people. They believe it is OK to allow lawsuits to achieve some sort of political end.

Clearly, I do not agree and a majority of people in this body do not agree. Indeed, most Americans certainly do not agree. Most Americans think this is just blatantly unfair.

Our Constitution protects the right to keep and bear arms. Indeed, 33 States have passed laws to preempt frivolous gun lawsuits—33 States. Still today, we have the antigun crusaders who are, in effect, aided and abetted by the special interest trial lawyers charging ahead.

Since 1997, more than 30 cities and counties have sued firearm companies in an attempt to force them to change the way they make guns and the way they sell guns. In California, then-Gov. Gray Davis signed legislation explicitly authorizing lawsuits against gun manufacturers.

Because the firearms business is relatively small, one big verdict, one substantial verdict could bankrupt the entire industry. In California, that is a real possibility.

Never mind that every trial court that has heard these municipality lawsuits has thrown them out in whole or in part. Appellate courts in three States have overturned lower court verdicts and allowed the suits to go forward. Thus, it is critical we act now.

If the gun industry is forced into bankruptcy, the right to keep and bear arms will be a right in name only. Lawsuits have already pushed two companies into bankruptcy. Even if some gun manufacturers are able to hold on, the prices for firearms will be so high that owning a gun, such as a hunting rifle, will be a privilege only the wealthy can afford.

There is one other important and little known aspect of the issue. America relies on private gun manufacturers to equip our soldiers and law enforcement officers. The guns our police officers use, the guns that our soldiers carry, are made in the United States by American workers.

We are all agreed, no one wants guns in the hands of criminals. There are thousands of laws and regulations to stop illegal gun sales, but we do not want these frivolous, unnecessary lawsuits to strip police officers and soldiers of their sidearms. Do we really want unfair litigation to cripple our national security? The answer clearly is no, and thus we will act and we will act over the course of today, tomorrow, Monday, and complete this action on Tuesday.

The bill before us is narrowly tailored. It is focused. It is fair. It is equitable. It ensures that private parties are held responsible for their actions and that why this bill comes to this floor with broad bipartisan support. That is why passing this bill is the right thing to do.

I yield the floor.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

PROTECTION OF LAWFUL COMMERCE IN ARMS ACT—MOTION TO PROCEED

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to consideration of S. 1805, which the clerk will report.

The Assistant Journal clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1805) to prohibit civil liability actions from being brought or continuing against manufacturers, distributors, dealers, or importers of firearms or ammunition for damages resulting from the misuse of their product by others.

The Acting President pro tempore. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, we are now on S. 1805. Last night, Senator REED and I worked into the evening with our colleagues and leadership on both sides to craft a unanimous consent that now governs us through late next Tuesday. It establishes a variety of amendments that will be voted on over the course of today. Some will be offered and set aside to be voted on on Tuesday. On Tuesday, other key amendments will be voted on and then final passage.

I am sure there are some Members on both sides who might have amendments that were not listed to be considered for votes today and/or Tuesday. What I would ask them to do is come to the Chamber and talk to Senator REED and myself to see if we might work those out certainly. We are happy to take a look at them. There may be an opportunity late Tuesday and possibly Friday to offer additional amendments. The unanimous consent request does not preclude any Member from doing that.

I said very early on yesterday that we wanted an open, robust debate on this issue. Clearly, 75 Members of this Senate, in a very bipartisan way, said let’s get on with it, with the cloture vote yesterday. We spent the day then fashioning an agreement that brings us to where we are this morning. I believe it is possible Senator DASCHLE will be in the Chamber in a few moments to offer a perfecting amendment, then Senator BOXER will have an amendment on gunlocks.

I believe the agreement that is in front of us gives us something that oftentimes is very hard to achieve in the Senate, and that is a procedure and a final passage locked into an agreement. While Senator REED and I worked late into the evening, as I mentioned, to allow that to happen, and all sides gave a little in it, what I think we have in front of us is just that, an agreement that allows a variety of Senators to work together to perfect this debate on both sides of the issue, to offer their amendments and to have a vote.

The timelines are very limited. We are not going to filibuster in any of this. It is clear that when there are 29-, 30- and 60-minute time limits to be shared equally, it does shape and limit the debate in a way that many of us would like to see.

Certainly on Tuesday, key votes are going to be the McCain-Reed gun show loophole and Senator FEINSTEIN’s gun ban, or assault weapon ban as it is argued. Those clearly will be the dominant issues on one side. BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL, conceal/carry will be another one voted on on that day, and possibly debate. I will debate that along with Senator CAMPBELL today. It is on the list to accomplish today. Possibly we will also have another amendment to be voted on on Tuesday which deals with Washington, DC, and some of the gun laws that free and law-abiding citizens have to cope with in this city.

The character of what we have been able to put together. Senator REED, the manager on the other side, is now in the Chamber. I yield the floor for any comments he would wish to make. Timewise, how Senator REED can make it to the Chamber to offer his amendment, but if he cannot, at this moment I see no reason Senator BOXER could not proceed with her amendment.

The Acting President pro tempore. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho has indicated we worked late last evening to craft a unanimous consent that will allow several important amendments to be debated today, and continuing on through Tuesday. It represents a recognition that there are serious issues to discuss. Now we are at the stage of not only discussing those issues but also taking amendments up and voting on them. I know Senator DASCHLE will be here in a moment.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REED. I would be happy to yield to the Democratic whip.

Mr. REID. We have explained to the majority that we would, in fact, ask consent that Senator BOXER be allowed to offer her amendment. Senator DASCHLE is occupied at the present time. If necessary, I could offer it on his behalf, but I think it would be better if he offered it himself. So we ask unanimous consent that Senator BOXER be allowed to go forward with her amendment.

The Acting President pro tempore. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The Acting President pro tempore. The Senator from California.

Amendment No. 2020

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The Acting President pro tempore. The clerk will report.

The assistant journal clerk read as follows:

February 26, 2004
SEC. 5. REMOVAL OR DEACTIVATION OF CHILD HANDGUN SAFETY DEVICES.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Child Handgun Safety Act of 2004." (b) DEFINITIONS.—Section 921(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(36) The term 'locking device' means a device or locking mechanism that is approved by a licensed firearms manufacturer for use on the handgun with which the device or locking mechanism is sold, delivered, or transferred and that—

"(A) if installed on a firearm and secured by means of a key or a mechanically, electronically, electromechanically, or other similar means, prevents access to the key or other device designed to store a means of a key or mechanically, electronically, or electromechanically operated combination lock, is designed to prevent the firearm from being discharged without first activating or removing the device by means of a key or mechanically, electronically, or electromechanically operated combination lock;

"(B) if incorporated into the design of a firearm, is designed to prevent discharge of the firearm by any person who does not have access to the key or other device designed to unlock the mechanism and thereby allow discharge of the firearm; or

"(C) is a safe, gun safe, gun case, lock box, or other device that is designed to store a firearm and that is designed to be unlocked only by means of a key, a combination, or other similar means.

(c) UNLAWFUL ACTS.—

(1) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(d) CIVIL PENALTIES.—Section 924 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

"(1) in subsection (a)(1), by striking "or (C)", and inserting "(1), (2), or (C)"; and

"(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(p) PENALTIES RELATING TO LOCKING DEVICES.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—

"(A) SUSPENSION OR REVOCATION OF LICENSE; CIVIL PENALTIES.—With respect to each violation of section 922(a)(1) by a licensee, the Attorney General shall, after notice and opportunity for hearing—

"(i) suspend or revoke any license issued to the licensee under this chapter; and

"(ii) subject the licensee to a civil penalty of not more than $15,000; or

"(ii) impose the penalties described in clauses (i) and (ii)."

"(B) REVIEW.—An action by the Attorney General under this paragraph may be reviewed only as provided under section 923(f).

(2) ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES.—The suspension or revocation of a license or the imposition of a civil penalty under paragraph (1) does not preclude any administrative remedy that is otherwise available to the Attorney General.

(d) AMENDMENT TO CONSUMER PRODUCT SAFETY ACT.—The Consumer Product Safety Act (15 U.S.C. 2051 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 39. CHILD HANDGUN SAFETY DEVICES.

"(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF STANDARD.—

"(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The consumer product safety standard promulgated under this paragraph shall take effect on the date which is 6 months after the date on which the final standard is promulgated.

"(b) REQUIREMENTS.—The standard promulgated under this paragraph shall require locking devices that—

"(1) are sufficiently difficult for children to de-activate or remove; and

"(ii) prevent the discharge of the handgun unless the locking device has been de-activated or removed.

"(2) INAPPLICABLE PROVISIONS.—

"(A) PROVISIONS OF THIS ACT.—Sections 7, 9, and 30(d) shall not apply to the rulemaking proceeding described in paragraph (1).

"(B) STANDARD REQUIREMENTS.—The standard promulgated under this paragraph shall require locking devices that—

"(a) the manufacturer for, transfer to, or possession by, a law enforcement officer employed by an entity referred to in subparagraph (A) of a firearm for law enforcement purposes (whether on or off duty).

"(b) transfer to, or possession by, a law enforcement officer employed by a railroad carrier and certified or commissioned as a police officer under State law of a firearm for purposes of law enforcement (whether on or off duty)."

"(2) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 922(a)(2) of title 18, United States Code, as added by this subsection, shall not apply to the deactivation of the locking device on the date to which the Act is 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

"(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions shall apply:

"(1) CHILD.—The term 'child' means an individual who has not attained the age of 13 years.

"(2) LOCKING DEVICE.—The term 'locking device' means the given device that means the term in clauses (i) and (ii) of section 922(a)(36) of this title.

"(f) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1 of the Consumer Product Safety Act is amended by adding at the end of the table of contents the following:

"(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Consumer Product Safety Commission $2,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2005 through 2007 to carry out the provisions of section 39 of the Consumer Product Safety Act, as added by subsection (e).

(2) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—Any amounts appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle who worked late into the night to put forward a list of amendments this body would consider. I am very proud my amendment made the list. It is an amendment this Senate has supported before. It is an amendment that will protect our children from violence, and what could be more important to us as we gather here every day than to protect our children?

My measure would do two things. First, it would require that every handgun sold in this country come with a child safety device. The amendment is very broad on what that could be, so it isn't a micromanaging device of amendment. This device could be a lock using a key or a combination, a device that locks electronically, it could be a lockbox, or technology that is built into the gun itself. Many of the folks working on this type of technology are very enthusiastic about it.

There is no question in my mind, there is no question in the minds of the police in my State who just had a press conference on this issue, if we were to gather here every day than to protect our children?

My amendment would make sure child safety devices are effective and that they are not shoddy or of poor quality. One of the worst things we could do is pass a bill that requires these devices and then the device doesn't work. That would be a terrible thing for our families. So the bill requires the Consumer Product Safety Commission to establish standards for the design of these locks and these devices and the standard must be: the law of the land, the number of children involved in accidental shootings would go way down. So that is the first thing we do. We require some type of a lock when you buy a handgun.

Second, my amendment would make sure child safety devices are effective and that they are not shoddy or of poor quality. One of the worst things we could do is pass a bill that requires these devices and then the device doesn't work. That would be a terrible thing for our families. So the bill requires the Consumer Product Safety Commission to establish standards for the design of these locks and these devices and the standard must be: the law of the land, the number of children involved in accidental shootings would go way down. So that is the first thing we do. We require some type of a lock when you buy a handgun.

supported this in quite a bipartisan way. I believe we should again agree that we need to protect our children from accidental gun shootings.

My home State of California recently enacted an excellent child safety device that requires that all licensed dealers and manufacturers equip the guns they sell with State-certified child safety devices. This is a very important bill for my State and I am proud of my State for doing it. But it is clear that the States along California's border do not have this requirement. Not one of those States has child safety device laws. That means even if California—and we do—has a good law, anyone can purchase a gun without a safety lock from a border State and return to California with it. Therefore, the progress we hope to make in California will be set back because we don't have a uniform and standard law.

The other important feature of our bill that impacts Californians is that while there is a State-certified standard for gunlocks in my State, those standards have not been set by the Consumer Product Safety Commission, and everyone agrees that the Consumer Product Safety Commission is the premier Federal agency in the country that sets the gold standard. Again, I think it is very important that we have this type of standard because, as many colleagues point out, the manufacturers of these devices deserve some guidance. California may have some sort of standards, we could have another set of standards in New York, or in the Midwest, and we are going to have a potpourri of standards floating around rather than what I call the gold standard of the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

The other important point for my people of California—again, they have the safety lock law—is that the amendment allows for a Federal cause of action. It requires that this child safety locking device be standard. So if in fact there is a serious problem with a child safety lock, and the State for some reason doesn't get its act together, doesn't put the case together, and so on, there will be a Federal cause of action. It is kind of a double protection for the children. I would like to talk about the need for this amendment for a moment. I have a chart that shows the statistics. In the United States of America, in our great country, 25 other industrialized countries combined.

Let me repeat that. The rate of firearm deaths of children under the age of 14 is 12 times higher in the United States than in 25 other industrialized nations. That means even if California—and we do—has a good law, if you want to say: Guns don't kill children; children kill children. Yes, children kill children because they pick up a gun and they fire it at a brother. They don't understand the consequences of this. More than 22 million children live in homes with guns. I want to envision this—22 million children live in homes with guns. More than 3.3 million of those children live in homes where the guns are always or sometimes kept loaded and unlocked.

Too many children are playing with real guns found in their parents' bedroom or a friend's home, and too many children are killed in this country because they are doing what children do: They are exploring; they are being curious. I don't know how many times I have heard stories with tearful parents saying: I kept that gun away from my child. It was locked up and in a closet. It was in the highest, tallest closet in my house. I never thought my baby could climb up and find that gun.

Well, they do. They do. Children are smart. They are tenacious. They are energetic. One study found that when a gun was in the home, 75 to 80 percent of first and second graders knew where their parents kept that gun. Seventy-five to eighty percent of first and second graders knew where their parents kept that gun.

In this country, we do so much to protect our children. We worry about them, as we should; it is our responsibility. We make sure that in a car they are in the back seat and facing in the right direction so they don't have a tendency to get hurt in an accident. We have airbags to protect them. We protect them from shoddy toys, such as Play-Doh that they could eat and could hurt them. We set standards. We set standards for Teddy bears, for toys. We care about our children.

I wrote the afterschool law we have here with Senator ENSIGN. We love our children, every one of us—our own children. We are here to protect the children. That is part of our job.

So let me reiterate, one study found that when a gun was in the home, 75 percent to 80 percent of first and second graders knew where the parents kept that gun. So even if that gun is in a closet, at the top of a closet, under towels or blankets, kids are tenacious and they find the guns. But if they found a lockbox and they couldn't open it, they would be protected. If they grabbed the gun, it didn't have a child safety device on it and they tried to shoot, it wouldn't go off. If the gun had technology built in it so that only when the parents held it it would fire, they would be protected.

It seems to me in this day and age when we are losing a child or a youth to an accidental shooting every 48 hours, we ought to be absolutely united in this something.

I want to show you the face of a beautiful young man, Kenzo, a Californian, 15 years old, with his mom. His friend, Michael, while playing with a gun, shot Kenzo Bix, and he is gone forever. If that gun had had a child safety device on it, it wouldn't have happened.

I will give you some other stories. Just this January in Indio, CA, a 17-year-old boy named Jason Weed died after his 14-year-old brother accidentally shot him in the head. The other boy was showing him the gun in the home when it accidentally went off, lodging a bullet in the small boy's head. If that gun had had a safety device, and if the amendment we already passed here—the Kobl-Hatch-Boxer amendment that passed here the last time—had been adopted in the other body, if it had been signed into law, Kenzo would be alive; and this child I just talked about, Jason Weed, would be alive.

Then there is a story from Florida. There are so many stories, and we just picked a few.

A 3-year-old, Colton Hinke, and his 2-year-old sister Kaile were playing in their parents' bedroom when Colton found an unlocked, loaded handgun in the drawer. A neighbor heard the shot and rushed to the scene and found Kaile on her back, her face pale, her lips blue, and a small hole in her chest. She was in shock, and she was rushed to the hospital, but it was too late.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. May I ask for one additional minute from each side so I can conclude?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Thank you so very much.

There is another incident where a 1-year-old girl was critically injured by her 3-year-old brother. This little girl survived.

I could go on, but I don't have the time at this point.

Let's pass this measure. I know Senators DeWINE and KOHL have an amendment to change my bill in a very small way. I don't have a problem with that. I will be supporting that. I just know the overriding concern of mine, and I really do think most people in this Chamber for this the last time, is let us protect our kids. Let us do it in a smart way. It is the right thing to do for the families of America.
Mr. REID. Mr. President, we have someone who will speak in opposition to the Boxer amendment. There is a second amendment on its way. It is not yet ready. It is coming; sometimes I don’t know from where. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be temporarily set aside. In keeping with the unanimous consent agreement that was entered last night, at some subsequent time there will be the opportunity to offer the amendment Senators KOHL and DEWINE are going to offer as a second-degree amendment to Boxer.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, we expect a second-degree amendment to be here to modify and perfect the Boxer amendment.

I want to speak about the Boxer amendment because I in no way discredit—I guess the best way to say it—fall to recognize the same kind of concern that BOXER has expressed. She is correct. The Senate has expressed its will on this issue in the past. But let me bring you up to date about what the gun industry is doing now. Clearly, the gun industry is responding very quickly to new technologies and what is available to make sure firearms are safe, if you will, from the curiosity of a child and a child who might misuse it. Tragically enough, when children find a firearm, there is great curiosity.

There are organizations out there that have worked awfully hard to educate firearms owners and parents about the reality of a gun placed in a home in an unsafe environment, or not locked behind a door, or in a situation where a child could get access to it. That is simply critical in the responsible ownership and handling of a gun.

Ninety percent of new guns in the United States are already sold with a safe storage device. The Senator from California is right, the devices vary, but so do guns and so do the conformation and structure of guns. It will be very difficult to suggest that one size fits all.

The industry, with its engineers and its technology and its computers, is devising trigger locks and safety devices that fit the particular firearm. This is done through a voluntary program with the firearms industry. Tremendous numbers of gunshops today—responsibly federally registered gunshops—are providing free of charge a trigger lock or a safety device as the weapon is sold. Many States and locales, such as Texas, have distributed safety devices free of charge, either in cooperation with the firearms industry or on their own initiative.

Trigger locks are mechanical devices. Like all mechanical devices they can fail if they are not well designed, and if their owners are not instructed on how to use them properly. The Consumer Product Safety Commission recently tested 32 types of gunlocks and found 30 could be opened without a key. That is why, clearly, uniformity is necessary. The firearms industry has already taken it upon itself.

But quality gun manufacturers in this country are already providing safety devices which are critical and necessary.

What I am trying to suggest is these devices don’t guarantee that reduces all accidents. Clearly, if we can get most handguns in America in safe and responsible hands and in homes with safety devices or locked in a safe or locked in a device where a child cannot gain access, that is going to reduce the kinds of tragic accidents that occur when a small child in a curious way finds the gun that may not have been placed in a safe place by a parent.

Gunlocks are denoted to address what I believe is a narrow range of concerns. At the time, when a child’s life is lost, how tragic it is, and all of us understand that. Of course, then it makes tremendous news and the world wonders why this is happening. The reason it happens is because in many cases there was a parent who was less than responsible, who really didn’t lock that gun up.

At the same time, let’s also recognize the phenomenal complication involved. Sometimes guns are placed in locations in homes for security and for safety, and easy access is critically important if that gun is to be used for the purpose of personal and property safety depending on the area in which a family lives or an individual lives.

At the same time, that does not deny the responsibility that is important. Gunlocks address that narrow range of threats. Clearly, they will deter the casual curiosity of a small child far more readily than it will deter what I call the perpetrator. The perpetrator, the person bent on murder and mayhem. Some suggest a gunlock means a thief in the house will not steal the gun. Wrong. That simply is not the case. It simply means the thief will take the gun, take it out, knock the gunlock off, have it cut off, take it away so they can have access to a stolen firearm. That is the reality of thieves stealing guns.

This narrow range we are talking about and that we want to make sure stays in the area of the curiosity of the small child. The firearms industry is already trying to develop standards to improve these devices. The industry has sought the creation of an industry standard for gun safety locks through the American National Standards Institute. The ANSI review process is well underway. In other words, because the gun industry is a responsible industry, they are well out in front of us already on legislation. No, there aren’t absolute mandatory requirements, but recognizing the reality and the tragedy that occurs on occasion, we want to make sure, and the industry certainly wants to make sure, that they are well out in front of it.

In a few moments we will have a second-degree perfecting amendment to deal with this issue. I will reserve the remainder of my time until that amendment is before us.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MURKOWSKI). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I take this time to restate some of the points of the first amendment. The gun manufacturers are taking care of the child safety locks and that we do not need to have this law.

The experts in this whole field have turned out to be the National SAFE KIDS Campaign. This is a bipartisan organization that has one mission only and that is to protect our children. When they saw these statistics that are still occurring today, they said enough is enough. A child or youth is killed by a firearm every 3 hours. This has not changed.

In 1997, the gun manufacturers said they would work on this themselves, that they did not need a law. Research assessing the compliance with this agreement found most manufacturers were not providing locks and those that did offered low-quality devices where the locks just fell off and did not work.

The SAFE KIDS Campaign is urging us to include a provision to issue safe standards for gunlocks. This is very important.

My colleague says this is taken care of. It is not taken care of. We still have children dying. We still have our constituents calling with the tragic cases. I read of the time under the control of Senators KOHL and DEWINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment is here.
say we know there are many different handguns—this only applies to handguns; in my State we have one that applies to rifles and long guns, but this is just a handgun—we say you can have in your array of products a box that locks. You can have the technology built in the gun. You can have a combination lock.

I appreciate my friend does not like to put regulations on gun manufacturers and dealers. I understand that. And I understand he believes they are the best of the best. The problem is, our kids are dying in the home. They are smart. They find out where the guns are. I cannot understand why this is not something we would all support. The last time it came to the Senate, we had a huge time. I am hoping we will have a similar vote.

Look to the people. We are in charge of a lot of issues. The National SAFE KIDS Campaign is about one issue, the safety of kids. They are bipartisan. They are beckoning us to make this the law of the land. The Senate did it once before. The Senate should do it again.

Children living in the South have an unintentional shooting death rate that is 7 times that of children living in the Northeast. That is a fact the National SAFE KIDS Campaign has shown. All we need to do is see the rate our kids are dying and compare it to 25 other countries to see our kids are at a great disadvantage. We can do something today. I hope we will.

I yield my time.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Boiler amendment to Section 34 be adopted temporarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The
clerk will report.

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr.
DASCHLE] proposes an amendment numbered 3921.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 3921

Mr. DASCHLE. And then I ask consent that I be recognized to offer an amendment, and I send my amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The
clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as

The Senator from South Dakota [Mr.
DASCHLE] proposes an amendment numbered 3921.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without
objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To clarify the definition of qualicified civil liability action, and for other purposes)

On page 7, line 19, strike “including” and all that follows through page 8, line 19, and insert “including, but not limited to—“(1) any case in which the manufacturer or seller knowingly made any false entry in, or failed to make appropriate entry in, any recordation system required to keep pursuant to State or Federal law, or aided, abetted or conspired with any person in making any false or fictitious oral or written statement, or any fact material to the lawfulness of the sale or other disposition of a qualified product; or

But we should not invalidate the legitimate claims from being heard in court when those claims have a basis in fact—cases involving kids, cases involving defective products, cases involved gun dealers or manufacturers who broke the law.

So our concern was, as originally drafted, the legislation adversely impacted many of these cases. That is why I went to Senator CRAIG and Senator BAUCUS and others and expressed the hope that we could address some of these issues and concerns in a way that would accommodate a solution. And that is what I believe this amendment does.

We have worked in a bipartisan manner. I would hope this legislation could certainly be supported in a bipartisan manner. It goes a long way to balancing what are the rights of victims as well as the needs of the gun industry.

Our amendment makes several key changes in the legislation that was originally offered. It ensures the cases in which Federal or State laws have been broken can move forward. There was some lack of clarity with regard to that particular need. It restores the basic product liability standards so, in particular, if a child is injured by a defective gun, the victim’s loved ones can still hold accountable those responsible. It includes a provision to remove immunity from dealers who sell to straw purchasers; that is, purchasers who have no interest in buying the gun for themselves but passing on the gun, selling the gun to somebody who should not have it. Finally, it ensures that only trade associations connected to the business of manufacturing and selling firearms would be covered.

I think all of these changes—and many more; there are eight specific changes—do a great deal to enhance the bill, to make it a better, stronger bill and, at the same time, address the concerns that many of us have had. It strives to preserve the long-term vitality of an important American industry, one that is very important to people in the West and Midwest, in particular, but all over the country. It protects the rights and safety of the American public.

So I am very appreciative of the effort that has gone into this amendment. This took a lot of time, a lot of negotiation. Obviously, the subtleties in some of the language has more than a subtle impact ultimately on how legislation is interpreted and how laws are ultimately enforced. We think this amendment takes us a long way in addressing the needs of both our manufacturers as well as those who are concerned for safety on the streets and in our neighborhoods today.

Madam President, I might just take a moment, if I could, prior to relinquishing the floor, to talk about another matter. I appreciate the accommodation of my colleagues in so doing.
Madam President, all week long, tribal leaders from Indian nations throughout America have been in Washington for the winter conference of the National Congress of American Indians. They include leaders from the Great Sioux Nation of South Dakota, and many others. Democratic Senators just met with many of these leaders; and some are in the gallery now, listening to these words. I am honored by their presence.

South Dakotans are very proud of our State's tribal heritage. Some of the greatest leaders South Dakota has ever produced were Native Americans. They include Crazy Horse, the legendary warrior-leader; a man of extraordinary nobility, the great Lakota spiritual leader, Sitting Bull.

Sitting Bull helped lead his people in defense of their lands. When it became clear that defeat was inevitable, he helped lead his people's efforts to secure a fair and just peace.

In negotiating the treaty under which the Lakota ceded their lands, Sitting Bull asked representatives of this Government, "Let us put our minds together and see what life we can make for our children."

More than a century later, the tribal leaders who have come to Washington this week are asking us to do the same thing: "Let us put our minds together and see what life we can make for our children."

Last July, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights released a report that has already become a landmark. It is entitled "A Quiet Crisis." It documents the harsh realities of life in Indian country today. I ask unanimous consent that the executive summary of the report be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate, Mr. DASCHLE. We cannot undo the damage caused by more than a century of neglect and broken promises in 1 year or even one decade. But we must make honoring our trust obligations under those treaties we signed a real priority now. And we must take steps this year to address two of the most urgent obligations of Native Americans.

The first of these obligations is the need to find a just and fair settlement of the Indian trust dispute. Partly because so many American Indians live on remote reservations, not many Americans understand what the Indian trust fund dispute is about. It stretches back to the 1880s, when the U.S. Government broke up large tracts of Indian land into small parcels, which it then allotted to individual Indians and tribes.

The Government, acting as a "trustee," took control of the Indian lands and established individual accounts for the land owners. The Government was supposed to manage the lands for account holders. It would negotiate sales or leases of land, and any revenues generated from oil drilling, mining, grazing, timber harvesting—or any other use of the land—was to be distributed to the account holders and their heirs. But that was promised.

The Indian trust fund has been so badly mismanaged for so long by administrations of both political parties that today no one knows how much money the trust fund should contain. Estimates of how much is owed to individual account holders range from a low of $10 billion to more than $100 billion.

The people who are being hurt by this mismanagement are some of the poorest people in America. Many live in houses that are little more than shacks, with no heat, no electricity, and no phones. Many of them are elderly. They have been waiting their whole lives for money that belongs to them—money that our Government is holding and refusing to hand over.

Ten years ago, Congress passed legislation requiring the Department of the Interior to make a full and accurate historical accounting of all trust assets and obligations. Seven years ago, a federal judge named Elouise Cobell, a member of the Blackfeet Indian Nation, sued the Department to force it to comply with our order.

Last fall, a Federal judge finally agreed. It seemed that was going to be the beginning of the end of the trust fund dispute, and it was now finally within reach.

Then, shockingly, the administration and leadership in Congress on the other side, behind closed doors, added language to the 2004 Interior appropriations conference report ordering the Interior Department actually to ignore and defy the judge's ruling. Clearly unconstitutional, it violates the separation of powers and due process protections.

It has become increasingly clear that this administration's interest is in limiting the Government's financial exposure rather than seeking a just settlement of the trust dispute. Despite its obligations to consult with the tribes, the Interior Department is now trying to push through its own plan to reorganize the Indian trust.

Tribal leaders have not been consulted. Deep skepticism and opposition in Indian country continues to exist.

Earlier this month, the administration sent Congress its budget for next year. It now makes deep cuts in every program affecting Indians, except one. There is a 50-percent increase for the Department's trust reorganization plan.

The BIA, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, divides America into 13 regions. Yesterday, congressional and tribal leaders held a "summit" on trust reform. At that summit, the tribal representatives to BIA in all 13 regions pleaded with Congress to slow the Department's unilateral reorganization of the trust.

AMERICA'S UNFULFILLED TREATY OBLIGATIONS TO NATIVE AMERICANS

The complexity of the challenge cannot be overstated. Tribal leaders have not been consulted. Deep skepticism and opposition in Indian country continues to exist.

Earlier this month, the administration sent Congress its budget for next year. It now makes deep cuts in every program affecting Indians, except one. There is a 50-percent increase for the Department's trust reorganization plan.

The BIA, the Bureau of Indian Affairs, divides America into 13 regions. Yesterday, congressional and tribal leaders held a "summit" on trust reform. At that summit, the tribal representatives to BIA in all 13 regions pleaded with Congress to slow the Department's unilateral reorganization of the trust.

No trust reorganization plan can succeed without the involvement, support, and leadership of the tribes. It is time for Congress to take a more active role in trust reform. Three things are essential.

First, we need a new round of comprehensive public hearings. This week, Senator BETH NIGHORSE CAMPBELL announced that the Indian Affairs Committee would hold hearings. I thank him.

Second, congressional meddling in the Cobell litigation must end. The "midnight rider" putting court orders on hold must not be extended; courts must be allowed to do their job. Last year, Senators MCCAIN, JOHNSON, ISOTYR and I introduced a bill, the American Indian Trust Fund Management Reform Act Amendments, requiring the Interior Department to conduct an historical accounting for all trust assets.

Third and finally, the Federal Government should start budgeting for an eventual solution. Money in those accounts belongs to Indians, and the Government cannot continue to hold it. Last year, in the Interior Payment Trust Equity Act, we created a $10 billion fund to begin making payments to trust holders who have received an objective accounting of their trust assets.

Somehow, the Federal Government must put its money where its mouth is and begin making trust holders whole. The complexity of the challenge cannot be used as an excuse to continue denying account holders what is rightfully theirs.

Another injustice that must end is the chronic underfunding of the Indian Health Service. The report last summer by the Civil Rights Commission, and another by the Centers for Disease Control, show that Native Americans live sicker and die younger than other Americans as a result of inadequate health care. The Indian Health Service budget accounts for one-half of 1 percent of the Department of Health and Human Services budget.

The health system with the sickest people and the greatest needs gets the smallest increases.

Last week, I held health care "town hall meetings" on Pine Ridge and Rosebud reservations in South Dakota. We expected 200; we got 700. I heard horrific, heartbreaking stories. People talked about losing parents, children, and spouses because health care wasn't available. Some people had waited months to see an IHS doctor. Finally, they couldn't take the pain any longer. They went to a non-IHS hospital, and they ended up with hospital bills they couldn't pay, so they lost their good credit rating as well as their good name.

It is unacceptable that the Federal Government spends twice as much on health care for Federal prisoners as it does for Indian children and families.

It is immoral that sick people are turned away every day from IHS hospitals and clinics in this country unless they are in immediate danger of losing life or limb.

"Life or limb" is not a figure of speech. It is an actual standard for care, and it is a national disgrace.

Last March, I offered an amendment to the budget resolution to provide $2.9 billion in order to fully fund one part of the IHS budget. Unfortunately, every RepublicanSenator voted against it. They offered an amendment with $292 million, one-tenth of the amount we proposed. It was inadequate, but we accepted it, only to find when we went to conference, the Republicans killed their own amendment in conference. We tried repeatedly last year to increase funding by $2.9 billion, and we will do so again this year.

More than a century ago, our Government signed treaties with the Indian nations promising to provide them and their descendants three things forever:

- A sovereign relationship with Native Americans, characterized by their status as governmental independent entities, dependent on the United States for support and protection. In exchange for land and in compensation for forced removal from their original homelands, the government promised through laws, treaties, and pledges to support and protect Native Americans. However, funding for programs associated with those promises has fallen short, and Native Americans continue to live in substandard housing and school buildings. BIA and its programs play a pivotal role in the lives of Native Americans, but mismanagement and lack of funding have undercut the agency's ability to improve living conditions in Native communities.

- A binding trust obligation to provide them money trust accounts has denied Native Americans the right to control their own funds, and instead is dependent on the Agency to manage money trust accounts on behalf of Native Americans, even though the government has already paid for in full with their lands.

- Federal efforts to provide them and their descendants three things forever:

- For the United States to continue to honor its obligation to provide them with their lands.

Thus, there persists a large deficit in funding Native American programs that needs to be paid to eliminate the backlog of unmet Native American needs, an essential predicate to raising their standards of living to that of other Americans. Native Americans living on tribal lands do not have access to the same services and programs available to other Americans, even though the government has a binding trust obligation to them. In preparing this report, the Commission reviewed the budgets of the six federal agencies with the largest expenditures on Native American programs and conducted an extensive literature review.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), within DOI, bears the primary responsibility for the reclassified Nickels Bill which recognizes American tribes with federal services. The Congressional Research Service found that between 1975 and 2000, funding for BIA and the Office of the Special Trustee declined by $6 million yearly when adjusted for inflation. BIA's mismanagement of Individual Indian Money trust accounts has denied Native Americans the right to control their own funds, and instead is responsible for applying toward basic needs that BIA programs fail to provide. Insufficient program funding resulted in $7.4 billion in unmet needs among Native Americans in 2000. Of this amount, a shortfall in tribal priority allocations (TPA), which provides such basic services as child welfare and adult voca-

Let us put our minds together and see what life we can make for our children.

EXHIBIT 1

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The federal government has a long-established special relationship with Native Americans characterized by their status as governmentally independent entities, dependent on the United States for support and protection. In exchange for land and in compensation for forced removal from their original homelands, the government promised through laws, treaties, and pledges to support and protect Native Americans. However, funding for programs associated with those promises has fallen short, and Native Americans continue to live in substandard housing and school buildings. BIA and its programs play a pivotal role in the lives of Native Americans, but mismanagement and lack of funding have undercut the agency's ability to improve living conditions in Native communities.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND HUMAN SERVICES

Native Americans have a lower life expectancy than any other racial/ethnic group and higher rates of many diseases, including diabetes, tuberculosis, and alcoholism. Yet, health facilities are frequently inaccessible and inadequate. Native Americans lack access to health facilities and specialty services are not readily available. Most Native Americans do not have private health insurance and rely exclusively on the Indian Health Service (IHS) for health care. The federal government spends less per capita on Native American health care than on any other group for which it has this responsibility, including Medicaid recipients, prisoners, and military personnel. Annual IHS spending per capita is less than the average per person health care spending in the United States.

The IHS, although the largest source of federal funding for Native Americans, constitutes only 0.5 percent of the entire HHS budget. The IHS faces shrinking proportion of HHS' discretionary budget today than five years ago. By most accounts, the IHS has done well to work within its resource limitations. However, the agency currently operates with an estimated 99 percent of the amount necessary to stem the crisis. If funded sufficiently, IHS could provide more money to meet health needs, including primary care, urban health programs, health facility construction and renovation, and sanitation services.

DEPARTMENT OF HOUSING AND URBAN DEVELOPMENT

Households need on reservations and tribal lands cannot be met with the same interventions that HUD uses to meet rental housing or homeownership goals in the suburbs or inner cities. Innovation and a more comprehensive approach are needed, and the government's trust responsibility to provide housing to Native Americans must be fully factored into these efforts.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

All three components of law enforcement—policing, justice, and corrections—are substandard in Indian Country compared with the rest of the nation. Native Americans are twice as likely as any other racial/ethnic group to be the victims of crime. Yet, per capita spending on law enforcement in Native American communities is only 60 percent of the national average. Correctional facilities in Indian Country are also more overcrowded than even the most crowded state and federal prisons. In addition, Native Americans have long held that tribal court systems have not been funded sufficiently or consistently, and hence, are not equal to our court systems.

Law enforcement professionals concede that the dire situation in Indian Country is unique. Because of this, the Justice Department is recommended for its stated intention to meet its obligations to Native Americans, promising projects have suffered from inconsistent or discontinued funding. Native American law enforcement funding has declined at least 85 percent between 1998 and 2003, but the amount allocated was so small to begin with that its proportion to the department's total budget hardly changed. Native American programs make up roughly 1 percent of the agency's total budget. A downward trend in funding has begun that, if continued, will severely compromise public safety in Native communities.

Additionally, many Native Americans have lost trust in the justice system due to perceived bias. Many attribute disproportionately high incarceration rates to unfair treatment by the criminal justice system, including racial profiling, disproportionate prosecution, and lack of access to legal representation. Solving these problems is vital to reestablishing trust, comprehensive treatment, and restorative justice in Indian Country.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

As a group, Native American students are not afforded educational opportunities equal to other American students. They routinely suffer from overburdening school systems, underpaid teachers, weak curricula, discriminatory treatment, outdated learning tools, and While some agencies are more proficient at managing funds and addressing the needs of Native Americans than others, the government’s failure is systemic. The Commission identified outcomes; (3) perennial adequate funding; (4) advancement of Indian nations to- wards independence and self-determination; (5) a culture of articulation among agencies. The result is funding must be provided for programs to address the crisis of Indian poverty, divide and conquer. The unique needs of Native Americans than others, the govern- ments should incorporate IHS’ Federal Disparity Index assessment for tracking dis- parity in services and needs. Tribal organi- zations and Native American advocacy groups should be consulted when agencies de- velop measures. The results of such examina- tions should be used to prepare budget esti- mates, prioritize spending, and assess the status of programs. Congress should require and review unmet needs analyses annually as a component of each agency’s budget jus- tification.

4. All Federal agencies that administer Na- tive American programs should be required to provide comprehensive spending infor- mation so there is less overlap and clearer ac- countability.

5. Federal agencies should avoid imple- menting across-the-board budget cuts when Native American programs are so severe. Agencies must prepare budgets that account for the proportionality of Native American funding. Funds for a common purpose should be consolidated within a single agen- cy so there is less overlap and clearer ac- countability.

6. To the extent possible, programs for Na- tive Americans should be managed and con- trolled by Native Americans. Distribution of funds to tribes should be closely monitored by the source agencies to ensure that funds are used as directed in a manner developed in consultation with Native Americans and tribes.

7. Federal impoverishment activities must compensate for costs that are unique to tribes, such as those required to build infrastructure, those associated with geographic remote- ness, and those required for training and technical assistance. The unique needs of reservation and urban Native Americans must also be assessed, and adequate funding must be provided for programs to serve these individuals.

9. Congress should request an analysis of spending patterns of every Federal agency that supports Native American programs, ei- ther by the U.S. General Accounting Office or by Congressional Research Service. In ad- dition, an independent external contractor should audit fund management of all Federal agencies distributing Native American ap- propriations.

10. Each agency should have one central of- fice responsible for oversight and manage- ment of Indian funds, and which prepares budgets and analyses that can be compared and aggregated across agencies.

11. The Office of Management and Budget should develop government-wide, uniform standards for tracking and reporting spend- ing on Native American programs. Agencies should be required to include justifications for each Native American project in annual budget requests, as well as justifications for the discontinuation of such programs. They should also be required to maintain com- prehensive spending logs for Indian pro- grams, including actual grant disburse- ments, numbers of beneficiaries, and un- funded programs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Expressions of approval or disapproval are not in order.

The Senator from Idaho. Mr. CRAIG. Madam President, we are on the Daschle amendment.

Mr. CRAIG. I am happy to.

Mr. REID. I am wondering if there is a need for a recorded vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I do not see that need.
Mr. REID. I think we can do this by voice because it is my understanding that the Kohl second degree is also going to be done by voice vote, so that would eliminate the need for two votes. We could go directly to the Boxer amendment.

Mr. CRAIG. Madam President, when Senator DASCHEL and I began to visit about the issue of liability to gun manufacturers and responsible licensed gun dealers, we wanted to make sure it was as soon as I expressed yesterday that it would be. Senator DASCHEL came up with some ideas that would strike the "knowing and willing" in the preceding sentences, potentially increasing the likelihood that this exception in the general immunity afforded under the law would be applicable in any given case.

That is what we did. They are two very distinct provisions. I discussed them last night. I will not go into them today for the record. But we handed that over to the Congressional Research Service. What they have said is this: Applying these changes to the scenarios at issue—and those relate both to manufacturers and gun sales—appears the amendment could have the effect of making it more likely that this exception to immunity would be applicable in certain facts, as established.

In other words, we truly have clarified the immunity provision. It is every bit as strong as was asserted it was, that all current Federal laws pertaining to the mismanagement, mishandling, the criminal actions that are in violation of a Federal firearm license or that are in violation of a manufacturers responsibility are adhered to.

I believe the amendment is a good one. It perfects and improves S. 1805. I encourage its passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further discussion?

If not, the question is on agreeing to amendment No. 2621.

The amendment (No. 2621) was agreed to.

Mr. REID. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I do not object to that request, Madam President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. KOHL. Madam President, I rise as an original sponsor of the child safety lock amendment. I thank the Senator from California for offering this important measure today. The Child Safety Lock Act significantly reduces the incidence of gun-related tragedies in our country among the most vulnerable element of our population; namely, our children.

I have a second-degree amendment I wish to offer now. I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senate from Wisconsin [Mr. KOHL] proposes an amendment numbered 2622 to amendment No. 2620.

Mr. KOHL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, to require the provision of a child safety lock in connection with the transfer of a handgun) In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted at the end of the preceding title,

TITLE II—CHILD SAFETY LOCKS

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE.
This title may be cited as the “Child Safety Lock Act of 2004”.

SEC. 202. PURPOSES.
The purposes of this title are—
(1) to promote the safe storage and use of handguns by consumers;
(2) to prevent unauthorized persons from gaining access to a handgun, including children who may not be in possession of a handgun; and
(3) to avoid hindering industry from supplying firearms to law abiding citizens for all lawful purposes, including hunting, self-defense, collecting, and competitive or recreational shooting.

SEC. 203. FIREARMS SAFETY.
(a) UNLAWFUL ACTS.—
(1) MANDATORY TRANSFER OF SECURE GUN STORAGE OR SAFETY DEVICE.—Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting at the end the following:

“(2) SECURE GUN STORAGE OR SAFETY DEVICE.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided under paragraph (2), it shall be unlawful for any licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer to transfer, sell, deliver, or transfer any firearm to any person other than any person licensed under this chapter, unless the transferee is provided with a secure gun storage or safety device (as defined in section 921(a)(34) of this title).

“(2) EXCEPTIONS.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to—

“(A) the manufacture for, transfer to, or possession by a licensed importer, licensed manufacturer, or licensed dealer of a firearm held by a department or agency of the United States, a State, or a department, agency, or political subdivision of a State, or a handgun that is not a stolen firearm; or

“(B) the transfer to any person of a handgun listed as a curio or relic by the Secretary pursuant to section 921(a)(13); or

“(C) the transfer to any person of a handgun for which a secure gun storage or safety device is temporarily unavailable for the reasons described in the exceptions stated in subparagraph (A) or (B), if the transferee, the licensed importer, or licensed dealer delivers to the transferee within 10 calendar days from the date of the delivery of the handgun to the transferee a secure gun storage or safety device for the handgun.

“(D) LIABILITY FOR USE.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a person who has lawful possession and control of a handgun, and who uses a secure gun storage or safety device with the handgun, shall be entitled to immunity from a qualified civil liability action.

“(B) PROSPECTIVE ACTIONS.—A qualified civil liability action may not be brought in any Federal or State court.

“(C) DEFINED TERM.—As used in this paragraph, the term ‘qualified civil liability action’ means—

“(i) means a civil action brought by any person against another person for damages resulting from the criminal or unlawful misuse of the handgun by a third party, if—

“(I) the handgun was accessed by another person who did not have the permission or authorization to access the handgun and the person having possession and control of the handgun had made it inoperable by use of a secure gun storage or safety device; and

“(II) at the time access was gained by the person not so authorized, the handgun had been made inoperable by use of a secure gun storage or safety device; and

“(ii) shall not include an action brought against the person having lawful possession and control of the handgun for negligent entrustment or negligence per se.”.

(C) LIABILITY; EVIDENCE.—

“(1) LIABILITY.—Nothing in this title shall—

“(A) provide a defense to a person who—

“(I) transfers, delivers, or transfers any firearm other than a handgun to any person other than any person licensed under this chapter that was used to conduct armed criminal activity; or “(II) subject the licensee to a civil penalty for—

“(A) the transferee is provided with a secure gun storage or safety device; and

“(B) the transferee is provided with a secure gun storage or safety device; and

“(2) ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES.—The Secretary of the Treasury shall have the power to—

“(A) impose a civil penalty on any manufacturer, licensed importer, or licensed dealer, the Secretary may, after notice and opportunity for hearing—

“(i) except that a manufacturer, licensed importer, or licensed dealer for which a second-degree amendment to the Boxer amendment.
February 26, 2004

Mr. KOHL. Madam President, as I understand it, there is no need for debate on this amendment. The Senator from California has told me she has no objection to our modifications. So if it is not objectionable to the managers of the bill, I will move to lay the bill on the table, and we will yield back our time. I will not call for a rollcall vote, and I hope the Senate will accept these modifications by voice vote.

This amendment will make the Boxer amendment virtually identical to the bipartisan child safety lock amendment that passed with 78 votes in 1999. Protecting our children from accidental shootings is a concern that crosses party lines, and I am proud that today we get a chance to express that concern again in an overwhelming and bipartisan way.

Every year, children and teenagers are involved in more than 10,000 accidental shootings. Close to 800 of those shootings result in a senseless death. And those 800 deadly accidents do not account for the thousands of additional gun-related deaths of America's youth each year that result from suicide or intentional shootings. Every 6 hours, a young person between the ages of 10 and 19 commits suicide with an available firearm. In all, nearly 3,000 children and young people die every year from firearms-related injuries.

To many of us, this recitation of numbers and statistics is terribly grim. But for the families, the pain associated with those avoidable deaths is unbearable. What is equally tragic is that so many of those deaths could have been prevented. The use of a child safety lock would have, at the very least, stopped hundreds of accidents each and every year.

This legislation is simple, straightforward, and effective. It mandates that a child safety lock device or a trigger lock be sold with every handgun. Most locks resemble a padlock that locks around the gun trigger and immediately prevents it from being fired. These and other locks can be purchased in virtually every gun store for less than $10. They are already used by tens of thousands of responsible gun owners to protect their firearms from unauthorized use, and they surely have saved many lives.

Support for this commonsense approach to gun safety is widespread. In 1999, the same child safety lock provision passed the Senate by an overwhelming vote of 78 to 20. It was an amendment during the juvenile justice debate. This proposal is as popular with the rest of the country and the law enforcement community as it was with the Senate. Polls have shown that 73 percent of the American public, including 6 of 10 gun owners, favors the mandatory sale of child safety locks with guns. In a survey of nearly 500 of Wisconsin's police chiefs and sheriffs, 90 percent agreed that child safety locks should be sold with every gun.

This legislation has the support of the current administration as well. During his campaign in 2000, President Bush indicated that if Congress passes a bill making the sale of child safety locks mandatory with every gun sale, he would sign it into law. Attorney General Ashcroft affirmed the administration support of the mandatory sale of child safety locks during his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The bill is not a panacea. It will not prevent every single avoidable firearm-related accident, but the fact is all parents want it for their children. This legislation will ensure that people purchase child safety locks when they buy guns. Those who buy locks are more likely to use them. That much we know is certain. Those who use the locks will be protected from liability if those guns are misused.

The Child Safety Lock Act is a modest proposal. Though imposing a minimal cost on consumers, it will prevent the deaths of many innocent children every year. The Senate spoke overwhelmingly in favor of this proposal in 1999.

Madam President, I urge my colleagues to support and vote for the amendment before us today.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I move to lay the amendment on the table.

Mr. REED. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, what is the business before the Senate? Is it the Boxer amendment, as amended by the Kohl amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Boxer amendment, as amended.

Mr. REID. What time is remaining on that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. CRAIG. Madam President, I will take some of those minutes to speak to the Boxer amendment, as amended. I do oppose this amendment and here are some very simple facts why.

I have already talked about the industry itself moving rapidly in a voluntary way toward compliance. Clearly, the bill has been improved by the Senator from Wisconsin, but let me suggest this to all of us because I think we misunderstand some simple terms. The home is a private place and for the first time the long arm of Government will reach into the private place and suggest to the average American how they will store an object in that private place.

I am not arguing about the care, the emotion, the concern, and the reality, not at all. I understand that. But I do not believe that Government ought to be telling the average citizen how they store objects within their home.

We are hearing about the tragedies of children losing their life by the misuse of a firearm. I think the Senator from Wisconsin mentioned suicides. My point is that trigger locks do nothing to suicides. The great tragedy of a suicide is that a teenager thinks it out, and if they think it out they are probably going to find the key to the trigger lock or they will know where it is as a teenager and that will not stop that tragedy. That is an emotional situation that none of us quite understand sometimes why teenagers resort to that kind of action and violence.

I will talk about the home environment and what is going on in the home environment. Since 1996, accidental deaths by firearms in the home have declined 62 percent. Firearms are now involved in only 1.5 percent of accidental fatalities nationwide within the home. Here is the tragedy: Deaths caused to children by motor vehicle accidents is 47 percent; a child falling down the home, deaths 15 percent; poisoning, 10 percent; drowning, 4 percent; fire, 8 percent; suffocation on small objects going down the throat of a small child, 3 percent. More children are killed by an object lodging in their throat than by finding an improperly stored handgun. Now, those are the facts, as we know them. Those facts... come from the National Safety Council, the National Center for Health Statistics.

Again, I do not dispute the emotion or the concern or the care that the Senator from California has on this issue. I do not dispute the right of the Federal Government to enter the home and tell the average citizen they have to comply with mandatory storage laws that exist with penalties. I believe that is unnecessary in a free society. I believe the responsibility is always necessary, and the industry is rapidly moving in that direction. Ninety percent are in compliance with the fundamental principles of the law itself.

This is the thing that concerns me most: Most States already provide penalties for reckless endangerment under which an adult found grossly negligent in the storage of a firearm under certain circumstances can be prosecuted for a felony offense. Universal mandatory storage requirements are counterproductive. That was 1936. That was the way it ought to be. We have already seen the industry involve science and technology to try to deal with this issue, and they are trying to develop those kinds of standards that work. I have already mentioned that the National Safety Council tested 32 types of gunlocks and found that 30 of them could be opened without a key. While the industry is rushing to get there, what we are needing, and the industry is now doing it, is standardization.

In any emergency, and now we are talking about oftentimes why a gun is in a home, a trigger lock can handicap a person who needs a gun for protection. So the industry is trying to make them applicable so they can be accessed within seconds or minutes in case the burglar is breaking into the home, the reality is that if the gun is locked away in a safe it is ineffective as a use for personal protection in an unsafe environment. Those are the kinds of concerns I think all of us have as we talk about these kinds of issues and as we tick away at the right of the private gun owner to manage what I believe is a constitutional right in this country.

I will give a little bit of history and then I will close. In 1936, British police began adding the following requirements for firearms certificates: Firearms and ammunition to which this certificate relates must at all times, when not in actual use, be stored in safe and secure places. That was 1936. What has transpired in British law until today is that if one wants to own a gun and they get a certificate to own a gun, the police come to their home and ask where they are going to store it. They look at where it is going to be stored and if the gun owner does not have a lockbox or if they do not have a safe, they do not own a gun.

Will that ever happen in this country? I would hope not. I hope Americans would rebel about the reality of that. If I were entering their home to tell them what to do as it relates to storing an object in the home, especially an object that we believe is a constitutional right, that is the issue at hand.

Again, I am not going to argue with the Senator from California. States are moving now, and I think in some ways responsibly, to encourage, educate, and train. The industry is moving in that direction. To establish a Federal requirement that says this is the way one is going to do it in their home—I believe in a fundamental right of privacy—this is a breach of that right and an entry into the home with the long arm of Federal law. I do not think we ought to go there.

I hope Senators will join with me in opposing this amendment as amended by the KoHL amendment. I am prepared to yield back the remainder of my time in relation to a vote on this issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mr. REID. Madam President, on this amendment all time has been used. I ask the good offices of my friend from Idaho to allow the Senator from California 1 minute to respond to the statements of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. I accept that if I have an additional 1 minute to close after the Senator from California.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that the request be so modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I ask the good offices of my friend from California.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENSIGN). Time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask for an additional minute and give my friend 2 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Let me make this point. When my friend compares an accidental shooting with a gun resulting in a death to a suicide, I would say that is quite different, because in the tragic case of suicide, although my friend is quite right, we do try on some of our bridges to build barriers, but if there is an intent, although we do our best, we often fail. But a 3-year-old or 5-year-old child picking up a gun really doesn’t know whether it is going to be used and some of our kids are exposed.

I have two quick further points to make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Madam President, the time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I appreciate my friend yielding.

I think this argument has now been joined. The argument Senator CRAIG makes against this amendment, to me, is just off point. This bill is not a mandatory storage law. This has nothing to do with a mandatory storage law. The fact is we have passed this before, 78 to 20. We are not saying we have storage. We are saying that when you go to buy a handgun, it has some type of device on it. We don’t mandate what that device is. We say it could be one of five or six different things. There will be standards set. It is not one-size-fits-all. It is not a mandatory storage law.

I agree with my friend, if the gun manufacturers do this on their own, that is great. But as we have learned from the SAFE KIDS Campaign, not all don’t know it, it is going to be used and some of our kids are exposed.

I have two quick further points to make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask for an additional minute and give my friend 2 additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Let me make this point. When my friend compares an accidental shooting with a gun resulting in a death to a suicide, I would say that is quite different, because in the tragic case of suicide, although my friend is quite right, we do try on some of our bridges to build barriers, but if there is an intent, although we do our best, we often fail. But a 3-year-old or 5-year-old child picking up a gun really doesn’t know whether it is going to be used. So it is up to us to make sure we do our best. That is all; we do our best.

My last point. There are standards for aspirin caps, cribs, Play-Doh, Teddy bears, pajamas. There ought to be a standard for a safety lock on a gun. I don’t think we do violence to freedom in any way.

I wish my friend were with me on this, but if not, I hope we can repeat the vote we had last time; 78 to 20 sounds really good. I hope we can do that again.

I yield the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I will be brief. I don’t question the sincerity of the Senator from California. I recognize what she is attempting to do.

The industry is rushing. It is at near 90 percent compliance today. We want firearms to be as safe as possible in this country.

Let me close with this. Firearms are involved in 1.5 percent of the accidents within a home that involve a child; motor vehicles and children; 47 percent of the deaths of young children are caused by motor vehicles; falling, 15 percent; poisoning, 10 percent; drowning, 4 percent; fire, 3 percent; objects ingested and lodged in the throat in which they suffocate, 3 percent.
move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, we have the Campbell concealed-carry bill. We are minutes away from being ready to offer that, so I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant Journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. Then I will stay here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. May I inquire of the managers of the bill, if there are a few minutes before you get to this, I would like to take a few minutes and speak on the underlying bill.

Mr. CRAIG. Yes. I see no reason why the Senator could not speak. How long does the Senator intend to speak?

Mr. DODD. I see my colleague from Massachusetts. Ten minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am trying to find out how we are going to proceed. I have seen the agreement. I am just trying to understand the order. We have the concealed weapons amendment and then the cop killer bullets. I thought we had a time limit on those. I am trying to find out.

Mr. CRAIG. Will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, the order now before the Senate indicates the next amendment is the Campbell-Leahy amendment. That is 60 minutes. The time, of course, is in the usual form. Following that is the Kennedy cop killer bill amendment. Following that is the Cantwell amendment and maybe somebody else in between. That is where we are. I do not see Senator Campbell on the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY. I understand we will have an hour. It will be an hour equally divided. I will have 30 minutes. I would be glad to get an opportunity to get to the Senator from Connecticut so he can make his comments, and we can move the process along. If it is agreeable with the managers, that is certainly agreeable with me.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut has the floor.

Mr. REID. I would ask that Senator Dodd be allowed 10 minutes from Senator Kennedy's time on the amendment that will soon be offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DODD. I yield for purposes of having the amendment proposed.

Mr. HATCH. Well, let me go first.

Mr. DODD. Are you going to take 30 minutes? I would like to be able to be heard.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

AMENDMENT NO. 2623

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of Senators Campbell, Leahy, Hatch, DeWine, Sessions, and Craig, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant Journal clerk reads as follows:

The Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH], for himself, Mr. CAMPBELL, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. SESSIONS, and Mr. CRAIG, proposes an amendment numbered 2623.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To amend title 18, United States Code, to exempt qualified current and former law enforcement officers from State laws prohibiting the carrying of concealed handguns)

On page 11, after line 19, add the following:

SEC. 5. LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS SAFETY ACT.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This section may be cited as the "Steve Young Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act of 2004".

(b) EXEMPTION OF QUALIFIED LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS FROM STATE LAWS PROHIBITING THE CARRYING OF CONCEALED FIREARMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 926A the following:

"§ 926B. Carrying of concealed firearms by qualified law enforcement officers

(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of the law of any State or any political subdivision thereof, an individual who is a qualified law enforcement officer and who is carrying the identification required by subsection (d) may carry a concealed firearm that has been shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce, subject to subsection (b).

(b) This section shall not be construed to supersede or limit the laws of any State that:

(1) permit private persons or entities to prohibit or restrict the possession of concealed firearms on their property; or

(2) prohibit or restrict the possession of firearms on any State or local government property, installation, building, base, or park.

(c) As used in this section, the term 'qualified law enforcement officer' means an employee of a governmental agency who—

(1) is authorized by law to engage in or supervise the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of, or the incarceration of any person for, any violation of law, and has statutory powers of arrest;

(2) is authorized by the agency to carry a firearm;

(3) is not the subject of any disciplinary action by the agency;

(4) meets standards, if any, established by the agency which require the employee to regularly qualify in the use of a firearm; and

(5) is not prohibited by Federal law from receiving a firearm.

(d) The identification required by this subsection is the photographic identification issued by the governmental agency for which the individual is, or was, employed as a law enforcement officer.

(e) DEFINED TERMS.—As used in this section, the term 'firearm' does not include—
"(1) any machinegun (as defined in section 5845 of title 26);
"(2) any firearm silencer (as defined in section 921);
"(3) any destructive device (as defined in section 921)."

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 926A the following:

"§ 926B. Carrying of concealed firearms by qualified law enforcement officers."

(c) EXEMPTION OF QUALIFIED RETIRED LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS FROM STATE LAWS PROHIBITING THE CARRYING OF CONCEALED FIREARMS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 926B, as added by subsection (b), the following:

"§ 926C. Carrying of concealed firearms by qualified retired law enforcement officers

"(a) Notwithstanding any other provision of the law of any State or any political subdivision thereof, an individual who is a qualified retired law enforcement officer and who is carrying the identification required by subsection (d) may carry a concealed firearm that is loaded, if shipped or transported in interstate or foreign commerce, subject to subsection (b)."

"(b) This section shall not be construed to supersede or limit the laws of any State that—

"(1) permit private persons or entities to prohibit or restrict the possession of concealed firearms on their property; or
"(2) prohibit or restrict the possession of firearms on any State or local government property, installation, building, base, or park.

"(c) As used in this section, the term "qualified retired law enforcement officer" means an individual who—

"(1) retired in good standing from service with a public agency as a law enforcement officer, other than for reasons of mental instability;
"(2) before such retirement, was authorized by law to engage in or supervise the prevention, detection, investigation, or prosecution of, or the arrest or holding in custody of any person for, any violation of law, and had statutory power of arrest;
"(3)(A) before such retirement, was regularly employed as a law enforcement officer for an aggregate of 15 years or more; or
"(B) retired from service with such agency, after completing any applicable probationary period of such service, due to a service-connected disability, as determined by such agency;
"(4) has a nonforfeitable right to benefits under the retirement plan of the agency;
"(5) during the most recent 12-month period, has met, at the expense of the individual, the State's standards for training and qualification as a law enforcement officer;
"(6) is not prohibited by Federal law from receiving a firearm.

"(d) The identification required by this subsection is photographic identification issued by the agency for which the individual was employed as a law enforcement officer.

"(e) DEFINED TERM.—As used in this section, the term "firearm" does not include—

"(1) any machinegun (as defined in section 5845 of title 26);
"(2) any firearm silencer (as defined in section 921); and
"(3) a destructive device (as defined in section 921)."

(2) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for chapter 44 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 926B the following:

"§ 926C. Carrying of concealed firearms by qualified retired law enforcement officers.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let's see if my colleague from Connecticut can agree to this. I intend to take a few minutes to define the bill. I have promised Senator DeWine, I think he only has about 3 or 4 minutes.

Mr. DODD. I do not.

Mr. DODD. I think I still have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada had the floor and relinquished the floor. Now the Senator from Utah has the floor.

Mr. HATCH. I will say my statement in a very few minutes. Then I ask unanimous consent that we go to the distinguished Senator from Connecticut and then the Senator from Utah has the floor.

Mr. DODD. I think I still have the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. HATCH. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues, Senator HATCH and Senator Kennedy, for being very gracious in providing me a few minutes to address the underlying bill. I know we are going to debate the amendment on concealed weapons, but I wish to share with my colleagues my views on this legislation.

I cannot see any amendment that can be offered to this legislation that is going to convince this Senator that the underlying bill deserves support. I am stunned, in many ways, that we are even suggesting this legislation. I can only imagine what it would be if I were to come to the Chamber and offer a similar amendment that would exclude any other industry in the country from the exposure of potential liability for wrongdoing. In my State, I represent more gun manufacturers than any other Member of this body. I also represent probably more insurance companies and more pharmaceutical companies in the State of Connecticut than almost any other Senator in the country. As strongly as I support the people who work in these businesses and respect what they do, the idea that we would take an entire industry and remove it from the potential of liability is rather breathtaking to me. In this day and age, I am a great advocate of tort reform, as many of my colleagues know. I authored the securities litigation reform bill and wrote the uniform standards litigation bill. I am now working on class action reform. But the idea that we were going to use this industry and give it immunity from wrongdoing, I think, is rather stunning to this Member.
I wish to take a few minutes to say why it is so outrageous. I want to add, with all the matters we should be addressing with the limited time in this session, with the thousands of people losing their jobs today, we have nothing to say about outsourcing. When we have 44 million Americans without health insurance, we have nothing to say about those issues. We are drowning in budget deficits and trade deficits. We have the worst job deficit since the Great Depression. Poverty is increasing, and this Chamber has nothing to say on those issues except we are now going to take one group of manufacturers and say: Don’t worry about anything, you don’t have to ever be held accountable for your wrongdoing. That is not in my view a budgetary policy for a number of reasons. First, it will have absolutely no impact whatsoever on reducing the rate of gun violence in our Nation. In fact, this bill ignores the devastating toll firearm violence continues to have on the country.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, there were nearly 29,000 deaths in the United States from firearms in the year 2001 alone—29,000 deaths. That is, of course, 10 times more than the United States lost during the Vietnam conflict. Approximately 2,700 children under the age of 19 are killed each year as a result of gun violence or improper use of guns.

The rate of firearm deaths of children under the age of 14 is 11 times higher in the United States than in 25 other industrialized nations combined. Let me repeat that. The firearm death rates of children under the age of 14 is 12 times higher in the United States than in 25 other industrialized nations combined.

We are about to exclude an entire industry from even being brought to the bar to question whether or not they might be liable. One study noted the firearm injury epidemic among children is nearly 10 times larger than the polio epidemic in the first half of the 20th century.

The human cost of gun-related deaths and injuries is tragic in itself, but the economic loss is also significant. In 2000, the average costs of treating gunshot wounds were $22,000 for each unintentional shooting and $18,400 for each gun assault injuries. These costs would undoubtedly be much higher today.

Total societal cost of firearms is estimated to be between $100 billion and $126 billion per year. Who pays these expenses? By and large the American taxpayers do.

My colleagues speak against unfunded mandates, and yet this bill, if enacted, burdens the Nation’s cities and counties with billions and billions of dollars in medical care, emergency services, police protections, courts, prisons, and school security. It is shameful that while tens of thousands of people are dying each year due to firearms, and while the American taxpayers pay tens of billions of dollars to cope with the effect of gun violence, the United States Senate is doing absolutely nothing to make our streets and homes safer. In fact, we are doing quite the opposite by our actions today.

Second, the legislation will give this industry special legal protections that no other industry in the United States has. Neither cigarette companies nor asbestos companies nor polluters have such sweeping immunity as we are about to give this industry. In fact, gun manufacturers and sellers are already exempt from Federal Consumer Product Safety Commission regulation, despite the fact firearms are among the most dangerous and deadly products in society. We have more regulations on toy guns than we do on the ones that fire real bullets.

Imagine that, a toy gun that you buy from Mattel, the Consumer Product Safety Commission issues literally pages of regulations on what must be included in the production of that toy gun. There is not a single word in the Consumer Product Safety Commission regulation about the production of a gun that may kill 29,000 people each year in this country. The National Rifle Association made sure of this exemption.

Among those individuals most affected by gun violence are children. It is not just an incident such as the Columbine High School massacre in 1999 or inner-city neighborhood shootings that should make us realize that children are among the most vulnerable to gun violence. Children are also killed or injured by firearms because their parents did not store their guns properly, and the kids used them for horseplay.

It is no coincidence then that firearms are the second leading death among young Americans ages 19 and under. Approximately 2,700 children under the age of 19 are killed each year as a result of gun violence or improper use of guns.

The National Rifle Association made sure of this exemption.
The passage of this bill would deliver a devastating blow to justice. The NRA and Congress need to understand that special interest groups cannot come before public safety. Gun stores and manufacturers must be held to the same standards of safety as any other industry. And if they fail to act responsibly, they must pay the price.

Eric in unequivocally reveals that the gun industry has been engaged in irresponsible behavior for many years. Senator REED and others have already mentioned one such industry actor: Bull’s Eye Shooter Supply in Michigan. This gun store has been accused that it “lost” the gun used by the Washington DC snipers John Muhammed and Lee Boyd Malvo as well as more than 200 other guns. Many of these firearms were later traced to other crimes.

In fact, Bull’s Eye Shooter Supply had no record of the gun ever being sold and did not report it until after the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms traced it back to the store. Even after the rifle was linked to the sniper shootings and the newspapers reported on the disappearance of the guns, the rifle’s manufacturer, Bushmaster Firearms, declared that it still considered Bull’s Eye a “good customer” and was happy to keep selling to the shop. The judge in this case has since ruled twice that the shop, the families of the DC-area sniper victims against both Bushmaster Firearms and Bull’s Eye Shooter Supply should proceed to trial, and a preliminary appeal of these rulings has been rejected.

Nevertheless, this case as well as other important pending and future lawsuits against negligent gun dealers and manufacturers would be banned under the Senate bill, according to the opinion of two of the Nation’s most prominent attorneys, David Boies and Lloyd Cutler.

There are many other instances of the gun industry not taking steps to prevent guns from reaching the illegal market, to Federal data from 2000, 1.2 percent of dealers account for 57 percent of all guns recovered in criminal investigations.

Undercover sting operations in Illinois, Michigan, and Indiana have found that such dealers routinely permit gun sales to “straw purchasers,” that is, individuals with clean records who buy guns for criminals, juveniles, or other individuals barred by law from purchasing them. Again, if the Senate bill is enacted, it says that if that manufacturer violates the law, they are in trouble. You bet we make it to the courthouse.

Firearms are also an important source of guns for criminals. I am pleased to join my colleagues Senators MCCAIN and REED in co-sponsoring legislation to close the gun show loophole in the Brady Act. Studies have shown that unlicensed dealers often sell large quantities of guns at these shows without having to run criminal background checks or keeping records.

Many of my colleagues might recall that a gun show was the source of the firearm purchased Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold before they went on their murderous rampage at Columbine High School. But again, the Senate bill will not hold such negligent gun sellers responsible for the injuries and deaths their firearms cause.

Supporters of this legislation contend that there is a gun litigation crisis in America, and that many of the cases being brought against the gun industry are frivolous. Nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, there are massive backlogs of claims against gun dealers and manufacturers burdening the court system, as with the asbestos litigation. Only 33 municipalities and one State, New York, have filed suits against gun makers. Not one of these cases has been dismissed as being frivolous.

In fact, 18 cities and counties have won favorable rulings on the legal merits of their cases. These courts have recognized that such cases are based on well recognized principles, such as negligence, product liability, and public nuisance. Important information on the gun industry’s wrongful actions, which has long been cloaked in secrecy for many years, is being revealed. These cases, however, will be precluded, and the information gleaned from them will be lost, if the gun industry is granted the immunity it seeks.

This legislation is the wrong way for the Senate to proceed on gun violence. Rather than giving special immunity to those manufacturers and dealers who wrongfully make and sell guns to criminals, the Senate should be working to protect our police officers and the people they protect.

Rather than placing more guns on the streets, the Senate should be considering more responsible guns legislation, such as making the ban on assault weapons permanent and closing the gun show loophole. I am hopeful that the Senate will have a full and comprehensive debate on these important issues in the coming days.

Rather than encouraging reasonable and safe gun use, the Senate is destroying any incentive for gun manufacturers to improve the safety of their deadly wares.

The Senate wishfully defeated a cloture motion on the motion to proceed to the medical malpractice bill. It should now tell the gun industry that they need to be held accountable for their deeds as is the case for every other industry in America so I urge my colleagues to oppose this legislation.

I have great respect for my colleagues, but there is no amendment that is going to be adopted in this Chamber that is going to make this ugly legislation any better. I do not care how much lipstick is put on this one, this is an unattractive bill by any standards. I am going to vote against it no matter what. What we are doing is outrageous. As the Senator who represents more of these manufacturers than any other Member in this body, I can say this is flat out wrong and we ought to be ashamed of ourselves for taking an entire industry and not holding it potentially liable for the harm that it causes to people across this country. Thirty thousand people die every year, almost 3,000 kids, and we are about to say to the manufacturer of the products that kill them to take a walk and that you never have to show up again in court. That is incredible to me that we are about to do that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, before I turn the time over to the Senator from Ohio, let me only say to the Senator from Connecticut, go back and read section 4 of the bill.

He is a very eloquent Senator, but at the same time this is a very narrow provision. It says if that manufacturer in a State or if a licensed gun dealer violates the law, they are in trouble. You bet we make it to the courthouse.

We make it in front of the judge and the judge hears the arguments. Let me refer to one of the Senator’s concerned constituents, the president of Local 376 of the UAW, who has lost over 600 jobs in the Savage Arms Factory because they have had to spend millions of dollars defending themselves on frivolous lawsuits. So that is a problem.

Mr. DODD. If my colleague will yield.

Mr. CRAIG. I will not yield.

To a question, I will respond.

Mr. DODD. The Senator raised my name. I did not talk about the Senator from Idaho. The Senator used my name. May I respond?

Mr. CRAIG. No.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. I have the floor. I would be happy to provide the letter to the Senator. I referred to the Senator as an eloquent spokesman and I ask the Senator to read section 4 of the bill.

I now yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Ohio who is a cosponsor of this legislation.

Mr. KENNEDY. I would be happy to yield another minute to the Senator from Connecticut so he may respond.

Mr. CRAIG. I have the floor and I have already yielded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The manager of the bill cannot yield the floor to another Senator. The Senator has the right.

Mr. CRAIG. I allocated him time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can allocate time. Other Senators have the right to compete for recognition, but the Senator cannot automatically give him the right for recognition.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Connecticut from my time. I do not want him to feel I have impugned his good name in any sense.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator can yield and he can compete for recognition.

The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I will take less than a minute to say something about losing jobs. I have lost 45,000 manufacturing jobs in my State over the last few months. It has nothing to do with this. It has to do with the fact that this administration has decided that manufacturing jobs are producing hamburgers at McDonald’s, and believe that outsourcing is a great thing for the country. That is where my jobs are going, not because of litigation.

There have been 33 lawsuits by counties or communities and one by a State brought against the gun manufacturers. None of them have ever gone anywhere. What are we doing? Tell me there is some great problem out here in litigation with my companies losing lawsuits all across the country.

We are a nation of 280 million people. Thirty-three lawsuits by counties, one by a State. The manufacturers never lost one. Why are we changing the law? Why, when 30,000 people die every year, 3,000 of whom we are changing the law? There is no justification in fact or in law to be doing this.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, it is my understanding that I can now yield a block of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. CRAIG. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from Ohio.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, it is my understanding that I can now yield a block of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. To the Senator from Connecticut, the time is allocated to both sides. Senator KENNEDY is controlling the time for the minority and Senator CRAIG is controlling the time for the majority. There are 18 minutes 59 seconds remaining under the control of Senator KENNEDY.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, ask the indulgence of my colleague from Ohio, who I guess has the floor now, would he yield me 30 seconds?

Mr. DEWINE. Certainly.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I associate myself with the remarks of my friend from Connecticut. This is about the raw exercise of political power. I do not know how many times in my 31 years I have ever heard a Senator stand up on the floor when he represents the greatest number of constituents affected by a bill, who are major players in his State, and say he disagrees with their position. We are missing an awful lot of that.

I acknowledge that this man has some political courage. We all would do a lot better if there were a lot more of it to go around.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. DeWINE. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Idaho and my colleague from Colorado for agreeing to change the name of this amendment from the Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act to the Steve Young Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act.

This name has particular meaning to me. I believe the renaming of this provision is a fitting tribute to a man who dedicated his life to keeping our community safe and free from crime.

Steve Young was a dear friend of mine from the State of Ohio. He was also a well-known and well-respected figure in the law enforcement community. Steve was elected by his peers to serve as the national president of the Fraternal Order of Police and held this post until his death from cancer on January 9, 2003. Steve was just 49 years of age at his death.

Steve grew up in Upper Sandusky, OH, and was a graduate of Upper Sandusky High School. He joined the Marion City Police Department in 1976 and spent his entire law enforcement career as an active-duty officer there. It was in Marion that Steve first became a member of the FOP lodge No. 24. He later went on to serve as president of this lodge in the year 2000.

He received the prestigious lifetime honor of president emeritus.

Leadership in the law enforcement community comes naturally to Steve, as his hard work and dedication earned him the respect and admiration of his peers. Steve went on to become active in the Ohio State lodge of the FOP and served first as vice president and then as president, representing Ohio’s 24,000 law enforcement officers. Through the Ohio State lodge, Steve helped to create the Ohio Labor Council. This council created a model for improved labor-management negotiation in police forces, a model that has now been adopted in at least 14 other States.

Steve’s leadership in the Ohio law enforcement community and really his expertise in labor issues earned him a national reputation.

In 2001, after serving for 4 years as national vice president, Steve was unanimously elected to serve as the national president of the FOP. In this capacity, Steve represented over 300,000 law enforcement officers and worked to protect the interests of our Nation’s finest. This was a job I know Steve loved and one he did with great dignity and pride.

While Steve Young had an incredibly successful career with multiple accomplishments, I would also like to take a few moments to discuss my personal connection with Steve. I had the privilege of knowing not just Steve Young the police officer but also Steve Young the man. Steve was, as I said, a dear friend of mine for many years. He was someone I could always count on, a person I could trust, and was fortunate to be able to call on him as a trusted adviser. I can’t tell Members of the Senate and you, Mr. President, how often I would call him for advice, whether it was when I was Lieutenant Governor of Ohio or later when I was a Senator.

I had the opportunity to work with Steve for many, many years. I relied heavily on him and his counsel. I consulted with him regularly on criminal justice matters, and his keen insights have helped shape nearly every piece of crime legislation with which I have been involved.

One of the last times I saw Steve he was in Washington for a Judiciary Committee hearing. I am fortunate that I had a chance to spend a few moments with him that day. It is that meeting that reminded me of Steve’s humility. He was a humble man. He had no airs about him. He was quiet and self-effacing. He didn’t put on a show or try to impress people with his position or his power within the national FOP.

But you know, at the same time, his affable nature did not hide the fact that Steve Young was also a very strong man: brave, courageous, fearless, and tough as nails. After all, he was a policeman, and exactly the kind of policeman I would have wanted by my side when I was a county prosecutor many years ago, the kind of policeman I would have wanted helping me if I were a victim of crime, the kind of policeman I would have wanted protecting my children or grandchildren or any member of my family. That was Steve Young—a model for all law enforcement.

He was a humble, dedicated man who devoted his career to working for the good of Ohio, for the good of the Nation. Steve’s commitment to our communities was evident in everything he did. Criminals were caught because of him and crimes were prevented. He was a protector. He was a leader. He was a good and decent, hard-working man for whom I have the greatest respect and admiration.

It is fitting that this amendment now is named after Steve Young.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Graham of South Carolina). Who yields time? The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Vermont.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senator Leahy is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I thank the managing Senator.

I listened to what the distinguished Senator from Ohio said about Steve Young. I thought it was eloquent, well put, and I wish to join the committee. I consider myself very fortunate to have known Steve. I thought how important it was that we change the short title of this amendment to “The Steve Young Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act.” I remember even talking with Steve a number of times after he was ill and could no longer travel. Through all of that time, he, in typical fashion, spoke about others and not about himself.

I began my public career in law enforcement. To this day, the only thing in my personal Senate office that has my name on it is the plaque the police gave me when they hired me in law enforcement to become a Senator. It is a plaque on the door to my office with my name and above it is the badge I carried as a law enforcement official.

One thing I knew during my time in law enforcement, the law enforcement officers are never off duty. They are dedicated public servants, trained to uphold the law and keep the peace. To enable law enforcement officers nationwide to be prepared to answer a call to duty no matter where, when, or in what condition they are, I am proud to stand with Senators CAMPBELL, HATCH, and HARRY REID to offer the Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act, S. 253, as it was reported out of the Senate Judiciary Committee, as an amendment to the Protec ting Second Amendment Commercial in Arms Act. People understand our amendment would permit off-duty and retired law enforcement officers to carry a firearm provided they have demonstrated their ability, provided they follow some very strict requirements, and be prepared to assist in dangerous situations.

This passed the Judiciary Committee by a vote of 18 to 1. It had 68 cosponsors, both Republicans and Democrats, and was strongly supported by the Fraternal Order of Police, the National Association of Police Organizations, the Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association, the International Brotherhood of Police Officers, and the Law Enforcement Alliance of America.

I worked with LT Steve Young on this. It was one of the things he and I talked about before he died. He was dedicated to it. He knew the importance of having law enforcement officers across the nation armed and prepared, whenever and wherever a risk to our public safety arose. The current national president, MAJ Chuck Canterbury, worked with me and others to make this legislation law.

We appreciate community policing and the outstanding work of so many law enforcement officers who have helped us. But during the last few years, the downward trend in violent crime ended and violent crime rates have turned upward.

We also know that more than 740,000 sworn law enforcement officers are currently serving in the United States. Since the first recorded police death in 1792, there have been more than 17,000 law enforcement officers killed in the line of duty—17,000. In the last decade, over 1,700 officers died in the line of duty—170 every year.

I think of a very sad funeral I went to in Vermont last summer. The trooper’s family was left behind—young children, his widow. Roughly 5 percent of officers who die are killed when taking law enforcement action in an off-duty capacity, and more than 62,000 law enforcement officers are assaulted annually.

Convicted criminals often have long and exacting memories. I still have people come up to me and tell me they remember that I put them in prison.

This happens to a lot of law enforcement officials. That law enforcement officer, the one who arrested the person who went to prison, is a target in uniform and out, active, retired, off-duty or on-duty.

So what we tried to do by bringing together Republicans and Democrats, Liberals, moderates, conservatives, is to put together an amendment designed to establish national measures of uniformity and consistency to permit trained and certified—and I underline that certified—on- and off-duty law enforcement officers to carry concealed firearms in situations so they may respond to crimes immediately across State and other jurisdictional lines as well as to protect themselves and their families from vindictive criminals.

Mr. President, I thank my friend from Idaho for yielding time. I think this is an important matter. I yield the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, may I ask how much time our side has remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eleven minutes, Senator KENNEDY has 18 minutes 59 seconds.

Mr. CRAIG. Does the Senator from Massachusetts wish to speak at this time?

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the Senator. I saw the Senator from Alabama. I had planned to be here as well, but I would be glad to follow the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the Senator for that consideration. If he doesn’t mind, I would defer our allocation of 10 minutes of time to the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I thank Senator CRAIG and Senator Kennedy for the opportunity to speak. I am pleased to hear the ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator LEAHY, speak in favor of this amendment. It does indeed have 67 cosponsors. It is designed to allow qualified law enforcement officers to carry a concealed weapon while they are off duty.

Back at my home in Alabama, when I drive into the neighborhood, I know that a police officer lives at the corner. When I enter this neighborhood and somebody needed help, he would respond. I also hope when he is traveling around off duty that he would be allowed to carry his weapon. We pay him to do it when he is on active duty. We pay him to carry that weapon and to be ready to respond.

Qualified law enforcement officers are the only ones who can carry a firearm. They are defined as an employee of a government agency who is authorized by law to enforce criminal law, to supervise the prevention, detection, and investigation or prosecution of, or the incarceration of any person for any violation of law. They have statutory powers. The officer must be authorized to carry a firearm and meet the standards established by the agency which requires the employee to regularly qualify in the use of a firearm. A qualified law officer is defined as an individual who has retired in good standing. A qualified retired law enforcement officer is one who has retired in good standing from service in a government agency for an aggregate of 5 years or more. The officer must have fit the above definition while active, must have forfeitable rights under a retirement plan during the most recent 12-month period, and have met at his or her own expense the State standard for training and qualification to carry a firearm. Both active and retired law officers will be required to carry photographic identification by the agency for which they were or are employed as a law officer before they can qualify under this effort.

Why do police officers need it? First of all, they are often at risk themselves.

People forget that there is a war on crime and that many of the criminals are seriously dangerous individuals who hold grudges against those who have arrested them. As a former prosecutor for well over 15 years, I have many close friends who are police officers and prosecutors. I know everyone has in the back of their minds the possibility that some dangerous criminal they apprehended, arrested, or prosecuted could utilize force against them.

This, first and foremost, provides the officers with a sense of comfort and personal security. But more than that, it is a free, available asset to America to protect citizens.

We have terrorists out there. If we had a terrorist attack in a shopping mall, or on the streets, or in some building, I think we’d be being prepared to defend a Boston citizen from a mugging or assault or a terrorist attack; or coming to Washington, DC; they could end up in jail. They have some of the toughest laws in the country, maybe even tough than Boston. They could end up in jail for doing nothing but being prepared to defend people in this community who may be under attack.

But I think this makes good sense. I think it makes good sense for Federal legal action because you can’t do piecemeal. Every community has a different rule and a different law. Under the interstate commerce clause, I think we have a constitutional right and power to pass this legislation.

The question is: Is it good policy? Is it something we should do? I think it is good policy, especially in light of all the proliferating rules around this country, all the requirements in every country, every city regulation in Philadelphia where they sue gun dealers—the mayor sues gun dealers, and they get the attorney general in these States to gang up on them and sue them. They are doing business, manufacturing a firearm consistent with what the Federal and State laws are in America. But because somebody used it illegally, they want to sue them and put them out of business because they do not like guns. They are not able to do it completely; they are not able to pass legislation in their States or in the Federal Government to deal with this problem. So they want to use the power of Federal law to do it.

That is why I support the underlying bill. I think it is good public policy because all it does is make clear what existing law is, has been, and should continue to be—that a manufacturer of a legal firearm must manufacture according to the laws and the distributors of that product who distribute it according to the complex laws all over this country should not be responsible if there is an intervening criminal act by a person who gets his hand on that weapon.

What are lawsuits for? Lawsuits historically have been when something fails to perform—if a weapon blows up, knocks out your eye, shoots off at an angle and hits something it is not supposed to, you should be able to sue the manufacturer. But if the gun is legal, if it is prepared according to the law and sold, and if some criminal gets it and hurts someone, who should the manufacturer be responsible for that? It goes against all of our understanding of what appropriate rule of liability in America is.

We are losing those distinctions. We want to pass the law. We have Members who, because they cannot win a political vote, want to have some lawsuits—some favorable jurisdiction, whether it is in Philadelphia, or Boston, and they find a judge who is hostile to gun ownership end up getting the case. They say there are only 30 lawsuits of this kind, but if you keep filing these lawsuits, pretty soon you may find 12 people who agree with you, or a judge who agrees with you. The next thing you know, you have a big verdict.

The question is: Is it justified? Should a company have to defend itself from this kind of a political attack? If they are irresponsible, yes. If they violated the laws, yes. They should be sued. If the gun is defective, yes. They should be sued.

But again, I think there is no more strongly felt issue among law enforcement officers in America than their willingness to carry a gun and the risk they undertake in doing it because they may even forget they are crossing the State line into another city and end up being prosecuted for being prepared to defend the citizens of that community. They do not like that. It is troubling to them. Many talk to me about it personally.

I am glad we have overwhelming support in this body to pass this amendment. I thank the Senator from Idaho for it, I support it and I believe we will pass it.

I yield the floor and the remainder of the time.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 18 minutes 50 seconds.

Mr. KENNEDY. I ask the Chair to notify me when 15 minutes are up. I hope to talk about what is said in the Senate more about States rights and the importance of local communities making local judgments; they are in touch with the local people; they know best what is in the interests of the protection of a local community; or that a State knows more than a Federal Government about how to protect its citizens.

Those arguments are out the window with the proposed amendment to the underlying legislation. The amendment would give active-duty and retired police officers the right to carry any firearm on duty or off duty, notwithstanding any State or local gun safety laws, even if the officers’ own department rules prohibit the carrying of such concealed firearms.

I know this is hoping too much, that our friends on the other side of the aisle will restrain themselves from making the argument that we heard in the Senate from the other side, pointing over here that the Federal Government always knows best.

There is a lot of knowledge at the local and State level. Let’s respect that. That is the whole point of this amendment. This amendment is overriding gun safety laws that are decided by the people in local communities, overriding State laws, overriding them. It is blank no matter what the State has said. We are talking about concealable weapons that will be able to be carried by police officers or retired officers, as well.

It is opposed by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, the Police Executive Research Forum, and the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

Let me explain why. This amendment is a serious step in the wrong direction. It will undermine the safety of our communities and the safety of police officers by broadly overriding the State and local gun safety laws. It will also nullify the ability of police departments to enforce rules and policies on when and how their own officers can carry firearms. Because of the substantial danger the amendment poses to police officers and communities, it is vigorously opposed by the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

There is no precedent for what the supporters of this amendment intend to accomplish. Congress has never passed a law giving current and former State and local employees the right to carry weapons in violation of controlling State and local laws. Congress has never passed a law interfering with the ability of State and local police chiefs to regulate the carrying of firearms. Do we understand what this does? Congress has never passed a law interfering with the ability of the States or local police chiefs to regulate their own police officers carrying firearms. This amendment does. This overrides it.

Today, each State has the authority to decide what kind of concealed-carry law, if any, best fits the needs of the community. Each State makes its own judgment about what private citizens should be allowed to carry concealed weapons or whether on-duty or off-duty or retired police officers should be included or exempted in any prohibition. There is no evidence that States believe local governments have failed to consider the interests and needs of law enforcement officers. No case has been made.

Consider, for example, the New Jersey law. In 1995, retired police chief John Deventer was shot and killed outside his home while trying to stop a robbery. This incident prompted New Jersey to enact a law allowing retired officers to carry handguns under a number of different conditions. In drafting this law, the New Jersey Legislature made a deliberate effort to balance the safety of police officers with the safety of the public at large by including a number of important safeguards that are not contained in this amendment.

For example, New Jersey law is limited to handguns. This amendment is not. As long as the police officer is qualified to carry one type of gun, he can carry any type of gun, any type of concealable weapon. New Jersey law is limited to handguns. This amendment is not. New Jersey law has a maximum age of 70. This amendment does not.

Under New Jersey law, retired police officers must file renewal applications yearly. There is no application process here. Under New Jersey, retirees must list all their guns. No such record is required under this amendment. New Jersey gives police departments discretion to deny permits to retirees. No such discretion is provided under this amendment.

By enacting this amendment, Congress will be gutting all of the safeguards contained in the New Jersey statute as well as the judgment of other States that have considered this issue.

The sponsors of this amendment have presented no evidence that States and local governments are unable or unwilling to decide these important issues for themselves. They have offered no explanation why Congress is better suited than States, cities, and towns to decide how best to protect police officers, schoolchildren, churchgoers, and other members of their communities.

Congress should bolster, not undermine, the efforts of States and local communities to protect their citizens from gun violence. In many States, cities, and towns, special places—churches, schools, bars, government offices, hospitals—are singled out as deserving special protection from the threat of gun violence.

Michigan is a State that prohibits concealed firearms in schools, sports arenas, bars, churches, and hospitals. Georgia law allows active and retired police officers to carry firearms in publicly owned buildings but not in churches, sports arenas, or places where alcohol is sold. Kentucky prohibits carrying concealed weapons in bars and schools. South Carolina prohibits concealed firearms in churches and hospitals.

This amendment will override most such safe harbor laws at the State level. It will override laws that categorically prohibit guns in churches and other places of worship. It will override laws that permit private entities to post signs prohibiting concealed firearms on their property will remain in force. In most States, churches are not currently required to post signs in order to have a gun-free zone.

This amendment will also override laws that prohibit concealed weapons in places where alcohol is served. This amendment will override State laws and local laws that prohibit carrying concealed weapons in places where alcohol is served.

Surely it is responsible for a State to prohibit people from bringing guns into bars, while off duty, to overcome danger that results when liquor and firearms are together. It is no wonder that in the House of Representatives, Chairman Sensenbrenner has described this legislation as an affront to State sovereignty.

At this Amendment overrides all gun safety laws without exception. In the 1990s, Boston, New York, and other cities made great strides in fighting against crime precisely because they were able to pass laws that address the factors that led to violence, including the prevalence of firearms in inner cities. As Congressman Henry Hyde has said, the best decisions on fighting crime are made at the local level.

We saw extraordinary progress in my own State of Massachusetts. We went for 18 months without a homicide. We have strict gun laws in Massachusetts. We have very strict gun laws in the city of Boston. This legislation will override local progress was made just because of the laws, but it was a combination of a variety of different events a few years ago. Tragically, we have seen an increase in homicide with the deterioration of the economy in the recent months and years.

By overriding all local gun safety laws, this amendment will undermine the ability of cities to fight crime. It will indiscriminately abrogate safe harbor laws in Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Columbus, Chicago, Kansas City, and many other towns.

Congress has no business overriding the judgment of States and local governments in deciding where concealed weapons are prohibited. Some sponsors have argued this amendment is needed because of the complex patchwork of Federal, State, and local concealed-carry laws which prevents officers from protecting themselves and their families from vindictive criminals. They have distributed lists of officers or prison guards who were killed while off duty or in retirement. The stories of these slain men and women are tragic, and their killers deserve to be severely punished. But many of the stories involved officers who were killed outside their home State. They do not demonstrate a need for a Federal override of State and local gun safety laws.

To the contrary, as New Jersey’s response to the tragic shooting of Chief Deventer shows, States and local governments are best equipped to implement policies, regulations, and laws that protect the safety of their own law enforcement officers, and also protect the public at large.

This Amendment will override most such laws in the 107th Congress. I introduced an amendment in committee providing an off-duty or retired officer could carry a concealed firearm only if he had been authorized to carry that firearm by the agency he works for, or if he had been authorized at the time of his retirement. That amendment was rejected by an evenly divided vote, 9 to 9. Thus, the legislation now before us will give off-duty and retired officers carte blanche to carry concealed shotguns, sniper rifles, or other weapons their own police departments have not authorized them to carry. Its failure to limit this privilege to authorized police weapons—or even to handguns, as New Jersey law provides—undermines the safety of American communities.

Serious safety problems are also raised by the amendment’s override of gun-safety laws for retired officers, a category that is defined to include anyone who served in a law enforcement capacity for 15 years “in the aggregate” before retiring or resigning and taking a different job. There is no requirement that a retiree demonstrate a special need for a firearm. While the amendment provides that an officer must have technically left law enforcement “in good standing,” it is well known that sub-par government employees are routinely released from their positions without a formal finding of guilt. The amendment does not draw a distinction between officers who served ably and those who did not. Officers who retire in “good standing” while under investigation for domestic violence, racial profiling, excessive force, or substance abuse could still qualify as a law enforcement officer and who qualifies as a law enforcement official and who carries a photo ID will be authorized to carry a firearm that they wish to carry concealed. In other words, once an officer qualified to carry a service weapon, he will have the right under this amendment to carry any gun, on duty or off duty—even if doing so violates his own police department’s rules.

Thus, if Congress enacts this legislation, state officers and chiefs will be stripped of their authority to tell their own officers, for example, that they cannot bring guns into bars while off duty; that they cannot carry their service weapons on vacation; or that they cannot carry a firearm on the job.

As the International Association of Chiefs of Police stated in a letter to the Judiciary Committee, “under the provisions of [this legislation], police chiefs would lose the authority to regulate what type of firearms the officers employ can carry even while they are on duty.”

As a result, the legislation would effectively eliminate the ability of a police department to establish rules restricting the ability of officers to carry only department-authorized firearms while on duty. The prospect of officers carrying unauthorized firearms while on duty is very troubling to the IACP for several reasons.

First, an unauthorized weapon is unlikely to meet departmental standards. This in turn means that the officer will not have received approved departmental training in its use, and will not have qualified with the weapon under departmental regulations. Carrying an unauthorized weapon thus presents a risk of injury to the officer, fellow officers, and citizens, for the weapon itself may be unsafe or otherwise unsuitable for police use, and the officer may not be sufficiently proficient with its use to avoid adverse consequences.

In addition to the risk of injury involved, the carrying of unauthorized weapons is a major source of police civil liability in the U.S. today. An officer who fires an unauthorized weapon is at risk of civil liability for the officer and for the department, even though the shooting may have been otherwise legally justified. A number of civil-suit plaintiffs have contended that the mere fact that the weapon that caused the plaintiff’s injury was unauthorized is, in itself, sufficient legal grounds for a finding of liability.

For these and other reasons, the IACP concluded that this amendment “has the potential to significantly and negatively impact the safety of our communities and our officers.”

Law enforcement executives face extremely difficult challenges today. As crime rates have started to rise again and new concerns about domestic security have emerged, police chiefs are forced to do more with less. The weak economy has forced cities and states to cut back on funding for law enforcement. The administration has tried its best to eliminate federal funding for such critical programs as the COPS Universal-Hiring Program, the Byrne Grant program, and the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant program.

The last thing Congress should do now is enact legislation that expands the civil liability of police departments and nullifies the ability of police chiefs to regulate their own officers’ use of firearms and to maintain discipline. By denying police chiefs the right to run their own departments, the amendment would deal a severe blow to common sense and public safety.

Each State and local government should be allowed to make its own judgment as to whether citizens and out-of-State visitors may carry concealed weapons, and whether active or retired law enforcement officers should be included in or exempted from any prohibition.

This amendment will unnecessarily damage the efforts of States and local governments to protect their citizens from gun violence. It will also expose States and local governments to unnecessary liability and nullify the ability of police chiefs to maintain discipline and control within their own departments.

The Nation will be better served if the Senate puts this misguided legislation aside and turns its attention to measures we know will reduce crime and enhance the safety of police officers and all Americans.

Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A minute and a half.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the bottom line on this—we are going to have a chance to vote on this next Tuesday—is this an action by Congress to override State-considered legislation and local legislation on how to protect their local communities. Some States have made the judgment that they do not believe they ought to permit concealed weapons in bars and other places such as churches and other places such as schools, because they do not want to have the proliferation of guns in schools, they do not want to have the proliferation of guns in bars, they do not believe concealed weapons ought to be in churches. The States and local communities have made that judgment in order to protect their local communities. But somehow we are deciding here in the Senate, on the basis of about an hour and 20 minutes of debate on this amendment, to override the common good sense of States and local governments and say: We know best. If you are a police officer or a retired officer, you can carry that concealed weapon, even though you are not trained to be able to use it or authorized to use it, into the bars, schools, and churches of this country. That makes no sense and it is a contradiction of what the States and local communities do.

How much further do we have to go to overcome the National Rifle Association?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.
Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I understand I have 1 minute.

The legislation exempts qualified active and retired law enforcement officers from State and local prohibitions on the carrying of concealed firearms. What this means is that active and retired police officers will be able to carry their firearms virtually anywhere in the U.S. without having to worry about violating any local or State gun laws.

The bill is noncontroversial and enjoys widespread bipartisan support in both the Senate and the House of Representatives. The Senate bill, S. 253, passed the Judiciary Committee in March 2003 on an 18 to 1 vote. The bill has 67 co-sponsors, including Majority Leader BILL FRIST, Minority Leader TOM DASCHLE, and every other member of the Senate leadership from both sides of the aisle. Senator BEN NIGHTHORSE CAMPBELL, a former law enforcement officer serving as the amendment's manager, along with Judiciary Committee Chairman ORIN G. HATCH, Ranking Member PATRICK J. LEAHY, and Minority Whip HARRY REID.

The House bill, H.R. 218, has 266 co-sponsors. In addition to a House majority, the bill has a majority of both the full Judiciary Committee and the subcommittee of jurisdiction. In 1999, the House passed a nearly identical measure as an amendment to another bill by an overwhelming 372 to 53 majority.

This isn't a "firearms issue"—it is an officer safety issue. And, on 11 September 2001, it became a critical public safety and homeland security issue.

Law enforcement officers need this bill—it is the number one issue among rank-and-file officers today. Policy officers are frequently finding that they, and their families, are the targets of vindictive criminals. A police officer may not remember all the faces of all the criminals he or she has put behind bars, but every one of those criminals will. This legislation gives all police officers the means to legally protect themselves and their loved ones—even if off-duty or retired.

Public safety and homeland security would benefit immensely from this bill becoming law. Law enforcement officers are a dedicated and trained body of men and women sworn to uphold the law and keep the peace. Unlike other professions, the officer is rarely "off-duty." When there is a threat to the peace or public safety, the police officer is sworn to answer the call of duty. Officers who are traveling from one jurisdiction to another do not leave their instincts or training behind, but without their weapon, that knowledge and training is rendered virtually useless. These bills will provide the means for law enforcement officers to enforce the law and keep the peace—enabling them to put to use that training and answer the need as the need arises. Without a weapon, the law enforcement officer is like a rescue diver without diving gear; all the right training and talent to lend to an emergency situation, but without the equipment needed to make that training of any use. Given the ongoing threat of terrorist activity against U.S. citizens, it just makes sense to give our first line of defense the tools they need in a first line of defense. Perhaps the strongest endorsement we can make is that thousands of violent criminals and terrorists will hate to see it pass.

This is not a States' rights issue and the bill is limited to ensure that it conforms to the U.S. Constitution and the precepts of Federalism. Congress has the authority, under the "full faith and credit" clause of the Constitution, to extend full faith and credit to qualified active and retired law enforcement officers who have met the criteria to carry firearms set by one State, and make those credentials applicable and recognized in all States and territories in these United States. States and localities should not be able to trump the officers and set their own requirements for their officers in training and qualifying in the use of these weapons. This legislation maintains the States' power to set these requirements and determine whether the active or retired officer is qualified in the use of the firearm, and would allow only this narrow universe of persons to carry their firearms when traveling outside their jurisdiction. We believe this is similar to the States' issuance of drivers' licenses—this is a State issue, albeit a slightly from State to State, but all States recognize that the drivers have been certified to operate a motor vehicle on public roadways.

All 50 States require their officers to receive many hours—the average is 48—of firearms training before they leave the academy. Before receiving their appointment, law enforcement officers must meet certain score requirements in order to qualify with their weapons, generally 70 percent. No officer with a score below the 70th percentile is considered qualified with his weapon.

Most States require their officers to requalify with their weapons on a regular basis. Individual agencies may require their officers to qualify more frequently, but they must meet the State's minimum, which ranges from annually to every 5 years.

How Does One Qualify? In order to carry under this legislation, a retired law enforcement officer would have to qualify with his firearm at his own expense every 12 months and meet the qualifications as an active duty officer in his State of residence. For example, a New Jersey police officer that retires to North Carolina must qualify annually at his own expense and meet the same standards that an active duty officer in North Carolina must meet.

Many Federal law enforcement officers currently have the authority to carry their firearms. Training and qualification for Federal law enforcement officers is not so dissimilar to that of State and local law enforcement officers. There have been no issues of concern with Federal officers carrying in all jurisdiction, why would there be for State and local law enforcement officers?

There is Congressional precedent on this issue. Congress has previously acted to force States to recognize permits to carry issued by other States on the basis of employment in other instances. In June 1993, the Senate and House approved an anti-terrorist gun law, PL 103–55, mandating reciprocity for weapons licenses issued to armored car company crew members among States. Congress amended the act in 1998, PL 105–78, providing that the licenses must be renewed every 2 years. This precedent allows armored car guards—who do not have nearly the same level of training and qualifications as law enforcement officers—to receive a license to carry a firearm in one State and forces other States to recognize its validity.

Airline pilots can obtain the authority law enforcement officers are seeking. In addition to airline crewmembers, Congress passed a law exempts airline pilots who participate in the "Federal flight deck officer" from Federal and State law with respect to the carrying of concealed firearms. Note this authority is not limited just to the cockpit—but also while the pilots are on the ground and off-duty.

Congress has the authority to preempt State and local prohibitions on the carrying of concealed firearms, and has in the past granted a certain class of persons—based on the nature of their employment and their value in an emergency situation—the authority to carry firearms in all jurisdictions. To do the same for law enforcement just makes good sense.

On the last weekend in June, FOP members from Maryland Lodge No. 70 were packing up their campsite following a 3-day camping trip with their families in Harpers Ferry. On Sunday afternoon, after many of the officers and their families had left, a gunman opened fire on another camper, wounding him in the lower leg. Detective Timothy Utzig and Officer Andrew Albach reacted quickly, instructing their families to leave the scene, while they retrieved their firearms and confronted the man. The gunman, yelling incoherently, eventually obeyed the officers’ orders to lie down on the ground. After searching him, they discovered that the man had several more live rounds for his shotgun in his possession. Detective Utzig and Officer Albach held the man until West Virginia authorities could arrive. It was discovered later the gunman had an extensive criminal history—including a murder conviction.

Sergeant Sam Harmon of the Jefferson County Sheriff's Department said, "There's no telling how many lives they saved Sunday afternoon. These guys are our heroes for life.”

They were certainly heroes, but they were also in violation of West Virginia
State law because they possessed firearms. These brave officers—who stopped a gunman’s rampage on their day off, outside of their own jurisdiction—were not charged, but their action placed themselves in legal jeopardy, physically. Had they complied with State law that they or their families could have been victims. This is just one example of how public safety could be served if this bill were made law.

In July 1995, recently Retired Police Chief John Diventer of the Hanover, NJ, Police Department was with his family, when he observed several robbers attack two elderly women and steal their purses. He attempted to intervene, and was shot and killed. At the time of the chief’s murder, retired police officers were not authorized to carry firearms in New Jersey. This incident prompted a change in New Jersey law, which now permits retired officers to carry concealed firearms.

In 2000, off-duty Las Vegas Police Officer Dennis Devitte, a 20-year veteran was relaxing at a local sports bar when the establishment was attacked by three gunmen. He opened fire on the crowd, hitting a man in a wheelchair. Officer Devitte did not hesitate—he pulled his tiny .25-caliber gun and, knowing he would have to get very close to make sure he hit his target, charged a man firing a .40-caliber semiautomatic. Officer Devitte got within one foot of the man, fired and killed the gunman—but not before he was shot eight times. The remaining two gunmen fled. All six civilians wounded in the attack were recovering. One witness described Officer Devitte’s action as “the most courageous thing I’ve ever seen.” Officer Devitte lost six units of blood, his gun hand was badly damaged and his knee had to be entirely reconstructed with bones taken from a cadaver. And yet, he was back on the job 6 months later. For his incredibly heroic actions, Officer Devitte was selected as the “Police Officer of the Year” by the International Association of Chiefs of Police, IACP, and Parade magazine.

On the 4th of July, 1999, off-duty Police Officer Alfredo Rodriguez of the Nassau County, NY Police Department was driving to Norwich, CT with his wife and four children when he observed a Norwich Police Officer attempt to arrest a highly intoxicated man running in and out of traffic. A second man attacked the Norwich officer from behind and shot and killed him.

The bill was reintroduced in 1999 by Senators Campbell, Hatch and Leahy to offer the Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act amendment. The purpose of the amendment is simple: build upon and expand the right of retired and retired law enforcement officers from State and local laws that prohibit carrying concealed firearms, as long as the officers were bearing legal ID issued from their employing agency.

The Fraternal Order of Police, representing more than 1,000 Nevada law enforcement officers and more than 300,000 members nationwide, supports this amendment.

They support this bill because it would improve public safety. It would allow law enforcement officers to protect the public, as well as themselves.

This amendment mirrors a bill sponsored by more than two-thirds of America’s Senators.

Again, our overwhelming support underscores the fact that this measure will protect our communities, as well as the brave police officers who serve us so well.

As I learned many years ago when I was on the Capitol police force, law enforcement officers are never truly “off-duty.” They are dedicated public servants trained to uphold the law and keep the peace.

When there is a threat to the peace or to our public safety, law enforcement officers are sworn to answer that call—and answer it they do, whether they are on duty or not.

Law enforcement officers are always protecting the innocent just as they are always under threat from the guilty.

Although a police officer might not remember the name and face of every criminal he or she has put behind bars, criminals have long memories. A law enforcement officer is a target whether in or out of uniform, whether active or retired, and whether on duty or off.

In fact, roughly 5 percent of officers who are killed in action are actually “off-duty” at the time of their death.

This amendment is designed to protect officers and their families from vindictive criminals, and to allow thousands of equipped, trained and certified law enforcement officers to carry concealed firearms that will help them protect innocent citizens.

I urge all my colleagues to support this measure, which will make our communities safer and protect our brave police officers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

AMENDMENT NO. 2619

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I understand we have a half an hour; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield myself 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator wish to send the amendment to the desk?

Mr. KENNEDY. I believe the amendment is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. KEN- NEY] proposes an amendment numbered 2619.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows: (Purpose: To expand the definition of armor piercing ammunition and to require that the Attorney General promulgate standards for the testing of projectiles against body armor)

On page 11, after line 19, add the following:

SEC. 5. ARMOR PIERCING AMMUNITION.

(a) Expansion of Definition of Armor Piercing Ammunition.—Section 921(a)(17)(B) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in clause (i), by striking “or” at the end;

(2) in clause (ii), by striking the period at the end and inserting a semicolon and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(ii) any projectile for a centerfire rifle, designed or marketed as having armor piercing capability, that the Attorney General determines, pursuant to section 926(d), to be capable of penetrating body armor; or

(4) in clause (iii), by striking “or” at the end and inserting a semicolon and

(5) by adding at the end the following:

“(ii) any projectile that may be used in a handgun and that the Attorney General determines, pursuant to section 926(d), to be capable of penetrating body armor; or

(6) any projectile for a centerfire rifle, designed or marketed as having armor piercing capability, that the Attorney General determines, pursuant to section 926(d), to be capable of penetrating body armor; or

(b) Determination of the Capability of Projectiles to Penetrate Body Armor.—Section 921 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding after the following:

“(d)(1) Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this subsection, the Attorney General shall promulgate standards for the uniform testing of projectiles against Body Armor Exemplar.

“(2) The standards promulgated pursuant to paragraph (1) shall take into account, among other factors, the performance that projectiles are designed to have in performance that are related to the length of the barrel of the handgun or centerfire rifle from which the projectile is fired and the amount and kind of powder used to propel the projectile.

“(3) As used in paragraph (1), the term ‘Body Armor Exemplar’ means body armor that the Attorney General determines meets minimum standards for the protection of law enforcement officers.”.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I mentioned that there had been a homicide in Massachusetts, in November of last year, in a very, very violent manner. It was juvenile homicide. I ask that the Record be so corrected.

As we all know too well, the debate about gun violence has often been aggressive and polarizing with anti-gun violence advocates on one side of the debate, pro-gun advocates on the other.

I am sure that the Record be so corrected.

no Federal requirement that dealers retain sales records.

In 1999, investigators for the General Accounting Office went undercover to assess the availability of .50 caliber armor-piercing ammunition. Purchasing snipers bullets, they found, is only slightly more difficult than buying a lottery ticket or a gallon of milk. Dealers in Delaware, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia informed the investigators that the purchase of these kinds of ammunition is subject to no Federal, State, or local restrictions. Dealers in Alaska, Nebraska, and Oregon who advertised over the Internet told an undercover agent that he could buy the ammunition in a matter of minutes, even after he said he wanted the bullets shipped to Washington, DC, and needed them to pierce an armored limousine or theoretically take down a helicopter. Talk about homeland security.

In a single year, over 100,000 rounds of military surplus armor-piercing ammunition were sold to civilians in the United States. In addition, the gun manufacturer, Smith & Wesson, recently introduced a powerful new revolver, the .500 magnum, 4½ pounds, 15 inches long, that clearly has the capability of piercing body armor using ammunition allowed under the current law.

The publication, Gun Week, reviewed the new weapon with enthusiasm: “Behold the magic, feel the power,” it wrote.

Many of our leaders will buy the Smith & Wesson revolver for the same reason that Edmund Hillary climbed Mt. Everest: Because it is there.

Current Federal law bans certain armor-piercing ammunition for handguns. It establishes a content-based standard. It covers ammunition that is, first of all, constructed from tungsten alloys, steel, iron, brass, bronze, beryllium, copper, or depleted uranium, or, secondly, larger than .22 caliber with a jacket that weighs no more than 25 percent of the total weight of the bullet.

However, there are no restrictions on ammunition that may be manufactured from other materials but can still penetrate body armor. Even more important, there are no restrictions on armor-piercing ammunition used in rifles and assault weapons. Armor-piercing ammunition has no purpose other than penetrating bulletproof vests. It is not for hunting or self-defense. Such armor-piercing ammunition has no place in our society—none.

Armor-piercing bullets that sidestep the Federal ban, such as that advertised on Hi-Vel’s Web site, put the lives of American soldiers and those who defend American citizens in jeopardy every single day. We know the terrorists are now exploiting the weaknesses and loopholes in our gun laws. The terrorists training manual circulated by American soldiers in Afghanistan in 2001 advised Al-Qaida operatives to buy assault weapons in the United States and use them against us.

Terrorists are bent on exploiting weaknesses in our gun laws. Just think of what a terrorist could do with a sniper rifle and only a moderate supply of armor-piercing ammunition. My amendment amends the Federal ban on armor-piercing ammunition to include a performance standard and extends the ban on centerfire rifles, which include the sniper rifles and assault weapons responsible for the deaths of 17 police officers whose body armor was penetrated by this ammunition.

My amendment will not apply to ammunition that is now routinely used in hunting rifles or other centerfire rifles. To the contrary, it only covers ammunition that is designed or marketed as having armor-piercing capability. That is—it designed or marketed as having armor-piercing capability, such as armor-piercing ammunition that is now advertised on the Hi-Vel Web site, are some that a manufacturer or marketer to be armor piercing have no place in our society. Ducks, deer, and other wildlife do not wear body armor. Police officers do. We should not let another day pass without plugging the loopholes in Federal law that bans cop-killer bullets.

This is an issue on which mainstream gun owners and gun safety advocates can agree. I urge my colleagues to vote in support of this amendment.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). Who yields time? The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAP. Mr. President, we have heard over the last few minutes what might appear, at first listening, to be alarming facts, figures, and statistics, but we all know that in any good debate the devil is in the details, and in the details of the Kennedy amendment are some hidden secrets that must be brought out so we can understand them.

Let me, first and foremost, read into the RECORD a letter from the president of the Fraternal Order of Police. The senator has printed cop-killer bullets and protecting cops on the beat, those who wear soft body armor. This is what Chuck Canterbury, the national president of the Fraternal Order of Police, says in a letter to me that he has copied to Senator DASCHLE, and to Senator KENNEDY:

I am writing to advise you of the strong opposition to an amendment Senator Kennedy intends to offer later today.

In relation to the underlying amendment, Senator Kennedy will certainly present his amendment as an ‘officer safety issue’—And that is exactly what we have heard over the last good number of minutes.

I do believe we saw that language on the Web site that he quoted—a strategy, a rhetorical expression as it relates to an encouragement to buy a given type of ammunition.

He goes on to say:

The truth of the matter is that only one law enforcement officer in the country was killed by a round fired from a handgun which penetrated his soft-body armor—and in that single instance, it was the body armor that failed to provide the expected ballistic protection, not because the round was ‘armor piercing.’

It is our view that no expansion or revision of the current law is needed to protect law enforcement officers. To put it simply, this is not a genuine officer safety issue. If it were, Senator Kennedy would not be offering his amendment to a bill he strongly opposes and is working to defeat.

It sounds as if not only is the president of the Fraternal Order of Police talking about the facts, he is talking about some reasonable logic.

He goes on to say:

The real officer safety issue is the adoption of——

The amendment we just set aside—the Law Enforcement Officers’ Safety Act.

That amendment deals with carrying a concealed weapon, to which I believe the senator spoke in opposition, which would exempt active and retired law enforcement officers from local prohibitions for the right to carry concealed firearms.

Mr. Canterbury goes on:

The Kennedy amendment was considered and defeated by the Senate Judiciary Committee in March of 2001. I thank you for taking our views on this issue into consideration.

Here is the president of the National Grand Lodge of the Fraternal Order of Police saying that the Kennedy amendment is not what it is. What he is, in fact, saying is that the current armor-piercing, cop-killer bullets, no law in place is the kind of adequate protection they need.

I have made that letter available to all of our colleagues as we debate this issue.

What will the Kennedy amendment do? I think it is important for us to understand in reality the impact of expanding this kind of definition and understanding.

What it does—and I don’t know that the Senator intends this purpose—is that it begins to eliminate ammunition that is used in a legitimate way for hunting. He is right, Bambi doesn’t wear body armor. Bambi doesn’t need to wear body armor. But in the legal sportsmen’s industry and in hunting, here are some very common rifles: 30-30 Winchester, 30-06 Springfield, 308 Winchester, 300 Savage, 7 mm Remington, 270 Winchester, 257 Roberts, 253 Winchester, and 223 Remington, just to name a few. We believe based on our investigation of the language that that this kind of ammunition is eliminated.

What we also know is that there is ammunition out there used with a rifle that can pierce body armor. That is a fact. But the ammunition we are talking about is that traditionally known as the cop-killer bullet that is now outlawed in this country has nothing to do with the rifle. It had everything to do with a pistol, that weapon of choice by criminals in our country, and we know why.

Criminals do not walk down the street with a 30.06 over their shoulder. Somehow there is the visible factor that denies them the use of that rifle. They use handguns. They conceal them. They hide them on their person. They carry them in a package or in a carrying type of valise. They do not carry rifles. Yet the Senator's amendment goes directly at the hunting sports; it goes directly at hunting ammunition. This is why at the appropriate time when we have concluded the debate on the Senator's amendment, I will offer an alternative amendment under the unanimous consent agreement that we think reflects what ought to be done in relation to what the Senator is offering.

Let me also add that the most extensive study on this issue pursuant to a congressional mandate to the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996 was a BATF draft report provided in 1997 to those individuals and organizations that had assisted in a BATF study of the issue of armor-piercing ammunition.

That study mandated, in response to President Clinton's repeated call, for a ban on bullets capable of penetrating soft body armor. Those Presidential statements rightfully concerned many in Congress who were aware that a performance-based ban, and that is what the Senator is offering, would outlaw the majority of rifle ammunition used for hunting and target shooting worldwide. That is just what I have spoken to. If that is the Senator's intent, then I wish we would address that. Clearly that is what we believe one begins to enter into when they deal with a performance-based standard. The 1997 study took an intelligent and honest approach to examining how best to protect the lives of law enforcement officers, recognizing the reality that between 1985 and 1994 no officer in the United States who was wearing a bullet-resistant vest died as a result of any round of ammunition having been fired from a handgun penetrating that officer's armor causing the primary lethal injuries.

The study instead focused on how to improve police training, both in teaching officers how to defeat snatches by criminals and to encourage officers to wear vests routinely. Legislatively, the 1997 study rightly concluded that to prohibit any of those commonly used pistol, rifle, shotgun cartridges because they might defeat a level 1 bullet-resistant vest would create an unreasonable burden on the legitimate consumer of such cartridges.

Combined with the availability of sensible, defensive strategies, the existence of laws restricting the common availability of armor-piercing ammunition was clearly working to protect law enforcement officers, and no attempt to discard the existing laws is my opinion and many others, should be undertaken.

At the same time, because the existing laws are working, no additional legislation is necessary or required, certainly that that deals with performance-based standards, because one goes directly at ammunition used in target practice and in hunting. We do not believe, and I would hope the Senator from Massachusetts would agree, that is what we would intend to do. In conclusion, what I am saying is the current law is adequate. This is not perfecting language. This is language to try to defeat the underlying bill, S. 1805. Obviously, the Senator has spoken openly against that. This is in no way a bill that improves the underlying bill itself and we think very questionably does it improve any existing Federal law. What it begins to do is what the sporting community and the legitimate owners of firearms have always been fearful of, that if the handgun or the rifle could not be controlled, the ammunition would be targeted and certain classes of ammunition would begin to be controlled and outlawed, and that is exactly what Senator KENNEDY is attempting to do with this amendment.

I think it is obvious by my statement I will strongly oppose this, but I will offer—or I should say the majority leader will offer—an amendment finalizing the debate on Senator KENNEDY's amendment that we think if there is fairness to fine-tune the existing law, then we will offer that fine-tuning to make it extremely punitive for anyone who might use armor-piercing bullets that would strike a law enforcement officer in our country, or anyone else for that matter, that would result in injury or death.

I retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just under 18 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield myself 7 minutes.

Mr. President, I read through the copy of the Fraternal Order of Police. As the Senator pointed out, the truth of the matter is only one law enforcement officer has been killed by a round fired from a handgun. We are not talking about ammunition in a handgun. We are talking about assault weapons and rifles, and I am talking about the FBI. Let's look at what the FBI says.

From 1992 to 2002, 20 law enforcement officers have been killed. Seventeen out of the 20 were killed with a rifle. That is what this amendment is about.

The Senator referred to the earlier bill we had on the law. I am the author of that. It took 5 years to get that passed. Five years it was opposed by the NRA. I do not doubt it probably is going to take 5 years to do something about armor-piercing bullets that can shoot through body armor, through a limousine, or bring down a helicopter. That is what we are talking about, 17 of the fatal shootings.

I ask unanimous consent that tables 10 and 36 of a document entitled "Law Enforcement Officers Feloniously Killed by Firearms" be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. KENNEDY. Seventeen of the fatal shootings were done by .223, 762, or 30.30 caliber rifles. Armor-piercing ammunition for these caliber rifles is widely advertised and available, and there are no restrictions at all on the deadly ammunition.

My amendment will not apply to the ammunition routinely used in the hunting rifles or other centerfire rifles. To the contrary, it covers only the ammunition that is designed to market bullets having armor-piercing capability. That ammunition is not satisfactory to the Senator from Idaho, work with me over the weekend to get the right language that stops this, and he and I will offer a unanimous consent to be able to vote on that on the Senate floor. The Senator knows what we are driving at, the kind of armor-piercing bullets that can penetrate the vests our law enforcement officers are going to wear.

I know the Fraternal Order feels we are trying to slow this bill down. With all respect to them, I have been the author of the armor-piercing bullets for 20 years. I have put it on this. I will put it on something else. They will support us. The Senator from Idaho will support us. I put it on the next bill that comes down here. They know that is not the issue.

As I have pointed out, we are talking about the kind that is being advertised on the Web site. Here it is for everyone to see. Although the Senator knows what we are talking about, with a signed statement that he was over 21 minutes. The whole section III of it is only 2 1⁄2 pages. I ask unanimous consent that it is put in the RECORD.

The general question is there for permitting that? What possible justification there is for permitting that? There is no restrictions on the Senate floor. The Senator knows what we are doing, what we are driving at, the kind of armor-piercing bullets that can penetrate the vests our law enforcement officers are going to wear.

I have not heard a good answer for it. The Senator has not given an answer for it. As I have pointed out, we are talking about the lives of the police officers who are going to be able to vote on that on the Senate floor. The Senator knows what we are talking about, with a signed statement that he was over 21.

One of the dealers of the armor-piercing bullets that advertisement on the Web site. Here it is for everyone to see. Although the Senator knows what we are talking about, with a signed statement that he was over 21 minutes. The whole section III of it is only 2 1⁄2 pages. I ask unanimous consent that it is put in the RECORD.

The GAO investigators taped the conversations in which they purported to be a customer interested in buying ammunition for shipment to Washington, D.C. or Virginia and asked whether the dealer could secure the purchase of a specialized ammunition from any of the three dealers within a matter of minutes.

The dealers in Nebraska and Oregon stated that they could make the transaction when the agent faxed a copy of his driver’s license with a signed statement that he was over 21 and was violating no federal, state, or local restrictions on the purchase. Although the agent said he was from Virginia, which bans armor piercing incendiary ammunition would go through six inches of ballistic glass. The dealer discussed whether ordinary “sniper style” armor-piercing incendiary ammunition would penetrate miniature plates of metal where they weld over the bullet holes. It makes the guy, the next guy, feel more comfortable when he’s in there. Agent: I’m very much interested in making sure that these rounds can go through like, the bullet-proof glass. Do you think they’ll go through bullet-proof glass?

Agent: Well, in the old days, in the old audible, they used 700 grains, 720 or something. But nowadays they use 660, so they’re going a little more velocity out of it. And, I just can’t see glass standing up to that.

Agent: How about an armored limousine? Dealer: Yeah, you’re using it to test it? Agent: Well, I . . . Dealer: Because we have some people who are testing armored cars. Like 30-06 AP.

Agent: Well, I . . . these would be a lot . . . theoretically the .05 cal should be a lot stronger than a 30-06. Dealer: Right, right.

Agent: AP. Dealer: Right . . . So it should go through. Dealer: Well, yeah, I guess you say testing against armored limousines . . . Yeah, I’ll be testing against armored limousines. But, but it’s gonna work.

Agent: Good. You know, I’m very happy to see that we’ll be able to do business here, because, I’m a little bit concerned, because here on the East Coast when you go to buy ammunition—those special-duty .50 cal—they ask a lot of questions.

Dealer: Oh, . . . I don’t like people asking me questions why I want this ammunition. Dealer: Well, see, they use them out here for hunting.

Agent: Um huh. Well, you could say I’m going to be using this for hunting also, but just hunting of a different kind.

Dealer: (laughing) As long as it’s nothing illegal.

Agent: The conversations with the other ammunition dealers were similar. For example, the dealer in Nebraska assured the agent that this ammunition would go through metal, an armored limousine, and armor-piercing incendiary ammunition could “take down” a helicopter.

Dealer: Well, in the old days, in the old . . . Agent: I’m very much interested in making sure that these rounds can go through like, the bullet-proof glass. Do you think they’ll go through bullet-proof glass?

Dealer: Well, in the old days, in the old . . .
"when they cattle carts come running down your drive, you'd better be able to stop it."

The agent respond by saying, "Exactly, but you know, you can think who drives in armored limousines. That's why I'm not going to need it someday, those people in armored limousines." Audio tapes of these conversations are available on Rep. Waxman's website.

Mr. KENNEDY. This is the part I want to read. They had discussions with different dealers, and we can go through some of those; but listen to what the Oregon dealer said. He was confused about ammunition that could take down a helicopter. This is the agent from the GAO:

Right. And then, if I theoretically wanted to use these rounds—

Armor-piercing ammunition of this type—to take down an aircraft, say either a helicopter or something like that, I should be able to take a helicopter down, shouldn't I?

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, how much time is left on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proponents of the amendment have 10 minutes 11 seconds, the opponents of the amendment have 18 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. If the Senator would like to agree, I would just as soon have each of us have a little time before we vote. I know the leadership has it tight, and I know it has been difficult to work, but I would rather take 3 or 4 minutes before we vote on Monday. But I don't know whether that is possible. I don't like to ask consent here. I will continue the opportunity to discuss this, but I think we probably would have more involved in it later on.

I am instructed by the floor staff we will have a very brief time prior to the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. Let me respond to the Senator's inquiry. I don't disagree with him. I think it is important we do have some limited time to discuss the difference between his amendment and what will be known as the Frist-Craig amendment that will be offered in a few moments. That is important.

I think we have all heard the Senator from Massachusetts very clearly. He said he wants to ban assault weapons and rifle ammunition. What he didn't say, or what he will not say, is that the standards he establishes in his legislation, performance-based standards, ban what is currently on-the-shelf hunting ammunition. Does the hunting ammunition in a high-powered rifle have the ability to penetrate soft body armor? Yes, it does.

Does it have the ability to penetrate other soft armor? Yes, it does. Is it used for that purpose? No. It is rarely ever found upon purpose.

We have a choice. Clearly it is against the law when it is used for that purpose and we all know that and we ought to go at those people who use legitimate firearms in illegal ways instead of trying to eliminate the firearm or, in this case, the ammunition. But, of course, we know, and all of America's hunters know, they could have a .30.06 in their gun safe, they could have a .30.06 in their gun safe, they could have a .30.06 in their gun safe, they could have a .30.06 in their gun safe, and if they didn't have the ammunition for it, it would be a marvelous historic relic of America's past. Is that what the Senator from Massachusetts wants?

He says not. But we all know what performance-based standards do. When you establish a band through that, that is what you accomplish. The fact is, while all hunting rifle ammunition is capable of penetrating soft body armor. That is a reality. So by his definition does that go off the market? I believe it does. That is why I think it is unnecessary. That is why the President of the Fraternal Order of Police said the Kennedy amendment is to kill the underlying amendment or to make it dramatically of less value, and that he and 311,000 members of the Fraternal Order of Police disagree—

Probably a good many of them are hunters, and they recognize more than anybody else because they are probably pretty talented people when it comes to understanding ballistics. When it comes to understanding ammunition, they probably know a great deal more about it than Senator KENNEDY or this Senator, Mr. CRAIG.

They say no, it is not necessary. The current law that the Senator speaks to, that he is proud of and he should be—is adequate. It does protect. It has removed armor-piercing bullets of the handgun type.

Now we step into our first major arena. Historically, those who want control, firearms in this country have always said: Oh, no, it is only the handgun that is most often used in the commission of a crime. It is the handgun we want to control. And this is why we are going up and down according to the citizens of this country. Leave the long gun alone. We are all for sportsmen. We are all for hunters. We like guns. They are good guns. Those are bad guns.

What is the amendment of the Senator is suggesting is—he may not say they are bad guns, but he says their ammunition is bad. And if you take their ammunition away, then as I said earlier, these kinds of hunting rifles will be controlled and prevent the people of this country, the citizens of this country, the law-abiding citizens of this country to protect themselves. They probably know a great deal more about it than Senator KENNEDY or this Senator, Mr. CRAIG.

I strongly oppose and will encourage my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

Mr. President, we have possibly one other Senator wishing to come to the microphone to speak. Let me check on that. If that is not true, I see no reason we couldn't reserve the remainder of our time or move on to another amendment.
I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I just want to remind the Senate what we have just heard. It is a wonderful technique. I don’t disparage my friend from Idaho, but I think it is important to misrepresent what the amendment does and then to differ with it.

I have been here several years and I know that technique. It is one that I have used in a while.

People ought to understand, when we are talking about life and death, we ought to be willing to at least deal with the facts.

The facts are as described in the amendment about what the definition would be in terms of the armor-piercing bullets. That talks about a projectile for centerfire rifles designed or marketed as having an armor-piercing capability that the Attorney General determined pursuant to the section 926(d) to be more likely to penetrate body armor than standard ammunition of the same caliber, period.

Armor-piercing bullets—as my good friend says, wants to eliminate all ammunition for these weapons and, therefore, we will still be relics on the shelves of time.

This is what it is; it is written into the amendment: a projectile for centerfire rifles designed or marketed as having armor-piercing capability that the Attorney General determines—not the Senator from Massachusetts, not the Senator from Idaho—but the one that has the capability to more likely penetrate body armor.

That is what we are talking about—penetrating body armor that law enforcement officers wear and which stands between their life and their death.

That is what this amendment does. We have already seen and sadly reviewed the statistics that are out there now about the brave officers who have already been killed. We will have an opportunity to do something about that on Tuesday next. Let us not fail to do so.

Over the weekend, if there is language that is necessary to ensure that particular purpose can be achieved with more effective language, let me give the assurance to the Senator from Idaho and others interested who take that position that we are more than glad to work out that result.

We will not compromise on dealing with the fundamental issue; and that is armor-piercing bullets penetrating those vests or put at risk the lives of brave officers today and in the future.

I withheld the remainder of my time. I saw the Senator from the State of Washington who I believe is ready to move ahead. I will either yield back my time or retain my time.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask at this moment that the Senator not yield time. I have a few moments remaining on my time. I am going to ask for a very short period of time to go into a quorum call at which time we will come out of it and offer the Frist-Craig amendment. I don’t need to debate that for any length of time. That is in the order of the unanimous consent of the Senator from Massachusetts knows, those two then will be set aside to be voted on Tuesday next.

With that, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. How much time remains on the current amendment, the Kennedy amendment?

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. The sponsor has 6 1/2 minutes and the opponents have 1 1/2 minutes.

Mr. CRAIG. I am prepared to yield back if the Senator is, and I will offer the first Craig amendment and speak for a few short minutes on that and then...

Mr. REID. We yield back the time of Senator KENNEDY.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. Without objection, the time of the proponent of the amendment is yielded back.

Mr. CRAIG. I yield back my time.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

Mr. CRAIG. It is my understanding that the Kennedy amendment will now be set aside to be voted on Tuesday next.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. That is correct.

AMENDMENT NO. 325

Mr. CRAIG. I send to the desk the Frist-Craig amendment.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. The clerk will read.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG], for Mr. FRIST, for himself and Mr. CRAIG, proposes an amendment numbered 325.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT. OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To regulate the sale and possession of armor piercing ammunition, and for other purposes)

At the appropriate place, add the following:

SEC. 8. ARMOR PIERCING AMMUNITION.

(a) UNLAWFUL ACTS.—Section 926(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraphs (7) and (8) and inserting the following:

“(7) for any person to manufacture or import armor piercing ammunition, unless—

“(A) the manufacture of such ammunition is for the use of the United States, any department or agency of the United States, any State, or any department, agency, or political subdivision of a State;

“(B) the manufacture of such ammunition is for the purpose of exportation; or “(C) the manufacture or importation of such ammunition is for the purpose of testing or experimentation and has been authorized by the Attorney General.

“(B) for any manufacturer or importer to sell or deliver armor piercing ammunition, unless such sale or delivery—

“(A) is for the use of the United States, any department or agency of the United States, any State, or any department, agency, or political subdivision of a State;

“(B) is for the purpose of exportation; or

“(C) is for the purpose of testing or experimentation and has been authorized by the Attorney General.”

(b) PENALTIES.—Section 924(c) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(C) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided under this subsection, or by any other provision of law, any person who, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime that provides for a sentence enhanced pursuant to the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device) for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries armor piercing ammunition, or who, in furtherance of any such crime, possesses armor piercing ammunition, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime or conviction under this section—

“(A) be sentenced to a term of imprisonment of not less than 15 years;

“(B) if death results from the use of such ammunition—

“(i) if the killing is murder (as defined in section 1111), be punished by death or sentenced to a term of imprisonment for any term of years or for life; and

“(ii) if the killing is manslaughter (as defined in section 1112), be punished as provided in section 1112.”

(c) STUDY AND REPORT.—

(1) STUDY.—The Attorney General shall conduct a study to determine whether a uniform standard for the uniform testing of projectiles against Body Armor is feasible.

(2) ISSUES TO BE STUDIED.—The study conducted under paragraph (1) shall study—

(A) variations in performance that are related to the length of the barrel of the handgun or centerfire rifle from which the projectile is fired; and

(B) the amount of powder used to propel the projectile.

(3) REPORT.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit a report containing the results of the study conducted under this subsection to—

(A) the chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate; and

(B) the chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, Senator KENNEDY has a copy of this straightforward amendment that strengthens the current armor-piercing bullet law. It does a couple of things.

It says that the Attorney General shall commission a study to determine whether a uniform standard for the uniform testing of projectiles against body armor is feasible and what impact it would have on sporting and hunting rifles. It includes issues to be studied variations in performance that are related to the length of the barrel of the handgun or the centerfire rifle from which the projectile is fired and the amount of powder used to propel the projectile. The Attorney General shall deliver such report to the chairman and the ranking member of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees within 2 years of the date of the enactment of this legislation.

This became the core of the debate between the Senator from Massachusetts and myself. What does "performance-based standards" mean, and how do they impact legitimate sporting and hunting ammunition?

Also, insert as new, 18 USC, 924:

(5) Except to the extent that a greater minimum sentence is otherwise provided under this subsection, or by any other provision of law, any person who, during and in relation to any crime of violence or drug trafficking crime (including a crime of violence or drug trafficking crime that provides for an enhanced punishment if committed by the use of a deadly or dangerous weapon or device for which the person may be prosecuted in a court of the United States, uses or carries armor piercing ammunition, or who, in furtherance of any such crime, possesses armor piercing ammunition, shall, in addition to the punishment provided for such crime of violence or drug trafficking crime or conviction (under title 18 USC 924)—

"(A) be subject to imprisonment for not less than 15 years;"

"(B) if death results from the use of such ammunition—"

"(i) if the killing is murder (as defined in section 1111), be punished by death or sentenced to a term of imprisonment for any term of years; and"

"(ii) if the killing is manslaughter (as defined in section 1112), be punished as provided in section 1112."

What are we doing? We are adding real teeth to current law. We are saying to the criminal element and the drug trafficking element in our country, if you use armor-piercing ammunition in your firearm and it maims or kills a law enforcement officer, we will put you away for life.

That is what we are going to do. We do not tolerate it. We never have. The current law serves effectively, but if there is a sentence, then let’s toughen it, let’s strengthen it, let's give stronger positions to the law enforcement community of this country.

That is the crux of the bill. It is straightforward. It is simple. We think it offers what certainly all of us want to see and what the law enforcement community of this country needs.

I hope the Frist-Craig amendment will be accepted. It is a straightforward amendment. If the Senator would make himself available, we can conclude this debate, set this amendment aside, and move to the next amendment.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, the Senator from Massachusetts is in the Chamber. In his absence, I offered the Frist-Craig amendment, and spoke briefly to it as a true strengthening of current armor-piercing bullet legislation, to suggest very directly to the criminal element and the drug trafficking element in our country: If you use armor-piercing bullets and it wounds or takes the life of a law enforcement officer, we will put you away for life. I think that is as clear and direct as we can become with the already strong prohibition that is in place for armor piercing bullets that would be used in handguns.

With that, I retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I will oppose the amendment because it does nothing to protect our law enforcement officers from armor-piercing bullets. All it does say, as I understand it, is if law enforcement officers are killed, under the current universes, it is going to be greater, including even in the death penalty.

My amendment says, let's stop the armor-piercing bullets now to save lives. Let's be proactive and prevent the future. The Senator from Idaho says, well, after they are killed we are going to penalize these people more. My amendment would effectively save lives because we would effectively prohibit the kind of armor-piercing bullets that are able to pierce armor and kill those who want to do our law enforcement personnel harm.

So it just misses the point, the idea that we are going to do something after that police officer is killed. That will not do anything about these numbers I mention. We have just seen 20 officers killed over the last 10 years, and 17 of them by armor-piercing bullets. That is what they were killed by: and that is what my amendment is focused on. The amendment will do nothing about preventing that kind of activity. I appreciate his efforts in trying to do something, but this fails the mark.

I withhold my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, in response to the Senator from Massachusetts, his legislation goes at long guns, rifles, and their ammunition. What I did not notice, with him coming back into the Chamber, is do we direct the Attorney General to look at, over a period of time, 2 years—no later than that—and report to the Senate Judiciary Committee, on which the Senator serves, a study to see whether what the Senator is proposing and his amendment wipes from the shelves of this country the kind of hunting ammunition we believe it will, and that certainly a good many others do.

I am not insensitive to what the Senator is saying, but I am saying, let's get the facts. We do not want to wipe out half the hunting or two-thirds of the hunting ammunition and the target ammunition in this country. That is legitimate. It is law abiding. Does it get misused? Yes. Does some of it have armor-piercing capability, to some extent? Yes.

Certainly this is what our intent is. In the meantime, let’s toughen the law. Let us get the criminal element in our country that armor-piercing ammunition is flat off limits or you pay a phenomenal price for it.

Is it a deterrent? The Senator from Massachusetts would say it is not. In most instances, we find good, tough law enforcement, and a reality known by those who would commit crimes with this kind of ammunition in this country, does serve as a deterrent. That is the intent of the amendment. We believe it is a good amendment.

I am prepared to yield back the remainder of my time if the Senator believes he has adequately covered this issue.

Mr. KENNEDY. No. I just want to respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. If I may, Mr. President, I yield myself time.

Let me remind my colleagues that armor-piercing ammunition for rifles and assault weapons is virtually unregulated in the United States of America. A Federal license is not required to sell such ammunition unless firearms are sold as well. Anyone over the age of 18 can purchase purchase this ammunition without a background check, and there is no Federal minimum age for possession. Purchases may be made over the counter, by mail order, by fax, or by Internet, and there is no Federal requirement that dealers retain sale records.

It is this current lawlessness that jeopardizes the safety of police officers. It is this failure of the existing law that has led to 20 fatal shootings of police officers, and will lead to many more unless Congress acts, not studies—acts, not studies.

The facts are well established. The FBI statistics do not lie. We do not need another study. We do not need another report. All we need to do is adopt the underlying legislation that gives the Attorney General the authority and the power to ensure the kind of armor-piercing bullets that are being used, that pierce the armor and kill law enforcement officials, will be prohibited from use today.

As I outlined in my amendment: "a projectile for a centerfire rifle, designed or marketed as having armor-piercing capability, that the Attorney General determines to be more likely to penetrate body armor than standard ammunition of the same caliber." We either have a problem or we do not believe we do. Certainly the families of those brave officers who died believe we do—their families and those police departments. We have an opportunity to do this on next Tuesday.
hope the Craig amendment will be defeated and that the amendment I offered will be accepted.

I am prepared to yield back the remainder of time if the Senator is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I thank the Senator. I too am prepared to yield back the remainder of our time.

Let me conclude my comments by saying this: let the role of the Attorney General of the United States to determine what can or cannot be used in this country as forms of ammunition. It is our job, if we are going to do it. And we should not do it. The marketplace will tax it. The Senator has shaped legislation that has controlled types of it, and that has been supported. I do not think we need to get as arbitrary as some Attorneys General can be. It has been in the past as it relates to what their vision is versus what we believe ought to be illegal or legal in this country.

Our job is to make it the law. That is what we are about here at this moment. It is important that we establish parameters and understandings clearly to determine the kinds of tests that are performance based in what they do to what is now currently legal ammunition in this country.

With this, I yield back the remainder of my time, and ask that the Frist-Craig amendment be set aside to be considered on Tuesday next.

I believe the next item under our unanimous consent is to move to Senator CANTWELL for her amendment for consideration on Tuesday next.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield back my time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back. The amendment will be set aside.

The Senator from Washington.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I call up my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant Journal clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Washington [Ms. CANTWELL] proposes an amendment numbered 2617.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To extend and expand the Temporary Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 2002, and for other purposes)

At the end, add the following:

SEC. 01. EXTENSION OF THE TEMPORARY EXTENDED UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION ACT OF 2002.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 208 of the Temporary Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 2002 (Public Law 107–147; 116 Stat. 3), as amended by Public Law 108–1 (117 Stat. 3) and the Unemployment Compensation Amendments of 2003 (Public Law 108–26; 117 Stat. 751), is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(2), by striking ‘‘December 31, 2003’’ and inserting ‘‘June 30, 2004’’;

(2) in subsection (b)(1), by striking ‘‘December 31, 2003’’ and inserting ‘‘June 30, 2004’’;

(3) subsection (b)(2)—

(A) in the heading, by striking ‘‘December 31, 2003’’ and inserting ‘‘June 30, 2004’’; and

(B) by striking ‘‘December 31, 2003’’ and inserting ‘‘June 30, 2004’’; and

(4) in subsection (c) striking ‘‘March 31, 2004’’ and inserting ‘‘September 30, 2004’’.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect as if included in the enactment of the Temporary Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 2002 (Public Law 107–147; 116 Stat. 21).

AMENDMENT NO. 387.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To extend and expand the Temporary Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 2002, and for other purposes)

At the end, add the following:

SEC. 02. TEMPORARY STATE AUTHORITY TO WAIVE APPLICABILITY OF LOOK-BACKS UNDER THE FEDERAL-STATE EXTENDED UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION ACT.

For purposes of conforming with the provisions of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970 (26 U.S.C. 9001 note; a State may, during the period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act and ending on June 30, 2004, waive the application of either subsection (b)(1)(A) of section 203 of such Act or subsection (f)(1)(A)(ii) of such Act, or both.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, how much time is allowed for debate on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One hour, evenly divided.

Ms. CANTWELL. Thank you, Mr. President. If I can be notified when I have used 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will be notified.

Ms. CANTWELL. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, while we are talking about gun liability, I think a more important question to be debating is the liability we are leaving the American workers with when, in fact, this body refuses to pass unemployment benefit extensions at a time when our economy is not recovering at the speed it takes to create new jobs.

As our own newspaper in Washington State, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, said this past week:

Everything is not fine in the job market.

That is what many Americans are saying. That is what many people would be starting to debate when they talk about the issue of outsourcing. Everything is not fine in the job market.

The President and his economic advisers issued a report, the Economic Report from the President of the United States, as to the growth we were supposed to expect in our economy in 2004. If my colleagues have a copy of that report, turn to page 98. They will see that the President and his economic advisers, when talking about growth in real GDP over the long term, predict that jobs for this year are going to grow by 2.6 million. That was great economic news to a lot of Americans who have been sitting around in December without Federal unemployment benefits, sending out resume after resume, only to find that they are competing with hundreds of other more qualified Americans for a very few jobs.

What became more frustrating to those unemployed Americans who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own, many as a result of 9/11 and the impact of terrorist activities on our economy, such as in aviation, aero-space, and a generation of those Americans would rather have the paycheck than the unemployment check. But without jobs being created, they would like to have some assistance in making the mortgage payment, paying the rent, paying for health care, and taking care of their families.

They were stunned when they found out that the President doesn’t really stick by the 2.6 million number. Last week, the President and two Cabinet Secretaries, the Secretaries of Treasury and Commerce, were in Washington State and refused to meet with unemployed workers there. We have had, for the better part of the last 2 years, an unemployment rate over 7 percent. We are a little bit below that right now, and we are concerned about stimulating the economy and from where job growth is going to come. When these two members of the President’s Cabinet came to town and were asked about the President’s economic forecast—asked whether they stick by the 2.6 million jobs that will be created, both of those Secretaries said: Those were assumptions based on economic models and the calculations have a margin of error.

The American worker is not a rounding error on a statistician’s desk. They are real people who are not getting the economic assistance they deserve.

It is no surprise that other newspapers across the country have also noted this. The Atlanta Journal Constitution said:

But the economic bounce has not yet been strong enough for cautious employers to get beyond squeezing more production from existing workers and taking the cautious step of hiring. This leaves millions of unemployed sinking further into debt and desperation.

That points to what is going on here. The President is backing away from his economic numbers. People realize that job growth is not happening. Yet we return on the report and asking them to extend unemployment benefits.

Why is that so important? It is important to many Americans who would rather have that paycheck than an unemployment check, and it can provide a real stimulus because for every dollar in unemployment insurance, it generates $2 of economic stimulus into the local economy.

We must continue to see these projections versus reality. The President’s economic advisers said in 2002 that we were only going to lose a few jobs. We ended up actually losing 1.4 million jobs. In 2003, they said we were going to lose 1.7 million jobs. We ended up losing another almost 500,000 jobs. Now in 2004, they say we are going to lose 2.6 million jobs in what is left of this year. So far we have only gained 112,000 jobs.

The economy is moving very slowly.
We should not leave people out in the cold. That is exactly what we are doing by not passing Federal benefits on to those unemployed workers when they exhale till 2003, when we took the first step in recovery in December, we left out lots of workers: in Illinois, about 17,000 people; Texas, about 23,000; North Carolina, 10,000;
Ohio, over 10,000; Pennsylvania, 17,000 people; Georgia, 14,000 people. At the end of 2005, when the benefits program expired at the State level, these people were no longer eligible for ben-fits at the Federal level because we curtailed the Federal program.

What that means is that every month more and more people exhaust their State benefits as no jobs are found and thereby are denied Federal benefits.
For example, for the first 6 months of this year, over 50,000 additional people from Washington State would be eligiable, could not receive help. On a national level, 2 million people would be eligible to receive Federal benefits.

These numbers represent what happenned to people in these States in December of 2003, when the other side of the aisle refused to grant the motion of seeking unanimous consent to pass unemployment benefits. And yet, we haven’t yet had a net creation of jobs.

During that time, we ended up creating 2.9 million new jobs, a very positive outcome. In this recession and recovery, which began in 2001, we have lost 2.4 million jobs. The difference between this recession and the last is that we have cut off the Federal benefit program. And yet, we haven’t yet had a net creation of jobs.

We started to slowly shrink the jobs deficit, with 112,000 jobs in January, but we have curtailed the program before we have seen real results. Why would we do that when we have previous experience, from two different administrations, that shows that continuing the program really does help stimulate the economy?

That is what we want to do. That is why I am not surprised that other people around the country such as the Akron Beacon Journal said:

The recovery has apily been called jobless.
Offer a bridge to a better time, and Congress won’t simply aid those struggling to find work. The country will benefit.

This is not solely about helping individuals who are unemployed. It is a sting to the economy. What happens if the 2 million people who will lose Federal benefits over the next 6 months can’t make mortgage payment and end up defaulting on their home mortgages. How is that good for the U.S. economy? Or say, for example, individuals can’t make health insurance payments and end up costing more in uncompensated health care?
How is that good for the U.S. economy?

I was not surprised when I saw in the San Jose Mercury News that the other side of the aisle had been accused of being of little interest or being silent on this issue.

Basically, the San Jose Mercury News said:

Despite a recent uptick in hiring across the country in 2004, they could bring more hardship for millions of Americans out of work. And yet, we have left those idling behind as their hope for receiving extended unemployment benefits fades.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr.
BURNS). The Chair advises the Senator she has used 10 minutes. I call on Mr.
CANTWELL. Mr. President, I thank the Chair for that information.
I would like to continue until other of my colleagues from different regions of the country, which have been hit with high unemployment, come to the Chamber.

I wish to focus on reality versus rhetoric. We have been promised 2.6 million jobs, but instead, we have seen a loss of 2.3 million. The rhetoric doesn’t stand up. If the President is going to deny his own economic report and say we are not going to create 2.6 million jobs, then give American workers a hand—extend unemployment benefits as a lifeline to help stimulate their family incomes and help stimulate our national economy.

I ask the President and the other side of the aisle to take a little bit of time and go back in history. I know not everybody on the other side of the aisle agrees with the policies of a Democratic administration juxtaposed to this administration, but let’s look at what the last Bush administration did when we had a downturn of our economy and how President George H. W.
Bush handled the situation.

He had a similar problem when he came into office: the 1990s recession.
In April of 1992, the President said that we had tremendous job loss in the millions, but the economy had started to grow again. The first President Bush saw that the economy had picked up 379,000 jobs. He could have stopped the unemployment benefit program right then and there. He could have said: My job is over; the economy is starting to grow again; I don’t have to do anything else about this issue. But the President did not.

The first President Bush extended unemployment benefits for an additional 9 months. He did it for 9 months—and it was a program with more weeks of benefits than the current program. It was 20 weeks instead of the 13 weeks we have for basic unemployment States.

What has the second President Bush done? He has been faced with a similar recession. As we saw from the previous chart, we have lost 2.4 million jobs in the last 2 years and this President sees a little uptick in the economic numbers. He sees about 112,000 jobs created in January. And what does he say? That’s it; that’s it; no more Federal unemployment benefit program. No unemployment benefits. No weeks, no program.

Basically, we have left the American workers out in the cold as it relates to this opportunity to sustain themselves and sustain our economy in great economically challenging times.

I ask my colleagues on the other side of the aisle to look at this history, to look at what the first Bush administration did under similar circumstances, to look at his results. They were very positive for the U.S. economy and for the U.S. worker. Analyze that jux-tapoed to the position we have taken in this body today, primarily because the other side of the aisle, a dozen times now, has refused us the right to have a vote on this issue. We are going to lose the vote; we believe my colleagues will stand up for the American worker and, most importantly, for the American economy that needs this stimulus.

I see some of my colleagues have taken the floor in the Chamber. I say to the Senator from Maryland, who has been eloquent on these issues, I don’t know how much time the Senator is seeking, but I will be happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. SARBANES. Is the Senator controlling time?

Ms. CANTWELL. Yes, I am. Mr.
President, how much time remains?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 15 minutes 9 seconds remaining.

Ms. CANTWELL. I am happy to yield the Senator 3 minutes.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise in very strong support of the amendment available by the able Senator from Washington, Ms. CANTWELL, of which I am pleased to be a cosponsor. This amendment will extend the unemployment benefits which lapsed at the end of December—they have lapsed and are not available—and continue the program for 6 months, through the end of June.

The program lapsed not because the fundamental economic problem which led to its creation—the very weak labor market—has been solved. That market’s weakness remains a serious concern.

Long-term unemployment—the problem for which this program was created—is at very high levels. There are nearly 1.9 million unemployed workers in America who are long-term unemployed. That is, they have been unemployed for more than 26 weeks. They constitute almost 23 percent of all unemployed workers. This level has been above 20 percent for the past 16 months, the longest stretch of long-term unemployment at this level in more than 20 years.

It has been 33 months since the recession began. The economy has almost 2 percent fewer jobs than it had 34 months ago. Jobs are not being created in sufficient number to close this gap. Job creation is far below what is needed to improve the situation for unemployed workers.

Some colleagues have argued that we do not need the program because we are no longer losing jobs. However, the job growth that the economy is producing is not sufficient to put back the jobs that are those who have lost their jobs. Of course, the administration predicted after they passed the 2003 tax cut, that by last month, the economy would have created above 20 percent for the past 16 months, the longest stretch of long-term unemployment at this level in more than 20 years.

I have just gone through a series of community meetings at home, and it came up again and again. So I hope, in the look-back rule that this legislation would provide, these are folks who are going to fall into the economic abyss. They deserve better.

The fact is, the stock market is doing well. We are glad to see it. We are glad to see profits up at so many of our companies. But there are pluses for our country. But the fact is, middle-class folks, and particularly the middle class that is unemployed, are feeling pinched like never before. I am very hopeful my colleagues will support this legislation. It is essential to provide a measure of relief to those folks who are enduring so much economic hurt.

the extension of unemployment benefits is put in during times of high unemployment rates.

Well, they are saying times have changed. Statistics back then do not compare with statistics now. I do not know why, but that is what they are saying.

Let’s point out what this Senate and the House did last year. We gave the States $8 billion to help fund their own unemployment programs—especially those States that have high unemployment like Oregon. The Senator from Oregon was just on the floor speaking. We gave that money to the States to handle serious problems with individuals facing long-term unemployment.

What have the States done with that money? We gave them that money 2 years ago. In March 2002, we gave $8 million to the States. What have they done with it? Well, there is $4.3 billion the States have not used. Are our States not compassionate? Do they not care about people, as the other side would have us believe?

They have not spent over half of the money we gave from the Federal Government to the States.

So I think just to look at what is going on day by day with this amendment. I believe this is very well intentioned by the other side, but what has happened is our mindset has changed. What used to be considered full employment is now considered high unemployment. All of us back in the early 1990s thought a 5.5 percent unemployment rate would be considered full employment in this economy, because there are always people who are changing jobs so they are temporarily unemployed. There are always people who have difficulty because of training, they are getting some new training so it takes them longer to find a job. Then sometimes, frankly, in a changing economy, people do have to move to find work and sometimes it takes a long period of unemployment for people to make that decision. It is a very difficult decision to make.

I think we need to be sensitive to people, but we also have to look at the reality we are facing. We are facing huge budget deficits today. How many of the people running for President have been talking about the budget problem? On the other side of the aisle, I have heard it talked about time and time again.

Well, the extension of the unemployment benefits costs almost $1 billion dollars a month. So if we extend it out to the end of this year, we are going to be talking about another $10 billion, or somewhere thereabouts, added to the budget deficit. That money will be borrowed from the Social Security trust fund, because when there is deficit spending, that is where it is taken out of. We all know that. It is a paper trust fund anyway, but we all know that is where it is taken out of.

So I think it is important for us to understand, first, what got us here, what the historical implications have been as I have laid them out, and then what do we do to get out of this dilemma. What do we do to get out of it is to make sure we have a strong enough economy so new jobs will be created.

What are all of the economists—and I do not subscribe to the philosophy the economists subscribe to, the one thing everybody agrees with is these large budget deficits we are experiencing today and that are projected out into the future are the No. 1 single threat to our economy. So if we want to have a secure future going forward, we must watch and curtail additional Federal spending.

The reason we have the deficit today, over half of it, is because of the poor economy. So when businesses and individuals are not making as much money, they do not pay as much in taxes. Over half of the budget deficit is caused by that. About another 27 or 28 percent of the deficit was caused by increased Federal spending. And about 20 percent of it were the last two tax cuts that were enacted. But without those tax cuts—it is widely accepted now those tax cuts have helped the economy—we would be in even worse shape.

The number one thing we can do for the economy, as a Federal Government, is to create the atmosphere where those jobs are created. So the number one thing we can do is make sure we keep our fiscal house in order by restraining Federal spending.

Looking back at the payroll survey, eight months prior to the tax cuts we lost 323,000 jobs. Eight months after the tax cuts we produced 300,000 jobs. That is just the payroll survey statistics. That does not count the household survey, or all of those self-employed people I was talking about earlier. There are literally a couple of million jobs that have been produced since the tax cut, when you count self-employed people.

The other side says that doesn't count. Just ask somebody who is self-employed who think their job counts and should count in the national statistics. I think everybody who is self-employed out there, if you have a mom-and-pop business, if you are a doctor who used to work for a hospital and have your own practice, or you are a nurse-midwife and you decided to take the risk and go out on your own, does your job count? A nurse practitioner or a physical therapist, whatever the job is, should that job count? I believe that. I believe that is why there are two different surveys, the household survey and a payroll survey. It is important that we have both of them so we can look at the big picture. The economy is changing. We have to have policies that reflect those changes.

I yield the floor at this time so we can go back and forth and continue the debate. I see my friend from Oklahoma. Next time I get recognized, I will yield some time to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8 minutes 57 seconds; they have 18 minutes 41 seconds.

Ms. CANTWELL. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Will the Chair let me know when 3/4 minutes has passed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will do that.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Washington for being our leader on this issue about concern for the unemployed. She has, along with our colleagues, on over 12 different occasions challenged the Senate to try to do the constructive and positive thing, in terms of the unemployed in this country.

I listened to my friend from Nevada. I wonder what world he is living in. It probably is the world of the President of the United States. First, he gave us the State of the Union and said the economy is wonderful and getting better. Then he made a speech on the State of the economy and said every-thing is just rosy. Then he spoke to the National Governors Association just this last 2 days ago and said every-thing is just fine; everything is doing well.

Here I have three of this week’s magazine talking about what is happening. “Jobs Going Abroad.” What is happening? “New Jobs Migration.” What is happening? “Will America still be able to be a strong economy?” This is what is happening in the world. And we have silence by this body.

Look at this chart. Thirteen million children are going hungry every day in America, 3 million more Americans are living in poverty than 3 years ago, and 90,000 workers are losing their unemployed compensation every single week. That is what is happening.

What we know is what has happened to real people in America. These are the administration’s own figures. This is the Department of Labor. In 2000, the average family earned $44,000; now it is down to $12,000—a near $32,000 reduction. That is what is happening.

We have a real need out there. Everyone who travels the country understands it, except the Republicans.

You have $15 billion in that fund. The Senator from Nevada says we have $4 billion that the States have. He knows as well as I they are restricted from using it because of Federal law. There is $15 billion out there. These are hardworking, decent Americans trying to pay a mortgage, trying to put food on the table, trying to take care of their children, and we are here saying, no, no, no; we are not going to give them the help and the assistance, the life line. They paid over a lifetime of work hard into this country. They paid over a lifetime of work hard into this fund. This fund belongs to the people. What is the reason for not providing this? What is the reason for not providing it? That is what the amendment of the Senator from the State of Washington will do. It will give them a lifeline for the next 13 weeks so they will be able to keep their families together, have a sense of dignity, have a sense of pride, have a sense of optimism in their future, and for their family's future. We ought to be in the business of pro-Longing economic times, only created 112,000 jobs in January and decided there would be no benefit program and no weeks for employees.

I am not surprised to see the Washington Post headline "Number of Mass Layoffs Rose Sharply"—"2,400 employers let go 50 or more people." That is the economic news facing the country.

This administration and the other side of the aisle are not promising jobs or promising unemployment benefits. If someone wants to stand up and say we are going to have real job creation in 2004 and stand by the President's numbers, that is one thing. But if you are not promising either growth or economic assistance, then we have a serious problem.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, extending unemployment benefits would be one of the most important and significant actions Congress takes this year. The economy and jobs are consistently the top areas of concern back home. The people that I speak to are far more interested in extending unemployment benefits than extending tax cuts to the wealthy. The House recently acted in a bipartisan fashion and passed an amendment to extend unemployment insurance benefits to workers who have exhausted their state and federal benefits. Now it is time for the Senate to act as well.

According to the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, the number of individuals exhausting their regular State unemployment benefits and not qualifying for further benefits is higher than at any other time on record—about 90,000 workers a week. Painful history is being made. This Senate cannot stay silent. In January alone, about 375,000 unemployed workers exhausted their regular state benefits and are not eligible for any Federal unemployment aid. This is in addition to the 395,000 unemployed workers who exhausted their state benefits last December 2003.

Action is needed now. President Bush predicted that in 2003, we would create 1.7 million new jobs. Instead, the Nation lost 53,000 jobs. On Monday, President Bush said he thought the current unemployment numbers are "good." Not where I'm from.

In earlier slow economic times, previous Congresses have acted. In the 1974-75 recession, Congress provided 29 weeks of Federal unemployment benefits. In the 1981-82 recession, Congress provided 26 weeks of Federal unemployment benefits. In the 1990-91 recession, Congress provided 26 weeks of Federal unemployment benefits. In the program that expired on December 31, 2003, Congress provided 13 weeks of Federal unemployment benefits. That was below previous levels of Federal weeks but it was something.

Federal extended benefits program implemented during the last recession was not allowed to end until the economy had produced nearly three million jobs above its pre-recession levels. The current program has ended when there are 2.4 million fewer jobs than when the recession began.

The recently expired Federal unemployment program was closed to new enrollments last December 31, 2003. Workers currently receiving federal unemployment benefits will be phased out by the week of March 29, 2004. The recently expired federal unemployment program must only provided an added 13 weeks of Federally funded unemployment benefits for workers who have run out of State benefits—it provided an additional 7 weeks in States with the highest unemployment. Renewing this program—and hopefully expanding it to more traditional levels—is crucial.

The Federal unemployment trust fund has over approximately $15 billion in it—for this exact purpose—to allow unemployed workers to continue to be covered by the fund while working to now use it in their time of need. The trust fund is the workers’ money, made up from their contributions. Keeping money in consumers’ hands will help sustain the economy too. Without it, more families will postpone medical care, watch their savings dry up, and lose their homes.

The Bush administration has told us that a .1 percent national unemployment rate drop is proof positive that his tax cuts and other economic initiatives are beginning to work. However, what President Bush did not tell the American people that factory employment declined for the 42th consecutive month by eliminating approximately 24,000 manufacturing jobs. Despite last month’s growth, America’s manufacturing core has shed an average of 53,000 jobs per month for the last 12 months. If a recovery is going on, it is essentially a jobless recovery. A jobless recovery is no recovery at all. The term is an oxymoron.

The Labor Department statistics also reveal that five million Americans work part time jobs because they cannot find full-time jobs. Since President Bush took office, about 3 million private sector jobs have been lost and a total of almost 9 million Americans are now unemployed. We have also reached record levels of long-term unemployment.

Manufacturing jobs, which helped to build and sustain America’s middle class, are disappearing. A total of 2.6 million manufacturing jobs have been lost since January 2001, 11,000 last month alone. Manufacturing jobs are good jobs that pay high wages, provide good health benefits and retirement security. We cannot afford to let these good jobs leave our country or be lost.

Michigan has been particularly hard hit, losing approximately 225,000 jobs since January 2001 of which 185,000 were manufacturing jobs. Our states and our nation cannot sustain such losses. On Labor Day President Bush acknowledged that “thousands” of manufacturing jobs were lost in recent years. He was off by about 2.6 million.

Let us pass an extension of unemployment benefits now. It is simply the right thing to do. It is the traditional thing to do in times like this.

I ask unanimous consent that the following chart be printed in the RECORD, illustrating previous Congressional action.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank Senator CANTWELL for offering a very important amendment on unemployment insurance. This amendment is absolutely necessary because this administration has put this country on the wrong economic path.

The economy is not improving, jobs are not being created, and workers and their families are suffering. Since this administration took office, America has lost 2.6 million jobs, excluding over two and a half million in manufacturing. More than 9 million Americans are out of work. Unless we see an unbelievable turnaround in the next 8 months, this administration will be the first since that of Herbert Hoover to preside over an economy where more jobs are lost than created.

And what is the President’s plan for economic recovery and job creation? More tax cuts for the wealthy; eviscerating overtime pay for hard-working Americans; shipping service and manufacturing jobs overseas; all while raising our deficits to record levels.

It is not just the President alone who supports these policies—his administration supports these and other irresponsible policies as well. They have been forthcoming about their priorities and the priority they will put on stop with the American workers. Therefore, no one should be surprised when instead of receiving a paycheck they receive a pink slip. No one should be surprised when they lose their house because the administration refuses to extend unemployment insurance benefits. No one should be surprised when retirees see their social security benefits slashed. No one should be surprised when companies move overseas or rely on workers overseas.

Also troubling, just yesterday the Federal Chairman encouraged Congress and the Administration to make cuts into future Social Security payments in order to bring down the deficit. So now we have the White House and Congress juggling men and women who have worked hard their whole lives and are relying on Social Security to help them during their retirement years that they are better off cutting Social Security benefits rather than eliminate the tax cuts that go to the wealthy.

The chairman of the President’s Council of Economic Advisors is quoted as saying, “Outsourcing is just a new way of doing international trade. More things are tradable than were tradable in the past. And that’s a good thing.” American workers are losing their jobs and the Administration says it’s a “good thing”. That is an extraordinary statement.

In fact, not once in the past month has the President mentioned extending Federal unemployment benefits. What more must happen for this administration to wake up and begin to take meaningful action?

The President talks about tremendous job growth this year. This prediction would only be met if job growth averaged more than 450,000 new jobs each month, about four times the level of job growth in January according to the Economic Policy Institute.

Americans are hurting and instead of taking steps to ensure job creation, this administration continues to call for more tax cuts, tax cuts that will favor the most wealthy, but do nothing for the families that are struggling today. These tax cuts will cost an additional $1 trillion dollars over the next 10 years. What is even more alarming about this is that this is coming at the worst possible time—right when the baby boomers begin to retire.

It is dumbfounding to me that just 3 years ago we were looking at the biggest surplus in our Nation’s history—an annual surplus of $236 billion. We were actually having intense discussions about the effects of paying down the debt too fast. If only we were debating that today. Instead, we are facing an unsustainable fiscal path with the largest deficit in history—a deficit of $521 billion this year, a deficit that if not tackled soon, will have dangerous consequences.

It has been projected that by 2009, if we continue on this irresponsible path, each person’s share of the debt will total $35,283. This would reduce in consumer demand, an increase in interest rates, and it will make it enormously difficult for families across this country to achieve financial security.

Today, the Labor Department reported that 350,000 people filed new claims for State unemployment benefits last week. Just yesterday, the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities estimated that from late December, when the federal unemployment benefits program expired, through the end of February, 760,000 jobless workers will have exhausted their regular unemployment benefits without receiving any additional Federal aid. More than 4,700 jobless workers in Connecticut will exhaust their benefits without qualifying for additional Federal aid.

So that is why I wholeheartedly support extending Federal unemployment benefits right now. At the very least, we need to reach out to American workers and offer them a lifeline. This ought not be a partisan issue. I urge my colleagues to support this important amendment.
Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to support Senator CANTWELL’s amendment to reinstate the temporary emergency unemployment compensation program.

The amendment will reinstate the 13-week Federal unemployment insurance program that expired on December 1, 2004 for 4.5 million Americans and ensure that “high unemployment” States continue to be covered.

Given all of the pressures that workers face today—outsourcing, a political environment hostile to organized labor, and a lack of high-paying jobs—there is no more pressing issue facing our nation’s workforce. And yet although Senate Democrats have asked more than a dozen times to unanimously pass the unemployment extension—each time Senate Republicans have said no. It is time that the Senate stop putting partisanship ahead of what nearly everyone agrees is smart policy.

On February 4, the House of Representatives voted to reinstate unemployment benefits by a vote of 227 to 179, with 39 Republicans defying their leadership and voting in favor of the benefits.

But until the Senate acts, hundreds of thousands of workers will be in the impossible position of trying to feed, clothe, and house their families with no work and no benefits.

These are people who are persistently trying to re-enter the workforce, and yet they are up against an economy that has less than one job opening for every three workers.

Today we can change this. This amendment provides crucial temporary assistance to those who have been hardest hit by the recent economic downturn, and provides them a chance to support themselves and their families while they look for work.

Although the amendment would not provide more than 13 weeks of additional benefits to California, since my State’s unemployment rate is 6.4 percent, not high enough to meet the 6.5 percent unemployment rate trigger in the amendment, it provides a meaningful extension for Californians by allowing unemployed Californians who were previously unqualified for unemployment benefits to collect 13 weeks of benefits as they look for new work.

As of today, 2.3 million Americans have lost their jobs since President Bush took office in January 2001. In California, 660,000 million Americans are out of work, including discouraged and underemployed workers.

Historically, job loss during a recession is about 50 percent temporary and 50 percent permanent. Today, nearly 80 percent of the job losses are permanent. As a result, many of the unemployed will not return to work soon.

In his Annual Economic Report, President Bush said that the outsourcing of jobs was the inevitable byproduct of an evolving economy.

The White House says the “benefits” of exporting American jobs “eventually will outweigh the costs as Americans are able to buy cheaper goods and services and new jobs are created in growing sectors of the economy.”

How are people without jobs supposed to buy all these goods and services? How do you keep a consumer economy going when there are no jobs?

The chairman of the President’s Council of Economic Advisors, the office that wrote the report, says the “government should try to save the immediate short-term benefits to displaced workers while they need to enter new fields, such as health care.”

As Senator DASCHLE pointed out, that sounds like a cruel joke. The President’s proposed budget for next year cuts money for Federal job training programs. And how do they know that the jobs they are training for will not be the next jobs targeted to be shipped overseas? It certainly will not be because the President is fighting to keep them here.

It seems to me that the jury is in on the course we must take. I think it is wrong to move to a protectionist stance by raising tariffs or promoting a weak U.S. currency. Historically, such strategies have led to more problems than they have solved.

U.S. companies should not be rewarded through our tax code for moving jobs offshore and then be allowed to bring foreign earned profits back into the U.S. at a tax rate that is a fraction of what they pay on their U.S. earned profits—just 5 percent, as compared to 38 percent in some cases.

You and I pay more than five times that in personal income taxes.

We should be encouraging firms to keep jobs here by producing the best trained, best educated workforce in the world.

And, we must help those who are displaced by outsourcing by providing emergency unemployment insurance.

This amendment provides just such a safety net for those who are temporarily displaced by economic changes that are engulfing us.

I ask President Bush to put his weight behind this effort to get unemployment benefits extended to those who have been looking for a job more than 13 weeks.

If you are the President, you should be cheerleader number one for the American worker. And you should be supporting workers when they find themselves overcome by economic circumstances beyond their control.

When the national economy was booming 4 years ago, California was particularly blessed. California’s economy grew at double-digit rates, and California became the fifth-largest economy in the world. Billions of dollars of investment flowed into our State, and thousands of talented workers moved to California to take advantage of opportunities in Silicon Valley and other growth engines of the New Economy. Now that picture is dramatically different.

After dropping to a decade-long low of 4.7 percent in December of 2000, the unemployment rate in California is back up to 6.4 percent as of the end of 2003.

During this period of economic hardship, we have a duty to give people the chance to get back onto their feet. This is an obligation that we have met in the past. We faced with an economic downturn during the first Bush Administration. The Senate voted in 1991 to extend temporary unemployment insurance on five separate occasions. Each time such extensions were approved by overwhelming bipartisan majorities.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and those Americans who have fallen on hard times.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, how much time does the Senator from Oklahoma wish?

I yield to the Senator 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, I compliment my colleague and friend from Nevada for his statement.

It is important that we create an environment to create jobs. We did that last year. We didn’t have bipartisan support, with the exception of Senator MILLER. But we passed a bills last year. We passed a bill to help grow the economy. Guess what. It is working.

We passed a bill last year that cut the tax on individuals about in half—15 percent. We passed a bill last year that cut the tax on capital gains from 20 to 15 percent. We passed a bill that recuced marginal rates; that took the rate from 27 percent, for example, and made it 25 percent.

As a result of that, the economy is growing. With a rather stagnant economy, the stock market a year ago was less than 8,900; that is, the Dow Jones. It was over 10,500 today. The Nasdaq is over 50 percent. For the last three quarters, we now have significant ecoomic growth. During the last two quarters, one quarter was 8 percent and the other quarter was 4.4 percent.

We have had the most significant rapid expansion of job growth and economic growth in the last several months. In the last 6 months, according to the Wade survey, we have added about 300-some thousand jobs. If you look at the household survey, it is a couple of million jobs. The household survey includes self-employed, working at home on their computers, and so on.

Also, I know this amendment says let us continue this Federal program. We have a State program of 26 weeks. We had a temporary Federal program for an additional 13 weeks. Many tried to make that a permanent program and many tried to double it. They weren’t successful in doubling it. Now they are trying to make it permanent.

They want to take a 13-week program and extend it to a temporary and usually phases out when the unemployment rate drops down. The unemployment rate has been dropping down. In
Mr. NICKLES. I will reserve the point and see if additional Senators wish to speak.

Mr. ENSIGN. They are filibustering the appointment of conferees. We need to complete that bill if we want to help those people out of work get retrained so we can get them into other jobs.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. ENSIGN. I yield.

Mr. NICKLES. I want to make sure everyone is aware, when you talk about the States has money it has not utilized, are you referring to $8 billion Congress appropriated as part of the package in 2002?

Mr. ENSIGN. Yes.

Mr. NICKLES. There was $8 billion and there is still $4 billion on the table the States have not utilized for the unemployment compensation?

Mr. ENSIGN. There is $4.3 billion that has not been used that we gave them.

Mr. NICKLES. My colleague mentioned the Workforce Reinvestment Act that passed unanimously through the Senate and for whatever reasons our colleagues on the minority side have not agreed to the appointment of conferees. This act would help about 900,000 people in the United States to be retrained for new jobs. The other side is filibustering the appointment of conferees. We need to complete that bill if we want to help those people out of work get retrained so we can get them into other jobs.

Mr. NICKLES. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. ENSIGN. I yield.

Mr. NICKLES. I will take a couple of minutes. I asked the Senator from Washington a question a little while ago. Of the $3 billion we gave to the States, each of the States was allocated a certain amount of money and the State of Washington was allocated around $167 million. Up to this point, the State of Washington—this is money on which the legislature in the State of Washington has to act; they take that money and spend it on unemployment benefits—so far has only used about $3.5 million of the $167 million.

Earlier, the Senator from Massachusetts was in the Senate discussing with the Senator from Washington, saying it is difficult to access. Massachusetts has used every dollar they were given at that time—every dollar. So the Senator from Washington, the sponsor of this amendment, her own State has not used the money the Federal Government has made available to them. It seems to me they ought to at least use that money to help the people in their own State.

Also, we had the Workforce Reinvestment Act that passed unanimously in the Senate. This act would help about 900,000 people in the United States to be retrained for new jobs. The other side is filibustering the appointment of conferees. We need to complete that bill if we want to help those people out of work get retrained so we can get them into other jobs.

Mr. ENSIGN. I yield.

Mr. NICKLES. I will not concede it is enough. There is no incentive to get out and find that job, to make sure you get a job, to make sure you can take care of your family.

Tradition has shown—and we saw this in the 1990s—when this program stopped in the 1990s, the unemployment rate declined by almost one percentage point because a lot of people went out and found jobs. In other words, the more you pay people not to work, the less inclined they are to work. There is a direct relationship. So, hold on, at some point, draw this program to a conclusion.

We are saying keep the 26 week State program, keep the permanent Federal program for high unemployment States, those States that are really suffering through economic decline. But for the rest of the country, this is not called for. It is not affordable. It will be adding to the deficit. It is out of order as far as the budget is concerned. I will call a point of order on this, but I withhold the vote until all time has expired on both sides. The pending amendment No. 2617 offered by the Senator from Washington increases direct spending in excess of the allocation to the Judiciary Committee. Therefore, I raise a point of order against the amendment pursuant to section 302(f) of the Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator the point of order is not timely. It can be made when all time has expired.

Mr. NICKLES. I will reserve the point and see if additional Senators wish to speak.
Mr. NICKLES. A further clarification. I find it totally unacceptable and I cannot imagine not agreeing to appointing conferees on a bill that will help get people and keep people employed or new job creation was happening. Also, I make an editorial comment. There is way too much of that happening. Our colleagues should be advised, this not agreeing to appointment of conferees is a travesty on the Senate procedures. A situation people think it is commonplace. It is not commonplace in the tradition of the Senate.

Mr. ENSIGN. The Senator from Oklahoma is correct, it is a rarely used tactic from the past that has been used increasingly more. It is obstructing the work of the Senate. I reserve the remainder of my time.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington has 3 minutes 7 seconds and the other side has 2 minutes 3 seconds.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I will take 2 minutes to try to explain for my colleagues that while I have a great deal of respect for both my colleagues on the other side of the aisle as they argue their points, obviously, we all hope for a better economy; we all hope things are going to get better.

I have some experience with these issues. I have been in the private sector myself, been part of an organization that was about job creation, been part of an industry that has great hope for the future.

The question is whether we want to take stimulus out of the economy by denying people unemployment benefits.

I will not debate the chairman of the Budget Committee about his budget point of order, but I will say most Americans know that they pay into a trust fund through their employers, and those funds are available at the Federal level in a trust fund for this program. So you can call it what you want as it relates to the Budget Act; these dollars are in a trust fund, paid into by employers on behalf of employees, and those funds can only be used for this purpose.

We can decide we do not want to use them because we think the economy is getting better. That is what the other side has done. Unfortunately, that is not what the administration is willing to own up to. Basically, it will not promise job growth after issuing a report saying there will be 2.6 million jobs. And the other side will not own up to the need for job growth or own up to helping unemployed workers.

The last Republican administration took the same problem and had a different outcome. It stepped up its efforts. Even though unemployment was dropping, even though the number of unemployed was month by month by month, dropping, and even though employment or new job creation was happening, the first Bush administration said, we believe 9 more months of unemployment benefits is needed.

I am only asking for 6 months today. I ask my colleagues to take that into consideration when they are thinking about all the economic assistance we could be providing to the American people. To say the tax cut is working. Great. Then ask the President to stick by his economic plan of 2.6 million jobs.

Mr. NICKLES. I am finding out more about this amendment, and the more I find out, the less I like it. The sponsor of the amendment has written it in a way that her State receives extra benefits that most States do not. So this is not a simple extension. It is a simple extension, except a few States will get additional high unemployment assistance.

I am bewildered. I came to the floor and thought it was a simple extension. It is not. It rewrites the definition of high unemployment. It changes the criteria and benefits for the State of Washington, and a probably one or two other States. The State of Washington has money on the table that we have already appropriated that the State legislature did not use, as the Senator from Nevada alluded to.

One final note. We discontinued the Federal temporary assistance program in the early 1990s when the unemployment rate was at 6.4 percent. The unemployment rate today is 5.6 percent. It is much lower. It is time to say, let's go back to the program that has permanent extended benefits only for high-unemployment States, not for every State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, I will wrap up my remarks. I have a couple comments.

First of all, the economy is improving now, it is not just going to improve in the future. We are in the middle of a recovery. We just had the strongest quarter of GDP growth in 20 years. Jobs are being created.

Payroll versus household—I do not know how many times we have to say it, but self-employed people count. They count in the household survey. Over 2 million jobs have been produced within the last year. When you count the households and all those self-employed people, those jobs should count in what we are talking about here.

If somebody lost their job and then started their own company, that should count as a job. And that is what a lot of people have done. We know incredible success stories of when people have lost their jobs and then started their own companies.

Mr. President, this is time to end this continued unemployment benefit extension; this billion-dollar-a-month program and encourage people to go to work.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator from Nevada that all his time has expired.

The Senator from Washington has 34 seconds.

The Senator from Washington.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, I think the point is clear; and that is, this side of the aisle believes the American workers, who have lost their jobs through no fault of their own, should be provided assistance is on the upswing in America so we can move further along this path and so that stimulus is still in the economy.

That has been the result in the past two administrations. The last Bush administration believed in this, and now, somehow, we want to forget that economic success. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, the amendment No. 2617 offered by the Senator from Washington increases direct spending in excess of the allocation to the Judiciary Committee. Therefore, I raise a point of order against the amendment pursuant to section 302(f) of the Budget Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, pursuant to section 904 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, I move to waive the applicable sections of that act for purposes of the pending amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, pursuant to the unanimous consent agreement, I now ask unanimous consent that this amendment be set aside, and we will now move to the issue on voting rights.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there an objection?

Hearing none, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

AMENDMENT NO. 2626

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, shortly the majority leader will send an amendment to the desk to provide for a permanent extension of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. This was one of the truly landmark pieces of legislation in American history.

Last Congress, Senator Dodd and I spearheaded, along with Senator Boxer, what became a 2-year quest to reform the way elections are conducted in this country. Senator Dodd was correct in saying the election reform legislation we passed was the most important civil rights bill of this century, the 21st century.

With the support of 92 Members of this Chamber, we were successful in protecting the rights of all Americans—all Americans—to cast a vote and have it counted, but to do so only once. Gone will be the days of dogs and dead people registering and voting, and so, too, will be the days of faulty equipment and being turned away at the polls. Now the majority leader shortly will offer an amendment which makes permanent the most important civil rights bill of the previous century, the 20th century.

If I may, let me recall a personal experience I had during that period in the 1960s that is incredibly impressed upon my mind. The day was August 28, 1963. It was the day Martin Luther King Jr. made that “I Have A Dream” speech from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. The Mall was crowded with folks from all across the Capitol Hill all the way down to the Lincoln Memorial. And in that crowd I found myself. I was there the day of the March on Washington and the day of the “I Have A Dream” speech. Unfortunately, I could not hear it because I was so far down the Mall, and there were so many people I did not hear the speech. But you had the sense, if you were in the crowd that day, and sympathetic with the effort to get voting rights, public accommodations, and all the other things that were going on in the presence of one of those seminal moments in American history.

Of course, we now all reflect on that day. August 28, 1963, with great reverence, and Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.’s words are remembered as some of the great speeches in American history, delivered that day on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, August 28, 1963. I will always remember that I had an opportunity to be a part of that most important day.

A couple years after that, we passed the Voting Rights Act of 1965. There were three things that march was about: public accommodation, passed in 1964; voting rights, which passed in 1965; and fair housing, 1968. But voting, of course, is the most important in a democracy.

Over the years, the Voting Rights Act has successfully addressed truly egregious problems which existed at that time. Fortunately, though, the pattern of the Voting Rights Act is to not make it permanent and, once again, it is set to expire in 2007.

The protections in the Voting Rights Act are, frankly, too important to provide on only a temporary basis, and that is the reason the majority leader will be offering shortly his amendment to make the Voting Rights Act permanent.

The majority leader, in fact, just within the last couple of weeks organized a civil rights pilgrimage which was attended by a number of our colleagues on both sides of the aisle. My wife Elaine and I went to part of this 3-day pilgrimage that began in Alabama and ended in Nashville, with the dedication of the Civil Rights Room of the Nashville Public Library, which is replete with photographs of the lunch counter sit-ins in Nashville in the 1960s, which led to the peaceful integration of Nashville during that period.

The meaningful experience for all of us who participated, at the majority leader’s request, in this pilgrimage, Congressman John Lewis was along, one of the great heroes of the civil rights movement. We talked about August 28, 1963. He got to speak. He was the youngest speaker on the podium that day. Young John Lewis was there and thrilled to have an opportunity to speak, at age 23 or 22, on the same day and the same platform as Rev. Martin Luther King.

I can think of no better way to memorialize our commitment to a free and equal society than the adoption of the Frist amendment. This amendment makes this truly an important piece of legislation permanent, providing a clear message from the Senate that we stand committed to not only the protection of civil rights but also to the preservation of those rights as well.

Some may suggest this action is premature. But how can the law of the land for 39 years be premature? Further, the language of the amendment is abundantly clear: “the provisions of this section shall not expire.” Let me repeat, in the powerful words of Selma’s Edmund Pettus Bridge where almost 40 years ago Congressman Lewis had led marchers in the name of voting rights for all.

The stories were powerful. They end in stories of the beatings and the suffering, and they faced the hatred with the power of compassion and love.

Their courage captured a victory that has been to the benefit of millions today, not just for African Americans but for all others as well. I was deeply moved by their courage and their sacrifice at the time, and I am grateful for their service.

This year, the 39th anniversary of the Voting Rights Act occurs. That act enshrined fair voting practices for all Americans. The act reaffirms the 15th amendment to the Constitution and prohibits individuals and governments from sabotaging the ability of African-American citizens to vote.

Troy Cottom, one of the participants with Congressman Lewis and I, who ran the Citizenship Education Project of the Southern Christian Leadership Council with Andrew Young, remarked that she remembers when voting registration offices were open only when most African Americans were working during that time of day. Rev. Bernard Lafayette, who was also with us, another great civil rights leader, remembers routine harassment at the registration office, such as being required, to interpret, certain sections of the U.S. Constitution or— and his words are so vivid in my mind—being required to give the number of bubbles in a bar of soap.

Clearly this was wrong. It was ugly, and it was unconstitutional. That is why the Congress moved to pass the Voting Rights Act of 1965, to once and for all protect the right of every American to vote.

The Voting Rights Act also includes section 4, and it will be up for reauthorization in 2007. President Reagan reauthorized it for 25 years in 1982. Section 4 is the section that contains the temporary preclearance provision that applies to certain States: Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, and parts of Alaska, Arizona, Hawaii, Idaho, and North Carolina. These States must submit any new changes in voting procedures to the Department of Justice for preclearance and, if the Department of Justice concludes that the change weakens the voting strength of minority voters, it can refuse to approve the change.

Sec. 3 provides an important measure of assurance that the full force of the U.S. Government stands behind voting rights for all Americans. That is why Senator MCCONNELL and I today are offering an amendment to permanently reauthorize Section 4 of the Voting Rights Act. With or without section 4, every American has the right to vote. That will never change. However, Senator MCCONNELL and I want to make clear that America will never regain the momentum of the civil rights movement. We don’t want anyone to fear that their right to vote will ever be taken away. Those shameful days are over.

Some of the heroes of the civil rights movement have endorsed this particular amendment. Congressman John Lewis supports it.

Rev. Bernard Lafayette, who joined Congressman Lewis and I—actually Bernard Lafayette went with us on our pilgrimage last week, but also he and John Lewis were together at that fateful time in 1965 for the march in Selma. His words were this amendment would be an “important psychological and political victory for democracy.”

It is my fervent hope that one day soon racism and discrimination will be totally a thing of the past. Until that time, it is critical that the Justice Department retain this preclearance authority to review changes to State voting requirements, not only to allay fears that might arise but also to ensure our progress to date.

I do hope all of my colleagues will join me in ensuring the Federal Government will do all it can to protect the right to vote for all Americans. I ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle for their support of this amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I commend Majority Leader Frist for his strong statement and commitment of ensuring that the Voting Rights Act, which is of fundamental and key importance in terms of what American democracy is all about, is something that we see and will extend it and that he is fully committed to working in every possible way to make that commitment come true. I also commend my friend and colleague from Kentucky, Senator McConnell, for expressing similar sentiments. But this is not the best way to achieve that goal.

What is important to come out of this debate is that the Senate, as an institution, is firmly committed, as we hear from the majority leader and from the leadership from that side, to making sure we continue the Voting Rights Act. The real question is, How is the best way to make sure that is possible? I wanted to dwell on how we addressed the public accommodations laws and offered the amendment to eliminate the poll tax, and it was defeated. I was here in 1965. I am very familiar with the weeks we spent on that bill to actually get the Voting Rights Act. I was on the Justice Committee in 1982 and 1983. I listened to the Republican Attorney General William French Smith—I can remember it almost as if it were yesterday—because the extension of the Voting Rights Act had been offered by myself and my wonderful friend and a great Senator, a Republican Senator, Senator Mathias. We had 32 votes. The Reagan administration was opposed to extending the Voting Rights Act. That is the history.

Until the Representatives passed the Voting Rights Act overwhelmingly, we were unable to get to 50 votes and get a majority of the Judiciary Committee to vote to pass that out. It was only in the final hours actually that we were able to accept what was the Dole amendment.

Those who are interested in looking at the history, we were able to get up to more than a veto-proof majority, and President Reagan signed the bill. This is not an issue to be lightly dealt with. This right to vote is a core issue in our country. We enshrined slavery into the Constitution. We fought a civil war to free ourselves from the pains of discrimination. It was Dr. King, quite frankly, who awakened the conscience of the Nation and the Nation came together and we saw the great progress that was made in the early 1960s to move us ahead with voting rights and public accommodations. Then Congress passed the Housing Act which really did not do a great deal in housing until actually the 1988 act.

This has been a long march, as the Senators have pointed out. We have to ask ourselves whether now is the time to take this action.

Let me read into the RECORD the letter I have received from the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights. I read it at this time.

On behalf of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, the Nation’s oldest, largest, and most diverse civil and human rights coalition, we write to express our opposition to the amendment by Majority Leader Frist to the protection of the Lawful Voting Rights Act. We believe that provisions such as these survive constitutional scrutiny.

The Supreme Court has made it clear in recent years that it will require Congress to establish a detailed record through hearings and legislative findings in order to ensure that provisions such as these survive constitutional scrutiny.

Therefore, while we plan to strongly support the reauthorization of these important provisions, we urge you to vote no on the Frist amendment.

The reasons for this urging are the relevant parts of this letter which have strong justification, given holdings by the Supreme Court on other actions that the Congress has taken in trying to expand rights and liberties for American citizens, and which have been struck down.

Time in and time out and time and again the courts have referred to the legislative record that has been made on the Voting Rights Act. I remember it. I was a member of the Judiciary Committee. I remember the days and months of hearings and testimony, an extraordinary record was made, unparalled in recent history. Justifying that this act, respected by the Supreme Court. And we are going to say that last night at 11 o’clock the Senate agreed to take up an amendment with a 1-hour time limitation that is going to extend this, and the possibility of the Supreme Court looking back, when it is challenged—as we know it will be challenged—at the legislative history, the background, and they will find we had 1 hour of debate on the floor of the Senate and put at risk the Voting Rights Act.

There are some—not the Senator from Tennessee, the majority leader, or the Senator from Kentucky, but there are those who want to see this under mined. We know that. We have to be guarded against this possibility. Voting rights are too important to risk it.

Those families, those individuals, those Americans who are concerned about the issue of voting rights and in so many instances have been denied the right to vote and whose families have been denied the right to vote and have suffered, and in some instances have friends and family members who lost their lives in the struggle for civil
Mr. CRAIG. Might I inquire how much time is remaining on either side? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has 16 minutes and the Senator from Massachusetts has about 16 minutes 40 seconds.

Mr. CRUZ. Might I inquire of the Senator from Massachusetts if he has anyone further who wishes to speak in opposition to the Frist amendment?

Mr. CRUZ. Fine. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has the floor. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, we have to understand, as I think all of us do, that obviously the underlying legislation is important. I have spoken on this issue. I take strong exception to what is special interest legislation, singling out a particular industry from liability. That is important. The provisions that have been debated earlier this afternoon on the concealable weapons are very important as well in terms of safety and security. We debated the armor-piercing bullet. That is important in terms of lives and family. When we are talking now about the right to vote and ensuring the right to vote, this reaches the core value of our society and what this Nation is all about. We know the history of our Nation. I mentioned very briefly slavery was enshrined in the Constitution. We fought a civil war in order to free ourselves from it. But it was only in the early 1960s that we began to make the real progress. One important aspect of all of those kinds of civil rights was the right to vote and the extension of that right and the elimination of the poll tax, the literacy tests, all of the other kinds of tests that were put up there. This country has reminded once again about the importance of the right to vote in the recent Presidential elections where we saw this enormous fascist that took place in the State of Florida, the future of this country ultimately being decided by the Supreme Court of the United States rather than the hands of the American people.

So the American people understand the importance. It is almost like a sacred right. If we were to talk about sacred rights in terms of what this society and country is about, it is about the right to vote. Nothing else is possible unless we have the right to vote, guaranteed to all of those citizens in our country who are eligible to have that right. It is fundamental to everything else this country is about.

We know it is being challenged and we know there are many who would set it aside. We have seen that in recent times. We have seen the threat to the right to vote. Even after we understand some of the difficulties we had in the last Presidential election, we have seen the difficulty we have had in this body and around the States to make sure we are not going to have that problem again and again. We have not solved the problems we had, but we have to preserve it and protect it and we cannot tamper with this very important and significant responsibility we have. That is why I am instructed, under more careful consideration, that Congressman Lewis, having read this and consulted with lawyers and constitutional authorities this afternoon, is opposed to this amendment.

As I say, I am sure the majority leader understands the Supreme Court decision. What that means is it is not to require a substantive record is made, and we do not have that record on the basis of an hour’s debate this afternoon.

The recent experience in the courts, in the Supreme Court decision of Nevada Department of Human Resources v. Gibbs, and City of Burns v. Florida, show the Court will require a substantive legislative record when reviewing any substantial challenge to the provisions made permanent by this record. That is the holding of the Supreme Court, that they will require a substantial legislative record.

We do not have a substantial legislative record. That is not part of this debate. As a result, the Senate should take every necessary step to develop that substantial record that will ensure any amendment will withstand the constitutional scrutiny.

I want to reassure the majority leader and my friend from Kentucky that we on the Judiciary Committee will work eagerly with the leadership on the other side to make sure when we come to grips with this issue, when we come to the Senate floor and we have the full kind of debate and discussion, it will have the kind of background, experience, record, testimony, and extensive, exhaustive historical context so it will meet any possible challenge before the Supreme Court.

We do not have that. According to constitutional authority, we are risking not only the provisions we are talking about but the underlying legislation. That is a risk this Senator is not prepared to support. So I respect and admire the motives that have inspired our colleagues and friends to offer this amendment, but I have to indicate virtually unequivocally that none of those who have benefited from the Voting Rights Act are in strong opposition to this amendment and have instructed me to make their positions clear to the membership of the Senate.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition? The Senator from Idaho.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE S1653

Am I correct that this is a Frist amendment to this bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct. The majority leader offered the amendment.

Mr. DODD. The Frist amendment is amending the Voting Rights Act; is that correct? It would make the preclearance and minority language provisions of the Voting Rights Act permanent; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is the Chair's understanding.

Mr. DODD. I thank the Chair very much for that.

First let me express my gratitude to the majority leader for having this interesting interest in this. As someone who for the last several years, since the election of 2000, has spent a great deal of time on the conduct of Federal elections, I worked closely with Mr. McCurdy, a very good friend of Missouri and Congressman Bob Ney of Ohio, who chairs the House committee and has jurisdiction over Federal elections over in the other Chamber, along with a number of other people. There were a lot of work involved in this, but we were able to put together the HAVA Act, the Help America Vote Act. It is in the view of many the first civil rights legislation of the 21st century. Some have called it the most significant legislation affecting the right to vote since the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Certainly, one of the issues we looked at and discussed rather briefly was the issue of the resubordination of the Voting Rights Act when it comes to language minorities. But when we were dealing with that bill, we did not vote to make permanent those provisions. And for good reason.

This is a very important part of the Voting Rights Act, these language minority and preclearance provisions. It is hardly the place, I suggest, with all due respect to those who are interested in this, as a floor amendment to any bill people are on a bill addressing the issue of guns, and rather suddenly we are asked to permanently change one of the most profoundly important laws in our nation.

Just to cite one example to my colleagues, if we adopt this today—there is a group very much in the news at this very hour. And that is the people of Haiti. Now, there is a substantial population in the State of Florida people who are formerly from Haiti, Haitians. If this language is adopted, some have raised concerns that it could have the effect of making it more difficult for Americans of Haitian background, who do not speak English as a first language, to obtain the voting information and technologies to which they might otherwise be entitled and which they might require in order to cast a ballot. The same concern has been raised about Americans of other backgrounds, as well, for whom English is not a first language.

I don't think there is a single Member in this Chamber who wants to vote today on a provision that could make it more difficult, if not impossible, for thousands if not tens of thousands of citizens, in effect, to vote. But we are told by those who deal in this issue every day that this amendment could have that impact. I am confident that none of us wants to see that happen.

This is hardly the time, place, and manner to make such a profound change in law. Frankly, I don't have a prepared speech. I was just listening to this debate in my office, and having worked on this issue, I know how much time you take to get this right. To come over and have an amendment adopted that could permanently exclude a substantial part of our citizenry from minority language provisions, I don't think we want to be on record on that today.

These provisions of the Voting Rights Act, by the way, doesn't expire until the year 2007. We have 3 years. I don't think it is to get something done when you can get it done. But the normal way you proceed is to sit down, work these things out, listen to people, and examine whether or not certain groups qualify or should qualify. But I don't think you could exclude from the Voting Rights Act potentially countless people who have come to this country for reasons with which we are all unfortunately too familiar, and who clearly qualify as language minorities.

I, for one, cannot vote for this. I wouldn't want to be on record supporting this. I would like to work with the majority leader and others who would like to figure out how to get this done. I will do my best.

The Leadership Conference on Civil Rights has stated as much themselves in a letter they sent to the majority leader. It was dated today, to give you some idea of how fast this is moving. They say in their concluding paragraph:

While we plan to strongly support the reauthorization of these important provisions, we urge you to vote no on the Frist amendment. The reasons are that this is a complicated process that takes some time to make sure you are including those who deserve to be included and excluding those who may not. We will do our best to make sure that is included under the language minority provisions.

They believe it is premature. Their critical analysis of the issues surrounding the preclearance and minority language provisions has not been fully examined and analyzed. I hope no one would suggest otherwise. A floor amendment is hardly the place.

If you hold a vote and exclude multiple language minority groups because you've made this law permanent after 2007, I think you would ask your leadership to pause a minute and analyze whether this is correct. If it is correct, should we amend this language? Should we include them? If not, why not? Shouldn't there be a more thoughtful way to proceed on a matter of this import?

There is no other right, in my view, that is as important as the right to vote, and a right upon which all other rights depend. It is the central ingredient for our democracy—the right of people to vote.

We have understood over the years that there are those who come to our shores and become wonderful Americans who have language barriers. If those people are excluded from the process of engaging in electing Federal officials and electing the leadership of this country, then we are not fulfilling our obligation historically to see to it that this basic, fundamental right is being protected.

I am very much interested in seeing us make permanent, if we can, these language minority and preclearance provisions of the Voting Rights Act. I would like to do so. I am sure this is far more deliberate than a 1-hour debate on the floor of the Senate dealing with a gun manufacturer bill. This is not the way we ought to be doing business on something as fundamental as the right to vote.

I prefer not to vote no on this. I would prefer this amendment be withdrawn and then resubmit it under proper circumstances so we can have the opportunity to do the analysis necessary to arrive at right conclusions.

I am the only one speaking about this at this particular moment. I don't know what the time frame is. Is there a limited time of debate? I make an inquiry of the Chair.

Are we going to vote on this matter in a few minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's side has 3 minutes 16 seconds remaining. The Senator from Idaho has 12 minutes 52 seconds remaining. The Senator is running out of time according to which 1 hour was allowed for debate of this amendment.

Mr. DODD. Do I understand that at the conclusion of roughly 15 or 16 minutes we will then vote on amending major provisions of the Voting Rights Act?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. After voting on the Cantwell amendment, under the previous order, the Senator will vote on this and resubmit it under unanimous consent agreement according to which 1 hour was allowed for debate of this amendment.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I urge colleagues to think twice about this. It is the Voting Rights Act of 1965 that we are talking about. We are talking about amending this act permanently and possibly excluding major ethnic groups in this country permanently. Please. This issue requires more thought than it can be given here. This is not the way to go about changing one of the most important laws ever enacted in our great country. We are not in effect tell our colleagues that they have 15 minutes to decide on whether or not potentially millions of Haitians, Africans, Asians, Hispanics, and Europeans would be permanently excluded from key protections of the Voting Rights Act when we have 3 more years to make that decision.

To do this on an amendment to a gun manufacturer bill is stunning to me. Why would we take something as critical and important as the Voting Rights Act and throw it on the table without further consideration and thought?

I urge my colleagues in the time they have to please talk to the majority leader and say we can’t pull this back by unanimous consent and let those of us who spend time on these issues sit and work on this. This is no way to be dealing with millions of people in our country who deserve the right to vote and to be protected properly under language minority and preclearance provisions.

I make that plea to my colleagues. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I think all of us prefer when we deal with certain subjects that all amendments to the underlying subject be germane. That isn’t the way the Senate works. Certainly my colleague from Connecticut knows there are other amendments being discussed today that by no stretch of the imagination are germane.

But this is a critical issue. It is timely. It is necessary. We speak to it. That is why the majority leader brought it to the floor. It is critical to our country that we continue to show our openness as we reach out and become inclusive with all of those who as citizens have the right to participate in the electoral process. That is exactly what we are about.

We have one colleague who still wishes to speak. He will be here in moments.

How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 11 minutes 57 seconds, and counting.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I will put us into a quorum call for a few moments anticipating his arrival.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I join in support of this important amendment for permanent extension of the Voting Rights Act. Voting is fundamental in our democracy. It has yielded enormous returns.

We know of the historical discrimination against minorities, against African Americans.

The essence of a democracy is a free electorate. Voting rights are very important. It ought to be on our books on a permanent basis.

I think it is so fundamental that it doesn’t take long to express the underlying reasons for its importance and the fundamental reason why it should be in existence of the law on a permanent basis.

I support this amendment.

In the absence of any other Senator seeking recognition, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, how much time remains on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 6 minutes 51 seconds.

Mr. CRAIG. I yield the remainder of our time to the Senator from the State of Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. CORNHELL. Mr. President, I come to the Chamber in a hurry because it has come to my attention that this amendment, which is perhaps in a technical sense not germane to the main bill in the Senate—but I understand there is an amendment that it could be considered and would not be out of order—but my concern is this: The Voting Rights Act of 1965 was an important landmark in the Nation’s history. It was passed by the Congress in an attempt to make sure that no person, regardless of race, regardless of color, was denied their right, their fundamental right to vote. This was long overdue, very important, and certainly a result to which we all continue to aspire.

Perhaps Members of the Senate who have, like me, not had a chance to study this amendment in great detail, or perhaps what the ramifications of this amendment are, might be interested to know a few facts; that is, that the Voting Rights Act does not apply to all the States in the Nation. In other words, we are being asked to extend the Voting Rights Act only as it applies to a handful of primarily Southern States.

In 1965, Congress made it sense to apply the Voting Rights Act to just a handful of States that historically and, yes, tragically, had a history of denying minorities their rights to be American citizens and enjoy the franchise unimpeded by those who would deny them that right. But this is not 1965.

This is the year 2004.

If, indeed, this presumption, in essence, that says in order to change the way in which you conduct your elections, before you redistrict your State and electoral districts, you must seek permission from the Department of Justice, if indeed, that is still good policy for the States that are covered by the Voting Rights Act, I submit it is good policy for the Nation as a whole. I doubt in all seriousness that many Members of this body understand what they are being asked to do, which is to extend this act only to a handful of Southern States.

As I say, if it is good policy, I believe it should be extended to the entire Nation. Obviously, we have come a long way in this country since 1965. Some may argue that some States should have a presumption of guilt while others should have a presumption of innocence. But, indeed, I believe there ought to be a uniform policy that applies to the entire Nation when we are talking about something as important as voting rights and when we are talking about something as important as protecting the voting rights of all Americans, including minorities who have, in fact, suffered discrimination in the past.

I raise the question for my colleagues, those who are listening, to ask whether we truly understand what the implications are of this amendment and how it would affect the entire country, and how in practice, if I understand the amendment correctly, it would only apply to a handful of States. There is an agreement under which second-degree amendments are out of order, or I would offer an amendment to apply to the entire Nation, if that were permitted. But under this arrangement, under this agreement, I can merely ask the question for my colleagues to ponder if this policy should apply nationwide and not just to a handful of States, including my State of Texas.

I yield back any remaining time to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank my colleague from Texas.

I inquire as to the time remaining on both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has 1 minute 42 seconds, and the Senator from Massachusetts has 1 minute 10 seconds.

Mr. CRAIG. The Senator from Idaho is prepared to yield back. The Senator from Massachusetts is prepared to do so.

Mr. REID. He is not ready yet.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield back his time?

Mr. CRAIG. I do not.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I yield back time on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada yields back remaining time on his side.

Mr. CRAIG. I yield back the remainder of my time. The unanimous consent we are operating under moves us to two votes, the Cantwell unemployment extension and the Frist voting rights.

Have the yeas and nays been called on both of these amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered on the Cantwell amendment.

Mr. CRAIG. I ask for the yeas and nays on the voting rights amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been requested on the Frist amendment.

Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 2617

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time having expired, the question is on agreeing to the motion to waive the Budget Act with respect to the Cantwell amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado (Mr. CAMPBELL) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. EDWARDS) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote "yea".

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—3

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On this vote, the ayes are 58, the nays are 39.

Three-fifths of the Senators duly chosen and sworn not having voted in the affirmative, the motion is rejected. The point of order is sustained, and the amendment fails.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider this vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is recognized.

Ms. CANTWELL. Mr. President, while there were 58 votes—a majority voted for this amendment—we will come back to address this again and again because we are going to see job growth is not happening at the pace people believe. While we have postponed it today, thinking the UI trust fund is not being used as part of our deficit, the UI trust fund should go to these unemployed workers. We will be back to debate this issue again.

I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 2626 WITHDRAWN

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment No. 2626, which was to be considered next, be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for his superb statement, and I also thank the Senator from Kentucky for his comments in support of the extension of the Voting Rights Act. He made an eloquent statement and sent a message which I know is well received across this country. As a member of the Judiciary Committee, I want to work with him and the Senator from Kentucky to try to achieve what he wants, and that is the permanent extension of the Voting Rights Act. We will work closely with him to try to get it done in a timely way.

I thank him very much for focusing attention on this issue. I am grateful to him for his leadership.

Mr. President, on a final point, I draw the attention of the Senate to this important unemployment compensation. A wide majority, a broad majority of Republicans and Democrats in the Senate voted for extension of unemployment benefits. I commend the Senator from Washington for her leadership on this issue. I know she believes, as I do, that this is not the end of the fight but just one of the innings of fight. I thank her for her leadership.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, briefly, I also thank the majority leader and others for agreeing to vitate the vote on the Voting Rights Act. I underscore the comments made by the senior Senator from Massachusetts to work with the majority leader and others interested in getting this done. It can be done rather simply. We do need to build a record on the issue. That is exactly the point.

I commend the majority leader for moving on this. We do not want to wait until the year 2007. I thank him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. We will move on now, under our unanimous consent request, to a Mikulski amendment, a Frist amendment, a Corzine amendment, a Frist amendment, and a Bingaman amendment. At this point, I do not think we are quite ready to move on, so I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I have spoken to the manager of the bill for the majority and spoken to the majority leader. It is their intention, and I think it is a good idea, to have Senator MIKULSKI finish her amendment. She has 40 minutes. Following that, there will be an amendment offered by the majority. When we complete the debate on those two matters, we would vote on those two matters. We would, in fact, have two votes, and they would be stacked. Following that, we would again look at the schedule and see where we are.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland.

AMENDMENT NO. 2627

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I have an amendment concerning the DC sniper victims, and I send it to the desk on behalf of myself, Senators SARRANES, LAUTENBERG, CORZINE, and CLINTON.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maryland [Ms. MIKULSKI], for herself, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. CORZINE, and Mrs. CLINTON, proposes an amendment numbered 2627.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To exempt lawsuits involving a shooting victim of John Allen Muhammad or Lee Boyd Malvo from the definition of qualified civil liability action)

On page 8, line 22, strike "or".

On page 9, line 2, strike the period and insert:

"(vi) an action involving a shooting victim of John Allen Muhammad or Lee Boyd Malvo from the definition of qualified civil liability action"

On page 9, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:

"(VI) an action involving a shooting victim of John Allen Muhammad or Lee Boyd Malvo."

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise on behalf of my Maryland constituents and other neighbors across the Potomac to offer an amendment on behalf of the sniper victims. My colleagues might remember that over 1 year ago, the citizens of Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia were terrorized by snipers. Soccer games were cancelled. People were afraid to buy gas and terrified to go into a Home Depot. What was happening was that 10 innocent people were killed while they were mowing their lawn or getting gas or while a new bride was going shopping at Home Depot to gussy up her home, or while a driver getting ready to do his duty. These families have experienced tremendous loss, and the Nation mourned with them.

We so thank our law enforcement agencies for helping us catch the snipers and the judicial system that is working to try them, but now we also need to make sure that we protect the victims and the victims' families.

I bring to the attention of my colleagues that the legislation Congress is considering now could inflict further pain on the families. It could slam the courthouse door on the families of the sniper victims and on all Americans who believe they are harmed by negligent actions related to guns. It gives gun dealers and manufacturers a free pass, even to families and survivors from holding irresponsible stores accountable if they are negligent.

It actually would prohibit these families from going to court to seek redress. It actually prohibits them from letting a jury of their peers decide if a gun store or a manufacturer was negligent.

If this legislation passes, one could still go to court over a toy gun but not a real gun. I think that is wrong.

My amendment is to make sure the sniper victims and their families have a right to go to court. Before I tell my colleagues about those families, let me tell my colleagues what my amendment will do. My amendment protects the legal rights of the families. It allows current and future cases by sniper victims and their families to proceed.

Currently, one case is pending in Washington State court. It creates an exemption to the bill text of S. 1805 for all cases involving a victim of John Allen Muhammad or Lee Boyd Malvo. This is a very narrowly drawn bill. It does not exempt any other cases. It does not impact on any of the legal standards of the bill, and it does not prevent a court from dismissing a case if there is no negligence.

What it does is create an exemption only, and I emphasize “only,” for cases involving a victim of John Allen Muhammad or Lee Boyd Malvo. This is the Maryland-DC-Virginia sniper case. In no way want to create any ambiguity in this bill or create a loophole in this bill. But this is a very serious matter. I am here in behalf of those families.

Conrad Johnson, who was the snipers' last victim, I remember hearing the news when he was shot at a bus stop in Montgomery County. He was killed by the sniper just as he was getting ready to get on his route. He was so beloved in that community that 2,000 people came to his funeral. He drove this route for so many years. They loved him. Thirty members of his family gathered at the hospital after he was shot. He was always finding ways to take care of his family and his community. Conrad Johnson was one of the many Marylanders whose families are still grieving because of this reign of terror. Five Maryland families lost their loved ones in the sniper's first 24 hours.

Today I stand here for the rights of those families, to have their day in court: the rights of Jim Martin's family; he was shot when he stopped to buy groceries for his church program; James “Sonny” Buchanan, a landscape architect who was soon to be married; or the husband and the 7-year-old son of Sarah Ramos, who was shot 25 minutes later as she sat on a bench waiting for a ride to go to her babysitting job; also for the little boy named Iran Brown, who was shot in the chest as he was dropped off to go into middle school. Thanks to a guardian angel, it was his aunt, a nurse, who was with him that day when he was dropped off so she could sweep him up and be with him as he lay hemorrhaging in the hospital. Thank God, for the genius of American medicine that little boy is alive.

Family after family has endured incredible pain. Also, there are other cases that are pending. These families have been through so much they can never recover their tremendous loss. We owe it to them to make sure they have their day in court. That is why my amendment is offered to protect them, and that is why it is in such plain and simple language. It is limited to victims of John Muhammad and Lee Boyd Malvo. I don't need any legal experts to interpret this amendment. No judge has to decide if the case fits one exemption or another. That is because, under my amendment, any case involving them must proceed.

This is very serious. When we look at the matter, there is evidence that indicates the snipers bought something called a Bushmaster from the Bull's Eye Shooter Supply in Tacoma, WA. The Bull's Eye Shooter Supply Company had lost the assault rifle used by the sniper victim. In 3 years, it managed to lose 237 other guns. Imagine a gunshop that not only couldn't find records on this gun, it had lost 237 guns.

I am not going to prejudice cases, but I am going to point fingers. Something was terribly, terribly wrong at this place.

When we look at this, Bull's Eye could not account for 238 guns. Bull's Eye's missing gun rate was greater than 99 percent of all Federal arms licenses. Eighty percent of all dealers that lost a gun a year can provide records to account for every one of them. Why couldn't that happen there?

There is item after item about this case. When you look at Malvo and look at Muhammad, what you find is the snipers obtained a one-shot, one-kill assault weapon that was from the Bull's Eye Shooter.

When we look at their records, we find that Muhammad was under a domestic violence protective order and Malvo was both a juvenile and an illegal alien.

How did they get their hands on these guns? That is for law enforcement to decide. That is how our legal process should follow its regular order, to seek redress. But this points out a set of terrible situations that led to the death of these 10 people in our region. This is why I am offering this amendment. After the deaths of these wonderful people, their families should have redress in court. The boy who was shot in his chest and is still recovering, though at school, should have redress. I am going to be very clear that in this bill we do not create ambiguity, confusion, or something that would derail this. I urge the Senate to adopt my amendment and to allow the cases affecting this particular group of people to be able to proceed without prejudice or without any unintended consequences of this legislation.

I yield the floor and reserve such time as I have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. CRAIG. Does the Senator have other speakers?

Ms. MIKULSKI. The Senator does have other speakers.

Mr. CRAIG. Do you wish to proceed with them?

Ms. MIKULSKI. I yield to the Senator from Illinois, an outspoken advocate on this issue.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from Maryland.

Those of us working in Washington, DC, remember this sniper incident. Not only do I work here but my daughter lives here with my son-in-law and grandson, and they live in one of the suburbs represented by the Senator from Maryland.

I tell you when these two snipers were moving around the area, ordinary families were living in fear. They had a sniper rifle and they were killing innocent people. Some 13 were killed and 6 were injured. Here are the photos of a few of the victims.

After this terrible sniper incident, we learned there was a gun dealer who could not even account for the gun that was used to kill these innocent people. So the survivors, as well as the Maryland families, came forward and said they wanted to hold that gun dealer accountable in court for irresponsible and reckless conduct in selling firearms, in allowing them to get into the hands of these snipers. That is reasonable for the family to do. It is something I support.

But make no mistake, this bill, S. 1805, slams the courthouse door on these victims and their families. The Senator from Maryland, Ms. MIKULSKI, is standing here, pleading with those who bring the bill forward to keep in mind the sniper victims and their families and give them a chance to have their day in court. If the court decides they don’t have a right to recovery, so be it. But should we pass a law to say these families do not even have a chance to go after the reckless misconduct of these gun dealers that resulted in the deaths of their loved ones?, is what this bill is all about. The Senator from Maryland has dramatized it in terms that everyone who works in this Capitol will understand. The was a time when you couldn’t go home from work, from this building, for fear of being shot in the street. It happened over and over and over again. Why in the world would the Senate pass a bill to insulate this reckless gun dealer from his civil liability for selling these guns? I thank the Senator for her leadership.

Ms. MIKULSKI. I yield such time as he may consume to the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, Senator MIKULSKI is here, doing something that is, unfortunately, necessary because the underlying legislation would cause current pending suits on behalf of the families and the estates of these victims of the sniper to be thrown out of court. That is not only unfortunate but it is unconscionable.

There are arguments that this legislation is crafted so these suits go forward. But that is not the case at all. The two salient facts in the sniper shootings with respect to this legislation are, first, the sniper, Malvo, claims he shoplifted the gun. The storekeeper in claims that he was unaware of these weapons being missing until he was contacted after the shooting by the ATF.

As a result, none of the appropriate exemptions from the preemption to sue will be applicable in this particular situation.

There are two particular exemptions that are often pointed to. One talks about the negligent entrustment, which is a violation of law, and negligence per se. None would apply because it requires the defendant to have knowledge of a violation of the statute or knowledge that something untoward would happen. Under the facts as we know them, the defendant alleges he was unaware of the missing weapons.

In addition, the other exemption would be if there was a violation of Federal and State statute and that violation was the proximate cause, almost directly, substantially cause of the harm caused to the plaintiff.

That, too, can be substantiated. We have a situation where this statute not only does not cover this situation and would require these cases be thrown out of court, but it raises the extraordinary question about what other cases there might be in the future that would cry out for justice, to bring a suit and demand some type of compensation because of negligence caused by a gun dealer, a manufacturer or trade association. They, too, would fall. That would be as compelling as these cases of the Washington area sniper victims.

I commend Senator MIKULSKI for standing up for these families. They are good people. This is a cutout of these cases from law and allowing them to go forward. But it just begs the question of how many other worthy cases will be frustrated by this legislation, if we pass it. I, of course, urge that we do not pass the legislation. But I certainly urge the amendment proposed by Senator MIKULSKI be agreed to.

I yield my time.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, may I inquire as to the time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has 20 minutes, and the Senator from Maryland has 5 minutes.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I will use some of my time at this moment.

At the outset, let me say Senator MIKULSKI and I are best of friends. We appreciate our friendship, and we work closely on a variety of pieces of legislation. There is nothing I would do nor is it expected to do anything to further diminish our relationship.

That is not only unfortunate but it is unconscionable.

What are we trying to do here? What are we trying to do here?

Parties harmed. In other words, did the transferee, the gun dealer, malfunction? Did he break the law? There is a strong appearance that he might have.

No. 2, an action brought against a seller for negligent entrustment or negligent per se.

No. 3, an action in which a manufacturer or a seller of a qualified product knowingly or negligently violated Federal statute applicable to the sale or marketing of a product and the violation was a proximate cause of the harm and for which the relief is sought.

No. 4, an action for breach of contract or warranty in connection with—

And then we go on to deal with basically product liability.

My point is quite simple. I believe we are protecting those families. I would not write the kind of law that is being suggested would be written. What I am concerned about are lawsuits in which we are trying to hold accountable the innocent party—in this case potentially a manufacturer of a product—unless there is criminal intent, or unless they have broken the law.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CRAIG. I can’t yield. My time is limited. I am sorry. The Senator has had time. Let me continue.

That is the sense of the argument we are dealing with here. Negligent entrustment.

In subparagraph (a)(2), the term “negligent entrustment” means the supplying of a qualified product by a supplier for use by another person when the supplier knows or should know—

That is very important.

—the person to whom the product is supplied is likely to and does use the product in a manner involving unreasonable risk of physical injury to the person or to others.

What are we trying to do here?

Again, I have said time and time again over the last 24 hours it is a very narrow exception, but to entrust us to a century of tort law that says innocent parties are not guilty nor should they be swept into lawsuits if they have met certain standards of the law—in this case, licensed gun dealers and manufacturers.

Did the folks up at Bull’s Eye in Tacoma meet those standards? We don’t know. But I will tell you the BATF pulled the license of the gun dealer and recommended felony charges be brought by the Justice Department. This case is maturing at this moment.

What does our bill do? It tries to very narrowly create an environment and an exception.

Let us go to that bill and to page 7. Let me read starting on page 6 of the bill because I think it is important. Many Senators have ignored this in the rhetoric of the day. They shouldn’t ignore it.

In general, the term “qualified civil liability action” means a civil action brought by any person against a manufacturer or seller of a qualified product or a trade association for damages resulting from the criminal or unlawful misuse of a qualified product by a person or a third party but shall not include—

In other words, the exceptions under which the Malvo and Muhammad case can be tried in which those parties the Senator is talking about contain compensation are the following:

1. an action brought against the transferee convicted under section 924 of title 18 United States Code or a comparable or identical State felony law by a party directly harmed by the conduct for which the transferee is convicted.

Parties harmed. In other words, did the transferee, the gun dealer, malfunction? Did he break the law? There is a strong appearance that he might have.

Law enforcement. In other words, did the transferee, the gun dealer, malfunction? Did he break the law? There is a strong appearance that he might have.

As a result, none of the appropriate exemptions from the preemption to sue will be applicable in this particular situation.

There are two particular exemptions that are often pointed to. One talks about the negligent entrustment, which is a violation of law, and negligence per se. None would apply because it requires the defendant to have knowledge of a violation of the statute or knowledge that something untoward would happen. Under the facts as we know them, the defendant alleges he was unaware of the missing weapons.

In addition, the other exemption would be if there was a violation of Federal and State statute and that violation was the proximate cause, almost directly, substantially cause of the harm caused to the plaintiff.

They, too, would fall. That would be as compelling as these cases of the Washington area sniper victims.
it. I am not an attorney, but I have to assume they have a big violation on their hands. If Malvo walks in and pulls a Bushmaster from off the rack and walks out with it and that is not detected, they have a problem on their hands. I believe they have a problem on their hands and they are not detecting it.

The argument is—and some have used it—they do not even make it to the courthouse. That is not a valid statement.

This is a basis from which you argue before the court and a knowledgeable, and I hope trusting, judge will take these evaluations in hand and make the determination that this is not a frivolous or a junk lawsuit; that there is basis, and the reason there is basis is because there has been a clear violation of Federal law.

If there has not been a violation of Federal law, even though many of us can certainly have great concern about the families involved, do we continue to support the go out and harass through the courts legal, law-abiding citizens and producers of a legal product in this country simply because it fits the passion of the day or the politics of the moment? I think not. I don’t think you can do that. The reason there is ambiguity in § 1805 and that section 4 could preempt the ability of these families to bring this case.

The distinguished Senator from Idaho has his opinion. I have my two legal opinions articulated by my esteemed colleague does not hold water. It does not protect the victims of Malvo and Muhammad because it is in such plain English limited to those cases by the name of the perpetrator and predator. This does not create a loophole.

Talk about loophole, talk about the gun shield loophole, talk about all the other loopholes in the gun bills. My amendment does not create a loophole. That is the reason why there is ambiguity in § 1805 and that section 4 could preempt the ability of these families to bring this case.

The distinguished Senator from Idaho has his opinion. I have my two legal opinions, and it clearly his point of view, but he said clearly his point of view, but he said the Senator’s amendment, I guess that is temed colleague does not hold water.

His point and my legal opinions prove the necessity of the amendment, to clear up the ambiguity, end the ambiguity, protect these victims and the families and their right to pursue.

I yield to the Senator from Illinois, a distinguished lawyer himself, to further amplify this argument.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from Maryland.

I say to the Senator from Idaho who stood up here and said he did not believe the survivors of the DC sniper shooting had a right to go to court and therefore he was going to oppose the Senator’s amendment, I guess that is clearly his point of view, but he said just the opposite. He said he reads this law to allow the victims and their families to bring this case.

If that is his opinion, then he ought to accept the amendment from the Senator from Idaho and because that is all she is asking for.

If you do not believe the victims of the DC sniper should have a day in court against the dealer to determine whether or not he is guilty of wrongdoing, then just say it. But if you believe that these sniper victims and their families should have a day in court, for goodness’ sake, accept the amendment of the Senator from Maryland. If you do not, it really tells the story of your kind.

If your bill is going to stop the families and victims of the DC snipers from holding a gun dealer guilty for irresponsible, reckless misconduct, frankly, that is another good reason for us to defeat the bill. Let us stand behind the innocent victims of the DC snipers.

Talk about people who hate guns. I do not hate guns but I hate snipers who shoot children and innocent people on the street and I hate the people who kill them and run away. I think they ought to be held accountable. That is all the Senator from Maryland is asking.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Continuing my argument, there is ambiguity and there is honest disagreement. I know the Senator from Idaho might bring us a CRS opinion saying the cases might survive. My colleague from Rhode Island has an earlier CRS opinion that says the opposite. The point is, there is ambiguity both in the law and in opinions about the law.

My amendment is a simple, straightforward way to clear up the ambiguity and let these cases move forward.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator who is on the floor is now recognized.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Parliamentary inquiry: Did I do something wrong?

Mr. CRAIG. On your topic.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Excuse me, Senator. The Frist-Craig amendment is on what topic, a parlimentary inquiry?

Mr. CRAIG. On your topic.

Ms. MIKULSKI. What is the Frist-Craig amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

AMENDMENT NO. 2628

Mr. CRAIG. I ask that the Mikulski amendment be set aside for the purpose of introduction of an amendment on behalf of Majority Leader Frist and myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG], for Mr. Frist, for himself and Mr. CRAIG, proposes an amendment numbered 2628.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose to amend any lawsuit involving a shooting victim of John Allen Muhammad or John Lee Malvo from the definition of qualified civil liability action that meets certain requirements:
On page 8, line 22, strike ‘‘or’’.
On page 9, line 2, strike the period at the end and insert ‘‘; or’’.
On page 9, between lines 2 and 3, insert the following:
(vi) an action involving a shooting victim of John Allen Muhammad or John Lee Malvo that meets 1 of the requirements under clauses (i) through (v).

Mr. DASCHLE. Reserving the right to object, I will not object, but I am told we have not had the opportunity to see the text of these amendments. If we are going to work in good faith, it is very important that on all of these alternative amendments the text be provided if they are available and certainly before they are offered.

Mr. CRAIG. If the minority leader will yield, it is my fault. I apologize. We will place ourselves in a quorum until they have copies. It is brief and to the point and easy to understand for everyone.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I apologize once again to the Senator from Maryland that the stand-beside amendment I offer in conjunction with hers was not delivered to her. We have a stand-beside Frist-Craig amendment to the Corzine amendment, which may follow immediately. We are copying that now to make sure Senator CORZINE and the other side has a copy of it.

My amendment, as you can see, is really very simple, but it is also extremely important. It is simple in this respect: 55 cosponsors of S. 1805 have cosponsored S. 1805 because of its narrowness, of its cleanliness in the fact that we do not clutter up a lot of laws and we create one very limited but very important exemption, and that is that junk lawsuits filed by a third party cannot reach through and suggest that someone who has a legal product can be held liable for that product unless they have broken the law or a person selling that product is not held liable for that product unless they have broken the law.

My amendment says, in essence, if an action involving a shooting victim of John Allen Muhammad or John Lee Malvo meets any of the exceptions of S. 1805, the action will not be barred by this bill.

Again, what are those exceptions? Well, I have read them earlier. Let me repeat them. They are very clearly outlined in section 4 of the bill, and what we say is:

The term ‘‘qualified civil liability action’’ means a civil action brought by any person against a manufacturer or seller of a qualified product, or a trade association, for damages resulting from the criminal or unlawful misuse of a qualified product by the person or a third party.

In other words, if that third party is a guy who breaks the law, but the seller and the manufacturer are not, then the judge looks at that and makes that determination and says no.

But here is the real situation in Maryland and in Virginia, it is found that:

an action brought against a transferee convicted under section 924(b) of title 18, United States Code, or a comparable or identical felony law, by a party directly harmed by the conduct of which the transferee is so convicted—‘‘Transferee,’’ in this case, in my opinion, at least, is Bull’s Eye. They are the ones responsible for that firearm. They are the ones that would have sold that gun. They were the ones who sold the gun to someone selling that product is not held liable for that product unless they have broken the law.

The third exception that clearly could be applicable, and that my amendment says if found is applicable, in the Maryland and Malvo case:

an action in which a manufacturer or seller of a qualified product violated a State or Federal statute applicable to the sale or marketing of the product, and the violation was a proximate cause of the harm for which relief is sought.

In other words, relief for these families who were the victims of John Muhammad and John Lee Malvo.

I believe it is a clear, clean amendment. I don’t think it is ambiguous at all. It does argue in premise in the law that always must be argued, and that is, did Bull’s Eye break the law? Well, we are investigating that now. Did the manufacturer of the Bushmaster in any way violate the law? That is probably getting investigated, too, although even the Brady Center doesn’t impugn in any way that the manufacturer was involved in this. Those are the facts.

In other words, what I am suggesting by this amendment, what I believe is still clear in 1805, is that we are not exempting the victims of the sniper shootings of DC and the Virginia and Maryland area. It is not our intent to do so. It is our intent to allow them to go to court. It is our intent to allow those deaths to go to court. It is our intent to allow a judge to make a decision based on these exceptions and now the clearly repelled out exceptions in the Frist-Craig amendment as to whether, based on this law, there can be compensation to these families from, in this instance, a dealer and a manufacturer. That is the essence of it. I don’t believe the courthouse door is locked. All attorneys are entitled to their own opinions. Everybody reads the law a bit differently. So is my opinion stronger than your opinion? I know what my intent is. I know what Senator DASCHLE’s intent is. I know our intent is not to lock the courthouse door. We believe we don’t. And it has been thoroughly checked by numerous lawyers. We think our amendment is sound.

I am going to ask the Senate not to gut the underlying 1805 but to vote for the Frist-Craig amendment which will not only strengthen the amendment, strengthen the position but, I believe, fulfill the concern and the arguments of the Senator from Maryland.

I retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho points to every exception because he can’t point to one exception that will clearly establish the right of these plaintiffs to go forward to make their case. The way this legislation is structured, for the qualified civil liability action may not be brought in any Federal or State court. You are thrown out of court unless you can get yourself back in by an exemption. In these cases, you are dismissed. You are thrown out of court because you are out the door. The intent is very clear. It is to stop individuals from suing dealers, manufacturers, and trade associations.
What about these exemptions? The first exemption deals with the transferor or convicted. There have been no charges in Bull’s Eye, no conviction. What happens? The case is already dismissed. Is there language the Senator from Idaho will apply reinstating the case automatically?

The second is a possibility that is negligent entrustment or negligence per se. All of these require knowledge on the part of the defendant. The facts of Bull’s Eye clearly suggest there is no evidence so far presented that the owner knew the gun was shoplifted and, in fact, he alleges he was not aware of any missing weapons until he was confronted by the ATF after the crime. This does not apply.

Finally, there is the violation of a Federal or State statute. The Senator from Idaho often talks about, well, if there is a violation of Federal and State statute, that, of course, allows a person to go forward with this case.

But there are two parts of this test. State or Federal statute violated, and that violation causes proximately, substantially the injury. In effect, what would have to be shown for any type of liability to adhere to the Bull’s Eye case under this arrangement is that he was aware of the missing weapons more than 48 hours before he was confronted by the ATF, and he consciously disregarded his obligation to report not just a missing weapon but the particular weapon that was taken by Malvo. None of these exceptions apply to Bull’s Eye or, if they apply, it is a very tortured reach to make the application.

Then this amendment simply says: Well, if you fall under the statute, you get to use the statute. This is a circular, is a kind way to describe what this is. You could substitute anybody’s name in the United States. It doesn’t have to be John Allen Muhammad or John Lee Malvo. It could be the victim of any criminal today walking around the streets of America with a handgun. Because if you are injured by that individual with a handgun and you fall into these categories, you get to go to court.

But this is an easy amendment because very few people, if any, will qualify under these criteria. That is the whole point of this carefully worded, excruciatingly arcane approach to shutting people out of court. That is what this is about.

Essentially you can’t have it both ways. You can’t stand up here and claim you are protecting the industry from frivolous suits but every suit we bring up is a possible worthy and meritorious suit. Well, of course, that will get into court. Of course, it is one of the exceptions. You don’t get it both ways.

You get it one way in this bill. Innocent people injured by the negligence of dealers, of manufacturers lose. And they win.

We are not just giving out Federal firearms licenses, if this legislation passes. We are giving a license to be negligent and reckless—grossly negligent and grossly reckless. That is what a Federal firearms license means, if this legislation passes.

I yield the floor and retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. REED. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank the Senator for yielding the time to me. I associate myself with the amendment that was initially introduced by my colleague from Maryland, Senator Mikulski. I rise to raise questions about that which is currently now being offered by the Senator from Idaho.

There is no doubt about the appropriateness of the amendment, as it was presented by the Senator from Maryland, because it was her constituents, seven of them, who were shot by the sniper, six of whom died.

For over a month in the fall of 2001, John Muhammad and John Lee Malvo terrorized the Washington metropolitan area through a series of vicious sniper attacks on innocent men, women, and children. In the area, Jonesboro, Md., I mean, you walk outside, you are afraid to pump gas outside, school activities were moved to enclosed areas. Everyone was a target.

As it turned out, there was ample reason to be frightened. From the true crime of Muhammad and Malvo, the snipers used a Bushmaster assault weapon to shoot 33 people in Washington, DC, Maryland, and Virginia. Ten of the 13 died. We have heard the names of those such as Linda Franklin, 47-year-old FBI analyst, standing with her husband in the Home Depot parking lot in Virginia. She was killed. Another was Pascal Charlot, a 72-year-old retired carpenter standing on a street corner, shot and killed. Another victim was Iran Browne, a 13-year-old boy who had just been dropped off at school.

My fellow Senators now prepare to tell mothers and victims throughout the United States that they don’t have a right to file a civil lawsuit against individuals and businesses that helped cause this tragic event.

We had a debate on the floor yesterday. There was a question, a semantic question, about whether or not the Bull’s Eye store was really closed. One of my staff called the numbers and they said: Yes, we are open until 7 o’clock. Do you want anything—this is my edition: if you want anything shipped out, we will get you guns.

So we argued about whether or not they were really closed or who had the license or what. Those are extraneous things having no significance in the debate.

We see the same thing replicated here. If you meet certain conditions, you are still able to bring suit. But if one of the conditions is present, then you can’t bring suit.

Why don’t we tell it like it is? And that is, by whatever stretch of the imagination you want to bring, these people, the victims of the sniper attacks, are unable to bring a suit. There is no doubt about it. We can discuss language all you want, but it is the intent.

We throw another obstacle in the way for these victims to get some justice, some sense of what it is that took place that was wrong and how we can help prevent it in the future.

To hear these discussions immersed in language change, I suppose if you study it closely enough, you will find punctuation changes. Bull’s Eye claimed they didn’t have any record of sale. They cannot explain how the snipers obtained the assault weapon. I have not heard any condemnation of their poor practices; that 227 weapons were lost. What a shame. If any normal store lost items that cost this much, they would be in a state of panic. Apparently, these guys did not care that much, but we still want to prevent that. Everyone has been hurt by their poor behavior from getting compensation that is justly theirs under normal circumstances.

Why we have to take away people’s rights is something, frankly, I do not understand. I hope the public at large begins to raise questions: What is this? Do you mean if I am injured in an automobile accident and the automobile manufacturer has been negligent, that they did not protect the victim, that when it was hit in the back, I shouldn’t be able to get compensation for that small error? It may have burned you alive. Or if there was such a casual structure of behavior with a pharmaceutical company, and they put the wrong tablets in a bottle, and if someone there, in a moment of madness, put the wrong tablets in a bottle and a person becomes ill or dies, they shouldn’t be able to bring an action? This strikes me as something that the citizenry, who is expecting us to take care of them, is unable to comprehend.

This debate goes on and there is always another trick, another maneuver to try and interrupt the flow of what we would consider normal justice. I hope we will defeat the amendment because it adds nothing to the compromise that we have to arrive at to get the kind of voting pattern—the record that says, yes, we made sure the people who suffer these terrible damages have a right to compensation or to a review by some sort to decide that issue.

I hope we will defeat the Frist-Craig amendment and get to the Mikulski amendment, which approaches the problem directly. These people have been severely injured by the actions of the snipers who got the gun illegally, inappropriately, improperly—call it what you will.

I yield back the remaining time.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, how much time remains on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8 minutes 22 seconds.
Who yields time?

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, may I inquire as to the amount of time I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 13 minutes remaining.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I will use a limited amount of that time. If the Senator from Maryland wishes to close out the debate, I will make my closing statement, and we can move to a vote quickly.

Let me address what the Senator from New Jersey said a moment ago and direct his attention to subsection (v) of section 4. He talked about a car not functioning properly and somebody being injured. That is called product liability. It says:

(v) an action for physical injuries or property damage resulting directly from a defect in design or manufacture of the product, when used as intended. . . .

Please read the bill when you make those kinds of statements because if the Senator had, that would have been, in my opinion, improper. We are not talking product liability.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Is the question being referred to me directly?

Mr. CRAIG. No, I am only responding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. The Senator knows I am only responding to a comment he made. I am simply suggesting that for the next few moments he might wish to read that subsection. Here we are not dealing with product liability.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Is the question being referred to me directly?

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I will use a limited amount of that time. If the Senator from Maryland wishes to close out the debate, I will make my closing statement, and we can move to a vote quickly.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I yield the floor to the Senator from Idaho, the sniper cases will likely be dismissed in the sniper case. That is what it already says.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. That is the exception.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, this amendment achieves that. It keeps the status quo of the bill. S. 1805 states that the civil exemption will bar the individuals from court.

I yield the remaining time to Senator MIKULSKI.

I really do believe the Frist-Craig amendment would gut their ability to move ahead. It is trying to shoehorn into these exceptions and yet at the same time these very exceptions would prohibit them from bringing their claim. Secondly, ask on behalf of these families to be able to do this.

Also, in another section, the negligent entrustment/negligence per se exceptions embodied in paragraph (5)(A)(iii) will not save them. As an initial Objections, these exceptions are limited to a seller, and it goes on and on. What it says in a nutshell is that it would preclude them from moving forward.

For the information of my colleagues, this legal opinion letter was printed in yesterday’s Record.

I also acknowledge that the Senator from Idaho has a different view than this legal opinion but that is the point of the amendment. I have a legal opinion. He has his expertise and the CRS opinion.

I think it is the opinion of the American people, that when someone brings a whole community to a paralyzing halt, when people have been ghoulishly and graft down in a deliberate, predatory, and cruel manner that in this country one ought to at least be able to go to court to seek some redress. All I am doing is preserving their right to do so.

When we say we want to stand up for the victims, and I am standing up for the victims because it is the right to do so. All I am doing is preserving their right to do so.

There are conditions, there are not, that he places in there that make them jump through another hoop in order to be able to sue.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Yes, it gives a whole set of other obstacles.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I ask the Senator from Maryland a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland has 25 seconds remaining.

be followed by a vote. And the yeas and nays have already been ordered.

The Senator from Maryland.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, my amendment, I believe, is far superior to the amendment the Senate just adopted. It is a straightforward amendment. It exempts from the bill all cases related to those committed by the despicable predators John Malvo and John Muhammad. This is a very specific, very limited exemption. I urge the Senator to consider it.

If we really want to honor the victims of the sniper cases, please give them the opportunity to pursue their cases in court. We have a substantial legal opinion from an eminent scholar such as Lloyd Cutler, who says if this bill passes, and passes with Frist-Craig, the victims’ cases will be thrown out of court absolutely or, at the very least, be left in great ambiguity.

Please, let us do justice to the victims and least give them the opportunity to seek justice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I say to my colleagues, you have just voted for the Frist-Craig amendment. If you now vote for the Mikulski amendment, you have totally reversed your vote. The Mikulski amendment guts the underlying bill, S. 1805, carves out a substantial exception. If you are supportive of S. 1805, then you vote no.

But do we protect the right of the victims for their day in court? We absolutely do. There are four major exceptions in which we say, if these parties or entities — negligent manufacturer, if there was a negligent gun dealer, if there was a negligent manufacturer—and that is a fact and it is proven —then their day in court absolutely or, at the very least, we do not allow frivolous third-party claims. They can make a case. That is why I believe this whole bill is a mistake.

But we do not allow frivolous third-party claims. This is the underlying premise of the bill. Again, if you voted for Frist-Craig, I would ask you to vote against Mikulski.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the Mikulski amendment. The yeas and nays have previously been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado (Mr. CAMPBELL) and the Senator from Alaska (Mr. MUKOWSKI) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. EDWARDS) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) are necessarily absent.

If further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote “aye.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The amendment (No. 2627) was rejected.

Mr. REID. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next order of business is an amendment by the Senator from New Jersey with 30 minutes of debate equally divided.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, on behalf of myself, Senator LAUTENBERG, Senator MIKULSKI, Senator KENNEDY, Senator CLINTON, and Senator BOXER, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. CORZINE], for himself, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. MIKULSKI, Mr. KENNEDY, Mrs. CLINTON, and Mr. BOXER proposes an amendment numbered 2629.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To protect the rights of law enforcement officers who are victimized by crime to secure compensation from those who participate in the arming of criminals)

On page 11, after line 19, insert the following:

SEC. 5. LAW ENFORCEMENT EXEMPTION. Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting the right of an officer or employee of any Federal, State, or local law enforcement agency to recover damages authorized under Federal or State law.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I strongly oppose the underlying legislation before the Senate which waives liability for gun dealers and manufacturers.

In my view, the legislation strips away the legal rights of victims of gun violence and shields wrongdoers from accountability. It provides special exemptions for the narrowest of special interests, and it would make our country less safe.

The bill uses a variety of complicated legal concepts, narrowly drawn exemptions, to shield irresponsible gun dealers and manufacturers from accountability. When we get beyond the legalese and Washington speak, the bottom line is the bill will limit the legal rights of our police officers and first responders.

I think that is wrong. In my view, no victim of gun violence should be denied their day in court. Each should be allowed an opportunity—a chance—to make their case. That is why I believe this whole bill is a mistake.

That said, I am a realist. I recognize the majority of my colleagues, based on the cosponsorship, disagree. On Tuesday, this legislation will likely be approved. That is why my amendment is so important and needs to be dealt with.

My hope is we can at least reach an agreement that even if we are going to strip away the rights for most Americans, we will not take away the rights from the men and women who serve as our Nation’s law enforcement officers, the protectors of the peace, the people who serve on our streets, in our neighborhoods, our first responders.

I know all my colleagues appreciate the tremendous service and risk our law enforcement on our streets provides to our communities, so I hope they will share my interest in protecting their rights.

The importance of protecting the rights of our police officers was brought home to me and, I am sure, Senator LAUTENBERG through a case of two police officers in the State of New Jersey: New Jersey Police Detective David Lemongello and Officer Ken McGuire.

In 2001, they were seriously injured when a career criminal shot them while they were working undercover. This criminal was prohibited from purchasing a firearm but he obtained his gun illegally from a trafficker. As it turns out, the trafficker also was prohibited from buying weapons and had used a so-called straw purchaser to make multiple gun purchases from a store in West Virginia.

The cash sale for thousands of dollars was so obviously suspicious that the dealer apparently felt guilty. On the same day, he took the money and after the guns walked out the door, the dealer called into the ATF and identified him. But that was after the guns were gone. Unfortunately, at the time of the sale the dealer apparently thought it was more important to make a profit than to protect the lives of innocent victims.

Sure enough, Officers Lemongello and McGuire were severely injured on the job. Lemongello suffered a serious injury and came very close to losing his lives. Their families suffered from their loss and both of them lost their careers and are no longer able to serve as policemen.

I want to make two points here. First, the complaint is filed by the law enforcement agency against these gun sellers. The case is not against the gun sellers, such as Officer McGuire, and tell them we are going to take away their rights? How can we tell David Lemongello he risked his life on behalf of our community, and he almost lost it because of an irresponsible gun dealer, who will be suffering from the attack for the rest of his life but if he wants to go to court, if he wants justice, our answer to him is no?

Remember, the question before the Senate is not whether these two police officers, or any police officer, has a good case. It is simply whether they have a right to make their case. It is whether they have a right to try to convince a jury that a gun dealer acted irresponsibly and whether they deserve compensation as a result.

I do not call this a frivolous lawsuit. I consider this a right for a law enforcement officer to have a right to make their case in court before a jury. This bill would strip away their rights. Not only would it strip these two heroes of their legal rights, it would do so retroactively.

I know we are going to hear about narrowly defined exceptions that will not allow for it. I do not think law enforcement officer can be limited in their ability to make their case before a jury. As far as I am concerned, it is an affront to these officers and an insult to every police officer who puts his or her life on the line for the community, and it sends precisely the wrong message when we are supposed to be enhancing homeland security and reinforcing the risks that people are taking to protect our families and our communities across this country.

My amendment is very simple. In fact, I will read it word for word:

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting the right of an officer or an employee of any Federal, State or local law enforcement agency to recover damages authorized under Federal or State law.

I suspect we will hear about amendments that draw these narrow lines of exception. Why is it that a law enforcement officer cannot go into a court to make a case? How can they get redress if they have been wronged in the illegal sale or the negligent sale of firearms to criminals? I do not get it.

That is the entire amendment. That is what we are working on. In essence, this amendment stands for the proposition that we should not strip police officers of their rights. It says that members of law enforcement who are victims of gun violence should have their day in court—no new rights, nothing guaranteed, just their day in court.

The advocates of this legislation argue that it is necessary to prevent frivolous litigation. I think they are wrong. But does this Senate really believe that law enforcement officers are flooding the courts with frivolous lawsuits? Is that what our law enforcement officers are doing? Do we really believe that men and women who devote their lives, who risk their lives, who enforce our laws are trivializing the judicial process, that Congress needs to take away their rights because they are? I do not believe that and I do not believe anybody in this body does.

There is no evidence of it, and even to suggest it seems out of place given the trust that we give to these men and women in our local communities. Our men and women in uniform put their lives on the line for us every day. The least they should be able to expect from us is that we would not strip away their rights when they suffer from gun violence, and that is what I think we are doing. I hope my colleagues will stand with me and the men and women of our law enforcement and support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. CORZINE. How much time is remaining?

Mr. PRESIDENT. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey has 5 minutes 25 seconds.

Mr. CORZINE. I yield to my colleague from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I thank my colleague and good friend from New Jersey with whom I have worked very closely on many issues. There is not anything that we have done that binds us more closely than this action because we are witnessing it firsthand. We talked to the two officers who were mentioned in Senator CORZINE’s commentary.

To me, this whole situation is surreal. The fact that when there is a photo opportunity with a cop who is in uniform, we can see him chased by six Senators to get a picture taken with him. When there are townhall meetings, Senators will talk about how brave those cops are and that what they do is put their lives on the line every day, and many of their families may be thinking that just maybe they may not see daddy coming back from work.

I think we should do something.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has yielded time.

Mr. CORZINE. . . .
and lose your life. The difference is the military takes some care of you. There are insurance programs, other programs. Many of these small police departments don’t have the kind of resources to provide on their own for the well-being of their families.

This is an outrage that is being perpetrated on these law enforcement people. It is an outrage. I hope the public understands what we are doing here. We want the people to work in those dangerous jobs—we don’t want to let them on their own go to the courts. That is the process in this country of ours. We will not let them go to court to see if there are any damages. They never repair the damage to the soul. But we at least ought to be able to say: Listen, if you can bring a suit that shows either the manufacturer or the distributor or the retailer, like the shop in Oregon, was negligent in these dangerous weapons—no to the warranty safeguards on these weapons—we ought to be able to say to them, if anything happens to you, you can go to court and you can seek damages.

But there is a group here who says no, we won’t let you take away your rights. Do you know why? Because the NRA doesn’t like it—putting it straight up. The NRA doesn’t want that to happen. The NRA writes the legislation, for goodness sake. They don’t want it to be available. They don’t want these people to have the same rights everybody else has. If you are killed in an airplane crash or a car crash or otherwise, you have a right to go to court. I have heard the story about product liability. We are not going through that again. We don’t worry about product liability. We worry about negligence and recklessness and you are blocked from bringing suit. It is outrageous.

In the year 2003, 148 law enforcement officers across the nation were killed in the line of duty; 52 of those fallen officers were shot to death. I would like it if the managers of the bill who so desperately want this to pass would go to those families and say: You know what, we are sorry. Gosh, Joe was a good guy. We heard about him. He was a Boy Scout leader, all of those things. But that is the nature of the job. So you lose him. Go find another way, Madame Smith, to see if you can support your kids. See if you can get a job. You may have to leave the kids at home because you don’t have enough money to take care of them and buy other things.

Every law enforcement officer fatality is a national tragedy. The only place it doesn’t ring true is here. They don’t want you to have the same rights ordinary citizens have when they are injured. It is incredible to me. We go through semantic schemes here about: No, it doesn’t really mean that. But it does block their right to collect damages if they are injured.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time controlled by the Senator from New Jersey has expired. Who seeks time?

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a list of police officers who have been killed in the line of duty; 52 of those fallen officials across the nation were killed in the line of duty; 52 of those fallen officers were shot to death.

The Senator from New Jersey is a man who creates law. The picture beside him is of a man who enforces law. We have obvious and open respect for both, and we should in this country, because we have the country of law. That gentleman you talked about so eloquently who is pictured beside you is a man who puts on the uniform every day and goes in harm's way. There is no doubt about it. He is a Senator on this floor who doesn't respect men and women in uniform, whether they be civil police in this country or are men and women in the armed services.

At the same time, that man enforces law. His life oftentimes is put in much more jeopardy by plea-bargaining the criminal back onto the street day after day in urban America, and they have to go out and rearrest them and re-arrest them again. Tragically enough, those dealers go out and steal guns. Sometimes they buy them. And sometimes they lie when they buy them. But most of them are stopped by background checks today. That officer has to face them again.

We understand that principle. That is the history of America. That is the history of law enforcement. The great tragedy today in law is criminal law, in my opinion, that we keep kicking them back to the streets instead of doing the time. I am talking that gentleman has to go out and face them once again because they are a repeat, repeat, repeat offender.

What S. 1805 attempts to establish is plaintiffs' rights should be dependent on settled principles of law, not emotion and not sympathy. If a lawsuit has enough merit under traditional tort standards to be allowed by the bill, we believe that cause of action should be available to all plaintiffs, regardless of their susceptibility to terror or whether particularly an attacker had harmed them. In other words, we are not suggesting there be carve-outs and special exemptions.

But clearly, and I can argue, the Senator has already said, I would come back to those very key exceptions we have placed in S. 1805. I am not going to repeat those. I have repeated them several times tonight. They are in the bill. They are in the bill a majority of our colleagues, Dem-,ocrat and Republican. Why do they? Because they bring stability to the law. They create clear standards. They don't say that a law-abiding citizen producing a lawful product is somehow liable if someone takes it and misuses it; that the person who misuses it is the person who ought to be liable. That person ought to be the criminal, if so found guilty. That is a premise of the law and it is an important premise of the law.

I hope my colleagues tonight will oppose the Corzine amendment. It guts the underlying bill. I doubt the Senator from New Jersey planned to vote for S. 1805. I can't view this as a friendly amendment. I don't think it is intended to be. I think it is intended to tear down the fundamental structure built under S. 1805, to establish solid principles, clear understandings, not to allow junk lawsuits to move through, so that that gentleman pictured beside you his day in court. Because the courthouse door is not locked. The opportunity to argue before the judge still remains so that suit can be filed, so that case can move on if the principles of the law are met and the standards meet the test.

With that, I yield back the remainder of my time and ask the Corzine amendment be laid aside.

Mr. CRAIG. I send to the desk the Frist amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. CRAIG], for Mr. Frist for himself and Mr. CRAIG, proposes an amendment numbered 2630.

Mr. CRAIG. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To protect the rights of law enforcement officers who are victimized by crime to seek compensation from those who participate in the arming of criminals)

On page 9, between lines 21 and 22, insert the following:

(E) LAW ENFORCEMENT EXCEPTION.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit the right of an officer or employee of any Federal, State, or local law enforcement agency to recover damages authorized under Federal or State law in a civil action that meets 1 of the requirements under clauses (i) through (v) of subparagraph (A).

Mr. CRAIG. I will brief. I think our colleagues wish that of us tonight. This amendment is not unlike the amendment the Senate accepted a few moments ago in relation to the Mikulski amendment. It is every bit as simple and straightforward as the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey:

Law enforcement exception—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit the right of an officer or employee of any Federal, State, or local law enforcement agency to recover damages authorized under Federal or State law in a civil action that meets 1 of the requirements under clause (i) through (v) of subparagraph (A).

Mr. CRAIG. I will brief. I think our colleagues wish that of us tonight. This amendment is not unlike the amendment the Senate accepted a few moments ago in relation to the Mikulski amendment. It is every bit as simple and straightforward as the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey:

Law enforcement exception—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to limit the right of an officer or employee of any Federal, State, or local law enforcement agency to recovery damages authorized under Federal or State law in a civil action that meets 1 of the requirements under clause (i) through (v) of subparagraph (A).

Of course, I have read that subparagraph and all of those exceptions to you time and time again over the last several days. I believe it is clear-cut. We believe that creates the stability within the law. It sets in motion something very important; that is, the old principle of tort law—that it is the individual who is guilty for their actions and they should not be trying to reach through the thousands of acts to find some-body who produced a quality product and say you are guilty because you produced it and, therefore, you ought to pay because somebody misused and damaged or took someone’s life. We have never done that as a country, and we shouldn’t. We have found negligence, and we should where it exists, where there has been willingness, where there has been a violation of a law that is found. People ought to pay the price if they don’t play by the rules.

In the gun community, I know how important this right is in America, and with this right goes phenomenal responsibility. They fire, time and time again, down through the decades has established very specifically those responsibilities because we view this as an extremely valuable right.

I say to the Senator from New Jersey that I am not going to keep that policeman out of the courthouse. I and Americans respect him and his profession too much to say you cannot go after redress, but you must find that the laws that you enforce are the same laws you respect and must live by. I retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks time? The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, who controls time in opposition to the Craig amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The minority manager controls the time. That would be the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank my colleague from Rhode Island, and I thank the Presiding Officer.

The Senator from Idaho says when he wrote this bill, he did it without emotion and without sympathy. Clearly, if he is going to oppose this amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey. We are doing it without sympathy for the 54 law enforcement officers who are killed each year in the line of duty with guns. That is what the Senator said.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DURBIN. Of course I will not because you would not yield when you had the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. Fine. I will take my time.

Mr. DURBIN. I will say this to the Senator from Idaho: It is hard for me to imagine, to believe that you believe that a lawsuit brought by that police officer or his family for being shot in the line of duty is a junk lawsuit as you have characterized these over and over again. The Senator from Idaho should join me in the city of Chicago where I have visited officers of that police force shot in the line of duty who are quadruple for the rest of their lives because a gang banger shot them in the line of duty. And you tell that officer and his family—the Senator from Idaho should tell that officer and his family—that if they are going to seek redress from a gun dealer who sold those guns to the gang bangers, that that lawsuit for that officer and his family is a junk lawsuit—a junk lawsuit.

How in the world can we in the Senate have legislated admiration and respect for the men and women in uniform who protect us every single day, and then when they are stricken in the line of duty, when they are shot defending us, tell them when they want to go against the gun dealers who sell the guns on the street, these Saturday night specials through straw purchasers and gun traffickers, that that lawsuit brought by that officer and his family is a junk lawsuit that you want to stop with this legislation?

That troubles me. It troubles me because, frankly, I think we understand if we are going to ask anyone in our community to risk their lives every single day for us by wearing that badge, we should give them something more than words. We should be standing by when they turn, frankly, give their lives and risk their lives for us every single day.

The choice we have with the Corzine amendment is a clear choice: Stand by the police or stand by the gun dealers. The Senator from Idaho says we need to stand by the gun dealers; that is a jobs bill. We need to stand by the gun manufacturers; this is a jobs bill. What about the men and women in uniform and our law enforcement agencies across America? What about their jobs? Are they worth standing by or standing by their families?

I say to those who are going to oppose the Corzine amendment that if you have a problem in your neighborhood and there is crime in the neighborhood, don’t call 9–1–1. No, dial up your local gun dealer because if you dial 9–1–1, you are going to get one of the people who just might get hurt and file a junk lawsuit. You had better dial up that gun dealer. Call the gun dealer and ask him to please come out and protect your family.

I cannot imagine that we are going to allow this to occur. The Frist-Craig amendment is meaningless when it says whatever the bill said originally it applies to law enforcement officials. It doesn’t do a thing for them.

The Corzine amendment does. It says we are going to stand behind the police. If he is in the line of duty, we will stand by him and his family to go after the wrongdoer and the gun dealer who is selling those guns to the gang bangers and street killers, the cop killers on the street.

If you want to vote for the Frist-Craig amendment in this underlying bill, frankly, we are turning our back on those men and women who are risking their lives every single day for us. I thank the Senator from New Jersey for offering this amendment. We should be offering this amendment not only for law enforcement officials but for fire-fighters, medical responders, and every single person in America who puts their life on the line for us every single day and risk death by firearms because this underlying bill is saying to them, if you are hurt and you sue, you are filing a junk lawsuit.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, may I ask how much time remains on both sides?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho has 12 minutes 28 seconds. The Senator from Rhode Island has 9 minutes 49 seconds.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I yield to Senator Sessions.

I am not going to respond to the Senator from Illinois only to say that he impugned my heart. He suggested I was a person without sympathy. I have never done that to him. I believe he is person of goodwill who comes here to represent the citizens of the State of Illinois.

When I talk about sympathy, I talk about the impartiality of law. He is an attorney and I am not. He knows that the law is impartial and it is clear. So I must tell you that I grit my teeth a little bit when he suggests that this Senator has no passion or concern for the loss of life. That is a step too far.

Let me yield 5 minutes to Senator Sessions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I was a prosecutor for a number of years. Some of my best friends are police officers. I try to meet with them when I am in my State. I met with 11 or 12 of them in Cherokee on the Georgia line last week. They are not telling me that if they are shot or one of their fellow officers are shot they want to sue the gun manufacturers. None of them have ever suggested that to me. They believe that criminals with guns ought to be prosecuted aggressively and go to jail when they catch them. They should be punished. And if they shoot and kill a police officer, they want to see them go to jail or be executed. A lot of people who are opposing this legislation oppose the death penalty for those who kill police officers.

The point of this is very simple. In American law, from our ancient traditions, wrongdoers are the people who ought to be sued. If a terrorist comes in here and shoots a policeman, a cold-blooded criminal who murders American citizen, you should sue the person who shot you. That is what we are all about. That is what the law has been about.

Now we are in a situation in which the law has been politicized and used to carry out an agenda. To say that a gun dealer or a gun manufacturer that has complied with all the extensive regulations for the sale of firearms, has done everything right, that somehow they should be those to be sued if a criminal goes out and steals a weapon from another person perhaps and commits a crime with it and shoots someone, that is not what American law is about. It is an abuse of the liability system in America. It is consistent with current law and our traditions. It is why, to date, none of these lawsuits against gun manufacturers has been successful and why few are successful against gun dealers.

However, if a gun manufacturer or if a gun dealer, in particular, sells a weapon contrary to the complex and detailed regulations the Federal Government, State, and cities required, that person can be not only sued for damages, that person can be prosecuted.

When I was a Federal prosecutor, I prosecuted criminals who used guns; I prosecuted gun dealers who sold guns illegally. They have to get an ID from the purchaser. They make him sign an affidavit that he is not a felon. They do a gun check. They have to be a resident of the State, as I recall. They cannot be a drug addict. If they know there is an impropriety and sell the gun anyway, they are responsible and be sued for it and should be—and should be prosecuted, for that matter.

What we need to focus on in America today is that the Constitution of this country allows the American people to keep and bear arms. Those who do not agree, get over it. That is where the American people are. That is what the Constitution says. That is what the rules are. If you want to offer legislation to put further controls on the right of an individual in America to keep and bear arms, put it out here and let’s debate it and see if it has enough votes to win.

This idea of mayors, attorneys general, district attorneys, and governmental officials filing lawsuits against gun manufacturers who complied with the law, to try to make them responsible in an end run effort to carry out an antigun agenda in some of our big, liberal cities in America—they do not understand that most Americans are about hunting and guns—is improper. It is not the way we ought to go about this business.

The Senator from Idaho is correct; this liability question is one we need to deal with. There is a concerted effort in America to utilize the legal system in some of our liberal courts to try to knock down the right to manufacture and sell guns. It is protected by Federal law. It is controlled by Federal law. It is mandated by Federal law. People who comply with the law should not be sued. If they do not comply, they should be sued and prosecuted. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, let me make two or three quick points and then yield to Senator LAUTENBERG and then to Senator CORZINE.

First, a neutral assessment of this legislation suggests strongly that it is not just frivolous lawsuits that are going to be barred by this legislation; there are going to be many meritorious lawsuits. We already know about these suits. We know about Officer McGuire; we know about the victims of the Washington snipers. Those individuals will be barred from courts. Those are not frivolous suits.

Again, there has been discussion about junk cases. I believe there will be a lot of junk guns in the streets because essentially what this legislation does is this. When a Federal firearms dealer gets his license, he also gets a license to be negligent. He can follow the rules but he can be negligent. There is an immunity question. In Federal legislation, in many cases, that requires the storage at a facility of weapons, so you can leave them lying around. That is what they apparently did at Bull’s Eye.

That is negligence, and that negligence harmed several individuals. And this particular law, if adopted, will prevent people from exercising their rights for compensation based upon that activity.

All this discussion leads to the inescapable belief on my part that the proponents want it both ways. They stand here and decry the attack on the industry, the gun industry besieged by lawsuits, and then turn and say: Of course, Officer Lemongello will get to court and Officer McGuire will get to court and the sniper victims will get to court. They cannot have it both ways.

The law is not impartial. The law is what we make it. We are making a law today that favors, in an unprecedented and special way, gun industry officials, and the National Rifle Association. That is our making. It is not some cosmic event taking place and suddenly we have the law. We are telling them, be negligent, be irresponsible, be reckless, do not worry about it, we have taken care of you.

What do we say to the victims of the crimes? Tough luck. You were in the wrong place, officer. You were in the wrong place, Conrad Johnson, starting your day early in the morning. Your family will live with a nightmare from the companies or individuals who were negligent.

I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. REED. How much time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 7 minutes.

Mr. REED. I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I ask to have the Presiding Officer call attention to the fact when I have 30 seconds remaining.

We listen to the same rhetoric, decry the risk that our law enforcement people take when they go out to work and how we really respect them—except that we do not want to give them the same environment that every ordinary citizen in this country has.

We hear about the fact that if you get the criminals off the streets and they do not come out again, and then they go back again, what does it have to do with whether or not we block the suit from law enforcement personnel who have been injured, who have families who want redress for them having been killed at work? It has nothing to do with it.

That is the whole thing. It is an obscuration of what this bill is about. This bill does not change a bill with which this legislation reinforces what the bill says, and that is, take away people’s rights to sue, people’s rights for redress. Whether it is an errant gun manufacturer, a dealer, a distributor, an errant airline, or an errant car manufacturer, people should have the right to sue.

There have been opinions thrown around that, unfortunately, do not match that of a distinguished attorney such as David Boies who says this bill will cause a dismissal of the suit of Lemongello and McGuire immediately.

The proposed immunity legislation would require the immediate dismissal of these claims.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD what the office of Mr. David Boies, one of the most prominent criminal attorneys in the country, has confirmed.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Lemongello v. Will Company, No. Civ.A. 02-C-2952, 2003 WL 21488208 (W. Va. Cir. Ct. Mar. 19, 2003). New Jersey Police Detective David Lemongello and Officer Kenneth McGuire were seriously injured in January 2001 when they were shot at a car criminal while performing undercover police work. Even though the shooter was a person named by law from purchasing a firearm, he obtained his weapon, a nine millimeter semi-automatic Ruger handgun, illegally from a gun trafficker. The trafficker, in turn, was also prohibited from buying weapons due to a prior felony, so he used an accomplice (a so-called ‘‘straw purchaser’’) to make multiple gun purchases from defendant Will Jewelry & Loan. In their lawsuit against Will Jewelry & Loan and others, the officers allege that the gun dealer acted negligently in selling the straw purchase, who obtained twelve guns (including the Ruger used in the shooting of the two officers) that had been selected in person by the gun trafficker and paid for in a single cash transaction. The circumstances of that sale were so suspect that the defendant dealer reported it to the AFT—but only after the purchase price had been collected and the guns had left the store. The officers further charges gun manufacturer Sturm Ruger & Company with negligently failing to monitor and train its distributors and dealers and negligently failing to monitor and train its distributors and dealers in the circumstances of that sale, and further charges that the defendants failed to exercise reasonable care in their sales of firearms, neither the dealer nor the manufacturer violated any statutory prohibition in selling the gun. Nor could the police ascertain that their case falls within the ‘‘negligent entrustment’’ exception to the proposed immunity legislation because the gun dealer supplied the firearm to ‘‘somebody to somebody whom the seller knew or should have known was likely to, and did, use the product in a manner involving unreasonable risk of physical injury to the person or others.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 30 seconds remaining.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Many police officers and police chiefs wrote in their opposition to this bill, law enforcement personnel from various police departments around the country, including Chief William Musser of Meridian, OH, Police Department. He writes that he is opposed to this. We have officers from other States as well, including Chief Cory Lynn from Ketchum, ID, Police Department. He writes that he is opposed to this bill, law enforcement personnel. He writes that he is opposed to this.

We are talking about negligence for law enforcement— for negligence for law enforcement—not just generally. These are not frivolous suits. These are people who know the law. They are not bringing up frivolous suits, and I do not think I am hearing that. So we have to have a way to have no frivolous lawsuits, which is the argument we are trying to make, we need this legislation.

Why are we taking away the right to sue from law enforcement across this country? I ask my colleagues to stand with me. I think we are undermining the safety and the security and the principles and the rights of law enforcement. I think the Senate ought to be standing with law enforcement to make sure they are protected. If we vote no against my amendment, we are doing the opposite. I hope we will stand strong and stand firmly with law enforcement because that is what we need to do if we say we appreciate what they are doing for our families and our communities.

I yield back the remainder of my time.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks time?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I yield the remaining time to the Senator from New Jersey, Mr. CORZINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 3½ minutes.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, the issue before the Senate is pretty clear. This is a simple principle: Will we protect law enforcement officers such as Officers Lemongello from losing their rights under this bill or won’t we?

The fact is, the narrow drawing of these exemptions is going to take cases like I identified in my opening remarks—such as buying guns in West Virginia from a negligent dealer, who admitted, themselves, on the same day they had a problem; and it went into the courts—and we are going to take away their rights to sue. This will not fit under those legal constraints.

The amendment is clear and straightforward. It says that nothing in this legislation will limit the legal rights of law enforcement personnel. All my amendment does is open that up. There are no conditions. There are no caveats. It is clear. It is simple. My amendment does not add any new rights. It just guarantees that officers will not lose any.

Mr. CRAIG. I will be as brief as possible. The hour is late.

I know the Senator from New Jersey speaks with a good heart, and I appreciate that. I think we all do. He mentioned two important words just in the last line. He mentioned the word “criminal,” criminal action, the right to sue, and he mentioned “negligence” and the right to sue. Then he said: We block that policeman from the courthouse door.

I yield back the remainder of my time.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks time?

Mr. CROSS. Mr. President, I understand the opposition has yielded back all their time.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. CRAIG. I will be as brief as possible. The hour is late.

I know the Senator from New Jersey speaks with a good heart, and I appreciate that. I think we all do. He mentioned two important words just in the last line. He mentioned the word “criminal,” criminal action, the right to sue, and he mentioned “negligence” and the right to sue. Then he said: We block that policeman from the courthouse door.

He is talking about criminal action. That action is deemed as a criminal act in the law.

How about negligence? Well, it is the next one down.

It is No. 2:
an action brought against a transferee convicted under section 924(h) of title 18 United States Code, or a comparable or identical State law, by a party directly harmed by the conduct of which the transferee is so convicted . . . .

He is talking about criminal action. That action is deemed as a criminal act in the law.

How about negligence? Well, it is the next one down.

It is No. 2:
an action brought against a seller for negligent entrustment or negligence per se . . . .

Let me tell you what the FOP says. I think we all know what the FOP is. That is the Fraternal Order of Police, some 311,000 strong. They oppose the Corzine amendment. We have just visited with them. They called us and they said: Why? Because they do not believe it accomplishes what they would like accomplished, and they like the underlying law.

I think it is fundamentally important that we try to build clean principles within the law. I would have to agree with the Senator from New Jersey that policeman is not going to file or have his attorneys file a junk lawsuit. The Senator is absolutely right. But 31 apparently have been filed, some are under appeals, and 21 of them have been thrown out of court by judges who said: Go away, because that is what this lawsuit is.

Now, oftentimes the municipality and/or the individuals and/or the county will file it in the name of a fallen officer. I can understand the emotion. I think we all feel it. But the judge said the law is the law and there was no basis, and he threw them out. Yet it cost the industry—the law-abiding industry—hundreds of millions of dollars. It is beginning to weaken many of our laws, legal gun manufacturers, that oftentimes build the firearm that officer carries on his side to protect himself and his fellow officers in the commission of their responsibilities.

We should not be doing that as a country. But clearly we must insist that the law be clear, unambiguous, and that the officer have his day in court if he is harmed by a criminal or by someone who has acted in a criminal way. Someone who has violated the law, someone, through negligence, has somehow caused a firearm to get into the hands of a criminal.

Then the case is brought, and S. 1805 does not block that.

I yield back the remainder of my time, and I ask for the yeas and nays on the Frist-Craig amendment and the Clinton amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator seeking the yeas and nays on both amendments with one show of hands?

Mr. CRAIG. If there is no objection. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The yeas and nays are requested.

Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment No. 2630. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk called the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado (Mr. CAMPBELL), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), and the Senator from Alaska (Ms. MURKOWSKI) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. LEVIN), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) are necessarily absent.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, the Frist-Craig amendment is completely meaningless in this context because it is exactly the same language that is already in the bill. It is transparent and does not change a thing.

I am emotional about these individuals who put their lives on the line all the time. I accept that others feel the same way. But we should not be taking away the rights of these individuals to get into a court and not only pursue those actions in which they are subject to the law.

I think we are doing just the opposite. The Frist-Craig amendment is completely meaningless in this context because it is exactly the same language that is already in the bill. It is transparent and does not change a thing.

This officer will not be able to get into a court of law. This officer will lose his right to sue. That is not right. It is not right for the other 52 American police officers who lost their lives in 2002-2003. Some of the many, many who have been injured.

I don’t understand why we don’t want to give them the rights they deserve under our Constitution. This is not about whether you have a right to bear arms. This is not about the second amendment. This is about having the right, when there is negligence and criminal behavior, to go into a court of law and protect yourself.

The amendment does not block that. It says not under any circumstances. It is No. 2:
an action brought against a transferee convicted under section 924(h) of title 18 United States Code, or a comparable or identical State law, by a party directly harmed by the conduct of which the transferee is so convicted . . . .

He is talking about criminal action. That action is deemed as a criminal act in the law.

How about negligence? Well, it is the next one down.

It is No. 2:

I would have to agree with the Senator from New Jersey that policeman is not going to file or have his attorneys file a junk lawsuit. The Senator is absolutely right. But 31 apparently have been filed, some are under appeals, and 21 of them have been thrown out of court by judges who said: Go away, because that is what this lawsuit is.

Now, oftentimes the municipality and/or the individuals and/or the county will file it in the name of a fallen officer. I can understand the emotion. I think we all feel it. But the judge said the law is the law and there was no basis, and he threw them out. Yet it cost the industry—the law-abiding industry—hundreds of millions of dollars. It is beginning to weaken many of our laws, legal gun manufacturers, that oftentimes build the firearm that officer carries on his side to protect himself and his fellow officers in the commission of their responsibilities.

We should not be doing that as a country. But clearly we must insist that the law be clear, unambiguous, and that the officer have his day in court if he is harmed by a criminal or by someone who has acted in a criminal way. Someone who has violated the law, someone, through negligence, has somehow caused a firearm to get into the hands of a criminal.

Then the case is brought, and S. 1805 does not block that.

I yield back the remainder of my time, and I ask for the yeas and nays on the Frist-Craig amendment and the Clinton amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator seeking the yeas and nays on both amendments with one show of hands?

Mr. CRAIG. If there is no objection. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The yeas and nays are requested.

Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment No. 2630. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant journal clerk called the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado (Mr. CAMPBELL), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), and the Senator from Alaska (Ms. MURKOWSKI) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. LEVIN), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) are necessarily absent.
I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote “nay.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 60, nays 34, as follows:

The amendment (No. 2630) was agreed to.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. WYDEN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 2629

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The next order of business is consideration of the Corzine amendment. There are 2 minutes equally divided to be followed by a vote. The yeas and nays have already been ordered.

Who yields time?

The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, my amendment is very simple. In fact, I will read it:

Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, nothing in this Act shall be construed as limiting the right of an officer or employee of any Federal, State or local law enforcement agency to recover damages authorized under Federal or State law.

This is a police officer who was shot, injured, and is no longer able to work in New Jersey. Fifty-two were killed in 2002 by guns in the hands of criminals, sold negligently—people should have the ability to go to court and get recompense. These are not junk lawsuits, not frivolous lawsuits.

Law enforcement officers ought to have the ability to protect their rights in court. They should have their day in court. That is what this amendment does, and the narrow definitions that are allowed for in the underlying bill will keep Officers McGuire and Lemongello out of court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to vote against the Corzine amendment. I ask it on behalf of the Fraternal Order of Police, some 311,000 strong, who oppose this amendment, who oppose a suit in a law that is meant to treat all fairly and equitably. This amendment would gut the underlying bill, S. 1885, and I ask my colleagues to oppose it and vote against it.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 2629. The yeas and nays have already been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. McCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Colorado (Mr. CAMPBELL), the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), and the Senator from Alaska (Ms. MURKOWSKI) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. EDWARDS), the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote “yea.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 56, as follows:

The amendment (No. 2629) was rejected.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. REID. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, we have worked a long day and through what this time last night was appearing to be a very complicated unanimous consent. But I think it worked well today. All of our colleagues worked hard, and we have been able to meet all but one vote we had on that unanimous consent.

It is my understanding that it is possible Senator BINGAMAN will offer his amendment in the morning.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if my friend will yield, on our side, Senator DAYTON will be here in the morning to offer his amendment. Following that, Senator LEVIN will offer an amendment. Senator BINGAMAN wishes to offer his amendment on Monday.

I also say to my friend that Senator REED has told me he will come tomorrow or Monday to start laying the groundwork for his amendment and the amendment with Senator FEINSTEIN. The votes on those amendments will occur Tuesday morning. When they get the floor, they can talk about their amendments either tomorrow or Monday.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada for his cooperation in working with us to facilitate this bill today, to move it in a timely way and get the votes necessary throughout the day. He has worked hard, along with all of us, to get that accomplished. We have had several votes.

Let me also thank, midway through this, my staff and certainly the staff of the Judiciary Committee and others who worked to make sure we had the information in a timely way to move forward.

It is my understanding this is the last vote of the day.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I rise in support of this most important legislation. In fact, I am a cosponsor of this bill, which is sponsored by Senators CRAIG and BAUCUS.

This legislation protects firearm and ammunition manufacturers from lawsuits related to deliberate and illegal misuse of their products. Even more important, it protects the rights of Americans who choose to legally purchase and use their products.

As a gun owner since I was a young boy, I strongly support the constitutional right of law-abiding citizens to keep and bear arms. This constitutionally protected right of responsible individuals should not be compromised or jeopardized by a small handful who use firearms to commit crimes.
In my native State of Nevada, many people own firearms and the vast majority of them use their guns responsibly and safely. It is their right to do so, guaranteed in the United States Constitution. It is not some privilege granted at the whim of Congress or any other part of government. So I will work on a bipartisan basis to protect and safeguard that right. I will work to pass this bill, and I think we have the votes to pass it.

Toward the end of last year, we tried to consider this bill in the United States Senate. Unfortunately, we didn’t have enough time left in the first session of this Congress to consider this bill in a fair manner.

Now the time has come to pass this bill. We will now debate and vote on the amendments that Senators want to offer to this bill, and then we will pass it. And when we do, we will be standing up for the Constitution and the rights of every American citizen. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant Journal clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to a period of morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SECOND NOTICE OF PROPOSED PROCEDURAL RULEMAKING

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the attached statement from the Office of Compliance be entered into the Record today pursuant to section 303(b) of the Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 (2 U.S.C. 1384(b)).

OFFICE OF COMPLIANCE

PROCEDURAL RULEMAKING

On September 4, 2003, a Notice of Proposed Amendments to the Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance was published in the Congressional Record at S1110, and H7944. As specified by the Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 (“Act”) at Section 303(b) (2 U.S.C. 1384(b)), a 30 day period for comments from interested parties ensued. In response, the Office received a number of comments regarding the proposed amendments.

At the request of a commenter, for good reason shown, the Board of Directors extended the 30 day comment period until October 20, 2003. The extension of the comment period was published in the Congressional Record on October 15, 2003.

On October 15, 2003, an announcement that the Board of Directors intended to hold a hearing on December 2, 2003 regarding the proposed procedural rule amendments was published in the Congressional Record at H9475 and S12599. On November 21, 2003, a Notice of Decision was published in the Congressional Record. The December 2, 2003 hearing was published in the Congressional Record at S13394 and H12394.

The Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance has determined to issue this Second Notice of Proposed Amendment to the Procedural Rules, which includes changes to the initial proposed amendments, together with a new Notice of Proposed Amendment. As set forth in greater detail herein below, interested parties are being afforded another opportunity to comment on these proposed amendments.

The complete existing Procedural Rules of the Office of Compliance may be found on the Office’s web site at www.compliance.gov.

How to submit comments:

Comments regarding the proposed amendments to the Rules of Procedure of the Office of Compliance set forth in this NOTICE are invited for a period of thirty (30) days following the date of the appearance of this NOTICE in the Congressional Record. In addition to being posted on to being posted on the Office of Compliance’s section 508 compliant web site (www.compliance.gov), this NOTICE is also published in alternative formats: Large Print, Braille. Requests for this NOTICE in an alternative format should be made to: Bill Thompson, Executive Director, or Alma Candelaria, Deputy Executive Director, Office of Compliance, at 202-724-9250 (voice) or 202-426-1912 (TDD). Submission of comments must be made in writing to the Executive Director, Office of Compliance, 110 Second Street, S.E., Room LA-200, Washington, D.C. 20540-1999. It is requested, but not required, that an electronic version of any comments be provided on an accompanying computer disk. Comments may also be submitted by facsimile to the Executive Director at 202-426-1913 (a non-toll-free number.) Those wishing to receive confirmation of the receipt of their comments are requested to provide a self-addressed, stamped post card with their submission.

Copies of submitted comments will be available for review on the Office’s web site at www.compliance.gov, and at the Office of Compliance, 110 Second Street, S.E., Washington, D.C. 20540-1999, on Monday through Friday (non-Federal holidays) between the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. (EST).

Supplementary Information: The Congressional Accountability Act of 1995 (CAA), PL 104-1, was enacted into law on January 23, 1996. The CAA applies the rights and protections of 11 federal labor and employment statutes to covered employees and employing offices within the Legislative Branch of Government. Section 301 of the CAA (2 U.S.C. 1381) establishes the Office of Compliance as an independent office within that Branch. Section 303 (2 U.S.C. 1383) directs that the Executive Director of the Office of Compliance, as the Chief Operating Officer of the agency, adopt rules of procedure governing the Office of Compliance, subject to approval by the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance. The rules of procedure generally establish the process by which alleged violations of the laws made applicable to the Legislative Branch under the CAA will be considered and resolved. The rules include procedures for counseling, mediation, and election between filing an administrative complaint with the Office of Compliance or filing a civil action in U.S. District Court. The rules also include the procedures for processing Occupational Safety and Health investigations and employee complaints of discrimination as well as the process for the conduct of administrative hearings held as the result of the filing of an administrative complaint under all of the statutes applied by the Act, and for appeals of a decision by a hearing officer to the Board of Directors of the Office of Compliance, and for the filing of an appeal to the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. The rules also contain other matters of general applicability to the operation of the Office of Compliance.

These proposed amendments to the Rules of Procedure are the result of the experience acquired in processing disputes under the CAA during the period since the original adoption of these rules in 1995.
