straight face that we have addressed the revolving door problem in a meaningful way.

Let me emphasize one thing about this amendment. It does not apply to former staff. The reason is simple. We let, or rather, former staffers leave this building and become lobbyists tomorrow. They are limited in what offices they can contact, but they are allowed to lobby. So preventing them from engaging in lobbying activities only with respect to certain offices would be unfair.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I listened with interest to my friend from Wisconsin. I have to repeat what I said on the floor before. I may be the only one—I am not sure—who has had experience with the revolving door, as one who went through it. I worked in the Nixon administration. The day after I walked out, I lost a number of clients who wanted me to lobby them at my former department. I was at the Department of Transportation, and I was the chief lobbyist. We pretend that executive departments don’t have lobbyists. We call them congressional relations specialists or congressional liaisons, but they are lobbyists. And I had been lobbying the Congress on behalf of the Department of Transportation.

In that role I got access to the Secretary’s inner circle. And the day after I left, I was hired by people who had interests before the Department. There was no prohibition for that at that time. So I went to the Department of Transportation and to my old friends with whom I had been working very closely for that period of time. I discovered very quickly that the fact that I no longer was at the Secretary’s ear, the fact that I no longer had any position of influence in the Department made the whole lot less welcome in their offices than I had been the week before. They were happy to see me. They were polite. But they had other things to do. And they were happy to get me out of their offices and out of their hair as quickly as they could.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. BENNETT. I would just say, in response to my friend from Utah, that I don’t doubt for a minute that what he has said is true. But to generalize from his experience I don’t think makes sense. Our former colleagues are making millions of dollars trading on their experience. Our former colleagues are making millions of dollars trading on their experience. I don’t think these lobbying firms are throwing away their money for nothing. And I know the public doesn’t believe that, which is a very good reason to adopt this amendment. It is not silly; it is the right thing to do.

Mr. REID. I yield the floor.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I would just say, in response to my friend from Utah, that I don’t doubt for a minute that what he has said is true. Mr. REID. I yield the floor.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.
Mr. LEAHY. Reserving the right to objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Yes, I will. The PRESIDING OFFICER, is there objection?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, Reserving the right to object, my understanding is that when the Senate turns to minimum wage, the majority leader or his designee, will offer a substitute amendment that will be fully amendable; is that correct?

Mr. REID. True.

Mr. GREGG. Further, I understand the majority leader is aware that I have agreed to withdraw my amendment on this bill, the lobby reform bill, and I will be here Monday to offer my language to the minimum wage bill.

Mr. REID. That is my understanding. The Senator absolutely has that right.

Mr. GREGG. Further reserving the right to object, I understand that the majority leader will be unable to reach consent for a time agreement to vote on my amendment; therefore, it is likely that a cloture motion will be filed on my language. I expect my language to be the first amendment to the bill.

Mr. REID. It may not be the first, but we have an agreement that it would be following my recognition, the amendment of the substitute, and the minority leader, who would be recognized.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the two leaders for their assistance in this process. I believe this is a reasonable way to bring up the amendment that I have offered and to move this bill at the same time.

I understand that on Monday it would be the expectation that nobody will be complaining that I have it on the wrong vehicle.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, before the Republican leader says anything, I will be brief. We have been able, if this agreement is reached, to accomplish what the distinguished Republican leader and I intended to do this week. As a result of that and an agreement to go forward on the minimum wage, there will be no votes tomorrow or Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, to reiterate what the majority leader indicated, as a result of this agreement, which did take a while—and I know some of our colleagues wondered if we were ever going to get there—we will complete the bill tonight, and we will have no votes tomorrow or Monday.

This was a successful example of good negotiation—although it took a while—for a favorable result.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, has the agreement been accepted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, in that we are not voting until 8:10, I will say a few words. Let me say this: This legislation has been extremely difficult to deal with. It is difficult because it directly affects our lives, Members of the Senate. In the short term, this is going to be difficult because we are going to have to get used to the provisions in this piece of legislation. But in the long term, we will all be thankful these steps have been taken. This legislation will remove even the appearance of impropriety from the work done in this Chamber.

This is not a time for declaring victory. Legislation is the art of compromise, the art of consensus building. There has been a victor in all of this when this matter is completed and that is the American people. I am not a victor, I am not a loser. Senator MCCONNELL is not a victor or a loser. We have worked through this in the way that legislators should work through difficult pieces of legislation. I believe last November Americans, through their votes, asked us to make Government honest. We have done that. We are going to give them what I believe is a Government they deserve.

I am satisfied that this debate has been good for this body. Now we are going to move forward, recognizing the last 24 hours has not been easy legislatively. As Senator DURBIN said last night, it was a bump in the road. It was a real bump and people should have had their seatbelts on because it was a difficult bump. But I believe last night there were people looking for an excuse to not move this bill forward. Let me say, underlining and underscored this, as I said last night—and I will say it again for whom I have Great respect, the senior Senator from New Hampshire, is a person who has tremendously strong principles. He believes in this legislation. I believe just as strongly that it is wrong. But he believes it is right. I admire and respect him for doing that, just as his partner on the Budget Committee, Senator CONRAD, is a person of principle. They have worked on this issue and other issues together, as legislators should work together. I so much respect the way they worked together. They disagree on a number of different issues, but they do it in a way that I think brings dignity to this body.

I, also, wish to say one thing about my friend, Senator RON FEINGOLD. He has been a pioneer on a number of different legislative issues. He fought tooth and nail with my friend, the Republican leader, on campaign finance reform. It was a debate that went on for a time in this body. I commend Senator FEINGOLD a person who has talked about ethics since he came to the Senate. There are a lot of people responsible for this legislation, but there is no one more responsible than the Senator from Wisconsin.

He has been a pioneer and he has not let up from the time he came to the Senate to today in moving forward on what he believes is good for this body politic. With rare exception, I agree with him. He is my friend. He is a person on whose judgment I base my vote and I think is worthy of being a Rhodes Scholar, a Harvard graduate with honors, a man who was a dignified and successful lawyer before he came to the Senate. He has shown he is a good legislator. So I have great respect for him.

In the past, I called this legislation the toughest reform since Watergate. That is an understatement. This is the toughest part of the history of this body as it relates to ethics and lawmaking. So everyone tonight, when they vote on this bill, should vote proudly. What is going to happen soon is historic: requiring new lobbying disclosure, requiring former Senators to turn over charitable donations, requiring Senators to pay charter rates on corporate jets. We will restore the confidence of our citizenry in the Government.

I so appreciate the work that has been done on this legislation. I appreciate the work of my friend, the Republican leader. We have had disagreements on this legislation, but we have an agreement in principle as to what this body is all about. I look forward to working together to pass this bipartisan legislation. This is bipartisan legislation sponsored by the Democratic leader and the Republican leader of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader. Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I say to my friend, the majority leader, I couldn’t agree more. This is a classic example of bipartisanship in the Senate at its very best. We had good bipartisan support throughout this year when we passed a similar bill 90 to 8. This year, I think we are going to finish the job.

I particularly wish to recognize, on this side of the aisle, the extraordinary work of Senator GINGRICH in achieving his goal on the next bill up to get an important vote that is important not only to him but to many Members on our side of the aisle.

I extend my congratulations to my good friend, BOB BENNETT, the ranking minority member, who has been involved on this from beginning to end and has done an extraordinary job of managing a very complex and difficult bill; to Senator SUSAN COLLINS, who has been a leader on the Collins-Lieberman amendment on which we will be voting shortly; to Senator Vitter, Senator COBURN, Senator DEMINT, who have been extremely active on this bill, and each of them has an imprint on this final passage measure that we will be dealing with shortly.

Mr. President, I congratulate all Senators for an extraordinary accomplishment, under very difficult circumstances on a broad, bipartisan basis. The patience that was exhibited to allow us to get to this point, I remind everyone, is what produced an opportunity to have no votes tomorrow and no votes on Monday. I think this was worth the wait.

I congratulate the majority leader.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I failed to acknowledge the managers of this bill. I apologize to both of them. They have been masterful in working this bill the last 2 weeks. The two managers are going to be involved heavily in getting this through conference. I have so much respect for both of them. They are outstanding Senators.

I repeat, I didn’t acknowledge them. I should have done that in the beginning because they have done more than anybody else in moving this bill forward. They worked as partners moving this bill forward. It took a difficult partnership because of the different thoughts on different sides of the aisle as to what is good and bad. They have been able to be dignified in what they have done. I appreciate it.

Amendment No. 20

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is the Bennett amendment No. 20.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. BENNETT. How is the time allocated between now and the scheduled votes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No time is allocated. The Senator may take the floor.

Mr. BENNETT. Do I understand, Mr. President, that the votes are not locked in for 8:10 p.m.?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the voting begins at 8:10 p.m.

Mr. BENNETT. So the time between now and 8:10 p.m. is not allocated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I wish to be fair to whoever opposes my amendment to allow time for them to do that, but I would like to speak briefly in favor of my amendment.

My amendment is called the grass-roots lobbying amendment. I have discussed it and its virtues at some length previously during the period of debate, but I remind everyone what this is all about.

This has to do with the regulations and reporting requirements placed on organizations that stimulate people to contact their Members of Congress. These organizations can be, and many times are, outside of Washington, DC. They can, and many times do, carry on their work without ever contacting a Member of Congress directly, participating in any of the activities we normally think of as lobbying. And yet, if an organization or an individual were to stimulate neighbors, Members of a fraternal organization, their bowling club—whatever it is—to try to get them active in the process of petitioning the Government, they run the risk of not registering properly because under the underlying bill, they are defined as lobbyists, and if they fail to fill out their forms properly, if they fail to register properly, they are subject to a $200,000 fine.

The ACLU has said—in my opinion accurately—that this would have a chilling effect on all of these kinds of activities. People on the right side, the National Right to Life, have said this would have a chilling effect on everything we do.

I know there has been talk about astro turf and astroturf and astroturf campaigns. I am certainly competent to know when an astroturf phony campaign has been mounted. The letters and the postcards come into the office, and it is very transparent they are not genuine. And do not need to be protected from my constituents by the language in the underlying bill.

My amendment is very simple. It simply strikes the grassroots provision.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I intend to support amendment No. 20 offered by my colleague from Utah, Senator BENNETT. This amendment would strike section 220, the grassroots reporting provision, from the bill.

Yes, I do. My statement on the need for comprehensive lobbying and ethics reform, I discussed the importance of an informed citizenry and how it is essential to a thriving democracy. A democratic government operates best in the disinfecting light of the public eye. With this bill, we have an opportunity to balance the right of the public to know with its right to petition government; the ability of lobbyists’ to advocate their clients’ causes with the need for truthful public discourse; and the ability of Members of Congress to legislate with the imperative that our government must be free from corrupting influences, both real and perceived. We must act now to ensure that the erosion we see today in the public’s confidence in Congress does not become a collapse of confidence.

We have an obligation to address this crisis of confidence, but we also have an obligation to ensure that we do so in a thoughtful, reasoned, and constitutional manner. It is imperative that we be mindful of the rights of American citizens to freely contact their public officials and take part in the political process. After careful consideration, and much input from groups representing all parts of the political spectrum, it has become evident to me that section 220 of the underlying bill could seriously impact legitimate communications between public interest organizations and their members. This amendment will support the efforts of my colleague from Utah to strike section 220 from the bill.

It is my understanding that, under this provision, small organizations—many with no representation in Washington—would have to register as grassroots lobbying firms. These groups would then have to comply with burdensome quarterly reporting requirements or face fines and criminal penalties. I do not think it was the intention of the proponents of this provision to require the ability of groups to communicate with their membership, but I have concluded that this could very well be the outcome.

The approach taken in the underlying bill is one of greater disclosure of and transparency into the interactions of lobbyists with our public officials. More transparency and disclosure of professional lobbyists’ activities can only lead to better government. Unfortunately, this provision goes too far, and I fear that the unintended consequences would negatively impact the legitimate, constitutionally protected activities of small citizen groups and their members.

Mr. President, I oppose the amendment offered by Senator BENNETT which would strike the grassroots lobbying provision in S. 1.

Several years ago, I, along with several colleagues, undertook the task of strengthening reporting requirements for lobbyists. This culminated in the passage of the Lobbying Disclosure Act which broke new ground by allowing sunlight into the activities of lobbyists in Washington. It is finally required Congressmen to make public disclosure of the billions of dollars spent on lobbying Members of Congress.

While great progress was made, there was a major loophole left open which needs to be closed. Under current law, lobbyists are allowed to exclude the cost of their efforts to stimulate grassroots lobbying when they report under the LDA. We recognized this problem in 1996 but were not successful in efforts to address it. However, I continue to believe that lobbyists who engage in this so-called “Astroturf” lobbying should also be required to disclose their spending.

The Wall Street Journal examined this issue when we last reviewed this and reported that an estimated $790 million was spent on this type of grassroots lobbying in a 2-year period alone. Accounting for the growth in the lobbying industry that we have seen over the last decade, this number is surely over a billion by now.

What sort of activities does money spent on “Astroturf” lobbying efforts pay for? It is spent on phone banks, telephone patch-throughs to Members, and even professional campaign organizers who are paid to go to key congressional districts to organize letter-writing campaigns. These are coordinated efforts costing tens of thousands of dollars which on their face are part of professional lobbying efforts.

I want to work with Senator LIEBERMAN last year to craft a provision during the Homeland Security and Government Affairs Committee’s consideration of the lobbying bill that would close this loophole by requiring disclosure of “paid efforts to stimulate grassroots lobbying.” It requires disclosure by paid lobbyists and lobbying firms who stimulate the grassroots to take action. We even went so far as to define “grassroots lobbying” and exclude it from this provision.

The Bennett amendment, which was included in S. 1 simply requires disclosure. This provision does not in any way “restrain” or “regulate” paid efforts to stimulate grassroots lobbying. All that it does is require paid lobbyists to disclose how much they are spending on their grassroots lobbying efforts. This disclosure would be no more burdensome than the disclosure already required by the Lobbying Disclosure Act for lobbying: Amounts spent for efforts to stimulate grassroots lobbying, like amounts spent on direct lobbying, would be disclosed only in the form of good-faith estimates, which would be rounded to the nearest $20,000.

In addition, the provision, like the Lobbying Disclosure Act, recognizes that certain organizations are already required to track lobbying expenses, and grassroots lobbying expenses, for IRS purposes. The provision allows these organizations to use their IRS numbers for disclosure purposes, ensuring that they do not have to account twice by different rules.

This section was carefully crafted to exclude certain activities that are not part of this Astroturf lobbying industry. Efforts by an organization to communicate with its own members, employees, officers, or shareholders are expressly excluded. Organizations that exist solely to lobby Congress but do not employ paid lobbyists do not have to report. Finally, any grassroots lobbying efforts targeted at less than 500 people do not have to be reported.

I would also like to clarify just who is included to qualify as a lobbyist under this provision, as there seems to be confusion over this point. Paragraph (b) of section 220 clearly states that individuals who are not registered lobbyists now would not have to register as a lobbyist under this provision so long as their expenditures are only directed at grassroots lobbying. This provision is intended to shed light on the dollars being spent by lobbyists. It in no way affects individuals who want to call or write their Member of Congress.

For the past decade, I have allowed lobbyists to exclude the cost of their organized grassroots lobbying campaigns, even while they are reporting their other lobbying expenses. It is time to put an end to this arbitrary exclusion because the public has a right to know who is paying how much to whom in an effort to influence our decisions.

I urge my colleagues to vote “no” on the Bennett amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The hour of 8:10 p.m. having arrived, the question is on agreeing to the Bennett amendment No. 20.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I oppose the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays are ordered open until a sufficient time to consider the yeas and nays. Is there a sufficient time?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, before I propose a unanimous consent request, I would very much like to thank both leaders. I know this has been a difficult day. I think it has worked out, and I think that is to the good. I hope everyone else who has waited hour after hour understands that the leadership was in negotiations and there is a product of those negotiations.

I, also, thank the ranking member with whom it has been a great pleasure for me to work. Members should know that we are new. Members should know that our staffs are new to the committee and that this is their first bill on the floor. I believe they have done an excellent job, both on the Democratic side and on the Republican side. It is a kind of baptism of fire, if you will. I say thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, I thank the chairman of the committee for her kind words. I echo her laudatory comments about the staffs on both sides. This is a baptism of fire for all of us, for my staff and her staff as well, and they have had enough background that they know how to swim.

We are very grateful for the cooperation received and the support that has come from the staff. I look forward to a productive Congress, working with Senator FEINSTEIN on the Rules Committee on all of the other matters that will come before us.

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. President, in a moment, the Senate will adopt the Ensign-McCain-DeMint amendment related to scope of conference. I want to thank Senator MCCAIN and Senator DE MINT for working with me on this amendment.

I also want to explain why this amendment is such an important improvement over the underlying bill. Under the Constitution, the legislative branch controls the purse strings. That is a strong authority given to Congress. Congress must use that authority wisely. As I explained earlier today on the floor, too often conferences insert earmarks in conference reports that were not funded in either bill passed by the House or the Senate.

In a democracy such as ours, Congress should do its business in the full light of day. The entire Senate should consider, debate, and amend legislation in full view of the American public. We should know how Federal dollars are spent. Each project Congress funds should be debated and considered by Congress. We must do a better job of oversight. We must ensure that the taxpayers' dollars are being spent wisely. But when we insert projects in a conference report without debate and without oversight, we fail to live up to our responsibilities as Senators.

What the Ensign-McCain-DeMint amendment would do is fix what has become a broken process. My amendment makes clear that no funds can be raised against any funding, no matter how specific, for any program, project, or account that was not originally funded in either bill sent to conference. This is a simple but critical change. It will improve how Congress operates, and it will make the Government more accountable to the American people.

Mr. M. McCAIN. Mr. President, the underlying substitute does include two provisions that are intended to address the out-of-control earmarking and porkbarrel spending of the past years. And, the adoption of the DeMint and Durbin amendments earlier this week have improved upon the underlying bill to ensure that all earmarks are disclosed—including those to Federal entities, as well as all that are included in statements of managers and conference reports. A number of us supported a similar proposal last year, and I am pleased that the effort was finally successful.

I am now pleased that additional improvements will be adopted with respect to section 1 of the underlying bill concerning out of scope matters in conference reports. The amendment sponsored by Senators ENSIGN, DEMINT, and myself, which I understand is agreeable on both sides, would ensure that points of order can be raised against specific items in conference reports. It would add a definition of any matter so that members are empowered to remove out of scope earmarks and policy riders from conference reports without taking down the entire conference report. And, importantly, it would ensure that funding associated with any provision stricken from a conference report is reduced from the total amount appropriated—a critical requirement missing from the underlying measure.

For example, if a conference report provides $10 million for bridge improvements, but then adds a directive that $5 million of that funding should be directed to a specific bridge in a specific state, our amendment would ensure the $5 million that accompanies that out of scope earmark is also removed from the total allocation of the bill. So that the total appropriated would be $5 million, not $10 million. This is about fiscal restraint, Mr. President. It makes little sense to raise a point of order that is sustained against an out of scope earmark, but to appropriate the funding regardless.

While these improvements proposed and accepted so far, earmark reform still needs to go much further. We need to curtail earmarks, not just disclose them. The process is clearly broken when each year Congress continues to earmark billions and billions of taxpayer dollars, sometimes with virtually no information about the specifics of those earmarks. The scandal that came to light during the last Congress that involved earmarking by a former House member—now in prison—has just been the tip of the iceberg. We must ensure that the process that we have allowed to occur on our watch. The American public, Mr. President, deserves better. That is what this amendment is about.

The growth in earmarked funding in appropriations bills during the past 12 years has been staggering. According to data gathered by CRS, there were 4,126 earmarks in 1994. In 2005, there were 15,877—an increase of nearly 400 percent. There was a little good news in 2006, solely due to the fact that the Labor-HHS appropriations bill was rejected almost entirely free of earmarks—an amazing feat given that there were over 3,000 earmarks the prior year for just that bill. Despite this first reduction in 12 years, it doesn't change the fact that the largest number of earmarks in history have still occurred in the last three years—2004, 2005, and 2006.

Now, let's consider the level of funding associated with those earmarks. I am confident we will fundamentally change business as usual with respect to pork barrel spending. The American public has a powerful voice, and I would have thought more of us would have heard that voice last November. But I do wish that we had given an opportunity to vote on that amendment and I find myself in the same position as I was in last March during debate on lobbying reform when I was not allowed a vote on my amendment. But one day soon, I believe we will change the way we do business in this Chamber.

I filed an amendment designed to curtail earmarking. I was pleased to be joined by Senators FINGOLD and GRAHAM in introducing amendment No. 29. Unfortunately, it is clear that we will not be given an opportunity to vote on that amendment and I find myself in the same position as I was in last March during debate on lobbying reform when I was not allowed a vote on my amendment. But one day soon, I believe the Ensign, McCain, DeMint amendment makes further improvements.

AMENDMENT NO. 98

Mr. OBAMA. Mr. President, I have come to the floor to discuss the amendment I introduced with Senator Fingold to require that lobbyists disclose the contributions that they bundle for campaigns. I am grateful to the leadership for accepting the amendment and believe it strengthens an already very strong bill.

Neither I nor any of my colleagues enjoy the amount of money that running for office requires us to raise and spend. And I realize that having influential people help a campaign by asking their friends for contributions at least makes that task easier. And so I appreciate how difficult it can be for us to legislate our own behavior in this area.
But lobbyists who bundle contributions have a personal stake in the outcome of specific legislation before Congress. And because of that nexus, lobbyists should have to report who they are raising money for and the amounts that they are raising—including the candidates they contact for campaigns from their networks of friends and colleagues.

The legislation before us today is meant to shine a bright light on how lobbyists influence the legislative process. It is not just about meals or gifts or travel but about the millions upon millions of dollars raised to get us elected every few years. We should not keep the biggest role lobbyists play in that process hidden.

We all know that with strict campaign contribution limits, an important sign of a lobbyist's influence is not only how much money he gives but also how much he raises from friends and associates. During the last Presidential election, both candidates made great use of bundling.

For instance, the Bush Rangers each raised over $200,000; the Bush Pioneers each raised over $100,000. The Kerry campaign also relied on “vice chairs” who raised $100,000 or more.

According to a USA Today story in 2003: “Motives for becoming a bundler include the possibility of increased influence on government policy and consideration for appointment to ambassadorships and other government posts.”

And so if we believe that lobbyists should have to disclose campaign contributions, then they should certainly have to disclose the bundling they engage in so that the public knows the relationship between members, their views on policy, and the industries that support them.

Right now, this relationship is largely hidden from public view. So to correct this, and give the American League of Lobbyists, the American Association of Public Accounts, and many others the facts, my amendment would require quarterly reporting of all contributions that a lobbyist collected or arranged that total more than $200 in a calendar year. This includes not only campaign contributions, but also contributions to Presidential campaigns, Senate campaigns, and congressional scholarships, and other government posts.

The amendment has the support of all the major reform advocacy organizations, as well as congressional scholars Nomini and Thomas Susman, the chair of the Ethics Committee for the American League of Lobbyists.

According to Norm Ornstein: “What is needed is disclosure here—who is doing the bundling, for whom, and how much. These are simple but critical steps for openness in the lobbying and money relationship. The public deserves to know—and this amendment gives them that opportunity.”

And in Professor Susan’s words: “Full disclosure of these activities, including the ‘bundling’ of campaign contributions for a candidate, will not burden or inhibit lobbyists. Lobbyists are proud of the role that they play in helping to finance federal campaigns, and we will be just as effective if the public knows about that role as well. Senator Obama’s amendment is a reasonable way to keep these activities out in the open.”

Under the amendment that Senator Feingold and I are offering, contributions are considered to be collected by a lobbyist if they are received by the lobbyist and forwarded to the campaign. Contributions are considered to be arranged by a lobbyist if there is an arrangement or understanding between the lobbyist and a campaign that the lobbyist will receive some kind of credit or recognition for having raised the money.

In discussing this proposal that I am offering, a Washington Post editorial this week said: “No single change would add more to public understanding of how money really operates in Washington.”

This is an important addition to the bill we are considering, and I thank my colleagues for accepting it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments (Nos. 9, 98, 51, 31, 33, 77, 41, 57, and 39, as modified, en bloc) were agreed to, as follows:

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following amendments be considered en bloc and agreed to en bloc, with the motions to reconsider laid on the table, and that the action thereupon appear separately in the RECORD. I believe this has been cleared on both sides of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments (Nos. 9, 51, 31, 33, 41, and 57) were agreed to.

The amendment (No. 39), as modified, was agreed to, as follows:

The amendment (No. 20) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the Lieberman-Collins amendment.

The Senator from California.

AMENDMENT NO. 38
Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, there have been a variety of proposals for what has been called an Office of Public Integrity. The Senate voted 67 to 30 against such one proposal last year. Last time, Senators JOHNSON and VOINOVICH, the chairs of the Ethics Committee, stood in opposition. This time, the new chair of the Ethics Committee, Senators BOXER and CORNYN, stand in opposition.

I recognize the strong interest in this issue, especially by Senators encouraged, not discouraged, and I believe the language in the bill could well discourage citizen contact with Members of Congress. So I urge my colleagues to support the amendment offered by the Senator from Utah.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I send a manager's package to the desk. It combines a number of technical corrections requested by the Parliamentarian, the Secretary of the Senate, and the Indian Affairs Committee. It is concurred in by both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from California [Mrs. FEINSTEIN], for herself and Mr. BENNETT, proposes an amendment numbered 99.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

AMENDMENT NO. 38
Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, there have been a variety of proposals for what has been called an Office of Public Integrity. The Senate voted 67 to 30 against such one proposal last year. Last time, Senators JOHNSON and VOINOVICH, the chairs of the Ethics Committee, stood in opposition. This time, the new chair of the Ethics Committee, Senators BOXER and CORNYN, stand in opposition.

I recognize the strong interest in this issue, especially by Senators
LIEBERMAN, COLLINS, OBAMA, FEINGOLD, MCCAIN, and others. I have spoken with Senator OBAMA about it. I have assured him that we would hold a hearing in the Rules Committee and that we would take a look at this proposal and what might or might not be done.

I want to support this amendment, and I will see that the Rules Committee and the Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs Committee hold these hearings. They will focus on these proposals and ways of strengthening ethics enforcement in the Senate.

Let me say this now. I do believe we need to take great care in how we do this. Yes, we need to reassure the public that those who run afoul of the Senate rules will be held accountable. But we must make sure this does not simply become a new tool used by political opponents who would seek to manipulate the political process by filing false claims. You can be sure that the minute a claim becomes public, with or without any verification as to its veracity, and is released to the public, that claim will be a 30-second spot in someone's campaign. That is not what we are about.

We have to also ensure that we do not create an office— with a special prosecutor bound and determined to justify his or her existence by creating an atmosphere of ongoing investigation—that will cost taxpayers millions of dollars. The Constitution provides that the Senate has the right to determine for itself what rules should be applied to its proceedings. Each of Congress may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behavior, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Our Founders knew the importance of this and placed it in article I. The challenge we face right now is how to do it right and ensure that the tough ethics rules we are putting in place will be vigorously overseen and enforced.

I urge a no vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment to create an Office of Public Integrity.

This underlying bill is a very good one. It will help to restore public confidence in the integrity of our decisions. But we leave the job undone if we do not create an Office of Public Integrity. I thank the leaders on both sides of the aisle for allowing the Senate to have a vote on this important issue.

The problem is that the current system is inherently conflicted. We are our own advisers, we are our own investigators, we are our own prosecutors, we are our own judges, and we are our own jurors. This amendment would take only the investigative part of the process and invest it in an independent, impartial Office of Public Integrity that would help restore the public's confidence in the integrity of our ethics system.

I yield the remainder of the time to the Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, there is not much to add to my colleague from Maine. I thank her for her statement.

Basically, we have a very strong reform of the rules by which we govern our ethics and that of those who lobby before us. What is missing is an equal reform of the process which would do that.

Nothing in this amendment alters the superior role of the Senate Ethics Committee pursuant to the Constitution to make final decisions on claims before it. This amendment simply sets up an independent investigative office. Incidentally, it is merely responding to what my friend from California, Senator FEINSTEIN, said. There is actually more protection against abuse of this process with frivolous complaints than there is in the current system.

I have a feeling this will not pass tonight, but our committee is going to take it up and hopefully report out a bill independently later this session.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The amendment (No. 30) was rejected. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The substitute amendment, as amended, is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 3), as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. President, I have been privileged to serve as a legislator—first in the Maryland House of Delegates, then in the U.S. House of Representatives, and now in the Senate. I appreciate the trust that the people of Maryland placed in me. And I appreciate how important it is that we adhere to the strictest ethical standards. The American people need to believe their Government is on the up and up.

I served on the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct from 1991 to 1997. I served as the ranking member of its Adjudicative subcommittee that investigated and ultimately recommended sanctions against former House Speaker Newt Gingrich. In 1997, the House leadership appointed me to serve as the cochairman of the House Ethics Reform Task Force, with my colleague Bob Livingston from Louisiana. Our bipartisan task force came up with a comprehensive set of reforms to overhaul the ethics process. We created a bipartisan package to change House and committee rules. This was the last bipartisan effort in the House to fix ethics procedures. Unfortunately, the ethics process in the House broke down after that.

Here in the Senate, there has been more bipartisan cooperation when it comes to ethics reform. Last year, the Senate voted 90 to 8 to approve a reform bill. And we are getting off to a good start this year, with both the Democratic leader and the Republican leader co-sponsoring both S. 1 and the substitute amendment. Members on both sides of the aisle have been given ample opportunity to offer amendments and have them considered.

As amended, S. 1 represents a significant change in the way elected officials, senior staff, and lobbyists would do business—change the American people are demanding.

When it comes to how we treat ourselves, this legislation revokes the penalties of Members of bribing public officials and witnesses, perjury, and other crimes. S. 1 bans gifts and meals from lobbyists. It slows down the revolving door by extending lobbying bans for former Members and staff. It eliminates floor privileges for former Members who become lobbyists. And it stops partisan attempts, such as the K Street Project to influence private-sector hiring. The bill makes ethics training mandatory for Members and staff.

When it comes to making how Congress works more transparent, this legislation shines a spotlight on earmarks, targeted tax breaks, and tariff reduction bills, to make it clear who is... offering them, and on whose behalf. S. I ensures that the minority will get to participate in conference committees, and that conference reports can’t be changed after they’re signed by a majority of the conference. The bill requires that conference reports be posted on the Internet 48 hours prior to consideration so that Members of Congress, staff, and the public can find out what’s in them.

What it comes to how lobbyists are to act, this legislation puts an end to the lavish parties they throw in our honor at the national conventions. S. I quadruples the penalty for failure to comply with the requirements of the Lobbying Disclosure Act of 1995. It requires lobbyists to file quarterly reports instead of semi-annually. And it directs the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives to maintain on the Internet a publicly available database of lobbying disclosure information.

I am pleased to report that the bill contains an amendment that Senator COLEMAN from Minnesota and I offered to require the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives to establish a website freely available to the public that will contain easy-to-understand information on all officially related congressional travel subject to disclosure under the gift rules.

For this reason, I was gratified to see the House of Representatives move so quickly on ethics and lobby reform when the 110th Congress convened, and I was pleased Majority Leader REID placed ethics and lobby reform at the top of the Senate agenda. Both the Legislative Transparency and Accountability Act of 2007 and the Lobbying Transparency and Accountability Act of 2007 ensure that Congress is working in their interest—not for special interests. The American people deserve a government which is honest and open. They want a government which will fight for their values not for corporate values. Democrats have made it our top priority to clean up Washington and clean up politics.

What does this bill do? This bill bans all gifts and travel from lobbyists. It closes the revolving door by extending the lobbying ban for former Members of Congress from one to two years.

The American people want to know that lawmakers are fighting for the people they represent—not the special interests. Special interests and lobbyists. This bill holds lawmakers and lobbyists accountable by creating real penalties for those who break the law—by punishing them with jail time not just fines. This bill sets the tone for this Congress—dirty politics will not be tolerated.

The American people demanded change in the last election. They wanted real ethics reform. This bill holds lawmakers and lobbyists accountable by creating real penalties for those who break the law—by punishing them with jail time not just fines. This bill sets the tone for this Congress—dirty politics will not be tolerated.

If we are going to restore the American public’s trust in their government, any reform we enact must squarely confront the undue influence that special interests and lobbyists exert on the legislative process. It must strengthen their government lobbying and close the revolving door between the “K Street” lobbying firms and the Capitol. It must shine a light on what has until now been a legislative process corrupted by backroom promises and deals struck in the dead of night. It must promulgate new rules that curb wasteful spending by creating greater transparency in the earmark process.

Earning back the confidence and trust of the American people will require greater transparency and stronger laws. The American public deserves to be certain that their elected officials are not being swayed by lavish gifts offered as quid pro quo for promoting special agendas. To that end, gifts from registered lobbyists have no place in our legislative process. For that reason, I support the sweeping ban on lobbyist-paid gifts in the Senate bill. This ban includes not just meals but also gifts of travel and lodging, areas that have been the subject of notorious abuse.

Our commitment to a new era of openness must go hand in hand with a similar commitment on the part of lobbyists. We must demand more disclosure from lobbyists about their practices and increase the penalties for their failure to disclose their activities. To be clear, our Constitution protects the right of Americans to petition their government. However, what it does not do is protect their ability to hire lobbyists to buy influence by showering elected officials with expensive gifts and vacations. Reining in wasteful spending must also be a part of any ethical reform we undertake. Special interest, special reform and accountability to the process of earmarking. Although the term “earmark” has taken on a negative connotation, the designation of funds for individual projects or programs is not in and of itself deviant. The practice of earmarking permits essential public projects that would otherwise go unfunded and ignored to receive critical funds that can sustain their important community work. However, the process of placing earmarks currently distributed is susceptible to corruption and abuse, and that must be corrected by injecting both accountability and transparency into the process.

In order to promote accountability, the Senate bill requires that the legislator sponsoring the earmark identify him or herself and provide a description explaining the “government purpose” served by the sponsored project. Additionally, I believe we can improve accountability by mandating publication of the earmark for a minimum period of time prior to any vote on the underlying measure, ensuring that both other elected officials and the general public have the opportunity to scrutinize the sponsored outlay. Taking these common sense steps would ensure that legislators are made to answer for the spending they sponsor.

The American people demand a more open and honest government that strives to put their concerns ahead of those of special interest, one that endeavors to hold its elected officials accountable to the electorate, and one that inspires the confidence of its people. To achieve these goals, we must remove any semblance of impropriety. The reforms contained in both the Legislative Transparency and Accountability Act of 2007 and the Lobbying Transparency and Accountability Act of 2007 enact much-needed and long-awaited reforms that move us toward those goals.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today as a proud cosponsor to this Senate ethics reform legislation. The American people sent a clear message in last election. No more bribes. No more dirty politics. They wanted real ethics reform. The American people want to know that Congress is working in their interest—not for special interests. The American people deserve a government which is honest and open. They want a government which will fight for their values not for corporate values. Democrats have made it our top priority to clean up Washington and clean up politics.

This bill sets the tone for this Congress—dirty politics will not be tolerated.

The American people demanded change in the last election. They wanted a government they could trust. They wanted a government that would protect everyday, hardworking Americans. This bill is a step in the right direction. We are listening to what American people are telling us. We here in the U.S. Senate are taking their concerns seriously. We are making changes in Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. McCASKILL). The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 1), as amended, was passed, as follows: (The bill will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)

Mr. BENNETT. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DURBIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I had asked for this time to spend a few minutes talking about what has happened in the last few weeks. One of the things that is going on in our country is that we have a little bit of a crisis of confidence in our legislative bodies. Some of it is well deserved.

We have had a bill on the floor under the guise of ethics reform. The bill is a statute. It is not a rule. It is going to become law. But I think the American people should be on our side. I was one of two people who voted against this bill and for some very good reasons.

What the American people would like to see is transparency. They would like to see clarity. They would like to see sunshine. Some of the amendments to this bill made it much better; there is no question about that. But some of the things that happened along the way did not allow the American people to really know what is going on in terms of what needs to change. A lot of the amendments tonight were accepted only on the basis that they would preclude debate. Now it is Thursday night. The Senate is not in session tomorrow. And the question people have to ask is, why didn't we debate those amendments? Why didn't we want to debate those amendments? The reason we didn't want to debate those amendments is because they are going to be discarded as soon as we get to conference.

Let me talk about one of them because I believe it is important. We have had hundreds of stories over the last 2 years of Members of Congress who have used the earmark process to enhance the well-being of either members of their office staff's families, personal family members, and even in the House a couple of occasions where they helped themselves. I am thinking particularly about a $1.2 million road that was built for properties owned by the Member of Congress. That fact is, that should have been debated. The American people need to know what the problems are, and there needs to be sunshine. There needs to be transparency about what we do.

The question the American people ought to ask is: What is going to happen when this bill goes to conference and what is going to come out? And is all the rhetoric we heard on the floor truly going to be reflected in an ethics bill that will change behavior?

A lot of effort has been concentrated on lobbyists. Lobbyists aren't the problem. Members of Congress are the problem. And transparency solves that problem. We want to have transparency everywhere. We are going to say you can't take a meal from somebody, but you certainly can deliver on a couple-million-dollar earmark. And we are going to create a situation where we say we are going to expose it, but you shouldn't count on that happening until the final bill comes.

My faith and my hope is that we put everything we have done away and don't do any of the things that have been accepted by the Senate tonight because of political consequences, but that we do what the American people want, and that is to be transparent in both our actions and our deeds. The way to clean up ethical problems in Congress is for the Members to be transparent about what they do. So if this bill were to come back and we pass it just as it is, we are going to go through all these hoops that will have been created, and we are going to make people's careers. And we are going to have really no commitment from the Senate to serve. We are going to have a "gotcha" system. That is what we just passed. Good, honorable people of integrity are going to make an innocent mistake, and they are going to be gotten. I am not talking about the things that were done that we have seen over the past 4 to 6 years from both parties. I am talking about good, honest people making an innocent mistake, and it is going to ruin them. Consequently, people are not going to come here. Only those who are shielded and who in the case are careerists and have enough money that no matter what happens, they can defend themselves with the trial lawyers they are going to need to defend themselves after we pass all these rules that are going to come.

I know this sounds a bit negative now that we have passed supposedly an ethics reform bill. But my warning to the American people and to this body is, we should measure that when we see the final product. And we should measure the final product against Senator DeMint's amendment for true transparency on earmarks, my amendment on true lack of ethical bias in terms of monetary gain for staff members' families or Members' families in terms of earmarks. My faith will be renewed if, in fact, we come out with a great ethics bill. I want to remain and be convinced that that is what we are doing.

The final point I want to make is process. Why did we not want to debate in the front of the American people the idea that it is unethical for somebody to gain monetarily, directly or indirectly, staff member or staff member's family. Member's family or Member, from an earmark? Why didn't we want to debate that? That is a question the press ought to be asking. That is a question we all ought to be asking, as the conference comes back.

The way we solve the problems with ethics in the Senate is through complete and total transparency about what we do. And if we are not ashamed of what we are doing, we should not be ashamed of putting up what we are doing and how we are doing it.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE RULES OF PROCEDURE

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:
