STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself, Mr. Blumenthal, Mr. Tillis, Ms. Klobuchar, Mr. Cornyn, Mr. Leahy, Mr. Bennett, and Mrs. Feinstein)

S. 178. A bill to prevent elder abuse and exploitation and improve the justice system’s response to victims in elder abuse and exploitation cases; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I have fought for years to protect our Nation’s seniors from abuse and exploitation, initially, as former Chairman of the Senate Aging Committee, former Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and more recently, as Chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

This past June, I chaired a Judiciary Committee hearing on Protecting Older Americans from Financial Exploitation. At the hearing, we heard about numerous scams in which seniors were targeted time after time, resulting in their being defrauded, often with devastating consequences. We also heard that many older Americans don’t report instances of elder abuse because due to embarrassment, a refusal to acknowledge that they were victimized, or reliance on the perpetrator as their caretaker.

Sadly, these accounts of elder abuse are nothing new. What has changed is that scammers targeting seniors are becoming increasingly sophisticated.

That is one of the reasons why elder financial exploitation has been dubbed “the crime of the 21st century.”

I have made it a top priority to get the Federal Government to step up its efforts to fight the abuse, neglect, and financial exploitation of our Nation’s seniors.

Last year, I called on the Justice Department to outline its efforts to prevent and respond to instances of elder abuse. First, I sent a letter to the Department to find out what it’s doing to protect seniors from a new and particularly troubling form of exploitation: the photographing and online publication of survivors in embarrassing and compromising situations.

I also sent a letter to inquire about the Department’s efforts to fight imposter scams, in which fraudsters pose as employees of the IRS or another government agency, in order to deprive ordinary Americans of millions of dollars of their hard earned money. And as tax season approaches once again, it’s critical that folks watch out for these deceitful scams.

I also asked about the data the Department is collecting on financial exploitation, as well as how this data is being used to support Federal efforts to protect America’s seniors.

In its responses, the Justice Department effectively admitted that it falls short in several respects. The Department said that it “does not collect data on the prevalence of elder financial exploitation nationwide.” Further, the Department also said that it can’t provide statistical information on the number of cases it has prosecuted for elder financial exploitation.

What all this means is that we are not getting the picture of elder financial exploitation.

We do know that some older Americans’ trusting and polite nature, combined with their hard-earned retirement savings, make them particularly attractive targets for fraudsters. We also know that the financial exploitation of older Americans is on the rise and it can take many forms.

Financial exploitation is the most widespread form of elder abuse, costing America’s seniors between an estimated $2.9 billion and $36 billion annually. But, sadly, its costs are not limited to the negative effects on seniors’ bank accounts. Victims suffer all sorts of negative effects, including diminished health, loss of independence, and psychological distress.

It is estimated that up to 37 percent of seniors in the United States are affected by some form of financial exploitation today, in any 5-year period.

In my home State of Iowa, so-called grandparent scams are on the rise. In these scams, fraudsters present themselves to an older American as a grandchild in distress, hoping to convince the grandparent to send cash or give out financial information.

Con artists are also using sweepstakes scams to steal money from seniors. A senior is called and told they have won a prize or sum of money. But before they can claim the supposed prize, the victim is required to pay taxes or processing fees. Once the money is paid, the government agency, in order to deprive ordinary Americans of millions of dollars of their hard earned money. And as tax season approaches once again, it’s critical that folks watch out for these deceitful scams.

In short, elder abuse and exploitation is a serious problem, and it demands a strong response. It requires all of us to work together in a collaborative way.

So today I am proud to introduce the Elder Abuse Prevention and Prosecution Act. I thank my colleagues—Senators Blumenthal, Tillis, Klobuchar, and Cornyn for collaborating with me on this comprehensive and bipartisan bill’s development and for joining as original cosponsors. It takes a multi-pronged approach to combating the abuse and financial exploitation of our nation’s senior citizens.

We have heard a need for specialized prosecutors and more focused efforts to combat abuse and exploitation. That is why the bill directs the Attorney General to designate at least one federal prosecutor in each U.S. Attorney’s Office to serve as an Elder Justice Coordinator for that district.

To ensure that elder abuse is a priority for the Federal Trade Commission, the Justice Department, the bill also calls for each agency to have an Elder Justice Coordinator.

We also need to send a strong message that efforts to target our Nation’s seniors won’t be tolerated. That is why the bill enhances elder victims’ access to restitution and increases penalties for criminals who use telemarketing or email in their schemes to defraud seniors.

The bill also requires that the Justice Department partner with the Department of Health and Human Services to provide training and technical assistance to State and local governments on the investigation, prevention, prosecution, and mitigation of elder abuse and neglect.

Finally we have heard about the need for more data on financial exploitation... and the government’s response. Gathering accurate information about elder abuse is not only crucial to understanding the scope of the problem, but it is also essential in determining where resources should be allocated. So, the bill helps to accomplish that.

It ensures that data be collected from federal prosecutors and law enforcement in cases where an older American was the target of abuse or exploitation.

These and other reforms included in the bill are the product of a truly bipartisan effort, as well as insight from key stakeholders and those who’ve been battling elder financial exploitation on the front lines.

This 21st century crime requires a 21st century response. The Elder Abuse Prevention and Prosecution Act takes a strong step toward protecting our Nation’s seniors, and I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. BLUNT. Thank you all. If you have a seat, you can sit down.

Mr. President, Mr. Vice President, Mr. President-elect, Mr. Vice President-elect, ladies and gentlemen, come to the inauguration of the 45th President of the United States of America.

Today, the legislative, the executive, and the judicial branches of our constitutional government come together for the inauguration of the 45th President of the United States. Members of the whole world will watch and listen to this event.

Three years ago, at his first inauguration—it was also the first inauguration on this side of the Capitol—President Ronald Reagan said that what we do here is both conventional and extraordinary. Since every 4 years since 1793, when President George Washington took this exact same oath; mundane because we have done it every 4 years, but extraordinary because it sets democracies everywhere.

Washington believed the inauguration of the second President would be more important than the inaugural of the first. Many people had taken control of a government up until then, but few people had ever turned that control willingly over to anyone else. As he focused for the first time on power, many historians believe that the next election was even more important, when in 1801 one group of people—arguably, for the first time ever in history—willingly, if not enthusiastically, gave control of the government to people they believed had a dramatically different view of what the government should, would, and could do.

After an election that actually discovered a flaw in the Constitution itself, which was remedied with the ratification of the 13th Amendment and to a great extent through the Civil War, every election since has been a test for democracies everywhere. Sullivan Ballou gave his life on the battlefield a week later at the first Battle of Bull Run. It is because Sullivan Ballou and countless others believed in something bigger than themselves, and were willing to sacrifice for it, that we stand today in the full blessings of liberty in the greatest country on Earth. That spirit lives on in each of us, Americans whose values have been shaped by generations and those who have just arrived. I know our best days are yet to come. I urge all Americans to read Ballou’s full letter. His words give me solace and strength. I hope they will give you the same.

Now, please stand while the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Clarence Thomas, administers the oath of office to the Vice President of the United States.

Associate Justice CLARENCE THOMAS administered the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution, which he repeated, as follows:

I, MICHAEL RICHARD PENCE, do solemnly swear that I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies foreign and domestic; that I will faithfully execute the office on which I am about to enter, So help me God.

Associate Justice THOMAS. God bless you.

Mr. BLUNT. Ladies and gentlemen, it is an honor to introduce the Chief Justice of the United States, John G. Roberts, Jr.

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, JOHN G. ROBERTS, JR., administered to the President-elect the oath of office prescribed by the Constitution, which he repeated, as follows:

I, DONALD JOHN TRUMP, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States.

So help me God.

The Chief Justice. Congratulations, Mr. President.

(App廊坊)

Mr. BLUNT. What a great honor to be able to introduce for the first time ever, anywhere, the man who will preside over the United States of America, Donald J. Trump.

(App廊坊)

The PRESIDENT. Chief Justice Roberts, President Carter, President Clinton, President Bush, President Obama, fellow Americans, and people of the world, thank you. We, the citizens of America, are now joined in a great partnership. It is our duty to rebuild our country and restore its promise for all of our people. Together we will determine the course of America and the world for many, many years to come.

We will face challenges. We will confront hardships, but we will get the job done.

Every 4 years we gather on these steps to carry out the orderly and peaceful transfer of power. And we are grateful to President Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama for their unwavering dedication throughout this transition. They have been magnificent.

Thank you.

(App廊坊)

Today’s ceremony, however, has very special meaning because today we are not merely transferring power from one administration to another or from one party to another, but we are transferring power from Washington, DC, and giving it back to you, the people.

For too long, a small group in our Nation’s Capital has reaped the rewards of government while the people have borne the cost. Washington flourished, but the people did not prosper. Politics was practiced, but the jobs left and the factories closed. The establishment protected itself, but not the citizens of our country. Their victories were partial and their triumphs have not been your triumphs, and while they celebrated in our Nation’s Capital, there was little to celebrate for struggling families all across our land.

That all changes starting right here and right now, because this moment is your moment. It belongs to you. It belongs to every American who is watching all across America. This is your day.

This is your celebration. This, the United States of America, is your country.

What truly matters is not which party controls our government but whether our government is controlled by the people. January 20, 2017, will be remembered as the day the people became the rulers of this Nation again.

(App廊坊)

The forgotten men and women of our country will be forgotten no longer. Everyone is listening to you now. You came by the tens of millions, carrying America’s torch, our flag, and the words that give me solace and strength. I hope you know our best days are yet to come. I urge all Americans to read Ballou’s full letter. His words give me solace and strength. I hope they will give you the same.

We will no longer accept politicians who, while refusing to defend our own, and spent billions of dollars overseas subsidizing the armies of other countries, while allowing for the very sad depletion of our military and law enforcement and, most importantly, we will be protected by God.

(App廊坊)

Finally, we must think big and dream even bigger. In America, we understand that a nation cannot be strong when it weighs down another nation with its problems. We will no longer accept politicians who, while they celebrate in our Nation’s Capital, there was little to celebrate for struggling families all across our land.

This American carnage stops right here and right now. I have said that the people and their pain is our pain. Their dreams are our dreams. Their success will be our success. We share one heart, one home, and one glorious dream. Their pain is our pain. Their dreams are our dreams. We will not acceptiframe mode="embedded" expandable="true"></iframe> they fill their heart with the same dreams, and they are infused with the breath of life by the same Almighty Creator.

So to all Americans in every city near and far, across from mountain to mountain, from ocean to ocean, hear these words. You will never be ignored again. Your voice, your dream will refine our American destiny, and your courage and goodness and love will forever guide us along the way. Together, we will make America strong. We will make America wealthy again. We will make America proud again. We will make America safe again. And, yes, together we will make America great again.

Thank you, God bless you, and God bless America. Thank you.

Mr. BLUNT. At this time I call on Rabbi Marvin Hier, the Reverend Franklin Graham, and Bishop Wayne T. Jackson to provide readings and the benediction.

Rabbi HIER. Eternal God, bless President Donald J. Trump and America, our great Nation. Guide us to remember the words of the Psalmist:

Who may dwell on Your holy mountain? One who does what is right and speaks the truth, who knows that when you eat the labor of your hands, you are praiseworthy that he who sows in tears shall reap in joy, because the freedoms we enjoy are not granted in us but must be reclaimed by each generation. As our ancestors have planted for us, so we must plant for others. While it is not for us to complete the tasks, neither are we free to desist from them.

Dispense justice to the needy and the orphan, for they have no one but their fellow citizens, and because a nation’s wealth is measured by its values and not by its vaults. Bless all of our allies around the world who share our beliefs.

By the river of Babylon we wept as we remembered Zion. If I forget thee O Jerusalem, may my right hand forget its skill. The doer of all these shall never falter. May the days come soon when justice will dwell in the wilderness and rightousness will abide in the fertile fields, and the work of righteousness will be peace, quietness, and confidence forever. Amen.

Reverend GRAHAM. Mr. President, in the Bible, rain is a sign of God’s blessing. And it started to rain, Mr. President, when you came in here. It is my prayer that God will bless you, your family, your administration, and may He bless America.

The passage of Scripture comes from 1 Timothy, chapter 2:

I urge them, first of all, that petitions, prayers, intercession, and thanksgiving be made for all people. For kings, for all those in authority, that we may live peacefully quiet lives in all Godliness and Holiness. This is good and it pleases God our Savior, who wants all people to be saved and come to a knowledge of the truth. For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and mankind, the man Christ Jesus who gave Himself as a ransom for all people. Now to the King Eternal, Immortal, Invisible, the only God, be honor and glory forever and ever.

In Jesus’s Name, Amen.

Bishop JACKSON. We thank You, Father, for letting us share this great moment together. Let us not take for granted the air we breathe or the life You have given us. We were all created by You with one blood, all nations to dwell upon this land together. We are not enemies. We are brothers and sisters. We are not adversaries, but we are allies. We are not foes, but we are friends. Let us be healed by the power of Your love and united by the power of Your Spirit.

Today we pray for our 45th President, the Vice President, and their families, and give them the wisdom to guide this great Nation, the strength to protect it, and the hands to heal it. We bless President Donald J. Trump. We ask that You give him the wisdom of Solomon and the meekness of Christ—Solomon who kept peace among many nations, Joseph who dreamt better for the people, and Christ who accepted us all.

O Lord, mend our hearts and stitch together the fabric of this great country in the spirit of the legendary gospel singer Mahalia Jackson: Oh, deep in my heart, I do believe. The Lord will see us through. I do believe. We are on our way to victory, I do believe. We will walk hand in hand, I do believe. We shall live in peace, I do believe. Oh, deep in my heart, I do believe.

America, we shall overcome. May the Lord bless and keep America, make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us and give us peace.

In the Name of Jesus. Amen.
