(A) any annuity entitlement to which is based on an individual's separation from service occurring on or after that 60th day; and

(B) any service performed by any such individual before, on, or after that 60th day, subject to subsection (e).

(e) DEPOSIT REQUIRED FOR CERTAIN PRIOR SERVICE TO BE CREDITABLE AS CONTROLLER SERVICE.—

(1) DEPOSIT REQUIREMENT.—For purposes of determining eligibility for immediate retirement under section 8412(e) of title 5, United States Code, the amendment made by subsection (b) shall, with respect to any service described in paragraph (2), be disregarded unless there is deposited into the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund, with respect to such service, in such time, form, and manner as the Office of Personnel Management by regulation requires, an amount equal to the amount by which—

(A) the deductions from pay which would have been required for such service if the amendments made by this section had been in effect when such service was performed, exceeds

(B) the unrefunded deductions or deposits actually made under subchapter II of chapter 84 of such title 5 with respect to such service.

The amount under the preceding sentence shall include interest, computed under paragraphs (2) and (3) of section 8334(e) of such title 5.

(2) PRIOR SERVICE DESCRIBED.—This subsection applies with respect to any service performed by an individual, before the 60th day following the date of enactment of this Act, as an employee described in section 8401(35)(B) of such title 5 (as set forth in subsection (b)).

SEC. 439. JUSTIFICATION FOR AIR DEFENSE IDENTIFICATION ZONE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—If the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration establishes an Air Defense Identification Zone (in this section referred as an ''ADIZ''), the Administrator shall transmit, not later than 60 days after the date of establishing the ADIZ, to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation of the Senate a report containing an explanation of the need for the ADIZ. The Administrator also shall transmit to the Committees updates of the report every 60 days until the ADIZ is rescinded. The reports and updates shall be transmitted in classified form.

(b) EXISTING ADIZ.—If an ADIZ is in effect on the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall transmit an initial report under subsection (a) not later than 30 days after such date of enactment.

(c) DEFINITION.—In this section, the terms ''Air Defense Identification Zone'' and ''ADIZ'' each mean a zone established by the Administrator with respect to airspace under 18,000 feet in approximately a 15- to 38-mile radius around Washington, District of Columbia, for which security measures are extended beyond the existing 15-mile no-fly zone around Washington and in which general aviation aircraft are required to adhere to certain procedures issued by the Administrator.

SEC. 440. INTERNATIONAL AIR TRANSPORTATION.

It is the sense of Congress that, in an effort to modernize its regulations, the Department of Transportation should formally define ''Fifth Freedom'' and ''Seventh Freedom'' consistently for both scheduled and charter passenger and cargo traffic.

SEC. 441. REIMBURSEMENT OF AIR CARRIERS FOR CERTAIN SCREENING AND RELATED ACTIVITIES.

The Secretary of Transportation, subject to the availability of funds (other than amounts in the Aviation Trust Fund) provided for this purpose, shall reimburse air carriers and airports for the following:

(1) All screening and related activities that the air carriers or airports are still performing or continuing to be responsible for, including—

(A) the screening of catering supplies;

(B) checking documents at security checkpoints;

(C) screening of passengers; and

(D) screening of persons with access to aircraft.

(2) The provision of space and facilities used to perform screening functions if such space and facilities have been previously used, or were intended to be used, for revenue-producing purposes.

SEC. 442. GENERAL AVIATION FLIGHTS AT RONALD REAGAN WASHINGTON NATIONAL AIRPORT.

It is the sense of Congress that Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport should be open to general aviation flights as soon as possible.

TITLE V—AIRPORT DEVELOPMENT

SEC. 501. DEFINITIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 47102 is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (19) and (20) as paragraphs (24) and (25), respectively;

(2) by inserting after paragraph (18) the following:

''(23) 'small hub airport' means a commercial service airport that has at least 0.05 percent but less than 0.25 percent of the passenger boardings.'';

(3) in paragraph (10) by striking subparagraphs (A) and (B) and inserting following:

''(A) means, unless the context indicates otherwise, revenue passenger boardings in the United States in the prior calendar year on an aircraft in service in air commerce, as the Secretary determines under regulations the Secretary prescribes; and

''(B) includes passengers who continue on an aircraft in international flight that stops at an airport in the 48 contiguous States, Alaska, or Hawaii for a nontraffic purpose.'';

(4) by redesignating paragraphs (10) through (18) as paragraphs (14) through (22), respectively;

(5) by inserting after paragraph (9) the following:

''(10) 'large hub airport' means a commercial service airport that has at least 1.0 percent of the passenger boardings.

''(12) 'medium hub airport' means a commercial service airport that has at least 0.25 percent but less than 1.0 percent of the passenger boardings.

''(13) 'nonhub airport' means a commercial service airport that has less than 0.05 percent of the passenger boardings.''; and

(6) by striking paragraph (6) and inserting the following:

''(6) 'amount made available under section 48103' or 'amount newly made available' means the amount authorized for grants under section 48103 as that amount may be limited in that year by a subsequent law, but as determined without regard to grant obligation recoveries made in that year or amounts covered by section 47107(f).''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 47116(b)(1) is amended by striking ''(as defined in section 41731 of this title)''.

SEC. 502. REPLACEMENT OF BAGGAGE CONVEYOR SYSTEMS.

Section 47102(3)(B)(x) is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting the following: ''; except that such activities shall be eligible for funding under this subchapter only using amounts apportioned under section 47114.''.

SEC. 503. SECURITY COSTS AT SMALL AIRPORTS.

(a) SECURITY COSTS.—Section 47102(3)(J) is amended to read as follows:

''(J) in the case of a nonhub airport or an airport that is not a primary airport in fiscal year 2004, direct costs associated with new, additional, or revised security requirements imposed on airport operators by law, regulation, or order on or after September 11, 2001, if the Government's share is paid only from amounts apportioned to a sponsor under section 47114(c) or 47114(d)(3)(A).''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 47110(b)(2) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (D) by striking '', 47102(3)(K), or 47102(3)(L)''; and

(2) by aligning the margin of subparagraph (D) with the margin of subparagraph (B).

SEC. 504. WITHHOLDING OF PROGRAM APPLICATION APPROVAL.

Section 47106(d) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking ''section 47114(c) and (e) of this title'' and inserting ''subsections (c), (d), and (e) of section 47114''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) If the Secretary withholds a grant to an airport from the discretionary fund under section 47115 or from the small airport fund under section 47116 on the grounds that the sponsor has violated an assurance or requirement of this subchapter, the Secretary shall follow the procedures of this subsection.''.

SEC. 505. RUNWAY SAFETY AREAS.

Section 47106 is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) RUNWAY SAFETY AREAS.—The Secretary may approve an application under this chapter for a project grant to construct, reconstruct, repair, or improve a runway only if the Secretary receives written assurances, satisfactory to the Secretary, that the sponsor will undertake, to the maximum extent practical, improvement of the runway's safety area to meet the standards of the Federal Aviation Administration.''.

SEC. 506. DISPOSITION OF LAND ACQUIRED FOR NOISE COMPATIBILITY PURPOSES.

Section 47107(c) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(4) Notwithstanding paragraph (2)(A)(iii), an airport owner or operator may retain all or any portion of the proceeds from a land disposition described in that paragraph if the Secretary finds that the use of the land will be compatible with airport purposes and the proceeds retained will be used for airport development or to carry out a noise compatibility program under section 47504(c).''.

SEC. 507. GRANT ASSURANCES.

(a) HANGAR CONSTRUCTION.—Section 47107(a) is amended—

(1) by striking ''and'' at the end of paragraph (19);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (20) and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(21) if the airport owner or operator and a person who owns an aircraft agree that a hangar is to be constructed at the airport for the aircraft at the aircraft owner's expense, the airport owner or operator will grant to the aircraft owner for the hangar a long-term lease (of not less than 50 years) that is subject to such terms and conditions on the hangar as the airport owner or operator may impose.''.

(b) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—Section 47107(l)(5)(A) is amended by inserting ''or any other governmental entity'' after ''sponsor''.

(c) AUDIT CERTIFICATION.—Section 47107(m) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking ''promulgate regulations that'' and inserting ''include a provision in the compliance supplement provisions to'';

(2) in paragraph (1) by striking ''and opinion of the review''; and

(3) by striking paragraph (3).

SEC. 508. ALLOWABLE PROJECT COSTS.

(a) CONSTRUCTION OR MODIFICATION OF PUBLIC PARKING FACILITIES FOR SECURITY PURPOSES.—Section 47110 is amended—

(1) in subsection (f) by striking ''subsection (d)'' and inserting ''subsections (d) and (h)''; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(h) CONSTRUCTION OR MODIFICATION OF PUBLIC PARKING FACILITIES FOR SECURITY PURPOSES.—Notwithstanding subsection (f)(1), a cost of constructing or modifying a public parking facility for passenger automobiles to comply with a regulation or directive of the Department of Homeland Security shall be treated as an allowable airport development project cost.''.

(b) DEBT FINANCING.—Section 47110 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) DEBT FINANCING.—In the case of an airport that is not a medium hub airport or large hub airport, the Secretary may determine that allowable airport development project costs include payments of interest, commercial bond insurance, and other credit enhancement costs associated with a bond issue to finance the project.''.

(c) CLARIFICATION OF ALLOWABLE COSTS.—Section 47110(b)(1) is amended by inserting before the semicolon at the end ''and any cost of moving a Federal facility impeding the project if the rebuilt facility is of an equivalent size and type''.

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—Section 47110(e) is amended by aligning the margin of paragraph (6) with the margin of paragraph (5).

SEC. 509. APPORTIONMENTS TO PRIMARY AIRPORTS.

(a) FORMULA CHANGES.—Section 47114(c)(1)(A) is amended by striking clauses (iv) and (v) and by inserting the following:

''(iv) $.65 for each of the next 500,000 passenger boardings at the airport during the prior calendar year;

''(v) $.50 cents for each of the next 2,500,000 passenger boardings at the airport during the prior calendar year; and

''(vi) $.45 cents for each additional passenger boarding at the airport during the prior calendar year.''.

(b) SPECIAL RULE FOR FISCAL YEARS 2004 AND 2005.—Section 47114(c)(1) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(F) SPECIAL RULE FOR FISCAL YEARS 2004 AND 2005.—Notwithstanding subparagraph (A) and the absence of scheduled passenger aircraft service at an airport, the Secretary may apportion in fiscal years 2004 and 2005 to the sponsor of the airport an amount equal to the amount apportioned to that sponsor in fiscal year 2002 or 2003, whichever amount is greater, if the Secretary finds that—

''(i) the passenger boardings at the airport were below 10,000 in calendar year 2002;

''(ii) the airport had at least 10,000 passenger boardings and scheduled passenger aircraft service in either calendar year 2000 or 2001; and

''(iii) the reason that passenger boardings described in clause (i) were below 10,000 was the decrease in passengers following the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.''.

SEC. 510. CARGO AIRPORTS.

Section 47114(c)(2) is amended—

(1) in the paragraph heading by striking ''ONLY''; and

(2) in subparagraph (A) by striking ''3 percent'' and inserting ''3.5 percent''.

SEC. 511. CONSIDERATIONS IN MAKING DISCRETIONARY GRANTS.

Section 47115(d) is amended to read as follows:

''(d) CONSIDERATIONS.—

''(1) FOR CAPACITY ENHANCEMENT PROJECTS.—In selecting a project for a grant to preserve and improve capacity funded in whole or in part from the fund, the Secretary shall consider—

''(A) the effect that the project will have on overall national transportation system capacity;

''(B) the benefit and cost of the project, including, in the case of a project at a reliever airport, the number of operations projected to be diverted from a primary airport to the reliever airport as a result of the project, as well as the cost savings projected to be realized by users of the local airport system;

''(C) the financial commitment from non-United States Government sources to preserve or improve airport capacity;

''(D) the airport improvement priorities of the States to the extent such priorities are not in conflict with subparagraphs (A) and (B); and

''(E) the projected growth in the number of passengers or aircraft that will be using the airport at which the project will be carried out.

''(2) FOR ALL PROJECTS.—In selecting a project for a grant described in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall consider whether—

''(A) funding has been provided for all other projects qualifying for funding during the fiscal year under this chapter that have attained a higher score under the numerical priority system employed by the Secretary in administering the fund; and

''(B) the sponsor will be able to commence the work identified in the project application in the fiscal year in which the grant is made or within 6 months after the grant is made, whichever is later.''.

SEC. 512. FLEXIBLE FUNDING FOR NONPRIMARY AIRPORT APPORTIONMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 47117(c) is amended to read as follows:

''(c) USE OF SPONSOR'S APPORTIONED AMOUNTS AT PUBLIC USE AIRPORTS.—

''(1) OF SPONSOR.—An amount apportioned to a sponsor of an airport under section 47114(c) or 47114(d)(3)(A) is available for grants for any public-use airport of the sponsor included in the national plan of integrated airport systems.

''(2) IN SAME STATE OR AREA.—A sponsor of an airport may make an agreement with the Secretary of Transportation waiving the sponsor's claim to any part of the amount apportioned for the airport under section 47114(c) or 47114(d)(3)(A) if the Secretary agrees to make the waived amount available for a grant for another public-use airport in the same State or geographical area as the airport, as determined by the Secretary.''.

(b) PROJECT GRANT AGREEMENTS.—Section 47108(a) is amended by inserting ''or 47114(d)(3)(A)'' after ''under section 47114(c)''.

(c) ALLOWABLE PROJECT COSTS.—Section 47110 is further amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(2)(C) by striking ''of this title'' and inserting ''or section 47114(d)(3)(A)'';

(2) in subsection (g)—

(A) by inserting ''or section 47114(d)(3)(A)'' after ''of section 47114(c)''; and

(B) by striking ''of project'' and inserting ''of the project''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(j) NONPRIMARY AIRPORTS.—The Secretary may decide that the costs of revenue producing aeronautical support facilities, including fuel farms and hangars, are allowable for an airport development project at a nonprimary airport if the Government's share of such costs is paid only with funds apportioned to the airport sponsor under section 47114(d)(3)(A) and if the Secretary determines that the sponsor has made adequate provision for financing airside needs of the airport.''.

(d) TERMINAL DEVELOPMENT COSTS.—Section 47119(b) is amended—

(1) by striking ''or'' at the end of paragraph (3);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (4) and inserting ''; or''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(5) to a sponsor of a nonprimary airport, any part of amounts apportioned to the sponsor for the fiscal year under section 47114(d)(3)(A) for project costs allowable under section 47110(d).''.

SEC. 513. USE OF APPORTIONED AMOUNTS.

(a) SPECIAL APPORTIONMENT CATEGORIES.—Section 47117(e)(1)(A) is amended—

(1) by striking ''of this title'' the first place it appears and inserting a comma; and

(2) by striking ''of this title'' the second place it appears and inserting '', for noise mitigation projects approved in an environmental record of decision for an airport development project under this title, for compatible land use planning and projects carried out by State and local governments under section 47140, and for airport development described in section 47102(3)(F) or 47102(3)(K) to comply with the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.)''.

(b) ELIMINATION OF SUPER RELIEVER SET-ASIDE.—Section 47117(e)(1)(C) is repealed.

(c) RECOVERED FUNDS.—Section 47117 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''(h) TREATMENT OF CANCELED OR REDUCED GRANT OBLIGATIONS.—For the purpose of determining compliance with a limitation, enacted in an appropriations Act, on the amount of grant obligations of funds made available by section 48103 that may be incurred in a fiscal year, an amount that is recovered by canceling or reducing a grant obligation of funds made available by section 48103 shall be treated as a negative obligation that is to be netted against the obligation limitation as enacted and thus may permit the obligation limitation to be exceeded by an equal amount.''.

SEC. 514. MILITARY AIRPORT PROGRAM.

Subsections (e) and (f) of section 47118 are each amended by striking ''$7,000,000'' and inserting ''$10,000,000''.

SEC. 515. TERMINAL DEVELOPMENT COSTS.

Section 47119(a) is amended to read as follows:

''(a) REPAYING BORROWED MONEY.—

''(1) TERMINAL DEVELOPMENT COSTS INCURRED AFTER JUNE 30, 1970, AND BEFORE JULY 12, 1976.—An amount apportioned under section 47114 and made available to the sponsor of a commercial service airport at which terminal development was carried out after June 30, 1970, and before July 12, 1976, is available to repay immediately money borrowed and used to pay the costs for such terminal development if those costs would be allowable project costs under section 47110(d) if they had been incurred after September 3, 1982.

''(2) TERMINAL DEVELOPMENT COSTS INCURRED BETWEEN JANUARY 1, 1992, AND OCTOBER 31, 1992.—An amount apportioned under section 47114 and made available to the sponsor of a nonhub airport at which terminal development was carried out between January 1, 1992, and October 31, 1992, is available to repay immediately money borrowed and to pay the costs for such terminal development if those costs would be allowable project costs under section 47110(d).

''(3) TERMINAL DEVELOPMENT COSTS AT PRIMARY AIRPORTS.—An amount apportioned under section 47114 or available under subsection (b)(3) to a primary airport—

''(A) that was a nonhub airport in the most recent year used to calculate apportionments under section 47114;

''(B) that is a designated airport under section 47118 in fiscal year 2003; and

''(C) at which terminal development is carried out between January 2003 and August 2004, is available to repay immediately money borrowed and used to pay the costs for such terminal development if those costs would be allowable project costs under section 47110(d).

''(4) CONDITIONS FOR GRANT.—An amount is available for a grant under this subsection only if—

''(A) the sponsor submits the certification required under section 47110(d);

''(B) the Secretary of Transportation decides that using the amount to repay the borrowed money will not defer an airport development project outside the terminal area at that airport; and

''(C) amounts available for airport development under this subchapter will not be used for additional terminal development projects at the airport for at least 3 years beginning on the date the grant is used to repay the borrowed money.

''(5) APPLICABILITY OF CERTAIN LIMITATIONS.—A grant under this subsection shall be subject to the limitations in subsection (b)(1) and (2).''.

SEC. 516. CONTRACT TOWERS.

Section 47124(b) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1) by striking ''on December 30, 1987,'' and inserting ''on date of enactment of the Flight 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act'';

(2) in the heading for paragraph (3) by striking ''PILOT'';

(3) in paragraph (4)(C) by striking ''$1,100,000'' and inserting ''$1,500,000''; and

(4) by striking ''pilot'' each place it appears.

SEC. 517. AIRPORT SAFETY DATA COLLECTION.

Section 47130 is amended to read as follows:

''§ 47130. Airport safety data collection

''Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration may award a contract, using sole source or limited source authority, or enter into a cooperative agreement with, or provide a grant from amounts made available under section 48103 to, a private company or entity for the collection of airport safety data. In the event that a grant is provided under this section, the United States Government's share of the cost of the data collection shall be 100 percent.''.

SEC. 518. AIRPORT PRIVATIZATION PILOT PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 47134(b)(1) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A) by striking clauses (i) and (ii) and inserting the following:

''(i) in the case of a primary airport, by at least 65 percent of the scheduled air carriers serving the airport and by scheduled and nonscheduled air carriers whose aircraft landing at the airport during the preceding calendar year, had a total landed weight during the preceding calendar year of at least 65 percent of the total landed weight of all aircraft landing at the airport during such year; or

''(ii) by the Secretary at any nonprimary airport after the airport has consulted with at least 65 percent of the owners of aircraft based at that airport, as determined by the Secretary.'';

(2) by redesignating subparagraph (B) as subparagraph (C); and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (A) the following:

''(B) OBJECTION TO EXEMPTION.—An air carrier shall be deemed to have approved a sponsor's application for an exemption under subparagraph (A) unless the air carrier has submitted an objection, in writing, to the sponsor within 60 days of the filing of the sponsor's application with the Secretary, or within 60 days of the service of the application upon that air carrier, whichever is later.''.

(b) FEDERAL SHARE.—Section 47109(a) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''and'' at the end of paragraph (3);

(2) by striking paragraph (4); and

(3) by redesignating paragraph (5) as paragraph (4).

SEC. 519. INNOVATIVE FINANCING TECHNIQUES.

(a) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—Section 47135(a) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence by inserting after ''approve'' the following: ''after the date of enactment of the Flight 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act'';

(2) in the first sentence by striking ''20'' and inserting ''10''; and

(3) by striking the second sentence and inserting the following: ''Such projects shall be located at airports that are not medium or large hub airports.''.

(b) INNOVATIVE FINANCING TECHNIQUES.—Section 47135(c)(2) is amended—

(1) by striking subparagraphs (A) and (B); and

(2) by redesignating subparagraphs (C) and (D) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively.

(c) SAVINGS CLAUSE.—The amendments made by this section shall not affect applications approved under section 47135 of title 49, United States Code, before the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 520. AIRPORT SECURITY PROGRAM.

Section 47137 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (e) and (f) as subsections (f) and (g), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

''(e) ADMINISTRATION.—The Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of Homeland Security, shall administer the program authorized by this section.''.

SEC. 521. LOW-EMISSION AIRPORT VEHICLES AND INFRASTRUCTURE.

''§ 47138. Emission credits for air quality projects

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall jointly agree on how to assure that airport sponsors receive appropriate emission credits for carrying out projects described in sections 40117(a)(3)(G), 47102(3)(K), and 47102(3)(L). Such agreement must include, at a minimum, the following conditions:

''(1) The provision of credits is consistent with the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7402 et seq.).

''(2) Credits generated by the emissions reductions are kept by the airport sponsor and may only be used for purposes of any current or future general conformity determination under the Clean Air Act or as offsets under the Environmental Protection Agency's new source review program for projects on the airport or associated with the airport.

''(3) Credits are calculated and provided to airports on a consistent basis nationwide.

''(4) Credits are provided to airport sponsors in a timely manner.

''(5) The establishment of a method to assure the Secretary that, for any specific airport project for which funding is being requested, the appropriate credits will be granted.

''(b) ASSURANCE OF RECEIPT OF CREDITS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—As a condition for making a grant for a project described in section 47102(3)(K), 47102(3)(L), or 47139 or as a condition for granting approval to collect or use a passenger facility fee for a project described in section 40117(a)(3)(G), 47102(3)(K), 47102(3)(L), or 47139, the Secretary must receive assurance from the State in which the project is located, or from the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency where there is a Federal implementation plan, that the airport sponsor will receive appropriate emission credits in accordance with the conditions of this section.

''(2) AGREEMENT ON PREVIOUSLY APPROVED PROJECTS.—The Secretary and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall jointly agree on how to provide emission credits to airport projects previously approved under section 47136 under terms consistent with the conditions enumerated in this section.''.

(b) AIRPORT GROUND SUPPORT EQUIPMENT EMISSIONS RETROFIT PILOT PROGRAM.—Subchapter I of chapter 471 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 47139. Airport ground support equipment emissions retrofit pilot program

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall carry out a pilot program at not more than 10 commercial service airports under which the sponsors of such airports may use an amount made available under section 48103 to retrofit existing eligible airport ground support equipment that burns conventional fuels to achieve lower emissions utilizing emission control technologies certified or verified by the Environmental Protection Agency.

''(b) LOCATION IN AIR QUALITY NONATTAINMENT OR MAINTENANCE AREAS.—A commercial service airport shall be eligible for participation in the pilot program only if the airport is located in an air quality nonattainment area (as defined in section 171(2) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7501(2)) or a maintenance area referred to in section 175A of such Act (42 U.S.C. 7505a).

''(c) SELECTION CRITERIA.—In selecting from among applicants for participation in the pilot program, the Secretary shall give priority consideration to applicants that will achieve the greatest air quality benefits measured by the amount of emissions reduced per dollar of funds expended under the pilot program.

''(d) MAXIMUM AMOUNT.—Not more than $500,000 may be expended under the pilot program at any single commercial service airport.

''(e) GUIDELINES.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, shall establish guidelines regarding the types of retrofit projects eligible under the pilot program by considering remaining equipment useful life, amounts of emission reduction in relation to the cost of projects, and other factors necessary to carry out this section. The Secretary may give priority to ground support equipment owned by the airport and used for airport purposes.

''(f) ELIGIBLE EQUIPMENT DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'eligible equipment' means ground service or maintenance equipment that is located at the airport, is used to support aeronautical and related activities at the airport, and will remain in operation at the airport for the life or useful life of the equipment, whichever is earlier.''.

(c) ADDITION TO AIRPORT DEVELOPMENT.—Section 47102(3) is further amended by striking subparagraphs (K) and (L) and inserting the following:

''(K) work necessary to construct or modify airport facilities to provide low-emission fuel systems, gate electrification, and other related air quality improvements at a commercial service airport if the airport is located in an air quality nonattainment or maintenance area (as defined in sections 171(2) and 175A of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7501(2), 7505a) and if such project will result in an airport receiving appropriate emission credits, as described in section 47138.

''(L) converting vehicles and ground support equipment owned by a commercial service airport to low-emission technology or acquiring for use at a commercial service airport vehicles and ground support equipment that include low-emission technology if the airport is located in an air quality nonattainment area (as defined in section 171(2) of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7501(2)) or a maintenance area referred to in section 175A of such Act (42 U.S.C. 7505a) and if such project will result in an airport receiving appropriate emission credits as described in section 47138.''.

(1) by striking ''and'' at the end of paragraph (4);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting ''; and''; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

''(6) in the case of a project for acquiring for use at a commercial service airport vehicles and ground support equipment owned by an airport that is not described in section 47102(3) and that include low-emission technology, if the total costs allowed for the project are not more than the incremental cost of equipping such vehicles or equipment with low-emission technology, as determined by the Secretary.''.

(e) LOW-EMISSION TECHNOLOGY EQUIPMENT.—Section 47102 (as amended by section 501 of this Act) is further amended by inserting after paragraph (10) the following:

''(11) 'low-emission technology' means technology for vehicles and equipment whose emission performance is the best achievable under emission standards established by the Environmental Protection Agency and that relies exclusively on alternative fuels that are substantially non-petroleum based, as defined by the Department of Energy, but not excluding hybrid systems or natural gas powered vehicles.''.

(f) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The analysis of subchapter I of chapter 471 is amended by adding at the end the following:

''47138. Emission credits for air quality projects.
''47139. Airport ground support equipment emissions retrofit pilot program.''.

SEC. 522. COMPATIBLE LAND USE PLANNING AND PROJECTS BY STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 471 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 47140. Compatible land use planning and projects by State and local governments

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation may make grants from amounts set aside under section 47117(e)(1)(A) to States and units of local government for land use compatibility plans or projects resulting from those plans for the purposes of making the use of land areas around large hub airports and medium hub airports compatible with aircraft operations if—

''(1) the airport operator has not submitted a noise compatibility program to the Secretary under section 47504 or has not updated such program within the past 10 years; and

''(2) the land use plan meets the requirements of this section and any project resulting from the plan meets such requirements.

''(b) ELIGIBILITY.—In order to receive a grant under this section, a State or unit of local government must—

''(1) have the authority to plan and adopt land use control measures, including zoning, in the planning area in and around a large or medium hub airport;

''(2) provide written assurance to the Secretary that it will work with the affected airport to identify and adopt such measures; and

''(3) provide written assurance to the Secretary that it will achieve, to the maximum extent possible, compatible land uses consistent with Federal land use compatibility criteria under section 47502(3) and that those compatible land uses will be maintained.

''(c) ASSURANCES.—The Secretary shall require a State or unit of local government to which a grant may be awarded under this section for a land use plan or a project resulting from such a plan to provide—

''(1) assurances satisfactory to the Secretary that the plan—

''(A) is reasonably consistent with the goal of reducing existing noncompatible land uses and preventing the introduction of additional noncompatible land uses;

''(B) addresses ways to achieve and maintain compatible land uses, including zoning, building codes, and any other projects under section 47504(a)(2) that are within the authority of the State or unit of local government to implement;

''(C) uses noise contours provided by the airport operator that are consistent with the airport operation and planning, including any noise abatement measures adopted by the airport operator as part of its own noise mitigation efforts;

''(D) does not duplicate, and is not inconsistent with, the airport operator's noise compatibility measures for the same area; and

''(E) has received concurrence by the airport operator prior to adoption by the State or unit of local government; and

''(2) such other assurances as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out this section.

''(d) GUIDELINES.—The Secretary shall establish guidelines to administer this section in accordance with the purposes and conditions described in this section. The Secretary may require the State or unit of local government to which a grant may be awarded under this section to provide progress reports and other information as the Secretary determines to be necessary to carry out this section.

''(e) ELIGIBLE PROJECTS.—The Secretary may approve a grant under this section to a State or unit of local government for a land use compatibility project only if the Secretary is satisfied that the project is consistent with the guidelines established by the Secretary under this section, that the State or unit of local government has provided the assurances required by this section, that the Secretary has received evidence that the State or unit of local government has implemented (or has made provision to implement) those elements of the plan that are not eligible for Federal financial assistance, and that the project is not inconsistent with Federal standards.

''(f) SUNSET.—This section shall not be in effect after September 30, 2007.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis of subchapter I of chapter 471 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''47140. Compatible land use planning and projects by State and local governments.''.

SEC. 523. PROHIBITION ON REQUIRING AIRPORTS TO PROVIDE RENT-FREE SPACE FOR FEDERAL AVIATION ADMINISTRATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter I of chapter 471 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 47141. Prohibition on rent-free space requirements for Federal Aviation Administration

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Transportation may not require an airport sponsor to provide to the Federal Aviation Administration, without compensation, space in a building owned by the sponsor and costs associated with such space for building construction, maintenance, utilities, and other expenses.

''(b) NEGOTIATED AGREEMENTS.—Subsection (a) does not prohibit—

''(1) the negotiation of agreements between the Secretary and an airport sponsor to provide building construction, maintenance, utilities and expenses, or space in airport sponsor-owned buildings to the Federal Aviation Administration without cost or at below-market rates; or

''(2) the Secretary of Transportation from requiring airport sponsors to provide land without cost to the Federal Aviation Administration for air traffic control facilities.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter I of chapter 471 is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''47141. Prohibition on rent-free space requirements for Federal Aviation Administration.''.

SEC. 524. MIDWAY ISLAND AIRPORT.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that the continued operation of the Midway Island Airport in accordance with the standards of the Federal Aviation Administration applicable to commercial airports is critical to the safety of commercial, military, and general aviation in the mid-Pacific Ocean region.

(b) MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING ON SALE OF AIRCRAFT FUEL.—The Secretary of Transportation shall enter into a memorandum of understanding with the Secretaries of Defense, Interior, and Homeland Security to facilitate the sale of aircraft fuel on Midway Island at a price that will generate sufficient revenue to improve the ability of the airport to operate on a self-sustaining basis in accordance with the standards of the Federal Aviation Administration applicable to commercial airports. The memorandum shall also address the long-range potential of promoting tourism as a means to generate revenue to operate the airport.

(c) TRANSFER OF NAVIGATION AIDS AT MIDWAY ISLAND AIRPORT.—The Midway Island Airport may transfer, without consideration, to the Administrator the navigation aids at the airport. The Administrator shall accept the navigation aids and operate and maintain the navigation aids under criteria of the Administrator.

(d) FUNDING TO THE SECRETARY OF INTERIOR FOR MIDWAY ISLAND AIRPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 481 is amended by adding at the end the following:

''§ 48114. Funding to the Secretary of Interior for Midway Island Airport

''The following amounts shall be available (and shall remain available until expended) to the Secretary of Interior, out of the Airport and Airway Trust Fund established under section 9502 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9502), for airport capital projects at the Midway Island Airport:

''(1) $750,000 for fiscal year 2004.

''(2) $2,500,000 for fiscal year 2005.

''(3) $1,000,000 for fiscal year 2006.

''(4) $1,000,000 for fiscal year 2007.''.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 481 is amended by adding at the end the following:

''48114. Funding to the Secretary of Interior for Midway Island Airport.''.

TITLE VI—EXTENSION OF AIRPORT AND AIRWAY TRUST FUND EXPENDITURE AUTHORITY

SEC. 601. EXTENSION OF EXPENDITURE AUTHORITY.

Paragraph (1) of section 9502(d) of the Internal revenue Code of 1986 (relating to expenditures from Airport and Airway Trust Fund) is amended—

(1) by striking ''October 1, 2003'' and inserting ''October 1, 2007'', and

(2) by inserting ''or the flight 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act'' before the semicolon at the end of subparagraph (A).

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment to the committee amendment is in order except those printed in part B of the report. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report or pursuant to the previous order of the House, by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

Pursuant to the previous order of the House, it is now in order to consider amendment No. 5 printed in part B of House Report 108–146.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MR. MANZULLO

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 5 offered by Mr. MANZULLO:

At the end of title V of the bill, add the following new section (and conform the table of contents accordingly):

SEC. 525. REPORT ON WAIVERS OF PREFERENCE FOR BUYING GOODS PRODUCED IN THE UNITED STATES.

Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall submit to Congress a report on the waiver contained in section 50101(b) of title 49, United States Code (relating to buying goods produced in the United States). The report shall, at a minimum, include—

(1) a list of all waivers granted pursuant to that section since the date of enactment of that section; and

(2) for each such waiver—

(A) the specific authority under such section 50101(b) for granting the waiver; and

(B) the rationale for granting the waiver.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 265, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. The American economy is in the midst of a manufacturing crisis. Over the past 3 years, we have lost 2.6 million jobs. The latest Bureau of Labor Statistics reports show that for 34 straight months, we have had a coring out of our manufacturing base, losing 53,000 manufacturing jobs each month. These jobs are necessary, many of them, to help out with our defense industrial base. They include such basic products as tools, dies and molds.

In 1981, Rockford, Illinois, the largest city in the congressional district I represent, led the Nation with unemployment at 24.9 percent. Today it is around 11 percent. I do not want to see a recurrence of 1981. We are in danger of seeing our industrial base irreparably harmed. Unlike the past when factories were closed during an economic downturn but reopened when times improved, today a too frequent outcome is the permanent closure of a factory. The jobs leave forever. The young people entering the workforce do not have a manufacturing career choice left open to them. My own constituents have been impacted by the bankruptcy of several manufacturers since this downturn began.

Mr. Chairman, the bleeding continues. Since 1933, the Buy American Act has safeguarded the interests of American manufacturers by requiring the Federal Government to purchase domestically manufactured products for government usage. To qualify as a domestic product, the content cost of the components must be ''substantially all'' produced in America. Most people would say that term ''substantially all'' means 80 to 90 percent or even 99 percent. However, the regulators at the Federal Government say ''substantially all'' means only 50 percent. I am glad to say that at the Federal Aviation Administration, ''substantially all'' is defined as 60 percent for the acquisition of steel or manufactured goods according to the 1995 acquisition regulations which the FAA authorized back then.

I am disturbed, however, at the instance of waivers allowed by the FAA. Civil aircraft and aircraft components purchased by the FAA are not subject to the Buy American Act due to the provisions of the Agreement of Trade on Civil Aircraft negotiated by the U.S. Trade Representative. Currently the FAA is advertising on its Web site a requirement for an airborne research and development multi-engine jet aircraft at $14.9 million that could be bought with U.S. taxpayers' dollars from foreign countries at a time when tens of thousands of air and space workers in this country are unemployed.

It has been 8 years since the Secretary of Transportation was last required to report to Congress on procurements that were not domestic products. This amendment will require a report that will bring us current information on this subject. We do not even know how many aircraft or other products the FAA is procuring each year from foreign countries because of waivers to the Buy American Act. We are asking that this Congress, that this House of Representatives adopt this amendment to help stop the hemorrhaging of the loss of the American base in this country.

I urge my colleagues to support this commonsense amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I claim the time in opposition but not to speak in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I think this is a very worthy undertaking. As the gentleman points out, we have hollowed out so much of American manufacturing capability, but we have for years touted the fact that our leadership in aviation and aerospace, that this would be one of the areas where we would continue to dominate the world. To have the prospect of agencies of the Federal Government using taxpayer resources to outsource to foreign vendors in this very critical sector, a sector which in the case of at least one major manufacturer is beleaguered by unfair foreign competition, in fact, something we heard repeated on a trip of the Subcommittee on Aviation for the engine manufacturers and others, where subsidies and development grants that never have to be paid back and all sorts of things are made available to them that are not made available to American manufacturers. I think the audit at this time is extraordinarily worthy. I really thank him for bringing this issue before the Congress.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DEFAZIO. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I thank the gentleman for offering the amendment.

I just want to raise a cautionary note, that in doing so we do not scare business away from the United States from foreign manufacturers. I am very strong on Buy America, I insist on it in the Federal aid highway program on steel, but there was a time in which 70 percent of the value and the parts of Airbus aircraft were manufactured in the United States.

As we got into the wars over agriculture with the European community, the Airbus consortium pulled back from its placing of business in the United States, and we have lost ground in the manufacturing of Airbus parts in the United States, and the same is occurring in other areas.

I just want to be sure in the process we are not scaring away business from the United States while legitimately protecting our own interests. I know the gentleman from Illinois has those concerns at heart.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment provides simply for a study of what has taken place in the past. It changes no law.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Chairman MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for offering this amendment, and I rise in strong support of it.

I think we need to do everything possible to protect the intent of our Buy America requirements, and I think the gentleman's amendment does exactly that. In the aviation industry, unfortunately, we are facing tremendous loss in jobs, employment, and manufacturing. We have lost about half of the large aircraft manufacturing, we produce no regional jets in the United States, and I think the very least we can do is have a Buy America provision that has teeth, that has provisions that will ensure that our manufactured goods are respected by the mandates set down by Congress to Buy America. So I strongly support the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time having expired, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) will be postponed.

It is now in order to consider amendment No. 1 printed in part B of House Report No. 108–146.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. MICA

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

(2) by inserting a comma after ''regularly scheduled charter air transportation''; and

(3) by striking ''flight unless such air transportation'' and all that follows through the period at the end and inserting the following: ''flight, to or from an airport that—

''(A) does not have an airport operating certificate issued under part 139 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (or any subsequent similar regulation); or

''(B) has an airport operating certificate issued under part 139 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations (or any subsequent similar regulation) if the airport—

''(i) is a reliever airport (as defined in section 47102) and is designated as such in the national plan of integrated airports maintained under section 47103; and

''(ii) is located within 20 nautical miles (22 statute miles) of 3 or more airports that annually account for at least 1 percent of the total United States passenger enplanements and at least 2 of which are operated by the sponsor of the reliever airport.''.

(b) WAIVERS.—Section 41104(b) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(4) WAIVERS.—The Secretary may waive the application of paragraph (1)(B) in cases in which the Secretary determines that the public interest so requires.''.

SEC. 444. IMPLEMENTATION OF CHAPTER 4 NOISE STANDARDS.

Not later than July 1, 2004, the Secretary of Transportation shall issue regulations to implement Chapter 4 noise standards, consistent with the recommendations adopted by the International Civil Aviation Organization.

SEC. 445. CREW TRAINING.

Section 44918 is amended to read as follows:

''§ 44918. Crew training

''(a) BASIC SECURITY TRAINING.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Each air carrier providing scheduled passenger air transportation shall carry out a training program for flight and cabin crew members to prepare the crew members for potential threat conditions.

''(2) PROGRAM ELEMENTS.—An air carrier training program under this subsection shall include, at a minimum, elements that address each of the following:

''(A) Recognizing suspicious activities and determining the seriousness of any occurrence.

''(B) Crew communication and coordination.

''(C) The proper commands to give passengers and attackers.

''(D) Appropriate responses to defend oneself.

''(E) Use of protective devices assigned to crew members (to the extent such devices are required by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration or the Under Secretary for Border and Transportation Security of the Department of Homeland Security).

''(F) Psychology of terrorists to cope with hijacker behavior and passenger responses.

''(G) Situational training exercises regarding various threat conditions.

''(H) Flight deck procedures or aircraft maneuvers to defend the aircraft and cabin crew responses to such procedures and maneuvers.

''(I) The proper conduct of a cabin search.

''(J) Any other subject matter considered appropriate by the Under Secretary.

''(3) APPROVAL.—An air carrier training program under this subsection shall be subject to approval by the Under Secretary.

''(4) MINIMUM STANDARDS.—Not later than one year after the date of enactment of the Flight 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act, the Under Secretary shall establish minimum standards for the training provided under this subsection and for recurrent training.

''(5) EXISTING PROGRAMS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (3), any training program of an air carrier to prepare flight and cabin crew members for potential threat conditions that was approved by the Administrator or the Under Secretary before the date of enactment of the Flight 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act may continue in effect until disapproved or ordered modified by the Under Secretary.

''(6) MONITORING.—The Under Secretary, in consultation with the Administrator, shall monitor air carrier training programs under this subsection and periodically shall review an air carrier's training program to ensure that the program is adequately preparing crew members for potential threat conditions. In determining when an air carrier's training program should be reviewed under this paragraph, the Under Secretary shall consider complaints from crew members. The Under Secretary shall ensure that employees responsible for monitoring the training programs have the necessary resources and knowledge.

''(7) UPDATES.—The Under Secretary, in consultation with the Administrator, shall order air carriers to modify training programs under this subsection to reflect new or different security threats.

''(b) ADVANCED SELF DEFENSE TRAINING.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than one year after the date of enactment of the Flight 100—Century of Aviation Reauthorization Act, the Under Secretary shall develop and provide a voluntary training program for flight and cabin crew members of air carriers providing scheduled passenger air transportation.

''(2) PROGRAM ELEMENTS.—The training program under this subsection shall include both classroom and effective hands-on training in the following elements of self-defense:

''(A) Deterring a passenger who might present a threat.

''(B) Advanced control, striking, and restraint techniques.

''(C) Training to defend oneself against edged or contact weapons.

''(D) Methods to subdue and restrain an attacker.

''(E) Use of available items aboard the aircraft for self-defense.

''(F) Appropriate and effective responses to defend oneself, including the use of force against an attacker.

''(G) Explosive device recognition.

''(H) Any other element of training that the Under Secretary considers appropriate.

''(3) PARTICIPATION NOT REQUIRED.—A crew member shall not be required to participate in the training program under this subsection.

''(4) COMPENSATION.—Neither the Federal Government nor an air carrier shall be required to compensate a crew member for participating in the training program under this subsection.

''(5) FEES.—A crew member shall not be required to pay a fee for the training program under this subsection.

''(6) CONSULTATION.—In developing the training program under this subsection, the Under Secretary shall consult with law enforcement personnel and security experts who have expertise in self-defense training, terrorism experts, representatives of air carriers, the director of self-defense training in the Federal Air Marshals Service, flight attendants, labor organizations representing flight attendants, and educational institutions offering law enforcement training programs.

''(7) DESIGNATION OF TSA OFFICIAL.—The Under Secretary shall designate an official in the Transportation Security Administration to be responsible for implementing the training program under this subsection. The official shall consult with air carriers and labor organizations representing crew members before implementing the program to ensure that it is appropriate for situations that may arise on board an aircraft during a flight.

''(c) LIMITATION.—Actions by crew members under this section shall be subject to the provisions of section 44903(k).''.

SEC. 446. REVIEW OF COMPENSATION CRITERIA.

Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall review the criteria used by the Air Transportation Stabilization Board to compensate air carriers following the terrorist attack of September 11, 2001, with a particular focus on whether it is appropriate to compensate air carriers for the decrease in value of their aircraft after September 11th.

SEC. 447. REVIEW OF CERTAIN AIRCRAFT OPERATIONS IN ALASKA.

Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall report to Congress on whether, in light of the demands of business within Alaska, it would be appropriate to permit an aircraft to be operated under part 91 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, where common carriage is not involved but (1) the operator of the aircraft organizes an entity where the only purpose of such entity is to provide transportation by air of persons and property to related business entities, individuals, and employees of such entities, and (2) the charge for such transportation does not to exceed the cost of owning, operating, and maintaining the aircraft.

SEC. 526. STATUS REVIEW OF MARSHALL ISLANDS AIRPORT.

Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Transportation shall review the status of the airport on the Marshall Islands and report to Congress on whether it is appropriate and necessary for that airport to receive grants under the airport improvement program.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 265, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and a Member opposed each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this manager's amendment makes some relatively modest changes to the legislation before us. Most of the changes are technical in nature and address issues that were raised after the committee approved the legislation in May.

One significant change is the provision relating to crew training, and I want to elaborate a bit on that. Our current law provides and requires that airlines provide hands-on self-defense training to flight attendants to help them deal with a terrorist threat.

The amendment that we have makes clear that this training is voluntary and that flight attendants who choose to take it will do so on their own time. The airlines will not be required to pay them while they are taking this training. The Transportation Security Administration, not the airlines, will be providing the training. Both the flight attendants and airlines have agreed to this particular provision.

The airlines will still have to provide other nonphysical security training for flight attendants. Airlines provide that training now, and under this bill they could continue to provide the same training.

The amendment requires TSA to set minimum standards for flight attendant training, but deletes the provision in current law requiring the Transportation Security Administration to set the minimum number of hours for this particular type of training. Rather, the Transportation Security Administration should set proficiency standards and leave it to the airlines as to how many hours of training it will take to reach that level of proficiency.

In addition to the crew training provision, this amendment makes a number of improvements to the bill. These improvements include the following:

First, allowing the Department of Transportation to request information from the Department of Homeland Security in preparing its monthly report on passenger complaints about screening.

Next, directing the FAA to publish its policy on the use of passenger facility charge revenue for ground access projects.

Allowing 76-seat regional jets to qualify for the commuter aircraft slots for Reagan National Airport.

Additionally, allowing DOT to increase the subsidy to a commuter serving a small community if that commuter is experiencing significantly increased costs.

Another provision is allowing an airline to begin service to a small community that previously had subsidized essential air service without being subject to the many regulatory requirements of the Essential Air Service program.

An additional provision is revising the provision requiring aircraft manufacturers to make maintenance manuals available to aircraft repair stations in order to accommodate concerns expressed by the manufacturers.

Also we have a provision directing GAO to study how airlines were compensated after 9–11, especially whether they should be compensated for the devaluation of their aircraft.

A further provision directs FAA to study whether certain aircraft operations in Alaska can be performed under part 91 of FAA rules.

An additional provision allows current or former military airports designated by FAA to use AIP money for the reimbursement of a hangar.

Another provision allows up to 12 large airports to use AIP money for interest payments on debts. Small airports can already do this.

Another provision requires large airports seeking to build a runway to make their master plan available to the metropolitan planning organization in the area where the airport is located.

Finally, we have a provision directing DOT to report on whether it is appropriate and necessary for the airport in the Marshall Islands to receive grants under the Airport Improvement Program.

Mr. Chairman, this is a good, bipartisan amendment. We have taken into consideration concerns and requests from many Members, and I believe that this manager's amendment improves on an already good piece of legislation. I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Does any Member seek recognition in opposition to the amendment?

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim the time in opposition, despite the fact I do not oppose the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman from Oregon is recognized.

There was no objection.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the Chair of the Subcommittee on Aviation has done good work with this. A number of Members have come forward since the bill was finalized in committee and raised concerns which have merit, as have other concerns been raised by outside groups, for instance, the flight attendants and others.

So we have here a clarification on the training of the flight attendants, which we mandated earlier, the security legislation. We have here language that would require at least some minimal cooperation and coordination with the metropolitan planning organizations, making certain that they are informed of plans and future plans of airports that might have impact on communities greater than that which currently exist.

To get some clarification, a number of concerns have been raised regarding passenger facility charges and the standards which are being applied by the FAA, and it certainly would be of great benefit to consolidate and publish those requirements so that meritorious projects across the United States can move forward to better enhance the utilization of our airports and their capacity.

Then there was the 76–C regional jet provision for National Airport, again something raised later on; fairly technical, but actually quite practical and meritorious.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I concur in the remarks of the ranking member of the subcommittee. I would add that the manager's amendment does include two very important provisions offered by the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) to promote intermodalism.

The first requires airports that undertake major construction projects to share their planes with MPOs, and the second requires the FAA to clarify, consolidate, and publish its current policy for PFC for ground transportation projects that provide access to airports. These are long-standing issues that we attempted to deal with going back to the beginning of the PFC era in 1990, and this a very important clarification.

Just to expand on the point raised by the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO), the flight attendants self-defense training provision will require carriers to provide all flight attendants with the basic security training program, and those who opt for more advanced training to do so under the auspices of the TSA.

There is a very interesting provision borrowed from our experience in the Federal Aid to Highway program that allows AIP funds to pay interest on debt incurred for AIP-eligible projects. We will expand under this manager's amendment that provision from select small airports to a very limited number of larger airports. I think that is indeed a very good measure that will accelerate development of airport capacity where we urgently need it.

Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the willingness of the gentleman to work with us to include those provisions.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I enthusiastically support the manager's amendment, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, again I urge passage of the manager's amendment. I think we have attempted our level best to accommodate a number of requests from Members, particularly since the legislation was passed out of committee. I think the best amendments with the best possible language and compromises that could be worked out have been incorporated into this manager's amendment. We still will work with others as the legislation moves forward with conference.

Again, I urge the adoption of this comprehensive manager's amendment that is also a bipartisan piece of work.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, if I could, I ask unanimous consent to reclaim a portion of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Oregon and thank the chairman. I want to thank the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), and the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) for a provision in this bill which I think is very important.

I represent three general aviation airports that are within the 15-mile radius of the White House. As a result, they were shut down. They were not shut down because they were not operating safely and fairly; they were shut down because it was the perception and the belief of those in charge of our national security that they posed a risk.

Obviously, they are all owned privately. They are not public airports. As a result, there was a very substantial adverse financial impact to many people, both who own the airports and who had concessions at the airports.

There is authorized in this bill $100 million for the purpose of, both at National and other surrounding airports, not only here but throughout the country, those who suffered damage as a result of 9–11 in a very real financial sense, for them to be not made whole, because that would be impossible at this point in time, but to be compensated for the losses they sustained.

I want to thank the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO), the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for their leadership, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) in getting this authorization effected. I appreciate it. I know they appreciate it. It is the right thing to do.

I talked to Sean O'Keefe, of course, who now heads NASA, but was deputy director of OMB at the time of 9–11. He said he thought we ought to do this. It has taken us some time to get it done. I appreciate the leadership shown by the committee to effect this. I enthusiastically support the bill and this provision.

In the aftermath of the September 11 terrorist attacks, the Federal Aviation Administration issued temporary flight restrictions on the small aircraft of general aviation as part of its effort to make commercial air travel safer and to restore the public's confidence in the security of our Nation's airways and airports.

Unfortunately, while those restrictions were lifted for general aviation in the rest of the country, small airports in the Washington metropolitan area have continued to languish under binding restrictions on their operations. In fact, the only airports in the country that are closed to incoming and outgoing general aviation are Reagan National and the three D.C. area general aviation airports. As a result, these small airports, specifically College Park Airport, Potomac Airfield, and Washington Executive, are on the brink of financial ruin. These airports have been forced to nearly cease their operations, effectively, endangering the livelihood of their employees who have lost income and jobs and airport owners who have lost income and jobs and airport owners who have lost long-time customers and revenue. In speaking with airport managers at all three of these airports, I have heard their disturbing reports on loss of operations, reductions in fuel sales, and loss of revenue since these flight restrictions were put in place.

Lee Schiek, manager of the College Park Airport, reported earlier this year that flights in and out of College Park plummeted from about 1,800 per month before September 11 to 164 per month at the beginning of 2003, and 55 of the airport's 87 based aircraft have left for other airports.

There is no doubt that we must stem this tide of economic decline for general aviation. This industry is a proven, integral part of the nation's economy, providing vital services and economic stability to individuals, families, churches, hospitals, colleges, industry, small businesses, and communities. Aviation transportation in Maryland is a $1.3 billion industry, an industry too large and too important to be hobbled any further in an already weak economy.

Today, the House of Representatives passed the FAA reauthorization bill that will provide $100 million to general aviation to help alleviate the cost incurred in meeting security requirements and the revenue lost because of the interruption in operations.

The $100 million grant gives the Congress an opportunity to do for general aviation, small airports, and small business, and the independent pilot what we did for the airlines, large airports, and the insurance industry in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks. This shows that we recognize the sacrifice that general aviation has made in the effort to make us more secure. Let's not forget: the Federal Government imposed the restrictions on general aviation, and the Federal Government should do its part to help ease the financial burden those restrictions have caused. This is a fair restitution that will start the process of a return to financial health of general aviation.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in part B of House Report 108–146.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. NORTON

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendment No. 2.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

(g) REMOVAL OF CERTAIN LIMITATIONS ON METROPOLITAN WASHINGTON AIRPORTS AUTHORITY.—Section 49108 and the item relating to such section in the analysis of chapter 491 are repealed.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 265, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I think I have an amendment, and this is the way to start off, that I think the entire House can support. The entire region supports this amendment on a bipartisan basis. I think Members are going to be hearing from the gentlemen from Virginia, Mr. WOLF and Mr. DAVIS, who had wanted to speak to it.

It is noncontroversial because I think Members do not want to put any airport authority at a disadvantage. Section 49–108 requires only the Metropolitan Washington Airport Authority to come back to Congress before receiving airport improvement funds and facility fees. These are always guaranteed, once appropriated.

Many know that Dulles has a $2.4 billion construction project underway now as we go in and out. This provision to come back to Congress in September of 2004 puts at risk the funds to continue with that operation.

The airport authority has an excellent bond rating and saves millions of dollars because of its bond rating, but the bond markets could read the unique treatment of this region negatively to mean that there is a risk of interruption of construction in progress. In fact, there has been before, although not for this reason. For other reasons there has been such a risk.

The reason that risk would be seen is because Congress forces this airport authority in this region to return and have authorized what other airports get as a guaranteed matter.

All agree that the Washington airport authority has done an outstanding job of operating and improving our airports. There will be multiple opportunities for Congress to have oversight over the Metropolitan Washington Airport Authority because we own the land, and therefore, at will, Congress can call back the airport authority.

We are in this FAA reauthorization bill, and we will be here, therefore, every few years. This is a win-win. By voting for my amendment Congress gets its oversight, and there is no interruption of work in progress at Dulles because of doubts planted by section 49–108 about congressional intention to release funds guaranteed to other jurisdictions.

I ask that my amendment be passed.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I claim time in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) is recognized in opposition.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I do have some questions about this amendment. I think we are going to probably acquiesce to the amendment, but Ronald Reagan National Airport and Dulles International Airport are unique airports. They are the only federally owned commercial passenger airports in the country. They were federally chartered and are not subject to the oversight, as I understand it, of the Governor of Virginia.

This amendment gives the Secretary of Transportation permanent authority to provide grants to the Washington Metropolitan Airport Authority. By doing so, it removes in some ways, Congress' responsibility and ability to make periodic reviews of the airport authority's operations.

This is a unique situation. We owe it to our Nation's taxpayers to fulfill our oversight responsibilities, and sometimes Congress needs to be reminded legislatively to do so. This amendment will change that dramatically.

I have great reservations about this amendment, and I urge my colleagues to look at this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF), who has an opposing opinion.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Norton amendment. I would ask all Members to support it.

This airport authority, I was involved, as was the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), Mr. Mineta, and a number of us, the gentlemen from Virginia, Mr. MORAN and Mr. DAVIS, in putting this together. They have done an outstanding job. Those airports were in the 19th century when they took it over. Dulles has expanded and has first-class service. If we look at National Airport now with the parking and everything else, they have really done a great job.

I would urge the House to respect the local airports authority, which has proven I think, without doubt, it can successfully operate both of these airports. I would urge them to support the Norton amendment. I would say if Members bring this back to their own hometown, just as they would not want Congress dictating how to run Members' local airports, we really do not want the Congress to tell them how to run it because they have done an outstanding job.

With that, I would urge that Members support the Norton amendment. I strongly support it. I appreciate the efforts of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS) with regard to that.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong support of the Norton amendment which would repeal the requirement that the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority (MWAA) must come to Congress before September 30, 2004, to ensure that the local airports can continue to receive development project grants and impose a passenger facility fee.

I was part of the bipartisan coalition in 1987 which successfully secured the passage of legislation signed by President Reagan which transferred both Reagan National and Dulles International from Federal control to the local airports authority. Because of that change to local control, both airports today are success stories.

Passenger activity at National and Dulles Airports has nearly doubled to 31 million passengers in 2002. A massive capital development program at both airports has totaled well over $3 billion. Reagan National Airport was modernized in 1997 with a new terminal building including major improvements to airport traffic management and Metro system connections.

At Dulles, there are new concourses and the airport's first parking garages, and under way is a $3.2 billion capital improvement project. In tandem with the airport's growth, the Smithsonian Institution will open its new Air and Space Museum annex later this year located at Dulles Airport.

These airports have proven they are quality facilities serving not only the people in the Washington area, but air travelers across the Nation and around the world.

There is simply no reason for the airports to be called to Congress to prove their worthiness. What other airports in the country have to make such a command performance? None. Zero.

Congress got out of the airports business in 1987. It's time to stop micro-managing Reagan National and Dulles.

I also want to say how disappointed I am that Mr. MORAN was foreclosed by the rule from offering his amendment on the slots issue at Reagan National.

A delicate balance exists between flight operations at Dulles and Reagan. Increased take offs and landings at Reagan National and more flights beyond the 1,250-mile perimeter hurt Dulles, where longer haul flights originate. Those flight changes also mean coping with more noise for citizens living in the Washington area.

I would urge my colleagues to respect the local airports authority, which has proven it can successfully operate the Washington area airports, and support the Norton amendment.

Just as you would not want Congress dictating how to run your local airport, I would ask you to let the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority do its job in operating Reagan National and Dulles without congressional interference.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I particularly appreciate the support of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF). He is the transportation expert in this region, and he is, I think, the acknowledged transportation expert in this House.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia, Ms. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON, which would repeal a section of the law that requires the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority (MWAA) to obtain special legislation to be eligible to receive airport project grants and to impose passenger facility fees. No other airport is required to seek such congressional approval. While this procedure may have been justified in the early days of MWAA, it has outlived its usefulness.

Until 1986, the National and Dulles airports were run by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). When the airports were transferred to a regional authority in 1986, there were concerns that the regional authority would be unduly influenced by local interests, and not carry out federal objectives for the airports serving our Nation's Capital. To ensure that Federal concerns were considered, the 1986 legislation established Federal oversight over MWAA's activities, including Federal representation on its Board of Directors, special requirements in MWAA's lease agreement with the Department of Transportation, and requirements for audits of MWAA by the General Accounting Office (GAO).

In 1996, Congress further strengthened its oversight by requiring that new legislation would have to be passed for MWAA to be elible for AIP grants or PFCs, after October 1, 2001. The FAA reauthorization act of 2000, known as AIR–21, continued MWAA's eligibility, but required new legislation for eligibility after October 1, 2004. These provisions are unique to MWAA; no other airports operator has such restrictions on its eligibility for funding.

It is my understanding that although MWAA enjoys an excellent bond rating, the fact that they must continually come to Congress to receive grant monies or charge a PFC has caused concerns in the bond community. Continuing to place MWAA's funds in a different status from those of other airports could negatively affect its current high bond rating, resulting in higher interest charges, and possibly higher rents and fees at the airports.

I believe that MWAA has done an outstanding job in developing National and Dulles Airports, carrying out the objectives of the 1986 legislation. We no longer need to treat MWAA differently than all other airport authorities. The Federal directors on MWAA's Board, this Committee's continuing oversight, and GAO audits will ensure that Federal interest in the airports continue to be respected.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON), and the ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), for supporting this amendment.

The reason why the gentlewoman and I offered this amendment is that we really have an unfair provision here that, as the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) said, does not apply to any other airport authority. It says that we cannot receive in the Washington area any new airport improvement grants or new passenger facility charges until we come back to the Congress.

This is in violation, really, of a 1986 agreement that then Mrs. DOLE, ELIZABETH DOLE, who was Secretary of Transportation, made with the Washington region. The words said that the airport authority, the Metropolitan Washington Airport Authority, will have ''full power and dominion over, and complete discretion in, operation and development of the Airports.''

In return, Virginia, D.C., and Maryland agreed to accept operational control of the airports and raise the money necessary to modernize them. We fulfilled our part of the bargain. We have two terrific airports. We funded them and we operate them. All we are asking is that we be treated like every other airport, and that we not have to come back and get this special authority to be able to continue doing what we, under law, are doing and doing very well.

The expansion of slots is micromanaging an airport by the Federal Government that really is in contradiction to the agreement. Likewise, it is designating some of those slots to go beyond the 1,250-mile perimeter rule.

National Airport was not built to accommodate transcontinental flights. It was built for short-haul flights to serve midsized cities. Ultimately, this is going to harm those midsized cities up and down the east coast, basically east of the Mississippi River. It is going to hurt their economy. It also jeopardizes the economy, the economic viability, of Dulles Airport, which was built to handle transcontinental flights.

If we start sending those flights to National, even though it is more convenient to get to National, it really hurts Dulles. It is going to hurt the economy, not just for this region, but of the Nation.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS).

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS) is recognized for 1½ minutes.

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friends for yielding time to me.

As my friends know, this is a very important economic issue to those in Washington, Virginia, and the entire metropolitan area as well. We are the only airport in the country that faces these restrictions over their money.

If we want to continue the multibillion-dollar redevelopment efforts at Dulles Airport, these are the kinds of restrictions that can knock that out the window. That hurts flights coming into the Washington area. It does not help them at all. However well-intentioned this is with trying to keep congressional oversight, it can actually have a detrimental effect on this.

Congress has been reluctant to exercise that oversight. We would not have had the new terminal at Reagan National or at Dulles, had the Federal Government remained in charge of this. We have done this through some grants from the government, but through a lot of local taxes as well. That has improved air service to this region.

We also play a very dangerous game with the economic balance between the different airlines that have paid for slots when we start holding this up to have Federal approval of these. I think this is not warranted in any way, shape, or form.

I think the gentlewoman's aim is absolutely correct. I support it wholeheartedly. The 2.4 billion expansion that is currently underway is jeopardized should this amendment go down, or should we somehow kick in the authority that is sought that is now, under the manager's amendment, postponed to 2007; but should that kick in, that money would be at risk should there be any kind of congressional deadlock on Federal grants. That would be unusually detrimental.

Let us lift this restriction entirely. Congress can always step back in should there be a reason, but I think the gentlewoman's amendment is required at this point. I urge its adoption.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard from some outstanding Members of Congress who represent the greater Washington area and the Northern Virginia area. They have been strong advocates for Ronald Reagan National Airport. They have done a great job in looking after that national asset.

It truly is unique. It is the only airport, that and Dulles, that are owned by the Federal Government. This is a protection for the taxpayers, and it is good to have required periodic review and oversight.

I do have questions about the amendment, but I do believe that they have the support to pass the amendment, so I express that concern.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in part B of House Report 108–146.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MR. PETERSON OF PENNSYLVANIA

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendment No. 3.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Page 81, strike lines 18 through 22.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 265, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would first like to compliment the chairman and the ranking member for, I think, putting together an exceptional bill. I want to thank them for working with us on this amendment that we think will improve the bill.

I am glad to be joined by the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) to offer an amendment that will remove the copayment for a number of the smallest airports who will be receiving essential air service, saving them from making a copayment.

We understand the logic, but at the present time we all know that our airlines are in trouble. We have bailed them out with $18 billion trying to keep them solvent. We know airports are struggling. We know the commuter services are struggling even more because a lot of the commuter services got no portion of that bailout. We know that small commuter airports are fighting for their economic lives, and often in communities that are fighting for their economic lives.

Just for example, the Venango Regional Airport is trying to raise $6,000 to market the services there and improve emplanements. If this amendment was not accepted, they would be paying $22,000 the first year, which I think would be much better used marketing, and on the fourth year would be paying $87,000.

It is important that we pass this amendment that allows these small regional airports to rebuild the services.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER), who wants to help support this bill.

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

I also want to congratulate the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), and the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) for what I consider an excellent bill.

As my colleagues said, I think this amendment will improve the bill. The intent of our amendment is to strike the language that imposes cost sharing of EAS funds on a select few small communities, rural community airports.

These communities today are struggling to meet their current financial situations brought about by a sluggish economy and an increased cost on homeland security. These air links for these communities are vital, vital for economic development, especially in rural America from which I hail.

Some would say that there are significant costs savings; but if you look at this relative to the overall bill, we have a $59 billion bill over 4 years, and this language would only save $7.5 million. Here in Washington that is small change; but in rural America that is significant, significant to these small and rural communities.

So I would like to thank the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG); the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA); the ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR); and the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) for accepting this amendment and supporting it. Once again, I congratulate them on a tremendous bill, a strong bill that is going to help all of America.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida is recognized for 5 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, again, I have some reservations and I think I have the responsibility as Chair of the subcommittee to raise those reservations about the amendment.

It is being put forth by three outstanding Members with very good intentions. They represent rural airports and are concerned about service and the contribution. Let me say, though, that this program goes back to 1970, late 1970s when we deregulated the airlines; and each year subsequently some of these communities have gotten this subsidization of service and some should use it, maybe some should not.

The nature of the aviation industry has changed dramatically, and service has changed dramatically around the country. And we are looking for ways to enhance that service, particularly to the small community. And you can find no stronger advocate than me in that regard.

The administration had proposed a 25 percent match; and as a compromise, we lowered that to some 10 percent. We also have a provision in here for a waiver for hardship cases. We do believe that some review is necessary and that there should not be an automatic disbursement from Washington without some equal match. And also I might add for the record that we have increased the authorization from some $65 million to $115 million. So I have concern about this.

My concern also is that in the long run we will have less money. We may have appropriators who may just take a pen and slash through the program, and we can possibly see harm done to a program that we all want to assist. So it is a good program.

I have concern about the amendment. I think that we are going to let this amendment pass and then hopefully it will be considered in conference. But I wanted to raise those points that I think are in the best interest of the essential air service for all of our smaller communities.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHUGH).

Mr. MCHUGH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

I want to thank my two colleagues and neighbors from the great State of Pennsylvania to the south for their hard work and leadership. It has been a pleasure to work with them.

I want to echo their statements in support of the subcommittee chairman, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), and the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) and the ranking member and other distinguished members. I think they have made this particular provision far better than the administration's original proposal.

I am very sensitive and cognizant of the concerns that we just heard the subcommittee chairman voice. And clearly before we take the next step, we want to make sure we understand the full ramifications of what we are doing.

Let me state a couple of things. First of all, I think there are few times in this Nation's history when this kind of initiative would be more inappropriate. Following September 11 the airline transportation industry was particularly challenged, and those in rural communities are especially under fiscal duress, 20 to 30 percent property tax increases in the making as we speak. Any added burden at this time, I think, would be particularly difficult to accommodate.

The second is the question that the subcommittee chairman raised with respect to accrued savings. In my district I think we have a perfect example of where we have three communities that are partnered together in a single package. If this 10 percent cost share were to prevail, the one community that is the most efficient, the most effective, and has most to it would be affected by that 10 percent and would likely withdraw and the end percent, I would respectfully suggest, would actually be a greater outlay in subsidy by the Federal Government rather than savings.

So I think the subcommittee chairman is right. We wanted to understand the full ramifications of this; and as we attempt to do that to conference and beyond, certainly, this is a very appropriate amendment. I thank the chairman and the subcommittee chairman and the ranking member for agreeing to it.

Mr. CHAIRMAN, It is imperative that the House approve the amendment we offer here today. The cost-sharing provisions in the bill put at risk the very foundation of the Essential Air Service program.

For those of us who have served in Congress for some time, it will be recalled that we have fought this battle to preserve air service to our rural communities many times. Each year, I join the fight to identify and enact funding to help maintain the program and, consequently, maintain air service to four—soon to be five—subsidized communities in Northern New York.

As many of you are experiencing in your own States, budget deficits are running rampant and New York is no different; our counties and localities are suffering no less. I fear it will be an insurmountable burden for cash-strapped local governments already coping with property tax hikes in the 20–30 percent range. It is simply asking too much. This program is vitally important to our economy in rural America and I believe it is particularly important to continue fighting to see that it is fully funded.

I have at least one community in the District I represent that is impacted by the cost-sharing provisions of this bill. Relying solely on mileage figures can be greatly misleading in determining the true distance and actual time when speaking about an area like Northern New York. Oftentimes snow can be found on the ground 8 months out of the year and the interstate highway that connects this EAS community and the small hub is all too frequently closed on a moment's notice due to service weather.

While the suggested purpose of the cost-sharing provisions is to reduce the cost of the overall program, I question whether that will truly be the ultimate result. In my State, three of my EAS communities are served by one contract with one airline—a triple hit, if you will. The airline is paid on sum of money for serving three communities. If one of these communities is required to cost share, and is unable to do so, it will be knocked out of the program. What, then, happens to the subsidy determination of the other communities. The community no longer eligible has the highest enplanements of the three and, theoretically, the lower costs. Will the airline then require higher subsidies from the Federal Government to serve the two remaining communities? If so, the objective of saving Federal money won't be realized.

I understand some believe that communities need to have this type of vested financial interest in the program so they will encourage usage of the service. I believe this, too, is an inaccurate representation. Rural EAS communities all across America already have a significant vested financial interest—through subsidization of their airport operations, capital investments, etc.

It is true the cost-sharing provisions are not a requirement and there is a waiver provision. But be assured the Department of Transportation will make every effort to implement it. Otherwise, why make it an option?

In closing, Mr. Chairman, let me say that I appreciate the Transportation Committee's commitment to the increase in the authorized funding level contained and to provide for an optional program that would allow interested communities to devise alternative transportation service for their residents, if they willingly choose to do so.

That having been said, we must not cut off communities like those in Northern New York that have come to depend on this service. But that is exactly what will happen if cost-sharing is implemented. It is a slippery slope that I respectively suggest we do not want to go down.

I strongly urge your support for, and passage of, the Peterson-McHugh-Shuster amendment to save the Essential Air Service program. The program is perhaps the singular most important asset to the economy recovery of our rural communities.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, how much time do I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). The gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) has 2½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I do have some concerns. We are willing to work with those who have offered this amendment today. We do not want to do harm when we want to do good, particularly in providing essential air service to our smaller communities. So with those concerns raised, this probably will pass, but I did want to state my concern for the record.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking member of the full committee.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

We have worked with the chairman and the chairman of the full committee on this EAS program, and I talked about it in my remarks during general debate about how important it is for small communities, but I just want to make it clear that the committee really made significant effort here to protect EAS cities. And it should be noted that we expanded the program, a 10 percent local share for cities that are less than 170 miles from a large or medium-hub airport or less than 75 miles from a small-hub airport. And out of concern that small communities might not be able to pay that share, the chairman and the chairman of the full committee worked with us and the ranking member, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO), to include a hardship provision, to allow the Secretary to waive that local share if the community is unable to pay and can demonstrate that inability to pay. So we did not ignore these needs.

We addressed them I think in a very appropriate and thoughtful fashion. I want that to be stated in concert with the chairman who expressed those concerns. And I think by increasing the funds we have made it a lot easier to get service to EAS airports.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Both Members have 1 minute remaining.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) is recognized.

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I again want to thank the chairman and ranking member for their support. I understand how they were trying to protect this program. As an appropriator, I can assure the gentleman that I will be working to solve that problem on the appropriations side. We have had our opponents.

I have never understood when we can spend $7.5 billion for mass transit and not ask a question. We spend merely $100 million to provide rural air service, it is the one rural program, it has been continued under attack since I have been here. And I understand, but I do not think there has ever been a time that we need to give the rural airports a chance to pull themselves up by their bootstraps, to reinvigorate the use of these airports, when the airports were shut down literally because of the parking requirements, they all lost their parking lots because it had to be so many hundred feet before you could park a car from an airport; these rural airports were all shut down unless they were parking in plowed fields. It caused damage that has not recovered yet.

We are hoping to get some marketing money so we can get the service back there to these rural communities because it is a vital part of economic development and growth. And we know that most of the money went to the big airlines and did not trickle down to the privates that served them.

So we just are thankful that the gentleman is willing to work with us. We might be willing to look at a partnership with the States if we can get the States to buy in to help a little bit with this program, but to put it on the individual communities will not work.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) has 1 minute remaining.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking member.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I would just take a moment to express my appreciation for the recognition by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON) that it has been the Committee on Appropriations that has been the obstacle on EAS. It has been the Committee on Appropriations that has time and again put legislative limitations on the use of EAS funds.

Now, if we have an advocate over there in the Committee on Appropriations in the form of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON), maybe we can get all of this straightened out and make sure that those dollars do flow. Because we can write the authorizations; but if the appropriations do not flow or if there are further limitations on it, then all this good work we do in our committee is undercut.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PETERSON).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 4 printed in part B of House Report 108–146.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. PITTS

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 4 offered by Mr. PITTS:

(g) MEASUREMENT OF HIGHWAY MILEAGE FOR PURPOSES OF DETERMINING ELIGIBILITY FOR ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE SUBSIDIES.—

(1) DETERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY.—Subchapter II of Chapter 417 of title 49, United States Code, (as amended by subsection (f) of this bill) is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 41746. Distance requirement applicable to eligibility for essential air service subsidies

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall not provide assistance under this subchapter with respect to a place in the 48 contiguous States that—

''(1) is less than 70 highway miles from the nearest hub airport; or

''(2) requires a rate of subsidy per passenger in excess of $200, unless such place is greater than 210 highway miles from the nearest hub airport.

''(b) DETERMINATION OF MILEAGE.—For purposes of this section, the highway mileage between a place and the nearest hub airport is the highway mileage of the most commonly used route between the place and the hub airport. In identifying such route, the Secretary shall—

''(1) promulgate by regulation a standard for calculating the mileage between an eligible place and a hub airport; and

''(2) identify the most commonly used route for a community by—

''(A) consulting with the Governor of a State or the Governor's designee; and

''(B) considering the certification of the Governor of a State or the Governor's designee as to the most commonly used route.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The analysis for subchapter II of chapter 417 of title 49, United States Code, (as amended by subsection (f) of this bill) is further amended by inserting after the item relating to section 41745 the following new item:

''41746. Distance requirement applicable to eligibility for essential air service subsidies.''.

(h) REPEAL.—The following provisions of law are repealed:

(1) Section 332 of the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2000 (49 U.S.C. 41731 note).

(2) Section 205 of the Wendell H. Ford Aviation Investment and Reform Act for the 21st Century (49 U.S.C. 41731 note).

(3) Section 334 of the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999 (section 101(g) of division A of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999) (Public Law 105–277; 112 Stat. 2681–471).

(i) SECRETARIAL REVIEW.—

(1) REQUEST FOR REVIEW.—Any community with respect to which the Secretary has, between September 30, 1993, and the date of the enactment of this Act, eliminated subsidies or terminated subsidy eligibility under section 332 of the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2000 (49 U.S.C. 41731 note), Section 205 of the Wendell H. Ford Aviation Investment and Reform Act for the 21st Century (49 U.S.C. 41731 note), or any prior law of similar effect, may request the Secretary to review such action.

(2) ELIGIBILITY DETERMINATION.—Not later than 60 days after receiving a request under subsection (i), the Secretary shall—

(A) determine whether the community would have been subject to such elimination of subsidies or termination of eligibility under the distance requirement enacted by the amendment made by subsection (g) of this bill to subchapter II of chapter 417 of title 49, United States Code; and

(B) issue a final order with respect to the eligibility of such community for essential air service subsidies under subchapter II of chapter 417 of title 49, United States Code, as amended by this Act.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 265, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS).

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the essential air service program is important for many small airports throughout the country.

It helps smaller communities to connect with larger cities and their airports and facilitates travel, tourism, and economic development.

To be eligible to receive such assistance, the community where the airport is located must be greater than 70 miles from the nearest large or medium-hub airport according to the most commonly used highway route. However, the Department of Transportation does not always use a consistent standard in determining the most commonly used highway route, nor do they actually determine the most commonly used route. Sometimes they have use the most direct route, even if it means taking back roads.

In my congressional district, this has led to the Lancaster Airport to lose its eligibility for the EAS program. The Department, using the most direct route, determined Lancaster Airport to be 68.5 miles from the Philadelphia International Airport. However, the route they chose would take the average driver more than 3 to 4 hours to drive. It winds along the old Lincoln Highway through dozens of small towns. In fact, anybody from my district knows that this is probably the worst way to get to Philadelphia.

The most commonly used highway route, the one that locals know as the fastest, uses the Pennsylvania Turnpike or other highways; and this route may be 12 miles longer, but you can get to Philadelphia in half the time. Because the Department is using the wrong route, Lancaster Airport's only commercial air carrier ceased operations at the airport on March 23 of this year.

The air carrier maintained that current market condition, fewer passengers and high costs made it impossible to continue without investment from the EAS program. This issue affects other small airports throughout the country and could affect more if this issue is not addressed.

My amendment addresses this problem by requiring the Secretary of Transportation to define a consistent standard for determining the most commonly used route. It also requires the Secretary to consult with the Governor of the State in which the airport in question is located or the Governor's designee as to the most commonly used highway route between that airport and the nearest large or medium-hub airport. Essentially, my amendment seeks to inject predictability and common sense into the process for determining EAS eligibility. It is narrowly tailored to improve the EAS eligibility process without impeding on the Secretary's authority to determine eligibility. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

□ 1545

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

I think his amendment has merit, but I am going to talk about just the bill itself for a few moments. I want to thank again the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), especially my good chairman the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) for doing the work on what I think of as a very good bill.

Air travel is coming back, as the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) has mentioned before. It is important that we look at where we were before 9/11 and recognize that those challenges are raising their heads again: the on-time provisions, the utilization of our airstrips, technology which is now available which was not available before, before AIR 21 was there, and I think we can use our airports more effectively.

It is our goal through this legislation and as the authorization for 4 years that we will see the time when we go beyond those numbers that we had prior to 9/11. But nothing happens in this body without the cooperation from one another. I think this is an example of how committees should work together in a bipartisan effort to achieve what is best for the Nation as a whole.

This bill does that and I want to compliment again both sides, and I am very, very confident this bill will pass overwhelmingly, and I thank everybody that has been involved.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). Does anyone rise to claim time in opposition?

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I rise to claim the time in opposition, although, I do not intend to speak in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Without objection, the gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I actually rise in strong support of the gentleman's amendment. I represent a State that has topography which is foreign to many of the bureaucrats inside the Washington, D.C. Beltway, as do other Members from even more challenging terrain in Alaska and elsewhere, and it is hard for them to conceive that what looks on a map as a pretty straightforward route might happen to be a route that is not open in the wintertime or, even if it is open some of the time in the wintertime, it is often impassable; that even in the best of times it is over a mountain range, even though it is the shortest distance.

So I think common sense certainly being applied as an antidote to bureaucratic intransigence in this case is very well merited, and I congratulate the gentleman on his amendment. It is something I had missed in my perusal of the bill, and many others I know would be concerned for this. We thank him for his vigilance and the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR).

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. PITTS, which would clarify the measurement of highway mileage for purposes of determining essential air service (EAS) eligibility.

Under current law, communities are not eligible for the EAS subsidy if they are less than "70 highway miles" from the nearest large or medium hub airport. Congress first imposed this 70-mile standard in the FY1992 Transportation Appropriations Act, and renewed it every fiscal year until the FY2000 Appropriations Act, which made it a permanent restriction.

In AIR 21, Congress gave the Department discretionary authority "to provide assistance with respect to a place that is located within 70 highway miles of a hub airport if the most commonly used highway route between the place and the hub airport exceeds 70 miles." Nevertheless, despite its discretionary authority, the Department generally employs the "most direct route" standard. This issue has created controversy and even litigation between local communities and the Department, including litigation that involves Lancaster Airport in the gentleman's district.

The gentleman's amendment would require the Department to use the "most commonly used route standard" in measuring mileage for EAS eligibility. Additionally, the amendment would require local input in determining the "most commonly used highway route." Specifically, the amendment would require the Secretary of Transportation to consult with the Governor of the State in which the airport is located as to the most commonly used highway route between that airport and the nearest hub airport. Further, the amendment requires the Secretary to promulgate by regulation a consistent standard for calculating the most commonly used route.

It will bring into the EAS program deserving eligible communities that have otherwise been cut off arbitrarily by current law. This is a common sense change. If we are to have a mileage standard for EAS it should be based on the miles people will actually drive, not a theoretical route, which probably takes longer than the actual route. The gentleman's amendment will make the law reflect reality.

For these reasons, I support the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CORRINE BROWN).

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) and the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO), for their hard work in bringing this bill to the floor today and for working with Members on and off the committee to ensure a fair process that includes Members' ideas.

It is very fitting that we pass this legislation in the same year that we are celebrating 100 years of providing power flights. We had a good debate in both the subcommittee and full committee, and I expect it to continue today and throughout the conference.

Since 9/11 the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has been focusing on improving the security of our transportation infrastructure and ensuring the safety of the traveling public. This reauthorization bill goes a long way in accomplishing this goal and fits well into the overall homeland security plan we are developing.

The FAA has a very important job to do, and this bill provides additional funding and the direction that would allow the FAA to improve the air transportation system for passengers, airports, airlines and many businesses that rely on the aviation industry.

I encourage my colleagues to support the bill and this amendment as we continue on the road to improved safety and security for the traveling public.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Chair would advise Members that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS) has 1½ minutes remaining and the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO) has 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. LEACH).

Mr. LEACH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

I want to thank him for bringing this amendment. It is a very thoughtful amendment. It is a very small amendment. On the other hand, it relates to few airports in the country, and it relates to techniques to bring rationale indeed to how one devises standards.

It happens to affect one airport in my district in the town of Ottumwa; and Ottumwa is a wonderful, small American community, and there are those of us that truly love this community and its airport which can be knocked out of service with great ease. In fact, it largely is today, based upon certain definitional issues.

This helps to address those definitional issues. It helps to bring rationality to government programming, and it helps people in a very real way, and so I want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS) for his thoughtful leadership, and I would hope the committee would sympathetically concur in the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Iowa, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO), the ranking member and the chairman of the committee and the subcommittee for their support; and I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA).

Mr. MICA. Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to conclude both the debate on the amendment and more than likely the debate on this legislation. I thank everyone for their cooperation. This truly does show how legislation can be drafted in a bipartisan manner, and it shows too with the gentleman from Pennsylvania's (Mr. PITTS) amendment, which I rise in support of, that all the good ideas just do not come from the committee.

He has a good idea. It will improve this bill. It shows the majesty of the system our Founding Fathers created, and this working today does demonstrate good legislation.

I rise in support again of the Pitts amendment and the bill, the underlying measure.

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I yield back my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. All time for debate has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS).

The question was taken; and the Chairman pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania will be postponed.

SEQUENTIAL VOTES POSTPONED IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, proceedings will now resume on those amendments on which further proceedings were postponed in the following order: amendment No. 5 printed in part B offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO), amendment No. 4 printed in part B offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS).

The first electronic vote will be conducted as a 15-minute vote. The second electronic vote will be conducted as a 5-minute vote.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MR. MANZULLO

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The pending business is the demand for a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the ayes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

The Clerk redesignated the amendment.

RECORDED VOTE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. A recorded vote has been demanded.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 426, noes 0, not voting 8, as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY) (during the vote). Members are advised that 2 minutes remain in this vote.

□ 1621

So the amendment was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as modified, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as modified, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. TERRY) having assumed the chair, Mr. SWEENEY, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2115) to amend title 49, United States Code, to reauthorize programs for the Federal Aviation Administration, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 265, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 418, nays 8, not voting 8, as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TERRY) (during the vote). The Chair would advise Members that there are 2 minutes remaining in this vote.

□ 1639

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

AUTHORIZING CLERK TO MAKE CORRECTIONS IN ENGROSSMENT OF H.R. 2115, FLIGHT 100—CENTURY OF AVIATION REAUTHORIZATION ACT

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that in the engrossment of the bill, H.R. 2115, the Clerk be authorized to correct section numbers, punctuation, and cross-references, and to make such other necessary technical and conforming changes as may be necessary to reflect the actions of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 7, 2003, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

NATIONAL GREAT BLACK AMERICANS COMMENDATION ACT OF 2003

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to announce the introduction of the National Great Black Americans Commendation Act of 2003, legislation that will help to bring long overdue recognition to African Americans who have served our Nation with distinction but whose names, faces and records of achievements may not be well known by the public.

This recognition primarily will be accomplished through an expansion of national designation of a national treasure, the Great Blacks in Wax Museum, located in my district in Baltimore, Maryland. The legislation also authorizes assistance in establishing a Justice Learning Center as a component of the expanded museum complex.

The Justice Learning Center will include state-of-the-art facilities and resources to educate the public, and especially youth, about the role of African Americans in our Nation's justice system. It will include a special focus on the civil rights movement, on the role of African Americans as lawmakers and as attorneys, and on the role of blacks in the judiciary.

I am introducing this legislation with the bipartisan support and cosponsor of 47 of our colleagues. This legislation will help to present the faces and stories of black Americans who have reached some of the highest levels of national service but who are generally unknown.

A priority will be exhibits presenting black Americans who served in Congress during the 1800s, some born in slavery and others born free. These Americans proudly served their constituencies and this great Nation.

I am pleased to inform my colleagues that the museum will showcase the 22 outstanding blacks who served in the United States Senate and House of Representatives in the 1800s, and those from the 1900s such as Senator Edward Brooke and Representatives Julian Dixon, Oscar Stanton DePriest, Lewis Stokes, and many others.

The legislation will also help to showcase black Americans who served in senior civilian executive branch positions, such as Ralph Bunche, Frederic Morrow, Robert Weaver, William Coleman, Patricia Harris, Lewis Sullivan, and many others who did not receive the appropriate recognition in the past.

The expanded museum will focus on black military veterans, including the Buffalo Soldiers and the Tuskegee Airmen, black judges, lawmen and prominent attorneys, and the role of blacks in discovery and settlement.

The Great Blacks in Wax Museum, America's first wax museum of black history, was founded in the early 1980s. The museum occupies part of a city block in east Baltimore and currently includes approximately 200 exhibits. Existing figures depict great black Americans such as Colin Powell, Harriet Tubman, Dr. Martin Luther King, Mary McLeod Bethune, and former Representatives Mickey Leland of Texas, Kweisi Mfume of Maryland, Shirley Chisolm and Adam Clayton Powell of New York.

The State of Maryland and the city of Baltimore have contributed over $5 million toward this expansion project, which will occupy an entire city block in the empowerment zone area. The museum is conducting extensive outreach to major corporations and other private donors. This legislation authorizes a Federal share not to exceed 25 percent or $15 million, whichever is less, of the expansion project.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all Members to support and cosponsor this important legislation, which will help to educate our Nation and the world about the critical contributions of African Americans in defending freedom and guaranteeing equal rights under the law, in protecting our Nation's interests in times of military conflict, in exploration and settlement of our Nation, and in providing leadership at the Federal level through service in Congress and the executive branch.

This museum will ensure that history never forgets the contributions of these great Americans.

THE GREAT BLACKS IN WAX MUSEUM: A BRIEF HISTORY

The Great Blacks In Wax Museum, America's first wax museum of African American history, was founded in 1983 by Drs. Elmer and Joanne Martin, two Baltimore educators. However, the Martins' story begins in 1980 when with money they were saving for a down payment on a house, they purchased four wax figures. These they carted to schools, churches, shopping malls, and festivals throughout the mid-Atlantic area. Their goal was to test public reaction to the idea of a black history wax museum. So positive was the response that in 1983, with personal loans, they opened the Museum in a small storefront in downtown Baltimore. The success of the Museum, especially among students on field trips, made it imperative that the Martins find larger space. In 1985, the Martins closed the museum and organized an all-out fundraising effort to secure new and expanded space and to purchase more wax figures. Their efforts allowed them to purchase an abandoned fire station on East North Avenue. After extensive renovations, the Martins re-opened the museum in October of 1988.

When the Museum moved to its East Baltimore location, away from the lucrative Inner Harbor tourist market and decidedly off the beaten track, the naysayers declared that few people would venture into a deteriorating community to see a little wax museum. Yet in 1989, the first full year of operation in its new location, 44,000 visitors ventured into the neighborhood to see America's first black history wax museum. The visitorship held at annual average of 44,000 for the next three years and then increased in 1992 to 52,000, 61,000 in 1993, and 81,000 in 1994. In 2002, more than 300,000 people from across the nation visited the unique cultural institution.

A September 1994 article in the Afro American newspaper declared the Great Blacks In Wax Museum a ''National Treasure.'' In fact, the Museum serves the entire nation. International visitors have come from France, Africa, Israel, Japan, and many other continents and nations. The Great Blacks In Wax Museum story has been heralded by news media around the world, including CNN, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The New York Times, The Chicago Sun Times, the Dallas Morning News, Kulturwelt, USA/Africa, The Los Angeles Times, USA Today, Crisis, and Essence Magazine.

Approximately 200 wax figures and scenes, a 19th century slave ship re-creation, a special permanent exhibition on the role of youth in the making and shaping of history, a Maryland room highlighting the contributions of outstanding Marylanders to African-American history, gift shop, a mini auditorium for lectures and films are some of the major cultural features of one of America's most dynamic and unique cultural and educational institutions.

PLANNED EXHIBITS OF THE NATIONAL GREAT BLACKS IN WAX MUSEUM AND JUSTICE LEARNING CENTER

The following provides additional information about the planned exhibits of the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center.

AFRICAN AMERICANS IN POLITICS, LAW AND GOVERNMENT

HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE

At the end of the Revolutionary War, more than one-third of the three million people living in the U.S. were not free. Among this group were 600,000 slaves, 300,000 indentured servants, 50,000 convicts, and of course, Native Americans. Of the more than two million free Americans, only 120,000 could meet the requirements set up by individual states at that time for a person to be allowed to vote. These requirements centered around such factors as sex, age, residence, moral character, property, religion, slave versus free status, and race. By the end of the 1800's, most states had also added property and tax paying requirements to the list and many individuals who had been eligible to vote lost their privilege.

As more and more Blacks gained their freedom (either by purchasing it themselves or by being emancipated upon the death of their masters), states began to change their constitutions so as to exclude Blacks. Moreover, Blacks were denied the right to vote in every state (except Maine) that entered the union between 1800 and 1861.

The Civil War brought about a drastic change in the pattern of taking away the vote from Blacks because suddenly four million slaves were transformed into citizens possessing the right to vote. Within three years, the 15th amendment to the U.S. Constitution had given the right to vote to all male citizens regardless of race. Women, however, would not gain voting rights until decades later with the passage of the 19th amendment.

Following the Civil War, Blacks in the South voted in large numbers and elected many Blacks to office. Indeed, between 1870 and 1901, 22 African Americans (two Senators and 20 Representatives) were elected to the U.S. Congress. However, two factors were about to have a dramatic effect on Black voting rights: (1) the fear among many white people that Blacks would now gain political power, and (2) the effort of many government officials to impose punitive measures on the South, which succeeded in undermining the 15th Amendment and depriving Blacks of the vote.

Southern state after state began to enact laws that stripped away the right to vote of Blacks outright or that introduced such restrictions as the poll tax and the literacy test. And what these restrictions failed to accomplish were more than made up for by the Ku Klux Klan and other hate groups. By 1910, every Southern state had such controls. By 1902 not a single Black sat in either a state or federal legislature. Moreover, every state university and public facility that had once been desegregated was now segregated again.

Hope was reborn in the early part of the 1900's as leaders like W.E.B. Dubois began to exert pressure on the government to reinstate voting rights for Blacks. The effort of this more aggressive Black electorate and the success of Franklin Roosevelt in convincing Black voters that as President he would be committed to principles of equality would transform a traditionally Republican Black voter into a staunch supporter of the Democratic Party, a tendency which continues up to the present.

During the later decades African American participation in the political process has been influenced by the forces operating at the time. During the 1930's it was the migration of Blacks from the South to the North and from the country to the city. The 1960's created a sharp rise in the political consciousness of Blacks due in part to the enthusiasm generated by the Civil Rights Movement. Throughout the past several decades, African Americans have been selected for political offices in ever-increasing numbers. Many of them have made their imprint on history.

In a 3,000 square foot gallery within the future National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Center consisting of the latest in interactive, multimedia technology, visitors will learn about:

The Civil Rights Struggle—Early Rights Movements; Civil Rights at the End of the Civil War; Civil Rights in the 20th Century; Civil Rights Activists.

The Legal Battleground—The Legal Status of African Americans: 1790–1883; African Americans and the Criminal Justice System; African Americans in the Federal Courts; African American on the U.S. Supreme Court; Major Federal Legislation; Major U.S. Supreme Court Decisions; Pioneering Jurists, Attorneys, Judges.

The Political Race—The role of African Americans in Politics from the Colonial Era to Today; African American Elected Officials and Political Appointees; Legalized Oppression; Women and Politics.

DISCOVERY AND SETTLEMENT: BLACK AMERICAN PIONEERS

Current Exhibits—The following exhibits are currently on display in the Great Blacks in Wax Museum collection:

Matthew A. Henson (1866–1955) was an international explorer and the first person to reach the North Pole as a member of Commodore Robert E. Peary's 1909 expedition. He later chronicled his experiences in the book A Negro Explorer at the North Pole (1912). President William Howard Taft appointed Henson to the position of Clerk in the U.S. Customs House in New York City, a position Henson held until 1936, when he retired. In 2000, the National Geographic Society posthumously awarded Henson the coveted Hubbard Medal for Distinction in Exploration and Discovery.

James Weldon Johnson (1871–1938), renowned writer, poet and statesman, and NAACP executive director, observed: ''Your West is giving the Negro a better deal than any other section of the country. There is more opportunity for my race, and less prejudice against it in this section of the country than anywhere else in the United States.''

Bill Pickett (1870–1932), born to former slaves in Texas, was one of the greatest cowboys that ever lived. Known to tackle a steer and other beasts without a lariat, he is credited with originating the rodeo sport known as ''steer wrestling.'' Pickett was the first Black cowboy to appear in Western movies, and the first Black inductee into the National Cowboy and Rodeo Hall of Fame.

Future Exhibits—The following exhibits are planned for the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center:

Henry Adams (1843–?), born into slavery, led the ''Black Exodus,'' a migration of 40,000 African Americans to the Free State of Kansas. ''Exodusters'' settled all-Black towns and were able to achieve a significant measure of economic and political freedom.

All-Black Towns. All-Black towns were established in Western states and territories during the late 1800s. In California, these include Kentucky Ridge (Placerville), Negro Bar (part of Folsom), Negro Slide (in Pumas County), Negro Tent (located between Comptonville and Goodyear), and Negro Hill (near Sacramento). In Oklahoma, they include Bernon, Boley, Brooksville, Clearview, Grayson, Langston, Lima, Redbird, Rentiesville, Summit, Taft, Tatums, and Tullahassee.

James Pierson Beckwourth (1798–1866), who escaped from slavery, played a major role in the exploration and settlement of Western states. Beckwourth fought in the California Revolution in 1846, and became chief scout for General John C. Fremont. The town of Beckwourth, California was named after him, as was Beckwourth Trail, an overland route he charted from Sparks, Nevada across the Sierra Nevada to Lake Oroville, California. He was the only Black frontiersman to record his life story.

George Bonga (1802–1880) was a renowned fur trader and trapper born in Minnesota. The grandson of Jean Bonga, the first Black settler in the Northwoods (1782), he could speak English, French and Ojibwa. In 1820, he served as interpreter for Minnesota Governor Lewis Cass at a council held in Fond du Lac territory. In 1837, Bonga successfully apprehended Che-Ga Wa Skung, a Chippewa Indian wanted for murder. The subsequent trial at Fort Snelling became the first trial for a criminal offense held in Minnesota.

Clara Brown (1800–1885), born into slavery, traveled to Denver, Colorado as a cook on a wagon train. Brown was the first Black woman to cross the plains during the Gold Rush. She settled in Central City, Colorado, established its first laundry, accumulated wealth, and brought freed slaves to Colorado. She was made an honorary member of the Society of Colorado Pioneers.

Buffalo Soldiers—In the late 1800s, the all-Black 9th and 10th U.S. Army Cavalry Regiments and 38th Infantry served in New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Kansas, Oklahoma, Wyoming, Montana, Texas, and the Dakotas. They built forts and roads, strung telegraph lines, protected railroad crews, escorted stages and trains, protected settlers and cattle drives, and fought outlaws. Indians called them ''Buffalo Soldiers,'' and the soldiers wore the title proudly.

Jean Baptiste Pointe DuSable (1745–1818) established the first permanent settlement of Chicago, Illinois in 1790. He owned a highly profitable trading post which became the main point of supply for traders and trappers heading West. His granddaughter born in 1796 was the first child born in Chicago.

Estevanico (1503–1539), an African enslaved by the Spanish, led an expedition from Mexico into the territory of the American Southwest in 1538 and is credited with the discovery of the area that became the states of Arizona and New Mexico.

Mary Fields (1832–1914), born a slave, became a renowned figure on the American Western frontier known as pistol-packing ''Stagecoach Mary.'' In 1895, she was hired as a U.S. Mail coach driver for the Cascade County region of central Montana, becoming the first Black woman to drive a U.S. Mail route. She and her mule Moses never missed a day, and thus she earned her nickname ''Stagecoach'' for her unfailing reliability.

Henry O. Flipper (1856–1940) was the first Black graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, and the first Black Army commissioned officer. A Buffalo Soldier, Flipper was stationed at Fort Sill, Oklahoma and Forts Concho, Elliott, Quitman and Davis, Texas. He was a signal officer and quartermaster, installed telegraph lines, and supervised road building. Flipper directed construction of a drainage system at Fort Sill that prevented the spread of malaria. ''Flipper's Ditch'' is a National Historic Landmark.

Thomas ''O.T.'' Jackson (1846–1906), a barber from Watsonville, California, was a tenor in several internationally prominent Black minstrel groups in the late 1800s. He headlined numerous engagements, including performances before King Edward VII of England. His improvisational musical technique influenced various music styles in the West in the 20th century, as well as the development of Jazz and other African American music forms.

William A. Leidesdorff (1810–1848), the son of a Danish sailor and a Black woman from St. Croix, Virgin Islands, came to Yerba Buena (San Francisco) in 1841. Within three years he owned waterfront property and the largest house in San Francisco. Leidesdorff built San Francisco's first hotel, helped establish its first public school, launched the state's first steamship, and staged its first horse race. He also acquired a 35,000-acre parcel of land encompassing modern Folsom, California. Leidesdorff died just after his neighbor and trading partner John Sutter discovered gold.

Nat Love (1854–1921), better known as ''Deadwood Dick,'' was born into slavery in Tennessee and moved to Dodge City, Kansas. He became a rugged cowpuncher, champion rodeo rider and roper, and cattle driver. In 1907, Love wrote a highly romanticized autobiography portraying a life filled with Indian fights, famous outlaws, and amazing feats. In so doing, he sought to become accepted as the prototype of the dime novel ''Deadwood Dick'' series.

Bridget (''Biddy'') Mason (1818–1891), born a slave in Mississippi, trekked with her owner's family to San Bernardino County, California. Once in California, Mason petitioned the courts for freedom, which was granted in 1856. Business and real estate transactions enabled her to accumulate a substantial fortune, and she gave generously to charities, providing food and shelter for the poor of all races. In 1872, she founded and financed the first African American church in Los Angeles.

George Monroe delivered mail in the mid-1800s by Pony Express between Merced and Mariposa, California. He became a stage driver, and was chosen to drive President Ulysses Grant to Yosemite, where an area called Monroe Meadows is named after him.

Mary Ellen Pleasant (1814–1904), known as the ''Mother of Civil Rights'' in California, spent most of her life in San Francisco where she provided shelter for fugitive slaves. In 1866, she petitioned the California courts by suing to overturn the Mission and Northbeach Railway Company's policy segregating the races, and she later won a judgment of $600.

Bass Reeves (1824–1910), born to slave parents in Texas, became the first Black commissioned U.S. Deputy Marshal west of the Mississippi River. Reeves lawfully killed 14 notorious outlaws in the performance of his duty over 32 years. He was honored with the ''Great Westerner'' award by the National Cowboy and Rodeo Hall of Fame.

William Robinson delivered mail by Pony Express from Stockton, California to gold miners.

Jeremiah B. Sanderson (1846–?) opened the first Black schools in Oakland, Sacramento, San Francisco and Stockton, California.

Cathay Williams (1842–1924), born a slave, is believed to be the only woman to serve as a Buffalo Soldier. In 1866 she joined the 38th Infantry, one of four all-Black military units, pretending to be a man (William Cathay). She served at Forts Riley and Hacker in Kansas, and Forts Bayard, Union and Cummings in New Mexico, until military medical personnel discovered that she was a woman. Her commander reported her to be a ''good soldier.''

''York,'' a slave, was a member of the 1804–1806 Lewis and Clark Expedition and served as William Clark's lifelong servant and companion.

JUNE 13, 2003, RUBBER STAMP DAY ON PRESIDENT BUSH'S TAX LEGISLATION

(Mr. McDERMOTT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I take the floor right now to remind Members to bring their rubber stamp tomorrow. The rubber-stamp Congress will be in session.

They are meeting right now up in the Committee on Rules, and they are dropping an $80 billion tax bill that never went to the Committee on Ways and Means I sit on. Nobody has ever seen it, but it is being dropped here all of a sudden because the majority leader finally quit resisting what the Senate wanted to do. We are going to run it out of here. The chairman did not even go upstairs to explain the bill, they just sent it up there, they greased it, and it is coming down here. Everybody should remember, bring this stamp.

This stamp said ''Official Rubber Stamp. I approve of everything George Bush does,'' signed: The Member. That is what we ought to have tomorrow, because we are going to run another $80 billion out, put people more in debt, and that is what we consider legislation in this one-party system.

Do not forget, Members should bring their rubber stamp tomorrow morning.

OHIO IS THE BIRTHPLACE OF AVIATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in reaction to my colleague and friend, the gentleman from North Carolina's public objection to Dayton, Ohio being known as the birthplace of aviation.

No one disputes the fact that Kittyhawk in North Carolina was the site of the first successful controlled power flight in history. However, Dayton, Ohio's claim to be the birthplace of aviation is based upon much more than just the first limited flight.

As a new historical work on the lives of the Wright brothers states, ''The four short flights in North Carolina showed that their math was close enough; Heavier than air flight was possible. The practicality of the Wright Flyer was achieved in 1904 and 1905 in a little-known place of great consequence, Huffman Prairie, an 85-acre cow pasture 10 miles east of Dayton.

Huffman Prairie Flying Field, which is in the Seventh Congressional District, which just happens to be my district, is located on the grounds of Wright Patterson Air Force Base. The flying field, which is undergoing a restoration to its 1905 appearance, has recently been opened to the general public, complete with a new interpretive center so visitors can understand the importance of the early flight testing and aircraft development that occurred there.

Even the press at the time did not grasp the significance of what had occurred at Kitty Hawk. It took several years of additional flights, I might say at Huffman Prairie, before the public finally acknowledged that the Wright brothers had invented a workable aircraft. If the Wright Brothers had not continued their history-altering work in Ohio, it is quite possible that the North Carolina exploits would have been lost in history.

As I have said before, North Carolina can always claim the location of the first flight by the Wright brothers, but it is their hometown that saw the laborious construction and endless testing that was required to allow it to take to the sky and mature as a reliable form of transportation that we all now enjoy.

North Carolina has the sand dunes where the first flight occurred, but Dayton, Ohio has the Dayton Aviation Heritage National Historical Park, encompassing the Wright Cycle Shop, Huffman Prairie Flying Field, the John W. Berry, Sr. Wright Brothers Aviation Center, and the Paul Laurence Dunbar State Memorial.

Dayton also has the National Aviation Hall of Fame, Wright Patterson Air Force Base, the U.S. Air Force Museum, and the final resting place of the Wright brothers. It is based upon all of these important sites and the local life experiences of the Wright brothers that Dayton should be known as the ''birthplace of aviation.''

As an Ohioan, I am proud to reside in the same State as the two Wright brothers whose invention changed the world; and more importantly, the fact that they were also in Ohio's Seventh Congressional District, which I now represent.

WHERE IS THE BALANCED BUDGET AMENDMENT CALLED FOR IN 1974 BY THE SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, on March 17, 1994, then a Member of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT) came to the floor and said, ''Clearly, our Nation's monstrous $4.3 trillion Federal deficit, until it is eliminated, interest payments will continue to eat away the important incentives which the government must fund. I will not stand by and watch Congress recklessly squander the future of our children and grandchildren.''

Later in that same day he said, ''In light of Congress' exhibited inability to control spending and vote for real fiscal responsibility, it is imperative that we have a balanced budget amendment to compel Congress to end its siege on our financial future.'' That was on March 17, 1994.

As most of us are aware, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT) has been the Speaker now for about 1,613 days. In that 1,613 days, he who controls every single amendment that comes to this House floor, when we start, when we stop, every bill that comes to the floor, he who appoints the members of the Committee on Rules that decide which amendments are germane, those that can be offered, has not allowed a vote on a balanced budget amendment.

We would think there were a couple of things that would come to his mind, since in 1994 he spoke so strongly of the need for a balanced budget. I would like to ask Max, Trevor, Sarah, and Krystle-Joy to come to the floor.

See, in the time that the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker HASTERT) has been Speaker, and they can stand in front of me, it is their big moment in the sun, in the 1,613 days the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HASTERT) has been Speaker, we would think the gentleman who cares that much about the national debt would maybe let the debt go up by, say, $914. But that is not the case.

Now I need Michael, Bryan, and Taylor to join us, because the Speaker has had 1,613 days. I guess I can take 5 minutes.

Now, in the time that the Speaker has been for a balanced budget, he says, we would think the debt might grow by $914,878. That is not the case.

I need Amanda, Mark, and Robin to join us.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. BUYER. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FEENEY). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to know whether or not this fits the proper decorum of the House and whether this is a proper utilization of a prop. My question is whether this meets the decorum of the House.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, that is not a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. A question has been raised about decorum under the rules of the House.

The Chair would rule that it maybe appropriate to use the exhibits that are presented, but it is inappropriate to refer to individual House pages by name. As long as otherwise that the exhibits are used in appropriate decorum and pages are not referenced by name, then the gentleman can proceed.

Mr. BUYER. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Again, Mr. Speaker, in that 1,613 days since the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker HASTERT) way back when told us he was for a balanced budget, we would think that the debt would have grown by only 914,878.72, with a couple of commas thrown in, but it is not the case.

I regret to do this, but I have been told by the Chair that I cannot call the pages by their first names, so I am going to have to ask page 11, 12, and 13 to come forward, under the Rules of the House.

Again, since the Speaker told us way back when how adamantly he was for a balanced budget, we would have thought that by now, and since I am losing track with a couple of commas in there, that he would have said, enough, it is time for a balanced budget amendment. Time to let Members at least vote on it. Now, 1,613 days later, it still has not happened.

Now I have to ask pages 14, 15, and 16, and I practiced saying your names, so I apologize. Now, if the camera can get all of this, we can let some Members have some idea, not of the national debt, but of how much the debt has grown in 2 years and 1 week since the passage of the Bush tax cuts and the Bush budget.

The first $2 trillion spending bill passed by this Congress did not come from a Democratic President, it came from a Republican President. The tax cuts, they increased spending, decreased revenues, and this is the difference.

I think it is particularly appropriate that these fine young people from all parts of our country are holding the sign. The lobbyists who benefited from this and the fat cats who are having big dinners tonight who benefited from this, they are not going to pay this bill. These kids are. These kids and their kids and their kids.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. KINGSTON. Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman cannot use pages as props for his speech. They can be of assistance in holding the sign, but they cannot be referred to as props in the manner in which my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi, has just done.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman's inquiry of the Chair is appropriate. At this point the Chair would remind the gentleman not to refer to the pages by name or by their presence. The exhibits themselves may be an appropriate use at this time, but the gentleman whose time it is will decline to reference pages individually or collectively.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. To the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), if I had voted to stick these children with that bill, I would be as ashamed to look at their faces as the gentleman is.

I did not vote to stick these kids with that bill.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FEENEY). The gentleman is out of order. He has referred to pages as props when the Chair has ruled that their presence on the floor cannot be mentioned.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is not referring to the pages themselves as pages. He is referring to the pages that the pages are holding, the 914, 878, 724. This is a parliamentary inquiry for clarification, Mr. Speaker. He was referring to the pages that the pages are holding.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is right. He is using the pages in an incorrect manner.

Mr. JACKSON of Illinois. I have not yielded my time. Under the House rules, the pages are allowed to hold these pages, and as long as the gentleman does not refer to the pages by name, he can refer to the pages.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is correct, that the pages are permitted to facilitate the presentation of exhibits, but any reference in any speech to the pages or to visually suggest that they are part of the exhibits themselves or any suggestion that the debate should involve the pages individually or collectively, is not in order.

The exhibits themselves may be referred to. The pages may not be referred to.

The gentleman may proceed.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) has 30 seconds to not refer to the pages but to refer to the exhibits.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I know that most Americans are at work right now. Some of you are watching. If you care about your country, you have got to be upset that in almost a little over 2 years almost $1 trillion has been added to the national debt. To make a reference from that, we went all the way from 1775 to 1975 and did not borrow that much money.

The next time one of my Republican colleagues looks you in the eye and tells you he is a fiscal conservative, ask him about that trillion dollars and the $1 billion a day that we will pay in interest on that money and will pay for the rest of my lifetime, your lifetime, and, God bless them, Mr. Speaker, these kids' lifetime.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is advised that in addition to the admonitions, that Members must decline to address the television audience. In addition, the Speaker is taking under advisement the future use and appropriateness of using pages.

CONGRESS SHOULD DO WHAT IS RIGHT FOR AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate our friend, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), for advancing the cause of fiscal restraint, something that we do need to do in this House. And it is interesting, particularly since the Democrats are right now promoting an expansion of welfare in an unfunded way, and proposing to increase spending on welfare $3.5 billion, and that is to give a tax rebate to people who have not paid taxes.

It is an idea that is ironic since 197 of them voted against it originally in May 2001, but they all seem to want to spend more regardless of what our budgets are doing.

I have just come from an appropriations meeting. And what is interesting about that is that on the appropriations bills, we have 13 of them, I believe, Mr. Speaker, every bill, it is particularly interesting since every one of our 13 appropriations bills, no matter what we propose in the Republican Party, the Democrats make a counterproposal to spend more. And I realize that my friend, the gentleman of Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), is in the minority of the Democratic Party where they do wake up in the morning and worry about spending. And I am glad that he does because I share his concerns about it. But I just point out that the majority of his party, when it comes to spending bills, wants to spend more. And no matter what it is, we are not spending enough for this cause; we are not spending enough for that cause.

I want to also point out, sometimes it is easy when you are in the minority and you do not have to necessarily make the vote for war, but we are in a situation after 9–11 where America was under attack. Americans were hurt, injured, and killed in their workplace. And while some on the left sat around and said what did we do wrong or why do they hate us, others in the greater majority, not just the Republican Party but in America as a whole, said, look, we are going to defend our borders. We are going to defend our domestic areas. We are going to just defend our homeland. And to do that, unfortunately, you do have to spend money because it costs money to go to Afghanistan, to send helicopters and tanks over there. It costs money to send troops to the Middle East. And that does add up to some deficit spending.

It is something we do want to get under control. But I would certainly hope that the gentleman and others were not suggesting that the war for the liberation of Iraq was wrong, the war to find bin Laden was wrong, the war to liberate Afghanistan from Taliban rule was wrong. Because I believe most Americans support those actions and most Americans are glad that we are taking these steps.

When people say to you things like, how can you look the children in the eye, well, to me how could you not look the children in the eye and say, you know what, we are going to defend our homeland and we are going to secure our borders.

There is an international war on terrorism and America seems to be leading the way. America has also been the victim of it, but we are going to win that battle.

And if the gentleman and others would look at the budget, they can see that that is where the majority of our spending went and it is going to continue to go. But we want to work with the Democrats to get spending under control. My concern of it is not in just dollars and cents, but my concern is the encroachment of the government on the private sector. Every dollar we put in the government, that is more freedom we lose, particularly in the private sector.

So I hope as we begin the appropriations process this year that we can have a lot of amendments from our Democrat friends that actually reduce spending so that when we run the legislative branch bill out here, when we run military construction out here, when we run the education bill out here, if they have ideas for saving money, I want to do everything I can to make those amendments offered by my friend, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), or anybody else over there, the so-called Blue Dog Caucus, I want their amendments to be in order so we can work together in a bipartisan fashion and reduce spending. Because I think that the best of our party and the best of their party should do what is right for the best of America.

CONGRESS NEEDS TO WORK IN A BIPARTISAN MANNER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman very much; and I appreciate my good friend, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), insisting that we have a balanced budget.

Might I remind him that as we speak, the Committee on Rules is meeting and having the opportunity to review the $82 billion tax proposal of the Republicans of this House, when all that we ask for and all that is necessary is that we take the Senate bill that has just been passed to fix the major error that occurred last week when this body, this Republican House and Republican Senate, refused to provide a child tax credit for working families making $10,000 to $26,000 a year.

The Senate fixed it last week. The bill from the Senate is right here at the desk. All this House needed to do was to adopt the Senate language. It would immediately go to the President's desk. It would be immediately signed by the President, and now 19 million children would be able to have the same child tax credit refund that the rich have been able to get by the President's tax bill. But lo and behold, the very same party that has stood up and indicated that they are willing to fight the deficit, they have now before us an $82 billion jump of a tax cut that has all of the kitchen sink in it, and they want to keep the children of America from getting their tax cut.

I hope we can work on this issue in a bipartisan manner, Mr. Speaker. I hope the Committee on Rules right now will reject the proposal by the Committee on Ways and Means, the Republican Committee on Ways and Means. This potpourri of taxes that eliminates the opportunity for us to move quickly to the President's desk with a clean, stand-alone tax cut that provides a refund to the children of America, a simple $154 that we can give to 19 million children and their families and those that make $10,000 to $26,000 a year. I hope we can do that.

Mr. Speaker, I want to finish on this very important concern that I have, and that is that over the weekend we heard a lot of scrambling on the Sunday morning talk shows about a call for congressional investigations about the question of the existence of weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know if there are weapons of mass destruction. And I am not intending to be in an argument with my administration on the question of their veracity. But I do want to be in an argument on behalf of the American people. They need to know the truth. So I am calling for an independent investigation, a special prosecutor, or a special commission to investigate what was known by the administration and what level of intelligence was given when we made the decision to go to war with Iraq. What kind of intelligence and documentation of the intelligence that would have given the necessary impetus or basis of going to war, what was known by the intelligence community, what facts did they give about the weapons of mass destruction, why was a decision made to go to war with respect to the intelligence given when we know that the U.N. inspectors were doing the very same thing?

The argument that the administration made is that we know there are weapons of mass destruction, we know that they are there, and the U.N. inspectors are not doing their job and they are not doing it fast enough. Two months later after the official part of the war has ended, although we are still at war, we do not have the weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Speaker, this is a constitutional question of war and peace. We were supposed to declare war under article I of the Constitution. We did not do that. Members of this House were moved to tears when they made the decision to vote on the question of going to war. What a tragedy if we did not have the sufficient intelligence or the accurate intelligence or the intelligence community did not truthfully give the facts necessary to make an intelligent decision that sent young men and women off to their deaths.

I believe we owe the American people the truth. The Congress is not going to do it. I understand there is a complete collapse in the other body with respect to bipartisan hearings on the question of what kind of intelligence was given to make the decision. Then forget about it. Give the American people the truth. We need to have an independent investigation, an outside commission, and/or a special prosecutor, which I am calling for and will make an official demand for it in the following days to come.

I hope that we realize that truth to the American people is our obligation as members of this government. The American people must depend upon our veracity, and as well they must depend upon the right decisions being made on their behalf and on behalf of the young men and women in the United States military. We salute them for their willingness to offer the ultimate sacrifice, but I believe truly it is important for us to have the truth on this issue, and an independent investigation is well needed.

MEDICARE PROBLEM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I come to the House currently to discuss the Medicare issue, and this is a tough issue that is facing us. It is one whereby Members can choose a political route, or they can choose a route of policy.

The numbers that are presently in front of us cannot lie. These numbers are cold. They will not go away, and that is that we have this: the demographics, the baby boomers when they become seniors, there is a smaller population behind them, and the present Medicare model as we know it cannot exist unless we go to a 20 percent payroll tax.

There is a desire here within Congress to deliver a prescription drug benefit to Medicare. Well, if we just add prescription drugs to Medicare without addressing the long-term solvency, we have only exasperated the insolvency of Medicare as we know it.

□ 1715

Therein lies our challenge. So I believe if we just added a prescription drug benefit to Medicare without making this long-term solution to the solvency of Medicare, that is a very faulty approach.

Right now within the Republican Caucus there is a discussion about two approaches on how to do this. These are two completely different approaches.

The country has had an opportunity to see the approach sponsored by the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) as chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, because Congress has passed this measure two other times, and that is an insurance-based product, a defined benefit. We provide a cash assistance to beneficiaries to help them manage their drug bill and to make that assistance then targeted to those who need it.

We create this insurance pool for the purchase of drugs-only insurance which the Federal Government would then underwrite. These are two different approaches.

The first approach that I mentioned, really, is there are five of us that have come together and have drafted this approach. This insurance-based approach, though, really begins to concern us. It concerns us because there are not any willing carriers out there who are going to step forward and say, well, we believe that there is insurable risk here and we will offer this product. Really? They will offer the product if the government becomes the guarantor, and then the real question is, well, then does the government have to become the guarantor in order for them to make a profit and deliver it?

We have a great concern about the viability of an insurance-based product, and that is the reason five Members of Congress have come together and we have drafted a completely different approach.

What I would like to do is share the principles of our approach. Our Medicare prescription drug package proposes, number one, a generous assistance to low-income seniors and the disabled, a defined contribution. We have a specifically defined assistance to all seniors that rely on income. We also have family-friendly participation through a tax benefit. We also encourage participation by employers through a tax benefit, and we also have a stop-loss coverage for high-risk drugs to all seniors. We also provide a bridge to comprehensive reform for long-term solvency that we call enhanced Medicare, and what we are trying to do is provide choices for seniors with lower prices in a private sector approach.

What does all this mean? All this means is that what we hope to accomplish is that we turn to those in the private sector to have what we call a value card, and these different groups, companies could be approved by CMS, and they then, by virtue of their membership and their purchasing power, they provide discounts. An individual would have a discount card. They are automatically enrolled. They can opt out, but they are automatically in. It costs $30, and then government, based on their income, adds dollars to their card, and then they are able to take this card and they can swipe it down at the drugstore and they keep track of the drugs for which they purchase.

Where we want to be family friendly is often we say, parents, get active in the lives of your children. Well, I also want to turn and say, children, get active in the lives of your parents. So if you have an elderly parent who also needs assistance to buy drugs, I do not know why children are not getting more involved in the lives of their parents. What they can do is they can get a $4,000 tax deduction, and they can add $4,000 then to their parents' drug card. We think this is being very family friendly.

We also have a catastrophic coverage and we think that is important. And tomorrow, hopefully, there will be a Republican conference to cover both these proposals.

CHILD TAX CREDIT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FEENEY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, it is stunning to me that whenever Democrats stand up on behalf of working families that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle start shaking their finger and saying, oh, the tax-and-spend Democrats. It is really amazing and takes an incredible amount of nerve for the Republicans to still want to wear that jacket of fiscal responsibility and to invoke it when we start talking about working families like this.

Let us remember that the President was handed a $5 trillion surplus, surpluses as far as the eye could see. That is gone, blew that; and now we are at about a, according to the former Secretary, they are charging about a $4 trillion projected deficit, a debt, on top of that, and in a very short time we are almost $1 trillion in deficit. That means more money spent than we have brought in.

They like to talk about the war: Oh, we had to spend all that money on homeland security. And indeed, we did, but let us remember that most of that deficit is caused because we are giving tax cuts to the wealthiest.

Now the excuse is, well, this family, the Johnstons who make only $19,000, they do not deserve a tax cut, they say, because they do not pay tax. Hello, these are people who are paying a payroll tax. They pay sales tax, they pay excise taxes, like taxes on the gasoline they buy to get to their jobs, and they pay a payroll tax.

Think for a minute. What are the only taxes that have not been reduced? We are not talking about dividend taxes, most of the people who clip coupons, the taxes that they pay. We are not talking about the taxes on high incomes. We are talking about the taxes that everyday working people pay. That is what we are trying to do with the child tax credit, for families like that, so that they can take it and buy formula or baby food for this baby, so that they can provide for her. And that is what we are trying to do.

My colleagues notice this family is not smiling, but I want to show them the face of some people who are, in fact, smiling. Why are they smiling? A report by the Committee on Government Reform minority staff on the tax bill found that Treasury Secretary Snow's estimated dividend and capital tax savings is between $331,000 and $842,000. That is a 1-year tax cut. No wonder he is smiling.

Secretary Evans could see between $68,000 and $595,000 in tax savings.

Vice President CHENEY, who is not in the picture but is probably smiling at some undisclosed location, will reap $116,000 a year from the dividend capital gains provisions in the tax cut. In fact, the total tax savings for President Bush, Vice President CHENEY, and the Cabinet could be up to $3.2 million. If I were a member of the Cabinet, I would probably be smiling, too.

In my State, 674,000 children and 378,000 families are not smiling. Nearly 1 in 4 families in Illinois were left behind. Now, of course, they say if we take care of them we are just tax-and-spend. Tell me that we do not have enough money when we are giving tax breaks like that to not only the wealthiest in the private sector but these individuals who are serving us now as members of the Cabinet.

Behind closed doors in final negotiations of the tax cut bill for millionaires, the White House and Republican leaders exterminated the child tax credit provision that would have helped families like the Johnstons and others making between $10,500 and $26,625. That is the people that we are talking about, people who in their lifetime it will take years and years and years to earn what these individuals will get in 1 year in a tax cut. By eliminating that provision, Republicans were guaranteeing that millionaires like Secretary Snow and Secretary Evans get their full tax cut.

It did not take long for the American people to find out that their neighbors and their friends got the short end of the Republican tax cut stick, and that is why the United States Senate was shamed into passing a Democratic proposal to provide those low-income families with their well-deserved child tax credit that was removed in a secret deal by Vice President CHENEY.

They passed a restoration of the tax cut for those lower-income families, working families by, 94–2. But what are we hearing on this side? Majority Leader DELAY said, ''It ain't going to happen.'' Well, I want to say that I think it ought to happen, I think it will happen, and we need to make it happen.

PRESCRIPTION DRUG PRICES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Speaker, we have heard the word ''outrage'' used several times on the House floor, and I rise tonight to talk about the outrageous prices that American consumers pay for prescription drugs. And I have behind me a chart, and I apologize for those here on the floor and Members who may be watching on their television sets, it is a little hard to read. But I want to go through this because what it compares is what Americans pay, on average, and this varies because we have a very complicated average wholesale price situation formula they use here in the United States, but these are the average prices, and these are prices that we actually checked ourselves.

People have questioned some of the credibility of the sources that I have used. So we did our own research and we went to Munich, Germany about a month ago, and we bought 10 of the most commonly prescribed drugs in the United States. And let us run through.

Cipro, drug made by Bayer. They make the aspirin. They are a German company. In the United States, the average price for 10 tablets, 250 milligrams, $55. We bought it at the Munich airport pharmacy for $35.12, American.

Coumadin. My 85-year-old father takes Coumadin. In the United States the average price, $89.95. The price in Munich, Germany, $21.

Glucophage, a very popular drug, has done wonderful things for people who suffer from diabetes. Glucophage, $21.95 in the United States, only $5 in Germany.

Pravachol, $62.96 in Munich; $149.95 here in the United States.

The list goes on, Prozac, Synthroid, Tamoxifen, $60 in Germany; $360 in the United States.

Zocor, $41.20 in Munich; $89.95. It is the same drugs.

My father takes this Coumadin every day. It is a wonderful drug. Many Americans take Glucophage, and the Congress has spoken on this. We have statutes on the books that would allow Americans access to these drugs at world market prices, but the FDA and the Department of Health and Human Services, under first a Democratic administration and now a Republican administration, has said, oh, no, no, we cannot do that, we cannot guarantee safety.

So we are introducing a new bill and we want to deal with that issue because we want Americans to have access to safe world-class drugs.

What I am holding in my hand is a counterfeit-proof package. There are companies right now that are helping people, like our own Treasury who helped develop the technology that goes into our new counterfeit-proof $20 bill. They now have packaging which they are making for the pharmaceutical industry. For a cost of somewhere between 2 and 5 cents, they can make a blister-pack, counterfeit-proof package.

It goes beyond that. They are coming out with new technologies that are not only counterfeit-proof, but it is tamper-proof. So we can bring these drugs in and the technology will get better to make these drugs safe. For example, I am holding in my hand a little vial, and in this vial my colleagues cannot see it, I can barely see it. Inside this little vial are 150 microcomputer chips. This is the next UPC code so that we actually embed it in packaging, so that we can know where this product is made, where it came from, everything we need to know about it. It can be counterfeit-proof. It can be tamper-proof, and now it can be virtually fail-safe.

People say, well, what about safety? Every day we import thousands of tons of food, and the FDA is responsible for the food and drug safety in the United States. We import tons and tons of food. Last year, we imported 318,000 tons of plantains, and somehow we eat those plantains every day, and we do not worry about the safety.

We can import world-class drugs. I am a Republican and I think that there is nothing wrong with the word ''profit,'' but there is something very wrong with the word ''profiteer.'' I think it is right that Americans pay their fair share of the cost for research in the world, but we should not have to subsidize the starving Swiss.

We have an opportunity in the next several weeks to do something about this. The greatest tragedy in America today is that roughly 29 percent of all seniors tell us that they have had prescriptions that went unfilled because they could not afford these outrageous prices.

Shame on us. Shame on us. We should do something about that. We have the power to change this, and I think this year we finally will.

□ 1730

ISRAEL SHOULD BE COMMENDED FOR GOING AFTER TERRORISTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. ENGEL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, today another suicide bombing happened in Israel. Sixteen innocent people were murdered and more than 150 were injured. The terrorist group Hamas took credit for it and the cycle of violence continues.

Mr. Speaker, homicide bombers, suicide bombers cannot be tolerated. Israel, as any other nation, must do everything it can to go after terrorists, to root out terrorism. As President Bush said, there are no good terrorists, there are only bad; and every nation has an obligation to protect its citizens and go after the terrorists.

That is why it was so disheartening to hear President Bush say Israel's attempted attack on one of the biggest Hamas terrorists, Mr. Rantisi was not helpful. I do not know whether a nation ought to think about what is helpful or not when they are trying to protect their citizens.

We in the United States went halfway around the world to destroy the Taliban in Afghanistan not because the Taliban committed crimes against us, but because the Taliban harbored al Qaeda, which committed heinous acts against us. If we are justified, and we are, in going halfway around the world to destroy terrorists, surely Israel is justified to do the same in her own backyard. After all, it was President Bush who said Osama bin Laden wanted dead or alive, and it was President Bush who talked about Saddam Hussein and his connections with terrorists. We went into Iraq and overthrew Saddam Hussein. Certainly Israel should be encouraged to go after terrorists, not discouraged to go after terrorists; and we should not set a double standard for Israel, we should set the same standard as we would set for ourselves.

Last week there was an agreement to try to proceed on a so-called road map for peace in the Middle East, and all parties agreed that the Palestinian prime minister, the Israeli prime minister and President Bush all talked about going along the path to peace. During that time the prime minister of Israel has dismantled some of the settlements, has talked about having peace with the Palestinians. And what was the response on the Palestinian side? The three terrorist organizations, Hamas, the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, which is part of Arafat's Fattah network, and Hezbollah, all got together and took credit for the assassination of five Israeli soldiers. That was the Palestinian terrorists' answer to peace. The Palestinian prime minister, Machmoud Abbas, who said he would try to persuade the terrorists to have a cease-fire was not able to persuade them at all. In fact, they rejected his calls for a cease-fire. Machmoud Abbas, the Palestinian prime minister, then said he would not use force to try to get the terrorists to stop, he would only try to persuade them.

I would say if Mr. Abbas, the Palestinian prime minister, is not going to attempt to use force to stop terrorists from committing terrorist acts, then Israel has the right to take matters into her own hands and to use force to stop terrorists from committing these heinous acts. After all, since Mr. Rantisi is one of the leaders of Hamas which kills innocent men, women, and children civilians, why should Mr. Rantisi think he is somehow immune to some kind of attacks on his life?

It is very important that Israel, the United States, and all peace-loving countries in the world go after terrorism. And when nations go after terrorism, other nations should help them, not say that it is unhelpful for peace. Let us talk about the road map which everyone seems to be so ecstatic about. The road map will only work if and when the Palestinians decide if and when they are going to put an end to terror and not use terror as a negotiating tool, and the road map should be performance-based, not time-based. In other words, the Palestinians have to perform. They have to stop terrorism before they get their state. If they do not stop terrorism, they do not get their state. They should not merrily march along to statehood in 2004 and 2005 unless they end terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, I think Israel should be commended for going after terrorists. I think all nations should do the same.

PATIENT SAFETY AND FOREIGN PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BURGESS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BURGESS. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to talk about patient safety and the trade policy of this country as it relates to foreign prescription drugs.

If I correctly recall, and do not trust my memory, we can all look it up, back in March of this year this House overwhelmingly approved a bill that would improve patient safety and improve the quality of care delivered in this country. Some of my colleagues have asked us to consider a plan of imported foreign prescription drugs into this country that would run counter to the vote cast by a majority in this House not 4 months ago.

Mr. Speaker, we must approach this problem with thoughtfulness and logic. If we want to address the cost of prescription drugs in this country, we can take several approaches to lower the cost, but any options should not come at the cost of patient safety. Some in this House believe that if Americans had the ability to purchase their drugs from Canada or Mexico or Belize or Europe or Mars, that the United States market would adjust and reflect the importation of cheaper medicines. But let us be clear, foreign countries place price controls on their prescription drugs.

This means that the drugs purchased by Canadian citizens may be priced lower than that which an American citizen will pay for the same compound because of that government's artificial market intervention; but by permitting the reimportation of drugs into this country, we effectively allow the importation of foreign price controls into the United States market as well. This could be shortsighted, and it does run counter to the free market system that is established in this country. If drug reimportation becomes the established policy in this country, the United States would in essence be allowing foreign governments to set the prices for American products.

If we truly believe in the power of the free market, we should remove the market distortion of foreign price controls which ensure that America's seniors and America's uninsured pay the highest price for their medications. And what happens in countries that have adopted price controls? Companies have left those countries. High-skilled jobs are not available, and governments have lost much-needed revenue.

Because of the stranglehold of regulation in European countries, including price controls on pharmaceuticals, Europe is lagging behind in its ability to generate, organize, sustain innovative processes that are increasingly expensive and organizationally complex. The United States biotech industry in the last decade has had a meteoric rise, but we would place a chill on the industry's development if we allowed foreign drug prices to stymie its growth.

More importantly, if we inject foreign drug prices and controls into the United States, we will see less innovation in this very promising new field of science. Most importantly, underlying all of the complex trade issues is one that ultimately impacts us all, and that is patient safety. We want to ensure that the drugs that our wives, children, mothers, and fathers take are free of dangerous substances and that they work as advertised. Only our FDA in this country can ensure the safety of drugs for American citizens.

I think this House would be shirking its duty if we created a system that relied upon the action of regulatory officials of Canada, Thailand, Belize, or Barbados to ensure the safety of American patients. Allowing drug reimportation from foreign countries would only be a signal to foreign drug counterfeiters that it is open season on the health and safety of American citizens.

Mr. Speaker, I could relate stories from my medical practice where patients had what may be politely termed as therapeutic misadventures by the ingestion of drugs which were imported illegally from Mexico. The House can approach the drug cost issues through far less shortsighted solutions than permitting drug importation from foreign countries.

Make no mistake, the pharmaceutical companies in this country have an obligation to control their costs and be certain that any profits they receive are reasonable. Without this, we will continue to hear the arguments for reimportation nightly on the House floor. The purchasing power of the Federal Government should bring down the cost of safe pharmaceuticals in this country.

Mr. Speaker, we should remember the admonition of a long-ago physician to first do no harm. In this House, that would be wise counsel to heed.

INFORMED CITIZENRY VERSUS NEED FOR SECRECY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, a critical problem that demands constant oversight in a democracy is the tension between an informed Congress and an informed citizenry because both are necessary for a democracy. That tension is against the need for secrecy in some instances and in the interest of national security. That is what I wish to draw Members' attention to today.

From Watergate to Iran contra, to the Gulf of Tonkin Resolution, we have seen and experienced and learned from the peril of the executive branch's use of secrecy in the name of national security to accomplish unlawful deception and illegal acts.

We face this issue again now in regard to Iraq's weapons of mass destruction and the flat assertions by the President of the United States that Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction pose an imminent threat to the United States. After all, it was these assertions that led many of the Members of the legislature, both in the House of Representatives and in the other body, to support the war, and so did many Americans.

So it is a significant question whether the President's assurance was warranted by the evidence, whether he had something to back up these repeated assertions that the weapons of mass destruction held by the former ruler of Iraq were indeed an imminent threat to the United States.

So where are these weapons of mass destruction? One day the President assured us that they will be found. The next day we are told that he only meant to claim that Iraq had programs to develop weapons of mass destruction, and that program was under way. But then the day after that his spokesman said never mind, even if Saddam had no weapons imminently threatening us, he was a bad and evil person who deserved to be destroyed.

Now, these contradictions have begun to be noted by more and more people, and I want to report that some in the public are changing their view about this war and what brought us into it as American casualties mount in Iraq, as violence and civilian strife grow worse there, and disease and hunger spread in the aftermath of war.

Now, whatever the ultimate final assessment is that will be made about Iraq, the fundamental problem that I bring to Members' attention this evening is if the President deceives the Congress and the public on an issue as sensitive as war or peace, it raises the greatest constitutional issues about whether he is abusing his office, whether he is violating his oath, and whether he is misleading the American people.

It is particularly critical because this President's doctrine of preventive war, never before employed by any of the preceding Presidents of this great country, suggests that he may or will be trying to persuade America to support other preventive wars in the future. Will that campaign be based on misrepresentation?

MISSING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION: IS LYING ABOUT THE REASON FOR WAR AN IMPEACHABLE OFFENSE?

(By John W. Dean)

President George W. Bush has got a very serious problem. Before asking Congress for a Joint Resolution authorizing the use of American military forces in Iraq, he made a number of unequivocal statements about the reason the United States needed to pursue the most radical actions any nation can undertake—acts of war against another nation.

Now it is clear that many of his statements appear to be false. In the past, Bush's White House has been very good at sweeping ugly issues like this under the carpet, and out of sight. But it is not clear that they will be able to make the question of what happened to Saddam Hussein's weapons of mass destruction (WMDs) go away—unless, perhaps, they start another war.

That seems unlikely. Until the questions surrounding the Iraq war are answered, Congress and the public may strongly resist more of President Bush's warmaking.

Presidential statements, particularly on matters of national security, are held to an expectation of the highest standard of truthfulness. A president cannot stretch, twist or distort facts and get away with it. President Lyndon Johnson's distortions of the truth about Vietnam forced him to stand down from reelection. President Richard Nixon's false statements about Watergate forced his resignation.

Frankly, I hope the WMDs are found, for it will end the matter. Clearly, the story of the missing WMDs is far from over. And it is too early, of course, to draw conclusions. But is not too early to explore the relevant issues.

PRESIDENT BUSH'S STATEMENTS ON IRAQ'S WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION

Readers may not recall exactly what President Bush said about weapons of mass destruction; I certainly didn't. Thus, I have compiled these statements below. In reviewing them, I saw that he had, indeed, been as explicit and declarative as I had recalled.

Bush's statements, in chronological order, were:

''Right now, Iraq is expanding and improving facilities that were used for the production of biological weapons.''—United Nations Address, September 12, 2002.

''Iraq has stockpiled biological and chemical weapons, and is rebuilding the facilities used to make more of those weapons.

''We have sources that tell us that Saddam Hussein recently authorized Iraqi field commanders to use chemical weapons—the very weapons the dictator tells us he does not have.''—Radio Address, October 5, 2002.

''The Iraqi regime . . . possesses and produces chemical and biological weapons. It is seeking nuclear weapons.

''We know that the regime has produced thousands of tons of chemical agents, including mustard gas, sarin nerve gas, VX nerve gas.

''We've also discovered through intelligence that Iraq has a growing fleet of manned and unmanned aerial vehicles that could be used to disperse chemical or biological weapons across broad areas. We're concerned that Iraq is exploring ways of using these UAVs for missions targeting the United States.

''The evidence indicates that Iraq is reconstituting its nuclear weapons program. Saddam Hussein has held numerous meetings with Iraqi nuclear scientists, a group he calls his ''nuclear mejahideen''—his nuclear holy warriors. Satellite photographs reveal that Iraq is rebuilding facilities at sites that have been part of its nuclear program in the past. Iraq has attempted to purchase high-strength aluminum tubes and other equipment needed for gas centrifuges, which are used to enrich uranium for nuclear weapons.''—Cincinnati, Ohio Speech, October 7, 2002.

''Our intelligence officials estimate that Saddam Hussein had the materials to produce as much as 500 tons of sarin, mustard and VX nerve agent.''—State of the Union Address, January 28, 2003.

''Intelligence gathered by this and other governments leaves no doubt that the Iraq regime continues to possess and conceal some of the most lethal weapons ever devised.''—Address to the Nation, March 17, 2003.

SHOULD THE PRESIDENT GET THE BENEFIT OF THE DOUBT?

When these statements were made, Bush's let-me-mince-no-words posture was convincing to many Americans. Yet much of the rest of the world, and many other Americans, doubted them.

As Bush's veracity was being debated at the united Nations, it was also being debated on campuses—including those where I happened to be lecturing at the time.

On several occasions, students asked me the following question: Should they believe the President of the United States? My answer was that they should give the President the benefit of the doubt, for several reasons deriving from the usual procedures that have operated in every modern White House and that, I assumed, had to be operating in the Bush White House, too.

First, I assured the students that these statements had all been carefully considered and crafted. Presidential statements are the result of a process, not a moment's thought. White House speechwriters process raw information, and their statements are passed on to senior aides who have both substantive knowledge and political insights. And this all occurs before the statement ever reaches the President for his own review and possible revision.

Second, I explained that—at least in every White House and administration with which I was familiar, from Truman to Clinton—statements with national security implications were the most carefully considered of all. The White House is aware that, in making these statements, the President is speaking not only to the nation, but also to the world.

Third, I pointed out to the students, these statements are typically corrected rapidly if they are later found to be false. And in this case, far from backpedaling from the President's more extreme claims, Bush's press secretary, Ari Fleischer had actually, at times, been even more emphatic than the President had. For example, on January 9, 2003, Fleischer stated, during his press briefing, ''We know for a fact that there are weapons there.''

In addition, others in the Administration were similarly quick to back the President up, in some cases with even more unequivocal statements. Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld repeatedly claimed that Saddam had WMDs—and even went so far as to claim he knew ''where they are; they're in the area around Tikrit and Baghdad.''

Finally, I explained to the students that the political risk was so great that, to me, it was inconceivable that Bush would make these statements if he didn't have damn solid intelligence to back him up. Presidents do not stick their necks out only to have them chopped off by political opponents on an issue as important as this, and if there was any doubt, I suggested, Bush's political advisers would be telling him to hedge. Rather than stating a matter as fact, he would say: ''I have been advised,'' or ''Our intelligence reports strongly suggest,'' or some such similar hedge. But Bush had not done so.

So what are we now to conclude if Bush's statements are found, indeed, to be as grossly inaccurate as they currently appear to have been?

After all, no weapons of mass destruction have been found, and given Bush's statements, they should not have been very hard to find—for they existed in large quantities, ''thousands of tons'' of chemical weapons alone. Moreover, according to the statements, telltale facilities, groups of scientists who could testify, and production equipment also existed.

So there is all that? And how can we reconcile the White House's unequivocal statements with the fact that they may not exist?

There are two main possibilities. One that something is seriously wrong within the Bush White House's national security operations. That seems difficult to believe. The other is that the President has deliberately misled the nation, and the world.

A DESPERATE SEARCH FOR WMDS HAS SO FAR YIELDED LITTLE, IF ANY, FRUIT

Even before formally declaring war against Saddam Hussein's Iraq, the President had dispatched American military special forces into Iraq to search for weapons of mass destruction, which he knew would provide the primary justification for Operation Freedom. None were found.

Throughout Operation Freedom's penetration of Iraq and drive toward Baghdad, the search for WMDs continued. None were found.

As the coalition forces gained control of Iraqi cities and countryside, special search teams were dispatched to look for WMDs. None were found

During the past two and a half months, according to reliable news reports, military patrols have visited over 300 suspected WMD sites throughout Iraq. None of the prohibited weapons were found there.

BRITISH AND AMERICAN PRESS REACTION TO THE MISSING WMDS

British Prime Minister Tony Blair is also under serious attack in England, which he dragged into the war unwillingly, based on the missing WMDs. In Britain, the missing WMDs are being treated as scandalous; so far, the reaction in the U.S. has been milder.

New York Times columnist Paul Krugman has taken Bush sharply to task, asserting that it is ''long past time for this administration to be held accountable.'' ''The public was told that Saddam posed an imminent threat,'' Krugman argued. ''If that claim was fraudulent,'' he continued, ''the selling of the war is arguably the worst scandal in American political history—worse than Watergate, worse than Iran-Contra.'' But most media outlets have reserved judgment as the search for WMDs in Iraq continues.

Still, signs do not look good. Last week, the Pentagon announced it was shifting its search from looking for WMD sites, to looking for people who can provide leads as to where the missing WMDs might be.

Under Secretary of State for Arms Control and International Security John Bolton, while offering no new evidence, assured Congress that WMDs will indeed be found. And he advised that a new unit called the Iraq Survey Group, composed of some 1,400 experts and technicians from around the world, is being deployed to assist in the searching.

But, as Time magazine reported, the leads are running out. According to Time, the Marine general in charge explained that ''[w]e've been to virtually every ammunition supply point between the Kuwaiti border and Baghdad,'' and remarked flatly, ''They're simply not there.''

Perhaps most troubling, the President has failed to provide any explanation of how he could have made his very specific statements, yet now be unable to back them up with supporting evidence. Was there an Iraqi informant thought to be reliable, who turned out not to be? Were satellite photos innocently, if negligently, misinterpreted? Or was his evidence not as solid as he led the world to believe?

The absence of any explanation for the gap between the statements and reality only increases the sense that the President's misstatements may actually have been intentional lies.

INVESTIGATING THE IRAQI WAR INTELLIGENCE REPORTS

Even now, while the jury is still out as to whether intentional misconduct occurred, the President has a serious credibility problem. Newsweek magazine posed the key questions: ''If America has entered a new age of pre-emption—when it must strike first because it cannot afford to find out later if terrorists possess nuclear or biological weapons—exact intelligence is critical. How will the United States take out a mad despot or a nuclear bomb hidden in a cave if the CIA can't say for sure where they are? And how will Bush be able to maintain support at home and abroad?''

In an apparent attempt to bolster the President's credibility, and his own, Secretary Rumsfeld himself has now called for a Defense Department investigation into what went wrong with the pre-war intelligence. New York Times columnist Maureen Dowd finds this effort about on par with O.J.'s looking for his wife's killer. But there may be a difference: Unless the members of the Administration can find someone else to blame—informants, surveillance technology, lower-level personnel, you name it—they may not escape fault themselves.

Congressional committees are also looking into the pre-war intelligence collection and evaluation. Senator John Warner (R–VA), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said his committee and the Senate Intelligence Committee would jointly investigate the situation. And the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence plans an investigation.

These investigations are certainly appropriate, for there is potent evidence of either a colossal intelligence failure or misconduct—and either would be a serious problem. When the best case scenario seems to be mere incompetence, investigations certainly need to be made.

Senator Bob Graham—a former chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee—told CNN's Aaron Brown, that while he still hopes they find WMDs or at least evidence thereof, he has also contemplated three other possible alternative scenarios: ''One is that [the WMDs] were spirited out of Iraq, which maybe is the worst of all possibilities, because now the very thing that we were trying to avoid, proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, could be in the hands of dozens of groups. Second, that we had bad intelligence. Or third, that the intelligence was satisfactory but that it was manipulated, so as just to present to the American people and to the world those things that made the case for the necessity of war against Iraq.''

Senator Graham seems to believe there is a serious chance that it is the final scenario that reflects reality. Indeed, Graham told CNN ''there's been a pattern of manipulation by this administration.''

Graham has good reason to complain. According to the New York Times, he was one of the few members of the Senate who saw the national intelligence estimate that was the basis for Bush's decisions. After reviewing it, Senator Graham requested that the Bush Administration declassify the information before the Senate voted on the Administration's resolution requesting use of the military in Iraq.

But rather than do so, CIA Director Tenet merely sent Graham a letter discussing the findings. Graham then complained that Tenet's letter only addressed ''findings that supported the administration's position on Iraq,'' and ignored information that raised questions about intelligence. In short, Graham suggested that the Administration, by cherrypicking only evidence to its own liking, had manipulated the information to support its conclusion.

Recent statements by one of the high-level officials privy to the decisionmaking process that lead to the Iraqi war also strongly suggests manipulation, if not misuse of the intelligence agencies. Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz, during an interview with Sam Tannenhaus of Vanity Fair magazine, said: ''The truth is that for reasons that have a lot to do with the U.S. government bureaucracy we settled on the one issue that everyone could agree on which was weapons of mass destruction as the core reason.'' More recently, Wolfowitz added what most have believed all along, that the reason we went after Iraq is that ''[t]he country swims on a sea of oil.''

WORSE THAN WATERGATE? A POTENTIAL HUGE SCANDAL IF WMDS ARE STILL MISSING

Krugman is right to suggest a possible comparison to Watergate. In the three decades since Watergate, this is the first potential scandal I have seen that could make Watergate pale by comparison. If the Bush Administration intentionally manipulated or misrepresented intelligence to get Congress to authorize, and the public to support, military action to take control of Iraq, then that would be a monstrous misdeed.

As I remarked in an earlier column, this Administration may be due for a scandal. While Bush narrowly escaped being dragged into Enron, it was not, in any event, his doing. But the war in Iraq is all Bush's doing, and it is appropriate that he be held accountable.

To put it bluntly, if Bush has taken Congress and the nation into war based on bogus information, he is cooked. Manipulation or deliberate misuse of national security intelligence data, if proven, could be ''a high crime'' under the Constitution's impeachment clause. It would also be a violation of federal criminal law, including the broad federal anti-conspiracy statute, which renders it a felony ''to defraud the United States, or any agency thereof in any manner or for any purpose.''

It's important to recall that when Richard Nixon resigned, he was about to be impeached by the House of Representatives for misusing the CIA and FBI. After Watergate, all presidents are on notice that manipulating or misusing any agency of the executive branch improperly is a serious abuse of presidential power.

Nixon claimed that his misuses of the federal agencies for his political purposes were in the interest of national security. The same kind of thinking might lead a President to manipulate and misuse national security agencies or their intelligence to create a phony reason to lead the nation into a politically desirable war. Let us hope that is not the case.

CONTROVERSY INVOLVING TEXAS LEGISLATURE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. LAMPSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I find it a little astounding that I come here to ask the question of what is happening to our government. Why are our fellow citizens withholding information from us, even from Members of Congress? Why are some of the agencies that are designed to help us seemingly working against us? It is all our government.

I am a little bit astounded at having to come here and again tell the story about what happened when the Texas legislature ran amuck, when members of that legislative body began to respond to actions there that have been reflective of what the United States House of Representatives has been, very divisive, very unfortunate, where people get to the point where they feel like they are not allowed to be a part of the process and they have to rebel against the system by looking for parliamentary procedure to try to send their point or make their point or get their message out. Fifty-five brave men and women allowed their backs to be pushed up against the wall for months and finally could take it no more and broke the quorum of the Texas legislature to stop that from happening there. And then, lo and behold, what happened following it started all sorts of things to happen that include Federal agencies becoming involved in investigations to look for missing Texas legislators.

The people of this country ought to be outraged that Federal agencies designed to protect us, designed to do good for us, were called into a political fray in the State of Texas, and since that time Members of Congress have asked repeatedly of the Department of Homeland Security, the Justice Department, and the transportation agency for information that would give us a better understanding of who played what role in this Federal Government being involved in an issue that was a political one in the State of Texas and finding funds that we know are already very short for us. We do not know how we are going to be paying for all of the many, many needs that our homeland security faces. We are very short-funded as it is.

Yet we could find the money, the time, the effort, the personnel, the equipment to track an airplane across the country of a member, a little cotton farmer out in west Texas who was going off to Ardmore, Oklahoma, and stopped off to see his mother. If he had not done that, they would have probably found him. To have agencies respond in the way that they have, there is something wrong with this picture. The people of this country truly ought to be outraged.

It has been over 3 weeks now since we began to ask formally of these agencies, give us the information that you have, show us surveillance tapes, give us tapes of phone messages. Even the Director of Homeland Security indicated that it was a potential criminal investigation that is going on and that was the excuse for not turning over some of this information at the time.

Ladies and gentlemen, it is time for us as a body, as a Congress, to stop this kind of action in the United States of America, whether it happens to Texas or Louisiana or Michigan or any other State in this Nation, and we truly ought to be outraged and stand up and say we are not going to stand for that secrecy anymore. Let the agencies that exist as a part of our government give us the information that we need to know that our government is working in our behalf and not working against us; that we are not having some kind of a political soiree in this country that is going to allow power to be held by a few at the expense of so very, very many.

We even had destroyed documents over time. What is there to hide? If there is nothing on the tapes that is incriminating to anyone, then make it public and let us see them. If there is something there, as certainly the indication is starting to be—why else is there a cover-up—then perhaps there may be criminal activity. Something is wrong with this picture and something is going wrong with our government. It is time for us to begin to ask the questions and demand the answers from all of the agencies that can tell the citizens of this country that we are not going to be living in a police state, that we are going to be able to all participate in making the policy of this Nation and the policy of our States, and that we are not going to have to fight our way through the darkness of night in order to play the role that we so rightly deserve.

TEXAS LEGISLATIVE CONTROVERSY AND POSSIBLE FEDERAL INVOLVEMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Speaker, we are calling today on Secretary Ridge to uncover the cover-up. What have you got to hide?

On May 11, 2003, Mr. Speaker, a number of Democratic members of the Texas House of Representatives absented themselves from the floor of the State House in Austin, Texas, in a proper procedural move to defeat a quorum in that body. Subsequently, on that same date, the Speaker of the Texas House of Representatives, Tom Craddick, ordered the Texas Department of Public Safety, the troopers, to locate the absent legislators and return them to the capitol. The DPS thereupon took steps to locate the lawmakers and contacted the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, charged with defeating terrorism, and asked for Federal assistance. They have now had to admit and acknowledge that they contacted the Air and Marine Interdiction Coordination Center, a department within DHS, seeking information; and they acknowledge they used Federal resources to respond to this request in spite of the fact that it is a State political matter. In fact, in violation of the law, a criminal tracking system was used. The Department of Homeland Security has now admitted that the department has in its possession certain audiotapes, transcripts, and other documents concerning its contacts with Texas DPS officials. In spite of this admission, the department has failed and refused and still fails and refuses to release this information.

Disturbingly, Mr. Speaker, now the Secretary of Homeland Defense has admitted that there is an ongoing criminal investigation into this matter. But it only gets worse. Now we learn the FBI has been involved. Initially the FBI denied involvement. Now they have admitted otherwise. On May 13, the Houston Chronicle reported, ''Spokesmen for the Justice Department and the FBI indicated those agencies likely would have no reason to assist the State officers in apprehending the Democrats.'' On that same date, ''A Justice spokesman said Tuesday he knew of no role for the department.'' Later on that date, ''FBI spokesman Bill Carter said he was unaware of any request for that agency to assist. 'I don't know of any authority that would allow us to even contemplate getting involved.' ''

But, Mr. Speaker, the story begins to change. A couple of days later, on June 5, the FBI denied participation but they did not know what was about to come out, because State Representative Juan Manuel Escobar reported he got a cellular phone call from Corpus Christi-based FBI Special Agent David Troutman asking whether State Representative Gabi Canales was with him.

''The FBI was conducting no surveillance at all,'' said Special Agent Bob Doguim. But listen. He said, ''I'm not saying no call took place.'' Later they said, ''An FBI spokesman said agency action was nothing really uncommon.'' Dallas Morning News, June 6.

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, we learned that phone records for Deputy Attorney General Jay Kimbrough show a 5 minute 16 second phone call at 4:24 p.m. May 12 to an Ardmore, Oklahoma, FBI office. That is after State officials learned that the Federal Aviation Administration had tracked the plane of one of the missing lawmakers. A half hour later the records show a return phone call, 2 minutes 16 seconds, from the FBI office to Mr. Kimbrough. Mr. Kimbrough is head of Homeland Security in Texas. After the FBI saying they had nothing to do with it, now we have got the phone records. Now we are getting to the truth.

Additionally, at the State level, on May 14, the Texas DPS ordered the destruction of all notes, photos, correspondence and other records relating to the members of the House of Representatives and the order specifically contained the words ''retain no copies.''

In brief, it is our position that any effort to use Federal law enforcement or Homeland Security resources to participate in a State political matter is improper and illegal. Further, the destruction of records by DPS, which limits the ability to determine the extent of Federal involvement, coupled with the refusal by the Department of Homeland Security and Tom Ridge to produce its records, are matters of great concern.

Mr. Ridge, stop the cover-up. Release the information. We want full and complete audiotapes of all conversation, full and complete copies of all communications, tapes, videotapes, recordings, letters, notes, documents, schedules, summaries, indices, written records of every sort, full and complete copies of all communications, full and complete original files, full and complete records of telephone calls and contacts, full and complete records of any and all persons, Federal officials, State officials, law enforcement personnel, agencies or entities that have contacted or been contacted by Homeland Security.

Mr. Ridge should be advised further that the U.S. Congress may request the production of additional information as a result of his testimony. We will expect him to acknowledge under oath that no records have been altered, deleted, destroyed, redacted or otherwise withheld in whole or in part. It is critical that we request a subpoena and a subpoena duces tecum be issued forthwith and this information be brought before the United States Congress.

The Department of Public Safety destroyed records. Homeland Security has admitted to possessing and withholding audiotapes and other information. They have now admitted that a criminal investigation is ongoing. The FBI claimed to be not involved in any way. Now we learn of telephone calls to and from the FBI.

Mr. Speaker, is this just what we might call another third-rate burglary? Mr. Ridge, stop the cover-up. Release the information. Come clean with the United States Congress and the American public.

ANOTHER TERRORIST ATTACK IN JERUSALEM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. CAPPS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Speaker, the news from Jerusalem today is horrifying. Another terrorist attack on a civilian bus. So many dead. Many more are injured and even more are bereaved. Today's atrocity follows and may have been in response to an attack yesterday on a Hamas leader in Gaza which injured its target but killed innocent victims. When will this cycle of violence end? Not even a week has passed since the President received the commitment of Ariel Sharon and Abu Mazen to do everything in their power to stop the killing and pursue the path of negotiations. Instead, we have terrorist attacks, attempted assassinations, horrific retaliations and more bloody reprisals. Last week's optimism has yielded to this week's despair.

I urge President Bush to make it clear to both sides that the United States will continue to insist on the terms agreed to at the Aqaba summit, an end to the violence, the dismantling of the illegal outposts and the resumption of security cooperation. Clearly, Abu Mazen must do much more to stop terrorism. But it is obvious that he cannot stop the murderous Palestinian extremists without help from Israel. And Israel will never succeed in vanquishing terrorism through military force and continued occupation. A political solution is the only answer.

The road map to peace has hit a tremendous obstacle. But we have no choice but to persevere. If this initiative is destroyed, Israelis and Palestinians may be doomed to a life of violence and suffering forever. Such a fate is not what these two peoples deserve, and it is surely not what America can afford.

RUBBER-STAMPING TAX LEGISLATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FEENEY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we are going to have another session of the rubber stamp Congress. There is an old song by Tennessee Ernie Ford that goes, ''You load 16 tons, and what do you get? Another day older and deeper in debt.''

This Congress at a Committee on Rules meeting tonight, the Committee on Ways and Means chairman did not even show up. The bill was all greased. We are going to pass $80 billion more of debt out of here tomorrow.

Now, the Democrats offered a bill that would have cost $3.5 billion to take care of those people earning between $10,500 and $26,500.

When the Republicans got this bill, they said, Oh, boy: Let's go, and so they have crammed everything in it that President Bush wants. They are going to come down here, and we will have about an hour's debate, half an hour on the Democratic side, half an hour on the Republican side; and they will stamp that baby and out she goes. That is how this Congress is operating. Not one single hearing will have occurred on this bill, not one single hearing. $80 billion in a half-hour.

Think about it. That is why my colleague, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), came out here, to show the almost-$1 trillion in debt that has been accumulated over the last 2 years under this administration. Well, tomorrow we are going to add another layer of frosting on the cake, and everybody will come with their stamp in their hand and do it.

Now, we also had a discussion here with one of the gentlemen from Georgia who said next week we are going to deal with the issue of Medicare. There has been no bill put in the Congress for the single largest program in the Congress that the government runs, and that is the Medicare program. The Committee on Ways and Means that I sit on has had not a single hearing on the proposal that is being brought in here. It is being greased somewhere to take up to the Committee on Rules and run down here on the floor, and, in a couple of hours, everybody will bring their stamp out and go, Boom, I approve of everything George Bush does.

That is what this Congress is about, approving whatever George Bush does. Nothing else. There is no thinking going on in here. They just wait for their orders from the White House, go up to the Committee on Rules, slap the bill together, bring it to the floor, and stamp it ''approved.''

Now, that is no way for the United States Congress to operate. We were made in the first section of the Constitution because the founders of this country believed that the Congress was where the basis of our government should derive, that there should be discussion among the 535 Members of both bodies as to what is going to happen in this country.

But this time we are in a one-party government. It is a parliament with a fixed-end, and this party is President Bush, the Senate and the House; and they run them down here and run them through and stamp them, and that is the end of it.

Now, there is a serious problem in that kind of government, because it makes it very partisan. I was told that the Medicare bill is written, but that you have to ask the chairman to go up to a room and sit there and read it in the room. You cannot take it out; you cannot take it to your office. I am a Member of Congress. I was elected by 690,000 people, and so was every other Member. But I am not allowed to read the bill until the day they drop it up here in the committee and ram it through the House in 24 hours.

People I go home to, they say, What is in the bill, Jim? What does this do, what does that do?

I do not know. And it is not because I will not read or I am not smart or I will not work or I will not do what has to be done, but this is the way this place is being run. People are not being given a chance to discuss this.

We have got an even bigger issue, and that is the whole issue of how we got into war. Everywhere in Great Britain right now the belief is that Tony Blair is toast. The liberals are calling for an inquiry. And this House will not do it, because the Republicans have rubber-stamped what we did, ''I approve of Mr. Bush.''

SHORTCHANGING VETERANS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. RYAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. RYAN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am a new Member of this body, I was just sworn in in January, and as a new Member there is a certain awe to this Chamber, a certain awe to the legislative process and the idea of priorities. You come into this body with the notion of certain priorities that are not Democratic, they are not Republican but they are priorities of the American people.

Unfortunately, it did not take very long for me to recognize that we all do not share the same priorities. We can talk about tax cuts, and we can talk about deficits, and we can talk about our debt; but you just do not have tax cuts without some reaction somewhere down the line in the budget, and I wanted to speak tonight to share with the American people and share with my colleagues my own personal experience that I had over the last few weeks, really since Memorial Day, back in my district, which is northeastern Ohio, Youngstown and Akron, Ohio, and everywhere in between, the cities of Niles and Warren, where there is a strong concentration of veterans.

The reason I rise tonight is to share for the record the feelings, the emotions of the people back in my district. Let me just say, quite frankly, that they are tired of the public relations gimmicks, they are tired of the press conferences, they are tired of the salutations to the veterans. Meanwhile, back at the ranch, their budgets are being cut for the veterans, we are not able to service all the veterans that are beginning to move into the VA system, and we are spending our tax money, and borrowing more money, to give back, when we are cutting short what the veterans deserve.

About 3 months ago or so we passed a resolution out of this body saying that we have unequivocal support and appreciation for our troops. Unequivocal. But for the veterans, we are going to cut your budget.

We just had a Committee on Veterans Affairs meeting. I have been fortunate to serve on the Committee on Veterans Affairs. Here are the President's recommendations to save money at the VA: first, annual fees for some Category 7 veterans; annual fees for all Category 8 veterans; the co-pay went from just a couple of dollars to $7 for prescription drugs, and now it is going to go, I believe the proposal is, from $7 to $15.

Mr. Speaker, I think in this country we are beginning to recognize that the leadership down here is not addressing the problems of our veterans. We are not taking care of those people who we sent to hell, where they lost limbs, had their health damaged for the rest of their lives. And now one proposal is to say if your disability is service-related under 30 percent, that we are no longer going to cover you.

Where are the priorities in this Chamber, where are the priorities in this country, when we stop respecting our veterans? That is the question that we have, that is the question that the American people want answered, and that is what the veterans in the 17th Congressional District want answered. When did we stop respecting our soldiers?

We pass resolutions, we thank, we do press conferences, we turn the PR machines on; but meanwhile, we have veterans that we have not taken care of. The ones I can speak of in northeast Ohio are extremely upset. We talk about tax cuts; but as Tom Friedman talked about today in The New York Times, the reality is, it is service cuts, and, unfortunately, in America we have shown that the priorities are not the veterans.

I had an old law school professor that said follow the money and you will follow the priorities. The money is being cut from the veterans, and that shows us that the priorities here in this body and in this country are not for the veterans, but they are for those people who are going to be getting the big tax cuts. It is not a Democrat or Republican thing, and we are all for tax cuts, we all want to give money back, but not at the expense of the veterans who have fought to give us the freedoms that we enjoy today.

BEING FAIR TO VETERANS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 7, 2003, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I was hoping that my colleague would remain in the Chamber for the next hour while we talk a little bit about exactly what the Committee on Veterans Affairs has done and the discussion of the cuts that are being made to the veterans budget. We will get into that a little bit later. But tonight I want to talk about something called SBP, and we will discuss it in great length. But I want to introduce you to somebody first. Her name is Dottie Welch.

Dottie's story goes something like this: When Lt. Colonel Roger Welch of the United States Army retired and signed up for the military survivor benefit plan, better known now as SBP, years ago, he was told that in the event of his death, SBP would pay his wife, Dottie, 55 percent of his retirement pay for the rest of her life.

When he signed an irrevocable agreement to pay annually-increasing SBP premiums for the rest of his life, he did not know that his wife's future SBP benefit actually would be one-third less than what they were led to believe.

When Roger died in June of 2002, Dottie was dismayed to learn that there would be an offset, an offset based on her husband's Social Security-covered military earnings, that would reduce her benefits. With Social Security survivor benefits and the reduced SBP annuity, her total income is $384 a month less than she and Roger thought she would have to live on.

Dottie thinks the Social Security offset is just plain wrong. No one will tell her why it is there and why it is so large. Her husband, Roger, only had 5 years of military service covered by Social Security.

Dottie Welch's case highlights one significant inequity of the military SBP and the reason why so many retirees and survivors are upset about its current situation.

Unfortunately, this is only the first of several ways that Uniform Service Survivor Benefits relative to premiums being paid fall far short of what retirees and survivors were promised and what is afforded survivors of other Federal retirees.

There are three major SBP inequities. But before I go into those inequities tonight, I would like to pause for a moment and recognize my good friend from South Carolina (Mr. WILSON), who has been a stalwart supporter of the veterans of this country.

I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to be here tonight to join my friend, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER), who has authored H.R. 548, the Military Survivors Benefit Improvement Act of 2003. The gentleman is a champion of veterans and veterans' spouses because his Pensacola community has some of the highest concentrations of veterans in America. I am particularly happy to see his efforts, because I am a veteran myself.

Under the current plan, thousands of retirees and spouses who enrolled in the original survivors benefit plan have come to receive approximately 23 percent less coverage than they had initially anticipated. Since its inception, the government's cost share has steadily dwindled from 40 percent to 17 percent. It is our intention to revise the plan in order to reinstate the original coverage offered by the 1972 version of the survivor benefits plan.

I believe there is no better way to convey the importance of this legislative revision than to examine the hardships felt by a South Carolina family who put their trust and their money in the original version of the 1972 survivors benefit plan.

Donna Fleming of Mt. Pleasant in Charleston County, South Carolina, became a widow in 1998. Her husband had served in the United States Army and upon retirement had sought the benefits of SBP. Like many Americans enrolled in the plan, the couple was unaware of the age 62 offset benefit reduction provision, and were subsequently confronted with the news of the offset years later.

Donna's husband has since passed, and she has managed to meet her daily expenses through SBP, occasionally dipping into her savings for major bills. However, Donna will soon be 62, and still has not received notification as to the exact amount of the offset. She expects that it may be more than $6,000 a year, $500 a month. She then will be forced to draw from her savings more and more.

Mr. Speaker, this is not the intent of the original legislation. It is every family's fear that their loved ones may face financial hardship following their death, and in Donna's case, that fear has become reality. In her words, ''This country owes military families, for which they have dedicated their entire lives.''

Please join us in supporting H.R. 548, the Military Survivors Benefit Improvement Act of 2003. Join us in restoring justice for those enrolled in this plan for our Nation's military personnel, their devoted spouses, and their loving families.

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. WILSON), for his comments and his support of veterans' issues. I also wish to add my congratulations and best wishes to him as he very soon becomes one of those retirees after serving many years in the Army Guard in his home State.

Mr. Speaker, there are three major SBP inequities. One is that thousands of people who bought SBP coverage were not briefed that most survivors' SBP annuities would be reduced substantially after age 62; two, the 40 percent government subsidy envisioned by Congress and touted by the services to encourage retirees' participation has plunged to 17 percent; three, the government provides Federal civilian survivors a substantially higher share of retired pay for life with no benefit reduction at any age.

The impact of these inequities is, as Members can imagine, devastating to many survivors, because SBP is not exactly a king's ransom at 55 percent of retired pay. At 35 percent, SBP provides only a poverty level or lower annuity for most survivors, even those of relatively senior officers.

So I am here tonight to provide more specifics on how the military SBP program is not providing, is not providing the level of protection military survivors need and deserve and were expecting; and why my bill, H.R. 548, the Military Survivors Benefit Improvement Act of 2003, is what is needed now to fix the current problem.

The first issue that we need to discuss tonight is something that I call the benefit reduction shock. It is incredulous to many that such an important feature of SBP, the reduced age 62 annuity that applies to the vast majority of military survivors, was never explained to retirees being asked to sign up for the program in the seventies and in the early eighties, but it is true.

I have in my hand a copy of the actual SBP Election Form 5002 signed by a retired member in 1982 in two different places. It specifies that SBP will pay the survivor 55 percent of the member's retired pay. Nowhere, even in the fine print, does it mention any lower figure. We can only speculate about how or why this key fact was omitted, but it hardly matters now to those who were misled by the forms and by the briefings.

Certainly, the offset was extremely complicated for retirement counselors to explain, and it was almost impossible to tell any particular retiree at that point what SBP amount his or her survivor would actually receive after attaining the age of 62.

For members who attained retirement eligibility before 1985, the offset represented the amount of the survivors' Social Security benefit that was attributable to the Member's Social Security-covered military earnings, because the military only came under the Social Security system in 1957, and that amount varied widely for different retirees, and the rules for the calculation of Social Security benefits due to military versus civilian employment are arcane at best.

When they first learned of the age 62 benefit reduction, years, sometimes decades, after they purchased SBP, many older retirees and survivors expressed outrage in the mistaken belief that Congress had changed the law on them after the fact.

Not so. The age 62 reduction was part of the initial SBP law enacted in 1972, but this critical piece of information did not find its way into most military retirement briefings and SBP election forms until many years later after complaints, years after complaints started to roll in.

Large numbers of retirees and survivors feel betrayed by what they perceive as a bait-and-switch under which they were asked to sign irrevocable contracts to pay lifetime SBP premiums without being told what the annuity level they were actually buying was.

Dottie Welch is far from the only spouse who is very much aware of the impact of the Social Security offset. One survivor's husband was a Navy hard-hat diver during World War II, then an electronics technician on a nuclear submarine until his retirement in 1966. When he died in May of 2002, his widow had no idea she would be hit by the offset. ''I was shocked. I almost fell out of the chair, and wondered why God hadn't taken me too,'' she says today.

In the grief that followed her husband's death, this 78-year-old widow also faced numerous family bills and health problems. When her SBP annuity started, she was stunned to find out that it was one-third, one-third less than what she had expected. Now faced with $21,000 in bills, she was advised to declare bankruptcy, and feared she would lose her home trying to pay her debts. Her financial struggles eventually led her to the Navy-Marine Corps Relief Society for a grant to help her get back on her feet financially.

Not one member of our greatest American generation should find themselves under this kind of stress while getting over the death of their spouse and trying to do something with the large bills that were facing them.

In an attempt to reduce this kind of confusion, in 1985 Congress established a two-tier system, not linked to Social Security, that actually provides an SBP survivor 55 percent of retired pay until age 62, and 35 percent after that age. But making the age 62 reduction clear for the post-1985 retirees did not make it any fairer, and it did not change the fact that thousands upon thousands of earlier participants had not been told of the age 62 annuity reduction.

Also in 1985, Congress shocked the survivor community by repealing the 1984 legislation that would have barred any SBP Social Security offset for survivors who earned their Social Security benefits from their own work history rather than the military retiree's, as assumed under the original offset law. This only further highlighted the unfairness of the offset to thousands of widows who had pursued their own military or civilian careers.

Now, the second issue, another broken promise. When SBP was enacted in 1972, Congress set the premium formula in law with the intent that retirees' monthly premium payments would cover 60 percent, 60 percent of the long-term costs of the survivor benefits, with the government paying the remaining 40 percent. The formula was based on the program cost assumptions prepared by the Department of Defense actuaries concerning future inflation rates, pay raises, longevity of retirees, and survivors' longevity, et cetera.

But actual experience in later years proved the actuaries' original estimates had been far too conservative, as inflation was lower than predicted and retirees lived and paid premiums longer than anticipated. Because retiree premiums were locked into law and covered a greater portion of the program costs than had been projected, the government reaped an economic windfall, and found its share of the cost for the SBP program was much lower than anticipated. By 1988, retiree premiums covered 77 percent of the SBP costs, and DOD's share had dropped to 23 percent.

To its credit, Congress acted in 1990 to restore the intended 60/40 balance by reducing retiree premiums to 6.5 percent of retired pay, but the over-conservative actuarial assumptions have continued to work against, work against retirees for the last decade, with the result that the Federal subsidy for SBP has continued to decline. As of 2003, the government's share has dropped from 40 percent to 17 percent, leaving retirees once more paying a higher-than-intended share of the benefit.

The only fair way to restore the proper cost balance between the retirees and the government is to reduce the premium, or increase the SBP benefit. The former benefits primarily retirees, while the latter benefits the survivors. Since retiree premiums were reduced to restore the 60/40 balance in 1990, Congress should restore the government's intended 40 percent cost share by raising the benefit for survivors. My bill does exactly that.

Now, the third issue. It is the military-civilian inequity. No less compelling than the misleading of enrollees and the decline of the intended subsidy is the stunning disparity that exists between benefits and subsidy levels the government offers military versus Federal civilian survivors.

In contrast to the military SBP subsidy of, remember, 17 percent, currently, the SBP for Federal civilian employees under the post-1984 Federal Employee Retirement System provides a 33 percent subsidy. For those under the pre-1984 Civil Service Retirement System the subsidy is 48 percent, and at 48 percent, it is nearly three times as high as the military's.

Even more important, the Federal Employment Retirement System survivors receive 50 percent of retired pay, and the other survivors under the old Civil Service Retirement System receive 55 percent for life, with no benefit reduction, no benefit reduction, at age 62.

Although Federal civilian premiums are higher, military retirees pay SBP premiums for a far longer period of time than do most civilians because they are required to retire at a younger age. Because their mortality rates are not much different, this means that Federal civilian retirees have a far more advantageous benefit-to-premium ratio, as indicated on these charts.

Now, military retirees particularly pay SBP premiums about twice as long, twice as long as Federal civilians because they retire at younger ages, but their spouses' longevity is about the same. So military SBP enrollees see a lower return and a much lower government subsidy.

Remember Dottie? My bill is the needed fix for the three major inequities of the Survivor Benefit Plan. We must keep faith with the older retirees and with the survivors. We must restore the intended 40 percent Federal subsidy, and we must put SBP on an equal footing with its Federal civilian equivalent.

The Military Survivors Benefit Improvement Act of 2003, my bill, accomplishes these three things. For these reasons, the 33 military and veterans associations of the military coalition have endorsed my bill and have made its passage one of their top priorities in the 108th Congress.

H.R. 548 will balance equity and will balance cost considerations by phasing out the SBP age 62 benefit reduction over the next 5 years. And upon enactment, the age 62 benefit increase phase-in will begin at 40 percent on October 1 of 2004 and continually annually each year after through the year of 2007 until the benefits are restored to a full 55 percent as was the desire of Congress.

In order to offset part of the costs of the benefit increase, H.R. 548 authorizes an open season provision in the legislation that would allow more retirees to participate, generating SBP program savings, and significantly reducing the outlays.

Now, Congress has already acknowledged the need for this particular piece of legislation. The fiscal year 2001 Defense Authorization Act included a provision asserting the sense of Congress that there should be enacted legislation to reduce and eventually eliminate the different levels of SBP annuity for surviving spouses who are under age 62 and those who are 62 and older. But we have failed to follow through on that commitment for the last 2 years. It is time for us to fix this problem. Military widows and widowers have waited long enough in their fight for fairness. Now is the time for Congress to step up and enact relief for the aging survivors of our greatest generation. World War II and Korean War retirees, and the following generations of retirees and survivors, deserve no less than the SBP deal they were promised and the one the government already provides for other Federal survivors.

Now, a quick time line of H.R. 548. It was introduced on February 5 of 2003. And upon introduction, we had 118 bipartisan co-sponsors. That is 27 percent of the entire House of Representatives. On that day it was referred to the Committee on Armed Services. On February 28 of 2003, it was referred to the Total Force subcommittee, and on the same date executive comment was requested from DOD. Now, over 3 months later I urged DOD to act on this request.

On March 7 of 2003, a letter was sent to the gentleman from Iowa (Chairman Nussle) and the ranking member, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT), of the House Committee on the Budget urging support to include budget authority in fiscal year 2004 in our budget resolution. On the letter there were 36 bipartisan co-signers, including numerous members of the Committee on the Budget, the Committee on Armed Services, and the Committee on Veterans Affairs. Today this bill has 268 bipartisan co-sponsors. That equates to 62 percent of this House.

All Americans should urge their Representatives to co-sponsor H.R. 548 and their Senators to co-sponsor Senate bill 451, introduced by Senator OLYMPIA SNOWE of Maine.

Again, who supports H.R. 548? The number one legislative priority of the Military Officers Association of America and the 108th Congress. Additionally, the bill is strongly endorsed by the Military Coalition, a consortium of 33 nationally prominent military and veterans organizations representing more than 5.5 million members of uniformed services, active, reserved, retired, survivors, veterans and their families; and there are many, many others that have sent letters of support for this bill.

There are others that are tracking similar legislation in this body. I would note tonight that H.R. 1726, the Military Surviving Spouses Equity Act, sponsored by the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. BROWN), repeals the offset from surviving spouse annuities under the military Survivor Benefit Plan for amounts paid by the Secretary of Veterans Affair as dependency and indemnity compensation, or DIC. It provides for the recoupment of certain amounts previously paid SBP recipients in the form of retired pay refund. It was filed on April 10 of 2003. It has been referred to the Committee on Armed Services. It has 24 co-sponsors. And I want to commend my colleague, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. BROWN), for his efforts to restore equity to this aspect of SBP; and I am proud to be an original co-sponsor of this legislation.

H.R. 1653, sponsored by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON), would change the effective date for the paid-up coverage under the military Survivor Benefit Plan from October 1 of 2008 to October 1 of 2003. It has 25 co-sponsors, and I am an original co-sponsor of this particular bill. It was filed on April 7, and it too has been referred to the House Committee on Armed Services.

A third piece of legislation, H.R. 1592, the Military Survivors Equity Act. It has been sponsored by my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER), and it would repeal the two-tier annuity computation system applicable to annuities under the SBP plan for retired members of the Armed Forces so that there would be no reduction in such an annuity when the beneficiary becomes 62 years of age. It was filed on April 3 of this year, referred to the Committee on Armed Services; and it has 5 co-sponsors as this time. Both the Filner bill and my bill fulfill the 2001 sense of Congress resolution to reduce and eventually eliminate this SBP reduction. Again, both these bills go a long way to fulfilling the sense of Congress and that resolution to reduce and eventually eliminate this SBP reduction.

Let me talk a little bit about the VA budget for 2004. Our service men and women who continue to fight for our freedom and security around the world must know that Americans are united in their support for them and for their safe return. We in Congress, along with President Bush, support not only the troops in the field but also the scores of veterans who have already given so much to this country.

Unfortunately, there have been false reports, false reports circulating that Congress is actually cutting veterans benefits. Here are the facts of the congressional budget for fiscal year 2004 relating to veterans spending. This budget will allow us to fully meet our commitments to more than 2.6 million disabled veterans and widows who rely on VA benefit checks every month. It calls for $33.8 billion in mandatory spending. This is the highest spending ever in this area. It also calls for $30 billion, a 12.9 percent increase in discretionary spending. Nearly 90 percent of this funding is for veterans' medical care. These are the indisputable facts of this year's Federal budget for veterans.

House Members, particularly the Republicans, along with President Bush, are committed to ensuring that those who have served their country with pride, with valor and dignity receive the best of America's appreciation. Any suggestion otherwise is simply untrue, is not supported by the facts.

During January, I had the opportunity to visit with some of our men and women in uniform stationed in Germany, Italy, and France. And I was struck by their professionalism and commitment to their assigned duties. They were proud to serve. It is just as simple as that.

Two weeks ago, I visited North Korea where freedom is nowhere to be found and democratic thought is oppressed. We are truly blessed to live in a world of freedom and democracy and where life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are abundant and, I would submit, many times taken for granted.

Defense of the principles and values that we hold so dearly as a Nation leads our men and women into conflicts around the globe. Many return home after giving the ultimate sacrifice in defense of such values. But to those who do return, we can never say thanks enough.

Today, as we continue to rely on our Armed Forces in the war against terrorism, we look to our veterans for their example of courage and sacrifice. It is their selfless service that has made our Nation strong and our world a better place. America's veterans deserve our respect, our deepest respect, and enduring appreciation, as do their spouses who choose to marry members of our armed services and to share with them all the joys and sacrifices of their active duty careers.

The Survivor Benefit Plan is not to military spouses what Congress had intended or what enrollees were promised. The program is not providing the level of protection military survivors need and deserve.

Retirees and survivors deserve no less in the SBP deal than they were promised. This Congress needs to step up and deliver what the aging survivors of our greatest generation retirees were promised. And we need to provide at the proper level the protection necessary for future generations of retirees. Congress must act to fix this problem now.

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker and colleagues, I rise today to speak about a military widow in my Congressional District who has written to me about her Military Survivor Benefits Plan, known as SBP.

She writes: "My husband, who served in the Army for 20 years, died in July, 1995. I was then 61 years old. I was doing okay, paying my monthly bills and having enough left for groceries, but when I turned 62, I was notified my SBP was reduced from $476 to $302. What a shock! This was my grocery money they took from me. I hope that nobody else has to go through what I have. I cry every day and night. Not only have I lost my husband, I lost my money, my pride, my dignity." These words from the widow of one of our nation's veterans should be seared into the mind of every member of Congress.

Tomorrow, along with a number of my colleagues, I will be signing a discharge petition for H.R. 303, a bill to provide what is known as concurrent receipt to our disabled military retirees. If this law is passed, these retirees would be able to receive both their military retired pay, which they earned, and their VA disability compensation, which they deserve! As you know, both the House and the Senate passed concurrent receipt during the last session of Congress—and only in the Conference, was it diluted to almost nothing. We are again fighting to correct this grave injustice.

I am here today to state that there is another equally deserving group that we must include in this fight—the widows of our military retirees! Not only are many of our military retirees being denied their rightful benefits while they are alive, their spouses are being denied their rightful benefits upon their death.

The law to reduce the benefits received by military retired widows when they turn 65 is misleading and unfair. It is time to change this law! Most of these military widows are living on small incomes, but even people with substantial incomes would have a tough time coping with a reduction from 55 percent of their retirement benefits to 35 percent.

My bill, H.R. 1592, the Military Survivors Equity Act, would immediately eliminate this callous and absurd reduction in benefits that now burdens our military widows. My colleague form Florida, Mr. MILLER, has introduced H.R. 548, a bill that would increase the post-62 SBP annuity so that it reaches 55 percent of the military retired pay by 2007. Both bills fulfill the 2001 "sense of Congress" resolution to reduce and eventually eliminate this SBP reduction. The passage of this legislation is a top priority for the Military Officers Association of America, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars has also voiced their support for these bills. The Democratic Salute to Veterans and the Armed Forces legislative package, recently released, also calls for an end to this unfair reduction of benefits.

I encourage members from both sides of the aisle to work with Congressman MILLER and me to stop the pain and anguish we are causing our military widows and to show respect for the tremendous sacrifices made by our veterans and their families. We must pass this legislation to make this the compassionate and effective Survivors Benefits Plan it should be.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the subject of my Special Order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FEENEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

SUPPORTING HEAD START

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 7, 2003, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening to talk about a most important successful program that young children from very needy communities have been able to participate in for a long time now. But first I would like to thank the chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus for organizing this Special Order this evening.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Head Start programs, and I would urge all of my colleagues to oppose the radical changes that are being proposed by the Bush administration.

I have taken time out this evening to be here with whatever colleagues will join me to talk about this program because it is a program that I love. I love the Head Start program. I love this program because I got involved with the Head Start program early on. I got involved at the inception of the Head Start program under the war on poverty. The country was very excited about the fact that under the war on poverty there was going to be this program, an early childhood education program, for people in poor communities and working communities that had not been able to send their young children to preschool programs.

At one time in this country, preschool programs were only available to people with money, to the wealthy, to people who were earning good incomes, but Head Start was envisioned under the war on poverty as a program that could help children in poor communities and working communities get a jump, get a head start so that they would be prepared for kindergarten. They would be prepared for school and education.

The researchers and the educators that came up with this idea understood that for young people to be successful or more successful in school, if they had this preschool experience, it would not only prepare them for reading and learning, but it would also build other kinds of qualities. Building self-esteem was an important idea of the Head Start program.

I went to work for Head Start as an assistant teacher. I went into the Head Start program, and little did I know that Head Start was not simply to be a place of employment for me, it changed my life. In Head Start, not only did I learn how to work with young people, to build self-esteem, I later became the supervisor of parent involvement and volunteer services where I worked with families, with mothers and fathers and grandparents, bringing them into the Head Start program and helping them to understand that they certainly could be in control of their children's destiny.

Head Start was a program that not only dealt with early childhood education, a preschool experience for young people, but it was a program that helped to deal with parenting and helping parents to understand how they could, in fact, get more involved and give more support to their children.

Also, this program spread out into the community, and it helped parents to understand how not only they could be involved with their children's early childhood education, but they could be involved in the community and helping the community to understand how to be supportive of education, interacting with the school boards and with other educators, talking about their children's experiences and what was going on in the homes and helping educators to be more in tune with how they could better give young people a head start.

Head Start is very special because it takes into consideration the whole child. This program understood early on that if we are to be successful with our young people in education, we must give them every advantage and every opportunity to learn. Before Head Start, children were going to school. They could not hear well, could not see well, had learning disabilities, had never had a physical examination, had never had an examination to determine some of the problems that were so obvious when one interacted with these young people.

When we opened Head Start, we brought in the families and the children, and they had full physical examinations. They had an opportunity to talk with counselors. If psychiatrists were needed, they had that, also. So we discovered that there certainly were learning disabilities; dyslexia, and other kinds of problems were discovered and they were worked on.

Health care opportunities and preventive care was available to these parents for the first time. So we were able to attend to these health needs so that the children could certainly be prepared for learning, and that is what happened in the Head Start program.

The Head Start program not only dealt with the health care needs and preventive health care for families, it helped families to understand how they could build self-esteem. We learned a lot about self-esteem and how parents and families could be involved in building that self-esteem. We talked to parents how to place the work of their children on their walls at home, the paintings and the drawings and all of those things that children felt proud about, but oftentimes parents and families did not know how important it was. We taught them how to display the work of their children, but we also taught them how to take materials in their homes and materials from in the environment, in the neighborhood, from the trees and from the shrubbery, and use them as art tools and how there could be art projects and children could learn to use the various skills that they had that they had not discovered.

Head Start not only took care of the health care needs, expanded the learning for parents to help them to build self-esteem with their children, Head Start went further than that. The Head Start program opened up opportunities in the classroom where children were introduced to books for the first time. Children in Head Start are taught to love books. They are taught that you never tear up a book; that you never throw a book around; that you take care of the books, that they are very important; and that one of the first steps in learning is to introduce kids to books and tell them how important it is, get them to respect the books and want to know what is in the books. Head Start opened up all of these opportunities to prepare children in that classroom for going into the public schools.

Mr. Speaker, Head Start has proven to be successful. When Head Start children first went to kindergarten, the teachers wanted to know who are these children and why are they so prepared. Head Start children went into the classrooms for the first time asking questions and participating. This program has worked. Someone has said, it was not me, if it is not broken, what are you doing trying to fix it?

Head Start does not need to be fixed. Head Start is a good, solid, sound program of early childhood education that brings in the parents and the community, and this idea of this administration to block grant the Head Start, throw it into the States, is an idea that we have to resist. We resisted the part of the first idea of this administration that wanted to take it out of Health and Human Services and place it into the Education Department.

We fought them back on that, but now they are intent on block granting the program to the States. I do not know about other States, but I know the State of California has a $38 billion deficit. We do not want to throw this program into a State that could easily take funds from Head Start to help make up for the lack of funds in other areas. We know what happens when we block grant programs. We give the States the opportunity to do what they want to do with the money, and so we are opposing that. We are strenuously opposing block granting this program.

For those of us who have had the experience of working in the Head Start program, of working with parents in the Head Start program, for visiting the Head Start programs, interacting with the children, the families and the teachers, we say no to the Bush administration, you cannot have Head Start. We will not let you undermine this program with these ideas that you have about throwing it into the States and giving it to the States under a block grant.

With that, I am going to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE) to share his thoughts on Head Start.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, let me thank the gentlewoman from California for framing the argument. I think she did an excellent job, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), a person who helped organize Head Start parents and who for many years has held the importance of children as our most valuable possessions and has seen the success of this program, as have all of us, and that is why we stand here this evening, the Congressional Black Caucus, with our chairman the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS), to discuss this question of Head Start.

I commend our chairman for organizing these Special Orders on issues that impact on the poorest of our people, the people with no voice, people in Appalachia and delta regions and in urban centers that are not represented by lobbyists, and so we are their voice. We are their spokesperson. We speak for those who have no voice, and so I am proud to say that Head Start should not be tampered with.

In 1964, President Lyndon Johnson gave his State of the Union address before Congress and our Nation with an announcement to declare war on poverty. This was a great declaration which caught the imagination of our Nation. In his declaration, he believed for the first time in history that poverty could be eradicated and offered his proposal, the Economic Opportunity Act, EOA, of 1964. Despite opposition that believed poverty was on the decline from the highs of the Great Depression, Johnson was undaunted.

He declared, ''The Act does not merely expand old programs or improve what is already being done. It charts a new course. It strikes at the causes, not just at the consequences of poverty,'' and that is where the Head Start program is so important. It strikes at the causes of poverty to deal with poverty elimination in this country. ''It can be a milestone in our 180-year search for a better life for our people,'' said Lyndon Baines Johnson.

After the bill was signed into law that very year, the Office of Economic Opportunity was created to fulfill its mission. At the same time, a pediatrician by the name of Dr. Robert Cooke was asked to head a new office to lead a steering committee of specialists in all fields to discuss what should be done for young people to bring them out of poverty and to assist them in their early lives. Their recommendations, known as the Cooke Memorandum, outlined what we now know today as the Head Start program.

Launched as an 8-week summer program, Head Start was designed to help break the cycle of poverty by providing preschool children of low-income families with a comprehensive program to meet their emotional, social, health, nutritional and psychological needs. That is why this program is so important. Head Start is to break the cycle of poverty because it deals with emotional, social, health, nutrition and psychological needs.

Since its inception, Head Start has served over 20 million children. Today, it is a full-day, full-year program providing preschool children of low-income families, working families, with a comprehensive program to meet their emotional, social, health, nutritional and parental support. Head Start focuses on the whole child, extends to recognizing the importance of strengthening the family, not necessarily the institution but the family.

Throughout its inception, Head Start has included parents. Parents sit on committees to select teachers. They help with the curriculum, this is the participation, and parents learn through this program. Head Start has included parents in both their child's education and in their membership to the Head Start Policy Council, which serves as a vital link between the community and public and private agencies.

Parental involvement is a critical and integral part of this program. Economically disadvantaged families are no longer seen as passive recipients of service but, rather, as active, respected participants and decision-makers, and many of them have moved on to complete their education, and they have become leaders, and they have become elected officials, and they have become stalwarts in their community. That is why Head Start is so good: because it takes the total family.

Today we stand here to support our Head Start program, and oppose H.R. 2210, a bill which will dismantle the program as we know it, hurting the very ones we should be helping, our Nation's children. If the bill were enacted today, it would mean changing the current Federal to local partnerships to a State optional plan. As indicated by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), a State optional plan is another way of saying block grants.

The Federal Government would give States the authority to create their own preschool programs without the same performance standards as Head Start and without additional funding. Nationwide, States' commitment to preschool is $2 billion. It is much less than the Federal contribution of over $6 billion. In light of the $38 billion shortfall in the State budget in California, $5 billion in New Jersey, in excess of $70 billion in shortfalls in State budgets across the Nation, we cannot leave the fate of our children in the hands of States struggling to meet their other needs.

The impetus of this bill, the administration's Head Start proposal, states a need to better coordinate preschool programs in the States. But Head Start already coordinates with child care and prekindergarten programs. According to research done by the Center for Law and Social Policy, many Head Start agencies have formal agreements with school districts around the country to coordinate transitional services for children and families. Coordinating will not help the fact that Head Start is severely underfunded. You can coordinate all you want; you cannot get more with a limited amount of funds. So the problem is not coordination; it is the lack of funding.

There are a half million children in the country that are eligible to attend Head Start today. That is three out of five children, and they are not all being covered today.

In conclusion, I have offered a resolution, H. Res. 238, a resolution expressing support for the Head Start program which has had a positive impact on the lives of millions of children nationwide. The resolution not only recognizes the contribution of Head Start; it also supports maintaining its current designation at the Department of Health and Human Services. With the average child care cost in New Jersey at over $5,000 a year, thousands of children across my State and others would not have access to an exceptional program that has them ready to learn by the time they enter kindergarten if Head Start were not there to serve them. Terms of such State options and coordination will mean a shortfall and this 38-year program does not need to have this fate. We need to move towards full funding of Head Start, furthering the quality of this program, preserving the focus of comprehensive services to children and their families. We need to support Head Start as it is today.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for that brilliant presentation on Head Start, and I yield to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) for this important discussion on the floor, the esteemed chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) for her passion on this issue and so many other issues.

Just the other day, the gentlewoman stood in the meeting of the Congressional Black Caucus and poured her heart out with regard to her concerns for our children. I think everybody in the room could feel that passion.

One of the things that I think hit us real hard was we all realize, and I know the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), who has been standing up for these kinds of issues over and over again, time after time, we all realize that our children are the living messages we send to a future we will never see. So tonight the Congressional Black Caucus joins together, and I want to thank all members of the caucus. We come to stand up for our children. As the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PAYNE) said, they are not just children that may be found in South Baltimore or West Baltimore, but they are the children that will be found in Appalachia and poor regions throughout our country; and when I say poor, I mean economically poor.

Since 1964, Head Start has given nearly 19 million American children the educational, nutritional health, and related services that are essential to early childhood development. The ongoing Family and Child Experiences Survey has consistently documented the success of this national partnership for America's future. If Head Start did not exist, we would have to invent it. This year the survey again reported that teachers in Head Start centers are effectively preparing our children for school.

I note this fact because some critics would have us believe otherwise. Throughout this country, Head Start is a bridge to the future being constructed by local communities with help from their national government; and that is what we should be all about, communities coming to the aid of their children, those children that come from their womb and whose blood is running through those children's veins, trying to lift them up so they can be all that God meant for them to be. That is what the national Family and Child Experiences Survey tells us. I can validate the survey's conclusion because Head Start funding is making an important and positive difference in the lives of more than 10,000 Maryland children this year.

Many of these children live in my hometown of Baltimore. Some attend a wonderful Head Start program at Union Baptist Church just down the street from my home. Every time I pass that Head Start center, I feel a warmth and I see a beacon of light in a very, very depressed area. When I visit these children and their teachers and parents in Head Start programs throughout the Baltimore area, I am reminded of the fact that they are looking at our children and seeing all of the wonderful things that are within. And these teachers are just like a sculptor who looks into a piece of wood and sees a wonderful, wonderful piece of art and understands that he has to use his tools to carve and bring out that piece of art. It is the same thing with our wonderful and very dedicated Head Start teachers.

I am deeply gratified that this year more than $76 million in Head Start funding will give Maryland children a head start in life. It is a moral and practical investment in our future.

Nationally, we know that every dollar we spend on Head Start saves taxpayers between $4 and $7 down the road. For all the good that Head Start is doing, however, we must not lose sight of the fact that Head Start could be doing so much more if the program were adequately funded.

This is what the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) has been talking about over and over again. Today Head Start only serves approximately 60 percent of the children who are eligible. Funding was raised to almost $6.7 billion for fiscal year 2003; and for fiscal year 2004, the administration has proposed another small increase to just under $6.8 billion.

These small increases in funding that we have achieved in recent years represent positive and important steps forward. Nevertheless, as we consider reauthorization this year, we should step up to the plate and finally give Head Start the funding that would allow every eligible child to participate. We should guarantee a head start in life to every American child who needs our help.

The Nation's teachers, through their National Education Association, stand full square behind this vision. I realize that extending a head start to every deserving child would be very expensive. But I say to Members that when I visit the jails in Baltimore and I see our children in shackles and handcuffs and I look at their reading levels and the average reading level is less than a fifth-grade reading level, that tells me something.

So we must ask the question is it better to pay later when our children are locked up and not achieving the things that they should be achieving, or is it better to invest in them when they are growing up in their formative years? The estimated cost would be an additional $29 billion over the next 5 years. Think about all this Nation would receive in return for additional investment in our future. We would be living in a country that made a meaningful commitment to truly leaving no child behind. We would be saving money in the long run because of reduced costs for special education, social services, teen pregnancy, juvenile crime, and other problems down the road, a true head start for every American child. This is a vision that all Americans can support.

We have been working hard during my years of service in the House to make Head Start even better. We have set strong national standards for Head Start that complement the power of Head Start's local Federal partnerships. We have maintained our traditional emphasis on substantial parent involvement. We are succeeding.

That is why we should resist Republican efforts to transfer management of Head Start to the States. The bill proposed by my Republican colleagues with the supposed purpose of enhancing the schools' readiness of low-income and disadvantaged students is grossly misleading. The supposed demonstration project being proposed will block grant funding of Head Start to certain States. I maintain this will not enhance the school readiness of students, but is instead a thinly veiled attempt to weaken and dismantle this very powerful and significant Federal program.

When I think of the Republican proposal, a certain quote by Reverend Joseph Lowery comes to mind. Reverend Lowery once asked, ''Will America lose her soul for political chicanery? Would you give a balanced budget on the backs of the poor? Would you have welfare reform for the poor while the rich corporations continue to enjoy tax exemptions and subsidies? America, what would you give in exchange for your soul? Would you reduce school lunches for poor children in exchange for your soul?''

Well, Mr. Speaker, I would ask one more question in addition to those posed by my friend, Reverend Lowery. Tonight I ask America if she would dismantle one of a few Federal programs that gives poor children a hand-up in exchange for her soul. Facing crippling budgetary crises, the States should be concentrating on their traditional K–12 education role. Let us help the States succeed in K–12 education first before we consider turning early childhood education, nutrition, and all of the other services Head Start provides over to State governments.

Local leadership has always been the foundation of Head Start's success. Local leadership, high standards, and increased Federal support can assure every American child a head start in life. Our children are indeed our living message that we send to a future we will never see, and it is our duty in this Congress to assure that the living messages this generation sends to America's future are filled with competence, confidence, and hope.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for her leadership.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS) for his passionate plea to our colleagues not to allow this program to be dismantled, and I yield to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LEE).

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, first, I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) for her leadership and really for her guidance based upon her remarkable experience with Head Start and for her passion and for her commitment to children who really otherwise would have very few opportunities to succeed.

I also want to thank the gentleman from Maryland, chairman of the Congressional Black Caucus, who once again is demonstrating his enormous leadership by sounding the alarm in terms of this administration's assault on children.

We have come together tonight to talk about an issue really that is about our future. It is about the future of our children. So what else could really be more important? Head Start has been an enormously successful program since its inception in 1965 because it continues to offer comprehensive programs for children and families. Head Start has enabled these children to enter kindergarten on an equal footing with students who were really born into wealthier socioeconomic circumstances. Over the last four decades, Head Start nationwide has reached an unbelievable number of students. Since 1965, over 20 million children across the country have participated in Head Start programs. Last year alone, Head Start and Early Head Start programs worked with more than 900,000 children in 2,590 local programs. In my own hometown of Oakland, California, over 1,600 children are part of our area Head Start programs. But we are still not really reaching enough kids. On any particular day, 300 to 400 children are on a waiting list for the Oakland Head Start centers. In fact, all 30 centers have children on a waiting list, meaning that all areas are being affected; 300 to 400 children, as I said, are far too many to have to begin school already behind. In fact, one child on a waiting list is really one too many, one too many in terms of a young person not afforded access to early participation in such an enormously successful program.

Yet again the Bush administration is dismantling another excellent domestic program by trying to reduce the effectiveness, and that is what this is going to do, reduce the effectiveness of Head Start. They are trying to radically change what has really been a radically effective program. President Bush's plan to reform Head Start would systematically, basically, and probably will really gut Head Start. For instance, the President has called for moving Head Start from the Department of Health and Human Services to the Department of Education. The administration wants to move Head Start from HHS because they believe preschoolers should be judged solely by academic standards. President Bush wants to begin a national reporting system of literacy testing, mind you, literacy testing for our 4-year-olds. How ridiculous and how sinister this is.

Administrators in the city of Oakland's Head Start program tell me that moving Head Start to the Department of Education will mean the end of all of the support services and the component services that make Head Start so successful. When parents and children in Oakland and throughout my own congressional district heard of this proposal a couple of months ago, several hundred people participated. These were men, women and children, families, participated in a rally, all of them saying in no uncertain terms, ''If it ain't broke, don't fix it.'' This will be, and I heard this over and over again, the end of health services; and in a country where our health care system is totally broken, to eliminate health services for young people which they receive through the Head Start program is really, really wrong. It is wrong because, again, the President and the administration's view is that it should be only a literacy program.

By turning Head Start into a block grant program, the President claims that Head Start will be more flexible while ignoring the fact that one of Head Start's virtues is that it already has a great deal of flexibility on a local level. Yet Head Start is, and should continue to be, a national program. We really do not need 50 different administrations in 50 different States. We do not need these bureaucracies that will take money from children to go to State budgets and overhead costs. Block granting Head Start funds is really a particularly bad idea this year because our States are experiencing such huge budget deficits. It will be especially tempting for Governors and State governments to really try to tap into this money. That is not to say that State governments will misappropriate money, it is just a real acknowledgment that State officials will be tempted to use this money to offset their deficits. How do we know that this money would be used for Head Start? This really puts our children's future at risk at the whim of State budgets. This is just downright wrong.

With these proposals, the Bush administration is demonstrating once again their disregard for our children and our families, those that do not have a lot of money. They are demonstrating their real contempt for working families struggling just to make it on wages that are not enough to raise them up above the poverty level. While the administration devastates Head Start, they simultaneously sign a tax cut primarily for the wealthiest in this country. They spend billions of dollars on war, at the same time not fully funding education, cutting child care, health care, job training programs and housing. We cannot let the President and this administration dilute what has been one of the most successful programs over the last four decades. We must stop the President's assault on Head Start. We must stop this Congress' assault on Head Start.

I encourage our colleagues to join all of us, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), the Congressional Black Caucus, all of us in this resistance. Our children deserve us to stand up for them at least this one time.

Ms. WATERS. I thank the gentlewoman from California for her longtime concern and actions on behalf of children. I thank her for taking time out of her schedule to be here this evening.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. CORRINE BROWN).

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding and to the members of the Congressional Black Caucus, I thank them for hosting these educational hours to educate the American public as to what is going on in the people's House.

To me, the cold-hearted attitude of the House Republicans can be summed up in a statement made last week by the House majority leader. When asked about bringing up the child tax credit bill, he said, and I quote, ''There are a lot of other things that are more important than that.''

I humbly ask my colleague on the other side of the aisle, what exactly on your agenda is more important than the protection of the children in this Nation? In my State of Florida alone, the child tax credit package benefits over a million children. Once again, the Republican leadership is catering its agenda to the rich, after deciding just today that the only way they would agree to take up the child tax credit bill is by adding on an $80 billion tax credit for the rich in the bill. Even though their selected leader, George W. Bush, is urging them to take up a clean bill and even though they follow his leadership in everything from tax cuts for the rich to foreign policy, when it comes to funding children's programs, they ignore even the plea of the White House. In addition, the House Republican leadership is planning to dismantle Head Start, one of the best educational programs for children of working-class families, by block granting program funding.

There was $900 million sent down to Florida Governor Jeb Bush. Yet he put the money in the bank as opposed to helping the people of Florida. Block grant money is not the way to go. In the past, everyone was telling me, just send the money to the State. In the area of transportation, just send the money to the State. Education, just send the money to the State. They will know best what to do with it. I can tell you, they are singing a different tune now. When I talk to the mayors or the county commissioners, they tell me, Whatever you do, don't send that money to Tallahassee, because we will never see a dime of it. Whatever you do, don't block grant the money and send it to Tallahassee. It is a deep hole and they never see a dime of the dollars that come from the Federal Government down to the State.

The Republican Head Start block grant plan will end Head Start as we know it, one of the most successful programs in the history of this country. Even the new limited eight-State block grant is a risky deal. Why risk turning a successful program over to States with unproven expertise and without the Federal program quality standard requirements and oversight that are demonstrated to increase school readiness?

My colleagues, there is an old expression which really applies to this issue: If it ain't broke, don't fix it. Head Start kids are very prepared to do better in school than low-income children who do not receive Head Start. In addition, it has been proven that Head Start narrows the readiness gap between Head Start kids and kids from the more affluent side of the tracks. Head Start should help children arrive at school more ready to learn, and it does. But for the administration to expect Head Start to completely protect children against the effects of poverty is just plain stupid. Moreover, block grants do not work. Block grants gut the quality of comprehensive services. And this block grant plan is particularly bad and requires States to provide a bunch of services but does not require the same nature, extent or quality of them. None of the 13 areas of Head Start performance standards that lay out the comprehensive services and high level of quality that have made

Head Start successful are even mentioned in the block grant. In fact, the block grant emphasizes comprehensive services being met through referrals of families to outside service for assistance, which would end up encouraging States to provide a much lower level of service.

In addition, the block grant does not specify any minimum requirements for teacher education levels, for child-staff ratios or for curriculum content. It simply calls on each State to come up with their own school standards and their own ways of measuring progress against those standards. I can go on and on and on as far as Head Start is concerned. I will submit my statement for the RECORD. But I do have a question for the gentlewoman from California.

When we passed, when the House passed—I did not vote for it—the $350 billion, $20 billion was earmarked to the States. Can you explain what was the purpose of the $20 billion that went to the States? Was it to put in the bank and use for a slush fund next year to, I guess, enhance the chances of the Republicans to continue to practice reverse Robin Hood, stealing from the working people to give tax breaks for the rich? What was the purpose of that $20 billion?

Ms. WATERS. I thank the gentlewoman for her presentation this evening, not only on Head Start but the discussion about the child tax credit and helping to unveil what is really going on in this administration. The question that you raise is one that I am sure many of our colleagues would like to respond to this evening, and if they were here, they would tell you that many folks worked very hard to get some assistance to the States because many of the States are in deficit positions. They are cutting programs. They are cutting health and education. They are cutting the school week in some States. In 2003 in the United States of America, the school week has been cut down from 5 days to 4 days.

Members of this Congress are shocked on both sides of the aisle about the kind of cutbacks and the deficits that we have in the States. That money is not meant to be banked. It is meant to offset the debt and the cuts that are being experienced by these States, and certainly though we did not support that tax bill for good reasons, that part of that bill that sends the money to the States is a part that many of us do support because we want to make sure that we do not have these hardships experienced by our constituents because of cutbacks.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. That is an example of what is wrong when you send a block grant to the State and you do not specify.

My understanding in talking to the different committees, it was specified that this money would be used to help the States in their struggle.

I do not know whether the gentlewoman saw it, but last week on the national news, on ''Dateline,'' they discussed the number of students, hundreds of thousands of students that are failing the tests in Florida, third graders who were being held back, thousands of students not graduating, because we came up with additional educational standards. And I must quickly say that many of the schools, the ''F schools'' or the failing schools, have been the schools on the other side of the railroad tracks, the schools on the other side of the bridge, that have never gotten adequate funding.

So when we set standards, and the support was not there to work with the schools, many of the children do not do well. We look at the State of Florida as we speak. We do not have summer school programs in place. Could some of that money be used for summer schools, for some of the cuts that have occurred in the school system to augment the cuts in the programs for educational support for the school system?

Ms. WATERS. I would certainly think so. Again, we talk a lot about education being our number one priority, about children being our number one priority. But there are some States that are not putting the money where their mouths are, and we are not giving the children of this Nation the kind of support that certainly a rich Nation such as ours should be giving.

I think this is a prime example of what we are talking about this evening, the Head Start Program. It is underfunded, children on waiting list, only a 2 percent increase; and it is a proven program of success that not only helps to prepare our kids for kindergarten and for school, but it also helps to make parents stronger in their support for their children. The gentlewoman is absolutely correct; that money could be used for educational purposes.

Ms. CORRINE BROWN of Florida. I thank the gentlewoman once again for bringing this subject area to the American public.

Wake up, America.

To me, the cold hearted attitude of House Republicans can be summed up in a statement made just last week by the House majority leader. When asked about bringing up the Child Tax Credit bill, he said, and I quote: ''There are a lot of other things that are more important than that . . .''

Now, I humbly ask my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, ''what exactly, on your agenda, is more important than the protection of the children of this nation?'' In my state of Florida alone, the Child Tax Credit package benefits over a million children.

And once again, the Republican leadership is catering its agenda to the rich. And after deciding just today that the only way they will agree to take up the Child Tax Credit bill is by adding on an $80 billion tax credit for the rich to the bill. And even though their selected leader, George W. Bush, is urging them to take up a clean bill, and even though they have followed his lead on everything from tax cuts for the rich to foreign policy, when it comes to funding children, they ignore even the plea of the White House.

In addition, the House Republican leadership is planning to dismantle Head Start, one of the best education programs for children of working class families, by block granting program funding.

You know, there was $900 million sent down to the Florida governor Jeb Bush, yet he put the money into the bank, as opposed to helping the people of Florida. Block grants is just not the way to go. In the past, everyone was telling me, send transportation dollars to the states, send the education dollars to the states, the states can best figure out how to use it. They're not telling me that now, when I talk to the Mayors in Florida, or to the County Commissioner, they tell me that, ''whatever you do, whatever you do, don't send the money to Tallahassee, because we will never see a dime of it.'' That is what they tell me, they say it gets lost in Tallahassee, and it never trickles down to the areas, to the first responders, to the Head Start programs, it is just an empty hole.

The Republican Head Start block grant plan will end Head Start as we know it. Even the new limited 8-state block grant is risky. Why risk turning a successful program over to states with unproven expertise and without the federal program quality standard requirements and oversight that are demonstrated to increase school readiness.

My colleagues, there is an old expression which really applies to this issue here: if it ain't broken, don't fix it. You know, Head Start kids are very prepared and do better in school than low-income children who don't receive Head Start. In addition, it's been proven that Head Start narrows the readiness gap between Head Start kids and children from the more affluent side of the tracks. Head Start should help children arrive at school more ready to learn—and it does; but for the administration to expect Head Start to completely protect children against the effects of poverty is just ridiculous.

Moreover, block grants don't work. Block grants gut the quality of comprehensive services. And this block grant plan is particularly bad, and requires States to provide a bunch of services, but doesn't require the same nature, extent or quality of them. None of the thirteen areas of Head Start performance standards that lay out the comperhensive services and high level of quality that have made Head Start successful are required or even mentioned in the block grant. In fact, the block grant emphasizes comprehensive services being met through referral of families to outside services for assistance, which would end up encouraging States to provide a much lower level of services.

In addition, the block grant does not specify any minimum requirements for teacher education levels, for child-staff ratios or for curriculum content. It simply calls on each State to come up with their own school standards and their own ways of measuring progress against those standards. But the problem is that those standards are not clearly defined in the block grant and vary greatly in content and quality among the States. As it is now, Head Start education standards are thorough and strongly based in standards of education, and having States come up with their own standards with no direction and no requirements will only serve to weaken education standards.

Lastly, block grants weaken oversight and evaluation. States that meet the eligibility criteria have their applications deemed approved by the Secretary by default—which means that there won't be any oversight or evaluation of the quality of the State plan. In addition, there is no minimum threshold required by States' internal evaluations of their programs—they can just go ahead and define it on their own. No States monitor their programs as closely as Head Start is monitored. And under the block grant, outside evaluations of the State programs will likely not happen very often. Under the Republican plan, there will be no more compliance reviews with regard to national performance standards. Gone will be meaningful Federal oversight and monitoring.

Why, why, why, the Republicans are changing something that works, just does not make sense. Once again I repeat: if something isn't broken, don't bother fixing it.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I would now like to yield to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATSON), an educator with a background in education, to make her presentation.

Ms. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman from California for allowing me time in this hour to raise my concerns about the current dismantling of Head Start.

The plan to block grant Head Start will damage the integrity and the efficiency of the program. This recent tax cut does little to safeguard our children's well-being. We must make better investments in our children and our future instead of stuffing the pockets of millionaires.

An investment in our children equals an investment in our Nation's strength, security, and future. The economic plans and focus of the administration must be balanced between future consequences and immediate gain. We must also continue to keep the facts at the forefront of the debate so that the administration and Congress can make policy decisions based on the facts, rather than on misguided interpretations and subjective judgments.

Head Start is one of the most successful anti-poverty programs ever created. It has helped millions of children prepare for school, become productive students, and improve their lives. However, drastic changes proposed by the Bush administration will erode the effectiveness of this program.

One proposal, to provide funding in block grants, will actually result in less money for Head Start. Changing the funding formula to block grants creates a daunting scenario for Head Start. Faced with the unceasing pressure of balancing their State budgets, some Governors already have indicated that they are willing to accept the administration's offer to opt in the block grant proposal. Governors may be able to use this money to cover budget deficits in their States; but overall, it will do serious damage to the program.

My home State of California receives over $800 million for Head Start. There is a $38 billion budget deficit. With the block grant proposal, California has the option to use that $800 million to close this gap.

There are other scenarios. Assume that six to eight States, representing 10 to 15 percent of Head Start dollars, elect to opt in and set up their own programs. That puts 148,931 current Head Start children at risk. If an additional eight to 10 States follow this lead, another 394,150 children will be placed at risk. It goes on and on, until all of the children are left behind without the Head Start program.

At present, only three States provide all the services needed to get at-risk children ready to learn. These States provide the same set of eight comprehensive services required of Head Start through state-run, prekindergarten programs.

Mr. Speaker, 30 States have such programs, yet only three are able to meet the standards that they created in order to prepare our children for school. Now it appears we want to give all 50 States this responsibility, knowing full well that these States have not proven that they are able to do so.

States will be able to lower teachers' standards; they will not be required to involve Head Start's 800,000 parent volunteers; and, above all, States will be forced to reduce the overall number of Head Start children served. States have already been forced to cut early childhood programs outside of Head Start due to the budget crunch. This will be a great disaster and disservice to our Nation's youth.

Another proposal, to remove Head Start from the jurisdiction of the Department of Health and Human Services and place it under the Department of Education, will undermine the core philosophy of Head Start. Since its inception, Head Start was designed to help the whole child. Current services offered through DHHS cannot be carried out as effectively as under the Department of Education.

There is no need to change a program that has proven to be so successful. In 1998, Head Start supporters sought to ensure that at least 50 percent of all Head Start teachers have an associate's degree or better by 2003. The program has met this goal. The Heads Up Reading Network was established to train Head Start and other early childhood teachers across the Nation. These are improvements that we hope to establish through the No Child Left Behind Act. We have not yet met these goals, but Head Start has met its goals internally.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage my colleagues to maintain Head Start as it is. It is a success story. It is the duty of Congress to protect the current and future security of our Nation, and we must start with our children. And we must help the children of our migrant workers that are at risk, our youth and their parents. By supporting Head Start in its present form, we will be doing just that, securing our Nation by securing our children as they start their educational program.

I thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS).

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from California.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, you have heard brilliant presentations, comprehensive presentations from the members of the Congressional Black Caucus here this evening who have identified the value of Head Start: the fact that Head Start provides nutrition, the fact that it provides physical examinations, the fact that it prepares young people for education, the fact that it involves parents and gets them involved in helping to determine the educational destiny of their children, the fact that Head Start gets communities involved.

Mr. Speaker, this cannot be taken lightly. Head Start is indeed a successful program that has been in this country now for 38 years. Many children and families have benefited from this program, children from all over America, from communities all over this country. We value Head Start, and we appreciate all of those who had the vision to bring this valuable program to this Nation.

Again, we think that this program should not be tampered with. There is no reason to want to block grant this program. We would like to think that it is just a misunderstanding, that this administration really does not understand the risk that they are creating by tampering with this program and block granting it to the States.

Let me just tell you, Mr. Speaker, in addition to not having the requirements to go along with block grants, the one thing that strikes me as extremely detrimental to this program is the fact that nowhere in this block granting does it require that the parental involvement component remain with Head Start.

Many of us wax eloquently about parent involvement and family values and what it means for parents to be involved with their children and their education, but yet we see an attempt to change a program that has a strong component of parental involvement, an attempt to dismantle a program that has worked.

Mr. Speaker, Head Start will be reauthorized this year. It will not have all of the money that it needs. It will only have a small increase. There will still be children waiting to get into Head Start. But one way or the other, I know that this program is going to be reauthorized. I hope that it is done in the traditional, bipartisan fashion in which our children are not left behind.

However, H.R. 2210 suggests that we are off to a very bad start. It would be a tragedy if the Republican leadership chooses to try and force this bad bill through for partisan political purposes. We can and must do better than H.R. 2210. I urge the Republican leadership to heed the will of the American people and produce a bipartisan bill that both sides of the aisle can support. Millions of lives depend on Head Start, and we cannot afford to let them down.

This Congress has been criticized, Members on the opposite side of the aisle, who somehow cut out the poorest and most vulnerable families from the tax bill. We cannot afford to continue to have the kind of criticism and distrust that is mounting of this Congress over what appears to be an assault on families and children.

We have the issue of the child tax credit before us. It is shameful what has been done. I do not think that all of the Republicans on the other side of the aisle support what has been done. I do not think that they believe in what some of the leadership is saying about poor people not deserving to have this tax break.

I believe that there are those on the other side of the aisle that will join with us on this side of the aisle and put an end to this attempt to undermine our Head Start program.

Mr. Speaker, I am so blessed, and I feel so blessed, to be able to be here tonight to speak on behalf of the children and to stand up for Head Start. I feel so blessed to have been a part of Head Start and to have learned what it means to invest in our children. I feel so blessed to have learned that we can indeed make our children successful in their education experience.

Many of those children who are being left behind are being left behind because they do not have the value of an early childhood education. I am delighted to have been a part of this evening.

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I have come to the floor this evening to express my concern about the lack of funding by this administration's to our nation's education programs and I wanted to share with my colleagues how this budget matches up with the priorities of the people I represent.

On yesterday, in a beautiful ceremony in the Rose Garden, President Bush hosted an event marking the progress, significant progress toward making sure every child in public schools gets a quality education.

Now, I am sure that made a great story on last evening's news, but Head Start is more than just news for the nearly 20 million families who have benefited from the program. It is real life. Head Start provides the most comprehensive program for children of low income, working families. In a recent study by the Family and Child Experiences Survey, the findings concluded that children are ready to learn. Another study concluded that Head Start narrowed the gap between disadvantaged children and their peers in vocabulary and writing skills during the program year.

I am here today because of this Administration's plans to dismantle this vital program by turning it over to struggling states. It baffles me why such a move would be necessary. Currently, the program provides federal grants directly to community organizations, allowing for local flexibility and strong federal oversight of Head Start's quality. If Head Start is turned over to states' during this time of economic uncertainty, it is very likely they will use Head Start funding to fill gaps in their own programs.

Mr. Speaker, the Head Start program not only involves the child but also recognizes the importance of the family. Head Start has included parents in both the child's education and their membership in the Head Start Policy Council. I have received numerous letters from teachers, parents, and other employees of the Sunnyview and Greater Head Start locations in my district of Dallas, Texas. Each one pleading for additional funding and urging the program to be kept in its current structure. One parent writes, ''they teach them how to write, count, their ABC's, to draw, to be responsible . . . . . Many families feel comfortable with this program because they can come in and volunteer in the classes and see what the children are learning.''

Mr. Speaker, in closing I would hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would consider listening to the countless voices of children that Head Start prepares for the foundation of their critical learning years. How can we deny them a chance at a decent future? I submit to you, that we cannot. It is our duty as federal lawmakers, that every child is prepared with a quality education so they can be productive citizens of this nation.

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1115, CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003

AMENDMENT NO. 1:

SEC. ___. INCREASE IN HISTORIC REHABILITATION CREDIT FOR CERTAIN LOW-INCOME HOUSING FOR THE ELDERLY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 47 (relating to rehabilitation credit) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

''(e) SPECIAL RULE REGARDING CERTAIN HISTORIC STRUCTURES.—In the case of any qualified rehabilitation expenditure with respect to any certified historic structure—

''(1) which is placed in service after the date of the enactment of this subsection,

''(2) which is part of a qualified low-income building with respect to which a credit under section 42 is allowed, and

''(3) substantially all of the residential rental units of which are used for tenants who have attained the age of 65, subsection (a)(2) shall be applied by substituting '25 percent' for '20 percent'.''.

(b) APPLICATION OF MACRS.—The Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be applied and administered as if paragraph (4)(X) of section 251(d) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 as applied to the amendments made by section 201 of such Act had not been enacted with respect to any property described in such paragraph and placed in service after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to property placed in service after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SENATE—Wednesday, June 11, 2003

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable SAM BROWNBACK, a Senator from the State of Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Today's prayer will be offered by our guest Chaplain, Rabbi Dr. Bernhard H. Rosenberg, Edison, NJ.

PRAYER

The guest Chaplain offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, grant us the ability to face this new day with faith and optimism. Empower the men and women of this respected Senate with strength to live and labor with sincerity of purpose. Enable them to be of good courage in moments of adversity and endow them with fortitude to fulfill their daily tasks. Bless our revered Senators with vigor of body and health of mind. Bless them with the power to face the challenge of leadership with valor.

Bless our country, the United States of America, and shield its inhabitants from every enemy and danger. Help our Senators guard the liberties we hold sacred. Grant that our country will serve as an inspiring light for liberty loving people throughout the world. Inspire our Senators to help create a world of freedom, equality, and justice for all.

Lord, teach us to walk along the path of life with faith in Thee and trust in Thy wisdom. In the words of the poet, grant me ''the courage to change the things I can change, the serenity to accept those I cannot change, and the wisdom to know the difference''. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable SAM BROWNBACK led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. STEVENS).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, June 11, 2003.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable SAM BROWNBACK, a Senator from the State of Kansas, to perform the duties of the Chair.

TED STEVENS,
President pro tempore.

Mr. BROWNBACK thereupon assumed the Chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, this morning the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10 a.m. At 10 o'clock, the Senate will resume consideration of S. 14, the Energy bill. Pending is the Reid second-degree amendment to the Feinstein first-degree amendment on the issue of derivatives.

There are a number of Members who are reviewing those amendments at this time. It is a complicated issue. I know that a number of people, including the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, will want to speak on the amendment.

In the interim, it is my hope that we will continue to make progress on the bill and work through other amendments that may be offered. Also, as we have discussed over the course of this week, we would like to be able to lock in a list of the remaining amendments to the Energy bill during today's session.

I remind my colleagues we will vote on the confirmation of the nomination of Richard Wesley to be a Circuit Court Judge for the Second Circuit at 11:15 this morning.

In addition, there are a number of other Executive Calendar nominations ready for votes, and we will attempt to set a time certain for votes on those as well.

Also, with respect to the schedule, Senator MCCONNELL has continued to work for a vote on the Burma sanctions bill. I am very hopeful that over the course of the morning we will be able to address this very important and timely issue and bring this to closure. As I indicated yesterday, I fully support his efforts and we will work for a resolution today. The Senate, I believe, should speak loudly and clearly on the recent actions in Burma.

We would also like to consider and complete the FAA reauthorization this week, and we will continue to look for a way to schedule that matter.

In addition, there are other issues I have mentioned each morning on which we are working. It is important for our colleagues to come together so we can address them in a straightforward and timely manner, including the issue surrounding the bioshield bill.

Mr. REID. Will the majority leader yield for a comment on the schedule?

Mr. FRIST. Yes.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, we will have for the leader sometime today a finite list of amendments from our side. Also, Senator FEINSTEIN, when she left last night, said she was not going to agree to have her amendment set aside. The reason for that is somewhat based on last year when she worked with Senator Gramm for more than a week trying to get something on that amendment and she never did. She kept setting it aside, but she said she would not do that this time.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Will the majority leader yield?

Mr. FRIST. Yes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I thank the majority leader for raising again the issue of the Burma sanctions bill. I say to him and our colleagues in the Senate that we have now been working for 2 days to try to get this matter cleared.

While we are involved in the minutia of the clearing process, Aung San Suu Kyi is still, in effect, in prison. We need to send a message to the military in Burma, and we need to send it this week.

I am not going to propound another unanimous consent request at the moment, but I want to put colleagues on notice that later in the day I will be doing that once again. In the meantime, the discussions continue. We hope we will be able to resolve this matter. I thank the majority leader very much for bringing that up.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10 a.m., with the time equally divided between the majority and minority leaders or their designees.

The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

RABBI BERNHARD ROSENBERG

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I rise now to thank Rabbi Bernhard Rosenberg for his stirring innovation this morning. This is only the latest honor to be conferred on Rabbi Rosenberg for his lifetime of distinguished service. He is a pillar in New Jersey's vibrant religious community, serving as a spiritual leader and educator, and his accomplishments speak for themselves.

If I might be personal, Rabbi Rosenberg is a terrific human being, whom I know personally. I am very pleased he joined us.

As the son of Holocaust survivors, Rabbi Rosenberg has taught numerous youngsters the importance of reflecting on that awful period in world history, a period which led to the deaths of more than six million Jews, as well as countless others. He has written many books on that subject, including ''Contemplating the Holocaust'' and ''What the Holocaust Means to Me: Teenagers Speak Out.''

Rabbi Rosenberg has served New Jersey in many capacities, including as a member of the New Jersey State Holocaust Commission, an appointee to the New Jersey Parole Board, and as the chairman of the Edison Human Rights Commission. For his years of commitment to the Jewish community and his humanitarian spirit, he has received a number of awards, including the Rabbi Israel Moshowitz Award by the New York Board of Rabbis, the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Humanitarian Award, and the Chaplain of the Year Award for his work relating to the September 11 attacks.

I take this opportunity to thank Rabbi Rosenberg for his years of service to the State of New Jersey, to the Jewish Community, and to the Nation. He has earned the profound respect of the people of New Jersey and this Senator.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, since 1789, every session of the Senate has been opened with prayer. I am proud that the Senate's guest Chaplain today, Rabbi Dr. Bernhard H. Rosenberg, is from my home State of New Jersey. Rabbi Rosenberg is the spiritual leader of Congregation Beth-El in Edison, NJ.

As the only child of Holocaust survivors, the late Jacob and Rachel Rosenberg, Rabbi Rosenberg has spent his life teaching the history and effects of the Holocaust.

In 1933, there were over 9 million Jews living in Europe. Almost 6 million were killed in the next 12 years. ''Holocaust,'' translated from Greek, means ''sacrifice by fire.'' The systematic persecution and genocide of millions of innocent people in Europe was a ''sacrifice'' the civilized world must never forget. I have met with Holocaust survivors, and I have seen the concentration camps. It was a hideous time in our world's history. But it is vital to learn about it, and it is vital to talk about it.

Rabbi Rosenberg serves his community as a leader, teacher, writer, and spiritual adviser. He is an impressively educated man, with multiple degrees in communication and education, and his ordination and doctorate of education from Yeshiva University in New York.

Rabbi Rosenberg teaches Holocaust Studies at the Moshe Aaron Yeshiva High School of Central New Jersey, and has taught at Rutgers University and Yeshiva University. Rabbi Rosenberg has authored four books, with ''Theological and Halachic Reflections on the Holocaust'' now in its second printing.

He is the spiritual leader of Congregation Beth-El and a model citizen in New Jersey.

Rabbi Rosenberg has dedication and commitment that is unparalleled. He is the editor of a Holocaust publication distributed by the Rabbinical Assembly and editor of the New York Board of Rabbis Newsletter. As Interfaith Chairman of the New Jersey State Holocaust Commission, Rabbi Rosenberg is associate editor of the State-mandated curriculum on Holocaust and Genocide.

Rabbi Rosenberg is chairman of the Human Rights Commission and chaplain of the Department of Public Safety, police and fire, of Edison, NJ. He is president and founder of the New Jersey Second Generation Holocaust Survivors' Group.

The work of Rabbi Rosenberg has not gone unnoticed. He recently received the Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Humanitarian Award. He also received the Chaplain of the Year Award from the New York Board of Rabbis for his efforts during and following 9/11.

On June 10, 2002, Rabbi Rosenberg was presented with the annual Rabbi Israel Mowshowitz Award by the New York Board of Rabbis.

We are privileged to have Rabbi Rosenberg of Edison, NJ, to lead the Senate in prayer today.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Who yields time?

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time during the quorum call be charged equally to both sides during the morning business period.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

GLOBALIZATION AND BIOTERRORISM

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I wish to take this opportunity in morning business to comment on issues of current events but also tied to the events of the last several years. The issues relate to the natural and the unnatural emergence and use of biology and microbes that have resulted in a convergence of two issues. One is this natural occurrence and one is the use of microbes, bacteria, viruses potentially as bioterror agents, all of that coupled with another nexus, globalization, the realization and evolution of a much smaller world in which we all live.

Globalization is generally addressed in the context of economics, economies of countries, information technologies, coffee shop franchises, luxury hotels, luxury clothing—what labels are on the backs of those sweaters and shirts—Internet surfing, instant messages.

Globalization has helped democratize faraway countries. It has brought wealth and comfort to many of the world's peoples. But it has always exposed us to new vulnerabilities which we have read about in recent years and, indeed, we read about each day in the papers. Specifically, globalization has brought us much closer to the threat of natural disease as well as disease used potentially as an instrument of terror.

We can take, for example, the outbreak of monkeypox about which we are reading and listening today. We know monkeypox causes fever, headache, cough, and an extremely painful rash with pus-filled sores that can spread across the body. We know in children and those individuals who have a suppressed immune system, whether it is because of cancer or treatment for cancer or other autoimmune diseases, it can cause death.

Monkeypox is suspected to have originated with the importation of an exotic pet, actually a rather popular exotic pet called the Gambian giant rat. Then the monkeypox virus apparently jumped to infect the pet prairie dogs, and then jumped to infect human beings. We know there are 37 suspected or confirmed cases of monkeypox that are currently being investigated by the Centers for Disease Control. Public health officials, we learn, fear the prairie dog owners will release their infected pets into the wild and, thus, spread the disease through communities, regions, and, indeed, throughout North America.

Some also believe that this outbreak of monkeypox is the tip of a growing problem of infectious diseases being brought into the country through the importation of exotic animals.

Not too long ago—and, in fact, even right now—we focused on SARS. As we have seen with SARS, international travel by humans is also proving to be a conduit of disease. As I speak, Toronto is struggling with yet another suspected outbreak of SARS and at any point could go back on the World Health Organization's travel advisory list.

The SARS epidemic continues to disrupt international travel, continues to affect and, indeed, depress national economies.

Monkeypox, SARS, West Nile virus, which we know is seasonal—it has been 4 years since it first arrived in New York, and it has claimed 284 deaths and 4,156 infections. Several years ago, people did not know what West Nile virus was. Several months ago we did not know what SARS was, and several days ago we did not know what monkeypox was. Last year, just in this region of Maryland, Virginia, and the District, the West Nile virus killed 11 people. After what has been a wet spring in this region, where mosquito breeding is facilitated, officials fear—again not to be an alarmist—there will be another explosion of infections this summer. West Nile has spread across the United States of America. It is now firmly established, entrenched as a North American disease. West Nile, SARS, and now monkeypox—we will see emerging infections continue to appear, at least at this rate. These are the natural health threats.

Equally alarming is this whole arena of bioterrorism, the use of microbes, viruses, bacteria, and other microbes as biological weapons to threaten others. This very body, the Senate, has been attacked with anthrax. We know there is an entity called the plague which, indeed, wiped out about a third of Europe in the 1300s.

We know the risk of smallpox. We know one gram of botulinum toxin, if aerosolized, has the potential for taking the lives of a million and a half people.

I mention all of this not to be an alarmist but to give some definition to what I think we all know today but we did not think very much about 3 or 5 years ago, and that is these threats, those of bioterrorism and the naturally occurring, are real.

With regard to bioterrorism, I do commend President Bush for successfully leading America and indeed the world to face these new realities of terrorists. We have disrupted terrorist networks. We have frozen terrorist assets. We have removed terrorist leaders and indeed have arrested more than 3,000 individual terrorists worldwide. We have toppled two of the world's most notorious terrorist regimes in Afghanistan and Iraq with decisive victories.

With regard to our domestic response, we are finally rebuilding our public health system after a long period of neglect. As a nation, this has enabled us to respond, in an appropriate way, to the potential spread of SARS much more effectively than other countries. We must continue to invest in and enhance our public health system to detect and respond to such emergencies, for, as I said earlier, we will see more.

We must actively lead the way to develop new treatments in vaccines, and that is why when I come to the floor each morning and mention the importance of vaccine research, vaccine development, and specifically bioshield legislation, which is sitting before this body perched and ready for us to act upon it, but there are certain problems we have had among ourselves in coming to an agreement, how best to bring that to the floor—but that bioshield legislation is in exact response to these issues I mention today.

I should also add that we, and our friends and allies across the world, must not allow other countries to pursue biological weapons programs. President Bush has set the United States, with the help of our allies, along a proper course to ultimately win the war on terror. I, for one, am grateful he and his national security team have answered the call to serve in this perilous time. We will defeat the forces of terror. We must take our enemies seriously, but because of globalization they are closer than ever. I am optimistic. We have an obligation in this body to respond and indeed prepare for and prevent, whether it is those naturally occurring infections or any attempt of others to use these biological agents as weapons of mass destruction.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. We are in morning business, is that correct?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

REFORM OF OUR GOVERNMENT

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I will make a couple of comments that are a little different than the subject we have been talking about. It is something that I do not have the recommendation as to how we resolve it particularly, but I am persuaded we need to spend a little more time on it, which I intend to, and that is government activities we are involved in. Of course, the many government activities we are involved in are probably the largest combined organizational thing we do in this country. It would be interesting to know, and I intend to see if there is not a way for all of us to do so, to get a look at all the kinds of programs and different activities the Federal Government is involved in. It is massive, of course.

We spend trillions of dollars on activities in the Federal Government. I do not suggest that is not legitimate. The Federal Government has a job to do and we need to do it. What I do believe is that because of the nature of it and because of the nature of this body, frankly, we do not really work very hard at ensuring that the delivery of these services is done as efficiently as it could be. We are a little different, of course, than the private sector in that there are some inherent barriers in the private sector. If one is not very efficient, they are not able to continue to compete with others and they are not able to go on. That is not true in the Government, of course. There is not that kind of limitation.

So it seems to me we ought to give a little more thought to how we do things. It is quite natural that when there is a need somewhere, through the political process we bring up some resolution to the need, some way to work on the need, and it usually creates a new agency or creates a new department within an agency or a new function, and there is no real way to ensure that that blends in to what is already being done in an efficient way.

There certainly must be lots of opportunities within this huge organization we have to be able to blend one thing in to another to do it more efficiently, to deliver it more efficiently. I think clearly there is reason to believe that activities that were begun 30 years ago may need to be reviewed to see if they still are needed, and if they are needed that they are done in a way that is most effective and efficient.

I am really not critical of the people who are doing these things. I am critical, I guess, or at least inquisitive about the system, because the system is set up in such a way that it does not have a way to even consider change very often. As I say, in the private sector, people are forced to change from time to time in order to continue to be effective and to continue to modernize. I do not think it is reasonable to think that a program that started in the 1950s, and it is now 2003, that that program is being done as efficiently as it might be. I frankly sometimes think it would be a good idea if the various things we pass that go into some kind of services, some kind of activity, should expire and we should have to go through the process of reexamining what that operation is doing and if it is still needed—and it may or may not be—then see if it is being done in the most efficient way possible.

There are operations in the Government, of course, that are designed to do that, such as OMB, the Office of Management and Budget, but it is very difficult.

I am pleased that President Bush has a modernization program going, but there is all kinds of resistance. The resistance can be political: If it does not happen to suit one's particular community as a politician, why, they are opposed to that. I think it is fair to say clearly that the labor union leaders who are involved with Government unions are overreacting to the idea that some things ought to be made available to be done in the private sector, which I think is a very reasonable thing to do.

We now have sort of an overstatement of things that are trying to be done in the National Park Service. Well, there should be a few things that are competitive with the private sector, but the whole Park Service is not going to be turned over to the private sector. No one has suggested that, but that is the kind of thing we get.

I do think we ought to pay a little more attention to how we could make the delivery of services more efficient and how we could review the services that are being delivered to see if indeed they are in keeping with the times. That has to be done in a special way because it just does not happen automatically. Politics keeps it from happening. The complexity keeps it from happening. Sometimes labor unions are resistant to any change. I think it is our responsibility, and I intend to continue to look for opportunities, to examine, evaluate, and try to move forward in making the delivery of essential services more efficient whenever possible.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I understand we are to resume debate on S. 14 at 10?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

Mr. CRAIG. The chairman of the committee who is managing the bill is not yet on the floor. Until he comes, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for no more than 10 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wonder if the bill should be reported and then go into morning business.

Mr. CRAIG. I am going to talk on energy, anyway, so we could do that. I would withdraw my UC.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Morning business is closed.

ENERGY POLICY ACT OF 2003

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of S. 14, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 14) to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Feinstein amendment No. 876, to tighten oversight of energy markets.

Reid amendment No. 877 (to amendment No. 876), to exclude metals from regulatory oversight by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from the great State of Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, we are now resuming debate on S. 14, the national energy policy for our country. I have been on the floor several times over the last number of weeks as we have debated different amendments. Yesterday, there were a couple of critical votes as it related to nuclear. We have a derivatives amendment at this time by the Senator from California, and I think the Senator from Nevada has a second degree on it.

A fundamental question again emerges, and emerged yesterday at a hearing on the Hill, with the statement of our Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan as to the importance of a national energy policy.

Why is the Chairman of the Federal Reserve, who is interested in the prime rate and the management of monetary supply of our country, concerned about energy? It is fundamental why he is concerned about energy. He is concerned about the economy of our country and its strength, stability, and ability to grow and provide jobs for the men and women who currently do not have them, and to strengthen and stabilize those jobs for the men and women who currently do have jobs.

What was he talking about yesterday? He was talking about one of the primary feed stocks for energy in our country, natural gas; the problems that we currently have with the supply of natural gas because this country has not effectively explored and developed, for a variety of reasons, our natural gas supply.

In the context of not providing supply, we have provided extraordinary demands on the current supply. Under the Clean Air Act, to meet those clean air standards, and out in the Western States and those air sheds specifically, the only way you can meet those standards and bring a new electrical generating plant on line is to choose to use gas to fire a turbine, to generate electricity. That is a tremendously inefficient way to use the valuable commodity of natural gas, but that is exactly what the Federal Government has told our utilities over the last two decades: If you are going to bring a new generation on line, it will be a gas-fired electrical turbine. Coal has problems; we are working on clean coal technology. This legislation embodies trying to get us to a cleaner technology to fire the coal electrical generation in our country.

As a result, what are we talking about? What has been said and what we believe to be true is that there is now rapidly occurring a major shortage in natural gas. As a result, that is not only going to drive up the cost to the consumer in his or her individual home—and I will read from an article: Another witness, Donald Mason, head of the Ohio Public Utilities Commission, predicted that the average residential heating bill next winter will be at least $220 higher per household than last winter.

That is a real shock to an economy and to a household and why Alan Greenspan is obviously worried that you spread that across a consuming nation, and we are talking about hundreds of millions of dollars pulled out of the economy to go to the cost of heating when it had not been the case before. That was one of the concerns.

The other concern is the tremendous price hike we are seeing at this time and the impact that will have. Gas prices have nearly doubled in the past year to about $6.31 per Btu, and there is a 25-percent change expected. We expect prices to peak and we have seen one instance, about 3 months ago, over a 200-percent increase in the price of natural gas as a spike in the market.

S. 14 is legislation to help facilitate the construction of a major delivery system out of Alaska. In Alaska at this moment we are pumping billions of Btu's of gas back into the ground because we simply cannot transport it to the lower 48 States, and we do not want to flare it into the atmosphere as has been the approach in the past in gasfields. It is too valuable a commodity, and we do not want to do that to the environment.

We have also looked at other opportunities for access. Part of the difficulty today is delivery systems and building gas pipelines across America. This legislation has provisions to help facilitate more of that as it relates to right of way and, of course, the recognition of the environmental need and the consequence and appropriate adjustment there.

What Alan Greenspan underlines in his comments, what Donald Mason from the Ohio Public Utilities Commission underlines, was what Spence Abraham said last Friday when he called for a June 26 meeting of the National Petroleum Council to talk about this impending gas shortage crisis: Our country needs a national energy policy.

I hope all of my colleagues rally to that reality. Why should we force upon the American consumer a $200- or $300-increase in their energy costs next year simply because this Senate and this Congress will not do its work or can't do its work? We debated mightily a year ago an energy policy. We got it to a conference. The differences were too great. Ultimately, we could not arrive at a final product to go to our President's desk.

What Senator DOMENICI has done as chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee is craft a broad-based national energy policy that is as much production as it is conservation. It is as much new technology as it is the advancement and the improving of existing technology. It is truly a broad-based national energy policy for our country. More gas? Yes. More coal usage? Yes. More wind usage? Yes. More photovoltaic or sunlight usage? You bet. The development of new, safe, clean, more effective utilization of nuclear? Absolutely. Why shy away from any energy source at this moment when we are forcing them on the American consumer and the economy of this country is increasing costs in the area of energy?

Lastly, when we do all of that and we drive up the costs of the job itself and the cost of the product produced by that job, we make ourselves increasingly less competitive around the world.

I was out in the Silicon Valley this weekend. I met with 50 CEOs of high-technology companies in San Jose. They are interested in a lot of issues, but their No. 1 issue is energy and the ability to know that when they build a plant in this country, whether it is in California or in any other State, they are going to be guaranteed a supply of high-quality constant energy. The reality is when they do not have it, they will shop elsewhere to build that plant. If they can't get quality sustainable energy in this country, then they will go elsewhere. That means U.S. jobs go to some other country.

Shame on us as a country for having failed for the last decade to produce a national energy policy, and in failing to do so, bringing Alan Greenspan to the Hill to talk about an impending energy crisis again in domestic supply of gas, and to have a utility commissioner talk about a $220-per-year increase in the cost of heating the average American home by natural gas.

Less food on the table, less money in the college trust fund for the children—all of those could be the consequence of a home that is unemployed, a home that has to choose between staying warm and doing other things. In a cold winter, ultimately, they will want to stay warm and they will have to pay their heating bill. We should not ask Americans to make that choice if it is our failure to produce a national energy policy and to produce energy that has caused them to have to make that choice. That is the issue.

I hope the Senate will expedite the passage of S. 14. We have been on it now nearly 4 weeks, 3 weeks to be exact. We are being told there are hundreds of amendments out there. There are not hundreds of amendments on this side of the aisle. There are a few. We ought to ask, and I hope we can get by the end of business this week, a finite list and a unanimous consent that will bring this issue together so we can say to our colleagues and to the American people: The Senate is ultimately going to vote on this legislation, help produce a national energy policy, get it into conference with the House, and get it on the President's desk as soon as we possibly can.

Not only does the absence of a national policy have a negative impact on our economy, the presence of one—this legislation—could have a tremendously positive impact. Many have said in the analysis of S. 14, there are 500,000 new jobs in this legislation alone. That could be more jobs that would be created over the next 10 years by this legislation than could be created by the economic stimulus package, although we believe that will have a tremendously positive impact.

That is why we are here in the Chamber debating it. I am frustrated by those who say: Oh, no, not now; we can't do this; we can't do that; or we have hundreds of amendments; or we are obstructing or dragging our feet.

Let's get a unanimous consent agreement. Let's get Senators to bring those amendments to the floor. I am certainly willing to debate them. I think we ought to vote on them. The American people ought to sort us out and see who is for energy production in this country, who is for driving down the projected costs to the average home when it comes to their heating bill, who is in favor of creating hundreds of thousands of new jobs in clean technology, environmentally sound technology, and making this Nation once again self-reliant in the area of energy.

S. 14 is critical legislation. We ought to be voting on it now. We ought not be dragging our feet or, in some instances, obstructing. The debate is critical. Senators, bring your amendments to the floor. The chairman has pleaded with us time and time again to craft a unanimous consent agreement. The Senator from Nevada, the whip for Democrats, has worked with us to try to get a unanimous consent agreement. If, on Friday, we cannot produce a unanimous consent agreement of the body of amendments that will finally be offered and debated on this bill, then it begins to look as if somebody is obstructing this process, somebody simply does not want it to go forward in an effective way to finalize and produce for this country a national energy policy.

I certainly hope we can get on with the business that the Senate does best—get to the floor, debate the issues, offer the amendments, vote on them, and ultimately get this legislation to our President's desk so our country can once again stand tall and strong in the field of energy.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from Idaho, we will, as I indicated to the majority leader today, have a list sometime today, a finite list of amendments on our side. I would also say the holdup, the slowdown on this bill in the last 24 hours is not anything that we on this side have done. Senator FEINSTEIN has offered an amendment. That amendment needs to be disposed of before we move forward. I hope the majority will make a decision in the near future as to what they want to do with that amendment.

As indicated, I filed an amendment—I am confident my friend from Idaho would agree with it—to exempt from her amendment minerals, which are such an important part of the American West. They have agreed to accept that amendment. Senator FEINSTEIN has agreed to accept the amendment—not, I am sure, because she likes the amendment a lot but because she realizes what happened when there was a vote on this last year.

I hope that amendment will be accepted, the majority will allow that amendment to be accepted, and we can move forward on the Feinstein amendment with an up-or-down vote or move to table, whatever they decide to do on it, but let's move on.

Senator FEINSTEIN, for example, has other amendments she wishes to offer. She has one dealing with CAFE standards. That was debated last time, but I am sure we will have to debate it this time. But we should move forward on this legislation.

I want the record simply to reflect we are not holding up this legislation. I have made public statements here, with the full knowledge of the Democratic leader, that we are cooperating on this Energy bill in the very best way we can. As we know, last year when we had this bill up, there were 8 weeks of debate, approximately 125 amendments, and we had 35 recorded votes. I hope we need not do that this time. I hope we can condense things and do it in fewer than 8 weeks.

I also said publicly I appreciate very much how Senator FRIST has handled the bills generally since he has taken the leadership of the Senate—not filing cloture immediately. As long as we are cooperating, which we are on this, offering substantive amendments, he has been very good about allowing debate to go forward.

We continue, on this measure, to cooperate with the majority. We will move forward with this most important legislation. I agree with the Senator from Idaho, this country needs an energy policy. I underline, underscore this. I didn't hear all his remarks, I was called off the floor, but I did hear some of his statements regarding alternative energy. The State of Nevada is the Saudi Arabia of geothermal. We are waiting for that development. We need certain tax incentives included in the tax portion of this bill.

We would thrive on more solar energy production. That can be done with tax incentives that are in the underlying tax part of this bill. Of course, the Senator from Idaho and I know how much the wind blows in parts of Idaho and Nevada, and we should be using that wind to our own benefit. It is renewable energy.

Even though there are certain things in the bill the Senator from New Mexico produced that I was not wild about, that is what the process is about. Amendments are offered. The Senator from New Mexico had strong feelings about the nuclear portions of this legislation. We had a good debate on that yesterday and a very close vote. That is what the Senate is all about. There are other parts of the bill we are going to try to amend. No one at this stage is trying to stall—I should not say no one. I am sure some people would love this legislation never to come about, but the general belief of the people on this side of the aisle is we should have an Energy bill, and we are going to work toward that end.

Mr. CRAIG. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. REID. I am happy to yield.

Mr. CRAIG. I appreciate those comments. I think we are all frustrated, when we have an issue as mature as this issue is, not to be able to define an arena of amendments and get a unanimous consent agreement that sets a course of action for us. To me, that is what defines progress and ultimate conclusion of what we do on the floor.

As I said earlier, I welcome all amendments that Senators want to have come to the floor. Let's get at the business of debating them and voting on them. When I see an hour quorum call because we cannot get somebody to come to the floor to offer an amendment—and I know the manager of the bill, the chairman of the Energy Committee, has worked mightily to get that done—I have to begin to question what is our intent here.

I am extremely pleased that the Senator from Nevada has recognized the possibility of getting a unanimous consent with a group. I did mention in my remarks that I know the Senator worked to accomplish that, and I appreciate that. But in the absence of doing that, it appears we are wandering a bit in a wilderness of undefinable amendments and no determination as to when we can conclude this process.

It is extremely pleasing to hear we may ultimately get that done because this is a critical issue.

Mr. REID. I will respond to my friend from Idaho. No. 1, we hope to have a list of amendments today sometime before the close of business. No. 2, as the Senator from Idaho knows, as the Senator from New Mexico knows, the lull in the proceedings here is not any fault of the minority. We are waiting for the majority to make a decision as to what they are going to do on the derivatives amendment filed by the Senator from California and the Senator from Illinois.

We are here to do business. We are simply waiting, until a decision is made on derivatives, as to what is the next amendment before us. We have lots of people willing to offer amendments on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM of South Carolina). The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, first I thank the distinguished Senator from Idaho for his remarks this morning and for his assistance on this bill. I thank him very much.

This morning I want in particular to thank the distinguished minority whip, the Senator from Nevada, for his comments on the floor and his commitment. We are working on a list on our side. We will certainly be ready at the same time or sooner, which means whether we finish by this Friday or not, although we will try mightily once we have the list to wean them down and to move with dispatch. Obviously, we will be on a course to get an Energy bill this year, which is clearly what we want to do. From listening to the minority leader, I have no doubt whatsoever that is what the minority desires to do. I thank him very much for the comments here this morning.

As far as the pending amendment is concerned, it is in our hands at this point. The Senator from California has her prerogative of not wanting to set it aside. We have an obligation to decide what we are going to do with it. We ought to do that pretty soon. Our leadership will make that decision. It is not directly within the jurisdiction of this committee, or I would be making decisions with the leadership. It is more within the jurisdiction of the Agriculture Committee, and the leadership is taking a look.

I understand we have a vote this morning on a judge. Is that correct? That will give leadership a chance to be here in the Chamber, I say to my friend from Nevada, after which time we will make a decision on what we want to do with the pending amendment.

In the meantime, the Senator from New Mexico yields the floor knowing there are others who want to speak to this issue. The junior Senator from Idaho desires to speak. I will yield at this point so he may proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

AMENDMENT NO. 876

Mr. CRAPO. Mr. President, I rise to address the Feinstein amendment dealing with derivatives. I think it is a very bad idea. It is one we debated last year and one which is dangerous to our economy.

In order to understand, we have to go back 2 years. Several years ago, Congress wanted to know exactly how our country should approach the regulation of derivatives. As a result of that, and after a few years of study and debate in which a precise time was put together to evaluate the issue, that team came back with recommendations. Those recommendations were enacted by Congress in the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000. This landmark legislation provided certainty with respect to the legal enforceability and regulatory status of swaps and other off-exchange derivatives—what we call over-the-counter derivatives—under the Commodity Exchange Act. The Feinstein amendment would undermine that certainty for OTC derivatives and would impose a new persuasive and unnecessary regulatory regime with respect to OTC derivatives based on energy or on other nonfinancial, nonagricultural commodities.

This act gets complicated, but these commodities are called ''exempt commodities.'' The term is a little bit confusing because it creates the impression sometimes that these commodities are not regulated at all. They are covered fully by the Commodity Futures Modernization Act and by the Commodity Exchange Act. The point is that they are not regulated in the same way that other securities are regulated.

OTC derivatives, including those based on energy, are critical risk management tools. Congress, key financial regulators and others recognize that OTC derivatives are critical tools that are used by businesses, government, and others to manage the financial, commodity, credit and other risks inherent in their core economic activities with a degree of efficiency that would not otherwise be possible.

It is important to state at the outset as we are discussing this issue that we are not talking about transactions that many people think of in securities where they think about investing in a stock in the stock market, a stock that may be regulated under our securities regulations system. These are not transactions that are engaged in by unsophisticated buyers or sellers. These are very sophisticated transactions. Those engaging in these transactions are sophisticated buyers and sellers. They are not the kinds of transactions most people think of when they think of investing in the stock market.

OTC derivatives based on energy products are an especially important tool, allowing market participants to manage risk. In fact, last year when we had Alan Greenspan testify at the Banking Committee, I asked him directly about whether he believed the management of derivatives, the regulation of derivatives, was being properly handled today and whether there was any aspect of our approach to regulating derivatives that led to the Enron debacle or any of the other problems California faced.

At that time, the answer I got from Mr. Greenspan was that he was not aware of any evidence that indicated the problems we faced in the Enron circumstance were as a result of our regulatory regime for derivatives, and also that it was his opinion the use of derivatives was a very important tool to help to allocate risk in our economy in such a manner that it helped us stabilize and strengthen our economy.

In fact, he even went so far as to say he believed that one reason our economy had not dipped further as we faced a lot of the economic trials and tribulations we have faced in the last couple of years was because of our ability to utilize derivatives and to share and allocate risk in these complicated transactions.

Today, for example, airlines use over-the-counter derivatives to manage their risks with respect to the price and availability of jet fuel. Energy-intensive companies such as aluminum producers use OTC derivatives to hedge their risks of change in the cost of electricity, and energy producers likewise use OTC derivatives to minimize the effects of price volatility.

Again, I reiterate the point that these are complicated, sophisticated transactions being engaged in by very sophisticated participants in the market.

A Wall Street Journal article dated March 10, 2003, entitled ''U.S. Airlines Show Disparity in Hedging for Jet-Fuel Costs,'' illustrated the impacts of using derivatives to hedge in the U.S. airline industry. The article noted that jet fuel, now more than twice as expensive; as a year ago, is emerging as a major factor in survival and bankruptcy for airlines, as several carriers, including some of the weakest, find themselves with few protective price hedges in place.

In other words, these airlines did not effectively utilize the hedging tool, and now they are facing a doubling in the cost of their fuel prices against which they could have hedged. They could have spread that risk if they had used these hedging tools.

Congress should avoid actions that unnecessarily deter the use or increase the cost of these risk management tools.

Key financial regulators also oppose legislation such as this amendment. As I indicated earlier, Alan Greenspan indicated his opposition to increasing or changing the regulatory regime with regard to transactions in OTC derivatives. We are expecting anytime today to get a brandnew response from all of our financial regulators. But last year when this same debate was held, the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, collectively known as the President's Working Group on Financial Markets, opposed the earlier versions of the amendment we debated.

In a September 18, 2002, letter to Senators CRAPO and MILLER, these regulators highlighted the benefits of OTC derivative noting that ''the OTC derivatives markets in question have been a major contributor to our economy's ability to respond to the stresses and challenges of the last two years.'' The President's working group also observed ''while the derivatives markets may seem far removed from the interests and concerns of consumers, the efficiency gains that these markets have fostered are enormously important to the consumers and to our economy.'' They urged Congress to protect these markets' contributions to the economy and to be aware of the potential unintended consequences of legislative proposals to expand regulation of the OTC derivatives markets, and changing the President's working group proposals which we enacted into law in 2000.

Federal Reserved Chairman Alan Greenspan told the Senate Banking Committee in March of last year that there was:

> a significant downside if we regulate [OTC derivatives based on energy] where we do not have to . . . because if we step in as government regulators, we will remove a considerable amount if the caution that is necessary to allow these markets to evolve. [W]hile it may appear sensible to go in and regulate, all of our experience is that there is a significant downside when you do not allow counterparty surveillance to function in an appropriate manner.

The CFTC does not need new authority to address acts of manipulation that appear to have occurred in California.

One of the arguments we often hear in favor of jumping in and increasing the regulatory scheme with regard to derivatives is that Enron destroyed the energy markets in California and if we had had a tough regulatory regime, that wouldn't have happened.

The CFTC's recent enforcement action against Enron demonstrates that it has adequate tools under the CFMA to address situations such as those, which arose in California. The following enforcement actions have been brought forth by the CFTC this year: No. 1, CFTC charges Enron with price manipulation, operating an illegal, undesignated futures exchange and offering illegal lumber futures contracts through its internet trading platform; No. 2, energy trading company agrees to pay the CFTC $20 million to settle charges of attempted manipulation and false reporting; and No. 3, former natural gas trader charged criminally under the Commodity Exchange Act with intentionally reporting false natural gas price and volume information to energy reporting firms in an attempt to affect prices of natural gas contracts.

The point here is, there is law in place prohibiting the kinds of things that happened in the Enron situation, and those laws are being enforced with criminal penalties being imposed. The fact they are already regulated is apparent. The fact that the acts that occurred in California are the subject of intense regulatory review and criminal enforcement conduct shows we do have regulatory protections in place. The fact there are bad actors who violate the law does not always mean we should necessarily increase the regulatory burdens we face in this country, that our economy deals with in this country.

The CFTC's Division of Enforcement continues to work closely with other Federal law enforcement officers across the country on investigations of possible round-trip trading, false reporting, and fraud and manipulation by energy companies, their affiliates, their employees, or their agents. Again, the point is, there is no evidence that any aspect or lack of aspect in our regulatory regime for the regulation of derivatives had anything to do with the actions of Enron and the occurrences in California that caused such a difficult problem in their energy economy.

There is no evidence that enactment of the CFMA, for example—the 2000 reforms, the modernization of our regulatory system—contributed to the collapse of Enron. Enron's collapse was caused by a failure of corporate governance and controls which, when it became public, led others to refuse to do business with them. As in the case of California, neither the CFTC nor any other key financial regulators has suggested more restrictive regulation of derivatives or derivatives dealers would have prevented the fall of Enron or is needed to prevent future similar events in the future.

The Feinstein amendment would cause more problems than it would cure. This amendment, among other items, would create jurisdictional confusion between the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. It would impose problematic capital requirements to facilities trading in the OTC energy derivatives markets. It would require futures-like reporting and recordkeeping requirements.

It would create both legal and regulatory uncertainty for brokered trading in OTC energy derivatives, as well as OTC derivatives based on other nonfinancial, nonagricultural commodities. It would subject to new regulation a broad range of market participants that have not traditionally been subject to the more intensive CFTC regulation. It would allow the CFTC to regulate any exempt commodity transaction and presumably any market participant that engages in such a transaction in a dealer market. Again, I repeat, these are sophisticated transactions between sophisticated actors in these markets. This proposal would create the very sort of uncertainty that Congress and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission have worked for more than a decade to avoid.

This amendment, in my opinion, is a solution in search of a problem. Since the collapse of Enron and the actions of some market participants to improperly exploit the weaknesses in the California energy price deregulation scheme, remedial actions have occurred on all fronts. The CFTC, the FERC, and others have initiated civil and criminal actions. The Financial Accounting Standards Board has aggressively pursued necessary changes in accounting rules, and private-sector groups have developed and implemented ''best practices'' rules and improved the techniques of managing credit and other risks in the OTC energy derivatives transactions.

The lessons of Enron and of California have been learned. The misdeeds and regulatory violations involving Enron and California have challenged regulators under the existing regulatory structure. Law enforcement agencies and private litigants are dealing with it under the existing regulatory structure. The energy markets are beginning to rebound, and they are becoming less volatile, notwithstanding the current uncertain economy. As a result and because of all this, the Feinstein amendment is little more than a solution in search of a problem, but for reasons I have already mentioned, it is a solution that is dangerous and unnecessary and will put more rigidity into our economy at a time when we need the flexibility and the resilience that will make our economy more dynamic in these difficult times.

Mr. President, there are a lot of other aspects of this debate we need to review before we vote on this amendment. I am hopeful by the end of the day we are going to be in a position where we can, as a Senate, deal with this amendment, as we dealt with it last year, by rejecting it and telling our energy derivatives markets, and all of our OTC derivatives markets, that the current modernized regulatory structure we put into place in 2000, as we follow the President's working group recommendations as to how to deal with these issues, will be maintained and will not be changed, and they can continue to utilize these important financial tools to keep our economy strong and dynamic.

Mr. President, I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, what is the matter now before the Senate? Is it the Reid amendment to the Feinstein amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Reid amendment is the pending question.

AMENDMENT NO. 877, AS MODIFIED

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I have a modification to my amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is so modified.

The amendment (No. 877), as modified, is as follows:

On page 18, strike line 1 and insert the following:

''(10) METALS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, an agreement, contract, or transaction in metals—

''(A) shall not be subject to this subsection (as amended by section ___04 of the Energy Policy Act of 2003); and

''(B) shall be subject to this subsection and subsection (h) (as those subsections existed on the day before the date of enactment of the Energy Policy Act of 2003).

''(11) NO EFFECT ON OTHER AUTHORITY.—

Mr. REID. I state, Mr. President, I did this with no one from the majority being here, but it does not take unanimous consent, so I was not trying to take advantage of anyone.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise to address the overlying amendment pending before us concerning the issue of energy derivatives. I know there is a second-degree amendment to that. I am a little disappointed there is a second-degree amendment to it. I understand why it was done. I know the Senator from California wants to separate off those people who are interested in metals derivatives from those who are interested in energy derivatives. She knows there is considerable interest on both of those parts. So this is a divide-and-conquer strategy, where later they will pick up the metals folks, thinking it will probably work better, because we debated this last year. We debated the same issue. We are back to an amendment that is slightly revised but still not good enough to make it through this body before.

We voted on this and we defeated this. One significant change is the second-degree amendment that takes the metals derivatives out of it. That is clever, but I hope the metals folks don't fall for it because they are next on the list.

The proponents of the amendment believe the trading of derivatives—especially in the energy area—was the cause of energy problems faced by Western States in recent years. The proponents believe energy trading of derivatives by Enron contributed significantly to the energy problem. Unfortunately, the problems that caused Enron to fail were based upon failures in corporate governance and outright fraud. Chairman Greenspan has testified several times before congressional committees that derivatives did not cause the collapse of Enron.

Last year we debated the same issue and we voted it down. The issue of derivatives trading is one of the most complicated and detailed issues to come before us. I have been tempted to see how many of us could even spell derivatives, and we are being called on here to make some major judgments on the issue. If you are a derivatives dealer or a small company that uses derivatives to stabilize revenues, or you are a purchaser of derivatives, this would probably be a stimulating debate. But it is one of those detailed ones, and I think that is why I get to speak on it. It is more the accounting type of thing. Consequently, most people will not be able to understand the implications or even how it operates other than in general details, and I am including myself in that.

I must admit that as chairman of the Securities and Investment Subcommittee of the Banking Committee, I have encountered especially complex market structure orders. However, the issue of derivatives goes beyond those issues. This may have been the most complicated matter I have looked at since I have been in the Senate.

Nobody really knows what a derivative is, including myself. They are very complicated, tailored instruments, each one being unique, which explains why, from the beginning of the trading of derivatives, it has been deregulated. It has never been regulated. In very basic terms, the selling of derivatives is a way for companies that cannot afford risk to pass it on to companies that are willing to accept the risk, to buy the risk. It is a form of corporate insurance. However, beyond this simple definition, the experts should be left to structure and negotiate the instruments. I want to mention that each instrument is unique. That is why it is not traded on the stock market. However, beyond this simple definition, we do need to leave it to the professionals, the ones who understand how this works. And there are professionals out there working on it.

While the amendment before us is very similar to last year's amendment, the changes made to the amendment do not completely solve the underlying problems. In fact, the amendment may have cause for greater confusion as to the jurisdiction of derivatives between the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

In 2000, during the debate on the Commodity Futures Modernization Act, we discussed extensively the oversight and regulation of energy derivatives. We concluded that the proper amount of oversight for a new and emerging business had been put into law. I believe we took the proper course. That law gave the Commodity Futures Trading Commission additional powers to regulate market manipulation where appropriate.

One argument that was made over and over during the debates last year and is being made this year is that somehow the 2000 legislation exempted these derivatives and swaps from regulation. That argument is not true. They never have been regulated. In fact, Congress acted in passing the Futures Trading Practice Act in 1992 to give the Commodity Futures Trading Commission specific power to exempt these derivatives and swaps as being inappropriate for regulation under the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which has the job of regulating futures—not regulating tailored swaps between sophisticated customers.

The Congress passed the Futures Trading Practice Act in 1992 that directed the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to grant these exemptions. Those exemptions were granted in the previous administration, and the issue was not controversial until we started looking for a scapegoat. Nor have these swaps and derivatives ever come under Federal regulation in terms of an ongoing regulatory process.

Taxpayers take a dislike to the addition of programs to increase tax burden or regulation. This one is regulation. I am reminded of a poem from the play ''Big River'' that describes the emotions of a taxpayer. It goes:

Well you sole selling no-good
Son-of-a-shoe-fittin' firestarter
I ought to tear your no-good
Perambulatory bone frame
And nail it to your government walls
All of you, you Bureaucrats.

There is a concern across this country for bureaucrats setting up regulation, particularly regulation if it is not needed and regulation that is not understood by the regulators.

During his testimony before the Senate Banking Committee last March, Chairman Greenspan reiterated it was crucially important that Congress and Federal regulators permit the derivatives market to evolve amongst professionals who are the most capable of protecting themselves far better than Congress, the Federal Reserve, CFTC, or the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency. Unfortunately, there is a considerable downside for the Federal Government to get involved where the individual private parties are already looking at the economic events of their trading partners.

With respect to the Enron matter, there is no indication that the trading of energy derivatives contributed in any way to the collapse of Enron. Proponents of the amendment argue that Enron had such a large market share of this business that they were able to have undue influence over energy trading. However, to the contrary, during and after Enron's collapse, there were no interruptions of trading. If it had been a disaster, there would have been interruptions, but there were no interruptions of trading. The market continued.

One fear that existed in earlier debates, and still exists today, was that the CFTC did not have the regulatory power to correct abuses in trading of derivatives. However, on page 43 of the Senate companion bill, S. 3283, to the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000, paragraph (4)(B) gives the Commodity Futures Trading Commission the power to intervene and enforce any action where fraud is present.

In listening to proponents of this amendment, one would believe that Federal regulators were powerless in the energy trading markets. Not only does the power exist, but it was strengthened in the 2000 legislation by a provision written into the energy section of the bill in the House of Representatives. In paragraph (4)(C) is a provision relating to price manipulation and that grants the Commodity Futures Trading Commission the power to intervene in cases where price manipulation occurs.

It should be noted that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission on April 9 of this year issued a ''Report on Energy Investigations,'' which details civil and criminal enforcement actions brought in energy-related markets since the passage of the Commodity Futures Modernization Act in 2000. The powers granted to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission appear more than sufficient to oversee market manipulation and, therefore, make the unwieldy regulatory scheme proposed by this amendment unnecessary.

I ask unanimous consent that the entire ''Report of the Energy Investigations'' be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMODITY FUTURES TRADING COMMISSION'S REPORT ON ENERGY INVESTIGATIONS—APRIL 9, 2003

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission (the Commission or CFTC) has launched an extensive investigation of alleged misconduct in energy-related markets. To date, the Commission has investigated over 25 energy companies, including Enron and its affiliates, interviewed or taken testimony from over 200 individuals and reviewed in excess of 2 million documents. The Commission's efforts have already resulted in: the filing of three major enforcement actions, two of which were settled with civil monetary penalties totaling $25 million (see discussion below in Section I); related criminal filings (Section II); cooperative enforcement with Federal law enforcement officers; and public outreach efforts (Section IV).

The Commission has devoted significant resources to this investigation, including committing the full-time efforts of 30 staff members, which represents 25 percent of its total enforcement program staff. Through the first six months of fiscal year 2003, above and beyond its human resource costs, the Commission has spent $122,000 on expenses for its energy investigation, which is 30 percent of its enforcement program's total expenses during this time period. The Commission estimates its total energy investigation costs for the entire fiscal year should likely exceed $250,000.

Commission Chairman James E. Newsome, who is a member of the President's Corporate Fraud Task Force, remarked in connection with the commission's filing of an action against two energy companies in December 2002: ''My philosophy has been, and will continue to be, that the Commission has a responsibility to investigate alleged wrongdoing in a comprehensive and timely fashion. And, when violations are found, the Commission will come down hard. Over the course of the past year, the news has been peppered with admissions, accusations, and speculation of wrongdoing in the energy markets and, as a result, I have committed the Commission's resources to finding and punishing the wrongdoers. It is my belief that with the filing and simultaneous settling of this enforcement action, the Commission sends a clear message to all companies that engaged in similar behavior . . . a message that their actions will not be tolerated and that they will be prosecuted and subjected to the full consequences of the law.''

I. CIVIL INJUNCTIVE ACTIONS FILED BY THE COMMISSION

A. ENRON AND FORMER ENRON VICE PRESIDENT CHARGED WITH MANIPULATING PRICES IN NATURAL GAS MARKET; ENRON CHARGED FURTHER WITH OPERATING AN ILLEGAL, UNDESIGNATED FUTURES EXCHANGE AND OFFERING ILLEGAL LUMBER FUTURES CONTRACTS THROUGH ITS INTERNET TRADING PLATFORM

On March 12, 2003, the Commission filed a complaint in federal district court in Houston, Texas, charging defendants Enron Corp. (Enron), an Oregon Corporation headquartered in Houston, and Hunter S. Shively (Shively) of Houston, Texas, with manipulation or attempted manipulation, and charging Enron with operating an illegal futures exchange, and trading an illegal, off-exchange agricultural futures contract.

Until its bankruptcy in December 2001, Enron was one of the largest energy companies in the United States. Its natural gas trading unit was based in Houston and managed several natural gas over-the-counter (OTC) products. Enron's natural gas trading unit was divided into geographical regions and included a natural gas futures desk. Shively was the desk manager for Enron's Central Desk from May 1999 through December 2001.

From November 1999 through at least December 2001, Enron Online (EOL) was Enron's web-based electronic trading platform for wholesale energy, swaps, and other commodities, including the Henry Hub (HH) natural gas next-day spot contract that was delivered at the HH natural gas facility in Louisiana. The HH is the delivery point for the natural gas futures contract traded on the New York Mercantile Exchange (NYMEX), and prices in the HH Spot Market are correlated with the NYMEX natural gas futures contract. During its existence, EOL became a leading platform for natural gas spot and swaps trading.

The complaint charges that on July 19, 2001, Shively, through EOL, caused Enron to purchase an extraordinarily large amount of HH Spot Market natural gas within a short period of time, causing artificial prices in the HH Spot Market and impacting the correlated NYMEX natural gas futures price.

The complaint also charges Enron with operating EOL as an illegal futures exchange from September through December 2001. According to the complaint, in September 2001, Enron modified EOL to effectively allow outside users to post bids and offers. Enron listed at least three swaps on EOL that were commodity futures contracts. The complaint further alleges that with this modification, Enron was required to register or designate EOL with the CFTC or notify the CFTC that EOL was exempt from registration. Enron failed to do either of these things, and the complaint charges that, because of this failure, EOL operated as an illegal futures exchanged.

Finally, the complaint charges Enron with offering an illegal agricultural futures contract on EOL. According to the complaint, between at least December 2000 and December 2001, Enron offered a product on EOL it called the US Financial Lumber Swap. The complaint alleges that the EOL lumber swap was an agricultural futures contract that was not traded on a designated exchange or otherwise exempt, and therefore was an illegal agricultural futures contract. The CFTC is seeking against each defendant a permanent injunction, civil monetary penalties and other remedial and ancillary relief.

B. EL PASO MERCHANT ENERGY, L.P. SETTLES CLAIMS UNDER THE COMMODITY EXCHANGE ACT THAT IT INTENTIONALLY REPORTED FALSE NATURAL GAS PRICE AND VOLUME INFORMATION TO ENERGY REPORTING FIRMS IN AN ATTEMPT TO AFFECT PRICES OF NATURAL GAS CONTRACTS

On March 25, 2002, the Commission issued an administrative order settling charges of attempted manipulation and false reporting against energy company El Paso Merchant Energy, L.P. (EPME), a division of El Paso Corporation (El Paso). The CFTC settlement order finds that from at least June 2000 through November 2001, EPME reported false natural gas trading information, including price and volume information, and failed to report actual trading information, to certain reporting firms. According to the order, price and volume information is used by the reporting firms in calculating published indexes of natural gas prices for various hubs throughout the United States. The order finds that EPME knowingly submitted false information to the reporting firms in an attempt to skew those indexes for EPME's financial benefit. According to the order, natural gas futures traders refer to the published indexes for price discovery and for assessing price risks. The CFTC found that EPMS's false reporting conduct violated the Commodity Exchange Act (CEA).

The order also finds that EPME's employees provided false trade data because they believed it benefited their trading positions or derivative contracts. In addition, the order finds that EPME did not maintain required records concerning the information that it provided to the reporting firms or the true source of the information related to those firms, as required by Commission regulations. As a result of its actions, EPME violated the CEA and Commission regulations.

The order further finds that EPME specifically intended to report false or misleading or knowingly inaccurate market information concerning, among other things, trade prices and volumes, and withheld true market information, in an attempt to manipulate the price of natural gas in interstate commerce, and that EPME's provision of the false reports and failure to report true market information were overt acts that furthered the attempted manipulation. According to the order, EPME's conduct constituted an attempted manipulation under the CEA, which, if successful, could have affected prices of NYMEX natural gas futures contracts.

The CFTC order imposed the following sanctions: required EPME to cease and desist from further violations of the EA and Regulations; required EPME and El Paso, jointly and severally, to pay a civil monetary penalty of $20 milliion—$10 million immediately and $10 million plus post-judgment interest within three years of the entry of the order; and obliged EPME and El Paso to comply with various undertakings, including an undertaking to cooperate with the Commission in this and related matters, including any investigations of matters involving the reporting of natural gas trading information.

EPME provided significant cooperation in the course of the Commission's investigation by, among other things, conducting an internal investigation through an independent law firm, waiving work product privilege as to the results of that investigation, and compiling and analyzing trading data which detailed all reported and actual trades in the natural gas markets. The Commission took that significant cooperation into consideration in its decision to accept EPME's settlement offer.

C. DYNEGY MARKETING & TRADE AND WEST COAST LLC SETTLE CLAIMS UNDER THE COMMODITY EXCHANGE ACT THAT THE INTENTIONALLY REPORTED FALSE NATURAL GAS PRICE AND VOLUME INFORMATION TO ENERGY REPORTING FIRMS IN AN ATTEMPT TO AFFECT PRICES OF NATURAL GAS CONTRACTS

On December 19, 2002, the Commission issued an administrative order settling charges of attempted manipulation and false reporting against energy companies Dynegy Marketing & Trade (Dynegy) and West Coast Power LLC (West Coast). The CFTC settlement order finds that from at least January 2000 through June 2002, Dynegy and West Coast reported false natural gas trading information, including price and volume information, to certain reporting firms. According to the order, price and volume information is used by the reporting firms in calculating published surveys or indexes (indexes) of natural gas prices for various hubs throughout the United States. The order finds that Dynegy knowingly submitted false information to the reporting firms in an attempt to skew those indexes for Dynegy's financial benefit. According to the order, natural gas futures traders refer to the published indexes for price discovery and for assessing price risks. The CFTC found that Dynegy's false reporting conduct violated the CEA.

The order further finds that in an effort to ensure that its reported information would be used by the reporting firms, Dynegy caused West Coast to submit information misrepresenting that West Coast was a counterparty to fictitious trades. In addition, the order finds that Dynegy did not maintain required records concerning the information which it provided to the reporting firms or the true source of the information relayed to those firms, as required by Commission Regulations. As a result of their actions, Respondents violated the CEA and Commission Regulations.

The order further finds that Respondents specifically intended to report false or misleading or knowingly inaccurate market information concerning, among other things, trade prices and volumes, to manipulate the price of natural gas in interstate commerce, and that Respondents' provision of the false reports and their collusion, which was designed to thwart the reporting firms' detection of the false information, were overt acts that furthered the attempted manipulation. According to the order, Respondents' conduct constitutes an attempted manipulation under the CEA, which if successful, could have affected prices of NYMEX natural gas futures contracts.

The CFTC order imposed the following sanctions: required Dynegy and West Coast to cease and desist from further violations of the CEA and Regulations; required Dynegy and West Coast, jointly and severally, to pay a civil monetary of $5,000,000; and obliged Dynegy and West Coast to comply with their undertakings, including an undertaking to cooperate with the CFTC in this and related matters.

II. RELATED CRIMINAL ACTIONS

A. ENRON'S FORMER CHIEF ENERGY TRADER PLED GUILTY TO CONSPIRACY TO COMMIT WIRE FRAUD IN SCHEME TO MANIPULATE ENERGY MARKET

On October 17, 2002 the Office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of California announced that Timothy N. Belden, who was Enron's Chief Energy Trader, had agreed to plead guilty to conspiracy to commit wire fraud in a scheme with others at Enron to manipulate California's energy market. Specifically, Belden admitted that beginning in approximately 1998, and continuing through 2001, he and others at Enron conspired to manipulate the energy markets in California by: (1) misrepresenting the nature and amount of electricity Enron proposed to supply in the California market, as well as the load it intended to serve; (2) creating false congestion and falsely relieving that congestion on California transmission lines, and otherwise manipulating fees it would receive for relieving congestion; (3) misrepresenting that energy was from out-of-state to avoid federally approved price caps, when in fact, the energy it was selling was from the State of California and had been exported and re-imported; and (4) falsely represented that Enron intended to supply energy and ancillary services it did not in fact have and did not intend to supply. A sentencing date has yet to be scheduled for Belden, but a status hearing in his case is set for April 17, 2003. In announcing the plea agreement, the efforts of the Commission, Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) and Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) were recognized.

B. FORMER HEAD OF ENRON'S SHORT-TERM CALIFORNIA ENERGY TRADING DESK PLED GUILTY TO CRIMINAL CHARGES BASED UPON HIS AND OTHER ENRON TRADERS' CRIMINAL MANIPULATION OF THE CALIFORNIA ENERGY MARKETS

On February 4, 2003 the Office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of California announced that Jeffrey S. Richter, who was the head of Enron's Short-Term California energy trading desk, had agreed to plead guilty to conspiracy to commit wire fraud in a scheme with others at Enron to manipulate California's energy markets and also to making false statements to investigators. Specifically, Belden admitted to making false statements to the FBI and U.S. Attorneys Office during the continuing investigation into fraudulent trading practices in those markets. Specifically, Richter admitted his participation on behalf of Enron in two fraudulent schemes devised by Enron traders, known internally within Enron as ''Load Shift'' and ''Get Shorty.'' Enron's ''Load Shift'' trading scheme involved the filing of false power schedules to increase prices by creating the appearance of ''congestion'' on California's transmission lines, which permitted Enron to profit through its ownership of transmission rights on the lines and by offering to ''relieve'' the congestion through subsequent schedules. Enron's ''Get Shorty'' trading scheme involved the company's traders fabricated and sold emergency back-up power (known as ancillary services) to the California Independent Service Operator, received payment, then cancelled the schedules and covered their commitments by purchasing through a cheaper market closer to the time of delivery. In announcing the plea agreement, the efforts of the Commission, FERC, FBI, and the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice were recognized.

C. FORMER DYNEGY NATIONAL GAS TRADER CHARGED CRIMINALLY UNDER THE COMMODITY EXCHANGE ACT WITH INTENTIONALLY REPORTING FALSE NATURAL GAS PRICE AND VOLUME INFORMATION TO ENERGY REPORTING FIRMS IN AN ATTEMPT TO AFFECT PRICES OF NATURAL GAS CONTRACTS

On January 27, 2003 the Office of the United States Attorney for the Southern District of Texas, Houston Division, unsealed a seven count federal indictment charging Michelle Valencia, a former Senior Trader at Dynegy, with three counts of false reporting under the CEA. Additionally, Valencia was charged with four counts of wire fraud. The indictment alleges that on three separate occasions in November 2000, January 2001 and February 2001, Valencia, responsible for trading natural gas through Dynegy's ''West Desk'' caused the transmission of a report which include price and volume data to certain publications knowing that the trades had not actually occurred. In announcing the indictment, the efforts of the Commission and the FBI were recognized.

III. COOPERATIVE ENFORCEMENT—COMMISSION SEMINAR WITH FEDERAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICERS ON ENERGY MARKETS

On February 12, 2003 the Commission hosted forty federal criminal law enforcement officers at a cooperative enforcement session on current issues in energy investigations. Attending were Assistant United States Attorneys, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents, and United States Postal Inspectors. The Commission's Division of Enforcement, which coordinated the program, has been working closely with other federal law enforcement officers across the country on investigations of possible round-trip trading, false reporting, and fraud and manipulation by energy companies and their affiliates, employees and agents. The meeting was designed to share expertise, and to discuss ways for federal enforcers to cooperate in these inquiries.

IV. PUBLIC OUTREACH

In carrying out its regulatory and enforcement responsibilities under the CEA, the Commission relies upon the public as an important source of information. A questionnaire, available by clicking on the Enron Information link on the CFTC's homepage at www.cftc.gov, has been prepared by the CFTC's Division of Enforcement to assist members of the public in reporting suspicious activities or transactions involving Enron, its subsidiaries, affiliates, or related entities. The Division is also interested in receiving information relating to suspicious activities or transactions that may have affected West coast electricity or natural gas prices, particularly in January 2000 through December 31, 2001. Interested persons can also call the Commission's toll-free voice mailbox and leave relevant information at (866) 616–1783.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I believe the amendment is overly broad and, if adopted, will likely decrease market liquidity because of increased legal and transactional uncertainties. Additionally, energy companies may be discouraged from using derivatives to hedge price risks, resulting in increased volatility in the energy markets. In the end, I believe this will hurt the very consumers the legislation seeks to help.

The amendment appears to grant the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission primary jurisdiction over energy derivatives, but if the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission determines that the derivative or financial instrument is not under its jurisdiction, then the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission should refer the derivative or financial instrument to the appropriate Federal regulator. Unfortunately, this will create great uncertainty for market participants as to which agency's regulatory scheme the derivative would fall under.

I recently was involved in some pipeline questions and ran into the circular path of fingerpointing where each agency said the other agency and the other agency and the other agency was responsible until it pointed back to the first agency, and nobody would look at the problem. That is the kind of circular problem we are creating with this amendment.

In addition, it goes without saying that Federal agencies want to expand their jurisdiction and get bigger. It should be noted that while the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission seeks to expand its authority to regulate these energy derivatives markets, other Federal agencies, particularly the financial regulatory agencies, believe such a regulatory scheme would be detrimental to the market.

The amendment also would subject to regulation a broad class of ''covered entities,'' including both electronic trading facilities and ''dealer markets'' that are not otherwise trading facilities. As discussed above, this definition may be too broad as to deter participants from entering the trading markets.

In addition, the amendment would permit CFTC to impose notice, reporting, price dissemination, recordkeeping, among other requirements. Not only would these requirements apply to dealer markets, but also to exemption commodity transactions on such an entity.

The secondary amendment that would exempt metals from the proposed regulatory scheme of the underlying amendment is not a good idea. Congress should be very cautious about carve-outs without fully understanding the implications. With regard to metals, Congress may start down a slippery slope where this initial carve-out is for the metals industry and then move on to other industries. I believe we need to explore this in the committees before having it considered on the floor. Therefore, I urge Members to resist the free vote without knowing all the consequences.

Letters were recently sent to the Senate Energy Committee by the Chicago Board of Trade, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, and the New York Mercantile Exchange opposing legislation introduced this Congress that is very similar to the amendment before us.

Various other groups have been outspoken about this amendment, including the National Mining Association, the International Swaps and Derivatives Association, and the Bond Market Association, just to name a few. In addition, during last year's debate on the Energy bill, the President's working group, comprised of the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, the Secretary of the Department of the Treasury, the Chairman of the SEC, the Chairman of the CFTC, opposed a similar amendment and we defeated it. Individually, the Chairman of the CFTC and the then-Chairman of the SEC sent letters directly to me opposing the energy derivative amendment.

On the overall topic of derivatives, Chairman Greenspan stated:

> Although the benefits and costs of derivatives remain the subject of spirited debate, the performance of the economy and the financial system in recent years suggests that these benefits have materially exceeded the costs.

If the proponents of this amendment are attempting to remedy the problems caused by Enron, I do not believe this amendment will make a difference to prevent future Enrons. However, if last year's Sarbanes-Oxley Act had been in place sooner, then the corporate governance requirements of the act may have served as an early warning system to Enron's audit committee and have covered the fraudulent activities early in the process.

What I am saying is, we corrected the fraudulent problem. I am very concerned that if we adopt this amendment, we may fundamentally change the emerging derivatives market. Once the structure is in place, it may place such a burden on the market participants that it may not be worthwhile to pursue. In addition, the amendment may have caused unintentional confusion as to which regulator may or may not oversee individual participants or components of the marketplace. Before we make any fundamental change, we should, at a minimum, try to understand the ramifications first.

I am afraid this amendment might fit under the congressional precept that if it is worth reacting to, it is worth overreacting to, and that is something we have to avoid if we want to make sure that the markets continue to exist. Like Chairman Greenspan, I believe the derivative trading, even in the energy derivative area, has been extremely beneficial to our economy and I hope we continue it.

I request that Members vote against the overlying amendment.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter from Jack Gerard of NMA be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL MINING ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, June 11, 2003.

Hon. MIKE ENZI,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ENZI: The National Mining Association opposes attempts by Senator Feinstein or Senator Levin to further regulate the derivatives OTC market. Over the Counter derivatives including those based on energy and metals are critical risk management tools.

We appreciate Senator Reid's positive work to exclude metals from the pending amendment, but continue to oppose the Feinstein or Levin amendments which unnecessarily increases regulation of the OTC energy derivatives.

Attached are additional talking points generated by us and our partners in the financial community. Thank you for your interest.

Sincerely,

JACK GERARD.

Hon. BILL FRIST,
Majority Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.
Hon. TOM DASCHLE,
Democratic Leader, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

THE HONORABLE BILL FRIST AND THE HONORABLE TOM DASCHLE: We urge you to oppose any financial derivatives, energy derivatives, metals derivatives and energy trading market provisions contained in S. 509 that may be offered as amendments by Senator Feinstein to H.R. 6, the Energy Policy Act of 2003.

The provisions of S. 509 (introduced by Senator Feinstein in March and referred to the Senate Agriculture Committee) include, in addition to other problematic provisions, language that would expand FERC jurisdiction, creating uncertainty and unnecessary jurisdictional confusion between the FERC and CFTC for financial and energy derivatives transactions. The amendment also contains specific provisions to expand FERC jurisdiction over ''other financial transactions.'' In addition to creating legal uncertainty within the OTC derivatives markets, this provision would potentially call into question the CFTC's exclusive jurisdiction over futures and options on futures.

Provisions contained in S. 509 are similar to the Feinstein amendment, which was offered to last year's Senate energy bill. The amendment was defeated in a cloture motion on April 10, 2002. In addition, key financial regulators have also opposed these types of provisions. The Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, collectively known as the President's Working Group on Financial Markets (PWG), all opposed earlier versions of the proposed legislation.

We ask that you preserve the legal activity achieved with passage of the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000 and oppose any amendments relating to financial derivatives and the energy trading markets.

Sincerely,

American Bankers Association, ABA Securities Association, Association for Financial Professionals, The Bond Market Association, Emerging Markets Trade Association, Financial Services Roundtable, The Foreign Exchange Committee, Futures Industry Association, International Swaps and Derivatives Association, Managed Funds Association, National Mining Association, Securities Industry Association.

1. WHAT ARE DERIVATIVES?

The term ''derivatives'' refers to a wide array of privately negotiated over-the-counter (''OTC'') and exchange traded transactions. Over the last decade, OTC derivatives transactions have grown to include not only interest rate and currency swaps, but also interest rate caps, collars and floors, swap options, commodity price swaps, equity swaps, credit derivatives, weather derivatives and other financial derivative products.

2. WHAT IS THE OVER-THE-COUNTER MARKET?

The OTC market is the principals' market whereby business is transacted directly between the buyer and seller. There is no middleman, exchange or clearinghouse involved. The OTC market now sees most of the derivative activity, and dwarfs the exchanges.

3. WHY DO COMPANIES USE DERIVATIVES?

Companies use derivatives to manage risk and enhance profit potential. Derivatives have been around since the 1970s and generally have been regarded as efficient tools that lend stability to business operations. Corporations typically use them to reduce risk from swings in currency values or interest rate movements.

4. ARE DERIVATIVES IMPORTANT TO THE MINING INDUSTRY?

Since 1974, when the Commodity Exchange Act (CEA) was enacted by Congress, derivatives have become very important to the metals mining industry as a method to protect against market volatility. Many of these products did not exist when the Act was first adopted. These derivatives play a key role in the metals hedging programs that gold producers have used in periods of declining gold prices to sell their production forward. Miners of other metals commodities also use derivatives to manage the risk of fluctuating prices. Since their creation, these metals derivatives products have always been sold over-the-counter, mainly because the transactions occur between or among large institutions and high worth companies and the products can be customized for the particular needs of the parties.

5. HOW HAVE DERIVATIVES BENEFITED MARKET PARTICIPANTS?

The growth of the derivatives market has been of considerable benefit to users individually. In the gold sector, central banks have been able to earn income on gold holdings, while gold fabricators have been able to insulate themselves from the impact of fluctuations in the price of gold on their inventory holdings. Hedging has enabled producers to develop new mines using project finance.

6. HOW WOULD A COMPANY USE DERIVATIVES TO HEDGE THEIR MINE PRODUCTION?

A hedging program will typically include a mix of over-the-counter derivative products, including ''Forward Sales'' and ''Spot Deferred Contracts.'' For example, in a spot deferred contract a bullion dealer borrows gold from a central bank, and sells it into the spot market at a price of $350 per ounce. The proceeds are placed on deposit and earn interest of 4%. A fee of 1% is paid by the bullion dealer to the central bank. The interest difference of 3.0% is called ''contango.'' The mining company receives the original proceeds from the spot sale ($350) plus the five years of accrued interest ($56) for a total amount of $406 per ounce.

TALKING POINTS FOR FEINSTEIN AMENDMENT TO SENATE ENERGY BILL

Senator Feinstein is offering an amendment to the comprehensive energy bill which is now being considered on the Senate floor. This amendment would subject OTC energy derivatives to comprehensive, exchange-type regulation including capital requirements.

Although Senator Feinstein has made some changes to her original legislation as introduced, these are not significant and do not address the concerns we have raised with you and others.

The legislation still contains inappropriate layers of regulation, including capital requirements for electronic exchanges that only bring parties together and have no role in any resulting transactions. This amount of regulation sends the business offshore.

The legislation creates legal uncertainty by giving the CFTC vastly expanded and undefined jurisdiction over all types of commodities transactions, not just futures contracts. The clarity of CFTC jurisdiction, and accompanying legal certainty that transactions will not be deemed illegal and voidable, created by the CFMA enacted in 2000 is destroyed.

Legal uncertainty is compounded by the fact that FERC now has a role that is supposedly dependent on whether energy is actually delivered. However, the decision whether to deliver energy may be made years after the transaction is entered into, leaving the parties uncertain during the life of the contract which agency has jurisdiction.

Message: Oppose the Feinstein Amendment. If action needs to be taken, it should be done in a thoughtful, deliberate manner through the Committee process, not as a floor amendment.

Mr. ENZI. I yield the floor.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF RICHARD C. WESLEY TO BE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT JUDGE FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now go into executive session to consider Executive Calendar No. 220, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Richard C. Wesley, of New York, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Second Circuit.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I yield myself time.

As the two distinguished Senators from New York are in the Chamber, I will yield my time to them adding only this: This is a nominee to one of the most important courts in the country. It is actually my circuit. It is a Republican nominee, nominated by a Republican President. I predict that the nominee is going to go through easily because, contrary to the normal procedure on some of these nominees, the White House has sent up somebody who can unite us, not divide us. Usually they send nominees who divide us and not unite us. This is an example of what happens when a nominee to a powerful court is sent up who will unite us and not divide us.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I join my colleague from Vermont and my colleague from New York in supporting the nomination of Judge Wesley.

I rise in enthusiastic support of Richard Wesley's nomination to the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

Like most of the nominees we see, Judge Wesley has a top-flight legal mind and experience. He graduated from SUNY-Albany summa cum laude and from Cornell Law School. He worked in private practice for several years, worked as a staffer to the minority leader of the New York State Assembly, and from 1983 to 1987, represented the 136th District in the assembly.

That was just after I left the assembly, so I never had the privilege of actually serving with him, but my former colleagues in the assembly, many of whom disagreed on policy with Judge Wesley, all have spoken very highly of both his capabilities and his integrity.

Judge Wesley has served on the State trial court in New York, the intermediate appellate court, and for the past 6 years on New York's highest court, the court of appeals. He has the distinction of being appointed to the bench by both Governor Cuomo and Governor Pataki. Clearly there is a serious history of bipartisan support.

His nomination has been examined by his good friend and my friend Congressman REYNOLDS, as well as by Bill Paxon. They have known him for a very long time and vouch for him as well. I do not think Judge Wesley would have gotten where he did without the push from TOM REYNOLDS, and I think we all appreciate it because we are adding a qualified person to the bench.

There is no question Judge Wesley is well-qualified, but as my colleagues know, legal excellence is only one of the three criteria I use when evaluating judicial nominees. I also look at diversity and moderation.

Judge Wesley is the third Second Circuit judge we have considered under the Bush administration.

Judge Barrington Parker, who we confirmed in 2001, is African-American, and Judge Reena Raggi, who we confirmed in 2002, is a woman. So we are doing quite well on diversity when it comes to recent nominations to that court.

Our experience with the Second Circuit on excellence and diversity is similar to our experience with the President's nominations to the other circuit courts. By and large, he has done a good job bringing us well-qualified nominees who are not exclusively white males.

It is on that third prong, moderation, where we have had some problems. I am pleased to say that Judge Wesley fits quite well with Judge Parker and Judge Raggi as being well within the mainstream.

I would like to read what Judge Wesley said about his own judicial philosophy:

> I consider myself a conservative in nature, pragmatic at the same time, with a fair appreciation of judicial restraint. I have always restricted myself to what I understand to be the plain language of the statue and not gone beyond that [because] public policy is made by the legislature.

That is an honest and candid assessment of how Judge Wesley judges.

It is not just words. We have had nominees who have come before us and said that, but this is what he has done because he has a record. He has had 16 years on the bench to back it up. We know Judge Wesley has certain positions in which he personally believes. He has an ideology. That is clear from several of the votes he took in the assembly. For instance, in the assembly he voted the pro-life point of view. That is different from mine. And, of course, I do not have a litmus test. Most of us do not.

What is abundantly clear from his record on the bench is that he can check his personal beliefs at the door and judge fairly and honestly.

Unlike, some of the nominees we have seen, including Bill Pryor, the Fifth Circuit nominee whose contentious hearing is going on in the Judiciary Committee as we speak, there is nothing controversial about Judge Wesley.

He is best known for his thoughtful, scholarly approach that unites judges behind unanimous opinions.

He is truly a uniter, not a divider. He is a judge, not an activist. He will be a credit to New York, to the Second Circuit, and to the Senate when we confirm him.

It would be my wish that this would be the character of the President's nominees. I ask unanimous consent that an editorial from Judge Wesley's hometown paper, the Rochester D&C, Democrat and Chronicle, be printed in the RECORD. It says: ''Bipartisan Support?'' And then it says:

> If only more judicial nominees would go as smoothly as this one.

Well, I wish that would happen.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Rochester D&C, June 4, 2003]

BIPARTISAN SUPPORT?

If only more judicial nominations would go as smoothly as this one.

In an era in which partisan bickering over judicial nominations has become almost routine, it's significant that New York Appeals Court Judge Judge Richard Wesley has bipartisan backing for his nomination to a federal court.

For the sake of the nation's judiciary, hope that Wesley's easy confirmation hearing before the Senate Judiciary Committee last week will become a model for handling presidential nominations to federal judgeships. Wesley, a resident of Livonia in Livingston County, is now virtually assured of winning confirmation by the Senate Judiciary Committee and the full Senate when they vote on the nomination.

Wesley's smooth sailing had a lot to do with the strong support he had from Sens. Charles Schumer and Hillary Clinton, both Democrats, and Republican Rep. Tom Reynolds, who represents parts of this region. Wesley, appointed to state courts by former Democratic Gov. Mario Cuomo and Republican Gov. Pataki, is a GOP conservative, who Schumer described as having ''moderate views.''

Maybe if the Bush administration selected more judges of Wesley's caliber there'd be less of the antagonism that typically surrounds too many judicial nominations.

Mr. SCHUMER. It will happen if the President truly consults with us and nominates judges in the mold of Judge Wesley, clearly conservative but also clearly within the mainstream. It would be my hope that we would not have 51 votes for many of the nominees but 100 for most all of the nominees, or close to it. If this President should decide to treat the nominees and the rest of the country the way he is treating nominees in the Second Circuit, that is what would happen. That is my hope. That is my prayer.

I urge every one of my colleagues to vote for this fine addition to the bench. We are all proud of him in New York State, and he will make a great addition to the Second Circuit.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I rise to join my colleague from New York in expressing my very strong support for the nomination of New York State Court of Appeals Judge Richard C. Wesley to the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

A few weeks ago, I was honored to testify before the Judiciary Committee in support of this nominee because I believe then, as I do today, that he will make a fine addition to the Second Circuit and will serve that court with distinction. I was also pleased to see supporting Judge Wesley's nomination, his mother Beatrice, ''Betty'' Wesley and his children Sarah and Matthew. They and his wife Kathryn are all very proud of him, and have every reason to be so proud.

The calls and letters of support I have received about Judge Wesley from a wide variety of distinguished members of the legal profession are a testament to his qualities of high intellect, judicial temperament, caring for the profession and, most importantly, commitment to justice.

Having a significant public service record is not a requirement for serving on our Federal judiciary. But it is very significant to note that Judge Wesley has spent most of his career serving the public trying to make New York a better place for our children and families.

He has had a distinguished academic career, graduating summa cum laude from Cornell University Law School. He did have the experience in private practice and in the legislative body, the New York State assembly. He has served on trial and appellate New York courts.

In addition to performing his professional duties to the highest standards, he has taken an interest and taken the time to become involved in other significant pressing problems. As a trial court judge, Judge Wesley instituted a felony screening program in Monroe County that reduced the delays in processing felony cases by over 60 percent. The program proved so successful that it served as a model for judicial districts across our State.

In 1993, he created the JUST Program, which for a decade has provided services to court and criminal justice agencies, again in Monroe County, to monitor preplea and presentence defendants and to provide alternatives, where appropriate, to incarceration.

I am also very impressed that Judge Wesley has been a champion for victims of domestic violence. He has been in the forefront for years in providing shelters for victims of domestic violence, primarily women and their children. He has championed their rights in court and he has sought to help provide the resources that would give these victims another chance.

After 7 years on the trial court, he was appointed to the appellate division and then to New York's highest appellate court, the New York State Court of Appeals. Judith Kaye, the Chief Judge of that court, cannot say enough about Judge Wesley's contributions. I am sure he will be greatly missed as he starts his new career on the Second Circuit.

This is a very positive nomination. He will not only make his former colleagues proud and he will certainly make lawyers everywhere proud, but he will especially make Western New York proud because once confirmed, Judge Wesley will be the first Western New Yorker—for those who are not from New York, that includes places such as Rochester, Buffalo, and Jamestown, places on the other end of our very diverse, large State—to be confirmed as an associate judge of the Second Circuit since 1974.

Although it is very clear that Judge Wesley and I do not agree on every policy or legal issue, and I have no way of knowing how Judge Wesley will vote when these important issues come before him, I have every confidence in his professional preparation, in his temperament and demeanor, in his commitment to justice. He may be a conservative Republican, but he is a judge and an American first.

I join my colleague, the ranking member on the Judiciary Committee, in expressing the very strong wish that we could have more nominees like Judge Wesley, someone who comes from a Republican President, who is easily confirmed by a bipartisan majority, proceeded by a unanimous vote in the Judiciary Committee. I predict he will be confirmed on this floor unanimously. Why? Because although Judge Wesley is not of my party, he may not be of my judicial philosophy, he already in his judicial career decided cases differently than I would have, had I been sitting on that bench, he is a person whom we always know will put the interests of justice first, and will preside in a totally nonideological, nonpartisan manner. That is what every judge should be doing.

It is certainly the responsibility of the Senate to advise and consent so that our Federal judiciary, which consists of lifetime appointments, will be filled by people of the caliber of Judge Wesley.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am pleased that we are considering the nomination of Richard C. Wesley, who has been nominated by President Bush to serve on the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. He has an outstanding record of distinguished public service and will be a great addition to the Second Circuit.

Judge Wesley currently serves as an associate judge on the New York Court of Appeals, the State's highest court, having been unanimously confirmed by the State senate in 1997. His 16 years on the trial and appellate bench, plus prior service as a member of the New York State Assembly, has given him the experience and background to make an outstanding Second Circuit Judge.

In addition to his judicial experience, Judge Wesley has had a distinguished legal career. After graduating from Cornell Law School, he began his legal career in 1974 as an associate at the Pittsford, NY, office of Harris, Beach and Wilcox. He achieved a partnership at Welch, Streb, Porter, Meyer & Wesley in Geneseo, NY, in 1977 and in 1979, became assistant counsel to the minority leader of the New York State Assembly in Albany. In 1983, he was elected to the New York Assembly himself, representing his home district in western New York.

Judge Wesley began his judicial career in 1987, when he was elected to the Seventh Judicial District of the Supreme Court of New York. From 1991 to 1994, he served as the supervising judge for the Criminal Courts within the Supreme Court, and in 1994 Governor Cuomo appointed him to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court in Rochester, where he heard appeals of Supreme Court trial decisions from central and western New York. On December 3, 1996, Governor Pataki nominated Judge Wesley to the New York Court of Appeals. Judge Wesley was confirmed by a unanimous vote of the New York State Senate on January 14, 1997, and has served with distinction on the State's highest court ever since. His 16 years as a judge at both trial and appellate levels, plus prior service as a State assemblyman in New York, have given him the experience and background to make an outstanding Second Circuit judge.

Judge Wesley is a native of Livonia, NY, and has served his community, State, and Nation in a variety of ways. Not only has he served in his professional capacity, but also he believes in community service and has been involved in community service organizations such as the United Church of Livonia, Chances and Changes, a community-based organization in Livingston County that provides safe housing to battered women, and the Myers Foundation, a foundation based in his hometown that helps needy families in the area. Judge Wesley is also active in a number of local youth sports programs and serves as a driver for the Livonia Volunteer Ambulance.

In addition to his public and community service, Judge Wesley has been actively involved in efforts to improve the legal and judicial process. He has been a leader in numerous bar associations and law-related organizations. For example, he serves on the Cornell Law School Advisory Council and the Cornell University Council, and is a Fellow of the New York State Bar Foundation. In January of 1991, Judge Wesley was appointed by the chief administrator of the courts to be the supervising judge of the Criminal Courts in the Seventh Judicial District, and in this capacity developed case management systems that greatly improved the efficiency of the court's criminal docket. These reforms have since served as models for other jurisdictions with heavy criminal caseloads.

Judge Wesley comes to us highly recommended and warmly endorsed by his colleagues and former colleagues on the New York State courts, litigants who know him personally and have practiced in his courtrooms, the president of the New York State Bar Association, community leaders in his hometown of Livonia, NY, Gov. George Pataki, and New York's attorney general, Eliot Spitzer. Let me read a few statements made by some of his many supporters. Jonathan Lippmann, chief administrative judge of the State of New York, writes that Judge Wesley, ''has been a model of the wisdom, temperament, craftsmanship, and personal qualities that make for the most outstanding judges.'' Joseph Bellacosa, dean of the St. John's University Law School and a former colleague on the New York Court of Appeals, writes that Judge Wesley ''is intellectually curious and open to fresh ideas and insights of others, respectful of the great strength derived from collegial shared wisdom of others, yet confident and resolute in his personal conviction on values and fundamental principles. He is also a tireless worker and seeker of equal justice for all. He loves being a Judge and is devoted to the fair administration of justice under the rule of law.'' And Governor Pataki has also written, praising Judge Wesley's excellence as an appellate jurist and specifically noting his ''wealth of experience, intellect, integrity and judicial temperament.''

The legal bar's wide regard for Judge Wesley is further reflected in his evaluation by the American Bar Association. The ABA evaluates judicial nominees based on their professional qualifications, their integrity, their professional competence, and their judicial temperament. The ABA has bestowed upon Judge Wesley its highest rating of Unanimously Well Qualified.

The record is clear that Judge Wesley is worthy of confirmation for this position of high responsibility on the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. I strongly support his confirmation and urge my colleagues to do likewise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair.

Today, we vote to confirm Richard Wesley to serve on the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, the Federal circuit covering Vermont, New York, and Connecticut. With this confirmation we will have filled the sole vacancy on this circuit court. I remember when President Clinton had multiple nominees pending before the Senate for the five simultaneous vacancies that then existed. The entire circuit was declared a judicial emergency by the chief judge, and he had to resort to three-judge panels with only one Second Circuit judge. Republicans were not moving those nominations at that time. All of the Senators from the Second Circuit joined together to work for their confirmation, and we were finally able to confirm them all, including Judge Sonia Sotomayor, after significant efforts. This nomination did not suffer those needless delays. With the support of Senator SCHUMER and Senator CLINTON, this nomination has been considered expeditiously.

The Senate has already confirmed 129 judges, including 26 circuit court judges, nominated by President Bush. One hundred judicial nominees were confirmed when Democrats acted as the Senate majority for 17 months from the summer of 2001 to adjournment last year. After today, 29 will have been confirmed in the other 12 months in which Republicans have controlled the confirmation process under President Bush. This total of 129 judges confirmed for President Bush is more confirmations than the Republicans allowed President Clinton in all of 1995, 1996, and 1997—the first 3 full years of his last term. In those 3 years, the Republican leadership in the Senate allowed only 111 judicial nominees to be confirmed, which included only 18 circuit court judges. We have already exceeded that total by 15 percent and the circuit court total by 40 percent with 6 months remaining to us this year.

Today's confirmation makes the ninth court of appeals nominee confirmed by the Senate just this year. That means that in the first half of this year, we have exceeded the average of seven per year achieved by Republican leadership from 1995 through the early part of 2001. The Senate has now achieved more in fewer than 6 full months for President Bush than Republicans used to allow the Senate to achieve in a full year with President Clinton. We are moving two to three times faster for this President's nominees, despite the fact that the current appellate court nominees are more controversial, divisive, and less widely supported than President Clinton's appellate court nominees were.

If the Senate did not confirm another judicial nominee all year and simply adjourned today, we would have treated President Bush more fairly and would have acted on more of his judicial nominees than Republicans did for President Clinton in 1995–97. In addition, the vacancies on the Federal courts around the country are significantly lower than the 80 vacancies Republicans left at the end of 1997. We continue well below the 67 vacancy level that Senator HATCH used to call ''full employment'' for the Federal judiciary.

Indeed we have reduced vacancies to their lowest level in the last 13 years. So while unemployment has continued to climb for Americans to 6.1 percent last month, the Senate has helped lower the vacancy rate in federal courts to an historically low level that we have not witnessed in over a decade. Of course, the Senate is not adjourning for the year and the Judiciary Committee continues to hold hearings for Bush judicial nominees at between two and four times as many as he did for President Clinton's.

For those who are claiming that Democrats are blockading this President's judicial nominees, this is another example of how quickly and easily the Senate can act when we proceed cooperatively with consensus nominees. The Senate's record fairly considered has been outstanding—especially when contrasted with the obstruction of President Clinton's moderate judicial nominees by Republicans between 1996 and 2001.

I hope the White House would note the strong support for this conservative Republican nominee to the Second Circuit. I know my good friends from New York are aware this is a case where the White House actually worked with them and consulted with them on a nominee. That has not been the case of other parts of this country that has brought about divisiveness.

Again I urge, and I have been urging for a little over 2 years, the White House might start a new course, one of seeking to unite and not divide our judicial nominees, to have consultation, not arbitrariness, on judicial nominees.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Richard C. Wesley, of New York, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Second Circuit? On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Illinois (Mr. FITZGERALD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Florida (Mr. GRAHAM), the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS), and the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. LIEBERMAN) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 96, nays 0, as follows:

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now return to legislative session.

The Senator from Louisiana.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I say to the managers of the Energy bill, I would like to speak for a couple minutes on a subject that is going to be coming up in the Senate next week and in the Senate Finance Committee on tomorrow. The subject is Medicare. I do not want to interfere with anybody who has a pending amendment, but I think this would be an appropriate time to make a few comments on this subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Louisiana.

MEDICARE AND PRESCRIPTION DRUGS

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, my colleagues, the Senate will begin, this week in the Finance Committee—on Thursday, tomorrow—marking up a historic reform piece of legislation dealing with the subject of Medicare and prescription drugs for our Nation's older Americans. I think it is a historic opportunity for the Senate, in a bipartisan fashion, to come together and produce a product that is something of which we can all be proud.

Many Members of the Senate, when you talk about Medicare, would like the Federal Government to do everything and the private sector to not be involved at all. There are other Members, on the other hand, who would like the private sector to do everything and the Federal Government to not be involved at all. The answer to how we craft this legislation really is by trying to combine the best of what Government can do with the best of what the private sector can do.

My colleagues, the bill that will be brought before the committee tomorrow, in a bipartisan fashion, under the leadership of Chairman GRASSLEY and Ranking Member BAUCUS, does exactly that. I would like to take just a minute to try to explain what the bill will do in more general terms so everybody can get an idea what they are going to be looking at next week.

A Medicare beneficiary, beginning next year, will have the opportunity to have a prescription drug discount card. That will be something they will start with at the beginning of the year. They will be able to take that card to their local drugstore and get anywhere from a 20-, 25-percent discount on the drugs they buy. In addition, we will provide a subsidy to low-income seniors, in addition to that discount card, to help them buy drugs.

While that is happening, the Government will be engaged in trying to set up a process whereby, in the year 2006, Medicare beneficiaries will have more choices than they would otherwise.

Under the principle of saying the Government should do what it does best and the private sector should do what it does best, we have established in the legislation a Medicare Program that says to seniors, if they want to stay right where they are in traditional Medicare, they will have the opportunity to do that, and they will also have the opportunity to get prescription drugs under their traditional Medicare Program.

If they think that a new program being offered will be a better opportunity for them, they can voluntarily move into what we call Medicare Advantage, where they would also have access to a prescription drug plan.

It is important to note that both of these opportunities, both of these choices, are Government-run programs. Both of those programs will be under HHS, Health and Human Services. Both of them will have the Federal Government supervising how the program is being run, to make sure no one in the private sector is scamming it or is not capable of producing the programs they are saying they can produce. That is what Government can do best—as well as help pay for them.

If you are in traditional Medicare fee-for-service, all your doctor and hospital programs will be just like they are today. Then you will have the opportunity to have a prescription drug program which will have a standard benefit package spelled out in law. What we are talking about is a program with about a $35-a-month premium, with about a $275 deductible and a 50 percent coinsurance for seniors for the drugs for which they pay.

That is a generous plan that is very similar to what we have as Members of Congress and Members of the Senate. That drug program, unlike the hospital and doctor benefits, will be provided by the private sector to bring about competition, to have companies come in and say: We will provide it at this amount. They can vary the premiums as long as the Federal Government would approve it. For example, someone may like a higher deductible, someone may like a lower deductible. They could make those adjustments within a range, but the Government would have to make sure that is acceptable and that is approved by HHS.

If a senior—for example, most younger seniors and seniors going into the program in the future—would like to go into that type of program for everything—for doctors and hospitals and for drugs—if they think that is the good program for them, that gives them choice, they will start selecting the Medicare Advantage Program where they will get doctor coverage, hospital coverage, and prescription drug coverage.

This will still be in HHS, but it will be run by a new, competitive agency within HHS—not micromanaged, not price fixing, as we have now, but a new, competitive agency within HHS which will be created in order to make sure that the new program is being run properly. It will be run very similarly to how our program is run that is for Federal employees. We have Federal health insurance, but they use a private delivery system, and the Government makes sure everybody follows the rules and that there is competition, there is choice—that some plans may be better than others—and they have an opportunity, every year, to take a look at what is being offered; and sometimes they will pick this plan, sometimes they may pick another plan, but they will have the choice to pick the plan that is best for them.

So I think, in summary, what we have before the committee is a plan that combines the best of what the Government can do with the best of what the private sector can do. The programs will still be under Health and Human Services, whether you take this plan or that plan.

I think when you have private companies competing, you will have private companies that will be more involved in doing risk management and preventive medicine, preventive health services for the individuals who are involved. The Federal Government does not do any of that.

We simply fix prices and we do nothing with regard to risk management or preventive health care. So we will have an intense debate. We will have a markup in the Finance Committee on Thursday. Then this bill will come to the floor.

I think we will have an opportunity to do something that I think, for the first time, gives seniors an opportunity to have a federally run program that provides private sector delivery, with choices that will benefit seniors. I think in the long term it will benefit all of us who are concerned about this.

I commend Senator BAUCUS for his work and for working with the chairman, Senator GRASSLEY, in putting together this package. The only way it is going to get done is bipartisan. Some will argue it is not enough, and I understand that, but this is 100 percent more than seniors have today. Congress should not walk away from a $400 billion program for providing prescription drugs to seniors because it is not more money, because that simply is not looking at what is possible and what is likely to happen in the real world.

This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. I encourage my colleagues to work with us to produce this package.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Ms. STABENOW. Mr. President, I appreciate a moment to have a chance to give an alternative view. I thank my colleague from Louisiana. He has worked diligently on the issue of prescription drug coverage for many years, as have other of my colleagues on the floor regarding this issue. I wish to take this moment following his presentation to speak to the fact that there is much work left to be done by this body before we have prescription drug coverage that in fact meets the needs and the desires of the seniors of America.

The plan being put forward tomorrow in the Finance Committee basically does two things. It offers two structures. The majority of those supporting it will openly indicate that they would prefer that the seniors of America go into managed care rather than stay in traditional fee-for-service Medicare, where the senior determines their doctor, pharmacy, and other choices.

There is a desire to move people into what are called PPOs and HMOs and other managed care. We have experience with this because, since 1997, there has been the choice on behalf of American seniors to stay in traditional Medicare, choose their own doctor and pharmacies, and so on, or to go into a Medicare HMO. We know as of today that 89 percent of the seniors who chose—they made their choice—have chosen to remain in traditional Medicare, which I believe is a very strong message about the confidence seniors have in the current system, the stability of it, the dependability of it. They know what the premium is, they know what the services are, and they decide their doctor. This has been in place and serving the seniors of the country since 1965.

So the plan the committee is intending to report out tomorrow would create more choices of HMOs and PPOs and other managed care, and I support that for seniors. But what it does not do is add a prescription drug benefit under traditional Medicare as an integrated part of the traditional fee-for-service Medicare.

All of the prescription drug plans that are part of this report tomorrow involve private insurance first. If private insurance is available in your State, or available in the region, if there are two or more companies there, regardless of the premium they choose, the benefits they choose, and how they structure it, the pharmacies that they will let you go to, however they structure it, you would have to choose one of those two private insurance plans.

Now, technically, they are saying it is under Medicare but this is not a Medicare prescription drug benefit as the seniors of the country have asked to have provided to them. The seniors, potentially every year, would get paperwork in the mail about two different insurance companies—if that is available in their area—and they would have to wade through the paperwork and decide which of the two is best for them. The next year, if those two companies were not both available—if there was only two and one decided it didn't want to cover seniors anymore; it was too costly—then there would only be one insurance company; and the senior would have the ability, then, to go to a backup plan—something administered through Medicare.

Then the next year, if there were two companies that decided they wanted to try their hand in covering Medicare prescription drug coverage in their region, they could not get the Medicare plan anymore; they would have to pick between those two companies.

Potentially, this could happen every single year for a senior. Seniors are not asking for more paperwork or more choices of insurance companies. They already picked—89 percent of them—traditional Medicare, run through Medicare. Yet we are not giving 89 percent of them that choice.

That is a major concern I have about this plan. There is a better way to do this, to give people more choices, but make sure one of the choices is traditional Medicare.

I find it quite amazing that we are even talking about the structuring of a plan in this way at this time when we look at the fact that Medicare has been rising in cost about 5 percent a year and private insurance is going up 15 to 20 percent a year. In fact, I have small businesses, as well as large businesses, including auto manufacturers and many others, coming to me concerned about the explosion in their private health insurance premiums every year instead of choosing an approach that costs less so we can take some of those pressures off and put them into the best benefit, the best way to provide medicine for seniors. This approach uses what is a more expensive model—arguably, putting more dollars into the pockets of insurance companies but certainly not more dollars into the pockets of our senior citizens in the form of access to more lower cost medicines.

This is a deep concern of mine. Why are we going through all this convoluted process? Well, I think there are two reasons. One is, there are those who philosophically believe we should move to private insurance, managed care. I respect that. I have a disagreement with that but I respect the philosophical difference. Some don't believe we should have universal health coverage under Medicare. I disagree.

I think Medicare has been a great American success story since 1965. In fact, it is the one part of the universal health care we have in this country, and it concerns me deeply if we are going to roll that back. There is a difference in philosophy—and I appreciate that—on the part of colleagues on both sides of the aisle.

We know there is something else at work here, and that is a very large and powerful prescription drug lobby, which I believe, at all costs, wants to make sure our seniors are not in one insurance plan together—40 million seniors and disabled people in our country, who would then be able to negotiate big discounts in prices. By dividing folks up into lots of different insurance plans, making it more confusing for people to stay in traditional Medicare and get prescription drug help, and trying in every way to move people more to managed care, the prescription drug companies know they will not be put in a position of having to substantially lower their prices for our seniors. I have deep concerns about this. I agree with my colleagues that we have to work together in a bipartisan way if we are going to put forward a bill. I am hopeful that through amendments we can, in fact, provide a better bill. I will be offering an amendment that will set up a real choice for seniors, allow them prescription drug coverage under Medicare, which is what they want, and then also allow the other options colleagues have put together in the legislation that will be in front of us.

I believe that is a true choice, and I believe it is a choice that will allow prescription drug prices to go down, and that is a more cost-effective choice overall for Medicare as a system as well as for our seniors.

I will also be working with colleagues, as we have been for the last 2 years, on other efforts to lower prices for everyone. I am very proud of the fact that on this side of the aisle, we have brought the issue to this Chamber of lowering prices through greater competition in the marketplace and, in fact, we are seeing headway in that area.

I commend my colleagues on both sides of the aisle who have been coming together in agreement on the issue of generic drugs. I commend the leader of the HELP Committee, the Senator from New Hampshire, Mr. GREGG, for his leadership, the Senator from Massachusetts, Mr. KENNEDY, and the Senator from New York, Mr. SCHUMER, who helped lead this effort with Senator MCCAIN to close loopholes that have allowed brand-name companies essentially to game the system, to keep lower cost medicine off the market, unadvertised brands called generics.

There is a coming together that is very positive and bipartisan to pass legislation to close loopholes and allow greater competition. I believe this is one of the most important ways we will, in fact, lower prices more than anything else to get more competition for unadvertised brands in the marketplace.

There are two other issues about which we have been offering amendments that I encourage colleagues to support as a part of this process. One is to open the border to Canada for prescription drug coverage. From the State of Michigan, it is frustrating for the seniors, families and, in fact, the businesses in Michigan to literally look across the river and know that on the other side of that river they can get their American-made prescriptions at half the price and, in some cases, at even deeper discounts.

I urge we come together and open the border to Canada, and for colleagues who have resisted that, I ask that we look between now and 2006, when the prescription drug bill takes effect, at the idea of a pilot project of opening the border to Canada until 2006 so that we can drop prices immediately.

Our seniors have waited long enough. They do not need to wait another 2½, 3 years to see prices go down and Medicare help come. Let's open the border now. Let's sunset the pilot project when this bill takes effect, and then we can evaluate any concerns that have been raised about that process. That is something we can do right now that would have 10 times the effect of lowering prices than another discount card for seniors.

The other issue I am hopeful we can support on a bipartisan basis is to support States that are being creative in their purchasing power to get discounts for their citizens; efforts such as in the State of Maine to use their discount power to lower prices for the uninsured.

There are very positive steps we can take together. The generic drugs bill is a very positive initiative. I appreciate the leadership on both sides of the aisle for bringing that forward and coming together in a positive way.

To conclude, when it comes to Medicare prescription drug coverage, I remain deeply concerned about the direction in which we are going. I believe we are moving in a direction that actually dismantles the only part of universal care we have; that, in fact, will end up with more subsidies and more money in the pockets of insurance companies and drug companies as opposed to putting money in the pockets of our seniors who desperately need help with their prescription drugs.

I hope that as we enter into amendments in the next week, we will come together in a way that improves this bill and strengthens it, keeping in mind that our first priority should be the people right now who need the help. We can do that if we are willing to work together.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. MURKOWSKI). The Senator from Nevada.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Madam President, I know the Senator from New Jersey wishes to speak. There is a unanimous consent request that will be propounded which will help people understand what will happen. We are waiting for someone on the other side to read the request, and then we can agree to it. If the Senator will withhold for a moment.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Without losing my opportunity to the floor.

Mr. REID. I have the floor. Madam President, we are shortly going to enter into an agreement to have a vote late today for two more judges. This will make 131 judges—I think that is the number—we have approved during the time the present President Bush has been President.

I am really not certain as to the number, but I believe it is 36 or 37 circuit court judges. The vacancy rate, as we discussed yesterday, is extremely low. There has been a lot of agitation and talk about how poorly the administration is being treated with their judicial nominees. Even the President can understand that a count of 131 to 2 is a pretty good record for him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent, as in executive session, that at 2:15 p.m. today, the Senate proceed to executive session for the consideration of Calendar No. 221, the nomination of J. Ronnie Greer to be a U.S. District Judge for the U.S. District of Tennessee; provided that the Senate then proceed immediately to a vote on the confirmation of the nomination, with no intervening action or debate; provided, further, that immediately following that vote, the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 222, the nomination of Mark Kravitz to be a U.S. District Judge for the District of Connecticut; that there then be 5 minutes for debate equally divided between the chairman and ranking member or their designees; and that following the use of that time, the Senate proceed to vote on the confirmation of the nominees. Finally, I ask unanimous consent that following the votes, the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action and the Senate then resume legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, in the statement I just gave, I indicated there have been 36 circuit judges approved. It is 26 circuit judges approved. I misspoke. The 131 figure that will be completed about quarter to 3 today is an accurate number of judges who have been approved in this administration.

Also, Madam President, the chairman of the full Energy Committee, the manager of this bill, along with Senator BINGAMAN, is in the Chamber, and the record should reflect we on this side are not holding up this Energy bill. I have no objection to the unanimous consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, as a manager of the bill, our side is awaiting communication from the executive branch by way of explanation of the Feinstein amendment. That should be arriving shortly. When it arrives, we will be ready on our side for the conclusion of any discussion. So it should not be too long—probably after lunch—before we are ready on our side for a vote on the Feinstein amendment.

For those who are wondering, that is what is happening. There is no need to be in the Chamber on that amendment until that event occurs. I am certain nothing will happen on the Energy bill until that time because there is no concurrence that anything can happen. In other words, we cannot do anything because the Feinstein amendment cannot be set aside for any other amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I say to my friend from New Mexico, I am very appreciative of the statement he just made because I am going to do as he just did during this lull of time: Go get my hair cut.

Mr. DOMENICI. We hope it will be here shortly. I noted the presence a short time ago of the chairman of the Agriculture Committee, which has primary jurisdiction on the Feinstein amendment. He, too, was wondering what was happening. I want him and his staff to know that is exactly what is happening. It should not be too much longer until we then proceed in due course for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. LAUTENBERG are printed in today's RECORD under ''Morning Business.'')

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

AMENDMENT NO. 876

Mr. SHELBY. Madam President, I rise today to encourage my colleagues to oppose the amendment of the senior Senator from California, Mrs. FEINSTEIN.

First, I address the second-degree amendment the senior Senator from Nevada, Senator REID, is offering. I encourage my colleagues to oppose this second-degree amendment, also. The Reid second-degree amendment would exempt derivative contracts on precious metals from the new regulatory scheme the Feinstein amendment creates. We are told the Feinstein amendment is necessary to avoid the manipulation of markets for commodities that are in limited supply like oil or metals.

Underpinning the Feinstein amendment is the belief the Enron debacle and the California energy crisis occurred because there was insufficient regulation and wrongdoers were able to accomplish massive frauds and manipulation. The Feinstein amendment is intended to close the alleged regulatory loophole for off-exchange transactions for exempt commodities.

Assume, only for argument's sake, that Senator FEINSTEIN is correct. Assume the regulatory regime established only 2½ years ago is insufficient and that we must close a so-called regulatory loophole. If you believe this and support the Feinstein amendment, you must necessarily oppose the Reid second-degree amendment, which will carve a vast number of derivative contracts out of the regulatory scheme the Feinstein amendment creates.

I don't believe we can have it both ways. What is necessary for the energy markets is necessary for the metals markets. I encourage my colleagues to oppose both the Reid second-degree amendment and the Feinstein amendment as unnecessary, redundant, and potentially destabilizing to our financial markets. I encourage my colleagues who feel compelled to support the Feinstein amendment to not support the Reid amendment, which is at direct cross-purposes to the underlying amendment.

Less than 3 years ago, in December 2000, Congress enacted the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000, which was landmark legislation that provided legal certainty regarding the regulatory status of derivatives. Passage of the modernization act was the result of many months of analysis of the role that derivatives play in the marketplace and the consequences of increased regulation. In fact, because the modernization act addressed derivative products pertaining to commodities and financial products, both the Agriculture Committee and Banking Committee held numerous hearings to help Members and the public better understand the role the various derivative financial instruments and contracts played in our economy and what regulatory landscape, if any, is appropriate.

Now, only 3 years after enactment of the modernization act, Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment proposes fundamental changes to the law. I believe this amendment could create many regulatory problems, including creating jurisdictional confusion between the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, FERC, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, CFTC, imposing problematic capital requirements on facilities trading derivatives, and impugning the legal certainty of OTC derivatives put in place in 2000.

I am concerned this body does not have full appreciation of these consequences and potential unintended consequences that will likely follow if we were to adopt the Feinstein amendment.

I also believe it is premature to adopt this amendment because we have simply not had enough time to review the results of the modernization act. We have not received any reports from the CFTC detailing shortfalls in the regulatory authority conferred by the modernization act or recommendations requesting broader authority over derivatives. In fact, the CFTC had brought several major cases involving market manipulation since the passage of the modernization act. Congress should have more than a 2-year record before it decides to make rash but fundamental changes to legislation that was the product of so much deliberation a short time ago.

Proponents of the Feinstein amendment argue that the collapse of Enron and the disruption of the California energy market are prime examples of the need for greater regulation of derivatives. This assertion is simply not true. Enron collapsed as a result of deceptive accounting practices involving special purpose entities and poor corporate governance practices that permitted abusive business practices. Congress addressed such abuses in last year's Sarbanes-Oxley Act. More importantly, Enron's derivative business was in operation prior to enactment of the Modernization Act and was one of the business lines that retained value for sale after the collapse when most others didn't.

Further, FERC, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, recently concluded a year-long review of potential manipulation of electric and natural gas prices in the Western markets. Although FERC did find market manipulation, it also concluded:

> Significant supply shortfalls and a fatally flawed market design were the root causes of the California market meltdown.

In short, it was lack of energy supplies and poor State regulations that caused the disruption. I fear that the adoption of the Feinstein amendment could lead to uninformed and premature changes to the carefully considered provisions of the Modernization Act.

I believe the Feinstein amendment proposes unnecessary regulatory measures and significantly undermines the legal certainty achieved in the Modernization Act. Therefore, I strongly urge my colleagues to vote against the Feinstein amendment.

The President's Working Group on Financial Markets, which is comprised of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, the Chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and the Chairman of the CFTC, will be sending a letter today expressing its concerns with this amendment and urging Congress to carefully consider the potential unintended consequences of the amendment before acting. I intend to submit this letter for the RECORD when I receive it. I anticipate this letter will raise the same concerns that were raised in the working group's letter last year.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. SUNUNU. Madam President, I rise to join my colleague, Senator SHELBY, my committee chairman on the Banking Committee as well, in opposing the Feinstein amendment. This amendment was debated at length about a year ago during the previous Senate Energy bill debate. At that time, Senator Phil Gramm raised a number of issues, a number of concerns with the legislation. He said a great many wise and commonsense things. One of the perspectives that he pointed out that stuck with me was noting that, in raising concerns about failures, companies that had gone bankrupt such as Long Term Capital Management, or perhaps closer to home for the Senator from California, the bankruptcy of Orange County, CA, that involved to a certain extent derivatives and then called for regulation—we were, in effect, blaming the instrument itself, blaming the derivative, which is a little bit like blaming a thermometer for a warm day. That is not the right approach for legislation and I think it will lead us to bad conclusions in trying to structure legislation that will strengthen financial markets.

As the Senator from Alabama indicated, at the root is our concern that we not pass legislation that has unintended consequences, not pass legislation that is counterproductive, and rather than strengthen the markets or increase confidence in markets, actually has the opposite effect.

This legislation would give a great deal of new power to FERC, which is a concern to me because that would be power given over to the FERC not just to regulate but really to arbitrate, to refer claims to different regulatory authorities. On its face, I ask whether FERC has the expertise or the knowledge in all of these sophisticated markets to make such decisions. It is, perhaps, a power best not given to FERC. But it is also a power, in referring and making these decisions as to which regulatory body a particular claim or complaint would go, that would have the effect of creating uncertainty, uncertainty as to which organization had regulatory oversight.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission and FERC already coordinate their enforcement with respect to the energy markets. The CFTC has subpoena power. I think, as a number of other speakers indicated, in the year 2000 there was a Commodity Futures Modernization Act that was passed that was a good piece of legislation. A lot of work went into that. It drew from recommendations made by the President's working group. In particular, it strengthened the CFTC's hand in regulation in a number of areas.

I certainly do not think offering an amendment at this time on this particular bill is the appropriate way to modify that legislation, the Commodity Futures Modernization Act, that was a product of extended negotiations. The piece of legislation such as being offered by the Senator from California ought to go through the regular committee process. We ought to have hearings on it and certainly we ought to have an opportunity to debate it in the key area of the Banking Committee and Agriculture Committee jurisdictions.

Of particular interest as well is the fact that this amendment is opposed by a number of organizations, a number of the regulators themselves who are most concerned with stability and confidence in the markets—by the Fed, by the SEC, and by the CFTC. Even though this bill gives additional powers to the CFTC, they still oppose it. It is not often in Washington you have someone opposing an effort to give them more power and more jurisdiction, but these very organizations are worried every day about safety and soundness, about regulatory clarity, about ensuring a greater degree of stability and solvency in the marketplace. Why would they oppose this effort, to give more regulatory power to them or to their sister organizations?

I believe it is in part because of their concern that this might have unintended consequences, that this, unfortunately, might add uncertainty to the markets, that this might stifle transactions that so often act to reduce the risk in the marketplace.

Particularly telling is the fact that an amendment is being offered to strike the coverage of various metals from this provision. Obviously, someone recognizes that this might not be good, might not be healthy for a particular area of our economy, of the derivatives exchanges, and therefore wants to protect them from the uncertainty and the instability I have described.

Unintended consequences, we have to be so careful about exactly in an example such as this. These derivative markets are so complicated so the potential to have unintended consequences is effectively magnified by our collective lack of knowledge. There are some Senators who know more than others about these markets. The Senator from California has spent more time than others debating and discussing these issues. But any time we venture into an area of such complexity we enhance the risk that a piece of legislation will have unintended consequences.

I certainly do not fault the intentions or question the intentions or the motives in offering the legislation. We share the goals of ensuring that we have good regulatory agencies with appropriate enforcement powers, but we also should be careful that we not disturb a market which I believe functions extremely efficiently. As complex as it is, and as large as it is—I have seen estimates of the size of the global derivatives market as high as $75 trillion—as large as that market is, it works very effectively.

These are not products that are sold on any exchanges and there is a reason for that. The principal reason is that they are unique. They are unique to the organizations that seek them out. The vast majority of these organizations seek out a particular swap or derivative transaction in order to reduce the risk they are exposed to at any given day. That is why these instruments were developed and exist in such great numbers in the first place. Companies, institutions, financial service companies, banks—they seek out these derivatives to reduce their exposure to risk. When they are able to do that, they ensure greater stability, they ensure greater certainty for their investors, and it has the effect of, obviously, making our markets stronger. And helping our economy to grow.

We have exercised great caution before stepping forward and trying to substitute some kind of new regulatory regime when a market is functioning this effectively and arguably enforcing its own level of discipline in the way that it functions. What kind of discipline is that? If I am going to engage in an interest rate swap, or some other derivative transaction with a financial institution, rest assured that I as an investor or as a counter-party to that transaction am going to want to know a great deal about the solvency, the exposure to other risks, exposure to interest rate changes, and exposure to different portions of our economy with which that institution I am engaging with in a transaction is dealing.

There is a level of inspection and a level of due diligence that takes place in this marketplace every single day, which I might argue is more detailed and more thorough and more consistent than any government regulatory agency could ever provide.

I believe we should oppose this amendment because it hasn't gone through the regular order because it attempts to impose a level of regulation that might well be counterproductive, that might increase the level of uncertainty in certain areas where jurisdiction is concerned, and that springs from a concern that somehow the derivatives themselves—the instruments themselves—are to blame rather than managers who have made some very bad decisions.

Derivatives didn't cause the energy crisis in California. Derivatives didn't cause the collapse of Enron. Managers making bad decisions did. In some cases, managers engaging in fraudulent behavior did. Certainly the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has the power to go after cases where fraud or price manipulation are concerned. They are completely empowered to do just that.

I encourage my colleagues to vote against the amendment, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California is recognized.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I would like to use this time to respond to some of the comments that have been made.

It is really a misconception to think this is an amendment against derivatives. This isn't an amendment against derivatives. I have never said derivatives caused the western energy crisis. What I said was that there is a loophole in the law: Where all other finite commodities, except for energy and metals, have certain regulations with respect to transparency, these particular finite commodities do not; and that certain traders use this loophole to practice, if you will, a kind of fraud in their trading. The fraud was to artificially find ways to boost their products. I wish to respond to that.

Let's go into one of the ways they proceeded to do this—through what is called a round trip or a wash trade. Yesterday on the floor, Senator FITZGERALD and I, as well, very clearly pointed out what a wash trade is: I sell you a finite commodity, and you sell that same commodity back to me. On our balance sheets, we both carry a sale. Yet nothing ever changes hands. What we are saying is that this should be an illegal practice. What we are saying is that, at the very least, it ought to have transparency to it. We ought to be required to keep a record, to have an audit trail, and to have anti-fraud and anti-manipulation oversight of these practices by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

What we more fundamentally say is that a great deal of this was done in the western energy crisis through electronic trading.

Madam President, I understand I have the right to modify the amendment. Is that not correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct.

AMENDMENT NO. 876, AS MODIFIED

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I would like to send a modified amendment to the desk. That modified amendment contains an additional cosponsor, Senator KENNEDY. The modified amendment makes two changes to the amendment which I submitted before. The first change is to be absolutely crystal clear that this does not affect financial derivatives. I said that in my comments yesterday. I say it again today. To make it crystal clear, because some are concerned, and say, ''Oh, well, this will upset the financial derivatives marketplace,'' this is not the intent. It would only apply to finite commodities.

Right upfront, we are clearly saying that this title shall not apply to financial derivatives trading.

The other change to this amendment simply takes Senator REID's amendment to exclude metals and adds this to this bill.

If I may, I send that amendment, as a modified, to the desk at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The amendment is so modified.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chair.

The amendment (No. 876), as modified, is as follows:

At the end, add the following:

TITLE ____—ENERGY MARKET OVERSIGHT

SEC. ____01. NO EFFECT ON FINANCIAL DERIVATIVES.

This title shall not apply to financial derivatives trading.

SEC. ____02. JURISDICTION OF THE FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION OVER ENERGY TRADING MARKETS.

Section 402 of the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. 7172) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(i) JURISDICTION.—

''(1) REFERRAL.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—To the extent that the Commission determines that any contract involving energy delivery that comes before the Commission is not under the jurisdiction of the Commission, the Commission shall refer the contract to the appropriate Federal agency.

''(B) NO EFFECT ON AUTHORITY.—The authority of the Commission or any Federal agency shall not be limited or otherwise affected based on whether the Commission has or has not referred a contract described in subparagraph (A).

''(2) MEETINGS.—A designee of the Commission shall meet quarterly with a designee of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, the Securities Exchange Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Department of Justice, the Department of the Treasury, and the Federal Reserve Board to discuss—

''(A) conditions and events in energy trading markets; and

''(B) any changes in Federal law (including regulations) that may be appropriate to regulate energy trading markets.

''(3) LIAISON.—The Commission shall, in cooperation with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, maintain a liaison between the Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.''.

SEC. ____02. INVESTIGATIONS BY THE FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION UNDER THE NATURAL GAS ACT AND FEDERAL POWER ACT.

(a) INVESTIGATIONS UNDER THE NATURAL GAS ACT.—Section 14(c) of the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C. 717m(c)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''(c) For the purpose of'' and inserting the following:

''(c) TAKING OF EVIDENCE.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—For the purpose of'';

(2) by striking ''Such attendance'' and inserting the following:

''(2) NO GEOGRAPHIC LIMITATION.—The attendance'';

(3) by striking ''Witnesses summoned'' and inserting the following:

''(3) EXPENSES.—Any witness summoned''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) AUTHORITIES.—The exercise of the authorities of the Commission under this subsection shall not be subject to the consent of the Office of Management and Budget.''.

(b) INVESTIGATIONS UNDER THE FEDERAL POWER ACT.—Section 307(b) of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 825f(b)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''(b) For the purpose of'' and inserting the following:

''(b) TAKING OF EVIDENCE.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—For the purpose of'';

(2) by striking ''Such attendance'' and inserting the following:

''(2) NO GEOGRAPHIC LIMITATION.—The attendance'';

(3) by striking ''Witnesses summoned'' and inserting the following:

''(3) EXPENSES.—Any witness summoned''; and

(4) by adding at the end the following:

''(4) AUTHORITIES.—The exercise of the authorities of the Commission under this subsection shall not be subject to the consent of the Office of Management and Budget.''.

SEC. ____04. CONSULTING SERVICES.

Title IV of the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. 7171 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''SEC. 408. CONSULTING SERVICES.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Chairman may contract for the services of consultants to assist the Commission in carrying out any responsibilities of the Commission under this Act, the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.), or the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C. 717 et seq.).

''(b) APPLICABLE LAW.—In contracting for consultant services under subsection (a), if the Chairman determines that the contract is in the public interest, the Chairman, in entering into a contract, shall not be subject to—

''(1) section 5, 253, 253a, or 253b of title 41, United States Code; or

''(2) any law (including a regulation) relating to conflicts of interest.''.

SEC. ____04. LEGAL CERTAINTY FOR TRANSACTIONS IN EXEMPT COMMODITIES.

Section 2 of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 2) is amended by striking subsections (g) and (h) and inserting the following:

''(g) OFF-EXCHANGE TRANSACTIONS IN EXEMPT COMMODITIES.—

''(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

''(A) COVERED ENTITY.—The term 'covered entity' means—

''(i) an electronic trading facility; and

''(ii) a dealer market.

''(B) DEALER MARKET.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—The term 'dealer market' has the meaning given the term by the Commission.

''(ii) INCLUSIONS.—The term 'dealer market' includes each bilateral or multilateral agreement, contract, or transaction determined by the Commission, regardless of the means of execution of the agreement, contract, or transaction.

''(2) EXEMPTION FOR TRANSACTIONS NOT ON TRADING FACILITIES.—Except as provided in paragraph (4), nothing in this Act shall apply to an agreement, contract, or transaction in an exempt commodity that—

''(A) is entered into solely between persons that are eligible contract participants at the time the persons enter into the agreement, contract, or transaction; and

''(B) is not entered into on a trading facility.

''(3) EXEMPTION FOR TRANSACTIONS ON COVERED ENTITIES.—Except as provided in paragraphs (4), (5), and (7), nothing in this Act shall apply to an agreement, contract, or transaction in an exempt commodity that is—

''(A) entered into on a principal-to-principal basis solely between persons that are eligible contract participants at the time at which the persons enter into the agreement, contract, or transaction; and

''(B) executed or traded on a covered entity.

''(4) REGULATORY AND OVERSIGHT REQUIREMENTS.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—An agreement, contract, or transaction described in paragraph (2) or (3) (and the covered entity on which the agreement, contract, or transaction is executed) shall be subject to—

''(i) sections 5b, 12(e)(2)(B), and 22(a)(4);

''(ii) the provisions relating to manipulation and misleading transactions under sections 4b, 4c(a), 4c(b), 4o, 6(c), 6(d), 6c, 6d, 8a, and 9(a)(2); and

''(iii) the provisions relating to fraud and misleading transactions under sections 4b, 4c(a), 4c(b), 4o, and 8a.

''(B) TRANSACTIONS EXEMPTED BY COMMISSION ACTION.—Notwithstanding any exemption by the Commission under section 4(c), an agreement, contract, or transaction described in paragraph (2) or (3) shall be subject to the authorities in clauses (i), (ii), and (iii) of subparagraph (A).

''(5) COVERED ENTITIES.—An agreement, contract, or transaction described in paragraph (3) and the covered entity on which the agreement, contract, or transaction is executed, shall be subject to (to the extent the Commission determines appropriate)—

''(A) section 5a, to the extent provided in section 5a(g)) and 5d;

''(B) consistent with section 4i, a requirement that books and records relating to the business of the covered entity on which the agreement, contract, or transaction is executed be made available to representatives of the Commission and the Department of Justice for inspection for a period of at least 5 years after the date of each transaction, including—

''(i) information relating to data entry and transaction details sufficient to enable the Commission to reconstruct trading activity on the covered entity; and

''(ii) the name and address of each participant on the covered entity authorized to enter into transactions; and

''(C) in the case of a transaction or covered entity performing a significant price discovery function for transactions in the cash market for the underlying commodity, subject to paragraph (6), the requirements (to the extent the Commission determines appropriate by regulation) that—

''(i) information on trading volume, settlement price, open interest, and opening and closing ranges be made available to the public on a daily basis;

''(ii) notice be provided to the Commission in such form as the Commission may require;

''(iii) reports be filed with the Commission (such as large trader position reports); and

''(iv) consistent with section 4i, books and records be maintained relating to each transaction in such form as the Commission may require for a period of at least 5 years after the date of the transaction.

''(6) PROPRIETARY INFORMATION.—In carrying out paragraph (5)(C), the Commission shall not—

''(A) require the real-time publication of proprietary information;

''(B) prohibit the commercial sale or licensing of real-time proprietary information; and

''(C) publicly disclose information regarding market positions, business transactions, trade secrets, or names of customers, except as provided in section 8.

''(7) NOTIFICATION, DISCLOSURES, AND OTHER REQUIREMENTS FOR COVERED ENTITIES.—A covered entity subject to the exemption under paragraph (3) shall (to the extent the Commission determines appropriate)—

''(A) notify the Commission of the intention of the covered entity to operate as a covered entity subject to the exemption under paragraph (3), which notice shall include—

''(i) the name and address of the covered entity and a person designated to receive communications from the Commission;

''(ii) the commodity categories that the covered entity intends to list or otherwise make available for trading on the covered entity in reliance on the exemption under paragraph (3);

''(iii) certifications that—

''(I) no executive officer or member of the governing board of, or any holder of a 10 percent or greater equity interest in, the covered entity is a person described in any of subparagraphs (A) through (H) of section 8a(2);

''(II) the covered entity will comply with the conditions for exemption under this subsection; and

''(III) the covered entity will notify the Commission of any material change in the information previously provided by the covered entity to the Commission under this paragraph; and

''(iv) the identity of any derivatives clearing organization to which the covered entity transmits or intends to transmit transaction data for the purpose of facilitating the clearance and settlement of transactions conducted on the covered entity subject to the exemption under paragraph (3);

''(B)(i) provide the Commission with access to the trading protocols of the covered entity and electronic access to the covered entity with respect to transactions conducted in reliance on the exemption under paragraph (3); and

''(ii) on special call by the Commission, provide to the Commission, in a form and manner and within the period specified in the special call, such information relating to the business of the covered entity as a covered entity exempt under paragraph (3), including information relating to data entry and transaction details with respect to transactions entered into in reliance on the exemption under paragraph (3), as the Commission may determine appropriate—

''(I) to enforce the provisions specified in paragraph (4);

''(II) to evaluate a systemic market event; or

''(III) to obtain information requested by a Federal financial regulatory authority to enable the authority to fulfill the regulatory or supervisory responsibilities of the authority;

''(C)(i) on receipt of any subpoena issued by or on behalf of the Commission to any foreign person that the Commission believes is conducting or has conducted transactions in reliance on the exemption under paragraph (3) on or through the covered entity relating to the transactions, promptly notify the foreign person of, and transmit to the foreign person, the subpoena in a manner that is reasonable under the circumstances, or as specified by the Commission; and

''(ii) if the Commission has reason to believe that a person has not timely complied with a subpoena issued by or on behalf of the Commission under clause (i), and the Commission in writing directs that a covered entity relying on the exemption under paragraph (3) deny or limit further transactions by the person, deny that person further trading access to the covered entity or, as applicable, limit that access of the person to the covered entity for liquidation trading only;

''(D) comply with the requirements of this subsection applicable to the covered entity and require that each participant, as a condition of trading on the covered entity in reliance on the exemption under paragraph (3), agree to comply with all applicable law;

''(E) certify to the Commission that the covered entity has a reasonable basis for believing that participants authorized to conduct transactions on the covered entity in reliance on the exemption under paragraph (3) are eligible contract participants;

''(F) maintain sufficient capital, commensurate with the risk associated with transactions; and

''(G) not represent to any person that the covered entity is registered with, or designated, recognized, licensed, or approved by the Commission.

''(8) HEARING.—A person named in a subpoena referred to in paragraph (7)(C) that believes the person is or may be adversely affected or aggrieved by action taken by the Commission under this subsection, shall have the opportunity for a prompt hearing after the Commission acts under procedures that the Commission shall establish by rule, regulation, or order.

''(9) PRIVATE REGULATORY ORGANIZATIONS.—

''(A) DELEGATION OF FUNCTIONS UNDER CORE PRINCIPLES.—A covered entity may comply with any core principle under subparagraph (B) that is applicable to the covered entity through delegation of any relevant function to—

''(i) a registered futures association under section 17; or

''(ii) another registered entity.

''(B) CORE PRINCIPLES.—The Commission may establish core principles requiring a covered entity to monitor trading to—

''(i) prevent fraud and manipulation;

''(ii) prevent price distortion and disruptions of the delivery or cash settlement process;

''(iii) ensure that the covered entity has adequate financial, operational, and managerial resources to discharge the responsibilities of the covered entity; and

''(iv) ensure that all reporting, recordkeeping, notice, and registration requirements under this subsection are discharged in a timely manner.

''(C) RESPONSIBILITY.—A covered entity that delegates a function under subparagraph (A) shall remain responsible for carrying out the function.

''(D) NONCOMPLIANCE.—If a covered entity that delegates a function under subparagraph (A) becomes aware that a delegated function is not being performed as required under this Act, the covered entity shall promptly take action to address the noncompliance.

''(E) VIOLATION OF CORE PRINCIPLES.—

''(i) IN GENERAL.—If the Commission determines, on the basis of substantial evidence, that a covered entity is violating any applicable core principle specified in subparagraph (B), the Commission shall—

''(I) notify the covered entity in writing of the determination; and

''(II) afford the covered entity an opportunity to make appropriate changes to bring the covered entity into compliance with the core principles.

''(ii) FAILURE TO MAKE CHANGES.—If, not later than 30 days after receiving a notification under clause (i)(I), a covered entity fails to make changes that, as determined by the Commission, are necessary to comply with the core principles, the Commission may take further action in accordance with this Act.

''(F) RESERVATION OF EMERGENCY AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this paragraph limits or affects the emergency powers of the Commission provided under section 8a(9).

''(10) METALS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, an agreement, contract, or transaction in metals—

''(A) shall not be subject to this subsection (as amended by section ___05 of the Energy Policy Act of 2003); and

''(B) shall be subject to this subsection and subsection (h) (as those subsections existed on the day before the date of enactment of the Energy Policy Act of 2003).

''(11) NO EFFECT ON OTHER AUTHORITY.—This subsection shall not affect the authority of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission under the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.) or the Natural Gas Act (15 U.S.C 717 et seq.).''.

SEC. ___06. PROHIBITION OF FRAUDULENT TRANSACTIONS.

Section 4b of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 6b) is amended by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

''(a) PROHIBITION.—It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, in or in connection with any account, or any offer to enter into, the entry into, or the confirmation of the execution of, any agreement, contract, or transaction subject to this Act—

''(1) to cheat or defraud or attempt to cheat or defraud any person (but this paragraph does not impose on parties to transactions executed on or subject to the rules of designated contract markets or registered derivative transaction execution facilities a legal duty to provide counterparties or any other market participants with any material market information);

''(2) willfully to make or cause to be made to any person any false report or statement, or willfully to enter or cause to be entered for any person any false record (but this paragraph does not impose on parties to transactions executed on or subject to the rules of designated contract markets or registered derivative transaction execution facilities a legal duty to provide counterparties or any other market participants with any material market information);

''(3) willfully to deceive or attempt to deceive any person by any means whatsoever (but this paragraph does not impose on parties to transactions executed on or subject to the rules of designated contract markets or registered derivative transaction execution facilities a legal duty to provide counterparties or any other market participants with any material market information); or

''(4) except as permitted in written rules of a board of trade designated as a contract market or derivatives transaction execution facility on which the agreement, contract, or transaction is traded and executed—

''(A) to bucket an order;

''(B) to fill an order by offset against 1 or more orders of another person; or

''(C) willfully and knowingly, for or on behalf of any other person and without the prior consent of the person, to become—

''(i) the buyer with respect to any selling order of the person; or

''(ii) the seller with respect to any buying order of the person.''.

SEC. ___07. FERC LIAISON.

Section 2(a)(9) of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 2(a)(9)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(C) LIAISON WITH FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION.—The Commission shall, in cooperation with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, maintain a liaison between the Commission and the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.''.

SEC. ___08. CRIMINAL AND CIVIL PENALTIES.

(a) ENFORCEMENT POWERS OF COMMISSION.—Section 6(c) of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 9, 15) is amended in paragraph (3) of the tenth sentence—

(1) by inserting ''(A)'' after ''assess such person''; and

(2) by inserting after ''each such violation'' the following: '', or (B) in any case of manipulation of, or attempt to manipulate, the price of any commodity, a civil penalty of not more than the greater of $1,000,000 or triple the monetary gain to such person for each such violation,''.

(b) MANIPULATIONS AND OTHER VIOLATIONS.—Section 6(d) of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 13b) is amended in the first sentence—

(1) by striking ''paragraph (a) or (b) of section 9 of this Act'' and inserting ''subsection (a), (b), or (f) of section 9''; and

(2) by striking ''said paragraph 9(a) or 9(b)'' and inserting ''subsection (a), (b), or (f) of section 9''.

(c) NONENFORCEMENT OF RULES OF GOVERNMENT OR OTHER VIOLATIONS.—Section 6b of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 13a) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence—

(A) by inserting ''section 2(g)(9),'' after ''sections 5 through 5c,''; and

(B) by inserting before the period at the end the following: '', or, in any case of manipulation of, or an attempt to manipulate, the price of any commodity, a civil penalty of not more than $1,000,000 for each such violation''; and

(2) in the second sentence, by inserting before the period at the end the following: '', except that if the failure or refusal to obey or comply with the order involved any offense under section 9(f), the registered entity, director, officer, agent, or employee shall be guilty of a felony and, on conviction, shall be subject to penalties under section 9(f)''.

(d) ACTION TO ENJOIN OR RESTRAIN VIOLATIONS.—Section 6c(d) of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 13a–1(d)) is amended by striking ''(d)'' and all that follows through the end of paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

''(d) CIVIL PENALTIES.—In any action brought under this section, the Commission may seek and the court shall have jurisdiction to impose, on a proper showing, on any person found in the action to have committed any violation—

''(1) a civil penalty in the amount of not more than the greater of $100,000 or triple the monetary gain to the person for each violation; or

''(2) in any case of manipulation of, or an attempt to manipulate, the price of any commodity, a civil penalty in the amount of not more than the greater of $1,000,000 or triple the monetary gain to the person for each violation.''.

(e) VIOLATIONS GENERALLY.—Section 9 of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 13) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (e); and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

''(f) PRICE MANIPULATION.—It shall be a felony punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000,000 for each violation or imprisonment for not more than 10 years, or both, together with the costs of prosecution, for any person—

''(1) to manipulate or attempt to manipulate the price of any commodity in interstate commerce, or for future delivery on or subject to the rules of any registered entity;

''(2) to corner or attempt to corner any such commodity;

''(3) knowingly to deliver or cause to be delivered (for transmission through the mails or interstate commerce by telegraph, telephone, wireless, or other means of communication) false or misleading or knowingly inaccurate reports concerning market information or conditions that affect or tend to affect the price of any commodity in interstate commerce; or

''(4) knowingly to violate section 4 or 4b, any of subsections (a) through (e) of subsection 4c, or section 4h, 4o(1), or 19.''.

SEC. ___09. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) Section 2 of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 2) is amended—

(1) in subsection (d)(1), by striking ''section 5b'' and inserting ''section 5a(g), 5b,'';

(2) in subsection (e)—

(A) in paragraph (1), by striking '', 2(g), or 2(h)(3)''; and

(B) in paragraph (3), by striking ''2(h)(5)'' and inserting ''2(g)(7)'';

(3) by redesignating subsection (i) as subsection (h); and

(4) in subsection (h) (as redesignated by subparagraph (C))—

(A) in paragraph (1)—

(i) by striking ''No provision'' and inserting ''IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (g), no provision''; and

(ii) in subparagraph (A)—

(I) by striking ''section 2(c), 2(d), 2(e), 2(f), or 2(g) of this Act'' and inserting ''subsection (c), (d), (e), or (f)''; and

(II) by striking ''section 2(h)'' and inserting ''subsection (g)''; and

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking ''No provision'' and inserting ''IN GENERAL.—Subject to subsection (g), no provision''.

(b) Section 4i of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 6i) is amended in the first sentence by inserting '', or pursuant to an exemption under section 4(c)'' after ''transaction execution facility''.

(c) Section 8a(9) of the Commodity Exchange Act (7 U.S.C. 12a(9)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''or covered entity under section 2(g)'' after ''direct the contract market'';

(2) by striking ''on any futures contract''; and

(3) by inserting ''or covered entity under section 2(g)'' after ''given by a contract market''.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, once again, what we are seeking to do is close a loophole that was created in 2000 when this Congress passed the Commodity Futures Modernization Act. That act exempted just energy and metals. It was not the intention actually to do that. The Senate part of that bill did not exempt them. What happened was Enron went to the House and Enron secured an exemption of energy and metals in the House. That exemption was handled in the conference, and the Senate language was not in the bill.

The exemption was effectively created. The loophole was created. We are just trying to eliminate that loophole. We are not attacking derivatives. All we are saying is: If you do this kind of trading, you must keep a record just as anybody else does. You must be transparent. You must have an audit trail, and you are subject to any fraud or manipulation oversight by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

This is where it gets a little complicated. If I sell energy to you and you deliver, then that is covered by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission. If I sell energy to you and you sell it to a third person or entity that sells it to a fourth entity that sells it to a fifth entity and then it goes into the field, those interim trades are not covered.

That is what we seek to cover because that is where the games exist. It is a rather subtle point, but it is also an important point.

I heard people say that this will stifle the market. I will tell you what has been happening out there. Without transparency and without record keeping stifles the market.

When Mr. Fortney was arrested last week for creating schemes such as Ricochet, Death Star, and Get Shorty, you don't think that stifles the market when you have other traders pleading guilty to fraud and wire fraud?

Does that not stifle the market? And does that not give the average consumer the belief that they cannot trust this marketplace as being fair and transparent? I believe it does. More fundamentally, I believe the rules that govern the marketplace should be rules to protect the average consumer, not the big boys; they can take care of themselves. But the average consumer has to have confidence in the marketplace that it is fair and that it is transparent.

I would like to correct the idea that this amendment has not gone through regular order. I moved this amendment last year to the Energy bill. Senator Gramm of Texas, who, incidentally, subsequently went to work for EnronOnline in its new life with UBS Warburg—which is fine—argued against my amendment. We tried to settle our differences. It took quite some time. We could not settle our differences on this amendment, and we did have a vote.

Another reason for the vote is there were people who believed this had not had enough committee hearing. So we had a vote, and I think we got 48 votes. The amendment went to the Agriculture Committee. The Agriculture Committee held hearings. The staff of both sides reviewed the legislation. Senator HARKIN, who was chairman, and Senator LUGAR, who was ranking member, are both cosponsors of this amendment.

The problem is, the end of the session came without a markup, so this is really the opportunity we have to place this amendment into some form of law, and so we take this opportunity.

I also wish to say that the President's working group in 1999, in their report—this was before the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000—very specifically said, on page 2 of their report, that:

An exclusion from the CEA [Commodities Exchange Act] for electronic trading systems for derivatives, provided that the systems limit participation to sophisticated counterparties trading for their own accounts and are not used to trade contracts that involve non-financial commodities with finite supplies. . . .

In other words, they are saying that commodities with finite supplies should be included in the bill, but they are recommending that those that do not have finite supplies, such as financials derivatives, not be included in the bill. Now, apparently, they are changing their position. But I want to make very clear that was the position of the ''Over-the-Counter Derivatives Markets and the Commodity Exchange Act, Report of The President's Working Group on Financial Markets'' dated November 1999. And the Senate version of the Commodity Futures Modernization Act actually did just what this working group stated.

Again, to refute the allegation that I am in some way blaming derivatives for the western energy crisis—I am not—I am blaming this loophole which allows all this secret trading, which we have seen result in fraudulent schemes, to try to close that loophole. And the way to close it is to bring the light of day to it. That is what we are trying to do.

I pointed out yesterday, because some people said, well, we need to study this more, that it has been studied more and that the ''Final Report On Price Manipulation In Western Markets, Fact-Finding Investigation Of Potential Manipulation Of Electric And Natural Gas Prices,'' which was prepared by the staff of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and dated March 2003, says the following as one of their recommendations:

Recommend that Congress consider giving direct authority to a Federal agency to ensure that electronic trading platforms for wholesale sales of electric energy and natural gas in interstate commerce are monitored—and provide market information that is necessary for price discovery in competitive energy markets.

That is what we do—

That is exactly what this does, as recommended by this report of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

With the modification I made, metals will have the same level of oversight as exists under current law today.

Now, let me go back again to 2000. I mentioned the change that was made to accommodate Enron lobbying to the Commodity Futures Modernization Act. It also did not take long for EnronOnline and others in the energy sector to take advantage of this new freedom by trading energy derivatives absent any transparency or regulatory oversight. Thus, after the 2000 legislation—and really right away—EnronOnline began to trade energy derivatives bilaterally without being subject to proper regulatory oversight.

It should not surprise anyone that without this transparency, prices soared. In 2000, if Enron's derivatives business had been a stand-alone company, it would have been the 256th largest company in America. That year, Enron claimed it made more money from its derivatives business—$7.23 billion—than Tyson Foods made from selling chicken. That is according to author Robert Bryce, who wrote a book on Enron called ''Pipe Dreams.''

EnronOnline rapidly became the biggest platform for electronic energy trading. But unlike regulated exchanges, such as the New York Mercantile Exchange, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, the Chicago Board of Trade, EnronOnline was not registered with the CFTC, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, so it set its own standards. And that is the problem. Traders and others in the energy sector came to rely on EnronOnline for pricing information. Yet the company's control over this information, and its ability to manipulate it, was large.

As this same author, Robert Bryce, describes—and let me quote—

Enron didn't just own the casino. On any given deal, Enron could be the house, the dealer, the oddsmaker, and the guy across the table you're trying to beat in diesel fuel futures, gas futures, or the California electricity market.

The Electric Power Supply Association, EPSA, has sent a letter to all Senators asking them to oppose our oversight amendment. This should not be strange to anybody because its members are exactly the same companies that are being investigated and have been investigated by FERC for wrongdoing in the western energy crisis. It is AES Corporation; it is BP Energy; it is Duke Energy; it is Mirant Energy; it is Reliant Energy; it is UBS Warburg, which purchased Enron's trading unit; and it is Williams Energy. Now, with others, they are all members of EPSA, not companies that Westerners trust very much these days in light of what we have been through.

Now, I want to just document some of this.

Let me quickly run through these again because, again, a lot of these round-trip trades were done on the Internet.

Other schemes were carried out on the Internet. Let's just go through this. Duke Energy disclosed that $1.1 billion worth of trades were round trip since 1999. Roughly two-thirds of these were done on the Intercontinental Exchange, which is an online trading platform owned by the banks, again, where there is no transparency, no net capital requirements, and no record-keeping whatsoever. Now, this also meant that thousands of subscribers would have seen false price signals.

Why would they see false price signals? That is because of the nature of a wash or round-trip trade. Again, a wash or round-trip trade would be that I am going to sell you energy at a certain price and you are going to sell me energy at a certain price, but no energy ever changes hands; yet we both post sales. That is what a wash trade or a round-trip trade is.

A class action suit accused the El Paso Corporation of engaging in dozens of round-trip energy trades that artificially bolstered its revenues and trading volumes over the last 2 years.

CMS Energy admitted conducting wash energy trades that artificially inflated its revenue by more than $4.4 billion. These round-trip trades accounted for 80 percent of their trade in 2001. So 80 percent of this company's trades in 2001—in the heart of the energy crisis—were not trades at all. No energy ever traded hands. They just boosted their sales—artificially.

This is another facet of artificially filing false reports: reporting fictitious natural gas transactions to an industry publication. You can read it for yourself. The overwhelming figure in this is, if you look at what was done with energy and you look at California, where one year the total cost of energy was $7 billion and the next year it was $28 billion, which is a 400 percent increase, there is no way that could be legitimate. There is no way the energy need of a State could increase 400 percent in 1 year. Demand didn't increase 400 percent.

So without this type of legislation, there really is insufficient authority to investigate and prevent fraud and price manipulations since parties making the trade are not required to keep a record. What we would require them to do is keep a record. Therefore, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, in the event of many of these interim trades, and the FERC, where energy is directly delivered as a product of a trade, has the ability to do the investigation based on records. If you don't keep records, it is very hard to prove that.

I would like to repeat that this amendment does not ban trades. This amendment does not affect financial derivatives. This amendment would only require oversight and transparency for those energy trades that are now taking place within this loophole, and it would provide oversight, as recommended in the FERC report.

We are very proud to have the support of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association, the Derivative Study Center, the American Public Gas Association, American Public Power Association, California Municipal Utilities Association, Southern California Public Power Authority, Transmission Excess Policy Study Group, U.S. Public Interest Research Group, Consumers Union, Consumers Federation of America, Calpine, Southern California Edison, Pacific Gas and Electric, and FERC Chairman Patrick Wood.

Again, this amendment is not going to do anything to change what happened in California and the West. But it does provide the necessary authority for the CFTC and the FERC to help protect against another energy crisis.

I might say I am very suspicious of people who want to do trading in the dark. I am very suspicious when they say, oh, we are so sophisticated you cannot possibly know how this is done and you are going to stifle trade, because they don't want to keep a record of that trade, they don't want transparency, they don't want to keep an audit on trade, and they don't want any Government agency assuring there isn't fraud or manipulation. I am doubly suspicious of them, particularly because of the fraud and manipulation we now know took place.

So, please, don't tell me I am not sophisticated enough to understand. I understand plenty. I understand, when the price goes from $7 billion to $28 billion in a very short period of time, that you have to begin to look. I understand now that these arrests are occurring and the manipulations of Ricochet and Death Star and Get Shorty and wash trades are all becoming well known. I understand. The point is it is wrong. The point is, you cannot prove it is wrong if there are no records of those trades.

So what we are saying is these trades can go on, but you keep records. We give the CFTC the responsibility to set net capital requirements commensurate with risk. That is good oversight for the public and that is good oversight for anybody who is going to invest, because when net capital is not available and the house begins to collapse, as it did with Enron, the company goes bankrupt.

I think I have made my case. We have gone over this. I sent this legislation to the head of Goldman Sachs. They run an electronic exchange. I said, please, if you have problems with it, let me know. I did not hear. We have vetted it and talked over the past year and a half, 2 years, with virtually anyone who wanted to come in and talk with us about it.

Mr. President, I am absolutely determined and I am going to come back and back and back until this loophole is closed. Nobody can tell me I am not sophisticated enough to know that sunshine and records and transparency are critical to the effective functioning of a free marketplace, because I believe that just as much as I believe in the Pledge of Allegiance—and I do believe in the Pledge of Allegiance. When you allow hiding and you allow these trades to take place surreptitiously, that is when there are problems.

I am afraid I have said this over and over again, but we went through it and we saw it. We read the 3,000 pages California has sent to the FERC. This is another intrigue. Can you imagine that no State has the right today to present evidence to the FERC of fraud or manipulation?

California had to go to the Supreme Court to get that right, and then when we got that right, we were told it had to be in in 100 days. California submitted 3,000 pages within the 100 days, and it is loaded with examples of fraud and manipulation.

We know there is fraud, we know there is manipulation, and we know that was present in the western energy crisis, and all we are trying to do is bring light of day to one loophole that was in the Commodity Futures Modernization Act because a major offender lobbied for it in the laws. It was not in the Senate bill. The Senate bill originally covered this, but they lobbied in the House. It was taken out in conference, and the loophole was created.

If the past 3 years have not been evidence enough, if the arrests are not evidence enough, if we do not want a transparent marketplace, if we want people to be able to do this trading—and we can tell you the language of some of these trades; if they knew they were being recorded, I do not think they would do it in the way they did it—if we want to allow those procedures to continue to happen, that is what a motion to table and a tabling vote will do.

I am very hopeful and I am asking my colleagues to vote nay on the motion to table and vote yea on the modified amendment which is now at the desk.

I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 877, WITHDRAWN

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask that the Reid amendment be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, the Senate is considering the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from California, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, to the Energy bill now before the Senate. This amendment seeks to transfer, in effect, regulatory authority from the body that now has that authority, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

There are several good reasons why the Senate should not adopt this amendment and force that transfer of regulatory authority. First, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has special responsibilities but this will give them new and different responsibilities where there is no experience, there is no body of law or regulatory decisionmaking on which to base the assumption that this kind of regulation or this regulation carried out by this Commission would be of any better character or type than that which would be exercised by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission has been operating for some time now and has actually shown that it is capable of taking action to prevent abuses and illegal activities that can occur in these trading markets and in the energy trading area as well.

The Feinstein amendment would give the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission authority over areas that are currently regulated by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and would require, in addition, regulation of energy derivatives. These are complex instruments. They are used to transfer risks among traders and they are important tools in the energy markets today.

Congress considered in the past, when it took up the Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000 several years ago, regulating these instruments. But it decided not to do so. The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission has no current responsibility in regulating derivatives.

It seems to me that when you look to see who has been carrying out duties now complained about by some Senator, you can find that the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has a record of taking legal action against companies such as Enron, El Paso, and others regarding energy market problems. The Commodity Futures Trading Commission has recovered millions of dollars in fines from these companies, and it has several ongoing investigations in this area, and more charges are possible.

To transfer now the regulatory authority to a different commission and purport to take away the authority from the Commodity Futures Trading Commission is going to create disruption in ongoing investigations and actions that are taken to discipline this market and make it more predictable and trustworthy.

The Senator from California has suggested that the amendment she has offered is needed to prevent wash trades. These are trades that are fictitious. A company will buy a commodity and then sell it creating the impression that this is a legitimate trade. It establishes a price. It establishes volume. But it is fictitious trading. It shouldn't have that effect but it does.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission has taken action to discourage that activity and to punish that activity. It has specific authority to do that under the Commodity Exchange Act. The Commodity Futures Trading Commission has brought several actions under that authority in the last several years. Its authority to take this kind of action has been upheld by two decisions from U.S. appeals courts.

Just this year, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission has recovered tens of millions of dollars from merchant energy traders for so-called wash trades and false trades.

Another claim that is made in support of the amendment of the Senator from California is that because the exempt commercial markets are not regulated under the Commodity Exchange Act that they have no regulatory oversight. That is just not true. Those markets are required by statute today to have electronic audit trails. They are required by statute to keep records for 5 years. They are required to be subject to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission's antifraud and antimanipulation authorities. They are subject to special call examinations by the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. To suggest there are no regulatory requirements on those exempt commercial markets is just not true.

It is also claimed that the Feinstein amendment would impose capital requirements on exempt commercial markets. It would require capital requirements. That doesn't necessarily solve anything. Capital requirements aren't imposed now on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, or the New York Mercantile Exchange, or the Chicago Board of Trade. They are not viewed as necessary. Those markets have been functioning without capital requirements. To now impose them on exempt commercial markets is inappropriate and unnecessary.

Capital requirements or other exempt commercial markets would be difficult to establish. They would change on a regular basis—weekly probably—because of new contracts being offered, and change financial positions of participants. Capital requirements would impose significant costs and there are no identifiable benefits.

The amendment would also impose large trader reporting on exempt commercial markets. Large trader reporting works on retail futures exchanges with standardized contracts but would not work on exempt commercial markets. They don't have the same type of standardization. Large trader reporting on exempt commercial markets could actually lead to misleading information being provided to the public. Large trader reporting is used for market surveillance in retail futures markets.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission's statutory authority for exempt commercial markets is after the fact, antifraud and antimanipulation enforcement, and is inconsistent with a large trader reporting scheme.

In closing, the Senate has to take into account the fact that the leading figures in our Government who are responsible for enforcement and managing the departments that understand financial markets and the impact they have on our economy and on our place in the world economy are urging that the Senate not adopt the Feinstein amendment.

This is a letter which was put on every Senator's desk in the last several minutes signed by John W. Snow, Secretary of the Department of the Treasury, Alan Greenspan, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, William H. Donaldson, Chairman, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, and James E. Newsome, Chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

With the permission of the Chair, I will read the letter.

It is addressed to Senator CRAPO of Idaho and Senator MILLER of Georgia.

Thank you for your letter of June 10, 2003, requesting the views of the President's Working Group on Financial Markets [PWG] on proposed Amendment No. 876—to S. 14, the pending energy bill.

That is the Feinstein amendment—

As this amendment is similar to a proposed amendment on which you sought the views of the PWG last year, we reassert the positions expressed in the PWG's response dated September 18, 2002, a copy of which is enclosed. The proposed amendment could have significant unintended consequences for an extremely important risk management market—serving businesses, financial institutions, and investors throughout the U.S. economy. For that reason, we believe that adoption of this amendment is ill-advised.

We would also point out that, since we wrote that letter last year, various federal agencies have initiated actions against wrongdoing in the energy markets. As you note, the CFTC has brought formal actions against Enron, Dynegy, and El Paso for market manipulation, wash (or roundtrip) trades, false reporting of prices, and operation of illegal markets. The Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and the Department of Justice have also initiated formal actions in the energy sector. Some of these actions have already resulted in substantial monetary penalties and other sanctions. These initial actions alone make clear that wrongdoing in the energy markets are fully subject to the existing enforcement authority of federal regulators.

The Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000 brought important legal certainty to the risk management marketplace. Businesses, financial institutions, and investors throughout the economy rely upon derivatives to protect themselves from market volatility triggered by unexpected economic events. This ability to manage risks makes the economy more resilient and its importance cannot be underestimated. In our judgment, the ability of private counterpart surveillance to effectively regulate these markets can be undermined by inappropriate extensions of government regulation.

It is clear from the letter that the Senate has received no response to inquiries from Senator CRAPO and Senator MILLER clearly explaining the dangers in adopting the Feinstein amendment.

At the appropriate time it will be our intention to move to table the Feinstein amendment and ask for the yeas and nays at that time. I hope Senators will carefully review the information we now have available on each Senator's desk and vote to table the Feinstein amendment.

Madam President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. DOLE). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the vote in relation to the Feinstein amendment No. 876 occur at 3:15 today, with no amendments in order to the amendment prior to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Madam President, it is my understanding that would be a motion to table.

Mr. FRIST. That is correct.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF J. RONNIE GREER, OF TENNESSEE, TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF TENNESSEE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to executive session to consider the following nomination, which the clerk will report.

The senior assistant bill clerk read the nomination of J. Ronnie Greer, of Tennessee, to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Tennessee.

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, in a few moments, I believe at 2:15, the vote for J. Ronnie Greer's nomination as a United States District Court Judge for the Eastern District of Tennessee will take place.

As we come to the final few moments before that vote, I want to express my strong support for a very good friend over the years, Ronnie Greer.

People who come from the mountains of northeast Tennessee are known in our State for certain qualities. They are the qualities of loyalty, of steadfastness, of a can-do spirit. This individual, who we will be voting on in a few minutes, really personifies that tradition. He is a highly accomplished public servant who has served as an attorney in Tennessee's judicial system with great distinction for more than 20 years. His academic career speaks for itself—he graduated at the top of his class at the University of Tennessee Law School and was invited to be on Law Review. Since starting his own law office in Greeneville, he has represented numerous clients on a wide range of issues, and he has considerable experience before the Federal courts. Recognizing the need to help his fellow man, he has not hesitated to accept the appointments of indigent clients, representing them in both the District Court and the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals.

Ronnie has also had a distinguished career in politics and public service outside of his law practice. He was a State Senator in Tennessee's General Assembly for nine years, ably serving the people of District One. He served on both the Judiciary Committee and as Chairman of the Environment, Conservation and Tourism Committee. Ronnie also served as a Special Assistant in then-Governor LAMAR ALEXANDER's first term, forming a friendship and a bond that continues to this day.

You can't demand respect from the people of northeast Tennessee, you have to earn it, and Ronnie has without question. He is known for his sense of fair play and his compassion for others. With his easy-going, thoughtful manner, yet quick mind and keen legal ability, he has the temperament and judgement required for the Federal bench. For the last nineteen years, Judge Thomas Hull has served as District Judge in Tennessee's Eastern District, and his distinguished career will long be remembered. While Judge Hull leaves big shoes to fill, I am confident Ronnie is up to the task.

Mr. President, Ronnie Greer's dedication to the citizens of our State, his love of the law, and his desire to serve his country make him an ideal choice to serve as a U.S. District Judge. He has my highest recommendation and unqualified support, and I am delighted to urge my colleagues to vote for his confirmation today.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, within a few minutes, we will be voting on the President's nomination of J. Ronnie Greer, of Greeneville, TN, to be a Federal District Judge for the Eastern District of Tennessee. I want to just say a word about that.

The President has made a superb nomination. Ronnie Greer is a distinguished lawyer. He knows the people of east Tennessee. He has earned our respect. I am delighted the Senate has moved so expeditiously to consider this exceptional nominee.

I had the privilege, as Governor, of appointing nearly 50 men and women as judges, and I know how important it can be. What I always looked for was intelligence and good character; someone who knew and understood the people; and someone who would be courteous to the men and women to come before the judge once the judge assumes the bench. In this case, it is a lifetime position, and it is even more important that the judge have those qualities.

Ronnie Greer has all those qualities. I have known him since he was student body president at East Tennessee State University. He was a champion debater. That was some 30 years ago. I knew then he would amount to something special, and he already has.

He has served his community in many ways. He has served his political party, the Republican party, in many important ways. He has been a State senator from his part of upper east Tennessee. He has been active on issues that have to do with solid waste and the environment. He has been chairman of his local committee.

I think one of the things that most strongly recommends Ronnie Greer is he takes this most important position in what we call in upper east Tennessee having been a trial judge. He will have lots of people before him, litigants before him trying cases, making decisions on many different kinds of things. He has actually practiced law in the grand manner. He has been the kind of lawyer we used to see all over the country, where a single lawyer would try many different kinds of cases. They would have a criminal case one day, a civil case the next day, and a domestic relations case the next day. The lawyer had many talents and was broad gauged. Today, so much of our legal profession is in very large law firms, where we have very specialized lawyers. They do not see big slices of life. As a result, many of them are not very well prepared for a Federal judgeship, particularly a district judgeship where many slices of life come before that judge.

Ronnie Greer is well prepared. He has tried hundreds of cases in his career. He has represented the people of his area. The fact the President nominated him and that this Senate has moved so quickly to confirm him suggests his reputation goes well before him.

Mr. Greer was born and raised in Mountain City, TN. He received his Bachelor of Science degree from the East Tennessee State University in 1974. He received his Juris Doctorate from the University Of Tennessee College Of Law in 1980.

Mr. Greer served in the Tennessee General Assembly as a Senator for 8 years and served on the judiciary committee for 5 years. During his term of service, the committee considered legislation relative to the judiciary, State criminal code and criminal sentencing. This committee approved bills: that rewrote the Tennessee Criminal Code; that dealt with the appointment and retention of State appellate court judges; and that revised the Tennessee Rules of Evidence; the Tennessee Rules of Civil Procedure; and the Tennessee Rules of Criminal Procedure.

While in the Tennessee General Assembly, Mr. Greer also served as Chairman of the Senate Environment, Conservation and Tourism Committee for 7 years. This committee considered bills related to environmental issues, wildlife, State parks and tourism. He also authored and was chief sponsor of the Tennessee Solid Waste Management Act and sponsored and cosponsored numerous pieces of significant environmental legislation.

Mr. Greer has vast litigation experience in civil and criminal law. He served as County Attorney for Greene County, TN. In his capacity of County Attorney and in private practice, Mr.

Greer tried approximately 200 lawsuits in State or Federal courts as sole or chief counsel. As a practicing attorney, he practiced general civil litigation primarily in the areas of personal injury, environmental law and bankruptcy. Mr. Greer has represented many defendants in criminal cases in both State and Federal courts. Mr. Greer has represented numerous cases for indigent clients on a pro bono basis and routinely accepted two to three criminal cases appointed by federal courts per year.

Mr. Greer has received honors and awards for his outstanding service to the community. To name a few, he was the 1989 recipient of the Tennessee Conservation League's Legislator of the Year Award and, in 1993, he received the Environmental Action Fund's Legislator of the Year Award.

Madam President, I join Senator FRIST in saying how proud we both are of his nomination. I look forward to casting my vote for him in a few minutes and urge all my colleagues to support this nomination.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I rise in support of the nomination of James Ronnie Greer to the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee. Mr. Greer has extensive experience in both the private and public sectors of the legal community.

Upon graduating from the University of Tennessee College of Law, Mr. Greer became the special assistant to then-Gov. LAMAR ALEXANDER.

For the past 20 years, Mr. Greer has maintained a successful general legal practice. During this time, his practice has consisted of considerable litigation involving both jury and bench trials in the areas of State and Federal criminal defense, personal injury, and workers compensation. He has also practiced in the areas of domestic relations and has represented a number of clients on environmental issues. From 1985 to 1986, Mr. Greer was county attorney for Green County, TN.

From 1986 to 1994, Mr. Greer served as a State senator in the Tennessee General Assembly, during which time he was a member of the Judiciary Committee, and chairman of the Environment, Conservation and Tourism Committee. During his tenure, he helped pass bills which rewrote the Tennessee Criminal Code, revised the Rules of Evidence, Civil Procedure, and Criminal Procedure. Mr. Greer was also the author and chief sponsor of the Tennessee Solid Waste Management Act.

I am confident that he will serve on the bench with integrity and fairness, and I urge my colleagues to confirm him today.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, today, we vote to confirm J. Ronnie Greer to the United States District Court. With this confirmation we will have filled the sole vacancy on this court, one that arose in October 2002. Judge Greer will join Judge J. Daniel Breen and Judge Thomas Varlan, who we confirmed to lifetime appointments to the Western District of Tennessee and Eastern District of Tennessee, respectively, earlier in March of this year. These three confirmations build on the progress we were able to make while I chaired the Judiciary Committee during the 107th Congress. During those months we proceeded expeditiously to consider and confirm Judge Thomas Phillips to the Eastern District of Tennessee and Samuel Hardy Mays, Jr. to the Western District of Tennessee. In addition, during my tenure as chairman we broke the logjam on appointments to the United States Court of Appeals to the Sixth Circuit by confirming Judge Julia Smith Gibbons of Tennessee to that circuit court. She was the first Sixth Circuit confirmation in almost 5 years during which the Republican Senate majority had refused to proceed on three of President Clinton's Sixth Circuit nominees and vacancies grew to half the circuit court.

The Tennessee total during the last few years now stands at six and its Federal bench is completely filled. Working with Senator FRIST, Senator ALEXANDER, and before them my good friend Senator Thompson, we have been able to make tremendous progress during the last 2 years.

Mr. FRIST. Madam President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the nomination.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is, Shall the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of J. Ronnie Greer, of Tennessee, to be United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Tennessee?

The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I announce that the Senator from Illinois (Mr. FITZGERALD) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote ''yea.''

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

NOMINATION OF MARK R. KRAVITZ, OF CONNECTICUT, TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE DISTRICT OF CONNECTICUT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will proceed to the following nomination, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Mark R. Kravitz, of Connecticut, to be U.S. District Judge for the District of Connecticut.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will be 5 minutes for debate equally divided between the chairman and ranking member or their designees prior to a vote.

Who yields time?

Mr. LEAHY. I yield such time as the senior Senator from Connecticut desires.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mr. DODD. Madam President, I thank Senator LEAHY and Senator HATCH for moving the nomination of Mark Kravitz. This is a first-rate nomination. I commend the President and others who recommended Mark Kravitz. He is a first-class nominee to sit on the Federal bench. My colleague Senator LIEBERMAN and I strongly support this nomination. He has been a wonderful lawyer in Connecticut, a graduate of Wellesley University, Georgetown Law School, a clerk for then-Justice Rehnquist, has written extensively and taught at the University of Connecticut Law School. He is going to be a wonderful addition to the district court bench.

We wanted our colleagues to know how strongly Senator LIEBERMAN and I felt about this nomination. We urge our colleagues to give their unanimous support.

I yield back my remaining time.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I thank the Senator from Connecticut. This was a case where the White House worked with the Senators from the home State in an effort to unite rather than divide. I suspect this nominee will be easily confirmed.

With the confirmation of Mark R. Kravitz to the District Court, we will have filled the only vacancy on that court. I commend Senator DODD and Senator LIEBERMAN for their work in connection with this outstanding nomination and congratulate the nominee and his family.

The Senate has now confirmed 131 judges, including 26 circuit court judges, nominated by President Bush. One hundred judicial nominees were confirmed when Democrats acted as the Senate majority for 17 months from the summer of 2001 to adjournment last year. After today, 31 will have been confirmed in the other 12 months in which Republicans have controlled the confirmation process under President Bush. This total of 131 judges confirmed for President Bush is more confirmations than the Republicans allowed President Clinton in all of 1995, 1996 and 1997 the first 3 full years of his last term. In those 3 years, the Republican leadership in the Senate allowed only 111 judicial nominees to be confirmed, which included only 18 circuit court judges. We have already significantly exceeded that total with 6 months remaining to us this year.

If the Senate did not confirm another judicial nominee all year and simply adjourned today, we would have treated President Bush more fairly and would have acted on more of his judicial nominees than Republicans did for President Clinton in 1995–97. In addition, the vacancies on the federal courts around the country are significantly lower than the 80 vacancies Republicans left at the end of 1997. We continue well below the 67 vacancy level that Senator HATCH used to call ''full employment'' for the federal judiciary.

Indeed, we have reduced vacancies to their lowest level in the last 13 years. So while unemployment has continued to climb for Americans to 6.1 percent last month, the Senate has helped lower the vacancy rate in federal courts to an historically low level that we have not witnessed in over a decade. Of course, the Senate is not adjourning for the year and the Judiciary Committee continues to hold hearings for Bush judicial nominees at between two and four times as many as he did for President Clinton's.

For those who are claiming that Democrats are blockading this President's judicial nominees, this is another example of how quickly and easily the Senate can act when we proceed cooperatively with consensus nominees. The Senate's record fairly considered has been outstanding—especially when contrasted with the obstruction of President Clinton's moderate judicial nominees by Republicans between 1996 and 2001.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank Chairman Hatch, Senator LEAHY and all the members of the Judiciary Committee for acting on this judicial nomination in a thorough and expeditious manner. I am pleased to recommend Mr. Kravitz to my colleagues to serve as Federal District Judge for the District of Connecticut.

Mark Kravitz is a graduate of Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut and Georgetown Law School. After graduating from law school, Mr. Kravitz clerked for Judge James Hunter of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. Mr. Kravitz also served as a clerk for then-Justice William H. Rehnquist of the United States Supreme Court.

In 1976, Mr. Kravitz joined the respected law firm of Wiggin & Dana in New Haven, CT, where he is now a partner and heads their appellate practice. Mr. Kravitz's law practice has been devoted to civil litigation in State and Federal courts. He has been lead counsel on more than 60 appeals in State and Federal courts. In addition to his appellate and litigation practice, Mr. Kravitz has been an Adjunct Professor of Law at the University of Connecticut School of Law.

Over the course of the last quarter of a century, Mr. Kravitz has built an excellent reputation. He has become a respected and admired member of the Connecticut bar and he has contributed to the larger community, giving his time and talents to such causes as the Guilford Land Conservation Trust, the Connecticut Foundation for Open Government, and the Connecticut Council on Environmental Quality. Mr. Kravitz has been listed as one of the Best Lawyers in America since 1991. He has been elected as a fellow to the American Academy of Appellate Lawyers and as a member of the American Law Institute. In 1995, Mr. Kravitz received the Deane C. Avery Award for ''advancing the cause of freedom of information and freedom of speech in Connecticut.''

Recently, there has been a great deal of debate in the Senate about judicial nominations. I don't believe there should be any debate about this nomination. Mark Kravitz is the kind of nominee whom I believe the Framers of the Constitution had in mind when they envisioned an independent judiciary composed of jurists whose experience, intellect, and commitment to justice are unquestionable.

I believe that Mark Kravitz possesses the intellect, the experience, and the disposition to be an impartial finder of fact, a faithful legal analyst, and a fair and just jurist. He is an outstanding lawyer, and given everything I know about him, I am certain that he has the capacity to be an outstanding judge, as well. The State of Connecticut is proud to have him as one of our own. I'm certain that he will serve his country with honor and distinction, and I look forward to his confirmation. Again, I commend Mark Kravitz without reservation and I urge my colleagues to vote to confirm his nomination.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President. I rise to support the nomination of Mark Kravitz, whose nomination to the U.S. District Court for the District of Connecticut the Senate is currently considering.

Mr. Kravitz's confirmation will be good for Connecticut and for the Federal bench.

Connecticut isn't the biggest State in the Union, but we are blessed to have countless principled and professional lawyers, judges, and legal scholars. Maybe that is because we were the first State to have a written constitution; maybe it is due to the gravitational tug of fine law schools like UConn and my own alma mater, Yale. Regardless, in a State filled with lawyers, it is no exaggeration to say that Mark Kravitz has proven himself among the best. And I have no doubt he will uphold the highest standards of jurisprudence on the Federal bench.

Mark graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa in 1972 from Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut. He later graduated from Georgetown Law School, where he was managing editor of the Law Review. Out of law school, Mark clerked for Judge James Hunter of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, and Supreme Court Justice William Rehnquist. He is currently a partner at Wiggin and Dana in New Haven, where he has worked since 1976. He has served as lead counsel on more than 60 appeals in State and Federal courts, and has argued before the United States Supreme Court.

Mark has been listed as one of the Best Lawyers in America since 1991. He was endorsed by the Connecticut Bar Association as exceptionally well qualified to be a District Judge, and has been unanimously rated as Well Qualified by the American Bar Association.

Forgive the pun, but this is an open and shut case. Mark Kravitz has the intellect, the independence, and the integrity to do this job and do it well. I am confident he will carefully read and apply the laws of the United States in Federal court, abiding only by the law-not by any ideology, passion, or prejudice. He will be an exemplary judge. I urge my colleagues to confirm him today.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I rise today in support of Mark. R. Kravitz to be a United States District Judge for the District of Connecticut. I am confident that with his accomplishments and experience, Mr. Kravitz will make an excellent Federal judge. After graduating from Georgetown University Law Center, where he was managing editor of the Georgetown Law Journal, Mr. Kravitz clerked for the Honorable James Hunter III of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit. He then went on to clerk for the Honorable William H. Rehnquist on the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mr. Kravitz has spent the bulk of his legal career at the firm of Wiggin & Dana in New Haven, CT, where he is currently a partner. He also serves as an adjunct professor of law at the University of Connecticut School of Law and has also been a visiting lecturer at Yale University Law School. For the past 12 years, Mr. Kravitz has been recognized in the publication ''The Best Lawyers in America.'' He enjoys the support of both home State Democrat Senators and was unanimously approved by the Judiciary Committee. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this exceptional nominee.

I yield back our remaining time.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I yield back the remaining time.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 876, AS MODIFIED

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the time be equally divided and that Senator FEINSTEIN control our time and Senator COCHRAN control the time on the other side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who yields time?

Mr. REID. Madam President, on behalf of Senator FEINSTEIN, I yield to the Senator from Washington 4 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is recognized.

Ms. CANTWELL. Thank you, Madam President.

I am here to support the Feinstein amendment, which I am pleased to cosponsor. It is a very important piece of legislation. I thank my colleague for her hard work on this very important issue. We have all heard about the dysfunctions in our western regional power market and how it has cost our western economy more than $35 billion.

Madam President, it was more than a year ago that the Senator from California and I stood on the floor to have this debate with many of my colleagues. During the Omnibus Appropriations bill in 2000, Congress granted an exemption from regulatory scrutiny for businesses such as EnronOnline and electronic trading platforms. Unsurprisingly, Enron was chief among its boosters in lobbying for this language. Even though Congress listened to Enron and not the President's Working Group on Financial Markets, which opposed this exemption.

Now we have history. What has happened? We know that the Enron loophole has caused quite a bit of a problem. In fact, in light of evidence which during last year's debate was just beginning to emerge, we have found that the markets for energy derivatives and the physical energy prices and supplies have caused a problem. In the West, we had huge spikes. We have had a long and vigorous floor debate about this amendment.

There were many detractors who basically said at the time there was no conclusive evidence that Enron manipulated western energy markets and there was no need to proceed. This year, we have heard a lot about how Enron in fact has manipulated markets.

Less than a month after the Senate passed this comprehensive Energy bill with this language in it, Enron's ''smoking gun'' memos were released detailing a number of the company's schemes for driving up the prices. My colleagues are aware that Enron has continued to release various amounts of information about this unbelievable scandal and manipulation of prices.

Just last week, another Enron trader was arrested. And the complaint of Federal prosecutors said they are uncovering even more details of ploys to manipulate energy prices. We wanted evidence. We got it. In a long-awaited report, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission concluded this spring that manipulation was ''epidemic'' in the western market during the crisis of 2000–2001.

But more specifically, in a staff report the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission detailed the manner in which EnronOnline helped Enron to game the California markets. The Commission concluded that ''the relationship between the financial and physical energy products . . . provides the opportunity to manipulate the physical markets and profit in the financial markets.''

Further, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission estimated that EnronOnline allowed the company to reap more than $500 million in additional profits. There it is, right from the Federal Commission: EnronOnline allowed them to reap those additional profits.

As we approach this very important issue in a vote here in a few minutes, my colleagues need to step up and close this loophole that the President's Working Group on Financial Markets first argued against because it said we didn't have real credibility on manipulation. Now we have the credibility, and we have a Federal Commission pointing to the fact that EnronOnline was responsible for part of this market manipulation.

I urge my colleagues to support the Feinstein amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, I yield such time as he may consume to the Senator from Idaho, Mr. CRAPO.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAPO. Thank you, Madam President. I will be very brief.

I want to reiterate, once again, we are not here dealing with a question of whether those who did try to and succeeded in manipulating markets should be held accountable for that. We are talking about what is the correct way to regulate the derivatives market in our country.

I would like to read into the RECORD, once again, a portion of a letter which we have just received signed by the Secretary of the Department of the Treasury, John W. Snow; Alan Greenspan, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; William H. Donaldson, Chairman of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission; and James E. Newsome, Chairman of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. They write:

Dear Senators Crapo and Miller:

Thank you for your letter of June 10, 2003, requesting the views of the President's Working Group on Financial Markets on proposed Senate Amendment # 876 to S. 14, the pending energy bill. As this amendment is similar to a proposed amendment on which you sought the views of the PWG last year, we reassert the positions expressed in the PWG's response dated September 18, 2002, a copy of which is enclosed. The proposed amendment could have significant unintended consequences for an extremely important risk management market—serving businesses, financial institutions, and investors throughout the U.S. economy. For that reason, we believe that adoption of this amendment is ill-advised.

And this next paragraph responds directly to the allegations that there is some manipulation in the market and there is a loophole there. They go on to say:

We would also point out that, since we wrote that letter last year, various federal agencies have initiated actions against wrongdoing in energy markets.

I do not have time to go through the list of wrongdoing they have initiated action against, but they conclude in their letter:

These initial actions alone make clear that wrongdoers in the energy markets are fully subject to the existing enforcement authority of federal regulators.

This amendment will not be helpful to our economy. It will take away one of the needed elements of our economy that gives it the dynamic nature that it has, to be able to resist some of the difficult burdens that the economy has faced in the last several years.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter I just referred to dated June 11, 2003, and an additional letter dated September 18, 2002, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY, BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM, U.S. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, COMMODITY FUTURES TRADING COMMISSION,

Washington, DC, June 11, 2003.

Hon. MICAHEL D. CRAPO,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

Hon. ZELL B. MILLER,
U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS CRAPO AND MILLER: Thank you for your letter of June 10, 2003, requesting the views of the President's Working Group on Financial Markets (PWG) on proposed Senate Amendment No. 876 to S. 14, the pending energy bill. As this amendment is similar to a proposed amendment on which you sought the views of the PWG last year, we reassert the positions expressed in the WPG's response dated September 18, 2002, a copy of which is enclosed. The proposed amendment could have significant unintended consequences for an extremely important risk management market—serving businesses, financial institutions, and investors throughout the U.S. economy. For that reason, we believe that adoption of this amendment is ill-advised.

We would also point out that, since we wrote that letter last year, various federal agencies have initiated actions against wrongdoing in the energy markets. As you note, the CFTC has brought formal actions against Enron, Dynegy, and El Paso for market manipulation, wash (or roundtrip) trades, false reporting of prices, and operation of illegal markets. The Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, and the Department of Justice have also initiated formal actions in the energy sector. Some of these actions have already resulted in substantial monetary penalties and other sanctions. These initial actions alone make clear that wrongdoers in the energy market are fully subject to the existing enforcement authority of federal regulators.

The Commodity Futures Modernization Act of 2000 brought important legal certainty to the risk management marketplace. Businesses, financial institutions, investors throughout the economy rely upon derivatives to protect themselves from market volatility triggered by unexpected economic events. This ability to manage risks makes the economy more resilient and its importance cannot be underestimated. In our judgment, the ability of private counterparty surveillance to effectively regulate these markets can be undermined by inappropriate extensions of government regulation.

Yours truly,

JOHN W. SNOW,
Secretary, Department of the Treasury.

WILLIAM H. DONALDSON,
Chairman, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

ALAN GREENSPAN,
Chairman, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

JAMES E. NEWSOME,
Chairman, Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

DEPARTMENT OF TREASURY, BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM, U.S. SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION, COMMODITY FUTURES TRADING COMMISSION, Washington, DC, September 18, 2002.

Hon. MICHAEL D. CRAPO,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

Hon. ZELL B. MILLER,
U.S. Senate, Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATORS CRAPO AND MILLER: In response to your letter of September 13, we write to express our serious concerns about the legislative proposal to expand regulation of the over-the-counter (OTC) derivatives markets that has recently been proposed by Senators Harkin and Lugar.

We believe that the OTC derivatives markets in question have been a major contributor to our economy's ability to respond to the stresses and challenges of the last two years. This proposal would limit this contribution, thereby increasing the vulnerability of our economy to potential future stresses.

The proposal would subject market participants to disclosure of proprietary trading information and new capital requirements. We do not believe a public policy case exists to justify this governmental intervention. The OTC markets trade a wide variety of instruments. Many of these are idiosyncratic in nature. These customized markets generally do not serve a significant price discovery function for non-participants, nor do they permit retail investors to participate. Public disclosure of pricing data for customized OTC transactions would not improve the overall price discovery process and may lead to confusion as to the appropriate pricing for other transactions, as terms and conditions can vary by contract. The rationale for imposing capital requirements is unclear to us, and the proposal's capital requirements also could duplicate or conflict with existing regulatory capital requirements.

The trading of these instruments arbitrages away inefficiencies that exist in all financial and commodities markets. If dealers had to divulge promptly the proprietary details and pricing of these instruments, the incentive to allocate capital to developing and finding markets for these highly complex instruments would be lessened. The result would be that the inefficiencies in other markets that derivatives have arbitraged away would reappear.

It is also unclear who would benefit from the proposed disclosures and regulations other than whoever simply copied existing products and instruments for their own short-term advantage. Weakening the protection of proprietary intellectual property rights in the market arena would undercut a complex of highly innovative markets that is among this nation's most valuable assets.

While the derivatives markets may seem far removed from the interests and concerns of consumers, the efficiency gains that these markets have fostered are enormously important to consumers and to our economy. We urge Congress to protect these market's contributions to the economy, and to be aware of the potential unintended consequences of current legislative proposals.

Yours truly,

PAUL H. O'NEILL,
Secretary, Department of the Treasury.

HARVEY L. PITT,
Chairman, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

ALAN GREENSPAN,
Chairman, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.
JAMES E. NEWSOME,
Chairman, Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Mr. CRAPO. Madam President, I encourage my colleagues to vote against the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, do they have any time left on their side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-five seconds.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I yield our time to the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Madam President, I join Senator FEINSTEIN as a cosponsor of her amendment to strengthen Federal oversight of energy markets. I strongly support the amendment's provisions enhancing the ability of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission to investigate and punish fraud and manipulation in over-the-counter markets in energy derivatives and derivatives based on other ''exempt commodities'' under the Commodity Exchange Act.

As chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry during the last Congress, I held a hearing on the scope of the CFTC's authority to insure market transparency and prevent fraud and manipulation in markets in OTC derivatives based on ''exempt commodities,'' such as energy and metals, following passage of the CFMA. Following that hearing, Senator LUGAR and I worked closely with Senator FEINSTEIN on an earlier version of this amendment to improve it. At the beginning of the 108th Congress, Senator FEINSTEIN introduced S. 509, incorporating the work we did within the Agriculture Committee last summer and fall. The only difference between S. 509 and this amendment is that S. 509 was drafted to fill a gap in oversight created by the CFMA and fully and clearly affirm the CFTC's authority to oversee trading in all ''exempt commodities''—OTC energy and metals derivatives as well as derivatives based on other commodities such as broadband and weather—whereas this amendment now does not change the treatment of metals derivatives. I have some concerns about this approach. Metals, like energy, are commodities of finite supply. They are equally susceptible to market manipulation and should therefore be subject to the same level of oversight. The legislative process often requires compromise in order to make progress toward important policy goals, however, and because I hope this amendment will result in significant progress in addressing a problem created by the CFMA, I support it.

The CFMA amended the Commodity Exchange Act in a number of positive ways, based for the most part on the recommendations of the President's Working Group on Financial Markets issued in 1999. The President's Working Group recommended that certain transactions involving financial derivatives be excluded from the CFTC's jurisdiction. The President's Working Group did not recommend a similar exclusion for transactions involving energy and metals derivatives, or other commodities of finite supply.

During 1999 and 2000, as legislation was being developed in the Senate, there was discussion of the issue of oversight of energy and metals derivatives markets, and Senator LUGAR who was at the time chairman, and I both supported, in the committee, a version of the legislation that was consistent with the recommendations of the President's Working Group, and excluded only financial derivatives—not energy and metals derivatives—from the CFTC's jurisdiction. The bill codified an exemption, with specific safeguards, for certain commodities such as energy and metals, but clearly retained the CFTC's authority to investigate and act against fraud and manipulation.

The final version of the CFMA included in the omnibus appropriations bill in December 2000 differed from our committee bill regarding energy and metals derivatives markets. I supported the CFMA, although I had some concerns about its treatment of energy and metals products, because I thought it had a number of very positive features, and on the whole was a good bill. I still believe so. It is important that we not undermine the legal certainty that legislation brought to the OTC derivatives markets. I would not support this amendment if I thought it would do that. But I do believe it is important to close the loophole that has resulted in an important segment of the overall OTC derivatives market—that is, derivatives based on energy and other ''exempt commodities,'' as the CFMA defined them—being completely excluded from oversight. At the time of passage of the CFMA, many Members of Congress believed these exempt commodities would no longer be subject to most requirements of the Commodity Exchange Act, but they certainly did not believe these commodities would be removed entirely from oversight by the CFTC or any other agency, which is what has happened.

We know now that this lack of oversight has resulted in harm to consumers. Last August, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, FERC, issued a report finding significant evidence that Enron used its unregulated OTC electronic trading platform, Enron Online, to manipulate natural gas prices to increase its revenue. This manipulation affected prices not only for Enron's trading partners but industry-wide, as reporting firms used price information displayed electronically on Enron Online as a significant source of natural gas pricing data. And a recent report prepared by the Minority Staff of the U.S. Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations, after a year-long investigation on crude oil price volatility, found that crude oil prices are similarly affected by trading on unregulated OTC markets, and that the lack of information on prices and large positions in OTC markets makes it difficult if not impossible to detect price manipulation. This report concluded that routine market disclosure and oversight of the OTC energy derivatives markets are essential to halt manipulation before economic damage is inflicted upon the market and the public.

This amendment will provide the CFTC with the authority it needs to require routine market disclosure and ensure effective oversight of the OTC energy derivatives markets and markets for other ''exempt commodities,'' such as broadband and weather derivatives. The amendment clarifies that the CFTC has anti-fraud and anti-manipulation authority over transactions in ''exempt commodities'' other than metals. This amendment is not regulatory overreaching by any means. It just gives the CFTC the authority it needs to establish adequate notice, transparency, reporting, record-keeping, and other transparency requirements which are the minimum needed to allow the agency to effectively police OTC markets in energy derivatives, and thereby detect and deter fraud and manipulation of these markets. It also increases criminal and civil penalties for manipulation, including ''wash'' or ''round trip'' trades.

It is clear that the impact of OTC energy derivatives markets reaches well beyond the immediate parties to the transactions. Derivatives play an increasingly important role in the diverse range of energy markets, which are in turn critical to our overall economy. We must ensure the integrity of these markets and restore shareholder, investor, and consumer confidence in them. This amendment moves us in that direction, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Madam President, this amendment basically closes a small loophole that was left in the Commodity Futures Modernization Act passed in the year 2000. We saw what happened with Enron. And what happened is, Enron Online was used to influence energy prices far beyond Enron. This impacted consumers not only on the West Coast but in my State and all over the United States.

As a result, we looked at this amendment last year. Both Senator LUGAR and I looked at it. We had a hearing on it last year in the Agriculture Committee.

This amendment, I believe, does exactly what we want it to do; that is, to make sure the Commodity Futures Trading Commission——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HARKIN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent for 30 more seconds to complete my sentence.

Mr. DOMENICI. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, how much time is on this side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes 39 seconds.

Mr. DOMENICI. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I just wanted to say, this gives the CFTC the authority again to provide the oversight they need to make sure we have integrity in these markets for derivatives based on energy, but also for derivatives based on other things, too, such as weather and broadband. It is a step in the right direction to provide that oversight and transparency.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, what this amendment really does is transfer some new power and authority to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to regulate some of these highly sophisticated and important markets. They have never done this before. There is no expertise, background, or experience in the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to do the things this amendment would have them do. So that is not plugging a loophole. It may be creating a bigger one. It may be counterproductive. That is what I am suggesting the Senate should consider.

Look at the letter that has been signed by Alan Greenspan, by John Snow, the Secretary of the Treasury, by the head of the Securities and Exchange Commission. These are the people who understand the impact of this amendment on our economy and on our economic power in the world today.

This is serious business. I am hopeful the Senate will look carefully. The amendment appears to grant FERC authority with respect to derivatives, but it leaves a jurisdictional gap. The amendment would replace regulatory certainty with regulatory uncertainty. It is a bad amendment and it ought to be defeated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, do we have any time remaining on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute 21 seconds.

Mr. DOMENICI. I yield the Senator from Wyoming the remainder of our time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. ENZI. Madam President, I do want to point out we debated this issue a year ago. The conclusion was these are professionals dealing with professionals. The people who have the oversight over it do have oversight and are taking advantage of that oversight.

We also passed Sarbanes-Oxley in the meantime. And if the Feinstein amendment were to be adopted, it would lead to some confusion over exactly who has jurisdiction.

I know this is an extremely difficult issue. This is my third time debating it. I do know how to spell it now. But it is a very complicated issue, and it is not something we ought to be doing in a reaction that will result in overreaction. So I ask that we vote against this amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I yield back any time we have on our side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time is yielded back.

Mr. DOMENICI. I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) is necessarily absent.

I further announced that, if present and voting, the the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote ''nay''.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 55, nays 44, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 880

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Tennessee [Mr. ALEXANDER], for himself, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. CORNYN, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. BINGAMAN, and Mr. DOMENICI, proposes an amendment numbered 880.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To require a report from the Secretary of Energy on natural gas supplies and demand)

''SEC. . NATURAL GAS SUPPLY SHORTAGE REPORT.

''(a) REPORT.—Not later than six months after the date of enactment of this act, the Secretary of Energy (''Secretary'') shall submit to the Congress a report on natural gas supplies and demand. In preparing the report, the Secretary shall consult with experts in natural gas supply and demand as well as representatives of State and local units of government, tribal organizations, and consumer and other organizations. As the Secretary deems advisable, the Secretary may hold public hearings and provide other opportunities for public comment. The report shall contain recommendations for federal actions that, if implemented, will result in a balance between natural gas supply and demand at a level that will ensure, to the maximum extend practicable, achievement of the objectives established in subsection (b).

''(b) OBJECTIVES OF REPORT.—In preparing the report, the Secretary shall seek to develop a series of recommendations that will result in a balance between natural gas supply and demand adequate to—

''(1) provide residential consumers with natural gas at reasonable and stable prices;

''(2) accommodate long-term maintenance and growth of domestic natural gas dependent industrial, manufacturing and commercial enterprises;

''(3) facilitate the attainment of natural ambient air quality standards under the Clean Air Act;

''(4) permit continued progress in reducing emissions associated with electric power generation; and

''(5) support development of the preliminary phases of hydrogen-based energy technologies

''(c) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—The report shall provide a comprehensive analysis of natural gas supply and demand in the United States for the period from 2004 to 2015. The analysis shall include, at a minimum,—

''(1) estimates of annual domestic demand for natural gas that takes into account the effect of federal policies and actions that are likely to increase and decrease demand for natural gas;

''(2) projections of annual natural gas supplies, from domestic and foreign sources, under existing federal policies;

''(3) an identification of estimated natural gas supplies that are not available under existing federal policies;

''(4) scenarios for decreasing natural gas demand and increasing natural gas supplies comparing relative economic and environmental impacts of federal policies that—

''(A) encourage or require the use of natural gas to meet air quality, carbon dioxide emission reduction, or energy security goals;

''(B) encourage or require the use of energy sources other than natural gas, including coal, nuclear and renewable sources;

''(C) support technologies to develop alternative sources of natural gas and synthetic gas, including coal gasification technologies;

''(D) encourage or require the use of energy conservation and demand side management practices; and

''(E) affect access to domestic natural gas supplies; and

''(5) recommendations for federal actions to achieve the objectives of the report, including recommendations that—

''(A) encourage or require the use of energy sources other than natural gas, including coal, nuclear and renewable sources;

''(B) encourage or require the use of energy conservation or demand side management practices;

''(C) support technologies for the development of alternative sources of natural gas and synthetic gas, including coal gasification technologies; and

''(D) will improve access to domestic natural gas supplies.''.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Madam President, I offer an amendment on behalf of Senator SANTORUM, Senator CORNYN, Senator LANDRIEU, Senator BINGAMAN, the ranking member of our committee, and Senator DOMENICI, the chairman of our committee has joined the amendment as well, which I deeply appreciate.

This is an amendment about the emerging natural gas crisis. It would require the Secretary of Energy, within 6 months from the date of enactment of this Energy bill, to submit a report on natural gas supplies and demand. I offer this amendment because I believe it will help us deal with what I am afraid is an emerging natural gas crisis. If that were to occur, we would be able to protect our jobs, heat or cool our homes at reasonable costs, and clean our air to the standard that we wish.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on Energy, working with our chairman of the full committee, I intend to help schedule hearings as soon as possible on this emerging crisis. This report and these hearings should help us take a hard, honest look at what we do short term and long term.

Alan Greenspan is usually a little difficult to interpret when he testifies but he was not difficult to understand on May 21 when he testified before the Joint Economic Committee. This is what he said about natural gas:

In contrast, prices for natural gas have increased sharply in response to very tight supplies. Working gas in storage is presently at extremely low levels, and the normal seasonal rebuilding of these inventories seems to be behind the typical schedule. The colder-than-average winter played a role in producing today's tight supply as did the inability of heightened gas well drilling to significantly augment net marketed production. Canada, our major source of gas imports, has little room to expand shipments to the United States. Our limited capacity to import liquefied natural gas effectively restricts our access to the world's abundant supplies of natural gas. The current tight domestic natural gas market reflects the increases in demand over the past two decades. That demand has been spurred by myriad new uses for natural gas in industry and by the increased use of natural gas as a clean-burning source of electric power.

I asked Mr. Greenspan to elaborate on that, and I will not read all of his remarks but this is the way he began his response to my question on May 21:

Senator Alexander, I am surprised at how little attention the natural gas problem has been getting. Because it is a very serious problem. It's partly the result of new technologies employed in the areas of growing technologies and the whole exploratory procedures which embarked over the last decade or so.

He talked about our contradictory Federal policies. This is not some abstract issue. The price of natural gas was $3.50 or so last summer. It spiked to $9 or better in the winter. Today it is $6.25 or so. That affects the cost of heating and cooling our homes, but it affects our jobs in a big way.

For example, someone from a large chemical industry in our State came to see me a few weeks ago when gas prices spiked up. The thousands of employees there had taken a voluntary 3-percent cut in their pay. The management had taken a 6-percent cut in their pay. They were worried about the price of natural gas which is a raw material for that chemical industry.

It does not just affect the chemical industry. In California, for example, where not much coal is burned because it pollutes the air, natural gas effectively sets the price of electricity. So this emerging crisis in natural gas affects jobs in the whole economy, as we have been debating.

There are answers but we have contradictory policies. We have plenty of gas but no access to the gas. We have a lot of alternatives, and we are trying to encourage them, but when we talk about windmills, we think we may want a limit on the number of windmills we want to see. When we talk about nuclear, we have very close votes because people are skeptical about nuclear power. When we talk about coal, it pollutes the air. When we talk about drilling more oil, we vote no about going to Alaska. When we consider liquid gas from overseas, we are worried it might blow up in big terminals on the sea coast. And hydrogen we all are for but it is 20 years away.

The bottom line: We have contradictory policies short term. This could slow down our recovery and keep unemployment high and hurt our jobs long term. It could mean electric rates go sky high and our manufacturing jobs go to Mexico and China. We need to take an honest, hard look at the consequences of our failure to achieve a balance of natural gas and its alternatives, and I hope this report required by this amendment will help do just that. I will work with the chairman, with the ranking member, to make certain our committee hearings help do that, as well.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I understand that amendment will be accepted on both sides.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, that is correct. We support the amendment and urge its passage.

Mr. DOMENICI. The Senator from Louisiana asked if she might speak for 1 minute.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I understand the amendment offered by my colleague from Tennessee will be accepted. That is good. It is a good amendment and certainly should be part of this bill.

Since I am in the Chamber, I wish to speak a minute in support of the amendment and add to the record he has so ably outlined. In one case in Louisiana—and there are many cases, but in one case Louisiana Ammonia Producers has gone from, in 1998, 9 companies employing more than 3,500 people to 3 companies employing fewer than 1,000 people. Part of the reason for this tremendous decline at a time when we are trying to create jobs instead of losing them is the rising price of natural gas. The price of natural gas, because supplies are so tight, in the first quarter of 2003, was $5.91 a million Btu's, a 129 percent increase over the average price for the first quarter of the previous 10 years.

The Senator from Tennessee is absolutely right. A commission to study ways to increase the supply of natural gas is critical and important if we are going to keep the companies, large and small, in this country competitive.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I congratulate the Senator. The first comment was on a question the Senator put to Dr. Greenspan and his response about being surprised at how little attention was being paid to matters. We are quite proud that this committee started paying attention to natural gas as soon as we convened this year. Our first hearings indicated, through our experts, that we were going to have a serious shortage. We were questioning even then; that was only 3 or 4 months ago.

We have nothing further.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee.

The amendment (No. 880) was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. REID. Madam President, staff is retyping the proposed agreement, but to save time I wonder if we could go to the Bingaman amendment. Originally, the plan was to vote on Bingaman and the Burma matter after debate was completed on both issues. We have an objection on our side to doing that. We could go to the Bingaman amendment immediately, have 40 minutes of debate equally divided, then following that have a vote on or in relation to the Bingaman amendment, and then go to the Burma matter after that.

Mr. DOMENICI. I ask Senator CAMPBELL if that is all right.

Mr. CAMPBELL. That is fine.

Mr. DOMENICI. We have no objection.

AMENDMENT NO. 881

(Purpose: To provide for a significant environmental review process associated with the development of Indian energy projects, to establish duties of the federal government to Indian tribes in implementing an energy development program, and for other purposes)

Mr. BINGAMAN. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. BINGAMAN], for himself, Mr. INOUYE, and Mr. DASCHLE, proposes an amendment numbered 881.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Text of Amendments.'')

Mr. BINGAMAN. Madam President, this is an amendment I am offering on behalf of myself and Senator INOUYE. It is an amendment that will make several changes in section 303 of the Indian energy title in this legislation that is pending before the Senate.

First, a little background on these issues so my colleagues understand what is at stake. Title III of S. 14 contains a very strong Indian energy title. It would provide tribes with the financial and technical assistance they need to help them develop and utilize energy resources on Indian land.

This title III represents a combination of sections from two separate bills. One was introduced by Senator CAMPBELL; the other was introduced by Senator INOUYE and myself. I very much appreciate the willingness of the majority to work with us and include in the bill now before the Senate a number of sections from the Bingaman-Inouye bill. Most of these measures were included as part of last year's Senate-passed Energy bill and were generally agreed to in the House-Senate conference without controversy. Unfortunately, as we all know, those sections did not become law.

Notwithstanding the general support that exists for the Indian energy title in this bill, there is one section that is fairly controversial. That is the subject of our amendment. It is section 2604. It would authorize tribes to enter into leases and business agreements and issue rights-of-way for energy development projects on tribal lands without the separate approval of the Secretary of the Interior. These leases and business agreements and rights-of-way would involve a broad range of energy projects, including oil and gas extraction, powerplants development and construction, and even some mining activity would be covered under the language in the bill. This activity could take place on any tribal trust lands, not just those on reservation but also lands that have been designated as tribal trust lands off reservation. There are many of those, as we know.

There is no disagreement on whether we should allow tribes to exercise more control over development on tribal lands. There is, however, a disagreement on how we go about that.

The present language in section 2604 raises two significant issues. The first is that by eliminating the Secretarial approval of leases and agreements and rights-of-way, section 2604 eliminates the ''major Federal action'' determination that triggers the application of the National Environmental Policy Act, NEPA. This effectively waives the analysis and the public participation requirements that are in that law. It thereby reduces the ability to protect the interests of both those residing on reservations and those residing in adjacent communities.

While a substantial environmental review process is included in section 2604, it is limited in the range of impacts that require review. It does not require the implementation of mitigation measures. It does not require any changes in response to the concerns of affected tribal members or the concerns of local communities.

Obviously, eliminating NEPA is a concern to many national and local environmental groups and also to some Native American organizations that have weighed in with strong letters on the issue. It is also of concern to the counties around the country. In a letter dated May 14 of this year, the National Association of Counties is calling for section 2604 to be modified so that a NEPA analysis is completed for each new energy project that goes forward on Indian lands.

There is a bipartisan group of attorneys general representing the States of Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, North Dakota, Utah, Wyoming, and Connecticut that have also expressed strong concerns about the diminishment of environmental review for tribal energy resource development projects. They have expressed their views in a letter dated June 9 of this year. In that letter they wrote:

While we understand that this provision is intended to promote the worthy goals of tribal self-determination and sovereignty, we are concerned that it goes too far in facilitating significant development activity without ensuring that adequate protections exist for affected communities and adjacent lands. Section 2604 represents a significant change in the law that could have serious implications for the States that we represent. We therefore urge the provision be amended to ensure that significant energy development activity on tribal lands continues to be subject to meaningful environmental review, including an ability for State and local governments to participate in the process.

The concern expressed by those attorneys general and the counties underscores the fact that without some applicable Federal law related to the significant development activity contemplated under this section 2604, it is unclear what standard is to apply. Some have argued that tribal lands should be treated just as private lands are and tribes should be free, as private landowners are, to go forward with development projects. In my view, that is not a good analogy because private lands are subject to State and local laws; tribal lands are not. We are all aware that a private landowner has requirements by virtue of State and local law that do not apply on tribal lands. Tribal law can and should apply to energy development on tribal lands, but at the same time Congress has a responsibility to ensure that certain Federal parameters are in place.

The second issue that is raised by this section 2604 is that the language in the section undermines the Secretary's trust responsibility to Indian tribes. A number of tribes have expressed strong concerns about the language which appears to change the traditional trust relationships between the Federal Government and Indian tribes. Tribal concern is driven by a decision 3 months ago by the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of United States v. Navajo Nation. The Supreme Court specifically addressed the Federal trust responsibility and the standard for ensuring that statutes affecting Native Americans contain fiduciary duties by which the Federal Government as trustee can be held accountable for its actions that may have serious and negative impacts on tribal interests.

Section 2604, the subject of our amendment here, as currently drafted does not meet the standards established by the Supreme Court. In fact, it goes in the opposite direction. It diminishes the Federal Government's trust responsibility and accountability to tribes. This is inconsistent with the current Federal policy of tribal self-determination and self-governance. These policies, in effect since the landmark Indian Self-Determination Act of 1975, clearly preserved the Federal trust responsibility and accountability to tribes while facilitating tribal control over Federal Indian programs.

The amendment Senator INOUYE and I are offering addresses both the environmental review question I talked about and the trust responsibility issues, as well as other miscellaneous matters, in the hope that we can improve the final Indian energy title from a tribal perspective, from an environmental perspective, from a State perspective, and from a local perspective.

With respect to the environmental issue, the amendment does the following four things:

No. 1, it ensures sufficient time for the Secretary to review the proposed tribal energy resource agreements without a waiver of Federal environmental laws.

No. 2, it improves the environmental review process so that it is comparable to the standards required under NEPA, while maintaining tribal control over that review.

No. 3, it removes language limiting who can petition for a review of the implementation of tribal energy resource agreements.

No. 4, it requires Congress to review and reauthorize this section of the program 7 years from now, without it just continuing indefinitely.

With respect to trust responsibility, the amendment deletes language that would prevent the tribes from asserting claims against the Secretary of the Interior related to the Secretary's approval of tribal energy resource agreements. It also eliminates a broad waiver that limits the liability of the United States for any losses associated with the leases or with agreements or with rights-of-way.

The language being eliminated is unacceptable to a large number of Indian tribes. Because of the language, the Navajo Nation, the largest tribe in our country and the one involved in this recent Supreme Court decision that I described, stated in a letter they sent to us dated June 4 that the ''tribal energy proposal must be defeated.''

The letter goes on to say that the language, if successfully included in the bill:

> . . . would be a virtual endorsement by the Indian tribes' trustee itself [of course, that is the Federal Government], of the fraud, dishonesty, and unethical treatment that was the subject of the Navajo Nation's claim against the United States, and would open the door for future similar conduct by federal officials.

The Jicarilla Apache Tribe, in a letter dated April 28, stated that the provisions currently in the bill ''are inconsistent with the United States' trust relationship with Indian tribes . . .'' This is a quotation from their letter. They go on to say they would ''actually turn the current legal and political relationship between Indian tribes and the United States Government on its head.''

In addition to deleting most of the offending language, our amendment also established Secretarial duties to the tribes in implementing section 2604. In light of the United States v. Navajo Nation decision, we view this language as necessary to maintain a trust relationship in which the Federal Government has some accountability to the tribes electing to enter into agreements under section 2604. The language we are proposing to add is taken directly from the existing self-determination law and therefore relies on longstanding precedent.

Finally, our amendment includes a number of minor changes that are technical. I believe it is a good, constructive improvement to the bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Madam President, let me ask, how much time remains on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used 10 minutes.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Madam President, I rise in opposition to the Bingaman amendment. I will try to go through this as quickly as I can because I know Senator DOMENICI also wants to speak.

On Thursday I introduced an amendment and withdrew it yesterday. That amendment was supported by the National Congress of American Indians, which is over 300 tribes, the Council of Energy Resource Tribes, which represents 50 additional tribes, and the U.S. Eastern and Southern Tribes, which represents 50. It was supported by five New Mexico Pueblos, including the Jicarilla Apache Tribe of New Mexico, the National Tribal Environmental Council, which represents 180 tribes, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

I pulled that back yesterday to refine some of the language but will be reintroducing it shortly—tomorrow or as soon as I can, as soon as we revise a little bit of the language.

Let me point out this chart I have over here. Under existing law, current law, we have a real disparity among tribes. Tribes are treated like individuals in that, if they own land and want to develop the land for minerals or oil or gas, they could do it without complying with NEPA as individual owners or States can. If the Secretary gets involved by virtue of the tribe signing some agreement with an outside entity, she has to then approve the lease or not approve the lease.

What has happened is that wealthy tribes have had the ability to develop their own resources. I live on one reservation, the Southern Ute Reservation, and they do that; they don't have to comply with NEPA. Most tribes are not that wealthy and have to seek an outside partner. Basically, that puts them at a terrific disadvantage for developing their own resources.

I will not go into all resources now under Indian land because I did go through that the other day, but it is very clear that a great deal of American unutilized oil, natural gas, coal, and other minerals are under Indian land now. We are talking about a people who have 70 percent unemployment in some cases, so they definitely need the jobs and help as well as America needs the energy to become less dependent on foreign energy.

In any event, let me go through the Bingaman amendment a little, if I may. We spoke about 2604 primarily. As I understand it, and as I believe, Senator BINGAMAN's amendment would force the statutory NEPA equivalent upon all tribes. As it is now, some are not required to go through NEPA, as I just mentioned.

Also, it will create an unfunded mandate that will completely defeat the goal of facilitating energy development on tribal lands and diminish tribal sovereignty.

I take strong issue with another aspect of the Bingaman amendment having to do with the liability of the United States for tribal decisions. Under title III, along with the power to create approved leases, agreements, and rights-of-ways without Secretarial approval, the tribes have the responsibility for the decisions they make.

Mr. BINGAMAN's amendment in effect de-links the two, eliminating the language that says the Secretary will not be liable for losses arising under the terms of the leases the tribe negotiates on its own. That would mean he would keep the Secretary on the hook for those losses arising from lease terms negotiated by the tribe, even though the Secretary had nothing to do with the negotiations. I don't think that is very good policy, frankly.

Paradoxically, Senator BINGAMAN's amendments would give the Secretary of the Interior authority to negotiate a tribe's remedies against the United States for breach of its duties under the tariff on a tribe-by-tribe basis.

I know of one tribe—I believe two now—the Navajo, that supported the Bingaman amendment but opposes this one. But I think it has very little to do with section 2604. It has more to do with court cases recently which did not go their way. As I understand it, they really want some language that would effectively bail them out of losing that court case.

The vast majority of tribes support the amendment that I introduced the other day.

I think it is a particularly dangerous idea. In some instances, speaking of the Secretary's obligations, the Secretary might effectively negotiate away her obligations, although by including a provision that says the tribe will have no remedies against the United States, the Bingaman amendment expressly allows her to do that without limitation.

Do the obligations referred to in the Bingaman amendment include the trust obligation? They must because there are no obligations on the part of the Secretary mentioned in his amendment other than duty to conduct annual trust evaluations.

I point out that in the amendment I offered the other day, in section 2604 there was some question about whether it decreased trust responsibility. I know my colleagues can read as I can. Let me read, on page 14, section (6)(a), line 19:

> Nothing in this section shall absolve the United States from any responsibility to Indians or Indian tribes, including those which derive from the trust relationship or from any treaties, Executive Orders, or agreements between the United States and any Indian tribe.
> The Secretary shall continue to have trust obligation to ensure the rights of an Indian tribe are protected in the event of a violation of Federal law or the terms of any lease, business agreement or right-of-way under this section or any other party to any such lease, business agreement or right-of-way.

Under the amendment which I introduced and which I will reintroduce, these trust responsibilities are very well protected.

Finally, Senator BINGAMAN's amendment would sunset section 2604 in 7 years. I think that has somewhat of a chilling effect. First of all, if a tribe wants to avail itself of section 2604 as an alternative to the status quo, it will have to make considerable effort to develop this relationship and agreement to demonstrate its capacity to be able to develop its minerals resources.

Under the Bingaman amendment, the alternative procedure would evaporate in 7 years. Very frankly, the tribe advances to self-determination would evaporate right with it. I think that would effectively prevent any tribe from pursuing the section 2604 alternatives.

Senator BINGAMAN, as I understand his amendment, believes that section 2604 effectively waives NEPA. It does not. The language in the amendment expressly states that the Secretary must review the direct effects of her approving agreement under the provisions of NEPA. That means even though the tribe, when it is making agreements with an outside entity, will have to comply with NEPA upfront, before the Secretary can approve that agreement, she has to subscribe and conform to all NEPA provisions.

The other provisions in the section require an opportunity for public and local governmental input and comment.

The Senator mentioned some opposition from local communities. This is also taken care of under 2604, and it must ensure compliance with all applicable environmental laws in 2604.

The Bingaman amendment also states that there is a tribal concern for section 2604 as it undermines the trust responsibility. I have already dealt with that.

But, clearly, the United States is only held harmless from losses arriving from terms negotiated by a tribe operating under an approved agreement. Hopefully, as we move forward, we will be able to deal with the Navajo problem.

I understand the Navajo. It is a very important tribe. And I have many friends in the tribe who are very willing to do that.

Very frankly, when we talk about the responsibility of the Federal Government to Indians, let me go back a little bit and refresh my colleagues' memory about how tough they have had it in this Nation.

This Government, as you know, took by hook or crook—and usually at gunpoint—roughly 98 percent of all the land from the American Indians. This Government also reduced the very proud, independent people to the poorest ethnic group in America with the highest unemployment rate, the highest degree of poor health, the highest high school dropout rate, and the highest suicide rate among any other group. This Government also has time and again told the Indians: We know what is best for you whether you like it or not.

That is basically what I think the Bingaman amendment does. We will stifle your religious beliefs, destroy your culture, relocate and relegate you to a life of poverty and deprivation, as happened in the 1950s under the Terminations Act and the Relocation Act. We will drive you through a time bordering on ethnic cleansing, and we will not let you be a citizen in your own land—until 1924. That is when Indians got the right to vote in the United States.

Through all of those years, the few threads of hope Indians clung to were that they would not lose what little they had left. And a few things that gave them hope were closely held beliefs about so-called Mother Earth, their belief in a creator, and that all things will get better. And one in particular was that U.S. Government promise; that promise is called ''trust responsibility.''

For the past 30 years, since the Nixon Doctrine of Self-Determination, American Indians have been making small strides. But in their culture, they are rather big gains considering how far they have come. It has been an endless struggle to try to share in the same American dream that Members of this body take for granted.

In my view, the Bingaman amendment would literally strip tribes of 30 years of that direction of self-determination and would circumvent the trust responsibilities this Government has to tribes because it would force the statutory equivalent of NEPA on all decisions they make with their own land. As I mentioned, it is an unfunded mandate.

I say to my colleagues in this body that if you want to keep American Indians on their knees, unable to provide jobs for their families and facing a dead end future, then vote for the Bingaman amendment. If you believe that fairness should be right for all Americans, including Indians, to do best what they can with their own resources and for their own people, vote against the Bingaman amendment and help me craft a better alternative, which is the one I mentioned that I introduced and pulled back and which I am going to reintroduce, and which already has the support of the vast majority of Indian people in this Nation.

I yield the floor. I thank my colleague, Senator DOMENICI, for giving me time.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, how much time do we have on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Ten minutes 30 seconds.

Mr. DOMENICI. I will use 7 minutes and leave 3 minutes.

First, I congratulate the distinguished Senator CAMPBELL from the State of Colorado. I don't believe I could say it any better.

In a nutshell, the Bingaman amendment is not good for the Indians in the United States. If we are crafting a bill here that says we want them to develop their energy resources, the amendment before us takes the unprecedented step of applying the NEPA process to the Indian tribes just as if they were the Federal Government.

This amendment goes well beyond current environmental regulations and adds unnecessary regulations and costs to the tribal energy projects.

This proposal is opposed by numerous Indian tribes and tribal associations that are already burdened by the lease approval process through the Federal bureaucracy.

I will read a list of Indian tribes and associations that I would assume do not favor the Bingaman amendment because they were in favor of the amendment alluded to by the distinguished Senator, Mr. CAMPBELL, with whom I was going to cosponsor, for they all refer to it:

The National Congress of American Indians, the Council of Energy Resource Tribes, National Tribal Environmental Council, Southern Ute Tribe, Cherokee Nation, Chickasaw Nation, Native American Energy Group, Mohegan Tribe, Five Sandoval Indian Pueblos, Dine Power Corporation, Jicarilla Apache Nation, and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

I ask unanimous consent that this list be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TRIBAL LETTER SUPPORTING CAMPBELL/DOMENICI AMENDMENT TO TITLE III

1. National Congress of American Indians (NCAI)—Is the largest and oldest Tribal organization.
2. Council of Energy Resource Tribes (CERT)—Represents over 50 tribes interested in developing energy resources.
3. National Tribal Environmental Council—Represents 180 tribes on environmental matters.
4. Southern Ute Tribe (Colorado).
5. Cherokee Nation (Oklahoma).
6. Chicasaw Nation (Oklahoma).
7. Native American Energy Group (Wyoming).
8. Mohegan Tribe (Connecticut).
9. Five Sandoval Indian Pueblos (New Mexico).
10. Dine Power Corporation—A Navajo Corporation (New Mexico, Arizona).
11. Jicarilla Apache Nation (New Mexico).
12. U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the amendment will do the following:

It will force the tribes to pay the cost of NEPA, extend the bureaucratic delays of energy projects, and diminish tribal sovereignty.

There isn't a tribe in the country that would volunteer for this program because it doesn't do anything to improve their current process. So why would they volunteer to join it?

I am confused by the purpose of the amendment. If the intention is to mandate that the tribes comply with NEPA for every single lease or permit, why not offer an amendment to strike the entire Indian energy title and argue for the status quo?

This amendment goes far beyond existing law and expands NEPA beyond the scope of the Federal Government to cover tribes, independent of any Federal action.

By requiring an environmental impact statement to be performed for every lease, it will impose a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars to be financed by the tribes. A cost they should not have to afford.

If adopted, the amendment would encourage the generation of paper, not the generation of natural gas and crude oil and coal, which I thought we were supposed to do here.

The objective of title III has to be to help the tribes by streamlining current lease approval processes that have hampered investment and the development of the Indian tribal lands as far as energy is concerned.

Senator CAMPBELL and I have worked closely with the tribes to craft a careful compromise that will protect the trust responsibility of the Secretary and the environment. That bill will be offered later, but it is not the bill pending before the Senate. It is a bill you will know because it will bear the name of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, Senator CAMPBELL.

The Secretary's approval of the tribes' energy resource agreement will trigger NEPA if the Secretary of the Interior believes it will have a significant impact on the environment. Once an energy resource agreement is approved, tribes will not be required to seek Secretarial approval but will be required to comply with relevant environmental laws, just like any other landowner.

Senator CAMPBELL and I have worked with tribes to ensure that the trust relationship between tribes and the Secretary of the Interior is protected.

This proposal is embodied in the Campbell-Domenici amendment which will be offered at a later date.

The Bingaman amendment, however, would require the Secretary of the Interior to take full responsibility for all liability incurred by tribes—even if the Secretary wasn't party to the negotiations. That simply doesn't make sense.

However, a separate and conflicting provision in this amendment allows the Secretary to negotiate all remedies to the Secretary's trust responsibility in the energy resource agreement.

As I read it this will give the Secretary authority to drive a hard bargain with individual tribes that are desperate to gain the Secretary's approval of their energy resource agreement. Of course, this will vary from tribe to tribe and further confuse the trust issues.

I believe a more simple solution is to ensure that tribes take full responsibility for the leases and business agreements they negotiate. The Secretary will not be liable for anything she is not a party to, but will continue to conduct annual trust evaluation to ensure that the assets are protected.

Such a solution as included in the Campbell amendment has the support of many tribes.

I am not aware that the administration has reviewed the Bingaman amendment and I am not aware of how many tribes support Senator BINGAMAN's amendment.

The current system has failed to stimulate investment on Indian land, despite the resource potential.

The Bingaman amendment will only exacerbate this problem and continue to restrict the quest for Tribal self-determination.

I urge my colleagues to oppose the Bingaman amendment.

I will state, I would not be offering these kinds of remarks in any normal situation regarding the relationship between the Indian people, the Federal Government, and third parties. But clearly when you have an energy bill, and the purpose of the bill is to have a section in it that will encourage, will cause, will say to the Indian people, we want you to be players, participants, owners of energy, so that you can be part of America's energy solutions and become owners in that solution, then I think we cannot adopt the laws that are as restrictive as the ones proposed in the amendment that is pending.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAHAM of South Carolina). The Senator from Hawaii.

Mr. INOUYE. Mr. President, I rise this moment to speak in favor of an amendment proposed by my dear friend from New Mexico, Senator BINGAMAN.

I find it rather uncomfortable and sad that my remarks may be counter to that of my colleague from New Mexico, my dear friend, Mr. DOMENICI, and my colleague, the chairman of the Indian Affairs Committee.

Mr. President, as you know, there is a longstanding relationship between the United States and the sovereign Indian nations that won exercise, exclusive dominion, and control over lands that now comprise our great country.

The large body of Federal Indian law is known as trust responsibility, and it was first given expression by the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, John Marshall, in 1832. This relationship is premised upon the sovereignty of the Indian nations, a sovereignty that existed well before the U.S. Government was formed, and it is memorialized in the United States Constitution.

This trust relationship that has always formed the course of dealings between the U.S. and Indian tribes is well understood and beyond debate. The United States holds legal title to lands that it held in trust for Indian tribes. Accordingly, activities affecting Indian lands and resources have always been subject to approval by the Secretary of the Interior Department, acting as the principal agent for the United States. That is the law of the land.

In the Congress, we have always understood the United States trust responsibility as being derived from treaties, statutes, regulations, executive orders, rulings, and agreements between the Federal Government and Indian tribal governments. We have legislated on this basis. The courts have issued rulings on this basis. And until recently the executive branch has premised policy on this basis and promulgated regulations on this fundamental principle of law.

However, in the arguments before the U.S. Supreme Court earlier this year, the Government took the position that the duties of the U.S., as trustee for Indian lands and resources, exist only as they may be spelled out in statute, and are legally enforceable only if a statute provides a remedy for any breach of the trust.

The Supreme Court accepted the Government's argument that the duties of the trustee must be spelled out in statute, but ruled that as long as the Government had complete management control over the trust land or trust resources at issue, then the trustee's duties could be legally enforced and there could be a damage remedy for a breach of the Government's trust duties.

Tribal governments are also paying keen attention to the arguments that are being advanced by the Government in pending legislation over the management of funds which are held in trust by the United States for individual Indians and Indian tribes. Most of us have heard of the assertions in this case in which it maintained that the Government is unable to account for more than $2 billion in Indian trust funds.

With the Government's advocacy for a new perspective on the United States trust responsibility, it is readily apparent why the eyes of Indian country are sharply focused on the tribal provisions of this bill and the amendments that are the subject of our discussion today.

Native America wants to see what position the Congress will adopt as it relates to the ongoing viability of the trust relationship. They are closely scrutinizing our words and our actions in the context of this measure to determine whether they signal a departure from the traditional and well-established principles of the United States trust responsibility.

That is why I believe it is incumbent upon us to make sure we understand what is at stake in this debate. There has always been, and likely always will be, a tension between a greater measure of tribal control and a diminished Federal presence in Indian country, one that has to be reconciled in each distinct area. But the reality is that as long as the United States holds legal title to Indian lands, the Federal Government and tribal governments will have to work together on these matters.

Not all tribal governments have managed their resources, and not all of those who do seek to develop those resources. But for those that do, we well understand that they would want to reduce the amount of time that is customarily involved in securing the Secretary's approval of leases of tribal land and grants of right of way over Indian lands.

Can this be accomplished without altering or diminishing the trust relationship? I believe it can. The tribal industry resource agreements that are authorized, the amendment that we consider today, can serve as an instrument for defining and adapting this relationship to accommodate the unique circumstances of each tribe's energy resource development objectives.

But should the United States trust responsibility for Indian lands and resources be waived? I am not aware of any tribal government that supports an unlimited waiver of the United States trust responsibility. Certainly, one of the largest land-based tribes in the United States, the Navajo Nation, has made it clear that it will not countenance such a waiver.

Indian country has a long history and a long memory. That history documents the sad reality that there have been too many times in the past when those who did not have the best interests of Indian country in mind have exploited tribal lands and resources and then walked away.

In those instances, tribal governments and the United States shared a common interest in addressing the damage to tribal lands and in pursuing those who caused the damage.

Mr. President, I think it is clear that the provisions of this title as currently formulated, and if not further amended, will foreclose the cause of action when there is damage to tribal lands. So I join my colleague, Senator BINGAMAN, in sponsoring this amendment because I believe strongly in Federal Indian responsibility for Indian lands, and the resources must be maintained and strengthened, not diminished.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Colorado is recognized.

Mr. CAMPBELL. How much time do we have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has consumed 16 minutes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. We have 20 minutes; correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the understanding of the Chair that no agreement has been reached about the time limit on this amendment.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I will just make a couple of comments. Senator INOUYE and I have been friends for a great number of years. When he was chairman, and now as the ranking member, we have worked on an awful lot of Indian legislation together.

With all due respect, I think he might be mistaken about what 2604 did. In fact, maybe something else, too, and that is simply this. Tribes, generally, if they are not absolutely sure of themselves when they enter into agreements, or when they are dealing with the Federal Government, hire pretty sophisticated attorneys to do the research for them. All of these different groups, including the National Congress of American Indians, representing over 300 tribes; the Council of Energy Resource Tribes, representing over 50 tribes; the U.S. Eastern and Southern Tribes, representing over 50 tribes; the Pueblos of New Mexico; the Jicarilla Apache Tribe of New Mexico; and the National Tribal Environmental Council have had attorneys look at 2604 and, clearly, none of them has said anything about erosion of trust responsibility because—and I mentioned earlier—it is stated in 2604, on page 14, line 18 through page 15, line 3, that, if anything, tribal trust relationship is strengthened under 2604, which is the amendment I introduced the other day and am going to reintroduce.

Unlike the Bingaman amendment, which I think, frankly, weakens trust responsibility—as near as I can tell, the language in his amendment weakens it. That is one of the questions: which one strengthens it and which one weakens it? My belief is that 2604 would be strengthened with the language I will be reintroducing.

The other one is NEPA. I do not believe, frankly, that tribes are off the hook for NEPA unless they want to develop resources with their own money on their own land without outside agreements or Secretarial approval. Once the Secretary looks into it, or agrees to take it up after they have reached some negotiated agreement, she has to conform with all NEPA requirements. That is clear in 2604. Nobody is off the hook from NEPA for trust responsibility.

One more thing. Under 2604, which hasn't been mentioned, and the amendment that I introduced and will reintroduce, no tribe needs to participate in this agreement at all. It is totally voluntary, tribe by tribe. Senator BINGAMAN mentioned that the Navajo Nation was not supportive of 2604 and my amendment. That is all right; they don't have to participate. This is open for the tribes that want to, and those that do not want to don't have to.

As I understand the Bingaman amendment, they are all going to be caught in the same net. That is, they will all be required to come up with the money, as Senator DOMENICI mentioned, to subscribe to NEPA even before they reach an agreement. They don't have the money to do that. All it is going to do is prevent tribes from moving forward in this Nation.

I have no further comments. I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I thought we agreed to 20 minutes on each side.

Mr. BINGAMAN. That is my understanding. I was hoping we would have a vote right away. How much time remains on each side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has consumed 20 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. They want to set it aside and go to the Burma measure. We had 20 minutes on each side, but they want to proceed to the Burma debate and vote, stacked, with yours going first.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I thought the agreement was that we would have a vote on ours.

Mr. DOMENICI. They want to stack them.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we entered into an agreement, and we all thought there was going to be a vote following this 40 minutes of debate. The majority leader was not part of that agreement. In deference to him, we will not push our 40-minute vote. We will agree to go to that. That time is gone now, isn't it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority has used 20 minutes.

Mr. BINGAMAN. We were anxious to get a vote. Senator SCHUMER wanted to be here for a vote. He had to leave. He indicates he will have to leave.

Mr. REID. He has left.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I request that we do our vote so he can be here later on. Is that acceptable?

Mr. DOMENICI. What was the request again?

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. How much time would remain on our side if we had entered into that agreement?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Two minutes.

Mr. BINGAMAN. I will use those 2 minutes.

Mr. President, the underlying bill, which we are trying to amend here, has in it really clear language that essentially lets the Secretary of the Interior off the hook. It eliminates responsibilities that the Secretary of the Interior would otherwise have. It says the United States shall not be liable for any loss or injury sustained by any party, including an Indian tribe, or any member of an Indian tribe, to a lease, business agreement, right-of-way, executed in accordance with the tribal energy resource agreements approved under this subsection.

Then it says that on approval of a tribal energy resource agreement of an Indian tribe, under paragraph 1, the Indian tribe shall be estopped from asserting a claim against the United States on the grounds that the Secretary should not have approved this agreement.

That is a clear statement by the Congress—if that becomes law—that the Secretary of the Interior is off the hook. This may be on Indian trust land. It may be that the Secretary of the Interior is the trustee of that Indian trust land. We are saying in this language—if we don't amend it by the amendment Senator INOUYE and I have prepared, we are saying that the Secretary of the Interior is off the hook and the Indian tribe has no one to go to for any kind of remedy. I don't think we intend to do that.

Senator INOUYE and I have put together an amendment we believe keeps trust responsibility with the Federal Government, where it should be. It sets up a good procedure that the tribe can work with the Federal Government. The tribe still has decisions, makes decisions over these energy development projects, but clearly the Federal Government needs to be part of that and needs to have responsibility for seeing that decisions are in the best interest of the tribe.

Mr. President, I think this is a good amendment. I hope that once we do get to a vote, whenever that occurs, we will see this amendment adopted. It will strengthen the bill, and I hope very much we can approve it.

I yield the floor.

Mr. JEFFORDS. I rise in support of the amendment offered by Senator BINGAMAN.

His amendment does not go as far as I would wish, because it does not fully preserve the integrity of NEPA or the Endangered Species Act.

These two Federal statutes, which are under the jurisdiction of the Environment and Public Works Committee, have been cornerstones for the protection of environmental quality for decades. Section 2604 of the bill negates or weakens application of these laws to most energy development on tribal lands.

Section 2604 would allow tribes to grant leases or rights-of-way for mineral development, electric generation, transmission or distribution facilities or facilities to process energy resources of any sort on tribal lands.

The tribes could do this without the approval of the Secretary of the Interior.

This would effectively remove the current legislative authority of the Department of the Interior over these matters.

Under existing law, the oversight of the Secretary of the Interior over energy development on tribal lands triggers a variety of Federal permitting requirements which will ensure that NEPA, section 7 of the Endangered Species Act, and a variety of other Federal laws will apply to these activities.

Removal of the Secretary's approval authority over many of these actions would have a number of consequences.

First, it would mean that Federal NEPA laws would no longer apply. It would also mean that the section 7 Federal consultation provisions of the Endangered Species Act would cease to apply.

This is particularly significant in that tribal lands are often adjacent to some of the most protected and pristine Federal lands, including wildlife refuges, wilderness areas, and National Parks. Wholesale changes in the application of the Federal mineral leasing and development laws—and potentially a host of environmental laws—to tribal lands, could have significant impacts on adjacent sensitive lands, air quality, water quality and wildlife.

Because of their sovereign immunity and special trust status, tribes are also generally exempt from many State environmental and other laws, to which private lands are subject.

Section 2604 represents a sweeping reversal of years and years of established environmental and energy laws, many of which are within the jurisdiction of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee. Our committee has never held hearings on this, nor had the opportunity to examine the extent to which this language would weaken or amend Federal environmental laws, or laws relating to the development of commercial nuclear power.

My preference would be to insert language which I filed yesterday, which would clarify that Federal environmental and nuclear laws would continue to apply to these tribal lands, regardless of removing the approval of the Secretary of the Interior under the Indian Mineral Development Act.

However, because I think that the language offered by Senator BINGAMAN has a greater chance for success, I will vote in favor of his amendment.

At a minimum, his amendment would remove any implicit waiver of Federal environmental laws and would create an environmental review process to be conducted by tribes to ensure at least some modicum of public involvement in what could possibly be massive energy development on tribal lands.

Section 2604 creates an unprecedented lack of Federal oversight for development with potentially massive environmental impacts, and I urge my colleagues to adopt Senator BINGAMAN's amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, we yield back our time on our side. I move to table the Bingaman amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) is necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote ''nay''.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. COLLINS). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 52, nays 47, as follows:

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I thank my colleagues for voting for this on the last motion to table. I know it is a difficult vote for some of my colleagues. I want to reintroduce tomorrow the amendment I spoke to earlier. I want to assure Senator BINGAMAN and Senator INOUYE, who have worked on a lot of different Indian issues with us in the past, that if the language on trust is not strong enough, I will be more than happy to review that and work with you to make it even stronger and also to try to clarify the language dealing with NEPA.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—S. 1215

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the Senate now proceed to the consideration of S. 1215, the Burma sanctions bill; that there then be 60 minutes of debate equally divided under the control of myself and the Democratic leader or his designee; further, that no amendments be in order other than a substitute amendment and a technical amendment to that substitute. I ask unanimous consent that following the debate time and the disposition of the above amendments, the bill be read a third time and the Senate proceed to a vote on the passage of the bill, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DOMENICI. Reserving the right to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I will have none. But when the matters that have just been agreed upon have been completed, we will then have another amendment on the Energy bill. It will be offered by the distinguished Democratic Senator from Florida with reference to an inventory of the Outer Continental Shelf assets, inventory that is provided for in the bill. He will move that be taken out. That will be debated tonight and voted on tomorrow.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, the two leaders have indicated that we would have more debate on that in the morning, however, on the offshore oil inventory. I don't know what time they are going to schedule a vote, but I think it will be sometime in the morning and that will be worked out later tonight.

Mr. DOMENICI. I would like to comment, before we proceed, just a further 30 seconds?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. We have been working very hard to get a complete list—I think we are very close—of amendments we can agree to and put at the desk. As everybody knows, a lot is riding on this Energy bill: a full ethanol package; soon there will be the renewables that many are relying on in this country which have extenders that are required that are part of the tax amendments that are going to go on this bill. Those are providing for the existing—continuation of the renewables in the area of wind and Sun and others. If we do not get the bill moving, none of that moves along.

So I do ask all Senators who have amendments to concur that they can write them up, get them in, get them on this list so we know where we are and when we might look for daylight on this bill. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Madam President, I say to the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, the chairman of the committee, we have a list on our side. We are now waiting. Tentative lists have been exchanged by the two sides. As far as we are concerned, we are ready at any time to enter into that agreement. We do have a finite list of amendments. As soon as we get a finite list of amendments from the majority, a unanimous consent agreement could go forward at that time.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, I thank the distinguished Senator for his cooperation. That is a true statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request of the assistant Republican leader? Without objection, it is so ordered.

BURMESE FREEDOM AND DEMOCRACY ACT OF 2003

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1215) to sanction the ruling Burmese military junta, to strengthen Burma's democratic forces and support and recognize the National League of Democracy as the legitimate representative of the Burmese people, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant Republican leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, the situation in Burma is indeed dire and requires our immediate response. We will make that response within the next hour.

S. 1215, which is now the pending business in the Senate, has 56 cosponsors. I particularly want to thank Senator FEINSTEIN, who will be speaking on this measure, and Senator MCCAIN, who have had a particular interest in this subject for quite some time.

Until yesterday, Aung San Suu Kyi and other democracy activists have been held incommunicado by the repressive State Peace and Development Council, SPDC, following an ambush on her convoy several hundred kilometers north of Rangoon. Scores are feared murdered and injured in this blatant assault on democracy in Burma.

In the 11th hour of his trip to Rangoon, the SPDC finally allowed U.N. Special Envoy Razali Ismail a 15-minute meeting with Suu Kyi. We are all relieved that his initial statements indicate that she is alive and unharmed, but the fate of other activists arrested remains unknown.

But simply seeing is not freeing. Razali's meeting with Suu Kyi was not a private one and she remains under the total control of SPDC thugs. Her continued silence in the wake of this bloodshed could not be more deafening, nor—despite Razali's brief visit—her predicament more pressing.

Horrific details of the attack continue to emerge and heighten the need for a swift and decisive response to the SPDC's brutality.

According to Monday's front-page article in the Washington Post, in the ''pitch dark amid the rice paddies'' thugs posing as Buddhist monks stopped Suu Kyi's car. Soon after, a crowd ''set upon her convey, attacking the entourage with wooden clubs and bamboo spikes. . . . Several hundred more assailants ambushed the motorcade from the rear.''

This is no simple act of harassment or intimidation. It was an act of terrorism against innocent civilians who simply believe in democracy and the rule of law in Burma.

The free world and free press have been quick to condemn the SPDC. But strong words from foreign capitals must be matched by stronger actions.

Last week, I introduced the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003, along with Senators FEINSTEIN and MCCAIN. As I indicated earlier, we now have 56 cosponsors. I ask unanimous consent that the list be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1215 COSPONSORS

Akaka, Alexander, Allard, Allen, Baucus, Bennett, Biden, Bingaman, Boxer, Breaux, Brownback, Bunning, Burns, Chambliss, Clinton, Coleman, Collins, Corzine, Daschle, Dayton, Dole, Domenici, Dorgan, Durbin, Edwards, Feingold, Feinstein, Frist, and Grassley.

Hagel, Harkin, Hutchison, Jeffords, Kennedy, Kerry, Kyl, Lautenberg, Leahy, Levin, Lieberman, Lugar, McCain, Mikulski, Murkowski, Murray, Nelson, Ben (Nebraska), Reid, Rockefeller, Santorum, Sarbanes, Schumer, Smith, Specter, Stabenow, Voinovich, and Wyden.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, this bill, among other sanctions, imposes a ban on imports from Burma.

I am pleased that many of my colleagues—including the majority and minority leaders of the Senate and the chairmen and ranking members of the Senate Foreign Relations and Finance Committees—are cosponsors of this important legislation.

Let me share with my colleagues some of the feedback we have gotten from around the country on the act:

An editorial in today's Los Angeles Times stated:

[Burma's] trading partners, other countries in the region and aid givers like Japan need to get tougher by imposing sanctions and aid suspensions to push the country toward democracy; that's the outcome Myanmar's citizens show they favor every time they get the chance.

By the way, they haven't gotten a chance since 1990.

A Washington Post editorial yesterday advised that because Burmese dictators ''control the nation' economy, an import ban would affect those most responsible for Burma's repression, and senators supportive of democracy in Asia should vote for the bill without conditions or expiration dates.''

Deputy Secretary of State Rich Armitage recently wrote:

. . . we support the goal and intent of this legislation and agree on the need for many similar measures. . . . We are also considering an import ban, as proposed in your legislation.

A June 6 editorial in the Washington Post suggested that:

While the [Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act] moves through Congress, Mr. Bush could implement many of its provisions by executive order. He could find no better way to demonstrate his commitment to democracy and his revulsion at a brutal dictatorship.

A New York Times editorial endorsed the import ban and recommended that:

Europe . . . should now block Myanmar's exports as well. The junta has had a year to demonstrate that its opening was genuine. Now all ambiguity is gone, and the world's response must be equally decisive.

A Boston Globe editorial stated that President Bush:

. . . could and should issue an executive order that would swiftly accomplish [an import ban]. This is not a partisan matter. The great lesson that ought to have been learned in the last century is that free democrats betray their unfree brothers and sisters when they seek to appease dictatorships.

Dallas Morning News editor at large Rena Pederson, who also penned a superb article on this topic in the Weekly Standard, wrote in an op-ed:

The strongest possible pressure must be turned on the Burmese generals, who apparently calculated their opposition could be decapitated while the world was preoccupied with events in the Middle East. They shouldn't be allowed to get away with such a cowardly fast one. The Bush administration should support tougher sanctions now. Senator Mitch McConnell, R–KY., is pushing for increased sanctions.

That is the bill we have before us.

''He will need help . . .''

And we obviously are going to have help with 56 cosponsors, and I hope a very overwhelming vote shortly.

''He will need help, or the Bush administration could accomplish the same thing by executive order.''

A Baltimore Sun editorial rightly concluded: ''. . . this regime ought to be treated somewhat like North Korea, from which imports have long been barred.''

Finally, in endorsing the act, the American Apparel and Footwear Association called upon ''the rest of Congress for the swift and immediate passage of such import legislation.''

The idea of a ban on imports from Burma is not a new one to this body. In the 107th Congress, S. 926 sought to impose such restrictions and was cosponsored by 21 Senators. I would offer that the need for an important ban has only become more urgent in the wake of the May 30 attack on democracy in Burma.

Supporters of a free Burma want America to take the lead in defending democracy in that country.

Supporters of a free Burma believe that serving the cause of freedom is America's challenge and obligation. We should not abandon the people of Burma during the greatest moments of need. The people of Burma have made their aspirations known, and the regime has not silenced them into submission. They have not stilled their hearts for political change and they will not succeed in stemming our collective resolve.

Supporters of a free Burma agree with President Bush that:

Men and women in every culture need liberty like they need food and water and air. Everywhere that freedom arrives, humanity rejoices: and everywhere that freedom stirs, let tyrants fear.

It's time for tyrants to fear in Burma.

I ask unanimous consent that the following items be printed in the RECORD: a Washington Post article dated June 9; a letter from Under Secretary of State Rich Armitage; editorials from the Los Angeles Times, and the Baltimore Sun, and a Rena Pederson article in the Weekly Standard.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ATTACK ON BURMESE ACTIVIST SEEN AS WORK OF MILITARY

(By Alan Sipress and Ellen Nakashima)

BANGKOK, June 8.—Burmese opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi's motorcade was rattling along a pocked one-lane road near Mandalay in Northern Burma after the sunset when a pair of men, disguised in the burnt orange robes of Buddhist monks, motioned for it to stop. They asked her to alight and make an impromptu speech to at least 100 people gathered at a narrow bridge over a creek and blocking her way, according to Burmese exiles who spoke with witnesses. But she was running late. It was already pitch dark amid the rice paddies.

When one of her bodyguards, a young unarmed man, got out of the four-wheel-drive vehicle to convey Suu Kyi's regrets, the crowd set upon her convoy, attacking the entourage with wooden clubs and bamboo spikes, according to the exiles and diplomats who also have spoken to witnesses. Several hundred more assailants ambushed the motorcade from the rear.

By the time the battle was over late in the evening of May 30, at least four of Suu Kyi's bodyguards were dead. Burmese exiles and diplomats said scores of her supporters were also probably killed. And Suu Kyi, the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize laureate, suffered head and shoulder injuries, they said, when her car windows were shattered and she was detained by Burmese soldiers along with at least 17 supporters.

U.S. and other diplomats have concluded that the attack was an ambush orchestrated by Burma's military rulers and carried out by a pro-government militia reinforced by specially trained prison inmates.

Suu Kyi, 57, has remained in custody, incommunicado and out of public sight ever since, prompting protests from the United Nations, the United States other governments.

The attack was not only a stunning bid to intimidate Suu Kyi and deflate a pro-democracy movement that over recent months had been attracting larger and larger crowds despite mounting governmental harassment, according to exiles and diplomats in Rangoon and Bangkok. It was also an effort by Burma's top leader, Gen. Than Shwe, who had been consolidating control in recent months, to make clear he had lost patience with those in the military advocating dialogue with Suu Kyi.

''This was a brutal power play to show them who is in charge here,'' a European diplomat said. ''This was a message from Than Shwe to the softies in the military that you [had] better watch out. You are not to tolerate Aung San Suu Kyi.''

Although supporters of political reform have despaired of progress for months, the attack outside Mandalay—the bloodiest confrontation since Burma crushed a pro-democracy uprising in 1988—could mark the end to the spring of hope that began almost exactly one year ago.

Under intense international pressure, the Burmese government had released Suu Kyi from house arrest in May 2002. Some high-ranking military officers had calculated that Suu Kyi's popularity had faded during her detention and that she no longer posed the same threat as she had in 1990 when her party, the National League for Democracy, won a landslide election victory, Burmese and other analysts said. Those results were voided by the military, plunging Burma into its current political crisis and a decade of international isolation.

The Burmese government, however, discovered that Suu Kyi still attracted jubilant crowds when she traveled the country reopening nearly 200 local offices for her party. Tens of thousands turned out to chant her name. Many supporters walked miles to see her. Increasingly, her rallies drew Buddhist monks, who command great respect in Burmese society, further alarming the military.

''They are worried that despite all the threats they can employ against the pro-democracy movement, people are continuing to go out and see Aung San Suu Kyi,'' said Win Min, a Burmese researcher who studies civilian-military relations.

Suu Kyi, who has always preached reconciliation, was also becoming openly critical of the government's unwillingness to engage in meaningful dialogue for a political settlement. The optimism that accompanied her release from house arrest had long dissipated.

These developments were an affront to Than Shwe, the junta's leader, who so loathes Suu Kyi that, as one European diplomat said, he ''hates even to hear her name mentioned.''

Than Shwe, 70, chairman of the ruling State Peace and Development Council and armed forces commander, has moved since last year to strengthen his grip on power. He has beefed up the United Solidarity and Development Association, the pro-government militia that witnesses said attacked Suu Kyi's motorcade. He has manipulated the military, government and courts to weaken his leading rivals while placing his loyalists in influential post, said diplomats and Burmese exiles.

''Than Shwe has been taking his time,'' said Zin Linn of the opposition National Coalition Government of the Union of Burma. ''He has purged many of the senior military men who are soft-liners and are in some way impressed with Aung San Suu Kyi'' and Tin Oo, the vice chairman of her party.

Most notably, Than Shwe's ascent has come at the expense of Gen. Khin Nyunt, 64, the head of military intelligence and a leading advocate of dialogue with Suu Kyi. His patron, former dictator Gen. Ne Win, died in December. While Khin Nyunt remains the third-highest-ranking official in the junta, his authority in running military intelligence has been limited and he has told diplomats that he no longer has a mandate to pursue the reconciliation talks, which had been medicated by U.N. special envoy Razali Ismail.

The dispute pits so-called pragmatists, such as Khin Nyunt, who believe Burma can string out the talks with Suu Kyi while placating foreign governments, against officers urging that the pro-democracy movement be crushed. But diplomats and analysts stress that the military is united in its determination to retain power.

Suu Kyi's recent month-long swing through northern Burma offered an opportunity for Than Shwe to deliver a resounding message to the pragmatists that their moment had passed, diplomats and exiles said.

As expedition to the northernmost state of Kachin, which began May 6, was her seventh road trip since her release. It was meant in part to bolster the morale of loyalists in her party, who were disappointed that the reconciliation talks had ground to a halt, said Debbie Stothard, coordinator of ALTSEAN-Burma, a human rights group in Southeast Asia.

The trips, especially this last, had provoked growing harassment by the government, which has staged protests by machete-wielding activists, blasted music to drown out Suu Kyi's speeches and blocked her way with logs and barbed wire. At least once, a firetruck turned its hoses on her supporters.

If the military wanted to escalate the confrontation, Sagaing Division northwest of Mandalay was a good place, Burmese exiles and diplomats said. This impoverished region is the stronghold of Lt. Gen. Soe Win, a Sagaing native and former military commander in the area. He was promoted by Than Shwe in February to the junta's fourth-highest position. Soe Win is also a leading activist in the militia and had toured several towns earlier this year demanding that dialogue with Suu Kyi be halted.

Diplomats and exiles said they have received reports that Soe Win was at a military headquarters in nearby Monywa either during or shortly before the ambush against Suu Kyi's motorcade. Exiles said they believe he ran the operation.

Military officials knew Suu Kyi was coming. She had been required to give them her itinerary.

''Clearly, orders were given for a violent attack,'' a U.S. Embassy official in Rangoon said.

The following account of the May 30 attack was provided by that official based on the findings of a two-person U.S. Embassy team dispatched to Sagaing Division late last week to investigate the incident. Much of the story has been corroborated by information from witnesses, provided to other diplomats and exiles.

As Suu Kyi's motorcade traveled north toward the town of Dipeyin about two miles from Monywa, it was met by 100 to 200 people at the bridge. Most of them were disguised as monks but shed the costumes when the fighting erupted. About 400 other convicts and militia recruits disguised as monks with shaved heads, and wearing white armbands, blocked the motorcade from behind.

Though Suu Kyi's supporters tried to assuage the mob, the assailants began beating them and smashing the vehicles' windows. Trying to stave off the attack and shelter Suu Kyi, members of her party stood on the road and locked arms.

At the site, the investigating team found bloodied clothes, clubs and spears, broken glass and debris from damaged vehicles.

''It was pretty clear that a big fight had taken place,'' the embassy official said.

The team's findings contradict the brief version provided by the government—that the confrontation lasted two hours and was provoked by Suu Kyi's party. The government said four people were killed and 50 others injured.

The U.S. team reported that gunfire was heard in the middle of the night when the army arrived to clean up the site. According to other accounts, gunshots rang out during or shortly after the clash.

Reports reaching other diplomats and exile groups said Suu Kyi's driver, trying to remove the democracy activist from the melee, gunned the engine as the crowd pounded the car with rocks and other objects. She was detained by security forces farther down the road in Dipeyin.

Tin Oo, 75, the vice chairman of Suu Kyi's party, was assaulted when he left his car, according to Burmese exiles, who have expressed concern about his condition and whereabouts.

Following the attack, the military closed most of the party's offices across Burma, arrested other democracy activists and criticized Suu Kyi's movement in the press. Some suggest that these steps were part of a planned, concerted crackdown, not just a hurried attempt to prevent Suu Kyi's supporters from protesting the attack and arrests. They noted that in the weeks before the incident, 10 activists from the opposition party were arrested and sentenced to prison terms of two to 28 years.

Since the attack, more than 100 party activists have been arrested and at least a dozen imprisoned, said Stothard, coordinator of the human rights group.

Those killed trying to protect Suu Kyi, or ''The Lady,'' as she is popularly known, reportedly included Toe Lwin, 32, a rising star in the party's youth division who held a philosophy degree and was studying English in Rangoon, a Western diplomat said. He was in Suu Kyi's vehicle, wearing his orange opposition party jacket with its red badge emblazoned with a gold fighting peacock. Suu Kyi treated these supporters as ''surrogate sons,'' and saw in them a future generation of political leaders, Stothard said.

Suu Kyi is being held at Yemon military camp, about 25 miles outside Rangoon, without access to her doctor, party members or Western envoys, concerned diplomats said.

''If they lift her incommunicado status, she will speak,'' a European diplomat said. ''She will speak the truth and this will be damaging for them.''

DEPUTY SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington, June 6, 2003.

Hon. MITCH MCCONNELL,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, Committee on Appropriations, U.S. Senate.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: We are outraged by the May 30 attack on Aung San Suu Kyi and her convoy. The deteriorating conditions in Burma are of grave concern to the Administration and we appreciate your leadership in advancing legislation to respond to these events.

The Department of State also appreciates the opportunity to review and comment on the ''Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003 (S. 1182),'' which you introduced on June 4, 2003. We fully support the goal and intent of this legislation and agree on the need for many similar measures. For example, we are working on a unilateral expansion of the visa ban, extending it to all officials of the Union Solidarity Development Association (part of the SPDC) and their immediate families, rather than just to senior officials, as is current practice. We will also be adding managers of the state-run enterprises and their families to the list.

We agree on the need to prevent IFI funds going to the junta. We will continue to use our voice and vote in those institutions to oppose loans that benefit the military regime. We also agree on the need to express strong support for the NLD, and are doing so in every international forum in which the United States participates, including at the UN. Also significant are the findings of the annual Country Report on Human Rights Practices, Trafficking in Persons Report and Report on International Religious Freedom, which identify and strongly condemn known SPDC abuses. The President's Annual Report on Major Drug Transit or Major Illicit Drug Producing Countries has also identified Burma as a country that demonstrably has failed to meet its international obligations regarding narcotics.

In addition to the above efforts, which are already underway, we are determined to pursue additional measures against the regime, including an asset freeze, a possible ban on remittances and, with appropriate legislation, a ban on travel to Burma. We hope to move forward with these measures expeditiously and with the support of the Congress. We are also considering an import ban, as proposed in your legislation. We support the intent behind the ban but are reviewing the proposal in light of our international obligations, including our WTO commitments.

Again, thank you for your leadership on this issue and your commitment to the cause of freedom. We look forward to working with you on the bill.

Sincerely,

RICHARD L. ARMITAGE.

FREEZE MYANMAR ASSETS

The military thugs running Myanmar finally may have opened their eyes to the esteem in which Aung San Suu Kyi is held outside their nation. They already knew how much their oppressed citizens thought of the woman who should be leading the nation formerly known as Burma: The huge numbers greeting her on her journeys around her country provided graphic evidence of her popularity.

Harboring despots' fears of ouster by a charismatic pro-democracy leader, the army rulers arrested Suu Kyi, again, after a deadly attack on her motorcade May 30. However, they let United Nations representative Razali Ismail meet with the democracy activist Tuesday after stalling for days.

Delay is not new for Razali, who has sought for two years to push the nation's autocrats toward democracy. He deserves credit for insisting on a meeting with Suu Kyi, so does his boss, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, who denounces the generals.

In 1947 a political rival assassinated Suu Kyi's father, an architect of the independence movement. Forty years later, his daughter began campaigning against the military regimes that ruled the country for much of its post-independence history. In 1990, she and her party won a parliamentary election but the military scrapped those results and kept her under house arrest. It also refused to let her leave to receive her 1991 Nobel Peace Prize or to be with her husband as he lay dying in England.

But a year ago, the junta let Suu Kyi travel again. Seeing her popularity undimmed, the government organized the May 30 ambush of her motorcade and cited the violence as cause for her arrest. She was held incommunicado until Razali met her. Nearby nations like Thailand and Malaysia feebly protested the assault and arrest.

The U.S. Congress is considering tougher measures to freeze the assets of the Myanmar government held in the United States and to bar the country's leaders from traveling here.

Those steps are warranted unless Suu Kyi is released and allowed to travel freely. The United States and other countries earlier imposed economic sanctions on Myanmar that devastated its economy. Trade with Thailand and China, plus the export of narcotics, has kept it afloat.

The trading partners, other countries in the region and aid givers like Japan need to get tougher by imposing sanctions and aid suspensions to push the country toward democracy; that's the outcome Myanmar's citizens show they favor every time they get the chance.

[From the Baltimore Sun, June 6, 2003]

SQUEEZE THE JUNTA

A top United Nations envoy was to arrive today in Myanmar, formerly known as Burma, and not a moment too soon: Human rights and democracy once again are under siege by the narco-state's ruling military party.

The United Nations is demanding that Yangon's generals release 1991 Nobel Peace Prize laureate Aung San Suu Kyi, arrested Saturday after a violent attack on her pro-democracy party by security forces.

The violence, in which activists allege scores were killed, and the subsequent closing of Myanmar's universities and all of the offices of Ms. Suu Kyi's National League for Democracy mark a sudden darkening of the new dawn proclaimed last May when the military regime last released her from house arrest, promising dialogue with the NLD aimed at national reconciliation.

The renewed repression begs for stronger economic sanctions by the United States to squeeze this illegal junta.

This is a regime that competes with North Korea on human-rights abuses—including long quashing the NLD, a legally elected opposition party. As U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan recently put it, the political aspirations of the Burmese people ''are overwhelming in favor of change.''

In 1990, Ms. Suu Kyi's party crushed the military's candidates in Myanmar's last legal parliamentary election; since then, she has spent much of the time under house arrest. In response, the United States barred new American investments in Myanmar in 1997. But that didn't end the involvement of Unocal Corp., the California energy giant, in a 1995 deal with the junta to extract natural gas off the Burmese coast and transport it via a 250-mile pipeline—a project allegedly built with forced labor and accompanied by military murders and rapes.

As a result, Unocal faces a groundbreaking federal lawsuit brought by international activists for 15 unnamed Burmese villagers under a 1789 U.S. statute allowing lawsuits against U.S. multinational corporations, holding them abroad to the same standards as at home. The outcome could be far-reaching; the Bush administration has weighed in on Unocal's side, arguing that such human-rights cases interfere with U.S. foreign policy and the war on terrorism.

This is precisely the wrong stance. Instead, the U.S. government ought to be moving quickly toward tightening the screws on Myanmar's generals and anyone keeping them afloat financially.

Trade sanctions against Myanmar were proposed last year but dropped when Ms. Suu Kyi was last released. This week, House and Senate bills were entered that call for an import ban and other sanctions, all of which seem fully warranted. Already, a leading U.S. apparel and footwear trade group and many large retailers—from Wal-Mart to Saks—are boycotting Burmese goods.

In other words, this regime ought to be treated somewhat like North Korea, from which imports have long been barred. Granted, Myanmar doesn't pose North Korea's nuclear threat, but it plays such a major role in the world's heroin trade that it's a destabilizing force internationally.

Ms. Suu Kyi is again detained and her party remains under attack because Myanmar's generals figure they can get away with it. The United States must send a stronger message that that's no longer an option.

BURMA'S JUNTA ''DISAPPEARS'' THE COUNTRY'S LEADING DEMOCRACT

(By Rena Pederson)

In the Trademark manner of thugocracies, Burma's military government, seeking to silence its critics, sent a mob to attack the motorcade of longtime democracy activist Aung San Suu Kyi on the night of Friday, May 30, as she traveled to a speaking engagement in the north of the country. The Nobel Peace Prize winner was assaulted and taken to an undisclosed location.

The government would say only that she had been placed in ''protective custody'' and that she had not been injured. But reports persisted that Suu Kyi had suffered a severe blow to the head and possibly a broken arm. Inside Burma, it was said that hundreds of her supporters had been murdered; international news agencies reported at least 70 killed and 50 injured. At least 18 people were believed detained.

''The problem with getting an accurate story about what happened is that everyone who could speak the truth in Burma is under arrest,'' said one democracy advocate in Washington. The government controls the only two newspapers and TV stations, and the leading journalist is in prison. One in four citizens reportedly spies for the government, so everyone is guarded about what is said in public.

Nevertheless, clandestine sources inside Burma that have proved reliable in the past report that hundreds of armed men attacked the motorcade, some disguised as Buddhist monks. Some were convicts released at the government's behest. They beat Suu Kyi's supporters with bamboo clubs three feet long and riddled her car with bullets. The window was shattered, and either a rock or a brick was thrown at Suu Kyi's head while she was seated in the car. Several students reportedly tried to shield her with their bodies, but they were beaten severely, and she was dragged away bleeding. According to this account, she was taken to a military hospital for stitches and then transferred to Yemon military camp about 25 miles from Rangoon.

Plainly, Suu Kyi, who is 57 and weighs about 100 pounds, faces long odds—though not for the first time. Since 1988, she has been standing up to one of the most brutal regimes in the world. In the process, she has become the photogenic symbol of democracy in Asia. In 1990, her party, the National League for Democracy, won 80 percent of the vote in elections the junta mistakenly had thought they could control. Instead of seating the winners in parliament, the generals threw many NLD leaders in jail and placed Suu Kyi under house arrest, where she remained for most of the ensuing 13 years.

In this country, few people know her name, much less how to pronounce it (awn sawn soo chee). But her story has the sweep and drama of ''Gone With The Wind.'' Her father, General Aung San, was a leader of the democracy movement in Burma after World War II and was expected to become the first president after Great Britain relinquished control. He was assassinated when his daughter was only 2. His wife, a wartime nurse, went on to become ambassador to India.

Suu Kyi was educated at Oxford and married a fellow student, who became a professor of Tibetan studies. She lived quietly in England as a wife and mother of two boys until her own mother suffered a stroke in 1988, and she returned to Burma to care for her. In riots that year, soldiers shot and killed more student demonstrators than would die in 1989 at Tiananmen Square. Suu Kyi was entreated to stay and help lead the democracy effort, which she did, at great personal sacrifice. She has seen her sons only sporadically since. And four years ago, as her husband was dying of cancer, the junta refused to grant him a visa to visit her.

The international response to her rearrest has been near unanimous condemnation. In the midst of peace negotiations in the Middle East, President Bush expressed his deep concern and called for the immediate release of Suu Kyi and her supporters, as did United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan. The most tepid responses came from Burma's Southeast Asian neighbors, who have their own concerns about stability. They asked for an explanation of Suu Kyi's detention, but would not demand her release. Japan, the leading investor in Burma, said the situation was not ''good'' and dialogue was needed for a democratic solution.

It will be up to the United States to increase pressure on the Burmese generals, who apparently thought they could decapitate their opposition while the world was concentrating on the Middle East. The Bush administration must back up its words with actions. On Capitol Hill, Sen. Mitch McConnell, a Kentucky Republican, and Rep. Tom Lantos, a Democrat from California, moved to toughen existing sanctions on Thursday. They will need help. As the Boston Globe pointed out, President Bush could issue an executive order that would accomplish the same thing.

The world hardly needs another crisis at this moment, but the situation in Burma could be destabilizing. Burma has been seeking aid from China, its neighbor to the north, which wouldn't mind having Burma as a vassal state providing port access to the Indian Ocean. That prospect has alarmed India, its neighbor to the west. At the same time, Thailand, to the east, is overwhelmed by the thousands of refugees pouring across the border each day to escape the rapacious Burmese military.

Further complicating the picture, Burma is one of the world's largest producers of heroin and amphetamines. Drug dealers are often seen playing golf with high-ranking generals and hold high positions in major banks. And, oh yes, Burma has one of the fastest-growing AIDS rates in the world—and one of the worst health systems.

When I spoke with Aung San Suu Kyi in February, she expressed frustration that the junta had not opened a dialogue with her party after her release from house arrest in May 2002. ''The government promised that it would begin discussions about the transition to democracy,'' she said. ''They have not. They promised they would release all political prisoners. They have not.'' And they promised to allow the publication of independent newspapers. She asked with a wry smile, ''You haven't seen one, have you?''

This spring she began speaking out more forcefully. When she ventured into the northern states two weeks ago, thousands of supporters risked their lives to greet the woman they call ''the Lady.'' Government harassment then increased. On May 24, 10 NLD members were jailed. On May 29, the day before the ambush, clashes broke out between government supporters armed with machetes and NLD backers, leaving several dead.

Even if Aung San Suu Kyi eventually emerges unharmed, the movement for free elections has been set back by the violent turn of events. The main office of the National League for Democracy, in Rangoon, has been closed, padlocked, and placed under guard, and other party offices have been shuttered. Universities, too, have been shut to prevent student protests.

''The Lady'' is in greater jeopardy than ever before. It remains to be seen what the long-repressed Burmese people and the much-distracted international community will do about it.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I note that Senator FEINSTEIN is here. I yield the floor and retain the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chair, and I also thank the distinguished Senator from Kentucky for his leadership on this issue. I am very proud to join with him.

Madam President, in 1996, Senator William Cohen and I introduced a sanctions bill on Bumra. It passed in 1996, and was signed by the President. In 1997, the sanctions were exercised.

We had a brief period of hope during that time, and the ASEAN nations were going to be helpful. It looked like the military junta was going to be receptive. Then, recently, for a brief period, Aung San Suu Kyi, the democratic leader of Burma, was released, and discussions took place. Well, that was short lived and this diabolical attack took place on Aung San Suu Kyi.

According to reports, her motorcade was met by 100 to 200 people at a bridge near Mandalay in northern Burma. Most of these people were disguised as monks. Another 400 people—convicts and other militia recruits who were also disguised as monks—blocked the convoy from the rear. Both groups then discarded their costumes and attacked the entourage with bamboo sticks and wooden clubs, smashing vehicles and beating up their targets. Officially, four people were killed and 50 injured. Witnesses contend that as many as 70 may have been killed and many more injured.

This is outrageous. The level of coordination, the deception, and the brutality of the crimes cannot go unanswered. They really demand a forceful and a substantive response that makes clear the United States will not deal with this junta and will not tolerate such blatant disregard for common human decency.

This legislation sends a message. It says: We will not import their products. And those Burmese exports to the United States are about 25 percent of what Burma exports. So it is a considerable message. It has to be remembered, Aung San Suu Kyi is the democratic leader of Burma. She has never been permitted to serve. Her people have been arrested. Members of the Parliament have been arrested and held in custody. Over 1,300 political prisoners are still in jail, many of them elected parliamentarians. The practice of rape as a form of repression has been sanctioned by the Burmese military. The use of forced labor is widespread. Trafficking in young boys and girls as sex slaves is rampant, and the government engages in the production and distribution of opium and methamphetamine. So the United States must act. Now, in general, I do not support trade embargoes as an effective instrument of foreign policy. However, there are certain circumstances—South Africa was one of them, largely because of the world response, and the world saying enough is enough—where there must be change, and where we are prepared to carry out these sanctions together to effect that change. I hope in this sense the United States will lead the way to enact these sanctions in a meaningful way in which other nations will follow.

Our legislation imposes a complete ban on all imports until the President determines and certifies to Congress that Burma has made substantial and measurable progress on a number of democracy and human rights issues.

As Senator MCCONNELL will indicate, there is a provision in the legislation, similar to the most favored nation status for China, that will allow an annual review of this to assess progress. It allows the President to waive the ban should he determine and notify Congress that it is in the national security interest of the United States to do this. It would freeze the assets of the Burmese regime in the United States. It directs United States executive directors at international financial institutions to vote against loans to Burma. It expands the visa ban against past and present leadership of the junta, and it encourages the Secretary of State to highlight the abysmal record of the junta in the international community.

Now, Senator MCCONNELL mentioned that both business and labor are united in support of this legislation. He said the American Apparel and Footware Association, which represents apparel, footware, and sewn products companies and their suppliers, has called for this ban. The president and CEO has stated—and I think this is worth being in the RECORD—''The government of Burma continues to abuse its citizens through force and intimidation, and refuses to respect the basic human rights of its people. AAFA believes this unacceptable behavior should be met with condemnation from not only the international public community, but from private industry as well.''

So well said.

A number of stores, including Saks, Macy's, Bloomingdales, Ames, and The Gap have already voluntarily stopped importing or selling goods from Burma. The AFL-CIO and other labor groups also support this legislation.

In addition, the International Labor Organization, for the first time in its history, called on all ILO members to impose sanctions on Burma.

Such diversity in support of this legislation speaks volumes about the brutality of this military junta and its single-minded unwillingness to take even a modest step toward democracy and national reconciliation.

And to add to it, Aung San Suu Kyi, the democratic leader, is once again being held in custody. This is unacceptable.

The military junta knows full well they do not enjoy the popular support of the Burmese people. That is why they resort to such actions.

As Aung San Suu Kyi traveled the country, and thousands turned out to hear her speak, the junta realized that after years of house arrest and repression, they had failed to curb the power of her message of democracy, of human rights, and the rule of law. They realized that the Burmese people were determined to see the democratic elections of 1990 fully implemented without delay. So in a cowardly and despicable manner they took this action.

Now we must take action. We must take a stand on the side of the people of Burma and on the side of the values we cherish the most.

I urge support and I hope it will be unanimous.

Thank you very much, Madam President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator KOHL be added as a cosponsor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I say to my friend from California, as she was describing the provisions of the bill, the way it is now structured, we will have an annual debate about whether or not these sanctions should be lifted. It will be reminiscent of the most favored nation debates that we had annually regarding the People's Republic of China, which has now graduated to a new status.

But if ever there were a regime that deserved an annual review by those of us here in the Congress, this is a regime that deserves that. So I think that is a debate we are going to look forward to having.

Would you not agree, I say to my friend from California?

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I certainly agree, I say to the Senator through the Chair. I think it would be very useful. And I think when the recalcitrance, the repression, is on the floor of this Senate every year, hopefully it will be helpful in changing the minds of this military junta.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I first introduced a bill on this subject back in 1993. It is one of these issues that, I must regretfully say, you take an interest in and follow over a period of time and never see anything change. There is never any progress that could be measured—until a year or so ago when the junta led Aung San Suu Kyi basically out of house arrest. We were supposed to applaud that as some kind of remarkable step in the direction of recognizing the outcome of the election in 1998 in which she and her party got 80 percent of the vote. She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1991 while she was essentially incarcerated. She remained under house arrest—except for about a year or so—ever since.

Various strategies have been tried. The Thai Prime Minister, who was in town yesterday—some of us talked with him, and I know he met with the President—this new Prime Minister in Thailand decided to engage in what he called ''constructive engagement.'' Obviously, constructive engagement doesn't work. What this regime needs is to be isolated. I know there are some skeptics even in this body with regard to the ability of sanctions to have a real impact.

Let me tell you, if there is one place in the world where sanctions worked, it was South Africa. The reason it worked there is because everybody participated and they were truly isolated. They became a pariah regime throughout the world, and that led to the dramatic changes that brought Nelson Mandela to power after decades in jail.

That can happen here. The United States needs to lead. Secretary Powell is going out to the ASEAN regional forum in Phnom Penh on June 18 and 19 next week. This is an opportunity for him to put it at the top of the agenda.

I said to the Thai Prime Minister that I thought constructive engagement wasn't working and they needed to join with us and help us lead the other ASEAN countries in the direction of a sanctions regime, on a multilateral basis, that could shut these people down. Some would say, well, if you have effective economic sanctions, it hurts the people. It doesn't hurt the people in Burma because the regime takes all profits off of the exports. They make money on the exports and the drug traffic, which they are quite good at.

So this regime needs to be squeezed by the entire world, isolated, and that is a strategy that we hope to begin today with the passage of this legislation in the next 30 or 45 minutes.

I know on our side, Senator MCCAIN wants to speak, KAY HUTCHISON wants to speak, and, I believe, Senator BROWNBACK wants to speak. How much time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are 15 minutes 43 seconds.

AMENDMENT NO. 882

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, there is a substitute amendment at the desk. I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL], for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. ALLARD, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. COLEMAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. DAYTON, Mrs. DOLE, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. FRIST, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. BURNS, Mr. KOHL, Mr. HARKIN, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KYL, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. LUGAR, Ms. MIKULSKI, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Mr. REID, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SMITH, Mr. SPECTER, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. BAUCUS, proposes an amendment numbered 882.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The amendment is printed in today's RECORD under ''Text of Amendments.'')

AMENDMENT NO. 883 TO AMENDMENT NO. 882

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, there is a technical amendment to the substitute at the desk, and I ask for its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. MCCONNELL], for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. BAUCUS, proposes an amendment numbered 883 to amendment No. 882.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To clarify the duration of certain sanctions against Burma, and for other purposes)

On page 5, line 5, insert ''and except as provided in section 9'' after ''law''.

Beginning on page 7, line 23, strike all through page 8, line 3, and insert the following:

(4) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—In this Act, the term ''appropriate congressional committees'' means the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Committee on Finance, and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations, the Committee on Ways and Means, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

On page 8, beginning on line 5, strike all through line 13, and insert the following:

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President may waive the prohibitions described in this section for any or all products imported from Burma to the United States if the President determines and notifies the appropriate congressional committees that to do so is in the vital national security interest of the United States.

On page 11, beginning on line 16, strike ''Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate'' and all that follows through ''House of Representatives'' on line 19, and insert ''appropriate congressional committees''.

On page 12, beginning on line 1, strike ''Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate'' and all that follows through ''House of Representatives'' on line 4, and insert ''appropriate congressional committees''.

On page 12, after line 16, insert the following:

(3) REPORT ON TRADE SANCTIONS.—Not later than 90 days before the date that the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) are to expire, the Secretary of State, in consultation with the United States Trade Representative and other appropriate agencies, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees, a report on—

(A) conditions in Burma, including human rights violations, arrest and detention of democracy activists, forced and child labor, and the status of dialogue between the SPDC and the NLD and ethnic minorities;

(B) bilateral and multilateral measures undertaken by the United States Government and other governments to promote human rights and democracy in Burma; and

(C) the impact and effectiveness of the provisions of this Act in furthering the policy objectives of the United States toward Burma.

SEC. 9. DURATION OF SANCTIONS.

(a) TERMINATION BY REQUEST FROM DEMOCRATIC BURMA.—The President may terminate any provision in this Act upon the request of a democratically elected government in Burma, provided that all the conditions in section 3(a)(3) have been met.

(b) CONTINUATION OF IMPORT SANCTIONS.—

(1) EXPIRATION.—The import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) shall expire 1 year from the date of enactment of this Act unless renewed under paragraph (2) of this section.

(2) RESOLUTION BY CONGRESS.—The import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) may be renewed annually for a 1-year period if, prior to the anniversary of the date of enactment of this Act, and each year thereafter, a renewal resolution is enacted into law in accordance with subsection (c).

(c) RENEWAL RESOLUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term ''renewal resolution'' means a joint resolution of the 2 Houses of Congress, the sole matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: ''That Congress approves the renewal of the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) of the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003.''

(2) PROCEDURES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A renewal resolution—

(i) may be introduced in either House of Congress by any member of such House at any time within the 90-day period before the expiration of the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1); and

(ii) the provisions of subparagraph (B) shall apply.

(B) EXPEDITED CONSIDERATION.—The provisions of section 152 (b), (c), (d), (e), and (f) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2192 (b), (c), (d), (e), and (f)) apply to a renewal resolution under this Act as if such resolution were a resolution described in section 152(a) of the Trade Act of 1974.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the substitute amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 882) was agreed to.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask unanimous consent that the technical amendment to amendment No. 882 be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 883) was agreed to.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I will retain the remainder of my time, if I may.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I will just use a quick minute. I mentioned some of the retail establishments supporting this but I left out a couple. I mentioned Saks Fifth Avenue, and there is also Macy's, the Gap, Bloomingdale's, Ames, Williams Sonoma, IKEA, Wal-Mart, Nautica, and Pottery Barn. I am very proud of these retail establishments for standing up and joining us. I wanted to recognize that on the floor.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I am glad the Senator from California mentioned those important corporations. Obviously, they could conceivably benefit from low-cost imports but they are choosing not to allow the regime to make a profit off of these American corporations. They deserve our commendation.

I reserve the remainder of my time, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to be able to proceed on the time controlled by Senator FEINSTEIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I rise in support of the efforts of Senator MCCONNELL and Senator FEINSTEIN and acknowledge the leadership of Senator BAUCUS, as well, in working this out. Senator MCCONNELL has been tireless in his efforts to promote democracy in Burma and has been an acknowledged leader in this area. I thank him for not relenting.

I think it is to state the obvious that it is vital for us to express our concern for the freedom of Aung San Suu Kyi, leader of the National League for Democracy and a winner of the Nobel Peace Prize. On May 30, Government-affiliated thugs ambushed an automobile convoy carrying the leader and many of her supporters. Dozens of people were reportedly killed and injured in the clash. She was detained by Government authorities, who also ordered the NLD offices closed nationwide.

Aung San Suu Kyi remains under arrest, and the Government has refused to allow supporters or members of the diplomatic community to meet with her.

When Burma's military rulers freed Aung San Suu Kyi of house arrest last year, they claimed her release was unconditional and they pledged to continue the U.N.-facilitated dialog, which led to her freedom. With last month's premeditated attack and her current detention, the junta has abrogated all of its commitments and warrants no more time.

It is not hard to discern the motives of the junta.

They are scared. They are scared the people of Burma will rally and remove them from power, and they are right to be afraid. As Aung San Suu Kyi has toured schools, hospitals, businesses, and government organizations around Burma, she has been met by joyous crowds, and it is obvious to all observers that she remains as loved by the people of Burma as the military junta is reviled. It is time for the present military oligarchy to fade into history.

Burma's transition to democracy would be a most welcome development for all of Southeast Asia.

Despite pledges to crack down on narcotics production, the military continues to collaborate with heroin and methamphetamine traffickers. It has failed to address the legitimate demands of ethnic minorities for significant regional autonomy within a federal state, preferring military pressure to political accommodation.

The generals have enriched themselves while bankrupting the country. They have dismantled Burma's education system and ignored the growing threat to public health posed by AIDS, malaria, and tuberculosis. As the State Department notes with characteristic understatement in its most recent human rights report:

> The quality of life in Burma continues to deteriorate.

That may be the understatement of the month. It is well past time for the generals to do what they said they would do; namely, begin a process that would eventually transfer the reins to a representative civilian government that would enjoy domestic and international legitimacy.

Unfortunately, there are few indications that the regime intends to step down. Indeed, they apparently had high hopes the United States Government, taking note of Aung San Suu Kyi's release last year, would take steps to lift the many sanctions imposed when the army brutally suppressed Burma's democracy movement in 1988. The regime spent $450,000 to retain the services of a prominent Washington lobbying firm to help push the President and Congress to normalize relations, restore access to international financial institutions, and resume foreign aid.

They were willing to spend $450,000 to improve their image, but last year the officials operating the government spent less than $40,000 nationwide on HIV/AIDS care and prevention. Each of the nation's 35,000 primary schools receives on average less than $1 from the central government each year; $35,000 for the national education budget; $450,000 for lobbying in Washington.

No amount of money can hide the character of the Burmese military rulers. As the United States people stood with Nelson Mandela in his bid for freedom and democracy for the people of South Africa, so we should now stand with those who are moving Burma toward a free and open society and the National League for Democracy as they try through peaceful means to end the tyrannical, brutal rule of Burma's military rulers.

Again, I thank Senators MCCONNELL and FEINSTEIN for their leadership in this area, and I am confident we will win wide support of our colleagues. It is time that we are clearly standing on the right side of this issue.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant Republican leader.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, I thank my friend, the ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee, for his contributions to the debate. I very much appreciate it.

I yield 8 minutes to the Senator from Arizona.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Madam President, I thank my colleague from Kentucky, Senator MCCONNELL, for his leadership, and I thank the Senator from California, Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank Senator MCCONNELL for his longstanding support of this brave and heroic person and the movement she leads.

Several years ago, I happened to visit Myanmar, which I will refer to from now on as Burma. I had the great honor—one of the great honors of my life—to meet this incredible hero, this incredible leader, this incredible person who has spent her life under duress, under punishment, under pressure, under house arrest, even to the point of physical mistreatment at the hands of this gang of thugs that runs and has ruined this country.

I will never forget the day I met her. I will never forget the grace, the dignity, and the heroism that was clearly radiating from every part of this incredible person who very appropriately has been recognized with the Nobel Peace Prize.

I remind my colleagues that she has been kept under house arrest for many years. She was released in 1995 finally, and then she was again confined to house arrest in 2000. Just a few days ago, as a motorcade of about 250 people drove through, about 500 armed soldiers, members of the military-backed Union Solidarity and Development Association, and an unknown number of convicts recruited from Mandalay prison with the promise of reward and freedom rushed and attacked it.

In the ensuing melee, which lasted about an hour, the attackers beat up NLD members, shot them with catapults, soldiers opening and firing, killing and wounding a large number of NLD members.

Aung San Suu Kyi was taken into custody in an unknown place. Apparently, thank God, according to the U.N. envoy, Mr. Ishmael, she is in good physical condition.

This junta has ruined the country. It has deprived the people of their fundamental freedoms. This gang of thugs has mistreated this great person in the most disgraceful fashion. She should be free. She should be free to lead her country as was already endorsed by one free and fair election overwhelmingly.

Why did they do that this time? Because everyplace Aung San Suu Kyi went, the people welcomed her by the thousands, and the junta could not stand it. So they had to kill her people, her supporters, and they had to throw her back into prison.

What did one of the leaders who is supposed to be a moderate, whom I also met when I was in Burma, GEN Khin Nyunt—remember that name—say? He said:

> Everyone needs to abide by the rules and regulations to be observed everywhere.

Adding:

> It is to be noted that the basic human rights would not protect those who violate an existing law.

What existing law? What existing law that would ever be judged a legitimate law in any court in the world was Aung San Suu Kyi in violation of when they killed her supporters, mistreated her, and put her back into prison?

I do not know why the Japanese, the Thais, the Chinese, and the ASEAN nations, that ostensibly are supposed to be standing up for freedom and democracy, are not doing everything possible to punish this regime, free this incredible person, and let the people of Burma have a free and fair election.

I thank, again, Senator MCCONNELL. I point out that we should be taking every single measure possible, and I do not believe the Secretary of State should attend the ASEAN gathering in Phnom Penh, Cambodia, unless Aung San Suu Kyi and the situation in Burma are No. 1 on the agenda of ASEAN. Are we going to sit by and watch the brutalization of a people, the imprisonment of a Nobel Peace Prize winner, and the repression and devastation of a nation be carried out by a gang of thugs that call themselves generals? I hope not.

I hope the message today in the legislation we are considering, thanks to the Senator from Kentucky, is a message that this is the beginning—this is the beginning—of our efforts to free this person and to free the people of Burma.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I strongly support the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2002 that has been introduced by Senators MCCONNELL and FEINSTEIN. The legislation, as was said, seeks to pressure the military junta in Burma to release Aung San Suu Kyi, and to help bring democracy and human rights to Burma.

Several days last week—in fact, time and time again—Senator MCCONNELL came to the floor to speak on this issue. I want to commend my colleague, the senior Senator from Kentucky, for his steadfast leadership. I associate myself gladly with his remarks. I have also joined him as an original cosponsor of this legislation.

The message the legislation sends to the ruling junta in Burma is clear: Its behavior is outrageous. By any standard anywhere in the world, its behavior is outrageous. Aung San Suu Kyi is the rightful and democratically elected leader of Burma. It is that simple. Aung San Suu Kyi is the rightful, elected leader of Burma, and the ruling junta does not want her to take office because they know that their days of repression, corruption, torture, and murder would be over. She and her fellow opposition leaders must be immediately released.

This legislation also sends a clear signal to the administration, to ASEAN members, and to the international community that we need to turn up the heat on this illegitimate regime.

The efforts of Senators MCCONNELL and FEINSTEIN are already having an impact. On June 5, 2003, our State Department issued a strong statement, which reads:

> The continued detention in isolation of Aung San Suu Kyi and other members of her political party is outrageous and unacceptable.

I agree. But we all know that U.S. actions can only go so far. Bringing democracy and human rights to Burma is going to require active pressure from Burma's neighbors in Southeast Asia, particularly Thailand, Japan, and China. I hope they apply the pressure for human rights and democracy that many of them profess to support. They should disavow the failed policies of engagement.

I am pleased to see that the McConnell-Feinstein legislation attempts to trigger a process to ratchet up the regional pressure on the Burmese Government. I am glad to see that the United States has demarched every government in Southeast Asia on this issue. I agree with the Bush administration on this very much. We have to bring this kind of pressure. As Senator MCCONNELL has pointed out, the administration could, on its own initiative, impose many of the sanctions called for in this legislation.

All of us were relieved yesterday when the U.N. envoy in Burma was finally able to see Aung San Suu Kyi. According to CNN, the U.N. envoy said that she shows no sign of injury following clashes with the pro-government group. His exact words were:

She did not have a scratch on her and was feisty as usual.

That is indeed good.

I was also glad to see the U.N. envoy calling on the members of the ASEAN to drop the organization's policy of nonintervention. He stated:

ASEAN has to break through the straitjacket and start dealing with this issue. . . .The situation in Burma can only be changed if regional actors take their positions to act on it.

I agree. The international community has the responsibility to act together to pressure the SPDC. The time, if there ever was a time, for appeasement is over. It is always a time for democracy to flourish. Democracy has spoken. It is being held back by the junta in Burma. It is time for them to step aside.

I see the distinguished senior Senator from Kentucky in the Chamber. I again commend him for his leadership, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALEXANDER). The Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I thank my good friend from Vermont for his important contribution in this debate and his kind words about how we got to this point. Ultimately, I guess we will all be judged by whether or not this is effective, I say to my friend from Vermont. For these sanctions to be truly effective, we have to lead and the rest of the world has to join us in sanctions of a regime that truly operates on a multilateral basis like those that worked in South Africa.

I ask unanimous consent that Senator CAMPBELL be added as a cosponsor to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today I am pleased to express my strong support for the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003. This bill sends a powerful message to the ruling military junta in Burma that their violent restrictions against freedom and democracy will not be tolerated and will have serious consequences. Their recent actions have yet again demonstrated to the world that this junta cannot be trusted.

The international community cannot allow the crimes committed by the Burmese military against the rightfully elected leader of Burma, Aung San Suu Kyi, her followers, and the Burmese people to go unpunished. So, it is my great hope that the actions that the Senate is taking today will provide the international leadership needed to put the spotlight on the Burmese military junta and make them change their ways.

I know that other countries, including the European Union, are also considering sanctions against Burma. A multilateral effort must be made so that we send the right message and so that our efforts are as effective as possible.

I am proud to be an original cosponsor of the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003. I look forward to continuing to work with my colleagues to help bring freedom and justice to the Burmese people.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, when Aung San Suu Kyi and her supporters were so viciously assaulted last month, Burma's brutal leaders were responsible for yet another major crime against human rights. The violent repression of these democracy activists is a tragic and appalling example of the Burmese Government's shameful and continuing suppression of genuine reform.

Only a year ago, Suu Kyi had been released from one of her previous house arrests in Burma, and that arrest had lasted 19 months. This new atrocity has outraged the world once again, and stronger action by the United States and the entire international community is long overdue.

The Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act calls for stiffer economic sanctions and the immediate release of Suu Kyi and her supporters. She won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1991 for her inspiring courageous leadership. Again and again, she shows us why she deserves it. She is an inspiration to all who care about justice and human rights.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I stand today in support of S. 1182, introduced by Senator MCCONNELL that I am cosponsoring. This bill answers the rising concern that democracy cannot begin to take its first promising steps in Burma. The news in the last few days clearly indicates that democracy in Burma is in serious trouble again.

On Friday, May 30, in its latest crackdown against the National League of Democracy, Burma's military regime detained Aung San Suu Kyi, a popular prodemocracy activist, and other leaders of her political party. There are reports that her car had been hit by gunfire, and conflicting reports whether she had been hurt.

The clash came in a town 400 miles north of the capital city of Rangoon. She was transported to Rangoon where she remains under house arrest. It took nearly 2 weeks of constant international pressure on Burma's military regime for a United Nation's envoy to visit her yesterday. The envoy reported she is in good spirits and had not been hurt in the clash that resulted in her detention, but Burmese officials still refuse to give a timetable for her release.

When Aung San Suu Kyi was detained, the Burmese Government closed the offices of the National League of Democracy and arrested some of its provincial leaders. They also closed all university and college campuses. The Burmese military government is acting with renegade abandon.

The detention of Aung San Suu Kyi follows a clear pattern by the ruling military over the past decade to prevent her and her political party from assuming power, despite the democratic election they won by a landslide in 1990. Barely a year ago, the Burmese Government released her from 19 months of house arrest, but only after intense international pressure.

Aung San Suu Kyi captured the world's attention as a leader in the prodemocracy movement in her country after her Government refused to let her party take office. She received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1991 for her nonviolent efforts to promote democracy. Today, the military rule in Burma has shackled Aung Sun Suu Kyi again, but the world has not lost notice.

It is time to isolate this oppressive regime and demand the release of those it is holding for doing nothing more than seeking democracy for their nation.

Senator MCCONNELL'S bill will sanction the ruling Burmese military junta, strengthen Burma's democratic forces, and support and recognize the National League of Democracy as the legitimate representative of the Burmese people. It is time to increase the pressure on those who seek to snuff out the flame of democracy in a nation whose people clearly support it.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to echo the condemnations of the military rulers of Burma that my colleagues have so forcefully offered.

Burma should by all rights be a prosperous country. It has over 50 million people, abundant natural resources, and a population hungry for democracy.

Instead, it is an international outcast, ruled by a few military men who finance their country through drug trafficking and forced labor.

Perhaps most egregious is the failure of the military rulers to recognize the results of a free and fair election in which the Burmese people overwhelmingly chose Aung San Suu Kyi as their leader. Rather than sitting at the head of a democratic Burmese Government, she is sitting in a Burmese jail, a prisoner of the military rulers.

The existence of a democratically elected government-in-waiting makes Burma unique, but that is not all that makes Burma unique.

Suu Kyi has consistently supported sanctions against the military rulers of Burma, and 3 years ago, the International Labor Organization, for the first time in its 82-year history, urged the world to impose sanctions against those rulers.

The bill we consider today will send a strong message to the illegitimate military regime in Burma that their recent actions in attacking Suu Kyi and her followers and imprisoning Suu Kyi are intolerable. A unanimous passage would send that signal loud and clear.

These sanctions would be most effective if the whole world joined us. Unilateral sanctions can send a strong message, but they are rarely effective. In fact, they can even end up unintentionally adding further misery to an already oppressed people while leaving their rulers unscathed.

Multilateral sanctions, on the other hand, can have a dramatic effect. I know that others are considering sanctions, including the European Union. I applaud their attention to this issue and urge them to act as we have acted.

I also urge the administration to work with our allies, particularly those in the region, to create a united front of sanctions against the military rulers of Burma. We must work toward multilateral support.

Importantly, this bill ensures that Burma will never fade from congressional minds. We will not simply impose sanctions now and then forget all about Burma.

Every year, we will vote on renewing sanctions. Every year, we will be talking about Burma and how best we can work to aid those working for democratic change in that country.

The military rulers of Burma should know that their crimes against Suu Kyi, her followers, and the Burmese people will be neither forgiven nor forgotten.

I appreciate the leadership of Senators MCCONNELL and FEINSTEIN on this issue. They deserve our thanks for consistently bringing the important issue of human suffering in Burma to the attention of this body.

I would also like to thank Senator GRASSLEY. He and I worked hard to make changes to this bill that, in my view, make it better.

I urge my colleagues to pass this bill unanimously today, and I urge the House of Representatives and the President to act soon to pass this bill into law. Let's send the strongest signal possible to the illegitimate regime in Burma.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, 13 years ago, Aung San Suu Kyi and her party, the National League for Democracy, won an election in Burma with 82 percent of the vote.

It was a clear sign that the Burmese people had rejected its military rulers that had been in place since 1962. Unfortunately, the people of Burma were denied its true leader when the military regime arrested Suu Kyi and thousands of her supporters.

For the past 13 years, Suu Kyi has courageously pushed for democratic reform in Burma through nonviolent means even through she spent a great deal of this time under house arrest. For her bravery and dedication to freedom and democracy, she was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1991.

Last year, the military rulers of Burma released Suu Kyi from house arrest. But, apparently, the strong support Suu Kyi continues to receive from the Burmese people was too much for the ruling military regime.

On May 30, in a northern Burmese town 400 miles from Rangoon, supporters of the military regime attacked Suu Kyi's convoy and had her arrested. Suu Kyi and thousands of her supporters were reportedly injured in the attack. Scores of Suu Kyi supporters were reportedly killed.

The international community must not let this act of brutality stand. That is why I am pleased to cosponsor and support Senator MCCONNELL's legislation to increase sanctions on Burma.

This legislation will impose a total import ban on Burmese goods, freeze the military regime's assets in the United States, tighten the visa ban on Burmese Government officials, and make it U.S. policy to oppose any new international loans to Burma's current leaders.

This is an important step. It is also important to make sure that the international community and regional powers do their part to provide real and sustained pressure on Burma's illegitimate rulers.

I was pleased to see that the United States has sent formal diplomatic requests to 11 nations in the region asking them to pressure the Burmese Government on the release of Suu Kyi.

I also sent a letter to the Japanese Ambassador asking his nation to put more pressure on Burma's military rules after Japan's Foreign Minister indicated that this incident would not set back democratization efforts in Burma. I know our Japanese friends will help us in this important issue of human rights and provide a stronger condemnation of the attack on Suu Kyi.

All nations, the international community, and regional organizations must take a stand against this outrage carried out by Burma's military leaders. We must do our part to support this brave woman and her followers.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise today to support S. 1215 and to express my dismay about the current human rights situation in Burma.

On May 30, opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi and at least 17 officials of her party were detained after a violent clash with members of the Union Solidarity Development Association, a government-created organization that has increasingly taken on paramilitary activities.

The military junta that rules Burma has stated that ''only'' four died in the violence.

But the National League for Democracy, Suu Kyi's party, has put the death toll at 75. Furthermore, it is likely the Burmese Government deliberately provoked the clashes to justify cracking down on opposition leaders and closing down universities.

Since May 30, the junta has kept Suu Kyi, who is the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize recipient, in an undisclosed location.

We have recently received word from a U.N. envoy that Suu Kyi is safe, and members of the Burmese Government have promised that they will release her expeditiously.

I join with my colleagues in this body, and with the American people, in demanding that the Burmese regime fulfill this promise immediately. The Government must also find those responsible for the violence and hold them accountable.

The bill we have before us today addresses the serious human rights situation in Burma. The recent violence and detainment of opposition leaders exemplify Government repression conducted on a systematic and frequent basis.

S. 1215 would punish Burma's dictators, who have a chokehold on the nation's economic life, by barring the import into the United States of goods manufactured in Burma and by freezing the U.S. assets of the regime's leading generals. These are targeted sanctions that would punish the military dictators in Burma, those who are directly responsible for suppressing human rights there.

Nearly 55 years after the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and only weeks after fighting a war to liberate 24 million Iraqis, the U.S. Senate must remain steadfast in its resolve to preserve the freedom of peoples throughout the world.

As a strong advocate for human rights and democratic governance in Southeast Asia, I call on this body to stand up to the military junta of Burma by passing this important legislation. We need to send a message to these thugs that their brutal reign of oppression and terror does not go unnoticed and will not last.

Mr. MCCONNELL. How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Five minutes.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I reserve the remainder of my time, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I believe I have about 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is correct.

Mr. MCCONNELL. How much time remains on the other side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One minute 48 seconds.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Maybe we could get some time on the other side. I yield the remainder of my time to the Senator from Kansas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues for allowing me to speak on this legislation.

The weekend before last, the military junta in Burma, ironically going by the name of the State Peace and Development Council, staged a violent clash between a government-supported militia called the United Solidarity and Development Association and activists of the National League for Democracy, the NLD.

As reported in the press, during the ensuing assault on the NLD, these thugs attacked the caravan of supporters led by Nobel Peace Prize laureate and democratic activist Aung San Suu Kyi and subsequently detained her and 19 members of the NLD, killed scores of NLD activists and, in the aftermath, closed down universities and NLD offices in the country. This is intolerable. Today I hope this institution can stand tall by roundly condemning this thieving, bantam tyranny that is taking place in Burma.

The regime claims they are detaining her, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, and NLD supporters for their safety. They accuse her of causing unrest and violence and claim she is in danger because of inflammatory speeches she has been giving on her tour of northern Burma.

I find this accusation to be absolutely ridiculous, but nevertheless, a common refrain coming from a government known for flaunting its human rights abuses which include slave labor, rape and forced prostitution, pressing children into the military, all a carefully constructed campaign to terrorize the people of Burma and consolidate the petty kleptocracy.

Aung San Suu Kyi's whereabouts are now known; the UN Secretary General's envoy Mr. Razali Ishmail is in Rangoon working to negotiate her release. I cannot bring myself to believe a word of what the SPDC says. It was reported in the press that she has a serious head injury; however, today I hear that Mr. Razali has seen her and that she is unharmed. My colleague from Kentucky and I do not believe it. And the regime has done nothing to reassure any member of the international community of their intentions. Aung San Suu Kyi is not free, Burma is not free.

In fact, this is part of a clear pattern of continually thwarting the advance of democracy and freedom in Burma—something for which Aung San Suu Kyi is the living symbol. More than that, she has recruited some of the most talented and most dedicated young people to her cause.

As reported by yesterday's Washington Post, one of those young people was a young man by the name of Toe Lwin. This young man, and many others in NLD like him, dedicated every once of his being to the cause. Bringing change to Burma and protecting Aung San Suu Kyi were the things for which he was willing to die.

This young man died trying to protect her. I am told that she sees all of these dedicated, inspiring young people as her children. I am sure that it breaks her heart to know that blood has been spilt in this effort.

We cannot seek a better tribute to this young man's life than by aiding the cause of democracy by passing this bill.

The SPDC seems like a bunch of bush-league autocrats. But what I want my colleagues to know is that this group of thugs is not just some common banana republic or petty dictatorship.

In 1988, the then-called State Law and Order Restoration Council, SLORC, took power and began its repression of pro-democracy demonstrations. After National Assembly elections in 1990, which were poised to overwhelmingly bring to power Aung San Suu Kyi and the NLD, SLORC annulled the elections, began jailing thousands of democracy activists, suppressed all political liberties, and periodically placed Aung San Suu Kyi under house arrest.

And this is just the opening line of the story. These thugs conscript thousands of their citizens, including children, into the military to serve as porters and to work on state development projects. In addition, narcotics is a big business for the ruling Burmese generals; however, there are some who will claim that we are getting full cooperation in combatting Burma's trade in heroin and amphetamines.

The most recent International Narcotics Control Strategy Report published by the Department of State reads, ''Burma is the world's second largest producer of illicit opium.'' It continues stating ''. . . no Burma Army Officer over the rank of full Colonel has ever been prosecuted for drug offenses in Burma. This fact, the prominent role in Burma of the family of notorious narcotics traffickers, and the continuance of large-scale narcotics trafficking over the years of intrusive military rule have given rise to speculation that some senior military leaders protect or are otherwise involved with narcotics traffickers.''

Yet I understand there was an active effort by some embedded bureaucrats to give the junta a free pass on drug certification. We are not dealing with the boy scouts of Southeast Asia.

I think that is the wrong approach to dealing with the problem of the SPDC's brutal rule. If today's paper is accurate, then it looks as if our government is beginning to take the correct steps to respond to the situation. We have put eleven countries on notice, notably Thailand and China, for their support of Burma.

This may be the mortal blow that weakens the regime. That is why next Wednesday I have planned hearings to discuss the support for the SPDC coming from key players in the region. Some of these countries need to give us some private assurances about their willingness to forgo continued support of the regime. Others need to be put on notice for the degree and nature of support for the SPDC junta.

Singapore, North Korea, Russia, and Malaysia have all been in cooperation or given assistance in the political, economic or military spheres. I will be inviting members of the administration and the NGO community to give their knowledge of on-the-ground support for the SPDC.

This week, the Prime Minister Thaksin Shinawatra of Thailand is in town for an important visit with President Bush. It was reported that the President has already weighed in with the Prime Minister. I hope to do the same when I attend a luncheon today for the Prime Minister hosted by Senator BOND.

Because they can predict the perils of dealing with a thieving, murderous dictatorship, many companies, especially here in the U.S., are avoiding doing business with these guys altogether. Department stores, clothing manufacturers, footwear and apparel companies are all telling the junta to take a hike.

Maybe the Senate should consider telling them the same.

I note my personal experience. I was on the Thai-Burma border in late 2000. This was on a trip where we were working on the issue of trafficking in persons, sex trafficking. We found at that point in time in 2000, and it continues today, one of the highest trafficked areas in the world was between Burma and Thailand. What was taking place was the people of Burma were fleeing this totalitarian dictatorship that brutalized its own people. The people of Burma were fleeing into Thailand. On that border, then, they were fresh meat for the people who traffic in persons, primarily for sex exploration, primarily of young girls. We saw girls 11, 12, 13 years of age, even younger, being taken—abducted in some cases—and in some cases sold because the family was so poor, sold into what they thought was a condition they would serve someone in a home or work in a restaurant. Instead, they were put in a brothel in Bangkok or someplace else in Thailand to a horrific environment at this very young age, with most of them contracting AIDS, tuberculosis, and dying at a young age. This was one of the key traffic areas of the world. It was being caused by this government in Burma that cared nothing about its people.

These were the most wonderful people in the world. They were trying to eke out some mere existence. This was a government that cared absolutely nothing at all about them.

Now they have gone and arrested the Nobel Prize-winning activist, democracy activist who has done this in a peaceful way in Burma to try to bring her country forward. They have taken the next step down the road on this anarchy of horrific treatment of their own people, a complete movement against the way the rest of the world is moving.

I support this resolution. It is very timely. I applaud Senator MCCONNELL for his work. It is important we send this message that this regime is treating its own people so badly that these sorts of conditions arise. We need to be on record. The rest of the world needs to be on record to press this regime to stop persecuting its own people in such terrible ways.

I hope this will send a message to the regime in Burma and to people around the rest of the world that we will continue to bring economic and diplomatic pressure in a quick fashion against this regime in Burma. This should not wait for years to develop.

Furthermore, there are big questions many times about whether these sanctions work. Against a big economy there are legitimate questions. Against a small economy, against a situation in a country such as Burma, where it is located, I think these work very well and it sends an extraordinary message to Burma. It also sends a big message to Thailand, which is a key country for us, to get their attention that they should not repatriate the Burmese back into Burma and we should recognize the refugee status for the Burmese in Thailand, a country that wants to work closely and carefully with us.

I yield the floor.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Kansas for his contribution. I am not aware of any more speakers on this side.

Mr. LEAHY. Nor on this side. I am willing to yield back the remainder of the time.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Therefore, I ask unanimous consent all time be yielded back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. MCCONNELL. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) and the Senator from New York (Mr. SCHUMER) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KERRY) would vote ''yea''.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 1, as follows:

The bill (S. 1215), as amended, was passed, as follows:

S. 1215

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) has failed to transfer power to the National League for Democracy (NLD) whose parliamentarians won an overwhelming victory in the 1990 elections in Burma.

(2) The SPDC has failed to enter into meaningful, political dialogue with the NLD and ethnic minorities and has dismissed the efforts of United Nations Special Envoy Razali bin Ismail to further such dialogue.

(3) According to the State Department's ''Report to the Congress Regarding Conditions in Burma and U.S. Policy Toward Burma'' dated March 28, 2003, the SPDC has become ''more confrontational'' in its exchanges with the NLD.

(4) On May 30, 2003, the SPDC, threatened by continued support for the NLD throughout Burma, brutally attacked NLD supporters, killed and injured scores of civilians, and arrested democracy advocate Aung San Suu Kyi and other activists.

(5) The SPDC continues egregious human rights violations against Burmese citizens, uses rape as a weapon of intimidation and torture against women, and forcibly conscripts child-soldiers for use in fighting indigenous ethnic groups.

(6) The SPDC has demonstrably failed to cooperate with the United States in stopping the flood of heroin and methamphetamines being grown, refined, manufactured, and transported in areas under the control of the SPDC serving to flood the region and much of the world with these illicit drugs.

(7) The SPDC provides safety, security, and engages in business dealings with narcotics traffickers under indictment by United States authorities, and other producers and traffickers of narcotics.

(8) The International Labor Organization (ILO), for the first time in its 82-year history, adopted in 2000, a resolution recommending that governments, employers, and workers organizations take appropriate measures to ensure that their relations with the SPDC do not abet the government-sponsored system of forced, compulsory, or slave labor in Burma, and that other international bodies reconsider any cooperation they may be engaged in with Burma and, if appropriate, cease as soon as possible any activity that could abet the practice of forced, compulsory, or slave labor.

(9) The SPDC has integrated the Burmese military and its surrogates into all facets of the economy effectively destroying any free enterprise system.

(10) Investment in Burmese companies and purchases from them serve to provide the SPDC with currency that is used to finance its instruments of terror and repression against the Burmese people.

(11) On April 15, 2003, the American Apparel and Footwear Association expressed its ''strong support for a full and immediate ban on U.S. textiles, apparel and footwear imports from Burma'' and called upon the United States Government to ''impose an outright ban on U.S. imports'' of these items until Burma demonstrates respect for basic human and labor rights of its citizens.

(12) The policy of the United States, as articulated by the President on April 24, 2003, is to officially recognize the NLD as the legitimate representative of the Burmese people as determined by the 1990 election.

SEC. 3. BAN AGAINST TRADE THAT SUPPORTS THE MILITARY REGIME OF BURMA.

(a) GENERAL BAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law and except as provided in section 9, until such time as the President determines and certifies to Congress that Burma has met the conditions described in paragraph (3), no article may be imported into the United States that is produced, mined, manufactured, grown, or assembled in Burma.

(2) BAN ON IMPORTS FROM CERTAIN COMPANIES.—The import restrictions contained in paragraph (1) shall apply to, among other entities—

(A) the SPDC, any ministry of the SPDC, a member of the SPDC or an immediate family member of such member;

(B) known narcotics traffickers from Burma or an immediate family member of such narcotics trafficker;

(C) the Union of Myanmar Economics Holdings Incorporated (UMEHI) or any company in which the UMEHI has a fiduciary interest;

(D) the Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC) or any company in which the MEC has a fiduciary interest;

(E) the Union Solidarity and Development Association (USDA); and

(F) any successor entity for the SPDC, UMEHI, MEC, or USDA.

(3) CONDITIONS DESCRIBED.—The conditions described in this paragraph are the following:

(A) The SPDC has made substantial and measurable progress to end violations of internationally recognized human rights including rape, and the Secretary of State, after consultation with the ILO Secretary General and relevant nongovernmental organizations, reports to the appropriate congressional committees that the SPDC no longer systematically violates workers rights, including the use of forced and child labor, and conscription of child-soldiers.

(B) The SPDC has made measurable and substantial progress toward implementing a democratic government including—

(i) releasing all political prisoners;

(ii) allowing freedom of speech and the press;

(iii) allowing freedom of association;

(iv) permitting the peaceful exercise of religion; and

(v) bringing to a conclusion an agreement between the SPDC and the democratic forces led by the NLD and Burma's ethnic nationalities on the transfer of power to a civilian government accountable to the Burmese people through democratic elections under the rule of law.

(C) Pursuant to the terms of section 706 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003 (Public Law 107–228), Burma has not failed demonstrably to make substantial efforts to adhere to its obligations under international counternarcotics agreements and to take other effective counternarcotics measures, including the arrest and extradition of all individuals under indictment in the United States for narcotics trafficking, and concrete and measurable actions to stem the flow of illicit drug money into Burma's banking system and economic enterprises and to stop the manufacture and export of methamphetamines.

(4) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—In this Act, the term ''appropriate congressional committees'' means the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Committee on Finance, and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations, the Committee on Ways and Means, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(b) WAIVER AUTHORITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President may waive the prohibitions described in this section for any or all products imported from Burma to the United States if the President determines and notifies the appropriate congressional committees that to do so is in the vital national security interest of the United States.

(2) INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS.—The President may waive any provision of this Act found to be in violation of any international obligations of the United States pursuant to any final ruling relating to Burma under the dispute settlement procedures of the World Trade Organization.

SEC. 4. FREEZING ASSETS OF THE BURMESE REGIME IN THE UNITED STATES.

Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, and promulgate regulations to the same, that any United States financial institution holding funds belonging to the SPDC or the assets of those individuals who hold senior positions in the SPDC or its political arm, the Union Solidarity Development Association, shall promptly report those assets to the Office of Foreign Assets Control. The Secretary of the Treasury may take such action as may be necessary to secure such assets or funds.

SEC. 5. LOANS AT INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States executive director to each appropriate international financial institution in which the United States participates, to oppose, and vote against the extension by such institution of any loan or financial or technical assistance to Burma until such time as the conditions described in section 3(a)(3) are met.

SEC. 6. EXPANSION OF VISA BAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) VISA BAN.—The President is authorized to deny visas and entry to the former and present leadership of the SPDC or the Union Solidarity Development Association.

(2) UPDATES.—The Secretary of State shall coordinate on a biannual basis with representatives of the European Union to ensure that an individual who is banned from obtaining a visa by the European Union for the reasons described in paragraph (1) is also banned from receiving a visa from the United States.

(b) PUBLICATION.—The Secretary of State shall post on the Department of State's website the names of individuals whose entry into the United States is banned under subsection (a).

SEC. 7. CONDEMNATION OF THE REGIME AND DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Congress encourages the Secretary of State to highlight the abysmal record of the SPDC to the international community and use all appropriate fora, including the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Regional Forum and Asian Nations Regional Forum, to encourage other states to restrict financial resources to the SPDC and Burmese companies while offering political recognition and support to Burma's democratic movement including the National League for Democracy and Burma's ethnic groups.

(b) UNITED STATES EMBASSY.—The United States embassy in Rangoon shall take all steps necessary to provide access of information and United States policy decisions to media organs not under the control of the ruling military regime.

SEC. 8. SUPPORT DEMOCRACY ACTIVISTS IN BURMA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President is authorized to use all available resources to assist Burmese democracy activists dedicated to nonviolent opposition to the regime in their efforts to promote freedom, democracy, and human rights in Burma, including a listing of constraints on such programming.

(b) REPORTS.—

(1) FIRST REPORT.—Not later than 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall provide the appropriate congressional committees a comprehensive report on its short- and long-term programs and activities to support democracy activists in Burma, including a list of constraints on such programming.

(2) REPORT ON RESOURCES.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall provide the appropriate congressional committees a report identifying resources that will be necessary for the reconstruction of Burma, after the SPDC is removed from power, including—

(A) the formation of democratic institutions;

(B) establishing the rule of law;

(C) establishing freedom of the press;

(D) providing for the successful reintegration of military officers and personnel into Burmese society; and

(E) providing health, educational, and economic development.

(3) REPORT ON TRADE SANCTIONS.—Not later than 90 days before the date that the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) are to expire, the Secretary of State, in consultation with the United States Trade Representative and other appropriate agencies, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees, a report on—

(A) conditions in Burma, including human rights violations, arrest and detention of democracy activists, forced and child labor, and the status of dialogue between the SPDC and the NLD and ethnic minorities;

(B) bilateral and multilateral measures undertaken by the United States Government and other governments to promote human rights and democracy in Burma; and

(C) the impact and effectiveness of the provisions of this Act in furthering the policy objectives of the United States toward Burma.

SEC. 9. DURATION OF SANCTIONS.

(a) TERMINATION BY REQUEST FROM DEMOCRATIC BURMA.—The President may terminate any provision in this Act upon the request of a democratically elected government in Burma, provided that all the conditions in section 3(a)(3) have been met.

(b) CONTINUATION OF IMPORT SANCTIONS.—

(1) EXPIRATION.—The import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) shall expire 1 year from the date of enactment of this Act unless renewed under paragraph (2) of this section.

(2) RESOLUTION BY CONGRESS.—The import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) may be renewed annually for a 1-year period if, prior to the anniversary of the date of enactment of this Act, and each year thereafter, a renewal resolution is enacted into law in accordance with subsection (c).

(c) RENEWAL RESOLUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term ''renewal resolution'' means a joint resolution of the 2 Houses of Congress, the sole matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: ''That Congress approves the renewal of the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) of the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003.''

(2) PROCEDURES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A renewal resolution—

(i) may be introduced in either House of Congress by any member of such House at any time within the 90-day period before the expiration of the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1); and

(ii) the provisions of subparagraph (B) shall apply.

(B) EXPEDITED CONSIDERATION.—The provisions of section 152 (b), (c), (d), (e), and (f) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2192 (b), (c), (d), (e), and (f)) apply to a renewal resolution under this Act as if such resolution were a resolution described in section 152(a) of the Trade Act of 1974.

Mr. SANTORUM. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, in speaking to the managers of the bill and the interested parties in this matter, the thought is—and this is not in the way of a unanimous consent request but just to inform Members what we are doing—the Senator from Florida will offer his amendment. He will speak on it tonight. Perhaps the other Senator from Florida, Mr. NELSON, will speak on his amendment. There are a number of Senators who have requested time in the morning.

The manager of the bill has suggested—and we think it would be OK on our side—that tomorrow we would have an hour on our side and the majority would have 30 minutes on their side, and then the two leaders can decide if we vote at that time or sometime later in the day. Staff is putting that in the form of a unanimous consent request, and perhaps we can enter into that sometime later tonight.

Mr. DOMENICI. We are looking for a unanimous consent request that says in the morning 1 additional hour on that side, a half hour on our side on the Graham amendment, and afterwards there will be a vote. That is being prepared. In the meantime, the Graham amendment is going to be offered for discussion this evening.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

AMENDMENT NO. 884

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Florida [Mr. GRAHAM], for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. KERRY, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. LEAHY, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. DODD, Mr. CHAFEE, Mrs. DOLE, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. CORZINE, and Ms. COLLINS, proposes an amendment numbered 884.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To strike the provision requiring the Secretary of the Interior to conduct an inventory and analysis of oil and natural gas resources beneath all of the waters of the outer Continental Shelf)

Beginning on page 23, strike line 20 and all that follows through page 25, line 8.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. Mr. President, the amendment I have just offered will strike section 105 from the legislation we are currently considering.

This amendment is cosponsored by a long and diverse list of Senators: Senators FEINSTEIN, DOLE, CANTWELL, WYDEN, NELSON of Florida, BOXER, LAUTENBERG, EDWARDS, KERRY, MURRAY, LIEBERMAN, AKAKA, LEAHY, SNOWE, DODD, CHAFEE, KENNEDY, CORZINE, and COLLINS.

In this legislation, section 105 appears to be benign. It calls for an inventory of Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas resources that may be in the ownership of the Federal Government. However, there are some insidious objectives and means to achieve those objectives in this legislation.

In my judgment, section 105 is nothing more than a prelude to a direct attack on the moratorium which currently exists in the Gulf of Mexico, off New England, the Pacific Northwest, and California, and to do so in a way that will avoid a full and public debate.

The OCS inventory, which is suggested in section 105, is neither benign nor innocuous. It will provide for a totally duplicative survey to one that is already conducted by the same office that would be directed to do the study under section 105, which is the U.S. Department of the Interior Minerals Management Service. This is the front page of the latest of the 5-year reports, which the Mineral Management Service does on U.S. resources and reserves in the Outer Continental Shelf. As you will see, this latest assessment was done in the year 2000. So it has been only 3 years since we had a comprehensive analysis.

In light of that, why would we oppose this new study? We would oppose the new study because we think it is duplicative and redundant. We oppose it because it would allow certain techniques, which have previously not been used but which have been shown to be detrimental to the resources of the Outer Continental Shelf, including the fish resources, to be utilized. But, in my judgment, the most insidious aspect is a provision in section 105 which states that after the inventory is completed it should be used as the purpose of analysis of the Outer Continental Shelf. Let me read to you subparagraph 5 under section 105:

The inventory and analysis shall identify and explain how legislative, regulatory, and administrative programs or processes restrict or impede the development of identified resources and the extent that they may affect domestic supply, such as moratoria, lease terms and conditions, operational stipulations and requirements, approval delays by the Federal Government and coastal States, and local zoning restrictions on onshore processing facilities, and pipeline landings.

I think that language is clearly intended to take the results of this newly mandated inventory and use them as the basis, focusing exclusively on the issue of affecting domestic supply, to build the case that the moratoria, which California and other coastal States have had now for 20 years, would be undermined.

That moratoria has been voted on by Congress on many occasions in recognition of the fact that, first, there are other interests involved beyond maximizing the exploitation of our Continental Shelf oil and gas resources. There are issues of the environment and there are issues of the economy, which are dependent upon the environment—particularly, the purity of the water and the security of the coastal areas.

Second is the fact that it does not take into consideration the question of we want to have a domestic supply of oil and gas, but for what time period? If we were to initiate a policy that says we will drain America first, we can rest assured that our grandchildren, if not our children, will live in an America that will be totally dependent upon foreign petroleum sources.

The estimate is that, as of today, we have known reserves of petroleum which, at current levels of utilization, will last approximately 50 years. We have much longer reserves of natural gas, stretching into the 200-year-plus estimate.

I think it is eminently wise public policy to say we will try to husband our domestic resources as long as possible to delay the date when we will be fully dependent upon foreign resources. This practice of providing moratoria on certain of our resources plays a significant positive role in that policy of attempting to stretch our domestic resources.

As the list of cosponsors indicates, this is by no means a partisan issue. The moratoria have broad bipartisan support, and have had it for over 20 years. This is also not an issue that is bicameral. The House of Representatives has already adopted an Energy bill, stripping out language that was virtually verbatim to that which is in 105 of the Senate bill.

Our desire is to have the Senate take the same position that our House colleagues have already taken, so when this issue is taken up in conference, the issue of an inventory that has as its objective undermining the moratoria will not be a conferenceable item.

I believe our colleagues in the House have shown wisdom in the course of action they have taken, and I ask my Senate colleagues to show the same wisdom by eliminating section 105. I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this amendment, which will adopt or reinforce a policy where we look at multiple issues in the management of our coastal areas, including the issue of exploitation of the resources but also the potential effect of that exploitation on other economic and environmental considerations; that we also recognize the valid function of those adjacent State and local communities and how this issue would be resolved, and the legitimacy of the Federal Government's Coastal Zone Management Act as the means by which those interests would be expressed. For all those reasons, I urge my colleagues to adopt this amendment and strike section 105 from this bill, and then with the joy that we will know that we have taken a step to protect some of our most critical ocean resources, move on to the consideration of other provisions in this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I understand Senator DOLE desires to speak on the same side. I don't intend to speak but for a moment. I will do my speaking and other members of the committee will be welcome to do so in the morning. I will take a couple of minutes and then yield to them for the evening.

As you well know, as you are a member of the energy committee, not too long ago the Senate of the United States said to this committee of Senators: Give us an energy policy for America's future, prepare a blueprint, a program, a policy, a set of activities that tells us what we ought to be doing for America's economic future, for our jobs, for our prosperity, as it relates to energy. We thought that if we did nothing else, perhaps that little mission meant we ought to find out what we have. What does America own?

We thought about it for a while and we said that is pretty simple. That is exactly what they would like us to do. They would like us to find out—even if we don't know what to do about it—what we have. What do we own? So a simple proposition was put in here, using the most modern techniques, disturbing nothing, to go out and find out how much oil and gas is in the Outer Continental Shelf of the United States—the property marked by my good friend from Florida in green on his chart—that we have already, as a nation, said based on today's circumstances we don't want to touch.

Does that mean we should not know what is there? The distinguished Senator from Florida says: We do know what is there. No, we do not know what is there because the most modern techniques are clearly changing what we know about what we own and what is underground. We do not have one of those most modern evaluations that has been put over that property that is within our control that could be used for America if we ever needed it and, I would even say, in a crisis.

As an ultimate reserve, should we not know what is there? That is the issue. It is, do we want to adopt an ostrich policy or do we want to adopt a policy of being on the surface, above board with our eyes open and know precisely what we are looking at? That is it. You can read the language. We will read it very precisely.

It matters not too much to this Senator from New Mexico what this Senate decides to do about this issue. It matters a lot to me as chairman of the Committee on Energy that I do what I was asked to do, and I thought I was asked to ask the committee members: Would you like to spend some American tax dollars to find out what we own so that it will be there in the inventory on the rack, so to speak, in the event something happened to America?

I thought the answer to that question was yes. We wrote it up, and we put the issue to the members. One member is sitting here, the new Senator from Tennessee. There was a rather large bipartisan vote on a simple proposition. Of course we want to know. Why would we want to stick our head in the sand and say we know there is oil there, we know there is gas there, but we do not want to use the most modern techniques to tell America what is there? As is going to happen tonight and tomorrow, there will be all this fear aroused that we are going to harm the sea line, the coastal shore, the beauty of America that is alongside these shores.

This says nothing about doing that, and everybody knows that we are not saying do anything whatsoever to these shorelines. What we are saying is, is it not, one, the responsibility of the committee to suggest to the Congress that we find out? I think the answer to that is unequivocal. Yes, we sure should.

Second, since you should have and you did, should the Senate now turn around and say you should have, you did, but we want to take it out, we want to throw it away, and we do not want to do it? That is the issue.

I sense that there is going to be enough fear established that people are going to be voting as if we are destroying something. Quite the contrary, I think we are doing something positive. I do not think we are destroying a thing. We are saying to folks: We have a lot of oil and gas out there. If the situation really gets bad—and what that might be, I do not know; none of us in this room knows—but if things got bad enough, there it is, and we know it is there, and it has been measured with the most modern-day techniques which are, indeed, not only marvels but they are marvelous in terms of what they will tell us about the capacity for the future.

Unless my friend from Tennessee wants to say a few words, I do not intend to spend any more time tonight. We will split our half hour tomorrow among three or four Senators from the committee in further response to the amendment that our distinguished friend from Florida has brought to the floor in a bipartisan manner with a lot of Senators.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COLEMAN). The Senator from North Carolina.

Mrs. DOLE. Mr. President, I rise in favor of the Graham amendment to S. 14, the omnibus Energy bill. My State like so many others, is going through a painful economic transition. We have lost tens of thousands of jobs in textiles and the furniture industry, family farms are going out of business, and many of these traditional manufacturing jobs have been in rural areas, where there are fewer jobs and residents are already struggling to make ends meet.

In 1999, North Carolina had the 12th lowest unemployment rate in the United States. By December 2001, the State had fallen to 46th—from 12th to 46th. That same year, according to the Rural Center, North Carolina companies announced 63,222 layoffs. Our State lost more manufacturing jobs between 1997 and the year 2000 than any State except New York. Entire communities have been uprooted by this crisis. According to the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina, the jobless rate rose from 6 percent in March to 6.4 percent just one month later.

So you can see, Mr. President, North Carolina is hurting. But one area that remains strong is tourism—one of the State's largest industries. Each year, travelers venture into our State to enjoy the mountains of Asheville, the Southern-city charm of Charlotte, the beaches of the Outer Banks, and many other State treasures.

Last year, there were 44.4 million visitors to North Carolina, ranking it the sixth most popular destination behind California, Florida, Texas, Pennsylvania and New York. In fact, last year domestic travelers spent nearly $12 billion across the State, generating $2.2 billion in tax receipts.

The industry remains strong, despite the war, and the Nation's economic concerns. In fact, while the tourism volume nationwide increased by less than 1 percent last year, North Carolina saw a 3 percent increase in visitors.

Put simply, tourism plays a vital role in North Carolina's economy, but offshore drilling could drastically impact these numbers.

Communities along the Outer Banks have spoken out time and again against offshore drilling because of the impact it could have on the economy and the environment—and I agree with them.

I thank my good friend, Chairman DOMENICI, for his hard work and dedication to produce a comprehensive energy bill, one that will help our country end its dependency on foreign oil. While I fully support Senator DOMENICI's efforts, I must disagree with regard to section 105.

Section 105 in the Senate bill has been presented as a study of the oil and gas reserves in the Outer Continental Shelf, but the effect of this section would be to open up scientific exploration. The final bill that passed the House of Representatives, as we have heard, rejects language that would open up scientific exploration of the Outer Continental Shelf.

The waters off the coasts of North Carolina have been placed off limits to further leasing under the current moratoria. President Bush extended the moratorium and Secretary Norton has been very clear about the administration's intention to uphold it. Congress and the Administration in the past have agreed with States in the moratoria areas that drilling would pose too many risks to their economies and shores.

Why then, in these tough economic times, should States such as North Carolina be asked to bear the risk of exploration for resources that are under moratoria and not even accessible for development? Section 105 hints to a backsliding from that protection by allowing intrusive activities into moratoria areas, through a study that is not needed.

The Minerals Management Service already compiles estimates of Outer Continental Shelf oil and gas resources every 5 years. In fact, the last one was completed in the year 2000, and includes estimates of undiscovered conventionally and economically recoverable oil and natural gas. We already know, for instance, that 80 percent of the Nation's undiscovered, economically recoverable Outer Continental Shelf gas is located in the Central and Western part of the Gulf of Mexico, which is currently not subject to the moratorium.

So it would appear that section 105 of this energy bill is duplicative and unnecessary.

In fact, the only logical explanation for new data under section 105 would be for future exploration activity like drilling, which is inconsistent with the current moratorium. We have a national crisis. Now, more than ever, we must work to end our dependence on foreign oil sources. It is vital that this Nation boost its domestic oil production, but we cannot do so by ignoring the wishes of coastal communities in North Carolina and other States that oppose drilling.

Our local people, not the Federal Government, should decide what is best for their areas. The Federal Government should not take action that will further hurt our already struggling State economies. That is why I urge support for the Graham amendment, which would continue to protect those areas under moratorium. We owe it to our States. We owe it to our local communities.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate resumes consideration of the bill tomorrow morning at 9:30, there then be 90 minutes of debate remaining prior to the vote in relation to the pending Graham amendment; provided further that Senator GRAHAM or his designee be in control of 60 minutes and the chairman in control of the remaining 30 minutes. Further, I ask consent that following the use of that time, the Senate proceed to a vote in relation to the amendment, with no amendments in order to the amendment prior to the vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM of Florida. The Senator from New Mexico said ''in relation to.'' That would not preclude the possibility of an up-or-down vote as opposed to a tabling motion?

Mr. DOMENICI. Either/or.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is correct. It would be either/or.

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise this evening to support the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida and commend him on his leadership on this issue. The amendment that is before us tonight will prevent exploration in offshore areas that are currently protected under law. The truth is, we should not need a special amendment to protect sensitive offshore areas that are currently off limits to energy drilling and exploration, but today we find this amendment is needed because the underlying Energy Bill would essentially roll back a longstanding ban on exploration that protects our coastal areas.

This Energy Bill calls for the Department of Interior to inventory oil and gas resources. It does not rule out exploration or drilling in any part of the Outer Continental Shelf and it does not prevent exploration or drilling in areas that are currently protected.

Some may say they just want to allow an inventory of oil and gas off our coasts, but taking an inventory of what lies beneath the sea floor is not like taking an inventory of what is in the kitchen pantry. Looking for oil and gas off our coasts is an invasive process. It carries risks. It harms marine life and it can create serious environmental damage.

If it was just taking an inventory, it would be one set of environmental concerns, but I think we all know what is really going on and it is much more than inventory. This is not just about seeing what is out there. It is really about preparing to drill for oil and gas in areas that have been protected for years, for decades actually, by law.

Let's be clear. Oil companies are not going to spend millions of dollars to inventory our coasts just for the fun of it. They want to begin drilling in areas that are protected, and this Energy Bill would give them the start they want.

I am reminded of that analogy about how if a camel gets its nose under the tent, pretty soon the whole camel will follow. Well, if we do not want the camel in our tent, stop it when it tries to poke its nose in.

Once those oil companies get their equipment down there, they will be steps away from setting up oil rigs and creating a host of dangers on our shores. If we do not want oil companies drilling off our shores, then we cannot let them get started with these so-called inventory projects.

There are good reasons why over the years Congress and past Presidents have agreed to protect parts of our Outer Continental Shelf. In fact, that moratorium that today protects the coast of my State of Washington was passed by Congress in 1990 and protected by an executive order by the first President Bush. Today, the current Bush administration wants to repeal that protection and pave the way for drilling off our coasts.

Those who want to explore for energy off our coasts would like us to believe it is harmless, but it is not. When we consider offshore oil and gas development, we have to be concerned about oil spills and the release of other toxic materials. There are other environmental effects that pose dangers to marine mammal populations, fish populations, and air quality. Seismic testing techniques used by the offshore oil and gas industry can kill marine animals. This is not harmless.

If this administration had a better record on the environment, I might be inclined to give them more leeway, but this administration has shown an eagerness to roll back environmental protections on so many issues that they do not have much credibility when they say they want to just look for oil off our coasts.

Last month, the Bush administration took another disturbing step to undermine our environmental protection related to oil and gas drilling. In fact, on May 26, 2003, the New York Times reported that the administration proposed to defer for 2 years requirements for permits under the Clean Water Act for certain activities of oil and gas producers to prevent contaminated runoff. This is a bad precedent and a step in the wrong direction for protecting our environment. There is no good reason for oil and gas developers to be exempt from requirements that are imposed on other developers to prevent contaminated runoff.

So not only do they want to let the big oil and gas companies start looking for oil in areas that have been protected for decades, this Bush administration is going to free those oil and gas companies from the rules everyone else has to follow to protect contaminated runoff. Not on my watch. We know there is a better way. Congress should be seeking long-term solutions that make sense for energy development and that balance environmental protection and economic growth. The proposal to drill in areas of the OCS that are currently under moratoria falls far short of the balanced approach we need. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment to stop an attack on decades of protection for our sensitive coastal areas.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I rise to support the Graham amendment. I am a cosponsor. BOB GRAHAM and I have been battling on the question of oil and gas drilling off the coast of Florida, and it is very clear to us, as we have waged this battle over the course of the last 25 years in public office, that the people of Florida do not want it for environmental reasons but also for business reasons; that Florida's $50 billion tourism industry in large part is because we have beautiful, unspoiled beaches.

I know what the people in my State of Florida want. They do not want oil drilling off their shore. I ask the Senator from Washington what is the thinking of her people in her State of Washington?

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I say to my colleague from Florida, I have listened to his battles for many years as he has fought to protect the beautiful shores of Florida. I have seen the shores of Florida, and they are gorgeous. He is right, tourism is a critical part of the economy of his State of Florida, as it is to mine. People come to Washington State to see our beautiful mountains, our beautiful forests, and to fish. The last thing they want to see is oil drilling off our coasts.

This underlying bill that allows an inventory is simply a step for the oil companies to then get in and drill. My State would be absolutely appalled to see that happen.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. What do you think about the rest of the Pacific coast States, Oregon and California? What would the people think?

Mrs. MURRAY. As the Senator from Florida knows well, for all who live on coastal States, our economies are struggling today; the high-tech industry is struggling; Boeing has lost thousands of jobs.

There is still the beautiful environment that people come to visit. The last thing anyone wants in our rain forests, whether in Oregon or Washington, or the beaches of California, the last thing they want to see is an oil rig or, worse, an oilspill in the areas we care so much about.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I talked at length with the senior Senator from North Carolina earlier today. Senator EDWARDS is quite concerned about the oil drilling off of the Outer Banks.

The people directly affected are crying out. There are States that do not mind drilling off the coast—the State of Louisiana, the State of Texas. There are about 2,000 wells in the Gulf of Mexico and they are primarily off of Texas and Louisiana, some off of Alabama, some off of Mississippi, all of those States whose Senators do not seem to mind because it must reflect their people's feeling that there be oil drilling. In the Gulf of Mexico, the geology shows that is where the oil and gas is, in the western gulf, in the central gulf, but not in the eastern gulf.

The people of Florida simply do not think it is worth the tradeoff of spoiling the environment and spoiling a $50 billion tourism industry to take the risk where the geology shows there is very little likelihood of oil, to take the risk that a well will be hit, that an oilspill will occur.

There is another reason. We have tremendous military facilities in the State of Washington. What we are finding is with so many of the military facilities on the gulf coast now that the naval facility on Vieques Island in Puerto Rico is being closed down, some of that training for the U.S. Navy is being shifted to the gulf coast of Florida, not necessarily on the land.

Because of computers and virtual training, they can now image what would be the target zone, and it can be out in the middle of the Gulf of Mexico. That helps in preparation of our Navy for its proper training, but will that Navy be able to train if there are oil rigs in the eastern Gulf of Mexico? The answer is no.

I ask the Senator from Washington, is there any similar military activity in the Senator's State? I certainly know there is in California where they are launching from Vandenberg Air Force Base. Is there such a facility?

Mrs. MURRAY. The Senator from Florida makes an excellent point. Our military needs to be ready for whatever conflicts come to them on the war on terror. They need to be out there training. Certainly at Makah Air Force Base and the other bases we have, they need to know they have a place they can train and not be interfered with.

I add, as the Senator from Florida knows, there are other economies that we count on as well. Fishing is a tremendous economy and part of our economy base in the State of Washington. They would not be excited about having oil rigs out there where people are fishing, as well as tourism, but certainly the military is an important part of my State. We want to make sure they have the space they need for training. The Senator makes an excellent point.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I have to tell a little story to the Senator from Washington before she leaves. In the middle of the 1980s I was the junior Congressman from the east coast of the State of Florida. There was a Secretary of the Interior named James Watt who was absolutely intent on drilling. They offered for lease off the east coast of the United States leases for sale all the way from North Carolina south to Fort Pierce, FL.

Perhaps I was green enough—I didn't know any better—to take him on. I took him on, as a junior Congressman. I was getting absolutely nowhere. We beat it back one year. They left it alone the next year and came back with a new Secretary of the Interior the third year and they were intent they were going to ram through those leases. The only way I was able to beat it was I finally got the Department of Defense and NASA to own up to the fact and to press that on the administration back in the mid-1980s that you cannot be dropping the solid rocket boosters off of the space shuttle with oil rigs down there and you cannot be dropping off the first stage, after it is spent, on the expendable launch vehicles coming out of Cape Canaveral with oil rigs out there. That is the only way we beat it back in the mid-1980s.

I thought they were going to leave us alone. Two years ago, when an important appointment was up in the Department of the Interior, I went to the Secretary of the Interior, Secretary Norton, and she assured me that in the eastern Gulf of Mexico there would be no attempt at oil drilling for the next 5 years. That was a commitment made to me with regard to an appointment and the Senate's consideration. What is in this bill does not break her commitment, but it clearly starts to imply that what is being done is the intention of drilling.

I hope we are going to be able to muster the votes with Senators who do not have coasts, with help from Senators such as the distinguished Senator in the chair, listening to this debate. With their help, we may just have the votes.

When Senator GRAHAM and I tried 2 years ago just with regard to the Gulf of Mexico off the State of Florida to keep the moratorium there, we did not get but 35 votes for our amendment, so the amendment did not pass. It was later that I got that commitment from Secretary of the Interior Gale Norton.

But this is portending something else. We are going to fight. I hope we have the votes.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I say to my colleague from Florida, thank you on behalf of all who care about this issue for your longtime battle and diligence. Every time you are right, they keep coming back at you, but you keep winning.

I agree, there are a number of Senators on this floor who are not from coastal States but they should be joining because certainly they all come to our States to see the beautiful coastlines, whether it is Florida, Washington State, California, or Maine. They want to preserve that, too. They want to take their grandchildren and great-grandchildren, some day, to your State. I certainly hope they want to come to ours, too. If we devastate the environment, the tourism will not be there.

I thank my colleague for working on this issue.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. I am not a junior Congressman anymore but I am a junior Senator. Although there have been some birthdays between the time I was a junior Senator and a junior Congressman, I still have a lot of fight in me.

I think we have a decent shot of winning this amendment and this vote will take place tomorrow.

There is no need repeating a number of the things that have been said. Let me summarize, on first glance, section 105 of this bill seems reasonable. Do we know what the resources are so we can prepare an assessment? Upon further reflection, upon reading the language, it becomes unnecessary and unreasonable when you recognize the Secretary of the Interior has conducted an inventory just 2 years ago. On the plan there is going to be an inventory that is going to be conducted in 2005, just 2 years from now. Why should the U.S. Congress and the Secretary of the Interior go about duplicating the efforts that had just been done and were going to be done? We know most of the Outer Continental Shelf is under a moratorium. Almost all of those areas, under this plan, of section 105 of the bill would be required to be reassessed under the moratorium. So I am just not sure. I kind of smell something fishy here.

Why does the Congress want to waste taxpayer money on a duplicative inventory of areas off limits to oil and gas exploration?

The House of Representatives has already realized the importance of this amendment. They passed it with a voice vote in an overwhelming show of bipartisan support. So if we can pass this amendment of Senator GRAHAM, this issue is over and done with because of an identical provision in the bill that has passed the House.

We already know that many coastal States exercise their rights under the Coastal Zone Management Act because oil and gas exploration plans that have been proposed would threaten those States. In their own efforts to control the destiny of their own shores and their own environment, they have exercised their rights under the Coastal Zone Management Act not to have oil drilling.

Those who oppose this amendment, when we hear the final debate tomorrow, are going to argue that it is the only section in the Energy bill that addresses the volatility of natural gas prices. But how does it do that? We already know where natural gas is from. We know where it is from the 2000 assessment. We already know the President and the Congress have acted to prevent leasing of oil and gas drilling, so what is the true purpose? What I smell is a kind of fishy smell: what is the true purpose? You have to come to the conclusion it is to roll back the moratorium on oil and gas drilling in the Outer Continental Shelf. What is the true purpose? It is to weaken the States' rights under the Coastal Zone Management Act.

For those reasons, I urge my colleagues to support this Graham amendment and strike this unnecessary language from the Energy bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to speak on behalf of Senator GRAHAM's amendment.

This amendment, which I cosponsor, would strike language in the Energy Policy Act that would authorize an inventory of the oil and gas resources on the Outer Continental Shelf.

This amendment mirrors a bill that Senator CORZINE and I introduced last month. It would protect the sensitive marine areas off the coast of New Jersey and of other coastal States.

For over 20 years both Democratic and Republican administrations have respected the moratorium on leasing and preleasing activities on Outer Continental Shelf.

In his 2004 budget request, President Bush also honored the wishes of the coastal States.

His request included the traditional moratorium language—and so should the Energy bill before us.

The people of New Jersey, and the residents of all coastal States, do not want oil and gas rigs marring their treasured beaches and fishing grounds.

Such drilling poses serious threats to our environment and to our economy, and so do the technologies used to gather data.

The seismic surveys authorized in the Energy bill produce explosive pulses which have produced documented organ damage in marine species and have been associated with fatal whale strandings.

Dart core sampling, also authorized in the bill, is known to cause the destruction of fish habitat on the sea floor and to smother seabed marine life with silt.

Is all of this damage and destruction justified—just to gather data? I don't think it is.

Additionally, in New Jersey our economy depends heavily on shoreline tourism.

Tourism in my State is a 10-billion-dollar-a-year industry and provides employment for thousands of people.

We simply cannot afford damage to our shorelines, nor to the marine life which inhabits our coastal waters.

What the Energy bill proposes is a step in the wrong direction. What purpose would be served by performing an inventory of oil and natural gas resources along the Outer Continental Shelf, if there is no intention of drilling in these regions?

This provision completely undercuts the language which Congress has approved for years—and it clearly undercuts the stated wishes of the coastal States that would incur the greatest damage.

Our country needs new sources of energy. And there are many energy sources vastly underutilized in America.

We have barely scratched the surface of our country's potential for developing renewable energy.

The enormous energy conservation and efficiency savings that are possible are largely untapped. Too often these measures are voluntary rather than a part of the way we do business.

If we better utilize these untapped sources of domestic energy, perhaps Congress won't be tempted to sweep aside the will of the people of New Jersey and the will of the citizens of other coastal States.

We must continue, as we historically have, to recognize the right of States to govern their own shorelines.

I urge my colleagues to vote for Senator GRAHAM's amendment.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, what kind of energy policy does this country need? There is little argument about the need for affordable, reliable energy from diverse sources. The bill before us seeks to achieve that laudable goal in the worst possible manner: on the back of the American taxpayer. This bill subsidizes two types of energy. That which few consumers would be willing to pay for and that which companies would produce and consumers would pay for in the absence of subsidies. I ask my colleagues if this makes any sense?

Let's let the competitive market determine our energy future. Let's let the market, with millions of individual consumers pursuing their individual energy needs, based on their own unique situations, steer this country's energy economy. Let us not dictate to consumers and taxpayers how they should spend their energy dollars.

Recently this body voted on a tax bill that allows taxpayers to keep more of their hard-earned money in an attempt to jump-start this economy. The tax cut was passed on the premise that consumers and businesses are better suited than government to make sound economic decisions that translate into economic growth. That same premise applies to energy. Yet the Energy bill under debate tosses that premise out the window. Suddenly the consumers and businesses of this country, which we are trusting to make sound economic decisions to put the whole economy back on track, cannot be trusted to make sound energy decisions. Instead, we are dictating their energy choices for them. No body of persons, not even a panel of 100 of the world's most brilliant economists, let alone the Senate of the United States, has the knowledge, wisdom or foresight to make such decisions rationally for millions of American citizens.

Let's take a look at what this bill would do. It mandates greater use of ethanol, a fuel that is already heavily subsidized. Without subsidies and mandates, ethanol would virtually cease to exist as a motor fuel. It subsidizes renewable energies such as wind power, which again would not survive in the competitive marketplace due to the high cost and low value of the electricity produced. It subsidizes coal, already the most plentiful and affordable energy source in this country. Coal power will continue to thrive in this country whether subsidized or not, as long as we don't regulate it out of existence, yet we are providing subsidies for coal power. This bill subsidizes nuclear power, which would probably be competitive were it not for the onerous regulatory restrictions that needlessly burden that industry. The list goes on.

Let me suggest that the greatest obstacle to affordable and reliable energy in this country is the U.S. Government. Before this body looks outward for solutions to our energy problems, it should look inward. It should identify those laws, regulations, and other Government impediments that prevents this country's citizens and businesses from making sound energy decisions. We encumber the U.S. energy economy with all sorts of onerous and often unneeded and outmoded rules that raise the cost of energy and distort energy markets. Instead of fixing this state of affairs, this bill compounds these errors by further raising the cost of energy to American taxpayers and further distorting energy markets through subsidies.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I rise today to speak to an amendment to fix a funding gap that exists for meritorious Women's Business Centers that are graduating from the first stage of the program and entering the sustainability portion.

I would like to first thank Senator SNOWE, Chair of the Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, for working very closely with me on this issue. Her leadership and support has been invaluable. I would also like to thank Senator BINGAMAN for his support on this issue. As a long-time ally of the Women's Business Centers and all SBA programs, his assistance on this amendment has been very helpful. Last, I want to express my gratitude to Senators HARKIN, EDWARDS, CANTWELL, ENZI and DOMENICI, as well as Congressman MCINTYRE, for their backing and for their hard work to resolve this issue.

As I have said on more than one occasion, women business owners do not get the recognition they deserve for their contribution to our economy: Eighteen million Americans would be without jobs today if it weren't for these entrepreneurs who had the courage and the vision to strike out on their own. For 18 years, as a member of the Senate Committee on Small Business and Entrepreneurship, I have worked to increase the opportunities for these enterprising women in a variety of ways, leading to greater earning power, financial independence, and asset accumulation. These are more than words. For these women, it means having a bank account, buying a home, sending their children to college, calling the shots.

And helping them at every step are the Women's Business Centers. In 2002 alone, these centers helped 85,000 women with the business counseling and assistance they likely could not find anywhere else. Cutting funding for any centers would be harmful to the centers, to the women they serve, to their States, and to the national economy.

The funding gap for Women's Business Centers in sustainability exists because the Small Business Administration has chosen to short-change existing, proven centers in order to open new, unproven ones. By incorrectly interpreting the funding formula set up in the Women's Business Centers program, the SBA has made way for new centers at the expense of those that are already established. This is both bad policy and contrary to congressional intent.

As the author of the Women's Business Centers Sustainability Act of 1999, I can tell you that when the Women's Business Centers Sustainability Act of 1999 was signed into law, it was Congress's intent to protect the established and successful infrastructure of worthy, performing centers. The law was designed to allow all graduating Women's Business Centers that meet certain SBA standards to receive continued funding under sustainability grants, while still allowing for new centers—but not by penalizing those that have already demonstrated their worth.

Currently there are 81 Women's Business Centers in 48 States. Forty-six of these are in the initial program, 29 are already in sustainability, and 6 more are graduating or have graduated from the initial program and are now applying for sustainability grants. Because of these potentially 6 new sustainability centers—from Georgia, Iowa, Illinois, North Carolina, Texas, and Washington State—and because the SBA is incorrectly interpreting the funding formula for sustainability grants in order to open new centers, the amount of funds reserved for Women's Business Centers in sustainability must be increased from 30.2 percent to 36 percent.

This amendment does just that. It directs the SBA to reserve 36 percent of the appropriated funds for the sustainability portion of the Women's Business Centers program—even though the SBA already has the authority on its own to increase the reserve—thereby protecting the established Women's Business Centers form almost certain grant funding cuts and still providing enough funds to open six or more new centers across the country.

I want to again express my sincere and steadfast support for the growing community of women entrepreneurs across the Nation and for the invaluable programs through which the SBA provides women business owners with the tools they need to succeed. As a long-time advocate for women entrepreneurs and SBA's programs, my record in support of the SBA's women's programs and for women business owners speaks for itself. I have continually fought for increased funding for the women's programs at the SBA, for sustaining and expanding the women's business centers, and for giving women entrepreneurs their deserved representation within the Federal procurement process, to name a few. With respect to laws assisting women-owned businesses, I have been proud to either introduce the underlying legislation or strongly advocate to ensure their passage and adequate funding.

This amendment is necessary to continue the good work of SBA's Women's Business Center network, and I urge all of my colleagues to support it.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that we proceed to a period of morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EULOGY OF DAVE DEBUSSCHERE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I read in a number of national publications brief excerpts of the eulogy that former Senator Bill Bradley gave at the funeral of Dave Debusschere. The paragraphs I saw were really moving.

I was able to obtain a copy of the full eulogy that Senator Bradley gave on May 19 at St. Joseph's Church in Garden City, NY. It is really, truly, a moving eulogy. It outlines the context and the relationship of Dave Debusschere and Bill Bradley and other members of the New York Knicks team, but especially those two who were roommates during many years of their travels around the country playing championship basketball. It explains their personal relationship, as Bill Bradley can do. He explains also what a team is all about. We, both in the majority and minority, are always working with our team. I recommend this as reading for everyone.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of the speech given by Bill Bradley at the funeral of Dave Debusschere be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EULOGY OF DAVE DEBUSSCHERE

Geri, Michelle, Peter, Dennis, DeBusschere sisters and family.

Today, Willis asked me to speak for him, for Clyde, Earl and all the Knicks who loved Dave. The moment I heard the news last Wednesday, it was as if a lightning bolt hit my heart. It was so shocking, so unexpected, so final.

When I saw the newspaper stories after Dave's death, one photo caught my eye. It was of Dave driving to the basket, the ball in his left hand, legs sturdy, shoulders strong, shock of dark hair matted with sweat, and a face full of his unique determination. As I looked at it, I was reminded of a time when we were all younger, and there was a magic about life. A magic about life—there is no other way to describe those years on our Knick teams. How it felt to hear the roar of the Garden crowd, to know the satisfaction of a play well-executed, to feel the chills of winning a championship, to share the camaraderie, even brotherhood, of working in an environment of mutual trust, with people you respected, each of whom had the courage to take the last second shot.

Dave's strength, his dedication, his unselfishness, his fierce desire to win, and, above all, his commitment to the team, were all at the core of that success. He seemed to say, ''What's the point of achieving anything in basketball if you can't share it?'' That's the beauty of having teammates. They know what it takes to get through a long season, to recover from a loss, to pull out a win when you're hurt or tired. Dave believed that once good players have put on their uniforms, everything else about them—race, ethnicity, personal history, off-court style—fades into the background. It's time to play—together. And we did.

Dave DeBusschere left all of himself on the court every game. He held nothing back. I can remember those nights on the road in late February. Dave, his face drawn from the long season; and Willis, with his brow furrowed, and heating packs on each knee. They would look at each other in the locker room of the fourth town in five nights, and their glances alone seemed to say, ''I'm tired to my bones. I don't want to go out there, but if you do it, I will too.'' And they always did. Together they set the character tone for the team in a kind of shared leadership that rarely needed words.

If I had $100 for every night Dave played hurt, I could buy a nice car. One night, Dave caught an elbow in the face that broke his nose. The pain was obvious. I didn't see how he was going to play the next night. But, there he was, ready to go, when the buzzer sounded—with a strip of plastic over his nose, held in place by white adhesive tape forming an ''H'' above and below his eyes.

I think the fans loved Dave because they sensed what his teammates already knew: he was the real thing. No pretense. He hated phonies. No guile. He told you exactly how he felt. No greediness. I never heard him talk about points. No excuses. He always took responsibility for his mistakes.

Dave was a man of action, not words. He was above the petty things in life, and he wasn't impressed easily. Power, fame, money, were not the currencies he traded in. Friendship, loyalty, hard work, were what he placed the greatest value in. If Bush or Madonna or Rockefeller walked into a bar, I bet he'd barely look up from the beer he was sharing with a friend.

There was a time when I'd slept in a room with Dave DeBusschere more than I had with my wife. We were roommates on the road for six years. That's about 250 games, 250 cities, 250 hotels.

If the truth be told (as Geri knows), on many occasions Dave woke me up with his snoring. I'd say, ''Dave.'' To no avail. I'd shout, ''Dave!'' Still no success. Finally I'd get out of bed, put my hands on his back and push him over on his side. he still wouldn't wake up, but the snoring would stop. And I'd get a few hours of sleep . . . until the next time.

You get to know someone when you're with him that much. You hear about his life; you meet his friends and family; you know what he likes to eat, what he likes to do in his downtime, what forms his daily habits; you learn what he admires in people and what he can't stand.

You can learn a lot of from your roommate, too, especially if he's an experienced pro and you are not. It was my second year in the NBA. I had just made the Knicks starting team as a forward, and we had lost a close one in Philadelphia on a bad pass I made when the Sixers were applying full court pressure. After the game I was dejected. Back at the hotel. Dave, who had joined the team from Detroit two months earlier, saw how I felt and put me straight. ''You can't go through a season like this,'' he said. ''There are too many games, Sure, you blew it tonight, but when it's over, it's over. Let it go. Otherwise you won't be ready to play tomorrow night.'' It was NBA lesson #1; Don't make today's loss the enemy of tomorrow's victory.

On occasion, Dave, Willis and I would go to dinner on the road, and Willis would begin telling hunting stories—what weapons he used, where he used them and what the weather was, how be tracked the animals, what his gear consisted of, the angle at which he shot with his gun, or his bow and arrow, and so forth. Dave and I were not hunters, but once Willis got started, it took him more than a little while to finish. After one such evening when we got back to our room, Dave said, ''You know, I think Willis likes to hunt!''

Dave also was not above practical jokes. Once after a championship season, the DeBusscheres, Kladis's and Bradleys chartered a boat to tour the Greek islands. One day we pulled up off an island beach, and Dave and I dove off the boat to swim ashore. As we were coming out of the water, we found a lone man, laying on a towel. An American. He watched us emerge from the sea, and shouted, ''DeBusschere—Dave DeBusschere. Bradley. Oh my God! Wait til my family sees this!'' and he took off. Dave looked at me; I looked at him, and with a grin he said, ''Let's go.'' We swam back to the boat, hid behind towels and watched as the man, his wife and kids behind him, ran back onto the beach. ''Honest they were here!'' We could hear him shout. ''I saw them! Really! They were here I swear it.''

It's been a long time since the Knicks were champions and I roomed with Dave. But time has only deepened our friendship. I always looked forward to our one-on-one lunches, our dinners with Ernestine and the irrepressible Geri, our family visits to Long Island, and on occasion a game like the one last spring when Willis, Dave, Earl and I went to New Jersey for a Lakers/Nets playoff game with loyalties split between Willis's Nets and Phil's Lakers.

Over the years I commiserated with Dave about the way the Garden treated him when he was G.M. I spoke at Peter's college graduation. I shared the pride that he and Geri felt as Michelle, Peter and Dennis grew into spectacular young adults.

And, I will never forget when he told me how proud he was to be sitting in the gallery the day I was sworn into the Senate. Over the years he made campaign appearances in New Jersey on my behalf, attended fundraisers to add star power, and sloughed through the snows of Iowa and New Hampshire in 2000. Whenever I asked him to do something, he was there; and every place he went, he made people feel good.

Until last Wednesday, one of the most enjoyable things in life was talking basketball with Dave DeBusschere. The players and the teams, the rules and style of play have all changed, but the sharpness of his insights never diminished. What he said was always so clear and simple that I'd ask myself afterwards, ''Why didn't I think of that?''

Championship teams share a moment that few other people know. The overwhelming emotion derives from more than pride. Your devotion to your teammates, the depth of your sense of belonging, is something like blood kinship, but without the complications. Rarely can words express it. In the nonverbal world of basketball, it's like grace and beauty and ease, and it spills into all areas of your life.

So I say to my big brother: Be proud. You brought all these things to the many lives you touched. Goodbye, we'll miss you, #22. May God grant you a peaceful journey.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE—S. 14

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, with respect to the Graham amendment No. 884, to which we are going to proceed in the morning, and the hour of time we have, that Senator FEINSTEIN, Senator BOXER, and Senator CANTWELL each control 15 minutes of the 60 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE CRISIS IN THE MIDDLE EAST

Mr. WARNER. Mr President, I rise today to express my concern about the horrific violence which has erupted over the past few days in the Middle East. The world is distressed to see the images on T.V. of today's suicide bombing in Jerusalem and the attacks in Gaza. Condolences are extended to all of those who continue to pay the price of this intolerable seemingly uncontrollable cycle of violence in the Middle East.

This human suffering must be brought to an end. Once again I take the floor of the Senate to call on both sides both Israel and the Palestinians to take the initiative to invite NATO forces to undertake a peacekeeping role and to help provide a measure of stability needed to allow the ''road map'' process to maintain a momentum forward.

President Bush is to be commended for his personal commitment to bring the Israelis and the Palestinians together on a path toward peace. Last week, President Bush, joining with world leaders, gave new impetus to the Middle East peace process. He met with the Israeli and Palestinian prime ministers at Aqaba, Jordan, where these two leaders agreed to begin to implement the early steps of the ''road map'' to peace.

In Aqaba, both sides agreed to a step-by-step process whereby each takes positive steps and makes some concessions to achieve the stated goal of an Israeli and a Palestinian state, living side-by-side in peace.

Unfortunately, there are third parties, such as Hamas and other radical groups, that are making every effort to continue the violence and disrupt the path to peace. These groups must not be permitted to hijack the peace process.

How can others help the Palestinian leadership gain control of the security situation on its side?

The Israeli and Palestinian leaders should be urged first to fulfill their commitments to establish and help to enforce a cease-fire; and, second, to ask the North Atlantic Council to consider sending a peacekeeping contingent as soon as practical.

I have spoken before on this subject here on the Senate floor, and have written to President Bush, about my idea concerning how NATO might play a useful role in the quest for Middle East peace. I ask that my letter to President Bush and his reply be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,
COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES,
Washington, DC, March 14, 2003.

President GEORGE W. BUSH,
The White House,
Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I would like to commend you on the step you took today to give new impetus to the Middle East peace process by announcing that it was time to share with Israel and the Palestinians the road map to peace that the United States has developed with its ''Quartet'' partners. This is a welcome and timely initiative, given the complex way in which the Middle East conflict, Iraq and the global war against terrorism are intertwined.

The festering hostilities in the Middle East are an enormous human tragedy. Along with you, and many others, I refuse to accept that this is a conflict without end. You have articulated a vision of an Israeli and a Palestinian state living side by side in peace and security. That is a bold initiative that deserves strong international support. With the Israeli elections concluded, and the imminent confirmation of a Palestinian Prime Minster, you are right to refocus international attention on the Middle East peace process.

Mr. President, in August 2002, I wrote to you to propose an idea concerning the possibility of offering NATO peacekeepers to help implement a cease-fire in the Middle East. I have spoken of this idea numerous times on the Senate Floor. I am now even more convinced that the United States and its NATO partners should consider an additional element for the ''road map'' concept: NATO should offer, and I stress the word ''offer,'' to provide a peacekeeping force, once a cease-fire has been established by the Israeli Government and the Palestinian Authority. This NATO force would serve in support of the cease-fire mechanisms agreed to by Israel and the Palestinian Authority. The NATO offer would have to be willingly accepted by both governments, and it in no way should be viewed as a challenge to either side's sovereignty. The acceptance of this offer would have to be coupled with a commitment by Israel and the Palestianian Authority to cooperate in every way possible to permit the peacekeeping mission to succeed.

I fully recognize that this would not be a risk-free operation for the participating NATO forces. But I nonetheless believe that the offer of peacekeepers from NATO would have many benefits. First, it would demonstrate a strong international commitment to peace in the Middle East. Second, it would offer the prospect of a peacekeeping force that is ready today. It is highly capable, rapidly deployable, and has a proven record of success in the Balkans. A NATO peacekeeping force is likely to be acceptable to both parties, given the traditional European sympathy for the Palestinian cause and the traditional United States support of Israel.

Third, this would be a worthy post-Cold War mission for NATO in a region where NATO member countries have legitimate national security interests. It could even be an area of possible collaboration with Russia through the NATO-Russia Council. A NATO peacekeeping mission in the Middle East would be wholly consistent with the Alliance's new Strategic Concept. Approved at the NATO Summit in Washington in April 1999, the new Strategic Concept envisioned so called ''out-of-area'' operations for NATO.

Given the fractious debate in NATO over Iraq and the defense of Turkey, it would be important to show that NATO can work together to make a positive contribution to solving one of the most challenging security issues of our day.

There will be many detractors to the idea of sending NATO peacekeepers to the Middle East to help implement a cease-fire. But I think there is broad agreement on the imperative to giving new hope to the peace process and redoubling diplomatic efforts to keep Israel and the Palestinians moving on the road to peace. Peacekeepers coming from many NATO nations could give new hope and confidence to the peoples of Israel and Palestine that there could soon be an end to the violence that overhangs their daily lives.

Mr. President, I hope that you will receive this idea in the constructive spirit in which it is offered.

With kind regards, I am

Respectfully,

JOHN WARNER,
Chairman.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, April 29, 2003.

Hon. JOHN W. WARNER,
Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you for your letter about the proposed roadmap to Middle East peace, and your suggestion concerning a NATO peacekeeping force. I understand your view that such an offer could be a further inducement to the parties to reach agreement.

As you know, the issues dividing Israelis and Palestinians are deep, complex, and hotly contested. The security arrangements of any settlement are one important element among many. Ultimately, our goal is for two states living side by side in peace. Over the long term, such an arrangement must be sustainable without the presence of outside peacekeeping forces. As we engage the parties in our effort to forge a peace agreement, I will keep your proposal under consideration.

I also agree with your comments about the importance of NATO's role as we face the security challenges of the 21st Century. As you know, at the NATO Prague Summit, Allied leaders joined me in launching an ambitious agenda for modernizing NATO, including the creation of a NATO Response Force, reforming the command structure, and bringing in new members who are committed to democracy and collective defense. I appreciate your strong support for this important effort.

We have begun steps to increase NATO's role in Afghanistan, and have asked NATO to consider assistance it could provide in post-war Iraq. I welcome your support on these matters as well.

Sincerely,

GEORGE W. BUSH.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I spoke today with the press about the idea that NATO, if requested, might provide a peacekeeping force to support a cease-fire previously agreed to by the Israeli Government and the Palestinian Authority. NATO peacekeepers would have to be invited by both governments, and in no way should be viewed as a challenge to either side's sovereignty. The acceptance of this offer would have to be coupled with a commitment by Israel and the Palestinian Authority to cooperate in every way possible to permit the peacekeeping mission to succeed.

I fully recognize that this would not be a risk-free operation for the participating NATO forces, some of which could be American. But I nonetheless believe that the offer of peacekeepers from NATO would have many benefits.

First, it would demonstrate a strong international commitment to peace in the Middle East. By their presence, NATO peacekeepers might give hope to people on both sides that violence will be curtailed.

Second, it would offer the prospect of a peacekeeping force that is ready to go, today. It is highly capable, rapidly deployable, and has a proven record of success with peacekeeping in the Balkans.

Third, a NATO peacekeeping force is likely to be acceptable to both parties, given the traditional European associations with the Palestinian people and the traditional United States associations with the people of Israel.

Fourth, it would be a worthy post-Cold War mission for NATO in a region where NATO member countries have legitimate national security interests. In 1999, NATO adopted a new Strategic Concept that envisioned NATO operations, including peacekeeping operations, taking place outside of Europe.

There will be many detractors to the idea of sending NATO peacekeepers to the Middle East to help implement a cease-fire. There is, I acknowledge, a historical record of outside forces being unsuccessful in security mission in this area. But I invite the debate, first and foremost among the NATO members themselves.

I think we can all agree on the imperative of redoubling our efforts to keep Israel and the Palestinians moving on the road to peace, and of offering an alternative that may break the tragic cycle of violence. This is the responsibility not only of the United States, but indeed, of the entire international community.

Progress on Middle East peace would help us to continue the gains we have made in Iraq to spread peace in the Middle East and to address the underlying causes that have given rise to terrorist groups like al-Qaeda.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to talk about something that is unrelated to any of the subjects we have been discussing today. I rise to talk about the news we just heard about an explosion in Israel and the killing of 13 to 15 people—and it is going to be more because, in addition to that, there are over 50 who have been seriously injured. We have witnessed an attack like this on innocent civilians by mad men who encourage a son, a daughter, a brother, or a sister to blow themselves to smithereens, and their mission is to simply kill innocents.

For a few moments, let's review a scenario that perhaps would be better understood in our country. Think about a shopping mall or a busy street in New York, Detroit, Minneapolis, Los Angeles, or Louisiana, and think about people who might be on the bus, youngsters going to school, people going to the doctor, people going to work, people carrying on commerce, and imagine that someone came along with a bomb in one of those cities, Washington, DC, and created an explosion that killed 700 people at one shot. That is the equivalent, if we take the size of Israel, about 6 million people—we have 280 million—it is about 45 to 1, so just do the multiplication. We are talking about 700 people who would die in this senseless attack. What would our response be in America? We would call out the Army, the Navy, the Marines, the FBI, the police, every agency that could retaliate, either to capture or gun down the leader of an organization that would seduce a young person to sacrifice their life for such a heinous purpose.

Purportedly this was a response to a tragic accident that took place as the Israelis were pursuing the leader of Hamas, the organization that took credit today for killing those innocent people and that takes credit for lots of attacks on innocent people in Israel. So there was a pursuit by the Israelis of the leader of Hamas because Hamas was an organization that helped take five soldiers' lives in Israel on Sunday night. Unfortunately, the hunt went awry and some innocent people were tragically killed.

When an attack such as that takes place, it is in response, it is in retaliation, to the violence that was visited upon the citizens in Israel. When these attacks take place, there is only one mission. They are not hunting criminals. They are not trying to capture somebody. What they are doing is killing innocent people—young people, old people, it does not matter.

Today's horrible attack on Jerusalem is another illustration of why Hamas has no place in any peace process. Hamas is a terror organization, has always been a terror organization, and desires to continue as a terror organization. I think it is time for the world to recognize that Hamas is in the same league as al-Qaida, and we know what we did when our people were attacked. We did the right thing. We sent our troops out. We were looking to capture the leader of that organization.

We would not stand by 5 minutes and accept it. And Israel should not stand by 5 minutes and accept it. We cannot look at the equal violence on both sides of the issue in Israel and with the Palestinians. They are not the same. Israel's attacks are always in retaliation for violence that was put upon Israelis. The other side delights in recording the fact that a suicide bomber took 8, 10, 12 lives, their count—600 people, or whatever the number is, in equivalence in America.

It is time to understand what is going on there. I strongly believe the peace process has to continue, but it should continue with Palestinian leaders who have demonstrated that they are interested in peace, as is now-Prime Minister Mr. Abbas. I commend the administration for deciding to reengage in the Mideast conflict by introducing and promoting a roadmap, a design, for Middle East peace.

President Bush's recent visit to the region was an important first step in renewing U.S. commitment to this endeavor, and the administration has to remain committed to peace in the area. President Bush must forcefully deliver a message to the Palestinians about their need to reconstitute and consolidate their security agencies in order to fulfill their stated goal to deter and punish terrorists such as Hamas, and he has to tell the Israelis that they have the right to defend themselves. They have made very important overtures, especially when it comes to talk about dismantling some of the settlements.

Mr. Abbas' clear statement that the violence of the intifada was a betrayal of the Palestinian cause is the most important reason that there is hope for progress in the Middle East. I am also encouraged that as a goodwill gesture Israel has opened its borders to Palestinian workers, released about 100 Palestinian prisoners, and has begun to dismantle some outposts. They are important first steps.

Israel and the settlers have to come to terms with the inevitability of dismantling some settlements in order to allow for the eventual creation of a contiguous Palestinian state. I was gratified to hear five Arab leaders—President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt, Crown Prince Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, King Abdullah of Jordan, King Hamada of Bahrain, and the new Palestinian Prime Minister, Mahmoud Abbas—release a statement last Tuesday, June 3, clearly asserting that they oppose terrorism and will not finance or arm extremist Palestinian groups.

This statement was long overdue. Right now the Arab leaders must translate this statement into action through one central task, and that is strengthening the hand of the new Palestinian Prime Minister, Mahmoud Abbas.

This means conferring on Mr. Abbas the authority they once gave Yasser Arafat and condemning violent groups such as Hamas and their rejectionist agendas. Only a united international front critical of terrorists and supportive of Mr. Abbas' plan for the Palestinians' future can facilitate the implementation of the roadmap.

The United States should continue exerting pressure on Syria to shut down its support for Palestinian terrorists, Hezbollah, and other organizations, the organizations that have no function except to disrupt the prospect for peace. They should encourage the withdrawal of the Syrians from occupied Lebanon and stem any production or research on weapons of mass destruction.

Sometimes it is hard to understand why an embattled country like Israel will be so effective, so hard, in its response. It is only hard to understand if you have not been there. This is a country that seeks peace more than any other place on Earth that we can imagine. They have lost thousands of people, perhaps hundreds of thousands in the equivalent American counts. There is a history of the people there that says they are always the subject of some cruelty, some attacks, some injury, some dead, from outsiders.

The last century saw the killing of millions of Jewish people. That sets a tone. That tone says, make peace, make life satisfactory. Do the things you have to to create a society, a country. Do what we can do about fighting disease, research what can be done about turning arid lands into farm lands, do what can be done to make life more livable. Yet, these criminal organizations continue to press their attack on Israel.

I make this suggestion. If the people in Paris or London or Berlin or other capital cities around the world had an attack such as this, we would have a response from the U.N. and everybody else. But when it comes to attacks on Israel, there is a notable silence, except for the only friend that Israel has in the world, and that is the United States and the American people.

We look with horror and grief at what took place this day. Unfortunately, this is not an unusual occurrence as far as Israel is concerned. We have to say that we in the United States of America will not tolerate this kind of violence, that we are going to let Israel fight back as hard as she has to, to defend herself and force the communities in the Middle East to understand that there will be no peace for anybody. That is very dangerous. That conflict could escalate into a major confrontation in other parts of the world.

We send our sadness and condolences to the people of Israel. We wish them well in the future and hope peace will soon be the only confrontation that takes place, and that would be across the table.

I yield the floor.

HONORING UWE E. TIMPKE

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following resolution from the HELP Committee be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICA'S WORSENING FISCAL SITUATION

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, the new Congressional Budget Office, CBO, budget deficit numbers announced Monday should trouble us all.

Only 1 month ago CBO, estimated that the Federal deficit would be $300 billion—an alarming number considering that when President Bush took office the Federal Government was running a surplus. Now, CBO has notified Congress that the deficit will be a record $400 billion.

CBO now projects that the federal government is likely to end fiscal year 2003 with a deficit of more than $400 billion, or close to 4 percent of gross domestic product. The deterioration in the short-term budget outlook stems from continued weakness in revenue collections and from enactment of the Jobs and Growth Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2003, which will add an estimated $61 billion to this year's deficit in the form of tax cuts, refundable credits, and aid to states. The recent extension of unemployment benefits will boost outlays by another $3 billion this year. For the first eight months of 2003, the government ran a deficit of $291 billion, CBO estimates, about twice the shortfall it incurred in the same period last year.

When President Bush entered the White House in January 2001, the Nation was enjoying a record budget surplus that was built with hard choices and determination over the previous 8 years. With breathtaking speed, this administration's fiscal irresponsibility has quickly turned those record surpluses into record deficits. In 3 short years, these policies have driven us further into debt, transferred a greater share of tax receipts to the pockets of the Nation's most privileged, and turned millions of hard-working Americans out of their jobs.

In fact, the Labor Department recently reported that the Nation's unemployment rate rose to 6.1 percent last month, the highest level in 9 years. Since the economy began slumping in early 2001, nearly 2.5 million jobs have disappeared.

In 2001, I voted against the President's first tax plan because it was too skewed toward the wealthiest Americans and it was too fiscally irresponsible. Since then, we have gone from record surpluses to red ink, and the economy is still adrift.

Yet Congress passed a budget this year—including another ill-advised tax plan of $350 billion—that will only further deepen our deficits and pump up the national debt. I voted against the tax bill again this year because it is so clearly harmful to the economic health of our country, especially with the cost of the war in Iraq and the ever-increasing peacekeeping expenses.

The budget plans this administration has sent to Congress each year have been full of misguided priorities and squandered opportunities. The President's plans have severely underfunded essential health, employment training and education efforts. They have contained enormous Government giveaways to wealthy corporations and the wealthiest individuals instead of providing relief for hard-working Americans and their families. And they have been wholly inadequate to meet the domestic security needs of the first-responder agencies that we are counting on to defend against and prepare for future acts of terrorism.

The President's economic plan is not about growing the economy or creating jobs. It is a fiscally irresponsible plan that threatens to economically divide our country. Cutting taxes is a popular thing to do, and I am delighted to vote for tax cuts when they make good fiscal sense. But it is not always the right thing to do for the country and for the security and economic well-being of the American people.

The 1993 budget bill set the framework to eliminate the Federal deficit and passed by the narrowest of margins. It was a tough vote for everyone who voted for that plan and many Senators and Congressmen lost their seats in the subsequent election before the benefits of the plan could be fully realized. That momentous vote set this country on a course of surpluses, budget discipline and fiscal responsibility unmatched in American history. Unfortunately, the current administration—with its lack of fiscal responsibility—has blown all of the progress that many worked so hard to achieve. And the proof is in the latest CBO deficit figures.

Earlier this year, the President said we should not pass on our fiscal problems to future Presidents, Congresses, and generations. On that point, I agree with him. Regrettably, year after year his budgets have driven us deeper into debt, and his policies will do exactly what the President says we should avoid: They will burden our children.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2003

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about the need for hate crimes legislation. On May 1, 2003, Senator KENNEDY and I introduced the Local Law Enforcement Act, a bill that would add new categories to current hate crimes law, sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred on November 10, 2001. In San Antonio, TX, two people in ski masks robbed and beat the female owner of a small Persian restaurant, leaving behind racial slurs on the walls. The attackers forced open a back door. One of them bound the victim's hands and legs with duct tape and beat her to the ground. The second attacker sprayed hate messages on the walls.

I believe that Government's first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act is a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation and changing current law, we can change hearts and minds as well.

DR. SAMUEL B. HAND, UNIVERSITY OF VERMONT PROFESSOR OF HISTORY EMERITUS

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I come to the floor today to talk about an extraordinary Vermonter, Dr. Samuel B. Hand. Many people argue about what makes you a true Vermonter. Some say it is if you were born there; some say it is if you plan to die there. Until the debate is concluded, the person who could settle the matter is Dr. Hand.

While originally from Long Island, in 1961, Dr. Hand became a professor of European history at the University of Vermont, UVM. As a scholar with a passion for history, Dr. Hand quickly became one who added to Vermont's achievements and glories. He emphasized to his students the importance and the excitement of the history of Vermont, resulting in a number of his former students becoming teachers and archivists in Vermont.

Last month, the University of Vermont's Center for Research on Vermont honored Dr. Hand as the recipient of a lifetime achievement award for his expertise in Vermont history and his generous mentoring skills.

In addition to being the ''heart'' of the history department, as his colleagues called him, Dr. Hand coauthored a number of books, including ''Vermont Voices, A Documentary History of the Green Mountain State'' and ''A Vermont Encyclopedia'', and directed a National Endowment for the Humanities-funded series, ''Lake Champlain: Reflections on Our Past.'' He was also one of the founding members of the University of Vermont's Center for Research on Vermont and served as president of the Vermont Historical Society and as president of the Oral History Society. Today's editorial in the Burlington Free Press praises Dr. hand for ''extend[ing] his base beyond the walls of UVM and reinforced the important collaboration between the state's flagship university and Vermont.''

Both the University of Vermont and the State of Vermont are truly fortunate to have benefited from the dedication and intelligence of Dr. Hand. Vermonters likes him make me proud to represent such a great State. Mr. President, I would ask that this statement and the Burlington Free Press editorial be placed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Burlington Free Press, June 11, 2003]

A VERMONT SCHOLAR

Samuel B. Hand still has a trace of Long Island in his voice, but the retired University of Vermont history professor knows more about Vermont than many of the state's residents.

Hand was recognized for his contributions to the study of his adopted state last month when he received a lifetime achievement award from the University of Vermont's Center for Research on Vermont, of which he was a founding member.

Although he started out teaching European history when he arrived at UVM in 1961, Hand quickly saw the merit of specializing in Vermont history.

His graduate students had a greater opportunity to have their work published than if they had chosen a broader and more heavily researched topic, and many of the students had a personal connection to the state's history.

''I might have a student from California who was a sixth-generation UVMer with a grandfather who was once a state senator,'' Hand said in an interview. ''Vermont history is very personal.''

Beyond his mentoring of students—for which he was named UVM graduate faculty teacher of the year in 1994, the year he retired—Hand has been a prolific researcher and writer.

The professor of history emeritus has written many articles about Vermont, and co-authored ''Vermont Voices, A Documentary History of the Green Mountain State'' in 1998 and ''A Vermont Encyclopedia,'' which will be out in August.

His book, ''The Star That Set, The Vermont Republican Party, 1854–1974,'' was published last year.

Hand, 72, has brought together organizations and university disciplines that share a common interest in Vermont. As a former president of the Vermont Historical Society and last year's recipient of the Founders Circle Award from the Ethan Allen Homestead, Hand has extended his base beyond the walls of UVM and reinforced the important collaboration between the state's flagship university and Vermont.

Along the way, he has influenced students and aspiring historians to see Vermont history—not as dry and distant—but as alive and brimming with dramatic stories and interesting characters, such as Ethan Allen, Samuel de Champlain and former Gov. George Aiken, described by Hand as ''the quintessential Vermonter against whom other Vermonters measured themselves.''

Hand has played a major role in bringing Vermont stories to life and encouraging people to know their roots and appreciate their home. It is work well worth a lifetime achievement award.

AN OKLAHOMA LOSS IN OPERATION IRAQI FREEDOM

Mr. NICKLES. Mr. President, over the past few months we have seen the fall of Saddam Hussein's brutal regime coupled with the dawning of a new day for the Iraqi people.

With major military combat operations in Iraq over and the security of our homeland bolstered, America and her allies are turning our efforts toward helping the Iraqi people build a free society.

Like many Americans, I was thrilled and heartened by the dramatic images of U.S. troops helping Iraqi citizens tear down statues and paintings of Saddam Hussein. The Iraqi people needed our help, our tanks, our troops, and our commitment to topple Saddam Hussein.

For the first time in their lives, many Iraqis are tasting freedom, and like people everywhere, they think it is wonderful. I am proud of our military and America's commitment to make the people of the Middle East more free and secure.

Our military men and women surely face more difficult days in Iraq, and the Iraqi people will be tested by the responsibilities that come with freedom. The thugs who propped up the previous regime and outside forces with goals of their own will seek to cause problems, stir up trouble, and initiate violence. Freedom is messy—nowhere more so than in a country that has just shaken off a brutal dictatorship.

But the journey toward a democratic Iraq has now begun. Like so many nations before it, Iraq now endures the growing pains common to a fledgling democracy. The uncertainty in today's Iraq will soon give way to the promise of a better future for the Iraqi people. As we move closer to this goal, we must remember those who sacrificed for this noble cause.

Today, I rise to honor a man who made the ultimate sacrifice one can make for his country and the cause of freedom. Petty Officer 3rd Class Doyle Wayne Bolinger, Jr., 21, of Poteau, died last week in Iraq when an unexploded ordnance accidently detonated in the area where he was working. Bolinger, who joined the Navy shortly after high school, was assigned to the Naval Mobile Construction Battalion 133 based in Gulfport, MS, whose members are commonly known as Seabees. His unit has been in the Middle East since January providing construction support to our Armed Forces during military operations.

Everybody liked Bolinger. He was known to always have a smile on his face. People in Poteau, who he often helped out with various jobs, will miss him especially.

His family recently issued a statement saying, ''Wayne is a very special young man and is proud to be a Navy Seabee. He died defending his country. He is without a doubt one of America's finest.''

I could not possibly agree more. This young man represents the very best this Nation has to offer. Petty Officer Bolinger did not die in vain. He died so many others could live in security and freedom. For that sacrifice we are forever indebted. Our thoughts and prayers are with him and his family today and with the troops who are putting their lives on the line in Iraq.

REMEMBERING THE MIAS OF SULTAN YAQUB ON THE 21ST ANNIVERSARY OF THEIR CAPTURE

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise today to ask my colleagues to join me in remembering the Israeli soldiers captured by the Syrians during the 1982 Israeli war with Lebanon. It is with great sadness that we mark today 21 long years of anguish for their families, who continue to desperately seek information about their sons.

On June 11, 1982, an Israeli unit battled with a Syrian armored unit in the Bekaa Valley in northeastern Lebanon. Sergeant Zachary Baumel, First Sergeant Zvi Feldman, and Corporal Yehudah Katz were captured by the Syrians that day. They were identified as an Israeli tank crew, and reported missing in Damascus. the Israeli tank, flying the Syrian and Palestinian flag, was greeted with cheers from bystanders.

Since that terrible day in 1982, the governments of Israel and the United States have been doing their utmost by working with the office of the International Committee of the Red Cross, the United Nations, and other international bodies to obtain any possible information about the fate of the missing soldiers. According to the Geneva Convention, Syria is responsible for the fates of the Israeli soldiers because the area in Lebanon where the soldiers disappeared was continually controlled by Syria. To this day, despite promises made by the government of Syria and by the Palestinians, very little information has been released about the condition of Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, and Yehudah Katz.

Today marks the anniversary of the day that these soldier were reported missing in action. Twenty-one painfilled years have passed since their families have seen their sons, and still Syria has not revealed their whereabouts nor provided any information as to their condition.

One of these missing soldiers, Zachary Baumel, is an American citizen from my home of Brooklyn, NY. An ardent basketball fan, Zachary began his studies at the Hebrew School in Boro Park. In 1979, he moved to Israel with other family members and continued his education at Yeshivat Hesder, where religious studies are integrated with army service. When the war with Lebanon began, Zachary was completing his military service and was looking forward to attending Hebrew University, where he had been accepted to study psychology. but fate decreed otherwise and on June 11, 1982, he disappeared with Zvi Feldman and Yehudah Katz.

During the 106th Congress, I cosponsored and helped to pass Public Law 106–89, which specifies that the State Department must raise the plight of these missing soldiers in all relevant discussions and report findings to Congress regarding the development in the Middle East. We need to know that every avenue has been pursued in order to help bring about the speedy return of these young men. Therefore, I strongly feel that we must be sure to continue the full implementation of Public Law 106–89, so that information about these men can be brought to light.

Zachary's parents Yonah and Miriam Baumel have been relentless in their pursuit of information about Zachary and his compatriots. I have worked closely with the Baumels, as well as the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, and the American Coalition of Missing Israeli Soldiers, and the MIA Task Force of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations. These groups have been at the forefront of this pursuit of justice. I want to recognize their good work and ask my colleagues to join me in supporting their efforts. For two decades these families have been without their children. Answers are long overdue.

The agony of the families of these kidnapped Israeli soldiers is extreme. They have not heard a word regarding the fate of their sons. I believe that we must pledge to do our utmost to obtain information about these soldiers and to bring them home, for the sake of peace, decency and humanity.

THE COAL ACT

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, on June 10, Senator GRASSLEY, chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, issued a statement concerning the Coal Act, included in the 1992 Energy bill, and very specifically the intolerable situation regarding reachback and superreachback coal companies.

The tax levied on these companies in that act is unfair. It never should have been enacted to begin with. It even applies to companies that are no longer in the coal mining business. The Coal Act created the combined benefit fund, CBF, in an attempt to solve many of the pension problems of retired coal miners. There were never any hearings. There was no serious debate on the Senate floor.

The combined benefit fund is approaching insolvency. There are accountants who today would say it is already insolvent. It has been saved from terminable illness only by annual appropriations in recent Appropriations bills. These appropriations do not permanently solve the problem.

I, for a number of years, have attempted to pass legislation to solve this issue. It is my hope that the House of Representatives would at last send to the Senate a bill rectifying this problem so we might also enact it and at least put an end to this inequity.

DEDICATION OF THE BATTLE CREEK FEDERAL CENTER

Mrs. DOLE. Mr. President, on Saturday, May 31, I had the honor of being present at the renaming of the Battle Creek, MI Federal Center for three American heroes, the late Senator Phil Hart, my husband Bob Dole, and my Senate colleague DAN INOUYE.

This recognition would not have happened without the efforts of my friend and colleague, CARL LEVIN. At the dedication Senator LEVIN spoke eloquently and his message about honor, duty, country captured the attention and respect of all those present at this important event. I thank him again and ask unanimous consent that his remarks be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

''What an overwhelming moment this is for all of us just to be with these heroes and their families. For Barb and me it's a treasured moment to join with Bob Dole, Danny Inouye, and two sons of Phil Hart, Jim and Walter Hart; to be with my colleague Libby Dole. You know, I used to say that the U.S. Senate was the world's most exclusive club. They used to say that. But now, Barb, my wife, and Bob will testify to this, are members of the truly most exclusive club in the world which is the Senate's spouse club, because now that Libby Dole is in the Senate, Bob Dole knows what it's like to be a Senate spouse.

Thanks are due to so many people for making this day possible. We are very grateful to the General Services Administration for their prompt response to the idea; Administrator Perry, thank you. To the people of Battle Creek, first and foremost, for again accepting three American soldiers into your heart as you did tens of thousands of American soldiers many years ago. By renaming this building and accepting these three names, you have again said what this community truly is all about and what you, in Battle Creek, and what the workers in this federal center are all about. Thank you for taking them back into your hearts and embracing them by accepting these three names.

For thousands of young soldiers, this was the place they came home, the place where a grateful America cared for the injuries they received defending our nation. And today, by renaming this building we are paying tribute to three soldiers who became close friends during their convalesces at Percy Jones Army Hospital, and went on to serve together in the United States Senate. Renaming the federal center after these three heroes recognizes their unique achievements while honoring all those who received care here and who provided care here. As a new generation of valiant soldiers emerges from the conflict in the Persian Gulf, and we greeted many of them just a few weeks ago here in Battle Creek, it is more appropriate than ever we remember past heroes who were wounded in service to their country. By honoring these three men we will inspire a new generation to follow their example.

Phil Hart, a native son of Michigan, was wounded during the D-Day assault. He spent more than three months at the Army hospital here in Battle Creek. According to Bob Dole, Phil Hart would tirelessly spend from morning 'til night running errands for the rest of us. He was, in Bob Dole's words, and I know Danny Inouye shared this very deeply, 'he was without a doubt one of the finest men I ever knew'. Phil Hart became the conscience of the Senate, whose decency was legendary and whose integrity was so deep that he would without flinching take on an unpopular cause, or a powerful constituency, for the good of the nation.

Bob Dole arrived at Percy Jones in a plaster body cast. His recovery program overall took three years, which underscores his courage and his determination. When told by doctors his disability would be career dooming, he refused to accept their diagnosis and he fought successfully to prove them wrong. In his first speech in the Senate, in 1969, which was 25-years to the day after his serious wounds were received in Italy, leading his squad of the 10th Mountain Division in the Italian Alps, Bob Dole, in that first speech, called for the creation of a commission to seek ways to assist people with disabilities. Two decades later, the Americans With Disabilities Act crowned that effort and in Bob Dole's last speech in the United States Senate, he spoke of his meeting and his friendship, his lifelong friendship that was created here with Phil Hart and Danny Inouye.

As a seventeen-year-old, Danny Inouye joined the Army. He joined the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, the 'go for broke' regiment comprised of Japanese American soldiers. Their courage, in the face of often-insurmountable odds make them the most decorated unit in Europe. His extraordinary display of valor led to him receiving the Congressional Medal of Honor.

I want to read just a few words from that particular Medal of Honor award to Danny Inouye. 'He directed his platoon through a hail of automatic weapon and small arms fire. In a swift and developing movement that resulted in the capture of an artillery and mortar post, he brought his men within 40 yards of the hostile force. Emplaced in bunkers and rock formations, the enemy halted the advance with crossfire from three machine guns. With complete disregard for his personal safety, Second Lieutenant Daniel Inouye crawled up the treacherous slope to within five yards of the nearest machine gun and hurled two grenades, destroying the emplacement. Before the enemy could retaliate, he stood up and neutralized a second machine gun. Although wounded by a sniper's bullet, he continued to engage other hostile positions at close range until an exploding grenade shattered his right arm. Despite the intense pain, he refused evacuation and continued to direct his platoon until enemy resistance was broken, and his men were again deployed in defensive positions'.

Now, I read that, not to single out Danny, but to remind us all, that all the while that he, and so many other Americans of Japanese descent like Danny, were fighting for us. Their families were in internment camps, where they had been placed because of their ancestry during World War II, having been torn from their homes at the beginning of the war. In combat, these men learned a valuable lesson that shaped their work in the Senate. In the foxhole, there are no Democrats and Republicans, liberals or conservatives. There are only Americans. Having fought to defeat those who would steal our nation's freedom, each of them, in their Senate careers, sought to ensure that all Americans would continue to realize the promise of justice and liberty, a promise in our Constitution.

Tom Brokaw's name has been mentioned and I just wanted to read for you a short excerpt from an interview that Tom Brokaw had with Larry King:

Tom Brokaw: ''Difficult conditions are a test for great people. About whether they can measure up to it or not. And a lot of these veterans that I have written about'', referring to his book, ''said that it made a man out of me, or a young woman would say I went from being a giddy teenager to being a mature woman overnight.''

And then Brokaw went on, ''I'll just tell you one quick story. I've been talking about the renewed need for public service and having a sense that you do owe your country something. In one hospital ward in Michigan, there was a young man from Kansas who had had his arm shattered in combat in Italy, and in the next bed was a young man from Honolulu who was a Japanese American, who had lost his arm in the 442nd, and in the third bed was a young man from a family in Michigan who was also wounded. And he was able to get out of the hospital, to get theatre tickets and other things. Bob Dole was one. Danny Inouye was the other one. And Phil Hart, for whom the largest Senate office building is now named, was the third one. And they talked about their future lives, and they all decided it would be public service. They had just given up their youth in combat, but they came back and said they wanted to get involved running for public office. And they all ended up in the Senate.''

Larry King said, ''Who could write that? That's fiction.'' And Tom Brokaw said, ''I know, it's amazing.''

This building has helped define our nation for one hundred years, and how truly fitting it is that three of our nation's heroes, in war and in peace, whose lives were first intertwined so closely here, whose friendships were forged here, who had a seminal life experience here, who were later united in the Senate, are reunited again in the naming, and renaming, of this federal building. They gained strength here, and then they gave again of that strength to brighten the future of the nation that they loved. The renaming of this building after them is icing on the 100th birthday cake of this wonderful, historic building.

Thank you.

TRIBUTE TO AMBASSADOR JACQUES PAUL KLEIN

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a friend and an outstanding citizen of the Commonwealth of Virginia, Ambassador Jacques Paul Klein, on the occasion of his retirement from the U.S. Foreign Service.

Ambassador Klein was born in Selestat in the Alsace region of France in 1939 and spent the first 5 years of his life living in a war zone. When World War II ended, Ambassador Klein and his mother came to the United States in search of a better life and a brighter future. They settled in Chicago, where Mr. Klein worked his way through school and eventually joined the U.S. Air Force, volunteering to serve his new country in Vietnam. In so doing, he realized a dream that started as a young boy when he watched victorious allied fighter planes flying over France.

In 1971 Mr. Klein joined the Foreign Service. His initial tour of duty was in the Center of the Executive Secretariat, Office of the Secretary of State. He was posted abroad to serve as Consular Officer at the American Consulate General in Bremen, Germany. In 1979 he was selected to attend the National War College and upon graduation served as a Senior Advisor for International Affairs to the Secretary of the Air Force. In 1990 he once again answered the call of his country returning to Europe to serve as Senior Political Advisor to the Commander and Chief of the United States European Command in Stuttgart, Germany.

In 1996 United Nations Secretary General Boutros Boutros Ghali selected him to serve as Transitional Administrator for Eastern Slavonia and Baranya with the rank of Under Secretary-General. After directing another successful international mission, Ambassador Klein once again answered the call of his country—accepting the nomination of the U.S. Government as the Principal Deputy High Representative in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

In 1999 after more then 2 years of dedicated work to rebuild the war-torn Bosnia and Herzegovina, Mr. Klein was named by United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan as Under Secretary General to the United Nations Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Under the direction of Ambassador Klein, the UN Mission in Bosnia and Herzegovina completed the most extensive police reform and restructuring mission ever undertaken at the United Nations.

Ambassador Klein's distinguished career in the U.S. Foreign Service and U.S. Air Force and Air Force Reserve demonstrates his continued willingness to valiantly serve his country. In addition to retiring as Major General of the U.S. Air Force, Ambassador Klein has been awarded the Secretary of Defense Outstanding Public Service award, the Air Force Distinguished Service Medal, and a Bronze Star.

I am particularly proud of Ambassador Klein for his service to the United States and to the international community. His hard work and commitment to further the cause of international peace, to alleviate suffering, and to help those affected by international conflict have made him a respected member of the U.S. Foreign Service. His central goal in life has been to give something back, through his military and government service, to the country that took him in after World War II and provided him with so many opportunities. To that end, he has been a success that all Virginians and all Americans can be proud of.

I wish to extend my sincerest congratulations to Ambassador Jacques Paul Klein and his family on the occasion of his retirement. I am honored to recognize his many accomplishments and applaud his distinguished service to our great Nation.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF JANINE LOUISE JOHNSON

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I am here to remember the life of Janine Johnson—formerly with the Senate's Office of Legislative Counsel—who sadly passed away last month while still in the prime of her young life of 37 years.

Janine served in the Senate for 13 years. Some of her major responsibilities included drafting child nutrition and agriculture legislation for me, and for many other Senators.

After beginning her work for the Senate, she had a hand in crafting every major child nutrition law while I was chairman of the Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry Committee, when Senator LUGAR took over as chairman after me, and for Chairman TOM HARKIN.

She will be sorely missed as the Senate prepares to complete the child nutrition reauthorization this year.

She was a careful, creative, and precise drafter of some of America's most important nutrition laws, which stand now in silent testament to her life.

She was as cheerful and careful at 2:00 p.m. working out complicated drafts, as she was at 2:00 a.m. working on even more complicated drafts. My senior nutrition counsel for many years, Ed Barron, drove her home more than once after the metro closed at midnight.

I know how hard this tragic loss weighs on her friends and colleagues at the Senate Legislative Counsel's Office.

She was admired by her peers, her friends, and her Senate clients.

It was clear from an early age that Janine would be a star. She graduated first in her class from Winchester High School in Massachusetts.

In 1986, she graduated with high honors from Harvard Law School. She clerked for the Honorable Cecil Poole on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit.

Following her clerkship, she came to the Senate Office of Legislative Counsel.

According to Janine's friends here in the Senate, she loved life outside the Senate as much as her work within it. Janine loved theater, music, and swing dancing.

Of Janine it can truly be said, that there has ''passed away a glory from the Earth.''

The poet Wordsworth continues—

''Though nothing can bring back the hour
Of splendor in the grass, of glory in the flower;
We will grieve not, rather find
Strength in what remains behind.''

Janine has touched many of our lives and honored the Senate with her dedicated and outstanding service.●

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

Mr. BAYH. Mr. President, I rise today with a heavy heart and deep sense of gratitude to honor the life of a brave young man from Indianapolis, IN. Private Jesse M. Halling, 19 years old, was killed in Tikrit, Iraq on June 7, 2003 when his military police station came under grenade and small-arms fire. Jesse joined the Army with his entire life before him. He chose to risk everything to fight for the values Americans hold close to our hearts, in a land halfway around the world from home.

Jesse was the sixth Hoosier soldier to be killed while serving his country in Operation Iraqi Freedom. Today, I join Jesse's family, his friends, and the entire Indianapolis community in mourning his death. While we struggle to bear our sorrow over his death, we can also take pride in the example he set, bravely fighting to make the world a safer place. It is this courage and strength of character that people will remember when they think of Jesse, a memory that will burn brightly during these continuing days of conflict and grief.

Jesse Halling was a hard-working student, admired by all who knew him for his strong work ethic and remembered by both friends and teachers as a well-liked young man. Friends recall that Jesse always wanted to be a soldier, to follow in the footsteps of his father, who had served for 4 years in the Air Force.

Jesse graduated from Ben Davis High School in 2002, where he was a member of the weighlifting and Spanish clubs. After graduating high school, where he served as part of his school's ROTC unit, Jesse joined the Army in the military police division.

Jesse leaves behind his father, Alma Halling, and his mother, Pamela Halling. As I search for words to do justice in honoring Jesse Halling's sacrifice, I am reminded of President Lincoln's remarks as he addressed the families of the fallen soldiers in Gettysburg: ''We cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.'' This statement is just as true today as it was nearly 150 years ago, as I am certain that the impact of Jesse Halling's actions will live on far longer than any record of these words.

It is my sad duty to enter the name of Jesse M. Halling in the official record of the Senate for his service to this country and for his profound commitment to freedom, democracy and peace. When I think about this just cause in which we are engaged, and the unfortunate pain that comes with the loss of our heroes, I hope that families like Jesse's can find comfort in the words of the prophet Isaiah who said, ''He will swallow up death in victory; and the Lord God will wipe away tears form off all faces.''

May God grant strength and peace to those who mourn, and may God bless the United States of America.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING JESSICA COLLINS

● Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I have the privilege and honor of rising today to recognize Miss Jessica Collins of Brandenburg, KY. Jessica was selected as Kentucky's winner of the 2003 Future Farmers of America Award. Jessica was recognized at an awards gala hosted by the Louisville Courier-Journal Newspaper as part of their 2003 Salute to Young Achievers.

Jessica earned this distinguished honor by sharing her commitment to agricultural development through a written essay reviewed and selected by the Kentucky Association of Future Farmers of America and the Kentucky Department of Education. The thoughts conveyed in her essay are not empty words, but instead, hours of hard work show her commitment to excellence.

A graduate of Meade County High School, Jessica's future plans include pursuing a college degree and continuing her passion of ranching. Currently, over 19 Angus cows and numerous farming equipment fall under her ownership and direction. This strong business interest was first sparked in her local 4–H chapter and will aid her as she seeks an economics degree at Western Kentucky University.

I am pleased that Jessica takes such an interest in her community and in agriculture. Her expertise and experience will serve Kentucky well. I want to thank the Senate for allowing me to congratulate Jessica Collins. She is one of Kentucky's finest gems.●

IN HONOR OF NIRMAL K. SINHA OF OHIO

● Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate and pay tribute to Mr. Nirmal K. Sinha of Worthington, OH, as a 2003 Ellis Island Medal of Honor recipient.

The prestigious Ellis Island Medal of Honor award is presented annually to ''remarkable Americans who exemplify outstanding qualities in both their personal and professional lives,'' and ''who have distinguished themselves as citizens of the United States, while continuing to preserve the richness of their particular heritage.''

Nirmal Sinha is such an American. In addition to creating a business in Ohio and being active in numerous civic organizations. Nirmal and his wife Tripta have maintained strong ties to the Asian Indian American community. I have often said, ''show me someone who is proud of their ethnic heritage and I'll show you a great American!''

I am proud to say I have worked with Nirmal Sinha for many years. In 1992, as Governor of Ohio, I appointed him to the Ohio Civil Rights Commission. I reappointed him in 1997, and I am gratified that Mr. Sinha served two 5-year terms, helping to enforce State laws prohibiting discrimination in housing, employment, credit, and higher education. He has worked with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to develop outreach programs, particularly to Hispanic and Asian Americans.

As mayor of Cleveland and as Governor of Ohio, I was close to the Asian Indian American community and knew of Nirmal's distinguished record as a business leader and someone who was active in a variety of civic organizations. Some of those organizations include the Asian Indian American Business Group, AIABG, of Columbus, founding member of the Global Organization of People of Indian Origin, GOPIO, the Asian Indian Alliance of Ohio, and the Asian Indian Forum for Political Education.

Mr. Sinha also has served as a member of the Ameritech Consumer Advisory Board, Columbus International Program, and Main Street Business Association, member of the advisory board to the Ohio State University's Department of Communications, and a director of the Central Ohio March of Dimes and the International Center in Columbus.

Nirmal Sinha is an accomplished professional who always makes time to give to others. Mr. Sinha is active in both the National Association of Human Rights Workers, NAHRW, and the International Association of Official Human Rights Agencies, IAOHRA.

In 1998, the Columbus Dispatch awarded Mr. Sinha the Outstanding Community Service Award. In 1989, he received the Outstanding Community Service Award from the mayor of Columbus.

Mr. Sinha's record in human rights is exceptional. In 1998, he initiated the first ever ''Asian Roundtable'' discussion on Civil Rights with joint efforts involving the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and the Ohio Rights Commission. Also in 1998, Mr. Sinha received the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Award for Community Service to the State of Ohio.

In his profession, Mr. Sinha is an accomplished mechanical engineer and has been involved in the design and construction of large electric power plants. He holds a bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Jadavapur University in Calcutta, India, and a master's degree from the Polytechnic University of New York. He also studied management at the Ohio State University and computer science at Franklin University. Currently, he is president of Marketing USA Group, a consulting firm he founded which advises clients on energy, telecommunications, technology, and global business.

As a humanitarian, Mr. Sinha is known for his quiet leadership. He has been called ''a humble man with a compassion for human and civil rights.'' Throughout his career, Nirmal Sinha has exemplified the highest American values, including good citizenship, and responsibility to his fellow man.

Nirmal Sinha is very deserving of the Ellis Island Medal of Honor. America is a nation of immigrants, and I believe our cultural and ethnic diversity helps make us strong.

When I was Governor of Ohio, one of the goals that I set for my administration was to celebrate the cultural diversity of our State by seeking out individuals from nontraditional ethnic groups and giving them an opportunity to serve. I am proud that I appointed a number of Asian Indian Americans, such as Nirmal Sinha, to various boards and commissions, particularly in such fields, as medicine, manufacturing, and higher education.

Mr. Sinha is in good company as a recipient of the Ellis Island Medal of Honor. Former recipients include four Presidents, several Senators and Congressmen, and Nobel Prize winners.

As someone who has had the pleasure of knowing and working with Mr. Sinha, I can guarantee that his significant contributions to his community and to the State of Ohio will not stop, but will continue to grow. I also know that he does not seek recognition for his humanitarian service. Instead, he lives in accordance with his strong faith, and his commitment to education, his family, and his community.

Nirmal Sinha is someone all of us would do well to emulate and I am pleased and proud to salute him and his wife Tripti and their two daughters.

I congratulate Nirmal Sinha as a 2003 Ellis Island Medal of Honor winner. He is an outstanding American whose dedicated service to others helps improve the quality of life for his fellow Americans every day.●

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. FRIST (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. BAUCUS):

S. 1. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to make improvements in the medicare program, to provide prescription drug coverage under the medicare program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1

Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Prescription Drug and Medicare Improvement Act of 2003''.

(b) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the Sense of the Congress that the Congress should enact, and the President should sign, legislation to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to make improvements in the medicare program and to provide prescription drug coverage under the medicare program.

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 1232. A bill to designate the newly-constructed annex to the E. Barrett Prettyman Courthouse located at 333 Constitution Ave., NW., in Washington, DC., as the ''James L. Buckley Annex to the E. Barrett Prettyman United States Courthouse''; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to designate the newly-constructed annex to the E. Barrett Prettyman United States Courthouse as the ''James L. Buckley Annex.'' As members of this body well know, Judge Buckley served in this Senate from 1971–77, as a trusted colleague from the State of New York. During his tenure here, Judge Buckley was greatly admired for his dedication, integrity, and professionalism.

Judge Buckley's lengthy public service career is one of great distinction. In addition to the time he spent here in the Senate, Judge Buckley served in the United States Navy during World War II, as Undersecretary of State for Security Assistance, and as President of Radio Free Europe. Most recently, he served for more than a decade as a Circuit Judge on the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, in the E. Barrett Prettyman courthouse.

Earlier this Congress, we honored Judge Buckley, on the celebration of his 80th birthday, by passing unanimously a resolution, S. Res. 88, acknowledging his distinguished career in the executive, legislative, and judicial branches of the United States.

Naming the new annex to the E. Barrett Prettyman courthouse after Judge Buckley would be a fitting tribute to our former colleague and prominent jurist. I am honored to offer this legislation, and I urge my colleagues to support this well-deserved commendation.

By Ms. MIKULSKI (for herself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. SARBANES, Mr.

EDWARDS, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mrs. CLINTON, and Mr. CORZINE):

S. 1233. A bill to authorize assistance for the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise to introduce the National Great Black Americans Commemoration Act. I am proud to sponsor this legislation. Black Americans have a rich history that must be cherished and remembered. This bill will honor African American leaders from across the country—some who are well known, and others who are almost forgotten—by helping to preserve their names, faces, and stories for generations to come.

This legislation will provide Federal assistance to expand exhibits and educational programs at the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center in Baltimore, Maryland. The museum showcases the lives of great Black Americans who have proudly served the United States—from civil servants like Mary McLeod Bethune, to military heroes like Colin Powell, to Congressional leaders like Senator Edward Brooke, R–MA, and civil rights leaders like Rosa Parks. Some are household names, like Frederick Douglass and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Yet many more are unfamiliar, like the 22 African Americans who served in Congress in the 1800s. It's time we give these pioneers the recognition they deserve.

Maryland is proud to be home to so many important figures in black history. From the dark days of slavery through the civil rights movement, Marylanders have led the way. The brilliant Frederick Douglass was the voice of the voiceless in the struggle against slavery. The courageous Harriet Tubman delivered 300 slaves to freedom on the Underground Railroad. The great Thurgood Marshall argued the Brown v. Board of Education Case before the Supreme Court, and later became a Supreme Court Justice himself.

Maryland is home to contemporary leaders, too. The dynamic Kweisi Mfume, president of the NAACP, who, like me, came out of the Baltimore City Council. The passionate ELIJAH CUMMINGS, Chair of the Congressional Black Caucus. Clarence Mitchell who was called by many the 101st Senator. Parren Mitchell and AL WYNN, fighting for their constituents. And all the members of the NAACP, which calls Baltimore home.

It is fitting that the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center also calls Baltimore home. The museum and learning center is a popular and respected black history museum. Approximately 300,000 people a year from around the country and the world visit the museum. Many are school children, who can see historical figures come to life in the museum's exhibits. Expansion will allow the museum to teach even more visitors about the important contributions of Black Americans. It will also help revitalize a poor neighborhood in East Baltimore. There will be new jobs. There will be more tourists. There will be new small businesses. And most important, there will be new inspiration for our young people.

The State of Maryland and City of Baltimore have already contributed over $5 million toward this expansion project. Private donors are contributing too. Now it's time for the Federal Government to do its part. Let's help make this museum a treasure for the entire Nation.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1233

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''National Great Black Americans Commemoration Act of 2003''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Black Americans have served honorably in Congress, in senior executive branch positions, in the law, the judiciary, and other fields, yet their record of service is not well known by the public, is not included in school history lessons, and is not adequately presented in the Nation's museums.

(2) The Great Blacks in Wax Museum, Inc. in Baltimore, Maryland, a nonprofit organization, is the Nation's first wax museum presenting the history of great Black Americans, including those who have served in Congress, in senior executive branch positions, in the law, the judiciary, and other fields, as well as others who have made significant contributions to benefit the Nation.

(3) The Great Blacks in Wax Museum, Inc. plans to expand its existing facilities to establish the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center, which is intended to serve as a national museum and center for presentation of wax figures and related interactive educational exhibits portraying the history of great Black Americans.

(4) The wax medium has long been recognized as a unique and artistic means to record human history through preservation of the faces and personages of people of prominence, and historically, wax exhibits were used to commemorate noted figures in ancient Egypt, Babylon, Greece, and Rome, in medieval Europe, and in the art of the Italian renaissance.

(5) The Great Blacks in Wax Museum, Inc. was founded in 1983 by Drs. Elmer and Joanne Martin, 2 Baltimore educators who used their personal savings to purchase wax figures, which they displayed in schools, churches, shopping malls, and festivals in the mid-Atlantic region.

(6) The goal of the Martins was to test public reaction to the idea of a Black history wax museum and so positive was the response over time that the museum has been heralded by the public and the media as a national treasure.

(7) The museum has been the subject of feature stories by CNN, the Wall Street Journal, the Baltimore Sun, the Washington Post, the New York Times, the Chicago Sun Times, the Dallas Morning News, the Los Angeles Times, USA Today, the Afro American Newspaper, Crisis, Essence Magazine, and others.

(8) More than 300,000 people from across the Nation visit the museum annually.

(9) The new museum will carry on the time honored artistic tradition of the wax medium; in particular, it will recognize the significant value of this medium to commemorate and appreciate great Black Americans whose faces and personages are not widely recognized.

(10) The museum will employ the most skilled artisans in the wax medium, use state-of-the-art interactive exhibition technologies, and consult with museum professionals throughout the Nation, and its exhibits will feature the following:

(A) Blacks who have served in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, including those who represented constituencies in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Virginia during the 19th century.

(B) Blacks who have served in the judiciary, in the Department of Justice, as prominent attorneys, in law enforcement, and in the struggle for equal rights under the law.

(C) Black veterans of various military engagements, including the Buffalo Soldiers and Tuskegee Airmen, and the role of Blacks in the settlement of the western United States.

(D) Blacks who have served in senior executive branch positions, including members of Presidents' Cabinets, Assistant Secretaries and Deputy Secretaries of Federal agencies, and Presidential advisers.

(E) Other Blacks whose accomplishments and contributions to human history during the last millennium and to the Nation through more than 400 years are exemplary, including Black educators, authors, scientists, inventors, athletes, clergy, and civil rights leaders.

(11) The museum plans to develop collaborative programs with other museums, serve as a clearinghouse for training, technical assistance, and other resources involving use of the wax medium, and sponsor traveling exhibits to provide enriching museum experiences for communities throughout the Nation.

(12) The museum has been recognized by the State of Maryland and the city of Baltimore as a preeminent facility for presenting and interpreting Black history, using the wax medium in its highest artistic form.

(13) The museum is located in the heart of an area designated as an empowerment zone, and is considered to be a catalyst for economic and cultural improvements in this economically disadvantaged area.

SEC. 3. ASSISTANCE FOR NATIONAL GREAT BLACKS IN WAX MUSEUM AND JUSTICE LEARNING CENTER.

(a) ASSISTANCE FOR MUSEUM.—Subject to subsection (b), the Attorney General, acting through the Office of Justice Programs of the Department of Justice, shall, from amounts made available under subsection (c), make a grant to the Great Blacks in Wax Museum, Inc. in Baltimore, Maryland, to pay the Federal share of the costs of expanding and creating the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center, including the cost of its design, planning, furnishing, and equipping.

(b) GRANT REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To receive a grant under subsection (a), the Great Blacks in Wax Museum, Inc. shall submit to the Attorney General a proposal for the use of the grant, which shall include detailed plans for the design, construction, furnishing, and equipping of the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center.

(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the costs described in subsection (a) shall not exceed 25 percent.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $15,000,000, to remain available until expended.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am proud to join Senator MIKULSKI as cosponsor of the ''National Great Black Americans Commemoration Act of 2003.'' This legislation will help offer a more complete portrayal of our Nation's proud history—one that includes an increased awareness of the contributions made by many great black Americans of various fields and accomplishments.

This legislation seeks to recognize the contributions of African Americans who have served in Congress or other government capacities, in the military, or in other important roles as educators, authors, scientists, inventors, athletes, clergy and civil rights leaders. Clearly, there are few, if any, areas of American culture and history that have not been touched and improved upon by the impact of black individuals. As we recognize this, it is important that we also recognize those whose goal is to make available the history of these outstanding people.

One such institution is The Great Blacks in Wax Museum, a nonprofit organization in Baltimore, MD, whose mission is to present the history of black Americans and to highlight their contributions to our nation. I believe that this institution's work thus far and its goals for the future make it worthy of our support. This legislation not only commends the efforts made by this museum to date, but authorizes the appropriation of funds that will help the museum to improve and expand. Appropriate Federal assistance, coupled with other funding raised by the museum, will allow the current institution to become the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center, which will be better equipped to serve its purposes. This improved museum will be a bright example for projects with similar goals and will provide an excellent source of historical education for all who visit.

I am a strong believer that our history should be presented in a complete and accurate manner. Where we have understated in the past, we should make amends. The development of the National Great Blacks in Wax Museum and Justice Learning Center will be a valuable statement recognizing the contributions of so many great African Americans. I hope that my colleagues will see the merit in this endeavor and will lend their support to the National Great Black Americans Commemoration Act.

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself and Mr. SMITH):

S. 1234. A bill to reauthorize the Federal Trade Commission, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, today I am joined by the Chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee's Competition, Foreign Commerce, and Infrastructure Subcommittee, Senator SMITH, in introducing the Federal Trade Commission Reauthorization Act of 2003. This legislation is designed to reauthorize the Federal Trade Commission, FTC or Commission, in furtherance of its mission to enhance the efficient operation of the marketplace by both eliminating acts or practices that are unfair or deceptive and preventing anti-competitive conduct. This vital consumer protection agency has not been reauthorized since 1996.

Title I of the bill is nearly identical to legislation that was reported by the Commerce Committee last year. It would authorize funding for Fiscal Years 2004 through 2006. In addition, this portion of the bill would authorize the FTC to provide investigative and other services to a requesting law enforcement agency and receive from that agency, if offered, reimbursement for the FTC's involvement. This part of the bill also would grant the Commission the authority it has requested to receive gifts or items that would be useful to the Commission as long as a conflict of interest is not created by such receipt.

The second title of the bill is designed to mitigate the challenges that the FTC currently faces in combating cross-border fraud. The FTC's responsibility to protect consumers is essential, particularly in today's global climate of high-speed information and marketing, which knows no international borders. This title would improve the Commission's ability to: share information involving cross-border fraud with foreign consumer protection agencies; secure confidential information from those foreign agencies; take legal action in foreign jurisdictions; seek redress on behalf of foreign consumers victimized by U.S.-based wrongdoers; make criminal referrals for cross-border criminal activity; and strengthen its relationship with foreign consumer protection agencies. The Competition Subcommittee will hold a hearing later today on the FTC's reauthorization and will consider a number of issues including the Commission's cross-border fraud proposal.

Not included in the bill is language that was reported by the Commerce Committee last Fall that would repeal the ''common carrier'' exemption in the FTC's organizing statute that currently precludes the Commission from exercising authority over certain activities of telecommunications common carriers. The Federal Communications Commission, FCC, currently has jurisdiction over these common carriers.

While I fully support any effort to combat entities that perpetrate fraud on consumers, and I respect the expertise and ability of the FTC and FCC to seek redress for victims of such fraud, I made it clear during the Commerce Committee's executive session last Fall that a discussion was necessary between the two agencies to resolve any overlap in jurisdiction that may exist. It is our understanding that the FTC and FCC are in the process of negotiating an agreement that would satisfy the objectives of both agencies to further their respective consumer protection missions. Thus, for now, we will reserve judgment as to whether such a repeal is necessary.

Meanwhile, I look forward to working on this important consumer protection legislation and I hope that my colleagues will agree to join us in expeditiously moving this reauthorization through the legislative process. Reauthorizing the FTC is important if the agency is to continue to successfully carry out its many responsibilities.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1234

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Federal Trade Commission Reauthorization Act of 2003''.

TITLE I—REAUTHORIZATION

SEC. 101. REAUTHORIZATION.

The text of section 25 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57c) is amended to read as follows:

''There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the functions, powers, and duties of the Commission not to exceed $194,742,000 for fiscal year 2004, $224,695,000 for fiscal year 2005, and $235,457,000 for fiscal year 2006.''.

SEC. 102. AUTHORITY TO ACCEPT REIMBURSEMENTS, GIFTS, AND VOLUNTARY AND UNCOMPENSATED SERVICES.

The Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by redesignating section 26 as section 28; and

(2) by inserting after section 25 the following:

''SEC. 26. REIMBURSEMENT OF EXPENSES.

''The Commission may accept payment or reimbursement, in cash or in kind, from a domestic or foreign law enforcement authority, or payment or reimbursement made on behalf of such authority, for expenses incurred by the Commission, its members, or employees in carrying out any activity pursuant to a statute administered by the Commission without regard to any other provision of law. Any such payments or reimbursements shall be considered a reimbursement to the appropriated funds of the Commission.

''SEC. 27. GIFTS AND VOLUNTARY AND UNCOMPENSATED SERVICES.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—In furtherance of its functions the Commission may accept, hold, administer, and use unconditional gifts, donations, and bequests of real, personal, and other property and, notwithstanding section 1342 of title 31, United States Code, accept voluntary and uncompensated services.

''(b) LIMITATIONS.—

''(1) CONFLICTS OF INTEREST.—Notwithstanding subsection (a), the Commission may not accept, hold, administer, or use a gift, donation, or bequest if the acceptance, holding, administration, or use would create a conflict of interest or the appearance of a conflict of interest.

''(2) VOLUNTARY SERVICES.—A person who provides voluntary and uncompensated service under subsection (a) shall not be considered a Federal employee for any purpose other than for purposes of chapter 81 of title 5, United States Code, (relating to compensation for injury) and section 2671 through 2680 of title 28, United States Code, (relating to tort claims).''.

TITLE II—INTERNATIONAL CONSUMER PROTECTION

SEC. 201. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) The Federal Trade Commission protects consumers from fraud and deception. Cross-border fraud and deception are growing international problems that affect American consumers and businesses.

(2) The development of the Internet and improvements in telecommunications technologies have brought significant benefits to consumers. At the same time, they have also provided unprecedented opportunities for those engaged in fraud and deception to establish operations in one country and victimize a large number of consumers in other countries.

(3) An increasing number of consumer complaints collected in the Consumer Sentinel database maintained by the Commission, and an increasing number of cases brought by the Commission, involve foreign consumers, foreign businesses or individuals, or assets or evidence located outside the United States.

(4) The Commission has legal authority to remedy law violations involving domestic and foreign wrongdoers, pursuant to the Federal Trade Commission Act. The Commission's ability to obtain effective relief using this authority, however, may face practical impediments when wrongdoers, victims, other witnesses, documents, money and third parties involved in the transaction are widely dispersed in many different jurisdictions. Such circumstances make it difficult for the Commission to gather all the information necessary to detect injurious practices, to recover offshore assets for consumer redress, and to reach conduct occurring outside the United States that affects United States consumers.

(5) Improving the ability of the Commission and its foreign counterparts to share information about cross-border fraud and deception, to conduct joint and parallel investigations, and to assist each other is critical to achieve more timely and effective enforcement in cross- border cases.

(6) Consequently, Congress should enact legislation to provide the Commission with more tools to protect consumers across borders.

SEC. 202. FOREIGN LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCY DEFINED.

Section 4 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 44) is amended by adding at the end the following:

'' 'Foreign law enforcement agency' means—

''(1) any agency or judicial authority of a foreign government, including a foreign state, a political subdivision of a foreign state, or a multinational organization constituted by and comprised of foreign states, that is vested with law enforcement or investigative authority in civil, criminal, or administrative matters;

''(2) any multinational organization, to the extent that it is acting on behalf of an entity described in paragraph (1); or

''(3) any organization that is vested with authority, as a principal mission, to enforce laws against fraudulent, deceptive, misleading, or unfair commercial practices affecting consumers, in accordance with criteria laid down by law, by a foreign state or a political subdivision of a foreign state.''.

SEC. 203. SHARING INFORMATION WITH FOREIGN LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 21(b)(6) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57b–2(b)(6)) is amended by adding at the end ''The custodian may make such material available to any foreign law enforcement agency upon the prior certification of any officer of any such foreign law enforcement agency that such material will be maintained in confidence and will be used only for official law enforcement purposes, provided that the foreign law enforcement agency has set forth a legal basis for its authority to maintain the material in confidence. Nothing in the preceding sentence authorizes disclosure of material obtained in connection with the administration of Federal antitrust laws or foreign antitrust laws (within the meaning of section 12 of the International Antitrust Enforcement Assistance Act of 1994 (15 U.S.C. 6211)) to any officer or employee of a foreign law enforcement agency.''.

(b) PUBLICATION OF INFORMATION; REPORTS.—Section 6(f) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 46(f)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''agencies or to any officer or employee of any State law enforcement agency'' and inserting ''agencies, to any officer or employee of any State law enforcement agency, or to any officer or employee of any foreign law enforcement agency'';

(2) by striking ''Federal or State law enforcement agency'' and inserting ''Federal, State, or foreign law enforcement agency''; and

(3) by adding at the end ''Such information shall be disclosed to an officer or employee of a foreign law enforcement agency only if the foreign law enforcement agency has set forth a legal basis for its authority to maintain the information in confidence. Nothing in the preceding sentence authorizes the disclosure of material obtained in connection with the administration of Federal antitrust laws or foreign antitrust laws (within the meaning of section 12 of the International Antitrust Enforcement Assistance Act of 1994 (15 U.S.C. 6211)) to any officer or employee of a foreign law enforcement agency.''.

SEC. 204. OBTAINING INFORMATION FOR FOREIGN LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCIES.

Section 6 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 46) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(j)(1) Upon request from a foreign law enforcement agency, to provide assistance in accordance with this subsection if the requesting agency states that it is investigating, or engaging in enforcement proceedings against, possible violations of laws prohibiting fraudulent, deceptive, misleading, or unfair commercial conduct, or other conduct that may be similar to conduct prohibited by any provision of the laws administered by the Commission, other than Federal antitrust laws (within the meaning of section 12 of the International Antitrust Enforcement Assistance Act of 1994 (15 U.S.C. 6211)), the Commission may, in its discretion—

''(A) conduct such investigation as the Commission deems necessary to collect information and evidence pertinent to the request for assistance, using all investigative powers authorized by this Act; and

''(B) seek and accept appointment by a United States district court of Commission attorneys to provide assistance to foreign and international tribunals and to litigants before such tribunals on behalf of a foreign law enforcement agency pursuant to section 1782 of title 28, United States Code.

''(2) The Commission may provide assistance under paragraph (1) without regard to whether the conduct identified in the request would also constitute a violation of the laws of the United States.

''(3) In deciding whether to provide such assistance, the Commission shall consider—

''(A) whether the requesting agency has agreed to provide or will provide reciprocal assistance to the Commission; and

''(B) whether compliance with the request would prejudice the public interest of the United States.

''(4) If a foreign law enforcement agency has set forth a legal basis for requiring execution of an international agreement as a condition for reciprocal assistance, or as a condition for disclosure of materials or information to the Commission, the Commission, after consultation with the Secretary of State, may negotiate and conclude an international agreement, in the name of either the United States or the Commission and with the final approval of the agreement by the Secretary of State, for the purpose of obtaining such assistance or disclosure. The Commission may undertake in such an international agreement—

''(A) to provide assistance using the powers set forth in this subsection;

''(B) to disclose materials and information in accordance with subsection (f) of this section and section 21(b)(6) of this Act; and

''(C) to engage in further cooperation, and protect materials and information received from disclosure, as authorized by this Act.

''(5) The authority in this subsection is in addition to, and not in lieu of, any other authority vested in the Commission or any other officer of the United States.''.

SEC. 205. INFORMATION SUPPLIED BY AND ABOUT FOREIGN SOURCES.

Section 21(f) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57b-2(f)) is amended—

(1) by inserting ''(1) before ''Any''; and adding at the end the following:

''(2)(A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C) of this paragraph, the Commission shall not be compelled to disclose—

''(i) material obtained from a foreign law enforcement agency or other foreign government agency, if the foreign law enforcement agency or other foreign government agency has requested confidential treatment as a condition of disclosing the material;

''(ii) material reflecting consumer complaints obtained from any other foreign source, if that foreign source supplying the material has requested confidential treatment as a condition of disclosing the material; or

''(iii) material reflecting a consumer complaint submitted to a Commission reporting mechanism sponsored in part by foreign law enforcement agencies or other foreign government agencies.

''(B) For purposes of section 552 of title 5, this paragraph shall be considered a statute described in subsection (b)(3)(B) of such section 552.

''(C) Nothing in this paragraph shall authorize the Commission to withhold information from the Congress or prevent the Commission from complying with an order of a court of the United States in an action commenced by the United States or the Commission.''.

SEC. 206. CONFIDENTIALITY AND DELAYED NOTICE OF PROCESS.

(a) The Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 21 (15 U.S.C. 57b-2) the following:

''SEC. 21A. CONFIDENTIALITY AND DELAYED NOTICE OF COMPULSORY PROCESS FOR CERTAIN THIRD PARTIES.

''(a) CONFIDENTIALITY OF COMPULSORY PROCESS ISSUED BY THE COMMISSION.—

''(1) This subsection shall apply only in connection with compulsory process issued by the Commission where the recipient of such process is not a subject of the investigation or proceeding at the time such process is issued.

''(2) Notwithstanding any law or regulation of the United States, any constitution, law or regulation of any State or political subdivision of any State or any Territory or the District of Columbia, or any contract or other legally enforceable agreement, the Commission may seek an order requiring the recipient of compulsory process described in paragraph (1) to keep such process confidential, upon an ex parte showing to an appropriate United States district court that there is a reason to believe that disclosure may—

''(A) result in the transfer of assets or records outside the territorial limits of the United States;

''(B) impede the ability of the Commission to identify or trace funds;

''(C) endanger the life or physical safety of an individual;

''(D) result in flight from prosecution;

''(E) result in destruction of or tampering with evidence;

''(F) result in intimidation of potential witnesses;

''(G) result in the dissipation or concealment of assets; or

''(H) otherwise seriously jeopardize an investigation or unduly delay a trial.

''(3) Upon a showing described in paragraph (2), the presiding judge or magistrate judge shall enter an ex parte order prohibiting the recipient of process from disclosing that information has been submitted or that a request for information has been made, for such period as the court deems appropriate.

''(b) MATERIALS SUBJECT TO GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATION UNDER THE RIGHT TO FINANCIAL PRIVACY ACT.—

''(1) When section 1105 or 1107 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3405 or 3407) would otherwise require notice, notwithstanding such requirements, the Commission may obtain from a financial institution access to or copies of financial records of a customer, as these terms are defined in section 1101 of the Right to Financial Privacy Act of 1978 (12 U.S.C. 3401), through compulsory process described in subsection (a)(1) or through a judicial subpoena, without prior notice to the customer, upon an ex parte showing to an appropriate United States district court that there is reason to believe that the required notice may cause an adverse result described in subsection (a)(2).

''(2) Upon such showing, the presiding judge or magistrate judge shall enter an ex parte order granting a delay of notice for a period not to exceed 90 days and an order prohibiting the financial institution from disclosing that records have been submitted or that a request for records has been made.

''(3) The court may grant extensions of the period of delay of notice provided in paragraph (2) of up to 90 days, upon a showing that the requirements for delayed notice under subsection (a)(2) continue to apply.

''(4) Upon expiration of the periods of delay of notice ordered under paragraphs (2) and (3), the Commission shall serve upon, or deliver by registered or first-class mail, or as otherwise authorized by the court to, the customer a copy of the process together with notice that states with reasonable specificity the nature of the law enforcement inquiry, informs the customer or subscriber when the process was served, and states that notification of the process was delayed under this subsection.

''(c) MATERIALS SUBJECT TO GOVERNMENT NOTIFICATION UNDER THE ELECTRONIC COMMUNICATIONS PRIVACY ACT.—

''(1) When section 2703(b)(1)(B) of title 18 would otherwise require notice, notwithstanding such requirements, the Commission may obtain, through compulsory process described in subsection (a)(1) or through judicial subpoena,

''(A) from a provider of remote computing services, access to or copies of the contents of a wire or electronic communication described in section 2703(b)(1) of title 18, and as those terms are defined in section 2510 of title 18, or

''(B) from a provider of electronic communications services, access to or copies of the contents of a wire or electronic communication that has been in electronic storage in an electronic communications system for more than 180 days, as those terms are defined in section 2510 of title 18, without prior notice to the customer or subscriber, upon an ex parte showing to an appropriate United States district court by a Commission official that there is reason to believe that notification of the existence of the process may cause an adverse result described in subsection (a)(2). Upon such a showing, the presiding judge or magistrate judge shall issue an exparte order granting a delay of notice for a period not to exceed 90 days. A court may grant extensions of the period of delay of notice of up to 90 days, upon application by the Commission and a showing that the requirements for delayed notice under subsection (b)(2) continue to apply.

''(2) The Commission may apply to a court for an order prohibiting a provider of electronic communications service or remote computing service to whom process has been issued under this subsection, for such period as the court deems appropriate, from disclosing that information has been submitted or that a request for information has been made. The court shall enter such an order if it has reason to believe that such disclosure may cause an adverse result described in subsection (b)(2).

''(3) Upon expiration of the periods of delay of notice ordered under subparagraph (1), the Commission shall serve upon, or deliver by registered or first-class mail, or as otherwise authorized by the court to, the customer or subscriber a copy of the process together with notice that states with reasonable specificity the nature of the law enforcement inquiry, informs the customer or subscriber when the process was served, and states that notification of the process was delayed under this subsection.

''(4) Nothing in the Electronic Communications Privacy Act shall prohibit a provider of electronic communications services or remote computing services from disclosing complaints received by it from a customer or subscriber or information reflecting such complaints to the Commission.

''(d) LIABILITY LIMITATION.—The recipient of compulsory process under subsections (a), (b), or (c) shall not be liable to any person under any law or regulation of the United States, any constitution, law, or regulation of any State or political subdivision of any State or any Territory or the District of Columbia, or under any contract or other legally enforceable agreement, for failure to provide notice that such process has been issued or that the recipient has provided information in response to such process. The preceding sentence does not provide any exemption from liability for the underlying conduct reported.

''(e) IN-CAMERA PROCEEDINGS.—Upon application by the Commission, all judicial proceedings pursuant to this section shall be held in camera and the records thereof sealed until expiration of the period of delay or such other date as the presiding judge or magistrate judge may permit.

''(f) PROCEDURE INAPPLICABLE TO CERTAIN PROCEEDINGS.—This section shall not apply to compulsory process issued in an investigation or proceeding related to the administration of Federal antitrust laws or foreign antitrust laws (within the meaning of section 12 of the International Antitrust Enforcement Assistance Act of 1994 (15 U.S.C. 6211)).''.

(b) Section 16(a)(2) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 56(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking ''or'' after the semicolon in subparagraph (C);

(2) by striking ''Act;'' in subparagraph (D) and inserting ''Act; or''; and

(3) by inserting after subparagraph (D) the following:

''(E) under section 21a of this Act;''.

SEC. 207. PROTECTION FOR VOLUNTARY PROVISION OF INFORMATION.

The Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 21a, as added by section 206 of this title, the following:

''SEC. 21B. PROTECTION FOR VOLUNTARY PROVISION OF INFORMATION.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—An entity described in subsection (d)(1) that voluntarily provides material to the Commission that it reasonably believes is relevant to—

''(1) a possible unfair or deceptive act or practice, as defined in section 5(a) of this Act, or

''(2) assets subject to recovery by the Commission, including assets located in foreign jurisdictions, shall not be liable to any person under any law or regulation of the United States, or any constitution, law, or regulation of any State or political subdivision of any State or any Territory or the District of Columbia, for such disclosure or for any failure to provide notice of such disclosure. The preceding sentence does not provide any exemption from liability for the underlying conduct reported.

''(b) LIABILITY LIMITATION.—An entity described in subsection (d)(2) that makes a voluntary disclosure to the Commission regarding the subjects described in subsection (a)(1) and (2) shall be exempt from liability in accordance with the provisions of section 5318(g)(3) of title 31, United States Code.

''(c) FOIA EXEMPTION.—Material submitted pursuant to this section with a request for confidential treatment shall be exempt from disclosure under section 552 of title 5, United States Code.

''(d) ENTITIES TO WHICH SECTION APPLIES.—This section applies to the following entities, whether foreign or domestic:

''(1) A courier service, a commercial mail receiving agency, an industry membership organization, a payment system provider, a consumer reporting agency, a domain name registrar and registry, a provider of remote computing services or electronic communication services, to the limited extent such a provider is disclosing consumer complaints received by it from a customer or subscriber, or information reflecting such complaints; and

''(2) a bank or thrift institution, a commercial bank or trust company, an investment company, a credit card issuer, an operator of a credit card system, and an issuer, redeemer, or cashier of travelers' checks, checks, money orders, or similar instruments.''.

SEC. 208. INFORMATION SHARING WITH FINANCIAL REGULATORS.

Section 1112(e) of the Right to Financial Privacy Act (12 U.S.C. 3412(e)) is amended by inserting ''the Federal Trade Commission,'' after ''the Securities and Exchange Commission,''.

SEC. 209. REPRESENTATION IN FOREIGN LITIGATION.

Section 16 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 56) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(c)(1) The Commission may designate Commission attorneys to assist the Department of Justice in connection with litigation in foreign courts in which the Commission has an interest, pursuant to the terms of a memorandum of understanding to be negotiated by the Commission and the Department of Justice.

''(2) The Commission is authorized to expend appropriated funds for the retention of foreign counsel for consultation and for litigation in foreign courts, and for expenses related to consultation and to litigation in foreign courts in which the Commission has an interest.''.

SEC. 210. AVAILABILITY OF REMEDIES.

Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 45) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(o) UNFAIR OR DECEPTIVE ACTS OR PRACTICES INVOLVING FOREIGN COMMERCE.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of subsection (a), the term'unfair or deceptive acts or practices' includes such acts or practices involving foreign commerce that—

''(A) cause or are likely to cause reasonably foreseeable injury within the United States; or

''(B) involve material conduct occurring within the United States.

''(2) APPLICATION OF REMEDIES TO SUCH ACTS OR PRACTICES.—All remedies available to the Commission with respect to unfair and deceptive acts or practices shall be available for acts and practices described in paragraph (1), including restitution to domestic or foreign victims.''.

SEC. 211. CRIMINAL REFERRALS.

Section 6 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 46), as amended by section 204 of this title, is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(k) REFERRAL OF EVIDENCE FOR CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.—Whenever the Commission obtains evidence that any person, partnership or corporation, either domestic or foreign, may have engaged in conduct that could give rise to criminal proceedings, to transmit such evidence to the Attorney General who may, in his discretion, institute criminal proceedings under appropriate statutes. Provided that nothing in this subsection affects any other authority of the Commission to disclose information.''.

SEC. 212. STAFF EXCHANGES.

The Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 41 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 25 (15 U.S.C. 57c) the following:

''SEC. 25A. STAFF EXCHANGES.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Congress consents to—

''(1) the retention or employment of officers or employees of foreign government agencies on a temporary basis by the Commission under section 3109 of title 5, United States Code, section 202 of title 18, United States Code, or section 2 of this Act (15 U.S.C. 42); and

''(2) the retention or employment of officers or employees of the Commission on a temporary basis by such foreign government agencies.

''(b) FORM OF ARRANGEMENTS.—Staff arrangements under subsection (a) need not be reciprocal. The Commission may accept payment or reimbursement, in cash or in kind, from a foreign government agency to which this section is applicable, or payment or reimbursement made on behalf of such agency, for expenses incurred by the Commission, its members, and employees in carrying out such arrangements.''.

SEC. 213. EXPENDITURES FOR COOPERATIVE ARRANGEMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 6 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 46) as amended by section 211 of this title, is further amended by adding at the end the following:

''(p) To expend appropriated funds for—

''(1) operating expenses and other costs of bilateral and multilateral cooperative law enforcement groups conducting activities of interest to the Commission and in which the Commission participates; and

''(2) expenses for consultations and meetings hosted by the Commission with foreign government agency officials, members of their delegations, appropriate representatives and staff to exchange views concerning developments relating to the Commission's mission, development and implementation of cooperation agreements, and provision of technical assistance for the development of foreign consumer protection or competition regimes, such expenses to include necessary administrative and logistic expenses and the expenses of Commission staff and foreign invitees in attendance at such consultations and meetings including—

''(A) such incidental expenses as meals taken in the course of such attendance;

''(B) any travel and transportation to or from such meetings; and

''(3) any other related lodging or subsistence.''.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—The Federal Trade Commission is authorized to expend appropriated funds not to exceed $100,000 per fiscal year for purposes of section 6(p) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 46(p)), including operating expenses and other costs of the following bilateral and multilateral cooperative law enforcement groups:

(1) The International Consumer Protection and Enforcement Network.

(2) The International Competition Network.

(3) The Mexico-U.S.-Canada Health Fraud Task Force.

(4) Project Emptor.

(5) The Toronto Strategic Partnership and other regional partnerships with a nexus in a Canadian province.

By Mr. EDWARDS (for himself, Mr. REED, and Mr. ROBERTS):

S. 1235. A bill to increase the capabilities of the United States to provide reconstruction assistance to countries or regions impacted by armed conflict, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, today I am proud to join with two of my colleagues—Senator REED and Senator ROBERTS—to introduce legislation that will help America meet a critical challenge that, during the past decade, it has faced over and over: helping countries that have suffered from conflict work to rebuild their societies.

Over the past two years, America has proved again that we have the finest military force in the world. In Afghanistan and Iraq, the men and women of America's military performed with great bravery and skill. By defeating the Taliban and removing Saddam Hussein's regime from power, they showed that they are the world's best trained troops using the world's most sophisticated weapons. This is a powerful example of the leadership and commitment both here in the Congress and in successive Administrations—both Democrat and Republican—to ensure that our military remains the best equipped, best trained, most prepared fighting force in the world.

But these decisive military victories have been followed by a peace where success has not been so clear. First in Afghanistan, and now in Iraq, our efforts to help these societies get back on their feet have produced mixed results. To be sure, the challenges in both countries are profound: Afghanistan suffered from nearly a quarter-century of civil war, and Iraq suffered for more than two decades under the thumb of Saddam Hussein and his brutal regime. Both countries have deep internal divisions and little experience with representative government. While it is reasonable to assume post-conflict reconstruction efforts in both nations will take considerable time, these realities cannot be an excuse for the overall shortcoming in our own efforts, especially because we have the resources and capabilities to do better.

This is not the first time we have faced such challenges. Since the end of the Cold War, thousands of American military, diplomatic and humanitarian personnel have also been involved in major post-conflict reconstruction efforts in such places as Bosnia, Kosovo, Somalia, Rwanda, Haiti, and East Timor. Each of these efforts has had varying degrees of success, but on balance, I think we all can agree that we could have done better.

Too often, our response to post-conflict situations has been haphazard and slow to start. And once underway, our efforts often suffer from a cumbersome chain-of-command, lack of resources, and inadequate accountability.

The problem is that our government is still not well organized to deal with such situations. Each time we get involved in a post-conflict reconstruction effort we end up making it up as we go. We waste valuable time reinventing the bureaucratic wheel. And we get in unnecessary arguments about who should do what and who should be in charge.

It is remarkable that even with all the commitments we have made during the past decade, next to nothing has been done to reform the way our government works to enhance our capacity to deal with these situations effectively. Governmental mechanisms developed during the Cold War are outdated and not suited to addressing the complex set of challenges created by failed states.

We must do better. After more than ten years of improvising our responses to these challenges, it is time to change the way we do things. We need to improve our ability to plan, coordinate, and organize U.S. government resources to assist with post-conflict reconstruction. We need to train our people more effectively. We need a better sense of what works and what does not. We need greater accountability. And we need to promote the means for involving other countries in these efforts, including through institutions like NATO.

I believe that the ''Winning the Peace Act'' is an important step toward accomplishing these goals. This legislation is based upon the work of the bipartisan ''Commission on Post-Conflict Reconstruction,'' convened by the Association of the U.S. Army and the Center for Strategic and International Studies, CSIS. This Commission was very ably led by Dr. John Hamre, the former Deputy Secretary of Defense, and General Gordon Sullivan, the former Army Chief of Staff. The Commission was composed of twenty-seven distinguished military, diplomatic and humanitarian experts, including myself and my two Senate cosponsors.

The legislation includes five key proposals:

First, it calls on the President to appoint a Director of Reconstruction for areas where the U.S. will assist with post-conflict reconstruction. These Directors will provide oversight, help coordinate, and have decision-making authority for all U.S. government reconstruction activities in a particular country. They will also coordinate with the representatives of the country in question, other foreign governments, multilateral organizations, and relevant NGOs.

Second, it establishes a permanent office within the State Department to provide support to Directors of Reconstruction, ensuring that these Directors can hit the ground running and not waste valuable time hiring staff and getting office space.

Third, it establishes within USAID an Office of International Emergency Management. This new office will develop and maintain a database of individuals with expertise in reconstruction, and provide support for mobilizing these experts.

Fourth, it calls on NATO to develop an ''Integrated Security Support Component'' to assist with reconstruction. This NATO-led force will help provide security, including assistance with policing ensuring that America will not be forced to shoulder these burdens alone.

Finally, this bill establishes an interagency training center for post-conflict reconstruction. This will be run by the State Department, and will help train personnel in assessment, strategy development, planning, and coordination related to providing reconstruction services. It will also develop and certify experts in the field, and conduct lesson-learned reviews of operations.

Having these resources in place will enhance America's capacity to assist reconstruction in four critical areas: Security and public safety, such as assisting with disarmament and training of police forces; Justice, such as developing the rule of law, preventing human rights violations, and bringing war criminals to justice; Governance, such as reforming civil administration, restoring basic civil functions, and establishing processes of governance and participation; and Economic and Social Well-being, such as providing humanitarian assistance and developing national economic institutions.

With these changes, we will not only make America's efforts to assist in post-conflict reconstruction more efficient and accountable. We will also make our efforts more effective contributing more to the safety and security of the people we are trying to help, and helping them run their countries on their own.

By ensuring that we maintain the best military in the world, we have made a full commitment to winning wars. It is now time to ensure that we are capable of winning the peace.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Winning the Peace Act of 2003''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) President George W. Bush has stated that the United States security strategy takes into account the fact that ''America is now threatened less by conquering states than we are by failing ones''.

(2) Failed states can provide safe haven for a diverse array of transnational threats, including terrorist networks, militia and warlords, global organized crime, and narcotics traffickers who threaten the security of the United States and the allies of the United States.

(3) The inability of the authorities in a failed state to provide basic services can create or contribute to humanitarian emergencies.

(4) It is in the interest of the United States and the international community to bring conflict and humanitarian emergencies stemming from failed states to a lasting and sustainable close.

(5) Since the end of the Cold War, United States military, diplomatic, and humanitarian personnel have been engaged in major post-conflict reconstruction efforts in such places as Iraq, Bosnia, Kosovo, Somalia, Haiti, Rwanda, East Timor, and Afghanistan.

(6) Assisting failed states in emerging from violent conflict is a complex and long-term task, as demonstrated by the experience that 50 percent of such states emerging from conditions of violent conflict slip back into violence within 5 years.

(7) In 2003, the bipartisan Commission on Post-Conflict Reconstruction created by the Center for Strategic and International Studies and the Association of the United States Army, released a report explaining that ''United States security and development agencies still reflect their Cold War heritage. The kinds of complex crises and the challenge of failed states encountered in recent years do not line up with these outdated governmental mechanisms. If regional stability is to be maintained, economic development advanced, lives saved, and transnational threats reduced, the United States and the international community must develop a strategy and enhance capacity for pursuing post-conflict reconstruction.''.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term ''Administrator'' means the Administrator of the United States Agency for International Development.

(2) DIRECTOR.—The term ''Director'' means a Director of Reconstruction for a country or region designated by the President under section 4.

(3) RECONSTRUCTION SERVICES.—The term ''reconstruction services'' means activities related to rebuilding, reforming, or establishing the infrastructure processes or institutions of a country that has been affected by an armed conflict, including services related to—

(A) security and public safety, including—

(i) disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration of combatants;

(ii) training and equipping civilian police force; and

(iii) training and equipping of national armed forces;

(B) justice, including—

(i) developing rule of law and legal, judicial, and correctional institutions;

(ii) preventing human rights violations;

(iii) bringing war criminals to justice;

(iv) supporting national reconciliation processes; and

(v) clarifying property rights;

(C) governance, including—

(i) reforming or developing civil administration and other government institutions;

(ii) restoring performance of basic civil functions, such as schools, health clinics, and hospitals; and

(iii) establishing processes of governance and participation; and

(D) economic and social well-being, including—

(i) providing humanitarian assistance;

(ii) constructing or repairing infrastructure;

(iii) developing national economic institutions and activities, such as a banking system; and

(iv) encouraging wise stewardship of natural resources for the benefit of the citizens of such country.

SEC. 4. DIRECTOR OF RECONSTRUCTION POSITIONS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF POSITIONS.—The President is authorized to designate an individual who is a civilian as the Director of Reconstruction for each country or region in which—

(1) units of the United States Armed Forces have engaged in armed conflict; or

(2) as a result of armed conflict, the country or region will receive reconstruction services from the United States Government.

(b) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE RECONSTRUCTION SERVICES.—Notwithstanding any provision of law, other than section 553 of the Foreign Operations, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 2003 (division E of Public Law 108–7; 117 Stat. 200), the President is authorized to provide reconstruction services for any country or region for which a Director has been designated under subsection (a).

(c) DUTIES.—A Director who is designated for a country or region under subsection (a) shall provide oversight and coordination of, have decision making authority for, and consult with Congress regarding, all activities of the United States Government that are related to providing reconstruction services in such country or region, including implementing complex, multidisciplinary post-conflict reconstruction programs in such country or region.

(d) COORDINATION.—A Director shall coordinate with the representatives of the country or region where the Director is overseeing and coordinating the provision of reconstruction services, and any foreign government, multilateral organization, or nongovernmental organization that is providing services to such country or region—

(1) to avoid providing reconstruction services that duplicate any such services that are being provided by a person or government other than the United States Government;

(2) to capitalize on civil administration systems and capabilities available from such person or government; and

(3) to utilize individuals or entities with expertise in providing reconstruction services that are available through such other person or government.

(e) SUPPORT SERVICES.—The Secretary of State is authorized to establish within the Department of State a permanent office to provide support, including administrative services, to each Director designated under subsection (a).

SEC. 5. INTERNATIONAL EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT OFFICE.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—The Administrator is authorized to establish within the United States Agency for International Development an Office of International Emergency Management for the purposes described in subsection (b).

(b) PURPOSES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The purposes of the Office authorized by subsection (a) shall be—

(A) to develop and maintain a database of individuals or entities that possess expertise in providing reconstruction services; and

(B) to provide support for mobilizing such individuals and entities to provide a country or region with services applying such expertise when requested by the Director for such country or region.

(2) EXPERTS.—The individuals or entities referred to in paragraph (1) may include employees or agencies of the Federal Government, any other government, or any other person, including former Peace Corps volunteers or civilians located in the affected country or region.

SEC. 6. INTEGRATED SECURITY SUPPORT COMPONENT.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING THE CREATION OF AN INTEGRATED SECURITY SUPPORT COMPONENT OF NATO.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense should present to the North Atlantic Council a proposal to establish within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization an Integrated Security Support Component to train and equip selected units within the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to assist in providing security in countries or regions that require reconstruction services; and

(2) if such a Component is established, the President should commit United States personnel to participate in such Component, after appropriate consultation with Congress.

(b) AUTHORITY TO PARTICIPATE IN AN INTEGRATED SUPPORT COMPONENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the North Atlantic Council establishes an Integrated Security Support Component, as described in subsection (a), the President is authorized to commit United States personnel to participate in such Component, after appropriate consultation with Congress.

(2) CAPABILITIES.—The units composed of United States personnel participating in such Component pursuant to the authority in paragraph (1) should be capable of—

(A) providing for security of a civilian population, including serving as a police force; and

(B) providing for the performance of public functions and the execution of security tasks such as control of belligerent groups and crowds, apprehending targeted persons or groups, performing anti-corruption tasks, and supporting police investigations.

SEC. 7. TRAINING CENTER FOR POST-CONFLICT RECONSTRUCTION OPERATIONS.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Secretary of State shall establish within the Department of State an interagency Training Center for Post-Conflict Reconstruction Operations for the purposes described in subsection (b).

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the Training Center authorized by subsection (a) shall be to—

(1) train interagency personnel in assessment, strategy development, planning, and coordination related to providing reconstruction services;

(2) develop and certify experts in fields related to reconstruction services who could be called to participate in operations in countries or regions that require such services;

(3) provide training to individuals who will provide reconstruction services in a country or region;

(4) develop rapidly deployable training packages for use in countries or regions in need of reconstruction services; and

(5) conduct reviews of operations that provide reconstruction services for the purpose of—

(A) improving subsequent operations to provide such services; and

(B) developing appropriate training and education programs for individuals who will provide such services.

SEC. 8. REPORTS TO CONGRESS.

Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report on the actions planned to be taken to carry out the provisions of this Act.

By Mr. CAMPBELL (for himself and Mr. ALLARD):

S. 1236. A bill to direct the Secretary of the Interior to establish a program to control or eradicate tamarisk in the western States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Tamarisk Control & Riparian Restoration Act.

Tamarisk is a noxious weed that is not native to the Americas, but has spread across 11 States, from California to Oklahoma, like a plague. Many westerners consider Tamarisk, also known as Salt Cedar, to be one of the West's most significant natural resources problems for a variety of reasons.

Tamarisk's major threat is that it uses a significant amount of water, far more water than many realize. Yet, folks out West know all too well that we have been and are still experiencing one of the worst droughts in the West's recorded history. People who have been farming and ranching for generations have been forced to sell their homesteads and give up the life they love because there just hasn't been enough water for crops or to maintain livestock. I've personally felt the effects of the drought as my wife and I have had to sell our little cow/calf operation.

I mentioned earlier that Tamarisk uses significant amounts of water, but I want to speak a little bit now about just how much water it uses. Studies have found that Tamarisk uses from 2 to 4½ million acre feet of water each year, water we frankly cannot afford to lose.

To put that in perspective, several other States and the Republic of Mexico are delivered 10 million acre feet from all of Colorado's rivers and streams, including the mighty Colorado River. California is allotted 4½ million acre feet of Colorado water per year. That means that Tamarisk, a noxious, nonnative weed, uses the same amount of water flowing from Colorado to California. We must address the preventable loss of this most valuable resource before it's too late.

My bill seeks to begin get the Tamarisk problem under control in a few innovative ways. First, my bill requires the Secretary of the Interior to assess the extent of Tamarisk invasion, identifying where it is in each affected State, and estimate the costs to restore the land.

Second, my bill establishes a State Tamarisk Assistance Program to provide States the needed funds to control or eradicate Tamarisk. Grant funds will be distributed to states in accordance with the severity of the Tamarisk problem they have.

The Governor of each State will appoint a state lead agency to administer the program in the State, working with Indian Tribes, colleges and universities, nonprofit organizations, soil and water conservancy districts, and Federal partners. This coordinate approach provides sufficient flexibility to deal with Tamarisk's spread and to reduce duplicative efforts.

A watershed or basin can stretch across all kinds of land, including Federal, State, or tribal lands. Noxious weeds don't recognize those ownership boundaries and neither can we.

Since my bill's focus is on getting rid of this water-sucking weed, it requires that 90 percent of the Federal funds must be used for eradiction or rehabilitation.

This legislation authorizes $20 million for 2004 and such sums as necessary thereafter. States must share the burden by ponying up 25 percent of the costs. The Tamarisk problem hurts everyone and the non-Federal share can come from counties, municipalities, special districts, nongovernmental entities, or the States themselves.

Our Nation is in a deficit, and every state is experiencing money shortages. Americans demand to know that their hard earned money is being spent wisely and in the most effient way possible. That is why my bill requires that each participating State must submit a report of the Secretary describing the purpose and results of the project in order to receive funding. In the West, water is more precious and scarce than elsewhere in our great nation. To do nothing about the preventable loss of precious water by the spread of this noxious plant and the loss of native habitat will cost us untold millions more in the future.

Back in my State of Colorado, constituents tell me how the drought has affected them, even devastated their livelihoods. No one can control the weather and bring rain. However, getting a handle on the water-sucking Tamarisk plaguing the West is possible—if we act now.

My bill provides the necessary tools to deal with this problem so that ther will be enough water for all of us, and habitat suitable for native species of plants and animals.

I ask unanimous consent that the next of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1236

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Tamarisk Control and Riparian Restoration Act''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the western United States is currently experiencing its worst drought in modern history;

(2) the drought in the western United States has caused—

(A) severe losses in rural, agricultural, and recreational economies;

(B) detrimental effects on wildlife; and

(C) increased risk of wildfires;

(3) it is estimated that throughout the western United States tamarisk, a noxious and non-native plant—

(A) occupies between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 acres of land; and

(B) is a nonbeneficial user of 2,000,000 to 4,500,000 acre-feet of water per year;

(4) the amount of nonbeneficial use of water by tamarisk—

(A) is greater than the amount that valuable native vegetation would have used; and

(B) represents enough water for—

(i) use by 20,000,000 or more people; or

(ii) the irrigation of over 1,000,000 acres of land;

(5) scientists have established that tamarisk infestations can—

(A) increase soil and water salinity;

(B) increase the risk of flooding through increased sedimentation and decreased channel conveyance;

(C) increase wildfire potential;

(D) diminish human enjoyment of and interaction with the river environment; and

(E) adversely affect—

(i) wildlife habitat for threatened and endangered species; and

(ii) the abundance and biodiversity of other species; and

(6) as drought conditions and legal requirements relating to water supply accelerate water shortages, innovative approaches are needed to address the increasing demand for a diminishing water supply.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) PROGRAM.—The term ''program'' means the Tamarisk Assistance Program established under section 5.

(2) SECRETARY.—The term ''Secretary'' means the Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Commissioner of Reclamation.

(3) STATE.—The term ''State'' means—

(A) each of the States of Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Nevada, Oklahoma, Texas, Utah, and Wyoming; and

(B) any other State that is affected by tamarisk, as determined by the assessment conducted under section 4.

SEC. 4. TAMARISK ASSESSMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date on which funds are made available to carry out this section, the Secretary shall complete an assessment of the extent of tamarisk invasion in the western United States.

(b) COMPONENTS.—The assessment under subsection (a) shall—

(1) address past and ongoing research on tested and innovative methods to control tamarisk;

(2) estimate the costs for destruction of tamarisk, biomass removal, and restoration and maintenance of land;

(3) identify the States affected by tamarisk; and

(4) include a gross-scale estimation of infested acreage within the States identified.

SEC. 5. STATE TAMARISK ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Based on the findings of the assessment under section 4, the Secretary shall establish the Tamarisk Assistance Program to provide grants to States to carry out projects to control or eradicate tamarisk.

(b) AMOUNT OF GRANT.—The amount of a grant to a State under subsection (a) shall be determined by the Secretary, based on the estimated infested acreage in the State.

(c) DESIGNATION OF LEAD STATE AGENCY.—On receipt of a grant under subsection (a), the Governor of a State shall designate a lead State agency to administer the program in the State.

(d) PRIORITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The lead State agency designated under subsection (c), in consultation with the entities described in paragraph (2), shall establish the priority by which grant funds are distributed to projects to control or eradicate tamarisk in the State.

(2) ENTITIES.—The entities referred to in paragraph (1) are—

(A) the National Invasive Species Council;

(B) the Invasive Species Advisory Committee;

(C) representatives from Indian tribes in the State that have weed management entities or that have particular problems with noxious weeds;

(D) institutions of higher education in the State;

(E) State agencies;

(F) nonprofit organizations in the State; and

(G) soil and water conservation districts in the State that are actively conducting research on or implementing activities to control or eradicate tamarisk.

(e) CONDITIONS.—A lead State agency shall require that, as a condition of receipt of a grant under this Act, a grant recipient provide to the lead State agency any necessary information relating to a project carried out under this Act.

(f) ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES.—Not more than 10 percent of the amount of a grant provided under subsection (a) may be used for administrative expenses.

(g) COST SHARING.—

(1) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of carrying out a project under this section shall be not more than 75 percent.

(2) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share may be paid by a State, county, municipality, special district, or nongovernmental entity.

(h) REPORT.—To be eligible for additional grants under the program, not later than 180 days after the date of completion of a project carried out under this Act, a lead State agency shall submit to the Secretary a report that describes the purposes and results of the project.

SEC. 6. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this Act—

(1) $20,000,000 for fiscal year 2004; and

(2) such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.

By Mr. BENNETT (for himself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. CRAIG, and Mr. DORGAN):

S. 1237. A bill to amend the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 to provide for more equitable allotment of funds to States for centers for independent living; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. President, today I am introducing The Independent Living Improvement Act of 2003, a bill to provide a more equitable allotment of funds to States for Centers for Independent Living.

Centers for Independent Living, CILs, are non-profit organizations that assist people with significant disabilities who want to live more independently. CILs are primarily staffed by people with disabilities who act as role models, mentors, and counselors to other individuals with disabilities. Each center not only offers fundamental services such as information referral, and independent living skills training, it also tailors its services to the particular needs of its community. The ultimate goal of these centers is to help individuals become more independent and decrease the need for institutional care.

Currently, funds authorized for CILs under Title VII, Part C of the Rehabilitation Act are essentially allocated to States on the basis of their share of the total population. States with small populations are guaranteed the larger of $450,000 or ⅓ of 1 percent of the funds available for the fiscal year in which the allocation is made, with a guaranteed minimum at the fiscal 1992 funding level for each State.

While the Federal appropriation to CILs has increased over the last five years, the growing disparity between funding for small States and larger States is problematic. The proposed formula change would amend the current funding formula for CILs to provide for more equitable distribution of future funds to each state. Fifty percent of any increase in CILs appropriated fund would be allocated according to population, as is currently done, and the remaining fifty percent would be divided equally among all States. The formula would only be applicable to any future increases in funding. This more equitable sharing of funds ensures that each State's CILs will receive additional funding each time there is an increase in funding and programs will be developed for people with disabilities regardless of where they live in the country.

This bill is supported by the National Council on Independent Living. I believe this a reasonable approach to solving this problem and look forward to working with my colleagues on this issue.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1237

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Independent Living Improvement Act of 2003''.

SEC. 2. STATE ALLOTMENTS FOR CENTERS FOR INDEPENDENT LIVING.

Section 721 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (42 U.S.C. 796f) is amended by striking subsection (c) and inserting the following:

''(c) ALLOTMENTS TO STATES.—

''(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

''(A) ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION.—The term 'additional appropriation' means the amount (if any) by which the appropriation for a fiscal year exceeds the total of—

''(i) the amount reserved under subsection (b) for that fiscal year; and

''(ii) the appropriation for fiscal year 2003.

''(B) APPROPRIATION.—The term 'appropriation' means the amount appropriated to carry out this part.

''(C) BASE APPROPRIATION.—The term 'base appropriation' means the portion of the appropriation for a fiscal year that is equal to the lesser of—

''(i) an amount equal to 100 percent of the appropriation, minus the amount reserved under subsection (b) for that fiscal year; or

''(ii) the appropriation for fiscal year 2003.

''(2) ALLOTMENTS TO STATES FROM BASE APPROPRIATION.—After the reservation required by subsection (b) has been made, the Commissioner shall allot to each State whose State plan has been approved under section 706 an amount that bears the same ratio to the base appropriation as the amount the State received under this subsection for fiscal year 2003 bears to the total amount that all States received under this subsection for fiscal year 2003.

''(3) ALLOTMENTS TO STATES ADDITIONAL APPROPRIATION.—From any additional appropriation for each fiscal year, the Commissioner shall allot to each State whose State plan has been approved under section 706 an amount equal to the sum of—

''(A) an amount that bears the same ratio to 50 percent of the additional appropriation as the population of the State bears to the population of all States; and

''(B) 1/56 of 50 percent of the additional appropriation.

''(4) MAINTENANCE OF EFFORT.—

''(A) IN GENERAL.—The Commissioner shall not make a payment for the allotments described in this subsection to any State for a fiscal year unless the Commissioner—

''(i) determines that the State independent living expenditure for the first preceding fiscal year is not less than the State independent living expenditure for the second preceding fiscal year; or

''(ii) reduces the amount of the payment by the amount by which the State independent living expenditure for the second preceding fiscal year exceeds the State independent living expenditure for the first preceding fiscal year.

''(B) DEFINITION.—In this subsection, the term 'State independent living expenditure', used with respect to a fiscal year, means the total expenditure in the State of other Federal funds (other than funds made available to carry out this part), State funds, and local funds for that fiscal year to provide assistance for centers for independent living.''.

SEC. 3. REPORT.

Section 704(m)(4)(D) of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (42 U.S.C. 795c(m)(4)(D)) is amended by inserting '', including reports indicating the manner in which and extent to which the State complied with the maintenance of effort requirement specified in section 721(c)(4)(A)(i)'' before the semicolon.

By Mrs. LINCOLN (for herself, Mrs. MURRAY, Ms. LANDRIEU, and Ms. CANTWELL):

S. 1238. A bill to amend titles XVIII, XIX, and XXI of the Social Security Act to improve women's health, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I am pleased to introduce the Improving Women's Health Act of 2003, which seeks to make Medicare, Medicaid, and S–CHIP better programs for women. I am pleased to be joined in this effort today by my friends Senators MURRAY, LANDRIEU, and CANTWELL.

Women are the majority of Medicare recipients, and, at age 85, women make up 71 percent of the Medicare population. By adding several modern treatments to the list of Medicare benefits, we will begin to address some of the most prominent, underlying risk factors for illness that face women Medicare beneficiaries today. These new benefits represent the highest recommendations for Medicare beneficiaries in the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force and the Institute of Medicine. These benefits can help reduce Medicare beneficiaries' risk for health problems such as diabetes, stroke, cancer, osteoporosis, and heart disease.

This bill would also eliminate all cost-sharing for these and existing preventive health benefits to encourage women to get screened for diseases such as osteoporosis and breast cancer. We need to get rid of all barriers to preventative services. Studies have shown that cost-sharing deters beneficiaries, especially those with low-incomes, from getting screened.

Because heart disease is the number one killer of women, this bill would add new preventive services to Medicare, such as cholesterol screening, medical nutrition therapy services for beneficiaries with cardiovascular disease, counseling for cessation of tobacco use, and diabetes screening.

In addition, this bill provides for coverage of annual pap smear and pelvic exams and boosts the payment amount for screening mammography under Medicare. Numerous reports in the media have indicated that screening mammography is not adequately reimbursed and, as a result, facilities are closing or ending their service. Facilities are saying that they are losing money on every patient that comes through the door, and patient load is rising.

Recognizing the role women play as caregivers for aging family members, this bill provides Medicare beneficiaries with a new option of receiving home health services in an adult day care setting. Adult day centers enable family caregivers to continue working or simply take a break from their caregiving duties. Most importantly, adult day care patients benefit from social interaction, therapeutic activities, nutrition, health monitoring, and medication management.

More than 22 million families nationwide, or nearly 1 in 4 families, serve as caregivers for aging seniors, providing close to 80 percent of the care of to individuals requiring long-term care. Nearly 75 percent of people providing care for aging family members are women who also maintain other responsibilities, such as working outside of the home and raising young children. The average loss of income to these caregivers has been shown to be over $650,000 in wages, pension, and Social Security benefits. The loss of productivity in U.S. businesses ranges from $11 to $29 billion a year. The services offered in adult day care facilities provide continuity of care and an important sense of community for both the senior and the caregiver. This important provision will benefit women of all ages.

Finally, this legislation provides States with the flexibility and Federal resources to improve and expand prenatal care for low-income pregnant women. It gives States new options to cover pregnant women under their State Children's Health Insurance Program, S–CHIP, to cover low-income legal immigrant pregnant women and children under Medicaid and S–CHIP, and to cover tobacco cessation counseling services for pregnant women under the Medicaid program. The bill also gives States the option to provide family planning services and supplies to low-income women. In recent years, a number of States, including Arkansas, have sought and received Federal permission in the form of waivers to provide Medicaid-financed family planning services and supplies to lower income, uninsured residents whose incomes are above the state's regular Medicaid eligibility ceilings. Under this section, States would no longer have to seek a waiver to extend Medicaid coverage for family planning services; instead they could establish these programs at their option.

I encourage my colleagues to join me by supporting this important legislation that will make Medicare, Medicaid, and S–CHIP better programs for all women.

By Mr. LUGAR:

S. 1240. A bill to establish the Millennium Challenge Corporation, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I rise to introduce legislation that is intended to unite Senators behind the President's bold new commitment to international development. As my colleagues are aware, the President has offered a plan called the Millennium Challenge Corporation that will focus U.S. energy and resources on countries that, while very poor, show commitment to economic reform and development. It is a unique plan that would reward and showcase what we Americans believe to be the essential ingredients for success: good government, investments in people, and a reliance on free markets.

My colleagues on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee strongly supported the goals of the President's initiative and applauded his enthusiasm and personal commitment. But, when we considered the MCC legislation a few weeks ago, organizational issues divided the Committee. The Committee voted 11 to 8 against creating the MCC as an independent agency. Instead the functions of the MCC were integrated into the State Department.

This outcome did not capture the President's vision of a fresh start for a unique approach to development assistance. The Secretary of State himself argued against the Committee's majority on that vote. Secretary Powell said that the President's plan would be best achieved through the establishment of an innovative, flexible, narrowly targeted and highly visible separate organization that can complement other assistance provided through more traditional means.

I believe the Senate should work for a consensus on this issue. This important initiative cannot be allowed to founder on a question of organization.

I have been working to develop a middle ground that will satisfy the basic goals of all sides. My bill creates the needed ingredients for interagency coordination, a top priority among a majority on the Committee. But it does not undermine the integrity of the President's concept. It puts the MCC under the authority of the Secretary of State and has the MCC's Chief Executive Officer report to the Secretary. It gives the MCC the same status within the State Department as the U.S. Agency for International Development, with the right to manage itself, hire staff, and create its own culture. It mandates coordination between the MCC and USAID in the field and give USAID the primary role in preparing countries for MCC eligibility. It also includes the Administrator of USAID on the MCC board to ensure that the perspective of USAID is considered.

Through these means, I believe that the MCC can be substantially independent, as envisioned by the President, while preserving the leadership of the Secretary of State and the input of USAID.

I would emphasize that the President has invested his personal attention and time in the MCC concept. It is rare for a President of either party to provide such strong leadership in the area of development assistance. President Bush's advocacy is critical to the success of this initiative. I believe Congress will regret its actions if we undercut this opportunity for U.S. foreign policy by failing to reach a workable consensus on the MCC's organization.

I am hoping for a strong Senate vote on the MCC and will bring up my compromise proposal at an appropriate time. The MCC provides a way to focus single-mindedly on economic development that is results-based and meets clear benchmarks of success. We can have the coordination we seek while also insulating it from short-term political considerations so that it can focus on widening the universe of countries that live in peace and look to a prosperous and stable future.

I ask unanimous consent that the two accompany pages be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. MCCAIN (for himself, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mrs. HUTCHISON):

S. 1244. A bill to authorize appropriations for the Federal Maritime Commission for fiscal years 2004 and 2005; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined by Senator HOLLINGS, the Ranking Member of the Senate Commerce Committee; and Senator HUTCHISON, the Chairman of the Surface Transportation and Merchant Marine Subcommittee, in introducing a bipartisan bill to reauthorize the Federal Maritime Commission, FMC.

The Federal Maritime Commission is an independent agency comprised of five commissioners. Its primary responsibility is administering the Shipping Act of 1984 and enforcing the Foreign Shipping Practices Act and Section 19 of the Merchant Marine Act of 1920. The work carried out by the FMC is critical to protecting shippers and carriers from restrictive or unfair practices by foreign-flag carriers.

This legislation would authorize funding for the Commission to continue its important work through fiscal year 2005. Specifically, the bill would authorize $18.5 million for fiscal year 2004, which is the level requested by the Administration, and $19.5 million for fiscal year 2005. The bill also would amend Section 102(b) of the Reorganization Plan No. 7 of 1961 to require that the Commission's chairman be subject to Senate confirmation. Additionally, the bill would require the Commission to report to Congress on the status of any agreements or discussions with other Federal, State, or local governmental agencies concerning issues dealing with the sharing of ocean shipping information for the purpose of assisting law enforcement or anti-terrorism efforts. The Commission also would be directed to make recommendations on how the Commission's ocean shipping information could be better utilized to improve port security efforts.

I look forward to working with my colleagues in moving this bill through the legislative process in the weeks ahead.

SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 166—RECOGNIZING THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE'S AIR FORCE NEWS AGENCY ON THE OCCASION OF ITS 25TH ANNIVERSARY AND HONORING THE AIR FORCE PERSONNEL WHO HAVE SERVED THE NATION WHILE ASSIGNED TO THAT AGENCY

Mr. CORNYN submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

S. RES. 166

Whereas the Air Force News Agency has served as the primary news and information organization for the United States Air Force since the agency was organized on June 1, 1978;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency currently has more than 480 personnel stationed around the world in 28 locations gathering news, information, and images about United States military missions;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency is capable of providing news, information, and images in the widest array of formats to the American public and the world, including print, television, radio, Internet, and telephone formats;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency provides a critical service to senior leaders and commanders of the Department of Defense and the United States Air Force by providing news, information, and images to service members wherever they are stationed around the world;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency helps ensure the morale and readiness of the members of the United States Armed Forces around the world by covering and reporting on the critical services they provide in service to the Nation, to their remote locations, to their family members, and to the American public;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency has recently contributed significantly in Operation Enduring Freedom, Operation Noble Eagle, Operation Anaconda in Afghanistan, and Operation Iraqi Freedom;

Whereas during Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm, the Air Force News Agency's Air Force Broadcasting Service delivered continuous radio and television news and information to coalition forces through the American Forces Desert Network;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency's Air Force News Service provides news, information, and images about the United States Air Force through its official web site, Air Force Link, to more than 3,700,000 Internet users every week, biweekly television news programs to more than 800 television stations and cable systems, and print news stories and images to more than 30,000 subscribers every weekday;

Whereas the Air Force News Agency's Army and Air Force Hometown News Service annually provides more than 800,000 news releases to 12,000 daily and weekly hometown newspapers of active, Reserve, and Guard service members and distributes more than 13,500 Holiday Greetings to 1,085 television stations and 2,906 radio stations each holiday season; and

Whereas the year 2003 marks the 25th anniversary of the Air Force News Agency: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) recognizes the United States Air Force's Air Force News Agency on the occasion of its 25th anniversary; and

(2) honors the Air Force personnel who have served the Nation while assigned to that agency.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 53—HONORING AND CONGRATULATING CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE FOR THEIR EFFORTS THAT CONTRIBUTE TO THE IMPROVEMENT OF COMMUNITIES AND THE STRENGTHENING OF LOCAL AND REGIONAL ECONOMIES

Mr. LEVIN (for himself, and Ms. STABENOW) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 53

Whereas chambers of commerce throughout the United States contribute to the improvement of their communities and the strengthening of their local and regional economies;

Whereas in the Detroit, Michigan area, the Detroit Regional Chamber, originally known as the Detroit Board of Commerce, typifies the public-spirited contributions made by the chambers of commerce;

Whereas, on June 30, 1903, the Detroit Board of Commerce was formally organized with 253 charter members;

Whereas the Detroit Board of Commerce played a prominent role in the formation of the United States Chamber of Commerce;

Whereas the Detroit Board of Commerce participated in the Good Roads for Michigan campaign in 1910 and 1911, helping to gain voter approved of a $2,000,000 bond proposal to improve the roads of Wayne County, Michigan;

Whereas, in 1925, the Safety Council of the Detroit Board of Commerce helped develop the first traffic lights in Detroit;

Whereas, in 1927, the Detroit Board of Commerce brought together all of the cities, villages, and townships in southeast Michigan to tentatively establish boundaries for a metropolitan district for Detroit, embracing all or parts of Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Monroe, and Washtenaw Counties at the request of the United States Census Bureau in advance of the 1930 census;

Whereas, in 1932, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board designated the Detroit Board of Commerce as the authorized agent for stock subscriptions in the Federal Home Loan Bank, as an early response to the Great Depression;

Whereas, in 1945, the Detroit Board of Commerce promoted the making of Victory Loans to veterans returning from service in the United States Armed Forces during World War II as a way of expressing thanks for the veterans' wartime service, and raised more than half of the total amount contributed in Wayne County, Michigan, to fund Victory Loans;

Whereas, in 1969, the Detroit Board of Commerce, then known as the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, was instrumental in the establishment of a bus network connecting inner-city workers and jobs, which resulted in the creation of the Southeast Metropolitan Transportation Authority, now known as SMART;

Whereas the Detroit Board of Commerce has been known by several names during its century of existence, eventually becoming known as the Detroit Regional Chamber in November 1997;

Whereas the Detroit Regional Chamber is the largest chamber of commerce in the United States and has been in existence for over 100 years;

Whereas more than 19,000 businesses across southeast Michigan have decided to make an initial investment in the Detroit Regional Chamber to help develop the region;

Whereas the Detroit Regional Chamber has supported the concept of regionalism in southeast Michigan, representing the concerns of business and the region as a whole;

Whereas the mission of the Detroit Regional Chamber is to help power the economy of southeastern Michigan;

Whereas the Detroit Regional Chamber successfully advocates public policy concerns on behalf of its members at the local, regional, State, and national levels;

Whereas the Detroit Regional Chamber has implemented programs promoting diversity in its work force and has won recognition for such efforts;

Whereas the Detroit Regional Chamber is committed to promoting the interests of its members in the global marketplace through economic development efforts; and

Whereas, on June 30, 2003, the Detroit Regional Chamber celebrates its 100th anniversary: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), that Congress honors and congratulates chambers of commerce for their efforts that contribute to the improvement of their communities and the strengthening of their local and regional economies.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 54—COMMENDING MEDGAR WILEY EVERS AND HIS WIDOW, MYRLIE EVERS-WILLIAMS FOR THEIR LIVES AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS, DESIGNATING A MEDGAR EVERS NATIONAL WEEK OF REMEMBRANCE, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Mr. COCHRAN (for himself and Mr. LOTT) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. CON. RES. 54

Whereas a pioneer in the fight for racial justice, Medgar Wiley Evers, was born July 2, 1925, in Decatur, Mississippi, to James and Jessie Evers;

Whereas, to faithfully serve his country, Medgar Evers left high school to join the Army when World War II began and, after coming home to Mississippi, he completed high school, enrolled in Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, presently known as Alcorn State University, and majored in business administration;

Whereas, as a student at Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, Evers was a member of the debate team, the college choir, and the football and track teams, was the editor of the campus newspaper and the yearbook, and held several student offices, which gained him recognition in Who's Who in American Colleges;

Whereas, while a junior at Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, Evers met a freshman named Myrlie Beasley, whom he married on December 24, 1951, and with whom he spent the remainder of his life;

Whereas, after Medgar Evers received a bachelor of arts degree, he moved to historic Mound Bayou, Mississippi, became employed by Magnolia Mutual Life Insurance Company, and soon began establishing local chapters of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (referred to in this resolution as the ''NAACP'') throughout the Delta region;

Whereas, moved by the plight of African-Americans in Mississippi and a desire to change the conditions facing them, in 1954, after the United States Supreme Court ruled school segregation unconstitutional, Medgar Evers became the first known African-American person to apply for admission to the University of Mississippi Law School, but was denied that admission;

Whereas, as a result of that denial, Medgar Evers contacted the NAACP to take legal action;

Whereas in 1954, Medgar Evers was offered a position as the Mississippi Field Secretary for the NAACP, and he accepted the position, making Myrlie Evers his secretary;

Whereas, with his wife by his side, Medgar Evers began a movement to register people to vote in Mississippi and, as a result of his activities, Medgar Evers received numerous threats;

Whereas, in spite of the threats, Medgar Evers persisted, with dedication and courage, to organize rallies, build the NAACP's membership, and travel around the country with Myrlie Evers to educate the public;

Whereas Medgar Evers' passion for quality education for all children led him to file suit against the Jackson, Mississippi public schools, which gained him national media coverage;

Whereas Medgar Evers organized students from Tougaloo and Campbell Colleges, coordinated and led protest marches, organized boycotts of Jackson businesses and sit-ins, and challenged segregated bus seating, and for these heroic efforts, he was arrested, beaten, and jailed;

Whereas the violence against Medgar Evers came to a climax on June 12, 1963, when he was shot and killed in front of his home;

Whereas, after the fingerprints of an outspoken segregationist were recovered from the scene of the shooting, and 2 juries deadlocked without a conviction in the shooting case, Myrlie Evers and her 3 children moved to Claremont, California, where she enrolled in Pomona College and earned her bachelor's degree in sociology in 1968;

Whereas, after Medgar Evers' death, Myrlie Evers began to create her own legacy and emerged as a national catalyst for justice and equality by becoming active in politics, becoming a founder of the National Women's Political Caucus, running for Congress in California's 24th congressional district, serving as Commissioner of Public Works for Los Angeles, using her writing skills to serve as a correspondent for Ladies Home Journal and to cover the Paris Peace Talks, and rising to prominence as Director of Consumer Affairs for the Atlantic Richfield Company;

Whereas Myrlie Evers became Myrlie Evers-Williams when she married Walter Williams in 1976;

Whereas, in the 1990's, Evers-Williams convinced Mississippi prosecutors to reopen Medgar Evers' murder case, and the reopening of the case led to the conviction and life imprisonment of Medgar Evers' killer;

Whereas Evers-Williams became the first female to chair the 64-member Board of Directors of the NAACP, to provide guidance to an organization that was dear to Medgar Evers' heart;

Whereas Evers-Williams has published her memoirs, entitled ''Watch Me Fly: What I Learned on the Way to Becoming the Woman I Was Meant to Be'', to enlighten the world about the struggles that plagued her life as the wife of an activist and empowered her to become a community leader;

Whereas Evers-Williams is widely known as a motivational lecturer and continues to speak out against discrimination and injustice;

Whereas her latest endeavor has brought her home to Mississippi to make two remarkable contributions, through the establishment of the Evers Collection and the Medgar Evers Institute, which advance the knowledge and cause of social injustice and which encompass the many lessons in the life's work of Medgar Evers and Myrlie Evers-Williams;

Whereas Evers-Williams has presented the extraordinary papers in that Collection and Institute to the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, where the papers are being preserved and catalogued; and

Whereas it is the policy of Congress to recognize and pay tribute to the lives and accomplishments of extraordinary Mississippians such as Medgar Evers and Myrlie Evers-Williams, whose life sacrifices have contributed to the betterment of the lives of the citizens of Mississippi as well as the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

(1) Congress commends Medgar Wiley Evers and his widow, Myrlie Evers-Williams, and expresses the greatest respect and gratitude of Congress, for their lives and accomplishments;

(2) the Senate—

(A) designates the period beginning on June 9, 2003, and ending on June 16, 2003, as the ''Medgar Evers National Week of Remembrance''; and

(B) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies and activities; and

(3) copies of this resolution shall be furnished to the family of Medgar Wiley Evers and Myrlie Evers-Williams.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 878. Mr. SCHUMER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 14, to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

On page 150, after line 14, insert the following:

SEC. 443. PLAN FOR WESTERN NEW YORK SERVICE CENTER.

Not later than December 31, 2003, the Secretary of Energy shall transmit to the Congress a plan for the transfer to the Secretary of title to, and full responsibility for the possession, transportation, disposal, stewardship, maintenance, and monitoring of, all facilities, property, and radioactive waste at the Western New York Service Center in West Valley, New York. The Secretary shall consult with the President of the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority in developing such plan.

SA 879. Mr. KERRY submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 14, to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ___. SUSTAINABILITY GRANTS FOR WOMEN'S BUSINESS CENTERS.

Section 29(k)(4)(A)(iv) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 656(k)(4)(A)(iv)) is amended by striking ''30.2 percent'' and inserting ''36 percent''.

SA 880. Mr. ALEXANDER (for himself, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. CORNYN, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Ms. MURKOWSKI) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 14, to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes; as follows:

''SECTION . NATURAL GAS SUPPLY SHORTAGE REPORT.

''(a) REPORT.—Not later than six months after the date of enactment of this act, the Secretary of Energy (''Secretary'') shall submit to the Congress a report on natural gas supplies and demand. In preparing the report, the Secretary shall consult with experts in natural gas supply and demand as well as representatives of State and local units of government, tribal organizations, and consumer and other organizations. As the Secretary deems advisable, the Secretary may hold public hearings and provide other opportunities for public comment. The report shall contain recommendations for federal actions that, if implemented, will result in a balance between natural gas supply and demand at a level that will ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, achievement of the objectives established in subsection (b).

''(b) OBJECTIVES OF REPORT.—In preparing the report, the Secretary shall seek to develop a series of recommendations that will result in a balance between natural gas supply and demand adequate to—

''(1) provide residential consumers with natural gas at reasonable and stable prices;

''(2) accommodate long-term maintenance and growth of domestic natural gas dependent industrial, manufactured and commercial enterprises;

''(3) facilitate the attainment of national ambient air quality standards under the Clean Air Act;

''(4) permit continued progress in reducing emissions associated with electric power generation; and

''(5) support development of the preliminary phases of hydrogen-based energy technologies.

''(c) CONTENTS OF REPORT.—The report shall provide a comprehensive analysis of natural gas supply and demand in the United States for the period from 2004 and 2015. The analysis shall include, at a minimum—

''(1) estimates of annual domestic demand for natural gas that take into account the effect of federal policies and actions that are likely to increase and decrease demand for natural gas;

''(2) projections of annual natural gas supplies, from domestic and foreign sources, under existing federal policies;

''(3) an identification of estimated natural gas supplies that are not available under existing federal policies;

''(4) scenarios for decreasing natural gas demand and increasing natural gas supplies comparing relative economic and environmental impacts of federal policies that—

''(A) encourage or require the use of natural gas to meet air quality, carbon dioxide emission reduction, or energy security goals;

''(B) encourage or require the use of energy sources other than natural gas, including coal, nuclear and renewable sources;

''(C) support technologies to develop alternative sources of natural gas and synthetic gas, including coal gasification technologies;

''(D) encourage or require the use of energy conservation and demand side management practices; and

''(E) affect access to domestic natural gas supplies; and

''(5) recommendations for federal actions to achieve the objectives of the report, including recommendations that—

''(A) encourage or require the use of energy sources other than natural gas, including coal, nuclear and renewable sources;

''(B) encourage or require the use of energy conservation or demand side management practices;

''(C) support technologies for the development of alternative sources of natural gas and synthetic gas, including coal gasification technologies; and

''(D) will improve access to domestic natural gas supplies.''.

SA 881. Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself, Mr. INOUYE, and Mr. DASCHLE) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 14, to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes; as follows:

Page 101, line 1, strike ''electrify Indian tribal land'' and all that follows through page 128, line 24, and insert:

''(4) electrify Indian tribal land and the homes of tribal members.''

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The table of contents of the Department of Energy Organization Act (42 U.S.C. prec. 7101) is amended—

(A) in the item relating to section 209, by striking ''Section'' and inserting ''Sec.''; and

(B) by striking the items relating to sections 213 through 216 and inserting the following:

''Sec. 213. Establishment of policy for National Nuclear Security Administration.
''Sec. 214. Establishment of security, counterintelligence, and intelligence policies.
''Sec. 215. Office of Counterintelligence.
''Sec. 216. Office of Intelligence.
''Sec. 217. Office of Indian Energy Policy and Programs

(2) Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by inserting ''Director, Office of Indian Energy Policy and Programs, Department of Energy.'' after ''Inspector General, Department of Energy.''.

SEC. 303. INDIAN ENERGY.

(a) Title XXVI of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (25 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.) is amended to read as follows:

''TITLE XXVI—INDIAN ENERGY

''SEC. 2601. DEFINITIONS.

''For purposes of this title:

''(1) The term 'Director' means the Director of the Office of Indian Energy Policy and Programs, Department of Energy.

''(2) The term 'Indian land' means—

''(A) any land located within the boundaries of an Indian reservation, pueblo, or rancheria;

''(B) any land not located within the boundaries of an Indian reservation, pueblo, or rancheria, the title to which is held—

''(i) in trust by the United States for the benefit of an Indian tribe;

''(ii) by an Indian tribe, subject to restriction by the United States against alienation; or

''(iii) by a dependent Indian community; and

''(C) land conveyed to a Native Corporation under the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1601 et seq.).

''(3) The term 'Indian reservation' includes—

''(A) an Indian reservation in existence in any State or States as of the date of enactment of this paragraph;

''(B) a public domain Indian allotment;

''(C) in Oklahoma, all land that is—

''(i) within the jurisdictional area of an Indian tribe, and

''(ii) within the boundaries of the last reservation of such tribe that was established by treaty, executive order, or secretarial order; and

''(D) a dependent Indian community located within the borders of the United States, regardless of whether the community is located—

''(i) on original or acquired territory of the community; or

''(ii) within or outside the boundaries of any particular State.

''(4) The term 'Indian tribe' has the meaning given the term in section 4 of the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450b), except the term, for the purpose of Section 2604, shall not include any Native Corporation.

''(5) The term 'Native Corporation' has the meaning given the term in section 3 of the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act (43 U.S.C. 1602).

''(6) The term 'organization' means a partnership, joint venture, limited liability company, or other unincorporated association or entity that is established to develop Indian energy resources.

''(7) The term 'Program' means the Indian energy resource development program established under section 2602(a).

''(8) The term 'Secretary' means the Secretary of the Interior.

''(9) The term 'tribal energy resource development organization' means an organization of 2 or more entities, at least 1 of which is an Indian tribe, that has the written consent of the governing bodies of all Indian tribes participating in the organization to apply for a grant, loan, or other guarantee authorized by sections 2602 or 2603 of this title.

''(10) The term 'tribal land' means any land or interests in land owned by any Indian tribe, band, nation, pueblo, community, rancheria, colony or other group, title to which is held in trust by the United States or which is subject to a restriction against alienation imposed by the United States.

''(11) The term 'vertical integration of energy resources'' means any project or activity that promotes the location and operation of a facility (including any pipeline, gathering system, transportation system or facility, or electric transmission facility), on or near Indian land to process, refine, generate electricity from, or otherwise develop energy resources on, Indian land.

''SEC. 2602. INDIAN TRIBAL ENERGY RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT.

''(a) DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR PROGRAM.—

''(1) To assist Indian tribes in the development of energy resources and further the goal of Indian self-determination, and with the consent of any affected Indian tribe, the Secretary shall establish and implement an Indian energy resource development program to assist Indian tribes and tribal energy resource development organizations in achieving the purposes of this title.

''(2) In carrying out the Program, the Secretary shall—

''(A) provide development grants to Indian tribes and tribal energy resource development organizations for use in developing or obtaining the managerial and technical capacity needed to develop energy resources on Indian land, and to properly account for resulting energy production and revenues;

''(B) provide grants to Indian tribes and tribal energy resource development organizations for use in carrying out projects to promote the vertical integration of energy resources, and to process, use, or develop those energy resources, on Indian land; and

''(C) provide low-interest loans to Indian tribes and tribal energy resource development organizations for use in the promotion of energy resource development and vertical integration of energy resources on Indian land.

''(3) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection such sums as are necessary for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2014.

''(b) INDIAN ENERGY EDUCATION PLANNING AND MANAGEMENT ASSISTANCE.—

''(1) The Director shall establish programs to assist Indian tribes in meeting energy education, research and development, planning, and management needs.

''(2) In carrying out this section, the Director may provide grants, on a competitive basis, to an Indian tribe or tribal energy resource development organization for use in carrying out—

''(A) energy, energy efficiency, and energy conservation programs;

''(B) studies and other activities supporting tribal acquisition of energy supplies, services, and facilities;

''(C) planning, construction, development, operation, maintenance, and improvement of tribal electrical generation, transmission, and distribution facilities located on Indian land; and

''(D) development, construction, and interconnection of electric power transmission facilities located on Indian land with other electric transmission facilities.

''(3)(A) The Director may develop, in consultation with Indian tribes, a formula for providing grants under this section.

''(B) In providing a grant under this subsection, the Director shall give priority to an application received from an Indian tribe with inadequate electric service (as determined by the Director).

''(4) The Secretary of Energy may promulgate such regulations as necessary to carry out this subsection.

''(5) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this subsection $20,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2011.

''(c) LOAN GUARANTEE PROGRAM.—

''(1) Subject to paragraph (3), the Secretary of Energy may provide loan guarantees (as defined in section 502 of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (2 U.S.C. 661a)) for not more than 90 percent of the unpaid principal and interest due on any loan made to any Indian tribe for energy development.

''(2) A loan guaranteed under this subsection shall be made by—

''(A) a financial institution subject to examination by the Secretary of Energy; or

''(B) an Indian tribe, from funds of the Indian tribe.

''(3) The aggregate outstanding amount guaranteed by the Secretary of Energy at any time under this subsection shall not exceed $2,000,000,000.

''(4) The Secretary of Energy may promulgate such regulations as the Secretary of Energy determines are necessary to carry out this subsection.

''(5) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as are necessary to carry out this subsection, to remain available until expended.

''(6) Not later than 1 year from the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Energy shall report to the Congress on the financing requirements of Indian tribes for energy development on Indian land.

''(d) INDIAN ENERGY PREFERENCE.—

''(1) In purchasing electricity or any other energy product or byproduct, a Federal agency or department may give preference to an energy and resource production enterprise, partnership, consortium, corporation, or other type of business organization the majority of the interest in which is owned and controlled by 1 or more Indian tribes.

''(2) In carrying out this subsection, a Federal agency or department shall not—

''(A) pay more than the prevailing market price for an energy product or byproduct; and

''(B) obtain less than prevailing market terms and conditions.''.

''SEC. 2603. INDIAN TRIBAL ENERGY RESOURCE REGULATION.

''(a) GRANTS.—The Secretary may provide to Indian tribes and tribal energy resource development organizations, on an annual basis, grants for use in developing, administering, implementing, and enforcing tribal laws (including regulations) governing the development and management of energy resources on Indian land.

''(b) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds from a grant provided under this section may be used by an Indian tribe or tribal energy resource development organization for—

''(1) the development of a tribal energy resource inventory or tribal energy resource on Indian land;

''(2) the development of a feasibility study or other report necessary to the development of energy resources on Indian land;

''(3) the development and enforcement of tribal laws and the development of technical infrastructure to protect the environment under applicable law; or

''(4) the training of employees that—

''(A) are engaged in the development of energy resources on Indian land; or

''(B) are responsible for protecting the environment.

''(c) OTHER ASSISTANCE.—To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary and the Secretary of Energy shall make available to Indian tribes and tribal energy resource development organizations scientific and technical data for use in the development and management of energy resources on Indian land.

''SEC. 2604. LEASES, BUSINESS AGREEMENTS, AND RIGHTS-OF-WAY INVOLVING ENERGY DEVELOPMENT OR TRANSMISSION.

''(a) LEASES AND AGREEMENTS.—Subject to the provisions of this section—

''(1) an Indian tribe may, at its discretion, enter into a lease or business agreement for the purpose of energy development, including a lease or business agreement for—

''(A) exploration for, extraction of, processing of, or other development of energy resources on tribal land; and

''(B) construction or operation of an electric generation, transmission, or distribution facility located on tribal land; or a facility to process or refine energy resources developed on tribal land; and

''(2) such lease or business agreement described in paragraph (1) shall not require the approval of the Secretary under section 2103 of the Revised Statutes (25 U.S.C. 81) or any other provision of Title 25, U.S. Code, if—

''(A) the lease or business agreement is executed in accordance with a tribal energy resource agreement approved by the Secretary under subsection (e);

''(B) the term of the lease or business agreement does not exceed—

''(i) 30 years; or

''(ii) in the case of a lease for the production of oil and gas resources, 10 years and as long thereafter as oil or gas is produced in paying quantities; and

''(C) the Indian tribe has entered into a tribal energy resource agreement with the Secretary, as described in subsection (e), relating to the development of energy resources on tribal land (including an annual trust asset evaluation of the activities of the Indian tribe conducted in accordance with the agreement).

''(b) RIGHTS-OF-WAY FOR PIPELINES OR ELECTRIC TRANSMISSION OR DISTRIBUTION LINES.—An Indian tribe may grant a right-of-way over tribal land for a pipeline or an electric transmission or distribution line without specific approval by the Secretary if—

''(1) the right-of-way is executed in accordance with a tribal energy resource agreement approved by the Secretary under subsection (e);

''(2) the term of the right-of-way does not exceed 30 years;

''(3) the pipeline or electric transmission or distribution line serves—

''(A) an electric generation, transmission, or distribution facility located on tribal land; or

''(B) a facility located on tribal land that processes or refines energy resources developed on tribal land; and

''(4) the Indian tribe has entered into a tribal energy resource agreement with the Secretary, as described in subsection (e), relating to the development of energy resources on tribal land (including an annual trust asset evaluation of the activities of the Indian tribe conducted in accordance with the agreement).

''(c) RENEWALS.—A lease or business agreement entered into or a right-of-way granted by an Indian tribe under this section may be renewed at the discretion of the Indian tribe in accordance with this section.

''(d) VALIDITY.—No lease, business agreement, or right-of-way relating to the development of tribal energy resources pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be valid unless the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way is authorized in accordance with a tribal energy resource agreement approved by the Secretary under subsection (e)(2).

''(e) TRIBAL ENERGY RESOURCE AGREEMENTS.—

''(1) On promulgation of regulations under paragraph (8), an Indian tribe may submit to the Secretary for approval a tribal energy resource agreement governing leases, business agreements, and rights-of-way under this section.

''(2)(A) Not later than 180 days after the date on which the Secretary receives a tribal energy resource agreement submitted by an Indian tribe under paragraph (1) (or one year if the Secretary determines such additional time is necessary to comply with applicable federal law), the Secretary shall approve or disapprove the tribal energy resource agreement.

''(B) The Secretary shall approve a tribal energy resource agreement submitted under paragraph (1) if—

''(i) the Secretary determines that the Indian tribe has demonstrated that the Indian tribe has sufficient capacity to regulate the development of energy resources of the Indian tribe; and

''(ii) the tribal energy resource agreement includes provisions that, with respect to a lease, business agreement, or right-of-way under this section—

''(1) ensure the acquisition of necessary information from the applicant for the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way;

''(II) address the term of the lease or business agreement or the term of conveyance of the right-of-way;

''(III) address amendments and renewals;

''(IV) address consideration for the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way;

''(V) address technical or other relevant requirements;

''(VI) establish requirements for environmental review in accordance with subparagraph (C);

''(VII) ensure compliance with all applicable environmental laws;

''(VIII) identify final approval authority;

''(IX) provide for public notification of final approvals;

''(X) establish a process for consultation with any affected States concerning potential off-reservation impacts associated with the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way;

''(XI) describe the remedies for breach of the lease, agreement, or right-of-way; and

''(XII) describe tribal remedies, if any, against the United States for breach of any duties of the United States under such tribal energy resource agreement.

''(C) Tribal energy resource agreements submitted under paragraph (1) shall establish, and include provisions to ensure compliance with, an environmental review process that, with respect to a lease, business agreement, or right-of-way under this section, provides for—

''(i) Except as provided in clause (ii) of this subparagraph, the preparation of a document comparable to an environmental assessment as provided for in existing regulations issued by the President's Council on Environmental Quality, including brief discussions of the need for the proposal and the environmental impacts (including impacts on cultural resources) of the proposed action and alternatives (which may be limited to a no-action alternative except in circumstances in which section 102(2)(E) of the National Environmental Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(E)) would require a broader consideration of alternatives if such action were proposed by a federal agency);

''(ii) in the event that the environmental analysis specified in clause (i) leads to a determination by the responsible tribal official that the impacts of the proposed action will be significant, the tribe will prepare an environmental impact statement comparable to that required pursuant to existing regulations of the Council on Environmental Quality, provided that the preparation of an environmental assessment pursuant to clause (i) is not required if the responsible tribal official makes a threshold determination that an environmental impact statement pursuant to this clause (ii) will be required;

''(iii) the identification of proposed mitigation and mechanisms to ensure that any mitigation measures that are incorporated into the environmental documents required pursuant to clause (i) or (ii) will be enforceable;

''(iv) a process for ensuring that the public is informed of and has an opportunity to comment on the environmental impacts of any proposed lease, business agreement, or right-of-way before the issuance of a final document under clauses (i) or (ii), and before tribal approval of the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way (or any amendment to or renewal of the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way); and

''(v) sufficient administrative support and technical capability to carry out the environmental review process.

''(D) A tribal energy resource agreement negotiated between the Secretary and an Indian tribe in accordance with this subsection shall include—

''(i) provisions requiring the Secretary to conduct an annual trust asset evaluation to monitor the performance of the activities of the Indian tribe associated with the development of energy resources on tribal land by the Indian tribe; and

''(ii) in the case of a finding by the Secretary of imminent jeopardy to a physical trust asset, provisions authorizing the Secretary to reassume responsibility for activities associated with the development of energy resources on tribal land.

''(3) The Secretary shall provide notice and opportunity for public comment on tribal energy resource agreements submitted under paragraph (1).

''(4) If the Secretary disapproves a tribal energy resource agreement submitted by an Indian tribe under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall—

''(A) notify the Indian tribe in writing of the basis for the disapproval;

''(B) identify what changes or other actions are required to address the concerns of the Secretary; and

''(C) provide the Indian tribe with an opportunity to revise and resubmit the tribal energy resource agreement.

''(5) If an Indian tribe executes a lease or business agreement or grants a right-of-way in accordance with a tribal energy resource agreement approved under this subsection, the Indian tribe shall, in accordance with the process and requirements set forth in the Secretary's regulations adopted pursuant to subsection (e)(8), provide to the Secretary—

''(A) a copy of the lease, business agreement, or right-of-way document (including all amendments to and renewals of the document); and

''(B) in the case of a tribal energy resource agreement or a lease, business agreement, or right-of-way that permits payment to be made directly to the Indian tribe, documentation of those payments sufficient to enable the Secretary to discharge the trust responsibility of the United States as appropriate under applicable law.

''(6)(A) Nothing in this section shall absolve the United States from any responsibility to Indians or Indian tribes, including those which derive from the trust relationship as set forth in treaties, statutes, regulations, Executive Orders, court decisions, and agreements between the United States and any Indian tribe; provided further that the Secretary shall carry out the actions required in this section in a manner consistent with the trust responsibility to protect and conserve the trust resources of Indian tribes and individual Indians, and shall act in good faith in upholding such trust responsibility.

''(B) The Secretary shall continue to have a trust obligation to ensure that the rights of an Indian tribe are protected in the event of a violation of federal law or the terms of any lease, business agreement or right-of-way under this section by any other party to any such lease, business agreement or right-of-way.

''(7)(A) In this paragraph, the term 'interested party' means any person or entity the interests of which have sustained or will sustain an adverse environmental impact as a result of the failure of an Indian tribe to comply with a tribal energy resource agreement of the Indian tribe approved by the Secretary under paragraph (2).

''(B) After exhaustion of tribal remedies, and in accordance with the process and requirements set forth in regulations adopted by the Secretary pursuant to subsection (e)(8), an interested party may submit to the Secretary a petition to review compliance of an Indian tribe with a tribal energy resource agreement of the Indian tribe approved under this subsection.

''(C) If the Secretary determines that an Indian tribe is not in compliance with a tribal energy resource agreement approved under this subsection, the Secretary shall take such action as is necessary to compel compliance, including—

''(i) suspending a lease, business agreement, or right-of-way under this section until an Indian tribe is in compliance with the approved tribal energy resource agreement; and

''(ii) rescinding approval of the tribal energy resource agreement and reassuming the responsibility for approval of any future leases, business agreements, or rights-of-way described in subsections (a) and (b).

''(D) If the Secretary seeks to compel compliance of an Indian tribe with an approved tribal energy resource agreement under subparagraph (C)(ii), the Secretary shall—

''(i) make a written determination that describes the manner in which the tribal energy resource agreement has been violated;

''(ii) provide the Indian tribe with a written notice of the violation together with the written determination; and

''(iii) before taking any action described in subparagraph (C)(ii) or seeking any other remedy, provide the Indian tribe with a hearing and a reasonable opportunity to attain compliance with the tribal energy resource agreement.

''(E) An Indian tribe described in subparagraph (D) shall retain all rights to appeal as provided in regulations promulgated by the Secretary.

''(F) Any decision of the Secretary with respect to a review or appeal described in this paragraph (7) shall constitute a final agency action.

''(8) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of the Indian Tribal Energy Development and Self-Determination Act of 2003, the Secretary shall promulgate regulations that implement the provisions of this subsection, including—

''(A) criteria to be used in determining the capacity of an Indian tribe described in paragraph (2)(B)(i), including the experience of the Indian tribe in managing natural resources and financial and administrative resources available for use by the Indian tribe in implementing the approved tribal energy resource agreement of the Indian tribe; and

''(B) a process and requirements in accordance with which an Indian tribe may—

''(i) voluntarily rescind an approved tribal energy resource agreement approved by the Secretary under this subsection; and

''(ii) return to the Secretary the responsibility to approve any future leases, business agreements, and rights-of-way described in this subsection.

''(f) NO EFFECT ON OTHER LAW.—Nothing in this section affects the application of—

''(1) any Federal environmental law;

''(2) the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (30 U.S.C. 1201 et seq.); or

''(3) except as otherwise provided in this title, the Indian Mineral Development Act of 1982 (25 U.S.C. 2101 et seq.).

''(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary of the Interior $2,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2010 to make grants or provide other appropriate assistance to Indian tribes to assist them in the implementation of any tribal energy resource agreements entered into pursuant to this section.

''(h) EXPIRATION OF AUTHORITY.—The authority of an Indian tribe to enter into, or issue, leases, business agreements or rights-of-way pursuant to this section, and the Secretary's authority to approve tribal energy resource agreements pursuant to this section, shall expire seven years after the date of enactment of the Indian Energy Development and Self-Determination Act of 2003, unless reauthorized by a subsequent Act of Congress.

''SEC. 2605. FEDERAL POWER MARKETING ADMINISTRATIONS.

''(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

''(1) The term 'Administrator' means the Administrator of the Bonneville Power Administration and the Administrator of the Western Area Power Administration.

''(2) The term 'power marketing administration' means—

''(A) the Bonneville Power Administration;

''(B) the Western Area Power Administration; and

''(C) any other power administration the power allocation of which is used by or for the benefit of an Indian tribe located in the service area of the administration.

''(b) ENCOURAGEMENT OF INDIAN TRIBAL ENERGY DEVELOPMENT.—Each Administrator shall encourage Indian tribal energy development by taking such actions as are appropriate, including administration of programs of the Bonneville Power Administration and the Western Area Power Administration, in accordance with this section.

''(c) ACTION BY THE ADMINISTRATOR.—In carrying out this section, and in accordance with existing law—

''(1) each Administrator shall consider the unique relationship that exists between the United States and Indian tribes.

''(2) power allocations from the Western Area Power Administration to Indian tribes may be used to meet firming, supplemental, and reserve needs of Indian-owned energy projects on Indian land;

''(3) the Administrator of the Western Area Power Administration may purchase power from Indian tribes to meet the firming, supplemental, and reserve requirements of the Western Area Power Administration; and

''(4) each Administrator shall not pay more than the prevailing market price for an energy product nor obtain less than prevailing market terms and conditions.

''(d) ASSISTANCE FOR TRANSMISSION SYSTEM USE.—

''(1) An Administrator may provide technical assistance to Indian tribes seeking to use the high-voltage transmission system for delivery of electric power.

''(2) The costs of technical assistance provided under paragraph (1) shall be funded by the Secretary of Energy using nonreimbursable funds appropriated for that purpose, or by the applicable Indian tribes.

''(e) POWER ALLOCATION STUDY.—Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Indian Tribal Energy Development and Self-Determination Act of 2003, the Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Congress a report that—

''(1) describes the use by Indian tribes of Federal power allocations of the Western Area Power Administration (or power sold by the Southwestern Power Administration) and the Bonneville Power Administration to or for the benefit of Indian tribes in service areas of those administrations; and

''(2) identifies—

''(A) the quantity of power allocated to Indian tribes by the Western Area Power Administration;

''(B) the quantity of power sold to Indian tribes by other power marketing administrations; and

''(C) barriers that impede tribal access to and use of Federal power, including an assessment of opportunities to remove those barriers and improve the ability of power marketing administrations to facilitate the use of Federal power by Indian tribes.

''(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $750,000, which shall remain available until expended and shall not be reimbursable.

''SEC. 2606. INDIAN MINERAL DEVELOPMENT REVIEW.

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a review of all activities being conducted under the Indian Mineral Development Act of 1982 (25 U.S.C. 2101 et seq.) as of that date.

''(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of the Indian Tribal Energy Development and Self-Determination Act of 2003, the Secretary shall submit to the Congress a report that includes—

''(1) the results of the review;

''(2) recommendations to ensure that Indian tribes have the opportunity to develop Indian energy resources; and

''(3) an analysis of the barriers to the development of energy resources on Indian land (including legal, fiscal, market, and other barriers), along with recommendations for the removal of those barriers.

''SEC. 2607. WIND AND HYDROPOWER FEASIBILITY STUDY.

''(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Energy, in coordination with the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary, shall conduct a study of the cost and feasibility of developing a demonstration project that would use wind energy generated by Indian tribes and hydropower generated by the Army Corps of Engineers on the Missouri River to supply firming and supplemental power to the Western Area Power Administration.

''(b) SCOPE OF STUDY.—The study shall—

''(1) determine the feasibility of the blending of wind energy and hydropower generated from the Missouri River dams operated by the Army Corps of Engineers;

''(2) review historical purchase requirements and projected purchase requirements for firming and the patterns of availability and use of firming energy;

''(3) assess the wind energy resource potential on tribal land and projected cost savings through a blend of wind and hydropower over a 30-year period;

''(4) determine seasonal capacity needs and associated transmission upgrades for integration of tribal wind generation; and

''(5) include an independent tribal engineer as a study team member.

''(c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary and Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report that describes the results of the study, including—

''(1) an analysis of the potential energy cost or benefits to the customers of the Western Area Power Administration through the blend of wind and hydropower;

''(2) an evaluation of whether a combined wind and hydropower system can reduce reservoir fluctuation, enhance efficient and reliable energy production, and provide Missouri River management flexibility;

''(3) recommendations for a demonstration project that could be carried out by the Western Area Power Administration in partnership with an Indian tribal government or tribal energy resource development organization to demonstrate the feasibility and potential of using wind energy produced on Indian land to supply firming energy to the Western Area Power Administration or any other Federal power marketing agency; and

''(4) an identification of—

''(A) the economic and environmental costs or benefits to be realized through such a Federal-tribal partnership; and

''(B) the manner in which such a partnership could contribute to the energy security of the United States.

''(d) FUNDING.—

''(1) There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $500,000, to remain available until expended.

''(2) Costs incurred by the Secretary in carrying out this section shall be nonreimbursable.''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The table of contents for the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (25 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.) is amended by striking items relating to Title XXVI, and inserting:

''Sec. 2601. Definitions.
''Sec. 2602. Indian tribal energy resource development.

''Sec. 2606. Indian mineral development review.
''Sec. 2607. Wind and hydropower feasibility study.

SA 882. Mr. MCCONNELL (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. ALLARD, Mr. ALLEN, Mr. BENNETT, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BUNNING, Mr. CHAMBLISS, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. COLEMAN, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. CORZINE, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. DAYTON, Mrs. DOLE, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. FRIST, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. BURNS, Mr. KOHL, Mr. HARKIN, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KYL, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. LUGAR, Ms. MIKULSKI, Ms. MURKOWSKI, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. NELSON of Nebraska, Mr. REID, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SANTORUM, Mr. SARBANES, MR. SCHUMER, Mr. SMITH, Mr. SPECTER, Ms. STABENOW, Mr. VOINOVICH, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. GRAHAM of Florida, Mr. BAUCUS, and Mr. CAMPBELL,) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1215, to sanction the ruling Burmese military junta, to strengthen Burma's democratic foreces and support and recognize the National League of Democracy as the legitimate representative of the Burmese people, and for other purposes; as follows:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the ''Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003''.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The State Peace and Development Council (SPDC) has failed to transfer power to the National League for Democracy (NLD) whose parliamentarians won an overwhelming victory in the 1990 elections in Burma.

(2) The SPDC has failed to enter into meaningful, political dialogue with the NLD and ethnic minorities and has dismissed the efforts of United Nations Special Envoy Razali bin Ismail to further such dialogue.

(3) According to the State Department's ''Report to the Congress Regarding Conditions in Burma and U.S. Policy Toward Burma'' dated March 28, 2003, the SPDC has become ''more confrontational'' in its exchanges with the NLD.

(4) On May 30, 2003, the SPDC, threatened by continued support for the NLD throughout Burma, brutally attacked NLD supporters, killed and injured scores of civilians, and arrested democracy advocate Aung San Suu Kyi and other activists.

(5) The SPDC continues egregious human rights violations against Burmese citizens, uses rape as a weapon of intimidation and torture against women, and forcibly conscripts child-soldiers for the use in fighting indigenous ethnic groups.

(6) The SPDC has demonstrably failed to cooperate with the United States in stopping the flood of heroin and methamphetamines being grown, refined, manufactured, and transported in areas under the control of the SPDC serving to flood the region and much of the world with these illicit drugs.

(7) The SPDC provides safety, security, and engages in business dealings with narcotics traffickers under indictment by United States authorities, and other producers and traffickers of narcotics.

(8) The International Labor Organization (ILO), for the first time in its 82-year history, adopted in 2000, a resolution recommending that governments, employers, and workers organizations take appropriate measures to ensure that their relations with the SPDC do not abet the government-sponsored system of forced, compulsory, or slave labor in Burma, and that other international bodies reconsider any cooperation they may be engaged in with Burma and, if appropriate, cease as soon as possible any activity that could abet the practice of forced, compulsory, or slave labor.

(9) The SPDC has integrated the Burmese military and its surrogates into all facets of the economy effectively destroying any free enterprise system.

(10) Investment in Burmese companies and purchases from them serve to provide the SPDC with currency that is used to finance its instruments of terror and repression against the Burmese people.

(11) On April 15, 2003, the American Apparel and Footwear Association expressed its ''strong support for a full and immediate ban on U.S. textiles, apparel and footwear imports from Burma'' and called upon the United States Government to ''impose an outright ban on U.S. imports'' of these items until Burma demonstrates respect for basic human and labor rights of its citizens.

(12) The policy of the United States, as articulated by the President on April 24, 2003, is to officially recognize the NLD as the legitimate representative of the Burmese people as determined by the 1990 election.

SEC. 3. BAN AGAINST TRADE THAT SUPPORTS THE MILITARY REGIME OF BURMA.

(a) GENERAL BAN.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, until such time as the President determines and certifies to Congress that Burma has met the conditions described in paragraph (3), no article may be imported into the United States that is produced, mined, manufactured, grown, or assembled in Burma.

(2) BAN ON IMPORTS FROM CERTAIN COMPANIES.—The import restrictions contained in paragraph (1) shall apply to, among other entities—

(A) the SPDC, any ministry of the SPDC, a member of the SPDC or an immediate family member of such member;

(B) known narcotics traffickers from Burma or an immediate family member of such narcotics trafficker;

(C) the Union of Myanmar Economics Holdings Incorporated (UMEHI) or any company in which the UMEHI has a fiduciary interest;

(D) the Myanmar Economic Corporation (MEC) or any company in which the MEC has a fiduciary interest;

(E) the Union Solidarity and Development Association (USDA); and

(F) any successor entity for the SPDC, UMEHI, MEC, or USDA.

(3) CONDITIONS DESCRIBED.—The conditions described in this paragraph are the following:

(A) The SPDC has made substantial and measurable progress to end violations of internationally recognized human rights including rape, and the Secretary of State, after consultation with the ILO Secretary General and relevant nongovernmental organizations, reports to the appropriate congressional committees that the SPDC no longer systematically violates workers rights, including the use of forced and child labor, and conscription of child-soldiers.

(B) The SPDC has made measurable and substantial progress toward implementing a democratic government including—

(i) releasing all political prisoners;

(ii) allowing freedom of speech and the press;

(iii) allowing freedom of association;

(iv) permitting the peaceful exercise of religion; and

(v) bringing to a conclusion an agreement between the SPDC and the democratic forces led by the NLD and Burma's ethnic nationalities on the transfer of power to a civilian government accountable to the Burmese people through democratic elections under the rule of law.

(C) Pursuant to the terms of section 706 of the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Year 2003 (Public Law 107–228), Burma has not failed demonstrably to make substantial efforts to adhere to its obligations under international counternarcotics agreements and to take other effective counternarcotics measures, including the arrest and extradition of all individuals under indictment in the United States for narcotics trafficking, and concrete and measurable actions to stem the flow of illicit drug money into Burma's banking system and economic enterprises and to stop the manufacture and export of methamphetamines.

(4) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—In this subsection, the term ''appropriate congressional committees'' means the Committees on Foreign Relations and Appropriations of the Senate and the Committees on International Relations and Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

(b) WAIVER AUTHORITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President may waive the prohibitions described in this section for any or all products imported from Burma to the United States if the President determines and notifies the Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committees on Appropriations and International Relations of the House of Representatives that to do so is in the national security interest of the United States.

(2) INTERNATIONAL OBLIGATIONS.—The President may waive any provision of this Act found to be in violation of any international obligations of the United States pursuant to any final ruling relating to Burma under the dispute settlement procedures of the World Trade Organization.

SEC. 4. FREEZING ASSETS OF THE BURMESE REGIME IN THE UNITED STATES.

Not later than 60 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall direct, and promulgate regulations to the same, that any United States financial institution holding funds belonging to the SPDC or the assets of those individuals who hold senior positions in the SPDC or its political arm, the Union Solidarity Development Association, shall promptly report those assets to the Office of Foreign Assets Control. The Secretary of the Treasury may take such action as may be necessary to secure such assets or funds.

SEC. 5. LOANS AT INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall instruct the United States executive director to each appropriate international financial institution in which the United States participates, to oppose, and vote against the extension by such institution of any loan or financial or technical assistance to Burma until such time as the conditions described in section 3(a)(3) are met.

SEC. 6. EXPANSION OF VISA BAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) VISA BAN.—The President is authorized to deny visas and entry to the former and present leadership of the SPDC or the Union Solidarity Development Association.

(2) UPDATES.—The Secretary of State shall coordinate on a biannual basis with representatives of the European Union to ensure that an individual who is banned from obtaining a visa by the European Union for the reasons described in paragraph (1) is also banned from receiving a visa from the United States.

(b) PUBLICATION.—The Secretary of State shall post on the Department of State's website the names of individuals whose entry into the United States is banned under subsection (a).

SEC. 7. CONDEMNATION OF THE REGIME AND DISSEMINATION OF INFORMATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Congress encourages the Secretary of State to highlight the abysmal record of the SPDC to the international community and use all appropriate fora, including the Association of Southeast Asian Nations Regional Forum and Asian Nations Regional Forum, to encourage other states to restrict financial resources to the SPDC and Burmese companies while offering political recognition and support to Burma's democratic movement including the National League for Democracy and Burma's ethnic groups.

(b) UNITED STATES EMBASSY.—The United States embassy in Rangoon shall take all steps necessary to provide access of information and United States policy decisions to media organs not under the control of the ruling military regime.

SEC. 8. SUPPORT DEMOCRACY ACTIVISTS IN BURMA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President is authorized to use all available resources to assist Burmese democracy activists dedicated to nonviolent opposition to the regime in their efforts to promote freedom, democracy, and human rights in Burma, including a listing of constraints on such programming.

(b) REPORTS.—

(1) FIRST REPORT.—Not later than 3 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall provide the Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committees on Appropriations and International Relations of the House of Representatives a comprehensive report on its short- and long-term programs and activities to support democracy activists in Burma, including a list of constraints on such programming.

(2) REPORT ON RESOURCES.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of State shall provide the Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committees on Appropriations and International Relations of the House of Representatives a report identifying resources that will be necessary for the reconstruction of Burma, after the SPDC is removed from power, including—

(A) the formation of democratic institutions;

(B) establishing the rule of law;

(C) establishing freedom of the press;

(D) providing for the successful reintegration of military officers and personnel into Burmese society; and

(E) providing health, educational, and economic development.

SA 883. On page 5, line 5, insert ''and except as provided in section 9'' after ''law''.

Beginning on page 7, line 23, strike all through page 8, line 3, and insert the following:

(4) APPROPRIATE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—In this Act, the term ''appropriate congressional committees'' means the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Committee on Finance, and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate and the Committee on International Relations, the Committee on Ways and Means, and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

On page 8, beginning on line 5, strike all through line 13, and insert the following:

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President may waive the prohibitions described in this section for any or all products imported from Burma to the United States if the President determines and notifies the appropriate congressional committees that to do so is in the vital national security interest of the United States.

On page 11, beginning on line 16, strike ''Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate'' and all that follows through ''House of Representatives'' on line 19, and insert ''appropriate congressional committees''.

On page 12, beginning on line 1, strike ''Committees on Appropriations and Foreign Relations of the Senate'' and all that follows through ''House of Representatives'' on line 4, and insert ''appropriate congressional committees''.

On page 12, after line 16, insert the following:

(3) REPORT ON TRADE SANCTIONS.—Not later than 90 days before the date that the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) are to expire, the Secretary of State, in consultation with the United States Trade Representative and other appropriate agencies, shall submit to the appropriate congressional committees, a report on—

(A) conditions in Burma, including human rights violations, arrest and detention of democracy activists, forced and child labor, and the status of dialogue between the SPDC and the NLD and ethnic minorities;

(B) bilateral and multilateral measures undertaken by the United States Government and other governments to promote human rights and democracy in Burma; and

(C) the impact and effectiveness of the provisions of this Act in furthering the policy objectives of the United States toward Burma.

SEC. 9. DURATION OF SANCTIONS.

(a) TERMINATION BY REQUEST FROM DEMOCRATIC BURMA.—The President may terminate any provision in this Act upon the request of a democratically elected government in Burma, provided that all the conditions in section 3(a)(3) have been met.

(b) CONTINUATION OF IMPORT SANCTIONS.—

(1) EXPIRATION.—The import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) shall expire 1 year from the date of enactment of this Act unless renewed under paragraph (2) of this section.

(2) RESOLUTION BY CONGRESS.—The import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) may be renewed annually for a 1-year period if, prior to the anniversary of the date of enactment of this Act, and each year thereafter, a renewal resolution is enacted into law in accordance with subsection (c).

(c) RENEWAL RESOLUTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, the term ''renewal resolution'' means a joint resolution of the 2 Houses of Congress, the sole matter after the resolving clause of which is as follows: ''That Congress approves the renewal of the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1) of the Burmese Freedom and Democracy Act of 2003.''

(2) PROCEDURES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A renewal resolution—

(i) may be introduced in either House of Congress by any member of such House at any time within the 90-day period before the expiration of the import restrictions contained in section 3(a)(1); and

(ii) the provisions of subparagraph (B) shall apply.

(B) EXPEDITED CONSIDERATION.—The provisions of section 152 (b), (c), (d), (e), and (f) of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2192 (b), (c), (d), (e), and (f)) apply to a renewal resolution under this Act as if such resolution were a resolution described in section 152(a) of the Trade Act of 1974.

SA 884. Mr. GRAHAM of Florida (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. KERRY, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. LEAHY, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. DODD, Mr. CHAFEE, Mrs. DOLE, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. CORZINE, and Ms. COLLINS) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 14, to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes; as follows:

Beginning on page 23, strike line 20 and all that follows through page 25, line 8.

SA 885. Ms. MURKOWSKI submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by her to the bill S. 14, to enhance the energy security of the United States, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of title XI, add the following:

Subtitle I—Miscellaneous

SEC. 1195. ENERGY SECURITY OF ISRAEL.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION DISCHARGED AND EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate immediately proceed to executive session and that the nomination of Clay Johnson, to be Deputy Director for Management, OMB, be discharged from the Governmental Affairs Committee; I further ask consent that the Senate proceed to its consideration and the consideration of Executive Calendar No. 224 en bloc; further, that the nominations be confirmed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action, and the Senate then resume legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations considered and confirmed en bloc are as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

Clay Johnson III, of Texas, to be Deputy Director of Management, Office for Management and Budget.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Harlon Eugene Costner, of North Carolina, to be United States Marshal for the Middle

District of North Carolina for the term of four years.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now return to legislative session.

COMMENDING MEDGAR WILEY EVERS AND HIS WIDOW, MYRLIE EVERS-WILLIAMS

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of S. Con. Res. 54, which was submitted earlier today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the concurrent resolution by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 54) commending Medgar Wiley Evers and his widow, Myrlie Evers-Williams, for their lives and accomplishments, designating a Medgar Evers National Week of Remembrance, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the concurrent resolution.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to this matter be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 54) was agreed to.

The preamble was agreed to.

The concurrent resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. CON. RES. 54

Whereas a pioneer in the fight for racial justice, Medgar Wiley Evers, was born July 2, 1925, in Decatur, Mississippi, to James and Jessie Evers;

Whereas, to faithfully serve his country, Medgar Evers left high school to join the Army when World War II began and, after coming home to Mississippi, he completed high school, enrolled in Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, presently known as Alcorn State University, and majored in business administration;

Whereas, as a student at Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, Evers was a member of the debate team, the college choir, and the football and track teams, was the editor of the campus newspaper and the yearbook, and held several student offices, which gained him recognition in Who's Who in American Colleges;

Whereas, while a junior at Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, Evers met a freshman named Myrlie Beasley, whom he married on December 24, 1951, and with whom he spent the remainder of his life;

Whereas, after Medgar Evers received a bachelor of arts degree, he moved to historic Mound Bayou, Mississippi, became employed by Magnolia Mutual Life Insurance Company, and soon began establishing local chapters of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (referred to in this resolution as the ''NAACP'') throughout the Delta region;

Whereas, moved by the plight of African-Americans in Mississippi and a desire to change the conditions facing them, in 1954, after the United States Supreme Court ruled school segregation unconstitutional, Medgar Evers became the first known African-American person to apply for admission to the University of Mississippi Law School, but was denied that admission;

Whereas, as a result of that denial, Medgar Evers contacted the NAACP to take legal action;

Whereas in 1954, Medgar Evers was offered a position as the Mississippi Field Secretary for the NAACP, and he accepted the position, making Myrlie Evers his secretary;

Whereas, with his wife by his side, Medgar Evers began a movement to register people to vote in Mississippi and, as a result of his activities, Medgar Evers received numerous threats;

Whereas, in spite of the threats, Medgar Evers persisted, with dedication and courage, to organize rallies, build the NAACP's membership, and travel around the country with Myrlie Evers to educate the public;

Whereas Medgar Evers' passion for quality education for all children led him to file suit against the Jackson, Mississippi public schools, which gained him national media coverage;

Whereas Medgar Evers organized students from Tougaloo and Campbell Colleges, coordinated and led protest marches, organized boycotts of Jackson businesses and sit-ins, and challenged segregated bus seating, and for these heroic efforts, he was arrested, beaten, and jailed;

Whereas the violence against Medgar Evers came to a climax on June 12, 1963, when he was shot and killed in front of his home;

Whereas, after the fingerprints of an outspoken segregationist were recovered from the scene of the shooting, and 2 juries deadlocked without a conviction in the shooting case, Myrlie Evers and her 3 children moved to Claremont, California, where she enrolled in Pomona College and earned her bachelor's degree in sociology in 1968;

Whereas, after Medgar Evers' death, Myrlie Evers began to create her own legacy and emerged as a national catalyst for justice and equality by becoming active in politics, becoming a founder of the National Women's Political Caucus, running for Congress in California's 24th congressional district, serving as Commissioner of Public Works for Los Angeles, using her writing skills to serve as a correspondent for Ladies Home Journal and to cover the Paris Peace Talks, and rising to prominence as Director of Consumer Affairs for the Atlantic Richfield Company;

Whereas Myrlie Evers became Myrlie Evers-Williams when she married Walter Williams in 1976;

Whereas, in the 1990's, Evers-Williams convinced Mississippi prosecutors to reopen Medgar Evers' murder case, and the reopening of the case led to the conviction and life imprisonment of Medgar Evers' killer;

Whereas Evers-Williams became the first female to chair the 64-member Board of Directors of the NAACP, to provide guidance to an organization that was dear to Medgar Evers' heart;

Whereas Evers-Williams has published her memoirs, entitled ''Watch Me Fly: What I Learned on the Way to Becoming the Woman I Was Meant to Be'', to enlighten the world about the struggles that plagued her life as the wife of an activist and empowered her to become a community leader;

Whereas Evers-Williams is widely known as a motivational lecturer and continues to speak out against discrimination and injustice;

Whereas her latest endeavor has brought her home to Mississippi to make two remarkable contributions, through the establishment of the Evers Collection and the Medgar Evers Institute, which advance the knowledge and cause of social injustice and which encompass the many lessons in the life's work of Medgar Evers and Myrlie Evers-Williams;

Whereas Evers-Williams has presented the extraordinary papers in that Collection and Institute to the Mississippi Department of Archives and History, where the papers are being preserved and catalogued; and

Whereas it is the policy of Congress to recognize and pay tribute to the lives and accomplishments of extraordinary Mississippians such as Medgar Evers and Myrlie Evers-Williams, whose life sacrifices have contributed to the betterment of the lives of the citizens of Mississippi as well as the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

(1) Congress commends Medgar Wiley Evers and his widow, Myrlie Evers-Williams, and expresses the greatest respect and gratitude of Congress, for their lives and accomplishments;

(2) the Senate—

(A) designates the period beginning on June 9, 2003, and ending on June 16, 2003, as the ''Medgar Evers National Week of Remembrance''; and

(B) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe the week with appropriate ceremonies and activities; and

(3) copies of this resolution shall be furnished to the family of Medgar Wiley Evers and Myrlie Evers-Williams.

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 2003

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it stand in adjournment until 9:30 a.m., Thursday, June 12. I further ask consent that following the prayer and pledge, the morning hour be deemed expired, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate then resume consideration of S. 14, the Energy bill, as provided under the previous order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. FITZGERALD. For the information of all Senators, tomorrow morning the Senate will resume consideration of S. 14, the Energy bill. The Graham amendment relating to the Outer Continental Shelf is currently pending to the energy bill. Under a previous agreement, when the Senate resumes consideration of the bill tomorrow morning, there will be up to 90 minutes of debate prior to a vote on or in relation to the amendment. Therefore, the first vote of tomorrow's session will occur at approximately 11 a.m. In addition to the Graham amendment, the Senate will consider other amendments to the Energy bill, and Members should expect rollcall votes throughout the day.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:57 p.m., adjourned until Thursday, June 12, 2003, at 9:30 a.m.

CONFIRMATIONS

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

IN RECOGNITION OF MORNINGSIDE-WESTSIDE COMMUNITY ACTION CORPORATION

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the Morningside-Westside Community Action Corporation, MWCAC. For nearly a decade, MWCAC has worked tirelessly in order to serve the mental health community of New York City.

Founded in 1994, the Morningside Westside Community Action Corporation has been instrumental in advocating positive changes in governmental health programs, distributing information about issues facing the mental health community and promoting awareness and understanding towards those who suffer from mental illness. MWCAC strives to assist the mentally ill on their road to recovery and to help them achieve their goals and live productive lives.

Realizing that society has a place for all, the MWCAC has long been a proponent of helping the mentally disabled live normally within the mainstream. Morningside-Westside Community Action Corporation actively promotes reintegration, mainstream living, steady employment and recovery for all those who suffer from mental illness.

Over the last eight and a half years, under the leadership of Nancy Walder, their President, dedicated staff members have worked on mental health advocacy projects, and opened lines of communication between those who administer mental health services and those who require them.

In order to spread their message throughout the city and beyond, mental health service workers, members of the mentally disabled community and their friends and family members publish The Morningside-Westside Bulletin, an award-winning monthly mental health journal. Journal articles detail issues facing the mental health community and provide advice and avenues for help for those who are in need of assistance.

Under MWCAC's auspices, members of the mentally disabled community produce an annual Outsider Art Show, a forum that encourages members to contribute their own original pieces. The Morningside-Westside Community Action Corporation has also sponsored educational and informational events such as ''Harlem Mental Health Day'' and ''Healthy Mind, Healthy Body.'' Future events include ''Back to Work, Back to Life Day,'' an all day event to be held in Bryant Park, and a conference to be held in connection with the New York City Department of Health Federation.

A mental illness can be a paralyzing and debilitating condition. For years, many individuals have been forced to wander in the darkness of this disease without a helping hand. Thanks to MWCAC, those who need assistance in the New York area have a place to go for help.

In recognition of their outstanding contributions to the community and their commitment to the quality of life of the mentally disabled, I ask that my colleagues join me in saluting Nancy Walder and her dedicated staff at MWCAC.

IN HONOR OF CAROL BARTZ

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Carol Bartz, special guest and honoree at the June 18, 2003 Forum for Women Entrepreneurs Silent Auction and Awards Dinner.

Carol Bartz is the Board Chair, President and CEO of Autodesk, Inc., and she has earned an honors degree in computer science from the University of Wisconsin, and been granted honorary degrees from the New Jersey Institute of Technology, Worcester Polytechnic Institute and William Wood University. During her tenure at Autodesk the company has diversified and revenues have grown to more than $947 million in 2002.

Carol Bartz gives generously of her leadership skills, both in Silicon Valley and elsewhere through her service on the boards of organizations such as TEA Systems, Cisco Systems, Network Appliance, Technet, and the Foundation for the National Medals of Science and Technology. She serves on the Board of Directors of the New York Stock Exchange and is one of its 12 members who represent public companies. She was recently appointed to the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology where she will play a key role in setting our nation's high-tech agenda.

Carol Bartz has earned many well-deserved honors, including the Ernst and Young Northern California Master Entrepreneur of the Year Award, the Horatio Alger Award and the Donald C. Burnham Manufacturing Management Award and she's been named a member of the Women in Technology International Hall of Fame.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Carol Bartz for her extraordinary accomplishments and for the leadership she is known for in everything she does. It is a special privilege to represent her and to honor her for all she has done to make our country stronger and better.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE MANY CONTRIBUTIONS OF ATHANASIOS (TOM) ALAFOGIANNIS, A LEADER IN QUEENS AND THE GREEK AMERICAN COMMUNITY

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, with great sadness I rise to pay tribute to Athanasios (Tom) Alafogiannis, a much admired and beloved leader of the Greek-American community in Queens. Unfortunately, Tom Alafogiannis passed away last week, leaving much of the community in mourning.

Tom was born in Dafno, Greece on February 28th, 1933. Talented with his hands, Tom completed the technical school of engineering. Although he was a hard worker who loved his family, he decided to leave Greece to seek a better life in America.

At the age of 36 he came to the United States, working his way over as a ship's engineer. In America, he attended school and became a licenced master plumber. His talents were quickly recognized and he built a successful business. In 1969 he married the love of his life, Rose Anne Benevento. They have four children: Apostolos (Paul), Jennifer, Joseph and Vasilios (Billy).

Understanding the responsibilities that come with prosperity, Tom devoted a great deal of time and attention to giving back to the community. His unwavering dedication and boundless energy made him a popular leader. He served as President of the Hermes Chapter of AHEPA, three time President of the Greek American Homeowners and President of Sterea Hellas. Concerned with the quality of life in Astoria, he became a member of Queens Community Board 1. As a successful business leader, he became a member of the Board of Directors of the Kiwanis Club.

Tom never became involved in anything halfway. In every organization in which he participated, he left his mark. Tom was, quite simply, a charming man of great energy and deep concern for others. He will be sorely missed.

I ask my colleagues to join me in celebrating the life and accomplishments of Tom Alafogiannis, a truly remarkable man.

IN HONOR OF JAMES C. MORGAN

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor James C. Morgan who recently retired as Chief Executive Officer of Applied Materials, Inc., of Santa Clara, California.

Mr. Morgan was named Chairman of Applied Materials' Board of Directors in 1987 and continues to serve in that position today. He joined Applied Materials as President in 1976, after serving as senior partner at WestVen Management.

Mr. Morgan received his B.S.M.E. and MBA degrees from Cornell University and has earned countless honors and awards. He received the National Medal of Technology in 1996 and is Vice-Chair of the President's Export Council. He was appointed to the 2002 U.S.-Japan Private Sector Government Commission and served on the Commission on U.S.-Pacific Trade and Investment Policy from 1996 to 1997. He serves on the boards of Cisco Systems, the National Center for Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation, the California Nature Conservancy, and as a member of the Advisory Board of the Center for Science, Technology and Society at Santa Clara University.

Under Mr. Morgan's leadership Applied Materials has been recognized as one of our nation's leading corporations. Fortune Magazine named Applied Materials one of America's Most Admired Companies, one of the Top Ten in Total Return to Shareholders, one of the 100 Best Companies to Work For and one of the Best Companies for Asians, Blacks and Hispanics.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring James C. Morgan for his extraordinary corporate leadership and corporate citizenship. Our community and our country have been strengthened by his countless contributions and his lifetime of service. How proud I am to know and represent Jim and his distinguished wife Becky, and wish them great health and every blessing.

IN RECOGNITION OF BOB WILSON

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Bob Wilson, whose commitment to various organizations has helped make the local community a better place to live. In honor of his contributions, Mr. Wilson will be honored by the Dutch Kills Civic Association on June 12th, 2003.

A lifetime New Yorker, Mr. Wilson was born and raised in the Bronx. As a young man, Mr. Wilson joined the United States Navy during the Korean Conflict. After leaving the United States Navy, Mr. Wilson returned home and began a long and successful career of 38 years with Local 731 as a General Foreman, building and rebuilding many of New York City's highways and bridges.

An enthusiastic and dedicated community advocate, Mr. Wilson joined the Dutch Kills Civic Association upon his retirement, eventually becoming President of the organization.

As President of the Dutch Kills Civic Association for ten years, Mr. Wilson was dedicated to improving quality of life in the neighborhood. Through his efforts with Walter McCaffrey, a much-needed hockey rink was built in Dutch Kills Park. He worked with Tony Maloni in his fight to remove graffiti in the area. In addition, Mr. Wilson was a steady leader in calling the 114th Precinct to help rid the neighborhood of constant prostitution.

In typical fashion, Mr. Wilson was the 'go-to' guy for many of the concerns raised by the organization, including such problems as catch basins not being cleaned in the area. Recognizing that the organization would benefit from a strong revenue stream, he envisioned holding an annual street fair. His vision is now a reality that brings revenue to the organization each year.

Mr. Wilson is described by his peers as a man of boundless energy and commitment to the community he has been a part of for so many years. In recognition of these outstanding achievements, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Bob Wilson for his spirit and dedication.

IN SPECIAL RECOGNITION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVUE'S SESQUICENTENNIAL CELEBRATION

HON. PAUL E. GILLMOR

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. GILLMOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to the City of Bellevue. This City in my congressional district was first settled in 1815. It is generally acknowledged that Mark Hopkins was its first resident, building a log cabin on East Main Street in 1816. The site is presently marked with a plaque first erected in 1915. Bellevue was known as Amsden's Corners after a prominent early settler, Thomas Amsden, who traded with the Indians and opened a general store at the site of present day City Hall.

Later in the 1830's, the City was known as York Roads and in 1839 it was named Bellevue in honor of James H. Belle, an engineer who surveyed the first railroad through the town. The first major road was constructed in 1823, which began at the town square and terminated at the Maumee River in Perrysburg. In 1839, the first railroad from Sandusky to Bellevue was completed and this began Bellevue's long history as a railroad center.

Bellevue was incorporated as a village in 1851 with a population of 300 and incorporated as a city in 1912. Early commerce and industry consisted of a sawmill, tannery, cabinet shop, cooperage, wagon shop, farm products, four mill, railroad, and Mill Pond liquor distillery.

The City's industrial base has developed steadily and is well diversified. Products range from aluminum windows and doors and heating/air conditioning equipment, to metal stamping, plastics and commercial balers.

Several subdivisions have been completed recently, and an additional allotment of apartments and single family dwellings are also in the works.

Area residents are served by an active central city business district. Recreational opportunities include numerous parks, a community center, golf course, as well as water recreation associated with Lake Erie, just 15 miles north.

Local educational facilities and programs include five elementary, one junior high, and one senior high school. This is supplemented by participation in the EHOVE vocational school district. Higher education is available at two branch universities, a technical college, three nursing schools, and two four-year colleges within 25 miles.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to the City of Bellevue on the occasion of it Sesquicentennial celebration. I am proud to offer these sentiments today properly documenting this event in the record of the 108th Congress.

TRIBUTE TO MATT JOHNSON

HON. BART STUPAK

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mr. Matt Johnson, a young man who served Michigan's First Congressional District well for nearly 9 years, and has now become Michigan Governor Jennifer Granholm's Upper Peninsula Representative.

Matt started working for me in May of 1994 as an intern while attending Northern Michigan University (NMU). Matt took on significant responsibility during his internship, working some extended hours and learning the ropes of how a congressional district office is run.

After completing his degree in Public Administration at NMU, Matt assumed a full-time position in my Marquette district office as a congressional aide. Another staff member in my Marquette office at the time, Brian Schlientz, unfortunately took ill with a brain tumor and passed away several months later. I mention this, Mr. Speaker, because Matt's new role as a congressional aide fresh out of college was no doubt a difficult enough adjustment, but when compounded with the tragedy of losing his mentor, Matt faced significant challenges.

After working as a congressional aide for nearly three years, Matt was promoted to the role of District Administrator when my District Administrator, Scott Schloegel, moved to Washington to become Chief of Staff. Matt was responsible for coordination and oversight of the staff in my six district offices. He also did outreach, grants, and special projects throughout Michigan's Upper Peninsula.

Mr. Speaker, I have had the pleasure of watching Matt Johnson grow from a fresh-faced college intern into a seasoned public servant. Along the way he has traveled tens of thousands of miles, held hundreds of meetings, assisted thousands of constituents, and learned volumes of information about federal—and now state—government. Matt has also taken time to settle down a bit with his wife, Cheri and their 1-year-old daughter, Jacey, on their horse farm in Skandia. On their farm, Matt and Cheri host various horse events, including a charity fund raiser each year. As anyone in public service knows, one's spouse often sacrifices as much as the public servant does. I would be remiss in not thanking Cheri for sharing Matt with us and being understanding on those dozens of occasions when duty called Matt to drive several hours away to attend meetings, dinners, and other functions on my behalf.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity to publicly recognize a dedicated former employee, a good friend, and a wonderful human being for his contributions to Michigan's First Congressional District.

TRIBUTE TO LIEUTENANT COLONEL MALCOM A. SHORTER, UNITED STATES ARMY UPON HIS RETIREMENT AFTER 22 YEARS OF SERVICE

HON. MARTIN T. MEEHAN

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MEEHAN. Mr. Speaker, today, I am pleased to recognize the outstanding service to our Nation by Lieutenant Colonel Malcom A. Shorter, who will be retiring from the Army on September 30, 2003 after a distinguished career that has spanned over 22 years of dedicated service. Malcom Shorter distinguished himself as a leader who epitomized the modern American professional soldier.

Malcom Shorter's illustrious career as an Infantry Officer embodied all of the Army's values of Loyalty, Duty, Respect, Selfless Service, Honor, Integrity, and Personal Courage.

Throughout his career Lieutenant Colonel Shorter demonstrated his outstanding tactical and operational expertise in numerous command and staff positions both overseas and in the continental United States. Continually serving in positions of ever-increasing responsibility, highlights of his career include serving as an Infantry Company Commander twice, and as a Brookings Congressional Fellow for the United States Army in my office during the 1st session of the 106th Congress. Malcom also served as the Chief of Plans and Operations for the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division (Mechanized) at Fort Benning, Georgia and was responsible for the development of worldwide contingencies and the training of a combined arms combat maneuver brigade focused on South West Asia.

Malcom's talent for solving complex management problems complemented his proven operational skill. While serving as my Military Legislative Assistant, he provided sound policy guidance and operational expertise on the Department of Defense Budget, Military Readiness and Veterans Affairs issues. Malcom's prudent opinions and sound judgment were invaluable in my making good decisions on issues that affect our Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines, and Veterans.

As evidence of the quality of Lieutenant Colonel Shorter's leadership, management, and interpersonal skills, he was specially selected to serve as the Deputy Chief of the Army's Congressional Liaison Office in the United States House of Representatives. He was responsible for maintaining liaison with 435 Members of Congress, their personal staffs, and twenty permanent or select legislative committees. During that period, Malcom personally escorted more than 200 Members of Congress on fact-finding missions to over 75 foreign countries. His dedication, candor and professionalism while serving in that capacity earned him the reputation as the best source on Capitol Hill to resolve issues pertaining to the Army.

Accordingly, I invite my colleagues to join in offering our heartfelt congratulations to Lieutenant Colonel Malcom A. Shorter on a career of selfless service marked by his resolute dedication and unwavering integrity. He represents the very best that our great Nation has to offer. We wish Malcom, his wife Joan, and his daughters, Alex and Tori, continued success and happiness in all of their future endeavors.

A PROCLAMATION HONORING MR. AND MRS. MANIFOLD

HON. ROBERT W. NEY

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. NEY. Mr. Speaker, Whereas, Richard and Carol Manifold were united in marriage on June 13, 1953; and

Whereas, Richard and Carol Manifold are celebrating 50 years of marriage; and

Whereas, Richard and Carol Manifold have demonstrated a firm commitment to each other; and

Whereas, Richard and Carol Manifold should be commended for their loyalty and dedication to their family; and

Whereas, Richard and Carol Manifold have proven, by their example, to be a model for all married couples.

Therefore, I join with the residents of the entire 18th Congressional District of Ohio in congratulating Mr. and Mrs. Manifold as they celebrate their 50th Wedding Anniversary.

RECOGNITION OF DR. DAVID HARMON

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Dr. David Harmon of Jerseyville, Illinois for being honored as the Illinois Family Physician of the Year.

Inspired by a family doctor's kindness and compassion, Dr. Harmon went to medical school at Southern Illinois University in Springfield and Carbondale, then did a residency in Davenport, Iowa, spent some time in Roodhouse, Illinois, and moved to Jerseyville in 1987. He has treated patients there ever since.

Nominated for the award by both patients and colleagues, Dr. Harmon is now well known for his kindness and compassion, as well as his dedication to the community. Not only is Dr. Harmon a medical doctor, but he has also served as a professor at Saint Louis University and at the family practice department at Southern Illinois University School of Medicine. He is the medical director of the Jerseyville Manor Nursing Home, vice president of the Jersey County Board of Health, a volunteer with the Jerseyville Fire Department, an assistant hockey coach at Jersey High School, and a Sunday School teacher and board member at First United Methodist Church.

Dr. Michael McNair, one of his former students and now one of his partners at Illini Medical Associates praises Dr. Harmon in saying, ''He taught me that medicine is not about the technology. It's how you treat people and how much you listen to them.'' This commitment to the people is exemplary, and could be applied to almost every job in society.

While he admits that the business end of being a doctor has become more difficult in recent years, Dr. Harmon is not ready to retire anytime soon. He plans on being a doctor in Jerseyville for another 20 years, and I would like to wish him the best. The Illinois Family Physician of the Year deserves it.

CELEBRATION OF BIRTH OF ISABELLA L. MESFUN

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to celebrate the healthy birth of Isabella L. Mesfun on Sunday, May 25, 2003. I hope Isabella has a life filled with happiness and success.

HONORING GIDEON SOFER

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to draw the attention of my colleagues to a remarkable constituent from the Sixth District of New Jersey, Gideon Sofer. This young man has tremendous determination and has recently been recognized as one of America's top ten youth volunteers by the Prudential Spirit of Community Awards. This distinction carries not only national recognition, but also a $5,000 award, and $25,000 in toys, clothing and other juvenile products donated in his name to needy children in his area by Kids in Distressed Situations, Inc.

Gideon has lived most of his formative years with an incredibly painful and often debilitating sickness, Crohn's disease. He has been living with this disease since he was diagnosed when he was twelve. During the last 6 years, he has been thorough numerous surgeries, and has often faced death during the painful procedures. Most people would have just been concerned with their survival, but Gideon has turned his personal suffering into a quest: to educate the public about Crohn's disease.

In 1932, Dr. Burrill B. Crohn, Dr. Leon Ginzburg, and Dr. Gordon D. Oppenheimer published a landmark paper describing the clinical features of what is known today as Crohn's disease.

Crohn's and a related disease, ulcerative colitis, are the main divisions of the group of illnesses called inflammatory bowel disease (IBD). Because the symptoms of these two illnesses are so similar, approximately 10 percent of cases are unable to be diagnosed definitively as either ulcerative colitis or Crohn's disease. In both illnesses, there is an abnormal immune response. White blood cells infiltrate the intestinal lining, causing chronic inflammation. These cells then produce noxious products that ultimately lead to tissue injury. When this happens, the patient experiences the symptoms of IBD. The precise cause of the chronic inflammation associated with IBD is not known.

Mr. Speaker, Gideon Sofer is an example to us all. He selflessly offers his energy to the education of the public about Crohn's. Please join me in recognizing this young man and his achievements.

COMMENDING OUR MILITARY FORCES, THEIR FAMILY MEMBERS AND THEIR SUPPORTERS

HON. JOHN S. TANNER

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. TANNER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to affirm my unwavering support for H. Con. Res. 177 and H. Res. 201, which this House of Representatives passed in tribute to the men and women who serve our nation, their families, and those businesses and other community members who have supported them through this difficult time in our nation's history.

The purpose of House Concurrent Resolution 177 is ''recognizing and commending the members of the United States Armed Forces and their leaders, and the allies of the United States and their armed forces, who participated in Operation Enduring Freedom in Afghanistan and Operation Iraqi Freedom in Iraq and recognizing the continuing dedication of military families and employers and defense civilians and contractors and the countless communities and patriotic organizations that lent their support to the Armed Forces during those operations.''

This body also passed, by a unanimous vote, House Resolution 201, ''expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that our Nation's businesses and business owners should be commended for their support of our troops and their families as they serve our country in many ways, especially in these days of increased engagement of our military in strategic locations around our Nation and around the world.''

Tennessee has long been proud of its military heritage, having been nicknamed the ''Volunteer State'' when thousands of Tennesseans agreed to serve in the War of 1812. There are more than 14,000 men and women serving in the Tennessee National Guard under the leadership of Tennessee Adjutant General Gus Hargett. More than 20,000 additional troops are stationed at Fort Campbell Army Base, which straddles the border between Tennessee and Kentucky. Fort Campbell troops, including the 101st Airborne Screaming Eagles, and Guard members and reservists from our state have served proudly in Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

I am proud to represent Naval Support Activity Mid-South in Millington, Tennessee. Under the direction of Captain Helen Dunn, this unit is very important to the operations of the United States Navy. Our district in Tennessee also includes the Milan Army Arsenal, whose facilities help manufacture much of the ammunition used by the United States Army. Tennessee has many such military and military-support institutions and is home to more than 500,000 military veterans who have served our nation honorably.

Our troops and their families are to be commended and thanked for the sacrifices they have made to protect our nation. Please join with me, Mr. Speaker, in expressing gratitude for employers who have made sacrifices to allow Guard and Reserve troops to leave their permanent positions to serve our country. We are also appreciative of those civic and community leaders who have come together to support our men and women in uniform and their families at this difficult time in our nation's history. In Tennessee, our communities have come together to show their patriotism and their appreciation for those who are making sacrifices to protect us all.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you join me in praising the passage of House Concurrent Resolution 177 and House Resolution 201, saluting our troops, their families, our military-support staff, and community leaders who have shown their appreciation to the men and women who are performing their duty to protect our country.

TRIBUTE TO KRYSTAL MIZE

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise before this body of Congress to pay tribute to Krystal Mize of Pueblo, Colorado, for her incredible achievement at the University of Southern Colorado. Krystal is the deserving recipient of the Threlkeld Prize for Excellence for her success in the field of psychology and today I would like to recognize her accomplishment before this nation.

Krystal, a single mother of three boys, is not only dedicated to her education but also donates her time to work as a peer mentor, psychology lab assistant and tutor. Krystal is the true embodiment of the ''American Dream'', having overcome adversity to achieve the highest of goals. She has proven to her family, the community and most importantly, herself that she can succeed.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to recognize Krystal Mize's achievements before this body of Congress. It is the work of people like Krystal that makes the community of Pueblo strong. It is truly an honor to praise Krystal's hard work, and I wish her the best in her future endeavors.

DANIEL ESPINOZA, ''LABOR LEADER OF THE YEAR'' SAN DIEGO-IMPERIAL COUNTIES LABOR COUNCIL

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to salute Daniel Espinoza on receiving the ''Labor Leader of the Year'' Award from the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council, in recognition of his outstanding contributions to the working women and men of our community.

From the age of eighteen, Daniel has participated in and supported organized labor. He joined Theatrical Stage Employees, IATSE Local 122, in 1977 and been an active officer for the past 16 years. In 1993, Daniel became the youngest elected Business Representative in the history of Local #122 and is currently serving his fifth term. In addition, he serves on the Executive Board for the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council, and is a founding member of the United Labor Foundation.

Daniel has established a reputation of vigorously representing the members of Local 122 while still being responsive to the needs of the employer and their constant struggles with decreased funding for the arts. His commitment and dedication to the working men and women in the entertainment industry has led to successful organizational efforts at a number of San Diego area entertainment venues, including the La Jolla Playhouse, the California Center for the Arts Escondido, and the Audio Visual Technicians for the San Diego Marriott Marina and the Coronado Island Marriott Resort. Under his leadership, Theatrical Stage Employees #122 has increased its jurisdiction and stature in the San Diego entertainment community, and has more than doubled its membership.

Daniel Espinoza exemplifies the high values, standards, and principles of the hard-working men and women who are represented by the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council. I offer my congratulations to him on his receipt of the ''Labor Leader of the Year'' Award.

IN HONOR OF MONSIGNOR EDWARD J. HAJDUK

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Monsignor Edward J. Hajduk for his years of service to St. Henry's Church and the people of Bayonne, Newark, and Elizabeth. Monsignor Hajduk celebrated the 50th Anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood on Sunday, June 1 at St. Henry's Church in Bayonne, New Jersey.

Monsignor Hajduk has led a long life of commitment and service to congregations throughout Bayonne, Newark, and Elizabeth area. Ordained on May 30, 1953, Monsignor Hajduk first served at the Sacred Heart Church in Lyndhurst, New Jersey, where he was a parochial vicar for sixteen years. During his time at Sacred Heart, Monsignor Hajduk was the assistant director and moderator of the Catholic Youth Organization of Bergen County, a teacher at the Immaculate Conception High School, and a professor of Theology at Felician College.

In 1969, Monsignor Hajduk was appointed by Archbishop Boland to serve as the youth director of the Archdiocese of Newark, where he worked until 1971. The Monsignor then served as administrator of St. James Church in Newark, where he played a vital role in reorganizing the parish. In 1979, Monsignor Hajduk was named chaplain to Pope John Paul II and given the title of Reverend Monsignor. In 1984, Monsignor Hajduk became a pastor at St. Hedwig's Church in Elizabeth, where he served for twelve years. During his service at St. Hedwig's, Monsignor Hajduk undertook the task of renovating the interior of the church. The Monsignor was elected dean of the Elizabeth Deanery, and asked by Archbishop McCarrick to lead a city-wide study of the future of the church in Elizabeth.

Born and raised in Bayonne, Monsignor Hajduk returned to Bayonne in 1992 to serve as pastor of St. Henry's Church, where he is currently serving his second term. At St. Henry's, Monsignor Hajduk has helped restore and renovate the interior of the church and upgrade some if its facilities. Under his leadership, the Religious and Youth Center at the Church has grown substantially, and now serves over 500 students.

Monsignor Hajduk continues to be an active member of the Bayonne community. He is currently a member of the Bayonne Faith Based Initiative Advisory Board, serves on the board of directors of the Bayonne Mental Health Center, is active in the Bayonne Interfaith Council, and was a representative to the Bayonne Census in 2000.

Today I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Monsignor Edward J. Hajduk for his exceptional service and dedication to the people of New Jersey.

TRIBUTE TO FRED CORTESE

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Fred Cortese and thank him for his extraordinary contributions to his community and to his state. As a resident of Pueblo County, Colorado, Fred has dedicated himself to helping his community through his work as a law enforcement officer with the Pueblo County Sheriff's Office. It is with pride that I pay tribute to Fred today for the tremendous accomplishments for which he is being recognized by the Pueblo County Sheriff's Department with the Medal of Valor for saving the lives of two men, asleep as their home burned around them.

On February 22nd of this year, Fred and another officer, Jonathan Post, arrived at the scene of a house fire. Believing people to be trapped inside, they entered the burning building at great risk to their own lives. Inside, they found two men asleep, unaware of the imminent danger threatening them. Fred and Jonathan successfully persuaded the two residents to leave their burning home through a window, until one of them disregarded orders and reentered the house, necessitating another dangerous rescue. Fred then assisted Jonathan, who was suffering from smoke inhalation, out of the building.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join me in recognizing Fred Cortese upon the receipt of the Medal of Valor from the Pueblo County Sheriff's Department. Fred's courage and selflessness serve as an inspiration to the citizens of Colorado, his peers and his country. With men like Fred in the Pueblo County Sheriff's Department, the citizens of Pueblo County can rest assured that their lives are and their neighborhoods are well protected. Congratulations, Fred, and good luck.

JOHN D. HULL, ''FRIEND OF THE LABOR COUNCIL WARD'', SAN DIEGO-IMPERIAL COUNTIES LABOR COUNCIL

HON. BOB FILNER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to salute John D. Hull on receiving the ''Friend of the Labor Council Award'' from the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council, in recognition of his outstanding contributions to the working women and men of our community.

John is Vice-President of SBC Communications, Inc. in San Diego, overseeing a region that includes San Diego, Orange and Imperial Counties, and the Inland Empire region of Southern California.

Mr. Hull joined Southwestern Bell Telephone Company in 1974 following his graduation from college. He has held numerous management positions during this career, culminating in his appointment as Regional President for the San Diego in May 2001. He represents SBC on the boards of the San Diego Regional Chamber of Commerce, the San Diego Regional Economic Development Corporation, United Way of San Diego County and the American Heart Association—San Diego Chapter.

During his career, John D. Hull has been an important friend of the hardworking men and women who are represented by the San Diego-Imperial Counties Labor Council. I offer my congratulations to him on his receipt of the ''Friend of the Labor Council Award.''

IN HONOOR OF LARRY BARULLI, RECIPIENT OF THE LANCE CORPORAL STANLEY J. KOPCINSKI MEMORIAL AWARD

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Larry Barulli, recipient of the Lance Corporal Stanley J. Kopcinski Memorial Award. The Bayonne Detachment #191, Marine Corps League honored Mr. Barulli on May 26, 2003, at the VFW hall in Bayonne, New Jersey.

Mr. Barulli served with the United States Army from 1950 until 1952, and was stationed with the ''C'' Company 79th Engineers Battalion in Korea from September 1951 until September 1952. For the past seven years, Larry Barulli has been an active member of the Korean War Veterans Association of Hudson County 38th Parallel Chapter. He is currently a member of the Korean War Veterans Association of Hudson County, the Catholic War Veterans Assumption Post 1612, and the American Legion—Mackenzie Post 165.

Mr. Barulli played a critical role in establishing a monument in memory of the 126 Hudson County residents who gave their lives in the Korean War. The monument, which sits at the end of Washington Street in Jersey City, memorializes 126 men from twelve Hudson County communities who lost their lives during the Korean War. As the war often referred to as the ''Forgotten War,'' Mr. Barulli has helped ensure that the memory of these men will live on forever.

The Lance Corporal Stanley J. Kopcinski Award is given out each year by the Bayonne Detachment of the Marine Corps League in memory of Stanley J. Kopcinski, the first Marine from Bayonne killed in the Vietnam War. Lance Corporal Kopcinski was well revered by his fellow Marines and was voted ''most likely to receive the Medal of Honor.'' The award is presented to those who follow in the spirit of Lance Corporal Kopcinski's dedication and service.

A graduate of Bayonne High School, Mr. Barulli is now retired from Barulli's Deli Grocery, which he owned and ran with his father until 1980. Larry Barulli and his wife Elizabeth Ann Siwek Barulli will celebrate their 40th Wedding Anniversary in December, 2003.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Larry Barulli and congratulating him on receiving a well-deserved award. His continued service to the veterans of Bayonne and to the people of Hudson County is an inspiration for us all.

TRIBUTE TO SUE PURVIS AND TASHA THE SEARCH DOG

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute today to a woman and her dog who willingly give their time to provide assistance to others. Sue Purvis and her search dog Tasha of Crested Butte, Colorado volunteer to help locate victims of avalanches. In doing so, they help bring closure to victims' families and perform a public service to their community.

During one week in March of this year, Sue and Tasha were called to the scene of two avalanches. The first trapped a 33-year-old man who had been caught in a slide while snowmobiling. Some 30 rescuers searched unsuccessfully for several hours before calling in Sue and Tasha. Together, working with another canine search team, they found the man's body within half an hour.

A few days later, the pair received a call involving another snowmobiler. This time, the victim triggered a massive slide 10-feet deep and several hundred feet wide. The slide packed so much power that the debris field was 20 feet deep and contained chunks of snow and ice the size of a van. Despite working by themselves, Sue and Tasha found the man's body buried in six feet of snow about an hour later.

Mr. Speaker, when Sue and Tasha venture off into the Colorado backcountry to search for victims, they often enter very unstable and dangerous snow conditions. Still, they do so willingly to help bring closure to the victim's families as quickly as possible. That unselfish spirit of neighbor-helping-neighbor is what helped make this country great, and I am truly honored to have the opportunity to honor Sue and her amazing search dog Tasha here before this body of Congress today.

FY04 DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION BILL (H.R. 1588)

HON. BETTY McCOLLUM

OF MINNESOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Ms. MCCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 1588, the fiscal year 2004 Defense Authorization bill. While I strongly believe we must support our armed servicemen and women around the world, this bill contains several unnecessary provisions intended to weaken employee protections and the environment while authorizing billions of dollars on a national missile defense policy that is unproven and untested. It is unfortunate that these controversial measures were included in such an important piece of legislation.

I agree that the Department of Defense (DOD) should have the flexibility to manage itself in an efficient manner and provide the strongest national defense. This flexibility, however, should not come at the expense of worker's protections. H.R. 1588 gives the DoD broad authority to strip almost 700,000 civilian employees of fundamental rights relating to due process, appeal and collective bargaining rights. This means the DoD will be able to fire employees with no notice and no opportunity to respond, prevent discrimination actions from being heard by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, strip employees of their right to join a union and repeal the laws preventing nepotism. Civil service employees at DoD have defended our Nation bravely and made enormous sacrifices to support the military effort in Iraq. DOD should not be given unlimited authority to trample on their basic rights.

H.R. 1588 also unnecessarily weakens longstanding environmental protections at our military facilities by lowering the accountability standard DoD must follow when recovering imperiled species under the Endangered Species Act. The new standard fails to ensure the DOD's conservation plans are actually effective in assisting the recovery of imperiled species. H.R. 1588 also creates a far less protective definition of 'harassment' of marine life by military activities under the Marine Mammal Protection Act. This new definition allows DoD to avoid ensuring its activities are conducted in a manner to minimize harm to marine life such as whales, dolphins and sea lions.

Although I fully appreciate the importance of military training and readiness, the DOD has not made the case that exemptions to important and long-standing environmental laws are necessary or that training is greatly impaired because of those laws. Furthermore, the President already has the authority to waive environmental laws if he deems it a matter of national security, and not once has a waiver requested by the President been turned down. Until our national security is at stake, no government agency—including the DOD—should be above laws that preserve our air and water and sustain America's wildlife.

This measure also authorizes $9.1 billion for the unproven and untested National Missile Defense system. This costly program fails to address the rising threat of a chemical or biological weapons attack by terrorists and will divert precious resources away from the very real human investments needed to keep our military, intelligence agencies and domestic security agencies strong. At a time when the Federal Government shortchanges our local communities and neighborhoods in their hometown security efforts, it is irresponsible to be adding billions of dollars to a risky National Missile Defense program. We must strengthen our home security and provide our citizens with the appropriate resources necessary to ensure a terrorist attack never happens again on American soil.

Although I oppose H.R. 1588, I am encouraged that the bill provides a significant boost for military salaries, health care, housing allowances and housing construction opportunities. We need to assure our military that as we continue to support their readiness capabilities, we remember the personal well being of the men and women in uniform as well as their families.

When the Conference Report on this bill between the House and Senate is addressed in the House, we will have another opportunity to pass a measure that reflects the critical needs of our military while protecting the civil service protections of our employees and our environment. I look forward to working with my colleagues on these efforts.

CONCENTRATION OF OWNERSHIP IN MEDIA

SPEECH OF

HON. BARBARA LEE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, June 2, 2003

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) decision to allow for monopolies in media markets represents a grave day for free speech. It also represents the defeat of the belief that the American people will benefit from a variety of viewpoints on issues, not the few that will be ushered in by the huge media conglomerates.

The Bush Administration and FCC Chairman Michael Powell have bowed to the demands of giant media companies. These companies, in effect, claimed that they needed another government handout to remain ''viable,'' even though they have already been absorbing television stations and newspapers.

With this ruling, the Administration has also indicated that it is not interested in preserving multiple media voices and opinions in the electronic and print media industries. The old FCC rules protected the participation of minority-owned media outlets. In fact, with minorities owning only 3.8 percent of United States commercial radio and television stations, including 1.9 percent of the country's commercial television licenses, we need more protection, not less. Yet under the new rules, these minority-owned media outlets will be squeezed out by media conglomerates.

Mr. Powell also argued that new modes of communication, like the Internet and digital TV, reduce the need for these rules. Yet, television and newspapers remain the public's main sources of information. And while the Internet has certainly revolutionized our society, a look at the 20 most visited websites reveals that they are run by the same companies that own the most popular TV networks and newspapers. So Mr. Powell's argument holds no water.

Media ownership rules are actually more important now than they were 50 years ago because the power and resources of large media companies have grown exponentially over the last fifteen to twenty years. As a result, smaller, independent companies do not have the resources to compete with Viacom or Newscorp. These rules are needed to ensure that we don't lose what's left of our locally owned media and that we do have access to diverse sources of information.

By lifting these rules, we will lose our independent media watchdog. Americans don't want a handful of companies controlling their access to information.

We must now redouble our efforts to pass legislation that will ensure a democratic media. We must not only mobilize members of Congress but grassroots organizations to send a message that the exclusion of all other voices except those provided by the media giants is not acceptable for our society.

I am very disappointed that Mr. Powell and his allies on the FCC did not heed the American public's deep concerns and leave our media ownership rules intact.

TRIBUTE TO DON AND KARYL DIPRINCE

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the fifty-seven years of public service Don and Karyl DiPrince have given to the public schools of La Junta, Colorado. Don and Karyl have made tremendous contributions in the lives of generations of La Junta's school children, serving as teachers, mentors, coaches and role models.

Don comes from a family of teachers and wanted to continue his family's tradition of helping youth, whereas Karyl decided to become a teacher because of her love of children. While Karyl has spent the majority of her career teaching fourth and fifth grades at West School, Don has spent many years teaching physical education and coaching baseball, basketball and football at the high school level. La Junta's children have benefited immensely from Don and Karyl's efforts both in and out of the classroom. Don and Karyl have shaped both the minds and the bodies of our children and we could not have entrusted this important responsibility to a more dedicated and beloved pair of public servants.

Mr. Speaker, it is with deep respect for Don and Karyl that I congratulate them before this body of Congress and this nation upon their retirement from La Junta public school system. They have dedicated over half a century of their lives to the advancement of Colorado's youth and their influence will not be forgotten. Don and Karyl, thank you and good luck to you in all of your future endeavors.

INTRODUCTION OF A BILL TO AMEND THE ORGANIC ACT OF GUAM FOR THE PURPOSES OF CLARIFYING THE LOCAL JUDICIAL STRUCTURE OF GUAM

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation to amend the Organic Act of Guam to establish the Guam Judiciary as the third, co-equal and independent branch of the Government of Guam. My bill also clarifies that the Supreme Court of Guam shall have authority over all inferior courts in the Guam Judiciary.

Currently, the Guam Legislature and the Guam Executive Branch have the power to abolish the Supreme Court of Guam, and as such, may infringe upon the Judiciary's independence. This unequal balance of power was created by the 1984 Omnibus Territories Act which authorized the creation of an appellate court on Guam; however, this statute unintentionally left the newly created court subordinate to the powers of the Legislature and the Executive. My bill to amend the Organic Act of Guam remedies this unacceptable situation by making the Supreme Court of Guam an ''Organic'' court equal in stature to the other branches of government and providing the Guam Judiciary the same protection as the other branches have in their status under the Organic Act of Guam. Just as the Governor cannot disband the Legislature, and the Legislature cannot abolish the Executive, so too should the Judiciary be free from the threat of abolishment by the Legislative or Executive branches if their judicial decisions come under political fire. The Guam Judiciary needs to be insulated from the possibility of political interference by the Legislative and Executive branches, and the balance of power among these branches needs to be restored and protected.

This bill has received strong support from the Supreme Court of Guam, the Guam Bar Association, along with various members of the Guam Legislature, including Speaker Vicente (Ben) C. Pangelinan. In addition, Senator F. Randall Cunliffe, Chairman of the Committee on Judiciary and Transportation in the 27th Guam Legislature, fully supports this bill.

The bill I am introducing today is in the same form as reported out by the Committee on Resources in the 107th Congress. This bill has evolved since it was first introduced in the 105th Congress by former Congressman Robert Underwood, my predecessor, as the Guam Judicial Empowerment Act, and in its current form, this bill reflects improvements suggested by the U.S. District Court of Guam and the Committee.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill to amend the Organic Act of Guam in recognition of the importance of having a strong Judiciary and in furtherance of Guam's efforts to achieve the greatest amount of self-governance possible. I look forward to working with the leadership on this issue, and I hope that this legislation would be reported expeditiously to the House by the Committee on Resources for consideration on the floor.

TRIBUTE TO DR. CHARLES NATHANSON

HON. SUSAN A. DAVIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commemorate the life of a valuable San Diego leader, Dr. Charles Nathanson. He was a unique individual because he developed the capacity to create dialogue among important leaders of differing views on the critical issues of our region.

Chuck was valued not only by a host of San Diego's leading citizens but also by those in Baja California and our metropolitan partner Tijuana.

At the University of California San Diego in 1991, Chuck founded the San Diego Dialogue, which brought over 150 regional leaders together on a frequent basis for panel discussions on the challenges to our community. He fostered the binational Forum Fronterizo Council, which held well-attended bilingual luncheon meetings to hear distinguished speakers from both sides of the border.

Baja California Governor Eugenio Elorduy Walther, co-Chairman of the Forum Fronterizo Council, quoted in a local newspaper obituary, recognized Dr. Nathanson as ''the spark plug'' of San Diego Dialogue as its Executive Director.

President of San Diego State University, Stephen Weber, also noted, ''He understood we can never be separated from our friends and neighbors in Mexico . . .''

While his work building human bridges across our international border was his best known focus, he also volunteered his skills to create dialogue between the opposing sides on San Diego issues and gave endless personal energy to resolve differences. He formed a distinguished panel of city leaders, leading educators, and legislators to develop a common understanding of the critical issues we faced locally in education.

As both a journalist and a professor of Sociology, Chuck understood the importance of facts and of making those results part of public discussion. Realizing that basic information was critical to good educational decisions, he found the resources to have his staff undertake an important study of how minority parents interact within their school community.

I particularly appreciate that Dr. Nathanson sponsored a study of the reasons people cross the border into San Diego. It showed that many people repeatedly enter San Diego for education and shopping, and this led to the development of a fast-track, electronic inspection lane called SENTRI. Indeed, I am currently working on legislation to expedite access to this successful program.

He was hailed in the local press by Robert Dynes, the Chancellor of the University of California San Diego, as serving ''town and gown superbly as strategist, ambassador, activist and taskmaster.''

Born in Detroit August 22, 1941, Charles E. Nathanson graduated from Harvard and worked as a journalist and manager of a chain of weeklies before earning a doctorate in sociology at Brandeis University.

The broad spectrum of his interests included serving on a number of cultural and civic boards addressing the breadth of issues affecting the future of the region including education, business, transportation, and housing. Typically, he had become a member of the advisory group for one of San Diego's newest projects, development of the Immigrant Museum of the New Americas.

San Diego and Baja California have been uniquely served by this determined visionary. Chuck Nathanson has left an indelible heritage for our region.

TRIBUTE TO JONATHAN POST

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Jonathan Post from Colorado's Pueblo County Sheriff's Department. Jonathan was recently recognized with his department's Medal of Valor. Although he has worked with the Department only a short time, he has already served with great distinction and I would like to acknowledge Jonathan's service before this body of Congress and this nation.

In February of this year, Jonathan arrived at the scene of a fire where two men were trapped inside. Although the structure was in danger of collapse, Jonathan entered the building to save the two men alongside his fellow officer, Fred Cortese. Unfortunately, the men that Jonathan and Fred were attempting to rescue were not initially cooperative, being unaware of the imminent danger they faced. Even after successfully getting the men to safety through a window exit, it became necessary for Jonathan and Fred to rescue one of the men a second time when he disregarded their orders and rushed back into his burning home.

Mr. Speaker, it is dedicated men and women like Jonathan that work selflessly to protect our rights and freedoms. I would like to draw attention to the further service he has shown to our country as a Marine Reservist serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom. I extend my gratitude to Jonathan for the heroism he has shown and for the great services he has performed for Colorado and for this Nation.

RECOGNIZING OF EVELYN H. LAUDER

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Evelyn Lauder, who will be presented tonight with The Alice Award by the Sewall Belmont House and Museum. As founder and chairman of The Breast Cancer Research Foundation, Mrs. Lauder has devoted her life to the fight against breast cancer. She is a shining example of how much one individual with unrelenting passion can accomplish.

A woman of boundless compassion and generosity towards others, Mrs. Lauder has touched countless lives through her efforts in leading The Breast Cancer Research Foundation. She has spearheaded the growth of what is today the largest national organization dedicated exclusively to funding exceptional research relating to the causes, treatment, and possible prevention of breast cancer. Since 1993, the Foundation has raised $70 million for research funding that has fueled some of the most innovative work on breast cancer in the country.

In October of 2002, the Foundation awarded an outstanding $11.7 million to 63 researchers at 41 leading institutions in the United States and abroad. Originally conferring eight research grants in its founding year, the Foundation is now able to award grants of approximately $250,000 to each of their research institutions. The core of the Foundation's mission is to direct a minimum of 85 cents of each dollar donated to the purpose of clinical and genetic research on breast cancer.

Breast cancer is an issue that affects both men and women of all walks of life. Mrs. Lauder's inspired leadership is the driving force behind the Foundation's many gains in the treatment and prevention of this disease. Her remarkable vision led her to establish the Pink Ribbon as the now globally recognized symbol of breast health, putting breast cancer awareness at the forefront of public attention.

Mrs. Lauder has every expectation that we will achieve the goal of ''prevention and a cure in our lifetime.'' With boundless enthusiasm and extraordinary dedication, she has made it possible for top notch research and diagnosis to be done all over the country. One prime example is located in my district, the first of its kind, the comprehensive breast and diagnostic center at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, which Mrs. Lauder was instrumental in creating. Mrs. Lauder was recently recognized by Rockefeller University with the Brooke Astor Award for Outstanding Contributions to the Advancement of Science for her incomparable role in creating the center as well as for the compassion and generosity with which she leads the Foundation in the fight against breast cancer.

In recognition of these outstanding achievements, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Evelyn H. Lauder for her indomitable spirit and tenacity in leading The Breast Cancer Research Foundation to fund the research that will conquer breast cancer.

STATEMENT ON CHILD TAX CREDIT

HON. SILVESTRE REYES

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my deep disappointment with the tax bill recently signed into law by the President. While providing approximately $350 billion in tax cuts, this law neglects many of our hard-working, low-income families. At the same time that the bill provides tax cuts of $93,500 to the 200,000 taxpayers making over $1 million in our country, this bill leaves behind 8 million children by denying their families full access to the child tax credit.

This law fails to apply the child tax credit to some of America's neediest families—those earning between $10,500 and $26,625 per year. Of the 8 million children left behind in this tax law, 1 million live with parents who are on active duty service or are veterans. The children of our working families, especially those of our armed services, deserve our greatest support.

There are approximately 16,500 military families with children at Fort Bliss in my district. Anxiously awaiting news about the status of the members of the 507th Maintenance Company in late March, these families understand, more than most, what it means to sacrifice for our nation. These are the families of the brave men and women who fight to defend our freedoms, and they certainly do not deserve to be left out of this tax cut. I urge my colleagues to pass legislation immediately to extend the child tax credit to families making between $10,500 and $26,625 a year. Let us send a message to our hard-working families that they count too and that we recognize their efforts.

It is my sincere hope that we can work together to provide our hard-working families with a fair and equitable child tax credit.

TRIBUTE TO RICK ORESKEY

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is with profound pleasure today that I pay tribute to Commander Rick Oreskey of the Pueblo County Sheriff's Department, who has recently been honored by the Department with its Medal of Valor. In his many years of dedication to the police force and to the Pueblo community, Rick has embodied the ideals of integrity and courage that make Coloradans and all Americans proud of their police men and women. I am proud to pay tribute to Rick for his contributions to his community, his state and his country.

Rick has served with distinction for many years, having previously earned the Silver Star of the American Law Enforcement Association for saving the lives of two police detectives. This incident occurred in 1977 when a man, disregarding orders to drop his gun, instead aimed it at the two police detectives attempting to apprehend him. Rick acted swiftly and professionally to protect the lives of the two detectives.

Mr. Speaker, Commander Rick Oreskey is a law enforcement officer of exemplary courage and commitment to his community. He has made Pueblo County a happier place to live and a safer community. It is Rick's unrelenting commitment to his community as well as his spirit of courage and integrity that I wish to bring to the attention of this body of Congress. It is my privilege to extend to Rick my heartfelt congratulations on his being honored with the Medal of Valor.

RECOGNIZING GEORGINA SUAREZ GONZALEZ AND LUIS L. GONZALEZ

HON. CHRIS BELL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. BELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Georgina Suarez Gonzalez and Luis L. Gonzalez on the occasion of their fortieth wedding anniversary.

Both Georgina and Luis Gonzalez were born in Havana, Cuba. Mrs. Gonzalez came to the United States in 1947 to enter into religious study. She graduated from the College of New Rochelle in New York, a college rich with Ursuline heritage. After completing her education, Georgina realized she had fallen in love with her new country and decided to stay to make a life in the United States. Although she dated Luis in her youth in Cuba, her determination to live the American dream and Luis's plans to stay in Cuba made marriage an unlikely scenario.

Luis Gonzalez attended the University of Havana in 1945, the same year Fidel Castro entered the university. Like so many Cuban patriots and students during the politically turbulent and corrupt years of General Fulgencio Batista, Luis fought for a more democratic and independent nation. As is known from history, the dictatorship of Batista was followed by the dictatorship of Fidel Castro.

Facing political persecution, Luis fled Cuba in December 1960 to begin his new life in America. Finally, Georgina and Luis found themselves in the same country and in love.

Mr. and Mrs. Gonzalez married on June 10, 1963 in Westphalia, Missouri. Monsignor Kutz performed the wedding ceremony. After they married, Georgina left her job on Wall Street to join her new husband in Houston where he was employed with Dow Chemical. They settled in Houston's Sharpstown area and began a family.

In addition to raising three children, Georgina enjoyed a successful career with Prudential Insurance Company of America. She became the first woman in the nation to lead the company in insurance sales. Luis joined Georgina at Prudential in 1967 where they worked together to build a strong family insurance business.

Georgina and Luis Gonzalez are true reminders of the power and promise of the American dream. The couple immigrated to this country, raised three loving children, and built a strong, flourishing business. Together with their children, John Michael, Ana Maria and Luis Gaston and grandchildren, Carolina Andrea Wood, William Alexander Wood, and Gabriella Grace Gonzalez, I congratulate Georgina and Luis Gonzalez on their fortieth wedding anniversary.

BATTALION CHIEF HAL CHASE

HON. MICHAEL M. HONDA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the contributions and achievements of Battalion Chief Hal Chase on his retirement from the Santa Clara County Fire Department. Chief Chase has dedicated over thirty years to the community and fire department of Santa Clara County.

Chief Chase lives in Los Gatos, California, with his lovely wife, Karen, and three beautiful children, Brian, Christine, and Michael. He met his wife while serving as the President of the International Association of Fire Fighters Local 1165, during which he worked diligently to increase benefits and improve working conditions for his fellow fire fighters. Currently, Chief Chase oversees Battalion 3 of the Santa Clara County Fire Department, consisting of seven stations and their heroic crews.

Affectionately referred to as ''The Senator'' by his peers, Chief Chase has served as the Program Facilitator for the Hazardous Materials Program. He is a member of the California State FIRESCOPE Task Force. In addition, Hal manages the Department's Response Map Program, Hose Program, and Hydrant Testing Program.

With these awesome responsibilities, it is a wonder how Chief Chase can reserve time for other commitments. But his contributions to his community are just as extensive. Chief Chase is committed to the high school anti-drinking campaign, ''Every 15 Minutes.'' Through his tireless efforts, much needed fire equipment was donated to Mexico, including coats, hats, and even fire engines. Hal is also a strong supporter of the Democratic Party.

On occasion, Chief Chase has been known to forego his fire fighting skills to purposely starting them, in the kitchen. He has applied his passion for cooking for not only the pleasure of his crew, but also for charity. Along with the raised monies, raffled dinners at the firehouse have promoted stronger relations with the community.

Mr. Speaker, I commend Battalion Chief Hal Chase for his magnanimous dedication to the community and fire department of Santa Clara County. Although we celebrate his retirement, I know Chief Chase will continue serving Santa Clara, even if only out of the kitchen.

TRIBUTE TO BETTY PFISTER

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to pay tribute today to a pioneer in the field of aviation. Betty Pfister of Aspen, Colorado has been named by Women in Aviation International as one of the 100 Most Influential Women in aviation history. Betsy joins well-known figures Amelia Earhart and Sally Ride, on the list, and it is easy to see why—her accomplishments are truly impressive.

Sally began flying while in high school and served as a Woman's Air Service Pilot (WASP) during World War II. WASPs piloted planes around the country to help free-up men to fly combat missions in Europe and Asia. After the war, Sally worked as both a pilot and flight attendant, getting in plenty of flying on her own time as well.

In 1950 and 1952 Sally won international air races, and in 1973 and 1978 she piloted for the United States in the World Helicopter Championships. Sally also piloted balloons, founded the Pitkin County Air Rescue, and created scholarships to enable flight instruction among high school age children. One of her former planes, a World War fighter she named ''Galloping Gertie,'' is on display at the Smithsonian's Air And Space Museum.

Mr. Speaker, Betty is more than a talented and versatile pilot. She is a leader who, through her remarkable success, helped motivate and inspire future generations of young male and female pilots alike. Betty embodies the competence and can-do spirit that helped make America great, and I am proud to recount her impressive story here today.

HONORING McLEAN COUNTY, ILLINOIS AS A COMMUNITY OF EXCELLENCE

HON. JERRY WELLER

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. WELLER. I rise today to congratulate McLean County, Illinois, recipient of the 2003 Communities Can! Community of Excellence Award. Communities Can! is a program initiated by the Department of Health and Human Services, coordinated by the Georgetown University Center for Child and Human Development.

The Community of Excellence Award is presented to only four communities each year for demonstrating their ability to efficiently collaborate and utilize resources provided by public and private programs for supporting young children and their families. McLean County has successfully tailored these complex programs to meet their specific needs.

McLean County, a community of 154,000 people located in Central Illinois, received this honor for their innovation, flexibility, and the broad range of service and support they provide. Their approach is to identify the needs of families in the community, match those needs with appropriate service, and do so in a cost effective manner, which has produced great results.

I am proud to represent McLean County, Illinois, and commend her citizens of for their hard work and the success it yielded, leading to their receiving the Community of Excellence award. I look forward to working with them as they enjoy future success, hopefully leading other communities to adopt the creative, effective service to needy families that our Nation needs to meet the challenges ahead.

INFORMING THE HOUSE OF THE DEATH OF FORMER U.S. REPRESENTATIVE TOM GETTYS

HON. JOHN M. SPRATT, JR.

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, I have the sad duty of informing the House of the death of Tom S. Gettys, who served in the House of Representatives from 1964 to 1974, representing the Fifth District of South Carolina, and served even longer as administrative assistant to Rep. James P. Richards.

On Sunday, Tom Gettys and his wife, Mary Phillips, went a last time together to the First ARP Church in Rock Hill, South Carolina. On Sunday evening, he slipped quietly away, dying in the town he loved, where he had spent his life, much of it serving the people.

The term ''public servant'' is often misapplied, but in the case of Tom Gettys, it is a perfect fit. He was a school principal and coach; right-hand aide to a high-ranking congressman; a naval officer who volunteered for duty and served in the Pacific; a postmaster; a night-school, self-taught lawyer; and for ten years, a Member of Congress.

As congressman, he endeared himself to the people who elected him. If folks in the Fifth District revered Dick Richards and admired Bob Hemphill, they loved Tom Gettys. They loved him because he had an easy-going affinity for all sorts of people, and because he put his constituents first and worked hard for them, and they knew it.

When he was at the top of his form, Tom Gettys retired. He had the good grace not to hang on in Washington to capitalize on his relationships, but instead came back to Rock Hill, hung out his shingle and practiced law. As a young lawyer, I used to run into him checking titles with the rest of us in the clerk of court's office. This was the self-deprecating side of the man that people appreciated. He took his work seriously, but never himself.

I saw this side of Tom Gettys when I was in Washington in the 1970s and walked with him to the House floor. Tom knew the capitol police, the elevator operators, the doorkeepers, all by first name. He told me later that having been a staffer, he knew who ran the House.

I got an even better insight when Tom visited me soon after I was elected. I begged him to sit and talk, but could tell he had something else on his mind, and soon found out what it was. He wanted to go downstairs to the Longworth Cafeteria and speak to Odessa. Odessa ran the breakfast line, and was a spirited soul, full of chatter and advice, which she dished out freely while you decided how you wanted your eggs. Tom seldom came to Capitol Hill without visiting Odessa.

Tom Gettys belonged to the old school, to the era before pollsters, spin-masters, and 30-second spots, and he often told me, it was a good thing. He enjoyed introducing me as the ''second-best looking congressman to represent the 5th District.'' I enjoyed telling him, ''Tom, if good looks had anything to do with being elected to this office, you would have lost to Bate Harvey in 1964.'' He was not some political artifact, crafted to win elections. He was the genuine article—of the people, by the people, for the people. When many of his conservative colleagues voted against Medicare, Tom Gettys stood with his people. He voted for it, and was proud of it.

If he were to give his own farewell, he would tell us that marrying Mary Phillips White surpassed all of his achievements, and Julia and Beth were their crowning glory. He was a doting grandparent and used to say that if he had the chance to come back after dying, he would want come back as one of his grandchildren.

Those of us who learned from Tom Gettys and looked up to him will miss him. We will miss the wisdom he shared with us, and the stories that never grew old. He exemplified what life in a democracy is about. He earned the satisfaction every public servant wants: he left his country better than he found it.

HONORING LADISLAV COLIN ''POPS'' BAUER

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I stand before the nation and this Congress with a heavy heart, as the communities of Alamosa, Colorado and Adams State College have lost a tremendous human being. Ladislav Colin ''Pops'' Bauer is nothing short of a legend in Alamosa, particularly to the Adams State College cross-country team, where he served as a source of employment and motivation to numerous student athletes.

''Pops,'' as the students affectionately knew him, was the owner of the legendary Campus Café. This small restaurant served as a way for Colin to provide jobs to the school's student athletes, enabling them to earn a little extra money between classes and practice. It was here that Colin displayed incredible heart, and he was the type of guy that just kept on giving. When one of the Adams State runners could not find a sponsor to send him to the Olympic trials, it was Colin and the Campus Café who stepped forward with the money. This is just one example of the kindness and dedication that Colin displayed toward the Adams State Cross Country team.

Mr. Speaker, I am saddened by the loss of such a kind and caring individual. However, I am inspired to know that men like Ladislav Colin ''Pops'' Bauer were able to have an impact on America's youth. It is Colin's heart, modesty, and loyalty to the students of Adams State that garnered him respect, and it is for those very qualities that he has earned my respect here today.

ESTABLISHING JOINT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW HOUSE AND SENATE MATTERS ASSURING CONTINUING REPRESENTATION AND CONGRESSIONAL OPERATIONS FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE

SPEECH OF

HON. RON PAUL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, June 5, 2003

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, while may seem reasonable to establish a Joint Committee on the Continuity of Congress, I wish to bring to my colleagues' attention my concerns relative to certain proposals regarding continuity of government, which would fundamentally alter the structure of our government in a way detrimental to republican liberty.

In particular, I hope this Committee does not endorse the proposal contained in ''Preserving our Institutions, The Continuity of Government Commission'' which recommends that state governors appoint new representatives. Appointing representatives flies in the face of the Founders' intention that the House of Representatives be the part of the federal government most directly accountable to the people. Even with the direct election of Senators, the fact that members of the House are elected every two years while Senators run for statewide office every six years, means members of the House of Representatives are still more accountable to the people than any other part of the federal government.

Therefore, any action that abridges the people's constitutional authority to elect members of the House of Representatives abridges the people's ability to control their government. Supporters of this plan claim that the appointment power will be necessary in the event of an emergency and that the appointed representatives will only be temporary. However, Mr. Speaker, the laws passed by these ''temporary'' representatives will be permanent.

I would remind my colleagues that this country has faced the possibility of threats to the continuity of this body several times throughout our history, yet no one suggested removing the people's right vote for members of Congress. For example, the British in the War of 1812 attacked the city of Washington, yet nobody suggested the states could not address the lack of a quorum in the House of Representatives though elections. During the Civil War, the neighboring state of Virginia, where today many Capitol Hill staffers and members reside, was actively involved in hostilities against the United States Government, yet Abraham Lincoln never suggested that non-elected persons serve in the House. Forty-two years ago, Americans wrestled with a hostile superpower that had placed nuclear weapons just 90 miles off the Florida coast, yet no one suggested we consider taking away the people's right to elect their representatives in order to ensure ''continuity of government!''

I have no doubt that the people of the states are quite competent to hold elections in a timely fashion. After all, isn't it in each state's interest to ensure it has adequate elected representation in Washington as soon as possible? Mr. Speaker, there are those who say that the power of appointment is necessary in order to preserve checks and balances and thus prevent an abuse of executive power. Of course, I agree that it is very important to carefully guard our constitutional liberties in times of crisis, and that an over-centralization of power in the Executive Branch is one of the most serious dangers to that liberty. However, I would ask my colleagues who is more likely to guard the people's liberties, representatives chosen by, and accountable to, the people, or representatives hand-picked by the executive of their state?

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I wish to question the rush under which this bill is being brought to the floor. Until this morning, most members had no idea this bill would be considered today! The rules committee began its mark-up of the bill at 9:15 last night and by 9:31 the report was filed and the bill placed on the House Calendar. Then, after Congress had finished legislative business for the day and with only a handful of members on the floor, unanimous consent was obtained to consider this bill today.

It is always disturbing when bills dealing with important subjects are rushed through the House before members have adequate time to consider all the implications of the measure. I hope this does not set a precedent for shutting members of Congress out of the debate on this important issue.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, while there is no harm in considering ideas for continuity of Congress, I hope my colleagues will reject any proposal that takes away the people's right to elect their representatives in this chamber.

COMMEMORATING THE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE PASSAGE OF PROPOSITION 13

HON. DOUG OSE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. OSE. Mr. Speaker, twenty-five years ago, on June 6, 1978, California voters made history when they passed Proposition 13.

Millions of Californians can still remember the condition of our state in 1978, and the irresponsible government actions that moved people to create a new and better way. Skyrocketing property taxes literally drove people from their homes, and a similar fate would surely have been visited on thousands more. Many complained, but few in Sacramento heeded their plight, and this sparked the citizen movement that swept our state and demonstrated the best traditions of direct democracy.

The landslide vote that approved the initiative validated what Howard Jarvis himself said at the time: Californians from all regions of the state believed the time had come for serious reform, and they could simply wait no longer.

Proposition 13 was a voter-approved proposal that cut California's property taxes by 30 percent and then limited future increases. Other opponents of high taxes used Proposition 13 as a model that led many additional states to institute similar reforms. Almost all of these reforms are still in effect today.

The passage of Proposition 13 has resulted in a reduction in property taxes of approximately 57 percent in California. It has been an indispensable element in the way that our state moved forward to outperform the rest of the country in personal income growth, employment growth, and appreciation of real property values.

As we again face tough financial decisions and rising tax burdens, I am encouraged when I recall 1978, a time when Californians seized control of their own fate and reformed a runaway tax system. I hope Californians and all Americans will remember on this day that we can control our government and our own destinies.

HONORING BILL HARDING

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to stand before this body of Congress to recognize a man who has served as a chief and mentor for many of Colorado's brave young firefighters. Bill Harding of Glenwood Springs, Colorado, will be leaving the Glenwood Springs Fire Department soon to pursue his career as the Fire Marshal for the Basalt and Rural Fire Department.

In his 19 years of service in Glenwood Springs, Bill has been instrumental in stopping fires such as Storm King, and Coal Seam Fire. His knowledge, hard work and expertise have allowed him to occupy a variety of positions, such as battalion chief, training captain, EMT, and fire inspector.

However, if you ask his co-workers, it is not Bill's knowledge that makes him a great firefighter. What makes him stand out is his ability to teach others. Bill has been instrumental in the training and development of firefighters all over Colorado. He was never too busy to help a firefighter who wanted to learn and his passion and determination brought out the best in everyone.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand before this Congress and this nation to pay tribute to Chief Bill Harding. Bill's diligence, hard work, and positive attitude have helped develop a group of well-trained, hard-working individuals who protect our cities, homes, and families. Thank you, Bill, for your years of outstanding service.

RECOMMENDATIONS FROM TRIP REPORT ON VISIT TO IRAQ

HON. FRANK R. WOLF

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I recently shared with our colleagues observations following my recent two-day trip to southern Iraq. I was there Sunday, May 25, and Monday, May 26. I also spent a day, Tuesday, May 27, in Kuwait, where I met with Kuwaiti government officials, members of the U.S. military, State Department officials and staff from the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID).

Today I want to share with our colleagues a number of recommendations concerning the reconstruction of Iraq.

Recommendations: these recommendations are based on my observations and conversations with the people I met during the course of my visit. Some were discussed in greater detail in the observations section of my trip report.

Security: security is priority one. While the coalition forces have made great strides in trying to improve security in recent weeks, there is still a long way to go. Security is the linchpin to winning the peace in Iraq. That means security for coalition forces. Security for the NGOs. Security for the contractors. And security for the Iraqi people so they can go about their life. The gun turn-back program recently announced by Ambassador Bremer is a positive step but many are concerned that people may turn in only one gun and keep two. In addition to concerns about personal safety, looting remains a problem. I was told that looters continue to target electrical substations in southern Iraq, stealing the copper wire to sell on the black market. These substations provide much of the power for Baghdad. Coalition forces should provide security until it can be provided by the Iraqis.

Justice System: re-establishing a fair and just judicial system in a timely fashion is critical. Figuring out what to do with locals who break the law, such as looters, but are not a threat to U.S. security must be addressed as soon as possible. The laws need to be clear and must be enforced.

'Play to Win': ''Play to Win,'' the final report of the bipartisan Commission on Post-Conflict Reconstruction, should be used as the blueprint for rebuilding Iraq.

The report, released in January, was produced jointly by the Association of the United States Army and the Center for Strategic and International Studies. Its 17 recommendations provide an excellent model to follow. The commission is made up of 27 distinguished individuals with extensive experience in government, the military, non-governmental organizations and international aid groups. It met throughout 2002 to ''consider recommendations that surfaced over two years of research, expert working groups, and vetting with current policymakers and practitioners.'' The report can be found on the Internet at http://www.pcrproject.org

Commission Visits: a select group of the Commission on Post Conflict Reconstruction should travel to Iraq.

The panel's co-chairmen, Dr. John Hamre, former deputy secretary of defense, and Gen. Gordon Sullivan, former chief of staff of the U.S. Army, should appoint a select number of commissioners to travel to Iraq to assess how the reconstruction efforts are going. Their assessment, a second opinion, if you will, would be impartial and could prove to be invaluable. They should travel in a small group with a military escort to ensure their safety.

Congressional Oversight: small groups of members of Congress should make the trip to Iraq. They should go without publicity to ensure their safety and the safety of those who would be providing protection. Their visit to learn more about what is happening in the country and what it is going to take to rebuild the country would be helpful in their oversight responsibility in Congress. The chairmen and ranking Members—or their designees—of the House and Senate Armed Services committees, Appropriations committees and International Relations/Foreign Relations committees should consider going.

In addition to meeting with military commanders, the members should meet with Ambassador Bremer and other officials in the Office of Reconstruction and Humanitarian Assistance (ORHA), USAID officials, representatives from the NGO community and other international organizations, and Iraqi citizens.

Partnering with Iraqi People: every effort must be made to involve the Iraqi people in rebuilding their country, from governance to security to repairing the country's infrastructure. The Iraqi people must be an equal partner in the process.

''Play to Win'' is instructive on this point: ''. . . every effort must be taken to build (or rebuild) indigenous capacity and governance structures as soon as possible. Leadership roles in the reconstruction effort must be given to host country nationals at the earliest possible stage of the process. Even if capacity is limited, host country representatives should chair or co-chair pledging conferences, priority-setting meetings, joint assessment of needs, and all other relevant processes.''

American companies awarded contracts to rebuild Iraq's infrastructure should hire locals whenever possible. There are many skilled and educated people in Iraq and they should be tapped to help rebuild their country.

Reconstruction Support: the sooner the Office of Reconstruction and Humanitarian Assistance, now called the Coalition Provisional Authority, is completely operational the better. Every effort should be made to ensure that Ambassador Bremer and his staff have the necessary tools and resources to successfully complete the job.

Provincial Officers: the military's Civil Affairs detachments in Iraq have worked diligently to help restore order and are making more and more progress every day. Consideration should be given to providing the officer in charge of each of the 18 provinces in Iraq with access to a ready cash account—perhaps up to $500,000—so they can more quickly hire translators, laborers and other locals to assist in their efforts in putting together a government without having to get every expenditure signed off by headquarters or Washington.

The money also could be used to purchase goods and services in-country, such as generators, pumps or even a trash truck, on a more timely basis rather than waiting for it to be brought in by coalition forces.

Government on any level needs money to operate. Clearly, this money must be accounted for, but it would greatly assist in the efforts to rebuild the country.

Civilian Expertise: consideration also should be given to helping augment the work of the Civil Affairs detachments by bringing in U.S. civilians with expertise in local government, such as county administrators and city managers, as well as experts in agriculture and public works. In each of the 18 provinces, the head of each military Civil Affairs detachment acts like a governor. They need experts—much like a cabinet—at their disposal who can advise them on issues like banking, education, public works and health care.

For example, the National Association of County Administrators could assist in rotating in civilian administrators to work with the military and local Iraqis in setting up and running local governments. There could be one for each of the 18 provinces. Some of the leading agriculture companies in the country could lend their expertise on irrigation and production. The head of the public works department in any large county or city in the country would bring an inordinate amount of experience to the table. There also is a great deal of expertise in the Federal Government which can be tapped. Again, these individuals would work hand-in-hand with the military and the locals.

Post-Combat Skills: the U.S. military has to begin thinking about training more of its soldiers for a postcombat environment to help fill any void until the necessary Civil Affairs and Military Police units can be put in place. I realize this is asking our war fighters to take on a new mission, but in this new world environment, I believe this skill is necessary.

Communications Systems: communications and communication systems remain a problem for both the military and the aid organizations working in Iraq. I was told that not all of the Civil Affairs detachments are readily able to communicate with each other or with the Humanitarian Assistance Center in Kuwait, which is coordinating all the civil affairs and humanitarian assistance in Iraq. Contacting U.S. officials in Baghdad also is problematic. I was told part of the problem is that most Civil Affairs detachments are made up of reserve units which do not always have compatible communications equipment. This needs to be addressed. It is imperative that all 18 provinces be linked with each other and headquarters. Congress should provide DOD with the necessary funding to ensure that these detachments have radios, computers and other communications equipment that are interoperable.

Aid organizations also are encountering problems communicating with their staff in southern Iraq because telephone and other data transmission lines have yet to be repaired. This presents a problem, especially for sharing data and supplying information.

Iraq's banking system: the issue of Iraqi currency must be dealt with immediately. Many people in Iraq will not accept payment with the old regime's currency. The World Bank should provide its expertise in helping get Iraq's banking system back up and running.

The Story of Democracy: the State Department working with the National Endowment for Democracy and other groups with similar expertise should develop a program on democracy and how a democratic government works.

I was told that Iraqis watch a great deal of television. Perhaps whatever program is developed should be put on videotapes and tailored to specific age groups so that all Iraqis can understand the democratic process. This program must be made available to the Civil Affairs units in each of the 18 provinces. I understand money already has been appropriated and some contracts have been let. This program must be put into place as soon as possible.

A pro-democracy newspaper also should begin to be published on a daily basis in Iraq.

Ordnance Removal: finding and removing unexploded ordnance needs to be a priority. Sadly, many Iraqi children have been seriously hurt by exploding weapons while playing outdoors. When I visited the General Hospital in Nasiriyah, a young boy had just been brought into the emergency room after either a mine or unexploded ordnance blew up near him. He was severely burned and there was a piece of shrapnel in his right eye. Clearing this ordnance will be a long and laborious process.

Health Care: while great progress has been made to improve health care in southern Iraq since the war ended, there is still a long way to go. While the major hospitals in southern Iraq used to bear Saddam Hussein's name—and are all identically constructed—there was little or no medicine and the conditions inside are deplorable. One NGO that is providing invaluable assistance is the International Medical Corps (IMC). Their doctors, nurses, nutritionists and other health care professionals are making great strides in assessing the health care needs of Iraq. They are also helping provide care. I was told that IMC has helped distribute more than two tons of donated medicine to hospitals and clinics in southern Iraq. There is concern, however, that diseases like malaria and visceral leishmaniasis—also called Dum Dum Fever or Black Fever—could ravage the region this summer because no spraying was done this spring to kill the mosquito larvae or sand flea larvae. Bites from sand fleas are the cause of visceral leishmaniasis, which attacks internal organs. This disease has an 80 percent fatality rate for young children unless treated with a 21-day shot routine. Cholera is another concern. Area hospitals and American drug companies should work with medical NGOs in Iraq to ensure they have an adequate drug supply and the necessary equipment to provide medical services. Any assistance must be coordinated with NGOs on the ground so there is not any duplication of efforts or unnecessary equipment donated.

Women's Health: improving health services for women will be particularly important as the reconstruction of Iraq moves forward. More focus is needed on pre- and post-natal care. The surgical capabilities in the country are seriously lacking. Special instruments for delivering babies and performing cesarean sections are needed. So are the proper medications for delivery. More nurses also need to be trained.

Religious Freedom: as a new government is established in Iraq, care must be given to protect the rights of religious minorities. I urge the Bush Administration to develop a strategy and governance structure within the new Iraqi government to ensure that the hard won freedoms of the Iraqi people also will include the right and protection of religious liberties.

Quality of Life for Troops: the troops serving in the Gulf region are outstanding. The ones I spoke with were highly skilled, highly motivated and extremely professional. They all have made great sacrifices to serve their country. In turn, we should do everything possible to make sure their morale remains high. Hearing from home is a big part of that. Congress should provide DOD with the necessary resources to ensure these service men and women serving in the Gulf, and around the globe for that matter, are able to get messages from home, whether by phone, e-mail or regular mail.

Commendation for Kuwait: Congress should approve a resolution thanking the government and people of Kuwait for their assistance in helping to provide humanitarian relief to Iraq. The Kuwaiti government has provided millions of dollars in assistance, both in-kind and in material goods. The United States' Humanitarian Operations Center is run out of a former government facility in Kuwait City.

NGOs Valuable Role: the NGOs on the ground in the region also have done a tremendous job responding to the needs of the Iraqi people. From helping provide food to medical care to caring for orphans, their experience and expertise has proven invaluable. I was told some of the NGOs in the region are concerned that the humanitarian assistance is being coordinated by the U.S. military. Some of their misgivings may be justified. As the ORHA/CPA gets up and running, however, I suspect many of their concerns will be alleviated. Care must be given though to ensure that ORHA/CPA does not duplicate efforts that are already underway.

Conclusion: in closing, I want to thank all those who helped make my trip possible. For security reasons I cannot mention people by name, but I am forever grateful for their assistance.

I also want to thank all the NGOs who are providing humanitarian assistance in Iraq. The people who work and volunteer for these organizations are extremely dedicated. They work long hours and give up the many comforts of home to serve others, often in very dangerous places around the globe, like Iraq and Afghanistan. They are a special breed and deserve our thanks and praise.

Finally, I want to thank several members of my staff for their help in putting together this report. Dan Scandling, my chief of staff, accompanied me on the trip and served as photographer. Janet Shaffron, my legislative director, edited the report and Colin Samples did the layout and design.

IN HONOR OF DR. ALFRED O. HEATH

HON. DONNA M. CHRISTENSEN

OF THE VIRGIN ISLANDS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute a true renaissance man of the U.S. Virgin Islands, Dr. Alfred O. Heath. Mr. Speaker, Dr. Heath is being honored this weekend in St. Thomas with the Alexander A. Farrelly Public Service Award, given by Virgin Islanders for Responsible Government, an honor of which he is more than deserving.

A fellow physician, Dr. Heath is also renowned in the territory as a businessman, educator, health care administrator, musician and licensed pilot. Dr. Heath is most recognized for performing one of the territory's earliest heart surgeries, and for restoring the operable use of a patient's severed arm. In addition to the many ''medical miracles'' that he performed, Dr. Heath served as the Attending Senior Surgeon at the Roy Schneider Hospital and as a General Surgeon at the U.S. Army Hospital in Heidelberg, Germany.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Heath has also served as the Medical Director of Sea View Nursing and Rehabilitation Facility, as Commissioner of Health of the Government of the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Professor of Surgery at American University of the Caribbean in St. Maarten, West Indies.

His business pursuits include the founding of the Seaview facility, Heath Health Enterprises, the Medical Arts Complex of St. Thomas, Medical Arts Slender You Salon, and St. Thomas Health Care Management, Inc.

An all around gentleman, Dr. Heath's voice can be heard in local chorales and choirs, and entertaining a spellbound audience with his violin. He is also an adept pilot, and an avid boater.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Heath has been toasted by the Rotary International as the Man of the Year, the Paul Harris Fellow, and the Costas Coulianos Fellow. The Business and Professional Women, the Virgin Islands Toastmasters, the National Guard, the Virgin Islands Medical Society and the American Cancer Society have all at various times noted his talents and his willingness to share them with his community.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Alfred O. Heath was born and raised in St. Thomas to Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Heath. Upon graduation from Charlotte Amalie High School in 1947, he attended the University of Puerto Rico's School of Pharmacy for two years from 1947 to 1949. He later graduated from Temple University's School of Pharmacy with a Bachelor of Science degree in 1953. He received a Medical Degree from Jefferson Medical College followed by a surgical residency, which focused on general, thoracic and cardiovascular surgery between 1953 and 1960. He also attended the University of Heidelberg from 1962 to 1963.

Married to Geraldine Cheatham, they are the parents of one son, Alfred, Jr., and two daughters, Anita and Judy.

Dr. Heath's military career culminated with 50 years of service to the U.S. Army and the U.S. Army National Guard at the rank of Brigadier General.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I had the honor of serving under this outstanding individual in good times and bad. I will never forget his strength, endurance and leadership during the evacuation of the St. Croix Hospital after Hurricane Hugo. That experience and the emergency delivery that he performed during the crisis demonstrated the measure of this great man.

Mr. Speaker, the people of my district, the U.S. Virgin Islands are grateful to Dr. Heath for his many years of dedicated service to our islands. His selfless example of excellence, foresight and commitment is one that we hope will be emulated by our young people.

Mr. Speaker, it is my hope that my colleagues will join me in honoring a man so deserving as Dr. Heath.

TRIBUTE TO BILL MASHAW

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker I rise today to pay tribute to the exemplary efforts of Bill Mashaw of Durango, Colorado. Bill has been awarded the Community Builder Award by the La Plata County Community Summit Coordinating Committee for going far beyond the call of duty. Today I wish to recognize the accomplishments and character of this great citizen before this body of Congress and this Nation.

Bill has proven his commitment to the community by organizing the Big Brothers, Big Sisters program and through his involvement in the Community Development Corporation, which works on affordable housing projects. In addition, Bill has served with the Red Cross and the Salvation Army and currently serves on the board of directors for the Fort Lewis College Foundation. Bill also reaches out to children in the Durango area by helping with the D.A.R.E. program, and a number of other programs geared towards youth.

Mr. Speaker, the work of Bill Mashaw has touched the lives of many in his community. It is with great pride that I stand to honor a man who has lived a life of love, service and passion. I add my voice to that of the Durango Area Chamber Resort Association, who has named Bill Mashaw both Citizen and Volunteer of The Year. Thank you, Bill, for your dedication.

BUSH ADMINISTRATION DECEPTIONS ABOUT IRAQ THREATEN CONSTITUTIONAL DEMOCRACY

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, my service in this House has often shown me the profound tension between government secrecy and democratic decision-making. Rarely however, has that tension been as starkly posed as in the current revelations of divergence between President Bush's assertions based on ''secret information'' about the alleged threat to America posed by Iran and the actual assessment of that threat by America's intelligence professionals.

I have seen the American people apparently deceived into supporting invasion of sovereign nation, in violation of UN charter and international law, on the basis of what now appear to be false assurances. The power of the Congress to declare war was usurped. The consent of the governed was obtained by manipulation rather than candid persuasion.

Instead of conducting a sustained all-out war against the genuine terrorists behind 9/11, President Bush chose to terrorize the American people. The President, Vice President CHENEY and Secretary Rumsfeld painted lurid nightmares of al Qaeda's attacking U.S. cities with insidious anthrax or clouds of deadly nerve gas. All of this was portrayed as coming courtesy of Saddam Hussein, unless we destroyed the Iraq regime. They also wielded the ultimate threat that Iraq would imminently endanger America and our closest allies with nuclear weapons. Members of Congress who voiced deep distrust of those claims were privately briefed with even more vivid descriptions of the deadly threats that Saddam posed to American security.

In public speech after speech, the President and his supporting players assured America's anxious citizens that attacking Iraq was absolutely necessary to prevent the imminent threat of Iraq's weapons of mass destruction from harming them and their loved ones.

In addition, President Bush was determined to convince the public that Saddam was personally behind, or at least intimately involved in 9/11. He and Vice President CHENEY repeated that mantra incessantly. No wonder that about half of the country still believes that Saddam was involved, although our intelligence community has emphasized that there is no credible evidence that is true.

The manipulation was massive and malicious. The motive was simple. The Administration wanted to attack Iraq for a variety of ideological and geopolitical reasons. But the President knew that the American people would not willingly risk shedding the blood of thousands of Americans and Iraqis without the immediate threat of deadly attack on the United States. As Deputy Secretary of Defense Wolfowitz recently admitted to an interviewer in an unguarded moment, when the threat of weapons of mass destruction was chosen as the banner to lead a march to war, it was chosen for ''bureaucratic reasons,'' not because the danger was imminent or paramount.

The President and his Cabinet were well aware that these claims either rested on flimsy projections or came from sources that most of our Intelligence Community disdained. The President and his Cabinet knew that in some cases those discredited sources' assertions were flatly contradicted by the professional assessments of the intelligence Community experts at CIA, the Defense Intelligence Agency and the State Department, and were only supported by a rogue special office established under Secretary Rumsfeld precisely to ''find'' or reinterpret intelligence in order to support the Administration's determination to invade Iraq.

When war came, our own military field commanders were surprised by the fierce, often deadly, resistance that our troops faced from Saddam's ''militia.'' We, and our British allies, were surprised when the Iraqi people in Basra and elsewhere did not rise up to welcome our troops with open arms. Most of all, our military commanders, the Congress and the American people all were surprised when no weapons of mass destruction (WMD) were found. Now, as each day passes, and no WMD has been found, that surprise has turned to suspicion, to concern and finally to outrage at the deception practiced by the Bush Administration.

In response, President Bush, Vice President CHENEY, Secretary Rumsfeld, and their spokespersons have offered one excuse after another. As reporters and whistle-blowers have exposed the flaws in each excuse, the White House has scrambled to create another, with the confusing speed of a kaleidoscope's changing patterns. Law students are taught to plead in the alternative: ''I never borrowed your pot.'' ''Besides, it wasn't cracked when I returned it.'' ''Anyway, it was not cracked when I borrowed it in the first place.'' The Bush Administration has learned that lesson well:

The Bush White House assures us that weapons of mass destruction will inevitably be found.

At the same time, the Bush White House argues that they never really said Iraq had such weapons in 2002, only that they had programs to develop those weapons.

Finally, the Bush White House argues that it doesn't matter whether Iraq did or did not have such weapons posing a threat to the United States, because Saddam was a repressive ruler and its good that the world is rid of him.

They cannot succeed with this shell game because they cannot outrun the truth. There are too many previous contradictory statements, too many reports leaked by outraged veteran intelligence analysts, and too great a record of established facts. The Administration's arrogantly crafted script is unraveling. President Bush and his courtiers now have learned the wisdom of the Scottish poet Robert Burns, who warned:

''Oh what a tangled web we weave, when first we practice to deceive.''

Now, the Administration's final refuge is that the public thinks the war was justified even if no weapons are found. Obviously, those poll results reflect the American people's relief that our military's losses, and the loss of Iraqi civilians, regrettable as they are, have not been even greater. They reflect understandable revulsion at the horrors of Saddam's regime. Nevertheless, continued ethnic conflict and violence, ambushes of American soldiers, political disarray, malnutrition and disease mount daily in the aftermath of this ''easy war.'' Also, the Bush White House is forced to acknowledge the re-emergence of al Qaeda's terrorist threat. So the American people have begun to focus on how badly it appears that they, and their congressional representatives, may have been misled by a president anxious to stampede America into war.

In any event, regardless of the final tally on the war in Iraq, there is a growing awareness that this disturbing presidential conduct raises issues that transcend any particular hostilities in which America might engage. It raises the most profound constitutional questions. How can the separation of powers and checks and balances designed to protect our Republic continue to do, if the Executive can work its will through falsehood, deception and concealment?

Equally pressing is a determination of the appropriate remedy, should the Administration's assurances to Congress and to the electorate prove to have been as knowingly false as now seems to be the case. In the days ahead, I shall consult with my colleagues, with legal scholars, political scientists and historians, in order to weigh the appropriate actions necessary to prevent this or any future Administration from usurping the power of Congress and the power of the people to decide public policy on the basis of accurate knowledge.

An accurately informed public is the essence of our democracy. It is most essential on the ultimate question of peace or war. To deceive the Congress and the public about the facts underlying that momentous decision is to transgress one of the president's supreme constitutional responsibilities. I believe the House Committee on the Judiciary should consider whether this situation has reached that dimension.

That question is especially acute at this time because President Bush's disturbing doctrine of ''preventive war'' means he plans to persuade the Congress and the electorate that additional ''preventive wars'' are necessary. Will that advocacy be based on deception and false statements, too? The prospect is frightening.

Finally, I note the provocative analysis on this point recently offered by former Counsel to the President John Dean, who has carefully analyzed the nature and context of the President's many assertions about the threats allegedly posed by Iraq and the constitutional implications should they prove false upon further examination. It deserves wide dissemination.

IN SUPPORT OF H.R. 1738, ''THE AMERICAN PARITY ACT''

HON. LOUISE McINTOSH SLAUGHTER

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, we all know that it will take years, if not decades, for Iraq to be restored and rebuilt in the wake of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Our nation's desire to restore and rebuild Iraq—for the Iraqi people—is to be commended. It reflects the most dearly held values in American society.

As Americans, we want to make the world a better place. We want people to live full, healthy lives without fear of violence and hunger. We want children to have full stomachs, clear heads and the educational resources to realize their potential. We believe that healthcare should not be available to only the rich.

Certainly, as a nation, we want to elevate the quality of life for the Iraqi people, who bear the scars of years of hunger, violence and fear. At the same time, we must ask, what is being done to end the hunger, violence and fear that dominates the lives of far too many Americans?

As USAID makes the first down-payment of $1.7 billion that the United States has dedicated to the housing, education, health care, and the infrastructure of rebuilding Iraq, we must ask—what is the Administration's plan to ''Rebuild America ''?

Here at home, our schools are closing, summer school activities are being shut down, hospitals are not able to provide the health care, and state and local first responder budgets are being stretched thin.

Over the past two years, 3.1 million Americans have lost their jobs, nearly 5 million Americans have lost their health care coverage, and 2 million families that were living the American Dream have dropped out of the middle class into poverty.

This is not progress. We need a plan to ''Rebuild America.''

Enacting more tax cuts, as the Administration favors, is illogical. How can a $550 billion tax cut that primarily changes the tax treatment of corporate dividends stimulate the economy? How will this tax cut help state and local authorities address the shortfalls in our nation's critical infrastructure? Twenty billion dollars, as provided in the tax package, is wholly inadequate. Moreover, it is a drop in the bucket as compared to our $1.7 trillion commitment to Iraq.

Mr. Speaker, while I believe that rebuilding Iraq will be important to secure lasting peace in the region, it must not come at the expense of rebuilding America.

My colleague, RAHM EMANUEL, has introduced legislation to require that for every dollar spent rebuilding Iraq, at least one dollar is spent addressing the health care crisis in America, urgent school construction, funding for first responders, and other domestic priorities.

In looking over USAID's plans for Iraq, I cannot understand how the Administration can justify building 12,500 new schools in Baghdad, without doing anything for children in America. Today, far too many America children are forced to study in trailers because their school districts simply do not have the funds to build a new school.

How can the Administration justify providing health care services to 13 million Iraqis while 42 million Americans struggle to live without health care? It's indefensible. Why, just today, Paul Bremer, the U.S. civil administrator of Iraq, announced plans to invest $100 million to create jobs in Iraq.

IN IRAQ?

Mr. Speaker, how can the Administration justify launching this ambitious initiative in Iraq when there are thousands of workers in Western New York that have been unemployed for over two years?

Mr. Speaker, the Administration must not sit idly by and let America fall apart, just as unprecedented resources are being dedicated to reconstructing Iraq. I strongly believe that enactment of H.R. 1738 will help us make significant strides in the effort to restore this nation.

We must rebuild America. We owe it to the men and women who fought in Iraq, risking their lives to protect our homeland. We owe it to our children. We owe it to our seniors. We owe it to all Americans.

THE DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS CHIROPRACTIC EMPLOYMENT ACT

HON. JERRY MORAN

OF KANSAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. MORAN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Department of Veterans Affairs Chiropractic Employment Act. I do so to prompt the Department of Veterans Affairs to make chiropractic care available to America's veterans.

Currently, thousands of veterans enrolled in the VA health care system could benefit from chiropractic care. Millions of Americans use the services of chiropractors. However, veterans who are enrolled in VA's health care system are unable to receive this specialty care. Numerous studies have shown that chiropractic is an effective therapy, and can be an effective approach to low back pain, spasm, and other maladies of the spinal region, including health problems caused by the aging process and physical exertion. This bill would grant specific employment authority in VA for chiropractors as clinicians under Title 38 of the United States Code.

Signed into law in 1999, section 303 of Public Law 106–117, the Veterans Millennium Health Care and Benefits Act, required the VA Under Secretary for Health to establish a defined policy regarding the role of chiropractic care for veterans enrolled in the Veterans Health Administration. Issued almost a year later, VHA Directive 2000–014, established what the Department deemed a policy on chiropractic care. However, the Committee on Veterans' Affairs found that declaration to be woefully inadequate and less than a policy. It was a way for VA to further delay the advent of VA chiropractic services for veterans. As a result, Congress enacted section 204 of the Department of Veterans Affairs Health Care Programs Act of 2001 (Public Law 107–135). This statute required the Secretary of VA to create a program to provide chiropractic care and services for veterans who are enrolled in VA's health care system, and specified that each of VA's 21 Veterans Integrated Service Networks put at least one chiropractic care program in place. This law also required the establishment of a Chiropractic Advisory Committee within the Department, and charged the Committee to provide assistance to the Secretary in the development and implementation of the chiropractic health program the law authorized, including recommendations on scope of practice, qualifications, privileging and credentialing matters, among other factors that might influence the employment of chiropractors and the deployment of the new program nationwide.

While some progress has been made by the advisory committee on chiropractic care, the Department is now contending that formal organizational, qualification, and classification studies are needed due to VA's lack of a specified employment authority in Title 38 of the United States Code for chiropractors. Other unnamed technical and professional fields are already specifically authorized. Such an undertaking by VA may require extensive usage of resources and much time investment on the part of the Central Office, advisory committee, Office of Personnel Management staffs, as well as outside consultants. A number of Members of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee believe we can remedy this situation with the bill I am introducing today, to speed VA's decision-making on establishing chiropractic clinical care positions within the staff of the Department.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased today to introduce this legislation that would address the authority for VA to appoint chiropractors in the Veterans Health Administration of the Department so that those veterans who are in need of chiropractic care may indeed and at last receive it in VA facilities. This bill will allow a fair compensation schedule with other comparable categorical providers already authorized in Title 38. Furthermore, this bill will permit the Secretary to appoint chiropractors on a full-time basis. Currently, chiropractors are only available to veterans on a fee or contract basis, thereby causing VA additional administrative expenses and inconveniencing the veterans who need this care. With this bill chiropractors may also be appointed to intern or residency positions, or on a part time or intermittent basis, as dictated by need. My bill will afford to chiropractors practicing in VA facilities the same privileges and responsibilities of other VA caregivers.

I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation. My bill will provide an additional, needed specialty care program for our nation's veterans, who are most deserving of this benefit.

Had I been present for the votes, I would have voted ''aye'' on rollcall votes 249, 250, and 251.

CONGRATULATING AETNA ON THE OCCASION OF ITS 150TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. JOHN B. LARSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. LARSON of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today on behalf of the Connecticut delegation to congratulate Aetna as it celebrates a milestone. On June 14, 2003 Aetna Inc. will observe the 150th anniversary of its founding.

The year 1853 was an extraordinary one for America. Our country was 77 years old and on the brink of Civil War. Despite the strife of the times a handful of leading business, civic and cultural leaders founded a company that would evolve into Aetna Inc., one of the nation's largest health care and employee benefits companies serving over thirteen million Americans with medical coverage, over eleven million group customers and eleven million dental members, all served by over a half million health care service providers.

Since 1853 Aetna has never lost sight of its customers, always striving to meet their changing needs. The people of Aetna have been inspired by the fact that what they do is truly important: helping people protect against the risks and uncertainties of life and promising to be there when needed the most.

Today Aetna is one of the nation's premier providers of health care and related benefits, dedicated to helping people achieve health and financial security. This occasion offers us the opportunity to thank Aetna for this commitment.

It is with great pleasure that we commend the employees of Aetna for their excellence and determination with which they perform their work. In its 150 years of existence Aetna has become an indispensable asset to the people and culture of Connecticut. Its contributions to both the business world and the fabric of life in our home state of Connecticut have been tremendous. It is therefore with great appreciation that we offer congratulations to Aetna on the occasion of its 150th Anniversary and wish Aetna and all those associated with it continued success for many years to come.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN SEHE JONG HA

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of John Sehe Jong Ha in recognition of his dedication to his community and his commitment to world peace.

John's life is best defined by his service to both his immediate community and the global community. John is currently an Ambassador for Peace for the Inter-religious and International Federation for World Peace. The goal of the organization is to develop world peace by harmonizing both the spiritual and material dimensions of life. He is also a member of the Global Cooperation Society Club. The goal of this group is to establish social harmony and friendship among nations around the world. Additionally, he is a member of the Advisory Council on Democratic and Peaceful Unification U.S.A New York Area Councils. The Council advises the president of The Republic of Korea on issues pertaining to the unification of North and South Korea.

John is the CEO of Korean American Senior Citizens Society of Greater New York. He is responsible for overseeing the operation for the benefit of its 2400 members. He is also on the senior advisory council of The Korean-American Youth Foundation. John also serves as president of the Korean-American Traditional Art Development Association. This organization preserves traditional Korean Art and develops talent among the 1st, 2nd and 3rd Korean generations throughout the United States. He is also the chairman of the Greater New York TaeKwon-Do Association. He is responsible for the association's membership of 300 grandmasters.

John has been honored by the Republic of Korea with a Certificate of Official Commendation and a Certificate of Appreciation. Our government has awarded him a certificate of Appreciation as well.

John came to the United States in 1956 and became a citizen in 1972. He began his professional career at McCann-Erickson Advertising, Inc. in 1962. He followed this position as the CEO/President/Producer of Korean Television Broadcasting Corporation of New York from 1974 to 1983. For his last professional job, John was CEO/President of Galaxy Children's Shoes, Inc. from 1984 to 1995. Currently, he is retired.

John is married and has two sons. He enjoys golf, table tennis, and travel. He is fluent in English and Korean and speaks some Spanish.

Mr. Speaker, John Sehe Jong Ha is committed to assisting the Korean-American community in New York and working toward world peace. As such, he is more than worthy of receiving our recognition today and I urge my colleagues to join me in honoring this truly remarkable person.

HONORING THE LIFE OF VICENTA B. PEREDO

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to inform the House that Vicenta B. Peredo recently passed away. She was also known as ''Seabee Betty'' and for years she had provided a home away from home for the Seabees in Guam. She frequently held fiestas for the deployed battalions, which were always well attended, and gave her world renowned status within the Seabees. She was also annually crowned queen of the Seabees Ball. It was said that stories circulated about Seabee Betty even in Gulf Port, Mississippi.

Vicenta Peredo lived in the village of Yona, where she held these fiestas since 1951. At the fiestas she served all different types of local food to give the Seabees the experience of Chamorro hospitality and to make them feel right at home.

Even the Seabees helped to make sure the fiestas would continue when her house was damaged by a typhoon. After the roof of her kitchen collapsed, one of her daughters jokingly said that the Seabees might fix it tomorrow. It actually took the Seabees two days to fix her kitchen.

Vicenta Peredo also had fiestas that coincided with the birthdays of the Saints. She would pray for nine days, a novena, then cook a large amount of food and invite the Seabees over to enjoy the fiesta. She also wanted to give the Seabees a place to get away from the Naval Base and enjoy the rest of the island. She was a woman who always thought about the Seabees first and in return she received the rare distinction of being named an honorary Navy Seabee.

I join the Peredo family and all the people of Guam in sorrow that Vicenta Peredo is no longer with us, but I am proud to say that she touched so many people during her life. I am also very proud of the way that she reached out to the Seabees and her ability to be a great symbol of the generosity that the people of Guam have to extend to the visitors of the island.

We love you Vicenta and our thoughts and prayers are with your family. I am sure she will be remembered by the Seabees with the honor and generosity she showed them in life. She showed us all that one person can make a difference, that one person can affect many lives.

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, there is little doubt that true head-to-head facilities-based competition benefits consumers. This is certainly true in the cable industry, where prices in areas where there are two facilities-based cable systems competing head-to-head are 17 percent lower than in areas where there is only one cable system.

In the world of residential high-speed Internet access, facilities-based competition is coming. Right now, cable dominates the market. Cable serves about two out of every three broadband consumers. One reason cable dominates the market is because cable broadband is essentially unregulated, where as broadband provided by telephone companies, called DSL, is regulated as if it were regular telephone service.

The Federal Communications Commission is in the process of creating regulatory parity between the two competitors. I encourage the FCC to continue down this road towards regulatory parity among broadband providers. We are seeing the benefits of this deregulation already. For example, Verizon just announced a 40 percent price cut in the cost of their DSL product. Consumers will have a real choice between two distinct head-to-head competitors.

In the regular telephone world, however, the FCC decided not to stimulate head-to-head facilities-based competition. Instead, the FCC left in place rules that permit a competitor to use the existing telephone network at a substantial discount, up to 55 percent. The problem with this is that it lacks a sufficient incentive for a competing telephone company to build any facilities because it costs less to use the existing network at these below-cost prices. Regulatory pricing arbitrage does not result in true competition. The FCC needs to stop making the incumbent telephone companies subsidize long distance carriers' entry into the local markets. If the long distance carriers want to use the incumbent's network, they should do so at a reasonable price, not one that shifts money from the local telephone company to the long distance carriers. This system cannot be maintained.

The FCC should adopt rules that give incentives for long distance carriers and others to build their own infrastructure. Then, there will be true head-to-head facilities-based competition. Consumers will benefit with lower prices, better service and more choices.

In addition, there are national security and safety benefits to multiple networks. If one network is knocked out, communications can be routed over the other network.

I urge the FCC to adopt rules that ensure the existence of true, head-to-head facilities-based competition for all types of communications services, especially voice telephony and broadband.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE RARITAN HIGH SCHOOL BOYS BASEBALL TEAM

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the members of the Raritan High School Boys Baseball team from Hazlet, New Jersey in the 6th district of New Jersey. On Tuesday June 10, 2003, they completed a season of hard work and personal sacrifice with the first State Baseball Championship in school history. Two weeks prior they won their first Central New Jersey Sectional Championship in over a decade continuing their improbable underdog journey defeating Spotswood High School. The true measure of their achievement came this past Tuesday when this Cinderella story finally was granted the glass slipper. Down for much of the game, the team rallied to defeat statewide ranked Hanover Park to win the school's first ever state championship.

This occasion cannot be fully appreciated unless I recognize the graduating seniors and leaders of this gifted group of student athletes. Two of the team's coaches, T.J. O'Donnell and Tim Hildner, members of previous Raritan championship teams, returned to their alma mater to guide this team to the state championship never realized during their tenure as players. Remaining coaches, long time teachers at the school, Andrew Milewski and Robert Generelli gave this group the extra guidance that made them champions. Though the team's full potential was put into motion by the group's undisputed leaders, such as first basemen Gregory Casha, shortstop Alex Mautone, pitcher Sean Walsh, left fielder Steve Plagianakos, utility fielder Ernie Scelia, first basemen Patrick Wood, and center fielder Jared Pflug all of who which will be graduating this June, moving on to several of our state's great universities and leaving their current teammates with a title to defend. The contributions of underclassmen such as second basemen Sal Straniero, catcher Sean Hanrahan, designated hitter Ricky Russomano, center fielder Steve Bilowus, right fielder Andrew Mandeville, and third basemen Michael Nunes were the extra pieces to the puzzle that together turned a small high school on the Jersey Shore into a state powerhouse in one short season.

Today I speak to you as a proud representative of the 6th district of New Jersey due to the inspiration that these young men have contributed to the residents in Township of Hazlet. So on this day, June 11, 2003 I wish congratulations to the players, coaches, and parents of the 2003 Group II State Champions, the Raritan High School Rockets!

RECOGNIZING MEN'S HEALTH WEEK

HON. RANDY "DUKE" CUNNINGHAM

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, on May 10, 1972 I flew my 300th mission over North Vietnam. I shot down three MIGs that day to become the first Ace of the Vietnam War. Shortly after my third kill, I was hit by enemy fire and forced to eject along with my backseat, Willie Driscoll. As we parachuted down into enemy territory, I did not know whether I was going to live, die, or possibly be taken as a prisoner of war. It was indeed the scariest moment in my life—until the day my doctor looked me in the eye and told me that I had cancer.

I am one of thousands of men who was diagnosed following a simple prostate-specific antigen (PSA) test. During my annual examination in the summer of 1998, my doctor noted a slight elevation in my PSA test. He followed up with a sonogram and an MRI, neither of which revealed the disease. It was only after a prostate biopsy that it was determined that I had cancer. Following the diagnosis, in consultation with my family, I decided to pursue surgery as my treatment option. I am fortunate—early detection saved my life. My doctor was familiar with PSA results, and I had healthcare coverage for my treatments. Early detection and treatment meant the difference between life and death.

This year, 198,100 men will be diagnosed with prostate cancer and 31,500 will die from this terrible disease. But prostate cancer is only a small component of the men's health crisis: Men have a higher death rate than women do for every single one of the ten leading causes of death in this country. We're twice as likely to die of heart disease—the number one killer—and 40 percent more likely to die of cancer. Life expectancy has been longer for women than for men for several decades. Sadly, the largest part of the problem is that men do not take particularly good care of themselves. Only one-half of all men have received preventative health care services in the past year.

I am proud to work with the Men's Health Network to raise awareness regarding the need for regular health screenings, and it is an honor for me to host the annual men's health screenings on Capitol Hill. I urge my colleagues to visit the screenings, and to help me raise awareness about the fact that screenings like these can save lives.

HONORING CORNELIA GRUMMAN OF THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to Cornelia Grumman of the Chicago Tribune, winner of the 2003 Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing.

A native of Evanston, a resident of Chicago, a graduate of Duke, Cornelia Grumman has graced the Chicago Tribune for many years with her thought provoking, influential editorials on the reform of the death penalty. As a veteran reporter whose journalistic prowess earned her much recognition, Cornelia was made a member of the Chicago Tribune editorial board in 2000.

Cornelia's Pulitzer citation reads: For distinguished editorial writing, the test of excellence being clearness of style, moral purpose, sound reasoning, and power to influence public opinion in what the writer conceives to be the right direction. Awarded to Cornelia Grumman of the Chicago Tribune for her powerful, freshly challenging editorials on reform of the death penalty.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in honoring Cornelia Grumman on her achievements and wish Cornelia many years of future success.

TRIBUTE TO JUAN GUILLEN

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of Juan Guillen in recognition of his significant and diverse contributions to his community in the fields of media, business, and arts.

Representing and reaching out to the Dominican community, Juan is currently publisher and Chief Executive Officer of the Dominican Times Magazine, La Revista Offical de Dominicanos. From his office in the East New York section of Brooklyn, New York, he heads the regional, bi-lingual publication, Dominican Times, which targets Dominican-Americans. This publication is distributed in seven states in the northeast and its voice is very influential in the Dominican-American community.

In the world of enterprise, Juan has owned and operated various businesses from 1982 through 2002 throughout Brooklyn and Queens. He has developed diverse companies, ranging from three successful dry cleaning businesses to a fitness club and a retail store for clothing and sneakers.

Juan has also made a contribution to the arts in his community through his independent feature film, ''A Madness in Brooklyn.'' This comedy, filmed entirely on location in Brooklyn, was written, directed and produced by Juan.

Mr. Speaker, Juan Guillen has made several important contributions to his community. As such, he is more than worthy of receiving our recognition today and I urge my colleagues to join me in honoring this truly remarkable person.

INTRODUCTION OF THE INSULAR AREAS COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT ACT

HON. MADELEINE Z. BORDALLO

OF GUAM

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Ms. BORDALLO. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing legislation that will authorize qualified public housing entities in Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands to participate in the ''Section 108 Loan Guarantee Program.'' Congresswoman DONNA CHRISTENSEN of the Virgin Islands and Congressman ENI FALEOMAVAEGA of American Samoa have joined me as original co-sponsors of this legislation, which is important to the economic development of the insular areas.

Currently, all qualified entitlement public housing entities in the States are authorized to apply for government-backed loans to finance long-term projects under the Community Development Assistance Act of 1974 (P.L. 93–383), which established the Section 108 Loan Guarantee Program. Under ''Section 108,'' the States and their local governments may apply for amounts up to five times their annual allotments of Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funding.

Guam receives CDBG funding on an annual basis from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). However, many projects for which the funding could be utilized cost more than the annual allotment. My bill would authorize the insular areas that receive CDBG funding to apply for government-backed loans to help finance more expensive long-term projects. Future CDBG grant money could then be used as collateral in the insular areas, similar to how it is currently used in several of the States.

Officials at HUD have informed me that Guam, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands are excluded on the basis that their CDBG grant funds are authorized under a separate sub-section from the States. My bill would clarify that States and Territories would have access to the HUD financing program irrespective of this technical distinction.

My bill, the Insular Areas Community Development Act of 2003, would strengthen the law to provide for the same flexibility for the insular areas as is currently granted to the States in using CDBG funds. Support for this bill would recognize the need for long-term financing of community development projects important to the economic progress of the insular areas, and will result in improved planning and more efficient use of limited resources.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. ERNIE FLETCHER

OF KENTUCKY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, June 5, 2003, had I been present for rollcall vote No. 248, I would have voted the following way: Rollcall vote No. 248 ''aye''.

CHILD TAX CREDIT

HON. SILVESTRE REYES

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I wish to express my deep disappointment with the tax bill recently signed into law by the President. While providing approximately $350 billion in tax cuts, this law neglects many of our hard-working, low-income families. At the same time that the bill provides tax cuts of $93,500 to the 200,000 taxpayers making over $1 million in our country, this bill leaves behind 8 million children by denying their families full access to the child tax credit.

This law fails to apply the child tax credit to some of America's neediest families—those earning between $10,500 and $26,625 per year. Of the 8 million children left behind in this tax law, one million live with parents who are on active duty service or are veterans. The children of our working families, especially those of our armed services, deserve our greatest support.

There are approximately 16,500 military families with children at Fort Bliss in my district. Anxiously awaiting news about the status of the members of the 507th Maintenance Company in late March, these families understand, more than most, what it means to sacrifice for our nation. These are the families of the brave men and women who fight to defend our freedoms, and they certainly do not deserve to be left out of this tax cut. I urge my colleagues to pass legislation immediately to extend the child tax credit to families making between $10,500 and $26,625 a year. Let us send a message to our hard-working families that they count too and that we recognize their efforts.

It is my sincere hope that we can work together to provide our hard-working families with a fair and equitable child tax credit.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE REVEREND DR. HENRY P. DAVIS, JR.

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I proudly pause to recognize an exemplary individual, Reverend Dr. Henry P. Davis, Jr. This year marks Reverend Davis's 30th Anniversary as Pastor for the Saint Paul Baptist Church of Atlantic Highlands, New Jersey. On July 13, 2003 Reverend Davis will be honored for his commitment and extraordinary service to his community over the past 30 years.

Reverend Davis's educational achievement has aided him tremendously in serving his congregation and surrounding communities. After earning his Bachelor of Science degree from Huston-Tillotson College in Austin, Texas, the Reverend went on to receive a Master of Education degree from Prairie View A&M University. He was later awarded a Master of Divinity degree from the New Brunswick Theological Seminary and a honorary Doctor of Divinity degree from Rankin's Theological Clinic. Reverend Davis is also the recipient of a Doctor of Ministry degree from Drew University.

Reverend Davis has stood out amongst his peers for his exceptional leadership skills. Over the past few years Reverend Davis has served as the Moderator of the Seacoast Missionary Baptist Association, which consists of 32 churches throughout Monmouth and Ocean counties. He is the former Treasurer of the General Baptist Convention of New Jersey and served as the Secretary of the Moderator's Auxiliary of the National Baptist Convention, for over a decade. Presently, Reverend Davis serves on the Executive Board of the Hampton University Ministers Conference and the New Jersey Council of Churches.

Reverend Davis has also devoted much of his time to various youth, community service, and civil rights organizations. He currently serves as a Trustee of the Brookdale Community College Foundation and member of the Youth Services Commission of Monmouth County. He is the Vice-President of the Monmouth County Board of Alcohol and Drug Abuse Service. At present Reverend Davis is the Chairman of the Monmouth County Minority Youth Vicinage Committee and is a life member of the NAACP. Through his work with these different groups Reverend Davis has positively influenced the lives of countless individuals.

In addition to the award he will receive on July 13, 2003 Reverend Davis has been the recipient of a number of previous awards for the remarkable work he does. Those awards include the Seacoast Association's Outstanding Service Award; New Jersey's State Federation of Colored Women's Club's Outstanding Community Service Award and Humanitarian Award; as well as recognition from the greater Red Bank NAACP.

Mr. Speaker, on this day I rise up to acknowledge a truly remarkable individual and I ask that my colleagues join me in honoring the distinguished Reverend Dr. Henry P. Davis, Jr. for his 30 years of devoted service to his community.

CONGRATULATING PACIFICARE HEALTH SYSTEMS ON THEIR 25TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. RANDY ''DUKE'' CUNNINGHAM

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate PacifiCare Health Systems on their 25th anniversary as one of the nation's largest consumer health organizations. PacifiCare's primary operations include health insurance products for employer groups and Medicare beneficiaries in eight states and Guam. Currently, PacifiCare has approximately $11 billion in annual revenues, and serves more than 3 million health plan members and over 9 million specialty company members nationwide with dental, vision, behavioral health and pharmacy benefit management services. PacifiCare Health Systems also operates a nonprofit organization, called the PacifiCare Foundation, that is devoted to charitable and educational causes that enhance the health, wellness and welfare of individuals, families, and the public at large.

On June 16, 2003, PacifiCare will celebrate its 25th anniversary as one of the nation's largest consumer health organizations, offering individuals, employers, and Medicare beneficiaries the best in consumer-driven health care and insurance products. PacifiCare Health Systems is also celebrating another important milestone—the 10th anniversary of the PacifiCare Foundation. The PacifiCare Foundation has donated more than 17 million dollars during the past 10 years to charitable and educational causes, with a focus on specific community needs in several areas, including: Health Promotion, Human/Social Service Programs; Senior Programs; Education Programs and Child/Youth Programs.

I take great pleasure in congratulating PacifiCare and its 7,500 employees on the occasion of its 25th anniversary of service to its beneficiaries, and I commend PacifiCare for its outstanding record of contributions to the health and welfare of the people of California.

HONORING JOHN McCORMICK OF THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

HON. WILLIAM O. LIPINSKI

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay special tribute to John McCormick, winner of the Walker Stone Award for editorial writing from the Scripps Howard Foundation.

John McCormick is the deputy editorial page editor of the Chicago Tribune. He joined the Chicago Tribune editorial board in 2000 and was promoted to deputy editor the following year. Prior to joining the Tribune, John worked for several years as the Chicago bureau chief for Newsweek magazine.

A native of Iowa, a graduate of Northwestern University, John gained recognition for his series of editorials on how and why Chicago must respond to its high murder rate.

Once a small-town boy, John tackled big city crime head-on, proving to be a highly regarded and influential asset to Chicago's political leaders, law enforcement officers, and neighborhood groups.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in honoring John McCormick on his achievements and wish John many years of future success.

TRIBUTE TO ROLAND JEROME HILL

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of Roland Jerome Hill in recognition of his service to his nation and his community.

Roland was born in Mount Carmel, Lancaster County, South Carolina. He began his schooling in a one-room schoolhouse. Later, he attended Mather Academy. Through his participation in various civic and political causes, Roland has continued to learn throughout his entire adult life.

Roland also coached high school football, baseball, and track for two years as an official in the South Atlantic Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association (SACIAA). More importantly, he served his country for three and a half years in WWII in the 183rd Aviation Engineers Battalion in the China-India-Burma theatre.

After arriving in New York he became involved in a long list of political and civic affairs. He has served his community through a wide range of activities that include: Master Plumber Licensing and Control Board; Fire Suppression Board; Vice President of the Local Two of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union; Vice-President of the 45th Assembly Democratic Club; Co-Chairman of the Federal Government Scatter Housing Program; Chairman of the South Shore Fair Housing Committee; Coney Island Hospital Advisory Board; Sixty on Aging; HRA Advisory Board and HRA Subcommittee on Social Services; and as an Elder in the Homecrest Presbyterian Church.

Some of the positions he has filled in the political arena include: Co-Chairman of the Finance Committee for Shirley Chisholm for Congress, Co-Chairman of the Mel Durbin and Eugene McCarthy campaign, and Director of Senior Citizen Groups in the 10th Congressional District.

Mr. Speaker, Roland Jerome Hill is committed to improving the lives of the elderly population in his community. As such, he is more than worthy of receiving our recognition today and I urge my colleagues to join me in honoring this truly remarkable gentleman.

TRIBUTE TO SUSAN S. LAFFOON

HON. ROB PORTMAN

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the outstanding service of Susan Laffoon, a friend and distinguished constituent, who is stepping down from her duties as Vice President for Public Affairs at the Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce on June 13, 2003.

Susan is a Cincinnati native, graduated from the University of Cincinnati with a BA in History, and has served our community with distinction all her adult life.

For over a quarter century, Susan has dedicated herself to the Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, where her accomplishments are impressive. She began at the Chamber in 1977 as a Specialist for Minority Business Development, took over as Program Director for Leadership Cincinnati in 1978, and became Group Executive for Administration in 1982. In 1984, she was promoted to Vice President of Government and Community Affairs. Her title changed in 2002 to Vice President, Public Affairs. In 1997, Susan was appointed Acting President of the Chamber for three months. Her commitment to the Chamber and our community is outstanding. Michael Fisher, the Chamber's President and CEO, says it best: ''Susan leads by example in her collaborative style, willingness to go the extra mile, and enthusiasm for her work. She has built strong relationships with key volunteers, government officials and her staff. Equally important, she has helped deliver impressive results for our region—from State Capital bill funding wins to revised environmental policies that better balance the needs of all stakeholders.''

In addition to her service at the Chamber, Susan has been active with a number of other important community organizations. Past and current leadership posts include: Trustee of the United Way and Community Chest of Greater Cincinnati; Trustee of WGUC-FM; founding Trustee and officer of the Cincinnati Horticultural Society; Trustee and alumna of the Seven Hills School; Trustee of the American Red Cross, Cincinnati Area Chapter; and Trustee of the Cincinnati Arts Festival, Inc. Susan also has been Trustee of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra for 20 years, and has given a great deal of time (over 15 years) to the Fine Arts Fund, where she was elected a Life Trustee last year.

Mr. Speaker, I hope my colleagues will join me in recognizing Susan's many accomplishments as she steps down as Vice President for Public Affairs at the Greater Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce on June 13, 2003. I know Susan will continue to make a difference in our community. All of us in the Cincinnati area thank her for her dedication to improving our community and wish her the very best in her future endeavors.

HONORING ANDREW T. RINGGOLD

HON. MIKE THOMPSON

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Ms. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Andrew T. Ringgold, Superintendent, Redwood National and State Parks, Crescent City, California, who is being honored on the occasion of his retirement after 36 years with the National Park Service.

A native of Washington, D.C., Andy Ringgold grew up in Williamsburg, Virginia and received his Bachelors Degree from Bucknell University. He began his outstanding career in the National Park Service as a Park Ranger at Sequoia National Park in California in 1967. In 1972 Andy became District Ranger at Lassen Volcanic National Park and then served as Chief Ranger at Petrified Forest National Park in Arizona from 1976 to 1979. After serving as Chief Ranger at New River Gorge in West Virginia, he became Staff Park Ranger, Division of Ranger Activities at the Headquarters Office in Washington, D.C. in 1984. In 1987 Andy Ringgold served as Chief of the Branch of Resource and Visitor Protection at the Headquarters Office and then, in 1989, became Superintendent at Cape Cod National Seashore in Massachusetts. In 1995 he assumed the duties of Superintendent at Redwood National Park in California.

In 2002, Mr. Ringgold received the United States Department of the Interior Honor Award for Meritorious Service in recognition of his contributions to the management and protection of resources at Redwood National Park. He spearheaded the use of alternative methods and partnerships to achieve park goals. He has received numerous awards in recognition of his outstanding and innovative leadership.

Andrew Ringgold has guided the management of Redwood National and State Parks, which includes three California state parks and the national park as one unit, a precedent setting agreement that has evolved into a model partnership of cooperation and efficiency. It is a model that has set the standard for similar partnerships in other regions across the nation.

Andrew Ringgold has served the National Park Service with honesty, integrity and expertise. His high standards and dedication to his profession are widely recognized.

Mr. Speaker, it is appropriate at this time that we recognize Andrew T. Ringgold for his vision and leadership and for his contributions to the preservation of the natural resources of our Nation.

WOMEN PIONEERING THE FUTURE

HON. HEATHER WILSON

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mrs. WILSON of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, in honor of Women's History Month, I asked New Mexicans to send me nominations of women in New Mexico who have given special service to our community, but may have never received recognition for their good deeds.

On Thursday, April 17, 2003, I had the honor and privilege of recognizing forty-five worthy nominations describing sacrifices and contributions these women have made for our community. The people who nominated the women describe the dedication they have witnessed: volunteer hours for veterans services, service on nonprofit boards, homeless programs, mentors for young women, healthcare providers going above the call of duty, child advocates, volunteers at churches and synagogues, successful business woman, wives, mothers and friends.

Allow me to share information about this year's nominees:

Jan Dodson Barnhart—Jan recently retired as a 30 year employee of the University of New Mexico's General Library. She has worked diligently to promote historic preservation and recognition of the cultural treasures that exist in New Mexico's built environment. She served on the Governor's committee on historical records, with the Oral History Association, and with the Albuquerque Museum Foundation.

Dian Baughman—Dian is a nurse at Paloma Blanca Nursing and Rehab Center. She works numerous hours dedicating time and service to residents of the center to ensure good care and quality of life. During her off hours, she travels the state with her husband to provide medical assistance to homeless veterans during veterans functions.

Tess Ruiz Burleson—Tess is the Chief Financial Officer for Lovelace Respiratory Research and Director of Lovelace Scientific Research. She is also an active Board Member of many community organizations, such as Next Generation Economy Initiative, Behavior Health Research, Wells Fargo Leadership Council, Performance Arts Charter School, and Magnifico/Festival of Arts.

Joann Castillo—Joann is the Library Director at Carnegie Public Library in Las Vegas, NM. Joann is very involved in community activities, such as the Las Vegas San Miguel Literacy Volunteers, Communities that Care and the Las Vegas Youth Commission. She feels that these young men and women are our future and need to be active in community events also.

Alvorn Clifton—Mrs. Clifton has provided the Trumbull Village with a legacy of working for the betterment of children, families and our community. She is a leader making a difference. As the President of the Trumbull Village Neighborhood Association, she advances the lives of children through support and guidance. Each year, she hosts Halloween, Christmas and Easter parties so the neighborhood kids have a safe place to celebrate.

Leslie Cunningham-Sabo—Leslie works tirelessly as a doctor at Pediatrics Department at UNM for obesity and diabetes prevention program which works with the pueblos and the Navajo Nation. She volunteers at Project Share, Asbury Pie Café, and for anybody that needs a helping hand.

Kathy Cyman—Kathy is an Instructor and Adjunct Faculty Member at UNM. As a teacher and practicing artist, she maintains a high standard of professionalism. She is a tireless worker and role model for women who struggle to make a living. She gives her all to her community and to aspiring educators.

Rebecca Dakota—Rebecca is the former Director of the NM Commission on the Status of Women. She is supportive of women and works diligently to address the issue of domestic violence. She has helped to make police departments around NM more aware of the problem so that training could be implemented for officers. She has worked to assist poor women with job training partnerships and scholarship assistance.

Brenda Delaurentis—Brenda is Manager of the Payroll Services and Financial Training Organization at Sandia National Labs. She has worked with ''Shared Vision,'' spearheaded Sandia's involvement in the Science and Technology Magnet School initiative sponsored by DOE, and helped organize the first ''School to World'' event, a career fair targeting 8th graders. Brenda has also been a Girl Scout Leader for seven years.

Gail Doherty—Gail is the state coordinator for Project Linus, which provides handmade blankets for needy children. In her 5 years, 5000 blankets have been distributed to fire victims in Los Alamos, September 11 Pentagon families and numerous others. Each week, she visits the Senior Centers to work with the knitters and weavers to make blankets and she takes their therapy-trained dog to Carrie Tingley to visit the children.

Viola Edwards—Mrs. Edwards works tirelessly each month to provide food boxes with the Share Program for needy or low income families. Monthly, she orders 16–17 food boxes and distributes them to families that can use it. She has also collected and recycled clothing to provide for the clothing needs of children and families.

Shannon Enright Smith—As the Executive Director of Resources, Inc., Shannon has been a passionate voice for victims of domestic violence, especially for the children who witness domestic violence. In a typical day, Shannon performs duties from walking a victim through the legal system, doing interviews for local media, to testifying before the state legislature.

Deirdre Firth—Deirdre, a Senior Economic Developer for the City of Albuquerque, works tirelessly to bring economic vitality to New Mexico. She represents the City in the development of the Sandia Science and Technology Park, a public/private partnership which is bringing thousands of high-paying technology jobs to New Mexico.

Linda Flanigan—Linda has lived in Albuquerque for most of her life. She has helped teenagers with career and life decisions. She was a Brownie Troop Sponsor and she helps people recover from various addictions and through family problems through her activity and her community church.

Linda Fleisher—Linda is a Crime Free Multi-Housing Coordinator. Her inspiration and driving force were instrumental in bringing a ''rebirth'' to the Alta Monte Neighborhood. She has inspired many landlords to participate in the program, making great strides in improving the quality of life for the residents of the neighborhood.

Annabell Gallegos—Annabell manages the ''Keep Albuquerque Beautiful/Keep America Beautiful'' program for the City of Albuquerque. The department tries to change customer behavior and get the public to ''recycle'' and be aware of what a clean environment means for our future. Teacher and student training, field trips and community clean-ups are just a few of Annabell's many accomplishments.

Cindy Hansen—Cindy is the Resident Care Director at the Cottages of Albuquerque for Alzheimer's Specialty Care. She cares and helps the families get through the ''long death.'' She spends what little free time she has talking to and holding the hands of residents. Her love for both the residents and their families is apparent.

Blesila Hartom—Blesila has served as a registered nurse for Presbyterian, Health South and University Hospitals for fifteen years. She is also a proud member of the Filipino-American Association, serving on several committees and participating in numerous fundraising activities. She has become a part of the Filipino Historical Society to establish a foundation that recognizes the importance of Filipino heritage.

Elizabeth Holm—Elizabeth is a computational materials scientist at Sandia National Labs. She is active in the Albuquerque Chapter of the American Society for Metals and she is a mentor of many young women in the sciences. She is very involved in the Albuquerque schools, serving as a guest science speaker, science instructor, book fair host, and debate and speech tournament judge.

Kathleen Holt—Kathleen is a Technologist in the Environmental Decisions and WIPP Support organization. As an adviser to the La Cueva Key Club, she has involved students in leadership training and strategic planning experiences as well as mentoring many of the kids. She teaches students mediation and arbitration techniques and has organized day-long experiential leadership training events for high school students.

Debbie Hughes—Debbie is the dynamic force behind the rise of the New Mexico Agricultural community to the status it is beginning to enjoy today. As Executive Director of the NM Association of Conservation Districts, she has been instrumental in bringing agricultural issues and solutions to the forefront. She has been a leader in crafting and executing this most prominent New Mexico water conservation project.

Diana Jackson—Diana is an Administrator in the Attorney General's office and she manages her tasks with skill and grace. She is also quite active in her church, First United Methodist, taking on many volunteer efforts. Through her commitment to community and church, she has become increasingly involved in the social dilemmas confronting our society and works behind the scenes to make a difference.

Elsie Kear—Elsie came to NM as an R.N. and decided to start nursing at the OB/GYN ward at the Base Hospital (run by the Army at the time). Elsie soon became acquainted with the other 3 major hospitals in Albuquerque by becoming a ''Pool Nurse.'' One of her biggest challenges was flying out of the local airport, picking up patients in NM and Texas and bringing them back to the Veteran's Hospital in Albuquerque.

Blanche Lange—Mrs. Lange served WWI, WWII, Korea, and Vietnam veterans. She also taught nursing at Einstein Medical Center, Philadelphia, and at UNM. At the age of 84, she still provides comfort and support to all who ask. She is an Associate Professor at UNM's College of Nursing, was published in the Journal of Nursing, and she has received commendations from UNM, the VA, and other Veterans organizations.

Dr. Mary Lipscomb—Dr. Lipscomb is the chair of Pathology at the University of New Mexico. In addition, she is the principal investigator for a National Institutes of Health (NIH) Asthma Specialized Center of Research (SCOR) grant. She is an internationally recognized expert in pulmonary immunity who has mentored numerous students, fellows, and faculty.

Laurel Moore—Laurel Moore is the Project Manager for Strengthening Quality in Schools, an initiative that has improved the New Mexico K–12 education system. Laurel has worked tirelessly to improve New Mexico's schools through the use of Quality principles and the Malcolm Baldridge Criteria for Performance Excellence.

Carolyn Moralez—Carolyn has been the primary caregiver for the past two and a half years for her mother who has ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease). This terminal illness has touched Carolyn's life so deeply that she has dedicated herself to raising money to find a cure for the disease, building awareness, and helping other caregivers cope with the life changes this disease has on its victims and their families.

Christine Morgan—Chris is a Distinguished Member of the Technical Staff Systems in the Adaptive Cyber Systems Deployment and Control Organization at Sandia Laboratories. She is a trained facilitator; a Master Trainer for adults and girls for the Girl Scouts; member of the Board of Directors for Girl Scouts of Chaparral Council; and an advisor/leader/Assistant Scoutmaster for Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts.

Tina Nenoff—Tina is a Materials Chemist at Sandia National Laboratories. She is active in mentoring numerous students through Women in Science and Engineering at the University of New Mexico. Tina served as the past President and is currently a volunteer for the Women's Community Association, helping women subjected to domestic violence. Tina also volunteers at St. Martin's Hospitality Center for the homeless.

Carolyn Olona—Carolyn is one of our nursing unsung heroines. Carolyn began her nursing career as a student nurse in September 1961 and has continued to this day in various areas of nursing. Finally, she spent the last twenty one years at Sandia Laboratory as an Occupational Health Nurse. Carolyn is a highly dedicated, professional Registered Nurse. Her focus is always the welfare of the patient, above all else.

Dr. Renee Ornelas—Dr. Ornelas examines children suspected to have been sexually abused. She has been a child sex abuse expert since 1990 and uses her expertise to ensure sex offenders are convicted and the children they scar are well taken care of. Presently, Doctor Ornelas serves as the Director of Para Los Ninos, a specialized clinic which handles the medical exams for children who are victims of sexual abuse.

Georgianna Pena-Kues—Georgianna is recognized for her years of commitment to the well-being of her neighborhood, community, and the Bataan Corrigedor Veterans Association. In addition, as a board member of the Bataan Corrigedor Veterans Association, Georgianna was instrumental in the planning, funding, and publicizing the new memorial in Bataan Park.

Wynona Ratliff—She and her late husband, Jack, were missionaries to South America for almost 20 years. In 1975, they bought Sunset Mesa Schools and turned it into one of the best private schools in New Mexico. They have been involved in a multitude of charitable and community activities including the New Mexico Boys and Girls Ranches.

Martha Romero—Martha has been nominated to be recognized as a "Hometown Hero" with KOB–TV Channel 4. She raised 9 children. She is most famous for her Annual Chili Roasting sales and the hundreds of beautiful quilts that she makes. She gives endlessly to her children, her extended family, her friends and her community.

Patsy Sanchez—Patsy serves as the Lincoln County Planning Director with tremendous responsibilities. Her greatest strength is her unwavering goal toward an accurate accounting of the water resources in the county. She urges commissioners to seek legislative allocations for water and for changing rules regarding land and water issues.

Kaye Sinclair—Kaye has held central positions in Albuquerque Radio Emergency Services, which handles all communications for any Search and Rescue emergency in the state. She has also served on the board of the Emergency Services Council, a meeting of all rescue groups in New Mexico and surrounding areas. Kaye has given at least a decade and a half to rescue and emergency service for New Mexico.

Jackie Lee Barnes Brown Soderstrom—Jackie is known for being a loving and caring person who gives of herself without asking for anything in return. She cared for her mother as she was dying and she is the caregiver to her husband. Among Jackie's accomplishments, she was crowned Miss New Mexico in 1957 and Mrs. New Mexico in 1979.

Amy Tapia—Amy is a Program Manager in the corporate Outreach Organization at Sandia National Laboratories. As the project Leader for School to World, she led a team of business and education representatives in putting on the most successful career familiarization event in the state. Amy also developed the CroSSlinks program to match Sandia scientists, engineers and technicians with schools, teachers, and students to help them appreciate the wonders of science and technology.

Tia Turco—Tia is a teacher at La Cueva High School. She works tirelessly for the benefit of others. In addition to teaching 6 classes a day, Tia serves as the sponsor and coach of the La Cueva High School Speech and Debate team. Her responsibilities include organizing a team of over 30 members.

Jennifer Wade—Jennifer works more than full-time as an officer of a locally headquartered, publicly traded technology company, SBS Technologies. She also serves on her Church's Council, prepares meals for the UNM Campus Ministry. Jennifer also donates her time to Project Share.

Patsy Welch—Patsy works on Kirtland Air Force Base. A few months ago, she noticed that some of the Security Force entry controllers (gate guards) didn't have gloves on during cold days and she felt sorry for their freezing hands. She went to Wal-Mart and bought every black pair of gloves they had and put them in her car. Now, every time she goes through the gate, if the guard doesn't have gloves, she asks if they want a pair.

Dominique Wilson—As the program coordinator for Critical Skills Development at Sandia National Laboratories, Dominique advances workforce development by merging critical skills needs of the national laboratories with the resources of APS, TVI, UNM and Sandia technical staff to create pipeline programs to benefit middle and high school students. She has established advanced learning academies for Albuquerque students, creating opportunities for post-secondary education and technical internships in math and science.

Anne Haines Yatskowitz—Anne is the President and CEO and one of the ACCION New Mexico principal founders. She served on boards of Jewish Family Services and Jewish Federation of Greater Albuquerque. She was a member of the Greater Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce Leadership Albuquerque program and she served as Chair of the Chamber's Maxie Anderson Award Selection Committee.

Elisabeth Zimmer—Elisabeth gives her time to help young pregnant girls and young mothers in Albuquerque. Following a successful career with Intel, she has done volunteer work at Maria Amadea Shelter. Last year, she started a non-profit organization to create a residential program for pregnant teens and mothers. Life Options Academy is the projected goal and it will help many young women in our community.

Lt. Katherine Zimmerman—Kate is an outstanding Air Force Officer supporting Ballistic Missile Defense development. She is the Detachment's blood drive organizer and she collected over 180 pints. She is also a Big Brother/Big Sister volunteer, and recruited 18 volunteers from UNM. Kate was the UNM Spring Storm organizer, recruiting over 700 students, faculty and alumni to perform 82 community service projects.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MIKE ROGERS

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, on the legislative day of Thursday, June 5, 2003, the House voted on H. Res. 258 that provided for the consideration of S. 222 and S. 273. On House rollcall vote No. 245, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

TRIBUTE TO MARA ROSKE

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in honor of Mara Roske in recognition of her dedication to improving her community through both her professional and personal endeavors.

The youngest of four children, Mara was born and raised in Brooklyn, New York. She is married and the mother of one daughter. Her interests include sewing, gardening, and cooking. Growing vegetables in her yard to use in her Southern European cuisine makes Sundays at her home a popular place for friends and family.

Mara joined the New York City Police Department in 1987, and the following year she was assigned to the 75th Precinct in East New York. She patrolled the area for ten years before entering the Anti-Crime plain clothes unit. During this time, her lieutenant noticed that she had a flair for calming certain situations and a sincere interest in community relations. It was suggested that Mara join community affairs She is currently serving East New York in this capacity.

Mara is also active in various advisory boards and community projects. She has been instrumental in closing the gap that often exists between the community and the police. She encourages her fellow officers to become more involved and concerned with community issues in the area in which they serve.

Mr. Speaker, Mara Roske is committed to making a positive difference in her community. As such, she is more than worthy of receiving our recognition today and I urge my colleagues to join me in honoring this truly remarkable person.

HONORING CLARA CORRIN FOR 29 YEARS OF TEACHING REDLANDS SCHOOLCHILDREN

HON. JERRY LEWIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I would like today to pay a special tribute to a very special teacher, Clara Corrin, who is retiring after 48 years in education—including 3 decades molding thousands of fourth graders into knowledgeable and confident youngsters at Kimberly Elementary School in my hometown of Redlands.

Clara Corrin got her start working with children even before she finished her own education, starting in 1955 as a nursery school teacher in Orange, NJ. She taught at a number of nursery schools and eventually became assistant director of the Head Start program in Springfield, MA.

Showing a lifelong dedication to improving her teaching expertise, Mrs. Corrin earned a bachelor's degree in elementary education in 1970, and went on to get her Masters of Arts in Education in 1976. She has continued her training with an administrative credential in 1977 and received a Mott Fellowship for studies in Educational Counseling at the University of Redlands.

A generation of fourth graders has now benefited from that expertise at Kimberly Elementary. Mrs. Corrin began her career with Redlands Unified as a substitute in 1972, and began full time the next year. In recent years, many of her former students, who have gone on to become doctors, lawyers, teachers and successful business owners, have been delighted to find that their own children are also in Mrs. Corrin's classroom and capable hands.

Her dedication led to a nomination for Teacher of the Year for the Redlands Unified School District in 1993, and she was appointed Summer School principal at Cram School in Redlands. Going beyond the classroom, Mrs. Corrin coordinated the district's ''Here's Looking at You 2000'' drug abuse prevention program, and has been an active member in the Redlands Teachers' Association and the State teachers association. She is also active in the Phi Delta Kappa and Pi Lambda Theta teachers' sororities.

Outside of the school, Mrs. Corrin has served as chapter president for the California Association of Neurologically Handicapped Children, and has been a board member for the Redlands Valley Rehabilitation Workshop. She is an active member of The Links, Incorporated and raised more than $19,000 for scholarships awarded by the San Bernardino Valley Chapter.

Mr. Speaker, the thousands of students who passed through Clara Corrin's door learned well the motto posted there: ''Enter to Learn, Exit to Lead.'' Please join me in congratulating this exemplary leader of youth for a lifetime of public service, and wish her well in her well-deserved retirement.

INTRODUCTION OF THE INDIAN HEALTH CARE IMPROVEMENT ACT REAUTHORIZATION IN FY 2003

HON. DON YOUNG

OF ALASKA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce amendments to the Indian Health Care Improvement Act. I am pleased to be joined in the co-sponsorship of this measure by both Republican and Democratic members of the U.S. House of Representatives.

The Indian Health Care Improvement Act (IHCIA) became Public Law 94–437 in the 94th Congress (September 30, 1976), and was amended by:

P.L. 96–537—December 17, 1980;
P.L. 100–579—October 31, 1988;
P.L. 100–690—November 18, 1988;
P.L. 100–713—November 23, 1988;
P.L. 101–630—November 28, 1990;
P.L. 102–573—October 29, 1992; and
P.L. 104–313—October 19, 1996.

The purpose of the Act is to implement the Federal responsibility for the care and education of the Indian people by improving the services and facilities of Federal Indian health programs and encouraging the maximum participation of American Indians and Alaska Natives in such programs, and other purposes.

The IHCIA provides for health care delivery to over 2 million American Indians and Alaska Natives. Congress enacted a one-year extension to extend the life of the Act through FY 2001 but efforts at further extensions were interrupted due to 9/11/01 events. Appropriations for Indian health have continued through authorization of the Snyder Act, a permanent law authorizing expenditures of funds for a variety of Indian programs, including health. For FY 2003, Congress appropriated $2.9 billion to help provide health care services to American Indians and Alaska Natives. The IHCIA requires Reauthorization this year.

Since 1998, the Indian Health Service (IHS) started the reauthorization process under the IHS's Tribal Consultation Policy by conveying a Roundtable to begin the discussion of the reauthorization and to give guidance to the consultation process which included all stakeholders, I/T/U (Indian Health Service/Tribes/Urban).

Coordinators from the 12 IHS areas formed workgroups of I/T/U and National Indian Health Board (NIHB) representatives. These meetings were to inform the I/T/U's about the reauthorization process, and provide opportunities to discuss and reach consensus on recommendations for the Act.

Four regional consultation meetings were held to provide further opportunities for I/T/U's to provide input, share recommendations from the 12 IHS Areas, and build consensus among participants for a unified position. The final report entitled ''Speaking with One Voice'' identified areas of consensus and differences.

The IHS Director convened a National Steering Committee (NSC) to be responsible for the final drafting of the report on the IHCIA recommendations. The NSC is composed of one elected and one alternative tribal representative from each of the 12 IHS Areas, a representative from the National Indian Health Board, National Council of Urban Indian Health, and the Self-Governance Advisory Committee. During the course of the 4 meetings, this group's responsibility evolved from compiling a final report of recommendations to the drafting of the actual IHCIA reauthorization bill language.

During the last year and a half, House Resources Committee, Office of Native American and Insular Affairs Committee staff, Cynthia A. Ahwinona, has traveled to ''American Indian and Alaska Natives country'' to observe the work of the NSC of the tribal leaders comprised to propose IHCIA reauthorization revisions to Congress. The draft bill was drafted by dozens of tribal attorneys and had technical, legal citation errors and, in some instances, was drafted very poorly and did not accomplish what was intended by the NSC.

As consensus was arrived, House Resources Committee and several members of the NSC met with House Legislative Counsel, Lisa Daly, Edward Grossman and Pierre Poisson in person and via teleconference to start the redrafting of the bill. Invited participants included both the Republican and Democratic health staff of the House Resources Committee and the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, a representative from the National Indian Health Board, representatives of the IHS, and tribal attorneys from the NSC.

I want to personally thank Lisa Daly, Edward Grossman and Pierre Poisson of the House Legislative Counsel, Myra Munson of Sonosky, Chambers, Sachse, Endrieson and Perry, LLP. and Carol Barbero of Hobbs, Straus, Dean and Walker for all their efforts in the drafting of this bill. Thank you all, you have done a wonderful job. Attached is brief summary of each Title of the Indian Health Care Improvement Act Reauthorization of FY 03.

INDIAN HEALTH CARE IMPROVEMENT ACT REAUTHORIZATION OF FY 03

Section 1. Short Title.

Section 2. Findings. Sets forth the national goal of the U.S. in providing the quantity and quality of health services to bring the health status of Indians to the highest possible level.

Section 3. Declaration of Health Objectives. Sets forth 6 Health Status Objectives to be reached by the year 2010.

Section 4. Definitions. States the definitions of terms used throughout the Act.

TITLE I. INDIAN HEALTH MANPOWER

The purpose of this title is to increase, to the maximum extent feasible, the number of American Indians and Alaska natives entering the health professions. It also seeks to assure an adequate supply of health professionals to the Service, Indian tribes, tribal organizations, and urban Indian organizations involved in the delivery of health care to American Indians and Alaska natives. This title covers recruitment, scholarships, extern programs, continuing education, community health representatives, loan repayment, advanced training and research, nursing, tribal cultural and history, inmed, health training, incentives, residency, community health aide for Alaska, and a University of South Dakota pilot project.

TITLE II. HEALTH SERVICES

The purpose of this title is to establish programs that respond to the health needs of American Indians and Alaska natives. For example, American Indians and Alaska natives have a disproportionately high rate of diabetes (death rate for this disease is more than 300% of the rate for the U.S. population generally), so this title has a specific diabetes provision. It also includes the Indian Health Care Improvement Fund through which the Appropriation Acts supply funds to eliminate health deficiencies and disparities in resources made available to American Indians and Alaska Native tribes and communities. This title contains catastrophic health emergency fund; health promotion and disease prevention services; diabetes prevention, treatment and control; hospice feasibility; research; mental health; managed care feasibility; Arizona, North Dakota, South Dakota, Trenton and California contract health services programs; mammography; patient travel; epidemiology; school health education; Indian youth; psychology; tuberculosis; environmental and nuclear health hazards and women's health.

TITLE III. FACILITIES

The purpose of this title relates to the construction of health facilities, including hospitals, clinics, and health stations including necessary staff quarters, and of sanitation facilities for Indian communities and homes. It also would require the IHS to annually report on Indian Health Service/Tribes/Urban (ITU's) needs for inpatient, outpatient and specialized care facilities, including renovation of existing facilities. It also would require newly-constructed/renovated facilities, whenever practicable, to meet the construction standards of any nationally recognized accrediting bodies. There is also a provision to waive the Davis-Bacon when a tribe has its own wage law and performs the construction project instead of IHS.

TITLE IV. ACCESS TO HEALTH SERVICES

The purpose of this title is to address payments to the IHS and tribes for services covered by Social Security Act Health Care programs, and to enable Indian health programs to access reimbursements from third party collections. This title states that any payments received by a hospital or skilled nursing facility of the IHS for services provided to American Indians and Alaska Natives eligible for benefits under the Social Security Act Health Care programs will not be considered in determining appropriations for health care of American Indians or Alaska Natives.

Requires the Secretary to enter into agreements with tribes, tribal organizations and urban Indian organizations to assist them in enrolling qualified Indians in Medicare, Medicaid and SCHIP (State children's health insurance program), and to enable tribes to pay premiums for coverage. Authorizes the Secretary to enter into agreements with I/T/U's for receipt/processing of Medicaid/Medicare/SCHIP applications. Condition continuing approval of State Medicaid plan on taking steps to provide for Medicaid enrollment on reservations, and to obtain input from tribes in the State on matters relating to impact of changes in the State plan on Indian health programs. If tribe/tribal organizations performs outreach, the agreement may provide for 100% reimbursement of costs and assures that 100% FMAP (Federal Medical Assistance Payment) continues to apply to Medicaid and SCHIP services provided by tribes/tribal organizations who directly bill for the services they provide. Ensures that insurance companies must reimburse I/T/U's for the services they provide. Ensure that managed care plans must reimburse I/T/U's for the services they provide.

Authorize IHS and tribal programs to receive reimbursement for all Medicare Part B services and eliminates ambiguity about Medicaid coverage. Authorizes Federal/State/tribal agreements for tribal operation of Indian SCHIP programs; places a Medicare-like rate ceiling on hospital services purchased under the IHS's Contract Health Service program; directs the Secretary of HHS to study the Medicare and Medicaid payment methodology for Indian health programs and report to Congress; and directs the Secretary to establish a National Indian Technical Advisory Group to assist the Secretary in identifying and addressing issues regarding the health care programs under the Social Security Act (including medicare, medicaid and SCHIP) that have implications for Indian Health Programs or Urban Indian Organizations.

TITLE V. HEALTH SERVICES FOR URBAN INDIANS

The purpose of this title is to establish programs in urban centers to make health services more accessible to Indians who live in urban areas rather than on reservations or Alaska Native villages. The Secretary through the IHS is authorized to enter into contracts or grants to urban Indian organizations to help these agencies with establishing and administering health programs which meet the requirements of the IHCIA and will require evaluations renewals. Authorizes the establishment of an Office of Urban Indian Health which shall be responsible for carrying out the provisions of this title, providing central oversight of the programs and services authorized under this title and, providing technical assistance to Urban Indian Organizations. The bill would also extend FTCA (Federal Tort Claims Act) coverage to urban Indian organizations (Federal law already extends FTCA coverage to tribally-operated health programs).

TITLE VI. ORGANIZATIONAL IMPROVEMENTS

This title addresses the establishment of the IHS as an agency of the PHS(Public Health Service). It covers the appointment of the Director of IHS by the President and confirmed by the Senate. This title also authorizes the Secretary through the Director of IHS to establish an automated management information system as well as other duties as assigned by the Secretary for the IHS. Authorizes appropriations to carry out this title.

TITLE VII. BEHAVIORAL HEALTH PROGRAMS

This title is revised from current law (which only addresses substance abuse programs) in order to focus on behavioral health. It combines all substance abuse, mental health and social service programs in one title and integrates these programs to enhance performance and efficiency. The title addresses the responsibilities of the IHS as outlined by the Memorandum of Agreement pursuant to the section 402 of the Indian Alcohol and Substance Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act of 1986. The IHS will determine the scope of the alcohol and substance abuse among Indian people; they must assess the existing and needed resources for prevention of alcohol and substance abuse and the treatment of Indians affected. Finally, IHS must estimate the funding necessary to adequately support a program of prevention of alcohol and substance abuse and treatment of Indians affected. The IHS will also provide a comprehensive alcohol and substance abuse prevention and treatment programs, a rehabilitation and aftercare services, IHS youth program, and training and community education. In this section demonstration projects are outlined as well as grants focusing of Fetal Alcohol Syndrome and Fetal Alcohol effect. It also expands the authorization to establish inpatient mental health facilities in each Area. Authorizes funding for development of innovative community-based behavioral health services. The requirement of matching funds has been eliminated here. Allows the Fetal Alcohol Disorder programs to be funded under the ISDEAA (Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act). Provides for a program to treat both the victims and the perpetrator of child sexual abuse. And, has been expanded to allow Indian Tribes and Tribal Organizations to obtain funding for behavioral health research.

TITLE VII. MISCELLANEOUS

The purpose of this title is to address various topics including the President's reporting of the progress made in meeting the objectives of this Act to Congress at the time of submitting the budget. It also applies the Negotiated Rulemaking Act to the development of IHCIA regulations. Other provisions require the Secretary to develop a plan of implementation to submit to Congress; describe the eligibility of California Indians for IHS services and sets out the conditions for the issue of Indian health funding as an entitlement.

AMENDMENTS TO THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Amendments to the Social Security Act appear at the end of the bill. These provisions are necessary to reflect a number of the objectives described above in the Title IV summary.

HONORING THE 80TH BIRTHDAY OF SID YUDAIN

HON. TOM DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. TOM DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Sid Yudain upon his 80th birthday for his long, distinguished, and dedicated service to the world of journalism.

"At every dramatic turning point of our long national nightmare known as Watergate, Roll

Call was there. Sid Yudain reported the Watergate break-in a full three days before Nixon's resignation,'' quipped Washington's favorite political satirist, Mark Russell some twenty years ago.

Russell's dig was aimed at the man credited with discovering him, Sid Yudain, founder, publisher, editor, and even occasional delivery boy of Capitol Hill's own newspaper, Roll Call. This weekend Mark and his wife Ali will host—and perhaps roasting—Sid at a party celebrating his 80th birthday.

Sid, who spent several years in Hollywood following World War II as a columnist and raconteur for movie stars, came to Washington in the early 1950's to work as press secretary for Congressman Al Morano of his home state of Connecticut. He soon noticed a general lack of information about the happenings of the Capitol Hill community. In 1955, Sid was inspired to create his own newspaper, Roll Call, when he overheard an Ohio Congressman's shocked exclamation at learning that a member of his state legislation had passed away.

As Mr. Yudain envisioned it, Roll Call was not to be a newspaper about Capitol Hill, but as its masthead boldly proclaimed, ''The newspaper of Capitol Hill.'' Judging by the names of those, including Members of Congress and staffers, who contributed early columns and stories to the newspaper, it lived up to the assertion. Vice President Richard Nixon insisted on writing a piece about a doorman who had passed away, and Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson related through the pages of Roll Call his experiences and thanks following his recovery from a recent heart attack.

Throughout the 32 years that Sid owned Roll Call, the paper chronicled life on the Hill and promoted a community spirit where Members and staffers of all political persuasions could come together to celebrate their common service to the American people. Roll Call nurtured clubs and organizations, issued the ''Outstanding Staffer'' award each year, sponsored Congress' annual baseball game, and gave gifted and often famous writers of all backgrounds the opportunity to inform and entertain arguably the most influential readership on the planet.

In 1988, after owning Roll Call for over 32 years, Mr. Yudain sold his newspaper in order to devote more time to his family, friends, and saxophone.

Mr. Speaker, I heartily commend Mr. Sid Yudain for his initiative and his commitment to serving his government and his country. His distinguished career is truly impressive and inspiring. I wish Mr. Yudain all the best on his 80th birthday and many more to come. I call upon my colleagues to join me along with Sid's wife Lael, their children Rachel (and husband Amar Kuchinad) and Raymond, and family and friends in applauding Sid Yudain for all he has done.

IN CELEBRATION OF FOSTER'S DAILY DEMOCRAT'S 130TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. CHARLES F. BASS

OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of the management, staff, and readers of Foster's Daily Democrat as they prepare to celebrate the newspaper's 130th anniversary. Since June 18, 1873, Foster's Daily Democrat has provided readers with credible, fair, and balanced coverage of local, state, and national news and world events. Foster's Daily Democrat currently serves residents of Southeastern New Hampshire and Southern Maine.

For five generations, the Foster family has operated in the public's interest by providing extensive coverage of the local community. The paper's thorough local coverage, thoughtful editorials, and the family's involvement in the community it serves have helped Foster's Daily Democrat thrive for 130 years as an independently owned and operated newspaper, which is a laudable achievement in an industry dominated by major media chains.

I commend the Publisher, Robert H. Foster; his wife and Editor, Therese Foster; their daughter and Vice President of Administration, Patrice Foster; and all members of the Foster Family and their employees for the service they have provided to their readers through 130 years of daily publication. I offer them my sincere congratulations on this momentous occasion and I look forward to their continued success.

HONORING SERGEANT NORM ROSS

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Sergeant Norm Ross, on the occasion of his retirement from the Mariposa County Sheriff's Department. His retirement will be honored on July 12, 2003 at a community event in Coulterville.

Sergeant Ross has been a dedicated community servant since 1960. Norm was educated in Los Angeles and in 1960 joined the Army National Guard. He began to work in law enforcement in 1963 for the L.A. Police Department until 1983. After a short retirement from the police department, he returned to help others and began to work in the Mariposa County Sheriff's Department. He worked with the department to make sure the community was involved in their safety and quality of life. Norm became a Sergeant in 1986, because of his undying commitment to the people of North County. One of the many reasons he received the promotion came from his evaluations which stated, ''When it comes to intervention and prevention, Norm established a standard that is unmatched in the department.'' A leader in Mariposa County, Sergeant Ross has been an active member of the community and is very deserving of a comfortable retirement. We are truly grateful for everything he has accomplished.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in recognizing Sergeant Norm Ross for his significant and steadfast efforts for the betterment of Mariposa County.

TRIBUTE TO AL DAVIS

SPEECH OF

HON. GERALD D. KLECZKA

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, on May 30th the House of Representatives lost one of its most brilliant and dedicated employees when Al Davis died of complications resulting from a traffic accident. We remember him today and offer our sincere condolences to his family, loved ones, and especially his long-time companion Mary Bielefeld.

As my colleagues before me have attested, the facts and figures produced by Al Davis have provided an immeasurable benefit to the Democratic Members of the Ways and Means Committee—and often proved to be a thorn in the side of my friends across the aisle. What most of my colleagues don't know is that I was the beneficiary of Al's budgetary wisdom long before he came to Washington to work on the staff of the Ways and Means Committee or the House Budget Committee before that. In the late 1970s when I served as Chairman of the Wisconsin Legislature's Joint Committee on Finance Al was toiling away as an economist for the Wisconsin Department of Revenue.

In his work for the Ways and Means Committee Al himself was often unseen and unheard by the public, but the information he produced was routinely cited in the media. Not only did Al author remarkably insightful memos and produce easy-to-understand charts for us to use in debate on the floor and in the Ways and Means Committee, he frequently briefed reporters and opinion leaders about the effects of arcane budget and tax matters before Congress. Even though Al routinely prepared Ranking Member RANGEL and numerous other Members of Congress for television and radio interviews, I'm sure that his most proud achievement was coming up with the chart I used in my Spring 2001 newsletter to the constituents of Wisconsin's 4th District.

Al Davis was a kind and public-spirited man whose good work in this institution will not soon be forgotten. He was an expert in his field and earned the respect of his colleagues through his thoughtful analysis and wise counsel. Al simply had an answer for every conceivable question. One of his greatest attributes was his skill at explaining how tax and budget proposals would affect the working families and average Americans that we represent.

His dedication to his work was unmatched. He would often e-mail memos to staff late into the night so that Members of the Committee would prepared for debate first thing in the morning. The Ways and Means Committee and this Congress as a whole will be at a loss without his vast expertise.

I am proud to stand with my colleagues in the House today to honor and recognize the career of our friend Al Davis. His integrity, character, and expertise in all matters related to the tax code and the federal budget will be sorely missed by this body.

TRIBUTE TO GUADALUPE SANCHEZ DE OTERO

HON. STEVAN PEARCE

OF NEW MEXICO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. PEARCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge the work of Guadalupe Sanchez de Otero, the director of the Andrew Sanchez Memorial Youth Center. Ms. Otero was recently selected as a 2003 Robert Wood Johnson Community Health Leader. She was one of ten people nationally to be selected for this prestigious award, which includes a grant of over $100,000 to enhance her work.

Ms. Otero is the founder and director, without pay, of the Andrew Sanchez Memorial Youth Center in Columbus, New Mexico. The center provides a safe play space for local children, many of whose parents are farm laborers who work long hours and cannot afford childcare. The center's programs also include health fairs, community meetings, sewing classes, and craft activities. Ms. Otero expanded the center's services when she saw growing numbers of senior residents suffering from isolation and poor nutrition. To combat this problem, she and her mother cashed in hundreds of aluminum cans to be able to serve seniors hot meals at the center. They also organized young people to deliver food to homebound seniors.

Ms. Otero founded the center in 1996 in an old fire station after launching the Health Promotores program in 1995. Through her work with the Health Promotores program, Ms. Otero quickly saw the many needs of the rural area on the U.S.-Mexican border, an area where more than half of the families live below the poverty line.

In addition to founding the Andrew Sanchez Memorial Youth Center, Ms. Otero helped launch a mobile health clinic, created a bilingual support group for diabetics, provided farm worker health and pesticide safety education, and assisted with the effort to turn around an abandoned tavern into the Columbus Public Library.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to congratulate Ms. Guadalupe Sanchez de Otero on this well-earned distinction, and express my gratitude for her determination and leadership. I commend Ms. Otero and her staff for the hard work they continue to perform, and I am proud to recognize her today before my colleagues a model of commitment to human service.

Ms. Otero's nominator for the award put it best by saying, ''Lupe doesn't just talk about what's needed, but rather recognizes it and takes action in her own special way.''

RECOGNIZING CLEVELAND, TENNESSEE AS ''FLAG CITY''

HON. ZACH WAMP

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. WAMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the city of Cleveland, Tennessee, which I have the awesome privilege to represent and join them in celebrating the upcoming Flag Day ceremonies on June 14th.

Beginning in the late 1800s, communities across the nation began envisioning a special day for celebrating our flag and the freedoms we enjoy as Americans. In 1949, President Harry Truman signed a Congressional Resolution designating June 14th of each year as Flag Day.

The ''Stars and Stripes'' is a symbol to the world of the eternal principles that our nation was founded upon. Our flag is also a powerful reminder that our freedoms and liberties exist only because of the incredible sacrifices made by countless Americans in defense of our country. It is for that reason we must honor and pay tribute to our flag.

I invite my colleagues to join me in commending the work of a very special group of individuals from Cleveland, Tennessee who came together as a community to find a truly patriotic way to celebrate Flag Day. Members of the Cleveland Kiwanis Club raised over $22,000 from community businesses and volunteers and organized efforts to fly over 500 American flags on the streets of Cleveland.

It is a humbling sight and a perfect tribute to America and to the veterans who defended her. When a noble idea is coupled with a dedicated group of people—great things can happen.

I would like to personally thank Mayor Tom Rowland, State Senator Jeff Miller, State Representatives Dewayne Bunch and Chris Newton, the Cleveland Kiwanis Club, and the citizens of Cleveland and Bradley County, Tennessee for their efforts in this endeavor. It is an honor to represent and serve a ''flag city.''

HONORING THE 50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY OF JOSEPH AND CLARA LEE

HON. BART GORDON

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Joseph and Clara Lee for 50 years of marriage, a remarkable milestone and testament to their love for each other. The Nashville, Tennessee, couple will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary on July 12.

Joseph and Clara's marriage has been blessed. They have five children, six grandchildren, one great-grandchild, five step-grandchildren and six step-great-grandchildren, as well as countless friends. The Lees place a strong emphasis on family and friends, which is evident in their everyday deeds. And they made sure each of their children had the opportunity to get a college education, with all five receiving college degrees. And they have striven to help friends in any way they could.

Joseph was a longtime educator and counseled many children during his work with several youth programs over the years. Clara helped countless people during her work as a nurse. Both are very active in their church and community and have garnered a wealth of respect along the way.

I cordially congratulate Joseph and Clara for their commitment to one another, their family and their community. All of us should follow the example of Joseph and Clara, whose entire existence exudes compassion, loyalty and service to others. I wish them the very best on their 50th wedding anniversary and hope more of us can follow in their footsteps.

TRIBUTE TO COACH LELAND YOUNG

HON. BENNIE G. THOMPSON

OF MISSISSIPPI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. THOMPSON of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to the life and accomplishments of Mr. Leland Young of Rosedale, Mississippi. He dedicated his life to serving Mississippi's local youth athletes for 61 years.

Mr. Young was born July 28, 1941, in Ripley, Mississippi to Leland and Willie Young. He married Mary Katherine Jacob of Clarksdale on June 6, 1964. Together they had one daughter.

During his coaching career he built an impressive record of 221–63–2. He led Rosedale High School to four North Mississippi State Championships and three State Championships in football. His team also won the Delta Valley Conference Football Championship. At the time of his retirement, Rosedale High School held the state record for the most consecutive wins.

Mr. Young also led the track team to a State Track Championship in 1983. He won the ''DVC Track Coach of the Year'' award in 1983 and the ''State Track Coach of the Year'' award the same year.

Mr. Young was inducted into the Delta State University Alumni Coaches Hall of Fame in 1999 and the Mississippi High School Coaches Hall of Fame in 2001. The Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity awarded him in 2001 with a plaque for distinguished service rendered in the field of sports. He was the 2002 Bolivar Commercial Coach of the Year and was in The Bolivar Commercial Quarter Century Club in 2000. He was also Co-Coach of Year for the Delta Democrat Times in 2002.

He was an avid golfer and outdoorsman. He was a member of the Delta State University Athletic Alumni Association, Mississippi Association of Coaches, Donaldson Point Hunting Club, Rosedale Country Club and Rosedale Methodist Church. Mr. Leland Young will be dearly missed by his community.

INTRODUCING THE CHILD PROTECTION SERVICES WORKFORCE IMPROVEMENT

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce the Child Protection Services Workforce Improvement Act. This bill is aimed at helping states improve their child protection services through grants and assistance that allow them to expand and enhance their child welfare workforce.

Many State child protection agencies are the last line of defense in caring for abused and neglected children. Today, these agencies are suffering from staffing problems that have been compounded by budget cuts and inadequate funding. The result in many cases is a failure to meet the needs of the most vulnerable children in our society.

I am sure that many of my colleagues have seen in their local newspapers or heard of a case where a child was severely abused or killed because a child protection agency ignored dangers posed to a child by their foster family or adoptive parents. Just look at the case of Indiana. A total of 70 kids died there from abuse and neglect in July 2001 to July 2002—this was a new State record. The U.S. Department of Health and Human Service Children Family and Service Review found that the cause of this was in part due to the state child protection agencies failure to sufficiently reduce incidences of repeated mistreatment. It also warned that state budget cuts will further impact Indiana's limited ability to track such incidences.

In Colorado, State budget cuts have reduced the size of foster care review teams to the point that the State won't be able to meet federal requirements that foster children be checked on at least twice a year. In Arizona, budget cuts there have led to 32 percent of children in State custody being stuck in temporary placements for over 2 years. In South Carolina, some 500 positions in the State's social service agency—many involving child welfare—have been zeroed out. The same is true for many other States. There is no question that States need federal help to improve their ability to help and care for children in need.

These nationwide problems are why I am introducing the Child Protection Services Workforce Improvement Act. It provides States with $500 million in matching grants over 5 years to improve these services where it is needed most: Increasing the number of qualified child welfare workers. States can use these matching grants for their private and public child welfare agencies to: Reduce the turnover and vacancy rate of child welfare agencies, increase education and training of child welfare workers, attract and retain qualified candidates and coordinate services with other agencies, improve child welfare workers' wages, and increase the number of child welfare workers,

To retain qualified child welfare workers, my bill also allows student loan forgiveness for those who have been with an agency for at least two years. In order to improve the availability of quality services, this legislation provides a 75 percent federal match to pay for training of private child welfare workers, which is the same match rate provided to public child welfare agencies. My bill also allocates funding for child welfare agencies to provide short-term mental health training to caseworkers.

A recent General Accounting Office (GAO) report found that child welfare workers are leaving the child welfare profession because of low wages, risk of on the job violence, staff shortages, high caseloads, administrative burdens, lack of support from supervisors, and lack of proper training for child welfare workers and their supervisors.

The high turnover rate and high caseloads of child welfare workers limits the ability and efficiency of agencies to investigate and solve problems of child abuse and neglect. For instance, the study found that the above staff problems: Provides insufficient time for remaining staff to establish critical trusting relationships with the families and children which are important to make the necessary decisions to ensure safe and stable permanent placements; delays the timeliness of child abuse and neglect investigation; limits the frequency of worker visits with children who are the victims or alleged victims of child abuse or neglect; and hampers agencies' attainment of some key federal goals of ensuring the safety of children and placing them in permanent homes either through adoption, kinship care or reuniting them with their families.

The Child Welfare League of America, the Alliance for Children and Families, the National Association of Social Workers, the Lutheran Services in America and the Catholic Charities of America have endorsed this bill. These organizations understand the needed support this legislation will provide State efforts to help abused and neglected children.

Please join with us in supporting the Child Protection Services Workforce Improvement Act and provide much needed financial resources to our child welfare workforce to protect the most vulnerable children in our society. Congress has a responsibility to respond to this urgent need.

RECOGNIZING SCIENTIFIC SIGNIFICANCE OF SEQUENCING OF HUMAN GENOME AND EXPRESSING SUPPORT FOR GOALS AND IDEALS OF HUMAN GENOME MONTH AND DNA DAY

SPEECH OF

HON. SHEILA JACKSON-LEE

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, June 10, 2003

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, Mr. Speaker, let me join in with the gentleman from Florida and the gentleman from Ohio for their wisdom in bringing this legislation to the floor, and certainly to the gentlewoman from New York, who I enthusiastically join, along with the gentleman from Louisiana and the gentleman from Michigan on this important legislative initiative.

H. Con. Res. 110 is a resolution that helps to educate our colleagues but also it speaks truth to the American people, and gives due recognition to a great accomplishment for humankind. As a member of the House Committee on Science, we spent many, many hours on the question of the human genome and the Human Genome Project in particular. Sequencing of the human genome as one of the most significant scientific accomplishments of the past 100 years and expressing support of the goals and ideals of the Human Genome Month and DNA Day really is a statement about life.

It is a statement about the ability of the new science to be able, Mr. Speaker, to understand life, to help us understand where we came from, and how we fit into the world. It will also create improved health where that was not a possibility 10, 15, or 50 years ago.

It is crucial as the human genome project achieves its goal, and the essential completion of the reference sequence of the human genome carrying, that we begin to put our new knowledge to work. This has been a great investment, and the payoffs should benefit all of the American people. However, we must move thoughtfully and cautiously. One of the challenges that we have in this Congress is the whole question of human cloning. It is important not to equate these projects—research on the human genome DNA with the idea of the creation of a human being. We can have one without the other. We should not be so afraid of creating monsters, that we do not attempt to create cures.

It is important now as we have begun or understand the sequence that we allow this project to grow and to be utilized to help us determine the cures for diseases such as Parkinson's, Alzheimer's disease, diabetes, stroke, and yes, HIV/AIDS. The more we understand about the human being and its makeup, the more we can create a better way of life.

We well know of our renowned fictional character Superman. Christopher Reeves, who was the embodiment of the man of steel, has become a different kind of superman today. He may be in a wheelchair, but he is still making great bounds, trying time after time with a number of efforts to find the cure for those who suffer spinal injuries, some of the most devastating injuries that we will face. As we look to the wounded who will be coming home from the war in Iraq and Afghanistan, they will be coming home with major injuries, some continuing to be life-threatening. The greater knowledge of our ability to be able to respond to those kinds of devastating injuries, physical injuries through weapons, the better off we will be. The more we can find a way to determine and fight against the war against bioterrorism, the better off we will be. Advances in these and many other fields will hinge on our ability to understand and manipulate the human genome and its products. That is why the Human Genome Project was such a great accomplishment, and why we should continue to draw attention to this critical research through Human Genome Month and DNA Day.

This is an excellent resolution, Mr. Speaker, because it educates my colleagues and educates the public.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, due to business in my district, I was unable to vote during the following rollcall votes. Had I been present I would have voted: No. 244—"no"; No. 245—"no"; No. 246—"yes"; No. 247—"yes"; No. 248—"yes."

TRIBUTE TO THOMAS N. JACOBSON

HON. JOE BACA

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Thomas N. Jacobson, who recently won the Rabbi Norman F. Feldheym Award for service to our community. Mr. Jacobson is an individual of great distinction, and we join with family and friends in honoring his remarkable achievements and expressing pride in this recognition that has been afforded to him.

Thomas is a remarkable individual who has devoted his life to helping people throughout his community. His kindness and passionate spirit render him a vital resource to his congregation and beloved community member.

For the past 25 years, Thomas has dedicated himself to the Congregation Emanu El, serving as Commission Chair, Legal Counsel, member of the Board of Managers of the Home of Eternity Cemetery, Secretary, Treasurer, Vice President, and President. In these capacities, he has been an integral contributor to the management and administration of Congregational affairs, as well as a participant in raising crucial funds for the Congregation.

In addition to these contributions, Thomas has been a partner in the firm of Gresham, Savage, Nolan & Tilden, receiving the highest possible evaluation of his profession for integrity and performance, and has taken a proactive approach to leadership in the community.

Through his participation in countless activities and committees, Thomas has exhibited kindness, love, humility, and a deep resolve to ameliorate all aspects of community life, so it is only appropriate that he receive Rabbi Norman F. Feldheym Award.

I join today with his wife, Lorie, and his daughters, Jolene and Gretchen, in their joy at this wonderful honor he has received. He is a symbol of all that is good in his profession and an inspiration to his community.

And so, Mr. Speaker, we salute Thomas N. Jacobson. We express admiration he has received this wonderful and well-deserved honor and hope that others may recognize his good works in the community.

REMEMBERING MR. ALDO PINESCHI, SR. OF ROSEVILLE, CALIFORNIA

HON. JOHN T. DOOLITTLE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, today I wish to remember and honor an outstanding citizen, Mr. Aldo Pineschi, Sr., from the City of Roseville, California. Following a lifetime of dedication to family and community, Aldo Pineschi passed away on May 30, 2003. He was 79 years old.

After his parents emigrated from Northern Italy and settled in Chicago, Aldo was born in the Windy City in 1924. Three years later, the Pineschi family relocated to Roseville, which would remain Aldo's home for the rest of his life. Shortly after graduating from Roseville High School in 1942, he served in the United States Army during World War II in England and France. He returned home in 1945 and wed Claire Bertolucci a year later.

Aldo began his professional life by going to work for the Pacific Fruit Express (PFE) railroad just as his father did. During the nearly 20 years he was with PFE, he also helped raise his four children and attended college. He first attended Placer College (now Sierra College) and eventually completed his degree at California State University, Sacramento. He then went to work for Aerojet for several years.

In 1965, Aldo became the Personnel/Purchasing Manager for the City of Roseville. Then, from 1970 until his retirement in 1980, he served as Roseville's Assistant City Manager. In this capacity, he helped set the stage for Roseville's transformation from a once-sleepy railroad town to what is now a vibrant, well-planned community with award-winning parks, law enforcement, and city management. The City is also home to nationally-recognized, high-performing public schools. Its railroad past blends with its newer high-tech industry and thriving commercial centers. Its residential areas include dynamic new developments as well as historic neighborhoods. In short, Mr. Speaker, Roseville is a model community with a high quality of life and a bright horizon, and Aldo's vision and hard work are a large part of the reason why.

In addition to his professional accomplishments, Aldo left a legacy of volunteer service. Many remember his years-long participation with the George Buljian Cooking Crew, a group of community leaders headed by a former mayor, who helped raise over one million dollars for local charities by serving up steak dinners.

Aldo also played an active role in shaping local politics, helping to elect numerous candidates to local offices. In the late 1950s he himself served on the Roseville Joint Union School District Board of Trustees. He also made a run for the California State Senate, and in 1962, fell just 78 votes shy of becoming Placer County Clerk. His involvement in and discussion of politics was one of his loves.

However, his truest love remained his wife of 57 years, Claire. She survives him, along with their four children and seven grandchildren. These include daughter Leah and son-in-law Mario; son Alan and daughter-in-law Susan; son Aldo, Jr. and his wife Lesli; son Neil; and grandchildren Howard and Gina Gibson; Matt, Michael, and Alina Pineschi; and Evangeline and Anthony Pineschi.

Today, I join with Aldo Pineschi, Sr.'s family, friends, and community to commemorate his life of committed service, good citizenship, and uncommon decency. May he rest in peace.

IN RECOGNITION OF VIC SOOD ON HIS SERVICE TO THE LIVERMORE AMADOR VALLEY TRANSIT AUTHORITY

HON. ELLEN O. TAUSCHER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to Vic Sood, General Manager of the Livermore Amador Valley Transit Authority (LAVTA), as he prepares to retire after 32 years of service in public transportation. For his unyielding commitment and dedication to running what has become one of the most effectively operated transit agencies in the entire Bay Area region, I would like to thank my good friend Vic Sood. The skillful craftsmanship of his work will endure far into the future.

Before moving to California, Vic Sood made many contributions to the public in the state of Washington. He was responsible for getting transit legislation passed into law in 1974 and 1975, which allowed for the formation and financing of new public transit systems, known as Public Transit Benefit Areas.

In September 1976, Vic Sood was appointed to serve as the first Executive Director of Community Transit after voters in Snohomish County, Washington, approved a sales tax increase to finance the Snohomish County Public Transit Benefit Area Corporation in June of that year. As a result of the legislation which he had labored to get passed, many new transit agencies were likewise created throughout the state of Washington.

While Executive Director of Snohomish County Community Transit, Vic Sood also served as President of the Washington State Transit Association in 1982 and 1983 and served as a regional representative to the American Public Transit Association's (APTA) Board of Directors in 1983 and 1984.

Subsequent to the formation of LAVTA in May 1986, as a Joint Powers Agency of the cities of Dublin, Pleasanton, Livermore and Alameda County for the provision of public transit in the area, Vic Sood was hired as the General Manager and started work in January 1986.

LAVTA began operating with only nine leased buses in 1986. Under Sood's management and with a quickly growing Livermore Valley, the system expanded to meet the area's needs and by 1990 the agency had placed an order for 34 new buses. By 1996, LAVTA was serving one million passengers each year. In 2001, it was two million. LAVTA has grown to a fleet of 75 buses and 16 paratransit vehicles during Vic Sood's tenure.

Currently, Vic Sood serves as a member of APTA's Legislative Committee, Transportation

Equity Act for the 21st Century (TEA–21) Task Force and the Small Operators Steering Committee. He is also a member of the Legislative Committee of the California Transit Association and a Board Member of RIDES for Bay Area Commuters, Inc., the San Francisco Bay Area Partnership Board and California Transit Insurance Pool.

It has been my great pleasure to have worked with Vic Sood over the past seven years on transit issues both local and regional in perspective. He has been a supportive colleague and a good friend. I wish him and his wife, Manu, good fortune in their future endeavors together.

Vic Sood has made a substantial and positive impact upon those communities for which he has worked during his remarkable career. He has been an invaluable servant to the public. His tireless efforts will not soon be forgotten by those who worked with him or for him. It is with honor that I commend Vic Sood for his service to the community and to the Livermore Amador Valley Transit Authority for over 17 years.

COMMENDING BARRY B. ANDERSON, DEPUTY DIRECTOR, CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE

HON. JIM NUSSLE

OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. NUSSLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the longtime and exemplary public service of Barry B. Anderson, Deputy Director of the Congressional Budget Office, CBO. Barry is leaving CBO to pursue new challenges as a fiscal advisor to the International Monetary Fund.

Barry has been involved in Federal budgeting and program evaluation for more than 30 years. He began his career in 1972 with the General Accounting Office. In 1980, he moved to the Office of Management and Budget, OMB, where he was a budget examiner for various programs. In 1988, he was promoted to the senior career civil servant position in OMB, which he held for 10 years. He was responsible for directing the analysis and the production of the President's budget under the administrations of Presidents Reagan, Bush, and Clinton.

In 1999, Barry joined CBO as the Deputy Director under Dan L. Crippen. In that capacity, he directed the operations of the agency, helping CBO to build a stronger staff, obtain better access to data, and improve administrative processes. He testified on budget trends and conceptual budget issues, and represented the United States at the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development. In January of this year, Barry served briefly as the Acting Director of CBO.

During his tenure as CBO's Deputy and Acting Director, Barry's expertise, experience, and broad knowledge of the Federal budget proved invaluable to the Budget Committee and to the Congress. Barry has built a reputation as a staunch guardian of budgetary integrity and honesty. He has helped to oversee CBO during a tumultuous period of Federal budgeting, and his advice and counsel will be greatly missed. So, on the occasion of Barry Anderson's departure from CBO, I want to commend his many accomplishments and wish him well in the new challenges that await him in the next phase of his distinguished career.

PAPERWORK AND REGULATORY IMPROVEMENTS ACT OF 2003

HON. DOUG OSE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. OSE. Mr. Speaker, today, I rise to introduce a bill entitled the ''Paperwork and Regulatory Improvements Act of 2003.'' I am pleased to have six other original co-sponsors of this bi-partisan legislation, including: JOHN TANNER; TOM DAVIS, Chairman of Government Reform Committee; DENNIS MOORE; BILL JANKLOW, who is the Vice Chairman of my Subcommittee; JIM MATHESON; and, PAUL RYAN. The bill includes legislative changes to: (a) increase the probability of results in paperwork reduction, (b) assist Congress in its review of agency regulatory proposals, and (c) improve regulatory accounting.

Background: In Fall 2001, the Small Business Administration released a report which estimated that in 2000, Americans spent $843 billion to comply with Federal regulations. This report concluded, ''Had every household received a bill for an equal share, each would have owed $8,164.'' The Office of Management and Budget (OMB) estimates the Federal paperwork burden on the public at over 8 billion hours. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) accounts for 81 percent of the total. In its March 2002 draft regulatory accounting report, OMB estimated that the price tag for all paperwork imposed on the public is $230 billion a year.

Because of Congressional concern about the increasing costs and incompletely estimated benefits of Federal rules and paperwork, in 1996 Congress required OMB to submit its first regulatory accounting report. In 1998, Congress changed the annual report's due date to coincide with the President's budget. Congress established this simultaneous deadline so that Congress and the public would have an opportunity to simultaneously review both the on-budget and off-budget costs associated with each Federal agency imposing regulatory or paperwork burdens on the public. In 2000, Congress required OMB to permanently submit an annual regulatory accounting report. This provision requires OMB to estimate the total annual costs and benefits for all Federal rules and paperwork in the aggregate, by agency, by agency program, and by major rule, and to include an associated report on the impacts of Federal rules and paperwork on certain groups, such as small business.

From September 1997 to February 2003, OMB issued five final and one draft regulatory accounting reports. All six failed to meet some or all of the statutorily-required content requirements. Part of the reason for this failure is that OMB has not requested agency estimates for each agency bureau and program, as it does annually for its Information Collection Budget (paperwork budget) and for the President's budget (fiscal budget).

In 1980, Congress passed the Paperwork Reduction Act (PRA) and established an Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs (OIRA) in OMB. By law, OIRA's principal responsibility is paperwork reduction. It is responsible for guarding the public's interest in minimizing costly, time-consuming, and intrusive paperwork burden. In 1995, Congress passed amendments to the PRA and set government-wide paperwork reduction goals of 10 or 5 percent per year from Fiscal Year (FY) 1996 to 2001. After annual increases in paperwork, instead of decreases, in 1998 Congress required OMB to identify specific expected reductions in FYs 1999 and 2000. OMB's resulting report was unacceptable. In response, in 2000, Congress required OMB to evaluate major regulatory paperwork and identify specific expected reductions in regulatory paperwork in FYs 2001 and 2002. Again, OMB's resulting report was unacceptable. The bottom line is that, despite explicit statutory directives to reduce paperwork burden on the public, there have been seven years of increases in paperwork burden.

Since I became Chairman of the Government Reform Subcommittee on Energy Policy, Natural Resources and Regulatory Affairs in 2001, my Subcommittee has held multiple hearings that form the basis for the provisions in the bill. These include a March 11, 2003 hearing entitled ''How To Improve Regulatory Accounting: Costs, Benefits, and Impacts of Federal Regulations,'' and an April 11, 2003 hearing entitled ''Mid-Term Report Card: Is the Bush Administration Doing Enough on Paperwork Reduction?'' The witnesses at these hearings made several thoughtful recommendations, which are reflected in the bill.

Bill: My bi-partisan bill makes improvements in processes governing both paperwork and regulations. With respect to paperwork, the bill requires OMB to have at least two full-time staff working solely on tax paperwork reduction. Currently, there is only one OMB employee working part-time on tax paperwork even though IRS accounts for over 80 percent of all government-imposed paperwork. In July 2002, the Appropriations Committee included a directive to OMB in House Report 107–575, which accompanied its 2003 Treasury-Postal Appropriations bill, to focus more of OMB staff attention on reducing IRS paperwork. In addition, I have repeatedly asked OMB to increase its staff effort devoted to tax paperwork to no avail.

Also, the bill removes unjustified exemptions from various paperwork review and regulatory due process requirements in the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002. This law exempted certain Department of Agriculture regulations both from the Administrative Procedure Act's due process protections for affected parties and the PRA's required review and approval by OMB. Under the PRA, OMB is charged with assuring practical utility to all information collections imposed on the public. Also, the PRA includes a public protection clause, which assures that the public cannot be penalized for not providing information in unauthorized paperwork. The Department of Agriculture has one of the worst track records in terms of compliance with the PRA. The legislative history for this 2002 law includes no justification for this significant change in regulatory and paperwork promulgation procedures.

With respect to regulations, the bill makes permanent the authorization for the General Accounting Office (GAO) to respond to Congressional requests for an independent evaluation of selective agency regulatory proposals. To date, GAO has not hired staff for this function since the law only authorized a 3-year pilot project. To assume oversight responsibility for Federal regulations, Congress needs to be armed with an independent evaluation. What is needed is an analysis of legislative history, e.g., to see if there is a non-delegation problem or backdoor legislating. Instructed by GAO's independent evaluations, Congress will be better equipped to review final agency rules under the Congressional Review Act. More importantly, Congress will be better equipped to submit timely and knowledgeable comments on proposed rules during the public comment period.

In addition, the bill requires certain changes to improve regulatory accounting. These include: (a) requiring Federal agencies to annually submit estimates of the costs and benefits associated with the Federal rules and paperwork for each of their agency programs; (b) requiring OMB's regulatory accounting statement to cover the same 7–year time series as the President's budget; (c) requiring integration into the President's budget; and (d) establishing pilot projects for regulatory budgeting. Currently, the economic impacts of Federal regulation receive much less scrutiny than programs in the fiscal budget. Requiring OMB presentation using the same time series as the fiscal budget and being fully integrated into the fiscal budget documents, Congress will be better able to simultaneously review both the on-budget and off-budget costs associated with each Federal agency imposing regulatory or paperwork burdens on the public. Lastly, the bill includes a pilot test to determine the feasibility of regulatory budgeting. This vehicle would help ensure that agencies address the worst societal problems first.

I believe that the public expects and deserves paperwork reduction results. In addition, I believe that the public has the right to know if it is getting its money's worth from Federal regulation.

CLEMENT ZABLOCKI, THE ORIGINAL DEMOCRAT FROM THE REAGAN ERA

HON. GERALD D. KLECZKA

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, I wish to enter into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an article that appeared in the April 29, 2003 issue of The Hill. This piece, written by John Komacki details the career and legacy of my predecessor in Congress, U.S. Rep. Clem Zablocki.

CLEMENT ZABLOCKI: THE ORIGINAL DEMOCRAT FROM THE REAGAN ERA

He is now all but forgotten unless you stop at the branch public library on the corner of 35th and Oklahoma Avenue, just across the street from Villa Roma Pizza and Oak Park Lanes on Milwaukee's South Side. Or you might know of him if you visit the Ambulatory Care Wing at the Polish-American Hospital in Krakow, Poland.

Yet he left an important mark in U.S. foreign affairs that all presidents follow, in spirit if not approval. He was also a model for his party who predated the Sen. Henry ''Scoop'' Jackson (D-Wash.) pro-defense Democrats of the '70s and is again becoming fashionable in an age of terrorism and preemption.

The first thing most people noticed about Rep. Clement J. Zablocki (D-Wis.) was how unnoticeable he was. With a dark, Thomas Dewey-like mustache, the short, squat, reticent man looked more like a church organist or a high school teacher than a congressman.

He was, of course, both before being elected to the Wisconsin Senate in 1942. In 1948, he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives, and he was re-elected by large majorities until his death in 1983.

Zablocki became one of Wisconsin's most popular and endearing politicians. His Milwaukee district was the core of city's Catholic. Polish-American community, and he reflected the working-class patriotism and morality of the second- and third-generation Eastern European-immigrant community.

As such, he valued hard work and was staunchly anti-Communist and religiously conservative. Yet his standing with liberal groups especially on economic matters and on important issues in foreign policy was generally higher than with conservative groups.

It is, however, in foreign policy that Zablocki's legacy remains.

Since his first term in Congress, Zablocki was a member of what was then called the Foreign Affairs Committee, not considered a prize committee assignment then—or now, for that matter. It remained his only major committee throughout his long tenure in the House.

He became an expert on a broad range of international issues and, over time, was able to blend his pro-Western, Cold War perspectives with an understanding of the more liberal views of Democrats who joined the committee in the '60s. Even so, he was an advocate of American intervention in Vietnam as chairman of the Subcommittee on Asian and Pacific Affairs between 1959 and 1969.

As escalation continued in Vietnam without appreciable results. Zablocki began to judiciously question the strategy and the information he and fellow committee members were receiving from the White House and the Defense Department. In the early '70s, he led the House effort to reassert congressional authority in foreign policy decision-making.

By then, Zablocki was chairman of the Subcommittee on National Security Policy and Scientific Developments. He became floor manager of a 1971 resolution directing the president to consult with Congress before committing troops ''whenever feasible.'' A year, later he sponsored another resolution without the qualifier. The House passed both but the Senate took no action.

In 1973, with President Nixon weakened from revelations of the Watergate scandal, the House and Senate passed the War Powers Resolution, restricting the executive warmaking power over Nixon's veto.

Though preferring close scrutiny of most presidential actions, Zablocki still favored executive flexibility, especially in intelligence and security matters. He supported President Jimmy Carter's position on limiting congressional oversight of the CIA yet disagreed with Carter's emphasis on human rights as a determining factor in providing foreign aid.

Zablocki became chairman of the full committee as Ronald Reagan became president in 1981. While Reagan stressed defense priorities in foreign assistance programs, Zablocki emphasized direct economic aid to the poorest regions. Eventually he provided a compromise on key issues that bolstered strategic concerns while building stronger economies abroad. Zablocki was also able to pass a rare two-year aid authorization package in 1981.

Though supportive of Reagan's Caribbean Basin Initiative, Zablocki differed with Reagan on nuclear-proliferation policy. Later, when it became apparent that the administration was supporting Nicaraguan insurgents, which the House majority felt was ill-conceived, he co-wrote the amendment that cut off assistance to the Contras. Though better known today as the Boland Amendment, it was officially the Boland-Zablocki Amendment. The administration's surreptitious reaction to that led to the Iran-Contra scandal that roiled the Gipper.

The unimposing, diminutive man from a working-class district tempered executive authority while increasing the prestige of both his committee and the House. He also provided a timeless lesson in how the opposition party may boldly assert itself in matters of foreign policy without sacrificing principle in matters of national security or compassion. The Reagan Democrats were named for voters such as his constituents, but they never left Clem Zablocki.

RECOGNIZING SERGEANT ATANASIO HARO MARIN

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and remember Sergeant Atanasio Haro Marin who lost his life in service to our nation during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Sergeant Haro Marin was a member of Battery C, 3rd Battalion, 16th Field Artillery, 4th Infantry Division (Mechanized) of Fort Hood, Texas, and was from Baldwin Park, CA.

Sergeant Haro Marin exemplified the very best of our great nation. He represents the spirit of the brave soldier, exhibiting courage, selfless service, and honor beyond measure. His heroic actions have contributed to the safety, freedom, and security of our nation, Iraq, and the world.

I would like to extend my sincerest sympathy and condolences to the family and friends of Sergeant Haro Marin, and would ask that all Americans join me in remembering our soldiers and their loved ones during these challenging times.

Though Sergeant Haro Marin has passed, his spirit remains in the freedom that each and every American enjoys. Through his valiancy, bravery, and fearless commitment to the Armed Services of our nation, many lives have been touched. Our nation is privileged to have service men and women like Sergeant Haro Marin willing to risk their lives for the greater good of our country. I urge my colleagues to join me in remembering the life of Sergeant Atanasio Haro Marin.

HONORING THE LIFE AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF WILLIAM STILL, ''FATHER OF THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD''

HON. ROBERT E. ANDREWS

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. William Still and to celebrate the upcoming National Underground Railroad Family Reunion Festival. Mr. Still, known as the ''Father of the Underground Railroad,'' was one of the primary architects of the legendary passage that assisted slaves in achieving their long sought freedom in the North.

From early childhood, William Still worked on his father's farm in Burlington County, New Jersey. When he was 23, he left the family farm for Philadelphia, arriving poor and friendless. But, as a testament to his determined nature and a foreshadowing of his future success, Mr. Still taught himself to read so by 1847, he was able to hold a secretarial position in the Pennsylvania Society for the Abolition of Slavery. While in this position, Mr. Still became directly involved in assisting African-Americans with their escape from the institution of slavery, and was able to provide boarding for many of the fugitives who rested in Philadelphia before continuing their journey to Canada.

William Still became well known for his hard work and dedication, and in 1951 when Philadelphia abolitionists organized the Vigilance Committee to assist fugitives traveling through the city, Mr. Still was elected chairman. During this time, Mr. Still used his house as one of the busiest stations on the Underground Railroad, being awoken endlessly and tirelessly throughout the night to provide fugitives with clothing and food. By some estimates, Mr. Still helped a total of 649 slaves obtain freedom. In addition, Mr. Still interviewed the fleeing slaves, including the famous conductor, Harriet Tubman, and kept careful records so that families and friends would be able to locate their relatives in the future. The result was his 1872 publication, The Underground Railroad; a seminal work documenting the perilous journeys slaves took for freedom.

In addition to his work on the Underground Railroad, Mr. Still, an active member of the Presbyterian Church, established a Mission School in North Philadelphia and organized one of the early YMCAs for black youth. Through these efforts, Mr. Still helped African-American youth embrace their newfound freedom, and it was with his strong leadership that the African-American community successfully made the difficult transition from the cruelty of slavery to the joys of emancipation.

In honor of his esteemed and gracious work, the William Still Underground Railroad Foundation, Inc., as requested by the Harriet Tubman Historical Society, is sponsoring the first annual National Underground Railroad Family Reunion Festival to take place in Camden, NJ and Philadelphia, PA from June 27–29, 2003. The three-day celebration will reunite descendants of conductors, abolitionists, stationmasters, fugitives, and all those whose ancestors were associated with the Underground Railroad in a public arena.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that my colleagues join me in honoring Mr. William Still, a man who dedicated his life to ensure the freedom and survival of others. In addition, I offer my sincere admiration and appreciation to the William Still Underground Railroad Foundation for planning and sponsoring the first annual National Underground Railroad Family Reunion Festival.

COMMENDING ELROY CHRISTOPHER AND CLAYTON GUYTON FOR ACHIEVING A 2003 ROBERT WOOD JOHNSON COMMUNITY HEALTH LEADERSHIP PROGRAM (CHLP) AWARD

HON. ELIJAH E. CUMMINGS

OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate, Elroy Christopher and Clayton Guyton, who stood up to drug dealers and opened a community center in their Baltimore neighborhood to save it from the ravages of crime and addiction. Mr. Christopher and Mr. Guyton are among an elite group of individuals from across the country selected this year to receive a Robert Wood Johnson Community Health Leadership Program (CHLP) award of $120,000.

Elroy and Clayton met while doing volunteer grassroots work to change the environment of crime and drug abuse in Baltimore. In 1999, they combined forces to open the Rose Street Community Center in an abandoned row house and ''take back'' the predominantly African-American neighborhood from drug dealers who sold their wares openly on the street corner. Their goal was to create a ''civil life'' on the street where children could play safely and all residents could live without fear.

Despite regular threats, Elroy and Clayton continue to work with residents to help them get addiction treatment and job training. They run a tutoring program for youths in cooperation with nearby Johns Hopkins Hospital, they help organize computer workshops and Bible study classes, and sponsor community events such as cookouts and tree plantings.

They also created a program for court-ordered community service participants in which minor offenders clean up the streets in lieu of jail time. In the past two years, they have helped 100 men re-enter the community after being in prison.

''Before these two men began their work, Rose Street was a drug haven with open-air drug markets, intimidation of law-abiding citizens, and violence and murder,'' said their nominator, Polly Walker, Associate Director, Center for a Livable Future. ''Theirs is a single-minded commitment to help others escape the cycle of poverty, drug and alcohol addiction, and crime.''

Mr. Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in commending Elroy Christopher and Clayton Guyton for their accomplishments in founding the Rose Street Community Center and for their efforts put forth in achieving a 2003 Robert Wood Johnson Community Health Leadership Program (CHLP) award.

IN HONOR OF THE RETIREMENT OF DR. ANNA JOHNSON-WINEGAR

HON. JIM SAXTON

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor the retirement of Dr. Anna Johnson-Winegar after 3 years of public service. Dr. Johnson-Winegar led a distinguished career, culminating as the Deputy Assistant to the Secretary of Defense for Chemical and Biological Defense. In this position, Dr. Johnson-Winegar served as the focal point within the Office of the Secretary of Defense for all issues related to the highly critical Chemical and Biological Defense Program.

Dr. Johnson-Winegar received a Bachelor of Arts degree in Biology from Hood College, and Masters of Science and Ph.D. degrees in Microbiology from Catholic University of America. Along her career, she has served at the Army Medical Research and Materiel Command, the Office of the Director, Defense Research and Engineering, and the Office of Naval Research. She also participated as a biological weapons inspector in Iraq for the United Nations Special Commission, UNSCOM. In 1998 she received the Lifetime Achievement Award from Women in Science and Engineering. Dr. Johnson-Winegar came to her current position in October 1999.

In response to the President's emerging defense strategy, coupled with the events of September 11, 2001, Dr. Johnson-Winegar spearheaded a paradigm shift within the Department of Defense Chemical Biological Defense Program. Under her leadership and expertise, defending our men and women in uniform against the threat of biological and chemical attack has taken on a heightened priority at the forefront of defense planning. She has lead the effort to improve the overall capability to defend against weapons of mass destruction, from increasing and focusing research efforts which identify and mature promising new technologies, to fielding tested and proven equipment to the warfighter engaged in ongoing operations worldwide. In an era of increasing global threat, Dr. Johnson-Winegar has helped shape how this Nation will defend both itself and its soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines against the threat of chemical and biological warfare agents. We honor Dr. Johnson-Winegar as a true patriot whose many accomplishments serving our country have helped keep this Nation strong and secure.

FACTS, NOT POLITICAL CORRECTNESS, SHOULD DETERMINE MILITARY PERSONNEL POLICIES

HON. ROSCOE G. BARTLETT
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker: The men and women who serve in America's Armed Services performed exceptionally well during Operation Iraqi Freedom.

During the three weeks of initial heavy combat, members of the Army's 507th Maintenance Unit were ambushed along the lengthy supply lines within Iraq. The death, brief imprisonment, and serious injuries to three women in that unit briefly captured the attention of the world.

Pfc. Lori Piestewa, a single mother of two toddlers, a 3-year old and a 4-year old, was killed in the attack. Pfc. Piestewa had joined the military 2 years earlier after being divorced.

Spec. Shoshana Johnson, a single mother of a 2-year old, had joined the Army to gain experience as a cook. She was held briefly as a POW. In gross violation of the Geneva Convention, the Iraqis videotaped and distributed footage of the clearly terrified Spec. Johnson and her fellow American captives being interrogated.

Pfc. Jessica Lynch joined the military to earn educational benefits to fulfill her dream of becoming a teacher. She is now recovering from serious injuries following her rescue from an Iraqi hospital by American Special Forces.

Spec. Johnson's family was shocked to find out that her Army career as a cook for a Maintenance Unit placed her in harm's way within enemy territory during the invasion of Iraq. It was news to millions of Americans that military personnel policies deliberately assign women to serve in units that are routinely deployed in harm's way.

As a scientist, I believe that government policies should be based upon facts. The facts are that men and women are different. As the only Member of Congress with a Ph.D. in Human Physiology, I can assert this as a matter of scientific fact. However, you don't need to be a scientist to know this is true. It is basic common sense.

The military is a profession where the stakes involved are a matter of life and death. On a battlefield, the differences between men and women have potentially life and death consequences. I would like to submit for the record and edification of my colleagues and the nation a number of documents examining the evidence of the impact of the differences between men and women on the battlefield.

Most of the documents have been organized by Ms. Elaine Donnelly, the President of the Center for Military Readiness, an independent public policy organization that specializes in military personnel issues. Ms. Donnelly is also a former member of the 1992 Presidential Commission on the Assignment of Women in the Armed Forces, and of the Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services (DACOWITS, 1984–86). For additional information, you may log onto the CMR website: www.cmrlink.org.

Included among these documents are: "Army Gender-Integrated Basic Training (GIBT)—Summary of Relevant Findings and Recommendations: 1993–2002." Additional articles from major news organizations include: "No More GI Orphans," Editorial, The Boston Globe, April 9, 2003; "Mothers at War," Editorial, The Washington Post, March 25, 2003; "Mothers At Sea," Editorial, The Wall Street Journal, December 3, 1999.

I am also including an article by Anita Ramasastry, "What Happens When GI Jane is Captured: Women Prisoners of War and the Geneva Conventions," April 2, 2003. Ms. Ramasastry is an Assistant Professor of Law at the University of Washington School of Law in Seattle and the Associate Director of the Shidler Center for Law, Commerce & Technology.

I hope these documents will encourage our nation and policy makers to address this important issue.

All of these documents ask tough questions about the impact, costs and consequences of current military personnel policies concerning the assignments of men and women. A number of significant changes in military personnel policies affecting men and women were adopted during the previous administration. These policy changes did not receive public attention or scrutiny until Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom.

It is not an exaggeration to say that among policy makers, at least for the public record, there has been a reluctance to ask, let alone endeavor to discover the answers to these tough questions. This is a mistake.

The fear that the facts that we might discover about the real world impact of changes in military personnel policies might prove inconvenient or politically incorrect is no justification for ignoring the necessity to do so. From my previous work as a scientist and engineer and now as a Member of Congress, I believe public policies should be grounded in facts, not wishful thinking. This is especially true with respect to military personnel polices. We, as public policy makers, owe the individual men and women who sacrifice so much to serve in our military personnel policies that will enhance their capability to achieve the military's mission and to protect their lives. We can never forget that military service is a profession where the stakes can not be higher or have graver consequences.

I hope the material I have submitted for publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD encourages a vigorous inquiry and debate about military personnel policies by both the public and government officials.

ARMY GENDER-INTEGRATED BASIC TRAINING (GIBT)—SUMMARY OF RELEVANT FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS: 1993–2002

In a slide presentation prepared for presentation to the Secretary of the Army on March 22, 2002, the Army Training and Doctrine Command claimed that GIBT is "effective" in terms of social benefits. TRADOC also conceded that gender-integrated basic training (GIBT) is an "inefficient" format for basic instruction of recruits. Inefficiencies associated with GIBT, some of which were admitted but downplayed by TRADOC in March 2002, include the following:

Less discipline, less unit cohesion, and more distraction from training programs.

Voluntary and involuntary misconduct, due to an emotionally volatile environment for which leaders and recruits are unprepared.

Higher physical injury and sick call rates that detract from primary training objectives.

Diversion from essential training time due to interpersonal distractions and the need for an extra week of costly "sensitivity training."

A perceived decline in the overall quality and discipline of GIBT; lack of confidence in the abilities of fellow soldiers; and the need to provide remedial instruction to compensate for military skills not learned in basic training.

Re-defined or lowered standards, gender-normed scores, and elimination of physically demanding exercises so that women will succeed.

Additional stress on instructors who must deal with different physical abilities and psychological needs of male and female recruits.

Contrivances to reduce the risk of scandal, such as changing rooms, extra security equipment and personnel hours to monitor barracks activities, and "no talk, no touch" rules, which interfere with informal contacts between recruits and instructors.

No evidence of objectively measured positive benefits from GIBT, and no evidence that restoration of separate gender training would have negative consequences for women or men.

An admittedly "inefficient" method of basic training that produces little or no tangible benefits cannot be described as "effective" in military terms. This is especially so when findings of two major blue ribbon commissions on co-ed basic training have indicated otherwise.

GIBT was implemented administratively in 1994. It is possible to restore superior gender-separate basic training, which is both efficient and effective in military terms, in the same way. For the sake of military efficiency and the best interests of Army men and women, this should be done without further delay.

1. The need for women in the military is unquestioned and not relevant to the issue of Gender-Integrated Training. The real question is whether it makes sense to retain an expensive, inefficient form of Army training that offers minimal benefits in terms of military necessity.

The Final Report of the 1999 Congressional Commission on Military Training and Gender-Related Issues noted that "Whether [gender-integrated basic training] improves the readiness of the performance of the operational force is subjective."

A close look at data and testimony gathered by this and other recent studies indicate that there are no significant benefits from gender integrated basic training, but many problems and complications that detract from the primary purpose of GIBT.

2. The only argument offered by TRADOC in 2002 in favor of retaining GIBT is that male and female recruits prefer training together for social reasons.

Young people entering the services today are more "gender-aware" than generations past, and making recruits happy is not the purpose of basic training. Three years after the return of GIBT, sensational sex scandals involving everything from sexual abuse to consensual but exploitive relationships between cadre and junior trainees made headlines nationwide.

The 1997 Federal Advisory Committee on Gender-Integrated Training and Related Issues, headed by former Kansas Senator Nancy Kassebaum Baker, found that ''. . . the present organizational structure in integrated basic training is resulting in less discipline, less unit cohesion, and more distraction from training programs.''

The Kassebaum Baker Commission, whose members were largely independent and free of conflicts of interest, voted unanimously that gender-integrated basic training should be discontinued.

3. The 1999 Congressional Commission reported abundant evidence of inappropriate relationships and distractions in GIBT.

The Congressional Commission report cataloged numerous policies and practices, made necessary by GIBT, which create inefficiencies and detract from concentration. These include separate changing rooms, loss of informal counseling opportunities (due to the need to meet in the presence of a ''battle buddy'' on neutral territory), differences in needs and abilities, the need to enforce ''no talk, no touch'' rules, and miscommunications due to lost messages between platoon leaders. All have placed great stress on already overburdened instructors.

Collateral policies introduced to cope with these distractions make it more difficult for instructors to enforce necessary discipline. For example, special ''hot lines'' set up to receive anonymous complaints have ruined careers, caused several suicides, and driven a wedge between Army men and women. Tolerance of false or exaggerated accusations is as demoralizing as sexual misconduct itself.

4. Problems associated with gender-integrated basic training (GIBT) cannot be resolved with ''leadership'' or ''sensitivity training'' alone.

Continuing a program that increases costs and complicates the training mission, while providing minimal benefits, is not responsible leadership. Military policy makers should establish basic training programs that encourage discipline, rather than indiscipline.

Excessive ''sensitivity/diversity'' training has become a jobs program for civilian ''equal opportunity'' consultants, paid for with funds diverted from more essential military training. When the 1997 Army Senior Review Panel (SRP) recommended an extra week of sensitivity or ''values'' education to counter sexual harassment, Army Times estimated the cost to be equivalent to that of three battalions of soldiers in the field.

Given today's threat environment, the substantial amount of time devoted to sensitivity training in basic training might be better spent on potentially life-saving training in areas such as antiterrorism and force protection.

5. Higher physical injury and sick call rates among female trainees create serious ''inefficiencies'' that detract from the primary goal of basic training.

Prof. Charles Moskos, a respected military sociologist and member of the Congressional Commission, wrote in the panel's Final Report: ''I am particularly perturbed by the high physical injury rate of women trainees compared to men. Likewise, I am put off by the double-talk in training standards that often obscures physical strength differences between men and women. The extraordinarily high dropout rate of women in IET cannot be overlooked (nor should the fact that females are more than twice as likely to be non-deployable than are male servicemembers) The bottom line must be what improves military readiness.''

In Great Britain in 1997, Army commander noted that co-ed basic training was causing many young women to drop out early, due to injuries to their lower limbs. Restoration of all female platoons for a one-year trial in 1996 reduced women's injury rates by 50%, and first-time pass rates increased from 50% to 70%. Incidents of sexual misconduct between instructors and recruits also decreased significantly. Col. Simon Vandeleur, commanding officer of the Army Training Regiment at Pirbright, Surrey, said that the move to train women separately ''started as a trial, but has continued unquestioned, due to its success.''

Recent Army figures indicate that female soldiers take sick calls at rates double those of men.

Extensive tests conducted with ROTC cadets indicate that a wide gap exists between the physical performance and potential of men and women. Among other things, testimony and charts prepared by training expert Dr. William J. Gregor indicate that only 2.5% of female ROTC cadets were able to attain the male mean score on the 2-mile run, and only 4.5% could do so on the strength test. Only 19% of all cadet women achieved the minimum level of aerobic fitness set for men.

6. Every commission study since 1992, including the 2002 TRADOC report, found evidence that real or perceived double or relaxed standards are demoralizing to all who are aware of them.

In the aftermath of the 1996 Aberdeen scandals, then-Army Secretary Togo D. West, Jr., formed a Senior Review Panel (SRP) to study the issue of sexual harassment. The SRP was staunchly supportive of Secretary West's policies (which several members had helped to formulate), but nonetheless reported disturbing findings.

Among men surveyed, 60% were either ''not sure'' or ''disagreed'' that ''The soldiers in this company have enough skills that 1 would trust them with my life in combat.'' The combined figure for women was 74%. In response to ''If we went to war tomorrow, I would feel good about going with this company,'' 63% of the men said they weren't sure or disagreed, while 76% of the women said the same.

A 1997 congressionally authorized RAND study on GIBT was released in an edited version that differed greatly from the original draft. RAND originally found, for example, that gender-norming reduces female injuries but heightens resentment of double standards and degrades morale. In the chapter on ''cohesion,'' the study declared ''success'' under a civilianized ''workplace'' definition, instead of the classic principle that ''. . . group members must meet all standards of performance and behavior in order not to threaten group survival.''

7. There is no empirical evidence that GIBT improves the quality of military training for male or female trainees.

According to surveys conducted by the Congressional Commission, 48% of Army recruit trainers said that the quality of basic training declines when men and women are in the same units.

When asked about the current quality of entry-level graduates compared to five years ago, 74% of Army leaders who responded to the survey indicated that ''Overall quality'' had declined, and 80% said that ''Discipline'' had declined.

8. GIBT always requires adjustments in standards to accommodate physical differences. Gender-normed qualification requirements reduce excessive stress fractures and other injuries among female trainees, but also have the effect of making training less rigorous for men.

Training standards frequently measure ''team'' accomplishments rather than individual performance, which contributes to mutual trust, teamwork, and genuine unit cohesion. Under this concept, which is stressed in the TRADOC slide presentation, stronger members fill in for weaker ones, and recognition is given for ''equal effort'' rather than equal accomplishment.

This means that some trainees are allowed to graduate simply by trying to accomplish given training tasks, such as scaling high walls or throwing practice grenades, even if they do not succeed. Claims that women's training is ''exactly the same as men'' ignore the reality of gender-normed scores and qualification standards that are inherently demoralizing.

The concept is inherently dubious, since trainees know that there are extra step stools, protective barriers, or gender-normed scores on the battlefield. Attempts to ignore that reality have hurt the credibility of Army leadership.

9. There is no evidence that GIBT would be more successful if women are actually ''held to the same high standards as men.''

This argument disregards the effect of political pressures from feminists who demand ''equality,'' but are the first to demand ''fairer'' gender-normed standards so that women will not fail. In the past two decades, attempts to toughen training or match the person to the job were withdrawn because organized civilian feminists perceived them as threatening to women's ''career opportunities.''

The Army tried twice in the early 1980s to implement realistic strength standards, commensurate with wartime demands, in occupations rated from light to very heavy. In both instances, tests showed that most women were unable to meet the standards for nearly 70% of Army occupational specialties. The recommendations were never implemented as planned because the former Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services (DACOWITS) complained that such systems would have a ''disproportionate impact'' on the careers of female soldiers.

10. Numerous military and civilian studies done in the United States and in other countries have documented significant differences in male and female physiology that are relevant to military performance.

Numerous American studies have confirmed that in general, women are shorter, weigh less, and have less muscle mass and greater relative fat content than men. Women are at a distinct disadvantage because dynamic upper torso muscular strength is approximately 50–60% that of males, and aerobic capacity (important for endurance) is approximately 70–75% that of males.

A test of Army recruits found that women had a 2.13 times greater risk for lower extremity injuries and a 4.71 times greater risk for stress fractures. Men sustained 99 days of limited duty due to injury while women incurred 481 days of limited duty.

In the United Kingdom, major studies were ordered in 1998 to ascertain the feasibility of co-ed basic training. Army doctors found that eight times as many women as men were being discharged during basic training, due to injury rates that doubled following the introduction of identical training programs for both sexes. Differences in strength, bone mass, stride length and lower body bone structure caused women to suffer disproportionately from Achilles tendon problems, knee, back and leg pain, and fractures of the tibia, foot, and hip.

The ''gender-free'' system was ended in January 2002 because stress fractures for women rose from 4.6% to 11.1%, compared to less than 1.5% for male trainees.

11. Contrary to the claims of GIBT proponents, studies conducted by the Army Research Institute (ARI) in 1993–1995 did not confirm that mixed training produced better results.

After a 1993 pilot test at Fort Jackson, SC, commanders recommended the continuance of gender-separate training because they observed no improvements in fitness and military proficiency for men or women.

Later in 1993, the Army ordered a new 3-year study from ARI, this time to include an assessment of soldiers' attitudes toward mixed or separate training. Inquiries centered on measures of social/psychological interest (i.e., how well do people get along together?) instead of measures of military interest (i.e., how well will people trained in this way fulfill their duties, especially under crisis conditions?)

The latter 1993 ARI study proclaimed GIBT superior because it was found in separate-gender focus groups that the morale of women improved by 14 points. At the same time, however, the men's morale dropped by 17 points. The gap narrowed somewhat when subsequent focus groups were gender-mixed. ARI questions still focused on ''touchy-feely'' questions, i.e., whether others want to do a good job.''

12. There are no empirical studies showing that women perform better in GIBT than they formerly did in separate-gender training prior to 1994.

After the initial 1993 study, the Army never again compared results of mixed versus separate training formats. Tests thereafter were to determine the best mix of males and females in a platoon (75/25, a ratio almost never observed). Even before the ARI surveys of ''attitudes'' were complete, the Army announced its decision to discontinue gender-separate training, except for ground combat trainees, in August 1994.

When GIBT was implemented in 1994, the training regimen was adjusted to reduce the risk of injuries among female recruits. Meanings of the words ''soldierization'' and ''proficiency'' were re-defined, physical requirements were de-emphasized, and ''success'' was measured with new training exercises that would not disadvantage women, such as map reading, first aid, and putting on protective gear.

The Army informed the Congressional Commission, in response to a specific demand by Congress, that it has not, and does not plan to, objectively measure or evaluate the effectiveness of GIBT. Many officials taking this position were responsible for implementing and making a ''success'' of GIBT in the first place.

13. The Army slogan ''Train as We Fight'' is an important goal in advanced training. For basic training, however, ''Train to Transform'' is a more appropriate slogan. Basic training is the first step in a progressive, building block process of training soldiers to serve, fight, and win.

Within only a few weeks, young civilian recruits must learn to wear a uniform properly, have respect for authority, observe proper customs and courtesies, and accept and live by the core values of the service. Operational commanders should not have to spend time for remedial training in these matters, due to inadequacies at the basic level.

Maj. Gen. William Keys, USMC (Ret.), a member of the Congressional Commission, wrote in a statement to Congress that ''Basic training teaches basic military skills such as physical fitness, close order drill and marksmanship. It is a military socialization process—civilians are transformed into soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines. This training provides recruits the basic military skills needed to integrate into an operational unit. It does not teach war-fighting skills nor should it be the staging ground for ''gender'' etiquette skills.''

The slogan is also inconsistent with special ''lights out'' security alarms and other security measures, as described on Slide #18, which are not available in an operational environment, These include barracks guards who conduct ''bed-checks'' of GIBT trainees every 30 minutes and are changed every two hours.

14. The Marine Corps has demonstrated that a well-designed single-gender basic training program, with same-sex drill instructors, can be tailored to challenge male and female trainees to the limit.

Separate sex training increases ''rigor'' for all soldiers, forces female recruits to be self-reliant, and reduces the risk of demoralizing injuries that cause female recruits to drop out.

The Kassebaum Baker Commission found that the Marines' single sex approach was producing ''impressive levels of confidence, team building and esprit de corps in all female platoons at the Parris Island base.''

The Congressional Commission found that female Marine trainees scored significantly higher than any other group in commitment, group identity and respect for authority—all of which are important elements of military cohesion.

Separate housing and instruction improves the ability of male and female recruits to concentrate on transformation. As stated by then-Marine Assistant Commandant Richard I. Neal, ''We don't want them to think about anything else than becoming a Marine.''

15. There is no evidence that restoration of gender-separate basic training would ''reinforce negative attitudes and stereotypes,'' or hurt morale among female soldiers.

On the contrary, members of the Congressional Commission noticed that GIBT might be reinforcing, rather than eliminating, stereotypes. Female trainees frequently said that they liked training with the men because ''The guys really help us.'' When asked how, they typically answered, ''They motivate us. They lift heavy stuff for us. We trade—we do their ironing, and they clean our floors.'' Women Marines, by contrast, have to do every task themselves, without passing off dirty or difficult jobs to men. They must team up and find a way to lug heavy objects, and are motivated to climb walls by other women who have demonstrated that it can be done.

Separate-gender training develops self-reliance and confidence as well as teamwork. In the Marine Corps, female trainees must find ways to accomplish basic training tasks on their own, without assistance from male trainees to assist them with heavy loads.

Military historian S.L.A. Marshall has noted that ''Authentic morale does not grow in its own soil, [with] combat efficiency as a mysterious byproduct. . . . [Rather,] high morale flows when the ranks are at all times conscious that they are service in a highly efficient institution.'' Attorney Adam G. Mersereau amplified the point as follows:

''[M]orale without combat efficiency is most likely an inauthentic form of morale, brought on by false confidence. . . To try to build a military's morale without first, or at least concurrently, establishing a foundation of unshakable efficiency is a dangerous error.''

The Congressional Commission found that among male soldiers in training, the most frequently mentioned recommendations for change were to separate males and females during basic combat training (BCT), make the training harder; and require recruiters to tell the truth. Female recruits called for an end to ''battle buddy'' restrictions, improved barracks, and more sexual harassment training.

16. Army women deserve the same high quality training as women Marines have today, and Army women had prior to 1994.

The drawbacks of GIBT conflict with the tradition of Army discipline and the current concept of Transformation, which depends on personnel who are stronger, more versatile, and better prepared.

Short-term costs for returning to single sex basic training would be minimal, and long-term savings related to fewer disciplinary problems and injuries could be substantial.

Sound policies regarding basic training should not be based on unrealistic theories or feminist ideology, including the belief that men and women are interchangeable in all military roles. Nor should gender integration be considered an ''end'' in itself. The Army needs to encourage competence in training, not egalitarianism at all costs.

17. It is possible that restoration of separate gender training would have a positive effect on recruiting for the volunteer Army.

The 1998 Youth Attitudes Tracking Study (YATS) found that the great majority of both men (83%) and women (77%) said it would make no difference to them whether basic training was conducted with or without the opposite sex. The YATS also found that young men, who constitute 80% of enlistees, are more interested in seeking physical challenge than young women, and they perceive the Air Force and the Navy as less physically challenging than the Marine Corps and the Army. Members of the Congressional Commission concluded that: ''Only the Marine Corps and the Army have all-male training, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that this enhances their image of being physically challenging. Overall, the results of the 1998 YATS suggest that the Army, Navy, and Air Force probably would suffer no loss in terms of recruiting (and might gain) if they decided to change, in whole or in part, from gender-integrated training to gender-separate training.''

18. Military personnel policies are bi-partisan, but there is evidence of political support to ''fix the clock'' on this and other social policies implemented during the previous administration.

During the 2000 Presidential Campaign, the American Legion Magazine asked then-Texas Governor George W. Bush about his views on co-ed basic training. Candidate Bush replied, ''The experts tell me, such as Condoleezza Rice, that we ought to have separate basic training facilities. I think women in the military have an important and good role, but the people who study the issue tell me that the most effective training would be to have the genders separated.''

Dr. Rice, who is now National Security Advisor to President, Bush, voted with all other members of the 1998 Kassebaum Baker Commission to end co-ed basic training.

A mandate for change was evident in votes cast by military personnel, their families, and supporters, who were told by Governor Bush's running mate, Dick Cheney, that ''help is on the way.''

19. GIBT can and should be eliminated administratively, without further delay.

GIBT was not authorized by Congress after careful deliberation, but imposed by administrative directives written by former Assistant Secretary of the Army Sara Lister, a civilian lawyer who notoriously depicted the Marines as ''extremist.''

No one has seen a written order setting forth a logical rationale for the Army's action. Indications are, however, that the decision was accepted as a trade-off to head off even more egregious mandates being promoted by Sara Lister at the time; i.e., gender integration of multiple launch rocket systems (MLRS) and special operations helicopters.

In 1994, uniformed leaders of the Army implemented GIBT without dissent. One brigade training commander told the Washington Post that it was necessary to take the ''Attila the Hun approach'' with drill instructors that resisted. ''I told them that gender integration was our mission, and any outward manifestation of noncompliance would not be tolerated.''

Having invested so much in the process, some Army officials lobbied hard to defeat legislation, which passed the House in 1998, to implement recommendations of the Kassebaum Baker Commission. Nevertheless, during the March 17, 1998, HNSC hearing, senior officers representing the armed forces had difficulty making a convincing case for gender-mixed basic training.

20. This is not a question of turning the clock backward or forward. If the clock is broken, it should be fixed.

A five-year experiment with GIBT during the Carter Administration was summarily terminated in 1982 not because of lack of confidence in women's abilities to become soldiers, but because women were suffering injuries in far greater numbers, and men were not being challenged enough. Contemporaneous news reports indicated that GIBT was eliminated in order ''to facilitate the Army's toughening goals and enhance the soldierization process.''

Civilian oversight of the military includes the responsibility to set policies for the future, not to continue flawed policies of the past.

NO MORE GI ORPHANS

Lori Piestewa died in combat in the Iraq war's first week. She was a single parent who left two small children. Shoshana Johnson, who was taken prisoner in the same clash, is the single parent of a small child. It is high time the Defense Department redrew its policies to stop single custodial parents—female or male—from being deployed in harm's way. The military should not run the risk that children will be orphaned or face extended separations from their single parent.

During the first Gulf War, Senator Barbara Boxer of California was so concerned that she sponsored a Gulf orphan bill. Boxer's measure would also have kept the services from deploying both parents when both a father and mother were in the military. The Pentagon resisted, however, and before Congress could take any action the war ended. About 80,000 children have a single parent or both parents in the services. Women still cannot serve in ground combat infantry, tank, or artillery positions, but since 1991 the Defense Department has opened up more front-line opportunities to women, who are more likely than men to be single custodial parents. In light of the Piestewa and Johnson cases, Boxer and others in Congress should force the military to ask why its policies place so many children at risk of being orphaned.

The issue brings into conflict the interests of the parent-soldier, the commanding officer, and the child. A parent seeking advancement might be reluctant to accept limits on assignments that could slow promotions. A commanding officer does not want to have several positions filled by soldiers who have to stay at the base when the fighting starts.

But it is the interest of the child in not losing a custodial parent forever, or for a long time, that should be paramount. Instead, the Pentagon, in opposing bills like Boxer's, worried about the abstract unfairness of granting single-parent soldiers the full set of career and educational benefits without the obligation of front-line service. The military does require that parents submit ''family care plans'' for alternative caregivers when they are deployed. But an alternate caregiver, whether it is a grandparent, aunt, uncle, or family friend, is not the same as a parent.

The late senator John Heinz of Pennsylvania favored limits on single-parent deployment in 1991. To critics who said that parent-soldiers knew what they were getting into, Heinz replied that it was ''questionable whether an 18-year-old tantalized by offers of tuition money has any inkling of what he or she is giving up in 'volunteering' to leave children yet to be born behind. Our righteous insistence that 'a deal is a deal' is reminiscent of the story of Rumpelstiltskin, the dwarf in German folklore who exacts a terrible price for helping a desperate young woman—her first-born child.'' A humane military would limit the sacrifices it asks of parents—and their children.

MOTHERS AT WAR

Yesterday morning relatives of one of the American prisoners of war in Iraq, Army Spc. Shoshawna Johnson, went on television to say how much everyone missed her: her parents, her cousins and especially her 2-year-old daughter, Janelle. Spc. Johnson is a single mother, one of about 90,000 in the active-duty service. Lately such women have been featured in heartbreaking photos in Air Force Times and Army Times: Staff Sgt. Rikki Hurston, for example, feeding her four-month-old while her 8-year-old daughter looks up with wide eyes, clutching her mother's kit bag. Sgt. Hurston was headed with her unit to the Persian Gulf. ''Who knows when I'll be back,'' she said to the reporter; with her children she strove for more cheerfulness. More than ever, women are crucial to the U.S. military; they make up 16 percent of the force and perform key front-line jobs. But the increased integration comes at a price, in the form of tens of thousands of temporary orphans.

Almost 10 percent of active-duty service members are either single with children or married to another active-duty person, which means both can be called up. In the first Persian Gulf war this produced 36,704 children who had no parent left at home; this time the number is expected to be much larger. These children range from infants to teenagers. In school, many act brave and resilient; anxieties come out obliquely. Boisterous ones retreat and want only to draw strange pictures; an 11-year-old in Colorado has suddenly started failing some of his classes.

Most militaries in the world do not have women serving; those that do make allowances for family circumstance, infant children at home or two parents away. But this is a touchy issue for the U.S. military. Integrationists have fought hard over the past two decades to win full acceptance of women, who in many cases bristle at any notion that they should be treated differently. No one would want to let down her unit; besides, downsizing in the volunteer force means that any no-show is disruptive. During the first Gulf war, a presidential commission tried to address this question, recommending flexibility for the primary caregivers of children under 2. Then there was resistance; women were still a fairly new and unproven presence in many jobs. Now, and especially following this war, they will be tested and no doubt proven: ''Now, you're the fighter pilot—not the female fighter pilot,'' Capt. ''Charlie'' recently told Time magazine.

If women are to continue their critical role in the armed services, which they should, perhaps it's time to loosen up a little on the deployment rule. Right now families are required to have a child-care plan in place in case of deployment. A commander can grant exceptions if no plan is available, but service spokesmen say they almost never do. Even if no family or friends are available, the Navy can place children in volunteer families resembling foster care, so it's difficult for parents to say no. Perhaps the flexibility could start slowly. For starters, the services could coordinate and try to stagger deployments of two parents; right now it's not even a consideration. Then maybe they could tackle the more sensitive issue of single mothers, giving, say, mothers of children under 2 a real option of deferring if they had no comfortable child-care available. Surely integration would survive that.

[From the Wall Street Journal, Dec. 3, 1999]

MOTHERS AT SEA

Amid all the flotsam crossing our desk lately came one surprise: a new Defense Department report on women sailors. The study focuses on families in which the enlisted mothers of small children are away at sea five or six months at a stretch. Not surprisingly, small children who spend months without their mothers do not fare so very well.

As interesting as the findings has been the reaction: zilch. As it happens, these days a mom at sea is not so unusual. Of the 51,000 women in the Navy, 10,000 serve on shipboard. Many of them are single moms. The study, by Michelle Kelley of Old Dominion University, compared the children of women with land jobs to the kids of women who serve on extended tours. Turns out that half of these Navy women were single or divorced. This meant that when they were shipped off to sea, many of their children, whose ages ranged from one to three, had no parent at home.

If you didn't even know this was a problem, you're not alone. The idea seems to be that to admit even the slightest difficulty with women in the service threatens to drag women back to the 1950s. So instead of an open debate we get the movie version. In ''Courage Under Fire'' actress Meg Ryan plays a heroic Army helicopter captain who leaves her daughter behind with grandma as she goes off to die in the Gulf War—and feels just fine about it.

Unfortunately, no amount of Hollywood glitz is likely to console the real-world children of these military moms. And, by the way, it's not just those children. An earlier Navy study showed that four out of 10 pregnancies of women on sea duty culminated in abortion or miscarriage. That compares to two out of 10 for women sailors on shore duty. The news comes in the wake of a controversial 1995 ruling from the admirals saying that pregnancy was compatible with a Navy career, meaning that pregnant women could even serve aboard ships up to their 20th week. To put it harshly, there is a sense here that some babies are being thrown out with the seawater.

Of course, the problems of the extended tour are by no means confined to women. Military families have long suffered from the prolonged absence of fathers. In his memoir, John McCain notes that one reason he found it so easy, as a child, to idolize his father was that his father wasn't around enough to mar the golden image. What makes the Mom-Goes-to-Sea story different is the all-too-frequent absence of any parent.

Could it be that the unwillingness to address this issue signals a belief that women will suffer from any retreat from the feminist absolute? Perhaps. Whatever the reason, there is a noticeable slippery-slope effect. Thus we must have not only a woman in the military, but a mother; not only a mother but a single one; not only a trip abroad but an extended one, and so on. As the White House wonk bleats in ''Courage Under Fire'': ''She has to get the medal of honor. She's a woman. That's the point!''

Surely we are beyond that. The late 1990s are not, after all, the 1950s. No one is talking about keeping women out of the boardroom, or shutting them out of the officer's club. A little consideration for the realities of family life can only strengthen the cause of women. Owning up to the problem will, however, require courage. Maybe there should be a medal for that.

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN GI JANE IS CAPTURED?

WOMEN PRISONERS OF WAR AND THE GENEVA CONVENTIONS

(By Anita Ramasastry)

Just over one week ago, American television viewers saw disturbing images of American soldiers who had become prisoners of war (POWs) in Iraq. Among those taken captive was Specialist Shoshana Johnson, an Army cook—America's first female POW in the Iraqi conflict. Meanwhile, two other women were missing in action—Privates First Class Jessica Lynch and Lori Piestewa. (Lynch was just rescued yesterday.)

Seeing Shoshana Johnson—thirty years old, and the single mother of a two-year old child—held captive in Iraq bothered me more than I would have imagined. Like the male soldiers held with her, she faces a ruthless regime. Unlike them, however, she may also be the target of misogynistic treatment, and a potential victim of sexual assault.

Anthony Dworkin recently discussed, in a column for this site, some of the protections the Geneva Conventions offer all POWs. But what, if anything, in the Geneva Conventions protects women POWs, in particular?

Before addressing that question, it's worth examining the history of women in the U.S. military in recent years, and of women as POWs, to provide some context for the Conventions' guarantees.

WOMEN'S ROLE IN THE U.S. MILITARY NOW AND IN THE PAST

Overall, more than 200,000 women currently serve in the armed forces. These women make up 15 percent of both the enlisted ranks and the officer corps, 6 percent of the Marines, and 19 percent of the Air Force.

These women serve in a wide variety of positions. In part, that is because in 1994, during the Clinton Administration, the Pentagon discarded the ''Risk Rule,'' and authorized women to serve in any military post other than in frontline infantry, Special Forces, or armor or artillery units.

As a result, women reportedly now are allowed to hold 52 percent of active-duty positions in the Marines—about a twofold increase since the 1994 rule change. Women in the Army can hold 70 percent of such positions. And women in the Air Force and Navy can perform in 99 percent of such positions. For example, women in the Navy can now serve on ships, though not on submarines. Women in the Air Force can now fly combat missions.

American women have been in combat ever since Margaret Corbin replaced her fallen husband behind cannon during the Revolution. But this war promises to involve more women in combat than ever before.

Meanwhile, due to the nature of modern warfare, and the war on Iraq in particular, a soldier can be in serious jeopardy whether or not he or she is technically in a combat unit. There is no longer a clear ''front'' line.

Thus, support units, whose job is maintenance or supply, can find themselves in grave danger. For instance, Shoshana Johnson and her fellow POWs were a maintenance crew in a convoy that got ambushed.

WOMEN AS POWS THROUGHOUT U.S. HISTORY

Long before the 1994 rule change, there were women POWs. During the Civil War, for example, Dr. Mary Walker was imprisoned for four months by the Confederacy, accused of spying for the Union Army. (Doctor Walker is the only woman to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.)

During World War II, more than 80 military nurses, including 67 from the Army and 16 from the Navy, spent three years as prisoners of the Japanese. Many were captured when Corregidor fell in 1942. The nurses were subsequently transported to the Santo Tomas Internment camp in Manila in the Philippines—which was not liberated until February of 1945. Five Navy nurses were captured on Guam and interned in a military prison in Japan.

Meanwhile, during the 1991 Gulf War, there were two American female POWs: an Army Flight Surgeon, Major Rhonda Cornum, and an Army Transportation Specialist, Melissa Rathbun-Nealy. Cornum was subjected to ''sexual indecencies'' within hours of her capture. (She was released eight days later, but said nothing in public about the sexual assault for more than a year.)

And women, like men, have been casualties of war. According to various reports, there have also been nearly 1,000 women killed in action since the Spanish American War. Women casualties include including two aboard the USS Cole when it was attacked by terrorists in 2000, sixteen in Desert Storm, and eight in Vietnam.

WOMEN AND THE LAWS OF WAR

The Geneva Conventions of 1949 govern the treatment of soldiers and civilians during armed conflicts. The Geneva Convention III relates to the Treatment of Prisoners of War. The August 1949 treaties, whose signatories include the United States and Iraq, took effect on October 21, 1950, after the Nuremberg war crimes trials in Germany. They continue to apply now.

With respect to POWs generally, Article 13 of Geneva Convention III requires that they ''must at all times be humanely treated. Any unlawful act or omission by the Detaining Power causing death or seriously endangering the health of a prisoner of war in its custody is prohibited, and will be regarded as a serious breach of the present Convention.'' And Article 3 (common to all four Conventions) prohibits ''violence to the life, health, or physical or mental well-being of persons'' including torture of all kinds, whether physical or mental. Such acts of violence ''remain prohibited at any time and in any place . . .'' with respect to persons being detained.

The Geneva Convention III says relatively little about women—primarily because, at the time it was drafted, women were not involved on the battlefield to the same extent as men.

It does provide some privacy guarantees for women, however. Article 25 states that women prisoners must be housed separately from the men. And Article 29, which deals with hygiene and medical attention states that ''[i]n any camps in which women prisoners of war are accommodated, separate conveniences shall be provided for them.''

Meanwhile, Article 14 provides an equality guarantee of sorts for women POWs. It says that ''women shall be treated with all the regard due to their sex and shall in all cases benefit by treatment as favorable as that granted to men.''

As with domestic laws, there is a question as to how far this equality guarantee requires additional safeguards for women, beyond what men are entitled to. Some commentators argue that it does, for women have specific needs arising from gender differences, honor and modesty, and pregnancy and childbirth.

Other specific protections are also included. Women prisoners who are being disciplined are required to be confined in separate quarters under the immediate supervision of women—apparently to prevent any risk that an isolated women might be subject to sexual assault or mistreatment.

In addition, all women POWs who are pregnant or mothers with infants and small children are to be conveyed and accommodated in a neutral country. Shoshana Johnson, as the mother of a 2–year old toddler, would seem to qualify.

And more generally, under international humanitarian law, the ill-treatment of persons detained in relation to armed conflict is prohibited.

Meanwhile, civilians taken captive are meant to be afforded similar protections pursuant to Geneva Convention IV. Women are to be protected ''against rape, enforced prostitution or any form of indecent assault.'' Additional Protocol I to the Geneva Conventions, relating to civilians, notes that ''women shall be the object of special respect and shall be protected in particular against rape, forced prostitution and any other form of indecent assault.'' One need only remember the conflict in the former Yugoslavia, however, to see that rape has often been used against civilian women during armed conflict. Finally, with respect to relief shipments for civilians, Convention IV notes that ''expectant mothers, maternity cases and nursing mothers'' are to be given priority.

POTENTIAL REMEDIES: RED CROSS FACTFINDERS AND WAR CRIMES TRIBUNALS

Iraq has claimed publicly that it is adhering to the Conventions. But the recent video footage of American POWs has given others a different impression.

In addition, past history leads to reasonable fears that woman POWs will be mistreated by Iraq in ways particular to their gender. Consider, for instance, the sexual assault suffered by Major Cornum. Will there be any recourse if women are, in fact harmed or mistreated?

The answer is: Perhaps during the war, and certainly after the war.

The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC)—which drafted the original treaties—serves as a fact finder with respect to possible violations. During war, the ICRC attempts to protect military prisoners of war, civilians caught in war zones, and wounded or sick service members.

An ICRC delegate who witnesses disturbing violations at a jail, hospital, or other facility has the duty to report it to the ICRC, who advise the victim what to do. Thus, if U.S. POWs are mistreated in Iraq, and the Red Cross is let in to see them, and they feel comfortable reporting their mistreatment, there may be some recourse for them.

But all of these contingencies may not actually become reality—and remedies may have to wait until the war's end. At that point, a special war crimes tribunal may well be created in order to prosecute individuals for ''grave breaches'' of international humanitarian law.

Not all violations of the law of war, indeed not all violations of the Geneva Convention, are grave breaches. ''Grave breaches'' are defined in the Geneva Convention III to include intentional killing, torture, or inhumane treatment.

Today, such breaches would include sexual violence against women POWs. Such violence, under international law, is criminal.

Both the Red Cross and the international community—through war crimes tribunals—should insist on strict adherence to Geneva Convention III, for men and women prisoners of war alike, and equally.

Unless women prisoners are truly protected equally—meaning that they are protected when it comes to gender-specific crimes and with respect to crimes with gender-specific additional impact—the equality of women in the military will itself be imperiled.

SEX CRIMES IN WAR MAY ALSO BE BREACHES OF INTERNATIONAL HUMANITARIAN LAW

As the ICRC has previously stated, ''although both men and women are subject to sexual assault, a distinction needs to be drawn between them. Sexual torture as such, particularly during interrogation, with its full spectrum of humiliation and violence can, and often does, culminate in the rape of the victim, and is more common with women prisoners. In male prisoners, direct violence to sexual organs is more common during this same phase.''

To note this is not in any way to minimize the terrible things that may happen to male POWs. But it is to say that women do face a special risk: the risk of rape, and of being pregnant as a result of rape.

To cope with a pregnancy as a result of rape is terrible enough, and is made all the worse by being in detention. Women may also be forced to terminate their ongoing pregnancies against their will.

Other abuses inflicted on POWs, while not suffered solely by women, could be worse for women than men. They might include beatings, strip searches by men, intimate and abusive medical examinations or body searches, and sexual or gender-based humiliation (such as non-provision of sanitary protection).

Under international law, rape, sexual assault, sexual slavery, forced prostitution, forced sterilization, forced abortion, and forced pregnancy may all qualify as crimes.

RAPE AS A WAR CRIME, AND A CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY

The crime of rape, in particular, has long existed under customary international law. Some treaties have mentioned rape specifically, whereas other treaties and international conventions have made reference to rape as a crime against humanity when directed against a civilian population.

The nineteenth century Leiber Code, for example, listed rape as a specific offense, and made it a capital offense. Later, World War II prosecutions, and the Geneva Conventions, reinforced the prohibitions on rape and other sexual violence, although the focus was on crimes of sexual violence against civilian populations.

Some evidence of sexual violence was presented before the International Military Tribunals, after World War II. Most notably, in the judgments of the International Military Tribunal for the Far East, rape was first specifically referenced. Allied Control Council Law No. 10, which governed the prosecution of defendants at Nuremberg, listed rape as one of the enumerated acts constituting a crime against humanity.

In the Tokyo war crimes trials, acts of sexual violence and rape were not placed at a level that would allow them to stand alone. The Tribunal presented evidence relating to sexual atrocities committed upon women in places such as Nanking, Borneo, the Philippines, and French Indochina. Rape and acts of sexual violence were categorized as crimes against humanity because they amounted to inhumane treatment.

Today, the prohibition against rape and sexual violence in armed conflict is even stronger. In 1993 and 1994, rape was specifically codified as a recognizable and independent crime within the statutes of the International Criminal Tribunals for the Former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and for Rwanda (ICTR).

In addition, the ICTY and ICTR cases have also reinforced the legal basis for arguing that rape and sexual violence are both individual crimes against humanity, and violations of the laws and customs of war.

Finally, the new statute of the International Criminal Court also recognizes rape as crime against humanity when it occurs in the context of armed conflict.

I hope that all of the POWs are treated humanely, and come home soon. And I hope Shoshana Johnson is transported to a neutral country—as she is entitled to be, as the mother of an infant—if she continues to be held.

To ensure that these things happen, it is also important for the international community to make clear what obligations Iraq has with respect to all POWs, and the special obligations it bears to female POWs in particular.

TRIBUTE TO REV. DR. GEORGE E. McRAE ON HIS ELECTION AS PRESIDENT OF THE FLORIDA GENERAL BAPTIST CONVENTION

HON. KENDRICK B. MEEK

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I know that my colleagues will join me in offering our prayerful best wishes and congratulations to the Reverend Dr. George E. McRae of Miami, Florida, my Pastor and the Pastor of Mount Tabor Missionary Baptist Church, on the occasion of his election as the new President of the Florida General Baptist Convention.

Reverend McRae is perhaps uniquely qualified, by both education and experience, to carry out this important responsibility. He earned his Bachelor's degree at Bethune-Cookman College at Daytona Beach; His Master of Divinity degree at the Interdenominational Theological Center in Atlanta; and his Doctor of Ministry degree at Columbia Theological Seminary in Atlanta. In addition to his fourteen years as Pastor of Mount Tabor Missionary Baptist Church, Rev. McRae has served as Pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church in Daytona Beach; and the Bethlehem Baptist Church and the New Mount Zion Baptist Church, both in Palatka.

Reverend McRae has received numerous awards for his work, including the NAACP's Humanitarian Award and the Miami Herald's Charles Whited Spirit of Excellence Award, and he has lectured extensively. He was also featured in a front page article in the Wall Street Journal, which chronicled his work at Mount Tabor and the establishment of M.O.V.E.R.S. Inc.—Minorities Overcoming The Virus Through Education, Responsibility and Spirituality—which provides comprehensive treatment, education, counseling and housing assistance to AIDS victims and their families in low-income Miami neighborhoods.

In addition to these great achievements, though, Pastor McRae's highest qualification as leader of Florida's Baptist faithful must truly be the strength of his commitment to Christ's teachings, as exemplified by the caring and humanity of his ministry.

He is a person of great personal power whose very presence cheers those who are afflicted. He is a person of great vision who inspires people to help other people—from caring for the hungry in the church basement after Sunday services to making health care available, in their own neighborhoods, to people who otherwise could not afford health care, even if they had access to it. He is a person who has devoted a lifetime of energy and creativity to the betterment of others.

I extend my best wishes to Pastor McRae and his wife, Mary, for the sacrifices they have made to help others, for their caring and their leadership, and for taking on this additional burden and responsibility, which is so important to our families and our community.

HONORING CHRISTY WHITNEY

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to a deeply compassionate and sensitive woman. Christy Whitney has devoted much of her life to helping others in need as a Registered Nurse, and ultimately as CEO and President of Hospice and Palliative Care of Western Colorado. Today, I recognize Christy's years of service before this body of Congress.

Christy has touched many lives while working in the nursing profession for the past 27 years. As recognition of these years of dedicated service, she was recently named recipient of the 18th Annual Nightingale Award

Celebrating Nursing Excellence. Coworkers nominated Christy for the award through an essay and several letters of recommendation. Peers noted that Christy has an intelligent and passionate approach to nursing, characteristics she shares with Florence Nightingale, the renowned nineteenth century nurse. Christy remains humble about her successes and emphasizes that her responsibility as an administrator is to create an environment in which others can perform their job well.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand before this body of Congress today to recognize Christy's compassion and devotion to helping others. I would like to congratulate Christy on her prestigious award and the profound respect that she has earned from her coworkers. Her lifelong commitment to serving others certainly warrants the respect of this body and our nation. Christy has answered a noble calling by tending to those in need and I commend her for her selfless public service.

HONORING JEFF HANCOCK

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to a successful businessman who has provided Western Colorado with years of service. Jeff Hancock has devoted much of the past ten years to serving as CEO of the Grand Junction-based organization, Rocky Mountain Nurses, Inc. Today, I would like to honor Jeff's accomplishments and the impact he has had on the Grand Junction community by expanding his prominent full-service home health-care firm.

Rocky Mountain Nurses, Inc. was founded in 1995 as a small temporary nursing service. Through small business loans, it was recently able to add fifty new jobs in Mesa County. The firm is now located in a new corporate office, employs approximately 180 people, and has opened a medical equipment retail store. The expansion of Jeff's firm has allowed him to provide nursing services to more than 350 people per month. The U.S. Small Business Administration recently honored Jeff by selecting him as Colorado Small Business Person of the Year. He was one of 53 recipients of this award, and is currently in the running to be named as National Small Business Person of the Year.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand before this body of Congress today to recognize the positive impact that Rocky Mountain Nurses, Inc. has had in my district. Jeff embodies the combination of ambition and altruism necessary to guide an expanding firm dedicated to serving the community. I would like to congratulate him on this prestigious award and the respect that he has earned from his peers. I wish Jeff all the best in his future endeavors.

THE ASSISTANCE FOR NEEDY FAMILIES, TANF

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise to acknowledge the importance for Congress to address the concerns of a welfare reform bill. I support the 3-month extension to reauthorize the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Block Grant Program through fiscal year 2003. I also ask the U.S. Senate to move on this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, more than 35 States have made cuts in programs funded with TANF and child care block grant funds. Most importantly, these cuts are in programs that promote the goals of welfare reform. These cuts reflect both the exhaustion of many States' surplus. Cuts are in welfare to work programs, cuts are in programs to help the most disadvantaged families, cuts are in transportation assistance, cuts are in basic cash assistance benefits, cuts are in teen pregnancy prevention programs, and cuts are in child care. My dear colleagues, let us come together—set aside our differences—and work to pass a bipartisan measure that will provide adequate aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) and critique the job opportunities and basic skills training (JOBS) programs.

Mr. Speaker, our Governors have spoken out and printed on recycled paper critical funding and flexibility of the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families block grant, which must be preserved—without any set-asides. The program should be reauthorized to ensure that States are able to continue their current innovative efforts to assist low-income individuals and families. I ask that we work together to provide meaningful legislation that will lead our families to self sufficiency.

HONORING REBECCA JOHNSON

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to stand before this body of Congress today to recognize a dedicated educator. Rebecca Johnson has provided exemplary service as a teacher at Redlands Middle School in Grand Junction, Colorado, and it is my pleasure to honor the creativity that Rebecca has employed in touching the lives of her students and incorporating real life lessons in her classroom.

Rebecca has used a number of tools and methods to bring her academic lessons to life for the children she teaches. She has reinforced her students' interest in reading, turning her classroom into a movie set based on a book they read together. Rebecca has also encouraged interest in the arts as she supervises murals painted at the school. Rebecca's creativity has surely impacted her students in a positive manner and assisted them in developing a life-long appreciation for learning.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand before this body of Congress today to express my admiration and gratitude for Rebecca's service and devotion to teaching. Individuals like Rebecca symbolize the dedication and commitment necessary to impart strong values to future generations and allow them the opportunity to succeed. Rebecca has answered a noble call that demands the utmost admiration and respect. Thank you, Rebecca, for your dedication and selfless public service.

TRIBUTE TO BOB TAYLOR

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to recognize one of my district's most prominent and accomplished agriculturalists. Bob Taylor is the founder of a farming dynasty that has flourished for the last fifty years in La Plata County, Colorado. In addition to a wealth of agricultural knowledge, his reputation precedes him throughout the county as a fair and honest man. I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to Bob for the contributions that he has made throughout Colorado.

In spite of adverse conditions for area farmers, Bob has persevered throughout the last decade. He is consistently one of the top agricultural producers in the area and is always willing to offer advice to fellow agriculturalists. For his efforts, the Durango Area Chamber of Commerce has recently honored Bob as Agriculturalist of the Year.

The community also recognizes Bob for his long history of service to his church and the surrounding community. He embarked upon his two-year Mormon Church Mission after high school and began his service to the nation when he joined the Army during World War II. Bob was elected to a County Board position in 1954, but declined to run again after his church's local ward summoned him to serve as Bishop. Bob continues to maintain his public involvement by serving on two water-district boards.

Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct privilege to recognize Bob Taylor before this body of Congress and this nation. He served his country with honor as a soldier, and he has excelled in his agricultural career ever since. I congratulate Bob on his recent award and wish him all the best in his future endeavors.

HONORING ALUMNI OF THE FRANCES PAYNE BOLTON SCHOOL OF NURSING

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend my sincere congratulations and gratitude to the nurses who served in the United States military during World War II and the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps who are alumni of the Frances Payne Bolton School of Nursing at Case Western Reserve University.

These nurses were honored during their Reunion Celebration, which took place on May 17, 2003 at Severance Hall in Cleveland, Ohio.

Representative Frances Payne Bolton acquired the congressional seat of her late husband, which she maintained from 1939–1969. As a Member of Congress, she led the effort to create the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps which trained 125,000 nurses in 1,100 nursing schools from 1943 to 1948 to reduce the nursing shortage and improve health care in the military and throughout the entire nation. She was the very first Congresswoman to serve the state of Ohio.

It is my pleasure to join with the Case Western Reserve University community and the citizens of the 11th Congressional District in honoring this group of nurses for their untiring service to this country.

NATIVE AMERICAN SACRED LANDS PROTECTION ACT

HON. NICK J. RAHALL II

OF WEST VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, many would argue that the United States Capitol is sacred. It is a testament to freedom, a symbol of government, a monument of national historical and cultural significance. Throughout its halls there are statues of our founders, our heroes, our history. For the past 200 years, legislators have sweat blood and tears debating the laws of our great country.

It is sacred to me, to the American people and to the underlying principles of this country. No patriotic American or friend of this great country would even think to spoil or mar the sanctity of this building.

But there are many places across this country no less sacred than the Capitol building, that are being desecrated as we speak. It is inconceivable to have open-pit mining in Arlington Cemetery or to imagine an oil rig plopped in the middle of the Sistine Chapel. But in fact that is the very problem facing Native American sacred lands today.

For example, the proposed site for a 1,600-acre, open-pit gold mine in Indian Pass, California, is a place where ''dream trails'' were woven. The Bush administration revoked a Clinton-era ruling that said mining operations would cause undue impairment to these ancestral lands, an extremely sacred place to the Quechan Indian tribe. Now the tribe is left fighting for its religious and cultural history. Although the state of California has taken action to help protect this site, the Federal government remains poised to permit the gold mine.

Long before my ancestors arrived on these shores, American Indians were the first stewards of this land. They respected the earth, water and air. They understood you take only what you need and leave the rest. They demonstrated you do not desecrate that which is sacred.

Most Americans understand a reverence for the great Sistine Chapel, or even the United States Capitol. Too often non-Indians have difficulty giving the same reverence we give to our sacred places to a mountain, valley, stream or rock formation.

We cannot fight to preserve Native American sacred lands on a case by case basis. We need a comprehensive process to protect bona fide Native American sacred sites wherever they may lie on the public domain.

That is why today I am introducing the Native American Sacred Lands Protection Act.

First, the bill would enact into law a 1996 Executive Order designed to protect sacred lands. Specifically, it ensures access and ceremonial use of sacred lands and mandates all federal land management agencies take the necessary steps to prevent significant damage to sacred lands.

Second, my bill gives Indian tribes the ability to petition the government to place federal lands off-limits to energy leasing or other incompatible developments when they believe those proposed actions would cause significant damage to their sacred lands.

This is an extremely important provision. The tribes would no longer have to depend on the good graces of federal bureaucrats to protect these lands. Rather, the tribes themselves could initiate those protections.

Third, the bill respects the confidentiality requirements of some Native American religions. And finally, the bill would permit sacred lands be transferred from the Federal government to the affected Indian or co-management plans to be implemented.

If you look to our national parks, forests and monuments you see the commitment to preserve many of our country's natural treasures. The Federal government has put its full weight behind protecting these lands, and we can do the same for Indian country.

At a time when the Bush administration is promoting increased energy development, we must enact comprehensive legislation that prohibits the further loss of Native American sacred lands. We must not stand idly by as these unique places are wiped off the face of the earth.

HONORING VIRGINIA ROCKWELL

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to stand before this body of Congress today to recognize a dedicated school counselor. Virginia Rockwell has served as a kindergarten through twelfth grade counselor for schools in Swink, Colorado for the past 21 years. For two decades, Virginia has provided enthusiastic service to our state's youth. Now, as she enters retirement, it is my pleasure to honor the character and achievements that have defined Virginia's dedicated career.

While Virginia has always been reluctant to take credit for her students' achievements, she has turned out a remarkable number of accomplished scholars, athletes and dedicated citizens. However, some of the students of which she is most proud are those who had to work the hardest to graduate. Virginia's commitment to her students and caring touch have not gone unnoticed. She was the state multi-level Counselor of the Year and runner up nationally in the early 1990s. Having little experience with schools in rural areas when she started, Virginia has come to appreciate the support and unique relationships that she has made while working in Swink. Upon her retirement, Virginia's peers and students will certainly reciprocate the touch of sadness that she experiences when her students graduate.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to stand before this Congress today to express my gratitude for Virginia Rockwell's many years of service. Individuals like Virginia symbolize the dedication and commitment necessary to impart strong values to our next generation and allow them the opportunity to succeed. Virginia Rockwell has answered a noble call that demands our admiration and respect. Thank you, Virginia, for your many years of dedicated and selfless public service.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK AND SUE MENEGATTI

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to stand before this body of Congress today to recognize Frank and Sue Menegatti of Walsenburg, Colorado. Frank and Sue have spent years managing The Capps Ranch Limited Partnership. During this time, they have enhanced stream quality, increased wildlife populations and protected the lands under their care from the ravages of fire. For their conscientious stewardship, Frank and Sue have received the Colorado Agricultural Outlook Forum's Leopold Conservation Award.

The exemplary efforts of Frank and Sue are all the more notable in light of the devastating drought that Colorado experienced in 2002. Frank and Sue have constructed ponds, developed twenty-five springs, and laid twenty-six miles of subterranean water pipeline in order to increase their ability to store water and protect it from evaporation. Their labor has benefited Colorado for many years, particularly at critical times, and it has helped develop a successful ranch while also caring for the natural beauty of Colorado's environment. Today, their ranch provides a habitat for twice as many elk, antelope, deer and sage grouse as it did before they began their remarkable stint as stewards.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to bring Frank and Sue's achievements to the attention of this body of Congress and this nation. Frank and Sue Menegatti serve as role models and inspirations not only to ranchers, but also to all who understand the need to protect our nation's great natural beauty for future generations.

COMMEMORATING THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE HEPPNER FLOOD

HON. GREG WALDEN

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. WALDEN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in observance of one of the most tragic events in the history of Oregon and a defining chapter in the story of the small town of Heppner. June 14, 2003, will mark the 100th anniversary of the Heppner Flood, a natural catastrophe of unprecedented scale in my state that took the lives of 247 Oregonians, almost a quarter of the town's 1,146 residents. Though generations have passed since the people of Heppner witnessed nature's awesome, destructive wrath, even today the residents of this resilient community carry with them the painful memory of the devastation that occurred a full century ago.

June 14, 1903, was like any other Sunday in the peaceful town of Heppner, when the humble, God-fearing townspeople went about their lives, worshipping together and resting from a week spent toiling in their fields, minding their stores and tending their flocks and herds. As evening approached, none sensed the pending calamity that would befall the close-knit community and alter the lives of its residents forever.

Mr. Speaker, the rain came in an instant, swelling streams and unleashing a torrent that careened toward the town and destroyed everything in its wake. Trees were uprooted, structures crushed liked matchbox houses and homes and livestock were swept away in the deadly cascade. So, too, were many of the people of Heppner—men, women and children who drowned by the hundreds. An account of the disaster in the East Oregonian newspaper later estimated that more than three billion pounds of water passed through Heppner that night at a rate of 70 million pounds per minute.

Whole families were swept from the face of the earth, joining the horrendous flotsam of bodies and debris that rushed forward and disappeared into the churning water. With astonishing and merciless speed, the Heppner Flood destroyed the town's water system, ruined the railroad, took down telegraph lines and collapsed the bridges over Willow Creek. In a few short minutes, what had been a sleepy, idyllic Oregon town was transformed into a seething, watery graveyard. Scarcely a resident of the town could be found who had not lost a friend or family member or suffered the loss of property. Many of the hundreds of dead lay buried in the Heppner Masonic Cemetery, where today their descendants tend their graves and honor their precious memories.

The outpouring of assistance from nearby communities following this tragedy said much about the compassion and humanity of the people of the Northwest. In a poignant letter to Heppner's Mayor, Frank Gilliam, three little girls in Colfax, Washington, sent $11 they collected by selling homemade candy to help victims of the flood. Mayor Gilliam, touched by the gesture, wrote a note of thanks that tragically captured the sorrow that had been visited upon his town. ''Two weeks ago yesterday morning, Heppner was a happy little town,'' he wrote. ''Our church bells rang and our little ones sang songs of praise and worshipped by their mother's side. Evening came, and with it the storm, and many of our precious little children were carried away to worship at the throne of God. Those who have gone before are happy now, while those of us who remain are sad. Sad because of the little ones who are no more—who cannot be with us to cheer our weary way.''

Mr. Speaker, a century has passed since the disaster, yet the Heppner Flood remains the worst natural disaster in the history of Oregon. Though the buildings that had been torn down would be rebuilt, the fields would be replanted and herds replenished, the overwhelming human loss would remain like an open wound, the horror of the flood a constant nightmare from which the survivors would never awaken. In my travels to Heppner, I have come to know many descendants of both survivors and victims of the flood. It is a profound honor to represent them in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Speaker, as a tribute to the victims of this devastating event, I ask that my colleagues observe one minute of respectful silence.

TRIBUTE TO GAGLIANO'S ITALIAN MARKET

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, June 11, 2003

Mr. MCINNIS. Mr. Speaker, it is my distinct privilege to recognize a local business that truly symbolizes the ''American Dream.'' Tony and Josephine Gagliano own and operate Gagliano's Italian Market, a Pueblo, Colorado fixture for the last 80 years. As the store has evolved over time, it continues to provide a distinct taste of home to numerous Puebloans. For this reason, I would like to pay tribute to the unique service that the Gagliano family has provided to the Pueblo Community.

Joe and Carmela Gagliano, the market's founders, were washed out of their home in Pueblo's flood of 1921. They recovered from that flood and embarked on a venture in the grocery business. Joe and Carmela's market originally catered to the basic needs of the growing Italian-American community in Pueblo. Today, Gagliano's Italian Market sells products that range from Italian foods to Italian cookware, dishes, pasta makers, and novelty items. Josephine, Joe and Carmela's daughter, does most of the baking with help from her grown children and their families. The Gaglianos are proud to serve the Pueblo community and are enthusiastic about continuing this family tradition.

Mr. Speaker, I am honored to recognize the Gagliano's story before this body of Congress and this nation. The Gaglianos provide a unique service to the community by honoring their family's culture and tradition. Their strength of spirit and dedication to the ''American Dream'' are the characteristics that have made this nation great. I congratulate them on their successes and wish them all the best with their future endeavors.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules Committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, June 12, 2003 may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Thursday, June 12, 2003

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Reverend Michael Dolan, Pastor, Immaculate Heart of Mary Parish, Lexington Park, Maryland, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, give us light and strength to know Your will, to make it our own, and to live it in our lives.

Guide us by Your wisdom, support us by Your power, for You are God.

You desire justice for all: Enable us to uphold the rights of others; do not allow us to be misled by ignorance or corrupted by fear or favor.

Unite us to Yourself in the bond of love, and keep us faithful to all that is true.

As we gather in Your name, may we temper justice with love, so that all Your decisions may be pleasing to You and earn the rewards promised to good and faithful servants. Therefore, teach us to be generous, to serve You as You deserve, to give and not to count the cost, to fight and not to heed the wounds, to toil and ask for no reward except that of knowing that we are doing Your holy will. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. MCNULTY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the Speaker's approval of the Journal.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MCNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. GREEN of Texas led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. Under clause 2 of rule I, it is the responsibility of the Speaker to preserve order and decorum in the proceedings of the House. As stated on page 330 of the House Rules and Manual, this responsibility requires that the Chair disallow the use of an exhibit that tends to degrade decorum. Thus, the Speakers previously have disallowed the introduction of a person on the floor as a guest of the House as an ''exhibit.''

Pursuant to clause 2 of rule I, the Chair reiterates the ruling of June 11, 2003, that it is inappropriate to use Pages of the House as part of a visual exhibit during debate. Although Members may enlist the assistance of Pages to manage the placement of exhibits on easels, it is not appropriate to use Pages as though part of an exhibit or otherwise include them in an exhibition.

The Chair also will continue to scrutinize the number of charts and other visual exhibits used simultaneously during the debate for any tendency to impair decorum.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain five 1-minute speeches on each side.

FREE DR. OSCAR BISCET

(Mr. SMITH of New Jersey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, on March 18 the Cuban Government began a massive crackdown on the best, the brightest, and the most courageous in Cuba. Some 75 journalists and human rights activists were arrested and subjected to kangaroo trials and now have gotten prison terms from 6 to 28 years.

Last week Amnesty International called it the most severe crackdown on dissents since the year following the Cuban revolution.

Sadly, these brave Cubans join 400 other political prisoners who are languishing in Castro's gulags. Their only crime is their love of freedom.

Among those unjustly imprisoned, is Dr. Oscar Biscet, a pro-life Afro-Cuban who has been a leader in the human rights movement for years. Although he was recently released, Mr. Speaker, from a 3-year term, he was rearrested, and now has been sentenced to 25 years in prison for organizing a human rights meeting.

His wife, Elsa Morejon, reports that Dr. Biscet is kept in a 6 by 3 punishment cell. They have been refused any visits and any kind of parcels of food or medicines. On May 28 Dr. Biscet wrote, ''I am innocent of the charges of which I have been condemned. A true man cannot betray himself, so I only appeal to the living God and pray to our Lord, as He is not neutral and never abandons his flock.''

According to his wife, Dr. Biscet's only crime is trying to observe and uphold the universal declaration on human rights, his opposition to abortion, his opposition to the death penalty, and for organizing civil rights movement through nonviolent civil disobedience.

We join this man and his wife and all of those who are suffering. We have got to speak out and not give up until they are free.

MISUSE OF FEDERAL POWER

(Mr. GREEN of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, we have so much to be proud of in our country: our young people serving in the military, protecting our Nation, our law enforcement working long hours to make us safe. We can even celebrate last night the Houston Astros winning a no-hitter against the New York Yankees with six pitchers.

What we cannot be proud of and what bothers many Americans is we have had three different congressional committee members ask the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Justice, and the FBI to release all the information and audiotapes concerning the use of our Federal law enforcement to track Texas legislators. This sounds like an abuse of authority, and it smells.

Our law enforcement should not be used for partisan political purposes. Release these tapes and let the American people decide who is wasting our law enforcement's time, when they should be protecting our Nation, looking for Texas legislators.

FREE MARTA BEATRIZ ROQUE

(Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART of Florida. Mr. Speaker, today we speak of a heroine, an extraordinary woman and leader who languishes in Castro's gulag, Marta Beatriz Roque, sentenced to 25 years for speaking her mind on behalf of freedom and democracy.

To those who wish to send billions of dollars to the dictatorship in Cuba by sending U.S. tourists to savor tropical drinks in the tourism apartheid resorts and take advantage of the regime-encouraged child prostitution, I think it is worthwhile to listen to Marta Beatriz, one of the last statements before she was picked up and sent to a gulag for 25 years.

We exhort all the governments of the civilized world not to prolong the agony of the Cuban people, not to finance the tyranny, not to support the tyranny; that they condemn the tourism apartheid, that they condemn the exploitation of laborers, the prostitution of our youth, the traffic of stolen property, the plunder of the Cuban nation. Solidarity is required today with those who advocated freedom in Cuba and those who also advocated freedom in exile.

Marta Beatriz Roque and all of the Cuban political prisoners, we do not forget you for one day. We will continue to fight until you are free and until all Cubans are free.

GROWING BUDGET DEFICIT

(Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. LORETTA SANCHEZ of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to voice my anger, my anger over the Bush administration's willingness to plunge our economy further into debt.

The Congressional Budget Office had projected that this year's shortfall to the budget would be $300 billion. But recently they came back and they now tell us it is going to be over $400 billion.

This year's budget deficit will be the biggest one since 1992 and it will be the second consecutive one under this President after we had 4 years of surplus by President Clinton's administration.

Instead of enacting fiscally responsible legislation, this administration continues to do further tax cuts for the wealthy. Former President Clinton recently said, When you find yourself in a hole, a practical person stops digging. But this Bush administration, it is asking for a bigger shovel.

Mr. Speaker, it is time to stop digging. Fiscal responsibility needs to be the rule and not the exception to the rule.

WESTERN SAHARA

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I am deeply concerned that the negotiations over the Western Sahara for the past decade have all been for nothing.

Former Moroccan Minister of Interior Driss Basri recently said, ''The Houston agreement did not come as a way to find a solution to the issue of Sahara. It came as a starting point of an American plan . . . and it will preserve the American interests,'' and as U.N. diplomat Marrack Goulding wrote, ''for enhanced autonomy for Western Sahara within the kingdom of Morocco.''

I find it deplorable and offensive that various officials of Morocco, the U.N., and the U.S. engaged in what amounted to a farce. They spent over $530 million and negotiated an agreement to hold a referendum for the people of Western Sahara without ever intending to hold that referendum.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a game. The people of Western Sahara agreed to a ceasefire on the basis that all parties would uphold the negotiated agreement of a free, fair, and transparent referendum for self-determination. The people of Western Sahara have no desire to suffer under the colonial rule of the kingdom of Morocco; and so the United States, the U.N., and Morocco should stop the game-playing and implement the referendum.

TAKE UP THE SENATE-PASSED CHILD TAX CREDIT

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, it has been nearly 2 weeks since the embarrassing revelations that the $350 billion Republican tax cut left behind 6.5 million working families with incomes of $10,000 to $27,000 a year. Not a penny to them and their 12 million children. They were stiffed to make room for more millionaire tax cuts.

Last week, the Senate rushed to fix this. The President has endorsed what the Senate did; and if the Republican leaders here in the House really cared about these families and their kids, they would take up, pass the Senate bill today, send it down to the President tonight, get him to sign it; and they could get refund checks next month along with other families. But, no, that is not what they are going to do.

They are going to turn these families into second-class citizens. If this bill passes today, they can file for the money next year. A lot of working families with parents in combat will be excluded under this bill. They will be left out altogether, but it really does one thing that they really want to do. It assures this bill will not become law because they really do not care about those 6.5 million families and their 12 million kids. They are low-income people. They do not care.

CALL FOR RESPONSIBLE FATHERHOOD

(Mr. RYUN of Kansas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, as we approach Father's Day, I rise to emphasize the importance of the father in a child's life. A father's presence at home contributes to a child's success in school. It also encourages a child to abstain from drugs and remain crime-free. Until we recognize these facts, we will struggle to defeat many of society's problems.

We provide funding to alleviate problems that are caused by absent fathers, but what we really need are fathers who are physically, emotionally, and spiritually present in their child's life.

I hope that this Father's Day will not just be a day for children to honor their fathers, but also a day for fathers to honor their children by investing in their lives.

Rather than writing legislation, I am calling on my fellow fathers in Congress to lead by example. Doing so will leave a powerful and lasting legacy. It is my prayer that our actions will set a standard for fathers across America and awaken the hearts of many to the necessity and the responsibility of fatherhood.

NOTICE OF DISCHARGE PETITION ON CONCURRENT RECEIPTS

(Mr. MARSHALL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MARSHALL. Mr. Speaker, today I will sign a discharge petition that I bring to right a wrong that has been done to disabled American veterans for more than a century.

In 1891, the United States of America imposed a tax on disabled veterans. We did not call it a tax. We called it a prohibition on concurrent receipts, something average Americans would not understand. Mr. Speaker, it is time to call the concurrent receipt prohibition what it is, the disabled veterans tax. It was wrong then; it is wrong now. It is time to end the disabled veterans tax.

Mr. Speaker, for years the majority and the Members of this House have cosponsored House Resolution 303, which would end the disabled veterans tax; and for years, House Resolution 303 has been bottled up in committee just like campaign reform was bottled up in committee. The discharge petition process forced a vote on campaign finance reform. I am using that same process to force a vote on ending the disabled veterans tax.

Mr. Speaker, at last count, 322 Members of this Congress have cosponsored House Resolution 303. Only 218 of these cosponsors must sign the discharge petition for it to be successful.

ALL-AMERICAN TAX RELIEF ACT OF 2003

(Mr. PENCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, last month this Congress, with the President's leadership, undertook to pass a tax relief measure that would get this economy moving again. Today, we will continue that good work with the All-American Tax Relief Act of 2003.

While some come to this floor, as we even heard this morning, and suggest that Republicans do not care about children, about 6.5 million families and 12 million children that they say were left out of the refundable per child tax credit, the truth is, Mr. Speaker, as we all know, it was Republican leadership that saw to it that that tax cut was already in place, set to take effect in 2005; but we will accelerate that today.

We will also encourage marriage by eliminating the marriage penalty. In the tax credit we will assist veterans and the heroes in space, we will do justice, we will love kids, and we will provide the compassionate Republican leadership that is so characteristic of this institution when we adopt the All-American Tax Relief Act today.

IT IS TIME TO STOP PENALIZING DISABLED MILITARY RETIREES

(Mr. EDWARDS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, it is time to stop penalizing disabled military retirees for having served our country for 20 or 30 years. It is time to stop the disabled veterans tax that reduces military retirees' benefits when the Veterans' Administration determines that they are disabled.

This issue is known by veterans as the concurrent receipt problem. I know it as the concurrent deceit problem.

Today, through the strong leadership of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. MARSHALL), the 300-plus House Members who have year after year cosponsored the Bilirakis bill to deal with concurrent receipt for military retirees can actually do something about passing that bill, rather than just taking credit for cosponsoring it as they speak at home to their veteran service groups.

It is time to be honest with America's veterans. It is time to stop the hypocrisy of year after year having a majority of the House cosponsor this bill and we never have a hearing, never have a vote on it.

If cosponsors will sign the gentleman from Georgia's (Mr. MARSHALL) petition today, we can have a vote on this bill before the 4th of July. Let us pass the Marshall discharge petition.

APPOINTMENT OF MEMBER TO BOARD OF TRUSTEES OF HARRY S TRUMAN SCHOLARSHIP FOUNDATION

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Pursuant to 20 U.S.C. 2004(b), and the order of the House of January 8, 2003, the Chair announces the Speaker's appointment of the following Member of the House to the Board of Trustees of the Harry S Truman Scholarship Foundation:

Mr. AKIN, Missouri.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS TO FILE SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT ON H.R. 1950, FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 2004 AND 2005

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file a supplemental report from the Committee on International Relations to accompany the bill H.R. 1950, the Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2004 and 2005.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1115, CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 269 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 269

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1115) to amend the procedures that apply to consideration of interstate class actions to assure fairer outcomes for class members and defendants, to outlaw certain practices that provide inadequate settlements for class members, to assure that attorneys do not receive a disproportionate amount of settlements at the expense of class members, to provide for clearer and simpler information in class action settlement notices, to assure prompt consideration of interstate class actions, to amend title 28, United States Code, to allow the application of the principles of Federal diversity jurisdiction to interstate class actions, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. All points of order against the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute are waived. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered as read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question in the House or in the Committee of the Whole. All points of order against such amendments are waived. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE) is recognized for 1 hour.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), the ranking member of our committee, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of the resolution, all time yielded is for the purposes of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 269 is a structured rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2003.

The rule provides 1 hour of general debate equally divided and controlled between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. It provides that the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment.

The rule makes in order only those amendments printed in the Committee on Rules report accompanying the resolution. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be debatable for the time specified equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and shall not be subject to amendment or demand for a division of the question.

The rule waives all points of order against consideration of the amendment in the nature of a substitute now printed in the bill and waives all points of order against such amendment.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to my colleagues that while this is a structured rule, it is a balanced rule. This rule makes in order four amendments, three Democrat amendments and one bipartisan amendment. In fact, only eight amendments were originally submitted to the Committee on Rules, and two of those amendments were withdrawn from consideration. In a world often frequented with sports analogies, we would say that four for six is pretty good at the plate.

Mr. Speaker, the history of our judicial process was purposely and deliberately constructed by our forefathers to be a system that employs fairness and balance in the rendering of justice. One of the many tools of this judicial system is the class action lawsuit. In its ideal form, the class action suit is meant to give many individuals who hold the same claim of wrongdoing against the same defendant an efficient and effective way to have their grievances heard as a unified voice. Essentially, it acts as a pedestal and a megaphone using the collective nature of the many to increase the profile and the potency of the group's accusations of injustice.

As used by public interest organizations and truly injured groups of individuals, class action lawsuits have proven effective in restoring justice and righting wrongs. By correcting egregious negligence, curbing dangerous misconduct, or even convincing people in organizations to merely abide by the law, class action suits are an integral part of the American system of justice.

However, and very sadly, these suits are also one of the most grossly abused parts of the American system of justice.

□ 1030

We have seen a deluge of frivolous lawsuits designed to coerce quick and often unwarranted settlements only to enrich a few. This abuse of the system stunts economic growth and job creation, and it clogs the courtroom and our system, making it more difficult to receive justice in valid lawsuits. In fact, class action filings in State courts have increased 1,000 percent in just 10 years; 1,000 percent in just 10 years. Somebody is catching onto something around here.

One wonders how effective local courts and judges can even start to get through their workload when it is increasing so rapidly. Perhaps worst of all is the abusive way in which class action suits enrich a small group of trial attorneys and a very small fraction of plaintiffs while leaving most of the rest of the entire class with little or next to nothing.

In one instance, and there are thousands and thousands of these types of stories, but in one instance a State court approved a class action settlement in a case brought by account holders against a bank. The result, the plaintiffs' attorneys received over $8 million in fees and the 700,000 members of the class only received $10 each. Eight million dollars to the trial lawyers, $10 to the plaintiffs. In addition, each class member was stuck holding the remainder of the bank's legal bills, approximately $100 each. These class members had to pay the bank's liabilities, a net loss at the end of the day of $90. How thick the irony, and we want people to respect our system of justice when they see this type of result? This may seem extreme, but it is becoming the norm very, very rapidly.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle will dispute these facts. They will allege that the system is fine as it is, and that by passing this plan and working to restore justice to our system, we are robbing consumers of their legal rights. Let me be clear, no one is eliminating or diminishing anybody's rights to sue. No one is taking a wrecking ball to the court system that our forefathers so carefully established, and no one is ignoring legitimate claims of negligence or advocating bad guys being left off the hook. We are not doing that.

This bill simply curbs the abuse of class action suits. It curbs the abuses while preserving the rights of the truly injured to bring meritorious claims to court. In addition, this plan would remove large interstate class action lawsuits to Federal court where appropriate. This provision would enable more efficient and effective consolidation of claims. It would also provide greater uniformity in consideration of these cases by requiring the decisions that affect individuals from all across the country be decided by courts that represent the Nation as a whole and not just one State which might have a particular bias for particular parties.

As this plan cracks down on the abuses of class action suits, it also protects the legal rights of individuals through a consumer class action bill of rights. This bill of rights requires that the notices sent to class members be simple and intelligible, ensures that victorious plaintiffs do not suffer a net loss because the attorneys took all of the money, it prevents geographic discrimination against certain class members, and it prohibits disproportionate awards from going to some class members at the expense of others.

The bottom line is that this plan provides greater judicial scrutiny to make our court system more efficient and effective, while restoring fairness to ensure that truly wronged victims receive their fair share of settlements.

Mr. Speaker, as a former judge, I have to say, our court system and the judges and attorneys that serve within it serve nobly by administering and executing true justice when they can. But it is the job of this Congress to make sure that our judicial system is not misused or abused to the point where it cannot perform its very purpose, or it provides the very opposite of justice.

The Class Action Fairness Act creates important reforms that will reduce lawsuit abuse and protect individuals. It is as simple as that. I urge support for this legislation and for the fair and balanced rule before us.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this can be a complicated legal issue, but at its core, this bill that Republicans have given such a misleading name, the Class Action Fairness Act, is very simple. Here is what it does. It protects big corporate wrongdoers like Enron and WorldCom against individuals that they harm. It makes it easier for fraudulent and unethical corporations and their executives to escape accountability for their actions.

That may not be what some of its supporters intend, but that is exactly what this bill would do, and it is exactly the type of thing the Republican House has been doing for the past 8½ years, turning the American people's government over to a small, elite group of the wealthiest and most powerful. We have seen it for the past week as House Republicans have tried to block tax relief for working and military families who need it the most. They gave millionaires tax breaks totaling $93,000, but they called it welfare when Democrats tried to give $150 in tax relief to the military families who need it most to feed and clothe their children.

We are seeing it again here today on this class action bill. Believe it or not, the latest version of the Republican bill is even worse for consumers than the versions they have offered in the past two Congresses. That is because this one does not just protect future corporate wrongdoers, it acts retroactively to pull the rug out from under the victims of some of the worst corporate scandals in recent memory. If Members do not think that was intentional, just take a look at the rule the Republican leadership has written for this bill.

In the past two Congresses, the House has been allowed to vote on every amendment offered by a Member. In fact, let me read from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD from a year ago when my friend the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE) who is handling the rule today was handling the rule at that time.

''I would like to take a moment to clarify for my colleagues that while this is a structured rule, our committee, the Committee on Rules, did make in order every amendment submitted to us on this legislation. The rule simply incorporates some time confines equally applied to all of the amendments in order to provide some level of certainty and order during consideration of the legislation in the House.''

In other words, last year and, in fact, the year before, the Republican majority made in order every amendment that was submitted to the committee. Now, this year they have neglected to make in order two amendments. Which two did they not make in order? The one dealing with retroactivity; that is, one cannot sue somebody for what they did a couple of years ago and suits are already on file, those suits will suddenly go away. Who are we talking about? We are talking about wrongdoers at Enron and WorldCom and other places. But they will not make that amendment in order. That, of course, is the amendment offered by the ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

What is the other amendment that they will not make in order this time? That deals with unnecessarily delaying lawsuits by interlocutory appeals and freezing everything in place. What is wrong with that? Well, because as it is written, this class action bill would give Enron the power to unilaterally freeze the case that defrauded retirees in Texas have filed against it. Many of these people have lost their life savings in a massive corporate fraud. Their case has already been delayed more than a year and a half, a delay that allowed Arthur Andersen to shred important documents; and now this bill would give Enron the power to unilaterally delay the case for many more years.

Just to be clear, last year, and 2 years ago, Republicans let all of the amendments be made in order. This year, they cannot do that; no amendment on the question of retroactivity and no amendment on the question of freezing lawsuits pending appeals.

That is not just wrong, it is indefensible, because it is simply welfare for some of the worst corporate wrongdoers, companies like WorldCom, Arthur Andersen, and Enron. But the Republican leadership has used this power to protect corporate criminals, killing the Conyers-Delahunt amendment on retroactivity last night in the Committee on Rules so they would not have to debate it in the light of day on the House floor.

Mr. Speaker, there are other major problems with the Republican bill. Its operating principle is: Justice delayed is justice denied. State and Federal judiciaries, including the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, William Rehnquist, oppose it. And because the Federal courts are already overburdened, consumers will have to wait for years for their claims to be heard. In the meantime, big corporate wrongdoers like WorldCom and Enron will have new procedural tactics to run up the bills and run out the clock on the consumers they have injured.

At the same time, the so-called consumer protection provisions of the bill are a cynical sham. They do not provide any new protections for consumers, they just codify the ones that already exist, and they do not come close to making up for the fundamental lack on consumer rights that the entire bill represents.

I am sure the Republicans will come to the floor to complain about the so-called coupon settlements which are no more common in State courts than they are in Federal courts that Republicans favor. No matter how many times Republicans talk about this problem, their bill does not do anything about it. Only the Democratic alternative increases consumer protections against coupon settlements.

The truth is the Democratic alternative offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN) is the only sensible and workable class action reform on the House floor today. It will help consumers hold corporations accountable for their actions, and it will help courts manage large class action litigation. It tightens the rules on lawyers' fees and coupon settlements. It protects consumers against unfair settlements and enacts other consumer-friendly revisions that have been recommended by the Judicial Conference of the United States. And to protect the rights of out-of-State defendants, it establishes a State level multidistrict litigation panel, like those operating on the Federal level, to manage large class action suits filed in multiple jurisdictions.

So I urge my colleagues to support the Democratic alternative. But first I urge my Republican friends to stand up to the Republican leadership and oppose the previous question. If we defeat the previous question, then the House can consider the Conyers-Delahunt amendment to strike the retroactive provisions of this bill, and it also can consider another very important amendment on the provisions that permit lawsuits to be frozen in place. This is the only way we can block welfare for corporate wrongdoers like Enron and WorldCom.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to set the record straight. Many of the objections that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) just iterated about the Committee on Rules being unfair about are contained in the Democratic substitute which was allowed by our committee. Retroactivity is specifically addressed there, so there is a chance to debate and vote on that. And it will be a lively debate, I am sure.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Columbus, Ohio (Ms. PRYCE), my good friend and able colleague, and I thank her for her fine leadership on this and other issues.

Obviously our goal here is very simple. We want to empower individuals rather than the lawyers. That is what this comes down to. There is bipartisan interest in doing that, based on a number of amendments which have been proposed. And I would argue, Mr. Speaker, that we have a very fair and balanced process around which we are going to be debating this issue.

We have heard this juxtaposition between the consideration of this measure in the 107th Congress and what we are doing today. In the 107th Congress, we had a rule just like this one. It was a structured rule. We also have a structured rule in this measure. We had 8 amendments that were filed, 6 Democratic amendments, a bipartisan amendment and a Republican amendment. Two amendments were subsequently withdrawn. We made 4 amendments in order. Three of those 4 amendments have been offered by Democrats, including something they did not offer in the 107th Congress, and that is a Democratic substitute. We make a Democratic substitute in order.

In the last Congress, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) talked about the number of amendments made in order. Well, of the amendments made in order, 55 percent of them in the last Congress were Democratic amendments, and in this Congress, it is 75 percent. Three of the 4 amendments made in order have been offered by Democrats. That is why when we hear this issue of fairness continually raised, I argue that this is a very fair, a very balanced rule, that will allow us to take on one of the very, very important issues of the rights of individuals under this system of justice that we have.

□ 1045

I congratulate the members of the Committee on the Judiciary who have worked long and hard on this. We continue to try and bring this back, and we hope very much we will be able to bring about a resolution in behalf of the American people.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute.

Of course, I just heard the comments by my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Rules; and my only point was in the last Congress, both times this came up, the last Congress and the Congress preceding, all amendments that were filed we permitted to be made in order. This time the majority has cherry-picked and said, well, we will have these couple of amendments made in order, but the ones that are really important, we are not going to let those be made in order.

Also, I would like to read from the hometown newspaper of my good friend, the gentlewoman from Ohio, who is managing the bill. This is an editorial that appeared in the Columbus Dispatch May 8, 2003: ''Courts have the power to police such abuses, and proponents of the bill have not shown that abuses are widespread or that the courts have failed such that the Congress needs to step in. If there are problems that require a legislative solution, the solution should be one that is carefully tailored, not the blunt instrument of this bill.''

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN), a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Rules works in mysterious ways. As the newest member of the committee, I continue to be fascinated by the twists and contortions in the process. I have seen some crazy things: entire bills rewritten behind closed doors; Members of this House shut out of the process, and debate stifled. But last night takes the cake. Last night the Republicans in charge of the committee denied two of the six amendments that were filed. My good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), sponsored both of the denied amendments. He took time out of his busy schedule to testify before the Committee on Rules in support of his amendments, but the chairman and the other committee Republicans decided that the Delahunt amendments would not be considered by the House.

Now, I am sure that they had their reasons. After all, one of the Delahunt amendments would repeal the retroactive provision of the bill. In other words, the lawsuits filed by the former workers at Enron against Ken Lay after he destroyed their life savings would be delayed for years without the Delahunt amendments. And just in case all of the tax cuts for Ken Lay and his rich friends were not enough, now the Republicans are protecting him from facing his former employees in court.

Now, when we saw the rule in committee and I saw that the Delahunt amendments were not made in order, I assumed the chairman had a good reason, so I asked him why he denied these two amendments; and the chairman of the Committee on Rules, whom I have great respect for, replied that he denied these amendments ''because that is what they decided.'' I was even more surprised to hear another Republican on the committee declare that ''these amendments were denied because he wanted them denied.''

Now, the irony is almost overwhelming. Every day we hear the Republican leadership whine and complain about the other body, about how a single Senator can shut down the whole process, about how so-called ''holds'' and filibusters are threatening the very foundation of our democracy. I want my colleagues and the American people to know that there are holds right here in the House of Representatives. Apparently, a single member of the Committee on Rules, on a thoughtless whim, has the power to shut down debate on a critical issue.

Mr. Speaker, these amendments were thoughtfully and carefully drafted. They addressed real problems with the legislation. But shockingly, we were not even given the courtesy of a genuine response to our questions. Real questions about real public policy issues were simply waved away like nuisances. We were essentially told that what happens in the Committee on Rules and in this House really is none of our business.

Now, we have debated, as the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has said, the issue of class action reform twice before, both times under an open process with relevant amendments made in order by the Committee on Rules, but not anymore. The Republicans are setting a very dangerous precedent, Mr. Speaker; and people deserve to know what is happening behind closed doors in the people's House.

The leadership of this House has become so arrogant, they believe they can stifle debate without any accountability. This body, the greatest deliberative body in the world, and the constituents we represent deserve much, much better.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 3 minutes to my good friend and very distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER), a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend and colleague of the Committee on Rules, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE), for yielding me this time.

I rise in support of House Resolution 269 and urge the House to approve this rule so that we can move on to consideration of the underlying legislation, H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2003.

This structured rules makes in order a total of four amendments. In fact, three of those amendments are sponsored by Democrats. The other amendment has bipartisan sponsorship. Thus this rule will allow the House to work its will on the key issues that these amendments raise, and H. Res. 269 should receive bipartisan support for doing so.

The editorial staff for The Washington Post once wrote that ''no portion of the American civil justice system is more of a mess than the world of class actions. None is in more desperate need of policymakers' attention.'' I agree.

Class action litigation is one of America's most embarrassing judicial practices, pitting settlement-hungry lawyers against unsuspecting consumers seeking redress for their grievances. I know that all of the Members of this House are very familiar with some of the outrageous class action settlements that have become depressingly common in States all across the Nation.

In these instances, skillful trial lawyers earn million-dollar fees for filing meritless class action lawsuits which are frequently settled rather than litigated in court. When this happens, trial lawyers are the primary beneficiaries, and the individuals with the class action lawsuits receive very modest financial payments or even, in some cases, just coupons toward future purchases. Surely we can do better than that for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1115 contains a number of commonsense reforms all designed to curb these abusive lawsuits, while still ensuring that legitimate lawsuits can move through the court system.

The fact that this class action reform was crafted in a bipartisan fashion is a credit to its authors, the gentlemen from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) and (Mr. BOUCHER). I support their responsible collection of legal reforms, and I hope legislation of this nature can be enacted during this Congress.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding me this time.

I rise in opposition to the rule and the bill, H.R. 1115, the so-called Class Action Fairness Act. This is an unfair bill that does nothing to resolve disputes. Moreover, the bill has a number of significant problems.

First, the bill will disrupt ongoing litigation because it applies to pending class actions. Some of those class actions that would be affected would be those cases against Enron, WorldCom, and Arthur Andersen for financial fraud; other major cases involving environmental damage or employment discrimination; and several drug companies involving problems with their pharmaceuticals. It is fundamentally unfair for Congress to change the rules for consumers midstream by including these pending cases and, therefore, making it more difficult to resolve disputes in a timely manner.

This bill is overly broad. It defines class actions not only to include class actions, but also State actions brought on behalf of the general public by State attorneys general. These cases are important consumer protection tools in some States, particularly California; and all of these cases would be considered class actions and subject to the provisions of the bill, even though they were not filed as class actions and even though they were brought by the State attorney general under State law.

Mr. Speaker, by shifting class actions to Federal court, H.R. 1115 will overload the Federal judiciary and increase delays. Criminal cases are always given priority in Federal courts; and because the courts are already overloaded with criminal cases, including many traditionally State cases that have been transferred to Federal jurisdiction over the past few years, State actions that are referred to Federal courts by this bill will be delayed. They also may get caught up in some judicial districts that have been dealing with terrorism cases or the temporary onslaught of other criminal cases. Adding in complex class action litigation to an already overloaded docket will only add to additional delays.

These delays will be exacerbated by the provision in the bill that grants an automatic, pretrial appeal and a stay of discovery during that appeal. Guilty corporations who use their appeals under the bill will be able to delay their inevitable judgment day by several years. A rule that was offered in committee by the gentleman from Massachusetts and myself would have specifically dealt with this problem, but that amendment was rejected by the Committee on Rules.

Mr. Speaker, many of the cases, in fact, should remain in State court. H.R. 1115 would often require Federal judges to apply State law when State judges have more familiarity with the law in their own States. This may result in mistakes being made in the application of State law, affecting both plaintiffs and defendants.

H.R. 1115 violates uniform rules of Federal procedure. For example, Federal courts will be required to apply one set of rules on diversity jurisdictions for everybody except class actions. There will be a separate rule for class actions. There will also be rules on removal, dismissal, remand, appellate review, and discovery where there will be rules for everybody, except class actions, another set of rules for class actions.

Now, there has been a whole lot of hoopla about so-called coupon settlements, about how legislation is necessary to address that problem when plaintiffs get a negligible recovery. Now, as the gentleman from Texas has pointed out, there are as many examples of Federal court abuses regarding coupon settlements as there are State court abuses.

But there is nothing inherently wrong with coupon settlements. If a business has been stealing only 50 cents at a time, the recovery for each individual class member will be minuscule. But a class action, even with a coupon settlement, will be effective in stopping the ongoing theft. One recent case involved a business which fraudulently calibrated its cash registers to steal small amounts of money from each customer. Now, how much will each customer be entitled to if they are cheated out of 3 cents? If you cannot have a favorable verdict when the individual damages are de minimis, you give an unscrupulous corporation a free pass, so long as they do not steal too much from each person.

Federal and State judges oppose this bill. The Federal Judicial Conference headed by the Chief Justice of the United States, the Conference of the Chief Justices which represents chief justices around the country, both oppose H.R. 1115. It is also opposed by the American Bar Association and consumer advocacy groups.

We have the responsibility to our citizens to ensure timely access to the courts for damages sustained. This bill will do nothing to help that issue. It will only give unscrupulous defendants new procedural schemes to delay justice, and justice delayed is justice denied.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that we reject the rule and reject the bill as unnecessary, unwise, and creating more problems than it solves. I urge my colleagues to oppose the bill.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), my very distinguished colleague and the whip of the Republican majority.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I am here in favor of the rule and, of course, the underlying bill, and looking forward to the debate today.

This is an issue that we have brought to the floor now for the last several Congresses. And every time we do it, I see our Members on both sides of the aisle, many of whom will vote for it on both sides of the aisle, begin to understand that this is a great opportunity to talk about how badly the current system works. A debate that we used to dread, a debate that we used to fear, a debate that we used to be concerned about, now our Members are eager to talk about because of the incredible abuses out there in the system. We will see the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman GOODLATTE) and others stand up here during the day today with chart after chart after chart that shows what happens when consumers are unfairly treated in this system.

The changes we advocate today create an environment where the people that are impacted have a better chance to get money rather than the lawyers who put these class action suits together. It creates an opportunity to go to a court that will look carefully at the issues. We are going to see example after example of the millions of dollars that go to the lawyers involved and the $1 coupons and the smallest box of Cheerios and the 33-cent check that goes to the people in the class. Obviously, the lawyers thought the class had very little impact, as demonstrated by the settlement that they were willing to agree to.

□ 1100

If people were affected by this terrible thing that the lawyers contend happened, how is 33 cents a proper settlement? How is $1 a proper settlement? How is a coupon with money off, to go back to the same company that apparently had been so dastardly in launching suit, how could that possibly be a proper settlement?

How could any attorney spend time and go to the court and say to them at the end of this case, I want you to give my client a $1 coupon? I want you to give my client the smallest possible box of cereal? I want you to give my client a check for 33 cents?

This system is terribly abused. It needs to be changed. Vote for this rule. Seeing Democrats and Republicans on the floor today vote for the bill sends a message that will change this system in a way that benefits consumers and benefits justice.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking member for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, the proponents, they do not want to reform class actions; they really want to destroy them.

Not only have they for all intents and purposes barred States from considering these cases by means of a massive expansion of Federal jurisdiction, against the advice, by the way, of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Chief Justice Rehnquist, the Judicial Conference of the United States, and the Conference of State Chief Justices, but they have cleverly changed the rules in the Federal courts to further thwart class action suits. I want to acknowledge that it is a brilliant strategy.

Do Members realize that even Washington cannot dictate the rules by which State courts handle their cases? So they simply remove most of these cases to the Federal court. Then once they are in the Federal court, they design an obstacle course to make sure that most of these cases will just linger and linger and linger and never see the light of day. They did this by adding a section which creates an automatic right of appeal. If a Federal district court simply certifies, simply certifies a class, that appeal comes before the case is even heard on the merits.

Now, that is not all. The bill, as others have indicated, would halt all discovery proceedings in the case until the appeal, until the appeal is completed. This unprecedented new right for defendants is unheard of in the American civil justice system.

What does it mean in practical terms? There is already an enormous backlog in the Federal courts, as others have suggested. This bill in and of itself will seriously exacerbate that problem and it will delay the resolution of these cases by years. As the gentleman from Virginia has said: Justice delayed is justice denied.

What I find particularly unconscionable is that the sponsors claim that the first purpose of this act is to ensure fair and prompt, and prompt, recoveries for class members with legitimate claims. Well, as that great philosopher, Rodney Dangerfield, said, Give me a break. It is important to understand that class actions do not exist solely, solely, to provide relief for private wrongs. No, they exist to correct and punish and deter; most importantly, deter corporate misconduct that harms large numbers of ordinary people and can put all Americans at risk.

Remember, Mr. Speaker, the Firestone case, the tobacco cases, where it was class action suits that revealed the ugly truth that lives had been sacrificed because of corporate greed? Because of this bill, we will create fertile ground for future Firestone and tobacco cases. That is a tragedy.

We should also understand that the existing practice which was adopted by rule in 1998 gives the judge discretion to permit an appeal of a class certification order and to stay proceedings. But as Judge Scirica, writing on behalf of the Judicial Conference of the United States, said in a recent letter to the committee, and now I am quoting, ''Providing an appeal as a right might tempt a party to appeal solely for tactical reasons.''

He pointed out that many appeals are unnecessary, wasteful, and expensive. He said that he was unaware of any dissatisfaction, not a single complaint from the bench or bar, with the current rule; and that since the rule had only been promulgated recently, any consideration of it being amended should be deferred.

Well, as my colleague, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) said, we agreed with Judge Scirica and filed an amendment to undo their damage. Of course, it was not made in order. I guess I should not be surprised.

Members should know that these concerns would not only affect future class action suits in the Federal court. No, the sponsors were not satisfied with that. They wanted the whole enchilada. Unbelievably, they made that provision retroactive, so it will alter the course of hundreds of cases that have already been filed in Federal court and cause further delay, further delay; cases like the ImClone case, in which that CEO was just sentenced to 7 years in prison for fraud and perjury and obstruction of justice; and like the Enron case, brought by thousands of investors who claim more than $20 billion in damages as a result of the series of fraudulent transactions that destroyed the company and rendered its stock worthless.

Are there abuses of the system? Of course. That is undeniable. The Democratic substitute would address them; but the underlying bill does not. That is not its purpose. Its purpose is to shield corporate wrongdoers from civil liability and leave the public unprotected.

This is not about protecting plaintiffs, and, as I said, ensuring prompt recoveries; it is about protecting large corporations whose conduct has been egregious. It is about protecting the powerful at the expense of the powerless, and to prevent people from banding together as a class to challenge power in the only way they can.

Defeat the rule and defeat the bill.

Mr. Speaker, there's a lot that's wrong with this bill. But nothing is as wrong as the provision that was added to it during our committee debate to give it retroactive effect with respect to cases already pending in court.

It's one thing to make new policy for future cases. It's quite another to rewrite the rules once the whistle has sounded.

Why in the world would the sponsors of the bill insist on making it retroactive?

During our markup, one of the supporters of the amendment making the bill retroactive said, and I quote, ''If this bill is enacted but pending cases that have not been certified for class treatment are excluded, it would discriminate against those who may be joined to a class in a pending case after the date of enactment.''

In other words, Mr. Speaker, we must transfer all pending cases to federal court and make every class certification subject to automatic appeal to ensure that no individual is forced to be a member of a class against his or her will. That's like saying that we have to quarantine the entire U.S. population to contain a single outbreak of West Nile virus. The truth is that individuals can already opt out of the class at the time they receive notice of the suit. And under rules that go into effect in December, judges will be able to extend the opt-out even after certification.

Such an argument does not deserve to be taken seriously. But the supporters also make a second argument. Unless we apply the new rules to pending cases, they say, there will be a rush to the courthouse by new plaintiffs seeking to file ''frivolous'' lawsuits under the old rules.

Here again, they propose to disrupt the hundreds of cases now awaiting class certification, some of which have already been in court proceedings for many months, in order to prevent certain other people, as yet unknown, from racing to file other cases.

This argument is almost so absurd that one is embarrassed to respond to it. If a suit is frivolous, it will survive a motion to dismiss, where it is filed in state or federal court. That is the customary remedy for frivolous lawsuits, and the courts are quite capable of using it.

No, I'm afraid that ''this dog won't hunt,'' as my good friend, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE), is so fond of saying.

The real reason they're so desperate to make the bill retroactive is obvious. It's the only way to throw a monkey wrench into the class actions that are now proceeding against the former executives at companies like Enron, WorldCom, and Global Crossing, who are facing both civil and criminal liability for the systematic looting of their companies. For the brazen misconduct and self-dealing that defrauded creditors and investors of billions of dollars, and stripped employees and retirees of their livelihood and life savings.

If this bill passes, those executives will be able to breathe a sigh of relief. In fact, they'll get another year or two in which to spend down their ill-gotten gains before they need to worry about going to trial.

It's no surprise that the House leadership was unwilling to make in order an amendment that would have stripped the retroactivity language from the bill. They don't want the public to know what they're doing. They're embarrassed by it. And they ought to be.

Oppose the rule and vote ''no'' on the bill.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 8 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), chairman of the Committee on Agriculture; but more importantly, today, the author of this important reform legislation and a very valued member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman, our excellent conference chairman, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good and fair rule. I would urge my colleagues to adopt it. It makes in order important amendments that should be considered and debated carefully. It makes in order an amendment offered by the gentleman from the other side of the aisle, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), along with the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and myself, which will take into account some of the provisions that were considered in the Senate. We are pleased to do that because we are certainly interested in making the bill better.

I would urge my colleagues to defeat the other amendments that are going to be offered because they do not make this legislation better; they would gut it, they would harm it. I would urge Members' opposition to it.

In response to my good friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT), this is not tort reform; this is court reform. As a result, we are not harming the ability of any of those cases that the gentleman cited to be considered carefully and fairly.

In fact, because this legislation improves the court process, it is court reform, and it will make those cases heard better in courts more capable of hearing them. We will address some of those specific cases as the debate proceeds.

With regard to his comments about coupon settlement reform, let me point out that while the gentleman may laud coupon settlements, most of us think they are a considerable abuse. The reason is very simple: The plaintiffs' attorney sues a company and then settles the case for millions of dollars, not for the plaintiffs but in attorneys' fees. The plaintiffs, the people he is supposed to be protecting, supposed to be representing, get a coupon to buy more of the product that he alleged was defective in the first place.

Coupon settlements are a gross abuse, and what this bill does to correct the problem is to require greater scrutiny of those cases. It also cuts out the abuse of that plaintiffs' attorney going to his or her secretary or friend or neighbor and saying, hey, help me bring this case because you fit into this class, and I will give you $100,000 for doing that when we settle the case; but the rest of the plaintiffs will get a coupon. That is an abuse. It ought to be ended.

To the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), I would point out that while he may cite the newspaper of the gentlewoman from Ohio criticizing this legislation, that newspaper is by far in the minority in this country on this issue.

America's newspapers know that this is a class act when they see it, and that is what this legislation is. The Washington Post called it ''Making Justice Work.'' They said, ''This'', the current system, ''is not justice. It's an extortion racket that only Congress can fix.''

Newsday, not a newspaper that ordinarily endorses legislation from this side of the aisle, they said, ''Congress should stem abuses of class-action lawsuits. Class-action lawsuits are ripe for reform.''

The Christian Science Monitor: ''Reforming Class-Action Suits.'' ''Class-action suits have also become an ATM for unscrupulous lawyers . . . ''

USA Today: ''Class-action Plaintiffs Deserve More Than Coupons.'' '' . . . lawyers, who put their own welfare ahead of their client's needs,'' under the current system.

The Hartford Current: The Class-Action Racket.'' They described the current system. '' . . . the Class Action Fairness Act would help eliminate some of the worst abuses.''

It does not stop there. The Buffalo News, the Indianapolis Star, the Des Moines Register, the St. Louis Post Dispatch, the Omaha World Herald, the Wall Street Journal, the Providence Journal, the Financial Times, the Chicago Tribune, the Oregonian, Cedar Rapids Gazette, the Akron Beacon Journal, the Albany Times Union, the list goes on and on of newspapers endorsing what we are trying to do. Why? Because of the abuses.

Here is a great case: A settlement with Cheerios over food additives produced a $2 million settlement in attorneys' fees, while class members only received coupons for more Cheerios.

Here is another one: After being named in 23 class action lawsuits, Blockbuster agreed to provide class members with only $1-off coupons; buy one, get one free coupons; and free Blockbuster Favorites video rentals. And those are the old videos you come back and hope they will rent more of, not the latest ones. Attorneys for the plaintiff received $9.2 million in fees.

It gets better. A settlement of a suit against an airline gave class members $25 coupons off to use when they purchased an additional airline ticket of $250 or more from the same airline from which, I presume, there was some complaint regarding the service they were providing. You get a 10 percent discount if you buy another ticket for $250 or more. What did the plaintiff's attorneys get? Sixteen million dollars.

The Bank of Boston, a settlement over disputed accounting practices produced an $8.5 million attorneys' fee and actually cost the class members they were representing. Why? Because they had to pay an additional $80. Later, the plaintiffs' attorney came into the case and sued the class members, the people they were representing, for an additional $25 million. You did not pay them enough. Even though you had to pay $80 in the settlement of the case and you did not get a coupon, they had to get more.

Here is my favorite. This is the case where consumers were awarded a 33-cent check in a class action against Chase Manhattan Bank, 33 cents. Great. There was a catch, though. At that time, in order to accept your 33-cent check, you had to use a 34-cent stamp to send in the acceptance.

□ 1115

Sounds like a 1-cent net loss. The attorneys in the case, well, they came out all right, $4 million in attorney fees. Here is one of the checks: 33 cents.

Now, some have said that there is an issue of federalism here, that somehow we are taking away rights from the States. But under current law, a simple slip-and-fall lawsuit involving a Virginia defendant and a Maryland plaintiff can be brought in Federal district court today. Yet, a nationwide class action lawsuit worth $100 million, $1 billion, with plaintiffs in the hundreds of thousands from all 50 States, with multiple defendants from more than one State, that winds up in a State court in Illinois. It cannot be removed to Federal court because of the antiquated class action laws.

Now, do people understand this? You bet they do. Here is a USA Today poll. Opinions on class action lawsuits. Who benefits most from class action lawsuits? Is it the plaintiffs? Is it consumers? No, they know. Lawyers for the plaintiffs, 47 percent of the public says that. Who is second? Lawyers for the defendants. They come out all right, too. They are going to get paid.

How about the plaintiffs themselves? Nine percent. Sixty-seven percent say the lawyers benefit. Nine percent say the plaintiffs themselves are benefiting.

And, again, I remind you, there is broad bipartisan support for this legislation. The clients get token payments while the lawyers get enormous fees.

This is not justice. This is an extortion racket that only Congress can fix. Who said it? The Washington Post.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule and to support the underlying legislation. This has great prospect for success this year. We are very close in the Senate to passage of this legislation as well. The President anxiously awaits it on his desk.

Let us support this bipartisan simple tort reform that will make it possible for class actions to be heard and dealt with fairly throughout this country.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. SULLIVAN), my very distinguished colleague.

Mr. SULLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) for those very informative charts. I believe we need to stop the lawsuit lottery in this country.

Today I rise in support of H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2002. H.R. 1115 is a critical piece of legislation that can reform tort law and give reprieve to our beleaguered State and local courts that are suffering under the weight of frivolous lawsuits.

Statistics have shown that upwards of 93 percent of Americans believe tort reforms are needed. These statistics also show that 50 percent of all tort awards go towards lawyers' fees and their administrative costs. From these figures it is easy to discern that the American people demand tort reform and protection from lawyers who are looking out for their own interests rather than those of the plaintiffs they represent.

The Class Action Fairness Act of 2003 seeks a balanced and sensible approach to address the worst class action abuses. It provides protections for consumers and assures fair and prompt recoveries for class members with legitimate claims. The bill specifically discourages lawyers from forum shopping for courts most likely to approve a prospective class of plaintiffs and award large monetary decisions.

By curbing these abuses of the class action system, consumer costs will be driven down and these lawsuits will benefit plaintiffs they are intended to compensate. This sensible legislation will restore balance, fairness, and uniformity to our civil justice system. It is a good step in the right direction in reforming tort law and will protect plaintiffs and consumers alike.

I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 1115 to set a precedent of judicial fairness.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have one remaining speaker. Does the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) have anyone further?

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, does the gentlewoman have one speaker, and then will she close after that?

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, how much time remains?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). The gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE) has 5½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has 7½ minutes remaining.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. KING), my distinguished colleague and a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I would like to remark on the distinguished gentleman from Virginia's (Mr. GOODLATTE) comments.

There is nothing I can add to the emphasis he has put here today. I simply add my voice and I wish to associate myself with the very dramatic and emphatic presentation that the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) has made.

I would point out that our tort system consumes up to 3 percent of our gross domestic product. If we need 3½ growth just to sustain our economy, and our freedom, I might add, then our economy has to grow at 6½ percent in order to make up for the 3 percent that is consumed in our tort system.

It is a deep problem that we must address. It is a loophole in our current system that allows class action lawsuits involving plaintiffs from nearly every State to file suits in those few States that are known to be plaintiff-friendly and hostile to out-of-State defendants.

These few State courts are making the decisions that set the policy for other States and the entire country. Out-of-State companies and residents are being sued in class action lawsuits in other States where their rights are being determined under those State laws. H.R. 1115 appropriately addresses this forum shopping problem by allowing Federal courts to hear class action lawsuits involving plaintiffs or defendants from multiple States or foreign countries.

The biggest winners in the current class action scheme are trial lawyers, not consumers. The public knows that, as was pointed out. The large fees awarded class action lawyers through settlements all too often do not constitute legitimate harm, because many companies agree to these settlements in order to lower the costs of nuisance lawsuits. Unfortunately, settling cases with little or no merit results in higher prices for consumers. Frivolous class action cases are, in effect, a litigation tax imposed on consumers because the economic damage to a company results in higher prices for its products.

The explosion of class actions lawsuits has reached crisis proportions. I encourage you to vote for H.R. 1115 and help address the growing class action problem in America.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I have been listening to the great crocodile tears shed on the other side on the issue of coupon settlement proposition. Of course, if they want to change that, they should support the Democratic substitute which is stronger on the issue of coupon settlements than their underlying bill.

Also, it is fascinating to listen to the advocates of States rights on the other side suddenly shift gears and become advocates of a very strong Federal system. I guess there is just a fundamental distrust of our State court system on the part of Republicans, and I find that very curious and very interesting. Also, particularly in light of the fact that the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States is opposed to dumping these additional lawsuits into the already overburdened Federal system.

So we just have a peculiar situation in which people on the other side of the aisle are disregarding the Chief Justice of the United States, a member of their own party, and are also suddenly, in this particular instance, advocating for stronger action by the Federal system which would override the State system that they normally support.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to vote no on the previous question. Last night the Committee on Rules broke with its past precedents and refused to make in order two important amendments Democratic Members brought to the committee.

If the previous question is defeated, I will offer an amendment to the rule that will restore fairness in the debate on class action reform that the House has adopted in the previous two Congresses. Under my proposal, the House will be allowed to debate one amendment by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) that will delete the bill's retroactive provisions; and, two, the Delahunt-Scott amendment to prevent corporations from using interlocutory appeals to run out the clock on class action lawsuits.

No matter what their position is on this bill or on these particular amendments, all Members should support bringing fairness back to the process and vote no on the previous question.

I am merely asking that all Members with serious amendments be allowed to bring them to the House floor just as they have been able to on the earlier occasions when we have debated class action reform.

Let me make it very clear. A no vote would not stop the House from taking up the Class Action Fairness Act and would not prevent any of the amendments made in order by the rule from being offered. However, a yes vote will preclude the House from considering these two very important amendments that are critical to the debate on class action lawsuits.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert the text of the amendments immediately prior to the vote on the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, again, vote no on the previous question.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in closing let me just remind my colleagues that the critics had it backwards. This bill restores, rather than undermines, the principled balance of Federalism. It is the other 49 States' rights that are being protected when one State's judge is precluded from making law and determining the law and the outcome for the other 49. This is truly an example of a principle of federalism.

This legislation provides important and needed reform. It will help plaintiffs that are part of a class receive more than just a coupon for a box of cereal, a coupon that goes back to the very company that was sued in the first place.

It is laughable, Mr. Speaker. It will give needed accountability while preserving the rights of the truly injured. But more importantly for me as a former member of the bench, it will bring back the public's faith in our justice system, because really it has become a joke. As you listen to the debate this afternoon, it is so sad that it is almost funny. This country is only as strong as the faith our citizens have in its laws and how they are applied to them. When it becomes a joke, it weakens us.

H.R. 1115 has the strong support of the administration. It is an important step forward in commonsense reform. I urge my colleagues to put the plaintiffs first. Let us get justice back in our system. Support this fair and balanced rule and the underlying legislation.

The material previously referred to by Mr. FROST is as follows:

PREVIOUS QUESTION FOR H. RES. 269—RULE ON H.R. 1115, CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003

At the end of the resolution, add the following:

''SEC. 2. Notwithstanding any other provision of this resolution, the amendments printed in section 3 shall be in order as though printed after the amendment numbered 3 in the report of the Committee on Rules if offered by the Member designated. Each amendment may be offered only in the order specified in section 3 and shall be debatable for 20 minutes equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent.

''SEC. 3. The amendments referred to in section 2 are as follows:''

(1) Amendment by Representative CONYERS of Michigan or a designee:

Strike section 8 and insert the following:

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply to any civil action commenced on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) Amendment by Representative DELAHUNT of Massachusetts or a designee:

Strike section 6 and redesignate the succeeding sections accordingly.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

Pursuant to clause 8 and 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the minimum time for electronic voting, if ordered on the question of adoption of the resolution and, thereafter, on approving the Journal.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 229, nays 193, not voting 12, as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON) (during the vote). Members are advised that 2 minutes remain in this vote.

□ 1204

So the Journal was approved.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained during rollcall votes 265, 266 and 267. Had I been present, I would have voted: ''No'' on rollcall vote 265 and 266 and ''yes'' on rollcall vote 267.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill, H.R. 1115.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

CLASS ACTION FAIRNESS ACT OF 2003

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 269 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 1115.

□ 1205

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1115) to amend the procedures that apply to consideration of interstate class actions to assure fairer outcomes for class members and defendants, to outlaw certain practices that provide inadequate settlements for class members, to assure that attorneys do not receive a disproportionate amount of settlements at the expense of class members, to provide for clearer and simpler information in class action settlement notices, to assure prompt consideration of interstate class actions, to amend title 28, United States Code, to allow the application of the principles of Federal diversity jurisdiction to interstate class actions, and for other purposes, with Mr. LATOURETTE in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER).

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2003. In years past, the occasional news account of some outrageous class action verdict or settlement was light humor. Now the stories are so common there is no punch line, the class action judicial system itself has become a joke, and no one is laughing except the trial lawyers, all the way to the bank.

Abuse of State class action lawsuits is now systemic and this mounting crisis is a threat to the integrity of our civil justice system and a persistent drain on the national economy. Since this House passed nearly identical class action reform legislation in the 107th Congress, a bill which died in the Democrat-controlled Senate, the problem has only gotten worse. One major element of the worsening crisis is the exponential increase in State class action cases, many of which deal with national issues and classes.

In the past 10 years, State court class actions filing nationwide have increased over 1,000 percent. In certain ''magnet courts'' known for certifying even the most speculative class action suits, the increase in filings over the last 5 years is approaching 4,000 percent. Take, for example, the court in Madison County, Illinois, a rural county of 250,000 people which is on pace for a projected 3,650 percent increase in class action filings over 1998 levels. Eighty-one percent of those cases sought to certify nationwide cases, including all nationwide Sprint customers ever disconnected on a cell phone, all Roto-Rooter customers nationwide whose drains were repaired by unlicensed plumbers, and all nationwide customers who purchased a ''limited edition'' Barbie doll at a higher price.

So why are all these class action cases filed there? Madison County did not experience a similar growth in population during this time, nor did it suddenly become a hub for interstate commerce. Furthermore, there is no evidence to suggest that the good people of Madison County are somehow cursed or more plagued by injuries than the average citizen. Indeed, the only explanation for this phenomenon is aggressive forum shopping by trial lawyers to find courts and judges who will act as willing accomplices in a judicial power grab, hearing nationwide cases and setting policy for the entire country in a local court.

A second major element of the present class action crisis is a system producing outrageous settlements that benefit only lawyers and trample the rights of class members. Class actions were originally created to efficiently address a large number of similar claims by people suffering small harms. Today they are too often used to efficiently transfer large fees to a small number of trial lawyers doing great harm. The present rules encourage a race to any available State courthouse in hopes of a rubber-stamped nationwide settlement that produces millions in attorneys' fees. Clearly, some trial lawyers are winners in this race, but as the Justice Department testified at the committee's last hearing, the losers in this race are the victims who often gain little or nothing through the settlement, yet are bound by it in perpetuity. These same victims and all consumers often bear the cost of these settlements through increased prices for goods and insurance.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to share with Members a survey that was published in the USA Today newspaper on Monday, March 24, 2003: ''Opinions on Class Action Lawsuits, Who Benefits the Most From Class Action Lawsuits.'' Forty-seven percent said lawyers for plaintiffs, 20 percent said lawyers for companies, 12 percent said don't know, 9 percent said plaintiffs, 7 percent said companies being sued, and 5 percent said buyers of products.

Two-thirds of the American public according to this survey indicate that the beneficiaries of class action lawsuits are lawyers and only 14 percent said plaintiffs and buyers of products. This bill is designed to change this mix so that the consumers and the plaintiffs are the ones that benefit rather than lawyers for plaintiffs or lawyers for defendants.

Summarizing the problem last November, The Washington Post editorial board in a critique of the present system wrote:

''Class actions permit almost infinite venue shopping; national class actions can be filed just about anywhere and are disproportionately brought in a handful of State courts whose judges get elected with lawyers' money. These judges effectively become regulators of products and services produced elsewhere and sold nationally. And when cases are settled, the clients get token payments while the lawyers get enormous fees. This is not justice. It is an extortion racket only Congress can fix.''

Mr. Chairman, today Congress has an opportunity to end this extortion racket and fix this problem. Article 3 of the Constitution empowers Congress to establish Federal jurisdiction over cases between citizens of different States, but current rules on class actions require that all plaintiffs and defendants be residents of different States and that every plaintiff's claim be valued at $75,000 or more. These jurisdictional statutes enacted before the advent of modern class actions lead to results the framers would find perverse.

For example, under current law, a citizen of one State may bring in Federal court a simple $75,001 slip-and-fall claim against a party from another State. But if a class of 25 million product owners or users living in all 50 States bring claims collectively worth $15 billion against a manufacturer, that lawsuit usually must be heard in State court.

H.R. 1115 would apply new diversity standards to class actions by changing the diversity requirements for class actions where any plaintiff and any defendant reside in different States and where the aggregate of all plaintiffs' claims is at least $2 million. These modest changes will keep large actions of a national character in Federal court where they belong.

□ 1215

H.R. 1115 also addresses the other major area in need of reform, the incentives for settlements in class action cases and scrutiny of those settlements. Under current rules, the first case settled wins. Those left out must either find a way to join the settlement or forgo their claim. This leads to bad settlements favoring lawyers over consumers in jurisdictions with lax class action requirements. In the last year, more such one-sided settlements benefiting only the lawyers occurred.

Example: A settlement with Blockbuster over late fees produced $9.25 million in lawyers' fees, and nothing more but dollar coupons for the consumers represented, only 20 percent of which are likely to be redeemed.

Another example: A settlement with Crayola over asbestos included in crayons produced $600,000 in attorneys' fees, and nothing but a 75-cent discount on more crayons for affected consumers.

In order to prevent abuses like this, H.R. 1115 aims to protect plaintiffs by prohibiting the payment of bounties to class representatives, barring the approval of net loss settlements, adopting better notice requirement provisions which clarify class members' rights, and by requiring greater scrutiny of coupon settlements and settlements involving out-of-State class members.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, it is important to note that the costs of class action abuses are not limited to the parties of the settlements. They are shared by the American consumer through higher prices and higher insurance premiums.

Class action lawsuits also pose a threat to investors and the security of American retirement plans, which are largely invested in equity securities of American corporations. While class action liability can be enormous, news of these lawsuits on Wall Street can drive down any particular stock by as much as 10 points in one day.

I also would note that we are likely to hear names like Enron, Adelphia and WorldCom tossed about today, and rhetoric that this bill would let such noted corporate wrongdoers off the hook. The truth of the matter is that nothing in H.R. 1115 would limit the rights of plaintiffs to seek redress in court in these types of cases.

Under current law, most lawsuits against these companies will be heard in Federal bankruptcy court, for the same reasons that Federal courts should be able to resolve many of the class actions. Federal courts protect the interests of diverse parties from all parts of the country. In addition, section 4 of H.R. 1115 specifically excludes a number of Federal securities and State-based corporate fraud lawsuits.

Mr. Chairman, the need to restore some common sense, fairness, certainty, and dignity in our class action system is clear. The time to act is now, and I urge my colleagues to vote for this bill and to put some sense back into our legal system.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, welcome to ''Bash Trial Lawyers Day'' in the House of Representatives. My friend the chairman used the term 13 times in his presentation.

I just keep wondering, I would ask the gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENSENBRENNER), what kind of law did you practice? I am intrigued by the right of trial lawyers not to be as effective as they can in court.

I notice that the Enron people have pretty good trial lawyers. I notice that WorldCom has pretty good trial lawyers. I notice that Adelphia has pretty good trial lawyers. These are all Republican supporters. I notice that Tyco has pretty good trial lawyers.

Why cannot people with class action suits have trial lawyers that are effective and doing a good job and get compensated for it?

I would yield to the gentleman, if he chooses to comment on that.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Everybody has a right to have a lawyer, but you ought to be for court reform.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, everybody has a right to a lawyer. I thank the gentleman very much. I am very happy this gets reiterated.

I just want to count the number of times trial lawyers get it in the neck. Property lawyers, they are okay. Domestic relation lawyers, have you got any beef about them? They are okay. But trial lawyers that try these kinds of class action cases, they are making out like bandits, so, let us put it in the Federal courts. Let us take all of the class action cases and send them to the Federal courts, exactly where the Federal judiciary is begging you not to send them; begging you not to send them. All the consumer groups are begging you not to send them there.

Yet you tried it in 1998, 1999, 2001, and, now for the fourth time in 6 years, you are back at it again.

Why? What is the problem, guys? Should not people, consumers injured, be able to bring their cases to their State courts where they have traditionally?

Well, the answer is, for me, yes; but for you, no.

Could somebody explain to me why we would make the cases retroactive on top of it? I yield the floor. Tell me why Tyco, Enron, WorldCom, Adelphia, just tell me why those five corporations should be granted a delay?

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. I yield with pleasure to the gentleman from Virginia, my friend on the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, it is not a delay, it is an expedition. Quite frankly, they have no different treatment in Federal courts than State courts.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I take my time back. I thank the gentleman very much for his contribution.

What this bill does, and I just ask that you would read it, I will quote you the exact place in the bill, is grant an automatic right of appeal in class certification cases automatically. Is that going to expedite things?

Most of the judges do not even grant an appeal if they had the discretion, and think I think you or your staff may be aware of this. That is a delay, I would say to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE).

Now, in addition to the automatic delay, there is a stay of all discovery proceedings while the right of appeal is exercised. Do you know how long that could take, I would ask the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE)? About 2 years. Now you are telling me that is really expediting the process. I wait to hear your explanation of that.

I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 1115. Although the legislation is described by its proponents as a simple procedural fix, in actuality it represents a major rewrite of the class action rules that would bar most forms of State class actions and massively tilt the playing field in favor of corporate defendants.

This is why the legislation is opposed by both the State and Federal judiciaries, consumer and public interest groups, environmental and health groups, and civil rights groups. There are several critical problems with the bill before us.

First, H.R. 1115 will have serious adverse impact on the ability of consumers and other harmed individuals to obtain compensation in cases involving widespread harm. At a minimum, the legislation will force most State class action claims into Federal courts where there will be far more victims to litigate cases and where defendants could force plaintiffs to travel long distances to attend proceedings. At worst, because it is so much more difficult to certify class actions at the Federal level, the bill will operate to terminate most class action entirely.

Second, the bill includes a whole series of unrelated provisions that have nothing to do with class action jurisdiction, but will serve to benefit corporate wrongdoers. For example, section 6 of the bill gives the defendant an absolute right to appeal preliminary court decisions, which will delay the case by up to 2 years. The section also stops the discovery process dead in its tracks while the appeal is pending.

Most outrageously of all, the bill was amended so that it applies retroactively to pending cases. This means that the bill would apply to pending in corporate fraud cases. As my hometown paper, the Detroit Free Press wrote yesterday, ''the House version of the legislation is particularly offensive because it is retroactive, meaning it would affect class action claims now pending against Enron, Worldcom, Adelphia and other corporations accused of defrauding investors while their executives made millions of dollars.'' Is there a single Member in this Chamber who could defend Congress intervening in a pending case to help these corporate scam artists?

Fourth, the bill federalizes far more than just class actions. Section 4 provides that private attorney general actions and mass tort actions are to be treated as class actions and removed to Federal court. This means that district attorneys will no longer be able to combat fraud and abuse in their own State courts, and groups of harmed tort victims will be forced out of their State courts as well.

Do not be fooled by the Boucher amendment, which proponents claim will incorporate the Feinstein language from the Senate. What they do not tell you is that unlike the Feinstein compromise, the Majority's bill applies retroactively, allows for two year delays or more, and knocks out private attorney general actions. None of these provisions were in the Feinstein amendment in the Senate.

I believe it is time for more corporate accountability, not less. I urge a no vote on this one-sided, anti-consumer legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to invite the gentleman from Michigan to my district, or I would be happy to go to Detroit, and have him explain to my constituents or me explain to his constituents why giving a consumer a coupon for 75 cents or $1 off a product that was manufactured by the company that injured that consumer and had a judgment entered against them, while giving a lawyer hundreds of thousands or millions of dollars' worth of legal fees, or having the lawyer send a deficiency bill to every member of the class, this bill takes care of this, is correct, and how it puts consumers in charge rather than lawyers.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. GOODLATTE.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time and for his leadership in moving this legislation to the floor.

The reason why the interlocutory appeal allowed in the bill expedites the process and does not make it longer is that that issue is going to be heard on appeal anyway at the end of the trial, and, as you know, that takes years and years. Interlocutory appeals have historically been heard on average faster than appeals at the end of the trial, and, therefore, this will speed up the bringing of whatever allows the process to come to a conclusion.

Now, here is what we are talking about. Cheerios. What justice is done when the plaintiffs' attorney gets $2 million in attorney's fees and his clients get a box of Cheerios, the very product they allege was defective in the first place? What kind of justice for the plaintiffs is done there? I see the justice for the attorneys.

By the way, I say to the gentleman from Michigan, most trial lawyers are embarrassed by this abuse. Only a small cartel of very wealthy class action attorneys benefit from the current system. Most trial lawyers who represent most plaintiffs in America are embarrassed by this kind of abuse in the current system.

Abuses like $8.5 million in the Bank of Boston case for the plaintiffs' attorneys. The plaintiffs wound up having to pay money to their attorneys. Why did the attorneys get fees in a contingent fee case when their plaintiffs wound up having to pay them? They did not get anything.

Or the Blockbuster case that the gentleman from Wisconsin cited: $9.25 million to plaintiffs, $1 off on your movie ticket.

The great airline case, the frequent flier case. A 10 percent discount on your plane flight, if you buy another ticket on this so-called defective airline for $250 or more. The attorneys got $25 million.

The Coca-Cola case, the lawyers got $1.5 million, the plaintiffs got a 50-cent coupon.

Of course, my favorite case, the case of Chase Manhattan Bank, the attorneys got $4 million, the plaintiffs got 33 cents. Here is one of the checks, 33 cents. There is a little catch though, because you had to use a 34-cent stamp in order to send in the acceptance to get the 33 cents. That does not sound like a good deal for me either.

This restores federalism. It removes to our Federal courts the cases that involve the complexity and the diversity that our Founding Fathers created diversity jurisdiction for. A simple change in the law does not change the substance of class action, does not take away the right of anybody to bring a class action, but it does protect our system and the integrity of justice in America.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Virginia, forgot to put in Enron class action cases. I guess that was an oversight.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES), a former prosecutor, judge, and attorney.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1115. It is another series in ill-advised attempts to institute broad tort reform measures by this body. Class actions are often the only way in which small but meritorious claims can find redress, and, as such, they are an essential tool for enforcing civil rights, public health, environmental and consumer rights and laws.

It is very important, because my colleague disparages the integrity of elected State court judges. As a former State court judge, I speak for all of my colleagues to say that we are as qualified as those appointed by Presidents to the Federal bench.

I would also say that it is very important that if you look at the campaign funds of the people who are supporting this legislation, I guarantee you the organizations that do not want class actions are funding their campaigns.

I do not have enough time to say much more, except to say to all of you, vote against this legislation. It is not good for the consumer.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 1115, another in a series of ill-advised attempts to institute broad tort reform measures by this body. Class action lawsuits play an important role in our Nation's civil justice system, serving the dual objectives of practicality and fairness. Class actions are often the only way in which the small, but meritorious claims can find redress, and, as such, they are an essential tool for enforcing civil rights, public health, environmental and consumer rights and laws. The bill before us seeks to remove this tool and impair consumers' access to justice. Further, it disregards longstanding principals of federalism and would stress an already overburdened Federal judiciary.

There is no statistical evidence of a State class action ''crisis'' as proponents of this bill claim. In fact, there is empirical evidence to the contrary. For the past several years, the RAND Institute for Civil Justice has been studying class action settlements, only to find that given the small dollar amount of individuals' losses, it was ''highly unlikely that any individual claiming such losses would find legal representation without incurring significant personal expense.'' This study also found that class actions often resulted in changes to a companies business practices and that ''class counsel's fees were a modest share of the negotiated settlements.'' Overall, it concluded that its survey ''contradicts the view that damage class actions invariably produce little for class members and that class action attorneys routinely garner the lion's share of settlements.''

There is also no basis for the unfounded premise that big companies cannot get a fair trial in State courts—claims that are promulgated by sensationalist rhetoric surrounding a mere fraction of the class action suits that are introduced. Where the infrequent abuse has occurred, it is important to note that it is not an endemic feature of State judiciaries as proponents of this legislation would have us believe—in fact, many Federal class acitons have expeirenced the same outcomes that attract criticism at the state level.

My colleague disparges the integrity of elected State court judges. As a former judge I protest—if the campaign coffers of those supporting this legislation were reviewed—I venture a guess then—the contributors are supportive of this legislation.

But there is an overwhelming amount of evidence pointing to the fact that this bill would make it harder—if not impossible—to bring cases against major corporations in an era of increasing consumer and shareholder vulnerability. Legitimate lawsuits could be thrown out or stalled if defendants are given the right to move just about any class action case from States to a crowded Federal court docket. Since the mid-1990s, the Federal civil dockets have been severely backlogged. From 1993 to 2002, U.S. district court civil filings climbed by nearly 37,000 cases (16 percent). And according to the U.S. Judicial Conference, the Federal courts are short by 150 judges.

This legislation would not only further overburden the schedules of Federal judges, but would put them in the difficult position of interpreting a host of State law issues that don't belong in Federal courts in the first place. This would result not only in extended delays in obtaining benefits for class members, but also increase delays for individual plaintiffs in other cases. And since Federal judges are required to provide speedy trials to criminal defendants, it is likely that class action suits would end up at the end of the long Federal docket line, giving corporate offenders more time to ''shred'' documents or dump stock shares.

There is no doubt that State courts are institutionally better suited to handle class actions than Federal courts. State courts' civil dockets typically experience smaller caseloads than their Federal counterparts, not to mention greater experience with State civil laws. State courts are also more prepared to decide controversial issues of State law than Federal courts. Without State court interpretations, States' bodies of law will not develop solutions to new problems, or guide future conduct of businesses.

It is also important to remember that State courts are held to the very same standards of due process as their Federal counterparts. If State judges fail to perform their duties appropriately, States have adequate mechanisms for reprimanding them. And let us not forget that State judiciaries are capable of self-regulation. Where real problems with the certification process have occurred, the offending States have responded with reforms aimed at improvement. In Alabama, the often-cited ''swamp justice'' State according to the proponents of this legislation—both the legislature and the judiciary have been acting to tighten class action procedure in response to accusations for ''drive-by'' certifications.

If the foundation of our democracy relies on the strength and preservation of federalism and deference to State's rights, how can we support legislation that has as its backbone the notion that State judiciaries are not as competent as Federal courts? Just ask the substantial number of Federal judges who have served on State judiciaries if they are ''better judges'' now that they operate on a Federal court level. I doubt any of them will respond that they are more neutral, or less biased, as a result of their Federal appointment. Put simply, neither the State nor Federal judiciaries are seeking class action reform because they are quite confident in their own competence.

Indeed, Chief Justice Rehnquist and the Judicial Conference of the United States are opposed to this legislation for reasons beyond ''unduly burdened'' Federal courts and disturbing States' jurisdiction over in-State class actions—they are opposed because at its heart it questions the principles that our Nation's courts are the backbone of a fair and unbiased justice system.

Class actions play an important role in our civil justice system. We need to refrain from targeting the few class-action infractions at the expense of many citizens' right to their day in court. We also need to refrain from altering the delicate balance between State and Federal judiciaries established by the drafters of the Constitution and carefully engineered by their contemporaries.

Let us heed the advice of our most senior authority on this matter, Chief Justice Rehnquist, that ''Congress should commit itself to conserving the Federal courts as a distinctive judicial forum of limited jurisdiction in our system of federalism.'' This legislation is nothing more than a technically unsupportable effort to enact institutional advantages for large corporations in all class actions. Instead of promoting fairness and efficiency, H.R. 1115 simply gives tobacco companies, Enrons, Worldcoms, HMO's and polluters the power to choose the legal forum they believe will benefit them most.

A vote against the bill will send the reassuring message to our State and Federal judiciaries that their judgment and integrity is recognized by Congress. As a former judge, and now as a Member of this body, I urge my colleagues to vote against this bill.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Courts, the Internet, and Intellectual Property of the Committee on the Judiciary.

□ 1230

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I support H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act. This bill reforms the class action system and addresses the abuses that harm so many Americans.

In recent years, State courts have been flooded with thousands of frivolous lawsuits. Lawyers looking for the most favorable jurisdictions conduct the equivalent of a legal shopping spree. They use loopholes so class action suits can be heard in State courts rather than Federal courts. Today, State courts employ criteria so loosely defined that virtually any controversy can qualify as a class action.

We have all heard of the lawsuits in which the plaintiffs walk away with pennies, sometimes literally, while their attorneys walk away with millions of dollars in fees. For instance, in a suit against Chase Manhattan Bank that was referred to by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) a few minutes ago, consumers were awarded 33-cent checks while the attorneys pocketed $4 million in fees. Mr. Chairman, to describe this suit, as well as other class action lawsuits, as ''frivolous'' is an insult to frivolousness. Even The Washington Post has acknowledged that under the present system ''lawyers cash in, while the 'clients' get coupons.''

There are many ''magnet'' State courts that have a reputation for doling out enormous judgments. This bill makes it easier to get cases into Federal court to avoid such unfair results.

Mr. Chairman, I, along with the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), amended this bill in the Committee on the Judiciary to apply the law to cases that have been filed, but not yet certified as class actions. Cases that gain class certification after the date of enactment will have, in fact, the new rules apply to them.

This language eliminates any incentive to rush to the courthouse to avoid the reforms contained in the legislation. It also prevents individuals from being made part of a frivolous suit that has been filed before enactment of the new laws.

The widespread abuse of class action lawsuits must be stopped. The Class Action Fairness Act includes bipartisan, sensible reforms that clarify the rights of consumers and restore confidence in America's civil justice system.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this legislation, and I also thank the chairman of the committee for his action in passing this today.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER), a distinguished member of the committee.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Chairman, something in me enjoys this exercise in self-flagellation by all of the lawyers in this Chamber. From time to time, those of us who are not lawyers in this Chamber, we convene a meeting, and we can do it in the phone booth in the cloakroom; but now we are all so angry at lawyers.

But this is not about lawyers. Frankly, most Americans are neither lawyers nor, thank God, are they victims, so they do not have to go into courts; and that is a good thing. But the groups that do represent victims, that do represent average Americans, almost universally oppose this legislation. Those that represent cancer patients, the American Cancer Society, oppose this legislation. Those who fight against pollution, the Clean Water Action, oppose this legislation. Those who represent seniors, the Gray Panthers, oppose this legislation. Those who represent consumers oppose this legislation. Those who fight against violence against women, the National Women's Health Network, oppose this legislation, because it is bad for victims and it is bad for those who use the system.

The gentleman from Virginia had these great charts. I am going to have to gesture because he would not let me use them. He had these great charts about 35 cents; that is all people are getting. Do my colleagues know why? Because there are millions and millions of victims; millions and millions of victims in that class. That is all that can go around is 35 cents. There are hundreds and thousands of victims in this class. When you brag that, well, all the money that was left after they gave out these multimillion dollars was only 35 cents a person, that is a subject of how many people there were in that class.

I say to my colleagues, the bottom line is that it is ironic to hear the same people who came to this floor a couple of weeks ago and said, oh, the amount the victims are getting is too high, let us cap it at $250,000, now they are saying that 35 cents is too low. Do my Republican colleagues want to have a minimum? Sign me up. What is the number going to be? I know it is lower than $250,000 and higher than 35 cents, but we have to let my colleagues decide, because a jury cannot handle it. Oh, no. It is too mind-boggling for a jury to handle, because that is nine or 12 people from your district. They chose you, but they cannot figure out if Cheerios was right to short-change millions of consumers.

And let me say one other thing. Let me tell my colleagues one other group who should oppose this legislation: anyone that has the audacity to call themselves conservative. If you think it is conservative to take power away from the people and their States and give it to 1,500 Federal judges who sit in there in their marble chambers, who never talk to anyone or touch anyone, if you think that is conservative, you have it completely backwards. But then again, you do. You have it completely backwards.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

The gentleman from New York unfortunately has got it all wrong. What this bill does is it takes the power away from one State court judge to decide national legal and national economic policy and puts it in the Federal courts where the founders intended it to be when they established the right of Congress to establish diversity jurisdiction.

The second point that I would like to make is why did all of these consumers only get 33-cent checks? It is because the lawyers signed off in the settlement that filled their pockets to overflowing with legal fees and giving 33-cent checks to the clients that they supposedly represented. Now, if those lawyers were a little bit more fighting for their clients and less for themselves, maybe those checks would have been bigger because the fees would have been smaller.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Pennsylvania (Ms. HART).

Ms. HART. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER), for his work on this issue.

I am a lawyer. I am for class action reform. These lawsuits continue to victimize the victims. Even The Washington Post, as the gentleman from Texas referred to, said the clients get token payments: 33-cent checks, boxes of Cheerios. In one case, the clients even ended up having to pay. The lawyers get enormous fees. This is not justice; it is an extortion racket that only Congress can fix. That is why we are here today. We are here to fix it.

The intent of the class action system is to facilitate large groups who have similar harm caused to them to efficiently recover damages. Recover damages. That is appropriate damages, not 33-cent checks. We are here to change that so that appropriate damages will be recovered.

How are we going to do that? We are going to change the system. We are going to make sure that not one small court in one State makes a decision for an entire Nation of victims. We are going to put it in the Federal court where it should be.

Recent studies of the class action system show there is a 1,315 percent increase in class action suits filed in State courts. Listen closely: 1,315 percent increase in class action suits filed in State courts. Why? Because some of those State courts have been very friendly to that small group of trial lawyers who take on these suits and get 33 cents for their clients and large, million-dollar settlements for themselves.

Here is another number: those attorneys who search for local friendly courts like Madison County, Illinois. Madison County, Illinois, has seen a 1,850 percent increase in class action filings that certify their classes and they will rubber-stamp these ridiculous, useless settlements.

This abuse has three larger consequences. First, as I said, the plaintiffs are denied real relief, and we have heard many examples, while the attorneys pocket huge rewards. It is time for us to take responsibility and make sure that clients get proper settlements. Support this reform.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, let me tell my colleagues who does support this bill, and particularly the provision that makes the automatic appeal and the stay of the discovery proceedings retroactive. It is none of the groups that were enumerated by the gentleman from New York, no. We have two letters that were submitted as testimony, as exhibits before the Committee on the Judiciary. One is the Association to Advance Technology. Another is a similar trade association involving the high-tech industry. My memory is that it was submitted by the gentleman from Virginia.

I just wonder, and I am really posing a question, I guess, do any members of either of these trade associations have class action suits pending against them now? I do not know, and I do not see the gentleman responding. But he was very effective with his parade of horror stories.

Well, let me tell my colleagues, too, I do not have any charts; but maybe we could present pictures here, pictures of dead people, people who died as a result of defective tires that were manufactured by Firestone. Maybe we could read the names of those who died as a result of not being informed by the tobacco industry about the carcinogens that are present in a cigarette. But thank God we had class action suits, because this Congress is not ready to take action until some lawyer, yes, a lawyer, went out and filed a class action suit and finally revealed what the truth was, that these industries were withholding information that affected the public welfare of the people of the United States.

Mr. Chairman, this bill doesn't ''reform'' the class action system. It eviscerates it. And before we curtail the ability of our citizens to bring class actions, we need to be clear about why they exist in the first place.

Class actions do not exist solely or even primarily to provide relief for private wrongs. They exist to correct, punish and deter misconduct that harms large numbers of ordinary people and society as a whole. Class actions level the playing field, uniting ordinary citizens who could never undertake complex and costly litigation on their own.

You can understand why a mechanism like this is threatening to major corporations. Faced with a single lawsuit by an average citizen, most major companies can barely stifle a yawn. It is only the prospect of a class action suit joined by hundreds or thousands of such citizens that can get their attention.

You can understand why corporate defendants would do all they can to stack the deck in their favor. Or in this case, to shuffle the deck in their favor.

The sponsors have hit on a brilliant strategy. Since Congress cannot dictate the rules by which state courts handle their cases, the bill simply removes the cases from state court and transfers them to federal court. Then, once they're in federal court, the bill changes the rules to make sure that most of these cases will never see the light of day.

As soon as the district court either grants or denies certification to the class, the bill gives the parties the right to an automatic interlocutory appeal of the decision. And as soon as a party files an appeal, the bill halts all discovery proceedings in the case until the appeal is completed.

What does this mean in practical terms? Given the huge backlogs in federal court—backlogs which this bill will only make worse—it will be years before discovery can resume. And years more before plaintiffs who have suffered grievous injuries can get to trial on the merits.

What's important to understand is that this doesn't just delay recoveries. It undermines the very purpose of the class action system by removing the incentive for corporate defendants to fix problems. And delaying the release to the public of information that might save lives.

The current federal rules permit the judge to entertain an appeal of a class certification order, and even to stay proceedings until the appeal is resolved. But as Judge Scirica has explained in a recent letter to the committee on behalf of the Judicial Conference of the United States: ''Providing an appeal as of right might tempt a party to . . . appeal solely for tactical reasons. Staying discovery and other proceedings in the district court would only increase the tactical advantages of filing an interlocutory appeal, particularly because resolution of the appeal may not occur for 12 to 18 months.''

Nor will this problem affect only the cases that the bill transfers to federal court. It will also affect the hundreds of cases that are already there, since the bill applies retroactively to cases that have not yet been certified at the time it goes into effect.

Those cases include some of the most notorious corporate fraud cases in history, including—

The Enron case, on behalf of thousands of investors who claim more than $20 billion in damages as a result of the series of fraudulent transactions that destroyed the company and rendered its stock worthless.

The WorldCom case, in which the plaintiffs contend that corporate insiders and auditors disseminated materially false and misleading information and used illegitimate accounting schemes to hide losses and inflate reported earnings.

The Adelphia case, in which plaintiffs allege violations of federal securities laws flowing from the failure to disclose billions of dollars in debt.

The Global Crossing case, in which plaintiffs cite the accounting schemes that grossly misrepresented the company's financial picture and precipitated the ruin of the company.

The ImClone case, in which senior corporate executives engaged in fraud, perjury, and obstruction of justice for which the CEO has just been convicted in federal court and other indictments are pending.

These class actions seek to address the looting of company after company by corporate insiders, whose brazen misconduct and self-dealing defrauded creditors and investors of billions of dollars, and stripped employees and retirees of their livelihood and life savings.

Yet if this bill becomes law, the victims of those practices will face new obstacles in their efforts to call those executives to task.

Are there abuses of the class action system? Of course. We've all herd about abusive coupon settlements, collusive settlements, excessive fees, and the like. The Democratic substitute would address these problems. But the bill does not. That is not its purpose. Its purpose isn't to fine-tune the class action system but to eviscerate it. To shield corporate malefactors from civil liability and leave the public unprotected.

At our markup of this bill, one of its supporters said, ''The goal of this bill is to ensure that legitimate plaintiffs receive fair and prompt recoveries.''

Plainly that is not the goal of the bill. The goal is to ensure that legitimate plaintiffs are denied any recovery at all. And that whatever recovery they do receive is delayed as long as possible.

This bill is not about protecting plaintiffs. It's not about protecting the public. It's about protecting large corporations whose conduct has been egregious. It's about protecting the powerful at the expense of the powerless. And to prevent people from banding together as a class to challenge that power in the only way we can.

We must also see this bill in its proper context. It is only part of an ambitious and multipronged campaign by major corporations to evade their obligations to society.

Under the guise of ''deregulation'' we're watching the wholesale dismantling of health and safety standards, environmental protections, and longstanding limits on concentration of ownership within the media and other key industries.

This House has just passed a bill that releases gun manufacturers from liability for the death and destruction they cause. And a bankruptcy ''reform'' bill that rewards abuses by credit card companies and does nothing to curb the greed and irresponsibility that have bankrupted major corporations and left employees, retirees and creditors holding the bag. And a medical malpractice bill that caps recovery for the injuries inflicted on patients by negligent health care providers, while doing nothing to reduce the rate of medical errors or curb the exorbitant premiums charged by insurance companies.

Today's bill completes this picture. It takes aim at the civil justice system that exists to correct the wrongs that the government cannot or will not address. Not content to put an end to regulation, the proponents seek to muzzle the courts as well.

We cannot allow them to do it, Mr. Chairman. I urge my colleagues to vote ''no.''

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Tennessee (Mrs. BLACKBURN).

Mrs. BLACKBURN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act, and I want to thank the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) for bringing this legislation to the floor today. It is critical that the House act on this issue.

Over the past 10 years, there has been a dramatic increase in the filing of class action lawsuits in the United States. Some of these lawsuits have played a valuable role in our legal system allowing for the efficient resolution of legitimate claims where there were numerous parties involved. Unfortunately, too many class actions are frivolous and are brought about by greedy trial lawyers who are more concerned with shopping for the best venue to collect fees than with producing justice for the injured parties.

We have heard about some of these examples. The Blockbuster Video case where customers got a coupon for a dollar off the next video. The court in Minnesota that gave the credit card company that was engaged in deceptive practices, those customers got some coupons, and the chance to apply for a credit card at a lower rate. The attorneys got $5.6 million there. In the Blockbuster case, we heard they split $9.25 million. The Coca Cola case, the customers got some 50-cent coupons and the lawyers split $1.5 million.

Mr. Chairman, Americans love couponing. They love double couponing. They love triple couponing. But let me tell my colleagues something: this is a mighty expensive way to do it. The American people get ripped off, and the big-time lawyers and the greedy trial lawyers are getting the millions of dollars. They are hitting the coupon jackpot.

It is time to reform the system. I encourage my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

The so-called Class Action Fairness Act has nothing to do with fairness. This corporate defendants' ''Choice of Forum Act'' is a one-sided, unfair gift to the polluters, the Enrons, and the pharmaceutical companies that will hurt consumers by delaying their access to justice. It will indefinitely delay hearings for people who may be victims of defective products, fraud, discrimination, and environmental pollution.

Mr. Chairman, this class action bill was a terrible bill when the House passed it in the last Congress; and fortunately, that bill died in the other body. Incredibly, H.R. 1115, this year's iteration of the bill, is even worse, as it now contains retroactivity language that will allow some of the worst corporate wrongdoers, companies like Enron, WorldCom, and Arthur Andersen, to remove cases filed against them in State court to the Federal courts where their attorneys can use the huge civil case backlogs in our Federal court system to just ''slow-walk'' the victims of their misconduct.

The bill provides an automatic right of an interlocutory appeal of a class action certification, slow walk, and a stay on all discovery while the class certification appeal is pending. Slow walk.

This unwise, ill-conceived intrusion on the jurisdiction of the State courts will destroy access to justice while overwhelmingly increasing the burdens on our Federal courts. That is why this bill is opposed by the Judicial Conference of the United States and the Conference of Chief Justices.

It is also strenuously opposed by every Democratic member of the caucus who has served as a trial judge at either the State or Federal level. It is even opposed by Chief Justice Rehnquist.

Finally, the bill will destroy the efficacy of private attorney general actions that consumers may now bring in the State of California to combat corporate fraud and wrongdoing. No one is better situated than the people of California to protect their rights as consumers under California law. That is why we should not support any bill that would allow corporate defendants to remove these cases to Federal court where they can avoid having to answer to those State court judges with real expertise and the greatest knowledge of California law.

I strongly support the amendment that the gentlewomen from California (Ms. LOFGREN) and (Ms. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ) will offer to strike the language permitting California private attorney general actions to be removed to Federal court. Mr. Chairman, this bill will injure consumers and assist those corporate defendants who simply want to game the system.

We can protect consumers from any perceived abuses in coupon settlements without adopting this assault on consumer access to full, fair, and timely justice. I urge my colleagues to reject this latest Republican miscarriage of justice. I urge my colleagues, just simply oppose this bad bill.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, once again the opponents of this bill are wrong. The gentlewoman from California (Ms. WATERS) is talking about Enron and WorldCom cases being removed to Federal court. They already are there. Both of these corporations have filed for bankruptcy. Once there is a bankruptcy filing by anybody, the cases are heard in Federal court, simple as that.

I really would hope that they get their facts straight before they attack the bill the next time.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FEENEY).

Mr. FEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate and thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENSENBRENNER) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) for this fine bill. This is a commonsense reform of the class action process throughout the United States.

Mr. Chairman, this bill does not deny anybody access to a court or to a judge. What it does say is that lawyers that have a special relationship with a judge cannot forum shop and select their own judge; they have to have equal-handed justice. This cuts down on the lottery mentality in the court system and gives everybody the same fair and equal access.

Mr. Chairman, the Founders of our great Republic were very concerned about some forum shopping throughout the States where some States would not treat out-of-state defendants fairly, so they created diversity jurisdiction to allow Federal courts to make sure there was an even-handed array of justice.

In some States where they elect their justices, literally we have special interests, in some cases the trial lawyers, that are actually able to buy elections and have their favorite justices determine the entire constitutionality of issues because they run the supreme court.

All this bill does is to say everybody gets a fair shot at a Federal judge if there is legitimate diversity jurisdiction. It stops the lottery game in our court system.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), as well.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER) is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Chairman, I thank both gentlemen for yielding time to me. It is my pleasure to rise in support of the bill that is before us.

In the 20 years that it has been my privilege to serve in the House, the class action reform measure that is before us today is the most modest litigation reform that has been debated, and it strikes in a narrow and appropriate way at an egregious abuse and miscarriage of justice.

The bill that is before us makes procedural changes only. There are no restrictions on the substantive rights of plaintiffs. There are no caps on damages. There is no limitation on the rights of plaintiffs to recover. The bill simply permits the removal to Federal court of class actions that are national in scope, with plaintiffs living across the Nation and a large corporate defendant doing business throughout the country, even if current diversity of citizenship rules are not strictly met.

This change is much needed. Cases that are truly national in scope are being filed as State class actions before certain favored judges who employ an almost anything-goes approach that renders virtually any controversy subject to certification as a class action. Once the certification occurs, there is then a rush to settle the case. The lawyers who filed the case tend to make an offer that is very hard for the corporate defendant to refuse. They ask for large fees for themselves, typically in the millions of dollars, and then coupons are requested for the class members.

Rather than go through years of expensive litigation, the defendant settles. The judge who certified the case quickly approves the settlement. The lawyer who filed the case gets rich; the plaintiff class members he represents get virtually nothing. That is the problem. That is the abuse that this reform is designed to resolve.

This reform permits the removal of these national cases to the Federal court in the State in which the State class action is pending. In the Federal court, the rights of plaintiffs will be more carefully observed. Any settlement involving noncash compensation will be carefully reviewed to assure that it is fair. Under the bill, cases that are local in scope will remain in the State court where they are filed.

Later today I will be joining with the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and other Members in offering an amendment that the Committee on the Judiciary and the other body adopted, originally drafted by Senator FEINSTEIN of California, that gives Federal judges greater direction in deciding which cases are national in scope and should be removed to Federal court, and which cases should remain in the State courts in which they are filed.

This is a needed reform. It is a modest remedy. It is procedural only. The rights of all plaintiffs to participate in a class action will be respected, either in State or Federal court. I am pleased to rise in support of this measure and urge its adoption in the House.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT).

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Class Action Fairness Act of 2003.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENSENBRENNER) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) for proposing this good legislation.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on the Constitution, I welcome this opportunity to address some of the criticism that we have heard about this legislation, that it would diminish State court authority or otherwise offend basic federalism principles.

Opponents of this bill have suggested that removing a lawsuit filed in State court to Federal court deprives the State court of its right to decide matters of State law, but all State law-based actions do not presumptively belong in State court. Federal diversity jurisdiction, established by the Framers of the Constitution, allows State law-based claims to be moved from local courts to Federal courts to ensure that all parties will be able to litigate on a level playing field and to ensure that interstate commerce interests will be protected.

Additionally, the expansion of diversity included in the Class Action Fairness Act is consistent with current diversity law, since it allows Federal courts to hear large cases which have interstate implications. By nature, class actions fulfill these requirements.

Mr. Chairman, in most State law-based class actions, the proposed classes encompass residents of multiple States. Therefore, the trial court, regardless of whether it is a State or a Federal court, must interpret and apply the laws of multiple jurisdictions. It is far more appropriate for a Federal court to interpret the laws of various States as opposed to having one State court dictate the substantive laws of others States.

I strongly support this legislation and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am happy to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT), a distinguished member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I have followed my colleagues' debate about this, particularly my colleague on the Democratic side, the gentleman from Virginia, who says that there are no substantive changes in this bill, there are only procedural changes, and that this is a modest change.

The thing that is amazing about that is the modest change is going to move a tremendous volume of cases from the State court to the Federal courts, which is exactly why the Federal judges are opposed to this.

If this is only procedural in nature, I am not sure that I, for the life of me, can understand why we are doing it. If this is only process, it would seem to me that we should be able to get the same result in the Federal court or the State court, because if we listen to what the supporters of this bill are saying, they are not making any substantive changes.

Now, I used to think that I understood my Republican colleagues when they said that they believed in States' rights, and that when we have the level of government or a judicial system that is close to the people, that is where we are likely to get the best kinds of results in cases.

Why, then, if we follow that theory, would we take all of the cases that are now being tried in State court and pick them up and move them into Federal court? For some reason, there is something wrong with that picture. They say the rights of the parties will be carefully preserved in the Federal court. I think that is what I heard my friend, the gentleman from Virginia, say. Well, does that mean that the rights of the parties for all of these years have not been carefully preserved in the State court? I thought that is what the Republican Party stood for, taking things back to the local and State level. I thought they believed in States' rights.

They said, well, if we move to Federal court, we are going to get fairness. We are going to get fairness. They have also said, for some reason, if we move the cases into Federal court we are going to get fairness. The opposite of that is if we leave them in the State court somehow we are not going to get fairness. If we are not changing the substance, then why are they doing this? Why are they doing this?

So this must be about the results that some people are getting that they are not happy with. I am telling the Members, I think if we have the same case in Federal court or State court, we ought to get the same result. That is the way it has always been, and that is the way it would be in the absence of this new bill. I encourage my colleagues to oppose the bill.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, my friend, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT), seems to have forgotten that the civil rights laws that were passed in the 1960s were passed with Republican support because his predecessors in North Carolina would not support civil rights laws, no way, no how. Those laws took away from the States the right to ensure equal treatment of all American citizens. I am proud my party, the party of Lincoln, led the charge on that.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I thank others who have advanced this legislation, the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY), the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), on our side, and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), and many others.

Mr. Chairman, we know that class actions have played a very important role in advancing progressive goals, like civil rights and consumer rights. But something has gone wrong. A lot of trial lawyers will tell us, privately, that this has to be fixed, and, You guys need to rein it in.

There is an unintended loophole in the interpretation of diversity jurisdiction. That is where we are getting the abuse. We are getting a few trial lawyers who go forum shopping, and they go into the courts of judges who are elected, oftentimes with the contributions of trial lawyers. I am not saying this alone, but The Washington Post said this in their own editorial. They know what decision they are going to get. Oftentimes, they get the thing certified before even notifying the defendants, and then they wind up settling.

□ 1300

But who gets hurt? The consumer gets hurt. And it is not just in paying higher prices for products. They get those worthless coupons. A lot of them do not even know they are members of the plaintiff class. There is any number of consumer provisions in here. It requires scrutiny of these coupon settlements. It prohibits settlements where the class members come out as losers. It bars bounties for class representatives. Settlement awards cannot be based on geography. How unfair a system to base it on where you happen to live. It requires the settlement to be put in plain English so the consumers know what they are dealing with.

This is commonsense legislation. Let us pass it.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman yielding me time.

Every time a black Member of Congress gets up to talk about an issue like this, it always becomes a race debate; but I want to tell the gentleman that he is absolutely right.

We used to file every race discrimination case in America in the Federal court, but the law allows those cases to be filed in the State courts, too. And in many cases now, because the States have started appointing judges who came out of this century as opposed to the 19th and 18th century in their racial opinions, then you can get a fair trial in the State courts. And I think you can get a fair trial in the State courts on this issue if you will let the State courts do what they are supposed to do.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, I just want to remind my friend, the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, that he was not that happy with Federal courts in the University of Michigan affirmative action case. Remember that one?

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS).

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to also voice my strong opposition to this bill, H.R. 1115. This bill is worse than what we saw last year, and it would be applied retroactively to pending cases, including those brought by employees at Enron for financial fraud, Dow Chemical for environmental charges, and Wal-Mart for employment discrimination against women.

In midstream the bill would strip the rights of plaintiffs in these cases, causing expensive and wasteful interruption of their pursuit for justice and equal treatment under the law.

In the wake of corporate scandals, workers in our country have lost well over $175 billion in retirement savings. Let us look at the real facts here. In California alone, workers have lost over $18 billion in retirement savings. At a time when we should be holding corporations more accountable, not less, their bill sends the wrong message.

Congress should stand up and protect consumers, employees, pensioners, and not corporate wrongdoers. They call this the Class Action Fairness bill? I am sorry. In my language it is a mentiras. That means it is a lie.

I urge my colleagues to please vote for the Sandlin-Conners substitute.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY).

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose H.R. 1115 and in support of the Democratic substitute. There is no fairness in this so-called Class Action Fairness Act. This bill amounts to a sweeping Federal takeover of State class action lawsuits.

Instead of improving the class action litigation process, this bill guarantees that those victims of discrimination of corrupt corporate practices will be forced to wait for years for any hope of justice.

H.R. 1115 alters the constitutional distribution of judicial power by moving State class action suits into the Federal court system. This bill undermines State rights and jeopardizes civil rights. Adding cases to the already clogged Federal court system will delay hearings for all class action cases and cause those civil rights class action cases that truly belong in the Federal courts to await behind cases that should be heard in the State court.

This misnamed bill is opposed by both Federal and State judges. It is opposed by consumer groups. It is opposed by civil rights groups. It is opposed by environmental groups. But predictably it is supported and endorsed by the big corporations. I urge my colleagues to adopt the Democratic substitute.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE).

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Chairman, Teddy Roosevelt would be spinning in his grave if he knew his party had decided to join ranks with what he referred to as the malefactors of great wealth. And that is exactly what this bill does.

It is incredible to me that some of my colleagues who support this bill come to this well and purport, say that they are on the side of consumers because they have such great sorrow and empathy for consumers. Well, you have to decide what you are on. The Consumers Federation of America knows this is a bad bill for consumers and they are against it. The Consumers Union of America knows this is a bad bill and they are against it. The Consumers for Auto Liability and Safety know this is a bad bill and they are against it. The consumers of America recognize this bill reduces their rights.

And the part that I want to focus on, and I heard one speaker refer to it as mere rhetoric that the consumers are going to get hurt, tell that to the thousands of people that are damaged by Ken Lay and Enron's depredations on them, whose lawsuit will be stayed for at least another year and a half to 2 years if this bill passes. You ought to know what side consumers are on, and in this bill they are against it.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN).

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, what are the Republicans trying to hide with H.R. 1115? Who are they are trying to protect? Do the names WorldCom, Enron and Arthur Andersen strike a familiar note?

Our colleagues on the other side of the aisle are jumping up and down like rodeo dogs trying to claim that they are interested in protecting individuals. Now, is that not a fine kettle of fish?

They must mean individuals like Ken Lay, Jeff Skilling, Bernie Ebbers and the CEOs of corporate wrongdoers who enrich themselves at the expense of American families and pensioners.

Oh, now, I understand. Those are the individuals who we are protecting.

Mr. Chairman, these CEOs do not need further protections. They have the fifth amendment and they use it all the time. Individual groups, the real individual groups such as the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, the American Lung Association, CWA, MALDEF, National Education Association, National Women's Health Network, SEIU, United Church of Christ, NAACP, true individuals oppose this legislation. They are the ones that need protections.

Mr. Chairman, who knows more about the judicial system than the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court? He is opposed. How about the Judicial Conference of the United States? Opposed. How about ten attorney generals who gave a statement just yesterday? Opposed. Federal courts? Opposed. State courts? Opposed. And I find it interesting that the Republicans have now adopted the Washington Post as their spokesman.

Well, Mr. Chairman, I will see their Washington Post and raise them the Augusta Journal. I will raise them the Columbus Dispatch. I will raise them the Wilmington, North Carolina Star News. I will raise them the Salt Lake City Tribune. I will raise them the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel. The list goes on and on.

And why, oh why, did our Republican friends make this retroactive? We do not do that. Who are they trying to protect? The individuals they are claiming to be interested in? Give me a break, Mr. Chairman. Do the Republicans actually believe anyone in America will believe that the Republicans are standing up for individuals against corporate wrongdoers? And the automatic appeal? That gives Enron some extra years to destroy evidence. That is why they want that.

Make no mistake about it. Thus far it is Enron, for; the American Cancer Society, opposed. Worldcom says yes; the National Education Association, the teachers, they say no. Arthur Andersen, good; United Church of Christ and NAACP, bad.

This act should be called exactly what it is: the Corporate Wrongdoer Past, Present and Future Protection Act; and, by the way, do not forget to send the money.

Let us shred up this document. Let us shred up this piece of legislation just like the documents that the corporate wrongdoers love to destroy. That would be true justice. That is what ought to happen to this legislation.

It is improper. It is unconstitutional. Our friends on the other side know it, and the judicial system of the United States has said this should be opposed.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds.

Mr. Chairman, I wish the Democrats would get their facts straight before they come to the floor. First, any entity, individual or corporate, that is in bankruptcy is in Federal court and all claims go there: Enron, WorldCom, anybody else that is in bankruptcy.

Secondly, page 16 of the bill, which I will send over to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN), provides specific exemptions for the removal of class action cases to Federal court for all the types of corporate wrongdoing that he said on the floor.

Read the bill, be accurate in your arguments, and support it.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman from Detroit, Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), the ranking member, for yielding me time, and I appreciate this debate. I just wish it was longer, to be able to be more edifying of what we are talking about.

My voice is a little raspy this morning, but it seems that day after day and time after time, we come to this floor to try to keep the door of justice open.

This seems like a one-sided victory. We know they have the votes. But this is personal. And I have always been taught that when we uphold the Constitution and speak on behalf of the American people, we should remove our personal considerations. There is a fight between a few defense lawyers who have come up against worthy plaintiffs' lawyers who prevailed on behalf of class action plaintiffs in a myriad of issues, whether it is the Ford Pinto, whether it has to do with thalidomide that made babies deformed in the 1950s. These are the causes that we are talking about.

This class action legislation is an abuse of power because it undermines the tenth amendment that I have thought we respected in some instances; and that is, we leave certain issues to the States. There are 68 vacancies in the Federal court. All you need to do is kick class action lawsuits out of the State courts that have moved progressively along to allow plaintiffs to have their say, and you will have a backlog of Federal jurisdiction and docket, and you will never see the light of day.

So individuals who have been injured with respect to medical devices or other kinds of manufacturing devices and have drawn together because their resources are small will not have their day in court.

The Lawyers Committee for Civil Rights have brought up another issue. Is it because the juries are predominantly minority in many cases that you run away from justice? Let me say to my friends, justice comes in all shapes, colors, and sizes. I want to stand for justice.

Vote against this bad bill. It closes the door of justice to the American people.

Mr. Chairman, today this Chamber is considering H.R. 1115, the "Class Action Fairness Act of 2003." I oppose H.R. 1115 for several policy reasons including severe infringement on the discretion of the judiciary. I remain steadfast in my belief that this legislation is yet another example of the legislature interfering in the affairs of the judiciary.

It is remarkable that the proponents of this legislation have always espoused the wisdom of allowing state courts and legislatures to decide for their own citizens what is best for them. They have professed that, as much as possible, the Federal government should not interfere in state business. But H.R. 1115 directly interferes with state court discretion by broadening Federal jurisdiction over state class action lawsuits.

H.R. 1115 makes severe changes to diversity jurisdiction requirements. The bill also makes substantial revisions to the rules governing aggregation of claims. Both of these changes would result in significantly more state court actions being removed to federal courts thereby overburdening the federal caseload.

H.R. 1115 also provides a party to a class action lawsuit with the right to an interlocutory appeal of the court's class certification decision provided an appeal notice is filed within 10 days. The appeal would stay discovery and other proceedings during the pendency of the appeal. This is a substantial change to Rule 23(f) which presently provides the court with discretion to allow an appeal of the class certification order without staying other proceedings. The automatic stay under H.R. 1115 provides defendants with another delaying tactic and another tool to increase the expense for plaintiffs.

These delay tactics and other provisions give a decisive advantage to well-financed corporate defendants. I am deeply concerned that if we pass H.R. 1115 we would eliminate the means by which innocent victims of corporate giants can find justice. First, I believe that before we consider this legislation, Congress should insist on receiving objective and comprehensive data justifying such a dramatic intrusion into state court prerogatives. This legislation has the potential to damage federal and state court systems. H.R. 1115 will expand federal class action jurisdiction to include most state class actions. H.R. 1115 will dramatically increase the number of cases in the already overburdened federal courts.

For example, as of February 2, 2002, there were 68 federal judicial vacancies. Judicial vacancies mean other courts must assume the workload. Assuming this additional burden contributes to federal district court judges having a backlogged docket with an average of 416 pending civil cases. These workload problems caused Supreme Court Chief Justice Rehnquist to criticize Congress for taking actions that have exacerbated the courts' workload problem.

H.R. 1115 also raises serious constitutional issues because it strips state courts of the discretion to decide when to utilize the class action format. In those cases where a federal court chooses not to certify the state class action, the bill prohibits the states from using class actions to resolve the underlying state causes of action. Federal courts have indicated in numerous decisions that efforts by Congress to dictate such state court procedures implicate important Tenth Amendment federalism issues and should be avoided. The Supreme Court has already made clear that state courts are constitutionally required to provide due process and other fairness protections to the parties in class action cases.

H.R. 1115 also adversely impacts the ability of consumers and other victims to receive compensation in cases concerning extensive damages. The bill has the potential to force state class actions into federal courts which may result in increased litigation expenses. Corporate defendants may attempt to force less-financed plaintiffs to travel great distances to participate in court proceedings. There are also added pleading costs for plaintiffs. For example, under the bill, individuals are required to plead with particularity the nature of the injuries suffered by class members in their initial complaints. The plaintiff must even prove the defendant's "state of mind," such as fraud or deception, to be included in the initial complaint. This is a very high standard to impose of plaintiffs who may not yet have had the benefit of formal discovery. If the pleading requirements are not met, the judge is required to dismiss the plaintiff's complaint.

Additionally, plaintiffs under H.R. 1115 will face a far more arduous task of certifying their class actions in the federal court system. Fourteen states, representing some 29 percent of the nation's population, have adopted different criteria for class action rules than Rule 23 of the federal rules of civil procedure. Plaintiffs may also be disadvantaged by the vague terms used in the legislation, such as "substantial majority" of plaintiffs, "primary defendants," and claims "primarily" governed by a state's laws, as they are entirely new and undefined phrases with no precedent in the United States Code or the case law.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 1115 is riddled with provisions that are burdensome to potential plaintiffs and that potentially infringe on the discretion of state courts. I urge all of my colleagues to reject H.R. 1115 as it is presently written. I commend my colleagues for proposing numerous amendments to this bill and I hope that these amendments will address the gross inequities in this legislation.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for 2½ minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, this bill is class warfare with a vengeance.

Here my conservative friends, Republicans, are supporting the bill that will help Enron, Ken Lay, that is right, Adelphia, WorldCom, Tyco, by making retroactive all the automatic appeal provisions. By the way, the Chambers of Commerce are enthusiastic that maybe the fourth time this will get through the Congress. The National Association of Manufacturers are for it, and so is the President of the United States. That is one side.

Now, who are the victims? All consumers groups are against the bill. All civil rights groups are against the bill. All environmental groups are against the bill. All health care groups are against the bill. All judges, Federal and State, including the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, are against the bill.

Get the picture? We do. And so do the people in your districts from whom you are taking the right to be jurors in these trials away from.

□ 1315

Let us talk about the coupon business, because in the Democratic substitute, on page 12, section 1711, is the only corrective action to coupons, which have been cried about on this floor this morning. If there is any provision in the bill that is on the floor now about coupons that will eliminate it or make it harder to bring, I would sure like to hear about it in the closing comments; and I have a Detroit Free Press editorial that came out yesterday saying class action, the plan seems less about justice than helping business. And I will insert it and a letter from the NAACP for the RECORD at this point.

[From the Detroit Free Press, June 11, 2003]

CLASS ACTION: PLAN SEEMS LESS ABOUT JUSTICE THAN HELPING BUSINESS

Now don't go making a federal case of it . . .

That old expression is a good one to direct at Congress, since the House and Senate appear to be racing each other to pass bills that would discourage class-action lawsuits by shifting them from state courts to the federal system. This is an interesting tack for a lot of conservative lawmakers who profess to want less federal involvement in American lives. Federal judges, already buckling under case overload, are opposed to it. So are state judges. Consumer groups see the bills as an overkill remedy for a system that's already being repaired by judicial initiatives.

Class-action suits allow one or a few people to seek damages for hundreds or even thousand of individuals who may have been affected by a bad product or policy. They are, understandably, the bane of big business and have been outrageously lucrative to some lawyers. But they also have produced changes in dangerous products or practices and held companies accountable.

Shifting such suits to federal courts sets up new procedural hurdles, appeal possibilities, and delays even before the merits of a claim are addressed. Even suits in which the entire ''class'' of potentially harmed people resides in the same state as the company being sued would be moved to the federal system, where cases languish years longer than in state courts.

The House version of the legislation is particularly offensive because it is retroactive, meaning it would affect class-action claims now pending against Enron, WorldCom, Adelphia and other corporations accused of defrauding investors while their executives made millions of dollars.

Supporters will say these bills are about reforming a bad process. What they really are about is discouraging a legitimate right to seek redress for wrongdoing—without making a federal case of it.

RE: OPPOSE H.R. 1115 CLASS ACTION LAWSUIT LEGISLATION

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: On behalf of the NAACP, our nation's oldest, largest and most widely-recognized grassroots civil rights organization, I urge you, in the strongest terms possible, to oppose H.R. 1115, the so-called ''Class Action Fairness Act of 2003'', legislation that would substantially alter the constitutional distribution of judicial power and have a severely negative impact on the struggle for civil rights in this country.

Class action lawsuits are essential to the enforcement of our nation's civil rights and voting rights laws. They are often the only means by which individuals can challenge and obtain relief from systemic discrimination. Indeed, federal class actions were designed to accommodate, and have served as a primary vehicle for, civil rights litigation seeking broad equitable relief.

The proposed legislation, if enacted, would remove most state law class actions into federal court; clog the federal courts with state law cases and make it more difficult to have federal civil rights cases heard; deter people from bringing class actions; and impose barriers and burdens on settlement of class actions. The pending legislation would also discourage people from bringing class actions by prohibiting settlements that provide named plaintiffs full relief for their claims and would impose new, burdensome delay tactics for all class actions by automatically allowing a defendant to appeal any class certification in federal court and staying all the proceedings while the appeal is pending.

I urge you again, in the strongest terms possible, to oppose H.R. 1115, the so-called ''Class Action Fairness Act of 2003'' if and when it comes before you. If enacted, its impact would be profound, and it would result in new and substantial limitations on access to the courts for victims of discrimination. Should you have any questions about the NAACP position, please feel free to contact me at (202) 638–2269. Thank you for your attention.

Sincerely,

HILARY O. SHELTON,
Director.

My colleagues may get a Tyco and Enron out of jail with this delay, but they are not going to get this bill through the Federal legislative body.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Chairman, this country has a crisis in manufacturing. Particularly, small- and medium-sized manufacturing jobs are going overseas by the droves, particularly to China, and there are a whole lot of reasons for that; but one of the reasons is a judicial system that is out of control.

My colleagues can talk about business, but it is business that creates the jobs that hire our constituents who pay the taxes to make the government run; and by having court reform, which is what this bill does, it is not tort reform because nobody's rights to a jury trial or to get into a court are constricted by one iota. It is where this is done and how class actions get certified and protections for consumers such as the coupon settlements and the deficiency judgments that are entered against class members.

This is going to help keep America's economy vibrant. Pass the bill.

Mr. STARK. I rise today to oppose this misguided legislation. Don't be fooled by the title of this bill. It would lead some to believe that Congress is standing up for the average American—modifying certain inequities in our judicial system. Instead, it is a Republican sponsored hoax unfairly threatening the very people we are all elected to protect.

I don't think that the American public would be satisfied knowing that if H.R. 1115 passes, the accountability of such companies as Enron, WorldCom, and Arthur Anderson and pharmaceutical giants like Eli Lilly, Aventis Pasteur and Abbott laboratories would be held less responsible in pending class action cases againt them. This bill will adversely affect low-income groups and consumers to effectively assert their rights against large corporations.

Why should corporations reap the benefits of our judicial system by avoiding civil penalties? They are the ones committing crimes. The intent of pursuing a class action suit in court allows redress for average Americans financially unable to launch a judicial battle on their own. Class action suits empower consumers to challenge wrongdoings by wealthy corporations who would otherwise ignore their appeal.

We know that truthful law-abiding citizens are the ones who will lose if this bill becomes law. Apparently, in America today, you must contribute a significant amount to the Republican Party's campaign pocketbook to be considered protected under the law. This bill certainly protects major Republican campaign contributors—too bad for all the average working people who are left behind.

I ask my colleagues to stand up for real people and vote against H.R. 1115.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Chairman, the pages of our newspapers have been filled with accounts of corporate abuse of investors and consumers. Part of the reason Oregon has the highest unemployment rate in America for over a year is the result of the Enron scandal and the California energy crisis. To make it harder for Oregonians who have been abused to seek legal redress is nothing short of outrageous.

This legislation would severely undermine the ability of Americans to seek relief from activities that harm consumers, the environment and public health. We should be working in Congress to help mend the relationship between corporations and the American public, rather than promote measures like this which will make it more difficult for injured consumers to bring class-action lawsuits.

By allowing corporations to move most class-action lawsuits from state courts, where they properly belong, into already overburdened federal courts and by imposing new procedural hurdles, the measure would delay, if not deny, justice to plaintiffs in legitimate class-action lawsuits. The federal courts have fewer than 1,500 judges compared to more than 30,000 judges currently serving on state courts. Thousands of class actions lawsuits spending in state courts around the country would be added to the federal docket under H.R. 1115 because of its retroactivity provision.

This legislation would also dilute the right of consumers to bring class action lawsuits against the firearms industry. Firearms are one of the only consumer products not subject to federal consumer safety regulation. Citizen lawsuits—including class actions—are one of the only incentives for the firearms industry to act responsibly.

We should not take away this important tool for the American public to protect their rights and secure compensation for their injuries and losses.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 1115, the so-called Class Action Fairness Act. This bill is actually unfair to consumers because it would make it more difficult, more expensive, and more time-consuming for Americans with legitimate claims to access justice in class-action lawsuits. Instead, this bill rewards corporate wrongdoers and companies that fail to avoid dangerous practices and refuse to remove faulty products from store shelves.

Class action suits are an invaluable asset to consumers and all who engage in business of any kind. No one is immune from potentially being treated unfairly, being discriminated against, being taken advantage of, or being cheated. However, those who are victims are often those with no voice and no resources to fight back. But class action suits allow them to join with hundreds of others who have suffered the same harm and, together, become a strong voice for justice. In many cases, class action lawsuits are the only way that those who have been harmed can be heard and have their day in court.

Unfortunately, this bill would make most class action suits and the empowerment they provide to consumers a thing of the past. We've seen this bill repeatedly in the past, and we're seeing it again today because the Republicans will stop at nothing to protect their big money corporate supporters—those who get them elected—from being held accountable for their actions. This is especially evident in the bill before us today which goes further than the Republican class action bills of the past by making the legislation retroactive! If passed, this bill would apply to pending class actions, including the cases against Enron and WorldCom for financial fraud, Dow Chemical for environmental damage, Wal-Mart for employment discrimination, and Eli Lilly, GlaxoSmithKline, Abbott Laboratories and others for autism and other neurological damage.

This bill would change the rules midstream. While a class action has been filed against Enron by retirees, this class has yet to be certified. Under this bill, Enron for the first time would be given the opportunity to make an immediate appeal of any court decision granting class certification. The result could be a hold on all proceedings, including investigations to make discoveries of evidence, while the appeal was pending. This is an unwarranted, expensive, and wasteful use of time, and all while Enron retirees sit and wait for a decision regarding their retirement funds. This is not compassionate and not fair.

This bill looks the other way as workers are taken advantage of by big corporations, as patients are abused by HMOs, and as the environment continues to suffer damage from big polluters. In such a claim, it is critical that people have access to justice. This bill takes away that access and protects those who will continue to do harm. Republicans are committing fraud against the American people by proposing this bill, and I urge my colleagues to oppose H.R. 1115.

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in reluctant opposition to H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act.

Our system of class action litigation is in dire need of reform. Most class action cases are national in scope and should be heard in federal court, where like claims may be combined and uniform decisions rendered. Under the current system, however, these interstate suits are often filed in state or country court, where the decision of a local judge and jury may affect the laws of all 50 states. As a former state insurance commissioner, I am deeply troubled that a jury panel in a class action case in Mississippi or New Mexico could effectively overturn state regulations in my home state of North Dakota.

In addition, by allowing interstate class action claims to be filed in any of the thousands of local courts across the country, the likelihood is increased that a plaintiffs lawyer will find at least one judge who is willing to entertain a claim that most people would consider to be without merit. Once a sympathetic judge is found, the plaintiffs' attorney can leverage nationwide settlements that all too often provide little benefit to the actual plaintiffs but enormous benefit to the attorney.

I support the amendment brought forward by Representatives SENSENBRENNER, BOUCHER, DOOLEY, STENHOLM, and TERRY, that incorporates the so-called ''Feinstein Amendment.'' Through this amendment, class action suits would be apportioned to federal or state courts depending on the domicile of the plaintiffs. I believe that the Feinstein Amendment addressed an important criticism to the bill in that it would leave lawsuits that are clearly of local concern, with state courts.

However, I was disheartened to learn that an amendment that would effectively strike the retroactivity provision in the bill was ruled out-of-order and will not be brought forward for a vote here today. This provision would unfairly apply the new law to cases already filed in state courts, but not granted class certification. It sets bad public policy because it changes the rules for injured plaintiffs in the middle of the game. I understand that this provision was added during Committee debate of the bill and was added at the urging of a special interest. Such political favoring produces bad policy that I cannot support. Therefore, I cannot support class action reform that retroactively applies to active cases.

We have not heard the last of this issue. I look forward to continuing to work on this issue so that we can finally reform the class action system.

Mr. BACA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 1115, the Class Action Fairness Act of 2003.

H.R. 1115 is just another attempt by Republicans to deny people their fair day in court. Once again, they are siding with Goliath at the expense of David. They are siding with the big corporate interests at the expense of the public interest. They are siding with their campaign contributors at the expense of the American people.

This legislation is unfair to consumers. It wrongly limits the authority of State courts, bogs down Federal courts, and makes it more difficult for consumer claims to be heard. This is a deliberate attempt by conservatives to protect big businesses like WorldCom, Arthur Andersen and Enron.

When a company violates the rights of consumers, consumers are entitled to have their claim go before a judge and jury in a timely manner. Republicans would love to be the judge and jury in these cases, siding with and protecting their corporate friends. But that's not the way it works.

In my home state, the University of California pension plan lost $353 million as a result of the WorldCom accounting scandal. Like many other Americans, they were victims of the fraudulent activities of Arthur Andersen.

Under H.R. 1115, the University of California would have been prevented from having their day in a State court. Instead, the suit would have been moved to Federal court, causing terrible delays and hurting those Californians who depended on their pensions.

The people of California and all across this nation deserve to have fair and easy access to a speedy judicial system.

This legislation places huge barriers in the path of consumers. It limits the rights of consumers, undermines the authority of state courts, and increases the burden on federal courts.

That sound you hear is the sound of big business applauding this legislation. They appreciate the additional time this bill would give them to shred documents, destroy evidence and cause harm to hard-working Californians and to all Americans.

It simply isn't fair and we must do more to protect our consumers.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill shall be considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the 5-minute rule and shall be considered read.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 1115

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Class Action Fairness Act of 2003''.

(b) REFERENCE.—Whenever in this Act reference is made to an amendment to, or repeal of, a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 28, United States Code.

(c) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds as follows:

(1) Class action lawsuits are an important and valuable part of our legal system when they permit the fair and efficient resolution of legitimate claims of numerous parties by allowing the claims to be aggregated into a single action against a defendant that has allegedly caused harm.

(2) Over the past decade, there have been abuses of the class action device that have—

(A) harmed class members with legitimate claims and defendants that have acted responsibly;

(B) adversely affected interstate commerce; and

(C) undermined public respect for the judicial system in the United States.

(3) Class members have been harmed by a number of actions taken by plaintiffs' lawyers, which provide little or no benefit to class members as a whole, including—

(A) plaintiffs' lawyers receiving large fees, while class members are left with coupons or other awards of little or no value;

(B) unjustified rewards being made to certain plaintiffs at the expense of other class members; and

(C) the publication of confusing notices that prevent class members from being able to fully understand and effectively exercise their rights.

(4) Through the use of artful pleading, plaintiffs are able to avoid litigating class actions in Federal court, forcing businesses and other organizations to defend interstate class action lawsuits in county and State courts where—

(A) the lawyers, rather than the claimants, are likely to receive the maximum benefit;

(B) less scrutiny may be given to the merits of the case; and

(C) defendants are effectively forced into settlements, in order to avoid the possibility of huge judgments that could destabilize their companies.

(5) These abuses undermine the Federal judicial system, the free flow of interstate commerce, and the intent of the framers of the Constitution in creating diversity jurisdiction, in that county and State courts are—

(A) handling interstate class actions that affect parties from many States;

(B) sometimes acting in ways that demonstrate bias against out-of-State defendants; and

(C) making judgments that impose their view of the law on other States and bind the rights of the residents of those States.

(6) Abusive interstate class actions have harmed society as a whole by forcing innocent parties to settle cases rather than risk a huge judgment by a local jury, thereby costing consumers billions of dollars in increased costs to pay for forced settlements and excessive judgments.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

(1) to assure fair and prompt recoveries for class members with legitimate claims;

(2) to protect responsible companies and other institutions against interstate class actions in State courts;

(3) to restore the intent of the framers of the Constitution by providing for Federal court consideration of interstate class actions; and

(4) to benefit society by encouraging innovation and lowering consumer prices.

SEC. 3. CONSUMER CLASS ACTION BILL OF RIGHTS AND IMPROVED PROCEDURES FOR INTERSTATE CLASS ACTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part V is amended by inserting after chapter 113 the following:

''CHAPTER 114—CLASS ACTIONS

''§ 1711. Judicial scrutiny of coupon and other noncash settlements

''The court may approve a proposed settlement under which the class members would receive noncash benefits or would otherwise be required to expend funds in order to obtain part or all of the proposed benefits only after a hearing to determine whether, and making a written finding that, the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate for class members.

''§ 1712. Protection against loss by class members

''The court may approve a proposed settlement under which any class member is obligated to pay sums to class counsel that would result in a net loss to the class member only if the court makes a written finding that nonmonetary benefits to the class member outweigh the monetary loss.

''§ 1713. Protection against discrimination based on geographic location

''The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of greater sums to some class members than to others solely on the basis that the class members to whom the greater sums are to be paid are located in closer geographic proximity to the court.

''§ 1714. Prohibition on the payment of bounties

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of a greater share of the award to a class representative serving on behalf of a class, on the basis of the formula for distribution to all other class members, than that awarded to the other class members.

''(b) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—The limitation in subsection (a) shall not be construed to prohibit any payment approved by the court for reasonable time or costs that a person was required to expend in fulfilling his or her obligations as a class representative.

''§ 1715. Definitions

''In this chapter—

''(1) CLASS ACTION.—The term 'class action' means any civil action filed in a district court of the United States pursuant to rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or any civil action that is removed to a district court of the United States that was originally filed pursuant to a State statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action to be brought by one or more representatives on behalf of a class.

''(2) CLASS COUNSEL.—The term 'class counsel' means the persons who serve as the attorneys for the class members in a proposed or certified class action.

''(3) CLASS MEMBERS.—The term 'class members' means the persons who fall within the definition of the proposed or certified class in a class action.

''(4) PLAINTIFF CLASS ACTION.—The term 'plaintiff class action' means a class action in which class members are plaintiffs.

''(5) PROPOSED SETTLEMENT.—The term 'proposed settlement' means an agreement that resolves claims in a class action, that is subject to court approval, and that, if approved, would be binding on the class members.''.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part V is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 113 the following:

SEC. 4. FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT JURISDICTION OF INTERSTATE CLASS ACTIONS.

(a) APPLICATION OF FEDERAL DIVERSITY JURISDICTION.—Section 1332 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsection (d) as subsection (e); and

(2) by inserting after subsection (c) the following:

''(d)(1) In this subsection—

''(A) the term 'class' means all of the class members in a class action;

''(B) the term 'class action' means any civil action filed pursuant to rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure or similar State statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action to be brought by one or more representative persons on behalf of a class;

''(C) the term 'class certification order' means an order issued by a court approving the treatment of a civil action as a class action; and

''(D) the term 'class members' means the persons who fall within the definition of the proposed or certified class in a class action.

''(2) The district courts shall have original jurisdiction of any civil action in which the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $2,000,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is a class action in which—

''(A) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State different from any defendant;

''(B) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state and any defendant is a citizen of a State; or

''(C) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State and any defendant is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state.

''(3) Paragraph (2) shall not apply to any civil action in which—

''(A)(i) the substantial majority of the members of the proposed plaintiff class and the primary defendants are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed; and

''(ii) the claims asserted therein will be governed primarily by the laws of the State in which the action was originally filed;

''(B) the primary defendants are States, State officials, or other governmental entities against whom the district court may be foreclosed from ordering relief; or

''(C) the number of proposed plaintiff class members is less than 100.

''(4) In any class action, the claims of the individual class members shall be aggregated to determine whether the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $2,000,000, exclusive of interest and costs.

''(5) This subsection shall apply to any class action before or after the entry of a class certification order by the court with respect to that action.

''(6)(A) A district court shall dismiss any civil action that is subject to the jurisdiction of the court solely under this subsection if the court determines the action may not proceed as a class action based on a failure to satisfy the requirements of rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

''(B) Nothing in subparagraph (A) shall prohibit plaintiffs from filing an amended class action in Federal court or filing an action in State court, except that any such action filed in State court may be removed to the appropriate district court if it is an action of which the district courts of the United States have original jurisdiction.

''(C) In any action that is dismissed under this paragraph and is filed by any of the original named plaintiffs therein in the same State court venue in which the dismissed action was originally filed, the limitations periods on all reasserted claims shall be deemed tolled for the period during which the dismissed class action was pending. The limitations periods on any claims that were asserted in a class action dismissed under this paragraph that are subsequently asserted in an individual action shall be deemed tolled for the period during which the dismissed action was pending.

''(7) Paragraph (2) shall not apply to any class action brought by shareholders that solely involves a claim that relates to—

''(A) a claim concerning a covered security as defined under section 16(f)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 and section 28(f)(5)(E) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;

''(B) the internal affairs or governance of a corporation or other form of business enterprise and arises under or by virtue of the laws of the State in which such corporation or business enterprise is incorporated or organized; or

''(C) the rights, duties (including fiduciary duties), and obligations relating to or created by or pursuant to any security (as defined under section 2(a)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 and the regulations issued thereunder).

''(8) For purposes of this subsection and section 1453 of this title, an unincorporated association shall be deemed to be a citizen of the State where it has its principal place of business and the State under whose laws it is organized.

''(9) For purposes of this section and section 1453 of this title, a civil action that is not otherwise a class action as defined in paragraph (1)(B) of this subsection shall nevertheless be deemed a class action if—

''(A) the named plaintiff purports to act for the interests of its members (who are not named parties to the action) or for the interests of the general public, seeks a remedy of damages, restitution, disgorgement, or any other form of monetary relief, and is not a State attorney general; or

''(B) monetary relief claims in the action are proposed to be tried jointly in any respect with the claims of 100 or more other persons on the ground that the claims involve common questions of law or fact.

In any such case, the persons who allegedly were injured shall be treated as members of a proposed plaintiff class and the monetary relief that is sought shall be treated as the claims of individual class members. The provisions of paragraphs (3) and (6) of this subsection and subsections (b)(2) and (d) of section 1453 shall not apply to civil actions described under subparagraph (A). The provisions of paragraph (6) of this subsection, and subsections (b)(2) and (d) of section 1453 shall not apply to civil actions described under subparagraph (B).''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 1335(a)(1) is amended by inserting ''(a) or (d)'' after ''1332''.

(2) Section 1603(b)(3) is amended by striking ''(d)'' and inserting ''(e)''.

SEC. 5. REMOVAL OF INTERSTATE CLASS ACTIONS TO FEDERAL DISTRICT COURT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 89 is amended by adding after section 1452 the following:

''§ 1453. Removal of class actions

''(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms 'class', 'class action', 'class certification order', and 'class member' have the meanings given these terms in section 1332(d)(1).

''(b) IN GENERAL.—A class action may be removed to a district court of the United States in accordance with this chapter, without regard to whether any defendant is a citizen of the State in which the action is brought, except that such action may be removed—

''(1) by any defendant without the consent of all defendants; or

''(2) by any plaintiff class member who is not a named or representative class member without the consent of all members of such class.

''(c) WHEN REMOVABLE.—This section shall apply to any class action before or after the entry of a class certification order in the action, except that a plaintiff class member who is not a named or representative class member of the action may not seek removal of the action before an order certifying a class of which the plaintiff is a class member has been entered.

''(d) PROCEDURE FOR REMOVAL.—The provisions of section 1446 relating to a defendant removing a case shall apply to a plaintiff removing a case under this section, except that in the application of subsection (b) of such section the requirement relating to the 30-day filing period shall be met if a plaintiff class member files notice of removal within 30 days after receipt by such class member, through service or otherwise, of the initial written notice of the class action.

''(e) REVIEW OF ORDERS REMANDING CLASS ACTIONS TO STATE COURTS.—The provisions of section 1447 shall apply to any removal of a case under this section, except that, notwithstanding the provisions of section 1447(d), an order remanding a class action to the State court from which it was removed shall be reviewable by appeal or otherwise.

''(f) EXCEPTION.—This section shall not apply to any class action brought by shareholders that solely involves—

''(1) a claim concerning a covered security as defined under section 16(f)(3) of the Securities Act of 1933 and section 28(f)(5)(E) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;

''(2) a claim that relates to the internal affairs or governance of a corporation or other form of business enterprise and arises under or by virtue of the laws of the State in which such corporation or business enterprise is incorporated or organized; or

''(3) a claim that relates to the rights, duties (including fiduciary duties), and obligations relating to or created by or pursuant to any security (as defined under section 2(a)(1) of the Securities Act of 1933 and the regulations issued thereunder).''.

(b) REMOVAL LIMITATION.—Section 1446(b) is amended in the second sentence by inserting ''(a)'' after ''section 1332''.

(c) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The table of sections for chapter 89 is amended by adding after the item relating to section 1452 the following:

''1453. Removal of class actions.''.

SEC. 6. APPEALS OF CLASS ACTION CERTIFICATION ORDERS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1292(a) is amended by inserting after paragraph (3) the following:

''(4) Orders of the district courts of the United States granting or denying class certification under rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, if notice of appeal is filed within 10 days after entry of the order.''.

(b) DISCOVERY STAY.—All discovery and other proceedings shall be stayed during the pendency of any appeal taken pursuant to the amendment made by subsection (a), unless the court finds upon the motion of any party that specific discovery is necessary to preserve evidence or to prevent undue prejudice to that party.

SEC. 7. ENACTMENT OF JUDICIAL CONFERENCE RECOMMENDATIONS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the amendments to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure which are embraced by the order entered by the Supreme Court of the United States on March 27, 2003, shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act or on December 1, 2003 (as specified in that order), whichever occurs first.

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this Act shall apply to—

(1) any civil action commenced on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) any civil action commenced before such date of enactment in which a class certification order (as defined in section 1332(d)(1)(C) of title 28, United States Code, as amended by section 4 of this Act) is entered on or after such date of enactment.

(b) FILING OF NOTICE OF REMOVAL.—In the case of any civil action to which subsection (a)(2) applies, the requirement relating to the 30-day period for the filing of a notice of removal under section 1446(b) and section 1453(d) of title 28, United States Code, shall be met if the notice of removal is filed within 30 days after the date on which the class certification order referred to in subsection (a)(2) is entered.

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment to the committee amendment is in order except those printed in House Report 108–148. Each amendment may be offered only in the order printed in the report, by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered read, shall be debatable for the time specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

It is now in order to consider amendment No. 1 printed in House Report 108–148.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. SENSENBRENNER

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 1 offered by Mr. SENSENBRENNER:

In section 1332(d) of title 28, United States Code, as proposed to be inserted by section 4(a)(2) of the bill—

(1) in paragraph (2), strike ''$2,000,000'' and insert ''$5,000,000'';

(2) redesignate paragraphs (4) through (9) as paragraphs (5) through (10), respectively;

(3) strike paragraph (3) and insert the following:

''(3) A district court may, in the interests of justice, decline to exercise jurisdiction under paragraph (2) over a class action in which greater than one-third but less than two-thirds of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate and the primary defendants are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed based on consideration of the following factors:

''(A) Whether the claims asserted involve matters of national or interstate interest.

''(B) Whether the claims asserted will be governed by laws other than those of the State in which the action was originally filed.

''(C) In the case of a class action originally filed in a State court, whether the class action has been pleaded in a manner that seeks to avoid Federal jurisdiction.

''(D) Whether the number of citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed in all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is substantially larger than the number of citizens from any other State, and the citizenship of the other members of the proposed class is dispersed among a substantial number of States.

''(E) Whether 1 or more class actions asserting the same or similar claims on behalf of the same or other persons have been or may be filed.

''(4) Paragraph (2) shall not apply to any class action in which—

''(A) two-thirds or more of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate and the primary defendants are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed;

''(B) the primary defendants are States, State officials, or other governmental entities against whom the district court may be foreclosed from ordering relief; or

''(C) the number of members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is less than 100.'';

(4) in paragraph (5), as so redesignated, strike ''$2,000,000'' and insert ''$5,000,000''; and

(5) in paragraph (10), as so redesignated—

(A) in the third sentence, strike ''paragraphs (3) and (6)'' and insert ''paragraph (7)''; and

(B) in the last sentence, strike ''(6)'' and insert ''(7)''.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 269, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER).

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this bipartisan amendment is intended to mirror the amendment offered by Senator FEINSTEIN over in the other body. It is in keeping with the spirit and intent of the bill and would slightly broaden the category of class action cases that would remain in State court in two ways.

First, the amendment raises the aggregate amount and controversy required for Federal jurisdiction from $2 million to $5 million. Second, it allows Federal courts discretion to return intrastate class actions in which local law governs the State courts after weighing five factors to determine the case is appropriately of a local character.

This discretion would come into play when between one-third and two-thirds of the plaintiffs are citizens of the same State as the primary defendants. If less than one-third are citizens of the same State, the case would automatically be eligible for Federal court jurisdiction under the new diversity rules in the bill. Likewise, if more than two-thirds are citizens of the same State, the case would not be subject to the new rules in this bill and would remain in State court.

I urge my colleagues to adopt this amendment to help speed passage of this important legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. Who seeks time in opposition to the amendment?

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I do.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, this is to celebrate the gentlewoman, the Senior Senator from California Day in addition to Attorney Bashing Day. We have a letter from the senior Senator of California, which says she is opposed to the bill and why she is. So what we have here is a Feinstein-lite or a fake Feinstein here.

I do not know what we are trying to do here, but this attempt to fix the class action bill creates, as I expected, more confusion and does not deal with the real defects in the bill.

Her letter says: ''As I said in committee before this amendment was adopted, I will not support any class action legislation that moves those suits to Federal court.''

So we have the senior Senator from California saying that this is a class action bill, and there has been general agreement that we need reform on class actions; but these provisions in the bill do not relate to class actions.

This is far from a done deal. I do not think we correct the basic defects in the bill; and since this is Feinstein-lite, I am going to reject the amendment that I am sure is made in good faith by the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary.

I include the letter from Senator FEINSTEIN in the RECORD at this point.

JUNE 11, 2003.

Hon. RICK BOUCHER,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN BOUCHER: I wanted to clarify several issues with regard to S.274, the Class Action Fairness Act, and two Amendments I offered to it in the Senate Judiciary Committee. During House consideration of H.R. 1115, there has been some misunderstanding about my position. I thought a clarification might be helpful to you in your deliberations.

During Committee consideration of S. 274, I offered an amendment to raise the amount in controversy to $5 million and to set specific criteria based on a percentage formula to determine whether certain intrastate cases should be heard in state or federal court. This is what has popularly become known as the ''Feinstein Amendment.'' It is my understanding that Chairman Sensenbrenner and a number of Democrats plan to offer this as an amendment to H.R. 1115 on the House floor, and of course, I support its inclusion.

I also co-authored an amendment with Senator Specter to strike a provision from the bill that would have made certain citizen suits and ''private attorney general'' actions removable to Federal Court as well. I felt strongly then, and I feel strongly now, that such suits—particularly those brought under Section 17200 of the California Business and Professional Code—properly belong in state court and should not be classified as class actions under the bill. As I said in Committee before this amendment was adopted, I will not support any class action legislation that moves those suits to federal court.

Senators Specter's amendment also, however, struck a provision from the bill that would make so-called ''Mass Actions'' subject to the same removal provisions in the bill that apply to class actions. That was not my concern, and in fact I believe that truly national ''Mass Actions'' should be removable to Federal Court under the same procedures as class actions.

I hope this clarifies some of my views on this matter. I appreciate your concerns about this important legislation and welcome you to contact me or to have your staff contact my Chief Counsel, David Hantman, at 224–4933 if you have further questions.

Sincerely,

DIANNE FEINSTEIN.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 seconds.

What the gentleman from Michigan is saying is this is a good amendment but not good enough. I think if it is a good amendment, it ought to be supported; and I know my cosponsor, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), will tell us it is a very good amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER).

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Wisconsin for yielding me the time and for his willingness to accept the amendment that was drafted by Senator FEINSTEIN of California, which was approved by the Committee on the Judiciary of the other body when that committee reported class action fairness legislation.

We are joined in offering this amendment by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN), the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM), and the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr.

TERRY); and I thank them for their cosponsorship as well.

Under the approach of the bill, only cases that are filed as State class actions which are national in scope will be removable to Federal court, notwithstanding the absence of complete diversity of citizenship. Cases that are local in nature will remain in the State courts where they are filed.

Senator FEINSTEIN's amendment, which is the same as the amendment we are now offering, gives Federal judges clear directions in determining which cases are national in character and which are local. Under this test, if two-thirds of the members of the plaintiff class reside outside of the State and at least one of the primary defendants resides outside of the State, the case is deemed to be national in scope and can be removed to Federal court. By contrast, if two-thirds of the plaintiffs and the primary defendants are residents of the foreign State, the case is local and will remain in State court.

There is a middle category of cases in which more than one-third and less than two-thirds of plaintiffs are residents of the foreign State, and in these instances the amendment directs the Federal judge to weigh five specific criteria that will be set forth in the statute in order to determine whether the case is national or local in character. This approach will promote a higher degree of uniformity among the Federal districts in the application of the new law and assure that local class actions remain in State courts.

The amendment also raises from $2 million to $5 million the aggregate jurisdictional amount for removals under the bill, assuring that cases which are of lesser value remain in the State courts.

The amendment is a useful addition to the bill, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Chairman, the name of the senior Senator from California, Ms. FEINSTEIN, has been bandied about on both sides of the aisle; and she has sent a letter to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER), which says in part: ''It is my understanding that Chairman SENSENBRENNER and a number of Democrats plan to offer this as an amendment to H.R. 1115 on the House floor, and of course, I support its inclusion.''

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. DOOLEY).

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment and the bill.

Mr. Chairman, over the last decade, elements of the class action litigation system have gone terribly wrong. H.R. 1115 is a moderate, sensible measure. This bill is not tort reform. This legislation makes a common sense correction in Federal law so that large, multistate class action lawsuits can be heard in Federal court. Cases that are national in scope should be decided by courts that represent the nation at large, not individual county courts, where oftentimes, judges are elected by the very trial lawyers who are bringing suits to their courtroom.

This bill does not take away anyone's right to file a class action. This bill does not cap damages. This bill is a process improvement.

Chairman SENSENBRENNER has worked with Democrats to improve the bill and make key changes to include a provision crafted by Senator DIANNE FEINSTEIN that keeps a single state case in that state's courts, not Federal court.

On February 10th 2003, the American Bar Association's House of Delegates overwhelmingly endorsed a resolution of the ABA's Class Action Task Force, voicing qualified support for the principle of expanded Federal jurisdiction over class actions.

That is precisely what this bill accomplishes.

H.R. 1115 is the only proposal on the table that will curb abuse.

Vote ''yes'' on Final Passage. Vote ''yes'' on the Sensenbrenner, Boucher, Moran, Dooley, Stenholm, Terry amendment.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to my good friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment, and I commend the gentleman from Wisconsin (Chairman SENSENBRENNER) and the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman GOODLATTE) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. BOUCHER) for their work on this bill and the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment and the underlying bill. As one who often comes to this well to express frustration at the unwillingness of the other side of the aisle to work with members on this side, I am extremely pleased to come to the floor in support of this bipartisan amendment which reflects the input of several members on this side of the aisle.

I want to thank Chairman SENSENBRENNER and Mr. GOODLATTE for working with me and other members on this side of the aisle to develop a balanced approach on this issue that deserves strong bipartisan support. I also want to comment Mr. BOUCHER for his hard work on this legislation.

This legislation is based on a simple, common sense principle that class action lawsuits that affect several states should be considered in federal courts. It does not make sense to allow state judges in a few local jurisdiction to make decisions that will affect businesses and consumers nationwide. Cases that are brought on behalf of folks from across the country and will have consequences in many states should be heard in the federal court.

The amendment before us, which was the product of bipartisan negotiations in the other body, clarifies the line between class actions that may be handled by federal courts and class actions that should be resolved by state courts. It ensures that class actions of predominantly local concern remain in state court, while allowing federal courts to handle larger cases that are national or interstate in character. In other words, if a class action lawsuit is primarily a multi-state lawsuit, it goes to federal court and if it is primarily a single state lawsuit it stays in state court.

The legislation before us is much stronger because of the commitment of Chairman SENSENBRENNER to deal with this issue in a truly bipartisan manner. The legislative process and the American people are served best when we work together across party lines to find a reasonable middle ground on legislation. I hope that the process by which Chairman SENSENBRENNER has handled this legislation is a model for other legislation in this body.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN).

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard some very charming stories about this amendment, but how about a little truth in advertising. The Sensenbrenner amendment that we are considering today is not Feinstein. While it is true that a rose by any other name is still a rose, calling a dandelion a rose do not make it so. Yet that is precisely the hoax that is being perpetrated by the Sensenbrenner amendment.

In a desperate attempt to make H.R. 1115 appear moderate, trying to hide that it is really a radical expansion of Federal authority and away from the States, the proponents of the Sensenbrenner amendment want the House to believe that adopting this amendment makes H.R. 1115 the same proposal advanced by Senator FEINSTEIN last month in the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Chairman, that is just not so. The Feinstein amendment was only about class actions, period. That is it. It was not meant to apply, nor does it apply, to mass tort cases, consolidated cases, joinder cases or State Attorney General actions; and as my friends on the other side of the aisle are so prone to say, why do they not read their own darn amendment.

Let us get real on this. Here is what the proponents of the Sensenbrenner amendment will not tell my colleagues and do not want us to know:

In the Senate, committee passage of the bill, including adoption of the Feinstein amendment, was tied to the passage of another amendment, the Feinstein-Specter amendment that narrowed the scope of the bill so that it applied only to class action. Now Sensenbrenner is more extreme in other ways, of course. That is what we are about here, extremist policy.

There are three very important ways that it is more extreme. Feinstein does not apply to joinder or consolidated cases or attorney general actions. Sensenbrenner does. Feinstein does not apply retroactively to pending cases such as ongoing actions against Enron and WorldCom. Sensenbrenner does. We know who they are protecting. We know what they are doing.

Feinstein does not allow defendants to remove cases into a Federal settlement and give those same defendants the right to delay proceedings, appeal intelocutory orders, and stay discovery. Sensenbrenner does.

It is time to tell the truth about the Sensenbrenner amendment. We know what it does. We know what it says. We know who it protects. We have read the thing.

In closing, I have brought a chart to explain this amendment. If my colleagues can understand it, they are wasting their time in the House. They should be confirmed as the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court if they can go over the Sensenbrenner amendment and the Feinstein wording and make any sense whatsoever of it. It is poorly drafted, it does not have definitions, it does not allow one to remain in Federal court or State court. It bumps a person back and forth on a jurisdictional merry-go-round that never ends, that protects corporate wrongdoers. It is bad for America.

The CHAIRMAN. All time having expired, the question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in House Report 108–148.

□ 1330

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON-LEE OF TEXAS

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered by Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas:

In section 1332(d) of title 28, United States Code, as proposed to be inserted by section 4(a)(2) of the bill—

(1) in paragraph (9), strike the quotation marks and second period at the end; and

(2) add after paragraph (9) the following:

''(10)(A) For purposes of this subsection and section 1453 of this title, a foreign corporation which acquires a domestic corporation in a corporate repatriation transaction shall be treated as being incorporated in the State under whose laws the acquired domestic corporation was organized.

''(B) In this paragraph, the term 'corporate repatriation transaction' means any transaction in which—

''(i) a foreign corporation acquires substantially all of the properties held by a domestic corporation;

''(ii) shareholders of the domestic corporation, upon such acquisition, are the beneficial owners of securities in the foreign corporation that are entitled to 50 percent or more of the votes on any issue requiring shareholder approval; and

''(iii) the foreign corporation does not have substantial business activities (when compared to the total business activities of the corporate affiliated group) in the foreign country in which the foreign corporation is organized.''.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 269, the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rose earlier today and said this is a personal conflict. This is a personal issue. This is the issue of some powerful lawyers who have lost cases in the courts of America against those who have stood for those individuals who could find no way to enter into the court of justice except to join together as many plaintiffs on behalf of their issue.

The issue today is whether or not we can ensure that whatever happens in this legislation, if a corporation that has a class action against them decides to abscond by being purchased by a foreign corporation, that that class action lawsuit will not be null and void.

Specifically, Mr. Chairman, the language says ''a foreign corporation which acquires a domestic corporation in a corporate repatriation transaction shall be treated as being incorporated in the State under whose laws the acquired domestic corporation was organized.''

Let me give an example, Mr. Chairman. The example is as follows. Just remember the case that dealt with the parent company of Jack-in-the-Box restaurants that agreed to pay $14 million in a class action settlement. The class involved 500 people, mostly children. They had to come in a class represented by an attorney. They became sick in 1993 after eating undercooked hamburgers tainted with E. coli bacteria. The children did not go to Jack-in-the-Box to fake injury or to fake sickness. They did not go to the place they enjoyed to eat a hamburger that was tainted. Just imagine that Jack-in-the-Box subsequently had been bought by a foreign corporation. That would have quashed or could have quashed both the settlement and the judgment that was obtained on behalf of sick children.

So this is an amendment that protects consumers, it protects the innocent, it is not a personal amendment; it is an amendment that rids itself of a personal conflict between allegedly defense lawyers who have lost and those plaintiff attorneys who may have won a class action case once in awhile. If we pass this class action litigation, it will inhibit those individuals from being heard.

Mr Chairman, I propose this amendment to H.R. 1115, to prevent domestic corporations from escaping liability from class action lawsuits by incorporating abroad. I ask the Rules Committee to make my amendment in order.

Under this amendment, ''a foreign corporation which acquires a domestic corporation in a corporate repatriation transaction shall be treated as being incorporated in the State under whose laws the acquired domestic corporation was organized.''

Simply put, this amendment ensures that U.S. corporations cannot escape class action liability or the jurisdiction of U.S. courts by repatriating or merging with a foreign-based corporation. Under this amendment if an American corporation is guilty of corporate crimes or malfeasance, and thereafter the corporation merges with a foreign corporation, the corporation will be deemed incorporated in the State where the corporation was domiciled before the merger.

This amendment prevents American companies from fleeing abroad to avoid liability in a class action lawsuit.

To see the benefit of this amendment one need only consider the hypothetical impact on Enron employees without this amendment. In the Enron collapse, corporate executives criminally failed to disclose corporate decision-making in pension plans, and in other financial decisions. In the Enron case, executives and senior management staff were fraudulently encouraging employees to buy company stock. At the same time, those same executives and senior managers were cashing out millions of dollars shortly before the company declared bankruptcy in December of 2001. As a result of the corporate executives crimes, 4,500 Enron employees lost their jobs in my home district alone.

Without my amendment, it would be possible for the bankrupt Enron corporation to agree to be acquired by a foreign company, relinquish their status as a company incorporated in the United States, avoid the jurisdiction of Federal courts, and avoid liability for their corporate crimes.

A result of this egregious would be a slap in the face to the 4,500 Enron employees who lost their jobs because of corporate wrongdoing and are undoubtedly entitled to damages. It would also be a slap in the face to the victims of tobacco companies, negligent automobile manufacturers, asbestos litigation clients, and any number of other class action plaintiffs who are opposed by well-finance, business and legal savvy defendants. This amendment would ensure that potential corporate defendants are unable to avoid liability.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support my amendment to protect victimized class action plaintiffs form runaway corporations.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS).

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, the problem that is presented in the bill that the Jackson-Lee amendment attempt to correct is the incredible ability of corporations doing business in this country to move offshore, Bermuda as an example, to do business and then escape coming into State court on class action by claiming they are a foreign corporation.

These are the same companies that are eager to put ''Made in the U.S.A.'' on their products, while they at the same time avoid United States taxes and attempt to minimize their legal liability by merely shuffling corporate documents. Support the Jackson-Lee amendment.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I ask my colleagues to support this amendment. Think of the children playing on playgrounds and broken equipment with a class action lawsuit and ultimately the company is bought by a foreign corporation. This amendment makes this litigation better on behalf of the consumers and the people who need justice in America.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE).

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this amendment. This is the ''if you cannot win the argument, try to change the subject'' amendment. This amendment would preclude companies opened by foreign or offshore companies from using the jurisdictional provisions in H.R. 1115. The amendment would make for bad policy, and I urge my colleagues to reject it.

Apparently the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) believes that the State class action abuse problem is so bad that companies forced to litigate in State court will move back onshore. Well, I think that belief tells us a lot about how unfair some of these select magnet State courts are around the country where these abuses occur to defendants and to consumers in this country.

Nonetheless, this bill is not the proper vehicle for debating tax policy. Our goal today is to curb class action abuse, to stop coupon settlements that rip off consumers, and to make sure that county courts do not dictate our Nation's economic policies. If this body wants to debate the problems regarding foreign ownership of companies, let us do that in the appropriate context.

Let me add that one of the important things that we need to understand and that the other side of the aisle keeps trying to target here is that somehow there are certain companies that are bad actors, and that we should write Federal policy based on that rather than having one fair, across-the-board treatment of one type of lawsuit. That is exactly what this legislation is attacking and why they are objecting to it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment I think can probably be referred to as the ''back-door erosion of the 14th amendment to the Constitution amendment'' to this bill because it erodes the concept of equal protection under the law, meaning everybody gets treated equally in court.

What the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is trying to do is to say for certain types of corporations, they would be treated under a different law than other types of corporations. That poses some really profound problems as far as I am concerned.

The crux of this whole matter is that this is an attempt to establish tax policy in a civil litigation procedure bill. It mixes up apples and oranges. It is not going to have the effect that the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is stating, and that is preventing corporations that wish to go offshore from going offshore. The amendment is not wrong, it just does not make any sense. It should be rejected.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) will be postponed.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 3 printed in House Report 108–148.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MS. LOFGREN

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Ms. LOFGREN:

In section 1332(d)(9) of title 28, United States Code, as proposed to be inserted by section 4(a)(2) of the bill—

(1) in the first sentence, strike ''if—'' and all that follows through ''(B) monetary relief'' and insert ''if monetary relief—'';

(2) strike ''The provisions of paragraphs (3) and (6)'' and all that follows through ''subparagraph (A).''; and

(3) in the last sentence, strike ''subparagraph (B)'' and insert ''this paragraph''.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 269, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN).

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2½ minutes.

Mr. Chairman, the question is not whether there have been problems with coupon-award cases; there have been. The question is whether this bill is the remedy for those problems. I have two concerns about the bill. One, it goes too far; and secondly, I do not see how the bill really addresses and solves the coupon settlement problem.

But what is really offensive to me is the scorched-earth approach of the bill does not just stop at class actions, it also targets California's prosecutors.

California has strong consumer protection, section 17200 of the Business and Professions Code, and it provides that not just AGs, but district attorneys, can sue in the public interest. District attorneys are not bringing abusive class actions to collect attorneys' fees; they are trying to protect their constituents.

For example, in People v. National Travel, two California DAs shut down an unscrupulous Florida travel agency. In People v. Providian Bank, the San Francisco district attorney stopped predatory credit card practices and recovered $300 million for California consumers. In People v. Rite-Aid, DAs stopped the sale of expired baby formula. In People v. Cook Brothers, DAs stopped an Illinois company from selling illegal weapons through a mail-order catalog. These are a few examples of how local DAs use consumer protection actions to safeguard Californians. Their ability to bring these cases in State court would be eliminated under this bill.

Put simply, if my amendment is not passed, this will have a chilling effect on local DAs, and that is why it is opposed by the California District Attorneys Association. I want to read from a letter I received from the California District Attorneys Association. They say, As currently written, H.R. 1115 would severely limit our ability to protect the public. Under the definition of class action, our consumer protection cases would be eligible for removal.

They wrote, That if these offenders remove our cases to Federal court, the cost of prosecution and inconvenience to the victims will make pursuit of many such cases a practical impossibility.

So the question is not whether there are problems with class actions, but whether this bill is the remedy. I say it is not.

CALIFORNIA DISTRICT
ATTORNEYS ASSOCIATION,
Sacramento, CA, June 11, 2003.

Re HR 1115, oppose unless amended.

Hon. ZOE LOFGREN,
House of Representatives, Cannon House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE LOFGREN: The California District Attorneys Association (CDAA) has taken an Oppose Unless Amended position on HR 1115 (Goodlatte), the Class Action Fairness Act of 2003.

As you may know, District Attorneys in California and many other states are charged with protecting the public from unfair, unlawful, and predatory practices used by unscrupulous businesses. In California, our Business and Professions Code §17200 allows District Attorneys to bring civil actions against such businesses in the name of the People of the State of California, and thereby seek civil penalties, restitution, and injunctions on the People's behalf. This law has been successfully used by California's District Attorneys to protect the public from false advertising, predatory lending, fake cures for cancer, and other shameful scams perpetrated by out-of-state businesses.

As currently written, HR 1115 would severely limit our ability to protect the public from these wrongs. Under the definition of class action currently used by HR 1115, our consumer protection cases would be eligible for removal to Federal court. If these offenders remove our cases to Federal court, the cost of prosecution and the inconvenience to the victims will make pursuit of many such cases a practical impossibility.

We appreciate that HR 1115 currently exempts actions brought by Attorneys General from its provisions. For this reason, we are hopeful that the supporters of HR 1115 did not intend to extend its provisions to actions brought by District Attorneys and other public prosecutors. Therefore, we ask that the author considers amending page 15, line 20 to read ''. . . attorney general, state or local district attorney, other governmental prosecutor, or group thereof . . .'' We would also ask that the following text be inserted at page 13, between lines 6 and 7; ''(D) the action is brought by a State attorney general, state or local district attorney, other governmental prosecutor, or group thereof.'' With these amendments, HR 1115 would preserve the ability of California's District Attorneys, and those of many other states, to protect the public from unlawful, unfair, and predatory practices disguised as legitimate businesses.

We also appreciate the recent efforts of Senators Feinstein and Specter to address our identical concerns with S 274 (Grassley). We look forward to continuing to work with the Senators, and any other interested party, to resolve this issue. Please feel free to contact us if we can be of any further assistance.

Very truly yours,

GILBERT G. OTERO,
President.
District Attorney, Imperial County.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I claim the time in opposition to the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) has spent a lot of time referring to suits by local district attorneys being removed to Federal court under this bill because she believes they would not be covered by the exemption contained in the bill for State attorney generals.

I would say to the gentlewoman that we believe that suits by local elected district attorneys do fall within that exempted category, and are not covered by the bill. It is clearly the intent of the bill to exclude elected law enforcement officials like district attorneys.

If we need to work further with the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) as this bill moves forward to clarify that intent with regard to suits by local officials, I would offer her to do that. However, I do want to make it quite clear that private attorney general actions are another matter. If the gentlewoman will withdraw her amendment, we can work on clarification of this. Otherwise, I would urge the membership to vote against the amendment since the gentlewoman has rejected my offer.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ), my colleague on the Committee on the Judiciary and a cosponsor of this amendment.

Ms. LINDA T. SÁNCHEZ of California. Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak in support of this amendment. I agree that there are some problems with our class action system, but the so-called Class Action Fairness Act is not the solution.

I am particularly concerned because the bill intrudes on a specific provision of California law, one which allows State laws to be enforced by district and city attorneys as well as private attorneys general. This California law has been used successfully to protect the public from false advertising, predatory lending, fake cures for cancer and other shameful scams perpetrated by out-of-State business.

For example, in People v. Life Alert, California's district attorney stopped Life Alert, the purveyors of the ''I have fallen and cannot get up'' advertisements from aggressive door-to-door sales tactics. Those tactics included refusing to leave elderly people's homes until they bought the product, and refusing to issue refunds to consumers who complained about such tactics.

□ 1345

Unfortunately, the Class Action Fairness Act takes away California's ability to protect consumers in this way. It does so by defining private attorney general actions as class actions and removing them to Federal court. Why does this matter? Because private attorney general lawsuits are less likely to proceed if they are deemed class action lawsuits. That would force the private attorney general to certify a class when in fact he or she is bringing the suit to protect consumers from harm. In addition, Federal court is more expensive and time consuming for plaintiffs, especially when it involves greater travel.

This bill is also an insult to States' rights. It usurps decisions made by States regarding their court system and their class action system. Some members of Congress talk about the importance of States' rights, but in the end it appears that that is only true when it is convenient for their purposes. Apparently federalism is not as important when consumer protections are at stake.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and to oppose the underlying bill. Voting for H.R. 1115 is like trying to address automobile fatalities by dumping gasoline into the ocean. It fails to do anything about the first problem while creating a second one. If we are going to fix the class action system, then let us do it right. This bill is not the way to do it.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I wanted to quote from a letter I received from Senator FEINSTEIN. This amendment is identical to what Senator FEINSTEIN wrought in the Senate, and she has pointed out that she will not support this bill unless this amendment is adopted and that is to protect section 17200 of California's Business and Professions Code in its entirety. There is no rationale, no reason, there have been no problems with section 17200; and I would urge all members of the House, and especially the Californians, to stand up for federalism and protect California State law.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Chairman, I really regret that the gentlewoman from California was not interested in the compromise and clarification that I proposed, where we would allow elected district attorneys to continue to utilize the State court, but not private citizens with private attorney general actions which are authorized only in California and no place else. One of these private attorney general actions should not set national legal and economic policy. When you have an elected official like a district attorney or a State attorney general, that is one thing, because these people represent the public and it is their job to do this. When you have a private citizen in a procedure that has not been adopted by 49 out of the 50 States, they should not get a carve-out under this bill. Because there was no compromise that was agreed to, I would urge the rejection of this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN).

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) will be postponed.

It is now in order to consider amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 4 printed in House Report 108–148.

AMENDMENT IN THE NATURE OF A SUBSTITUTE NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. SANDLIN

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The text of the amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute No. 4 offered by Mr. SANDLIN:

Strike all after the enacting clause and insert the following:

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; REFERENCE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Class Action Improvement Act of 2003''.

(b) REFERENCE.—Whenever in this Act reference is made to an amendment to a section or other provision, the reference shall be considered to be made to a section or other provision of title 28, United States Code.

(c) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents for this Act is as follows:

SEC. 2. IMPROVED PROCEDURES FOR CERTAIN CLASS ACTIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part V is amended by inserting after chapter 113 the following:

''CHAPTER 114—CLASS ACTIONS

''§ 1711. Coupons and other noncash settlements

''(a) CONTINGENT FEES.—If a proposed settlement in a class action provides for an award of a noncash benefit to a class member, and the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel is based upon a portion of the recovery, then the attorney's fee shall be based on the value of the noncash benefit that is redeemed.

''(b) OTHER ATTORNEY'S FEE AWARDS.—If a proposed settlement in a class action includes a noncash benefit to a class member, and a portion of the recovery is not used to determine the attorney's fee to be paid to class counsel, then the attorney's fee shall be based upon the actual amount of time class counsel expended working on the action. Any attorney's fee under this subsection shall be subject to approval by the court. Nothing in this subsection shall be construed to prohibit application of a lodestar with a multiplier method of determining attorney's fees whenever appropriate under applicable law.

''(c) SETTLEMENT VALUATION EXPERTISE.—In a class action involving the awarding of noncash benefits, the court may in its discretion, upon the motion of a party, receive expert testimony from a witness qualified to provide information on the actual value of the settlement.

''§ 1712. Protection against loss by class members

''The court may approve a proposed settlement under which any class member is obligated to pay sums to class counsel that would result in a net loss to the class member only if the court first makes a written finding that nonmonetary benefits to the class member outweigh the monetary loss.

''§ 1713. Protection against discrimination based on geographic location

''The court may not approve a proposed settlement that provides for the payment of greater sums to some class members than to others solely on the basis that the class members to whom the greater sums are to be paid are located in closer geographic proximity to the court.

''§ 1714. Additional requirements

''(a) SETTLEMENTS.—The court may not approve a proposed settlement of a class action unless the court determines that—

''(1) the settlement is fair, reasonable, and adequate to the plaintiff class; and

''(2) the settlement applies only to claims with respect to which the plaintiff class was authorized to represent class members.

''(b) NOTICE TO DEFENDANTS.—The court in a class action shall require that, before the class is certified, defendants receive notice of the action and be given an opportunity to respond to the complaint.

''(c) BLOCKING REMOVAL.—A defendant in a class action may not elect to block removal of the action to Federal court that is sought by other defendants if the court finds that plaintiffs named the defendant solely for purposes of blocking such removal.

''§ 1715. Protecting the integrity of the courts

''(a) OPEN RECORDS.—No order, opinion, or record of the court in a class action, including a record obtained through discovery, whether or not formally filed with the court, may be sealed or made subject to a protective order unless the court finds—

''(1) that the sealing or protective order is narrowly tailored and necessary to protect the confidentiality of a particular trade or business secret of one or more of the settling parties and is in the public interest; or

''(2) that—

''(A) the sealing or protective order is narrowly tailored, consistent with the protection of public health and safety, and is in the public interest; and

''(B) if the action by the court would prevent the disclosure of information, disclosing the information is clearly outweighed by a specific and substantial interest in maintaining the confidentiality of such information.

''(b) DESTRUCTION OF DOCUMENTS PROHIBITED.—All parties filing or receiving service of a class action shall maintain all documents, including those in electronic format, related to the subject matter of the class action. Any person who knowingly alters, destroys, mutilates, conceals, or falsifies any record, document, or tangible object with the intent to impede, obstruct, or influence the outcome of a class action shall be fined not more than $5,000 for each record, document, or object destroyed, imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

''§ 1716. Interlocutory appeals

''A court of appeals may in its discretion permit an appeal from an order of a district court granting or denying class action certification under Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure if application is made to the court within 10 days after entry of the order. An appeal does not stay proceedings in the district court unless the district court or the court of appeals so orders.

''§ 1717. Definitions

''In this chapter—

''(1) CLASS ACTION.—The term 'class action' means—

''(A) any civil action filed in a district court of the United States pursuant to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure; and

''(B) any civil action that is removed to a district court of the United States that was originally filed pursuant to a State statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action to be brought by one or more representatives on behalf of a class;

''(2) CLASS COUNSEL.—The term 'class counsel' means the persons who serve as the attorneys for the class members in a proposed or certified class action.

''(3) CLASS MEMBERS.—The term 'class members' means the persons who fall within the definition of the proposed or certified class in a class action.

''(4) PROPOSED SETTLEMENT.—The term 'proposed settlement' means an agreement that resolves any or all claims in a class action, that is subject to court approval, and that, if approved, would be binding on each class member, except to the extent that a class member has requested to be excluded from the class action.

(b) TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters for part V is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 113 the following:

''114. Class Actions ..... 1711''.

SEC. 3. ENACTMENT OF JUDICIAL CONFERENCE RECOMMENDATIONS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the amendments to Rule 23 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, relating to notice to members of a class, which are embraced by the order entered by the Supreme Court of the United States on March 27, 2003, shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act or on December 1, 2003 (as specified in that order), whichever occurs first.

SEC. 4. ESTABLISHMENT OF STATE COURT MULTIDISTRICT LITIGATION PANEL.

(a) CREATION OF MULTIDISTRICT LITIGATION PANEL.—The National Center for State Courts is authorized to develop and implement, in coordination with the Conference of Chief Judges, a State court multidistrict litigation panel for class actions, to be called the ''State Court Panel on Multidistrict Litigation'', in accordance with the following:

(1) CONSOLIDATION OF CLASS ACTIONS.—The SCPML shall allow State court judges, or parties with class actions pending in State courts, to seek to consolidate within one State court for pretrial proceedings related class actions pending in different States. No pending class action may be consolidated without the approval of the State court judge handling the pending action.

(2) FOR PRETRIAL PROCEEDINGS.—When class actions involving one or more common questions of fact are pending in the courts of different States, such actions may be transferred, with permission of the court, to any of these State courts for coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings. Such transfers shall be made by the SCPML upon its determination that transfers for such proceedings will be for the convenience of the parties and witnesses and will promote the just and efficient conduct of such actions. Each action so transferred shall be remanded by the SCPML at or before the conclusion of such pretrial proceedings to the State court from which it was transferred unless it has been previously terminated, except that the SCPML may separate any claim, cross-claim, counter-claim, or third-party claim and remand any such claim before the remainder of the action is remanded.

(3) JUDICIAL ASSIGNMENTS.—Coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings under paragraph (2) shall be conducted by a judge or judges to whom such actions are assigned by the SCPML. With the consent of the transferee court or courts, such actions may be assigned by the SCPML to a judge or judges from any relevant State court. The judge or judges to whom such actions are assigned and the members of the SCPML may exercise the powers of a trial court judge of any of the relevant State courts for the purpose of conducting pretrial depositions in such coordinated or consolidated pretrial proceedings.

(4) COMPOSITION OF SCPML.—The SCPML shall consist of nine judges designated from time to time by the CCJ, no two of whom shall be from the same State. The concurrence of five members shall be necessary to any action by the SCPML. The members of the SCPML shall each serve for a term of three years. The CCJ is urged to develop a system to ensure that States from varying regions and States of different sizes are equitably represented on the SCPML.

(5) ESTABLISHMENT OF RULES.—The SCPML may prescribe procedural rules for the conduct of its business not inconsistent with Federal law and the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, including rules establishing procedures for initiating the transfer of a class action under this section, providing notice to all affected parties, determining whether such transfer shall be made, issuing orders either directing or denying such transfer, and providing notice of and appealing any order of the SCPML under this section.

(b) AUTHORIZATION.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the National Center for State Courts for the establishment and administration of the State Court Panel on Multidistrict Litigation $1,000,000 for fiscal year 2004 and such sums as may be necessary for fiscal year 2005 and thereafter.

(c) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CLASS ACTION.—The term ''class action'' means any civil action that—

(A) is brought in a State court pursuant to a State statute or rule of judicial procedure authorizing an action be brought by one or more representatives on behalf of a class; and

(B) is not removed to a court of the United States.

(2) CCJ.—The term ''CCJ'' means the Conference of Chief Justices.

(3) NCSC.—The term ''NCSC'' means the National Centers for State Courts.

(4) SCPML.—The term ''SCPML'' means the State Court Panel on Multidistrict Litigation established pursuant to subsection (b).

SEC. 5. ESTABLISHMENT OF PROCEDURE FOR TRANSFERRING CERTAIN ACTIONS TO FEDERAL COURT.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROCEDURE.—The National Center for State Courts is authorized to develop and implement, in coordination with the Conference of Chief Judges, a procedure by which the applicable State court or the SCMPL shall have the authority to transfer a class action to the appropriate Federal court if the matter in controversy of the civil action exceeds the sum or value of $5,000,000, exclusive of interest and costs, and is a class action in which—

(1) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State different from any defendant;

(2) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state and any defendant is a citizen of a State; or

(3) any member of a class of plaintiffs is a citizen of a State and any defendant is a foreign state or a citizen or subject of a foreign state.

(b) DISCRETION TO DECLINE TO TRANSFER JURISDICTION.—The applicable State court or the SCMPL may, in the interests of justice, decline to transfer jurisdiction under subsection (a) over a class action in which greater than one-third but less than two-thirds of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate and the primary defendants are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed, based on consideration of the following factors:

(A) Whether the claims asserted involve matters of national or interstate interest.

(B) Whether the claims asserted will be governed by laws other than those of the State in which the action was originally filed.

(C) Whether the class action has been pleaded in a manner that seeks to avoid Federal jurisdiction.

(D) Whether the number of citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed in all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is substantially larger than the number of citizens from any other State, and the citizenship of the other members of the proposed class is dispersed among a substantial number of States.

(E) Whether one or more class actions asserting the same or similar claims on behalf of the same or other persons have been or may be filed.

(c) CASES IN WHICH JURISDICTION MAY NOT BE TRANSFERRED.—The applicable State court or the SCMPL shall not transfer jurisdiction under subsection (a) over a class action in which—

(A) two-thirds or more of the members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate and the primary defendants are citizens of the State in which the action was originally filed;

(B) the primary defendants are States, State officials, or other governmental entities against whom the district court may be foreclosed from ordering relief; or

(C) the number of members of all proposed plaintiff classes in the aggregate is less than 100.

(d) JURISDICTION OF FEDERAL COURTS.—Any Federal court to which a class action is transferred under subsection (a) shall have, and exercise, jurisdiction of the case.

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms ''class action'' and ''SCMPL'' have the meanings given those terms in section 4.

SEC. 6. BEST PRACTICES STUDY.

The National Center for State Courts is authorized and requested to—

(1) conduct a study for the purpose of identifying problems that arise in the litigation of State class actions;

(2) develop recommendations on ways to address the problems so identified; and

(3) report to the Congress, within 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, on the results of such study and recommendations.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 269, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN) and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBRENNER) each will control 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN).

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Chairman, my good friend, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), mentioned earlier that we need fair, across-the-board reform in the area of class action. I agree with that; it needs to be fair, reasonable and workable. That is what we should pursue.

In typical fashion, our friends have cited isolated cases over a number of years that they say cry out for reform. However, they forgot to mention the case in Georgia at the Tri-State Crematory where they had been foregoing cremations for bodies received from funeral homes. Instead, they passed off wood chips and other substances as ashes. They forgot to mention the Ohio case wherein an Ohio neighborhood was filled with noxious gases when an 8,500-gallon resin kettle exploded at a Georgia Pacific plant. An employee was killed, 13 were injured, and 15 houses near the plant were evacuated. They forgot to mention the Foodmaker case which we heard earlier where the parent company of Jack-in-the-Box agreed to pay $14 million in a class action settlement in the State of Washington. That class included 500 people, mostly children, who became sick in early 1993 after eating undercooked hamburgers tainted with E coli. They forgot to mention the Indiana case, TRG Marketing LLC, who sold fraudulent health insurance policies to more than 5,000 Floridians who were left with several million dollars in unpaid medical bills.

As you might imagine, we could go on day after day, case by case, a tit for tat, going forward and comparing our cases. But let us look at reasonable reform that protects business and consumers, that respects State law, that can be supported by both sides of the aisle. The Democratic alternative, importantly, is reasonable and, more importantly, it is not retroactive. If we change the law, let us do it properly. Let us do it from this point forward. There is no reason to pass a law that is retroactive. The Democratic alternative is not retroactive. The Democratic alternative does not contain compulsory appeal requirements to ultimately delay justice by years. Certainly the appeal is permissible. The appeal is available, just like it is in the law now. The Democratic alternative does not cede jurisdiction to the Federal courts. It says that we respect the State courts. The State courts are the ones where these cases were originally filed.

Class actions were originally founded in State court. Even when you go to Federal court, there is a requirement of the use and interpretation of State law. The Democratic substitute respects the sovereignty of State courts. The Democratic alternative provides substantial protection to consumers and other class action plaintiffs that could result in settlements; and we want to make sure that the settlements are fair, reasonable, and adequate to address the injuries of the parties and their claims. The Democratic alternative provides specific, reasonable reforms to address concerns about so-called magnet State adjudication of multistate class actions. This act does not preempt State attorney general mass tort cases as we mentioned earlier.

We also have protection on fees to make sure that they are reviewed by the courts to make sure that they are fair and reasonable. Any coupon settlements that we have heard all about today, which I notice that the Republicans did not ban, but any coupon settlements can be examined by a court and expert testimony can be received on the actual value of the settlement. Attorneys' fees under our bill would be determined and measured by the amount of the actual noncash benefit redeemed, not what was awarded, to make sure that that is fair and equitable.

Additional requirements on settlements. The courts can only approve the settlement of a class action if it determines the settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate, and it applies to only the claims that are currently before the court. We protect the integrity of the courts, we say that the primary authority should be in the State courts, we prohibit the destruction of documents. As I mentioned on interlocutory appeals, they are permissible, not mandatory. We create, much as the Federal courts have, a State multicourt litigation panel to operate as a panel in the States just as we do in the Federal. If we have a concern about Federal versus State and not having a panel, our legislation takes care of that. We have an establishment of procedure for transferring actions to Federal court, but it puts the discretion within the State courts. It says the State courts know best how to interpret State law for their State citizens.

Also, importantly, we have a best practices study. Let us let the National Center for State Courts conduct a study to identify problems that arise in the litigation of State class actions. Let us get them to recommend things to us that will cause us to pause and to make corrections. Let us let them report to Congress about problems that they see and potential corrections.

It just boils down to this: Do you want the States to decide or the Federal Government to decide? State courts, Federal courts. We feel like that our substitute and the summary that I have just gone on is a reasonable, fair way to address the problems.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this substitute amendment, I think, can probably be called the Madison County, Illinois, Judicial Protection Act of 2003, because what it does is it goes on for a long, long text, preserving essentially the status quo, and then throws a million dollars a year in for the next 2 fiscal years to have some kind of a study.

The most important sentence in the Sandlin amendment that demonstrates the author's true intent is tucked away in the middle of the legislation toward the top of page 8. For those Members who missed it, let me read this sentence to them: ''No pending class action may be consolidated without the approval of the State court judge handling the pending action.''

Let me tell my colleagues what this means. If you are a magnet State court judge and you want to keep running your class action factory, this bill will not affect you, because you do not approve any consolidation. You can continue to certify class action cases without considering the rules. You can continue to approve settlements, even if they do nothing for class members, even coupons. And you can continue to support the trial lawyers who got you elected to the bench.

It claims to offer better consumer provisions; but those provisions only apply to Federal court cases, of which there will be very few, if any, if this substitute is adopted. It is just a piece of paper for consumer protections. It claims to offer a proposal for consolidating State court class actions, but even if that proposal were constitutional, which it is not, it is completely discretionary. It claims to offer a proposal for transferring cases to Federal court, but it lets the State court judge where the suit was brought decide whether to take advantage of this procedure. This amendment is not worth the paper it is printed on.

The gentleman from Texas has given a few examples, and I think they came from a document that was originally circulated by the American Trial Lawyers Association. Let me respond to three of the examples he gave to show Members how much his bill misses the mark and ours addresses the problem. The Dow Chemical case he cited filed by Michigan residents alleging contamination at a Michigan plant likewise would not be affected by this bill. Because Dow and the proposed class members were all Michigan citizens, under our bill that suit would remain in State court.

The Tri-State Crematory cases actually present a perfect example of the benefits of our bill. Many Federal and State class actions have been filed in that matter. The Federal cases were consolidated in a multidistrict litigation proceeding where a Federal judge certified a class action in advance of any State court doing so. Finally, the TRG Marketing case, which is scattered amongst a number of State courts that are duplicating each other's work. Under our bill, all such cases would be removed to Federal court and handled by a single Federal judge. There is no reason to believe that consumers would fare worse under that scenario. Actually, under the substitute, duplicative litigation would end up being allowed, and the lawyers' meters are ticking. Studies show that State courts are much more likely to produce bad settlements, money for lawyers and no relief for consumers. And the Federal court would not be slower. Florida State court judges are each assigned four times the number of new cases annually than each Florida Federal court judge.

This amendment in the nature of a substitute is having the fox watch the hen house. The foxes are the plaintiffs' lawyers. They are the ones that the USA Today poll believes benefit disproportionately under this bill. It is time to send the fox packing. Defeat the substitute, pass the bill and the fox can go back to the woods.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 15 seconds. I think it is important that the other side read the Federal rules and be familiar with Federal procedure. If they would look on page 8, first paragraph, where it says: ''No pending class action may be consolidated without the approval of the State court judge handling the pending action.'' That is consistent and completely accurate with Federal practice as it currently exists.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the distinguished minority whip.

Mr. HOYER. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this substitute and reiterate what the distinguished gentleman from Texas said.

□ 1400

Obviously, adversely affecting pending cases, in my opinion, is extraordinarily bad policy and precedent that we should not follow. Have we done it from time to time? We have. Have I opposed it? I have. I think that is not the way we ought to go.

Now, I think that legislation in this area is appropriate. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN) I think has offered an appropriate substitute. Are there abuses in our system of civil justice specifically regarding class action lawsuits? I want to tell the gentleman that I believe there are, and we need to write legislation that addresses and remedies those problems.

However, the bill offered on the floor today, if not amended, in my opinion, does not do that. Instead, its provisions would apply to pending class actions, making it more difficult for shareholders, retirees, and former employees frankly to hold companies such as Enron, WorldCom and Arthur Andersen accountable for their alleged wrongdoing. We ought not to, because of our desire to protect those cases, therefore not address other corporate citizens who are responsible and who are doing a good job and who want to be, ought to be subject, obviously, to suits, but ought to be subject to suits that are legitimate.

The addition of this retroactivity provision is a major change. Let me stress that, Mr. Chairman. This is a major change from the class action bill considered in the last Congress. I do not know who it is in there to protect. I do not know who came forward and said we need protection; it is not a question of reform in the future, but we need protection.

We have seen a few reports of that, from people who want protection. Maybe that is what that retroactivity is for. As matter of fact, invariably in my plus-30 years of service in legislative bodies, when retroactive provisions are included in the bill, invariably it is there to protect somebody. And it is very bad policy. Congress should not be changing the rules that govern this resolution of civil disputes in midstream.

Furthermore, this legislation would give defendants in class actions vast new opportunities to delay cases for 2 years or more and stay discovery during the same period. Again, these rule changes would apply retroactively to pending cases.

H.R. 1115 also would force our Federal courts to handle State class actions, in addition to their large caseload and judicial vacancy rate. Thus, it is not surprising, I tell my colleagues, that both Federal and State judges oppose this measure. In fact, the Federal Judicial Conference, which is headed by Chief Justice Rehnquist, recently wrote a letter in which it ''strongly cautions Congress to uphold principles of federalism and to not increase the workload of the already overburdened Federal courts.''

In sharp contrast to this overreaching GOP bill, Democrats have offered legislation that, among other things, would base attorneys' fees on the amount redeemed by class members rather than the amount of the settlement. I think that is appropriate.

I understand the concerns of corporate leaders when they say the attorneys get all the money, and the aggrieved parties get a piece of paper saying that they may get something prospectively if they buy another product. That is a legitimate concern. This substitute speaks to it.

Our bill would require courts to determine that a class action settlement is fair, reasonable and adequate to the class. That is a protection against specious suits and those who would misuse the system.

This substitute would bar litigants from sealing court records and documents under protective orders unless a court finds that it is necessary to protect a trade or business secret and it is in the public interest.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support this substitute and then support its passage. We need reform. This is the appropriate step for us to take.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. GILLMOR). The time of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN) has expired.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend my friend from Maryland and my friend from Texas for being very consistent on the issue of retroactivity. Retroactivity is in here to prevent a race to the courthouse to avoid the new rules that are contained in this bill, should it be enacted into law. But, then again, they were against the retroactive tax cut. The tax cut that was enacted into law just a little while ago is retroactive to the first of January and, as a result of that retroactivity, there is going to be a reduction in withholding rates beginning the first of July that would be twice the amount if it were not retroactive.

So I guess they are against providing benefits of good legislation retroactively to anybody, because they are against good legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE).

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from Virginia is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the substitute bill. This substitute bill commissions studies, creates new advisory panels, and even allows State court judges to voluntarily consolidate class actions. However, the substitute bill fails to accomplish one thing: to prevent the current abuses in the class action system.

Welcome to Madison County, Illinois. It is hard to imagine why the bizarre system of delegations, panels and transfers in the substitute system is preferable to a system allowing parties to utilize the existing Federal removal procedure to have their cases heard in Federal Court through a process that has existed and served this country well for over 200 years.

The substitute bill authorizes a group of State court judges to think about the class action problem and to propose a solution, if they wish. The bill, however, H.R. 1115, offers real change. It moves large interstate class actions to Federal courts, which have a better track record of dealing with these cases and more resources to handle them efficiently, and it offers real consumer benefits that will apply to real cases and makes sure that lawyers do not sell their clients short and take home all the money.

Like the Blockbuster case, where the plaintiffs got $1 coupons and the plaintiffs' attorneys got $9.2 million in attorneys' fees.

Like the Bank of Boston case, where the lawyers got $8.5 million and the plaintiffs paid money. They did not get anything.

Like the frequent flier case, where the lawyers got $25 million, and the plaintiffs got coupons for discount air fares on the same airlines that the plaintiffs' attorneys alleged had performed some sort of wrongdoing.

Like the Coca-Cola sweetener case, the lawyers got $1.5 million. That was a real sweetener for them. The plaintiffs only got 50-cent coupons for their sweetener.

That is what is wrong. That is what the substitute does not cover.

The transfer provision in the substitute bill is meaningless. The substitute would also authorize State courts to develop a procedure for transferring certain cases to Federal courts. But, once again, State courts that do not want to participate do not have to. It is a safe bet that the courts, like the ones in Madison County, are not going to exercise that option. They are giving class actions a bad name, and they are not going to voluntarily send their class actions to Federal Court.

Thus, this provision is a sham, and I urge my colleagues to defeat the substitute and support the underlying bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. All time having expired, the question is on the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN).

The question was taken; and the Chairman pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SANDLIN) will be postponed.

SEQUENTIAL VOTES POSTPONED IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, proceedings will now resume on those amendments on which further proceedings were postponed in the following order: Amendment No. 2 offered by Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, Amendment No. 3 offered by Ms. LOFGREN of California, and Amendment No. 4 by offered by Mr. SANDLIN of Texas.

The first electronic vote will be conducted as a 15-minute vote, and the remaining votes will be conducted as 5-minute votes.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON-LEE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The pending business is the demand for a recorded vote on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) on which further proceedings were postponed and on which the noes prevailed by voice vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

The Clerk redesignated the amendment.

RECORDED VOTE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. A recorded vote has been demanded.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (during the vote). There are 2 minutes remaining in this vote.

□ 1447

So the amendment in the nature of a substitute was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Stated for:

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Chairman, during rollcall vote No. 270 on the Sandlin amendment to H.R. 1115 I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea."

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Chairman, I was under the impression that I had voted on rollcall vote No. 270. In reviewing the record, my vote did not register. If the vote had registered, I would have voted "aye" on rollcall vote No. 270.

The CHAIRMAN. There being no other amendments, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Accordingly, under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. OSE) having assumed the chair, Mr. GILLMOR, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 1115) to amend the procedures that apply to consideration of interstate class actions to assure fairer outcomes for class members and defendants, to outlaw certain practices that provide inadequate settlements for class members, to assure that attorneys do not receive a disproportionate amount of settlements at the expense of class members, to provide for clearer and simpler information in class action settlement notices, to assure prompt consideration of interstate class actions, to amend title 28, United States Code, to allow the application of the principles of Federal diversity jurisdiction to interstate class actions, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 269, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on the amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? If not, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. WEINER

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. WEINER. I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WEINER moves to recommit the bill H.R. 1115 to the Committee on the Judiciary with instructions that the Committee report the same back to the House forthwith with the following amendments:

Strike section 8 (EFFECTIVE DATE) and insert the following:

SEC. 8. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this Act shall apply to any civil action commenced on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Strike section 6 (APPEALS OF CLASS ACTION CERTIFICATION ORDERS) and redesignate the succeeding sections accordingly.

Conform the table of contents accordingly.

Mr. WEINER (during the reading). Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER) is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his motion.

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me begin by offering a word of apology and concern for the many lawyers in this Chamber. This has been a very bad afternoon for all of the lawyers who have seen their reputations dragged through the mud. And those of us who are not lawyers, the seven or eight of us here, will be meeting later in a phone booth off the cloakroom to discuss how badly we feel for all of these horrible lawyers who have been flogging themselves on the floor all afternoon.

I should also express my sorrows to those victims who use the courts to try to find redress. Now, most Americans are thankfully not lawyers and they are not victims. And we are grateful and thank God for that. But for the organizations who do represent victims, this has been a very bad day, whether it is the American Cancer Society that opposes this legislation because they represent victims of cancer. A bad day for them. It has been a bad day for those who advocate against water pollution like Clean Water Action. It has been a very bad day because they oppose this bill.

This bill is also a setback for those who advocate for seniors who have been victims, for those who advocate on behalf of women who have been victims. All of these groups are against this bill.

This has also been a very bad day for anyone in this Chamber who calls themselves a conservative. This has been a very bad day for you, because for all of the efforts that you put in to returning power to the States, returning power to individuals, this bill does the exact opposite. It says that the people in our local States, the people in our State courts are simply not smart enough to handle these cases. They are simply not sophisticated enough. We trust them to put them in charge of choosing their Congressman, but we do not trust them on a jury. No, that is too big a mistake. So we take out of the hands of about the 50,000 State courts and give them to about 1,500 Federal judges.

This is a huge setback for all of you who support stronger State government.

This has also been a very bad day for anyone who wants to be intellectually consistent. Was it not about 2 weeks ago you voted on putting a cap on the amount that victims can get, and now you come up here with your charts saying, oh, it is terrible how little victims are getting.

There is a reason victims are getting 35 cents, 40 cents, $1, $2.50. It is because there are millions and hundreds of thousands of victims in these cases all chopping up the 5-, 6-, 7-, $8 million claims. So it is a very bad day if you want to be consistent.

Although, any of those who claim about how low the amount that victims are getting, I look forward to a bill on this floor sometime in the near future putting a minimum amount that victims have to get in these cases. By the way, I will vote for that. You can sign me up as a cosponsor.

While I cannot improve the day for those groups, if there are some of you in this body who see that this is a terrible power grab, for those of you who do not mind the power grab against the States, who do not mind sticking it to victims, who do not mind flogging yourself as a lawyer, who do not mind being inconsistent conservatives, there are a couple of ways to improve the bill in case you do not want to be a pig.

If you do not want to be a pig about it, there are two things in this bill that no one asked for, were not in the original version of the bill, and really are an affront to our basic elements of fairness. One is the element that says you can have retroactive effects of this bill, meaning taking things that are presently going through the process, even if they are due to be judged tomorrow, and sending them back; and the second is the provision that gives mandatory appeal on the certification of a class.

What that will have the effect of doing is that at any point in the process, if someone wanted to challenge the certification of a class, whether it be Enron or WorldCom, if they are in the case right now, even if it is in the Federal court, this will allow them to stop everything in its tracks and go back on appeal.

By the way, for those of you who think that the lower courts get overturned a lot on appeal, it has never happened. It has never happened.

So these are two minor ways for those of you who spend so much time flogging yourself because you are such evil lawyers to be able to vote for this bill and improve it in a minor way. This does not make this a good bill. That is too much to hope for in this Congress in this day and age. But what it will do is make it a little less offensive to those victims who are now waiting for some redress to that grievance.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I think it is unfortunate that the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER) did not spend more time talking about his motion to recommit. And I can understand why he did not do it. Because it opens up two big loopholes in this bill to allow the minority of the bar that abused the class action laws to continue to be on the gravy train.

I will tell you how he proposes to do it. First of all, he changes the effective date of the bill. What the bill says is that any class action where the class has not been certified will go under the new rules.

The motion to recommit changes that. It says that the new rules become effective as of the date of enactment of the bill. And this will result in a rush to the courthouse in Madison County, Illinois and the other class action mills to get cases filed so that they will be exempt from the modest civil action court reforms that are contained in H.R. 1115.

Now, the other red herring that is in this motion to recommit is that it takes away the so-called interlocutory appeal. This has nothing to do with Enron or WorldCom or any other firm or individual that is in bankruptcy. They are already in the Federal bankruptcy court, and all civil litigation against them in State or Federal courts is stayed and the bankruptcy court decides those claims. But interlocutory appeals are not the bad things that we hear from the gentleman from New York (Mr. WEINER).

The average time to decide an appeal for all types of cases nationwide is 10.7 months. The average time for a merits ruling and class certification appeals in the Seventh Circuit, which includes Illinois, is only 3.2 months. So you are not talking about having justice be unduly delayed. These appeals are decided promptly, even in a very busy circuit. This motion is a red herring. It should be defeated.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

RECORDED VOTE

Mr. WEINER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the minimum time for any electronic vote on the question of final passage.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 185, noes 240, not voting 9, as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (during the vote). Members are advised that 2 minutes remain in this vote.

□ 1523

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, in rollcall No. 272 I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted, ''yea.''

Stated against:

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, I missed rollcall No. 272. Had I been present, I would have voted, ''nay.''

CONFERENCE REPORT ON S. 342, KEEPING CHILDREN AND FAMILIES SAFE ACT OF 2003

Mr. BOEHNER submitted the following conference report and statement on the Senate bill (S. 342) to amend the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act to make improvements to and reauthorize programs under that Act, and for other purposes:

CONFERENCE REPORT (H. REPT. 108–150)

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 342), to amend the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act to make improvements to and reauthorize programs under that Act, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House amendment, insert the following:

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the ''Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2003''.

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of this Act is as follows:

TITLE I—CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION AND TREATMENT ACT

SEC. 101. FINDINGS.

Section 2 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5101 note) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking ''close to 1,000,000'' and inserting ''approximately 900,000'';

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (2) through (11) as paragraphs (4) through (13), respectively;

(3) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following:

''(2)(A) more children suffer neglect than any other form of maltreatment; and

''(B) investigations have determined that approximately 60 percent of children who were victims of maltreatment in 2001 suffered neglect, 19 percent suffered physical abuse, 10 percent suffered sexual abuse, and 7 percent suffered emotional maltreatment;

''(3)(A) child abuse can result in the death of a child;

''(B) in 2001, an estimated 1,300 children were counted by child protection services to have died as a result of abuse or neglect; and

''(C) children younger than 1 year old comprised 41 percent of child abuse fatalities and 85 percent of child abuse fatalities were younger than 6 years of age;'';

(4) by striking paragraph (4) (as so redesignated), and inserting the following:

''(4)(A) many of these children and their families fail to receive adequate protection and treatment; and

''(B) slightly less than half of these children (42 percent in 2001) and their families fail to receive adequate protection or treatment;'';

(5) in paragraph (5) (as so redesignated)—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking ''organizations'' and inserting ''community-based organizations'';

(B) in subparagraph (D), by striking ''ensures'' and all that follows through ''knowledge,'' and inserting ''recognizes the need for properly trained staff with the qualifications needed''; and

(C) in subparagraph (C)—

(i) by striking ''judicial procedures'' and inserting ''judicial systems, including multidisciplinary, coordinated decisionmaking procedures''; and

(ii) by striking ''and'' at the end; and

(D) in subparagraph (D)—

(i) in clause (viii), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(ii) by redesignating clause (ix) as clause (x); and

(iii) by inserting after clause (viii), the following:

''(ix) the incidence and prevalence of child maltreatment by a wide array of demographic characteristics such as age, sex, race, family structure, household relationship (including the living arrangement of the resident parent and family size), school enrollment and education attainment, disability, grandparents as caregivers, labor force status, work status in previous year, and income in previous year; and'';

(E) by redesignating subparagraph (D) as subparagraph (I); and

(F) by inserting after subparagraph (C), the following:

''(D) the evaluation and dissemination of best practices consistent with the goals of achieving improvements in the child protective services systems of the States in accordance with paragraphs (1) through (12) of section 106(a);

''(E) effective approaches to interagency collaboration between the child protection system and the juvenile justice system that improve the delivery of services and treatment, including methods for continuity of treatment plan and services as children transition between systems;

''(F) an evaluation of the redundancies and gaps in the services in the field of child abuse and neglect prevention in order to make better use of resources;

''(G) the nature, scope, and practice of voluntary relinquishment for foster care or State guardianship of low income children who need health services, including mental health services;

''(H) the information on the national incidence of child abuse and neglect specified in clauses (i) through (xi) of subparagraph (H); and'';

(2) in paragraph (2), by striking subparagraph (B) and inserting the following:

''(B) Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2003, and every 2 years thereafter, the Secretary shall provide an opportunity for public comment concerning the priorities proposed under subparagraph (A) and maintain an official record of such public comment.'';

(3) by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (4);

(4) by inserting after paragraph (1) the following:

''(2) RESEARCH.—The Secretary shall conduct research on the national incidence of child abuse and neglect, including the information on the national incidence on child abuse and neglect specified in subparagraphs (i) through (ix) of paragraph (1)(I).

''(3) REPORT.—Not later than 4 years after the date of the enactment of the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2003, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the Committee on Education and the Workforce of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions of the Senate a report that contains the results of the research conducted under paragraph (2).''.

(b) PROVISION OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—Section 104(b) of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5105(b)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking ''nonprofit private agencies and'' and inserting ''private agencies and community-based''; and

(B) by inserting '', including replicating successful program models,'' after ''programs and activities''; and

(2) in paragraph (2)—

(A) in subparagraph (B), by striking ''and'' at the end;

(B) in subparagraph (C), by striking the period and inserting ''; and''; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

''(D) effective approaches being utilized to link child protective service agencies with health care, mental health care, and developmental services to improve forensic diagnosis and health evaluations, and barriers and shortages to such linkages.''.

(c) DEMONSTRATION PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS.—Section 104 of the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (42 U.S.C. 5105) is amended by adding at the end the following:

''(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may award 1 or more grants to private, nonprofit entities—

''(1) to provide for the establishment and operation of a national, toll-free telephone hotline to provide information and assistance to victims of domestic violence; or

''(2) to provide for the establishment and operation of a highly secure Internet website to provide that information and assistance to those victims.

''(b) DURATION.—A grant under this section may extend over a period of not more than 5 years.

''(c) ANNUAL APPROVAL.—The provision of payments under a grant awarded under this section shall be subject to annual approval by the Secretary and subject to the availability of appropriations for each fiscal year to make the payments.

''(d) HOTLINE ACTIVITIES.—An entity that receives a grant under this section for activities described, in whole or in part, in subsection (a)(1) shall use funds made available through the grant to establish and operate a national, toll-free telephone hotline to provide information and assistance to victims of domestic violence. In establishing and operating the hotline, the entity shall—

''(1) contract with a carrier for the use of a toll-free telephone line;

''(2) employ, train, and supervise personnel to answer incoming calls and provide counseling and referral services to callers on a 24-hour-a-day basis;

''(3) assemble and maintain a current database of information relating to services for victims of domestic violence to which callers may be referred throughout the United States, including information on the availability of shelters that serve battered women; and

''(4) publicize the hotline to potential users throughout the United States.

''(e) SECURE WEBSITE ACTIVITIES.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—An entity that receives a grant under this section for activities described, in whole or in part, in subsection (a)(2) shall use funds made available through the grant to provide grants for startup and operational costs associated with establishing and operating a highly secure Internet website.

''(2) AVAILABILITY.—The website shall be available to the entity operating the hotline and domestic violence shelters.

''(3) INFORMATION.—The website shall provide accurate information that describes—

''(A) the services available to victims of domestic violence, including health care and mental health services, social services, transportation, services for children (including children who witness domestic violence), and other relevant services; and

''(B) the domestic violence shelters available, and services provided by the shelters.

''(4) RULE OF CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this Act shall be construed to require any shelter or service provider, whether public or private, to be linked to the website or to provide information to the recipient of the grant described in paragraph (1) or to the website.

''(f) APPLICATION.—The Secretary may not award a grant under this section unless the Secretary approves an application for such grant. To be approved by the Secretary under this subsection an application shall—

''(1) contain such agreements, assurances, and information, be in such form, and be submitted in such manner, as the Secretary shall prescribe through notice in the Federal Register;

''(2) in the case of an application for a grant to carry out activities described in subsection (a)(1), include a complete description of the applicant's plan for the operation of a national domestic violence hotline, including descriptions of—

''(A) the training program for hotline personnel;

''(B) the hiring criteria for hotline personnel;

''(C) the methods for the creation, maintenance, and updating of a resource database;

''(D) a plan for publicizing the availability of the hotline;

''(E) a plan for providing service to non-English speaking callers, including service through hotline personnel who speak Spanish; and

''(F) a plan for facilitating access to the hotline by persons with hearing impairments;

''(3) in the case of an application for a grant to carry out activities described in subsection (a)(2)—

''(A) include a complete description of the applicant's plan for the development, operation, maintenance, and updating of information and resources of the website;

''(B) include a certification that the applicant will implement a high level security system to ensure the confidentiality of the website, taking into consideration the safety of domestic violence victims; and

''(C) include an assurance that, after the third year of the website project, the recipient of the grant will develop a plan to secure other public or private funding resources to ensure the continued operation and maintenance of the website;

''(4) demonstrate that the applicant has recognized expertise in the area of domestic violence and a record of high quality service to victims of domestic violence, including a demonstration of support from advocacy groups;

''(5) demonstrate that the applicant has a commitment to diversity, and to the provision of services to ethnic, racial, and non-English speaking minorities, in addition to older individuals and individuals with disabilities; and

''(6) contain such other information as the Secretary may require.

''(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

''(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $3,500,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.

''(2) CONDITIONS ON APPROPRIATIONS.—Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the Secretary shall make available a portion of the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) to award grants under subsection (a)(2) only for any fiscal year for which the amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) exceed $3,000,000.

''(3) AVAILABILITY.—Funds authorized to be appropriated under paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.''.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 318(h) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10418(h)) is amended to read as follows:

''(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $6,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2004 through 2008.''.

(b) REGULATIONS.—Section 318 of such Act (42 U.S.C. 10418) is amended by striking subsection (i).

SEC. 414. TRANSITIONAL HOUSING ASSISTANCE.

Section 319(f) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10419(f)) is amended by striking ''fiscal year 2001'' and inserting ''each of fiscal years 2003 through 2008''.

SEC. 415. TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401 et seq.) is amended—

(1) in section 302(1) (42 U.S.C. 10401(1)) by striking ''demonstrate the effectiveness of assisting'' and inserting ''assist'';

(2) in section 303(a) (42 U.S.C. 10402(a))—

(A) in paragraph (2)—

(i) in subparagraph (C), by striking ''State domestic violence coalitions knowledgeable individuals and interested organizations'' and inserting ''State domestic violence coalitions, knowledgeable individuals, and interested organizations''; and

(ii) in subparagraph (F), by adding ''and'' at the end; and

(B) by aligning the margins of paragraph (4) with the margins of paragraph (3);

(3) in section 303(g) (as so redesignated)—

(A) in the first sentence, by striking ''309(4)'' and inserting ''320''; and

(B) in the second sentence, by striking ''309(5)(A)'' and inserting ''320(5)(A)'';

(4) in section 305(b)(2)(A) (42 U.S.C. 10404(b)(2)(A)) by striking ''provide for research, and into'' and inserting ''provide for research into'';

(5) by redesignating section 309 as section 320 and moving that section to the end of the Act; and

(6) in section 311(a) (42 U.S.C. 10410(a))—

(A) in paragraph (2)(K), by striking ''other criminal justice professionals,;'' and inserting ''other criminal justice professionals;'' and

(B) in paragraph (3)—

(i) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by striking ''family law judges,'' and inserting ''family law judges,'';

(ii) in subparagraph (D), by inserting '', criminal court judges,'' after ''family law judges''; and

(iii) in subparagraph (H), by striking ''supervised visitations that do not endanger victims and their children'' and inserting ''supervised visitations or denial of visitation to protect against danger to victims or their children''.

SEC. 416. CONFORMING AMENDMENT TO ANOTHER ACT.

Section 102(42) of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002(42)) is amended by striking ''(42 U.S.C. 10408)''.

And the House agree to the same.

JOINT EXPLANATORY STATEMENT OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The managers on the part of the House and the Senate at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 342), to amend the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act to make improvements to and reauthorize programs under that Act, and for other purposes, submit the following joint statement to the House and the Senate in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the managers and recommended in the accompanying conference report:

THE KEEPING CHILDREN AND FAMILIES SAFE ACT OF 2003—EXPLANATION OF THE COMMITTEE OF CONFERENCE

The conference agreement to S. 342, the Keeping Children and Families Safe Act of 2003, builds upon reforms made during the last reauthorization of CAPTA and FVPSA to improve program implementation and make improvements to current law to ensure that states have the necessary resources and flexibility to properly address issues of child abuse and neglect and family violence. It makes changes that serve to assist states in improving their child protective services systems and enhance the federal government's role in providing support for the child protective services system infrastructure. The conference agreement also makes changes to better serve victims of domestic violence and their dependents.

The Senate bill and House amendment were very similar with only a few major differences. This conference report reflects the agreements on these major differences.

CAPTA

Comprehensive Adolescent Victim/Victimizer Program

The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, includes a new demonstration program that establishes a network of trainers who will work with schools to implement school-based adolescent victim/victimizer programs that are comprehensive, meet state guidelines for health education, and reduce child sexual abuse by focusing on prevention for both adolescent victims and victimizers.

The conference agreement does not include this provision.

Safety Training for Caseworkers

The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, includes language to permit ''personal safety training for caseworkers'' as part of the training for which states may use their CAPTA dollars. Personal safety training will help child protective services personnel be prepared when faced with a variety of complex situations and emotions as they confront families with allegations of child abuse and neglect.

The conference agreement includes this provision with no modifications.

Infants Born Addicted to Substances

The House amendment and the Senate bill include provisions to address the needs of infants born and identified as being affected by illegal substance abuse or withdrawal symptoms. The House amendment requires procedures for infants born with fetal alcohol effects, fetal alcohol syndrome, neonatal intoxication or withdrawal syndrome, or neonatal physical or neurological harm resulting from prenatal drug exposure. The Senate bill requires procedures for infants born and identified as being affected by illegal substance abuse or withdrawal symptoms resulting from prenatal drug exposure. The House amendment, but not the Senate, requires the notification of child protective services and permits the consideration of providing the mother with additional services, and providing the infant with referral to IDEA, Part C services for evaluation.

The conference agreement follows the Senate bill with a modification. The agreement includes the requirement that health care providers involved in the delivery or care of infants born and identified as being affected by illegal substance abuse or withdrawal symptoms notify child protective services of the occurrence of such condition in such infants.

GAO Study

The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, includes a study to have GAO review and evaluate training (including cross-training in domestic violence and substance abuse) of child protective services workers including the effects of caseloads, compensation and supervision of staff; the efficiencies and effectiveness of agencies that provide cross-training with court personnel; and recommendations to strengthen child protective services effectiveness to improve outcomes for children.

The conference agreement does not include this provision. The House and Senate conferees agree to write a joint letter to GAO to request the study be conducted.

Children's Justice Act

The House amendment, but not the Senate bill, includes language to allow states to handle cases involving children with disabilities or serious health conditions with their children's justice grant funding. Children's justice grants help states improve their child protection programs in investigation and prosecution of child abuse and neglect cases.

The conference agreement includes this provision with no modifications.

IDEA

The House amendment, but not the Senate bill, requires states to have provisions and procedures for referral of a child under the age of 3 who is involved in a substantiated case of child abuse or neglect to the statewide early intervention program funded under Part C, of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act for an evaluation of services.

The conference agreement does not include this provision. The conferees agree to provide for a reference to similar provisions for referral of such children in Part C of IDEA.

State CAPTA Reports

The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, requires states to report on the manner in which CAPTA dollars, alone or in combination with other funds, were used to address the purposes and achieve the objectives of Kinship Care. Kinship care is a living situation in which a grandparent, other close relative or someone else who is emotionally close to a child takes primary responsibility for the care of that child.

The conference agreement includes this provision with modifications. The agreement requires states to report on all CAPTA programs, rather than just Kinship Care.

Respite Care

The House amendment, but not the Senate bill, adds respite care, home visiting and family support services to the list of optional core services that a state may provide as a part of family support services under Community-Based Programs within CAPTA.

The conference agreement does not include this provision. However, the conferees want to recognize the importance of respite care and other services as positive, cost-effective, community-based child abuse and neglect prevention programs. As evidence shows, respite and crises care programs are effective prevention strategies associated with avoiding more costly and traumatic out-of-home placements, including foster care. By retaining current law for local program criteria, the conferees have not intended to discourage or limit the ability of the lead entity or local program to provide or arrange for respite care.

FVPSA

Children Who Witness Domestic Violence

The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, establishes a new program to address the needs of children who witness domestic violence to provide direct services; training for and collaboration among child welfare agencies, domestic violence victim service providers, courts, law enforcement and other entities, and multi-system interventions. This new program is conditioned upon appropriations exceeding $150 million. At such time 50 percent of the excess must be used to fund this program.

The conference agreement follows the intent of the Senate bill with modifications. The agreement would not create a new program. The agreement adds services for children who witness domestic violence to the list of allowable activities under the state demonstration grants within FVPSA. It requires that once appropriations exceed $130 million for the state demonstration grants, that grants include programs of multi-system interventions, training, and services (either directly or by referral) for children who witness domestic violence. The agreement also requires the national resource center to include children who witness domestic violence as part of their research and training services, and adds children who witness domestic violence to the definition of ''related assistance.''

Domestic Violence Hotline/Internet Enhancement

The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, creates a new five year grant program to establish and operate a highly secure Internet website that links the national domestic violence hotline, U.S. domestic violence shelters, state and local domestic violence agencies, and other domestic violence organizations in order to connect a victim of domestic violence to domestic violence shelters. The website must also contain continuously updated information concerning the availability of services and space in domestic violence shelters across the U.S. This new program is conditioned upon appropriations for the domestic violence hotline exceeding $3 million. The Senate bill, but not the House amendment, increases the authorization for the domestic violence hotline from $2 million to $4 million. The domestic violence hotline is currently funded at $2.6 million.

The conference agreement follows the intent of the Senate bill with modifications. The agreement would not create a new program. The agreement requires that once appropriations for the domestic violence hotline exceed $3 million, grants shall be made for startup and operational costs associated with establishing a highly secure Internet website available to the hotline and to shelters. The website shall serve as a database of information describing the services available to victims of domestic violence, including medical and mental health services, social services, transportation, services for children (including children who witness domestic violence) and other relevant services; domestic violence shelters available; and services provided by participating shelters. The authorization for the domestic violence hotline is $3.5 million. As a result of recent significant authorization and appropriation increases occurring since the committee's last consideration of this act, the conferees believe an authorization level of $3.5 million will sustain the services provided as a part of the domestic violence hotline during the current five year authorization without the need for intervening authorization.

RELATING TO CONSIDERATION OF SENATE AMENDMENTS TO H.R. 1308, TAX RELIEF, SIMPLIFICATION, AND EQUITY ACT OF 2003

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 270 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 270

Resolved, That upon adoption of this resolution the bill (H.R. 1308) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to end certain abusive tax practices, to provide tax relief and simplification, and for other purposes, with the Senate amendments thereto, be, and the same are hereby, taken from the Speaker's table to the ends that the Senate amendment to the title be, and the same is hereby, agreed to, and the Senate amendment to the text be, and the same is hereby, agreed to with the amendment printed in the report of the Committee on Rules accompanying this resolution.

SEC. 2. It shall be in order for the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means to move that the House insist on its amendment to the Senate amendment to H.R. 1308, or that the House disagree to any further Senate amendment, and request or agree to a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GILLMOR). The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H. Res. 270.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 270 is a customary rule relating to the consideration of an amendment to the Senate amendments to H.R. 1308, the Tax Relief, Simplification, and Equity Act of 2003. The rule allows the House to proceed with consideration of legislation providing tax relief to millions of American workers and families.

Upon adoption of this resolution, the House will have agreed to the disposition of the Senate amendments.

Mr. Speaker, when I return to my district each week, my constituents tell me they want me to do two things: create jobs and cut taxes. Thanks to the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Act and the Jobs Growth Tax Relief Act, Congress is doing just that, and taxpayers in my district and all across America now have greater control over more of their hard-earned dollars, providing greater incentive for savings and investment and expanding job opportunities.

Today's legislation is another important step in our ongoing efforts to create greater fairness in the Tax Code for working families. In fact, upon adoption, it will be retitled the All-American Tax Relief Act in recognition of the fact that it puts even more money back into the hands of more Americans.

Mr. Speaker, much of what we are debating today we have debated and supported before. Many of the important measures in H.R. 1308 have passed this body or the other body over the last few years. For instance, the House passed its version of H.R. 1308 by voice vote under suspension in March of this year.

Last week the Senate took up H.R. 1308 with revised and added provisions, including an accelerated increase in the refundability of the child tax credit currently scheduled to take place in 2005.

□ 1530

While the House language contains the same provision, it has the added benefit of ensuring that the child tax credit remains at $1,000 through 2010, unlike the Senate amendment that offers only the $1,000 tax credit during taxable years 2003 and 2004. Simply put, the House language provides more and longer-lasting benefits for families at all income levels. And it does not take it away in just a couple of years.

This bill will eliminate the marriage penalty and the child tax credit even sooner, by raising the phaseout for married couples from $110,000 to $150,000. This is a fundamental issue of fairness. Working men and women should not face a higher tax burden simply because they choose to get married and raise a family.

The House bill is more responsive to more Americans than the other body's version in other ways. It honors the men and women of our Armed Forces with over $800 million in tax relief over 11 years. This includes capital gains tax relief on home sales, tax-free death gratuity payments, and tax-free dependent care assistance for members of the military. Our men and women in uniform protect our country and ensure our security every day and deserve sensible tax relief for their hard work and sacrifice.

Also, the bill will suspend the tax-exempt status of terrorist organizations, a provision that passed both the House and the other body in 2002. In short, Mr. Speaker, this bill will achieve even greater parity and fairness in the Tax Code. That is something I know my constituents and working Americans all over the country want, need, and deserve.

Mr. Speaker, I expect that in the course of this debate, we will hear a great deal about procedural terminology, but this vote is actually quite simple. A ''yes'' vote means greater fairness in the Tax Code and more tax relief for American workers, families, and children. A ''no'' vote stops that relief from moving forward and hurts the very people I know many of my colleagues eagerly want to assist.

I urge my colleagues to join me in voting ''yes'' on the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, while this bill purports to give low-income people a tax break, it also gives Members of Congress a tax break. We see that there is an additional tax break for people who earn $150,000 a year. Who earns $150,000 a year? Members of the United States Congress. It is very generous of them in the majority to do that.

Mr. Speaker, let us be clear about what is at stake on the House floor today. At the conclusion of this debate, there will be an important procedural vote known as the previous question. If we defeat it, then the child tax credit bill and the Armed Forces tax assistance bill can become law tomorrow, and military and working families will get immediate relief. Those two bills are here, at the Speaker's table, already passed by the Senate and ready to be signed by the President, but only if Republicans will stand up to their leadership. On the other hand, if Republicans vote for the previous question, then those bills will not become law anytime soon, if at all, and millions of military and working families will not receive immediate tax relief.

To quote President Kennedy: ''To govern is to choose.'' When Republicans vote on the previous question today, Americans will know whether they choose tax relief for working and military families or party loyalty to the House Republican leadership that is blocking it.

Mr. Speaker, since George W. Bush took office, Republicans have successfully enacted their economic plan. It consists of not just one, but two budget-busting tax giveaways for the richest few. I call these bills part I and part II of the Bush Pioneers Enrichment Act because they shower expensive tax breaks on the wealthiest few, people like that small, elite group of rich Bush Pioneers who funded the 2000 Bush campaign.

But where is the country after these Republican tax giveaways? Some 3 million Americans have lost their jobs. And just today the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office increased this year's deficit projection to $400 billion, the largest single-year deficit in this Nation's history. All in all, Americans are still suffering from the second Bush recession and the third Republican recession in the last 20 years. So I suspect that we will hear a lot of clever Republican rhetoric today. We will hear them swear that this latest Republican tax bill will finally boost the economy. They will claim that they are simply trying to improve on the bipartisan bill which the Senate passed overwhelmingly last week. But as John Adams once said, Mr. Speaker, facts are stubborn things. Even poll-tested Republican rhetoric cannot change those facts.

And the facts today are straightforward. House Republicans are the sole remaining obstacle to immediate tax relief for millions of working and military families who pay taxes. Unless House Republicans stand up to the Republican leadership today, then the families of 12 million children, 1 million of whom live in military families, will not get the immediate tax relief they need and they deserve.

Here is why, Mr. Speaker. When Republicans wrote part II of the Pioneers Enrichment Act last month, they denied the child tax credit to these hard-working, tax-paying families. The reason was simple: so that they could spend even more on tax breaks for the wealthiest few. As a result, millionaires got a tax break of $93,500, which is just shy of the $100,000 in campaign contributions necessary to qualify as a Bush Pioneer, while millions of military and working families got stiffed. Republicans gave $100,000 in tax breaks to those making $1 million a year, but they call it welfare when Democrats try to give $150 in tax relief to the military families who need it most to feed and clothe their children. This is shameful, Mr. Speaker. And if Republicans are not ashamed, then I am ashamed for them.

Fortunately, the Senate has overwhelmingly passed a bipartisan, fiscally responsible bill to fix this one especially shameful feature of the Bush Pioneers Enrichment Act. And the White House says the President wants to sign it immediately. But many Republicans do not believe these working and military families deserve immediate tax relief, despite the fact that they work hard and pay taxes. So the Republican leadership is using their power to stop the full House from voting on the bipartisan Senate-passed bill which could become law tomorrow.

Specifically, they have brought up their plan as a motion to concur in the Senate amendments with a House amendment, a very boring title. In plain English, that means they are using a parliamentary maneuver to rig the rules to prevent Democrats from offering an alternative, or the motion to recommit that is guaranteed in the House rules. The Republican leadership's rule is so restrictive that it does not allow the House any general debate on the Republicans' $82 billion tax plan. But make no mistake, the Republican leadership's actions on the House floor today will have a very real consequence.

Simply put, they are holding hostage immediate tax relief for 6.5 million working families. They are using this bill to give high-income families a new tax break that is worth nearly six times as much as the tax credit for low-income families. They are taking a $3.5 billion problem that they created and they are using it to spend $82 billion of the Social Security trust fund to drive America even deeper into debt, raising the debt tax on all Americans. All of this, Mr. Speaker, means that this spendthrift House Republican plan will not pass the Senate and everybody knows it. Let me say that again. What we are voting on today will not pass the Senate and everyone knows it. So this is a meaningless gesture that will simply delay for days and weeks and maybe even months the tax relief that the Republicans claim that they want to offer to working families. If the Republican leadership wins today, then millions of working and military families will lose because they will not get the immediate tax relief that they desperately need.

As a result, there is just one question on the floor today: Do you want to give to military and working families at least a fraction of the tax cuts that Republicans have given the millionaires, the Bush Pioneers and others of the wealthy? If the answer is ''no,'' then proudly explain why these hard-working, tax-paying families do not deserve tax relief. But if the answer is ''yes,'' then there is only one way to do it. Stand up to the House Republican leadership and vote against the previous question. If we defeat the previous question, then I will offer an amendment to the rule to allow the House to pass both the bipartisan child tax credit bill and the Armed Forces tax fairness bill, both of which are here at the Speaker's table and both of which have already passed the Senate.

As I said before, Mr. Speaker, those are the facts; and that is the choice House Republicans face today.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In listening to the ranking member's remarks, I would first say, to my recollection of the law, no Member of Congress would be eligible for this program. Number two, I want at least the voters of my district and the people of New York to know that while we have listened to class warfare and tax cuts, I know those New Yorkers that make $100,000 in their income, or even as much as $150,000, if you are a fireman or you are a cop, you are a teacher, you are a salesman and work in a store, I know you are not rich. I know you are middle America. And I know that as we look at fair tax relief, it is not just helping the poor or the class warfare message of the rich. We are trying to make sure we take care of the middle class, and we know that $150,000 combined income could be a middle-class income.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER).

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, it is always interesting to hear the rhetoric of some of my friends on the other side of the aisle. Let me tell you something. Here is the news. The All-American Tax Relief Act provides immediate tax relief for working families and for our military. Immediate tax relief. It does it in a number of ways. A tremendous benefit to working and military families. In fact, not only do we recognize that we increase the child tax credit in the legislation the President signed a few weeks ago from $500 to $1,000 but we extend that through the end of the decade. Our friends on the other side of the aisle would like to see it sunset in a couple of years and drop back to $700.

I would also note that we eliminate the marriage tax penalty in the child tax credit. One of the great successes of the Republican majority is we have targeted and worked to eliminate the marriage tax penalty; but in the child tax credit, it still exists. If you make $75,000 as a single person, you can claim the full child tax credit. But you can only claim the full child tax credit as a married couple if you make up to $110,000. That is not right. Those who are joint filers, men and women who happen to be married who are both in the workforce, if you want to eliminate the marriage tax penalty and treat them equally and fairly, you should allow a married couple to earn twice as much as a single and still be able to qualify for that credit without being punished for being married. That is why we raise the eligibility level to $150,000. It is a single 75, and then we double it for a married couple to 150. That is policeman and a teacher in the south suburbs of Chicago. Some would say they do not deserve that child tax credit, but they have earned it and we, of course, want to assure that we will bring fairness by eliminating the marriage tax penalty.

We also accelerate the increase in the refundable tax credit, a point that my Democratic friends say we need to do. What they omit is it is already law. All this legislation does is move it up to this year. That acceleration for low-income families was to be phased in over the next couple of years. We make it effective immediately, this year. Not only do we accelerate the increase in the refundable child tax credit but we bring up an issue which is so important. Remember the men and women who went to Iraq? Remember those men and women who fought so valiantly and liberated the 28 million people who were oppressed under Saddam Hussein? This House passed tax relief specifically targeted to help them. Unfortunately, that has yet to become law. We on the Republican side of the aisle feel it is time to take care of those military men and women who fought in Iraq and that is why we combine this child tax credit with the legislation which provides tax relief and enhances tax fairness for members of our United States Armed Forces.

Ladies and gentlemen, this is legislation that deserves bipartisan support. I ask for that kind of vote.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR), one of the most conservative Members on the Democratic side.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I cannot begin to say how hypocritical I think it is that a bill that purports to be for tax relief for children would burden our children with $80 billion worth of new debt to solve a $3 billion problem. There is a lot of inconsistency and, of course, there is a much stronger word than that.

On March 17, 1994, I believe it was right there, then-Member Hastert stood on this floor and said clearly, ''Until our monstrous $4.3 trillion Federal debt is eliminated, interest payments will continue to eat away at the important initiatives which the government must fund.

□ 1545

I will not stand by and watch Congress recklessly squander the future of our children and grandchildren.'' That was Speaker HASTERT.

The same day he said, ''In light of Congress' exhibited inability to control spending and vote for fiscal responsibility, it is imperative that we have a balanced budget amendment to compel Congress to end its siege on our financial future.''

The Speaker has now been Speaker for 1,622 days and has yet to have scheduled a vote on a balanced budget amendment. But I can tell you what happened in the 2 years and 3 weeks since the passage of the Bush budget spending increases and the Bush budget deficit decreases. We are now $914 billion dollars deeper in debt.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. STENHOLM. Under House rules, I would like to have our colleagues help us. How much debt did the gentleman say we have accumulated since the budget first passed on May 9? Is it $914?

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, no, under Speaker HASTERT's tutelage for the past 2 years, we have added not $914 dollars of debt. In fact, under the rules of the House, I am going to ask my colleagues to step to their right, because we are going to need four more of our colleagues to come forward.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GILLMOR). The gentleman will suspend.

The Chair notices that we have a number of Members entering the well. The Chair has responsibility under clause 2 of rule I to preserve proper decorum in the proceedings of the House, and the Chair is constrained to distinguish between an exhibit, which a Member may employ for the edification of his colleagues, and an exhibition.

Although a Member may supplement ordinary oratory with a visual aid, he may not stage an exhibition, nor should other Members traffic the well.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRIES

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, what rule are you stating?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Clause 2 of rule I.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, would the Chair be kind enough to read the provision, because I have never heard of this ruling given from the Chair before. I would be very grateful if the Chair could read it to the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. To the knowledge of the Chair, we have not had an exhibition such as this before.

Mr. FROST. Do we have the rules book handy?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The relevant provision is, ''The Speaker shall preserve order and decorum and, in the case of disturbance or disorderly conduct in the galleries or in the lobby, may cause the same to be cleared.''

The Chair has ruled that while an exhibit is quite acceptable, an exhibition such as being conducted at the current time is in violation of the rules, in the opinion of the Chair.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, further parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlemen will suspend.

The Chair also would observe that while one Member is addressing the House, other Members should not traffic the well, as is happening.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I just want to be clear. So what the gentleman is saying is the Members who are standing in the well right now——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Who are trafficking the well.

Mr. FROST. The ones who are in the well with 914878724867, they are out of order for advising the country what the size of the debt is?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, it has a tendency to impair the decorum of the House.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary observation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Does the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Well, you have not recognized me for mine, so I might as well.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I would make a parliamentary observation. If we keep raising the debt as fast as we are raising it——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman is not stating a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HOYER. Well, I am, because it will be a moot point, because there will not be enough room in the Chamber to make the display.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, further parliamentary inquiry. I have to ask, because I am a little confused, I will not refer directly to the Members at this point, but I am confused, Mr. Speaker, because the rule, I have my rule book, it says, ''The Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and in the case of disturbances or disorderly conduct in the galleries or in the lobby, may cause the same to be cleared.''

This seems to relate to decorum in the galleries or in the lobby. I do not read the rule to relate to matters on the floor of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Clause 2 of rule I applies to the proceedings of the House.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, if an elected Representative of the people of the United States, who represents about 700,000 American citizens, wishes to make his colleagues aware of the growth of the national debt in just 2 years and 2 weeks, without creating——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman stating a parliamentary inquiry or engaging in debate? The Chair is open to parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. I am continuing, sir.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Proceed.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. And if 16 of his colleagues, also elected, wished to make the Chair aware, in a very orderly manner, and to make our colleagues aware of the growth of the debt in a very orderly manner, I would like you to cite which section of the House rules, which, by the way you waive on a daily basis at your discretion, are being violated?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would state that a Member may use an exhibit when that Member is under recognition, but other Members, who are not under recognition, may not separately display exhibits.

The Chair at this point would ask that the Members clear the well.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I wish to continue at this time. How much time do I have remaining, sir?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi has 45 seconds remaining.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak with deep regret at the continued efforts of the majority to hide from the American people the true nature of the deficit that they have employed; that they have increased more debt in 2 years than in the first 200 years of our Nation. Their answer to that debt is $80 billion of more debt.

I do not think you should dare call yourself fiscal conservatives. I think what you should call yourself are the seeds of destruction for the greatest Nation this world has ever known.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, following that fascinating display, I would like to rise and indicate that as the economic downturn began during the last 2 quarters of 2000, we worked very hard to ensure that we could put into place policies that will encourage economic growth that will once again get us back on the path of a balanced budget.

Now, we all know that the challenges with which we have had to deal stem from not only the economic downturn that began during the last 2 quarters of the year 2000, but also September 11, the war with Iraq, and I am proud that we were able to stand together in a bipartisan way, Democrats and Republicans, to stand up to the threat of international terrorism and the repression that Saddam Hussein was imposing.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DREIER. I yield to my dear friend, the gentleman from Georgia, a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, is it not true that the Democrats did not pass a budget last year, and during the period of time after 9/11 when we were trying to fund the troops and the war on terrorism, homeland and internationally, that the Democrats on the Committee on Appropriations, bill after bill, insisted on more spending, and in fact offered amendments on every appropriations subcommittee to increase spending; and now they are coming out here as fiscal conservatives. It seems there is a little tap dance going on that is difficult to follow.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, it is fascinating. I know when the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) yielded to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) he talked about the fact that he is one of the most conservative Democrats in the House. But clearly if you look at the pattern that we have gone through for decades and decades, it clearly has not been Democrats who have stood forward as the great champions of fiscal responsibility. It is wonderful to see them join us now as we work towards encouraging economic growth so that we can get back onto this course of balancing the budget.

I would like to take just a few moments, if I might, Mr. Speaker, to talk about some substantive issues here.

My friend the gentleman from Dallas (Mr. FROST), the ranking minority member of our Committee on Rules, has talked about the fact that he knows exactly what the other body is going to do. I do not. I do not know what the Senate is going to do.

But I do know this: We passed $726 billion in tax cuts with the budget that we put into place, and we know that action was taken over in the other body that imposed a limit of $350 billion. But I think it is wrong for the United States House of Representatives, the people's House, the one that has every Representative here on behalf of the between 600,000 and 700,000 Americans, simply kowtow to action over there.

I think we have a responsibility to do everything that we can to take action, and let me say that I believe we need to do everything that we can to stand up for what it was that we did in our budget, to try and ensure that the American people can keep more of their own hard-earned dollars and to put into place tax policies which will encourage economic growth. That is exactly what we are doing here today.

Now, we heard in our Committee on Rules yesterday and we have heard here on the floor that somehow the President of the United States has made a determination as to exactly what he wants to do.

I have here, Mr. Speaker, a copy of the Statement of Administration Policy. That is the statement of the President of the United States. Contrary to some of the arguments put forward by my Democratic colleagues, this is what the statement of administration policy says:

''The Administration supports passage of H.R. 1308, the All-American Tax Relief Act of 2003, and urges the House and Senate to quickly resolve their differences.''

The administration understands the bicameral process that takes place here. For some reason, our colleagues on the other side of the aisle want to just buckle under, and not realize that we can do even better than what was done in the other body.

That is what we are striving to do. We are striving to get this economy growing. We have already seen very positive signs from what has taken place with passage of the Jobs and Growth Act. We have seen positive signs with the Dow above 9200. That has taken place since we have passed this legislation.

We have indicators out there that we can get this thing growing to the point where we will be able to generate the revenue that we need to deal with the very important prescription drug program, which we are working on right now as part of Medicare reform, education priorities, transportation issues which we were addressing earlier.

This measure today is a very important part of that, and, Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this package.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT), one of our very respected new members.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I am one of the few Democrats that joined my colleagues on the other side to vote for the President's tax cut on the last time, largely because my voters in Georgia felt it would be good for them if we were able to get some badly needed dollars back to our State.

But this is a different story, and I think we ought to recognize why the American people have us here in the first place at this time.

□ 1600

It is not to come back for another tax cut. It is to address an omission, a very serious omission from the first tax cut, and that is to correct that by bringing a clean, crisp bill that pointedly addresses bringing the child tax credit to those working families at the lower-income levels. That is what we are about to do here. I think it is a sham.

Unfortunately, I think it is disrespectful for our Republican friends to do this, and they know full well that what they are doing with this measure is nothing but to delay and certainly, quite possibly, kill any tax credit. That is why I come and urge all of my colleagues to vote against this rule. Let us follow President Bush's lead. Let us get a clean-cut bill, and let us pass it so that he can sign it this weekend and give the Nation's families and poor people an opportunity to have an outstanding Father's Day gift.

I come down here as one of the few Democrats who voted for the President's tax cut because it was a good plan for my Georgia constituents, but it has one problem. It did not provide child tax credits for many working families.

Fortunately, this is an easy problem to fix. The Senate overwhelmingly passed a clean child tax credit which the President has said that he would sign into law. If we passed the Senate child tax credit, it could be on the President's desk before this weekend. President Bush is right about this. He's asked us to pass the Senate Bill with just the 10 billion for the child tax credit for lower income families, so we can get the checks in the mail immediately. By next month at the same time higher income Americans get theirs.

The Republican measure now before us will not do that. It will only guarantee that working families would not get child tax credits anytime soon if at all. By tying on the 82 billion additional tax cuts we would guarantee that the Senate would reject the bill. This is a sham.

Let's vote against this rule so that we can get a clean child tax credit before us today. You would then have my vote and an overwhelming majority of the House and a certain signature by President Bush.

I stand with President Bush on this. Let's stand together and do the right thing, pass a clean child tax credit and help working families immediately. Get it to President Bush so he can sign it, give our nation's working families in lower brackets the relief they need and a wonderful Father's Day gift this weekend.

Let's treat the lower income working families with the respect they deserve. Give them the tax credit immediately—now.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON).

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I want to say, first of all, this door is wide open on the Republican side of the House. If the Democrats want to join us in holding the line on appropriations spending, we welcome you. If you want to join us in cracking down on waste, fraud, and abuse in government, we welcome you. If you want to join us in eliminating some duplication in government programs, we welcome you. And I hope that the Blue Dogs will work with us and anybody else over there who will.

On this issue, which is one of expanding welfare, we are trying to work with you. You know you voted against welfare reform, and you know it worked. There were 14 million people on welfare when we passed welfare reform. President Clinton signed it. So we can claim bipartisanship, even though the majority of the House Democrats voted against it. Welfare reform has been a success. Nine million people are not on welfare that used to be on welfare.

Now we still have 5 million; that is too many people. It may be your way of giving them an additional benefit, and maybe this is a good idea. It is not a tax rebate because you do not get a rebate on a tax that you do not pay. I know a lot of my colleagues will say, well, they do pay sales tax and so forth; that is true, but that is disingenuous on your part. As my colleagues know, we are talking about income taxes, and those folks do not pay income taxes.

Now, that being the case, and I will yield to my friend from Texas; that being the case, let me say this. There is a guy out there, as the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) said, he is a policeman, his wife is a teacher. He shops at Wal-Mart for Christmas. He goes to Home Depot on Saturdays to pick up a hammer and some two-by-fours to do a little home repair. When his car needs tires, he goes out and gets three different quotes for them. He owes on his house. He owes on one of his cars. The other car is paid for because it is 8 years old. He scrimps, he saves to get his kids into college. His son goes off to war. They are the first in standing up for the country.

It is very difficult for that guy to get any tax credit because he falls through the cracks in this country. The combined income is $125,000. This gives him eligibility for that $1,000 tax credit. And I am a believer that the more money we put in his pocket, the more money he is going to spend on the economy. When he spends, small businesses expand. When they expand, more jobs are created, more jobs are created, and less people are on public assistance, more people go to work, more people are paying into the system rather than taking out of it. I believe that tax reductions actually increase revenues. They are good for jobs; they are good for the economy. That is why I am going to support this.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, if I have time remaining for my friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM), I yield.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, you look at this chart, the bill we have before us today; this is the problem you are fixing. This is the interest.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GILLMOR). The time of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON) has expired.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MCGOVERN).

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, as the majority leader said just the other day, ''Well, well, well.''

Mr. Speaker, the majority does not want to be here today. They do not want to talk about the child tax credit. They wanted this whole issue to simply disappear. To many on the other side, as we have already heard, the child tax credit is just another form of welfare. If it were up to them, they would be cutting Ken Lay's taxes, again, instead of giving a soldier in Iraq who makes only $16,000 a year a small tax credit.

But we on this side of the aisle and the American people refuse to let this issue go. And I do not know whether it is shame or exasperation, but the other side has finally agreed to discuss the child tax credit. Well, sort of.

The sensible, responsible thing to do would be to bring up and pass a very good bill that passed the Senate last week by a bipartisan vote of 94 to 2, a bill that is fully paid for with offsets. But the Republican leadership rarely misses the opportunity to be insensible and irresponsible. That leadership knows very well that the Senate-passed bill would become law in a snap, because Members on both sides of the aisle would vote for it, and even the President supports it.

Instead, the majority leader and the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) have brought us a bill that costs $82 billion. And, get this: there are no offsets. It is not paid for. The Republican leadership simply wants to saddle our children and our grandchildren with ever-increasing debt. How do they justify that?

If this bill stands as it is, it will help bankrupt our children, including the 12 million low- and moderate-income children the Republicans first ignored by deleting the child tax credit from the last tax bill. They are so ashamed of their strategy that not one Republican came to the Committee on Rules to testify on behalf of this $82 billion bill. Not one Republican.

They refuse to allow us to vote on the Senate-passed bill, a bill that passed 94 to 2. This process is undemocratic, it is irresponsible, it is outrageous; and it ought to be stopped.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my Republican colleagues to put a stop to this. Do the right thing. Do the right thing. Let us vote on a sensible, bipartisan child tax credit. Vote ''no'' on the previous question.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. BACHUS), my friend.

Mr. BACHUS. Mr. Speaker, whatever we do here today, let us be honest with the American people. Now, the gentleman from Massachusetts kept talking about the child tax credit. It is not a tax refund; it is not a tax credit. If we are going to do it, let us call it what it is, and it is welfare.

When you get back money you have paid in, when we give the American people money they have paid in, that is a tax refund. That is a tax credit. When we take money away from some American taxpayers and we give it to someone else, that is not a tax credit. That is not a refund. That is welfare. And that is what you have proposed to do. If an American pays in $1,500 and we give them back $4,000, that $2,500 is not a refund; it is not a credit. It is someone else's money. And if we want to turn our Tax Code into a welfare system, let us be honest with the American people that that is what we are doing. That is what we are doing.

Why represent this as a credit? Where is the credit? You pay in $1,500, you get back $3,000; $1,500 is a credit, but the other $1,500 is someone else's money.

Today, of 100 American families, 50 of them paid 96.1 percent of the taxes before the last tax cut, and in the last tax cut, we gave Americans back their own money. And what the Democrats have proposed is taking Americans' money, your money, America, and we are giving it to someone else, and that is not a tax credit. That is welfare. Let us be honest with the American people. We are turning our Tax Code into a welfare system. And if we want to do that, let us call it what it is. Let us have a little truth in labeling. We are requiring 86 percent of the American people to pay their tax dollars to someone else, and that is welfare.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I do not have any additional time, but I wish I had time to question the last speaker.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT).

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, in 1 minute I want to tell you why this bill, compared to the Senate bill, taxes could be raised, could be raised on enlisted men and women serving in Iraq by as much as $1,000 per child. It is a fact, a shocking fact about this bill.

Let us take an E6, a sergeant, making $29,000. You have to make more than $10,500 in order to qualify for the child tax credit. That leaves him if he is state-side $18,500 times the 15 percent, two child tax credits for his two children.

But let us assume now he goes to Iraq and let us assume he stays 8 months. That means $18,500 of his income, because he is in a combat zone, will not be subject to taxation. It is not taxable income. Therefore, his taxable income is only $9,500. What happens? By going to Iraq, by serving his country for 8 months in a combat zone, his family loses both of the child tax credits.

This is not necessary. The Senate bill worked it out. It was deliberately deleted from the Senate bill, for what reasons I would certainly like the other side to explain.

Let me tell my colleagues one other thing. At this desk is a military tax fairness bill passed by the other body. If we really want to do something for the military, call it up. Because in every respect, the bill at the desk is more liberal, more beneficial to our service men and women. I hope you will answer the charges I have just made, rather than supporting the provisions included in this bill. This is an outrage.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO).

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, to hear the Republicans tell it, you might think that they were bringing this bill to the floor to extend the child tax credit to the families of 12 million children. One might think that they believe that 6.5 million families, including more than 200,000 military families, deserve the child tax credit.

Where were they when they stole, when the Republicans stole the child tax credit in the dead of night from these hard-working families? For that matter, where were they when I offered an amendment back in March in the Committee on the Budget to extend this credit to those families and they all voted ''no,'' families who earn between $10,500 and $26,625. Yes, they pay taxes: payroll taxes, sales taxes, property taxes, excise taxes. Where was the compassion from my Republican colleagues when these families needed them? It was the Republican majority leader not 2 days ago who said he had more important things to do.

I will tell my colleagues where that compassion was. It was with Enron and all of the corporations who avoid paying taxes by relocating overseas and taking American jobs with them. You want to talk about welfare? That is welfare on a grand scale. Enron paid no taxes the last 4 out of 5 years, a disgrace; and they just ate away and took away people's pensions, and nobody in this House on the other side of the aisle is willing to do anything about that.

Now the Republicans hold hostage responsible legislation, overwhelmingly passed in the other body 94 to 2. And why? Because they want to use these families as a bargaining chip in their endless, endless quest to cut taxes for only the wealthiest Americans, driving our country deeper and deeper in debt.

Let us consider the other body's legislation. The White House wants to do it. Today the Republicans bring to the floor this irresponsible $82 billion bill. It is cynical, and it is designed to fail in the other body and to prevent these families from receiving the tax relief that they need. And to see more cynicism about this, most families are going to receive their tax credit on July 1.

Mr. Speaker, these families, these families, military families as well, have got to claim the tax credit next April. They cannot get it now when everyone else is going to. They do not deserve this. They are hard-working. They pay taxes. Let us give them a chance. Pass an honest child tax credit bill.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Sometimes we get lost here a little bit about the result of the 2003 tax cuts. In 2003, 91 million taxpayers will receive on average a tax cut of $1,126 under the Jobs and Growth Act of 2003. Sixty-eight million women will see their taxes decline on average by $1,338. Forty-five million married couples will receive an average tax cut of $1,786. Thirty-four million families with children will benefit from an average tax cut of $1,549, and 6 million single women with children will receive an average tax cut of $558. Twelve million elderly taxpayers will receive an average tax cut of $1,401. Twenty-three million small business owners will receive tax cuts averaging $2,209, and 3 million individuals and families will have their income tax liability completely eliminated by this act.

□ 1615

Now, today, we are going to do even more, because unlike some of the debate here, let us not kid ourselves, the other body sent a bill that does something for us from now until next election. That is 2004. That is when the child tax credit ends.

This bill today, when we vote it up or down, it is going to go to 2010. A $1,000 child tax credit is scheduled to sunset in 2005. It will gradually increase back to $1,000 in 2010. In this bill, it puts it up right up front, now to 2010, a $1,000 tax credit. It eliminates the marriage penalty on the child credit. It accelerates the increase to the refundable child credit. It provides tax relief and enhances tax fairness for members of the Armed Forces. It suspends the tax-exempt status of designated terrorist organizations. It provides tax relief for astronauts who die in space missions.

We are getting the job done, Mr. Speaker. America knows it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL), the distinguished ranking member.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, we should thank the heavens that we have got such an honest person like the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY). They do not make people like that anymore.

The gentleman from Georgia who spoke so eloquently about the welfare bill that we are talking about today, and those who made these nasty, disparaging remarks and left the floor, this is honesty. This is the United States of America.

I wondered why, why would these good people, albeit Republicans, why would they drop a provision that only costs $3.5 billion that would help 12 million kids and 6.5 million working families? It is because in their minds if one is not an investor, one is on welfare.

Do we get where they are finally coming from? Have Members listened to the debate? They said refundable tax credits. That is not a tax credit. You can work every day, you can pay Social Security taxes, you can pay Medicare, you can raise your family, you can join the Army, you can fight in Iraq. But guess what, look into the Republican book and see how you are listed. As a hardworking American, as a mother and father concerned about their children, someone struggling every day to make ends meet, to pay the rent, to pay the mortgage, to pay the tuition? No. Look under welfare.

Then, of course, if we really want to find out who they think deserves tax relief, look at the hardworking people who get their dividends every day while they are at the clubhouse. Look at those that clip the coupons. These are the people, as they would say, who pay taxes; and they are the ones who get relief.

But when they said that they will never, never, never give welfare to these families, the President of the United States said, enough is enough. We got a bipartisan agreement. True, it is $10 billion. Swallow it, go home. But they said, no, no. No welfare.

Let us give them an offer that they have to refuse. For $3.5 billion, they are asking this hardworking family to pay back, for this, $82 billion. I do not know how this would work, whether the family gets $100 a year. But I do know one thing, that this deficit that they keep building on day after day, month after month, and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) said they will be coming back, but each time they borrow money to give tax cuts to the coupon-clippers and those who get the dividends, they are asking the kids and the grandkids that we are trying to help today to pay for it. But $82 billion for $3.5 billion? That is so shameful.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman and I were not here when some of the tax-and-spend left kept spending us through an oblivion of deficits. We were here after 9–11 when we faced terrible tragedy in our country which has caused us to address the war on terrorism, to rebuild our cities, to address some of the complications of an economy that has slowed down.

I do not mind that the debate that America hears is whether we have a bigger central government that spends more of their money on programs that the government figures out; or whether the economy began moving because middle America and the poor of America had more money in their pockets to make their decisions what they wanted to do with that money, whether they wanted to pay off a consumer loan, whether they wanted to pay tuition, whether they wanted to use it just to help have some opportunity for their child, their mother, or father.

The decision that voters are going to make down the road is whether they want a smaller government that allows people to make more decisions on their hard-earned money, money out of their pocket; or whether they need more money in the downtown central government in Washington, D.C., or some government bureaucrat trying to figure out some way to help them out.

I am going to tell the Members, we have started on a tax cut. I read earlier the millions of Americans who are going to benefit across the board. We are now in a situation where we are going to watch.

Some of my colleagues on the other side of the aisle had every nay and say about what is going to happen with the economy. I do not know, they do not know. But by 2004, in that fourth quarter, we are going to find out whether the economy of consumer goods began moving, confidence of investors began moving, and whether America started to see a resolve from a terrible tragedy of 9–11; to see, as the gentleman from California (Chairman DREIER) said, in the third and fourth quarters of 2000 when it slowed down, if it moved.

If it does move, there are going to be more Republicans on this side of the aisle; if it does not, maybe there will be a little less. But the conviction of the majority is, people have an opportunity and a right to have more money in their pockets for them to decide how to spend it, not Washington.

The only proven way to restrict government spending is to reduce revenues. Tightening the purse strings but providing much-needed tax relief is the only way to get money back in the hands of hardworking Americans and out of Washington.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. MCDERMOTT).

Mr. MCDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, the rubber-stamp Congress is in session. Last night, they came up to the Committee on Rules. Nobody even bothered to come up and talk about the bill. They had an order from the President. Ari Fleischer said, the President says, pass it so he can sign it. So they had the little meeting up there and rifled it down here, with no hearings in the Committee on Ways and Means, not one single minute of debate in a hearing where we could listen to anybody give any opinion about what this bill does. But all of them came with their rubber stamps.

Let me tell the Members, if they go for what they put out there, the chairman has put out there, the President is going to be real mad, because the President does not like that bill. He likes the one that the Senate passed. So hold rubber stamps on the one for the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) and save it for the one for the President.

All he asks Members to do is to approve; to say, I approve everything George Bush wants. That is what this Congress is about. They do not want any debate. They do not want to talk about how much this debt builds up or anything else; they simply want to be rubber stamps for the President. Boom.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. MENENDEZ).

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this unfair and undemocratic rule and proposal.

Only in Washington would the Republican tax cuts just signed into law by the President come at the expense of working families.

Only in Washington would Republicans borrow money to pay for that Republican tax package while failing to include child care tax credits for the working families whose very children will be forced to pay for the Republicans' fiscal irresponsibility.

Only in Washington would the Republican tax package leave one in five children of active duty U.S. military families out from benefiting from the increased tax credit while their parents are off risking their lives in Iraq, Afghanistan, or elsewhere for their Nation.

Only in Washington would Republicans then propose an $82 billion tax bill, adding another $100 billion to the national debt to fix a $3.5 billion problem.

If we repeal every sunset in their tax bill, which is what we are beginning to do here, we will have $400 billion in annual deficits. That is not what we want to do to the very children we are trying to help in this bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN).

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, there are two bills at the desk. They are right next to the podium there, H.R. 1307 and H.R. 1308. They are right there. The question to the gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) and his leadership is, why not take those two bills, pass them today, and have them signed by the President? That is the question.

Well, someone comes here, the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), and reads a statement from the President. Oh, but just a few days ago his spokesperson said, he, the President, believes what the Senate has done is the right thing to do, a good thing to do, and he wants to sign it. Instead, they want to do something else.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) has maybe made clear, he said, as mentioned earlier, that there are a lot of things more important to do. Then a little later he says, to me it is a little difficult to give tax relief to people who do not pay income tax, though they pay all other kinds of taxes. So what they are doing is a bill with a huge, huge addition to the deficit. Maybe they hope that they will kill this bill when it goes over to the Senate.

There is a kind of legislative machoism going on here: we are going to show the Senate, at the cost of the people of this country. They are making wimps out of some Republicans who would like to vote the right way by tying this into a rule. They are making the President issue a statement that contradicts what was said on his behalf just a few days ago. Most importantly of all, what they are saying once again is, deficits be damned. Pile them up. Pile them up. Pile them up.

What I say is take these bills, let us pass them today, and get on with our work for the children of the United States of America.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, only a week ago I do not think the gentleman was advocating any tax cuts. But I just want to remind our colleagues that are both here and throughout the offices that in fiscal year 2004, in the adopted budget resolution, language was included for the first time limiting the amount of revenue reductions in the Senate to a deficit impact of $350 billion.

The House articulated its clear reservations to this maneuver because all revenue measures must originate in the House; we retained our right to develop more measures to reduce the tax burden on the American people.

So the options for the Committee on Rules, they could, one, accept the Senate proposals as a whole imposing offset requirements; two, call up an entirely new House bill, starting the process anew, with likely substitutes, in essence dragging out the process that would take the ability to move, and I am not sure whether the gentleman knows for sure we have a quorum tomorrow; and, three, we could stipulate the House prerogative to provide tax relief with a comprehensive proposal that has broad policy support.

Why should the House impose offsets when our own budget made room for a proposal just like this, the one I have outlined that does so much for working families across the country?

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) talked about averages. Beware of averages.

If the gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) gets $100,000 tax cut and I get a zero tax cut, that means the two of us got a $50,000 average tax cut. Beware of Republicans quoting average tax cuts.

The GOP's intransigence is on full display with the self-executing rule on this legislation to allow low-income working American families to benefit from the increase in the child tax credit.

Let there be no mistake: With this rule, the GOP leadership wants to send this legislation into conference committee where it hopes to tie up the bill and watch it die a slow death.

Two days ago, when the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) unveiled the House GOP's fiscally irresponsible version of this bill, he had the audacity to say, ''We are not in the business of politics, but rather policy.''

Well, I ask, is the United States Senate playing politics with this issue?

That body passed a responsible bipartisan bill, 94 Senators voting for it, giving relief to 12 million children and 6.5 million families. I ask, is the President of the United States playing politics when he said he would sign the Senate bill and urged us to pass it? And the Democratic Caucus on this side of the aisle, every one of whom is prepared to vote for the bill that the President says he will sign that will give immediate relief to 12 million children and 6.5 million working families.

So we all know who is really playing politics on this issue. And it is not Senate Republicans, Senate Democrats, House Democrats, and President Bush who support the immediate passage of the Senate bill. It is the House Republicans who have proposed an irresponsible, $82 billion bill that is not paid for, that would drive us even deeper into debt and possibly prevent low-income working families from receiving this benefit.

I have said on this floor before, when you did not allow us to offer a substitute, that you did not have the courage of your convictions. I have said on this floor before when you did not allow us to offer amendments, that you did not have the courage of your convictions. Now, you not only do not allow us to offer a substitute, you do not allow us to offer amendments, you do not even have the courage to put your own bill on the floor.

The public probably does not understand that. This is a rule. Not the bill. We are not debating the bill. And, as a matter of fact, the committee whose jurisdiction has this bill is not even on the floor and they have not spoken on this bill. The leadership of the committee has not come forward and said that it is good bill. They have handled it on a procedural matter. Why? To muzzle us and to muzzle their folks who they do not rely on to vote on the substance of this bill, but hope and pray they will get enough of their people on the procedural end of this bill to carry the day. That is unfortunate.
