a budget of more than $6.8 million providing individual social services, transportation, meals, recreation and home-maker care. Bledsoe encouraged seniors at each center to own their own building, thereby reducing the government's role in the future of the facilities in case federal aid was ever curbed or interrupted.

Dorothy Knowles, who was Bledsoe's chief lieutenant over the last quarter century and the new agency director, calls Winston a visionary, who was "dedicated to the lowest cost of keeping older people independent." For most people, quality of life is defined by their degree of independence.

Bledsoe has been a tireless advocate for seniors and group who serve them. He has often battled bureaucrats, politicians, and local opponents. He has not always been diplomatic but he has never forgotten who he serves. The interest of older Southwest Missourians are always foremost in his efforts.

Winston, at age 70, retired as the director of the agency this year. A former insurance salesman and football coach, his third career will leave a legacy cherished by every senior in Southwest Missouri who finds friends, support and nourishing meals at one of the centers that Bledsoe nurtured.

WILLARD MUNGER, MINNESOTA'S ENVIRONMENTAL ICONHON. BRUCE F. VENTO

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, on Sunday, July 11, Minnesota lost our most senior, longest serving, best loved friend, mentor and state representative, Willard Munger at the age of 88.

After forty-eight years of public service and a lifetime of fighting for people and the environment, DFLer Willard Munger stands as a testament to public service. Unbending in principle but pragmatic and patient to achieve results, Munger's list of achievements are too numerous to mention. While 88 years of age he was still contemporary in his thinking and open to new ideas and solutions. Many of his policies were ahead of their time, such as packaging laws, water and air pollution.

I was proud to serve in the Minnesota Legislature on Chairman Munger's revered Environment and Natural Resources Committee. I was an eager student and to this day, twenty-nine years later, both the lessons I have learned and the Munger spirit and excitement guide me in my Congressional work. Indeed I, like to many others, stand on the shoulders and work of one very special Minnesotan environmentalist, Willard Munger.

We can all see further because of his work and the benchmarks Munger has set in Minnesota. We should try to employ his vision and lessons as we work for future generations in the preservation, conservation and restoration of the natural world.

The following are two editorials from the July 13th St. Paul and Minneapolis papers which give testimony to the work and life of Willard Munger, who is being laid to rest today.

[From the St. Paul Pioneer Press, July 13, 1999]

MORE THAN A POLITICIAN

Willard Munger campaigned for Floyd B. Olson, first ran for office under the banner of the old Farmer-Labor Party and won his first election when Dwight Eisenhower was president. At age 88, Munger was the oldest legislator in Minnesota history and its longest serving House member—with 48 years of service.

But Munger, who died early Sunday in Duluth, will be remembered for more than his phenomenal political longevity.

Long known as "Mr. Environment," Munger left his mark as the father of the state Environmental Trust Fund and an architect of virtually every major piece of environmental legislation enacted in the last three decades.

While he was not the Legislature's most gifted orator, the motel owner from west Duluth had a way of getting people's attention and getting things done. Munger's environmental activism began in earnest in 1971, when he passed a bill to create the Western Lake Superior Sanitary District and begin the cleanup of the heavily polluted St. Louis River.

Two years later, after the DFL captured control of both houses of the Legislature, Munger took over as chairman of the House Environment Committee and helped enact dozens of major environmental laws. They included legislation to protect wild and scenic rivers, promote recycling and reduce solid waste, clean up polluted lands, safeguard groundwater supplies and preserve wetlands.

But Munger's greatest achievement was the passage of a state constitutional amendment in 1988 that created the Environmental Trust Fund, and earmarked 40 percent of state lottery proceeds for this purpose. Since its creation, the fund has generated more than $100 million for parks and trails, fish and wildlife habitat, and environmental education.

Willard Munger truly left this state and Earth a better place than he found it.

[Minneapolis Star Tribune, July 13, 1999]
(Willard Munger)

MINNESOTA'S ENVIRONMENTAL VISIONARY

There is talk about the best way to memorialize Willard Munger and his four decades in the Minnesota House, perhaps by renaming the Environmental Trust Fund for him. Not a bad move, but possibly a superfluous one.

"This state abounds with monuments to Munger's tireless advocacy of the natural world, from clean rivers to bicycle trails to metropolitan wetlands to northwoods wilderness preserves. Many a Minnesotan needs no plaque to know that "Mr. Environment," who died on Sunday at age 88, is the man to thank for these.

Munger was already in his second decade of legislative service when the modern environmental movement began in the early 1970s. His political experience, informed by the passions he acquired from a naturalist grandfather and populist father, positioned him as both visionary and strategist of the new ideals.

One of his proudest victories was among the first: the $115 million cleanup that transformed the St. Louis River from an industrial drainage into one of the state's loveliest streams. Munger built his last home along the river and hosted an annual canoe trip and barbecue for friends and colleagues; the tenth of these would have been held last month but his illness forced postponement.

Munger loved politics of the old-fashioned sort, stubbornly advancing his cause with a combination of persuasion, patience and shrewd deal-making. He was not notably charismatic; journalists ranked him among the legislature's worst-dressed members and marveled at his mumbling, fumbling style of address on the House floor. But he excelled at one-to-one negotiation and played a masterful role in conference committees, where his passion could win the day for his position.

He was deeply respected by colleagues, if not particularly beloved. Northern legislators were regularly aggrieved by his advocacy for public lands and lakeshores, for wetland protection, for halting Reserve Mining Co.'s discharge of tailings into Lake Superior. But they could count on him to support spending that would bring employment and tourism to their districts. Some, perhaps, began to see the correctness of his views that more jobs are created than destroyed through environmental progress.

In recent years, as the tide turned on environmental concerns, Munger fought to save his earlier achievements from dismantling. But his file drawers were said to contain plenty of new initiatives, too, awaiting the right moment for introduction. Now they form another Munger legacy, awaiting a new champion to take up the task.

TRIBUTE TO JERRY SNYDER

HON. JAMES L. OBERSTAR

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to former Chisholm High School bank conductor, Jerry Snyder.

Jerry Snyder was borne in Duluth and graduated from Duluth East High School. As a child, Jerry learned to play the piano and went on to learn how to play the tuba, baritone horn, and trombone. He graduated from the University of Minnesota—Duluth. A few years later began his career as a conductor at Chisholm High School. Jerry began his conducting career 30 years ago when he became the band conductor in Chisholm. In addition to directing the Chisholm High School Band, he also conducted two area church choirs, St. Joseph's Catholic Church and St. Leo's Catholic Church.

Jerry has continued his personal interest in and enthusiasm for music through the years. He is a member of band called "Four of a Kind," which consists of three other former music teachers. Although he is now retired, Jerry plans to continue playing in this band, and also conducting the Hibbing City Band during the summers.

Jerry Snyder made a valuable contribution to the city of Chisholm for his enthusiasm toward music and his dedication to teaching. I know he passed along that enthusiasm for music to his students. I know my colleagues join me in congratulating Jerry Snyder for his many years of service to the students and entire community of Chisholm, MN.

HONORING LINDA R. WILLIAMS,
CRNA, J.D., PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSE ANESTHETISTS

HON. JOEL HEFLEY

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding constituent of Colorado's 5th Congressional District. Ms. Linda R. Williams, the outgoing national president of the American Association of Nurse Anesthetists (AANA). In my opinion it is appropriate at this time to recognize the distinguished career of this individual.

Founded in 1931, the AANA represents over 27,000 certified registered nurse anesthetists, or CRNAs, across the country. They work in every setting in which anesthesia is delivered, and for all types of surgical cases including hospital surgical suites, obstetrical delivery rooms, ambulatory surgical centers, and the offices of dentists, podiatrists, and plastic surgeons.

As president, Ms. Williams was responsible for charting the policy and direction of the association from 1998–1999. Throughout her involvement with the AANA, Ms. Williams has held a variety of leadership positions prior to being elected President, including Treasurer and a Director of Region 5 on the AANA Board of Directors.

Ms. Williams began her studies at Stephens College receiving her Bachelor of Arts degree in Health Science. She then received her Bachelor of Science in Nurse Anesthesiology from Ohio State University and her diploma from St. Mary's School of Nursing. Lastly, she received her juris doctorate in law from the University of Denver, Colorado College of Law.

Ms. Williams is currently in private practice in Englewood Colorado. She has been widely published and speaks often before professional groups and societies, which has earned her the esteem and respect of her peers and others in all professions.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join with me in recognizing Ms. Williams for her notable career and outstanding achievements. Congratulations Ms. Williams for a job well done.

CONGRATULATING ROCKY MOUNT
ON ITS ALL-AMERICA CITY DESIGNATION

HON. BOB ETHERIDGE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the City of Rocky Mount, North Carolina for earning the designation of an All-America City. I have the honor of representing Rocky Mount in the U.S. House.

Founded in the early part of the Nineteenth Century, Rocky Mount is now a city of more than 57,000 people located in the heart of eastern North Carolina. Its name derives from the rocky mound situated at the falls of the Tar River, which was the site of a new post office and one of the first cotton mills in North Carolina. In 1907, Rocky Mount, then with a population of about 7,500 people, was incorporated as a city. Following decades of growth and achievement, Rocky Mount was first named an All-America City in 1970.

Almost 30 years later, Mr. Speaker, Rocky Mount continues to stand out for its civic excellence. The National Civic League, which has given out the All-America City Awards for the past 50 years, commended Rocky Mount as a community that teaches the rest of us how to face difficult situations and meet those challenges in innovative and collaborative ways. According to the organization, Rocky Mount is a city in which citizens, government, businesses and voluntary organizations work together to address critical local issues.

Specifically, the National Civic League cited three examples of this type of cooperation in Rocky Mount. The city developed the Down East Partnership for Children, which is dedicated to achieving the fundamentals of quality child growth and development. It annually reaches more than 12,000 children, parents, and agencies. Rocky Mount also formed the Carolinas Gateway Partnership, a nationally recognized non-profit corporation partnership with 190 investors, which has secured commitments worth $170 million that will eventually create 2,300 jobs as it seeks to promote economic development in the area.

In addition, Rocky Mount became part of the Rocky Mount-Edgecombe-Nash Educational Cooperative, which was designed to coordinate the resources of business and education for the betterment of both schools and students. Thus far, the Cooperative has funded more than 935 creative teaching grants worth about $500,000 that have affected thousands of students. I would like to take a point of personal privilege in adding that I am profoundly grateful and proud of the Nash-Rocky Mount Public School system for its leadership in teaching character education in the classroom, yet another reason why Rocky Mount is an All-America City.

Finally, I want to thank the Leadership Rocky Mount Alumni group and the Rocky Mount Chamber of Commerce for all their hard work over the past few years to bring this outstanding recognition to Rocky Mount.

Mr. Speaker, it is both an honor and a privilege to represent Rocky Mount and her 57,158 All-American citizens in the U.S. Congress. I encourage all my colleagues to read the following article from the Rocky Mount Telegram celebrating this well-deserved honor.

[From the Rocky Mount Telegram, June 27, 1999]

ROCKY MOUNT IS ALL-AMERICAN!

'ALL-AMERICA CITY' DESIGNATION CAPTURED AT PHILADELPHIA EVENT

(By Tom Murphy)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—There's something about "Rocky" and Philadelphia.

In the city famed as the home of Sylvester Stallone's fictional movie boxer, another Rocky—Rocky Mount—captured All-America City status Saturday in the 50th annual awards sponsored by the National Civic League and Allstate Insurance Co.

The other nine winners were Stockton, Calif.; Union City, Calif.; Tallahassee; Fla.; Wichita, Kan.; Shreveport, La.; Lowell, Mass.; Tupelo, Miss.; Green Bay, Wisc.; and Tri-Cities (Bristol, Va.; Johnson City and Kingsport, Tenn.). Two other North Carolina finalists, Hickory and Morganton, failed to make the cut.

The awards honor communities that show exemplary grassroots community involvement and problem-solving. The original field of 93 applicants was cut to 30 finalists. As a winner, Rocky Mount is eligible for a $10,000 award from Allstate.

Mayor Fred Turnage, in accepting the All-America City Award, reflected on another delegation from Rocky Mount that stood on the All-America City stage in Philadelphia 30 years ago.

They also proclaimed that Rocky Mount was a community that was walking to the beat of a different drum, and how it had focused on racial harmony, quality education and job opportunity, Turnage said.

Turnage added in subsequent years and certainly in the most recent decade, many citizens have worked diligently to accomplish those goals.

"In recent years, the formation of partnerships has enabled us to make significant strides in all of those areas," he said. "The Down East Partnership for Children is a tremendous example of what cooperation can accomplish with its total focus on giving our young people Smart Start and a quality education."

"The Gateway Partnership has demonstrated what cooperation and teamwork between the private and public sectors can truly accomplish, and is helping provide quality job opportunities and economic stability for our community."

Turnage said the third partnership, which was a part of Rocky Mount's presentation, is a great example of what the business and education community can and must do to achieve quality education.

"It would be my hope that as pleased and humbled as we are to have received this award that we, as well as other award-winning cities, would simply use it as an opportunity for even greater cooperation and basis for addressing many of the challenges that still confront us," he said. "It is important to recognize that the All-America City Award does not mean a community is perfect, but that it is attempting to meet challenges and solve problems in innovative and cooperative ways at the ground level of democracy."

Turnage commended the Leadership Rocky Mount Alumni group for initiating this process some two years ago, and for the Chamber of Commerce for carrying the process to its conclusion.

"There is a tremendous amount of work and effort that goes into this process, and it takes a great deal of planning and commitment to see it to a successful conclusion," he said.

"We are particularly proud of our young people, who were a part of that delegation and who brought so much enthusiasm. The Jazzy Jaguars from D.S. Johnson School particularly kept us pumped up with their performances and energy."

Chamber President Charlie Glazener agreed.

"It's just unbelievable," said Glazener. "We wish every city here tonight could feel the pride our city feels."

"Mayor Turnage was so right when he accepted our award and said it's time to start more projects for the next generation."

City manager Steve Raper said the city is extremely proud of its citizens across the entire Nash Edgecombe community.

"The people in Nash and Edgecombe are truly reflective of the work we can do and all the work we've completed together to improve our community," Raper said.

PRESIDENT LYNDON B. JOHNSON'S RIGHTFUL PLACE IN HISTORY

HON. GENE GREEN

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to President Lyndon B. Johnson. President Johnson was born on August 27, 1908, in central Texas, not far from Johnson City, which his family had helped settle. He knew poverty firsthand, which helped him learn compassion for the poverty of others.

In 1960, Johnson was elected as John F. Kennedy's Vice President. On November 22, 1963, when Kennedy was assassinated, Johnson was sworn in as President.

On May 22, 1964, in a speech at the University of Michigan President Lyndon B. Johnson spoke of a "Great Society." He said, "The Great Society rests on abundance and liberty for all. It demands an end to poverty and racial injustice, to which we are totally committed in our time. But that is just the beginning."

President Johnson's vision included aid to education, attack on disease, Medicare, urban renewal, beautification, conservation, development of depressed regions, a wide-scale fight against poverty, control and prevention of crime and delinquency, and the removal of obstacles to the right to vote.

On July 6, 1999, the Houston Chronicle printed a column by Marianne Means, a Washington, D.C.-based columnist for the Hearst Newspapers, which details why President Johnson will be considered as one of our nation's greatest Presidents. Mr. Speaker, I would like to conclude by including Ms. Means' column in my remarks.

DON'T FORGET LBJ—HIS LEGACY HIGHLY VISIBLE

(By Marianne Means)

For 30 years, President Lyndon B. Johnson has been ignored by Democratic politicians afraid of being tagged as liberal lackeys for the much-mocked Great Society or the bloody Vietnam War that brought down his presidency.

His name is seldom mentioned in his own party. Only a few brave souls defend him against conservatives who have campaigned for decades against the ambitious federal social programs he created and the cultural tumult of the 1960s that took place during his administration.

President Clinton has been particularly craven. Although he often cites his admiration for President Kennedy, who produced very little legislation, Clinton never speaks of Johnson, who compiled a monumental domestic record.

It was to remind us of Johnson's impact on our lives and put a tidy historical end to the 1990s that scholars and former Johnson administration officials gathered recently at the Lyndon B. Johnson Library in Austin to look back across the generation gap at a period of almost unimaginable change.

This nation would be a far worse place had Lyndon Johnson not occupied the White House. He demanded that elderly patients get government help for health care through Medicare and Medicaid, blacks be Joseph the right to vote and enjoy equal access to public places, students be given financial aid for education, consumers be protected from fraud, poverty be assaulted with an array of education and employment initiatives and discrimination attacked with affirmative-action concepts.

This remarkable domestic revolution was overwhelmed by public outrage at Johnson for escalating a distant war in which more than 50,000 U.S. soldiers died. As a young student, Clinton himself dodged the draft to avoid being sent to Vietnam. Resentment of the war still fuels Clinton's chilly attitude toward Johnson even though Clinton has fought to perpetuate and expand most of LBJ's social programs.

But finally that war is fading into history. It was nearly a quarter century ago that we fled Saigon in defeat. Now diplomatic and trade ties are being restored and even battle-scarred veterans are returning there on sentimental visits.

If the war itself can recede, so can public anger at LBJ. He didn't live long enough to crusade for his own political rehabilitation, as Richard Nixon did. But time may do the task for him.

And despite decades of conservative scorn, the Great Society and the War on Poverty still exist, sometimes under different labels.

At the LBJ Library symposium, Joseph Califano Jr., a former Johnson White House assistant and Jimmy Carter's secretary of health, education and welfare, summed up LBJ's domestic record. And what a stunning record it is. He shoved through a reluctant Congress all sorts of radical ideas to help ordinary people.

For the first time, the federal government subsidized scholarships, grants and work-study programs to expand education opportunities for students from families with limited resources. Since 1965, the federal government has provided more than $120 billion for elementary and secondary schools and billions for college loans.

Today, nearly 60 percent of full-time undergraduate students receive federal financial aid. When LBJ took office, only 41 percent of Americans had completed high school; only 8 percent held college degrees. Last year, more than 81 percent had finished high school and 24 percent had completed college.

Medicare and Medicaid provided millions of elderly Americans with health insurance for the first time. Since 1965, 79 million senior citizens have benefited from Medicare. Since 1966, more than 200 million poor Americans have been helped financially by Medicaid.

The food stamp program launched in 1967 helps to feed more than 20 million people in more than 8 million households. The school breakfast program begun the same year has provided a daily breakfast to nearly 100 million schoolchildren.

Johnson's civil rights act ended the officially segregated society that belied the American promise of freedom. No longer did blacks have to drink from separate water fountains and eat in separate restaurants.

No longer were they automatically denied equal opportunities for jobs and education.

Johnson was proudest of the Voting Rights Act, which outlawed all the sneaky practices that kept blacks from the ballot box. In 1964, there were only 300 black elected officials in the country; by 1998, there were more than 9,000. In 1965 there were five blacks in the House; today there are 39.

Although conservatives charge that LBJ's Great Society was a failure, Great Society projects like Head Start, the Job Corps, Community Health Centers, Foster Grandparents, Upward Bound and Indian and migrant worker programs helped reduce the number of Americans living in poverty. When LBJ took office, 22.2 percent of Americans lived below the poverty level. Today 13.3 percent are below that level, still too many but a trend in the right direction.

A TRIBUTE TO CHIEF PAUL WALTERS

HON. LORETTA SANCHEZ

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Chief Paul Walters of the Santa Ana Police Department in Orange County, CA. On July 14, 1999, Chief Walters will be honored with the Federal Bureau of Investigation Director's Award for exceptional public service and partnership with the FBI. It is fitting that we pay tribute to this outstanding citizen and leader.

Chief Walters' 29 years in law enforcement were preceded by numerous academic achievements—a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Criminal Justice from California State University, Fullerton, a Masters of Public Administration from the University of Southern California and a Doctor of Jurisprudence from the American College of Law. He began his career as the Santa Ana Chief of Police in 1988.

Since that time, Chief Walters has demonstrated skilled and innovative leadership. He has received numerous awards, including distinctions from the National League of Cities and Orange County Metro Business Magazine. He has also served as a distinguished member of several organizations dedicated to improving law enforcement's effectiveness and quality.

The 1993 creation of the Multi-Agency Safe Streets Task Force is one of Chief Walters' most admirable achievements. This move led to a significant reduction in Santa Ana's crime rate. In fact, Chief Walters' support helped ensure the success of the FBI's anti-crime and drug efforts in Orange County. Last but not least, he demonstrated his own police skills and experience when he brought decisive evidence to a high-profile local murder case through his collaboration with federal agents.

I thank my Congressional colleagues for joining me today in recognizing this remarkable man who has dedicated himself to serving his fellow citizens and neighbors. He has shown what kind of men and women America needs for its future.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE
RICHARD C. BLAKE

HON. MARCY KAPTUR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Richard C. Blake of Toledo, OH, a man of great stature and kindest heart, who passed from this life on June 4, 1999. I came to know Dick and his family through his passionate commitment to the credit union movement to which, as his family noted, he "dedicated 52 years . . . as both his vocation and avocation."

Employed by the former Champion Spark Plug in Toledo, Dick was a member of the Champion Credit Union. He served in many of the credit union's leadership positions over 37 years, including membership on the board of directors, on the Credit and Supervisory Committees, board president, and treasurer/CEO. Not limiting his involvement in promoting credit unions to just the Champion Credit Union, Dick rose to the highest levels of the movement. He served as president of the Toledo Chapter of Credit Unions, chairman of the board and director emeritus of the Ohio Credit Union League, and director of the Credit Union National Association.

Dick also focused his time on community involvement, and was a past master of Toledo-Fort Industry Lodge #144; past patron of Fort Industry Chapter #391; a member of the Scottish Rite; and a member of the Adams Township American Legion Post. He also was a member of the Loyal Order of Moose Lodge #1610 and served on the finance committee of his church, Zion United Methodist. A water enthusiast, Dick belonged to the Toledo Yacht Club, Oak Harbor Long Beach Association, and the Coral Cay Association in Florida.

Dick's passing leaves a void in our community, but much more importantly within his loving family. Our heartfelt condolences to his wife of 57 years, Helen, and his children Becky, Kathy, and Bill, his eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. Dick has touched the lives of thousands of people and made our community and country a more humane nation. We all are grateful for the privilege of knowing him.

TRIBUTE TO THE 31ST COM-MANDANT, UNITED STATES MA-RINE CORPS, GENERAL CHARLES
C. KRULAK

HON. SAXBY CHAMBLISS

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 13, 1999

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Speaker, integrity, respect, and character have always been the centerpiece of the long and magnificent tradition of the United States Marine Corps. I cannot begin to praise our United States Marines for their reliability and devotion to our country and its history. But I would like to pay tribute today to a great American and friend who has served his country since he graduated from the Naval Academy in 1964.

General Charles C. Krulak stepped down from his position as the 31st Commandant of the Marine Corps last month. General Krulak, who served his country for 35 years, leaves the Marines with countless honors. While serving two tours of duty in Vietnam, commanding during the Gulf War, and serving as Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Krulak earned numerous decorations and medals including the Defense Distinguished Service Medal; Silver Star Medal; Combat Action Ribbon; Vietnam Service Medal; and the Purple Heart.

However, these well deserved honors simply amplify the values of duty, honor, and country which General Krulak exemplified. His honest and candid assessments were always welcome and our military is a stronger force and America is better nation because of him.

I want to say thank you to this great man who has done so much for our country. His service to the United States will be missed, but not forgotten. I am sure our Marine Corps will continue to pursue and practice the lofty values that General Krulak instilled in America's troops. I would like to thank General Krulak and wish him the best of luck for the future

Congressional Record

The public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, are printed pursuant to directions of the Joint Committee on Printing as authorized by appropriate provisions of Title 44, United States Code, and published for each day that one or both Houses are in session, excepting very infrequent instances when two or more unusually small consecutive issues are printed at one time. ¶Public access to the Congressional Record is available online through GPO Access, a service of the Government Printing Office, free of charge to the user. The online database is updated each day the Congressional Record is published. The database includes both text and graphics from the beginning of the 103d Congress, 2d session (January 1994) forward. It is available on the Wide Area Information Server (WAIS) through the Internet and via asynchronous dial-in. Internet users can access the database by using the World Wide Web; the Superintendent of Documents home page address is http://www.access.gpo.gov/su\_docs, by using local WAIS client software or by telnet to swais.access.gpo.gov, then login as guest (no password required). Dial-in users should use communications software and modem to call (202) 512-1661; type swais, then login as guest (no password required). For general information about GPO Access, contact the GPO Access User Support Team by sending Internet e-mail to gpoaccess@gpo.gov, or a fax to (202) 512-1262; or by calling Toll Free 1-888-293-6498 or (202) 512-1530 between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. Eastern time, Monday through Friday, except for Federal holidays. ¶The Congressional Record paper and 24x microfiche will be furnished by mail to subscribers, free of postage, at the following prices: paper edition, $165.00 for six months, $325.00 per year, or purchased for $2.75 per issue, payable in advance; microfiche edition, $141.00 per year, or purchased for $1.50 per issue payable in advance. The semimonthly Congressional Record Index may be purchased for the same per issue prices. Mail orders to: Superintendent of Documents, P.O. Box 371954, Pittsburgh, PA 15250-7954, or phone orders to (202) 512-1800, or fax to (202) 512-2250. Remit check or money order, made payable to the Superintendent of Documents, or use VISA, MasterCard, Discover, or GPO Deposit Account. ¶Following each session of Congress, the daily Congressional Record is revised, printed, permanently bound and sold by the Superintendent of Documents in individual parts or by sets. ¶With the exception of copyrighted articles, there are no restrictions on the republication of material from the Congressional Record.
