This Congress won't think twice about doing everything necessary to meet the critical needs of the desperate citizens in the affected regions of our country.

The shock and grief which has rightly motivated this degree of Federal support is, how- ever, also giving way to anger. Over the past 4 years, a great portion of our national discourse has focused on preparedness. Members of Congress have created new govern- ment entities, spent billions upon billions of dollars on them, and spoken at great length about the need for our country to be perpetu- ally vigilant and ready to respond to any disaster which could befall it.

It is therefore not surprising that the loss of life produced by this hurricane—perhaps four times as great as the human cost of Sep- tember 11, 2001—has incensed our citizens and shocked observers around the world. It has revealed that we are still unable to re- spond to homeland disasters in the fast and aggressive manner required.

But as is often the case, what has hap- pened in the Gulf States has also revealed a picture which can only be described as a skewed set of national priorities. Simply put, this was a tragedy which didn't have to happen. People at all levels of government have known for years that New Orleans was a greatly vulner- able city. In fact, in 2001, the Federal Emer- gency Management Agency produced a list of the worst disasters which could confront our country. A hurricane striking New Orleans was at the top of that list.

And so, it would be reasonable to expect that during the years leading up to this past week, local, State, and Federal Governments would have been doing everything within their power to prepare a complete and carefully planned strategy for how to deal with the after- math of such an event.

They didn't. It was obvious that we still are not ready to evacuate a large number of peo- ple from their homes to safety quickly and ef- fectively. This failing is a danger to all Ameri- cans, and must be corrected immediately.

But what is worse, our government spent the last few years actually undermining our readiness for just such events in New Orle- ans and the surrounding region. Federal funds for flood control projects in that city have faced massive recent budget cuts. To cite but one example: The U.S. Army Corps of Engi- neers, which has so valiantly struggled against the rising floodwaters this week, had to struggle previously against an 80 percent cut of its funding for New Orleans in 2004. Predictably, one of the major motivators of cuts like these was the spiraling costs of American military operations in Iraq, which continue to siphon off tens of billions of dollars from domestic pro- grams.

The natural defenses of New Orleans faced an assault as well. In 2003, the current Admin- istration reversed a previous commitment to defending coastal wetlands which would have helped to mitigate the effect of storms on the Gulf coast. Instead, the areas were opened up for rapid development.

Nor were the people of the region given the tools they needed for survival. Poverty in America has been increasing year after year. Now, 12.7 percent of our population lives in poverty—a far greater number than in 2001. As is overwhelmingly obvious, those damaged the most by Hurricane Katrina were some of our country's poorest citizens. Before the storm hit, they were out of direct commu- nication with authorities. They had no means to evacuate themselves or their families. And during the critical hours when wealthier resi- dents were fleeing, the poorest were left alone to fend for themselves.

It is true that the devastation vested upon New Orleans and the Gulf region was the product of an act of nature. But its severity was greatly exacerbated by a combination of a lack of vision by our leaders and a failure to properly prioritize our Nation's energies and resources. Despite all the talk to the contrary, our government has viewed elective foreign wars as more important than having a real system in place here at home which can re- spond to any contingency. It hasn't seriously worked to address the poverty which makes millions of people all the more vulnerable to disasters. And it has seen commercial activity as simply being more valuable than defending the naturally existent barriers to disaster which we should be perfectly willing to save.

If anything positive can come from this, I hope it's a wake up call. This week, our fail- ures had horrific consequences for millions of people, and they were especially devastating for just those men and women our society should be focused on the most: the poor, the elderly, the sick, the needy, the displaced, and the otherwise defenseless. We must address the serious problems head on and work to solve them. Our errors should not be covered up with polit- ical grand standing and slaps on the back. This failure must not be swept under the rug. If we don't learn from this horrible, horrible mistake, I fear we will repeat it, at a new point in time, and at a new place on the map.

This Congress must do what is right for the people of this Nation. They will be watching.

EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT TO MEET IMMEDIATE NEEDS ARISING FROM THE CONSEQUENCES OF HURRICANE KATRINA, 2005

SPRECH OF
HON. MICHAEL N. CASTLE
OF DELAWARE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 2, 2005

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 3649, the supplemental emergency appropriations act to meet the immediate needs arising from the consequences of Hurricane Katrina. But more importantly, I rise today in support of the hundreds of thousands of men, women and children who are suffering throughout the Gulf Coast States as a result of what has been called our Nation’s greatest natural disaster, Hurricane Katrina. I know I speak for all of my colleagues when I say our prayers are with each and everyone of them as they struggle through these extremely difficult and life threatening times.

The supplemental legislation we are approving today is absolutely critical to continue the infusion of federal funding into this area. News agencies have reported the cost of this disaster to be around $500 million a day. The $10.5 billion in federal funding we are approving today should be viewed as a down payment in terms of funding and resources to come in the following months. I am confident these resources will be used efficiently and effectively, helping those most in need and importantly, helping to support emergency protective measures as well as debris removal and rehabilitation.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency should be recognized for its response to this disaster and their organization of food, water, medical supplies, generators, shelter and other resources to help the areas which have been displaced due to Hurricane Katrina. And the Department of Defense and National Guard should be recognized for the deployment of military personnel who are helping communities respond to this crisis.

I know personally that every State is pooling their resources and doing all it can to help these victims in the Gulf Coast area. For example in my home State of Delaware, we have deployed National Guard troops and planes to help at Ground Zero and in the surrounding disaster areas; Delaware State University is waiving tuition for Tulane University students to attend class; my office is working with the Food Bank of Delaware to start a Hunger Drive for those in need; local schools are collecting donations and sending them to the victims; and, Delmarva Power is sending workers to restore electricity in the region. But I am confident we can reach even deeper and partner together to help our fellow Americans.

It is always in times of tragedy—like the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001 or the Tsunami this past December in Southeast Asia—where human decency and patriotism is front and center. We need to muster the same resources and patriotism and provide the same help to the victims of Hurricane Katrina. I am hopeful the Federal Government will continue to respond in a way that is appropriate, action oriented and immediate to the Gulf Coast Region. As I have said, the funding we are approving today is just the beginning.

I expect a more comprehensive package to reach the House Floor in the coming weeks, once more precise estimates are understood. These are very sad and trying times. May God Bless those in need and their families.

FRANCHISING APPRECIATION DAY

HON. RICHARD H. BAKER
OF LOUISIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, September 7, 2005

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to welcome over 300 franchisees, franchisee suppliers and franchisee suppliers members of the International Franchise Association who are visiting Washington on September 13 as part of “Franchise Appreciation Day.” TheIFA’s annual fly-in to the Nation’s Capital.

As I am sure my colleagues are aware, the IFA is the world’s oldest and largest trade association representing the franchise community with a membership roster that includes more than 2,000 franchisors, 8,000 franchisees and 400 suppliers.

Franchising is a driving force of our economy and generates $1.53 trillion in economic output and one-of-every-seven jobs in the Nation’s private-sector economy, according to a study conducted for the IFA Educational Foundation by PricewaterhouseCoopers. The “Economic Impact of Franchised Businesses” study found that there are more than 760,000 franchised small businesses in the U.S., generating more than 18 million jobs.

Those statistics are impressive enough on their own, but of particular concern and interest to me is the initiative of the International Franchise Association has taken to help our veterans move from their service in the armed forces into the world of franchise ownership. Through the Veterans Transition Franchise Initiative, commonly known as “VetFran,” 360 veterans have been assisted in purchasing their own franchise businesses and more than 120 more are in various stages of negotiation.

VetFran was established by Don Dwyer, the late founder of The Dwyer Group and an IFA leader, during Operation Desert Storm. It was initiated following the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks. The program requires that participating franchisors offer veterans their “best deal” through discounts or other incentives that are determined by each company.
