Life is fragile and a lifetime but a moment before Your eternal presence, Almighty God. Today we mourn the loss of one of Your servants and dearly elected Members of this Congress: the Honorable PATSY MINK.

Reward this gentle woman for her gracious service in this House, to this Nation and the island people of Hawaii. We know she will be fondly remembered by many and richly rewarded by You, O Lord. You are the Lord and master of the living and the dead, and before You we will all have to appear and render an accounting.

Be now her loving Saviour. Help her staff, family, and many friends find some footing as You lead them on by Your kindly light of faith and sustaining love revealed in those around them. Be now their hope and consolation.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, Speaker pro tempore HANSEN signed the following enrolled joint resolution on Friday, September 27, 2002:

House Joint Resolution 111, making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2003, and for other purposes.

And Speaker pro tempore THORNBERRY signed the following enrolled bill on Monday, September 30, 2002:

H.R. 1646, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2003, to authorize appropriations under the Arms Export Control Act and the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 for security assistance for fiscal year 2003, and for other purposes.

NOTIFICATION OF INTENTION TO OFFER RESOLUTION RAISING QUESTION OF PRIVILEGES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 2(a)(1) of House rule IX, I rise to give notice of my intent to present a question of privilege of the House.

This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., 1407 is 2:07 p.m.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

A resolution, in accordance with House Rule IX, expressing a sense of the House that its integrity has been impugned and Constitutional duty hampered by the inability of the House to bring to the floor the Fiscal Year 2003 Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, due to the severe under funding of Education within the President's Fiscal Year (FY) 2003 Budget.

Whereas under Article I, Section IX, of the Constitution states no money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by law.

Whereas it is the fiscal duty of the Congress to appropriate annually the funds needed to support the execution of programs and operations of the Federal government.

Whereas to date the House has only considered five Appropriations bills.

Whereas as President, George W. Bush has been persistent in resonating public concern for better schools. He dedicated significant amounts of time and public dialogue during his first year in office to the passage of H.R. 1, the "Leave No Child Behind" Act, not only implying he favored more help to schools from the federal treasury but specifically authorizing large increases in a number of key program areas.

Whereas within weeks of signing H.R. 1, Public Law No: 107-110, the "No Child Left Behind" Act, the President submitted a budget that stopped six years of steady progress in federal support to local schools dead in its tracks.

Whereas instead of the strong and consistent growth in support to local schools that the federal government has provided for more than a decade, the President's FY 2003 Budget holds aid to local schools virtually flat. Furthermore, his Budget Director now insists that if Congress exceeds the budget request by even the smallest amount, the President will veto entire appropriation bills.

Whereas the future of our labor force and our economy is heavily dependent on elevating the education and skills of all future workers.

Whereas about one third of the 53.6 million children now in elementary and secondary schools in America are at serious risk of being left behind. The achievement gap between these students and the rest of the student population remains large and has failed to close.

Whereas of the 53.6 million children currently enrolled in elementary and secondary schools in this country, 9.8 million, or nearly 20 percent, are from households defined by the Commerce Department as being in poverty.

Whereas the House is faced with the choice of supporting schools or supporting the President and his effort to reverse the trend of expanding federal support for local schools.

Whereas the Congress has provided states with an unfunded mandate by approving the "No Child Left Behind" Act without the necessary financial resources to fund it. Now, therefore, be it Resolved that it is the sense of the House of Representatives that the Congress should provide states with the resources they need to fully implement the "No Child Left Behind" Act as it promised less than a year ago, by completing action on the Fiscal Year 2003 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under rule IX, a resolution that is offered from the floor by a Member other than the majority leader or the minority leader as a question of the privileges of the House has immediate precedence only at a time designated by the Chair within 2 legislative days after the resolution is properly noticed.

Pending that designation, the form of the resolution noticed by the gentleman from Indiana will appear in the RECORD at this point.

The Chair does not at this point determine whether or not the resolution constitutes a question of privilege. That determination will be made at the time designated for consideration of the resolution.

Mr. VISCLOSKEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask to be heard at the appropriate time on the question of whether this resolution constitutes a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That time will be designated.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 2(a)(1) of House rule IX, I rise to give notice of my intent to present a question of privileges of the House.

EDUCATION PRIVILEGED RESOLUTION

A resolution, in accordance with House Rule IX, expressing a sense of the House that its integrity has been impugned and Constitutional duty hampered by the failure of the House to bring to the floor on a timely basis the Fiscal Year 2003 Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act.

Whereas Article I, Section IX, of the Constitution states that no money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by law.

Whereas it is the fiscal duty of the Congress to appropriate annually, by October 1st of each year, the funds needed to support the execution of programs and operations of the Federal government.

Whereas the House to date has only considered five Appropriations bills, and has failed to consider the Fiscal Year 2003 Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act which would provide funding for critical areas of national policy including pre-school, elementary and secondary education, special education, higher education and student loans.

Whereas as President, George W. Bush supported and signed into law Public Law 107-110, the "Leave No Child Behind Act," which imposes substantial accountability and performance mandates on elementary and secondary schools in every state and congressional district in the United States.

Whereas the "Leave No Child Behind Act" included the authorization of significant additional resources to assist the states and local education agencies to provide the mandated improved educational services to America's schoolchildren.

Whereas within weeks of signing the "Leave No Child Behind" Act, the President submitted the FY 2003 budget provides an increase in education funding of 0.5 percent (one half of one percent) compared with an average increase of 12 percent in the six years prior to enactment of the new law.

Whereas President Bush's FY 2003 education budget request fails to provide the promised level of funding to states and local education agencies which are required to implement significant educational reforms.

Whereas President Bush's FY 2003 budget would provide only 18 percent of the increase in compensatory education funding promise by the "Leave No Child Behind" Act.

Whereas about one third of the 53.6 million children now in elementary and secondary schools in America are at serious risk of educational failure without the resources promised in the "Leave No Child Behind" Act.

Whereas the funding level for improving teach quality in President Bush's budget would not even keep pace with the current level of funding, let alone help promote the expanded teacher quality programs contained in the "Leave No Child Behind" Act.

Whereas the President's education budget also fails to provide the level of federal assistance for the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act that was promised to states more than 27 years ago.

Whereas by failing to appropriate the funds it has promised to pay for the new accountability requirements for students, teachers and schools, the Congress would bring discredit on itself and undermine the ability of our schools to provide the improved education services for which the House has overwhelmingly voted. Now therefore be it,

Resolved that it is the sense of the House of Representatives that the Congress should complete action on the Fiscal Year 2003 Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations before recessing and should fund the "Leave No Child Behind" Act at levels commensurate with levels promised by the act less than a year ago.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DAN MILLER of Florida). Under rule IX, a resolution that is offered from the floor by a Member other than the majority leader or the minority leader as a question of the privileges of the House has immediate precedence only at a time designated by the Chair within 2 legislative days after the resolution is properly noticed.

Pending that designation, the form of the resolution noticed by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) will appear in the RECORD at this point.

The Chair does not at this point determine whether or not the resolution constitutes a question of privilege. That determination will be made at the time designated for consideration of the resolution.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask to be heard at the appropriate time on the question of whether this resolution constitutes a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That time will be designated.

SPECIAL ORDERS

FREEDOM OF SPEECH FOR RELIGIOUS INSTITUTIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I will not take more than 5 or 6 minutes, but I am back on the floor again to talk about an issue of freedom, freedom of speech in our churches, synagogues, and mosques throughout this country.

Most people do not realize that in 1954, Lyndon Baines Johnson, United States Senator, put an amendment on a revenue bill going through the Senate without any debate, no debate at all; and that amendment basically put the Internal Revenue Service into the churches and synagogues throughout this country.

Prior to 1954 and the beginning of this great Nation that we all know and love, the preachers and the priests and the rabbis at that time, all the way up until 1954, had no restriction of speech. If they wanted to talk about a cultural issue that maybe became a political issue of the day, they did so.

What happened was that with the Johnson amendment, because he was being attacked, so to speak, by the H.L. Hunt family in Texas, they were opposed to his reelection to the United States Senate, he put an amendment on a revenue bill going through the Senate that basically, again, was never debated. So the Internal Revenue Service has the authority to make judgments over what certain churches, meaning the preachers, the priests, the rabbis, might say that might be in their opinion of a political nature.

Mr. Speaker, this, in my opinion, is not what this great Nation stands for. This great Nation stands for the first amendment rights of its people, and I support that first amendment right, and that includes the churches and the houses of worship throughout this Nation.

Let me also say that this bill is known as H.R. 2357, and in just a very few minutes I am going to show my colleagues some myths that the opposition is saying about this legislation. We had people like Dr. D. James Kennedy, who is a wonderful man of our Lord from Florida, to come up to testify on May 14; also, a Baptist minister here in Washington, D.C. who used to be a Member of the House, and his name is Pastor Walter Fauntroy. Pastor Fauntroy came to testify on behalf of this legislation; and the young man that helped me draft this legislation, an attorney with the American Center for Law and Justice, Kobe May, also testified.

Mr. Speaker, at that testimony, the IRS basically said they cannot even enforce this legislation. I want to read just a couple of comments very quickly that came out during the hearing. This one really probably is one that bothers me greatly, which is that in answer to a question from the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LEWIS), the Internal Revenue Service acknowledged that they were not able to enforce this law; that they were dependent on a third party to enforce the law. In other words, Mr. Speaker, that kind of reminds me of the late 1930s in Germany when somebody reported somebody for saying something or doing something.

Again, let me remind my colleagues in the House that this was only an amendment offered by Johnson in 1954 that was never debated and accepted, that put the Internal Revenue Service into the churches. Let me also say, if I might read it at this time, a quote by Martin Luther, and Martin Luther said: "The church must be reminded that it is neither the master nor the servant of the State, but rather the conscience of the State." I believe that quote is so true.

Mr. Speaker, let me also make a couple of other points. We have over 700,000 houses of worship in this Nation. How in the world can the Internal Revenue Service, during the months of September and October and November, how in the world can they send a person to be at the churches and synagogues and mosques to see what they are saying?

Let me give an example very quickly. In the third district of North Carolina, which I represent, down in eastern North Carolina, a priest, Father Rudy at St. Paul's in New Bern, North Carolina, was asked by one of his parishioners, Jerry Schill, Jerry Schill asked, would you, Father Rudy, just say at the closing of the sermon, at the homily, just say that George Bush is pro-life. That is all he asked him to do, to say that George Bush is pro-life. He said no, I cannot do that. If I make that statement, it will violate the 501(c)(3) status of this church, and again, that is because of the Johnson amendment. If that had been in 1953 or 1945, the priest could have said whatever he wanted to say. He had the right to do so. The first amendment guarantees it.

Let me give another example on the other side of the fence. We have strong support, Mr. Speaker, from another former Member of Congress, Pastor Floyd Flake, Dr. Floyd Flake of one of the largest Baptist churches in New York; and what Dr. Flake did in the 2000 election, he had Presidential candidate Al Gore in his church, and when Mr. Gore finished his comments, Pastor Flake went up, put his arm on his shoulder and said to his congregation, I think this is the right man to lead this Nation.

Well, Dr. Flake, just like the priest down in my district, they would be saying this because they believe spiritually it is the right thing to do in their mind, and they should have the right to do it. It should not have been taken away from them by Lyndon Johnson.

Mr. Speaker, let me now very quickly run through a chart. The other side on this issue is saying that this bill is not needed. They say that houses of worship can already comment on political issues. I have just given two examples, and I can give more examples than that. In fact, let me give another example. One of the groups that is opposed to this opposition is the Americans for Separation of Church and State, and this one I always have a great deal of interest in for this reason. I am not going to read a page and a half, but just make a couple of points. He sends this out to 285,000 churches. That is what he said in a press release. He did not send it to 700,000, but 285,000. I wonder how he selected those 285,000, by the way.

But this is what he says; it is really kind of contradictory. The first sentence says: "The first amendment of the U.S. Constitution protects the rights of pastors and church leaders to speak out on religious, moral, and political issues." Mr. Speaker, I actually agree with him on that sentence. But he comes back with, "However, it is because of the Johnson amendment that churches and synagogues and mosques are barred from endorsing or opposing candidates for any political office and may not intervene directly or indirectly in partisan campaigns."

Mr. Speaker, this is not an effort by those of us who believe in the first amendment to say that churches and preachers and priests and rabbis should get involved in political activity. We do not believe that. Only if they believe there are certain topics that they want to talk about. If that priest in New Bern wanted to say that George Bush is pro-life, that is educational, Mr. Speaker. If Floyd Flake in New York wants to say Al Gore is the right man, if he believes that and he says it, that is also educational. The spiritual leaders in this country have got to have the freedom.

So that first myth that the other side is saying is absolutely wrong. The churches and the preachers and the priests, I have talked to many of them throughout this Nation, do not understand this law that Johnson passed; and they are concerned about violating the law so, therefore, they just would rather not say anything.

I want to make it perfectly clear again that should this bill become law, the preacher, the priest, the rabbi would have a choice. He would not have to talk about moral, political, or cultural issues if they did not want to. He can choose to do so. But the way it is now, he is restricted by the Federal Government.

That in itself brings up the second myth. Anyone who believes in separation of church and State cannot support this legislation. Well, my suggestion to those people is this, if you believe there should be a separation, then why should the Federal Government be able to have any influence or any chilling effect on what a preacher, priest, or rabbi should say in this Nation? So, therefore, that one is bogus also.

Then they say, they come right back, the houses of worship bill would compromise the integrity of houses of worship. Let me tell my colleagues that in itself is laughable, because I am going to give a quote now from a former Member of Congress whose name is George Hansen from Idaho; he served for 12 years. Mr. Speaker, to myth number three I would say, let me read the quote from George Hansen. Mr. Hansen said on the floor of this House: "It is impossible to have religious freedom in any Nation where churches are licensed to the government. That is the point." That is the point. When the churches and synagogues in this country were given a 501(c)3 status, there was no restriction at all. I have researched this issue, no restriction at all on speech; nothing. It was Lyndon Baines Johnson that put the Federal Government into our churches and synagogues.

Myth number four is H.R. 2357 is not constitutional. Let me say to those again that raise that bogus argument, this is constitutional. Everything that I have ever read from being a student in high school to a college student to being an older man, that the first amendment applies to each and everyone and that means our preachers, our priests, and rabbis. In fact, in 1830, when Alex De Toqueville came to America and he was so impressed with this great, beautiful country that God had blessed with natural beauty, and he was excited about the New Republic and this freedom we would have in this country, what he said, Mr. Speaker, when he traveled America was, what impressed him the most was the flame in the pulpit. Mr. Speaker, we know for sure that until the Johnson amendment that the churches, synagogues, and mosques had no restrictions of speech.

So, Mr. Speaker, I close this way with a couple of comments. Mr. Hansen was right. It is impossible to have religious freedom in any Nation where churches are licensed to the government. The IRS testified on May 14 they cannot even enforce this law; and yet we have certain groups in this country that intentionally send out letters to intimidate a lot of our pastors, priests, and rabbis. I believe, Mr. Speaker, with our men and women in uniform fighting today and at this very moment for this country, trying to protect our national security and protect our constitutional rights, and one of those is the freedom of speech and the freedom of participation, then our spiritual leaders should not be handcuffed. If this Nation is going to remain morally strong, Mr. Speaker, our spiritual leaders must talk about the issues of the day that they think are important, whether they be cultural issues or moral issues or political issues; and sometimes they intertwine, quite frankly.

So, Mr. Speaker, I am very hopeful that this bill will be debated sometime this week, and I certainly hope that the House will join me in passing this legislation. That will be the first step of restoring the First Amendment right to our spiritual leaders.

I close this way because I close this way every time I speak, whether it be in my district, here on the floor, or anywhere throughout, because I feel that this time that we are in as a Nation that, first of all, I have three military bases in my district. I have Camp LeJeune, I have Cherry Point Marine Air Station, New River Marine Base, and also Seymour Johnson Air Force Base. So I close, Mr. Speaker, by asking God to please bless our men and women in uniform. I ask God to please bless the families of our men and women in uniform. I ask God to please bless the American citizen. I ask God to please bless the men and women who serve in the House and the Senate, that we might do what is right in God's eyes. I ask God to please bless the President of the United States as he has many tough days and many tough decisions to make.

I close finally this way, Mr. Speaker, by saying three times, please, God, please, God, please God, continue to bless America.

TROPICAL STORM ISIDORE

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I come to the floor today regarding Tropical Storm Isidore, which made landfall last Wednesday just south of New Orleans and dumped nearly 25 inches of rain in 24 hours. This massive and destructive storm brought winds of 60 miles per hour to Southeast Louisiana and a storm surge of up to 6 feet.

I was able to see the flooding firsthand when I traveled to Louisiana on Thursday with the FEMA Director, Joe Allbaugh, to survey the damage.

I was relieved and grateful to learn that on Friday, the President declared a Federal disaster for the area. This declaration triggered the release of Federal funds to bring much-needed recovery assistance to the towns, communities, businesses, and citizens that suffered great loss. I would like to thank President Bush and FEMA Director Joe Allbaugh for their support of Louisiana's recovery efforts.

Although the final cost of Tropical Storm Isidore is still being determined, Louisianans know all too well the damage a storm on this particular path can bring. Had this storm reached the level of strength earlier predicted, it would have been a category 3 hurricane, packing winds of 130 miles per hour and a storm surge of up to 12 feet.

As nearly all of New Orleans area rests below sea level, a hurricane of that magnitude alone on the path that Tropical Storm Isidore has taken would devastate southeast Louisiana.

In Louisiana and throughout the Gulf South, we deal with the threat of hurricanes every year. From all reports, this storm could have been much worse, and we are thankful it was not. But I must take this opportunity to bring to light what is at stake when a hurricane or storm takes aim on the Louisiana coast. Not only is the safety, lives and property of Louisiana residents at risk the Nation's critical energy infrastructure and energy supply as well as crucial conservation measures are in danger.

Tropical Storm Isidore should serve as a wake-up call to the Federal Government, which must do more to protect the nation's resources in Louisiana.

Because the City of New Orleans is below sea level and surrounded by levees, every drop of rain that lands there must be pumped out. This important job is accomplished by local, State, and Federal agencies working together to ensure that the necessary infrastructure is in place and working much of this work is done by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. However, in the President's budget request submitted to Congress this year, funding for the southeast Louisiana Flood Control Project, (SELA), was cut by an astonishing 50 percent.

The SELA flood control project is a smart investment. By investing in these flood control projects, we could prevent the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars that will otherwise be spent in Federal flood insurance claims and other disaster assistance programs. Fortunately, the Senate Appropriations Committee understands this investment and has approved an increase for this project, which will allow the construction already underway to continue. However, this is not enough. I urge the administration to rethink its priorities and to include sufficient funding for the SELA project in its budget request for fiscal year 2004.

Although protecting life and property should be reason enough to invest in infrastructure in Louisiana, there is an even bigger problem that faces the entire Nation when severe flooding occurs in South Louisiana. More than 80 percent of the Nation's offshore oil and gas is produced off Louisiana's coast and 25 percent of all the Nation's foreign and domestic oil comes across Louisiana's shores by tanker, barge or pipeline. In fact, according to the Minerals Management Service, (MMS), of the 571 million barrels of oil produced from the Outer Continental Shelf in 2001, 502 million were produced offshore Louisiana. That translates to 88 percent of production.

Let me also tell you all about a very special highway in south Louisiana. This highway also happens to be a main artery for the Nation's energy supply. This highway is aptly named Louisiana Highway 1. Nearly one-fifth of the Nation's entire energy supply depends on Louisiana 1, and we cannot continue to leave its future to the whims of mother nature.

Louisiana Highway 1 connects Port Fourchon, Louisiana with the rest of the country. Why is it important? Consider these facts: 85 percent of the deep-water drilling rigs working in the Gulf are supported by Port Fourchon; the Department of Interior's Mineral Management Service has identified Port Fourchon as the focal point of deep-water activity in the Gulf; it is estimated that Port Fourchon services approximately 16 percent of the U.S. domestic crude oil; natural gas production and imported crude oil; the Gulf of Mexico has 20,000 miles of pipelines, which is the most extensive network of offshore oil and gas pipelines in the world; Louisiana 1 is the only road servicing Port Fourchon, and it spends heavy rain days underwater; Louisiana 1 is the only means of land access to the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port, (LOOP); LOOP is the only offshore oil terminal in the United States and alone is responsible for 13 percent of the United States' imported crude oil. LOOP transports approximately one million barrels of foreign oil a day and approximately 300,000 barrels of domestic crude from the Gulf of Mexico Outer Continental Shelf. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers estimates that 60 percent of all the Louisiana offshore drilling over the next 30 years will be in the service area of Port Fourchon. In the event of a hurricane, this lonely little road is the way out for tens of thousands of my constituents.

Last year, after giving a similar speech on this floor about the critical importance of Louisiana 1, it was finally designated as a federal "high priority corridor." But Louisiana 1, like much of south Louisiana, is washing away, and we must act now to preserve it. You can see from this picture that even without a severe hurricane, this highway is in a precarious situation. Can you imagine what would happen if a hurricane hit us head on? It would be gone, and there would be great difficulty in servicing one-fifth of our nation's energy supply. I urge the administration and my Congressional colleagues to think about these facts and to invest more resources in critical improvements to this and other highway systems in south Louisiana.

Year after year, revenues from the oil and gas production off the coast of my State provides most of the funds for the Land and Water Conservation Fund but receives precious little in return. Since 1968, and for most of the life of the Land and Water Conservation Fund, OCS revenues have served as the primary source of funding. In fact, since 1990, OCS funds have accounted for more than 90 percent of the deposits in the Land and Water Conservation Fund each year.

While approximately 80 percent of the OCS revenues collected during this period came from offshore Louisiana, only 1.1 percent, $27 million, of the total Federal side Land and Water Conservation Fund allocated during this period actually went toward Louisiana. On the other hand, 23 percent, $650 million, of the funding allocated during this period from the Federal side of the fund went to California, but only 4 percent of the total OCS funds during this period came from offshore California. In addition, 11 percent, $327 million, of the funding allocated during this period went toward Florida but no OCS revenues come from offshore Florida. The Nation must beware. Louisiana cannot continue to serve as the Nation's energy and conservation platform for much longer without adequate revenue sharing and investment. If we do make these investments, there could be severe consequences to both the State and the Nation.

So, what is at stake? The wetlands in Louisiana that have vanished so far represent an area the size of Rhode Island. Every 30 minutes, a parcel of low lying land the size of a football field disappears. If current trends continue, this will result in the loss of nearly 40 percent of our Nation's coastal wetlands. Not only do these wetlands and barrier islands offer invaluable protection from hurricanes and storms such as Isidore for more than 2 million people living in the coastal zone, including the City of New Orleans, they also protect our Nation's energy infrastructure so much of which is found in Louisiana's coastal zone. Here one will find not only LOOP but also two storage sites for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) and Henry Hub, one of the Nation's major natural gas distribution centers.

From Wednesday to Friday of last week, MMS estimated that 4.5 million barrels of oil and 25 billion cubic feet of natural gas were unavailable for U.S. consumption because of Isidore. With over 4,000 oil and gas platforms in the Gulf, storm events such as Isidore threaten 95 percent of crude oil and 60 percent of natural gas production from offshore federal lands. Louisiana's rapidly eroding wetlands are invaluable in absorbing the surge of storm events like Isidore. Without them, one can only imagine the damage a hurricane could wreak on South Louisiana and the nation's energy infrastructure.

One-third of the commercial fish harvested in the lower 48 States comes from Louisiana's coastal zone. As Louisiana's coastal wetlands disappear, so will these fisheries.

Louisiana's wetlands are home to the Nation's largest flyway, serving as habitat for more than five-million birds and many endangered species. As the wetlands wash away this habitat is lost. Also, they act as a buffer for the number one port system in the United States that moves the Nation's goods from middle America to world markets.

Louisiana takes pride in its role as the country's most crucial energy provider. Ours is a state rich in natural resources. However, given the contribution my State makes to the Nation, it is time for the Nation to carefully consider its deficient investment in South Louisiana and the Gulf Coast Region and to consider what would happen if, God forbid, a major hurricane travels the same path as Tropical Storm Isidore. The Land and Water Conservation Fund is just one example of a Federal revenue stream that will suffer. It is long past time for the Federal Government to adequately and fairly invest in a State that gives so much to the rest of the country.

As I said a few moments ago, Tropical Storm Isidore should serve as our wake-up call. The examples I mentioned today, the SELA flood control project, Louisiana Highway 1 and other highways such as Interstate 49, and our Nation's wetlands, are too important to ignore.

It is too early to tell what the final damage will be from Tropical Storm Isidore. However, one thing is guaranteed: it will not be the last. Let us act now to invest in the infrastructure necessary to protect the life and property of our citizens.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

THE SENATE AGENDA

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I rise to talk a little bit about what I think is the future of some of the things that are being talked about in terms of this Senate session which probably will expire in 2 weeks, and the many things that we have to do prior to that time.

Some of the things that are being talked about seem to me to be a little contradictory from time to time. I guess my hope is that we can together, of course, based on the leadership in the Senate, set some priorities, make some decisions, and accomplish some of the things that are necessary for us to accomplish prior to the recess.

Clearly, we have to do something about homeland defense. I can't imagine anything that is more important to us than to complete this discussion and allow the President to establish what is necessary for homeland defense. It is interesting. It reminds us. This morning, for example, over in the Hart Senate Office Building, we were told we couldn't leave our offices and no one could come in because there was a suspicious package over there on the floor. It reminds us that there is indeed a continuing threat of terrorism which we need to do something about.

Clearly, we have to make some decisions with regard to our position on Iraq. Whatever that decision is, it seems to me it is terribly important that Congress join with the President, and that we make some decisions which cause something to happen there. Hopefully, it will be some kind of a peaceful settlement. But that isn't going to happen—and it hasn't happened for years—until we do something that is very definitive. We can do that.

We clearly have to do something about defense appropriations. I suspect that we will end up—and I have no problem with that—with a continuing resolution for the rest of the appropriations, none of which we have passed at this time, so they can continue at last year's level until whenever—November or February. Defense appropriations and military construction have to be changed because the demands are higher for more money, and we can't go on last year's numbers.

These certainly are some of the things we must do. Then we have to have this continuing resolution.

I hope we will get back to this matter of homeland defense. The President made a recommendation, and the House passed a bill. It is something that is unusual, it is something that is different, and it is something patterned after the threats up to now. I think it has to have management flexibility.

That has been one of the controversial points—organizational flexibility, putting together a Department made up of a number of different departments that have had these specific responsibilities and bring it together so it will be coordinated.

Some of the things we are finding that might have been done better prior to September 11 will be done better in the future. We can do that. We have to assign personnel responsibilities, do budget transfers, and do many of these things that pretty clearly need to be done.

I think one of the interesting things that has happened in recent times because of Iraq and terrorism discussions and home defense discussions is that on homeland defense we see an effort being made increasingly to shift the division from the economy to these issues. I think both of these issues are very important. But when you have threats and you have terrorism, you aren't able to choose the time. When it is there, you have to do something about it.

Some of the talk, particularly in the media, I suppose comes basically from here. It has been interesting. One of the columnists in my home State of Wyoming—one of the few liberal columnists—has written one that I think is interesting. The first point he makes is that President Bush, in his campaign, was for bringing troops home. At that time, that was a reasonable thing to do. We were deployed over the world and beyond where we needed to be.

Now he said the contradiction is that he is willing to commit thousands of young people overseas. Times have changed. September 11 changed things. September 11 indicated to us that there is a different kind of threat from terrorism, and indeed a different kind of war in this world than there was before. Should our position change? It seems to me that it should.

Then he goes on to talk a little bit about the fact that the administration hasn't even shown the need to do this. It seems to me, if you go back and examine what happened in the last 10 years in Iraq, it is pretty clear that the agreements that were made after the 1991 war have not been lived up to. And that is the basis for the kind of threat we have now. It is pretty clear.

It is very interesting. He goes on to say we should never attack anyone unless we have been attacked. I wonder if he has forgotten the 3,000 people who died in New York City. It shows the different changes that have taken place. Years ago, an attack was by 17 divisions with tanks and landing barges. That is what you defended yourself against. That is not the case now. The case is you can bring some kind of a secret thing into a building in New York City and kill 3,000 people.

We are having some strange conversations—all of them valid. We need to go through it. We also hear from some of our friends on the other side of the aisle that we are no longer paying any attention to the economy.

I simply say that I believe we ought to review where we have been and where we could have been—and the number of things talked about here that have an impact on the economy that the leadership has not brought up, and has not been willing to go forward on. One of them is the budget. It is the first year in 20-some years that we haven't had a budget; that has something to do with an economy, of course.

Policy for energy: We have been moving along, but we still haven't gotten an energy policy. It is one of the things that most impacts both our economy and our safety against terrorism. We are hoping to get that. There is still no movement there.

Terrorism insurance on buildings, for example: We have reduced the ability of people to invest their money to help the economy. We haven't done anything with that.

Tax permanency and doing something about the estate tax so people will be more willing to invest their money—they don't want to do that, and they haven't brought it up. We need to be sure to take those items out of the committees.

Limits on liability, tort reform—that has something to do with the economy—we could do that. The leadership has chosen not to bring that up. So there are many things where there seems to be a contradiction.

All of us want to pass homeland security legislation. No one in this Chamber does not want to accomplish that. And we want to make it work. To do that, we need to move forward. There is no one in this body who does not want to see our economy strengthened, making life better for everyone in this country.

We have to make some decisions. We have to have some movement instead of being 4 weeks on the same thing and having not accomplished it.

Mr. President, I certainly hope we can move forward. I think all of us want to do that. We have a couple weeks in which to do it. Now is the time.

I yield the floor.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, may I inquire as to the parliamentary situation? Are we in morning business?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. We are in morning business for 20 more minutes, according to the order.

Mr. BENNETT. For another 20 minutes?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. BENNETT. I thank the Chair and ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for the next 20 minutes.

THE ECONOMY

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, we have had a lot of discussion on this floor about the economy recently. Since we are in an election period, we have a lot of discussion on the campaign trail about the economy, with a number of questions being raised—in raised voices—as often happens during a campaign.

One of the questions we have heard thunder forth on this floor is: Who lost the surplus? Where did the Government surplus go? Those who ask the question almost always answer it by saying: It was the Bush tax cut that destroyed the surplus. And it is the Bush tax cut that causes us now to be in deficit.

As I have contemplated responding to this, my mind has gone back to an old Peanuts cartoon. Charlie Brown and Lucy are having a conversation. In the first panel, Lucy is complaining about various problems in her life. In the second panel, Charlie Brown says: Yes, Lucy, life does have its ups and downs. In the third panel, Lucy makes her position very clear. She says: I don't want any downs. I only want ups. And in the fourth panel, she is marching off saying: Nothing but ups, ups, ups. And Charlie Brown responds with the time-honored comment: Good grief.

There are many people who view our economy the same way Lucy does. They do not want ups and downs; they just want ups: a continuum, as far as the eye can see, of years that are better economically than the years before.

There was a period of time, in the 1990s, when we were in the longest sustained expansion of our history, where people were saying: Lucy has finally got her wish. We have nothing but ups.

During that period, I had the opportunity to talk with Alan Greenspan when he appeared before the Banking Committee. I asked him the question—not necessarily in Lucy Van Pelt terms—but I said to him: Have we repealed the business cycle? As we look at the strength of the economy, and all of the years that are ups, have we now reached the point when the business cycle will not kick in and we will not see a downturn?

Well, Mr. President, as you know, Alan Greenspan is one who spoke of the new economy, who spoke of structural changes in the economy as a result of the information age and the application of technology to our decision making. But when I asked him the question with respect to the business cycle, he smiled that wry smile of his and said: No, Senator, we have not repealed the business cycle; it will still manifest itself in the years ahead. And it has.

I brought this chart to the Chamber to demonstrate when the business cycle started to give us a “down.” You can see, in the third quarter of 1999, we were still in a strong “up” mode. In the fourth quarter, Christmastime, it was strong. While we did not do so well in the first quarter of 2000, we were still in the very strong “up” territory.

But by the third quarter of 2000, all of a sudden we were down dramatically. We were still not in a recession, because a recession technically is when the economy is shrinking rather than growing, but there was very anemic growth, indeed, of 0.6 percent in that quarter.

You get to the fourth quarter, Christmastime, where before you were up with a growth of 7.1 percent, and now you have a growth of 1.1 percent. It was not a recession technically, but it certainly felt like one.

Before, we had been in strong territory, through the 1990s and on into the first half of 2000, and suddenly we were down in this weak territory in the last half of 2000.

In the first quarter of 2001, we slipped into red territory and negative growth, minus 0.6 percent growth in the first quarter; minus 1.6 percent growth in the second quarter; coming back out of the business cycle, minus 0.4 percent growth in the third quarter; and then, in the fourth quarter of 2001, back into positive territory again.

In the first quarter of 2002, we have strong growth again. Then we are back to 1.3 percent growth. But these cross-hatched areas show what the economists are predicting for the remainder of the year.

So we go from the stronger period of the ups that Lucy Van Pelt loves, then the business cycle comes again, we have a recession, and then we start to come out of it again.

To those who say: Where did the surplus go? and, Wasn't it eaten by the tax cut? I say the answer is very clear: It was eaten by the business cycle.

What causes the business cycle? What causes things that have been going well for so long to suddenly go wrong? There are several reasons. Let me try to discuss each one of them.

The first thing that causes the business cycle is, quite frankly, bad decisions—bad decisions on the part of policymakers in Government, bad decisions on the part of business men and women, bad decisions on the part of managers.

One of the reasons we have seen the severity of the business cycle tamp down a little, so that the swings are not nearly as wide as they used to be in my father's business days or my grandfather's business days, where we do not have anything like the panic of 1873, we do not have anything like the Great Depression of the 1930s anymore, is that business men and women have better access to information and, therefore, they make fewer mistakes.

The classic business cycle in the manufacturing world would run like this—this is oversimplified, but it illustrates the point. You open a factory, and you start to produce widgets. You can see I went to business school because in business school they always talk about widgets as the generic product.

All right. You open a factory. You start to make widgets. Let's say your widgets sell pretty well. As the sales reports come in, you, as the manager of the factory, the manager of that business, say: We need to build more capacity. We need to make more widgets because there is demand for widgets out there.

So you double your shift. You put on two shifts, and you are having twice as many widgets come out of your factory. Pretty soon, people say to you: The wear and tear on our machinery is such that we need to build a new factory to meet this demand for widgets. So you invest in a new factory, and you are back to one shift, but now you are producing something like three times as many widgets as you were before. And you are now in the “up” period because people who make the raw materials that go into widgets are selling them to you, they are paying their employees, they are buying raw materials from their suppliers, and it is all running through the economy. There is prosperity.

While there is prosperity in the economy, there is prosperity in the Government, because all of the employees of all of these companies being hired to help you make more and more widgets are paying taxes on their income. They are paying taxes on the profits they make in selling supplies and other material to the widget maker.

Then one day, someone walks into your office as the head of that widget company and says: Have you noticed how many widgets we have in the storeroom? Have you noticed how big our inventory of widgets has gotten? We have so many extra widgets that we have not shipped that we need to shut the factory down until we work off the excess inventory. We need to shut down at least half of our capacity until all the widgets in the storeroom have been cleared out and sold.

You made a wrong decision to keep manufacturing widgets when the demand started to fall off or level off. You didn't realize it was the wrong decision. It didn't feel like the wrong decision, as you expanded capacity, but now the proof is in the inventory. It is piling up on the back lot, and it is overrunning your storehouses.

You have so many extra widgets, you have to say: Shut the factory down; mothball the extra factory we built because we are not going to be returning to that for quite a while; lay people off until we can get rid of all of the excess widgets we have.

So you go into the downside of the business cycle. You go into a recession. And as you stop manufacturing widgets, you stop ordering raw materials from all your suppliers, and they stop ordering goods and services from the people who supply them. And those people get laid off, and the Government doesn't get any taxes because none of those employees is taking home a paycheck. Indeed, they are now drawing unemployment compensation so the Government is seeing more money go out at the very time less money is coming in, and the Government starts to run deficits. We are in a recession and everybody gets concerned. Gloom and doom overhang the economy.

Then one day the same person who walked into your office and said, do you know how many widgets we have in the storeroom, walks into your office and says: Do you know how bare the storeroom is? We have sold all of those widgets. We have sold all the widgets that were in the back lot. We have sold all the widgets that were in the warehouse. We don't have any widgets. There is still a demand for them out there. You better gear up the factory.

So you get on the phone and you call your workers back and you say: We have to gear up the factory.

Once again, you should have done it earlier, but you made a mistake. You had bad information. In the 1950s, in the 1960s, in the 1970s, you were dependent on hand counts of inventory, sales figures that were sometimes weeks, if not months, after the fact, and it was inevitable that even the best manager would make the wrong decision on the upside and make the wrong decision on the downside, which meant that the business cycle was more and more extreme by virtue of bad information.

The main contribution of the information revolution to the business world has been good information with which a manager can now say: Wait a minute. There is a softening in widget demand. We will eliminate the second shift, but we will continue to operate both factories.

Instead of the wild swings that we used to have in the business cycle, today's swings are narrower and softer, but they are still there because, inevitably, at some point, someone will overestimate sales and thereby build too much capacity and then, on the other end, underestimate sales and have to turn around, and you will get a business cycle.

In historic terms, this recession, outlined on this chart, is milder than any we have had. Those with memories go back to the recession that started in the early 1990s. That recession was much sharper and more difficult and more painful than this one has been. If you have an even longer memory, go back to the recession of the double dip in the early 1980s when we had economic devastation that would make these kinds of numbers look like paradise.

I remember being taught in school that 6 percent unemployment was full employment, that the economy could not absorb any more than 94 percent of the available workers and when you got to 6 percent unemployment, you were at full employment. In the 1990s, we got down in some parts of the country to 2 and 3 percent unemployment. There were times in my State where employers could not hang on to workers because there were so many jobs. They said: Our biggest problem is trying to get labor.

Interestingly, at the height of the latest recession, at the time of greatest difficulty in the job market, there was wringing of hands, weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth because we hit 6 percent unemployment. The unemployment rate has started to go down now from 6 percent, after hitting that peak.

So in historic terms, this is a mild recession, but what comfort is that to people who have lost their jobs and, more importantly, to the issue I started out to discuss: How about the surplus and what has happened to the surplus and who lost the surplus?

You can anticipate my answer to that. The surplus was lost to the business cycle. I said there were several things that cause a business cycle. I have given you the one that happens within the business cycle itself.

The other is that outside things come along. The oil shock that hit us in the 1970s helped trigger difficult times. September 11 hit us just as we were struggling with the economic downturn and made it deeper and longer than it would otherwise have been. Outside shocks and outside circumstances can also trigger a business cycle.

So it is not just bad decisions on the part of business leaders; it is also outside problems. We had both of those hit at the same time. The business cycle turned us down, and then September 11 hit us. We have still not recovered from September 11.

I was speaking to a good friend in the hospitality industry. He said: After September 11, we were off 20 percent from the norm. This is an industry that is bigger than the automobile industry in its total impact on the economy.

I spoke to this leader over the weekend and said: Have you recovered yet?

He said: No, we have come back in relative terms. We are now only 10 percent down from the norm.

But in that industry, 10 percent is huge. We have seen airlines that are faced with bankruptcy because people are afraid to fly. They are filling their planes, but they are filling their planes with cut rates that can't possibly give them an adequate rate of return.

What happened to the surplus? What happened to the surplus is that the economy got hit with business cycle problems and with outside shocks simultaneously and, as I was describing in the widget business, when the economy gets hit, the Government gets hit. Tax revenues go down as business activities go down.

As these numbers remain strongly blue and go strongly blue into the future, the tax revenues will come back. They will come back by virtue of the strength of the economy.

The fundamental rule I want everyone to understand is this: Money does not come from the budget.

Money comes from the economy. We can pass any kind of budget we want. We can make any kind of projections we want. But we will be humbled by the realities of the marketplace every single time. Sometimes the marketplace will produce more revenue than we budgeted for. That is what happened in the 1990s. We budgeted, hopefully, to get to a balance by 2002, and the economy surprised us and took us not only to balance, but surplus, in 1999. We were then budgeting surpluses for as long as the eye could see. The economy said: No, you are forgetting the business cycle. That, plus the attack of the terrorists, threw us into this situation, and Government revenues went down, regardless of what we budgeted.

Let us understand, when we talk about what happened to the surplus, that it was not the passage of the tax cut that caused the surplus to disappear, it was not really much of anything we did here on the floor—except as we reacted to the two realities that hit us unexpectedly. The business cycle came along and said I have not been repealed, and the economy slowed down, and then outside shocks hit us in the form of a terrorist attack that devastated large segments of the economy that have still not recovered.

Those of us who are so sure that we control this economy, and what it does by virtue of what we pass here, need to have a little more humility and a little more understanding and realize once again that the most important thing the Government can do in order to maximize Government revenues is to create an economic climate in which market forces can produce the greatest beneficial result. But even at those times, when the atmosphere is most conducive, the business cycle is still with us and will humble us if we keep thinking that, like Lucy Van Pelt, we can go through life with nothing but ups, ups, and ups, and never face the reality of the occasional down.

I appreciate the indulgence of my fellow Senators. I will have more to say on this at another time when we have a sufficient amount of morning business. I recognize the time has come to return to the debate of the bill on the floor.

I yield the floor.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

HOMELAND SECURITY ACT OF 2002

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 2 p.m. having arrived, the Senate will now resume consideration of H.R. 5005, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 5005) to establish the Department of Homeland Security, and for other purposes.

Lieberman amendment No. 4471, in the nature of a substitute.

Gramm/Miller amendment No. 4738 (to amendment No. 4471), of a perfecting nature, to prevent terrorist attacks within the United States.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I have spoken with Senator THOMPSON and he has indicated that he has a statement to make. There may be others on his side wishing to make statements on the bill. He indicated that there will be no unanimous consent requests related to this bill.

The leaders have announced there will be no votes today. My friend from Tennessee, I am sure, is aware of that. I look forward to his statement and whoever else wants to speak on this most important legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee is recognized.

Mr. THOMPSON. Madam President, I thank my friend from Nevada. I concur in his analysis. There will be no unanimous consent request or additional amendments brought up, or anything of that nature. I also agree with him that we should have our colleagues down here discussing this bill, if they desire to do so. I encourage anyone who may be listening, if they have comments on this bill, come to the floor. There will be plenty of time this afternoon for us to continue to engage in this discussion. It is a very important discussion.

I think with regard to the several points of disagreement that we have, we should keep in mind the points of agreement we do have. I think, for example, all concerned agree that we need to bring many of these agencies that have to do with homeland security under one umbrella and that we must do it in a much better and more efficient way than we have carried out the operations of Government in many other respects. So let's build on that.

I hope we can build on that and address the points of disagreement and see if we cannot come together. I am still hopeful that in the waning days in which we have to address this issue, we will be able to come together and agree on not only the principle I just enunciated with regard to the merger, but also with regard to issues concerning the President's proper authority and appropriate flexibility that is going to be needed to manage this gargantuan enterprise we are setting out on. It is really a major endeavor. Nothing has been done like this in several decades in this country, and we are going to need all hands on deck, all the tools, all the resources, and all of the attention that we can bring to bear on this problem in order to make this country safer.

I think most of us realize now that we will probably never again be able to believe we are totally safe and that we can cover every border and every bolt and every automobile and every airplane, all to the extent that we will have a failsafe situation and that we will not need to constantly keep our guard up.

There is a lot we can do. A lot has already been done. The President has taken charge and Tom Ridge in the Office of Homeland Security has taken charge. They have issued Executive orders that have addressed many of the burning issues that we face. I think our border situation is already better. Our transportation situation is better. But there is an awful lot to be done before we get to the point where we can say that we have done all that we can do.

It is a very difficult proposition. I said last week that one of the things that impresses me most about this body, about the Government in general, is how difficult it is to make any really substantive change to anything. If there is any difficulty connected with it at all, if it comes to spending money, or something like that, we can usually come together because it benefits those of us who are spending the money, benefits our constituents, and we get some short-term benefit from that all the way around. We sometimes pay long-term consequences for it, but spending money seems to be an easy thing to do.

Here, we are actually stepping on some people's toes and we are acknowledging some dysfunctional aspects of our Government and we are saying, let's change that. But there are a lot of vested interests out there who don't want to change. They want the status quo. In the abstract, they want the same end result we do—we want a better system—but they don't want to change things in order to achieve a better system.

We have been looking, listening, watching, and absorbing for many years in this Congress and in this Senate the various negative aspects of many of the agencies of our Government and how they are not working, how they are not doing what they are supposed to be doing, how they are rife with waste, fraud, and abuse, and billions of dollars are being sent out for things—like people who are deceased, for example. We find that we cannot incorporate high-tech information systems that have been incorporated in the private sector for years and years, to good effect. We cannot seem to bring that into the Government. The IRS has wasted billions and billions of dollars trying to get their computers to talk to each other. They are making real progress now, but for a long time they did not. And there are human resources problems, human capital problems.

We are losing people we ought to be keeping in Government, and too often keeping the people we ought to be losing because of old rules and regulations that were set up decades ago. We have seen all of this happen, all of this evolve as Government got bigger and bigger and more complex, with levels and upper levels—every Deputy Assistant Secretary has an assistant to the Deputy Assistant Secretary, and they have two, three, and four, and it keeps growing. It makes us less efficient and less responsive to the people we are supposed to be serving.

Now, we understand it is not just money and inefficiency and lack of service we have to be concerned about. We have to be concerned about our very safety—the No. 1 job of Government, self-protection.

Yet there are those who want to incorporate that system, this bureaucratic mess that has evolved into the new Homeland Security Department because they do not want to make any changes.

Unfortunately, a part of what has to be addressed. Governmentwide is our civil service system. No one wants to deal with that because it is politically difficult, politically volatile, and you are going to be stepping on some people's toes. Yet there is unanimity among Democratic and Republican experts who have looked at this problem and have experienced this problem.

In the homeland security bill, we are trying to solve a Governmentwide problem. It is much too big. It is much too politically difficult. There are too many entrenched interests to successfully address that situation. We are trying to say, with regard to homeland security, with the issue most important to our country: Let's have a little flexibility in these civil service rules that we have not had in times past.

When President Carter asked for civil service reforms in the spring of 1978, he said the system "had become a bureaucratic maze which neglects merit, tolerates poor performance, permits abuse of legitimate employee rights, and mires every personnel action in red-tape, delay, and confusion."

That was President Carter. Accordingly, Congress delivered the requested reforms in the Civil Service Reform Act of 1978. But a lot has happened since 1978 to prove that we still have a long ways to go.

The Brookings Institution report of 2002 quoted earlier now says:

The civil service personnel system underwhelms at virtually every task it is asked to do. It is slow at hiring, interminable at firing, permissive at promoting, useless at disciplining, and penurious at rewarding.

That is the Brookings Institution's analysis of our civil service system.

This is not news to anybody. President Carter knew about it, spoke on it, and the Brookings Institution and others have spoken about it. We heard testimony in the Governmental Affairs Committee over the years about this issue. Something has to be done about it, and everybody wrings their hands and acknowledges it is not right that it takes 5 or 6 months to hire somebody. It is not right that it takes 18 months to fire a poor performer. But that is the way it is, and that is the way we have been doing business. We rock along tolerating that kind of a system because it is only Government and we really do not expect much out of Government anyway, do we?

Now we are in a different world, and we understand that what is at stake is not just aggravation or waiting in a longer line or putting some civil service employees out who are trying to get a job or trying to get promotion inside a system that only let's them move lockstep or waste a few billion dollars—it is not just that anymore. It is our very safety and survival as a nation because, if we adopt this kind of system into the Department of Homeland Security, we will get the same results as other agencies.

We will see not only waste, fraud, abuse, and mismanagement, overlap and duplication, but we will see the border not protected the way it should be, airline safety not being what it should be, cargoes will not be examined the way they should be, the information technology we need to tie all this together so we can keep up with the bad guys will not be what it should be because we have seen it has not worked in any other aspect of Government.

What makes us think that just by creating this new Department under the same old rules it will work any better in this new Department of Government? If anything, there will be new problems that will be created from this new Department of Government because we are talking about bringing together over 170,000 Federal employees. It will require the coordination of 17 different unions, 77 existing collective bargaining agreements, 7 different payroll systems, 80 different personnel management systems—80—an overwhelming task by any stretch of the imagination.

Again, with this more complex, more difficult, and more-important-than-ever task that we have on our plate now, do we really want to bring the old way of doing business into our Government that has produced these bad results? The answer is no.

We have to do business a little differently. We have to give the President authority that other Presidents have had—not take away his authority as the opposition to this bill would do, or diminish his authority, or set up new requirements for the President to prove. It means that we have to give the people who are going to be running this new Department some flexibility with regard to hiring, firing, promoting, rewarding, holding employees accountable—all those issues we should have done Governmentwide years ago and we do not have the political will to do.

At long last, with regard to the Department of Homeland Security, at least we ought to acknowledge that we have to look at these issues differently. We have done so with regard to several Departments. That is the irony. When the Transportation Security Administration came to us and said, We need a little additional flexibility in hiring, firing, promoting, rewarding, and disciplining, we gave it to them. When the GAO came to us and asked for the same flexibility, we gave it to them. When the IRS came to us and asked for the same flexibility, we gave it to them. When the FAA came to us and asked the same flexibility, we gave it to them. When the President comes today and asks for the same flexibility, we say no. At a time when it is needed the most and is being asked for by the person who needs it the most on behalf of his new Department, we say no. I think it defies logic.

It is not as if we are taking a step back from merit system principles or that we want to engage in prohibited personnel practices and we are going to abrogate civil service for Federal employees. That is not it at all.

The President has made it clear that the merit system principles that have been there for years will still be there. I am talking about principles such as veterans' preference; the requirement to recruit qualified individuals from all segments of society; select in advance employees on the basis of merit after fair and open competition. We keep that, of course. I am talking about treating employees and applicants fairly and equitably without regard to political affiliation, race, color, religion, national origin, sex, marital status, age, or handicapping conditions; we keep those principles.

Provide equal pay for equal work and reward excellent performance—of course, we keep those principles; maintain the high standards of integrity, conduct, concern, public interest, we keep that; manage the employees efficiently and effectively, we keep that. The requirement that we retain and separate employees on the basis of their performance and their performance alone, we keep that. Educate and train employees when it will result in individual performance, we keep that; protect employees from improper political influence, we keep that; protect employees against reprisal for lawful disclosure of information in whistleblower situations, that is, protect people who report things such as illegal or wasteful activities, we most certainly keep that. We want that. We value that as much as anyone.

All of those merit system principles we retain. We do nothing with regard to keeping those. Those are principles on which we all agree, and those who imply we are somehow, in the name of national security, eviscerating the rights of employees, is simply not true.

We can maintain the rights of employees but we are not wedded to 50-year-old operating principles. We can make some changes that make some sense in the light of current circumstances.

Well, they ask, what about prohibited personnel practices? In title V of the United States Code, as we all know, there are several prohibited personnel practices in which the managers of these agencies and the heads of these Departments cannot engage. They say employees who have the authority to take, direct others to take or approve personnel actions shall not discriminate on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, age, handicap condition, marital status, and political affiliation. We retain that prohibition, for sure. May not solicit or consider employment recommendations based on factors other than personal knowledge or jobs or related activities or characteristics, we keep that; may not coerce an employee's political activity, we keep that; shall not deceive or willfully obstruct a person's right to compete for employment; shall not influence any person to withdraw from competition for any position or improve or injure the employment prospects of any other person; shall not give unauthorized preference or advantage to any person or improve or injure the employment prospects of any particular employee or applicant; shall not engage in nepotism; shall not retaliate against a whistleblower; shall not retaliate against employees or applicants who exercise their appeal rights; shall not discriminate based on personal conduct which is not adverse to on-the-job performance; shall not violate any law, rule, or regulation which implements or directly concerns the merit principles; shall not knowingly take or fail to take a personnel action if that action or failure to act would violate a statutory or regulatory veterans preference requirement.

All of those prohibitions stay. We retain every one of them. They are principles on which we all agree, and they are meaningful. They are protections that employees should have. They are protections we insist these employees retain.

Again, does that mean one cannot make any changes from a system that was created 50 years ago, in light of current circumstances? It does not. When you find somebody not doing their job, does that mean it should take years to do anything about it? Does that mean it should take months in order to hire someone because of rigorous steps and certain pools from which you have to draw and all of that kind of foolishness at a time when we are really in need of people with technology capability that we have not necessarily needed in times past? Of course not.

Does it mean we should not have a system whereby good performers can jump ahead and get paid more and not have to go in a one-step process all the way up where people who are doing their job, people who are doing an excellent job, people who are doing a mediocre job, and people who are doing a terrible job are all lockstep, just same old thing?

That system was created 50 years ago, with 15 different pay grades, 10 steps within each pay grade, when people would go in as a young person and lockstep their way all the way up through the process and retire after 20 years. That is not the world we live in anymore. Young people can do a lot better than that. We need to be able to pay them more. We need to be able to reward them more. We need for them to be able to jump grades, for example. Under less than very exceptional circumstances, it ought to be the rule for extraordinary performance.

By the same token, there needs to be accountability. These are not inconsistent with the merit principles I have enunciated. There is just a little bit of common sense. It does not mean we have to have collective bargaining agreements that go on for months and sometimes years over such issues as whether or not the annual picnic was rightfully called off.

There is a case at an Army base in St. Louis which lasted 6 years over that momentous issue.

The administrative process is rife with cases such as disputes over whether or not the smoking area should be lit. Sometimes it takes years in order to resolve issues that way. At a time of war, can't we bring a little common sense with regard to the Department of Homeland Security when there are such high stakes? Surely, we can. That is what the issues before us today on this homeland security have to do with. They are in regard to maintaining a rigorous status quo regime or giving the people in this new Department—we will have this Department for the rest of our lives and probably for generations to come. There will be Democrat Presidents and Republican Presidents. There will be Democrat and Republican Secretaries of the Department of Homeland Security. This is not a partisan Democratic or Republican issue; it is a commonsense issue.

Doesn't the new Secretary need to be able to break through some of these old rules and procedures that have gotten us down into waste, fraud, abuse, inefficiency, overlap, duplication, and inability to function and have at least a shot at managing people under the 21st century rules in which we live, instead of rules of another time and another era? I think so. That is what this is all about. That is all we are asking.

I mentioned the various aspects with which the manager of this new Department—whoever that unfortunate soul turns out to be—will need some tools with which to manage. A good employee will welcome that with open arms. In fact, I think all of this would be welcome by employees, the overwhelming majority of whom are doing their job on a day-to-day basis. They are the unsung heroes throughout our Government. If those folks are offered an opportunity to say, look, we are going to make it easier for you to get hired, you are not going to have to be flailing around for 5 months and going through all these various steps, we are going to try to pay you more, once you get in and you do a good job, we are going to make it so you are rewarded commensurate with that, if you do not like what is happening and you file an appeal, or your union does on behalf of you, you are going to have, let's say, two steps instead of four in the appellate process, I think most employees would overwhelmingly embrace that tradeoff.

Ninety-nine percent of the employees are not afraid of bringing a little common sense to the appeals process or the ability to respond to poor performance. If one looks at surveys, they will quickly see the overwhelming number of good Government employees realize there are some poor performers, and nothing can be done with them. They have to be transferred from Department to Department. The political appointees are in there for a short period of time. They are not going to spend all of their time bogged down in administrative hearings and worried about trying to get rid of somebody who has been there—you know the old saying, we will be there when you come and we will be there when you go, and it is true. They are and they will be there. They transfer them around and these other employees see that. They are making the same pay sometimes that the good employees are making, and that is not right.

We do not need to put up with a situation such as that in our Government. (Disturbance in the galleries.)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Sergeant at Arms will restore order to the Senate proceedings.

The Senator will continue.

Mr. THOMPSON. Madam President, chapter 43 goes beyond the intent of merit principles which provides employees who cannot or will not improve their performance to meet required standards should be separated. As a result, managers must give employees multiple opportunities to demonstrate their ability to perform the essential aspects of their position at an acceptable level. Such a requirement undermines the managers' willingness and ability to discipline poor performance and results in poor-performing employees remaining on the job for many months and sometimes years.

Section 4302(b)6 authorizes agencies to remove employees whose performance is unacceptable, but only after giving that employee an opportunity to improve performance. It defines unacceptable performance as failure in any single element of an employee's standards. Another section requires any such opportunity to improve must be provided within one year preceding the removal of the employee.

The combined impact of these provisions is poor performers are entitled to fail at each different element of their performance once each year without being subject to removal. If they are deficient in more than one, they have a year to see if they can improve on that, and if they prove to be deficient on another, they have another year on that. So the worse performing you are, the more time you have before anything can be done. What manager is going to spend his time going through that?

An OPM study conducted in the last administration estimated 3.7 percent of Federal civilian employees were poor performers. When applied to the total Federal workforce, that percentage works out to be 64,340 employees.

Last year, 434 individuals were removed for poor performance, so only .67 percent remained removed from service last year. In other words, of 1,000 Federal employees who did not do their job, 7 of them were let go. Let's hope that of that 1,000, they are not checking the bags or checking the cargos or checking the borders when you or I are there and our safety and our loved ones' safety is at stake. Perhaps we can afford that in some departments, but not in the Department of Homeland Security. That is all we are talking about.

The overwhelming number of good Federal employees and Federal performers see this and know who they are and know they are probably going to be making the same thing, and there is nothing that can be done about it.

What does that do to morale? What does that do to workforce morale?

In 1993, a police sergeant with the Department of the Treasury was fired for providing false statements during an investigation. This action was not finally sustained until 5 years later when it was finally decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. During the intervening 5 years, there was a hearing before the MSPB, the administrative judge, a decision by the MSPB, an appeal to the Federal court, and a discussion by the U.S. Supreme Court. This was all regarding a police sergeant who lied during the investigation.

An employee of the Civil Service Administration removed for falsification of travel voucher claims contends the action was unjustified. Under chapter 707, that employee would be entitled to seek investigation and review by the Office of Special Counsel, an average of 4 months; hearing and decision by the regional Office of the Merit System Protection Board, average 4 months; review by the headquarters of the Merit Systems Protection Board, 4 months; review by the Equal Opportunity Commission, 36 months estimated; and review at all 3 levels of the Federal court system—district court, appeals court and Supreme Court—6 months to several years.

It is not that it would be a good idea to deprive people of their administrative rights. It is just a question of how many levels and how many avenues and how many claims and how long should all this take with regard to the Department of Homeland Security.

Are we doing the best we can do? Clearly, we are not. It is showing up Governmentwide. It has to do with much more than just the rather narrow issues we have been talking about in terms of the homeland security. In June of last year, before September 11, we put out a document called Government at the Brink. This was a document I put out as chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee. It was subtitled Urgent Federal Government Management Problems Facing the Bush Administration. This was as the Bush administration was coming in. We were trying to inform the new administration of the situation they were going to be confronted with, as other presidents have been informed. We tried to summarize the problems the Federal Government was having. This was not an attempt just to bash the Federal Government. It was an attempt to try to make it work better.

We would have hearing after hearing after hearing. We would bring the GAO in. They would give us every year the high-risk list of agencies that were most subject to waste, fraud, abuse and mismanagement, overlap and duplication. The same agencies every year. No one ever got off of it. New ones kept coming on to it. We passed the RESULTS Act, which said every year: Now, you have not done very well at all. Some of you have done awful. You will have to start showing your results. We will have to start measuring your results.

We have spent years now and we are still in the middle of trying to make that work, and the reports we are getting in many cases from the RESULTS Act show they were producing the right kind of results, but they are incomprehensible themselves. So we are having trouble getting through some of the reports in order to decide whether we are getting any results.

Is Congress just laying on another requirement that will be unfulfilled? It is a very discouraging, long-term problem that has been developing for many years in our Government. It is getting worse and not better. My own view is that until we attach the appropriations process to these problem areas, we will probably never make any progress.

In other words, if these agencies keep coming up with bad performances, not only should people be held accountable, the agencies should be held accountable, and it should be reflected in their funding for the next year. How can you justify continuing to fund failure year after year after year? That would not happen in any other aspect of American society except the Government. Yet what happens if they get bad enough? Usually, we give them more money.

That is the situation. That is the backdrop. That is what we tried to summarize in this little booklet we put out.

We mentioned some of the examples that the new administration was going to have to deal with in term of Government management or mismanagement.

We mentioned the big dig, Boston Central Artery, the most expensive Federal infrastructure project in the Nation's history. Its cost continues to rise and is now estimated at $13.6 billion, an almost 525-percent increase from the original $2.6 billion in cost.

We mentioned abusing the trust of the American Indians. The Department of the Interior does not know what happened to more than $3 billion it holds in trust for American Indians. A judge overseeing this case called it fiscal and governmental irresponsibility in its purest form.

We mentioned the Department of Defense financial management. There is widespread agreement that the Department of Defense finances are a shambles. I hope they are better than when this report was written. It wastes billions of dollars each year, and it cannot account for much of what it spends.

We mentioned NASA, NASA mismanagement; the fact that it causes mission failures. In spectacular example after example, NASA lost billions because of mismanagement at some of its biggest programs. The cause of the Mars Polar Lander failure, for example, was that one team used English measurements—feet, inches, pounds—to design and program the vehicle while another used metric measurements.

We mentioned Medicare waste, fraud, and abuse. Medicare wastes almost $12 billion every year on improper payments. It misspent that $12 billion last year from the fee-for-service part of Medicare alone, which was about 7 percent of the total fee-for-service budget. The amounts wasted on improper Medicare payments would go a long way toward funding a prescription drug benefit or other program enhancement.

We mentioned security violations at the Department of Energy. The Department of Energy does not adequately safeguard America's nuclear secrets. In just one case, a party was dead for 11 months before Departmental officials noticed that he still had four secret documents signed out.

We talked about the IRS fiscal mismanagement. The IRS manages its finances worse than most Americans. The agency does not even know how much it collects in Social Security and Medicare taxes. GAO found significant delays, sometimes up to 12 years, in recording payments made by taxpayers.

We mentioned the Veterans Affairs and how they put patients' health at risk. The Department of Veterans Affairs IG found that the hospital food services shares the loading dock with the environmental management services hazardous waste containers. Dirty environmental management services and red biohazard carts were located next to the area where food is transported to the kitchen.

We mentioned the student financial aid program bilking taxpayers in that program. Federal student aid programs are rife with fraud and abuse. A cottage industry of criminals advises people on how to cheat to get Federal Government loans and grants. In one case, scam artists passed off senior citizens taking crafts classes as college students who qualified for Federal Pell grants.

Then we mentioned unemployment insurance fraud. A Las Vegas, NV, man illegally collected at least $230,000 in fraudulent unemployment insurance benefits from four different States between September of 1996 and November of 1999. He set up 13 fake companies and submitted bogus claims based on falsely reported wages for 36 nonexistent claimants using names and Social Security numbers of dead people, then collected claims by mail from California, Massachusetts, Texas, and Nevada.

These are just 10 examples of things we pointed out last year that were going on in our Government. For the most part, from the Government's standpoint, not counting the people who are out there always willing to take advantage of the Government, stealing from the Government, but for the most part this was not deliberate activity on behalf of people who work for the Government. These were just things that we let happen.

A lot of it had to do with our lack of managing these Departments, the turnover that we had, the inability to keep good people in developing these information technology programs. That is part of the IRS problem. Who wants to spend their time doing that, at that kind of pay? So we gave them flexibility. They are using it, and they are making some progress now. But this is the tip of the iceberg, and nobody pays any attention to it. We just kind of shake our heads, there is a newspaper story that comes out, and we go on and waste billions of dollars every year in the most egregious circumstances.

Again, I ask: Now we have been attacked. We have lost almost 3,000 people in one attack. We are going to bring some of these agencies together. If we just bring some of these agencies together, what have we accomplished except a bigger mess? We must do so, but we must do so with some ability to reward, punish, promote, demote, and get the right people in, raise some salaries, give some incentives, have some esprit de corps in some of these Departments, and be able to get rid of a poor performer with something less than 6 years in a case before the Supreme Court of the United States.

I mentioned earlier we have already given this kind of ability to manage to several of our Departments: The FAA, GAO, GSA, IRS, several of our agencies. Yet when it comes to the most sensitive area of all, homeland security, we are not willing to give the new Secretary that kind of flexibility and that kind of ability.

Someone might ask us: What about just giving the new Secretary for the Department of Homeland Security the kind of flexibility with regard to its employees that Members of Congress have? What about the same kind of flexibility to hire, fire, promote, set salaries that Members of Congress have?

I can assure anyone listening that Members of Congress have much more flexibility than what is being proposed for this new Department. But more on point, in keeping within the executive branch of Government, what about the flexibilities we have given these other Departments?

With regard to the IRS, there was a provision in there that basically said you must negotiate with the union, and if you do not, you must go to an impasses panel. That is what our friends, who would deny the Secretary this flexibility, suggest we should adopt for the Secretary. So one agency, and one agency alone, is all I can tell. We required them, when we gave them their flexibility—we required them to go through the administrative process that would wind up with some panel making the ultimate decision as to whether or not their actions were justified. We didn't do that with regard to the FAA, we didn't do it with regard to the GAO, we didn't do it with regard to the Transportation Security Agency. I submit that what we are about now, with 170,000 employees and 77 collective bargaining agreements and 80 different personnel management systems—that flexibility is needed more with regard to homeland security than any of these other agencies.

So we are not just comparing apples to oranges. We are comparing peanuts to elephants. We give these agencies this additional flexibility to manage with these relatively contained problems they have. But when we magnify the potential problems we know are going to come about with regard to the Department of Homeland Security, we don't want to give that to the new Secretary. I think we must if we want it to work, and if we want it to work differently, and we don't want to incorporate and adopt and inherit so many of the problems we have seen throughout Government—some of them relating to safety, some of them not—and expect we can keep doing the same old things the same old way after switching the boxes around and expect different results.

What do all these billions of dollars of waste, inefficiency, lost items, and inability to balance the books that the Government cannot do—in small part or as a whole cannot balance its own books—translate over into when you are talking about safety issues? I hope we don't have to find out.

We are suggesting the new Secretary have some of the same things these departments have—that we have already given flexibilities to have—in consultation with the Office of Personnel Management. This is a department headed by a Senate-confirmed person who is an expert in personnel rules, title V, and what the Government can and cannot do—the prohibitions I just read earlier, the principles I read earlier that we must adhere to—in consultation with that person to come up with some rules.

I should point out there is nothing in the Gramm-Miller substitute that mandates any changes. It is simply a law that allows those whose job it is and whose responsibility it is to make this a safer country to make those changes, and then come before Congress for appropriations and oversight—and all of the attention and sometimes aggravation and all of that—it will get as it justifies the changes it has made.

The House of Representatives recognized this need and necessity in passing their homeland security bill. There were basically six areas where this bill gives the new Secretary some flexibility.

There are many areas where no flexibility is sought at all. In fact, with regard to most of the personnel areas and flexibilities that are dealt with in title V, only a small percentage of them are being requested by the administration as being ones they need some flexibility in.

Let us talk about what is not being suggested that there be any flexibility in by the administration.

Chapter 21, general provisions; chapter 23, merit system principles; chapter 29, commission reports; chapter 41, authority for employment; chapter 33, examination and placement; chapter 34, part-time career employment opportunities; chapter 35, retention preference, restoration and reemployment; chapter 41, training; chapter 45, incentive awards; and chapter 47, personnel research programs and demonstration projects.

Again, I am just about halfway through here. But these are areas in which the administration says OK, we are not asking for any changes or for the ability to change anything in these areas.

Chapter 55, pay administration; chapter 57, travel, transportation and subsistence; chapter 59, allowances; chapter 61, hours of work; chapter 63, leave; chapter 72, antidiscrimination and right to petition Congress; chapter 73, suitability, security and conduct; chapter 79, services to employees; chapter 81, compensation for work injuries; chapter 83, retirement; chapter 84, Federal Employee Retirement System; chapter 85, unemployment compensation; chapter 87, life insurance; chapter 89, health insurance; chapter 90, long-term care insurance; and chapter 91, access to criminal history records for national security.

There are close to 30 areas here in title V where no flexibility is being asked for at all.

There are six areas where flexibility is being asked for: Chapter 43, performance appraisal; chapter 51, classification; chapter 53, pay rates; chapter 71, labor-management relations; chapter 75, adverse actions; and chapter 77, appeals.

With regard to those six areas, the House says OK, we will give the new Secretary some flexibility in those areas.

The Gramm-Miller amendment adopts those six areas.

The "compromise," so-called, before us—the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment—would say we will give you four of those six areas. In other words, you have to add two more to the 30 or so you don't touch—labor-management and appeals. The new Secretary can do nothing with regard to the entire area of labor-management or appeals.

Unfortunately, labor-management and appeals has to do with the framework system by which you resolve disputes. If you control that process, you control everything else. Everything else has to go through it. So this is our difficulty.

When the Breaux-Chafee-Nelson amendment says we may not give the Secretary the authority to make any changes to labor-management relations or to appeals, it is simply a step too far or a step not far enough.

The President has said without this authority, the new Secretary would come in with his hands tied behind his back; he could not do all of the momentous things that are going to have to be done in terms of organizing and consolidating all these personnel systems without some flexibility in those areas as well.

The Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment also says—we were talking about six—we will give you four. But with regard to those four, you have to enter into negotiating agreements with the union. If the union refuses to enter into a negotiated agreement with you, you have to go to the Federal Services Impasses Panel.

I don't think it is as much a fact that we think the Federal Services Impasses Panel—whatever that is—is going to come up with terrible decisions; it is, again, do we really need to go through this kind of process with these kinds of decisions which other departments have the flexibility to go ahead and handle and take action on when we are dealing with homeland security, and we are dealing with the people who are going to be in charge of homeland security?

One of these areas has to do with classifications and pay rates and systems. I would like to think we could pay people better. I would like to think we could promote people more easily. I would like to think we could retain good people.

What if a union decides we are discriminating, we are taking this group of people and we want to give them more money, and we are taking another group of people and we don't want to give them any more money, and they represent all of them? So then we go through the Federal Services Impasses Panel. I cannot stand here and tell you how long it would take to go through this Federal Services Impasses Panel, but I can assure you it would be longer than it should.

So basically 17 unions are representing about one-fourth of the workforce of these 170,000 employees. Only 20,000 of them are in a union. Forty thousand of them are represented by unions, but 20,000 of them are in a union. About 25 percent of the workforce becomes the tail that wags the dog.

That is unnecessary. That is unwise. It, again, is placing restraints on this new Department that we have not placed on other Departments with much less serious mandates than we are giving this new Department.

There was one case where the union objected to a number of issues relating to the deployment of the National Guard to help in Customs' antiterrorism responsibilities. The union even demanded to bargain over arming the National Guardsmen. And they objected to Customs employees having any responsibility for storing National Guard weapons needed to fight terrorism.

In another example, the union has challenged Customs decisions to temporarily reassign inspectors to the northern border as the current union contract allows. Despite the continued terrorist threat after 9/11, the union has insisted on a new and time-consuming process that would require Customs to canvas thousands of employees nationwide for volunteers.

I guess most of us know by now that Customs has been sued because they put out a directive, pursuant to the President's direction, with regard to the color-coded warning system we have now: red, yellow, orange, whatever. So Customs was implementing that, and the labor union sued them because they said they should have negotiated that color system before it was put out.

So these are the kinds of things about which we are talking. None of them, in and of themselves, are the end of the world, but in case after case we have become consumed with procedure and process.

We can have due process. We can keep people from getting run over. I have spent most of my professional career trying to make sure that people didn't get run over. But you can do that without tying up the Government when it is trying to protect our borders. You can do it in less than a lifetime.

The Congress cannot do it. We cannot sit here and decide the details of a massive personnel system, and especially all the different personnel systems we are having to bring together. That is an administration job. They got elected. Let them come with a system that has a chance of getting the job done and working out the detail.

We will have oversight in this body. But I submit, we do not have the ability to micromanage a system such as that—which brings us to the President's national security authority. We have had a lot of discussion about that because a lot of people do not understand why, again, when we are creating a new Department that is going to be in charge of homeland security, we would give the President less authority with regard to this new Department not only than what other Presidents have had but than what other Departments have had and will have. So we will be taking the new Department, which needs the President's firm hand the most, and be providing him with less authority than other Departments have.

I think that perhaps it would be good if we considered the history of the President's authority in this regard. As we have been talking about now for several days on the floor, the law basically is that if a primary purpose of a particular agency or subdivision has to do with certain categories of work, such as intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative or national security, then the President can set aside collective bargaining agreements because national security is at stake and we simply do not have the time to go through some of this rigmarole I have been describing on the floor with regard to this limited number of areas.

The Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment would amend that and say that, No. 1, the President has to prove this work has to do with terrorism and not the broader definition of national security or he has to determine that; and,

No. 2, the President has to also determine that the new people who are coming into the Department with regard to whom he is exercising this authority have had their jobs changed. In other words, additional requirements are being made upon the President to make additional determinations which could be challenged in court.

The President will have a presumption in his favor, for sure, with regard to the courts, but it will be a rebuttal presumption and it will be a situation where the President's representative has to decide to what extent, in a litigation situation, he wants to lay out these sensitive matters.

But any way you look at it, it is not the same authority that other Presidents have had. We are putting up additional hurdles for this President to overcome, for some reason. We are making additional requirements, additional determinations for this President to make, for some reason. We are not making it easier for him to exercise his national security authority because of September 11, we are making it more difficult.

There was an Executive order that President Kennedy signed, and it contained an exception for agencies and offices engaged in national security. But the exception did not even need to be invoked by the President. It could be invoked by a head of an agency.

Executive Order 109-88 said:

This order shall not apply to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Central Intelligence Agency, or any other agency or other office, bureau, or entity within an agency primarily performing intelligence, investigative, or security functions if the head of the agency determines that the provisions of this order cannot be applied in a manner consistent with national security requirements and considerations when he deems it necessary in the national interest. And subject to such conditions as he may prescribe, the head of any agency may suspend any provision of this order with respect to any agency, installation, or activity which is located outside the United States.

President Kennedy's Executive order was based on the recommendations of a distinguished six-member task force chaired by then-Secretary of Labor Arthur Goldberg. It was known as the Goldberg Commission. The statement from the Goldberg Commission is the best rationale for the national security exception we have found. The felt need for such an exemption seems to have been so widely acknowledged that no extended argument was even necessary. The general point has been made by many others, however.

For example, President Franklin D. Roosevelt said:

All government employees should realize that the process of collective bargaining has its distinct and insurmountable limitations when applied to public personnel management because the obligation to serve the whole people is paramount.

President Kennedy, President Roosevelt. In 1969, President Nixon repealed the Kennedy order but recodified and expanded the rules of procedure for labor-management relations in Federal service. That order also contained an exemption for agencies and offices doing national security work and allowed the head of the agency to invoke the exception. Not the President, but the head of an agency could do it.

The current statute then was signed by President Carter. He concurred with the language the House and Senate presented to him. But his own bill which he sent to Congress earlier in 1978 also contained an exemption for the work of national security.

This is a well-established need that all Presidents have seen fit to exercise; to the extent, evidently, that extended debate back then was hardly even necessary. I don't know that there has ever been extended debate on the authority the President should have with regard to setting aside collective bargaining agreements in situations pertaining to national security and these other categories until now.

Ironically, while the opponents of the Gramm-Miller substitute and the President's preferred course of action want the status quo with regard to all other aspects of this bill except the organizational part, but the status quo with regard to the managerial part, they do not want the status quo when it comes to giving the President the authorities that Presidents have traditionally received.

The President can't accept that. He has said so. I hope it is not presented to him like that because we know what the fate of this bill would be. That would not be good for the country. We all know that.

I am hopeful that in these waning days we will be able to, with regard to these two issues, which opponents of Gramm-Miller say are not very significant but which the President says are extremely significant, which you would think would cause a basis for some compromise right there, but I would hope we would be able to address this issue of some flexibility that we have given other departments that we must give the new Secretary on the one hand and, secondly, maintaining the President's traditional position with regard to his national security responsibilities having to do with collective bargaining agreements.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WYDEN). The Senator from Nevada.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators allowed to speak therein for a period of up to 10 minutes each and that this time extend until 5:15 today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Pennsylvania is here and he wishes to speak on the bill. I ask unanimous consent we return to the homeland security bill and that there would be a period for debate only, and the Senator be recognized for whatever period of time he wishes to speak, and that when the Senator from Pennsylvania finishes his statement, we go back into morning business under the previous request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, it is my hope that the Senate will complete action on the pending homeland security legislation, that we will go to conference with the House of Representatives, and that this bill will be passed, signed into law by the President, before we adjourn because, in my judgment, the most important business the Congress has is to legislate is on homeland security and to do our utmost to prevent a recurrence of 9/11.

The intelligence communities have advised that there will be another terrorist attack. It is not a matter of whether or if, but it is a matter of when. I am not prepared to accept that. I believe another terrorist attack can be prevented. I believe had all of the so-called dots been put together before September 11, 2001, that there was a good chance that terrorist attack could have been prevented.

I say that because there were very important leads which were never coalesced, analyzed, or brought together. I refer to the FBI report out of Phoenix, in July of 2000, about a man taking flight training, had a big picture of Osama bin Laden, very suspicious. That report never got to the upper echelons of the FBI. We had the CIA tracking two members of al-Qaida in Kuala Lumpur. They turned out to be hijackers, two of the pilots involved in September 11. But the CIA never told the FBI or never told INS, and they gained admittance to the country and were part of the suicide bombers.

Then there is the famous, or perhaps infamous, national security agency report on September 10 that something dire was about to happen the very next day. It wasn't translated until September 12. Further, the very important effort by the Minneapolis branch of the FBI to get a warrant under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act for Zacarias Moussaoui, who was supposed to have been the 20th member of the hijackers and suicide bombers, was never pursued properly because the FBI used the wrong standard.

We know from the 13-page single-spaced letter written by Special Agent Colleen Rowley that the U.S. Attorney's office in Minneapolis was applying the wrong standard—a 75 to 80 percent probability—and that Agent Colleen Rowley thought it was a standard of more probable than not, which would have been 51 percent. The appropriate legal standard, as defined by the Supreme Court of the United States in Gates v. Illinois, in an opinion by then Justice Rehnquist, was that probable cause is established on the totality of the circumstances based on suspicion. Had the Zacarias Moussaoui matter been integrated, there was a great deal of information available in Moussaoui's computer which was not acquired. The Intelligence Committee hearings have disclosed that in the past two weeks. All of these dots were on the screen, and even more. Had they been brought together, then there is a possibility that 9-11 may have been prevented. At least they would have been on inquiry.

I believe this was a veritable blueprint. I believe we have a very heavy duty to see that this legislation is enacted and all of the intelligence agencies are brought under one umbrella. I tried to do that in 1996 when I chaired the Senate Intelligence Committee. I wanted to bring them all under the CIA. I think it is not really critical under which umbrella, but under one umbrella. Now we have the chance to accomplish that with homeland security.

We have two provisions under the Labor-Management Act that are, so far, providing a controversy that has held the measure from going further. It is my suggestion these two provisions are not too far apart. The law, as set forth in 5 United States Code 7103 says:

The President may issue an order excluding any agency or subdivision thereof from coverage under this chapter [which is collective bargaining] if the President determines that (a) the agency or subdivision has a primary function, intelligence, counterintelligence, investigative, or national security work, and the provisions of this chapter cannot be applied to that agency or subdivision in a manner consistent with national security requirements and considerations.

That is the existing law which the President does not want changed, and there has been an effort by labor to what is called "shore up" those provisions of collective bargaining by this language in the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment:

The President could not use his authority without showing that (1) the mission and responsibilities of the agency or subdivision materially change, and (2) a majority of such employees within such agency or subdivision have as their primary duty, intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work directly related to terrorism investigation.

Now, there was a question on my mind as to whether the language of the Nelson amendment was in addition to or in substitution for the existing language on collective bargaining. We had an extensive discussion among Senator LIEBERMAN, Senator THOMPSON, Senator BREAUX, myself, and Senator NELSON was on the floor. At that time, the drafters of the amendment said it was not in substitution for, but in addition to.

Well, the main concern the President has expressed is he is concerned his authority under the provisions relating to national security would be taken away. But the drafters of the amendment tell us that is not what is intended because the language is "in addition to" and not "in place of."

If you look at the specifics of the existing language about intelligence, counterintelligence, investigation, and the language of the amendment, the duties, primary duty, intelligence, counterintelligence, or investigative work, they are not too far apart. I think we can reach an accommodation there.

The other provision that has provided the controversy is the issue of the President wanting flexibility, and the provisions of the Gramm-Miller amendment have picked up the language of the House bill, which would give the President flexibility on these six categories: Performance appraisal, classification, pay rates and systems, labor-management relations, adverse actions, and appeals. The amendment provided by Senator NELSON and Senator BREUX would give the President four of those six. It would give the President, No. 1, performance appraisal; No. 2, classification; 3, pay rates and systems; 4, adverse actions. But that would be subject to review by the Federal Services Impasses Panel, a seven-appointee panel, all of whose appointees are the President's.

It seems to me we are very close here. I voted against cloture on the Lieberman bill because we do not have in the bill, as it is presently drafted, an adequate provision as to the directorate to have all of the intelligence agencies under one umbrella, and an adequate provision giving the Secretary of Homeland Defense direction to coordinate all of those agencies, to put all those dots on one screen, to have the best likelihood of preventing another 9-11.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the amendment I have already filed and have ready to propose be printed at the conclusion of my statement today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I am opposed to cloture of the Lieberman bill until I have a chance to offer that amendment. I have also voted against cloture on the Gramm-Miller bill because, again, although I have had discussions with Senator GRAMM, as I have had discussions with Senator LIEBERMAN, we have not reached fruition. I want an opportunity to include this language about the intelligence directorate on the Gramm-Miller amendment.

While I have not taken a position, as I said on Thursday, on whether I will ultimately support the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux amendment, which is backed by labor, or whether I will support the Gramm-Miller amendment, which is the President's preference, it is my hope we can yet work out an accommodation. But I think it is much more important the Senate pass a bill and we go to conference with the House, whichever provisions are included. I grant the provisions labor wants included are important to labor, and I grant the provisions the President wants included are important to the President. But as important as all of those provisions are, they are not as important as getting a bill that can be conferred with the House, which can be signed by the President, so we can set up this Department of Homeland Security and we can have, under one umbrella, all of the intelligence agencies. It is not that the Secretary is going to tell the CIA agents around the globe where to go, or the FBI agents where to go, or the National Security Agency what to do, or the Defense Intelligence Agency, but as to the analysis, they should all come under one umbrella. That really is the critical factor. That is why I believe the conclusion of this bill on that issue is of greater importance than any other matter in the bill and of greater importance than any other matter which the Congress will consider during this session. So I am prepared to vote for cloture on the Gramm-Miller amendment should I get the chance to offer my amendment.

I do not think, as the Senator from Texas said, that he is absolutely entitled to a vote on his proposal without amendment. The rules of the Senate provide that there can be amendments to the Gramm-Miller proposal, just as there can be amendments to the Lieberman bill, just as there can be amendments to any bill. To repeat, I have not yet taken a position as to whether I will favor what labor seeks through the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux proposal or what the President seeks through the Gramm-Miller proposal, but it is of greatest importance that this provision on the Directorate of Intelligence Analysis be adopted and everything be placed under one roof.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

(Purpose: To give the Directorate of Intelligence the authority, subject to disapproval by the President, to direct the intelligence community to provide necessary intelligence-related information)

In section 132(b), add at the end the following:

(14) On behalf of the Secretary, subject to disapproval by the President, directing the agencies described under subsection (a)(1)(B) to provide intelligence information, analyses of intelligence information, and such other intelligence-related information as the Under Secretary for Intelligence determines necessary.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for 5 minutes as in morning business.

REPORT ON TRIP TO AFRICA

and I made an extensive trip to Africa. In Africa, we visited many countries and noted some very material changes. For example, the Government of the Sudan finally wants to have good relations with the United States and is willing to make significant concessions to the rebels in the south Sudan. Through the good offices of the President's emissary, former Senator Danforth, a treaty has been worked out which has great promise if implemented and if enforced.

The Muslim-Islamic military has come down from the northern part of Sudan, invaded Christian cities, killed all the men and taken the women and children and sold them into slavery, a practice which is really hard to believe in the 21st century. The peace treaty brokered by Senator Danforth has the promise of ending that. But as we talked to clerics in both Khartoum, Sudan, and in Eritrea, it will have to be enforced by the United States.

We saw in South Africa great advances since my last trip there in 1993 when there was so much contention between the blacks and the whites on apartheid. A government was formed in the 1994 elections. President Mandela has become the national hero and a great many of those problems are on their way to resolution. Great progress has been made.

We saw in Mauritius, an island off the east coast of Africa, tremendous progress being made on trade with a sweater factory yielding compensation up to $300 a week, whereas in some countries in Africa they do not earn more than $250 a year.

To reiterate, in accordance with my custom of reporting on my foreign travel, this is a brief summary of a trip with Senator RICHARD SHELBY, R-Alabama, from August 6-22 to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, South Africa, Mauritius, Tanzania, Kenya, Sudan, Ethiopia, Eritrea and Sicily, Italy. We explored the emerging trade relationship with Africa during implementation of the 2000 African Growth and Opportunity Act, AGOA, and the 2002 Trade Promotion Authority, TPA, legislation. We also looked at health issues—primarily the African HIV/AIDS crisis and poverty and famine that impact upon the U.S. foreign aid posture and the issue of "trade versus aid."

The delegation travel began on Tuesday, August 6, 2002, stopping overnight in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, en route to South Africa. Brazil's economy outweighs that of all other South American countries and will be aided in this respect by the new TPA and a $30 billion loan guarantee by the World Bank. I spoke about this with U.S. Consul General Mark Boulware. He is optimistic that the TPA will help further expand the economy of Brazil now that the Brazilian currency, the real, is no longer pegged to the U.S. dollar. Despite open anti-American protests following comments by U.S. Treasury Secretary Paul H. O'Neill suggesting widescale corruption in the Brazilian monetary system, our delegation was treated well and found the brief visit to Brazil informative.

The delegation proceeded to Cape Town, South Africa, where we were informed by U.S. Ambassador Cameron Hume that South Africa is a middle-income, developing country with an abundant supply of resources, well-developed financial, legal, communications, energy, and transport sectors, and a modern infrastructure supporting an efficient distribution of goods to major urban centers throughout the region. President Thabo Mbeki has vowed to promote economic growth and foreign investment, and to reduce poverty by relaxing restrictive labor laws, stepping up the pace of privatization, and cutting unneeded governmental spending.

However, President Mbeki has been disappointing in the battle against HIV/AIDS. Despite estimates that one in four South Africans is HIV-positive, Mbeki has refused to accept the premise that HIV causes AIDS, and did not attend this year's World HIV/AIDS Conference in New York City. Mbeki's inaction in the face of this crisis has recently been criticized by former South African President Nelson Mandela.

The United States continues to provide large sums of money and resources to confront this growing epidemic. In this year's supplemental appropriations bill, Senator RICHARD DURBIN, D-Illinois, and I proposed that $700 billion be allocated to confront AIDS in countries such as South Africa where it threatens large segments of the population. President Bush has proposed a compromised figure of $500 billion. The U.S. Centers for Disease Control, CDC, has assigned five employees to South Africa to work on the AIDS epidemic, and the National Institutes of Health has recently contributed $11 million. Ambassador Hume believes that we are essentially "force feeding" South Africa with assistance on this issue, suggesting that South Africa is still dragging its feet.

I questioned Ambassador Hume on the future of race relations in South Africa. Despite the existing divide, for the time being race relations are comparatively good, but the great conciliator Nelson Mandela is slowing down at age 84 and the technocrat Mbeki lacks his personal stature. Nonetheless, South Africa has come a long way with the assistance of the United States since the U.S. Senate voted to override President Reagan's 1986 veto of legislation forbidding certain U.S. corporate investments in South Africa's apartheid regime an important moment in the relationship between our two countries.

Our delegation also conducted discussions of a classified nature with U.S. officials in South Africa and other countries we visited.

South Africa's fledgling post-apartheid government was the topic of discussion at a dinner hosted by Ambasador Hume with parliamentarians from South Africa's National Assembly and National Council of Provinces. Progress is being made in governance and oversight. I discussed with Johnny de Lange, the Chair of the National Assembly's Judicial Committee, the extent of permissible electronic surveillance and physical search undertaken under South African law.

Our next series of meetings occurred in Durban, South Africa. There we met with Consul General Liam Humphreys and his staff to explore, among other things, post-September 11 security procedures. Durban is an important "feeder port" for U.S.-bound goods, and the crews that accompany them. As such, potentially lethal materials and individuals traveling under false credentials may enter U.S. ports if authorities in Durban are not vigilant. It is therefore imperative that individual visas—and not blanket crew visas—be issued to individuals only after cross-referencing U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation files for potentially derogatory information. It is important to continue our oversight of FBI information sharing for this purpose and to ensure the proper coordination of visa and cargo manifest procedures—particularly as proposals take shape for our new Department of Homeland Security.

Durban is geographically located in the KwaZulu Natal province of South Africa, the only province in which the ANC is not in power. At a dinner hosted by Consul General Humphreys, Senator SHELBY and I exchanged views with two leaders of the provincial majority Inkatha Freedom Party, IFP: Provincial Minister of Agriculture and Environmental Affairs and delegate to the National Council of Provinces Narend Singh, and Reverend Musa Zondi, a member of the National Assembly and the Deputy Minister of Public Works.

Minister Singh noted the tremendous progress of South Africa and the KwaZulu Natal region when compared to the rest of sub-Saharan Africa, where land reform—or more appropriately, the lack thereof—has been an unyielding challenge.

I questioned Deputy Minister Zondi about the nature of race relations in South Africa. Minister Zondi is optimistic about race relations, and noted that relations in South Africa are far better than Saudi Arabia or Egypt where radical Islamic tensions place these societies on the cusp of "a full-scale race war." Minister Zondi also noted with affection his friendship with the late Reverend Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia, a spiritual leader who promoted employment practice standards for U.S. companies doing business in South Africa. Zondi said that Reverend Sullivan did a great deal to make U.S. corporations more socially conscious. Minister Zondi visited Reverend Sullivan in Philadelphia in 1985 and believes strongly in the so-called "Sullivan Principles," the labor code promoted by Reverend Sullivan.

From Durban the delegation traveled to Mauritius to explore trade and other issues in advance of the Presidential visit for the AGOA Conference in January 2003. Since independence in 1968, Mauritius has developed from a low-income, agriculturally based economy to a middle-income diversified economy with growing industrial, financial, and tourist sectors. Mauritius has the highest median income in sub-Saharan Africa and an unusually high literacy rate. Investment in the banking sector alone has reached over $1 billion. Employment in Mauritius is at or above 95 percent, according to our dinner guest Raouf Bundhun, the Vice President of Mauritius.

I asked the U.S. Ambassador to Mauritius, the Seychelles, and the Comoros, John Price, about the need for expanded commercial opportunities and enhanced security in the Indian Ocean region. I heard concern about the recent developments of official Seychelles passports reportedly being sold for $65,000 to those who wish to move freely in the Indian Ocean region. I also heard concern about aggressive recruitment in the Comoros by Islamic fundamentalists of young, impressionable individuals for schooling in radical theology and military training under the guise of Islamic education.

I also inquired about how the new TPA law and AGOA will help Mauritius further progress economically. Ambassador Price informed us that the new TPA will help entrepreneurs such as Sunil Hassamal, who showed us the sweater factory that he has built from the ground up and who now employs 2500 workers. On the labor front, we were assured by Ambassador Price that despite some recent unfavorable press coverage of the treatment of Chinese laborers at one problem factory, in Mauritius no child labor is being employed, that overtime is being paid, that working conditions are tolerable, and that a viable minimum wage is being paid along with appropriate benefits, and that a 60-hour work week is respected—as required by AGOA.

We met with Mauritian Prime Minister Sir Anerood Jugnauth and Deputy Prime Minister Paul Berenger to explore trade and security issues. Prime Minister Jugnauth is nearing the end of his term as Prime Minister, and will next year pass the reins to Deputy Prime Minister Berenger and assume the ceremonial role of President of Mauritius.

I questioned Prime Minister Jugnauth and Deputy Prime Minister Berenger about what the U.S. should do if Saddam Hussein does not respond to demands for inspections. Prime Minister Jugnauth responded that the U.S. should not attack Iraq without clear provocation, for this act would "lose the respect of the world." Jugnauth said that the U.S. must be careful that it is the U.S., and not Saddam, who will be perceived as "sympathetic." Berenger said that we should await a resolution to the Israeli-Palestinian crisis before addressing Iraq.

I asked Minister Berenger about U.S. security interests in the region. He seemed to qualify what we understood to be the official Mauritian position on the Chagossian island of Diego Garcia by stating that, in return for full sovereignty over all the other Chagossian islands, Mauritius would be willing to defer the issue of Diego Garcia—"agreeing to disagree" over its final status while seeking to build U.S. confidence in the prospect of eventual Mauritian succession.

On the situation in the Mid-East, Berenger favored a new arrangement within the Palestinian Authority, PA—involving the establishment of a purely symbolic President of the PA such as Yasser Arafat but with all real power going to a new PA Prime Minister.

Our delegation next traveled to Tanzania, beginning our oversight of regional and broader security and trade issues in the lesser-developed countries of sub-Saharan Africa. At a luncheon meeting with U.S. Ambassador Robert Royall and the Tanzania country team, we learned that Tanzania is one of the poorest countries in the world, with $250 per capita annual income. The economy is heavily dependent upon agriculture, which provides 85 percent of exports, and employs 80 percent of the workforce. The World Bank, the International Monetary Fund, and bilateral donors have reportedly been awaiting meaningful Tanzanian land reform prior to investing more heavily in the country. Under the government's socialist land policy, true private ownership is unlawful and investors can acquire merely leaseholds forfeitable at the government's discretion.

I was disappointed to hear that Tanzania is not yet fully prepared to export commodities to the U.S. without further local economic reform and development. Tanzania has the potential to follow the example of Mauritius, a country with an 85 percent literacy rate, 95 percent employment, and an entrepreneurial spirit. I suggested that a Tanzanian delegation visit Mauritius and learn from its example. I also noted that with the passage of TPA, Congress expects real movement in the direction of "trade rather than aid" and I suggested to Ambassador Royall that he should provide President Bush with a list of achievable goals for Tanzania.

We also discussed the AIDS epidemic. A team of researchers from the Centers for Disease Control, CDC, in Atlanta, Georgia, recently completed test kit evaluation in Tanzania, and has acquired data on which AIDS tests are the best performers in statistical pools. New CDC offices are also being constructed in Dar es Salaam, to assist with the disbursement of $7 million in U.S. aid, including $2 million dedicated to blood safety.

We also explored the economic and political issues surrounding the tourism industry and the problems with refugees flowing into Tanzania from war-torn countries on its long western border. Tanzania currently has approximately 550,000 recent refugees—80 percent Burundian and 20 percent Congolese and Rwandan—and 400,000 "old caseload" refugees from relocations in the 1970s.

Ambassador Royall is working to help return these refugees as soon as possible in a fair manner. Ambassador Royall is also working closely with USAID, the U.S. Department of the Interior, and local U.S. non-governmental organizations to assure that the system of national parks that supports Tanzania's tourism industry, accounting for approximately 60 percent of GDP, can be sustained and expanded in conjunction with private sector support. Organizations with which we met, such as the African Wildlife Foundation, work closely with the Tanzanian national park system and the U.S. government. For example, USAID is providing assistance to the Tanzanian Park Service in maintaining roads and natural habitats in two national parks to protect this segment of the Tanzanian economy.

The delegation also visited the United Nations' International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, ICTR, which is hosted by Tanzania and located in Arusha. At the ICTR, we were briefed by Lovemore Munlo, the Deputy Registrar, and Kingsley Moghalu, who serves as Special Assistant to the Registrar. Our visit to the ICTR coincided with the arrest by Angolan authorities of Augustin Bizimungu, Rwanda's former armed forces chief who had been indicted by the ICTR for a major role in the 1994 Rwanda genocide. His arrest came less than a month after the U.S. offered up to $5 million under the Justice Department's "Rewards for Justice" program for tips leading to the arrest of eight Rwandan genocide suspects, including Bizimungu. Currently, 21 individuals suspected of genocide or complicity therein are on trial in the ICTR in eight separate trials. Former Prime Minister Jean Kambanda of Rwanda confessed in 2000 to war crimes and was convicted by the ICTR. He was subsequently sentenced to life imprisonment. Currently, two-thirds of the top leadership of the Kambanda government are on trial for genocide and related war crimes. For lower-ranking participants in the genocide, Rwandan courts have prosecuted over 6,000 individuals—many of whom face the death penalty, which is not available at the ICTR.

Later, I questioned U.S. Ambassador to Kenya Johnnie Carson as to whether the U.S. was late in responding to the 1994 Rwandan genocide. While conceding that we were not swift, he assured me that we acted as quickly as we could and that the genocide would have continued—and would have been much worse—if we had not acted when we did. He suggested that the French were in a much better position to intervene to prevent the genocide.

The ICTR is expected to remain in existence until 2008 or 2009, by which point the last of the appeals should have run their course. We were able to observe the proceedings of the trial of Eliezer Niyitegeka, former Minister of Information in the interim government of Rwanda in 1994.

From Tanzania, the delegation proceeded to Nairobi, Kenya for additional trade and security meetings. Ambassador Carson led a country team briefing focused upon political stability after nearly a quarter century of rule by current President Daniel Moi, security arrangements for the war on terrorism, HIV/AIDS, and related matters. Carson's team noted that Presidents Clinton and Bush and Secretaries of State Albright and Powell have all been privately assured by Moi at various points that he will step down after his term ends and that free elections will be called, likely in the period December 1, 2002 through March 31, 2003. Moi is now backing as his successor Uhuru Kenyatta, the 41 year-old son of Kenya's independence leader, Jomo Kenyatta, and a leader in the majority Kenya African National Union, KANU, party. If he can hold the traditional KANU coalitions together, Kenyatta is favored to succeed Moi.

Kenya is a strong security partner of the United States. For example, the United States is the only country with which Kenya has entered a "Military Access Agreement," "MAA" allowing for U.S. military assets to be deployed there. Kenya appears well positioned to facilitate regional and other international security issues such as our global war against international terrorism.

I also asked whether we are doing enough to combat the AIDS epidemic in Kenya. According to Carson, the hard data shows that the rate of infection among adults appears to be decreasing in Kenya. The CDC is engaged in programs in West Kenya to find new vaccines, to provide education and awareness programs, and to support 40 counseling/testing centers. USAID is also active in AIDS education, prevention, and behavior change. The Peace Corps also plays a role in Kenyan public health projects relating to HIV/AIDS.

We next met with Kenya's Foreign Minister Marsden Madoka. Minister Madoka said that Kenya's cabinet had yet to discuss the Kenyan reaction if the U.S. were to move against Saddam Hussein for regime change. While noting that the cabinet would naturally have the final say, he did say, importantly, that "chances are that Kenya would support the U.S. under these circumstances." On the issue of HIV/AIDS, I asked Minister Madoka how serious the problem is and what the United States can do to help. Minister Madoka said that Kenya has lowered the prevalence rate from 14 percent to 13 percent nationwide. There is, however, a long way to go in addressing this crisis and its collateral effects.

We then traveled to Sudan. Sudan has been ravaged by civil war since 1956 with intermittent breaks. The Sudan country team, led by Charge de Affairs Jeffrey Millington, contrasted the Bush policy of engaging Sudan in light of recent reform efforts contrasted with the Clinton Administration's approach to maintain sanctions because of human rights violations and religious suppression. With the Bush engagement policy, peace talks between the government of Sudanese President Omar el-Bashier and Sudanese Peoples Liberation Movement, SPLM, leader John Garange are moving forward in talks in Machakos, Kenya. Sudan is not only attempting to remedy its own civil strife with the Machakos negotiations, but its leadership is at least speaking in terms of engaging the United States in its views toward democracy, human rights, religious freedom, and suppressing international terrorism.

On the domestic side, the government of President Bashier is conducting ongoing peace talks with the SPLM, which controls much of the southern regions of the Sudan. Former Senator John Danforth, with whom we met in Nairobi on August 18 after returning from Khartoum, accepted his role as Special Envoy to negotiate this conflict on September 6, 2001, and first visited the region on November 6, 2001. Senator Danforth is working with a small team made up of veteran diplomats including Michael Miller from the National Security Council East Africa staff, Charge Millington and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Charles Snyder.

Senator Danforth has been successful to date. On July 20, 2002, breakthrough agreements were reached leading to the "famous handshake" between Sudanese President Omar el Bashier and SPLM leader John Garange on July 27, 2002 in Kampala. The July 20 Machakos round produced an agreement in principle not to apply Sharia (Islamic law) in the post-reconciliation South, and would provide the people of the South the right to self-determination after 6½ years (including a referendum on secession). Still to be determined in further Machakos rounds will be the precise form of government in the South for the 6½ year trial period such as judiciary, infrastructure, security, and the ultimate status of the SPLM, including whether John Garange can keep a standing army. Senator Danforth, in preparation for upcoming rounds, has skillfully tested the two sides' willingness to come together on four vital humanitarian issues: (1) continuation of a ceasefire in the Nuba Mountain region between North and South, where Evangelicals working with Christian populations have been the target of religious persecution; (2) a polio vaccination program; (3) prevention of attacks against civilians; and (4) prevention of "raiders," who with the encouragement of the government in Khartoum, have killed male populations and enslaved their women and children. Satisfaction of the four Danforth preconditions would lay the groundwork for final agreements in Machakos on a more permanent peace in the Sudan.

A key aspect of our trip involved gathering information on religious persecution. Persecution of religious minorities, focused particularly on Christians in Muslim countries such as Sudan, led in 1998 to the passage of the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998, "IRFA", which I introduced with Representative FRANK Wolf. The IRFA established the Office of International Religious Freedom and the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom with the mission of reviewing and making policy recommendations on religious freedom.

We met with Reverend Ezekiel Kondo, the Provincial Secretary of the Province of the Episcopal Church of the Sudan. Reverend Kondo raised the following issues: (1) the persecution of those who convert from Islam to Christianity, which is apparently continuing and is not covered by Machakos; (2) the withholding of permits to build new churches and to license existing churches, which remains a problem with non-Muslim clerics; (3) the refusal to grant visas for religious leaders to leave the country for professional conferences and for religious leaders from abroad to visit Sudan; and (4) the need for more precise coverage of the Nuba Mountain region dispute within the context of the Machakos agreements. Reverend Kondo is skeptical that Muslim attempts to reach out to non-Muslims will work if the basic rights for non-Muslims are not committed to in writing, implemented, monitored and enforced.

When I referenced this religious persecution with President Bashier's Peace Advisor, Dr. Ghazi Sulahaddin, and his Foreign Minister, Mustafa Ismail, I was told that the current Sudanese government should be given a chance to show the international community that the acts underlying the persecution have occurred during many years of civil war, and a process toward reconciliation only began in 1997. Both men assured us that Sudan is on the path to religious freedom and respect for human rights in general. President Bashier pledged that it is "the obligation of Muslims to provide religious freedom," and that he has made this issue a priority and has commanded local officials to "study this issue closely."

Dr. Sulahaddin, and Foreign Minister Ismail highlighted for us their views on U.S.-Sudan relations. Sulahaddin said there is a "huge" potential for normalization and improvement of relations between our countries and Sudan does not engage in terrorism because the taking of innocent life is contrary to Islamic beliefs. He argued that the U.S. had no basis for concluding that the Sudanese plant that was targeted for missile strikes by the U.S. in 1998 actually produced nerve gas. He emphasized the positive aspects of the new inter-action between U.S. and Sudanese intelligence agencies, and the resulting shift toward more engagement and intensification of dialogue with the Bush administration.

Foreign Minister Ismail stressed that the international community, particularly the United States, should be patient with Sudan since the real beginning of movement toward democracy, human rights, religious freedom and other elements of a free society only began in 1997-1998 with the drafting of the new Sudanese Constitution. This in combination with the debilitating effects of the North-South war has caused "growing pains," according to Minister Ismail. Minister Ismail handed to Senator SHELBY a report that provides details that Sudan has done everything that it can to fight terrorism.

President Bashier stated his appreciation for the existing cooperation between the U.S. and Sudan, including the special role of our country and Senator Danforth in brokering the Machakos talks. In stressing the need for the ultimate unification of Sudan following the 6½ year trial period envisioned by Machakos, President Bashier drew an analogy between the Sudanese civil war and the U.S. Civil War. Bashier said that if the U.S. had not remained unified the Union could have ended up "more like Canada or Mexico."

On regime change in Iraq, Dr. Sulahaddin said, any attack on Iraq would fragment the Arab world, and urged the U.S. to seek a unified stance in the United Nations among various Arab countries. President Bashier said that he hopes that the U.S. will seek alternatives to military action because the Iraqi people have suffered enough.

Our delegation next moved to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, to further explore trade, security and health issues. We met with the U.S. country team led by Charges de Affairs Thomas Hull. Hull briefed us about the state of Ethiopia in the wake of its two-year border war with Eritrea. The U.S. intelligence relationship with Ethiopia has grown even stronger after September 11. The Ethiopians believe that the war on terrorism serves their own domestic security interests, as Ethiopia must also contend with radical Islam as a constant threat. Other issues that were discussed included potential U.S. basing in Eritrea in preparation to act militarily against Saddam Hussein and the impact such basing might have on Ethiopian security concerns vis-à-vis Eritrea. Ethiopia is also concerned about cross border terrorist incursions into its country from Somalia.

We then met with Ethiopia's Prime Minister Meles Zanawi, who was quite articulate and spoke in depth about many subjects. He said that Ethiopia is a close ally in the war against terrorism, but for Ethiopian reasons. The reasons to which he refers is the constant threat of radical Islam to Ethiopia and its African neighbors. He referred to the war on terrorism as something of a godsend for Ethiopia, because it has focused the world on the practices of radical Islam. Ethiopia, according to the Prime Minister, is at the epicenter of terrorism and a secular island in the sea of Islam.

We questioned Prime Minister Meles about the U.S. policy of regime change in Iraq. He responded that Saddam should be removed in order to force countries like Saudi Arabia with large Islamic populations to choose whether to allow radical Islam to take hold or to fight against that very radicalism. He calls this a fight for their very survival.

Regarding trade, Ethiopia stands to gain by the combination of the AGOA and the TPA, and Meles appreciates the role of the United States in engaging sub-Saharan Africa on trade. He said Ethiopia wants access to the U.S.'s trillion-dollar economy.

We also sought the Prime Minister's views on the Sudanese peace process and its effect upon Ethiopia. According to Meles, the Sudanese Muslim government has already taken anti-Islamic actions by agreeing in principle to non-application of Sharia in the South. This, according to Meles, will make it easier to achieve breakthroughs on other issues. The Prime Minister also sees the exploitation of oil and gas reserves in a stable Sudan, and the willingness of the United States to engage the peace process, as positive incentives for the Sudanese to move the peace process forward.

With regard to Somalia, Prime Minister Meles compared Somalia to Afghanistan and Yemen as a potential haven for terrorists. When I asked what the U.S. should do to address the situation, Meles noted that the United States must devote nonmilitary resources rather than attempting to broker a Machakos-type agreement. Somalia is not ready for a negotiated agreement because there are too many actors on that stage.

We also discussed the HIV/AIDS crisis and human suffering in Ethiopia. The Prime Minister linked solutions to both crises to United States assistance in bolstering Ethiopian infrastructure and institutions, providing access to U.S. markets through expansion of trade, and removal of Ethiopia from the cycle of reliance on foreign aid.

U.S. appropriations for HIV/AIDS projects in Ethiopia have increased from $4 million to $18 million in the past two years. At this time, both USAID and the CDC are active in Ethiopia. USAID focuses both on famine relief, drought issues and along with the CDC, HIV/AIDS prevention and education efforts. CDC has also opened HIV/AIDS diagnostic clinics in Addis Ababa. While the HIV/AIDS rate is 13 percent, consistent with Kenya prevalence percentages, actual numbers of those with HIV/AIDS is higher in Ethiopia as the population is higher.

From Ethiopia we moved to neighboring Eritrea. Ethiopia's annexation of Eritrea as a province in 1962 started a 30-year struggle for independence that ended in 1991 with Eritrean rebels defeating governmental forces. A two and a half year border war with Ethiopia that erupted in 1998 ended under UN auspices on December 12, 2000. Final lines of demarcation are being arbitrated.

According to U.S. Ambassador to Eritrea Donald McConnell, the relationship between the United States and Eritrea is sweet and sour. Ambassador McConnell gives Eritrea an "A+" grade in joining with the United States in the war against terrorism. Eritrea may soon be assisting the United States to change the regime in Iraq by allowing our troops to use bases in Eritrea. Eritrean President Isaias Afwerki said in our meeting with him that there must be a change altogether in the Iraqi regime if Iraqi behavior is to change.

In terms of promoting stability in the region, Ambassador McConnell told us that Eritrea might face greater challenges from radical fundamentalism. President Isaias is skeptical of Sudanese intentions and believes that the Bashier government will continue to quietly encourage radical fundamentalists to further destabilize the region. President Isaias said that the Sudanese leadership is committed to radical Islam and are worse than bin Laden, and that they preach hatred under the guise of Islam. He believes that the United States must remain constructively engaged in the region to prevent radical Islamic views from overtaking neighboring countries or threatening their security.

While in Eritrea, we continued to hear of religious persecution in Sudan and the importance of the United States in stopping it. In separate discussions with Abune Philipos Woldetensae, the Patriarch of the Eritrean Orthodox Church, and Abba Menghisteab Tesfamariam, the Bishop of the Catholic Church of Eritrea, we were told that the Sudanese are oppressing Christians in southern Sudan. Abune Philipos went so far as to say, Christian believers in Sudan will not exist if the U.S. Government does not bring pressure to resolve their persecution by Islam. Bishop Menghisteab recounted how five of his fellow Catholic Bishops from Sudan have told him as recently as July 28, 2002 of Christian women and children being sold into slavery.

The Sudanese Bishops also told him that President Bashier is attempting to Islamize the entire country by using Sharia law to suppress Christians. According to both clerics, some new Eritrean churches may be facing problems obtaining permits to worship. These two men stay in close contact with the head of the Eritrean Muslim community, as well as leading Protestants, which make up the traditional four churches in Eritrea. The new churches not belonging to this traditional group of four have been told in recent weeks that they must register with the government and provide information on their activities and source of funding, according to Ambassador McConnell.

We discussed other human rights issues such as the detention without charge of two Eritrean employees of the U.S. embassy due to national security concerns. There is just so much the U.S. can do as it relates to the internal affairs of a country like Eritrea, and we remain hopeful of an acceptable resolution of the detention of the two employees.

The United States can help Eritrea by remaining engaged in the region. Among other things, we can assist Eritrea in becoming an exporter of valuable products by focusing foreign aid on building their infrastructure. Then Eritrea can take advantage of AGOA and TPA and become a viable U.S. trade partner and thus expand our bilateral relationship.

Our codel then traveled to Sicily for refueling the night before returning to the United States.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that copies of op-ed pieces which I have written for the Morning Call and the Harrisburg Patriot and the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette also be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From The Morning Call, Sept. 16, 2002]

PROSPERITY AND PEACE IN AFRICA WILL HELP FIGHT AIDS

(By Arlen Specter)

PHILADELPHIA—"I want access to America's trillion-dollar economy," Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zanawi told Sen. Richard Shelby, a Republican from Alabama, and me in our mid-August fact-finding travels through Africa. If the developing nations of Africa can stop the spread of HIV and AIDS and end their bloody wars, the continent stands at the brink of real economic development with expanded foreign aid and new U.S. trade laws, which will open our markets.

Wherever we went—South Africa, Tanzania, Sudan, Ethiopia, Mauritius, and Eritrea—we heard of the debilitating effects of the AIDS epidemic. In many African countries, the U.S. National Institutes of Health and Center for Disease Control are providing funding and personnel to combat AIDS. President Bush recently announced a new $5 billion aid package to Africa to spur economic development and AIDS control. This year's World HIV/AIDS Conference in New York City is promoting education, testing, and treatment. Follow-up action by African governments and increased foreign aid offer some promise, but winning the war against AIDS will be very difficult.

Prospects for ending civil wars are brighter. On July 20, a breakthrough agreement was reached between the Sudan government and the Sudanese Peoples Liberation Movement (SPLM) largely due to the mediation efforts of former Sen. John Danforth. Sudan's President Omar el-Bashier told us of his keen interest to improve relations with the U.S. and to have his country taken off the terrorist list. This has led Sudan to offer unlimited, surprise visits by U.S. intelligence agents to its weapons factories and laboratories to assure it is not developing weapons of mass destruction, and Sudan has also agreed to grant religious freedom to Christians who have been persecuted and sold into slavery for decades by their Islamic oppressors. Much more needs to be done to, but our former colleague, Sen. Danforth, gave us a detailed report on the reasons for his optimism.

In Addis Ababa and Asmara, we heard assurances from Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zenawi and Eritrean President Isaias Afwerki that the war over their boundary dispute had been resolved. Both men, along with other regional leaders, were focusing on the conference for "Samalia Reconciliation" held in Kenya last week, sponsored by IGAD, the Intergovernmental Authority for Development. Anarchy in Somalia, with numerous war lords, causes regional instability and breeding grounds for al Qaeda.

In our visit to the Rwanda War Crimes Tribunal in Arusha, Tanzania, we observed a trial on charges of genocide. That Tribunal established an historic precedent in 2000 by convicting a head of state, former Prime Minister Jean Kambanda of Rwanda.

Perhaps the Rwanda criminal proceedings have even been a factor in ending the wars in Angola and Sierra Leone in the last few years. Peace negotiations are also now promising in Burundi and Congo. An optimistic note was sounded by Charles B. Snyder, deputy assistant secretary of state for Africa: "I like to think peace is contagious."

If answers can be found to war and AIDS, the isle of Mauritius, located 1,200 miles off the east coast of South Africa, is a prototype for economic prosperity. Mark Twain once said upon visiting the island that "One gets the impression that God made Mauritius first, and then modeled Heaven after it." We visited a sweater factory that was started by a Mauritian in 1985 and now employs, 2,500 people using the most modern equipment. Some of the piece workers there earn $300 a week, a stark contrast from the $250 annual earnings in Tanzania. Our Ambassador John Price and the factory owner, Sunil Hassamal, expect those earnings to increase as a result of the U.S. African Growth and Opportunity Act passed in 2000 and the newly enacted legislation on Trade Promotion Authority.

Perhaps the most remarkable development since my last trip to South Africa in 1993 is what has happened to that country. With the election victory of the African National Congress in 1994, apartheid has given way to a stable government where blacks and whites work together and Nelson Mandela is everybody's hero.

CHRISTIANS FACE MANY OBSTACLES IN SUDAN

(By Sen. Arlen Specter)

A peace agreement between the government of Sudan and the Sudanese Peoples Liberation Movement offers the prospect of ending slavery and the persecution of Christians in Sudan.

The civil war, which has raged since 1956 with only intermittent lapses, has seen governmental Muslim forces attack Christians in the south, kill the men and kidnap the women and children who are then sold into slavery.

In September 2001, President Bush appointed former Sen. John Danforth as his Special Envoy to broker a peace agreement between the warring factions. After intense negotiations, a break-through agreement was reached on July 20 leading to the "famous handshake" one week later between Sudanese President Omar el Bashier and SPLM leader John Garange.

Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., and I traveled to Sudan in mid-August to discuss these issues with the parties with special emphasis on what was happening on religious persecution.

I tried to visit Sudan, but could not do so because of dangers from the civil war. Instead, I visited neighboring Eritrea where I met with Sudanese Christians in exile and I then traveled to Addis Ababa where I discussed religious persecution with Patriarch Abuna Paulos of the Ethiopian Orthodox Church.

These meetings plus fact finding in Egypt and Saudi Arabia in 1998 provided part of the bases for legislation that Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., and I introduced that later became the International Religious Freedom Act of 1998.

In Khartoum last month, Rev. Ezekiel Kondo, the Provincial Secretary of the Episcopal Church of Sudan, advised that persecution of Christians by the government of Sudan was continuing, but there was hope that a peace agreement would produce real change. Rev. Kondo said Christians weren't able to build churches, were denied visas to attend out-of-country conferences and Islam converts to Christianity faced death.

When we traveled to Asmara, Bishop Abba Menghisteab Tesfarmariam of the Eritrean Catholic Church told us about complaints of five Sudanese Catholic Bishops at a conference in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania in July, that Catholics were persecuted and sold into slavery by their Islam oppressors.

In Asmara, we also met with 97-year old Patriarch Abune Philipos Woldetensae of the Orthodox Church who emphasized that Christians will not be permitted to practice their religion even with guarantees in the peace agreement unless the U.S. makes it happen.

In our meetings with Sudan's top officials, Sen. Shelby and I stressed the importance of carrying out the guarantees for freedom of religion. President Omar el-Bashier, foreign Minister Mustafa Ismail and Peace Advisor Ghazi Sulahaddin all pledged to do so. When we discussed the issue with Eritrean President Isaias Afwerki, he scoffed at the prospects for Sudan to honor the commitment on religious freedom because Islam fundamentalists are fanatic about spreading their religious beliefs as part of gaining control of people and countries.

From meeting many people in the region and especially Sen. Danforth, it is my judgment that Sudan very much wants to gain favor from the U.S., which is the principal reason for a peace agreement with the SPLM.

Repeatedly, the Sudanese officials asked about being taken off the terrorist list.

Sudan's government has made other significant concessions such as giving U.S. intelligence agents unlimited access to weapons factories and laboratories for surprise "visits" to check for production of weapons of mass destruction.

The "Strategic Paper on Just Peace in the Framework of Comprehensive Political Settlement in Sudan" specifies "Religious belief and cultural identity are natural aspirations at the individual and group level, but cannot be imposed on others by any single party."

A final written agreement must spell out religious rights and deal with many specific pending issues.

Whatever the words, only the deeds matter.

Ultimately, U.S. pressure will be indispensable.

The International Religious Freedom Act of 1998 provides the mechanism to monitor and, where necessary, impose U.S. sanctions to guarantee religious freedom in Sudan and elsewhere.

TRY THE SUDAN MODEL FOR INSPECTIONS IN IRAQ

(By Arlen Specter)

WASHINGTON.—On a trip to Sudan in August, Sen. Richard Shelby and I learned about "visits" to Sudan's weapons factories and laboratories by U.S. intelligence agents that could provide a model for U.N. inspections in Iraq.

Sudan's president, Omar el-Bashir, told us his country was very eager to improve relations with the United States with a view to ultimately getting off the terrorist list. In addition to promising to stop persecuting Christians, Sudan is allowing U.S. agents unlimited, unannounced visits to any location—to break locks, inspect and photograph. Our agents told us they are confident that Sudan is not developing weapons of mass destruction at any of these installations.

Obviously, the situations between Iraq and Sudan are very different, so many questions would have to be answered. The first question is whether Saddam Hussein will ever honor his commitment to the United Nations to permit such inspections.

Last April, Secretary General Kofi Annan told me of his frustrations in dealing with Saddam's "cat and mouse" game. First, Saddam stalls, then his people say yes with qualifications, then another Iraqi official says no and meanwhile Saddam is free to do what he pleases. Since the United States downplays such inspections, there isn't much push to get them done. While it is true that no inspection regime can guard against factories or laboratories we don't know about, visits on the Sudan model would go a long way.

Then there is the doubt about whether the Bush administration really wants inspections. Inspections might delay a planned attack. In any event, Bush's team doubts their value. The President addressed the United Nations yesterday and stated that the U.N. Security Council resolutions must be adhered to by Iraq. Inspections are an integral part of those resolutions, and could be patterned after the inspections currently being used in Sudan. A very high-level expert in the U.S. intelligence community told me unrestricted, surprise inspections could provide adequate information on what Iraq is doing on WMD at those locations.

As President Bush has escalated the rhetoric for regime change, even his customary Republican allies have joined the international chorus in raising questions and insisting that he receive congressional authority to go to war against Iraq. Former National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, Republican Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana, Jack Kemp and even columnist Robert Novak represent a strong conservative base in urging caution, restraint and even no action.

Former Secretary of State James Baker has proposed a U.N. resolution calling for the use of force to compel Saddam to honor his 1991 commitments to permit inspections. That could provide the basis for an international military coalition if the Security Council agrees and Iraq continues to resist. If the United Nations does not adopt the Baker idea, it gives the United States a strong reason to unilaterally enforce Iraq's inspection commitments if the United Nations won't.

In order to make the case for military action, President Bush will have to deal with other tough issues: the cost in casualties, who will replace Saddam and what will be the repercussions in the region and beyond. But if Saddam continues to turn away inspectors, this will raise the common-sense conclusion that he has something to hide, like weapons of mass destruction. And as the risk looms large that Saddam is continuing to develop such weapons, those issues will be subordinated to avoiding another Sept. 11 or worse.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank the Chair and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for 30 minutes.

HONORING CONGRESSWOMAN PATSY T. MINK

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I rise to offer a few words in tribute to a distinguished colleague and dear friend, Congresswoman PATSY TAKEMOTO MINK, who passed away Saturday afternoon in Honolulu, HI. I am deeply saddened by the passing of my friend and colleague, PATSY MINK, and I join our Congressional delegation, and the people of Hawaii and the Nation in extending heartfelt sympathy to John and Wendy Mink, her husband and daughter, Eugene Takemoto, her brother, and all of PATSY's extended family and her loyal staff in Washington and Hawaii.

I feel a tremendous sense of loss at the untimely death of Congresswoman PATSY TAKEMOTO MINK. Her passing leaves a void in the House of Representatives, the Hawaii congressional delegation, and the political life of our Nation. It is difficult to put her spirit into words, but those that come immediately to mind as fitting characterizations of the woman we honor today include courageous, forthright, tenacious, gutsy, outspoken, bold, meticulous, and determined. She was my friend, a dedicated public servant for Hawaii, a strong pillar in our state's delegation, and an advocate for those in America who feel scared, small, alone, mistreated, neglected or forgotten.

PATSY was a petite woman with a powerful voice and a peerless reputation as a champion for equal opportunity, civil rights, and education. She was a courageous and tenacious leader whose lifetime of public service made Hawaii a better place. Her leadership in health, education, child welfare, and social services will endure and continue to benefit Hawaii's people and all Americans.

In the course of her life, PATSY was a pioneer, a trailblazer for women, workers, minorities, the poor, and the powerless. In the history of Hawaii and our Nation in the 20th century, PATSY MINK is one of the giants whose vision of hope and passion for justice led Hawaii to statehood and whose efforts broke down barriers and opened doors to opportunity for everyone, regardless of race, gender, or religion. Her passing silences a dynamic voice, but her many accomplishments, her unimpeachable integrity, and passion for justice stand as an incredible legacy to a magnificent woman.

I commend to my colleagues and all those interested in PATSY's remarkable life, a biography by Esther Arinaga and Rene Ojiri included in a book titled Called from Within: Early Women Lawyers of Hawaii, edited by Mari Matsuda. I wish to recap some of her brilliant life and career for the RECORD.

Born on December 6, 1927, in Paia, Maui, PATSY was independent and ambitious from the start. As an illustration, one family story recalls that she insisted at age four on beginning school a year early. She was driven throughout her young life, and was elected student body president at Maui High School. She graduated as valedictorian in 1944, a year marked by global strife and war.

PATSY's childhood curiosity about medicine led her to study zoology and chemistry at the University of Hawaii. After graduating in 1948, she applied to medical school, only to be rejected along with other bright young women aspiring to be doctors, in a time when women made up only 2 to 3 percent of an entering class. Another factor daunting her efforts was the return of our war veterans and a resulting boom in applications for graduate and post-graduate programs. Although discouraged, PATSY took wise counsel from a mentor and applied to law schools. She gained admission to the University of Chicago. It was during her years of law studies that she would meet and marry John Mink, a respected hydrologist and geologist, her loyal campaign advisor, and her lifelong companion. It was in Chicago that they would have their daughter, Wendy, a professor at Smith College.

Returning to Hawaii, PATSY gained admission to the Hawaii bar in 1953, but only after a successful challenge of a statute that required a woman to take the residency status of her husband, who was a native Pennsylvanian. Such an action represented only one of several challenges to sexism that she would undertake during her professional career. In being admitted to the bar, she also logged one of many firsts by becoming the first Japanese American woman to do so in Hawaii.

In the 1950s, PATSY began to take a serious interest in politics and make her mark on the Democratic Party by helping to build the party and draw many young people into its ranks. PATSY's first step into public elected office in the territorial legislature in 1956 awoke for Hawaii and the world a powerful voice that would only gain strength in its impact and not be silenced until the new millennium. From that moment forward, PATSY's professional and political record would run as if by perpetual motion.

The momentous year of 1959 brought Statehood for Hawaii, and by then, PATSY had easily won election to the territorial Senate. Leading up to Statehood, while the legislature worked on landmark issues that would lend shape to Hawaii's new society, PATSY authored an "equal pay for equal work" law and scrutinized the Department of Education toward improving education for Hawaii's children—a cause close to my heart, as one who previously served as a teacher and principal in Hawaii's schools.

In 1965, PATSY brought her views to the national stage when she became the first woman of color elected to the United States House of Representatives to represent Hawaii's 2nd Congressional District—a seat I was proud to hold for almost 14 years, before I entered the Senate. PATSY was articulate about the causes she tenaciously shepherded. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt's fireside chats, heard years ago on Maui by a young PATSY, had provided her with a foundation of ideals and rhetoric from which she would draw upon for many years in her political career.

During her first tenure in Congress, PATSY served her various constituencies, both in Hawaii and around this Nation, with a strong commitment to wide-ranging domestic issues, including education, the environment, child care, open Government, workers' rights, and equal opportunity. She introduced the first Early Childhood Education Act, authored the Women's Education Equity Act, supported strip mining regulation, and became an early critic of the Vietnam War. In 1971, she entered the Oregon Democratic Presidential primary. Her candidacy reflected her determined independence and frustration with Government cutbacks in social services spending and the ongoing war.

In 1971, in connection with planned underground nuclear tests at Amchitka Island in the Aleutian chain, she filed suit with 32 other Members of Congress to compel disclosure of reports under the Freedom of Information Act, FOIA. She took issue with alleged Presidential authority to exempt certain information from FOIA and withhold it from judicial or legislative review. In the final outcome, in what had been described by PATSY as a sort of Waterloo of the Freedom of Information Act, the U.S. Court of Appeals ruled that Congress could legislate new disclosure guidelines to permit judicial review of the President's actions. In the end, the case gained tremendous historical significance when the U.S. Supreme Court cited it as precedent for the release of the Watergate tapes.

In perhaps her farthest-reaching accomplishment, PATSY co-authored title IX of the Higher Education Act Amendments, which prohibits gender discrimination by educational institutions receiving Federal funds. The landmark provision was enacted in 1972 and has since, in its 30 years of existence, introduced equality in college sports and contributed greatly to the rise in women's athletics.

An unsuccessful Senate bid ended her first set of years in Federal office in 1977, but it did not quiet her political involvement or public service. Indeed, in 1990 she returned to the House. In the interim, she assumed the position of Assistant Secretary of State for Ocean and International, Environmental, and Scientific Affairs, where she helped to strengthen environmental policies, particularly with regard to protection of whales, toxic chemical disposal and ocean mining. In 1980, she took the helm as the first woman president of the Americans for Democratic Action. Two years later, she returned to elected office in Hawaii by taking the gavel as chairperson of the Honolulu City Council. She twice ran unsuccessfully for other office, this time for Governor and mayor of Honolulu, then triumphed in 1990 in a special election for the remainder of my term in the other body, at the passing of our beloved colleague, Spark Matsunaga.

Since 1990, she continued in characteristic style, advocating and articulating the ideals that she had espoused during her first terms in the other body. I remember PATSY marching up the Capitol steps with vigor, alongside her other female colleagues, to show her support for Anita Hill in 1991. I was pleased to work with PATSY, the distinguished senior Senator from Hawaii, Senator DAN INOUE, the honorable Secretary of Transportation, Norm Mineta, and my other colleagues in the establishment of a Congressional caucus to address the needs of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders in 1994.

I recall her leadership in 1996 on a successful boycott of a joint session speech by French President Jacques Chirac, in protest of French nuclear testing in the Pacific, much in line with our shared commitment to championing the disenfranchised peoples of the Pacific in our respective bodies. As we hope to complete action on a welfare reauthorization bill in this session, I remember PATSY's steadfast efforts before the passage of the 1996 welfare reform law in keeping us mindful about the possible effects of social policy changes on children. She had continued the battle cry with the current welfare reauthorization and ensured that the voices of the smallest and most vulnerable were heard.

PATSY was one of the last Members of the 107th Congress who served in the historic 89th Congress that passed much of the landmark Great Society legislation. PATSY's lifelong efforts to open educational access to countless Americans and ensure them the best educational opportunities were the achievements that brought her the greatest satisfaction. "Anything for the children," was PATSY's guiding conviction. I believe we shared the same view about education that this crucial area is where we can do the most good for the most people.

A great spirit has come and gone before us. PATSY's vigor and courage to tackle difficult issues in the wide realm of social policy will be sorely missed. There are fewer trails for women and minorities to blaze, thanks to PATSY's determination and spirit. Indeed, her trailblazing efforts will not end with her death, for the things she put into place will continue to benefit the lives of countless individuals, in our lifetime and for generations to come, in ways that may not ever be truly appreciated.

We are enjoined to carry forth the mission that my dear colleague pursued during her remarkable career. With great sadness, we bid a final farewell and aloha pumehana to a fearless and remarkable lady, the most honorable PATSY TAKEMOTO MINK.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. NELSON of Florida). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, are we in morning business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent to speak for as much time as I consume.

HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I have been hearing in recent days that, once again, the President is on the campaign trail across the country. Sometimes he does two, three, four, and five fundraisers a day. At most of these fundraisers, the President criticizes the Senate for not passing the homeland security bill exactly the way he would like it. I thought I might make a couple of comments about that.

First, we in the Senate are in the process of debating the homeland security bill. I hope the President will ultimately be willing to compromise with us on some key issues. I believe we will pass a homeland security bill, and I believe it will be soon if we get some willingness to compromise on the part of the White House. We will also, at the President's request, take up a resolution dealing with the question of Iraq and the use of force and the United Nations.

It is our intention on the majority side to have a good, aggressive debate on these issues, but at the same time work with the President and accommodate the President as much as possible.

But I want to make a few points that I think are important. Foremost among these is that I don't think it is appropriate for the President to be going around the country, doing multiple fundraisers every day and suggesting that the Senate or some Members of the Senate do not seem to care about national security. I think that is terribly inappropriate.

It is not inappropriate at all for the President to campaign. He certainly will and should do that, but I don't think he ought to use these campaign opportunities to do what he has been doing. I understand he has raised something like $130 million. He is a prodigious fundraiser, and he has every right to do that. But it is unfortunate that a President who has spoken of a desire to change the tone of political discourse in Washington, DC, is rushing around the country doing fundraisers and pointing the finger at the Democrats in the Senate, saying they don't care about the security of this country.

The fact of the matter is that Democrats proposed the creation of a Department of Homeland Security just one month after the terrorist attacks on September 11 of last year. Lest we forget, Senator LIEBERMAN—the prime sponsor—introduced in the Senate a bill to create a homeland security Cabinet agency exactly 30 days after the September 11 attacks.

The President opposed it. The White House opposed it. They said they didn't want it. They objected. Month after month after month, the White House opposed the creation of a Cabinet level agency dealing with Homeland Security.

In fact, when the legislation was marked up in the full committee chaired by Senator LIEBERMAN, the Republicans largely voted against it in the full committee because the White House opposed it, the President opposed it, the President didn't want it.

And then on June 6, a full 9 months after the September 11 attacks, the President did a 180 degree reversal and said: Now we want a new Department. And, by the way, we not only want this new Department, but we want the following provisions to apply to the 170,000 workers of the new Department, and we are not willing to compromise. We demand that it be done the way we intend it to be done. That was the message from the White House.

First, for 9 months they didn't want an agency. Now they not only want an agency, but they say we must have it their way and will not compromise. And then, in the middle of the Senate debate, the President goes on the campaign trail, and suggests that Democrats don't care about national security. That is nonsense.

The President said he wants to come to town to change the tone. There is precious little evidence of that in recent weeks, I would say. But I do think it is time to change the tone.

The right thing for the President and the Congress to do is to work together to reach a fair compromise and to find a way to do this in a thoughtful way. Changing the tone means you sit down together and try to get the best of what both sides have to offer. That is all we ask at this point.

We have been on this legislation for some 4 weeks. There is no reason we cannot have thoughtful and satisfactory compromises so we can pass a Department, a Cabinet level agency on homeland security, through this Senate, go to conference, and get a bill to the Senate he can sign. There is no reason we cannot do that and do that soon.

I believe that is the goal of Senator LIEBERMAN. I know it is the goal of Senator DASCHLE. I just visited with him. We want this to happen.

I said the other day that I would never, ever, under any set of circumstances, question whether anyone in this Chamber supports this country's national security. Everyone does—liberal, conservative, Republican, Democrat; we all strongly support the security of the United States. We may come at it from different angles or different approaches and have different ideas, but I believe everyone really has the best interests of this country at heart. I believe that of the President as well.

I think it is now time for the President to sit down with us and reach agreements and reach some compromises and get this piece of legislation moving. And I think it is time, long past the time, for the President to stop going out on the fundraising trail and using this issue in a divisive and inappropriate way.

We need to get this right. This debate isn't about politics. This is about effectively protecting the interests of this country. And we are all in this together.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

I thank my friend from North Dakota for what he said. It has gotten frustrating in the last couple of weeks, and all the more so because we agree on 90 to 95 percent of what ought to be in legislation creating a Department of Homeland Security.

The senior Senator from Texas, who is the lead advocate for the administration, for the White House, for the President, and for himself, has said the substitute he offered to the bipartisan bill that came out of our Governmental Affairs Committee is 95 percent the same as the Governmental Affairs Committee bill. We have a 5 to 10 percent difference, mostly focused on this question of how you protect and reassure Federal workers who are moved from other Departments to this new Department while not undercutting the President's authority over national security. Surely we can find a way to bridge that gap on a bipartisan basis. As my friend from North Dakota knows, Senator CHAFEE is taking a lead role in creating a bipartisan alternative to the parts of our committee bill that dealt with this question. And I accepted that compromise even though it wasn't the one our committee first adopted and I proposed, because I thought it was a way to break the logjam and allow us to create and enact into law that 95 percent which we all agree on. But the White House has remained unyielding.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield for a question, is it not the case last week after several weeks where we had this impasse with the White House on this issue—the bipartisan proposal that tries to be the centrist proposal—it was once again blocked? The White House said, No, we are not interested in doing that either. It is either our way or no way. If it is not our way, we intend to go to fundraiser after fundraiser and criticize.

I have great respect for the President. I have supported him on many things. Especially in a political season with all of this discussion existing in this country about changing the tone, I am just not very happy seeing three to five fundraisers a day and using the opportunity to say, By the way, the Senate can't get this bill done. What is the bill? The bill is to create a Cabinet-level Department of Homeland Security proposition which the White House opposed for 9 straight months.

In fact, the ranking Member—I say to the Senator from Connecticut—voted against the proposal, and then, 2 weeks later, found out he was in favor of the proposal. He used a whimsical quote about being in favor of something which he voted against because the White House pivoted and said, No, we support it, but based on the notion of what we believe must happen. And, if that is not satisfactory to the Congress, we are going to go criticize the Congress rather than reach a compromise.

Once again, I would like to see a change in tone, but I haven't seen it, at least in recent weeks.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. In response to my friend from North Dakota, he is absolutely right on a few of the points involved. Words have consequences, both in our personal lives and in our public lives. When you take the good-faith dispute we have had here about this single question of Federal employees' rights to be transferred to the new Department and suggest people in the Senate are putting those concerns ahead of national security by which you are questioning their motives, and even their patriotism, to some extent, it has consequences. It has consequences because we naturally feel we have been treated unfairly. It is unfortunate; it has consequences beyond this bill. It began to have consequences last week on questions related to a resolution that would authorize the President to take military action in Iraq, if necessary.

I think what my friend from North Dakota has said is very important to remember here. We have tried and have not always succeeded. But when we come to questions of national security, foreign and defense policy, as we always say, partisanship ends at the Nation's borders. We are in a new world post-September 11, 2001, where national security is within our borders. The questions of national security are within our borders. We should strive for the same absence of partisanship and debate this as we do internationally. That is why we have all got to lower our voices a bit and try to focus on the very narrow area of difference we have so we can get this job done to protect the security of the American people.

The Senator from North Dakota is right. The truth is, Senator ARLEN SPECTER, our Republican colleague from Pennsylvania, and I and others introduced a bill to create a Department of Homeland Security in October of last year. The administration had what I always respected as a good-faith difference of opinion. They didn't feel it was necessary. They felt the Office of Homeland Security the President created by Executive Order could do the job. I always felt, and Senator SPECTER felt, we needed a Department with a strong Secretary with budgetary authority and line authority over people serving under them. That dispute went on for 8 months until the President endorsed the idea on June 6. I never would have thought to say or allege, because the President and we had this dispute about how best to protect homeland security, somehow the President was putting that bureaucratic or ideological vision—whatever you call it—ahead of his commitment to national security. Obviously, that would have been unfair, just as I think some of the statements the President has made in the last week are unfair.

It is Monday, and it is a new week. Hope springs eternal. I hope we can sit and reason together with the biblical ideal—the prophet's vision—in our minds.

There is a danger lurking out there. The terrorists are still out there. They hide in the shadows. But they are at work planning to strike us again. Shame on us if we don't get together and create a Department that can prevent them from doing that. Let us do it this week. We can break this logjam. It is that simple.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I listened with interest while my two friends discussed this issue. I may as a footnote point out they really are my two friends. My mother used to say you could always tell how much a Senator hated another one by how many "distinguished" and "great friend" adjectives he used. But, in this case, it is genuine.

I think the Senator from North Dakota has raised a legitimate issue about the tone. I would like to do what I can to change the tone of this debate.

As I see it, speaking solely for myself as maybe the last Member of the committee, the fight here is about the President's ability—or, more appropriately, the new Secretary's ability—to manage the Department efficiently and effectively.

I do not see the history quite the same way in terms of the dispute,

Should we have a Department or should we not have a Department in the months leading up to the President's request.

I believe that within the administration there was always an assumption that a Department, at some point, made sense, but the administration was not willing to identify a specific set of recommendations as to how that Department would be formed until the President made his statement.

So I do not think it was a matter of resisting, resisting, resisting, and suddenly changing his mind. I think it was: We are going to keep our options open. We will not endorse anything. Therefore, we will not endorse the Lieberman bill until we have decided what it is we want.

I think the Senator from Connecticut has been more than generous in his willingness to grant good faith to the administration on that issue. I think that is correct on both sides.

Now, as I understand the issue, listening to members of the administration, as we meet in our meetings, and listening to the debate both in committee and on the floor, there is no desire, at least substantively within the true policymakers of the administration, to turn this into a partisan fight. I will grant there are those who are willing to grab for any partisan advantage they can find. I would suggest that people who have that inclination exist on both sides of the aisle, populate both parties, and, indeed, may even be found in the Green Party or some other party that likes to pose as being above searching for a partisan advantage.

But I believe the problem in this circumstance stems from the high stakes that are involved in making sure the Department is done right. I have addressed this on the floor before, and the Senator from Connecticut has heard me address it in committee. The challenge of putting together a Department such as this is so overwhelming, and the possibilities that it will go wrong if it is not properly constructed in the first instance are so great, that things that might have been resolved on a more normal legislative question become sticking points on this one.

I have said on the Senate floor before that I was involved in the creation of the Department of Transportation, which has some similarities to this. Because we took the Coast Guard out of the Treasury Department—I say “we”; it was done in the Johnson administration. I was in the Nixon administration that inherited this shortly after it was created but while the problems still existed.

They took the Coast Guard out of the Treasury Department. They took the Highway Administration out of the Commerce Department. They took the FAA from its status as an independent agency. They took the Urban Mass Transit Administration out of the Department of Housing and Urban Development. And they took several other agencies of smaller stature, pasted them together into a single Department, and discovered major management challenges.

Whenever I address this issue in front of a group of business executives who say, Why can't we put this together very quickly, I always ask them the question, Have any of you ever been engaged in a major corporate merger? And when they nod their heads, I say, Do any of you have any thoughts that this will be easy?

It is at least twice as large as the challenge creating the Department of Transportation. This is not the same thing as creating the Department of Education, which simply took the Office of Education and slapped the “Department” label on it. It still had the same culture, the same work rules, the same procedures.

It is not the same thing as taking the Department of Veterans Affairs, which was simply taking an existing office, slapping a new label on it, and saying, OK, we are now going to take veterans and elevate them to Cabinet status. In this case, it is putting together so many disparate agencies, many of which have been functioning in an atmosphere where homeland security is a part, but almost an unimportant part, of their main mission, but because of where they are, they need to be pasted together in this new Department and have a major change.

As I listen to the White House individuals talk to us on the Republican side—as we talk about this, they say: This is not really a matter of union versus nonunion; this is a matter of the power of the President and, through the President, his delegate, the Secretary, to organize the Department in the most efficient way. And we are afraid—I am speaking now for the administration, which is maybe presumptuous on my part, but as I hear what they say, it is: We are afraid that if it comes in the form we are talking about here, we will end up with a Department that is unmanageable, and the President will have to go through so many hoops, laid out in departments that are not focused on homeland security, that it will be impossible for the new Secretary to function.

I ask all of my colleagues this rhetorical question—I have asked the Senator from Connecticut this question, and he has answered yes—but I ask all of the Senators this rhetorical question: Would you be willing to accept appointment as the new Secretary of this Department in the form in which it is being proposed to us under the Breaux-Chafee-Nelson amendment?

I have some management experience. I have been in the executive branch in a Cabinet-level Department. I could not honestly answer that question yes for myself because I watched as the first Republican Secretary of Transportation, John Volpe, wrestled with all of the problems of moving people around the Department. The Congress gave him, a high degree of management flexibility. He could move people around without asking congressional approval for a certain period of time. I should probably research the exact period. My memory is that it was 3 years after the creation of the Department. He could move people, almost capriciously, for 3 years.

Secretary Boyd, who was the first Secretary of Transportation, did it for 18 months. I know Secretary Volpe did it until the time came. It was absolutely essential for me, in the office I organized for the Secretary, to have that kind of flexibility. I was moving people around, violating what had been their traditional kinds of protections, simply because the whole thing would not function if we did not have that kind of flexibility.

The Congress put a time limit on it because they wanted to make sure that the Secretary would not abuse that power. I remember how concerned Secretary Volpe was that the clock was running, and he had to get the reorganization done before midnight struck and suddenly everything would be frozen again.

We were talking about a Department dealing with entirely domestic issues, having no national security implications, in a situation where there was no external pressure, such as a potential attack. And it took 3 years or more before that Department came together and functioned.

As I have reminded Senators before, an even larger example of this kind of organization, which is the closest parallel we have to creating the Department of Homeland Security, was the reorganization of the Department of Defense that came after the Second World War. That was in 1947.

The Department of Defense probably did not fully function until the Goldwater-Nichols Act of Congress stepped in, what, 15 years later? Certainly more than a decade later. And it is instructive to remember that the first Secretary of Defense, faced with all of these challenges, committed suicide.

There are those who say, well, there were other problems in his life. And I am sure that is true. I will not attribute his ultimate depression and decision to end his life to the difficulties of managing the Department of Defense, but it certainly can be said that those difficulties did not help.

So if the President were to call me and say: Bob, you have had experience at Transportation; you have been in the executive branch; you have been an appropriator; you have a unique background; I want you to be the Secretary of Homeland Security and serve the country; I would have to say to him: Mr. President, not under the terms of this bill. My ability as the CEO would be hamstrung.

The Senator from Connecticut is exactly right. Through his good efforts and his willingness to be open, which is his hallmark and his trademark as a Member of this body, he has worked with the White House in crafting something that is agreeable to both sides 95 percent, maybe even more than 95 percent. There is no point in putting a firm number on it because the two are now tremendously close.

The remaining issue is the kind of issue that would cause me to turn down service in this position. May I hasten to say, I am not running for the position, lest anybody have any mistakes about this. I enjoy the Senate too much.

As I have tried to look at it as objectively as possible, I have decided that the President's statement that he would veto this bill is a correct one. It is not rooted in a desire to embarrass the Senate or impugn the integrity or the ability of the Senator from Connecticut or his committee on which I serve. It is rooted in a firm belief that the management procedures of this Department, as structured in this bill and as they would remain structured under the proposed amendment, would prevent the next Secretary, whomever he or she may be, from having absolutely essential authority to organize the Department.

I have said this before—I will say it again; no one has taken me up on it—I would be willing to put a time limit on the kind of flexibility I think we need. If indeed there are those who are nervous that some future President, even if they give this one every benefit of the doubt, those who are nervous that some future President might abuse this power, I would say: Let's give the President the power he wants on management flexibility and put a time limit on it and say his ability to move people around would expire after 5 years, I would think would be more logical, if he had the experience of something like 3 at the Department of Transportation.

On the issue of his ability to designate people for national security, the President probably does not want a time limit on that. He probably believes that every President should be preserved in the rights they have had. That one might be negotiated as well.

But as I understand it, these are the two challenges: First, the flexibility factor which, frankly, we have not been talking about on the Senate floor because we have been so hung up on other ones. That would be the one that would give me the most pause if I were the potential Secretary. I would be willing to see if we couldn't work that one out with a time limit. And then the second issue, the right of the President to make a national security decision, maybe we could find a way around that one, too, in terms of some sort of time circumstance. I don't think just because it was done with Jimmy Carter means that it has to remain sacrosanct forever. We can look at it in view of the threat, get some experience under our belt as to how the new Department works, and say that Congress will relook at this at X particular point.

My bottom line, speaking solely for myself and not for the administration—because I am not authorized to do that—is that I hope we can, in fact, reach out in the spirit the Senator from Connecticut has always shown, find some solution, but recognize that it is not a political fight to determine who is protecting unions and who is the most patriotic. It is a serious, legitimate, important management challenge as to how much power this President and future Presidents, the newly appointed Secretary and future Secretaries, are going to have to manage the Department in the most efficient possible way to preserve our homeland against attacks.

The reality is that the attacks will come. The reality is that some of them will get through. No matter how well the Department is manned, no matter how well the Department is structured, no matter how vigilant the employees of the Department will be—and I will stipulate, I expect that all of them will be vigilant, whether they are union members or nonunion members or don't care—an attack will make it through somehow, somewhere.

And then we want to look back on it and say: We did the very best we could to see to it that the Secretary had all of the tools he or she might need. And, yes, this attack got through, but these didn't because we put the Department together intelligently in the first place.

I will be happy to enter into whatever discussion the Senator from Connecticut may want to have, knowing that I don't speak for the administration, but I speak as a member of his committee from the other side of the aisle who has always had the highest respect for his willingness to listen, his willingness to cooperate, acknowledge that he has helped me on some of the issues I believe strongly about to his own political peril because there are some Members on his side who did not want to do some of the things I wanted to do. I would hope in the same spirit that he has mentioned here that something can be worked out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Utah. I return his respect and trust quite directly. I appreciate what he said. I appreciate the tone in which the Senator from Utah spoke, and just to get the nonsense of last week behind us, that we can obviously disagree on issues related to this bill or other bills without questioning, without impugning each other's motives or, Lord knows, questioning each other's patriotism.

I agree, when we create this Department of Homeland Security—and we will create a Department of Homeland Security; we are going to find a way to do it before long, I hope—it is going to be a massive undertaking: 170,000 employees, clearly the largest reorganization of the Federal Government since the end of the 1940s, the post-Second World War reorganization of our national security and foreign policy apparatus.

As the Senator from Utah said, this is not just putting a new name on the door, "Department." This is taking a lot of different people from a lot of different places in our Government and bringing them together under a strong Secretary in focused divisions within that Department. Those are exactly the parts that are in common between the proposal from our committee and the White House proposal.

Why are we doing it? Simply because the current state of disorganization is dangerous. When you have three, four, or five different Federal Government agencies at a point of entry into the country at the border and they are each in separate offices—they may bump into each other, but they are not really working together in a coordinated way; they usually don't even have telecommunications equipment that speaks easily in a crisis to one another—that is dangerous disorganization.

If you have, as we know from the investigation of the Joint Intelligence Committees, a situation where there are bureaucratic barriers between the intelligence community, the law enforcement community, and information is not shared in a way that can put all the dots, as we keep saying, on a board so you can see the outlines of a potential terrorist attack so you can stop it, that is disorganization that is dangerous.

I could go on and on, to each of the five or six divisions of the new Department.

So that is why we are all proposing this step. It is going to be a big job. I want to make it clear. I know the Senator from Utah didn't mean to suggest this in reporting our conversation. I am not now, nor will I be a candidate for Secretary of the new Department of Homeland Security. When he asked me whether I would advise who was taking it to take it under the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux language—if they should accept—my answer was yes. I want to explain why, in the calm of a Monday afternoon. In this particular colloquy, we may have an opportunity to set more on the record as I see it than has gotten in to this point.

We have 170,000 employees to be moved to the new Department. The number I hear about union-represented employees is approximately 43,000 who will be moved to the new Department. There are two factors at work here. One is an anxiety among a lot of Federal workers that this existing statute, which has been referred to, that was adopted in the Carter administration, that gives the President of the United States extraordinary authority to declare that a particular category of Federal employees should not be allowed to belong to a union, an employee association, because that union membership would be inconsistent with national security—the existence of that statute applied 10 or 11 times since adoption in the late 1970s in the Carter administration, and usually in quite narrow areas—the Defense Intelligence Agency and in similar groups—the existence of that statute used for the first time by the current administration in January to deprive several hundred employees of the U.S. attorneys' offices around the country of the right to collectively bargain, to join unions, created widespread anxiety among Federal employees.

Senator THOMPSON and I had some discussion on this last week. I don't need to get into the details of what the administration intended to do and what the employees thought. From the employees' point of view, they were worried that this statute would be used in a broader way than ever before to deny them the right to collectively bargain. I must say, again, that the right to collectively bargain among Federal employees is quite limited; most notably and, of course appropriately, Federal employees belonging to a union do not have the right to strike. That is a law. There are various other items that are normally negotiated between management and unions that are not negotiated in the Federal employee case—most notably salary. We are the managers, in that sense, who set salary levels—we in the Congress.

So now we come to a recommendation that the Department of Homeland Security be created. There is great anxiety—and it remains so—among the 43,000 employees currently represented by unions who, when they are moved to this Department, because the name of the Department is Homeland Security, they might well be deprived of their collective bargaining rights. Our committee considered that and we came up with a proposal which, to state it in summary, would have allowed employees to appeal such a decision, such an order denying them collective bargaining rights to the Federal Labor Relations Authority—two-thirds of whose members, incidentally, are appointed by the sitting President. So, presumably, it would not have been a hostile board. When we came to the floor, and after that measure was in our proposal, the White House was quite adamant on the point that it would represent a lessening of the President's national security authority. Though the lessening would have been small, literally that was true. That would have been true because we would have subjected the Presidential decision on national security grounds to review by this administrative body and appeal to the administrative body. That is why, when I saw the gridlock here, and understanding that we agree on more than 90 percent of the two proposals—one White House and one committee—before the Senate now, I encouraged our colleagues, Senators NELSON and BREAUX, to pursue a compromise. They engaged Senator CHAFEE in these discussions and they came up on this one with a proposal that the President would retain the authority he has, but would have to more clearly enumerate the reasons why he was invoking this authority; and, particularly, he would have to make clear, or give a statement, that the agency whose employees he was denying the right to collectively bargain had had its mission changed from the many years since the Carter administration, when no previous President had said that doing the work of that agency was inconsistent with the union membership to national security, with no right of appeal to an administrative agency. To me, that creates what I might call a kind of minimal due process for Federal employees, just to require the President who, by the one court case in this statute that had been decided, the President's authority here in that court case was held to be substantial. I mean, this is a case where President Reagan removed collective bargaining rights from a group of Federal employees for national security reasons and did not recite a determination as to why he did it. I believe the district court sided with the employees. It was appealed to a circuit court, and the district court said the President has to at least recite a determination rather than just issue an order.

The circuit court actually said—I am paraphrasing and probably making something more complicated, a little more direct—the circuit court said they accept a presumption that though the President did not recite a determination, when it came to national security, his judgment was determinative. It set a very high standard for anyone questioning how a President would exercise this power the statute gives him.

So my own feeling is that in the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux compromise, we have now put in a little language to require a statement of why the President did it, and the work of this Department, or agency, or office that changed since they moved to the new Department, but effectively no appeal from that. So I think we achieved a little measure of due process for the employees, without at all diminishing the national security authority of the President.

On the question of civil service reforms, or changes, and so-called management flexibility, when the President first introduced his proposal and embraced the idea of a Department of Homeland Security, I remember speaking to Governor Ridge. He is a good man, and he was good enough to bring this up himself in a conversation we had a couple weeks ago. He said to me: I remember, Senator, that, as soon as the bill came out and you saw some of the changes we wanted on civil service, you appealed to me, why can't we put this aside for 6 months? This Department is going to take months to get up and functioning. I remember saying this to Tom Ridge—that this is a trap, a web, and we are going to get so entangled in it that it is going to run the risk of making it hard for us to adopt legislation creating a Department of Homeland Security.

This is one of those rare cases where my prediction was correct. I say that with some understandable humility. I fear that is where we have ourselves now. In the committee bill, we adopted some bipartisan civil service reforms, worked on with great diligence by Senators AKAKA and VOINOVICH over many months. Other than that, we didn't change the existing civil service law, except that we said we required the new Secretary of the new Department, 6 months after the effective date of the legislation, to come back to Congress and tell us whether he or she thought we needed to do anything more about management flexibility as the Department was taking place, based on the experience they had.

So that is where our committee bill was. The President came in with a series of reductions in civil service protections for employees who are longstanding and that deepened the anxiety of the Federal employees that this Department was going to be used as a way to cut back on their protections, on the accountability, on the kinds of protections that, at their best, don't create rigid bureaucracy, but help to create the climate in which the best people are attracted to Federal service. The President's bill gutted that.

Now comes the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux compromise, and here, too, I think they did something quite reasonable and progressive, which is they itemized four different areas where the President can exercise broad management flexibility, but they did something that builds on the best labor-management relations in the private sector and some very hopeful experiences with similar labor-management relations in Federal Departments, particularly the Internal Revenue Service. They said in the Nelson-Chafee-Breaux compromise: Mr. Secretary, we are giving you this flexibility in these areas of current civil service protections, but we require, before you implement them, to attempt to negotiate them with your workers. That is why I say in the best of modern private-sector labor-management relations, the old hostility is not there. It is: Let's sit down around the table and figure out what works best for the company; you want jobs, we want to make a profit; let's figure out how we can best do this together. Let me mention, this is exactly the authority Congress gave the Internal Revenue Service a few years ago. It has worked quite well. In other words, in that legislation we said: Director of Internal Revenue, you have the authority to negotiate changes in the civil service, but you have to do it with your employees. In fact, they have negotiated some very progressive agreements with both sides agreeing once they sat down around the table.

In that legislation and in this Nelson-Chafee-Breaux proposal, so again we protect the authority of the President, we say if the Secretary of Homeland Security and the workers in the Department cannot reach an agreement, then they have to take it to arbitration to the Federal Service Impasses Panel. This is a board, again, all of whose members are appointed by the current President, so it is not a hostile board, and that board makes the final decision.

I do believe that our colleagues, Senators BEN NELSON, LINCOLN CHAFEE, and JOHN BREAUX, have worked out a proposal, a genuine compromise that is different from what our committee reported out but provides a door opener both to management flexibility, to some progress in management, and does not diminish ultimately the authority of the President of the United States, certainly not with regard to his ability and capacity now to invoke national security with regard to union membership rights of Federal employees.

I am puzzled as to why the administration has not accepted this compromise proposal and the Senator from Texas is effectively involved in a filibuster of the overall bill. I remain open to discussion about parts of this. I appreciate what the Senator from Utah said about a time limit. Five years seems like a long time to me.

One of the issues we considered in the committee, and I know was considered in the negotiations, was the possibility, with regard to the civil service management flexibility, of giving—we call it demonstration authority, but the idea was for a limited period of time to give the President some of the authority he wanted, and then come back and see how it worked and consider whether we wanted to extend it.

I am grateful for the words of the Senator from Utah, and as we begin our new week, after some of the heat that was exchanged on the floor of the Senate, I am grateful for the coolness of his—in the best sense of that word—that is, the thoughtfulness of his remarks today. I will be glad to continue to talk with him to see if we can find common ground. We ought not to be in this gridlock on what I still consider to be a side issue from the main business of this Department: protecting the security of the American people.

As the Senator from Utah said, we never want to give the impression we do not think the employees who will move to this Department are as concerned about homeland security as we and the rest of the American people are. In fact, the evidence before us is quite ample that Federal employees are concerned.

The stories are legion and numerous of Federal employees—I think of FEMA employees—they were somewhere else and they rushed to the Pentagon to be of help; they flew to New York; they worked hours and hours of overtime. Of course, the most vivid demonstration of the way in which union membership is not inconsistent with national service or sacrifice is the firefighters in New York, several hundred of whom were off duty on September 11. When they heard what had happened, they just rushed to the scene. Nobody was thinking about whether this was supposed to be a day off under the collective bargaining agreement, what risks they were assuming, or they were going to be asked to do things that were not quite in their job description. Needless to say, a lot of them not only rushed into the building, but they never came out.

I hope we can find common ground. I offer anything I can do to supplement the extraordinary positive work of the previous triumvirate I mentioned, Senators NELSON, CHAFEE, and BREAUX, to get over this last big hurdle and get this bill adopted in the Senate, get it to a conference with the House, and then get it to the President's desk for signing.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. The Senator's timing is good. That was the windup sentence.

Mr. LEAHY. I wonder if the Senator will yield to me? I wish to discuss another aspect of the war on terrorism, and that is what we can do through the Justice Department. I wonder if the President will allow me to speak about that.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. I will be happy to do so. I thank the Senator for coming to the floor and look forward to his remarks.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE AUTHORIZATION

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I know we are getting down toward the end of the session and sometimes legislation falls by the wayside, but I have seen something in the last couple of days different from anything I have seen in 28 years in the Senate.

Last Thursday the other body passed the Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act and we filed a bipartisan conference report. I mention this because it has been 20 years since there has been such an authorization act for the Department of Justice because it has been so hard to bring people from across the political spectrum together. The House passed this conference report—by a vote of 400 to 4. I am not sure the way things are these days that we could get a vote of 400 to 4 to agree the Sun rises in the east and sets in the west.

The very same day I checked with every single member on this side of the aisle, every Democrat, and asked if they were willing to have it pass the Senate by voice vote, if need be, or a rollcall vote—it does not make any difference, but to pass it.

Every single Democrat—the distinguished Senator from Connecticut, myself, everybody else—agreed, yes, sure, go ahead and pass it. We were told there is an anonymous hold on the Republican side. This bipartisan legislation to authorize the Department of Justice is blocked—legislation to strengthen our Justice Department and the FBI that by agreement of all Members across the political spectrum will increase our preparedness against terrorist attacks, but also prevent crime and drug abuse in our cities and in our rural areas. It improves our intellectual property and antitrust laws. It would strengthen and protect our judiciary. It would give our children a safe place to go after school.

This legislation is as motherhood as one could imagine and yet the Republicans have said, no, even though the Republican-controlled House passed it 400 to 4. And even though every single Democrat in the Senate is ready to vote for it, the Republicans have said, no, we want to put an anonymous Republican hold on it and not allow it to go forward, years of work by both the Republicans and Democrats. This bill not only has my support in the Judiciary Committee, it has Senator HATCH's support. It has the support of Chairman SENSENBRENNER in the other body, as well as Representative HYDE. Every one of the House and Senate conferees, Republican and Democrat, signed the conference report. That conference report includes significant portions of at least 25 legislative initiatives, all to be flushed down the drain by a Republican hold.

When people go home this year to campaign about why they want to stop drugs in their schools, why they want to fight terrorism, why they want their courts strengthened, why they want the Attorney General of the Department of Justice to be able to be strengthened in their fight, let them point out that the reason it was not done was a Republican Senator who wants to do it anonymously. They do not even want to step forward and say who he may be.

For too many years, Republican and Democrat administrations have allowed the Department of Justice to escape its accountability to the Senate and the House of Representatives and, through them, to the American people. Congress, the people's representatives, have a strong constitutional interest in restoring that accountability. The House has recognized this. It has done its job. We need to do ours. Senate Democrats are prepared to proceed. Senate Republicans apparently are not. So let me tell you some of the things that are in this bipartisan conference report.

First, the conference report provides Federal, State, and local governments with additional tools to battle terrorism. It fortifies our border security by authorizing over $20 billion for the administration and enforcement of the laws relating to immigration, naturalization, and alien registration. It authorizes funding for the Centers for Domestic Preparedness in Alabama, Texas, New Mexico, Louisiana, Nevada, Vermont, and Pennsylvania. It adds additional uses for grants from the Office of Domestic Preparedness to support State and local law enforcement agencies.

Why would anybody on the Republican side oppose that? Another measure in the bill would correct a glitch in a law that helps prosecutors combat the international financing of terrorism. I worked closely with the Bush White House to pass this provision in order to bring the United States into compliance with a treaty that bans terrorist financing—and this is something the Bush administration wants—but without this technical, noncontroversial change, the provision may not be usable. As the President has pointed out, this law is vital in stopping the flow of money to those who would harm Americans. Every Democrat is ready to pass that. It is something President Bush has asked for in his fight against terrorism. Every single Democrat in this body is ready to vote for it, but the Republicans are blocking it from going forward.

Worse yet, at a time when the President is going before the U.N. emphasizing our enemies are not complying with international law, by blocking this minor fix—something the President has asked for, something every Democrat is ready to vote for, only the Republicans are blocking—we are leaving ourselves open to a charge that we also are not in compliance with an important antiterrorism treaty.

Secondly, this conference report improves our law enforcement efforts. Among other things, it pushes the FBI to reform its outdated computer system. Right now it is something that kids in school 10 years ago had better computer systems. It provides danger pay for FBI agents performing hazardous duty abroad. It provides for increased sentencing enhancements when criminals use body armor in crimes of violence or drug trafficking crimes, something for which every single police agency I have talked with from New York to Texas has asked.

I am told the administration supports this and every single Democratic Senator supports this, but it is blocked by the Republicans.

It includes Senator CARNAHAN's Law Enforcement Tribute Act, which authorized grants to States, local governments, and Indian tribes for memorials to honor those who were killed or disabled while serving as law enforcement safety officers. It has the Feinstein-Sessions James Guelff and Chris McCurley Body Armor Act. That is blocked. These are things that had overwhelming Republican and Democratic support, still has unanimous Democratic support but is blocked by the Republicans. I believe the conference report the Senate Republicans are blocking could help prevent crime from occurring in the first place. We reached a bipartisan agreement to give the Boys and Girls Clubs the funds they need to establish 1,200 additional clubs across the Nation. As a former prosecutor, I know how valuable these are to prevent crime from happening in the first place, to give teenagers and youngsters a place to go.

Just last week, I joined with Senator HATCH at the Boys and Girls Club congressional breakfast honoring regional youth of the year and also honoring Senator STROM THURMOND. Republican Senator after Republican Senator praised the work of the Boys and Girls Club, as did I, but now some Republican Senators are anonymously holding up the authorization for the money for the Boys and Girls Club.

Senate Republicans are also blocking funding that will put an additional Assistant U.S. attorney in every district in the Nation to implement the President's Project Safe Neighborhoods Initiative aimed at preventing school violence. The President goes out and speaks in favor of this. I happen to agree with the President on this. Everybody agrees with him, and now, when doing what the administration has asked for, we put these assistant U.S. attorneys in there, but that is not going anywhere. Every single Democratic Senator supports it. An anonymous Republican hold blocks it.

The conference report strengthens our efforts to prevent domestic violence and protect its victims. By creating a new Violence Against Women Office in the Justice Department, we ensure an increased Federal focus on this tragic and recurring problem. I do not know why preventing domestic violence should be a partisan issue.

In my experience as a prosecutor, the police never said we have to determine whether this person who is beaten up in domestic violence is a Democrat or a Republican. You try to save the life of the person who is being beaten and to protect them.

This legislation also authorizes programs to reduce drug abuse and recidivism, from adult and juvenile courts, to increased funding for drug treatment in prisons, to funding for police training in South and Central Asia to reduce the flow of drugs into our Nation. All of these proposals are bipartisan. Actually, most of them were in the Hatch-Leahy Drug Abuse Education, Prevention and Treatment Act. Every Democrat is ready to vote for them, but we cannot because the Republicans have an anonymous hold.

The conference report contains a number of important intellectual property provisions that will help American innovators and businesses, both big and small. There is a probusiness provision, which includes the Leahy-Hatch Madrid Protocol Implementation Act that has been held up for over 1 year. Every single business organization in the country, big or small, has asked us to pass it. Every single Democrat has said they will vote for it. It is being held by an anonymous Republican hold.

This legislation would implement a treaty and allow American businesses to obtain "one stop" international trademark registration, a process available only to countries signatory to the Protocol. This would benefit American businesses and companies who need to protect their trademarks when they sell their goods and services in international markets, particularly over the Internet.

I hear from companies as large as IBM and Intel. They want this legislation, down to the little mom-and-pop manufacturers in my own State. I tell them all, every single Democrat will vote for that. It is in this bill, as 400 House Members of both parties voted for it. But I also tell everyone in the businesses that ask, it is being held up by an anonymous Republican hold.

Another important intellectual property provision is the Hatch-Leahy TEACH Act, to clarify the educational-use exemption in the copyright law and all educators to use the same rich material for distance material over the Internet as they use in face-to-face classroom instructions. The Presiding Officer represents one of the most beautiful areas in upstate New York, where I visit often. I think of my rural Vermont or rural Utah. This allows people in these small schools to be able to have access to what is available in the large metropolitan areas. Every Democrat will vote for it. It is being held up by an anonymous Republican hold.

The conference report has a provision modernizing Patent and Trademark Office specifically authorizing friends to augment the investigation and prosecution of intellectual property crimes of privacy online. There is no member of the business community that does not support it, from the largest to the smallest. Every Democratic Senator is ready to vote for it tonight. It is being held up by an anonymous Republican hold.

This conference report creates or extends 20 Federal judgeships. Those are more than all the judgeships created during the 6-plus years the Republican party controlled the United States Senate and blocked both Clinton administration judicial nominations and the creation of new Federal judicial positions. We have included new Federal judges in Arizona, Alabama, Texas, New Mexico, among others. I have heard repeatedly from our Republican friends that although they have blocked the creation of the judges during the previous administration, they want them now. I put them in. Every single Democrat is ready to vote for it and the Republicans are blocking. It is amazing. These judges we have needed for years, blocked during the last administration when the Democrats had the Presidency, now we put them in. I supported putting them in, from northern New York to Alabama. The Republicans say they want them. They will not be appointed by a Democratic president. They will be appointed by a Republican president. I don't know what is going on unless they want to make it look like we are holding this up. Every Democrat will vote for the new judges. But they are being held up by an anonymous Republican hold.

I do not want to hear bleeding and caterwauling from the White House or the political mouthpieces from the Department of Justice, asking, Where are the judges. All 50 Democratic Senators will vote for them, as 400 Republicans and Democrats in the House voted for them. It is being held up by an anonymous Republican hold.

The conference report prohibits mandatory arbitration in a motor vehicle franchise contract between manufacturers and automobile dealers, to the same effect as the Hatch-Feingold-Leahy-Grassley Motor Vehicle Franchise Contract Arbitration Act, S. 1140. That legislation has more than 60 cosponsors, Republicans and Democrats. The automobile dealers lobbied strongly for it. All 50 Democrats are ready to vote for it. Their friends on the Republican side are holding it up.

The conference report includes an amendment to the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act to expand eligibility for compensation for injured uranium miners, mill workers and ore transporters. Many Senators from western States, on a bipartisan basis, such as Senators DASCHLE, HATCH, JOHNSON, DOMENICI, strongly support these changes. We are all ready to vote for them. Republicans are holding it up.

Finally, the conference report includes several important immigration provisions to help underserved rural areas with a critical shortage of medical doctors. Women die in childbirth. Teenagers in an accident die because they did not get care. Older people do not get the preventive medicine they need. This allows foreign doctors who are educated in the United States to remain here if they will agree to practice in the underserved areas. It extends H-1B status for certain working aliens and makes it possible for children whose sponsoring parent has died to apply for citizenship, nonetheless. I don't need to tell the Presiding Officer, representing the great State of New York, there were children whose sponsoring parents died in this country.

These are all noncontroversial provisions, for all over the country. Every single Democrat Senator said they will vote for it. We cannot bring it to a vote because the Republicans have an anonymous hold. I would not feel as bad about the holds if the Senator holding it up would come forward and state why. Instead, it is a stealth hold. It is a "during the night" hold. It is the quiet, anonymous phone call hold that stops it. It repeats an unfortunate pattern of anonymous Republican holds on bipartisan legislation designed to improve our Nation's national security law enforcement, immigration policies, and judicial branch of the government.

I am sure my colleagues are tired of hearing how much I enjoyed my earlier career in law enforcement. For 8½ years I proudly carried a badge, proudly served as chief law enforcement officer of my county. We prosecuted a lot of people. We saw a lot of tragic situations. We helped a lot of people in cases of domestic violence, stopped crimes from happening. Those we were not able to stop, we oftentimes successfully prosecuted afterwards. I never recall anyone, either those in my office or any of the law enforcement agencies we talked about, whether we were dealing with a Democrat or Republican, asking whether someone who was beaten or killed was Democrat or Republican. You never asked a police officer if they were Democrat or Republican. No one asked when sending officers out to protect citizens, facing the potential of death, their political party affiliation. In working with my colleagues, both in the Senate and in the House, we did not look at this as Democrat and Republican. We talked about good law enforcement. That is why every single Democratic Senator has said they will vote for this bill.

Our caucus spans the political spectrum. I suspect if we were allowed to bring it to a vote, almost all of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would vote for it, yet an anonymous hold is stopping this help to the law enforcement agencies, ranging from the smallest of our towns to our statewide law enforcement agencies, to our Federal law enforcement agencies. Nobody has spoken of any substantive question or issue of any provisions in this conference report. And there are not any. It passed the Republican-controlled house by 400-4.

It has been suggested the holds are merely partisan blocking to hold up legislative action and then blame the Democratic Senate majority for inaction created by Republican holds. I repeat, as I have over and over again on this bill, I have checked with every single Democrat Senator; we are ready to vote. We are all ready to vote.

If Republicans allowed this bill to come to a vote, it would pass immediately. It should have been passed last Thursday. We had an opportunity. Senator DASCHLE asked permission to pass it—Senator HATCH said we didn't each have to speak on it, we would put our speeches in afterward—asked to pass it by unanimous consent, but was told the Republicans objected.

For the sake of the Justice Department, the Congress, and the American people, we ought to pass it today. Twenty-one years fighting to get it, and here is what is in there: Combating terrorism, improving law enforcement, preventing crime, fighting drug abuse, enhancing intellectual property protection, strengthening the judiciary—adding 20 new judgeships and improving judicial disciplinary procedures—improving civil justice, and improving immigration procedures.

The irony is item after item was worked out with the support of the Bush White House. I spent an awful lot of time on this bill. A lot of my Republican colleagues spent a lot of time on this bill. And our staffs spent 10 times more time on this bill. I think somebody down at the White House, if they take time out from the fundraising and the campaigning, could take a couple of minutes to pick up the phone and call the party, the Members on the other side of the aisle, and say the criminal justice system needs this, the fight against terrorism needs this.

This is not just something abstract, this is real. Let's pass it. That is why the Republican-controlled House passed it. I am sorry my friends on the Republican side of the aisle are blocking it. I hope when they think about it, they will come to their senses and let it go through.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. CLINTON). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

EXTENSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Madam President, it is my understanding we are in a period of morning business; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time for morning business was to have expired at 5:15.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended until 6:45 p.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

HOMELAND SECURITY

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, as we enter our 5th week of debate on this Senate floor on the homeland security bill, I rise today to ponder exactly where we have been, and, perhaps much more importantly, where we are going.

In recent weeks, Democrats and Republicans have made little progress on the bill. Some have identified particular provisions they would like to have changed; some have not. The President offered his own proposal for consideration, and, as the RECORD will reflect, the Senate obliged him by allowing it to come to the floor for consideration.

My good friends, Senator GRAMM of Texas and Senator MILLER of Georgia, are championing the President's bill. He could have no two more noble or respected Senators as his gatekeepers.

Let me describe for you what this bill does. It will establish a new Federal Department, the largest Government reorganization since the establishment of the Department of Defense. It will affect 170,000 Federal employees and each and every American. It will restructure existing agencies and create new ones. It will relocate and reclassify employees and will establish the largest reaching intelligence-gathering operation in the history of civilization.

Is this the kind of legislation that Congress should approve blindly? Obviously not.

Some would have you believe that anyone who wants to make any change—no matter how slight—to this massive legislation is an opponent of the President.

I want to make a slight change to this bill, one I believe is supported by a majority of the Senate, but that does not make me an opponent, nor does my amendment make anyone an opponent. I support the President. I want to see him achieve his goal of establishing this new Federal bureaucracy.

What I do not support is sacrificing our constitutional responsibility for oversight of not just the Department, once it is established, but of the effort to create the Department in the first place.

Passing this bill comes down to one unresolved issue: the method of resolving differences as they pertain to labor-management in the new Department of Homeland Security.

I have joined together with my colleagues, Senator John Breaux and Senator LINCOLN CHAFEE, to put forth a compromise that has the support of a majority of the Senators, and should be embraced as a victory, not demagogued as a special interest protectionist measure.

The President's bill, the Gramm-Miller bill, does not have enough votes to pass, and it does not have enough votes to invoke cloture. The Lieberman bill does not have enough votes to pass, and it has not had enough votes to invoke cloture.

Without becoming unnecessarily bogged down with Senate procedure, it is important to point out that cloture means to shut off debate and a majority to pass a piece of legislation under these circumstances. Now, my amendment has enough to pass, but it does not have enough to shut off cloture. If my amendment were passed and passed on the Gramm-Miller bill, I believe that the bill would then have enough not only to shut off cloture but pass. That is what we are really trying to do.

Our compromise would give the President the authority he needs to hire and fire, promote or demote employees in the new Department. Indeed, it gives him exactly the authority he sought when Homeland Security Director Tom Ridge wrote the chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee in early September.

I have here for everyone to see—even those watching through the electronic eye—Governor Ridge's comments to Senator LIEBERMAN. I will quote in part, but I can quote before or after. There is some question about the context of this particular legislation. It was in conjunction with explaining what the White House was interested in in terms of the flexibility that management would require over labor under this new agency. He said:

Senator, the President seeks for this new department the same management prerogatives that Congress has provided other departments and agencies throughout the executive branch. For example—

Then he identifies a couple of other processes that are fairly innocuous. Then he says, relating to personnel flexibility:

Personnel flexibility is currently enjoyed by the Federal Aviation Administration, the Internal Revenue Service, and the Transportation Security Administration.

We initially tried to embody the Federal Aviation Administration in our amendment, but it was ruled not to be germane. So we did the next obvious thing; we went to the Internal Revenue Service, which lays out under existing law—which made it germane—the nature of the flexibility, that personnel flexibility to which Governor Ridge had referred. We thought that would, in fact, do it.

Now, much to our surprise, that apparently does not do it because they have suggested that this is a non-starter. It seemed to be starting back in September—the third of September—but it seems to be a non-starter today. I don't know what has changed in that timeframe. My good friend, Senator GRAMM, said that everybody is entitled to their own opinion, but they are not entitled to their own set of facts. I think this is a set of facts that we have before us. It is hard to believe that there would be more than one opinion about what Governor Ridge had to say. There should be no more than one opinion about what his letter purported to deal with. So I think this is one set of facts, with one opinion. It is possible to mischaracterize facts, but I don't think there is any way to mischaracterize the plain and simple language when he said "the same management prerogatives." He didn't say "almost the same," or "slightly different"; he said "the same management prerogatives."

I said the other day that there are times on this floor when you find out you are having a disagreement and you cannot understand why it is a disagreement; you are not sure what it is about, and you feel like Lewis Carroll must have felt when he wrote Alice in Wonderland. I have not seen the cheshire cat, but when winning is described as winning in the media about this issue, I feel as if we are in Alice in Wonderland.

Let me also suggest that there have been some news reports that I made reference to from the past few days that might shed some light on this situation. On Friday, Paul Light, of the respected Brookings Institution, told the Chicago Tribune that the differences between the two sides in this fight—he calls it a "fight"—are relatively minor and that Democrats have already given the President almost everything he requested. I think Senator LIEBERMAN parenthetically has said he has given 95 percent. We have been looking for a way to close the gap. I quote from his story:

I don't think the answer is in the legislation. I think it is a little bit about Iraq and a little bit about the election.

Mr. Light said the President should declare victory and move on. He said:

Any President in history would celebrate the enormity of consensus that exists in Congress right now. The President has gotten 95 percent of what he wants.

I think it is closer to 99; obviously, it is not 100. Today's issue of Roll Call includes a news story and a column in which some Republican leaders outline a strategy to use the homeland security issue in the coming elections.

Mark Preston, a very able reporter from this respected publication, wrote:

A disagreement over key labor issues in the homeland legislation might force this bill to be shelved until after November.

Mr. Preston quotes my good friend from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the Republican conference, Senator SANTORUM, as saying:

There are issues not being acted upon here, and they would certainly be issues of great importance to the American people and therefore be of very great importance to a campaign.

Madam President, they are very important to the American people, and no more important for us to do today and tomorrow is to deal with national security as it relates to the American people, and put aside partisan politics, put aside this election and electioneering and resolve the differences and close the difference between 95 percent and 100 percent. The differences are, in fact, I think, as Mr. Light said, very small.

Accusations of obstructionism seem to be aimed at securing a campaign wedge, and what we really need to do is move away from obstructionism to constructionism. We can be constructive in developing this particular approach. There are some other issues besides the flexibility issue, and we thought we had pretty much closed the gap there as well.

The Morella amendment, as it was introduced in the House, relates to the question of collective bargaining. What this particular amendment does is go back and have Morella included in the amendment as it was introduced in the House. It may not be exactly what was requested, but we have suggested that if there are some particular questions or some particular interests in adding some language that would make this better, we are entirely interested in doing that.

The truth is that we have not had that opportunity to try to bring that about. We met Thursday, we met Friday, and we met today. I think it is time for us to stop meeting and time for us to find a way to solve the issue.

We are beyond meeting, I believe, when it comes to this particular amendment. Flexibility is important and making sure that what we do in terms of this legislation is that we not adversely impact job security for national security, and certainly not unintentionally.

The White House has made it clear they have no plans to go in and make major wholesale changes. I take them at their word. I think if that is the case—and I take them at their word—then we ought to find, if not this language, some language that will permit us to close the gap to move this forward. If, in fact, it is everybody's plan to achieve a result here, then I think we can achieve one.

I truly believe it is important to the national interest to be able to deal with the personnel flexibility of the President. There is no question he needs to have the capacity to hire and fire, to promote and demote, and do what is in the best interests. There is no question about that. And adding that there be some requirement regarding the changing of authority or the changing of position in mission of the personnel is a slight adjustment. It certainly is not any kind of major intrusion on the Presidential authority.

To include the Morella language, in terms of flexibility, simply adds to that. I hope we will be able to move beyond meetings to closing the gap, bridging this debate so it brings about the best result that we can, not simply for the White House but for the people of this great country. This should not be about Republicans or Democrats. It should not be about the legislative branch or the executive branch. It ought to be about what is in the best interest, the national interest of our people, and for those who share the same desire for freedom and are struggling to achieve it in other parts of the world.

We have a great responsibility to the American people, but we also have a responsibility that is now being questioned and challenged around the world. One of the best ways for us to begin to resolve these issues is to take care of business at home. I cannot think of a better way than to adopt this amendment so we can adopt the Gramm-Miller proposal and move forward for national defense and our own homeland security.

Madam President, I appreciate the opportunity to speak, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LIFE OF HOLLY LADAY JOHNSTON RICHARDSON

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, early this morning, I lost one of my closest friends and staff members, Holly Johnston Richardson, who succumbed after a difficult battle with cancer. For nearly 30 years, she was a member of my extended family in every sense of the word. She was my right hand. My trusted advisor. My vital link to literally thousands of South Carolina friends, constituents, and family members.

But more than anything else, Mr. President, Holly Richardson was one of my dearest friends, and I will miss her more than words can convey.

To her husband, Phil, to her two wonderful children, Anne and Emmett, and to Holly's mother and father, Joanne and Coy Johnston of Summerville, South Carolina. I extend my heartfelt sympathies. I know my colleagues—so many of whom knew Holly very well—join me in expressing their support and offering their prayers during this very difficult time.

But it is Holly Richardson's life, and the courage she demonstrated throughout her illness, that is most on my mind today. I know I speak for everyone who knew and loved Holly as I did in saying that we deeply mourn her passing, and yet celebrate her wonderful life, a life dedicated to God, to her family, to her fellow man, and to her State and Nation.

Like all trusted staff members, Holly Richardson had my ear. What she probably never knew fully is that she also had my heart. On a personal level, she was—for my entire family—an unofficial "third daughter." Our confidant. Our friend. Our partner in so many aspects of our lives.

On a professional level, Holly and I were virtually inseparable. As anyone who has ever visited my Senate office knows, Holly's desk was always next to mine. We shared an office ever since she became my personal secretary in 1979. She could always be counted upon to work the longest hours, to handle the toughest jobs, and to render even-handed advice and counsel.

In fact, it was Holly who quietly bragged that she had broken in more than eight chiefs of staffs, five or six office press secretaries, eight committee chief counsels, and literally hundreds of staff assistants, aides and interns. She was, of course, correct. Holly was "the standard" when it came to professionalism, hard work, integrity and public service in a United States Senate office.

It is not an exaggeration to say that "everyone" knew Holly. Whether you were from South Carolina, or were a Washington, D.C. fixture, if you were around politics, you knew, and you came to love, Holly Richardson. From Presidents and First Ladies, to Senators and their spouses, to everyday working men and women who would call my office, Holly was beloved at every level of life.

Single-minded. Fiercely independent. Loyal and dedicated. She had the personal qualities that define what President Theodore Roosevelt once called the "courageous life."

But it was not until she was diagnosed with breast cancer less than a year ago, that people came to see just how courageous an individual Holly Richardson actually was.

Holly never wore her illness on her sleeve. She never asked you to feel sorry for her, share her burden, or wallow in her pity. In fact, few people outside of the office even knew Holly was sick. The reason was, of course, that she didn't feel sorry for herself. Holly summoned the courage of a warrior to fight her disease. And with quiet dignity and the help of the Almighty, she fought as bravely as any soldier I have ever known.

Her dedication to work, and to the people of South Carolina—whom she considered her "real bosses"—paled only to her devotion as a wife and a mother. Holly always made time for what was truly important in life. She and her husband Phil together built a loving home and were blessed with two wonderful children. She was an active member of her parish, Saint Paul's Episcopal Church, in Virginia, and managed to make time to be scout helper, soccer Mom and, above all, role model.

Holly's life was truly a gift, which she shared without reservation with everyone she knew and loved. That gift now lives on in all of us—for she inspired our lives, strengthened our spirits, and touched our hearts.

VALUE OF PUBLIC LANDS, NATIONAL PUBLIC LANDS DAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 2002

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, last Saturday was National Public Lands Day. It was a time for volunteers in states and communities across the country to give something back to America's public lands. National Public Lands Day is the largest grassroots, volunteer effort mounted on behalf of America's public parks, rivers, lakes, forest, rangelands, and beaches.

This year's National Public Lands Day theme was "Explore America's Backyard," recognizing that many volunteers go to nearby public lands for recreation and to enjoy the outdoors. These volunteers will put in a day of real work on needed projects ranging from trail construction and repairs to habitat restoration to making public lands more accessible for disabled visitors.

This year's signature event was held at Anacostia Park in Washington, D.C. where over 400 volunteers cleared brush, removed trash and debris, planted trees and grasses, and constructed benches and boardwalk trails. These volunteers were joined by key dignitaries: Washington, D.C. Mayor Anthony Williams, the current Miss USA, Shauntay Hinton, National Park Service Director Fran Mainella, Forest Service Assistant Chief Sally Collins, and Army Corps of Engineers Brigadier General Carl Strook.

The first National Public Lands Day, in 1994, was sponsored by three Federal agencies and attracted 700 volunteers in three sites. This year marks the ninth annual event which involved approximately 70,000 volunteers, who performed over eight million dollar's worth of improvements to our public lands at nearly 500 locations in every state. This effort involved over 19 Federal, State, local, and private partners on sites identified by eight Federal agencies.

I believe National Public Lands Day is an opportunity to build a sense of ownership by Americans—through personal involvement and conservation education.

In recognition of National Public Lands Day and this sense of ownership we should all have for our public lands, I want to spend a few minutes today and reflect on the value of our public lands and on what the future holds for them.

There are around 650 million acres of public lands in the United States. This represents a major portion of our total land mass. However, most of these lands are concentrated in the West, where as much as 82 percent of a state can be composed of Federal land. In fact, 63 percent of my own home State of Idaho is owned by the Federal Government.

This can be beneficial, as our public lands have a lot to offer. For starters, there are numerous resources available on our public lands—from renewable forests to opportunities to raise livestock to oil and minerals beneath the surface—public lands hold a great deal of the resources we all depend on to live the lives we enjoy.

Having resources available on public lands affords us the opportunity for a return on those resources to help fund government services, from schools to roads to national defense, and ease the burden on taxpayers.

Just as important, though, are the recreation opportunities our public lands offer. Every day, people hike and pack into the solitude of wilderness areas, climb rocks, ski, camp, snowmobile, use off-road vehicles, hunt, fish, picnic, boat, swim, and the list goes on. Because the lands are owned by all of us, the opportunity has existed for everyone to use the land within reasonable limits.

However, times are changing. We are in the midst of a slow and methodical attack on our access to public lands. It started with the resources industries. It will not stop there. At the same time some radical groups are fighting to halt all resource management on our public lands, they are working to restrict and, in some cases, eliminate human access to our public lands for recreation.

Yes, we must manage our public lands responsibly, which includes restrictions on some activities in some areas. What we must not do is unreasonably restrict or eliminate certain activities. Some people like to hike in backcountry areas where they can find peace and solitude while others prefer to ride ATVs into the woods. Some prefer to camp in more developed facilities while others prefer primitive spots. The point is that recreational opportunities on our public lands should be as diverse as the American public's interests.

On the same note, we can use the natural resources we need in an environmentally responsible manner and still have plenty of opportunities to recreate. In fact, recreation, resource, and environmental interests can team together to help each other out. In my own State of Idaho, on the Nez Perce National Forest, representatives of these interests and many others have come together through a stewardship project. These groups are working with the Forest Service to implement a project that works for everyone and addresses all of their needs in some fashion. In order to achieve such success, each group has had to compromise to agree on a prescription that works for everyone. This is just one example of differing interests working together to help each other out and improve the opportunities on our public lands for everyone. We need to see more of this around the country.

Public land management has become embroiled in fights, appeals, and litigation. The result is that the only ones who are winning are those who want to ensure we don't use our public lands. This must stop. Differing interests have to come together and realize that we all have one common goal—use of the land in a responsible manner. We can not continue to make the same mistakes of the past on our public lands.

That being said, I would like each of my colleagues to think about how public lands benefit their state and how they might work to support the new generation that is working to make each day National Public Lands Day.

JOHN STALLWORTH

• Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the achievements of John Stallworth on the occasion of his recent induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame on August 4, 2002.

Mr. Stallworth was born on July 15, 1952 in Tuscaloosa, AL. At the age of 5 he was told by doctors that he had polio, later found to be a mis-diagnosis. Mr. Stallworth overcame that hurdle to excel at a number of sports. In high school, he served as captain of his school's football team and went on to play his college ball at Alabama A&M located in Normal, Alabama just outside of Huntsville. While at Alabama A&M, Mr. Stallworth was an All-Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Conference receiver in 1972 and 1973 and became the Bulldogs' all-time leading receiver. He was also the first Alabama A&M player to be selected to participate in the Senior Bowl, college football's premiere all-star game in Mobile.

He was selected by the NFL Pittsburgh Steelers in the fourth round of the 1974 NFL draft, the 82nd player taken that year. I think a few teams around the league kicked themselves later for passing him up when they saw what he could do on the football field. After spending his first year as an understudy, he became a starter in his second season and held that job with the Steelers for the rest of his 14 year, 165-game career. The 6-2, 191 pound receiver teamed first with Lynn Swann and later with Louis Lipps to give the Steelers unusually potent pass-receiving tandems. Stallworth caught 537 passes for 8,723 yards and 63 touchdowns, all Steelers team records. Stallworth won four Super Bowl championships playing in Super Bowls IX, X, XIII, and XIV. He played in six AFC championship games and had 12 touchdowns and 17 consecutive postseason games with at least one reception. Stallworth, who scored the winning touchdown on a 73-yard reception in Super Bowl XIV, holds Super Bowl records for career average per catch—24.4 yards—and single game average, 40.33 yards, in Super Bowl XIV. He was an All-Pro in 1979 and played in four Pro-Bowls. He was voted MVP by his teammates twice: in 1979 and 1984. Terry Bradshaw and Jack Lambert are the only other players who have received that honor two times. Stallworth was named to the Steelers' All-Time Team in 1982 and the Alabama Sports Hall of Fame in 1989.

Never known for excessive celebration or as one who sought individual attention, Hall of Fame Coach Chuck Noll said of Stallworth:

John is a very special person. He is very much a team man and you need that to be successful.

Following his Hall of Fame football career, Mr. Stallworth returned to Huntsville, Alabama completed his MBA from Alabama A&M. Since then, he has achieved great success in the field of business. He is Cofounder, President, and Chief Executive Officer of Madison Research Corporation in Huntsville, Alabama. Under Mr. Stallworth's leadership, the Madison Research Corporation has emerged as one of the premier technology companies in the State of Alabama with 2001 revenues of over $60 million and a current staff of over 650 people. Some of his company's clients include: the Department of Defense, all the military services, the Department of Energy, NASA, the Defense Intelligence Agency, and a number of Fortune 500 companies. As a result of Mr. Stallworth's leadership, Washington Technology Magazine ranked Madison Research Company #11 of the nation's top 25 small, minority-owned technology companies. The company also received the 1998 Better Business Bureau of North Alabama's Torch Award for market ethics. This award was presented in recognition of Madison Research's commitment to ethics in business. Mr. Stallworth also received the 1997 Region IV Minority Small Business Person of the Year Award, presented by the Small Business Administration.

Mr. Stallworth's dedication did not end with football or business. He has given of himself to the city of Huntsville and the people of Alabama and they recently recognized his accomplishments with "John Stallworth Day in Huntsville". At the celebration Mel Blount, himself a Hall of Famer, spoke of Stallworth:

John Stallworth exemplifies what a true professional is all about, not just in football but in the business world and in life.

Mr. Stallworth has served on a number of boards including the United Way, the Museum of Aviation, the Madison County Chamber of Commerce, the U.S. Space Camp, Harris Home for Underprivileged Children, and Alabama A&M University. He has been active with the Huntsville Boys and Girls Club, the United Negro College Fund, the Children's Advocacy Center, the Rotary Club of Huntsville, the Alzheimer's Association of Greater Huntsville, and Big Brothers/Big Sisters of North Alabama to name a few. He is also chairman of the Board of Directors of the John L. Stallworth Scholarship Foundation which helps to promote the education of our youth.

I have had the opportunity to get to know John Stallworth over the years and I can say that I am proud to call him my friend. He has served on my technology advisory committee and has been an asset to my work here in the Senate. He has never hesitated to provide me with expert counsel on important issues that have come before the Senate. It is very satisfying for me to see how he has overcome adversity in his life to achieve greatness as a professional and as a human being. His accomplishments on and off the field have inspired thousands of our young people to strive for excellence and I applaud his efforts. The People of the State of Alabama are proud to call him our native son.

● Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I am honored to represent a State that has nine treaty tribes. It has become increasingly clear that nothing is more important to the tribes of South Dakota than the recognition of the obligations this Nation has to the Indian people of South Dakota as spelled out by the treaties entered into by the United States Government and the tribes of South Dakota. Especially at the urging of President John Steele of the Oglala Sioux Tribe and Chairman Andrew Grey of the Sisseton-Wahpeton Sioux Tribe, I offer this statement pertaining to this issue of critical importance to the tribes located within my home State of South Dakota. As you know, the South Dakota tribes have a proud history of providing leadership to Indian issues. I thank President Steele and Chairman Grey for helping me understand this issue. It is with the utmost respect that I share with you some of our tribes' perspective on what treaties mean to them, as follows:

It is important to note that each of the Tribes located in the State of South Dakota have entered into treaties with the Federal Government. All federally recognized Indian tribes and villages are often categorized into the same class. However, important rights were guaranteed to the South Dakota tribes by treaty, and many of these rights continue to be enforceable today. From the first treaty with the Delawares in 1787 until the end of treaty-making in 1871, hundreds of agreements were entered between the Federal Government and various bands and tribes of Indians. Provisions of the treaties differ widely, but it was common to include a guarantee of peace, a delineation of boundaries, often with a cession of specific lands from the tribe to the Federal Government, a guarantee of Indian hunting and fishing rights, often applying to the ceded land, a statement that the tribe recognized the authority or placed itself under the protection of the United States, and an agreement regarding the regulation of trade and travel of persons in the Indian territory. Treaties also commonly included agreements by each side to punish and compensate for acts of depredation by "bad men" among their own number, a clause that still can support a claim against the United States. See Tsosie v. United States, 825 F.2d 393 (Fed.Cir. 1987).

Indian treaties stand on essentially the same footing as treaties with foreign nations. Because they are made pursuant to the Constitution, they take precedence over any conflicting State laws by reason of the Supremacy Clause. U.S. Const., Art. VI, Sec. 2; Worcester v. Georgia, 31 U.S. (6 Pet.) 515 (1832). They are also the exclusive prerogative of the Federal Government. The First Trade and Intercourse Act, 1 Stat. 137 (1790), forbade the transfer of Indian lands to individuals or States except by treaty "under the authority of the United States." This provision, repeated in later Trade and Intercourse Acts, has become of tremendous importance in recent years, for several eastern States negotiated large land cessions from Indian tribes near the end of the eighteenth century. In County of Oneida v. Oneida Indian Nation, 470 U.S. 226, (1985), the Court held invalid a treaty entered in 1795 between the Oneidas and the State of New York. The treaty, which had been concluded without the participation of the Federal Government, transferred 100,000 acres of Indian lands to the state. The Court held that the tribe still had a viable claim for damages. Similar claims exist in other eastern states; in Maine, the likely invalidity of a 1795 state-tribal treaty clouded land titles covering about sixty percent of the State until legislation settled the issue. See Joint Tribal Council of Passamaquoddy Tribe v. Morton, 528 F.2d 370, 1st Cir.1975; Maine Indian Claims Settlement Act, P.L. 96-420, 94 Stat. 1785, 1980.

Not only is the treaty-making power exclusively federal, it is almost entirely presidential. While it is true that two-thirds of the Senate must concur in any treaty, the initiation of the process and the terms of negotiation are inevitably controlled by the executive branch. Indeed, there were many instances, especially in California, where executive officials negotiated treaties and acted upon them despite the failure of the Senate to ratify them. In the middle of the eighteenth century, Congress and particularly the House of Representatives grew increasingly resentful of being excluded from the direction of Indian affairs. The ultimate result was the passage in 1871 of a rider to an Indian appropriations act providing that "No Indian nation or tribe . . . shall be acknowledged or recognized as an independent nation, tribe, or power with whom the United States may contract by treaty." 25 U.S.C.A. Sec. 71. The rider also specified that existing treaty obligations were not impaired. As an attempt to limit by statute the President's constitutional treaty-making power, the rider may well be invalid, but it accomplished its purpose nonetheless by making it clear that no further treaties would be ratified. Indian treaty-making consequently ended in 1871. Thereafter formal agreements made with the tribes were either approved by both houses of Congress or were simply embodied in statutes.

Congress, in declaring that Indian tribes should no longer be acknowledged as independent political entities with whom the United States might contract by treaty, did not end the tribal organization of Indian communities. The solution to the 1871 Act was the use of "treaty substitutes that consisted of agreements that were directed and authorized by Congress. Yet, other agreements were negotiated by the Indian Office to solve particular needs or resulted from Indian initiative. Most concerned cessation of land or other modification of boundaries whereby the need to declare peace between two sovereign nations was no longer an essential goal. Although such agreements were similar to treaties, Tribal consent was no longer a prerequisite to establish a binding agreement.

Many reservations were established by Executive Order issued by the President of the United States. Although no general law existed authorizing set asides for Indian use, Congress and the public acquiesced and the Courts upheld the action. Executive orders differed from treaties wherefore they could be easily changed and a new one substituted as occasion demanded. They were neither uniform in terminology nor scope. In addition, a reservation could be established by administrative action prior to the issuance of an executive order and later sanctioned by the official action taken by the President. A 1952 Report by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs found that of the total of 42,785,935 acres of Tribal trust land only 9,471,081 acres had been established by Treaty and the remaining 23,043,439 acres of trust land were established by executive order.

Federally-recognized Indian tribes in South Dakota signed the Treaty of Fort Laramie with the desire to declare peace and thereby perpetuate a Nation-to-Nation relationship with the Federal Government. The common misperception that most Tribes have entered into treaties with the United States serves as a great injustice to Tribes who have entered into such formal and solemn agreements. In 1890 there were 162 established Tribes; 56 of those were established by executive order, 6 by executive order under the authority of Congress, 28 by acts of Congress, 15 by treaty and executive order, 5 by treaty or agreement and an act of Congress, 1 by unratified treaty and 51 by treaty or agreement. The treaty establishing the South Dakota Tribes is a contract negotiated between sovereign nations, relating to peace and alliance formally acknowledged by the signatories of the nations. The United States entered into such agreement because they desired peace and cessions of land from the Sioux Tribes, and in return they made promises that must be upheld. In conclusion, it is appropriate to recognize the special status of the treaty tribes located in South Dakota.●

GUADALUPE MOUNTAINS NATIONAL PARK

● Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President I rise today to congratulate the staff and supporters of Guadalupe Mountains National Park as we mark the 30th anniversary of this great natural treasure. Thirty years ago, the National Park Service established the Guadalupe Mountains National Park along the southeastern border of New Mexico and west Texas.

Guadalupe Mountains National Park treasures and protects desert lowlands, canyons, and a relic forest of pines and firs. It also includes one of the world's greatest examples of a non-coral fossil reef. In addition, the rich cultural history and economic opportunities it provides to the region is part of the park's significance.

Throughout my time in the Senate I have worked to protect our natural, cultural, and historical resources. The Guadalupe Mountains National Park is a prime example of the natural beauty of the Southwest. I hope this refuge will provide enjoyment for many future generations.●

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

● Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of last year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred June 20, 2001 in Albany, NY. A gay man was beaten while sitting on a bench next to a bike path. The assailants, three teens, approached the victim, used anti-gay slurs, and repeatedly punched him in the head with their fists. Investigators believe the victim was targeted because of his sexual orientation.

I believe that Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.●

WELCOMING TAIWAN'S FIRST LADY, WU SUE-JEN

● Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I want to welcome Madame Chen Wu Sue-jen, First Lady of Taiwan, to the United States.

Madame Chen is a great champion of democracy, both at home and abroad. I applaud her efforts to learn from America's experiences so that she can take those lessons back to Taiwan and its evolving democracy.

During her stay in the United States, Madame Chen has met with many of our nation's finest scholars and statesmen. She has brought with her a wonderful example of leadership, charity and devotion to the American people and continues to strive for human rights and justice at home.

I congratulate Madame Chen on her accomplishments and welcome her to the United States. We look forward to continued friendship with Madame Chen and the Taiwanese people.●

PEACEFUL END TO A TENSE BASEBALL SEASON

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, yesterday marked the end of the Major League Baseball regular season. Fans everywhere have enjoyed a season with Barry Bonds leading the league in hitting, Alex Rodriguez hitting 57 home runs, and Randy Johnson and Curt Schilling combining as perhaps the greatest pitching duo ever. It has been a tremendous season of achievement for many teams. The Minnesota Twins, a team Commissioner Selig wanted to disband last off-season, won the American League Central Division. The Oakland A's set an American League record with a 20-game winning streak and won the American League's Western Division.

Eight teams, and fans from across the country and around the world, are now gearing up for an exciting playoff season. The Twins and the A's, as well as the Anaheim Angels, the St. Louis Cardinals and the San Francisco Giants, have earned the opportunity to continue into the playoffs, to compete for a pennant and even the World Series championship along with last year's champion Arizona Diamondbacks, the New York Yankees and the Atlanta Braves. They are not the eight teams with the highest payrolls or biggest markets. They do share a few things in common: talented players having outstanding seasons, great team play and exceptional management both on and off the field.

We are fortunate that this baseball season is being played to its rightful conclusion and that crisis was avoided on August 30, when negotiators for team owners and the Major League Baseball Players Union reached a new collective bargaining agreement. Announced just two hours before another work stoppage, this agreement saved professional baseball from a disastrous screeching halt to yet another baseball season.

With this agreement baseball can now go about the business of assessing the future of the sport in Montreal. It is unfortunate that this fine city, its team with a number of outstanding players, and its fans have been left in limbo for the past year over the future of the franchise. For a large number of Vermonters, Montreal provides the closest major league venue. This franchise is the major league affiliate for our own minor league Vermont Expos. There are many dedicated Expos fans in my State. Several local towns are doing their best to show their support for keeping the Expos in Montreal. I ask that a letter recently sent by the St. Albans Town Selectboard to the Mayor of Montreal be printed in the RECORD.

MAYOR GERALD TREMBLAY,
Montreal, Quebec.

MAYOR TREMBLAY, the St. Albans Town Selectboard wishes to express our utmost hope that the city of Montreal tries everything possible to help retain the Montreal Expos.

Montreal is a beautiful international city with much diversity and many different types of cultures. We believe the Expos are a large part of the city and it serves to bring many people from Northern Vermont to your city every year.

With a downtown stadium, we believe the Expos can flourish once again and help attract many more tourists to your wonderful city. We hope that you and your government are trying everything possible to work with new-interested buyers.

If the Town of St. Albans can be of assistance please feel free to contact us.

TAYT R. BROOKS,
Vice-Chair.

Mr. President, through repeated hearings in the Judiciary Committee, Congress has tried to help the major league baseball owners and players find common ground. After the last work stoppage, we culminated almost a decade of hearings examining labor strife and other problems in major league baseball, when we enacted the Curt Flood Act in 1998. Senator HATCH was the lead sponsor of that measure, and I was his principal cosponsor. It was a bipartisan effort to clarify the law. By that effort we hoped to promote labor peace in Major League Baseball.

The principle purpose of the law was to make clear that federal antitrust laws apply to the relationships between major league team owners and players. Clarifying the law was intended to contribute to an atmosphere in which management and labor, owners and players would resolve their differences through collective bargaining rather than through work stoppages. I hope that the Curt Flood Act and our efforts over the last several years, including the hearing we held this Congress at the requests of Senators WELLSTONE, DAYTON, DORGAN and JOHNSON, contributed in some small way to creating a legal framework and atmosphere in which the parties could resolve their differences through agreement.

Fortunately, baseball has avoided its ninth work stoppage since 1972. During the previous eight work stoppages, 1,736 games were lost—including 938 that were wiped out because of the 1994–95 labor war. Clearly, another work stoppage would have had serious consequences for the professional game. I congratulate Commissioner Selig, Bob Dupuy and their team and Don Fehr and his team on reaching an accord.

Earlier this year Forbes Magazine estimated that the New York Yankees were worth $730 million. The New York Mets were the next-highest valued franchise at $482 million, followed by the Los Angeles Dodgers ($435 million) and the Boston Red Sox ($426 million). Even, the Montreal Expos franchise was valued at over $100 million. The average annual salary for major league players this season reportedly is $2.8 million.

We all hope the recent labor agreement marks a new era of cooperation in Major League Baseball. I remind both the owners and the players that the responsibility for preserving the best of our national pastime—and for restoring the faith and enthusiasm of the fans across the United States—is their opportunity in the coming months and years.

May all of the fans of professional baseball enjoy an exciting post-season, and I wish each of the playoffs teams well. •

RONALD REAGAN

• Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize one of our greatest American Presidents and one of the most important world leaders of the 20th century, the 40th President of the United States, Ronald Reagan.

One year ago, Kyung Hee University in Korea awarded President Reagan the Great World Peace Award for his commitment to world peace.

President Reagan was a steadfast and true friend of South Korea. Former Secretary of State George Shultz wrote that “To Ronald Reagan, South Korea was a stalwart ally and a valiant symbol of resistance to communism.” The Soviet downing of the Korean Airlines flight 007 in September 1983, and the terrorist bombing the next month that killed 16 South Koreans, including Foreign Minister Lee Bum Suk and 3 Cabinet ministers, only reinforced President Reagan’s determination to visit the Republic of Korea that November.

President Reagan addressed the Korean National Assembly on November 12, 1983, and said to the people of South Korea: “In these days of turmoil and testing, the American people are very thankful for such a constant and devoted ally. Today, America is grateful to you.”

President Reagan and his administration stood by South Korea during a volatile and historic period, including the North Korean terrorist bombing of Korean Airlines flight 858 in November 1987, which killed 115 South Korean citizens; the first peaceful transfer of power from President Chun Doo Hwan to President Roh Tae Woo in February 1988; and the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul.

As we see both opportunity and risk on the Korean Peninsula, including the recent ground breaking visit of Japanese Prime Minister Junichiro Koizumi to Pyongyang, the commitment of President Reagan and the United States to peace through strength on the Korean peninsula and throughout Asia and the world remains strong.

Mr. President, I ask that the statement of Ambassador Joseph Verner Reed, who last year accepted the Great World Peace Award on behalf of President Reagan, be printed in the RECORD. The statement follows.

REMARKS BY AMBASSADOR JOSEPH VERNER REED ON THE OCCASION OF THE AWARDING TO PRESIDENT RONALD W. REAGAN THE GREAT WORLD PEACE AWARD, KYUNG HEE UNIVERSITY, SEOUL, REPUBLIC OF KOREA, SEPTEMBER 27, 2001

one land,
one heart,
one hand,
one Nation,
evermore.”

Chancellor YOUNG SEEK CHOU, E.

DISTINGUISHED FRIENDS: It is a signal honor for me to be in Seoul, the noble nation of the Republic of Korea to represent President Ronald W. Reagan and to accept on the President’s behalf the Great World Peace Award from Kyung Hee University.

I have the highest regard for Chancellor Choue. I stand with great respect for the Chancellor’s extraordinary achievements in the world of education and in his untiring quest to seek peace on our troubled planet. As the godfather of the International Day of Peace his legacy is assured by leaders around the globe. As a spirited leader in education in this great country of Korea his fame and presence in modern day Korean history is already set in granite. I salute the Chancellor.

President Reagan is a most deserving leader to receive this Award. The President’s close friend and colleague Charles Z. Wick, who was a senior official in both Reagan Administrations, was to have journeyed to Seoul to accept the Award. The Day of Terror precluded that.

I stand humbly before you to accept the Award for the President. Having served in President Reagan’s two Administrations—first as envoy to the Kingdom of Morocco and then as envoy to the United Nations, I appreciate and applaud what the President did in searching for peace—the President’s vision brought stability to the globe. President Reagan defined and symbolized Peace—peace among mankind.

I stand before you as an American.

THE WAR AGAINST THE TERRORIST

September 11.—I was on my way to the United Nations to participate in the opening of the General Assembly on the very day when we should have been celebrating the International Day of Peace at the Parliament of Man.

8:48 a.m.—And the world as we knew it changed forever in a millisecond. The Day of Terror and the aftermath was, is and continues to be a shock for the world. Americans and friends around the globe are reeling from the attack on America’s sovereignty.

As a diplomat working for you at your United Nations I have a perspective on the catastrophe. I am going to place my citizen of the United States hat on with these few observations—observations that I sincerely regret to make on an occasion when we should all be in celebration of Peace.

This war will be won or lost by the American citizens, not diplomats, politicians or soldiers.

In spite of what the media is telling us, this act was not committed by a group of mentally deranged fanatics. To dismiss them as such would be among the gravest of mistakes. This attack was committed by a ferocious, intelligent and dedicated adversary. Don’t take this the wrong way. I don’t admire these men and I deplore their tactics, but I respect their capabilities. The many parallels that have been made with the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor are apropos. It was a brilliant sneak attack against a complacent America.

These men hate the United States with all of their being, and we must not underestimate the power of their moral commitment. Napoleon, perhaps the world’s greatest combination of soldier and statesman, stated “the moral is the physical as three is to one.” Our enemies are willing—better said, anxious—to give their lives for their cause.

In addition to the demonstration of great moral conviction, the recent attack demonstrated a mastery of some of the basic fundamentals of warfare namely: simplicity, security and surprise.

This was not a random act of violence, and we can expect the same sort of military competence to be displayed in the battle to come.

This war will escalate, and a good portion of it may happen right in the United States.

These men will not go easily into the night. They do not fear us. We must not fear them. In spite of our overwhelming conventional strength as the world’s only “superpower”, we are the underdog in this fight. As you listen to the carefully scripted rhetoric designed to prepare us for the march for war, please realize that America is not equipped or seriously trained for the battle ahead. To be certain, our soldiers are much better than the enemy, and we have some excellent “counter-terrorist” organizations, but they are mostly trained for hostage rescues, airfield seizures, or the occasional “body snatch.” (Which may come in handy). We will be fighting a war of annihilation, because if their early efforts are any indication, our enemies are ready and willing to die to the last man. Eradicating the enemy will be costly and time consuming. They have already deployed their forces in as many as 20 countries. They are likely living the lives of everyday citizens as “next door.” Simply put, our soldiers will be tasked with a search and destroy mission on multiple foreign landscapes, and the public must be patient and supportive until the strategy and tactics can be worked out.

For the most part, our military is still in the process of redefining itself and presided over by men and women who grew up with, and were promoted because they excelled in—“The Cold War—doctrine, strategy and tactics. This will not be linear warfare, there will be no clear “centers of gravity” to strike with high technology weapons.

America’s vast technological edge will certainly be helpful, but it will not be decisive. Perhaps the perfect metaphor for the coming battle was introduced by the terrorists themselves aboard the hijacked aircraft—this will be “a knife fight”, it will be won or lost by the ingenuity and will of citizens and soldiers, not by software or "smart bombs".

Unlike Americans, who are eager to put this messy time behind us, our adversaries have time on their side, and they will use it. They plan to flight a battle of attrition, hoping to drag the battle out until the American public loses its will to fight.

It is clear to me that the will of the American citizenry is the center of gravity the enemy has targeted. It will be the fulcrum upon which victory or defeat will turn.

The Prussian General Carl von Clausewitz, says that there is a "remarkable trinity of war" that is composed of (1) the will of the people, (2) the political leadership of the government, and (3) the chance and probability that plays out on the field of battle—in that order. Every American citizen, not just those who were unfortunate enough to be in the World Trade Center or Pentagon, was in the crosshairs of last Tuesday's attack. The will of the American people will decide this war.

If America is to win, it will be because we have what it takes to persevere through a few more hits, learn from our mistakes, improvise and adapt. If we can do that, we will eventually prevail.

New York's remarkable response to the catastrophic attack at the World Trade Center has been well documented. Above the tragic din, at the very highest level of government, have come the essential voices of sanity. In closing, may I say that after all that has just passed, all the lives taken and all the possibilities and hopes that died with them, it is natural to wonder if America's future is one of fear. Some speak of an age of terror. With the obscene toll of those lost climbing above 6,000, it is hard to speak without rage.

In Korea and on this Peninsula you have known all too well the ravages of war and occupation. It is therefore why I have taken you time today to share my observations on the world we live in and what we may have to expect. I know there are struggles ahead and dangers to face. As an American and a friend of the Republic of Korea I can say frankly that I believe America will define our times, not be defined by them. As long as the United States of America is determined and strong, this will not be the age of terror. This will be the age of liberty in America and across the world.

I know you will join me in extending our deepest sympathies to the thousands affected by the tragic events of September 11. It was a Day of Terror and the aftermath has been of unspeakable pain. Our hearts and prayers extend to all—the victims, their families and all those who hold America so dear.

Chancellor Choue—on behalf of President Ronald W. Reagan I extend great thanks to you for offering the President this Award. With humbleness, with honor and with great pride, I accept on behalf of President Ronald Reagan, this most distinguished Award—The Great World Peace Award.

Chancellor Choue, ladies and gentleman, keep faith in America—the outcome of the battle is certain.

God Bless America!

Thank you!

HONORING BIODIESEL-FUELED DRAGSTER

● Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, I wish to take this opportunity to recognize a remarkable achievement receiving worldwide attention from farmers, environmentalists, and racing fans. The Smith family of Puxico, MO, has set repeated world records with its biodiesel-fueled dragster named "Wild Thang." Wild Thang is a family affair for the Smiths. Mark Smith drives the dragster, assisted by his wife Shelia and sons Jared and Cannon. Their ingenuity has helped showcase the limitless potential of biofuels. They make me proud to be a Missourian.

Wild Thang is fueled 100 percent by biodiesel, a soybean-based renewable fuel that can help us rely on the Midwest, rather than the Middle East to meet our energy needs. The Smiths are proving in appearances across the Nation that soybean-based biodiesel can perform under the most rigorous conditions. Wild Thang produces 6,000 pounds of thrust and five g's of force against the driver's body while accelerating. In just 3.8 seconds, Wild Thang can travel ¼ of a mile.

I commend the Smith family and their network of supporters for their hard work. They are tremendous ambassadors for rural Missouri and for biodiesel. I am confident that the future will prove that the efforts of the Smith family are playing a key role in promoting of farmer-produced biofuels. These fuels have unlimited potential to revitalize rural economies while preserving the environment. I commend the Smith family's achievements, and wish them continued success as they continue their exciting endeavor.●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself and Mr. DOMENICI):

S. 3015. A bill to designate the United States courthouse at South Federal Place in Santa Fe, New Mexico, as the "Santiago E. Campos United States Courthouse"; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today with my colleague Senator DOMENICI to introduce a bill to designate the United States Courthouse in Santa Fe, NM, as the "Honorable Santiago E. Campos United States Courthouse." Santiago Campos was appointed to the Federal Bench in 1978 by President Jimmy Carter and was the first Hispanic Federal judge in New Mexico. He held the title of Chief U.S. District Judge from February 5, 1987 to December 31, 1989, and took senior status in 1992. Judge Campos had his chambers in the courthouse in Santa Fe for over 22 years. He was also the prime mover in reestablishing Federal court judicial activity in Santa Fe and in renovating the courthouse there.

Sadly, Judge Campos passed away January 20, 2001 after a long battle with cancer. Judge Campos was not only a great man, but also a dedicated and passionate public servant who spent most of his life committed to working for the people of New Mexico and our Nation. Judge Campos was an extraordinary jurist and served as a role model and mentor to others in New Mexico. He was admired and respected by all that knew him. I believe that it would be an appropriate tribute to Judge Campos to have the courthouse in Santa Fe bear his name.

S. 3016. A bill to amend the Farm Security and Rural Investment act of 2002 to require the Secretary of Agriculture to establish research, extension, and educational programs to implement biobased energy technologies, products, and economic diversification in rural areas of the United States; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mr. DASHCLE. Mr. President, today, I am introducing the Sun Grant Initiative for Renewable Energy and Biobased Products Act. The Sun Grant Initiative, or SGI, reflects a dynamic vision for the future of agriculture and rural America—a vision that can reduce our dependence on foreign energy, provide environmentally-friendly biobased alternative products, and infuse needed economic development for our nation's rural communities. SGI will build upon what our nation does best by using the power of innovation to open up new avenues of opportunity.

Specifically, SGI would identify new methods of converting various crop varieties and biobased natural resources into energy and other value-added products and provide a technology transfer of those products by:

Establishing a national consortium of land-grant universities to lead the SGI effort in coordination with the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Energy.

The mission of the consortium would be to make significant advances—not only in technological developments, but also in making sure those new technologies make it to market, therefore providing income alternatives to farmers and ranchers and providing opportunities for economic diversification to rural communities.

Increasing our nation's investment in renewable fuels and other products like pharmaceuticals, building materials including bio-plastics, textiles, lubricants, solvents, and adhesives.

Providing a framework for new investments in necessary research, and for ensuring that producers, communities, and our nation as a whole benefit from the results of that research.

I am hopeful that Senators will review the legislation and consider cosponsoring this exciting effort to help build a biobased economy that can assist our nation in so many important ways.

By Mr. LEVIN:

S. 3017. A bill to amend title 18, United States Code, to provide retroactive effect to a sentencing safety valve provision; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the Safety Valve Fairness Act. This bill addresses inequities in sentencing that were created by the passage of "safety valve" provisions contained in the 1994 crime bill.

Mandatory minimum sentencing laws allow judges little or no discretion in making sentencing determinations. An unfortunate byproduct of this lack of discretion has been the imposition of disproportionately long sentences for some relatively low-level nonviolent offenders.

Congress acknowledged this in enacting so-called "safety valve" provisions as part of the 1994 crime bill. These provisions allowed a narrow class of offenders, that is individuals with no criminal history, who committed a nonviolent crime, were not leaders or organizers of the crime, and who cooperated fully with the government, to petition the court for a review of their sentence. However, the safety valve provisions did not apply to offenders sentenced before the bill became law in 1994. As a result, individuals who have arguably been most impacted by the mandatory minimum sentencing laws that the safety valve provisions sought to remedy, have been unable to benefit from their passage. This bill would rectify this situation by making the safety valve provisions retroactive to allow first-time nonviolent drug offenders convicted prior to the passage of the 1994 crime bill to petition the court for a reconsideration of their sentence.

The existing safety valve law is not a "get out of jail free" card. It simply allows prisoners to petition the courts for reconsideration. In order to have the mandatory minimum sentenced modified, offenders must first demonstrate to the court that they meet the criteria I mentioned earlier. It is up to the court to determine whether an individual is eligible to have their sentence modified and that a modification is appropriate in each case. I believe the original safety valve provisions appropriately restored discretion to the courts and it's only fair that the law be changed so it applies equally to all individuals without regard to when they were convicted.

Making the safety valve provisions retroactive would impact only an extremely small number of cases. According to the United States Sentencing Commission, only 25 to 40 currently incarcerated federal offenders would be eligible to petition the court to reconsider their sentences. All of these individuals have served at least eight years in prison and many have served significantly longer. Mr. President, I request unanimous consent to print a letter from the Sentencing Commission in the RECORD.

The same considerations that motivated the Senate's original passage of the safety valve legislation apply to those offenders who were sentenced before 1994. Fairness dictates that all those offenders who meet the criteria set out in the safety valve law should have their cases heard and I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENTENCING COMMISSION,
Washington, DC, June 24, 2002.

Hon. CARL LEVIN,

Washington, D.C.

DEAR SENATOR LEVIN: Thank you for your June 14, 2002, letter inquiring about the number of federal offenders who would be affected if the "safety valve" provision enacted on September 13, 1994, were made retroactive. We estimate that 25 to 40 federal offenders currently incarcerated would benefit if the safety valve provision of the 1994 Crime Bill were made retroactive to cases sentenced prior to September 13, 1994.

We cannot provide a more exact figure because of a number of data limitations. In order for the safety valve to apply, the sentencing judge must find that the offender meets certain criteria defined by Congress. For example, one such criterion is whether the defendant truthfully provided to the Government all information and evidence the defendant had concerning the offense or offenses that were part of the same course of conduct or of a common scheme or plan. Because this criterion was not relevant to sentencing prior to the enactment of the safety valve provision, presentence reports for cases sentenced prior to September 13, 1994, do not necessarily address this factor. As a result, to respond to your inquiry we had to use receipt of a sentencing reduction for acceptance of responsibility as a rough proxy for this particular safety valve criterion, which may overstate or understate the actual number of offenders who would meet this criterion if the safety value were made retroactive. Proxies for certain other safety valve criterion also had to be used. In addition, the Commission does not have complete data with respect to release dates for offenders.

I hope you find this information helpful.
Sincerely,

DIANA E. MURPHY.

DIVISION D—E-GOVERNMENT ACT OF 2002 TITLE XXX—SHORT TITLE; FINDINGS AND PURPOSES

SEC. 3001. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 3002. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:

(1) The use of computers and the Internet is rapidly transforming societal interactions and the relationships among citizens, private businesses, and the Government.

(2) The Federal Government has had uneven success in applying advances in information technology to enhance governmental functions and services, achieve more efficient performance, increase access to Government information, and increase citizen participation in Government.

(3) Most Internet-based services of the Federal Government are developed and presented separately, according to the jurisdictional boundaries of an individual department or agency, rather than being integrated cooperatively according to function or topic.

(4) Internet-based Government services involving interagency cooperation are especially difficult to develop and promote, in part because of a lack of sufficient funding mechanisms to support such interagency cooperation.

(5) Electronic Government has its impact through improved Government performance and outcomes within and across agencies.

(6) Electronic Government is a critical element in the management of Government, to be implemented as part of a management framework that also addresses finance, procurement, human capital, and other challenges to improve the performance of Government.

(7) To take full advantage of the improved Government performance that can be achieved through the use of Internet-based technology requires strong leadership, better organization, improved interagency collaboration, and more focused oversight of agency compliance with statutes related to information resource management.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this division are the following:

(1) To provide effective leadership of Federal Government efforts to develop and promote electronic Government services and processes by establishing an Administrator of a new Office of Electronic Government within the Office of Management and Budget.

(2) To promote use of the Internet and other information technologies to provide increased opportunities for citizen participation in Government.

(3) To promote interagency collaboration in providing electronic Government services, where this collaboration would improve the service to citizens by integrating related functions, and in the use of internal electronic Government processes, where this collaboration would improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the processes.

(4) To improve the ability of the Government to achieve agency missions and program performance goals.

(5) To promote the use of the Internet and emerging technologies within and across Government agencies to provide citizen-centric Government information and services.

(6) To reduce costs and burdens for businesses and other Government entities.

(7) To promote better informed decision-making by policy makers.

(8) To promote access to high quality Government information and services across multiple channels.

(9) To make the Federal Government more transparent and accountable.

(10) To transform agency operations by utilizing, where appropriate, best practices from public and private sector organizations.

(11) To provide enhanced access to Government information and services in a manner consistent with laws regarding protection of personal privacy, national security, records retention, access for persons with disabilities, and other relevant laws.

BUSINESS OF THE SENATE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we have had another unproductive day. As you know, we are starting the fifth week on homeland security and the Interior appropriations bill. As I said a few weeks ago, it appears the other side does not want us to pass these two bills, and they are accomplishing what they set out to do. We are not doing the work of the country.

As the Presiding Officer knows, we have lost 2 million jobs in the last 18 months. We have had the weakest economic growth in some 50 years. Business investment has been down in each of the last six quarters, the weakest trend in 50 years. There has been a $4.5 trillion loss in stock market wealth, the sharpest decline since President Hoover—$440 billion lost in 401(k) and IRA retirement savings this past year—and the median family income was down last year, the first decrease in 12 years. The Nasdaq stock exchange was down to its lowest level in 6 years. Of course, it dropped again today. The Dow Jones dropped again today. The poverty rate is up for the first time in 10 years.

We have a lot of problems with the economy, and we are not addressing them. We are focused on Iraq. I have no problem focusing on Iraq, but we can focus on more than one issue, and we have not done that. I do not think that is good for the people of the State I represent, the people the Presiding Officer represents, or anyplace else in the country.

I hope we can change direction from what we are doing now.

A FOND FAREWELL

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I came to the Congress 10 years ago. One of the people with whom I came was BOB TORRICELLI. He and I have been friends for 20 years now. I didn't know him before he and I were elected to the House of Representatives. Today, he announced he was not going to continue in his election, and I feel terrible about it. It shows the class he has. I talked to Senator TORRICELLI this afternoon. He recognizes the Senate seat in New Jersey is more important than him. As a result of that, he knows it would be better for the institution, the Senate, that he not continue in his election contest.

For me, the memories of having served with this fine man are very significant. The work he did first as the assistant to Senator BOB KERRY's campaign committee and then as chairman of the campaign committee will be written in the history books. He did the impossible. He did what only he said could be done. Most of us did not believe he could do what he did, and that is elect all the Democrats he was responsible for because he made us competitive. He was a voracious fundraiser.

I extend my best wishes to BOB TORRICELLI. I congratulate him for the 20 years of service to the State of New Jersey and the country as a Member of the U.S. Congress. I do hope his great talents will be used. He is a fine speaker. He has a great mind. His knowledge of foreign affairs is unsurpassed.

He and I served together on that committee in the House of Representatives. I wish I had words to describe the affection I have for Senator TORRICELLI and the expression I would like to make of the courage he showed this afternoon.

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SECRECY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 107-17

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the injunction of secrecy be removed from the following treaty transmitted to the Senate on September 30, 2002, by the President of the United States:

Partial Revision of Radio Regulations (Treaty Document No. 107-17).

I further ask the treaty be considered as having been read the first time; that it be referred, with accompanying papers, to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed; and that the President's message be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The President's message is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the 1992 Partial Revision of the Radio Regulations (Geneva, 1979), with appendices, signed by the United States at Malaga-Torremolinos on March 3, 1992 (the "1992 Partial Revision"), together with declarations and reservations of the United States as contained in the Final Acts of the World Administrative Radio Conference for Dealing with Frequency Allocations in Certain Parts of the Spectrum (WARC-92). I transmit also, for the information of the Senate, the report of the Department of State concerning these revisions.

The 1992 Partial Revision, which was adopted at WARC-92, constitutes a revision of the International Telecommunication Union (ITU) Radio Regulations (Geneva, 1979), as revised, to which the United States is a party. It provides for additional spectrum for new or expanding telecommunication services, primarily terrestrial and satellite broadcasting, terrestrial and satellite mobile and space services and is consistent with the proposals and positions taken by the United States at the conference.

Subject to the U.S. declarations and reservations mentioned above, I believe that the United States should become a party to the 1992 Partial Revision, which provides additional spectrum for existing and new telecommunication services in which the United States plays a significant leadership role. It is my hope that the Senate will take early action on this matter and give its advice and consent to ratification.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

THE WHITE HOUSE, September 30, 2002.

HONORING HERBERT H. PEARCE FOR HIS DEDICATED SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to rise today to recognize an outstanding community member and my good friend, Herbert H. Pearce, as he is honored by the New Haven Colony Historical Society with the Seal of the City Award.

The Seal of the City Award is presented annually to an individual or individuals who have strived to improve the quality of life for New Haven residents and have demonstrated a commitment to the overall improvement of the community. First presented to Mayor Richard C. Lee in 1992, this award reflects the dedication which we, the New Haven community, have toward the continued growth and revitalization of our city. Today, Herb will receive this award as a token of our sincere appreciation for his contributions to our community.

A New Haven native, Herb has a long and proud history of service to our community. He has been a strong leader in business and a vocal advocate for many local non-profit organizations. The founder of H. Pearce Real Estate, Herb has directed this company since its inception nearly half a century ago, introducing a number of innovative ideas in advertising and promotion. He also served as President of the Connecticut Association of Realtors and was a member of the National Board of Realtors.

The Quinipiac Council of Boy Scouts, Yale-New Haven Hospital, American Red Cross and the New Haven Symphony are just some of the local, state and national organizations who have benefitted from his dedicated work. Past President of the Greater New Haven Chamber of Commerce and the United Way of Greater New Haven, Herb's efforts have made a real difference in the lives of many. His generosity and good will are reflected in the myriad of awards and recognitions he has received throughout his lifetime. The City of New Haven is indeed fortunate to have such a dedicated individual working on behalf of our community.

His support of and active participation with non-profit organizations has served to enhance the quality and prosperity of the City of New Haven. I am proud to join with family, friends, and community members to recognize Herbert U. Pearce, as he is honored with this very special award. His outstanding record of service is an example for other community leaders—an embodiment of the very spirit of the Seat of the City Award.

HONORING TONY HALL

HON. DEBORAH PRYCE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, rise to congratulate and celebrate the accomplishments of my fellow Ohioan and good friend, TONY HALL, as he is confirmed today as the United States Ambassador to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization in Rome, Italy.

Over the years, I had the pleasure of working with TONY on the House Rules Committee, as well as on many issues important to our state. TONY has done so much good work for the people of Ohio. However, I rise today not just to recognize his service to my state, but to emphasize the immeasurable contributions he has made to our nation and our global community.

TONY was a voice of conscience to all of us and kept us keenly aware of human rights conditions around the world. Through his far reaching travels to the Philippines, East Timor, Paraguay, North Korea, Romania, and the former Soviet Union, TONY took an interest in relieving human suffering wherever it exists. With his personal experience, TONY was able to present us with a greater understanding of the realities of the human condition.

I will always remember TONY's life-long determination to fight and alleviate hunger in our poorest neighborhoods, towns, and cities at home and around the world. For four years, TONY served as the Chairman of the Select Committee on Hunger, and he went on hunger strike to protest the abolition of the committee. He founded and chaired the Congressional Hunger Center. He sponsored innumerable legislative efforts to provide food to war-torn areas around the globe, increase assistance to low-income Americans, and fight hunger-related disease.

His devotion and tireless effort to rid the world of hunger have been widely respected and recognized. TONY received the 1992 Silver World Food Day Medal from the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, the United States Committee for UNICEF 1995 Children's Legislative Advocate Award, the U.S. AID Presidential End Hunger Award, the 1992 Oxfam America Partners Award, the Bread for the World Distinguished Service Against Hunger Award, and the NCAA Silver Anniversary Award. He has been nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize no less than three times so far in his career.

I can think of no individual with more expertise, better experience, or a bigger heart to take on this position with the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization.

TONY has a long and proud record of public service—as a member of the Peace Corps, the Ohio House of Representatives, the Ohio Senate, and finally as a member of Congress for nearly 24 years. I know that in his new role, he will be serve the United States with the same dignity and dedication with which he has served in all his prior roles.

TONY, you will be truly missed around here. We have shared our happiness for legislative victories for our state, and shared our grief when we lost our children to cancer. You may no longer be a fellow-Member of the House, but you will always be a friend.

I congratulate TONY on his life of accomplishments and wish him the best of luck in his new position. He will be greatly missed by all of us here, and his legacy of passion, determination, and perseverance will be remembered and followed here in Congress for years to come.

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATES FOR H.R. 4919

HON. JAMES V. HANSEN

OF UTAH

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I request that the attached cost estimates for H.R. 4919 be submitted for the RECORD under General Leave.

As you know, H.R. 4919 passed the House under suspension of the rules on Tuesday, September 24, 2002. At the time of passage, the Committee on Resources had not yet received a cost estimate from the Congressional Budget Office.

Washington, DC, September 24, 2002.

Hon. JAMES V. HANSEN,
*Chairman, Committee on Resources,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.*

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 4919, the Tonto and Coconino National Forests Land Exchange Act.

• This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Megan Carroll.

Sincerely,

BARRY B. ANDERSON,
(For Dan L. Crippen, Director).

H.R. 4919—Tonto and Coconino National Forests Land Exchange Act—As ordered reported by the House Committee on Resources on September 12, 2002

CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 4919 would not significantly affect the federal budget. The bill would affect direct spending (including offsetting receipts); therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply, but we estimate that any net change in direct spending would be insignificant. H.R. 4919 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would have no significant impact on the budgets of state, local, or tribal governments.

H.R. 4919 would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to convey to two private parties about 330 acres of federal lands in Arizona in exchange for roughly 760 acres of lands owned by those parties. If the value of those lands are not equal, the Secretary could make or accept cash equalization payments. The bill would authorize the Secretary to spend any receipts from such payments to acquire nonfederal lands in Arizona.

CBO estimates that enactment of H.R. 4919 would result in an insignificant increase in direct spending. According to the agency, the federal lands to be conveyed currently generate offsetting receipts (a credit against direct spending) from special use permits totaling less than $20,000 a year. Those receipts would be forgone if H.R. 4919 is enacted. Based on information from the agency, we estimate that any cash equalization payments received under H.R. 4919 would total less than $500,000. We also estimate that the agency would spend receipts from such payments in the same year they are received and that any resulting net change in direct spending would be negligible.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Megan Carroll. This estimate was approved by Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

HONORING THE 180TH ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION OF THE BRENTSVILLE HISTORIC COURTHOUSE
SEPTEMBER 26, 2002

HON. TOM DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to honor the anniversary of the historic Brentsville Courthouse in Brentsville, Virginia.

On Saturday, September 28, 2002, the first annual "Brentsville Court Day" will commemorate the national significance of this courthouse and the prominent position it held in Prince William County during the 19th Century. The day will be filled with activities designed to entertain and educate citizens of all ages on the key role this courthouse played 180 years ago.

When the Brentsville Courthouse was first in use, Washington City had been the Nation's Capital for only twenty-two years and the U.S. Constitution had been in place for a mere thirty-four. It is believed that the first Fourth of July in Prince William County was celebrated on the front steps of the Brentsville Courthouse, with a speech given by Dr. Thomas Ewell, a noted surgeon of that time.

Recapturing the patriotic spirit of the American Revolution was of growing importance at that time, as the war generation was aging and memories of their sacrifices were fading. As a result, speeches honoring these patriots became the norm. Yet research undertaken by local historians indicates the speech given by Dr. Ewell that day was extraordinary.

The research uncovered twenty-five letters spanning twenty years of correspondence between Dr. Ewell and Thomas Jefferson. In his letter responding to Dr. Ewell's July 4th oration, Jefferson recognized Ewell's July 4, 1823 speech—on the 50th anniversary of the United States—as a reflection of "the true spirit of '76."

The 180th anniversary celebration will occur, Mr. Speaker, in a town new to the 11th Congressional district of Virginia, but rich in American history.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, given the historical significance and roots of Brentsville Courthouse, we have great reason to celebrate today. Accordingly, I extend my warmest congratulations on its 180th Anniversary. The Courthouse is a national treasure and a source of pride for both my constituents and me. I call upon my colleagues to join me in applauding 180 years of excellence and American spirit.

HONORING THE BETHEL AFRICAN
ON THEIR 165 ANNIVERSARY

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to join Reverend Daylan Greer, Sr. and the congregation of the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church of New Haven, Connecticut as they celebrate their 165th Anniversary—a tremendous milestone for this New Haven institution.

Founded in Philadelphia in response to discrimination found in the Methodist Church, the first Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church, now fondly known as Mother Bethel, opened its doors in 1794. The vision of the Reverend Richard Allen, a freed slave, the African Methodist Episcopal Church was the successful development of a separate religious identity for African Americans and was the first fully independent black denomination in America. Upon his election as the first Bishop of the A.M.E., Reverend Allen set the stage for the church in New England by sending preachers to cities that had a population of one hundred or more African Americans. New Haven was one of those cities.

The year 1838 is marked with the Reverend Eli N. Hall as becoming the first pastor of the Bethel-New Haven, Connecticut. Under the direction of Reverend Hall and the many pastors who followed, the church has flourished and become an important fixture in the Dixwell community. It is the dedication and commitment of their congregation that has made this church such a great success. Our churches play a vital role in our communities—providing people with a place to turn to for comfort when they are most in need. In over a century, there have been many who have worshiped within their halls and many who have found peace and strength in the outstretched arms of the congregation.

It is with honor and the deepest thanks and appreciation for all of their good work that I rise today to extend my sincere congratulations to the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church of New Haven on their 165th Anniversary.

HON. DEBORAH PRYCE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, just over one year after the tragic events that touched the life of every American, to give solemn remembrance to that darkest of days.

As do all Americans', my heart continues to ache when I think about the countless victims and families struck by the sad and shocking attacks of September 11, 2001. But, there is also pride in my heart for our great nation and the men and women who have responded so resolutely and valiantly to this challenge to our very way of life.

The stories of tragedy, and the compelling stories of heroism, that emerged from the smoke and shattered buildings will forever be a part of our memory that day.

When I rose to the House floor one-year ago filled with so many deep and powerful emotions, I pledged that we would not let the days that followed be remembered just for our sadness and anger, but for our national resolve. As a nation, we have pulled together in so many ways to overcome the vicious attempt to break our national spirit.

We are living in historic times, and I have been so proud of the American people. New York City has been the personification of American strength and resiliency.

I have also been proud of our work here in Congress to put aside politics to provide our armed forces and law enforcement officers with the resources and tools they need to fight the war on terrorism, and to make this nation safer than it was on September 10, 2001. This war is not an issue of politics, it is an issue of patriotism.

Those responsible for last year's horrific events seriously miscalculated the strength and resolve of Americans. Our sense of security may have been temporarily unsteady, but our unity is unwavering. Our bonds of liberty, our bonds of freedom, our bonds of democracy are stronger and run deeper than any individual, than any building, than any monument. No act of violence, no sharpened razor, can sever them.

America has been committed through this last year to the difficult realities of living in the shadows of war. We have gone on living our lives because to do otherwise would be giving in to the evil behind September 11. But there should be no doubt that we will remain committed until those responsible learn the steep cost of taking innocent lives—innocent American lives—on American soil. We will never stop working to make America safe and secure.

The flame of liberty remains bright and will continue to shine upon the world, casting deep into the dark shadows of violence, intolerance, and extremism. This is a time of remembrance. But it is also a time to renew our dedication to fighting until America is free from the threat of terrorism.

SPEECH OF

HON. CLIFF STEARNS

OF FLORIDA

Wednesday, September 25, 2002

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I come to the Floor this morning to express my strong support of the Abortion Non-Discrimination Act (ANDA). I believe the rights of religious hospitals and other health care entities who may be opposed, in conscience to abortion, from ever having to perform, provide medical training or fund induced abortions should be protected.

Lynn Wardle, Professor of Law at Brigham Young University, in his testimony before the Energy and Commerce Committee this summer noted, ANDA, "The basic issue in the Abortion Non-Discrimination Act is forced abortion. A forced abortion occurs not only when a woman is forced to have an abortion she does not want, but also when a health-care provider is forced to provide or participate in an abortion against her will. The right of individuals and organizations of individuals to choose in accordance with their conscience to not have and to not participate in abortion must be protected against extremists who are trying to coerce others to provide abortion services that these extremists want but which others find morally repugnant. That is what ANDA is about." The rights of individuals to choose according to their conscience must be protected; it is the principle of freedom that we have the duty to defend.

As we face an ever-increasing rise in the cost of managed care many smaller, private, sometimes religious hospitals are forced to merge with larger hospitals in order to survive. Conscience protection would ensure that these smaller, often denominational, hospitals would not have to choose between providing services that violate their conscience and closing their doors. These hospitals were often first organized to serve the poor and needy, it is these very people that will suffer should these hospitals be forced to close. The heart of the matter is this: Health care entities, as well as individuals, deserve the right to choose.

Currently, 49 states have some kind of conscience protection for health care providers. It is time we clarify in law once and for all every doctor, hospital, and individual's right to act according to his or her conscience.

OF MAINE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. BALDACCI. Mr. Speaker, like every American, I will always remember September 11th. Today we gather to mourn our nation's losses and to demonstrate our resolve that America will not be slowed or diminished by terrorist attacks.

September 11th was an unsettling day for each of us, wherever we were. Nearly 3000 Americans lost their lives that day. All of us lost the sense of security that we as Americans had long taken for granted.

The victims came from all across the country and every walk of life. They had one thing in common—they were simply going about their business. It was a crisp, clear, sunny morning. I will never forget the contrast between the beautiful weather and the acrid smoke, dust and rubble at each of the impact sites.

Each of us shares the grief of families who lost loved ones. Each of us mourns the loss of innocence that resulted from the attacks.

Even in those darkest hours, however, America's light shined through. Millions of us joined together to donate blood and money to help the victims and their families. I visited the Pentagon to encourage rescue workers, and worked with the FAA to ensure that medical supplies would continue to arrive at Maine hospitals during the shutdown of airline service. Maine businesses and individuals donated food and supplies for workers and displaced families.

The great irony of September 11th is that the terrorists sought to drive America apart, but instead brought us together as a nation. Our people have once again shown an incredible resilience and an ability to come together in times of need. America is, indeed, one nation, under God, indivisible.

The acts of terrorism perpetrated against our country have reminded us of the precarious nature of life and of the lives of those around us. We will always carry in our hearts the memories of those who were lost on September 11th. May we also always remember the patriotism and unity that we have experienced in its aftermath.

We stand together today as Americans, united in mourning and also in our resolve to triumph over factions that would tear us apart. Together, we will ensure that hope, freedom and justice will prevail.

BARBARA ANN "BOBBIE" HOUSEHOLDER

HON. JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR.

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, Barbara Ann "Bobbie" Householder, one of my constituents, passed away last week after losing a battle with cancer.

Barbara Ann was a longtime community volunteer and was well-known in my District for her extensive community service, as well as her years of association with the Blount County Chamber of Commerce. Barbara Ann helped organize events for the Adopt-A-School program, she volunteered for Leadership Blount and the Blount County Dogwood Arts Festival and also was a great volunteer in her church.

She retired with the title of vice president of community development for the Blount County Chamber of Commerce. Although retired, she continued to work hard on her volunteer work. Up until a week before her death, she was recruiting volunteers for the United Way from her hospital bed.

Bobbie Householder was one of the finest people I have ever known and will be greatly missed by the whole community. Her efforts and achievements are an inspiration to us all, and I would like to call a newspaper article that was printed in the Maryville Daily Times about her life to the attention of my colleagues and other readers of the RECORD.

(From Staff Reports)

Longtime community volunteer Barbara Ann "Bobbie" Householder of Alcoa died Wednesday morning at Blount Memorial Hospital after a battle with cancer.

Although she was never elected to public office, Householder was one of Blount County's best-known people through her volunteer work and her years of association with the Blount County Chamber of Commerce.

"To many people in Blount County and throughout the area, Bobbie was the chamber of commerce," chamber President and CEO Fred Forster said Wednesday. "She was the core of enthusiasm in this community for many years. Many of the things we enjoy here now are the fruits of her work over the years.

"All of us in the chamber family will miss her," Forster said.

Householder, 74, was a native of Knoxville. She and Glen, her husband of 56 years, moved to Blount County in 1952 and became the parents of two sons and a daughter.

Not long after the Household's move to Blount County, she went to the Chamber of Commerce-United Way office, then located at the Maryville Municipal Building, to help out for a few days. Her volunteer work with the chamber led to a full-time job there, and she retired in 1994 after 33 years with the organization.

Early in her career with the chamber, the staff consisted of the executive director, a bookkeeper and Householder. She handled office responsibilities and coordinated chamber projects, including coordination of Blount County's United Way campaigns for 25 years.

By the end of her tenure with the chamber, Householder was vice president of the Blount County Chamber of Commerce, the Chamber Foundation and the Smoky Mountain Visitors Bureau, three of the four organizations under the Blount Partnership's administrative umbrella.

In addition to her other duties, Householder helped organize and coordinate Homecoming '86 for Blount County, the Adopt-A-School program, Leadership Blount and the Blount County Dogwood Arts Festival. She also was extremely active in the Maryville-Alcoa Jaycettes, an organization involved in initial promotion of tourism efforts.

Retirement did little to slow Householder, and her efforts to better her community were recognized when she received the 2001 Pride of Tennessee Award. The award is given to one person each year who has a history of community involvement.

Since 1994 she has served as president of the Friends of the Library, a member of the Keep Blount Beautiful Board of Directors, a member of the Blount County Bicentennial Committee, an officer with the Blount County Education Foundation, and co-chairman of the Blount County Millennium Committee.

Householder also served several years as chairman for the United Way of Blount County's Day of Caring and in other volunteer roles for United Way.

"She was a great lady with great ideas, but the best thing about Bobbie was that you could count on her," United Way Executive Director Sandra Davis said Wednesday.

"She was still recruiting United Way volunteers from her hospital bed as recently as last week," Davis said. "She was one of the best volunteers any nonprofit organization could ask for—always willing to go the extra mile."

Davis said she and Householder also shared an interest in activities through the Methodist church, not only at the local level but at the conference level as well. Her work in the church included service as communications coordinator for the Holston Conference United Methodist Women.

Householder was a member of Broadway United Methodist Church. Her pastor, the Rev. James Dougherty, will officiate at a celebration of her life at 8 p.m. Friday at the church. The family will receive friends from 6:30 p.m. until 8 p.m. Friday at the church.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by her son and daughter-in-law, Gary and Janet Householder of Louisville, KY, her son Alan Householder of Cosby, and her daughter and son-in-law, Glenda and Darrell Eastridge of Alcoa, grandchildren Cindy and Brian Householder of Louisville, Ky., and Jeff and Amy Eastridge of Alcoa. She is also survived by her sister, Grace Goode of Maryville, her brother, Richard Hubbs of Johnson City, and several nieces and nephews.

The family suggests no flowers. Memorials may be made to Broadway United Methodist Church, to the Blount County Education Foundation, to Friends of the Library or to the United Way of Blount County.

HONORING FRANCES "BITSIE" CLARK ON HER RETIREMENT FROM THE ARTS COUNCIL OF GREATER NEW HAVEN

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to join the New Haven community in extending my sincere congratulations to an outstanding member of our community and a dear friend, Frances "Bitsie" Clark, as she celebrates her retirement.

As the Executive Director of the Arts Council of Greater New Haven for the last twenty years, Bitsie has been the driving force behind the rejuvenation of New Haven's Arts community. Under her leadership, the Arts Council worked diligently, partnering with many local organizations to bring the magic of the arts to our community. During her tenure, I have had the opportunity to work with Bitsie on a variety of projects. Her commitment and dedication is unparalleled and I am in awe of her seemingly endless energy. The City of New Haven has been truly fortunate to have such an advocate.

The Arts Council has taken the lead in supporting cultural development throughout Southern Connecticut. Much of their success can be credited to Bitsie's vision of making New Haven the creative capitol of Connecticut. In the last two decades, we have witnessed the completion of the Audubon Development project, which included the building of 55 Whitney Avenue, the Audubon Court condominium and retail complex and the Audubon Parking Garage; the construction of 70 Audubon Street which houses the offices of the Arts Council, the Community Foundation, and Artspace. We have seen the creation of programs and services like Women in the Arts Month, the African Caribbean Festival Commission, the Hearts for Life Aids benefit and the New Haven Inner City Cultural Development Program and many others—all of which were possible because of the support they received from the Arts Council.

The arts in any medium, play a vital role in all of our lives. They are not only a vehicle of expression, but a means by which our culture and traditions are passed from one generation to another. Bitsie embraced this idea and through her efforts many talented artists and creative individuals were able to realize their dreams—there is no greater gift.

Bitsie's tremendous work and many contributions have left an indelible mark on our community. It is with my deepest thanks and appreciation that I stand today to join the many friends, family, and community members who have gathered today to extend my very best wishes to Frances "Bitsie" Clark as she celebrates her retirement. We will not forget the difference her generosity and commitment have made.

HON. JAMES V. HANSEN

OF UTAH

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, I request that the attached cost estimates for H.R. 5099 be submitted for the record under General Leave.

As you know, H.R. 5099 passed the House under suspension of the rules on Tuesday, September 24, 2002. At the time of passage, the Committee on Resources had not yet received a cost estimate for the Congressional Budget Office.

U.S. CONGRESS,
Washington, DC, September 24, 2002.

HON. JAMES V. HANSEN,
*Chairman, Committee on Resources,
U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.*

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: The Congressional Budget Office has prepared the enclosed cost estimate for H.R. 5099, a bill to extend the periods of authorization for the Secretary of the Interior to implement capital construction projects associated with the endangered fish recovery implementation programs for the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins.

If you wish further details on this estimate, we will be pleased to provide them. The CBO staff contact is Julie Middleton.

Sincerely,
BARRY B. ANDERSON,
(For Dan L. Crippen, Director).

CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE COST ESTIMATE

H.R. 5099: A bill to extend the periods of authorization for the Secretary of the Interior to implement capital construction projects associated with the endangered fish recovery implementation programs for the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins—As ordered reported by the House Committee on Resources on September 12, 2002

Summary.—H.R. 5099 would amend the current authorization of appropriations for implementing endangered fish recovery programs in the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins. That authority will expire in fiscal year 2005 for the Upper Colorado program and in fiscal year 2007 for the San Juan program. H.R. 5099 would extend the authorization for both programs until 2008.

CBO estimates that implementing H.R. 5099 would have no significant net impact on the federal budget. We estimate that the bill would reduce direct spending by about $5 million over the 2003–2005 period and increase it by the same amount over the 2006–2008 period, because enacting H.R. 5099 would affect direct spending, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply. H.R. 5099 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act (UMRA) and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

Estimated cost to the federal government.—The estimated budgetary impact of H.R. 5099 is shown in the following table. The costs of this legislation fall within budget function 300 (natural resources and environment).

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—

	By fiscal year, in millions of dollars—
	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Spending Under Current Law:
Estimated Authorization Level ²	6	6	6	0	0
Estimated Outlays	4	5	5	2	2
Proposed Changes:
Spending Under H.R. 5099:
Estimated Authorization Level ²	6	6	6	0	0

² The estimated authorization levels reflect the current balance of authorized funding for the Bureau of Reclamation to carry out fish recovery programs in the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins. For this estimate, CBO assumes that the remaining $18 million to be appropriated for these programs will be provided in equal increments over the next three years.

Basis of estimate.—H.R. 5099 would extend current authority to implement fish recovery programs in the Upper Colorado and San Juan River Basins until 2008. For this estimate, CBO assumes that H.R. 5099 will be enacted near the start of fiscal year 2003 and that funds already authorized for the two fish recovery programs will be appropriated over the next three years.

Direct Spending.—The net effect of H.R. 5099 on direct spending would be insignificant. Under current law, the Western Area Power Administration (WAPA) is authorized to pay for its share of the fish recovery programs by borrowing up to $17 million from the Colorado Water Conservation Board Construction Fund (a fund of the state government). To date, WAPA has borrowed $5.5 million from that fund. WAPA expects to pay for its remaining costs of $11.5 million either through borrowing from the state or by spending receipts generated from the sale of electricity. This bill would modify the expected timing of that future spending.

Under this bill, CBO estimates that WAPA's would delay spending about $5 million over fiscal years 2003 through 2005, but this near-term cash savings would be offset by an increase in spending of an equal amount over fiscal years 2006 through 2008.

Spending Subject to Appropriation.—The net effect of H.R. 5099 on spending also would be insignificant. Under current law, $46 million is authorized to be appropriated to the Bureau of Reclamation for its share of the fish recovery programs. To date, the bureau has spent $28 million on these programs. Assuming appropriation of the remaining $18 million, CBO estimates that there would be a delay in spending of about $5 million over fiscal years 2003 through 2005, but this near-term cash savings would be offset by an increase in spending of an equal amount over fiscal years 2006 through 2008.

Pay-as-you-go considerations.—The Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act sets up pay-as-you-go procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or receipts. The net changes in outlays that are subject to pay-as-you-go procedures are shown in the following table. For the purposes of enforcing pay-as-you-go procedures, only the effects through fiscal year 2006 are counted.

Changes in outlays	0	-2	0	-3	0	2	3	0	0	0	0
Changes in receipts	Not applicable

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact.—H.R. 5099 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in UMRA and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

Estimate prepared by.—Federal Costs: Julie Middleton; Impact on State, Local, and Tribal Governments: Marjorie Miller; Impact on the Private Sector: Cecil McPherson.

Estimate approved by.—Peter H. Fontaine, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.

HON. STEVEN R. ROTHMAN

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. ROTHMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has spent his entire career dedicated to improving the education of our children, particularly those in New Jersey. As a key figure at the New Jersey Education Association, Mr. John J. Biondi demonstrated the type of leadership this country needs to advance its educational system so that students receive the education they deserve and need to compete in the twenty-first century global economy.

Born and raised in New Jersey, Mr. Biondi is a product of the Garden State's school system, where as a teacher he became a part of the school system as well. For 31 years, Mr. Biondi has served as a member of the New Jersey Education Association where his colleagues described him in every positive way possible. Whether it was from the integrity and responsibility he brought to the job each and everyday or his resourcefulness and creativity that helped him meet the changing needs of his organization, John Biondi's presence at the New Jersey Education Association, helped lead that group forward as it advanced its goals of improving the education system throughout the state.

This month, John Biondi is retiring from the New Jersey Education Association. In honor of his outstanding efforts, the Educational Community of Bergen County has proclaimed the Twenty-Ninth of September to be "John Biondi Day." I join my friends in the education community in saluting this incredible man whose commitment to an improved education system has proved invaluable for countless New Jersey students.

TRIBUTE TO REVEREND WILLIAM HALL HARTER

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend my thanks to Reverend William Hall Harter for his faithful and diligent service to his community. Reverend Harter became the minister to the Presbyterian Church of Falling Spring in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania in 1977, and 25 years later, continues to be an exemplary spiritual leader. He began his career of service as a tutor and adjunct lecturer in the New Testament at the Union Theological Seminary, during which time he also served as the minister at the Margaretville and New Kingston United Presbyterian Churches in the Catskill Mountains of New York. After serving in New York for approximately 10 years, Reverend Harter, his wife Linda, and their children moved to the Chambersburg area where he continued to minister and give of his own time to contribute to the betterment of the local community.

In addition to serving as minister to the Falling Spring congregation, Reverend Harter is very involved with numerous community projects and endeavors. Like so many spiritual leaders in communities around the country, Reverend Harter had known the value of faith-based community action programs long before they became a topic of national debate. President George W. Bush is also a great supporter of faith-based programs and has praised their effectiveness because he knows how beneficial they can be to people in all regions of the country. In his own community, Reverend Harter has been instrumental in establishing programs that make a marked improvement in the lives of community residents and provide an atmosphere that allows for their spiritual and personal growth. Some examples of these programs are: Franklin County for the Homeless, Committee for Annual Holocaust Memorial Service, Community Worship Committee, Committee for Annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Service, Building Our Pride in Chambersburg, Inc., Carlisle Presbytery Camps and Conference Committee, and the Chambersburg Ministerium.

I would like to commend Reverend William Hall Harter again for his contributions and thank him for his first 25 years of service at the Presbyterian Church of Falling Spring in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. I wish him all the best as he continues to better his community through his ministry and involvement with so many worthy organizations.

TRIBUTE TO JIM LLOYD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to extend warmest 80th birthday wishes to our former colleague and good friend from West Covina, California, Jim Lloyd.

Jim was first elected to Congress in 1974 and served until 1981, representing the people of the San Gabriel Valley with distinction. And while many of us remember his tenure on the Armed Services Committee and Science and Technology Committee, where he served as Chairman of the Investigation and Oversight Subcommittee, Jim Lloyd came to the House with an already distinguished record of public service.

From 1942 to 1963, Jim served as an officer in the United States Navy, flying combat missions during World War II and, at the onset of the Cold War, completed his last duty assignment at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, during the Bay of Pigs and Cuban Missile Crisis. The flying and the excitement had only just begun.

Stateside, Jim owned and operated a small public relations and advertising firm with his beautiful wife, Jackie, in West Covina. He also caught the political bug, ably serving on the West Covina City Council from 1968 to 1974, and as Mayor from 1973 to 1974. In 1974, Jim was elected to the United States House of Representatives, where he served for three terms. And he kept on flying, receiving his helicopter rating and fixed wing license.

Since leaving the House, Jim has served as a consultant for a number of local, national, and international clients. But, most of all, he has maintained his love for flying, logging in over 14,000 hours in approximately 150 different types of aircraft ranging from the single engine Cessna Citation, to the F-18 and F-16 fighter aircraft, to the 747 jumbo jet, and also flying with the British, French, and Israeli Air Forces. Today, Jim owns a Piper Comanche and is still regularly in the air.

I am proud to call Jim Lloyd a friend, and invite my colleagues to join me, his wife Jackie, son Brian Patrick, and grandsons Cameron Scott and Seth James, in saluting him on the happy occasion of his 80th birthday and wishing him many more years in the wild blue yonder.

TRIBUTE TO TOM CASTRONOVA

HON. MICHAEL FERGUSON

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Tom Castronova, who has been operating his pharmacy, serving the community of Warren, New Jersey, since 1962.

Tonight, with the community leaders from Warren attending, Tom Castronova will be honored for 40 years of service to the community of Warren.

So I stand before you today to honor a man who embodies the American spirit. He is a small businessman, a family businessman, a man who followed his father into the pharmacy business.

He has lived and worked through many changes—changes in the healthcare industry—and changes in the growth of New Jersey. But his care and work ethic over the years has remained the same and I believe Tom has made the difference in his pharmacy's longevity.

I commend Tom Castronova and wish him all the best with the continued success of Edgewood Pharmacy.

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute and honor the outstanding accomplishments of George Thompson, who is retiring after 28 exemplary years as Scout Master of Boy Scout Troop 762 in Yorba Linda, California.

During this time, Mr. Thompson impacted the lives of more than 440 young men ages 11 to 18 years of age. The leadership, guidance and support he provided, played a great role in 47 of those young men attaining the elite rank of Eagle Scout, the highest award that a Boy Scout can receive.

Mr. Thompson has been the worthy recipient of many honors and awards for his ongoing dedication and service, among them, the Order of the Arrow, 1973; Scouter's Training Award, 1974; Scouter's Key, 1981; District Award of Merit, 1981; National Eagle Scout Association Regional Award of Excellence, 1986 and the Silver Beaver in 1988.

Mr. Thompson's commitment to scouting has earned him the admiration and respect of those who have had the privilege of working with him. I would like to congratulate him on these impressive accomplishments and sincerely thank him for the difference that he has made in his community.

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to introduce a resolution today that expresses the Sense of Congress that the United States

Postal Service should issue a stamp honoring the holiday "Diwali", also known as the Festival of Lights.

The Citizens Stamp Advisory Commission under the U.S. Postal Service currently issues many stamps with holiday themes, including Christmas, Kwanzaa, Hanukkah, and most recently, Eid. The Commission has not issued a stamp honoring Diwali, and I am hopeful that we will soon have a U.S. postal stamp commemorating this beautiful festival celebrated in India and throughout the world.

Diwali is one of the most important and colorful of the Indian festivals and is celebrated enthusiastically by Indians all over the world. It marks the beginning of the Hindu New Year and is seen as a brand new beginning for all.

Traditionally Diwali is celebrated for five days, each day having its own significance, rituals and myths. Light, in the form of candles and lamps, is a crucial part of Diwali, representing the triumph of light over darkness, goodness over evil and hope for the future.

During Diwali people light small oil lamps and place them around the home to pray for health, wealth, knowledge, peace and fame. Fireworks are an exciting part of Diwali and the celebration of the festival is also customarily accompanied by exchanging sweets.

The rich culture associated with the Diwali tradition includes observation of this holiday by Hindus, Sikhs, Christians, Jains, Muslims and Buddhists. Diwali is a time for communal gatherings and spiritual enlightenment. People from across the world make an effort to visit their family, friends and neighbors on this wonderful holiday.

The spirit of Diwali has survived political, economic and social vicissitudes throughout history, while always carrying the universal symbolism of the triumph of light, goodness, knowledge and truth. Lastly, Mr. Speaker, Diwali is an exceptionally rich and culturally significant holiday that expresses hope and for these reasons, this holiday should be commemorated as a United States postal stamp.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that Diwali is truly a marvelous holiday that deserves recognition. As the Citizen's Stamp Advisory Committee continues it plans for issuing new stamps, I hope that it will consider issuing a Diwali stamp to honor this culturally significant holiday celebrated in the United States and abroad.

OF CONGRESS, FEDERAL HALL,
NEW YORK, NEW YORK

HON. TAMMY BALDWIN

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, today we gather here in Federal Hall to honor and recognized the courage and determination of the survivors of the horrible terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. It is fitting that we do so.

It was here in Federal Hall that the new Congress of the United States first met in 1789 to govern our new Nation. It was here in New York that our founding fathers passed the laws that are the foundation for our democratic political system. From this solid foundation, our Nation has grown and prospered. Our people have excelled in science, in the humanities, in art and culture. We have grown to be a great Nation, home to a great people, with tremendous hopes and incredible dreams for the future. And it all began right here in Federal Hall.

One year ago, terrorists attacked America. Their targets were not simply the buildings they destroyed and the people they murdered. They were attacking the very ideals that define what it means to be an American. They wanted to drive us apart and make us afraid.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to say that they failed.

Faced with tragedy and destruction, the people of the United States, and particularly the people of New York, came together as one community. We gathered the emotional resources to survive and heal, and we pulled together the financial resources to rebuild. This has not been easy. It takes incredible courage to move forward after a tragedy like 9-11. But we did find that courage within ourselves.

That is why it is so fitting that we are here in New York today. One year after September 11, we are rededicating our Nation. The terrorists have not won. They have lost. Our Nation is stronger and more united. Our freedom, our courage, our determination, our unity, our diversity, our charity and our democracy are our strengths. New York has exhibited all of these strengths in abundance in the last year. And they are everywhere in America.

UNITED STATES

HON. JOHN B. LARSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to welcome Her Majesty Queen Sirikit of Thailand on her visit to the United States from October 4 to 16, 2002.

Mr. Speaker, as many of my colleagues in the House are undoubtedly aware, Thailand and the United States have been friends for almost two centuries. Our formal relations extend back 169 years to the signing of the Treaty of Amity and Commerce between our two nations on March 20, 1833, during the Presidency of Andrew Jackson, the seventh United States President, and the reign of His Majesty King Phra Nang Klao, or King Rama III, of the Chakri Dynasty. This Treaty was the first such treaty that the United States had concluded with any Asian country and it contains a pledge to establish "a perpetual peace" between our two countries. I believe that this pledge has been honored during the long and happy relationship between Thailand and the United States as we have so often fought side by side and have made countless sacrifices for one another in defense of our common values. I'd also like to remind my colleagues that His Majesty King Bhumibol Adulyadej Maharaj, Thailand's present King, was born some 75 years ago in Cambridge, Massachusetts, where His father, His Royal Highness Prince Mahidol, was studying at the Harvard Medical School.

In addition to highlighting the strong ties between the United States and Thailand, the Queen's visit to the United States will allow also us to become more aware of the many charitable organizations which She has founded and has worked so hard to make successful. One of the more important of these is the Foundation for the Promotion of Supplementary Occupations and Related Techniques, or SUPPORT. SUPPORT was founded in 1976 under Her Majesty's royal patronage and chairmanship and provides outlets for local wares and handicrafts from all regions of the Kingdom. The promotion and sales of these items provide extra income-generating occupations for farmers who find it difficult to subsist on farm incomes alone. By supporting these cottage and indigenous industries, the Foundation also help keep alive dying arts, such as traditional clay "chao wang" dolls and tie-dye "mud-mee" silk. Many of my colleagues and I are looking forward to seeing the display of products and activities of the SUPPORT Foundation at the gala dinner which will be presided over by Her Majesty at the Jefferson Building of the Library of Congress on October 9.

One of the highlights of the Queen's visit will be to preside over the premier of the Thai film The Legend of Suriyothai at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts here in Washington. This critically acclaimed film by one of Thailand's most experienced filmmakers, Prince Chatrichalem Yukol, is an epic historical motion picture that portrays one of Thailand's foremost heroines, Queen Phra Suriyothai. She fought and died to protect Her husband and king's life and Her actions united Her people to win a war against an invading army in the 14th century.

During Her visit to the United States, Queen Sirikit will also travel to Houston, Texas, where She will be presented with The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center Award for Humanitarian Service. This award will recognize Her Majesty's lifelong dedication to improving the health and well being of the people of Thailand and for international leadership in health and the environment. Former President and Mrs. George Bush will also host tea for Her Majesty during Her stay in Houston.

Mr. Speaker, given the importance of our relationship with Thailand and in recognition all Queen Sirikit has done to improve the lives of Her subjects and people throughout the world, I rise today to welcome Her Majesty to the United States and to urge my colleagues in joining me in honoring one of the world's most respected humanitarians.

HONORING MR. MICHAEL G.

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Mr. Michael G. Anzilotti for receiving the 2002 Gala & Community Leadership Award.

Mr. Anzilotti deserves praise for his long-time commitment, and the ongoing involvement of his firm, to community service. He graduated in 1971 from Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University with a Bachelor's of Science Degree in marketing. In addition he has received a Masters's Degree in Business Administration from George Mason University and is a graduate of the Stonier Graduate School of Banking.

In 1971, Mr. Anzilotti joined First Virginia Bank as a management trainee in the accounting department. In recognition of his superior work, he was promoted to Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer in 1982. The following year, he was promoted as President of Northern Operations Center, Inc. Then, in 1986, he was promoted to the post of Executive Vice President and Chief Administrative Officer. Finally, in 1995, he was promoted to his current position, President and Chief Executive Officer.

Mr. Anzilotti is currently a member of the Board of Trustees of George Mason University Foundations, Inc. He is a member of the Boards of the Fairfax County School Superintendent's Business/Industry Advisory Council (BIAC), The Virginia Business Higher Educational Council, the Northern Virginia Business Roundtable, the Northern Virginia Transportation Alliance, and is chairman of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce. He is also Past Chairman of the Fairfax County Chamber of Commerce, Past President of the Northern Virginia Community College Educational Foundation, Inc., and Past Chairman of the Arts Council of Fairfax County. All of these impressive accomplishments and titles, however, pale in comparison to his work to improve our schools, better our communities, and enhance the quality of life for all Virginians.

Mr. Anzilotti resides in Chantilly, Virginia with his wonderful wife, Jane Anzilotti. Together, they have raised two children, who are now fully grown.

Mr. Speaker, in closing, I wish the very best to Mr. Anzilotti as he is recognized for his years of service to the First Virginia Bank. He certainly has earned this recognition, and I call upon all of my colleagues to join me in applauding his remarkable service to our community.

TRIBUTE TO OLIVER W. WADDELL

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Oliver W. Waddell, a distinguished constituent, dear friend and an accomplished business leader who will receive the National Multiple Sclerosis Society's Silver Hope Award at the 2002 Dinner of Champions on October 3, 2002. The Silver Hope Award is the highest honor given by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, and Ollie is being honored for his dedication to ending the devastating effects of Multiple Sclerosis (MS).

Ollie is from Falmouth, Kentucky, and is perhaps best known from his long and very successful career with Star Bank (formerly the First National Bank of Cincinnati), which he joined in 1957 as a management trainee. In 1980, he was appointed president and director, and, in 1982, chief executive officer of Star Bank, N.A. Shortly thereafter, Ollie was made a director of Star Banc Corporation, the parent company of Star Bank, N.A. By August, 1990, Ollie was chairman, president and chief executive officer of Star Banc Corporation. Under his direction, Star Banc Corporation doubled in size, becoming a multi-state bank holding company with offices located in Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana.

Ollie was chairman, president and chief executive officer of Star Banc Corporation until May, 1993, when he stepped down as president and chief executive officer. Ollie cares deeply about his wife, Virgilee, and wanted to spend more time with her. Years before this decision, Virgilee was diagnosed with MS. Although the Waddells' battle against MS has been a very personal and private one, they recently made the decision to help others in that fight by creating the Waddell Center for Multiple Sclerosis through the University of Cincinnati. The Center will have an important role in helping to end the devastating effects of MS.

Over the years, Ollie has been very active in our community. He has served on the board of directors for several organizations which include: Star Banc Corporation; Star Bank, N.A.; Cincinnati Gas and Electric Company; Myers Y. Cooper Company; Cincinnati/Northern Kentucky International Airport; and Ohio National Life Insurance Company. He also has been active in the community as a member of the Commercial Club, Commonwealth Club, Optimists Club, Queen City Club and Rotary Club.

Ollie is very dedicated to his family. Ollie and Virgilee have been married for 47 years. They have 3 children and 6 grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, all of us in Southwestern Ohio thank Ollie for his commitment to fighting MS, and we congratulate him on receiving the prestigious Silver Hope Award. I hope my colleagues will join me in wishing Ollie and Virgilee the very best as they continue to fight their own battle against this difficult disease.

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. DAVIS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of Janett Martin, a very strong leader in the City of Tampa who devoted her life to her church and community.

Janett was a pioneer in the advancement of diversity and fairness in the workplace and will be greatly missed by family, friends, and admirers. She led the way by becoming Tampa's first African-American city clerk, as well as president of the American Society of Public Administrators. Many in the Tampa Bay area were drawn to her intelligence, hard work, and perseverance.

Janett took on as many responsibilities as possible, showing all heart and boundless determination. Even after she became ill, she still served a term as president of Tampa's League of Women Voters. Janett continued to make a difference in the African-American community by recently heading the Lincoln-Douglas Ball.

Without a doubt, Janett Martin left a unique mark throughout the entire Tampa Bay community. I would like to express my upmost admiration for the person Janett was and my condolences to the Martin family. She will be well-remembered for her integrity, strength, and commitment to her ideals.

ALOPECIA AREATA AWARENESS MONTH

HON. LYNN C. WOOLSEY

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize that September is Alopecia Areata Awareness Month, and to commend the efforts of the National Alopecia Areata Foundation in San Rafael, CA, which is part of the district that I am privileged to represent. For over twenty years this organization has dedicated itself to researching this horrible disease and providing support for those with this condition.

Very few people may know about this disease, or have even heard of it, but alopecia areata is a serious condition that can affect the entire population, although it most commonly affects children. Alopecia areata is the partial to complete loss of hair over the entire body. Without eyelashes, eyebrows, and hair on the scalp, those affected are left unprotected from the weather and other environmental conditions. While not medically disabling or life threatening, this disease causes much emotional pain. Suffers of this disease may have difficulty adjusting to the changes to their body and the differences between themselves and others around them. Children may encounter frustrating situations at school with other children who do not understand this disease.

Alopecia areata is an autoimmune disease, with no known cause and no known cure. Greater awareness and an increased investment in alopecia areata research are critical components in our quest for a cure. That is why the National Alopecia Areata Foundation plays an important role in the lives of those who suffer from this disease. This foundation provides funding for research, as well as support services and resources for the sufferers. I am so proud to represent this foundation in my district and offer them my continued support.

Mr. Speaker, especially during the month of September, as well as throughout the year, we must continue to raise awareness for alopecia areata and work to find a cure for this devastating disease.

SPEECH OF

HON. JANE HARMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 25, 2002

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Speaker, let me begin by clarifying a point of debate.

Nothing in existing law requires hospitals, clinics, or any health care provider to perform an abortion against their religious or moral beliefs.

This is true at the Federal level, and this is true in California, where additional legislation protects individual doctors and nurses from retaliation if they do not wish to participate in an abortion.

The pending legislation claims to solve a problem that does not exist, and it does so by restricting women's access to information about abortion.

Clinics and hospitals are not required to offer abortion services, but in certain circumstances, are required to refer women to a doctor who will perform an abortion. The legislation we are debating today would allow a facility to accept federal funds for family planning, but not provide a woman information on what all of her options are. It would allow them to care for a Medicaid patient who has been raped, but not inform her that Medicaid would pay for an abortion, even if she asks for this information.

Mr. Speaker, we cannot have the right to choose without full information about our choices.

I would never advocate forcing an individual or organization to act against their conscience. And nothing in current law does so. But providing information is not the same thing as providing services. Women, particularly women who have been the victim of an attack, deserve information about all their choices, no matter where they get their health care.

I strongly oppose this legislation, and urge my colleagues to vote against it.

THE WILL OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

HON. CLIFF STEARNS

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, recently, I came across an e-mail that had been circulated last year shortly after the September 11 attacks. It was sent by a former military professor in which he stated that the will of the American people is the fulcrum of this Nation's war on terrorism. He stated that the terrorists that attacked on 9-11 counted on a "soft and spoiled" America, who would eventually quit if retaliation did not result in immediate success.

What the author of the e-mail discovered was an outpouring of "what can I do" to help in response. And I believe this amply illustrates what we continue to see across the United States. What the terrorists actually demonstrated with their attacks on 9-11, was their profound ignorance of the American people and of history.

Military theorist Clausewitz, terms war as a "remarkable trinity composed of the primordial passions of the people, the rational policies of the state, and the combination of incidents in battle."

The "passions of the people" were awakened after Pearl Harbor and again were awakened after 9-11. One year later, the passions are still high. American's are aware that what we are facing is that which America's has never seen up close. We were attacked on our own soil by an organization of individuals bent—not on removing our presence from certain parts of the world—but on our utter destruction.

We are facing an enemy who despises our very existence. They are consumed by hatred for the United States, that despite its faults, is open to all people regardless race or religion. We operate under principles of freedom, the ability to pursue life, liberty and happiness. As such, our country is fighting with hope against terror and freedom against oppression. Our enemies will never know freedom, because they are imprisoned by hate; and for that they have already lost.

Former U.S. defense secretary, Caspar Weinberger, stated "The will of the American people once aroused . . . is capable of accomplishing all the things that have to be done." As long as we continue to maintain a moral high ground in this campaign against terrorism and its supporters and take the appropriate and precise responsive measures, the will of the people of this county will know no bounds.

CONDEMNING THE ATTACK ON THE SWAMINARAYAN TEMPLE IN GUJARAT

HON. EDWARD R. ROYCE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, this week, the world witnessed yet another act of senseless violence. I rise as the Co-Chairman of the Congressional Caucus on India and Indian Americans to express my condolences to the families of the victims of the brutal attack on the Swaminarayan Temple in Gujarat.

Thirty-two—including many children—died in an attack in Gandhinagar.

Last year, I lead a congressional delegation to Gujarat immediately following the devastating earthquake that hit the state. From that trip and my dealings with the Gujarati community in the U.S., I have developed a deep fondness for the people of Gujarat.

During my visit, I visited the Swaminarayan Temple and witnessed first hand the efforts of the Swaminarayan Temple to assist victims of the earthquake. Our heart goes out to all Gujaratis harmed by this violent act.

The Swaminarayan organization was established in 1907. It is a religion that preaches religious tolerance and practical spirituality. I only wish that more people in this world shared those values.

ABORTION NON-DISCRIMINATION ACT OF 2002

SPEECH OF

HON. DENNIS MOORE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 25, 2002

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this bill.

I support the right of an individual to follow his or her conscience and personally refuse to participate in abortion services, and if that was what this bill was about, I would be voting for it today.

Current law already allows health providers to refrain from providing any service to which they object. This bill goes too far by allowing insurance companies or HMOs to opt out of any reproductive services for any reason—not necessarily a religious or moral objection. It would even allow states to refuse to provide currently available abortion services to Medicaid beneficiaries who are victims of rape or incest or when the mother's life is in danger.

Most critically, this legislation bans the provision of information. People have many different opinions and beliefs about abortion. I believe women should be able to make their own decisions on this very personal matter. This bill goes too far by allowing restrictions on abortion information, counseling and referrals. Under this bill, emergency room physicians could be gagged from telling rape victims about emergency contraception. Even Title X clinics, which are funded by the federal government with the purpose of allowing women to make an informed choice from every available option, could be gagged if this legislation were to be signed into law.

Restricting information and choices is not the way to reduce the number of abortions in America. I challenge my colleagues today to reject election-year politics and work with me toward policies that prevent unintended pregnancies, improve reproductive health, and strongly encourage adoption.

TRIBUTE TO THE VICTIMS AND HEROES OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

HON. KEN CALVERT

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. CALVERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and pay tribute to the victims and heroes of September 11, 2001. Over the past year, this country has tried to come to terms with the tragedy we experienced on September 11th. Although I have written or spoken about that day many times, I have found that words often fail to describe the magnitude of that day. There are the haunting stories of loss and grief as well as stories of heroism and triumph. We learned about ourselves and our country that day and while we grieved for those we lost, we also cultivated a new sense of unity and patriotism. As a nation we renewed our belief in the American spirit and in the bravery of fellow Americans who would willingly risk their lives for a stranger. The stories of what ordinary men and women did under extraordinary circumstances continue to amaze me.

As we remember September 11, 2001, let us remember all the brave men and women who not only saved lives but saved our sense of brotherhood. Let us extend our prayers to all our brave men and women in the Armed Forces who right now are protecting our way of life and let us extend our deepest gratitude to our fire and police forces who have redefined the word 'sacrifice'.

OF MONTANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. REHBERG. Mr. Speaker, Americans should be proud of how they've handled the past 12 months. Yes, September 11th changed America forever, but not in the way the terrorists anticipated.

Those who committed this horrible act of war were intent on destroying America and our way of life—but they failed miserably. They tried to make us question our dedication to democracy but they only increased our resolve in preserving the greatest form of government the world has ever known. They tried to destroy our economy—but the whole world knows America is still open for business, for farming, for travel. And they tried to extinguish the flame of liberty and hope in our country, but they only made it burn brighter. Yes, America has changed—we're stronger than ever.

CRISIS IN THE CHILD WELFARE SYSTEM

HON. GEORGE MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, over the past few days, millions of Americans watched their television screens transfixed by the horrific images of a woman repeatedly striking her 4-year-old daughter in a department store parking lot. As a result of intense media coverage, the mother eventually turned herself in and the state took protective custody of the child.

The unsettling incident has unfortunately played itself out in the media like a tragic movie of the week. Clearly, the child needs protection to determine if this violence was a pattern of abuse, and to prevent additional incidences of mistreatment. The mother faces up to three years in prison. The 4-year-old child is left to struggle with the emotional scars caused by the mother's physical abuse and the subsequent trauma of being removed from familiar, albeit dangerously dysfunctional, family surroundings.

The assumption and hope is that the child is now under the custody and supervision of the state and has been placed in a safe home. Unfortunately for the thousands of nameless children under the protective custody of state child welfare systems, the assurance of a safe and healthy environment is inconsistent with the reality.

Nationwide more than 550,000 children are currently in foster care. Class action lawsuits and multiple newspaper reports have documented the failure of states to meet the social service needs of vulnerable children and families in crisis, despite billions of dollars in federal assistance. Across the nation, allegations of limited access to services, improper placements, inadequate staff training, poor wage compensation coupled with massive caseloads, and high staff turnover rates are commonplace.

In the following article, the Columbus Dispatch identifies an innovative program aimed at meeting the challenging objective of ensuring child safety and providing much needed support services to parents in crisis. The Family to Family program detailed in the article is based on the belief that some families in crisis can receive services in their own homes. The family preservation program links troubled families with social service agencies, community centers, and other social service networks. The goal is to coordinate service delivery in efforts to increase quality and continuity of services.

The disturbing incident of child abuse caught on videotape taps into our greatest fears about abusive parents and the harmful experiences of children, who through no fault of their own, are subjected to inadequate care. This incident highlights the need for a competent child welfare system that swiftly and effectively meets the needs of vulnerable children and families in crisis. To that effect the following article presents one possible solution to this ongoing child welfare crisis.

HELPING MEND TROUBLED FAMILIES; AGENCY'S INNOVATIVE PROGRAM KEEPS KIDS AT HOME OR NEARBY

(By Encarnacion Pyle)

Sabrina Martin's oldest daughter told a teacher last winter that her mother had whipped her so hard that she had bruises.

In the past, a social worker likely would have stopped by Martin's house, packed her two children's clothes into a garbage bag and dropped the kids off at a foster house far from their family, friends and school.

But under a new program, Franklin County Children Services worked with the single mother from South Linden to safely care for her daughters as it investigated the abuse charge.

Family to Family is built on the belief that families often can be helped to care for their children in their own homes. Or, when children need to be removed, that they should be placed with a relative, close friend or foster family in the neighborhood.

The program linked Martin, 31, to St. Stephen's Community House, where she learned new skills for being a parent and the girls learned ways to control their behavior.

During its investigation, Children Services discovered that a baby sitter had hit 8-year-old Sadie. And although Martin would rather not have been involved with the agency, she said, the Family to Family program helped her become a better parent.

"Parenting is hard, especially if you're single and your children are challenging," she said. "I used to be so hot-tempered, I'd snatch the girls up by their arms. But I've since learned better ways to discipline them and deal with stress."

Children Services and St. Stephen's introduced Family to Family in North and South Linden in 2000. It was so successful that the agency, with help from the Gladden Community House, expanded the program to Franklinton last year and hopes to start it on the Near East Side in October.

The Annie E. Casey Foundation in Baltimore created the program 10 years ago as a way of meeting the growing challenges facing the child-welfare system, said John Mattingly, the group's senior associate.

"It is not another social-services pilot, fad or new model for child-welfare work," he said. "There is no quick fix."

The number of children being cared for away from their parents' homes nationwide has more than doubled from 260,000 in the 1980s to more than 550,000 today, with only a few communities reporting a decline in the past few years.

In Ohio, 26,000 children are in foster care. In Franklin County, 2,585 children are in paid placement, which includes all temporary and permanent custody, said John Saros, executive director of Children Services.

As a result, social workers carry enormous caseloads, and children are staying longer in foster care and group homes and suffering more-difficult behavioral and physical problems.

At the same time, the number of foster families nationally has dropped, so that fewer than 50 percent of the children who need temporary placement are placed with foster families. The others go to group homes, institutions and—in some cities but not Columbus—to homeless shelters.

With Family to Family, instead of automatically taking custody of children, social workers from Children Services and the community centers meet with parents to work out ways to keep them home.

When that doesn't work, the parents are invited to sit down with foster parents and social workers to plan the child's care.

Friends, family, teachers, counselors, pastors, juvenile-justice workers and anyone else who can help the family are encouraged to attend. That's largely because children today have so many needs that parents must be experts in discipline, special education, learning disabilities, health care and mental health, said Marilyn Mehaffie, associate director of St. Stephens.

During the meetings, parents are praised for their strengths before their weaknesses are discussed.

"Before, we'd start by criticizing them for being a crack addict with no money and no food in the house," said Walter Torain, who heads Family to Family and Children Services' north region. "Now, we'd first praise them for being active in their children's schooling and caring enough to show up to the meeting."

Family to Family has placed nine children in foster homes in their Linden-area neighborhoods. Five more stayed in their own homes. Thirteen new foster homes were created in the area.

The biological parents are encouraged to tell the foster family what their children's favorite foods are, how they like their hair done, what makes them grumpy and how they can be comforted.

"That keeps birth parents from trying to find fault with the foster parents," said LaTisha Hines, Family to Family coordinator at St. Stephen's.

Children, who rarely were consulted about what is best for them, often are included in the discussion.

"It helps the kids from feeling like something is being forced on them," said Marika Sanders, a social worker at St. Stephens. "And it lessens their anxiety about divided loyalties."

To help limit the alienation that comes with removing children from their parents, friends, school and everything they know, Children Services heavily recruits foster parents in the neighborhood.

"Keeping kids in their community cuts down on the trauma," said Cordelia Foster, 53, who has cared for more than 65 children in 14 years as a foster mother.

The strategy represents an about-face to the traditional goal of child-welfare agencies of pulling children away from abusive or neglectful parents at all costs, often to the detriment of the child, said Richard Wexler, executive director of the National Coalition for Child Protection Reform in Alexandria, Va.

"It's the first good news I've heard about Franklin County Children Services in years."

Despite the benefits, the program's introduction presents formidable challenges, notably because child-welfare agencies have to accept a new way of doing business. Compounding the task are the traditionally ill feelings between foster parents and birth parents and the public's general mistrust of child-welfare agencies.

Still, Mattingly said, the program has flourished.

It began in Ohio and four other states, and now is in 32 communities nationwide. Combined, they've received nearly $75 million in grants and technical assistance from the Casey Foundation, a private organization that works to improve the lives of disadvantaged children.

"Child-welfare agencies can improve," Mattingly said, "but it's hard work."

To become more community-friendly, Children Services plans to hire more translators and workers who speak foreign languages, because of the growing diversity in the county. And it will create a committee of child-welfare workers, court officials and mental-health and addiction experts to help decide where to place children with severe behavioral and mental-health problems.

"We've had such great success with Family to Family, it's time for more-revolutionary changes," Saros said.

"I don't think we would have been able to get back on track without it," she said.

SUCCESS OF THE NAGORNO-KARABAKH PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, on August 11, 2002, the men and women of Nagorno-Karabakh exercised their right to vote—a right which we have cherished for more than two centuries and a right that we hope will spread across the world.

Democracy, Mr. Speaker, is at the core of our existence as a nation, and democracy and democratic values are what we fought for in Europe during two World Wars and are continuing to fight for in the war on terrorism.

As freedom loving people who stood up against tyranny, we have a duty to applaud and support others who aspire to the principles that resulted in the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights.

Mr. Speaker, on August 11, 2002, the people of Nagorno-Karabakh re-elected President Arkady Ghoukassian by a majority vote in what the independent election observers from the United States, Russia, Great Britain, France, Italy and Armenia called a free and transparent election.

The independent international observers, who monitored the election and the subsequent vote count, included a number of acting and former parliamentarians, former diplomats, foreign policy experts, and representatives of non-governmental human rights organizations. In addition, journalists from the United States, Russia, France, Spain, Great Britain and Armenia covered the course of the election.

The democratic presidential election of Nagorno-Karabakh, with an impressive 76 percent turnout, is evidence of the people's adherence to Western values and its determination to form a civil society and organize its affairs through a representative body based on the rule of law.

Observers from the British Helsinki Human Rights Group, which had observed 85 elections within the jurisdiction of the Organization of Security and Cooperation in Europe, stated that the election in Nagorno-Karabakh had surpassed many elections internationally recognized and approved by the OSCE and the Council of Europe, in particular, the elections in Bosnia and Kosovo.

The five independent observers from the United States, which included former high-ranking foreign service officers and foreign policy experts, were extremely impressed with the election process and the people's resolute determination to live in freedom. One observer described it as "an impressive exercise in democracy."

Mr. Speaker, last summer I visited Nagorno-Karabakh and saw first-hand the harsh yet dramatic terrain of Nagorno-Karabakh and the rugged individualism of its people and leadership. Their compassion and conviction to forge ahead despite the difficult challenges was reminiscent of our founding fathers, who when faced with the choice of liberty or tyranny fought to live in freedom.

The people of Nagorno-Karabakh continue to live with the daily reminders of the war—landmines, collapsed buildings, and the noticeable absence of fathers, brothers and sons. Yet, they have chosen to rebuild their lives and their towns so their children will live in freedom.

Congratulations President Ghoukassian and congratulations to the people of Nagorno-Karabakh for your spirit and your commitment to freedom and democracy.

TRIBUTE TO STERLING HEIGHTS FIREFIGHTERS

HON. SANDER M. LEVIN

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, September 11, 2001 stands as a stark reminder of the valor, commitment, and sacrifice exhibited every day by firefighters and law enforcement officers throughout our nation. Like so many others in public life they serve the community, but they do so at great risk of peril to their own health and lives.

I am particularly pleased and proud to rise today in recognition of the careers of two distinguished firefighters from Sterling Heights, Michigan upon their retirement and as they embark upon a new phase of their lives.

Training Chief Rick Williams began his firefighting career in 1978. Since then, he has obtained numerous certifications ranging from appointment of Chief of Training in 1996, to receiving the Fire Chief's Award in 2002 for presenting the Fire Department's annual report and conducting many public education programs.

Fire Inspector John Vought was appointed a firefighter in 1978, and has received many certifications from receiving the Outstanding Firefighter of the Year Award presented by the Sterling Heights Elks Club in 1992 to the Meritorious Unit Citation for the rescue of three children from a house fire in 1989.

We are indeed grateful for the service that these two individuals have provided the community and the citizens of Sterling Heights over their long careers. They have served the public well and have received many letters of thanks and commendation from the community in response.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in thanking these men and wishing them a healthy and happy retirement.

THE NEW YORK SPECIAL JOINT SESSION OF CONGRESS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. NADLER. Mr. President, Mr. Speaker, today marks a historic occasion for New York and for the United States Congress. This is the first Congress that has convened here in New York since the First Congress convened here to watch President Washington take the oath of office and to pass the Bill of Rights.

We join here today not as Republicans or Democrats, but as Americans. The symbolic gesture of our joint meeting is both solemn and celebratory.

It is solemn because we come here today to honor a city devastated by the most terrible single attack on American soil in our history, and the thousands of innocent people lost in that attack. As the elected Representative for the area of New York most directly impacted by the attacks of September 11, 2001, I can tell you that my constituents are grateful for the act of solidarity with New York that we show here today. I can also tell you that they are even more grateful that Congress has rallied to help this City for the past year.

Our joint meeting today is also celebratory. One year ago, a group of vicious and heartless terrorists sought to cripple this city and this country by obliterating one of its great landmarks. It was their hope that not only would thousands be rendered lifeless, but that our way of life, our democracy, would be extinguished. Today, we celebrate the life and vibrancy of our democracy that still lives—and do so in a city that remains the most lively, diverse, and mighty on the face of the earth, despite the worst efforts of those terrorists.

It is only right that we seek out those who sought to destroy us. But bombs and bullets are merely the tools we use in our self-defense. Revenge against our foes will come not through bloodshed, but through acts defiant of their goals. For the last year, despite the aim of the terrorists to kill our national spirit, this nation has proudly and defiantly displayed the flag from our homes, our cars, our community centers, and our houses of worship. Despite the murderous foes who sought to divide us, our people have joined in concerts celebrating our country and its ideals, and vigils marking our unity.

Over two centuries ago, after stumbling through a government under the Articles of Confederation, with most of the world wishing to see our demise, we gathered here, defiant of the world and its wishes, resolved to make our great democratic experiment work. It is only fitting then, that we stand here again defiant of those who wish for our demise. Let there be no doubt, today we are telling the world that New York lives on, America lives on, and her ideals live on!

MISSILE DEFENSE

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully submit the following correspondence for the RECORD regarding America's security. It conveys my objections to the Defense Science Board's recent report favoring a ground-based over a space-based missile defense system. As America stands in the face of growing threats of long-range ballistic missile attack, I consider the subject matter particularly timely.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Re "Missile Defense Choices Sought"—Defense Science Board

Congressman BOB STUMP,
Chairman, House Armed Services Committee,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR BOB: A troubling Washington Post article appeared on September 3, 2002 relaying the principal points of a study conducted by the Defense Science Board to develop the architecture for the ballistic missile defense program of the Bush administration. Evidently under pressure to focus the program on achieving a narrow set of initial capabilities to reach deployment—believing this narrow focus to be the key to building a defense in an evolutionary approach—the Defense Science Board has discredited itself in embracing the plans and architecture for a ground-based defense while ignoring the advantages and feasibility of a space-based defense.

Its program has already redefined the architecture of the Bush administration's ballistic missile defense. It is becoming less a product of the president's well-stated vision on missile defense and more a carryover of the plans and programs of the preceding Clinton administration, which focused on building a limited defense comprised of ground-based interceptors deployed at a site in Alaska. It would have the potential for adding new sites.

With the exception of deploying the interceptors in Alaska rather than near an ICBM field or Washington D.C., it is a program for building an ABM Treaty-compliant defense, notwithstanding the Bush administration's withdrawal from that treaty. In its treatment of theater missile defense programs, the Board seems to be abandoning the comprehensive architecture articulated by President Bush in deference to the planning of the Clinton administration that sought to develop a reduced number of theater missile defense programs, although it hopes to utilize Navy Theater Wide in a national missile defense.

The Defense Science Board is presenting a conclusion made after the fact. It is not a study of ballistic missile defense architectures. It is a study supporting the decision of the previous Clinton administration to build an ABM Treaty-compliant defense with the exception of deployment in Alaska.

Such a defense would be expensive and relatively ineffective. The Clinton administration was fully aware its decision to build a ground-based, as opposed to a space-based defense, would result in forfeiting the technical advantages that accrue from deployment in space.

The Clinton administration adhered to the strategy of Mutual Assured Destruction introduced in the 1960's by Defense Secretary Robert McNamara. Mutual Assured Destruction required that the United States leave itself vulnerable to destruction carried by ballistic missiles to support Clinton's decision not to deploy a national ballistic missile defense. Under Mutual Assured Destruction, the ballistic missile assumed the role of an ultimate, indestructible weapon.

As often happens to pet theories, the continued viability of Mutual Assured Destruction was viewed as more important than the defense of the American people. It became more important for ballistic missiles to remain indestructible than to build a defense against those missiles. Mutual Assured Destruction thus created and reflected a wellspring of opposition toward the development of ballistic missile defenses and advanced technology for space.

Mutual Assured Destruction reflected a belief commonly held by "arms control" advocates that slowing down the pace of technological development would slow down the arms race. As the deployment of a ballistic missile defense would involve the application and development of advanced technology, especially technology for space, it would be criticized by those who wanted to "demilitarize" space, leaving space as an open avenue for ballistic missiles to carry weapons of mass destruction.

As feared by "arms control" proponents, the deployment of a space-based ballistic missile defense called for by President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative resulted in a technological surge, which benefited the economy while providing improved defensive capabilities. The development of space spurs the development of new technology. However, rather than create a new arms race, the Strategic Defense Initiative helped end the Cold War, and provided a new focus on the development of precision weapons rather than the construction of more weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Chairman, the Defense Science Board has limited discussion as to how and why the Clinton administration decided to support the deployment of a ground-based over a space-based defense. Moreover, it has not questioned why, or even whether, the Bush administration has consented to Clinton's philosophy on this important matter.

In reaching their decision to support the deployment of a ground-based over a space-based ballistic missile defense, the Board is ignoring the revolutionary advantages provided by a space-based defense, which include global coverage, a boost-phase interception capability, and multiple opportunities for intercepting a missile.

You are aware, of course, how in 1993 the Clinton administration implemented its vision to take the stars out of "Star Wars" by terminating the Brilliant Pebbles space-based interceptor after it was fully approved as a Major Defense Acquisition Program in 1991, and cutting the Space Based Laser Program when it had reached a stage of technological maturity, enabling it to be considered for deployment. In 1995, three contractors prepared an estimate for building a Space-Based Laser defense, clearly indicating its technological feasibility.

Space-based ballistic missile defenses have been feasible for years, and would be more effective and less costly than a ground-based defense as noted by former SDIO Director Ambassador Henry F. Cooper and others. The Defense Science Board, however, focused on building a narrow set of initial capabilities in order to achieve deployment, which apparently stemmed from a belief that a ballistic missile defense must be built as an evolutionary capability, virtually precluding the use of space-based defenses.

Despite the protestations of the Clinton administration in presenting its 3+3 plan to develop and deploy a national missile defense that would be ABM Treaty-compliant requiring the use of ground-based interceptors (and which would cost only $5-6 billion, less than the Strategic Defense Initiative Organization's estimate of $22-24 billion in Fiscal Year 1991 dollars for an initial deployment of ground-based interceptors at a single site), the Congress is now facing the ramifications of having bought into narrow plans to build a ground-based interceptor defense.

To respond to issues surrounding the cost of a ground-based defense and its effectiveness, which should invite considerable comment and discussion, the Defense Science Board is presenting as a conclusion that a ground-based defense is the only feasible architecture, and requires an evolutionary approach that starts by focusing on achieving a narrow set of initial capabilities—the deployment of a very limited defense. The article noted the findings of the Defense Science Board seemingly reflected the thinking of Air Force Lt. Gen. Ronald Kadish, Director of the Missile Defense Agency. It was not an independent review, apparently.

Essentially, the findings of the Defense Science Board were pre-ordained by the limitations of the ABM Treaty, including those limitations unilaterally placed on U.S. ballistic missile defense programs by those who wished to liberally apply the treaty. The limited capability of a ground-based interceptor defense requires that its progress be measured by an evolutionary approach with a narrow set of initial capabilities.

By expressing a belief that a ballistic missile defense must be built in an evolutionary approach where a network is assembled "a piece at a time when it's ready," the feasibility of building a ballistic missile defense was redefined to accommodate the special views of General Kadish. This approach engenders itself to the construction of a single site of ground-based interceptors where additional sites could be added a piece at a time as their construction is finished. However, it is an inappropriate abridgement of design, reflecting an inherent bias against space.

To illustrate the differences in initial capability between deploying an evolutionary ground-based defense over a revolutionary space-based defense, the two defenses may be contrasted in terms of the capability that would result from an initial deployment. The ground-based approach would first call for deploying perhaps 100 interceptors at Alaska. This defense would provide limited protection against ballistic missiles coming in over the North Polar Region, presumably originating from North Korea. It may result in the defense having two shots at a missile during the mid-course phase.

In contrast, an initial deployment of 1,000 Brilliant Pebbles could provide global coverage, have a potential boost phase interception capability, and offer repeated shots at a missile—more than two in a shoot-look-shoot sequence.

In addition, a Brilliant Pebbles defense would be capable of intercepting ballistic missiles of all types—long, intermediate, and short-range down to ranges of about 300 miles—in even theater defense applications. This same capability for theater defense would not exist for the ground-based interceptor defense.

Alternatively, an initial deployment of 12 Space-Based Lasers could provide global coverage, boost-phase interception, and a powerful ability to discriminate decoys during the mid-course phase not duplicated by a ground-based defense. Similar to Brilliant Pebbles, Space-Based Lasers could engage ballistic missiles of all types, down to ranges as short as 75 miles. Either space-based defense—Brilliant Pebbles or Space-Based Lasers—would provide a broader set of initial capabilities than the initial deployment of 100 ground-based interceptors in Alaska.

I repeat the observation that Brilliant Pebbles had been fully approved as a Major Defense Acquisition Program in 1992. Progress on the Space-Based Laser was close behind but only lacked funding—the 1995 proposal for building a Space-Based Laser defense being one sign of its technological maturity. The principle should be clear. Deployment in space leverages the advantages to be obtained in an initial deployment. It provides a broader set of initial capabilities than can be achieved by a ground-based defense, and the technology has been feasible for years.

Another key principle for building an effective defense needs to be discussed—multiple layers, preferably capable of independent operation. An evolutionary ground-based defense can do very little to build a multiple layer defense. It may build larger, faster interceptors to attempt boost phase interception, and may build more sites. It lacks, however, the inherent advantages of a space-based defense where it can engage a missile during its boost phase and entire mid-course phase. In addition, a ground-based defense lacks the ability to use high-energy lasers and particle beams to intercept ballistic missiles during their boost phase, discriminate decoys, and for particle beams, internally destroy the warhead elements during the mid-course phase.

A key difference needs to be noted in how a space-based defense can use a distributed architecture for the command and control of independent, yet coordinated, layers, instead of requiring a centralized approach used in a ground-based defense. Unlike a ground-based defense, a space-based defense provides an autonomous operation capability, taking advantage of advances in computers. This type of architecture would be less susceptible to countermeasures directed against a centralized command-and-control center.

In addition, a space-based defense using Brilliant Pebbles and Space-Based Lasers would provide a complementary ability between the different layers. Space-Based Lasers could provide Brilliant Pebbles with key mid-course phase-discrimination information. Brilliant Pebbles could provide a mid-course phase defense capability. This multiple-layer defense employing different technologies and lethality mechanisms would be harder to defeat than a defense comprised solely of ground-based interceptors. Adding a layer of particle beams, which would provide a third method of lethality against ballistic missiles, would further improve the robustness of the defense.

The use of space for defense, science, or commercial purposes is an issue that transcends party line or division. It is neither Republican nor Democratic. The current ambiguity in administering the Missile Defense Agency compared to the Strategy Defense Initiative begun by President Reagan should be proof. Space is a broad and encompassing issue, including vision for its use and the development of technology. As noted, the development of space spurs the development of technology. A pro-space policy will necessarily support the development of advanced technology, benefiting the economy.

That the Missile Defense Agency and Defense Science Board are unable to advance the advantages and feasibility of a space-based defense after the United States developed Brilliant Pebbles and Space-Based Laser technology, and considering the over forty years experience the United States has had in developing space systems, is a statement of policy that opposes the use of space. The technology has existed for a decade to build a highly effective space-based ballistic missile defense. This policy of opposition to space may reflect a belief unable to comprehend a systems approach in building a multiple-layer defense, and unable to comprehend the revolutionary development of space-based defenses. Either omission is inexcusable.

The issues facing Congress over the deployment of a ballistic-missile defense transcend party line. The issue is space—whether Congress will confront the failings of the past administrations to develop space-based defenses. To remain silent is to tacitly embrace a policy of technological and military mediocrity, allowing the United States to be overtaken by China, which has made no secret of its ambitions for space, seeking to claim it as its “fourth territory” and making plans to build a space station and colonize the Moon.

Since the end of the Strategic Defense Initiative nearly a decade ago, the progress of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization and Missile Defense Agency in deploying ballistic-missile defenses has been feeble. After nearly ten years, all that has come out is an initial deployment of PAC-3, a short range interceptor. Israel has benefited more from the Strategic Defense Initiative than the United States, achieving an operational deployment of the Arrow. This sad state of affairs will continue as long as the United States has no bold vision to put a ballistic-missile defense in space.

The United States will continue to develop an inferior ballistic-missile defense as long as it chooses to ignore the inherent and invaluable benefits of space. Its ballistic-missile defense programs will continue to swirl in controversy and increase in cost. More studies and more reviews will be created to answer an endless stream of questions, and demonstrate the seeming inability of the Missile Defense Agency to decide upon a final architecture, being unable to reconcile itself to taking advantage of the benefits that accrue from deployment in space.

The Defense Science Board supports the idea of building a ship-based ballistic missile defense—Navy Theater Wide. It concluded, however, that for Navy Theater Wide to participate in a national missile defense, it needed to develop a much faster interceptor than the Standard Missile-3. This solution, however, apparently neglected how Navy Theater Wide was an application of the LEAP (Lightweight Exo-atmospheric Projectile) technology developed for Brilliant Pebbles. Navy Theater Wide was an application of technology developed for a space-based defense! Had this understanding been present, the technical solution would have been clearer and more elegant.

The Defense Science Board should have recommended a restart of Brilliant Pebbles attended with a program for developing a second-generation Brilliant Pebbles that would reflect a new emphasis on miniaturization. The miniaturization of Brilliant Pebbles made it possible for LEAP technology to be applied to the Navy for ballistic-missile defense. Going back to the origin of Navy Theater Wide—going back to space—would provide a better solution than attempting to force the Navy to accommodate a more muscular interceptor. While some degree of effort would be needed to develop a faster interceptor, miniaturization of the payload would simplify that problem, and provide spin-offs into other ballistic missile defense programs using hit-to-kill technology.

The article is grossly misleading in saying, “work on space-based systems has remained beset by technical problems and congressional opposition.” While there is little doubt about the technical challenges involved in developing space-based defenses, the article does not impart how space based ballistic missile defense technology was developed a decade ago. Both Brilliant Pebbles and the Space-Based Laser were noted for being well run programs. Space-based defenses have not been deployed because of opposition to the use of space as a matter of policy, not feasibility.

Notably, the article quoted one informed source as saying, “If you’re going to meet the guidance to get something deployed, you’re going to have to do some things faster than most of the panel thought that space-based could be done.” However, as Brilliant Pebbles was approved for acquisition a decade ago, the correct statement is that a deep prejudice exists against the use of space for ballistic-missile defense, blinding even members of the scientific community who would not come to terms with the fact that space-based defenses were ready to move into their acquisition phase a decade ago. The question of whether space-based defenses could be deployed was settled years ago. The United States simply does not wish to defend itself using the advantages of a space-based defense.

It was very shocking that the Defense Science Board remained silent, unable to oppose the apparent plans of the Missile Defense Agency to disassemble the infrastructure and technology for the Space-Based Laser. The lack of professional integrity is most disturbing. The Missile Defense Agency deserves the very harshest of criticism for its plans to eliminate two decades of technological progress in building a highly effective defense, using Space-Based Lasers. It would ordinarily be thought that scientists would support science and technology, rather than remain voiceless over a deliberate regression.

Furthermore, it is unusual the Defense Science Board was unable to offer any opinion or suggestions for the technical difficulties encountered in completing the development of the Navy Area Wide interceptor, particularly its forward-looking fuze incorporating an infrared seeker and short-range radar. Some type of technical opinion would have been in order.

In conclusion Mr. Chairman, nearly two decades ago the Strategic Defense Initiative investigated and developed a number of different technologies for ballistic-missile defense. It studied the architecture of various ballistic-missile defenses. The results favored the deployment of space-based defenses, and recommended a multiple-layer approach involving technologies such as Brilliant Pebbles and Space-Based Lasers. Other technologies showed promise, including high-energy particle beams. While a ground-based defense would form a final, reserve layer, the front lines of the defense would be found in space.

On the contrary, the advent of the Clinton administration and its opposition to space-based defenses from a Democratic-controlled Congress of ten years ago wrought a perilous error of strategy as the United States turned its back on space. Instead of pursuing a space-based defense with Brilliant Pebbles, Space-based Lasers, and developing other advanced technologies, the United States chose to chase its tail around the deployment of an expensive and relatively ineffective ground-based defense, seeking to find refuge in the ABM Treaty and Mutual Assured Destruction.

This error of strategy haunts us today. Despite the bold and perceptive public pronouncements of President Bush, others in his administration seem to be moving us in a different direction evidently beholden to the programs and policies of the Clinton administration. I am inclined to believe our president would prefer something other than a technological regression of U.S. defense capabilities, not the recommendation to turn America’s back on using the advantages of space for a ballistic-missile defense. This is unconscionable when the United States faces an increasing threat from ballistic missiles. Space, not the ground, is the battlefield of the ballistic missile. We must place our defenses in space. In so doing, we will realize the defensive advantages that accrue from space, and the development of a space-based defense will spur the development of advanced technology, benefiting the economy.

Very truly yours,

BOB SCHAFFER,
Member of Congress from Colorado.

OCAUST HERO

HON. TOM LANTOS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sorrow that I rise today, after learning of the passing of Ambassador Necdet Kent on Friday, September 20, at the age of 91. Ambassador Kent was a Turkish diplomat who served with distinction at many posts. Between 1941 and 1944, he was posted as deputy consul in the Turkish Consulate-General in Marseilles, France. He used that position to bestow Turkish citizenship on—and thereby save—dozens of Turkish Jews who were resident in France and otherwise lacked proper identity papers to prevent their deportation to Nazi gas chambers. Most of those Jews had left Turkey years earlier with no intention of returning but technically had remained Turkish citizens. Necdet Kent exploited their all-but-lapsed Turkish citizenship to stay their execution and spare their lives.

On one occasion, Kent boarded a train bound for Auschwitz after Nazi guards refused to honor his demand to allow all its passengers—some 70 Turkish Jews—to disembark. At subsequent stops, Nazi officials tried to persuade Kent to leave the train, assuring him that its passengers were not real Turks but merely Jews. Kent made clear that he and his nation made no such distinction, and he steadfastly refused to disembark without his fellow citizens. Finally, after an hour of effort to dissuade Kent from his course, the Nazi guards gave up. Apparently cautious not to create an international incident in this instance, the Nazis allowed the stunned Jews to leave the train with Kent and with their lives.

Mr. Speaker, Ambassador Kent had an uncommon love of humanity and an even more rare combination of moral and physical courage that saved many Jewish lives during the Holocaust. As a Holocaust survivor who was saved by the great Swedish diplomat Raoul Wallenberg, I am constantly mindful that I owe my life to that rare breed of humanity to which Necdet Kent belonged.

Although I never had the pleasure of meeting Ambassador Kent, I know from reading his words and seeing him in a documentary released last year that he was a very modest man—excessively so, in my opinion, since his modesty long precluded him from winning the widespread accolades that he so richly deserved. Necdet Kent was so special that he seemed unable to recognize his own extraordinary character. I recall his simple reply when asked how he summoned the courage to defy the Gestapo and board that Nazi cattle car with the 70 Turkish Jews, knowing that he could have been riding to his death. “I’m a human being,” he said. “I couldn’t do anything else.” If only that statement were as true as it is humble, far more diplomats would have had the courage to behave similarly, and countless more lives could have been saved. Happily, towards the end of his life, Ambassador Kent received far more of the tributes and praise he earned, thanks mainly to the aforementioned documentary, called “Desperate Hours.”

Mr. Speaker, Ambassador Kent leaves this world with the admiration and gratitude of humanitarians, and particularly Jews, everywhere. I avail myself of this opportunity and urge all of my colleagues to join me in expressing deep condolences to the Turkish nation, to Ambassador Kent’s family, and to the wider human family to which he belonged, on the loss of one of its noblest representatives—a man who, as a mere deputy consul, truly granted “visas for life.”

SUMMARY OF DRAFT NUCLEAR
PROVEMENT AMENDMENTS

HON. TED STRICKLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, I include the following for the RECORD.

TITLE I—WORKER COMPENSATION BENEFITS FOR DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY CONTRACTOR EMPLOYEES EXPOSED TO TOXIC SUBSTANCES

Overview: Title I revises EEOICPA Subtitle D (as currently enacted) to designate the Department of Labor (DOL) as the “willing payor” for disability claims for occupational illnesses arising out of employment at DOE facilities, instead of having the Department of Energy “assist” claimants with state worker compensation claims. DOL would evaluate disability and adjust payments accordingly. Without a uniform process to pay meritorious claims, it is possible that nearly half of the claims will have no “willing payor.” Payment would match FECA levels of benefits, and use the same administrative processes now used by the DOL for radiation, beryllium and silica claims. Payments come from EEOICPA Fund as direct spending. Eliminates MOAs with states.

Section 3662—DOE Physician’s Panels (appointed by HHS) will determine causation, based on DOE’s Final Rule issued August 14, 2002. Authorizes DOE to send meritorious claims for payment to the DOL, instead of “assisting” claimants with state worker compensation systems. Authorizes the DOE to provide medical tests and exposure assessments required by Physicians Panel, and requires outreach. Retains the portions of DOE’s final rule that will continue to apply to these amendments. DOE will adjudicate disputes of adverse Physician Panel findings.

Section 3663—Authorizes DOL to administer payment of disability and medical benefits that have been approved by DOE’s Physicians Panel. Claims administered using the FECA to set level of benefits for partial and total disability, plus medical and survivor benefits. Benefits paid from EEOICPA Fund as direct spending. DOL will adjudicate disputes over amount of payments and degree of disability, but not disputes over causation. DOL to expand list of organs or physiological systems covered in its existing FECA rules to address the DOE claims.

Section 3664—Claims administered through a non-adversarial system and no statutes of limitations (same as Subtitle B claims).

Section 3665—DOL will reduce payments by the amounts that are being paid in a state worker comp proceeding.

Section 3666—DOL cannot recover costs from a contractor, state or insurer for benefits provided in this Title.

Section 3667—Benefits are tax exempt and cannot be offset against certain other federal programs, such as housing and transitional assistance payments.

Section 3668—Benefits cannot be offset from private insurance policies.

Section 3669—Convicted felons forfeiture of benefits.

Section 3670—This will be an exclusive remedy against the U.S. government or a contractor acting in its capacity as an employer, except for intentional torts or state worker comp.

Section 3671—For claimants who have received $150,000 lump sum for an illness, and is disabled and wants to file under Subtitle D, they can receive wage replacement benefits reduced by the $150,000 lump sum. This would form a wrap around payment. However, claimants cannot collect two sets of benefits for the same illness.

Section 3672—Compensation and claims for compensation are exempt from claims of creditors.

SUBTITLE B OF THE EEOICPA (RADI-ATION, BERYLLIUM, SILICA)

Overview: This section adds two illnesses related to uranium and beryllium, provides a means for incorporating latest science for listing radiogenic cancers, provides for an ombudsman to assist claimants, authorizes expanded dates of coverage for beryllium and atomic weapons vendors where there is significant residual contamination and NIOSH has issued recommended dates of coverage, sets forth time limits on dose reconstruction and Special Exposure Cohort petitions, and makes some improvements to the NIOSH IREP Model.

Section 201—Adds chronic renal disease as a covered illness eligible for lump sum payments for workers employed for at least 1 year at a covered uranium facility. DOE will define what are “covered” facilities based on whether the facility processed, machined, forged or enriched uranium for the DOE. RECA Amendments of 2002 currently provides a lump sum benefit for uranium millers and transporters, and this would provide parity.

Section 202—Adds lung cancer to the list of covered beryllium diseases. If the lung cancer arose 5 years after first exposure to beryllium in the course of employment at a covered facility, claimant would be eligible for lump sum payment. Beryllium is classified as a known human carcinogen with respect to lung cancer.

Section 203—Sets 150 day deadline for NIOSH to complete dose reconstruction, and 180 day deadline for NIOSH to responding to Special Exposure Cohort petitions. Petitions are granted if NIOSH fails to act within 180 day time frame.

Section 204—Removes consideration of smoking in the NIOSH Compensation model, and requires NIOSH to adjust its compensation model to provide claimants with the benefit of the doubt where there is reasonable scientific evidence to justify compensation. Where there is scientific uncertainty, model is now neutral.

Section 205—Authorizes NIOSH to recommend to Congress additional radiogenic cancers for the Special Exposure Cohort. Provides for public review and comment.

Section 206—Authorizes expanded dates of coverage for beryllium vendors and atomic weapons employer facilities based on the findings of the NIOSH Report to Congress required in the FY 02 Defense Authorization Act. NIOSH is to assess whether the presence of residual contamination from DOE funded activities could have substantially contributed to or caused the cancer or beryllium disease of a covered employee.

TITLE III—RELIEF FOR CLAIMANTS UNDER ANY SUBTITLE OF THE ACT

Section 301—When medical records necessary for processing a claim cannot be produced by DOE or a DOE contractor, this section authorizes DOE or DOL to consider affidavits (coupled with other available information) in evaluating medical evidence for a claim.

Section 302—Requires that the Secretaries of DOL and DOE maintain resource centers and outreach programs relating to the availability of benefits until September 30, 2004. Or, in the case of an under-served area, such center shall be maintained until demand is exhausted.

Section 303—Authorizes an Office of Ombudsman in the DOL to assist claimants with all three agencies, and directs an annual report to DOL and Congress on recommended improvements. Appointment by Secretary of Labor.

“SAY ‘NO’ TO UNESCO” ACT

HON. RON PAUL

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the “Say ‘No’ to UNESCO” act.

This bill expresses the sense of the Congress that the United States should not rejoin the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization (UNESCO).

Mr. Speaker, in 1984 President Ronald Reagan withdrew the United States from membership in that UNESCO, citing egregious financial mis-management, blatant anti-Americanism, and UNESCO’s general anti-freedom policies. President Reagan was correct in identifying UNESCO as an organization that does not act in America’s interest, and he was correct in questioning why the United States should fund 25 percent of UNESCO’s budget for that privilege.

Those calling for the United States to rejoin UNESCO claim that the organization has undertaken fundamental reforms and therefore the United States should re-join. It is strange that in the 18 years since the United States left UNESCO, we only started reading about the beginnings of reform in the year 2000. Are we to believe that after nearly two decades of no change in UNESCO’s way of mis-managing itself things have changed so much in just two years? Is it worth spending $60 million dollars per year on an organization with such a terrible history of waste, corruption, and anti-Americanism?

Mr. Speaker, even if UNESCO has been “reforming” its finances over the past two years, its programmatic activities are still enough to cause great concern among those of us who value American sovereignty and honor our Constitution. Consider the following as a partial list of UNESCO’s ongoing highly questionable activities:

UNESCO meddles in the education affairs of its member-countries and has sought to construct a UN-based school curriculum for American schools.

UNESCO has been fully supportive of the United Nations’ Population Fund (UNFPA) in its assistance to China’s brutal coercive population control program.

UNESCO has designated 47 U.N. Biosphere Reserves in the United States covering more than 70 million acres, without Congressional consultation.

UNESCO effectively bypasses Congressional authority to manage federal lands, by establishing management policies without Congressional consultation of approval.

Mr. Speaker, I hope all members of this body will join me in opposing renewed United States membership in the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization by co-sponsoring the “Say ‘No’ to UNESCO” act.

STATEMENT ON H.R. 4727

OF ARIZONA

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Speaker, on September 5, 2002, I voted against legislation to authorize the Dam Safety and Security Act of 2002. This bill is just another example of federal involvement in projects that are already being conducted by the states. The bill inserts federal management and funding into the already operating state-level programs that ensure the safety of the nation’s dams. It establishes a review board to oversee and monitor state implementation but authorizes $35 million in government spending. Like many federal programs, the government seeks to lure states with federal tax dollars into ceding control of state responsibilities. The problem is, this program—and the additional spending—does nothing more to ensure the safety of dams than what individual states already do. State and local officials in Arizona determine what is required to ensure the safety of their dams, and what works in some instances might not work in others.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. TERRY EVERETT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. EVERETT. Mr. Speaker, due to events that required my return to my district, I was unable to vote during the following rollcall votes. Had I been present, I would have voted as indicated below.

Rollcall No. 400—On agreeing to H. Res. 525, expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the 107th Congress should complete action on and present to the President, before September 30, 2002, legislation extending and strengthening the successful 1996 welfare reforms.—“yes.”

Rollcall No. 401—On agreeing to H. Res. 524, expressing the sense of the House that Congress should complete action on the Permanent Death Tax Repeal Act of 2002.—“yes.”

Rollcall No. 402—On motion to suspend the rules and agree to H. Con. Res. 337, Recognizing the Teams and Players of the Negro Baseball Leagues for their Achievements, Dedication, Sacrifices, and Contributions to Baseball and the Nation.—“yes.”

Rollcall No. 403—On motion to Instruct Conferees on H.R. 3295, the Help America Vote Act.—“yes.”

HON. SAM GRAVES

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. GRAVES. Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001, America awoke to the worst terrorist attack in history. As we went to work and school, we left with a feeling of security that we have long since forgotten. By the time we returned to our families, our lives and our Nation had forever changed. It had been many years since America felt so insecure, so vulnerable. On that morning, the American people’s resolve was put to the ultimate test. Everything appeared to be so uncertain that day. Who would do such a thing? Why would they do it? Is there more to come? How can I protect my family?

But there was much that was certain that day. America made a promise to the victims and their families, to future generations of Americans, and to the world. The American people promised that this action would not go unanswered. We promised that this action would only strengthen and unite us, not divide us. We would respond forcefully to those who were responsible while tending to our neighbors, our fellow countrymen. Together, you and people across northwest Missouri and our Nation donated blood for the victims, and donated money for their families. Together, we prayed for those who lost so much that day. We prayed for our soldiers who stood ready—preparing to defend our freedom.

As we stop to remember that terrible day, some of the pain and fear has subsided. But our determination to defeat those who seek to terrorize us must never fall victim to the passage of time. In the coming months, the American people will face a choice: Live up to our responsibility by making tough choices and sacrifices to continue our assault on terrorism, or quit now and hope that they choose to stop planning future attacks. The American people should never have to endure such a tragedy again. As we have learned over the past year, we can do something about it. We must never mislead ourselves that we have to wait to be attacked again to continue our defense from terrorism. The more than 3,000 lives lost is all the justification we need to have to defend against a certain threat of terrorism. The United States must remain vigilant and prepared, so that we remain forever free.

SPEECH OF

HON. VITO FOSSELLA

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 24, 2002

Mr. FOSSELLA. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2982 authorizing the establishment of a memorial within the District of Columbia to the victims of terrorist attacks on the United States.

Words are generally inadequate to give voice to the loss we suffered on September 11, 2001. Today, we will try to leave a more worthy token.

The enormity of what happened last year is still difficult to grasp, especially to those of us in the communities most directly affected. The scope of the casualty list is particularly overwhelming when considering each individual that was taken from us. Each had a name, a face, a family, a personality, a legacy that they have left behind.

Susan Conlon said goodbye to her 6-year-old daughter, Kimberly, before going to work that day in the World Trade Center, in an office she had occupied for less than 3 months. Robert Curatolo was a newlywed who charged into danger as one of all too many firemen that never returned that day. Vassill Haramis was a hero of the 1993 WTC bombing, an engineer who loved working there as he had since the 1970's, not long after coming to this country.

These stories, times a thousand and more, can only begin to trace the outline of the victims of the 9–11 attacks. I offer them as examples from my own district of heartbreaking losses.

I believe what we are proposing today will be an eloquent testament to the memory of the victims. By acting today, while the memory of that terrible day has not yet faded, we can be sure future generations will have a better understanding of the victims and heroes of September 11th, and their legacies will never be forgotten.

HON. RANDY "DUKE" CUNNINGHAM

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, 1 year ago, America watched with horror as the tragic events of September 11 unfolded here in New York City and in our Nation's capital. On that morning, already aghast at the attack on the Twin Towers, I looked out the window of my Capitol Hill Office and gasped in horror as I watched the black smoke billow out of the Pentagon and drift across the clear blue sky. Still stunned, I was quickly shuffled out of my office to safety.

Today, as I reflect on the profound loss that our nation faced in midst of these horrific attacks, I am also heartened by the selfless acts of valor, community spirit, and national unity that have followed this tragedy. Despite the stresses that our nation has experienced, the ties that bind our diverse country together are stronger than ever.

Immediately following, the terrorist attacks on America, President Bush called on all of us to volunteer to bring our country together and reestablish those local ties that often times are neglected. Americans responded. The resurgence of commitment to community can be found in our homes, our houses of worship, our schools, and our workplaces. From New York City to San Diego, citizens responded with soup kitchens, mentoring programs and charitable donations of goods and time. And the proud men and women of the U.S. military responded, allowing our country to take an aggressive lead in the War on Terrorism.

I have heard many stories of outstanding individuals who have gone above and beyond this call to aid those in their community through extraordinary service and exemplary acts. While we reflect on the American spirit, it is also important to highlight the measures we have taken to prevent future attacks of this magnitude.

The attacks on our Nation were motivated by intolerant and ignorant individuals seeking to forever change our way of life and destroy this great Nation. Much like Washington, Adams and Jefferson, we must seek to ensure that this country remains an example of democracy and freedom—we must be the Patriots of today.

Since September 11, 2001, all levels and branches of government have cooperated to strengthen aviation and border security, stockpile more medicines to defend against bio-terrorism, improve information sharing among our intelligence agencies and deploy more resources and personnel to protect our critical infrastructure.

At the same time, the changing nature of threats to our nation requires a new and reformed government structure to protect against enemies who can strike at any time with any number of weapons. As I write this column, no single government agency has homeland security as its primary mission. In fact, responsibilities for homeland security are dispersed among more than one hundred different government organizations. America needs a unified homeland security structure that will improve protection against today's threats and be flexible enough to help meet the unknown threats of the future.

President Bush has proposed the most significant transformation of the U.S. government in over a half-century by consolidating the current confusing patchwork of government activities into a single department called the Department of Homeland Security. Changing threats require a new government structure to meet these threats. The Department of Homeland Security will have in one place all the resources needed to do what it takes to protect our country. The reorganization of America's homeland security infrastructure is crucial to overcoming the enormous threat we face today.

The shocking and tragic events of September 11 reminded us of the frailty of life, but today's special session demonstrates our resilience and strength in the face of adversity. Thousands went to work on September 11 thinking about their jobs, their families, their friends—most likely not contemplating their own mortality. Yet in an instant, death and injury met them face to face. We must never forget those who perished, and we honor them again today. We owe it to their memory to ensure that we never face such a loss again. Regrouping as individuals and as a nation, we must continue rebuilding, and working to defeat the terrorists by growing even stronger as a nation.

TRIBUTE TO CHIEF ELECTRICIANS
MATE (SUBMARINES) JOSEPH
AIMON MANGIN, U.S. NAVY

HON. JO ANN DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Chief Electricians Mate (Submarines) Joseph Aimon Mangin, United States Navy. Chief Petty Officer Mangin will retire on Monday, 30 September 2002 after 23 years of faithful service to our Nation.

Chief Mangin enlisted in the United States Army in September 1978. Following Army Basic Training and Army Cooking School at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, he reported to his first assignment as part of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 70th Armor in Wiesbaden, Germany in January 1979. During his European tour he participated in several field exercises including Return of Forces to Germany (REFORGER) and exercises at the Fulda Gap.

In October 1981 Chief Mangin transferred to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 14th Infantry (Golden Dragons) of the 25th Infantry Division at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. While attached to the Golden Dragons he again participated in many field exercises including Team Spirit in Korea and jungle operations in the Republic of the Philippines. During his Hawaii tour Chief Mangin was named the battalion, brigade, division, and US Army Western Command Cook of the Year for 1982. In March 1984 Chief Mangin left the Army and spent nine months with the California National Guard.

In December 1984, feeling again the call to serve he joined the United States Navy. He attended Navy Recruit Training, Basic Electricity and Electronics School and Electricians' Mate 'A' School at Great Lakes, Illinois, graduating number one in his 'A' school class. Chief Mangin then completed Nuclear Power School in Orlando, Florida, and in May of 1986 was assigned for training to Nuclear Power Training Unit Idaho Falls, Idaho, where he was the first student in his class to graduate.

In February 1987 Chief Mangin joined the crew of USS Olympia (SSN 717) in Pearl Harbor. Serving as Olympia's Command Career Counselor, his efforts helped the ship earn the Commander Pacific Submarine Force Silver Anchor award for retention excellence. During his time on Olympia, the ship completed three Western Pacific deployments and two northern deployments. After graduating first in his class at Radiological Controls Maintenance School, Chief Mangin completed a three-year tour assigned to SUBASE Pearl Harbor, qualifying as Radiological Controls Shift Supervisor and serving as Leading Petty Officer.

Chief Mangin then received orders to the USS Oklahoma City (SSN 723) in Norfolk, Virginia. Serving as Leading Petty Officer of Electrical Division, he was named Oklahoma City's Sailor of the Year for 1995. During this tour, the ship completed a Mediterranean deployment. In 1996, following his selection as a Chief Petty Officer, Chief Mangin reported to USS Norfolk (SSN 714) as Electrical Division Leading Chief Petty Officer. In 1998, Chief Mangin relieved as the Navy's Submarine Pay (SUBPAY) Monitor, working on the staff of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations at the Navy Annex in Washington DC. In this position, he oversaw all aspects of the $45M SUBPAY budget. His thorough analysis built the compelling business case that resulted in targeted increases to the SUBPAY program, the first increases in fifteen years.

Chief Mangin's contributions have had a direct and lasting impact on the overall readiness and effectiveness of Naval Submarine Force personnel. He is an individual of uncommon character and his professionalism will be sincerely missed. I am proud, Mr. Speaker, to thank him for his honorable service in the United States Navy, and to wish him fair winds and following seas as he closes his distinguished military career.

HON. BOB SCHAFFER

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a former congressional colleague and good friend, Senator Hank Brown. Senator Brown recently stepped down as president of the University of Northern Colorado, a highly regarded institution of nearly 11,000 students in Greeley, CO. As president of the University, Senator Brown combined his past experiences in law, business, politics, and higher education to truly transform the school into a leading university.

Prior to becoming president of the University of Northern Colorado, Senator Brown served a distinguished career in the Colorado State Legislature, U.S. House of Representatives and U.S. Senate. While a U.S. Senator, he also taught night classes in political science at Catholic University and public policy at the Graduate School at Georgetown University. I am honored to follow Senator Brown in serving the Fourth Congressional District of Colorado.

Mr. Speaker, the House will recall Senator Brown as a remarkable American. His service to the country was marked by his courage, thoughtful deliberative style, his cogent rhetorical manner, and his honest character. Hank Brown embodied Colorado in the Congress, and he still does today as Citizen Brown. He represented his state and country throughout the world with clarity of purpose and a noble vision steeped in the nation's glorious history. He was and remains an authentic statesman. Coloradans are forever grateful for Senator Brown's contributions to the state, for his leadership, and for his compassion. He's a Colorado hero.

Mr. Speaker, I have the great honor to know Senator Brown as a friend and mentor. From the time I served in the Colorado State Senate, while Brown was my Congressman, I relied on his counsel, wisdom and example. As his successor in Congress, I continue to be driven by his legacy in hopes that I might come close to achieving even a portion of Senator Brown's accomplishments on behalf of the people of Colorado. The agenda he established for his constituency has clearly endured. It is a plan for freedom, liberty, and prosperity that has been followed by Senator WAYNE ALLARD, and me, and I am confident that my replacement here will likewise follow in the Hank Brown tradition. He is one of the most decent people I know. Moreover, I am continually assured by our colleagues who served with him that he earned from all in this Capitol the greatest degree of respect and admiration. Hardly a day goes by without someone saying, "Bob, please say 'hello' to Hank for me."

On October 18, 2002, Senator Brown will be honored at a roast on his behalf to benefit the Hank Brown Scholarship for Excellence Endowment Fund. The Endowment Fund will assist countless students in attending the University of Northern Colorado. There is no other individual more deserving of a UNC scholarship namesake than Senator Brown.

As UNC's 11th president, Senator Brown has made a profound impact upon the University. He has helped increase admissions standards three times while maintaining the lowest faculty-to-student teaching ratio of all four-year universities in Colorado. He has reduced the budget for administration by $6 million, redirecting funding to faculty salaries. Under Senator Brown's leadership, the UNC Foundation has doubled and total assets under management rose from $43.9 million to nearly $100 million. Additionally, Senator Brown has secured more than $270 million in state support for the building and renovation of educational and residential facilities on the campus, more than what had been received in the previous 30 years.

Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, please join me in commending Senator Hank Brown for his 22 years of public service and his deep commitment to the students and faculty at the University of Northern Colorado. It is fitting and appropriate for us to honor this man upon the establishment of the Hank Brown Scholarship for Excellence Endowment Fund. For generations to come, students will benefit from the opportunities presented by its lasting legacy.

IN RECOGNITION OF FORMER CONGRESSMAN ROMAN C. PUCINSKI

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay my respects to a former colleague and dear friend, Mr. Roman Pucinski. Mr. Pucinski, who passed away in Park Ridge, Illinois, on September 25, 2002, represented the northwest side of the City of Chicago in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1959 to 1973.

Pucinski grew up in a heavily Polish neighborhood now called Wicker Park. His youth was shaped by his father's abandonment of his mother and siblings when he was a child and by the Depression in his pre-teen years when he wore government-issued shoes, said his daughter Aurelia, who followed her father into politics and served as Cook County Circuit Court clerk from 1988 to 2000.

Pucinski, articulate and never at a loss for words, had an early interest in public affairs. After graduating from Northwestern University, he worked as a reporter, as a bombardier during World War II and as a bilingual chief investigator for a special House subcommittee investigating the Katyn Forest massacre of thousands of Polish military officers by the Soviets during the war. Urged by Mayor Richard J. Daley to run for Congress, Pucinski entered the 11th District race on the Northwest Side in 1958 and won.

From the start of his tenure in Congress, Representative Pucinski ("Pooch" to colleagues and friends) mounted a one-man effort to require airlines to install crash-proof cockpit voice recorders in airplanes. Despite organized opposition from the major airlines, Pucinski kept the pressure on and in 1964 the Federal Aviation Administration issued an order requiring air carriers to install crash-proof cockpit voice recorders in their aircraft. Commonly referred to as the "black box", cockpit voice recorders are now a critical component of aviation safety. Black boxes provide vital information about the final minutes of airline disasters to accident investigators and have helped determine the cause of several plane crashes.

As a decorated Air Force pilot, Pucinski knew that a recording of last minute cockpit conversations would provide vital clues to the cause of airline tragedies. During World War II, Pucinski led his bomber group in the first B-29 bombing raid over Tokyo. He flew 48 other combat missions over Japan and was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with Clusters. From his own personal experience as a pilot, Pucinski understood that, in the last few minutes preceding an air tragedy, the cockpit crew is far too busy trying to save their passengers and aircraft to radio formal reports to a ground station. However, a crash-proof tape recorder operating automatically during flight preserves a record of everything said in the cockpit for accident investigators.

As a result of Roman Pucinski's dedicated and courageous leadership in the establishment of crash-proof tape recorders in commercial airliners, accident investigation and aviation safety have been significantly advanced in the public interest, and outstanding results for the national aviation system have been achieved.

In addition, Pucinski spent much of his career serving Chicago's Polish community. After serving in Congress, Pucinski became the longtime president of the Illinois Division of the Polish American Congress, and he led a number of rallies in Chicago protesting communism in Poland. He supported Poland's Solidarity labor movement, and over the years he helped to raise $1.5 million as the movement gained international prominence.

Roman Pucinski's legacy will surely include his lasting contribution to aviation safety and involvement with the Polish American community, but it will also show him as a caring and dedicated leader. His daughter, Aurelia, has said of him "He understood that in order to get things done for ordinary people, you had to be in the position where people would listen to you. He loved the problem solving part of it. That energized him. He loved meeting people, loved wading into a room of strangers to find out what they were thinking, identify with them, and have the chance to represent them."

Mr. Speaker, Roman Pucinski was a committed public servant and was revered and respected by nearly all who knew him. I ask our colleagues to join me in honoring the memory of such a dedicated and courageous man. He will be greatly missed.

IN HONOR OF MS. DORELLA BOND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Ms. Dorella Bond, from my district in Grand Prairie, Texas. On October 2nd of this year, Ms. Bond will celebrate her 50th anniversary working for Lockheed Martin Missiles and Fire Control and its predecessor companies.

Ms. Bond has spent a lifetime in dedicated service to her country and her company; a company that has produced many of the military's most recognizable defensive systems: systems that have helped guarantee our freedoms as Americans.

Dorella first joined the Lockheed Martin family at the tender age of 18 when, on October 2nd, 1952, she was hired by one of Lockheed Martin's predecessor companies, Temco Electronics and Missiles. Although she began her career as a Production Control Clerk-B, she quickly progressed up company ranks. Today, five decades later, Dorella serves as Executive Assistant to the Senior Vice President of Finance/Chief Financial Officer. She still displays the same tenacity and dedication that she brought to the job 50 years ago, and shows no sign of stopping.

Ms. Bond truly exemplifies the positive work ethic, experience, loyalty and dependability so important to our society today. She is truly a shining example of the American worker.

Mr. Speaker, fifty years of service with an organization is a tremendous accomplishment, one deserving special recognition and honor for a job well done. I know my colleagues will join me today in honoring a remarkable woman and a tireless worker. We salute Dorella Bond today, and wish her continued success and accomplishment at Lockheed Martin.

THE IDENTITY THEFT CONSUMER
NOTIFICATION ACT

HON. GERALD D. KLECZKA

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, earlier this year, hundreds of residents of Wisconsin were notified by their bank that their personal information had been stolen by a former employee. While the bank in question had discovered last September that this crime had taken place, it did not notify the victims until May 2002. This is completely unacceptable. In the meantime, those whose information had been compromised had no idea that their information had been sold to a ring of identity thieves, who were using the financial records to make purchases in the victims' names, including high-end automobiles.

Today I am introducing legislation that requires financial institutions to notify their customers if their personal information was compromised as the result of employee misconduct or computer hacking.

Identity theft is a crime that occurs with increasing frequency every year, and I have introduced legislation in three consecutive sessions of Congress to increase the level of control and protection one has over personal information. However, the fact that there is nothing in law that compels financial institutions to notify customers that their personal information had been compromised in a timely fashion requires action.

My legislation, the Identity Theft Consumer Notification Act, would require banks to promptly notify consumers that their information has been stolen, assist the customer in repairing his or her credit history, and cover any false charges made by the criminal for which the victim is liable. In addition, the annual privacy notices that financial institutions are required to send customers on an annual basis would have to include a description of the bank's obligation to provide notification and assistance in cases in which a customer's information had been compromised.

There could be instances in which identity theft is discovered, but law enforcement would be in a better position to successfully complete an investigation and collect sufficient evidence for conviction if notification was delayed. As a result, this bill allows for a temporary waiver of disclosure if law enforcement makes such a request.

Lastly, a recent Supreme Court case limited the statute of limitations for victims seeking compensation from credit reporting agencies that allowed criminals to falsely use another person's financial information. The Court held that the statute of limitations begins to toll at the time a crime was committed, rather than at the time that the crime was eventually discovered by the victim. Given that the statute of limitation is only two years, it makes sense to start the clock at the time the crime is discovered, rather than at the time the crime was committed, since that abbreviated time limit leaves some victims unable to seek compensation.

This legislation will give consumers confidence that institutions that they have entrusted with their finances have an obligation to notify them if their personal information has been compromised, and that the institution will help them through the often arduous task of correcting their credit history and compensate them for losses incurred as a result of this crime. I urge my colleagues to cosponsor this legislation and give consumers the notification they need to minimize and quickly repair the damage done by identity thieves.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE 75TH AN-NIVERSARY OF THE ROSEMEAD
CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, on the eve of the 75th Anniversary of the Rosemead Chamber of Commerce, I rise to recognize the accomplishments of the Chamber.

Since its inception in 1924 as the Rosemead Improvement Association, the organization that three years after became the Rosemead Chamber of Commerce, has been instrumental in the operations and well-being of the city. Throughout the years, it has maintained its pivotal role as the commercial heart of the city by bringing together community leaders, business owners and residents.

The Rosemead Chamber of Commerce has made numerous contributions to Rosemead. It has fostered economic growth by giving the business sector a voice and has helped to establish a tradition of community events. At one point, these included Fiesta Day and the Halloween Parade; now they are composed of trade shows, career fairs and "One on One Breakfasts." The Rosemead Chamber of Commerce has changed according to the changing needs and interests of the city of Rosemead.

Over the past 75 years, the Chamber has played an important role in the lives of Rosemead residents and fostered a strong economy for the City. I wish the Chamber continued success and growth and I ask you to join me in honoring it for 75 years of service to the community.

HON. F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, JR.

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, since September 11 last year, life has taken on new meaning. For some, that day's devastation has caused them to become more cynical, changed by the events of a few hours. For others, each day since then has taken on more significance as they realize what it means when people say that you can't take life for granted. But for all of us the memories of that day will live on as we not only think about the people trapped in the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and the hijacked planes, but also remember their loved ones who were helpless to prevent the tragedies. As the President said in his Proclamation earlier this month, "Those whom we lost last September 11 will forever hold a cherished place in our hearts and in the history of our Nation. As we mark the first anniversary of that tragic day, we remember their sacrifice; and we commit ourselves to honoring their memory by pursuing peace and justice in the world and security at home."

Life after September 11 took on new meaning for Members of Congress too. We reacted by changing our priorities, and began work on legislation to respond to that day's horrific events. One of the first things we did was pass legislation authorizing the use of US Armed Forces against those responsible for the attacks. Since then, Congress passed numerous bills dealing with the issues that are widely believed to have allowed the events of September 11 to occur. They include: beefing up airline security, strengthening our nation's borders, restructuring the Immigration and Naturalization Service to make it a more efficient agency, and passing the USA-PATRIOT Act to improve information sharing between law enforcement and intelligence communities. More recently, the House passed legislation to create a new Department of Homeland Security in response to the President's request for a flexible, effective department, with the singular mission of protecting our nation. Financially, we have also passed legislation to provide the Department of Defense with the resources it will need to address the new challenges that now face the nation.

Many individuals have changed their priorities too. Spurred by our war against terrorism and the words of the Administration and various law enforcement agencies, Americans have begun to pay more attention to their surroundings and take better note of anything that appears out of the ordinary, particularly in airports. Gone are the days when one can easily dismiss peoples' errant behavior as harmless without making sure that that is indeed the case. As we learned, the price to pay for not checking can be awfully steep.

After the events of that Tuesday, life in Washington, DC, returned to some semblance of normalcy. Yet, a year later, although life appears the same as always, there is a difference. Certainly, Congress is in the middle of its appropriations debates as it almost always is this time of year and Republicans and Democrats are embroiled in many of the same arguments that typically take place around now. However, there is now an underlying sense of wariness in our nation that didn't exist before—but this is good, as it shows that we have learned from last year's events. It demonstrates that as a nation, we have grown. September 11, 2001, wasn't that long ago, but America has lived a lifetime in the year since that fateful day.

SENSE OF THE HOUSE THAT CONGRESS SHOULD COMPLETE ACTION ON H.R. 3762, PENSION SECURITY ACT OF 2002

SPEECH OF

HON. HOWARD P. "BUCK" McKEON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, September 25, 2002

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Res. 540. Nine months ago, in his State of the Union address, President George W. Bush called on Congress to enact important new safe guards to protect the pensions of millions of American workers. The President called on Congress to move quickly to enact these important reforms so that people who work hard and save for their retirement can have full confidence in our retirement system.

In response to the President's call, the House immediately took action by holding several hearings on the Enron Collapse and its implications for worker retirement security. We heard from hard working Americans who loyally dedicated decades of their lives to Enron only to loose their life savings when the company collapsed due to corporate corruption. These employees were not millionaire corporate big wigs. They were regular blue collar Americans who had diligently saved their hard earned money for their family's future. We also heard from honest employers who voluntarily offer their employees retirement plans.

But the House did more than just hold hearings.

In April, this body took action and passed a comprehensive Pension Security Act, which would give workers unprecedented new retirement security protections and new freedoms to diversify their retirement savings. The Senate has yet to pass a Pension Security Act.

In April, the House took action and passed a Pension Security Act that would have helped protect thousands of Enron and WorldCom employees who lost their savings during the collapses due to corporate corruption. The Senate has yet to pass a Pension Security Act.

Mr. Speaker, more than 160 days ago, the House took action to help hard working Americans protect their retirement savings. The Senate has not yet acted on the Pension Security Act.

The President is waiting for a bill to sign to protect worker retirement savings from corporate meltdowns.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support this resolution because I strongly support the Pension Security Act passed by the House several months ago.

HONORING REAR ADMIRAL LESLIE GEHRES

HON. THOMAS M. REYNOLDS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute a true American hero, Rear Admiral Leslie Gehres. A native of Newark in Wayne County, NY, Admiral Gehres will be honored by his community on Saturday, September 28, 2002, with the dedication of a monument and memorial exhibit at Newark High School.

Admiral Gehres began his long and illustrious naval career in 1914, when he enlisted in the New York Naval Militia. When his unit was mobilized on April 6, 1917, he was appointed to the rank of Ensign, and transferred to the regular navy, following completion of course work at the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD.

Admiral Gehres became a Naval Aviator in 1927, and in 1929, trained and led "The Nine High Hats," a prestigious nine-plane acrobatic formation. After the outbreak of World War II, Admiral Gehres took command of Patrol Wing 4, and took part in the Aleutians campaigns. He was responsible for driving the Japanese out of the Aleutian Islands, and for his services, earned the Army's Distinguished Flying Cross, Legion of Merit, and Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit. He was also promoted to the rank of Commodore for his leadership in that campaign, a rank that had not been given to any naval officer since Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry in the War of 1812.

Following his detachment from Fleet Wing 4, Admiral Gehres assumed command of the USS Franklin in the Pacific Fleet. Admiral Gehres courageously and successfully returned that carrier to the Naval Yard in New York, after being heavily damaged by Japanese forces. "For extraordinary heroism as Commanding Officer of the USS Franklin," read his Navy citation, Admiral Gehres was awarded the Navy Cross.

Mr. Speaker, Rear Admiral Leslie Edward Gehres passed away in 1975, but he will now be forever remembered for his heroism and selfless service to his nation, and I ask that this Congress join me in saluting his proud career, and in thanking the community of Newark, NY, for honoring his leadership and valor.

"LESS WE FORGET" THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

HON. BRIAN D. KERNS

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to your attention an event which took place in my district over the weekend.

This past Saturday in Crawfordsville, Indiana, I had the honor of participating in a special ceremony to unveil the monument of the Ten Commandments. This monument was dedicated with over 100 of my fellow Hoosiers present. The monument depicts two tablets containing the Ten Commandments with the words "Less We Forget" inscribed between them.

La'Shar Sharp, who is only 15 years old is one of the key persons who made this memorial possible. Ms. Sharp had the vision of creating the Ten Commandments monument to be dedicated on the September 11 one year anniversary. The Hoosiers in my district took this young girl's vision and helped make it a reality. The Church of Pentecostals of Crawfordsville donated the land and the Allen Monument Company built the memorial. A number of other individuals, businesses and organizations contributed to the dedication ceremony, including the Veterans of Foreign Wars whose members raised the flag and served as the ceremonial color guard.

There is no better symbol for this memorial than the Ten Commandments. As you may know Mr. Speaker, the Crawfordsville Courthouse was forced to take down its depiction of the Ten Commandments. For this reason, I introduced legislation (H. Con. Res. 315), which would prominently display the Ten Commandments in both the House and Senate Chambers. It is important in these times of uncertainty that we be steadfast in our beliefs and mindful of our roots.

I would like to leave you with the words of Crawfordsville's Mayor Steve Gentry, who at the dedication said "The stone may, in time, grow old and become hard to read, but the words and their meaning will carry on for future generations. May God bless the effort that gave us this ceremony, and may God bless the United States of America."

FIRE PLAN ON FEDERAL LANDS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the efforts of the Colorado General Assembly concerning implementation of the National Fire Plan on Federal Lands. Joint Resolution 02S-1007, passed by Colorado's General Assembly, endorses H.R. 3948, introduced in the 107th U.S. Congress to improve the implementation of the National Fire Plan by reducing fuels in the wildland-urban interface. I commend the work of the Colorado General Assembly for its strong efforts toward the betterment of the state and well being of the people of the great state of Colorado.

I hereby submit for the RECORD Colorado House Joint Resolution 02S-1007.

CONCERNING IMPLEMENTATION OF THE NATIONAL FIRE PLAN ON FEDERAL LANDS.

Whereas, The paramount goal of fire policy must be the protection of lives, homes, and communities; and

Whereas, 1.3 million Colorado citizens reside in and adjacent to forested areas with high wildfire risk, and the number living in a wildland-urban interface is predicted to increase substantially over the next few decades; and

Whereas, Hundreds of firefighters heroically put their lives at risk to save homes and communities every year; and

Whereas, Intermixed land ownership means that Colorado's federal land managers, state land managers, and private property owners are all responsible for the protection of private property; and

Whereas, USDA Forest Service research has demonstrated that fuel reduction within the immediate vicinity of structures and the use of nonflammable building material are the most important factors determining whether a structure will survive a wildfire; and

Whereas, A primary purpose of the National Fire Plan is to reduce the risk of severe wildfires in the wildland-urban interface where communities adjoin or intermingle with federal public lands, and substantial funds have been appropriated to the federal land management agencies to implement this plan; and

Whereas, At a 1998 Colorado forest conference sponsored by Governor Romer and the USDA Forest Service, consensus developed between the environmental community, the timber industry, and the USDA wildland-urban interface red zone; and

Whereas, In January 2002, the General Accounting Office concluded that USDA Forest Service accounting and tracking is so poor that there is no way to determine whether the USDA Forest Service had appropriately spent over $750 million allocated to thinning and prescribed fire in the wildland-urban interface red zone; and

Whereas, The USDA Forest Service has aggressively fought efforts to require 60% of the National Fire Plan funds to be spent on fuel reduction projects that will provide the greatest protection to the at-risk communities; and

Whereas, The federal land managers in Colorado are using National Fire Plan moneys in some instances to assist in the completion of projects that do little to reduce fuels in the wildland-urban interface; and

Whereas, Colorado Congressmen Joel Hefley and Mark Udall have recognized this problem and introduced a bipartisan resolution, H.R. 3948, to improve implementation of the National Fire Plan by reducing the build-up of fuels in the wildland-urban interface by establishing an interagency council to coordinate implementation of the National Fire Plan, directing the council to define consent criteria to identify the communities within the wildland-urban interface that are most at risk from severe wildfires, requiring that fuel reduction be accomplished in at-risk communities before other fuel reduction efforts are undertaken in the state, and directing the council to determine the most effective and appropriate methods to utilize fuel removed pursuant to the National Fire Plan; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly of the State of Colorado, the Senate concurring herein:

That the General Assembly endorses H.R. 3948 to improve the implementation of the National Fire Plan by reducing fuels in the wildland-urban interface, and urges the Colorado Congressional Delegation to support and cosponsor this resolution.

DOUG DEAN,
ED PERLMUTTER,
President Pro Tem of the Senate.
JUDITH RODRIGUE,
Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives.

KAREN GOLDMAN,
Secretary of the Senate.

SPECIAL JOINT MEETING OF CONGRESS IN NEW YORK ON SEPTEMBER 6, 2002

HON. JAMES H. MALONEY

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, it was a historic experience to join with my colleagues in the Special Joint Meeting of Congress held in New York City. I have visited New York many times since the terrorist attacks on September 11 2001. It is a city that has recovered from, but not forgotten, the events of that tragic day.

The families and friends of those who perished have endured a year of unbearable loss. They have my deepest sympathy. Rarely have we felt vile acts of terrorism perpetrated on our shores, and never on the scale of September 11th, 2001. Our response has shown the strength of character of the American people. The sadness that we all felt that day, and in the days since, has hardened into a resolve to honor the memories of those who perished, to heal our wounds so that our nation is even stronger than before, and to bring righteous justice to those who perpetrated the attacks.

The Congressional Session in New York was a fitting salute to that great metropolis, and a dramatic affirmation that all Americans stand united with the people of New York as we move forward to root out terrorism and build a free and secure world community.

TRAINING OUR FIRST RESPONDERS IN ROCKFORD, ILLINOIS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, protecting the people of the United States is Congress' number one responsibility. Since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, we have passed laws in the House to improve our readiness at home, and our agencies are meeting with state and local governments to share information and formulate emergency plans with our first responders.

I wanted to let you know about a private initiative that took place this summer in the district I represent that will improve local readiness and help protect the people in northern Illinois.

On July 20, 2002, Marathon Ashland Petroleum invited members of the Winnebago, Rockford, Blackhawk, Win-Bur-Sew, West Suburban, Byron and North West fire departments, along with the Winnebago County Sheriff's Department and Bomb Disposal Team to a full-scale bomb drill at its Rockford terminal. The drill was designed to not only familiarize local, area and regional responders with the terminal's facilities and equipment, but to also train and prepare our first responders for a credible threat against the terminal. The drill was the first of its kind in the petroleum industry following the Sept. 11 attacks on our nation.

The all-day event began with tours of the facility and opportunities for police and fire responders to familiarize themselves with the equipment and set-up at the terminal, which can store up to 20 million gallons of fuel, including gasoline and diesel. The Winnebago County Bomb Squad then participated in a simulation where area Emergency Medical Technicians were able to familiarize themselves with the special suits that bomb squad members must wear.

The bomb squad commander, Chris Cowan, then briefed drill participants on likely tactics and targets within the terminal that terrorists might consider. A safety discussion and tips for locating a device followed.

The day was capped off with a detonation of a small explosive device designed to show the impact that even a small device can make.

Mr. Speaker, this is the kind of leadership from our local governments and our business community that we need to win the war on terrorism and protect our homeland. We in Congress have passed legislation to tighten security in America and provide funding to help our nation prepare. But our first responders in our communities are the ones who will make homeland security work.

The people at Marathon Ashland Petroleum and the brave police officers, firefighters, and EMTs from northern Illinois are leading the charge to protect our people. And I commend them for that.

COMMEMORATING ANNIVERSARY OF SEPTEMBER 11TH

HON. NITA M. LOWEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in recognition of the one year anniversary of the tragic events of September 11, 2001.

Last September, the lives of all Americans were forever changed. Loved ones have been lost, and the grief we feel is as sharp now as it was one year ago. There is an emptiness in families, in offices, in communities, where sons and daughters, husbands and wives, parents, siblings and friends once were.

Our country has changed. We have focused intently on the task of ensuring our homeland security—a term seldom heard before this past year. We have invested billions of dollars in securing our ports and borders, water and food, and airways. We have enhanced the strength of our military and intelligence capacities, undertaking an unprecedented campaign to end the threat of international terrorism. We have a new appreciation for the hard work of our men and women in uniform—whether they are soldiers, police officers, emergency medical technicians, or firefighters.

We joined together with the President, the Governor, and former Mayor Giuliani in passing an emergency spending bill which provided $21 billion to fund the rescue and recovery efforts at the World Trade Center site and cleanup in lower Manhattan. This funding has also helped alleviate some of the economic ramifications of the terrorist attacks, provide counseling to New York schoolchildren affected by 9/11, and it is now being used to modernize the transportation systems that were devastated by the towers' collapse. The wounds remain, but our community has shown extraordinary courage in dealing with the challenges before us. We will never forget, but we will recover.

Shattering as this ordeal has been, the fundamental character of America has remained the same. And for this we should all be proud. We are still a strong and diverse nation, focused on the pleasures and challenges of everyday life, caught up in the struggle to provide good homes for our children, achieve meaning in our lives, and leave this world a better place after we've gone. We still believe in the importance of our democratic ideals—the foundation on which our country was built, and continues to thrive.

As a nation, we have joined together to provide support for our neighbors, friends, co-workers and fellow Americans. As I have traveled around New York, I have seen remarkable displays of the resilience of the American spirit as we have worked in the recovery effort, giving from both our hearts and our wallets. The tragedy of September 11th was once unimaginable as were the courage and empathy that were displayed that terrible day. Now, it is this strength and this concern for our fellow citizens that redefine us as Americans.

This is what gives us hope. And this is what gives us confidence that, despite the dangers of the world and the challenges our country faces, we will prevail in perpetuating the values we hold dear. I am humbled and honored to stand before you today in remembrance of the tragedy of September 11th and the heroism and patriotism of New Yorkers and all Americans over the past year.

THE THREAT OF WILDFIRES

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the efforts of the Colorado General Assembly concerning the mitigation of the threat of wildfires in the national forests through the removal of dead fuel. Resolution 02S-1002, passed by Colorado's General Assembly urges federal action on a fire strategy to comprehensively reduce the risk of catastrophic wildfire and improve the overall condition of Colorado's forests. The bill further supports utilizing an appropriate mix of fire-prevention activities and management practices including forest restoration, treatment of at-risk forest stands, grazing, selective tree removal, and other measures to control insects and pathogens, removal of excessive dead ground fuels, and small-scale prescribed burns. I commend the work of the Colorado General Assembly for its strong efforts toward the betterment of the state and well being of the people of the great state of Colorado.

I hereby submit for the RECORD Colorado House Resolution 02S-1002: 2002:

Whereas, The current condition of Colorado's national forest lands poses public health and safety risks to citizens of this state in the areas of air quality, water quality and quantity, and potential loss of human life and damage to property and threatens damage to municipal infrastructure; and

Whereas, The USDA Forest Service has allowed an unnatural volume of dead fuels to build up within national forest lands that poses an immediate threat to nearly 20 million forested acres in Colorado; and

Whereas, The number of forested acres in Colorado treated by the USDA Forest Service has been grossly insufficient to mitigate the threat of unnatural, catastrophic wildfires; and

Whereas, Insect and disease infestations have impacted over 500,000 acres throughout the state, and these conditions have exacerbated the already dangerous wildfire hazard; and

Whereas, Major wildfires that occur in Colorado's backcountry decrease wildlife habitat, including that of federally-listed species, and threaten to denude critical watersheds surrounding high-mountain reservoirs; and

Whereas, The wildfires in Colorado have burned 357,000 acres in 25 counties, cost $110 million, received 14 FEMA declarations, and burned over 1,000 structures; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

1. That we, the members of the House of Representatives, hereby recognize the dangerous conditions of Colorado's forests and urge aggressive action by the USDA Forest Service to mitigate the threat of wildfire on national forest lands in the State of Colorado through the removal of vast accumulations of dead fuels.

2. That we urge federal action on a fire strategy to comprehensively reduce the risk of catastrophic wildfire and improve the overall condition of Colorado's forests.

3. That we support all possible and necessary steps in order for projects to control various insect- and disease-impacted forests in Colorado.

4. That we support utilizing an appropriate mix of fire-prevention activities and management practices including forest restoration, treatment of at-risk forest stands, grazing, selective tree removal, and other measures to control insects and pathogens, removal of excessive dead ground fuels, and small-scale prescribed burns.

5. That we strongly encourage the Congress of the United States to expeditiously pass legislation, maintain sufficient National Fire Plan funding, and encourage refinements of current regulations to address the gridlock issue obstructing active land management by the USDA Forest Service and other federal land management agencies.

Be It Further Resolved, That copies of this Resolution be sent to the USDA Forest Service and to each member of the Colorado Congressional Delegation.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1646, FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEAR 2003

SPEECH OF

HON. JIM KOLBE

OF ARIZONA

Wednesday, September 25, 2002

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, first let me congratulate the Chairman of the International Relations Committee, Mr. HYDE, for successfully managing this important piece of legislation. For many years it has proven difficult to reach the stage of final congressional approval of a freestanding State Department authorization act, but in his first term as Chairman he has managed to do just that.

I also congratulate him for including authorizations of appropriations for a number of accounts within the jurisdiction of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, where I serve as Chairman. Funding is authorized for the International Military Education and Training account, the Foreign Military Financing account, the account for nonproliferation, anti-terrorism, demining and related programs, and the account for Migration and Refugee Assistance. In the case of the last account, let me say that the Appropriations Committee has recommended a funding level for refugee assistance that is $95 million above the President's request, or a total of $800 million. This is due in large part because of the strong interest shown by Chairman HYDE and the International Relations Committee in providing adequate funds to assist overseas refugees. This is but one example of the ways in which the authorization committee and the Appropriations Committee can work together for the public good.

The conference report also follows the lead of the Appropriations Committee in authorizing an additional $200 million in anti-terrorism assistance for Israel, as well as authorizing ongoing assistance for Israel and Egypt.

However, I did not want this conference report to pass without expressing my strong concern about section 1224, which restricts assistance for Lebanon. This provision would reduce assistance for Lebanon by $10 million on an annual basis unless the armed forces of Lebanon have been deployed to the border between Israel and Lebanon, and unless the Government of Lebanon is effectively asserting its authority in that area.

Like all Americans, I strongly condemn terrorist attacks that have been launched from Lebanese territory by Hizballah. If I thought this provision would save one life, I would strongly support it.

However, Lebanon is currently not in control of its own destiny, and cannot control much of its own territory, due to the presence of a foreign occupying power. That power is Syria, and it is Syria that has tolerated and encouraged terrorism against Israel.

The effect of this language could be to cut the Lebanon assistance program from $35 million to $25 million. Very little of our assistance is provided to the Government; the cut will primarily affect assistance to American educational institutions in Lebanon such as the American University in Beirut and the Lebanese American University. The cut will also adversely impact the other major American program in Lebanon, which promotes community development in villages and towns throughout that country. It is designed to empower local communities by providing assistance for small-scale infrastructure, such as community centers and water systems, and for micro-enterprise activities. It also allows the United States to offer social and economic benefits to impoverished Lebanese citizens, rather than forcing them to rely on the social services that terrorist organizations such as Hamas and Hizballah may offer. In that sense, the provision is counterproductive and will have precisely the opposite effect of that intended by its author.

I hope we can revisit this issue very soon. If we don't, I think we will all regret the fact that this conference report will have diminished the ability of the United States to contribute to a positive future for the people of Lebanon.

INTRODUCTION OF A RESOLUTION
OF HISPANIC-SERVING INSTITUTIONS

HON. HOWARD P. "BUCK" McKEON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce a House resolution honoring the contributions made by this country's Hispanic-serving institutions (HSI). In my congressional district in California, California State University-Northridge has been designated as a HSI and it is my privilege to recognize the dedication and service that it provides to the Los Angeles community.

Under Title V of the Higher Education Act of 1965, a Hispanic-serving institution (HSI) is an institution of postsecondary education with a student enrollment that is at least 25 percent Hispanic, with at least 50 percent of its Hispanic students coming from low-income families. These institutions play a vital role in providing a quality postsecondary education for all Americans, and are deserving of our recognition and continued support.

I am proud of the role that this body has played in aiding these important institutions. The Higher Education Amendments of 1998 created a program designed to aid HSIs in strengthening their institutions under Title V of the Higher Education Act. These chances included allowing institutions to use Federal money to build their endowments, and to provide scholarships and fellowships for needy students. Since 1998, we have increased our support for HSIs to $86 million. President Bush's budget, passed by the House in March, would increase support for these institutions by an additional 3.5 percent.

We have also taken other important steps to serve not only minority students, but all American students. For example, the Pell Grant program is, and has always been, our highest priority for postsecondary education. Since 1995, we have increased the maximum Pell Grant every year. For Fiscal Year 2002, the maximum Pell Grant reached a record high of $4,000; up from just $2,340 in FY 1995, and a 33 percent increase from FY 1998 level.

We have also passed the Higher Education Amendments of 1998 to make college more affordable, simplified the student aid system, and stressed academic quality. That legislation ensured that student loans would continue to be available for all qualified students, and resulted in the lowest student loan interest rate in the history of the program. It also provided increased aid to the neediest students, strengthened important financial aid programs such as College Work Study, SEOG, Perkins Loans, and TRIO, and created the government's first Performance Based Organization (PBO) to improve service to schools, students, and parents.

This Nation's HSIs play a vital role in educating America's citizens. It is my goal and the goal of the Committee on Education and the Workforce to build on the record of academic excellence of students attending HSIs. This resolution honors the important work done at HSIs, and encourages all students to attend college and prepare for the challenges and opportunities of the 21st Century. I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

COURAGE WOMEN'S SOCCER TEAM

HON. MIKE McINTYRE

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. McINTYRE. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to acknowledge the Women's United Soccer Association's (WUSA) Carolina Courage. On August 24, 2002, the Carolina Courage defeated the Washington Freedom to claim their first WUSA Championship and the Founders Cup.

From their modest beginnings only two short years ago, the WUSA has become one of the catalysts in increasing both interest and participation in soccer for young girls. While soccer remains the most popular sport worldwide, the teams comprising the WUSA have provided young girls with a group of positive, female role models.

In these two short years, the Carolina Courage has cultivated a fan base throughout the State of North Carolina. The women who make up this remarkable team hail from all over the world, and they have united together to form one of the most explosive and entertaining professional teams in the United States. These women work tirelessly to improve their soccer skills and to improve their communities.

My fellow colleagues, please join me in saluting the 2002 Carolina Courage for their efforts. May God's blessings be not only upon this great team, but also upon all of those teams within the WUSA which are setting positive examples for our young people across America.

DISASTER RELIEF

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the efforts of the Colorado General Assembly concerning the recognition of the ability of the state inmate population to provide disaster relief. Resolution 02S-1001, passed by Colorado's General Assembly supports the low-cost alternative of using the Colorado inmate population to assist communities in reestablishing their homes and businesses. I commend the work of the Colorado General Assembly for its strong efforts toward the betterment of the state and well being of the people of the great state of Colorado.

I hereby submit for the RECORD Colorado House Resolution 02S-1001:

CONCERNING THE RECOGNITION OF THE ABILITY OF THE STATE INMATE POPULATION TO PROVIDE
DISASTER RELIEF

Whereas, Colorado is in the midst of a widespread and lengthy drought, has experienced throughout this summer a plague of dangerous and destructive wildfires in various locations, and may be in danger of experiencing calamitous flash-flooding; and

Whereas, The extraordinary challenges of these and other natural disasters demand creative and innovative approaches to prevent and mitigate the destruction caused by these and other natural and man-made forces; and

Whereas, For decades the Colorado Department of Corrections has supervised the provision of valuable services to the state and its communities by hundreds of inmates; and

Whereas, The Colorado inmate population can provide reliable and needed assistance to combat the onslaught of these disasters and to mitigate their destruction and stands ready as a flexible, trained, and capable workforce for the state; and

Whereas, The Colorado Department of Corrections can easily and quickly train and mobilize hundreds of inmates to perform various critical tasks, including: Forest and vegetation management; mitigation of burned areas; flood control, reforestation and reseedling; trail and road rebuilding; and various reclamation projects; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly of the State of Colorado:

(1) That, although the state faces a severe budget crisis and must be fiscally responsible, we, the members of House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly, recognize that assistance for communities that have been devastated by wildfires is of paramount importance and needs to be accomplished in the most fiscally responsible manner possible, and we support the low-cost alternative of using the Colorado inmate population to assist communities in reestablishing their homes and businesses; and

(2) That we, the members of House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly, believe the use of inmates for mitigation and rehabilitation is a quicker and more cost-effective alternative for the citizens of Colorado in the current emergencies than the extensive long-term training needed to allow inmates to directly fight forest fires; and

(3) That we, the members the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly hereby encourage all relevant agencies of federal, state, and local government to consider that the Colorado inmate population may be easily trained and mobilized on request to perform numerous assignments in preparing for and responding to various disasters; and

(4) That the Colorado Department of Corrections can provide the necessary training and supervision for those inmates to carry out those critical assignments.

Be It Further Resolved, That copies of this Resolution be sent to each member of the state's congressional delegation, to the President of the United States, to the Governor, to the Executive Director of the Department of Corrections, and to any state-wide organizations representing counties and municipalities.

JUDITH RODRIGUE,
House of Representatives.*

DOUG DEAN,
of Representatives.*

OF 4-H YOUTH DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

HON. ANÍBAL ACEVEDO-VILÁ

OF PUERTO RICO

Tuesday, September 24, 2002

Mr. ACEVEDO-VILÁ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of 4-H and I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this important resolution. This is a wonderful time to cherish our country's youth and their achievements. However, it important to remember those who have fought for farmer workers fair treatment. One great example is Dolores Huerta. As we mark National Hispanic Heritage Month, I urge the leadership to bring House Concurrent Resolution 177 to the floor. This Resolution recognizes the achievements of a great American; moreover, of a great woman. Dolores Huerta was a leader for farm workers' rights. She was the cofounder of American Farm Workers with Cesar Chavez. They have fought for fair wages, safe working conditions, and against harmful pesticides. The Women's Hall of Fame recognized her great achievements by inducting her in 1993. Additionally, she has recently been named as one of the six women sustaining the American Spirit by the National Women's History Project. It is important that we bring special attention to this woman's achievements. In closing, as a original cosponsor to H. Con. Res. 177, I urge you to bring this to the floor.

SPEECH OF

HON. BETTY McCOLLUM

Wednesday, September 18, 2002

Ms. McCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1701, the Consumer Rental Purchase Agreement Act. While supporters of this bill claim that it will protect the interests of consumers, it will do the exact opposite in my state of Minnesota and other states that have enacted strong protections against abuses by the "rent-to-own" industry.

If enacted, H.R. 1701 would pre-empt laws in Minnesota, New Jersey, Wisconsin and Vermont that currently treat "rent-to-own" as consumer credit transactions subject to state credit sales laws. These strong state laws protect consumers from being charged exorbitant prices for items purchased through "rent-to-own" transactions. Conversely, H.R. 1701 would require all states to treat these transactions as renewable leases subject to minimum disclosures.

H.R. 1701 would allow "rent-to-own" businesses to charge even more outrageous prices to consumers. While "rent-to-own" businesses must currently comply with usury laws that set maximum interests that may be charged for these transactions, H.R. 1701 will completely undermine this protection.

Further, this bill would allow the "rent-to-own" industry to avoid millions of dollars in legal penalties that are collected from businesses in violation of Minnesota's consumer protection laws. With strong enforcement of these laws, Minnesota courts have collected $30 million in penalties since 1997 from just one "rent-to-own" chain. Clearly, the "rent-to-own" industry stands to benefit greatly from the "get out of jail free" card that H.R. 1701 would provide.

During my time in the Minnesota House of Representatives, I fought attempts by the "rent-to-own" industry to strip these important protections from our state law. Now, as a member of Congress, I must fight these attempts again to protect the interests of the low- and moderate-income consumers who are targeted by the deceptive practices of the "rent-to-own" industry.

CARE ON SOUTHWEST BORDER

HON. DUNCAN HUNTER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, this morning, the United States/Mexico Border Counties Coalition released an important report detailing the increased healthcare burden incurred by our nation's twenty-four counties that share a border with our southern neighbor, Mexico. I am privileged to represent a congressional district that includes nearly all of the California/Mexico international border. As a result, I can tell this body firsthand what the study proves—border communities suffer a significant financial burden from providing unreimbursable healthcare services to undocumented aliens.

The study, titled "Medical Emergency: Costs of Uncompensated Care in Southwest Border Counties," estimates that at least 25 percent of the border county hospitals uncompensated care costs, or $190 million in 2000, are incurred from providing services to undocumented aliens. In addition, emergency medical service providers lost about $13 million providing care and transportation for illegal aliens injured while crossing the border.

In 1998, Imperial County alone incurred nearly $1.3 million in unreimbursed healthcare services provided to undocumented aliens. Unfortunately, Imperial County is already one of the poorest counties in the country and certainly in the State of California. As a result, this financial burden is particularly difficult for this community to sustain. While the cost of healthcare delivery is high, it is not the only cost incurred on behalf of illegal aliens. In total, Imperial County estimates that, in 1998, it spent more than $5.4 million providing services to undocumented aliens and that amount continues to increase.

At the same time, San Diego County is also bearing a significant cost for unreimbursable services provided to illegal aliens. The County estimates that in 1998 they spent nearly $10.8 million for emergency medical care and over $50 million in total services provided. Clearly, this money would be better spent delivering services to needy county residents.

The impacts of uncompensated emergency services does not stop at an affected hospitals' balance sheet. Healthcare costs and insurance premiums are on the rise, partially in order to cover the unreimbursable costs incurred by the healthcare institutions. Rising health insurance premiums are threatening employers' ability, particularly small businesses, to offer their employees affordable health care benefits. High liability costs and low levels of compensation are threatening the viability of emergency rooms and emergency transportation providers all along the border, and particularly in California where the healthcare system is already in crisis.

Throughout my tenure in Congress, I have fought for additional border security, not only to address safety concerns, but also as a way of addressing the financial impacts of caring for the undocumented alien population. The fact is, securing our international borders is the responsibility of the federal government. So it logically follows that providing necessary medical care for individuals who penetrate our border is also a federal responsibility.

To make matters worse, the federal border agencies, in order to avoid paying the costs associated with healthcare delivery to the injured alien, will report an emergency situation to local emergency personnel without officially taking control of the alien. As a result, when the ambulance picks up the undocumented alien for transport to the nearest hospital, they are also accepting total financial obligations for the immigrant. It is unacceptable for federal agencies to be passing on their responsibilities to our already financially-strapped local communities. This practice must come to an end.

The study makes several important recommendations for addressing these problems, all of which appear to have merit. The primary solution, however, is clear: border communities must be compensated for the costs incurred from caring for undocumented aliens. I plan to work closely with my colleagues who represent affected counties to find a solution to this problem and I hope my colleagues throughout the Congress will join us in this effort. After all, it is a matter of fairness and accepting responsibility of our federal obligations.

HON. JOSEPH R. PITTS

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, earlier this week, the President of Kyrgyzstan, Askar Akayev, and the First Lady, visited the United States.

I rise to welcome them and thank them for their friendship.

Kyrgyzstan is centrally located along the Great Silk Road, an ancient economic and cultural trade route that connected Europe to Asia.

Kyrgyzstan has absorbed traditions from the East and the West, making its history rich and its people diverse.

Today, the Great Silk Road is being renewed and Kyrgyzstan, once again, is at the center.

Kyrgyzstan has made notable progress since its independence, but it still faces many challenges.

Over the past decade, Kyrgyzstan has moved to adopt democratic reforms and a market economy. However, the potential that Kyrgyzstan holds to be an example to the region has not yet been fully realized. The U.S.

must work closely with President Akayev to encourage additional reforms.

Still, the Kyrgyz people are hungry for democracy and thirsty for economic prosperity. The future of the Kyrgyzstan rests in the hands of its young people. And it is a bright future. With this in mind, it is encouraging to see the hard work of the First Lady of Kyrgyzstan on behalf of the children in her country. The U.S. must continue to support these efforts.

Kyrgyzstan has also been a strong supporter of the United States' war on terrorism. President Akayev has cooperated in allowing the use of an airbase in Bishkek and the government has helped with providing information on terrorist cells in the region.

A prosperous Kyrgyzstan is important for regional security and stability. Therefore, we must work together to continue building relations between Kyrgyzstan and the U.S.

116TH AIR CONTROL WING

HON. SAXBY CHAMBLISS

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the House Armed Services Committee, I support many of the transformation initiatives our military is undertaking. Through the vision and leadership of Secretary Roche and General Jumper, the Air Force has been a leading proponent of transformation. The Joint Surveillance Target Attack Radar System, or JSTARS, and the 116th Air National Guard unit at Robins Air Force Base are a prime example of a transformational mission. These unique units are on the verge of becoming even more transformational as they blend Air National Guard personnel into the active JSTARS unit.

On Monday, September 30, 2002 the Guard's 116th Bomb Wing and the active duty 93rd Air Control Wing will merge into a first of its kind "blended Wing." The new wing will operate all of the Air Force's Joint STARS aircraft. It is a mission of considerable importance. The J-STARS aircraft can find and track moving targets on the ground hundreds of miles into enemy territory and are prized assets and constantly in demand by theater commanders.

Developing a blended unit has proven to be a daunting task. However, the Air Force and members of both the 93rd Air Control wing and the 116th Bomb Wing have stepped up to the plate and cleared every hurdle in their way. Secretary Roche stated that "Outdated laws and policies would have to change to reflect requirements in command-and-control, fiscal, and personnel issues," and he was right. The members of the Air National Guard and the Air Force Reserve have worked tirelessly to achieve a "blended wing" and have done it in an exceptional fashion.

The Air Force has long been the model of full and seamless integration of the Reserve Components. Its Guard and Reserve associate programs are long-term success stories that maximize weapon system utilization while leveraging the expertise of Guard and Reserve personnel. Strong national defense rests on the foundation of a well-equipped, well-trained and mobile military force. The 116th has been and will continue to be the pinnacle of professionalism and honor; and will continue to be ready—Anytime-Anywhere.

I would like to commend the vision, leadership, and stalwart dedication that Major General David Poythress, Colonel Tom Lynn, Colonel David Fadok, and all the people that helped make this day possible. It is the strong commitment by everyone involved to their country, to the war-fighter, and to Robins that makes this day truly great.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF SEPTEMBER 11

HON. BERNARD SANDERS

OF VERMONT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, our nation was forever changed on the morning of Sept 11. The goal of Osama bin Laden was to demoralize us, create fear, uncertainty and instability in our country—he failed. Last week Congress met in New York to pay tribute to those who were killed, and I was reminded how strong and resilient our country truly is. Last September 11 we saw amazing displays of heroism and bravery. I will never forget the sight of firemen entering the World Trade Center risking their lives to save others.

We have also learned a great deal since Sept 11. We've learned that we are a vulnerable nation, and that we must lead an international coalition against bigoted, religious fanatics who believe they have the right to kill in order to impose their reactionary ideology on others. Many of us also have learned that in order to be true to American values, we must not undermine the fundamental principles and constitutional rights that our country was founded on.

As an American and a Vermonter, I was enormously proud of how our people responded to this crisis in terms of blood donations, financial contributions and coming together as a community to support the victims and each other. It is my hope that we will continue to show that same sense of community that we demonstrated in the aftermath of the September 11 attacks.

HONORING JUDGE JOSEPH LODGE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to pay tribute to an extraordinary citizen of California's central coast, Judge Joseph Lodge. As both a judge and a teacher at the University of California, Santa Barbara, there is no question as to how much Judge Lodge has given to the Santa Barbara community and I am very pleased to have the opportunity to honor him.

In 1955, after graduating from the University of Michigan School of Law, Joe Lodge began his legal career by working as a clerk for the chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals, 6th Circuit. In 1956 Joe moved to Santa Barbara, which he has called home ever since. He became the first full-time attorney in the Santa Barbara suburb, Goleta, and in 1958, at the young age of 26, he made the decision to run for a part-time judgeship in a local court. In 1965, after the South Coast courts merged, Judge Lodge became a full-time judge in the municipal court, although he still found time to continue teaching at UCSB. In 1998, Judge Lodge was moved to the Superior Court, where he sits now.

Judge Lodge holds the distinction of being the longest sitting trial judge in the State of California. Not only has he dedicated the last 44 years to presiding on the bench, but he has also spent the last 42 years teaching an extremely popular criminal justice course at UCSB. Since Judge Lodge has vowed never to retire, the residents of the central coast decided to throw him an "In-Lieu-of-Retirement Party" on the evening of Thursday, September 26.

The Santa Barbara community has benefited greatly from the many, many years of service Judge Lodge has dedicated. His wisdom and fairness has played a part in so many people's lives and it is truly fitting that we have the opportunity to honor him today.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO: J. NICHOLAS McGRATH

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is with great sadness that I recognize the life and passing of J. Nicholas McGrath of Basalt, Colorado. Mr. McGrath was a very prominent and well-respected attorney not only in the State of Colorado but also throughout the entire nation. As his family mourns their loss, I would like to pay tribute to the life and accomplishments of Nicholas McGrath before this body of Congress and this nation.

Nicholas McGrath graduated from Columbia University Law School in 1965 magna cum laude. After law school he clerked for Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall. He is listed in Who's Who in America, Who's Who in American Law, Who's Who in the world, and Bar Register of Preeminent Lawyers in the United States. Mr. McGrath specialized primarily in land use law and litigation with the firm of Oates, McGrath, and Jordan, in Aspen, Colorado.

Despite a demanding career, Mr. McGrath still found the time to become actively involved in his community. Mr. McGrath participated extensively in many Basalt recreational programs and was president of the Basalt soccer club. He was extremely dedicated to expanding many of Basalt's youth programs throughout the community and is responsible for providing many kids with the opportunity to play organized sports. At his own children's sporting events, he was always Nick and Molly's biggest fan.

Mr. Speaker, it is in earnest respect that I recognize the memory of Mr. J. Nicholas McGrath before this body of Congress and this nation for the irreplaceable contributions he made to the community of Basalt and the State of Colorado. My sincere condolences go out to his wife Rosemary and to his children Nicholas and Molly McGrath. While his loss will be deeply felt, the memory of his kindness and the recollection of his good deeds will transcend into future generations.

HON. MICHAEL R. McNULTY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, on Friday, September 6 of this year, a special Joint Session of the United States Congress convened in New York City to reflect on the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. This most rare and somber session served as a necessary reminder of the human loss and heroism that the City and State of New York, our nation, and our world experienced on that fateful day. I am proud and blessed—as an American, and as a New Yorker—to have been able to take part.

We met at Federal Hall, the very same site where the first Congress met over two centuries ago. We met just blocks from where the World Trade Center towers once pierced the city's majestic skyline.

Mr. Speaker, most importantly, we remembered the almost 3,000 innocent civilians who died and their families. We prayed then—and we should pray now—for all of the victims of this most heinous terrorist act. Though a year has passed, the loss of every single person who perished that day is still felt by all those who loved them. The sons and daughters, the brothers and sisters, the mothers and fathers lost that day will never be replaced. We simply hope that the pain will subside, and that the memories will remain strong and vibrant.

Mr. Speaker, we also expressed our deepest gratitude to the firefighters, police officers and emergency personnel who served on that fateful day and in the weeks and months that followed. These brave men and women, and their peers across the country, put their lives on the line—day in and day out—to ensure the safety and well being of the citizens of our communities. Recognition of the heroism and service of our "First Responders" is overdue and well deserved. We must continue to acknowledge their bravery and sacrifice. And we in Congress must resolve to provide them with the support they need to continue to excel in their chosen duty—to save lives.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, we reaffirmed our commitment, as a Congress and as a nation, to eradicate the ability of terrorists to ever again carry out such a horrific and offensive act—against us or against other innocent people around the world. We reaffirmed our promise to bring these cowards to justice. A terrorist is, by definition, a coward. It is a person who cannot get what he wants by the power of persuasion, and therefore resorts to the killing of innocent men, women and children.

Mr. Speaker, the American men and women in our Armed Forces are now dispersed throughout the world, seeking out these cowards and introducing them to the might of a nation that finds its heart bruised but its strength renewed. Freedom is not free. We have paid a tremendous price for it. We must not forget those before us who gave their lives, or those who put their lives on the line today, to allow us the privilege of living in the freest and most open democracy on the face of the earth. Our patriots fight for the cause of freedom, and we shall support them every step of the way.

The events of September 11, 2001, were basic violations of the fundamental principle that life is to give—not to take. I am proud that this Congress gathered on September 6, in the shadow of Ground Zero, to remember and honor both the victims and the heroes—and to remind the world that the forces of evil shall never prevail.

REFORM OF ENERGY WORKERS COMPENSATION ACT (REWCA)

HON. TED STRICKLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing a bill to reform the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act of 2000 (EEOICPA).

The Department of Energy (DOE) has conceded that, over the 50 year history of making nuclear weapons, it consistently placed production imperatives ahead of worker health and safety. In the fall of 1999, DOE admitted that it had placed these Cold War Veterans in harm's way without their knowledge or consent and that compensation was due.

In the spring of 2000, the President's National Economic Council issued a report that identified 14 DOE facilities where there was an excess rate of cancer which was attributable to radiation. This report also noted that state worker compensation systems were not well-suited for compensating occupational diseases due to a variety of hurdles, such as statutes of limitations. Also in the spring of 2000, the House and Senate introduced bipartisan legislation to establish a federal compensation program for these sick nuclear workers and their survivors. Congress held hearings in the House and Senate on legislation that would provide compensation to employees of DOE who were exposed to radiation, beryllium, silica and numerous other toxic substances used in making nuclear weapons.

The compromise which emerged from the conference committee in October 2000 created two separate programs: one for workers exposed to radiation, beryllium and silica which is administered by the Department of Labor, and a second for workers exposed to toxic substances and other hazardous materials which is administered, in part, by the Department of Energy. This second program, codified under Subtitle D, is the primary focus of the reform legislation today.

Under Subtitle D, the Department of Energy is required to use a Physician's Panel to review claims related to exposure to toxic substance. This Panel determines whether an illness is work related and relies upon individual state worker compensation programs to make payments for wage loss and medical costs. However, this approach, by DOE's own admission, will not work for these occupational illness cases because at least 50 percent of the claimants will not have a "willing payor" who will honor the findings of the Department of Energy Physician's Panel. Congress intended to create a uniform, adequate and equitable federal compensation program for these workers who toiled in the nation's nuclear weapons factories in service to our nation. It is simply unacceptable for the government to tell these workers that help is on the way, and then move forward with a program where potentially there is no one to pay as many as half the claims. This law needs to be fixed.

The introduction of REWCA, the Reform of Energy Workers Compensation Act, aims to fulfill Congress' original objectives and ensure all of the nation's nuclear workers who were made sick from their jobs in nuclear weapons factories through no fault of their own receive a measure of just compensation for their disabilities and illnesses.

HEATH SR.

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to recognize Mr. Edward R. Heath Sr. of Mechanic Falls, Maine for his dedication and commitment to the United States military and this nation. Mr. Heath, a disabled Vietnam Era Veteran, was recently elected National Commander of Disabled American Veterans. As we celebrate achievement, I would like to pay tribute to the achievements and contributions he has made to military veterans throughout the country.

Throughout his life, Mr. Heath has embodied the principles of courage, honor, and integrity that we, as Americans, have come to expect from the men and women in our nation's military. Mr. Heath enlisted in the U.S. Army in 1954, where he served in many foreign theatres including France, Germany, and Korea. Mr. Heath also served at a variety of army posts in the United States, including a tour with the 1st Armored Division during the Cuban Missile Crisis. In 1967, Mr. Heath was seriously injured in a car accident with a civilian vehicle, and due to his injuries, was forced to retire from the military in 1968.

Although his injuries were a major challenge, Mr. Heath would not let his misfortune impede his future service to his country. Mr. Heath went to and graduated from the University of Southern Maine. He continued his education by earning a law degree at the New England School of Law in Boston, MA, in 1978. From there, Mr. Heath began working for the Board of Veteran's appeals, which specializes in Veteran claims on issues such as radiation exposure and Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. In 1989, Mr. Heath began working for the Disabled American Veteran's (DAV), representing veterans at the US Court of Appeals. In 2002, he was elected National Commander of the DAV at the Organization's National Convention in Dallas.

Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct privilege to recognize Mr. Edward R. Heath before this Congress and this nation for the extraordinary service he has given to the United States military and to disabled veterans throughout the country. As a soldier he served his country with courage and honor, as a lawyer he served with integrity and benevolence. Congratulations on your new achievement and good luck in your future endeavors.

INTRODUCING THE NATIVE ACT TO TRANSFORM IMAGERY IN VARIOUS ENVIRONMENTS (NATIVE) ACT

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a member of the Native American Caucus to introduce the Native Act to Transform Imagery in Various Environments (NATIVE) Act. This bill would provide funding for the establishment of an incentive program for schools to eliminate the use of names and symbols that are offensive to Native American people.

Many elementary and secondary schools across the country use words and symbols representing their schools that are demeaning to Native Americans. Nationally, more than 1,200 schools inappropriately use such offensive names or nicknames, often these become mascots. In addition, these names or symbols are used at athletic games for mascot characters, chants and other antics.

While I believe the intentions of these school communities is not to disrespect or harm Native Americans, that is the end result of allowing these offensive terms to continue in these educational institutions.

Once this bill is signed into law, the Secretary of Education would be authorized to make grants to eligible schools to assist such schools to discontinue use of a derogatory or discriminatory name or depiction as a team name, mascot, or nickname. Funding would be provided to schools to change their names and symbols on all equipment and apparel throughout the institution, including on team jerseys, signs, stationary, walls, fields and gymnasium floors. Schools participating in the program may also qualify for construction or renovation funds.

Given that the president's No Child Left Behind education plan does not include construction and renovation funding (with the exception of immediate danger areas), this would be a major incentive for schools to replace their offensive names and logos. Because of the federal government's trust responsibility and obligations to tribal governments, tribally-controlled schools would be eligible for construction or renovation funds, regardless of whether or not they alter their names and symbols.

The legislation would also provide for the establishment of a Committee of American Indian Relations to conduct cultural proficiency trainings at schools participating in the program to further assist the school communities with understanding and changing their behavior. The Committee would also assist the Secretary with reviewing proposals submitted by schools for eligibility determination and funding of grant purposes. The Committee would be headed by a Director, selected by the Secretary in consultation with tribal governments.

This program would receive federal funding for five years. During the first two years of the program, some funding would be devoted to establishing the Committee, identifying schools interested in participating and then working with those schools to actually change the offensive names and symbols. Over the remaining three years, funding would be devoted to any necessary construction and renovation required at the school sites.

I have developed this legislation in consultation with representatives from the National Indian Education Association, the Indian Teacher and Educational Personnel Program, the Capital Area Indian Resource Center and the California Rural Indian Health Board and would like to thank these tribal organizations and their staff for their commitment to bringing this bill to fruition.

The idea for this legislation came from a similar bill proposed in the California state legislature. The California bill would have mandated that all schools in the state with offensive Native American names and symbols change their identifying features in order to continue receiving state funding. This bill failed to receive the votes necessary to become state law.

I believe that forcing educational institutions to adhere to a new procedure without preparing them for such a change can have negative consequences. Educating the school community about why such change is important, and gradually gaining their support can make the transition easier and oftentimes leads to positive results.

This is why I am introducing this bill that would not mandate schools change, but instead provide incentives and activities building awareness in school communities as to why these names and symbols are not appropriate in educational environments.

I urge my colleagues to support and vote in favor of the Native Act to Transform Imagery in Various Environments (NATIVE) Act.

CELEBRATING THE FIESTA OF SAN DIMAS, PATRON SAINT OF THE VILLAGE OF MALESSO

HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the feast day of one of Guam's oldest patron saints. This Sunday, September, 29, 2002, the residents of Guam will celebrate the feast day of San Dimas, the patron saint of Malesso, which is the island's southernmost village. For more than three centuries the San Dimas Catholic Church has stood as a center of faith and traditions for the community of Malesso. On the eve of the fiesta celebration, I would like to commemorate the rich history the San Dimas Church and the village of Malesso have brought to my district of Guam.

The history of Catholic missionaries in Guam began on June 9, 1671, when the Spanish ship Buen Socorro docked in Umatac Bay with four new padres for the Marianas Mission. The four had come to relieve three Fathers already working in the Marianas under the guidance of Father San Vitores. Two of the new priests, Father Francisco Esquerria and Father Francisco Solano, had come from the Philippines by way of Mexico.

The Padres worked hard in Hagatna, the capitol city of Guam, preaching to Spanish soldiers and lay workers, while maintaining carefully the devoted congregations formed by Father San Vitores. They rebuilt the Hagatna church, which had been destroyed in the typhoon of 1671. Father Esquerria and the other Padres soon were not content to work only in Hagatna, and began to make various mission journeys covering more than half the island.

Late in 1672, Father Esquerria became concerned at the great distance they had to travel to get to the usual anchorage of the ships, which was the port of San Antonio de Umatac (Umatac). He decided that it would be good to have a church in the southern part of the island which the Padres could settle. Father Esquerria decided upon the village of Malesso, and built a church there under the patronage of San Dimas. The Padre himself carefully attended the construction of the church. Two years later in 1674, Father Esquerria was martyred. However, the legacy of the San Dimas Church still lives today.

Thirty-one pastors have served the people of San Dimas Parish for 330 years. The Padres include:

1672–1674 Fr. Francisco Esquerria, S. J.; 1674–1799 Fr. Raphael Canica, S. J. & other Jesuits; 1800–1805 Fr. Cristobal Ibanez; 1836–1848 Fr. Jose Ferrer; 1851–1860 Fr. Juan Fernandez; 1864–1869 Fr. Faustino Fernandez Del Corral; 1870–1886 Fr. Mariano Martinez; 1886–1890 Fr. Juan Herrero; 1890–1891 Fr. Jose Lamban; 1891–1893 Fr. Ildefonso Cabanilla; 1893–1899 Fr. Crisogono Ortin; 1908–1923 Fr. Cristobal de Canals; 1923–1927 Fr. Bemabe de Casada; 1930–1934 Fr. Gil de Lagana; 1935–1936 Fr. Marcelo de Vallava; 1937–1940 Fr. Pastro de Arrayoz; 1940–1942 Fr. Marcian Pellet; 1942–1945 Fr. Jesus Duenas & Fr. Oscar Calvo ministered to the people of Guam during the War Occupation; 1945–1947 Fr. Marcian Pellet (Returns from a prison camp); 1947–1948 Adelbert Donlon; 1948–1950 Fr. Julius Sullivan; 1950–1953 Fr. Alexander Feeley; 1954–1956 Fr. Antonine Zimmeran; 1956–1957 Fr. Sylvan Conover; 1957–1967 Fr. Timothy Kavinaugh; 1967–1987 Fr. Lee Friel; 1987–1987 Fr. Felixberto Leon Guerrero; 1987–1988 Fr. Patrick Castro; 1988–1997 Fr. Jose Villagomez; 1997–1998 Fr. Eric Forbes; Archdiocesan Clergy; and 1998–Present Fr. Mike Crisostomo.

Nearly 80 percent of Guam's residents are Roman Catholics. This identity has profoundly shaped many of the island's culture and traditions. For more than three centuries, pastors and parishioners have given their time and skills with strong loyalty and devotion to the San Dimas Church. As a result, many others on the island have enjoyed the special traditions, particularly the San Dimas fiesta.

This year is especially gratifying since the church reopened its doors after four years of being closed to rebuild the church structure. Hundreds of church volunteers led by San Dimas' Pastor, Pale Mike Crisostomo, devoted thousands of hours working on the church's Finance Council, Demolition Crew, Worship Space Volunteer Committee, Dedication Committee, Parish Council, Pastoral Planning Committee, Finance Committee, Solicitation Committee, Building Committee, Cemetery Committee, Confraternity of Christian Mothers, Angel Tree Project, Faith Formation or "Eskuelan Pale", Ministers of Liturgy, Sacristan, Eucharistic Ministers, Acolytes, Altar Servers, Music Ministry, Knights of Columbus, Maintenance and Landscaping, and Office Staff, to make the rebuilding and rededication of San Dimas Church a great success.

The fiesta this weekend, a village-wide celebration of the patron saint San Dimas, promises to be Malesso's biggest and best celebration. I would like to recognize and commend the many individuals who will prepare the food for the village feast, set up all of the palapas and tents, decorate the church and surrounding areas and the celebrants who will all help to ring in biggest event of Malesso this year. Biba San Dimas! Biba Malesso! Biba Guam!

HONORING UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN-FLINT ALUMNI ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION

HON. DALE E. KILDEE

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize an important event in the history of the University of Michigan-Flint. On October 25th, faculty, staff, alumni, and students of the University's Physical Therapy Department will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its founding, which originated on the University of Michigan Ann Arbor campus, and the 20th anniversary of its relocation to the Flint campus.

Professional education in physical therapy at the University of Michigan commenced in 1952 within the Department of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation, in the Medical School on the Ann Arbor campus. It was the first professional preparation program in physical therapy in the State of Michigan. Graduates received a Bachelor of Science degree from the College of Literature, Science and the Arts and a Certificate in Physical Therapy from the Medical School. In 1982-83, in response to multiple professional developments, the educational program was relocated to the Flint campus of the University in order to achieve budgetary, curricular, logistical and administrative enhancements not possible on the Ann Arbor campus, due to changing Medical

In keeping with its tradition of academic leadership, the program became the first program in the state to make the transition to the professional (entry-level) MPT (Master of Physical Therapy), as well as offer a post-professional MPT degree for practicing clinicians. The university will also be the first in the state to offer the Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT) degree, with the first class graduating in December 2002. This doctoral degree will be the first doctoral degree offered at one of the University of Michigan regional campuses.

Mr. Speaker, for 50 years the University of Michigan-Flint's Physical Therapy Department has prepared generalist physical therapy practitioners, many of whom have gone on to practice in specialty areas as well as teach in both academic and clinical settings, or who serve as managers and researchers within definitive areas of professional practice. Over 1700 graduates have served patient/clients not only in the state of Michigan but nationally and internationally. Many have assumed leadership positions in health care delivery systems and academic institutions. The long tradition of preparing practitioners who are outstanding clinicians who practice in a humanistic way has made the graduates of this program highly valued by client/patients and sought by employers. As a lifelong resident of Flint, I am exceptionally pleased with the accomplishments and advancements made at the university. It continues to serve as one of most valuable resources of my district. I ask my colleagues in the 107th Congress to please join me in congratulating the university, and the dedicated men and women that make up the Physical Therapy Department.

TRIBUTE TO THE COLORADO
GENERAL ASSEMBLY

HON. BOB SCHAFFER

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the efforts of the Colorado General Assembly concerning federal assistance for crop and livestock producers due to drought devastation. Joint Resolution 02S-1005, passed by Colorado's General Assembly, urges the U.S. Congress to adopt measures to allow producers of agricultural commodities to receive short-term assistance in coping with and responding to the drought conditions. I commend the work of the Colorado General Assembly for its strong efforts toward the betterment of the state and well being of the people of the great state of Colorado.

I hereby submit for the RECORD Colorado House Joint Resolution 02S-1005:

CONCERNING FEDERAL ASSISTANCE FOR CROP AND LIVESTOCK PRODUCERS DUE TO DROUGHT DEVASTATION

mal for many western states, including Colorado; and

Whereas, Facing one of the most severe droughts in the state's history, all Colorado counties have been designated disaster areas, as dry conditions have greatly reduced the ability of farmers and ranchers to produce their commodities and to provide related services; and

Whereas, The lack of moisture will drastically decrease the harvest of many Colorado crops, such as wheat which is expected to yield a crop that is 25-40 percent of a normal yield; and

Whereas, Irrigated farms on average have received only 15 percent of the water they normally use for crop production; and

Whereas, In addition to making it more difficult to raise crops, the extreme dryness also carries with it several secondary concerns, such as the loss of top soil, soil erosion, and an increased possibility of insect infestation; and

Whereas, The suffering state of agriculture directly impacts the prospects of raising livestock, by way of low-yielding feeder crops, limited harvest foliage and forage, and the increasing price of hay and other feed; and

Whereas, Livestock auction barns in the west are extending their sale hours to accommodate the large numbers of livestock being sold because ranchers cannot afford to feed their herds; and

Whereas, There is no insurance available for suffering livestock producers; and

Whereas, Livestock and crop prices alike have been low since 1997, giving producers very little financial cushion for hard times; and

Whereas, The financial impact caused by the drought could be devastating to Colorado's agricultural community, but also will have an overall effect on the economy of the entire state; and

Whereas, An allocation of nearly $2.5 billion for disaster assistance was originally included in the federal "Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002", commonly known as the "2002 Farm Bill", but this allocation was removed during conference committee deliberations on the bill; and

Whereas, Members of Congress subsequently tried to make disaster assistance moneys available by including an allocation in another bill, but unfortunately, this attempt failed as well; now, therefore,

Be It Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third General Assembly of the State of Colorado, the Senate concurring herein:

That we, the members of the General Assembly, strongly urge the United States Congress:

(1) To examine and adopt measures to allow producers of agricultural commodities to receive short-term assistance in coping with and responding to the drought conditions, such as the following:

(a) Implementing tax code modifications that enable producers who are forced to sell livestock during periods of drought to receive additional time to reinvest the sale proceeds before having to pay capital gains tax on the earnings, thus allowing the producer to wait until the drought conditions have subsided before reinvesting;

(b) Providing crop and livestock producers with direct emergency assistance to be delivered through existing Farm Service Agency channels;

(2) To reexamine how drought relief assistance is provided and consider elevating the manner in which it is provided to place drought assistance on the same level of assistance that is provided to other natural disasters such as wildfires, hurricanes, and floods; and

INTRODUCING THE GREAT PLAINS HISTORIC GRASSLAND WILDER- NESS AREA ACT

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a member of the Native American Caucus to introduce the Great Plains Historic Grassland Wilderness Area Act and urge my colleagues to co-sponsor and vote for this legislation. This bill will ensure that the last remaining pristine grasslands are protected.

While ninety-nine percent of the original grasslands have been altered from their natural states for corporate interests, such as mining coal, oil and gas, one percent remains in pristine form. I believe this one percent must be protected.

Though humans continue to transform and extract "resources" from the natural environment, our earth maintains the ability to revitalize itself. In spite of this revitalization process, numerous species and natural environments have been destroyed because of our decisions.

While most of the remaining pristine grasslands are located on federal lands throughout the plains region, a small portion are on tribal government lands. I believe that the federal government, in conjunction with tribal governments of this region, should work together to ensure the continuance of these unique environments. Such efforts would provide these areas of the earth the time to replenish through natural processes.

In 1964, Congress vowed, "to secure for the American people of present and future generations the benefits of an enduring source of wilderness." I believe this promise has not been met and am introducing this legislation to reinforce Congress' commitment to protect these lands.

Once this bill is signed into law, federal lands that contain pristine grasslands would be protected and enhanced for the benefit and enjoyment of present and future generations. In addition, tribal governments which own such pristine grasslands or have such land held in trust by the federal government, could choose to participate in the benefits and programs provided under this bill.

Participating tribal governments would receive financial and technical assistance for their complete participation in the processes to manage, protect, and restore these natural environments with the federal government. I believe that these governments should have a greater role in managing federal grassland wilderness areas using their proven methods of environmental sustainability.

Tribal governments administer hospitals, law enforcement and public safety agencies, research centers, childcare facilities, primary and secondary schools, colleges, court systems, environmental protection agencies and carry out numerous other governmental functions.

As a result of such tribal governmental administration activity, Indian tribes provide major contributions to the local, regional and national economy by providing both revenue and employment opportunities to both Indian and non-Indian people of America. Clearly, such governments can effectively assist the federal government in managing federal grassland wilderness areas.

Tribal colleges of this region would be contracted to initiate and complete a study of the grasslands wilderness area to determine the original plant and animal species inhabiting the grasslands, their present condition and the steps necessary to restore such species to self-sustaining levels.

These administrative and research activities would be carried out through the Office of Native American Wilderness Management in the Department of the Interior. The Office would be headed by a Director, selected by the Secretary in consultation with tribal governments from the plains region.

I would like to thank all of the tribal government leaders who participated in the consultation sessions to design this bill. I would especially like to thank Ms. Charmaine White Face for her dedication and consistency to assisting in bringing this bill to fruition.

COMMENDING THE UNITED FILI- PINO STUDENT ASSOCIATION OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, student activism is strong and commonplace on my home island of Guam. Historically, Guam students have joined organizations to gain a sense of comradery and to seize upon an opportunity to engage in noble charitable and civic activities that benefit the community. One particular organization that stands out among the rest for their service and dedicated membership is the United Filipino Student Association (UFSA).

The UFSA, comprised of University of Guam students and students from each of the four public high schools on Guam, provides a social environment that promotes the culture and unity of Filipino students on the island. The UFSA is also very civic-minded, adding to the membership's ability to recognize, understand and take action on issues relevant to their everyday experiences. Promoting the knowledge of the historical, political, social and economic conditions of Filipino people

On September 30, 2002, this very prominent student organization will be swearing in its newly elected officers, marking another chapter in its already rich history, which spans over two decades. The first UFSA on Guam was founded at the University Of Guam in 1972, and after an eight year period of dormancy, the association was revived in 1993. The officers spearheading its renewed presence then were Patrick S. Luces, Marelito Calimlim, Leila Orden, Buena Fernandez, Analisa Retumban, Norman Analista, and Lawrence S. Luces.

In 1998, Mark Galang, Mike Cabral, and Kendrick De Vera succeeded in integrating UOG UFSA with UFSA of George Washington High School, John F. Kennedy High School, and Simon Sanchez High School. This organizational merging proved to empower the membership base and rejuvenate their work. In 2001, Southern High UFSA was chartered and joined the overall UFSA organization. This year, expansion efforts continue with the Guam Community College (GCC). Filipino Students at GCC are currently in the process of establishing an UFSA organization in their school.

Through the years, UFSA has reached out island-wide and touched an entire community. The Filipino youth of Guam, who worked so diligently to build the UFSA today are to be commended for their leadership and example. The UFSA has strengthened the education of so many, supplementing their classroom experiences with valuable civic commitment. The organization has served as a medium through which students have demonstrated the highest levels of citizenship. I commend the UFSA for their work and encourage their newly elected leadership to carry this torch of success for the future. I thank the outgoing President, Patrick Quitugua, and congratulate the incoming President, Andrew T. Solidum. I also congratulate Diane Reyes, the first Vice President who will serve an additional term, and Riza Marquez, the second Vice President who will also serve another term. Finally, I thank Lea' Beth Naholowaa, their advisor. With their leadership, I know many more good things for UFSA and Guam are to come.

HONORING THE 165TH ANNIVER- SARY OF ALL SAINTS EPIS- COPAL CHURCH

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to join me in congratulating All Saints Church upon celebrating 165 years of worship, fellowship and outreach in Pontiac, Michigan.

All Saints Episcopal Church was started in 1837 as a mission. Reverend Algernon Hollister, of nearby St. John's Parish in Troy, first organized the parish to serve the one thousand persons living in the Pontiac area at that time. Initially called Zion Church, its first liturgy was celebrated on September 24 with 16 persons receiving the Eucharist that Sunday morning. The parish moved quickly to build a church. The original wooden structure built on the corner of Williams and Pike Streets was replaced with a stone church in 1854.

After struggling for years under several rectors, the parish experienced a transformation under the leadership of Reverend Lawrence Stevens. He assumed the rector's position in 1881. Known for his generosity to persons in need he was also noted for his ability to comfort the sick and mourning. His energy infused the parish and the congregation became a center in the community to assist the poor and suffering. Even after his stewardship of the parish was over, his influence could still be felt. When the parish hall was added in 1927 it was named in his honor.

The congregation decided to rename the parish in 1904. Now known as All Saints Episcopal Church, the parish suffered a blow the next year. Fire destroyed part of the church. Undaunted, the parish cleared away the rubble, erected a temporary roof and continued to celebrate the Eucharist until a new building was finished in 1908. The parish continued its growth and in 1922 two hundred families made it their spiritual home. That year Reverend Bates Burt became the church's new pastor. He remained in that post for the next 25 years and guided All Saints Church in several important missions. Together with his son, Alfred, and the church organist, Wihla Hutson, Reverend Burt composed several Christmas carols. They are now known as "Burt Carols" and sung in churches throughout the Anglican Communion. He was instrumental in the building of Stevens Hall and his vision shaped the use of that structure. He saw the parish hall as not only a meeting place for the congregation but of the community as a whole. His vision of social justice and interaction with all the citizens of Pontiac has guided the parish in the intervening years.

Through the Great Depression and World War II, All Saints Parish has been a beacon to those desperate to sustain body and soul. When the congregations of other denominations decided to leave the city of Pontiac during the period of the Fair Housing Covenant and mandatory school integration, All Saints Parish voted to remain in their home in the heart of the city. The parish members believed that God had placed the church in its location and they would be violating His mandate to desert the city in its time of crisis. With the advent of Reverend Catherine Waynick as rector in 1993, the people of All Saints Parish expanded their outreach and started the Bound Together program. Serving the children of Pontiac, it provides tutoring, social activities, arts and crafts and hot food to nourish both their physical and spiritual lives.

Three rectors of All Saints Parish have been elevated to the episcopate, the Reverend Herbert Fox, the Reverend Ivor Curtis and the Reverend Catherine Waynick. In 1997 the national Episcopal Church designated All Saints as a Jubilee Center. This honor was accorded to the parish to recognize its vibrant, ongoing partnership with the greater Pontiac community.

For 165 years All Saints Parish has been a dynamic force for the public good. At every time of social need or upheaval, the parishioners have resoundingly responded by living the gospel spoken every Sunday in the sanctuary. The inspiration for living by Christian ideals is repeated again and again in the lives of the clergy and congregation of this parish.

Mr. Speaker I ask the House of Representatives to rise with me and applaud the continuity of Christian life that has resonated for 16 decades and resonates today through All Saints Parish.

THE DAY LIBERTY CRIED

HON. RICHARD H. BAKER

OF LOUISIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to read a poem entitled "The Day Liberty Cried" written by a constituent of mine, Scott Rogers.

THE DAY LIBERTY CRIED

(By Scott Rogers)

Just another Tuesday morn
As people went their way
The cars, the trains were bustling by Another working day
Although diverse with many faces
These people shared one hue
They lived together with Liberty
Under the colors Red, White, and Blue
Liberty was the one thing that they shared
They nurtured Her in their heart
But little that morn did they realize
That their world would be torn apart
Liberty was strong She stood proud
But on this fateful morn She cried
In horror She watched as evil attacked
So many innocent people died
Liberty bowed Her head that day
For She felt somehow that She Had allowed these acts to come to Her shores
To the Great Land of the free
But the evil that attacked Her
Could not begin to understand
That Liberty could not be destroyed
Nor our great love for this great land
Those who tried to hurt Her
Could not break Her soul
And proudly we fought to rebuild what was
Although heavy was our toll
Each brick that fell was carefully removed
Each victim we will always remember
And Liberty is there to remind us all
Each Eleventh of September
We will never forget, we must not forget
Yes, . . . Liberty did cry that day
But we will never stop pledging "In God we
Because? . . . We love this U.S.A.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO LUCINDA SULLIVAN

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct privilege to recognize Mrs. Lucinda Sullivan of Redvale, Colorado. Mrs. Sullivan has recently been honored in the State of Mississippi as the oldest living relative of the Confederate President, Jefferson Davis.

Mrs. Sullivan grew up and has spent her life in southwestern Colorado after her grandparents relocated there in the 19th century. As Jefferson Davis' great granddaughter, Mrs. Sullivan is part of a proud legacy that is still revered throughout the South for Davis' leadership as President of the Confederacy during the Civil War. Davis was also an influential leader in the War with Mexico, and as the Secretary of War for the Franklin Pierce Administration.

In honor of her historic past, Mrs. Sullivan was anointed Queen of Pioneer Days, and has just recently traveled to the Mississippi Delta with 16 other family members for Davis' annual birthday celebration. The festivities were held at the Beavoir home and museum, and then a family reunion was prepared at Davis' other home. Both homes were owned by Davis after his former properties had been confiscated by Union soldiers after the Civil War.

Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to recognize Mrs. Lucinda Sullivan before this Congress and this nation for her participation in preserving our nation's rich and enduring history. It is through the continued efforts of citizens like Mrs. Sullivan that keeps American history alive today and I commend her for her efforts.

INTRODUCING THE TRIBAL GOVERNMENT HOMELAND SECURITY COORDINATION AND INTEGRATION ACT

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 26, 2002

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today as a member of the Native American Caucus to introduce the Tribal Government Homeland Security Coordination and Integration Act and urge my colleagues to co-sponsor and vote for this legislation. This bill will help ensure that the United States is better prepared to prevent and respond to terrorist activities and other emergencies.

Once this bill is signed into law, federal, state, local and tribal governments within the United States will be fully integrated in a national homeland security strategy. Moreover, my bill will ensure that all levels of government are engaged in a coordinated effort and well equipped to defend against bioterrorism and to handle any other public health or safety emergency that threatens our land or people. For the first time in the history of our country, every government in America will be positioned and united to assist in the singular effort of protecting what we have here on our shores.

Ever since President Bush stated in his State of the Union Address earlier this year that State and local governments should have access to Federal homeland and anti-bioterrorism security funding, it has been my strong belief that tribal governments should participate in these programs and be included in the distribution of these funds.

However, since the president did not mandate the inclusion of tribal governments in homeland security and emergency preparedness programs, there has been confusion within the departments of the Federal Government as to whether or not Indian tribes should receive homeland security program or grant funds. Similar to State governments, tribal governments have citizens to serve and protect and their decisions often benefit the larger surrounding communities and states.

Tribal governments administer hospitals, law enforcement and public safety agencies, research centers, childcare facilities, primary and secondary schools, colleges, court systems, environmental protection agencies and carry out numerous other governmental functions. Tribal business interests include a full range of activities from agriculture to industrial production to business parks. As a result of such tribal governmental administration and commercial activity, Indian tribes provide major contributions to the local, regional and national economy by providing both revenue and employment opportunities to both Indian and non-Indian people of America.

During the first round of homeland security funding distribution every state was allocated $5 million in federal funds to develop their homeland emergency preparedness plans. However, tribal governments struggled to develop their emergency preparedness plans with their existing resources.

It is vital that Congress and the Administration guarantee that the Federal Government and State, local and tribal governments participate in an integrated and coordinated effort to protect our people and lands. A failure to integrate and coordinate with tribal governments in the homeland security plan could leave many weak governmental links in America's homeland security chain of protection. Since we are spending a great deal of time and resources developing a national homeland security strategic plan, we might as well strive to get it right the first time. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support the Tribal Government Homeland Security Coordination and Integration Act.

During a House Energy and Commerce Committee hearing in March, I asked Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson if tribal governments would have access to homeland security funds administered by his Department, and if so, by what means would the Secretary inform tribes of their eligibility? Secretary Thompson responded by stating that to the best of his knowledge, tribal governments would be eligible for such funding and that he would notify the tribal governments of their ability to access these funds. I hoped that by informing tribal governments of their ability to request these funds, that this would encourage such governments to come forward and successfully receive the funds crucial to protecting their people and land and participate in the national strategy to protect America here at home.

Unfortunately, Secretary Thompson has failed to clarify the eligibility of tribal governments to participate in homeland security administered by the Health and Human Services Department. In addition, Secretary Thompson did not adequately contact tribes about their needs or reach out to provide them with homeland security information. Instead, he responded to my request by sending a letter to Governors reminding each that they should not overlook the existence of tribal governments within their borders.

While I was disappointed that Secretary Thompson had not chosen to reach out to tribal governments prior to March, I believed that the lack of communication between the new Administration and tribal governments stemmed from the President's non-issuance of an Executive Order requiring the Federal Government to establish a consultation policy with tribal governments. Without such an order, I believed tribal governments would have continued to be left out of the loop on Federal programs and other information that could dramatically benefit their governments and citizens.

In an attempt to address this situation, I sent a letter to the President, which was co-signed by twelve of my colleagues, asking that he clarify his policy position regarding consultation with tribal governments and I urged him to offer an Executive Order. I am pleased that the administration responded to my letter by reaffirming the existing Executive Order on tribal consultation.

After 6 months of communications concerning the necessary role of tribal consultation and requesting that the President issue a directive for such interaction, I am pleased that the Bush Administration has clarified his policy. In a letter dated June 19, Alberto Gonzales, Counsel to the President, wrote:

Dear Congressman Pallone: On behalf of President Bush, thank you for the letter you and some of your colleagues sent on March 20, 2002, regarding the issuance of an Executive Order on consultation and coordination with Indian tribal governments.

As you know, President Clinton issued Executive Order 13175, entitled Consultation and Coordination with Indian Tribal Governments, on November 6, 2000. In early 2001, the Bush Administration reviewed the Executive Order and found it to be consistent with the views of the Administration on tribal consultation and coordination. Currently, the Administration is working to see that the order is implemented. It is our hope that growing experience with tribal consultation and the emergence of agency policies and procedures will result in better federal governance on issues of concern to tribal governments."

I applaud the administration for clarifying the role the federal departments will take in consulting with tribal governments on issues that affect them. Yet, I remain concerned about their record in implementing this policy. My bill will remedy the Administration's failure to establish tribal participation in homeland security activities and provide that tribes are treated as states, as appropriate, but there are many other instances in which federal programs need further clarification with respect to the eligibility of Indian tribes.

I want to thank all of my colleagues in Congress who supported my letter to the President requesting clarification of his tribal consultation procedure. I want to thank Representatives BACA, BLUMENAUER, FILNER, INSLEE, JEFFERSON, LEE, MALONEY, MCCOLLUM, REYES, ROYBAL-ALLARD, STUPAK AND UDALL, for their support on this initiative.

During this 107th session of Congress, the president and Congress have requested and approved substantial homeland security and emergency preparedness funding increases for federal and state governments in Fiscal Years 2002 and 2003. In an attempt to ensure tribal governments received access to these funds, I urged the Administration and my colleagues to mandate that a portion of these funds be made available to their governments. For the most part, such goals have gone unfulfilled and it is time to rectify this situation.

Since the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and the subsequent introduction of weapons grade anthrax into the United States postal system and congressional office buildings in Washington, D.C., the President and the Congress have worked closely to respond to the need to rebuild and strengthen the nation's public health, national security and emergency response systems.

Current versions of Homeland Security Department legislation incorporate state and local governments, health officials and law enforcement entities. However, to make certain the United States is fully prepared to prevent and respond to terrorist activities on all fronts, I believe tribal governments must also be included.

Despite the government-to-government relationship between tribal governments and the United States, the United States has not honored its trust responsibility and failed to include and consult with tribal governments in homeland security planning. Moreover, there are no specific provisions for the BIA or the IHS to participate in homeland security programs and funding.

In an attempt to remedy these situations, I am introducing this bill to ensure the coordination and integration of tribal governments in the national homeland security strategy and to establish an Office of Tribal Government Homeland Security within the Department of Homeland Security. The bill will also designate specific provisions for the BIA and the IHS to participate in homeland security funding.

Throughout many areas of the United States, tribal, BIA and IHS facilities and services are the only sources available to provide emergency health services, disaster response, and law enforcement to tribal and surrounding non-tribal communities alike. Thus, enhancing the capacity of Tribes to plan, protect against and respond to bioterrorism or other public health or safety emergencies is vital to all Americans.

To ensure the bill meets the needs and honors the rights of tribal governments, I have consulted with representatives from the National Indian Health Board (NIHB), National Congress of American Indians, California Rural Indian Health Board and tribal governments in designing its contents. I am pleased that we are moving forward together on this initiative. I would like to acknowledge Ms. Lenna Aoki of NIHB for lending her expertise in government relations and strategic planning in this legislative effort.

1/29/02, President Bush declares in his State of the Union Address that state governments should have access to federal homeland and anti-bioterrorism security funding. During his speech, the President fails to specify whether tribal governments are included in this homeland emergency preparedness plan, establishing great confusion within the departments of the federal government as to whether or not they have access to funds.

1/31/02, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson writes a letter to all state governors in follow-up to his letter of 1/11/02 further advising them of the comprehensive financial resources that their states will be receiving, "in support of State and local public health measures to strengthen the nation against the threat of biological weapons." One billion dollars was made available to states to foster State and local preparedness. Each state received $5,000,000 to implement part one of the two-part plan. Tribal governments were not mentioned in this letter and therefore received zero funding from this funding source.

2/1–28/02, Congressman Frank Pallone, Jr., instructs his staff person, Mr. Mark LeBeau, to take the lead to ensure access for tribal governments to homeland security and anti-bioterrorism funding. Mr. LeBeau, on behalf of Congressman Pallone, began to consult with the national and regional organizations which represent tribal governments, as well as with tribal governments directly, on this initiative.

3/13/02, Congressman Pallone, during a House Energy and Commerce Committee hearing, presses Secretary Thompson as to whether or not tribal governments would have access to homeland security and anti-bioterrorism funds. Secretary Thompson responds by stating that tribal governments are eligible for both types of security funds. The Secretary stated that he would notify the tribes of their ability to access these funds.

3/20/02, Congressman Pallone sends a letter with twelve colleagues to the President asking the he clarify his procedure of consulting with tribal governments on all issues pertaining to Indian Country. In the letter, the Congressman state, "we have spoken with numerous American Indian tribal representatives during the past six months, and have learned that they are incredibly concerned that the Administration has not issued an Executive Order on Consultation and Coordination with Indian Tribal Governments. Without such an Order, agencies and entities such as the Bureau of Indian Affairs and Homeland Security team have developed their own management systems without consulting the Indian tribal governments. Such non-inclusion stimulates confusion at the national, state and tribal level, and leaves Indian tribal governments out of the loop."

3/22/02, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson writes a letter to all state governors requesting that, "State's plans take full advantage of the great resources and health care delivery systems that Tribes and the IHS have to offer and that you involve them to the maximum degree possible in both your planning and implementation."

5/13/02, Congressman Pallone sends "Dear Advocates of Indian Country" letter to tribal governments informing them of his effort to pressure the Bush Administration to make homeland security funds available to tribes.

5/17/02, Congressman Pallone publishes a column in Indian Country Today regarding the need for tribal governments to have access to federal homeland and anti-bioterrorism security funding, and urge such governments to request such funding from the federal government.

6/19/02, Alberto Gonzales, counsel to the President, responds to the letter sent by Congressman Pallone and the twelve colleagues regarding consultation with tribal governments. Mr. Gonzales writes, "In early 2001, the Bush Administration reviewed the Executive Order and found it to be consistent with the views of the Administration on tribal consultation and coordination. Currently, the Administration is working to see that the Order is implemented."

7/17/02, Congressman Pallone sends "Dear Advocates of Indian Country" letter to tribal governments, updating them on his decision to conduct a comprehensive review of the existing appropriations and authorization measures of the Anti-Terrorism Emergency spending bills; the president's budget request for FY 03 related to this initiative, as well as the newly planned homeland security department budget to determine where tribal governments can access such funding.

7/25/03, Congressman Pallone sends "Dear Advocates of Indian Country" letter to tribal governments informing them of the Administration's decision regarding the role the federal departments will take in consulting with tribal governments on all issues that affect them.

8/5/02, Congressman Pallone sends "Dear Advocates of Indian Country" letter to tribal governments updating them on the consultation meetings he has held with the National Indian Health Board regarding the proposed Homeland Security Department.

8/5/02, Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson writes a letter to Congressman Pallone to inform him of the recent efforts that the Department of Health and Human Services has made to ensure the inclusion of tribal leaders in bioterrorism and overall public health preparedness activities.

The Secretary states, "though we did not specifically include American Indian and Alaska native tribes in the initial letter sent to governors, the HRSA Bioterrorism Hospital Preparedness Program cooperative agreement guidance dated February 15, 2002 recommended that tribal and IHS hospital take a leadership role in regional planning.

8/28/02, Congressman Pallone publishes a column in Indian Country Today regarding his decision to introduce a bill to ensure the coordination and integration of tribal governments in the national homeland security plan and to establish an Office of Tribal Government Homeland Security within the Department of Homeland Security. The bill, developed in consultation with tribal governments and their representative organizations, will also designate specific provisions for the BIA and the IHS to participate in homeland security funding.

9/26/03, Congressman Pallone introduces the Tribal Government Homeland Security Coordination and Integration Act.

GURTEJ SINGH EXPOSES INDIAN TYRANNY

HON. CYNTHIA A. MCKINNEY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, recently a seminar was held in New York on the oppression of minorities in Hindu nationalist India. One of the speakers was the Sikh scholar and author Gurtej Singh, Professor of Sikhism. He is also the author of the book Chakravayuh: Web of Indian Secularism.

Professor Gurtej Singh discussed the history of Sikh independence and the Sikh religion. He exposed the connivance of Sikh leaders of all parties with the Indian government. He discussed the efforts of the Hindu nationalists to absorb the Sikh religion.

Professor Gurtej Singh has been honored by the Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, which runs the Gurdwaras (Sikh temples) in Punjab, Khalistan. He is a very well respected Sikh scholar.

The information he discussed underlies the need for the Sikhs in Punjab, Khalistan to work to achieve their freedom. Unfortunately, the Indian government has recently reaffirmed through its Ambassador to the U.S. that it will hold a plebiscite in Kashmir, as it promised in 1948, or in Punjab.

Since the United States was formed to be the bastion of freedom, we owe it to the people there to do what we can to support their freedom efforts. We should declare our support for a free and fair plebiscite in Punjab, Khalistan, in Kashmir, in primarily Christian Nagaland, and elsewhere in the subcontinent where people are seeking freedom and independence. The democratic way is the best way to resolve issues. Until all people in India enjoy the full civil rights of democratic citizens, until human rights are respected, India should receive no American aid or trade. This is the best way that America can help bring freedom to that troubled region.

Mr. Speaker, the Council of Khalistan recently published a press release commending Professor Gurtej Singh for his work for human

S. GURTEJ SINGH EXPOSES INDIAN TYRANNY AT SEMINAR

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 16, 2002.—The Sikh Nation appreciates the contributions of S. Gurtej Singh IAS, who spoke at a seminar in New York last week. He exposed the genocide of the Indian government and the betrayal and corruption of the Akali Dal leadership in his book, Chakravayuh: Web of Indian Secularism, and in his speech he gave historical facts about the sovereign, independent Sikh state and the independence of the Sikh religion since its inception. He explained how the Hindu majority wants to assimilate the Sikh religion and establish a Hindu Rashtra. We recommend that everyone read his book.

"S. Gurtej Singh has done an excellent job of exposing the connivance of the Akali leaders, such as Badal, Tohra, and Mann, with the Indian government in its campaign of terror against the Sikh Nation," said Dr. Gurmit Singh Aulakh, President of the Council of Khalistan. "He is to be saluted," Dr. Aulakh said. "The Sikh Nation needs more good Sikhs like S. Gurtej Singh if it is ever to end the oppression." The Council of Khalistan is the government pro tempore of Khalistan, the Sikh homeland that declared its independence from India on October 7, 1987. The Council of Khalistan leads the Sikh Nation's struggle for independence.

"Gurtej Singh's presentation was excellent and he made a detailed presentation of the abuses and oppression of the Sikh Nation," Dr. Aulakh said. "The time has come to throw out the conniving Sikh leadership of the Akalis and Congress and unite behind committed, principled, pro-Sikh leaders who are committed to freedom," he said.

The Indian government has murdered over 250,000 Sikhs since 1984. Over 75,000 Kashmiri Muslims have been killed since 1988. More than 200,000 Christians have been killed since 1947, along with tens of thousands of Dalits, Tamils, Assamese, Bodos, Manipuris, and other minorities. Last month, police stood by as militant Hindus attacked Muslims in Gujarat. Over 5,000 people died, according to the Indian newspaper The Hindu. The Indian government paid twice as much compensation to the families of Hindus who were killed as it paid to Muslims who were killed.

The U.S. State Department reported in 1994 that the Indian government paid out over 41,000 cash bounties to police officers for killing Sikhs. Since Christmas 1998, a wave of violence against Christians has seen priests murdered, nuns being raped, churches being burned, Christian schools and prayer halls destroyed, and no one has been punished for these acts. Militant Hindu fundamentalists allied with the pro-Fascist RSS, the parent organization of the ruling BJP, burned missionary Graham Staines and his two young sons to death.

"For the survival of the Sikh Nation, the time has come to launch a Shantmai Morcha (peaceful agitation) to liberate Khalistan from Indian occupation," Dr. Aulakh said. "I call on the Sikh leadership in Punjab to begin a Shantmai Morcha immediately. If they will not, the Sikh Nation should rid itself of them and support leaders who will do so," he said. "I also call on the United States government to support freedom for Khalistan and the other minority nations seeking their freedom from India," he said. "Sikhs are a separate nation and ruled Punjab until 1849. No Sikh has signed the Indian constitution," Dr. Aulakh said.

Sikhism is a sovereign, independent, monotheistic religion which believes in the equality of the whole human race, including gender equality. Sikhs pray every day for the well being of all humanity. The Sikh Nation was established as sovereign. Guru gave political power to the Sikh Nation. ("In Grieb Sikhhan Ko Deon Patshahi.") "Freedom and self-determination are the birthright of all peoples and nations. The people of South Asia must have self-determination now," Dr. Aulakh said. "India is on the verge of disintegration," he said. "Khalistan will be free by 2008."

SEPTEMBER 11 ANNIVERSARY

HON. DAVID VITTER

OF LOUISIANA

Monday, September 30, 2002

Mr. VITTER. Mr. Speaker, on September 11, 2001 our people, our democracy, and our values were attacked in a cowardly and reprehensible way. I visited the Pentagon two days after the attacks, and the sheer devastation viewed in person was beyond the imagination.

When I made it back home to Louisiana, I hugged my wife and kids and could not help but think of the people who never returned home on September 11. That fateful day introduced us to hundreds of heroes. And it reintroduced us to the wonderful spirit of our nation.

I visited Ground Zero for the Commemorative Joint Meeting of Congress one year later and visited the Pentagon on the anniversary of the attacks. These sites—along with the Pennsylvania crash site—stand as reminders of the devastation our country suffered, but they also remind us that America is not devastated.

We are unified in the knowledge that democracy and freedom will prevail. People across the country have, over the last year, demonstrated to the world that terrorism can never destroy our way of life. And I am proud of our country, proud of my fellow citizens for the patriotism, spirit, and strength they have shown over the last year.

It is a great honor to serve in Congress at this time, and I take very seriously my pledge to protect and defend the United States of America.

May God bless us all, and may He continue to bless our great nation.

IN HONOR OF TIMOTHY GREGORY

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the work of Mr. Timothy Gregory in preserving a vital part of Southern California's architectural heritage. Over the last few years, Mr. Gregory has been instrumental in bringing to light the architectural significance of the Janes Village area.

Mr. Gregory is locally known as "The Building Biographer," and his knowledge has aided countless citizens in the community in appreciation of the architectural treasures that surround them every day. Through innumerable hours devoted to researching and informing the community about Janes Village and the vision of Elisha P. Janes, the noted local builder for whom the area is named, Mr. Gregory has almost single-handedly been responsible for the rediscovery of Mr. Janes' Altadena building projects and their spectacular architecture.

The three hundred homes built between 1924 and 1926 are part of Mr. Janes' vision to build a thousand homes in Altadena. Although he never met that mark, the hundreds of homes he did build still stand as a testament to the early years of development in the Los Angeles area. Originally billed as "Homes of Distinction in Scenic Altadena," these homes are as unique and special today as the day they were built.

These homes stand as an enduring architectural monument—three hundred homes built on nine streets, of which two thirds can be directly attributed to the work of Mr. Janes. Their distinctive English Revival style marks some of the most remarkable architecture of the time.

Thanks to the efforts of Mr. Gregory, Janes Village has now established itself not only as a Heritage Area, but as a neighborhood and community with a rich historical past. I ask all Members of Congress to join me in applauding the work of Timothy Gregory in celebrating and preserving a piece of our incredible architectural history.

INDIA CANNOT GOVERN WITHOUT THE PEOPLE'S CONSENT

HON. CYNTHIA A. MCKINNEY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, no government can govern without the consent of the governed. That is one of the founding principles of America.

Earlier this year, my friend Dr. Gurmit Singh Aulakh, President of the Council of Khalistan, issued a "New Year's Message to the Sikh Nation." In it, he noted that India is governing the Sikhs of Punjab, Khalistan, the Christians of Nagaland, the Muslims of Kashmir, and many other minority nations without their consent.

In the letter, the Council of Khalistan said that the elections earlier this year in Punjab won't have any effect in terms of freeing the people, but merely change the facts of the oppressors. The letter noted that in the likely event of a war between India and Pakistan, it will be the Sikhs and the Kashmiris who will be the primary victims. He called on Sikhs not to fight for India. He reminded us that no Sikh representative ever signed India's constitution. How can India's constitution be binding on the Sikhs when they have never been a party to it?

Dr. Aulakh wrote that India is not one country and is just a remnant of British colonialism. He wrote that its breakup is inevitable. On January 25, Indian Home Minister L.K. Advani admitted that when Kashmir leaves India, India will unravel. That is why India is so scared of the 17 freedom movements within its borders. There is clear sentiment for freedom within India's borders, Mr. Speaker. We must do what we can to help that cause along.

What can America do to help the cause of freedom in South Asia? For one thing, we can try to keep India and Pakistan at peace. Unfortunately, there has already been firing across the Line of Control in Kashmir. We should use our diplomatic power to stop the fighting before it becomes all-out war. Both sides have nuclear weapons, Mr. Speaker, and the Pakistani government has been quite helpful to us in the war on terror, at least until India's military maneuvers forced them to divert troops to the Indian-Pakistani border.

We should stop our aid to India to help stop the atrocities against Sikhs, Christians, Kashmiri Muslims, dark-skinned Dalit "untouchables," and others. We should also publicly declare our support for self-determination for Khalistan, Kashmir, Nagaland, and all the minority nations and peoples seeking their freedom from India.

Mr. Speaker, the Council of Khalistan's open letter is very informative. I think my colleagues will be very well informed by reading it. Therefore, I would like to place it in the RECORD now.

KHALSA JI: Wahe Guru Ji Ka Khalsa, Wahe Guru Ji Ki Fateh!

Happy New Year to you and your family and friends. May 2002 be the best year you have ever had.

At the dawn of a new year, freedom for Khalistan is closer than ever. India is showing its instability. The Indian government is so desperate that it was caught red-handed murdering Sikh girls in Kashmir. Just as it did in Chithisinghpura, the regime is committing terrorist acts to try to set minority nations against one another in pursuit of India's ongoing drive for hegemony in South Asia. On May 27, several Indian soldiers were caught red-handed trying to set fire to a Gurdwara and some Sikh homes in Kashmir. Sikh and Muslim residents of the village overwhelmed the troops and stopped them from carrying out this atrocity. Now India has set up another terrorist incident that has cost the lives of at least three Sikh girls.

India has massed large numbers of troops and warheads on the border. Unfortunately, the upcoming war will result in the deaths of many Sikhs, Kashmiris, and other minorities, exactly the result the Indian government wants. I urge Sikhs not to support India. Punjab and Kashmir will be the main battlegrounds. Sikhs will be killed in the upcoming war more than any other people will, as they have in every war in the past. It is Sikhs who will suffer the most, and that suffering would be made worse by shedding Sikh blood for the oppressors of the Sikh Nation. We do not have a choice of peace or war. The Sikh Nation has a right to choose peace, and that choice requires the independence of Khalistan. To save Sikh lives, do not fight with the Hindu slavemasters. Instead, work to liberate Khalistan.

This is an ideal opportunity to begin a Shantmai Morcha and form a Khalsa Raj Party to achieve independence for Khalistan and to liberate the other countries seeking their freedom from Indian occupation. Take advantage of this opportunity. Fight to free Khalistan. Remember the words of former Akal Takht Jathedar Professor Darshan Singh: "If a Sikh is not Khalistani, he is not a Sikh." Self-determination is the right of all people and nations.

India is not one nation. It has 18 official languages. The Sikh Nation's sentiment for Khalistan is clear. Pro-Khalistan handbills were handed out at the Golden Temple on June 7 during the commemoration of Gallughara Divas and Sant Bhindranwale's martyrdom. Ajmer Singh Lakhwal, the head of the Bharat Kisan Union, has called for self-determination for the Sikhs. The flame of freedom burns bright in the hearts of the Sikhs.

India wants to wipe out minority nations so that they cannot ask for their freedom. To achieve that objective, the Indian government has murdered over 250,000 Sikhs since 1984, over 200,000 Christians in Nagaland since 1947, more than 75,000 Kashmiri Muslims since 1988, and tens of thousands of Dalits (dark-skinned "Untouchables," the aboriginal people of South Asia), Tamils, Bodos, Assamese, Manipuris, and others.

The Deccan Chronicle reported that the Indian government knew of the attack on Parliament, which killed 13 people, in advance and did nothing. The Indian army carried out the attack to provide a pretext for an attack on Pakistan and Kashmir. It hopes to use the killings of young Sikh girls to get Sikh to fight against Kashmiris.

India has a long record of terrorism. In November 1994, the Indian newspaper Hitavada reported that the Indian government paid the late governor of Punjab, Surendra Nath, approximately $1.5 billion to organize and support covert state terrorism in Punjab, Khalistan, and in Kashmir. The book Soft Target, written by two very respected journalists from the Toronto Star and the Toronto Globe and Mail, conclusively establishes that the Indian government blew up its own airliner in 1985, killing 329 innocent people. According to India Today, the Indian government created the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam (LTTE) and put up LTTE leaders in New Delhi's finest hotel. According to journalist Justin Raimondo of www.antiwar.com, George Fernandes, now the Defense Minister, even raised funds for the LTTE. The LTTE were created to stoop a U.S. broadcast tower in Sri Lanka. The Indian government turned on the LTTE because the LTTE now seeks an independent country for Tamils.

A report issued in April by the Movement Against State Repression (MASR) shows that India admitted that it held 52,268 political prisoners under the totalitarian "Terrorist and Disruptive Activities Act" (TADA), which expired in 1995. Persons arrested under TADA are routinely re-arrested upon their release. Cases were routinely registered against Sikh activists under TADA in states other than Punjab to give the police an excuse to continue holding them. The MASR report quotes the Punjab Civil Magistracy as writing "If we add up the figures of the last few years the number of innocent persons killed would run into lakhs [hundreds of thousands.]" As General Narinder Singh has said, "Punjab is a police state."

These Sikh political prisoners and the tens of thousands of other political prisoners held in India must be released immediately. Even before their release, the political prisoners should also be given the Khalsa Raj Party nomination for the seats in the Legislative Assembly, the SGPC, and when the parliamentary elections come up, for Parliament. The Sikh Nation will vote for these Sikh political prisoners, as they are the heroes of the Sikh Nation. No government can govern without the consent of the governed. The present Akali leadership of Badal, Tohra, Mann and others are the agents of the Indian government and are under their control. Do not trust them. Remember, Badal promised during the last election campaign that he would release Sikh political prisoners, punish guilty police officials who committed atrocities against the Sikh, and from a commission to investigate atrocities committed against the Sikhs since 1984.

In 1947, when India was divided, the cunning and deceitful Hindu leadership promised that Sikhs would have the glow of freedom in Punjab and that no law affecting Sikh rights would be passed without Sikh consent. As soon as the transfer of power had occurred and India was free, those promises were broken. Instead, India began its effort to wipe out the Sikh people, the Sikh Nation, and the Sikh religion. The Sikh Nation must regain its sovereignty to survive.

Sikh gave over 80 percent of the sacrifices to free India from the British. At that time, they were only 1.6 percent of the population. Sikhs are the ones who suffered the most after the freedom and partition of India. The Khalsa Panth can do it again to free itself from the slavery of Hindu India.

A free Khalistan will bring prosperity to the people of Punjab farmers will be able to sell their produce at high prices in the international market and buy cheaper fertilizers, insecticides, and seeds. Farm produce will not lie in the market for weeks without buyers as it did during the sale of the rice crop last year.

We must have a full, free, and fair plebiscite on the status of Khalistan and we must launch a Shantmai Morcha to liberate our homeland. Let us take this opportunity to bring freedom to our homeland and all the countries of South Asia.

Panth Da Sewadar,

DR. GURMIT SINGH AULAKH,
PRESIDENT,

Council of Khalistan.

INTRODUCTION OF THE HIGHER EDUCATION ACCREDITING AGENCY RESPONSIBILITY ACT OF 2002

HON. THOMAS E. PETRI

OF WISCONSIN

Mr. PETRI. Mr. Speaker, today, I have introduced legislation that will remove the requirement that institutions of higher education be accredited in order to be eligible for federal funds. The system of accreditation of colleges and universities that has developed in the United States does not serve its avowed purpose of ensuring that institutions of higher education have good academic programs and standards, and it fails to provide hardly any benefit at all to our higher education system. Additionally, more effective and less costly mechanisms are already in place to protect students because no institution can receive federal funds until the Department of Education certifies its financial and administrative capacity.

Accreditation these days has little to do with academic rigor or educational outcomes; rather, it serves only to show that a school has the right set of inputs, and virtually every college and university in the nation is able to comply with these standards. Because federal law makes eligibility to receive federal student loan funds conditional upon retaining accredited status from an accrediting association recognized by the Department of Education, schools have a rather large incentive to maintain their accreditation status. This places an enormous amount of influence in the hands of the accreditors, who oftentimes force schools to reallocate resources or even adopt policies at odds with a school's individual mission in order to comply with accreditation requirements and recommendations.

As we continue to pursue policies of accountability for our education institutions and strive to do our part in making higher education affordable for more Americans, we should examine ways that the accreditation process can be changed to play a more useful role—one that provides meaningful information about a school to students and parents. I believe my legislation is the necessary first step to achieve this goal.

RESTORING BUDGET DISCIPLINES

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

Monday, September 30, 2002

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, the end of September marks not only the end of fiscal year 2002, but also the expiration date for crucial mechanisms of budget discipline. I rise today to inform my colleagues that I have introduced the Restoring Budget Disciplines Act of 2002, a bill designed to extend budget enforcement mechanisms and get us back on the path of balanced budgets. I invite all members, from both sides of the aisle, to co-sponsor this legislation.

The 1990s were a decade of great fiscal progress, as we converted chronic deficits into hard-won surpluses. There is widespread agreement that the discretionary spending caps and the pay-as-you-go (PAYGO) rules—which were originally established in 1990 and which expire today—played a critical role in achieving this progress. Indeed, in his recent appearance before the House Budget Committee, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan testified that the spending caps and PAYGO rules have been effective, and noted that “[f]ailing to preserve them would be a grave mistake.”

The bill I have introduced extends the PAYGO rules through fiscal year 2007. As you know, the PAYGO rules require that the cost of all mandatory spending increases and all tax cuts enacted during a session be fully offset. If this condition is not met and the net effect of all tax legislation and mandatory spending legislation enacted during a session reduces the surpluses or increases the deficit, then the rules provide for a sequestration of resources by the Office of Management and Budget.

The bill also takes important steps toward extending the discretionary spending caps. The precise levels at which these caps should be extended can emerge only from bipartisan negotiations. But this bill puts the Congress on record as supporting a renewal of the caps, and it provides for the extension of key provisions of the Budget Act pertaining to the caps once such levels are set.

The fiscal progress of the last decade was achieved largely as a result of budget agreements between the White House and Congress. Now is the time for bipartisan action to renew the budget enforcement mechanisms that were created and extended in those landmark agreements.

TRIBUTE TO COL. AND MRS. DOUGLAS RAABERG

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

Monday, September 30, 2002

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, if has come to my attention that Claudia and Douglas Raaberg have received the 2002 Gen. and Mrs. Jerome F. O'Malley Award. The Raabergs have demonstrated a strong commitment and dedication to the United States Air Force.

The Gen. and Mrs. Jerome F. O'Malley Award recognizes the wing commander and spouse whose contributions to the nation, Air Force and local community best exemplify the highest ideals and positive leadership of a military couple in a key Air Force position. The Raabergs received this award for their efforts while stationed at Vance Air Force Base, Oklahoma.

As commander of the 71st Flying Training Wing, Col. Raaberg secured $11.5 million and 11 acres of land to build 230 new housing units, the first for the base in 60 years. His emphasis on dormitory improvements resulted in new furniture, carpet, microwaves and free Internet access for assigned airmen.

Claudia oversaw the Vance Spouses Club “compassion coalition,” an initiative to invite spouse clubs across the Department of Defense to contribute to the assistance program for survivors of the September 11 terrorist attacks. She was also an active participant in “Christmas in April,” mustering volunteers and $20,000 to rebuild and repair 10 homes in a day for local disabled and elderly residents.

Mr. Speaker, Claudia and Douglas Raaberg have distinguished themselves as community leaders in the United States Air Force. Their service to our nation is invaluable and I am sure that my colleagues will join me in wishing the Raaberg family all the best.

GUJARAT VIOLENCE A POGROM AGAINST MUSLIMS, NEWS REPORT SAYS

HON. CYNTHIA A. MCKINNEY.

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, on June 4, an interesting article appeared at Islam Online, an Internet news site. It said that the People's Union for Democratic Rights (PUDR) had found that the recent violence in Gujarat in which, according to The Hindu newspaper, over 5,000 people were killed, was a planned pogrom designed to reduce Muslims to second-class citizens. Unfortunately, Muslim and other minorities such as Christians, Sikhs, and others are already second-class citizens in India.

The article says that the violence was well organized and planned long before the train attack in Godhra. It reports, that “the organizers of the carnage tapped on a seam of hatred, based on anti-Muslim propaganda which had been carefully cultivated over many years.” It clearly points the finger at the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) and the Bajrang Dal, militant Hindu fundamentalists organizations inclined to violence which are under the umbrella of the militant, Hindu nationalist, pro-Fascist Rashtriya Swayamsewak Sangh (RSS), whose political wing is the BJP, the party that leads India's government. It was the RSS that published a booklet last year on how to implicate Christians and other religious minorities in fake criminal cases. It was the VHP that murdered missionary Graham Staines, yet has not been punished for it. In New York a couple of years ago, Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee told an audience proudly, “I will always be a Swayamsewak”.

This reveals the reality of so-called democracy in India. It is a democracy for the Brahmins, but it is a tyranny for the minorities. We should stop our aid to India until they allow human rights and we should declare our support for self-determination for all the people living within its borders. Otherwise, I am afraid, violence will be even more a way of life in South Asia than it already is, and that would be a tragedy for all the people there. If we can do anything to prevent that, we should do so.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to add the Islam Online article to the RECORD at this time to give more detail on the pogrom in Gujarat.

GUJARAT POGROM AIMED AT REDUCING MUSLIMS TO SECOND CLASS CITIZENS

NEW DELHI, JUNE 3 (ISLAMONLINE).—The People's Union for Democratic Rights (PUDR), one of India's premiere human rights organizations, said in its report on the violence in Gujarat, “The whole intent of the pogrom has been to reduce Muslims to second class citizens in their own country.”

The PUDR is a well-known independent human rights organization in India monitoring human rights violations against minorities and weaker sections of society.

The PUDR report “Maaro, Kaapo, Baaro: State, Society and Communalism in Gujarat” said that the organizers of the carnage tapped on a seam of hatred, based on anti-Muslim propaganda which had been carefully cultivated over many years.

The report said that the anti-Muslim carnage was planned well before the Godhra train tragedy. It says that the hate propaganda increased in the six months prior to February 2002.

The PUDR report says that the VHP (World Hindu Council) and its youth wing, the Bajrang Dal, organized trishul (tridents) distribution ceremonies in villages with Muslim populations. Speeches were made abusing and threatening Muslims during these ceremonies.

The PUDR report provides detailed lists of people named as organizers and attackers.

Many of these are functionaries of the ruling party, BJP, the VHP and the Bajrang Dal.

The report gives a list of victims in some of the mass killings, which establishes that their numbers were higher than the ones the government admits.

The PUDR has accused the state government of abetting the anti-Muslim pogrom. "The fact that the Gujarat government supported the bandh (general strike) of February 28 and March 1 despite its experience of large-scale violence against Muslims after a similar bandh in 2000, is evidence of its complicity in the violence right from the start," it said.

The report also accuses the judiciary of not performing its duty. It illustrates as to how the criminal justice system in the state is complicit in the denial of justice to the riot victims. It corroborates the widely-reported fact that the police make a mockery of the investigative process. And that even courts have shown reluctance to do their duty.

The PUDR team visited 21 relief camps and 75 villages and towns where it spoke to government officials, members of traders' associations, the VHP, the Jamait-e-Ulema-e-Hind and NGOs.

It has demanded the Narendra Modi government in Gujarat be dismissed and asked for an independent probe by the Central Bureau of Investigation into major incidents of communal violence, and expressed doubts over the Modi government's intentions to take action against the perpetrators of riots.

HONORING THE ONE HUNDREDTH
HOUSE

HON. CHET EDWARDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, the citizens of McLennan County, Texas are celebrating today, September 26, 2002, the 100th Anniversary of the McLennan County Courthouse, located in my hometown of Waco.

On April 28, 1900, at the turn of the last century, the needs of a growing Central Texas population demanded a new courthouse and jail. To pay for a structure, bonds were approved by the voters, and construction of the Courthouse began with the purchase of land on the corner of North 5th and Washington St. In December 1900, a contract for construction of the Courthouse was awarded, and in June 1901, the cornerstone was laid. Less than a year later, in 1902, the project was completed.

Today, the McLennan County Courthouse is a Texas Historical Landmark and is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. With its classic Renaissance Revival design, it is widely recognized as one of the most beautiful public buildings still in use. Recent additions to the Courthouse include a series of paintings celebrating the rich history of Waco and McLennan County.

Atop the building stands Themis, the Greek personification of Justice, Justitia, her Roman counterpart, and Liberty, the torchbearer, representing the importance of justice and the law to the citizens of McLennan County for the past hundred years. Although much has changed in that hundred years, the McLennan County Courthouse continues to provide integral services to the community, and stands as an important monument to the long tradition of the rule of law in Central Texas.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the Members of the House of Representatives to join me in celebrating, with the City of Waco, Texas and its surrounding communities, the 100th Anniversary of the McLennan County Courthouse.

CONGRESS MUST NOT UPSET THE DELICATE ECOLOGICAL BALANCE OF THE ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

HON. JOHN M. MCHUGH

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Speaker, for all the aspects of natural beauty that grace the North Country, few equal the splendor of the St. Lawrence River. From the wide expanse of its Gulf to the grandeur of the Thousand Islands, the St. Lawrence River is truly a wonder to behold.

For those of us who call this special region home, the St. Lawrence has long been a vital source of commercial and recreational activity. From its waters and its fragile environs, many thousands earn their living and renew their lives. Simply put, our welfare in very tangible and vital ways is inextricably linked and dependent upon the vitality of the St. Lawrence.

It is, therefore, both understandable and logical that many who know this river best have viewed with great skepticism recent initiatives that seek to measure the potential impact of conducting a massive construction and dredging project designed to significantly expand the existing shipping locks and channel depths to accommodate Seaway access to a larger class of freight vessels. Their concern has focused on the unavoidable scope of such an undertaking and the disruptive effects that would result upon a delicately balanced ecosystem that even today is severely stressed by existing Seaway traffic.

As someone who has been granted the honor of representing the entire New York State span of the St. Lawrence, I have spent much time in recent months considering the views of both those who doubt and those who embrace the proposed project. Clearly, the Seaway serves a vital purpose both to this region and to others throughout the Great Lakes that utilize the shipping it accommodates. Just as evident is the need to reformulate this vital system's operations to ensure its highest utilization into the future. Indeed, the observation that the proposal in question is no more than a study designed to identify the existence and scope of any resulting problem is not without merit.

In the final analysis, however, my foremost responsibility is to assume those positions that represent the greater interests of those I represent. In my opinion, no matter what merits any study may offer, the inescapable fact remains that the perils of such a project, if initiated, would far outweigh any benefits that may result to our region. The viability of our vital tourism industry, the generation of economically stimulating hydropower, and the untold enjoyment that the St. Lawrence provides derives less from the shipping that the river supports than the delicate environment it nurtures. As past studies have invariably found, the effects of a project of the magnitude in question would unavoidably and unilaterally upset the delicate ecological balance of the St. Lawrence River and all that prospers from it.

Given the great importance of this issue to our region, I feel compelled to declare my opposition to the proposed study and the requested funding to advance it. I fully recognize the likely reality that my views may be shared by few in the House of Representatives. While the area I represent affords me the distinction of being the only Member from New York to have the St. Lawrence River shores within their district, it also means that many others hail from areas that stand to realize greater benefits any expansion of the existing systems might afford. The fact that both the Energy and Water Development Subcommittee and full House Appropriations Committee have provided $2 million to advance this study attest to the support this initiative has gained thus far. Nevertheless, I have no intention of abandoning the higher interests of my district because the odds may be long.

I have begun the preparation of an amendment that will seek to remove the $2 million in study funding currently contained in the FY03 House Appropriations bill should this legislation be advanced. I will submit that amendment to the Rules Committee requesting that it be approved for consideration if and when the full bill is brought to the House Floor for a vote. In this way, I hope to convey to other Members the peril that such an initiative holds and, hopefully, gain the support of those who recognize the need to stand on the side of preserving a resource that is so critically important to so many.

ACT

HON. DARLENE HOOLEY

Monday, September 30, 2002

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Grand Teton National Park Land Exchange Act (S. 1105) and specifically its amended version that includes legislation that I introduced named the McLoughlin House Preservation Act (H.R. 3434).

Standing six feet four inches, John McLoughlin cast a giant of a shadow on the early development of the Oregon frontier. For twenty-one years his powerful voice was the only influence of law and order over an empire two and a half times the size of Texas. He had absolute control, and he maintained it peacefully and profitably with a balanced sense of justice. With an overwhelming sense of compassion and generosity beyond reproach, it's of little wonder that he was regarded by Native Americans as, "The Great White Eagle." John McLoughlin, did indeed, walk taller and cast the greatest shadow that ever fell so humbly on the changing face of Oregon.

McLoughlin was born in 1784 outside of Quebec, Canada. When McLoughlin was only 14 years old, he began an apprenticeship with a doctor and in 1803, at the youthful age of 19, was granted his license to practice surgery and pharmacy. Shortly thereafter Dr. McLoughlin obtained an appointment as medical officer for the North West Company, fierce competitor of the Hudson's Bay Company in the fur trade. McLoughlin continued his employment and partnership with the North West

In 1824, McLoughlin arrived at Fort George, now called Astoria, Oregon near the mouth of the Columbia River, to further establish an administrative headquarters and supply depot for the ever expanding Hudson's Bay Company. In part, his duties were to create a mercantile arm of the British government, to monopolize the fur trade business, and maintain peace among the numerous tribes of Indians. Finding the facility at Astoria to be grossly rundown, unfertile and too far from inland trade facilities, in 1825 McLoughlin moved the northwest headquarters to a more favorable location on the northern side of the Columbia. He built the new site at Belle Vue Point in what is now Washington State and named it, Fort Vancouver.

The new fort was nearly 750 feet long and 450 feet wide with a stockade about 20 feet high. There were about 40 buildings inside the fort. The fort housed a school, a library, pharmacy, power house, chapel, officers, warehouses, workshops, a blacksmith shop, and the largest manufacturing facility west of the Rocky Mountains. Fully contained, behind the fort were fields of grains, an orchard and a vegetable garden. The Indians, with whom Dr. McLoughlin maintained a very good relationship, were not allowed inside the stockade and would conduct their trading through a porthole in the door. In 1829, a ship arrived from Boston bringing with it a horrible fever which broke out among them. Dr. McLoughlin spent much of his own time tending to the ill of the stricken, but within four years over 30,000 Indians lay dead.

The fort flourished under the leadership of Dr. McLoughlin. Without any type of military force, he was able to maintain law and order by his own personality and by the cooperation of his officers and employees. There were no Indian wars in the Oregon Country until after his resignation. Dr. John McLoughlin was so revered for his work in the Oregon Country that in 1841 McLoughlin was knighted by Queen Victoria at Buckingham Palace.

By the 1840's, the British knew that they couldn't keep the American settlers out of Oregon, but they wanted to control as much of the land as possible. Discouragement came in the form of tall tales of fierce Indians, poor farming conditions, and terrible weather. Even though it was against the policy of the Hudson's Bay Company, Dr. McLoughlin was sympathetic to the plight of the settlers and offered them aid. Often arriving sick, hungry, and without provisions, his kindly heart extended them credit, fed and clothed them, cared for the sick, and supplied them with seed for farming. His personal decision to provide supplies and support to the American settlers coming over the Oregon Trail, contrary to his orders from the Hudson's Bay Company Governor, proved to be critical to the peaceful settlement of the territory in favor of U.S. claims.

In 1845, no longer able to stomach company policy toward American settlers, Dr. McLoughlin resigned his position with the Hudson's Bay Company. After his resignation, he purchased Hudson's Bay Company's land claim at Willamette Falls in Oregon City, and he and his family moved into his newly-built house (The McLoughlin House) in 1846. McLoughlin remained a public figure during his retirement and became a U.S. citizen in 1849.

He donated land for a jail and female seminary, and in 1851 he was elected mayor of Oregon City. He died in his home only six short years later.

In 1941, the McLoughlin House was designated a National Historic Site, the first one in the west, and in 1957, Dr. John McLoughlin was named "Father of Oregon" by the Oregon State Legislature.

As you can see, Fort Vancouver and the McLoughlin House National Historic Site have a long and storied history together. The intent of this legislation is to see that history continued by expanding the boundaries of Fort Vancouver to include the McLoughlin House National Historic Site.

Currently the McLoughlin House National Historic Site is maintained and managed by the non-profit McLoughlin Memorial Association. When the McLoughlin House faced demolition in 1909, the Memorial Association was formed and money was raised to move the house to a public park atop the bluff. McLoughlin's home opened as a museum in 1910. For almost 100 years, the association has done admirable work to preserve and maintain this historic treasure so thousands of people can continue to tour the site annually. However, over the past several years, the association has been unable to raise the funds required to provide the needed maintenance and upkeep of the property that is now in jeopardy of failing into disrepair.

The McLoughlin House National Historic Act would do what I believe should have occurred over 60 years ago and that is include these properties as part of the National Park System to be managed by the National Park Service. Again, it is my intent that this would be done, not by creating a new unit of the National Park System, but rather by simply including the McLoughlin House into the boundaries of Fort Vancouver National Historic Site which is already administered as part of the National Park System. I believe that including the McLoughlin House into the boundaries of Fort Vancouver is the only way to preserve in perpetuity the cultural, educational, and historical benefits of this historic site for future generations.

In closing I would like to convey my sincere appreciation to Chairman HANSEN, Ranking member RAHALL, and Chairman RADANOVICH for so generously agreeing to work with me on this bill and helping to move it forward. I would also like to extend my gratitude to Luke Johnson and David Watkins of the Resources Committee staff for their tireless efforts on behalf of this bill. Thank you to John Salisbury and the McLoughlin Memorial Association for all your hard work to preserve this Oregon treasure. And lastly I'd like to thank Tracy Fortmann for her advocacy on behalf of the McLoughlin House over the years. She's done wonderful work and we are extremely lucky to have her at Fort Vancouver.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation today.

INDIANS BOAST OF SUCCESSFUL INTERVENTION IN U.S. ELECTION

HON. CYNTHIA A. MCKINNEY

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 30, 2002

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, as you know, I recently suffered a setback in my bid for re-election. I am beginning to get over the disappointment that I will no longer be able to serve the people of Georgia in the next Congress. I will miss serving.

However, there were some alarming things about the campaign to defeat me that I think my colleagues of both parties should look out for. I am not talking about the Republicans who crossed over to vote for my opponent, but the heavy involvement of Indians in the primary. I am one of the Members of Congress who has tried to get out the truth about South Asia, and I am proud of that. Earlier this year, I was one of 42 Members of Congress who wrote to President Bush to urge the release of Sikh and other political prisoners in India.

Apparently, this irritated the Indians because the newspaper article I am inserting in the RECORD along with this statement shows that they admitted that they invested heavily in the effort to defeat me. To my colleagues of both parties who have also been involved in the effort to expose India's brutal record, I say: Watch out; they are coming after you, too.

India has a record of illegal interference in U.S. elections. Former Ambassador S.S. Ray publicly urged the reelection of former Senator Larry Pressler and in opposition to now Senator ROBERT TORRICELLI. An Indian American immigration lawyer named Lalit Gadhia funneled money from the Indian Embassy to Congressional candidates, according to the Baltimore Sun. Most of the candidates were of my party, people I am proud to have had as my colleagues during my service in Congress. But it is still illegal and wrong for India to funnel Embassy money to these Members' campaigns.

Now I have become the latest political officeholder in India's cross hairs. I won't be the last unless their activities are exposed. Mr. Speaker, whether I am in office or not, I don't intend to let a foreign power determine the results of American elections if I can help it.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to insert the article showing Indian involvement in my primary into the RECORD to help expose their activities.

LAWMAKER

(By Chidanand Rajghatta)

WASHINGTON.—The headlines credit the Jewish lobby for the defeat of lawmaker Cynthia McKinney in the Congressional primaries on Tuesday. But a neophyte Indian-American activists group, which co-wrote the script for this unusual Georgia election that attracted nationwide attention, is happy with just the footnote that recorded their role.

They like to do it quietly. They are not as political or as established as the Jewish lobby.

Congresswoman McKinney outraged a lot of people with some bizarre remarks. Among her more provocative comments was her theory that President Bush purposely ignored warnings about 9/11 to help the U.S. arms industry. The comment angered not just the Jewish groups, but regular Americans as well.

The African American incumbent was not shy of expressing her opinion on the subcontinent either—mostly ill-informed repeats made at the behest of the Pakistani and Khalistani lobby, according to Indian-Americans.

A sample: The Indian government is responsible for terrorism against its own people. It engineered the massacre of bus passengers in Kashmir and the blowing up of a passenger airliner.

Community leaders said she recorded that kind of “unsubstantiated nonsense, usually peddled by disgruntled and discredited conspiracy theorists,” in the Congressional Record.

But it was when she began talking about the imminent breakup of India because of its “17 different separatist movements” that the Indians of Georgia lost it for her and banded together.

One prominent activist sent out an e-mail to 3400 Indian-Americans in the area reporting her remarks (under the subject line—“Balkanisation of India—advocated by Rep. Cynthia McKinney”) and urging them to work for her opponent, a local judge named Denise Majette.

Led by a prominent dotcommer in the area, they were soon holding fund-raisers for Majette, who like McKinney is also African-American. They chipped in with $20,000, although much larger sums came in later from Middle East groups—the Jews backing Majette and Arabs and Muslims supporting McKinney.

Indian-Americans contributed in other ways too. Several volunteers worked full weeks for Majette’s campaign. She was invited as the chief guest for an Indian-American beauty pageant. A motel owner turned his electronic billboard next to the main highway into her campaign sign.

It was much after the Indian-American effort began that the Jewish lobby rolled into town. But the two sides joined hands for a phono-thon and pooled other resources for the campaign.

When the results came in on Tuesday, Majette had polled 58 per cent to McKinney’s 42 per cent. The Indian bush telegraph—e-mail—was buzzing.

“Money is important. But volunteer and other efforts are equally important. Even more important is that we need to be on the radar screen of the candidate we are supporting. Ms. Denise Majette hopefully knows that we made a difference in her bid. Please keep in communication with her to further the relationship between IA (Indian Americans) and her,” one prominent activist wrote. “The good news is that we offered our support before the poll numbers and Jewish money transpired. Thus, we got noticed,” another group leader responded.

In keeping with the low-profile effort, none of them were eager to be identified.

The Indian embassy also quietly celebrated McKinney’s loss, although, sticking to the principle of non-interference in local elections, it declined any comment. The embassy has been accused in the past of being a little too interested in the Congressional races.

Democrat Majette will now go up against the winner of the Republican primary for a seat in the Congress in the main elections due in November. But for now, Indians and Indian-Americans can breathe easy that they do not have to hear Cynthia McKinney’s conspiracy theories in Congress.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference.
