House of Representatives

The House was not in session today. Its next meeting will be held on Monday, February 2, 2009, at 2 p.m.

Senate

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29, 2009

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable SHERROD BROWN, a Senator from the State of Ohio.

PRAYER

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Today's prayer will be offered by Rabbi Daniel J. Fellman, Anshe Emeth Memorial Temple, New Brunswick, NJ.

The guest Chaplain offered the following prayer:

We arrive this morning filled with thanks to our Creator who endows each of us with inalienable rights; to our founding leaders who joined those rights with responsibilities for ourselves and our fellow citizens; to the people of our Nation for entrusting us with awe-inspiring duties; to each other as we endeavor to maintain civility, striving for dignity and high purpose in conducting the people's business.

Today and every day, let us strive to fill this Chamber with humanity, humility, and hope, honoring our Nation's past while honing our unique yet shared understanding of the future's ever-present call.

As we turn to the business of the people, remind us that we have not come into being to hate or to destroy but, rather, we have come into being to praise, to labor, and to love.

With gratitude in our souls, we turn to the source of all, seeking blessing for ourselves, our families, our endeavors.

May we be guided by the light of the Lord, and may we be of the generation who shines that light for all to see.

And let us live the words of our first President: "May the Father of all mercies scatter light and not darkness in our paths, and make us all in our several vocations useful here, and in his or her own due time and way, everlastingly happy."

Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable SHERROD BROWN led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH INSURANCE PROGRAM REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2009

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate shall resume consideration of H.R. 2, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 2) to amend title XXI of the Social Security Act to extend and improve the Children's Health Insurance Program, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Coburn amendment No. 49 (to H.R. 2, as amended), to prevent fraud and restore fiscal accountability to the Medicaid and SCHIP programs.

Coburn amendment No. 50 (to H.R. 2, as amended), to restore fiscal discipline by making the Medicaid and SCHIP programs more accountable and efficient.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Nebraska is recognized.

THE GUEST CHAPLAIN

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, I am very pleased that Rabbi Daniel Fellman could join us today as guest Chaplain to deliver the opening prayer for the Senate.

Rabbi Fellman, a native of Omaha and a respected religious leader, currently is assistant rabbi at Anshe Emeth Memorial Temple in New Brunswick, NJ. He is a much admired teacher who has served on the faculty at the Yavneh Day School in Cincinnati and numerous religious schools. He served as student rabbi in congregations in Natchez, MS; Petoskey, MI; Joplin, MO; and LaSalle, IL. He also served in summer rabbinic positions in Nebraska and at the University of Cincinnati Hillel. In Cincinnati, he helped foster interfaith understanding as a member of the steering committee of the Catholic-Jewish Educators Dialogue of the American Jewish Committee.

Rabbi Fellman received his undergraduate degree in political science from Colorado College. He earned a master of arts in Hebrew letters from Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati, and he was ordained in June 2005.

On a more personal note, however, Rabbi Fellman is an Eagle Scout, and, like me, Boy Scouts taught him the importance of dedication and service to the community.

While he is still young now, I have counted him as a friend for a long time. During my first campaign for Governor in 1990, I was grateful when a teenage Daniel Fellman often showed up with his father, University of Nebraska at Omaha political science professor Dick Fellman—who is with us today, and his mother—to volunteer.

One night Daniel Fellman, a relatively green driver then, got into an automobile accident. There were no serious injuries sustained, but news reached one of my closest aides and my campaign manager the next morning before Daniel arrived in the office. That was my great friend, the late, great Sonny Foster.

The next morning, when Daniel did arrive at our campaign office, Sonny greeted him: Hello, Crash. Ever since, to me and a few others, he has been “Crash Fellman,” but now he is Rabbi Fellman. We understand it is a nickname, always given and received by a smile.

I thank Rabbi Fellman and his parents and his family for being here today and for his words of prayer this morning. May they guide us to do what is right for America and for the world.

RECOGNITION OF THE MINORITY LEADER

ECONOMIC STIMULUS LEGISLATION

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, Republicans have had an opportunity this week to highlight a number of our better ideas to ensuring low-income children receive quality health care. We will continue to offer our plans to improve this program. I think there is certainly a possibility of finishing the SCHIP bill today, which will let us turn to the economy next week.

We all know the economy is clearly the top issue on the minds of all Americans. I think we all agree we need to act to strengthen our economy and to create jobs. Unfortunately, the bill produced by the Democratic Congress falls short on a number of important fronts.

First, it does not fix the main problem, which is housing. We need to address that issue, and my colleagues will have better ideas to stimulate home ownership. Next, we need to let taxpayers keep more of what they earn. Finally, we should not be spending taxpayer dollars we do not have on programs we do not need.

We have seen a lot of reports recently on what is in the bill—everything from buying cars for Federal employees, to beautifying ATV trails, to spiffing up the headquarters building at the Department of Commerce. In a time of trillion-dollar deficits, we cannot afford Washington business as usual. We should insist on the highest standards. Are these projects really necessary? Will they stimulate the economy? Will they create jobs? Should we ask the American people to foot the bill? Republicans believe that letting individuals and businesses keep more of what they earn will have a quicker stimulative effect than having the Government spend it on projects, particularly ones that are likely to be delayed for 3 to 4 years.

We look forward to offering amendments to improve this critical legislation and move it back to the package President Obama originally proposed—40-percent tax relief, no wasteful spending, and a bipartisan approach.

Republicans have better ideas to dramatically improve this bill that will go at the problem, create jobs, and stimulate the economy. We have better ideas to address the housing crisis, which is where this problem originated. But in order to pass these and other commonsense amendments, we will need support from our friends on the other side of the aisle. Fixing our economy requires innovative ideas, commonsense solutions, and bipartisan cooperation. It is clear from last night's vote in the House that the only thing that is bipartisan about this bill is the opposition to it. It simply does not meet the standard of bipartisan cooperation set by President Obama and welcomed by Republicans in Congress.

Republicans stand ready to work with our friends across the aisle to create truly bipartisan legislation which will actually stimulate the economy and create jobs, and we are ready to start next week.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, we had a good day on the Children's Health Insurance Program bill yesterday. We considered 10 amendments; we conducted 6 rollcall votes. All in all, I think it was a very productive day because we are very close to finishing and passing the Children's Health Insurance Program—reauthorizing it—so it can be sent to the House. My expectation is the House will then take the Senate bill and send it to the President so we can get it signed very quickly.

This morning, at about 10 a.m., we expect Senator HATCH to come to the floor to offer his amendment regarding the definition of an unborn child. I know Senator BOXER, and perhaps some other Senators, wish to be here to address that issue and speak on that as well.

Last night, Senator COBURN offered two amendments and spoke about another, and we hope to work with him to process those amendments.

For the information of Senators, we are working to set up a series of votes on amendments, perhaps later this morning. A specific time has not been set. My guess is it will be quite late this morning. Frankly, we are working to finish this bill this afternoon. This bill is moving along very quickly, and I urge Senators to bring any remaining amendments they may have to the floor so we can wrap it up.

This is a wonderful program. There aren't very many people who disagree with the Children's Health Insurance Program as enacted by Congress back in 1997. It was wonderful work on the part of Senator ROCKEFELLER, Senator HATCH, Senator KENNEDY, and the late Senator John Chafee. They worked very hard.

It is very interesting, there were very serious discussions on the one hand, with many Senators who thought this should be another entitlement program for children; on the other hand, some Senators thought, no, this should not be an entitlement program, it should be a block grant program. That was the compromise; that States get a big chunk of money, to be matched by State payments to provide health insurance for the working poor—for kids of families who are just above the income levels set for Medicaid. It has worked very well. It is very important, and I am very happy, frankly, and proud of the attempt that was begun back in 1997 by the Senators I mentioned.

We had hoped to get this approved a couple years ago, late in 2007, but unfortunately those two efforts were vetoed by President Bush. But here we are today. This is 2009—a new era, a new opportunity—and I think most Senators are quite proud of the efforts we are making to help more kids get better health insurance.

I hope Senator HATCH gets to the floor soon so he can offer his amendment and then we can proceed.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 80

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up the Hatch amendment No. 80.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The Senator from Utah [Mr. HATCH], for himself, Mr. VITTER, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. THUNE, and Mr. BENNETT, proposes an amendment numbered 80.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 116. TREATMENT OF UNBORN CHILDREN.

(a) CODIFICATION OF CURRENT REGULATIONS.—Section 2110(c)(1) (42 U.S.C. 1397j(c)(1)) is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting the following: “, and includes, at the option of a State, an unborn child. For purposes of the previous sentence, the term ‘unborn child’ means a member of the species Homo sapiens, at any stage of development, who is carried in the womb.”.

(b) CLARIFICATIONS REGARDING COVERAGE OF MOTHERS.—Section 2103 (42 U.S.C. 1397cc) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(g) CLARIFICATIONS REGARDING AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE POSTPARTUM SERVICES AND MATERNAL HEALTH CARE.—Any State that provides child health assistance to an unborn child under the option described in section 2110(c)(1) may—

“(1) continue to provide such assistance to the mother, as well as postpartum services, through the end of the month in which the 60-day period (beginning on the last day of pregnancy) ends; and

“(2) in the interest of the child to be born, have flexibility in defining and providing services to benefit either the mother or unborn child consistent with the health of both.”.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, America's Founders built their case for independence on the foundation of self-evident truths; not party platforms or partisan positions, not opinion polls or intellectual fads but self-evident truths. Our Creator, they said, endows us with inalienable rights, including the right to life. Government, they said, exists to secure those rights. They believed that when America was born, and I still believe that today. I offer this amendment in that same spirit. The conviction about the essential dignity of our fellow human beings motivates the Civil Rights movement here at home and the human rights movement abroad. No matter what our income, race, sex, religion, location or age, we all have our humanity in common.

I came to the Senate with the conviction and tried to act on that conviction ever since by working to protect children's lives and promote children's health. These go hand in hand. That is why I worked so hard with Senator KENNEDY and others to originally pass the children's health program and bill. It was kind of a miracle that we were able to get it done over 10 years ago when we did it. It was done in the Finance Committee and became the glue that held both the Republicans and Democrats together on the first balanced budget in over 40 years.

As I said, I came to the Senate with very strong convictions. Again, I have tried to act on those convictions ever since by working to protect children's lives and to promote children's health because I believe they go hand in hand. Elaine and I have 6 children, 23 grandchildren, and 3 great-grandchildren, and we speak for children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and beyond, all over America.

I cannot understand those who insist that we establish hundreds of programs to help millions of people by spending billions of dollars but who do not believe the lives of those very same people should be protected.

The Children's Health Insurance Program is about promoting children's health. My amendment does exactly that. A child in the womb is just as alive, just as human as that very same child will be after he or she is born. The CHIP program exists to help States promote children's health. The children who need help might be in a house or an apartment, in a city or out in the country, in a large family or single-parent home, in a crib or in the womb. That just seems to me, well, self-evident.

Since October 2002, a regulation issued by the Department of Health and Human Services has defined a child as anyone from conception to 18 years of age. It may sound a little odd to call someone who can drive, vote, or serve in the military a child, but it is the most natural thing in the world to say that when those very same individuals were in the womb, they were children.

Under this HHS regulation, States have had the option of providing CHIP coverage to children before as well as after birth. My amendment would codify that regulation to continue helping States protect the health of children.

I would point out to my colleagues that so far, 14 States have approved plans to provide CHIP coverage to children before birth. Those States include Arkansas, California, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsin.

I also wish to clarify that my amendment would also provide health coverage to pregnant women. Some have claimed that under this HHS regulation, pregnant women would only get CHIP coverage for conditions specifically related to their pregnancy. I want to assure my colleagues that my amendment will ensure that States have the option of providing services to benefit either the mother or the child or both.

My amendment also clarifies that States may provide mothers with postpartum services for 60 days after they give birth. Mothers have health needs before and after they give birth and their children have health needs before and after they are born. My amendment ensures that the CHIP program continues to meet those very important needs.

I urge my colleagues not to put the health of children at greater risk by sidetracking my amendment with a bogus debate over abortion. This is about children and their health, not abortion.

America itself is built on the foundation of inalienable rights which we receive from God. Government exists to secure those rights. Those rights do include the right to life, and they specifically include the right to life. My life, your life, the life of each of my Senate colleagues did not begin when we were born. Each of us was just as alive, just as human the day before our birth as the day after—or as we are today. Our efforts to promote children's health, including through the CHIP program, flow from that self-evident truth.

My amendment will continue allowing States to promote the health of children and their mothers before as well as after those children are born. I urge all my colleagues to support it.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, with great respect for my friend from Utah, I rise to oppose his amendment, not only as a Senator but as a mom and a grandmother. What the Senator is seeking to do essentially is separate the woman from the child she is carrying, separate her from her pregnancy. I think I can speak with authority here. I know my friend is a grandpa and a dad and has a magnificently beautiful family, but I gave birth to two kids. I can assure my friend that when you cover the pregnant woman, you are covering that child from the time that child is a fetus to the time that child is born.

I would just say that it appears to me as if this amendment is a diversionary amendment from this very important bill to expand and improve the health of our children, including the health of our moms who are pregnant, a diversion to a debate about when does life begin—let's fight about abortion. You know what, we will have many opportunities to have that argument. When we have that argument over Roe v. Wade, I think pro-choice will prevail. But this is not the place to have that argument. This is a place where my friend from Utah and I should walk down this aisle being very happy that under this law that is before us, this bill that is before us, States absolutely can choose to cover a pregnant woman. This is a big step forward, and this is very important.

Again, I think the idea behind this amendment is to divert us from this very important bill. In my State, it will expand coverage to more than half a million kids and many pregnant women.

The debate over when life begins and all of that is a very philosophical debate. My religion may teach something other than my friend's. I totally respect every view on that subject. I also respect the women of this country and the view they bring through their moral code and their religion and whatever else they bring to the table as human beings. On the day we debate that, I will be out here debating it, but I am not going to get into this debate with my friend today over when life begins. Today is a day where we are going to work on making sure that our children are covered with health insurance and that our pregnant women are covered with health insurance. The good news I bring to the Senate today is that under this bill, pregnant women will be covered by this. This is very important.

Again, to try to separate the woman from the child she is carrying, from the fetus in her womb, is nonsensical. Maybe my friend sees it another way. But when you take care of a pregnant woman, you are taking care of her fetus, you are taking care of her pregnancy, you are working hard to make sure that baby is healthy.

I just became a grandma 3 weeks ago, and my daughter had excellent health care. I want to assure my friends on the other side of the aisle that as she was being treated, so was the child she was carrying, my beautiful grandson.

Let's not take a beautiful bill and start fighting over an issue that has been a philosophical argument forever—what is the point at which life begins? My religion teaches me one thing. My friend's religion may teach him another. Who is right? Who is wrong? All we, as humankind, can do is to give our best effort to figure that out. But in this bill, what we are trying to do is bring health insurance to pregnant women, bring health insurance to our kids. To divert it with this subject is a disservice to the bill that is before us.

I know my friend is passionate on this point. I totally respect him for that. But I hope we will defeat this amendment because it is a diversion. It is a fight about Roe v. Wade. It is a fight about whether a woman has a right to choose, and it does not belong on this bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, as always, I care for the Senator from California. We are good friends. You know, I hasten to point out that her own State of California has approved unborn child State plans. Look, this amendment by definition has nothing to do with abortion since women who seek help covering their unborn children's health are not women seeking abortion. They are separate, and the Senator should not try to mix them. This is not an issue about abortion. This is an issue about a living, unborn child and her or his mother.

I might add that 14 States have approved unborn child State plans, including the States of Arkansas, California, Illinois, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Michigan, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsin have all approved unborn child State plans.

I agree with the Senator, the bill has worked beautifully, the CHIP bill, for the last 10 years. I know. I wrote every word in it and did so with Senators KENNEDY, ROCKEFELLER, CHAFFEE, and others, as a matter of fact. But I don't think anybody doubts that I carried the ball in getting that bill through the Finance Committee and the whole Congress.

I see a one-sided attempt here to change the bill in ways that will make it less effective and not cover as many children as it should. Some argue the legislation already gives States the option to cover pregnant women, so this amendment is not necessary. But the distinct difference between this amendment and what is in the underlying bill is that this amendment allows States to cover children before birth. Children have health needs as much before as after they are born, so legislation to promote children's health ought to cover them. Let me emphasize that this is a State option, not a State requirement.

Some argue this amendment is an attempt to inject, as I think the distinguished Senator from California has argued, the abortion issue into a bipartisan effort to protect children's health through the authorizing of the CHIP program. The truth is exactly the opposite. As I said when introducing my amendment, this has nothing to do with abortion. It has everything to do with promoting children's health, and any reasonable person ought to be concerned about the unborn as much as they are the born and, of course, the mother involved. This amendment takes care of all three.

I feel very strongly about this. I do not think anybody should try to make this an abortion issue—not myself, not the distinguished Senator from California, or anybody else, for that matter. I don't see how anybody can vote against an amendment that protects the life of the unborn child after having read the Constitution about its great desire to protect life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That is what this amendment is all about.

I feel strongly about it. I hope our colleagues will support it, because it would be a great thing to help this bill along. I would feel much better if this was amended. I have to admit, I do not feel good about the approach that has been taken by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle.

The fact is that Senator GRASSLEY and I carried the ball for the last 2 years, working with Senators REID, BAUCUS, ROCKEFELLER, DURBIN, and others; working with the House, Speaker of the House PELOSI, Rahm Emanuel and others who were there, including STENY HOYER.

We worked closely together to do CHIPRA I. We got an overwhelming vote in the Senate. On CHIPRA II, we got an overwhelming vote in the Senate, enough to override the President's veto in the Senate. I do not think that would have happened but for the bipartisan effort we put together. We had a solid, strong vote in the House, but not enough to override the President's veto.

Now, I have heard people run down President Bush for his vetoes on CHIP. I think President Bush followed the advice of some very young advisers in the White House who basically gave him bad advice. Had he allowed CHIPRA I or CHIPRA II to go through, we would not be having this awful debate today; we would all be together. The whole Congress would have been together, and this whole effort would have been truly bipartisan. We could have set a bipartisan tone right off the bat, instead of this partisan tone that has been set by bringing up the bill without even talking to the two lead Republicans who in 2007 worked so carefully, honestly, and diligently to try and bring about a bipartisan resolution for a new CHIP bill.

And, by the way, we took a lot of flack in the process from some in the administration and some on our side for supporting the legislation in 2007. We took it. We took it gladly. And our colleagues on the other side saw us take it. They saw us stand firm. They saw Senator GRASSLEY and myself stand on the floor, along with a whole host of others, in a bipartisan way, putting together what would have made CHIP even better for the next certainly 5 years.

This bill only funds the CHIP program for 4½ years, because if they had gone the extra half year, it would have priced the bill out of the marketplace. But I have to say, we are going to have to come up with that money anyway, and end up going that extra half year. So everybody better understand all that is being done today by my friends on the left, ignoring people, like me and Senator GRASSLEY, who have worked so closely with them—and they have a right to do that. I can live with that, as I vote against their partisan bill.

All I can say is they have a right to do it. But it is the wrong thing to do. It is the wrong way to start off this Congress after the President himself has shown such a propensity to want to work together. I have to say, I was there when the President came and spoke to our caucus last Tuesday. He was impressive. He was friendly. He was making every effort to be bipartisan. But he apparently had not fully examined the stimulus bill that has been passed only in a partisan way by the House. I would call people's attention to the Wall Street Journal yesterday and their editorial on all the bad things that are in the bill; or Investors Business Daily and their editorial, and how that it is not a stimulus bill at all, but a great big potpourri of long-wanted liberal programs that are not going to stimulate the economy the way they should.

I am not saying there is not any stimulus in the bill, but there is not much compared to the cost of the bill. When you add interest to the bill, it is well over $1 trillion. Of course, you know, they keep interest off because that would make it over $1 trillion. But interest is going to have to be paid regardless.

Now, this particular bill on the floor right now is one where I have a tremendous interest, namely, children and children's health. I am going to continue to take great interest in it.

I want to caution my colleagues on the left that they are making a tremendous mistake here. I think we could have had 95 votes for CHIPRA II or CHIPRA I. That would send a tremendous message that has not been sent around here in a long time.

Now, the CHIP program, so everybody understands, already covers children before birth at the States' option. I read off the States that have made that an option, including the distinguished Senator from California's State.

This is not a new policy. It is already working. This amendment simply continues that policy by codifying the HHS regulation. Women who want their babies need this assistance. Women in California and other States want this. Please do not deny this type of basic humane assistance or help for women and their children with a fake argument about abortion. Let's have an abortion debate on another day. Everybody knows I am pro life. I feel very strongly about that. I will stand up for the pro-life position. But it has nothing to do with what we are debating here today. Let's help children and their mothers now.

Let's codify what a whole raft of States have said we ought to do, including the very important State of California, one-seventh of the whole economy, one-seventh, I should say, in size in the world economy today, and a State I have a lot of regard for.

Fourteen states have gone along with this regulation. And, frankly, I do not see one good argument against protecting unborn children and their mothers who want those children covered through the wonderful child health insurance program. This is a very important set of issues.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, my friend from Utah says he wants an honest debate, and then he says, and I am quoting him—not word for word—he says, pregnant women are not covered in this bill. That is a dishonest debate.

States have the option to cover pregnant women, just as under the Bush regulation they have the option to cover the unborn child. Okay? So let's straighten it out.

My colleague has mentioned my State several times. My State was so anxious to cover pregnant women that they did cover them under the unborn child regulation which was put into place by George Bush, because he injected the whole abortion debate into the CHIP program.

What we do is we get away from that. In this bill we talk about covering pregnant women. So for anyone to stand up here and suggest that the only way to cover pregnant women is by codifying George Bush's regulation that, by the way, this Chamber voted down twice—let's be clear.

My colleague says that this is a left-right issue. This is not a left-right issue at all. When my colleagues voted on this a couple of times before, it was bipartisan to reject the Allard amendment, which was to codify the very law that my friend is suggesting we do today. I will predict we will defeat this by a much bigger margin, because of the elections that were just held.

I say again, with all respect, anyone who in their heart wants to cover pregnant women, which means covering the child they are carrying, should be very proud of this bill. Because that is what we do. So to stand up here and say we have to codify George Bush's wording on this, which was "unborn child," saying if we do not pass this amendment, pregnant women and their babies are not covered, this is a straw man or a straw person. Pregnant women are covered. The fetus is covered from the minute that woman goes to the doctor until the minute she gives birth, and through all of those times in between. It is the ability of the States to do it. But we refuse in this bill, and I hope we will continue this, to put forward such a divisive issue and an argument that does not belong on this bill.

If my friend was right, if he stood up here and said, right now pregnant women are not covered, I would go over there and say, well, let's work out some wording to make sure they are covered. But we do not have to do that. They are covered.

What my friend wants is to codify what George Bush put into play, a political decision to inject abortion politics into a children's health bill. I think it is a sad day for the children of this country to be drawn into a debate. And, again, mentioning my State several times, when my State had no choice. If they wanted to cover pregnant women, they had to cover them under this. Guess what. Now they will not have to do it, because this bill corrects the problem.

So I have to say, when my friend says it is a left-right debate, it has nothing to do with left-right, and he knows it. In my State, some of the strongest pro-choice constituents are Republicans, and some of the strongest pro-life constituents are Democrats. This is not a left-right issue. It is an issue we all address in our own way using our own logic, our religion, our moral values, and we come to a conclusion.

Do not inject it into this bill. I hope we reject this, because this is now the second abortion-related amendment my Republican friends have offered in as many days. If that is what they think this election was about, I think they are missing something. People want our kids to have health care. They want our families to have health care. They want to solve the economic problems.

Today we learned there are even more jobless claims. Millions of people are unemployed. And we are having our second abortion-related vote. I think if this party, this Grand Old Party does that, I see several colleagues who may say, well, it is your right, it is your privilege, I will debate you. I think we will prevail today.

But if every single bill we bring forward turns into an abortion-related debate, I do not know where my colleagues are coming from. Because let me reiterate, every pregnant woman has the right to have this health care option should their State choose it.

We do not need to change the language and codify a very divisive amendment which was a regulation under George Bush. It should be a new day around here. We should not have to have this division. But I have already heard they may offer more abortion-related amendments on this children's bill.

Who knows what is to come? But you know what, I think my leader, HARRY REID, is right. Let them come at us with these amendments. Let the American people see the priorities, when everyone knows every pregnant woman is eligible for coverage. To now indicate they are not unless my friend's amendment passes is simply, if I could say, an out and out falsehood. It is not true. It is not true.

I have the bill. I will read the section, if my friend needs me to.

I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the last two votes we had on this very same subject where those trying to inject the abortion issue failed.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mrs. BOXER. Again, I want my colleagues to understand, we are debating a children's health care bill. Happily, I can say every pregnant woman in this country is eligible for health care. It is a wonderful thing. We avoid the divisive language of my friend's amendment which is codifying something George Bush put into place. It was not supported in the Senate. It was not supported twice. I respect his right to offer it as many times as he wants and let the American people see what we are debating. My State wanted so much to cover pregnant women, they said: We will go along with this language. But now they will not have to. They don't have to get engaged in an abortion debate, when you are serving children. I view this, frankly, as a needless debate. If the issue is covering pregnant women and their children, we have taken care of it. If this amendment is about injecting abortion and when life begins, it definitely succeeds.

I hope the Senate will speak loudly and clearly, regardless of how one feels about when life begins because that is not a partisan issue. Everybody comes to their own conclusion. This is an attempt to inject the abortion debate into a children's health care bill. It is diversionary. It is unnecessary. We should be so proud this bill covers every pregnant woman. It is one of those moments we could walk down the aisle together saying isn't it wonderful because pregnant women will get health care. That will lead to healthier children. We all know that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. UDALL of New Mexico). The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this is not an injection of abortion into the debate. This is a children's health bill. I was the original author of the one that worked so well for over 10 years. A raft of States have determined that they should take care of the unborn through their CHIP programs. It is not an issue of abortion. In the world view of those who support abortion, the fact is, they don't want to give recognition to the unborn child. That is their right, if they want to feel that way. I think it is ridiculous. It is unspiritual. It is ignoring life itself. But to make that part of this debate is the wrong thing to do. We are trying to protect children.

The distinguished Senator from California said: All women are going to be protected by this bill. That is not true. It is a state option so they are covered only if a State decides to cover low-income, pregnant women. We want to make sure that if the state has the option to not just cover the woman but the unborn child as well. Anybody with brains ought to want to do that and ought to avoid the whole issue of abortion, which I am trying to do by protecting the mother and the unborn child and codifying the 2002 regulation.

Section 111 of the bill says there is a State option to cover low-income pregnant women under CHIP through a State plan amendment. Some States have chosen to do that. But why not recognize the rights of the unborn child? To try and make this into an abortion debate because they just don't believe the unborn child lives is another thing. The point of my amendment is to ensure States continue to have the option in the future to cover unborn children, plain and simple, without any ambiguity. We codify the 2002 regulation into law. Frankly, it is about time we do things like that in a children's health bill. But to make this abortion argument is—I hate to say it—completely wrong.

I am concerned not only with mothers, but I am also concerned about those unborn children who deserve the best health we can give them. My amendment gives the States the right to do that by codifying this important regulation. I know some supporters of abortion rights are afraid this will legitimize the fact that the unborn child is alive and is a human being. That is another argument. I agree that argument is right; that unborn child is alive, it is a living human being inside the mother's womb. The point of when the spirit enters the body is a legitimate question, I suppose, to some. But why would we be afraid to protect the rights of that unborn child? Why would we be afraid to do that? Why are folks so afraid if we legitimize the understanding that this unborn child actually is a living being, that somehow or other it is going to destroy their political world? It isn't going to do that.

This is a children's health bill. I take a tremendous interest in it. I not only want to protect the pregnant woman, I want to protect that unborn child. I don't know of any pregnant woman who wants her child who would not want this type of protection. To make this into a bogus argument is the wrong thing to do.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the reason I want to respond to this, my friend is so eloquent, and he is such a great debater, but I have to bring us back to reality. If you are standing here today because you care about kids and you want to make sure pregnant women get all the health care they need so if there is trouble in the pregnancy, if there is a problem—there are so many miraculous things that can be done, and I have seen some of those in my own family, the things they can do to make sure a child is healthy. If the purpose of my friend, out of his love for his children and all children, which I know he has—if my purpose in supporting this bill is to make sure children are healthy, if that is our purpose, we could be very proud of this bill.

This bill says—and I will reiterate this as long as I have to—every single poor pregnant woman in America today is eligible for health care during her pregnancy, from the first day to the last day. Then, of course, a poor child would continue to get that health care. So anyone else who says that isn't true simply hasn't read the bill.

I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD, so my friend can't say something that is without rebuttal, page 50 of the bill, section 2112, which talks about low-income pregnant women to be covered through a State plan amendment.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 111. STATE OPTION TO COVER LOW-INCOME PREGNANT WOMEN UNDER CHIP THROUGH A STATE PLAN AMENDMENT.

‘SEC. 2112. OPTIONAL COVERAGE OF TARGETED LOW-INCOME PREGNANT WOMEN THROUGH A STATE PLAN AMENDMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the succeeding provisions of this section, a State may elect through an amendment to its

State child health plan under section 2102 to provide pregnancy-related assistance under such plan for targeted low-income pregnant women.

(b) CONDITIONS.—A State may only elect the option under subsection (a) if the following conditions are satisfied:

(1) MINIMUM INCOME ELIGIBILITY LEVELS FOR PREGNANT WOMEN AND CHILDREN.—The State has established an income eligibility level—

(A) for pregnant women under subsection (a)(10)(A)(i)(III), (a)(10)(A)(i)(IV), or (1)(1)(A) of section 1902 that is at least 185 percent (or such higher percent as the State has in effect with regard to pregnant women under this title) of the poverty line applicable to a family of the size involved, but in no case lower than the percent in effect under any such subsection as of July 1, 2008; and

(B) for children under 19 years of age under this title (or title XIX) that is at least 200 percent of the poverty line applicable to a family of the size involved.

(2) NO CHIP INCOME ELIGIBILITY LEVEL FOR PREGNANT WOMEN LOWER THAN THE STATE'S MEDICAID LEVEL.—The State does not apply an effective income level for pregnant women under the State plan amendment that is lower than the effective income level (expressed as a percent of the poverty line and considering applicable income disregards) specified under subsection (a)(10)(A)(i)(III), (a)(10)(A)(i)(IV), or (1)(1)(A) of section 1902, on the date of enactment of this paragraph to be eligible for medical assistance as a pregnant woman.

(3) NO COVERAGE FOR HIGHER INCOME PREGNANT WOMEN WITHOUT COVERING LOWER INCOME PREGNANT WOMEN.—The State does not provide coverage for pregnant women with higher family income without covering pregnant women with a lower family income.

(4) APPLICATION OF REQUIREMENTS FOR COVERAGE OF TARGETED LOW-INCOME CHILDREN.—The State provides pregnancy-related assistance for targeted low-income pregnant women in the same manner, and subject to the same requirements, as the State provides child health assistance for targeted low-income children under the State child health plan, and in addition to providing child health assistance for such women.

(5) NO PREEXISTING CONDITION EXCLUSION OR WAITING PERIOD.—The State does not apply any exclusion of benefits for pregnancy-related assistance based on any pre-existing condition or any waiting period (including any waiting period imposed to carry out section 2102(b)(3)(C)) for receipt of such assistance.

(6) APPLICATION OF COST-SHARING PROTECTION.—The State provides pregnancy-related assistance to a targeted low-income woman consistent with the cost-sharing protections under section 2103(e) and applies the limitation on total annual aggregate cost sharing imposed under paragraph (3)(B) of such section to the family of such a woman.

(7) NO WAITING LIST FOR CHILDREN.—The State does not impose, with respect to the enrollment under the State child health plan of targeted low-income children during the quarter, any enrollment cap or other numerical limitation on enrollment, any waiting list, any procedures designed to delay the consideration of applications for enrollment, or similar limitation with respect to enrollment.

(c) OPTION TO PROVIDE PRESUMPTIVE ELIGIBILITY.—A State that elects the option under subsection (a) and satisfies the conditions described in subsection (b) may elect to apply section 1920 (relating to presumptive eligibility for pregnant women) to the State child health plan in the same manner as such section applies to the State plan under title XIX.

‘(d) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

‘(1) PREGNANCY-RELATED ASSISTANCE.—The term ‘pregnancy-related assistance’ has the meaning given the term ‘child health assistance’ in section 2110(a) with respect to an individual during the period described in paragraph (2)(A).

‘(2) TARGETED LOW-INCOME PREGNANT WOMAN.—The term ‘targeted low-income pregnant woman’ means an individual—

‘(A) during pregnancy and through the end of the month in which the 60-day period (beginning on the last day of her pregnancy) ends;

‘(B) whose family income exceeds 185 percent (or, if higher, the percent applied under subsection (b)(1)(A)) of the poverty line applicable to a family of the size involved, but does not exceed the income eligibility level established under the State child health plan under this title for a targeted low-income child; and

‘(C) who satisfies the requirements of paragraphs (1)(A), (1)(C), (2), and (3) of section 2110(b) in the same manner as a child applying for child health assistance would have to satisfy such requirements.

‘(e) AUTOMATIC ENROLLMENT FOR CHILDREN BORN TO WOMEN RECEIVING PREGNANCY-RELATED ASSISTANCE.—If a child is born to a targeted low-income pregnant woman who was receiving pregnancy-related assistance under this section on the date of the child’s birth, the child shall be deemed to have applied for child health assistance under the State child health plan and to have been found eligible for such assistance under such plan or to have applied for medical assistance under title XIX and to have been found eligible for such assistance under such title, as appropriate, on the date of such birth and to remain eligible for such assistance until the child attains 1 year of age. During the period in which a child is deemed under the preceding sentence to be eligible for child health or medical assistance, the child health or medical assistance eligibility identification number of the mother shall also serve as the identification number of the child, and all claims shall be submitted and paid under such number (unless the State issues a separate identification number for the child before such period expires).

‘(f) STATES PROVIDING ASSISTANCE THROUGH OTHER OPTIONS.—

‘(1) CONTINUATION OF OTHER OPTIONS FOR PROVIDING ASSISTANCE.—The option to provide assistance in accordance with the preceding subsections of this section shall not limit any other option for a State to provide—

‘(A) child health assistance through the application of sections 457.10, 457.350(b)(2), 457.622(c)(5), and 457.626(a)(3) of title 42, Code of Federal Regulations (as in effect after the final rule adopted by the Secretary and set forth at 67 Fed. Reg. 61956–61974 (October 2, 2002)), or

‘(B) pregnancy-related services through the application of any waiver authority (as in effect on June 1, 2008).

‘(2) CLARIFICATION OF AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE POSTPARTUM SERVICES.—Any State that provides child health assistance under any authority described in paragraph (1) may continue to provide such assistance, as well as postpartum services, through the end of the month in which the 60-day period (beginning on the last day of the pregnancy) ends, in the same manner as such assistance and postpartum services would be provided if provided under the State plan under title XIX, but only if the mother would otherwise satisfy the eligibility requirements that apply under the State child health plan (other than with respect to age) during such period.

‘(3) NO INFERENCE.—Nothing in this subsection shall be construed—

‘(A) to infer congressional intent regarding the legality or illegality of the content of the sections specified in paragraph (1)(A); or

‘(B) to modify the authority to provide pregnancy-related services under a waiver specified in paragraph (1)(B).’.

(b) Additional Conforming Amendments.—

(1) NO COST SHARING FOR PREGNANCY-RELATED BENEFITS.—Section 2103(e)(2) (42 U.S.C. 1397cc(e)(2)) is amended—

(A) in the heading, by inserting ‘or pregnancy-related assistance’ after ‘preventive services’; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end the following: ‘or for pregnancy-related assistance’.

(2) NO WAITING PERIOD.—Section 2102(b)(1)(B) (42 U.S.C. 1397bb(b)(1)(B)) is amended—

(A) in clause (i), by striking ‘, and’ at the end and inserting a semicolon;

(B) in clause (ii), by striking the period at the end and inserting ‘; and’; and

(C) by adding at the end the following new clause:

‘(iii) may not apply a waiting period (including a waiting period to carry out paragraph (3)(C)) in the case of a targeted low-income pregnant woman provided pregnancy-related assistance under section 2112.’.

Mrs. BOXER. Let no one stand and say that unless we support the amendment of the Senator from Utah, a pregnant woman and the child she is carrying will not get coverage. That is false. What my friend wants is to codify George Bush’s regulation that he correctly pointed out my State adopted. Why did my State adopt it? They were forced to adopt it if they wanted to cover pregnant women. They had to use that language of the unborn child. This is all about the abortion debate. It has to be. Under this bill I support, every pregnant woman is covered or is eligible for coverage. Under the amendment my friend is offering today, every pregnant woman would be eligible. So it is just about the language. That is the fact.

Let me repeat that. Under the bill, every pregnant poor woman is eligible for coverage. Under the amendment of my friend, every poor pregnant woman is eligible for coverage. What he insists on is that you have to separate the woman from the child she is carrying in order to make a political point about when life begins. This is not the appropriate time to have that debate. Believe me, I look forward to the debate. We have had it on the Senate floor. Tom Harkin had an amendment a couple of times to say that Roe v. Wade ought to be codified. It should not be overturned. We had votes on that. By the way, we did win that vote. But that is not what this is about. This is about making sure every pregnant woman gets coverage. Instead of being happy about it, my friend is agitated about the language and wants to write it in his way so we can then get into a debate about when life begins.

How you would ever separate a pregnant woman from the child she is carrying goes against nature. I have had two kids. I know. It is all about health care to the pregnant woman. When the child is born, it is about health care to the woman and, yes, the baby. My friend can stand here all he wants and say I am the one who is injecting abortion into this debate. I am not the one offering a divisive amendment. I am not the one raising the subject matter of when a fetus is a separate life from the mother. That is for another time. We have work to do. We have people struggling in this country. My friend attacked the stimulus bill.

By the way, that debate is coming as well. But the one area I know we should be able to work together on is making sure our kids are healthy. We should walk down the aisle together being very pleased we have taken care of that in this bill. Believe me, the more people lose their jobs and they can’t get another one, the more this program is going to be necessary.

I hope we can have a vote on this in the near future. I guess I would like to ask my friend if he wants to continue this debate. I can stay all day. But I didn’t know what his plan was.

Mr. HATCH. I don’t want to continue it all day. I do believe there are some people who want to speak on this side. I will just make one or two comments.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield the floor at this time and retain my right to respond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let’s not pit mothers against their children. This is not an either/or situation. Let’s protect both mothers and their unborn children. In fact, the purpose of this bill is to provide health care coverage to low income, uninsured children. The Senator and I simply disagree. This amendment concerns unborn children and covering them. She seems to think it is about abortion. I don’t. Her own State is covering unborn children through the regulation of the prior administration. Thirteen other States are as well.

Mr. President, I think I have made the case. Let me say that I ask unanimous consent that Senator ROBERT CASEY be also listed as a prime cosponsor on this amendment, along with the distinguished Senator from Nebraska, Mr. NELSON.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. I feel very blessed to have these two very strong Democrats willing to support a recognition that these unborn kids are human beings, they are human life, and that a child health insurance program bill ought to cover them.

With that, Mr. President, I know Senator BUNNING is here and I will yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, if I might have a moment before Senator BUNNING speaks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. BOXER. Thank you, Mr. President. Because some of the things that are said around here—and, by the way, we will have a whole list of Republicans helping us to defeat this, so I am not going to name people. But let me say this: To stand up and say we are pitting a woman against her child when we support this bill that makes eligible for coverage every pregnant woman is simply a hurtful and untrue remark, especially to say it to someone who adores her children and her grandkids, and I take great offense. It is the opposite.

This amendment separates a woman from her child because instead of saying you are going to cover a pregnant woman, you are saying you are covering the unborn child. And what about the woman? She is not even mentioned. I take offense at that line of attack.

We say when you cover a pregnant woman, you cover her child, you cover that fetus from the moment that woman goes to get health care. What my friend does is separate the woman from her child by saying we are going to give the child health care while the child is in the womb and do not even mention the woman—do not even mention the woman. So who is separating the woman from her child?

Again, it is very clear that this is about the abortion debate. And as many times as my friend says it—and he raises my State again, so let me say again, yes, many States did provide health care under this definition of unborn child. They had no choice because President Bush put a regulation in place, and if my State wanted to help pregnant women, they had no choice but to help them under that particular regulation.

Well, what we are doing today is saying to States: You do not have to get into the abortion debate. If a woman is poor and she is eligible for Medicaid, and she is pregnant, she gets the health care as well as the baby she is carrying.

So do not say that those of us who vote against this amendment are separating women and children. It is the total opposite. For whatever reason, under that old regulation, the child was mentioned and not the woman. That defies science. That defies reality. You treat the woman and the child she is carrying.

So, again, I take offense at this. I do not want to be jumping up every time, but I will if there is something said here that is not true. I have total respect for the other side on the abortion debate—complete respect for them. And that is what this is about, and they know it. Because if they only cared about the pregnant woman and her child, they are taken care of in this bill.

Mr. President, I thank you very much, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I am not entering into this debate.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator HATCH's amendment be set aside so that I may offer another amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 74

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I call up my amendment No. 74.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To eliminate any exceptions to the prohibition on States receiving an enhanced Federal matching rate for providing coverage to children whose family income exceeds 300 percent of the poverty line and to use the savings for the outreach and enrollment grant)

Beginning on page 75, strike line 18 and all that follows through page 76, line 2, and insert the following:

“(i) APPROPRIATION.—In addition to amounts appropriated under subsection (g) of section 2113 for the period of fiscal years 2009 through 2013, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the amount described in clause (ii), for the purpose of the Secretary awarding grants under that section.

“(ii) AMOUNT DESCRIBED.—The amount described in this clause is the amount equal to the amount of additional Federal funds that the Director of the Congressional Budget Office certifies would have been expended for the period beginning April 1, 2009, and ending September 30, 2013, if subparagraph (A) did not apply to any State that, on the date of enactment of the Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2009, has an approved State plan amendment or waiver to provide, or has enacted a State law to submit a State plan amendment to provide, expenditures described in such subparagraph under the State child health plan.”

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I also ask unanimous consent that Senator COLLINS from Maine and Senator HATCH from Utah be added as cosponsors to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BUNNING. I appreciate their support.

When SCHIP was created, I supported the bill and felt it filled a need in our health care system. The bill focused on providing health insurance to low-income children whose parents made too much money to qualify for Medicaid but did not have private health insurance.

Many States have done a good job of keeping the focus of their SCHIP programs on low-income children, including Kentucky that only covers children below 200 percent of poverty. However, other States have expanded their SCHIP programs to cover children in families most of us would not consider low income. Some States are even covering adults, including parents and childless adults. These expansions erode the original intent of the program.

The Baucus SCHIP bill we are considering today further expands the SCHIP program, including allowing States to cover children in families up to 300 percent of the poverty level. That is $66,000 of income a year for a family of four.

Personally, I think 300 percent is too high for SCHIP, and the focus of this reauthorization bill should be reaching those kids who are currently eligible for the program but are not enrolled.

The Baucus bill also allows States choosing to cover children above 300 percent of poverty to still get Federal money for their efforts but only at their lower Medicaid matching rate, not the higher SCHIP matching rate.

Two States—2 out of 50—however, get a special exemption under this bill and will get their higher SCHIP matching rate for covering children above 300 percent of poverty, specifically New York and New Jersey.

New York wants to cover families up to 400 percent of poverty or that is $88,000 a year for a family of four. New Jersey currently covers families up to 350 percent of poverty or $77,000 a year for a family of four.

These are certainly not low-income families, and I feel strongly the States should not get additional Federal money for covering families making up to $88,000 a year.

My amendment is fairly simple. It simply removes this exemption for New York and New Jersey so they have to play by the same rules all the other 48 States play by. If they go above 300 percent of poverty, they get their Medicaid matching rate but not the higher SCHIP rate.

As I have said, I think 300 percent is too high, and if I were writing the bill, I certainly would not allow States to get any Federal money if they were covering families over 300 percent of poverty. However, that is not the bill before us. So my amendment tries to equalize the playing field between the 50 States and be a little more fiscally responsible with taxpayers' dollars.

Under my amendment, New York and New Jersey can still choose to cover children above 300 percent, they just will not get the higher SCHIP matching rate. If the people in New York and New Jersey want to cover families making up to $88,000 a year, they should be the ones paying for the coverage, not requiring my citizens in Kentucky and other citizens in all the other 48 States across America to foot the bill.

Finally, my amendment takes the savings from reimbursing New York and New Jersey at the Medicaid matching rate and directs that money to more outreach and enrollment dollars so we can get everybody who is eligible for SCHIP enrolled. We are having difficulty doing that. Kentucky only has 85 percent. I do not know how much some of the other States have. But we ought to be able to get to 100 percent of coverage. The other money that is saved by that would allow them to seek out those eligible children under SCHIP.

The SCHIP reauthorization should be about making sure low-income children who are eligible for SCHIP are covered, not about covering children in families making up to $88,000 a year.

So with my amendment, you have two options: more money for outreach and enrollment and requiring all States to play by the same rules or requiring the people of your State to pay more taxes so that New York and New Jersey can cover families who make $77,000 or $88,000 a year.

To me, the choice is simple, and I hope the other Members of the Senate can support my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am a cosponsor of the distinguished Senator's amendment. I am proud of him and very pleased to support his amendment on New York and New Jersey, and I rise in support of that Bunning amendment. He is right. Why on Earth should States be rewarded by getting a higher CHIP match rate for covering kids over 300 percent of the Federal poverty level? That is around $64,000 for a family of four.

Now, when we wrote the CHIP bill in 1997, with Senators KENNEDY, ROCKEFELLER, and CHAFEE, CHIP was created to cover children of the working poor, the only ones left out of the whole financial system—not children from families of four whose income is $77,000 like New Jersey's CHIP program or $88,000 like the CHIP waiver the state of New York has filed. And that does not even count some of the income disregards that may raise the income level to over $100,000. It is ridiculous.

My colleague is right. Senator BUNNING is right. These two States should not receive the higher CHIP matching rate. I strongly support my colleague's amendment, and I congratulate him for bringing it to the floor. I hope our colleagues will work to support that amendment because it makes a lot of sense.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator SESSIONS be added as a cosponsor to the Hatch amendment No. 80.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the CHIP Reauthorization Act, and to urge my colleagues to improve CHIP and cover an additional 4.1 million kids.

I voted to create this program in 1997, and I have watched with great satisfaction as the number of uninsured children in our country has dropped. Thanks to CHIP, my State can provide health insurance to about 11,000 kids every month. As a result, these kids have every chance to do their best in school and live long, healthy, productive lives.

This is a great achievement, but we have more work to do. South Dakota still has about 18,000 uninsured kids. Half of these kids meet the income requirements for Medicaid and CHIP but remain uninsured. With health insurance premiums doubling in the past 8 years and unemployment on the rise, more families cannot keep up. Fortunately, this bill helps these families when they need it the most and allows States to cover more kids and provides bonus payments for focusing on low-income kids. I am especially pleased that the bill allows children whose private insurance does not include dental coverage to enroll in the CHIP dental program.

I understand some of my colleagues object to allowing States to end the 5-year waiting period for covered legal immigrant children and pregnant women in Medicaid and CHIP. This debate is not about whether to provide coverage but, rather, to end the 5-year wait these future citizens must endure. A sick child does not have 5 years to wait, and it is not in the spirit of our Founding Fathers to force legal immigrants to wait 5 years for services they desperately need. I urge my colleagues to remember that other than Native Americans, we are a nation of immigrants.

On a personal note, I am pleased to join in the debate on CHIP this year, as I missed much of the 2007 debate while recovering from my AVM. That experience taught me the infinite value of good health insurance and great health care, a lesson from which I hope we can all learn.

This bill, which is fully paid for over the reauthorization period, is exactly what low-income families need during this time of economic uncertainty. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the CHIP Reauthorization Act.

I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

(Purpose: To ensure that children do not lose their private insurance and that uninsured children can get access to private insurance)

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, last night, Senator COBURN sought to bring up his amendment No. 47. At that time, we asked him to withhold so we might look at the amendment because we neglected to get the Coburn amendment No. 47 until that moment. He spoke on the amendment. We have looked at the amendment. So on behalf of Senator COBURN, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments be temporarily laid aside and that Senator COBURN's amendment No. 47 be called up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The Senator from Montana [Mr. BAUCUS], for Mr. COBURN, for himself and Mr. THUNE, proposes an amendment numbered 47.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in the RECORD of Tuesday, January 27, 2009 under "Text of Amendments.")

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator DORGAN be recognized for 5 minutes and then Senator GRASSLEY, who I expect will be here at that time, be recognized for up to 10 minutes, and then I will be recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, we are debating the subject of children's health care at a time when our economy is in desperate trouble. Most all of us understand that 20,000 people today and 20,000 people tomorrow will have lost their jobs. Think of that. We are experiencing 20,000 people a day losing their jobs in this country right now during this economic difficulty. It was one thing at a time when the folks at the bottom of the economic ladder had a job and then had to worry about the issues understanding second job, second shift, second mortgage. But now it is not even that. Now they do not have a job at all.

Last month, over half a million people lost their jobs. As that happens, the question is about the necessities of life. How do you provide for the necessities of life? How about your children's health care?

I don't know what is second or third in everybody's life. I don't know what might be in second, third or fourth place in people's lives. But I know what ought to be in first place, and is for most people, and that is their children, their well-being, the health of their children.

This legislation deals with that subject, trying to provide health care to children who do not have health care, expanding the number of children under the Children's Health Insurance Program. Nearly seven million children are now enrolled. This expands it.

Four million additional children who do not have health care would receive health care under this expansion. It makes a lot of sense.

In my State, we have 3,500 children receiving benefits under the Children's Health Insurance Program. There are another 14,000 who are uninsured in North Dakota. So surely this ought to represent one of the significant priorities for the children of our country and for the children of our individual States.

I have come to the floor talking a lot about health care for American Indians. I have put up a couple charts on the floor talking about Avis Little Wind. She lost her life. I have talked about Ta'Shon Rain Little Light. She was 6 years old. She lost her life.

The fact is, these are children for whom we would expect health care would be available, and it was not. Multiply that by a million or 10 million children who determine whether their health care needs are met when they are sick by whether their parents have money in their pockets. That ought not be a criteria by which we treat sick children in this country ever—not ever.

One hundred years from now, we will all be gone and historians will look back and evaluate us—who we were, what we did, what our values were if you take a look at what we decided to spend money on, what kind of a budget did we have. Historians 100 years from now can take a look back and evaluate, at least in part, what our value system was. What did we think was important? What was valuable to us? What was most important to us?

The question that is begged by this legislation is, Are our children important to us? Do we care about our children's health? Don't tell me children are important if you are not willing to do almost anything necessary to provide for your children's health.

We must do this. This is not difficult. A lot of issues come to the floor of the Senate that are difficult and complicated and complex. You have to try to evaluate all the nuances to try to figure how do we put this together. This is not any of that. This is not difficult in terms of the mechanics, how it works. We know it works. It is not difficult in terms of the value system. Can you name two other things we do on the floor of the Senate that are more important than preserving the health of our children or treating a sick child who has no other options to get treatment or go to a doctor or go to a health clinic? Name something more important than that for your children or for the children you love.

This is not difficult, and we should not make it difficult. What we ought to decide is that this is a priority for this country. It is a long-delayed priority. We passed it twice, and President George W. Bush vetoed it twice. But its delay ought not concern us at this moment. What ought concern us now is that we move and move quickly to address this problem and say to America's children: You rank at the top of our priorities, yes, in our personal lives and also in our public lives. You rank at the top, and we are going to provide health care to America's children who are uninsured.

That ought to represent the best of our country and the best of what we can do in both political parties that serve in the Congress.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized for up to 10 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, for the benefit of my Members, I do not think I will use 10 minutes, but it is always dangerous for me to say that.

(The remarks of Mr. GRASSLEY and Mr. LEVIN pertaining to the introduction of S. 344 are printed in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi is recognized.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. President, the SCHIP legislation the Senate is considering this week purports to provide more health insurance for our Nation's poorest children. But in truth, the bill shortchanges the neediest of children in States such as Mississippi. Instead of paying taxpayer dollars for our poorest children, those who need health insurance the most, the bill we are considering today gives taxpayer-funded health insurance to middle-class families in wealthy States. The SCHIP bill we will be voting on today does nothing to ensure that all American children under 200 percent of the poverty level have health insurance. In fact, the bill diverts this important program, which I have supported for years, away from its intended purpose. SCHIP was designed to cover low-income children between 100 percent and 200 percent of the poverty level. That comes to $22,000 to $44,000 per year for a family of four. These families require assistance under SCHIP because they earn too much to qualify for Medicaid, but they are not able to afford private health coverage for their children. This was the intent of SCHIP.

What we ought to be doing in this bill is prioritizing low-income American children and making sure as many uninsured poor kids as possible are covered under the increased funding we are going to provide. Instead, this bill allows States to expand their programs without demonstrating they have covered the poorest children first. In my State of Mississippi, for example, SCHIP covers 65,000 children, but there are another 30,000 children below 200 percent of the poverty level who are without health insurance. This bill would not cover those children, even with the expanded funding.

Other States that are similarly situated include Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, North Carolina, and Arkansas. I urge the Senators from those States to join me in an effort to correct this inequity. I urge all Senators to make this bill better so we make sure we include poorest of the poor children first.

In the past decade since SCHIP was created, the number of uninsured poor children has decreased from 28 percent to 15 percent. But we cannot, in the face of that success story, neglect the remaining 15 percent. Many of them are in the States I have mentioned.

Fifteen percent of America's poorest children still do not have health care, and we are debating a bill that would expand SCHIP beyond its intended purpose, to cover higher income families and other adults.

SCHIP allotments in fiscal year 2009 will be $5 billion. Under this bill we would almost double that amount to $9 billion per year. But only an additional $79 million is needed to cover these poor uncovered children in States such as Mississippi. If we are going to almost double the size of the program, we ought to make sure poorest of the poor are covered.

If this bill were really about health care for poor children, we would guarantee each State sufficient funds to cover every child in a family below 200 percent of the poverty level. It is that simple. And we would do that before moving on to cover more affluent families in the more affluent States.

Senator COCHRAN and I have submitted an amendment that would do that. Our amendment would prohibit States from receiving funds to cover individuals above 200 percent of the poverty level until we can guarantee that 90 percent—not 100 percent but 90 percent—of the poorest children nationwide are covered.

The result of our amendment would be that the more affluent States would simply have to wait if they want to cover middle-class children, if they want to cover families making as much as $88,000 a year or more. They would have to wait until the poorest of the poor children in Mississippi and Arkansas and North Carolina and North Dakota and Nebraska and Iowa are covered.

I have been watching the votes this week. It appears the leadership has locked in a majority to resist amendments of this nature. I thought the bill was about making it easier to cover children under 200 percent of the poverty level—between 100 percent and 200 percent. If amendments such as that of Senator COCHRAN and myself are not agreed to, we have to wonder is the real intent of this legislation to replace our private health care system with a government-run system at the expense of people who need help the most?

One of my colleagues yesterday said we are ruining SCHIP. I have to concur with that, if this legislation is not amended. I urge my colleagues to join me in bringing the focus of SCHIP back where it belongs, on helping poor children.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PRYOR. Mr. President, I rise in full support of renewing and improving the Children's Health Insurance Program. In Arkansas we know this program as ARKids First, Part B. In my part of the country, the program ensures that low-income children get the doctor visits and medicines they need when they are sick and the checkups they need when they are healthy. This program has been highly effective, and I believe the bill before us will build upon that success.

Let me tell one story. In 2007, this program covered more than 64,000 Arkansas children and more than 4.4 million children nationally. There is a young boy named Connor in a little town called Poyen, AR. Poyen is in Grant County. The population of the whole town is 272 people. It is on a State highway—229—in part of our State that is challenged in getting health care to its citizens. At 5 years old, he had very serious hearing problems. He underwent multiple surgeries to restore his hearing. Without the Children's Health Insurance Program, his grandmother would have never been able to afford the appointments and medical care. The good news is, today, after these surgeries and after his treatment, he has overcome his hearing loss and his related developmental delays.

What that means is he will now be able to enter kindergarten with other kids his age. We prepared him for a lifetime of success through this program. That means he will not have to have special education, he will not have to have other programs available to him for him to function in society. We made the downpayment on his future with the Children's Health Insurance Program.

But he is lucky because that same year, 2007, there were 9.4 million children who went without access to doctors, lifesaving prescription drugs, immunizations, preventive screenings, and the basic medical care they need. That is 1 out of every 9 children in this country who slipped through the cracks between Medicaid and private insurance.

Since then, since 2007, pink slips have multiplied and, more than ever, parents are making the tough decision to provide their family with a roof over their heads and forgo health care coverage. When these kids don't get medicine and proper medical care, we see them in emergency rooms in a lot of pain and at a greater cost to the taxpayer.

As you know, there have been studies—one I am familiar with in the State of Arizona, but there have been many other studies—that compare what this program costs to the cost of not having the program. It is actually cheaper to the taxpayer, much cheaper to society in the big picture to have this program get these kids the medical care they need when they need it.

This body will have an important vote to cast this week that will determine who will see a doctor and who will not. Will children such as Connor receive the critical care they need or will we abandon them, abandon him like we have 9 million others?

I ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle not to turn this moral issue into an ideological debate. Children deserve a healthy start in life regardless of the parents' wealth. Senators BAUCUS and ROCKEFELLER have produced a compassionate and cost-effective bill that provides this opportunity for millions of children. That is what I want for the children in my State of Arkansas and for the children of our Nation.

I yield the floor and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, a few moments ago the Senator from Mississippi, Senator WICKER, offered an amendment. Basically, it is directed at the so-called August 17, 2007, directive that President Bush promulgated. That directive issued strict guidelines to States regarding Children's Health Insurance Program enrollment, focusing on potential crowdout, and mandated that States adopt more restrictive so-called crowdout policies. Among the policies in that August 17 directive was a requirement that the States prove that at least 95 percent of the children below 200 percent of the poverty level have some coverage before they can enroll higher income children. The amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi would, in the same vein, prohibit States from receiving the Federal match for individuals under the program above 200 percent of the Federal level unless they enrolled 90 percent of all children under 200 percent.

That is an impossibly high standard, one that cannot be met. Certainly, the 95 percent in the August 17 directive could not be met. That is why that directive was never put into effect.

It is too tight. It would not work. Yesterday, this body voted against an amendment which would set the requirement at 80 percent, and the amendment before us sets the requirement not at 80 percent but a much higher rate; that is, 90 percent. These are impossible standards for States to meet. It is virtually impossible for a State to meet 90 percent. Even mandatory provisions—let's take auto insurance. The takeup rate in States is not 90 percent. Even where it is 90 percent, I think the average is like in the eighties somewhere. This is not mandatory. The CHIP program is not mandatory. It is an optional program for States. It is optional whether a person wants to participate in CHIP or participate in the private market. It is totally optional. So it is impossible for a State to achieve a 90-percent rate. That is a standard which is much too high.

Also, another reason it is so difficult for States to reach a 90-percent rate is because of the economic downturn we are facing. With the downturn we are facing, people are leaving employment, regrettably, they are being laid off, which means they are losing health insurance. The more people who are laid off, the more people lose health insurance, the more difficult it is for a State to show that it is meeting a 90-percent requirement.

That is just a mechanical effect of this amendment. The practical and personal effect is that this is going to hurt kids because the amendment has the effect of denying Federal dollars to States when they cannot meet an impossibly high so-called takeup rate. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to not vote for this amendment. It is not a good idea.

It does try to attempt to address something called crowdout, which has been debated here on the floor for a long time. Frankly, this crowdout debate is missing the mark here. We are not keeping our eye on the ball. The ball really is, how do we get more kids covered under the Children's Health Insurance Program?

For all of the reasons Senators have indicated, my gosh, we want our kids to be healthy. Healthy kids go to school. Healthy kids in school perform better in school. If they perform better in school, they are going to do better when they graduate. We want healthy kids. The more we have healthy kids, the more likely it is we are going to have healthy families and more productive families and be able to address some of the adverse consequences the recession now presents to us.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HAGAN.) The Senator from Wyoming is recognized.

Mr. ENZI. Madam President, I rise today to talk about the State Children's Health Insurance Program, or what folks around here call SCHIP. This program was created by a Republican Congress in 1997 to help low-income kids get health insurance. The program expired in 2007, and Congress has worked to pass temporary extensions through March of this year. I am glad the Senate is now working on a longer term bill to extend this vital program.

I am a cosponsor and a strong supporter of the "Kids First Act," S. 326, which extends the current SCHIP program. This bill provides health coverage to low-income kids and will give States the resources they need to continue to operate their SCHIP programs.

To help more low-income children get health coverage, the bill provides $400 million over the next 4.5 years for States and other qualified entities to improve outreach and enrollment for low-income children. These funds will target the low-income children SCHIP was meant to help. The bill also enhances private options that provide more affordable and efficient care by encouraging premium assistance so that parents can have enough money for private health insurance for their children.

The Kids First Act also focuses on kids, not adults. Some States currently spend SCHIP money on adults when this money was meant for children. The bill takes the money spent on adults and uses it to insure children. The Kids First Act requires that all States phase out nonpregnant adults, including parents, and not allow the addition of any new nonpregnant adults to the program.

American children are the top priority and primary focus of the bill I support. The bill maintains existing law, which ensures that scarce resources go to covering American citizens first.

The bill does all these things, and it does them in a fiscally responsible way, without raising taxes. An economic recession is no time to raise taxes or expand Government programs and inefficient bureaucracies.

I have seen the potential for what SCHIP can do to help low-income kids in my home State of Wyoming. Wyoming first implemented its SCHIP program, Kid Care CHIP, in 1999. In 2003, Wyoming formed a public-private partnership with Blue Cross Blue Shield of Wyoming and Delta Dental of Wyoming to provide the health, vision, and dental benefits to nearly 6,000 kids in Wyoming. These partnerships have made Kid Care CHIP a very successful program in Wyoming.

All children enrolled in the program receive a wide range of benefits including regular check-ups, immunizations, well-baby and well-child visits, emergency care, prescription drugs, hospital visits, mental health and substance abuse services, vision benefits, and dental care. Families share in the cost of their children's health care by paying copayments for a portion of the care provided. These copays are capped at $200 a year per family.

Wyoming is also engaged in an outreach campaign targeted at finding and enrolling the additional 5,000 kids that are eligible for Kid Care CHIP but are not enrolled.

I am proud of the great job Wyoming is doing implementing its program. I also want to note that Wyoming will get the same amount of money under the Kids First Act that I support as compared to Senator BAUCUS' bill, H.R. 2.

Unfortunately, all these descriptions apply to the Kids First Act, which is not the bill before us today. The bill before us today is a very partisan bill that fails to focus on low-income, American kids first.

Senator BAUCUS' bill, H.R. 2, would encourage middle-class families to drop their existing health insurance plans and instead get on the taxpayer dime. That is just not right; we need to put low-income children first.

Under H.R. 2, 2.4 million children will lose their private health insurance coverage and be forced to enroll in Government-run programs, where they may not have access to the physician and other health provider services that they need. The bill will also make it easier for both legal and illegal aliens to get covered under SCHIP.

Another important big difference is that the taxpayers will get to keep fewer of their hard-earned dollars if this SCHIP bill is enacted. At a time when the country faces a severe recession, raising taxes is not a good solution for any problem.

I am disappointed Senator BAUCUS and the Democratic leadership in the House and the Senate and the White House turned SCHIP into a partisan exercise. Along with the American people, I too was looking forward to change. I was encouraged by President Obama's call for change and was ready to work with him to make sure we could focus on the 80 percent we could agree on.

I was also encouraged by my discussions with Senator Daschle when he came before my committee as a nominee to become the Secretary of Health and Human Services. He committed to working with me and the other Republicans on my committee so together, we could work on a bill to reform our health care system. He promised bipartisanship and said he would convince my Democratic colleagues on the committee to work together to develop bipartisan solutions to our Nation's health care problems.

Unfortunately, with this SCHIP bill, the Senate is taking a step away from the process Senator Daschle described. The ranking member of the Finance Committee, Senator GRASSLEY, as well as Senators HATCH and ROBERTS, among other members worked hard for a number of years on a bipartisan bill, but that bill is not the bill before us today.

Rather than following the example set by Senators GRASSLEY, HATCH and ROBERTS, the sponsors of this bill chose to focus on the partisan issues that highlight the 20 percent upon which it is impossible to agree. I hope this is not the first taste of how the next 2 years will be here in the Senate.

I will close my remarks, but I just want to remind folks that we can do better. In general, if we work together on bipartisan bills, we can produce a better product. I think the bill before us today should focus on covering low-income, American kids first, and I hope that as we continue working on health care reform, we can work together rather than against each other so we can put the best policies possible before the American people.

We can do better, we must do better. Following Wyoming's lead of using the private market, we would insure every American kid whose family is uninsured and below 300 percent of poverty. I think that is a good answer for the family. We can do it without spending more. We can do it so kids are not thrown out mid-year because their parent or parents make a little more. They would be insured all year. So we would increase their eligibility from 200 percent of poverty to 300 percent, $40,000 a year to $60,000 a year, for a family of four and cover every uninsured American kid. But we will see that amendment voted down so statistics will look better. The current bill is a good statistics bill, it increases the number covered dramatically to include adults earning up to $120,000 a year in some instances and it is easier to find more people to sign up, at the taxpayer's expense. No, let's concentrate and force States to find the poor that are lost and neglected.

Madam President, I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MENENDEZ. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 74

Mr. MENENDEZ. Madam President, I come to the floor to speak again on behalf of children of New Jersey and others in the country and the working families in my home State who seem to be under attack by some of our colleagues here on the floor. I did not know there are different values to the importance of the health care of a child regardless of the happenstance of where they live, but it seems some think so.

On behalf of these children and families, I rise strongly to object to Senator BUNNING's amendment. In New Jersey, we cover over 130,000 children and, yes, we cover children to a higher percentage of the Federal poverty level. But there is a reason for that, and I will go through that right now. But there are only 3,300 New Jersey children who are covered under that higher Federal poverty level from the 130,000 who are covered below the poverty level Senator BUNNING and others would want to maintain. So we are talking about 3,300 children but 3,300 children whose health and development and well-being depend upon the ability of States such as New Jersey to do this.

The families who are covered at this level are paying toward this. They are not getting a free ride. They are paying $128 each month in premiums and between $5 and $35 in copays each and every month. So this is not a free ride. These families in New Jersey are working, and they are working at some of the toughest jobs we have. But they work at jobs in which they do not have health care coverage, and they are working at jobs that do not give them enough in the context of what it costs to live in New Jersey to afford health care insurance. So somehow those people have to be penalized when you listen to the other side.

Now, let me talk to those who want to talk about fairness. New Jersey followed the law. The former administration approved New Jersey's waiver to continue insuring kids at up to 350 percent of the Federal poverty level because they understood the reality that a family living in New Jersey—to make essential elements of their costs for housing, food, transportation, childcare, and, yes, insurance—just was far behind others in the Nation who, in fact, could achieve those goals for a lot less money. So the Bush administration gave a waiver. They gave a waiver. They understood it.

New Jersey needs to cover children up to 350 percent because New Jersey families face higher living costs and they get less return on their Federal dollar. Let me talk about that. I hear my colleagues bemoaning the fact that my State allegedly wants some sort of special treatment, that because we want to provide health benefits to children, we are somehow taking advantage of the Federal Government. That is simply ridiculous.

Let me put it in perspective. For every $1 a New Jersey taxpayer pays in Federal dollars toward the Federal Government, our State only gets back 65 cents. My colleague from Kentucky, who was on the floor and whose amendment we are debating now and who rails about New Jersey—his State gets $1.51 for every $1 Kentuckians send to the Federal Treasury. So they get more back than, in fact, they pay.

Let's talk about fairness. The reality: One size does not fit all. As shown on this chart, for a family in New Jersey, living in Middlesex County, whose monthly income is about, roughly, $4,600, for their housing, it is going to cost them $1,331; for food, it is about $645.70; for childcare, it is $844.80; for their transportation, it is $393.80; for their taxes, it is $479; and for their health insurance, it is almost $1,800. So what do they end up with? They end up with a negative amount in terms of their budget. These are people who are working—working—trying to sustain their families. But they end up in the negative if they try to provide health insurance for their families. So the answer is, they cannot provide health insurance for their families unless they get some help. Yes, one size does not fit all.

So let's look at that same family. For that family in New Jersey to get the same ability in terms of their purchasing power as a family in Louisville, KY, that needs about $55,808—for that same family, whose happenstance is that they live in New Jersey versus Louisville, KY, for the same exact things, they need $77,000, roughly, in purchasing power.

Now, why do I have to hear an argument that says those families, in fact, whether they be in Kentucky or Arizona or Oklahoma or Georgia or Tennessee or Utah or in all these other States, who, in fact, deserve to have their children covered—they deserve to have their children covered, and I am fighting for their children to be covered as well—but why do I have to listen to that, in fact, their children are more valuable than my children in New Jersey who need this amount of money to be able to meet the same goals and dreams and aspirations and health care that they have? So they can get benefits under the bill, but my children in New Jersey should be denied? That is the core of the argument here. One size does not fit all. I would love for a family in New Jersey at $55,000 to be able to make ends meet. That is simply not the fact. So we need to ensure all children are covered within this class.

I am simply baffled and I find it embarrassing that some in Washington—those who have some of the best health care coverage in the world—would propose to jeopardize coverage to some of America's neediest families.

In this economy, in this recession, we cannot allow our children to be the silent victims. It is morally wrong to jeopardize the health care of these children. What have they done? What have they done to deserve this? It is even more outrageous during a time when jobs and homes are being taken away from their parents.

Where is the moral compass in this Chamber? I hear my colleagues speaking eloquently about how our children are our most precious asset, and they certainly are. But they are also our most vulnerable asset. Is a child in New Jersey worth less than a child in other parts of the country simply because of the happenstance of where they live and the costs that are necessary in order for them to meet the same quality of life?

So I hope my colleagues, as other amendments have been rejected, will once again reject this amendment. This is about being for the value of life. You cannot fulfill your God-given potential if you do not have good health. You cannot say you are profamily when, in fact, you would take away the insurance necessary for that family to be able to realize their God-given potential. This is about all children, regardless of where they happen to reside, the happenstance of what station in life they were born into, that if they fall into this criteria that, in fact, they should be covered.

That is why this amendment should be defeated. I hope, after having considered amendment after amendment after amendment on the same fundamental issue, we can finally move to final passage of this bill.

Madam President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Madam President, as we were completing our last vote last night, I explained to the Members of the Senate what our schedule would be the next few days. Following my statement, Senator LEAHY and I engaged in a discussion on the Senate floor about the timing for a vote for Attorney General-designee Eric Holder.

Chairman LEAHY expressed an opinion that he and I share: that with the many difficult challenges facing the Obama administration, and particularly the Justice Department, it is imperative for the Senate to confirm Attorney General-designee Holder as soon as possible.

Unfortunately, while it was my strong preference to conduct the vote this week—as I explained to Senator LEAHY on more than one occasion I was hoping we would do that when we completed work on CHIP, the Children's Health Insurance Program—I had to inform him that I had a conversation just a few minutes before I made my remarks on the floor with Senator MCCONNELL, and Senator MCCONNELL said he didn't want to move forward until Monday. In the conversation with Senator MCCONNELL I was pleasant, as most of our conversations have been, and I believed I needed to explain to the Senate what the proposal was and what we were planning on doing. The one thing I didn't do is explain to Senator LEAHY first—and I should have done that—that we weren't going to be able to complete it after the Children's Health Insurance Program—on the same day at least; we would have to wait and do it later because in the Senate the power of the minority is significant.

I have privately discussed this with Chairman LEAHY, that it was an oversight on my part. He wasn't informed of the arrangement I had reached with Senator MCCONNELL before I announced it on the Senate floor. So I apologize to my friend from Vermont, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He has been a good friend, he and Marcel, for so many years, and I am very sorry about the misunderstanding.

Chairman LEAHY and I, along with virtually every Senator, agree that we must confirm this exceptionally qualified and talented nominee—and that includes Republicans who feel the same way—as quickly as possible so we can begin the critical work of rebuilding the Justice Department to fight terrorism, crime, and protect the constitutional rights of all Americans. There is no one who has been more of an advocate for having a strong, powerful, fair Justice Department than Senator LEAHY. So I am sorry about that confusion, and if I embarrassed him in any way, again, I tell him I am sorry.

I note the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Madam President, it is such a delight to see the Presiding Officer in the chair, the distinguished new Senator from the great State of North Carolina whom, every time I look at her wonderful smile, I think: That smile was born and bred in Florida. We are so happy to have the Presiding Officer here as a part of the Senate representing the great State of North Carolina.

Madam President, I, of course, am going to vote for S. 275, the Children's Health Insurance Program. This reauthorization is a long time coming. We went through the trauma of having it vetoed by the President last year. We attempted to override that veto and got a close vote but didn't get enough. So here we are. We will have the votes this time.

My particular additional interest in this is because in my life before the Senate, I had the privilege of being the elected State treasurer in Florida, which is also—was then—under Florida law at the time, the State insurance commissioner. In that capacity, I chaired what is known as the Florida Healthy Kids Program. It was a very innovative way in which we would reach out through the school system to make health insurance more affordable for children under the theory that if a child is sick, a child is clearly not going to learn. We know by all of the sociological studies that if a child does not get the proper medical observation and treatment during those formative years, it can manifest itself in so many more complicated ways later on in life which, just from a societal point of view, becomes a much greater expense on society; whereas, if children can get the proper health care, it is not only a good, humanitarian commonsense, Judeo-Christian kind of practice, but in an overall cost to society it is much more efficient and economical.

We saw in this innovative program in the 1990s in Florida, the Healthy Kids Program, where we could make insurance available to children through the school system according to their parents' ability to pay. We piggybacked it on top of the School Lunch Program because already there, you had a determination of a family's financial means and capability. What we saw was that it spread like wildfire throughout the Florida school system in each of the counties, and it became not only very popular, it became very effective.

Here we have a program where we are applying that concept for the whole country. It started back a couple of decades ago. We are reauthorizing it, and we are enhancing it. It makes good common sense. It clearly makes good health sense. It makes good economic sense. And in America, where we want to give the best of every opportunity for our children, it fulfills that dream and that desire as well. For these reasons, it is hard for me to believe anyone would vote against the reauthorization of this program.

I commend our leadership, that they have brought up this bill basically as the first bill for us to pass.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. UDALL of Colorado). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Arkansas is recognized.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak in support of legislation that is long overdue, the reauthorization of the Children's Health Insurance Program, known as CHIP.

For those of us who have children who are young, in school, bringing home all kinds of unbelievable colds, sniffles, and all the other sickness, we realize our children today need health care. How wonderful it is, as a nation, that we have gathered to put together a comprehensive package that will help increase the number of children who can be covered.

As a mother myself, as a daughter, as a wife, as the wife of a physician, better understanding the opportunity we have as a nation to do this makes me extremely proud because I see other mothers at school who cannot afford to provide health insurance for their children.

A close friend of my boys was injured on the playground the other day and was taken by emergency vehicle to the hospital. He was OK. But the mother came up to me later and said: You know, I am working as hard as I can, but I can't afford health insurance. What am I going to do? I can't pay for this.

We have the opportunity in this job in the Senate to make an impact on the lives of working families across this great country.

This is a bipartisan program that for the last 12 years has allowed us to make health care coverage more accessible for millions of children, coverage that is critical to the lifelong health of a child and to a family's peace of mind.

In conjunction with Medicaid, CHIP has been tremendously successful in reducing the number of uninsured children in my State and across this country. We have done much work on this bill over the course of the last couple of years to improve upon it, to talk about what we can do to make it a better bill. And here we now come to the floor of the Senate with an opportunity to pass something that will be monumental in the lives of working families.

Since the program's inception, the number of children without health care coverage has dropped by one-third. I am proud that Arkansas has become a national leader in reducing its number of uninsured children from 21 percent in 1997 to 9 percent today. Now more than 70,000 of Arkansas's children currently receive coverage through CHIP which we know in Arkansas as Our Kids First, a great program that helps working families all across our State. Unfortunately, passage of SCHIP had been held hostage for the past 2 years due to President Bush's two vetoes which we tried to override and were unsuccessful.

At this critical time in our Nation's history, when working families are struggling, they are faced with economic crisis all over this country, I believe we have a moral obligation to extend this program and provide health care coverage to millions of children who are now uninsured.

Can you think of anything more important to the households of these working families than to ease their minds, to create peace of mind by saying to them: You are now eligible for a program that can help you provide health insurance for your children.

It is interesting, when we talk about things that make us happy or things that make us feel fulfilled, as we grow older, we realize it is less and less about us and it is more and more about our children. It is no different from my family to any other family across this great land, to parents across this country who want desperately to be able to provide for their children. Here is our opportunity to help them.

As parents, we are no different. Whether you are unemployed or whether you are a Senator, what gives you that fulfillment is to be able to see your children fulfilled, to see them healthy with access to the kind of health care that will help them reach their potential because we know that unhealthy children are less likely to learn, they are less likely to become healthy adults. They are certainly going to be more costly to the system if they depend on emergency services, not to mention the chronic diseases that can occur because they are neglected from getting the health care that they need early on.

There are so many good things in this bill and so many good things this bill does. Peace of mind comes to mind, first, because I think of those parents who are unable to provide that health insurance.

The bipartisan SCHIP bill provided by the Senate Finance Committee is essentially the same bill that passed overwhelmingly in the last Congress. As I mentioned before, we have discussed this bill, and we have tried to work out compromises. Is it 100 percent of what everybody in this body wants?

No, it is not. But no bill ever is. Are we going to miss an opportunity to help working families across this country because it is not 100 percent of what every one of us wants? I hope as Senators, as parents, we are not so blind that we would let that happen. It builds tremendously upon the success of the program by giving States more of the tools they need while preserving their flexibility to strengthen their programs and, ultimately, cover more children.

I would remind you, Mr. President, and I would remind all my colleagues, that we all have worked to keep flexibility in this bill. We also must keep in mind that many of the provisions in this bill are options to the States. Not a mandate that the State must cover but an option that gives States the flexibility to be what they are and to address the specific needs they may have in addressing both the chronic conditions of their children and, more importantly, covering the population of children who need coverage most in their States.

CHIP reauthorization will allow States to preserve coverage for the children currently enrolled while reaching an additional 4.1 million low-income children. I don't know of a greater way, quite frankly, that we could show other countries who we are and what our value system is than to reach out and cover 4.1 million more low-income children; to express to the world where we put our values, where we want to make an investment—an investment in future leaders, a future workforce, the future leaders not just of our country but in the global community as well.

This proposal would also provide much-needed funding to States for outreach and enrollment efforts to enroll many of those who are currently uninsured. This is critically important to me in my State of Arkansas, where two out of three uninsured children are eligible for ARKids First or Medicaid but are not enrolled. We need the resources to reach out and ensure that these children and their families understand what these great programs are and what they would mean to their children.

It also takes additional steps to ensure infants and toddlers get a healthy start by providing care for expectant mothers. At the age I was when I delivered my twins, people thought I was Methuselah, but nobody ever missed the opportunity to tell me how very important it was to care for myself if I loved my children, and I did. I did everything I possibly could to ensure that I could bring those children into this world as healthy and happy as possible. It was a blessing to me. There are other mothers out there—expectant mothers—who want desperately to ensure that they can do everything possible to bring their children into this world healthy and happy, and the key is prenatal care.

I have long been a supporter of improving access to health care coverage for expectant mothers. I understand how important it is, both as a mother myself but, more importantly, looking at what it means to us as a country to ensure that we bring as many children into this world as healthy and happy as we possibly can—not only because it is vital to the health of both the mother and the infant but also because it often reduces future health care costs, which we know can be high in premature births. In fact, it was reported in 2005 that the socioeconomic costs associated with preterm birth in the United States were at least $26.2 billion. Every year, more than 500,000 infants are born prematurely, and that is nearly one out of every eight babies.

I can remember delivering my children in the Medicaid section of the University Hospital where my husband worked, and I remember going upstairs to the NIC unit, and I took my dad with me. My dad was a dirt farmer. He is no longer with us, but he is here in spirit with me today, as he always is. But he was a dirt farmer in east Arkansas, and I took him with me to the NIC unit. I had never seen my daddy cry before then. But he looked at those premature babies, and he said: What is their life going to be like?

The more we can provide the kind of health care that expectant mothers need, we will not have to ask that question. We can ensure that babies will be born healthy and happy.

As I mentioned before, it is of particular concern for me because also, in recent reports, more than 14 percent of our births in Arkansas are premature, ranking it among the States with the highest incidence of preterm births. By taking these needed steps to improve access to care for expectant mothers, I am confident we can make strides to improve health outcomes for them and for their children.

The Finance Committee proposal also includes incentives to ensure that States reach out to the lowest income kids first and phase out the adult waivers that have been existent under the previous administration.

In addition, the bill provides the Federal authority and resources to invest in the development and testing of quality measures for children's health care. This provision will help ensure that States and other payers, providers, and consumers have the clinical quality measures they need to assess and improve the quality and performance of children's health care services. Making determinations on children's health care based on studies that have been done on adults doesn't make sense. It is critical that we focus on those quality measures based on our research and study of children and applying it in the appropriate way.

Additionally, it allows some States to use income eligibility information from other Federal programs, such as school lunch programs, to speed the enrollment of eligible children into the CHIP program or into Medicaid. We have the income information about these families for the school lunch program, which is critically important to the well-being of our children, so why wouldn't we want to ensure that those same families, meeting those same eligibility requirements, could move quickly into the CHIP program to get the other health care needs of their children met? This would certainly simplify the administrative process for States, and it would reduce paperwork burdens that are put upon hard-working, low-income families.

This bill would also provide greater access to much-needed dental care for lower income children and would ensure that children enrolled in CHIP would have access to mental health care that is on par with the level of medical and surgical care that they are currently provided.

The dental portion, the wraparound, is twofold. I can remember when I first visited one of the very first Head Start Programs in my community, and I saw these children lined up with little Styrofoam cups they had decorated. They had a donated toothbrush and a free sample of toothpaste. They were so proud each day to be able to walk to the community sink there in the Head Start facility and brush their teeth.

Dental care is essential. It is absolutely essential. All you have to do is look at children of low-income families whose teeth are rotten, who aren't getting dental care, who aren't getting supervision or not being taught the life skills they need. When those teeth are rotten, they hurt, they make those children sick, they are unable to eat, they get no nutrition, and then we wonder why they cannot focus in the classroom or why they cannot learn. This dental wraparound program is excellent for ensuring not only that children will get the dental care they need, but the wraparound portion of it ensures that we will not see crowding out; that families who have private insurance which doesn't cover dental can then get their dental coverage in a wraparound package and maintain the other private insurance they have. Those are critical needs and critical sensitivities we have looked at in this bill to ensure that we are doing the most we possibly can for the children of our country.

As you can see, this bipartisan bill is a step in the right direction to provide care and coverage for our most precious asset in this great country—and that is our Nation's children. We have to look no further than the children of this country to understand that all of what we do today means nothing if we have not given them the ability to carry on the great lessons of this great country we are blessed to be a part of. And if they do not reach their potential, whether it is because they haven't gotten dental care, they haven't gotten immunizations, they haven't gotten the proper kind of health care they need to be able to learn and flourish and reach their potential, we will have done an injustice to our country.

As we move forward, I wish to encourage my colleagues to support this important piece of legislation in the same bipartisan spirit that was demonstrated when it was created 12 years ago. We are not here to create a work of art. We are here to create a work in progress. After 12 years, we have come to understand the importance of what has changed in our communities, what has changed in our economy, what has changed among our working families, and to meet the needs that exist in today's world. After 2 years of waiting, we cannot fail our Nation's children yet again.

I hope every one of us in this body will think of a child who was born 2 years ago, unable to access CHIP coverage—a family with a child born 2 years ago. If we fail to do it now, and they have to wait 2 more years, they have missed 4 years of critical development in their life without health care. We will never, ever be able to reverse that.

This is the time. Now is the time. We have talked and talked, we have reached out to one another to come up with the best possible solutions we could, but now is the time to pass this bill. In a time when more and more Americans are struggling to find affordable health care, it is up to us to put politics aside, not only for the future of our Nation but for the well-being of millions of our children across this great Nation. It is not just our future. Most importantly, it is their future. They are depending on us, and it is time we fulfill our commitment to them.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I wish to speak in favor of the Bunning amendment, which I hope we will be able to vote on a little while later this afternoon.

It is a very simple amendment that sets the maximum amount for eligibility under the SCHIP program at 300 percent of poverty. In other words, we set the poverty level in this country three times that amount that would be the qualifying level for a family to qualify their kids under the SCHIP program. That is a lot more than what was originally intended when the SCHIP program was put in effect, but it is a level that represents the maximum for all but two States in the country.

Most States are somewhere around 200 percent of poverty. My State of Arizona is exactly at 200 percent of poverty. The State of the chairman of the committee, who is from Montana, is now at 175 percent, although I understand there is legislation that will take that up to 250 percent. So with the States bunched around primarily the 200 percent of poverty level, some now at the 300 percent, that represents a good compromise on where the limit should be set, and we need to set the limit for a variety of reasons I will go into in a moment.

Let me tell you what the implications of the amendment would be. There are only two States that would have to cut back under the program. In fact, they would not have to actually cut back in the coverage of children, they would simply follow the same rules as everyone else, and their reimbursement would be at the Medicaid rate rather than the higher SCHIP rate for these higher income kids. So they could still cover them; they just don't get quite as much reimbursement from the Federal Government in order to do it.

Now, there would be some savings as a result of these two States not having Federal funding at the SCHIP level, and that additional savings, under the Bunning amendment, could be put into outreach and enrollment grants to help find eligible, uninsured, low-income children. The reason for that is, the whole point of the program is low-income children. Yet there are millions of low-income children who are not enrolled in the program. We have to find them, we have to get them enrolled. That will cost some money. So the savings that are achieved in this amendment would go toward that end.

The third and basic point here is that the Bunning amendment ensures we keep our promise to preserve the SCHIP coverage for low-income children and ensure parity amongst the States. If we have a limit of 300 percent, not all of the States would want to go to 300 percent but they would know they could do that. If they wished to keep it below 300 percent, they would be paying less. They would be receiving less from the Federal Government, but it would be uniform for everyone.

As I said, I think Senator BUNNING is wise to set it at this level, even though that means the average family of four has $66,000 in income. That is hardly low income or poverty level. But $66,000 of income would cover families who clearly could use the help. It is obviously very generous. It is clearly way above poverty, so I do not think Senator BUNNING goes very far in limiting this to 300 percent of poverty. These numbers translate to 200 percent of poverty is $44,000 income per year. Of the two States that are above the 300 percent, one is New Jersey at 350 percent. That translates into $77,175 a year. The other is New York at $88,200 per year.

We can all have some disagreements in this body, but nobody can argue that $88,000-plus in income is a poor family, is a poverty or low-income family. That is not what this program was designed to cover.

Add to that, you can add in $40,000 for expenses for transportation and clothing and housing and so on, and you can actually get above $120,000 in income and qualify for this low-income program for kids. That is not right.

One thing I know that folks in Arizona, folks in New Mexico, folks in Montana all say when they look to Washington is: We know we need to pay income taxes, we know we need to spend money on things, but stop wasteful Washington spending. I think sometimes they may view our spending as more wasteful than it is, but the reality is there is a lot of wasteful spending here. This is a lot of spending beyond what was the original intent of the legislation.

When I talk in Arizona about low-income kids, people nod their heads and say, yes, we need to help low-income families with kids. If I said to them so that means $120,000 a year—most of the families in Arizona don't make $120,000 a year, let alone calling that low income. It is not. If only for truth in advertising purposes, we should support the Bunning amendment and, again, he sets the level at 300 percent of poverty or $66,000. In one sense you would have a tough time defending that as a low-income program. But that is where he set it. At least nobody can contend that he is trying to be too cheap here. Mr. President, $66,000 a year for a family of four to qualify for a low-income poverty program I think is quite generous.

I think I indicated I would answer a couple of questions here about why we need to do this. One argument for the folks in New Jersey is we have a higher cost of living in those States. Of course it is not twice as high. It does not cost twice as much to buy a car in New York or New Jersey or Arizona, so that argument only goes so far—and it is about "this" far.

Second, what these States have done is cover more kids at higher income levels because it is easier. Think about it. You expand the program to cover a lot of high-income kids. You can find those kids. It is the very low income we are having the trouble finding. Those are the ones who need to get registered in this program, but they are hard to find. They are in our Indian reservations, in our inner cities, and maybe some out in farm country in Montana or wherever. That is who we should be focused on here.

It is easy to say let's raise this up to families making $88,000 a year. Sure, you can find those kids. But the fact you are then enrolling more kids in the SCHIP program doesn't mean you are getting the ones who need the care the most.

There is another problem with that. The Congressional Budget Office notes that with these higher income family kids, there is a one-to-one ratio from adding a child onto SCHIP and losing health insurance coverage in the private sector. For every one child who is added on, a child loses health insurance coverage from an employer. The ratio generally is between 25 and 50 percent, but at the higher income level it reaches a one-to-one ratio. This is the crowdfout effect we were talking about before. It doesn't do us any good to add somebody to the Government-run program if the only effect of that is to cause them to lose their insurance policy from their family's employer. You have not helped anybody in that case. All you have done is transferred the expense from the employer to the taxpayer.

In the case of these high-cost States such as New York and New Jersey, the people of New Mexico or Arizona or Montana, for example, are paying twice as much for those kids as they are for the kids in their own State.

We are sending money from Arizona to New York. Arizona has it at 200 percent of poverty, or a $44,000 income level. New York has twice that, $88,000. The net effect of that is Arizonans are simply sending money to New York to take care of the New York kids. That is not fair. That was not what this program was originally designed to do. What Senator BUNNING has done is say let's cap it, not at some low level but the relatively high level of 300 percent of poverty, $66,000 a year. If they want to cover kids higher than that, they can, but they are reimbursed at the somewhat lower Medicaid rate than the SCHIP rate, and he takes the savings from that and helps us fund the kids who need the coverage, the low-income kids.

I cannot for the life of me see why any of us, except perhaps the four Senators from New Jersey and New York, would not support this amendment. The only two States that would suffer at all under this amendment are those two States because they have chosen to go far above what the other States provide in terms of coverage. They can still cover the kids, as I said, they just don't get quite as much money from taxpayers in other States to do that.

Why wouldn't those of us from the other States support the Bunning amendment? It is going to be very hard for some people to go home to their constituents when those folks say, Why didn't you support the Bunning amendment? Why should I have to pay money for somebody making $88,000 in New York State to cover these higher income kids when that probably means that their employer takes the obligation he has and moves it over to the taxpayers? This is not very logical.

The Bunning amendment is a modest attempt to get the program back to its original intent, slightly less expensive, to generate some funds to get the low-income kids in, and have more equity among the States.

I cannot think of an amendment that would more reasonably try to deal with all these problems, and I do urge my colleagues, for a moment here, let's put partisanship aside. The President has urged us to do that. We don't have to have just partisan votes on all of these amendments—all the Democrats vote no, all the Republicans vote aye. That doesn't get us anywhere. I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will put on their independent thinking hats. If they need to say something to the leadership or whatever—look, this is a reasonable amendment, I am going to support it—then do that. We do not have to be in lockstep here. It may be that there is a Republican amendment that deserves to be supported. This is one.

I urge my colleagues, let's approach this independently. This is a good amendment. Let's support it. I hope my colleagues will consider doing that when we vote on the Bunning amendment a bit later on this afternoon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, basically the Bunning amendment is the fourth amendment that would put a cap on eligibility. Yesterday the Senate rejected the Cornyn amendment that would cap it at 200 percent of poverty, a Roberts amendment with a cap of $65,000, and a Murkowski amendment with a cap of 300 percent of poverty. All these amendments, including the Bunning amendment, have the same flaw; that is, they would raise the possibility of kicking kids off the Children's Health Insurance Plan; that is, they are diminishing amendments. They do not add, they subtract. The kids currently on the Children's Health Insurance Plan are taken off. That is not something I think we want to do.

The specific amendment in question here will have that effect. It will basically say that because the States that have been mentioned here essentially get a match rate according to the Children's Health Insurance Plan, that because of the amendment—the amendment says they will get less, they will get the Medicaid match rate, which is less than the Children's Health Insurance Plan; therefore, those kids cannot participate.

Theoretically there could be some participation because the match rate in Medicaid, which I think is around 15 percent lower—in the case of let's say New York or New Jersey—than the Children's Health Insurance Plan match. But still the effect is the same. If this amendment were to go into effect, children currently in, say, New Jersey who receive the Children's Health Insurance Plan match rate will probably get kicked off. A lot will be kicked off the Children's Health Insurance Plan because the match rate is lower, down to the Medicaid rate.

That is not right. The fact is all of these amendments, including the Bunning amendment, are restrictive. It is constrictive. It is a reducing amendment. It pressures to take children off the Children's Health Insurance Plan rather than add children.

People talk about 200 percent of poverty, 300 percent of poverty, et cetera. I think New Jersey is at 350 percent of poverty. One interesting point there is they are at that rate, A, because they asked for it and, B, because President Bush's administration gave a waiver and said, yes, go ahead and do it. President Bush, his administration, and the Republican Secretary of HHS, said, yes, New York, go ahead and do that. That is fine. You should do that.

One can guess why they may have granted that waiver. The reason is because when you talk poverty levels, such as 200 percent of poverty, that is a national figure. It is not a different number for each State, it is what is the national number. New Jersey, I think, has the highest per capita income of any State in the Nation. Clearly, the Federal poverty level which applies to New Jersey probably does not match what the realities are in that State. The realities are if you take a family a little bit above the national median income, a family in that State, in New Jersey, is probably facing the same economic pressures and difficulties—paying for health insurance, providing for the kids and the kids' medical bills—as would the average family in a State where the median income is the same as the national median income. That is probably why New Jersey asked for that waiver and probably why the Republican Secretary of Health and Human Services granted that waiver. But that is where we are. That is history. It makes sense.

The fact is, this amendment says, no, we are going to undo that, even though New Jersey is used to it, even though New Jersey applied for the waiver and lawfully was granted the waiver, we say: No, no, not that anymore. We are going to reduce the match rate you and New Jersey get and it is again going to have the pressure of hurting kids in that State and taking kids off the Children's Health Insurance Plan. That is not the right thing to do.

I therefore respectfully urge Senators to not support this restrictive amendment which does not add kids to the Children's Health Insurance Plan. Rather, it takes kids off the Children's Health Insurance Plan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I rise for the purpose of supporting the Bunning amendment. What I say will have some rebuttal to what the distinguished chairman of the committee has said just.

Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Plan were created to cover low-income children. An income of more than $63,000 for a family of four is not low income. I know the Senators from the State of New York and New Jersey will argue that $63,000 is low income in their States. I know they will talk about the cost of living in those States.

As an example, the median home price in Des Moines is greater than that in Binghamton, Buffalo, or Rochester in the State of New York.

The underlying bill says all States can cover above 300 percent of the Federal poverty level. I think that should be limited, as it was in the second bill that was a bipartisan bill passing the Senate in 2007. But if we are going to allow States to cover above 300 percent, all States should be treated equally, and an exception for two States—and I might emphasize only two States—is not fair, and it is not right. This amendment strikes that exception so all States are treated equally.

I urge support for the Bunning amendment that we will vote on in a little over an hour. I hope Senators coming to the Senate floor will take that into consideration. Treating all States favorably is essential.

AMENDMENT NO. 83

(Purpose: To provide H.R. 3963 (CHIPRA II) as a complete substitute)

The amendment I am going to introduce is the exact contents of the bill we call the 2007 bipartisan bill No. 2 because that is the No. 2 bill vetoed by President Bush. This amendment I am offering today, I am doing so with Senator HATCH because he was there with me through all of that discussion in 2007 that brought us to a bipartisan bill.

The amendment is the bill that, 2 years ago, Speaker PELOSI called “a definite improvement on the first bill,” meaning the first bill the President vetoed. This amendment I am going to soon lay before the Senate is a bill I believe is the best bipartisan compromise we could put together to cover as many low-income children as possible. This amendment is that 2007 bill that told States they could not cover children above 300 percent of poverty level in the Children’s Health Insurance Program. Why do we concentrate so much on that level and not above that level?

In 2007, we thought letting States cover children above the national median income diverted attention from the mission of Medicaid and the Children’s Health Insurance Program, which was obvious then and still obvious today; that is, that we ought to be putting the emphasis on low-income children.

The underlying bill allows States to cover children up to any income level and, as I said, includes a special grandfathering exclusion for New York to cover children and families with incomes up to $83,000 per year. The second bipartisan children’s health insurance bill—that is the amendment before us or that I will put before us now—returns the focus where it has been since 1997 in the CHIP bill. The emphasis is upon getting low-income children into a plan so they have the health care they need.

This amendment is the bill that includes a policy to address the problem of crowdout that was the subject of an amendment yesterday. It is a policy that is not in the underlying bill, which brings me to the question: What exactly went wrong with the crowdout policies that so many of us voted for in 2007?

Certainly, it is not because the Democrats have put forward a policy that addressed crowdout in a better or more efficient manner. Certainly, it is not because the Democrats have new analyses that crowdout is no longer occurring, especially in the expansion of public programs. When Children’s Health Insurance Program dollars go to higher income children who already have private coverage, that money could have gone to low-income children. Make no doubt about it, 4 million new people being covered does not take care of the problem of covering low-income children. There are still going to be millions out there who will not be covered whom we ought to have a focus on.

The second bipartisan children’s health insurance bill of 2007 that is now the amendment I am going to lay before the Senate returns the focus to low-income children. Finally, this amendment-to-be is the bill that we voted on in 2007 which did not have the divisive legal immigrant issue in it. The underlying bill today has $1.3 billion of coverage for legal immigrants, more than 100,000 of whom already have private or public coverage, dollars that could have gone to cover more low-income children.

The second bipartisan children’s health insurance bill—that is the amendment I am going to lay before the Senate—now returns the focus to low-income children. Now, today in the Senate, there are 43 Democrats and 12 Republicans, of which I am one, who were Members of the Senate in 2007 and voted for this bill that my amendment is going to represent.

Those 43 and 12 Republicans who are still here—that is 55 of us—if we would stand together, we could still do great things. We could show that bipartisan amendments still mean something in the Senate. When the vote count ended, we would probably have more than 70 votes for this amendment. Instead, I know if I call for a vote on this amendment, 43 ayes that were cast in 2007 would become “no” votes.

After watching the difficulty those 12 Republicans, including this Republican, faced by voting aye and sticking together because we thought we were doing good policy, watching 43 ayes turn to noes on the very same policy is a bitter pill to swallow.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and to call up amendment No. 83.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendments are set aside.

The clerk will report.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. GRASSLEY] proposes an amendment numbered 83.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I support this amendment of the distinguished Senator from Iowa. Essentially, what we are doing is striking the Baucus bill being considered on the floor and replacing it with the CHIPRA II bill that passed overwhelmingly in this body in 2007, enough votes to override a Presidential veto. Not one Democrat voted against this bill. Not one.

But what my good friend, Senator GRASSLEY, and I are offering is a bill that represents a solid bipartisan agreement that we worked out with Senators ROCKEFELLER and BAUCUS. I do not blame Senator BAUCUS for the mess we are in right now, or this partisan approach to CHIP, because he represents his side. But I do believe there has been a real lack of effort by some on the Democratic side to work with us after all of the time that we spent trying to make sure we had something that would work in the last Congress.

What we have is a true bipartisan agreement where we were there from start to finish. Senator GRASSLEY and I, Senators BAUCUS and ROCKEFELLER, and those in the House—we spent hours together, months together, working out the details of this bill. We spent morning, noon, and night for 6 months to get the bill to that point. It was built on a foundation of tough agreements and tough decisions. We were part of the process from the very beginning and stayed with the process until the very end. That resulted in a true bipartisan agreement.

The bill passed overwhelmingly in both the House and the Senate by a veto-proof margin in the Senate. Senator GRASSLEY and I worked our guts out, put our hearts and souls into both CHIPRA I and CHIPRA II. We were proud of our work with Senators ROCKEFELLER and BAUCUS because that work not only reauthorized the CHIP program for 5 additional years, it covered more low-income uninsured children. It retained the original goal of the original CHIP program, which, by anybody’s measure, has worked very well over the prior 10 years.

The bill before us today does not represent that agreement. We talked to our colleagues at the beginning and then we were not included in the discussions that evolved into the CHIP bill recently considered by the Finance Committee and now on the Senate floor. We were not even invited. It seems to me once we were not needed anymore we were more or less thrown by the wayside because our votes were no longer needed.

This is not the way to start off the 11th Congress, especially after the last campaign where our President said he wants to work in a bipartisan way, he wants us to get together, he wants us to be able to work with each other, he wants us to accomplish a great deal for this country.

I think I am known for bipartisan work around here, and I certainly have taken a lot of flack for some of the President’s Cabinet people I supported, and supported right off the bat, because they were qualified people. I believe the President should have his choice as long as they are qualified and not otherwise disqualified.

Well, I am going to support this amendment of Senator GRASSLEY's, which represents the true bipartisan agreement of 2007. Now, let me mention a few of the highlights in CHIPRA II.

The amendment states there will be no Federal CHIP dollars for coverage of children over 300 percent of poverty; that is around, $63,000 for a family of four. Now, to be honest with you, when we did the original CHIP bill, we wanted it to be 200 percent of poverty because those kids were the only ones left out of the health care system, the children of the working poor. We did it so we would have enough money to try and cover all of the kids who really qualified for CHIP. Even with that, we found we were not able to get to all of them. So you can imagine, with the current economic difficulties, we are going to have even more pressure to get to more and more kids. If we start allowing states to cover over 300 percent of poverty, which at least one State does and another is in the process of doing, it is not going to be long until this program becomes a Federal Government boondoggle where everybody will expect money from the Federal Government for health coverage.

This amendment eliminates the earmark to allow New York to cover children up to 400 percent of poverty, $84,800. By the time they use income disregards, some estimate that families could be making over $100,000 a year and still qualify for the CHIP program.

Now what does that do? That takes that money from the 6 million kids who are low income and uninsured. It is crazy. Yet that is what this bill allows. Senator GRASSLEY and I had to agree to go to 300 percent, which is over $63,000 for a family of four in 2007. But to now go to 400 percent of poverty, admittedly New York City is an expensive place, but New York's rural areas are not that different from other States, except they are taxed to death in the State of New York. But that should not be the problem of everybody in the country.

This amendment includes the bipartisan crowdout policy that addresses the issue of families giving up private coverage in order to enroll in a public program. Our amendment would require a number of studies on crowdout, would improve data collection on the coverage of low-income children, would require all States to adopt these "best practices" to reduce crowdout, and would provide the Secretary with the authority to hold States accountable for covering low-income children.

With regard to crowdout, we did our best to stop it so people would not drop their health insurance that they can afford so their kids would qualify for the CHIP program. That is one of the problems with covering higher income families, because, naturally, if parents find they are going to be better off opting for CHIP coverage as opposed to private health coverage, they are going to crowd-out lower-income children from CHIP coverage. That is what this bill really does.

It is a shame because it means less money and less health coverage for those who are truly needy, those for whom this bill was meant.

If we covered the children of the working poor, the only ones who were formerly left out of the health care system, we could probably do a much better job if we kept it to 200 percent of poverty. But Senator GRASSLEY and I agreed to go to 300 percent of poverty in the interest of a bipartisan agreement even though each of us felt that probably was a mistake.

This amendment does not include the controversial legal immigrant provision allowing States to claim a Federal match for coverage of legal immigrant children and pregnant women.

Look, I started the Republican senatorial Hispanic task force. I brought Hispanic leaders from the country to Washington at least twice a year to help us understand how we could better assist Hispanic people. We brought together Democrats, Independents, and Republicans. I have a long reputation of trying to help Hispanic people.

Under our immigration laws, sponsoring families who brought others to this country legally entered an agreement to take care of those individuals for 5 years. It has worked. The current bill on the floor, the partisan bill, wipes that all out. In the process, how many children who are U.S. citizens are going to be left out because we have expanded this program in ways that will not take care of them?

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HATCH. Sure.

Mr. DURBIN. I know he has an amendment pending relative to taking care of providing prenatal care to make certain that children are born healthy in the United States. I would like to ask the Senator if he is arguing now that we should not provide maternal care for pregnant women who are legal immigrants to the United States with the full knowledge that the lack of that care may mean the child will be born sick and the child will be a citizen of the United States?

Mr. HATCH. Heavens no.

Mr. DURBIN. Is the Senator arguing we should not provide obstetrical care to pregnant legal immigrant women?

Mr. HATCH. Certainly not. And as the Senator knows, many States today provide that care to legal immigrants through CHIP or otherwise. And let me emphasize that all expenses are supposed to be provided by the sponsoring families for 5 years. If that was the wrong time or it should have been shortened, I would have worked with the distinguished Senator to do that. But that was the deal. That was the rule. That was what we worked on. That is what we thought would work. That is what we thought was fair.

What I don't want to do is have our own children who are U.S. citizens be without care while we cover those who were supposed to be covered by their sponsor families who brought them to the United States.

Mr. DURBIN. If the Senator will yield, if a person is here legally though not a citizen, is a legal immigrant mother, is it not true that her child born here will be a legal citizen?

Mr. HATCH. Yes, it is true. And they would be covered by CHIP.

Mr. DURBIN. Then if we deny care—

Mr. HATCH. What about those who were brought in who are not legal citizens? I am not against helping them.

Mr. DURBIN. I don't think there should be a provision for undocumented illegals.

Mr. HATCH. If I may take my time back, I am not against any children receiving help. A lot of these children get help through our system of health care. But I am talking about a CHIP bill that cannot take care of our current children who are U.S. citizens and now we have included a provision that would allow legal immigrants to be covered before the 5 year waiting period.

I might add, many States today provide coverage to legal immigrant children. Many States do that. I commend them for doing it. But I am worried about having a bill that can get broad bipartisan support that literally first covers our children who are U.S. citizens. This bill does not do that. Let's be honest about it, it doesn't. Today, there are as many as 6 million or more low income, uninsured children who are U.S. citizens who do not have health coverage some of whom could potentially not be covered by CHIP because legal immigrant children will now be covered through CHIP. It is my hope that their family sponsors will take care of them. And if not, these legal immigrant children and pregnant women are still going to be taken care of by the States. I don't know of any pregnant woman who goes to an emergency room and who isn't going to be taken care of.

I think this is a principle that is very important. We should be doing what we can do. But what is more important is that we agreed to not include the legal immigrant provision in CHIPRA II. It overwhelmingly passed, and every Democrat voted for it. Now we come up with a partisan approach that basically undermines that agreement. I am very concerned about it. Frankly, I think Senator GRASSLEY is right in bringing up this amendment.

But don't let anybody fool you. There isn't a child I don't want to help. In fact, the way this bill arose, two families from Provo, UT, came to me. Both husbands worked; both wives worked. Both husbands and wives worked. Neither family, at that time in 1994, earned more than $20,000 combined income a year. Yet they were working poor who wanted to work and not be on the dole, but they couldn't afford insurance for their children, who were the only kids, the working-poor kids, the only kids left out of the process. So we came up with CHIP to try to resolve that issue. Even with that, we were not able to do everything we wanted to do, but it worked amazingly well. I don't know anybody who denies that fact. I don't know anybody who would dispute me on this statement. I would like to see them try.

The fact is, the bill worked well. Over the last 2 years, in a bipartisan way, we worked to try to solve some of the problems that arose, even with a good working CHIP bill. We worked in good faith. All of a sudden, we find a bill brought up here without any input from us that is a partisan bill, that makes it even more difficult to cover all these kids.

Everybody knows I believe in health care, and I believe we ought to cover everybody. I would like to do it, but I don't want to do it by bankrupting the country or making those who do work have to take care of those who don't. I am a very strong believer in helping those who cannot help themselves but would if they could, but I am not very excited about helping those who can help themselves but won't. Unfortunately, we have a few of those types of people in this country.

What galls me is that I know the President wants to work in a bipartisan way. But the House just acts like, so what, we are just going to do what we want to do. I can understand that type of thinking because they were irritated with some members in the House, even though we ended up with a very strong vote in the House. It just wasn't enough to override the veto. They were irritated with some of those who didn't agree with CHIPRA I or CHIPRA II. But in the Senate, we had, as I recall, 69 votes—more than we needed to override a veto. The reason we did is because it was bipartisan.

I don't know how many people are going to vote for CHIPRA II at this time, but I just remind my colleagues that every Democrat voted for it when it came up. Frankly, even if we didn't get it passed because the House sustained the veto, it was a tremendous victory.

I am not going to spend the rest of my life griping about it. But the fact is, it is a shame that with a President who wants to be bipartisan, the first thing out of the box, the first real bill out of the box happens to be a bill that they know Senator GRASSLEY and I worked hard on, that we carried a lot of water on, that we took a lot of flak for in 2007. Then we find out they are going to do something that is just plain partisan, that isn't going to work as well, and it is going to cost the American people a lot more.

I hope everybody in this body will support Senator GRASSLEY's and my amendment on the CHIPRA II bill. If they don't, personally, I can live with it, but I won't be happy. I think what is going on is not fair, and it is a direct slap in the face to those of us who worked so hard with our friends on the other side. And they are friends. I mean, they are all friends. I care for them. But this is a particularly important bill to me. Right now, it looks as if it is turning into just a partisan exercise.

I yield the floor.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. If I could interrupt this very interesting debate, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday, February 2, at 3:15 p.m., the Senate proceed to executive session to consider the nomination of Eric Holder to be Attorney General of the United States; that there be 3 hours of debate with respect to the nomination, with the time equally divided and controlled between Senators LEAHY and SPECTER, chairman and ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, or their designees; that at 6:15 p.m., the Senate vote on confirmation of the nomination; that upon confirmation, if there be confirmation, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table; that there be no further motions in order, the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action, and the Senate resume legislative session.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 3:10 p.m. today, the Senate proceed to a series of votes in relation to the following pending amendments in the order listed: Coburn No. 47, Bunning No. 74, and Hatch No. 80; further, that no amendments be in order to these amendments prior to the votes; that there be 2 minutes of debate equally divided between the votes; and that all votes after the first vote be limited to 10 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The assistant majority leader.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I would like to speak to the pending matter before us.

Mr. HATCH. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. DURBIN. I am happy to yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. I don't think I answered the question as well as I would like to. The question was, Do we want any children of pregnant women, legal immigrant children, not to be helped? Twenty-one States already pay for that. I think most of the others do through emergency rooms. They don't go without health care. But what is happening here is that we are taking what 21 States are actually doing and we are basically just alleviating them from having to do that, that which they are capable of doing and wanted to do, and just taking it over by the Federal Government when, in fact, these problems were solved in a way that was reasonable, with not only families taking care of people they brought into this country for 5 years under their obligation but also because the States would take care of them with State money. I wanted to make that clear. I do appreciate working with my colleagues on the other side, but I am a little disappointed that it has turned out this way.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, let me preface my remarks by saying a word of tribute to the Senator from Utah. I hope he doesn't leave the floor because this may be historic, but I thank him personally for his support of this SCHIP bill through the years. I know it has not always been easy. Sometimes he has been a lone voice. And though we may disagree about one aspect or another, I greatly admire the fact that he has stood up and supported this. I hope at the end of the day he will continue to because bipartisan support for this program is very important. I salute him.

Mr. HATCH. If the Senator will yield, I thank him for his gracious comments. He knows our friendship means a great deal, and also with the distinguished chairman of the committee. I think he is a very fine man who has done a very good job on this committee. But I am going to have a difficult time supporting this bill without some bipartisan approach that would work a lot better than this is going to work. But I thank the Senator again.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Utah.

I want to try to bring this down to the bottom line. This really is a debate about children's health coverage. This is not a debate about immigration. I hope my colleagues will be willing to have that debate about immigration, and soon, because it is long overdue in this country.

Much of this debate is focused on the idea that this provision in the bill would call on undocumented immigrants to abuse the system and that our financially strapped system would be run down by an influx of these undocumented immigrants jumping on board.

Let me make it clear: Undocumented immigrants have never been eligible for the major benefit programs in America, and this law does not change that. We are talking about legal immigrants, people who are in the United States legally, people who are working and paying taxes, people who are more than likely to become tomorrow's citizens.

It is a different group. These are not those hiding in the shadows because they are here illegally. These are people who have legal documentation as to their presence in the United States. They can go to work. They pay taxes. What we are talking about is making certain the children of these legal immigrants have a chance to be healthy. It is likely many of those children are already U.S. citizens, and many will become U.S. citizens. Their being unhealthy does not make sense for that family, and it certainly does not make sense for our Nation.

Legal immigrants were able to get some assistance, but the 1996 Federal welfare law restricted those benefits by enacting a 5-year waiting period. This was during the Gingrich era. The policy was instated over 10 years ago, and almost immediately we started changing it, realizing it really did not work as well as planned. Congress and many States recognized we had gone too far and we were causing serious harm to seniors and persons with disabilities and vulnerable families throughout the country.

Over time, and with the support of Presidents from both political parties—President Clinton and President George W. Bush—Congress restored eligibility to many but not all lawfully residing immigrants who needed Social Security assistance or food stamps. We have not yet restored health care services to these individuals and families. We have attempted to do so in the past.

During the debate on Medicare Part D prescription drugs for seniors, the Senate version of the Medicare bill included this same language. We all know how successful the effort was. It passed this Chamber with a strong bipartisan vote of 76 to 21. When there was an attempt to change it, water it down, it was rejected by the Senate by a vote of 65 to 33—a strong bipartisan vote.

In addition to longstanding support from Republicans, Democrats, and Independents, the removal of legal immigrant barriers to health care is also backed by diverse stakeholders. The National Governors Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures are on record supporting the approach of this bill.

In addition, the bipartisan U.S. Commission on Immigration Reform called for lifting restrictions on legal immigrants' eligibility for public benefits shortly after the 1996 restrictions went into place. The arguments for such a policy are overwhelming.

According to a 2003 factsheet from Families USA, extending health insurance to this population actually saves the health care system of America a lot of money. Covering uninsured children and pregnant women through Medicaid can reduce unnecessary hospitalizations by 22 percent. Preventing unnecessary hospital visits results in substantial savings in uncompensated care. Women without access to prenatal care are four times more likely to deliver low birth weight babies and seven times more likely to deliver prematurely with complications.

Avoiding these pregnancy complications is not only the humane thing to do, it is the economic thing to do. It produces great savings to the system. Like all of us, when immigrant kids are insured—legal immigrant kids are insured—their families make better decisions when it comes to the use of health care. They are twice as likely to have seen a primary care doctor in the last year as those who are uninsured. They are three times more likely to have preventive well-child visits. They are more likely to get a flu shot.

In contrast, uninsured immigrant children are four times as likely to have used an emergency room more than once as immigrant children who are covered. ER care is expensive, sometimes unnecessary. We can avoid it by doing the smart thing in providing health insurance for the children of these legal immigrants.

So I say this: There is a lot of debate in this Chamber, and has been over the last several days, about families, family values, life, respecting life. Those are all valuable concepts and principles. But isn't that the bottom line in this debate? If you really do respect families and family values, if you really do respect life and children, why would you deny basic health insurance to these children? They are the children of legal residents of the United States, people paying their taxes, who want the best for their kids, like we all do.

That is why this is so important. We have come at this in the last couple days—and I salute the chairman of the Finance Committee for his patience. We have come at this from 10 different directions. It is still the bottom line. The bottom line is, if you value these kids, if you want them to be healthy, if you want to give them a fighting chance for a good life so they can be happy, healthy, and good citizens of the United States, don't deny them this health care.

No child should have to wait 5 years for health care. Five years is a lifetime to a child with a medical problem. Many of these conditions have long consequences if we do not treat them early. So let's make sure we do the right thing. As someone said in some of the debate the other day, children are contagious. You cannot say, well, we are going to put in a classroom those citizen kids with those legal resident kids, and the legal resident kids do not get to go to the doctor. They have to wait until they are really sick or the parent, in desperation, has to take them to an emergency room, and it does not affect the whole classroom. It does.

We are literally in this together. Our children and grandchildren are in this together. Our country can do better. I hope we defeat these amendments and stick with this basic bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I very much thank the Senator from Illinois for his statement in several respects. One is that he complimented the Senator from Utah. That was the proper thing to do because the Senator from Utah has done a lot and led the way for children's health care. I thank the Senator for making that point very clear.

It is true, Senator HATCH has been one of the real leaders in helping to protect kids. He worked a few years ago on the original Children's Health Insurance Program, and he, Senator ROCKEFELLER, and the late Senator John Chafee were several of the prime movers to get children's health insurance passed in 1997.

I would like to say a word or two about the pending amendment offered by my good friend from Iowa, Senator GRASSLEY. He mentioned—and, frankly, some of the speakers have mentioned—a lot about partisanship and seeking bipartisanship, and so forth. We all want to work together. That is clear. Frankly, to be honest, I do not like the word "partisanship." I do not like the word "bipartisanship" because that connotes there are two sides trying to force something together. I, rather, think we should—without sounding corny about it—just try to do what is right.

The amendment offered by my friend from Iowa, Senator GRASSLEY, will have the effect of taking about three-quarters of the million children off the Children's Health Insurance Program or, to state it more accurately, if you take the current bill before us, we will add approximately 4 million children to the approximately 6 million children who are currently covered. We are told 10 million kids would be covered under the Children's Health Insurance Program.

Remember, the Children's Health Insurance Program is for low-income kids of the working poor. These are families who are not as poor as those who qualify for Medicaid. It is just the next level up, the working poor. They have had a real tough time making ends meet. The Children's Health Insurance Program is aimed at that group, at the working poor.

Under the legislation before us, not only will the 6 million who currently have children's health insurance coverage receive that care, but 4 million more will be covered under the bill for a total of 10 million.

Cutting to the chase, the bottom line, the effect of the amendment offered by Senator GRASSLEY will be to deny coverage to three-quarters of a million people who otherwise would be covered under the bill or, to state it in very gross terms, if the total under the bill is 10 million covered, that means under the Grassley amendment it would be 9.25 million covered; that is, about 750,000 kids could not be eligible. These are kids who currently in these times need help. These are kids with families where, most likely, the parent is having a hard time finding work or is maybe laid off, really struggling.

We know real wages have not gone up in this country at all in the last decade. Times are tough for a lot of people. They may have lost their house or are losing their house or they may find their rent has gone up even more. There are a lot of reasons people are facing tough economic times. These are the people we want to help.

Now, if these kids in working poor families do not get health insurance, we all know the consequences. One is deferred health care. They are not going to go to a doctor for checkups. They will not get their checkups. One is deferred medication. They do not get their medication. They will get sick more likely.

When they get sick, what happens? Well, if they get real sick, they probably have to go to the emergency room. What happens there? They get emergency care, deferred care. It is expensive care. It is postponed care.

Then what happens? Well, they get the care in the emergency room, but then what is the followup? They will not be seeing a doctor. They will not be seeing a pediatrician. They will not be seeing an internist, somebody who is a primary care doc, a family doc, who could follow up to make sure the child is doing well.

What else happens? Well, the costs in the emergency room are passed on to somebody else. Who are they passed on to? We all know they are passed on to the hospitals, they are passed on to the doctors, who then have to charge their private paying patients more. For those, frankly, who are so concerned about private health insurance—and we all are very much—the net effect of denying children coverage under the Children's Health Insurance Program is not only deferred care, it also means increased premiums for the private health insurance market. That makes it sort of a vicious circle: the higher the premiums go, the harder it is for people, for families to get private health insurance. It is a big problem.

You might ask, who are the 750,000 people the Grassley amendment would deny participation in the Children's Health Insurance Program? Really, his amendment basically strikes the bill on the floor and replaces it with what is called CHIP II. There is a big loss of coverage for perfectly legal immigrants. These are people in our country, frankly, who, for all intents and purposes, are Americans. They stood in line in some country legally to get to the point where they would enter our country. They are going through the process legally. They pay property taxes when they are in America, if they own real property. They, hopefully, pay some income taxes. That means they would have a decent job. They certainly pay sales taxes in this country. These are working people in our country.

They have served in our armed services. I am sure there are some over in Iraq, some in Afghanistan right now. These are perfectly legal folks in our country. The only difference is, they have to wait a little longer to get full citizenship. But they are in line doing all that they need to do under our law to get full citizenship.

They go to public schools in America. Legal immigrants go to school. Those are public programs. So it seems to me, if you have public programs, such as schools and the other public programs like that, then certainly children's health insurance should be fully available to them as well.

But, again, just as a basic reminder, the effect of the Grassley amendment is to deny health insurance to about three-quarters of a million people compared with the underlying bill. I do not think we want to deny coverage to the kids of the working poor who do need health insurance, especially during these very difficult economic times. So, therefore, I urge Senators not to support that amendment.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The senior Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I will take a minute to salute the leadership of the Senator from Montana on the Finance Committee. He has done a masterful job trying to keep things together as we get ourselves back to a more stable economy. I congratulate him for the work done and ask him to continue to exert the effort and leadership he has thus far.

Mr. President, I come to the floor to protect the well-being of more than 3,000 children in New Jersey.

A particular focus as we seek to stimulate an economic revival is to preserve and protect the Children's Health Insurance Program which has helped millions of kids get to a doctor for regular checkups to keep them well and get them the medicines or treatment they need.

However, instead of continuing that safety net or strengthening it, the Senator from Kentucky is targeting 3,000 children in my State, putting their coverage at risk. It is an assault on equity in our diverse country. Incomes vary and certainly costs of living differ and Federal assistance to States reflects their subsistence needs.

This amendment will deprive children of essential health care. These children are from working families who are producing income—modest as it may be—not enough to take care of all their needs but, nevertheless, essential in their family circumstance.

I wish to note that while our economy is going deeper and deeper into a recession, there is an attack on children's well-being by a Senator whose State in 2005 was the ninth largest recipient of Federal assistance. His State—Kentucky—receives 90 cents more for every dollar they pay to the Federal Government than New Jersey does. With the way my Republican colleagues are talking, one might think too many children in New Jersey are receiving health insurance.

While this assault is taking place, it is important to plead our case in the Senate. Right now, the number of children in New Jersey without health coverage is far above the national average. In fact, more than a quarter of a million kids in my State do not have health insurance, and now the Bunning amendment would put more children in my State at risk of losing their health insurance.

One of the other serious problems with this amendment is it intimates that costs among States are identical in each case. The Federal poverty level cannot be applied, for instance, equally in New Jersey and Kentucky. In New Jersey, we have the twin problems of very high costs of living and very high health insurance costs. The cost of living in the State of New Jersey is 30 percent higher than the national average. In fact, only two other States have a higher cost of living than New Jersey. Nearly all the families who rely on this program to get medical care for their children still have to pay copays, monthly premiums, and other out-of-pocket expenses.

This amendment is a bomb intended to disrupt the process the entire country desperately wants to see accomplished—and that is protecting children's health.

Given New Jersey's contribution when it comes to filling other States' needs, I find it particularly offensive. We know other States have different needs than we do, and we join in supporting these needs. If there is a natural disaster in a particular State, for example, the other 49 chip in. That is what our Republic demands.

Time and time again, New Jersey's taxpayers are asked to shoulder the burden to help other areas of the country that are in need, and for every dollar New Jersey gives to the Federal Government, we only receive 61 cents back. As a matter of fact, we are last in the list of States. Compare that with Kentucky. For every dollar Kentucky pays to the Treasury, it gets back $1.51.

Whether it is the Universal Service Fund for phone service, Essential Air Service in aviation or other programs, New Jersey gives far more than it gets back.

The Bunning amendment is contrary to everything we are trying to accomplish on the floor this week. More than 3,000 children in New Jersey are depending upon us now to protect their health. Whether it is illness, disease, violence, toxic pollution, terrorism or other threats, it is our job to protect our children, particularly when they are holding out their hands in need. Children in New Jersey are depending on the Members of this institution to oppose the Bunning amendment.

Two years ago, on a bipartisan vote, the Senate rejected a similar amendment that was offered by the Senator from Kentucky. It is an assault he continues with. I ask my colleagues to reject this amendment once again. Do it with a flourish, and do it with emphasis, because we have to stop States picking on other States in our moments of great need.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and note the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to address one of the amendments that will be coming up. There is a series of votes at 3:10 this afternoon. That is about 25 minutes from now. The first vote scheduled will be on the Coburn amendment No. 47. That is the amendment that deals with premium assistance.

Essentially, this amendment requires States to substitute premium assistance for the traditional Children's Health Insurance Program and Medicaid for children above the income eligibility determined by a State as of January 1, 2009. Basically what that says is this: If a State decides it wants to cover more children—let's not forget, when this program was enacted in 1997, the decision was that this would be a block grant program to give States the option, first, as to whether they want to participate in the program and also the option to design programs the way they think makes most sense in their States.

In 1997, the debate was should this be an entitlement program, such as Medicaid, where children of the working poor are entitled to get health insurance, as people are entitled to get health care under Medicaid. This Congress made the decision, no, it should not be an entitlement program, it should be a block grant program.

What does that mean? It means Congress, roughly every 5 years, reauthorizes the Children's Health Insurance Program. It provides money for the programs and money is allocated to the States under a formula. Obviously, larger population States would get more dollars than lower population States. But there is a match; that is, the Federal Government will pay a certain percentage for the program and the States pay another percentage. Under the formula, the Federal Government pays a little more than do the States.

Nevertheless, that is what Congress decided in 1997, and this legislation before us basically continues that same approach. It is a State option. States can decide for themselves what children they want to include. They can determine what level of poverty applies.

The Coburn amendment says: OK, let's say some States currently set their eligibility rates for low-income children, let's say, at 175 percent of poverty. That is not unlikely. There are a lot of States that are in that neighborhood. In fact, my State of Montana, until this last year, had 175 percent of poverty. They passed a referendum raising that to 250 percent of poverty.

This legislation says if a State wants to increase its eligibility rate, any increase that is in effect after January 1 of this year means that the State cannot put those children into the Children's Health Insurance Program but, rather, must take the money and apply it to premium assistance.

What does that mean? That means that money has to go to families to buy private health insurance coverage for their children. They cannot go into the program. But that money they get has to buy private health insurance. The fancy term is "premium assistance."

The amendment goes further. It says, in addition to that, when you have to buy private health insurance, with premium assistance, you have to wait 6 months. You cannot get it right away. You have to wait 6 months. So there is going to be a period, 6 months, where kids will have no health insurance. Not only are they not covered under the Children's Health Insurance Program, but they cannot get health insurance.

What if somebody gets sick during that 6-month period? They cannot get insurance in the public program. They cannot get private health insurance. They have to wait. Tell me what sense that makes. I cannot understand how that makes any sense at all. The first requirement makes no sense to me. It is wrong, in my view. The second adds insult to injury.

For those reasons, I strongly encourage Members not to support the Coburn amendment. It has a very restrictive effect. It makes it very difficult for kids in working poor families to get health insurance. Let's not forget we are in difficult times. These are recession times. People do not have jobs. Health insurance is very expensive, extremely expensive in the private market. There is discrimination in the individual market. Insurance companies can discriminate against you. If you have a preexisting condition, they can say: no health insurance. If you have a history of medical care, they can say: Sorry, you have been sick too much; we are not going to cover you, and for other reasons.

Let's say a child falls into this category; that is, the State raises eligibility and this child is currently in a family that is 175 percent of poverty, now at 250 percent of poverty. They are still the working poor. That is a very poor family. Let's say that person applies for health insurance because they lost their job. Let's say the insurance company applies normal preexisting rules in the market. Not only can that person not get health insurance in that 6-month period, they may not get it at all.

I strongly urge Members not to support this amendment. The practical effect of this amendment is to significantly discourage health insurance for poor kids, kids belonging to working poor families. I urge the amendment be defeated.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 83

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, there are a lot of amendments around here flying fast and furious. Frankly, we have read them in the past several minutes. I have one amendment in my hand. We received that a few minutes ago. It is hard to go through it quickly. I am not complaining. That is sometimes the way the Senate operates.

As a consequence, I think I overstated, after my staff read the full amendment, the number of kids that the Grassley amendment would cover compared with the underlying bill.

As I mentioned earlier, current law covers about 6 million children. The bill before us would add approximately 4 million more—roughly 10 million. I stated the amendment offered by Senator GRASSLEY from Iowa would have the effect of reducing coverage by about three-quarters of a million people. I said about 750,000 fewer kids would be covered if the Grassley amendment were adopted to this bill.

It looks as if I have overstated that figure. We checked with CBO. On the other hand, we don't know what the right figure is. CBO does not know. While I probably overstated the figure, it is probably less than or fewer than 750,000 kids, but we don't know how much less.

Looking at the bill rationally, analytically, clearly the Grassley substitute will cover fewer kids. Why? Because the Grassley substitute does not allow coverage for legal immigrants who have not waited 5 years. That clearly means there are a lot of kids in that category. Obviously, there are going to be fewer kids covered.

Second, the Grassley amendment uses the formulation in the second vetoed bill in 2007, and that second vetoed bill is more restrictive than the first vetoed bill. If we look at those two different categories, first, legal immigrants, and, second, with the definition of coverage under the second bill, compare the two with the underlying bill and a good number of kids will not be covered.

We do not know exactly how many, but it will be quite a few. We pretty much think it will not be 750,000 fewer, but it is going to be quite a bit fewer.

I apologize to my good friend from Iowa for making that mistake. It was an honest mistake. Things happen fast around here, and that was our first impression looking at the amendment. After we called CBO and studied it further to find the exact number, we realized I was incorrect in the statement I gave. But again, we don't know what the exact number is.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 74, AS MODIFIED

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to modify my amendment, No. 74.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The Chair hears none, and the amendment is so modified.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, when I have a chance during the 2 minutes of debate, I will explain what the modification is.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 47

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there is 2 minutes, equally divided, prior to the vote on the Coburn amendment No. 47.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I do not see Senator COBURN. I ask unanimous consent that all time be yielded back on that amendment, and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second. All time is yielded back.

Kennedy

The amendment (No. 47) was rejected. Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 74

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, the next amendment is the Bunning amendment. I think under the agreement Senator BUNNING is recognized to speak for 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is now 2 minutes of debate equally divided on the Bunning amendment, as modified.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I have had to modify my amendment slightly because CBO says directing more money to outreach and enrollment creates a score. So I have taken the outreach section out.

However, the amendment is still very simple. It removes the exception for New York and New Jersey to cover families above 300 percent of poverty and get the highest SCHIP matching rate. Instead, they would get the lower Medicaid matching rate covering these families like every other State in the Union. So you have a choice today: Require the people of your State to pay more taxes so New York and New Jersey can cover families who make $77,000 or $88,000 or treat every State the same.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. The Bunning amendment is the fourth amendment this week that would put a cap on the eligibility of the Children's Health Insurance Program, a cap to prevent kids from entering the program. Yesterday, we rejected a Cornyn amendment with a cap of 200 percent of poverty, a Roberts amendment with a $65,000 cap, and a Murkowski amendment with a conditional cap of 300 percent of poverty. Now the Bunning amendment would set a hard cap at 300 percent of poverty. We should vote this down for the same reasons we voted the others down; that is, because it deprives kids of getting health insurance.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I move to table the Bunning amendment and ask for the yeas and nays on the motion to table.

AMENDMENT NO. 80

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this amendment would codify the 2002 HHS regulation which gives States the option of providing CHIP coverage to children before as well as after birth. Fourteen States have already approved plans to provide CHIP coverage to children before birth: Arkansas, California, Illinois, Louisiana, Maine, Minnesota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Washington, and Wisconsin.

This amendment also allows States to provide health services to the mother for 60 days after the birth of her child. In addition, the amendment also would provide health coverage to pregnant women for issues not relating to the pregnancy. This amendment will continue allowing States to promote the health of children and their mothers before and after birth by codifying the 2002 HHS regulation.

I am happy to have a number of co-sponsors on this amendment, including the distinguished Presiding Officer. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the Hatch amendment would codify the divisive Bush regulation that only covers the unborn child but not the mother. In other words, they separate the two. What we do in the underlying bill is we cover both. We cover the pregnant woman and the child she is carrying. There is no reason to have this amendment. Look at page 50 of the bill. It clearly states that prenatal care will be delivered to that pregnant woman. This is about adding abortion to this debate. It doesn't belong in this debate. It is not necessary. We have already voted this down twice. I trust we will vote it down now.

I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

NOT VOTING—1

The amendment (No. 80) was rejected.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I voted against the Hatch amendment for the following reasons.

This amendment sought to codify in law a legal concept of unborn children, therefore establishing the fetus as protected separately from the mother. The need to provide health care coverage for expectant mothers is clear and the State Children's Health Insurance Program reauthorization being considered allows States to provide coverage to pregnant mothers.

While I support the policy of providing health coverage to pregnant mothers in the pending legislation, this amendment is an effort to advance a political cause rather than provide a medical necessity.

This amendment has no practical effect in terms of health care coverage for pregnant women.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, I am aware of only a couple more amendments that require rollcall votes before we go to final passage. I expect we may have a DeMint amendment on tax deductions. I expect that amendment may require a rollcall vote. Second, shortly we will hear from Senator COBURN on his substitute amendment No. 86, and I expect this amendment may also require a rollcall vote. In addition, I hope we can address two amendments by the ranking Republican member, Senator GRASSLEY, and I have some hope that we will be able to address those amendments with voice votes. I am hoping the remaining amendments may only require voice votes. So Senators should be aware that we are getting close to finishing this bill. I am hoping we might be able to vote again in an hour or 90 minutes, but we are closing in.

AMENDMENT NO. 85

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up DeMint amendment No. 85.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. DEMINT] proposes an amendment numbered 85.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(d) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 2008.

Mr. DEMINT. Madam President, in deference to my colleague from Oklahoma, I won't speak on the amendment at this point, but I will briefly state its purpose.

The purpose of this amendment is to help American taxpayers pay for their children's health care to the same degree we are forcing them to help pay for the health care of noncitizen children in this underlying bill. Specifically, it would provide all eligible American families with an above-the-line Federal income tax deduction for each child comparable to the average Federal share of the benefit provided to any noncitizen child under the SCHIP legislation.

I will speak more about the bill following Senator COBURN's introduction of his amendment, but for now I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 86

(Purpose: To ensure that American children have high-quality health coverage that fits their individual needs)

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up amendment No. 86.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. COBURN], for himself, Mr. BURR, and Mr. GREGG, proposes an amendment numbered 86.

Mr. COBURN. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COBURN. Madam President, the bill we are considering is designed to help low-income kids have coverage and have care. What do we know about the kids who are in those programs and the care they have? Here is one of the things we know: They don't have access to 60 percent of the doctors in this country because the reimbursement rates are so low they won't be seen. That is the first thing. No. 2 is they don't have access to the best drugs because a lot of Medicaid programs and SCHIP won't pay for the best drugs for those children.

I got to thinking about this bill and what it does and what it is intended to do. What is in agreement in the Senate is that we want all of the kids covered. We want every child in this country to be able to have access to quality care with no limitation of their choice of who their doctor is going to be—the one the child and the parent feel the most comfortable with—because we know if that is the case, they are going to be most compliant. So we want them to have the greatest care, and we want every one of them to be able to have access to care.

This bill brings up Government payments under SCHIP to 300 percent of the poverty level—60,000 bucks, essentially. Anybody making, essentially, over that wouldn't be benefited by this bill but everybody under it. It adds $70 billion worth of taxes to the American people to be able to do that. As it does it, it takes 2 million kids who are presently covered by insurance off insurance and gets 2 million out of the 8.9 million or 9.8 million kids who aren't covered today with anything. So we are going to spend $70 billion to get 4 million kids, a little less than 4 million kids covered, of which we are going to absorb the costs that are already being paid by businesses for those kids right now.

By the way, I ask unanimous consent to add Senators MCCONNELL, ENZI, CORNYN, DEMINT, JOHANNES, KYL, ALEXANDER, GRAHAM, BURR, CHAMBLISS, THUNE, and BARRASSO as cosponsors of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COBURN. So maybe it is instructive for us to look at what we are doing right now and say: What could we do with that money? Right now, we have 31 million kids in America who don't have private coverage. In other words, we have 31 million out of the 78 million kids who don't get to choose where they want to go, don't get to have the best drugs, don't get the referral to the best centers, don't get the referral to the best doctors because they are on a Government-run program. So 8.9 million kids aren't even covered by any program right now, and not all of those 8.9 million kids are in families who are at 300 percent of the poverty level or less. This is based on 2005 numbers, and we know it is greater now, but these numbers for the number of children are accurate right now. We are spending $67 billion to do that.

What does that mean? That means we are spending $2,160 each to cover 22 million kids. Well, if you divided the 31 million kids who are out there into this number, you would get $2,160 available for every child at 300 percent of the poverty level who is not covered right now by their parents, and that includes Medicaid and SCHIP. So you have $2,160 to work with.

Now, the average price in the individual market in this country is less than $1,200 a year. Some will say: Well, that coverage is not as good. Well, let's make it $1,700, which is $300 more than what our kids cost. Let's make it $1,700, or let's make it $1,800, or let's make it $2,160. What could we buy for $2,160 for every kid at 300 percent of the poverty level or less who is not on the program? What we could buy for all of them is a top-grade policy outside of Government-run programs that would give insurance to 100 percent of the children who don't have insurance and give them 100 percent access to every quality doctor in this country on a competitive basis and give them access to the drugs the Members of Congress' kids have access to and the same doctors to whom the Members of Congress have access.

The important point is, we have a government-run program and the administrative costs and the inefficiencies of it cost more than private insurance, than if we would just go out and buy every one of these guys an FEHPB—Federal Employees Health Benefits Plan—a top-drawer plan. Why would we run it through the Government? Why would we take away choice? Why would we take away access by running it through a government-run program and one that is highly inefficient?

There is another thing we should know. The rate of fraud in private insurance products is about 3 percent. The rate of fraud in Medicaid is 10.4 percent, and in SCHIP it is 14 percent. So because the Government is running the program and we can't run it well and we don't run it well, we are losing about 11 percent or 11 cents out of every dollar that we are trying to get to kids because we can't run efficient or effective programs.

So wouldn't it be smarter, rather than to have all of this gobbledygook government, to make sure that every kid in this country whose parents don't make $60,000, who isn't covered with insurance today, has access to a top-drawer health insurance policy that gives them 100 percent access, gives them 100 percent quality, and gives them 100 percent access to the drugs and the physicians they want? Who is going to argue with that?

As a matter of fact, several of my colleagues are cosponsors of the Healthy Americans Act, and that is exactly what it does. It is going to be very interesting to see if they are cosponsors of this bill but yet don't vote for this for kids. And that is a bipartisan bill. So if it is good enough for all of America and if it is good enough for the Members of Congress and their kids and if it is good enough for Federal employees, why can't we give that to the children of this country who don't have health insurance? Why can't we do that? We can't do it because it doesn't fit into the partisan rancor of Washington.

This is a commonsense proposal that doesn't cost a penny more than what we spent in 2005. And we cover all of the kids, not just 4 million more; we cover 8.9 million more with the same amount of money. All the children have access.

It is not a child's fault if their parents can't afford or don't have a job that gives them access to 100 percent of physicians or access to the best medicines or access to equal care. It is not the child's fault. So if we are going to spend this much of the American taxpayers' money, why don't we get value for it? Why don't we decide we want value for this money?

So if you take all the kids out there—31 million—on what we spent in 2005, you can spend $2,160 on every one of them—every one of them—and get them a top-drawer health insurance policy. Top drawer. Top of the line. That is almost double what the charge is for an individual policy now. So we could spend almost twice as much to get that same coverage. Why would we not do that? What is going to keep us from helping all the kids?

I will tell my colleagues the other aspect of it. We are also not going to raise taxes $71 billion if we do this plan. Let me say that again. President Obama said your taxes won't be raised. This bill raises $71 billion—granted, from tobacco products, which I don't have any objection to—but let's save the $71 billion on tobacco products for something else when we can efficiently buy our kids health care and buy them a health insurance policy.

Another key point: As somebody who has cared for Medicaid kids and Medicaid moms, when you have the "Medicaid" stamp on your forehead, it is not equivalent care. When we give all these children access to a private insurance policy of their own, it is no longer a Medicaid program, it is their insurance policy. Providers will never know how they got that policy. They will never know if it was an employment-based policy, an individually bought policy, or a policy that comes through SCHIP and Medicaid.

What we do is we take the demeaning qualities and characteristics of having to be dependent through a government program, and we throw that out. So the bias goes out, the discrimination goes out, and the self-esteem goes up.

What will happen if this passes? The first thing that will happen is we will save $70 billion. The second thing that will happen is not 4 million kids—actually, it is a net 2 million kids will get coverage—8.9 million kids will get coverage, and we will do it with the same amount of money we spent in 2005. Every child will be covered. There will be a real choice of who is going to be your provider. Right now you get hustled into whoever will take care of you in these programs. Some are great and some are not. Confidence will be restored. There will be increased quality of outcome and increased access to specialists who now today cannot afford to see a Medicaid or SCHIP patient because their overhead is so great.

Finally, $70 billion—I know we are talking about $1 trillion in the stimulus package—doesn't seem like much, but $70 billion is a lot of money. If you look at it, it is about $2,000 per man, woman, and child over the next 5 years that we will save in this country.

If the goal of SCHIP and all the speeches we have heard all week long is to care for kids, to make sure kids have access, to make sure they have care, if that is the goal, then anybody who is not going to vote for this amendment is not secure in saying they want to cover all the kids. This one will.

This substitute allows the Secretary to develop autoenrollment. There is $100 million in this amendment so we can have outreach, trying to get kids coverage. This takes away the negative consequences of applying for Medicaid or applying for SCHIP when your parents cannot afford to get you coverage.

The other thing it does is there is a compensation in terms of making sure we help people who have insurance keep their insurance by compensating to keep them on their employer's insurance, which costs a whole lot less. It costs maybe $200 or $300 a year. But the most important thing it does is it provides liberty and freedom and equal access for every child in this country.

They are going to say this will not work. But notice there is not going to be a point of order filed against this amendment because this amendment does not cost any money. It saves money. It does not cost a penny. It will not cost us and will cover so many more children.

My question to my colleagues, as we wrap up the SCHIP bill, is: Do you want to do it right? Do you want to do it better? Do you want to cover all the kids. Or do you want to play the games of Washington and political gamesmanship and partisanship and say: Yes, I care about the kids, but I couldn't do the right thing, the easy thing, the commonsense thing, the things that are associated with order, priority, and common sense that says: Gosh, we can buy and get better coverage for less money; why wouldn't we do that?

We are going to hear all the reasons. We may not hear any because most of the amendments I offered nobody will debate them. They know they have the votes to defeat them so they will not debate. They will not come out and say why this would not be a good idea.

The American taxpayers ought to think: Here is a great opportunity for us to save a ton of money and do something very good socially: cover innocent children with quality health care that they do not have access to today, with no increase in cost—with no increase in cost. Yet we are going to see a vote where they are going to say no. Then we are going to know if you care about kids and whether you care about access for kids.

I will end my debate at this time and yield to my colleague from North Carolina, Senator BURR.

I ask unanimous consent to add Senator VITTER as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from North Carolina is recognized.

Mr. BURR. Madam President, we are at a point where the rubber meets the road. We are challenged daily in this institution and across the country by the American people to find solutions to real problems. In 1997, we found a problem. It was called uninsured children. In the House Energy and Commerce Committee, I was one of those who crafted the original SCHIP program. It was the right way to go at that time.

Health care has changed a lot since 1997. We have continued to reauthorize SCHIP. We have talked about expansions. As a matter of fact, we debated, over the last couple days, why an expansion of eligibility actually hurts low-income children, the ones below 300 percent of poverty. Why does a State want to increase the eligibility income of beneficiaries under SCHIP? It is because there are some kids who are hard to get to. They are hard to find to give them health care. Rather than leave anything on the table, states would like for us to make it easier by expanding the pool of eligibility so we can take higher income kids and put them in the program.

In 2008, there were 7.4 million kids enrolled in SCHIP. It is a 4-percent increase from 2007, but it is a little bit misleading because within that 7.4 million, the monthly average was 5.5 million kids enrolled in SCHIP. What that implies is there are 1.9 million kids who sort of rotate in and rotate out of SCHIP because they possibly migrate from one State to another. So they are not permanent enrollees.

Throughout these days, we have heard Members say our objective is that we want to cover as many kids as possible. Now we have Members standing and saying, as many kids as possible is not what the goal should be of the Senate. The goal should be every child under 300 percent should be covered.

Dr. COBURN did a very good job of spelling out for us that we have quite a large pool of individuals. We have 49 million kids under 300 percent of the poverty level. Of the 78 million kids in America, 22.1 million are currently under Federal programs—Medicaid and SCHIP; 8.9 million kids are uninsured.

We have a proposal in front of this body. That Baucus proposal is to raise taxes of $70 billion-plus and to cover 5.7 million of the 8.9 million uninsured. Actually, that is not the case because of the 5.7 million, 2 million are currently covered by their parents' insurance. We are actually going to increase the rolls by 3.7 million children for $70 billion-plus. We still leave quite a few kids out there without insurance, without coverage. Even though their families have too much money for Medicaid, and they are not enrolled in SCHIP.

This is the time to reform this program. This is the time to say let's design a program that catches 100 percent of the kids at 300 percent of poverty and below. This is the time to totally rethink how we deliver this care.

As a matter of fact, the proposal that Dr. COBURN has made not only can be funded without the $70 billion tax increase and cover 100 percent of the kids, but it actually saves the American taxpayers $144 billion over 5 years. There is the part you did not hear from Dr. COBURN. We actually save $144 billion over 5 years.

You see, the current Baucus proposal on the table is going to increase enrollment of uninsured children under 300 percent of poverty, and it is going to cost $74 billion. If you add that to the number of uninsured who remain in the pot, which is 2.9 million, under the way they have approached this bill, it would cost roughly $70 billion more to cover that pool of 2.9 million. So, in fact, for my colleagues, if you want to know what we have done in this amendment, as Dr. COBURN said, we have come up with a health care proposal that covers 100 percent of the uninsured children under 300 percent of the poverty level, and in doing it, we have saved the American taxpayers $144 billion over the next 5 years if—if—the goal is to cover 100 percent of the uninsured children under 300 percent of poverty. We only save $144 billion if that is the intent to cover all.

If the intent is to cover all, why in the world would you spend $144 billion more dollars if you can do it with today's dollars?

Congress—the Senate and the House—has been deficient since the beginning of this program because we do not cover all the kids. Yet I remember that was the objective the day we wrote the bill. Let's get on a path to cover all.

We are also deficient in the fact that the way SCHIP is structured, we rely on the 60 percent of all health care providers who actually see this population. Forty percent of the health care professionals in this country restrict access to Medicaid beneficiaries or SCHIP beneficiaries. We have now limited the pool of professionals to 40 percent.

With the changes in this amendment, we now open the pool to 100 percent. We increase the choice of a child with Medicaid and SCHIP, and we have now put them in a product where 100 percent of the health care professionals, in fact, will invite them in and be their medical home or their primary doctor, their pediatrician. Without this amendment, we will continue to serve less than 100 percent of the 300 percent of poverty and below, and we also limit the number of health care professionals who are going to see these children, that generation whom we feel incredibly committed to make sure are successful, not just in life but in health.

This does not need to go on, but I do wish to make this point to my colleagues. This is not another amendment. I know we have had votes on amendments for the last 2 days, and we routinely come down here and it is pretty much a party-line vote, although I learned earlier in this debate that when one Republican votes for it out of committee, it is now bipartisan. I am not sure that is the definition President Obama had of "bipartisanship" when he gave a wonderful inauguration speech on these Capitol stairs. Given that one Republican did vote for the bill, it is now bipartisan.

This amendment is about the next generation. It is about the most at-risk children in this country. It is about a real option and a real choice, where that population has full coverage, sees any doctor, enters any medical delivery point in the system, and saves $144 billion over what we would have to spend under the current method. It does not eliminate SCHIP. As a matter of fact, we reauthorize SCHIP for 2 additional years while the Secretary is able to put together the architecture for this product to be in the marketplace.

This is a real opportunity for this body to change the direction and, more importantly, to fulfill the promise that is made over and over on this Senate floor, that what we are doing is to make sure every child in America has health care coverage. If we adopt this amendment, if we vote yes for TOM COBURN's amendment, we will have completed that promise we made to America's children.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I rise for three or four purposes that I will do in succession.

No. 1, I would like to define bipartisanship for the Senator from North Carolina. No. 2, I want to give a statement in support of the Coburn amendment. No. 3, I would like to bring to final debate my amendment 83, if the majority manager would like to vote on it at that time—and that would be a voice vote—and then I would have my last amendment to introduce, which is amendment No. 71 that I would speak about.

First of all, I think I know something about establishing bipartisanship in the Senate. I was part of a bipartisan proposal 2 years ago that maybe Senator BURR didn't like, but it was very bipartisan. It is kind of an institutional thing, bipartisanship, as far as I practice it in the Senate and as Senator BAUCUS has practiced it, up until this particular amendment. What you do to get to be bipartisan, you sit across the table from each other, Republican and Democrat—and maybe more than one Republican, maybe more than one Democrat—with expert staff, and you build up a piece of legislation that is eventually put before the committee as a Baucus-Grassley bill or as a Grassley-Baucus bill, depending on who is in the majority. Then what you do is you make up your mind that you are going to be arm in arm defending that through the committee process, through the Senate, through conference, and all the way to the President. And you try to maintain 65 to 70 votes within the Senate. That is the way I define bipartisanship.

It is a little bit like if you and your wife were going to buy a new car for that old jeep that you drive around. If you said it is going to be a family affair, you would be sitting down with your wife and asking: What kind of a car do you want? What color do you want? What accessories do you want? You wouldn't go up to your wife, I hope, and say: Honey, we are going to buy a new car. This is what we are going to buy and it is a mutual decision. You wouldn't do that. You would work with your wife to decide what kind of car you want.

So if you want bipartisanship in the Congress of the United States—and I am sure that is what our President was talking about during his campaign—you have to work together to get it. But it is not like this issue was handled—or maybe I can speak more accurately about the stimulus issue that will be up next week—where 48 hours or 24 hours before it comes up, Republicans are given a document and are notified that this is what we are going to do.

So I say to the Senator from North Carolina, that is my definition on what bipartisanship is. I don't know whether you agree with it, but at least that is what I have tried to practice, and I think Senator BAUCUS has basically tried to practice that as well.

Mr. BURR. If the Senator will yield, that is the definition I understand exactly. But that is not the process we completed on SCHIP or the stimulus package. My hope is the President will win at the end of the day.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, one of the reasons I said I came to the floor was to speak about the Coburn amendment and to say why I am going to vote for it. This amendment, which has been the product of Senator COBURN's and Senator BURR's speeches a few minutes ago, presents a fundamental choice about how we will go forward with health care reform in this country. Now, I wish to emphasize "how we will go forward with health care reform," which is maybe the next health care issue that is going to be before our Senate.

The underlying bill covers 4 million kids. It leaves 2 million kids without coverage. Why? Well, as CBO has told us so often, if you ask State government to go out and cover kids, as we do in Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program, States need more and more Federal dollars to do so. So let's face it, that is exactly how this bill works. We throw billions of dollars at the States, and the States go out and find kids and pay for their health care. The more money we throw at the States, the more kids they cover. The less money we throw at States, the fewer kids they cover.

The Coburn amendment takes a totally different approach. This amendment generally follows the successful way that the Medicare Part D benefit works. By the way, let me say parenthetically about Medicare Part D, which has been law now for 4 or 5 years, it is about the only Federal program I know about that has come in under budget. I am not talking about just for 1 year, I am talking about the projections CBO made for it at that time for the 10 years into the future. I don't have an exact figure in mind now, but maybe 6 months ago I used a figure that was in the billions of dollars that it was under what we anticipated spending.

So we are talking about a Coburn amendment that follows the pattern of Part D Medicare, which works, and it is financially a protection for the taxpayers' dollars. If the Federal and State governments work together to create a healthier market, the private sector will be more efficient in covering kids. That is the Part D model. That is the model we have before us in the Coburn amendment. It is the private sector, on the one hand, in that philosophy, versus the public sector on the other hand.

I wish my colleagues had more time to fully develop this with the Congressional Budget Office because the contrast this amendment paints is one we are going to be facing in the health care reform. So I wish to emphasize that the next health care debate we have is going to be health care reform and we ought to have that debate and we ought to bring about the reform that is necessary.

So let's think of that as laying the groundwork for a lot of debate that we are going to have in the upcoming issue of health care reform. Basic questions: Do we want a government-run solution? Is growing our Government bureaucracy in the area of health care the pathway to covering all Americans? Or do we want governments to help the market work better; or possibilities of Government and private partnerships? Do we want to harness the ingenuity that is out there in the private sector in covering all Americans?

Now, I don't answer those questions, but those are questions everybody in this body, and I hope grassroots America, will look at in the coming months. With this vote, I am giving you a partial answer to my approach to these questions.

I would like to go on to, hopefully, what will lead us to a vote on amendment No. 83, I believe is the number of the amendment, but before I do that, I would like to speak about an issue that came up when I was off the floor earlier this afternoon. The chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, my friend, Senator BAUCUS, characterized the Grassley-Hatch amendment I offered earlier as not covering 750,000 individuals as compared to the underlying bill. This is about my amendment 83.

Now, I understand Senator BAUCUS later came to the floor to acknowledge that his characterization of the Grassley-Hatch amendment was incorrect and he apologized, and I thank him for that. However, the chairman is still inaccurate, from my point of view, in some characterizations of the Grassley-Hatch amendment, and that is what I wish to go into.

The chairman stated my amendment would cover fewer individuals because it does not include the legal immigrant provision. I would like to draw all my colleagues' attention, but particularly Senator BAUCUS' attention, to footnote "f" on the enrollment table of the Congressional Budget Office production on the underlying bill. Footnote "f" states:

The Medicaid and SCHIP figures and the Medicaid SCHIP total may include some

In other words, the so-called new enrollments of legal immigrants are actually individuals who are currently insured with State or local funds. In terms of additional enrollment figures, the chairman notes correctly that we don't have a CBO table. He is correct that we don't know the actual enrollment numbers resulting from the Grassley-Hatch amendment.

I would reiterate what I said earlier. The amendment we are going to be voting on is the same bill that 55 Members of this body—and they are presently Members of this body—voted on and successfully passed by a wide margin in 2007. So I have to ask the question, before we vote on my amendment: If it was good enough then, why isn't it good enough now?

If the majority doesn't want to vote on this now, I will go on to offer my other amendment. Do I ask for the question, Madam President, on amendment No. 83?

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, there is no reason we can't make it the pending amendment. But I would like to say, first, very briefly, that I deeply appreciate the remarks by my good friend. I know all of us are trying to get the right numbers, the accurate numbers. It is a search for the truth, and CBO has not given us the right number, so it is hard to know exactly what the effect will be.

It seemed to me, somewhat logically, that the inclusion of legal immigrants would mean probably more people covered, even though some may be covered some other ways. We don't know the number, but that is sort of the effect. Therefore, I say to my colleagues, I think it is better to include more people, more kids, in the Children's Health Insurance Program and not fewer.

With respect to the vote on the last bill, where 55 Members of the Senate supported it, and the Senator's question: If not then, why not now, the answer is because now the underlying bill is a little better. It covers more kids. It is better to cover a few more kids than not to cover a few more kids. So that is why it is not right now where it might have been right then.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that we proceed to the Grassley amendment. Notwithstanding the other amendments, I ask that we proceed to the Grassley amendment at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The amendment is now pending.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I would, first of all, like to give my rationale for an amendment I am going to present to the Senate before I actually present it. It will be amendment No. 71, though.

Congress has known for some time that the Children's Health Insurance Program faces expiration March 31 of this year. We all knew Congress would have to act quickly once the new session got underway. The majority had three different options they could have taken in moving forward. First, they could have simply picked up one of the two vetoed bills and quickly passed it. It would have received bipartisan support. I would have preferred the second bill over the first, but I could have probably found a way to support the first bill. Either of those bills would have moved quickly and would have had significant bipartisan support.

The second option the majority could have taken was to do a short-term extension of the Children's Health Insurance Program while we worked on broader health care reform. That is what this amendment does. It is a six-quarter extension of SCHIP through the end of the next fiscal year.

Now, I do understand there is a point of order against this amendment. This amendment actually should have been done on the stimulus bill, where everything and the kitchen sink appears to be going, but that is a debate for next week. It would have been a drop in the bucket on that bill.

If the underlying bill is enacted, it will provide coverage to many people who were previously uninsured—approximately 4 million children—by the year 2013. While I don't want to denigrate the accomplishments of this bill, everyone in this Chamber knows we need to roll up our sleeves and get to work on covering the other 42 million uninsured Americans who will not benefit from this bill—millions of whom are children this bill does not provide coverage for.

I wish to focus on that task. I want us to work in a bipartisan manner to get coverage for all Americans, and everything in that process so far has been bipartisan, but it is something we are going to have to deal with on SCHIP again. So I am willing and ready to do the hard work it is going to take. We could have set aside SCHIP while we focused on that most important task of full-fledged health care reform. Instead, the majority has chosen a third option: to bring up a bill that walks away from the bipartisanship of 2007 and threatens relationships moving forward with broad health care reform. I want to emphasize "threatens" because so far everything has been bipartisan in meetings and discussions and everything.

I have made no secret of my disappointment in the changes made in the underlying bill. It is very important that people watching the debate understand how totally unnecessary a partisan fight is. The majority had bipartisan bills they could have brought up for consideration. I had an amendment earlier that would have replaced the underlying bill with the second of those earlier bills. The majority could have done a simple extension of SCHIP while we worked together on covering 46 million uninsured, not just the 4 million covered by this legislation. That is what this amendment does. It is the last chance for cooler heads to prevail.

It was reported recently that the Speaker of the House said, "We won the election. We write the bills." Seeing the majority take that approach on the Children's Health Insurance Program, an issue that always had broad bipartisan support, does not give me comfort moving forward on health care reform.

I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment and call up my amendment, No. 71. I do not know how much debate there will be on it, but I have nothing more to say on that amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WHITEHOUSE). Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, very simply, I do not agree with this amendment. Why? Because here we are. It is about 5 o'clock. We are on the verge of passing a 4½ year reauthorization of the Children's Health Insurance Program. We are on the 2-yard line. We are about ready to put this ball across the goal to score a touchdown, to get this passed. This amendment sets us back several yards, quite a few yards. We are on the 2-yard line for a 4½ year reauthorization. If this is agreed to, we are back to the 50-yard line.

I think it is better to get this bill past the goal line and pass this 4½ year legislation. I urge we do not adopt this amendment that sets us back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I wish to emphasize that I do not disagree with what he said, he said it accurately, but here is the point I am trying to make. In just a few months, we are going to be working on health care reform and we are going to be working, within those few months, on how the Children's Health Insurance Program fits in with it. We are going to be going through this exercise once again, so we wasted a lot of time here for nothing.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I hope not for nothing. This is pretty productive.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Ms. KLOBUCHAR. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 85

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I would like to make some comments about DeMint amendment No. 85. This is an amendment that I believe is very important to American families, taxpayers. Here in Washington, there seems to always be enough money to help those who cannot take care of themselves. Most of the time, that is a good thing because we certainly want to have those safety nets for those families, particularly families who need health care for their children. The difficulty is that those families who are working and are struggling and are being independent often have to pay the price for that.

I have personal family experience that drives this whole issue home. As we consider the expansion of the children's health bill to expand it to folks with higher incomes, I realize that affects my own family.

My oldest son is married with a child, expecting another. He is back in graduate school, doing some part-time work, struggling to make ends meet and pay for his own health insurance. As they expect their second child, with that high-deductible policy, they are paying for most of their health care themselves.

As he heard about the debate on this issue as well as some of the other bail-out issues, he mentioned to me—he said: Dad, it is hard in my situation to make enough money to pay for our own health care. I want to be independent, but I realize the tax dollars I do pay are paying for the benefits of others who are often making more than I am.

He has friends in school who are on welfare and food stamps and Medicaid, taking everything they can from the Government. But most Americans, most middle-class Americans and even those who fall below middle class, are struggling today to make ends meet on their own and not be dependent on the Government. The amendment I have introduced tries to achieve some level of fairness to those American taxpayers who are working and trying to make ends meet.

My son could qualify for SCHIP, this children's health program. Certainly while he is in school he is below 200 percent of poverty. But right now he pays for his own health care. We even charge him taxes on the amount he has to spend for his own health care. Then his regular taxes have to go to help all his friends who are living off the Government dole.

If we are going to help families with children, we ought to be fair about it. This bill we are considering expands the children's health plan. The current law in America certainly covers American citizens, but the Federal money is not allowed to be used for noncitizens. That is basically part of our immigration deal. When folks come here and they are sponsored, the agreement is that for 5 years they take care of themselves and they are not a burden on the American taxpayer.

But the bill we are debating today changes that law. It gives benefits, health care, to noncitizens at the expense of middle-class working Americans. I do not want to take that away. That is not what this bill is about, my amendment. I am not changing anything this bill already offers.

But what this amendment does is it gives every American family with children, qualifying children under the children's health plan we are debating, an above-the-line deduction of up to $1,500. And what it is, it gives American citizens the same benefit we are giving non-Americans, noncitizens, in this underlying bill.

We do not ask the Government to pay for their health care. We say, as a matter of fairness, we are not going to make them pay income taxes on what they have to spend on health care for their children. That is what this is about, a deduction for the cost of health care for children.

We phase this out as income goes up. If a family qualifies for the AMT, they cannot get this deduction. So this is about middle-class Americans, people who are actually out there today trying to make it on their own without Government help, paying for their own health care. We are not going to charge them taxes on the cost of their health care with this amendment.

Specifically, the DeMint amendment, a taxpayer fairness amendment, would allow American families, citizens and legal immigrant families, the ability to receive a tax deduction of up to $1,500 for each child to cover health care-related costs.

This deduction, per child, is comparable to the average Federal share of the benefit provided to any child under this SCHIP bill, the underlying child health care bill. But no family who is already claiming SCHIP or Medicaid or any Federal health plan would be able to use this deduction.

This deduction is for Americans with that spirit of independence who, regardless of how little they are making, want to pay their own way. And let's not penalize them for it. Let's not tax what they have to pay for health care and then give it free to someone else. Let's not make them pay taxes to help pay for someone else's health care and still leave them out in the cold.

This is a matter of basic fairness. I encourage my colleagues, Republican and Democrat, if the whole point of this legislation is to help struggling families with children make sure they have health care for their children, let's be fair to American citizens and at least give them an equal benefit that we are giving to noncitizens. Let's not make middle-class working Americans pay for health care for noncitizens while we are basically taxing the struggling American worker who is trying to pay for it on their own.

I think a vote on this amendment will be coming up relatively shortly. Again, I encourage all of my colleagues to vote for the DeMint taxpayer fairness amendment.

I reserve the remainder of my time, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent to speak in morning business for 10 minutes.

BUY AMERICAN

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, this morning the Washington Post has a front-page story that says "Buy American Rider Sparks Trade Debate, Proviso Limits Steel and Iron from Abroad." This is a story about a provision that is in both the House stimulus bill and the Senate stimulus bill that encourages, to the extent we are stimulating investment in infrastructure projects—building roads and bridges and dams and schools and repairing libraries and so on in order to try to put people back to work—that the acquisitions to come from American sources, where possible. If you are going to buy steel, buy iron, skid steer loaders, any number of different kinds of equipment, it ought to be coming from American factories so that we put people back on factory floors and back to work.

The Washington Post has editorialized in opposition to this. The story itself almost sounds a bit like an opinion piece. It talks about “opponents say it amounts to a declaration of war against free trade” and “will spark retaliation” and so on.

I wanted to make a comment about this, because I think it is an important issue and one we ought to discuss. If today is like most other days recently, 20,000 people will have lost their jobs; 20,000 people will come home tonight and have to tell someone in the family that they lost their job. And 20,000 people every day are losing their jobs, 500,000 to 600,000 people a month. We don't know exactly what the menu is to try to put this economy back on track, but we know that doing nothing is not a solution. So the Congress is putting together a stimulus proposal, an economic recovery proposal to try to do things that would put people back on payrolls.

The quickest way to restore confidence is to put people back to work so they are earning a salary, have a job, and can provide for their families. And in the context of creating legislation that would put people back to work, building roads and bridges and building water projects and repairing schools and so on, the question is, we should spend American taxpayer money on U.S.-made products in order to make these repairs and build these projects. It's just common sense.

The Washington Post story had a number of things attached to it that were not accurate. I want to talk about it for a moment. This provision in the Senate bill says that public works projects that are funded by this stimulus bill should use American steel, iron, and manufactured goods. That is not radical. We ought not be embarrassed to suggest that we try to use, where we can, products that are built in this country so that we put people back to work on the manufacturing floors and the plant floors building these products. That is the purpose of this legislation.

The Washington Post suggests that the proposal has few exceptions. That is not true. The proposal has a broad public interest exemption, one that allows the administration to waive the “Buy America” program if it deems it to be in the public interest to waive it. There are exceptions where the products are not available. There are exceptions where using domestic material would increase the cost of the project by over 25 percent. There are plenty of exemptions and exceptions here—public interest, 25 percent, not available. But in circumstances where a domestic product is available, where it is available at a price that is within the bounds of reason, and where we want to try to find a way to acquire products that are made in this country in order to put people back to work, that is a perfectly reasonable and important thing to do.

The Washington Post also suggested and had other people suggest as well that asking that we would purchase iron and steel and manufactured products in this stimulus bill made in America would somehow violate our trade agreements. That is simply untrue again. The Federal grant programs that are in this stimulus bill to the States for infrastructure investments, construction, repair and so on are not covered by our international trade agreements. So it is not true that what we are doing here would somehow violate trade agreements.

I had a reporter say to me: Some economists have said this harkens back to 1920s protectionism. I said: Give me a break. I am so tired of that nonsense. It cannot possibly be a sober economist. This country has a $700 billion a year trade deficit. We buy $2 billion more each day than we sell to foreign countries. We consume 3 percent more than we produce. We have a giant trade deficit. How could anyone in their right mind suggest this country is protectionist? It is absurd. How can anybody decide that when we put together a stimulus package to try to put people back to work, that we ought not buy things, to the extent we can, that are manufactured and produced in this country? It makes no sense to me.

The Washington Post also indicated that the foreign Governments could retaliate if we did this. Again, we have a $700 billion trade deficit, so it's hard to see how our trade imbalance could be less favorable.

But at any rate, let me say that Mr. Sarkozy in France said last month, with respect to their stimulus package, they want to make sure they are purchasing things that are made in France. It is a perfectly logical thing.

No, this is not creating a trade war. This is an emergency situation in which each of our countries is trying to put people back to work. That is a perfectly logical thing to do.

The Washington Post story also pointed out that the previous stimulus package, of which a fair amount was provided in tax cuts, went to stimulate manufacturing in China. A fair amount of it went to Wal-Mart. Eighty percent of the products in the Wal-Mart store shelves are made in China. So we are not going to stimulate economic jobs by purchasing Chinese goods. I am not suggesting somebody ought to stop their car at the moment and not walk into Wal-Mart. That is not my point at all. My point is, if we want to put people back on payrolls to try to put this country back on track and give people some confidence at a time when 20,000 people are losing their jobs every single day, the way to do that, with the hundreds of billions of dollars that are in this bill, is to say, at least try to buy things that are made in America. That is not unfair. It is not selfish. It is the right thing to do.

It is only in areas of the rarified air of our Nation's capital and some other areas where we have ground our heads to such a point that we don't understand what is logical. I understand it is a global economy. I fully understand that. There are circumstances where you perhaps cannot buy a product that is made here because there aren't any made here. There are circumstances where the domestic product's price is truly exorbitant. We don't want to do that. I understand all of that. All of that is provided for in this Buy American provision. Yet you see folks out in the hallways here having an apoplectic seizure over what some economist is saying about something that is so fundamentally sound in terms of what we ought to be doing to try to strengthen the economy of this country, to reach out to American citizens and say: We understand a job is important for you. We understand you have lost your job. We understand it wasn't your fault, and we will see if we can help you get a job back on the plant floor, back on the factory floor someplace, producing products made in this country. It is a fair thing to do and a critically important thing to do, if the result of this stimulus program is going to do as advertised, and that is put Americans back to work.

We have been through a long and tortured trail in recent months trying to determine what has happened and what needs to happen to try to fix what is wrong. What unites all of us is, none of us has been here before. We have never seen the convergence of the collapse of our financial system, the largest names in American finance sitting there with toxic assets in their financial bellies trying to figure out how they overcome the dreadful mistakes of the last 10 years with asset bubbles and a carnival of greed. At the same time that we see this collapse at the top of the financial system, we read about the subprime loan scandal and the nearly unbelievable circumstances of bad business that created it.

In addition to that, we read about companies that have taken massive quantities of money from the American taxpayers in the form of TARP funds, in the form of the Federal Reserve Board. By the way, it is about $7.5 trillion that has now been committed in the name of the American taxpayer in ways that I don't think is written in the Constitution. But we have watched all this happen and we still see what is going on on Wall Street. We hear about airplanes on order. We hear about bonuses. We have watched that for the last 10 years and wondered, how on Earth can this kind of house of cards continue to exist? The answer is, it couldn't and it doesn't, except there is a lot for this Congress to do with respect to oversight, investigation, and to require accountability.

One piece of business, an attempt to try to deal with the wreckage of this economy from this past decade of excess, one piece of business is to try to see if we can stimulate the economy to put people back to work. It is interesting how at the top everybody is interested in bringing a pillow and some aspirin to say: Are you comfortable? Can we help you? That is what happens if you are a big bank. But how about at the bottom, the people who lost their job and their house. Anybody around to say: We want to help you?

In a stimulus program, if we put together construction projects, projects to create an asset for this country's future, and if we say: We would like you to see if you can buy the products with which you will produce those assets here in America so we can put people back on the payroll and get them working once again, that is not radical; that is the right thing to do. If there is a big, old dust storm and a whole lot of angst about asking people if they can buy in this country during this stimulus, that is too bad. That is exactly what we should do.

It is my intent, with respect to this legislation—I believe the intent of many others—that we continue to keep this provision in the stimulus bill as it moves through the Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendments be temporarily laid aside so that the Senator from New Mexico, Mr. BINGAMAN, can call up an amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 63

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I call up amendment No. 63.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BINGAMAN] proposes an amendment Numbered 63.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To clarify that new paperwork and enrollment barriers are not created in the Express Lane Enrollment option and that income may be determined by Express Lane agencies based on State income tax records or returns)

On page 99, beginning on line 8 strike "through" and all that follows through "application," on line 10, and insert "in writing, by telephone, orally, through electronic signature, or through any other means specified by the Secretary and".

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I send a modification of the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be so modified.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

On page 99, beginning on line 9 after "mation" insert "in writing, by telephone, orally, through electronic signature, or through any other means specified by the Secretary or by".

On page 108, between lines 3 and 4, insert the following:

"(H) STATE OPTION TO RELY ON STATE INCOME TAX DATA OR RETURN.—At the option of the State, a finding from an Express Lane agency may include gross income or adjusted gross income shown by State income tax records or returns."

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I wish to briefly describe the import of this amendment, as modified.

Express Lane enrollment seeks to address the problem that up to 6 million children in this country are eligible but are not enrolled in either Medicaid or CHIP and that the vast majority of these children are enrolled in other Federal programs at the same time.

Eligibility for other Federal programs—here I am speaking about food stamps or the National School Lunch Program or the WIC Program—enrollment in those programs is at lower levels of income eligibility than Medicaid and CHIP, so those children identified by those other Federal programs as low income are virtually, by definition, eligible for Medicaid or for CHIP.

I have worked with Senator BAUCUS and my colleagues in the Finance Committee to write a provision in the bill which will provide a State option to utilize Express Lane eligibility to enroll children into the CHIP program.

This amendment provides a very simple technical clarification that parents may consent to their children's enrollment in CHIP or Medicaid through various means established by the Secretary, including orally, through electronic signatures, and otherwise. Without this clarification, a child could be determined eligible through Express Lane, but a parent might have to go to a State Medicaid agency to sign a form instead of providing an electronic signature or authorizing coverage over the phone. This is the exact kind of needless bureaucratic hurdle Express Lane is intended to prevent.

So I urge my colleagues to support this amendment, as modified.

Mr. President, I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 85

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I wish to address two pending amendments.

The first one I will address is the DeMint amendment which provides for a deduction for health care costs for certain children.

Essentially, the DeMint amendment allows for a deduction for health care costs of children who are not in a Federal program, either Medicaid or the Children's Health Insurance Program, up to $1,500. That is up to the average federally funded program, which I understand is up to $1,500.

On the face of it, that might sound like something people might want to do, to give an extra tax deduction for children's health care expenses. The trouble is, we are here today trying to make sure that the Children's Health Insurance Program works and works better. A lot of effort has gone into this legislation, and there have been a lot of amendments from various Senators trying to improve on the bill.

First, this is not a tax bill. The Tax Code does allow employees who receive health care benefits from their employer to not count that as taxable income. That is true. It is a big provision in the Tax Code today. I think it amounts to roughly $250 billion, $260 billion a year. The employer is able to take the deduction of employer health care expenses, whatever the expenses might be, and there is no limit today in current law. All health care that is provided by the employer is not taxable income to the employee. In fact, when we deal with health care reform, we will have to look at that. We do not want to move away from employer-provided coverage. That is something the American public is used to. They understand it. Companies are used to it. They understand it.

Some have suggested abolishing that tax and basically saying individuals have to find their own insurance, irrespective of employment. I do not think that is a good idea, and I think that is the judgment of the Congress.

Senator DEMINT wishes to add a tax provision basically providing the children who are not covered by either the Children's Health Insurance Program or Medicaid, as I understand the amendment, with a deduction for health care expenses up to $1,500 every year. I do not think this is the time and place to be coming up with single rifleshots, arbitrary tax amendments on a nontax bill. These provisions have to be considered together. These tax provisions have to be considered together, certainly in the context of health care reform. We take up various ways to give incentives to people to get health insurance, especially in the private market, in the individual market right now because right now it is very difficult for some people in the individual market to get health insurance. We will probably provide health credits to assist people in the private market.

We also could look to the employer exclusion and see if that can be modified. All this should be addressed in the context of comprehensive health care reform. We need comprehensive health care reform in this country. We already know how much we pay for health care in this country. We pay twice as much per capita than the next expensive country. We have 46 million Americans not covered by health insurance. It is an abomination. We are the only industrialized country in the world that does not provide a mechanism to provide health insurance for its people. That makes no sense. The United States is slipping, frankly, in a lot of areas. Look at our financial banking system. It is crumbling. In Davos, Switzerland, we have been roundly criticized as a country for letting this happen to us. Of course, the credit markets seized up. It is very complex. The fact is, it has happened and we Americans have let it happen.

We also have to reform our health care system and reform it in a way so Americans can get health care more easily than they can now, make sure they are all covered, improve the costs, and improve our delivery system. Our delivery system is in the dark ages. We in America compensate doctors and hospitals on the basis of volume, not on the basis of quality.

Many of us have ideas. We have to put all this together into comprehensive health reform. I wrote a white paper months ago. I don't mean to pat myself on the back, but most people feel that is the best beginning to get comprehensive health care reform. Others have a lot of ideas to add to it, subtract from it. But it is probably a pretty good foundation of where we have to reform our health care system. That is where we should take up provisions such as the DeMint amendment. That is where we should decide whether it makes sense to change the Tax Code to get better health care, outside of the children's health care program.

This is not an amendment addressed to the Children's Health Insurance Program. This is an amendment that has to do generally with children, irrespective of income of families. This amendment has nothing to do with income of families. It says basically if you are not covered, you get a $1,500 contribution. I guess in some sense the proponents of the amendment could argue this is for upper income people, for moderate income people, for families whose children are not enrolled in the Children's Health Insurance Program. That may be. But that issue must be addressed in the context of comprehensive health care reform. That is the best place. I do not think it makes sense to adopt this kind of amendment. Then somebody else will have an amendment for a tax break here, a tax break there, and who knows what. This should be taken up in comprehensive health care reform or a comprehensive tax bill.

We are going to take up tax legislation later this year. There will be lots of opportunities to address health care in our Tax Code. But this is not the time and place. I urge Senators to resist the siren's song, resist temptation because this is not the road we should go down, not at this time. There is a time and place for everything. There is a time and place for health care tax amendments. This is not the time and place.

Frankly, I think the more we as a Congress are strategic, we plan a little more, we don't just react to the idea of the instant but think things through a little bit more, we will be a lot better off and we will be serving our people better than we are at this moment.

I strongly urge Members to resist this amendment so we can get on to health care reform and tax reform at a later date. I urge Senators not to vote for the DeMint amendment because it, frankly, does not belong on this bill.

On another matter, I wish to speak to the Coburn amendment No. 86. Essentially, this amendment would get rid of the Children's Health Insurance Program, abolish it. That is right, abolish it. This is the same program that had such strong support in America. Republicans have supported it and Democrats have supported it over the decade. It currently serves almost 7 million people, and with the legislation before us, we will boost that to 10 million people. The same CHIP program, the underlying bill, as I said, 10 million people, it works. It worked for 12 years. It is effective. People like it. Why? Because it works. It is a shared partnership between Uncle Sam and the States. It makes no sense to throw this away because it has worked so well.

To be fair, the Senator from Oklahoma wants to not only abolish the program but replace it with a private system. As I understand it—I don't want to put words in his mouth—a private account system. It sounds a lot like Social Security privatization, which is roundly criticized. It is a good thing we didn't adopt that with the shape the stock market is in. People putting savings in a private Social Security account would find they would have lost a lot.

In the meantime, Social Security is strong, it is there, the benefits are there. It is kind of like a defined benefit plan, a defined contribution plan. Seniors can count on it. Social Security is there. It is financed by the payroll tax. The trust fund is in very good shape. The Social Security trust fund is not in jeopardy for, gosh, 30 years from now essentially. Seniors know that Social Security is there.

In the same vein, families, working poor families, families who do not have the same income as others, should rest assure the Children's Health Insurance Program is there. They need that constancy, that predictability. Therefore, I urge Senators not to support the Coburn amendment which essentially abolishes the CHIP program and replaces it with a private system which is precarious at best, certainly given these times.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, first, this does not get rid of the system, and it certainly does not privatize it. What it does is it guarantees every child in this country, all 31 million—which is something this bill does not do—all 31 million who don't have an insurance policy today will be insured with a plan equal to what we have for our children.

What it doesn't get rid of is access. They only have access to 40 percent of the physicians now. It gives them access to 100 percent of all the physicians. We are defending a system that, first, is only going to enroll 4 million new kids, is still going to leave 5 million not covered and 2 million of the 4 million they enroll are from those who already have private insurance, and we are going to say we will stick with a system to take care of the ones we have now and we are not going to give real access, and with the not real access comes no choice of a physician because we limited the number of physicians who can participate because of the economics of it.

I will tell you what it does get rid of. It gets rid of $70 billion of taxpayers' money that we are not going to use to cover every one of these kids. Based on the 2005 numbers, we can buy a premium health insurance policy for all 31 million kids—the 8.9 million who do not have any coverage now and the 22 million who are covered in either SCHIP or Medicaid today. We save all the administrative expense. We autoenroll them so we don't have to worry about picking up only 4 million with an additional $70 billion in taxes.

To say this is privatization is a total mischaracterization of it. What it does is it guarantees that all children will not have a Medicaid stamp or SCHIP stamp on their forehead that says: Yes, we are giving you coverage but you can't see all the physicians, you can't get referrals to the best because you have a government-run program.

Not only do we increase access and quality, we save tremendous amounts of money, and it will still be a government-run program because it will be administered by the Secretary in a way that guarantees these kids are autoenrolled. They will have premium health insurance coverage and we still save money, even after that. We are spending $2,160 per kid now based on 2005 numbers, and we will cover every one of these kids and not spend more money than that.

To characterize this as getting rid of coverage is wrong. What it does is greatly create and increase access for children in this country to have the same access that our children have. It saves money and markedly improves quality for those children. Every American child ought to have access, and what we do is take the money we are spending now and spend it more wisely, and create a system where they all have coverage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, in closing today—and I know we have a few votes, but we are about done—I wish to talk about bipartisanship. I believe I have a history of getting bipartisan compromises done. Over the last several years, I have worked to deliver important bipartisan legislation on taxes, trade, and health care. We work together, we make commitments, and we sometimes have to say no to Members of our own party who would put their specific interests ahead of bipartisanship. It is tough at times, but when we work together to produce legislation, we are better off for doing so.

Lately, I have seen a disturbing change in the way bipartisanship appears to be working around the Senate. Last year, on Medicare, we were working together for months—I am talking about for months—on a bipartisan bill to extend a lot of things in Medicare. It was jointly drafted. There were many provisions in the bill I strongly supported. But when we came to an impasse on some of the tough political issues, the majority solved the tough issues the way they wanted them and moved forward. That is not the way I think bipartisanship should work.

Then we have this bill before us today. It is largely the work of Senators BAUCUS, HATCH, ROCKEFELLER, and myself. It should be a bipartisan piece of legislation, but it is not. In this case, the majority decided to make some very political changes in the bill and presented it to us as a “take it or leave it” proposition. Today, I choose to leave it.

Some Senators have tried to argue that this bill is 90 percent the bill we voted in 2007. I wonder that those Senators don’t realize how insulting it is to me to hear that. It is an open admission that the majority unilaterally changed 10 percent of the bill and has presented it to me as a take it or leave it; it can still be bipartisan, CHUCK GRASSLEY, if you will just do what we tell you to do.

The stimulus bill coming next week is no better. We were presented with a bill and asked if we wanted to sign on to it and call it bipartisan. That approach shouldn’t come as a surprise to anybody or much of a surprise at all. As the Speaker said: We won the election, we write the bills. I must admit I appreciate why House Republicans decided yesterday they would not sign off on Speaker PELOSI’s version of bipartisanship.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 94, 95, AND 96

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I have a series of amendments in the nature of technical corrections that I have worked out with the ranking Republican Member, so Senator GRASSLEY and I send these to the desk. I understand they have been cleared all the way around. So I send this package of amendments to the desk, and I ask unanimous consent that they be considered en bloc; that the amendments be agreed to and that the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Hearing no objection, it is so ordered. The amendments were agreed to, as follows:

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 85

Mr. DEMINT. Mr. President, I would like to make a few comments about my amendment, No. 85. Senator BAUCUS commented about it after I brought it up. There are a few matters I would like to clear up.

The Senator mentioned this is not a tax bill, his children's health bill. Yet it is a tax bill. There is a large tax increase on cigarettes to pay for this bill, so it is very much dealing with taxes.

He also said this is not the place to deal with families with children who have insurance through their employers or may be paying for their own insurance. This is a time to deal with Americans with children who cannot pay for health care. The underlying bill itself increases the criteria all the way up to twice the poverty level or more. It is dealing with many families with substantial incomes. It is giving benefits to some families who are not paying for their own insurance at the expense of those who are struggling to pay for their own health insurance.

My amendment is very appropriate to the underlying bill. It is about children's health care, and it is about being fair to American citizens. The bill we are considering today gives generous benefits to children who are not citizens of the United States. They are here and my amendment does not change those benefits. But we should be fair and give equal benefits to American families, workers, taxpayers, who are paying for their own insurance.

My colleague, Senator BAUCUS, mentioned many of these families are getting insurance through their employers. But just about all of them, if not all of them, have to pay a part of that expense themselves, which is very difficult. They cannot deduct that money.

We need to make sure this bill is fair. My amendment makes the bill fair to every family with children. It gives them an above-the-line deduction for up to $1,500 of their expenses, and that is up to the amount we give to noncitizens in this children's health bill.

This is fair to Americans, and it is time we start being fair to Americans. We cannot take money continuously from the middle class to do our good deeds all over the country and then leave middle-class Americans empty-handed. If they are going to work and struggle to pay for their own health insurance, the very least we can do is not tax the money they spend to pay for their own health care. Why do we penalize people who are trying to live themselves without government money? Most Americans are doing everything they can to get by without government support. Let's stop penalizing them. Let's stop asking them to pay for all of our good deeds and good intentions.

This is a simple amendment that gives a deduction for people who are paying for their own health insurance, a deduction that is equal to what we are giving to noncitizens in this underlying bill.

Again, I encourage my colleagues to think twice, think about Americans, our own middle-class workers. Give them a fair shot. Vote for this amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

AMENDMENT NO. 86

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will be 4 minutes of debate equally divided prior to a vote in relation to amendment No. 86 offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, this amendment really is the amendment that is going to take care of our children. It is going to take the Medicaid stamp and SCHIP stamp off their foreheads. It is going to create access to the finest doctors, not just 40 percent of the doctors as we see in Medicaid and SCHIP. It is going to give the same care to all the children—those at the 300 percent poverty level and under—that we give to our own kids. It does all that not spending the $70 billion in increased taxes that is in this bill and auto-enrolling children so that we don't just pick up 4 million kids, we pick up all 8.9 million kids who are not insured.

To my colleagues who sponsored the Wyden bill, the Healthy Americans bill, that is exactly what is in that bill, except we are going to do it for children without increasing costs but increasing the quality, increasing the care, and increasing the outcomes. We are going to truly make children on the same level we are in terms of their access. They are going to get to choose their doctor rather than have their doctor chosen for them. They are going to get a referral to the best rather than to one who will just take them. They are going to get the same thing we get, and they deserve it, and we are not going to spend a penny more than we are spending today.

We don't do away with SCHIP, we don't privatize SCHIP; what we do is say we really care about kids and we are going to give them the same thing we have. At the same time, we are going to save the American taxpayers $70 billion.

I yield my time.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this amendment phases out the Children's Health Insurance Program as we know it. It strikes the underlying bill and phases out the Children's Health Insurance Program over the next 2 years and replaces it with a competitive bidding procedure, somewhat similar to Medicare Part D, where private plans that want to cover kids will submit bids, submit their plans to Uncle Sam for approval. So essentially it totally eliminates the Children's Health Insurance Program over a 2-year period and replaces it with a competitive-bidding process not too dissimilar from Medicare Part D where private plans offer health insurance to participants. I think it is much too much of a radical departure, and I urge its defeat.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a second.

AMENDMENT NO. 50

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I say to my good friend from Oklahoma, we are prepared to accept the next Coburn amendment. I wonder if the Senator is prepared to yield back the balance of his time so we can accept it. He does. That is great.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 50.

The amendment (No. 50) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 49

Mr. BAUCUS. We are on the next amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is 2 minutes equally divided on the next amendment.

Mr. COBURN. Will the Chair state what the amendment is?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Amendment No. 49.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, what this amendment does is it says you have 14 percent improper payment rate in SCHIP, we have 10.6 percent improper payment in Medicaid. The average improper payment rate across the rest of the Federal Government on every agency—this amendment says that before New York can go to 400 percent, they have to bring their improper payment rates in line with the rest of the Federal Government. The improper payment rate in New York—New York alone—accounts for 50 percent of the fraud in Medicaid. Fifty percent of that is in New York State alone.

So what this amendment would do is it would delay the improper payment reporting requirements and limit earmark program expansion until the Medicaid and SCHIP improper payment rates match the Federal average of improper payment rates. It is meant to help us get back on track. We just started getting improper payment rates on Medicaid, and they are out of control. We should not be delaying the onset of that, and we should put teeth into it so that where it is bad, we don't expand it and make it worse.

With that, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, this is yet another way to throw kids out of or off the Children's Health Insurance Program. It is a cap. It is a cap, the effect of which is to deny children coverage. It is similar to several other amendments brought up in the past, where there is sometimes a dollar cap, sometimes a percentage cap, and there are various other ways. This is another one of those caps, and I think it is not right to take kids off the Children's Health Insurance Program rolls. So I urge its defeat.

Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I think we could voice vote this.

Mr. COBURN. I agree. I withdraw my request.

AMENDMENT NO. 63

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I think the next amendment is the Bingaman amendment No. 63.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, there are about 6 million children in the country who are eligible for Medicaid or CHIP who are not enrolled. In many of these cases, these are children who are also eligible for and enrolled in other Federal programs that have similar or even more severe requirements for eligibility. To fix this problem, we put a provision in the bill—Senator BAUCUS and those in the Finance Committee—included a provision for so-called express lane eligibility as a way to sign up children for the CHIP program.

My amendment simply clarifies that the consent of the parent—not the determination of eligibility but the consent of the parent—for the enrollment of the child in the CHIP program or Medicaid can be accomplished through something other than a formal signed document at the Medicaid office. We give the Secretary the discretion to set that up. We believe this is a great change and will help us to register the children who ought to be registered for the CHIP program.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, this is where you get the wool pulled over your eyes. Here we are, in the last moments of a very partisan debate, and we have one last vote to abandon further compromises we made in 2007. This one weakens fraud protection.

In that bill 2 years ago, we reached a carefully crafted compromise, balancing access and program integrity. With this amendment, the majority backs away from that compromise further. In 2007, we agreed that an express lane application would require a signature from the applicant acknowledging they were applying for Medicaid or SCHIP. This change eliminates the signature requirement.

It is not technical, it is substantive, and it is going to lead to fraud. We should vote this down because we don't want to promote fraud.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 63, as modified.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Texas is recognized for 1 minute.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I call up amendment 93 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The Senator from Texas [Mrs. HUTCHISON] proposes an amendment numbered 93.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

“(e) AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNTS ALLOTTED.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraphs (2) and (3), amounts allotted to a State pursuant to this section—

“(A) for each of fiscal years 1998 through 2008, shall remain available for expenditure by the State through the end of the second succeeding fiscal year; and

“(B) for fiscal year 2009 and each fiscal year thereafter, shall remain available for expenditure by the State through the end of the succeeding fiscal year.

“(2) SPECIAL RULE EXTENDING AVAILABILITY FOR OUTREACH AND ENROLLMENT FOR CERTAIN STATES.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—In the case of a State described in subparagraph (B), any amounts allotted or redistributed to the State pursuant to this subsection for a fiscal year that are not expended by the State by March 31, 2009, (including any amounts available to the State for the first 2 quarters of fiscal year 2009 from the fiscal year 2009 allotment for the State or from amounts redistributed to the State under subsection (k) or allotted to the State under subsection (l) for such quarters), shall remain available for expenditure by the State through the end of fiscal year 2012, without regard to the limitation on expenditures under section 2105(c)(2)(A).

“(B) STATE DESCRIBED.—A State is described in this subparagraph if the State is 1 of the 5 States with the highest percentage of children with no health insurance coverage (as determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent data available as of the date of enactment of the Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2009).

“(3) AVAILABILITY OF AMOUNTS REDISTRIBUTED.—Amounts redistributed to a State under subsection (f) shall be available for expenditure by the State through the end of the fiscal year in which they are redistributed.”.

“(5) AUTHORITY TO MODIFY REQUIRED NUMBER OF ENROLLMENT AND RETENTION PROVISIONS.—Upon the request of a State in which the percentage of children with no health insurance coverage is above the national average (as determined by the Secretary on the basis of the most recent data available as of the date of enactment of the Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2009), the Secretary may reduce the number of enrollment and retention provisions that the State must satisfy in order to meet the conditions of paragraph (4) for a fiscal year, but not below 2.”.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I yield for 30 seconds to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, can I ask the Senate be in order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Florida is recognized for 30 seconds.

Mr. MARTINEZ. Mr. President, the amendment of the Senator from Texas allows the States with the highest percentage of uninsured children to be given priority for outreach and enrollment. Most importantly, it contains language that ensures the five States with the highest number of uninsured kids be given sufficient time to spend their current SCHIP allocations and will be given the flexibility for using these funds for outreach and enrollment.

I yield to the Senator from Texas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, the CBO scores this as an actual savings. There will be no additional cost to the program and it has no impact over any other State's funding.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, we are prepared to vote in favor of the amendment.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The amendment (No. 93) was rejected. Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, this will be the last vote today. We are going to have the Holder debate Monday from 3:15 to 6:15. We will have the vote at 6:15. Monday at about 2 o'clock, we are going to lay down the economic recovery package. That is the stimulus. That will be the Appropriations and Finance pieces. After the Holder vote, we encourage Members to speak about the economic recovery package.

Tuesday, we are going to have a full day of amendments and I hope a number of votes.

On Wednesday, we have a long-standing retreat that the Democrats are going to have a short distance from here off campus. We are going to be in session, come in at 10:30. We solicit the Republicans, while we are in that retreat, to offer amendments. We would hope we would be back by 4:30 and could start voting on some amendments that were offered that day.

Next week will be a long, hard slog. It is up to us how long this takes. We hope we can work things out. I have had a number of conversations with the Republican leader on a way to expedite what we do. We want to make sure everyone has the opportunity to do what they think is appropriate on this bill.

We are going to have some late nights next week. We will do everything we can not to have to work next weekend, but I think that is stretching things. But we will certainly try.

We have had no morning business all week, so, Senators, speak your hearts out tomorrow.

Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, my understanding is that section 214 of H.R. 2 applies to pregnant women and children who are citizens of the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, or the Federated States of Micronesia, and who are lawfully residing in the United States under the terms of the Compacts of Free Association between the United States and each of these three Pacific island nations.

Mr. INOUE. I agree with my colleague from Hawaii. Section 214 applies to pregnant women and children who are nonimmigrants lawfully residing in the United States under the terms of the Compacts of Free Association.

Mr. AKAKA. Does the chairman agree with our interpretation?

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I agree with the interpretations of the Senators from Hawaii regarding section 214.

Mr. AKAKA. I thank the Senator very much for that clarification.

Mr. President, I support the Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2009. This legislation increases access to health care for an estimated 4.1 million children who are currently uninsured. The legislation also includes $100 million in new grant opportunities to fund outreach and enrollment efforts to increase the participation of children in Medicaid and the Children's Health Insurance Program. By increasing access to health insurance, more children will be able to learn, be active, and grow into healthy adults.

Mr. President, the legislation will also provide much needed assistance to Hawaii hospitals that care for Medicaid beneficiaries and the uninsured. Hawaii hospitals continue to struggle to meet the increasing demands placed on them by a growing number of uninsured patients and rising costs.

The legislation extends Medicaid disproportionate share Hospital, DSH, allotments for Hawaii until December 31, 2011. This additional extension authorizes the submission by the State of Hawaii of a State plan amendment covering a DSH payment methodology to hospitals that is consistent with the requirements of existing law relating to DSH payments. The purpose of providing a DSH allotment for Hawaii is to provide additional funding to the State of Hawaii to permit a greater contribution toward the uncompensated costs of hospitals that are providing indigent care. It is not meant to alter existing arrangements between the State of Hawaii and the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, CMS, or to reduce in any way the level of Federal funding for Hawaii's QUEST program. The extension included in this act provides an additional $7.5 million for fiscal year 2010, $10 million for fiscal year 2011, and $2.5 million for the first quarter of fiscal year 2012. These additional DSH resources are intended to strengthen the ability of hospitals to meet the increasing health care needs of our communities.

I look forward to the swift enactment of this legislation so that children have increased access to health care and so that our hospitals in Hawaii are better able to care for the uninsured and Medicaid beneficiaries.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I seek recognition to voice my support for the Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act. In voicing my support, I must note that the bipartisan support that accompanied the drafting of this bill's predecessor in the 110th Congress was absent in this bill's introduction in the 111th Congress. The legislation was revised without working across the aisle, which has resulted in a bill that is not as widely supported as its predecessor. Children's health is the wrong issue on which to push partisan politics.

When we last debated the Children's Health Insurance Program in the 110th Congress, I was proud to lend my support to what I believe was a good, bipartisan bill. I voted in favor of the legislation twice, on August 2, 2007 and again on September 25, 2007. I was very disappointed in President Bush's veto of the legislation resulting in the delay of critical access to health care for millions of children.

This important legislation will revise and expand the State Children's Health Insurance Program, SCHIP, enabling it to provide access to medical coverage to an additional 5.5 million children whose parents earn too much to qualify for Medicaid, but not enough to afford private health insurance. Nationwide, 7 million children are currently enrolled in SCHIP, including 183,981 in Pennsylvania.

The reauthorized bill will provide an estimated 4.1 million children with access to health care coverage. To achieve that increase, the bill extends coverage to children in families with an annual income at or below 300 percent of the poverty level, or $66,150 for a family of four. The triple-the-poverty-level rate would bring the Nation in line with Pennsylvania's current plan.

It is imperative that we take steps to ensure health care coverage for our most important resource, our children. In a January 12, 2009, column in The Washington Post, E.J. Dionne wrote, "[S]tates have enacted budget cuts that will leave some 275,000 people without health coverage . . . By the end of this year, if further proposed [State budget] cuts go through, the number losing health coverage nationwide could rise to more than 1 million, almost half of them children." Congress can, and should, act to make sure children's health care does not suffer as a result of the economic downturn.

Throughout my time in the Senate, I have consistently supported providing quality health care to children, including prenatal care. To improve pregnancy outcomes for women at risk of delivering babies of low birth weight and reduce infant mortality and the incidence of low-birth-weight births, I initiated action that led to the creation of the Healthy Start program in 1991. Working with the first Bush administration and Senator HARKIN, as chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee, we allocated $25 million in 1991 for the development of 15 demonstration projects. For fiscal year 2008, we secured $99.7 million for 96 projects in this vital program. Health care initiatives like the Healthy Start program and the Children's Health Insurance Program are key to improving the health and well-being of children in this country.

The health care work of the 111th Congress will not be complete with just the reauthorization of the State Children's Health Insurance Program. This legislation will address the needs of some of the most vulnerable children, but Congress must act in a bipartisan fashion to address health reform so that all of America's 47 million uninsured have access to adequate health care.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I strongly support the Children's Health Insurance Program and its reauthorization, and I am disappointed that the Senate did not approve the Kids First Act that was offered as an amendment. This legislation would have provided funding to cover low-income children whose families are otherwise unable to afford coverage. Instead of providing health coverage for American children, the Senate decided to consider a bill that will expand government programs, increase the burden on taxpayers, and shift the focus from the primary reason for the creation of the SCHIP, which is the coverage of low-income children. Before the Senate considers expanding SCHIP, we should ensure that all children under 200 percent of the Federal poverty level are covered. Under the current program, the State of Mississippi is unable to cover all children under the current limit of 200 percent of poverty, $44,000 per year. The Senate is now considering legislation that will take tax money paid by Mississippians out of the State and allow other States to cover children in families making up to $88,000 a year. The expansion of benefits to legal immigrant children is also a point of serious concern. Under current law, legal immigrants sign a statement that they will not use Federal assistance programs such as Medicaid and SCHIP for 5 years. This legislation would waive that 5-year waiting period, thus further expanding this program to noncitizens, while American children remain without health coverage. I cannot support any legislation that disadvantages the children of Mississippi even more. I hope this legislation will be changed in the amendment process to reflect the original intent of the legislation and ensure that low-in-

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, Americans are fortunate to have access to some of the best medical facilities and services in the world. Yet, shamefully, 2007 U.S. Census data demonstrated that there are 45.7 million uninsured people in our country, of which, 8.7 million are children, who do not have the access they need to these services. Unfortunately, these numbers will likely increase as the Nation continues to lose more jobs and the ranks of the unemployed continue to rise.

How to provide everyone in America access to affordable, quality health care is the subject of extensive debate. Over the years, though, we have made some progress in making sure that the most vulnerable members of our communities—including children—can receive basic medical services.

The State Children's Health Insurance Program was created in the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 in recognition of the need to provide medical services for children from middle-income to lower income families and has been widely hailed as a successful program. In the past 12 years, we have seen that CHIP coverage leads to better access to preventative and primary care services, better quality of care, better health outcome and improved performance in school. CHIP currently provides health care benefits to more than 7.4 million children, of which more than 90 percent are from families with incomes below $35,000 a year for a family of three, or 200 percent below the Federal poverty level.

Michigan's CHIP program, called MICHild, has had impressive results: Michigan currently has the second lowest rate of uninsured children in the Nation, trailing only Massachusetts, which provides universal health care coverage.

While CHIP has been a successful program nationwide, many children who qualify for the program are unable to receive insurance because of inadequate funding. In Michigan, approximately 50,000 children are covered under CHIP every month, but there are still 158,000 uninsured children in my home State, and more than 8 million uninsured children nationwide.

To help address this problem, I am pleased that the Senate is taking up a bipartisan bill—the Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization Act of 2009—that would increase funding for the program by approximately $32.8 billion over 4½ years. This bill will allow more than 4 million additional children to enroll beyond the 7.4 million children already in CHIP. For Michigan, this means that more than an estimated 80,000 more Michigan children would have access to much needed health insurance.

A hardworking mother from Royal Oak, Michigan, wrote: "As a single working mother, I could not afford the family insurance that my employer offered, and definitely could not afford private [insurance]. Without this insurance I do not know what I would have done. [CHIP] offered us options, doctors instead of emergency rooms, less time missed at work and school."

We have a moral obligation to provide Americans access to affordable and high quality health care. No person, young or old, should be denied access to adequate health care, and the expanded and improved Children's Health Insurance Program is an important step toward achieving that goal.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I wish to express my strong support for the reauthorization of the Children's Health Insurance Program. At a time when our country is moving in a new direction, it is fitting that we are considering this important measure among the first bills considered this Congress. I believe the extension of CHIP will stand out as one of the great accomplishments of this body. By passing this legislation, we would state clearly that the health of children in this country is an issue too important to be dealt with as business as usual.

Last time the Senate considered an expansion of CHIP, the measure passed with bipartisan support and represented what can happen when members from both sides of the aisle come together to form a consensus. Unfortunately, providing health coverage for millions of kids was not a priority of our former President and he vetoed the measure. By standing in the way of this legislation, nearly 4 million children have had to wait to receive critical health coverage. With families struggling more than ever to make ends meet, passing this legislation is essential to protecting our Nation's children.

This legislation is a matter of priorities, and I see no more important issue than caring for our kids. Regrettably, there are some who remain opposed to this legislation. I have heard some argue that this bill should be opposed because it raises taxes. Anyone who opposes the bill on these grounds is choosing big tobacco over children's health.

Others have argued against including a provision that allows States to waive the 5-year waiting period for legal immigrant children. These children, who are lawful immigrants and who will eventually be U.S. citizens, already have the ability to receive CHIP services. Requiring kids to wait 5 years for health care is unconscionable and could create life-long consequences for children. I have heard some claim that allowing legal immigrant children to receive public health care services would violate the conditions on which they entered the United States. This argument is contrary to the position taken by the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services, which does not believe an immigrant's use of health care services such as Medicaid and SCHIP constitutes a violation of these conditions. An immigrant can only become a public charge if they receive direct cash benefits, such as welfare, for their income. Health benefits are expressly removed from this category. During hard economic times, we should give states the ability to remove the restrictive barriers for legal immigrant children and allow them to receive critical health care services. Investing in early health care for all children is sound policy.

I support this bill because I believe it is a travesty that in the richest, most powerful, country in the world, there are more than 47 million people without health insurance. That is an absolutely shocking number. It represents roughly one in six people who are going without regular trips to the doctor, forgoing needed medications and are forced to use the emergency room for care because they have no where else to turn. These are our friends, our neighbors, and millions of our children.

The legislation before us will extend and renew health care coverage for over 10 million children. After years of increases to the number of uninsured in this country, this is a solid step in the right direction. Our recent economic crisis has left more Americans jobless and without health coverage for themselves and their family members. No one is arguing that this bill is the solution to our health care crisis, but this bill represents significant progress. It covers 4 million more kids and represents the first important step to begin reforming our health care system.

In my home State of Vermont, we have been a national leader on children's health care. Even before the creation of CHIP, we knew that this was the right thing to do. Because of our early action, Vermont has one of the lowest rates for uninsured kids in the country. This bill will get us even closer to the goal of covering the thousands of eligible kids in our State who remain uninsured. Further, the provisions in this bill will reverse the Bush administration policies to cut kids off the program and will ensure that thousands of Vermont kids will still have health care.

We are faced with many choices here in the Senate. When it comes to our Nation's kids, the choice is clear. This is a must-pass bill that takes important steps to cover all children who deserve to have every opportunity to lead a healthy and productive life. I urge all my colleagues to stand with the children and support this bill.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, there is no debate among Republicans concerning access to affordable health care for children—we believe every child should have access to quality affordable health care.

Many of us are proud of our role in creating the children's health program, SCHIP. We think it ought to be reauthorized responsibly.

But we are troubled by the direction the program has taken in recent years. It has strayed from its original purpose—the purpose Republicans sup-

This bill before us would only exacerbate those troubling trends.

That is why I offered an alternative—the Kids First Act—to return the children's health program to its original purpose of covering low-income children.

Senate Republicans also believe we need to focus scarce resources on those families who need it most. Mr. CORNYN offered an amendment to use any leftover state funds to help insure children who are eligible, but not enrolled, rather than expanding to high-income beneficiaries.

Senate Republicans believe SCHIP should cover those children who don't have insurance yet. Senator KYL offered a commonsense amendment which says kids should be able to keep the coverage they have, freeing up resources to enroll more children who don't have insurance.

Senate Republicans believe that States should cover low-income children who are not yet enrolled before they expand subsidies to wealthier families. Senators MURKOWSKI, SPENCER, COLLINS, and JOHANNIS offered an amendment to require just that.

As a result, we are left with a bill that fails to address the fundamental problems facing this children's health program—and that I cannot support.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the question is on the engrossment of the amendments and third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there is now 4 minutes of debate equally divided.

The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, today the Senate can right a wrong. In 2007, more than 3 million low-income, uninsured American kids were waiting to be included in the Children's Health Insurance Program. Those millions of low-income, uninsured children needed doctors visits and medicines. But in 2007, President Bush wrongly vetoed the legislation renewing and expanding the children's health program. The chance at health insurance for those 3 million kids was lost.

We cannot get those 2 years back for those kids, but today the Senate can keep all the children currently in CHIP covered—that is nearly 7 million—and we can reach more than 4 million more low-income, uninsured children who are waiting—waiting on us, colleagues—to do the right thing, who are waiting on us to fulfill the promise of the program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, we all know the rest of this year in health care we have big things ahead of us. We know the bill before us today will make the difference for 4 million or so uninsured kids. So 4 million uninsured Americans down but 42 million uninsured Americans to go. That is not going to be an easy task. If we are going to reform our health care system to cover all Americans, if we are going to improve the quality of care to provide for all Americans, if we are going to bring down the cost of health care for all Americans, we need to work together.

If we are going to work together, we need to get a better understanding of what bipartisanship really means. It is not, we will write 90 percent of the bill together and ask the minority to vote for the last 10 percent, like it or not. It is not: here is the bill, does the minority want to sign off on it and let us call it bipartisan?

It is, frankly, very difficult for me to believe we can return to true bipartisanship. But we will finish this bill today, and then I am going to roll up my sleeves. I am going to sit down with the majority to try to improve our health care system for all Americans despite recent evidence that true bipartisanship is elusive here in the Senate.

I know the issues in front of us are too important for me to do anything less than my very best for all those Americans out there who expect us to solve the problems of the day and make a better America for tomorrow's children and all of us.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY), is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOT VOTING—1

Kennedy

The bill (H.R. 2), as amended, was passed.

(The bill will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)

Mr. BAUCUS. I move to reconsider the vote and to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate insists on its amendments and requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes on this measure.

The Presiding Officer appointed Senators BAUCUS, ROCKEFELLER, CONRAD, GRASSLEY, and HATCH conferees on the part of the Senate.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate has successfully passed the reauthorization of a popular program that has reduced the number of uninsured children in our country by over 7 million. The Children's Health Insurance Program has helped lower the rate of uninsured low-income children by one-third since its enactment in 1997. That is a huge accomplishment, and has helped address a problem in our country that is unacceptable—the millions of families lacking insurance. Moreover, while the bill has a price tag of roughly $31 billion over 4½ years, it is fully offset and would cover over 4 million more uninsured, low-income children. This program, according to CBO and numerous economists, is the most efficient method of getting health care insurance to low-income kids and parents, and that means CHIP provides the best coverage available for low-income families.

In my home State of Wisconsin, CHIP is known as BadgerCare and it provides health insurance for over 370,000 children and 17,000 pregnant women. My State has done a very good job of covering uninsured families, and the positive effects of this program are felt at schools, in the workforce, and at home. This bill helps support Wisconsin's efforts and provides low-income children in my State with better access to preventive care, primary care, and affordable care. The end result is healthier families. BadgerCare is vital to the well-being of many families in Wisconsin and I am very pleased that this bill supports the program in my State.

I am very pleased that Congress has taken a first step to relieve States from unnecessary and burdensome barriers to enrolling low-income children. The onerous citizenship documentation requirements established in the 2005 Deficit Reduction Act, DRA, are keeping hundreds of thousands of eligible beneficiaries from the health care they need. This provision has created a serious new roadblock to coverage. As a result of the provision, which requires U.S. citizens to document their citizenship and identity when they apply for Medicaid or renew their coverage, a growing number of States are reporting a drop in Medicaid enrollment, particularly among children, but also among pregnant women and low-income parents. Health care coverage is being delayed or denied for tens of thousands of children who are clearly citizens and eligible for Medicaid but who cannot produce the limited forms of documentation prescribed by the regulations. These children are having to go without necessary medical care, essential medicines and therapies. In addition, community health centers are reporting a decline in the number of Medicaid patients due to the documentation requirements and are faced with treating more uninsured patients as a result.

Over the first year and a half that the documentation requirements were in effect, the Wisconsin Department of Health Services reported that almost 33,000 children and parents lost Medicaid or were denied coverage solely because they could not satisfy the Federal documentation requirements. About two-thirds of these people are known by the State to be U.S. citizens; most of the remainder are likely to be citizens as well, but have yet to prove it.

A study of 300 community health centers, conducted by George Washington University, found that the citizenship documentation requirements have caused a nationwide disruption in Medicaid coverage. Researchers estimate a loss of coverage for as many as 319,500 health center patients, which will result in an immediate financial loss of up to $85 million in Medicaid revenues. The loss of revenue hampers the ability of safety net providers to adequately respond to the medical needs of the communities they serve.

In addition to consequences suffered by eligible U.S. citizens, States have reported incurring substantial new administrative costs associated with implementing the requirement. They have had to hire additional staff, retool computer systems, and pay to obtain birth records. States are also reporting that the extra workload imposed by the new requirement is diverting time and attention that could be devoted to helping more eligible children secure and retain health coverage.

States are in the best position to decide if a documentation requirement is needed and, if so, to determine the most effective and reasonable ways to implement it. States that do not find it necessary to require such documentation could return to the procedures they used prior to the DRA and avoid the considerable administrative and financial burdens associated with implementing the DRA requirement. Most importantly, these States could avoid creating obstacles to Medicaid coverage for eligible U.S. citizens.

Despite significant support for allowing States to determine the best way to document citizenship, that complete fix is not included in the underlying bill. The restrictions are eased, and this is an important first step, but I hope we can continue to move forward on this issue and return this requirement to a State option.

I am also very pleased that this bill will allow States to waive the Federal 5-year waiting period for legal immigrant children and legal immigrant pregnant women to become eligible to enroll in the Children's Health Insurance Program. The idea that a sick child or pregnant woman legally in this country must wait 5 years to receive the care they need is absurd. Timely coverage means that families will have the opportunity to both prevent and treat conditions that can dramatically affect a child's daily life, and long-term health. And in those tragic incidences where a child suffers from life-threatening illnesses like cancer, denying that child necessary health care is unacceptable. Giving States the option to waive the 5-year waiting period is a positive step towards removing barriers to enrollment that are preventing our children from receiving the care they need.

In the midst of this recession, it is even more important that we renew our commitment to this valued program. We know that for every 1 percent increase in unemployment, approximately 1 million Americans become newly eligible for their State's Medicaid or CHIP programs. Reauthorization of the Children's Health Insurance Program will help millions of children and their families stay afloat and continue to receive the health care they need. Over the past few days, my colleagues have shared tragic stories of children who have suffered as a result of being uninsured, and we have listened to the heartwarming stories of families who have—quite literally—been saved by the Children's Health Insurance Program. The Children's Health Insurance Program Reauthorization marks an important leap forward in getting coverage to those who need it. I was pleased to support this bill's final passage, and I look forward to the day that everyone in our country has access to the basic right of health care.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am pleased that today the Senate voted to reauthorize and expand the Children's Health Insurance Program, which will extend health care to millions of children across the Nation.

Right now, our Nation faces one of the gravest economic crises in our history, and more and more Americans are having difficulty making ends meet—especially when it comes to the rising costs of health care. All too often it is children who pay the price.

For almost 12 years, the Children's Health Insurance Program has provided health care for millions of children from working families that do not qualify for Medicaid but cannot afford private insurance. These are the children of working families.

Millions of Americans have found that as the cost of health insurance rises an increasing number of employers are unable or unwilling to provide health insurance to their employees and their families. Approximately 45 million Americans, including nearly nine million children, are living without health insurance, and the number of families who do not have health insurance has continued to rise.

Currently, the Children's Health Insurance Program provides coverage for 6.7 million children nationwide. This reauthorization provides health care coverage for an additional 4.1 million children who are uninsured today.

This bill is largely based on legislation that was twice vetoed by President Bush. This legislation includes several improvements to the Children's Health Insurance Program that would fund outreach and enrollment efforts, allow States to use information from food stamp programs and other initiatives for low-income families to find and enroll eligible children, and give States the option to cover pregnant women for prenatal care vital to healthy newborn children.

I also support a provision in this bill that gives States the option to cover legal immigrant children and pregnant women under Medicaid and CHIP with no waiting period. Under current law, lawfully present pregnant women and children who entered the country after August 22, 1996 are barred from Medicaid and CHIP for the first 5 years they are in the country. These restrictions have severely undermined the health status of immigrant families across the Nation.

My home State of California has a higher cost of living than most others, a lower rate of employer sponsored coverage, and a higher rate of the uninsured. In California, CHIP funds cover approximately 1.4 million children and pregnant women. Currently, there are approximately 1.2 million children in California who do not have health insurance, and about 694,000 of these children are eligible for CHIP coverage.

This legislation not only extends this essential program, but gives States like California the flexibility they need to design a program that best fits the needs of their children.

I would like to thank Senators BAUCUS and ROCKEFELLER and the other members of the Finance Committee who worked so tirelessly to keep the focus of this bill where it should be—on the children.

There is not a man or woman in this chamber who wouldn't do everything within their power to ensure the health of their own children—we should do no less for the children of our Nation.
